The second one is FingerPass or passing, as is literally shown, it is a combination of passes. It means that you have to spin the pen through your fingers, which is the “pass” stand for. It is interesting that the FingerPass was also used in the James Bond film GoldenEye by Boris Grishenko. And you can get more information about this trick from another blog titled “Pen Spinning Fundamental Tricks-FingerPass/ passing”.

The next trick is Sonic, which is harder to master for beginners than the first two tricks. “Sonic” means that you have to move the pen from one finger position to another finger position as quickly as possible. It is better for you if you can move as fast as sound transmission although it is an impossible mission. Ok, you can learn this trick with the detailed tutorial in this blog “Pen Spinning Fundamental Tricks-Sonic”.
