significavit (sig-ni-fi-kay-vit), n. [Latin "he has signified"] Eccles. law. 1. A bishop's certificate that a person has been in a state of excommunication for more than 40 days. 2. A notice to the Crown in chancery, based on the bishop's certificate, whereby a writ de contumace capiendo (or, earlier, a writ de excommunicato capiendo) would issue for the disobedient person's arrest and imprisonment. See DE CONTUMACE CAPIENDO.

SIGN MANUAL

sign manual. 1. SIGNATURE(1). 2. A symbol or emblem, such as a trademark, representing words or an idea.

SIGNUM

signum (sig-n<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A sign; a seal.

"Signum. (On written documents.) A seal (a stamp) put on to close a document in order to make its contents inaccessible to unauthorized persons and protect against forgery, or at the end of it after the written text. In the latter case the seal (without or with a signature) indicated that the sealer recognized the written declaration as his.... Signum is also the seal of a witness who was present at the making of a document." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 707 (1953).

2. An indication of something seen or otherwise perceived by the senses, such as a bloodstain on a murder suspect. Pl. signa.

si institutus sine liberis decesserit (sI in-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>s sI-nee lib-<<schwa>>r-is di-ses-<<schwa>>r-it). [Latin] Hist. If the instituted heir should die without issue. See SUBSTITUTION.

SI ITA EST

si ita est (sI I-t<<schwa>> est). [Latin] If it be so. • This phrase was formerly used in a mandamus writ to order a judge to affix a seal to a bill of exceptions, if the facts were accurately stated.

SILENCE

silence, n.1. A restraint from speaking. • In criminal law, silence includes an arrestee's statements expressing the desire not to speak and requesting an attorney. 2. A failure to reveal something required by law to be revealed. See estoppel by silence under ESTOPPEL. — silent, adj.

SILENT CONFIRMATION

silent confirmation. See CONFIRMATION.

SILENTIARY

silentary (sI-len-shee-air-ee), n.1. Roman law. An official who maintains order in the imperial palace and on the imperial council; a chamberlain. 2. Hist. An officer who is sworn to silence about state secrets; esp., a privy councillor so sworn. 3. Hist. A court usher who maintains order and esp. silence in the court. — Also termed silentarius.

SILENT PARTNER

silent partner. See PARTNER.

SILENT RECORD

silent record. See RECORD.

SILENT-WITNESS THEORY

silent-witness theory. Evidence. A method of authenticating and admitting evidence (such as a photograph), without the need for a witness to verify its authenticity, upon a sufficient showing of the reliability of the process of producing the evidence, including proof that the evidence has not been altered. [Cases: Criminal Law 438, 444; Evidence 359, 380. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1025, 1028, 1030, 1032, 1040–1041, 1046; Evidence §§ 987, 991–994, 998, 1000, 1002.]

SILK GOWN

silk gown. 1. The professional robe worn by a Queen's Counsel. 2. One who is a Queen's Counsel. — Often shortened (in sense 2) to silk. Cf. STUFF GOWN.

SILVER CERTIFICATES

silver certificates. U.S. paper money formerly in circulation and redeemable in silver. • Silver certificates have been replaced by Federal Reserve notes, which are not so redeemable.

SILVER PARACHUTE

silver parachute. See TIN PARACHUTE.

SILVER-PLATTER DOCTRINE

silver-platter doctrine. Criminal procedure. The principle that a federal court could allow the admission of evidence obtained illegally by a state police officer as long as a federal officer did not participate in or request the search. • The Supreme Court rejected this doctrine in Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 80 S.Ct. 1437 (1960). [Cases: Criminal Law 394.2. C.J.S. Criminal si malitia suppleat aetatem (sI m<<schwa>>-lish-ee-<<schwa>> s<<schwa>>p-lee-at-ee-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. If malice should supply the want of age.

SI MALITIA SUPPLEAT AETATEM

SIMILAR HAPPENINGS

similar happenings.Evidence. Events that occur at a time different from the time in dispute and are therefore usu. inadmissible except to the extent that they provide relevant information on issues that would be fairly constant, such as the control of and conditions on land on the day in question. [Cases: Criminal Law 369–374; Evidence 129–142. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 454, 825–830, 832; Evidence §§ 760–775, 780–781, 783–788.]

SIMILARITY

similarity.Intellectual property. The resemblance of one trademark or copyrighted work to another. • How closely a trademark must resemble another to amount to infringement depends on the nature of the product and how much care the typical buyer would be expected to take in making the selection in that particular market. It is a question of overall impression rather than an element-by-element comparison of the two marks. — Also termed imitation; colorable imitation. [Cases: Trade Regulation 340. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 86, 89.]

comprehensive nonliteral similarity.Copyright. Similarity evidenced by the copying of the protected work's general ideas or structure (such as a movie's plot) without using the precise words or phrases of the work. — Also termed pattern similarity.

fragmented literal similarity.Copyright. Similarity evidenced by the copying of verbatim portions of the protected work.

substantial similarity.Copyright. A strong resemblance between a copyrighted work and an alleged infringement, thereby creating an inference of unauthorized copying. • The standard for substantial similarity is whether an ordinary person would conclude that the alleged infringement has appropriated nontrivial amounts of the copyrighted work's expressions. See derivative work under WORK (2). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53(1).]

SIMILAR SALES

similar sales.See SALE.

SIMILITER

similiter (si-mil-i-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “similarly”] Common-law pleading. A party's written acceptance of an opponent's issue or argument; a set form of words by which a party accepts or joins in an issue of fact tendered by the other side. See joinder of issue (2) under JOINDER. [Cases: Pleading 100, 186. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 225, 764, 769.]

si minor se majorem dixerit (sImI-n<<schwa>>r see m<<schwa>>-jor-<<schwa>>m dik-s<<schwa>>r-it). [Latin] Hist. If the minor has said that he is major. • The phrase refers to a defense that might be raised in a suit for a minor's claim for restitution for minority.

simony (sim-<<schwa>>-nee orsI-m<<schwa>>-nee), n.[fr. Latin simonia “payment for things spiritual,” fr. the proper name Simon Magus (see below)] Hist. Eccles. law. The unlawful practice of giving or receiving money or gifts in exchange for spiritual promotion; esp., the unlawful buying or selling of a benefice or the right to present clergy to a vacant benefice.

“By simony, the right of presentation to a living is forfeited, and vested pro hac vice in the crown. Simony is the corrupt presentation of any one to an ecclesiastical benefice for money, gift, or reward. It is so called from the resemblance it is said to bear to the sin of Simon Magus, though the purchasing of holy orders seems to approach nearer to his offence. It was by the canon law a very grievous crime: and is so much the more odious, because, as sir Edward Coke observes, it is ever accompanied with perjury; for the presentee is sworn to have committed no simony.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 278 (1766).

“Simony is an offence which consists in the buying and selling of holy orders, and any bond or contract involving simony is illegal and void.” John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 195 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

single-criminal-intent doctrine.See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

SINGLE-DATE-OF-REMOVAL DOCTRINE

single-element means claim. See single-means claim under PATENT CLAIM.

SINGLE-ENTRY BOOKKEEPING

single-entry bookkeeping. See BOOKKEEPING.

SINGLE-FILING RULE

single-filing rule. Civil-rights law. The principle that an administrative charge filed by one plaintiff in a civil-rights suit (esp. a Title VII suit) will satisfy the administrative-filing requirements for all coplaintiffs who are making claims for the same act of discrimination. • But this rule will not usu. protect a coplaintiff's claims if the coplaintiff also filed an administrative charge, against the same employer, in which different discriminatory acts were complained of, because the administrative agency (usu. the EEOC) and the employer are entitled to rely on the allegations someone makes in an administrative charge. [Cases: Civil Rights 1517. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 153.]

SINGLE-IMPULSE PLAN

single-impulse plan. See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

SINGLE-JUROR INSTRUCTION

single-juror instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE

single-larceny doctrine. Criminal law. The principle that the taking of different items of property belonging to either the same or different owners at the same time and place constitutes one act of larceny if the theft is part of one larcenous plan, as when it involves essentially one continuous act or if control over the property is exercised simultaneously. • The intent of the thief determines the number of occurrences. — Also termed single-impulse plan; single-larceny rule; single-criminal-intent doctrine. [Cases: Larceny 1. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.]

SINGLE-PUBLICATION RULE

single-publication rule.The doctrine that a plaintiff in a libel suit against a publisher has only one claim for each mass publication, not a claim for every book or issue in that run. [Cases: Libel and Slander 26. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 53-55, 98.]

SINGLE-PURPOSE PROJECT

single-purpose project.A facility that is designed, built, and used for one reason only, such as to generate electricity. • This term most often refers to large, complex, expensive projects such as power plants, chemical-processing plants, mines, and toll roads. Projects of this type are often funded through project financing, in which a special-purpose entity is established to perform no function other than to develop, own, and operate the facility, the idea being to limit the number of the entity's creditors and thus provide protection for the project's lenders. See project financing under FINANCING; SPECIAL-PURPOSE ENTITY; BANKRUPTCY-REMOTE ENTITY.

SINGLE-RECOVERY RULE

single-recovery rule.See ONE-SATISFACTION RULE.

SINGLE-REGISTRATION RULE

single-registration rule.Copyright. The U.S. Copyright Office doctrine that permits only one registration for each original work. • Exceptions to the rule are routinely made for unpublished works that are later published. Generally, a revised work cannot be registered a second time if the revisions are not substantial, but the creator may be allowed to file a supplemental registration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 50.16.]

SINGLE-SOURCE REQUIREMENT

single-source requirement.Under the common-law tort of false advertising, the necessity to show that the plaintiff is the only supplier of the genuine goods in question and that buyers would have bought the plaintiff's goods if the true nature of the defendant's goods had been known. Ely-Norris Safe Co. v. Mosler Safe Co., 7 F.2d 603 (2d Cir. 1925). • This is a narrow exception to the common-law rule that the tort of false advertising applies only in instances of passing off, trade defamation, and trade disparagement.

slander, n. 1. A defamatory assertion expressed in a transitory form, esp. speech. • Damages for slander — unlike those for libel — are not presumed and thus must be proved by the plaintiff (unless the defamation is slander per se). [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 24. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47.] 2. The act of making such a statement. See DEFAMATION. Cf. LIBEL. — slander, vb. — slanderous, adj.

“Although libel and slander are for the most part governed by the same principles, there are two important differences: (1) Libel is not merely an actionable tort, but also a criminal offence, whereas slander is a civil injury only. (2) Libel is in all cases actionable per se; but slander is, save in special cases, actionable only on proof of actual damage. This distinction has been severely criticised as productive of great injustice.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 139 (17th ed. 1977).

slander per quod. Slander that does not qualify as slander per se, thus forcing the plaintiff to prove special damages. [Cases: Libel and Slander 11, 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

slander per se. Slander for which special damages need not be proved because it imputes to the plaintiff any one of the following: (1) a crime involving moral turpitude, (2) a loathsome disease (such as a sexually transmitted disease), (3) conduct that would adversely affect one's business or profession, or (4) unchastity (esp. of a woman). [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

trade slander. Trade defamation that is spoken but not recorded. See trade defamation under DEFAMATION. Cf. trade libel under LIBEL.

SLAVE

slave.Roman law. See SERVUS(1).

SLAVERY

slavery. 1. A situation in which one person has absolute power over the life, fortune, and liberty of another. 2. The practice of keeping individuals in such a state of bondage or servitude. • Slavery was outlawed by the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Slaves 1. C.J.S. Peonage § 2.]

“Slavery was a big problem for the Constitution makers. Those who profited by it insisted on protecting it; those who loathed it dreaded even more the prospect that to insist on abolition would mean that the Constitution would die aborning. So the Framers reached a compromise, of sorts. The words ‘slave’ and ‘slavery’ would never be mentioned, but the Constitution would safeguard the ‘peculiar institution’ from the abolitionists.” Jethro K. Lieberman, The Evolving Constitution slight evidence. See EVIDENCE.

SLIGHT EVIDENCE

SLIGHT-EVIDENCE RULE

slight-evidence rule. 1. The doctrine providing that, when there is evidence establishing the existence of a conspiracy between at least two other people, the prosecution need only offer slight evidence of a defendant's knowing participation or intentional involvement in the conspiracy to secure a conviction. • This rule was first announced in Tomplain v. United States, 42 F.2d 202, 203 (5th Cir. 1930). In the decades after Tomplain, other circuits adopted the rule, but not until the 1970s did the rule become widespread. Since then, the rule has been widely criticized and, in most circuits, abolished. See, e.g., United States v. Durrive, 902 F.2d 1221 (7th Cir. 1990). But its vitality remains undiminished in some jurisdictions. 2. The doctrine that only slight evidence of a defendant's participation in a conspiracy need be offered in order to admit a coconspirator's out-of-court statement under the coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E).

SOCA

soca (soh-k<<schwa>> orsok-<<schwa>>), n. See SOC.

socage (sok-ij).Hist. A type of lay tenure in which a tenant held lands in exchange for providing the lord husbandry-related (rather than military) service. • Socage, the great residuary tenure, was any free tenure that did not fall within the definition of knight-service, serjeanty, or frankalmoin. Cf. KNIGHT-SERVICE; VILLEINAGE.

“If they [the peasant's duties] were fixed — for instance, helping the lord with sowing or reaping at specified times — the tenure was usually called socage. This was originally the tenure of socmen; but it became ... a generic term for all free services other than knight-service, serjeanty, or spiritual service.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 260 (3d ed. 1990).

free socage.Socage in which the services were both certain and honorable. • By the statute 12 Car. 2, ch. 24 (1660), all the tenures by knight-service were, with minor exceptions, converted into free socage. — Also termed free and common socage; liberum socagium.

villein socage (vil-<<schwa>>n). Socage in which the services, though certain, were of a baser nature than those provided under free socage.

socna (sok-n<<schwa>>).Hist. A privilege; a liberty; a franchise.

SOCRATIC METHOD

Socratic method.A technique of philosophical discussion — and of law-school instruction — by which the questioner (a law professor) questions one or more followers (the law students), building on each answer with another question, esp. an analogy incorporating the answer. • This method takes its name from the Greek philosopher Socrates, who lived in Athens about 469–399 B.C.His method is a traditional one in law schools, primarily because it forces law students to think through issues rationally and deductively — a skill required in the practice of law. Most law professors who employ this method call on students randomly, an approach designed to teach students to think quickly, without stage fright. Cf. CASEBOOK METHOD; HORNBOOK METHOD.

“[Socrates] himself did not profess to be capable of teaching anything, except consciousness of ignorance .... He called his method of discussion (the Socratic method) obstetrics... because it was an art of inducing his interlocutors to develop their own ideas under a catechetical system.” 5 The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia 5746 (rev. ed. 1914).

SOCRUS

Oral or anal copulation between a human and an animal; bestiality. — Also termed buggery; crime against nature; abominable and detestable crime against nature; unnatural offense; unspeakable crime; (archaically) sodomitry; (in Latin) crimen innominatum. Cf. PEDERASTY. — sodomize,vb. — sodomitic,adj. — sodomist, sodomite,n.

“Sodomitry is a carnal copulation against nature; to wit, of man or woman in the same sex, or of either of them with beasts.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 219 (1759).

“Sodomy was not a crime under the common law of England but was an ecclesiastical offense only. It was made a felony by an English statute so early that it is a common-law felony in this country, and statutes expressly making it a felony were widely adopted. ‘Sodomy’ is a generic term including both ‘bestiality’ and ‘buggery.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 465 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated sodomy. Criminal sodomy that involves force or results in serious bodily injury to the victim in addition to mental injury and emotional distress. • Some laws provide that sodomy involving a minor is automatically aggravated sodomy. [Cases: Sodomy 1. C.J.S. Sodomy §§ 2–6.]

Cf. BARRISTER. 5. See special agent under INSURANCE AGENT. 6. A prosecutor (in some jurisdictions, such as South Carolina).7. See special agent under INSURANCE AGENT.

SOLICITOR GENERAL

solicitor general.(usu. cap.) The second-highest-ranking legal officer in a government (after the attorney general); esp., the chief courtroom lawyer for the executive branch. — Abbr. SG. Pl. solicitors general.

“By [federal] law, only the Solicitor General or his designee can conduct and argue before the Supreme Court cases ‘in which the United States is interested.’ Thus, if a trial court appoints a special, independent prosecutor in order to prosecute a criminal contempt of court, that court-appointed special prosecutor cannot represent the United States in seeking Supreme Court review of any lower court decision unless the Solicitor General authorizes the filing of such a petition.... Although the Solicitor General serves at the pleasure of the President, by tradition the Solicitor General also acts with independence. Thus, if the Solicitor General does not believe in the legal validity of the arguments that the government wants presented, he will refuse to sign the brief. In close cases the Solicitor General will sign the brief but tag on a disclaimer that has become known as ‘tying a tin can.’ The disclaimer would state, for example, ‘The foregoing is presented as the position of the Internal Revenue Service.’ The justices would then know that the Solicitor General, although not withholding a legal argument, was not personally sponsoring or adopting the particular legal position.” Ronald D. Rotunda & John E. Nowak, Treatise on Constitutional Law § 2.2, at 86–88 (3d ed. 1999).

SOLIDARY

solidary (sol-<<schwa>>-der-ee), adj. (Of a liability or obligation) joint and several. See JOINT AND SEVERAL. [Cases: Action 14. C.J.S. Actions § 64.]

“It is a single debt of £100 owing by each of them, in such fashion that each of them may be compelled to pay the whole of it, but that when it is once paid by either of them, both are discharged from it. Obligations of this description may be called solidary, since in the language of Roman law, each of the debtors is bound in solidum instead of pro parte; that is to say, for the whole, and not for a proportionate part. A solidary obligation, therefore, may be defined as one in which two or more debtors owe the same thing to the same creditor.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 462–63 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

SOLIDARY LIABILITY

solum provinciale (soh-l*<<schwa>>m pr<<schwa>>*-vin-shee-ay-lee). [Latin “provincial land”] Roman law. Provincial land ultimately held by the Emperor or state, with private holders having only, in theory, a possessory title without the right to transfer the property by formal methods, as distinguished from solum italicum. • Justinian abolished all distinctions between the two, allowing all land to be conveyed by traditio. Cf. SOLUM ITALICUM .

“Ownership of provincial land. The dominium of this was in Caesar or the populus according as it was an imperial or a senatorial province .... The holders were practically owners, but as they were not domini formal methods of transfer were not applicable. The holdings were however transferable informally .... The case disappeared when Justinian abolished the distinction between Italic and provincial land. Not all land in the provinces was solum provinciale: many provincial communities were given ius italicum, the chief result being that the land was in the dominium of the holder and not of the State, so that it could be transferred and claimed at law by civil law methods.” W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 190 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

SOLUS CUM SOLA IN LOCO SUSPECTO

SON-OF-SAM LAW

Son-of-Sam law.A state statute that prohibits a convicted criminal from profiting by selling his or her story rights to a publisher or filmmaker. • State law usu. authorizes prosecutors to seize royalties from a convicted criminal and to place the money in an escrow account for the crime victim's benefit. This type of law was first enacted in New York in 1977, in response to the lucrative book deals that publishers offered David Berkowitz, the serial killer who called himself "Son of Sam." In 1992, the U.S. Supreme Court declared New York's Son-of-Sam law unconstitutional as a content-based speech regulation, prompting many states to amend their laws in an attempt to avoid constitutionality problems. Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. New York State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105, 112 S.Ct. 501 (1991). [Cases: Criminal Law 1221. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1733.]

source,n. The originator or primary agent of an act, circumstance, or result < she was the source of the information> <the side business was the source of income>.

source code.Copyright. The nonmachine language used by a computer programmer to create a program. • If it is not included with the software sold to the public, source code is protected by trade-secret laws as well as copyright and patent laws. Source code may be deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office, but because of the need to protect a trade secret, and because a skilled programmer could figure out how to duplicate the source code's functions without necessarily copying the code, strategic parts may be blacked out. Cf. OBJECT CODE.

source of law.Something (such as a constitution, treaty, statute, or custom) that provides authority for legislation and for judicial decisions; a point of origin for law or legal analysis. — Also termed fons juris.

terms might be more enlightening than one directed toward the more restricted function performed by judges. Our concern here will be with 'sources' in a much broader sense than is usual in the literature of jurisprudence. Our interest is not so much in sources of laws, as in sources of law. From whence does the law generally draw not only its content but its force in men's lives?" Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 69 (1968).

"In the context of legal research, the term 'sources of law' can refer to three different concepts which should be distinguished. One, sources of law can refer to the origins of legal concepts and ideas.... Two, sources of law can refer to governmental institutions that formulate legal rules.... Three, sources of law can refer to the published manifestations of the law. The books, computer databases, microforms, optical disks, and other media that contain legal information are all sources of law." J. Myron Jacobstein & Roy M. Mersky, Fundamentals of Legal Research 1–2 (5th ed. 1990).

SOVEREIGN

sovereign, adj. (Of a state) characteristic of or endowed with supreme authority <sovereign nation> <sovereign immunity>.

sovereign, n. 1. A person, body, or state vested with independent and supreme authority. 2. The ruler of an independent state. — Also spelled sovrán. See SOVEREIGNTY.

SOVEREIGN EQUALITY

sovereign equality. Int'l law. The principle that nations have the right to enjoy territorial integrity and political independence, free from intervention by other nations. • The United Nations "is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members." UN Charter art. 2, ¶ 1.

SOVEREIGN POWER

sovereign power. The power to make and enforce laws. See sovereign political power under POLITICAL POWER.

SOVEREIGN RIGHT

sovereign right. A unique right possessed by a state or its agencies that enables it to carry out its official functions for the public benefit, as distinguished from certain proprietary rights that it may possess like any other private person. [Cases: States 21. C.J.S. States §§ 36–37.]

sovereign state. 1. A state that possesses an independent existence, being complete in itself, without being merely part of a larger whole to whose government it is subject. 2. A political community whose members are bound together by the tie of common subjection to some central authority, whose commands those members must obey. — Also termed independent state. Cf. client state and nonsovereign state under STATE. [Cases: International Law 3. C.J.S. International Law §§ 6–8, 13.]

“The essence of statehood is sovereignty, the principle that each nation answers only to its own domestic order and is not accountable to a larger international community, save only to the extent it has consented to do so. Sovereign states are thus conceived as hermetically sealed units, atoms that spin around an international orbit, sometimes colliding, sometimes cooperating, but always separate and apart.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 50 (2001).

part-sovereign state. A political community in which part of the powers of external sovereignty are exercised by the home government, and part are vested in or controlled by some other political body or bodies. • Such a state is not fully independent because by the conditions of its existence it is not allowed full freedom of action in external affairs.

SOVEREIGNTY

sovereignty (sahv-[-[<<schwa>>-]rin-tee). 1. Supreme dominion, authority, or rule. [Cases: International Law 8. C.J.S. International Law §§ 25–28.]

popular sovereignty. A system of government in which policy choices reflect the preferences

state sovereignty. See STATE SOVEREIGNTY.

2. The supreme political authority of an independent state. 3. The state itself. "It is well to [distinguish] the senses in which the word Sovereignty is used. In the ordinary popular sense it means Supremacy, the right to demand obedience. Although the idea of actual power is not absent, the prominent idea is that of some sort of title to exercise control. An ordinary layman would call that person (or body of persons) Sovereign in a State who is obeyed because he is acknowledged to stand at the top, whose will must be expected to prevail, who can get his own way, and make others go his, because such is the practice of the country. Etymologically the word of course means merely superiority, and familiar usage applies it in monarchies to the monarch, because he stands first in the State, be his real power great or small." James Bryce, Studies in History and Jurisprudence 504–05 (1901).

external sovereignty. The power of dealing on a nation's behalf with other national governments.

internal sovereignty. The power enjoyed by a governmental entity of a sovereign state, including affairs within its own territory and powers related to the exercise of external sovereignty.

spam. Unsolicited commercial e-mail (UCE). • Most states have some form of antis spam law, usu. prohibiting advertisers from misrepresenting or concealing an e-mail's origin and purpose. In 2004, the much-criticized CAN-SPAM Act of 2003 became federal law. 15 USCA § 7701.

sparsim (spahr-sim). [Latin] Hist. Scattered; here and there. • This term was used in several situations — for example, when an action to recover for waste not only when the injury was complete, but also when the injury was partial or scattered.

“And if waste be done sparsim, or here and there, all over a wood, the whole wood shall be recovered; or if in several rooms of a house, the whole house shall be forfeited; because it is impracticable for the reversioner to enjoy only the identical places wasted, when lying interspersed with the other. But if waste be done only in one end of a wood (or perhaps in one room of a house) if that can be conveniently separated from the rest, that part only is the locus vastatus, or thing wasted, and that only shall be forfeited to the reversioner.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 283–84 (1766).

species (spee-sheez). 1. A taxonomic class of organisms uniquely distinguished from other classes by shared characteristics and usu. by an inability to interbreed with members of other classes.

endangered species. A species in danger of becoming extinct; esp., under federal law, a species that is in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant part of its range. • Federal law excludes from the definition a species of the class Insecta if the Environmental Protection Agency determines that it constitutes a pest whose protection would present a significant risk to the human population. 50 CFR § 81. [Cases: Environmental Law 528.]

threatened species. A species that, within the foreseeable future, is likely to become an endangered species throughout all or a significant part of its range. 16 USCA § 1532(20). [Cases: Environmental Law 528.]

2. A specific class or kind of thing within a larger, general class. • For example, tort refers to a general class or genus. Slander refers to a specific kind of tort. Cf. GENUS. 3. Patents. An element, usu. one of several mutually exclusive alternatives, that may be used in an invention to achieve a desired result. • Species may be structures, steps, parts, compounds, and so on.

ultimate species. A species that has been fully and narrowly defined. • For example, a species may be defined generally as “magnetic metals, including iron and steel,” or particularly, such as “sodium chloride.”

SPECIES CLAIM

species claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

SPECIES FACTI

species facti (spee-shee-eez orspee-sheez fak-ti). [Latin] Scots law. The particular character of the thing done. • The phrase appeared in reference to the specific criminal act or civil wrong alleged.

specific, adj. 1. Of, relating to, or designating a particular or defined thing; explicit <specific duties>. 2. Of or relating to a particular named thing <specific item>. 3. Conformable to special requirements <specific performance>. — specificity (spes-<<schwa>>-fis-i-tee), n. — specifically,adv.

SPECIFIC APPROPRIATION

specific appropriation.See APPROPRIATION(2).

SPECIFICATIO

specificatio (spes-<<schwa>>-fi-kay-shee-oh), n.[Latin fr. species “form” + facere “to make”] Roman & civil law. 1. A giving of form to materials; the process of making something new from existing property. 2. A mode of acquisition by which a person made something new from existing material (for example, wine from grapes or a ship from timber). See ACCESSION(4). Pl. specificationes.

SPECIFICATION

specification. 1. The act of making a detailed statement, esp. of the measurements, quality, materials, or other items to be provided under a contract. [Cases: Contracts 199(1).] 2. The statement so made. 3.Patents. The part of a patent application describing how an invention is made and used, the best mode of operation of the claimed invention, and the inventor's claims. • The specification must be clear and complete enough to enable a person of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the invention. It must also disclose the best mode of working the invention. The term may also refer to the description as separate from the claims. — Abbr. spec. Cf. PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

“The specification and claims of a patent, particularly if the invention be at all complicated, constitute one of the most difficult legal instruments to draw with accuracy; and, in view of the fact that valuable inventions are often placed in the hands of inexperienced persons to prepare such specifications and claims, it is no matter of surprise that the latter frequently fail to describe with requisite certainty the exact invention of the patentee, and err either in claiming that which the patentee had not in fact invented, or in omitting some element which was a valuable or essential part of his actual invention.” Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U.S. 156, 170, 12 S.Ct. 825, 831 (1892).

substitute specification.A patent specification that is rewritten (1) to include amendments made to the specification after filing; (2) to replace an illegible or unreadable original; or (3) to prepare the papers for printing. • A substitute specification must be accompanied by a statement that it contains no new matter, and by a copy showing what has been added and deleted since the original specification. Substitute specifications are allowed under 37 CFR § 1.125. — Also termed rewritten specification. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

4. A statement of charges against one who is accused of an offense, esp. a military offense. [Cases: Armed Services 47(2); Military Justice 950–971. C.J.S. Armed Services § 164; Military Justice §§ 180–191.]“A charge sets forth an offense — that is, a particular kind of act or conduct that the governing rules define as entailing liability to prescribed penalties — of which the accused is alleged to be guilty. A specification states what the accused is alleged to have done which, if true, constitutes an instance of the offense indicated in the charge. An accused must be found guilty of a charge before a penalty can be imposed.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 61, at 636 (10th ed. 2002).

5. The acquisition of title to materials belonging to another person by converting those materials into a new and different form, as by changing grapes into wine, lumber into shelving, or corn into liquor. • The effect is that the original owner of the materials loses the property rights in them and is left with a right of action for their original value. — Abbr. spec.

SPECIFIC LIEN

specific lien.See LIEN.

SPECIFIC MAIN MOTION

specific main motion.See incidental main motion under MOTION(2).

SPECIFIC OBJECTION

specific objection.See OBJECTION.

specific performance.The rendering, as nearly as practicable, of a promised performance through a judgment or decree; specif., a court-ordered remedy that requires precise fulfillment of a legal or contractual obligation when monetary damages are inappropriate or inadequate, as when the sale of real estate or a rare article is involved. • Specific performance is an equitable remedy that lies within the court's discretion to award whenever the common-law remedy is insufficient, either because damages would be inadequate or because the damages could not possibly be established. — Also termed specific relief. [Cases: Specific Performance 1. C.J.S. Specific Performance §§ 2, 5–6.]

“In essence, the remedy of specific performance enforces the execution of a contract according to its terms, and it may therefore be contrasted with the remedy of damages, which is compensation for non-execution. In specific performance, execution of the contract is enforced by the power of the Court to treat disobedience of its decree as contempt, for which the offender may be imprisoned until he is prepared to comply with the decree. Actually, ... it is not strictly accurate to say that the Court enforces execution of the contract according to its terms, for the Court will not usually intervene until default upon the contract has occurred, so that enforcement by the Court is later in time than performance carried out by the person bound, without the intervention of the Court.” G.W. Keeton, An Introduction to Equity 304 (5th ed. 1961).

specimen. An actual sample of something; esp., an example of a trademark as it is used in commerce. • In the field of trademarks, a specimen typically consists of a label, a container, a display, or a photograph of the mark used for selling or advertising the goods or services.

SPECTROGRAPH

spectrograph. An electromagnetic machine that analyzes sound, esp. a human voice, by separating and mapping it into elements of frequency, time lapse, and intensity (represented by a series of horizontal and vertical bar lines) to produce a final voiceprint. See VOICEPRINT. [Cases: Criminal Law 339.6. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 800–801.]

speculation, n. 1. The buying or selling of something with the expectation of profiting from price fluctuations <he engaged in speculation in the stock market>. 2. The act or practice of theorizing about matters over which there is no certain knowledge <the public's speculation about the assassination of John F. Kennedy>. — speculate, vb. — speculative, adj.

SPECULATIVE DAMAGES

speculative damages. See DAMAGES.

SPECULATIVE RISK

speculative risk. See RISK.

speculator. A knowledgeable, aggressive investor who trades securities to profit from fluctuating market prices.

SPEECH

speech. 1. The expression or communication of thoughts or opinions in spoken words; something spoken or uttered. See FREEDOM OF SPEECH. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 539, 542.]

commercial speech. Communication (such as advertising and marketing) that involves only the commercial interests of the speaker and the audience, and is therefore afforded lesser First Amendment protection than social, political, or religious speech. Cf. pure speech. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.2, 90.3. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 544–545, 561, 568, 570–571, 573–574, 576–577, 581.]

corporate speech. Speech deriving from a corporation and protected under the First Amendment. • It does not lose protected status simply because of its corporate source.

hate speech. Speech that carries no meaning other than the expression of hatred for some group, such as a particular race, esp. in circumstances in which the communication is likely to provoke violence. Cf. hate crime under CRIME; group libel under LIBEL. [Cases: Civil Rights 1808. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 222.]

pure speech. Words or conduct limited in form to what is necessary to convey the idea. • This type of speech is given the greatest constitutional protection. Cf. commercial speech; symbolic speech.

sedition speech. Speech advocating the violent overthrow of government. See SEDITION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 550, 557, 605–606.]

symbolic speech. Conduct that expresses opinions or thoughts, such as a hunger strike or the wearing of a black armband. • Symbolic speech does not enjoy the same constitutional protection that pure speech does. — Also termed speech-plus. Cf. pure speech. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461, 501–503, 539–543, 548–554, 561, 565, 572, 582–584, 603–605, 608, 610.]

2. English law. An opinion delivered by a Law Lord; JUDGMENT(2). 3. Parliamentary law. The unit of debate; specif., one statement, usu. subject to a time limit, on one question by one member. • When finished, the speaker must relinquish the floor and ordinarily cannot yield it to another member.

SPEECH CLAUSE

Speech Clause. The First Amendment provision that “Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech.” U.S. Const. amend I. — Also termed Freedom of Speech Clause.

SPEECH OR DEBATE CLAUSE

Speech or Debate Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution giving members of Congress immunity for statements made during debate in either the House or the Senate. • This immunity is extended to other areas where it is necessary to prevent impairment of deliberations and other legitimate legislative activities, such as subpoenaing bank records for an investigation. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. — Also termed Speech and Debate Clause. See congressional immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: United States 12.C.J.S. United States §§ 27–28.]

SPEECH-PLUS

speech-plus. See symbolic speech under SPEECH.

SPEEDY EXECUTION

speedy execution. See EXECUTION.

SPEEDY REMEDY

speedy remedy. See REMEDY.

SPEEDY TRIAL

speedy trial. Criminal procedure. A trial that the prosecution, with reasonable diligence, begins promptly and conducts expeditiously. • The Sixth Amendment secures the right to a speedy trial. In deciding whether an accused has been deprived of that right, courts generally consider the length of the delay, the reason for the delay, and the prejudice to the accused. [Cases: Criminal Law 577.1–577.16. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 578–621.]

SPEEDY TRIAL ACT OF 1974

Speedy Trial Act of 1974. A federal statute establishing time limits for carrying out the major events (such as information, indictment, arraignment, and trial commencement) in the prosecution of federal criminal cases. 18 USCA §§ 3161–3174. [Cases: Criminal Law 577.2, 577.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 579, 591–592, 599, 602–603.]

spe numerandae pecuniae (spee n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-ran-dee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Law Latin] Scots law. In the hope of the money being paid.

“So, also, where one delivers a conveyance, which acknowledges receipt of the consideration price, and discharges the disponent, this does not exclude his action for the price, if the disponent, on receiving delivery, refuses payment; the disponent is still liable ex dolo, the deed having been delivered spe numerandae pecuniae.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 582 (4th ed. 1894).

sperate (speer-<<schwa>>t), adj. Archaic. (Of a debt) recoverable; not hopeless. • In determining whether a debt could be collected, consideration was formerly given to whether the debt was desperate or sperate.

spes accrescendi (speez ak-r<<schwa>>-sen-dI). [Latin “hope of accrual”] Hope of acquiring an extra share of a legacy or inheritance by survival.

spes obligationis (speez ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. The hope of an obligation yet to emerge.

spes recuperandi (speez ri-k[y]oo-p<<schwa>>-ran-dI). [Latin “hope of recovery”] Hope of recovering a prize, as from a captured vessel.

spes successionis (speez s<<schwa>>k-sesh-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “hope of succession”] Hope of succeeding to a right.

“A mere spes successionis must be distinguished from a contingent right. If Matilda has nursed her invalid friend for thirty years, she may have every hope of succeeding to the property, but she has no right.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 306 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

SPES SUCCESSIONIS IN DESTINATIONE

spes successionis in destinatione (speez s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh-nis in des-ti-nay-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. A hope of succeeding under a destination (that is, an appointment by will).

spes successionis in obligatione (speez s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh-nis in ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. A hope of succeeding to a right under an existing obligation.

SPIELBERG DOCTRINE

Spielberg doctrine.Labor law. The policy of the National Labor Relations Board to defer to an arbitrator's decision regarding a contract dispute if (1) the decision is not repugnant to the National Labor Relations Board, (2) the arbitration proceedings provided a hearing as fair as would have been provided before the NLRB, and (3) the contract requires binding arbitration.Spielberg Mfg. Co., 112 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 86 (1955). Cf. COLLYER DOCTRINE.

“In Spielberg Mfg. Co. (1955), the Board announced its policy of dismissing an unfair labor practice complaint in deference to an arbitration award already rendered, provided the arbitral procedures were fair and the award was not repugnant to the policies of the Labor Act.... The Supreme Court in several cases cited the Board's deferral policy with approval, noting that the Board has discretion to respect an arbitration award and that arbitration of disputes contributes to industrial peace and stability.” Robert A. Gorman, Basic Text on Labor Law: Unionization and Collective Bargaining 751 (1976).

SPIGURNEL

spigurnel (spig-<<schwa>>r-nel), n. Hist. An early officer of the Chancery, equivalent to the Sealer of the king's writs in later times.

SPILOVER

spillover. See EXTERNALITY.

SPILOVER THEORY

spillover theory.The principle that a severance must be granted only when a defendant can show that trial with a codefendant would substantially prejudice the defendant's case, as when the jury might wrongly use evidence against the defendant. See BRUTON ERROR. [Cases: Criminal Law 622.2(8). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 570–571.]

“The spillover theory involves the question of whether a jury's unfavorable impression of a defendant against whom the evidence is properly admitted will influence the way the jurors view a codefendant.... The test ... is whether the jury can keep separate the evidence that is relevant to each defendant and render a fair and impartial verdict.” 22A C.J.S. Criminal Law § 571, at 190–91 (1989).

SPIN-OFF

spin-off,n.1. A corporate divestiture in which a division of a corporation becomes an independent company and stock of the new company is distributed to the corporation's shareholders. [Cases: Corporations 445. C.J.S. Corporations § 656.] 2. The company created by this divestiture. Cf. SPLIT-OFF F; SPLIT-UP.

sponsalia per verba de futuro (spon-say-lee-⟨schwa⟩ p⟨schwa⟩r v⟨schwa⟩r-b⟨schwa⟩ dee f[y]oo-t[y]oor-oh). [Latin “espousals by words about the future”] Hist. A promise to marry in the future.

“[A] promise to marry in the future (sponsalia per verba de futuro) gave rise only to an executory contract of marriage. The regular way of executing the contract was to solemnise the marriage, using present words. But the Canon law acknowledged that it could also be turned into the indissoluble bond of present matrimony by physical consummation .... Thus, in the absence of carnal copulation, the validity of a marriage had come to depend on whether the contract was by words de praesenti or de futuro.... It is hardly surprising that it gave rise to so much wrangling and fraud, and that the commonest species of matrimonial suit in the medieval consistory courts was to interpret and enforce ‘espousals.’” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 546 (3d ed. 1990).

sponsalia per verba de praesenti (spon-say-lee-⟨schwa⟩ p⟨schwa⟩r v⟨schwa⟩r-b⟨schwa⟩ dee pri-zen-t[or]pree-). Eccles. law. A type of informal marriage that occurred when the parties made an informal agreement to have each other as husband and wife. • This type of informal marriage was based on nothing more than the present consent to be married but was entirely valid and would take precedence over a later formal ceremonial marriage that either of the parties attempted to contract with someone else.

sponsio (spon-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An undertaking, available only to citizens, in the form of an answer to a question using a solemn form of words with religious overtones. • This was the original form of stipulation. See SPONDESNE? SPONDEO; STIPULATIO.

SPONSIO JUDICIALIS

sponsio judicialis (spon-shee-oh joo-dish-ee-ay-lis). [Latin] Roman law. A formal promise that the judge is entitled to acquire by virtue of his office. Pl. sponsiones judiciales.

spread,n.1.Banking. The difference between the interest rate that a financial institution must pay to attract deposits and the rate at which money can be loaned. 2.Securities. The difference between the highest price a buyer will pay for a security (the bid price) and the lowest price at which a seller will sell a security (the asked price).3.Securities. The simultaneous buying and selling of one or more options or futures contracts on the same security in order to profit from the price difference. 4. In investment banking, the difference between the price the underwriter pays the issuer of the security and the price paid by the public in the initial offering. • The spread compensates the underwriter for its services; it is made up of the manager's fee, the underwriter's discount, and the selling-group concession or discount. — Also termed (in sense 4) gross spread; underwriting spread.

SQUALOR CARCERIS

squalor carceris (skway-lor kahr-s*<<schwa>>*r-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The strictness of imprisonment.

“This term means merely the strictness of imprisonment which a creditor is entitled to enforce, with the view of compelling the debtor to pay the debt, or disclose any funds which he may have concealed. It does not imply (as it did with the ancient churchmen, from whom the term is derived) anything loathsome or unhealthy in the imprisonment in Scotland, which is indeed less close than in England. Squalor carceris is not necessary in imprisonment on meditatio fugae warrant, security being all that is required in such cases.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 1032 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

SQUALOR MORBI

squalor morbi (skway-lor mor-bi). [Law Latin] Hist. The dregs of disease.

SQUARE

square,n.1. A certain portion of land within a city limit. — Also termed block. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 721(1). C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 1557–1559.] 2. A space set apart for public use. 3. In a government survey, an area measuring 24 by 24 miles.

squatter. 1. A person who settles on property without any legal claim or title. 2. A person who settles on public land under a government regulation allowing the person to acquire title upon fulfilling specified conditions. [Cases: Public Lands 35. C.J.S. Public Lands § 43.]

squatter's rights. The right to acquire title to real property by adverse possession, or by preemption of public lands. See ADVERSE POSSESSION.

SQUEEZE-OUT

SQUIRES<TT> CLAIM

Squires claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

SQUIRES<TT> DOCTRINE

Squires doctrine. Patents. A rule of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a utility-patent claim may incorporate drawings or tables by reference, but only when there is no practical way to express the information in words, and when referring to the artwork is a concise way to communicate the information. • The namesake case involved a numerical font designed to be readable in the dim red light inside a submarine. It is allowed only when necessary, and is not available just for the convenience of an applicant. Ex parte Squires, 133 USPQ (BNA) 598 (Bd. App. 1961). See Squires claim under PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents 100. C.J.S. Patents § 143.]

ss. abbr. 1. Sections. 2. Subscripti (i.e., signed below). 3. Sans (i.e., without). 4. (Erroneously) scilicet.

“Many possible etymologies have been suggested for this mysterious abbreviation. One is that it signifies scilicet (= namely, to wit), which is usually abbreviated sc. or scil. Another is that ss. represents ‘[t]he two gold letters at the ends of the chain of office or “collar” worn by the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench ....’ Max Radin, Law Dictionary 327 (1955). Mellinkoff suggests that the precise etymology is unknown: ‘Lawyers have been using ss for nine hundred years and still are not sure what it means.’ David Mellinkoff, The Language of the Law 296 (1963). In fact, though, it is a flourish deriving from the Year Books — an equivalent of the paragraph mark: ‘¶.’ Hence Lord Hardwicke's statement that ss. is nothing more than a division mark. See Jodderrell v. Cowell, 95 Eng. Rep. 222, 222 (K.B. 1737).... An early formbook writer incorporated it into his forms, and ever since it has been mindlessly perpetuated by one generation after another.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 825 (2d ed. 1995).

STAND ADJOURNED

stand adjourned. (Of a meeting or proceeding) to be in a state of adjournment < this court stands adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow >. • This status is usu. announced by a judge or other presiding officer concerning the business scheduled to continue at a later time. — Often shortened to adjourned.

STANDARD

standard,n.1. A model accepted as correct by custom, consent, or authority < what is the standard in the ant-farm industry?>.2. A criterion for measuring acceptability, quality, or accuracy <the attorney was making a nice living — even by New York standards>. — standard,adj.

objective standard.A legal standard that is based on conduct and perceptions external to a particular person. • In tort law, for example, the reasonable-person standard is considered an objective standard because it does not require a determination of what the defendant was thinking.

subjective standard.A legal standard that is peculiar to a particular person and based on the person's individual views and experiences. • In criminal law, for example, premeditation is determined by a subjective standard because it depends on the defendant's mental state.

STANDARD & POOR'S

Standard & Poor's.An investment-analysis and-advisory service. • Standard & Poor's rates the financial strength of businesses from AAA (strongest) to AA, A, BBB, and so on to CCC. Most grades may also be modified with a plus- or minus-sign according to the business's relative strength among similar companies. A rating of R means that the company is the subject of some regulatory action.

STANDING

standing,n. A party's right to make a legal claim or seek judicial enforcement of a duty or right. • To have standing in federal court, a plaintiff must show (1) that the challenged conduct has caused the plaintiff actual injury, and (2) that the interest sought to be protected is within the zone of interests meant to be regulated by the statutory or constitutional guarantee in question. — Also termed standing to sue. Cf. JUSTICIABILITY. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

“Have the appellants alleged such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the court so largely depends for illumination of difficult constitutional questions? This is the gist of the question of standing.” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 204, 82 S.Ct. 691, 703 (1962)(Brennan, J.).

third-party standing. Standing held by someone claiming to protect the rights of others. • For example, in most jurisdictions, only a parent has standing to bring a suit for custody or visitation; in some, however, a third party — for instance, a grandparent or a person with whom the child has substantial contacts — may have standing to bring an action for custody or visitation. See GRANDPARENT RIGHTS. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.4. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

STANDING ASIDE A JUROR

standing aside a juror. The prosecution practice of provisionally placing a juror aside until the panel is exhausted, without providing a reason, instead of challenging the juror or showing cause. • The practice originally developed as a method of avoiding the Challenge of Jurors Act (1305), which prohibited the Crown from challenging a juror without showing cause. A similar practice was formerly used in Pennsylvania. [Cases: Jury 122. C.J.S. Juries § 368.]

STANDING BY

standing by. 1. The awaiting of an opportunity to respond, as with assistance. 2. Silence or inaction when there is a duty to speak or act; esp., the tacit possession of knowledge under circumstances requiring the possessor to reveal the knowledge. See estoppel by silence under ESTOPPEL.

STANDING COMMITTEE

standing committee. See COMMITTEE.

STANDING COMMITTEE ON RULES OF PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure. A group of judges, lawyers, and legal scholars appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States to advise the Judicial Conference of the United States on possible amendments to the procedural rules in the various federal courts and on other issues relating to the operation of the federal courts. 28 USCA § 331.

“[Under 28 USCA § 331], the Judicial Conference of the United States has created a Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure and has authorized the appointment from time to time of various advisory committees. These committees make recommendations regarding amendments of the rules to the Judicial Conference, which in turn transmits those recommendations it approves to the Supreme Court. Under this new plan, as under the machinery in effect from 1934 to 1956, the Court retains the ultimate responsibility for the adoption of amendments to the rules.” 4 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1007, at 35 (2d ed. 1987).

STANDING SEISED TO USES

standing seised to uses. The holding of title for the benefit or use of another, such as a relative in consideration of blood or marriage. • A covenant to stand seised to uses is a type of conveyance that depends on the Statute of Uses for its effect. — Often shortened to seised to uses. See STATUTE OF USES.

STANDING TO SUE

standing to sue. See STANDING.

STANDING VOTE

standing vote. See VOTE(4).

stand mute. 1. (Of a defendant) to refuse to enter a plea to a criminal charge. • Standing mute is treated as a plea of not guilty. [Cases: Criminal Law 300. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 378–379.] 2. (Of any party) to raise no objections.

STANDSTILL AGREEMENT

standstill agreement. Any agreement to refrain from taking further action; esp., an agreement by which a party agrees to refrain from further attempts to take over a corporation (as by making no tender offer) for a specified period, or by which financial institutions agree not to call bonds or loans when due.

STAND TRIAL

STANTE MATRIMONIO

stante matrimonio (stan-tee ma-tr<<schwa>>-moh-nee-oh). [Latin] Hist. The marriage remaining undissolved.

STAPLE

staple (stay-p<<schwa>>l). 1. A key commodity such as wool, leather, tin, lead, butter, or cheese (collectively termed the staple). 2. Hist. A town appointed by the Crown as an exclusive market for staple products. See STATUTE STAPLE. 3. Patents. An unpatented thing or material that is a component of a patented product or is used in a patented process, but also has other practical uses. • Patentees may not gain control of the market for staples through tying agreements. Cf. NONSTAPLE.

STAR CHAMBER

Star Chamber. 1. Hist. An English court having broad civil and criminal jurisdiction at the king's discretion and noted for its secretive, arbitrary, and oppressive procedures, including compulsory self-incrimination, inquisitorial investigation, and the absence of juries. • The Star Chamber was abolished in 1641 because of its abuses of power. — Also termed Court of Star Chamber; Camera Stellata. 2. (usu. l.c.) Any secretive, arbitrary, or oppressive tribunal or proceeding.

STARE DECISIS

stare decisis (stahr-ee di-si-sis or stair-ee), n. [Latin “to stand by things decided”] The doctrine of precedent, under which it is necessary for a court to follow earlier judicial decisions when the same points arise again in litigation. See PRECEDENT; NON QUIETA MOVERE. Cf. RES JUDICATA; LAW OF THE CASE ; (in civil law) jurisprudence constante under JURISPRUDENCE. [Cases: Courts 89. C.J.S. Courts §§ 139–140, 144–146, 161–164, 166–167.]

“The rule of adherence to judicial precedents finds its expression in the doctrine of stare decisis. This doctrine is simply that, when a point or principle of law has been once officially decided or settled by the ruling of a competent court in a case in which it is directly and necessarily involved, it will no longer be considered as open to examination or to a new ruling by the same tribunal, or by those which are bound to follow its adjudications, unless it be for urgent reasons and in exceptional cases.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 321 (3d ed. 1914).

“The general orthodox interpretation of stare decisis... is stare rationibus decidendis (‘keep to the rationes decidendi of past cases’), but a narrower and more literal interpretation is sometimes employed. To appreciate this narrower interpretation it is necessary to refer ... to Lord Halsbury’s assertion that a case is only authority for what it actually decides. We saw that situations can arise in which all that is binding is the decision. According to Lord Reid, such a situation arises when the ratio decidendi of a previous case is obscure, out of accord with authority or established principle, or too broadly expressed.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 100–01 (4th ed. 1991).

STARE DECISIS ET NON QUIETA MOVERE

stare decisis et non quieta movere (stair-ee di-si-sis et non kwI-ee-t<<schwa>>moh-veer-ee). [Latin] To stand by things decided, and not to disturb settled points. See STARE DECISIS.

STARE ENIM RELIGIONI DEBET

stare enim religioni debet (stair-ee ee-nim ri-lij-ee-oh-nee dee-bet ordeb-et). [Latin] Hist. For one ought to abide by one's solemn obligation.

STARE IN JUDICIO

stare in judicio (stair-ee in joo-dish-ee-oh). [Latin] Hist. To appear before a tribunal as either a plaintiff or a defendant.

STAR PAGING

star paging, n.1. A method of referring to a page in an earlier edition of a book, esp. a legal source. • This method correlates the pagination of the later edition with that of the earlier (usu. the first) edition. 2. By extension, the method of displaying on a computer screen the page breaks that occur in printed documents such as law reports and law reviews. — Also termed star pagination. — star page, n.

STARR

starr (stahr), n.[fr. Latin starrum fr. Hebrew sh'tar “a writing”] Hist. A Jewish contract (esp. for release of an obligation) that Richard I declared to be invalid unless it was placed in a lawful repository, the largest being in the king's Exchequer at Westminster. Pl. starra, starrs.

“It is well known that, before the banishment of the Jews under Edward I, their contracts and obligations were denominated in our ancient records starra or starrs, from a corruption of the Hebrew word, shetàr, a covenant.... These starrs, by an ordinance of Richard the first ... were commanded to be enrolled and deposited in chests under three keys in certain places; one, and the most considerable, of which was in the king's exchequer at Westminster .... [T]he room at the exchequer, where the chests containing these starrs were kept, was probably called the starr-chamber, and, when the Jews were expelled [from] the kingdom, was applied to the use of the king's council, when sitting in their judicial capacity." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 263 n.a (1769).

STASH

STAT

stat.abbr.STATUTE.

STATE

state,n.1. The political system of a body of people who are politically organized; the system of rules by which jurisdiction and authority are exercised over such a body of people <separation of church and state>. — Also termed political society. Cf. NATION. [Cases: International Law 3. C.J.S. International Law §§ 6–8, 13.]

“A STATE is a community of persons living within certain limits of territory, under a permanent organization which aims to secure the prevalence of justice by self-imposed law. The organ of the state by which its relations with other states are managed is the government.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 36, at 34 (5th ed. 1878).

“A state or political society is an association of human beings established for the attainment of certain ends by certain means. It is the most important of all the various kinds of society in which men unite, being indeed the necessary basis and condition of peace, order, and civilisation. What then is the difference between this and other forms of association? In what does the state differ from such other societies as a church, a university, a joint-stock company, or a trade union? The difference is clearly one of function. The state must be defined by reference to such of its activities and purposes as are essential and characteristic.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 129 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“A state is an institution, that is to say, it is a system of relations which men establish among themselves as a means of securing certain objects, of which the most fundamental is a system of order within which their activities can be carried on. Modern states are territorial; their governments exercise control over persons and things within their frontiers, and today the whole of the habitable world is divided between about seventy of these territorial states. A state should not be confused with the whole community of persons living on its territory; it is only one among a multitude of other institutions, such as churches and corporations, which a community establishes for securing different objects, though obviously it is one of tremendous importance; none the less it is not, except in the ideology of totalitarianism, an all-embracing institution, not something from which, or within which, all other institutions and associations have their being; many institutions, e.g. the Roman Catholic Church, and many associations, e.g. federations of employers and of workers, transcend the boundaries of any single state.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 118 (5th ed. 1955).

client state.A country that is obliged in some degree to share in the control of its external relations with some foreign power or powers. — Also termed satellite state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

composite state.A state that comprises an aggregate or group of constituent states.

dependent state.See nonsovereign state.

federal state.A composite state in which the sovereignty of the entire state is divided between the central or federal government and the local governments of the several constituent states; a union of states in which the control of the external relations of all the member states has been surrendered to a central government so that the only state that exists for international purposes is the one formed by the union. Cf. confederation of states under CONFEDERATION.

imperial state.Archaic. A composite state in which a common or central government possesses in itself the entire sovereignty, so that the constituent states possess no portion of this sovereignty.

nonsovereign state.A state that is a constituent part of a greater state that includes both it and one or more others, and to whose government it is subject; a state that is not complete and self-existent. • Among other things, a nonsovereign state has no power to engage in foreign relations. — Also termed dependent state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

part-sovereign state.See SOVEREIGN STATE.

police state.A state in which the political, economic, and social life of its citizens is subject to repressive governmental control and arbitrary uses of power by the ruling elite, which uses the police as the instrument of control; a totalitarian state.

receiving state.The country to which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent by the country represented by that agent. Cf. sending state. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

satellite state.See client state.

sending state.The country from which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent abroad. Cf. receiving state. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

simple state.See unitary state.

social-service state.A state that uses its power to create laws and regulations to provide for the welfare of its citizens.

sovereign state.See SOVEREIGN STATE.

unitary state.A state that is not made up of territorial divisions that are states themselves. — Also termed (archaically) simple state.

2. An institution of self-government within a larger political entity; esp., one of the constituent parts of a nation having a federal government <the 50 states>. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.] 3. (often cap.) The people of a state, collectively considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; esp., the prosecution as the representative of the people <the State rests its case>.

STATE ACTION

state action. Anything done by a government; esp., in constitutional law, an intrusion on a person's rights (esp. civil rights) either by a governmental entity or by a private requirement that can be enforced only by governmental action (such as a racially restrictive covenant, which requires judicial action for enforcement). [Cases: Civil Rights 1325; Constitutional Law 82(5), 213(2), 254(2). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94; Constitutional Law §§ 456, 619, 629, 631, 704, 708.]

STATE-ACTION DOCTRINE

state-action doctrine. Antitrust. The principle that the antitrust laws do not prohibit a state's anticompetitive acts, or official acts directed by a state. Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 63 S.Ct. 307 (1943). — Also termed Parker doctrine. See MIDCAL TEST. [Cases: Monopolies 12(15.6). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 136, 143.]

STATE AGENCY

state agency. See AGENCY(3).

STATE AUDITOR

state auditor. See AUDITOR.

STATE BANK

state bank. See BANK.

STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

state bar association. See BAR ASSOCIATION.

STATE BODY

state body. See state agency under AGENCY(3).

STATE BOND

state bond. See BOND(3).

STATE-COMPULSION TEST

state-compulsion test. Civil-rights law. The rule that a state is responsible for discrimination that a private party commits while acting under the requirements of state law, as when a restaurant owner is required by state law to refuse service to minorities. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 90 S.Ct. 1598 (1970). See SYMBIOTIC-RELATIONSHIP TEST; NEXUS TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights 1326(4, 7). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94.]

State Justice Institute. A nonprofit federal corporation charged with improving judicial administration in state courts. • It was created by the State Justice Institute Act of 1984. — Abbr. SJI.

STATE LAW

state law.A body of law in a particular state consisting of the state's constitution, statutes, regulations, and common law. Cf. FEDERAL LAW.

STATELESS PERSON

stateless person.Int'l law. A natural person who is not considered a national by any country. • The Stateless Persons Convention (1954) provides these people with certain protections and obliges them to abide by the laws of the country where they reside.

STATEMENT

statement. 1.Evidence. A verbal assertion or nonverbal conduct intended as an assertion. [Cases: Evidence 267. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 259, 285, 311–313, 326, 333–336, 343.] 2. A formal and exact presentation of facts. — Also termed (for plaintiff) statement of cause of action. 3.Criminal procedure. An account of a person's (usu. a suspect's) knowledge of a crime, taken by the police pursuant to their investigation of the offense. Cf. CONFESSION.

consonant statement.A prior declaration of a witness, testified to by a person to whom the declaration was made and allowed into evidence only after the witness's testimony has been impeached. • This type of evidence would, but for the impeachment of the witness, be inadmissible hearsay. [Cases: Witnesses 414(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 781.]

false statement. 1. An untrue statement knowingly made with the intent to mislead. See PERJURY. 2. Any one of three distinct federal offenses: (1) falsifying or concealing a material fact by trick, scheme, or device; (2) making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent representation; and (3) making or using a false document or writing. 18 USCA § 1001. [Cases: Fraud 68.10(1).]

incriminating statement.A statement that tends to establish the guilt of someone, esp. the person making it.

prior consistent statement.A witness's earlier statement that conflicts with the witness's testimony at trial. • In federal practice, extrinsic evidence of an unsworn prior inconsistent statement is admissible — if the witness is given an opportunity to explain or deny the statement — for impeachment purposes only. Fed. R. Evid. 613(b). Sworn statements may be admitted for all purposes. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(A). A prior consistent statement is not hearsay if it is offered to rebut a charge that the testimony was improperly influenced or fabricated. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B). [Cases: Witnesses 379–397; 414(2). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 674–754; 781.]

sworn statement. 1. A statement given under oath; an affidavit. [Cases: Affidavits 1. C.J.S. Affidavits §§ 2–6.] 2. A contractor-builder's listing of suppliers and subcontractors, and their respective bids, required by a lending institution for interim financing.

voluntary statement. A statement made without the influence of duress, coercion, or inducement.

STATEMENT AND ACCOUNT CLAUSE

Statement and Account Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring the regular publication of the receipts and expenditures of the federal government. U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 7. [Cases: United States 44. C.J.S. United States § 78.]

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNT

statement of account. 1. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a bank to a customer, providing certain information on the customer's account, including the checks drawn and cleared, deposits made, charges debited, and the account balance. — Also termed bank statement. See ACCOUNT(4). [Cases: Banks and Banking 151. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278.] 2. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a creditor to a customer, providing certain information on the customer's account, including the amounts billed, credits given, and the balance due. — Also termed account statement.

STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS

statement of affairs. 1. STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL AFFAIRS. 2. A balance sheet showing immediate liquidation values (rather than historical costs), usu. prepared when insolvency is imminent.

STATEMENT OF CAUSE OF ACTION

statement of cause of action. See STATEMENT(2).

STATEMENT OF CLAIM

statement of claim. 1. COMPLAINT(1). 2. English law. A plaintiff's initial pleading in a civil case; DECLARATION(7).

STATEMENT OF CONDITION

statement of condition. See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF CONFESSION

statement of confession. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

STATEMENT OF DEFENSE

statement of defense. The assertions by a defendant; esp., in England, the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's statement of claim.

STATEMENT OF FACT

statement of fact. A form of conduct that asserts or implies the existence or nonexistence of a fact. • The term includes not just a particular statement that a particular fact exists or has existed, but also an assertion that, although perhaps expressed as an opinion, implies the existence of some fact or facts that have led the assertor to hold the opinion in question. See affirmative testimony under TESTIMONY.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

statement of facts.A party's written presentation of the facts leading up to or surrounding a legal dispute, usu. recited toward the beginning of a brief.

“The statement of facts is another of those critical parts of the brief .... Two principles are at war in drafting the statement of facts. First, judges want and some circuit rules require a nonargumentative, ‘fair summary without argument or comment.’ Conversely, you want a statement of facts that persuades the judges to rule for you as soon as they finish reading it. Satisfying both ends requires some balancing.” David G. Knibb, Federal Court of Appeals Manual § 31.7, at 549 (4th ed. 2000).

agreed statement of facts.A narrative statement of facts that is stipulated to be correct by the parties and is submitted to a tribunal for a ruling. • When the narrative statement is filed on appeal instead of a report of the trial proceedings, it is called an agreed statement on appeal. — Also termed agreed case. [Cases: Appeal and Error 845(2); Stipulations 14(10), 18(7). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 707, 709; Stipulations §§ 92–98.]

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

statement of financial affairs.Bankruptcy. A document that an individual or corporate debtor must file to answer questions about its past and present financial status, including any previous bankruptcy, the location of any current accounts, and its recent or current debt. — Also termed statement of affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2321. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 44.]

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

statement of financial condition.See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL POSITION

statement of financial position.See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF INCOME

statement of income.See INCOME STATEMENT.

STATEMENT OF INTENTION

statement of intention.Bankruptcy. A preliminary statement filed by the debtor in a Chapter 7 case, in which the debtor details whether property secured by consumer debt will be retained or surrendered and whether the property is claimed as exempt. • The statement usu. must be filed before the first creditors' meeting or within 30 days from the petition-filing date, whichever is earlier. 11 USCA § 521. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2851, 3022, 3034, 3415.1. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 111–112, 191, 246–247.]

STATEMENT OF PARTICULARS

statement of particulars.See BILL OF PARTICULARS.

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLE

statement of principle.In legislative drafting, a sentence or paragraph that explains the legislature's purpose in passing a statute. • Although a statement of principle often resembles a preamble (usu. both do not appear in a single statute), it differs in that it typically appears in a numbered section of the statute.

STATEMENT OF PRIOR-ART REFERENCES

statement of prior-art references.See INFORMATION-DISCLOSURE STATEMENT.

STATEMENT OF USE

statement of use.See amendment to allege use under TRADEMARK-APPLICATION AMENDMENT .

STATEMENT OF UTILITY

statement of utility.Patents. The portion of a patent-application disclosure statement that explains how the invention is useful. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

STATEMENT OF WORK

statement of work.A contractual provision or exhibit that defines what one party (e.g., the seller) is going to do for the other (e.g., the buyer). • The statement of work often covers such terms as (1) inspection and acceptance, (2) quality-assurance requirements, (3) packing and marking, (4) data requirements, and (5) training. There are generally two types of specifications in a statement of work: a performance specification establishing the minimum requirements for items to be supplied, and a design specification establishing the methods to be used in meeting those minimum requirements. — Also termed statement-of-work clause. — Abbr. SOW.

STATE OF ART

state of art. See STATE OF THE ART.

STATE OFFICER

state officer.See OFFICER(1).

STATE OF MIND

state of mind. 1. The condition or capacity of a person's mind; MENS REA. 2. Loosely, a person's reasons or motives for committing an act, esp. a criminal act.

STATE-OF-MIND EXCEPTION

state-of-mind exception.Evidence. The principle that an out-of-court declaration of an existing motive is admissible, even when the declarant cannot testify in person. • This principle constitutes an exception to the general rule that hearsay is inadmissible. [Cases: Criminal Law 419(2.20); Evidence 268. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 862; Evidence §§ 314–318, 325, 327–328,

STATE OF NATURE

state of nature. The lack of a politically organized society. • The term is a fictional construct for the period in human history predating any type of political society.

“[W]e may make use of the contrast, familiar to the philosophy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, between the civil state and the state of nature. This state of nature is now commonly rejected as one of the fictions which flourished in the era of the social contract, but such treatment is needlessly severe. The term certainly became associated with much false or exaggerated doctrine touching the golden age, on the one hand, and the bellum omnium contra omnes of Hobbes, on the other, but in itself it nevertheless affords a convenient mode for the expression of an undoubted truth. As long as there have been men, there has probably been some form of human society. The state of nature, therefore, is not the absence of society, but the absence of a society so organised on the basis of physical force as to constitute a state. Though human society is coeval with mankind, the rise of political society, properly so called, is an event in human history.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 103–04 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

STATE OF THE ART

state of the art. Products liability. The level of pertinent scientific and technical knowledge existing at the time of a product's manufacture, and the best technology reasonably available at the time the product was sold. — Also termed state of art. [Cases: Products Liability 11. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 19–21.] — state-of-the-art, adj.

“While the statutes in effect in some jurisdictions speak in terms of a state of the art defense, statutes in other jurisdictions provide that state of the art evidence is admissible or may be considered by the trier of fact by statute, and that in determining whether a product was in a defective condition or unreasonably dangerous at the time it left the control of the manufacturer or seller, consideration is given to the state of scientific and technical knowledge available to the manufacturer or seller at the time the product was placed on the market, and to the customary designs, methods, standards, and techniques of manufacturing, inspecting, and testing used by other manufacturers or sellers of similar products.” 63A Am. Jur. 2d Products Liability § 1319, at 472 (1997).

STATE OF THE CASE

state of the case. The posture of litigation as it develops, as in discovery, at trial, or on appeal.

STATE OF THE UNION

State of the Union. See Presidential message under MESSAGE.

STATE OF WAR

state of war. A situation in which war has been declared or armed conflict is in progress. See WAR. [Cases: War and National Emergency 7. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 2, 5.]

state paper. 1. A document prepared by or relating to a state or national government and affecting the administration of that government in its political or international relations. 2. A newspaper officially designated for the publication of public statutes, resolutions, notices, and advertisements. [Cases: Newspapers 1–7. C.J.S. Newspapers §§ 2–29.]

state paper office.Hist. An office established in London in 1578, headed by the Clerk of the Papers, to maintain custody of state documents.

state police.The department or agency of a state government empowered to maintain order, as by investigating and preventing crimes, and making arrests.

STATE POLICE POWER

state police power.The power of a state to enforce laws for the health, welfare, morals, and safety of its citizens, if enacted so that the means are reasonably calculated to protect those legitimate state interests.

STATE RELIGION

state religion.See RELIGION.

STATE'S ATTORNEY

state's attorney.1.DISTRICT ATTORNEY. 2.PROSECUTOR(1).

STATE SEAL

state seal.See great seal (2) under SEAL.

state secret.A governmental matter that would be a threat to the national defense or diplomatic interests of the United States if revealed; information possessed by the government and of a military or diplomatic nature, the disclosure of which would be contrary to the public interest. • State secrets are privileged from disclosure by a witness in an ordinary judicial proceeding. — Also termed governmental secret; government secret. See executive privilege under PRIVILEGE(3). [Cases: Witnesses 216.C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 361–364.]

state-secrets privilege.See PRIVILEGE(3).

STATE SOVEREIGNTY

state sovereignty. The right of a state to self-government; the supreme authority exercised by each state. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.]

STATES' RIGHTS

states' rights. Under the Tenth Amendment, rights neither conferred on the federal government nor forbidden to the states. [Cases: States 4.16. C.J.S. States §§ 25–26.]

STATE STREET BANK<TT>

State Street Bank. Patents. A landmark 1998 decision in the Federal Circuit that made it easier to get patents on computer software, and also called into question the long-accepted notion that business methods are unpatentable. • The court struck down per se rules against patenting mathematical algorithms (the soul of software), focusing instead on whether the result was useful, concrete, and tangible in practice. State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, Inc., 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998).

STATE'S WARD

state's ward. See ward of the state under WARD.

STATE TAX

state tax. See TAX.

STATE THE QUESTION

state the question. (Of the chair) to formally state a motion as in order and ready for consideration. Cf. PUT THE QUESTION.

STATE TRIAL

state trial. See TRIAL.

STATEWAY

stateway, n. A governmental policy or law. • This term is formed on the analogy of folkway.

STATIM

statim (stay-tim). [Latin] Hist. Immediately; at the earliest possible time when an act might lawfully be completed.

STATION

station. 1. Social position or status. See STATUS. 2. A place where military duties are performed or military goods are stored. 3. A headquarters, as of a police department. 4. A place where both freight and passengers are received for transport or delivered after transport. [Cases: Railroads 225. C.J.S. Railroads §§ 776–778, 782, 806.] 5. Civil law. A place where ships may safely travel. [Cases: Shipping 11. C.J.S. Shipping § 8.]

STATIONERS' COMPANY

Stationers' Company.Hist. An association of stationers and their successors, established in London in 1557 and entrusted, by order of the Privy Council, with censorship of the press. • This company was the holder of the first rights we associate today with copyright.

STATIONERS' HALL

Stationers' Hall.Hist. The hall of the Stationers' Company, established in London in 1553, at which every person claiming a copyright was required to register as a condition precedent to filing an infringement action.

“Accordingly ‘Entered at Stationers' Hall’ on the title page of books was a form of warning to pirates that the owner of the copyright could and might sue. This requirement disappeared with the Copyright Act, 1911.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1182 (1980).

STATIONERY OFFICE

Stationery Office.Hist. English law. A government office established in 1786 as a department of the treasury, to supply government offices (including Parliament) with stationery and books, and to print and publish government papers. — Also termed Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

STATIONHOUSE

stationhouse. 1. A police station or precinct. 2. The lockup at a police precinct.

STATIONHOUSE BAIL

stationhouse bail.See cash bail under BAIL(1).

STATIST

statist (stay-tist).1.Archaic. A statesman; a politician. 2. A statistician.

STATISTICAL-DECISION THEORY

statistical-decision theory.A method for determining whether a panel of potential jurors was selected from a fair cross section of the community, by calculating the probabilities of selecting a certain number of jurors from a particular group to analyze whether it is statistically probable that the jury pool was selected by mere chance. • This method has been criticized because a pool of potential jurors is not ordinarily selected by mere chance; potential jurors are disqualified for a number of legitimate reasons. See FAIR-CROSS-SECTION REQUIREMENT; ABSOLUTE DISPARITY; COMPARATIVE DISPARITY; DUREN TEST. [Cases: Jury 33(1.1, 1.2).C.J.S. Juries §§ 269–274, 277, 279, 292, 299, 303, 306, 445.]

statuliber (stach-schwa-II-b*schwa*), n.[Latin] Roman law. A person whose freedom under a will is made conditional or postponed; a person who will be free at a particular time or when certain conditions are met. — Also written statu liber (stay-t[y]oo II-b<<schwa>>r).

“The statuliber is one who has freedom arranged to take effect on completion of a period or fulfillment of a condition. Men become statuliberi as a result of an express condition, or by the very nature of the case. The meaning of ‘express condition’ presents no problem. The status arises from the very nature of the case when men are manumitted for the purpose of defrauding a creditor; for so long as it is uncertain whether the creditor will use his right, the men remain statuliberi, since fraud is taken in the lex Aelia Sentia to involve actual damage.” Digest of Justinian 40.7.1 (Paul, ad Sabinum 5).

STATUS

status. 1. A person's legal condition, whether personal or proprietary; the sum total of a person's legal rights, duties, liabilities, and other legal relations, or any particular group of them separately considered <the status of a landowner>. 2. A person's legal condition regarding personal rights but excluding proprietary relations <the status of a father> <the status of a wife>. 3. A person's capacities and incapacities, as opposed to other elements of personal status <the status of minors>. 4. A person's legal condition insofar as it is imposed by the law without the person's consent, as opposed to a condition that the person has acquired by agreement <the status of a slave>.

“By the status (or standing) of a person is meant the position that he holds with reference to the rights which are recognized and maintained by the law — in other words, his capacity for the exercise and enjoyment of legal rights.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 106 (1881).

“The word ‘status’ itself originally signified nothing more than the position of a person before the law. Therefore, every person (except slaves, who were not regarded as persons, for legal purposes) had a status. But, as a result of the modern tendency towards legal equality formerly noticed, differences of status became less and less frequent, and the importance of the subject has greatly diminished, with the result that the term status is now used, at any rate in English Law, in connection only with those comparatively few classes of persons in the community who, by reason of their conspicuous differences from normal persons, and the fact that by no decision of their own can they get rid of these differences, require separate consideration in an account of the law. But professional or even political differences do not amount to status; thus peers, physicians, clergymen of the established Church, and many other classes of persons, are not regarded as the subjects of status, because the legal differences which distinguish them from other persons, though substantial, are not enough to make them legally abnormal. And landowners, merchants, manufacturers, and wage-earners are not subjects of the Law of Status, though the last-named are, as the result of recent legislation, tending to approach that position.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 109 (P.B. Fairsted ed., 6th ed. 1967).

STATUS, LAW OF

status, law of. See LAW OF STATUS.

STAT-USA

STAT-USA. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for disseminating economics and trade information compiled by other federal agencies to businesses and individuals through subscription services and federal depository libraries. • STAT-USA is a part of the Department's Economics and Statistics Administration.

STATUS CRIME

status crime. See CRIME.

STATUS DE MANERIO

status de manerio (stay-t<<schwa>>s dee m<<schwa>>-neer-ee-oh). [Law Latin “the state of a manor”] Hist. The assembly of tenants to attend the lord's court.

STATUS OFFENDER

status offender. See OFFENDER.

STATUS OFFENSE

status offense. See OFFENSE(1).

STATUS-OFFENSE JURISDICTION

status-offense jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

STATUS OF IRREMOVABILITY

status of irremovability. Hist. A pauper's right not to be removed from a parish after residing there for one year.

STATUS QUO

status quo (stay-t<<schwa>>s orstat-<<schwa>>s kwoh). [Latin] The situation that currently exists.

STATUS QUO ANTE<TT>

status quo ante (stay-t<<schwa>>s kwoh an-tee). [Latin] The situation that existed before something else (being discussed) occurred.

STATUTABLE

statutable (stach-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Prescribed or authorized by statute. 2. Conformed to the legislative requirements for quality, size, amount, or the like. 3. (Of an offense) punishable by law. See STATUTORY.

STATUTE

statute. A law passed by a legislative body; specif., legislation enacted by any lawmaking body, including legislatures, administrative boards, and municipal courts. • The term act is interchangeable as a synonym. For each of the subentries listed below, act is sometimes substituted for statute. — Abbr. s.; stat. [Cases: Statutes 2. C.J.S. Statutes § 2–3.]

affirmative statute.A law requiring that something be done; one that directs the doing of an act. Cf. negative statute.

antideficiency statute.See antideficiency legislation under LEGISLATION.

codifying statute.A law that purports to be exhaustive in restating the whole of the law on a particular topic, including prior caselaw as well as legislative provisions. • Courts generally presume that a codifying statute supersedes prior caselaw. Cf. consolidating statute.

compiled statutes.Laws that have been arranged by subject but have not been substantively changed; COMPILATION(2). Cf. revised statutes.

“The term ‘compiled statutes’ is properly applied to a methodical arrangement, without revision or reenactment, of the existing statutes of a State, all the statutes on a given subject being collected in one place. The work is usually performed by private persons; and the former statutes, as they were before the compilation, remain the authority.” Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 12 (1922).

consolidating statute.A law that collects the legislative provisions on a particular subject and embodies them in a single statute, often with minor amendments and drafting improvements. • Courts generally presume that a consolidating statute leaves prior caselaw intact. Cf. codifying statute.

“A distinction of greater importance in this field is that between consolidating and codifying statutes. A consolidating statute is one which collects the statutory provisions relating to a particular topic, and embodies them in a single Act of Parliament, making only minor amendments and improvements. A codifying statute is one which purports to state exhaustively the whole of the law on a particular subject (the common law as well as previous statutory provisions).... The importance of the distinction lies in the courts’ treatment of the previous case law, the existence of special procedural provisions with regard to consolidating statutes and the existence of a presumption that they do not change the law.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 5 (1976).

construction statute.A legislative directive included in a statute, intended to guide or direct a court’s interpretation of the statute. • A construction act can, for example, be a simple statement such as “The word ‘week’ means seven consecutive days” or a broader directive such as “Words and phrases are to be read in context and construed according to the rules of grammar and common usage. Words and phrases that have acquired a technical or particular meaning, whether by legislative definition or otherwise, are to be construed accordingly." [Cases: Statutes 179. C.J.S. Statutes § 309.]

criminal statute. A law that defines, classifies, and sets forth punishment for one or more specific crimes. See PENAL CODE. [Cases: Statutes 241. C.J.S. Statutes § 378.]

curative statute. 1. An act that corrects an error in a statute's original enactment, usu. an error that interferes with interpreting or applying the statute. 2. See remedial statute.

declaratory statute. A law enacted to clarify prior law by reconciling conflicting judicial decisions or by explaining the meaning of a prior statute. — Also termed expository statute.

directory statute. A law that indicates only what should be done, with no provision for enforcement. Cf. mandatory statute. [Cases: Statutes 227. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 362–369.]

disabling statute. A law that limits or curbs certain rights.

enabling statute. A law that permits what was previously prohibited or that creates new powers; esp., a congressional statute conferring powers on an executive agency to carry out various delegated tasks. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 305. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 49–54, 57–58, 64.]

expository statute. See declaratory statute.

general statute. A law pertaining to an entire community or all persons generally. — Also termed public statute. See PUBLIC LAW(2). [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.]

imperfect statute. A law that prohibits, but does not render void, an objectionable transaction. • Such a statute provides a penalty for disobedience without depriving the violative transaction of its legal effect.

local statute. 1. LOCAL LAW(1). 2. LOCAL LAW(2). mandatory statute. A law that requires a course of action as opposed to merely permitting it. Cf. directory statute. [Cases: Statutes 227. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 362–369.]

negative statute. A law prohibiting something; a law expressed in negative terms. Cf. affirmative statute.

nonclaim statute. 1. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. 2. A law that sets a time limit for creditors to bring claims against a decedent's estate. • Unlike a statute of limitations, a nonclaim statute is usu. not subject to tolling and is not waivable. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 223, 225. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 425, 434–436.]

organic statute. A law that establishes an administrative agency or local government. Cf. ORGANIC LAW.

penal statute. A law that defines an offense and prescribes its corresponding fine, penalty, or punishment. — Also termed penal law; punitive statute. [Cases: Statutes 241. C.J.S. Statutes § 378.]

“It is a familiar and well-settled rule that penal statutes are to be construed strictly, and not extended by implications, intendments, analogies, or equitable considerations. Thus, an offense cannot be created or inferred by vague implications. And a court cannot create a penalty by construction, but must avoid it by construction unless it is brought within the letter and the necessary meaning of the act creating it.” Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 287 (1896).

permanent statute. See perpetual statute.

permissive statute. A statute that allows certain acts but does not command them. • A permissive statute creates a license or privilege, or allows discretion in performing an act.

perpetual statute. A law containing no provision for repeal, abrogation, or expiration. — Also termed permanent statute.

personal statute. Civil law. A law that primarily affects a person's condition or status (such as a statute relating to capacity or majority) and affects property only incidentally.

preceptive statute. A statute that is prescriptive, general, definite, and complete. • In form, a preceptive statute is similar to a rule.

private statute. See special statute.

prohibitive statute. A statute that forbids all acts that disturb society's peace or forbids certain acts on other grounds. • An example of a noncriminal prohibitive statute is one forbidding the execution of a mentally retarded criminal because a person who lacks mental capacity cannot understand the reason for the punishment.

prospective statute. A law that applies to future events.

public statute. See PUBLIC LAW(2).

punitive statute. See penal statute.

real statute. Civil law. A law primarily affecting the operation, status, and condition of property, and addressing persons only incidentally.

recording statute. See RECORDING ACT.

reference statute. A law that incorporates and adopts by reference provisions of other laws. [Cases: Statutes 51. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 66–67.]

remedial statute. A law that affords a remedy. — Also termed curative statute. [Cases: Statutes 236, 264. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 377, 417.]

repealing statute. A statute that revokes, and sometimes replaces, an earlier statute. • A repealing statute may work expressly or by implication.

restraining statute. See disabling statute.

retroactive statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

retrospective statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

revised statutes. Laws that have been collected, arranged, and reenacted as a whole by a legislative body. — Abbr. Rev. Stat.; R.S. See CODE(1). Cf. compiled statutes. [Cases: Statutes 144–148, 231. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 266–275, 374–375.]

revival statute. A law that provides for the renewal of actions, of wills, and of the legal effect of documents.

severable statute. A law that remains operative in its remaining provisions even if a portion of the law is declared unconstitutional. [Cases: Statutes 64. C.J.S. Statutes § 83.]

speaking statute. A statute to be interpreted in light of the understanding of its terms prevailing at the time of interpretation.

special statute. A law that applies only to specific individuals, as opposed to everyone. — Also termed private statute; special act. [Cases: Statutes 77–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 154–155, 159, 162–201.]

“It is ancient wisdom, tracing back at least as far as the Roman taboo against the privilegium, that laws ought to be general, they ought to be addressed, not to particular persons, but to persons generally or to classes of persons (say, ‘all householders’). Accordingly, a number of American states have inserted in their constitutions prohibitions against ‘private or special’ statutes. These have given rise to endless difficulties.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 102–03 (1968).

split-level statute. A law that includes officially promulgated explanatory materials in addition to its substantive provisions, so that courts are left with two levels of documents to construe.

statute of descent and distribution. See STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION.

statute of distribution. See STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION.

statute of frauds. See STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

temporary statute. 1. A law that specifically provides that it is to remain in effect for a fixed, limited period. [Cases: Statutes 172. C.J.S. Statutes § 303.] 2. A law (such as an appropriation statute) that, by its nature, has only a single and temporary operation.

uniform statute. A law drafted with the intention that it will be adopted by all or most of the states; esp., UNIFORM LAW. Cf. MODEL ACT. [Cases: Statutes 226. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 358–361.]

validating statute. A law that is amended either to remove errors or to add provisions to conform to constitutional requirements. — Also termed validation statute. [Cases: Statutes 236. C.J.S. Statutes § 377.]

statute book. A bound collection of statutes, usu. as part of a larger set of books containing a complete body of statutory law, such as the United States Code Annotated.

STATUTE FAIR

STATUTE-MAKING

statute-making. See LEGISLATION(1).

STATUTE MERCHANT

statute merchant. Hist. 1. (cap.) One of two 13th-century statutes establishing procedures to better secure and recover debts by, among other things, providing for a commercial bond that, if not timely paid, resulted in swift execution on the lands, goods, and body of the debtor. 13 Edw., ch. 6 (1283); 15 Edw., ch. 6 (1285). • These statutes were repealed in 1863. — Also termed pocket judgment. 2. The commercial bond so established. Cf. STATUTE STAPLE.

“It is not a little remarkable that our common law knew no process whereby a man could pledge his body or liberty for payment of a debt .... Under Edward I, the tide turned. In the interest of commerce a new form of security, the so-called ‘statute merchant,’ was invented, which gave the creditor power to demand the seizure and imprisonment of his debtor's body.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 596–97 (2d ed. 1899).

STATUTE MILE

STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION

statute of distribution.A state law regulating the distribution of an estate among an intestate's heirs and relatives. • Historically, the statute specified separate, and often different, patterns for distributing an intestate's real property and personal property. Generally, land descended to the heirs and personalty descended to the next of kin. — Also termed statute of descent and distribution. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1–43.C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 71, 84; Descent and Distribution §§ 1–49; Right of Privacy and Publicity § 42.]

STATUTE OF ELIZABETH

Statute of Elizabeth.Hist. The Bankrupts Act of 1705, which contained provisions against conveyances made to defraud creditors. 13 Eliz., ch. 5.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS

statute of frauds. 1.Hist. (cap.) A 1677 English statute that declared certain contracts judicially unenforceable (but not void) if they were not committed to writing and signed by the party to be charged. • The statute was entitled “An Act for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries” (29 Car. 2, ch. 3). — Also termed Statute of Frauds and Perjuries.

“The best known, and until recently, most important, Act prescribing written formalities for certain contracts only required that those contracts should be evidenced in writing, or to put it another way, that the contract would be unenforceable in a Court (but not void) in the absence of writing. This was the Statute of Frauds 1677, sections 4 and 17 of which required written evidence of a somewhat curious list of contracts. Today, all that is left of these provisions is that part of section 4, which requires contracts of guarantee to be evidenced in writing, and section 40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 (replacing another part of section 4), which deals with contracts of sale of an interest in land.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 141 (3d ed. 1981).

2. A statute (based on the English Statute of Frauds) designed to prevent fraud and perjury by requiring certain contracts to be in writing and signed by the party to be charged. • Statutes of frauds traditionally apply to the following types of contracts: (1) a contract for the sale or transfer of an interest in land, (2) a contract that cannot be performed within one year of its making, (3) a contract for the sale of goods valued at $500 or more, (4) a contract of an executor or administrator to answer for a decedent's debt, (5) a contract to guarantee the debt or duty of another, and (6) a contract made in consideration of marriage. UCC § 2-201. — Abbr. S/F; SOF. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 1–119. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 70–72; Sales §§ 68, 71.] “[T]he primary theory of statutes of frauds, past and present, is that they are means to the end of preventing successful courtroom perjury. The means to this end is simply the requirement of a writing signed by the party to be charged.... [B]ut the statute of frauds writing requirement is ... so far from any kind of guarantee against successful perjury that it is inappropriate even to call it a means to fraud prevention at all." 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 2-8, at 82 (4th ed. 1995).

STATUTE OF JEOFAILS

statute of jeofails (jef-aylz). A law permitting a litigant to acknowledge an error in a pleading and correct or amend the pleading without risking dismissal of the claim. See JEOFAIL.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

statute of limitations. 1. A law that bars claims after a specified period; specif., a statute establishing a time limit for suing in a civil case, based on the date when the claim accrued (as when the injury occurred or was discovered). • The purpose of such a statute is to require diligent prosecution of known claims, thereby providing finality and predictability in legal affairs and ensuring that claims will be resolved while evidence is reasonably available and fresh. — Also termed nonclaim statute; limitations period. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.]

“Statutes of limitations, like the equitable doctrine of laches, in their conclusive effects are designed to promote justice by preventing surprises through the revival of claims that have been allowed to slumber until evidence has been lost, memories have faded, and witnesses have disappeared.” Order of R.R. Telegraphers v. Railway Express Agency, 321 U.S. 342, 348–49, 64 S.Ct. 582, 586 (1944).

2. A statute establishing a time limit for prosecuting a crime, based on the date when the offense occurred. Cf. STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 145.5–160. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 196–207.] — Abbr. S/L; SOL.“The purpose of a statute of limitations is to limit exposure to criminal prosecution to a certain fixed period of time following the occurrence of those acts the legislature had decided to punish by criminal sanctions. Such a limitation is designed to protect individuals from having to defend themselves against charges when the basic facts have become obscured by the passage of time and to minimize the danger of official punishment because of acts in the far-distant past. Such a time limit may also have the salutary effect of encouraging law enforcement officials promptly to investigate suspected criminal activity.” Toussie v. United States, 397 U.S. 112, 90 S.Ct. 858 (1970).

STATUTE OF MONOPOLIES

practice of granting monopolies with the single exception of letters patent, which gave an inventor the exclusive right to make and use an invention for 14 years.

STATUTE OF MORTMAIN statute of mortmain. See MORTMAIN STATUTE.

STATUTE OF REPOSE

statute of repose. A statute barring any suit that is brought after a specified time since the defendant acted (such as by designing or manufacturing a product), even if this period ends before the plaintiff has suffered a resulting injury. Cf. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.]

“A statute of repose ... limits the time within which an action may be brought and is not related to the accrual of any cause of action; the injury need not have occurred, much less have been discovered. Unlike an ordinary statute of limitations which begins running upon accrual of the claim, the period contained in a statute of repose begins when a specific event occurs, regardless of whether a cause of action has accrued or whether any injury has resulted.” 54 C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 4, at 20–21 (1987).

STATUTE OF USES

Statute of Uses. Hist. An English statute of 1535 that converted the equitable title held by a cestui que use (i.e., a beneficiary) to a legal one in order to make the cestui que use liable for feudal dues, as only a legal owner (the feoffee to uses) could be. • This statute was the culmination of a series of enactments designed by the Tudors to stop the practice of creating uses in land that deprived feudal lords of the valuable incidents of feudal tenure. The statute discouraged the granting of property subject to another's use by deeming the person who enjoys the use to have legal title with the right of absolute ownership and possession. So after the statute was enacted, if A conveyed land to B subject to the use of C, then C became the legal owner of the land in fee simple. Ultimately, the statute was circumvented by the courts' recognition of the use of equitable trusts in land-conveyancing. See CESTUI QUE USE; GRANT TO USES; USE(4).

“The Statute of 27 H.8. hath advanced Uses, and hath established Surety for him that hath the Use against the Feoffees: for before the Statute the Feoffees were Owners of the Land, but now it is destroyed, and the cestuy que use is the Owner of the same: before the Possession ruled the Use, but since the Use governeth the Possession.” William Noy, A Treatise of the Principal Grounds and Maxims of the Laws of This Nation 73 (4th ed. 1677; repr. C. Sims ed., 1870).

STATUTE STAPLE

statute staple. Hist. 1. A 1353 statute establishing procedures for settling disputes among merchants who traded in staple towns. • The statute helped merchants receive swift judgments for debt. Cf. STATUTE MERCHANT. 2. A bond for commercial debt. • A statute staple gave the lender a possessory right in the land of a debtor who failed to repay a loan. See STAPLE.

“A popular form of security after 1285 ... was the ... ‘statute staple’ — whereby the borrower could by means of a registered contract charge his land and goods without giving up possession; if he failed to pay, the lender became a tenant of the land until satisfied .... The borrower under a statute or recognizance remained in possession of his land, and it later became a common practice under the common-law forms of mortgage likewise to allow the mortgagor to remain in possession as a tenant at will or at sufferance of the mortgagee.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 354 (3d ed. 1990).

STAY

stay, n. 1. The postponement or halting of a proceeding, judgment, or the like. 2. An order to suspend all or part of a judicial proceeding or a judgment resulting from that proceeding. — Also termed stay of execution; suspension of judgment. [Cases: Action 67; Execution 158; Federal Civil Procedure 2700. C.J.S. Actions § 243; Executions §§ 152–153, 155.] — stay, vb. — stayable, adj.

automatic stay. Bankruptcy. A bar to all judicial and extrajudicial collection efforts against the debtor or the debtor's property. • The policy behind the automatic stay, which is effective upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition, is that all actions against the debtor should be halted pending the determination of creditors' rights and the orderly administration of the debtor's assets free from creditor interference. — Also termed automatic suspension. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2391–2404. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 65–79.]

steganography (steg-<<schwa>>-nog-r<<schwa>>-fee), n. A cryptographic method that digitally embeds or encodes one item of information within another. • Because a digitized audio or visual file usu. has unused data areas, indelible (and nearly undetectable) information can be added without altering the file's quality. Copyright or trademark tags can be hidden in every fragment of a digital work, making disassociation almost impossible. — Also termed digital fingerprinting; digital watermarking.

STELLIONATUS

stellionatus (stel-ee-<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>s or stel-y-<<schwa>>-nay-t<< schwa>>s). [Latin “underhand dealing”] Roman & Scots law. Conduct that is fraudulent but does not fall within a specific class of offenses. • This term applies primarily to fraudulent practices in the sale or hypothecation of land. — Also termed (in Scots law) stellionate. Cf. COZENING.

“Though pignus and hypothec are almost different names for the same thing, there were differences. Hypothec was used mainly for land, which cannot be removed. A thing could be pledged only to one, but successive hypothecs might be created over a thing. There was no fraud in this but it was the offence of stellionatus to give a hypothec without declaring existing hypothecs.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 355 (2d ed. 1953).

stipulatio (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. An oral contract requiring a formal question and reply, binding the replier to do what was asked. • It is essential that both parties speak, and that the reply directly conforms to the question asked and is made with the intent to enter into a contractual obligation. No consideration is required. See SPONDESNE? SPONDEO; actio ex stipulatu under ACTIO. Pl. stipulationes (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh-neeZ).

“[I]t must be remembered that the law-forms used by the Romans had their origin in times when writing was neither easy nor common. It is not surprising, therefore, that among them a form of spoken words, a verbal contract, should hold the place which among us is occupied by written notes. This form ...stipulatio — was of a very simple character, consisting only of a question asked by one party, and an answer returned by the other .... Such forms as Spondesne mihi decem aureos dare (do you engage to give me ten aurei, or gold-pieces): answer, Spondeo (I engage) ....” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 210 (1881).

“The oldest Roman contract was the stipulatio, an oral promise made by an answer to an immediately preceding question, with the promisor using the same verb. The contract was unilateral. Only one party, the promisor, was legally liable, and he was bound strictly by the words used.” Alan Watson, Ancient Law and Modern Understanding 96 (1998).

STIPULATIO AQUILIANA

stipulatio aquiliana (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh <<schwa>>-kwil-ee-ay-n<< schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A type of stipulatio used to collect and discharge all the liabilities owed on various grounds by a single contract.

“[S]tipulatio Aquiliana, a device credited to Aquilius Gallus, of Cicero's time. Where two persons with complex relations between them desired to square or simplify their accounts they could work out the items and arrive at the balance .... This balance being paid or otherwise arranged, each party would then make with the other this stipulatio, which was a comprehensive formula .... This would novate all the claims and turn them into a single promise, for an incertum. These mutual stipulations might then be released by acceptilatio.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 348 (2d ed. 1953).

STIPULATIO JURIS

stipulatio juris (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh joor-is). [Latin “stipulatio as to the law”] The parties' agreement on a question of law or its applicability. • The court is not bound to accept the stipulation if it is erroneous. But the parties are allowed to stipulate the law to be applied to a dispute.

STIPULATION

stipulation (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. A material condition or requirement in an agreement; esp., a factual representation that is incorporated into a contract as a term <breach of the stipulation regarding payment of taxes>. • Such a contractual term often appears in a section of the contract called “Representations and Warranties.” [Cases: Contracts 173, 207, 218, 221. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355–356, 358, 361, 373, 444–445, 450, 475.] 2. A voluntary agreement between opposing parties concerning some relevant point; esp., an agreement relating to a proceeding, made by attorneys representing adverse parties to the proceeding <the plaintiff and defendant entered into a stipulation on the issue of liability>. • A stipulation relating to a pending judicial proceeding, made by a party to the proceeding or the party's attorney, is binding without consideration. [Cases: Stipulations 1. C.J.S. Stipulations §§ 2–3.]

“Stipulations with respect to matters of form and procedure serve the convenience of the parties to litigation and often serve to simplify and expedite the proceeding. In some cases they are supported by the policy of favoring compromise in order to reduce the volume of litigation. Hence they are favored by the courts and enforced without regard to consideration.” RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 94 cmt. a (1979).

3. Roman law. A formal contract by which a promisor (and only the promisor) became bound by oral question and answer. • By the third century A.D., stipulations were always evidenced in writing. See REUS PROMITTENDI; REUS STIPULANDI. — stipulate (stip-y<<schwa>>-layt), vb. — stipulative (stip-y<< schwa>>-l<<schwa>>-tiv), adj. “A stipulation consisted in a question and answer, the question being put by the person who was to acquire a right, the answer being given orally by the person who undertook the obligation. The matter of the agreement being stated, the binding words were usually simple; those used by (and peculiar to) Romans being Spondesne? or spondes? Spondeo. A stipulation made with a foreigner in these terms was invalid. The questioner was called stipulator, sometimes reus stipulandi (‘[stipulating party]’), the answerer usually promissor (or reus promittendi [the promising party]) ....” 2 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 12 (1902).

STIPULATION POUR AUTRUI

stipulation pour autrui (poor oh-troo-ee). [French “for other persons”] Civil law. A contractual provision that benefits a third party and gives the third party a cause of action against the promisor for specific performance. La. Civ. Code art. 1978. See third-party beneficiary under BENEFICIARY. [Cases: Contracts 187. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 612–622, 624–629.]

STIPULATIO SPONSALITIA

stipulatio sponsalitia (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh spon-s<<schwa>>-lish-ee-<< schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. In early law, a solemn promise by a father (paterfamilias) that his child would marry someone else's child. • In some cases, there was a penalty if the marriage did not occur. In classical and later Roman law, in which free marriage was the rule, such a promise was unenforceable because it was regarded as immoral (contra bonos mores).

barometer stock.A stock whose price fluctuates according to market conditions; an individual stock considered to be indicative of the strength of the market in general. — Also termed bellwether stock.

blank stock.Securities. Stock with voting powers and rights set by the issuer's board of directors after the stock has been sold. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

bonus stock.A stock share that is issued for no consideration, as an enticement to buy some other type or class of security. • It is considered a type of watered stock. — Also termed bonus share. [Cases: Corporations 99, 243(6). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 163, 169.]

book-value stock.Stock offered to executives at a book-value price, rather than at its market value. • The stock is offered with the understanding that when its book value has risen, the company will buy back the stock at the increased price or will make payments in stock equal to the increased price. [Cases: Corporations 316(3). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 519–524.]

capital stock. 1. The total number of shares of stock that a corporation may issue under its charter or articles of incorporation, including both common stock and preferred stock. • A corporation may increase the amount of capital stock if the owners of a majority of the outstanding shares consent. — Also termed authorized stock; authorized capital stock; authorized stock issue; authorized shares. [Cases: Corporations 60. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 122–125.] 2. The total par value or stated value of this stock; CAPITALIZATION(4).3. See common stock.

common stock.A class of stock entitling the holder to vote on corporate matters, to receive dividends after other claims and dividends have been paid (esp. to preferred shareholders), and to share in assets upon liquidation. • Common stock is often called capital stock if it is the corporation's only class of stock outstanding. — Also termed ordinary shares. Cf. preferred stock. [Cases: Corporations 155. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 294, 302–303.]

corporate stock.An equity security issued by a corporation.

cumulative preferred stock.Preferred stock that must receive dividends in full before common shareholders may receive any dividend. • If the corporation omits a dividend in a particular year or period, it is carried over to the next year or period and must be paid before the common shareholders receive any payment. — Also termed cumulative stock; cumulative preference share. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

deferred stock.Stock whose holders are entitled to dividends only after the corporation has met some other specified obligation, such as the discharge of a liability or the payment of a dividend to preferred shareholders. [Cases: Corporations 155(3).]

discount stock. A stock share issued for less than par value. • Discount stock is considered a type of watered stock, the issuance of which may impose liability on the recipient for the difference between the par value and the cash amount paid. — Also termed discount share. [Cases: Corporations 99(3). C.J.S. Corporations § 170.]

donated stock. Stock donated to a charity or given to a corporation by its own stockholders, esp. for resale.

equity stock. Stock of any class having unlimited dividend rights, regardless of whether the stock is preferred. [Cases: Corporations 155(3).]

floating stock. Stock that is offered for sale on the open market and that has not yet been purchased; the number of outstanding shares available for trading.

full-paid stock. Stock on which no further payments can be demanded by the issuing company. — Also termed paid-up stock. [Cases: Corporations 88–89.]

glamour stock. A stock with great public interest because of a real or imagined potential for fast growth or high earnings. — Also termed growth stock; performance stock.

growth stock. 1. Stock issued by a growth company. • Because a growth company usu. reinvests a large share of its income back into the company, growth stock pays relatively low dividends, though its price usu. has a relatively high appreciation in market value over time. 2. See glamour stock.

guaranteed stock. Preferred stock on which a dividend is guaranteed by someone (usu. a parent corporation) other than the issuer. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

guarantee stock. A fixed, nonwithdrawal investment in a building-and-loan association. • This type of stock guarantees to all other investors in the association a fixed dividend or interest rate. See BUILDING-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 7. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 33, 36.]

guaranty stock. A savings-and-loan association's stock yielding dividends to the holders after dividends have been paid to the depositors. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 11. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions § 41.]

hot stock. See hot issue under ISSUE(2).

inactive stock. A low-volume stock.

income stock. A stock with a history of high yields or dividend payments (e.g., public utilities and well-established corporations).

issued stock. Capital stock that has been authorized and sold to subscribers, but may be reacquired, such as treasury stock. [Cases: Corporations 72, 159. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 133, 146–147.]

joint stock.Capital invested in an unincorporated business and divided into shares proportionate to the size of each investment.

letter stock.See restricted security under SECURITY.

listed stock.See listed security under SECURITY.

margin stock.See marginable security under SECURITY.

nonassessable stock.Stock owned by a holder whose potential liability is limited to the amount paid for the stock and who cannot be charged additional funds to pay the issuer's debts. • Stock issued in the United States is usu. nonassessable. [Cases: Corporations 78, 175. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 188, 192, 316.]

noncumulative preferred stock.Preferred stock that does not have to be paid dividends that are in arrears. • Once a periodic dividend is omitted, it will not be paid. — Also termed noncumulative stock. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

nonparticipating preferred stock.Preferred stock that does not give the shareholder the right to additional earnings — usu. surplus common-stock dividends — beyond those stated in the preferred contract. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

nonvoting stock.Stock that has no voting rights under most situations. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

no-par stock.Stock issued without a specific value assigned to it. • For accounting purposes, it is given a legal or stated value that has little or no connection to the stock's actual value. — Sometimes shortened to no par. — Also termed no-par-value stock.

outstanding stock.Stock that is held by investors and has not been redeemed by the issuing corporation. — Also termed outstanding capital stock; shares outstanding.

participating preferred stock.Preferred stock whose holder is entitled to receive stated dividends and to share with the common shareholders in any additional distributions of earnings. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

participation stock.Stock permitting the holder to participate in profits and surplus. [Cases: Corporations 154.1.]

par-value stock.Stock originally issued for a fixed value derived by dividing the total value of capital stock by the number of shares to be issued. • The par value does not bear a necessary relation to the actual stock value because surplus plays a role in the valuation. [Cases: Corporations 62. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 126, 128, 148–151.]

penny stock.An equity security that is not traded in established markets, represents no tangible assets, or has average revenues less than required for trading on an exchange. • Typically, a penny stock is highly speculative and can be purchased for less than $5 a share.

performance stock.See glamour stock.

phantom stock. Imaginary stock that is credited to a corporate executive account as part of the executive's compensation package. See PHANTOM STOCK PLAN. [Cases: Corporations 308(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 490, 530–531, 533, 536.]

preferred stock. A class of stock giving its holder a preferential claim to dividends and to corporate assets upon liquidation but that usu. carries no voting rights. — Also termed preference shares. Cf. common stock. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

premium stock. Stock that carries a premium for trading, as in the case of short-selling.

prior preferred stock. Preferred stock that has preference over another class of preferred stock from the same issuer. • The preference usu. relates to dividend payments or claims on assets. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

public stock. 1. See public security under SECURITY. 2. Stock of a publicly traded corporation.

reacquired stock. See treasury stock.

redeemable stock. Preferred stock that can be called by the issuing corporation and retired. [Cases: Corporations 68. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 177, 180–183.]

registered stock. See registered security under SECURITY.

restricted stock. See restricted security under SECURITY.

retired stock. See treasury stock.

special stock. Hist. Corporate stock that guarantees investors an annual dividend and gives them creditor status to the extent that dividends have become payable. • In contrast, preferred-stock holders' claims for dividends payable are secondary to creditors' claims. Special stock was statutorily authorized only in Massachusetts.

subscribed stock. A stockholder's equity account showing the capital that will be contributed when the subscription price is collected. See SUBSCRIPTION (2). [Cases: Corporations 88.]

tainted stock. Stock owned or transferred by a person disqualified from serving as a plaintiff in a derivative action. • A good-faith transferee is also disqualified from filing a derivative action. [Cases: Corporations 207. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 402–404.]

treasury stock. Stock issued by a company but then reacquired and either canceled or held. • Some states have eliminated this classification and treat such stock as if it is authorized but unissued. — Also termed treasury security; reacquired stock; retired stock. watered stock. Stock issued for less than par value. [Cases: Corporations 99. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 163, 169.]

“The term ‘watered stock’ is a colorful common law phrase describing the situation where shareholders receive shares without paying as much for them as the law requires.... Much of the early common law relating to watered shares concerned the liability of shareholders receiving watered shares to pay the additional consideration needed to ‘squeeze out the water.’ ... [It now] seems clear that a shareholder is liable to the corporation if he or she pays less for the shares than the consideration fixed by the directors, and this liability is measured by the difference between the fixed consideration and the amount actually paid.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 120–21 (3d ed. 1991).

whisper stock. The stock of a company that is rumored to be the target of a takeover attempt.

STRAND

strand,n. A shore or bank of an ocean, lake, river, or stream.

STRANDING

stranding,n. Maritime law. A ship's drifting, driving, or running aground on a strand. • The type of stranding that occurs determines the method of apportioning the liability for any resulting losses. [Cases: Salvage 9, 30. C.J.S. Salvage §§ 12, 81.]

accidental stranding.Stranding as a result of natural forces, such as wind and waves. See general average, particular average under AVERAGE. — Also termed involuntary stranding.

“Damage to a vessel from involuntary stranding or wreck, and the cost of repairs, are particular average only. Where, however, the ship and cargo are exposed to a common peril by the accidental stranding, the expenses of unloading and taking care of the cargo, rescuing the vessel, reloading the cargo, and other expenses other than repairs requisite to enable the vessel to proceed on the voyage, are brought into general average, provided the vessel and cargo were saved by the same series of measures during the continuance of the common peril which created the joint necessity for the expenses.” 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

voluntary stranding.Stranding to avoid a more dangerous fate or for fraudulent purposes.

“The loss occurring when a ship is voluntarily run ashore to avoid capture, foundering, or shipwreck is to be made good by general average contribution, if the ship is afterwards recovered so as to be able to perform its voyage, as such a claim is clearly within the rule that whatever is sacrificed for the common benefit of the associated interests shall be made good by all the interests exposed to the common peril which were saved from the common danger by the sacrifice .... A vessel cannot, however, claim contribution founded on even a voluntary stranding made necessary by ... unseaworthiness or the negligence of those in charge, except in pursuance of a valid agreement to that effect.” 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

STRANGER

stranger. 1. One who is not party to a given transaction; esp., someone other than a party or the party's employee, agent, tenant, or immediate family member. [Cases: Contracts 185. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 610–612, 619–620.] 2. One not standing toward another in some relation implied in the context; esp., one who is not in privity. 3. A person who voluntarily pays another person's debt even though the payor cannot be held liable for the debt and the payor's property is not affected by the creditor's rights. • Subrogation does not apply to a stranger if the debtor did not agree to or assign subrogation rights.

STRANGER IN BLOOD

stranger in blood. 1. One not related by blood, such as a relative by affinity. 2. Any person not within the consideration of natural love and affection arising from a relationship.

stray remarks. Employment law. Statements to or about an employee by a coworker or supervisor, concerning the employee's race, sex, age, national origin, or other status, that are either objectively or subjectively offensive, but that do not represent harassment or discrimination by the employer because of (1) their sporadic, unsystematic, and unofficial nature, (2) the circumstances in which they were made, or (3) their not showing any intention to hamper the employee's continued employment. — Also termed stray comments. [Cases: Civil Rights 1147, 1543. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 29, 144, 170.]

stream. Anything liquid that flows in a line or course; esp., a current of water consisting of a bed, bank, and watercourse, usu. emptying into other bodies of water but not losing its character even if it breaks up or disappears. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 38. C.J.S. Waters §§ 3–8, 91.]

private stream. A watercourse, the bed, channel, or waters of which are exclusively owned by private parties.

STREAM-OF-COMMERCE THEORY

stream-of-commerce theory. 1. The principle that a state may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant if the defendant places a product in the general marketplace and the product causes injury or damage in the forum state, as long as the defendant also takes other acts to establish some connection with the forum state, as by advertising there or by hiring someone to serve as a sales agent there. Asahi Metal Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Superior Court of Cal., 480 U.S. 102, 107 S.Ct. 1026 (1987). [Cases: Corporations 665(1); Courts 12(2.25); Federal Courts 76, 81. C.J.S. Courts § 44.] 2. The principle that a person who participates in placing a defective product in the general marketplace is strictly liable for harm caused by the product. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A (1979). [Cases: Products Liability 23.1.]

street. A road or public thoroughfare used for travel in an urban area, including the pavement, shoulders, gutters, curbs, and other areas within the street lines. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 658. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 1451–1452.]

“Strictly speaking, a ‘street’ is a public thoroughfare in an urban community such as a city, town, or village, and the term is not ordinarily applicable to roads and highways outside of municipalities. Although a street, in common parlance, is equivalent to a highway, it is usually specifically denominated by its own proper appellation.... Whether a particular highway is to be regarded as a ‘street’ within the meaning of that term as used in a statute must, of course, be resolved by construction.” 39 Am. Jur. 2d Highways, Streets, and Bridges § 8, at 588–89 (1999).

paper street. A thoroughfare that appears on plats, subdivision maps, and other publicly filed documents, but that has not been completed or opened for public use. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 646. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1422.]

street crime. See CRIME.

STREET GANG

street gang. See GANG.

STREET NAME

street name. A brokerage firm's name in which securities owned by another are registered. • A security is held by a broker in street name (at the customer's request) to simplify trading because no signature on the stock certificate is required. A street name may also be used for securities purchased on margin. The word "street" in this term is a reference to Wall Street.

STREET TIME

street time. See TIME.

STREPITUS JUDICIALIS

strike, n. 1. An organized cessation or slowdown of work by employees to compel the employer to meet the employees' demands; a concerted refusal by employees to work for their employer, or to work at their customary rate of speed, until the employer grants the concessions that they seek. — Also termed walkout. Cf. LOCKOUT; BOYCOTT; PICKETING. [Cases: Labor Relations 290. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

ca'canny strike (kah-kan-ee or kaw-). A strike in which the workers remain on the job but work at a slower pace to reduce their output.

economic strike. A strike resulting from an economic dispute with the employer (such as a wage dispute); a dispute for reasons other than unfair labor practices. • An employer can permanently replace an economic striker but cannot prevent the worker from coming back to an unreplaced position simply because the worker was on strike.

general strike. A strike organized to affect an entire industry.

illegal strike. 1. A strike using unlawful procedures. 2. A strike to obtain unlawful objectives, as in a strike to force an employer to stop doing business with a particular company.

jurisdictional strike. A strike resulting from a dispute between members of different unions over work assignments.

organizational strike. See recognition strike.

outlaw strike. See wildcat strike.

quickie strike. See wildcat strike.

recognition strike. A strike by workers seeking to force their employer to acknowledge the union as their collective-bargaining agent. • After the National Labor Relations Act was passed in 1935, recognition strikes became unnecessary. Under the Act, the employer is required to recognize an NLRB-certified union for bargaining purposes. — Also termed organizational strike.

SUBINFEUDATE

subinfeudate (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyoo-dayt), vb. Hist. (Of a subvassal) to grant land to another, who then holds the land as the grantor's vassal rather than as the vassal of the grantor's superior. — Also termed subinfeud (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyood).

“[A] more common method of obtaining the annual quota of knights was to subinfeudate portions of the baronial lands to individual knights in exchange for their obligations to spend a fixed portion of time annually in the king's or baron's service. A knight who so received a portion of a baron's land would hold of his baron in much the same way as the baron held of the king.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 4 (2d ed. 1984).

subinfeudation (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyoo-day-sh<<schwa>>n), n. Hist. The system under which the tenants in a feudal system granted smaller estates to their tenants, who in turn did the same from their pieces of land. • As this system proceeded down the social scale, the lords were deprived of their feudal profits, as a result of which the system was suppressed by the statute Quia Emptores in 1290. Instead of subinfeudation, alienation in the modern sense was introduced. Cf. INFEUDATION; SUPERINFEUDATION.

“The first step taken in mitigation of the rigors of the law of feuds, and in favor of voluntary alienations, was the countenance given to the practice of subinfeudations. They were calculated to elude the restraint upon alienation, and consisted in carving out portions of the fief to be held of the vassal by the same tenure with which he held of the chief lord of the fee. The alienation prohibited by the feudal law, all over Europe, was the substitution of a new feudatory in the place of the old one; but subinfeudation was a feoffment by the tenant to hold of himself. The purchaser became his vassal, and the vendor still continued liable to the chief lord for all the feudal obligations. Subinfeudations were encouraged by the subordinate feudatories, because they contributed to their own power and independence; but they were found to be injurious to the fruits of tenure, such as reliefs, marriages and wardships, belonging to the paramount lords.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *443–44 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

SUBJECT

subject, adj. Referred to above; having relevance to the current discussion < the subject property was then sold to Smith>.

subject, n. 1. One who owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by that sovereign's laws <the monarchy's subjects>.

“Speaking generally, we may say that the terms subject and citizen are synonymous. Subjects and citizens are alike those whose relation to the state is personal and not merely territorial, permanent and not merely temporary. This equivalent, however, is not absolute. For in the first place, the term subject is commonly limited to monarchical forms of government, while the term citizen is more specially applicable in the case of republics. A British subject becomes by naturalisation a citizen of the United States of America or of France. In the second place, the term citizen brings into prominence the rights and privileges of the status, rather than its correlative obligations, while the reverse is the case with the term subject. Finally it is to be noticed that the term subject is capable of a different and wider application, in which it includes all members of the body politic, whether they are citizens (i.e., subjects stricto sensu) or resident aliens. All such persons are subjects, all being subject to the power of the state and to its jurisdiction, and as owing to it, at least temporarily, fidelity and obedience." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 133 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

liege subject. See natural-born subject.

natural-born subject. A person born within the dominion of a monarchy, esp. England. — Also termed liege subject. Cf. NATIONAL.

SUBROGATION

subrogation (s<<schwa>>b-r<<schwa>>-gay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. 1. The substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor. • For example, a surety who has paid a debt is, by subrogation, entitled to any security for the debt held by the creditor and the benefit of any judgment the creditor has against the debtor, and may proceed against the debtor as the creditor would. [Cases: Subrogation 1, 33. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.] 2. The equitable remedy by which such a substitution takes place. 3. The principle under which an insurer that has paid a loss under an insurance policy is entitled to all the rights and remedies belonging to the insured against a third party with respect to any loss covered by the policy. See EQUITY OF SUBROGATION; ANTISUBROGATION RULE. [Cases: Insurance 3509, 3513.]

“Subrogation is equitable assignment. The right comes into existence when the surety becomes obligated, and this is important as affecting priorities; but such right of subrogation does not become a cause of action until the debt is fully paid. Subrogation entitles the surety to use any remedy against the principal which the creditor could have used, and in general to enjoy the benefit of any advantage that the creditor had, such as a mortgage, lien, power to confess judgment, to follow trust funds, to proceed against a third person who has promised either the principal or the creditor to pay the debt.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 205 (1950).

conventional subrogation. Subrogation that arises by contract or by an express act of the parties. [Cases: Subrogation 27. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 4–5, 22.]

legal subrogation. Subrogation that arises by operation of law or by implication in equity to prevent fraud or injustice. • Legal subrogation usu. arises when (1) the paying party has a liability, claim, or fiduciary relationship with the debtor, (2) the party pays to fulfill a legal duty or because of public policy, (3) the paying party is a secondary debtor, (4) the paying party is a surety, or (5) the party pays to protect its own rights or property. — Also termed equitable subrogation. [Cases: Subrogation 1–25. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–16, 18–19, 23–63, 68–76, 83–86, 88–91.]

SUBROGATION CLAUSE

subrogation clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease permitting the lessee to pay taxes, mortgages, or other encumbrances on the leased property and to recover those payments out of future proceeds under the lease.

SUBROGATIVE

subsidy (s<<schwa>>b-s<<schwa>>-dee), n.1. A grant, usu. made by the government, to any enterprise whose promotion is considered to be in the public interest. • Although governments sometimes make direct payments (such as cash grants), subsidies are usu. indirect. They may take the form of research-and-development support, tax breaks, provision of raw materials at below-market prices, or low-interest loans or low-interest export credits guaranteed by a government agency. — Also termed grant. [Cases: United States 82(1). C.J.S. United States §§ 155, 158.] 2. A specific financial contribution by a foreign government or public entity conferring a benefit on exporters to the United States. • Such a subsidy is countervailable under 19 USCA §§ 1671, 1677. [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5(2).]

countervailable subsidy (kown-t<<schwa>>r-vayl-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A foreign government's subsidy on the manufacture of goods exported to another country, giving rise to the importing country's entitlement to impose a countervailing duty on the goods if their import caused or threatens to cause material injury to domestic industry. See countervailing duty under DUTY(4). [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5(2).]

3.Int'l law. Financial assistance given by one nation to another to preserve the receiving nation's neutrality or to support it in a war, even if the donor nation does not directly participate. — subsidize,vb.

drug rehabilitation program. • This type of treatment is esp. common in DUI cases. — Abbr. SAET.

SUBSTANTIAL-CAPACITY TEST

substantial-capacity test.Criminal law. The Model Penal Code's test for the insanity defense, stating that a person is not criminally responsible for an act if, as a result of a mental disease or defect, the person lacks substantial capacity either to appreciate the criminality of the conduct or to conform the conduct to the law. • This test combines elements of both the McNaghten rules and the irresistible-impulse test by allowing consideration of both volitional and cognitive weaknesses. This test was formerly used by the federal courts and many states, but since 1984 many jurisdictions (including the federal courts) — in response to the acquittal by reason of insanity of would-be presidential assassin John Hinckley — have narrowed the insanity defense and adopted a new test resembling the McNaghten rules, although portions of the substantial-capacity test continue to be used. Model Penal Code § 4.01. — Also termed Model Penal Code test; MPC test; American Law Institute test; ALI test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 48.]

SUBSTANTIAL-CERTAINTY TEST

substantial-certainty test.Copyright. The test for deciding whether a second work was copied from the first. • The question is whether a reasonable observer would conclude with substantial certainty that the second work is a copy. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53(1).]

substantially justified. (Of conduct, a position, etc.) having a reasonable basis in law and in fact. • Under the Equal Access to Justice Act, a prevailing party in a lawsuit against the government will be unable to recover its attorney's fees if the government's position is substantially justified. [Cases: United States 147(10).]

SUBSTANTIAL NEW QUESTION OF PATENTABILITY

substantial new question of patentability. Patents. The statutory threshold required for the Commissioner for Patents to order that a patent's validity be reexamined. • The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office is not authorized to reopen an examination based solely on prior art and issues that came up during the original examination. 35 USCA §§ 303–304. [Cases: Patents 136. C.J.S. Patents § 238.]

SUBSTANTIAL NONINFRINGEMENT USE

substantial noninfringing use. See COMMERCIALLY SIGNIFICANT NONINFRINGEMENT USE.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE

substantial performance. See PERFORMANCE.

SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE

substantial-performance doctrine. The rule that if a good-faith attempt to perform does not precisely meet the terms of an agreement or statutory requirements, the performance will still be considered complete if the essential purpose is accomplished, subject to a claim for damages for the shortfall. • Under the Uniform Probate Code, a will that is otherwise void because some formality has not been followed may still be valid under the substantial-performance doctrine. But this rule is not widely followed. — Also termed substantial-compliance rule. Cf. PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Contracts 294. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 433, 589.]

“There has arisen in the United States an indefinite doctrine sometimes referred to as that of substantial performance. It is a doctrine that deals not with performance of a duty as a discharge thereof but with performance by the plaintiff as a condition precedent to the active duty of performance by the defendant. Where a defendant is sued for non-performance he cannot avoid paying damages by showing that he substantially performed or came near performing or gave something equally good; but he can always successfully defend if in fact some condition precedent to his own duty has not been fulfilled by the plaintiff.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 422 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

SUBTRACTION

subtraction. 1. The process of deducting one number from another number to determine the difference. 2. Hist. The act of neglecting a duty or service that one party owes to another, esp. one that arises out of land tenure.

“Subtraction, which is the fifth species of injuries affecting a man's real property, happens, when any person who owes any suit, duty, custom, or service to another, withdraws or neglects to perform it. It differs from a disseisin, in that this is committed without any denial of the right, consisting merely in non-performance; that strikes at the very title of the party injured, and amounts to an ouster or actual dispossession. Subtraction however, being clearly an injury, is remediable by due course of law: but the remedy differs according to the nature of the services; whether they be due by virtue of any tenure, or by custom only.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 230 (1768).

SUBTRACTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS

subtraction of conjugal rights.Hist. The act of a husband and wife unlawfully living apart.

SUBTRAHEND

subtrahend (s<<schwa>>b-tr<<schwa>>-hend). In a mathematical equation, the amount subtracted from another number (the minuend) to arrive at a remainder or balance. • The term is used in law in a variety of accounting contexts. Cf. MINUEND.

SUBVERSION

subversion. The process of overthrowing, destroying, or corrupting <subversion of legal principles> <subversion of the government>.

“Subversion can succeed where diplomacy has failed. Subversion exceeds the bounds of diplomacy in that it employs methods which diplomacy abhors; it does not wince at assassination, riot, pillage, and arson, if it believes these to be useful in the attainment of its ends. Subversion is a form of war. It may include the use of propaganda ... to sway the thinking and action of influential social groups, especially attempting to discredit the leadership of the target area, labeling it as the ‘tool’ of ... any convenient target for emotional hatred. By inflaming passion, the purveyors of violent propaganda can stir up peaceful citizens so that in minutes they are transformed into a terrifying mob. The art of subversion has developed the technique of the manipulation of mobs to a high degree.” T. Wyckoff, War by Subversion, 59 S. Atlantic Q. 36 (1960).

“Prior to World War II, subversive activities were thought to cover cases where states attempted to achieve certain political ends of fomenting civil strife in another state or by supporting rebellion against the legally established government of another state by giving to the rebels supplies of personnel, training facilities, war materials, or munitions and by engaging in hostile propaganda against the victim state and its government.... By the beginning of World War II, the concept of subversion had been expanded to include the attempt of one state to weaken or overthrow the government of another by means of infiltration of its governmental apparatus with conspirators who strongly opposed the domestic policy of their own government and willingly served as clandestine instruments in the conduct of an alien state's foreign policy. But with increased militancy of modern ideologies, ... subversive activities are no longer seen in many quarters as advancing the foreign policy of a nation or nations, but rather are thought to advance universal human values, i.e., the specific ideological theory adhered to." Ann Van Wynen Thomas & A.J. Thomas Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 72–73 (1972).

"Today, the term subversion designates all illegal activities, whether direct or indirect, overt or covert, conducted under the auspices of a state and designed to overthrow the established government or vitally disrupt the public order of another state. Subversion combines psychological, political, social, and economic actions, as well as active military or paramilitary operations, and it is generally a sustained, long-run, intermeshed, and coordinated process. Consequently, it is usually impossible to place acts of subversion into neat little categorical definitions. Subversion, being a technique of opportunity, is successful mainly in areas where social and political revolution is at least incipient." Id. 80–81.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES CONTROL ACT OF 1950

Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950. See MCCARRAN ACT.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY

subversive activity. A pattern of acts designed to overthrow a government by force or other illegal means.

SUBVERSIVE PROPAGANDA

subversive propaganda. See PROPAGANDA.

SUCCESSFUL PARTY

successful party. See prevailing party under PARTY(2).

SUCCESSIO

successio (s<<schwa>>k-sesh-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A succession to something, as to an estate by will or by the laws of intestacy.

SUCCESSIO IN UNIVERSUM JUS

successio in universum jus (s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh in yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>m j<<schwa>>s). [Latin "succession to universal right"] Roman law. The succession on death to the entirety of a deceased person's assets and liabilities. See hereditas jacens under HEREDITAS.

SUCCESSION

succession, n. 1. The act or right of legally or officially taking over a predecessor's office, rank, or duties. 2. The acquisition of rights or property by inheritance under the laws of descent and distribution; DESCENT (1). [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1–43. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 71, 84; Descent and Distribution §§ 1–49; Right of Privacy and Publicity § 42.] — succeed, vb.

hereditary succession. See intestate succession.

intestate succession. 1. The method used to distribute property owned by a person who dies without a valid will. 2. Succession by the common law of descent. — Also termed hereditary succession; descent and distribution. See DESCENT(1). Cf. testate succession. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49.]

irregular succession. Succession by special laws favoring certain persons or the state, rather than heirs (such as testamentary heirs) under the ordinary laws of descent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 1–5.]

legal succession. The succession established by law, usu. in favor of the nearest relation of a deceased person.

natural succession. Succession between natural persons, as in descent on the death of an ancestor. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49.]

testamentary succession. Civil law. Succession resulting from the designation of an heir in a testament executed in the legally required form. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 44. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 50.]

testate succession. The passing of rights or property by will. Cf. intestate succession. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.]

universal succession. Succession to an entire estate of another at death. • This type of succession carries with it the predecessor's liabilities as well as assets. Originally developed by Roman law and later continued by civil law, this concept has now been widely adopted as an option endorsed and authorized by the Uniform Probate Code. La. Civ. Code art. 3506(28).

vacant succession. Civil law. 1. A succession that fails either because there are no known heirs or because the heirs have renounced the estate. 2. An estate that has suffered such a failure. See ESCHEAT.

3. The right by which one group, in replacing another group, acquires all the goods, movables, and other chattels of a corporation. [Cases: Corporations 445.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 657.] 4. The continuation of a corporation's legal status despite changes in ownership or management. — Also termed artificial succession. [Cases: Corporations 1.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 2.]

perpetual succession. The continuous succession of a corporation — despite changes in shareholders and officers — for as long as the corporation legally exists. [Cases: Corporations 36. C.J.S. Corporations § 52.]

“As a general rule, the words ‘perpetual succession,’ as used in charters, often in connection with a further provision limiting the period of corporate existence to a certain number of years, mean nothing more than that the corporation shall have continuous and uninterrupted succession so long as it shall continue to exist as a corporation, and are not intended to define its duration.” 18 Am. Jur. 2d Corporations § 69, at 883 (1985).

SUCCESSIONAL

SUE-AND-LABOR CLAUSE

sue-and-labor clause.Marine insurance. A provision establishing that the marine insurer will cover the costs incurred by the insured in protecting the covered property from damage or minimizing actual damages to the property. • The clause generally requires the insurer to “sue and labor” to protect the insured party's interests. — Also termed rescue clause. [Cases: Insurance 2195, 2245(2). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1118, 1215.]

“Some insurance today is written against ‘all risks’ .... Besides the perils clause ... recovery under the policy can be had on the entirely separate ‘sue and labor’ clause .... Under this clause, the underwriter may become liable for certain charges incurred by the assured in caring for the insured property, whether or not there is any actual loss or damage. Where sue-and-labor charges are incurred and loss also occurs, the underwriter may become liable for more than the policy amount, which limits only a claim for loss of or damage to the goods or vessel.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-10, at 75 (2d ed. 1975).

suffragan (s<<schwa>>-f-r<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>n). A titular bishop ordained to assist a bishop of the diocese in the church business; a deputy or assistant bishop. • Suffragans were originally appointed only to replace absent bishops and were called chorepiscopi (“bishops of the county”), as distinguished from the regular bishops of the city or see.

SUFFRAGE

suffrage (s<<schwa>>-f-rij).1. The right or privilege of casting a vote at a public election. — Also termed right to vote. [Cases: Elections 1.C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2.]

“In the United States suffrage is a privilege, franchise or trust conferred by the people upon such persons as it deems fittest to represent it in the choice of magistrates or in the performance of political duties which it would be inexpedient or inconvenient for the people to perform in a body. The person upon whom the franchise is conferred is called an elector or voter. No community extends suffrage to all persons, but places such restrictions upon it as may best subserve the ends of government.” George W. McCrary, A Treatise on the American Law of Elections § 1, at 2 (Henry L. McCune ed., 4th ed. 1897).

2. A vote; the act of voting.

SUICIDE

suicide, n. 1. The act of taking one's own life. — Also termed self-killing; self-destruction; self-slaughter; self-murder; felony-de-se; death by one's own hand. [Cases: Suicide 1. C.J.S. Suicide §§ 2–5, 11.]

assisted suicide. The intentional act of providing a person with the medical means or the medical knowledge to commit suicide. — Also termed assisted self-determination; (when a doctor provides the means) physician-assisted suicide. Cf. EUTHANASIA. [Cases: Suicide 3. C.J.S. Suicide §§ 8–12.]

attempted suicide. An unsuccessful suicidal act. [Cases: Suicide 2. C.J.S. Suicide § 6–7.]

physician-assisted suicide. See assisted suicide.

suicide-by-cop. Slang. A form of suicide in which the suicidal person intentionally engages in life-threatening behavior to induce a police officer to shoot the person. • Frequently, the decedent attacks the officer or otherwise threatens the officer's life, but occasionally a third person's life is at risk. A suicide-by-cop is distinguished from other police shootings by three elements. The person must: (1) evince an intent to die; (2) consciously understand the finality of the act; and (3) confront a law-enforcement official with behavior so extreme that it compels that officer to act with deadly force. — Also termed police-assisted suicide; victim-precipitated homicide.

2. A person who has taken his or her own life. — Also termed felo-de-se; felon-de-se; felon of oneself. — suicidal, adj.

SUICIDE CLAUSE

suicide clause. Insurance. A life-insurance-policy provision either excluding suicide as a covered risk or limiting the insurer's liability in the event of a suicide to the total premiums paid. [Cases: Insurance 2434. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 989–991, 1178–1179.]

sui generis (s[y]oo-Ior-soo-ee jen-<<schwa>>-ris). [Latin “of its own kind”] Of its own kind or class; unique or peculiar. • The term is used in intellectual-property law to describe a regime designed to protect rights that fall outside the traditional patent, trademark, copyright, and trade-secret doctrines. For example, a database may not be protected by copyright law if its content is not original, but it could be protected by a sui generis statute designed for that purpose.

SUI HEREDES

sui heredes (s[y]oo-I h*<<schwa>>-ree-deez*). [Latin] Roman law. One's own heirs. — Also spelled sui haeredes. — Often shortened to sui. See SUUS HERES .

“If a man died without a will, his property went to his sui heredes (own heirs, direct heirs), that is, to the persons who were previously under his potestas, but were released from it by his death. If he had adopted as son a person not connected with him by birth, that person was included among the sui heredes; on the other hand, a son by birth whom he had emancipated was ... excluded from the sui heredes....” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 134 (1881).

sui juris (s[y]oo-Ior-soo-ee joor-is). [Latin “of one's own right; independent”] 1. Of full age and capacity. 2. Possessing full social and civil rights. 3. Roman law. Of or relating to anyone of any age, male or female, not in the potestas of another, and therefore capable of owning property and enjoying private-law rights. • As a status, it was not relevant to public law.

SUI POTENS

sui potens (s[y]oo-Ipoh-tenz). [Latin] Hist. Able to do something, as in to enter a contract.

suit. Any proceeding by a party or parties against another in a court of law; CASE(1). — Also termed lawsuit; suit at law. See ACTION(4).

ancillary suit (an-s*<<schwa>>-ler-ee*). An action, either at law or in equity, that grows out of and is auxiliary to another suit and is filed to aid the primary suit, to enforce a prior judgment, or to impeach a prior decree. — Also termed ancillary bill; ancillary proceeding; ancillary process. [Cases: Federal Courts 20.1.]

blackmail suit. A suit filed by a party having no genuine claim but hoping to extract a favorable settlement from a defendant who would rather avoid the expense and inconvenience of litigation.

class suit. See CLASS ACTION.

frivolous suit. A lawsuit having no legal basis, often filed to harass or extort money from the defendant. [Cases: Action 8; Costs 2; Federal Civil Procedure 2767. C.J.S. Actions §§ 34–35, 37; Costs §§ 2–3, 8–9.]

official-capacity suit.A lawsuit that is nominally against one or more individual state employees but that has as the real party in interest the state or a local government. Cf. personal-capacity suit.

personal-capacity suit.An action to impose personal, individual liability on a government officer. Cf. official-capacity suit.

petitory suit.See petitory action under ACTION(4).

plenary suit (plee-n<<schwa>>-ree or plen-<<schwa>>-ree). An action that proceeds on formal pleadings under rules of procedure. Cf. summary proceeding under PROCEEDING.

strike suit.A suit (esp. a derivative action), often based on no valid claim, brought either for nuisance value or as leverage to obtain a favorable or inflated settlement. [Cases: Corporations 214.]

suit at law.A suit conducted according to the common law or equity, as distinguished from statutory provisions. • Under the current rules of practice in federal and most state courts, the term civil action embraces an action both at law and in equity. Fed. R. Civ. P. 2. See action at law under ACTION(4).

suit in equity.A civil suit stating an equitable claim and asking for an exclusively equitable remedy. — Also termed action in equity.

suit of a civil nature.A civil action. See civil action under ACTION(4).

SUITABLE

suitable,adj. (Of goods, etc.) fit and appropriate for their intended purpose.

SUITAS

suitas (s[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tas), n.[Law Latin] The status of a proper heir.

SUIT FOR EXONERATION

suit for exoneration.A suit in equity brought by a surety to compel the debtor to pay the creditor. • If the debtor has acted fraudulently and is insolvent, a suit for exoneration may include further remedies to ensure that the debtor's assets are applied equitably to the debtor's outstanding obligations. — Also termed suit to compel payment. [Cases: Principal and Surety 179. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 227.]

SUIT MONEY

suit money.Attorney's fees and court costs allowed or awarded by a court; esp., in some jurisdictions, a husband's payment to his wife to cover her reasonable attorney's fees in a divorce action. [Cases: Divorce 221.C.J.S. Divorce §§ 343–344.]

SUITOR

suitor. 1. A party that brings a lawsuit; a plaintiff or petitioner. 2. An individual or company that seeks to take over another company.

SUITORS' DEPOSIT ACCOUNT

Suitors' Deposit Account. An account consisting of suitors' fees paid in the Court of Chancery that, by the Chancery Act of 1872, were to be invested in government securities bearing interest at 2% per annum on behalf of the investing suitor, unless the suitor directed otherwise.

SUITORS' FEE FUND

Suitors' Fee Fund. Hist. A fund consisting largely of fees generated by the Court of Chancery out of which the court officers' salaries and expenses were paid. • In 1869 the fund was transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt.

SUIT PAPERS

SURETY

surety (shuur[-<<schwa>>]-tee). 1. A person who is primarily liable for the payment of another's debt or the performance of another's obligation. • Although a surety is similar to an insurer, one important difference is that a surety often receives no compensation for assuming liability. A surety differs from a guarantor, who is liable to the creditor only if the debtor does not meet the duties owed to the creditor; the surety is directly liable. Cf. GUARANTOR. [Cases: Principal and Surety 1, 65–66. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 2–5, 70, 72.]

same consideration. He is an original promisor and debtor from the beginning, and is held ordinarily to know every default of this principal. Usually the surety will not be discharged, either by the mere indulgence of the creditor to the principal, or by want of notice of the default of the principal, no matter how much he may be injured thereby. On the other hand, the contract of the guarantor is his own separate undertaking, in which the principal does not join. It is usually entered into before or after that of the principal, and is often founded on a separate consideration from that supporting the contract of the principal.” 1 George W. Brandt, The Law of Suretyship and Guaranty § 2, at 9 (3d ed. 1905).

“A surety, in the broad sense, is one who is liable for the debt or obligation of another, whether primarily or secondarily, conditionally or unconditionally. In other words, the term surety includes anyone who is bound on an obligation which, as between himself and another person who is bound to the obligee for the same performance, the latter obligor should discharge. In this sense, suretyship includes all accessorial obligations. By such terminology, guarantors and indorsers are kinds of sureties .... A surety, in the narrow sense, is one who is liable in form primarily on the debt or obligation of another. His obligation is accessorial to that of the principal debtor, but it is direct and not conditioned on the principal debtor's default. In this sense, suretyship differs from guaranty and indorsement, which are conditional, secondary obligations .... The word surety is in the majority of American decisions used in the narrower sense to indicate a primary obligation to pay another's debt, to distinguish it from the secondary obligation of a guarantor. This terminology has the advantage of indicating by the use of the one word ‘surety’ an obligation which is at once one to pay another's debt, but which at the same time is not conditioned upon another's default.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 6, 8–9 (1950).

accommodation surety. See voluntary surety.

compensated surety. A surety who is paid for becoming obliged to the creditor; esp., one that engages in the business of executing suretyship contracts in exchange for premiums, which are determined by an actuarial computation of risks. • A bonding company is a typical example of a compensated surety. — Also termed commercial surety.

cosurety. See COSURETY.

gratuitous surety. A surety who is not compensated for becoming obliged to the creditor. • Perhaps the most common example is the parent who signs as a surety for a child.

subsurety. See SUBSURETY.

supplemental surety. A surety for a surety.

surety of the peace. Hist. A surety responsible for ensuring that a person will not commit a future offense. • It is required of one against whom there are probable grounds to suspect future misbehavior. See SUPPLICAVIT.

SURETYSHIP

suretyship. 1. The legal relation that arises when one party assumes liability for a debt, default, or other failing of a second party. • The liability of both parties begins simultaneously. In other words, under a contract of suretyship, a surety becomes a party to the principal obligation. — Also termed (archaically) pledgery. [Cases: Principal and Surety 1, 65, 66. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 2–5, 70, 72.] 2. The lending of credit to aid a principal who does not have sufficient credit. • The purpose is to guard against loss if the principal debtor were to default. 3. The position or status of a surety.

involuntary suretyship. A suretyship that arises incidentally, when the chief object of the contract is to accomplish some other purpose. [Cases: Principal and Surety 11. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 24, 33.]

personal suretyship. A suretyship in which the surety is answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety 65. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 70.]

real suretyship. A suretyship in which specified property can be taken, but the surety is not answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety 65. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 70.]

suretyship by operation of law. A suretyship that the law creates when a third party promises a debtor to assume and pay the debt that the debtor owes to a creditor. [Cases: Principal and Surety 14. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 35.]

voluntary suretyship. A suretyship in which the chief object of the contract is to make one party a surety.

SURFACE

surface. 1. The top layer of something, esp. of land. 2. Mining law. An entire portion of land, including mineral deposits, except those specifically reserved. • The meaning of the term varies, esp. when used in legal instruments, depending on the language used, the intention of the parties, the business involved, and the nature and circumstances of the transaction. 3. Mining law. The part of the geologic section lying over the minerals in question.

SURFACE CASING

surface casing. See CASING.

SURFACE-DAMAGE CLAUSE

surface-damage clause. Oil & gas. A lease provision requiring the lessee to pay the lessor or the surface-interest owner for all or for a specified kind or degree of damage to the surface that results from oil-and-gas operations. — Also termed location-damage clause; damages clause.

SURFACE INTEREST

surface interest. Oil & gas. Every right in real property other than the mineral interest. • The surface-interest owner has the right to the surface subject to the right of the mineral-interest owner to use the surface. The surface-interest owner is entitled to whatever nonmineral substances are found in or under the soil. — Also termed surface right. Cf. MINERAL INTEREST ; SUBSURFACE INTEREST. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55(6). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 177, 180, 182–185, 428, 434–435.]

SURFACE ISSUE

surface issue. See ISSUE(1).

SURFACE TRANSPORTATION BOARD

Surface Transportation Board. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for the economic regulation of interstate surface transportation, primarily railroads. • Its jurisdiction includes railroad-rate and -service issues, railroad-company mergers and related labor matters; certain truck and ocean shipping rates; certain intercity bus-company structures; and certain pipeline matters not regulated by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. — Abbr. ### SURPLICE FEES surplice fees (s<<schwa>>r-plis feez).Eccles. law. Fees paid to clergy for performing occasional duties, such as marriages, funerals, and baptisms.

SURPLUS

surplus. 1. The remainder of a thing; the residue or excess. 2. The excess of receipts over disbursements. 3. Funds that remain after a partnership has been dissolved and all its debts paid. 4. A corporation's net worth, beyond the par value of capital stock. — Also termed overplus.

accumulated surplus.Earnings in excess of a corporation's capital and liabilities.

acquired surplus.The surplus gained by the purchase of another business.

actuarial surplus.See ACTUARIAL SURPLUS.

appreciation surplus.See revaluation surplus.

appropriated surplus. 1. The portion of surplus earmarked for a specific purpose. — Also termed reserved surplus. 2. See appropriated retained earnings under EARNINGS.

capital surplus. 1. All surplus (such as paid-in surplus or donated surplus) not arising from the accumulation of profits; a company's surplus other than earned surplus, usu. created by financial reorganization or gifts. 2. See paid-in surplus.

donated surplus. 1. Assets (such as stock) contributed to a corporation. 2. The increase in the shareholders' equity account resulting from such a contribution.

earned surplus.See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

initial surplus.The surplus that appears on the financial statement at the beginning of an accounting period, but that does not reflect the operations for the statement's period.

paid-in surplus.The surplus gained by the sale, exchange, or issuance of capital stock at a price above par value. — Also termed capital surplus; premium on capital stock.

reserved surplus.See appropriated surplus (1).

restricted surplus.A surplus with a limited or restricted use; esp., the portion of retained earnings that cannot be distributed as dividends. • The restriction is usu. due to preferred dividends in arrears, a covenant in a loan agreement, or some decision of the board of directors. See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

revaluation surplus.Surplus that is gained when assets are reappraised at a higher value. — Also termed appreciation surplus.

trade surplus.The excess of merchandise exports over merchandise imports during a specific period. Cf. trade deficit under DEFICIT.

unearned surplus. Corporations. The total of amounts assigned to shares in excess of stated capital, surplus arising from a revaluation of assets above cost, and contributions other than for shares, whether from shareholders or others.

surplusage (s<<schwa>>r-pl<<schwa>>s-ij). 1. Redundant words in a statute or legal instrument; language that does not add meaning <the court must give effect to every word, reading nothing as mere surplusage>. [Cases: Statutes 202, 206. C.J.S. Statutes § 327.] 2. Extraneous matter in a pleading <allegations that are irrelevant to the case will be treated as surplusage>. [Cases: Indictment and Information 118. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 136.]

SURPLUS REVENUE

surplus revenue. See appropriated retained earnings under EARNINGS.

SURPLUS WATER

surplus water. See WATER.

SURPRISE

surprise. An occurrence for which there is no adequate warning or that affects someone in an unexpected way. • In a trial, the procedural rules are designed to limit surprise — or trial by ambush — as much as possible. For example, the parties in a civil case are permitted to conduct discovery, to determine the essential facts of the case and the identities of possible witnesses, and to inspect relevant documents. At trial, if a party calls a witness who has not been previously identified, the witness's testimony may be excluded if it would unfairly surprise and prejudice the other party. And if a party has diligently prepared the case and is nevertheless taken by surprise on a material point at trial, that fact can sometimes be grounds for a new trial or for relief from the judgment under Rules 59 and 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

SURREBUTTAL

surrebuttal (s<<schwa>>r-ri-b<<schwa>>t-<<schwa>>l). The response to the opposing party's rebuttal in a trial or other proceeding; a rebuttal to a rebuttal <called two extra witnesses in surrebuttal>. [Cases: Criminal Law 683; Federal Civil Procedure 2015; Trial 64. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1219; Trial § 197.]

SURREBUTTER

surrebutter (s<<schwa>>r-ri-b<<schwa>>t-<<schwa>>r). Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter. [Cases: Pleading 185.]

SURREJOINDER

surrejoinder (s<<schwa>>r-ri-joyn-d<<schwa>>r). Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's rejoinder. See REPLICATION. [Cases: Pleading 184.]

“Where the common-law system of pleading is in force, the pleadings do not terminate with the plaintiff's replication. The defendant may interpose a rejoinder to the replication, and the plaintiff a surrejoinder to the defendant's rejoinder. Then follows the rebutter, which in turn may be met by a surrebutter.” 61A Am. Jur. 2d Pleading § 193, at 192 (1981).

SURRENDER

surrender, n. 1. The act of yielding to another's power or control. 2. The giving up of a right or claim; RELEASE(1). [Cases: Release 1. C.J.S. Release §§ 2–3, 5–8, 19.] 3. The return of an estate to the person who has a reversion or remainder, so as to merge the estate into a larger estate. Cf. MERGER(4).

“Merger bears a very near resemblance, in circumstances and effect, to a surrender; but the analogy does not hold in all cases, though there is not any case in which merger will take place, unless the right of making and surrender resided in the parties between whom the merger takes place. To a surrender, it is requisite that the tenant of the particular estate should relinquish his estate in favor of the tenant of the next vested estate, in remainder or reversion. But merger is confined to the cases in which the tenant of the estate in reversion or remainder grants that estate to the tenant of the particular estate, or in which the particular tenant grants his estate to him in reversion or remainder. Surrender is the act of the party, and merger is the act of the law.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *100 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

4. Commercial law. The delivery of an instrument so that the delivery releases the deliverer from all liability. [Cases: Bills and Notes 438. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 240–241.] 5. A tenant's relinquishment of possession before the lease has expired, allowing the landlord to take possession and treat the lease as terminated. — Also termed (in sense 5) surrender of term. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 109. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 120, 123–124.] — surrender, vb.

SURRENDER BY BAIL

surrender by bail.A surety's delivery of a prisoner, who had been released on bail, into custody. [Cases: Bail 80. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings §§ 136–139.]

SURRENDER BY OPERATION OF LAW

surrender by operation of law.An act that is an equivalent to an agreement by a tenant to abandon property and the landlord to resume possession, as when the parties perform an act so inconsistent with the landlord–tenant relationship that surrender is presumed, or when a tenant performs some act that would not be valid if the estate continued to exist. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 109(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 121, 127.]

SURRENDER CLAUSE

surrender clause.Oil & gas. A provision commonly found in oil-and-gas leases authorizing a lessee to release its rights to all or any portion of the leased property at any time and to be relieved of further obligations on the acreage surrendered.

SURRENDEREE

surrender of a preference.Bankruptcy. The yielding of a voidable conveyance, transfer, assignment, or encumbrance by a creditor to the trustee as a condition of allowing the creditor's claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2824.C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 239.]

SURRENDER OF CHARTER

surrender of charter.Corporations. The dissolution of a corporation by a formal yielding of its charter to the state under which it was created and the subsequent acceptance of that charter by the state. [Cases: Corporations 610(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 835–837.]

“The surrender of a charter can be made only by some formal, solemn act of the corporation, and will be of no avail until accepted by the government. There must be the same agreement of the parties to dissolve that there was to form the compact. It is the acceptance which gives efficacy to the surrender. Consent of the state is sometimes given by general statute.” 19 Am. Jur. 2d Corporations § 2738, at 546 (1986).

SURRENDER OF COPYHOLD

surrender of copyhold.Hist. The transfer by a tenant of a copyhold estate by yielding it to the lord in trust for the transferee according to the terms in the surrender. • In normal practice, the tenant went to the steward of the manor and delivered a rod, a glove, or other customary symbol, thereby conveying to the lord (through the steward) all interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be then granted by the lord to the transferee. See COPYHOLD.

SURRENDER OF TERM

surrender of term. See SURRENDER(5).

SURRENDEROR

surrenderor. One who surrenders; esp., one who yields up a copyhold estate for conveyance. — Also spelled surrenderer. See COPYHOLD.

SURRENDER TO USES OF WILL

surrender to uses of will. Hist. A required yielding of a copyhold interest passed by will to the will's uses. • The requirement was abolished by St. 55 Geo. 3, ch. 192.

SURRENDER VALUE

SURROGATE-PARENTING AGREEMENT

surrogate-parenting agreement. A contract between a woman and typically an infertile couple under which the woman provides her uterus to carry an embryo throughout pregnancy; esp., an agreement between a person (the intentional parent) and a woman (the surrogate mother) providing that the surrogate mother will (1) bear a child for the intentional parent, and (2) relinquish any and all rights to the child. • If the surrogate mother is married, her husband must also consent to the terms of the surrogacy contract. The agreement usu. provides that the woman will relinquish to the couple any parental rights she may have upon the birth of the child. Complex issues arise concerning who is the parent of the resulting child: the genetic donor of egg or sperm, a spouse of either donor, the surrogate, or the person intending to care for the resulting child? American jurisdictions are split on the interpretation and enforceability of these contracts. — Also termed surrogacy contract. See surrogate mother under MOTHER; intended child under CHILD; intentional parent under PARENT. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1; Contracts 108(2). C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 2–11; Contracts §§ 269–270, 272–273, 277.] surtax exemption. 1. An exclusion of an item from a surtax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3633. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17–18, 368, 387.] 2. An item or an amount not subject to a surtax. See surtax under TAX.

SURVEILLANCE

surveillance (s<<schwa>>r-vay-l<<schwa>>nts), n. Close observation or listening of a person or place in the hope of gathering evidence. — surveil (s<<schwa>>r-vayl), vb.

SURVEY

survey,n.1. A general consideration of something; appraisal .2. The measuring of a tract of land and its boundaries and contents; a map indicating the results of such measurements <the lender requires a survey of the property before it will issue a loan>.

government survey.A survey made by a governmental entity of tracts of land (as of townships and sections and quarter-sections of land). — Also termed (when conducted by the federal government) congressional survey. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 42; Public Lands 23–28. C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 30–35.]

inclusive survey.A survey that includes within the described boundaries land that is owned or claimed by others and excluded from the survey's computed area.

topographical survey.A survey that determines a property's elevation above sea level.

3. A governmental department that carries out such measurements <please obtain the boundaries from survey>.4. A poll or questionnaire, esp. one examining popular opinion <the radio station took a survey of the concert audience>.5.Maritime law. A written assessment of the current condition of a vessel or cargo. — Also termed (in sense 5) survey of a vessel. [Cases: Shipping 12. C.J.S. Shipping § 12.] — survey,vb.

---

survey of a vessel. See SURVEY(5).

SURVEYOR OF THE PORT

surveyor of the port. Hist. A U.S. customs revenue officer appointed for each principal port of entry to oversee the inspection and valuation of imports. • The office was abolished in 1953.

survival action. A lawsuit brought on behalf of a decedent's estate for injuries or damages incurred by the decedent immediately before dying. • A survival action derives from the claim that a decedent would have had — such as for pain and suffering — if he or she had survived. In contrast is a claim that the beneficiaries may have in a wrongful-death action, such as for loss of consortium or loss of support from the decedent. Cf. WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION . [Cases: Death 10. C.J.S. Death §§ 21, 102.]

survival clause. Wills & estates. A testamentary provision conditioning a bequest on a beneficiary's living for a specified period, often 60 days, after the testator's death. • If the beneficiary dies within the stated period, the testamentary gift usu. accrues to the residuary estate. — Also termed survivorship clause. Cf. SIMULTANEOUS-DEATH CLAUSE.

SURVIVAL STATUTE

survival statute. A law that modifies the common law by allowing certain actions to continue in favor of a personal representative after the death of the party who could have originally brought the action; esp., a law that provides for the estate's recovery of damages incurred by the decedent immediately before death. Cf. DEATH STATUTE. [Cases: Death 10. C.J.S. Death §§ 21, 102.]

survivance. The right of succession (as to an office or to an estate) of a survivor named before the death of the incumbent or the holder.

SURVIVING

surviving, adj. Remaining alive; living beyond the happening of an event so as to entitle one to a distribution of property or income <surviving spouse>. See SURVIVAL ACTION.

SURVIVING CORPORATION

surviving corporation. See CORPORATION.

SURVIVING PARTNER

surviving partner. See PARTNER.

SURVIVING SPOUSE

surviving spouse. See SPOUSE.

SURVIVOR

survivor. 1. One who outlives another. 2. A trustee who administers a trust after the cotrustee has been removed, has refused to act, or has died.

SURVIVORSHIP

survivorship. 1. The state or condition of being the one person out of two or more who remains alive after the others die. 2. The right of a surviving party having a joint interest with others in an estate to take the whole. See RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP.

SURVIVORSHIP ANNUITY survivorship annuity. See ANNUITY.

SURVIVORSHIP CLAUSE

survivorship clause. See SURVIVAL CLAUSE.

SURVIVORSHIP POLICY

survivorship policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

SUSCEPTIBILITY

susceptibility. See SUBJECTION(3).

SUSPECT

suspect, n. A person believed to have committed a crime or offense.

suspect, vb. 1. To consider (something) to be probable. 2. To consider (something) possible. 3. To consider (a person) as having probably committed wrongdoing, but without certain truth.

reasonably suspect. 1. To consider (something) to be probable under circumstances in which a reasonable person would be led to that conclusion. 2. To consider (someone) as having probably committed wrongdoing under circumstances in which a reasonable person would be led to that conclusion.

SUSPECT CLASS

suspect class. A group identified or defined in a suspect classification.

SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION

suspect classification. Constitutional law. A statutory classification based on race, national origin, or alienage, and thereby subject to strict scrutiny under equal-protection analysis. • Examples of laws creating suspect classifications are those permitting only U.S. citizens to receive welfare benefits and setting quotas for the government's hiring of minority contractors. See STRICT SCRUTINY. Cf. FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT. [Cases: Constitutional Law 213.1(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 714–715, 718.]

quasi-suspect classification. A statutory classification based on gender or legitimacy, and therefore subject to intermediate scrutiny under equal-protection analysis. • Examples of laws creating a quasi-suspect classification are those permitting alimony for women only and providing for an all-male draft. See INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 213.1(1), 224(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 714–715, 718, 733–734, 941–944.]

suspend, vb. 1. To interrupt; postpone; defer <the fire alarm suspended the prosecutor's opening statement>. 2. To temporarily keep (a person) from performing a function, occupying an office, holding a job, or exercising a right or privilege <the attorney's law license was suspended for violating the Model Rules of Professional Conduct>. [Cases: Licenses 38; Officers and Public Employees 65. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 4.5; Architects § 10; Licenses §§ 48, 50–63; Officers and Public Employees §§ 139, 141–142.]

suspend the rules. Parliamentary law. To pass a motion that overrides an agenda or other procedural rule, for a limited time and purpose, so that the deliberative assembly may take some otherwise obstructed action.

“When a body wishes to do something that cannot be done without violating its own rules, but yet that is not in conflict with the constitution or with any controlling statutory provision, it ‘suspends the rules that interfere with’ the proposed action. Suspension differs from amendment because it is limited in scope and in time. The object of the suspension must be specified, and nothing falling outside the stated limits of the motion to suspend the rules can be done under the suspension.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 279, at 211 (2000).

SUSPENDATUR PER COLLUM

suspendatur per collum (s<<schwa>>s-pen-day-t<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>r kahl-<<schwa>>m). [Law French] Hist. Let him be hanged by the neck. • This phrase was written by a judge in the margin of the sheriff's calendar, opposite the name of a prisoner who had been sentenced to death. — Abbr. sus. per coll.

“And now the usage is, for the judge to sign the calendar, or list of all the prisoners' names, with their separate judgments in the margin, which is left with the sheriff. As, for capital felony, it is written opposite to the prisoner's name, ‘hanged by the neck;’ formerly, in the days of Latin and abbreviation, ‘sus. per coll.’ for ‘suspendatur per collum.’ And this is the only warrant that the sheriff has for so material an act as taking away life of another.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 396 (1769).

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

suspended sentence. See SENTENCE.

SUSPENDED TRADING

suspense account. See ACCOUNT.

SUSPENSE RESERVE

suspense reserve. See appropriated retained earnings under EARNINGS.

suspension. 1. The act of temporarily delaying, interrupting, or terminating something <suspension of business operations> <suspension of a statute>. 2. The state of such delay, interruption, or termination <corporate transfers were not allowed because of the suspension of business>. 3. The temporary deprivation of a person's powers or privileges, esp. of office or profession; esp., a fairly stringent level of lawyer discipline that prohibits the lawyer from practicing law for a specified period, usu. from several months to several years <suspension of the bar license>. • Suspension may entail requiring the lawyer to pass a legal-ethics bar examination, or to take one or more ethics courses as continuing legal education, before being readmitted to active practice. [Cases: Licenses 38; Officers and Public Employees 65. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 4.5; Architects § 10; Licenses §§ 48, 50–63; Officers and Public Employees §§ 139, 141–142.] 4. The temporary withdrawal from employment, as distinguished from permanent severance <suspension from teaching without pay>. [Cases: Master and Servant 30–31. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 35, 38–40, 42–43, 52, 56, 60.] 5. Eccles. law. An ecclesiastical censure that can be temporary or permanent, and partial or complete. See DEPRIVATION. 6. Scots law. The process of staying a judgment pending an appeal to the Supreme Court.

SUSPENSION OF ARMS

suspension of arms. See TRUCE.

SUSPENSION OF JUDGMENT

suspension of judgment. See STAY.

SUSPENSION OF TRADING

sus. per coll. abbr. SUSPENDATUR PER COLLUM.

SUSPICION

suspicion. The apprehension or imagination of the existence of something wrong based only on inconclusive or slight evidence, or possibly even no evidence.

reasonable suspicion. A particularized and objective basis, supported by specific and articulable facts, for suspecting a person of criminal activity. • A police officer must have a reasonable suspicion to stop a person in a public place. See STOP AND FRISK. Cf. PROBABLE CAUSE. [Cases: Arrest 63.5. C.J.S. Arrest §§ 38–42.]

SUSPICIOUS-ACTIVITY REPORT

suspicious-activity report. A form that, as of 1996, a financial institution must complete and submit to federal regulatory authorities if it suspects that a federal crime has occurred in the course of a monetary transaction. • This form superseded two earlier forms, the criminal-referral form and the suspicious-transaction report. — Abbr. SAR. [Cases: Banks and Banking 151, 188.5. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278, 445–451.]

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER

suspicious character. In some states, a person who is strongly suspected or known to be a habitual criminal and therefore may be arrested or required to give security for good behavior.

SUSPICIOUS-TRANSACTION REPORT

suspicious-transaction report. A checkbox on IRS Form 4789 formerly (1990–1995) requiring banks and other financial institutions to report transactions that might be relevant to a violation of the Bank Secrecy Act or its regulations or that might suggest money-laundering or tax evasion. • This checkbox, like the criminal-referral form, has since been superseded by the suspicious-activity report. — Abbr. STR. [Cases: Banks and Banking 151. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278.]

sustain,vb.1. To support or maintain, esp. over a long period <enough oxygen to sustain life>.2. To nourish and encourage; lend strength to <she helped sustain the criminal enterprise>.3. To undergo; suffer <Charles sustained third-degree burns>.4. (Of a court) to uphold or rule in favor of <objection sustained>.5. To substantiate or corroborate <several witnesses sustained Ms. Sipes's allegation>.6. “At the present time there appears to be no instance of a relation between states which is described as a suzerainty. The term was applied to the relation between Great Britain and the South African Republic, and also to that between Turkey and Bulgaria from 1878 to 1909, but it seems likely to disappear from diplomatic terminology.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 128 (5th ed. 1955).

sweating. Criminal procedure. The illegal interrogation of a prisoner by use of threats or similar means to extort information.

SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE

sweat-of-the-brow doctrine. Copyright. The now-discarded principle that copyrights can protect the labor and expense that went into a work, rather than the work's originality. • The Supreme Court rejected the sweat-of-the-brow doctrine in Feist Pubs., Inc. v. Rural Tel. Servs. Co., 499 U.S. 340, 111 S.Ct. 1282 (1991). Cf. SWEATWORK. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(1).]

sweatshop. Slang. A business where the employees are overworked and underpaid in extreme conditions; esp., in lawyer parlance, a law firm that requires associates to work so hard that they barely (if at all) maintain a family or social life — though the firm may, in return, pay higher salaries.

SWEATWORK

sweatwork. Slang. A compilation, esp. a searchable computer database, that does not qualify for U.S. copyright protection because the underlying facts are not copyrightable and the compilation is not a nontrivial arrangement. • New forms of intellectual-property laws are aimed at protecting the “sweat-of-the-brow” investment that goes into compiling databases. Cf.

SYMBIOTIC-RELATIONSHIP TEST

symbiotic-relationship test. The standard by which a private person may be considered a state actor — and may be liable for violating someone's constitutional rights — if the relationship between the private person and the government is so close that they can fairly be said to be acting jointly. • Private acts by a private person do not generally create liability for violating someone's constitutional rights. But if a private person violates someone's constitutional rights while engaging in state action, the private person, and possibly the government, can be held liable. State action may be shown by proving that the private person and the state have a mutually dependent (symbiotic) relationship. For example, a restaurant in a public parking garage was held to have engaged in discriminatory state action by refusing to serve African-Americans. Burton v. Wilmington Parking Auth., 365 U.S. 715, 81 S.Ct. 856 (1961). There, the Court found a symbiotic relationship because the restaurant relied on the garage for its existence and significantly contributed to the municipal parking authority's ability to maintain the garage. But the symbiotic-relationship test is strictly construed. For example, the fact that an entity receives financial support from — or is heavily regulated by — the government is probably insufficient to show a symbiotic relationship. Thus, although a state had granted a partial monopoly to a public utility, the Court refused to find a symbiotic relationship between them. Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co., 419 U.S. 345, 95 S.Ct. 449 (1974). See JOINT PARTICIPATION. Cf. STATE-COMPULSION TEST; NEXUS TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights 1326(5, 7); Constitutional Law 82(5), 213(4), 254(4). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94; Constitutional Law §§ 456, 619, 629, 631, 705, 719, 954–958.]

SYNERGISM

synergism (sin-<<schwa>>r-jiz-<<schwa>>m), n. Patents. 1. A combination of known elements or functions that create a result greater than the sum of the individual elements or functions. • Demonstrating that synergism exists is sometimes useful in proving nonobviousness. The U.S. Supreme Court held that synergism was a requirement for a combination patent in Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co. v. Supermarket Equip. Corp., 340 U.S. 147, 71 S.Ct. 127 (1950). But that holding was overturned by the Patent Act of 1952. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents 26(1.5). C.J.S. Patents §§ 83–84.] 2. A patentable device that produces a new or different function or an unusual or surprising consequence. — Also termed synergy; synergistic result. — synergistic (sin-<<schwa>>r-jis-tik), synergetic (sin-<<schwa>>r-jet-ik), adj.

A formulation of laws inscribed on tablets, such as the Twelve Tables of Roman law. See TWELVE TABLES . 3.Parliamentary law. The secretary's desk.

table,vb. Parliamentary law. (Of a deliberative assembly) to set aside the pending business until the assembly votes to resume its consideration. • A matter that has been tabled may be brought up again by a vote of the assembly. — Also termed lay on the table; postpone temporarily.

“The early name of the motion to postpone temporarily was ‘lay on the table.’ (In American usage the phrase has been shortened, and the motion is now generally referred to as the motion ‘to table.’) The term grew out of the legislative custom of literally laying a bill awaiting further consideration on the clerk's table.

“The reference to ‘laying the motion on the table’ or ‘tabling’ is still widely used, but the more precise term, ‘postpone temporarily,’ is preferred when that is its purpose, because the term is self-explanatory.

“Sometimes, however, the purpose of the motion is not merely to postpone temporarily, but to set the motion aside indefinitely — in effect, to ‘kill’ it ....” Alice Sturgis, The Standard Code of Parliamentary Procedure 70 (4th ed. 2001).

tack,n. Scots law. A deed creating a lease of land or other immovable property for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land. • The lessee may be referred to as a tacksman or tackswoman. — tack,vb.

tack,vb.1. To add (one's own period of land possession) to a prior possessor's period to establish continuous adverse possession for the statutory period. [Cases: Adverse Possession 43. C.J.S. Adverse Possession § 154.] 2. To annex (a junior lien) to a first lien to acquire priority over an intermediate lien.

“It is the established doctrine in the English law, that if there be three mortgages in succession, and all duly registered, or a mortgage, and then a judgment, and then a second mortgage upon the estate, the junior mortgagee may purchase in the first mortgage, and tack it to his mortgage, and by that contrivance ‘squeeze out’ the middle mortgage and gain preference over it. The same rule would apply if the first as well as the second incumbrance was a judgment; but the incumbrancer who tacks must always be a mortgagee, for he stands in the light of a bonâ fide purchaser, parting with his money upon the security of the mortgage.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *176 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3.Scots law. To lease land or another immovable for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land.

“Estates-tail are either general, or special.... Tenant in tail-special is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs ... and does not go to all of them in general. And this may happen in several ways. I shall instance in only one: as where lands and tenements are given to a man and the heirs of his body, on Mary his now wife to be begotten; here no issue can inherit, but such special issue as is engendered, between them two; not such as the husband may have by another wife: and therefore it is called special tail.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 113–14 (1766).

tally. 1.Hist. A stick cut into two parts and marked with notches to show what was due between a debtor and creditor.

“The tally, used as a receipt for money or chattels, was a narrow wooden stick with notches of varying dimensions to represent the amount received. After the notches had been cut, the stick was split lengthwise into two unequal pieces. The longer, which contained a stump or handle and was called the ‘stock,’ was given to the person making the payment, and the shorter, a flat strip called the ‘foil,’ to the other party. If the sum involved was disputed, the two pieces could be fitted one to the other to see if they would ‘tally.’ ” C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 223 (1949).

“A thousand pounds was marked by cutting out the thickness of the palm of the hand, a hundred by the breadth of the thumb, a score by the breadth of the little finger, one pound by that of a swelling barley-corn .... The terminology has left a permanent imprint on our language. If you lent money to the Bank of England, tallies were cut for the amount: the Bank kept the foil and you received the stock; you thus held ‘Bank Stock’ of the amount recorded upon it. When the form of cheque was adopted, it was not indeed called a foil, but the part retained by the payer is still the counterfoil; and the word ‘cheque’ itself goes back ultimately to the same root as ‘exchequer.’ ” Reginald L. Poole, The Exchequer in the Twelfth Century 86–93 (1912).

“From early times tallies were used in the Exchequer and this lasted until 1826. The burning of a large quantity of old tallies led to the burning down of the old Houses of Parliament.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1207 (1980).

retaliatory tariff. A tariff imposed to pressure another country into removing its own tariffs or making trade concessions.

revenue tariff. A tariff enacted solely or primarily to raise revenue.

tariff exterior commun. [French] See common external tariff.

3. A fee that a public utility or telecommunications company may assess for its services. • The tariffs that a provider may charge are limited by statute. [Cases: Public Utilities 119.1;

Telecommunications 306. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 73, 77, 81.] 4. A schedule listing the rates charged for services provided by a public utility, the U.S. Postal Service, or a business (esp. one that must by law file its rates with a public agency). [Cases: Public Utilities 119.1.] 5. A scale of sentences and damages for crimes and injuries, arranged by severity. — tariff,vb.

joint tariff.A rate schedule established by two or more carriers covering shipments between places requiring the use of facilities owned by those carriers. [Cases: Carriers 193. C.J.S. Carriers § 482.]

TARIFF ACT OF 1930

Tariff Act of 1930.See SMOOT–HAWLEY TARIFF ACT.

TARNISHMENT

tarnishment.Trademarks. A form of dilution that occurs when a trademark's unauthorized use degrades the mark and diminishes its distinctive quality. Cf. BLURRING. [Cases: Trade Regulation 366. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 79.]

tax,n. A monetary charge imposed by the government on persons, entities, transactions, or property to yield public revenue. • Most broadly, the term embraces all governmental impositions on the person, property, privileges, occupations, and enjoyment of the people, and includes duties, imposts, and excises. Although a tax is often thought of as being pecuniary in nature, it is not necessarily payable in money. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3001; Taxation 1, 856.1, 906.11, 931, 1201. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 2; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6, 1693, 1783–1785, 1792, 1990, 1993.] — tax,vb.

“Taxes are the enforced proportional contributions from persons and property, levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for the support of government and for all public needs. This definition of taxes, often referred to as ‘Cooley's definition,’ has been quoted and indorsed, or approved, expressly or otherwise, by many different courts. While this definition of taxes characterizes them as ‘contributions,’ other definitions refer to them as ‘imposts,’ ‘duty or impost,’ ‘charges,’ ‘burdens,’ or ‘exactions’; but these variations in phraseology are of no practical importance.” 1 Thomas M. Cooley, The Law of Taxation § 1, at 61–63 (Clark A. Nichols ed., 4th ed. 1924).

accrued tax.A tax that has been incurred but not yet paid or payable.

accumulated-earnings tax.A penalty tax imposed on a corporation that has retained its earnings in an effort to avoid the income-tax liability arising once the earnings are distributed to shareholders as dividends. — Also termed undistributed-earnings tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3843–3845. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 381–382.]

additional tax.See stopgap tax.

admission tax.A tax imposed as part of the price of being admitted to a particular event.

[Cases: Theaters and Shows 3. C.J.S. Entertainment and Amusement; Sports §§ 18–19, 22, 25–37.]

ad valorem tax. A tax imposed proportionally on the value of something (esp. real property), rather than on its quantity or some other measure. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

“[A]n ad valorem tax is a tax of a fixed proportion of the value of the property with respect to which the tax is assessed, and requires the intervention of assessors or appraisers to estimate the value of such property before the amount due from each taxpayer can be determined.” 71 Am. Jur. 2d State and Local Taxation §§ 20, at 355 (1973).

alternative minimum tax. A tax, often a flat rate, potentially imposed on corporations and higher-income individuals to ensure that those taxpayers do not avoid too much (or all) income-tax liability by legitimately using exclusions, deductions, and credits. — Abbr. AMT. — Also termed minimum tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3550. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 358–361.]

amusement tax. A tax on a ticket to a concert, sporting event, or the like. • The tax is usu. expressed as a percentage of the ticket price. [Cases: Theaters and Shows 3, 3.40, 3.60. C.J.S. Entertainment and Amusement; Sports §§ 18–19, 22, 24–37, 48.]

capital-gains tax. A tax on income derived from the sale of a capital asset. • The federal income tax on capital gains typically has a more favorable tax rate — for example, 20% for an individual and 34% for a corporation — than the otherwise applicable tax rate on ordinary income. See CAPITAL GAIN. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3230.1–3260. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 127–145, 490–491.]

capital-stock tax. 1. A tax on capital stock in the hands of a stockholder. [Cases: Taxation 119.] 2. A state tax for conducting business in the corporate form, usu. imposed on out-of-state corporations for the privilege of doing business in the state. • The tax is usu. assessed as a percentage of the par or assigned value of a corporation's capital stock.

capitation tax. See poll tax.

classified tax. A tax system in which different rates are assessed against different types of taxed property.

collateral-inheritance tax. A tax levied on the transfer of property by will or intestate succession to a person other than the spouse, a parent, or a descendant of the decedent. Cf. legacy tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

commutation tax. 1. A combination of two or more taxes that is or can be substituted for something else that could be imposed, such as a demand for other taxes or the performance of personal services. • For example, an excise or franchise tax may be combined with a local tax in lieu of all other taxes related to the subject matter. 2.Hist. A tax imposed on shipowners, requiring them to post a bond or remit a payment per foreign passenger. • In the 19th-century, the tax was used to discourage immigration and to raise revenue to defray the costs of supporting indigent immigrants who had remained in the U.S. 3.Hist. A 1784 tax intended to reduce tea-smuggling and increase tax revenue by cutting the tax on tea and raising the tax on windows. • To avoid payment of the tax, many people boarded up their windows.

consumption tax.A tax imposed on sale of goods or services to be consumed. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1.]

delinquent tax.A tax not paid when due. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4827; Taxation 526, 903, 906.20, 1096, 1331. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 725–726; Taxation §§ 883–884, 1777–1778, 1976, 1978–1981, 2055.]

direct tax.A tax that is imposed on property, as distinguished from a tax on a right or privilege. • A direct tax is presumed to be borne by the person upon whom it is assessed, and not “passed on” to some other person. Ad valorem and property taxes are direct taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3059–3064; Taxation 1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 4; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

erroneous tax. 1. A tax levied without statutory authority. [Cases: Taxation 498, 536, 608(2). C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 208; Taxation §§ 801–804, 915, 1093.] 2. A tax on property not subject to taxation. 3. A tax levied by an officer who lacks authority to levy the tax. — Also termed illegal tax.

estate tax.A tax imposed on the transfer of property by will or by intestate succession. — Also termed death tax; death duty. Cf. inheritance tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4145; Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 500–502; Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

estimated tax.A tax paid quarterly by a taxpayer not subject to withholding (such as a self-employed person) based on either the previous year's tax liability or an estimate of the current year's tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4827, 4832, 5219.40; Taxation 1096. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 725–726, 733, 821; Taxation §§ 1777–1778.]

excess-profits tax.A tax levied on profits that are beyond a business's normal profits. • This type of tax is usu. imposed only in times of national emergency (such as war) to discourage profiteering. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4130–4136. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 670.]

excise lieu property tax.A tax on the gross premiums received and collected by designated classes of insurance companies. [Cases: Taxation 140. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 217–218.]

export tax.A tax levied on merchandise and goods shipped or to be shipped out of a country.

flat tax.A tax whose rate remains fixed regardless of the amount of the tax base. • Most sales taxes are flat taxes. — Also termed proportional tax. Cf. progressive tax; regressive tax. [Cases: Taxation 1281. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 2035–2036.]

floor tax.A tax imposed on distilled spirits stored in a warehouse. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4314. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 597.]

franchise tax.A tax imposed on the privilege of carrying on a business (esp. as a corporation), usu. measured by the business's income. See FRANCHISE. [Cases: Taxation 117. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 177–180, 199.]

general tax. 1. A tax that returns no special benefit to the taxpayer other than the support of governmental programs that benefit all. [Cases: Taxation 1, 22. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.] 2. A property tax or an ad valorem tax that is imposed for no special purpose except to produce public revenue. Cf. special assessment under ASSESSMENT.

generation-skipping tax.A tax on a property transfer that skips a generation. • The tax limits the use of generation-skipping techniques as a means of avoiding estate taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578.]

generation-skipping transfer tax.A gift or estate tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer or a generation-skipping trust. — Sometimes shortened to generation-skipping tax; transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. See DIRECT SKIP; GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; TAXABLE DISTRIBUTION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220–4228. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578.]

gift tax.A tax imposed when property is voluntarily and gratuitously transferred. • Under federal law, the gift tax is imposed on the donor, but some states tax the donee. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4200; Taxation 906.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 493–494, 499, 557–565, 573–575; Taxation §§ 1783–1784.]

graduated tax.A tax employing a rate schedule with higher marginal rates for larger taxable bases (income, property, transfer, etc.) — Also termed progressive tax.

gross-income tax.A tax on gross income, possibly after deduction for costs of goods sold, rather than on net profits; an income tax without allowance for expenses or deductions. See gross income under INCOME. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 979, 1202.5. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60; Taxation § 1991.]

gross-receipts tax.A tax on a business's gross receipts, without a deduction for costs of goods sold, or allowance for expenses or deductions. See GROSS RECEIPTS.

head tax. 1. See poll tax. 2.HEAD MONEY(3).

hidden tax.A tax that is paid, often unknowingly, by someone other than the person or entity on whom it is levied; esp., a tax imposed on a manufacturer or seller (such as a gasoline producer) who passes it on to consumers in the form of higher prices.

highway tax.A tax raised to pay for the construction, repair, and maintenance of highways. [Cases: Highways 123.]

holding-company tax.A federal tax imposed on undistributed personal-holding-company income after allowing deductions for such things as dividends paid. IRC (26 USCA) § 545. — Also termed personal-holding-company tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3850.1–3858. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 383–386.]

illegal tax.A tax that violates the law, esp. the constitution. • For an example, see poll tax. See erroneous tax.

income tax.A tax on an individual's or entity's net income. • The federal income tax — set forth in the Internal Revenue Code — is the federal government's primary source of revenue, and most states also have income taxes. Cf. property tax; EXCISE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3065–4122; Taxation 931–1104. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Internal Revenue §§ 12–14, 16–492, 501, 638–639, 670–673, 797–800; Taxation §§ 1693–1782.]

indirect tax.A tax on a right or privilege, such as an occupation tax or franchise tax. • An indirect tax is often presumed to be partly or wholly passed on from the nominal taxpayer to another person. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

inheritance tax. 1. A tax imposed on a person who inherits property from another (unlike an estate tax, which is imposed on the decedent's estate). • There is no federal inheritance tax, but some states have an inheritance tax (though it is creditable or deductible under the federal estate tax). — Also termed succession tax; death tax. Cf. estate tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1–906. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1989.] 2. Loosely, an estate tax.

in lieu tax.A tax imposed as a substitute for another.

intangible tax.A state tax imposed on the privilege of owning, transferring, devising, or otherwise dealing with intangible property. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

interest-equalization tax.A tax imposed on a U.S. citizen's acquisition of stock issued by a foreign issuer or a debt obligation of a foreign obligor, but only if the obligation did not mature within a year. • This tax was repealed in the mid-1970s. IRC (26 USCA) § 4911.

kiddie tax.Slang. A federal tax imposed on a child's unearned income (above an exempt amount) at the parents' tax rate if the parents' rate is higher and if the child is under 14 years old. — Also termed child's income tax.

land tax.See property tax.

legacy tax.A tax on a legacy, often with the provision that the rate increases as the relationship of the legatee becomes more remote from the testator. • In English law, this tax was known as a legacy duty; it was abolished in 1949. Cf. collateral-inheritance tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

luxury tax.An excise tax imposed on high-priced items that are not deemed necessities (such as cars costing more than a specified amount). Cf. sin tax. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1–1345. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Steam § 4; Taxation §§ 1990–2071.]

nanny tax.Slang. A federal social-security tax imposed on the employer of a domestic employee if the employer pays that employee more than a specified amount in total wages in a year. • The term, which is not a technical legal phrase, was popularized in the mid-1990s, when several of President Clinton's nominees were found not to have paid the social-security tax for their nannies.

occupation tax.An excise tax imposed for the privilege of carrying on a business, trade, or profession. • For example, many states require lawyers to pay an occupation tax. — Also termed occupational tax. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

payroll tax. 1. A tax payable by an employer based on its payroll (such as a social-security tax or an unemployment tax). [Cases: Internal Revenue 4849; Taxation 1100. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 740–741; Taxation§ 1779.] 2. A tax collected by an employer from its employees' gross pay (such as an income tax or a social-security tax). See withholding tax.

per capita tax.See poll tax.

personal-holding-company tax.See holding-company tax.

personal-property tax.A tax on personal property (such as jewelry or household furniture) levied by a state or local government. [Cases: Taxation 67. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 114, 120, 122, 125, 129–130.]

pickup tax.Slang. A state death tax levied in an amount equal to the federal death-tax credit. — Also termed sponge tax.

poll tax.A fixed tax levied on each person within a jurisdiction. • The 24th Amendment prohibits the federal and state governments from imposing poll taxes as a condition for voting. — Also termed per capita tax; capitation tax; capitation; head tax. [Cases: Elections 83; Taxation 106. C.J.S. Elections § 29; Taxation §§ 1671–1672.]

premium tax.A state tax paid by an insurer on premiums paid by the insured. [Cases: Taxation 140. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 217–218.]

privilege tax.A tax on the privilege of carrying on a business or occupation for which a license or franchise is required. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

progressive tax.A tax structured so that the effective tax rate increases more than proportionately as the tax base increases, or so that an exemption remains flat or diminishes. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes increases as the taxpayer's income increases. Most income taxes are progressive, so that higher incomes are taxed at a higher rate. But a tax can be progressive without using graduated rates. — Also termed graduated tax. Cf. regressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

property tax.A tax levied on the owner of property (esp. real property), usu. based on the property's value. • Local governments often impose property taxes to finance school districts, municipal projects, and the like. — Also termed (specif.) land tax. Cf. income tax; EXCISE.

regressive tax. A tax structured so that the effective tax rate decreases as the tax base increases. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes decreases as the taxpayer's income increases. A flat tax (such as the typical sales tax) is usu. considered regressive — despite its constant rate — because it is more burdensome for low-income taxpayers than high-income taxpayers. A growing tax exemption also produces a regressive tax effect. Cf. progressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.] repressive tax. See sin tax.

sales tax. A tax imposed on the sale of goods and services, usu. measured as a percentage of their price. — Also termed retail sales tax. See flat tax. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1–1345. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Steam § 4; Taxation §§ 1990–2071.]

“While the term ‘sales tax’ encompasses a large variety of levies, the term often refers to the ‘retail sales tax,’ where the tax is separately stated and collected on a transaction-by-transaction basis from the consumer; although the economic burden of the sales tax falls upon the consumer, the seller has the statutory duty to collect the tax for the taxing jurisdiction.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Sales and Use Tax § 1, at 11 (1993).

self-employment tax. The social-security tax imposed on the net earnings of a self-employed person. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4381. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 579–580, 582; Social Security and Public Welfare § 33.]

service-occupation tax. A tax imposed on persons who sell services, usu. computed as a percentage of net cost of the tangible personal property (e.g., materials and goods) transferred as an incident to the sale. [Cases: Taxation 1237. C.J.S. Taxation § 2018.]

severance tax. A tax imposed on the value of oil, gas, timber, or other natural resources extracted from the earth. [Cases: Logs and Logging 4; Mines and Minerals 87. C.J.S. Logs and Logging § 26; Mines and Minerals §§ 334, 373–374.]

sinking-fund tax. A tax to be applied to the repayment of a public loan.

sin tax. An excise tax imposed on goods or activities that are considered harmful or immoral (such as cigarettes, liquor, or gambling). — Also termed repressive tax. Cf. luxury tax.

special tax. 1. A tax levied for a unique purpose. 2. A tax (such as an inheritance tax) that is levied in addition to a general tax. [Cases: Taxation 24. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 22, 25.]

specific tax. A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind without regard to its value.

sponge tax. See pickup tax.

stamp tax. A tax imposed by requiring the purchase of a revenue stamp that must be affixed to a legal document (such as a deed or note) before the document can be recorded. — Also termed documentary-stamp transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4390–4409.]

state tax. 1. A tax — usu. in the form of a sales or income tax — earmarked for state, rather than federal or municipal, purposes. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.] 2. A tax levied under a state law.

stock-transfer tax. A tax levied by the federal government and by some states on the transfer or sale of shares of stock. — Often shortened to transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4404; Taxation 105.5. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 167, 1681–1692.]

“Some state statutes impose special taxes, usually in the form of a stamp tax, upon sales and agreements for sale and other transfers of stock in corporations. Such a tax is in the nature of an excise tax on the transfer. Taxes on the issuance and transfer of corporate stock, commonly known as ‘stock transfer taxes’ and payable by means of stamps, are constitutional, as within the power of state governments.” 71 Am. Jur. 2d State and Local Taxation § 643, at 896 (1973).

stopgap tax. A tax, usu. temporary, levied during the term of a budget to cover an unexpected deficit. — Also termed additional tax.

succession tax. See inheritance tax (1).

surtax. An additional tax imposed on something being taxed or on the primary tax itself. [Cases: Taxation 1061. C.J.S. Taxation § 1698.]

transfer tax. 1. A tax imposed on the transfer of property, esp. by will, inheritance, or gift. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220–4228; Taxation 856–898. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578; Taxation §§ 1783–1792, 1794–1944, 1948, 1988.] 2. See stock-transfer tax. 3. See generation-skipping transfer tax.

undistributed-earnings tax. See accumulated-earnings tax.

unemployment tax. A tax imposed on an employer by state or federal law to cover the cost of unemployment insurance. • The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) provides for a tax based on a percentage of employee earnings but allows a credit for amounts paid in state unemployment taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4305. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 596, 606.]

unified transfer tax. The federal transfer tax imposed equally on property transferred during life or at death. • Until 1977, gift-tax rates were lower than estate taxes. — Also termed unified estate-and-gift tax.

unitary tax. A tax of income earned locally by a business that transacts business through an affiliated company outside the state or country. See UNITARY BUSINESS. [Cases: Taxation 1005. C.J.S. Taxation § 1719.]

unrelated-business-income tax. A tax levied on a not-for-profit organization's taxable income, such as advertising revenue from a publication. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4068; Taxation 1018. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 473–474; Taxation § 1706.]

use tax.A tax imposed on the use of certain goods that are bought outside the taxing authority's jurisdiction. • Use taxes are designed to discourage the purchase of products that are not subject to the sales tax. [Cases: Taxation 1202. C.J.S. Taxation § 1992.]

value-added tax.A tax assessed at each step in the production of a commodity, based on the value added at each step by the difference between the commodity's production cost and its selling price. • A value-added tax — which is popular in several European countries — effectively acts as a sales tax on the ultimate consumer. — Abbr. VAT. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1.]

windfall-profits tax.A tax imposed on a business or industry as a result of a sudden increase in profits. • An example is the tax imposed on oil companies in 1980 for profits resulting from the Arab oil embargo of the 1970s. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4338.]

window tax.Hist. English law. A tax imposed on a house containing a certain number of windows (usu. more than six). • It was established under the Taxation Act of 1695 and replaced with a tax on inhabited houses established under the House Tax of 1851. See HOUSE-DUTY.

withholding tax.A portion of income tax that is subtracted from salary, wages, dividends, or other income before the earner receives payment. • The most common example is the income tax and social-security tax withheld by an employer from an employee's pay. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4849; Taxation 1100. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 740–741; Taxation § 1779.]

TAXABLE

taxable,adj.1. Subject to taxation <interest earned on a checking account is taxable income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 978.C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60; Taxation §§ 1715–1716, 1721–1722, 1727.] 2. (Of legal costs or fees) assessable <expert-witness fees are not taxable court costs>. [Cases: Costs 146–194; Federal Civil Procedure 2742. C.J.S. Costs §§ 6, 94–97, 99–101, 105–124.]

TAXABLE COST

taxable cost.See COST(3).

TAXABLE DISTRIBUTION

taxable distribution.A generation-skipping transfer from a trust to the beneficiary (i.e., the skip person) that is neither a direct skip nor a taxable termination. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

TAXABLE ESTATE

taxable estate.See ESTATE(3).

TAXABLE GIFT

taxable gift. See GIFT.

TAXABLE INCOME

taxable income. See INCOME.

TAXABLE TERMINATION

taxable termination. A taxable event that occurs when (1) an interest in a generation-skipping trust property terminates (as on the death of a skip person's parent who possessed the interest), (2) no interest in the trust is held by a nonskip person, and (3) a distribution may be made to a skip person. • Before the creation of taxable terminations in 1976, a taxpayer could create a trust that paid income to a child for life, then to that child's child for life, and so on without incurring an estate or gift tax liability at the death of each generation's beneficiary. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER R; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

TAXABLE YEAR

taxable year. See tax year under YEAR.

TAX ACCOUNTING

tax accounting. The accounting rules and methods used in determining a taxpayer's liability.

TAX-ANTICIPATION BILL

tax-anticipation bill. A short-term obligation issued by the U.S. Treasury to meet the cash-flow needs of the government. • Corporations can tender these bills at par value to make quarterly tax payments. — Abbr. TAB.

TAX-ANTICIPATION NOTE

tax-anticipation note. See NOTE(1).

TAX-ANTICIPATION WARRANT

tax-anticipation warrant. See WARRANT(2).

TAX-APPORTIONMENT CLAUSE

tax-apportionment clause. A testamentary provision directing how inheritance and estate taxes should be paid.

TAX ASSESSMENT

tax assessment. See ASSESSMENT(3).

TAX ASSESSOR

tax assessor. See ASSESSOR(1).

TAXATION

taxation. 1. The imposition or assessment of a tax; the means by which the state obtains the revenue required for its activities. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3001–3007; Taxation 1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 2, 4; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

double taxation. 1. The imposition of two taxes on the same property during the same period and for the same taxing purpose. [Cases: Taxation 47. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 61–72.] 2. The imposition of two taxes on one corporate profit; esp., the structure of taxation employed by Subchapter C of the Internal Revenue Code, under which corporate profits are taxed twice, once to the corporation when earned and once to the shareholders when the earnings are distributed as dividends. 3. Int'l law. The imposition of comparable taxes in two or more states on the same taxpayer for the same subject matter or identical goods. — Also termed duplicate taxation; (in sense 3) juridical double taxation.

duplicate taxation. See double taxation.

equal and uniform taxation. A tax system in which no person or class of persons in the taxing district — whether it be a state, city, or county — is taxed at a different rate from others in the same district on the same value or thing. [Cases: Taxation 39. C.J.S. Taxation § 26.]

pass-through taxation. The taxation of an entity's owners for the entity's income without taxing the entity itself. • Partnerships and S corporations are taxed under this method. So are limited liability companies and limited liability partnerships unless they elect to be taxed as corporations by “checking the box” on their income tax returns. The election is made on Form 8832 (Entity Classification Election). See Treas. Reg. § 301.7701–(3)(b)(1). — Also termed conduit taxation. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3896, 3920–3924. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 376–377, 427, 429.]

2. The act of determining and charging to a litigant the costs of a legal proceeding.

TAXATION OF COSTS

taxation of costs. The process of fixing the amount of litigation-related expenses that a prevailing party is entitled to be awarded.

TAX AUDIT

tax audit. See AUDIT.

TAX AVOIDANCE

tax avoidance. The act of taking advantage of legally available tax-planning opportunities in order to minimize one's tax liability. Cf. TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3056–3058; Taxation 108. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 3, 14–16; Taxation § 88.]

TAX BASE

tax base. The total property, income, or wealth subject to taxation in a given jurisdiction; the aggregate value of the property being taxed by a particular tax. Cf. BASIS(2).

TAX BASIS

tax basis. See BASIS(2).

TAX-BENEFIT RULE

tax-benefit rule. The principle that if a taxpayer recovers a loss or expense that was deducted in a previous year, the recovery must be included in the current year's gross income to the extent that it was previously deducted. — Also termed tax-benefit doctrine. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3089, 3138. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 78.]

TAX BRACKET

tax bracket. A categorized level of income subject to a particular tax rate under federal or state law <28% tax bracket>. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

TAX CERTIFICATE

tax certificate. An instrument issued to the buyer of property at a tax sale, certifying the sale and entitling the buyer to a tax deed and possession of the property upon the expiration of the redemption period. • If the property is redeemed, the tax certificate is voided. See REDEMPTION PERIOD; tax sale under SALE. Cf. tax deed under DEED. [Cases: Taxation 730, 731. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1365–1369.]

TAX COURT

tax court. 1. TAX COURT, U.S. 2. In some states, a court that hears appeals in nonfederal tax cases and can modify or change any valuation, assessment, classification, tax, or final order that is appealed. [Cases: Taxation 492.6, 1085.5, 1318.5. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 729, 1770–1772, 2048–2054.]

TAX COURT, U.S

Tax Court, U.S. A federal court that hears appeals by taxpayers from adverse IRS decisions about tax deficiencies. • The Tax Court was created in 1942, replacing the Board of Tax Appeals. — Abbr. T.C. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4645–4655. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 680–687.]

TAX CREDIT

tax credit. An amount subtracted directly from one's total tax liability, dollar for dollar, as opposed to a deduction from gross income. — Often shortened to credit. Cf. DEDUCTION(2). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3520–3537; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 58, 336–357, 489–492; Taxation § 1758.]

child- and dependent-care tax credit. A tax credit available to a person who is employed full-time and who maintains a household for a dependent child or a disabled spouse or dependent. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3520, 3534; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 58, 336–338, 341–343, 345, 347, 354, 489; Taxation § 1758.]

earned-income credit. A refundable federal tax credit on the earned income of a low-income worker with dependent children. • The credit is paid to the taxpayer even if it exceeds the total tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3532. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 346.]

foreign tax credit. A tax credit against U.S. income taxes for a taxpayer who earns income overseas and has paid foreign taxes on that income. See FOREIGN-EARNED-INCOME EXCLUSION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4098. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 481.]

“Since direct foreign investments and business operations of United States persons often attract foreign income taxes along with the baseline U.S. tax, the specter of double taxation is bound to haunt the pursuit of foreign income. The principal accommodation of the U.S. tax system to the possibility of source-based taxation by other countries is the foreign tax credit. From a simple idea — a dollar-for-dollar reduction of U.S. tax for income taxes paid to foreign countries — the foreign tax credit has evolved into an elaborate statutory structure capable of engulfing an entire professional career.” Joseph Isenbergh, International Taxation 14 (2000).

investment tax credit. A tax credit intended to stimulate business investment in capital goods by allowing a percentage of the purchase price as a credit against the taxpayer's income taxes. • The Tax Reform Act of 1986 generally repealed this credit retroactively for most property placed in service after January 1, 1986. — Abbr. ITC. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3523; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 348, 492; Taxation § 1758.] unified credit. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit.

unified estate-and-gift tax credit. A tax credit applied against the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2001(c)(2). — Often shortened to unified credit. — Also termed applicable exclusion credit. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4182.30. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 541.]

TAX DEDUCTION

tax deduction. See DEDUCTION(2).

TAX DEED

tax deed. See DEED.

TAX-DEFERRED

tax-deferred, adj. Not taxable until a future date or event . [Cases: Internal Revenue 3575–3615. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 160, 206–208, 291, 294–295, 299–327.]

TAX-DEFERRED ACCOUNT

tax-deferred account. See ACCOUNT.

TAX-DEFERRED ANNUITY

tax-deferred annuity. See 403(b) plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

TAX DEFICIENCY

tax deficiency. See DEFICIENCY.

---

TAX-DEFICIENCY NOTICE

tax-deficiency notice. See NINETY-DAY LETTER.

tax evasion. The willful attempt to defeat or circumvent the tax law in order to illegally reduce one's tax liability. • Tax evasion is punishable by both civil and criminal penalties. — Also termed tax fraud. Cf. TAX AVOIDANCE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5263; Taxation 1103. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 847; Taxation § 1782.]

tax-exempt, adj. 1. By law not subject to taxation . [Cases: Internal Revenue 4045–4071; Taxation 211–250. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 327, 462–474, 670, 798; Taxation §§ 266, 275, 277–282, 287–289, 291–298, 300, 303–383, 1736–1737.] 2. Bearing interest that is free from income tax <tax-exempt municipal bonds>. — Also termed tax-free.

TAX-EXEMPT BOND

tax-exempt bond. See BOND(3).

TAX FERRET

tax ferret. A private person engaged in the business of searching for taxable property that has somehow not been taxed. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4442. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 610.]

tax foreclosure. See FORECLOSURE.

TAX FRAUD

tax fraud. See TAX EVASION.

TAX-FREE

tax-free, adj. See TAX-EXEMPT.

TAX-FREE EXCHANGE

tax-free exchange. A transfer of property for which the tax law specifically defers (or possibly exempts) income-tax consequences. • For example, a transfer of property to a controlled corporation under IRC (26 USCA) § 351(a) and a like-kind exchange under IRC (26 USCA) § 1031(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3184; Taxation 996. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 120–121, 124; Taxation §§ 1732–1733.]

tax haven. A jurisdiction, esp. a country, that imposes little or no tax on the profits from transactions carried on there or on persons resident there.

“Among the reasons for this complexity [in international taxation] is the elusive nature of tax havens. A tax haven is not always immediately obvious. What makes a particular environment a tax haven is not invariably a low rate of tax, but relations with other tax regimes that permit the ultimate deflection of income to a low-tax environment with which the income may have little indigenous connection.” Joseph Isenbergh, International Taxation 16 (2000).

TAX HOME

tax home. A taxpayer's principal business location, post, or station. • Travel expenses are tax-deductible only if the taxpayer is traveling away from home. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3343.]

TAX INCENTIVE

tax incentive. A governmental enticement, through a tax benefit, to engage in a particular activity, such as the contribution of money or property to a qualified charity.

TAX-INCREMENT FINANCING

tax-increment financing. A technique used by a municipality to finance commercial developments usu. involving issuing bonds to finance land acquisition and other up-front costs, and then using the additional property taxes generated from the new development to service the debt. — Abbr. TIF. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 953.]

TAXING DISTRICT

taxing district. See DISTRICT.

TAXING POWER

taxing power. See POWER(3).

TAX INJUNCTION ACT

tax injunction act. A federal law prohibiting a federal court from interfering with the assessment or collection of any state tax where the state affords a plain, speedy, and efficient remedy in its own courts. 28 USCA § 1341. [Cases: Federal Courts 27.]

tax law. 1. INTERNAL REVENUE CODE. 2. The statutory, regulatory, constitutional, and common-law rules that constitute the law applicable to taxation. 3. The area of legal study dealing with taxation.

TAX LEASE

tax lease. See LEASE.

TAX LEVY

tax levy. See LEVY(1).

TAX LIABILITY

tax liability. The amount that a taxpayer legally owes after calculating the applicable tax; the amount of unpaid taxes.

TAX LIEN

tax lien. See LIEN.

TAX LIST

tax list. An official schedule listing the taxable items within a jurisdiction; ROLL(2).

TAX LOOPHOLE

tax loophole. See LOOPHOLE.

TAX-LOSS CARRYBACK

tax-loss carryback. See CARRYBACK.

TAX-LOSS CARRYFORWARD tax-loss carryforward. See CARRYOVER.

TAX-LOSS CARRYOVER

tax-loss carryover. See CARRYOVER.

TAX NEGLIGENCE

tax negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

TAX-OPTION CORPORATION

tax-option corporation. See S corporation under CORPORATION.

TAXPAYER

taxpayer. One who pays or is subject to a tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3560; Taxation 57, 1011. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17, 70, 87, 362; Taxation §§ 4, 79, 85, 1701.]

TAXPAYERS' BILL OF RIGHTS

taxpayers' bill of rights. Federal legislation granting taxpayers specific rights when dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, such as the right to have representation and the right to receive written notice of a levy 30 days before enforcement.

TAXPAYERS' LISTS

taxpayers' lists. Written exhibits required of taxpayers in some taxing districts, listing all property owned by them and subject to taxation, used as a basis for assessment and valuation. Cf. ROLL(2). [Cases: Taxation 328, 366. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 483, 535–536, 541, 544.]

TAXPAYER-STANDING DOCTRINE

taxpayer-standing doctrine. Constitutional law. The principle that a taxpayer has no standing to sue the government for allegedly mispending the public's tax money unless the taxpayer can demonstrate a personal stake and show some direct injury. [Cases: Constitutional Law 42.3(2); Municipal Corporations 987. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 68–69, 76; Municipal Corporations §§ 1889–1890, 1893–1894, 1896–1897, 1900–1904.]

TAX-PREFERENCE ITEMS

tax-preference items. Certain items that, even though lawfully deducted in arriving at taxable income for regular tax purposes, must be considered in calculating a taxpayer's alternative minimum tax. See alternative minimum tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3550. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 358–361.]

TAX RATE

tax rate. A mathematical figure for calculating a tax, usu. expressed as a percentage. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

average tax rate. A taxpayer's tax liability divided by the amount of taxable income. — Also called effective tax rate.

marginal tax rate. In a tax scheme, the rate applicable to the last dollar of income earned by the taxpayer. • This concept is useful in calculating the tax effect of receiving additional income or claiming additional deductions. See TAX BRACKET.

TAX-RATE SCHEDULE

tax-rate schedule. A schedule used to determine the tax on a given level of taxable income and based on a taxpayer's status (for example, married filing a joint income-tax return). — Also termed tax table. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

TAX REBATE

tax rebate. See TAX REFUND.

TAX REDEMPTION

tax redemption. See REDEMPTION.

TAX REFUND

tax refund. Money that a taxpayer overpaid and is thus returned by the taxing authority. — Also termed tax rebate. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4950; Taxation 535, 904, 1097. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 780; Social Security and Public Welfare § 207; Taxation §§ 910–914, 919, 1679, 1690, 1764, 1978–1981.]

TAX RETURN

tax return. An income-tax form on which a person or entity reports income, deductions, and exemptions, and on which tax liability is calculated. — Often shortened to return. — Also termed income-tax return. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4470; Taxation 1079.1, 1313. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 547, 575, 631; Taxation § 2038.]

amended return. A return filed after the original return, usu. to correct an error in the original. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4479; Taxation 1079.1, 1313. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 636; Taxation § 2038.]

consolidated return. A return that reflects combined financial information for a group of affiliated corporations. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3865–3880; Taxation 1080. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17–18, 638; Taxation § 1699.]

information return. A return, such as a W-2, filed by an entity to report some economic information related to, but other than, tax liability.

joint return. A return filed together by spouses. • A joint return can be filed even if only one spouse had income, but each spouse is usu. individually liable for the tax payment. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4481; Taxation 1079.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 335, 637.]

separate return. A return filed by each spouse separately, showing income and liability. • Unlike with a joint return, each spouse is individually liable only for taxes due on the separate return. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4481; Taxation 1079.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 335, 637.]

TAX-RETURN PRIVILEGE

tax-return privilege. See PRIVILEGE(3).

TAX ROLL

tax roll. See ROLL(2).

TAX SALE

tax sale. See SALE.

TAX SHELTER

tax shelter, n. A financial operation or investment strategy (such as a partnership or real-estate investment trust) that is created primarily for the purpose of reducing or deferring income-tax payments. • The Tax Reform Act of 1986 — by restricting the deductibility of passive losses — sharply limited the effectiveness of tax shelters. — Often shortened to shelter. — tax-sheltered, adj.

TAX-SHELTERED ANNUITY

tax-sheltered annuity. See 403(b) plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

TAX SITUS

tax situs (sI-t<<schwa>>s). A state or jurisdiction that has a substantial connection with assets that are subject to taxation. [Cases: Taxation 97. C.J.S. Taxation § 153.]

---

TAX-STRADDLE RULE

tax-straddle rule. A rule preventing undue deferral of tax on income or conversion of ordinary income or short-term capital gain into long-term capital gain by disallowing the premature deduction of a loss on sale or disposition of one leg of a straddle position (e.g., a promise to sell offset by a promise to buy, such as in futures contracts) while retaining the other, offsetting leg or position. • This practice has been greatly restricted by the requirement that gains and losses on commodities transactions must be reported based on their value at year end. IRC (26 USCA) § 165(c)(2). See STRADDLE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3397.]

tax table. See TAX-RATE SCHEDULE.

TAX TITLE

tax title. See TITLE(2).

TAX WARRANT

tax warrant. See WARRANT(1).

TAX WRITE-OFF

tax write-off. A deduction of depreciation, loss, or expense. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3310–3442, 3470–3505; Taxation 1031.1–1044. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 33, 58, 140, 150–171, 173–180, 182–184, 186–190, 192–196, 198–205, 212, 215–249, 251–265, 267, 270–283, 286, 409, 489, 671, 673, 799–800; Taxation §§ 1738–1755.]

TDA.abbr. UNITED STATES TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT AGENCY.

TEACH

teach,vb. Patents. 1. (Of a patent specification) to instruct (a person of ordinary skill in the art how to make and use an invention). [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.] 2. (Of a prior-art reference) to anticipate (the invention's being examined) by discussing, describing, or analyzing the invention's essential elements or technology. • In this sense, prior art that discourages an inventor from pursuing an invention “teaches away from” that invention. A teaching raises a statutory bar to an invention's patentability. [Cases: Patents 65. C.J.S. Patents § 49.]

teamwork. Work done by a team; esp., work by a team of animals as a substantial part of one's business, such as farming, express carrying, freight hauling, or transporting material. • In some jurisdictions, animals (such as horses) that work in teams are exempt from execution on a civil judgment.

tempus deliberandi (tem-p<<schwa>>s di-lib-<<schwa>>-ran-dI), n. [Latin] Hist. The period allowed for deliberation; esp., the time during which an heir could consider whether to accept or reject an inheritance. Cf. JUS DELIBERANDI.

tempus lugendi (tem-p<<schwa>>s loo-gen-DI).n. See LUCTUS.

tempus semestre (tem-p<<schwa>>s si-mes-tr<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] A period of 182 days (half a year).

tempus utile (tem-p<<schwa>>s yoo-t<<schwa>>-lee), n. [Latin “useful time”] Hist. Time that one can use to exercise his or her legal rights; the period within which an action or proceeding must be brought. • This is the period before prescription or limitation cuts off a right.

TENANCY

tenancy. 1. The possession or occupancy of land under a lease; a leasehold interest in real estate. 2. The period of such possession or occupancy. See ESTATE(1). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 3. The possession of real or personal property by right or title, esp. under a conveying instrument such as a deed or will.

at-will tenancy. See tenancy at will.

common tenancy. See tenancy in common.

cotenancy. A tenancy with two or more coowners who have unity of possession. • Examples are a joint tenancy and tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1; Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

entire tenancy. A tenancy possessed by one person, as opposed to a joint or common tenancy. See estate by entirety under ESTATE(1).

general tenancy. A tenancy that is not of fixed duration under the parties' agreement. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 114(3). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5).]

holdover tenancy. See tenancy at sufferance.

joint tenancy. A tenancy with two or more coowners who take identical interests simultaneously by the same instrument and with the same right of possession. • A joint tenancy differs from a tenancy in common because each joint tenant has a right of survivorship to the other's share (in some states, this right must be clearly expressed in the conveyance — otherwise, the tenancy will be presumed to be a tenancy in common). See RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP. Cf. tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9.]

“The rules for creation of a joint tenancy are these: The joint tenants must get their interests at the same time. They must become entitled to possession at the same time. The interests must be physically undivided interests, and each undivided interest must be an equal fraction of the whole — e.g., a one-third undivided interest to each of three joint tenants. The joint tenants must get their interests by the same instrument — e.g., the same deed or will. The joint tenants must get the same kinds of estates — e.g., in fee simple, for life, and so on.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 55 (2d ed. 1984).

periodic tenancy. A tenancy that automatically continues for successive periods — usu. month to month or year to year — unless terminated at the end of a period by notice. • A typical example is a month-to-month apartment lease. This type of tenancy originated through court rulings that, when the lessor received a periodic rent, the lease could not be terminated without reasonable notice. — Also termed tenancy from period to period; periodic estate; estate from period to period; (more specif.) month-to-month tenancy (or estate); year-to-year tenancy (or estate). [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 160; Landlord and Tenant 114, 115. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors § 257; several tenancy.A tenancy that is separate and not held jointly with another person.

tenancy at sufferance.A tenancy arising when a person who has been in lawful possession of property wrongfully remains as a holdover after his or her interest has expired. • A tenancy at sufferance takes the form of either a tenancy at will or a periodic tenancy. — Also termed holdover tenancy; estate at sufferance. See HOLDING OVER. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 119, 120. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 167–168, 172, 175–176, 182.]

“A tenancy at sufferance arises where a tenant, having entered upon land under a valid tenancy, holds over without the landlord's assent or dissent. Such a tenant differs from a trespasser in that his original entry was lawful, and from a tenant at will in that his tenancy exists without the landlord's assent. No rent, as such, is payable, but the tenant is liable to pay compensation for his use and occupation of the land. The tenancy may be determined [i.e., terminated] at any time, and may be converted into a yearly or other periodic tenancy in the usual way, e.g., if rent is paid and accepted with reference to a year in circumstances where the parties intended there to be a tenancy.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 319 (6th ed. 1993).

tenancy attendant on the inheritance.A tenancy for a term that is vested in a trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. • The tenancy is a form of personal property to the trustee. — Also termed tenancy attendant on an inheritance; term attendant on the inheritance.

tenancy at will.A tenancy in which the tenant holds possession with the landlord's consent but without fixed terms (as for duration or rent); specif., a tenancy that is terminable at the will of either the transferor or the transferee and that has no designated period of duration. • Such a tenancy may be terminated by either party upon fair notice. — Also termed at-will tenancy; estate at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 118, 120. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 157, 166–168, 172, 182.]

tenancy by the entirety (en-tī-<<schwa>>r-tee). See estate by entirety under ESTATE(1). [Cases: Husband and Wife 14.2–14.11.]

“Tenancy by the entireties is a form of joint tenancy. It resembles joint tenancy in that upon the death of either husband or wife the survivor automatically acquires title to the share of the deceased spouse. Like a joint tenancy, also, it is necessary for the creation of a tenancy by the entireties that the husband and wife acquire title by the same deed or will.” Robert Kratovil, Real Estate Law 198 (6th ed. 1974).

“Where [tenancy by the entirety] is recognized, it may exist only between a husband and a wife. It resembles, in most respects, the joint tenancy. The only major difference is that a tenant by the entirety may not destroy the other spouse's right of survivorship by transferring his or her interest to another. Whether a tenant by the entirety may transfer any interest to a third party — for example, the right of present possession or the contingent right of survivorship — is a matter on which the states differ. Most take the view that no interest may be transferred. The husband and wife may, of course, together convey their estate to a third person. If they both wish to convert their tenancy into a tenancy in common or a joint tenancy, they may do so. Upon the death of a tenant by the entirety, no interest passes, in theory, to the surviving spouse. As was true of the joint tenancy, the survivor's ownership is thought simply to expand to absorb the relinquished ownership of the decedent.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 55 (2d ed. 1984).

“A tenancy by the entireties could exist in any estate, whether in fee, for life, for years or otherwise. The nature of the tenancy was virtually that of an unseverable joint tenancy; neither husband nor wife could dispose of any interest in the land without the concurrence of the other, nor could one of them cause a forfeiture of the land. The united of husband and wife was regarded as so complete that they were said to be seised ‘per tout et non per mie,’ the survivor being entitled to the whole of the land by force of the original limitation, discharged of the other's right to participate, and not, as in the case of joint tenancy, by virtue of survivorship on the death of the other tenant. Unlike joint tenants, neither tenant was regarded as having any potential share in the land; ‘between husband and wife there are no moieties.’ ” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 232–33 (4th ed. 1969) (quoting Marquis of Winchester's Case, 3 Co. Rep. 1a, 5a (1583)).

tenancy by the rod. See COPYHOLD.

tenancy by the verge. See COPYHOLD.

tenancy for a term. A tenancy whose duration is known in years, weeks, or days from the moment of its creation. — Also termed tenancy for a period; tenancy for years; term for years; term of years; estate for a term; estate for years; lease for years. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 113–116. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 130(1, 2), 131–135, 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5), 137–141, 143, 145–148, 151–155.]

tenancy from period to period. See PERIODIC TENANCY.

tenancy in common. A tenancy by two or more persons, in equal or unequal undivided shares, each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. — Also termed common tenancy; estate in common. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

“The central characteristic of a tenancy in common is simply that each tenant is deemed to own by himself, with most of the attributes of independent ownership, a physically undivided part of the entire parcel.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 54 (2d ed. 1984).

tenancy in coparcenary. See COPARCENARY.

tenancy in fee. See FEE SIMPLE.

tenancy in gross. A tenancy for a term that is outstanding — that is, one that is unattached to or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, such as one that is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance.

tenancy in tail. See FEE TAIL.

tenancy par la verge. See COPYHOLD.

year-to-year tenancy. See periodic tenancy.

TENANT

tenant, n. 1. One who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of right or title. See TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).]

copyhold tenant. See customary tenant.

customary tenant. A tenant holding by the custom of the manor. • Over time, customary tenants became known as copyhold tenants. See COPYHOLD.

“The lord has a court; in that court the tenant in villeinage, even though he be personally unfree, appears as no mere tenant at will, but as holding permanently, often heritably, on fairly definite terms. He is a customary tenant, customarius, consuetudinarius; he holds according to the custom of the manor.... Then gradually ... [d]ealings with villein tenements are set forth upon the rolls of the lord's court; the villein tenement is conceived to be holden ‘by roll of court,’ or even ‘by copy of court roll,’ and the mode of conveyance serves to mark off the most beneficial of villeinholds from the most onerous of freeholds .... In Henry III's time this process which secured for the tenant in villeinage a written, a registered title, and gave him the name of ‘copyholder,’ was but beginning ....” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 361, 375 (2d ed. 1899).

dominant tenant. The person who holds a dominant estate and therefore benefits from an easement. Cf. servient tenant. [Cases: Easements 2. C.J.S. Easements §§ 6, 21, 53–55.]

holdover tenant. A person who remains in possession of real property after a previous tenancy (esp. one under a lease) expires, thus giving rise to a tenancy at sufferance. — Sometimes shortened to holdover. See tenancy at sufferance under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 114(3). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5).]

hypothetical tenant. See HYPOTHETICAL TENANT.

illusory tenant. 1. A fictitious person who, as the landlord's alter ego, subleases an apartment to permit the landlord to circumvent rent-law regulations. 2. A tenant whose business is to sublease rent-controlled apartments. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.16. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 551.11.]

joint tenant. See joint tenancy under TENANCY.

life tenant. See LIFE TENANT.

particular tenant. A tenant of a limited estate taken out of a fee. See particular estate under ESTATE(1).

prime tenant. A commercial or professional tenant with an established reputation that leases substantial, and usu. the most preferred, space in a commercial development. • A prime tenant is important in securing construction financing and in attracting other desirable tenants.

quasi-tenant. A sublessee that the new tenant or reversioner allows to hold over.

servient tenant. The person who holds a servient estate and is therefore burdened by an easement. Cf. dominant tenant. [Cases: Easements 2. C.J.S. Easements §§ 6, 21, 53–55.]

statutory tenant. A person who is legally entitled to remain on property after the tenancy expires.

tenant at sufferance. A tenant who has been in lawful possession of property and wrongfully remains as a holdover after the tenant's interest has expired. • The tenant may become either a tenant at will or a periodic tenant. — Also termed permissive tenant. See tenancy at will; periodic tenancy.

tenant by elegit. See ELEGIT.

tenant by the curtesy. A life tenant who receives the estate from his deceased wife by whom he has had legitimate children. • The children hold the remainder interest. See CURTESY.

tenant by the verge. See COPYHOLDER.

tenant for a term. A tenant whose tenancy is for a defined number of years, months, weeks, or days, set when the tenancy is created.

tenant for life. See LIFE TENANT.

tenant in chief. Hist. A person who held land directly of the king. — Also termed tenant in capite. See IN CAPITE.

tenant in common. One of two or more tenants who hold the same land by unity of possession but by separate and distinct titles, with each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. See tenancy in common under TENANCY. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

tenant in demesne (di-maynor di-meen). A feudal tenant who holds land of, and owes services to, a tenant in service.

tenant in dower. A life tenant who is entitled to hold and use one-third of all the real property owned by her deceased husband. See DOWER.

tenant in fee. The owner of land held in fee. — Also termed tenant in fee simple.

“A tenant in fee simple is [one who owns] lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever; generally, absolutely, and simply, without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of the law. An estate in fee simple is an estate of inheritance without condition, belonging to the owner, and alienable by him or transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply; it is an estate or interest in land of one holding tend,vb.1. To be disposed toward (something).2. To serve, contribute, or conduce in some degree or way; to have a more or less direct bearing or effect. 3. To be directed or have a tendency to (an end, object, or purpose).

TEN-DAY RULE

ten-day rule. The doctrine that one who sells goods on credit and then learns that the buyer is insolvent has ten days after the buyer receives the goods to demand their return. • The seller has even longer to demand return if the buyer has made a written representation of solvency to the seller within three months before delivery. [Cases: Sales 316(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 325–326, 339–343.]

tender, n.1. A valid and sufficient offer of performance; specif., an unconditional offer of money or performance to satisfy a debt or obligation < a tender of delivery >. • The tender may save the tendering party from a penalty for nonpayment or nonperformance or may, if the other party unjustifiably refuses the tender, place the other party in default. Cf. OFFER OF PERFORMANCE ; CONSIGNATION. [Cases: Contracts 279; Sales 153, 185; Vendor and Purchaser 148, 170. C.J.S. Contracts § 548; Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 380–382, 409–416, 419.]

tender of delivery. A seller's putting and holding conforming goods at the buyer's disposition and giving the buyer any notification reasonably necessary to take delivery. • The manner, time, and place for tender are determined by the agreement and by Article 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code. [Cases: Sales 153. C.J.S. Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182.]

tender of performance. An obligor's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to perform the obligation; esp., a buyer's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to pay the purchase money, or a seller's offer to deliver merchantable title. • An offer to perform is usually necessary to hold the defaulting party to a contract liable for breach. [Cases: Contracts 279. C.J.S. Contracts § 548.]

2. Something unconditionally offered to satisfy a debt or obligation. [Cases: Tender 1, 10. C.J.S. Tender §§ 2–3, 5, 7, 26–28.] 3. Contracts. Attempted performance that is frustrated by the act of the party for whose benefit it is to take place. • The performance may take the form of either a tender of goods or services, or a tender of payment. Although this sense is quite similar to sense 1, it differs in making the other party's refusal part of the definition itself.

perfect tender. A seller's tender that meets the contractual terms entered into with the buyer concerning the quality and specifications of the goods sold. See PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Sales 153, 177. C.J.S. Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182, 189, 194, 197–198.]

4. An offer or bid put forward for acceptance . [Cases: Public Contracts 8. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 7, 12–13.] 5. Something that serves as a means of payment, such as coin, banknotes, or other circulating medium; money <legal tender >. [Cases: Payment 10; United States 34. C.J.S. United States §§ 162–163.] — tender, vb.

tender offer. A public offer to buy a minimum number of shares directly from a corporation's shareholders at a fixed price, usu. at a substantial premium over the market price, in an effort to take control of the corporation. — Also termed takeover offer; takeover bid. Cf. public-exchange offer under OFFER. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.30–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–122, 127–128, 131–138, 140–141.]

“Broadly speaking, a direct solicitation of a corporation's stockholders to sell their shares to an acquirer is known as a tender offer (because the acquirer is asking the existing stockholders to tender their shares for sale).” Franklin A. Gevurtz, Corporation Law § 7.3, at 673 (2000).

cash tender offer. A tender offer in which the bidder offers to pay cash for the target's shares, as opposed to offering other corporate shares in exchange. • Most tender offers involve cash. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.30–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–122, 127–128, 131–138, 140–141.]

creeping tender offer. See creeping acquisition under ACQUISITION.

tender of issue. Common-law pleading. A form attached to a traverse, by which the traversing party refers the issue to the proper mode of trial. [Cases: Pleading 100, 112. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 183, 764, 769.]

“[I]t is the object of all pleadings to bring the parties, in the course of their mutual altercations, to an issue that is a single entire point, affirmed on the one side and denied on the other; and it is to effect this object that the above rule was established. There can be no arrival at this point until one or the other of the parties, by the conclusion of his pleading, offers an issue for the acceptance of his opponent, and this offer is called the ‘tender of issue.’ ” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 254, at 446 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE

tender-years doctrine. Family law. The doctrine holding that custody of very young children (usu. five years of age and younger) should generally be awarded to the mother in a divorce unless she is found to be unfit. • This doctrine has been rejected in most states and replaced by a presumption of joint custody. See MATERNAL-PREFERENCE PRESUMPTION; PRIMARY-CAREGIVER DOCTRINE . [Cases: Child Custody 457. C.J.S. Parent and Child § 114.]

TENDER-YEARS HEARSAY EXCEPTION

[Cases: States 4.16. C.J.S. States §§ 25–26.]

tenure (ten-y<<schwa>>r), n.1. A right, term, or mode of holding lands or tenements in subordination to a superior. • In feudal times, real property was held predominantly as part of a tenure system. 2. A particular feudal mode of holding lands, such as socage, gavelkind, villeinage, and frankalmoign.

“Most of the feudal incidents and consequences of socage tenure were expressly abolished in New York by the act of 1787; and they were [later] wholly and entirely annihilated by the New York Revised Statutes .... They were also abolished by statute in Connecticut, 1793; and they have never existed, or they have ceased to exist, in all essential respects, in every other state. The only feudal fictions and services to be retained in any part of the United States consist of the feudal principle, that the lands are held of some superior or lord, to whom the obligation of fealty, and to pay a determinate rent, are due.... The lord paramount of all socage land was none other than the people of the state, and to them, and them only, the duty of fealty was to be rendered ....” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *509–10 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

base tenure. Hist. The holding of property in villeinage rather than by military service or free service. See VILLEINAGE.

lay tenure. Hist. Any tenure not held through religious service, such as a base tenure or a freehold tenure. • The three historical types of lay tenures are knight-service, socage, and serjeanty. See KNIGHT-SERVICE; SOCAGE; SERJEANTY. Cf. tenure by divine service.

military tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to military service, such as knight-service, grand serjeanty, and cornage. — Also termed tenure in chivalry.

spiritual tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to religious exercises, such as frankalmoign and tenure by divine service.

tenure ad furcam et flagellum (ad f<<schwa>>r-k<<schwa>>m et fl<<schwa>>-jel<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Tenure by gallows and whip. • This was the meanest of the servile tenures — the bondman was at the disposal of the lord for life and limb.

tenure by divine service.Hist. A tenure obligating the tenant to perform an expressly defined divine service, such as singing a certain number of masses or distributing a fixed sum of alms. Cf. lay tenure.

tenure in chivalry.See military tenure.

villein tenure.See VILLEINAGE.

3. A status afforded to a teacher or professor as a protection against summary dismissal without sufficient cause. • This status has long been considered a cornerstone of academic freedom. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 8.1(2); Schools 133.6. C.J.S. Colleges and Universities § 24; Schools and School Districts §§ 222–223, 226–228, 236–238.] 4. More generally, the legal protection of a long-term relationship, such as employment. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 60. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 119, 130, 134.] — tenurial (ten-yuur-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj.

TENURED FACULTY

TERGIVERSATIO

tergiversatio (t<<schwa>>r-jiv-<<schwa>>r-say-shee-oh), n. [Latin “being reluctant, hanging back”] Roman law. A delay tactic, esp. an accuser's failure to pursue a criminal charge, perhaps by not appearing at the trial. • To withdraw an accusation, it was necessary to obtain the court's permission for an annulment (abolitio). In A.D. 61, a law was passed by which anyone convicted of tergiversatio was subject to a fine. See CALUMNIA. Cf. PRAEVARICATIO. Pl. tergiversationes (t<<schwa>>r-jiv-<<schwa>>r-say-shee-oh-neeZ).

TERM

term,n.1. A word or phrase; esp., an expression that has a fixed meaning in some field <term of art>.2. A contractual stipulation <the delivery term provided for shipment within 30 days>. See CONDITION(3).

essential term.See fundamental term.

fundamental term. 1. A contractual provision that must be included for a contract to exist; a contractual provision that specifies an essential purpose of the contract, so that a breach of the provision through inadequate performance makes the performance not only defective but essentially different from what had been promised. [Cases: Contracts 9(1), 15. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 33, 35–36, 38, 42–43.] 2. A contractual provision that must be included in the contract to satisfy the statute of frauds. — Also termed essential term; vital term. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 113.]

implied term.A provision not expressly agreed to by the parties but instead read into the contract by a court as being implicit. • An implied term should not, in theory, contradict the contract's express terms. [Cases: Contracts 168. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 346–347.]

material term.A contractual provision dealing with a significant issue such as subject matter, price, payment, quantity, quality, duration, or the work to be done. [Cases: Contracts 9. C.J.S. Contracts § 42.]

nonessential term.See nonfundamental term.

nonfundamental term.Any contractual provision that is not regarded as a fundamental term. — Also termed nonessential term; nonvital term. [Cases: Contracts 9(1), 15. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 33, 35–36, 38, 42–43.]

vital term.See fundamental term.

3. (pl.) Provisions that define an agreement's scope; conditions or stipulations <terms of sale>.4. A fixed period of time; esp., the period for which an estate is granted <term of years>.

attendant term.A long period (such as 1,000 years) specified as the duration of a mortgage, created to protect the mortgagor's heirs' interest in the land by not taking back title to the land once it is paid for, but rather by assigning title to a trustee who holds the title in trust for the mortgagor and the mortgagor's heirs. • This arrangement gives the heirs another title to the property in case the interest they inherited proves somehow defective. These types of terms have been largely abolished. See tenancy attendant on the inheritance under TENANCY. [Cases: Mortgages 54. C.J.S. Mortgages § 102.]

satisfied term.A term of years in land that has satisfied the purpose for which it was created before the term's expiration.

term for deliberating.The time given a beneficiary to decide whether to accept or reject an inheritance or other succession.

term in gross.A term that is unattached to an estate or inheritance. See tenancy in gross under TENANCY.

term of years. 1. A fixed period covering a precise number of years. — Also termed tenancy for a term. 2.English law. A fixed period covering less than a year, or a specified number of years and a fraction of a year. • This sense applies under a seminal English statute — the Law of Property Act of 1925.

“In effect, ‘term of years’ seems to mean a term for any period having a fixed and certain duration as a minimum. Thus, in addition to a tenancy for a specified number of years (e.g., ‘to X for ninety-nine years’), such tenancies as a yearly tenancy or a weekly tenancy are ‘terms of years’ within the definition, for there is a minimum duration of a year or a week respectively. But a lease ‘for the life of X’ cannot exist as a legal estate, and the same, perhaps, applies to tenancies at will or at sufferance (if they are estates at all) for their duration is wholly uncertain.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 74 (6th ed. 1993).

5. The period or session during which a court conducts judicial business <the most recent term was busy indeed>. — Also termed (in sense 5) term of court. See SESSION. [Cases: Courts 63. C.J.S. Courts §§ 111–113, 120.] additional term.A distinct, added term to a previous term. [Cases: Courts 64. C.J.S. Courts § 119.]

adjourned term.A continuance of a previous or regular term but not a separate term; the same term prolonged. [Cases: Courts 66. C.J.S. Courts § 115.]

appearance term.The regular judicial term in which a party is required to appear, usu. the first one after legal service has been made.

civil term.The period during which a civil court hears cases.

criminal term.A term of court during which indictments are found and returned, and criminal trials are held.

equity term.The period during which a court tries only equity cases.

general term.A regular term of court — that is, the period during which a court ordinarily sits. — Also termed stated term. [Cases: Courts 63. C.J.S. Courts §§ 111–113, 120.]

regular term.A term of court begun at the time appointed by law and continued, in the court's discretion, until the court lawfully adjourns. [Cases: Courts 63. C.J.S. Courts §§ 111–113, 120.]

special term.A term of court scheduled outside the general term, usu. for conducting extraordinary business. [Cases: Courts 64. C.J.S. Courts § 119.]

stated term.See general term.

term probatory.Eccles. law. 1. The period given to the promoter of an ecclesiastical suit to produce witnesses and prove the case. 2.Hist. The time assigned for taking testimony. — Sometimes termed (in sense 2) probatory term.

term to conclude.Eccles. law. A deadline imposed by the judge for all parties to renounce any further exhibits and allegations.

term to propound all things.Eccles. law. A deadline imposed by the judge for the parties to exhibit all evidence supporting their positions.

6.Hist. English law. One of the four periods in a year during which the courts are in session to conduct judicial business. • Terms came into use in the 13th century, and their dates varied. The four terms — Hilary, Easter, Trinity, and Michaelmas — were abolished by the Judicature Acts of 1873–1875, and the legal year was divided into sittings and vacations. Terms are still maintained by the Inns of Court to determine various time periods and dates, such as a call to the bar or observance of a Grand Day.

TERRITORIALISM

territorialism. The traditional approach to choice of law, whereby the place of injury or of contract formation determines which state's law will be applied in a case. See CHOICE OF LAW.

TERRITORIALITY

territoriality.Int'l law. The principle that a nation has the right of sovereignty within its borders.

“Three maxims formulated by the seventeenth-century Dutch scholar Ulrich Huber undergird the modern concept of territoriality: (1) a state's laws have force only within the state's boundaries; (2) anyone found within the state's boundaries is subject to the state's authority; and (3) comity will discipline sovereign exercises of authority so that the territorial effect of each state's laws is respected.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 64 (2001).

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION

territorial jurisdiction.See JURISDICTION.

TERRITORIAL LAW

territorial law.The law that applies to all persons within a given territory regardless of their citizenship or nationality. Cf. PERSONAL LAW.

“[T]he expression ‘territorial law’ ... is not confined to the positive rules that regulate acts and events occurring within the jurisdiction, but includes also rules for the choice of law. English rules for the choice of law are part of the law of England and when a court, for instance, tests the substantial validity of a contract made by two foreigners in Paris by reference to French law, it applies a rule imposed by the English sovereign and it may accurately be described as putting into force part of the territorial law of England.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 32 (6th ed. 1961).

TERRITORIAL PROPERTY

territorial property.Land and water over which a state has jurisdiction and control, whether the legal title is held by the state or by a private individual or entity. • Lakes and waters wholly within a state are generally its property, as is the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property. non-self-governing territory. Int'l law. A territory that is governed by another country. • These types of territories are rarely allowed representation in the governing country's legislature.

trust territory. Int'l law. A territory to which the United Nations' international trusteeship system formerly applied; a territory once administered by the United Nations or a member state for the political, economic, educational, and social advancement of its inhabitants. • All territories that were subject to this system either became independent nations or opted to become part of another nation.

2. A part of the United States not included within any state but organized with a separate legislature (such as Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands). Cf. COMMONWEALTH(2); DEPENDENCY(1). [Cases: Territories 7. C.J.S. Territories §§ 2, 5, 7, 9–10.] — territorial, adj. “The United States has had territories from its inception. The Northwest Territory, along with the thirteen original states, was a part of the nation when the constitution was ratified. The original U.S. constitution expressly granted Congress the power to govern territories. Before the Civil War all of the territories were on the North American continent and contiguous with the states or the other territories. After the Civil War with the purchase of Alaska in 1867 (called ‘Seward's Folly’ or ‘Seward's Icebox’ by detractors) came the United States' first acquisition of non-contiguous territory. Alaska did, however, have certain basics in common with earlier U.S. territories. Alaska was on the North American continent and sparsely populated.... In the latter part of the 19th century, the U.S. became interested in various islands around the world.” Stanley K. Laughlin Jr., The Law of United States Territories and Affiliated Jurisdictions § 3.1, at 25–26 (1995).

TERRITORY OF A JUDGE

territory of a judge. The territorial jurisdiction of a particular court. See JURISDICTION(3). [Cases: Courts 29, 171; Judges 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 67, 70; Judges §§ 71–74.]

testamenti factio (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tifak-shee-oh). [Latin “right to make a testament”] Roman law. 1. Broadly, the capacity to take part in a will, as testator, heir, or witness. 2. The capacity to make a will, open to any citizen, male or female, sui juris, and over puberty. • This term is sometimes known as “active” testamenti factio or testamenti factio activa, though the latter phrase was not known to the Roman law. 3. The capacity to receive property by will. • Junian Latini and peregrini did not have this capacity. It is also known as “passive” testamenti factio or testamenti factio passiva, though the latter phrase was (like testamenti factio activa) unknown to the Roman law. See LATINI JUNIANI; PEREGRINUS<sup>4</sup>. The capacity to witness a will. • Women did not have this capacity. — Also termed factio testamenti.

TESTAMENTUM

testamentum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. A will. • In early and classical law, the mancipatory will was standard. It was still used in the Later Empire but in A.D. 446, the holographic will was accepted in the Western Empire. A will could also be made by registration on the court acta. See holographic will, mancipatory will under WILL.

testamentum calatis comitiis (k<<schwa>>-lay-tis k<<schwa>>-mish-ee-is). [Latin “will made before the comitia curiata”] Roman law. In early Rome, a will made before the comitia curiata, having an effect comparable to adrogation. • The comitia curiata was known as the comitia calata when it met twice a year for the purpose of making wills. See comitia curiata under COMITIA.

testamentum holografum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m hol-<<schwa>>-graf-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See holographic will under WILL.

testamentum in procinctu (in pr<<schwa>>-singk-t[y]oo). [Latin “will made before the army”] Roman law. A will made by a soldier before a fellow soldiers while preparing for battle.

testamentum militum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m mil-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See soldier's will under WILL.

testamentum tripartitum (trI-p<<schwa>>-r-tI-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “tripartite will”] Roman law. A will made without interruption, with seven witnesses to seal it, and signed by the testator. • This form of will was valid in Justinian's law. It was called “tripartite” because the authority for various parts of it derived from three sources: the civil law (requiring that the will be made at one and the same time before witnesses); the praetor's edict (requiring that there be seven witnesses and that they must seal it); and imperial constitutions (requiring that the testator must sign at the end).

TESTATE

testate (tes-tayt), adj. Having left a will at death <she died testate>. Cf. INTESTATE. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.]

TESTATOR

testator (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>r also te-stay-t<<schwa>>r). A person who has made a will; esp., a person who dies leaving a will. • Because this term is usu. interpreted as applying to both sexes, testatrix has become archaic. — Also termed testate. Cf. INTESTATE. [Cases: Wills 21–55. C.J.S. Indians § 117; Wills §§ 2, 4–40.]

TESTATRIX

testatrix (te-stay-triks ortes-t<<schwa>>-triks).Archaic. A female testator. • In modern usage, a person who leaves a will is called a testator, regardless of sex. Pl. testatrixes, testatrices.

TESTATUM

testatum (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “attested”] Hist. A writ issued in a county where a defendant or a defendant's property is located when venue lies in another county. • This writ, when issued after a ground writ, allowed the seizure of the defendant or the defendant's property in another county. — Also termed testatum bill; testatum writ; latitat (lat-<<schwa>>-tat). Cf. ground writ under WRIT.

“But if the defendant had removed into another county, the next process the plaintiff might sue out against him was a testatum bill, directed to the sheriff thereof, which soon gained the name of a latitat, from that word being within it.” 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xxxv (3d ed. 1787).

TESTATUM CLAUSE

testatum clause. See TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE.

TESTATUS

testatus (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Civil law. See TESTATOR.

TEST CASE

test case. See CASE.

TESTE

teste (tes-tee). [Latin teste meipso “I myself being a witness”] In drafting, the clause that states the name of a witness and evidences the act of witnessing. — Also termed teste of process; teste of writ.

TESTIFIER

testifier. One who testifies; WITNESS. — Also termed (archaically) testificator (tes-t<<schwa>>-fi-kay-t<<schwa>>r).

TESTIFY

testify, vb. 1. To give evidence as a witness <she testified that the Ford Bronco was at the defendant's home at the critical time>. [Cases: Witnesses 224. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 390–392.] 2. (Of a person or thing) to bear witness <the incomplete log entries testified to his sloppiness>.

TESTIFYING EXPERT

testimonial immunity. See IMMUNITY(3).

TESTIMONIAL INCAPACITY

testimonial incapacity. See INCAPACITY.

TESTIMONIAL PRIVILEGE

testimonial privilege. See PRIVILEGE(1).

TESTIMONIAL PROOF

testimonial proof. See PROOF.

TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE

testimonium clause. A provision at the end of an instrument (esp. a will) reciting the date when the instrument was signed, by whom it was signed, and in what capacity. • This clause traditionally begins with the phrase “In witness whereof.” — Also termed testatum clause; witness clause. Cf. ATTESTATION CLAUSE. [Cases: Wills 111(2). C.J.S. Wills §§ 240–252.]

TESTIMONY

testimony,n. Evidence that a competent witness under oath or affirmation gives at trial or in an affidavit or deposition. — Also termed personal evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 33; Witnesses 224. C.J.S. Trial §§ 141–142; Witnesses §§ 390–392.] — testimonial,adj.

affirmative testimony.Testimony about whether something occurred or did not occur, based on what the witness saw or heard at the time and place in question. — Also termed positive testimony; (formerly) statement of fact. See direct evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Evidence 586. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 339, 1309, 1328.]

cumulative testimony.Identical or similar testimony by more than one witness, and usu. by several, offered by a party usu. to impress the jury with the apparent weight of proof on that party's side. • The trial court typically limits cumulative testimony. [Cases: Criminal Law 675; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 56. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1212; Trial § 183.]

dropsy testimony.Slang. A police officer's false testimony that a fleeing suspect dropped an illegal substance that was then confiscated by the police and used as probable cause for arresting the suspect. • Dropsy testimony is sometimes given when an arrest has been made without probable cause, as when illegal substances have been found through an improper search.

“Before [Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961)], the policeman typically testified that he had stopped the defendant for little or no reason, searched him, and found narcotics on his person. This had the ring of truth. It was an illegal search (not based upon ‘probable cause’), but the evidence was admissible because Mapp had not yet been decided. Since it made no difference, the policeman testified truthfully. After, the decision in Mapp it made a great deal of difference. [¶] For the first few months, New York policemen continued to tell the truth about the circumstances of their searches, with the result that evidence was suppressed. Then the police made the great discovery that if the defendant drops the narcotics on the ground, after which the policeman arrests him, then the search is reasonable and the evidence is admissible. Spend a few hours in the New York City Criminal Court nowadays and you will hear case after case in which a policeman testifies that the defendant dropped the narcotics on the ground whereupon the policeman arrested him. [¶] Usually the very language of the testimony is identical from one case to another. This is now known among defense lawyers and prosecutors as ‘dropsy’ testimony. The judge has no reason to disbelieve it in any particular case, and of course the judge must decide each case on its own evidence, without regard to the testimony in other cases. Surely, though, not in every case was the defendant unlucky enough to drop his narcotics.” Irving Younger, “The Perjury Routine,” The Nation, May 3, 1967, at 596–97.

false testimony.Testimony that is untrue. • This term is broader than perjury, which has a state-of-mind element. Unlike perjury, false testimony does not denote a crime. — Also termed false evidence.

interpreted testimony. Testimony translated because the witness cannot communicate in the language of the tribunal. [Cases: Witnesses 230. C.J.S. Witnesses § 399.]

lay opinion testimony. Evidence given by a witness who is not qualified as an expert but who testifies to opinions or inferences. • In federal court, the admissibility of this testimony is limited to opinions or inferences that are rationally based on the witness's perception and that will be helpful to a clear understanding of the witness's testimony or the determination of a fact in issue. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Criminal Law 449.1–467; Evidence 470–503.]

mediate testimony. See secondary evidence under EVIDENCE.

negative testimony. See negative evidence under EVIDENCE.

nonverbal testimony. A photograph, drawing, map, chart, or other depiction used to aid a witness in testifying. • The witness need not have made it, but it must accurately represent something that the witness saw. See demonstrative evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 437; Evidence 358, 359. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1039, 1049; Evidence §§ 985–987, 991.]

opinion testimony. Testimony based on one's belief or idea rather than on direct knowledge of the facts at issue. • Opinion testimony from either a lay witness or an expert witness may be allowed in evidence under certain conditions. See opinion evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 448–494; Evidence 470–574. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 853, 1050–1088; Evidence §§ 223, 509–759, 800–812; Executions § 435.]

positive testimony. See affirmative testimony.

testimony de bene esse (dee bee-nee es-ee also day ben-ay es-ay). Testimony taken because it is in danger of being lost before it can be given at a trial or hearing, usu. because of the impending death or departure of the witness. • Such testimony is taken in aid of a pending case, while testimony taken under a bill to perpetuate testimony is taken in anticipation of future litigation. See deposition de bene esse under DEPOSITION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1291; Pretrial Procedure 61. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 1, 3–4, 9.]

written testimony. 1. Testimony given out of court by deposition or affidavit. • The recorded writing, signed by the witness, is considered testimony. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1932; Pretrial Procedure 201. C.J.S. Discovery § 69; Pretrial Procedure §§ 109–114, 122–124.] 2. In some administrative agencies and courts, direct narrative testimony that is reduced to writing, to which the witness swears at a hearing or trial before cross-examination takes place in the traditional way. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 461; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 33. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 129; Trial §§ 141–142.]

testing clause. Scots law. The clause at the end of a formal written instrument or deed by which it is authenticated according to the forms of law. • Traditionally, the clause states the name and address of the writer, the number of pages in the instrument, any alterations or erasures, the names and addresses of the witnesses, the name and address of the person who penned the instrument, and the date and place of signing.

TESTIS

testis. [Latin] Hist. A witness. — testes,pl.

TEST OATH

test oath.See oath of allegiance under OATH.

TEST PAPER

test paper.A writing that has been proved genuine and submitted to a jury as a standard by which to determine the authenticity of other writings. • The court decides the test paper's authenticity as a matter of law before it is used by the jury. Direct evidence, such as a witness to the writing's creation or an admission by the party, is preferred, but strong circumstantial evidence is usu. acceptable. In Pennsylvania, a paper or instrument shown to the jury as evidence is still called a test paper (sometimes written test-paper).

TEXAS BALLOT

Texas ballot.See BALLOT(4).

TEXTBOOK DIGEST

textbook digest.A legal text whose aim is to set forth the law of a subject in condensed form, with little or no criticism or discussion of the authorities cited, and no serious attempt to explain or reconcile apparently conflicting decisions.

TEXTUAL CITATION

textual citation.See CITATION(4).

TEXTUALISM

textualism. See STRICT CONSTRUCTIONISM.

THALWEG

thalweg (tahl-vayk or -veg).1. A line following the lowest part of a (usu. submerged) valley. 2. The middle of the primary navigable channel of a waterway, constituting the boundary between states. — Also spelled talweg. — Also termed midway. [Cases: States 12.1.]

live thalweg.The part of a river channel that is most followed, usu. at the middle of the principal channel. Louisiana v. Mississippi, 466 U.S. 96, 104 S.Ct. 1645 (1984).

THAYER PRESUMPTION

Thayer presumption.A presumption that allows the party against whom the presumption operates to come forward with evidence to rebut the presumption, but that does not shift the burden of proof to that party. See James B. Thayer, A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence 31–44

(1898). • Most presumptions that arise in civil trials in federal court are interpreted in this way. Fed. R. Evid. 301. Cf. MORGAN PRESUMPTION. [Cases: Criminal Law 324; Evidence 85, 89. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 695; Evidence §§ 131, 135, 152–156, 160.]

theft, n.1. The felonious taking and removing of another's personal property with the intent of depriving the true owner of it; larceny. [Cases: Larceny 1. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.] 2. Broadly, any act or instance of stealing, including larceny, burglary, embezzlement, and false pretenses. • Many modern penal codes have consolidated such property offenses under the name “theft.” — Also termed (in Latin) crimen furti. See LARCENY.

“[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of ‘larceny.’ This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny. To avoid this difficulty some states have employed another word to designate a statutory offense made up of a combination of larceny, embezzlement, and false pretenses. And the word used for this purpose is ‘theft.’ ‘Theft’ is not the name of any common-law offense. At times it has been employed as a synonym of ‘larceny,’ but for the most part has been regarded as broader in its general scope. Under such a statute it is not necessary for the indictment charging theft to specify whether the offense is larceny, embezzlement or false pretenses.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389–90 (3d ed. 1982).

petty theft. A theft of a small quantity of cash or of low-value goods or services. • This offense is usu. a misdemeanor.

theft by deception. The use of trickery to obtain another's property, esp. by (1) creating or reinforcing a false impression (as about value), (2) preventing one from obtaining information that would affect one's judgment about a transaction, or (3) failing to disclose, in a property transfer, a known lien or other legal impediment. Model Penal Code § 223. [Cases: False Pretenses 1.]

theft by extortion. Larceny in which the perpetrator obtains property by threatening to (1) inflict bodily harm on anyone or commit any other criminal offense, (2) accuse anyone of a criminal offense, (3) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or impair one's credit or business reputation, (4) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action, (5) bring about or continue a strike, boycott, or other collective unofficial action, if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group in whose interest the actor purports to act, (6) testify or provide information or withhold testimony or information with respect to another's legal claim or defense, or (7) inflict any other harm that would not benefit the actor. Model Penal Code § 223.4. — Also termed larceny by extortion. See EXTORTION. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

theft by false pretext.The use of a false pretext to obtain another's property. [Cases: False Pretenses 1.]

theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake.Larceny in which one obtains control of property the person knows to be lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake (esp. in the amount of property or identity of recipient) and fails to take reasonable measures to restore the property to the rightful owner. Model Penal Code § 223.5. — Also termed larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. [Cases: Larceny 10. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 18, 49.]

theft of services.The act of obtaining services from another by deception, threat, coercion, stealth, mechanical tampering, or using a false token or device. See Model Penal Code § 223.7.

THEFTBOTE

theftbote (theft-boht). See BOTE(2).

THEFTUOUS

theftuous (thef-choo-<<schwa>>s), adj.1. (Of an act) characterized by theft. 2. (Of a person) given to stealing. — Also spelled theftous.

THENCE

thence,adv.1. From that place; from that time. • In surveying, and in describing land by courses and distances, this word, preceding each course given, implies that the following course is continuous with the one before it <south 240 feet to an iron post, thence west 59 feet>.2. On that account; therefore.

THENCE DOWN THE RIVER

thence down the river.With the meanders of a river. • This phrase appears in the field notes of patent surveyors, indicating that the survey follows a meandering river unless evidence shows that the meander line as written was where the surveyor in fact ran it. Meander lines show the general course of the river and are used in estimating acreage, but are not necessarily boundary lines. See MEANDER LINE. [Cases: Boundaries 12. C.J.S. Boundaries § 25.]

THEOCRACY

theocracy (thee-ok-r<<schwa>>-see).1. Government of a state by those who are believed to be or represent that they are acting under the immediate direction of God or some other divinity. 2. A state in which power is exercised by ecclesiastics.

THEODOSIAN CODE

Theodosian Code (thee-<<schwa>>-doh-sh<<schwa>>n).Roman law. A compilation of imperial enactments prepared at the direction of the emperor Theodosius II and published in A.D. 438. • The Theodosian Code replaced all other imperial legislation from the time of Constantine I (A.D. 306–337), and remained the basis of Roman law until it was superseded by the first Justinian Code in A.D. 529. — Also termed (in Latin) Codex Theodosianus (koh-deks thee-<<schwa>>-doh-shee-ay-n<<schwa>>s).

“As a literary work the Theodosian Code has a dismal reputation .... Some quaestors possessed an elegant, powerful, or agreeably ornate style.... Against these may be set others with literary pretensions whose prose is ponderous or marred by excessive alliteration, assonance, pleonasm, or fondness for technical terms, or whose compositions are in other ways inept.” Tony Honoré, Law in the Crisis of the Empire 379–455 AD 21 (1998).

THEOLONIO

theolonio. See DE THEOLONIO.

THEORY OF LAW

theory of law. The legal premise or set of principles on which a case rests.

THEORY-OF-PLEADING DOCTRINE

theory-of-pleading doctrine. The principle — now outmoded — that one must prove a case exactly as pleaded. • Various modern codes and rules of civil procedure have abolished this strict pleading-and-proof requirement. For example, Fed. R. Civ. P. 15 allows amendment of pleadings to conform to the evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 881; Pleading 370. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 763, 766–768, 770.]

THEORY OF THE CASE

theory of the case. A comprehensive and orderly mental arrangement of principles and facts, conceived and constructed for the purpose of securing a judgment or decree of a court in favor of a litigant; the particular line of reasoning of either party to a suit, the purpose being to bring together certain facts of the case in a logical sequence and to correlate them in a way that produces in the decision-maker's mind a definite result or conclusion favored by the advocate. See CAUSE OF ACTION(1).

THERAPEUTIC ABORTION

therapeutic abortion. See ABORTION.

THERAPEUTIC RELIEF

therapeutic relief. See RELIEF.

THEREABOUTS

thereabouts, adv. Near that time or place <Schreuer was seen in Rudolf Place or thereabouts>. — Also termed thereabout.

Inside or within that thing; inside or within those things <there were three school buses with 108 children therein>.3. In that regard, circumstance, or particular <therein lies the problem>.

thereinafter,adv. Later in that thing (such as a speech or document) <the book's first reference was innocuous, but the five references thereafter were libelous per se>.

THEREOF

thereof,adv. Of that, it, or them <although the disease is spreading rapidly, the cause thereof is unknown>.

THEREON

thereon,adv. On that or them <Michaels found the online reports of the cases and relied thereon instead of checking the printed books>. — Also termed thereupon.

thereto,adv. To that place, thing, issue, or the like <the jury awarded $750,000 in actual damages, and it added thereto another $250,000 in punitive damages>. — Also termed thereunto.

THERETOFORE

theretofore,adv. Until that time; before that time <theretofore, the highest award in such a case has been $450,000>.

THEREUNDER

thereunder,adv. Under that or them <on the top shelf were three books, and situated thereunder was the missing banknote> <section 1988 was the relevant fee statute, and the plaintiffs were undeniably proceeding thereunder>.

THEREUNTO

thereunto,adv. See THERETO.

THEREUPON

thereupon,adv.1. Immediately; without delay; promptly <the writ of execution issued from the court, and the sheriff thereupon sought to find the judgment debtor>.2.THEREON. 3.THEREFORE.

THESAURI INVENTIO

thesauri inventio (thi-sawr-I in-ven-shee-oh). [Latin “discovery of treasure”] Roman law. The principle according to which the finder of treasure acquires full or partial ownership of it.

THESAURUS

THIRD AMENDMENT

Third Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified as part of the Bill of Rights in 1791, prohibiting the quartering of soldiers in private homes except during wartime.

THIRD COUSIN

third cousin. See COUSIN.

THIRD DEGREE

third degree, n. The process of extracting a confession or information from a suspect or prisoner by prolonged questioning, the use of threats, or physical torture <the police gave the suspect the third degree>.

THIRD-DEGREE INSTRUCTION

third-degree instruction. See ALLEN CHARGE.

THIRD-DEGREE MURDER

third-degree murder. See MURDER.

THIRD OPPOSITION

third opposition. Civil law. A species of intervention, usu. in a real-property case, in which the third party asserts a claim of ownership or other real right to seized property, and the claim does not depend on the outcome of the original suit between the plaintiff and the defendant. La. Code Civ. Proc. art. 1092. See, e.g., Atkins v. Smith, 15 So. 2d 855 (La. 1943). See INTERVENTION(1).

third party, n. A person who is not a party to a lawsuit, agreement, or other transaction but who is usu. somehow implicated in it; someone other than the principal parties. — Also termed outside party; third person. See PARTY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.] — third-party, adj.

third-party, vb. To bring (a person or entity) into litigation as a third-party defendant <seeking indemnity, the defendant third-partied the surety>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.]

THIRD-PARTY ACTION

third-party action. See ACTION(4).

third person. See THIRD PARTY.

THIRD POSSESSOR

third possessor. Civil law. A person who acquires mortgaged property but is not personally bound by the obligation secured by the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 177. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 253, 256–257.]

THIRD WORLD

Third World. Int'l law. 1. DEVELOPING COUNTRY. 2. The group of nations (esp. in Africa and Asia) not aligned with major powers, whether Western democracies (i.e., the First — or Free — World) or countries that were formerly part of the Soviet bloc (i.e., the Second World). • Although Third World nations are often underdeveloped, the term Third World properly may denote only their political, not their economic, status.

THIRD WORLD COUNTRY

Third World country. See DEVELOPING COUNTRY.

THIRTEENTH AMENDMENT

Thirteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1865, that abolished slavery and involuntary servitude. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 482–486.]

“The thirteenth amendment is fairly unique in two respects. First, it contains an absolute bar to the existence of slavery or involuntary servitude; there is no requirement of ‘state action.’ Thus it is applicable to individuals as well as states .... Secondly, like the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, it contains an enforcement clause, enabling Congress to pass all necessary legislation.” John E. Nowak & Ronald D. Rotunda, Constitutional Law § 15.6, at 918 (4th ed. 1991).

30(B)(6) DEPOSITION

30(b)(6) deposition. See DEPOSITION.

THIRTY-DAY LETTER

thirty-day letter. A letter that accompanies a revenue agent's report issued as a result of an Internal Revenue Service audit or the rejection of a taxpayer's claim for refund and that outlines the taxpayer's appeal procedure before the Internal Revenue Service. • If the taxpayer does not request any such procedure within the 30-day period, the IRS will issue a statutory notice of deficiency. — Also written 30-day letter. Cf. NINETY-DAY LETTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5044.]

threat, n. 1. A communicated intent to inflict harm or loss on another or on another's property, esp. one that might diminish a person's freedom to act voluntarily or with lawful consent . [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

terroristic threat. A threat to commit any crime of violence with the purpose of (1) terrorizing another, (2) causing the evacuation of a building, place of assembly, or facility of public transportation, (3) causing serious public inconvenience, or (4) recklessly disregarding the risk of causing such terror or inconvenience. Model Penal Code § 211. See TERRORISM. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

2. An indication of an approaching menace <the threat of bankruptcy>. 3. A person or thing that might well cause harm <Mrs. Harrington testified that she had never viewed her husband as a threat>. — threaten, vb. — threatening, adj.

THREATENED SPECIES

THREE-MILE LIMIT

three-mile limit. The distance of one marine league or three miles offshore, usu. recognized as the limit of territorial jurisdiction. [Cases: International Law 5. C.J.S. International Law §§ 14–20.]

THREE-STEP TEST

three-step test. Copyright. An analysis of an infringement defense under TRIPs and the Berne Convention, looking at whether the defendant's use of a protected work (1) is inherently limited to special cases, (2) did not conflict with the owner's normal exploitation of the work, and (3) did not unreasonably prejudice the legitimate interests of the owner. • The test is analogous to the analysis under the fair-use doctrine in U.S. law.

THREE-STRIKES LAW

three-strikes law. Slang. A statute prescribing an enhanced sentence, esp. life imprisonment, for a repeat offender's third felony conviction. • About half the states have enacted a statute of this kind. — Also termed three-strikes-and-you're-out law. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1200–1219. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1463, 1472, 1638–1643, 1645–1647, 1650–1653.]

three wicked sisters. Slang. The three doctrines — contributory negligence, the fellow-servant rule, and assumption of the risk — used by 19th-century courts to deny recovery to workers injured on the job.

“These three common law defenses, contributory negligence, fellow servant rule, and assumption of the risk, became known as the ‘three wicked sisters,’ because of their preclusive effect on the ability of injured workers to recover.... By precluding application of the traditional respondeat superior concept for acts of fellow servants and by presuming that workers assumed the risks associated with their employment, courts made it extremely difficult for employees to recover from their employers for the increasing number of work-related injuries.... By the late 1800s, courts began to recognize the harsh results generated by rote application of the fellow servant, assumption of the risk, and contributory negligence doctrines.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 7.2, at 404 (1994).

threshold. Parliamentary law. The number or proportion of votes needed for election.

THRESHOLD CONFESSION

THROUGH LOT

through lot. A lot that abuts a street at each end.

THROUGH RATE

through rate. The total shipping cost when two or more carriers are involved. • The carriers agree in advance on a through rate, which is typically lower than the sum of the separate rates. [Cases: Carriers 26. C.J.S. Carriers §§ 138–140.]

THROWAWAY

throwaway, n. Slang. 1. An unemancipated minor whose parent or caregiver has forced him or her to leave home. 2. A runaway whose parent or caregiver refuses to allow him or her to return home. Cf. RUNAWAY.

THROWBACK RULE

throwback rule. Tax. 1. In the taxation of trusts, a rule requiring that an amount distributed in any tax year that exceeds the year's distributable net income must be treated as if it had been distributed in the preceding year. • The beneficiary is taxed in the current year although the computation is made as if the excess had been distributed in the previous year. If the trust did not have undistributed accumulated income in the preceding year, the amount of the throwback is tested against each of the preceding years. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 665–668. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4019. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 450–452.] 2. A taxation rule requiring a sale that would otherwise be exempt from state income tax (because the state to which the sale would be assigned for apportionment purposes does not have an income tax, even though the seller's state does) to be attributed to the seller's state and thus subjected to a state-level tax. • This rule applies only if the seller's state has adopted a throwback rule.

THROW OUT

throw out, vb. To dismiss (a claim or lawsuit).

THUMBPRINT

TIDAL

tidal, adj. Affected by or having tides. • For a river to be “tidal” at a given spot, the water need not necessarily be salt, but the spot must be one where the tide, in the ordinary and regular course of things, flows and reflows.

TIDE

tide. The rising and falling of seawater that is produced by the attraction of the sun and moon, uninfluenced by special winds, seasons, or other circumstances that create meteorological and atmospheric meteorological tides; the ebb and flow of the sea. • Tides are used to measure a shore's upland boundary.

mean high tide. The average of all high tides, esp. over a period of 18.6 years. — Also termed ordinary high tide.

mean lower low tide. The average of lower low tides over a fixed period.

mean low tide. The average of all low tides — both low and lower low — over a fixed period.

neap tide (neep). A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is lower than average because it occurs during the first or last quarter of the moon, when the sun's attraction partly counteracts the moon's.

ordinary high tide. See mean high tide.

spring tide. A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is higher than average because it occurs during the new moon and full moon.

TIDELAND

tideland. Land between the lines of the ordinary high and low tides, covered and uncovered successively by the ebb and flow of those tides; land covered and uncovered by the ordinary tides. [Cases: Navigable Waters 36(3).]

TIDESMAN

tidesman. English law. A customhouse officer appointed to watch or attend upon ships until the customs are paid. • A tidesman boards a ship at its arrival in the mouth of the Thames and comes up with the tide. See CUSTOMHOUSE.

TIDEWATER

tidewater. Water that falls and rises with the ebb and flow of the tide. • The term is not usu. applied to the open sea, but to coves, bays, and rivers.

TIME

time. 1. A measure of duration. 2. A point in or period of duration at or during which something is alleged to have occurred. 3.Slang.A convicted criminal's period of incarceration.

dead time.Time that does not count for a particular purpose, such as time not included in calculating an employee's wages or time not credited toward a prisoner's sentence. • The time during which a prisoner has escaped, for example, is not credited toward the prisoner's sentence. — Also termed nonrun time.

earned time.A credit toward a sentence reduction awarded to a prisoner who takes part in activities designed to lessen the chances that the prisoner will commit a crime after release from prison. • Earned time, which is usu. awarded for taking educational or vocational courses, working, or participating in certain other productive activities, is distinct from good time, which is awarded simply for refraining from misconduct. Cf. good time. [Cases: Prisons 15. C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners § 153.] flat time.A prison term that is to be served without the benefit of time-reduction allowances for good behavior and the like.

good time.The credit awarded to a prisoner for good conduct, which can reduce the duration of the prisoner's sentence. Cf. GOOD BEHAVIOR; earned time. [Cases: Prisons 15. C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners § 153.]

jail-credit time.See JAIL CREDIT.

nonrun time.See dead time.

street time.The time that a convicted person spends on parole or on other conditional release. • If the person's parole is revoked, this time may or may not be credited toward the person's sentence, depending on the jurisdiction and the particular conditions of that person's parole. See dead time.

time out of mind. See TIME IMMEMORIAL.

TIME-PLACE-OR-MANNER RESTRICTION

time-place-or-manner restriction. Constitutional law. A government's limitation on when, where, or how a public speech or assembly may occur, but not on the content of that speech or assembly. • As long as such restrictions are narrowly tailored to achieve a legitimate governmental interest, they do not violate the First Amendment. — Also written time, place, or manner restriction. — Also termed time-place-and-manner restriction. See PUBLIC FORUM .

TIME POLICY

time policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

TIME-PRICE DIFFERENTIAL

time-price differential. 1. A figure representing the difference between the current cash price of an item and the total cost of purchasing it on credit. [Cases: Consumer Credit 4; Usury 32. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 124–125, 280, 284–293.] 2. The difference between a seller's price for immediate cash payment and a different price when payment is made later or in installments.

TIME-PRICE DOCTRINE

time-price doctrine. The rule that if a debt arises out of a purchase and sale, the usury laws do not apply. • If a higher price is charged for a deferred payment than for an immediate payment, the difference between the time price and the cash price is deemed compensation to the seller for the risk that the buyer will default and for the interest that the seller could have earned on an immediate payment. Because the buyer can usually choose to postpone a purchase and save up the cash price, the buyer does not have the same status as a needy borrower who must deal with a potentially predatory lender.

TIME-SHARING

time-sharing, n. Joint ownership or rental of property (such as a vacation condominium) by several persons who take turns occupying the property. — Also termed time-share. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.] — time-share, vb.

TIMESHEET

timesheet. 1. An employee's record of time spent on the job. 2. An attorney's daily record of billable and nonbillable hours, used to generate clients' bills. — Formerly also termed time check. See BILLABLE HOUR.

TIME-SHIFTING

time-shifting. The practice of recording a broadcast for viewing at a later time. • Time-shifting was found to be a noninfringing fair use of videotape recorders in Sony Corp. v. Universal Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 104 S.Ct. 774 (1984). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 67.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 51–52, 54.]

TIME UNITY

time unity. See unity of time under UNITY.

TIME VALUE

time value. The price associated with the length of time that an investor must wait until an investment matures or the related income is earned. Cf. YIELD TO MATURITY .

TIMOCRACY

timocracy (tĭ-mok-r<<schwa>>-see). 1. An aristocracy of property; government by propertied, relatively rich people. 2. A government in which the rulers' primary motive is the love of honor.

TIN PARACHUTE

tin parachute. An employment-contract provision that grants a corporate employee (esp. one below the executive level) severance benefits in the event of a takeover. • These benefits are typically less lucrative than those provided under a golden parachute. — Also termed silver parachute. Cf. GOLDEN PARACHUTE.

TIP

tip, n.1. A piece of special information; esp., in securities law, advance or inside information passed from one person to another. See INSIDE INFORMATION; INSIDER TRADING. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(2). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 180.] 2. A gratuity for service given. • Tip income is taxable. IRC (26 USCA) § 61(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3163; Taxation 986.1.]

TIPPEE

tippee. Securities. A person who acquires material nonpublic information from someone in a fiduciary relationship with the company to which that information pertains. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(5). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 184.]

TIPPER

tipper. Securities. A person who possesses material inside information and who selectively discloses that information for trading or other personal purposes <the tippee traded 5,000 shares after her conversation with the tipper>. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(5). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 184.]

TIPLING HOUSE

tippling house. See PUBLIC HOUSE.

TIPSTAFF

tipstaff. A court crier. • The name derives from the crier's former practice of holding a staff tipped with silver as a badge of office. See CRIER(1). [Cases: Courts 58. C.J.S. Courts § 108.] Pl. tipstaves, tipstaffs.

TIP-STAVE

tip-stave. See SERVITOR OF BILLS.

TITHE

tithe (tĭth), n.1. A tenth of one's income, esp. in reference to a religious or charitable gift or obligation. [Cases: Religious Societies 15. C.J.S. Religious Societies §§ 53–54.] 2. Hist. A small tax or assessment, esp. in the amount of one-tenth. — tithe, vb. — tithable, adj.

“A tithe was the right of a rector to a tenth part of the produce of all the land in his parish. In some cases a rector was an individual, while in others the rectory was vested in a monastery, which appointed a vicar to perform the necessary ecclesiastical duties ‘vicariously’ for the monastery. On the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII many rectories passed into the royal hands and were granted to laymen; the result was that the right to tithes in many cases passed into lay hands. Like advowsons, tithes were deemed to be land in which the various estates could exist.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 415 (4th ed. 1969).

great tithe.(usu. pl.) A tithe paid in kind and therefore considered more valuable than other tithes. • The great tithes often consisted of corn, peas, beans, hay, and wood.

mixed tithes.A tithe consisting of a natural product, such as milk or wool, obtained or cultivated by human effort.

“A second species of incorporeal hereditaments is that of tithes ... the first species being usually called predial, as of corn, grass, hops, and wood; the second mixed, as of wool, milk, pigs, etc., consisting of natural products, but nurtured and preserved in part by the care of man; and of these the tenth must be paid in gross: the third personal, as of manual occupations, trades, fisheries, and the like; and of these only the tenth part of the clear gains and profits is due.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 24 (1766).

personal tithe.A tithe of profits from manual occupations or trades.

predial tithe.A tithe of crops (such as corn). — Also spelled praedial tithe.

vicarial tithe (vI-kair-ee-<<schwa>>l). A small tithe payable to a vicar.

TITHE OF AGISTMENT

tithe of agistment (<<schwa>>-jist-m<<schwa>>nt).Hist. A church-levied charge on grazing land. • The tithe was paid by the occupier of the land rather than the person whose cattle grazed on the land. See AGISTMENT.

TITHING

tithing. See DECENNARY.

TITIUS HERES ESTO

Titius heres esto (tish-ee-<<schwa>>s heer-eez es-toh). [Latin] Roman law. Let Titius be my heir. • The phrase was the testamentary form for appointing an heir. Titius was a fictitious name often used by way of example in legal writing, esp. in forms.

TITLE

title. 1. The union of all elements (as ownership, possession, and custody) constituting the legal right to control and dispose of property; the legal link between a person who owns property and the property itself <no one has title to that land>.2. Legal evidence of a person's ownership rights in property; an instrument (such as a deed) that constitutes such evidence < record your title with the county clerk>.

“Though employed in various ways, [title] is generally used to describe either the manner in which a right to real property is acquired, or the right itself. In the first sense, it refers to the conditions necessary to acquire a valid claim to land; in the second, it refers to the legal consequences of such conditions. These two senses are not only interrelated, but inseparable: given the requisite conditions, the legal consequences or rights follow as of course; given the rights, conditions necessary for the creation of those rights must have been satisfied. Thus, when the word 'title' is used in one sense, the other sense is necessarily implied." Kent McNeil, Common Law Aboriginal Title 10 (1989).

aboriginal title. 1. Land ownership, or a claim of land ownership, by an indigenous people in a place that has been colonized. — Also termed native title. 2. INDIAN TITLE.

absolute title. An exclusive title to land; a title that excludes all others not compatible with it. See fee simple absolute under FEE SIMPLE. [Cases: Estates in Property 5. C.J.S. Estates §§ 11–12.]

adverse title. A title acquired by adverse possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession 106. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 247, 339.]

after-acquired title. Title held by a person who bought property from a seller who acquired title only after purporting to sell the property to the buyer. See AFTER-ACQUIRED-TITLE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 8. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 6.]

apparent title. See COLOR OF TITLE.

bad title. 1. See defective title. 2. See unmarketable title.

clear title. 1. A title free from any encumbrances, burdens, or other limitations. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2), 133. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 326, 330.] 2. See marketable title. — Also termed good title.

defeasible title. A title voidable on the occurrence of a contingency, but not void on its face. [Cases: Estates in Property 6. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14.]

defective title. A title that cannot legally convey the property to which it applies, usu. because of some conflicting claim to that property. — Also termed bad title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 314.]

derivative title. 1. A title that results when an already existing right is transferred to a new owner. 2. The general principle that a transferee of property acquires only the rights held by the transferor and no more. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 210. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 464.]

dormant title. A title in real property held in abeyance.

doubtful title. A title that exposes the party holding it to the risk of litigation with an adverse claimant. See unmarketable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129(1), 130(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 314–319, 321–322, 326.]

equitable title. A title that indicates a beneficial interest in property and that gives the holder the right to acquire formal legal title. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), an equitable title was enforceable only in a court of chancery, not of law. Cf. legal title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 54. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 145–146.]

good title. 1. A title that is legally valid or effective. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2), 133. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 326, 330.] 2. See clear title (1). 3. See marketable title.

imperfect title. A title that requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass land in fee, or that does not convey full and absolute dominion.

Indian title. See INDIAN TITLE.

just title. In a case of prescription, a title that the possessor received from someone whom the possessor honestly believed to be the real owner, provided that the title was to transfer ownership of the property. [Cases: Adverse Possession 69. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 66, 73, 75, 103, 105.]

legal title. A title that evidences apparent ownership but does not necessarily signify full and complete title or a beneficial interest. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), a legal title was enforceable only in a court of law, not chancery. Cf. equitable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 54. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 145–146.]

lucrative title. Civil law. A title acquired without giving anything in exchange for the property; title by which a person acquires anything that comes as a clear gain, as by gift, descent, or devise. • Because lucrative title is usu. acquired by gift or inheritance, it is treated as the separate property of a married person. Cf. onerous title.

marketable title. A title that a reasonable buyer would accept because it appears to lack any defect and to cover the entire property that the seller has purported to sell; a title that enables a purchaser to hold property in peace during the period of ownership and to have it accepted by a later purchaser who employs the same standards of acceptability. — Also termed good title; merchantable title; clear title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 324.]

“One definition of a marketable title which has been put forward repeatedly is one free from all reasonable doubt. Stated another way, a marketable title is one which does not contain any manner of defect or outstanding interest or claim which may conceivably operate to defeat or impair the interest which is bargained for and is intended to be conveyed. This negative concept of marketability has become an implied invitation for courts to declare titles unmarketable if an examiner has entertained any doubt whatever with respect to them. The digests attest the painful truth that claims of a bygone era cling like barnacles to land titles and encumber them long after they should have been scraped clean.... We need to replace this negative approach by a positive one which will make the marketability of titles depend solely upon their state during some recent interval of time rather than upon their entire history.” Paul E. Basye, Clearing Land Titles § 371, at 539 (1953).

native title. See aboriginal title (1).

onerous title (on-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>s). 1. Civil law. A title acquired by giving valuable consideration for the property, as by paying money or performing services. 2. A title to property that is acquired during marriage through a spouse's skill or labor and is therefore treated as community property. Cf. lucrative title.

original title. A title that creates a right for the first time.

paper title. See record title.

paramount title. 1. Archaic. A title that is the source of the current title; original title. 2. A title that is superior to another title or claim on the same property.

particular title. Civil law. A title acquired from an ancestor by purchase, gift, or inheritance before or after the ancestor's death.

perfect title. 1. FEE SIMPLE. 2. A grant of land that requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land. 3. A title that does not disclose a patent defect that may require a lawsuit to defend it. 4. A title that is good both at law and in equity. 5. A title that is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt.

presumptive title. A title of the lowest order, arising out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue that possession.

record title. A title as it appears in the public records after the deed is properly recorded. — Also termed title of record; paper title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 132, 231(1). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 328, 496.]

singular title. The title by which one acquires property as a singular successor.

tax title. A title to land purchased at a tax sale. [Cases: Taxation 726–743. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1354–1401.]

title by descent. A title that one acquires by law as an heir of the deceased owner.

title by devise. A title created by will.

title by estoppel. Title acquired from a person who did not have title at the time of a purported conveyance with a warranty but later acquired the title, which then inures to the benefit of the grantee.

title by prescription. A title acquired by prescription. See PRESCRIPTION (5). [Cases: Adverse Possession 106. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 247, 339.]

title defective in form. A title for which some defect appears on the face of the deed, as opposed to a defect that arises from circumstances or extrinsic evidence. • Title defective in form cannot be the basis of prescription. See PRESCRIPTION(5). [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 314.]

title of entry.The right to enter upon lands.

title of record.See record title.

universal title.A title acquired by a conveyance causa mortis of a stated portion of all the conveyor's property interests so that on the conveyor's death the recipient stands as a universal successor.

unmarketable title.A title that a reasonable buyer would refuse to accept because of possible conflicting interests in or litigation over the property. — Also termed bad title; unmerchantable title; nonmerchantable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 326.]

3. The heading of a statute or other legal document <the title of the contract was “Confidentiality Agreement”>. [Cases: Contracts 152; Statutes 109–126. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 307, 318–322, 327, 331; Statutes §§ 209–242.]

general title.A statute's name that broadly and comprehensively identifies the subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. restrictive title.

long title.The full, formal title of a statute, usu. containing a brief statement of legislative purpose.

“The first Acts of Parliament did not have titles. The first time that an Act of Parliament was given a title was about 1495. Even when the long title came to be added to each Act of Parliament as a matter of course, as it did from about 1513, the long title was not regarded as part of the Act of Parliament itself. Today, however, the position is different: the long title is part of the Act of Parliament.” D.J. Gifford & John Salter, How to Understand an Act of Parliament 19 (1996).

“Because Parliament's clerks, rather than Parliament, provided the titles of acts, the traditional rule has been that the title could not be used for interpretive purposes.... This is no longer the practice in most English-speaking jurisdictions, for the long title, and often a short title as well, are part of the legislative bill from the very beginning. In the United States, most state constitutions require the legislative enactment to have a title that gives accurate notice of the contents of the law.” William N. Eskridge Jr. & Elizabeth Garrett, Legislation 831 (2001).

restrictive title.A statute's name that narrowly identifies the particular subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. general title.

TITLE SEARCH

title search. An examination of the public records to determine whether any defects or encumbrances exist in a given property's chain of title. • A title search is typically conducted by a title company or a real-estate lawyer at a prospective buyer's or mortgagee's request. [Cases: Abstracts of Title 1–3; Vendor and Purchaser 231(2). C.J.S. Abstracts of Title §§ 2–20; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 497–498.]

TITLE STANDARDS

title standards. Criteria by which a real-estate title can be evaluated to determine whether it is defective or marketable. • Many states, through associations of conveyancers and real-estate attorneys, still adhere to title standards. [Cases: Abstracts of Title 1–3; Vendor and Purchaser 130(2). C.J.S. Abstracts of Title §§ 2–20; Vendor and Purchaser § 326.]

TITLE STATE

title state. See TITLE THEORY.

TITLE THEORY

title theory. Property law. The idea that a mortgage transfers legal title of the property to the mortgagee, who retains it until the mortgage has been satisfied or foreclosed. • Only a few American states — known as title states, title jurisdictions, or title-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. LIEN THEORY. [Cases: Mortgages 136. C.J.S. Mortgages § 183.]

token,n.1. A sign or mark; a tangible evidence of the existence of a fact. 2. A sign or indication of an intention to do something, as when a buyer places a small order with a vendor to show good faith with a view toward later placing a larger order. 3. A coin or other legal tender. • Although token most commonly refers to a piece of metal, the term may also denote a bill or other medium of exchange.

false token. A counterfeit coin, bill, or the like.

TOLERATION

toleration, n. 1. The act or practice of permitting or enduring something not wholly approved of; the act or practice of allowing something in a way that does not hinder. 2. The allowance of opinions and beliefs, esp. religious ones, that differ from prevailing norms. 3. Archaic. Legal permission or authorization; LICENSE(1). — tolerate, vb.

TOLL

toll, n. 1. A tax or due paid for the use of something; esp., the consideration paid either to use a public road, highway, or bridge, or to maintain a booth for the sale of goods at a fair or market. [Cases: Bridges 33; Turnpikes and Toll Roads 37. C.J.S. Bridges §§ 65–69; Turnpikes and Toll Roads §§ 36, 40.] 2. A right to collect such a tax or due. 3. The privilege of being free from such a tax or due. 4. A charge for a long-distance telephone call. [Cases: Telecommunications 323.] toll, vb. 1. To annul or take away <toll a right of entry>. 2. (Of a time period, esp. a statutory one) to stop the running of; to abate <toll the limitations period>. See EQUITABLE TOLLING. 3. Hist. To raise or collect a tax or due for the use of something.

TOLLAGE

tollage (toh-lij). 1. Payment of a toll. 2. Money charged or paid as a toll. 3. The liberty or franchise of charging a toll.

TOLLING AGREEMENT

tolling agreement. An agreement between a potential plaintiff and a potential defendant by which the defendant agrees to extend the statutory limitations period on the plaintiff's claim, usu. so that both parties will have more time to resolve their dispute without litigation. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 14. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 25.]

TOLLING STATUTE

tolling statute. A law that interrupts the running of a statute of limitations in certain situations, as when the defendant cannot be served with process in the forum jurisdiction. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 43–138. C.J.S. Contracts § 582; Employer–Employee Relationship § 87; Limitations of Actions §§ 21, 81–195, 197–251, 303; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108; RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) § 16.]

TOLT

tolt (toht). Hist. A writ for removing a case pending in a court baron to a county court. — Also termed writ of tolt. See COURT BARON; county court under COURT.

“Where the disputed interest in the land was not a fee held of the king in chief but a fee held of a ‘mesne lord’ the writ was directed to him bidding him do full right between the parties in the matter of the land in question under pain of the case being removed from his court to the sheriff’s court if he failed to do justice. This removal was effected (if necessary) by the process known as 'tolt' under which a sheriff on a complaint to him in his county court of a failure of the lord to do justice ordered his bailiff to attend the lord's court and take away the plaint into the county court." Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 38 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

TOMBSTONE

tombstone.Securities. An advertisement (esp. in a newspaper) for a public securities offering, describing the security and identifying the sellers. • The term gets its name from the ad's traditional black border and plain print. — Also termed tombstone advertisement; tombstone ad. Cf. PROSPECTUS.

TON

ton. A measure of weight fixed at either 2,000 pounds avoirdupois or 20 hundredweights, each hundredweight being 112 pounds avoirdupois. [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.]

torpedo doctrine. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE.

TORRENS SYSTEM

Torrens system (tor-<<schwa>>nz ortahr-<<schwa>>nz). A system for establishing title to real estate in which a claimant first acquires an abstract of title and then applies to a court for the issuance of a title certificate, which serves as conclusive evidence of ownership. • This system — named after Sir Robert Torrens, a 19th-century reformer of Australian land laws — has been adopted in the United States by several counties with large metropolitan areas. — Also termed Torrens title system. See CAVEAT(3). [Cases: Records 9. C.J.S. Registers of Deeds §§ 2–71.]

tort (tort).1. A civil wrong, other than breach of contract, for which a remedy may be obtained, usu. in the form of damages; a breach of a duty that the law imposes on persons who stand in a particular relation to one another. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] 2. (pl.) The branch of law dealing with such wrongs.

“To ask concerning any occurrence ‘Is this a crime or is it a tort?’ is — to borrow Sir James Stephen's apt illustration — no wiser than it would be to ask concerning a man ‘Is he a father or a son?’ For he may well be both.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 543 (16th ed. 1952).

“We may ... define a tort as a civil wrong for which the remedy is a common-law action for unliquidated damages, and which is not exclusively the breach of a contract or the breach of a trust or other merely equitable obligation.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 (17th ed. 1977).

“It might be possible to define a tort by enumerating the things that it is not. It is not crime, it is not breach of contract, it is not necessarily concerned with property rights or problems of government, but is the occupant of a large residuary field remaining if these are taken out of the law. But this again is illusory, and the conception of a sort of legal garbage-can to hold what can be put nowhere else is of no help. In the first place, tort is a field which pervades the entire law, and is so interlocked at every point with property, contract and other accepted classifications that, as the student of law soon discovers, the categories are quite arbitrary. In the second, there is a central theme, or basis or idea, running through the cases of what are called torts, which, although difficult to put into words, does distinguish them in greater or less degree from other types of cases.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 1, at 2–3 (5th ed. 1984).

constitutional tort. A violation of one's constitutional rights by a government officer, redressable by a civil action filed directly against the officer. • A constitutional tort committed under color of state law (such as a civil-rights violation) is actionable under 42 USCA § 1983. — Sometimes (informally) shortened to contort. [Cases: Civil Rights 1304. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 74–87.]

dignitary tort (dig-n<<schwa>>-tair-ee). A tort involving injury to one's reputation or honor. • In the few jurisdictions in which courts use the phrase dignitary tort (such as Maine), defamation is commonly cited as an example. — Also (erroneously) termed dignatory tort. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1; Torts 8.5(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 2, 8–9, 17, 20, 34, 39, 42.]

government tort. A tort committed by the government through an employee, agent, or instrumentality under its control. • The tort may or may not be actionable, depending on whether the government is entitled to sovereign immunity. A tort action against the U.S. government is regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act, while a state action is governed by the state's tort claims act. See FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT; sovereign immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: Municipal Corporations 723. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 661–663.]

intentional tort. A tort committed by someone acting with general or specific intent. • Examples include battery, false imprisonment, and trespass to land. — Also termed willful tort. Cf. NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Torts 4. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2, 23.]

marital tort. A tort by one spouse against the other. • Since most jurisdictions have abolished interspousal tort immunity, courts have had to decide which tort claims to recognize between married persons. Among those that some, but not all, courts have chosen to recognize are assault and battery, including claims for infliction of sexually transmitted disease, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. — Also termed domestic tort. Cf. husband–wife immunity under IMMUNITY.

maritime tort. Any tort within the admiralty jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty 17. C.J.S.

Admiralty §§ 62–63.]

mass tort.A civil wrong that injures many people. • Examples include toxic emissions from a factory, the crash of a commercial airliner, and contamination from an industrial-waste-disposal site. Cf. toxic tort.

negligent tort.A tort committed by failure to observe the standard of care required by law under the circumstances. See NEGLIGENCE.

personal tort.A tort involving or consisting in an injury to one's person, reputation, or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property. [Cases: Torts 7. C.J.S. Torts § 90.]

prenatal tort. 1. A tort committed against a fetus. • If born alive, a child can sue for injuries resulting from tortious conduct predating the child's birth. [Cases: Death 15; Infants 72(2). C.J.S. Death §§ 34, 36, 68; Infants §§ 218–219.] 2. Loosely, any of several torts relating to reproduction, such as those giving rise to wrongful-birth actions, wrongful-life actions, and wrongful-pregnancy actions. [Cases: Health 686, 687.]

prima facie tort (prĪ-m<<schwa>> fay-shee-ee or -shee or -sh<<schwa>>). An unjustified, intentional infliction of harm on another person, resulting in damages, by one or more acts that would otherwise be lawful. • Some jurisdictions have established this tort to provide a remedy for malicious deeds — esp. in business and trade contexts — that are not actionable under traditional tort law. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.]

public tort.A minor breach of the law (such as a parking violation) that, although it carries a criminal punishment, is considered a civil offense rather than a criminal one because it is merely a prohibited act (malum prohibitum) and not inherently reprehensible conduct (malum in se). — Also termed civil offense. Cf. civil wrong under WRONG; public delict under DELICT. [Cases: Criminal Law 26, 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12, 44–45, 1110.]

quasi-tort. A wrong for which a nonperpetrator is held responsible; a tort for which one who did not directly commit it can nonetheless be found liable, as when a master is held liable for a tort committed by a servant. — Also spelled quasi tort. See vicarious liability under LIABILITY; RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR.[Cases: Action 14; Master and Servant 300; Negligence 483. C.J.S. Actions § 64; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 181–184, 188–193, 203; Negligence §§ 152–153.]

toxic tort.A civil wrong arising from exposure to a toxic substance, such as asbestos, radiation, or hazardous waste. • A toxic tort can be remedied by a civil lawsuit (usu. a class action) or by administrative action. Cf. mass tort. [Cases: Negligence 306; Products Liability 43. C.J.S. Products Liability § 51.]

willful tort.See intentional tort.

tortfeasor (tort-fee-z<<schwa>>r). One who commits a tort; a wrongdoer.

concurrent tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose simultaneous actions cause injury to a third party. • Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable. [Cases: Negligence 421, 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156, 198; Torts §§ 39–44.]

consecutive tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose actions, while occurring at different times, combine to cause a single injury to a third party. • Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable.

joint tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors who contributed to the claimant's injury and who may be joined as defendants in the same lawsuit. See joint and several liability under LIABILITY. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

successive tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose negligence occurs at different times and causes different injuries to the same third party. [Cases: Damages 34.]

tortious (tor-sh<<schwa>>s), adj. 1. Constituting a tort; wrongful <tortious conduct>. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] 2. In the nature of a tort <tortious cause of action>.

TORTIOUS ACT

tortious act. See ACT(2).

TORTIOUS BATTERY

tortious battery. See BATTERY(2).

TORTIOUS CONDUCT

tortious conduct. See CONDUCT.

TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS

tortious interference with contractual relations. A third party's intentional inducement of a contracting party to break a contract, causing damage to the relationship between the contracting parties. — Also termed unlawful interference with contractual relations; interference with a contractual relationship; interference with contract; inducement of breach of contract; procurement of breach of contract. [Cases: Master and Servant 341; Torts 12. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 264–267; Torts §§ 54, 59–65.]

tortious interference with prospective advantage. An intentional, damaging intrusion on another's potential business relationship, such as the opportunity of obtaining customers or employment. — Also termed interference with a business relationship. [Cases: Torts 10(1). C.J.S. Torts §§ 45–54.]

---

tortious liability. See LIABILITY.

tort reform. A movement to reduce the amount of tort litigation, usu. involving legislation that restricts tort remedies or that caps damages awards (esp. for punitive damages). • Advocates of tort reform argue that it lowers insurance and healthcare costs and prevents windfalls, while opponents contend that it denies plaintiffs the recovery they deserve for their injuries.

torture, n. The infliction of intense pain to the body or mind to punish, to extract a confession or information, or to obtain sadistic pleasure. — torture, vb.

“By torture I mean the infliction of physically founded suffering or the threat immediately to inflict it, where such infliction or threat is intended to elicit, or such infliction is incidental to means adopted to elicit, matter of intelligence or forensic proof and the motive is one of military, civil, or ecclesiastical interest.” James Heath, Torture and English Law 3 (1982).

TOTAL

total, adj. 1. Whole; not divided; full; complete. 2. Utter; absolute.

TOTAL ASSIGNMENT

total assignment. See ASSIGNMENT(2).

TOTAL BREACH

total breach. See BREACH OF CONTRACT.

TOTAL DISABILITY

total disability. See DISABILITY(2).

TOTAL-DISABILITY INSURANCE

TOTAL EVICTION

total eviction. See EVICTION.

TOTAL FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION

total failure of consideration. See FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

TOTAL INCORPORATION

total incorporation. See INCORPORATION.

TOTALITY-OF-THE-CIRCUMSTANCES TEST

totality-of-the-circumstances test.Criminal procedure. A standard for determining whether hearsay (such as an informant's tip) is sufficiently reliable to establish probable cause for an arrest or search warrant. • Under this test — which replaced Aguilar–Spinelli's two-pronged approach — the reliability of the hearsay is weighed by focusing on the entire situation as described in the probable-cause affidavit, and not on any one specific factor. Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S.Ct. 2317 (1983). Cf. AGUILAR–SPINELLI TEST. [Cases: Arrest 63.4(7); Searches and Seizures 115.1. C.J.S. Arrest § 28.]

TOTAL LOSS

total loss.See LOSS.

TOTAL-OFFSET RULE

total-offset rule.Torts. A theory of damages holding that the eroding effect of inflation offsets the accrual of interest on an award and makes it unnecessary to discount future damages to their present value.

TOTAL REPUDIATION

total repudiation.See REPUDIATION.

TOTA RE PERSPECTA

tota re perspecta (toh-t<<schwa>> ree p<<schwa>>r-spek-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. The whole matter being taken into account or considered. — Also termed tota materia perspecta.

TOTIDEM VERBIS

totidem verbis.[Latin] In so many words.

TOTIES QUOTIES

toties quoties (toh-shee-eez kwoh-shee-eez ortoh-sheez kwoh-sheez). [Latin] Hist. As often as.

TOTO CAELO

toto caelo (toh-toh see-loh), adv. [Latin “by the whole extent of the heavens”] As far as possible; diametrically <the parties differ with each other toto caelo>.

TOUCH

touch,vb. Marine insurance. To stop at a port, usu. for a brief period. [Cases: Insurance 3059. C.J.S. Insurance § 768.]

---

touch and stay. Marine insurance. An insurer's giving to the insured the right to stop and remain at certain designated points in the course of the voyage. • A vessel that has the power to touch and stay at a place must confine itself strictly to the terms of the permission given, and any deviation during a stay — for example, by shipping or landing goods — will discharge the underwriters, unless the vessel has permission to trade as well as to touch and stay. [Cases: Insurance 3059. C.J.S. Insurance § 768.]

TOUT COURT

tout court (too koor), adv. [French “simply, without qualification”] Very briefly; without explanation.

TOUT ENSEMBLE

tout ensemble (toot oni-soin-bl<<schwa>>), n. [French “all together”] The overall visual effect of a design; general effect. • The phrase denotes a way of comparing two designs, by looking at the total impact rather than comparing individual design elements. That is the technique used in determining whether a design infringes someone's trade-dress rights, or whether a design-patent application shows a novel and nonobvious change from existing designs. Although the phrase is adverbial in French, it is typically used as a noun in English. See ANTIDISSECTION RULE.

touting, n. The solicitation of business by highly recommending a security or product, esp. when the recommendation's basis is largely puffery.

TOUT TEMPS PRIST ET ENCORE PRIST

TRADE DISCOUNT

trade discount. See DISCOUNT.

TRADE DISPARAGEMENT

trade disparagement. The common-law tort of belittling someone's business, goods, or services with a remark that is false or misleading but not necessarily defamatory. • To succeed at the action, a plaintiff must prove that (1) the defendant made the disparaging remark; (2) the defendant intended to injure the business, knew that the statement was false, or recklessly disregarded whether it was true; and (3) the statement resulted in special damages to the plaintiff, usu. by passing off. — Also termed commercial disparagement; product disparagement; injurious falsehood. Cf. trade defamation under DEFAMATION.

TRADE DISPUTE

trade dispute. 1. Int'l law. A dispute between two or more countries arising from tariff rates or other matters related to international commerce. 2. Labor law. A dispute between an employer and employees over pay, working conditions, or other employment-related matters. • An employee who leaves during a trade dispute is not entitled to benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

TRADE DOLLAR

trade dollar. Hist. A United States dollar coin, made of silver, issued from 1873 to 1878 for use in foreign trade, esp. in eastern Asia. • A trade dollar was legal tender within the U.S. until 1876 when the coin's silver content fell to less than one dollar. From 1878 to 1885, trade dollars were minted only in proof sets, then discontinued.

TRADE DRAFT

trade draft. See DRAFT.

TRADE DRESS

trade dress. Trademarks. The overall appearance and image in the marketplace of a product or a commercial enterprise. • For a product, trade dress typically comprises packaging and labeling. For an enterprise, it typically comprises design and decor. If a trade dress is distinctive and nonfunctional, it may be protected under trademark law. — Also termed get-up; look and feel. [Cases: Trade Regulation 43. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 49–50.]

“ ‘The “trade dress” of a product is essentially its total image and overall appearance.’ It ‘involves the total image of a product and may include features such as size, shape, color or color combinations, texture, graphics, or even particular sales techniques.’ ” Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc., 505 U.S. 763, 765 n.1, 112 S.Ct. 2753, 2755 n.1 (1992) (citations omitted).

TRADEMARK

trademark, n. 1. A word, phrase, logo, or other graphic symbol used by a manufacturer or seller to distinguish its product or products from those of others. • The main purpose of a trademark is to designate the source of goods or services. In effect, the trademark is the commercial substitute for one's signature. To receive federal protection, a trademark must be (1) distinctive rather than merely descriptive or generic; (2) affixed to a product that is actually sold in the marketplace; and (3) registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. In its broadest sense, the term trademark includes a servicemark. Unregistered trademarks are protected under common-law only, and distinguished with the mark “TM.” — Often shortened to mark. Cf. SERVICEMARK. [Cases: Trade Regulation 1, 3. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 2, 4, 14–15, 19–23.] 2. The body of law dealing with how businesses distinctively identify their products. — Abbr. TM. See LANHAM ACT. Cf. SERVICEMARK; registered trademark.

Mishawaka Rubber & Woolen Mfg. Co. v. S.S. Kresge Co., 316 U.S. 203, 205, 62 S.Ct. 1022, 1024 (1942)(Frankfurter, J.).

“A trademark functions on three different levels: as an indication of origin or ownership, as a guarantee of constancy of the quality or other characteristics of a product or service, and as a medium of advertisement. Thus, a trademark guarantees, identifies, and sells the product or service to which it refers. These three facets of a trademark — of differing importance at different times, in different lines of business and for different products or services — are somewhat correlative. The classical function, that of identification, has been primarily responsible for molding the development of trademark law. The significance of the guarantee function has been somewhat exaggerated, while the implications of the advertisement function still await full recognition in the law.” 3 Rudolf Callmann, The Law of Unfair Competition, Trademarks and Monopolies § 17.01, at 2 (4th ed. 1998).

abandoned trademark.A mark whose owner has discontinued using it and has no intent to resume using it in the ordinary course of trade, or has allowed it to become a generic term or otherwise to lose its distinctive significance. • Under § 45 of the Lanham Act, nonuse of a mark for three consecutive years is prima facie evidence of abandonment. The owner of an abandoned mark has no trademark rights to exclude others from using it. — Also termed abandoned mark.

arbitrary trademark.A trademark containing common words that do not describe or suggest any characteristic of the product to which the trademark is assigned. • Because arbitrary marks are neither descriptive nor suggestive of the goods or services in connection with which they are used, they are inherently distinctive, require no proof of secondary meaning, and are entitled to strong legal protection. A name that would be generic if used with one product may be arbitrary if used with another. For example, “Bicycle” may be registered to identify playing cards, but it could not be protected as a mark to identify bicycles. — Also termed arbitrary mark; arbitrary name. [Cases: Trade Regulation 24. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 47.]

certification trademark.A word, symbol, or device used on goods or services to certify the place of origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, or other characteristic. See 15 USCA § 1127. — Also termed certification mark. Cf. collective trademark.

coined trademark.See fanciful trademark.

collective trademark.A trademark or servicemark used by an association, union, or other group either to identify the group's products or services or to signify membership in the group. • Collective marks — such as “Realtor” and “American Peanut Farmers” — can be federally registered under the Lanham Act. — Also termed collective mark. Cf. certification trademark.

Community trademark.A trademark registered with the European Union Trademark Office and recognized in all EU countries. — Also termed Community mark.

composite trademark (k<<schwa>>m-poz-it). A trademark or servicemark made up of several words that form a distinctive whole, even if the individual words are ordinary. • Advertising slogans are often protectable as composite marks. A trademark registrant can establish ownership in the whole mark, but must disclaim ownership in any unregistrable parts. — Also termed composite mark; hybrid mark; hybrid trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 45. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 62.]

counterfeit trademark. A spurious mark that is identical to, or substantially indistinguishable from, a registered trademark. 15 USCA § 11. — Also termed counterfeit mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 312. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 151.]

descriptive trademark. A trademark that is a meaningful word in common usage or that merely describes or suggests a product. • This type of trademark is entitled to protection only if it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed descriptive mark; weak mark; weak trademark. See SECONDARY MEANING.

“The bar against descriptive marks simply reflects the requirement of distinctiveness. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1052(e)(1). It often is said that a mark should not be analyzed in a piecemeal fashion. Instead, the mark as a whole must be tested for descriptiveness or secondary meaning. A mark that merely describes a product cannot possibly distinguish one producer from another. As an obvious example, ‘apple’ would be a descriptive name for that fruit, and, as a mark, would serve only to confuse the consumer, for it would tell nothing about the different origins of a selection of apples produced by different producers. Moreover, to allow an owner to pre-empt the term ‘apple’ would afford the owner a monopoly of something that is necessary to describe the goods for sale.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property: Patents, Trademarks, and Copyright in a Nutshell 163 (2d ed. 1990).

disparaging trademark. A trademark that tends to bring a person or class of people into contempt or disrepute. • Section 2(a) of the Lanham Act prohibits the registration of disparaging marks. 15 USCA § 1052(a). — Also termed disparaging mark. See prohibited and reserved trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 282. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 190.]

distinctive trademark. A very strong trademark, one that consumers immediately and consistently associate with specific goods and services. • A distinctive trademark is usu. fanciful, arbitrary, or suggestive, but a descriptive trademark or common name can become distinctive if it becomes so well known as to acquire a secondary meaning. — Also termed distinctive mark.

evocative trademark. See suggestive trademark.

famous trademark. A trademark that not only is distinctive but also has been used and heavily advertised or widely accepted in the channels of trade over a long time, and is so well known that consumers immediately associate it with one specific product or service. • Only famous marks are protected from dilution. Eight nonexclusive statutory factors are often used in determining whether a particular mark is famous. See 15 USCA § 1125(c)(1)(A)–(H). — Also termed famous mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 366. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 79.]

fanciful trademark. A trademark consisting of a made-up or coined word; a distinctive trademark or tradename having no independent meaning. • This type of mark is considered inherently distinctive and thus protected at common law, and is eligible for trademark registration from the time of its first use. — Also termed fanciful mark; fanciful term; coined trademark; coined mark; coined term. [Cases: Trade Regulation 24. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 47.]

“Arbitrary or fanciful marks convey nothing about the nature of the product except through knowledge of the market. For instance, Kodak conveys nothing about photographic equipment except to those knowledgeable about that trade.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 168 (2d ed. 1990).

geographically descriptive trademark.A trademark that uses a geographic name to indicate where the goods are grown or manufactured. • This type of mark is protected at common law, and can be registered only on proof that it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed geographically descriptive mark. See SECONDARY MEANING. [Cases: Trade Regulation 32. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 55.]

house trademark.A trademark that identifies a company, a division of a company, or a company's product line as the source of a product or service. • A house mark and a product mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed house mark. Cf. product trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 27. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 51.]

product trademark.A trademark that identifies a single good or service, rather than the producing company, a division of a company, or a product line. • A product mark and a house mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed product mark. Cf. house trademark.

prohibited and reserved trademark.A mark that is not protected under the Lanham Act because it either falls into an expressly excluded category or else is similar to a mark or marks granted by statute to others. 15 USCA § 1052. — Also termed prohibited and reserved mark.

pure trademark.See technical trademark.

registered trademark.A trademark that has been filed and recorded with the Patent and Trademark Office. • A federally registered trademark is usu. marked by the symbol “®” or a phrase such as “Registered U.S. Patent & Trademark Office” so that the trademark owner can collect treble damages or the defendant's profits for an infringement. If the symbol is not used, the owner can collect these damages or profits only by proving that the defendant actually knew that the mark was registered. — Also termed registered mark. Cf. SERVICEMARK. [Cases: Trade Regulation 151. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 147, 153.]

strong trademark.An inherently distinctive trademark that is used — usu. by the owner only — in a fictitious, arbitrary, and fanciful manner, and is therefore given greater protection than a weak mark under the trademark laws. — Also termed strong mark.

suggestive trademark.A trademark that suggests rather than describes the particular characteristics of a product, thus requiring a consumer to use imagination to draw a conclusion about the nature of the product. • A suggestive trademark is entitled to protection without proof of secondary meaning. — Also termed evocative trademark; suggestive mark; suggestive name. See technical trademark. A mark that satisfies all the elements of a common-law trademark. • The essential elements of a technical trademark are as follows: (1) its use to designate a commercial source would not interfere with anyone else's right to use the mark; (2) it must primarily identify the source, rather than the product's category or grade of quality; (3) it must be attached to the product, label, or collateral materials rather than merely used in advertising; and (4) its use must not undermine some public policy, as by being scandalous or deceptive. — Also termed pure trademark; pure mark; technical mark; true trademark.

true trademark. See technical trademark.

weak trademark. See descriptive trademark.

TRADEMARK ACT OF 1946

Trademark Act of 1946. See LANHAM ACT.

TRADEMARK APPLICATION

trademark application. A mark owner's written request, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, for federal registration of a mark, accompanied by a sample of the mark to be protected and the filing fee. • The application may describe either an existing mark that is in use or a proposed mark. — Also termed servicemark application. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

combined application. An application to register a mark to be used in more than one class of goods or services. • A combined application is given a single serial number, but it is examined as if it were a set of distinct single applications. A separate filing fee must be paid for each class. — Also termed multiple-class application. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

intent-to-use application. An application filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to protect a trademark or servicemark that is not currently in commercial use but whose owner has a bona fide intent to use the mark commercially in the foreseeable future. • Trademark rights have traditionally been restricted to marks actually used in trade, but a 1988 amendment to the Lanham Act permitted applications to be filed before actual use begins if the mark otherwise qualifies for the Principal Register. 15 USCA § 1051(b). See PRINCIPAL REGISTER. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

multiple-class application. See combined application.

TRADEMARK-APPLICATION AMENDMENT

trademark-application amendment. A proposed modification to a registered trademark or to an application for trademark registration.

amendment of registration. Trademarks. Amendment of an existing trademark registration to make minor changes in the design of a mark to reflect how the mark is actually used. • The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office permits an amendment of registration only if it does not materially alter the character of the mark. The PTO amends a registration by attaching to the printed registration a printed certificate showing the amendment. — Also termed amendment of mark in registration. [Cases: Trade Regulation 252. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 199.]

amendment to allege use.Trademarks. A supplement to a trademark applicant's intent-to-use application filed to inform the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a trademark is actually in use in interstate commerce. • The form is titled “Allegation of Use for Intent to Use Application.” — Also termed statement of use; allegation of use. — Abbr. AAU. See DECLARATION OF USE.

amendment to different register.Trademarks. An amendment to an application for registration on the Principal Register, requesting that the mark instead be placed on the supplemental register.

TRADEMARK CLASS

trademark class.Any one of 42 international trademark-protection categories, each comprising similar goods or services. • There are 34 goods classes and 8 services classes. A trademark is protected in each class that is relevant to the product's or service's business area.

TRADEMARK-REGISTRATION NOTICE

trademark-registration notice. A notice that a mark is protected by registration with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, shown by placing a symbol next to the mark. • In the U.S., the R-within-a-circle symbol (®) is common but the legend “Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.” is acceptable. Only federally registered marks may use this notice.

TRADEMARK TRIAL AND APPEALS BOARD

Trademark Trial and Appeals Board. An administrative body that hears and decides disputes involving trademark ownership, conflicts between marks, and registrability of marks. — Abbr. TTAB.

TRADE MEANING

trade meaning. See SECONDARY MEANING.

tradename. 1. A name, style, or symbol used to distinguish a company, partnership, or business (as opposed to a product or service); the name under which a business operates. • A tradename is a means of identifying a business — or its products or services — to establish goodwill. It symbolizes the business's reputation. [Cases: Trade Regulation 1, 3, 7. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 2, 4, 14–15, 19–25.] 2. A trademark that was not originally susceptible to exclusive appropriation but has acquired a secondary meaning. — Also termed brand name; commercial name.

TRADE OR BUSINESS

trade or business. Tax. Any business or professional activity conducted by a taxpayer with the objective of earning a profit. • If the taxpayer can show that the primary purpose and intention is to make a profit, the taxpayer may deduct certain expenses as trade-or-business expenses under the Internal Revenue Code. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3314.1–3318. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 150–153, 163, 184, 270.]

TRADE SECRET

trade secret. 1. A formula, process, device, or other business information that is kept confidential to maintain an advantage over competitors; information — including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process — that (1) derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known or readily ascertainable by others who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use, and (2) is the subject of reasonable efforts, under the circumstances, to maintain its secrecy. • This definition states the majority view, which is found in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act. [Cases: Torts 10(5). C.J.S. Torts §§ 55–57.] 2. Information that (1) is not generally known or ascertainable, (2) provides a competitive advantage, (3) has been developed at the plaintiff's expense and is used continuously in the plaintiff's business, and (4) is the subject of the plaintiff's intent to keep it confidential. • This definition states the minority view, which is found in the Restatement of Torts § 757 cmt. b (1939). [Cases: Torts 10(5). C.J.S. Torts §§ 55–57.]

“So long as the owner of a secret keeps it a secret he has a monopoly. While equity affords protection to trade secrets against betrayal by those under contract or in confidential relations with the owners of the secret, there is no difference between contracts as to trade secrets and contracts as to any other personal property, as far as restraint of trade is concerned.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 406 (1929).

“The concept of protecting trade secrets is related to the principles of trademark and patent law. The scope of trade secret protection, however, goes well beyond that of patent law. Unlike patent law, protection under trade secret law is not tied to the information's novelty; rather, the essence of a trade secret is its relative secrecy. Additionally, unlike patent law, trade secret law draws less from property principles, and more from the equitable principles surrounding confidential relationships.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 8.18, at 516 (1994).

“The difficulty with defining ‘trade secrets’ in the abstract is that there are so many ways to go about it. In large part, this is a reflection of the fact that the law of trade secrets, unlike the law of patents or copyright, is a creature of the common law rather than of statute. In trying to impose a moral solution on cases of apparent breach of confidence, judges have juggled competing policy interests while trying to draw a line of protection that would lead to the result that they believed was right.... In other words, the development of trade secret law has been a bit chaotic ....” James Pooley, Trade Secrets § 1.01, at 1–1 to 1–3 (1998).

traditio (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The simple delivery of a piece of property by one person to another with the intention of transferring ownership. • This was the simplest form of transfer, and ultimately it was applied to land as well as movables. Constructive delivery was developed. — Also termed traditio rei. See BREVI MANU; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM. Pl. traditiones (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh-nee-z).

TRADITIO BREVI MANU

traditio brevi manu (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh bree-vIman-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. The surrender of the mediate possession of a thing to the person who is already in immediate possession of it. • This is a type of constructive delivery in which a delivery to the mediate possessor and redelivery to the immediate possessor are unnecessary. See BREVI MANU. For the other two types of constructive delivery, see ATTORNMENT; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

TRADITIO LONGA MANU

traditio longa manu (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh long-g<<schwa>> man-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

TRAVERSE

traverse (trav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs), n. Common-law pleading. A formal denial of a factual allegation made in the opposing party's pleading <Smith filed a traverse to Allen's complaint, asserting that he did not knowingly provide false information>. See DENIAL. [Cases: Pleading 112–129. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 183–196.] — traverse (trav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs or tr⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-v⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs), vb.

“It is said that the technical term traverse, from transverto, to turn over, is applied to an issue taken upon an indictment for a misdemeanor, and means nothing more than turning over or putting off the trial to a following session or assize; and that thus it is that the officer of the court asks the party whether he is ready to try then, or will traverse to the next session; though some have referred its meaning originally to the denying or taking issue upon an indictment, without reference to the delay of trial, and which seems more correct.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 486 (2d ed. 1826).

common traverse. A traverse consisting of a tender of issue — that is, a denial accompanied by a formal offer for decision of the point denied — with a denial that expressly contradicts the terms of the allegation traversed. — Also termed specific traverse. [Cases: Pleading 117. C.J.S. Pleading § 184.]

“The common or specific traverse is an express denial of a particular allegation in the opposing pleading in the terms of the allegation, accompanied by a tender of issue or formal offer of the point denied for trial.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 168, at 303 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

cumulative traverse. A traverse that analyzes a proposition into its constituent parts and traverses them cumulatively. • It amounts to the same thing as traversing the one entire proposition, since the several parts traversed must all make up one entire proposition or point.

general traverse. A denial of all the facts in an opponent's pleading.

special traverse. A denial of one material fact in an opponent's pleading; a traverse that explains or qualifies the denial. • The essential parts of a special traverse are an inducement, a denial, and a verification. [Cases: Pleading 118.]

specific traverse. See common traverse.

TRAVERSE JURY

traverse jury. See petit jury under JURY.

TRAVERSER

traverser, n. One who traverses or denies a pleading.

TRAVERSE THE REQUIREMENT

traverse the requirement, vb. Patents. To (1) respond in detail to a patent examiner's decision that the patent application claims more than one invention and (2) ask that the restriction requirement be reconsidered. • The response must specifically explain why restriction should not be required, not merely assert that the requirement is wrong. Failure to traverse a requirement forfeits any rights to appeal the decision.

TREACHERY

treachery, n. A deliberate and willful betrayal of trust and confidence.

treason, n. The offense of attempting to overthrow the government of the state to which one owes allegiance, either by making war against the state or by materially supporting its enemies. — Also termed high treason; alta proditio. Cf. SEDITION. [Cases: Treason 1. C.J.S. Treason §§ 2–3, 5.] — treasonable, treasonous, adj.

“The judgment of high treason was, until very lately, an exception to the merciful tenor of our judgments. The least offensive form which is given in the books is, that the offender ‘be carried back to the place from whence he came, and from thence to be drawn to the place of execution, and be there hanged by the neck, and cut down alive, and that his entrails be taken out and burned before his face, and his head cut off, and his body divided into four quarters, and his head and quarters disposed of at the king's pleasure.’ Some of the precedents add other circumstances, of still more grossness and aggravation. But this horrible denunciation was very seldom executed in its more terrible niceties.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 702 (2d ed. 1826).

“[S]everal important characteristics marked off high treason from all other crimes. For one thing, it earned a peculiarly ghastly punishment. For another, it was ‘unclergyable,’ while every felony was ‘clergyable’ unless some statute had otherwise ordained. Thirdly, while the felon's land escheated to his lord, the traitor's land was forfeited to the king. This last distinction influenced the development of the law.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 500 (2d ed. 1899).

“Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.” U.S. Const. art. III, § 3.

constructive treason. 1. Speech that manifests a desire or intent to make war against the state or materially support an enemy, even though the speech is unaccompanied by acts that further the desire or intent. • There is no crime of constructive treason in U.S. law because treason requires an affirmative act, and intent alone cannot substitute for an act. Cf. SEDITION. 2.Hist. Speech that is critical of the government. • This sense arose during the reign of Henry VIII of England. Critical speech remained a capital crime until the early 18th century.

petty treason.Archaic. Murder of one's employer or husband. • Until 1828, this act was considered treason under English law. — Also spelled petit treason.

“The frequent reference to high treason is a carry-over from an ancient division of the offense that has long since disappeared. In the feudal stage of history the relation of lord to vassal was quite similar to the relation of king to subject. The relation of husband to wife came to be regarded in the same category, as also did the relation of master to servant, and that of prelate to clergyman. And just as it was high treason to kill the king, so a malicious homicide was petit treason if it involved a killing of (originally, lord by vassal, and later) husband by wife, master by mistress or servant, or prelate by clergyman. When the special brutality provided by the common law for the punishment of petit treason disappeared, this crime became merged with murder and only one crime of treason remained.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 498–99 (3d ed. 1982).

TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR

reasonable misdemeanor.English law. An act that is likely to endanger or alarm the monarch, or disturb the public peace in the presence of the monarch. Cf. TREASON FELONY.

TREASON FELONY

treason felony.English law. An act that shows an intention of committing treason, unaccompanied by any further act to carry out that intention. • This offense usu. results in life imprisonment rather than the death penalty. Cf. TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR.

TREAS. REG.

Treas. Reg.abbr.TREASURY REGULATION.

TREASURER

treasurer. An organization's chief financial officer. • The treasurer's duties typically include prudently depositing (or, if authorized, investing) and safeguarding the organization's funds and otherwise managing its finances; monitoring compliance with any applicable law relating to such finances and filing any required report; disbursing money as authorized; and reporting to the organization on the state of the treasury. — Also termed finance officer; financial secretary; quartermaster. [Cases: Corporations 301. C.J.S. Corporations § 470.]

TREASURER, LORD HIGH

Treasurer, Lord High.See LORD HIGH TREASURER.

TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES

Treasurer of the United States.The officer in the U.S. Department of the Treasury responsible for overseeing the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint.

treasure trove.[Law French “treasure found”] Valuables (usu. gold or silver) found hidden in the ground or other private place, the owner of which is unknown. • At common law in the United States, the finder of a treasure trove can usu. claim good title against all except the true owner. But until 1996, all treasure trove found in the United Kingdom belonged to the Crown.

“Treasure hid in the earth, not upon the earth, nor in the sea, and coin though not hidden, being found is the king's; we call it treasure trove.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 177 (1759).

“Treasure trove consists essentially of articles of gold and silver, intentionally hidden for safety in the earth or in some secret place, the owner being unknown, although it is probable that the category might include articles made from the required metals buried in the ground for other purposes, for example in connection with an ancient sepulture. In the United States, the state has never claimed title to lost property by virtue of its character as treasure trove, and it has been stated that the law relating thereto is merged with that of lost goods generally, although there is authority for the proposition that while treasure trove in the United States belongs to the finder, found goods not of that character go to the owner of the locus in quo.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 13, at 27–28 (2d ed. 1955).

treasury. 1. A place or building in which stores of wealth are kept; esp., a place where public revenues are deposited and kept and from which money is disbursed to defray government expenses. [Cases: United States 81.C.J.S. United States § 154.] 2. (cap.) DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

---

TREASURY, FIRST LORD

Treasury, First Lord. See FIRST LORD OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY BENCH

Treasury Bench. In the British House of Commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker. • The Treasury Bench is occupied by the First Lord of the Treasury or principal minister of the Crown.

TREASURY BILL

Treasury bill. A short-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 13, 26, or 52 weeks. • These bills — auctioned weekly or quarterly — pay interest in the form of the difference between their discounted purchase price and their par value at maturity. — Abbr. T-bill. [Cases: United States 89. C.J.S. United States §§ 165–166.]

TREASURY BOND

Treasury bond. A long-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 10 to 30 years. • These bonds are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-bond. [Cases: United States 91. C.J.S. United States §§ 164, 167.]

TREASURY CERTIFICATE

treasury certificate. An obligation of the federal government maturing in one year and on which interest is paid on a coupon basis. [Cases: United States 90. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 167.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Treasury Department. See DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY NOTE

Treasury note. An intermediate-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of two to ten years. • These notes are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-note. [Cases: United States 90. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 167.]

TREASURY REGULATION

Treasury Regulation. A regulation promulgated by the U.S. Treasury Department to explain or interpret a section of the Internal Revenue Code. • Treasury Regulations are binding on all taxpayers. — Abbr. Treas. Reg. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3038–3042, 3045, 3048.]

TREASURYS

Treasurys. Debt obligations of the federal government backed by the full faith and credit of the government. See TREASURY BILL; TREASURY BOND; TREASURY CERTIFICATE ; TREASURY NOTE. [Cases: United States 89–91. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 164–167.]

TREASURY SECURITY

treasury security. See treasury stock under STOCK.

TREASURY SHARE

treasury share. See treasury stock under STOCK.

TREASURY STOCK

treasury stock. See STOCK.

TREASURY WARRANT

treasury warrant. See WARRANT(2).

TREATING-PHYSICIAN RULE

treating-physician rule. The principle that a treating physician's diagnoses and findings about the degree of a social-security claimant's impairment are binding on an administrative-law judge in the absence of substantial contrary evidence. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 143.65. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 71.]

treaty. 1. An agreement formally signed, ratified, or adhered to between two nations or sovereigns; an international agreement concluded between two or more states in written form and governed by international law. — Also termed accord; convention; covenant; declaration; pact. Cf. EXECUTIVE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Treaties 1. C.J.S. Treaties § 2.]

“[T]he legal terminology used by the United States to describe international agreements is markedly different from that employed elsewhere. Under the U.S. Constitution, the term ‘treaty’ has a particular meaning — an agreement made by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 158 (2001).

commercial treaty. A bilateral or multilateral treaty concerning trade or other mercantile activities. • Such a treaty may be general in nature, as by supplying the framework of long-term commercial relations. Or it may be specific, as by detailing the conditions of particular branches of trade or other commercial transactions. Sometimes a treaty of this kind deals with an individual project, such as a guaranty agreement. [Cases: Treaties 8. C.J.S. Treaties § 6.]

defensive treaty. A treaty in which each party agrees to come to the other's aid if one is attacked by another nation. See treaty of alliance.

“Defensive treaties, as generally understood, are made to secure the parties to them against aggression from other states. They may, also, aim at the maintenance of internal quiet, or of neutrality amid the conflicts of neighboring powers. To attempt to gain any of these objects is not necessarily contrary to the law of nations or to natural justice. Mutual aid, indeed, against the disturbers of internal quiet, may secure an absolute government against popular revolutions in favor of liberty, but if a confederation or alliance may secure to its members the enjoyment of free institutions, there is no reason, as far as international law is concerned, why institutions of an opposite kind may not support themselves in the same way.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 171 (5th ed. 1878).

dispositive treaty (dis-poz-<<schwa>>-tiv). A treaty by which a country takes over territory by impressing a special character on it, creating something analogous to a servitude or easement in private law.

guarantee treaty.An agreement between countries directly or indirectly establishing a unilateral or reciprocal guarantee. — Also spelled guaranty treaty. — Also termed treaty of guarantee; quasi-guarantee treaty; pseudo-guarantee treaty.

“In many instances where the term ‘guarantee’ is used in international treaties, the contracting parties merely intend to underline their willingness to comply with the obligation they have entered into. Obligations of this kind do not fall within the concept of guarantee in the proper sense of the term. In this particular respect, the expression ‘pseudo-guarantees’ or ‘quasi-guarantee treaties’ is used.” George Ress, “Guarantee Treaties,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 634 (1995).

mixed treaty.A treaty with characteristics of different types of treaties, esp. contrasting types (e.g., permanent and transitory, or personal and real).

nonaggression treaty.See NONAGGRESSION PACT.

nonproliferation treaty.A treaty forbidding the transfer of nuclear weapons from a country with a nuclear arsenal to one that does not have nuclear-weapons capability. • The first such treaty was concluded in 1968, and now more than 100 nations have agreed to its terms. — Also termed nuclear-nonproliferation treaty.

offensive treaty.A treaty in which the parties agree to declare war jointly on another nation and join forces to wage the war. See treaty of alliance.

peace treaty.A treaty signed by heads of state to end a war. — Also termed treaty of peace. [Cases: War and National Emergency 33. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 50.]

“A peace differs not from a truce essentially in the length of its contemplated duration, for there may be very long armistices and a state of peace continuing only a definite number of years. The ancients often concluded treaties of peace which were to expire after a certain time ....” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 158, at 268 (5th ed. 1878).

permanent treaty.A treaty that contemplates ongoing performance (as with a treaty of neutrality).

personal treaty.Hist. A treaty relating exclusively to the contracting sovereign as a person. • Examples of personal treaties are family alliances and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his or her family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe, personal treaties have lost their importance.

pseudo-guarantee treaty.See guarantee treaty.

real treaty.A treaty relating solely to the subject matter of the compact, independently of the persons of the contracting sovereigns. • Real treaties continue to bind the state even when the heads of government change.

transitory treaty.A treaty carried into effect once and for all, so that it is complete when the act has been performed (as with a treaty of cession).

treaty of alliance.A treaty establishing mutual and reciprocal support obligations. • A treaty of alliance may be for support in defense, aggression, or both. See defensive treaty; offensive treaty.

“A treaty of alliance can bind the parties to no injustice, nor justify either of them in being accessory to an act of bad faith on the part of another. Hence a defensive, still more an offensive alliance, can only contemplate, if lawful, the warding off of intended injustice.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of guarantee.See guarantee treaty.

treaty of neutrality.A treaty in which the parties agree not to engage in any aggressive action against one another, whether individually or jointly with others, and not to interfere with the other party's affairs. • There is no commitment to aid another party in the event of war — only to refrain from becoming involved.

“Treaties of neutrality are reciprocal engagements to have no part in the conflicts between other powers — to remain at peace in an apprehended or an actual war. They are suggested by, and prevent the evils of that interference of nations in each other's affairs, for the preservation of the balance of power or the safety of the parties interfering, which is so common in modern history.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of peace.See peace treaty.

2. A contract or agreement between insurers providing for treaty reinsurance. See treaty reinsurance under REINSURANCE. [Cases: Insurance 3593.] 3. A negotiated contract or agreement between private persons.

private treaty.An agreement to convey property negotiated by the buyer and seller or their agents. • This term is esp. common in the U.K.

TREATY CLAUSE

Treaty Clause.The constitutional provision giving the President the power to make treaties, with the advice and consent of the Senate. U.S. Const. art. II, § 2. [Cases: Treaties 2. C.J.S. Treaties § 3.]

TREATY-CREATED LAW

treaty-created law.See CONVENTIONAL LAW.

TREATY-MADE LAW

treaty-made law.See CONVENTIONAL LAW.

---

TREATY OF REINSURANCE

treaty of reinsurance. See REINSURANCE TREATY.

TREATY POWER

treaty power. The President's constitutional authority to make treaties, with the advice and consent of the Senate. See TREATY CLAUSE. [Cases: Treaties 2. C.J.S. Treaties § 3.]

TREATY REINSURANCE

treaty reinsurance. See REINSURANCE.

TREBLE DAMAGES

treble damages. See DAMAGES.

TREBUCKET

trebucket (tree-b<<schwa>>k-it). See CASTIGATORY.

trend. A price pattern in the stock market generally or in a particular stock.

major trend. A long-term trend of the stock market; a general increase or decrease of stock prices over an extended period. — Also termed fundamental trend.

market trend. The direction of stock-market prices over a several-month period.

trespass (tres-p<<schwa>>s ortres-pas), n. 1. An unlawful act committed against the person or property of another; esp., wrongful entry on another's real property. [Cases: Trespass 1–15. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 2, 4–16, 28–29, 74, 164.] 2. At common law, a legal action for injuries resulting from an unlawful act of this kind. 3. Archaic. MISDEMEANOR. — trespass, vb. — trespassory (tres-p<<schwa>>-sor-ee), adj.

“The familiar legend on notice-boards, ‘Trespassers will be prosecuted,’ implies that it is a crime, but this may usually be dismissed as ‘a wooden lie.’ Yet in time past the idea was correct, for trespass of any sort was punishable by fine and imprisonment as well as redressible by an action for damages, and actually it was not until 1694 that the punitive element disappeared although it had faded into obsolescence long before that date. But nowadays trespass is never criminal except under special statutes which make it punishable ....” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 90, at 307 (5th ed. 1950).

“The term trespass has been used by lawyers and laymen in three senses of varying degrees of generality. (1) In its widest and original signification it includes any wrongful act — any infringement or transgression of the rule of right. This use is common in the Authorized Version of the Bible, and was presumably familiar when that version was first published. But it never obtained recognition in the technical language of the law, and is now archaic even in popular speech. (2) In a second and narrower signification — its true legal sense — the term means any legal wrong for which the appropriate remedy was a writ of trespass — viz. any direct and forcible injury to person, land, or chattels. (3) The third and narrowest meaning of the term is that in which, in accordance with popular speech, it is limited to one particular kind of trespass in the second sense — viz. the tort of trespass to land (trespass quare clausum fregit).” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 4 (17th ed. 1977).

“Before the word ‘misdemeanor’ became well established the old writers tended to use the word ‘trespass’ to indicate an offense below the grade of felony. And it was used at times by Blackstone for this purpose, as in the phrase ‘treason, felony, or trespass.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 405 (3d ed. 1982).

cattle-trespass.Hist. Trespass by one's cattle or other animals on another's land, as a result of which the other might either distrain them damage feasant or sue for trespass in the local courts. • At first (from the early 13th century) this type of trespass applied only to intentional trespass by the keeper of the cattle, but in 1353 it was extended to beasts that had merely escaped. This type of trespass gave rise to strict liability.

“It has long been settled that liability for cattle-trespass is independent of negligence, and it is that which constitutes its strictness. And, in spite of some confusion in time past, it is quite distinct from the scienter type of liability. In Lee v. Riley [(1865), 18 C.B. (N.S.) 722] the defendant's mare strayed through a gap in his fence, which it was his duty to repair, to the plaintiff's land and there quarrelled with and kicked the plaintiff's horse. The defendant was held liable for cattle-trespass. A great deal of argument was expended at the trial on whether the defendant had notice of the ferocious disposition of his mare, but Erle, C.J., pointed out that, however relevant that might have been in a scienter action, it was beside the mark in one for cattle-trespass.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 148, at 518 (5th ed. 1950).

constructive trespass.See trespass to chattels.

continuing trespass.A trespass in the nature of a permanent invasion on another's rights, such as a sign that overhangs another's property. [Cases: Trespass 51. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 143, 152.]

criminal trespass. 1. A trespass on property that is clearly marked against trespass by signs or fences. [Cases: Trespass 81. C.J.S. Trespass § 183.] 2. A trespass in which the trespasser remains on the property after being ordered off by a person authorized to do so.

innocent trespass.A trespass committed either unintentionally or in good faith. [Cases: Trespass 2. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 6, 164.]

joint trespass.A trespass that two or more persons have united in committing, or that some have actually committed while others commanded, encouraged, or directed it. [Cases: Trespass 31. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 3, 34.]

permanent trespass.A trespass consisting of a series of acts, done on consecutive days, that are of the same nature and that are renewed or continued from day to day, so that the acts in the aggregate form one indivisible harm.

trespass ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). An entry on land that, though begun innocently or with a privilege, is deemed a trespass from the beginning because of conduct that abuses the privilege. [Cases: Trespass 13. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 14, 16.]

trespass by relation. A trespass committed when the plaintiff had a right to immediate possession of land but had not yet exercised that right. • When the plaintiff takes possession, a legal fiction treats the plaintiff as having had possession ever since the accrual of the right of entry. This is known as trespass by relation because the plaintiff's possession relates back to the time when the plaintiff first acquired a right to possession.

trespass de bonis asportatis (dee boh-nis as-p<<schwa>>r-tay-tis). [Latin “trespass for carrying goods away”] 1. A wrongful taking of chattels. • This type of trespassory taking was also an element of common-law larceny. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages for the wrongful taking of chattels. — Abbr. trespass d.b.a. — Often shortened to trespass de bonis. — Also termed trespass to personal property. [Cases: Trespass 6. C.J.S. Trespass § 9.]

trespass on the case. At common law, an action to recover damages that are not the immediate result of a wrongful act but rather a later consequence. • This action was the precursor to a variety of modern-day tort claims, including negligence, nuisance, and business torts. — Often shortened to case. — Also termed action on the case; breve de transgressione super casum. [Cases: Trespass 1, 16, 17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 2, 4–5, 62–64, 70–74.]

“The most important of the writs framed under the authority of the statute of Westminster 2 is that of ‘trespass on the case,’ to meet cases analogous to trespass in delict, but lacking the element of direct or immediate force or violence. This writ gave a form of action in which the court was enabled to render judgment of damages in cases of fraud, deceit, negligence, want of skill, defamation oral or written, and all other injurious acts or omissions resulting in harm to person or property, but wanting the vi et armis, the element of direct force and violence, to constitute trespass.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 7 (2d ed. 1899).

“Common law recognizes a distinction between the actions of trespass vi et armis (or simply trespass) and trespass on the case. This distinction has been expressed by stating that a tort committed by the direct application of force is remediable by an action for trespass, while a tort accomplished indirectly is a matter for trespass on the case. Other authority makes the distinction on the basis of the defendant's intent, stating that trespass involves a willful and deliberate act while trespass on the case contemplates an act or omission resulting from negligence.” 1 Am. Jur. 2d Actions § 23, at 738 (1994).

trespass quare clausum fregit (kwair-ee-klaw-z<<schwa>>m-free-jit). [Latin “why he broke the close”] 1. A person's unlawful entry on another's land that is visibly enclosed. • This tort consists of doing any of the following without lawful justification: (1) entering upon land in the possession of another, (2) remaining on the land, or (3) placing or projecting any object upon it. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages resulting from another's unlawful entry on one's land that is visibly enclosed. — Abbr. trespass q.c.f. — Also termed trespass to real property; trespass to land; quare clausum querentis fregit. See trespass vi et armis. [Cases: Trespass 10, 16,

17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 13–15, 62–64, 70–74.]

“Every unwarrantable entry on another's soil the law entitles a trespass by breaking his close; the words of the writ of trespass commanding the defendant to shew cause, quare clausum querentis fregit. For every man's land is in the eye of the law enclosed and set apart from his neighbour's: and that either by a visible and material fence, as one field is divided from another by a hedge; or, by an ideal invisible boundary, existing only in the contemplation of law, as when one man's land adjoins to another's in the same field. And every such entry or breach of a man's close carries necessarily along with it some damage or other: for, if no other special loss can be assigned, yet still the words of the writ itself specify one general damage, viz. the treading down and bruising his herbage.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 209–10 (1768).

trespass to chattels. The act of committing, without lawful justification, any act of direct physical interference with a chattel possessed by another. • The act must amount to a direct forcible injury. — Also termed trespass to goods; constructive trespass. [Cases: Trespass 5. C.J.S. Trespass § 9.]

“Trespass to goods is a wrongful interference with the possession of them. It may take innumerable forms, such as scratching the panel of a coach, removing a tire from a car, injuring or destroying goods, or in the case of animals, beating or killing them, or infecting them with disease. All that is necessary is that the harm done should be direct ....” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 99, at 345 (5th ed. 1950).

trespass to goods. See trespass to chattels.

trespass to land. See trespass quare clausum fregit (2).

trespass to personal property. See trespass de bonis asportatis.

trespass to real property. See trespass quare clausum fregit (2).

trespass to try title. 1. In some states, an action for the recovery of property unlawfully withheld from an owner who has the immediate right to possession. 2. A procedure under which a claim to title may be adjudicated.

trespass vi et armis (vi et ahr-mis). [Latin “with force and arms”] 1. At common law, an action for damages resulting from an intentional injury to person or property, esp. if by violent means; trespass to the plaintiff's person, as in illegal assault, battery, wounding, or imprisonment, when not under color of legal process, or when the battery, wounding, or imprisonment was in the first instance lawful, but unnecessary violence was used or the imprisonment continued after the process had ceased to be lawful. • This action also lay for injury to relative rights, such as menacing tenants or servants, beating and wounding a spouse, criminal conversation with or seducing a wife, or debauching a daughter or servant. 2. See trespass quare clausum fregit. • In this sense, the “force” is implied by the “breaking” of the close (that is, an enclosed area), even if no real force is used. [Cases: Trespass 17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 70–74.]

trespasser. One who commits a trespass; one who intentionally and without consent or privilege enters another's property. • In tort law, a landholder owes no duty to unforeseeable trespassers. Cf. INVITEE; LICENSEE(2). [Cases: Trespass 9. C.J.S. Trespass § 12.]

“The word ‘trespasser’ has an ugly sound, but it covers the wicked and the innocent. The burglar and the arrogant squatter are trespassers, but so are all sorts of comparatively innocent and respectable persons such as a walker in the countryside who unhindered strolls across an open field. Perhaps much of the trouble in this area has arisen from ‘the simplistic stereotype’ of the definition. The courts are therefore beginning to recognise that the duty of the occupier may vary according to the nature of the trespasser.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 278 (17th ed. 1977).

innocent trespasser. One who enters another's land unlawfully, but either inadvertently or believing in a right to do so. [Cases: Trespass 2, 23. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 6, 36–37, 39–45, 164.]

TRESPASS FOR MESNE PROFITS

trespass for mesne profits. Hist. An action — supplementing an action for ejectment — brought against a tenant in possession to recover the profits wrongfully received during the tenant's occupation. [Cases: Ejectment 124. C.J.S. Ejectment §§ 139–140.]

TRET

tret (tret), n. An allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity that a seller makes to a buyer because of water or dust that may be mixed with a commodity. Cf. TARE.

TRIABLE

triable, adj. Subject or liable to judicial examination and trial .

TRIABLE EITHER WAY

triable either way. English law. (Of an offense) prosecutable either in the Crown Court or in a magistrates' court.

“The criminal courts in England and Wales are the magistrates' courts and the Crown Court. Those offences considered least serious are summary offences, triable only in the magistrates' courts. Those offences considered most serious are triable only on indictment, in the Crown Court. A large number of offences, such as theft and most burglaries, are ‘triable either way,’ in a magistrates' court or the Crown Court. For these offences the defendant can elect to be tried at the Crown Court, where there is a judge and jury. If the defendant does not wish a Crown Court trial, the magistrates may decide (having heard representations from the prosecutor) that the case is so serious that it should be committed to the Crown Court for trial.” Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 16 (1991).

TRIAL

trial. A formal judicial examination of evidence and determination of legal claims in an adversary proceeding. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 18. C.J.S. Trial §§ 91–92.]

bench trial. A trial before a judge without a jury. • The judge decides questions of fact as well as questions of law. — Also termed trial to the bench; nonjury trial; court trial; trial before the court (abbr. TBC); judge trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 247–260.13; Federal Civil Procedure 2251; Trial 367–387. C.J.S. Trial §§ 1018–1072.]

bifurcated trial. A trial that is divided into two stages, such as for guilt and punishment or for liability and damages. — Also termed two-stage trial. Cf. SEVERANCE(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1954; Sentencing and Punishment 334; Trial 3. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1497, 1499, 1531–1532, 1542; Trial §§ 17–27.]

closed trial. A trial that is not open to the public, usu. because of some overriding concern such as a need to protect a child's anonymity or for security.

fair trial. See FAIR TRIAL.

joint trial. A trial involving two or more parties; esp., a criminal trial of two or more persons for the same or similar offenses. [Cases: Criminal Law 622. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 562–564.]

judge trial. See bench trial.

jury trial. A trial in which the factual issues are determined by a jury, not by the judge. — Also termed trial by jury.

mock trial. See MOCK TRIAL.

new trial. A postjudgment retrial or reexamination of some or all of the issues determined in an earlier judgment. • The trial court may order a new trial by motion of a party or on the court's own initiative. Also, when an appellate court reverses the trial court's judgment, it may remand the case to the trial court for a new trial on some or all of the issues on which the reversal is based. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59; Fed. R. Crim. P. 33. See MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL; REMAND. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2311; New Trial 0.5.]

perfect trial. A trial free from all error.

political trial. A trial (esp. a criminal prosecution) in which either the prosecution or the defendant (or both) uses the proceedings as a platform to espouse a particular political belief; a trial of a person for a political crime. See SHOW TRIAL.

public trial. A trial that anyone may attend or observe.

separate trial. 1. Criminal procedure. The individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime. Fed. R. Crim. P. 14. [Cases: Criminal Law 622.1–622.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 565–577.] 2.Civil procedure. Within a single action, a distinct trial of a separate claim or issue — or of a group of claims or issues — ordered by the trial judge, usu. to conserve resources or avoid prejudice. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b). Cf. SEVERANCE(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1953–1965; Trial 3. C.J.S. Trial §§ 17–27.]

TRIAL BY COMBAT

trial by combat. Hist. A trial that is decided by personal battle between the disputants, common in Europe and England during the Middle Ages; specif., a trial in which the person accused fought with the accuser, the idea being that God would give victory to the person in the right. • This method was introduced into England by the Normans after 1066, but it was a widely detested innovation and was little used. It became obsolete several centuries before being formally abolished in 1818, having been replaced in practice by the grand assize and indictment. — Also termed trial by battle; trial by wager of battle; trial by duel; judicial combat; duel; duellum; wager of battle; ornest; vadiatio duelli; wehading. #### TRIGAMY trigamy (trig-<<schwa>>-mee), n. The act of marrying a person while legally married to someone else and bigamously married to yet another. [Cases: Bigamy 1. C.J.S. Bigamy §§ 2–6, 8.]

“Trigamy, literally three marriages, is often used for a special situation. ‘Trigamy,’ in the sense of the special problem of the third wife, stems from the premise that invalidity of the alleged prior marriage is a good defense to a charge of bigamy. Thus in a bigamy prosecution a so-called common-law marriage can be relied upon to establish either the first or second marriage, if it is recognized in the jurisdiction as giving rise to the marital status, but cannot be relied upon where it is not so recognized. A logical result is that a charge of bigamy may be defeated by showing that the alleged prior marriage, relied upon to support the charge, was itself void because of an even earlier marriage existing at the time — as was held about 1648 in Lady Madison's Case. For example, D marries A, and afterward while A is alive marries B, and still later when A is dead but B alive, marries C. The marriage to C is not bigamy because the marriage to B was bigamous and void.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 458 (3d ed. 1982).

TRIPS

TRIPs.abbr. Patents. The Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, a treaty that harmonized and strengthened the intellectual-property laws of its signatories by linking the obligation to protect the intellectual-property rights of other members' citizens with a mechanism for settling international trade disputes. • TRIPs was negotiated at the 1994 Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). More than 130 nations are parties to the agreement. In the field of patents, TRIPs standardized patentable subject matter to include medicines, required testing for nonobviousness and utility, protected patentees from infringing imports, and all but eliminated compulsory licenses. In response to the agreement, Congress (1) changed patent terms to 20 years from the date of application, rather than 17 years from the date of issue; (2) allowed foreign filers to prove priority by inventive efforts that preceded filing; (3) widened the definition of infringement to cover offering for sale and importing; and (4) permitted provisional applications, with brief descriptions and no claims, to establish priority. 33 I.L.M. 1197. — Also written TRIPS. — Also termed TRIPs Agreement.

“Articles 1–8 of TRIPs include the basic principles of national treatment and most-favoured-nation treatment. That is, each Member must give to the nationals of other Members treatment no less favourable than that given to its own nationals, and must give to the nationals of all Members the same privileges as are given to the nationals of any Member. Thus, subject to certain exemptions, bilateral agreements between Members should no longer be permitted.” Philip W. Grubb, Patents for Chemicals, Pharmaceuticals and Biotechnology 31 (3d ed. 1999).

trover (troh-v<<schwa>>r). A common-law action for the recovery of damages for the conversion of personal property, the damages generally being measured by the value of the property. — Also termed trover and conversion. Cf. DETINUE; REPLEVIN. [Cases: Trover and

Conversion 1, 43. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–3, 5–7, 120–121.]

“Trover may be maintained for all kinds of personal property, including legal documents, but not where articles are severed from land by an adverse possessor, at least until recovery of possession of the land. It lies for the misappropriation of specific money, but not for breach of an obligation to pay where there is no duty to return specific money.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 43, at 99 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

TRUANCY

truancy (troo-<<schwa>>n-see), n. The act or state of shirking responsibility; esp., willful and unjustified failure to attend school by one who is required to attend. [Cases: Schools 161. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 740–743.] — truant, adj. & n.

TRUANCY OFFICER

truancy officer. An official responsible for enforcing laws mandating school attendance for minors of specified ages (usu. 16 and under). — Also termed truant officer; attendance officer. [Cases: Schools 161. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 740–743.]

TRUCE

truce. Int'l law. A suspension or temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement between belligerent powers. — Also termed armistice; ceasefire; suspension of arms. [Cases: War and National Emergency 33. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 50.] — tracial, adj.

general truce. A truce that suspends hostilities in all places.

partial truce. See special truce.

special truce. A truce referring only to operations before a specific fortress or in a district, or between certain detachments of armies. — Also termed partial truce.

TRUCK

truck. Hist. Scots law. The payment of wages in scrip or goods. • Truck systems, once common where workers had to live in isolated areas and depended on company stores for food and clothing, were abolished in the 19th century.

“Truck was payment not in money but in goods or tickets which could be exchanged for goods.... The principle that contractors could buy in bulk and retail to the workmen, deducting the cost from their wages, was sound but was open to abuse; in fact truck became a means of robbery. Railway contractors frequently made more profit from truck than from the contract.... Truck shops, frequently called tommy shops or tally shops, might be run by the contractor or let by him to an associate or a shopkeeper for a rent or on the basis that part of the shop profits would go back to the contractor. The goods were frequently inferior and sold at excessive prices.” David M. Walker, 6 A Legal History of Scotland 820 (2001).

true-value rule. The rule requiring that one who subscribes for and receives corporate stock must pay par value for it, in either money or its equivalent, so that a corporation's real assets square with its books. • If true value is less than par value, the stock is deemed unpaid for to the full extent of the difference, and the affected shareholder is liable to creditors for the difference, notwithstanding the directors' good faith. [Cases: Corporations 232.]

TRUE VERDICT

trust, n. 1. The right, enforceable solely in equity, to the beneficial enjoyment of property to which another person holds the legal title; a property interest held by one person (the trustee) at the request of another (the settlor) for the benefit of a third party (the beneficiary). • For a trust to be valid, it must involve specific property, reflect the settlor's intent, and be created for a lawful purpose. The two primary types of trusts are private trusts and charitable trusts (see below). [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.] 2. A fiduciary relationship regarding property and charging the person with title to the property with equitable duties to deal with it for another's benefit; the confidence placed in a trustee, together with the trustee's obligations toward the property and the beneficiary. • A trust arises as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. See FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP. 3. The property so held; CORPUS(1).

“[A] trust involves three elements, namely, (1) a trustee, who holds the trust property and is subject to equitable duties to deal with it for the benefit of another; (2) a beneficiary, to whom the trustee owes equitable duties to deal with the trust property for his benefit; (3) trust property, which is held by the trustee for the beneficiary.” Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 2 cmt. h (1959).

“One must distinguish, ... [in] countries where English is spoken, between a wide and a narrow sense of the word ‘trust.’ In the wide sense a trust exists when property is to be held or administered by one person on behalf of another or for some purpose other than his own benefit... In the narrow or strict sense a trust exists when the creator of the trust ... hands over or is bound to hand over the control of an asset which, or the proceeds of which, is to be administered by another (the trustee or administrator) in his capacity as such for the benefit of some person (beneficiary) other than the trustee or for some impersonal object. A trust in this sense is a species of the genus ‘trust’ in the wide sense.” Tony Honoré, The South African Law of Trusts §§ 1–2, at 1–3 (3d ed. 1985).

“Some courts and legal writers have defined a trust as a certain kind of right that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has in the trust property, thus looking at it from the point of view of the beneficiary. While it is true that the beneficiary has the right or interest described, the trust is something more than the right or interest of the beneficiary. The trust is the whole juridical device: the legal relationship between the parties with respect to the property that is its subject matter, including not merely the duties that the trustee owes to the beneficiary and to the rest of the world, but also the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that the beneficiary has against the trustee and against the rest of the world. It would seem proper, therefore, to define the trust either as a relationship having certain characteristics stated in the definition or perhaps as a juridical device or legal institution involving such a relationship.” 1 Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 2.4, at 42 (4th ed. 1987).

A-B trust. See bypass trust.

accumulation trust. A trust in which the trustee must accumulate income and gains from sales of trust assets for ultimate disposition with the principal when the trust terminates. • Many states restrict the time over which accumulations may be made or the amount that may be accumulated. [Cases: Trusts 280. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 544–550.]

active trust.A trust in which the trustee has some affirmative duty of management or administration besides the obligation to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed express active trust; special trust; operative trust. Cf. passive trust. [Cases: Trusts 135. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 242.]

alimony trust.A trust in which the payor spouse transfers to the trustee property from which the payee spouse, as beneficiary, will be supported after a divorce or separation.

annuity trust.A trust from which the trustee must pay a sum certain annually to one or more beneficiaries for their respective lives or for a term of years, and must then either transfer the remainder to or for the use of a qualified charity or retain the remainder for such a use. • The sum certain must not be less than 5% of the initial fair market value of the property transferred to the trust by the donor. A qualified annuity trust must comply with the requirements of IRC (26 USCA) § 664. [Cases: Trusts 281. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 532.]

asset-protection trust.See self-settled trust.

bank-account trust.See Totten trust.

blended trust.A trust in which the beneficiaries are a group, with no member of the group having a separable individual interest. • Courts rarely recognize these trusts.

blind trust.A trust in which the settlor places investments under the control of an independent trustee, usu. to avoid a conflict of interest.

bond trust.A trust whose principal consists of bonds that yield interest income.

business trust.A form of business organization, similar to a corporation, in which investors receive transferable certificates of beneficial interest (instead of stock shares). — Also termed Massachusetts trust; common-law trust. [Cases: Joint–Stock Companies and Business Trusts 1, 8. C.J.S. Business Trusts §§ 2–8, 10–12, 17–18, 37; Joint Stock Companies §§ 2–4, 6, 11.]

bypass trust.A trust into which just enough of a decedent's estate passes, so that the estate can take advantage of the unified credit against federal estate taxes. 26 USCA § 2010. — Also termed credit-shelter trust; A–B trust; marital life-estate trust. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit under TAX CREDIT.

charitable lead trust.An irrevocable trust that is made in favor of a charity and that allows the charity to receive income from the trust property for a specified period, after which the property reverts to the settlor's estate.

charitable-remainder annuity trust. A charitable-remainder trust in which the beneficiaries receive for a specified period a fixed payment of 5% or more of the fair market value of the original principal, after which the remaining principal passes to charity. — Abbr. CRAT. — Also termed charitable-remainder-trust retirement fund. [Cases: Charities 6; Trusts 281. C.J.S. Charities § 4; Trover and Conversion § 532.]

charitable-remainder trust. A trust that consists of assets that are designated for a charitable purpose and that are paid over to the trust after the expiration of a life estate or intermediate estate. — Abbr. CRT. — Also termed split-interest trust. [Cases: Charities 4. C.J.S. Charities §§ 3–4.]

charitable-remainder-trust retirement fund. See charitable-remainder annuity trust.

charitable trust. A trust created to benefit a specific charity, specific charities, or the general public rather than a private individual or entity. • Charitable trusts are often eligible for favorable tax treatment. — Also termed public trust; charitable use. See charitable deduction under DEDUCTION; CY PRES. Cf. private trust. [Cases: Charities 1; Internal Revenue 4048; Taxation 241.1(2), 876(1), 1022. C.J.S. Charities §§ 2–3; Taxation §§ 279, 329–333, 1713, 1876.]

Claflin trust. See indestructible trust.

Clifford trust. An irrevocable trust, set up for at least ten years and a day, whereby income from the trust property is paid to the beneficiary but the property itself reverts back to the settlor when the trust expires. • These trusts were often used by parents — with their children as beneficiaries — to shelter investment income, but the Tax Reform Act of 1986 eliminated the tax advantage by imposing the kiddie tax and by taxing the income of settlors with a reversionary interest that exceeds 5% of the trust's value. This term gets its name from Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 60 S.Ct. 554 (1940). — Also termed short-term trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3362. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 178, 180.]

common-law trust. See business trust.

community trust. See COMMUNITY TRUST.

complete voluntary trust. See executed trust.

complex trust. 1. A trust having elaborate provisions. 2. See discretionary trust.

constructive trust. An equitable remedy that a court imposes against one who has obtained property by wrongdoing. • A constructive trust, imposed to prevent unjust enrichment, creates no fiduciary relationship. Despite its name, it is not a trust at all. Cf. resulting trust. — Also termed implied trust; involuntary trust; trust de son tort; trust ex delicto; trust ex maleficio; remedial trust; trust in invitum. See trustee de son tort under TRUSTEE. Cf. resulting trust. [Cases: Trusts 91–111. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10, 12, 174–201.]

“A constructive trust is the formula through which the conscience of equity finds expression. When property has been acquired in such circumstances that the holder of the legal title may not in good conscience retain the beneficial interest, equity converts him into a trustee.” Beatty v.

Guggenheim Exploration Co., 122 N.E. 378, 380 (N.Y. 1919)(Cardozo, J.).

“It is sometimes said that when there are sufficient grounds for imposing a constructive trust, the court ‘constructs a trust.’ The expression is, of course, absurd. The word ‘constructive’ is derived from the verb ‘construe,’ not from the verb ‘construct.’ ... The court construes the circumstances in the sense that it explains or interprets them; it does not construct them.” 5 Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 462.4 (4th ed. 1987).

contingent trust. An express trust depending for its operation on a future event.

credit-shelter trust. See bypass trust.

Crummey trust. A trust in which the trustee has the power to distribute or accumulate income and to give the beneficiary the right to withdraw the amount of the annual exclusion (or a smaller sum) within a reasonable time after the transfer. • This type of trust can have multiple beneficiaries and is often used when the beneficiaries are minors. Gifts to a Crummey trust qualify for the annual exclusion regardless of the age of the beneficiaries. The trust assets are not required to be distributed to the beneficiaries at age 21. The validity of this type of trust was established in Crummey v. Commissioner, 397 F.2d 82 (9th Cir. 1968). — Also termed discretionary trust. See CRUMMEY POWER; annual exclusion under EXCLUSION. Cf. 2503(c) trust.

custodial trust. A revocable trust for which a custodial trustee is named to manage the assets for an incapacitated or disabled beneficiary. • The beneficiary does not have to be disabled or incapacitated at the time the trust is created. An adult beneficiary who is not disabled or incapacitated may terminate the trust at any time before his or her disability, incapacity, or death.

declared trust. See express trust.

defective trust. A trust that is treated, for income-tax purposes, as if it were the same entity as the grantor, but for estate-tax purposes is treated as an entity separate from the grantor. • Typically a trust is an independent entity that is taxed separately from the settlor. Because trust income is taxed at higher rates than individual income, the settlor may intentionally create a defect in the trust terms so that the trust's income will be taxable to the grantor. This is achieved by violating the grantor-trust rules of IRC §§ 671–677 in a way that does not affect the completeness of the gift under IRC §§ 2035–2042. A violation renders the trust “defective” because the settlor must recognize the income even if the settlor does not actually receive it. The attribution of tax liability and payment of taxes on trust income do not give the grantor an ownership in the trust, which remains separate from the settlor's estate and is not subject to estate taxes. destructible trust. A trust that can be destroyed by the happening of an event or by operation of law.

directory trust. 1. A trust that is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions. 2. See fixed trust.

direct trust. See express trust.

discretionary trust. 1. A trust in which the settlor has delegated nearly complete or limited discretion to the trustee to decide when and how much income or property is distributed to a beneficiary. • This is perhaps the most common type of trust used in estate planning. [Cases: Trusts 150, 177. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 269, 347–348, 350–360.] 2. See Crummey trust. Cf. mandatory trust; CRUMMEY POWER.

donative trust. A trust that establishes a gift of a beneficial interest in property for a beneficiary. • Most trusts are donative trusts. — Also termed gratuitous trust. [Cases: Trusts 35(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 55.]

dry trust. 1. A trust that merely vests legal title in a trustee and does not require that trustee to do anything. 2. See passive trust.

dynasty trust. A generation-skipping trust funded with the amount that is permanently exempt from generation-skipping tax and designed to last more than two generations. • In 2000, a settlor could contribute $1 million to a dynasty trust. Almost half the states allow dynasty trusts, despite their potential for lasting more than 100 years. — Also termed GST supertrust.

educational trust. 1. A trust to found, endow, or support a school. 2. A trust to support someone's education.

equipment trust. See EQUIPMENT TRUST.

estate trust. A trust that is established to qualify a deceased spouse's property for the marital deduction. • The trustee may be given discretion to distribute principal or income to the donor's spouse if the donor also provides that, at the surviving spouse's death, any accumulated income and remaining principal must be distributed to the surviving spouse's estate. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION.

ex delicto trust (d<<schwa>>-lik-toh). A trust that is created for an illegal purpose, esp. to prevent the settlor's creditors from collecting their claims out of the trust property.

executed trust. A trust in which the estates and interests in the subject matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust and require no further instruments to complete them. — Also termed complete voluntary trust. [Cases: Trusts 114. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 215.]

executory trust (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A trust in which the instrument creating the trust is intended to be provisional only, and further conveyances are contemplated by the trust instrument before the terms of the trust can be carried out. — Also termed imperfect trust. [Cases: Trusts 114. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 215.]

express active trust. See active trust.

express private passive trust. A trust in which land is conveyed to or held by one person in trust for another, without any power being expressly or impliedly given to the trustee to take actual possession of the land or exercise any ownership rights over it, except at the beneficiary's direction. [Cases: Trusts 136. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 243.]

express trust.A trust created with the settlor's express intent, usu. declared in writing; an ordinary trust as opposed to a resulting trust or a constructive trust. — Also termed direct trust; declared trust. [Cases: Trusts 1–61.5. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 73, 85; Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–127, 143.]

family-pot trust.A trust in which all the assets are kept in a single fund for the trustee to use for multiple beneficiaries (usu. children). • Family-pot trusts are typically testamentary and used to administer a donor's property until the donor's minor children have completed their education.

family trust.A trust created to benefit persons who are related to one another by blood, affinity, or law.

fixed trust.A trust in which the trustee may not exercise any discretion over the trust's management or distributions. — Also termed directory trust; nondiscretionary trust.

foreign-situs trust (sI-t<<schwa>>s). A trust created under foreign law. • This type of trust usu. has no significant income-tax benefits and is subject to greater reporting requirements than a domestic trust. Because creditors cannot easily reach the foreign trust's assets, it is frequently used as a means of asset-protection. — Also termed foreign trust; offshore trust.

general trust.See passive trust.

generation-skipping trust.A trust that is established to transfer (usu. principal) assets to a skip person (a beneficiary more than one generation removed from the settlor). • The transfer is often accomplished by giving some control or benefits (such as trust income) of the assets to a nonskip person, often a member of the generation between the settlor and skip person. This type of trust is subject to a generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601 et seq. See DEEMED TRANSFEROR; GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; SKIP PERSON. Cf. dynasty trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

governmental trust. 1. A type of charitable trust established to provide a community with facilities ordinarily supplied by the government, esp. by a municipality, and to promote purposes that are sufficiently beneficial to the community to justify permitting the property to be perpetually devoted to those purposes. • Examples of such facilities include public buildings, bridges, streets, parks, schools, and hospitals. 2. A type of charitable trust established for general governmental or municipal purposes, such as defraying the expenses of a governmental entity or paying the public debt. Restatement (Second) of Trusts §§ 373, 374 (1959).

grantor-retained annuity trust.An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive fixed payments at least annually, based on original fair market value of the property transferred. — Abbr. GRAT.

grantor-retained income trust.A trust in which a gift's value can be reduced by the grantor's retaining an income interest, for a specified time, in the gifted property. — Sometimes shortened to retained income trust. — Abbr. GRIT.

grantor-retained unitrust.An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive annual payments, the amount of which fluctuates based on the increase or decrease in the value of the property transferred. — Abbr. GRUT. Cf. grantor-retained annuity trust.

grantor trust. A trust in which the settlor retains control over the trust property or its income to such an extent that the settlor is taxed on the trust's income. • The types of controls that result in such tax treatment are set out in IRC (26 USCA) §§ 671–677. An example is the revocable trust.

gratuitous trust. See donative trust.

GST supertrust. See dynasty trust.

honorary trust. A noncharitable trust that is of doubtful validity because it lacks a beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. • Examples include trusts for the care and support of specific animals, or for the care of certain graves. The modern trend is to recognize the validity of such trusts, if the trustee is willing to accept the responsibility. If the trustee fails to carry out the duties, however, a resulting trust arises in favor of the settlor's residuary legatees or next of kin. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

Illinois land trust. See land trust.

illusory trust. An arrangement that looks like a trust but, because of powers retained in the settlor, has no real substance and is not a completed trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

imperfect trust. See executory trust.

implied trust. 1. See constructive trust. 2. See resulting trust.

indestructible trust. A trust that, because of the settlor's wishes, cannot be prematurely terminated by the beneficiary. — Also termed Claflin trust.

insurance trust. A trust whose principal consists of insurance policies or their proceeds.

inter vivos trust (in-t<<schwa>>r vI-vohs orvee-vohs). A trust that is created and takes effect during the settlor's lifetime. — Also termed living trust. Cf. testamentary trust. [Cases: Trusts 1, 58–61. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18, 96–127.]

investment trust. See investment company under COMPANY.

involuntary trust. See constructive trust.

irrevocable trust (i-rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A trust that cannot be terminated by the settlor once it is created. • In most states, a trust will be deemed irrevocable unless the settlor specifies otherwise. [Cases: Trusts 59. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 103–116.]

land trust. A land-ownership arrangement by which a trustee holds both legal and equitable title to land while the beneficiary retains the power to direct the trustee, manage the property, and draw income from the trust. — Also termed Illinois land trust; naked land trust. [Cases: Trusts 140(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 254, 256.]

life-insurance trust.A trust consisting of one or more life-insurance policies payable to the trust when the insured dies. [Cases: Trusts 37. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 60.]

limited trust.A trust created for a limited period. Cf. perpetual trust.

liquidating trust.A trust designed to be liquidated as soon as possible. • An example is a trust into which a decedent's business is placed to safeguard the business until it can be sold.

living trust.See inter vivos trust.

mandatory trust.A trust in which the trustee must distribute all the income generated by the trust property to one or more designated beneficiaries. — Also termed simple trust. Cf. discretionary trust.

marital-deduction trust.A testamentary trust created to take full advantage of the marital deduction; esp., a trust entitling a spouse to lifetime income from the trust and sufficient control over the trust to include the trust property in the spouse's estate at death. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 535.]

marital life-estate trust.See bypass trust.

Massachusetts trust.See business trust.

Medicaid-qualifying trust.A trust that is deemed to have been created in an effort to reduce someone's assets so that the person may qualify for Medicaid, and that will be included as an asset for purposes of determining the person's eligibility. • Someone who wants to apply and qualify for Medicaid, but who has too many assets to qualify, will sometimes set up a trust — or have a spouse or custodian set up a trust — using the applicant's own assets, under which the applicant may be the beneficiary of all or part of the payments from the trust, which are distributed by a trustee with discretion to make trust payments to the applicant. Such a trust may be presumed to have been established for the purpose of attempting to qualify for Medicaid, and may be counted as an asset of the applicant, resulting in a denial of benefits and the imposition of a penalty period during which the applicant cannot reapply. Nonetheless, Medicaid rules allow three types of trusts that do not impair Medicaid eligibility, since the trust assets are not considered the beneficiary's property: Miller trust, pooled trust, and under-65 trust. [Cases: Health 471(6).]

Miller trust.An irrevocable trust funded with the income of an incompetent beneficiary who seeks to qualify for Medicaid in a state with an income cap. • Funding is strictly limited to the beneficiary's income (from any source). The assets in the trust are not included in the beneficiary's estate for Medicaid purposes if the trust assets will be used to reimburse the state after the beneficiary's death. Trust distributions are kept below the income cap in order to preserve the beneficiary's Medicaid eligibility. This type of trust was first judicially sanctioned in Miller v. Ibarra, 746 F.Supp. 19 (D. Colo. 1990). — Also termed Miller's trust; qualified income trust.

ministerial trust.See passive trust.

minor's trust.See 2503(c) trust.

mixed trust.A trust established to benefit both private individuals and charities.

naked land trust. See land trust.

naked trust. See passive trust.

nominal trust. See passive trust.

nominee trust. 1. A trust in which the beneficiaries have the power to direct the trustee's actions regarding the trust property. 2. An arrangement for holding title to real property under which one or more persons or corporations, under a written declaration of trust, declare that they will hold any property that they acquire as trustees for the benefit of one or more undisclosed beneficiaries. — Also termed (in sense 2) realty trust. [Cases: Trusts 133–140. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 242–243, 245–251, 254–257.]

nondiscretionary trust. See fixed trust.

offshore trust. See foreign-situs trust.

onerous trust. A trust that places exceptionally heavy and time-consuming duties of responsibility and care on the trustee, often without providing for compensation. • Because of the burden and inequity of requiring the trust to be administered voluntarily, courts often grant a trustee a reasonable sum for the tasks performed.

oral trust. 1. A trust created by the settlor's spoken statements as opposed to a written agreement. • Trusts of real property must usu. be in writing (because of the statute of frauds), but trusts of personal property can usu. be created orally. — Also termed parol trust. [Cases: Trusts 17. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 28.] 2. A trust created by operation of law, such as a resulting trust or a constructive trust.

parol trust. See oral trust (1). passive trust. A trust in which the trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed dry trust; general trust; nominal trust; simple trust; naked trust; ministerial trust; technical trust. See bare trustee under TRUSTEE. Cf. active trust. [Cases: Trusts 136. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 243.]

pension trust. An employer-funded pension plan; esp., a pension plan in which the employer transfers to trustees amounts sufficient to cover the benefits payable to the employees. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust to which the settlor transfers ownership of his or her personal residence while retaining the right to live there for a specified term of years. • The trust cannot hold any assets other than the residence and proceeds resulting from damage to or destruction of the residence. Cf. qualified personal-residence trust.

personal trust. See private trust.

pet trust. A trust, usu. honorary, that is established for the care and maintenance of a particular animal or group of animals. • Pet trusts are generally invalid because animals are incapable of compelling a trustee to act, and animals have no standing in law. Effectively, the trust has no beneficiary. But some states (e.g., Colorado) statutorily recognize these trusts as valid. And pet trusts are covered in the Uniform Trust Code (§ 111(d)).

pooled trust. An irrevocable, discretionary trust that (1) is established and managed by a nonprofit association, (2) is funded with the assets of disabled persons, and (3) maintains a separate trust account for each beneficiary, but (4) pools the trust assets for investment purposes. • If the trust provides for distribution of a deceased beneficiary's interest to the state in reimbursement of Medicaid expenditures, a pooled-trust beneficiary may be eligible for Medicaid benefits. The assets contributed to the trust for the individual's benefit are not treated as the beneficiary's property. — Also termed pooled-assets trust.

pourover trust. An inter vivos trust that receives property (usu. the residual estate) from a will upon the testator's death. Cf. pourover will under WILL.

power-of-appointment trust. A trust in which property is left in trust for the surviving spouse. • The trustee must distribute income to the spouse for life, and the power of appointment is given to the spouse or to his or her estate. A power-of-appointment trust is commonly used to qualify property for the marital deduction. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION.

precatory trust (prek-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A trust that the law will recognize to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor even though the statement in question is in the nature of an entreaty or recommendation rather than a positive command. [Cases: Trusts 29. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 43.]

presumptive trust. See resulting trust.

private trust. A trust created for the financial benefit of one or more designated beneficiaries rather than for the public benefit; an ordinary trust as opposed to a charitable trust. • Three elements must be present for a private trust: (1) the demonstrated intent of the settlor, (2) trust property (as res), and (3) a certain beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. — Also termed personal trust. Cf. charitable trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

protective trust. A trust that is designed to protect the trust property to ensure the continued support of the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 152. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 270–272.]

“In a broad sense, a spendthrift, support, or other similarly protective trust is one created to provide a fund for the maintenance of the beneficiary and at the same time to secure it against the beneficiary's improvidence or incapacity.” 76 Am. Jur. 2d Trusts § 121 (1992).

public trust. See charitable trust.

purchase-money resulting trust. A resulting trust that arises when one person buys property but directs the seller to transfer the property and its title to another. • Although a purchase-money resulting trust is properly understood as a court-imposed equitable remedy rather than as a true trust, the buyer is occasionally referred to as the “beneficiary” and the titleholder as the “trustee.”

— Abbr. PMRT. [Cases: Trusts 72–83. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 128, 138, 140, 147–164.]

QTIP trust (kyoo-tip). A trust that is established to qualify for the marital deduction. • Under this trust, the assets are referred to as qualified-terminable-interest property, or QTIP. See qualified-terminable-interest property under PROPERTY. Cf. qualified domestic trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169(4). C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 536–537.]

qualified domestic trust. A trust for a noncitizen spouse qualifying for the marital deduction. 26 USCA § 2056(d). — Abbr. QDOT. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION. Cf. QTIP trust.

qualified income trust. See Miller trust.

qualified personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust that is funded with cash and the personal residence of the grantor, who retains the right to dwell in the residence for a specified term of years. • The trust can receive and hold additional cash to pay for trust expenses, mortgage installments, and improvements to the residence. — Abbr. QPRT. Cf. personal-residence trust.

real-estate investment trust. See REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

real-estate mortgage trust. See REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST.

realty trust. See nominal trust (2).

reciprocal trust. A trust arrangement between two parties in which one party is beneficiary of a trust established by the other party, and vice versa. • Such trusts are common between husband and wife.

remedial trust. See constructive trust.

resulting trust. A remedy imposed by equity when property is transferred under circumstances suggesting that the transferor did not intend for the transferee to have the beneficial interest in the property. — Also termed implied trust; presumptive trust. Cf. constructive trust. [Cases: Trusts 62–90. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10–11, 128–142, 144–173.]

retained income trust. See grantor-retained income trust.

revocable trust (rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A trust in which the settlor reserves the right to terminate the trust and recover the trust property and any undistributed income. [Cases: Trusts 59. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 103–116.]

savings-account trust. See Totten trust.

savings-bank trust. See Totten trust.

secret trust. An instrument, usu. a will, that appears to give an absolute gift to another although the donee has orally agreed with the grantor that he or she is to use the property for the benefit of some third party. • Courts admit evidence of the promise to prevent unjust enrichment and enforce it by imposing the remedy of a constructive trust upon the reneging “trustee.” Cf. semi-secret trust. [Cases: Trusts 35(3).]

self-settled trust. A trust in which the settlor is also the person who is to receive the benefits from the trust, usu. set up in an attempt to protect the trust assets from creditors. • In most states, such a trust will not protect trust assets from the settlor's creditors. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 156 (1959). — Also termed asset-protection trust.

semi-secret trust. An instrument that indicates who is to serve as a trustee but fails to identify either the beneficiary or the terms of the trust, or both. • Traditionally, this trust was deemed to fail for want of an ascertainable beneficiary. But the modern view is to provide the same relief as that given for a secret trust: to receive evidence of the donor's intent, including the intended beneficiary, and impose a constructive trust in his or her favor. Cf. secret trust.

shifting trust. An express trust providing that, upon a specified contingency, it may operate in favor of an additional or substituted beneficiary.

short-term trust. See Clifford trust.

simple trust. 1. See mandatory trust. 2. See passive trust.

special-needs trust. See supplemental-needs trust.

special trust. See active trust.

spendthrift trust. 1. A trust that prohibits the beneficiary's interest from being assigned and also prevents a creditor from attaching that interest; a trust by the terms of which a valid restraint is imposed on the voluntary or involuntary transfer of the beneficiary's interest. [Cases: Trusts 12, 141, 152. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 23, 263, 270–272.] 2. A similar trust in which the restraint on alienation results from a statute rather than from the settlor's words in the trust instrument.

“Origin of the term ‘spendthrift trust.’ The phrase ‘spendthrift trust’ seems to have been first used, as might be expected, in Pennsylvania. The earliest instance in which a use of the phrase has been found was in 1875, when it appeared in the syllabus of a case, though the court did not use it in its opinion. Four years later, in Overman's Appeal [88 Pa. 276 (1879)], the phrase is found in the auditor's report (in italics), while the opinion of the court in the same case refers to the trust in question as ‘a trust for a spendthrift as it is termed’ [id. at 278]. That the phrase had not become familiar by 1882 is indicated by Thackara v. Mintzer [100 Pa. 151 (1882)], where the head note refers to a ‘spendthrift son trust,’ but the court does not use that or any similar phrase. And in 1883, in the first edition of his Restraints on Alienation, [John Chipman] Gray used the phrase only rarely, and then spoke rather apologetically of ‘spendthrift trusts so called.’ In the second edition of this book, published twelve years later, the use of the phrase is frequent.” Erwin N. Griswold, Spendthrift Trusts § 33, at 32 (2d ed. 1947).

split-interest trust. See charitable remainder trust.

spray trust. See sprinkle trust.

sprinkle trust. A trust in which the trustee has discretion to decide how much will be given to each beneficiary. — Also termed spray trust. See SPRINKLE POWER.

standby trust. A trust created to manage a person's assets while he or she is out of the country or disabled.

supplemental-needs trust. A trust established to provide supplemental income for a disabled beneficiary who is receiving or may be eligible to receive government benefits. • This type of irrevocable trust is often used by parents of disabled children to ensure the beneficiary's eligibility for government benefits by expressly prohibiting distributions that may be used for the beneficiary's food, shelter, or clothing.

support trust. A discretionary trust in which the settlor authorizes the trustee to pay to the beneficiary as much income or principal as the trustee believes is needed for support, esp. for "comfortable support" or "support in accordance with the beneficiary's standard of living." • The beneficiary's interest cannot be voluntarily transferred, but creditors who provide necessaries can usu. reach it; general creditors cannot. [Cases: Trusts 127. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 218.]

technical trust. See passive trust.

tentative trust. See Totten trust.

testamentary trust (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). A trust that is created by a will and takes effect when the settlor (testator) dies. — Also termed trust under will. Cf. inter vivos trust. [Cases: Wills 669–694. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1425–1484, 1486–1550, 1552.]

Totten trust. A revocable trust created by one's deposit of money, typically in a savings account, in the depositor's name as trustee for another. • A Totten trust is an early form of "pay on death" account, since it creates no interest in the beneficiary unless the account remained at the depositor's death. Its name derives from the earliest decision in which the court approved the concept, even though the formalities of will execution were not satisfied: In re Totten, 71 N.E. 748 (N.Y. 1904). A Totten trust is commonly used to indicate a successor to the account without having to create a will, and thus it is a will substitute. — Also termed tentative trust; bank-account trust; savings-account trust; savings-bank trust; trustee bank account. [Cases: Trusts 34(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 56–58.]

"A deposit by one person of his own money, in his own name as trustee for another, standing alone, does not establish an irrevocable trust during the lifetime of the depositor. It is a tentative trust merely, revocable at will, until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration, such as delivery of the pass book or notice to the beneficiary. In case the depositor dies before the beneficiary without revocation, or some decisive act or declaration of disaffirmance, the presumption arises that an absolute trust was created as to the balance on hand at the death of the depositor." In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 125–26 (1904) (Vann, J.).

trust de son tort (d<<schwa>> sawn [or son] tor[t]). See constructive trust.

trust ex delicto. See constructive trust.

trust ex maleficio. See constructive trust.

trust for support. A trust that, by its terms, provides that the trustee must pay or apply only as much of the income and principal as is necessary for the education and support of the beneficiary.

trust in invitum. See constructive trust.

trust under will. See testamentary trust.

2503(c) trust. A trust with only one beneficiary, who must be a minor and must have the power to withdraw all assets from the trust upon attaining the age of 21. • This type of trust derives its name from the requirements set forth in IRC (26 USCA) § 2503(c). Although the trust may continue after the beneficiary turns 21, gifts to the trust will no longer qualify for the annual exclusion if the beneficiary has no immediate right to withdraw the gift.

under-65 trust. A discretionary trust established for the sole benefit of a Medicaid recipient who is under the age of 65. • This type of trust may be established by anyone except the beneficiary, who must be less than 65 years old at the time of creation. The assets in trust will not be included in the beneficiary's estate for purposes of determining Medicaid eligibility. The beneficiary may receive distributions from the trust during life, but any balance remaining in the trust must be used to reimburse the state for the beneficiary's Medicaid expenditures.

unit-investment trust. 1. A trust in which funds are pooled and invested in income-producing securities. • Units of the trust are sold to investors, who maintain an interest in the trust in proportion to their investment. 2. An investment company that gives a shareholder an undivided interest in a fixed pool of securities held by the trustee. • This type of company can be organized in several ways (as by trust indenture, contract of custodianship or agency, or similar instrument), but is most commonly organized with a trust indenture. Such a company does not have a board of directors and issues only redeemable securities, each of which represents an undivided interest in a unit of specified securities. 15 USCA § 80a-4. See investment company under COMPANY.

unitrust. A trust from which a fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust's assets, valued annually, is paid each year to the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 276. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 539–541.]

voluntary trust. 1. A trust that is not founded on consideration. • One having legal title to property may create a voluntary trust by (1) declaring that the property is to be held in trust for another, and (2) transferring the legal title to a third person who acts as trustee. [Cases: Trusts 13. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 25.] 2. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another.

voting trust. A trust used to hold shares of voting stock in a closely held corporation, usually transferred from a parent to a child, and empowering the trustee to exercise the right to vote. • The trust acts as custodian of the shares but is not a stockholder. Cf. VOTING GROUP. [Cases: Corporations 198.1(1). C.J.S. Corporations § 380.]

“At common law there was great suspicion of voting trusts. One commentator described a voting trust as ‘little more than a vehicle for corporate kidnapping.’ This attitude has largely disappeared. State statutes now uniformly recognize the validity of voting trusts and they have received a more hospitable judicial reception.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 199 (3d ed. 1991).

wasting trust. A trust in which the trust property is gradually depleted by periodic payments to the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 61(5). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 127.]

TRUSTEE

trustee (tr<<schwa>>s-tee), n. 1. One who, having legal title to property, holds it in trust for the benefit of another and owes a fiduciary duty to that beneficiary. • Generally, a trustee's duties are to convert to cash all debts and securities that are not qualified legal investments, to reinvest the cash in proper securities, to protect and preserve the trust property, and to ensure that it is employed solely for the beneficiary, in accordance with the directions contained in the trust instrument. [Cases: Trusts 133, 171. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 245–246, 318–320.]

bare trustee. A trustee of a passive trust. • A bare trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. See passive trust under TRUST.

corporate trustee. A corporation that is empowered by its charter to act as a trustee, such as a bank or trust company.

indenture trustee. A trustee named in a trust indenture and charged with holding legal title to the trust property; a trustee under an indenture.

joint trustee. See COTRUSTEE.

judicial trustee. A trustee appointed by a court to execute a trust.

quasi-trustee. One who benefits from a breach of a trust to a great enough degree to become liable as a trustee.

successor trustee. A trustee who succeeds an earlier trustee, usu. as provided in the trust agreement. [Cases: Trusts 169, 243. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 288–294, 298–299, 341.]

testamentary trustee (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. [Cases: Wills 681. C.J.S. Wills § 1454.]

township trustee. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, a township's affairs are entrusted. [Cases: Towns 28. C.J.S. Towns §§ 95–114.]

trustee ad litem (ad II-tem or -t<<schwa>>m). A trustee appointed by the court.

trustee de son tort (d<<schwa>> sawn [or son] tor[t]). A person who, without legal authority, administers a living person's property to the detriment of the property owner. See constructive trust under TRUST. [Cases: Trusts 170. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 317.]

trustee ex maleficio (eks mal-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh). A person who is guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct and is held by equity to the duty of a trustee, in relation to the subject matter, to prevent him or her from profiting from the wrongdoing.

2. Bankruptcy. A person appointed by the U.S. Trustee or elected by creditors or appointed by a judge to administer the bankruptcy estate during a bankruptcy case. • The trustee's duties include (1) collecting and reducing to cash the assets of the estate, (2) operating the debtor's business with court approval if appropriate to preserve the value of business assets, (3) examining the debtor at a meeting of creditors, (4) filing inventories and making periodic reports to the court on the financial condition of the estate, (5) investigating the debtor's financial affairs, (6) examining proofs of claims and objecting to improper claims, (7) furnishing information relating to the bankruptcy to interested parties, and (8) opposing discharge through bankruptcy, if advisable. A trustee is appointed or elected in every Chapter 7 case, and is appointed in every Chapter 12 and Chapter 13 case under the Bankruptcy Code. A trustee is not appointed or elected in a Chapter 11 case unless the court finds that a trustee is needed and appoints one. In most Chapter 11 cases, the bankruptcy estate is administered by the debtor in possession, rather than by a trustee. The role of a bankruptcy trustee varies depending on the type of bankruptcy case. 11 USCA §§ 701–703, 1104, 1202. — Also termed (in sense 2) bankruptcy trustee; trustee in bankruptcy. See UNITED STATES TRUSTEE. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3001–3011. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 194–198.]

interim trustee. A bankruptcy trustee appointed to perform all the functions and duties of a trustee until the regular trustee is selected and qualified. • Before the meeting of creditors, the interim trustee often preliminarily investigates the debtor's assets and financial affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3002. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 195.]

3.DIRECTOR(2).4.Parliamentary law. An officer who audits an organization's finances.

trustee, vb. 1. To serve as trustee. 2. To place (a person or property) in the hands of one or more trustees. 3. To appoint (a person) as trustee, often of a bankrupt's estate in order to restrain a creditor from collecting moneys due. 4. To attach (the effects of a debtor) in the hands of a third person.

TWELVE TABLES

Twelve Tables. Roman law. The earliest surviving legislation enacted by the Romans, written on 12 tablets in the 5th century B.C. • The Tables set out many rights and duties of Roman citizens, including debtors' rights, family law, wills, torts, civil procedure, and some public law. They substituted a written body of laws, easily accessible and binding on all citizens of Rome, for an unwritten usage accessible to only a few. The law of the Twelve Tables was also known as the Lex Duodecim Tabularum.

“The Twelve Tables continued to be recognized for many centuries as the fundamental law of the Romans; they did not formally lose this character until it was taken from them by the legislation of Justinian.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 74–75 (1881).

TWENTIETH AMENDMENT

Twentieth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that changed the date of the presidential and vice-presidential inaugurations from March 4 to January 20, and the date for congressional convention from March 4 to January 3, thereby eliminating the short session of Congress, during which a number of members sat who had not been reelected to office. — Also termed lame-duck amendment. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-FIFTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-fifth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1967, that established rules of succession for the presidency and vice presidency in the event of death, resignation, or incapacity. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-FIRST AMENDMENT

Twenty-first Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that repealed the 18th Amendment (which established national Prohibition) and returned the power to regulate alcohol to the states. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 17. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors § 35.]

2503(C) TRUST

2503(c) trust. See TRUST.

TWENTY-FOURTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-fourth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1964, that prohibits the federal and state governments from restricting the right to vote in a federal election because of one's failure to pay a poll tax or other tax. [Cases: Elections 83. C.J.S. Elections § 29.]

TWENTY-SECOND AMENDMENT

Twenty-second Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1951, that prohibits a person from being elected President more than twice (or, if the person succeeded to the office with more than half the predecessor's term remaining, more than once). [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-SEVENTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-seventh Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1992, that prevents a pay raise for senators and representatives from taking effect until a new Congress convenes. • This amendment was proposed as part of the original Bill of Rights in 1789, but it took 203 years for the required three-fourths of the states to ratify it. — Also termed Madison Amendment. [Cases: United States 39(6). C.J.S. United States §§ 24, 61.]

TWENTY-SIXTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-sixth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1971, that sets the minimum voting age at 18 for all state and federal elections. [Cases: Elections 18. C.J.S. Elections § 13.]

TWENTY-THIRD AMENDMENT

Twenty-third Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1961, that allows District of Columbia residents to vote in presidential elections.

twist, n. Slang. An informant who provides testimony in exchange for leniency in sentencing, rather than for money. See INFORMANT.

twisting, n. An insurance agent's or company's misrepresenting or misstating facts, or giving an incomplete comparison of policies, to induce an insured to give up a policy in one company and buy another company's policy. [Cases: Insurance 1563, 1618. C.J.S. Insurance § 91.]

TWO-CONTROLLED-STUDIES STANDARD

two-controlled-studies standard. The requirement by the Federal Trade Commission that before the maker of an over-the-counter painkiller can advertise that it is better or has fewer side effects than another brand, the maker must verify the claim in two scientifically controlled studies.

TWO-DISMISSAL RULE

two-dismissal rule. The rule that a notice of voluntary dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits — not merely as a dismissal without prejudice — when filed by a plaintiff who has already dismissed the same claim in another court. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1714; Pretrial Procedure 519. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit § 13.]

TWO-ISSUE RULE

two-issue rule. The rule that if multiple issues were submitted to a trial jury and at least one of them is error-free, the appellate court should presume that the jury based its verdict on the proper issue — not on an erroneous one — and should therefore affirm the judgment. [Cases: Appeal and Error 1136. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 714, 770, 826.]

two-party payment.See PAYMENT.

TWO-ROUND VOTING

two-round voting.See VOTING.

TWO-STAGE TRIAL

TWO-TIER OFFER

two-tier offer.A two-step technique by which a bidder tries to acquire a target corporation, the first step involving a cash tender offer and the second usu. a merger in which the target company's remaining shareholders receive securities from the bidder (these securities ordinarily being less favorable than the cash given in the first step).

TWO-WITNESS RULE

two-witness rule. 1. The rule that, to support a perjury conviction, two independent witnesses (or one witness along with corroborating evidence) must establish that the alleged perjurer gave false testimony. [Cases: Perjury 34. C.J.S. Perjury § 43.] 2. The rule, as stated in the U.S. Constitution, that no person may be convicted of treason without two witnesses to the same overt act — or unless the accused confesses in open court. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 2. [Cases: Treason 13.C.J.S. Treason §§ 14–15.]

TYING

tying,adj. Antitrust. Of or relating to an arrangement whereby a seller sells a product to a buyer only if the buyer purchases another product from the seller <tying agreement>. [Cases: Monopolies 17.5(2). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 100, 102.]

TYING ARRANGEMENT

tying arrangement.Antitrust. 1. A seller's agreement to sell one product or service only if the buyer also buys a different product or service. • The product or service that the buyer wants to buy is known as the tying product or tying service; the different product or service that the seller insists on selling is known as the tied product or tied service. Tying arrangements may be illegal under the Sherman or Clayton Act if their effect is too anticompetitive. [Cases: Monopolies 17.5(2). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 100, 102.]

“The courts have developed an easily articulated text for so-called per se illegal tying arrangements, although the test varies from one circuit court to another.... In operation, the tests are similar, and the three-part test combines elements that are separated in the tests of other circuits. For purpose of analysis we use this five-part test: (1) There must be separate tying and tied products; (2) there must be ‘evidence of actual coercion by the seller that in fact forced the buyer to accept the tied product ...’; (3) the seller must possess ‘sufficient economic power in the tying product market to coerce purchaser acceptance of the tied product ...’; (4) there must be ‘anticompetitive effects in the tied market ...’; and (5) there must be ‘involvement of a “not insubstantial” amount of interstate commerce in the tied product market ....’ ” Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 392 (2d ed. 1999) (quoting Yentsch v. Texaco, Inc., 630 F.2d 46, 56, 57 (2d Cir. 1980)).

2. A seller's refusal to sell one product or service unless the buyer also buys a different product or service. — Also termed tying agreement; tie-in; tie-in arrangement. Cf. RECIPROCAL DEALING.

TYING PRODUCT

unconscionability (n-kon-sh-n-bil-tee). 1. Extreme unfairness. • Unconscionability is normally assessed by an objective standard: (1) one party's lack of meaningful choice, and (2) contractual terms that unreasonably favor the other party. 2. The principle that a court may refuse to enforce a contract that is unfair or oppressive because of procedural abuses during contract formation or because of overreaching contractual terms, esp. terms that are unreasonably favorable to one party while precluding meaningful choice for the other party. • Because unconscionability depends on circumstances at the time the contract is formed, a later rise in market price is irrelevant. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“Traditionally, a bargain was said to be unconscionable in an action at law if it was ‘such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept on the other;’ damages were then limited to those to which the aggrieved party was ‘equitably’ entitled. Even though a contract was fully enforceable in an action for damages, equitable remedies such as specific performance were refused where ‘the sum total of its provisions drives too hard a bargain for a court of conscience to assist.’ Modern procedural reforms have blurred the distinction between remedies at law and in equity. For contracts for the sale of goods, Uniform Commercial Code § 2-302 states the rule of this Section without distinction between law and equity. Comment 1 to that section adds, ‘The principle is one of the prevention of oppression and unfair surprise ... and not of disturbance of allocation of risks because of superior bargaining power.’ ” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 208 cmt. b (1979) (citations omitted).

“Nowhere among the [Uniform Commercial] Code's many definitions is there one of unconscionability. That the term is incapable of precise definition is a source of both strength and weakness.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 310 (3d ed. 1999).

procedural unconscionability. Unconscionability resulting from improprieties in contract formation (such as oral misrepresentations or disparities in bargaining position) rather than from the terms of the contract itself. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“Most cases of unconscionability involve a combination of procedural and substantive unconscionability, as it is generally agreed that if more of one is present, then less of the other is required.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 312 (3d ed. 1999).

substantive unconscionability. Unconscionability resulting from actual contract terms that are unduly harsh, commercially unreasonable, and grossly unfair given the existing circumstances. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

UNCONSCIONABLE

unconscionable (<<schwa>>n-kon-sh<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. (Of a person) having no conscience; unscrupulous <an unconscionable used-car salesman>. 2. (Of an act or transaction) showing no regard for conscience; affronting the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness <the contract is void as unconscionable>. Cf. CONSCIONABLE. #### UNCONSTITUTIONAL-CONDITIONS DOCTRINE unconstitutional-conditions doctrine. Constitutional law. 1. The rule that the government cannot condition a person's receipt of a governmental benefit on the waiver of a constitutionally protected right (esp. a right under the First Amendment). • For example, a television station that receives public funds cannot be forced to refrain from endorsing political candidates. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 445, 447–454, 460, 471.] 2. The rule that the government cannot force a defendant to choose between two constitutionally protected rights. [Cases: Criminal Law 36.6.] — Also termed doctrine of unconstitutional conditions.

UNDERWRITER

underwriter. 1.INSURER. 2. One who buys stock from the issuer with an intent to resell it to the public; a person or entity, esp. an investment banker, who guarantees the sale of newly issued securities by purchasing all or part of the shares for resale to the public. [Cases: Securities Regulation 11.18, 60.31. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 69, 71, 199.]

“The term ‘underwriter’ derives its meaning from former British insurance practices. When insuring their cargo shippers would seek out investors to insure their property. The insurers would add their signatures and would write their names under those of the shipper; hence the term ‘underwriters.’ Both in terms of the insurance industry and the securities markets, the concept of underwriting has expanded significantly since its inception.” Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 2.1, at 57 (2d ed. 1994).

undue experimentation. Patents. An unreasonable amount of research and testing that would be required for a person skilled in the appropriate art to make and work an invention from the specification in the patent application. • If undue experimentation would be required, the application fails the embodiment requirement of 35 USCA § 112. See WANDS TEST. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

undue hardship. See HARDSHIP.

UNDUE INFLUENCE

undue influence. 1. The improper use of power or trust in a way that deprives a person of free will and substitutes another's objective. • Consent to a contract, transaction, or relationship or to conduct is voidable if the consent is obtained through undue influence. — Also termed implied coercion; moral coercion. [Cases: Contracts 96. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 4, 136, 139–140, 187, 189–194.]

“Undue influence is unfair persuasion of a party who is under the domination of the person exercising the persuasion or who by virtue of the relation between them is justified in assuming that the person will not act in a manner inconsistent with his welfare.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 177(1) (1979).

“When at the turn of the twentieth century, the common law doctrine of duress was expanded to provide relief for coercion irrespective of the means of coercion, much of the work of undue influence became unnecessary. The doctrine has a much more specialized role today, although often enough the precedents decided when the more general doctrine prevailed are cited and quoted to the general confusion of the profession. Today the gist of the doctrine is unfair persuasion rather than coercion. Euphoria rather than fear is often, but certainly not always, the state of mind of the party unduly influenced.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-9, at 351–52 (3d ed. 1987).

2. Wills & estates. Coercion that destroys a testator's free will and substitutes another's objectives in its place. • When a beneficiary actively procures the execution of a will, a presumption of undue influence may be raised, based on the confidential relationship between the influencer and the person influenced. — Also termed improper influence; (formerly, in both senses) suggestion. See COERCION; DURESS. [Cases: Wills 154. C.J.S. Wills § 345.]

UNFAIR COMPETITION

unfair competition. 1. Dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce; esp., the practice of endeavoring to pass off one's own goods or products in the market for those of another by means of imitating or counterfeiting the name, brand, size, shape, or other distinctive characteristic of the article or its packaging. [Cases: Trade Regulation 403. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 98.] 2. The body of law encompassing various business and privacy torts, all generally based on deceitful trade practices, including passing off, false advertising, commercial disparagement, and misappropriation.

“The legal doctrine of unfair competition is a development of the fundamental idea that dealings based on deceit are legally wrong.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 6 (1929).

UNFAIR HEARING

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE

unfair labor practice. Any conduct prohibited by state or federal law governing the relations among employers, employees, and labor organizations. • Examples of unfair labor practices by an employer include (1) interfering with protected employee rights, such as the right to self-organization, (2) discriminating against employees for union-related activities, (3) retaliating against employees who have invoked their rights, and (4) refusing to engage in collective bargaining. Examples of unfair labor practices by a labor organization include causing an employer to discriminate against an employee, engaging in an illegal strike or boycott, causing an employer to pay for work not to be performed (i.e., featherbedding), and refusing to engage in collective bargaining. 29 USCA §§ 151–169. [Cases: Labor Relations 361–396. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 153–154, 159–160, 318, 328–401, 521.]

unfair persuasion. Contracts. A type of undue influence in which a stronger party achieves a result by means that seriously impair the weaker party's free and competent exercise of judgment. • Unfair persuasion is a lesser form of undue influence than duress and misrepresentation. The two primary factors to be considered are the unavailability of independent advice and the susceptibility of the person persuaded. See UNDUE INFLUENCE(1). [Cases: Contracts 96. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 4, 136, 139–140, 187, 189–194.]

UNFAIR SURPRISE

unfair surprise. A situation in which a party, having had no notice of some action or proffered evidence, is unprepared to answer or refute it.

UNFAIR TRADE

unfair trade. An inequitable business practice; esp., the act or an instance of a competitor's repeating of words in a way that conveys a misrepresentation that materially injures the person who first used the words, by appropriating credit of some kind earned by the first user. [Cases: Trade Regulation 862.1.]

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES AND CONSUMER PROTECTION LAW

Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law. A model statute patterned on the Federal Trade Commission Act and proposed by the FTC in 1967 for adoption by the states; a state law providing consumer-protection remedies, including private causes of action, for deceptive trade practices and false advertising. • The Act gives the state attorney general power to regulate unfair and deceptive trade practices. It also gives consumers a right to sue offenders directly. — Also termed Little FTC Act. — Abbr. UTPCPL.

UNFIT

unfit, adj. 1. Unsuitable; not adapted or qualified for a particular use or service <the buyer returned the unfit goods to the seller and asked for a refund>. [Cases: Contracts 312(5); Sales 284(1). C.J.S. Contracts § 562; Sales §§ 251, 253, 257.] 2. Family law. Morally unqualified; incompetent <the judge found the mother unfit and so found that awarding custody of the child to the father was in the child's best interests>. [Cases: Child Custody 32; Infants 154.1–159. C.J.S. Infants §§ 31, 36–40, 43–44, 51–52, 55, 62.]

UNFITNESS OF A PARENT

unfitness of a parent. Family law. A parent's failure to exhibit a reasonable concern for, interest in, or responsibility for a child's welfare. • Regardless of the specific ground for an allegation of unfitness, a court considers the parent's actions and the circumstances surrounding the conduct in deciding whether unfitness has been demonstrated.

UNFORESEEN

unforeseen, adj. Not foreseen; not expected <unforeseen circumstances>.

UNFRIENDLY SUITOR

UNICA TAXATIO

unica taxatio (yoo-n<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>> tak-say-shee-oh). [Law Latin “a single taxation”] Hist. The practice of having the jury assess damages against a defaulting defendant as well as a defendant who contests the case.

UNICO CONTEXTU

unico contextu (yoo-ni-koh k<<schwa>>n-teks-t[y]oo). [Law Latin] Hist. In one connection. • The phrase appeared in reference to that which was accomplished by the same act or by different acts performed at the same time.

“When there are more parties than one to a deed, it is not essential to the validity of its execution that they should subscribe unico contextu — i.e., it is not necessary for them to subscribe at the same time and place. But where (as was formerly required) two notaries subscribed for a person who could not write, it was necessary that they should subscribe unico contextu at the same time and place, and before the same witnesses.” John Trayner, Trayner's uniform, adj. Characterized by a lack of variation; identical or consistent.

UNIFORM ADOPTION ACT

Uniform Adoption Act. A 1994 model statute aimed at achieving uniformity in adoption laws.

- The current version of the UAA was promulgated in 1994 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. State adoption of the Uniform Adoption Act has been largely unsuccessful. Earlier versions, in 1953 and 1971, were amended many times but were enacted in only a few states. — Abbr. UAA.

UNIFORM ANATOMICAL GIFT ACT

Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. A 1968 model statute that created protocols that govern the giving and receiving of anatomical gifts.

- Under the Act, a person may donate all or part of one's own body for purposes of transplantation, therapy, research, or education. The original Act has been adopted in some form in all 50 states. It was revised in 1987, and the revised version has been adopted in some form in at least 22 states. — Abbr. UAGA.

UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. A 1968 model statute that sets out a standard (based on the child's residence in and connections with the state) by which a state court determines whether it has jurisdiction over a particular child-custody matter or whether it must recognize a custody decree issued by another state's court. • The Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act was replaced in 1997 by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. — Abbr. UCCJA. See HOME STATE. Cf. PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT ; UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION AND ENFORCEMENT ACT. [Cases: Child Custody 730–753.]

UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION AND ENFORCEMENT ACT

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. A 1997 model statute that provides uniform methods of expedited interstate custody and visitation orders. • This Act was promulgated as a successor to the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. The UCCJEA brings the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act into conformity with the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act and the Violence Against Women Act. The Act revises child-custody jurisdiction, giving clearer standards for original jurisdiction and a standard for continuing jurisdiction. The Act also provides a remedial process for enforcing interstate child custody and visitation. — Abbr. UCCJEA. Cf. UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT.

UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE

Uniform Code of Military Justice. 1. CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE. 2. A model code promulgated by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to govern state military forces when not in federal service. 11 U.L.A. 335 et seq. (1974). — Abbr. UCMJ. [Cases: Military Justice 502. C.J.S. Military Justice § 3.]

UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

Uniform Commercial Code. A uniform law that governs commercial transactions, including sales of goods, secured transactions, and negotiable instruments. • The Code has been adopted in some form by every state. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Bills and Notes 2; Sales 3.1; Secured Transactions 3. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 4; Sales §§ 3–4; Secured Transactions §§ 2, 6.]

UNIFORM COMPUTER INFORMATION TRANSACTIONS ACT

Uniform Computer Information Transactions Act. A model law that regulates software licensing and computer-information transactions. • The Act draws on contract law and the Uniform Commercial Code to create a regulatory scheme for licensing, rather than sales or lease, transactions. Among other things, UCITA applies to contracts for the licensing or purchase of software, contracts for software development, and contracts for access to databases through the Internet. It does not cover goods or services contracts within the scope of the UCC. — Abbr. UCITA.

UNIFORM CONSUMER CREDIT CODE

Uniform Consumer Credit Code. A uniform law designed to simplify and modernize the consumer credit and usury laws, to improve consumer understanding of the terms of credit transactions, to protect consumers against unfair practices, and the like. • This Code has been adopted by only a few states. — Abbr. UCCC; U3C. — Also termed Consumer Credit Code. See CONSUMER CREDIT PROTECTION ACT . [Cases: Consumer Credit 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 274.]

UNIFORM CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT

Uniform Controlled Substances Act.A uniform act, adopted by many states and the federal government, governing the sale, use, and distribution of drugs.21 USCA §§ 801 et seq. [Cases: Controlled Substances 4, 20.]

UNIFORM CRIME REPORTS

Uniform Crime Reports.A series of annual criminological studies (each entitled Crime in the United States) prepared by the FBI. • The reports include data on eight index offenses, statistics on arrests, and information on offenders, crime rates, and the like. — Abbr. UCR.

UNIFORM CUSTOMS AND PRACTICE FOR COMMERCIAL DOCUMENTARY CREDITS

Uniform Customs and Practice for Commercial Documentary Credits.A publication of the International Chamber of Commerce that codifies widespread customs of bankers and merchants relating to the mechanics and operation of letters of credit. • Courts look to this publication to supplement and help interpret primary sources of credit law, such as UCC Article 5. — Abbr. UCP. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

UNIFORM DECEPTIVE TRADE PRACTICES ACT

Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act.A 1964 model state statute that codified many common-law intellectual-property torts, such as trademark infringement, passing off, trade disparagement, and false advertising, and that provided additional consumer protection against other forms of commercial deception. • The Act provides a laundry list of prohibited practices, all involving misrepresentation. — Abbr. UDTPA. See BABY FTC ACT. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65.]

UNIFORM DETERMINATION OF DEATH ACT

Uniform Determination of Death Act.A 1978 model statute that provides a comprehensive basis for determining death. • This is a technical act that merely defines death clinically and does not deal with suicide, assisted suicide, or the right to die. The Act was revised in 1980. It has been adopted in almost all states.

UNIFORM DISPOSITION OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY AT DEATH ACT

Uniform Disposition of Community Property at Death Act.A 1971 model statute designed for non-community-property states to preserve the rights of each spouse in property that was community property before the spouses moved to non-community-property states, unless they have severed or altered their community-property rights.

UNIFORM DIVISION OF INCOME FOR TAX PURPOSES ACT

Uniform Division of Income for Tax Purposes Act. A uniform law, adopted by some states, that provides criteria to assist in assigning the total taxable income of a multistate corporation among the various states. — Abbr. UDITPA. [Cases: Taxation 1005. C.J.S. Taxation § 1719.]

UNIFORM DIVORCE RECOGNITION ACT

Uniform Divorce Recognition Act. A 1947 model code adopted by some states regarding full-faith-and-credit issues that arise in divorces. — Abbr. UDRA. [Cases: Divorce 351. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 769, 772.]

UNIFORM DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY ACT

Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act. A 1979 model statute that provides a simple way for a person to deal with his or her property by providing a power of attorney that will survive after the incompetence of the principal. • The Act was revised in 1987 and has been adopted in almost every state.

UNIFORMED SERVICES FORMER SPOUSES' PROTECTION ACT

Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act. A federal statute that governs the disposition of military pension benefits to former spouses of persons in the armed services. 10 USCA §§ 1401 et seq. • The Act permits state courts to treat military-retirement pay as marital property and to order payment of up to 50% of the retirement pay directly to the former spouse if the spouses were married for at least ten years while the employee served in the military. — Abbr. USFSPA.

UNIFORM ELECTRONIC TRANSACTIONS ACT

Uniform Electronic Transactions Act. A 1999 model law designed to support electronic commerce by providing means for legally recognizing and retaining electronic records, establishing how parties can bind themselves in an electronic transaction, and providing for the use of electronic records by governmental agencies. • UETA covers electronic records and digital signatures but applies only if all parties agree to do business electronically. — Abbr. UETA.

UNIFORM ENFORCEMENT OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS ACT

Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act. A uniform state law giving the holder of a foreign judgment the right to levy and execute as if it were a domestic judgment. [Cases: Judgment 814–830. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 965–1033.]

UNIFORM FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES ACT

Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act. A model act adopted in 1918 to deal with issues arising from fraudulent conveyances by insolvent persons. • This act differentiated between conduct that was presumed fraudulent and conduct that required an actual intent to commit fraud. — Abbr. UFCA. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 2.]

UNIFORM FRAUDULENT TRANSFER ACT

Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. A model act designed to bring uniformity among the states regarding the definition of, and penalties for, fraudulent transfers. • This act was adopted in 1984 to replace the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act. — Abbr. UFTA. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 2.]

UNIFORM GIFTS TO MINORS ACT

Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. — Abbr. UGMA. See UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT.

UNIFORM HEALTH-CARE DECISION ACT

Uniform Health-Care Decision Act. A 1993 model statute that facilitates and encourages the making of advance directives. — Abbr. UHCDA. See ADVANCE DIRECTIVE ; LIVING WILL.

UNIFORM INTERSTATE FAMILY SUPPORT ACT

Uniform Interstate Family Support Act. A 1992 model statute establishing a one-order system by which an alimony or child-support decree issued by one state can be enforced against a former spouse who resides in another state. • This statute has been adopted in every state and is the basis of jurisdiction in child-support suits. The purpose of the Act is to make the pursuit of interstate child support and paternity more effective, consistent, and efficient by requiring all states to consistently recognize and enforce support orders issued in other states. Before its enactment, there was considerable disparity among the states in the way they handled interstate child-support proceedings, since each state had differing versions of the earlier uniform law, the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. The Act was revised in 1996. — Abbr. UIFSA.

UNIFORM INTERSTATE JUVENILE COMPACT

Uniform Interstate Juvenile Compact. An agreement that regulates the treatment of juveniles who are not under proper supervision or control, or who have run away or escaped, and who are likely to endanger their own or others' health, morals, or welfare. • The Compact is relied on by the state to transport juvenile runaways back to their home states. It has now been universally adopted in the United States, but not always in its entirety. — Abbr. UIJC.

UNIFORMITY CLAUSE

Uniformity Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring the uniform collection of federal taxes. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3022.]

UNIFORM JUVENILE COURT ACT

Uniform Juvenile Court Act. A 1968 model statute designed to (1) provide for the care, protection, and moral, mental, and physical development of the children who come under its provisions, (2) provide juvenile delinquents with treatment, training, and rehabilitation rather than criminal punishment, (3) attempt to keep families together unless separation of parents and children is necessary for the children's welfare or is in the public interest, (4) provide a judicial procedure for a fair hearing and protection of juvenile delinquents' constitutional and other legal rights, and (5) provide simple interstate procedures to carry out cooperative measures among the juvenile courts of different states. — Abbr. UJCA.

UNIFORM LAW

uniform law. An unofficial law proposed as legislation for all the states to adopt exactly as written, the purpose being to promote greater consistency among the states. • All the uniform laws are promulgated by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. For a complete collection, see Uniform Laws Annotated. See uniform statute under STATUTE. [Cases: Statutes 226. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 358–361.]

UNIFORM LAW COMMISSIONERS

Uniform Law Commissioners. See NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS .

UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT

Uniform Limited Partnership Act. A model law promulgated in 1916 for adoption by state legislatures to govern the relationship between the partners of a limited partnership. • At one time it was adopted in all states except Louisiana. The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws promulgated the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (RULPA) in 1976, and made substantial amendments to it in 1985. The amended RULPA has been adopted by most states. — Abbr. ULPA.

UNIFORM MANDATORY DISPOSITION OF DETAINERS ACT

Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act. A 1958 model statute requiring a state to timely dispose of any untried charges against a prisoner in that state, on the prisoner's written request. • The Act has been adopted by several states. See INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON DETAINERS ACT.

UNIFORM MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE ACT

Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act. A 1970 model statute that defines marriage and divorce. • Extensively amended in 1973, the Act was an attempt by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to make marriage and divorce laws more uniform. The Act's greatest significance is that it introduced, as the sole ground for divorce, irreconcilable differences. Although the UMDA has been enacted in part in only a handful of states, it has had an enormous impact on marriage and divorce laws in all states. — Abbr. UMDA. — Also termed Model Marriage and Divorce Act. See IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCES .

UNIFORM PARENTAGE ACT

Uniform Parentage Act. A 1973 model statute that provides a means for determining parenthood for the general welfare of the child and for assigning child support. • The Act abolishes distinctions between legitimate and illegitimate status for children. Instead, it directs courts to determine rights and responsibilities based on the existence of a parent–child relationship. The Act has been adopted in all states.

---

UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT

Uniform Partnership Act. A 1914 model statute intended to bring uniformity to state laws governing general and limited partnerships. • The Act was adopted by almost all the states, but has been superseded in several of them by the Revised Uniform Partnership Act (1994). — Abbr. UPA. [Cases: Partnership 351. C.J.S. Partnership § 404.]

UNIFORM PREMARITAL AGREEMENTS ACT

Uniform Premarital Agreements Act. A 1983 model statute that governs the drafting of prenuptial contracts and provides a more certain framework for drafting complete and enforceable agreements. • Under the UPAA, a premarital agreement must be in writing and signed by the parties. It becomes effective only upon marriage. The agreement may govern the parties' assets, support, and obligations during the marriage, at death, and upon divorce. The UPAA has been adopted in some form in about one-third of the states. — Abbr. UPAA.

UNIFORM PRINCIPAL AND INCOME ACT

Uniform Principal and Income Act. A uniform code adopted by some states governing allocation of principal and income in trusts and estates. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 502; Trusts 272. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 847; Trover and Conversion § 551.]

UNIFORM PROBATE CODE

Uniform Probate Code. A 1969 model statute that modernizes the rules and doctrines governing intestate succession, probate, and the administration of estates. • It has been extensively amended many times since 1969 and has been enacted in a majority of states. — Abbr. UPC.

UNIFORM PRUDENT INVESTOR ACT

Uniform Prudent Investor Act. A 1994 model statute that sets a standard for the acts of a trustee, adopts a prudent-investor standard, and prefers a modern portfolio approach to investing. • Under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, the trustee is given significant power to delegate the selection of investments. The prudent-investor standard replaces the prudent-person standard of investing. The portfolio approach provides that no investment will be viewed in isolation; rather, it will be viewed as part of the entire portfolio. Under this theory, even though an investor loses trust assets on an investment, if there is an overall positive return, the investor will not be liable to the beneficiaries. — Abbr. UPIA. See PRUDENT-INVESTOR RULE.

UNIFORM PUTATIVE AND UNKNOWN FATHERS ACT

Uniform Putative and Unknown Fathers Act. A 1988 model statute aimed at codifying Supreme Court decisions on the rights of an unwed father in relation to his child. • The Act deals primarily with an unwed father's right to notice of a termination and adoption proceeding, to adjudication of paternity, to visitation, and to custody. — Abbr. UPUFA. — Also termed Model Putative Fathers Act; Putative Fathers Act.

UNIFORM RECIPROCAL ENFORCEMENT OF SUPPORT ACT

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act.A 1950 model statute (now superseded) that sought to unify the way in which interstate support matters were processed and the way in which one jurisdiction's orders were given full faith and credit in another jurisdiction. • This Act, which was amended in 1958 and 1960, was replaced in 1997 with the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act. — Abbr. URESA. See UNIFORM INTERSTATE FAMILY SUPPORT ACT. [Cases: Child Support 500–510. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 175, 204–206, 246–255.]

UNIFORM SIMULTANEOUS DEATH ACT

Uniform Simultaneous Death Act.A 1940 model statute creating a rule that a person must survive a decedent by at least 120 hours in order to avoid disputes caused by simultaneous deaths (as in a common disaster) or by quickly successive deaths of persons between whom property or death benefits pass on the death of one survived by the other. • In the absence of the 120-hour period of survival, each person is presumed to have survived the other for purposes of distributing their respective estates. The Act was revised in 1993 and has been adopted in some form by almost every state. See COMMORIENTES. [Cases: Death 5–6. C.J.S. Death §§ 6–7, 15–16.]

UNIFORM STATUS OF CHILDREN OF ASSISTED CONCEPTION ACT

Uniform Status of Children of Assisted Conception Act.A 1988 model statute aimed at ensuring certainty of legal parentage when assisted conception has been used. • The adopting state has the option of regulating or prohibiting contracts with surrogate mothers.

UNIFORM STATUTE

uniform statute. See STATUTE.

UNIFORM TRADE SECRETS ACT

Uniform Trade Secrets Act.A 1979 model statute, now enacted by most states, defining trade secret differently from the common law by being at once broader (because there is no continuous-use requirement) and narrower (because information “readily ascertainable by proper means” cannot qualify). • The Act has three elements: (1) the information must qualify as a trade secret; (2) it must be misappropriated, either through wrongful means or by breaching a duty of confidentiality; and (3) the owner must have taken reasonable precautions to keep the information secret. — Also termed Uniform Trade Secrets Protection Act. — Abbr. UTSA.

UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT

Uniform Transfers to Minors Act.A 1983 model statute providing for the transfer of property to a minor and permitting a custodian who acts in a fiduciary capacity to manage investments and apply the income from the property to the minor's support. • The Act has been adopted in most states. It was revised in 1986. — Abbr. UTMA. — Also termed Transfers to Minors Act. — Formerly also termed Uniform Gifts to Minors Act; Gifts to Minors Act. [Cases: Infants 28. C.J.S. Infants §§ 135, 143.]

UNIFY

unify, vb. To cause to become one; to form into a single unit.

The United States signed the treaty in 1955. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 34. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 21, 92.]

UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Universal Declaration of Human Rights. An international bill of rights proclaimed by the United Nations in December 1948, being that body's first general enumeration of human rights and fundamental freedoms. • The preamble states that “recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.” The Declaration contains a lengthy list of rights and fundamental freedoms. For the full text of the Declaration, see Appendix D. [Cases: International Law 10.45(1).]

“The Universal Declaration is the first comprehensive human rights instrument to be proclaimed by a universal international organization. Because of its moral status and the legal and political importance it has acquired over the years, the Declaration ranks with the Magna Carta, the French Declaration of the Rights of Man and the American Declaration of Independence as a milestone in mankind's struggle for freedom and human dignity. Its debt to all these great historical documents is unmistakable.” Thomas Buergenthal et al., International Human Rights in a Nutshell 35–36 (3d ed. 2002).

UNIVERSAL-INHERITANCE RULE

universal-inheritance rule. Wills & estates. A doctrine holding that an intestate estate escheats to the state only if the decedent leaves no surviving relatives, no matter how distant. • Through the first half of the 20th century, this rule was broadly followed in American jurisdictions. The Uniform Probate Code abandons the universal-inheritance rule and provides that if no member of the third or a nearer parentela survives the decedent, the intestate estate escheats to the state. — Also termed rule of universal inheritance. See PARENTELA. Cf. laughing heir under HEIR; GRADUAL METHOD.

UNIVERSALIST MOVEMENT

universalist movement. Copyright. A 19th-century campaign in Europe to recognize a worldwide copyright law based on an author's moral rights.

“The universalist movement evolved both in and out of France, starting with an international Congress of Authors and Artists in Brussels in 1858, attended by delegates of literary societies and universities, as well as by authors, artists, journalists, librarians, and lawyers. The movement gained momentum at an 1878 international literary congress in Paris presided over by Victor Hugo.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 19 (2001).

UNIVERSALITY

universality. 1. Equality of applicability. 2. Copyright. A nation's policy or practice of protecting an artist's rights in his or her their creation irrespective of the creator's nationality or where the work was created. • Universality, the most generous approach to international intellectual-property rights, is generally favored in countries that treat copyright as a moral right. Cf. RECIPROCITY(3); NATIONAL TREATMENT.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM

universitas rerum (yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tas reer-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A whole collection of things; a variety of individual things that are together regarded by the law as a whole. See JUS RERUM.

“In the time of Justinian the universitas rerum, or universitas iuris (both expressions are used) is a somewhat abstract conception: it means the sum or whole of a man's legal position so far as it concerns the ius rerum. The conception is important in law only on the occasions, of which death is by far the most important, on which the universitas passes from one to another... The expression universitas rerum is also used in another sense, to denote any collection of objects considered as a whole." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 172 (2d ed. 1953).

UNWRITTEN LAW

unwritten law.Law that, although never enacted in the form of a statute or ordinance, has the sanction of custom. • The term traditionally includes caselaw. — Also termed jus non scriptum; jus ex non scripto; lex non scripta; jus moribus constitutum.

“[T]he very words of the court promulgating the opinion and making the decision do not determine absolutely the rule of law but ... the rule of law is ascertained by discovering what general proposition was essential to the result reached, and by using the words of the opinion as a mere aid in the ascertaining of that rule, so that, although opinions are written, the authoritative rules derived from them are sometimes not written, but are ascertained by the use of reason, causing case law to be classed as unwritten law — lex non scripta, to use the Latin phrase.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 335 (3d ed. 1914).

“In the common law it is not too much to say that the judges are always ready to look behind the words of a precedent to what the previous court was trying to say, or to what it would have said if it could have foreseen the nature of the cases that were later to arise, or if its perception of the relevant factors in the case before it had been more acute. There is, then, a real sense in which the written words of the reported decisions are merely the gateway to something lying behind them that may be called, without any excess of poetic license, ‘unwritten law.’ ” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 145 (1968).

usage. 1. A well-known, customary, and uniform practice, usu. in a specific profession or business. See CUSTOM(1). Cf. CONVENTION(6). [Cases: Customs and Usages 1–22. C.J.S. Customs and Usages §§ 1–48.]

“A ‘usage’ is merely a customary or habitual practice; a ‘convention’ is a practice that is established by general tacit consent. ‘Usage’ denotes something that people are accustomed to do; ‘convention’ indicates that they are accustomed to do it because of a general agreement that it is the proper thing to do.” Herbert W. Horwill, The Usages of the American Constitution 22 (1925).

“Although rules of law are often founded on usage, usage is not in itself a legal rule but merely habit or practice in fact. A particular usage may be more or less widespread. It may prevail throughout an area, and the area may be small or large — a city, a state or a larger region. A usage may prevail among all people in the area, or only in a special trade or other group. Usages change over time, and persons in close association often develop temporary usages peculiar to themselves.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 219 cmt. a (1979).

custom and usage.See CUSTOM AND USAGE.

general usage.A usage that prevails throughout a country or particular trade or profession; a usage that is not restricted to a local area. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

immemorial usage.A usage that has existed for a very long time; long-standing custom. See TIME IMMEMORIAL. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

local usage.A practice or method regularly observed in a particular place, sometimes considered by a court in interpreting a document. UCC § 1-205(2). See CUSTOM AND USAGE. [Cases: Customs and Usages 9. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 15.]

trade usage.A practice or method of dealing having such regularity of observance in a region, vocation, or trade that it justifies an expectation that it will be observed in a given transaction; a customary practice or set of practices relied on by persons conversant in, or connected with, a trade or business. • While a course of performance or a course of dealing can be established by the parties' testimony, a trade usage is usu. established by expert testimony. — Also termed usage of trade; course of trade. Cf. COURSE OF DEALING; COURSE OF PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

“The existence and scope of a usage of trade are to be determined as questions of fact. If a usage is embodied in a written trade code or similar writing the interpretation of the writing is to be determined by the court as a question of law. Unless otherwise agreed, a usage of trade in the vocation or trade in which the parties are engaged or a usage of trade of which they know or have reason to know gives meaning to or supplements or qualifies their agreement.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 222 (1979).

use (yoos), n.1. The application or employment of something; esp., a long-continued possession and employment of a thing for the purpose for which it is adapted, as distinguished from a possession and employment that is merely temporary or occasional <the neighbors complained to the city about the owner's use of the building as a dance club>.

accessory use.Zoning. A use that is dependent on or pertains to a main use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 301–308. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 148–153.]

beneficial use.Property. The right to use property and all that makes that property desirable or habitable, such as light, air, and access, even if someone else owns the legal title to the property.

collateral use.Intellectual property. The legal use of a trademark by someone other than the trademark owner, whereby the other party must clearly identify itself, the use of the trademark, and the absence of affiliation with the trademark owner.

conditional use.Zoning. A use of property subject to special controls and conditions. • A conditional use is one that is suitable to a zoning district, but not necessarily to every location within that district. — Also termed special exception. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 195–197.]

conforming use.Zoning. The use of a structure or of the land in conformity with the uses permitted under the zoning classifications of a particular area, such as the building of a single-family dwelling in a residential zone. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 271. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 122.]

double use.Patents. An application of a known principle or process to a new use without leading to a new result or product. [Cases: Patents 27. C.J.S. Patents § 82.]

exclusive use. 1.Trademarks. The right to use a specific mark without exception, and to prevent another from using a confusingly similar mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 61, 331. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 28, 36, 71, 119.] 2.Property. The right of an adverse user to a property, exercised independently of any similar rights held by others; one of the elements of a prescriptive easement. See USER. [Cases: Adverse Possession 36–37; Easements 8(4). C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 27, 55, 57; Easements §§ 38, 44.]

experimental use. Patents. 1. The use or sale of an invention by the inventor for experimental purposes. 2. A defense to liability for patent infringement when the infringement took place only to satisfy curiosity or to complete an experiment, rather than for profit. [Cases: Patents 260. C.J.S. Patents § 406.]

highest and best use. Real estate. In valuing property, the use that will generate the most profit. • This standard is used esp. to determine the fair market value of property subject to eminent domain. — Often shortened to best use. — Also termed most suitable use. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

incidental use. Zoning. Land use that is dependent on or affiliated with the land's primary use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 301–308. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 148–153.]

most suitable use. See highest and best use.

nonconforming use. Zoning. Land use that is impermissible under current zoning restrictions but that is allowed because the use existed lawfully before the restrictions took effect. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 321–338. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 154–176.]

pious use. The designation and actual use of property for recognized religious or charitable purposes. Cf. superstitious use.

popular use. A person's imperfect right to enjoy public land. • A popular use is not legally enforceable. It is dependent on the government's will to allow access to the land.

public use. 1. Property. The public's beneficial right to use property or facilities subject to condemnation. See CONDEMNATION(2). [Cases: Eminent Domain 12–42. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 27, 29–55.] 2. Patents. Any use of or offer to use a completed or operative invention in a nonsecret, natural, and intended manner. • A patent is invalid if the invention was in public use more than one year before the patent's application date. [Cases: Patents 75. C.J.S. Patents §§ 107–109.]

“The term ‘public use’ is misleading, for any use from which the public is not excluded, even though none comes, is held to be public. Similarly, an actual public use of a machine, even though the invention feature be effectively concealed from inspection, is held to be public. It makes no difference whether the patent or other publication is that of the inventor or someone else.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 48 (3d ed. 1950) (citing Gillman v. Stern, 114 F.2d 28, 31 (2d Cir. 1940)).

reasonable use. Use of one's property for an appropriate purpose that does not unreasonably interfere with another's use of property. See REASONABLE-USE THEORY.

regular use. Insurance. A use that is usual, normal, or customary, as opposed to an occasional, special, or incidental use. • This term often appears in automobile-insurance policies in the definition of a nonowned automobile — that is, an automobile not owned by or furnished for the regular use of the insured. Nonowned automobiles are excluded from coverage under most liability policies. [Cases: Insurance 2657. C.J.S. Insurance § 1040.]

superstitious use. A designation or use of property for religious purposes not legally recognized or tolerated (such as gifts either favoring an unrecognized religion or supporting the saying of prayers for the dead). Cf. pious use.

2. A habitual or common practice <drug use>. 3. A purpose or end served <the tool had several uses>. 4. A benefit or profit; esp., the right to take profits from land owned and possessed by another; the equitable ownership of land to which another person holds the legal title <cestui que use>. See CESTUI QUE USE. — use (yooz), vb.

contingent use. A use that would be a contingent remainder if it had not been limited by way of use. • An example is a transfer “to A, to the use of B for life, with the remainder to the use of C's heirs.” — Also termed future use.

entire use. A use of property that is solely for the benefit of a married woman. • When used in the habendum of a trust deed for the benefit of a married woman, this phrase operates to keep her husband from taking anything under the deed. — Also termed entire benefit; sole use; sole and separate use.

executed use. Hist. A use that results from the combining of the equitable title and legal title of an estate, done to comply with the Statute of Uses' mandate that the holder of an estate be vested with legal title to ensure the holder's liability for feudal dues. See STATUTE OF USES.

executory use. See springing use.

future use. See contingent use.

official use. Hist. A use imposing a duty on a person holding legal title to an estate on behalf of another, such as a requirement that a feoffee to uses sell the estate and apportion the proceeds among several beneficiaries. • The Statute of Uses eliminated this type of use.

permissive use. Hist. A passive use resorted to before passage of the Statute of Uses in 1535 to avoid an oppressive feudal law (such as mortmain) by naming one person as the legal owner of property while allowing another to possess the property and enjoy the benefits arising from it.

present use. Hist. A use that has an immediate existence and that is subject to the Statute of Uses.

resulting use. A use created by implication and remaining with the grantor when the conveyance lacks consideration.

secondary use. See shifting use.

shifting use. A use arising from the occurrence of a certain event that terminates the preceding use. • In the following example, C has a shifting use that arises when D makes the specified payment: “to A for the use of B, but then to C when D pays $1,000 to E.” This is a type of conditional limitation. — Also termed secondary use. See conditional limitation under LIMITATION. [Cases: Trusts 131; Wills 625. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 241; Wills §§ 1314–1317, 1319.]

sole and separate use. See entire use.

springing use. A use that arises on the occurrence of a future event. • In the following example, B has a springing use that vests when B marries: “to A for the use of B when B marries.” — Also termed executory use. [Cases: Trusts 131; Wills 625. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 241; Wills §§ 1314–1317, 1319.]

USEFUL

useful, adj. Patents. (Of an invention) having a practical application. [Cases: Patents 46. C.J.S. Patents § 59.]

“[M]ere curiosities of invention, which do not have any intelligent purpose, are not useful in a patentable sense.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 37 (3d ed. 1950).

“When applied to a machine, ‘useful’ means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. The word is given a practical and not a speculative meaning.” 60 Am. Jur. 2d Patents § 131 (1987).

USEFUL-ARTICLE DOCTRINE

useful-article doctrine. See APPLIED-ART DOCTRINE.

USEFUL LIFE

useful life. The estimated length of time that depreciable property will generate income. • Useful life is used to calculate depreciation and amortization deductions. — Also termed depreciable life. See DEPRECIATION METHOD .

USE IMMUNITY

use immunity. See IMMUNITY(3).

USE IN COMMERCE

use in commerce. Trademarks. Actual use of a trademark in the sale of goods or services. • Use of a trademark in commerce is a prerequisite to trademark registration. This type of use fixes the trademark in a way that associates it with marketed goods or services, as contrasted with a token use intended to reserve some right to use the mark in the future. For goods, a mark is used in commerce if it is displayed on or with goods offered for sale, or placed on documents related to the goods. For services, a mark is used in commerce if it appears in advertising or on documents related to the services. In addition, the goods must be used or the services rendered in more than one state. Use of a trademark in interstate commerce is a prerequisite to federal trademark registration. [Cases: Trade Regulation 65, 153. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 32–33.]

USELESS-GESTURE EXCEPTION

useless-gesture exception. Criminal procedure. An exception to the knock-and-announce rule by which police are excused from having to announce their purpose before entering the premises to execute a warrant when it is evident from the circumstances that the authority and purpose of the police are known to those inside. See KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 54, 143.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 64–65, 195–201.]

USE PLAINTIFF

use plaintiff. Common-law pleading. A plaintiff for whom an action is brought in another's name. • For example, when the use plaintiff was an assignee (“A”) of a chose in action and had to sue in someone else's name, the assignor (“B”) would appear first on the petition's title: “B for the Use of A against C.” — Also termed usee. [Cases: Parties 4. C.J.S. Parties §§ 7, 17–20.]

USER

user (yoov-<<schwa>>r). 1. The exercise or employment of a right or property < the neighbor argued that an easement arose by his continuous user over the last 15 years>. Cf. NONUSER.

user de action (yoo-z<<schwa>>r dak-sh<<schwa>>n). [Law French] The pursuing or bringing of an action.

2. Someone who uses a thing <the stapler's last user did not put it away>.

end user. The ultimate consumer for whom a product is designed.

USUARY

usuary (yoo-zhoo-er-ee), n. Civil law. A person who has the use (usus) of a thing to satisfy personal and family needs; a beneficiary. — Also termed (in Roman law) usuarius.

USUCAPIO

usucapio (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kay-pee-oh), n. Roman & civil law. The acquisition of ownership by long possession begun in good faith; esp., the acquisition of ownership by prescription. • In classical law, the periods required were one year for movables and two for land. Under Justinian, the period was three years for movables and a minimum of ten years for land. See PRESCRIPTION (5). — Also termed usus (yoo-zoos); usucaption (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kap-sh<<schwa>>n); usucapion (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kay-pee-on or -<<schwa>>n). [Cases: Adverse Possession 1. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 2–5.] — usucapt,vb.

“There is no principle in all law which the moderns, in spite of its beneficial character, have been so loath to adopt and to carry to its legitimate consequences as that which was known to the Romans as Usucapion, and which has descended to modern jurisprudence under the name of Prescription.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 236 (17th ed. 1901).

USUFRUCT

usufruct (yoo-z<<schwa>>-fr<<schwa>>kt), n.[fr. Latin usufructus] Roman & civil law. A right to use and enjoy the fruits of another's property for a period without damaging or diminishing it, although the property might naturally deteriorate over time. • In Roman law, the usufruct was considered a personal servitude, giving a real right. In modern civil law, the owner of the usufruct is similar to a life tenant, and the owner of the thing burdened is the naked owner. La. Civ. Code art. 535. Cf. HABITATION(3). — Also termed perfect usufruct; usufructus; (in Scots law) liferent. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

legal usufruct. A usufruct established by operation of law, such as the right of a surviving spouse to property owned by the deceased spouse. La. Civ. Code art. 890. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 1, 29; Executors and Administrators 176; Wills 11. C.J.S. Dower §§ 2, 5–6, 41, 136–138; Executors and Administrators § 353; Wills §§ 76–87, 381.]

quasi-usufruct. 1. A right to consume things that cannot be used without being expended or consumed, such as money or food. • Unlike a perfect usufruct, a quasi-usufruct actually involves alteration and diminution of the property used. — Also termed imperfect usufruct. 2. Louisiana law. A usufruct over consumable things, such as money or harvested crops. La. Civ. Code art. 538. • The usufructuary has the right to consume or alienate the consumables and, at the end of the usufruct, to deliver to the naked owner either the value that the things had when the usufruct began or things of the same quantity and quality. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 176. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 353.]

“The Roman jurists, therefore, would not acknowledge a usufruct of money; though, in their desire to carry out the wishes of testators, they came at length to recognize a quasi-usufruct. For testators, being seldom learned in the law, would often set forth as legacies in their wills the usufruct of a designated sum .... In such a case the person named as legatee was allowed to receive the amount ... on giving security that when he died the same amount should be paid out of his own estate to the heres, the heir of the testator. The relation here, though bearing some resemblance to the usufruct, was really quite different; the person who received the money became absolute owner of it; the heir had no ownership, nothing but the assurance of receiving an equal amount at some future time.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 193 (1881).

USUFRUCTUARY

usufructuary (yoo-z<<schwa>>-fr<<schwa>>k-choo-er-ee), adj. Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a usufruct; of the nature of a usufruct.

usufructuary, n. Roman & civil law. One having the right to a usufruct; specif., a person who has the right to the benefits of another's property; a life-renter. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

USUFRUCTUS

usufructus. See USUFRUCT.

USURA

usura (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. 1. Money paid for the use of money; interest. 2. USURY. Pl. usurae (yoo-s[y]oor-ee).

USURAE CENTESIMAE

usurae centesimae (yoo-s[y]oor-ee [or yoo-z[y]oor-ee] sen-tes-<<schwa>>-mee). [Latin] Interest at the rate of 12% per year (1% per month), normally the highest rate allowed by law. • The Romans calculated interest rates by dividing the principal sum into one hundred parts, with one part being payable monthly as interest.

USURA MANIFESTA

usura manifesta (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] man-<<schwa>>-fes-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Manifest or open usury.

USURA MARITIMA

usura maritima (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] m<<schwa>>-rit-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>). [Latin] Interest taken on a bottomry or respondentia bond, proportioned to the risk and so not restricted by a usury law.

USURARIUS

usurarius (yoo-s[y]<<schwa>>-rair-ee-<<schwa>>s or yoo-z[y]<<schwa>>-). [Law Latin] Hist. A usurer.

USURA VELATA

usura velata (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] v<<schwa>>-lay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Veiled or concealed usury. • A creditor was guilty of usura velata when the creditor added usurious interest to the principal sum as if it were part of the original loan. Cf. UBI ABERAT ANIMUS FOENERANDI.

USURIOUS

usurious (yoo-z[y]oor-ee-<<schwa>>s or yoo-zhuu-ree-<<schwa>>s), adj. 1. Practicing usury . 2. Characterized by usury . [Cases: Usury 1, 10–42. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100, 119–141, 143–144, 146, 152–155, 157.]

USURPATIO

usurpatio (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The interruption of usucapio by loss of possession or a lawsuit by the real owner. Pl. usurpationes (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-shee-oh-nee-z).

USURPATION

usurpation (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-sh<<schwa>>n or yoo-z<<schwa>>r-pay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The unlawful seizure and assumption of another's position, office, or authority. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 86. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees § 114.] — usurp (yoo-s<<schwa>>rpor yoo-z<<schwa>>rp), vb.

usurpation of advowson (ad-vow-z<<schwa>>n). Hist. An injury consisting in the absolute ouster or dispossession of the patron from the advowson. • This happens when a stranger, without the right to do so, presents a clerk who is installed in office. See ADVOWSON.

USURY

usury (yoo-zh<<schwa>>-ree), n. 1. Historically, the lending of money with interest. 2. Today, the charging of an illegal rate of interest. 3. An illegally high rate of interest. — Also termed illegal interest; unlawful interest. [Cases: Banks and Banking 181; Building and Loan Associations 33; Usury 1. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 470, 680–681; Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 87–88, 91–97, 115; Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100.] — usurer (yoo-zh<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r), n.

USURY LAW

usury law. A law that prohibits moneylenders from charging illegally high interest rates. [Cases: Usury 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100.]

USUS

usus (yoo-s<<schwa>>s or yoo-z<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “use”] Roman law. 1. The right to use another's property, without the right to the produce (fructus) of the thing. • Usus was a personal servitude; it gave the holder a right in rem. Cf. USUFRUCT.

“It is essentially a fraction of a usufruct, usus without the fructus. In strictness, there was no right to any fruits but this was somewhat relaxed in practice. The usuary of a house might consume the fruits of the gardens in his household, but he might not sell them, as a usufructuary might.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 165 (2d ed. 1953).

2. The factual possession required for usucapio. 3. Lapse of time by which a wife was brought into the husband's family and under his marital power. See MANUS(1). Cf. COEMPTIO; CONFARREATIO. “Usus is the acquisition of [power over] a wife by possession and bears the same relation to coemptio as usucapion to a mancipation. A Roman citizen who bought some object of property and got possession of it, but not ownership, because he neglected to go through the mancipation prescribed by jus civile, might nevertheless become owner by usucapion, i.e. lapse of time; thus if the object was a movable, continuous possession for one year made him dominus. In like manner, if a man lived with a woman whom he treated as his wife, but whom he had not married by coemptio (or confarreatio), and the cohabitation lasted without interruption for a year, then at the end of that period the man acquired [power over] the woman as his wife, she passed to him in manum....” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 100 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

USUS BELLICI

usus bellici (yoo-s<<schwa>>s [or -z<<schwa>>s] bel-<<schwa>>-sI). [Latin] Int'l law. Warlike objects or uses. • This phrase refers to items that, though not inherently of a military nature, are considered contraband because they are used by a belligerent to support its war effort.

USUS FEUDORUM

Usus Feudorum (yoo-s<<schwa>>s [or -z<<schwa>>s] fyoo-dor-<<schwa>>m). See FEUDORUM LIBRI.

UT CURRERE SOLEBAT

ut currere solebat (<<schwa>>t k<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r-ee s<<schwa>>-lee-bat). [Latin] As it was wont to run. • This referred to the course of a stream.

UT DE FEODO

ut de feodo (<<schwa>>t dee fee-<<schwa>>-doh orfyoo-doh). [Law Latin] As of fee.

UTERINE

uterine (yoo-t<<schwa>>r-in), adj. Born of the same mother but having different fathers.

UTERINE BROTHER

uterine brother. See BROTHER.

UTERINE SISTER

uterine sister. See SISTER.

UTERQUE

uterque (yoo-t<<schwa>>r-kwee). [Latin] Each of two; both (considered separately).

UTERQUE NOSTRUM

uterque nostrum (yoo-t<<schwa>>r-kwee nos-tr<<schwa>>m). See UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM.

UTFANGTHIEF

utfangthief (<<schwa>>t-fang-theef). See OUTFANGTHIEF.

UT HOSPITES

ut hospites (<<schwa>>t hos-p<<schwa>>-teez). [Latin] As guests.

UTI

uti (yoo-tI), vb.[Latin] Civil law. To use.

UTI FRUI

uti frui (yoo-tIfroo-I). [Latin] Civil law. To have the full use and enjoyment of a thing, without damage to its substance.

UTILIS

utilis (yoo-t<<schwa>>-lis), adj.[Latin] Civil law. Useful; beneficial; equitable. • This word appeared in phrases such as actio utilis (ak-shee-oh yoo-t<<schwa>>-lis), meaning “equitable action.”

UTILITARIAN-DETERRENCE THEORY

utilitarian-deterrence theory.The legal theory that a person should be punished only if it is for the good of society — that is, only if the punishment would further the prevention of future harmful conduct. See hedonistic utilitarianism under UTILITARIANISM. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

UTILITARIANISM

utilitarianism. The philosophical and economic doctrine that the best social policy is that which does the most good for the greatest number of people; esp., an ethical theory that judges the rightness or wrongness of actions according to the pleasure they create or the pain they inflict and recommending whatever action creates the greatest good for the greatest number. • This is one type of consequentialism. As a way of analyzing intellectual-property rights, utilitarianism takes the point of view of society rather than the individual inventor, author, or artist, and justifies the rights as an incentive for social and technological progress. See CONSEQUENTIALISM. Cf. LOCKEAN LABOR THEORY; PERSONALITY THEORY. — utilitarian,adj. & n.

hedonistic utilitarianism.The theory that the validity of a law should be measured by determining the extent to which it would promote the greatest happiness to the greatest number of citizens. • This theory is found most prominently in the work of Jeremy Bentham, whose “Benthamite utilitarianism” greatly influenced legal reform in 19th-century Britain. Hedonistic utilitarianism generally maintains that pleasure is intrinsically good and pain intrinsically bad. Therefore, inflicting pain, as by punishing a criminal, is justified only if it results in a net increase of pleasure by deterring future harmful behavior. — Also termed Benthamism. See utilitarian-deterrence theory; BENTHAMITE. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

UTILITER ET EQUIVALENTER

utiliter et equivalenter (yoo-til-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r et i-kwiv-<<schwa>>-len-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. Duly and with equal effect.

utiliter impensum (yoo-til-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r im-pen-s<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Usefully expended.

utility. 1. The quality of serving some function that benefits society; meritoriousness. 2. Patents. Capacity to perform a function or attain a result claimed for protection as intellectual property. • In patent law, utility is one of the three basic requirements of patentability, the others being nonobviousness and novelty. In the calculation of damages for patent infringement, utility is the benefit or advantage of the patented product or process over the products or processes, if any, that had been used to produce similar results in the past. [Cases: Patents 47. C.J.S. Patents §§ 60–62.]

“[T]he utility requirement does not mandate that the invention be superior to existing products and processes in order to qualify for a patent. The utility standard reflects the judgment that society is better served by access to a library of issued patents describing as many inventions as possible, even if many of them do not achieve better results than public domain technology. This liberal view of utility allows subsequent inventors access to a greater variety of previous technologies, some of which may yet be judged the superior solution when employed within a different context.” Roger E. Schechter & John R. Thomas, Intellectual Property § 15.1, at 316 (2003).

3. A business enterprise that performs essential public service and that is subject to governmental regulation.

public utility. 1. A company that provides necessary services to the public, such as telephone lines and service, electricity, and water. • Most utilities operate as monopolies but are subject to governmental regulation. [Cases: Public Utilities 101. C.J.S. Public Utilities § 2.] 2. A person, corporation, or other association that carries on an enterprise for the accommodation of the public, the members of which are entitled as a matter of right to use its facilities.

UTILITY FUND

utility fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

UTILITY MODEL

utility model. Patents. A system of patent registration giving patent-like rights in some countries, usu. for a shorter term than a patent but with little or no search required. • Utility-model patents are not available in the U.S. or Great Britain, but are offered in Japan and many European countries, including Germany and France. Their provisions vary greatly. They are available for machines only, and not for chemicals. — Also termed petty patent; second-tier patent; small invention; (in German) Gebrauchsmuster.

UTILITY PATENT

utility patent. See PATENT(3).

UTI MOS EST IN FEUDIFIRMIS

uti mos est in feudifirmis (yoo-tImahs est in fyoo-di-f<<schwa>>r-mis). [Law Latin] Scots law. As is the custom in feu-holdings.

UT INFRA

ut infra (<<schwa>>t in-fr<<schwa>> also uut). [Latin] Hist. As below.

uti possidetis (yoo-tI pah-si-dee-tis). [Latin] 1.Int'l law. The doctrine that colonial administrative boundaries will become international boundaries when a political subdivision or colony achieves independence. 2.Roman law. An interdict ordering the parties to a lawsuit to maintain the possession of real property as it stands pending a decision on who owns it. Cf. UTRUBI.

uti rogas (yoo-tIroh-gas or -g<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. As you ask. • This was inscribed on a ballot to indicate a vote in favor of a bill or candidate. — Abbr. u.r.

UTITUR JURE AUCTORIS

utitur jure auctoris (yoo-ti-t<<schwa>>r joor-ee awk-tor-is). [Latin] Hist. He exercises the right of his predecessor in title.

UTITUR JURE COMMUNI

utitur jure communi (yoo-ti-t<<schwa>>r joor-ee k<<schwa>>-myoo-nI). [Latin] Hist. He relies on the common law.

UTITUR JURE PRIVATO

utitur jure privato (yoo-ti-t<<schwa>>r joor-ee prI-vay-toh). [Latin] Hist. He relies on his own private right.

utitur jure suo (yoo-ti-t<<schwa>>r joor-ee s[y]oo-oh). [Latin] Hist. He exercises his own right.

“The exercise of rights of property on the part of a proprietor ... cannot be interfered with, even where they are injurious in their effects to the adjoining property. In such case the proprietor is only doing that which he has a right to do, utitur jure suo.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 618–19 (4th ed. 1894).

utlagare (<<schwa>>t-lag-<<schwa>>-ree or <<schwa>>t-l<<schwa>>-gair-ee), vb.[Law Latin] Hist. To put (an offender) outside the protection of the law. See OUTLAWRY(2). Cf. INLAGARE.

UTLAGATION

utlagation (<<schwa>>t-l<<schwa>>-gay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.[Law Latin] Hist. The act of placing an offender outside the protection of the law; outlawry. — Also termed utlagatio. Cf. INLAGATION; OUTLAWRY(2).

UTLAGATUS

VA

VA.abbr. DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.

VACANCY

vacancy,n.1. The state or fact of a lack of occupancy in an office, post, or piece of property. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 55. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 100–102.] 2. The time during which an office, post, or piece of property is not occupied. 3. An unoccupied office, post, or piece of property; an empty place. • Although the term sometimes refers to an office or post that is temporarily filled, the more usual reference is to an office or post that is unfilled even temporarily. An officer's misconduct does not create a vacancy even if a suspension occurs; a vacancy, properly speaking, does not occur until the officer is officially removed.

VACANCY CLAUSE

vacancy clause.Insurance. A special indorsement allowing premises to be unoccupied beyond the period stipu-lated in the original insurance policy, so that the insurance remains in effect during policy extensions, often for a reduced amount. [Cases: Insurance 2133, 3049(5). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 419, 663–665, 908.]

VACANT

vacant,adj.1. Empty; unoccupied . • Courts have sometimes distinguished vacant from unoc-cupied, holding that vacant means completely empty while unoccupied means not routinely characterized by the presence of human beings. 2. Absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied <vacant land>.3. (Of an estate) abandoned; having no heir or claimant. — The term implies either abandonment or nonoccupancy for any purpose.

VACANTIA

vacantia (v<<schwa>>-kan-sh[ee]-<<schwa>>). See bona vacantia under BONA.

VACANTIA BONA

vacantia bona (v<<schwa>>-kan-sh[ee]-<<schwa>> boh-n<<schwa>>). See bona vacantia under BONA.

VADIARE DUELLUM

vadiare duellum (vad-ee-air-ee d[y]oo-el-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), vb.[Law Latin “to wage the duel”] Hist. To give pledges mutually for engaging in trial by combat.

VADIARE LEGEM

vadiare legem (vad-ee-air-ee lee-j⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), vb.[Law Latin “to wage law”] Hist. (Of a defendant in a debt action) to give security to make one's law on a day assigned — that is, the defendant would pledge, upon giving the security, to do two things on the appointed day in court: (1) take an oath in open court that the debt was not owed, and (2) bring 11 compurgators who would swear that they believed what the defendant said.

VADIATIO

vadiatio (vad-ee-ay-shee-oh), n.[Law Latin] Hist. Wager. Cf. INVADIATIO. Pl. vadiationes (vad-ee-ay-shee-oh-nee-z).

vadiatio duelli (vad-ee-ay-shee-oh d[y]oo-el-I). [Law Latin “wager of battle”] See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

vadiatio legis (vad-ee-ay-shee-oh lee-jis). [Law Latin “wager of law”] See WAGER OF LAW.

VADIMONIUM

vadimonium (vad-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-moh-nee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), n. Roman law. 1. A guarantee (originally backed by sureties) that a litigant would appear in court. 2. A solemn promise to this effect. — Also termed vadimony.

VADIUM

vadium (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), n. [Law Latin “pledge, bail, security”] Hist. 1. Security by a pledge of property.

vadium mortuum (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m mor-choo-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). [Law Latin “dead pledge”] A mortgage. • This was considered a “dead pledge” because an estate was given as security by the borrower, who granted to the lender the estate in fee, on the condition that if the money were not repaid at the specified time, the pledged estate would continue as the lender's — it would be gone from, or “dead” to, the borrower (mortgagor). — Also termed mortuum vadium. See MORTGAGE. [Cases: Mortgages 1. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6.]

vadium vivum (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m vI-v⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). [Law Latin “live pledge”] A living pledge, which exists when an estate is granted until a debt is paid out of its proceeds. • The pledge was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost; it was a “living pledge” because the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. — Also termed vivum vadium; vif-gage.

2. Wages; salary.

VADIUM PONERE

vadium ponere (vay-dee-*<<schwa>>m poh-n<<schwa>>*-ree), vb. Hist. To take bail for the appearance of a person in court.

VAGABOND

vagabond (vag-<<schwa>>-bond), n. Archaic. A homeless wanderer without means of honest livelihood; VAGRANT. • This term became archaic over the course of the 20th century, as vagrants won the right not to be forcibly removed from cities in such cases as Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156, 92 S.Ct. 839 (1972). In the 1980s and 1990s, vagabonds came to be known as street people and homeless people, or the homeless. — Also termed vagabundus (vag-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>*s).

“[A]ll idle persons or vagabonds [are] ... divided into three classes, idle and disorderly persons, rogues and va-gabonds, and incorrigible rogues; — all these are offenders against the good order, and blemishes in the gov-ernment, of any kingdom. They are therefore all punished ... rogues and vagabonds with whipping and impri-sonment not exceeding six months ...” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 170 (1769).

VAGABONDAGE

vagabondage (vag-<<schwa>>-bon-dij).1. The condition of a vagabond. 2. Vagabonds as a class. — Also termed (in sense 1) vagabondism; (in senses 1 & 2) vagabondry.

VAGABUNDUS

vagabundus (vag-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] See VAGABOND.

vagrancy (vay-gr*<<schwa>>*n-see), n.1. The state or condition of wandering from place to place without a home, job, or means of support. • Vagrancy is generally considered a course of conduct or a manner of living rather than a single act. But under some statutes, a single act has been held sufficient to constitute vagrancy. One court held, for example, that the act of prowling about and creeping up on parked cars and their occupants at night, under circumstances suggesting an intent to commit a crime, constitutes vagrancy. See Smith v. Drew, 26 P.2d 1040 (Wash. 1933). Many state laws prohibiting vagrancy have been declared unconstitutionally vague. — Also termed vagrantism. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.] 2. An instance of such wandering. Cf. LOITERING.

“Vagrancy is a status resulting from misconduct and in the form of a socially harmful condition or mode of life which has been defined and made punishable by law. Until recently it was a misdemeanor, or group of misde-meanors, in most states.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 494 (3d ed. 1982).

VAGRANT

vagrant,adj.1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a vagrant; inclined to vagrancy. 2. Nomadically homeless. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.]

vagrant,n.1. At common law, anyone belonging to the several classes of idle or disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds. 2. One who, not having a settled habitation, strolls from place to place; a homeless, idle wanderer. • The term often refers to one who spends time in idleness, lacking any property and without any visible means of support. Under some statutes, a vagrant is an offender against or menace to the public peace, usu. liable to become a public burden. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.]

VAGRANTISM

vagrantism. See VAGRANCY.

VAGUE

vague,adj.1. Imprecise; not sharply outlined; indistinct; uncertain.

unconstitutionally vague. 1. (Of a penal legislative provision) so unclear and indefinite as not to give a person of ordinary intelligence the opportunity to know what is prohibited. [Cases: Statutes 47.] 2. (Of a statute) im-permissibly delegating basic policy matters to administrators and judges to such a degree as to lead to arbitrary and discriminatory application. [Cases: Statutes 47.]

2. (Of language) describing a distribution around a central norm, as opposed to a neatly bounded class; broadly indefinite. 3. Characterized by haziness of thought.

VAGUE-AND-INDEFINITE REJECTION

vague-and-indefinite rejection.See REJECTION.

VAGUENESS

vagueness. 1. Uncertain breadth of meaning <the phrase “within a reasonable time” is plagued by vagueness — what is reasonable?>. • Though common in writings generally, vagueness raises due-process concerns if legislation does not provide fair notice of what is required or prohibited, because enforcement may be arbitrary. 2. Loosely, ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.

VAGUENESS DOCTRINE

vagueness doctrine.Constitutional law. The doctrine — based on the Due Process Clause — requiring that a criminal statute state explicitly and definitely what acts are prohibited, so as to provide fair warning and preclude arbitrary enforcement. — Also termed void-for-vagueness doctrine. See void for vagueness under VOID. Cf. OVERBREADTH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 258(2).]

VALEAT QUANTUM

valeat quantum (vay-lee-at [or -<<schwa>>t] kwon-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. For as much as it is worth.

VALENS AGERE

valens agere (vay-lenz aj-<<schwa>>r-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Able to act.

“A person is said to be valens agere when, from age and position, he is able to protect his rights against the invasion of them by others: against such a person not protecting his rights prescription runs, while prescription does not run against one who is non valens agere.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 621 (4th ed. 1894).

VALENTIA

valentia (v<<schwa>>-len-shee-<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin from Latin valere “to be of value”] Hist. Value; worth. • In old indictments for larceny, this term often appeared to express the value of the things taken.

VALENTIA AGENDI

valentia agendi (v<<schwa>>-len-shee-<<schwa>> <<schwa>>-jen-dI). [Law Latin] Hist. The power of acting. See VALENS AGERE.

VALERE SEIPSUM

valere seipsum (v<<schwa>>-leer-ee see-ip-s<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. To be of its own value. • The phrase usu. referred to land.

VALID

valid,adj.1. Legally sufficient; binding .2. Meritorious < that is a valid conclusion based on the facts presented in this case>. — validate,vb. — validation, validity,n.

VALID AGREEMENT

valor maritagii (val-<<schwa>>r mar-<<schwa>>-tay-jee-I). [Latin] Hist. The value of a marriage. • Under ancient tenures, this was the amount that a female ward forfeited to a guardian when the guardian had offered her a marriage without disparagement (inequality), and she refused. In feudal law, the guardian in chivalry had the right of tendering to a minor ward a suitable match. If the ward refused the match she had to compensate the guardian for the value of the marriage (valor maritagii). — Also termed (in the accusative) valorem maritagii; (Scots law) avail of marriage.

“If an infant ward of a guardian in chivalry refused a match tendered by the guardian, he or she forfeited the value of the marriage (valorem maritagii) to the guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for such an alliance.” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 572–73 (2d ed. 1867).

VALUABLE

Documents that, upon a person's death, are important in carrying out the decedent's wishes and in managing the estate's affairs. • Examples include a will, title documents, stock certificates, powers of attorney, letters to be opened on one's death, and the like. Some statutes require that, to be effective, a holographic will devising realty be found among the decedent's valuable papers.

valuation, n. 1. The process of determining the value of a thing or entity. 2. The estimated worth of a thing or entity. — value, valuate, vb.

assessed valuation. The value that a taxing authority gives to property and to which the tax rate is applied. [Cases: Taxation 348, 348.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 510–511, 515–516, 518–523.]

special-use valuation. An executor's option of valuating real property in an estate, esp. farmland, at its current use rather than for its highest potential value. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4183; Taxation 895. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 519; Taxation §§ 1900–1909, 1918–1931, 1941–1944, 1948.]

VALUATION DATE

valuation date. See ALTERNATE VALUATION DATE.

VALUATION LIST

valuation list. Hist. An inventory of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, each item in the inventory recording the name of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value. • The list was traditionally prepared by the overseers of each parish.

VALUE

value, n. 1. The significance, desirability, or utility of something.

social value. The significance, desirability, or utility of something to the general public.

2. The monetary worth or price of something; the amount of goods, services, or money that something will command in an exchange.

actual cash value. Insurance. 1. Replacement cost minus normal depreciation. [Cases: Insurance 2181. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1085, 1105.] 2. See fair market value.

actual market value. See fair market value.

actual value. See fair market value.

agreed value. A property's value that is fixed by agreement of the parties with the property. • An example is a list of property values contained in an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 2171. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1108–1109, 1204.]

annual value. 1. The net yearly income derivable from a given piece of property. 2. One year's rental value of property, less costs and expenses.

book value. See BOOK VALUE.

cash surrender value. Insurance. The amount of money payable when an insurance policy having cash value, such as a whole-life policy, is redeemed before maturity or death. — Abbr. CSV. — Also termed surrender value. [Cases: Insurance 1957, 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

cash value. See full cash value.

clear annual value. The net annual value of property, after payment of taxes, interest on mortgages, and other charges.

clear market value. See fair market value.

clear value. Tax. For purposes of an inheritance tax, whatever remains of an estate after all claims against it have been paid. [Cases: Taxation 895(1). C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1900–1901, 1904–1905, 1909, 1943–1944.]

commuted value (k<<schwa>>-myoo-tid). 1. In the assessment of damages, the present value of a future interest in property. 2. The value of future payments when discounted to present value.

exchange value. The amount of money for which the subject matter could be exchanged or procured if there is a ready market continually resorted to by traders — or, in the absence of such a market, the amount that could be obtained in the usual course of finding a purchaser or hirer of similar property or services.

fair market value. The price that a seller is willing to accept and a buyer is willing to pay on the open market and in an arm's-length transaction; the point at which supply and demand intersect. — Abbr. FMV. — Also termed actual value; actual cash value; actual market value; cash value; clear market value; fair and reasonable value; fair cash market value; fair cash value; fair market price; fair value; full value; just value; market value; salable value; true value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

fair value. See fair market value.

full cash value. Market value for property tax purposes; estimated value derived by standard appraisal methods. — Also termed cash value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

full value. See fair market value.

future value. The value, at some future time, of a present sum or a series of monetary payments, calculated at a specific interest rate.

going-concern value. The value of a commercial enterprise's assets or of the enterprise itself as an active business with future earning power, as opposed to the liquidation value of the business or of its assets. • Going-concern value includes, for example, goodwill. — Also termed going value. Cf. GOODWILL.

highest proved value. In a trover action, the greatest value (as proved by the plaintiff) that the converted property reached from the time of the conversion until trial. • It is the most that a plaintiff is entitled to recover. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 44. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 120–121, 124.]

insurable value. See INSURABLE VALUE.

intrinsic value. The inherent value of a thing, without any special features that might alter its market value. • The intrinsic value of a silver coin, for example, is simply the value of the silver within it.

just value. See fair market value.

liquidation value. 1. The value of a business or of an asset when it is sold in liquidation, as opposed to being sold in the ordinary course of business. 2. See liquidation price under PRICE.

market value. See fair market value.

most-suitable-use value. See optimal-use value.

net value. 1. Insurance. The excess of policyholder payments over the yearly cost of insurance; the part of an insured's annual premium that, according to actuarial tables, the insurer must set apart to meet the insurer's obligations to the insured. — Also termed reserve. [Cases: Insurance 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.] 2. The fair market value of shares of stock. [Cases: Corporations 182.4(5), 584. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 348, 799–801.]

new value. 1. A value (such as money) that is newly given. 2. The value obtained by taking a security, such as collateral, for any debt other than a preexisting one.

optimal-use value. Tax. The highest and best use of a thing from an economic standpoint. • If a farm would be worth more as a shopping center than as a farm, the shopping-center value will control even if the transferee (that is, a donee or heir) continues to use the property as a farm. — Also termed most-suitable-use value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

par value. See PAR VALUE.

policy value. See POLICY VALUE.

---

present value.See PRESENT VALUE.

residual value.See salvage value.

salable value.See fair market value.

salvage value.The value of an asset after it has become useless to the owner; the amount expected to be obtained when a fixed asset is disposed of at the end of its useful life. • Salvage value is used, under some depreciation methods, to determine the allowable tax deduction for depreciation. And under the UCC, when a buyer of goods breaches or repudiates the contract of sale, the seller may, under certain circumstances, either complete the manufacture of any incomplete goods or cease the manufacture and sell the partial product for scrap or salvage value. UCC § 2-704(2). — Also termed residual value; scrap value. See DEPRECIATION. [Cases: Sales 384(6).] scrap value.See salvage value.

settlement value.The value of a claim if the claimant settles immediately as opposed to pursuing it further through litigation.

surrender value.See cash surrender value.

true value.See fair market value.

use value.A value established by the utility of an object instead of its sale or exchange value.

value received.See VALUE RECEIVED.

3. Sufficient contractual consideration. — value,vb. — valuation,n.“Value also includes paying or securing a preexisting debt, and in this regard value is broader than common-law consideration. Thus, a debtor receives value in satisfying an antecedent claim (as by paying an overdue account or an outstanding loan or by transferring property to vindicate a preexisting interest in it) or in providing collateral for a previously unsecured creditor. It makes no difference that the debtor got nothing new, in terms of property added to her estate, at the time of the transfer.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 6-49, at 374 (1993).

VASSALLO ET QUIBUS DEDERIT

vassallo et quibus dederit (vas-<<schwa>>-loh et kwib-<<schwa>>s dee-d<<schwa>>r-it). [Law Latin] Hist. To the vassal and to whomsoever he shall have given it. • The phrase was included in feudal grants.

“If the original grant had been destined to the vassal, ‘and his heirs and assignees whomsoever,’ this only bound the superior to receive the proper heirs of the vassal and not his assignee; but if the destination bore ... [vassal] ‘et quibus dederit,’ this was construed as a consent on the part of the superior to alienation, and under which he was bound to receive as vassal his vassal's disponee. This distinction ... was practically abolished by the Act 20 Geo. II. c. 50, which introduced a mode by which either an heir or disponee could force an entry from the superior.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 622 (4th ed. 1894).

venire facias ad respondendum (ad ree-spon-den-d*<<schwa>>*m). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a person against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been issued. • A warrant is now more commonly used.

venire facias de novo (dee or di noh-voh). A writ for summoning a jury panel anew because of some impropriety or irregularity in the original jury's return or verdict so that no judgment can be given on it. • The result of a new venire is a new trial. In substance, the writ is a motion for new trial, but when the party objects to the verdict because of an error in the course of the proceeding (and not on the merits), the form of motion was traditionally for a venire facias de novo. — Often shortened to venire de novo.

venire facias tot matronas (tot m*<<schwa>>-troh-n<<schwa>>*s). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a jury of matrons to execute a writ de ventre inspiciendo. See DE VENTRE INSPICIENDO.

VENUE

venue (ven-yoo). [Law French “coming”] Procedure. 1. The proper or a possible place for a lawsuit to proceed, usu. because the place has some connection either with the events that gave rise to the lawsuit or with the plaintiff or defendant. [Cases: Federal Courts 71; Venue 1.5. C.J.S. Venue §§ 2–5.] 2. The county or other territory over which a trial court has jurisdiction. Cf. JURISDICTION(1), (2).3. Loosely, the place where a conference or meeting is being held. 4. In a pleading, the statement establishing the place for trial. [Cases: Federal Courts 94.] 5. In an affidavit, the designation of the place where it was made.

“Venue must be carefully distinguished from jurisdiction. Jurisdiction deals with the power of a court to hear and dispose of a given case; in the federal system, it involves questions of a constitutional dimension concerning the basic division of judicial power among the states and between state and federal courts. Venue is of a distinctly lower level of importance; it is simply a statutory device designed to facilitate and balance the objectives of optimum convenience for parties and witnesses and efficient allocation of judicial resources.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 2.1, at 10 (2d ed. 1993).

“The distinction must be clearly understood between jurisdiction, which is the power to adjudicate, and venue, which relates to the place where judicial authority may be exercised and is intended for the convenience of the litigants. It is possible for jurisdiction to exist though venue in a particular district is improper, and it is possible for a suit to be brought in the appropriate venue though it must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The most important difference between venue and jurisdiction is that a party may consent to be sued in a district that otherwise would be an improper venue, and it waives its objection to venue if it fails to assert it promptly. This is in striking contrast to subject-matter jurisdiction, which cannot be conferred by the parties, if it has not been granted by Congress, whether by consent, waiver, or estoppel.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 42, at 257 (5th ed. 1994).

VENUE, CHANGE OF

venue, change of. See CHANGE OF VENUE.

verderer (v<<schwa>>r-d<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r), n. [fr. French verdier “caretaker of green things”] Hist. A judicial officer who, being in charge of the king's forest, is sworn to preserve the vert (foliage) and venison, to keep the assizes, and to view, receive, and enroll attachments and presentments on matters involving trespass. — Also spelled verderor.

verdict. 1. A jury's finding or decision on the factual issues of a case. [Cases: Criminal Law 870–894; Federal Civil Procedure 2191; Trial 318. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1395–1414, 1500–1501, 1512, 1532, 1543; Trial §§ 818–819, 821, 846–847.] 2. Loosely, in a nonjury trial, a judge's resolution of the issues of a case. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2251; Trial 387. C.J.S. Trial §§ 1067–1069, 1071–1072.]

chance verdict. A now-illegal verdict, arrived at by hazard or lot. — Also termed gambling verdict; verdict by lot. [Cases: Criminal Law 798(2), 866; Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1372, 1381.]

compromise verdict. A verdict reached when jurors, to avoid a deadlock, concede some issues so that other issues will be resolved as they want. [Cases: Criminal Law 866; Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1; Trial 315. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1372, 1381; Trial §§ 800–802, 822.]

defective verdict. A verdict on which a judgment cannot be based because of irregularities or legal inadequacies.

directed verdict. A ruling by a trial judge taking a case from the jury because the evidence will permit only one reasonable verdict. — Also termed instructed verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 753; Federal Civil Procedure 2117; Trial 167. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1276; Trial §§ 432–433, 437–438.]

excessive verdict. A verdict that results from the jury's passion or prejudice and thereby shocks the court's conscience. [Cases: Damages 128; Federal Civil Procedure 2345; New Trial 77(2). C.J.S. Damages §§ 384, 387–394; New Trial §§ 101, 103.]

false verdict. Archaic. A verdict so contrary to the evidence and so unjust that the judge may set it aside. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338.]

gambling verdict. See chance verdict.

general verdict. A verdict by which the jury finds in favor of one party or the other, as opposed to resolving specific fact questions. Cf. special verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 881; Federal Civil Procedure 2191; Trial 318. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1402; Trial §§ 818–819, 821, 846–847.]

general verdict subject to a special case. Archaic. A court's verdict rendered without regard to the jury's general verdict, given when a party does not want to put the legal question on the record but merely wants the court to decide on the basis of a written statement of all the facts in the case, prepared for the opinion of the court by counsel on either side, according to the principles of a special verdict, whereupon the court decides the special case submitted and gives judgment accordingly.

general verdict with interrogatories. A general verdict accompanied by answers to written interrogatories on one or more issues of fact that bear on the verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2211; Trial 348. C.J.S. Trial §§ 825, 930, 932.]

guilty verdict.A jury's finding that a defendant is guilty of the offense charged.

instructed verdict.See directed verdict.

joint verdict.A verdict covering two or more parties to a lawsuit.

legally inconsistent verdict.A verdict in which the same element is found to exist and not to exist, as when a defendant is acquitted of one offense and convicted of another, even though the offenses arise from the same set of facts and an element of the second offense requires proof that the first offense has been committed. — Also termed legal inconsistency. [Cases: Criminal Law 878(4); Federal Civil Procedure 2237; Trial 358. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1407; Trial §§ 992–994.]

majority verdict.A verdict agreed to by all but one or two jury members. • In some jurisdictions, a civil verdict supported by 10 of 12 jurors is acceptable.

open verdict.A verdict of a coroner's jury finding that the subject “came to his death by means to the jury unknown” or “came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown.” • This verdict leaves open either the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

partial verdict.A verdict by which a jury finds a criminal defendant innocent of some charges and guilty of other charges.

perverse verdict.A jury verdict so contrary to the evidence that it justifies the granting of a new trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338; New Trial 68.1. C.J.S. New Trial §§ 89, 95, 98.]

privy verdict (priv-ee).Hist. A verdict given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, having agreed, obtains leave to give its verdict privately to the judge out of court so that the jurors can be delivered from their confinement. • Such a verdict was of no force unless afterwards affirmed in open court. This practice has been superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See sealed verdict.

public verdict.A verdict delivered by the jury in open court.

quotient verdict.An improper damage verdict that a jury arrives at by totaling what each juror would award and dividing by the number of jurors. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1; Trial 315. C.J.S. Trial §§ 800–802, 822.]

repugnant verdict.A verdict that contradicts itself in that the defendant is convicted and acquitted of different crimes having identical elements. • Sometimes the inconsistency occurs in a single verdict (repugnant verdict), and sometimes it occurs in two separate verdicts (repugnant verdicts). Both terms are used mainly in New York. [Cases: Criminal Law 878(4). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1407.]

responsive verdict.Civil law. A verdict that properly answers the indictment with specific findings prescribed by statute, the possible findings being guilty, not guilty, and guilty of a lesser included offense.

sealed verdict. A written verdict put into a sealed envelope when the jurors have agreed on their decision but court is not in session or the jury is continuing to deliberate other counts. • Upon delivering a sealed verdict, the jurors may separate. When court convenes again, this verdict is officially returned with the same effect as if the jury had returned it in open court before separating. [Cases: Trial 324. C.J.S. Trial §§ 826–828.]

special verdict. A verdict in which the jury makes findings only on factual issues submitted to them by the judge, who then decides the legal effect of the verdict. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49. Cf. general verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 870; Federal Civil Procedure 2231; Trial 347. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1403; Trial §§ 820, 929, 931.]

split verdict. 1. A verdict in which one party prevails on some claims, while the other party prevails on others. 2. Criminal law. A verdict finding a defendant guilty on one charge but not guilty on another. [Cases: Criminal Law 878. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1406.] 3. Criminal law. A verdict of guilty for one defendant and of not guilty for a codefendant. [Cases: Criminal Law 877. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1405.]

true verdict. A verdict that is reached voluntarily — even if one or more jurors freely compromise their views — and not as a result of an arbitrary rule or order, whether imposed by the jurors themselves, the court, or a court officer. [Cases: Trial 314–315. C.J.S. Trial §§ 800–802, 815, 822.]

verdict by lot. See chance verdict.

verdict contrary to law. A verdict that the law does not authorize a jury to render because the conclusion drawn is not justified by the evidence. — Also termed wrong verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338; New Trial 66. C.J.S. New Trial § 85.]

verdict subject to opinion of court. A verdict that is subject to the court's determination of a legal issue reserved to the court upon the trial, so that judgment is ultimately entered depending on the court's ruling on a point of law. [Cases: Judgment 199(4). C.J.S. Judgments § 62.]

wrong verdict. See verdict contrary to law.

VERGE

verge (v<<schwa>>rj), n. Hist. 1. The area within 12 miles of the place where the king held his court and within which the king's peace was enforced. • This area was commonly referred to as being in the verge. The verge got its name from the staff (called a “verge”) that the marshal bore. 2. The compass of the royal court, within which the lord steward and marshal of the king's household had special jurisdiction. — Also termed Court of Verge. 3. The neighborhood of Whitehall, the section of London in which British government offices have traditionally been located. 4. An uncertain quantity of land from 15 to 30 acres. 5. A stick or rod by which a person, after holding the stick and swearing fealty, is admitted as a tenant to a copyhold estate. — Also spelled virge. For tenant by the verge, see COPYHOLDER.

VERGENS AD INOPIAM

vergens ad inopiam (v<<schwa>>r-jenz ad in-oh-pee-<<schwa>>m), adj.[Latin “verging on poverty”] Civil law. Tending to become insolvent.

“When a debtor is clearly vergens ad inopiam, a creditor may legally resort to certain measures, for the purpose of protecting his interests, which would not otherwise be competent to him. Thus if the debtor be bound under a bill, the creditor may, in consideration of his debtor's circumstances, obtain a precept of arrestment on the bill before it becomes due, on which he may arrest any funds due to his debtor. As this proceeding is only allowed, however, as a protective measure ... he cannot ... render the arrested funds available to himself until the bill falls due .... The fact of the debtor's being vergens ad inopiam will be inferred from different circumstances in different cases, and the proof of that fact will also, necessarily, be varied.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 627 (4th ed. 1894).

VERGER

verger,n. One who carries a verge (a rod) as an emblem of office; esp., an attendant on a bishop or justice.

VERIFICATION

verification,n.1. A formal declaration made in the presence of an authorized officer, such as a notary public, or (in some jurisdictions) under oath but not in the presence of such an officer, whereby one swears to the truth of the statements in the document. • Traditionally, a verification is used as a conclusion for all pleadings that are required to be sworn. Cf. ACKNOWLEDGMENT(4). — Also termed affidavit of verification. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 662; Pleading 289–304. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 255, 486–518.] 2. An oath or affirmation that an authorized officer administers to an affiant or deponent. 3. Loosely, ACKNOWLEDGMENT (5).4. See certified copy under COPY. 5.CERTIFICATE OF AUTHORITY(5).6. Any act of notarizing. Cf. JURAT(1). — verify,vb. — verifier,n.

VESSEL

vessel. A ship, brig, sloop, or other craft used — or capable of being used — to navigate on water. • To qualify as a vessel under the Jones Act, the structure's purpose must to some reasonable degree be to transport passengers, cargo, or equipment from place to place across navigable waters. [Cases: Shipping 1. C.J.S. Shipping § 4.]

“Despite the important role a ‘vessel’ plays in maritime law, there is no settled definition of the term. Congress has defined a vessel as including ‘every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.’ 1 U.S.C.A. § 3. The Supreme Court has defined vessels as ‘all navigable structures intended for transportation.’ Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U.S. 625 (1887).” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 14 (3d ed. 1996).

“The term vessel is defined in 1 U.S.C. § 3 as follows: ‘The word “vessel” includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.’ This definition has not been very influential in admiralty and maritime cases. Litigants contending for vessel status often invoke its remarkable breadth. Those opposing vessel status typically respond, ‘But the present context indicates otherwise.’ When courts mention the definition favorably, it usually seems to be a makeweight argument.” David W. Robertson, Steven F. Friedell & Michael F. Sturley, Admiralty and Maritime Law in the United States 59 (2001).

foreign vessel. A vessel owned by residents of, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. [Cases: Shipping 2. C.J.S. Shipping § 1.]

Jones Act vessel. A vessel whose crew members can qualify as seamen under the Jones Act; esp., a craft designed or used for transporting cargo or people on navigable waters, or that was being used for navigation at the time of a worker's injury. See JONES ACT. [Cases: Shipping 1. C.J.S. Shipping § 4.]

public vessel. A vessel owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise. See PUBLIC VESSELS ACT. [Cases: United States 125(11). C.J.S. United States §§ 236–239.]

seagoing vessel. A vessel that — considering its design, function, purpose, and capabilities — is normally expected both to carry passengers for hire and to engage in substantial operations beyond the boundary line (set by the Coast Guard) dividing inland waters from the high seas. • Typically excluded from the definition are pleasure yachts, tugs and towboats, fishing boats, and other vessels that do not carry passengers for hire. [Cases: Shipping 9, 204. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 6–7, 473, 482–483.]

seaworthy vessel. A vessel that can withstand the ordinary stress of the wind, waves, and other weather that seagoing vessels might ordinarily be expected to encounter. • In some legal contexts, the question whether a vessel is seaworthy includes the question whether it is fit to carry an intended cargo properly. See SEAWORTHY. [Cases: Seamen 9; Shipping 42, 121, 207.]

C.J.S. Seamen § 33; Shipping §§ 102, 105–106, 321–322, 324, 475–476.]

vest,vb.1. To confer ownership of (property) upon a person. 2. To invest (a person) with the full title to property. 3. To give (a person) an immediate, fixed right of present or future enjoyment. 4.Hist. To put (a person) into possession of land by the ceremony of investiture. — vesting,n.

VESTED

vested,adj. Having become a completed, consummated right for present or future enjoyment; not contingent; unconditional; absolute . [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

“[U]nfortunately, the word ‘vested’ is used in two senses. Firstly, an interest may be vested in possession, when there is a right to present enjoyment, e.g. when I own and occupy Blackacre. But an interest may be vested, even where it does not carry a right to immediate possession, if it does confer a fixed right of taking possession in the future.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 305 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

“A future interest is vested if it meets two requirements: first, that there be no condition precedent to the interest's becoming a present estate other than the natural expiration of those estates that are prior to it in possession; and second, that it be theoretically possible to identify who would get the right to possession if the interest should become a present estate at any time.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 66–67 (2d ed. 1984).

vested in interest.Consummated in a way that will result in future possession and use. • Reversions, vested remainders, and any other future use or executory devise that does not depend on an uncertain period or event are all said to be vested in interest. [Cases: Wills 628–638. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1320–1379, 1551.]

vested in possession.Consummated in a way that has resulted in present enjoyment.

VI ET ARMIS

vi et armis (vI et ahr-mis). [Latin] Hist. By or with force and arms. See trespass vi et armis under TRESPASS.

“The words ‘with force and arms,’ anciently ‘vi et armis,’ were, by the common law, necessary in indictments for offences which amount to an actual disturbance of the peace, or consist, in any way, of acts of violence; but it seems to be the better opinion, that they were never necessary where the offence consisted of a cheat, or non-feazance, or a mere consequential injury.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 240 (2d ed. 1826).

“vi et armis... was a necessary part of the allegation, in medieval pleading, that a trespass had been committed with force and therefore was a matter for the King's Court because it involved a breach of the peace. In England, the term survived as a formal requirement of pleading until 1852.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 916 (2d ed. 1995).

VIEW

view,n.1. The common-law right of prospect — that is, an outlook from the windows of one's house. 2. An urban servitude that prohibits the obstruction of the outlook from a person's house. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners 10; Easements 11, 19, 45. C.J.S. Adjoining Landowners §§ 68–69, 71, 74; Easements §§ 51–52, 85–87, 151.] 3. A jury's trip to inspect a place or thing relevant to the case it is considering; the act or proceeding by which a tribunal goes to observe an object that cannot be produced in court because it is immovable or inconvenient to remove. • The appropriate procedures are typically regulated by state statute. At common law, and today in many civil cases, the trial judge's presence is not required. The common practice has been for the jury to be escorted by “showers” who are commissioned for this purpose. Parties and counsel are generally permitted to attend, although this is a matter typically within the trial judge's discretion.

See SHOWER. Cf. VIEW OF AN INQUEST . [Cases: Criminal Law 651; Federal Civil Procedure 1968; Trial 28. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1156; Trial §§ 117–119.] 4. ## VILLEINAGE villeinage (vil-<<schwa>>-nij).Hist. 1. The holding of property through servitude to a feudal lord; a servile type of tenure in which a tenant was obliged to render base services to a lord. Cf. KNIGHT SERVICE; SOCAGE. 2. A villein's status, condition, or service. — Also spelled villenage; villainage; villanage. — Also termed villein tenure.

“The typical tenant in villeinage does not know in the evening what he will have to do in the morning.... [T]here is a large element of real uncertainty; the lord's will counts for much; when they go to bed on Sunday night they do not know what Monday's work will be; it may be threshing, ditching, carrying; they cannot tell. This seems the point that is seized by law and that general opinion of which law is the exponent: any considerable uncertainty as to the amount or kind of the agricultural services makes the tenure unfree. The tenure is unfree, not because the tenant ‘holds at the will of the lord,’ in the sense of being removable at a moment's notice, but because his services, though in many respects minutely defined by custom, cannot be altogether defined without frequent reference to the lord's will.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 371 (2d ed. 1898).

“At the lower level the services were not always defined. The duties of the peasant were chiefly agricultural. If they were unfixed, so that the lord might in theory demand all manner of work, the tenure was ‘unfree’ and was called villeinage.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 260 (3d ed. 1990).

privileged villeinage. Villeinage in which the services to be performed were certain, though of a base and servile nature.

pure villeinage. Villeinage in which the services were not certain, but the tenant was obliged to do whatever he was commanded whenever the command came.

Under the Model Penal Code, a public-welfare offense. • In this sense, a violation is not a crime. See Model Penal Code § 1.04(5). — violate, vb. — violative (vI-<<schwa>>-lay-tiv), adj. — violator, n.

VIOLATION WARRANT

violation warrant. See WARRANT(1).

violence. The use of physical force, usu. accompanied by fury, vehemence, or outrage; esp., physical force unlawfully exercised with the intent to harm. • Some courts have held that violence in labor disputes is not limited to physical contact or injury, but may include picketing conducted with misleading signs, false statements, erroneous publicity, and veiled threats by words and acts.

domestic violence. 1. Violence between members of a household, usu. spouses; an assault or other violent act committed by one member of a household against another. See BATTERED-CHILD SYNDROME; BATTERED-WOMAN SYNDROME. [Cases: Assault and Battery 48. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 2–3, 62, 64–66, 81.] 2. The infliction of physical injury, or the creation of a reasonable fear that physical injury or harm will be inflicted, by a parent or a member or former member of a child's household, against a child or against another member of the household. — Also termed domestic abuse; family violence. 3. Archaic. Insurrection or unlawful force fomented from within a country.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT

Violence Against Women Act. A federal statute that established a federal civil-rights action for victims of gender-motivated violence. 42 USCA § 13981. • In 2000, the Supreme Court invalidated the statute, holding that neither the Commerce Clause nor the Enforcement Clause of the 14th Amendment authorized Congress to enact the civil-remedy provision of this Act. United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 120 S.Ct. 1740 (2000). — Abbr. VAWA.

VIS

vis (vis). [Latin “power”] 1. Any force, violence, or disturbance relating to a person or property.

“Vis, as a legal term, was understood to denote the organizing and arming of tumultuous bodies of men for the purpose of obstructing the constituted authorities in the performance of their duty, and thus interrupting the ordinary administration of the laws. No such offence was recognised by the Criminal Code until the last century of the republic, when violent riots by hired mobs became so frequent, that M. Plautius Silvanus, Tribune of the Plebs, B.C. 89, [secured the passing of] the lex Plautia de Vi, in terms of which, those convicted of such practices were banished.” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 347 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

visitation credit.Family law. A child-support reduction that reflects the amount of time the child lives with the noncustodial parent.

VISITATION ORDER

visitation order. Family law. 1. An order establishing the visiting times for a noncustodial parent with his or her child. [Cases: Child Custody 525.C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 132–133.] 2. An order establishing the visiting times for a child and a person with a significant relationship to the child. • Such an order may allow for visitation between (1) a grandparent and a grandchild, (2) a child and another relative, (3) a child and a stepparent, or (4) occasionally, a child and the child's psychological parent. — Also termed access order.

VISITATION RIGHT

visitation right. 1. Family law. A noncustodial parent's or grandparent's court-ordered privilege of spending time with a child or grandchild who is living with another person, usu. the custodial parent. • The noncustodial parent with visitation rights may sometimes be a parent from whose custody the child has been removed because of abuse or neglect. [Cases: Child Custody 175–231, 282.] 2. Int'l law. A belligerent nation's right to search a neutral vessel to find out whether it is carrying contraband or is otherwise engaged in nonneutral service. • If the searched vessel is doing either of these things, the searchers may seize the contraband and carry out an appropriate punishment. — Also termed (in both senses) right of visitation.

VISITATORIAL

visitatorial (viz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj. Of or relating to on-site inspection or supervision. — Also termed visitorial.

VITILITIGATE

vitiligate (vit-<<schwa>>-lit-<<schwa>>-gayt), vb.[fr. Latin vitiligare “to quarrel disgracefully”] Archaic. To litigate merely from quarrelsome motives; to carry on a lawsuit in an unduly contentious, wrangling way. — vitiligation, n. — vitiligious (vit-<<schwa>>-li-tij-<<schwa>>s), adj.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION

vitious intromission. See INTROMISSION.

VITIUM CLERICI

vitium clerici (vish-ee-<<schwa>>m kler-<<schwa>>-sI). [Latin] See clerical error under ERROR.

VITIUM REALE

vitium reale (vish-ee-<<schwa>>m ree-ay-lee). [Latin “true error”] Hist. & Scots law. A defect in a title that renders the movable property nontransferable; specif., an inherent vice in the title of anyone who holds a stolen thing, even if acquired honestly, so that the true owner can reclaim it. Cf. LABES REALIS QUAE REI INHAERET.

“A person who comes into possession of moveable property without any title to retain custody thereof is obliged to restore it to the person truly entitled to the possession thereof... [P]roperty so acquired is affected by an inherent vitium reale which prevents the thief or fraudulent person from conferring a good title on anyone, even a taker from him in good faith, who has given value and taken without notice of the thief's defective title; such a person must return the property to the true owner, or pay compensation therefor.... An exception to the rule of vitium reale exists in the cases of money, bank-notes and negotiable instruments ....” 2 David M. Walker, Principles of Scottish Private Law: Law of Obligations 505–06 (1988).

VOICE VOTE

voice vote. See VOTE(4).

void, adj. 1. Of no legal effect; null. • The distinction between void and voidable is often of great practical importance. Whenever technical accuracy is required, void can be properly applied only to those provisions that are of no effect whatsoever — those that are an absolute nullity. — void, avoid, vb. — voidness, n.

facially void. (Of an instrument) patently void upon an inspection of the contents. — Also termed void on its face.

void ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). Null from the beginning, as from the first moment when a contract is entered into. • A contract is void ab initio if it seriously offends law or public policy, in contrast to a contract that is merely voidable at the election of one party to the contract. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.]

void for vagueness. 1. (Of a deed or other instrument affecting property) having such an insufficient property description as to be unenforceable. [Cases: Deeds 37. C.J.S. Deeds § 53.] 2. (Of a penal statute) establishing a requirement or punishment without specifying what is required or what conduct is punishable, and therefore void because violative of due process. — Also termed void for indefiniteness. See VAGUENESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 258(2); Criminal Law 13.1(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 26.]

2.VOIDABLE. • Although sense 1 above is the strict meaning of void, the word is often used and construed as bearing the more liberal meaning of “voidable.”

VOIDABLE

voidable,adj. Valid until annulled; esp., (of a contract) capable of being affirmed or rejected at the option of one of the parties. • This term describes a valid act that may be voided rather than an invalid act that may be ratified. — Also termed avoidable. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136.C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.] — voidability,n.

“Most of the disputed questions in the law of infancy turn upon the legal meaning of the word ‘voidable’ as applied to an infant's acts. The natural meaning of the word imports a valid act which may be avoided, rather than an invalid act which may be confirmed, and the weight of authority as well as reason points in the same direction. Certainly, so far as executed transfers of property are concerned the authority of the decisions clearly supports this view.” 1 Samuel Williston, The Law Governing Sales of Goods § 12, at 28 (3d ed. 1948).

“The promise of an infant surety is voidable as distinguished from void. The infant may expressly disaffirm or assert the defense of infancy when sued at any time before the expiration of a reasonable time after majority.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 82 (1950).

VOLENTI NON FIT INJURIA

volenti non fit injuria (voh-len-ti non fit in-joor-ee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “to a willing person it is not wrong,” i.e., a person is not wronged by that to which he or she consents] The principle that a person who knowingly and voluntarily risks danger cannot recover for any resulting injury. • This is the type of affirmative defense that must be pleaded under Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c). — Often shortened to volenti. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK. [Cases: Negligence 550. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 360–361.]

“[T]he maxim ‘Volenti non fit injuria’ ... is certainly of respectable antiquity. The idea underlying it has been traced as far back as Aristotle, and it was also recognised in the works of the classical Roman jurists, and in the Canon Law. In English law, Bracton in his De Legibus Angliae (ca. A.D. 1250–1258) uses the maxim, though not with the technicality that attached to it later, and in a Year Book case of 1305 it appears worded exactly as it is now. So far as actual citation of the maxim goes, most of the modern cases use it in connexion with harm to the person rather than to property.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 13, at 24 (5th ed. 1950).

VOLITION

volition (v<<schwa>>-lish-<<schwa>>n or voh-), n.1. The ability to make a choice or determine something. 2. The act of making a choice or determining something. 3. The choice or determination that someone makes. — volitional, adj.

VOTE

vote, n. 1. The expression of one's preference or opinion in a meeting or election by ballot, show of hands, or other type of communication <the Republican candidate received more votes than the Democratic candidate>.

absentee vote. See absentee voting under VOTING.

bullet vote. A vote cast for fewer nominees than are being elected. • A bullet vote slightly enhances the ballot's effect on the outcome. — Also termed bullet ballot.

casting vote. A deciding vote cast by the chair of a deliberative assembly when the votes are tied. • The U.S. Constitution gives the Vice President the casting vote in the Senate. U.S. Const. art. I, § 3.

“One is, that to secure at all times the possibility of a definite resolution of the body, it is necessary that the President should have only a casting vote. And to take the senator of any State from his seat as senator, to place him in that of President of the Senate, would be to exchange, in regard to the State from which he came, a constant for a contingent vote.” The Federalist No. 68 (Alexander Hamilton).

effective vote.A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, to the extent needed to win. • A vote that goes to a winning candidate is “effective” to the extent needed to win, and “excess” beyond that point. For example, if a candidate needs 100 votes and gets 150, then 50 votes are excess votes and each vote is two-thirds effective and one-third excess. Cf. excess vote; wasted vote.

excess vote.A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, beyond the extent needed to win. Cf. effective vote.

exhausted vote.A preferential vote on which all the ranked candidates have already been elected or eliminated. — Also termed exhausted ballot.

illegal vote.A vote that does not count because it was cast by someone not entitled to vote or for an ineligible choice, or in a form or manner that does not comply with the applicable rules. See spoiled ballot under BALLOT(2).

legal vote.A vote cast in the proper form and manner for an eligible choice by someone entitled to vote.

paired vote.An abstention resulting from a pairing. See PAIR.

preferential vote.A vote that ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. — Also termed preferential ballot. Cf. single transferable vote; weighted vote.

single transferable vote.A preferential vote that will migrate or “transfer” away from a candidate whom it will no longer help. • Under transferable voting, a candidate wins if his or her first-choice votes reach the number needed to win, or the “threshold.” If no candidate reaches the threshold, the least-preferred candidate is dropped and his or her votes transfer to the next-preferred candidate on each ballot. If a candidate reaches the threshold with an excess, that excess still transfers — after being discounted by the non-excess fraction needed to reach the threshold — among the surviving candidates. Each transfer preserves each vote as long as at least one candidate that the voter ranked survives. The redistribution continues until enough candidates reach the threshold or the number of surviving candidates equals the number of representatives still to be elected. See DROOP QUOTA. — Also termed STV; transferable vote; choice voting.

transferable vote.See single transferable vote.

unintelligible vote.An otherwise legal vote cast in a form from which the tellers cannot ascertain the voter's intent. • On a secret ballot, no voter may properly claim an unintelligible vote for the purpose of explaining it since the vote may have been cast by another voter who cannot contradict the claimant without sacrificing his or her right to secrecy.

vote of no confidence.See NO-CONFIDENCE VOTE.

wasted vote. A vote that does not count toward any winning candidate. Cf. effective vote; excess vote.

weighted vote. A nontransferable preferential vote whose strength is allocated among the ranked preferences either by the voter or according to a series of fixed weights.

2. The total number of votes cast in an election <the incumbent received 60% of the vote>. [Cases: Elections 1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2.] 3. The majority or supermajority needed for a certain question .

majority vote. See MAJORITY(2).

plurality vote. See PLURALITY.

tie vote. An equally divided vote. • A tie vote is not a deadlock unless the assembly is obliged to act — for example, when electing an officer to an office that will otherwise be vacant. Cf. DEADLOCK.

unanimous vote. A vote in which every voter concurs. See UNANIMOUS(2).

winner-take-all vote. An election in which the majority (or sometimes the plurality) elects all the representatives. Cf. UNIT RULE(2); PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION; proportional voting under VOTING.

4. The act of voting, usu. by a deliberative assembly <the Senate postponed the vote on the gun-control bill>. [Cases: States 35. C.J.S. States § 52.] — vote, vb.

counted vote. Parliamentary law. A vote taken in a way that individually counts each voter. • Examples of a counted vote are a show of hands, a standing vote, a roll-call vote, and a written ballot. See DIVISION(1).

division vote. See DIVISION(1).

lobby vote. A counted vote taken by each voter passing through a lobby between tellers. — Also termed teller vote.

rising vote. 1. See standing vote. 2. A vote of appreciation demonstrated by the members standing, sometimes silently but usu. with applause. — Also termed rising vote of thanks.

roll-call vote. A counted vote by roll call, in which the secretary calls each member's name, in answer to which the member casts aloud his or her vote. • The U.S. Constitution provides that “the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.” U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl. 3. — Also termed vote by yeas and nays; yeas and nays. See roll call under CALL(1).

serpentine vote. A standing vote in which the voters count off and sit down, with the count progressing up one row and down the next until each member on the side of the question being counted has voted.

standing vote. A counted vote taken by each voter standing up when his or her side of the question is counted. — Also termed rising vote; standing division.

teller vote. See lobby vote.

voice vote. A vote taken by the voters collectively answering aloud, usu. with “aye” or “nay,” when their side of the question is called. — Also termed viva voce vote.

viva voce vote. See voice vote.

vote by show of hands. A vote taken by the voters raising their hands when their side of the question is counted. — Often shortened to show of hands.

vote by yeas and nays. See roll-call vote.

VOTE DILUTION

vote dilution. See DILUTION(3).

VOTE IMMEDIATELY

vote immediately. See CLOSE DEBATE.

VOTE OF NO CONFIDENCE

VOTER

voter. 1. A person who engages in the act of voting. 2. A person who has the qualifications necessary for voting. — Also termed (in sense 2) legal voter; qualified voter. [Cases: Elections 59–87. C.J.S. Elections §§ 15–19, 26, 28–29, 32.]

registered voter. A person who is qualified to vote and whose name is recorded in the voting district where he or she resides. [Cases: Elections 95–119. C.J.S. Elections §§ 7(3), 36–38, 40(1), 41, 46–47, 51–52.]

voting. The casting of votes for the purpose of deciding an issue.

absentee voting. 1. Participation in an election by a qualified voter who is unable to appear at the polls on election day. 2. The practice of allowing voters to participate in this way. — Also termed (in sense 1) absentee ballot; absentee vote. See absentee ballot under BALLOT(2). [Cases: Elections 126(6), 216.1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 114, 118(1).]

choice voting. See single transferable vote under VOTE(1).

class voting. A method of shareholder voting in which different classes of shares vote separately on fundamental corporate changes that affect the rights and privileges of that class. — Also termed voting by class; voting by voting group. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

cumulative voting. A system in which each voter may cast more than one vote for the same candidate. • Cumulative voting helps a minority elect at least one representative. It is common in shareholder elections. [Cases: Corporations 200, 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 384, 439–442.]

first-past-the-post voting. See plurality voting.

Hare–Ware voting. See instant-runoff voting.

instant-runoff voting. A system of preferential voting that mimics a runoff election by using each voter's ranked preferences instead of a second round of voting. See runoff election under ELECTION(3). — Abbr. IRV. — Also termed Hare–Ware voting; West Australian plan.

limited voting. A system in which each voter must cast fewer votes than the number of representatives being elected.

low-total voting. A system of weighted preferential voting that adds up the ranked preferences — “1” for a first choice, “2” for a second choice, and so forth — so that the most-preferred candidate wins by having the lowest total. See preferential voting; weighted vote under VOTE(1).

majority voting. A system in which each voter may cast one vote per representative being elected, and a simple majority is required for election. [Cases: Corporations 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 439–442.]

noncumulative voting. A corporate voting system in which a shareholder is limited in board elections to voting no more than the number of shares that he or she owns for a single candidate. • The result is that a majority shareholder will elect the entire board of directors. — Also termed straight voting. [Cases: Corporations 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 439–442.]

plurality voting. Election by plurality. See PLURALITY. — Also termed first-past-the-post voting.

preferential voting. A system in which each voter ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. — Also termed rank-order voting. See single transferable vote under VOTE(1); weighted vote under VOTE(1).

proportional voting. A system of transferable preferential voting in a multi-representative election. See preferential vote under VOTE(1); single transferable vote under VOTE(1). — Also termed proportional representation.

rank-order voting. See preferential voting.

straight voting. See noncumulative voting.

two-round voting. A system in which the voting occurs in two rounds, with the first round determining the candidate's eligibility for the second round. • The second round may be a runoff between the top two candidates from the first round, an election by plurality among candidates who won their political parties' nominations in the first round, or an election by plurality among the candidates from the first round who reached a certain threshold. See runoff election under ELECTION(3).

voting by class. See class voting.

voting by group. See class voting.

voting by yeas and nays. See roll-call vote under VOTE(4).

VOTING AGREEMENT

voting agreement. See POOLING AGREEMENT.

VOTING GROUP

voting group. 1. A classification of shareholders by the type of stock held for voting on corporate matters. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.] 2. Collectively, the shareholders falling within such a classification.

wagonage (wag-<<schwa>>-nij). 1. Transportation by a wagon. 2. The fee for carriage by wagon. 3. A group of wagons.

waif, n. 1. An abandoned article whose owner is unknown, esp. something stolen and thrown away by the thief in flight, usu. through fear of apprehension. • At common law, if a waif, whether stolen or merely abandoned, was seized before the owner reclaimed it, the title vested in the Crown. The owner was thus punished for leaving the property or for failing to pursue the thief and attempting to recover the property. Today, however, the general rule is that a waif passes to the state in trust for the true owner, who may regain it by proving ownership.

“Waifs, bona waviata, are goods stolen, and waived or thrown away by the thief in his flight, for fear of being apprehended. These are given to the king by the law, as a punishment upon the owner, for not himself pursuing the felon, and taking away his goods from him. And therefore if the party robbed do his diligence immediately to follow and apprehend the thief (which is called making fresh suit) or do convict him afterwards, or procure evi-dence to convict him, he shall have his goods again.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 286–87 (1765).

2. Hist. A homeless person, esp. a woman or child; a social outcast. See WAIVERY. “[In the thirteenth century] a woman, though she cannot be outlawed, can be ‘waived,’ declared a ‘waif,’ and ‘waiver’ seems to have all the effects of outlawry.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 482 (2d ed. 1898).

wainable (way-n*<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l*), adj. Archaic. (Of land) plowable; tillable.

WAINAGE

wainage (way-nij), n. Hist. 1. The plow, team, and other implements used by a person (esp. a villein) to cultivate the soil; instruments of husbandry. 2. Cultivated land or the profits from it. — Also termed wainagium; waynagium (way-nay-jee-<<schwa>>m); (in sense 2) gainage.

WAINBOTE

wainbote. See BOTE(1).

WAIT-AND-SEE PRINCIPLE

wait-and-see principle. A modification to the rule against perpetuities, under which a court may determine the validity of a contingent future interest based on whether it actually vests within the perpetuities period, rather than on whether it possibly could have vested outside the period. —

Also termed second-look doctrine. [Cases: Per-petuities 4. C.J.S. Perpetuities §§ 2, 12.]

waiting clerk.Hist. An officer who waits in attendance on the court of chancery. • The office of the waiting clerk was abolished in 1842 by the Court of Chancery Act. St. 5 & 6 Vict. ch. 103.

WAITING PERIOD

waiting period.A period that must expire before some legal right or remedy can be enjoyed or enforced. • For example, many states have waiting periods for the issuance of marriage licenses or the purchase of handguns.

WAIVE

waive (wayv), n. Archaic. A woman who has by her conduct deprived herself of the protection of the law; a female outlaw. • The term “outlaw” usu. referred only to a male. See OUTLAW(1), (2).

waive,vb.1. To abandon, renounce, or surrender (a claim, privilege, right, etc.); to give up (a right or claim) voluntarily. • Ordinarily, to waive a right one must do it knowingly — with knowledge of the relevant facts. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 67–68, 70–72, 75–76, 79, 159–160.] 2. To refrain from insisting on (a strict rule, formality, etc.); to forgo. 3.Hist. To declare someone a waif. See WAIF(2).

WAIVER

waiver (way-v<<schwa>>r), n.1. The voluntary relinquishment or abandonment — express or implied — of a legal right or advantage; FORFEITURE <waiver of notice>. • The party alleged to have waived a right must have had both knowledge of the existing right and the intention of forgoing it. Cf. ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 67–68, 70–72, 75–76, 79, 159–160.]

“The term waiver is one of those words of indefinite connotation in which our legal literature abounds; like a cloak, it covers a multitude of sins.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 419 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“ ‘Waiver’ is often inexactly defined as ‘the voluntary relinquishment of a known right.’ When the waiver is reinforced by reliance, enforcement is often said to rest on ‘estoppel.’ ... Since the more common definition of estoppel is limited to reliance on a misrepresentation of an existing fact, reliance on a waiver or promise as to the future is sometimes said to create a ‘promissory estoppel.’ The common definition of waiver may lead to the incorrect inference that the promisor must know his legal rights and must intend the legal effect of the promise. But ... it is sufficient if he has reason to know the essential facts.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 84 cmt. b (1979).

“Waiver is often asserted as the justification for a decision when it is not appropriate to the circumstances.” Robert E. Keeton & Alan I. Widiss, Insurance Law § 6.8, at 719 (1998).

“Although it has often been said that a waiver is ‘the intentional relinquishment of a known right,' this is a mis-leading definition. What is involved is not the relinquishment of a right and the termination of the reciprocal duty but the excuse of the nonoccurrence of or a delay in the occurrence of a condition of a duty." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 8.5, at 561 (3d ed. 1999).

express waiver.A voluntary and intentional waiver. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10(2). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 74–75, 84, 87.]

implied waiver.A waiver evidenced by a party's decisive, unequivocal conduct reasonably inferring the intent to waive. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10(3). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 69, 71, 76, 79.]

“An implied waiver may arise where a person has pursued such a course of conduct as to evidence an intention to waive a right, or where his conduct is inconsistent with any other intention than to waive it. Waiver may be inferred from conduct or acts putting one off his guard and leading him to believe that a right has been waived. Mere silence, however, is no waiver unless there is an obligation to speak.” 28 Am. Jur. 2d Estoppel and Waiver § 160, at 845–46 (1966).

prospective waiver.A waiver of something that has not yet occurred, such as a contractual waiver of future claims for discrimination upon settlement of a lawsuit.

subject-matter waiver.A waiver that may result when a party voluntarily discloses a communication or privileged material about a particular topic to a third party. • A party's voluntary disclosure may lead a court to find an implied waiver that extends to all other communications relating to the same subject matter.

waiver of notice.Parliamentary law. The waiver that occurs when a defective notice for a meeting is issued but every member attends and participates without objecting to the defect.

2. The instrument by which a person relinquishes or abandons a legal right or advantage <the plaintiff must sign a waiver when the funds are delivered>.

jury waiver.A form signed by a criminal defendant who relinquishes the right to have the trial conducted before a jury.

lien waiver.A written and signed waiver of a subcontractor's mechanic's lien rights, usu. submitted to enable the owner or general contractor to receive a draw on a construction loan. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 208. C.J.S. Mechanics' Liens §§ 252–253.]

WAIVER BY ELECTION OF REMEDIES

waiver by election of remedies.A defense arising when a plaintiff has sought two inconsistent remedies and by a decisive act chooses one of them, thereby waiving the other. [Cases: Election of Remedies 1. C.J.S. Election of Remedies §§ 2–3.]

WAIVER HEARING

waiver hearing.See transfer hearing under HEARING.

WAIVER OF CLAIMS AND DEFENSES

waiver of claims and defenses. 1. The intentional relinquishment by a maker, drawer, or other obligor under a contract of the right to assert against the assignee any claims or defenses the obligor has against the assignor. [Cases: Assignments 103; Bills and Notes 314; Secured Transactions 185. C.J.S. Assignments § 100; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 166–168; Secured Transactions § 139.] 2. The contractual clause providing for such a waiver.

WAIVER OF COUNSEL

waiver of counsel. A criminal defendant's intentional relinquishment of the right to legal representation. • To be valid, a waiver of counsel must be made voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently.

WAIVER OF DEFENSES

waiver of defenses. Real estate. A document by which a mortgagor acknowledges that the mortgage is good and valid for the full amount of the mortgage note. • This document ensures that the mortgagor has no defenses to the mortgage. — Also termed estoppel certificate; no-setoff certificate; declaration of no defenses. [Cases: Mortgages 415. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 512–513, 531–534, 700.]

WAIVER OF EXEMPTION

waiver of exemption. 1. A debtor's voluntary relinquishment of the right to an exemption from a creditor's levy or sale of any part of the debtor's personal property by judicial process. [Cases: Exemptions 89–99; Homestead 169–176.] 2. The contractual clause expressly providing for such a waiver. [Cases: Exemptions 92; Homestead 170.]

WAIVER OF IMMUNITY

waiver of immunity. The act of giving up the right against self-incrimination and proceeding to testify. See IMMUNITY(3). [Cases: Witnesses 305. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 552–554.]

WAIVER OF NOTICE

waiver of notice. See WAIVER(1).

WAIVER-OF-PREMIUM CLAUSE

waiver-of-premium clause. Insurance. A provision for a waiver of premium payments after the insured has been disabled for a specified length of time, such as six months. [Cases: Insurance 2035. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 452–453, 556, 732–733, 773, 817, 832–833.]

WAIVER OF PROTEST

waiver of protest. A relinquishment by a party to a negotiable instrument of the formality of protest in case of dishonor. See PROTEST(2). [Cases: Bills and Notes 422. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 213–215, 219–228, 230.]

WAIVER OF SERVICE

waiver of service. A defendant's voluntary submission to the jurisdiction made by signing an acknowledgment of receipt of the petition and stating that he or she waives all further service.

WAIVER OF TORT

waiver of tort. The election to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit, instead of suing in tort to recover damages. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Action 28. C.J.S. Actions §§ 90, 108–123.]

“A person upon whom a tort has been committed and who brings an action for the benefits received by the tortfeasor is sometimes said to ‘waive the tort.’” Restatement of Restitution § 525 (1937).

“ ‘Waiver of tort’ is a misnomer. A party only waives a tort in the sense that he elects to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit rather than to sue in tort to recover damages; he has a choice of alternative remedies. But the tort is not extinguished. Indeed it is said that it is a sine qua non of both remedies that he should establish that a tort has been committed.” Lord Goff of Chieveley & Gareth Jones, The Law of Restitution 605 (3d ed. 1986).

WAIVERY

waivery. Hist. The act of putting a woman outside the protection of the law. • At common law, a woman could not be “outlawed” because she was not considered “in law” — that is, she could not undertake legal proceedings on her own. By Bracton's day, the effect of outlawing a woman was achieved by “waiving” her — the act being called waivery.

WAKENING

wakening. Scots law. The revival of an action in which no steps had taken for at least a year and a day.

WALK

walk, vb. Slang. 1. To be acquitted <though charged with three thefts, Robinson walked each time>. 2. To escape any type of real punishment <despite the seriousness of the crime, Selvidge paid only $750: he walked>.

WALKER

walker, n. Hist. A forester who inspects an assigned area of land.

WALKER PROCESS CLAIM

Walker Process claim. Patents. A counterclaim in an infringement suit, seeking a declaratory judgment that the patent is invalid because its owner defrauded the Patent Office. • The claim is based on antitrust law, alleging that the patentee wrongfully tried to monopolize a market. Walker Process Equip., Inc. v. Food Mach. & Chem., 382 U.S. 172, 86 S.Ct. 347 (1965). — Also termed Walker Process defense.

WALKOUT

walkout. 1. STRIKE(1). 2. The act of leaving a work assignment, meeting, or other event as a show of protest. [Cases: Labor Relations 290.C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

wall. An erection of stone, brick, or other material raised to varying heights, esp. inside or surrounding a building, for privacy, security, or enclosure.

ancient wall. A party wall that has stood for at least 20 years, thus giving each party an easement right to refuse to allow the other party to remove or substantially change the wall.

party wall. A wall that divides two adjoining, separately owned properties and that is shared by the two property owners as tenants in common. — Also termed common wall. [Cases: Party Walls 1–10. C.J.S. Party Walls §§ 1–59.]

“There appears to be no precise legal definition of the term ‘party wall.’ Four possible meanings are as follows: (a) Tenancy in common: the two adjoining owners are tenants in common of the wall. (b) Divided: the wall is divided longitudinally into two strips, one belonging to each of the neighbouring owners. (c) Divided with easements: the wall is divided as in (b), but each half is subject to an easement of support in favour of the owner of the other half. (d) Ownership subject to easement: the wall belongs entirely to one of the adjoining owners, but is subject to an easement or right in the other to have it maintained as a dividing wall.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 303–04 (6th ed. 1993).

WALLIA

wallia (wahl-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A wall (such as a mound or bank) erected in marshy areas for protection against the sea; a seawall.

WALSH ACT

Walsh Act. A statute, originally enacted in 1926, giving federal courts the power to subpoena and compel the return, testimony, and (if requested) production of documents or other items of U.S. citizens or residents who are abroad. • The subpoena is available for criminal proceedings, including grand-jury proceedings. 28 USCA § 1783.

WALSH–HEALEY ACT

Walsh–Healey Act. A federal law, enacted in 1936, stipulating that government contractors must: (1) pay their workers no less than the prevailing minimum wage; (2) observe the eight-hour day and 40-hour workweek (with time-and-a-half for work exceeding those hours); (3) employ no convict labor and no females under 18 or males under 16 years of age; and (4) maintain sanitary working conditions. 41 USCA §§ 35 et seq. — Also termed Public Contracts Act.

WAMPUM

wampum (wom-p*<<schwa>>*m), n. Hist. Indian money consisting of shells, beads, or animal pelts. • In 1637, it became the first medium of exchange for the New England colonies by order of the General Court of Massachusetts, because England had not provided the colonies with a standard of exchange. The Court ordered that “wampampege should passe at 6 a penny for any sum under 12d.” Wampum was used as the medium of exchange, esp. for small transactions, until 1652, when the General Court ordered the first metallic currency.

WANDS<TT> TEST

Wands test.Patents. A judicial test of “undue experimentation” for determining whether a patent application's specification teaches one skilled in the art how to make and work the claimed invention. In re Wands, 858 F.2d 731 (Fed. Cir. 1988). • The test takes account of eight factors: (1) how much experimentation would be needed, (2) how much guidance is given, (3) whether there is a working example, (4) the nature of the invention, (5) the state of the prior art, (6) the level of skill of those in the art, (7) how predictable or unpredictable the art is, and (8) the breadth of the claims. The factors (often called Wands factors) are illustrative rather than mandatory. See UNDUE EXPERIMENTATION. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

WANLASS

wanlass (wahn-l<<schwa>>s).Hist. An ancient form of tenure requiring the tenant to drive deer to a stand so that the lord can take a shot. — Also spelled wanlace.

WANTAGE

wantage (wahnt-ij), n. A deficiency of something; specif., a vessel's deficiency of not being full, due to leakage.

WANTED PERSON

wanted person.A person sought by the police because the person has escaped from custody or an arrest warrant has been issued for the person's arrest.

WANT OF AMICABLE DEMAND

want of amicable demand.Louisiana law. A defensive pleading by a defendant who seeks to avoid, delay, or defeat the plaintiff's petition. • A defendant may (1) refuse to participate in the suit (a declinatory exception), (2) seek to delay the litigation in the suit (a dilatory exception), or (3) seek to dismiss or defeat the suit (a peremptory exception). See declinatory exception, dilatory exception, peremptory exception under EXCEPTION(1).

WANT OF CONSIDERATION

want of consideration.The lack of consideration for a contract. See CONSIDERATION(1). Cf. FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Contracts 54(1), 84; Sales 21. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 87, 134; Sales § 27.]

WANT OF JURISDICTION

want of jurisdiction.A court's lack of power to act in a particular way or to give certain kinds of relief. • A court may have no power to act at all, may lack authority over a person or the subject matter of a lawsuit, or may have no power to act until the prerequisites for its jurisdiction have been satisfied. — Also termed lack of jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION. [Cases: Courts 39, 40; Federal Courts 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 87–92.]

want of prosecution.Failure of a litigant to pursue the case <dismissal for want of prosecution>. — Abbr. w.o.p.; w.p. — Also termed lack of prosecution; no progress. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1758; Pretrial Procedure 581. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 51, 67, 69, 73.]

WANT OF REPAIR

want of repair.A defective condition, such as a condition on a highway making it unsafe for ordinary travel. [Cases: Automobiles 252; Municipal Corporations 757(1). C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 431–433, 435, 440–441, 466, 486; Municipal Corporations § 699.]

wanton (wahn-t<<schwa>>n), adj. Unreasonably or maliciously risking harm while being utterly indifferent to the consequences. • In criminal law, wanton usu. connotes malice (in the criminal-law sense), while reckless does not. Cf. RECKLESS; WILLFUL. [Cases: Criminal Law 23; Negligence 275.C.J.S. Criminal Law § 38; Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113, 913–914.]

“Wanton differs from reckless both as to the actual state of mind and as to the degree of culpability. One who is acting recklessly is fully aware of the unreasonable risk he is creating, but may be trying and hoping to avoid any harm. One acting wantonly may be creating no greater risk of harm, but he is not trying to avoid it and is indifferent to whether harm results or not. Wanton conduct has properly been characterized as ‘vicious’ and rates extreme in the degree of culpability. The two are not mutually exclusive. Wanton conduct is reckless plus, so to speak.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 879–80 (3d ed. 1982).

WANTON AND RECKLESS MISCONDUCT

wanton and reckless misconduct.See wanton misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

WANTON MISCONDUCT

wanton misconduct.See MISCONDUCT.

WANTON NEGLIGENCE

wanton negligence.See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

WANTONNESS

wantonness,n. Conduct indicating that the actor is aware of the risks but indifferent to the results. • Wantonness usu. suggests a greater degree of culpability than recklessness, and it often connotes malice in criminal-law contexts. Cf. RECKLESSNESS. [Cases: Damages 91(1); Negligence 275; Sentencing and Punishment 1438. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1593–1594, 1596; Damages §§ 202–203; Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113.] — wanton,adj.

WAPENTAKE

wapentake (wəhp-*<<schwa>>*n-tayk or wap-), n.[fr. Saxon waepen “weapons” + tac “touch”] Hist. 1. In some English counties, a division corresponding to the hundred or ward in other counties. See HUNDRED. 2. The court within such a division. 3. A bailiff who works in such a court.

WAR

war. 1. Hostile conflict by means of armed forces, carried on between nations, states, or rulers, or sometimes between parties within the same nation or state; a period of such conflict <the Gulf War>. • A state of war may also exist without armed conflict; for example, the treaty formally ending the World War II state of war between the United States and Japan was signed seven years after the fighting ended in 1945. [Cases: War and National Emergency 1. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 1, 5.]

civil war. An internal armed conflict between people of the same nation; esp. (usu. cap.), the war from 1861 to 1865, resulting from the Confederate states' attempted secession from the Union.

WARANTIZARE

warantizare. See WARRANTIZARE.

WAR CLAUSE

War Clause. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 11–14, giving Congress the power to declare war. See WAR POWER. [Cases: War and National Emergency 2. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 2.]

WAR CONTRIBUTION

war contribution. Int'l law. An extraordinary payment imposed by an occupying power on the population of an occupied territory during wartime. — Often shortened to contribution.

WAR CRIME

war crime. Conduct that violates international laws governing the conduct of international armed conflicts. • Examples of war crimes are the killing of hostages, abuse of civilians in occupied territories, abuse of prisoners of war, and devastation that is not justified by military necessity. [Cases: War and National Emergency 11. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 7–8.]

WARD

ward. 1. A person, usu. a minor, who is under a guardian's charge or protection. See GUARDIAN(1). [Cases: Guardian and Ward 1, 9.5.]

permanent ward.A ward who has been assigned a permanent guardian, the rights of the natural parents having been terminated by a juvenile court. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9.5; Infants 155.]

temporary ward.A minor who is under the supervision of a juvenile court but whose parents' parental rights have not been terminated. [Cases: Infants 154.1.]

ward-in-chancery.Hist. An infant under the superintendence of the chancellor.

ward of admiralty.A seaman — so called because of the legal view that a seaman, in contractual matters, should be treated as a beneficiary and the other contracting party as a fiduciary because of the perceived inequity of their bargaining positions. [Cases: Seamen 1. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 6, 216–219.]

ward of the state.A person who is housed by, and receives protection and necessities from, the government. — Also termed state's ward.

2. A territorial division in a city, usu. defined for purposes of city government. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 40.] 3. The act of guarding or protecting something or someone. 4.Archaic. One who guards. 5.CASTLE-GUARDDD. — Formerly also termed warda.

WARDA

warda (wor-d<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin] Hist. Wardship; guardianship.

WARDAGE

wardage. See WARDPENNY.

WARDEN

warden. 1. A person in charge of something <game warden> <port warden>; esp., the official in charge of a prison, jail, or park <prison warden> <game warden>. [Cases: Prisons 6–12. C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners §§ 6, 14–20, 25, 50–53, 55, 59, 124–129.] 2.SERGEANT-AT-ARMS(4).

WARDEN OF THE CINQUE PORTS

warden of the cinque ports (singk ports).Hist. A magistrate with jurisdiction over the five cinque ports. • This office was created in imitation of the Roman policy of strengthening coasts against enemies. The warden, formally called the Lord Warden, presided over the Court of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, which was created in the 14th century and, over time, variously exercised civil, equity, and admiralty jurisdiction. — Formerly termed guardian of the cinque ports.

distress warrant. 1. A warrant authorizing a court officer to distrain property. See DISTRESS. 2. A writ allowing an officer to seize a tenant's goods for failing to pay rent due to the landlord. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 270(6). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 688.]

escape warrant. 1. A warrant directing a peace officer to rearrest an escaped prisoner. 2. Hist. A warrant granted to retake a prisoner who had escaped from a royal prison after being committed there. • The warrant was obtained on affidavit from the judge of the court in which the action had been brought, and was directed to all sheriffs throughout England, commanding them to retake and commit the prisoner to the nearest jail.

extradition warrant. A warrant for the return of a fugitive from one jurisdiction to another. Cf. rendition warrant. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers 12, 36.]

fugitive warrant. A warrant that authorizes law-enforcement officers to take into custody a person who has fled from one state to another to avoid prosecution or punishment.

general warrant. 1. Hist. A warrant issued by the English Secretary of State for the arrest of the author, printer, or publisher of a seditious libel, without naming the persons to be arrested. • General warrants were banned by Par-liament in 1766.

“A practice had obtained in the secretaries office ever since the restoration, grounded on some clauses in the acts for regulating the press, of issuing general warrants to take up (without naming any person in particular) the authors, printers and publishers of such obscene or seditious libels, as were particularly specified in the warrant. When those acts expired in 1694, the same practice was inadvertently continued, in every reign and under every administration, except the four last years of queen Anne, down to the year 1763: when such a warrant being issued to apprehend the authors, printers and publishers of a certain seditious libel, its validity was disputed; and the warrant was adjudged by the whole court of king's bench to be void, in the case of Money v. Leach. Trin. 5 Geo. III. B.R. After which the issuing of such general warrants was declared illegal by a vote of the house of commons.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 288 n.i (1769).

2. A warrant that gives a law-enforcement officer broad authority to search and seize unspecified places or persons; a search or arrest warrant that lacks a sufficiently particularized description of the person or thing to be seized or the place to be searched. • General warrants are unconstitutional because they fail to meet the Fourth Amendment's specificity requirements.

“But though there are precedents of general warrants to search all suspected places for stolen goods, these are not at common law legal, because it would be extremely dangerous to leave it to the discretion of a common officer to arrest what person, or search what houses he thinks fit. And in the great case of Money v. Leach, it was declared by Lord Mansfield, that a warrant to search for, and secure the person and papers of the author, printer and publisher of a libel, is not only illegal in itself, but is so improper on the face of it, that it will afford no justification to an officer acting under its sanction. And by two resolutions of the House of Commons such general warrants were declared to be invalid.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 66 (2d ed. 1826).

John Doe warrant. A warrant for the arrest of a person whose name is unknown. • A John Doe warrant may be issued, for example, for a person known by sight but not by name. This type of warrant is permitted in a few states, but not in federal practice.

justice's warrant. See peace warrant.

landlord's warrant. A type of distress warrant from a landlord to seize the tenant's goods, to sell them at public sale, and to compel the tenant to pay rent or observe some other lease stipulation. See DISTRAIN; DISTRESS.

no-knock search warrant. See SEARCH WARRANT.

outstanding warrant. An unexecuted arrest warrant.

peace warrant. A warrant issued by a justice of the peace for the arrest of a specified person. — Also termed justice's warrant.

municipal warrant. An order to draw money from a municipality's treasury for the payment of the municipality's expenses or debts. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 895. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1636.]

tax-anticipation warrant. A warrant that is issued to raise public money and that is payable out of tax receipts when collected.

treasury warrant. An order in the form of a check on which government disbursements are paid. [Cases: United States 87.]

3. An order by which a drawer authorizes someone to pay a particular sum of money to another. [Cases: Bills and Notes 1. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 2–3, 5–6, 8–9, 17–18, 22.]

county warrant. A warrant drawn by a county official, directing the county treasurer to pay a sum of money out of county funds to bearer, to a named individual, or to the named individual's order. [Cases: Counties 163. C.J.S. Counties § 208.]

4. Securities. An instrument granting the holder a long-term (usu. a five- to ten-year) option to buy shares at a fixed price. • It is commonly attached to preferred stocks or bonds. — Also termed stock warrant; subscription warrant. [Cases: Corporations 72. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 146–147.]

warrant, vb. 1. To guarantee the security of (realty or personalty, or a person) <the store warranted the safety of the customer's jewelry>. 2. To give warranty of (title); to give warranty of title to (a person) <the seller warrants the property's title to the buyer>. [Cases: Covenants 45, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22, 29.] 3. To promise or guarantee <warrant payment>.

“Even today lawyers use the verb ‘to warrant’ meaning to promise without necessarily indicating that the promise is a warranty.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 145 n.1 (3d ed. 1981).

4. To justify <the conduct warrants a presumption of negligence>. 5. To authorize <the manager warranted the search of the premises>.

WARRANT ARREST

warrant arrest. See lawful arrest under ARREST.

WARRANT CLAUSE

Warrant Clause. The clause of the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring that warrants be issued only on probable cause. [Cases: Arrest 63.1; Searches and Seizures 23, 24. C.J.S. Arrest §§ 16, 19–20, 38–42; Searches and Seizures §§ 3, 5, 9–12, 14–16, 23–24, 29–30, 32, 34, 47–48, 50, 58, 102.]

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY

warrant of attorney. 1.POWER OF ATTORNEY(1).2.Archaic. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to appear in court and to confess judgment in favor of a specified party. • It usu. instructed the attorney not to bring any action, seek a writ of error, or file a bill in equity that might delay the judgment. The warrant was typically given as security for an obligation on which judgment was authorized. Cf. CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT; COGNOVIT. [Cases: Judgment 43. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 157, 164–166.]

“A warrant of attorney was not required to be under seal, though it generally was so. In order to guard against any imposition in procuring debtors to execute warrants of attorney or cognovits in ignorance of the effect of such instruments, it is provided that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, or cognovit actionem, given by any person, shall not be of any force, unless there is present some attorney of one of the superior courts on behalf of such person, expressly named by him and attending at his request, to inform him of the nature and effect of such warrant or cognovit, before the same is executed ....” Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 125 (11th ed. 1881).

WARRANT OF COMMITMENT

WARRANTOR

warrantor (wor-*<<schwa>>n-tor or -t<<schwa>>*r or wahr-). A person who gives a written warranty or becomes obligated under an implied warranty. See 15 USCA § 2301(5).

WARRANT RECALL

warrant recall, n. A procedure for removing from government computers information about canceled warrants in order to avoid repeated or mistaken arrests.

WARRANT TO SUE AND DEFEND

warrant to sue and defend. Hist. 1. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to authorize commencement or defense of a lawsuit. 2. A special warrant from the Crown authorizing a party to appoint an attorney to sue or defend on the party's behalf.

WARRANT UPON INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION

warrant upon indictment or information. See WARRANT(1).

WARRANTY

warranty (wor-*<<schwa>>*n-tee or wahr-), n. 1. Property. A covenant by which the grantor in a deed promises to secure to the grantee the estate conveyed in the deed, and pledges to compensate the grantee with other land if the grantee is evicted by someone having better title. • The covenant is binding on the grantor's heirs. See COVENANT(4). Cf. quitclaim deed under DEED. [Cases: Covenants 45, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22, 29.]

collateral warranty. A warranty that is made by a stranger to the title, and that consequently runs only to the covenantee and not with the land. [Cases: Covenants 45, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22, 29.]

general warranty. A warranty against the claims of all persons. [Cases: Covenants 47, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 23, 29.]

lineal warranty. Hist. A warranty existing when an heir derives title to land from the warrantor; a warranty from the same ancestor as the one from whom the land derived.

special warranty. A warranty against any person's claim made by, through, or under the grantor or the grantor's heirs. [Cases: Covenants 48, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 24, 29.]

2. Contracts. An express or implied promise that something in furtherance of the contract is guaranteed by one of the contracting parties; esp., a seller's promise that the thing being sold is as represented or promised. • A warranty differs from a representation in four principal ways: (1) a warranty is an essential part of a contract, while a representation is usu. only a collateral inducement, (2) an express warranty is usu. written on the face of the contract, while a representation may be written or oral, (3) a warranty is conclusively presumed to be material, while the burden is on the party claiming breach to show that a representation is material, and (4) a warranty must be strictly complied with, while substantial truth is the only requirement for a representation. Cf. CONDITION(2), (3); GUARANTEE(1). [Cases: Contracts 205.5; Sales 246–288.5. C.J.S. Contracts § 341; Sales §§ 236–280, 282–284, 286, 288–289.] “[T]wo points must be borne in mind. In the first place, the words ‘condition’ and ‘warranty’ are not invariably kept as distinct as accuracy of definition demands; and in insurance law especially ‘warranty’ is very commonly used in the sense ascribed to ‘condition’ .... In the second place, the injured party, if he chooses to waive his right to repudiate the contract on breach of a condition, may still bring an action for such damages as he has sustained.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 223 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

as-is warranty. A warranty that goods are sold with all existing faults. See AS IS. [Cases: Sales 267. C.J.S. Sales §§ 238, 263–270.]

construction warranty. A warranty from the seller or building contractor of a new home that the home is free of structural, electrical, plumbing, and other defects and is fit for its intended purpose. [Cases: Contracts 205.35(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 359.]

deceptive warranty. A warranty containing false or fraudulent representations or promises. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65.]

express warranty. A warranty created by the overt words or actions of the seller. • Under the UCC, an express warranty is created by any of the following: (1) an affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer relating to the goods that becomes the basis of the bargain; (2) a description of the goods that becomes part of the basis of the bargain; or (3) a sample or model made part of the basis of the bargain. UCC § 2-313. [Cases: Contracts 205.10; Sales 259. C.J.S. Contracts § 359; Sales § 242.]

“An express warranty arises from the contract itself, from the ‘dickered’ aspects of the individual bargain. Any affirmation or promise relating to the goods, any description of the goods, and any sample or model of the goods becomes an express warranty if it is ‘part of the basis of the bargain.’ ” 1 Julian B. McDonnell & Elizabeth J. Coleman, Commercial and Consumer Warranties ¶ 1.02[1], at 1-7 (1991).

extended warranty. An additional warranty often sold with the purchase of consumer goods (such as appliances and motor vehicles) to cover repair costs not otherwise covered by a manufacturer's standard warranty, by extending either the standard-warranty coverage period or the range of defects covered. — Also termed extended service warranty; extended service contract. [Cases: Sales 279. C.J.S. Sales §§ 249, 256, 258, 261, 283.]

full warranty. A warranty that fully covers labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, the warrantor must remedy the consumer product within a reasonable time and without charge after notice of a defect or malfunction. 15 USCA § 2304. See MAGNUSON–MOSS

WARRANTY ACT. Cf. limited warranty. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6; Sales 279. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65; Sales §§ 249, 256, 258, 261, 283.]

implied warranty. An obligation imposed by the law when there has been no representation or promise; esp., a warranty arising by operation of law because of the circumstances of a sale, rather than by the seller's express promise. [Cases: Contracts 205.15; Sales 262.5. C.J.S. Contracts § 359; Sales § 252.]

implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose. A warranty — implied by law if the seller has reason to know of the buyer's special purposes for the property — that the property is suitable for those purposes. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of fitness. [Cases: Contracts 205.15(3); Sales 273(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 347, 359; Sales §§ 258–260.]

“Those unfamiliar with the differences between the warranty of merchantability (fitness for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used) and the warranty of fitness for a particular purpose often confuse the two; one can find many opinions in which the judges used the terms ‘merchantability’ and ‘fitness for a particular purpose’ interchangeably. Such confusion under the Code is inexcusable.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 9-10, at 527 (4th ed. 1995).

implied warranty of habitability. In a residential lease, a warranty from the landlord to the tenant that the leased property is fit to live in and that it will remain so during the term of the lease. — Also termed covenant of habitability. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 125(1).]

implied warranty of merchantability. A warranty that the property is fit for the ordinary purposes for which it is used. • Under the UCC, an implied warranty of merchantability arises whenever a merchant sells goods unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. UCC § 2-314. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of merchantability. [Cases: Contracts 205.15(3); Sales 272. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 347, 359; Sales §§ 254–256.]

“The implied warranty of merchantability attaches when the seller is a merchant with respect to the goods involved in the exchange. Accordingly, the product must meet certain standards; it must pass without objection in the trade under the contract description and it must be fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used. The concepts of marketability, operability, and repairability have emerged as varying criteria for merchantable goods.” 1 Julian B. McDonnell & Elizabeth J. Coleman, Commercial and Consumer Warranties ¶ 1.02[1], at 1-7 (1991).

limited warranty. A warranty that does not fully cover labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, a limited warranty must be clearly labeled as such on the face of the warranty. See MAGNUSON–MOSS WARRANTY ACT. Cf. full warranty. [Cases: Sales 279. C.J.S. Sales §§ 249, 256, 258, 261, 283.]

personal warranty. A warranty arising from an obligation to pay all or part of the debt of another.

presentment warranty. An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made to a payor or acceptor upon presentment of the instrument for payment or acceptance. UCC § 3-417. [Cases: Banks and Banking 149, 174; Bills and Notes 296, 326. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 416, 419, 421–434, 437–438; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 162–165.]

transfer warranty. 1. An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made by a transferor to a transferee and, if the transfer is by indorsement, to remote transferees. UCC §§ 3-417, 4-207. [Cases: Banks and Banking 149, 174; Bills and Notes 296, 326. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 416, 419, 421–434, 437–438; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 162–165.] 2. A warranty made by a transferee of a document of title upon a transfer of the document for value to the immediate transferee. UCC § 7-507. [Cases: Carriers 58. C.J.S. Carriers §§ 400, 402.]

warranty ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). An independent subsidiary promise whose breach does not discharge the contract, but gives to the injured party a right of action for the damage sustained as a result of the breach. Cf. warranty ex post facto. [Cases: Contracts 318; Sales 282. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 334, 450–455, 541–544; Sales §§ 237, 239, 251, 278–280.]

warranty against infringement. A merchant's warranty that the goods being sold or licensed do not violate any patent, copyright, trademark, or other intellectual-property claim. • The warranty does not arise if the buyer provides the seller with the specifications for the goods purchased. Under § 2-312(3) of the Uniform Commercial Code, the warranty against infringement is a part of the warranty of title unless it is explicitly disclaimed.

warranty ex post facto (eks pohst fak-toh). A broken condition for which the injured party could void the contract, but decides instead to continue the contract, with a right of action for the broken condition (which amounts to a breached warranty). See CONDITION(2). Cf. warranty ab initio. [Cases: Contracts 318; Sales 282. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 334, 450–455, 541–544; Sales §§ 237, 239, 251, 278–280.]

warranty of actual title. See warranty of title.

warranty of assignment. An assignor's implied warranty that he or she (1) has the rights assigned, (2) will do nothing to interfere with those rights, and (3) knows of nothing that impairs the value of the assignment. [Cases: Assignments 97. C.J.S. Assignments § 90.]

warranty of authorship. Copyright. An author's contractual warranty that the work is an original work by that author. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 49. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 27, 30, 33–34, 93.]

warranty of fitness. See implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose.

warranty of merchantability. See implied warranty of merchantability.

warranty of title. A warranty that the seller or assignor of property has title to that property, that the transfer is rightful, and that there are no liens or other encumbrances beyond those that the buyer or assignee is aware of at the time of contracting. • This warranty arises automatically whenever anyone sells goods. — Also termed war-ranty of actual title. [Cases: Covenants 38–48, 62–67; Sales 263. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 14–24, 29, 46–47; Sales §§ 261, 272.]

written warranty.A warranty made in writing; specif., any written affirmation or promise by a supplier of a consumer product to a buyer (for purposes other than resale), forming the basis of the bargain and providing that the material or workmanship is free of defects or will be repaired or replaced free of charge if the product fails to meet the required specifications. 15 USCA § 2301. [Cases: Sales 260. C.J.S. Sales §§ 247–248, 265.]

Y2K warranty.See Y2KWARRANTY.

3.Insurance. A pledge or stipulation by the insured that the facts relating to the person insured, the thing insured, or the risk insured are as stated. [Cases: Insurance 2967, 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 539, 541–545, 566, 569, 587, 591–593, 596, 628–629, 634, 639, 702, 706, 708, 720, 761–763, 771, 775.]

affirmative warranty.A warranty — express or implied — that facts are as stated at the beginning of the policy period. • An affirmative warranty is usu. a condition precedent to the policy taking effect. [Cases: Insurance 2967. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 539, 541–545, 566, 587, 591–593, 596, 628, 702, 706, 708, 761–763, 775.]

executory warranty.A warranty that arises when an insured undertakes to perform some executory stipulation, such as a promise that certain acts will be done or that certain facts will continue to exist. [Cases: Insurance 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 542–545, 569, 629, 634, 639, 706, 720, 761–762, 771.]

promissory warranty.A warranty that facts will continue to be as stated throughout the policy period, such that a failure of the warranty provides the insurer with a defense to a claim under the policy. — Also termed continuing warranty. [Cases: Insurance 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 542–545, 569, 629, 634, 639, 706, 720, 761–762, 771.]

WARRANTY CLAUSE

warranty clause. 1. A contractual clause containing a warranty. 2.Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease by which the lessor guarantees that title is without defect and agrees to defend it. • If the warranty is breached, the lessor may be held liable to the lessee to the extent that the lessor has received payments under the lease. Presence of a warranty in an oil-and-gas lease may also cause after-acquired interests to pass from the lessor to the lessee by application of estoppel by deed.

WARRANTY DEED

warranty deed.See DEED.

WARREN

warren (wor-<<schwa>>n orwahr-<<schwa>>n).1. A place for the preservation of certain wildlife (such as pheasants, partridges, or rabbits).2. A privilege to keep wildlife or game in a warren. 3. The area to which the privilege extends.

free warren.A warren privilege giving the grantee the sole right to kill the wildlife to the extent of the grantee's warren area. — Also termed libera warrena.

“Free warren is a ... franchise, erected for preservation or custody ... of beasts and fowls of warren; which being ferae naturae, every one had a right to kill as he could; but upon the introduction of the forest laws ... these animals being looked upon as royal game and the sole property of our savage monarchs, this franchise of free warren was invented to protect them; by giving the grantee a sole and exclusive power of killing such game ... on condition of his preventing other persons. A man therefore that has the franchise of warren is in reality no more than a royal gamekeeper; but no man, not even a lord of a manor, could by common law justify sporting on another's soil, or even on his own, unless he had the liberty of free warren.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 38–39 (1766).

WAR-RISK INSURANCE

war-risk insurance. See INSURANCE.

WARSAW CONVENTION

Warsaw Convention. Int'l law. A treaty (to which the United States is a party) negotiated in Warsaw, Poland, in 1929, consisting of uniform rules governing claims made for personal injuries arising out of international air travel. Cf. MONTREAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Carriers 307; Treaties 8.C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 265, 267; Carriers § 573; Treaties § 6.]

“Under the [Warsaw] Convention ... air carriers are absolutely liable up to a preset monetary ceiling for any accident in which a passenger suffers bodily injury or death, as long as the accident took place on board the aircraft or in the process of any of the operations of embarking or disembarking. The Convention limits the liability of the carrier for each passenger to the sum of 125,000 francs, unless the carrier and passenger by special contract agree to a higher limit of liability, or unless it can be established that the carrier has been guilty of ‘willful misconduct.’ The Convention contains a two-year time limitation for bringing suit, and also absolves the carrier from liability upon a showing of due care on its part.” 8A Am. Jur. 2d Aviation § 149, at 160–61 (1997).

WARSHIP

warship. Int'l law. A ship commissioned by a nation's military, operating with a military command and crew and displaying the nation's flag or other external marks indicating its country of origin. • Under international maritime laws, warships are not subject to many of the safety and environmental regulations that apply to shipping vessels and passenger ships.

WARTH

warth. See WARDPENNY.

WARWIT

warwit. See WARDWIT.

war zone. Int'l law. A designated area, on land or at sea, within which the rights of neutral countries are not respected by belligerent countries. [Cases: War and National Emergency 32. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 49.]

wash, n. 1. A situation in which two effects offset each other. • For example, if an event produces gross income and also a deduction in the same amount so that taxable income is unchanged, the event creates a wash. 2. The shallow part of a river or the arm of a sea; the sand, rocks, and gravel washed down by a mountain stream and deposited on level land near the mouth of a canyon.

WASH SALE

wash sale. See SALE.

WASH TRANSACTION

wash transaction. See wash sale under SALE.

waste, n. 1. Permanent harm to real property committed by a tenant (for life or for years) to the prejudice of the heir, the reversioner, or the remainderman. • In the law of mortgages, any of the following acts by the mortgagor may constitute waste: (1) physical damage, whether intentional or negligent, (2) failure to maintain and repair, except for repair of casualty damage or damage caused by third-party acts, (3) failure to pay property taxes or governmental assessments secured by a lien having priority over the mortgage, so that the payments become delinquent, (4) the material failure to comply with mortgage covenants concerning physical care, maintenance, construction, demolition, or casualty insurance, or (5) keeping the rents to which the mortgagee has the right of possession. — Also termed devastation; vastum. [Cases: Waste 1. C.J.S. Waste §§ 1–4, 6–9.]

“The old action of waste was a mixed action, being founded in part on the statute of Gloucester (A.D. 1278), which provided that ‘he which shall be attainted of waste shall lose the thing wasted, and moreover shall recompense thrice as much as the waste shall be taxed at.’ The action was to recover the land in which waste had been done and the treble damages. The statute of Gloucester was imported into this country, but many variant statutes now regulate the subject.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 13 (2d ed. 1899).

active waste. See commissive waste.

affirmative waste. See commissive waste.

ameliorating waste (<<schwa>>-meel-y<<schwa>>-ray-ting). A lessee's unauthorized change to the physical character of a lessor's property — technically constituting waste, but in fact resulting in improvement of the property. • Generally, equity will not enjoin such waste. — Also termed ameliorative waste.

commissive waste (k<<schwa>>-mis-iv). Waste caused by the affirmative acts of the tenant. — Also termed active waste; affirmative waste; voluntary waste. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 55(2). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 261.]

double waste.Hist. The destruction occurring when a tenant having a duty to repair allows a house to deteriorate, and then unlawfully cuts down timber to repair it.

economic waste.See ECONOMIC WASTE.

equitable waste.Waste that abuses a privilege of nonimpeachability at common law, for which equity will restrain the commission of willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste; esp., waste caused by a life tenant who, although ordinarily not responsible for permissive waste, flagrantly damages or destroys the property. [Cases: Waste 4. C.J.S. Waste § 6.]

“A life tenant with the benefit of an express exemption from liability for voluntary waste will nevertheless be restrained in equity from committing acts of flagrant destruction to the premises; hence the (seemingly paradoxical) term, ‘equitable waste’. A life tenant who has engaged in, or who threatens to engage in, reprehensible acts of voluntary waste will not be permitted unconscientiously to shield behind his legal right to commit waste to the detriment of those next entitled to enjoyment of the property, for this would be to abuse the legal right.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114–15 (2d ed. 1988).

permissive waste.A tenant's failure to make normal repairs to property so as to protect it from substantial deterioration. [Cases: Waste 3. C.J.S. Waste § 8.]

voluntary waste.Waste resulting from some positive act of destruction. See commissive waste. [Cases: Waste 1. C.J.S. Waste §§ 1–4, 6–9.]

“Voluntary waste. This involves some positive act of injury to the property, diminishing its value for the person next in succession; it is a deliberate and active change to the property. Examples are altering the character of premises by demolishing internal walls and fittings or opening and working a mine on the land (but not working a mine already opened, for the pre-existence of the mine shows an intention on the part of the grantor that the profits from the mine are to be enjoyed by the life tenant). A life tenant is liable for voluntary waste, unless the instrument conferring the interest expressly exempts liability for voluntary waste.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114 (2d ed. 1988).

2. Refuse or superfluous material, esp. that remaining after a manufacturing or chemical process <toxic waste>.

hazardous waste.Waste that — because of its quantity, concentration, or physical, chemical, or infectious characteristics — may cause or significantly contribute to an increase in mortality or otherwise harm human health or the environment. 42 USCA § 6903(5). — Also termed hazardous substance. [Cases: Environmental Law 427.]

toxic waste.Hazardous, poisonous substances, such as dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane

(DDT). • Most states regulate the handling and disposing of toxic waste, and several federal statutes (such as the Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA), 42 USCA §§ 9601–9657) regulate the use, transportation, and disposal of toxic waste. [Cases: Environmental Law 427.]

WASTE BOOK

waste book. A merchant's book for making rough entries of transactions before posting them into a journal. — Also termed blotter.

WASTED VOTE

wasted vote. See VOTE(1).

WASTEWATER

wastewater. See WATER.

WASTING ASSET

wasting asset. See ASSET.

WASTING PROPERTY

wasting property. See PROPERTY.

WASTING TRUST

wasting trust. See TRUST.

WASTOR

wastor, n. Hist. A type of thief, classified in a statute of Edward III with marauding vagabonds and burglars who entered premises by lifting door latches. 5 Edw. 3, ch. 14.

WATCH

watch, n. Maritime law. 1. A division of a ship's crew <port or starboard watch>. [Cases: Collision 77, 81, 99. C.J.S. Collision §§ 129–137, 143–147.] 2. The division of the day into time periods of service by officers and the crew <four-hour watch>.

watch, vb. Hist. To stand guard during the night.

WATCH AND WARD

watch and ward, n. Hist. A feudal duty that some tenants had to keep guard through continuous vigilance. • The phrase denotes keeping guard by night (watch) and by day (ward). — Also termed watching and warding.

WATER

water. 1. The transparent liquid that is a chemical compound of hydrogen and oxygen (H<sub>2</sub>O). 2. A body of this liquid, as in a stream, river, lake, or ocean.

backwater. Water in a stream that, because of a dam or obstruction, cannot flow forward and sometimes flows back. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 53, 159–175. C.J.S. Waters §§ 20, 25–27, 33–47, 59–60, 297–307, 311–318, 321–327.]

coast water. Tidewater navigable by an ocean vessel; all water opening directly or indirectly into the ocean and navigable by a vessel coming in from the ocean. — Also termed coastal water.

developed water. Water brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water rights.

diffused surface water. Water, such as rainfall runoff, that collects and flows on the ground but does not form a watercourse. • Surface water is usu. subject to different regulations from water flowing in a watercourse. — Often shortened to surface water. See COMMON-ENEMY DOCTRINE; WATERCOURSE. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 115. C.J.S. Waters § 254.]

excess water. Water that is flowing in a stream in addition to what may be termed adjudicated waters; any water not needed for the reasonable beneficial uses of those having priority rights. — Also termed surplus water.

floodwater. Water that escapes from a watercourse in large volumes and flows over adjoining property in no regular channel.

foreign water. Water belonging to another nation or subject to another jurisdiction.

groundwater. Water found in layers of permeable rock or soil.

inland waters. See INTERNAL WATERS.

internal waters. See INTERNAL WATERS.

navigable water. See NAVIGABLE WATER.

navigable water of the United States. See NAVIGABLE WATER.

percolating water. Water that oozes or seeps through the soil without a defined channel (such as rainwater or other water that has lost its status as part of a stream). • Percolating water usu. constitutes part of the land on which it is found. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 101. C.J.S. Waters §§ 193, 195–197, 201–204.]

posted water. (usu. pl.) A body of water that is reserved for the exclusive use of the person who owns the land surrounding it. • The owner secures the exclusive use by posting a notice prohibiting others from using the water.

private water. Nonnavigable water owned and controlled by one or more individuals and not subject to public use. • If a body of water is small and of little or no practical value for general public use, it is considered private.

public water. Water adapted for purposes of navigation or public access.

subterranean water. Water that lies or flows beneath the earth's surface and that is not artificially confined. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 99. C.J.S. Waters §§ 190–192.]

surface water. Water lying on the surface of the earth but not forming part of a watercourse or lake. • Surface water most commonly derives from rain, springs, or melting snow.

surplus water. 1. Water running off irrigated ground; water not consumed by the irrigation process. 2. See excess water.

territorial waters. The waters under a state's or nation's jurisdiction, including both inland waters and surrounding sea (traditionally within three miles of the coastline). — Also termed marine belt; maritime belt.

tidewater. See TIDEWATER.

wastewater. 1. Water that escapes from the canals, ditches, or other receptacles of the lawful claimant; water that is not used by the appropriator and is permitted to run off the appropriator's property. 2. Water that is left over, esp. after a chemical or manufacturing process.

WATER BAYLEY

water bayley (bay-lee). Hist. An officer (mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth in A.D. 1671) who primarily collects dues for fish taken out of the colony's waters.

WATERCOURSE

watercourse. A body of water, usu. of natural origin, flowing in a reasonably definite channel with bed and banks. • The term includes not just rivers and creeks, but also springs, lakes, and marshes in which such flowing streams originate or through which they flow. — Also termed waterway. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 38. C.J.S. Waters §§ 3–8, 91.]

“Once water joins a watercourse it becomes subject to state control; in appropriation states it becomes available for appropriation to private uses according to state law .... [A] watercourse could be defined to include not only rivers and lakes, but every tiny brook flowing into them, all the gullies through which water flows to the brooks, the snowpack and rainfall that feed them, and the evaporating or transpiring water in the process of forming clouds. But we need not require scientists to trace water to such remote sources because it would be beyond the ability of governments to regulate these sources. Legal definitions are intended to define a point beyond which a state does not regulate water use. Usually that point is when water is not in a ‘natural stream’.” David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 106–07 (3d ed. 1997).

ancient watercourse. A watercourse in a channel that has existed from time immemorial.

artificial watercourse. A man-made watercourse, usu. to be used only temporarily. • If the watercourse is of a permanent character and has been maintained for a sufficient length of time, it may be considered a natural watercourse to which riparian rights can attach. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 168. C.J.S. Waters §§ 297–304.]

“An artificial waterway or stream may, under some circumstances, have the characteristics and incidents of a natural watercourse. In determining the question, three things seem generally to be taken into consideration by the courts: (1) whether the way or stream is temporary or permanent; (2) the circumstances under which it was created; and (3) the mode in which it has

natural watercourse. A watercourse with its origin in the forces of nature. • A natural watercourse does not include surface water, which often flows intermittently and in an indefinite channel. In addition, a natural stream is distinguished from an artificial ditch or canal, which is typically not the subject of riparian rights. See RIPARIAN RIGHT; WATER. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 38. C.J.S. Waters §§ 3–8, 91.]

WATER DISTRICT

water district. See DISTRICT.

WATERED STOCK

watered stock. See STOCK.

WATERFRONT

waterfront, n. Land or land with buildings fronting a body of water.

WATERGAGE

watergage, n. 1. A seawall. 2. An instrument used to measure water.

WATERGAVEL

watergavel, n. Hist. A fee paid for a benefit (such as fishing) obtained from a body of water.

WATERMARK

watermark. 1. A mark indicating the highest or lowest point to which water rises or falls.

high-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea reached by the water at high tide. • The high-water mark is usu. computed as a mean or average high tide and not as the extreme height of the water. 2. In a freshwater lake created by a dam in an unnavigable stream, the highest point on the shore to which the dam can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. 3. In a river not subject to tides, the line that the river impresses on the soil by covering it long enough to deprive it of agricultural value. — Also termed high-water line.

low-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea marking the edge of the water at the lowest point of the ordinary ebb tide. 2. In a river, the point to which the water recedes at its lowest stage.

2. The transparent design or symbol seen when paper is held up to the light, usu. to indicate the genuineness of the document or the document's manufacturer.

WATER ORDEAL

water ordeal. See ordeal by water under ORDEAL.

WATERPOWER

waterpower. 1. The force obtained by converting water into energy. 2. The riparian owner's right consisting of the fall in the stream as it passes over or through the riparian owner's land; the difference of the level between the surface where the stream first touches one's land and the surface where the water leaves the land. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 42. C.J.S. Waters §§ 12–14, 20.]

WATER RIGHT

water right.(often pl.) The right to use water from a natural stream or from an artificial canal for irrigation, power, domestic use, and the like; RIPARIAN RIGHT. — Also termed aquatic right. [Cases: Navigable Waters 39; Waters and Water Courses 40–47, 141, 168. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 82; Waters §§ 12–14, 20, 297–304, 370–375, 760–761, 926.]

WATERSCAPE

waterscape, n. An aqueduct or passage for water.

WATERWAY

waterway. See WATERCOURSE.

WAVESON

waveson (wayv-s<<schwa>>n), n. Hist. Goods that float on the sea after a shipwreck. Cf. FLOTSAM; JETSAM; LAGAN(1).

WAX SCOT

wax scot (wak skot), n. [fr. Old English sceotan “contribution, tax”] Hist. A duty on wax candles used in churches, usu. paid twice a year. — Also termed cerage (seer-ij); ceratium (si-ray-shee-<<schwa>>m).

WAY

way. 1. A passage or path. 2. A right to travel over another's property. See RIGHT-OF-WAY. [Cases: Easements 1. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89.]

private way. 1. The right to pass over another's land. [Cases: Easements 1. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89.] 2. A way provided by local authorities primarily to accommodate particular individuals (usu. at the individual's expense) but also for the public's passage. [Cases: Private Roads 1. C.J.S. Private Roads § 2; Private Roads §§ 2–3, 19.]

way of necessity. See implied easement under EASEMENT.

WAYBILL

waybill. Maritime law. A document acknowledging the receipt of goods by a carrier or by the shipper's agent and the contract for the transportation of those goods. • Unlike a bill of lading, a waybill is not a document of title and is nonnegotiable. — Abbr. WB. Cf. BILL OF LADING.

air waybill. A waybill for goods shipped by air. Cf. overseas bill of lading under BILL OF LADING.

WAY-GOING CROP

way-going crop. A grain crop, formerly sown by a tenant during a tenancy (esp. in Pennsylvania), that did not ripen until after expiration of the lease. • In the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the tenant was entitled to the crop. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 139(2). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 349.]

way-leave, n. 1. A right-of-way (usu. created by an express grant) over or through land for the transportation of minerals from a mine or quarry. 2. The royalty paid for such a right.

WAYNAGIUM

waynagium (way-nay-jee-<<schwa>>m). See WAINAGE.

WAY OF NECESSITY*WAYS-AND-MEANS COMMITTEE ways-and-means committee. A legislative committee that determines how money will be raised for various governmental purposes. [Cases: United States 23. C.J.S. United States § 39.]

WB

WB.abbr. WAYBILL.

WC

WC.abbr. WORKERS' COMPENSATION.

WCT

WCT.abbr. WIPO COPYRIGHT TREATY.

W.D.

W.D.abbr. Western District, in reference to U.S. judicial districts.

WEAK MARK

weak mark. See descriptive trademark under TRADEMARK.

WEAK TRADEMARK

weak trademark. See descriptive trademark under TRADEMARK.

WEALREAF

wealreif (weel-reef), n. Archaic. The robbery of a dead person in a grave.

WEALTH

wealth. 1. A large quantity of something. 2. The state of having abundant financial resources; affluence.

WEALTH MAXIMIZATION

wealth maximization.A situation resulting from a change in the allocation of resources if the change benefits the winner — i.e., the one who benefits from the change — more than it harms the loser. • A situation in which all possible wealth-maximizing changes have occurred is described as Kaldor-Hicks efficient or as being potentially Pareto superior. See PARETO OPTIMALITY; PARETO SUPERIORITY.

WEAPON

weapon. An instrument used or designed to be used to injure or kill someone. [Cases: Weapons 8. C.J.S. Weapons §§ 13–15.]

concealed weapon.A weapon that is carried by a person but that is not visible by ordinary observation. [Cases: Weapons 10. C.J.S. Weapons §§ 18–21.]

dangerous weapon.An object or device that, because of the way it is used, is capable of causing serious bodily injury. [Cases: Weapons 8. C.J.S. Weapons §§ 13–15.]

deadly weapon.Any firearm or other device, instrument, material, or substance that, from the manner in which it is used or is intended to be used, is calculated or likely to produce death. • In some states, the definition encompasses the likelihood of causing either death or serious physical injury. — Also termed lethal weapon. Cf. DANGEROUS INSTRUMENTALITY. [Cases: Assault and Battery 56. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 77–79.]

deadly weapon per se.A weapon that is deadly in and of itself or would ordinarily result in death by its use . — Also termed per se deadly weapon. [Cases: Assault and Battery 56. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 77–79.]

weapon of mass destruction.(usu. pl.) A weapon that is intended to kill human beings, without discriminating between combatants and noncombatants, on a massive scale. • Among the most frequently cited examples are nuclear weapons and chemical weapons. — Abbr. WMD.

WEAR

wear,n.[fr. Saxon were “a taking”] Hist. A dam made of stakes interlaced by twigs of willows that are placed across a river to more easily accommodate the netting of fish. — Also termed weir.

WEAR AND TEAR

wear and tear.Deterioration caused by ordinary use; the depreciation of property resulting from its reasonable use <the tenant is not liable for normal wear and tear to the leased premises>. — Also termed fair wear and tear; natural wear and tear. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 55. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 260.]

“ ‘Fair wear’ is the deterioration caused by the reasonable use of the premises; ‘fair tear’ is the deterioration caused by the ordinary operation of natural forces. A tenant's repairing covenant commonly exempts the tenant from the obligation to repair damage characterisable as ‘fair wear and tear’ (sometimes called ‘reasonable wear and tear’). In the absence of such an exempting provision, a covenant to repair requires the repairing of damage characterisable as fair wear and tear. Where a covenant to repair exempts the tenant from liability for 'fair wear and tear', he is not responsible for deterioration or dilapidation caused by 'the reasonable use of the house by the tenant and the ordinary operation of natural forces.' ” Peter Butt, Land Law 256 (2d ed. 1988).

WEBB-POMERENE ACT

Webb-Pomerene Act. A federal law, originally enacted in 1918, that provides a qualified exemption for an export business against the prohibitions of the antitrust laws. 15 USCA §§ 61 et seq.

“The Webb-Pomerene Act was passed to aid and encourage our manufacturers and producers to extend our foreign trade. Congress believed that American firms needed the power to form joint export associations in order to compete with foreign cartels, but while Congress was willing to create an exemption from the antitrust laws to serve this narrow purpose, the exemption created by the Webb-Pomerene Act was carefully hedged in to avoid substantial injury to domestic interests. Organization under the Webb-Pomerene Act does not give an export association the right to agree with foreign competitors to fix prices ... or establish exclusive markets ....” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies and Restraints of Trade § 262, at 298 (1996).

WHARTON'S RULE

Wharton's rule ([h]wor-t<<schwa>>n). Criminal law. The doctrine that an agreement by two or more persons to commit a particular crime cannot be prosecuted as a conspiracy if the crime could not be committed except by the actual number of participants involved. • But if an additional person participates so as to enlarge the scope of the agreement, all the actors may be charged with conspiracy. The doctrine takes its name from the influential criminal-law author Francis Wharton (1820–1889). — Also termed Wharton rule; concert-of-action rule. [Cases: Conspiracy 28(1). C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 209, 213–214.]

WHITE MODEL

White model.Labor law. A method for determining whether a union member's state-law claim against the employer is preempted by federal law, by focusing on whether state law permits the claim to be waived by a private contract. • In Lingle v. Norge Division of Magic Chef, Inc., 486 U.S. 399, 108 S.Ct. 1877 (1988), the Supreme Court held that a union member's state-law retaliatory-discharge claim was not preempted by the Labor-Management Relations Act because the claim could be resolved without interpreting the collective-bargaining agreement. There are at least two models for applying the Lingle test: the White model, which focuses on whether the claim is negotiable or nonnegotiable (that is, whether state law allows the claim to be waived by a private contract) and the Marcus model, which focuses on the independence of the claim in relation to the collective-bargaining agreement. Under the White model, all negotiable claims (those waivable by private contract) are necessarily preempted because their resolution will require an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. A nonnegotiable claims (one that state law does not permit to be waived by private contract) will be preempted only if its resolution requires an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. The White model is named for the author of the law-review article in which it was proposed. Rebecca Homer White, Section 301's Preemption of State Law Claims: A Model for Analysis, 41 Ala. L. Rev. 377 (1990). See LINGLE TEST. Cf. MARCUS MODEL.

WILL

will, n. 1. Wish; desire; choice <employment at will>. 2. A document by which a person directs his or her estate to be distributed upon death <there was no mention of his estranged brother in the will>. — Also termed testament; will and testament; (archaically) testamentary instrument. [Cases: Wills 1–202. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 72, 89; Indians § 117; Wills §§ 1–51, 53–87, 93–95, 97–99, 103–104, 106–444, 796–797, 1621, 2026–2062.] — will, vb.

“The word ‘will’ has two distinct meanings. The first, and strict, meaning is metaphysical, and denotes the sum of what the testator wishes, or ‘wills,’ to happen on his death. The second, and more common, meaning is physical, and denotes the document or documents in which that intention is expressed.” Anthony R. Mellows, The Law of Succession 6 (3d ed. 1977).

ambulatory will. A will that can be altered during the testator's lifetime. [Cases: Wills 78. C.J.S. Wills § 167.]

antenuptial will. See prenuptial will.

attested will. A will that has been signed by a witness.

bogus will. An unauthentic will, esp. one involving fraud or unauthorized changes.

closed will. See mystic will.

conditional will. A will that depends on the occurrence of an uncertain event for the will to take effect. • Most jurisdictions hold a conditional will valid even though the testator's death does not result from or on the occasion of the condition mentioned in the will. The courts generally hold that the condition is the inducement for making the will rather than a condition precedent to its operation. See Eaton v. Brown, 193 U.S. 411, 24 S.Ct. 487 (1904); In re Will of Cohen, 491 A.2d 1292 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1985). Cf. contingent will. [Cases: Wills 80. C.J.S. Wills §§ 197–198.]

conjoint will. See joint will.

contingent will. A will that takes effect only if a specified event occurs. Cf. conditional will. [Cases: Wills 80. C.J.S. Wills §§ 197–198.]

counter will. See mutual will.

double will. See mutual will.

duplicate will. A will executed in duplicate originals by a testator who retains one copy and gives the second copy to another person. • The rules applicable to wills apply to both wills, and upon application for probate, both copies must be tendered into the registry of the probate court. [Cases: Wills 175. C.J.S. Wills §§ 395, 412.]

holographic will (hol-<<schwa>>-graf-ik). A will that is handwritten by the testator. • Such a will is typically unattested. Holographic wills are rooted in the civil-law tradition, having originated in Roman law and having been authorized under the Napoleonic Code. French and Spanish settlers introduced holographic wills in America, primarily in the South and West. Today they are recognized in about half the states. — Also termed olographic will. See HOLOGRAPH. [Cases: Wills 130–135. C.J.S. Wills §§ 317–327, 339, 341.] inofficious will. See inofficious testament under TESTAMENT.

international will. A will that is executed according to formalities provided in an international treaty or convention, and that will be valid although it may be written in a foreign language by a testator domiciled in another country. [Cases: Wills 238–246. C.J.S. Wills §§ 515–523.]

invalid will. A will that fails to make an effective disposition of property.

joint and mutual will. A will executed by two or more people — to dispose of property they own separately, in common, or jointly — requiring the surviving testator to dispose of the property in accordance with the terms of the will, and showing that the devises are made in consideration of one another. • The word “joint” indicates the form of the will. The word “mutual” describes the substantive provisions. — Also termed joint and reciprocal will. [Cases: Wills 56–68, 100. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

joint and reciprocal will. See joint and mutual will.

joint will.A single will executed by two or more testators, usu. disposing of their common property by transferring their separate titles to one devisee. — Also termed conjoint will. [Cases: Wills 56–68, 100. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

last will.The most recent will of a deceased; the instrument ultimately fixing the disposition of real and personal property at the testator's death. — Also termed last will and testament.

“A will is the disposition of real and personal property to take effect after the death of the testator. When the will operates upon personal property, it is sometimes called a testament, and when upon real estate, a devise; but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument, embracing equally real and personal estate, is that of last will and testament.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *501 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

last will and testament.See last will.

living will.See LIVING WILL.

lost will.An executed will that cannot be found at the testator's death. • Its contents can be proved by parol evidence in many jurisdictions. The common-law presumption — still the view of the overwhelming majority of American jurisdictions — is that there is a presumption of revocation if a lost will is proved to have been in the possession of the testator and has been lost. [Cases: Wills 234, 293(4), 302(8). C.J.S. Wills §§ 511–512, 602, 632–633.]

mancipatory will (man-sip-i-tor-ee).Roman law. In early and classical law, a formal will sealed by seven witnesses and submitted to the praetor. See TESTAMENTUM.

mariner's will.See soldier's will.

mutual will.(usu. pl.) One of two separate wills in which two persons, usu. a husband and wife, establish identical or similar testamentary provisions disposing of their estates in favor of each other. • It is also possible (though rare) for the testators to execute a single mutual will, as opposed to separate ones. And it is possible (though, again, rare) for more than two parties to execute mutual wills. — Also termed reciprocal will; counter will; double will; mutual testament. [Cases: Wills 56–68. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

nonintervention will.A will that authorizes an independent executor. See independent executor under EX-ECUTOR.

notarial will.A will executed by a testator in the presence of two witnesses and a notary public.

nuncupative will (n<<schwa>>ng-ky<<schwa>>-pay-tiv or n<<schwa>>ng-kyoo-p<< schwa>>-tiv). An oral will made in contemplation of imminent death, esp. from a recent injury. • Nuncupative wills are invalid in most states. Even in states allowing them, the amount that may be conveyed is usu. limited by statute. Traditionally, only personal property may be conveyed. — Also termed oral will; unwritten will; verbal will. [Cases: Wills 136–150. C.J.S. Wills §§ 328–338, 340.]

“Nuncupative (i.e., oral) wills are by statute in almost all States required to be proved by two (sometimes three) witnesses, who were present and heard the testamentary words.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 299 (1935).

olographic will. See holographic will.

oral will. A will made by the spoken declaration of the testator and usu. dependent on oral testimony for proof. Cf. nuncupative will. [Cases: Wills 136–150. C.J.S. Wills §§ 328–338, 340.]

parliamentary will. Slang. The legislation that governs the distribution of an intestate's property. • The term arose because the legislature effectively makes an intestate's will by passing statutes regulating descent and distribution. The terms of the parliamentary will are gathered from the statutes in effect when the intestate died.

postnuptial will (pohst-n<<schwa>>p-sh<<schwa>>l). A will executed after marriage.

pourover will (por-oh-v<<schwa>>r). A will giving money or property to an existing trust. Cf. pourover trust under TRUST.

prenuptial will (pree-n<<schwa>>p-sh<<schwa>>l). A will executed before marriage. • At common law, marriage automatically revoked a spouse's will, but modern statutes usu. provide that marriage does not revoke a will (although divorce does). But if this marriage was not contemplated by the will and there is nothing otherwise on its face to indicate that the testator intentionally left nothing to any future spouse, the pretermitted spouse may be entitled to a special forced share of the estate. Unif. Probate Code § 2-508. — Also termed antenuptial will. [Cases: Wills 60. C.J.S. Wills § 142.] reciprocal will. See mutual will.

sealed will. See mystic will.

seaman's will. See soldier's will.

secret will. See mystic will.

self-proved will. A will proved by a self-proving affidavit. See self-proving affidavit under AFFIDAVIT. [Cases: Wills 113. C.J.S. Wills §§ 253–255.]

soldier's will. A soldier's informal oral or written will that is usu. valid despite its noncompliance with normal statutory formalities, as long as the soldier was in actual service at the time the will was made. — Also termed seaman's will; mariner's will; military testament; soldier's and sailor's will.

undutiful will.Civil law. See unnatural will.

unnatural will.A will that distributes the testator's estate to strangers rather than to the testator's relatives, without apparent reason. — Also termed (in civil law) undutiful will. [Cases: Wills 82. C.J.S. Wills § 173.]

unofficial will.See inofficial testament under TESTAMENT.

unsolemn will.Civil law. A will in which an executor is not named.

WILL CONTEST

will contest.Wills & estates. The litigation of a will's validity, usu. based on allegations that the testator lacked capacity or was under undue influence. [Cases: Wills 203–434. C.J.S. Wills §§ 52, 445–605, 607–818, 2026–2038, 2057–2062.]

WILLFUL

willful,adj. Voluntary and intentional, but not necessarily malicious. — Sometimes spelled wilful. Cf. WANTON. — willfulness,n.

“The word ‘wilful’ or ‘wilfully’ when used in the definition of a crime, it has been said time and again, means only intentionally or purposely as distinguished from accidentally or negligently and does not require any actual impropriety; while on the other hand it has been stated with equal repetition and insistence that the requirement added by such a word is not satisfied unless there is a bad purpose or evil intent.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 875–76 (3d ed. 1982).

“Almost all of the cases under [Bankruptcy Code § 523(a)(6)] deal with the definition of the two words ‘willful’ and ‘malicious.’ Initially one might think that willful and malicious mean the same thing. If they did, Congress should have used one word and not both. Most courts feel compelled to find some different meaning for each of them.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-30, at 531 (1993).

WILLFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURY

WILLIAMS ACT

Williams Act. A federal statute, enacted in 1968, that amended the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by requiring investors who own more than 5% of a company's stock to furnish certain information to the SEC and to comply with certain requirements when making a tender offer. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.10–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–141.]

WILLS ACT

Wills Act. 1. STATUTE OF WILLS(1). 2. An 1837 English statute that allowed people to dispose of every type of property interest by will and that had an elaborate set of requirements for valid execution. • Some states today continue to adhere to these stringent requirements. Cf. Unif. Probate Code § 2-502. — Also termed (in sense 2) Lord Langdale's Act.

WILL SUBSTITUTE

will substitute. A document or instrument that allows a person, upon death, to dispose of an estate in the same or similar manner as a will but without the formalities and expense of a probate proceeding. • The most common will substitutes are trusts, life-insurance plans, and retirement-benefits contracts. The creation of will substitutes has been one of the most important developments in the area of decedents' estates in the past 50 years. Cf. nonprobate asset under ASSET. [Cases: Wills 86.]

WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF

Winchester, Statute of. Hist. A statute passed in the 13th year of the reign of Edward I, requiring every man to provide himself with armor to keep the peace, recognizing and regulating the offices of high and petty constables, organizing the police, and enforcing the old Saxon police laws. • It was repealed in 1827 by the Criminal Statutes (England) Repeal Act. St. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, ch. 27.

WITAN

witan (wit-⟨schwa⟩n). [Anglo-Saxon “wise men”] Hist. The members of the king's council who sat to assist the king in administrative and judicial matters. • Among the members were ealdormen, bishops, abbots, high officers, and occasionally the king's friends and relatives.

WITCHCRAFT

witchcraft. The practices of a witch, esp. in black magic; sorcery. • Under the Witchcraft Act of 1541 (33 Hen. 8, ch. 8) and the Witchcraft Act of 1603 (1 Jac. ch. 12), witchcraft was a felony punishable by death without benefit of clergy. These acts were repealed in 1736, and the last execution in England for witchcraft occurred in 1716. In the United States, the most conspicuous (and nearly the last) persecution for witchcraft occurred in Salem, Massachusetts, where 20 people were hanged for this offense in 1692.

WITE

wite (wIt). Hist. A penal fine exacted by the Crown or other authority for a serious crime, such as murder. — Also spelled wyte.

WITENAGEMOT

witenagemot (wit-⟨schwa⟩n-⟨schwa⟩-g⟨schwa⟩-moht). [Anglo-Saxon “a meeting of the wise”] Hist. A national assembly of noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of England who advised and aided the king in the general administration of the government. • Its composition depended on the will of the king. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest (1066). Although it was a precursor to the British Parliament, today's body is not a continuation of the witenagemot. — Also spelled wittenagemot; witanagemote.

“[T]he ancient Anglo-Saxon general assembly of the notables [was] called the Witenagemot.... At first the power of the Anglo-Saxon Witenagemot appears to have been considerable, and in fact so much so that the kings were dependent on appointment to that office by the Witan in the early period before the royal succession became hereditary. With the tenth century centralization of power in the Alfredian line of kings, it appears that the power of the Witan began to decline.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 262 (2d ed. 1952).

WITEPENNY

hostile witness. A witness who is biased against the examining party, who is unwilling to testify, or who is identified with an adverse party. • A hostile witness may be asked leading questions on direct examination. Fed. R. Evid. 611(c). — Also termed adverse witness. See adverse party under PARTY(2). [Cases: Witnesses 244. C.J.S. Witnesses § 422.]

interested witness. A witness who has a direct and private interest in the matter at issue. • Most jurisdictions provide that a person witnessing a will may not be a devisee under the will. The Uniform Probate Code, however, has abrogated this rule. [Cases: Witnesses 91. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 211–212.]

lay witness. A witness who does not testify as an expert and who is therefore restricted to giving an opinion or making an inference that (1) is based on firsthand knowledge, and (2) is helpful in clarifying the testimony or in determining facts. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Evidence 470–503. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 509–523, 527–596, 610–612, 619, 628, 633, 636, 649–652, 654, 656, 659, 661–663, 665–667, 669–675, 677, 688–690, 698, 708–712, 744–745; Executions § 435.]

material witness. A witness who can testify about matters having some logical connection with the consequential facts, esp. if few others, if any, know about those matters. [Cases: Witnesses 4.]

percipient witness. A witness who has perceived the things about which he or she testifies. See EYEWITNESS; EARWITNESS.

prosecuting witness. A person who files the complaint that triggers a criminal prosecution and whose testimony the prosecution usu. relies on to secure a conviction. [Cases: Criminal Law 210. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 326.]

qualified witness. A witness who, by explaining the manner in which a company's business records are made and kept, is able to lay the foundation for the admission of business records under an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). [Cases: Evidence 373. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 824–825, 917–919, 932–933.]

rebuttal witness. A witness who contradicts or attempts to contradict evidence previously presented.

supernumerary witness. An unrequired witness, such as a third witness to a will where only two are required.

swift witness. See zealous witness.

target witness. 1. The person who has the knowledge that an investigating body seeks. [Cases: Grand Jury 37.] 2. A witness who is called before a grand jury and against whom the government is also seeking an indictment.

turncoat witness. A witness whose testimony was expected to be favorable but who becomes (usu. during the trial) a hostile witness.

ultroneous witness. Scots law. A witness who comes forward without being summoned to appear in court.

zealous witness (zel-*<<schwa>>*s). A witness who shows partiality toward the litigant that called him or her to testify and who seems eager to help that side in the lawsuit. — Also termed swift witness.

WITNESS BOX

witness box. See WITNESS STAND.

WITNESS CLAUSE

witness clause. See TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE.

WITNESSETH

witnesseth, vb. Shows; records. • This term, usu. set in all capitals, commonly separates the preliminaries in a contract, up through the recitals, from the contractual terms themselves. Modern drafters increasingly avoid it as an antiquarian relic. Traditionally, the subject of this verb was This Agreement: the sentence, boiled down, was This Agreement witnesseth [i.e., shows or records] that, whereas [the parties have agreed to contract with one another], the parties therefore agree as follows.... Many modern contracts erroneously retain the Witnesseth even though a new verb appears in the preamble: This Agreement is between [one party and the other party]. After the preamble is a period, followed by an all-capped WITNESSETH. It is an example of a form retained long after its utility, and most lawyers do not know what it means or even what purpose it once served.

WITNESS FEE

witness fee. See FEE(1).

WITNESSING PART

witnessing part. See ATTESTATION CLAUSE.

WITNESS JURAT

witness jurat. See JURAT.

---

WITNESS-PROTECTION PROGRAM

witness-protection program. A federal or state program in which a person who testifies against a criminal is assigned a new identity and relocated to another part of the country to avoid retaliation by anyone convicted as a result of that testimony. • The Federal Witness Protection Program was established by the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970 and is administered by the marshals of the U.S. Justice Department.

WITNESS STAND

witness stand. The space in a courtroom, usu. a boxed area, occupied by a witness while testifying. — Often shortened to stand. — Also termed witness box. [Cases: Witnesses 228. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 396–398, 404–405.]

witness-tampering. The act or an instance of obstructing justice by intimidating, influencing, or harassing a witness before or after the witness testifies. • Several state and federal laws, including the Victim and Witness Protection Act of 1982 (18 USCA § 1512), provide criminal penalties for tampering with witnesses or other persons in the context of a pending investigation or official proceeding. See OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 5. C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 30–38.]

WITTENAGEMOT

wittenagemot. See WITENAGEMOT.

WITWORD

witword (wit-w<<schwa>>rd). Hist. 1. A legally allowed claim; esp., the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one's affirmation under oath. 2. A will or testament.

WL

WL. abbr. WESTLAW.

WMD

WMD. See weapon of mass destruction under WEAPON.

wobbler. Slang. A crime that can be charged as either a felony or a misdemeanor. [Cases: Criminal Law 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12.]

wolf's head. Hist. An outlaw, who was often referred to as carrying a wolf's head (caput lupinum) and to be no more than a wild beast or wolf who could be slain and whose head could be carried to the king. — Also termed woolferthod. See OUTLAW.

“Outlawry is the last weapon of ancient law, but one that it must often use. As has been well said, it is the sentence of death pronounced by a community which has no police constables or professional hangmen. To pursue the outlaw and knock him on the head as though he were a wild beast is the right and duty of every law-abiding man. 'Let him bear the wolf's head': this phrase is in use even in the thirteenth century." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 476 (2d ed. 1898).

WOMEN'S BUREAU

Women's Bureau. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for formulating policies and standards to promote the welfare of wage-earning women.

WOMEN'S SHELTER

women's shelter. See SHELTER.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

Women's Suffrage Amendment. See NINETEENTH AMENDMENT.

WOOD-CORN

wood-corn, n. Hist. A quantity of oats or grain paid by customary tenants to a lord for the privilege of picking up dead or broken wood.

WOOD-GELD

wood-geld (wuud-geld). Hist. 1. Money paid for the privilege of taking wood from a forest. 2. Immunity from paying money for this privilege. — Also termed pudzeld.

WOOD-LEAVE

wood-leave. Hist. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber.

WOOD-MOTE

wood-mote (wuud-moht). See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

WOOD-PLEA COURT

Wood-Plea Court. Hist. A court held twice a year in Clun Forest, in Shropshire, to determine matters of wood and agistments.

WOODSHEDDING

woodshedding. See HORSESHEDDING.

WOODWARD

woodward (wuud-word), n. Hist. A forest officer who patrols and protects the forest. [Cases: Woods and Forests 7. C.J.S. Woods and Forests §§ 9–11, 14–15.]

WOOLFERTHFOD

woolferthfod. See WOLF'S HEAD.

---

W.O.P.

w.o.p.abbr.WANT OF PROSECUTION.

WORD OF ART

word of art. See TERM OF ART.

WORDS ACTIONABLE IN THEMSELVES

words actionable in themselves.Language that is libelous or slanderous per se. See slander per se under SLANDER; libel per se under LIBEL. [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

WORDS OF LIMITATION

words of limitation.Language in a conveying instrument — often nonliteral language — describing the extent or quality of an estate. • For example, under long-standing principles of property law, the phrase “to A and her heirs” creates a fee simple in A but gives nothing to A's heirs. See LIMITATION(4). [Cases: Deeds 120–136; Wills 591, 597(4).C.J.S. Deeds §§ 36, 231–236, 245–268, 270–278; Wills § 1193.]

“ ‘Words of limitation’ is the phrase used to describe the words which limit (i.e., delimit or mark out) the estate to be taken. Thus in a conveyance today ‘to A in fee simple,’ the words ‘in fee simple’ are words of limitation, for they show what estate A is to have.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 29 (6th ed. 1993).

WORDS OF NEGOTIABILITY

words of negotiability.See NEGOTIABLE WORDS.

WORDS OF PROCREATION words of procreation (proh-kree-ay-sh<<schwa>>n). Language in a deed essential to create an estate tail, such as an estate “to A and the heirs of his body.” [Cases: Deeds 127. C.J.S. Deeds § 247.]

WORDS OF PURCHASE

words of purchase.Language in a deed or will designating the persons who are to receive the grant. • For example, the phrasing “to A for life with a remainder to her heirs” creates a life estate in A and a remainder in A's heirs. See PURCHASE(2). [Cases: Deeds 105, 120–136; Wills 597(4). C.J.S. Deeds §§ 36, 198–200, 202–206, 231–236, 245–268, 270–278.]

WORDS OF SEVERANCE

words of severance.In a grant of lands, words showing that the tenants were each to take a distinct share in the property as opposed to undivided portions. • Typical words of severance are share and share alike, to be divided among, equally, and between.

work,n.1. Physical and mental exertion to attain an end, esp. as controlled by and for the benefit of an employer; labor.

additional work. 1. Work that results from a change or alteration in plans concerning the work required, usu. under a construction contract; added work necessary to meet the performance goals under a contract. [Cases: Contracts 232(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 393–398.] 2. See extra work.

extra work.In construction law, work not required under the contract; something done or furnished in addition to the contract's requirements; work entirely outside and independent of the contract and not contemplated by it. • A contractor is usu. entitled to charge for extra work consisting of labor and materials not contemplated by or subsumed within the original contract, at least to the extent that the property owner agrees to a change order. Materials and labor not contemplated by the contract, but that are required by later changes in the plans and specifications, are considered to be extra work. — Also termed additional work. [Cases: Contracts 232(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 393–398.]

heavy work.Work that involves frequent lifting and carrying of large items. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, heavy work involves lifting no more than 100 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 50 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.80. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

inherently dangerous work.Work that can be carried out only by the exercise of special skill and care and that involves a grave risk of serious harm if done unskillfully or carelessly.

light work.Work that involves some limited lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, light work includes walking, standing, sitting while pushing or pulling arm or leg controls, and lifting no more than 20 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects that weigh up to 10 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 72.]

medium work.Work that involves some frequent lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, medium work includes lifting up to 50 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 25 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.80. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

sedentary work.Work that involves light lifting and only occasional walking or standing. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, sedentary work involves lifting of no more than ten pounds, occasionally carrying small items such as docket files and small tools, and occasional standing or walking. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 72.]

semi-skilled work.Work that may require some alertness and close attention, such as inspecting items or machinery for irregularities, or guarding property or people against loss or injury. 20 CFR § 404.1568(b). — Also written semiskilled work. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

skilled work. Work requiring the worker to use judgment, deal with the public, analyze facts and figures, or work with abstract ideas at a high level of complexity. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

unskilled work. Work requiring little or no judgment, and involving simple tasks that can be learned quickly on the job. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

very heavy work. Work that involves frequent lifting of very large objects and frequent carrying of large objects. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, very heavy work involves lifting 100 pounds or more, and frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing 50 pounds or more. 20 CFR § 404.1567(e).

work of necessity. Work reasonably essential to the public's economic, social, or moral welfare as determined by the community standards at a particular time, and (formerly) excepted from the operation of blue laws. See BLUE LAW. [Cases: Sunday 7. C.J.S. Sunday §§ 17–19, 32–33.]

2. Copyright. An original expression, in fixed or tangible form (such as paper, audiotape, or computer disk), that may be entitled to common-law or statutory copyright protection. • A work may take many different forms, including art, sculpture, literature, music, crafts, software, and photography. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 3. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 9.]

anonymous work. A work that, on copies or phonorecords, does not identify any natural person as the author. 17 USCA § 101.

architectural work. The copyrightable design of a building, as fixed in tangible media such as plans, drawings, and the building itself. 17 USCA § 102. • Only the overall design is protected, not each design element. This category of works was added to U.S. law by the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988. It is one of eight categories eligible for copyright protection. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 6. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 16.]

artistic work. Any visual representation, such as a painting, drawing, map, photograph, sculpture, engraving, or architectural plan.

audiovisual work. A work consisting of related images that are presented in a series, usu. with the aid of a machine, and accompanied by sound. • An example of an audiovisual work is a lecture illustrated with a filmstrip, or a movie with a soundtrack. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 15.]

collective work. 1. A publication (such as a periodical issue, anthology, or encyclopedia) in which several contributions, constituting separate and independent works in themselves, are assembled into a copyrightable whole. 2. A selection and arrangement of brief portions of different movies, television shows, or radio shows into a single copyrightable work. • If the selecting and arranging involves any originality, the person who selects and arranges the clips may claim a copyright even if copyright cannot be claimed in the individual component parts. Cf. COMPILATION(1).

“If a work is not joint and not derivative but nevertheless consists of works of authorship created by more than one person, it is a compilation of some sort except for the possibility that it is a work for hire.... If the component parts have an independent identity, that is, they are works of authorship, then the compilation is a collective work, a type of compilation.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 374 (2d ed. 1990).

composite work (k<<schwa>>m-poz-it). An original publication that relates to a variety of subjects and that includes discrete selections from many authors. • Although the distinguishable parts are separately protectable, the owner of the composite work — not the individual authors — owns the renewal term, if any. 17 USCA § 304(a).

creative work. See work of authorship.

derivative work. A copyrightable creation that is based on a preexisting product; a translation, musical arrangement, fictionalization, motion-picture version, abridgment, or any other recast or adapted form of an original work. • Only the holder of the copyright on the original form can produce or permit someone else to produce a derivative work. 17 USCA § 101. — Sometimes shortened to derivative. Cf. COMPILATION(1). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(3).]

“[W]hile a compilation consists merely of the selection and arrangement of pre-existing material without any internal changes in such material, a derivative work involves recasting or transformation, i.e., changes in the pre-existing material, whether or not it is juxtaposed in an arrangement with other pre-existing materials. A catalog constitutes a compilation, and a translation of a pre-existing work constitutes a derivative work.” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 3.02, at 3–5 (Supp. 1997).

dramatic work. Any form of nonliterary work created for performance and viewing. • The term includes plays, scripts, films, choreographic works, and similar creations. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 7. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 13.]

joint work. A work created or developed by two or more people whose contributions blend inseparably or interdependently into the whole work. • The cocreators have equal legal rights to register and enjoy the copyright, but this does not affect any other contractually unequal ownership arrangements. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(3).]

literary work. A nonaudiovisual work that is expressed in verbal, numerical, or other symbols, such as words or musical notation, and embodied in some type of physical object. • Literary works are one of eight general categories that are eligible for copyright protection. 17 USCA § 101. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 11.]

“Copyright protection extends to literary works which are defined as works, other than audiovisual works, expressed in words, numbers, or other verbal or numerical symbols or indicia, regardless of the nature of the material objects, such as books, periodicals, manuscripts, phonorecords, film, tapes, disks, or cards in which they are embodied. The term 'literary work' does not connote any criterion of literary merit or qualitative value and includes catalogs and directories; similar factual, reference or instructional works; compilations of data; computer data bases, and computer programs." 18 Am. Jur. 2d Copyright and Literary Property § 25, at 360 (1985).

pictorial, graphic, and sculptural work. Two- or three-dimensional works of graphic, fine, or applied art that are eligible for copyright protection. • This is one of eight general classifications covered by copyright law. Examples are globes, architectural drawings, photographs, and models. 17 USCA § 101. — Abbr. PGS. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 6. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 16.]

posthumous work. The product of an author who died before publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 33. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 31–32, 34, 94.]

pseudonymous work. A work done by an author who uses a fictitious name.

work for hire. A copyrightable work produced either by an employee within the scope of employment or by an independent contractor under a written agreement; esp., a work specially ordered or commissioned for use as (1) a contribution to a collective work, (2) a translation, (3) a supplementary work, (4) a part of a movie or other audiovisual work, (5) a compilation, (6) an instructional text, (7) a test, (8) answer material for a test, or (9) an atlas. • If the work is produced by an independent contractor, the parties must agree expressly in writing that the work will be a work for hire. The employer or commissioning party owns the copyright. — Also termed work made for hire. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(2).]

work of authorship. The product of creative expression, such as literature, music, art, and graphic designs. • Copyright protects a work of authorship if it meets three criteria. First, the work must be original, not a copy. Second, the work must be presented in a fixed medium, such as a computer disk, a canvas, or paper. Finally, some creativity must have been involved in the work's creation, although the amount of creativity required depends on the particular work. — Also termed creative work. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 9–10, 16.] work of the United States government. A work created by a U.S. government officer or employee in the course of performing official duties. • By statute, federal-government works may not be copyrighted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10.3. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 18.]

work, vb. 1. To exert effort; to perform, either physically or mentally <lawyers work long hours during trial>. 2. To function properly; to produce a desired effect <the strategy worked>. 3. Patents. To develop and use (a patented invention, esp. to make it commercially available) <the patentee failed to work the patent>. • Failure to work a patent in a specified amount of time is grounds for a compulsory license in some countries. [Cases: Patents 191.]

C.J.S. Patents §§ 217, 314, 339.]

“A patentee has the exclusive right to make, use, or sell the invention. 35 U.S.C.A. § 154. The right includes the right to refrain from making, using, or selling the invention. In many foreign countries, the inventor is obliged to ‘work’ the patent and if he does not do so, he can be required to grant a compulsory license to others who wish to exploit the invention. But an American patentee is under no such duty, although there are antitrust implications involved in the failure to work a patent.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 128–29 (2d ed. 1990).

WORK AND LABOR

work and labor.Hist. A common count in an action of assumpsit for the work and labor performed and materials furnished by the plaintiff. See ASSUMPSIT. [Cases: Assumpsit, Action of 5. C.J.S. Assumpsit, Action of §§ 3, 6, 8.]

WORKER

worker. 1. One who labors to attain an end; esp., a person employed to do work for another. 2. A person who offers to perform services for compensation in the employ of another, whether or not the person is so employed at a given time.

WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT

Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act.A federal law that requires an employer to provide notice of a plant closing or mass layoff, 60 days before the closing or layoff, to the employees, the state-dislocated-workers unit, and the chief elected official of the unit of local government where the plant closing or layoff is to occur. 29 USCA §§ 2101–2109. — Abbr. WARN. [Cases: Labor Relations 7.1.]

WORKERS' COMPENSATION

workers' compensation.A system of providing benefits to an employee for injuries occurring in the scope of employment. • Most workers'-compensation statutes both hold the employer strictly liable and bar the employee from suing the employer in tort. — Abbr. WC. — Also termed workmen's compensation; employers' liability. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 11.C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 11–19.]

“Workers' compensation laws were designed to provide employees with expansive protection against the consequences of employment-related injuries. Injured workers no longer had to establish negligence attributable to their employer in order to obtain legal redress. They merely had to demonstrate that their conditions arose out of and during the course of their employment.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 7.3, at 406 (1994).

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION ACT

workers'-compensation act.A statute by which employers are made responsible for bodily harm to their workers arising out of and in the course of their employment, regardless of the fault of either the employee or the employer.

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION BOARD

workers'-compensation board. An agency that reviews cases arising under workers'-compensation statutes and administers the related rules and regulations. — Also termed workers'-compensation commission. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 1076–1096.10. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 700–729.]

“Workers' compensation boards ... are tribunals ... of limited and special jurisdiction and have only such authority and power as have been conferred upon them by express grant, or by implication as necessary and incidental to the full exercise of their authority. The functions of such agencies may include the settlement of disputes with respect to the right to and the amount of compensation, the supervision of voluntary settlements or agreements, the collection and administration of compensation funds, and the supervision and regulation of matters pertaining to compensation insurance.” 82 Am. Jur. 2d Workers' Compensation § 56, at 65 (1992).

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION LIEN

workers'-compensation lien. See LIEN.

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION SUBROGATION LIEN

workers'-compensation subrogation lien. See workers'-compensation lien under LIEN.

workfare. A system of requiring a person receiving a public-welfare benefit to earn that benefit by performing a job provided by a government agency. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 4.15. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 11.]

WORK FOR HIRE

work for hire. See WORK(2).

WORK FURLOUGH

work furlough (f<<schwa>>r-loh). A prison-treatment program allowing an inmate to be released during the day to work in the community. See WORK-RELEASE PROGRAM . [Cases: Convicts 7(2). C.J.S. Convicts §§ 16–18.]

WORK-FURLOUGH PROGRAM

work-furlough program. See WORK-RELEASE PROGRAM.

WORKHOUSE

workhouse. A jail for criminals who have committed minor offenses and are serving short sentences. [Cases: Prisons 13.3.]

WORKING CAPITAL

working capital. See CAPITAL.

---

WORKING CAPITAL ACCEPTANCE

working capital acceptance. See finance bill under BILL(6).

WORKING CONTROL

working control. See CONTROL.

WORKING EXAMPLE

working example. See EXAMPLE.

WORKING INTEREST

working interest. Oil & gas. The rights to the mineral interest granted by an oil-and-gas lease, so called because the lessee acquires the right to work on the leased property to search, develop, and produce oil and gas, as well as the obligation to pay all costs. See ROYALTY(2). — Also termed leasehold interest; operating interest. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 73.1(2). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 241, 243, 265.]

working model. Patents. A sample of an invention, usu. built for testing and for displaying to potential buyers. • The building of a working model is called “actual reduction to practice.” It is not required for a patent, but it can help the applicant to clarify the description and to establish a date of invention in the event of an interference. [Cases: Patents 90(6).]

WORKING PAPERS

working papers. 1. WORK PERMIT; esp., an employment certificate or permit required of an employer in some states before a minor may be hired. 2. Accounting. The records kept by an independent auditor of the procedures followed, tests performed, information obtained, and conclusions reached in an audit.

WORK-IN-PROCESS

work-in-process. A product being manufactured or assembled but not yet completed. — Also termed work-in-progress.

WORK MADE FOR HIRE

work made for hire. See work for hire under WORK(2).

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

workmen's compensation. See WORKERS' COMPENSATION.

WORK OF AUTHORSHIP

work of authorship. See WORK(2).

WORK OF NECESSITY

---

work of necessity. See WORK(1).

WORK OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

work of the United States government. See WORK(2).

WORKOUT

workout, n. 1. The act of restructuring or refinancing overdue loans. 2. Bankruptcy. A debtor's agreement, usu. negotiated with a creditor or creditors out of court, to reduce or discharge the debt. — work out, vb.

WORK PERMIT

work permit. An alien's documentary work authorization from the Immigration and Naturalization Service. • Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, it is illegal for an employer to hire an alien who lacks a work permit. 8 USCA § 1324(a)(1). — Also termed working papers.

WORKPIECE

workpiece. Patents. The embodiment of an invention, usu. a device, as the patent claims describe how to make and use it.

WORKPLACE

workplace. A person's place of employment or work setting in general. See SAFE WORKPLACE .

WORK PRODUCT

work product. Tangible material or its intangible equivalent — in unwritten or oral form — that was either prepared by or for a lawyer or prepared for litigation, either planned or in progress. • Work product is generally exempt from discovery or other compelled disclosure. The term is also used to describe the products of a party's investigation or communications concerning the subject matter of a lawsuit if made (1) to assist in the prosecution or defense of a pending suit, or (2) in reasonable anticipation of litigation. Fed. R. Evid. 26. — Also termed attorney work product. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.5(6); Federal Civil Procedure 1600(3); Pretrial Procedure 35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 449–450; Discovery § 29.]

core work product. See opinion work product.

fact work product. Tangible work product that includes facts but not an attorney's mental impressions. • Fact work product is subject to a qualified privilege. It is not discoverable unless the party seeking discovery can show a substantial need for the materials. See Fed. R. Evid. 26(b)(3). — Also termed ordinary work product.

opinion work product. Work product, tangible or intangible, that includes or reflects an attorney's thoughts, such as impressions, theories, and conclusions. • Opinion work product is almost wholly immune from discovery. Fed. R. Evid. 26(b)(3). — Also termed core work product.

ordinary work product. See fact work product.

WORK-PRODUCT RULE

work-product rule. The rule providing for qualified immunity of an attorney's work product from discovery or other compelled disclosure. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). • The exemption was primarily established to protect an attorney's litigation strategy. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 67 S.Ct. 385 (1947). — Also termed work-product immunity; work-product privilege; work-product exemption; attorney-work-product privilege. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.5(6); Federal Civil Procedure 1600(3); Pretrial Procedure 35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 449–450; Discovery § 29.]

“Although the work-product rule has often been spoken of as creating a ‘privilege,’ it is a qualified one that does not grant full immunity from discovery. To the extent the term ‘privilege’ causes confusion between the work-product rule and the absolute privilege for confidential communications between attorney and client, it is important to keep in mind this distinction.... Rule 26(b)(3) provides that work-product material is subject to discovery ‘only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of the party's case and that the party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means.’ ” 8 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2025, at 371, 373–74 (2d ed. 1994).

WORK-RELEASE PROGRAM

4.WORT.

WORTHIER-TITLE DOCTRINE

worthier-title doctrine. 1.Hist. The common-law doctrine that if a beneficiary of a will would receive an identical interest as an heir under the laws of intestacy, the person takes the interest as an heir rather than as a beneficiary. • The doctrine has been abolished in most states. [Cases: Wills 713. C.J.S. Wills § 1639.] 2.Property. The doctrine that favors a grantor's intent by construing a grant as a reversion in the grantor instead of as a remainder in the grantor's heirs. — Also termed doctrine of worthier title. See REMAINDER; REVERSION.

WORTHIEST OF BLOOD

worthiest of blood,n. Hist. Of or relating to males, because of the preference given them in the laws of descent. See PRIMOGENITURE.

“Thus sons shall be admitted before daughters; or, as our male lawgivers have somewhat uncomplaisantly expressed it, the worthiest blood shall be preferred. As if John Stiles hath two sons, Matthew and Gilbert, and two daughters, Margaret and Charlotte, and dies; first Matthew, and (in case of his death without issue) then Gilbert shall be admitted to the succession in preference to both the daughters.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 213 (1766).

WRECKFREE

wreckfree, adj. (Of a port, etc.) exempt from the forfeiture of shipwrecked goods and vessels to the Crown.

writ (rit). A court's written order, in the name of a state or other competent legal authority, commanding the addressee to do or refrain from doing some specified act. [Cases: Injunction 202.]

“[W]rits have a long history. We can trace their formal origin to the Anglo-Saxon formulae by which the king used to communicate his pleasure to persons and courts. The Anglo-Norman writs, which we meet with after the Conquest, are substantially the Anglo-Saxon writs turned into Latin. But what is new is the much greater use made of them, owing to the increase of royal power which came with the Conquest.” W.S. Holdsworth, Sources and Literature of English Law 20 (1925).

alias writ. An additional writ issued after another writ of the same kind in the same case. • It derives its name from a Latin phrase that formerly appeared in alias writs: sicut alias praecipimus, meaning “as we at another time commanded.” Cf. alias execution under EXECUTION. [Cases: Process 45. C.J.S. Process §§ 24, 49.]

alternative writ. A common-law writ commanding the person against whom it is issued either to do a specific thing or to show cause why the court should not order it to be done. [Cases: Mandamus 158. C.J.S. Mandamus § 343.]

close writ. Hist. 1. A royal writ sealed because the contents were not deemed appropriate for public inspection. Cf. patent writ; CLAUSE ROLLS. 2. A writ directed to a sheriff instead of to a lord.

concurrent writ. A duplicate of an original writ (esp. a summons), issued either at the same time as the original writ or at any time while the original writ is valid.

counterpart writ. A copy of an original writ, to be sent to a court in another county where the defendant is located.

extraordinary writ. A writ issued by a court exercising unusual or discretionary power. • Examples are certiorari, habeas corpus, mandamus, and prohibition. — Also termed prerogative writ. [Cases: Courts 207.]

ground writ. Hist. A writ issued in a county having venue of an action in order to allow a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum or of fieri facias to be executed in a county where the defendant or the defendant's property was found. • These two writs could not be executed in a county other than the county having venue of the action until a ground writ and then a testatum writ were first issued. This requirement was abolished in 1852. Cf. TESTATUM.

judicial writ. 1. A writ issuing from the court to which the original writ was returnable; a writ issued under the private seal of the court and not under the great seal of England. Cf. original writ. 2. Any writ issued by a court.

junior writ. A writ issued at a later time than a similar writ, such as a later writ issued by a different party or a later writ on a different claim against the same defendant.

optional writ. At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks specific damages, such as payment of a liquidated debt. • The writ commands the defendant either to do a specified thing or to show why the thing has not been done.

original writ. A writ commencing an action and directing the defendant to appear and answer. • In the United States, this writ has been largely superseded by the summons. At common law, this type of writ was a mandatory letter issuing from the court of chancery under the great seal, and in the king's name, directed to the sheriff of the county where the injury was alleged to have occurred, containing a summary statement of the cause of complaint, and requiring the sheriff in most cases to command the defendant to satisfy the claim or else appear in court to account for not satisfying it. — Sometimes shortened to original. See SUMMONS. [Cases: Process 8. C.J.S. Process § 12.]

patent writ (pay-t<<schwa>>nt). Hist. An open writ; one not closed or sealed up. Cf. close writ.

peremptory writ (p<<schwa>>r-emp-t<<schwa>>-ree). At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks only general damages, as in an action for trespass. • The writ, which is issued only after the plaintiff gives security for costs, directs the sheriff to have the defendant appear in court. [Cases: Mandamus 179. C.J.S. Mandamus § 376.]

pluries writ. See PLURIES.

prerogative writ. See extraordinary writ.

testatum writ (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>m). See TESTATUM.

vicontiel writ (vI-kon-tee-<<schwa>>l). Hist. A writ triable in the county court. • In the 13th–14th centuries, civil litigation could originate in the county court either by oral plaint or by a writ from the Chancery ordering the sheriff to do justice in a case. The writ that began such a proceeding was called vicontiel because it was addressed to the sheriff. See VICONTIEL(2).

“Vicontiel writs were of two sorts, the one founded on Torts, the other on Contracts. The vicontiel writs adapted for torts, were those of trespass, replegiari facias, nuisance, and others of the like nature; and those of matters of contract were called writs of justices, which was a command to the sheriff to do justice between the parties ....” 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas vii–viii (3d ed. 1787).

writ of covenant.Hist. A writ for one claiming damages as a result of a breach of a promise under seal or other covenant. — Also termed breve de conventionne (breev orbree-vee dee k<<schwa>>n-ven-shee-oh-nee).

“The writ of covenant (breve de conventionne) is not mentioned by Glanvill; but it appears within a short time after the publication of his book and already in the early years of Henry III. It can be had ‘as of course,’ at all events when the tenement that is in question is of small value. Before Henry’s death it has become a popular writ .... The great majority of actions of covenant are brought merely in order that they may be compromised. We doubt whether any principle was involved in the choice; but may infer that the procedure instituted by this writ was cheap and expeditious for those who wished to get to their final concord.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 216–17 (2d ed. 1899).

“The writ of error is the most common of all the forms of remedial process available to an unsuccessful party after a final determination of the merits of the action, and is in common use in this country at the present time, where the common-law modes of procedure are followed. Its object ... is to obtain a reversal of the judgment, either by reason of some error in fact affecting the validity and regularity of the legal decision itself, or on account of some mistake or error in law, apparent upon the face of the record, from which the judgment appears to have been given for the wrong party.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 337, at 538 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

WRONG

wrong,n. Breach of one's legal duty; violation of another's legal right. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] — wrong,vb.

“A wrong may be described, in the largest sense, as anything done or omitted contrary to legal duty, considered in so far as it gives rise to liability.” Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 68 (1896).

“A wrong is simply a wrong act — an act contrary to the rule of right and justice. A synonym of it is injury, in its true and primary sense of injuria (that which is contrary to jus) ....” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 227 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

civil wrong.A violation of noncriminal law, such as a tort, a breach of contract or trust, a breach of statutory duty, or a defect in performing a public duty; the breach of a legal duty treated as the subject matter of a civil proceeding. Cf. CRIME.

continuing wrong.An ongoing wrong that is capable of being corrected by specific enforcement. • An example is the nonpayment of a debt.

intentional wrong. A wrong in which the mens rea amounts to intention, purpose, or design. — Also termed willful wrong.

legal wrong. An act that is a violation of the law; an act authoritatively prohibited by a rule of law.

moral wrong. An act that is contrary to the rule of natural justice. — Also termed natural wrong.

personal wrong. An invasion of a personal right.

positive wrong. A wrongful act willfully committed.

private wrong. An offense committed against a private person and dealt with at the instance of the person injured.

public wrong. An offense committed against the state or the community at large, and dealt with in a proceeding to which the state is itself a party. • Not all public wrongs are crimes. For example, a person that breaches a contract with the government commits a public wrong, but the offense is a civil one, not a criminal one.

real wrong. An injury to the freehold.

transitory wrong. A wrong that, once committed, belongs to the irrevocable past. • An example is defamation.

willful wrong. See intentional wrong.

wrong of negligence. A wrong in which the mens rea is a form of mere carelessness, as opposed to wrongful intent.

wrong of strict liability. A wrong in which a mens rea is not required because neither wrongful intent nor culpable negligence is a necessary condition of responsibility.

WRONGDOER

xylon (zI-lon), n.[fr. Greek xulon “wood”] Archaic. A Greek punishment apparatus similar to stocks.

XYY-CHROMOSOME DEFENSE

XYY-chromosome defense. Criminal law. A defense, usu. asserted as the basis for an insanity plea, whereby a male defendant argues that his criminal behavior is due to the genetic abnormality of having an extra Y chromosome, which causes him to have uncontrollable aggressive impulses.

- Most courts have rejected this defense because its scientific foundations are uncertain. — Also termed XYY defense. See INSANITY DEFENSE.

“As one commentator has suggested ... ‘an attorney defending an XYY individual will be required to call upon both a geneticist and a psychiatrist to give expert testimony. The geneticist's role would be to testify with respect to the individual's genetic structure, any distinguishing characteristics which are relevant to an insanity defense, and the result of family studies designated to determine the influence of genetics and environment on the development of this individual. The psychiatrist's testimony would focus upon the defendant's mental capacity or condition.’ But in the absence of sound medical support for an XYY defense, courts are understandably unsympathetic to defense efforts to obtain such expert testimony.” Wayne R. LaFare & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 4.8, at 380 (2d ed. 1986) (quoting Note, 57 Geo. L.J. 892, 902–03 (1969)).

XYY SYNDROME

XYY syndrome. The abnormal presence of an extra Y chromosome in a male, theoretically resulting in increased aggressiveness and antisocial behavior often resulting in criminal conduct.

Y.*Y2K WARRANTY

Y2K warranty.abbr.Year 2000 warranty; a warranty that software, hardware, or a product having computer hardware or software components will function properly on and after January 1, 2000. • These warranties were common in the late 1990s. [Cases: Sales 284(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 251, 253, 257.]

YANK-CHEATING

yank-cheating,n. The illegal practice of inserting paper money into a vending machine, then pulling the money out again after the machine has recognized it, thereby retaining the cash and unlawfully obtaining merchandise.

YARDLAND

yardland,n. Hist. A variable quantity of land, often 20 acres. — Also termed virga terrae (v<<schwa>>r-g<<schwa>> ter-ee).

YARDSTICK THEORY

yardstick theory.Antitrust. A method of determining damages for lost profits (and sometimes overcharges) whereby a corporate plaintiff identifies a company similar to the plaintiff but without the impact of the antitrust violation. Cf. BEFORE-AND-AFTER THEORY; MARKET-SHARE THEORY.

“To the extent that either the markets or firms being compared are dissimilar, the yardstick theory will not produce a trustworthy estimate of what the plaintiff would have earned but for the defendant's conduct. The method therefore works best in markets that are both local and relatively homogeneous.” Herbert Hovenkamp, Economics and Federal Antitrust Law § 16.7, at 454 (1985).

YEA

yea,n. Parliamentary law. An affirmative vote.

YEA AND NAY

yea and nay (yay / nay). Yes and no. • In old records, this was a mere assertion and denial without the necessity of an oath.

YEAR

year. 1. Twelve calendar months beginning January 1 and ending December 31. — Also termed calendar year. 2. A consecutive 365-day period beginning at any point; a span of twelve months. [Cases: Time 4. C.J.S. Time § 5.]

fiscal year.An accounting period of 12 consecutive months <the company's fiscal year is October 1 to September 30>. • A fiscal year is often different from the calendar year, esp. for tax purposes. — Also termed fiscal period.

half-year. In legal computation, a period of 182 days.

natural year.Hist. The period of 365 days and about 6 hours, or the time it takes the earth to orbit the sun.

tax year.The period used for computing federal or state income-tax liability, usu. either the calendar year or a fiscal year of 12 months ending on the last day of a month other than December. — Also termed taxable year. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3075–3093; Taxation 1038, 1078. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 21, 41–43, 45, 51–55, 78, 334, 670; Taxation §§ 1738–1755, 1759.]

YEAR 2000 WARRANTY

Year 2000 warranty.See Y2K WARRANTY.

YEAR AND A DAY

year and a day.The common-law time limit fixed for various purposes, such as claiming rights, exemptions, or property (such as rights to wreckage or estrays) or for prosecuting certain acts — so called because a year was formerly counted to include the first and last day, meaning that a year from January 1 was December 31, so a year and a day would then mean a full year from January 1 through January 1. — Also termed year and day; (formerly in Scots law) zeir and day. See YEAR-AND-A-DAY RULE; YEAR, DAY, AND WASTE.

YEAR-AND-A-DAY RULE

year-and-a-day rule.Criminal law. The common-law principle that an act causing death is not homicide if the death occurs more than a year and a day after the act was committed. • In Latin, the phrase year and a day was commonly rendered annus et dies. [Cases: Homicide 510.]

“It has long been the rule that no one can be convicted of the murder or manslaughter of another person who does not die within a year and a day of the blow received or other cause of death. ‘Day’ was here added merely to indicate that the 365th day after that of the injury must be included. Such an indication was rendered necessary by an old rule (now obsolete) that, in criminal law, in reckoning a period ‘from’ the doing of any act, the period was (in favour of prisoners) to be taken as beginning on the very day when this act was done.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 105 (16th ed. 1952).

“The phrase ‘year and a day,’ in this test [for proving causation of a person's death], means no more than a year. The accepted method of computing time today is by excluding the first day and including the last. Thus a year from January first is the first day of the following January. In ancient times, however, there was a tendency to include both the first day and the last day so that a year from January first was thought of as the thirty-first of the following December, and ‘the day was added that there might be a whole year.’ The use of this peculiar phrase to mean just a year in the homicide cases has found expression in some of the statutes. Other enactments have wisely dropped this ancient jingle.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 778 (3d ed.

“Several centuries ago, when doctors knew very little about medicine, the judges created an absolute rule of law: one cannot be guilty of murder if the victim lives for a year and a day after the blow. The difficulty in proving that the blow caused the death after so long an interval was obviously the basis of the rule. Now that doctors know infinitely more, it seems strange that the year-and-a-day rule should survive to the present, but it has done so in most of the American states, either by judicial decision or by statute.” Wayne R. LaFave & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 3.12, at 299 (2d ed. 1986).

“The year and a day rule is widely viewed as an outdated relic of the common law.” Rogers v. Tennessee, 532 U.S. 451, 462, 121 S.Ct. 1693, 1701 (2001)(O'Connor, J.).

YEAR AND DAY

year and day. See YEAR AND A DAY.

YEAR BOOKS

Year Books. Hist. Books of cases anonymously and fairly regularly reported covering primarily the period from the reign of Edward I to the time of Henry VIII. • The title “Year Books” derives from their being grouped under the regnal years of the sovereigns in whose reigns the reported cases were cited. The reports were probably originally prepared by law teachers and students and later by professional reporters or scribes. — Also written Year-Books; year-books; yearbooks. — Also termed terms. Cf. ABBREVIATIO PLACITORUM.

“[F]rom 1300 there is a continuous stream of reports of arguments in the common Pleas. The reports were written in Anglo-French, the language of courtly speech. Their authorship is unknown, and they are referred to by the generic name ‘year-books’ .... If we have to account for their beginning, the most likely explanation is that they arose from a case-method of instruction in the law school which served the apprentices of the Bench before the emergence of the inns of court .... For the same reason, the contemporary value of the earliest reports lay not in their historical authenticity as precedents but in the ideas and suggestions which they contained .... Once the age of experiment was over, the reports settled into a more uniform and at times apparently single series .... The year-books did not end at any fixed date. What has usually been taken as their end is the result of two concurrent factors: the advent of printing, and the practice of identifying reports by the name of the author.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 205–07 (3d ed. 1990).

YEAR, DAY, AND WASTE

year, day, and waste. Hist. A right of the Crown to the profits and waste for a year and a day of the land of persons convicted of petty treason or felony (unless the lord made redemption), after which the Crown had to restore the property to the lord of the fee. The right was abrogated by the Corruption of Blood Act of 1814. — Also termed (in Law French) ann, jour, et wast; (in Law Latin) annus, dies, et vastum.

YEAR-END DIVIDEND

Year of Our Lord. See ANNO DOMINI.

YEAR-TO-YEAR TENANCY

year-to-year tenancy. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

YEAS AND NAYS

yeas and nays. The affirmative and negative votes on a bill or resolution before a deliberative assembly. See roll-call vote under VOTE(4). [Cases: Statutes 19. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 37–38, 40, 42.]

YELLOW-DOG CONTRACT

yellow-dog contract. An employment contract forbidding membership in a labor union. • Such a contract is generally illegal under federal and state law.

YEOMAN

yeoman (yoh-m<<schwa>>n). 1. Hist. An attendant in a royal or noble household. 2. Hist. A commoner; a free-holder (under the rank of gentleman) who holds land yielding 40 shillings per year.

“A yeoman is he that hath free land of forty shillings by the year; who was thereby qualified to serve on juries, vote for knights of the shire, and do any other act, where the law requires one that is probus et legalis homo [an upright and law-abiding man].” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 394 (1765).

3. English law. One who owns and cultivates property. 4. A petty officer performing clerical work in the U.S. Navy. — Also sometimes spelled yoman.

YEOMAN OF THE GUARD

yeoman of the guard. A member of a corps of officers whose primary duties are to ceremonially guard the English royal household. • A yeoman is usu. at least six feet tall, is of the best rank under the gentry, and is generally exempt from arrest on civil process. — Also termed yeoman of the guard of the royal household.

YEOMANRY

yeomanry (yoh-m<<schwa>>n-ree). 1. The collective body of yeomen. 2. Volunteer cavalry units in Great Britain, later transferred to the Territorial Army.

YEVEN

yeven (yev-⟨schwa⟩n oryiv-⟨schwa⟩n).Hist. Given; dated. — Also spelled yeoven (yoh-v⟨schwa⟩n).

YICK WO<TT> DOCTRINE

Yick Wo doctrine (yik woh). The principle that a law or ordinance giving a person or entity absolute discretion to grant or deny permission to carry on a lawful business violates the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886).

YIELD

yield,n. Profit expressed as a percentage of the investment. — Also termed yield on investment; return. See RATE OF RETURN.

coupon yield.The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's par value. — Also termed nominal yield.

current yield.The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's current market price.

discount yield.The yield on a security sold at a discount.

earnings yield.The earnings per share of a security divided by its market price. • The higher the ratio, the better the investment yield. — Also termed earnings-price ratio. Cf. PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

net yield.The profit or loss on an investment after deducting all appropriate costs and loss reserves.

nominal yield.See coupon yield.

yield,vb.1. To give up, relinquish, or surrender (a right, etc.) <yield the floor>.2.Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) to give way to a higher-ranking motion. Cf. PRECEDENCE(3).

“If two motions ‘A’ and ‘B’ are related under rules of parliamentary procedure in such a way that motion ‘B’ can be made while motion ‘A’ is pending and, when stated by the chair, can thus temporarily replace ‘A’ as the immediately pending question, motion ‘B’ takes precedence over (or takes precedence of) motion ‘A,’ and motion ‘A’ yields to motion ‘B.’ A secondary motion thus takes precedence over the main motion; and a main motion takes precedence over nothing and yields to all applicable secondary motions.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 5, at 57–58 (10th ed. 2000).

3.Hist. To perform a service owed by a tenant to a lord <yield and pay>.

YIELD ON INVESTMENT

yield on investment.See YIELD.

YIELD SPREAD

yield spread.The differences in yield between various securities issues.

YIELD TO MATURITY

ZIFT.abbr.ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

ZIPPER CLAUSE

zipper clause.Contracts. A contractual provision that operates both as an integration clause and as a no-oral-modification clause. See INTEGRATION CLAUSE ; NO-ORAL-MODIFICATION CLAUSE.

“[A] ‘zipper clause’ ... so called because the combination of the integration clause and the no-oral-modification clause is intended to foreclose claims of any representations outside the written contract ....” Pace v. Honolulu Disposal Serv., 227 F.3d 1150, 1159 (9th Cir. 2000).

ZONE

zone. 1. An area that is different or is distinguished from surrounding areas < zone of danger>.2. An area in a city or town that, through zoning regulations, is under particular restrictions as to building size, land use, and the like <the capitol is at the center of the height-restriction zone>. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 31. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 40, 42.]

holding zone.Temporary, low-density zoning used until a community determines how the area should be rezoned.

ZONE-OF-DANGER RULE

zone-of-danger rule.Torts. The doctrine allowing the recovery of damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress if the plaintiff was both located in the dangerous area created by the defendant's negligence and frightened by the risk of harm. [Cases: Damages 49.10. C.J.S. Damages § 95; Torts §§ 67, 76–79, 82–83.]

ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT

zone of employment.Workers' compensation. The physical place of employment within which an employee, if injured there, can receive compensation. Cf. COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT; SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 604–618, 710–755. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 365–373, 376–387, 425–432, 435–447.]

ZONE OF INTERESTS

zone of interests.The class or type of interests or concerns that a statute or constitutional guarantee is intended to regulate or protect. • To have standing to challenge a ruling (esp. of an administrative agency), the plaintiff must show that the specific injury suffered comes within the zone of interests protected by the statute on which the ruling was based. [Cases: Action 13; Administrative Law and Procedure 666; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

ZONE OF PRIVACY

zone of privacy.Constitutional law. A range of fundamental privacy rights that are implied in the express guarantees of the Bill of Rights. See PENUMBRA; RIGHT OF PRIVACY. [Cases:

---

Constitutional Law 82(7). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 584, 630–648; Right to Die § 2.]

ZONE SEARCH

zone search. See SEARCH.

ZONING

zoning, n. The legislative division of a region, esp. a municipality, into separate districts with different regulations within the districts for land use, building size, and the like. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1, 4. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2–3, 5–7, 10, 17–18, 85.] — zone, vb.

aesthetic zoning. Zoning designed to preserve the aesthetic features or values of an area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 36. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 45.]

bonus zoning. See incentive zoning.

cluster zoning. Zoning that favors planned-unit development by allowing a modification in lot size and frontage requirements under the condition that other land in the development be set aside for parks, schools, or other public needs. — Also termed density zoning. See PLANNED-UNIT DEVELOPMENT. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 85, 245. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 46, 101.]

conditional zoning. Zoning in which a governmental body (without definitively committing itself) grants a zoning change subject to conditions that are usu. not imposed on similarly zoned property. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382, 382.1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 195–197.]

“Conditions imposed are designed to protect adjacent land from the loss of use value which might occur if the newly authorized use was permitted without restraint of any kind. Thus, conditional zoning seeks to minimize the potentially deleterious effect of a zone change on neighboring properties through reasonably conceived conditions which harmonize the landowner's need for rezoning with the public interest.” 83 Am. Jur. 2d Zoning and Planning § 218, at 193 (1992).

contextual zoning. An approach to zoning that considers appropriate use of a lot based on the scale and types of nearby buildings. • Contextual zoning has been used, for example, to prevent the destruction of older, smaller residences to make room for larger houses disparagingly called “monster homes” or “McMansions” in established neighborhoods.

contract zoning. 1. Zoning according to an agreement, by which the landowner agrees to certain restrictions or conditions in exchange for more favorable zoning treatment. • This type of contract zoning is usu. considered an illegal restraint of the government's police power, because by private agreement, the government has committed itself to a particular type of zoning. 2. Rezoning of property to a less restrictive classification subject to the landowner's agreement to observe specified limitations on the use and physical development of the property that are not imposed on other property in the zone. • This device is esp. used when property is located in a more restrictive zone that borders on a less restrictive zone. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 160. C.J.S. Zoning and cumulative zoning.A method of zoning in which any use permitted in a higher-use, less intensive zone is per-missible in a lower-use, more intensive zone. • For example, under this method, a house could be built in an industrial zone but a factory could not be built in a residential zone.

density zoning.See cluster zoning.

Euclidean zoning (yoo-klid-ee-<<schwa>>n). Zoning by specific and uniform geographical division. • This type of zoning takes its name from the Supreme Court case that approved it: Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., 272 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114 (1926). — Also termed use zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1, 31. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18, 40, 42.]

“Operating from the premise that everything has its place, zoning is the comprehensive division of a city into different use zones. Use zoning is also known as Euclidean zoning, taking the name from the leading case of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., which upheld its validity.... In the typical zoning ordinance each zone has three varieties of uses: permitted, accessory and conditional. Ordinances may also specifically prohibit some uses.” Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 4.2, at 69 (2003).

exclusionary zoning.Zoning that excludes a specific class type of business from a district. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18.]

floating zoning.Zoning that creates exceptional-use districts, as needed, within ordinary zoned districts.

incentive zoning.A relaxation in zoning restrictions (such as density limits) that offer an incentive to a developer to provide certain public benefits (such as building low-income housing units). — Also termed bonus zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382.1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 197.]

interim zoning.Temporary emergency zoning pending revisions to existing ordinances or the development of a final zoning plan. — Also termed stopgap zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 22. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 16.]

inverse zoning.Zoning that attempts to disperse particular types of property use rather than concentrate them.

partial zoning.Zoning that affects only a portion of a municipality's territory, and that is usu. invalid because it contradicts the comprehensive zoning plan. — Also termed piecemeal zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 44.]

private zoning.The use of restrictive covenants in private agreements to restrict the use and occupancy of real property. • Private zoning often covers such things as lot size, building lines, architectural specifications, and property uses. [Cases: Covenants 1. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 2–3.]

reverse spot zoning.Zoning of a large area of land without regard for the zoning of a small piece of land within that area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35, 162. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 44, 74.]

“When parcels around a given property are rezoned to allow for higher uses leaving an island of less intensive use, reverse spot zoning is the result.” Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).

spot zoning. Zoning of a particular piece of land without regard for the zoning of the larger area surrounding the land. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35, 162. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 44, 74.]

“To the popular mind, spot zoning means the improper permission to use an ‘island’ of land for a more intensive use than permitted on adjacent properties. The popular definition needs several qualifications .... The set of facts usually involves an ‘island’ of more intensive use than surrounding property .... Usually the ‘island’ is small .... Furthermore, the term is not properly applied to development permission that comes about by variance or special exception. Rather, the term refers to a legislative act, such as a rezoning, or to a situation in which the ‘island’ is created by the original ordinance.” Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).

ZONING MAP

zoning map. The map that is created by a zoning ordinance and shows the various zoning districts. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 30. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5, 12, 39.]

ZONING ORDINANCE

zoning ordinance. A city ordinance that regulates the use to which land within various parts of the city may be put. • It allocates uses to the various districts of a municipality, as by allocating residences to certain parts and businesses to other parts. A comprehensive zoning ordinance usually regulates the height of buildings and the proportion of the lot area that must be kept free from buildings. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 4, 21. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 3, 5–7, 10, 18–19, 37, 85.]
