

3. The Commission also seeks comments on whether the proposed expense limit change is an economic cost and what effect, if any, on carriers' cash flow it may have that would qualify this accounting change for exogenous treatment under Price Cap regulation.

4. Accordingly, it is ordered that, pursuant to Section 4(i), 4(j) and 220 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. 154(i), 154(j) and 220, Notice is hereby given of the proposed amendment to Part 32 of the Commission's rules, 47 CFR part 32, as described below. In conjunction with this notice, we delegate authority to the Chief, Common Carrier Bureau to request and obtain from the Regional Bell Operating Companies and GTE any data necessary to evaluate the possible revenue requirement impact of the proposed change.

Establishment of a Joint Board

AGENCY: Federal Communications Commission.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The Federal Communications Commission proposes to change the separations rules applicable to local exchange carriers ("LECs") for allocating the Other Billing and Collecting ("OB&C") expenses<sup>1</sup> portion of Account 32.6623, Customer services,<sup>2</sup> between state and interstate jurisdictions. These permanent separations rules would replace the interim procedures that LECs currently use to allocate OB&C costs. The FCC proposes a fixed allocation method which would allocate a specified percentage of costs to the interstate jurisdiction. The FCC invited comment on four fixed allocation methodologies and it asked parties to suggest alternative approaches. The FCC also invited comment on the need for a contingency provision that would be triggered by one or more of the interexchange carriers substantially reducing their use of LEC billing and collection services. The FCC referred the issues involving the OB&C separations rules to the Federal State Joint Board established in the CC Docket 80-286 Joint Board proceeding for a recommendation.

Synopsis of Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

OB&C expenses are the costs incurred by LECs in preparing and rendering customer bills (other than carrier access charge bills), and in accounting for revenues generated by those billings. LECs allocate most of the interstate OB&C costs to nonregulated activities and recover these costs through untariffed charges for non-regulated services. The sole exception is the billing and collecting cost for the federal end user common line charge which LECs recover through the common line access rate element.

Prior to 1987, the FCC rules had complex and administratively-burdensome rules in place. In 1987 the FCC replaced those rules with a new approach which it expected to simplify the separation of OB&C expenses.<sup>3</sup> The new rules, however, applied a formula that inadvertently set the interstate share of OB&C expenses at thirty-three percent for LECs that continued to provide billing and collecting functions for AT&T. The interstate allocations had typically amounted to approximately twenty percent. This unanticipated result led the Commission, in 1988, on reconsideration to reinstate on an interim basis a portion of the allocation rules that were in effect prior to 1987.<sup>4</sup>

The FCC believes that LECs generally cannot attribute OB&C services to any specific service and, therefore, it proposes a fixed allocation factor to replace the interim OB&C allocation procedures. The FCC also believes that a fixed allocation factor would provide greater administrative simplicity, certainty and auditability than the interim rules. The FCC proposed four alternative fixed allocation methods and invited parties to propose other possible methods as well. The FCC requests that parties comment on (1) whether the allocation procedures should be based upon a fixed allocation factor, rather than on a direct measurement of actual interstate usage, and (2) whether the
