Wireless Telecommunications Bureau Staff Clarifies “Grace Period” Rule for IVDS “Auction” Licensees Paying by Installment Payments

Section 1.2110(e) of the Commission's auction rules, 47 CFR 1.2110(e), provides that in the event a licensee defaults on its installment payment obligation, the FCC may cancel the license. In the Second Report and Order in PP Docket No. 93-253, 9 FCC Rcd 2348, 2391 ¶ 240 (1994) 59 FR 22980, May 4, 1994, the Commission stated that it would “consider providing a three to six month grace period a delinquent payor's license cancels.” Recently, the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau staff clarified this payment rule in the context of Personal Communications Service (PCS) auctions. See FCC Public Notice, “Wireless Telecommunications Bureau Staff Responds to Questions About the Broadband PCS C Block Auction,” Mimeo 54270, released June 8, 1995. In response to inquiries, the staff now clarifies that this interpretation applies to Interactive Video and Data Service (IVDS) licensees as well. Interested parties should understand that this advice and rule interpretation constitute informal staff opinion, not an official Commission decision or ruling.

IVDS licensees that elect to pay for their licenses in installments will have their licenses conditioned upon full and timely performance of all installment payment obligations. The Commission's rules provide that a licensee will be deemed in default on its installment payments if it is more than 90 days delinquent in making a payment to the government.

Any time prior to the expiration of the 90 days following the payment due date, a licensee may request a grace period. Generally, where a licensee submits a showing, supported by an affidavit, that it in bankruptcy, foreclosure or financial distress, there will be a presumption in favor of granting a three-month grace period (commencing ninety days after the missed payment date). Any request for a grace period based on financial distress must state with particularity the grounds for asserting such financial distress. Such grounds may include the existence of payment defaults on other third party debt, or the general inability to pay debts as they become due in the ordinary course of business. If no grace period is granted, then the FCC may declare a licensee in default and cancel the license any time after 90 days from the missed payment.

Where the Commission grants period and the default is not cured at the conclusion of such a grace period, the FCC may cancel the license. However, the FCC may in its discretion extend or grant additional grace periods where circumstances warrant.

In accordance with § 1.2110, the first IVDS installment payment was due June 30, 1995. IVDS licensees not making their first installment payment with the Commission by September 28, 1995, will be deemed to be in default. Requests for the additional three-month grace period should contain the detailed justification described above, and be sent to the following address: Federal Communications Commission, Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, Private Wireless Division, 2025 M Street NW., Room 8010, Washington, DC 20554, Attention: Stop Code 2000-F.
