Original Version—May 25, 1994	Revised Version	Change
III. Principles for Individuals who Provide Personal Information A. Awareness Principles
While information collectors have a responsibility to tell individuals why they want information about them, individuals also have a responsibility to understand the consequences of providing personal information to others. Therefore, individuals should obtain adequate, relevant information about.	While information collectors have a responsibility to inform individuals why they want personal information, individuals also have a responsibility to understand the consequences of providing personal information to others. Therefore, individuals should obtain adequate, relevant information about:	Description of what information individual should obtain to make informed decision to provide data has been simplified.
1. Planned primary and secondary uses of the information.	Why the information is being collected;.
 Any efforts that will be made to protect the confidentiality and integrity of the information. Consequences for the individual of providing or withholding information. Any rights of redress the individual has if harmed by improper use of the information. 	 What the information is expected to be used for;. What steps will be taken to protect its confidentiality, integrity, and quality;. The consequences of providing or withholding information; and. Any rights of redress.
B. Redress Principles
Individuals should be protected from harm resulting from inaccurate or improperly used personal information. Therefore, individuals should, as appropriate.	Individuals should be protected from harm caused by the improper disclosure or use of personal information. They should also be protected from harm caused by decisions based on personal information that is not accurate, timely, complete, or relevant for the purpose for which it is used. Therefore, individuals should, as appropriate:	Redress section has been rewritten to expand the scope of its provisions. Whereas original formulation restricted individuals ability to correct information that could harm them to only "inaccurate" information, revised draft includes any of the information quality attributes from the Information Quality Principle as a basis: e.g., incomplete information.
Be given means to obtain their information and be provided opportunity to correct inac- curate information that could harm them.	Have the means to obtain their personal information and the opportunity to correct information that could harm them.	Original paragraphs 2 and 3, stating that individuals should be informed of "final actions" taken against them and have a means of redress if harmed by improper uses of their personal information has been consolidated into one new paragraph. The "informed of any final actions" thought has been discarded because of the difficulty of arriving at an adequate definition of what constitutes a "final action." Instead, it has been replaced with a provision for "notice and means of redress" for improper disclosures of information, or for use of data that lacks sufficient quality as explained by the Information Quality Principles.
2. Be informed of any final actions taken against them and what information was used as a basis for the decision.	2. Have notice and a means of redress if harmed by an improper disclosure or use of personal information, or if harmed by a decision based on personal information that is not accurate, timely, complete, or relevant for the purpose for which it is used.	mation Quality Filliciples.
3. Have a means of redress if harmed by an improper use of their personal information.

[FR Doc. 95–1480 Filed 1–19–95; 8:45 am] BILLING CODE 3110–01–P–M