In addition, P.L. 103–296 requires the Commission to address the following:

The feasibility of providing benefits

 The feasibility of providing benefits to children through noncash means, including but not limited to vouchers, debit cards, and electronic benefit transfer systems;

• The extent to which the Social Security Administration can involve private organizations in an effort to increase the provision of social services, education, and vocational instruction with the aim of promoting independence and the ability to engage in substantial gainful activity;

 Alternative ways of providing retroactive supplemental security income benefits to disabled children, including the desirability and feasibility of conserving some portion of such benefits to promote the long-term well-being of such children;

 The desirability and methods of increasing the extent to which benefits are used in the effort to assist disabled children in achieving independence and engaging in substantial gainful activity; and

• The effects of the supplemental security income program on disabled children and their families.

The Secretary has asked that the Commission conduct its analysis mindful of the broader context of programs affecting children with disabilities and their families.
