

KI Dail

5/2/ Lyn

THE

COMPLETE WORKS

IN

VERSE AND PROSE

OF

SAMUEL DANIEL.

VOL. III.-THE DRAMATIC WORKS.

SAMULI DANILL

THE

COMPLETE WORKS

IN

VERSE AND PROSE

OF

SAMUEL DANIEL.

EDITED, WITH MEMORIAL-INTRODUCTION AND A GLOSSARIAL INDEX EMBRACING NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

BY THE

REV. ALEXANDER B. GROSART,

D.D., LL.D. (Edin.), F.S.A. (Scot.), St. George's, Blackburn, Lancashire;

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

VOL. III .- THE DRAMATIC WORKS.

I. CLEOPATRA. 1594—1623.

II. PHILOTAS. 1607.

III. THE VISION OF THE TWELVE GODDESSES. 1604.

IV. THE QVEENES ARCADIA. 1606.

V. TETHYS FESTIVALL. 1610.

VI. HYMENS TRIUMPH, 1615.

PRINTED FOR PRIVATE CIRCULATION ONLY.

1885.

100 copies only.]

PR 2241 A14 V, 3

REF. & REM.

955

CONTENTS.

							Y	AGE
PREI	LIMINARY NOTE	ву С	EORGE	SAINT	SBURY,	EsQ.	:	vii
I.	CLEOPATRA				•			1
II.	PHILOTAS							95
III.	THE VISION OF THE TWELVE GODDESSES .							182
IV.	THE QUEENES	ARCA	DIA		. "			207
v.	TETHYS FEST	VALL						301
VI.	Hymens Triu	MPH						325

PRELIMINARY NOTE

ON THE POSITION OF DANIEL'S TRAGEDIES IN ENGLISH LITERATURE.

[It gives me no little pleasure to avail myself of the following spontaneous 'Note' by my friend George Saintsbury, Esq. More on the subject may be looked for in the 'Memorial-Introduction II.—Critical' on other lines of influence of the Senecan or Daniel form of plays. But meanwhile the present 'Note' is complete within its self-appointed limits.—A. B. G.]

THESE few words are not intended as a criticism of Cleopatra and Philotas: I have no intention of interfering with Dr. Grosart's province to that extent, or of abusing his good nature. It has, however, often struck me that the precise position of these tragedies in our literature, and the very interesting reflections which they present to any one who knows the sixteenth-century literature of France and Italy, especially of France, has been singularly overlooked. I have, I think, a tolerably fair acquaintance with Elizabethan drama; but except these two, and the translation of Garnier's Cornelia which Kyd executed, I cannot think of any English tragedies (written by dramatists at all well known, and belonging to the formative period of the drama) which are distinctly couched in the form of the Senecan model. doubt some earlier plays show traces (more or less) of the influence of that model, and some later show traces of the influence of the French dramatists who adopted it; but these only follow it exactly. The fact is, of course, in no sense a discovery; but I need only quote two well-known books of different kinds to show that the inferences from it have, as a rule, concerned English dramatic critics very slightly. In Professor Morley's big book on "English Plays," I can find (and the index at least does not convict me of carelessness) no mention whatever of Daniel's dramas, nor is Cornelia mentioned in the notice of Kyd. W. C. Hazlitt, in reprinting this last play in his "Dodsley," makes a kind of apology for letting it appear, and alleges the fact of his predecessor's printing it as an only if not a sufficient excuse.

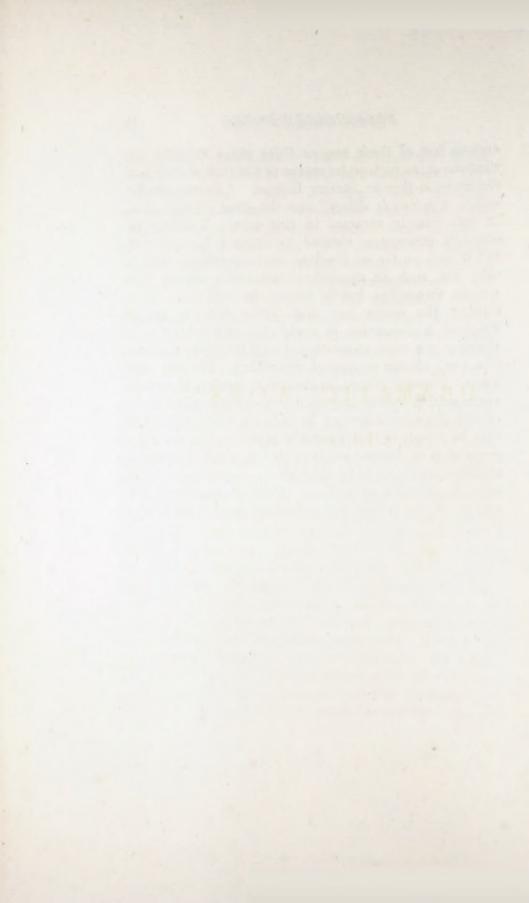

And yet if the commonwealth of English letters (as Charles Kingsley pleasantly expressed it) was exposed to a severe danger from that assault on rhyme which our poet himself repelled so vigorously, it was most assuredly exposed to a danger still greater by the popularity of the dramatic model which Daniel, by a very odd contrast, himself adopted. Comparatively few people read Seneca's tragedies now. They are of the classics that are no classics—that is to say, that enter into no school or university curriculum, and that are read, if they are read at all, for love, and not for duty or for money or for fame. But they had an extraordinary influence on the world of the Renaissance. I do not know that I am quite a fair judge of them. for I read them as a boy, with the interest that some ill-regulated boys are wont to bestow on anything that does not "pay." A friend gave me the pretty little "Regent Classics" edition some five-and-twenty years ago, and I read it without, I confess, the remotest knowledge or idea of Garnier or Kyd, of Jodelle or Daniel. It has been said that no man is a fair judge of literature that he reads under such circumstances. I think, however, that it is not very difficult to judge Seneca judicially, and that it is certainly not difficult to understand his effect on the Renaissance. How great that effect was, no literary historian of the countries in which it had free course has failed to notice; though in France, at any rate, the abundant dramatic production to which it gave rise has only recently met with much attention, and the French themselves have left it to Germany to produce Garnier and promise Montchrestien in modern editions.

The peculiarity of the Senecan tragedy is to be found, first, in its exact and careful form; secondly, in the prominence which it gives to moral over romantic interest: thirdly, in the simplicity of its plot and situations. The precepts which Horace drew from the Greek drama seem to have been worked out in it almost without reference to the original material, except in points of form. It is entirely a school drama, an exercise in literature. It knew no sort of condescension to the audience: the audience were expected to make all the advances. Hardly any more words are needed to show how utterly opposed it is to our own form of play, in which at all times, more or less, but most of all between 1575 and 1630, the tastes of the audience were consulted first of all, and splendid literature was offered them as a kind of bonus-a thing into the bargain. It may be said, of course, that the scantv following of this academic style of dramatic performance in England is sufficient in itself to show that it was alien from the English genius, and could never have done much harm. I am not so sure of that. It ought to be remembered that a form not much worse, and certainly not any better—the rhymed heroic drama held England a little later for a quarter of a century, and left traditions which coloured English tragedy for a century more. The attitude of contempt seems to me by no means so appropriate as the attitude of thankfulness in reference to these decorous and scholarly exercitations, with their choruses and their monologues, their unities and their decencies of action. When these identical plays took the French stage by storm, in the middle of the sixteenth century, and held it in their simple form till the first quarter of the seventeenth. in a very slightly changed form till the first quarter of the nineteenth, they had to deal with a people at least as fond of dramatic shows as the English, and even more generally accustomed to a rough but lively variety of them. Why was one people taken and the other left? Why did Seneca take captive the whole drama of France, from Jodelle, through Garnier and Montchrestien and even Hardy, through Corneille and Racine and Voltaire, leaving his traces even on Victor Hugo? Why in England do Cleopatra and Philotas stand practically alone, with a lawless multitude, a hopelessly irregular and incomparably delightful crowd of quite different productions, surrounding them? It is not my business to answer these questions, for which of course I or any one else could give not one but half a dozen elaborate and more or less unsatisfactory answers. I only wish to point to the fact, to the curious fact, of these two or three plays standing by themselves, as high-water marks of the utmost range of the Senecan tide in literary Europe. "Tu me crois la marée, et je suis le déluge," says the great French poet. It was exactly reversed in this case. A deluge of dramatic correctness seemed to menace Europe, and lo! it was, as far as England was concerned, only a tide, and such an exceptional tide, that literary historians themselves hardly record its farthest. farthest the reader has now before him, as far as England is concerned, in works (for, as has been said, Cornelia is a mere translation, though in parts a pretty free one) almost unique of their kind. No one who knows Daniel's almost unsurpassed faculty of ethical verse-writing will be surprised at his personal adoption of the Senecan tragedy; but what is really curious is that he stands in that adoption almost alone, amidst a generation of learned persons, all like himself prone to moralise, most eager to write, many enamoured of the dramatic manner of writing. Here, if anywhere, the genius of the nation seems to have exerted its saving force.

X.

DRAMATIC WORKS.

I. CLEOPATRA. 1594—1623.

111.

NOTE.

'Cleopatra' was first published in the 1594 edition of 'Delia' (see title-page of this volume in Vol. I., p. 22), and had this separate title within an architectural (woodcut) design-

THE

Tragedie of Cleopatra.

(:.)

90

-26

Ætas prima canat veneres postrema tumultres.

1594.

It was reprinted in the 'Poeticall Essayes' of 1599 (see its title-page, Vol. I., p. 3) with this separate title-page within a broad-bordered woodcut design that occurs in various contemporary books-

THE

TRAGEDIE OF CLEOPATRA

()

Aetas prima canat veneres po-Arema tumultus.

SAM. DANYELL.

AT LONDON Printed by P. S. for Symon Waterson, 1599.

The next edition was in the folios of 'Workes' (see Vol. I., p. xix.), 1601, 1602, with no separate title-page. Following this came the successive editions of "Certaine Small Workes Heretofore Divulged by Samuel Daniel" of 1605, 1607, 1609, 1611; and in the last year (1611) a distinct impression of the Tragedy by itself (British Museum, b. 19). This brings us to the Quarto of 1623.

Returning on these, the text of 1594 offers noticeable readings, that on revision were deleted in part and in part modified. We record the whole in their places. 1599, 1601 (= 1602), and 1605, except in orthographical and very slight verbal changes, correspond with the text of 1623. But the texts of 1607 and 1611, and the other of 1611, agree in recasting the Play, and in introducing various minor alterations. We have intimation of these changes on the verso of the general title-page of 1607 thus—

'The tragedy of Cleopatra newly altred,'

albeit this is (stupidly) repeated similarly in 1609 and 1611 (not in the separate edition of 1611). The editions of 1605, 1607, and 1609 omit the verse epistle-dedicatory to

"The Subject of all verse Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother," except that in the title and half-title respectively they have this-

"To the Ladie Marie Countesse of Pembrooke."

In 1611 (both editions) the full Dedication is restored; and so in the 4to of 1623.

In 1607, 1609 and 1611 (both) 'Actus I. Scæna I.' opens with 'Cleopatra, Cæfario, and Rodon,' and commences—

"Come Rodon, here, conuey from out this coast
This precious iem, the chiefest I have left . . ."

In the original and all other editions this 'Scene' forms part of 'Actus IV.,' and 'Rodon' speaks it substantially to 'Seleucus' in giving account of his own treachery (II. 875-89). These various readings occur—

1. 875, 'Come Rodon, here,' for 'Here Rodon, take.'

1. 876, 'I have left' for 'that I have.'

A new line 'My deare Cafario: Saue him, faue my theft.'

1. 879, 'Conceale' for 'Safeguard.'

1. 885, 'fhattered' for 'broken.'

Then comes this speech of Rodon-

Ro. No doubt he may, deare Soueraigne, when the rage Of this confused storme is ouerpast,

That furiously now beates upon this age,
And, may be, is too violent to last.

And Casars fortune which now seems to grow Into th'Ascendent of selicitie,
And makes the round and full of glory read,
May come to warne, like others wretchednes:
No tyrant can prescribe to injurie:
Kings Rights may oft be sicke, but neuer die.

Cleopatra answers (in a new speech)-

Cle. Rodon, my felfe, those turnes of Chance have seen
And known both sides of fortune, worst & best,
And therefore he, whose birth, whose sexe hath beene
Worthier then mine, why should not he reblest
Turne backe to rule the scepter of this land?
Which ah, how well it would become thy hand?

She continues, much as in 11. 890—915. These various readings may be noted:—

- 1. 891, 'Now die,' for 'O how.'
- 895, 'And had he not, ay me, bin borne fo late' for 'And O if he had not beene borne fo late.'
- 1. 898, 'But O deare fonne, the time yields no delaies' for 'Then vnto him, O my deere fonne (fhe faies,)'
- 1. 907, 'Thee in the way' for 'Thee and thy wayes.'
- 1. 910, 'tender well' for 'looke well to.'
- 1. 913, 'But mothers cast' for 'Mothers will cast.'
- ll. 914-15 in ".
- I. 917, 'ominous' for 'luckleffe bad.'
- 1. 918, 'And yet perhaps my love' for 'But yet it may 'tis but.'
- 1. 919, 'On . . . which' for 'Or . . . with'—the former accepted in its place.
 - 1. 922, 'in time regaine his' for 'recouer better.'
 - 1. 923, 'with greater glory' for 'may come in pompe.'
 - 1. 924, 'feare' for 'doubt.'
 - 1. 925, 'more powerful' for 'malignant.'
 - I. 926, 'And Egypt haue' for 'Egypt must haue.'
 - 1. 929, 'If' for 'Sith.'

NOTE.

1. 956, 'perhaps it is' for 'it may be 'tis.'
1. 961, 'me and thee' for 'thee and me.'

After l. 964 this new line—'Though I haue made an ende, I haue no done.' A new speech by Cæsario succeeds:—

Cal. Deare soueraigne mother, suffer not your care To tumult thus with th'honor of your state: These miseries of ours no strangers are. Nor is it new to be vnfortunate. And this good, let your many forrows past Worke on your heart t'inharden it at last. Looke but on all the neighbour States befide, Of Europe, Afrique, Asia, and but note What Kings? what States? hath not the Roman pride Ranfackt, confounded, or els feruile brought? And fince we are so borne that by our fate, Against these stormes we cannot now beare saile. And that the boiftrous current of their state Will beare downe all our fortunes, and preuaile : Let vs yet temper with the time; and thinke The windes may change, and all these States opprest, Colleagu'd in one, may turne again to smoke Their Greatnesse, who now holds them all distrest: And I may lead their troupes, and at the walles Of greedie Rome, reuenge the wronged blood Of th'innocent, which now for vengeance calls, And doe th'inthralled Prouinces this good. And therefore my deare mother doe not leaue To hope the best. I doubt not my returne. I shall doe well. Let not your griese bereaue Your eyes of feeing those comforts when they turne.

This is followed up with a wholly new passage:-

Cleop. Well, worthy fonne, and worthely the fonne
Of fuch a father. And in this thou shewst
From whence thou camst; I say no more: be gone,
Grow in thy virtue, as in yeares thou growst.

Exerent.

Cleopatra Solus.

Poore comforts can they giue, whom our diftreffe Makes miferable, and like comfortleffe.

Alas, fuch forced cheering from our owne, Vpon our griefes doe more affliction lay. To thinke, that by our meanes they are vndone. On whom we fought our glory to conuay. Well then, here is a fad daies work begun: For first, betweene these armes, my Antony Expir'd this day: and whilft I did vphold His struggling limmes in his last extasie The yet vnclofed wound, which his owne fword Had made before, burst out, imbru'd my wombe, And here with these faire collours of my Lord Which now I weare, I come from out a tombe, To fend away this deerest part of me Vnto distresse, and now whilst time I have, I goe t'interre my spouse : So shall I fee My sonne dispatcht for death, my loue t'his graue.

Exit.

Succeeding this is 'Scena II.,' which is entirely new, as thus -

Octavius. Dircetus. Gallus. Proculeius.

What newes brings now Directus from our foe, Will Antony yet ftruggle beeing vndone?

Dir. Noe, Cæfar, he will neuer vexe thee more:
His worke is ended. Anthony hath done.
Here is the fword that hath cut off the knot
Of his intangled fortunes, and hath freed
His grieued life from his dishonor'd blot.

Oct. Who is the man that did effect this deed?

Dir. His owne hand, and this fword hath done the deed.

Oct. Relate Dircetus of the manner how.

Dir. My Lord when Anthony had made this last
And desperate triall of his fortunes, and
With all the forces which he had amast
From out each coast and corner of the Land,
Had brought them to their worke, perceiuing how
His ship in stead of blowes shooke hands with yours,
And that his powers by land were vanquisht now,
Backe to the citty he with griefe retires,
Confounded with his fortunes, crying out
That Cleopatra had betraid his trust.

She all amaz'd, and fearing left he mought
In this conceipt to farther rages burft,
Hastes to the tombe which shee erected had
(A stately vault to Isis temple ioynd)
And thence caus'd word be sent how she was dead,
And had dispatcht her selfe, through griese of minde.

Which whe Antonius heard, he straight burst forth Into this passion: what? and hast thou then Preuented me, braue Queene by thy great worth? Hath Cleopatra taught the worke of men? Hath shee outgone me in the greatest part Of resolution, to die worthely? And must I follow? doth shee disapoint Me, of th'example to teach her to die?

Come Eros, doe this feruice for thy Lord,
The best and greatest pleasure thou canst doe:
Imploy this weapon here; come, make this sword
That wone me glory, Eros, this:
For these drie deaths are womanish and base.
It is for an vnsinewed seeblenesse
T'expire in feathers, and t'attend disgrace.
Ther's nothing easier Eros then to die,
For when men cannot stand, thus they may slie.

Eros, his late infranchif'd feruant takes The fword, as if he would have done the deed, And on it falles himselfe: and thereby makes Antonius more confus'd to see him bleed, Who should have first evented out his breath: O Eros, faid he, and hath Fortune quite Forfaken me? must I b'outgone in all? What? can I not by loofing get a right? Shall I not have the vpper hand to fall In death? must both a woman, and a slaue The start before me of this glory haue? With this he takes his fword, and down he falls Vpon the difmall point, which makes a gate Spacious enough for Death, but that the walles Of Nature, skornd to let it in thereat. And he furuiues his death. Which when his loue, His royall Cleopatra understood. Shee fends with speed his body to remoue, The body of her loue imbru'd with bloud.

Which brought vnto her tombe, (left that the prease Which came with him, might violate her vow)
She drawes him vp in rowles of taffatie
T'a window at the top, which did allow
A little light vnto her monument.

There Charimon, and poore Eras, two weake maids Foretir'd with watching, and their miftreffe care, Tug'd at the pulley, hauing n'other ayds, And vp they hoife the fwounding body there Of pale Antonius, showring out his bloud On th'vnder lookers, which there gazing stood.

And when they had now wrought him vp half way (Their feeble powers vnable more to doe) The frame stood still, the body at a stay, When Cleopatra all her strength thereto Puts, with what vigor loue and care could vie, So that it mooues againe, and then againe It comes to stay. When shee afresh renewes Her hold, and with r'inforced power doth straine, And all the weight of her weake bodie laies, Whose furcharg'd heart more then her body wayes. At length shee wrought him vp, and takes him in, Laies his vet breathing body on her bed. Applies all meanes his fences to rewinne, Stops vp his wound againe that freshly bled, Calles him her Lord, her fpouse, her Emperor, Forgets her owne distresse, to comfort his, And interpoints each comfort with a kiffe.

He after fome small rest and cherishing Raises himselfe, and frames a forced cheere, Wils Cleopatra leave her languishing, And like herselfe these accidents to beare, Considering they had had so full a part Of glory in this world; and that the turne Of Change was come, and Fortune would depart. 'Twas now in vaine for her to stand and mourne: But rather ought she seeke her race to free, By all the meanes (her honor sau'd) shee can; And none about Octavius trust, said he, But Proculeius; he's an honest man.

And for myselfe, suffize I have not fail'd In any acte of worth: and now in this,

A Roman hath but here a Roman quayld, And onely but by Fortune's variouines. And yet herein I may this glory take, That he who me vndoes, my fword did make. This faid, he calles for wine, which he requires Perhaps not for his thirst, but t'end his breath:

Which having taken, forthwith he expires: And thus have I declar'd Antonius death.

Octa. I grieue to heare this much. And I protest By all the gods, I am no cause of this: He fought his ruine, wrought his owne vnrest: And here these letters are my witnesses, How oft I labourd to recall him home, And woo'd his friendship, su'd to him for loue: And how he still contemnd me, skorned Rome, Your felues my fellow cittizens can proue.

But Gallus you, and Proculeius hafte With speed vnto the cittie to preuent Lest Cleopatra desperat now at last, Bereaue vs of the onely ornament, Which is herfelfe, that can our triumphs grace. Or fire the treasure which shee hath amast Within that vault, of all the precious stuffe That Egypt yieldes, and disappoint at last Our trauels of the benefit thereof. Supple her heart with hopes of kind reliefe, Giue words of oyle, vnto her wounds of griefe.

ll. 197-257 (Chorus) follow, with two misprints-1. 205, 'must' for 'most,' which is repeated in 4to of 1623, and l. 252, 'graue' for 'gaue.'

The next Act ('Actus ii. Scena I.') is the first Scene of the original and other editions named, but following the later not '94 text. It is headed-

> 'Cleopatra. Charmion. Eras.

These various readings may be noted, leaving the reader to compare them with our text (ll. 1 onward) :--

l. I, 'can breath.'

1. 15, 'and the Champion of my pride.'

ll. 20-24 omitted.

1. 41, 'The.'

1. 42, 'other.'

1. 52, 'extreamities.'

10 NOTE.

After 1. 54 the following speeches are inserted-

Char. Come Eras, shall we goe and interrupt
With some perswading words, this streame of mone?

Eras, No Charmion, stay, the current that is stopt
Will but swell vp the more: let her alone.
Time hath not brought this hot disease of griese,
T'a Crisis fit to take a medicine yet;
'Tis out of season to apply reliese,
To forrows late begun, and in the fit,
Calamitie is stubborne in the prime
Of new afflictions; we must give it time.

11. 55-66 are omitted; but Cleopatra resumes at 1. 67-

'Shall Rome behold my scepter-bearing hand, etc.'

These variations are again noted-

I. 69, 'Shall I passe by.'

11. 83-98 omitted.

1. 105, 'And my luxuriousnes should end the date.'

1. 109, 'Why should I not but make.'

1. 110, 'mine.'

1. 111, 'And leaue ingrau'd.'

After 1. 115 Charmion resumes—

Deare madam, do not thus afflict your heart,
No doubt you may worke out a meane to liue,
And hold your state, and haue as great a part
In Casars grace, as Anthony could give:
He that in this fort doth follicit you,
And treats by all the gentle meanes he can,
Why should you doubt that he should prove vntrue,
Or thinke him so disnatured a man,
To wrong your royall trust or dignity?

Cleopatra replies-

'Charmion, because that now I am not I,
My fortune, with my beauty, and my youth,
Hath left me vnto misery and thrall,
And Casar cares not now by wayes of truth,
But cunning, to get honor by my fall.'

The interview-dialogue is continued-

- Ch. You know not Cafars dealing till you try.
- Cle. To try, were to be loft, and then difcry.
- Ch. You to Antonius did commit yourselfe, And why might not Antonius so have done?
- Cl. I woone Antonius, Cafar hath me woone.
- Er. But madame, you might have articuled With Cafar, when by Thyrius he of late Did offer you fo kindly as he did, Vpon conditions to have held your flate.
- Cl. 'Tis true, I know I might have held my state, If I would then have Anthony betraid.
- Er. And why not now, fince Anthony is dead,
 And that Octavius hath the end he fought,
 May not you have what then was offered?
 On fairer tearmes, if things were fitly wrought
 And that you would not teach how to deny,
 By doubting him, or asking fearefully.
- Cleop. Fearefully? Eras peace, I skorne to seare;
 Who now am got out of the reach of wrath,
 Aboue the power of pride. What should I seare
 The might of men, that aim at one with death?
 Speake ye no more to me I charge you here.
 What? will you two who still haue tooke my part
 In all my fortunes, now conspire with seare
 To make me mutinie against my heart?

Then at 1. 115 our text is returned to, with these various readings:

- l. 115, 'No.'
- I. 116, 'That t'was my weakenes that hath.'
- 1. 118 is followed by these new lines-
 - 'My constancy shall vndeceiue their mindes, And I will bring the witnesse of my blood To testifie my fortitude, that binds My equall loue, to fall with him I stood' (cf. ll. 123-6).

Il. 119-20 (see in the place in our text).

1. 121, 'And my condemnd.'

After l. 126 is this couplet-

' Defects I grant I had, but this was worst That beeing the first to fall, I di'd not first.'

After 1. 138 is this-

And I confesse me bound to sacrifice To death and thee the life that doth reproue me.

Il. 139-148 omitted.

l. 150, 'now.'

II. 151-8 omitted.

1. 159, 'When heretofore my vaine.'

1. 165, 'When thou bred in.'
1. 166, 'The ryotous pompe of Monarches neuer learnedft.'

Our 'Act ii., Scene I., ' forms 'Scena II.' of 'Act 2,' commencing with I. 260; but Gallus is added as an interlocutor. These various readings again are noted-

1. 267 inadvertently drops 'keepes the.'

ll. 280-1, '. . . tell me what y'haue done.

Will yet this womans stubborne heart be wonne?'

After 1. 281 the speech varies-

My Lord, we have all gentle meanes impli'd (=employ'd) According to th'instructions which you gaue, And hope in time shee will be pacified And these are all the likelihoods we have, First when we came into her arched vault. I Gallus fent to entertaine the time Below with her, confering at a grate, Whilst I found meanes vp to the top to clime: He there perfwaded her to leaue that place, And come to Cafar, and to fue for grace.

It will be observed the last is our l. 289; and so on to L 293.

Il. 294-7 omitted.

1. 298, 'I now descending.'

1, 301, 'forc'd.'

1. 302, 'raught.'

1. 306, 'fhould you.'

l. 307, 'your.'

1, 328, 'As words of rule.'

1. 339, 'that.'

1. 340, 'thus must seeke to.'

1. 341, 'On th'wofull . . . wretched.'

1. 352, 'th'woefull.'

1. 353, 'A mixed.'

1. 365, 'your.'

1. 366, 'And wight.'

1. 370, 'Wherewith at last shee seem'd.'

1. 371, 'And gaue great shewes to be.'

1. 372, 'And faw . . . your.'

1. 374, 'wherewithall.'

Il. 375-7- Some obsequies vnto the coarse

Of her dead loue, according to her rite

And in the meane time might be free from force.'

1. 379, 'well in reft.'

1. 380, ' Oct. But doe you.'

II. 382-3— 'Ah private thoughts, aime wide from princes hearts, Whose state allows them not t'act their owne parts.'

1. 385, 'die,' as in 1.

1. 386, 'She may by yielding work.'

1. 396, 'feare sh'will not.'

Il. 400-I—' And well observe with whom shee doth, And shortly will myselfe.'

There succeeds then the Chorus (ll. 773 onward), but it opens-

'Sterne and imperious Nemefis';

and l. 808, 'naught' for 'nought.' Act III. answers to ours substantially I note these various readings—

1. 474 has added '2. Philosophers.'

1. 484, 'And that we liue in.'

1. 501, 'For when this ship of life pale terror boords.'

1. 509, 'Wherein I my profession.'

1. 513, 'No priuiledge Philosophy doth giue.'

1. 519, 'For neuer age could better testifie.'

· Il. 521-2— 'How foone improvident prosperitie Comes caught, and ruin'd.'

1. 540, ' would.'

Il. 541-2— S'ingulph this state in th'end, that no deuice Our vtter ouerwhelming could withhold.'

1. 544, 'Of mighty lands.'

1. 560, 'our loofe felicitie.'

1. 561, 'doth' (bad).

1. 562, 'confusd with miserie.'

ll. 577-8—' T'extinguish thus the race of Antony
And Cleopatra, to confirme his owne.'

I. 579, 'their issue be extinguished?'

After 1. 579 comes this-

Ar. It must: Antillus is already dead.

Th. And what? Cafario sprung of Cafars bloud?

1. 586, 'Men feeke to quench.'

11, 589-92- They thinke his death will farther tumults cease : Competitors are fubiects miseries, And to the end to purchase publike peace, Great men are . . .'

I. 595, 'emptie.'
I. 597, 'Though I thinke Rome shall neuer.'

1. 603, 'Or thinke you, your.'

1. 604, 'As.'

607, 'm'oppressed soule.'
 608, 'Likes.'

1. 609, 'in.'

1, 611, 'I thought not euer Roman.'

1. 612, 'diftreffed.'

1. 614, 'A capture.'

1. 617, 'madame rife your felfe was.'

1. 618, 'your,' and so 1. 619.

ll. 621-4, 'For you diffolu'd that . . .

Which makes my winning ioy a gaine vnto Who cannot now looke out . . . But through the horror.'

I. 625, 'you.'

And so to the close in trivial changes, but which in noting it seems inexpedient to record further, except a few put in their places in our text from this point. Act III. closes with our Chorus (Il. 402-72). Act IV. is also our Act IV. A few various readings are given in the places in our text, not mere trivialities. After l. 1097 forward to l. 1430 is omitted, and thus reading-

> ' Come Diomedes, thou who haft bin one In all my fortunes, and art still all one; Whom the amazing ruine of my fall, Neuer deterd to leave calamitie, As did, etc.'

After 1. 1456 there are these new passages-

Diom. I who am fworne of the focietie Of death, and haue indur'd the worst of ill. Prepar'd for all euents, must not deny What you comand me, come there what there will. NOTE.

15

And I shall vie the aptest skill I may To cloake my worke, and long I will not ftay. Cleop. But having leave I must goe take my leave, And last farewell of my dead Antony, Whose dearely honord tombe must here receive This facrifice, the last before I die. Then the scene goes back to l. 1102, being headed—

'Cleopatra at the tombe of Antonius.'

See in the place in our text various readings. After l. 1191 comes this new speech-

Eras. Good madame, if that worthy heart you beare Doe hold it fit, it were a finne in vs To contradict your will; but yet we feare The world will cenfure that your doing thus, Did iffue rather out of your despaire Then refolution, and thereby you loofe Much of your glory, which would be more faire In fuffring, then escaping thus your foes. For when Pandora b[r]ought the boxe from heaven Of all the good and ill that men befall, And them immixt vnto the world had given, Hope in the bottom lay, quite vnder all. To shew that we must still vnto the last Attend our fortune; for no doubt there may Euen at the bottom of afflictions past Be found some happier turne if we but stay. Cl. Eras, that hope is honors enemie,

A traytor vnto worth, lies on the ground, In the base bottom of seruilitie: The beggars wealth, a treasure never found, The dreame of them that wake, a ghost of th'aire, That leads men out of knowledge to their graues, A spirit of groffer substance then despaire; And let them, Eras hope, that can be flaues . . . !

Then takes up at l. 1191, which see for various readings in our text the place. After I. 1199 comes in 4 'Scena iii,' opening thus new-

> Cefario, with a Guard conveying him to Execution.

Now gentle Guard, let me in curtesie Rest me a little here, and ease my bands. You shall not need to hold me, for your eye May now as well secure you, as your hands.

Gu. Doe, take your ease Cesario, but not long, We have a charge, which we must needs performe.

Cef. Loe here brought backe, by fubtile traine to death,
Betraid by Tutors faith, or traitors rather,
My fault my blood, and mine offence my birth;
For beeing the fonne of fuch a mighty father,
I now am made th'oblation for his feares
Who doubts the poore reuenge those hands may doe him,
Respecting neither blood, nor youth, nor yeares,
Or how small safetie can my death be to him.

And is this, etc.—
taking now up from 1. 1000, which place in our text see for various readings.

After 1. 1052 the scene thus concludes-

But yet Cefario, thou must die content,
God will reuenge, and men bewaile the innocent.
Well now along; I rested haue ynow,
Performe the charge, my frieds, you haue to doe.

Exeunt.

Then follows the 'Chorus,' ll. 1200—1270. Act V. is same as our Act V. See various readings in our text in the places. After l. 1328 are these lines—

'And what my power and praiers may preuaile, Ile ioyne them both, to hinder thy difgrace: And euen this prefent day, I will not faile To do my best with Cafar in this case.'

ll. 1329-48 omitted in ! Scene II. thus opens in 4-

Cleopatra. Eras. Charmion. Diomedes. The Guard, and Cafars messengers.

Now Eras, come, what newes hast thou lookt out, Is Diomedes comming yet or not?

Eras. Madame, I have from off the turret top, View'd euery way, he is not comming yet.

Cl. Didft thou fee no man tending hitherward?

Er. None truly madame, but one countriman Carrying a basket as I could discerne. Cle. Alas then Eras I doe feare th'euent
Of my defigne. For fure he would not ftay
Thus long I know, did not fome force preuent
His forward faith, and hold him by the way.

Char. Madame, there may be many hindrances
To counterchecke and interupt his fpeed.
He hath a wary worke to doe in this,
He must take time.

Cl. Charmion tis true indeed: And yet in all this time me thinkes he might Effected haue his worke, had all gone right.

Er. Alas we euer thinke the stay is more, When our desire is run t'our wish before.

Cle. Eras I know my will to haue it done,
Rides post, and feare in doing to b'vndone,
Puts spurs thereto: whilst that for which we long
Creepes but a soote. Yet sure he staies too long.
Good Eras goe and looke out once againe—
Yet stay awhile, I know it is in vaine.
O gods, I craue no other fortune I
Of heauen and you, but onely lucke to die.
And shall I not haue that? Well I will yet
Write my dispatch to Cesar, and when that
Is done, I will dispatch my selfe; what way
So euer, I must vse no more delay.

Enter the Guard with Diomedes,

Gua. And whither now fir, stay, what have you there?

Diom. Good firs, I have a simple present here,

Which I would faine deliver to our queene.

Gu. What ift? lets fee.

Diom.

And please you firs it is
Onely a few choyce figs which I have growne
In mine owne garden, and are sonest ripe
Of any here about; and every yeare
I vie to bring a few vnto our queene.
And pray my masters take a taste of them
For I assure you they are very good.

Gua. No, no, my friend, goe on, and beare them in.

Cl. Now Eras looke if he be comming yet.—
See here he comes. This is that countriman
Which Eras thou discrid'st: O happy man.

Can fuch poore robes beguile a Princes power?
Why then I fee, it is our outfides most Doe mocke the world. But tell me are they here?
Speake Diomedes.

Diod. Madame, they are there.

Cl. O good ill-lucke, most fortunate distresse,

Deare Diomedes, thou hast bless me now:

And here, goe take these letters, and dismaske

Thyselse againe, returne to thine owne shape

Good Diomedes, and giue Cesar these.

Goe, leaue me here alone, I need no more:

I have but these to keepe a death in store.

I will not use their helpe till needes I must,

(And that is now) goe Diomedes goe.

Diom. Good madame, I know well this furniture
Of death, is farre more requifite, then that
Of life, where fuch as you cannot endure
To lie beneath your felues, debaf'd in state.
I goe t'effect your will as well in this
As I have done in that, and onely pray
Our tutelarie gods to give successe
Vnto the same, and be it what it may.

Cl. Come fweet heart, etc.

Then takes up from l. 1509 onward. See our text for various readings. After l. 1626 comes this:—

Eras. Come Charmion, come, wee must not onely be Spectators in this Scene, but Actors too.

Now comes our part; you know we did agree The fellowship of death to under goe,
And though our meaner fortunes cannot claime A glory by this acte, they shall have fame.

Ch. Eras I am prepar'd, and here is that Will doe the deed.

Er. And here is of the same.

Cl. But Eras Ile begin, it is my place.

Er. Nay Charmion, here I drinke a death to thee; I must be first.

Ch. Indeed thou hast preuented me;
Yet will I have this honor to be last
Which shall adorne this head, which must be seene

To weare that crowne in death, her life held faft; That all the world may fee shee di'd a queene. O fee this face, etc., returning to 1. 1639 from 1662. After 1. 1645 the close runs—

Ces. mess. See, we are come too late, this is dispatcht:

Ces/ar is disappointed of this grace.—

Why how now Charmion, what? is this well done?

Ch. Yea very well; and shee that from the race Of so great kings descends doth best become.

Our 'Chorus' (ll. 1687-1771) also concludes !

I am not aware that these remarkable 'alterings' of this tragedy of 'Cleopatra' have been before noted; and certainly it is singular that John Daniel should have ignored the text of 1607, especially as it was repeated in 1609 and 1611 (both). Unquestionably some of the finest work of Daniel has thus been lost hitherto to literature.

My signs for the various readings placed below each page are these-

1594 = '.

1599
1601
1602
= our text of '23. = 3—only a few from 1599, 1602, and 1605.
1607
1609
1611 (two)
1623 = our text (substantially).

On this 'Tragedie of Cleopatra' see our 'Memorial-Introduction II.— Critical.' I have collated all the above editions in exemplars in the British Museum and the Bodleian. On other side is the title-page of 1623.

A. B. G.

the factor which the bullet by proposition of the party size for $1.

THE

TRAGEDIE

OF CLEOPATRA.

Aetas prima canat veneres postrema tumultus.

LONDON,

Printed by Nicholas Okes, for Simon Waterson. 1623.

* The Scæne supposed Alexandria.

THE ACTORS.

Cleopatra. Octauius Cæfar.
Proculeius. Dolabella.
Titius, feruant to Dolabella.
Arius,
Philoftratus,
two Philofophers.
Philoftratus,
Seleucus, fecretarie to Cleopatra.
Rodon, Tutor to Cæfario.
Nuntius.
The Chorus, all Egyptians.

* In 1 after the 'Argument.'

To the right honourable, the Lady Mary, Counteffe of PEMBROOKE.

[Muse:

II vse:

scame, Strength to my thoughts, from whence these motions Call'd vp my spirits from out their low repose, To fing of State, and tragicke notes to frame.

I, who (contented with an humble fong,) Made musique to my selfe that pleased me best, IO And onely told of DELIA, and her wrong, And praised her eyes, and plaind mine owne vnrest: (A text from whence my Muse had not digrest)

1. I, 'worke the' 1, 2: 1. 2, 'Who onely doth' 1, 2: 1. 3, 'which my labours'1, 2: 1. 4, 'way in all'1, 2: 1. 5, 'doth alone' 1, 2: 1. 6, 'and makes me what I am' 1, 2.

Madam, had not thy well grac'd Antony; (Who all alone, having remained long,) Requir'd his Cleopatras company.

Who if she here doe so appeare in Act,
That he can scarce discerne her for his Queene,
Finding how much she of her selfe hath lackt,
And miss'd that grace wherein she should be seene,
Her worth obscur'd, her spirit embased cleene;
Yet lightning thou by thy sweete chearefulnes,
My darke desects, which from her powres detract,
He may her gesse by some resemblances.

And I hereafter in another kinde,
More futing to the nature of my vaine,
May peraduenture raife my humble minde
To other mufique in this higher straine;
Since I perceiue the world and thou dost daigne
To countenance my Song, and cherish me,
I must so worke Posteritie may finde,
My loue to verse, my gratitude to thee.

30

Now when so many Pennes (like Speares) are charg'd, To chase away this tyrant of the North; Grosse Barbarisme, whose powre grown far inlarg'd Was lately by thy valiant brothers worth

1. 14, 'Anthony' 1: 1. 17, MS. 'Fact' 1, 2: 1. 18, 'for his Queene and Loue he fcarce will know her' 1, 2: 1. 20, 'I should shew her' 1, 2: 1. 21, 'In maiestie debas'd, in courage lower' 1, 2: 1. 22, 'fauouring eyes' 1, 2: 1. 23, 'sp'rit' 1, 2: 1. 24, 'yet may gesse it's shee; which will suffise' 1, 2: 1. 27, 'better please thy' 1, 2: 1. 28, 'And higher notes in sweeter musiquestraine' 1, 2: 1. 29, 'seeing that thou so graciously doost daine' 1, 2: 1. 32, 'How much I did contend to honour thee' 1, 2: 1. 36, 'thy' 1, 2, for 'the' of our text accepted.

First found, encountred, and prouoked forth: Whose onset made the rest audacious, Whereby they likewise haue so well discharg'd Vpon that hideous Beast incroching thus.

40

And now must I with that poore strength I haue, Resist so soule a soe in what I may:
And arme against Obliuion and the Graue,
That else in darkenesse carries all away,
And makes of all an universall pray;
So that if by my Penne procure I shall
But to defend me, and my name to saue,
Then though I die, I cannot yet die all;

But still the better part of me will liue,
And in that part will liue thy reuerent name,
Although thy selfe dost farre more glory giue
Vnto thy selfe, then I can by the same.
Who dost with thine owne hand a bulwark frame
Against these monsters, (enemies of honour)
Which euermore shall so defend thy Fame,
As Time, or they shall neuer prey vpon her.

Those Hymnes which thou dost consecrate to heaven, Which Israels Singer to his God did frame:
Vnto thy voyce Eternitie hath given,
And makes thee deare to him from whence they came.
In them must rest thy venerable name,
So long as Sions God remaineth honoured;

^{1. 40,} cap. 'B' accepted from ', 2: 1. 45, 'our honours but a' 1: 1. 50, 'Deckt and adorned with thy facred' 1, 2: 1. 56, 'nor' 1, 2: 1. 61, 'euer reuerent' 1, 2.

And till confusion hath all zeale bereauen, And murthered Faith, and Temples ruined.

By this (great Lady) thou must then be knowne, When Wilton lies low leuell'd with the ground: And this is that which thou maist call thine owne, Which sacrilegious Time cannot confound; Heere thou suruiu'st thy selfe, heere thou art sound Of late succeeding ages, fresh in same: This monument cannot be ouerthrowne, Where, in eternall Brasse remaines thy Name.

O that the Ocean did not bound our stile
Within these strict and narrow limites so:
But that the melodie of our sweete Ile,
Might now be heard to Tyber, Arne, and Po:
That they might know how far Thames doth out-go
The Musike of declined Italy:
And listning to our Songs another while,
Might learne of thee, their notes to purishe.

O why may not fome after-comming hand Vnlocke these limites, open our confines, And breake asunder this imprisoning band, T'inlarge our spirits, and publish our designes; Planting our Roses on the Apenines? And teach to Rheyne, to Loyre, and Rhodanus. Our accents, and the wonders of our Land, That they might all admire and honour vs.

Whereby great Sydney and our Spencer might, With those Po-singers being equalled,

1, 86, 'teach to' 1, 2, accepted from s for 'to teach' of our text.

90

70

Enchaunt the world with fuch a fweet delight, That their eternall Songs (for euer read)
May fhew what great Elizaes raigne hath bred.
What muficke in the kingdome of her peace
Hath now beene made to her, and by her might,
Whereby her glorious fame shall neuer cease.

But if that Fortune doth denie vs this,
Then Neptune, locke vp with the Ocean key
This treasure to our selues, and let them misse
Of so sweet riches: as vnworthy they
To tast the great delights that we inioy.
And let our harmony so pleasing growne,
Content our selues, whose errour euer is Strange notes to like, and disesteeme our owne.

100

But, whither doe my vowes transport me now, Without the compasse of my course enioynd? Alas, what honour can a voyce so low As this of mine, expect hereby to find? But, (Madam,) this doth animate my mind, That yet I shall be read among the rest, And though I doe not to perfection grow, Yet something shall I be, though not the best.

IIO

1. 94-6-

'That fauored by the Worthies of our Land,
My lynes are lik'd; the which may make me grow,
In time to take a greater taske in hand' 1, 2.

1. 97, cap. 'F' from 1, 2, accepted.

The Argument.

Fter the death of Antonius, Cleopatra, (liuing still in the Monument shee had caused to be built,) could not, by any meanes be drawne foorth, although Octavius Casar very earnestly laboured it: and sent Proculeius, to vse all diligence to bring her vnto him: for that hee thought it would be a great Ornament to his Triumphes, to get her aliue to Rome. But neuer would shee put her selfe into the hands of 10 Proculeius, although on a time he found the means, (by a window that was at the toppe of the Monument,) to come down vnto her: where he perswaded her (all he might) to yeeld her selfe to Casars mercy. Which she, (to be ridde of him,) cunningly seemed to grant vnto. After that, Octavius in person went to visite her, to whom she excused her offence, laying all the fault vpon the greatnes, and feare she had, of Antonius, and withall, seemed very tractable, and willing to be disposed of by him.

Whereupon Octavius, (thinking himfelfe fure) refolued

Misprinted 't' in our text.

presently to send her away to Rome: Whereof, Dolabella, a fauorite of Cæfars, (and one that was growne into fome good liking of her) having certified her, shee makes her humble petition to Cafar, that he would fuffer her to facrifice to the ghost of Antonius: which being granted her, she was brought vnto his sepulchre, where, after her rites performed, she returned to the Monument, and there dined with great magnificence. And in dinner time, came there one in the habite of a 30 countrey man, with a basket of Figs vnto her, who (unsuspected) was suffered to carry them in. And in that basket (among the Figs) were conueyed the Aspickes wherewith she did her selfe to death. being ended, she dispatched Letters to Cafar, contayning great lamentations, with an earnest supplication, that she might be intombed with Antonius. vpon Cafar knowing what she intended, sent presently with all speed, Messengers to have prevented her death; which notwithstanding, before they came, was dis-40 patched.

Cæsario her sonne, which she had by Iulius Cæsar (conueyed before vnto India, out of the danger of the warres) was about the same time of her death, murthered at Rhodes: trained thither by the falsehood of his Tutor, corrupted by Cæfar. And fo, hereby came the race of the Ptolomies to be wholly extinct, and the flourishing rich Kingdome of Egypt vtterly ouerthrowne and fubdued.

49

THE TRAGEDIE

Of CLEOPATRA.

ACTVS PRIMVS.

Cleopatra.

ET doe I liue, and yet doth breath extend [graue
My life beyond my life? nor can my Shut vp my griefes, to make my end
my end? [I haue?
Will yet confusion haue more then
Is th'honor, wonder, glory, pompe, and all

IO

Of Cleopatra dead, and she not dead?
Haue I out-liu'd my selfe, and seene the fall
Of all vpon me, and not ruined?
Can yet these eyes endure the ghastly looke
Of Desolations darke and ougly face,

I. I, 'possesse' 1.

Wont but on Fortunes faireft fide to looke, Where nought vvas but applause, but smiles, and grace?

Whiles on his shoulders all my rest relide,
On whom the burthen of m'ambition lay,
My Atlas, and supporter of my pride,
That did the world of all my glory sway,
Who now throwne downe, disgrac'd, confounded lies
Crusht vvith the weight of Shame and Insamy,

1. 15, addition here from 4-

'poffesse.

This hatefull prison of a loathsome soule:
Can no calamitie, nor no distresse.
Breake hart and all, and end a life so soule?
Can Cleopatra liue, and with these eyes
Behold the deerest of her life berest her?
Ah, can shee entertaine the least surmise
Of any hope, that hath but horror lest her?
Why should I linger longer grieses to try?
These eyes that sawe what honor earth could give mee,
Doe now behold the worst of misery:
The greatest wrack wherto Fortune could drive mee.
Hee on whose shoulders all my rest relyde,
On whom the burthen of my'ambition lay:
The Atlas and the Champion of my pride,'

1. 16, 'my whole fortune' 1: 1. 17, addition here—

'Lyes falne, confounded, dead in shame and dolors,
Following th'vnlucky party of my loue.

Th'Ensigne of mine eyes, th'vnhappy collours,
That him to mischiese, mee to ruine droue.

And now the modell made of misery,
Scorne to the world, borne but for Fortunes soile,
My lusts haue fram'd a Tombe for mee to lie,
Euen in the ashes of my Countries spoyle.

Ah, who would think that I were shee who late,
Clad with the glory of the worlds chiefe ritches,
Admir'd of all the earth, and wondred at,
Glittring in pompe that hart and eye bewitches.'

20

Following th'vnlucky party of mine eyes,
The traines of lust and imbecility,
Whereby my dissolution is become
The graue of Egypt, and the wracke of all;
My vnforeseeing weakenesse must intoome
My Countries same and glory with my fall.

Now who vould thinke that I were she vvho late With all the ornaments on earth inrich'd, Enuiron'd vvith delights, compast with state, Glittering in pomp that hearts and eyes bewitch'd; Should thus distrest, cast down from off that height Leuell'd vvith low disgrac'd calamity, 30 Vnder the weight of such affliction sigh, Reduc'd vnto th'extreamest misery?

Am I the woman whose inventive pride,
Adorn'd like Isis, scorn'd mortality?
Is't I would have my frailety so belide,
That flattery could perswade I vvas not I?
Well, now I see, they but delude that praise vs,
Greatnesse is mockt, prosperity betrayes vs.
And vve are but our selves, although this cloud
Of interposed smoake make vs seeme more:

40
These spreading parts of pomp wherof w'are proud
Are not our parts, but parts of others store:
Witnesse these gallant fortune-following traines,
These Summer Swallowes of selicity

1. 34, (Adorn'd . . . Isis) 1: 1. 35, 'that left my sence so without guide' 1: 1. 36, 'would not let him know twas' 1: 1. 37, 'Ah . . . scarce tell truth' 1: 1. 38, 'Crownes are beguild' 1: 1. 40, 'smoake' accepted from sor 'smoakes' of other texts: 11. 43-6—

'What is become of all that statelie traine, Those troopes that wont attend prosperitie?

3

Gone with the heate: of all, fee what remaines, This monument, two maydes, and vvretched I. And I, t'adorne their triumphs am reseru'd A captive, kept to honour others spoyles, Whom Cæfar labours fo to have preferu'd. And feekes to entertaine my life vvith wiles. 50 But Cafar, it is more then thou canst do. Promise, flatter, threaten extreamity, Imploy thy wits and all thy force thereto. I have both hands, and vvill, and I can die. Though thou, of both my country and my crowne, Of powre, of meanes and all dost quite bereaue me; Though thou hast wholy Egypt made thine owne, Yet hast thou left me that which will deceive thee. That courage with my blood and birth innated, Admir'd of all the earth, as thou art now: 60 Can neuer be so abjectly abated To be thy flaue, that rul'd as good as thou. Thinke Cafar, I that liu'd and raign'd a Queene, Do scorne to buy my life at such a rate. That I should vnderneath my selfe be seene, Basely induring to survive my state: That Rome should see my scepter-bearing hands Behind me bound, and glory in my teares;

'See what is left, what number doth remaine, A tombe, two maydes, and miferable I?'

1. 48, 'beautifie their': l. 51, 'No Cafar no, it is not thou canst doe it': l. 53, 'vnto it': l. 55, 'of Country, kingdom': l. 56, 'Though thou of all my glory dost': l. 57, 'all my . . . as': l. 61, 'Cannot by threates be vulgarly': l. 63, 'Consider . . that I am': ll. 64-6—

'And scorne the basenes of a seruile thought:
The world and thou, dost know what I have beene,
And neuer thinke I can be so low brought.'

70

80

90

That I should passe whereas Octavia stands,
To view my misery, that purchas'd hers.
No, I distaine that head vehich wore a crowne,
Should stoope to take vp that which others give;
I must not be, enlesse I be mine owne,
Tis sweet to die vehen we are forc'd to live.
Nor had I stayd behind my selfe this space,
Nor payd such int'rest for this borrow'd breath,
But that hereby I seeke to purchase grace
For my distressed seede after my death.
It's that vehich doth my dearest blood controuse,
That's it alas detaines me from my tombe,
Whiles Nature brings to contradict my soule
The argument of mine enhappy wombe.

You lucklesse issue of an vvosull mother,
The vvretched pledges of a vvanton bed,
You Kings designed, must subjects live to other;
Or else, I feare, scarce live, vvhen I am dead.
It is for you I temporize with Casar,
And stay this vvhile to mediate your safety:
For you I faine content, and soothe his pleasure,
Calamity herein hath made me crafty.
But this is but to try what may be done,
For come what vvill, this stands, I must die free.
And die my selse vncaptiu'd, and vnwonne:
Blood, Children, Nature, all must pardon me,
My soule yeelds Honor vp the victory,

1. 71, 'that' 1: 1. 75, 'troubled now the world thus long' 1: 1. 76, 'And beene indebted ... little' 1: 1. 77, 'I feare, Cæsar would offer wrong' 1: 1. 78, 'To' 1: 1. 80, 'Tis that' 1: 1. 83, 'O ... a' 1: 1. 84, 'Th'vngodly' 1: 1. 85, 'now be slaues' 1: 1. 86, 'not bee (I feare)' 1: 1. 88, 'liue ... for to procure' 1: 1. 91, 'tis not long, Ile see' 1: 1 93, 'Ile be my selfe, my thoughts doe rest thereon' 1.

And I must be a Queene, forget a mother: Though mother vvould I be, were I not I; And Queene would not be now, could I be other. But what know I if th'heauens have decreed. And that the finnes of Egypt haue deferu'd 100 The Ptolomies should faile, and none succeed, And that my weakenes vvas thereto referu'd, That I should bring confusion to my state, And fill the measure of iniquity; Luxuriousnesse in me should raise the rate Of loofe and ill-dispensed liberty. If it be fo, then what neede these delaies? Since I was made the meanes of mifery: Why should I strive but to make death my praise, That had my life but for my infamy? IIO And let me vvrite in letters of my blood A fit memoriall for the times to come: To be example to fuch Princes good As please themselues, and care not what become. And Antony, because the world takes note That my defects have onely ruin'd thee:

1. 97, 'Yet'': 1. 98, 'I not now be, were'': 1. 105, 'Licentioufnes, end her date': 1. 106, 'Begunne in ill-dispensed libertie'': 1. 107—'If so it be, and that my heedles waies,

Haue thus so great a desolation raisd,

Yet let a glorious end conclude my dayes;

Though life were bad, my death may yet be prais'd'.

1. 111, 'That I may'': 1. 115, 'although's: addition here—
'And Anthony, because the world doth know,

That my mis-fortune hath procured thine,

And my improvidence brought thee so low, To lose thy glory, and to ruine mine:

And my ambitious practifes are thought The motiue and the cause of all to be: Though God thou know'st, how iust this staine is layd Vpon my soule, vvhom ill successe makes ill:

Yet since condemn'd missortune hath no ayde Against proud lucke that argues what it will, I haue no meanes to vndeceiue their mindes, But to bring in the witnesse of my blood, To testifie the faith and loue that bindes My equal shame, to fall vvith whom I stood. Defects I grant I had, but this vvas worst, That being the first to fall I di'd not first.

Though I perhaps could lighten mine owne fide
With fome excuse of my constrained case
I 30
Drawne down with povvre: but that were to deuide
My shame: to stand alone in my disgrace.
To cleere me so, vvould shew m'affections naught,
And make th'excuse more hainous then the fault.

By grapling in the Ocean of our pride, To finke each others greatnes both together, Both equall shipwrack of our states t'abide, And like destruction to procure to eyther: If I should now (our common faulte) surviue, Then all the world must hate mee if I doe it, Sith both our errors did occasion giue, And both our faults have brought vs both vnto it. I being first inamour'd with thy greatnes, Thou with my vanity bewitched wholy; And both betrayd with th'outward pleafant fweetnes, The one ambition spoyld, th'other folly. For which, thou haft already duly paid The statute of thy errors dearest forfeit: Wherby thy gotten credite was decayd, Procur'd thee by thy wanton deadly furfeit. And next is my turne now to facrifize.'

Il. 119-20 in 4 read-

'Though God thou knowst, this staine is wrongly laid Vpon my foule, whom' etc.

Since if I should our errours disunite, I should confound afflictions onely rest, That from sterne death euen steales a sad delight To die vvith friends or vvith the like distrest: And fince vve tooke of either fuch firme hold In th'ouerwhelming feas of fortune cast, What powre should be of powre to revnfold The armes of our affections lockt fo fast? For grapling in the Ocean of our pride, We funcke others greatnesse both together; And both made shipwracke of our fame beside, Both vyrought a like destruction vnto either: And therefore I am bound to facrifice To Death and thee, the life that doth reproue me: Our like diffresse I feele doth simpathize, And euen affliction makes me truely loue thee. 150 Which Antony, I much confesse my fault I neuer did fincerely vntill now: Now I protest I do, now am I taught In death to loue, in life that knew not how. For vihilft my glory in her greatnesse stood, And that I faw my state, and knew my beauty; Saw how the vvorld admir'd me, how they woo'd, I then thought all men must loue me of duety, And I loue none: for my lasciulous Court, Fertile in euer fresh and new-choyse pleasure, 160 Affoorded me fo bountifull disport, That I to ftay on Loue had neuer leifure: My vagabond defires no limites found, For luft is endlesse, pleasure hath no bound.

l. 148, cap. 'D' accepted from 1: l. 151, 'I . . . fault' within () in 1: l. 162, 'think' 1.

Thou comming from the strictnesse of thy City, And neuer this loose pomp of monarchs learnest, Inur'd to vvarres, in womens vviles vnwitty, Whilst others faind, thou fell'st to loue in earnest; Not knowing how vve like them best that houer, And make least reckoning of a doting louer.

And yet thou cam'ft but in my beauties vvaine, When nevy appearing vyrinckles of declining Wrought with the hand of yeares, feem'd to detaine My graces light, as now but dimly shining, Euen in the confines of mine age, vvhen I Failing of vvhat I was, and vvas but thus: When fuch as we do deeme in jealoufie That men loue for themselues, and not for vs; Then, and but thus, thou didst loue most fincerely, O Antony, that best deseru's dist it better, 180 This Autumne of my beauty bought fo dearely. For which in more then death, I stand thy debter. Which I will pay thee with fo true a minde, (Casting vp all these deepe accompts of mine) That both our foules, and all the world shall find All reckoning cleer'd, betwixt my loue and thine.

But to the [end] I may preuent proud Cafar,
Who doth so eagerly my life importune,
I must preuaile me of this little leasure,
Seeming to sute my mind vnto my fortune;

1. 166, 'The wanton pompe of Courts yet neuer [learnedst]: 1. 167, 'womans': 1. 169, 'women': 11. 183-6—

'most faithfull zeale

'And that ere long; no Casfar shall detains me:

My death, my loue and courage shall reueale,

The which is all the world hath left t'vnstaine me'':

1. 187, 'And to the end I may deceive best''.

170

Thereby vvith more conuenience to prouide For vvhat my death and honor best shall sit: And yeelding base content must vvary hide My last dissigne till I accomplish it, That hereby yet the vvorld shall see that I, Although vnwise to liue, had vvitt to die.

Exit.

CHORVS.

B Ehold what furies still Torment their tortur'd brest,
Who by their doing ill,
Haue wrought the worlds vnrest.
Which when being most distrest,
Yet more to vexe their sprite,
The hideous face of sinne,
(In formes they most detest)
Stands ever in their sight.
Their conscience still within Theternall larum is
That ever-barking dog that calles vpon their misse.

No meanes at all to hide
Man from himfelfe can finde:
No way to ftart afide
Out from the hell of minde.
But in himfelfe confin'd,
He still see sinne before;
And wingèd-footed paine,
That swiftly comes behind,

210

1. 191, 'Whereby I may the better end': 1. 192, 'Of': 1. 193, 'A feeming': 1. 205, 'most' of' corrects 'must' of our text.

The which is ever-more,
The fure and certaine gaine
Impiety doth get,
And wanton loose respect, that doth it selfe forget.

And Cleopatra now,

Well sees the dangerous way

She tooke, and car'd not how,

Which led her to decay.

And likewise makes vs pay

For her disordred lust,

The intrest of our blood:

Or live a servile pray,

Vnder a hand vniust,

As others shall thinke good.

This hath her riot wonne:

And thus she hath her state, herselfe and vs vndone.

Now every mouth can tell,
What close was muttered:
How that she did not well,
To take the course she did.
For now is nothing hid,
Of what feare did restraine;
No secret closely done,
But now is vitered.
The text is made most plaine
That flating glos'd vpon,
The bed of sinne reveal'd,
And all the luxury that shame would have conceal'd.

The scene is broken downe And all vncou'red lyes,

The purple actors knowne
Scarce men, whom men despise.
The complots of the wise,
Proue impersections smoakt:
And all what wonder gave
To pleasure-gazing eyes,
Lyes scattred, dasht, all broke.
Thus much beguiled have
Poore vnconsiderate wights,
These momentary pleasures, fugitive delights.

ACT II.

Cæfar. Proculeius.

259

250

Ingdomes I fee we winne, vve conquer Climates,
Yet cannot vanquish hearts, nor force obedience;
Affections kept in close-concealed limits,
Stand farre without the reach of sword or violence,
Who forc'd do pay vs duty, pay not loue:
Free is the heart, the temple of the minde,
The Sanctuary sacred from aboue,
Where nature keepes the keies that loose and bind.
No mortall hand force open can that doore,
So close shut vp, and lockt to all mankind:
I see mens bodies onely ours, no more,
The rest, anothers right, that rules the minde.
Behold, my forces vanquisht haue this Land,

Behold, my forces vanquisht haue this Land, Subdu'd that strong Competitor of mine: All Egypt yeelds to my all-conqu'ring hand, And all their treasure and themselues resigne.

1. 258, 'Actvs Secondvs': our text misprinted 'iii.': 1. 267, 'and' accepted from 1: 1. 272, cap. 'L' accepted from 1.

Onely this Queene, that hath loft all this all, To whom is nothing left except a minde: Cannot into a thought of yeelding fall, To be dispos'd as Chance hath her affign'd. But Proculeius what hope doth she now give, 280 Will she be brought to condiscend to live? Pro. My Lord, what time being fent from you to try To win her forth aliue (if that I might) From out the Monument; where wofully She liues inclof'd in most afflicted plight: No way I found, no meanes how to surprize her, But through a grate at the entry of the place Standing to treate, I labour'd to aduise her, To come to Cafar, and to fue for grace. She faid, "fhe crau'd not life, but leaue to die, Yet for her children, pray'd they might inherite; That Cæsar would vouschsafe (in clemencie) To pittie them, though fhe deseru'd no merite." So leaving her for then; and fince of late, With Gallus fent to trie an other time. The whilst he entertaines her at the grate. I found the meanes vp to the Tombe to clime. Where, in descending in the closest wife, And filent manner as I could contriue; Her woman me descri'd, and out she cries. 300 Poore Cleopatra, thou art tane alive. With that the Queene caught from her side her knife, And even in act to stab her martred brest, I stept with speede, and held, and sau'd her life, And forth her trembling hand the blade did wrest,

^{1. 280,} misprints 'Proculei': 1. 300, misprinted '23 'defiri'd': 1. 302, 'raught'.

Ah Cleopatra, why shouldst thou, (said I) Both iniury thy felfe and Cafar fo? Barre him the honour of his victory. Who euer deales most mildely with his foe? Liue, and relie on him, whose mercy will

To thy submission alwayes ready be.

With that (as all amaz'd) she held her still, Twixt maiestie confuz'd and miserie. Her proud grieu'd eyes, held forrow and disdaine, State and diffresse warring within her soule: Dying ambition disposses her raigne, So base affliction seemed to controule. Like as a burfnling Lampe, whose liquor spent With intermitted flames, when dead you deeme it, Sends forth a dying flash, as discontent, That so the matter failes that should redeeme it: So she (in spight to see her low-brought state, When all her hopes were now confum'd to noght) Scornes yet to make an abiect league with Fate. Or once descend into a seruile thought: Th'imperious tongue vnused to beseech, Authoritie confounds with prayers, fo Words of comand conjoyn'd with humble speech. Shew'd she would live, yet scorn'd to pray her foe.

"Ah, what hath Cafar here to doe," faid shee. "In confines of the dead, in darkenesse lying? Will he not grant our fepulchres be free, But violate the priviledge of dying? What, must be stretch foorth his ambitious hand Into the right of Death, and force vs heere?

1. 331, 'liuing '1 (bad),

310

320

Hath Mifery no couert where to stand Free from the storme of Pride? is't safe no where? Cannot my land, my gold, my crowne fuffice, And all what I held deare, to him made common, But that he must in this sort tyrannize. 340 Th'afflicted body of an woefull woman? Tell him, my frailetie, and the gods haue given Sufficient glory, could he be content: And let him now with his defires make euen. And leave me to this horror, to lament, Now he hath taken all away from mee. What must he take me from my selfe by force? Ah, let him yet (in mercy) leaue me free The Kingdome of this poore distressed corse: No other crowne I feeke, no other good. 350 Yet wish that Cæsar would vouchsafe this grace. To fauour the poore of-fpring of my blood: Confused issue, yet of Roman race If blood and name be linckes of loue in Princes. Not spurres of hate; my poore Casario may Finde fauour notwithstanding mine offences. And Cafars blood, may Cafars raging stay. But if that with the torrent of my fall, All must be rapt with furious violence, And no respect, nor no regard at all, 360 Can ought with nature or with blood dispence: Then be it so, if needes it must be so," There staies and shrinkes in horror of her state: When I beganne to mittigate her woe,

^{1. 339, &#}x27;that' 4: 1. 343, 'if hee could content him' 1: 1. 345, 'lamenting' 1: 1. 362, " yet at beginning (1. 290), and at ll. 329-30 here, to mark out Proculeius' narrative of her speech.

And thy great mercies vnto her relate: Wishing her not despaire, but rather come And fue for grace, and shake off all vaine seares: No doubt she should obtaine as gentle doome As the defir'd, both for her felfe and hers. And so with much adoe, (well pacifide 370 Seeming to be) fhe shew'd content to liue. Saying fhe was refolu'd thy doome t'abide, And to accept what fauour thou would'ft give; And herewithall, crau'd also that shee might Performe her last rites to her lost belou'd. To facrifice to him that wroght her plight: And that she might not be by force remou'd. I granting from thy part this her request, Left her for then, feeming in better rest.

Cass. But dost thou thinke she will remaine so still?

Pro. I thinke, and doe affure my felfe she will.

Caf. Ah, private men found not the harts of Princes, Whose actions oft beare contrary pretences.

Pro. Why, tis her fafetie to come yeeld to thee.

Caf. But tis more honour for her to goe free.

Pro. She may thereby procure her childrens good.

Caf. Princes respect their honour more then blood.

Pro. Can Princes powre dispence with nature than?

Cass. To be a Prince, is more then be a Man. 389

Pro. There's none but haue in time perswaded beene.

Caf. And so might she too, were she not a Queene.

Pro. Diuers respects will force her be reclaim'd.

Caf. Princes (like Lions) neuer will be tam'd.

A private man may yeeld and care not how,
But greater hear[t]es will break before they bow.

1. 385, 'die' 1: 1. 392, '23 misprints 'relaim'd.'

And fure I thinke sh'will neuer condiscend,
To liue to grace our spoiles with her disgrace:
But yet let still a wary troupe attend,
To guard her person, and to watch the place.
And looke that none with her come to confer;
Shortly my selfe will goe to visite her.

CHORVS.

O Pinion, how do'ft thou molest Thaffected mind of restlesse man? Who following thee never can, Nor ever shall attaine to rest. For getting what thou failt is best, Yet loe, that best he findes far wide Of what thou promisedst before: For in the same he lookt for more, Which proues but small when once tis tride Then something else thou find'st beside, To draw him fill from thought to thought: When in the end all prooues but nought. Farther from rest he findes him than, Then at the first when he began. O malecontent seducing guest, Contriuer of our greatest woes: Which borne of winde, and fed with showes, Dooft nurse thy selfe in thine vnrest, 420 Indging ungotten things the best, Or what thou in conceit design's: And all things in the world doft deeme. Not as they are, but as they seeme:

I. 398, 'watch' 1.

Which showes, their state thou ill defin'st:
And liu'st to come, in present pin'st.
For what thou hast, thou still dost lucke:
O mindes tormentor, bodies wracke,
Vaine promiser of that sweete rest,
Which never any yet possest.

430

If we unto ambition tend,

Then dooft thou drawe our weakeneffe on,
With vaine imagination
Of that which never hath an end.
Or if that lust we apprehend,
How doth that pleasant plague insest?

How doth that pleasant plague infest?

O what strange formes of luxurie,

Thou strait dost cast tintice vs by?

And tell st vs that is ever best,

Which we have never yet possest.

And that more pleasure rests beside,
In something that we have not tride.

And when the same likewise is had,
Then all is one, and all is bad.

440

This Antony can fay is true,
And Cleopatra knowes tis fo,
By the experience of their woe.
She can fay, she never knew
But that lust found pleasures new,
And was never fatisfide:
He can fay by proofe of toyle,
Ambition is a Vulture vile,
That feedes upon the heart of pride:
And findes no rest when all is tride.

450

For worlds cannot confine the one, Th'other, lifts and bounds hath none; And both subvert the minde, the state, Procure destruction, enuy, hate.

And now when all this is prou'd vaine, Yet Opinion leaues not heere, 460 But stickes to Cleopatra neere: Perswading now, how she shall gaine Honour by death, and fame attaine, And what a shame it was to line, Her Kingdome lost, her Louer dead: And so with this perswasion led. Despaire doth such a courage give, That nought else can her minde relieue, Nor yet divert her from that thought: To this conclusion all is brought. 470 This is that rest this vaine world lends, To end in death that all things ends.

ACT. III.

Philostratus. Avius.

That fau'dst from death this wretched life of Obtaining Cafars gentle grace for mee, [mine: When I of all helpes else despaird but thine? Although I see in such a wosull state, Life is not that which should be much desir'd: 480 Sith all our glories come to end their date, Our Countries honour and our own expir'd,

l. 460, cap. 'O' accepted from 1: 1. 473, 'Actvs Tertivs' 1.

Now that the hand of wrath hath ouer-gone vs. Liuing (as 'twere) in th'armes of our dead mother, With blood vnder our feete, ruine vpon vs. And in a Land most wretched of all other. When yet we reckon life our dearest good. And so we liue, we care not how we liue: So deepe we feele impressed in our blood. That touch which nature without breath did giue. 490 And yet what blafts of words hath Learning found, To blow against the seare of death and dying? What comforts vnficke eloquence can found, And yet all faile vs in the point of trying. For whilft we reason with the breath of safety, Without the compasse of destruction living: What precepts shew we then, what courage lofty In taxing others feares in councell giving? When all this avre of fweet-contriued words Proues but weake armour to defend the heart. 500 For when this life, pale Feare and Terrour boords, Where are our precepts then, where is our art? O who is he that from himselfe can turne. That beare about the body of a man? VVho doth not toyle and labour to adiorne The day of death, by any meanes he can? All this I speake to th'end my selfe t'excuse, For my base begging of a seruile breath, VVherein I grant my felfe much to abuse, So shamefully to seeke t'auoide my death. 510 Arius, Philostratus, that selfe same care to live. Possesseth all alike, and grieue not then

1. 494, 'fayles' 1: 1. 501, 'For when this ship of life pale Terror boards' 4: 1. 504, 'beares' 1.

Nature doth vs no more then others give: Though we fpeake more then men, we are but men: And yet (in truth) these miseries to see, Wherein we stand in most extreame distresse: Might to our felues sufficient motives be To loath this life, and weigh our death the leffe: For neuer any age hath better taught, What feeble footing pride and greatnesse hath. 520 How'improvident prosperitie is caught, And cleane confounded in the day of wrath. See how difmaid Confusion keepes those streetes, That nought but mirth & mufique late refounded, How nothing with our eye but horror meetes, Our state, our wealth, our pride, and al confounded. Yet what weake fight did not discerne from farre This blacke-arifing tempest, all confounding? Who did not fee we should be what we are, When pride and ryot grew to fuch abounding. 530 When diffolute impietie possest Th'vnrespective mindes of Prince, and People: When infolent Securitie found rest In wanton thoughts, with lust and ease made feeble. Then when vnwary peace with fat-fed pleafure, New-fresh invented ryots still detected, Purchas'd with all the Ptolomies rich treasure, Our Lawes, our Gods, our mysteries neglected Who faw not how this confluence of vice, This inundation of diforders, must 540 At length, of force pay backe the bloody price Of fad destruction, (a reward for lust.)

1. 532, 'fuch a people' 1.

O thou and I have heard, and read, and knowne Of like proude states, as wofully incombred, And fram'd by them, examples for our owne: Which now among examples must be numbred. For this decree a law from high is given, An ancient Canon, of eternall date, In Confistory of the starres of heauen, Entred the Booke of vnauoyded Fate; 550 That no state can in height of happinesse, In th'exaltation of their glory ftand: But thither once arriu'd, declining lesse, Ruine themselues, or fall by others hand. Thus doth the euer-changing course of things Runne a perpetuall circle, euer turning: And that same day that hiest glory brings, Brings vs vnto the point of backe-returning. For fenceleffe fenfuality, doth euer Accompany felicity and greatnesse. 560 A fatall vvitch, whose charmes do leaue vs neuer, Till vve leaue all in forrow for our fweetnesse: When yet our felues must be the cause we fall. Although the same be first decreed on hie: Our errors still must beare the blame of all, This must it be; earth, aske not heaven why. Yet mighty men vvith wary iealous hand,

Yet mighty men vvith wary iealous hand,
Striue to cut off all obstacles of seare:
All whatsoeuer seemes but to withstand
Their least conceit of quiet, held so deare;
And so intrench themselues with blood, with crimes,
With all iniustice as their seares dispose:
Yet for all this we see, how oftentimes
The meanes they worke to keepe, are meanes to lose.

And fure I cannot fee, how this can stand With great Augustus safety and his honor, To cut off all succession from our land, For her offence that pull'd the warres upon her.

Phi. Why must her issue pay the price of that?

Ari. The price is life that they are rated at. 580

Phi. Cæfario too, issued of Cæfars blood?

Ari. Plurality of Cafars are not good.

Phi. Alas, what hurt procures his feeble arme?

Ari. Not for it doth, but that it may do harme.

Phi. Then when it offers hurt, represse the same.

Ari. Tis best to quench a sparke before it flame.

Phi. Tis inhumane, an innocent to kill.

Ari. Such innocents feldome remaine fo still.

And fure his death may best procure our peace;

Competitors the subject deerely buies:

And so that our affliction may surceasse,

Let great men be the peoples facrifice.

But fee where Cafar comes himselfe, to try And worke the mind of our distressed Queene, To apprehend some falsed hope, whereby She might be drawne to have her fortune seene.

But yet I thinke, Rome will not see that face (That queld her champions) blush in base disgrace.

Exeunt.

590

SCENA. II.

Cæfar, Cleopatra, Seleucus, Dolabella, 600

WHat Cleopatra, doest thou doubt so much Of Casars mercy, that thou hid'ft thy face?

1. 587, 'an' accepted from 4 for 'and' of the other texts: 1. 598, 'quel' 1. 599, 'Secvnda'.

Or doest thou thinke, thy offences can be such, That they surmount the measure of our grace?

Cle. O Cæfar, not for that I flie thy fight
My foule this fad retire of forrow chose:
But that m'oppressed thoughts abhorring light
Like best in darkenes, my disgrace t'inclose.
And here to these close limites of despaire,
This folitary horror where I bide:

Cæsar, I thought no Roman should repaire,
More after him, who here oppressed dyde.
Yet now, here at thy conquering seete I lie,
Poore captiue soule, that neuer thought to bow:
Whose happy soote of rule and Maiesty
Stood late on the same ground thou standest now.

Caf. Rife Queene, none but thy felfe is cause of all; And yet, would all vvere but thyne owne alone; That others ruine had not vvith thy fall, 619 Brought Rome her forrowes, to my triumphs mone. For breaking off the league of loue and blood, Thou mak'st my winning ioy a gaine vnpleasing: Sith th'eye of griese must looke into our good, Thorow the horror of our owne bloodshedding: And all, we must attribute vnto thee.

Cle. To me? Casfar, vvhat should a woman doe
Oppress with greatnes? vvhat, was it for me
To contradict my Lord, being bent thereto?
I vvas by loue, by seare, by weakenesse, made
An instrument to such disseignes as these.

630
For vvhen the Lord of all the Orient bade,

^{1. 616, &#}x27;yt' 1: 1. 617, '23 misprints 'mine': 1. 622, accepted from 4 for 'a gaine' of the other texts: 1. 630, 'to euery enterprise' 4.

Who but obey'd? vvho was not glad to please? And how could I vvithdraw my succouring hand From him that had my heart, and vvhat vvas mine? The int'rest of my faith in streightest band, My loue to his most firmely did combine.

Caf. Loue? alas no, it was th'innated hatred
That thou and thine haft euer borne our people:
That made thee feek all meanes to have vs fcattred,
To difunite our strength, and make vs feeble.

640
And therefore did that breast nurse our dissention,
With hope t'exalt thy selfe, t'augment thy state:
To pray vpon the vvracke of our contention,
And (with the rest our foes,) to ioy thereat.

Cleo. O Cafar, fee how easie tis t'accuse Whom Fortune hath made faulty by their fall; The wretched conquered may not resuse. The titles of reproch he's charg'd vvithall.

The conquering cause hath right, wherein thou art,
The vanquisht still is judged the worser part.

650
Which part is mine, because I lost my part.
No lesser then the portion of a Crowne.
Enough for me, alas vohat needed Art
To gaine by others, but to keepe mine owne?
But here let voeaker powers note vohat it is,
To neighbour great Competitors too neere;
If ove take part, voe oft do perish thus,
If neutrall bide, both parties we must searce.

^{1. 632, &#}x27;who then his helpe denies' 4: 1. 645, 'How easie Cæsar is it' 4: 1. 647, 'They who are vanquished' 4: 1. 648, 'th'are' 4: 1. 650, 'The ouer-throwne must be' 4: 1. 653, '23 misprinted' need'; 'Ah what need I vse' 4: 1. 655, 'may here see what it is' 4: 1. 656, 'so' 4: 1. 657, 'either part we' 1. 658, 'stand' 4.

Alas, vvhat shall the forst partakers do, When following none, yet must they perish too? 660 But Cafar, fith thy right and cause is such, Be not a heavy vveight vpon calamity: Depresse not the afflicted ouer-much, The chiefest glory is the Victors lenity. Th'inheritance of mercy from him take, Of vyhom thou hast thy fortune and thy name: Great Cæfar, me a Queene at first did make, And let not Cæfar now confound the same. Reade here these lines which still I keepe with me, The witnes of his loue and fauours euer: And God forbid this should be favd of thee. That Casar vvrong'd the fauoured of Casar. For looke what I have beene to Antony, Thinke thou the fame I might have beene to thee. And here I do present thee with the note Of all the treasure, all the iewels rare That Egypt hath in many ages got; And looke what Cleopatra hath, is there.

Seleu. Nay there's not all fet downe within that roule, I know fome things she hath referu'd apart. 680 Cle. What, vile vngratefull wretch, dar'st thou controule

Thy Queene and foueraigne, caitife as thou art?

Caf. Hold, hold; a poore reuenge can worke fo feeble hands.

Cle. Ah Cafar, vvhat a great indignity Is this, that here my vaffall fubited ftands Taccufe me to my Lord of trechery?

^{1. 660, &#}x27;When they must aid and yet must' 4: 1. 685, '23 misprints 'vastall.'

If I referu'd some certaine vvomens toyes, Alas it vvas not for my selfe (God knowes), Poore miserable soule, that little ioyes In trisling ornaments, in outward showes. But what I kept, I kept to make my vvay Vnto thy Livia and Octavias grace, That thereby in compassion mooued, they Might mediate thy favour in my case.

690

Cæf. Well Cleopatra, feare not; thou shalt finde What fauour thou desir'st, or canst expect:
For Cæsar neuer yet was found but kinde
To such as yeeld, and can themselues subject.
And therefore give thou comfort to thy mind,
Relieue thy soule thus overcharg'd with care;
How well I vvill intreate thee thou shalt finde
So soone as some affaires dispatched are.
Till then farewell.

700

Cle. Thanks thrife renowned Cæfar, Poore Cleopatra rests thine owne for euer.

Dol. No maruell Cafar though our greatest sp'rits

Haue to the powre of such a charming beauty

Been brought to yeeld the honor of their merits:

Forgetting all respect of other duty.

Then vvhilst the glory of her youth remain'd

The wondring object to each wanton eye: 710

Before her full of sweet (with forrow vvain'd,)

Came to the period of this misery.

If still, euen in the midst of death and horror

Such beauty shines, thorow clouds of age and forrow,

If euen those sweet decayes seeme to pleade for her,

Which from affliction mouing graces borrow;

If in calamity she could thus moue,
What could she do adorn'd vvith youth and loue?
What could she do then, whenas spreading wide
The pompe of beauty, in her glory dight?
When arm'd with wonder, she could vse beside,
Th'ingines of her loue, Hope, and Delight?

Beauty, daughter of Meruaile, O fee how Thou canst disgracing forrowes sweetly grace. What power thou shew'st in a distressed brow, That mak'st affliction faire, giu'st teares their grace. What can untressed lockes, can torne rent haire, A weeping eye, a wailing face be faire?

I fee then, artleffe feature can content, And that true beauty needes no ornament.

730

Cef. What in a paffion Dolabella? what? take heed:
Let others fresh examples be thy warning;
VVhat mischieses these, so idle humors breed,
VVhilst error keepes vs from a true discerning.
Indeed I saw she labour'd to impart
Her sweetest graces in her saddest cheere:
Presuming on the face that knew the arte
To moue, with vvhat aspect so eu'r it were.
But all in vaine; she takes her ayme amisse,
The ground and marke, her leuell much deceiues; 740
Time now hath altred all, for neither is
She as she was, nor we as she conceiues.
And therefore now, twere best she left such badnes;
Folly in youth is sinne, in age, tis madnes.

II. 723-4, 'Daughter of meruaile, Beautie how dost thou

Vnto disgracing forrowes give such grace' 4:

1. 726, 'To make affliction faire and teares to grace' 4: I. 727, 'dispoyled'

1. 732, 'charme this heate' 4: 1. 733, 'You see what mischieses these vainehumors breed' 4: 1. 734, 'When as they come our judgements to deseat' 4

And for my part, I feeke but t'entertaine In her fome feeding hope to draw her forth; The greatest Trophey that my trauailes gaine, Is, to bring home a prizall of such worth. And now, sith that she feemes so well content To be disposed by vs, without more stay She with her children shall to Rome be fent, VVhilst I by Syria thither take my way.

750

CHORVS.

O Fearefull-frowning Nemesis,
Daughter of Instice, most severe;
That art the worlds great Arbitresse
And Queene of causes raigning here:
Whose swift-sure hand is ever neere
Eternall instice, righting wrong:
Who never yet deferrest long
The prouds decay, the weakes redresse:
But through thy power every where,
Dost raze the great, and raise the lesse.
The lesse made great, dost ruine too,
To shew the earth what heaven can do.

760

Thou from darke-clof'd eternity,
From thy blacke cloudy hidden feate,
The worlds diforders doft defcry:
Which when they fwell fo proudly great,
Reverfing th'order nature fet,
Thou giu'ft thy all confounding doome,

770

1. 754, - inserted : 1. 756, cap. 'A' accepted.

Which none can know before it come:
Th'ineuitable destiny,
Which neither wit nor strength can let,
Fast chain'd vnto necessity,
In mortall things doth order so,
Th'alternate course of weale or woe.

O how the powers of heaven doe play
With travailed mortality:
And doth their weakenesse still betray, 780
In their best prosperity?
When being lifted up so hie,
They looke beyond themselves so farre,
That to themselves they take no care;
Whilst swift confusion downe doth lay,
Their late proud mounting vanity:
Bringing their glory to decay,
And with the ruine of their fall,
Extinguish people, state and all.

But is it Instice that all we
The innocent poore multitude,
For great mens faults should punisht be,
And to destruction thus pursude?
O why should theauens vs include,
Within the compasse of their fall,
Who of themselves procured all?
Or do the gods (in close) decree,
Occasion take how to extrude
Man from the earth with cruelty?
Ah no, the gods are ever inst,
Our faults excuse their rigor must.

800

790

This is the period Fate set downe,

To Egypts fat prosperity:

Which now unto her greatest growne,

Must perish thus, by course must die,

And some must be the causers why

This revolution must be wrought:

As borne to bring their state to nought:

To change the people and the crowne,

And purge the worlds iniquity:

Which vice so farre hath over growne.

As we, so they that treate vs thus,

Must one day perish like to vs.

ACTVS IIII.

Seleucus. Rodon.

Euer friend Rodon in a better houre,
Could I have met thee then eu'n now I do,
Having affliction in the greatest powre
Vpon my soule, and none to tell it to.
For tis some ease our sorrowes to reveale,
If they to whom we shall impart our woes
Seeme but to seele a part of what we seele,
And meete vs with a sigh but at a cloze.

Rod. And neuer (friend Seleucus) found'ft thou one That better could beare fuch a part with thee: Who by his owne, knowes others cares to mone, And can, in like accord of griefe, agree. And therefore tell th'oppression of thy heart, Tell to an eare prepar'd and tun'd to care:

I. 814, 'Qvartvs' 1.

And I will likewise vnto thee impart 830
As sad a tale as what thou shalt declare.
So shall vve both our mournefull plaints combine
Ile vvaile thy state, and thou shalt pitty mine.

Sel. Well then thou know'ft how I have liu'd in grace With Cleopatra, and esteem'd in Court As one of Councell, and of chiefest place, And euer held my credite in that fort. Till now in this confusion of our state. VVhen thinking to have vf'd a meane to climbe, And fled the wretched, flowne vnto the great, 840 (Following the fortune of the prefent time,) Am come to be cast downe and ruin'd cleane: And in the course of mine owne plot vndon. For having all the fecrets of the Oueene Reueald to Cafar, to have favour won. My treachery is quitted with diffrace, My falshood loath'd, and not without great reason Though good for him; yet Princes in this cafe Doe hate the Traitor, though they love the treason. For how could he imagine I would be 850 Faithfull to him, being false vnto mine owne? And false to such a bounteous Queene as she. That had me raif'd and made mine honor knowne. He faw twas not for zeale to him I bare. But for base feare, or mine owne state to settle. Weakenesse is false, and faith in Cowards rare, Feare findes out shifts, timiditie is subtle.

^{1. 838, &#}x27;late shifting' ': 1. 842, 'I come to be disgrac'd' ': 1. 843 dropped in ': 1. 846, 'hath purchas'd': 1. 848, 'For Princes though they get yet ': 1. 849, 'They' ': 1. 851, 'Entire' ': 1. 852, 'worthy' ': 1. 853, 'As by whom my state was grown' '.

And therfore fcorn'd of him, fcorn'd of mine owne.

Hatefull to all that looke into my ftate:

Despif'd Seleucus now is onely growne

860

The marke of infamy, that's pointed at,

Rod. Tis much thou faift, and O too much to feele, And I doe grieve and doe lament thy fall: But yet all this which thou dooft heere reueale, Compar'd with mine will make thine feeme but small. Although my fault be in the felfe-same kind, Yet in degree farre greater, farre more hatefull; Mine forong of mischiefe, thine from feeble mind, I staind with blood, thou onely but vngratefull. For vnto me did Cleopatra giue 870 The best and dearest treasure of her blood. Louely Cafario; whom she would should live Free from the dangers wherein Egypt stood. And vnto me with him this charge she gaue, Here Rodon, take, convey from out this coast, This precious Gem, the chiefest that I have, This iewell of my foule I value most; Guide him to India, leade him farre from hence, Safeguard him where fecure he may remaine, Till better fortune call him backe from thence,

1. 860, in '23 misprinted 'odely': 1. 869, 'Mine' 4: 1. 870, 'For Cleopatra did commit to me' 4: 1. 872, 'Her fon Cafario with a hope to free' 4: 1. 878, 'Him' 4: 11. 874-5—

'And charg'd my faith, that I should safely guide And close, to India should convey him hence '4.

Then follow these lines in 4-

'Which faith, I most vnkindly falfisi'd,
And with my faith and conscience did dispense.
For scarce were we arriu'd vnto the shore,
But Casar having knowledge of our way,
Had sent,' etc. (see 1. 977 onward).

And Egypts peace be reconcil'd againe.
For this is he that may our hopes bring backe;
(The rifing Sunne of our declyning state:)
These be the hands that may restore our wracke,
And raise the broken ruines made of late.
He may give limits to the boundlesse pride
Of sierce Octavius, and abate his might:
Great Iulius of-spring, he may come to guide
The Empire of the world, as his by right.

O how he feemes the modell of his Syre?
O how I gaze my Cæfar in his face?
Such was his gate, fo did his lookes afpire;
Such was his threatning brow, fuch was his grace,
High fhouldred, and his forehead euen as hie.
And O, (if he had not beene borne fo late,)
He might haue rul'd the worlds great Monarchy,
And now haue beene the Champion of our ftate.

Then vnto him, O my deere Sonne (she saies,) Sonne of my youth, shie hence, O shie, be gone, Reserve thy selfe, ordain'd for better daies, For much thou hast to ground thy hopes vpon. Leaue me (thy wosfull Mother) to endure The sury of this tempest heere alone: Who cares not for her selfe, so thou be sure; Thou mayst revenge, when others can but mone. Rodon will see thee safe, Rodon will guide Thee and thy wayes, thou shalt not need to seare. Rodon (my saithfull servant) will provide What shall be best for thee, take thou no care. And O good Rodon, looke well to his youth, The waies are long, and dangers every where.

1. 902, '23 'thy' (bad).

890

900

910

I vrge it not that I doe doubt thy truth, Mothers will cast the worst, and alwaies searc. The absent danger greater still appeares, Lesse feares he, who is neere the thing he feares. And O, I know not what prefaging thought My sprite suggests of lucklesse bad event: But yet it may be tis but Loue doth doat, On ydle shadowes which my feares present; But yet the memory of mine owne fate 920 Makes me feare his. And yet why should I feare? His fortune may recouer better state. And he may come in pompe to gouerne heere. But yet I doubt the Genius of our race By fome malignant spirite comes ouerthrowne: Our bloud must be extinct, in my disgrace, Egypt must have no more Kings of their owne. Then let him ftay, and let vs fall together, Sith it is fore-decreed that we must fall. 929 Yet who knowes what may come? let him goe thither. What Merchaunt in one veffell venters all? Let vs divide our starres. Go, go my sonne, Let not the fate of Egypt finde thee here: Try if so be thy destiny can shunne The common wracke of vs, by being there. But who is he found euer yet defence Against the heavens, or hid him any where? Then what need I to fend thee so farre hence To feeke thy death that mayft as well die here? And here die with thy mother, die in rest, 940 Not trauelling to what will come to thee.

1. 919, 'On' for 'Or' and 'which' for 'with' accepted from !.

5

Why should we leave our blood vnto the East, When Egypt may a tombe sufficient be?

O my divided foule, what shall I do? Whereon shall now my resolution rest? What were I best resolue to yeeld vnto? When both are bad, how shall I know the best? Stay: I may hap fo worke with Cafar now, That he may yeeld him to restore thy right. Goe: Cafar neuer will confent that thou 950 So neare in blood, shalt be so great in might. Then take him Rodon, goe my sonne, farewell. But ftay: there's fomething elfe that I would fay: Yet nothing now. But O God speed thee well, Left faying more, that more may make thee stay. Yet let me speake: It may be tis the last That euer I shall speake to thee my sonne. Doe Mothers vie to part in fuch post hast? What, must I end when I have scarce begunne? Ah no (deare heart) tis no fuch slender twine 960 Wherewith the knot is tide twixt thee and me; That blood within thy veins came out of mine, Parting from thee, I part from part of me: And therefore I must speake. Yet what? O sonne.

Here more she would, when more she could not say:
Sorrow rebounding backe whence it begunne,
Fill'd vp the passage, and quite stopt the way:
When sweete Casario with a princely sp'rite,
(Though comfortlesse himselse) did comfort giue;
With mildest words, perswading her to beare it; 970
And as for him, she should not neede to grieue.
And I (with protestations of my part,)

1. 954, (.) after 'now' and 'But for, and 'b'-are accepted from '.

Swore by that faith, (vvhich fworne I did deceiue)
That I vvould vse all care, all vvit and art
To see him safe; And so vve tooke our leaue.
Scarce had vve trauell'd to our iourneys end,
When Cæsar having knowledge of our vvay,
His Agents after vs vvith speed doth send
To labour me, Cæsario to betray.
Who vvith rewards and promises so large,
Assail'd me then, that I grew soone content;
And backe to Rhodes did reconvay my charge,
Pretending that Octavius for him sent,
To make him King of Egypt presently.

And thither come, feeing himselfe betray'd, And in the hands of death through trechery, Wailing his state, thus to himselfe he said.

Loe here brought backe by subtile traine to death Betrai'd by tutors faith, or traitors rather:

My fault my blood, and mine offence my birth, 990

For being sonne of such a mighty Father.

From India, (vvhither fent by mothers care, To be referu'd from Egypts common wracke,)
To Rhodes, (so long the armes of tyrants are,)
I am by Cæsars subtile reach brought backe:
Here to be made th'oblation for his feares,
Who doubts the poore reuenge these hands may doe him:
Respecting neither blood, nor youth, nor yeares,
Or how small safety can my death be to him.

And is this all the good of being borne great? 1000 Then vvretched greatnesse, proud rich misery, Pompous distresse, glittering calamitie.

1. 984, in 4 this line is added—'And in their hands have left him now to die'; then it passes to 1. 1064: 1. 1001, 'golden'4.

Is it for this th'ambitious Fathers fweat, To purchase blood and death for them and theirs? Is this the iffue that their glories get, To leave a fure destruction to their heires? O how much better had it beene for me, From low descent, deriu'd of humble birth, T'haue eat the fweet-fowre bread of pouertie, And drunke of Nylus streames in Nylus earth? 1010 Vnder the cou'ring of fome quiet Cottage, Free from the wrath of heaven, fecure in minde, Vntoucht when fad euents of Princes dotage Confounds vyhat euer mighty it doth finde. And not thaue flood in their way, whose condition Is to have all made cleare, and all thing plaine Betweene them and the marke of their ambition, That nothing let, the full fight of their raigne. VVhere nothing stands, that stands not in submission; Whose greatnesse must all in it selfe containe. Kings will be alone, Competitors must downe, Neare death he stands, that stands too neare a Crowne. Such is my case, for Casar vvill have all. My blood must seale th'assurance of his state: Yet ah weake state that blood assure him shall.

My blood must seale th'assurance of his state:
Yet ah weake state that blood assure him shall,
Whose wrongfull shedding, gods and men do hate.
Iniustice neuer scapes vnpunisht still;
Though men reuenge not, yet the heauens will.

l. 1005, 'th'inheritance' : l. 1006, 'th'eftate of ruine' : l. 1007, 'farre': 'Then' : l. 1008, 'from' : l. 1013, 'prowd attempts' : l. 1014, 'Imbroyle the world, and ruinate mankind' : l. 1015, 'So had I not impeach'd their line' : l. 1016, 'Who must have all things cleere' : l. 1018, 'prospect' : l. 1020, 'Whose' accepted for 'Where' of other texts: l. 1023, 'Augustus': l. 1027, 'cannot scape and slourish' : l. 1028, 'doe not revenge it th' ' .

And thou Augustus that with bloody hand,
Cutt'st off succession from anothers race,
Maist find the heavens thy vowes so to withstand,
That others may deprive thine in like case
When thou maist see thy prowd contentious bed
Yeelding thee none of thine that may inherite:
Subvert thy blood, place others in their sted,
To pay this thy iniustice her due merite.

If it be true (as who can that deny VVhich facred Priests of Memphis doe fore-say)
Some of the of-spring yet of Antony,
Shall all the rule of this whole Empire sway;
And then Augustus, what is it thou gainest
By poore Antillus blood, or this of mine?
Nothing but this, thy victory thou stainest,
And pull'st the wrath of heaven on thee and thine.
In vaine doth man contend against the starr's,

For that he feekes to make, his wifedome marr's.

Yet in the meane time we whom Fates referue,

The bloody facrifices of ambition, VVe feele the fmart, what euer they deserue,

And we indure the present times condition.

The iustice of the heavens revenging thus,

Doth onely satisfie it selfe, not vs.

Yet tis a pleasing comfort that doth ease Affliction in so great extremitie,
To thinke their like destruction shall appease

l. 1029, 'And he that thus doth feeke' ': l. 1030, '23 misprints 'curft' (bad); in 'T'extinguish the ofspring of': l. 1032, 'his' ': l. 1033, 'he shall fee his' ': l. 1034, 'him . . . his,' l. 1035, 'his,' l. 1036, 'his' ': l. 1042, '23 'Antillius': l. 1047, 'But': l. 1052, 'facrifise' ', altered in MS. to 'fatissie.'

Our ghosts, who did procure our misery. But dead we are, vncertaine what shall be, And liuing, we are fure to feele the wrong; Our certaine ruine we our felues doe fee. They ioy the while, and we know not how long. But yet Cafario, thou must die content, For men will mone, and God reuenge th'innocent. Thus he complain'd, and thus thou hear'ft my shame. Sel. But how hath Cafar now rewarded thee? Rod. As he hath thee. And I expect the same As fell to Theodor to fall to mee: For he (one of my coate) having betraid The yong Antillus sonne of Anthony, And at his death from off his necke conuaid A jewell: which being askt, he did denie: 1070

Casar occasion tooke to hang him strait.
Such instruments with Princes liue not long.
Although they need such actors of deceit,
Yet still our sight seemes to vpbraid their wrong;
And therefore we must needes this danger runne,
And in the net of our owne guile be caught:
We must not liue to brag what we have done,
For what is done, must not appeare their fault.

But here comes Cleopatra, wofull Queene, 1079 And our shame will not that we should be seene.

Exeunt.

ll. 1066-8, 'As Theodorus had to ... And with a great extreamitie of shame For Theodorus when he had' '.

1. 1073, 'vse those' '4: 1, 1074, 'their ... obraid' !.

Cleopatra.

What hath my face yet powre to win a Louer? Can this torne remnant ferue to grace me fo, That it can Cafars fecret plots discouer, What he intends with me and mine to do? Why then poore beauty thou hast done thy last, And best good service thou could'st doe vnto me; For now the time of death reveal'd thou hast, Which in my life didst serve for sorth in love.

Heere Dolabella farre forfooth in loue, 1090 VVrites, how that Cafar meanes forthwith, to fend Both me and mine, th'ayre of Rome to proue: There [h]is Triumphant Chariot to attend. I thanke the man, both for his loue and letter; The one comes fit to warne me thus before, But for th'other I must die his debter, For Cleopatra now can loue no more.

But hauing leaue, I must goe take my leaue And last farewell of my dead Anthony: Whose dearely honour'd tombe must here receive 1100 This facrifice, the last before I die.

O facred euer-memorable stone,
That hast without my teares, within my slame;
Receiue th'oblation of the wosfull'st mone
That euer yet from fad affliction came.
And you deare reliques of my Lord and Loue.
(The sweetest parcels of the faithfull'st liuer,)
O let no impious hand dare to remoue
You out from hence, but rest you here for euer.

l. 1081, in 4 on margin 'Cleopatra reading Dolabella's letter': l. 1097; see our Note before this Play on this passage: l. 1105, 'fad' accepted from 4: l. 1107, 'worthiest.'

Let Egypt now give peace vnto you dead, IIIO That liuing, gaue you trouble and turmoile: Sleepe quiet in this euer-lasting bed, In forraine land preferr'd before your foile. And O, if that the fo'rits of men remaine After their bodies, and do neuer die, Then heare thy ghoft, thy captive fpoufe complaine And be attentiue to her misery. But if that labourfome mortality Found this fweete error, onely to confine The curious fearch of idle vanity. 1120 That would the deapth of darknes vndermine: Or rather, to give rest vnto the thought Of wretched man, with th'after-comming iov Of those conceiued fields, whereon we dote, To pacifie the present worlds annoy. If it be fo, why speake I then to th'avre? But tis not fo, my Antony doth heare: His euer-liuing ghost attends my prayer, And I do know his houering sprite is neere. And I will speake, and pray, and mourne to thee. 1130 O pure immortall foule that daign'ft to heare, I feele thou answer'ft my credulity With touch of comfort, finding none elsewhere. Thou know'ft these hands intomb'd thee here of late. Free and vnforc'd, which now must seruile be, Referu'd for bands to grace proud Calars state, Who feekes in me to triumph ouer thee. O if in life we could not feuerd be.

l. 1122, 'a' not accepted from ': l. 1126, 'Then why doe I complaine me' : l. 1131, 'foule' accepted for 'loue' of other texts, from '.

Shall Death divide our bodies now afunder? Must thine in Egypt, mine in Italy, 1140 Be kept the Monuments of Fortunes vvonder? If any powres be there whereas thou art, (Sith our country gods betray our case,) O worke they may their gracious helpe impart, To faue thy wofull wife from fuch difgrace. Do not permit she should in triumph shew The blush of her reproach, joyn'd vvith thy shame: But (rather) let that hatefull tyrant know, That thou and I had powre t'auoyde the same. But what do I fpend breath and idle winde, 1150 In vaine inuoking a conceiued aide? Why do I not my felfe occasion finde To breake the bounds wherein my felfe am flayd? Words are for them that can complaine and liue, Whose melting hearts composed of baser frame, Can to their forrowes, time and leafure giue, But Cleopatra may not do the same. No Antony, thy loue requireth more: A lingring death, with thee deferues no merite; I must my selfe force open wide a dore 1160 To let out life, and fo vnhouse my spirit. These hands must breake the prison of my soule To come to thee, there to enjoy like state, As doth the long-pent folitary Foule, That hath escapt her cage, and found her mate. This facrifice to facrifice my life, Is that true incense that doth best beseeme: These rites may serue a life-desiring wife,

1. 1139, cap. 'D' accepted: l. 1143, 'cause': l. 1157, 'must': l. 1167, 'beseemes,' and l. 1169, 'sufficient deemes'.

Who doing them, thaue done enough doth deeme. My hart bloud should the purple flowers have bin, 1170 Which here vpon thy tombe to thee are offred, No fmoake but dying breath should here bin feene, And this it had bin too, had I bin fuffred. But what have I faue these bare hands to do it? And these weake fingers are not yron-poynted: They cannot pierce the flesh being put vnto it, And I of all meanes elfe am disappointed. But yet I must a way and meanes seeke, how To come vnto thee, whatfoere I do. O Death, art thou fo hard to come by now, 1180 That we must pray, intreate, and seeke thee too? But I will finde thee wherefoere thou lie, For who can ftay a minde refolu'd to die?

And now I go to worke th'effect indeed,
Ile neuer fend more words or fighes to thee:
Ile bring my foule my felfe, and that with speede,
My felfe will bring my foule to Antony.
Come, go my Maydes, my fortunes fole attenders,
That minister to misery and forrow:
Your Mistris you vnto your freedome renders,
And will discharge your charge yet ere to morrow.

And now by this, I thinke the man I fent, Is neere return'd that brings me my dispatch. God grant his cunning fort to good euent, And that his skill may well beguile my watch:

l. 1172, 'my last gaspe': l. 1174 ends with 'hands': l. 1176, 'that them withstands': l. 1178, 'thee thus': l. 1179, 'and to vnion vs': l. 1181, 'thus': l. 1182, 'where euer thou doest lie': l. 1184, 'come': l. 1185, 'I neuer will send more complaints to thee': l. 1191, see Note before this Play for addition here: l. 1192, 'I am but onely to attend': l. 1193, 'My mans returne': l. 1194, 'to happy end':

So shall I shun disgrace, leave to be forry, Flie to my loue, scape my foe, free my soule; So shall I act the last of life with glory, Die like a Queene, and rest without controule.

Exit.

CHORVS.

1200

Ifterious Egypt, wonder breeder, ftrict Religions strange observer,
State-ordrer zeale, the best rule-keeper,
fostring still in temp'rate fervor:
O how cam'st thou to lose so wholy
all religion, law and order?
And thus become the most vnholy
of all Lands, that Nylus border?
How could confus'd Disorder enter where sterne Law sate so severely?
I 1210
How durst weake lust and riot venter
theye of sustice looking neerely?
Could not those means that made thee great
Be still the meanes to keepe thy state?

Ah no, the course of things requireth change and alteration euer:
That same continuance man desireth,
the vnconstant world yeeldeth neuer.
We in our counsels must be blinded,
and not see what doth import vs:
And often-times the things least minded is the thing that most must hurt vs.

1. 1199, 'Exeunt' 4.

Yet they that have the sterne in guiding, tis their fault that should prevent it; For oft they seeing their Country sliding, take their ease, as though contented. We imitate the greater powers, The Princes manners fashion ours.

Th'example of their light regarding,
vulgar loofenesse much incences:
Vice vncontrold, growes wide inlarging,
Kings small faults, be great offences,
And this hath set the window open
vnto licence, lust, and riot:
This way confusion first found broken,
whereby entred our disquiet.
Those lawes that old Sesostris founded,
and the Ptolomies observed,
Hereby first came to be confounded,
which our state so long preserved.
The wanton luxury of Court,
Did forme the people of like sort.

For all (respecting private pleasure,) vniversally consenting
To abuse their time, their treasure,
in their owne delights contenting:
And suture dangers nought respecting, whereby, (O how easie matter
Made this so generall neglecting, confus'd weakenesse to discatter?)

l. 1226, 'for their printe are' !.

1230

1240

1250

Cæsar found th'effect true tried,
in his easie entrance making:
Who at the sight of armes, descried
all our people, all forsaking.
For ryot (worse then warre,) so sore
Had wasted all our strength before.

And thus is Egypt servile rendred to the infolent destroyer: And all their sumptuous treasure tendred, all her wealth that did betray her. 1260 Which poyson (O if heaven be rightfull,) may so farre infect their sences. That Egypts pleasure so delightfull, may breed them the like offences. And Romans learne our way of weakenes, be instructed in our vices: That our spoyles may spoyle your greatnes. ouercome with our deuises. Fill full your hands, and carry home, Enough from vs to ruine Rome. 1270

ACT V.

Dolabella. Titius.

Ome tell me Titius eu'ry circumstance
How Cleopatra did receiue my newes:
Tell eu'ry looke, each gesture, countenance,
That she did in my Letter's reading, vse.

Tit. I shall my Lord, so farre as I could note,

1. 1271, 'Quintvs' 1: '23 misprinted 'iiii.'

1280

Or my conceit observe in any wise. It was the time when as she having got Leave to her Dearest dead to facrifice; And now was issuing out the monument, With odors, incense, garlands in her hand; When I approacht (as one from Casar sent,) And did her close thy message t'ynderstand.

She turnes her backe, and with her takes me in. Reades in thy lines thy strange vnlookt for tale: And reades, and smiles, and staies, and doth begin Againe to reade, then blusht, and then vvas pale. And having ended with a figh, refoldes Thy Letter vp: and with a fixed eye, 1290 (Which stedfast her imagination holds) She mus'd a while, standing confusedly: At length, Ah friend (fayd she) tell thy good Lord, How deare I hold his pittying of my case: That out of his fweete nature can affoord A miserable woman so much grace, Tell him how much my heavy foule doth grieve Mercilesse Cafar should so deale with me: Pray him that he vould all the counsell giue, That might diuert him from fuch cruelty. 1300 As for my loue, fay Antony hath all, Say that my heart is gone into the graue With him, in whom it rests and euer shall: I have it not my felfe, nor cannot have. Yet tell him, he shall more command of me Then any, whofoeuer liuing can. He that so friendly shewes himselfe to be A right kind Roman, and a Gentleman. Although his Nation (fatall vnto me,)

Haue had mine age a fpoyle, my youth a pray, 1310 Yet his affection must accepted be, That fauours one distrest in such decay.

Ah, he was worthy then to haue beene lou'd,
Of Cleopatra whiles her glory lasted;
Before she had declining fortune prou'd,
Or seene her honor wrackt, her slowre all blasted.
Now there is nothing lest her but disgrace
Nothing but her affliction that can moue:
Tell Dolabella, one that's in her case,
(Poore soule) needs rather pity now then loue,
But shortly shall thy Lord heare more of me.
And ending so her speech, no longer stayd,
But hasted to the tombe of Antony:
And this was all she did, and all she sayd.

Dol. Ah sweet diftressed Lady. What hard heart Could chuse but pity thee, and loue thee too? Thy worthinesse, the state vvherein thou art Requireth both, and both I vow to do. Although ambition lets not Cafar fee The vvrong he doth thy maiesty and sweetnes; 1330 Which makes him now exact fo much of thee, To adde vnto his pride, to grace his greatnes, He knowes thou canst no hurt procure vs now, Sith all thy strength is seiz'd into our hands: Nor feares he that, but rather labours how He might shew Rome so great a Queene in bands: That our great Ladies (enuying thee fo much That stain'd them all, and held them in such wonder,) Might ioy to fee thee, and thy fortune fuch, Thereby extolling him that brought thee vnder.

1. 1312, 'from whom all run away' 1: 1. 1316, 'all' accepted from 1.

But I will feeke to stay it what I may; I am but one, yet one that Cafar loues, And O if now I could do more then pray, Then should'st thou know how farre affection moues. But what my powre and prayer may preuaile, Ile ioyne them both, to hinder thy disgrace: And even this present day I will not faile To do my best vvith Cafar in this case.

Tit. And fir, even how herfelfe hath letters fent;
I met her messenger as I came hither,
With a dispatch as he to Casar went;
But know not what imports her sending thither.
Yet this he told, how Cleopatra late
Was come from facrifice, how richly clad,
Was serv'd to dinner in most sumptuous state,
With all the bravest ornaments she had.
How having din'd, she writes, and sends away
Him strait to Casar, and commanded than
All should depart the Tombe, and none to stay
But her two maides, and one poore countrey man. 1360
Dol. Why then I know, she sends thave audience now,

And meanes t'experience what her state can do: To see if Maiestie will make him bow
To what affliction could not moue him to.
And O, if now she could but bring a view
Of that fresh beauty she in youth possess,
(The argument wherewith she ouerthrew
The wit of Iulius Casar, and the rest.

^{1. 1352, &#}x27;Knowing not what meanes' 4: 1. 1355, 'with' 4: 1. 1365, 'And now if that' 4: 1. 1366, 'rare': 1. 1368, '23 adds here oddly 'condition,' and rhymes to it below 'ambition.' It is a misplacing of lines.

Then happily Augustus might relent, 1369 Whilst powrefull Loue, (farre stronger then Ambition) Might worke in him, a minde to be content To grant her asking, in the best condition. But being as she is, yet doth she merrite To be respected, for what she hath beene: The wonder of her kinde, of rarest spirit. A glorious Lady, and a mighty Queene. And now, but by a little weakenesse falling To doe that which perhaps sh'was forst to doe: Alas, an errour past, is past recalling: Take away weakenesse, and take women too, But now I goe to be thy advocate, Sweet Cleopatra, now I'le vse mine arte. Thy presence will me greatly animate, Thy face will teach my tongue, thy loue my heart.

SCEN. II.

Nuntius.

And fad newes' bringer of the strangest death,
Which selfe hand did vpon himselse inserre,
To free a captiue soule from servile breath?

I 390
Must I the lamentable vvonder shew,
Which all the world must grieue and maruell at?
The rarest forme of death in earth below,
That ever pitty, glory, vvonder gat.

[more
Cho. What newes bringst thou? can Egypt yet yeeld

Cho. What newes bringst thou? can Egypt yet yeeld Of forrow than it hath? vvhat can it adde

I. 1375, 'powerfull' : 1. 1382, misprints 'my heart': 1. 1385, 'Scena Secvada'.

To the already overflowing store
Of sad affliction, matter yet more sad?
Have vee not seene the vvorst of our calamity?
Is there behind yet something of distresse 1400
Vnseene, vnknowne? Tell if that greater misery
There be, that vve vvaile not that vvhich is lesse.
Tell vs vvhat so it be, and tell at first,
For sorrow ever longs to heare her vvorst.

Nun. Well then, the strangest thing relate I will, That ever eye of mortall man hath seene.

I (as you know) even from my youth, have still Attended on the person of the Queene:
And ever in all fortunes good or ill,
With her as one of chiefest trust have beene.
And now in these two great extremities,
That ever could to Maiestie befall,
I did my best in vvhat I could devise,
And left her not, till now she left vs all.

Cho. What, is she gone? Hath Cafar forst her so?

Nun. Yea, she is gone, and hath deceiv'd him to.

Cho. What sled to India, to goe find her sonne?

Nun. No, not to India, but to find her sonne.

Cho. Why then there's hope she may her state recover.

Nun. Her state? nay rather honour, and her Louer.

Cho. Her Louer? him she cannot have againe. 1421

Nun. Well, him she hath, with him she doth remaine.

Cho. Why then she's dead. Ist so? why speakst not Nun. You gesse aright, and I will tell you how. [thou?]

When she perceiv'd all hope was cleane berest,

That Casar meant to send her strait away.

l. 1415, 'her' accepted from 1: l. 1418, 'funne' 1: l. 1425, 'her' 1.

And faw no meanes of reconcilement left, Worke what the could, the could not worke to flay: She calles me to her, and she thus began: O thou, whose trust hath euer beene the same, 1430 And one in all my fortunes, faithfull man, Alone content t'attend disgrace and shame. Thou, whom the fearefull ruine of my fall, Neuer deterr'd to leave calamitie: As did those other smoothe state-pleasers all, VVho followed but my fortune, and not me, Tis thou must do a seruice for thy Queene, Wherein thy faith and skill must do their best: Thy honest care and duty shall be seene, Performing this, more then in all the rest. 1440 For all what thou hast done, may die with thee, Although tis pitty that fuch faith should die. But this shall euermore remembred be, A rare example to posterity. And looke how long as Cleopatra shall In after ages live in memory, So long shall thy cleare fame endure withall, And therefore thou must not my sute denie, Nor contradict my will. For what I will I am refolu'd; and this now must it be: 1450 Goe finde me out with all thy art and skill Two Aspicks, and conuay them close to me. I have a worke to doe with them in hand: Enquire not what, for thou shalt soone see what,

l. 1427, 'her' : l. 1435, '23, 'ftare-pleasers' (bad): l. 1438, 'loyaltie must worke her' : ll. 1440-49 omitted in ': l. 1450, 'tis thou must doe me '; in ' Thou must seeke out with all thy industrie': l. 1452, 'vnto'.

If the heavens doe not my disseignes withstand; But doe thy charge, and let me shift with that.

Being thus conjur'd by her t'whom I'had vow'd My true perpetuall service, forth I went, Deuising how my close attempt to shrowde, So that there might no art my art preuent. 1460 And so disguis'd in habite as you see, Hauing found out the thing for which I went, I foone return'd againe, and brought with me The Aspickes, in a basket closely pent: Which I had filled with Figges, and leaues vpon. And comming to the guard that kept the doore, What haft thou there? faid they, and lookt thereon. Seeing the figges, they deem'd of nothing more, But faid, they were the fairest they had seene. Tast some, said I, for they are good and pleasant. 1470 No, no, faid they, goe beare them to thy Queene, Thinking me some poore man that brought a present. Well, in I went, where brighter then the Sunne, Glittering in all her pompeous rich aray, Great Cleopatra fate, as if sh'had wonne Cafar, and all the world beside, this day: Euen as she was when on thy cristall streames, Cleare Cydnos, the did thew what earth could thew ; When Asia all amaz'd in wonder, deemes Venus from heaven was come on earth below. 1480 Euen as she went at first to meete her loue. So goes she now againe to finde him. But that first, did her greatnes onely proue, This last her love, that could not live behind him.

l. 1455, 'th'': l. 1456, 'for'': see Note before this I'lay for addition here in': l. 1471, '23' I' (bad): l. 1475 misprinted 'their' for 'her' in all.

Yet as she sate, the doubt of my good speed,
Detracts much from the sweetnes of her looke;
Cheere-marrer Care, did then such passions breed,
That made her eye bewray the griefe she tooke.
But she no sooner sees me in the place,
But strait her sorrow-clouded brow she cleares,
Lightning a smile from out a stormy sace,
Which all her tempest-beaten senses cheeres.

Looke how a strai'd perplexed traueller, When chafd by thieues, and euen at point of taking, Descrying suddenly some towne not far, Or fome vnlookt for aide to him-ward making; Cheeres vp his tyred sprites, thrusts forth his strength To meet that good, that comes in fo good houre: Such was her joy, perceiuing now at length, Her honour was t'escape so proude a powre. Forth from her feate she hasts to meete the present, And as one ouer-ioy'd, she caught it strait. And with a fmiling cheere in action pleafant, Looking among the figs, findes the deceite. And feeing there the vgly venemous beaft, Nothing difmaid, she stayes and viewes it well. At length th'extreamest of her passion ceast, When she began with words her joy to tell.

O rarest beast (saith she) that Affrick breedes,
How dearely welcome art thou vnto me?

The fairest creature that faire Nylus feedes
Me thinkes I see, in now beholding thee.
What though the euer-erring world doth deeme
That angred Nature fram'd thee but in spight?

l. 1509, 'all our Egypt' : l. 1510, 'now to' : ll. 1513-16 omitted in '.

Little they know what they fo light esteeme, That neuer learn'd the wonder of thy might. Better then Death, Deaths office thou dischargest, That with one gentle touch canst free our breath: And in a pleafing fleepe our foule inlargeft, Making our felues not priuy to our death. If Nature err'd, O then how happy error, Thinking to make thee worst, she made thee best: Sith thou best freest vs from our lives worst terror, In fweetly bringing foules to quiet reft. When that inexorable Monster Death That followes Fortune, flies the poore distressed, Tortures our bodies ere he takes our breath, And loades with paines th'already weak oppressed. How oft haue I begg'd, pray'd, intreated him To take my life, which he would neuer do; 1530 And when he comes, he comes fo vgly grim, Attended on with hideous torments to. Therefore come thou, of wonders wonder chiefe, That open canst with such an easie key The doore of life; come gentle cunning thiefe That from our felues so steal'st our selues away. Well did our Priefts discerne something divine Shadow'd in thee, and therefore first they did Offrings and worships due to thee assigne. In whom they found fuch mysteries were hid; Comparing thy fwift motion to the Sunne, That mou'ft without the instruments that moue:

ll. 1521-32 omitted in *: l. 1530, 'and yet could neuer get him?' l: l. 1532, 'That who is he (if he could chuse) would let him': l. 1533, 'O welcome now' !: ll. 1537-50 omitted in 4: l. 1540, '23 misprinted 'did.'

And neuer waxing old, but alwayes one, Doost fure thy strange divinitie approve. And therefore too, the rather vnto thee In zeale I make the offring of my blood; Calamitie confirming now in me A sure beliefe that pietie makes good. Which happy men neglect, or hold ambiguous. And onely the afflicted are religious.

1550

And here I facrifice these armes to Death,
That lust late dedicated to Delights:
Offring vp for my last, this last of breath,
The complement of my loues dearest rites.
With that she bares her arme, and offer makes
To touch her death, yet at the touch with-drawes,
And seeming more to speake, occasion takes,
Willing to die, and willing too to pause.

Looke how a mother at her sonnes departing
For some farre voyage bent to get him same, 1560
Doth entertaine him with an ydle parting
And still doth speake, and still speakes but the same;
Now bids farewell, and now recalles him backe,
Tels what was told, and bids againe sarewell,
And yet againe recalles; for still doth lacke
Something that Loue would saine and cannot tell;
Pleas'd he should goe, yet cannot let him goe.
So she, although she knew there was no way
But this, yet this she could not handle so
But she must shew that life desir'd delay.

1570
Faine would she entertaine the time as now,
And now would saine that Death would seize vpon her,

^{1. 1551, &#}x27;now' 4: 1. 1554, '23 misprinted 'complements': 1. 1555 misprinted 'beares': 1l. 1555-95 omitted in 4.

Whilst I might see presented in her brow. The doubtfull combate tride twixt Life and Honour. Life bringing Legions of fresh hopes with her, Arm'd with the proofe of time, which yeelds we fay Comfort and helpe, to fuch as doe referre All vnto him, and can admit delay. But honour scorning Life, loe forth leades he Bright Immortalitie in shining armour: 1580 Thorow the raves of whose cleare glory, she Might see lifes basenesse, how much it might harme her. Befides the faw whole armies of Reproches. And base Disgraces, Furies searefull sad, Marching with Life, and Shame that still incroches Vpon her face, in bloody colours clad. Which representments seeing, worse then death She deem'd to veeld to Life, and therefore chose To render all to Honour, heart and breath; And that with speed, lest that her inward foes 1500 False flesh and blood, ioyning with life and hope, Should mutinie against her resolution. And to the end fhe would not give them scope, Shee prefently proceedes to th'execution. And sharpely blaming of her rebell powres, False flesh (saith she) and what dost thou conspire With Cafar too, as thou yvert none of ours, To worke my shame, and hinder my defire? VVilt thou retaine in closure of thy vaines, That enemy, base Life, to let my good? No, know there is a greater powre constraines Then can be countercheckt with fearefull blood.

I. 1596, 'What now false flesh; what? and wilt': 1. 1598, 'adds here,' And bend thy rible parts against my powers.'

For to the minde that's great, nothing seems great: And seeing death to be the last of woes, And life lasting disgrace, which I shall get, VVhat doe I lose, that have but life to lose?

This having faid, strengthned in her owne heart,
And vnion of her selfe, senses in one
Charging together, she performes that part
That hath so great a part of glory wonne.

And so receives the deadly poysning tuch;
That touch that tride the gold of her love, pure,
And hath confirm'd her honour to be such,
As must a wonder to all worlds endure.

Now not an yeelding shrinke or touch of seare,
Consented to bewray least sense of paine:
But still in one same sweete vnaltred cheare,
Her honour did her dying thoughts retaine.

Well, now this worke is done (faith she) here ends
This act of Life, that part the Fates assign'd;
1620
VVhat glory or disgrace here this world lends,
Both haue I had, and both I leaue behind.
And now O earth, the Theater where I
Haue acted this, witnesse I die vnforst;
Witnesse my soule parts free to Antony,
And now prowde tyrant Casar doe thy worst.

This faid, she staies, and makes a sudden pause, As twere to seele whether the poyson vvrought: Or rather else the vvorking might be cause That made her stay, and intertain'd her thought. 1630

l. 1599, 'Wouldft' 4: l. 1603, 'a' 1: ll. 1607-14 omitted in 4: ll. 1615-18 in 4 are spoken by Eras: l. 1615, 'See not a' 1: l. 1616, 'Confents now': l. 1618, 'fpirits' 1: l. 1619, 'of mine is done' 4: l. 1620, 'me' 1: l. 1621, 'could lend' 4: l. 1622, 'mee' 1: l. 1623, 'And Egypt now' 4: l. 1626, see Note before this Play for new passage here: l. 1630, 'as likewife may be.'

For in that instant I might vvell perceive The drowfie humour in her falling brow: And how each powre, each part opprest did leaue Their former office, and did fenfelesse grow. Looke how a new pluckt branch against the Sun, Declines his fading leaves in feeble fort; So here diffiouned jountures as undone. Let fall her weake diffolued limbes support. Yet loe that face the vyonder of her life. Retaines in death, a grace that graceth death, Colour fo lively, cheere fo lovely rife, That none would thinke fuch beauty could want breath. And in that cheere th'impression of a smile, Did feeme to flew fle fcorn'd death and Cafar, As glorying that she could them both beguile, And telling Death how much her death did please her. Wonder it was to fee how foone fhe went! She went with fuch a will, and did so haste it. That fure I thinke she did her paine preuent, Fore-going paine, or staying not to taste it. 1650 And fenceleffe, in her finking downe she wrves The Diademe vyhich on her head she vyore: Which Charmion (poore weake feeble maid) espies, And haftes to right it as it was before, For Eras now was dead, and Charmion too Euen at the point, for both vyould immitate Their Mistresse glory, striuing like to doo. But Charmion vvould in this exceed he'r mate,

l. 1639, 'O fee this' : l. 1640, 'graces' : l. 1643, 'this' : l. 1644, 'fkorns both' : l. 1645, 'And glories' : l. 1646, 'And here tells well . . . death' : ll. 1647-59 omitted, except in lines worked in : l. 1651, '23 'wrines' (bad).

For fhe vvould have this honour to be last, That should adorne that head that must be seene 1660 To weare a Crowne in death, that life held fast, That all the world may know she dide a Queene. And as she stood, setting it fitly on. Loe, in rush Casars messengers in hast, Thinking to have prevented vvhat vvas done But yet they came too late, for all was past. For there they found stretcht on a bed of gold, Dead Cleopatra; and that proudly dead, In all the rich attire procure she could; And dying Charmion trimming of her head, 1670 And Eras at her feete, dead in like cafe. Charmion, is this well done? favd one of them. Yea, well fayd fhe, and her that from the race Of fo great Kings descends, doth best become. And with that word, yeelds to her faithfull breath, To passe th'assurance of her loue with death.

Cho. But how knew Cafar of her close intent?

Nun. By Letters which before to him she sent.

For when she had procur'd this meanes to die,

She writes, and earnestly intreates, she might 1680

Be buried in one Tombe with Antony.

Whereby then Cafar ges'd all went not right.

And forthwith sends; yet ere the message came

She was dispatcht, he crost in his intent;

Her providence had ordred so the same,

That she was sure none should her plot prevent.

CHORVS.

T Hen thus we have beheld Th'accomplishment of woes The full of ruine, and
The worst of worst of ills:
And seene all hope expeld,
That ever sweete repose
Shall repossesse the Land,
That Desolation fills.
And where Ambition spills
With vncontrouled hand,
All thissue of all those
That so long rule have held:
To make vs no more vs,
But cleane confound vs thus.

1690

1700

And canst O Nylus thou,
Father of flouds indure,
That yellow Tyber should
With sandy streames rule thee?
Wilt thou be pleas'd to bow
To him those feete so pure,
Whose vnknowne head we hold
A power divine to be?
Thou that didst ever see
Thy free bankes vncontrould,
Live vnder thine owne cure?
Ah wilt thou beare it now?
And now wilt yeeld thy streames
A prey to other Reames?

1710

Draw backe thy waters floe
To thy concealed head:
Rockes strangle up thy waves,
Stop Cataractes thy fall.
And turne thy courses so,

1720

That fandy Defarts dead,
(The world of dust that craues
To swallow thee vp all,)
May drinke so much as shall
Reviue from vasty graves
A living greene, which spred
Far florishing, may grow
On that wide face of Death,
Where nothing now drawes breath.

Fatten fome people there,
Euen as thou vs hast done,
With plenties wanton store,
And feeble luxury:
And them as vs prepare
Fit for the day of mone
Respected not before.
Leaue leuell'd Egypt drie,
A barren prey to lie,
Wasted for euer-more.
Of plenties yeelding none
To recompence the care
Of Victors greedy lust,
And bring forth nought but dust.

1740

1730

And so O leave to be,
Sith thou art what thou art:
Let not our race possesse
Th'inheritance of shame,
The fee of sin, that we
Have left them for their part:

1. 1736, '23 misprinted 'respect'; in 1 -ed — accepted.

The yoake of whose distresse
Must still upbraid our blame,
Telling from whom it came.
Our weight of wantonnesse
Lies heavy on their heart,
Who never-more shall see
The glory of that worth
They left, who brought vs forth.

1750

O then all-seeing light,
High President of Heauen,
You Magistrates, the Starres
Of that eternall Court
Of Providence and Right,
Are these the bounds y'haue given
Th'untranspassable barres,
That limit Pride so short?
Is greatnesse of this sort,
That greatnesse greatnesse marres,
And wrackes it selfe, selfe-driven
On Rockes of her owne might?
Doth Order order so
Disorders overthrow?

1760

1770

FINIS.

In on verso of last leaf:-

AT LONDON

Printed by Iames Roberts, and Edward Allde, for Simon Waterson. 1594.

PHILOTAS.

1607.

NOTE.

The first edition of 'Philotas' was published in 1605 in the 'Certaine Small Workes' (as before). It was succeeded by two editions in 1607—the one in the 1607 'Certaine Small Workes,' and the other in a charming little volume (18mo), worthy to rank with the 1594 'Delia.' Its titlepage, within a two-banded bordering, is as follows:—

THE

TRAGEDIE

of

PHILOTAS.

By SAM. DANIEL.

LONDON
Printed by Melch. Bradwood for Edw. Blount.
1607.

It was reprinted in the 'Certaine Small Workes' of 1609 and 1611. A collation of these shows only very trivial changes beyond orthography; but a recurrence to 'has enabled various misprints of '23 and others to be corrected. This '1607' volume contains the following other pieces by Daniel:—"Panegyrike . . . also certaine Epistles, with a Defence of Ryme heretofore written, and now published by the Author"—the 'Defence' having a separate title-page. These three tiny volumes are met with separately. My signs are—

 $1605 = {}^{1}$. $1607 = {}^{2}$ (the 18mo edition).

All the others yield only slight orthographical changes.

G.

THE TRAGEDY

OF

PHILOTAS.

By SAM. DANIEL.

LONDON,

Printed by Nicholas Okes for Simon Waterson. 1623.

III.

THE Distribution .

the Stein Davier.

MCGMOL.

To the Prince.

O you most hopefull Prince, not as you are, But as you may be, doe I giue these lines: That when your iudgement shall arriue so farre,

As t'ouer-looke th'intricate designes
Of vncontented man: you may beholde
With what encounters greatest fortunes close,

IO

What dangers, what attempts, what manifolde Incumbrances ambition undergoes:
How hardly men digest felicitie;
How to thintemprate, to the prodigall,
To wantonnesse, and unto luxurie,
Many things want, but to ambition all.
And you shall finde the greatest enemie
That man can have, is his prosperitie.

Here shall you see how men disguise their ends, And plant bad courses under pleasing shewes; How well presumptions broken wayes defends, Which cleere-eyed Iudgement grauely doth disclose, Here shall you see how th'easie multitude 20 Transported, take the partie of distresse; And onely out of passions doe conclude, Not out of indgement, of mens practifes; How pow'rs are thought to wrong, that wrongs debar, And Kings not held in danger, though they are. These ancient representments of times past Tell vs that men have, doe, and alwayes runne The selfe same line of action, and doe cast Their course alike, and nothing can be done, Whilst they, their ends, and nature are the same: But will be wrought upon the felfe same frame.

This benefit, most noble prince, doth yeeld The fure records of Bookes, in which we finde The tenure of our State, how it was held By all our Ancestors, and in what kinde We holde the same, and likewise how in the end This fraile possession of felicitie, Shall to our late posteritie descend By the same Patent of like destinie. In them we find that nothing can accrew To man, and his condition that is new. Which images here figured in this wife I leave unto your more mature survay, Among It the vowes that others facrifice Vnto the hope of you, that you one day Will give grace to this kinde of Harmonie. For know, great Prince, when you shall come to know How that it is the fairest Ornament Of worthy times, to have those which may shew

ll. 42-53 not in 1, 2: ll. 44-6 repeated at ll. 61-3.

30

40

The deedes of power, and lively represent 50 The actions of a glorious Gouernement. And is no lesser honor to a Crowne T'haue Writers then haue Actors of renowne. And though you have a Swannet of your owne, Within the bankes of Douen meditates Sweet notes to you, and vnto your renowne The glory of his Musicke dedicates, And in a lofty tune is set to sound The deepe reports of fullen Tragedies: Yet may this last of me be likewise found 60 Among It the vowes that others facrifice Vnto the hope of you, that you one day May grace this now neglected Harmonie, Which set unto your glorious actions, may Record the same to all posteritie. Though I the remnant of another time Am never like to see that happinesse,

Though I the remnant of another time

Am neuer like to see that happinesse,
Yet for the seale that I have borne to rime
And to the Muses, wish that good successe
To others travell, that in better place,
And better comfort, they may be incheerd
Who shall deserve, and who shall have the grace
To have a Muse held worthy to be heard.
And know, sweet Prince, when you shall come to know,
That tis not in the pow'r of Kings to raise
A spirit for Verse that is not borne thereto,
Nor are they borne in every Princes dayes:
For late Eliza's raigne gave birth to more
Then all the Kings of England did before.

1. 53: the '1607' text here ends in British Museum exemplar (probably imperfect). So, too, 1611 in 'Certaine Small Workes.'

And it may be, the Genius of that time 80 Would leave to her the glory in that kind, And that the vimost powers of English Rime Should be within her peacefull raigne confin'd; For since that time our Songs could never thrive, But laine as if forlorne; though in the prime Of this new raifing feason, we did strive To bring the best we could unto the time. And I although among the latter traine, And least of those that sung unto this land, Haue borne my part, though in an humble straine, 90 And pleased the gentler that did understand: And never had my harmelesse pen at all Distain'd with any loose immodestie, Nor ever noted to be toucht with gall, To aggravate the worst mans infamie. But still have done the fairest offices To vertue and the time, yet naught prenailes, And all our labours are without successe. For either fauour or our vertue failes. And therefore since I have out-liv'd the date 100 Of former grace, acceptance and delight, I would my lines late-borne beyond the fate Of her spent line, had never come to light. So had I not beene tax'd for wishing well, Nor now mistaken by the censuring Stage, Nor, in my fame and reputation fell, Which I esteeme more then what all the age Or th'earth can give. But yeeres hath done this wrong, To make me write too much, and live too long. And yet I grieve for that unfinisht frame. OII

Which thou deare Muse didst vow to sacrifice.

Vnto the bed of Peace, and in the same

Designe our happinesse to memorize,

Must, as it is, remaine: though as it is,

It shall to after-times relate my zeale

To Kings, and vnto right, to quietnesse,

And to the vnion of the Common-weale.

But this may now seeme a superstuous vow,

We have this peace; and thou hast sung enow,

And more then will be heard, and then as good

As not to write, as not be vnderstood.

SAM. DAN.

THE ARGVMENT.

Tilotas the Sonne of Parmenio, was a man of great estimation, among the Macedonians, and next vnto Alexander, held to be the most-valiant of the Greekes (Plutarch in the life of Alex.): patient of trauell, exceeding bountifull, and one that loued his men and friends better then any Noble-man of the Campe: but otherwise; noted of vaine-glory and prodigalitie, insomuch, as his 10 sather (hauing notice of his carriage) warned him to make himselfe lesse then he was, to auoide the enuie of the Campe, and the dislike of the King, who grew suspicious of him, in respect of the greatnesse of his sather, and his owne popularitie, and by hauing intelligence of certaine vaunts of his, vsed to Antigona, a faire Curtizan, borne in the City of Pidna; with whom being in loue, hee let fall many braue words and boasts of a Souldier, to advance his owne actions and his fathers, terming Alexander at euery word, The 20 yong man. Which speeches Antigona reuealing to a Companion of hers, were at length brought to Craterus who with the woman, carried them to Alexander (O. Curtius lib. 6.); whereby Philotas lay open to all the aduantages that might worke his ouerthrow; and in the end, concealing a conspiracie (which was reuealed vnto him) intended against the King, was thereby fuspected to have beene a party in the plot: but brought before Alexander, he so defended himselfe, 30 that hee obtained his pardon for that time, supped with the King that night, and yet the next day, notwithstanding was arraigned for the same fact; which hee stoutly denying, was afterward put to torture, and then confest his treason. And indeede, Alexanders drawing a Pedegree from Heauen, with affuming the Persian magnificence, was the cause that withdrew many [of] the hearts of the Nobilitie and people from him, and by the confession of Philotas was that, which gaue a purpose to him and his father to haue subuerted 40 the King as foone as hee had established Asia, and freed them from other feares; which being by Ephestion and Craterus, two the most especiall Councellers of Alexander, grauely and prouidently discerned, was profecuted in that manner as became their neerenesse and deerenesse with their Lord and Master, and fitting to the fafety of the State, in the case of so great an Afpirer; who, no doubt, had he not beene preuented (howfoeuer popularly in the Army it might be otherwife deemed) hee had turned the course of gouernement 50 vpon his father himfelfe, or els by his imbroilements made it a monster of many heads, as it afterward proued vpon the death of Alexander. The Chorus confisting of three Gracians (as of three estates of a Kingdome) and one Persian, representing the multitude and body of a People, who vulgarly (according to their affections, carried rather with compassion on Great-mens misfortunes, then with the confideration of the cause) frame their imaginations by that square, and 60 censure what is done.

The Names of the Actors.

Philotas.
Chalisthenes.
Alexander.
Ephestion.
Craterus.
Thais a Curtezan.
Antigona, sometimes one of the Concubines of Darius.
Attarras.

Sostratus.
Chorus.
Cebalinus.
Polidamas.
Nichomachus.
Metron.
Clitus.
Perdiceas.
Three Græcians and a
Persian.

THE TRAGEDY OF

Philotas.

ACTVS I. Philotas. Chalisthenes.

Philotas reading his fathers Letter.

Ake thy felfe leffe Philotas then thou art."

What meanes my father thus to write to me?

Leffe than I am? In what? How can that be?

Must I be then fet vnderneath my hart?

Shall I let goe the hold I haue of grace,
Gain'd with fo hard aduenture of my blood,
And fuffer others mount into my place,
And from below, looke vp to where I flood?
Shall I degrade th'opinion of my worth?
By putting off imployment; as vndone

10

In spirit or grace: whilst other men set forth
To get that start of action I have wonne?
As if such men as I, had any place,
To stay betwixt their ruine and their grace.
Can any goe beyond me, but they will
Goe ouer me, and trample on my state,
And make their fortunes good vpon my ill,
Whilst seare hath powre to wound me worse then hate?
Chal. Philotas, you deceive your selfe in this,
Your father meanes not you should yeeld in place,
But in your popular dependences,
Your entertainements, gists and publike grace;
That doth in iealous Kings, distaste the Peeres,

And makes you not the greater but in feares.

Phi. Alas, what popular dependences

Doe I retaine? Can I shake off the zeale

Of such as doe out of their kindnesses,

Follow my fortunes in the Common-weale?

Cha. Indeed Philotas therein you fay true: They follow doe your fortunes, and not you.

Phi. Yea, but I find their loue to me fincere.

Cha. Euen fuch as to the Woolfe the Fox doth beare,

30

40

That vifits him but to partake his pray, And feeing his hopes deceiu'd, turnes to betray.

Phi. I know they would, if I in danger flood, Runne vnto me with hazzard of their blood.

Cha. Yes, like as men to burning houses run, Not to lend aide, but to be lookers on

Phi. But I with bountie and with gifts haue tide Their hearts so sure, I know they will not slide.

1. 20, 'than '2: 1. 29, 'kindnesses' accepted from 1, 2, for 'kindnesse' of '23.

Cha. Bountie and gifts lose more than they doe finde,

Where many looke for good, few haue their minde; Each thinkes he merits more then that he hath; And so gifts laide for loue, doe catch men wrath.

Phi. But many meerely out of loue attend.

Cha. Yea, those that love and have no other end!
Thinke you that men can love you when they know
You have them not for friendship, but for show?

50
And as you are ingag'd in your affaires,
And have your ends, thinke likewise they have theirs.

Phi. But I doe truly from my heart affect Vertue and worth where I doe find it set:
Besides, my soes doe force me in effect
To make my party of opinion great,
And I must arme me thus against their scornes:
Men must be shod that goe amongst the thornes.

Cha. Ah, good Philotas, you your felfe beguile,
Tis not the way to quench the fire with Oile:
60
The meeke and humble Lambe with small adoo
Suckes his own damme, we see, and others too.
In Courts men longest liue, and keepe their rankes,
By taking injuries, and giuing thankes.

Phi. And is it so? Then neuer are these haires Like to attaine that sober hew of gray; I cannot plaster and disguise m'affaires In other colours then my heart doth lay. Nor can I patiently endure this fond And strange proceeding of authoritie, That hath ingrest vp all into their hand By idol-liuing seeble Maiestie,

I. 72-qy. "idle-"?

70

And impiously doe labour all they can To make the King forget he is a man; Whilst they divide the spoyles, and pray for powre, And none at all respect the publike good: Those hands that guard and get vs what is our, The Soldsilerie ingag'd to vent their blood, In worse case seeme then Pallas old-grow'n Moile Th'Athenians fostred at their publike cost; For these poore soules confum'd with tedious toile, Remaine neglected, having done their most, And nothing shall bring home of all these warres, But empty age, and bodies charg'd with fcarres.

80

90

Cha. Philotas, all this publike care, I feare, Is but some private touch of your dislike, Who feeing your owne defignes not stand to fauare

With your defires, no others courfes like. The griefe you take things are not ordered well, Is, that you feele your felfe, I feare, not well; But when your fortunes shall stand paralell With those you enuie now, all will be well: For you Great-men, I fee, are neuer more, Your end attain'd, the same you were before. You with a finger can point out the staines Of others errours now, and now condem The traine of state, whil'st your desire remaines Without. But once got in, you iumpe with them, And interleague yee with iniquitie, And with a like neglect doe temporize 100 And onely ferue your owne commoditie: Your fortune then viewes things with other eyes.

I. 75, 6 of 1 12

For either greatnesse doth transforme the hart In t'other shapes of thoughts, or certainely This vulgar honestie doth dwell apart From pow'r, and is some private quality. Or rather those faire parts which we esteeme In such as you, are not the same they seeme: You double with your selues or els with vs. And therefore now, Philotas, even as good T'imbrace the times, as swell and doe no good.

IIO

Phi. Alas, Chalisthenes, you have not laid True levell to my nature, but are wide From what I am within: all you have said Shall never make me of another side Then that I am, and I doe scorne to clime By shaking hands with this vnworthy time.

Cha. The time, Philotas, then will breake thy necke. Phi. They dare not, friend, my father will keepe my necke:

My feruice to the State hath caufioned
So furely for mine honor, as it shall
Make good the place my deedes haue purchased,
With danger, in the loue and hearts of all.

Cha. Those feruices will serve as weights to charge And presse you vnto death, if your foot faile Neuer so little vnderneath your charge, And will be deem'd, done for your owne availe. And who have spirits to doe the greatest good, May doe most hurt, if they remaine not good.

Phi. Tush, they cannot want my service in the State.

Cha. These times want not men to supply the State.

1. 112, 2 oddly misprints 'yaue.'

Phi. I feare not whilst Parmenios forces stand.
Cha. Water farre off quenches not fire neere hand.
You may be faire dispatcht, ere he can heare,
Or if he heard, before he could be here.
And therefore doe not build vpon such sand,
It will deceiue your hopes when all is done;
For though you were the Minion of the Land,
If you breake out, be sure you are vndone.
When running with the current of the State,
Were you the weakest man of men aliue,
And in Conuentions and in Counsell sate,
And did but sleepe or nod, yet shall you thriue;
These motive spirits are never fit to rise,
And tis a danger to be held so wise.

Phi. What call you running with the State? Shall I Combine with those that doe abuse the State? Whose want of iudgement, wit and honesty, I am asham'd to see, and seeing hate.

Cha. Tush, tush, my Lord, thinke not of what were fit:

The world is gouern'd more by forme, then wit. He that will fret at Lords, and at the raine, Is but a foole, and grieues himselse in vaine. Cannot you Great-men suffer others to Haue part in rule, but must have all to do? Now good my Lord conforme you to the rest, Let not your wings be greater then your nest.

Phi. folus. See how these vaine discoursiue Book-men Out of those shadowes of their ayrie powers, [talke, And doe not see how much they must defalke 160 Of their accounts, to make them gree with ours.

l. 151, 'than' 2.

They little know to what necessities
Our courses stand allied, or how we are
Ingag'd in reputation otherwise,
To be our selues in our particular.
They thinke we can command our harts to lie
Out of their place; and still they preach to vs
Pack-bearing Patience; that base propertie,
And silly gift of th'all enduring Asse.
But let them talke their fill, it is but winde,
I must sayle by the Compasse of my minde.

170

Enters a Messenger.

My Lord, the King call's for you, come my Lord away.

Phi. Well then I know ther's fome new stratagem
In hand, to be consulted on to day,
That I am sent for, with such speede, to him,
Whose youth and fortune cannot brooke delay.
But here's a suter stands t'impeach my haste:
I would I had gone vp the privile way,
Whereby we escape th'attending multitude;
Though, I confesse, that in humanity
Tis better to denie, then to delude.

Enters Cebalinus.

My Lord Philotas, I am come with newes
Of great importance, that concernes vs all;
And well hath my good fortune met with you,
Who best can heare, and best discharge my care.
Phi. Say what it is, and pray-thee friend be briefe.
Ceb. The case requires your patience, good my Lord
And therefore I must craue your eare a while.

190

Phi. I cannot now be long from Alexander. Ceb. Nor Alexander will be long with vs, Vnlesse you heare: and therefore know, the newes I bring, concernes his life; and this it is: There is one Dymnus here within the Campe, Whose low estate, and high affections, Seeme to have thrust him int'outragious wayes. This man, affecting one Nichomachus, A youth, my brother: whom one day h'allures Int'a Temple; where being both alone, 200 He breakes out in this fort: Nichomacus, Sweet louely youth; ah, should I not impart To thee the deepest secrets of my heart! My heart that hath no locke shut against thee, Would let it out sometimes vnwares of me; But as it iffues from my faithfull loue, So close it vp in thine, and keepe it fast. Sweare to be fecret, deare Nichomacus, Sweare by the facred God-head of this place, To keepe my counfell, and I will reueale 210 A matter of the greatest consequence That euer man imparted to his friend. Youth and defire, drawne with a loue to know, Swore to be fecret, and to keepe it close. Then Dymnus tels him, That within three dayes There should b'effected a conspiracy On Alexanders person, by his meanes And divers more of the Nobility, To free their labours, and redeeme them home. Which when Nichomacus my brother heard: 220 Is this your tale? fayth he, O God forbid Mine oath should tie my tongue to keepe in this!

This ougly finne of treason, which to tell Mine oath compels me; faith against my faith Must not be kept. My falshood here is truth. And I must tell. Friend or friend not, I'l tell. Dymnus amaz'd, hearing beyond conceit The felfe-will'd youth vow to reueale their plot, Stands staring on him, drawing backe his breath, Or els his breath confounded with his thoughts Bufied with death and horror, could not worke: Not having leafure now to thinke what was, But what would be, his feares were runne before, And at miffortune ere she came to him. At length yet, when his reason had reduc'd His flying thoughts backe to some certaine stand, Perceiuing yet some distance was betwixt Death and his feares, which gaue him time to worke, With his returning spirits he drew his sword, Puts it t'his owne then to my brothers throat, Then laies it downe, then wrings his hands, then kneeles, Then stedfast lookes, then takes him in his armes, Weeps on his necke, no word, but, O wilt thou? VVilt thou, be the destruction of vs all? And finding no relenting in the youth, His miseries grew furious, and againe He takes his fword, and fweares to facrifice To filence and their cause, his dearest bloud. The boy amaz'd, feeing no other way, VVas faine to vow, and promise secrecy; 250 And as if woon t'allow and take that part, Prayes him tell, who were his complices. Which, though perplext with griefe for what was done, Yet thinking now thaue gain'd him to his fide,

Dymnus replies: No worfe than Loceus. Demetrius of the privy Chamber, and Nicanor, Amyntas, and Archelopis, Drocenus, Aphebetus, Leuculaus, Shall be th'affociats of Nichomacus. This when my brother once had understood. 260 And after much adoe had got away, He comes, and tells me all the whole discourse. Which here I have related vnto you: And here will I attend t'auouch the fame. Or bring my brother to confirme as much, Whom now I left behinde, left the conspirators Seeing him here vnusing to this place, Suspecting t'b'appeach'd, might shift away. Phil. Well fellow, I have heard thy strange report,

SCENA SECVNDA.

And will find time t'acquaint the King therewith. 270

Antigona, and Thais.

Was I belou'd, inrich'd, and grac'd before?

Am I not lou'd, inrich'd, and gracèd now?

Tha. Yea, but before thou wert a Kings delight.

Ant. I might be his, although he was not mine.

Tha. His greatnes made thee greater in mens fight.

Ant. More great perhaps without, but not within:

My loue was then aboue me: I am now

281

Aboue my loue. Darius then had thousands more:

Philotas hath but me as I do know,

Nor none els will he haue, and so he swore.

Tha. Nay, then you may believe him, if he fwore. [Afide] Alas, poore foule, she never came to know Nor liberty, nor lovers periuries.

Ant. Stand I not better with a meaner loue,
That is alone to me, than with these powres,
Who out of all proportion must b'aboue 290
And haue vs theirs, but they will not be ours.
And Thais, although thou be a Grecian,
And I a Persian, do not enuy me,
That I embrace the onely gallant man
Persia, or Greece, or all the world can see.
Thou, who art entertein'd and grac'd by all
The flowre of honour els, do not despise,
That vnto me, poore captiue, should befall
So great a grace in such a worthies eyes.
Tha. Antigona, I enuy not thy loue, 300

Tha. Antigona, I enuy not thy loue,
But thinke thee bleft t'enioy him in that fort.
But tell me truly, Didst thou euer proue
Whether he lou'd in earnest or in sport?

Ant. Thais, let m'a little glory in my grace,
Out of the passion of the ioy I feele,
And tell the'a secret; but in any case,
As y'are a woman, do not it reueale.
One day, as I was sitting all alone,
In comes Philotas from a victory,
All blood and dust, yet iolly, having wonne
The glory of the day most gallantly:
And warm'd with honour of his good successe,
Relates to me the dangers he was in:
Whereat I wondring, blam'd his forwardnesse.
Faith wench, sayes he, thus must we fight, toyle, win,

l. 287, 'Her liberty' 1, 2.

To make that yong-man proud: thus is he borne Vpon the wings of our deferts; our blood Sets him aboue himfelfe, and makes him fcorne His owne, his country, and the authors of his good. My father was the first that out from Greece 320 Shew'd him the way of Asia, set him on, And by his proiect raif'd the greatest peece Of this proud worke which now he treads vpon. Parmenio without Alexander much hath wrought, Without Parmenio, Alexander hath done nought. But let him vse his fortune whilst he may, Times have their change, we must not still be led. And fweet Antigona thou mayst one day Yet, bleffe the houre t'haue knowne Philotas bed; Wherewith he fweetly kift me. And now deeme, 330 If that fo great, fo wife, fo rare a man Would, if he held me not in deare esteeme, Haue vttred this t'a captiue Persian. But Thais I may no longer stay, for feare My Lord returne, and find me not within; Whose eyes yet neuer saw me any where But in his chamber, where I should have been: And therefore Thais farewell.

Tha. Farewell Antigona.

Now haue I that, which I defired long,
Layd in my lap by this fond woman heere,
And meanes t'auenge me of a fecret wrong
That doth concerne my reputation neere.
This gallant man, whom this foole in this wife
Vants to be hers, I must confesse t'haue lou'd,
And vi'd all th'engins of these conquering eyes,
Affections in his hie-built heart t'haue mou'd,

340

Yet neuer could: for what my labour feekes I fee is lost upon vaine ignorance, Whil'ft he that is the glory of the Greekes, 350 Virtues vpholder, honours countenance, Out of this garnish of his worthy parts Is fall'n vpon this foolish Persian, To whom his fecrets grauely he imparts; Which she as wifely keepe and gouerne can. Tis strange to see the humour of these men, These great aspiring spirits, that should be wise; We women shall know all: for now and then, Out of the humour of their iollities, The smoake of their ambition must have vent. 360 And out it comes what racks should not reueale: For this her humour hath fo much of winde, That it will burft it felfe if too close pent: And none more fit than vs their wisdomes finde, Who will for loue or want of wit conceale, For being the nature of great spirits, to love To be where they may be most eminent; And rating of themselues so farre aboue Vs in conceit, with whom they do frequent. Imagine how we wonder and esteeme 370 All that they do or fay; which makes them strive To make our admiration more extreme: Which they suppose they cannot, 'lesse they give Notice of their extreme and highest thoughts: And then the opinion, that we love them too, Begets a confidence of fecrecy:

^{1. 358, &#}x27;now' from 1, 2, accepted for '23 'how': 1. 359, Ibid. 'their' for 'thefe.'

Whereby what euer they intend to doo, We shall be sure to know it presently.

But faith, I fcorne that fuch a one as she, A filly wittied wench, should have this grace To be preferr'd and honor'd before me, Hauing but only beauty, and a face. I that was euer courted by the great And gallant'st Peeres and Princes of the East, Whom Alexander in the greatest state The earth did euer fee him, made his guest. There where this tongue obtained for her merit Eternity of Fame: there where these hands Did write in fire the glory of my spirit, And fet a trophey that for euer stands: Thais action with the Grecian acts shall be Thais, she that fir'd Inregistred alike. The stateliest palace th'earth did euer see; Darius house, that to the clouds aspir'd: She is put backe behinde Antigona.

But foone Philotas fhall his error fee,
Who thinkes that beauty best, mens passions fits
For that they vse our bodies, not our wits:
And vnto Craterus will I presently,
And him acquaint with all this whole discourse,
Who, I am sure, will take it well of vs:
For these great Minions, who with enuious eie
Looke on each others greatnesse, will be glad,
In such a case of this importancy,
To have th'advantage that may here be had.

380

390

400

CHORVS.

WE as the Chorus of the vulgar, stand Spectators heere, to see these great men play Their parts both of obedience and command, And censure all they do, and all they say. 410 For though we be esteem'd but ignorant, Yet are we capable of truth, and know Where they do well, and where their actions want The grace that makes them prove the best in show. And though we know not what they do within, Where they attire, their mysteries of State, Yet know we by theuents, what plots have beene, And how they all without do personate. We see who well a meaner part became, Faile in a greater, and disgrace the same. 420 We see some worthy of advancement deem'd, Saue when they have it: Some againe have got Good reputation, and beene well esteem'd In place of greatnesse, which before were not. We see affliction act a better scæne Than prosperous fortune which hath marr'd it cleane. We see that all which we have praised in some, Haue only beene their fortune, not defart: Some warre have grac'd, whom peace doth ill become, And luftfull ease hath blemisht all their part. 430 We see Philotas acts his goodnesse ill, And makes his passions to report of him Worse than he is: and we do feare he will Bring his free nature to b'intrapt by them. For sure there is some engin closely laid Against his grace and greatnesse with the King:

And that vulesse his humors prove more staid,
We soone shall see his vetter ruining.
And his affliction our compassion drawes,
Which still lookes on mens fortunes, not the cause. 440

ACTVS II. SCENA I.

Alexander, Ephestion, Craterus.

Alexander.

Phestion, thou doest Alexander loue,
Craterus, thou the King: yet both you meet
In one selfe point of loyalty and loue,
And both I find like carefull, like discreet;
Therefore my faithfull'st Counsellers, to you
I must a weighty accident impart,
Which lies so heavy, as I tell you true
I finde the burthen much t'oppresse my hart.
Ingratitude and stubburne carriage,
In one of whom my loue deserv'd respect,
Is that which moves my passion into rage,

And is a thing I ought not to neglect.
You fee how I Philotas raifèd haue
Aboue his ranke, his Peeres, beyond his terme;
You fee the place, the offices I gaue,
As th'earnest of my loue to binde his firme:
But all, he deeming rather his desarts,
Than the effects of my grace any way,
Beginnes to play most peremptory parts,
As fitter to controule than to obay.
And I haue beene inform'd, he fosters too
The faction of that home-bent cowardize,

1. 446, 'one' from 1, 2, accepted for 'on' of '23.

460

That would run backe from glory, and vndoo All the whole wonder of our enterprize; And one day to our felfe prefumes to write, (Seeming our stile and title to abraid, Which th'oracles themselves held requisite, 470 And which not I, but men on me haue laid) And fayd he pitied those who under him should live, Who held himselfe the sonne of Jupiter. Alas good man, as though what breath could give Could make mine owne thoughts other than they are! I that am Arbitrer betwixt my heart And their opinion, know how it stands within, And finde that my infirmities take part Of that same frailty other men liue in. And yet, what if I were disposed to winke 480 At th'entertain'd opinion spred so farre, And rather was content the world should thinke Vs other than we are, than what we are? In doing which, I know I am not gone Beyond example, feeing that maiesty Needs all the props of admiration That may be got, to beare it vp on hie; And much more mine, which but eu'n now begun By miracles of fortune, and our worth, Needs all the complements to rest vpon That reu'rence and opinion can bring forth; 490 Which this wife man conceives not, and yet takes Vpon him to instruct vs what to do. But these are but the flourishes he makes Of greater malice he is bent vnto:

l. 469, 'obrayd' 1, 'obraid' 2: l. 483, 'than' of 2 corrects 'that' of '23;
'then' 1.

For fure, me thinkes, I view within his face The map of change and innovation: I fee his pride contented with no place, Vnlesse it be the throne I sit vpon.

Ephest. Had I not heard this from your facred tongue,

Deare Souereigne, I would neuer haue beleeued 50I Philotas folly would have done that wrong To his owne worth and th'honours he received: And yet me thought, of late, his carriage In fuch exceeding pompe and gallantry, And fuch a world of followers, did prefage That he affected popularity, Especially, since for his seruice done He was adjudg'd to have the fecond place In honour with Antigonus: which wonne 510 To fome th'opinion to be high in grace; Then his last action, leading the right wing, And th'ouerthrow he gaue, might hap inlarge Th'opinion of himselfe, considering Th'especiall grace and honour of his charge; Whereby perhaps in rating his owne worth, His pride might vnder-value that great grace From whence it grew, and that which put him forth, And made his fortune futing to the place. But yet I thinke he is not fo vnwise 520 Although his fortune, youth, and iollity Makes him thus mad, as he will enterprife Ought against course, his faith, and loyalty: And therefore, if your Grace did but withdraw Those beames of fauour, which do daze his wits,

1. 497, 'inouacion' of 1 and 'innouation' of 2 corrects' 23 'invocation.'

He would be foone reduc'd t'his ranke of aw, And know himselse, and beare him as besits.

Alex. Withdraw our grace? and how can that be done, Without fome fullination to enfue!

Can he be fafe brought in, being so farre gone? 530

I hold it not. Say Craterus, What thinke you?

Cra. Souereigne, I know the man: I finde his spirit: And malice shall not make me (I protest) Speake other than I know his pride doth merit: And what I speake, is for your interest, Which long ere this I would have vttered. But that I fear'd your Maiesty would take, That from fome private grudge it rather bred. Than out of care, for your deare fifters fake; Or rather, that I fought to crosse your Grace, 540 Or, to confine your fauour within bounds: And finding him to hold fo high a place In that divine conceit which ours confounds: I thought the fafest way to let it rest. In hope, that time some passage open would, To let in those cleere lookes into that brest That doth but malice and confusion hold. And now I fee you have difcern'd the man Whom (I protest) I hold most dangerous. And that you ought, with all the speede you can, 550 Worke to represse a spirit so mutinous: For eu'n already he is fwoll'n fo hie. That his affections overflow the brim Of his owne pow'rs, not able to deny Passage vnto the thoughts that gouerne him : For but eu'n now I heard a strange report, Of speeches he should vse t'his Curtizan ;

Vanting what he had done, and in what fort He labour'd to aduance that proud yong man. (So terming of your facred Maiesty) With other fuch extrauagant discourse, Whereof we shall attaine more certeinty (I doubt not) shortly, and discry his course. Meane while, about your person (I aduise) Your Grace should call a more sufficient guard, And on his actions fet fuch wary eyes, As may thereof take speciall good regard; And note what persons chiefly he frequents. And who to him have the most free accesse: How he bestowes his time; where he presents The large revenue of his bounteousnesse. And for his wench that lies betwixt his armes. And knowes his heart, I will about with her: She shalbe wrought t'apply her vsuall charmes, And I will make her my discouerer.

Alex. This counfell (Craterus) we do well allow, And give thee many thankes for thy great care: But yet we must beare faire, lest he should know That we suspect what his affections are: For that you see he holds a side of pow'r, Which might perhaps call vp some mutiny: His father, old Parmenio, at this howre Rules Medeæ with no lesser pow'rs than I; Himselfe, you see, gallantly followed, Holds next to vs a speciall government; Cænus, that with his sister married, Hath vnder him againe commandement; Amintas and Symanus, his deare friends, With both their honourable offices;

560

570

580

And then the private traine that on them tends, 590 With all particular dependences, Are motives to adulfe vs how to deale.

Crat. Your Grace faies true, but yet these clouds of smoke

Vanish before the sun of that respect Whereon mens long-inur'd affections looke With such a native zeale, and so affect, As that the vaine and shallow practises Of no such giddy traytour (if the thing Be tooke in time with due aduisednesse) Shal the least shew of any fearing bring.

Alex. Well, then to thee (deare Craterus) I refer Th'especiall care of this great businesse.

SCENA SECVNDA. Philotas, Ceballinus, Seruus.

Ceballinus.

Y Lord, I here have long attendance made, Expecting to be call'd t'auouch my newes, Phi. In troth (my friend) I have not found the King At any leafure yet to heare the fame.

Ceb. No, not at leasure to preuent his death?

And is the matter of no more import?

I'l try another. Yet me thinkes such men

As are the eyes and eares of Princes, should

Not weigh so light such an intelligence.

Ser. My Lord, the summe you willed me to give The captaine that did visit you to day;
To tell you plaine, your coffers yeeld it not.

Phi. How if they yeeld it not? Haue I not then

Apparell, plate, iewels? Why fell them, And go your way, dispatch, and giue it him.

Philotas alone.

620

Me thinkes I find the King much chang'd of late, And vnto me his graces not so great: Although they feeme in fhew all of one rate, Yet by the touch, I find them counterfet: For when I speake, although I have his eare, Yet do I fee his mind is other where: And when he speakes to me, I see he strives To give a colour vnto what is not: For he must think, that we, whose states, whose liues Depend vpon his Grace, learne not by rote 630 T'obserue his actions, and to know his trym. And though indeed Princes be manifold, Yet have they still such eyes to wait on them, As are too piercing, that they can behold And penetrate the inwards of the heart, That no deuice can fet fo close a doore Betwixt their shew and thoughts, but that their art Of shadowing it, makes it appeare the more. But many, malicing my state of grace, I know no worke, with all the power they have 640 Vpon that easie nature, to displace My fortunes, and my actions to depraue. And though I know they feeke t'inclose him in. And faine would locke him vp and chamber him. Yet will I neuer stoppe, and seeke to win My way by them, that came not in by them:

^{1. 619, &#}x27;Plutarch in the life of Alexander' (in margin): 1. 629, 'whose' of 1, 2, corrects '23 'who': 1. 637, 'shewes' 1, 2.

And fcorne to stand on any other feet
Than these of mine owne worth; and what my plaine
And open actions cannot fairely get,
Basenesse and smoothing them, shall neuer gaine. 650
And yet, I know, my presence and accesse
Cleeres all these mists which they have rais'd before,
Though, with my backe, straight turnes that happinesse,
And they againe blow up as much or more.

Thus do we roule the stone of our owne toyle, And men suppose our hell, a heaven the while.

SCENAIII. Craterus, Antigona.

Craterus.

A Ntigona, there is no remedy,
You needs must instifie the speech you held 660
With Thais, who will your confrence verifie,
And therefore now it can not be conceal'd.

Ant. O, my good Lord, I pray you vrge me not: Thais only of a cunning enuious wit, Scorning a stranger should have such a lot, Hath out of her invention forged it.

Crat. Why then, shall racks and tortures force thee show

Both this and other matters which we know?
Thinke therefore, if't were not a wifer part
T'accept of rest, rewards, preferment, grace,
And being perhaps, so beautious as thou art,
Of faire election for a neerer place;
To tell the truth, than to be obstinate,
And fall with the missortune of a man,

670

TII.

Who, in his dangerous and concussed state, No goode to thee, but ruine render can. Resolue thee of this choice, and let me know Thy minde at full, at my returning backe.

Ant. What shall I do, shall I betray my Loue, Or die difgrac'd? What, do I make a doubt! Betray my Loue? O heauenly pow'rs aboue Forbid that fuch a thought should iffue out Of this confused brest: Nay rather first Let tortures, death and horror do their worst. But out alas, this inconfiderate tongue, Without my hearts confent and privity, Hath done already this vnwilling wrong, And now it is no wisdome to deny. No wisdome to deny? Yes, yes, that tongue That thus hath beene the traytour to my heart, Shall either pow'rfully redeeme that wrong, Or neuer more shall words of breath impart, Yet, what can my deniall profit him, Whom they perhaps, whether I tell or not, Are purpof'd, vpon matters knowne to them, To ruinate on some discouered plot? Let them do what they will. Let not thy heart Seeme to be accessary in a thought. To give the least advantage of thy part, To have a part of shame in what is wrought. O this were well, if that my dangers could Redeeme his perill, and his grace restore; For which, I vow, my life I render would, If this poore life could fatisfie therefore. But tis not for thy honour to forfake Thy Loue for death, that lou'd thee in this fort.

690

680

700

Alas, what notice will the world take Of fuch respects in women of my fort? This act may yet put on so faire [a] coate Vpon my foule profession, as it may 710 Not blush t'appeare with those of cleanest note, And have as hie a place with fame as they. What do I talke of fame? Do I not fee This faction of my flesh, my feares, my youth Already entred; and haue bent at me, The ioyes of life, to batter downe my truth? O my fubdued thoughts! what have you done? To let in feare, falshood to my heart. Whom though they have furpriz'd, they have not won; For still my loue shall hold the dearest part. Crat. Antigona, What, are you yet refolu'd? Ant. Refolu'd, my Lord, t'endure all misery? Crat. And so be sure you shall, if that b'your choice. Ant. What will you have me do, my Lord, I am Content to fay what you will have me fay. Crat. Then come, go with me to Alexander.

CHORVS.

H Ow dost thou weare, and weary out thy dayes,
Restlesse ambition, neuer at an end!
Whose trauels no Herculean pillar stayes,
But still beyond thy rest thy labours tend:
Aboue good fortune thou thy hopes dost raise,
Still climing, and yet neuer canst ascend:
For when thou hast attaind vnto the top
Of thy desires, thou hast not yet got up.

That height of fortune either is controld

By some more pow'rfull overlooking eye,

(That doth the fulnesse of thy grace withhold)

Or counter-checkt with some concurrency,

That it doth cost farre more ado to hold

The height attain'd, than was to get so hie;

740

Where stand thou canst not, but with carefull toile,
Nor loose thy hold without thy vtter spoile.

There dost thou struggle with thine owne distrust,
And others iealousies, their counterplot,
Against some under-working pride, that must Supplanted be, or els thou standest not.

There wrong is playd with wrong, and he that thrust
Downe others, comes himselfe to have that lot.

The same concurssion doth afflict his brest
That others shooke: oppression is oppress,
That either happinesse dwells not so hie,
Or els aboue, whereto pride cannot rise:
And that the highst of mans felicity,
But in the region of affliction lies:
And that we climbe but up to misery:
High fortunes are but high calamities.

760

750

It is not in that Sphere, where peace doth move;
Reft dwell's below it, happinesse above.
For in this height of fortune are imbred
Those thundring fragors that affright the earth:
From thence have all distempratures their head,
That brings forth desolation, famine, dearth:
There certaine order is disordered:
And there it is confusion hath her birth.

It is that height of fortune doth vndoo Both her owne quietnesse and others too.

ACTVS TERTIVS.

Alexander, Metron, Ceballinus, Craterus, Perdiceas, Ephestion.

Alexander.

770

Ome, Metron fay, of whom hast thou received Th'intelligence of this conspiracy, Contriu'd against our person, as thou sayst, By Dymnus and some other of the Campe? Is't not some vaine report borne without cause, That enuy or imagination drawes From private ends, to breed a publike seare, T'amuze the world with things that neuer were?

Met. Here, may it please your Highnesse is the man, One Ceballinus, that brought me the newes. 780

Ceb. O, Alexander! I have fau'd thy life; I am the man that have reveal'd their plot.

Alex. And how cam'ft thou to be inform'd thereof?

Ceb. By mine owne brother, one Nichomacus, Whom Dymnus, chiefe of the conspiratours,

Acquainted with the whole of their intents.

Alex. How long fince is it, this was told to thee?

Ceb. About fome three dayes, my fouereigne Lord.

Alex. What, three dayes fince! and haft thou fo long kept

790

The thing conceal'd from vs, being of that weight? Guard, Take and lay him presently in hold.

Ceb. O, may it please your Grace, I did not keep The thing conceal'd one houre, but presently Ran to acquaint Philotas therewithall, Supposing him a man, so neere in place,

Would best respect a case that toucht so neere;
And on him haue I waited these two dayes,
Expecting thaue beene brought vnto your Grace;
And seeing him weigh it light, pretending that
Your Graces leasure served not sit to heare,
I to the Master of your armoury
Addrest my selfe forthwith, to Metron here;
Who, without making any more delay,
Prest in vnto your Grace, being in your bath;
Locking me vp the while in th'armoury:
And all what I could shew reuealed hath.

Alex. If this be fo, then, fellow, I confesse, Thy lovall care of vs was more than theirs, Who had more reason theirs should have bin more. Cause Dymnns to be presently brought forth, 810 And call Philotas streight: who, now I see, Hath not deceiu'd me, in deceiuing me. Who would have thought one, whom I held fo neere, Would from my fafety haue beene fo farre off, When most it should and ought import his care, And wherein his allegeance might make proofe Of those effects my fauours had deseru'd, And ought t'haue claim'd more duty at his hands Than any of the rest? But thus w'are seru'd, When private grace out of proportion stands, 820 And that we call vp men from of [f] below, From th'element of baser property; And fet them where they may behold and know The way of might, and worke of maiesty: VVhere feeing those rayes, which being fent far off, Reflect a heate of wonder and respect, To faile neere hand, and not to shew that proofe,

(The obiect only working that effect)
Thinke (seeing themselves, though by our favour, set VVithin the selfe same orbe of rule with vs)
Their light would shine alone, if ours were set;
And so presume tobscure or shadow vs.
But he shall know, although his neerenesse hath
Not selt our heat, that we can burne him too;
And grace that shines, can kindle vnto wrath;
And Alexander and the King are two.
But here they bring vs Dymnus, in whose sace
I see is guilt, despaire, horror, and death.

Guar. Yea, death indeed, for ere he could b'attach'd He stabb'd himselse so deadly to the heart, 840.

As tis impossible that he should live.

Alex. Say Dymnus, what have I deserved of thee, That thou shouldst thinke worthier to be thy King, Philotas, than our selfe? hold, hold, he sinks; Guard keepe him vp, get him to answer vs.

Guar. He hath spoke his last, h'wil neuer answer more.

Alex. Sorry I am for that, for now hath Death
Shut vs cleane out from knowing him within,
And lockt vp in his brest all the others hearts.
But yet this deed argues the truth in grosse,
Though we be barr'd it in particular.

Philotas, are you come? Looke here, this man,
This Ceballinus should have suffred death,
Could it but have beene prov'd he had conceal'd
Th'intended treason from vs these two dayes;
Wherewith (he sayes) he streight acquainted thee.
Thinke, the more neere thou art about our selse,
The greater is the shame of thine offence:
And which had beene lesse foule in him than thee.

Phil. Renowmed Prince, for that my heart is cleere. Amazement cannot ouer cast my face, And I must boldly with th'assured cheere Of my vnguilty conscience, tell your Grace, That this offence (thus hapning) was not made By any the least thought of ill in me; And that the keeping of it vnbewrai'd, Was, that I held the rumour vaine to be. Confidering fome, who were accuf'd, were knowne Your ancient and most loyall seruitours, And fuch, as rather would let out their owne 870 Heart blood, I know, than once indanger yours. And for me then, vpon no certaine note, But on the brabble of two wanton youthes, T'haue tolde an idle tale, that would haue wrought In you distrust, and wrong to others truths, And to no end, but only to have made My felfe a fcorne, and odious vnto all. (For which I rather tooke the bait was layd, Than els for any treachery at all.) 880 I must confesse, I thought the safest way To smoother it a while, to th'end I might, If fuch a thing could be, some proofes bewray, That might yeeld probability of right; Protesting that mine owne vnspotted thought A like beleefe of others truth did breed. Iudging no impious wretch could haue bin wrought T'imagine such a detestable deed. And therefore, O dread Souereigne, do not way Philotas faith by this his overfight, But by his actions past, and only lay 890 Error t'his charge, not malice or despight.

Alex. Well, loe, thou hast a fauourable Iudge, When, though thou hast not pow'r to cleere thy blame, Yet hath he pow'r to pardon thee the same; Which take not as thy right, but as his grace, Since here the person alters not the case. And here, Philotas, I forgive the offence, And to confirme the same, loe here's my hand.

Phi. O facred hand, the witnesse of my life!

By thee I hold my safety as secure 900

As is my conscience free from treachery.

Alex. Well, go t'your charge, and looke to our affaires, For we to morrow purpose to remoue. Exit.

Alex. In troth I know not what to iudge herein,
Me thinkes that man feemes furely cleere in this,
How ever otherwise his hopes have beene
Transported by his vnaduisednesse:
It cannot be, a guilty conscience should
Put on so sure a brow; or els by art
His lookes stand newtrall, seeming not to hold
Respondency of intrest with his heart.
Sure, for my part, he hath dissolu'd the knot
Of my suspition, with so cleere a hand,
As that I thinke in this (what ever plot
Of mischiese it may be) he hath no hand.

Crat. My Lord, the greater confidence he shewes, Who is suspected, should be fear'd the more: For danger from weake natures neuer growes; Who must disturbe the world, are built therefore.

He more is to be fear'd, that nothing feares,
And malice most effects, that least appeares.

Presumption of mens pow'rs as well may breed
Assurednesse, as innocency may;

And mischiefe seldome but by trust doth speed; Who Kings betray, first their beleefe betray. I would your Grace had first conferr'd with vs, Since you would needs fuch clemency have shown, That we might yet haue aduir'd you thus, That he his danger neuer might haue know'n.

In faults wherein an after-hame will live, Tis better to conceale, than to forgive:

For who are brought vnto the blocke of death. Thinke rather on the perill they have past, Than on the grace which hath preferu'd their breath; And more their fuffrings than their mercy tast: He now to plot your danger still may live. But you his guilt not alwayes to forgiue.

930

Know, that a man fo fwoll'n with discontent, No grace can cure, nor pardon can restore; He knowes how those who once hath mercy spent, 940

Can neuer hope to haue it any more.

But fay, that through remorfe he calmer proue, Will great Parmenio fo attended on With that braue army, fostred in his loue, Be thankfull for this grace you do his fonne? Some benefits are odious, fo is this, Where men are still ashamed to confesse To have so done, as to deserve to die: And euer do desire, that men should gesse They rather had receiu'd an iniury 950 Than life; fince life they know in fuch a cafe May be restor'd to all, but not to grace.

Perd. And for my part, my liege, I hold this minde, That fure, he would not have fo much supprest

The notice of a treason in that kinde,

Vnlesse he were a party with the rest.

Can it be thought that great Parmenios sonne,

The generall commander of the horse,

The minion of the campe, the only one

Of secret counsell, and of free recourse,

Should not in three dayes space haue sound the King

At leasure theare three words of that import;

Whil'st he himselse in idle lauishing

Did thousands spend t'aduance his owne report?

Crat. And if he gaue no credit to the youth, Why did he two dayes space delay him then? As if he had beleeu'd it for a truth, To hinder his addresse to other men. If he had held it but a vaine conceit, I pray why had he not dismiss him streight? Men in their private dangers may be stout, But in th'occasions and the feares of Kings We ought not to be credulous, but doubt The intimation of the vainess that the same strength of the vainess things.

Alex. Well, howfoeuer, we will yet this night Difport and banquet in vnufuall wife, That it may feeme, we weigh this practife light, How euer heavy, here, within it lies.

Kings may not know diffruft, and though they feare, They must not take acquaintance of their feare. 980

SCENA II.

Antigona, Thais.

Y'are a fecret counsell-keeper, Thais:
In troth I little thought you such a one.
Tha. And why, Antigona, what have I done?

Ant. You know ful-well, your conscience you bewraies.

Tha. Alas, good foule, would you have me conceale That, which your felfe could not but needs reueale? Thinke you, another can be more to you, In what concernes them not, than you can be Whom it imports? Will others hold them true, When you proue false to your ofw ne secrecy? But yet this is no wonder: for we fee Wifer than we do lay their heads to gage For riotous expences of their tongues, Although it be a property belongs Especially to vs, and euery age Can shew strange presidents what we have been In cases of the greatest plots of men; And t'is the Scene on this worlds stage we play, 1000 Whose revolution we with men convert, And are to act our part as well as they, Though commonly the weakest, yet a-part.

For this great motion of a State we see

Doth turne on many wheeles, and some (thogh smal)

Do yet the greater moue, who in degree

Stirre those who likewise turne the great'st of all.

For though we are not wise, we see the wise

By vs are made, or make vs parties still

In actions of the greatest qualities

That they can manage, be they good or ill.

Ant. I cannot tell: but you have made me doo That which must evermore afflict my heart. And if this be my wofull part, t'vndoo My dearest Loue, would I had had no part! How have I filly woman sifted been,

Examin'd, tri'd, flatt'red, terrifi'd, By Craterus, the cunningest of men; That neuer left me till I had descri'd What euer of Philotas I had know'n!

1020

Tha. What, is that all? Perhaps I have thereby Done the [e] more good than thou canst apprehend.

Ant. Such good I rather you should get than I,

If that can be a good t'accuse my friend.

Tha. Alas, thy accusation did but quote The margin of some text of greater note.

Ant. But that is more then thou or I can tell.

Tha. Yes, yes, Antigona, I know it well. For be thou fure, that alwayes those who seeke T'attacke the Lyon, so prouide, that still Their toyles be fuch, as that he shall not scape To turne his rage on those that wrought his ill. Philotas neither was fo strong nor hie, But malice ouerlookt him, and discride Where he lay weake, where was his vanity. And built her countermounts vpon that fide. In fuch fort, as they would be fure to race His fortunes with the engine of diffrace. And now mayst thou, perhaps, come great hereby, And gracious with his greatest enemy: 1040 For fuch men thinke, they have no full fucces, Vnlesse they likewise gaine the mistresses Of those they master, and succeed the place And fortunes of their loues with equall grace.

Ant. Loues! Out alas! Loue fuch a one as he, That feekes t'vndoo my Loue, and in him me?

Tha. Tush, loue his fortunes, loue his state, his place What euer greatnesse doth, it must have grace.

Ant. I weigh not greatnesse, I must please mine eye.

Tha. Th'eye nothing fairer sees than dignity. 1050

Ant. But what is dignity without our loue?

Tha. If we have that, we cannot want our love.

Ant. Why, that gives but the out-fide of delight:

The day time ioy, what comfort hath the night?

Tha. If pow'r procure not that, what can it do?

Ant. I know not how that can b'attain'd vnto.

Tha. Nor will I teach thee, if thou know'ft it not:

Tis vaine, I fee, to learne an Afian wit.

Exil

Ant. If this be that great wit, that learned skill, You Greeks professe, let me be foolish still, 1060 So I be faithfull. And now, being here alone, Let me record the heavy notes of mone.

SCENA III.

Craterus, Ephestion, Clitus, &c.

Craterus.

Y Lords, you fee the flexible conceit
Of our indangered fouereigne: and you know
How much his perill, and Philotas pride,
Imports the State and vs; and therefore now
We either must oppose against deceit,
Or be vndone: for now hath time discride
An open passage to his farthest ends;
From whence, if negligence now put vs backe,
Returne we neuer can without our wracke.

And, good my Lords, fince you conceiue as much, And that we ftand alike, make not me profecute The cause alone, as if it did but touch Only my selfe; and that I did both breed And vrge these doubts out of a private griefe.

Indeed, I know, I might with much more ease
Sit still like others; and if dangers come,
Might thinke to shift for one, as well as they:
But yet the faith, the duty, and respect
We owe both to our sourceigne and the State,
My Lords, I hold, requires another care.

Eph. My Lord, affure you we will take a time To vrge a stricter count of Dymnus death.

Crat. My Lords, I fay, vnleffe this be the time, You will apply your physicke after death. You fee the King inuited hath this night 1090 Philotas with the rest, and entertaines Him with as kinde an viage (to our fight) As euer: and you see the cunning straines Of fweet infinuation, that are vf'd T'assure the eare of grace with false reports: So that all this will come to be excuf'd With one remoue; one action quite transports The Kings affections over to his hopes, And fets him so beyond the due regard Of his owne fafety, as one enterprize IIOO May ferue their turne, and may vs all furprize.

Clit. But now, fince things thus of themselues breake We have advantage to prevent the worst, [out, And eu'ry day will yeeld vs more, no doubt; For they are sau'd, that thus are warned first.

Crat. So, my Lord Clitus, are they likewise warn'd T'accelerate their plot, being thus bewrai'd.

Cli. But that they cannot now, it is too late:
For treason taken ere the birth, doth come
Abortiue, and her wombe is made her tombe.

IIIO

Crat. You do not know how farre it hath put forth The force of malice, nor how farre is spred Already the contagion of this ill.

Clit. Why then there may some one be tortured Of those whom Ceballinus hath reueal'd, Whereby the rest may be discouered.

Crat. That one must be Philotas, from whose head All this corruption flowes; take him, take all.

Clit. Philotas is not nam'd, and therefore may Perhaps not be acquainted with this plot. 1120

Crat. That, his concealing of the plot bewraies: And if we do not cast to find him first, His wit (be sure) hath layd so good a ground, As he will be the last that will be found.

Clit. But if he be not found, then in this case. We do him more, by injuring his grace.

Crat. If that he be not found thaue dealt in this,
Yet this will force out fome such thoughts of his,
As will vndoo him: for you seldome see
Such men arraign'd, that euer quitted be.

I 130

Rok. Well my Lord Craterus we will move his

Eph. Well, my Lord Craterus, we will moue his Grace

(Though it be late) before he take his rest,
That some course may be taken in this case:
And God ordaine, it may be for the best.

Exeunt.

CHORVS.

SE how these great men cloath their private hate
In those faire colours of the publike good;
And to effect their ends, pretend the State,
As if the State by their affections stood:

IO

And arm'd with pow'r and Princes iealousies. 1140 Will put the least conceit of discontent Into the greatest ranke of treacheries, That no one action shall seeme innocent: Yea, valour, honour, bounty, shall be made As accessaries unto ends uniust: And even the service of the State must lade The needfull'st undertakings with distrust. So that base vilenesse, idle luxury Seeme fafer farre, than to do worthily. Suspition full of eyes, and full of eares, 1150 Doth thorow the tincture of her owne conceit See all things in the colours of her feares, And truth it selfe must looke like to deceit; That what way f'euer the suspected take, Still enuy will most cunningly forelay The ambush of their ruine, or will make Their humors of themselves to take that way. But this is still the fate of those that are By nature or their fortunes eminent, Who either carried in conceit too farre, 1160 Do worke their owne or others discontent. Or els are deemed fit to be supprest, Not for they are, but that they may be ill: Since States have ever had far more vnrest By spirits of worth, then men of meaner skill; And find, that those do alwayes better proue, Wh' are equall to imployment, not aboue. For selfe-opinion would be seene more wise, Than present counsels, customes, orders, lawes: And to the end to have them otherwise, 1170 The Common-wealth into combustion drawes, III.

As if ordaind t'imbroile the world with wit, As well as grosnesse, to dishonour it.

ACTVS IIII. SCENA I. Attaras, Sostratus.

Sostratus.

An there be fuch a fudden change in Court
As you report? Is it to be beleeu'd,
That great Philotas, whom we all beheld
In grace last night, should be arraign'd to day?

Att. It can be: and it is as I report:

For flates of grace are no fure holds in Court.

Soft. But yet tis ftrange they should be ouerthrow'n Before their certeine forseitures were know'n.

1180

Att. Tush, it was breeding long, though suddenly This thunder-cracke comes but to breake out now.

Soft. The time I waited, and I waited long,
Vntill Philotas, with fome other Lords,
Depart the Presence, and as I conceiu'd,
I neuer saw the King in better mood,
Nor yet Philotas euer in more grace:

Can such stormes grow, and yet no clouds appeare?

Att. Yea, court stormes grow, when skies there seeme It was about the deepest of the night, [most cleare. The blackest houre of darknesse and of sleepe, When, with some other Lords, comes Craterus, Falles downe before the King, intreates, implores, Coniures his Grace, as euer he would looke To saue his person and the State from spoile, Now to preuent Philotas practises; Whom they had plainly sound to be the man 1200 Had plotted the destruction of them all.

The King would faine haue put them off to time And farther day, till better proofes were knowne: Which they perceiuing, prest him still the more, And reinforc'd his dangers and their owne; And neuer left him till they had obtain'd Commission t'apprehend Philotas streight.

Now, to make feare looke with more hideous face. Or els, but to beget it out of forme, And carefull preparations of diffrust: 1210 About the Palace men in armour watch. In armour men about the King attend: All passages and issues were forelayd With horfe, t'interrupt what euer newes Should hence breake out into Parmenios campe. I, with three hundred men in armour charg'd, Had warrant to attach and to commit The person of Philotas presently: And comming to his lodging where he lay, Found him imburied in the foundest sleepe 1220 That euer man could be; where neither noyfe Of clattering weapons, or our rushing in With rude and trampling rumour, could dissolve The heavy humours of that drowfie brow; Which held perhaps his fences now more fast, As loth to leave, because it was the last.

Soft. Attaras, what can treason sleepe so sound?
Will that lowd hand of Horror that still beats
Vpon the guilty conscience of distrust
Permit it thaue so resolute a rest?

123

Att. I cannot tell: but thus we found him there, Nor could we (I affure you) waken him, Till thrice I call'd him by his name, and thrice

Had shooke him hard; and then at length he wakes: And looking on me with a fetled cheere, Deare friend Attaras, what's the newes? (favd he) What vp fo foone, to haften the remoue, Or raif'd by fome alarme or fome diftrust? I told him, that the King had fome diftrust: VVhy, what will Nabarzanes play (fayth he) 1240 The villaine with the King, as he hath done Already with his miserable Lord? I feeing he would not or did not vnderstand His owne diffresse, told him the charge I had: Wherewith he rose, and rising vs'd these words: O Alexander! now I fee my foes Haue got aboue thy goodnesse, and preuail'd Against my innocency and thy word. And as we then inchain'd and fettred him. Looking on that base furniture of shame; 1250 Poore body (fayd he) hath fo many alarme Raif'd thee to blood and danger from thy reft, T'inuest thee with this armour now at last? Is this the feruice I am call'd to now?

But we, that were not to attend his plaints, Couering his head with a difgracefull weed, Tooke and conuai'd him fuddenly to ward; From whence he shalbe instantly brought forth, Here to b'arraign'd before the King; who sits (According to the Macedonian vse) In cases capitall, himselfe as Iudge.

1260

Soft. Well, then I fee, who are fo high aboue, Are neere to lightning, that are neere to Ioue.

l. 1257, 'to warde' of ' and 'to ward' of 2 correct 'toward' of '23.

SCENA SECVNDA.

Alexander, with all his Councell, the dead body of Dymnus, the Revealers of the conspiracy, Philotas.

The hainous treason of some sew had like
Thaue rent me from you, worthy souldiers;
But by the mercy of the immortal Gods
I liue, and soy your sight, your reverend sight;
Which makes me more tabhor those paricides,
Not for mine owne respect, but for the wrong
You had received, if their designe had stood;
Since I desire but life to do you good.

But how will you be mou'd, when you shall know Who were the men that did attempt this shame! When I shall show that which I grieve to show, And name fuch, as would God I could not name! But that the foulnesse of their practise now Blots out all memory of what they were: And though I would suppresse them, yet I know This shame of theirs will neuer but appeare. Parmenio is the man; a man (you fee) Bound by fo many merits both to me And to my father, and our ancient friend; A man of veeres, experience, grauity; Whose wicked minister Philotas is: Who here Dimetrius, Luculaus, and This Dymnus, whose dead body heere you see, With others, hath fuborn'd to flaughter me. 1290

And here comes Metron with Nichomacus, To whom this murdred wretch at first reueal'd The proiect of this whole conspiracy, T'auere as much as was disclos'd to him. Nichomacus, Looke heere, aduife thee well, What, doft thou know this man that here lies dead?

Nic. My Souereigne Lord, I know him very well: It is one Dymnus, who did three dayes fince

Bewray to me a treason practifed

By him and others, to have flaine your Grace. 1300 Alex. Where or by whom, or when did he report, his wicked at thould be accomplished?

This wicked act should be accomplished?

Nic. He fayd, within three daies your Maiesty Should be within your chamber murdered By speciall men of the Nobility; Of whom he many nam'd, and they were these: Loceus, Demetrius, and Archelopis, Nicanor, and Amintas, Luculens, Droceas, with Aphebætus, and himfelfe.

Mac. Thus much his brother Ceballinus did
Reueale to me from out this youths report.

Ceb. And fo much, with the circumstance of all, Did I vnto Philotas intimate.

Alex. Then, what hath been his mind, who did The information of fo foule a traine, [fuppresse Your felues, my worthy fouldiers, well may gesse, Which Dymnus death declares not to be vaine. Poore Ceballinus not a moment stayes

To redischarge himselse of such a weight;

Philotas carelesse, fearelesse, nothing weighes, 1320

Nor ought reueales. His silence shewes deceit, And tels he was content it should be done:

Which, though he were no party, makes him one.

For he that knew vpon what pow'r he ftood, And faw his fathers greatnesse and his owne,

1. 1308, '23 mifprints 'Amentas,' as before. 'Amyntas in ', 'Amintas' in 2.

Saw nothing in the way, which now withstood
His vast desires, but only this my crowne;
Which in respect that I am iffulesse,
He thinkes the rather easie to b'attain'd.
But yet Philotas is deceiu'd in this;
I 1330
I haue who shall inherit all I gain'd.
In you I haue both children, kindred, friends;
You are the heires of all my purchases,
And whil'st you live I am not iffulesse.

And that these are not shadowes of my seares

And that these are not shadowes of my seares (For I feare nought but want of enemies)
See what this intercepted letter beares,
And how Parmenio doth his sonnes aduise.
This shewes their ends. Hold, reade it Craterus.
Crat. reads it. My sonnes, first have a special care unto your selves,

Then unto those which do depend on you: So shall you do what you intend to do.

Alex. See but how close he writes, that if these lines Should come vnto his sonnes, as they are sent, They might incourage them in their designes; If enterpriz'd, might mocke the ignorant. But now you see what was the thing was meant, You see the fathers care, the sonnes intent.

And what if he, as a conspirator,
Was not by Dymnus nam'd among the rest?

That shewes not his innocency, but his pow'r,
Whom they account too great to be supprest,
And rather will accuse themselues than him:
For that whil'st he shall liue, there's hope for them.
And how h'hath borne himselse in private fort,
I will not stand to vrge, it's too well knowne;

Nor what hath beene, his arrogant report, T'imbase my actions, and to brag his owne; Nor how he mockt my letter which I wrote: To shew him of the stile bestow'd on me, 1360 By th'Oracle of Ioue. These things I thought But weaknesses, and words of vanity, (Yet words that read the vicers of his heart) Which I supprest; and neuer ceast to yeeld The chiefe rewards of worth, and still compart The best degrees and honors of the field, In hope to win his loue; yet now at length, There have I danger where I lookt for strength; I would to God my blood had rather beene Powr'd out, the offring of an enemy, 1370 Than practiz'd to be shed by one of mine, That one of mine should have this infamy. Haue I beene so reserv'd from feares, to fall There where I ought not to have fear'd at all! Haue you so oft aduif'd me to regard The fafety which you faw me running from, When with fome hote purfute I pressed hard My foes abroad; to perish thus at home! But now, that fafety only rests in you, Which you so oft haue wisht me looke vnto: 1380 And now vnto your bosomes must I flve. Without whose will I will not wish to live:

Amin. Attaras, bring the hatefull prisoner forth; This traytor, which hath sought t'vndoo vs all; To give vs vp to slaugh[t]er, and to make Our bloode a scorne, here in this barbarous land;

And with your wils I cannot, 'lesse I giue Due punishment vnto this treachery.

That none of vs should have returned backe
Vnto our native country, to our wives,
Our aged parents, kindred, and our friends:
To make the body of this glorious host
A most deformed trunke without a head,
Without the life or soule to guide the same.

Can. O thou base traytor, impious paricide, Who mak'st me loath the blood that matcht with thine; And if I might but have my will, I vow, Thou should'st not die by other hand than mine.

Alex. Fie, Cænus, what a barbarous course is this:

He first must to his accusation plead,

And have his triall, formall to our lawes;

And let him make the best of his bad cause.

Philotas, here the Macedonians are,

To iudge your sact, what language wilt thou vse?

Phi. The Persian language, if it please your Grace: For that, beside the Macedonians, here Are many that will better vnderstand, If I shall vse the speech your grace hath vs'd; Which was, I hold, vnto no other end, But that the most men here might vnderstand.

Alex. See how his native language he diffaines!
But let him fpeake at large, as he defires;
So long as you remember he doth hate,
Befides the fpeech, our glory and the State.

Exit.

Phi. Blacke are the colours layd vpon the crime,
Wherewith my faith stands charg'd, my worthy Lords;
That as behind in fortune so in time,
I come too late to cleere the same with words:
My condemnation is gone out before
My innocency and my iust defence;

1420

And takes vp all your hearts, and leaues no doore
For mine excuse to have an enterance;
That destitute of all compassion, now,
Betwixt an vpright conscience of desart
And an vniust disgrace, I know not how
To satisfie the time, and mine owne heart.
Authority lookes with so sterne an eye
Vpon this wofull bar, and must have still
Such an advantage over misery,
As that it will make good all that it will.

He who should onely judge my cause, is gone; And why he would not stay, I do not see, Since when my cause were heard, his pow'r alone As well might then condemne as fet me free. Nor can I by his absence now be clear'd. Whose presence hath condemn'd me thus vnheard. And though the grieuance of a prisoners toong May both fuperfluous and difgracefull feeme, Which doth not fue, but shewes the Iudge his wrong: Yet pardon me, I must not disesteeme 1440 My rightfull cause for being despised, nor must Forfake my felfe, though I am left of all. Feare cannot make my innocency vniust Vnto it felfe, to give my truth the fall. And I had rather (feeing how my fortune drawes) My words should be deformed than my cause.

I know that nothing is more delicate
Than is the fense and feeling of a State:
The clap, the bruit, the feare but of a hurt
In King's behalfs, thrusts with that violence
The subjects will, to prosecute report,
As they condemne ere they discerne th'offence.

Eph. Philotas, you deceive your felfe in this
That thinke to win compassion and beliefe
B'impugning iustice, and to make men gesse
We do you wrong out of our heat of griefe;
Or that our place or passion did lay more
On your missortune, then your owne desert;
Or have not well discern'd your fact before;
Or would without due proofs your state subvert. 1450
These are the vsuall theames of traytors tongues,
Who practise mischiefs, and complaine of wrongs;

Your treasons are too manifestly knowne, To maske in other livery then their owne.

Crat. Thinke not, that we are fet to charge you here With bare suspitions, but with open fact, And with a treason that appeares as cleare As is the sun, and know'n to be your act.

Phi. What is this treason? who accuses me?

Crat. The processe of the whole conspiracy. 1460

Phi. But where's the man that names me to be one?

Crat. Here, this dead traytor shewes you to be one

Phi. How can he, dead, accuse me of the same,

Whom, liuing, he nor did, nor yet could name? Crat. But we can other testimony show,

From those who were your chiefest complices.

Phi. I am not to b'adiudg'd in law, you know, By testimony, but by witnesses.

Let them be here produc'd vnto my face, That can auouch m'a party in this case.

My Lords, and fellow Souldiers, if of those Whom Dymnus nominated, any one

I. 1448, 'than' 1: I. 1454, ibid.: 1. 1468, 'Non testimonijs sunt testibus' (in margin).

Out of his tortures will a word disclose To shew I was a party, I have done. Thinke not fo great a number euer will Endure their torments, and themselues accuse, And leave me out; fince men in fuch a case, still Will rather flander others than excuse. Calamity malignant is, and he That fuffers iustly for his guiltinesse 1480 Eases his owne affliction but to see Others tormented in the same distresse. And yet I feare not whatfoeuer they By rackes and tortures can be forst to say. Had I beene one, would Dymnus have conceal'd My name, being held to be principall? Would he not for his glory haue reueal'd The best to him, to whom he must tell all? Nay, if he falfly then had nam'd me one, To grace himselfe, must I of force be one? 1490 Alas, if Ceballinus had not come to me,

Alas, if Ceballinus had not come to me,
And given me note of this conspiracy,
I had not stood here now, but beene as free
From question, as I am [from] treachery:
That is the only cloud that thundereth
On my disgrace. Which had I deemed true,
Or could but have divin'd of Dymnus death,
Philotas had, my Lords, fat there with you.
My fault was, to have beene too credulous:
Wherein I shew'd my weaknesse, I confesse.

Crat. Philotas, what, a Monarch, and confesse Your impersections, and your weaknesse?

1500

Phi. O Craterus, do not infult vpon calamity; It is a barberous grofnesse, to lay on

The weight of fcorne, where heavy mifery
Too much already weighs mens fortunes downe:
For if the cause be ill I vndergo,
The law, and not reproch, must make it so.

Can. There's no reproch can euer be too much
To lay on traytors, whose deserts are such. 1510

Phi. Men vse the most reproches, where they feare The cause will better proue than they desire.

Can. But fir, a traytors cause that is so cleare As this of yours, will neuer neede that seare.

Phi. I am no traytor, but suspected one For not believing a conspiracy:
And meere suspect, by law, condemneth none;
They are approued facts for which men die

Crat. The law, in treasons, doth the will correct
With like seuerenesse as it doth th'effect: 1520
Th'affection is the essence of th'offence;
The execution only but the accidence;
To have but will'd it, is to have done the same.

Phi. I did not erre in will, but in beliefe: And if that be a traytor, then am I the chiefe.

Crat. Yea, but your will made your beliefe confent To hide the practife till th'accomplishment.

Phi. Beliefe turns not by motions of our will,
And it was but the euent that made that ill.
Some facts men may excuse, though not defend, 1530
Where will and fortune haue a divers end.
Th'example of my father made me feare
To be too forward to relate things heard;
Who writing to the King, wisht him forbeare
The potion his Physitian had prepar'd:

1. 1535, 'potions' for 'portions' (misprint).

For that he heard Darius tempted had His faith, with many talents, to be vntrue: And yet his drugs in th'end not prouing bad, Did make my fathers care feeme more than due: For oft, by an vntimely diligence, 1540 A bufie faith may give a Prince offence. So that, what shall we do? If we reueale We are despised: suspected if conceale. And as for this, where euer now thou be, O Alexander, thou hast pardon'd me: Thou hast already given me thy hand, The earnest of thy reconciled heart; And therefore now O let thy goodnesse stand Vnto thy word, and be thou as thou wert. If thou beleeu'dst me, then I am abfolu'd: 1550 If pardon'd me, my fetters are diffolu'd. What have I els deseru'd since yester night: When at thy table I fuch grace did find? What hainous crime hath fince beene brought to light, To wrong my faith, and to diuert thy mind? That from a restfull, quiet, most profound Sleeping, in my misfortunes made fecure Both by thy hand and by a conscience sound. I must be wak't for gyues, for robes impure: For all difgrace that on me wrath could lay; 1560 And fee the worst of shame, ere I saw day: When I least thought that others cruelty Should have wrought more than thine owne clemency? Crat. Philotas, whatfoeuer gloffe you lay Vpon your rotten cause, it is in vaine: Your pride, your carriage, euer did bewray

l. 1559, 'gyues' ', 2, for '23 'giues'—accepted.

Your discontent, your malice, and disdaine:
You cannot palliat mischiese, but it will
Th'row all the fairest coverings of deceit
Be alwayes seene. We know those streames of ill 1570
Flow'd from that head that sed them with conceit.
You softer malecontents; you entertaine
All humors; you all factions must embrace;
You vaunt your owne exployts; and you disdaine
The Kings proceedings, and his stile disgrace;
You promise mountaines, and you draw men on,
With hopes of greater good than hath been seene;
You bragg'd of late, that something would be done
Whereby your Concubine should be a Queene.
And now we see the thing that should be done; 1580
But, God be prais'd, we see you first vindone.

Phi. Ah, do not make my nature if it had So pliable a sterne of disposition, To turne to every kindnesse, to be bad, For doing good to men of all condition. Make not your charity to interpret all Is done for fauour, to be done for fhow, And that we, in our bounties prodigall, Vpon our ends, not on mens needs bestow. Let not my one dayes errour make you tell, That all my life-time I did neuer well; And that because this falles out to be ill, That what I did, did tend vnto this ill. It is vniust to ioyne t'a present fact More of time past, than it hath euer had Before to do withall, as if it lackt Sufficient matter els to make it bad. I do confesse indeed I wrote something

1590

For that he heard Darius tempted had His faith, with many talents, to be vntrue: And yet his drugs in th'end not prouing bad, Did make my fathers care feeme more than due: For oft, by an vntimely diligence, 1540 A busie faith may give a Prince offence. So that, what shall we do? If we reueale We are despised; suspected if conceale. And as for this, where ever now thou be, O Alexander, thou hast pardon'd me: Thou hast already given me thy hand, The earnest of thy reconciled heart: And therefore now O let thy goodnesse stand Vnto thy word, and be thou as thou wert. If thou beleeu'dft me, then I am abfolu'd; 1550 If pardon'd me, my fetters are diffolu'd. What have I els deseru'd since yester night; When at thy table I fuch grace did find? What hainous crime hath fince beene brought to light, To wrong my faith, and to diuert thy mind? That from a restfull, quiet, most profound Sleeping, in my misfortunes made fecure Both by thy hand and by a conscience sound, I must be wak't for gyues, for robes impure: For all difgrace that on me wrath could lay: 1560 And fee the worst of shame, ere I saw day; When I least thought that others cruelty Should have wrought more than thine owne clemency? Crat. Philotas, whatfoeuer gloffe you lay Vpon your rotten cause, it is in vaine: Your pride, your carriage, euer did bewray

1. 1559, 'gyues' 1, 2, for '23 'giues'-accepted.

Your discontent, your malice, and disdaine:
You cannot palliat mischiese, but it will
Th'row all the fairest couerings of deceit
Be alwayes seene. We know those streames of ill 1570
Flow'd from that head that sed them with conceit.
You softer malecontents; you entertaine
All humors; you all factions must embrace;
You vaunt your owne exployts; and you disdaine
The Kings proceedings, and his stile disgrace;
You promise mountaines, and you draw men on,
With hopes of greater good than hath been seene;
You bragg'd of late, that something would be done
Whereby your Concubine should be a Queene.
And now we see the thing that should be done; 1580
But, God be prais'd, we see you first vindone.

Phi. Ah, do not make my nature if it had So pliable a sterne of disposition, To turne to every kindnesse, to be bad, For doing good to men of all condition. Make not your charity to interpret all Is done for fauour, to be done for show, And that we, in our bounties prodigall, Vpon our ends, not on mens needs bestow. Let not my one dayes errour make you tell, That all my life-time I did neuer well; And that because this falles out to be ill, That what I did, did tend vnto this ill. It is vniust to ioyne t'a present fact More of time past, than it hath euer had Before to do withall, as if it lackt Sufficient matter els to make it bad. I do confesse indeed I wrote something

1500

Against this title of the sonne of Ioue,
And that not of the King, but to the King
I freely vs'd these words out of my loue:
And thereby hath that dangerous liberty
Of speaking truth, with trust on sormer grace,
Betrai'd my meaning vnto enmity,
And draw'n an argument of my disgrace:
So that I see, though I speake what I ought,
It was not in that manner as I ought.

And God forbid, that euer fouldiers words Should be made liable vnto misdeeds: When fainting in their march, tir'd in the fight. 1610 Sicke in their tent, stopping their wounds that bleeds; Or haut and iolly after conquest got. They shall out of their heate vse words vnkinde: Their deeds deferue, to have them rather thought The passion of the season, than their minde: For fouldiers joy, or wrath, is meafureleffe. Rapt with an instant motion: and we blame. We hate, we prayle, we pity in excelle, According as our present passions frame. Sometimes to passe the Ocean we would faine, 1620 Sometimes to other worlds, and fometimes flacke And idle, with our conquests, entertaine A fullen humor of returning backe: All which conceits one trumpets found doth end. And each man running to his ranke doth lofe What in our tents dislikt vs, and we spend All that conceiued wrath vpon our foes. And words, if they proceede of leuity. Are to be fcorn'd, of madnesse, pitied:

1. 1612, 'haut' of 1, 2, = proud, corrects '23 'haue.'

1600

If out of malice or of iniury,

To be remiss'd or vnacknowledged:

For of themselues, they vanish by disdaine,

But if pursude, they will be thought not vaine.

Crat. But words, according to the person, way;

If his defignes are haynous, fo are they: They are the tinder of fedition still,

Wherewith you kindle fires, inflame mens will.

Phi. Craterus, you have th'advantage of the day
The law is yours, to fay what you will fay:
And yet doth all your glosse but beare the sence 1640
Only of my misfortune, not offence.
Had I pretended mischiese to the King,

Could not I have effected it without

Dymnus? Did not my free accesse bring

Continual meanes thave brought the same about?

Was not I, since I heard the thing discride,

Alone, and arm'd, in private with his Grace?

What hindred me, that then I had not tride

T'haue done that mischiese, hauing time and place?

Crat. Philotas, euen the Prouidence aboue,
Protectresse of the facred state of Kings;
That neuer suffers treachery to haue
Good counsell; neuer in this case but brings
Consussion to the actors; did vndo
Your hearts in what you went about to do.

Phi. But yet despaire, we see, doth thrust men on, Se'ing no way els, t'vndo ere be vndon.

Crat. That same despaire doth likewise let me[n] fall In that amaze, they can do nought at all.

Phi. Well, well, my Lords, my feruice hath made know'n 1660

III.

The faith I owe my Souereigne, and the State; Philotas forwardnesse hath euer show'n Vnto all nations, at how high a rate I priz'd my King, and at how low my blood, To do him honour and my country good. fare: Eph. We blame not what y'haue been, but what you We accuse not here your valour, but your fact: Not to have beene a leader in the warre. But an ill subject in a wicked act: Although we know, thrust rather with the loue 1670 Of your owne glory, than with duty lead, You have done much; yet all your courses prove You tide still your atchieuements to the head Of your owne honour, when it hath beene meet You had them layd downe at your Souereignes feet. God gives to Kings the honour to command. To subjects, all their glory to obay; Who ought in time of war as rampiers stand. In peace as th'ornaments of State aray. The King hath recompens'd your feruices 1680 With better loue than you shew thankfulnesse. By grace he made you greater than you were By nature, you receiu'd that which he was not tide To give to you: his gift was far more deere Than all you did, in making you imployd. But fay your feruice hath deferu'd it all, This one offence hath made it odious all: And therefore here in vaine you vse that meane, To plead for life, which you have cancell'd cleane. Phi. My Lord, you far mistake me, if you deeme

I plead for life; that poore weake blaft of breath, 1690
1. 1683—'23 erroneously inserts 'he' after 'nature.'

From which so oft I ran with light esteeme, And so well have acquainted me with death: No, no, my Lords, it is not that I feare: It is mine honour that I feeke to cleare: And which, if my difgraced cause would let The language of my heart be vnderstood, Is all which I have ever fought to get, And which,—O leave me now, and take my blood; Let not your enuy go beyond the bound Of what you feeke: my life stands in your way; That is your ayme, take it; and do not wound My reputation with that wrong, I pray. If I must needs be made the facrifice Of enuy, and that no oblation will The wrath of Kings, but only blood, fuffice, Yet let me have fome thing left that is not ill. Is there no way to get vnto our liues, But first to have our honour overthrowne? Alas, though grace of Kings all greatnesse giues, 1710 It cannot give vs vertue, that's our owne. Though all be theirs our hearts and hands can do, Yet that by which we do is only ours. The trophees that our blood erects vnto Their memory, to glorifie their pow'rs, Let them enjoy: yet onely to have done Worthy of grace, let not that be vndone; Let that high fwelling river of their fame Leave humble streames, that feed them yet their name.

O my deare father, didst thou bring that spirit, 1720 Those hands of vallour, that so much have done In this great worke of Asia, this to merit,

1. 1692, 'oft' from 1,2, is dropped by '23.

By doing worthily, to be vndone?
And hast thou made this purchase of thy sword,
To get so great an Empire for thy Lord,
And so disgrac'd a graue for thee and thine,
T'extinguish by thy service all thy line?

One of thy fonnes by being too valourous,
But fiue dayes fince,—yet O well,—loft his breath;
Thy dear Nicanor th'halfe arch of thy house; 1730
And here now the other at the barre of death,
Stands ouercharg'd with wrath in far worse case
And is to be confounded with disgrace;
Thy selfe must give th'acquitance of thy blood,
For others debts, to whom thou hast done good:
Which, if they would a little time afford,
Death would have taken it without a sword.
Such the rewards of great imployments are,
Hate killes in peace, whom Fortune spares in warre.
And this is that high grace of Kings we seeke, 1740
Whose favour and whose wrath consumes alike.

Eph. Lo here the mifery of Kings, whose cause How ever in the how ever strong, Yet in respect they may, their greatnesse drawes The world to thinke they ever do the wrong. But this soule fact of yours, you stand upon Philotas, shall, beside th'apparency Which all the world sees plaine, ere we have done By your owne mouth be made to satisfie The most stiffe partialist that will not see. 1750

Phi. My mouth will neuer proue fo false (I trust)
Vnto my heart, to shew it selse vniust;
And what I here do speake, I know, my Lords,
I speake with mine owne mouth, but other where

What may be fayd, I fay, may be the words
Not of my breath, but fame that oft doth erre;
Let th'oracle of Ammon be inquir'd
About this fact; who, if it shall be true,
Will neuer suffer those who have conspir'd
Against Ioues sonne, t'escape without their due,
But will reveale the truth: or if this shall
Not seeme convenient, why then lay on all
The tortures that may force a tongue to tell
The secret'st thought that could imagine ill.

Bel. What need we fend to know more than we know? That were to give you time to acquant your friends With your estate, till some combustion grow Within the campe, to hasten on your ends, And that the gold and all the treasury Committed to your fathers custody 1770 In Medea, now might arme his desp'rat troups To come vpon vs, and to cut our throats. What, shall we aske of Ioue, that which he hath Reueal'd already? But let's send to give Thanks, that by him the King hath scap't the wrath Of thee, disloyall traytor, and doth live.

Guar. Let's teare the wretch in pieces, let vs rend With our owne hands the traitrous paricide.

Alex. Peace, Belon, filence, louing fouldiers:
You see, my Lords, out of your indgements graue,
That all excuses fickly colours haue,
And he that hath thus false and faithlesse beene
Must find out other gods and other men
Whom to forsweare, and whom he may deceive;
No words of his can make vs more believe

1. 1778, 'traitrous' of ' and 'traytrous' 2 corrects '23 'traytors.'

His impudence: and therefore, feeing tis late, We, till morning, do difmisse the Court.

ACTVS. V. CHORVS: Græcian and Persian.

Persian.

WEll, then I see there is small difference 1790 Betwixt your state and ours, you civill Greeks, You great contriuers of free governments; Whose skill the world from out all countries seeks. Those whom you call your Kings, are but the same As are our Souereigne tyrants of the East; I see they only differ but in name, The effects they shew, agree, or neere at least. Your great men here, as our great Satrapaes. I see layd prostrate are with basest shame, Vpon the least suspect or realousies 1800 Your Kings conceive, or others envies frame; Only herein they differ, That your prince Proceeds by forme of law t'effect his end; Our Persian Monarch makes his frowne convince The Brongest truth: his sword the processe ends With present death, and makes no more ado: He never stands to give a glosse vnto His violence, to make it to appeare In other here than that it ought to beare, Wherein plaine dealing best his course commends: 1810 For more h'offends who by the law offends What need hath Alexander so to strive By all these shewes of forme, to find this man Guilty of treason, when he doth contriue To have him so adjudg'd? Do what he can.

He must not be acquit, though he be cleere, Th'offender, not th'offence, is punisht heere, And what auailes the fore-condemn'd to speake? How ever strong his cause, his state is weake.

Græ. Ah, but it satisfies the world, and we 1820

Thinke that well done which done by law we fee.

Per. And yet your law serves but your private ends, And to the compasse of your pow'r extends: But is it for the maiesty of Kings, To sit in judgement thus themselves, with you?

Græ. To do men iustice, is the thing that brings

The greatest maiesty on earth to Kings.

Per. That, by their subalternate ministers

May be performed as well, and with more grace:

For, to command it to be done, infers

More glory than to do. It doth imbase

Thopinion of a pow'r t'invulgar so

That sacred presence, which should never go,

Never be seene, but even as gods, below,

Like to our Persian King in glorious show;

And who, as starres affixed to their spheare,

May not descend to be from what they are.

Græ. Where Kings are so like gods, there subjects are not men.

Per. Your king begins this course, and what will you be then?

Græ. Indeed since prosperous fortune gaue the raine
To head-strong pow'r and lust, I must confesse, I841
We Græcians have lost deeply by our gaine,
And this our greatnesse makes vs much the lesse:
For by th'accession of these mighty States,
Which Alexander wonderously hath got,

He hath forgot himselfe and vs., and rates His state above mankind, and ours at nought. This hath thy pompe (O feeble Asia) wrought; Thy base adorings hath transform'd the King Into that shape of pride, as he is brought 1850 Out of his wits, out of acknowledging From whence the glory of his greatnesse springs, And that it was our fwords that wrought these things. How well were we within the narrow bounds Of our sufficient yeelding Macedon, Before our Kings inlarg'd them with our wounds, And made these sallies of ambition! Before they came to give the regall law To those free States which kept their crownes in aw! They by these large dominions are made more, 1860 But we become far weaker than before. What get we now by winning, but wide minds And weary bodies, with th'expence of blood? What should ill do, since happy fortune findes But misery, and is not good though good? Action begets still action, and retaines Our hopes beyond our wishes, drawing on A neuer ending circle of our paines, That makes vs not have done, when we have done. What can give bounds to Alexanders ends, Who counts the world but small, that call's him great? And his desires beyond his pray distends, Like beasts, that murder more than they can eat! When shall we looke his travels will be done, That 'tends beyond the Ocean and the Sunne? What discontentments will there still arise In such a Campe of Kings, to inter-shocke

Each others greatnesse; and what mutinies
Will put him from his comforts, and will mocke
His hopes, and neuer suffer him to have
That which he hath of all which Fortune gave?
And from Philotas blood (O worthy man)
Whose body now rent on the torture lies,
Will flow that vaine of fresh conspiracies,
As overflow him will, do what he can:
For cruelty doth not imbetter men,
But them more wary makes than they have been.
Per. Are not your great men free from tortures then?
Must they be likewise rackt as other men?
Græ. Treason affoords a priviledge to none; 1890

SCENA II. Polidamas, Sostratus.

Who like offends hath punishment all one.

Polidamas.

Riend Softratus, come, have you ever know'n Such a diftracted face of Court, as now? Such a diftrustfull eye, as men are grow'n To feare themselves, and all; and do not know Where is the side that shakes not; who lookes best In this foule day, th'oppressor or th'oppress? What posting, what dispatches, what advice! 2000 What search, what running, what discoveries! What rumors, what suggestions, what device To cleere the King, please people, hold the wise, Ressigning the rude, crush the suspected fort At vnawares, ere they discerne th'are hurt! So much the fall of such a weighty Peere Doth shake the State, and with him tumble downe

All whom his beames of fauours did vpbeare. All who to rest vpon his base were knowne: And none, that did but touch vpon his loue, 2010 Are free from feare to perish with his loue. My felf (whom all the world have know'n t'imbrace Parmenio in th'intirenesse of my heart. And euer in all battels, euery chace Of danger, fought still next him on that part) Was feazed on this last night, late in my bed And brought vnto the presence of the King, To pay (I thought) the tribute of my head: But O'twas for a more abhorred thing! I must redeeme my danger with the blood 2020 Of this deare friend, this deare Parmenio's blood; His life must pay for mine, these hands must gore That worthy heart for whom they fought before.

Soft. What, hath the King commanded fuch a deed, To make the hearts of all his fubiects bleed?

Must that old worthy man Parmenio die?

Pol. O Sostratus, he hath his doome to die,
And we must yeeld vnto necessity.

For comming to the King, and there receiv'd
With vnexpected grace, he thus began:

Polidamas, we both haue beene deceiv'd,
In holding friendship with that faithlesse man
Parmenio, who, for all his glozing mine,
Thou feest hath sought to cut my throat and thine;
And thou must worke reuenge for thee and me:
And therefore hast to Media speedily,
Take these two letters here, the one from me
Vnto my sure and trusty servants there,

1. 2023, 'for' of 1, 2 corrects '23 'from.'

The other figned with Philotas feale,
As if the fame this father written were:

Carry them both, effect what I have fayd;
The one will give thaccesse, the other ayd.
I tooke the letters, vow'd teffect the fame:
And here I go the instrument of shame.

Soft. But will you charge your honor with this

Soft. But will you charge your honor with this fhame?

Pol. I must, or be vndone, with all my name:
For I have left all th'adamantine ties
Of blood and nature, that can hold a heart
Chain'd to the wor[l]d; my brethren and allies,
The hostages to caution for my part:

2050
And for their lives must I dishonour mine;
Els should the King rather have turn'd this sword
Vpon my heart, than forst it impiously,
(Having done all faire service to his Lord,
Now to be imploy'd in this soule villary).

Thus must we do who are inthrall'd to Kings, Whether they will iust or vnlawfull things. But now Parmenio; O, me thinkes I see Thee walking in th'artificiall groue
Of pleasant Susis, when I come to thee, 2060 And thou remembring all our ancient loue, Hastes to imbrace me, saying, O my friend, My deare Polidamas, welcome my friend:
Well art thou come, that we may sit and chat Of all the old aduentures we have run.
Tis long Polidamas since we two met;
How doth my souereigne Lord, how doth my son?
When I vile wretch, whil'st m'answere he attends
With this hand give the letter; this hand ends

His fpeaking ioy, and stabb's him to the heart. 2070 And thus Parmenio thou rewarded art
For all thy service: thou that didst agree
For Alexander to kill Attalus,
For Alexander I must now kill thee.
Such are the iudgements of the heavenly pow'rs:
We others ruines worke, and others ours.

Cho. P. Why this is right, now Alexander takes
The course of pow'r; this is a Persian tricke.
This is our way, here publike triall makes
No doubtfull noise, but buries clamor quicke.

2080
Græ. Indeed now Persia hath no cause to rue,

For you have vs vndone, who vndid you.

NVNCIVS.

This worke is done, the Jad Catastrophe
Of this great att of blood is finisht now,
Philotas ended hath the Tragedy.
Cho. Now my good friend, I pray thee tell vs how.
Nun. As willing to relate, as you to heare:
A full-charg'd heart is glad to find an eare.
The Councell being dismiss'd from hence, and gone, 20

The Councell being dismiss'd from hence, and gone, 2090
Still Craterus plies the King, still in his eare,
Still whispering to him privatly alone,
Vrging (it seem'd) a quicke dispatch of feare:
For they who speake but privatly to Kings,
Do seldome speake the best and sittest things.
Some would have had him forthwith ston'd to death,
According to the Macedonian course,
But yet that would not satisfie the breath
Of busie rumour, but would argue force:

There must be some confessions made within,

That must abroad more satisfaction win;

Craterus, with Cænus and Ephestion

Do mainly vrge to have him torturèd;

Whereto the King consents; and thereupon

They three are sent to see't accomplishèd.

Racks, irons, fires, the grisely torturers

Are hideously prepar'd before his face:

Philotas all vnmou'd, vnchang'd appeares,

As if he would deaths ougliest brow out-face,

And scorn'd the worst of force, and askt them, Why 2110

They stai'd to torture the Kings enemy?

Cho. That part was acted well, God grant we heare
No worse a Scene than this, and all goes cleare:
So should worth act, and they who dare to fight
Against corrupted times, should die vpright;
Such hearts Kings may dissolue, but not defeat.
A great man where he falles he should lie great;
Whose ruine, like the sacred carcases
Of scattred Temples which still reverent lie,
And the religious honour them no lesse
Than if they stood with all their gallantry:
But on with thy report.

Nun. Straight were hot irons appli'd to sere his flesh;

Then wresting racks his comly body straine; Then iron whips, and then the racke afresh; Then sire againe, and then the whips againe; Which he endures with so resolu'd a looke, As if his mind were of another side Than of his body; and his sense for sooke The part of nature, to be wholy tide

To honour; that he would not once confent So much as with a figh this punishment.

Cho. Yet doth he like himselfe, yet all is well, This argument no tyrant can refell; This plea of resolution winnes his cause More right than all, more admiration drawes: For we love nothing more, than to renowne Men stoutly miserable, highly downe.

Nun. But now?

Cho. We feare that But. O, if he ought descend,
Leave here, and let the Tragedy here end. 2141
Let not the least act now of his, at last,
Marre all his act of life, and glory past.

Nun. I must tell all, and therefore give me leave: Swoll'n with raw tumors, vicered with the ierks Of iron whips, that flesh from bone had raz'd, And no part free from wounds; it erks His soule to see the house so foule defast, Wherein his life had dwelt so long time cleane, And therefore craues he, they would now dismisse 2150 His grieuous tortures, and he would begin To open all wherein h'had done amisse. Streight were his tortures ceast: and after they Had let him to recover sense, he sayd, Now Craterus, Say what you will have me fay: Wherewith, as if deluded or delaid, Craterus in wrath calles presently againe To have the tortures to be reapplied: When, what soeuer secret of his heart Which had beene fore-concein'd but in a thought, 2160 What friend soeuer had but tooke his part

I. 2143, 'glories' 1, 2.

In common love h'accus'd; and so forgot Himselfe, that now he was more forward to Confesse, than they to vrge him thereunto; Whether affliction had his spirits undone, Or seeing, to hide or utter, all was one: Both wayes lay death: and therefore he would vie Now to be fure to fay enough to die; And then began his fortunes to deplore, Humbly befought them whom he scorn'd before; 2170 That Alexander (where he stood, behind A Trauers, out of fight) was heard to speake: I never thought, a man that had a mind T'attempt so much, had had a heart so weake! There he confest, that one Hegelochus, When first the King proclaim'd himselfe Ioues sonne, Incens'd his fathers heart against him thus, By telling him. That now we were undone, If we endur'd, that he, which did disdaine To have beene Philips sonne, should live and raigne. He that aboue the state of man will straine His stile, and will not be that which we are, Not only vs contemnes, but doth disdaine The gods themselues, with whom he would compare. We have lost Alexander, lost (faid he) The King, and fall'n on pride and vanity; And we have made a god of our owne blood, That glorifies himselfe, neglects our good. Intolerable is this impious deed To gods, whom he would match, to men he would exceed. Thus having over night Hegelochus, 2191 Discours'd, my father sends next day For me to heare the same: and there to vs

All he had fayd to him he made him refay, Supposing, out of wine, the night before, He might but idly rave. When he againe, Far more inrag'd, in heat and passion more, Vrg'd vs to cleere the State of such a staine; Coniur'd vs to redeeme the Common-weale, And do like men, or els as men conceale.

2200

Parmenio thought, whil' ft yet Darius stood, This course was out of season, and thereby Th'extinguishing of Alexanders blood Would not profit vs, but th'others pow'rs Might make all th'Orient and all Asia ours. That course we lik't, to that our counsell stands, Thereto we tide our oaths and gave our hands. And as for this, he said, for Dymnus plot, Though he were cleere, yet now he cleer'd him not. And yet the force of racks at last could do 2210 So much with him, as he confest that too, And Sayd, that fearing Bactra would detaine The King too long, he hast'ned on his ends, Lest that his father, Lord of such a traine And such a wealth, on whom the whole depends, Should, being aged, by his death prevent These his designes, and frustrate his intent.

Cho. O would we had not heard his latter iarre:
This all his former straines of worth doth marre.
Before this last, his spirits [stout] commends, 2220
But now he is unpitied of his friends.

Nun. Then was Demetrius likewise brought in place,

l. 2214, In 1, 2, here, the following margin note is added—"Dum inficiatus est facinus crudeliter torqueri qui videbatur post consessionem Philotas ne amicorum quidem misericordiam meruit."

And put to torture, who denies the deed. Philotas he auerres it to his face; Demetrius still denies. Then he espide A youth, one Calin, that was standing by: Calin, sayd he, how long wilt thou abide Demetrius vainly to anouch a lie?

The youth, that never had beene nam'd before In all his tortures gave them cause to gesse 2230 Philotas car'd not now to otter more Than had beene priny to his practifes. And seeing they had as much as they desir'd. They with Demetrius ston'd him unto death: And all whom Dymnus nam'd to have confpir'd, With grieuous tortures now must lose their breath: And all that were alli'd, which could not flie, Are in the hands of instice now to die.

Cho. What, must the punishment arrive beyond Th'offence? not with th'offender make an end? Nun. They all must die who may be fear'd in time

To be the heires unto their kindreds crime. All other punishments end with our breath,

But treason is pursu'd beyond our death.

Cho. The wrath of Kings doth seldome measure keepe; Seeking to cure had parts they lance too deepe. When punishment, like lightning should appeare, To few mens hurt but unto all mens feare. Great elephants and lions murder least; Th'ignoble beast is the most cruell beast. But all is well, if by the mighty fall Of this great man, the King be safely freed: But if this Hydra of ambition shall Haue other heads to spring up in his steed,

2250

12

III.

Then hath he made but way for them to rise,
Who will assault him with fresh treacheries.
The which may teach vs to observe this straine,
To admire high hill's, but live within the plaine.

The Apology.

HE wrong application, and misconceiuing of this 2260 Tragedy of Philotas, vrges me worthy Readers, to answere for mine innocency, both in the choice of the fubiect, and the motives that long fince induced me to write it; which were first the delight I tooke in the History it selfe as it lay, and then the aptnesse, I saw it had, to fall easily into act, without interlacing other invention then it properly yeelded in the owne circumftances; which were fufficient for the worke, and a lawfull representing of a Tragedy. Besides, aboue eight yeares fince, meeting with my deare friend D. Lateware, 2270 (whose memory I reuerence) in his Lords Chamber and mine, I told him the purpose I had for Philotas; who fayd that himselfe had written the same argument, and caused it to be presented in St. Fohns Colledge in Oxford; where as I after heard, it was worthily and with great applause performed. And though, I favd. he had therein preuented me, yet I would not defift. whenfoeuer my Fortunes would give me peace, / to try what I could doe in the same subject; wherevnto both hee, and who were present, incouraged me as to an 2280 example worthy of note. And liuing in the Country, about foure yeares fince, and neere halfe a yeare before the late Tragedy of ours, (whereunto this is now most ignorantly refembled) vnfortunately fell out heere in England, I began the same, and wrote three Acts thereof,-as many to whom I then shewed it can witnesse,purpofing to haue had it prefented in Bath by certaine Gentlemens fonnes, as a private recreation for the Christmas, before the Shrouetide of that vnhappy disorder. But by reason of some occasion then falling 2200 out, and being called vpon by my Printer for a new impression of my workes, with some additions to the ciuill Warres, I intermitted this other subject. now lying by mee, and driven by necessity to make vse of my pen, and the Stage to bee the mouth of my lines, which before were neuer heard to speake but in filence, I thought the representing so true a History, in the ancient forme of a Tragedy, could not but have had an vnreproueable paffage with the time, and the better fort of men; feeing with what idle fictions, and groffe follies, 2300 the Stage at this day abused mens recreations. And withall taking a fubiect that lay (as I thought), fo farre from the time, and so remote a stranger from the climate of our present courses, I could not imagine that Enuy or Ignorance could possibly have made it, to take any particular acquaintance with vs. but as it hath a generall alliance to the frailty of greatnesse, and the vsuall workings of ambition, the perpetuall fubicets of bookes and Tragedies.

And for Philotas, it is plaine, that his fathers great-2310 nesse opened first the way to Alexanders suspition and the enuy of the Nobility, and then his owne vanting with dispising the new title conferred by the Oracle of Ammon vpon the King, begat the notion of his diflike of the State; and indeede Alexanders drawing a pedegree from Heauen, with affuming the Persian magnificence, was the cause that withdrew many, the hearts of the Nobility and people from him; and by Philotas owne confession, was that which gaue a purpose to him and his father to have subverted the King, when he had established Asia, and freed them from other 2320 feares.

And this concealing of the treason reuealed vnto him, howfoeuer he excufed it, shewed how much his heart was alienated from his allegiancy. Which being by Ephestion and Craterus, two the most grave and worthy Councellors of Alexander prouidently difcerned, was profecuted in that manner, as became their neerenesse and deerenesse with their Lord and Maister, and fitting the fafety of the State, in the case of so great an aspirer: Who, had he not beene preuented (howsoeuer 2330 popularly in the Army it might be otherwise deemed) he had no doubt turned the course of the government vpon his father or himfelfe, or elfe imbroyling it, made it a monstrous body with many heads, as it afterwards proued vpon the death of Alexander. For though the affection of the multitude (whom he did mignion)-and who, as I fayd, lookes still vpon mens fortunes not the cause,-discerned not his ends; nor peraduenture himfelfe, that knew not how large they might be, nor how much his heart would hold, nor of what capacity would 2340 be his ambition, if occasion were offered: Yet some more cleere-fighted, as if rayfed by a divine providence to put off that State, till the full period of dissolution.

(which after followed) was come, faw well, to how hie a straine he had set his hopes by his affected carriage. And Craterus, who so wisely pursued this businesse, is deemed to have beene one of the most honest men that euer followed Alexander in all his actions, and one that was true vnto him euen after his death. And for any 2350 refemblance, that thorough the ignorance of the History may be applied to the late Earle of Ellex, it can hold in no proportion but only in his weaknesses, which I would wish all that loue his memory not to reuiue. And for mine owne part, having beene perticularly beholding to his bounty, I would to God his errors and disobedience to his Souereigne, might be so deepe buried vnderneath the earth, and in fo low a tombe from his other parts, that hee might neuer be remembred among the examples of disloyalty in this Kingdome, or paraleld with Forreine Conspirators.

SAM. DANIEL.

FINIS.

1. 2268, 'we' I have corrected by 'which': 1. 2314, 'and' by 'the,' and also removed . (period) after 'Ammon': 1. 2345, removed) after 'come' and placed it after 'followed': l. 2346, 'ftraine' for 'ftaine': 1. 2352, removed . (period) after 'Essex': 1. 2355, 'part' for 'parts': and 1. 2357, 'be' for 'by.' See 'Memorial-Introduction-Biographical' in Vol. I.; also 'Memorial-Introduction-Critical,' for further notices of this 'Apology.'

III.

THE VISION OF THE TWELVE GODDESSES.

1604.

A unique exemplar of the first edition of the present 'Shew' or Mask, is in the Bodleian (Malone 201), The following is the title-page:—

THE

VISION OF

the 12. Goddesses, presented in a Maske the 8. of Ianuary, at Hampton Court:

By the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, and her Ladies.

LONDON

Printed by T. C. for Simon Water fon, and are to be fold at his Sop [sic] in Pauls Church-yard, at the Signe of the Crowne. 1604.

I deemed it well personally to collate the text of the 4to of 1623 with the above. The result has been seven little corrections of misprints. I note these.—The 4to of 1623 (l. 40) repeats 'to Proferpina riches, to Macaria felicitie,' and misspells 'Marcaria' in the first; l. 45 drops 'it': l. 78 misreads 'the' for 'their'; l. 94 drops 'with'; l. 148 misprints 'lonatus'; l. 166, 'protend' for 'portend'; l. 187, 'wherein' for 'therein.' Opposite, as usual, is the title-page of 1623. The following is the title-page of a dainty volume which is the only modern reproduction of the 'Vifion': "The Vision of the Twelve Goddesses, presented in a Maske the eight of January, at Hampton Court. By the Queenes most excellent Maiesty, and her Ladies. By Samuel Daniel.' The Introduction and Notes are excellent, albeit Mr. Law, its accomplished Editor, might have chosen better work of Daniel or others, to represent the Masks of the Jacobean era. See 'Memorial-Introduction—Critical.'

THE

VISION OF

THE TVVELVE GOD-

desses, presented in a Maske the eight of January, at Hampton Court.

By the Queenes most excellent Maiesty, and her Ladies.

By SAMVEL DANIEL.

LONDON,

Printed by Nicholas Okes, for Simon Waterson.
1623.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE

the Lady Lucie, Countesse of Bedford.

Madame.

respect of the vnmannerly presumption of an indiscreet Printer, who vvithout vvarrant hath divulged the late shewe at Court, presented the eight of Ianuary, by the Queenes Maiestie and her Ladies; and the same 10 very disorderly set forth: I thought it not amisse, seeing it vvould otherwise passe abroad, to the preiudice both of the Maske and the inuention, to describe the whole forme thereof in all points as it was then performed, and as the world wel knows very worthily performed, by a most magnificent Queene; whose heroicall spirit, and bounty onely gaue it so faire an execution as it had. Seeing also that these ornaments and delights of peace are in their season, as fit to entertaine the world, and deserve to be 20 made memorable as well as the grauer actions,—both of them concurring to the decking and furnishing of glory and Maiestie, as the necessary complements requisit for State and Greatnesse.

And therefore first I will deliuer the intent and scope of the project: Which was onely to prefent the figure of those bleffings, with the wish of their encrease and countinuance, which this mightie Kingdome now enjoyes by the benefite of his most gracious Maiestie; by whom we have this glory of peace, with the accession of so 30 great state and power. And to expresse the same, there were deuifed twelue Goddesses, vnder whose Images former times have represented the severall gifts of heauen, and erected Temples, Altars, and Figures vnto them, as vnto divine powers, in the shape & name of vvomen. As vnto Iuno the Goddesse of Empire and regnorum præsedi, they attributed that bleffing of power. To Pallas, Wisedome and Defence: to Venus, Loue and Amity: to Vesta, Religion: to Diana, the gift of Chastitie: to Proservina riches: to Macaria, selicitie: 40 to Concordia, the vnion of hearts: Altraa, Iustice: Flora, the beauties of the earth: Ceres plenty: to Tethis power by Sea.

And though these Images have oftentimes divers significations, yet it being not our purpose to represent them, with all those curious and superfluous observations, we tooke them onely to serve as Hierogliphicas for our present intention, according to some one propertie that sitted our occasion, without observing other their mysticall interpretations; wherein the authors themselves are so irrigular and confused, as the best Mytheologers, who will make somewhat to seeme any thing, are so vnfaithfull to themselves, as they have left vs no certaine way at all, but a tract of consuion, to take our course at adventure. And therefore owing no homage to their intricate observations, vve vvere left at libertie to take no other knowledge of them, then fitted our present purpose, nor were tied by any lawes of Heraldry to range them otherwise in their precidencies, then they fell out to stand vvith the nature of the matter in hand. And 60 in these cases it may vvell seeme ingenerosum sapere solum ex commentaris quasi maiorum inventa industriae nostrae viam precluserit, quasi in nobis offata sit vis naturae, nihil ex separere, or that there can be nothing done authenticall, vnlesse vve observe all the strict rules of the booke.

And therefore we tooke their aptest representations that lay best and easiest for vs. And first presented the Hieroglephick of Empire and Dominion, as the ground and matter vyhereon this glory of State is built. Then 70 those blessings and beauties that preserve and adorne it: As armed policie, loue, Religion, Chastitie, wealth, happinesse, Concord, Iustice, slorishing seasons, plenty: and lastly power by sea, as to imbound and circle the greatnes of dominion by land.

And to this purpose vvere these Goddesses thus prefented in their proper and seuerall attyres, bringing in their hands the particular sigures of their power which they gaue to the Temple of Peace, erected vpon source pillars, representing the source Vertues that supported a 80 Globe of the earth.

Ι

First, Iuno in a skie-colour mantle imbrodered with gold, and figured with Peacocks feathers, wearing a Crowne of gold on her head, presents a Scepter.

2

Pallas (which was the person her Maiestie chose to represent) was attyred in a blew mantle, with a siluer imbrodery of all weapons and engines of war, with a helmet-dressing on her head, and presents a Launce and Target.

90

3

Venus, in a Mantle of Doue-colour and filuer, imbrodred with Doues, prefented (in stead of her Cestus, the girdle of Amity) a Skarffe of diuers colours.

4

Vefta, in a white Mantle, imbrodred with gold-flames, with a dreffing like a Nun, presented a burning Lampe in one hand, and a Booke in the other.

5

100

Diana, in a greene Mantle, imbrodered with filuer halfe Moones, and a croissant of pearle on her head: presents a Bow and a Quiuer.

6

Proferpina, in a blacke Mantle, imbrodered with gold-flames, with a crowne of gold on her head: prefented a Myne of gold-ore.

7

Macaria, the Goddesse of Felicitie, in a Mantle of purple and siluer, imbrodered with the Figures of Plentie and Wisedome, (which concurre to the making of true happinesse) presents a Cadaceum with the Figure of abundance.

8

Concordia, in a party coloured Mantle of Crimson and White (the colours of England and Scotland ioyned) imbrodered with filuer, hands in hand, with a dreffing likewise of party coloured Roses, a Branch whereof in a wreath or knot she presented.

a

120

Astrona, in a Mantle Crimson, with a filuer imbrodery, Figuring the Sword and Balance (as the Characters of Iustice) which she presented.

IO

Flora, in a Mantle of divers colours, imbrodered with all forts of Flowers, prefents a Pot of Flowers.

II

Ceres, in Strawe colour and Siluer imbrodery, with eares of Corne, and a dreffing of the fame, prefents a Sickle.

130

12

Tethes, in a Mantle of Sea-greene, with a filuer imbrodery of Waues, and a dreffing of Reedes, prefents a Trident.

Now for the introducing this Shew: It was deuised that the Night, represented in a blacke vesture set with Starres, should arise from below, and come towards the vpper end of the Hall: there to waken her sonne Somnus, sleeping in his Caue, as the Proem to the Vision. Which Figures when they are thus presented in humane bodies, as all Vertues, Vices, Passions, Knowledges, and whatfoeuer Abstracts else in imagination are, which we would make visible, we produce them, vsing humane actions, and even Sleepe it selfe (which might feeme improperly to exercise waking motions) hath been often shewed vs in that manner, with speech and gesture. As for example:

Excusit tandem sibi se; cubitoque leuatus Quid veniat (cognouit enim) Scitatur.

Intanto soprauenne, & gli occhi chiuse A i Signori, & a i Sergenti il pigro Sonno.

And in another place:

Il Sonno viene, & Sparso il corpo stanco Col ramo intimo nel liquor di Lethe.

So there, Sleepe is brought in, as a body, vfing speech and motion: and it was no more improper in this forme to make him walke, and stand, or speake, then it is to give voyce or passion to dead Men, Ghosts, Trees, and Stones: and therefore in fuch matters of Shewes, these like Characters (in what forme soeuer they be 160 drawne) ferue vs but to read the intention of vvhat vve would represent; as in this project of ours, Night & Sleepe yvere to produce a Vision,—an effect proper to their power, and fit to shadow our purpose, for that these apparitions & shewes are but as imaginations. and dreames that portend our affections; and dreames are neuer in all points agreeing right with waking actions: and therefore were they aptest to shadow whatfoeuer error might be herein presented.

therefore vvas Sleepe (as hee is described by Philostratus 170 in Amphirai imagine) apparelled in a vvhite thin Vesture cast over a blacke, to signifie both the day and the night, with wings of the same colour, a Garland of Poppy on his head; and in stead of his yuoyrie and transparent horne, hee was shewed bearing a blacke Wand in the lest hand, and a white in the other, to effect either confused or significant dreames, according to that invocation of Statius.

———Nec te totas infundere pennas Luminibus compello meis, hoc turba precatur, Lætior, extremo me tange cacumine virgæ.

180

And also agreeing to that of Sil. Ital.

Tangens Lethea tempora Virga.

And in this action did he here vse his white Wand. as to infuse fignificant Visions to entertaine the Spectators, and fo made them feeme to fee there a Temple with a Sybilla therein attending vpon the Sacrifices; which done, Iris (the Messenger of Iuno) descends from the top of a Mountaine raised at the lower end of the Hall, and marching vp to the Temple of Peace, giues 190 notice to the Sybilla of the comming of the Goddesses, and withall delivers her a Prospective, wherein she might behold the Figures of their Deities, and thereby describe them; to the end that at their descending, there might be no stay or hinderance of their Motion, which was to be carryed vvithout any interruption, to the action of other entertainments that were to depend one of another, during the vvhole Shew: and that the eyes of the Spectators might not beguile their eares, as in fuch cases it euer happens, vvhiles pompe and splen-200 dor of the sight takes vp all the intention vvithout regard [to] vvhat is spoken; and therefore vvas it thought sit their descriptions should be deliuered by the Sybilla.

III.

Which as soone as she had ended, the three Graces in filuer Robes with white Torches, appeared on the top of the mountaine, descending hand in hand before the Goddesses; vvho likevvise followed three and three, as in a number dedicated vnto Sanctity and an incorporeall nature, whereas the Dual, Hierogliphice pro 210 immudis accipitur. And betweene euery ranke of Goddesses, marched three Torch-bearers in the like seuerall colours, their heads and Robes all dect with Starres: and in their descending, the Cornets sitting in the Concaues of the Mountaine, and feene but / to their breasts, in the habit of Satyres, sounded a stately March; vvhich continued vntill the Goddesses were approached iust before the Temple, and then ceased, when the Confort Musicke (placed in the Cupula thereof, out of fight) began: whereunto the three 220 Graces retyring themselves aside, sang, vyhiles the Goddesses one after an other with solemne pace ascended vp into the Temple, and delivering their prefents to the Sybilla (as it vvere but in passing by) returned downe into the midst of the Hall, preparing themselues to their dance, vvhich (affoone as the Graces had ended their Song) they began to the Musicke of the Violls and Lutes, placed on one fide of the Hall.

Which dance being performed with great maiesty and Arte, confishing of diuers straines, fram'd wnto 230 motions circular, square, triangular, vvith other proportions exceeding rare and full of variety; the Goddesses made a pause, casting themselves into a circle, whilst the Graces againe sang to the Musicke of the Temple, and prepared to take out the Lords to dance. With whom after they had performed certaine Measures, Galliards, and Curranto's, Iris againe comes and gives notice of their pleasure to depart: whose speech ended, they drew themselves againe into another short dance, with some sew pleasant changes, still retyring them 240 toward the soote of the Mountaine, which they ascended in that same manner as they came downe, whilst the Cornets taking their Notes from the ceasing of the Musicke below, sounded another delightfull March.

And thus Madame, haue I briefly deliuered, both the reason and manner of this Maske; as well to satisfie the desire of those who could not well note the carriage of these passages, by reason (as I sayd) the present pompe and splendor entertain'd them otherwise (as that which is most regardfull in these Shewes) 250 wherein (by the vnpartiall opinion of all the beholders Strangers and others) it was not inferiour to the best that euer was presented in Christendome; as also to give vp my account hereof vnto your Honour, whereby / I might cleere the reckoning of any imputation that might be layd vpon your iudgement, for preserring such a one, to her Maiesty in this imployment, as could give no reason for what was done.

And for the captious Cenfurers, I regard not what they can fay, who commonly can do little else but fay; and if their deepe iudgements euer serue them to pro- 260 duce any thing, they must stand on the same Stage of Censure with other men, and peraduenture performe no fuch great wonders as they would make vs beleeue: and I comfort my felfe in this, that in Court I know not any (vnder him, who acts the greatest parts) that is not obnoxious to enuy, and a finister interpretation. And whofoever frives to flew most wit about these Punscitillos of Dreames and shewes, are sure sicke of a difease they cannot hide, and would faine haue the 270 world to thinke them very deeply learned in all misteries whatsoeuer. And peraduenture they thinke themselues so; which if they do, they are in a farre worse case then they imagine; Non potest non indoctus esse qui se doctum credit. And let vs labour to shew neuer fo much skill or Arte, our weaknesses and ignorance will be feene, whatfoeuer couering vve cast ouer it. And yet in these matters of shewes (though they be that which most entertaine the vvorld) there needs no fuch exact fufficiency in this kind. For, Ludit istis 280 animus, non proficit. And therefore, Madame, I will no longer idlely hold you therein, but refer you to the fpeeches, and fo to your better delights, as one vvho must euer acknowledge my selfe especially bound vnto vour Honour.

SAM: DANIEL.

The Night represented, in a blacke Vesture set with Starres, comes and wakens her Sonne Somnus (sleeping in his Caue) with this Speech.

Wake darke Sleepe, rouse thee from out this Caue,

Thy Mother Night that bred thee in her wombe

And fed thee first with silence and with ease,

Doth here thy shadowing operations craue:

And therefore wake my Sonne, awake, and come, Strike vvith thy Horny vvand, the spirits of these That here expect some pleasing nouelties:

And make their slumber to beget strange sights, Strange visions and vnvsuall properties.

Vnseene of latter Ages, ancient Rites, Of gifts divine, vvrapt vp in mysteries:

Make this to seeme a Temple in their sight, Whose maine support, holy Religion frame:

And Wisdome, Courage, Temperance, and Right, Make seeme the Pillars that sustaine the same.

Shadow fome Sybill to attend the Rites,
And to describe the Powers that shall resort,
With th'interpretation of the benefits
They bring in clouds, and what they do import.
Yet make them to portend the true desire
Of those that vvish them waking, reall things:
Whilst I will hou'ring, here a-loose retire
And couer all things vvith my sable Wings.

Sommus.

DEare Mother Night, I your commandement Obey, and Dreames t'interpret Dreames will make,

As / vvaking curiofity is wont;
Though better dreame a fleep, then dreame awake.
And this white horny Wand shall vvorke the deed;
Whose power doth Figures of the light present:
When from this sable radius doth proceed
Nought but confused shewes, to no intent.
Be this a Temple; there Sybilla stand,
Preparing reuerent Rites with holy hand;
And so bright visions go, and entertaine
All round about, vvhilft I'le to sleepe againe.

Iris, the Messenger of the Goddesses discending from the 40 Mount, where they were assembled, (dest like the Rainebow) spake as followeth.

The daughter of Wonder (now made the Messenger of Power), am here discended, to significe the comming of a Cœlestiall presence of Goddesses, determined to visit this faire Temple of Peace, vvhich holy hands and deuout defires, have dedicated to unity and concord. And leaving to shew themselves any more in Samos, Ida, Paphos, their ancient delighting places of Greece, and Asia, made now the seats of Barbarizme and spoyle, 50 vouchsafe to recreat themselves vpon this Westerne Mount of mighty BRITTANNY; the Land of civill Musick and of rest, and are pleased to appeare in the selfe-same Figures wherein antiquity hath formerly cloathed them, and as they have bin cast in the imagination of piety, who hath given mortall shapes to the gifts and effects of an eternall power, for that those beautifull Caracters of sense were easier to be read then their mysticall Ideas, dispersed in that wide and incomprehensible volume of Nature.

20

And well have mortall men apparelled all the Graces, all the Bleffings, all Vertues, with that shape wherein themselves are much delighted, and which worke the best Motions, and best represent the beautie of heavenly Powers.

And therefore reuerent Prophetesse, that here attendess vpon / the deuotions of this Place, prepare thy selfe for those Rytes that appertaine to thy function, and the honour of such Deities; and to the end thou mayst have a fore-notion what Powers, and who they are that 70 come, take here this Prospective, and therein note and tell vyhat thou seess: for well mayest thou there observe their shadowes, but their presence will bereaue thee of all, save admiration and amazement; for who can looke vpon such Powers and speake? And so I leave thee.

Sybilla, having received this Message, and the Prospective, wheth these words.

Hat haue I feene? where am I? or do I fee at all? or am I any where? was this Iris, (the Meffenger of Iuno) or elfe but a fantasme or imagination? will the diuine Goddesses vouchsafe to visit this poore Temple? Shall I be blest, to entertaine so great Powers? it can be but a dreame: yet so great Powers haue blest as humble rooses, and vse, out of no other respect, then their owne gracefulnes, to shine vyhere they will. But what Prospective is this? or what shall I herein see? Oh admirable Powers! what sights are these?

Iuno.

First, here Imperiall Iuno in her Chayre,
With Scepter of command for Kingdomes large:
Descends all clad in colours of the Ayre,
Crown'd with bright Starres, to signific her charge.

Pallas.

Ext, War-like Pallas, in her Helmet dreft
With Lance of vvinning, Target of defence:
In vvhom both Wit and Courage are exprest,
To get with glory, hold vvith Prouidence.

Venus. |

Hen louely Venus in bright Maiesty,
Appeares with milde aspect, in Doue-like hue:
With th'all combining Skarsse of Amity.
T'ingird strange Nations with assections true.

Vesta.

Ext Holy Vesta, with her flames of Zeale Presents her selfe, clad in white Purity: Whose booke, the soules sweet comfort, doth reueale By the euer-burning Lampe of Piety.

Diana.

Hen chafte Diana, in her Robes of greene, IIO With weapons of the Wood her felfe addrests To blesse the Forrests, where her power is seene, In peace with all the world but Sauage beafts.

Proferpina.

Ext rich Proferpina, vvith flames of gold,
Whose state although within the earth, yet she Comes from aboue, and in her hand doth hold
The Myne of wealth, with cheerefull Maiesty.

Macaria.

Hen all in purple Robes, rich Happinesse 120
Next her appeares, bearing in either hand,
Th'Ensignes both of wealth and wits, t'expresse
That by them both, her Maiesty doth stand.

Concordia.

In white and crimfon, gracefull Concord, dreft With knots of Vnion, and in hand fhe beares

The happy ioynèd Rofes of our reft.

Astrea.

Clad in Cælestiall hue, (which best she likes)
Comes with her Ballance, and her sword to shew
That first her iudgement weighs before it strikes.

Flora.

Hen cheereful Flora, all adorn'd with flowers, Who cloathes the earth with beauty and delight In thousand fundry suits, whilft shining houres Will skarce afford a darknesse to the night.

Ceres.

Ext plenteous Ceres in her Haruest weede, 140 Crown'd with th'increase of what she gaue to keepe,

To gratitude and faith: in whom we read, Who fowes on Vertue shall with glory reape.

Tethis.

Aftly comes Tethis, Albions fairest loue

Whom she in faithfull Armes deignes t'embrace,
And brings the Trydent of her Power, t'approue

The kinde respect she hath to do him grace.

Thus have I read their shadowes, but behold!
In glory, where they come as Iris told.

150

The three Graces, comming to the upper part of the Hall fang this Song, while the Goddesses delivered their prefents.

Gratia sunt 1 aantuum, 2 reddentium, 3 & promerentium.

I

Efert, Reward, and Gratitude, The Graces of Societie: Doe here with hand in hand conclude The bleffed chaine of Amitie:

For we deferue, we giue, we thanke, Thanks, Gifts, Deferts, thus ioyne in ranke. 160

2

We yeeld the fplendant raijes of light,
Vnto these blessings that descend:
The grace vvhereof with more delight,
The vvell disposing doth commend;
Whilst Gratitude, Rewards, Deserts,
Please, winne, draw on, and couple hearts.

3

For worth and power and due refpect,
Deferues, bestowes, returnes with Grace:
The meed, reward, the kinde effect,
That give the world a cheerefull face,
And turning in this course of right,
Make Vertue move with true delight.

170

The Song being ended, and the Maskers in the miadest of the Hall, disposing themselves to their Daunce: Sybilla having placed their severall presents on the Altar, vttereth these words.

Powers of powers, grant to our vowes we pray
That these faire blessings which we now erect
In Figures left vs here, in substance may
Be those great props of glory and respect.

Let Kingdomes large, 2 let armed policie,

Milde loue, 4 true zeale, 5 right shooting at the white

Of braue difignes: ⁶ let wealth, ⁷ felicitie,
⁸ Iustice, ⁹ and concord, ¹⁰ pleasure, ¹¹ plenty, ¹² might
And power by Sea, with Grace proportionate,
Make glorious both the Soueraigne and his State.

After this the Maskers danced their owne measures, 190 which being ended, and they ready to take out the Lords, the three Graces sang.

Whiles worth with honour make their choise For measured motions ordered right,
Now let vs likewise give a voyce,
Vnto the touch of our delight.

For comforts lock't vp without found, Are th'vnborne children of the thought: Like vnto Treasures neuer found That buried lowe are left forgot.

200

Where words, our glory doth not fhew, (There) like braue actions without Fame: It feemes as Plants not fet to grow, Or as a Tombe without a Name.

The Maskers having ended their dancing with the Lords, Iris gives warning of their departure.

Iris.

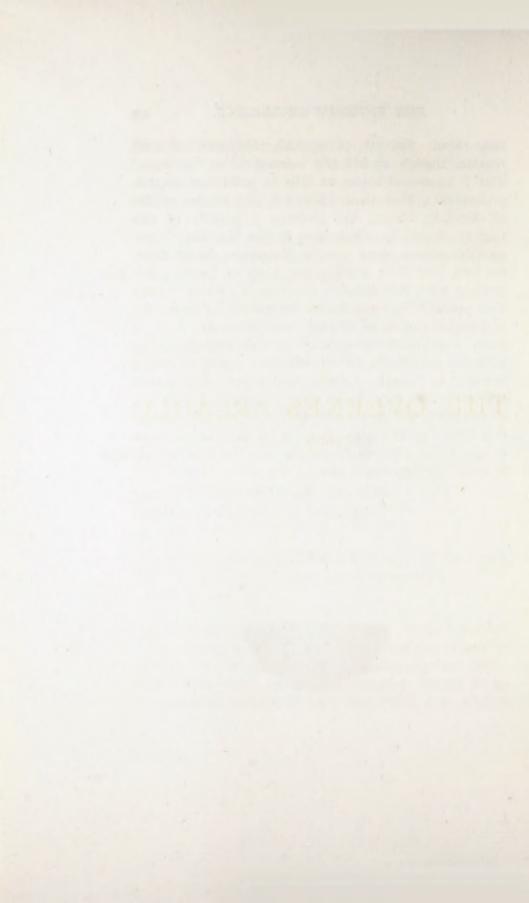

A S I was the ioyfull Messenger to notifie the comming, so am I now the same of the departure of these divine powers. Who having cloathed them- 210 selves with these apparances, doe now returne backe againe to the Spheres of their owne being from whence they came. But yet, of my felfe, this / much I must reueale, though against the warrant of a Messenger; who I know had better to faile in obedience then in prefumption, that these Deities by the motion of the all-directing Pallas, the glorious Patronesse of this mighty Monarchy, descending in the Maiestie of their inuifible effence, vpon yonder Mountaine, found there, the best, (and most worthily the best) of LADIES, dis- 220 porting with her choyfest Attendants; whose formes they prefently vndertooke, as delighting to be in the best-built-Temples of Beauty and Honour. And in them vouchfafed to appeare in this manner, being otherwise no objects for mortall eyes. And no doubt. but that in respect of the persons under whose beautifull couerings they have thus prefented themselves. these Deities will be pleased the rather at their inuocation (knowing all their defires to be fuch) as evermore to grace this glorious Monarchy with the Reall effects 230 of these bleffings represented.

After this, they fell to a short departing dance, and so ascend the Mountayne.

FINIS.

THE QVEENES ARCADIA.

NOTE.

The first edition of 'The Queenes Arcadia' was published in 1606. An exemplar (probably unique) is among the Malone books in the Bodleian (200). The following is its title-page:—

QVEENES ARCADIA.

A Pastorall Trage-comedie presented to her Maiestie and her Ladies, by the Vniuersitie of Oxford in Christs Church, in August last.

1605.

AT LONDON.

Printed by G. Eld, for Simon Waterfon, 1606.

This was followed by reprints in the 'Certaine Small Workes' of 1607, 1609 and 1611. Collation shows that, except trivial orthographical alterations, the original text was adhered to; but it must be stated here that the errata lists of the 'Certaine Small Workes' are simply departures from the original 4to of 1606, and that the 4to of 1623 is most of all culpable, as witness these restorations and corrections from the Author's own text of 1606. See p. 211 for title-page, as usual, from the 4to of 1623. G.

Line	5,	knowst'	1606,	'knowest'	1623.
22	26,	'maladine'	22	'maladies'	22
22	28,	'made'	22	'may'	22
22	39,	'do'	22	to'	,,
22	92,	'Carinus'	22	'Carnius'	22
>>	93,	'fond'	"	'found'	22

```
'Lees'
Line
       146, 'Lets'
                            1606,
                                                 1623.
       149, 'thee'
                                   'the'
 "
                              22
                                                   22
                                   'figne'
       155, 'fignes'
                                                   22
                              22
 27
       158, 'pact'
                                    'pack'
                              ,,
                                                   22
 99
       224, 'then'
                                    'them'
                              "
                                                   22
 22
       255, 'ioying'
                                    'ioyning'
                                                   ,,
 99
                              22
                                    'doe'
       282, 'did'
                              22
 22
       287, 'Compositors'
                                    'Impressitors'
                              22
       317, 'bounds'
                                    'bonds'
                              22
                                                   22
 99 398, 'tis'
                                    dropped out
                              ,,
 22
       427, 'power'
                                    'powers'
                              99
                                                    22
       487, 'on'
                                    'one'
                              22
                                                    23
 22
       534, 'them'
                                    'from'
 22
                              22
       592, 'comment'
                                    'commend'
 "
                              27
                                                    33
       594, 'here'
                                   dropped out
                              23
                                                    99
 99
       639, 'an'
                                   'and'
                              5)
 22 657, 'faciety'
                                   fociety'
 22
                              22
                                                    99
       672, 'fparkle'
                                   'ftarkle'
                             "
 22
       708, this whole line dropped out by
 ,,
       739, 'faithfull'
                            1606, dropped out
 22
                                                   22
       878, 'thy'
                                   'the'
 23
                              22
                                                   "
       907, 'extremities' extremity'
 22
                              22
                                                   99 909, 'vnto'
                                   dropped out
       910, 'A way'
                                   'Away'
 22
                              23
                                                   29
       934, 'to'
                                   'no'
                             22
 22
                                                   22
       938, 'then what'
                                   'when that'
 99
                             22
       954, 'well met'
                                   'tell me'
                              23
 33
                                                   29
       974, 'yet'
                                   dropped out
 22
      1032, 'his'
                                   'this'
 22
                             23
                                                   33
      1038, 'ftates'
                                   'ftarres'
 99
                             22
                                                   23
      1064, 'to fay'
                                   'fo faith'
                             22
      1078, 'Elixir'
                                   Elixit'
 "
                             "
                                                   "
      1081, 'Hypocrates'
                                   'Hypocratis
                             22
                                                   22
 22
      1081, 'Auicen'
                                   'Auicon'
                             ,,
     1082, 'bookes'
                                   'booke'
 22
                              22
                                                   29
     1164, 'fpends'
                                   'fends'
 22
                              22
                                                   22
      1168, 'now'
                                    'not'
 22
                              22
     1169, 'furly'
                                    'furely'
                              22
                                                   23
 23
     1276, 'lie'
                                   'lay'
                              22
                                                   "
      1279, 'delight'
                                    'pelight'
 >>
                              22
                                                   >>
      1360, 'hers' her'
                              22
                                                   22
```

III.

210 NOTE.

```
Line 1368, 'what'
                          1606.
                                 'that'
                                               1623.
      1368, 'fecret'
                                  'fecrets'
                            ,,
                                                 22
      1409, 'a lone'
                                  'alone'
 99
                            22 1438, 'on'
                                  dropped out
                            22
      1468, 'in accents'
                                  'in th' accents'
                            22
      1827, 'thy'
                                  'the'
 99
                            22
      1873, 'perceiu'd'
                                  'perceiue'
                            22
                                                 99
      1983, 'thee'
                                  'the'
      2131, 'holpe'
                                  'helpt'
 22
                            99
                                                 23
      2158, 'affections'
                                  'affection'
                            25
                                                 22
      2236, 'reportes'
                                  'report'
                             "
                                                 22
      2241, 'Acryfius'
                                  'Aryfius'
 23
                            23
                                                 22
      2325, 'too'
                                  "to"
                             23
      2389, 'hath'
                                  'haue'
                             33
      2402, 'Of'
                                  ·0' 23
                                                 22
      2479, 'feete'
                                  'feele'
      2547, 'dislinkt'
                                  'mislikt'
                             22
                                                  99 2562, 'then'
                                  'their'
                             ,,
                                                  22
      2570, 'happie'
                                  dropped out
                             22
                                                 2.2
```

The critical Reader will perceive that this large list, in nearly every instance, makes nonsense of the place, in the 4to of 1623. The following corrections of both 1606 and 1623 I have made:—

```
Line 974, 'frame' for 'forme.' See l. 974.

, 983, 'customary' for 'constumary.'

, 1026, 'is' for 'are.'

, 1080, 'Alc.' inserted.

, 1165, 'is' for 'in.'

, 2028, 'clouer' for 'clauer.'

, 2120, 'hast' for 'haste.'

, 2285, a second 'Erg.' removed.

, 2565, 'rendes' for 'reades.'
```

Two misprints of 1606 are corrected in 1623—viz., l. 1402, 'dead' for 'deed': l. 1970, 'this' for 'thus.' Line 310, 'debaushment,' misprinted 'debaushment' in all the texts: l. 532, 'from' misprinted in all 'for.' Obvious mistakes of letters, as 'n' for 'u' and the like, occur in both—all silently put right.

G.

THE Q V E E N E S

ARCADIA.

A Pastorall Trage-Comedie prefented to her Maiesty and her Ladies, by the Vniuersity of Oxford in Christs Church, in August. 1605.

By SAMVEL DANIEL.

LONDON,

Printed by Nicholas Okes, for Simon Waterson. 1623.

The Names of the Actors.

MELIBÆUS. ERGASTUS. two ancient Arcadians.

COLAX, a corrupted traueller.

TECHNE, a fubtle wench of Corinth.

AMYNTAS. CARINUS. the louers of Cloris.

CLORIS.

PALÆMON. Iealous Louers.

MIRTILLUS.

DORINDA.

AMARILLIS, in loue with Carinus.

DAPHNE, abufed by Colax.

ALCON, a Quack-faluer.

LINCUS, a Petty-fogger.

MONTANUS, the father of Amyntas.

ACRYSIUS, the father of Cloris.

To the Queenes most excellent Maiestie.

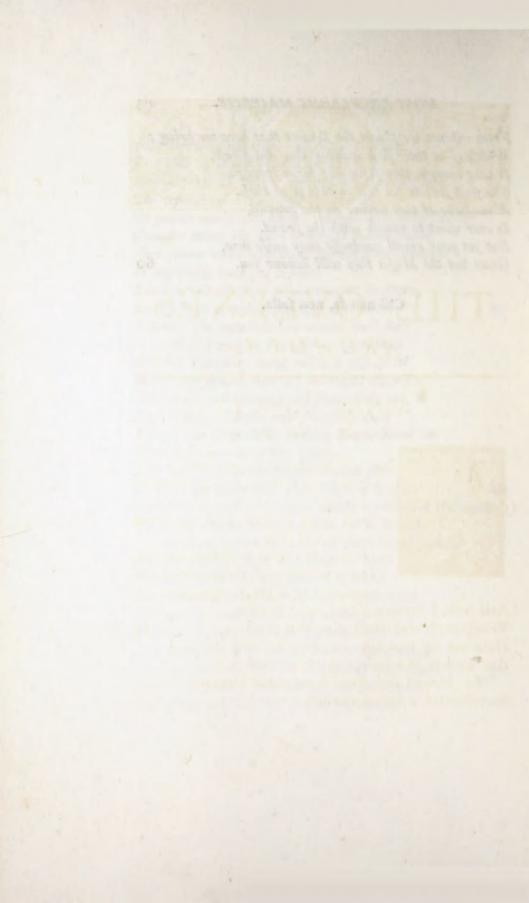

T Hat which their zeale, whose onely zeale was bent To shew the best they could that might delight Your royall minde, did lately represent Renowned Empresse to your Princely sight: Is now the offring of their humblenesse, Here consecrated to your glorious name; Whose happy presence did vouchsafe to blesse So poore presentments, and to grace the same: And though it be in th'humblest ranke of words. And in the lowest region of our speach, TO Yet is it in that kinde, as best accords With rurall passions; which we not to reach Beyond the groues and woods, where they were bred: And best become a claustrall exercise, Where men shut out retyr'd, and sequestred From publike fashion, seeme to sympathise With innocent, and plaine simplicity: And living here under the awfull hand Of discipline, and strict observancy, Learne but our weakenesses to understand, 20 And therefore dare not enterprize to show In lowder stile the hidden mysteries, And arts of Thrones; which none that are below The Sphere of action, and the exercise Of power can truely shew: though men may straine Conceipt aboue the pitch where it should stand, And forme more monstrous figures then containe A possibility, and goe beyond The | nature of those managements so farre, As oft their common decency they marre: 30 Whereby the populaffe (in whom fuch skill Is needlesse) may be brought to apprehend Notions, that may turne all to a tast of ill What ever power shall do, or might intend: And thinke all cunning, all proceeding one, And nothing simple, and sincerely done: Yet the eye of practife, looking downe from hie V pon such ouer-reaching vanity, Sees how from error t'error it doth flote, As from an unknowne Ocean into a Gulfe: 40 And how though th' Woolfe, would counterfeit the Goate, Yet every chinke bewrayes him for a Woolfe. And therefore in the view of state thave show'd A counterfeit of state, had beene to light

A candle to the Sunne, and so bestow'd
Our paines to bring our dimnesse wnto light.
For maiesty, and power, can nothing see!
Without it selfe, that can sight-worthy be.
And therefore durst not we but on the ground,
From whence our humble Argument hath birth,
Erect our Scene; and thereon are we found,
And if we fall, we fall but on the earth,

50

From whence we pluckt the flowers that here we bring; Which if at their first opening they did please, It was enough, they serve but for a spring:
The first sent is the best in things as these.
A musicke of this nature on the ground, Is ever wont to vanish with the sound.
But yet your royall goodnesse may raise new, Grace but the Muses they will honour you.

Chi non fa, non falla.

THE OVEENES

ARCADIA.

ACTVS. I. SCENA. I.

Ergastus. Melibæus.

Ow is it Melibæus that we finde
Our Country, faire Arcadia, fo much chang'd

From what it was; that was thou knowst of late,

The gentle region of plaine honesty, The modest feat of vndisguised truth, Inhabited with simple innocence:

IO

And now, I know not how, as if it were
Vnhallowed, and diuested of that grace,
Hath put off that faire nature which it had,
And growes like ruder countries, or more bad.

Mel. Indeed Ergastus I have never knowne
So vniuersall a distemperature,

In all parts of the body of our state,
As now there is; nor euer haue we heard
So much complaining of disloyalty,
Among'st your yonger Nymphes, nor euer found
Our heardsmen so deluded in their loues,
As if there were no faith on either side.

We neuer had in any age before
So many spotlesse Nymphes, so much distain'd
VVith blacke report, and wrongfull infamy;
That sew escape the tongue of malice free.

Erg. And me thinkes too, our very aire is chang'd, Our wholesome climate growne more maladiue; The sogges, and the Syrene offends vs more (Or we made thinke so), then they did before. The windes of Autumne, now are sayd to bring More noysomnesse, then those do of the Spring:

And all of vs feele new infirmities,

New Feuers, new Catarres, oppresse our powers;

The milke wherewith we cur'd all maladies,

Hath either lost the nature, or we ours.

Mel. And we that neuer were accustomed
To quarrell for our bounds, how do we see
Montanus and Acrysius interstriue
How farre their seuerall Sheep-walkes should extend,
And cannot be agreed do what we can:
As if some vnderworking hand strake fire,
To th'apt inkindling tinder of debate,
And softred their contention and their hate.

Erg. And me thinkes too, the beauty of our Nymphes

Is not the fame, as it was wont to be. That Rosie hew, the glory of the Cheeke,

60

70

Is either stolne, or else they have forgot,

To blush with shame, or to be pale with seare:

Or else their shame doth make them alwayes blush;

For alwayes doth their beauties beare one hew,

And either Nature's false, or that vntrue.

Mel. Besides their various habits grow so strange, As that although their faces certaine are, Their bodies are vncertaine euery day, And alwayes differing from themselues so farre, As if they skorn'd to be the same they are.

And all of vs are so transform'd, that we Discerne not an Arcadian by th'attyre; Our ancient Pastorall habits are despis'd, And all is strange, hearts, clothes, and all disguis'd.

Erg. Indeed vnto our griefe we may perceiue,
The whole complection of Arcadia chang'd,
Yet cannot finde the occasion of this change:
But let vs with more wary eye observe
Whence the contagion of these customes rise,
That have insected thus our honest plaines,
With cunning discord, idle vanity,
Deceiptfull wrong, and caussesses insamp;
That by th'affistance of our graver Swaines,
We now at first, may labour to prevent
The further course of mischieses, and restore
Our late cleane woods, to what they were before.

Mel. Content Ergastus, and even here will be A place convenient for so fit a worke:

For here our Nymphs, and heardsmen on this Greene, Do vsually resort, and in this Grove

We may observe them best, and be vnseene.

ACT. I. SCEN. II.

Colax. Techne.

Ome my deare Techne, thou and I must plot
More cunning projects yet, more strange designes 80

Amongst these simple grosse Arcadians here,
That know no other world, but their owne plaines;
Nor yet can apprehend the subtle traines
We lay, to mocke their rurall ignorance.
But see, here comes two of their amorous Swaines
In hote contention; let vs close conuay
Our selues, here vnderneath this couerture,
And ouer heare their passionate discourse.

Tech. Colax, this place well fuch a purpose fits;
Let vs fit close, and faith, it shall goe hard,
Vnlesse we make some profit by their wits.

Carinus. Amyntas.

Car. Now fond Amyntas, how cam'ft thou possest With such a vaine presumption, as thou art, To thinke that Cloris should affect thee best, When all Arcadia knowes I have her heart?

Am. And how Carinus canst thou be so mad,
T'imagine Cloris can, or doth loue thee,
When by so many signes as I have had,
I finde her whole affection bent to me?

Car. What are those signes by which you come to

And calculate the fortune of your hopes?

Am. More certaine fignes then thou canst euer shew.

Car. But they are more then signes, that I can shew.

Am. Why let each then produce the best he can, To proue which may be thought the likeliest man.

Car. Content Amyntas, and do thou begin.

Am. And I am well contented to begin.

First if by chance, whil'st she at Barley-breake
With other Nymphes, do but perceiue me come,
Streight lookes her cheeke with such a Rosie red,
As gives the setting Sunne vnto the West
When morrow tempests are prefigured.

Car. Euen so that hew prognosticates her wrath, Which brings to thee the stormy windes of sighes.

Am. And if I finde her with her fellow Nymphes Gathering of flowers by fome fweet Riuers fide, At my approach fhe straight way stands vpright, Forgets her worke, and downe lets slide her lap, And out fall all her flowers, vpon the ground.

Car. So doth the filly sheepe forget to feed, When it perceives the greedy Wolfe at hand.

Am. And if she meet but with my dog, she takes And strokes him on the head, playes with his eares, Spits in his mouth, and claps him on the backe, And says, come, come Melampus go with me.

Car. She may loue what is thine, but yet hate thee.

Am. Whilft at a Chrystall spring the other day,
She washt her louely face, and seeing me come,
She takes vp water with her dainty hand,
And with a downe-cast looke besprinckles me.

Car. That shewes that shee voould gladly quench in

The fire of loue, or else like loue doth beare, As did the Delian Goddesse, vvhen she cast Disdainefull vvater on Asteons sace.

Am. As Siluia, one day, fate vvith her alone, Binding of certaine choice felected hearbes
To her left arme, against bewitching spels,
(And I at the instant comming) shee perceiu'd
Her pulse vvith farre more violence to beat
(As sh'after told me) then it did before.

140

Car. The like is felt vvhen natures enemy, The hatefull feauer, doth furprife our powers.

Am. And even but yesternight, she going before With other maides, and seeing me following her, Lets fall this dainty Nosegay, having first Bestow'd a kisse thereon, to th'end I might Receive it so, and with it doe the like.

Car. Poore withred fauours, they might teach thee know,

That shee esteemes thee, and thy loue as light
As those dead flowers, shee vvore but for a show
The day before, and cast away at night.

Am. Now friend Carinus, thou that mutterest so At these plaine speaking figures of her loue, Tell by vvhat signes thou doest her fauours proue?

Car. Now filly man, doest thou imagine me So fond to blab the fauours of my loue?

Am. Was't not a pact agreed twixt thee & me?

Car. A pact to make thee tell thy fecrecy.

Am. And hast thou then betrayd my easie trust, 160 And dallied with my open simplenesse?

Car. And fitly art thou feru'd, that so wilt vaunt The imagin'd fauours of a gentle Nymph; And this is that vvhich makes vs feele that dearth Of grace, t'haue kindnes at so hie a rate. This makes them vvary how they doe bestow

The least regard of common curtesie, When such as you, poore, credulous, deuout, And humble soules, make all things miracles Your faith conceives, and vainely doe convert All shadowes to the figure of your hopes.

170

Am. Carinus now thou doest me double wrong, First to deride my easie confidence,
And then t'vpbrayd my trust, as if my tongue
Had heere prophan'd faire Cloris excellencie
In telling of her mercies, or had fin'd
In vttering th'honour of a modest grace
Bestowing comfort, in so iust a case.

Car. Why man, thou haft no way deseru'd her loue.

Am. Desert I cannot vrge, but faith I can; 180

If that may have reward, then happy man.

Car. But you know how I fau'd her from the hands Of that rude Satyre, vvho had else vndone Her honour vtterly; and therefore ought My loue of due, raigne soueraigne in her thought.

Am. But how that free, and vnfubdued heart,
Infranchif'd by the Charter of her eyes,
Will beare the imposition of a due
I doe not see, since loue knew neuer Lord
That could command the region of our will.
And therefore vrge thy due, I for my part,
Must plead compassion, and a faithfull heart.

Car. Plead thou thy faith, whilft I will get thy loue, For you kinde foules doe feldome gracefull proue.

Am. The more vnkind they, who should better way Our honest vowes, and loue for loue repay; But oft they beare the penance of their will, And for the wrong they doe, they speed as ill.

SCEN. III.

Colax. Techne.

200

220

Col. Alas poore fooles, how hotely they contend Who shall possesse a prey that's yet vngot.

But Techne, I must by thy helpe forestall

The mart of both their hopes, and whilst they shall Pursue the Ayre, I must surprise their gaine. [game?]

And sitly now, thou maist occasion take

By these advantages discouered here,

T'impresse in Cloris tender heart that touch

Of deepe dislike of both their vanteries,

As may convert her wholly vnto me.

Tec. Why will you then Dorindas loue forfake, For whom you traueld fo, and made me take Such labour to intice her to your loue?

Col. Tush Techne, we defire not what we have But what we would; our longings neuer stay With our attaynings, but they goe beyond.

Tec. And vvhy? Dorinda is as faire as she. Col. That I confesse, but yet that payes not me, For Cloris is another, and tis that,

And onely that, vvhich, Techne, I defire.

Some thing there is peculiar, and alone
To every beauty, that doth give an edge
To our defires, and more vve vvill conceive
In that vve have not then in that vve have.

And I have heard, abroad vvhere best experience
And vvit is learnd, that all the fairest choyce
Of vvoemen in the vvorld, serve but to make
One perfect beauty, vvhereof each brings part.
One hath a pleasing smile, and nothing else:

Another but fome filly Mole to grace 230
Th'aire of a difproportion'd face;
Another pleases not but vvhen she speakes,
And some in silence onely gracefull are:
Some till they laugh, we see, seeme to be faire,
Some haue their bodies good, their gestures ill,
Some please in Motion, some in sitting still,
Some are thought louely, that haue nothing faire,
Some againe faire that nothing louely are.
So that we see how beauty doth consist
Of divers peeces, and yet all attract,
And therefore vnto all my loue aspires;
As beauty varies, so doth my desires.

Tec. Ah but yet Colax doe not so much wrong Vnto a Nymph, now when thou hast subdu'd And won her heart, and knowst she holdst thee deare.

Col. Tush, wrong is as men thinke it, and I see It keepes the world the best in exercise
That else would languish, and have nought to doe Discord in parts, makes harmon' in the whole.
And some must laugh, whilst other some condole. 250 And so it be not of the side we are,
Let others beare it; what neede we to care?
And now Dorinda something hath to doe,
Now, she may sit, and thinke, and vexe and plot
For ease, and ioying of her sull delight
Would but have dull'd her spirits, and marrd her quite.

Tec. Alas, yet I must pitty her, poore soule
In this distresse, I being on my selfe
Of the frayle corporation, and doe know
That she will take it very grieuously.

And yet in troth sh'is feru'd but well inow,

15

That would neglect Mirtillus honest loue, And trust strong protestations, and new othes; Be wonne with garded words, and gawdy clothes.

Col. Well, well, Dorinda shall not waile alone, She shall have others to confort her mone: For fince my last returne from Telos Court I have made twenty of their coyest Nymphs Turne louers, with a few protesting words And fome choyce complementall periuries; I made Palæmon, to suspect the faith Of his chaft Siluia, and chaft Siluia his; In hope thereby to worke her loue to me. I wrought coy Daphne to infringe her vow Made to Menalcas; and I told her how Those fetters which so heavily were laid Vpon our free affections, onely were But customary bands, not naturall. And I thinke Techne thou hast done thy part Here, in this gentle region of kind hearts, Since thou cam'ft hither, for I fee thou thriu'ft.

Tec. Indeed whilft I in Corinth did remaine, I hardly could procure the meanes to liue, There were so many of my trade, that sold Complexions, dressings, tiffanies and tyres; Deuisors of new fashions and strange wyers, Bedbrokers, Night wormes, and Compositors; That though I knew these arts as well as they Yet being so many we could get small pay. Here, who but Techne now is all in all? Techne is sent for, Techne onely shewes New strange deuises to the choycest Nymphes: And I thinke Techne teaches them those trickes,

270

280

290

As they will not forget againe in haft.

I have fo opened their vnapt conceits

Vnto that vnderstanding of themselves,

As they will shew in time they were well taught,

If they observe my rules, and hide a fault.

Col. Ah well done Techne. Thus must thou and I Trade for our profit with their ignorance, 300 And take our time, and they must have their chance. But pray thee Techne, doe not thou forget To lay a traine for Cloris. So adue.

Tec. Colax I will not, and the rather too, For that I beare a little leaning loue To fweet Amyntas; for me thinkes he feemes The loueliest Shepheard all Arcadia yeelds, And I would gladly intercept his loue.

SCEN, IIII.

Melibæus. Ergastus.

310

So this is well; Here's one discouery made;
Here are the heads of that distemperature,
From whence these strange debaushments of our Nymphes

And vile deluding of our Shepheards springs:
Here is a monster, that hath made his lusts
As wide as is his will, and left his will Without all bounds, and cares not whom he wrongs,
So that he may his owne defires fulfill;
And being all foule himselfe, would make all ill
This is that Colax that from forraine lands,
Hath brought home that insection that vndoes
His countrey goodnesse, and impoysons all.

His being abroad would marre vs quite at home:

Tis strange to see, that by his going out,
He hath out-gone that native honesty,
Which here the breeding of his countrey gave.
For here I doe remember him a child,
The sonne of Nicoginus of the Hill;
A man though low in fortune, yet in minde
High set; a man still practising
T'advance his forward sonne beyond the traine
Of our Arcadian breed; and still me thought
I saw a disposition in the youth,
Bent to a selfe conceited surlinesse,
With an infinuating impudence.

Erg. A man the fitter made for Courts abroad Where I would God he had remained ftill, With those loose-living wanton Sybarites, Where luxurie, had made her outmost proofe. From whence I heare he comes, and hither brings 340 Their shames, to brand vs with the like reproach.

And for this other viper which you faw,
I doe remember how she came of late
For succour to these parts, and sought to teach
Our younger maides to dresse, and trie our Flaxe,
And vie the Distasse, and to make a hem,
And such like skill, being skill enough for them;
But since I see she hath presum'd to deale
In points of other science, different farre
From that plaine Art of honest huswifery,
And as it seemes hath often made repaire
Vnto the neighbour Cities round about;
From whom she hath these strange disguises got T'abuse our Nymphes, and as it seemes desires

350

To fute their mindes as light as their attires; But we shall soone preuent this growing plague Of pride and folly, now that she descry The true symptoma of this malady; And by this ouerture thus made we trust We shortly shall discouer all the rest.

360

ACT. II. SCEN. I.

Silvia. Cloris.

Cloris, here haue thou and I full oft
Sate and beene merry, in this shady Groue.
Here haue we sung full many a Rundelay,
Told Riddles, and made Nosegayes, laught at loue,
And other passions, whilst my selfe was free,
From that intollerable misery,
Whereto affection now inuassels me.
Now Cloris I shall neuer more take ioy
To see, or to be seene, with mortall eye;
Now forrow must be all my company.

Clo. Why Siluia, whence should all this griefe arise?

Sil. I am vndone Cloris, let that suffice.

Clo. Tell me fweet Siluia, how comes that to passe?

Sil. O Cloris if thou be as once I was

Free, from that miserable plague of loue,
Keepe thee so still; let my affliction warne
Thy youth, that neuer man haue power to moue
Thy heart to liking; for beleeue me this,
They are the most vnfaithfull impious race
Of creatures on the earth; neuer beleeue
Their protestations, nor their vowes, nor teares:
All is deceit; none meanes the thing he sweares.

Trust a mans faith? nay rather will I goe
And giue my selse a prey to sauage beasts;
For all they seeke, and all they labour for,
Is but t'vndoe vs; and when that is done,
They goe and triumph on the spoile the haue won.
Trust men, or take compassion when they grieue, 390
O Cloris 'tis to cherish and relieue
The frozen Snake, which with our heat once warmd,
Will sting vs to the heart in recompence;
And O no maruell tho the Satyre shund
To liue with man, when he perceiu'd he could,
With one and the same breath blow heat and cold.
Who would haue euer thought Palemons othes
Would haue prou'd salse? who would haue iudgd the face

That promif'd fo much faith, and honesty Had beene the visor but of treachery?

400

Clo. Is't possible Palæmon should b'vntrue?

Sil. Tis possible, Palæmon is vntrue.

Clo. If it be so, deare Silvia, I thinke then That thou saist truth, there is no trust in men. For I protest I neuer saw a sace That promis'd better of a heart then his, And if he saile, whose saith then constant is?

Sil. O Cloris, if thou didft but know how long, And with what earnest suite, he sought my loue; What vowes he vs'd, what othes, what teares among; 410 What shewes he made, his constancy to prooue, You would admire: and then againe to see How I although I lou'd him with my heart Stood out, and would by no means vrged be, To shew the least affection of my part.

For I had heard that, which (O now too well) I finde, that men were cunning, and would not Regard the thing that eafily was got.

Clo. Siluia, indeed and I have heard fo too.

Sil. And therefore I would try him, and not feeme 420 His vowes, nor protestations to esteeme: At length one day, here in this felfe-fame place, (Which I shall euer, and good cause I haue To thinke on whilft I liue) walking with me, After he had vrgèd me most earnestly: O Siluia, faid he, fince nor oath, nor yow, Nor teares, nor prayers, haue the power to moue, Nor all that I can doe, can make thee know How true a heart, I offer to thy loue: I must try some way else to shew the same, 430 And make thy vndifcerning wilfull youth Know, though too late, (perhaps vnto thy shame) Thy yvayward error, and my constant truth: When thou maift figh, and fay in griefe of minde, Palæmon lou'd, and Siluia vvas vnkinde. With that vvringing my hand, he turnes away, And though his teares vould hardly let him looke, Yet fuch a looke did through his teares make way, He shew'd how sad a farewell there he tooke. And vp towards yonder craggy rocke he goes, His armes incrofs'd, his head downe on one fide, With fuch a mournfull pace, as shewd his woes Way'd heavier then his passions could abide: Faine vyould I have recald him backe, but shame, And modestie could not bring forth his name: And faine vvould I have followed, yet me thought It did not fit the honour of a maide

To follow one, yet still I sent from me, T'attend his going, seare, and a carefull eye.

At length when he was gotten to the top. 450 I might perceive how with infolded armes, And lookes vp bent to heauen, he stands and turnes His vvofull face vnto the other fide. Whereas that hideous fearefull downfall is: And feem'd as if he voould have throwne him off: And as I thought, was now upon the point: When my affrighted powers could hold no more, But pitty breaking all those bands of shame, That held me back, I shrikd, and ran, God knowes, With all the speede my feeble feete could make, And clammering vp at length (vvith much adoe) Breathlesse, I got, and tooke him by the hand,— And glad I had his hand, and vvas not come Too late to haue it, - and I puld him backe: But could not speake one yvord; no more did he: Sense seem'd to faile in him, and breath in me. And on before I vvent, and led him on, And downe conducted him into this plaine, And yonder loe, under that fatall tree,— Looke Cloris there, even in that very place,-470 We fate vs downe, my arme about his necke: Which Ioue thou know'ft held neuer man before: There onely did my teares conferre with his. Words we had none: it was inough to thinke For passion vvas too busie now vvithin. And had no time to come abroad in speech. And though I vvould haue spoken, yet me thought I should not, but my filence told him this. That told too much, that all I was was his.

Clo. Well Silvia, I have heard fo fad a tale, 480
As that I grieve to be a woman borne,
And that by nature we must be exposed
Vnto the mercy of vnconstant men:
But what faid then Palæmon in the ende?
Sil. Oh what he said, and what deepe vowes he made?

When ioy and griefe, had let his fenses loose; Witnesse O gentle tree vnder whose shade, We fate the while; witnesse, if euer maide Had more affurances by oathes of man. And well may you beare witnesse of this deede. 490 For in a thousand of your barkes he hath Incaru'd my name, and vnder wrote his vowes: Which will remaine fo long as you beare bowes. But Cloris, learne this lesson well of mee: Take heed of pitty; -- pitty was the cause Of my confusion: pitty hath vndone Thousands of gentle natures, in our fexe; For pitty is fworne feruant vnto loue: And this be fure, where euer it begin To make the way, it lets your maister in. 500

Clo. But what affurance haue you of his fraud? It may be you suspect him without cause.

Sil. Ah Cloris, Cloris, would I had no cause! He who beheld him wrong me in these woods, And heard him courting Nisa, and protest As deepe to her, as he had done to me, Told me of all his wicked treachery,

Clo. Pray, who was that? tell me good Siluia, tell. Sil. Why it was Colax, one I know full well

Would not report vntruths to gaine the world; 510

A man of vertue, and of worthy parts. He told me all, and more then I will shew; I would I knew not halfe of that I know.

Ah had he none but Ni/a, that base trull,
The scorne and iest of all Arcadia now
To serue his lusts, and falsisse his vow?
Ah had it yet beene any else, the touch
Of my disgrace, had neuer beene so much;
But to [be] lest for such a one as she,
The stale of all, what will solke thinke of me?

Cloris in troth, it makes me so much loath
My selse, loath these woods, and euen hate the day,
As I must hide my grieses out of the way:
I will be gone, Cloris, I leave thee here,
I cannot stay; and prethee, Cloris, yet
Pitty thy poore companion Silvias care,
And let her fortune make thee to beware.

Clo. Siluia adue, the Gods relieue thy woes, Since men thus faile, and loue no pitty showes, SCEN. II.

530

Cloris. Techne.

Oue? nay, I'me taught from louing whilft I liue, Siluia, thy counfell hath lockt vp my heart So fast from loue, as let them figh, and grieue, And pine, and waile who vvill, I for my part Will pitty none of all this race of men.

I fee vvhat showes soeuer they pretend,
Their loue is neuer deadly; none of these
That languish thus haue dide of this disease
That euer I could heare; I see all do

550

Recouer foone, that happen thereinto.

And if they did not, there were no great hurt;

They may indure, they are of stronger powers;

Better their hearts should ake, then they break ours.

Well, had I not beene thus forewarnd to day,
Out of all question, I had shortly falne,
Into the melting humour of compassion too;
That tender pitty that betrayes vs thus.
For something I began to seele, me thought,
To moue vvithin me, when as I beheld
Amyntas walke, so fadly, and so pale;
And euer where I went, still in my way,
His lookes bent all to me, his care of mee:
Which well I saw, but would not seeme to see.
But now he hath his arrent, let him goe,
Pitty shall neuer cure that heart of his
T'vndoe mine owne; the griese is best where tis.

Tec. What, Cloris, all alone, now fie for shame,
How ill doth this become so faire a face,
And that fresh youth to be without your loue?

560
Clo. Loue, Techne? I have here as many loues

As I intend to haue, whilft I haue breath.

Tec. Nay that you have not, never hault with me; For I know two at least possessors be Of your kinde favours, as themselves doe boast.

Clo. Bost of my fauours, no man rightly can;

And otherwise, let them doe what they can.

Tec. No Cloris, did not you the other night A gallant Nosegay to Amyntas giue?

Clo. I neuer gaue him Nosegay in my life.

Tec. Then trust me Cloris he doth wrong you much; For he produc'd it there in open sight,

And vaunted to Carinus, that you first Did kisse the same, then gaue it vnto him, And tolde too how farre gone you were in loue; What passion you would vse, when he was by; How you would iest with him, and wantonly Cast water in his sace; call his dogge yours, And shew him your affections by your eye. And then Carinus on the other side He vaunts, that since he had redeemed you Out of the Satyres hands, he could command Your loue and all; that you were onely his. This and much more, I heard them I protest, Giue out of you; how truly you know best.

580

590

600

Clo. Techne, their idle talke, shall not vexe me; I know the ground I stand on, and how free My heart, and I, inioy our liberty; And if Amyntas, hath interpreted My lookes according to his owne conceit. He hath mistooke the text, and he shall finde Great difference twixt his comment, & my minde. And for his Nofegay, it shall make me take More care hereafter how I fcatter flowers: Let him preferue it well, and let him make Much of his gaines, he gets no more of ours. But thus had I beene feru'd, had I reueal'd The least regard of common courtesie To fuch as these: but I doe thanke the gods I have referu'd me, from that vanitie: For euer I suspected this to be The veine of men, and this now fettles me. And for Carinus, let him vaunt what good He did for me, he can but have againe

My hearty thankes, the payment for his paine; And that he shall, and ought in womanhood. And as for loue, let him goe looke on her That fits, and grieues, and languishes for him, Poore Amarillis; who affects him deare, And fought his loue with many a wofull teare. And well deserves a better man then he: Though he be rich Lupinus fonne, and stands Much on his wealth, and his abilitie: She is witty, faire, and full of modestie. And were she of my minde, she rather would Pull out her eyes, than that she would be seene, To offer vp fo deare a facrifice To his wilde youth, that scornes her in that wife. Tec. Cloris in troth, I like thy judgement well, In not affecting of these home-bred Swaines. That know not how to manage true delight;

In not affecting of these home-bred Swaines,
That know not how to manage true delight;
Can neither hide their loue, nor shew it right.
Who would be troubled with grosse ignorance,
That vnderstands not truely how to loue?
No Cloris, if thou didst but know, how well
Thou art esteem'd, of one that knowes indeed
How to observe thy worth, and his owne wayes;
How to give true delight, how to proceed
With secrecy, and wit, in all assays,
Perhaps you might thinke one day of the man.

Clo. What, is this creature then you praise, a man? Tec. A man? yes Cloris, what should he be else?

Clo. Nought else, it is enough he be a man.

Tec. Yea and fo rare a man as euer yet Arcadia bred, that may be proud she bred A person of so admirable parts;

біо

620

A man that knowes the world, hath feene abrod. Brings those perfections that doe truly moue; A gallant spirit, an vnderstanding loue. O if you did but know how fweet it were. 640 To come vnto the bed of worthinesse, Of knowledge, of conceits, - where strange delights With strange discourses still shall entertaine Your pleased thoughts with fresh varietie.— Ah you would loath to have your youth confin'de. For euer more betweene the vnfkilfull armes Of one of these rude vnconceiuing Swaines, Who would but seeme a trunke without a minde; As one that neuer faw but these poore plaines, Knowes but to keepe his sheepe, and set his fold, 650 Pipe on an Oaten Reede fome Rundelayes, And daunce a Morrice on the holy dayes. And fo should you be alwayes sweetly sped With ignorance, and two fooles in a bed. But with this other gallant spirit you should Be fure to overpasse that tediousnesse, And that faciety which cloyes this life, With fuch a variable cheerefulnesse. As you will bleffe the time thaue beene his wife. 659 Clo. What, hath this man you thus commend, a name? Tec. A name? why yes, no man but hath a name: His name is Colax; and is one I fweare Doth honour even the ground whereon you tread, And oft, and many times God knowes, Hath he with tender passion, talkt of you; And faid, Well, there is one vvithin these vvoods (Meaning by you) that yet of all the Nymphes

Mine eyes haue euer feene vpon the earth,

In all perfections doth exceede them all.

For all the beauties in that glorious Court 670
Of Telos, vwhere I liu'd, nor all the Starres
Of Greece beside, could sparkle in my heart
The fire of any heate, but onely shee.
Then vvould he stay, and sigh; and then againe:
Ah vvhat great pitty such a creature should,
Be tide vnto a clogge of ignorance;
Whose body doth deserve to be imbrac'd,
By the most mighty Monarch vpon earth.
Ah that she knew her vvorth, and how vnsit
That private woods should hide that sace, that wit.

Thus hath he often faid, and this I fay,
Observe him vvhen you vvill, you shall not see
From his hye fore-head to his slender foote,
A man in all parts, better made then he.

Clo. Techne, me thinkes, the praises that you give Shewes your owne loue; and if he be that man You say, 'twere good you kept him for your selfe.

Tec. I must not loue impossibilities; Cloris, he vvere a most sit man for you.

Clo. For me? alas Techne you moue too late. 690 Tec. Why haue you past your promise t'any yet?

Clo. Yes fure, my promife is already past.

Tec. And if it be, I trust you are so wise T'vnpasse the same agains for your owne good.

Clo. No, that I may not when it is once past.

Tec. No Cloris, I prefume that wit of yours
That is fo pierfiue, can conceiue how that
Our promife must not preiudice our good:
And that it is no reason that the tongue,
Tie the whole body to eternall wrong.

700

Clo. The Tongue is but the Agent of the heart, And onely as commissioner allowd
By reason, and the will, for the whole state,
Which warrants all it shall negotiate.

Tec. But prithee tell me to what rusticke Swaine You pass'd your word to cast away your selfe?

Clo. No, I have past my word to save my selfe From the deceiptfull, impious periuries
Of treacherous men, and vow'd vnto my heart
Vntill I see more faith then yet I see,
None of them all shall triumph over me.

Tec. Nay then, and be no otherwife, tis well; We shall have other time to talke of this. But Cloris I have fitted you in faith, I have here brought, the most conceipted tyre, The rarest dressing ever Nymph put on; Worth ten of that you weare; that, now me thinkes Doth not become you; and besides, tis stale.

Clo. Stale why? I have not worne it fcarce a moneth.

Tec. A moneth? why you must change them twise a day: 720

Hold hither Cloris, this was not well laid;
Here is a fault, you have not mixt it well
To make it take, or else it is your haste
To come abroad so soone into the Ayre.
But I must teach you to amend these faults,
And ere I shall have done with you, I thinke,
I shall make some of these inamored youthes
To hang themselves, or else runne madde for love,
But goe, let's trie this dressing I have brought.

SCEN. III.

730

Palæmon. Mirtillus.

Irtillus, did Dorinda euer vow, Or make thee any promife to be thine? Mir. Palæmon no, she neuer made me vow, But I did euer hope she would be mine; For that I had deliuered vp my youth, My heart, my all, a tribute to her eyes, And had fecur'd her of my constant truth, Vnder fo many faithfull specialties, As that although she did not graunt againe, 740 With any flew the acquittance of my loue, Yet did shee euer seeme to entertaine My affections, and my feruices t'approoue; Till now of late I know not by what meane, (Ill fare that meane) she grew to that dispight, As she not onely clowds her fauours cleane, But also scorn'd to have me in her sight: That now I am not for her loue thus mou'd. But onely that she will not be belou'd. 750

Pal. If this be all th'occasion of thy griefe,
Mirtillus, thou art then in better case
Then I supposed, and therefore cheere thy heart;
And good cause too, being in the state thou art,
For if thou didst but heare the History
Of my distresse, and what part I haue shar'd
Of sad affliction, thou wilt then soone see
There is no misery vnlesse compar'd.
For all Arcadia, all these hills, and plaines,
These holts, and woods and every Christall spring,
Can testifie my teares, and tell my slames,

III.

16

And with how cleane a heart, how cleere a faith Palæmon loued Siluia, and how long.

And when confum'd with griefe, and dri'd with care,
Euen at the point to facrifice my life
Vnto her cruelty, then lo she yeelds,
And was content for euer to be mine:
And gaue m'assurance vnderneath her hand,
Sign'd with a faithfull vow, as I conceiu'd,
And witnessed with many a louely kisse,
That I thought sure I had attain'd my blisse.
770
And yet (aie me) I got not what I got,
Siluia I haue, and yet I haue her not.

Mir. How may that be, Palæmon pray thee tell?

Pal. O know Mirtillus that I rather could

Runne to fome hollow caue, and burst and die

In darknes, and in horror, then vnfold

Her shamefull staine, and mine owne infamy.

But yet it will abroad, her impudence

Will be the trumpet of her owne disgrace,

And fill the wide and open mouth of same

780

So full, as all the world shall know the same.

Mir. Why, what is Siluia false, or is she gone? Pal. Siluia is false and I am quite vndone.

Mir. Ah out alas, who euer would have thought That modest looke, so innocent a face, So chast a blush, that shame-fast countenance, Could euer have told how to wantonise? Ah what shall we poore louers hope for now Who must to win, consume, and having wonne With hard and much adoe, must be vndone?

790

Pal. Ah but Mirtillus if thou didst know who Is now the man, her choice hath lighted on,

How would'ft thou wonder? for that passes all; That I abhore to tell, yet tell I shall; For all that would will fhortly know't too well: It is base Thirsis, that wild hare-braine youth Whom euery milk-maid in Arcadia skornes: Thyrsis is now the man with vvhome she walkes Alone, in thickets, and in groues remote. Thursis is all in all, and none but he: With him she dallies vnder euery tree. Trust women? ah Mirtillus, rather trust The Summer windes, th'Oceans constancy; For all their fubstance is but leuity. Light are their waying vailes, light their attires. Light are their heads, and lighter their defires: Let them lay on vyhat couerture they will Vpon themselues, of modesty and shame, They cannot hide the woman with the same. Trust women? ah Mirtillus rather trust The false deuouring Crocodiles of Nile; For all they worke is but deceipt and guile: What have they but is fain'd? their haire is fain'd, Their beauty fain'd, their stature fain'd, their pace, Their iesture, motion, and their grace is fain'd: And if that all be fain'd without, vvhat then Shall we suppose can be sincere within? For if they doe but vveepe, or fing, or smile, Smiles, teares, and tunes, are ingins to beguile; And all they are, and all they have of grace, Confifts but in the outlide of a face. O loue and beauty, how are you ordain'd Like vnto fire, vvhose flames farre off delight, But if you be imbrac'd confume vs quite?

Why cannot vve make at a lower rate A purchase of you, but that we must give The treasure of our hearts, and yet not have What we have bought fo dearely for all that? O Siluia if thou needs wouldst have beene gone, Thou should'st have taken all away of thee: And nothing left to have remain'd with me. Thou should'ft have carried hence the portraiture VVhich thou hast left behind within my heart. Set in the table-frame of memory, That puts me still in minde of what thou wert, VVhilst thou wert honest, and thy thoughts were pure; So that I might not thus in euery place, VVhere I shall set my carefull foote, conferre VVith it of thee, and euermore be told, That here fate Silvia vnderneath this tree; 840 And here she walkt, and lean'd vpon mine arme; There gathered flowers, and brought them vnto me; Here by the murmurs of this rulling spring, She fweetly lay, and in my bosome flept; Here first she shewd me comforts when I pinde; As if in euery place her foote had stept, It had left Siluia in a print behind. But yet, O these were Siluias images, Then whilst her heart held faire, and she was chaste: Now is her face all fullied with her fact: And why are not those former prints defac'd? VVhy should she hold, still in the forme she was, Being now deform'd, and not the same she was? O that I could Mirtillus locke her out Of my remembrance, that I might no more Haue Siluia here, when she will not be here.

Mir. But good Palæmon, tell vvhat proofes hast thou Of her disloyalty, that makes thee show These heavy passions, and to grieve so much?

Pal. Mirtillus, proofes that are alas too plaine; 860
For Colax, one thou knowst can well observe
And iudge of loue; a man both staid, and wise,
A gentle heardsman, out of loue, and care
He had of me, came and reported all;
And how he saw them divers times alone,
Imbracing each the other in the woods.
Besides she hath of late with sullaine lookes,
That shew'd disliking, shunn'd my company,
Kept her a loose; and novy I thinke to day,
Is gone to hide her quite out of the vvay.

870

But Siluia though thou go and hide thy face, Thou canst not hide thy shame, and thy disgrace;

No fecret thicket, groue, nor yet close grot,
Can couer shame, and that immodest blot.
Ah didst thou lend thy hand in kind remorse
To saue me from one death, to give m'a worse?
Had it not yet beene better I had died,
By thy vnspotted honest cruelty,

Then now by thy difgraced infamy?

That fo I might have carried to my grave The image of chafte Silvia in my heart, And not have had these notions, to ingrave A stained Silvia there, as now thou art?

Ah yes, it had beene better farre, I prooue, T'haue perisht for thy loue, then vvitli thy loue.

Mir. Ah good Palæmon, cease these sad com plaints,

And moderate thy passions; thou shalt see 880

She may returne, and these reports be found But idle sictions on vncertaine ground.

Pal. Mirtillus I perceiue my tedious tale,
Begins to be distastefull to thine eare;
And therefore will I to some desert vale,
To some close groue to waile, where none shall heare
But beasts, and trees, whose sense I shall not tyre
VVith length of mone; for length is my desire.
And therefore, gentle Sheepheard, now adieu,
And trust not women, for they are vntrue.

Mir. Adue Palæmon, and thy fad distresse, Shall make me weigh Dorindas losse the lesse: For if I should be hers, and she prooue so, Better to be mine owne and let her go.

900

SCEN. IV.

Ergastus.

Melibæus.

Ow Melibæus; who would have fuppos'd
That had not feene these impious passages,
That ever monstrous wretch could have expos'd
T[w]o honest hearts to these extremities,
T'attaine his wicked ends? by having wrought
First in, vnto their easie confidence
A way, by an opinion to be thought,
Honest, discreet, of great experience.

Whereby we fee open-fac't villanie
Without a maske, no mischiese could have done;
It was the coverture of honesty,
That laid the snare, whereby they were vndone,
And that's the ingine that consounds vs all;
That makes the breach whereby the world is sackt,

And made a prey to cunning, when we fall
Into the hands of wife dishonesty:
Whenas our weake credulity is rackt

920
By that opinion of fufficiency,
To all the inconveniences that guile,
And impious craft can practise to beguile.

And note but how these cankers alwayes seaze

And note but how these cankers alwayes seaze The choysest fruits with their insections; How they are still ordained to disease, The natures of the best complections.

Mel. Tis true. And what an instrument hath he To be the Agent of his villany? [there got, How truely she negotiats, and doth plot, 930 To vndermine fraile imbecillity.

How strong, these spirits combine them in a knot, To circumvent plaine open honesty?

And what a creature there is to converse With feeble maydes; whose vveaknes soone is led VVith toyes, and new difguifes, to reuerfe The course wherein by custome they vvere bred? And then what fitnesse too her trade affoords. To trafficke with the fecrets of their heart, And cheapen their affections with faire words. 940 VVhich vvomen straight to women vvill impart? And then to fee how foone example vvill Disperse it selfe, being met with our desire? How foone, it will inkindle others ill, Like Neptha that takes fire by fight of fire? So that vnleffe we runne vvith all the speed VVe can, to quench this new arifing flame Of vanity, and luft, it will proceed T'vndoe vs, ere vve shall perceiue the same :

How farre already is the mischiese runne, Before vve scarse perceiu'd it was begunne?

950

ACT III. SCEN. I.

Alcon. Lincus.

Hat my friend Lincus? now in troth well met.

Lin. VVell met good Alcon, this fals happily
That we two thus incounter all alone,
VVho had not any conference fcarfe this moneth.

Al. In troth I long'd to heare how you proceed In your new practife here among these swaines; For you and I must grace each others arte: Though you knew me, vohen I in Patras dwelt, And waited on a poore Phisitions man, And I knew you a Pronotories boy, That wrote Indentures at the towne-house-doore; Yet are you here now a great man of law, And I a graue Phisition full of skill; And here we two are held the only men: But how thriue you in your new practise now?

Lin. Alcon, in troth, not any thing to speake;
For these poore people of Arcadia here
Are soone contented each man with his owne,
As they desire no more, nor will be drawne
To any contestation; nor indeed
Is there yet any frame compor'd, whereby
Contention may proceed in practicke forme?
For if they had this frame once, to contend,
Then would they brawle and wrangle without end.
For then might they be taught, and councell'd how

960

970

To litigate perpetually, you know; 980 And so might I be fure to doe some good; But having here no matter whereupon To furnish reall actions, as else where; No tenures, but a customary hold Of what they have from their progenitors Common, without individuitie; No purchasings, no contracts, no comerse, No politique commands, no feruices, No generall affemblies but to feaft, And to delight themselves with fresh pastimes: How can I hope that euer I shall thriue? 990 Alc. Ift possible that a societie Can with fo little noyfe, and fweat fubfift? Lin. It feemes it may, before men haue transform'd Their state of nature in so many shapes Of their owne managements, and are cast out Into confusion, by their knowledges. And either I must packe me hence, or else Must labour wholly to dissolue the frame And composition, of their strange built state; Which now I feeke to doe, by drawing them 1000 To appr'hend of these proprieties Of mine and thine, and teach them to incroch And get them states apart, and private shares. And this I have already fet a worke If it vvill take; for I have met with two

The aptest spirits the countrey yeelds, I know,

Montanus and Acryfius; vvho are both Old, and both cholericke, and both peruerfe,

And if their quarrell hold, as tis begun

And both inclinable to Auarice;

TOTO

I doe not doubt but all the rest vvill on; And if the vvorst should fall, if I could gaine The reputation but to arbitrate,

And sway their strifes, I voould get vvell by that.

Alc. Tis maruell that their long and easie peace That fosters plenty, and gives nought to doe, Should not with them beget contention too, As well as other where we see it doth.

Lin. This peace of theirs is not like others peace; Where craft laies traps t'inrich himselse with wiles, And men make prey of men, and rise by spoiles. 1021 This rather seemes a quiet then a peace: For this poore corner of Arcadia here, This little angle of the vvorld you see, Which hath shut out of doore, all t'earth beside, And is bard vp with mountaines, and with rocks; Haue had no intertrading with the rest Of men, nor yet will haue, but here alone, Quite out of fortunes way, and vnderneath Ambition, or desire, that weighes them not, 1030 They live as if still in the golden age, When as the world was in his pupillage.

But for mine owne part, Alcon, I proteft
I enuy them that they thus make themselues,
An everlasting holy day of rest,
Whiles others worke; and I doe thinke it sit
Being in the world, they should be of the world,
And if that other states should doe so too
As God forbid, what should we Lawyers doe?
But I hope shortly yet; we shall have here
I 040
As many of vs as are other where:
And we shall sweat, and chase, and talke as loud,

Brawle our felues hoarse, as well as they doe At Patras, Sparta, Corinth, or at Thebes; And be as arrogant and euen as proud; And then twill be a world, and not before: But how dost thou with thy profession frame?

Alc. No man can wish a better place then this To practife in my arte; for here they will Be ficke for company, they are fo kinde, I haue now twenty Pacients at this time, That know not vvhat they ayle; no more doe I: And they have Physicke all accordingly. First Phillis got running at Barley-breake A little cold, which I with certaine drugs Administred, vvas thought to remedie: Doris faw that how Phillis Physicke wrought (For Phillis had told her, she neuer tooke So delicate a thing in all her life That more reuiu'd her heart, and clear'd her blood:) Doris would needs be ficke too, and take fome. 1061 Melina feeing that, she would the like, And fo she had the very same receit; For to fay troth, I have no more but that, And one poore pill I vse for greater cures. But this is onely fweet and delicate, Fit for young women, and is like th'hearbe Iohn, Doth neither good nor hurt; but that's all one: For if they but conceive it doth, it doth; And it is that Physitians hold the chiefe 1070 In all their cures, conceit, and strong beliefe: Besides I am a stranger come from farr Which doth adde much vnto opinion too.

For who now but th' Arabian or the Iew

In forraine lands, are held the onely men, Although their knowledge be no more then mine.

Lin. Tis true friend Alcon, he that hath once got Th'Elixir of opinion, hath got all, And h'is th'man that turnes his braffe to gold.

Alc. Then can I talke of Gallen, Auerrois, 1080
Hypocrates, Rasis, and Auicen,
And bookes I neuer read, and vse strange speach
Of Symptons, Crysis, and the Critique dayes;
Eclegmats, Embrochs, Lixiues, Cataplasmes;
Of Trochises, Opiats, Apophilegmatismes;
With all the hideous tearmes Arte can deuise
T'amuse weake, and admiring ignorance.

Lin. And that is right my tricke; I ouerwhelme
My practife too, with darknes, and strange words;
With Paragraphs, Conditions, Codicilles,
Acceptilations, actions recissorie,
Noxall, and Hypothecall, and involve
Domesticke matter in a forraine phrase.

Alc. Then am I as abstruse and mysticall,
In Carecteer, and giving my receit,
Observing th'odde number in my pills,
And certaine houres to gather and compound
My simples, and make all t'attend the Moone.
Then doe I shew the rare ingredients
I vse for some great cures, when need requires; I 100
The liver of a Wolfe, the Lyons gall,
The left side of a Moles, the Foxes heart,
The right soote of a Tortuse, Dragons blood;
And such strange sauage stuffe, as even the names
Are physicke of themselves, to move a man.
And all the drugs I vse, must come from farre,

Beyond the Ocean, and the Sunne at leaft, Or elfe it hath no vertue Phyficall; These home-bred simples doe no good at all.

Lin. No, no, it must be forraine stuffe, God wot, 1110

Or fomething else that is not to be got.

Al. But now in faith I have found out a tricke. That will perpetually fo feede their rheumes, And entertaine their idle weaknesses. As nothing in the vvorld could doe the like: For lately being at Corinth, 'twas my chance T'incounter with a Sea-man, new-arriu'd Of Alexandria, vvho from India came, And brought a certaine hearbe wrapt vp in rowles, From th'Island of Nicofia, where it growes: Inful'd I thinke in some pestiferous iuice. (Produc'd in that contagious burning clime, Contrarious to our nature, and our spirits) Or elfe steep'd in the fuming sap, it selfe Doth yeeld, t'inforce th'infecting power thereof; And this in powder made, and fir'd, he fuckes Out of a little hollow inftrument Of calcinated clay, the smoake thereof: Which either he convayes out of his nofe, Or downe into his stomacke vvith a vvhiffe. 1130 And this he faid a wondrous vertue had, To purge the head, and cure the great Catarre, And to dry vp all other meaner rhumes; Which when I faw, I straight vvay thought how vvell This new fantasticall deuise would please The foolish people here growne humorous. And vp I tooke all this commoditie, And here have taught them how to vie the same.

Lin. And it is easie to bring in the vse
Of any thing, though neuer so absurd,
When nations are prepar'd to all abuse,
And th'humour of corruption once is stird.

Alc. Tis true, and now to fee with what a strange And gluttonous defire, th'exhaust the same; How infinite, and how insatiably, They doe deuour th'intoxicating sume, You vould admire; as if their spirits thereby Were taken, and inchanted, or transformd, By some insufed philter in the drug.

For vyhereas heretofore they vyonted vyere. 1150 At all their meetings, and their festivalls, To passe the time in telling vvitty tales, In questions, riddles, and in purposes, Now doe they nothing elfe, but fit and fucke, And spit, and slauer, all the time they sit; That I goe by, and laugh vnto my felfe, And thinke that this wil one day make fome worke For me or others; but I feare it vvill B'another age will finde the hurt of this. But fure the time's to come when they looke backe On this, will wonder with themselves to thinke 1160 That men of fense could euer be so mad, To fucke fo groffe a vapour, that confumes Their spirits, spends nature, dries vp memorie, Corrupts the blood, and is a vanitie.

Lin. But Alcon peace, here comes a patient, peace.
Al. Lincus, there doth indeed, therefore away;
Leaue me alone, for I must now resume
My surly, graue, and Doctorall aspect.
This wench I know; tis Daphne, who hath wrong'd

Her loue Menalcas, and plaid fast and loose With Colax, who reueald the whole to me.

1170

SCEN. II.

Daphne. Alcon.

Ood Doctor Alcon, I am come to craue
Your counfell, to adulfe me for my health;
For I suppose, in troath, I am not well;
Me thinkes I should be sicke, yet cannot tell:
Some thing there is amisse that troubles me,
For which I would take Phisicke willingly.

Alc. Welcome, faire Nymph, come let me try your I cannot blame you t'hold your felfe not well. [pulse; Something amisse quoth you, here's all amisse; Th'whole Fabricke of your felse distempred is; The Systole, and Dyastole of your pulse, Doe shew your passions most hystericall. It seemes you have not very carefull beene, T'observe the prophilactick regiment Of your owne body, so that we must now Descend vnto the Therapheuticall;

That fo we may preuent the fyndrome Of Symtomes, and may afterwards apply Some analepticall Elexipharmacum, That may be proper for your maladie:

It feemes faire nimph you dream much in the night.

Dap. Doctor, I doe indeed.

Alc. I know you doe; Y'are troubled much with thought.

Dan I am indeed

Dap. I am indeed.

Alc. I know you are 1200

You have great heavinesse about your heart,

Dap. Now truly fo I haue.

Alc. I know you haue.

You wake oft in the night.

Dap. In troath I doe.

Alc. All this I know you doe; And this vnlesse by physicke you preuent,

Thinke whereto it may bring you in the end; And therefore you must first euacuate

And therefore you must first euacuate
All those Colaxicall hote humours which

Difturbe your heart, and then refrigerate Your blood by fome Menalchian Cordials,

Which you must take, & you shal straight find ease:

And in the morning I will visit you.

Dap. I pray Sir, let me take of that you gaue, To Phillis th'other day; for that she faid, Did comfort wonderfully, and cheere her heart.

Alc. Faire nimph, you must, if you wil vse my art,
Let me alone, to giue vvhat I thinke good;
I knew what sitted Phillis maladie,
And so, I thinke, I know what will sit you.

Exit.

Daphne sola.

O what a wondrous skil[sfu] man is this?

Why he knowes all? O God, who euer thought
Any man liuing, could haue told so right
A womans griese in all points as he hath?

Why, this is strange that by my very pulse
He should know all I ayle, as well as I.

Beside I seare he sees too much in mee,
More then I would that any man should see.

Me thought (although I could not well conceive
His words, he spake so learned and so strange)

He faid I had mifruld my body much; As if he meant that in some wanton fort, 1230 I had abuf'd my body with fome man: O how should he know that? what is my pulse Become the intelligencer of my shame? Or are my lookes the index of my heart? Sure fo he faid, and me thought too, he nam'd Menalcas, or elfe fomething very like; And likewise nam'd that cunning treacherous wretch That hath vndone me, Colax, that vile Diuell; Who is indeed the cause of all my griefe, For which I now feeke Phyficke; but O what 1240 Can Phylicke doe to cure that hideous wound My lusts have given my Conscience? which I see Is that which onely is difeaf'd within, And not my body now; that's it doth for Disquiet all the lodging of my spirits, As keepes me waking; that is it prefents Those onely formes of terror that affright My broken fleepes; that, layes vpon my heart This heavy loade that weighes it downe with griefe; And no disease beside: for which there is 1250 No cure I fee at all, nor no redreffe.

Didft thou alleadge vile man to my weake youth,
How that those vowes I made vnto my loue
Were bands of custome, and could not lay on Those manicles on nature, vvhich should keepe
Her freedome prisoner by our dome of breath?
O impious wretch now nature gives the lye
To thy soule heart and tels my grieved soule,
I have done vvrong, to falsisse that vow
I first to my deare love Menalcas made.

17

III.

And fayes th'affurance and the faith is giuen By band on earth, the fame is feal'd in Heauen.

And therefore now Menalcas can these eyes That now abhorre to looke vpon my selfe, Dare euer view that vvronged face of thine, Who hast relide on this salse heart of mine?

SCEN. III.

Colax. Techne.

1270

If possible sweet Techne, what you say,
That Cloris is so witty, and so coy?
Tec. Tis as I tell you Colax, sh'is as coy
And hath as shrewd a spirit, as quicke conceipt,
As ever wench I brok'd in all my life.

Col. Then there's fome glory in attaining her; Here now I shall be sure t'haue something yet Besides dull beauty, I shall lie vvith wit; For these faire creatures, haue such seeble spirits, And are so languishing, as give no edge To appetite, and love, but stuffes delight.

Tec. Well if you get her, then you shall be sure 1280 To have your vvish; and yet perhaps that store You find in her, may checke your longing more Then all their wants, whom you have tride before.

Col. How? if I get her; what doe you suppose, I shall not get her? that were very strange.

Tec. Yes fir, the may be got, but yet I know Sh'will put you to the triall of your wit.

Col. Let me alone, could I find feafon fit To talke with her in private, she vvere mine.

Tec. That feafon may you now haue very well; 1290 For Colax, she hath promif'd faithfully

This evening late to meete me at the cave
Of Erycina, vnderneath the hill;
Where I must fit her vvith a new attyre
Where vvith sh's farre in love; and th'other day
Thinking to try it at her fathers house,
(Whether I went vvith her to deale for you)
The old Acrysius was himselfe at home,
VVhich did enforce vs to deferre our worke
Vntill this evening, that we might alone
There out of sight, more closely do the same:
Where while she stayes (for I will make her stay
For me a while) you at your pleasure may
Have th'opportunity vvhich you desire.

Cal O Techno thou hast bless me: if I now

Col. O Techne, thou hast blest me; if I now On this advantage conquer not her mind,
Let me be loathed of all vvoman-kind.
And presently will I go sute my selfe
As brauely as I can, go set my lookes,
Arme my discourse, frame speaches passionate,
And action both, fit for so great a worke:
Techne a thousand thankes, and so adieu.

Ex.

Tec. Well Colax, she may yet deceiue thy hopes,
And I perswade my selfe she is as like
As any subtile vvench was euer borne,
To giue as wise a man as you the skorne:
But see, where one whose faith hath better right
Vnto her loue then you, comes here forlorne
Like fortunes out-cast, full of heauines.

Ah poore Amyntas, vould thou knewst how much Thou art esteem'd, although not vohere thou wouldst, Yet vohere thou should have love in that degree, As never living man had like to thee.

Ah fee how I, who fets for others loue,
Am tooke my felfe, and intricated here
With one, that hath his heart another where?
But I vvill labour to diuert the streame
Of his affections, and to turne his thoughts
From that coy Cloris, to the liberty
Of his owne heart, vvith hope to make him mine. 1330

SCEN. IIII.

Techne. Amyntas.

Tow fie Amyntas, why should you thus grieue

For a most foolish vvay-ward girle, that scornes

Your honest loue, and laughes at all you doe : For shame Amuntas let her go as sh'is. You fee her vaine, and how peruerfly fet: Tis fond to follow vvhat we cannot get. Am. O Techne, Techne, though I neuer get, Yet will I euer follow vvhilst I breath, And if I perish by the vvay, yet shall My death be pleafing that for her I die. And one day she may hap to come that way. (And be it, O her way) where I shall lye; And with her proud disdainefull soote she may Tread on my tombe, and fay, loe where he lies. The tryumph, and the conquest of mine eyes. And though I loofe my felfe, and loofe my teares, It shall be glory yet that I was hers. VVhat haue I done of late, should make her thus 1350 My presence with that strange disdaine to flye, As if she did abhorre my company? Cloris God knowes, thou hast no cause therefore, Vnlesse it be for louing more, and more.

Why, thou wert vvont to lend me yet an eare, [heare. And though thou wouldst not helpe, yet wouldst thou

Tec. Perhaps she thinkes thy heat will be allayd, The fire being gone, and therefore doth she well Not to be seene there where she vill not aide.

Am. Alas she knowes no hand but hers can quench That heat in me, and therefore doth she vvrong 1361 To fire my heart, and then to runne away; And if she would not aide, yet might she ease My carefull soule, if she vvould but stand by And only looke vpon me while I die.

Tec. Well well Amyntas, little doest thou know With vvhom that cunning vvanton forts her selfe. Whil'st thus thou mourn'st, and vvith what secret wiles She vvorkes, to meet her louer in the vvoods; With whom in groues, and caues she dallying sits, 1370 And mockes thy passions and thy dolefull fits.

Am. No Techne, no, I know that cannot be, And therefore do not vvrong her modesty; For Cloris loues no man, and that's some ease Vnto my griese, and gives a hope that yet If ever soft affection touch her heart, She will looke backe, and thinke on my desert.

Tec. If that be all, that hope is at an end; For if thou wilt this evening but attend And walke downe vnder Erycinas grove, And place thy felfe in some close secret bush, Right opposite vnto the hollow cave That lookes into the vally, thou shalt see That honesty, and that great modesty.

Am. If I fee Cloris there, I know I shall See nothing else vvith her, but modesty.

1380

Tec. Yes fomething els will grieue your heart to fee:
But you must be content, and thinke your selse
Are not the first that thus haue bin deceiu'd,
With faire appearing out-sides, and mistooke
A wanton heart, by a chast seeming looke.
But I coniure you by the loue you beare
Vnto those eyes which make you (as you are Th'example of compassion to the world)
Sit close and be not seene in any case.

Am. Well Techne, if I shall see Cloris there It is enough, then thither will I goe Who will go any where to looke on her. And Cloris know, I do not go to see, Any thing else of thee, but only thee.

Tec. Well go and thinke yet of her honest care, VVho gives the note of such a shamefull deed; And sudge Amyntas, when thou shalt be free, VVho more deserves thy love, or I or she.

SCEN. V.

1400

Melibæus. Ergastus.

Ow what infernall proiects are here laid,
T'afflict an honest heart, t'expose a maide,
Vnto the danger of a lone affault,
To make her to offend, without her fault.

1410

Er. And fee what other new appearing spirits Would raise the tempests of disturbances Vpon our rest, and labour to bring in All the whole Ocean of vnquietnesse, To ouerwhelme the poore peace we liue in? How one would saine instruct, and teach vs how To cut our throates with forme, and to contend

VVith artificiall knowledge, to vndoo Each other, and to brabble without end. As if that nature had not tooke more care 1420 For vs. then we for our owne felues can take; And makes vs better lawes then those we make. And as if all that science ought could give Vnto our bliffe, but only shewes vs how The better to contend, but not to liue. And euermore we fee how vice doth grow With knowledge, and brings forth a more increase, When skilfull men begin, how good men cease. And therefore how much better do vve liue, With quiet ignorance, then vve should do 1430 With turbulent and euer vvorking skill, Which makes vs not to liue, but labour still. Mel. And fee that other vaine fantasticke spirit,

Mel. And fee that other vaine fantasticke spirit, Who vvould corrupt our bodies too likewise, As this our mindes, and make our health to be, As troublesome as sicknesse, to deuise, That no part of vs euer should be free; Both forraging on our credulity, Take still th'aduantage of our weakenesses; Both cloath their friuolous vncertainties

In strange attires, to make it seeme the lesse.

1440

ACTVS. IV. SCENA. I.

Techne. Amyntas.

And here it will be best for me to stay;
And here, indeed he comes, poore man I see
All quite dismay'd: and now ile worke on him.

Come, vvho tels troth Amyntas, vvho deceiues Your expectation now, Cloris, or I?

Am. Peace Techne peace, and do not interrupt 1450 The griefe that hath no leafure to attend Ought but it felfe, and hath shut vp vvith it All other sense in private close within, From doing any thing, but onely thinke.

Tec. Thinke? whereon should you think? y'haue thought enough

And too too much, on fuch a one as she,
Whom now you see y'haue tride her honesty:
And let her goe proud girle accordingly;
There's none of these young vvanton things that know
How t'vse a man, or how to make their choyse,
Or answere mens affections as they ought;
And if y'will thinke, thinke sh'is not worth a thought.

Am. Good Techne, leaue me; for thy speech and sight Beare both that disproportion to my griese, As that they trouble trouble, and confound Consussion in my sorrowes, which doth loath That sound of words, that answeres not the tone Of my disprayers in th'accents of like mone. And now hath sorrow no vvorse plague I see Then free and unpartaking company; 1470 Who are not in the sashion of our unvoes, And whose affection do not looke likewise Of that complection as our miseries:

And therefore pray thee leaue me, or else leaue To speake, or if thou speake let it not be To me, or else let me, not answere thee.

Tec. Well I fay nothing, you know vvhat y'haue feene.

Am. Tis true, I do confesse that I have seene The vvorst the world can shew me, and the worst 1480 That can be ever feene with mortall eve. I have beheld the whole of all wherein My heart had any interest in this life: To be difrent and torne from of my hopes, That nothing now is leaft, why I should live: That oftage I had given the world, which was The hope of her, that held me to hold truce With it, and with this life is gone; and now Well may I breake with them, and breake I will And rend that pact of nature, and dissolue That league of blood that ties me to my felfe. 1490 For Cloris, now hath thy immodesty Infranchiz'd me, and made me free to dye: VVhich otherwise I could not lest it might Haue beene some staine and some disgrace to thee.

Ah was it not enough for this poore heart
T'indure the burden of her proud difdaine,
That weigh'd it to the earth, but it must
Be crusht thus with th'oppression of her staine?
The first vound yet though it were huge and wide,
Yet was it cleanely made, it festred not;
I 500
But this now giuen, comes by a poysoned shot,
Against all lawes of honor that are pure,
And rankles deadly, is vvithout all cure.

Ah how she blusht vvhen as she issued forth VVith her inamor'd mate out of the caue! And well then might she blush at such a deed, And with how vvild a looke she casts about Her fearefull eyes! as if her loathsome sinne Now comming thus into the open sight,

VVith terror did her guiltinesse affright; 1510
And vp she treades the hill vvith such a pace,
As if she gladly would have out gone shame,
Which yet for all her hasting, after came.

And at their comming forth, me thought I heard
The villaine vse my name, and she returne
The same againe in very earnest fort;
Which could be for no good I know to me,
But onely that perhaps it pleas'd her then
To cast me vp by this way of her mouth
From off her heart, lest it might stuffe the same. 1520

But Cloris know thou shalt not need to feare. I neuer more shall interrupt thy ioves With my complaints, nor more observe thy waies; And O I would thy heart could be as free From finne and shame, as thou shalt be from me. I could (and I have reason so to do) Reuenge my wrong vpon that wicked wretch, Who hath furpriz'd my loue, and robb'd thy shame; And make his blood th'oblation of my wrath Euen at thy feete, that thou might'ft fee the fame 1530 To expiate, for this vniustice done. But that the fact examin'd would display Thy infamy abroad vnto the world, Which I had rather die then once bewray. And Techne pray-thee, tell her thus from me,-But yet, ah tell it foftly in her eare, And be thou fure no living creature heare.— That her immodesty hath lost this day: Two the most honest guardians of her good She had in life, her honour, and my blood. Tec. Now I may speake, I trust, you speake to me.

Am. No not yet Techne, pray-thee stay a while,—And tell her too, though she spares not her shame, My death shall shew, that I respect her same.

Tec. Then now I may.

Am. O Techne no not yet.-

And bid her not forget Amyntas faith,
Though she despised him; and one day yet
She may be toucht with griese, and that ere long,
To thinke on her dishonour, and his wrong:

1550
Now Techne I haue done, and so farewell.

Tec. But stay Amyntas, now must I begin.

Am. I cannot stay Techne, let goe your hold; It is in vaine I fay, I must be gone.

Tec. Now deare Amyntas, heare me but one word.—Ah he is gone, and in that fury gone,
As fure he vvill in this extremity
Of his dispaire, do violence to himselse:
And therefore now vvhat helpe shall I deuise
To stay his ruine? fure there is no meanes
I560
But to call Cloris, and perswade with her
To sollow him, and to preuent his death;
For though this practise vvas for mine owne good,
Yet my deceipts vse not to stretch to blood.
But now I know not vvhere I should finde out
That cruell mayde; but I must cast about.

SCEN. II.

Amarillis. Dorinda.

Orinda, you are yet in happy case,
You are belou'd, you need not to complaine; 1570
'Tis I haue reason onely to bewaile

My fortunes, who am cast vpon disdaine, And on his rockey heart that wrackes my youth With stormes of sorrowes and contemnes my truth; 'Tis I that am shut out from all delight This vvorld can yeeld a mayd, that am remou'd From th'onely ioy on earth, to be belou'd: Cruell Carinus skornes this faith of mine, And lets poore Amarillis grieue and pine.

Do. Tis true indeed you fay, I am belou'd, I580 Sweete Amarillis, and perhaps much more Then I vould be: plenty doth make me poore; For now my heart, as if deuided stands Betwixt two passions, loue and pitty both, That draw it either way vith that maine force, As that I know not vihich to yeeld vino: And then feare in the midd'st, holds m'in suspence, Lest I lose both by mine improvidence.

Ama. How may that be Dorinda? you know this, You can enioy but one, and one there is 1590 Ought to possesse your heart, and loue a lone: Who hunts two Hares at one time, catches none.

Do. I must tell you deare friend the whole discourse From vyhom I cannot any thing conceale; Arcadia knowes, and every Shepheard knowes How much Mirtillus hath deserved of me, And how long time his woefull sute hath laine, Depending on the mercie of mine eyes; For whom I doe confesse, pitty hath beene Th'Atturny evermore that stands and pleades 1600 Before my heart the instice of his cause, And saies he ought have love, by loves owne lawes. But now the maister souragene Lord of hearts,

That great commander, and that tyrant Loue, Who must have all according to his will,-Whom pitty onely vihers, goes before, As lightning doth the thunder,—he fayes no, And will that Colar onely have my heart; That gallant heardsman full of skill and arte, And all experience of Loues mysteries; 1610 To whom I must confesse me to have given The earnest of my loue; but since that time I neuer faw the man; which makes me much To wonder that his dealing should be such: For either Loue, hath (in respect that I Despised haue the true and honest faith, Of one that lou'd me with fincerity), Made me the spoyle of falshood and contempt, Or elfe perhaps the fame is done to trye My resolution, and my constancy. 1620 But yet I feare the worst, and feare I may, Lest he now having got the victory,

Left he now having got the victory,

Cares for no more: and feeing he knowes my loue

Turnes towards him, he turnes his backe to me.

So that I know not vvhat vvere best resolue,

Either to stand vnto the doubtfull faith

Of one that hath so dangerously begun,

Or else returne t'accept Mirtillus loue,

Who vvill perhaps when mine begins, have done:

So that inwrapt in this distracted toyle

I vexe, and know not vvhat to do the vvhile.

And therefore Amarillis I thinke sure

(Se'ing now how others loue in me hath prou'd)

You are most happy not to be belou'd.

SCEN. III.

Cloris. Amarillis. Dorinda.

Ow here betweene you two, kind louing foules,
I know there can be no talke but of loue;
Loue must be all the scope of your discourse.
Alas poore hearts, I vvonder how you can
In this deceiptfull vvorld thinke of a man.
For they doe nothing but make sooles of you,
And laugh vvhen they have done, and proove vntrue.

Am. Well Cloris vvell, reioyce that you are free; You may be toucht one day as vvell as we.

Clo. Indeed and I had like to this last night,
Had I not lookt vith such an angry eye,
And frown'd so sowre, that I made loue aseard.
There vvas a sellow needes forsooth would haue
My heart from me vvhether I would or not,
And had as great aduantage one could haue;
I tell you that he had me in a Caue.

Do. What, in a Caue? Cloris how came you there? Clo. Truely Dorinda I vill tell you how:

By no arte magique, but a plaine deuise

Of Techne, vvho would trie her wit on me;

For she had promis me, to meete me there

At such an houre, and thither bring vvith her

A new strange dressing she had made for me,

Which there close out of sight, I should trie on: 1660

Thither vvent I poore soole, at th'houre decreed,

And there expecting Technes company,

In rushes sleering Colax after me;

Whom sure she sent of purpose to the place.

And there with his affected apish grace

And strained speach, offring to seaze on me, Out rusht I from him, as indeed amaz'd At his fo fodaine and vnexpected fight. And after followes he, vowes, fweares, protests By all the gods, he neuer lou'd before 1670 Any one liuing in the world but me; And for me onely, would he spend his life.

Do. Alas, and what am I forgotten then? Why these were even the words he spake to me.

Clo. And then inueighes against Amyntas loue, Vantes his owne parts, and his great knowledges; And all fo idle, as, in troth me thought I neuer heard a man (more vainely talke, For fo much as I heard) for vp the hill I went with fuch a pace, and neuer stayd 1680 To give regard to anything he fayd: As at the last I scarse had left him breath Sufficient to forfweare himfelfe withall.

Do. Ah what hath then my filly ignorance done To be deceiu'd, and mockt by fuch a one?

Clo. And when I had recourred up the hill, I fairely ran away and left my man In midd'ft of his conjuring periuries; All empty to returne with mighty losse Of breath and labour, having cast away Much foolish paines in tricking vp himselfe For this exploit, and goes without his game; Which he in hope deuour'd before he came ; I, I, too, mist my dressing by this meanes.

But I admire how any woman can Be so vnwise to like of such a man! For I protest I see nought else but froth,

And shallow impudence, affected grace, And some few idle practise complement: And all the thing he is without he is, For affection striues but to appeare, And neuer is of Substance, or Sincere. And yet this dare of falshood hath beguil'd

1700

A thousand foolish vvenches in his dayes.

Theirs.

Do. The more vyretch he, and more hard hap was Clo. Why do you figh Dorinda? are you toucht

VVith any of these passages of mine?

Do. No truly not of yours, but I have cause

In my particular that makes me figh.

Clo. Well, vvell, come one to put vs from this talke; Let vs deuise some sport to passe the time.

Am. Faith I have no great lift to any sport.

Do. Nor I in troth, tis farthest from my minde.

Clo. Then let vs tell old tales, repeate our dreames, Or any thing rather then thinke of loue.

Am. And now you speake of dreames, in troth last I was much troubled with a fearefull dreame. Inight

Do. And truely Amarillis fo was I.

Clo. And now I do remember too, I had

A foolish idle dreame, and this it was:

1720

Me thought the fairest of Montanus lambs, And one he lou'd the best of all his flocke, VVas fingled out, and chac'd b'a cruell curre, And in his hot purfuit makes towards me, (Me thought) for fuccour, and about me ran, As if it beg'd my ayde to have his life: Which I long time deferr'd, and still lookt on. And would not rescue it, vntill at length I faw it euen quite wourried out of breath.

1730

And panting at my feete, and could no more:
And then me thought, I tooke it vp from death,
And cherisht it with me, and brought it backe
Home to Montanus, who vvas glad to fee
The poore recouer'd creature thus restor'd;
And I my selfe was greatly pleas'd, me thought,
That by my hand so good a deed vvas wrought;
And Amarillis now tell vs your dreame?

Am. Me thought as I in Eremathus walkt. A fearefull vvoolfe rusht forth from out a brake. And towards me makes with open hideous jawes. 1740 From whom I ranne with all the speed I could, T'escape my danger, and t'ouertake One vyhom I faw before, that might lend avde To me distrest; but he me thought did runne As fast from me, as I did from the beast. I cride to him (but all in vaine) to ftay; The more I cride, the more he ranne away; And after I, and after me the woolfe, So long, as I began to faint in minde: Seeing my despaire before, my death behind: 1750 Yet ranne I still, and loe, me thought, at length A little he began to flacke his pace; Which I perceiuing, put to all my strength And ranne, as if defire had wing'd my heeles; And in the end me thought recouer'd him. But neuer woman felt more ioy,—it feem'd,— To overtake a man, then did I him, By whom I scapte the danger I was in; That when I wak'd, as prefently I awak'd, Toucht with that fudaine ioy, which my poore heart God knowes, had not beene vfd vnto of late:

18

III.

I found my felfe all in a moyst faint sweate, VVhich that affrighting horrour did beget; And though I were deliu'red of my feare, And felt this ioy, yet did the trembling last Vpon my heart, when now the feare was past.

Clo. This Amarillis may your good portend, That yet you shall have comfort in the end.

Am. God grant I may, it is the thing I want. 1769 Clo. And now Dorinda tell vs what you dream't.

Do. I dream't, that having gone to gather flowers,
And weary of my worke, reposing me
Vpon a banke neere to a Rivers side,
A subtile Serpent lurking in the grasse,
Came secretly, and seized on my breast;
Which, though I saw, I had no power to stirre,
But lay me still, till he had eate away
Into my bosome, whence he tooke my heart;
And in his mouth carrying the same away,
Returnes me thought againe, from whence he came;
Which I perceiving presently arose,
And after it most wosfully I went,
To see if I could finde my heart againe:
And vp and downe, I sought but all in vaine.

Clo. In troth 'tis no good lucke to dreame of Snakes; One shall be fure t'heare anger after it.

Do. And fo it may be I have done to day. Clo. Indeed, and I have heard it neuer failes.

SCEN. IIII.

Techne. Cloris. Amarillis. Dorinda. 1790

Ome, you are talking here in iollity,
Whilst I have sought you Cloris all about:
Come, come, good Cloris quickly come away.

Clo. What is the newes? what have we now to doo;

Haue you another Caue to fend me too?

Tec. Ah talke no more of that, but come away, As euer you will faue the wofull life Of a diffressed man that dies for you.

Clo. Why what doth Colax whom you fent to me Into the Caue, faint now with his repulse? 1800

Tec. I fent him not, you would fo wifely goe,
In open fight, as men might fee you goe,
And trace you thither all the way you went.
But come, ah t'is not he, it is the man
You ought to faue: Amyntas is the man
Your cruelty, and rigor hath vndone:
O quickly come, or it vvill be too late;
For 'twas his chance, and most vnluckely,
To fee both you and Colax, as you came
Out of the Caue, and he thinkes verily
You are possess by him; which so consounds
His spirits, and sinkes his heart, that sure h'is runne
T'vndoe himselse; and O I feare 'tis done.

Clo. If it be done, my help will come too late; And I may stay, and saue that labour here.

Am. Ah Cloris haste away if it be so, And doe not if thou hast a heart of slesh, And of a woman, stay and trisle time; Goe runne, and saue thine owne; for if he die,

'Tis thine that dies, his blood is fhed for thee; 1820 And what a horror this will ever be Hereafter to thy guilty conscience, when Yeares shall have taught thee wit, and thou shalt find This deed instampt in bloody Characters. Within the blacke records of thine owne thoughts: Which neuer will be raz'd whilft thou haft breath. Nor yet will be forgotten by thy death. Besides, wide Fame will trumpet forth thy wrong, And thou shalt be with all posterity. Amongst th'examples held of cruelty. 1830 And have this favage deed of thine be made A fullen fubiect for a Tragedy, Intitled Cloris; that thereby thy name May ferue to be an euerlasting shame; And therefore go preuent fo foule a staine.

Do. Ah go, go Cloris, hafte away with fpeede. Clo. Why, whether should I go? I know not where

To finde him now, and if he do this deed, It is his error, and no fault of mine:

Yet pray thee Techne, which way went the man? 1840

Tec. Come Cloris, I will shew which way he went, In most strange sury, and most desperate speed; Still crying, Cloris, hast thou done this deed?

Clo. Why had not you ftaid, and perswaded him?

Tec. I could not ftay him by no meanes I vf'd, Though all the meanes I could deuise I vf'd.

Clo. VVell, I will go, poore man to feeke him out
Though I can do him else no other good.
I know indeed he hath deseru'd my loue,
And if I would like any, should be him,
So that I thought he would be true to me.

But thus my dreame may now chance come to passe, And I may happen to bring home indeed Montanus fonne, Amyntas that deere Lambe He loues fo well, and by my gracious deed, He may escape the danger he was in. VVhich if I do, and thereby do inthrall My felfe, to free anothers mifery, Then will I fit and figh, and talke of loue T860 As well as you, and have your company. For fomething I do feele begin to moue; And yet I hope 'tis nothing else but feare; Yet what know I that feare may hap to loue? VVell Techne, come, I would not have him vet To perish, poore Amyntas, in this fit. Ama. VVell Cloris yet he may, for ought I fee

Before you come, vnlesse you make more hast. Ah cruell maide, she little knowes the griefe Of fuch a heart that's desperate of reliefe; Nor vnderstands she her owne happinesse, 1870 To have fo true a louer as he is. And yet I fee sh'is toucht, if not too late, For I perceiu'd her colour come and goe; And though in pride she would have hid her woe, Yet I faw forrow looke out at her eyes. And poore Amyntas if thou now be gone, Thou hast (like to the Bee that stinging dies, And in anothers wound left his owne life) Transpierced by the death, that marble heart, Which liuing thou couldst touch by no defert. 1880 And if thou shalt escape, thou hast surviv'd Her cruelty, which now repents her wrong, And thou shalt by her fauours be reuiu'd.

After the affliction thou hast suffred long; Which makes me thinke, that time, and patience may Intenerat at length the hardest heart, And that I may yet after all my woe, Liue t'ouertake Carinus mercy too.

Do. And here this fad diffresse of such a true
And constant louer ouercome with griese 1890
Presents vnto my guilty memory
The wrongs Mirtillus hath indur'd of me.
And O I would I knew now how he doth:
I seare he is not vvell; I saw him not
Scarse these three dayes; I meruaile vvhere he is:
And yet vvhat need I meruaile, vvho haue thus
Chac'd him from me vvith frownes and vsage vile,
And fondly lest the substance of his faith,
To catch the shadow of deceipt and guile?
Was Colax he I thought the onely man, 1900

And is he now prou'd to be fuch a one?

O that I euer lent an easie eare,
Vnto so false a wretches flatteries,
Whose very name I now abhorre to heare;
And loath my selse, for being so vnwise.
What shall I doe sweet Amarillis now?
Which way shall I betake me to recoure
The losse of shame, and losse of such a louer?

Am. Indeed Dorinda you have done him wrong,
But your repentance, and compassion now 1910
May make amends, and you must learne to do
As I long time have done, indure and hope,
And on that turne of Fortunes Scene depend,
VVhen all extremities must mend, or end.

SCEN. V.

Melibæus. Ergastus.

VVEII, come Ergastus, we have seene ynow,
And it is more then time, that we prepare
Against this Hydra of confusion now,
Which still presents new hideous heads of seare: 1920
And every houre we see begets new broyles,
And intricates our youth in desperate toyles.

And therefore let th'aduantage of this day,
Which is the great and generall hunting day
In Eremanthus, ferue for this good deed:
And when we meete (as all of vs shall meet
Here in this place anone, as is decreed)
We will aduise our Shepheards to intermit
That worke, and fall to this imports vs more;
To chase out these wilde mischieses that do lurke, 1930
And worse infect, then th'Erimanthian Boare,
Or all Beasts else; which onely spoile our fields,
Whilst these which are of more prodigious kinds,
Bend all their forces to destroy our mindes.

Erg. And this occasion will be very fit

Now to be tooke; for one day lost may lose

More by example, then we shall reget

In thousands; for when men shall once disclose

The way of ill that lay vnknowne before,

Scarce all our paines will euer stop it more.

Man is a creature of a wilfull head,

And hardly is driuen, but easily is lead

ACT. V. SCEN. I.

Amarillis. Carinus.

H gentle Lælaps, pretty louing dogge, Where hast thou left thy maister? where is he, That great commander ouer thee and me? Thou wert not wont be farre off from his feete, And O no more would I, were he fo pleaf'd: But would as well as thou goe follow him. 1950 Through brakes and thickets, ouer cliffes and rocks So long as I had life to follow him, Would he but looke vpon me with that eye Of fauour, as h'is vf'd to looke on thee. Thou canst be clapt and strookt with that faire hand That thrusts away my heart, and beates it backe From following him, which yet it euer will; And though he flye me, yet I must after still: But here he comes, me thought he was not farre.

Car. What meane you Amarillis in this fort 1960 By taking vp my dogge to marre my fport?

Am. My deare Carinus thou doest much mistake, I do not marre thy sport, tis thou marrst mine, And kilst my ioyes with that hard heart of thine. Thy dogge perhaps by some instinct doth know How that I am his maisters creature too, And kindely comes himselfe and sawnes on me To shew what you in nature ought to doe?

Car. Fie Amarillis, you that know my minde Should not me thinkes thus ever trouble me.

Am. What, it is troublesome to be belou'd? How is it then Carinus to be loath'd?

If I had done like Cloris, skornd your sute,

And spurn'd your passions, in disdainefull fort, I had beene woo'd and fought, and highly priz'd, But having n'other arte to winne thy loue, Saue by discouering mine, I am despis'd As if you would not have the thing you fought, Vnlesse you knew it were not to be got. And now because I lie here at thy feete, 1980 The humble booty of thy conquering eyes, And lay my heart all open in thy fight, And tell thee I am thine, and tell thee right; And doe not fute my lookes, nor clothe my words In other colours, then my thoughts do vveare, But doe thee right in all; thou skornest me As if thou didst not loue fincerity; Neuer did Crystall more apparantly Present the colour it contain'd within Then have these eyes, these teares, this tongue of mine Bewray'd my heart, and told how much I am thine.

Car. Tis true I know you have too much bewrayd,

And more then fits the honour of a mayd.

Am. O if that nature hath not arm'd my breaft
With that stronge temper of resisting proofe,
But that by treason of my weake complection, I
Am made thus easie to the violent shot
Of passion, and th'affection I should not:
Me thinkes yet you out of your strength and power,
Should not distaine that weakenes, but should thinke
It rather is your vertue, as indeed
2001
It is, that makes me thus against my kinde,
T'vnlocke my thoughts, and to let out my minde;
When I should rather die and burst with loue,
Then once to let my tongue to say, I loue.

And if your worthy parts be of that power
To vanquish nature, and I must be wonne,
Do not disdaine the worke vohen you have done;
For in contemning me you do dispise
That power of yours which makes me to be thus. 2010

Car. Now vvhat adoe is here with idle talke? And to no purpose; for you know I haue Ingag'd long since my heart, my loue and all To Cloris, vvho must haue the same and shall.

Am. Why there is no fuch oddes twixt her and me: I am a Nymph, tis knowne, as well as she. There is no other difference betwixt vs twaine But that I loue, and she doth thee disdaine. No other reason can induce thy minde, But onely that which should divert thy minde. I will attend thy flockes better then she, And dreffe thy Bower more fweet, more daintily, And cheerish thee with Salets, and with Fruites, And all fresh dainties that the season sutes, I have more skill in hearbes, then she, by farre, I know which nourish, which restoring are: And I will finde Dictamnus for thy Goates, And feeke out Clouer for thy little Lambes, And Tetrifoll to cheerish vp their Dammes; And this I know, I have a better voyce Then she, though she perhaps may have more arte; But, which is best, I have the faithfull'st heart: Besides Amyntas hath her loue, I know, And she begins to manifest it now.

Car. Amyntas haue her loue? that were most strange,

When he hath gotten that, you shall have mine.

Am. O deere Carinus, let me rest vpon That blessed word of thine, and I haue done.

SCEN. II.

Mirtillus. Carinus. Amarillis.

2040

VVEll met Carinus, I can tell you newes, Your riuall, poore Amyntas, hath vndone And fpoil'd himfelfe, and lies in that weake cafe, As we thinke neuer more to fee his face.

Car. Mirtillus, I am forry t'heare fo much: Although Amyntas be competitor In th'Empire of her heart, vvherein my life Hath chiefest claime, I doe not wish his death: But by vvhat chance, Mirtillus pray thee tell?

Mir. I will Carinus, though I grieue to tell. 2050 As Tytirus, Menalcas, and my felfe Were placing of our toyles (against anon That we shall hunt) below, within the streight, Twixt Erimanthus, and Lycaus mount, We might perceeue vnder a ragged clife, In that most vncouth desart, all alone Diftress'd Amyntas lying on the ground. With his fad face, turn'd close vnto the rock, As if he loathed to fee more of the world, Then that poore space, which was twixt him and it: His right hand ftretcht along vpon his fide, His left he makes the pillar to support His carefull head; his Pipe he had hung vp Vpon a Beach tree by, vvhere he likewise Had plac'd his Sheep hooke, and his Knife, wherewith He had incaru'd an wofull Elegy,

To shew th'occasion of his miserv. His dogge Melampus fitting by his fide, As if he were partaker of his vyoe: By vvhich we knew t'was he, and to him went; 2070 And after vve had call'd and shooke him vp. And found him not to answere, nor to stirre, And yet his eyes abroad, his body warme: We took him vp, and held him from the ground. But could not make him ftand by any meanes; And fincking downe againe, we fearcht to fee If he had any vvound, or blow, or wrinch; But none could finde: at last by chance we spide A little horne which he had flung afide, Whereby we gest he had some poyson tooke. And thereupon vve fent out prefently To fetch Vrania; vvhose great skill in hearbes Is fuch, as if there any meanes will be,— As I feare none will be,-her onely arte Must serue to bring him to himselfe againe.

Car. Indeed Vrania hath bin knowne t'haue done Most desperate cures, and peraduenture may Restore him yet; and I doe wish she may.

Mir. But having there vs'd all the helpe we could,
And all in vaine, and standing by with griese, 2090
(As we might well, to see so sad a sight:
And such an worthy Shepheard in that plight)
We might perceive come running downe the hill,
Cloris and Techne, with what speed they could:
But Cloris had got ground, and was before,
And made more hast, as it concernd her more.
And nearer as she came, she faster went,
As if she did desire to have beene there

Before her feete, too flow for her fwift feare.

Aud comming to the place, fhe fuddenly 2100

Stopt, ftarts, and fhrikt, and having made fuch haft

T'haue fomething done, now could she nothing do: Perhaps our presence might perplex her too, As being asham'd that any eye should see The new appearing of her naked heart, That neuer yet before was seene till now.

Car. And 'tis ill hap for me it was feene now.

Mir. For we perceiu'd how Love and Modestie

With seviral Ensignes, stroue within her cheekes

Which should be Lord that day, and charged hard

Vpon each other, with their fresh supplies

2111

Of different colours, that still came, and went,

And much disturb'd her; but at length dissolu'd

Into affection, downe she casts her selse

Vpon his senselesse body, where she saw

The mercy she had brought was come too late:

And to him calles, O deare Amyntas, speake,

Looke on me, sweete Amyntas, it is I

That calles thee, I it is, that holds thee here,

Within those armes thou hast esteem'd so deare.

And though that loue were yet fo young in her As that it knew not how to fpeake, or what, And that she neuer had that passion prou'd, Being sirst a louer ere she knew she lou'd; Yet what she could not vtter, she supplied, With her poore busie hands that rubb'd his face, Chasd his pale temples, wrung his singers ends, Held vp his head, and puld him by the hands, And neuer lest her worke, nor euer ceast.

Ama. Alas, the least of this regard before, 2130 Might have holpe all then, when 'twas in her power T'have fau'd his heart, and to revive his minde. Now for all this, her mercy is vnkinde; The good that's out of season is not good. There is no difference now twixt cruelty, And the compassion that's not vnderstood.

Mir. But yet at length, as if those dainty hands, Had had a power to have awakened Death, We might perceive him move his heavy eyes; Which had stood fixt all the whole time before: And fastens them directly upon her. Which when she saw, it strook her with that force, As that it pierc'd through all the spirits she had, Made all the powers and parts of her shrinke vp. With that convulsion of remorfe and griefe. As out she shrik'd, O deare, O my deare heart; Then shrikes againe, and then againe cryes out, For now that looke of his did shake her more, Then Death or any thing had done before: That looke did read ther new conceiving heart, All the whole tragicke Lecture of his loue ; And his fad fuffrings; all his griefes and feare; And now in th'end what he had done for her, And with that powerfull force of mouing too, As all the world of words could neuer doe.

Ah what a filly meffenger is Speech
To be imploi'd in that great Embaffie
Of our affections, in respect of th'eye?
Ah 'tis the filent rhetoricke of a looke,
That works the league betwixt the States of hearts;
Not words I fee, nor knowledge of the booke, 2161

Nor incantations made by hidden artes;
For now this looke fo melts her into teares,
As that she powr'd them down like thunder drops;
Or else did Nature taking pitty now
Of her distresse, imploy them in that store,
To serue as vailes, and to be interposde
Betwixt her griese and her, t'impeach her sight,
From that sull view of sorrow thus disclosde,

And now with this came in Vrania there, With other vvomen, to imploy their best To saue his life, if b'any meanes they can. And so vve came our vvay, being sent for now About some conference for our hunting sports; And with vs Techne comes, vvho is supposed, T'haue beene a speciall cause of much of this.

Car. Alas this fad report doth grieue me much,
And I did neuer thinke, that Cloris had
So dearely lou'd him as I finde she doth;
For by this act of hers I plainly see,
There will be neuer any hope for me.

Ama. There may for me, if now Carinus thou VVilt stand but to thy vvord, as thou hast said.

Mir. Ah would to God Dorinda had bene there, T'haue seene but Cloris act this vvofull part; It may be, it might haue deterr'd her heart From crueltie, so long as she had liu'd.

Am. And I am glad Carinus hath but heard
So much this day; for he may hap thereby
To haue fome feeling of my mifery;
2190
But for Dorinda, neuer doubt at all,
She is more yours Mirtillus then you thinke,
Mir. Ah Amarillis, I would that were true.

But loe where come our chiefest heardsmen now, Of all Arcadia, we shall know more newes.

SCEN. III.

Melibæus, Ergastus, Montanus, Acrisius with other Arcadians, bringing with them Alcon, Lincus, Colax, Techne, Pistophænax.

YOu gentle Shepheards and Inhabitors 2200 Of these remote, and solitary parts Of montaynous Arcadia. shut vp here Within these Rockes, these vnfrequented Clifts.— The walles and bulwarkes of our libertie.— From out the noyle of tumult, and the throng Of fweating toyle, ratling concurrencie; And have continued still the same and one In all fucceffions from antiquitie: Whil'st all the states on earth besides have made A thousand revolutions, and have rowl'd 2210 From change to change, and neuer yet found rest, Nor euer bettered their estates by change. You, I inuoke this day in generall, To doe a worke that now concernes vs all: Lest that we leave not to posteritie, Th'Arcadia that we found continued thus By our fore-fathers care who left it vs. For none of you I know, whose iudgements graue Can ought discerne, but sees how much we are Transformd of late, and changed from what we were; And vvhat distempers daily doe arise 222 I Amongst our people, neuer felt before; At which I know you maruell, as indeed You well may maruel, whence they should proceed;

And fo did good Ergastus here, and I,
Vntill we set our selves more vvarily
To search it out; vvhich by good hap vve haue,
And sound the authors of this vvickednesse.
Which divels attyr'd here in the shape of men,
We have produc'd before you, to the end
You may take speedy order to suppresse
Our growing sollies, and their impiousnesse.

Erg. Indeed these odious wretches which you fee,

Are they who have brought in vpon our rest, These new and vnknowne mischieses of debate, Of wanton pride, of scandulous reportes, Of vile deluding, chaste and honest loues, Of vndeseru'd suspitious desperate grieses, And all the sadnesse we have seene of late.

And first this man, this Lincus here you see,

Montanus you, and you Acrysius know,

With what deceit, and with what cunning arte,

He entertaind your strifes, abused you both;

By first perswading you that you had right

In your demands, and then the right was yours;

And would have made as many rights as men

Had meanes, or power, or will to purchase them;

Could he have once attain'd to his desires.

Mon. We doe confesse our errour, that we were Too easily perswaded by his craft,
2250
To wrangle for imagin'd titles; which
We here renounce, and quit for euermore.

Acry. And we defire the memory thereof May die with vs, that it be neuer knowne Our feeble age hath fuch example showne.

III.

Erg. And now this other strange impostor here,
This Alcon, who like Lincus hath put on,
The habite too of emptie grauitie,
To catch opinion, and conceit withall,
Seekes how to set vs all at variance here
2260
With nature, as this other with our selues;
And would consound her, working with his arte;
And labours how to make our mindes first sicke,
Before our bodies, and perswade our health
It is not well; that he may haue thereby
Both it and sicknesse euer vnder cure.
And forraine drugs brings to distemper's here
And make vs like the wanton world abroad.

Mel. But here are two the most pernitious spirits
The world I thinke did euer yet produce; 2270
Colax and Techne; two such instruments
Of Wantonnesse, of Lust and treachery,
As are of power t'intice and to debaush
The vniuersall state of honesty.

Erg. But Techne, who is that stands there by you? What, is your company increast of late?

Tec. Truely it is a very honest man,

A friend of mine that comes to see me here.

Erg. He cannot then but be an honest man, If he be one of your acquaintance sure,

Mel. This man I found with them now fince you Maintaining hote dispute with Titerus [went, About the rites and misteries of Pan.

2280

Erg. H'is like to be of their affociats then: Techne, what is this fecret friend of yours?

Tec. For-footh he is a very holy man.

Erg. A very holy man? what is his name?

Tec. Truely his name Sir is Pistophænax. Erg. What, is he maskt, or is that face his owne?

Tec. He is not maskt, tis his complexion sure. 2290 Erg. Techne we cannot credite thy report. Let one trie whether it be so or not:

O fee a most deformed ougly face. Wherewith if openly he should appeare, He would deterre all men from comming neere. And therefore hath that cunning wretch put on This pleafing vifor of apparency, T'intice and to delude the world withall: So that you fee with what strange inginiers, The project of our ruine is forecast, How they implanted have their battery here, Against all the maine pillors of our state, Our Rites, our Custome, Nature, Honesty. T'imbroyle, and to confound vs vtterly,

Reckning vs barbarous; but if thus their skill

Doth ciuilize, let vs be barbarous still.

Mel. But now to shew the horrible effects Of Colax, and of Technes practifes, (Befides this last exploit they vvrought vpon Amyntas, vvho, poore youth, lies now full weake: Vnder Vranias cure, vvhose skill we heare Hath yet recall'd him to himselfe againe) We have fent out abroad into the vyoods, For Silvia and Palamon, two chaft foules Whom they have tortur'd fo vvith iealousie Of each the other, as they made them runne A part, to languish seuerally alone;

And we have fent for divers others too.

2300

Whose hearts have felt what impious craft can do: And here they come, and now you shall know all. 2320

SCEN. IV.

Palæmon. Mirtillus. Carinus. Siluia. Dorinda, Amarillis. Daphne. Cloris. Amyntas.

Ome good Palæmon, and good Siluia come,
You have indur'd too much, and too too long.
Sil. Ah vvhy Ergastus doe you set our names
So neere together, when our hearts so farre,
Are distant from each other as they are?
Indeed, whilst vve were one as once vve were,
And as we ought to be vvere faith observid,
Palæmon should not have beene nam'd without
A Siluia, nor yet Siluia vvithout him;
But now vve may Ergastus, vve are two.

Pal. Siluia, therein the greater wrong you doe.

Sil. Palæmon, nay the greater vvrong you doe.

Fun Alex we know well where the wrong doth l

Erg. Alas we know well where the wrong doth lie.

Sil. I know you doe, and all the world may know.

Pal. Siluia, you fee your fault cannot be hid.

Sil. It is no fault of mine Palæmon, that Your shame doth come to be reuealed here; I neuer told it, you your selfe haue not Conceal'd your worke so closely as you should.

Pal. But there stands one can tell what you have beene. Sil. Nay, there he stands can tell what you have beene; And sure is now in publicke here produc'd

2340

To testifie your shame, but not set on By me, I doe protest; who rather would

2360

Haue di'd alone in fecret with my griefe Then had your infamy discouered here,

Wherein my shame must have so great a share. 2350

Pal. I have not fought to manifest your shame, Which Siluia, rather then have done I would Have beene content t'indure the worst of deaths, I having such an intrest in the same

I having fuch an intrest in the same.

Col. No Silvia, no Palamon, I ftand here Not t'accuse you, but t'accuse my selse Of wrong; you both, God knowes, are cleare; I have abus'd your apt credulitie, With salse reports of things that never were: And therefore here crave pardon for the same.

Pal. Why Colar, did not Siluia entertaine

The loue of Thyrsis then as you told me?

Col. Palæmon no, she neuer entertain'd

His loue, nor wrong'd you as I euer knew.

Sil. But Colax you faw how Palamon did With Nila falfifie his vow to me.

Col. Siluia, by heaven and earth I fweare not I, But onely fain'd it out of fubtiltie; For fome vngodly ends I had decreed.

Pal. O let not this be made some cunning baite 2370 To take my grieses with salse beliese, for I Had rather liue vvith sorrow then deceipt, And still t'be vndone, then to have such reliese.

Sil. Ah let not this deuise be wrought to guilde My bitternesse, to make me swallow't now That I might be another time beguilde With confidence, and not trust vvhat I know.

Pal. Ah Siluia now, how vvere I cleer'd of griefe, Had I the power to vnbeleeue beliefe.

2380

2400

But ah my heart hath dwelt fo long in house With that first tale, as this vvhich is come new, Cannot be put in trust with my desire So soone; besides 'tis too good to be true.

Sil. Could I Palæmon but vnthinke the thought Of th'ill first heard, and that it vvere not so, How blest were I? but loe I see how doubt Comes in farre easier then it can get out. And in these miseries of iealousie, Our eare hath greater credit then our eye.

Mel. Stand not confus'd, deare louers, any more, 2390 For this is now the certaine truth you heare, And this vile vvretch hath done you both this vvrong.

Pal. Ist possible, and is this true you say, And do I liue, and doe I see the day? Ah then come Silvia, for I sinde this wound That pierc'd into the center of my heart, Hath let in loue sarre deeper then it vvas.

Sil. If this be fo, vvhy then Palæmon know, I likewise seele the loue that vvas before Most in my heart, is now become farre more: And now O pardon me you worthy race Of men, if I in passion vttred ought In prejudice of your most noble sexe; And thinke it vvas m'agrieued errour spake It knew not vvhat, transported so, not I.

Pal. And pardon me you glorious company,
You starres of vvomen, if m'inraged heate
Haue ought profan'd your reuerent dignity;
And thou bright Pallas, sou'raigne of all Nimphes,
The royall Mistresse of our Pastorall Muse,
And thou Diana honour of the woods,

To whom I vow my fongs, and vow my felfe, Forgiue me mine offence, and be you pleaf'd T'accept of my repentance now therefore, And grace me ftill; and I defire no more.

Sil. And now I would that Cloris knew thus much, That so she might be vndeceiued too, Whom I have made beleeve so ill of men: But loe see where she comes, and as it seemes Brings her beliefe already in her hand, 2420 Prevents my act, and is confirm'd before.

Looke Cloris looke, my feares have idle beene, Palæmon loues me, there is trust in men.

Clo. And Siluia I must now believe so too, Or else God helpe, I know not what to doe.

Pal. Looke here Mirtillus looke, what I told you Is now prou'd false, and women they are true.

Mil. So I perceiue Palæmon, and it feemes But vaine conceipt that other wife esteemes.

Mon. Alas here comes my deare restored sonne, 2430 My louely child Amyntas here is come.

Acry. And here is Cloris my deare daughter come, And lookes as if she were affrighted still, Poore soule, with seare, and with her sudaine griese.

Clo. Loe here Montanus I have brought you home Although with much a doe, your fonne againe; And forry am with all my heart that I, Have beene the cause he hath indur'd so much.

Mon. And I restore him backe again to you

Deare Cloris, and doe vvish you to forget

Your forrowes past, and pray the Gods you may

From henceforth lead your life with happy ioy.

Acry. Doe Cloris take him, and I wish as much.

Erg. Well then to make our ioyfull festivals The more complet, Dorinda, we intreate You also to accept Mirtillus loue; Who we are sure hath well deserved yours.

Do. Although this be vpon short warning, yet
For that I have beene sommoned before
By mine owne heart and his deserts to me,
To yeeld to such a motion, I am now
Content t'accept his loue, and wilbe his.

Mir. Dorinda, then I likewise haue my blisse, And reckon all the sufferings I haue past, Worthy of thee to haue this ioy at last.

Mel. And you Carinus, looke on that good Nymph Whose eye is still on you, as if she thought Her suffring too, deserv'd some time of ioy, And now expects her turne, hath brought her lap For comfort too whil'st Fortune deales good hap; 2460 And therefore let her haue it now poore soule, For she is worthy to possesse your love.

Car. I know she is, and she shall have my love,
Though Colax had perswaded me before
Neuer t'accept or to beleeve the love
Of any Nymph, and oft to me hath sworne
How he had tri'd them all, and that none were
As men, beguild by shewes, suppos'd they were;
But now I do perceive his treachery,
And that they have both love and constancy.

2470

Ama. O deare Carinus bless be this good houre.

Ama. O deare Carinus bleft be this good houre,
That I haue liu'd to ouertake at laft
That heart of thine which fled from me fo fast.

Erg. And Daphne too me thinkes your heavy lookes Shew how that something is amisse with you.

Dap. Nothing amisse with me, but that of late I tooke a fall, which somewhat grieues me yet.

Erg. That must aduise you Daphne from henceforth To looke more warily vnto your feete;

Which if you do no doubt but all this will be well 2486

Which if you do, no doubt but all this will be well. 2480

Mel. Then thus we fee the fadnesse of this day
Is ended with the euening of our ioy:
And now you impious spirits, who thus have rais'd
The hideous tempests of these miseries,
And thus abus'd our simple innocence;
We charge you all here present t'auoyd,
From out our confines; vnder paine to be
Cast downe and dasht in pieces from these rockes,
And t'have your odious carkases devour'd
By beasts, being worse yourselves then beasts to men. 2490

Col. Well then come Techne, for I fee we two Must even be forc'd to make a marriage too, And goe to Corinth, or some City neere, And by our practise get our living there: Which both together ioyn'd, perhaps we may: And this is now the worst of miseries Could come vnto me, and yet vvorthily, For having thus abus'd so many Nymphes, And vvrong'd the honour most vnreuerently Of vvomen, in that fort as I have done, That now I am forst to vndergoe therefore, The vvorst of Plagues: to marry vvith a W.

Alc. But Lincus, let not this discourage vs, That this poore people lealous of their rest, Exile vs thus; for vve no doubt shall sinde Nations enough, that vvill most ready be To entertaine our skill, and cherish vs.

And worthier people too, of fubtler spirits, Then these vnfashion'd and vncomb'd rude swaines.

Lin. Yea and those Nations are farre sooner drawne T'all friuolous distractions then are these; 2511 For oft vve see, the grosse doe manage things, Farre better then the subtile; cunning brings Consussion sooner then doth ignorance.

Alc. Yea, and I doubt not whil'ft there shall be found

Fantasticke puling wenches in the world,
But I shall florish, and liue iollily,
For such as I by vvomen must begin
To gaine a name, and reputation winne:
Which, vvhen we haue attain'd to, you know then 2520
How easily the vvomen draw on men.

Lin. Nor doe I doubt but I shall likewise liue, And thriue, where euer I shall plant my selfe; For I have all those helpes my skill requires, A wrangling nature, a contesting grace, A clamorous voyce, and an audacious face. And I can cite the law t'oppugne the law, And make the glosse to ouerthrow the text; I can alledge and vouch authority, T'imbroyle th'intent, and sense of equity; Besides, by hauing beene a Notary, And vf'd to frame litigious instruments And leave advantages for fubtilty And strife to worke on, I can so deuise That there shall be no writing made so fure But it shall veeld occasion to contest At any time when men shall thinke it best; Nor be thou checkt with this Pistophanax,

That at thy first appearing thou art thus Discourred here; thou shalt along with vs. And take thy fortune too, as vvell as we.

Pift. Tush Lineus, this cannot discourage me. For we that traffique with credulity And with opinion, still shall cherisht be: But here your errour was to enter first And be before me, for you should have let Me make the way, that I might have dislinkt That chaine of Zeale that holds in amity. And call'd vp doubt in their establisht rites: Which would have made you fuch an easie way, 2550 As that you might have brought in what you would. Vpon their shaken and discattered mindes: For our profession any thing refutes, And all's vnfetled whereas faith disputes.

Mel. Now what a muttring keepe you there, away, Begone I fay, and best doe, whilst you may, And fince we have redeem'd our felues fo well Out of the bonds of mischiefe, let vs all Exile with them their ill example too; Which neuer more remaines, as it begun, 2560 But is a wicked fire t' a farre worse sonne, And stayes not till it makes vs slaues vnto That vniuerfall Tyrant of the earth Custome, who takes from vs our priviledge To be our felues, rendes that great charter too Of nature, and would likewife cancell man: And so inchaines our judgements and discourse Vnto the present vsances, that we Must all our senses thereunto refer. Be as we finde our felues, not as we are,

As if we had no other touch of truth
And reason, then the nations of the times,
And place wherein we liue; and being our selues
Corrupted, and abastardized thus,
Thinke all lookes ill, that doth not looke like vs.
And therefore let vs recollect our selues
Dispers'd into these strange consused ills,
And be againe Arcadians, as we were
In manners, and in habits as we were;
And so solemnize this our happie day
Of restauration, with other feasts of ioy.

2580

FINIS.

TETHYS FESTIVALL.

NOTE.

For my exemplar of 'Tethys Festivall,' I am indebted to the Bodleian. That in the British Museum, though a dirty and stained copy, has the advantage over it of having prefixed a striking account of the great Ceremonial of which Daniel's 'Mask' formed only a slight part. Its title-page is as follows:—

The Order and Solemnitie of the Creation of the High and mightie Prince HENRIE, Eldest Sonne to our facred Soueraigne, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornewall, Earle of Chester, &c. As it was celebrated in the Parliament House, on Munday the fourth of Iuune last past.

Together with the Ceremonies of the Knights of the Bath, and other matters of speciall regard, incident to the same.

Wherunto is annexed the Royall Maske, presented by the Queene and her Ladies, on Wednesday at night following.

Printed at Britaines Burffe for Iohn Budge, and are there to be fold. 1610. [4to.]

By some inadvertence 'Tethys Festivall' was not given in the 4to of 1623, and has setched as high as £9 at book-sales. Opposite is the title-page.

TETHYS FESTIVAL:

OR,

THE QVEENES WAKE.

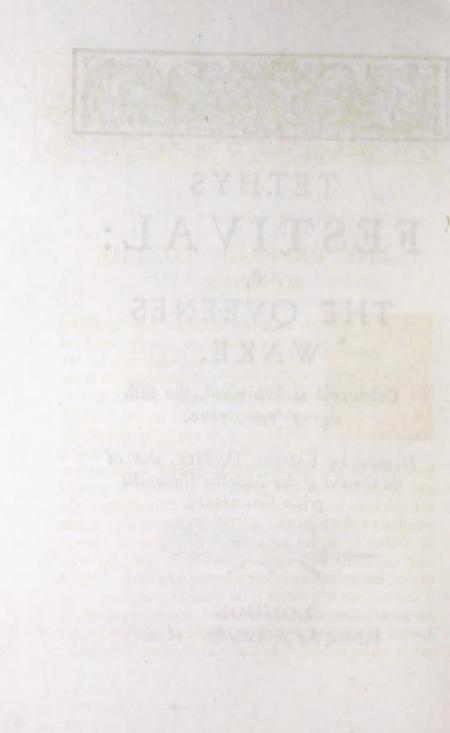

Celebrated at Whitehall, the fifth day of June, 1610.

Deuised by Samvel Daniel, one of the Groomes of her Maiesties Honourable privile Chamber.

LONDON

Printed for Iohn Budge. 1610.

THE PREFACE TO THE READER.

OR fo much as shewes and spectacles of this nature, are vsually registred among the memorable acts of the time, beeing Complements of State, both to shew magnificence and to celebrate the feasts to our greatest respects: it is expected (according now to the custome) that I, beeing 10

imployed in the busines, should publish a description and forme of the late Mask, wherewithall it pleased the Queenes most excellent Maiestie to solemnize the creation of the high and mightie Prince Henry, Prince of Wales, in regard to preserue the memorie thereof, and to satisfie their desires, who could have no other notice, but by others report of what was done. Which I doe not out of a desire to be seene in pamphlets, or of forwardness to shew my inuetion therin: for I thank God, I labour not with that disease of oftentation, nor 20 affect to be known to be the man digitoque monstrarier hic eft, having my name already wider in this kind then I defire, and more in the winde then I would. Neither doe I feeke in the divulging hereof, to give it other colours then those it wore, or to make an Apologie of what I have done: knowing, howfoeuer, it must passe the way of censure where / unto I see all publications (of what nature foeuer) are liable. And my long experience of the world, hath taught me this, that neuer Remonstrances nor Apologies could euer get ouer the 30 streame of opinion, to doe good on the other side. where contrarie affection and conceipt had to doe: but onely ferued to entertaine their owne partialnesse, who were fore-perswaded; and so was a labour in vaine. And it is oftentimes an argument of pufilanimitie, and may make vt iudicium nostrum, metus videatur, and render a good cause suspected, by too much labouring to defend it; which might be the reason that some of the late greatest Princes of Christendome would neuer haue their vndertakings made good by fuch courses, 40 but with filence indured (and in a most wittie age) the greatest batterie of paper that could possibly be made, & neuer once recharged the least ordinance of a pen against it, counting it their glorie to do whilest others talked. And shall we who are the poore Inginers for shadowes, & frame onely images of no refult, thinke to oppresse the rough censures of those, who notwithstanding all our labour will like according to their taste, or seeke to avoid them by flying to an Army of Authors, as idle as our felues? Seeing there 50 is nothing done or written, but incounters with detraction and opposition; which is an excellent argument of all our imbecillities & might allay our prefumption, when we shall see our greatest knowledges not to be fixt, but rowle according to the vncertaine motion of opinion, and controwleable by any surly shew of reason; which we find is double edged and strikes every way alike. And therefore I do not see why any man should rate his owne at that valew, and/set so low prises vpon other men's abilities. L'homme vaut l'homme, a man is 60 worth a man, and none hath gotten so high a station of vnderstanding, but he shall find others that are built on an equall sloore with him, and have as far a prospect as he; which when al is done, is but in a region subject to al passion and impersections.

80

And for these figures of mine, if they come not drawn in all proportions to the life of antiquity (from whose tyrannie, I see no reason why we may not emancipate our inventions, and be as free as they, to vse our owne images) yet I know them such as were 70 proper to the busines, and discharged those parts for which they served, with as good correspondencie, as our appointed limitations would permit.

But in these things wherein the onely life consists in shew; the arte and inuention of the Architect gives the greatest grace, and is of most importance: ours, the least part and of least note in the time of the performance thereof; and therefore have I interserted the description of the artificiall part, which only speakes M. Inago Iones.

TETHYS FESTIVALL.

Wherein Tethys Queene of the Ocean, and wife of Neptune, attended with thirteene Nymphs of feuerall Riuers, is represented in this manner.

IRST the Queenes Maiestie in the figure of Tethys. The Ladies in the shape of Nimphes, presiding seuerall / Riuers appropriate either to their dignitie, Signiories, or places of 10 birth.

I. Whereof the first was the Ladie Elizabeths grace, representing the Nymph of Thames.

2. The Ladie Arbella, the Nymph of Trent.

3. The Counteffe of Arundell, the Nymph of Arun.

1. 5, In margin 'Tethys mater Nympharum & fluuiorum': 1. 9, Misprinted 'appropriately': 1. 16, In margin 'Arun, a Riuer that runs by Arundell Castle.'

- 4. The Countesse of Darbie, the Nymph of Darwent.
- 5. The Countesse of Essex, the Nymph of Lee.
- 6. The Countesse of Dorcet, the Nymph of Ayr.
- 7. The Countesse of Mongommerie, the Nymph of 20 Severn.
- 8. The Vicountesse of Haddington, the Nymph of Rother.
- The Ladie Elizabeth Gray, the Nymph of Medway.

These foure Rivers are in Monmouthshire.

The Ladie Elizabeth Guilford, the Nymph of Dulesse.

30

The Ladie Katherine Peeter, the Nymph of Olwy.

The Ladie Winter, the Nymph of Wy.

The Ladie Winfor, the Nymph of Vske.

The discription of the first Scene.

N the Trauers which served as a curtaine for the first Scene, was figured a darke cloude, interior with certaine sparkling starres, which, at the sound of a loud musick, being instantly drawne, the scene was discovered with these adornements: First, on eyther side stood a great statue of twelve foot high, representing Neptune and Nereus. Neptune holding a Trident, with an Anchor made to it, and this Mot, His artibus: that is, Regendo, & retinendo, alluding to this / verse of Virgill, He tibi erunt artes, &c. Nereus holding out a golden fish in a net, with this word Industria: The reason whereof is delivered after, in the speech vttered

In margin—1. 17, 'Darwent, a river that runs through Darbie': 1. 18, 'Lee, the river that bounds Effex': 1. 19, 'Ayr, a River that runs nere Skipton, where this Lady was borne': 1. 20, 'Seuerne, rifes in Mongommery shire': 1. 22, 'Rother, a river in Sussex': 1. 24, 'Medway, a river in Kent': 1. 33, Misprinted 'interser.'

by Triton. These Sea-gods stood on pedestals, and were al of gold. Behinde them were two pillasters, on which hung compartments, with other deuises: and these bore vp a rich Freeze, wherein were figures of tenne soote long, of slouds, and Nymphes, with a number of naked children, dallying with a draperie, which they seemed to holde vp, that the Scene might 50 be seene, and the ends thereof fell downe in soldes by the pillasters. In the midst was a compartment, with this inscription, Tethyos Epinicia, Tethys seasts of triumph. This was supported with two winged boyes, and all the worke was done with that force and boldnesse on the gold and silver, as the figures seemed round and not painted.

The Scene it felfe was a Port or Hauen, with Bulworkes at the entrance, and the figure of a Castle commanding a fortified towne: within this Port were 60 many Ships, small and great, seeming to be at Anchor, some neerer, and some further off, according to prospective: beyond all appeared the Horison, or termination of the Sea; which seemed to moove with a gentle gale, and many Sayles, lying some to come into the Port, and others passing out. From this Scene issued Zephirus, with eight Naydes, Nymphs of sountaines, and two Tritons sent from Tethys to give notice of intendement, which was the Ante-maske or first shew. The Duke of Yorke presented Zephirus, in a 70 short robe of greene satin imbrodered with golden showers, with / a round wing made of lawnes on wyers, and hung down in labels. Behind his shoulders two silver wings. On his head a Garland of flowers consisting of all colours, and on one Arme which was out bare, he wore a bracelet of gold set with rich stones. Eight little Ladies neere of his Stature, represented the Naydes, and were attired in light robes adorned with flowers, their haire hanging down, and waving with Garlands of water ornaments on their heads.

^{1. 69,} In margin—' The figure of Zephirus might aptly discharge this representation in respect that messages are of winde, and verba dicuntur alara, winged wordes: besides it is a character of youth, and of the Spring.'

The Tritons wore skin-coates of watchet Taffata (lightned with filuer) to shew the Muscles of their bodies. From the waste almost to the knee were sinnes of siluer in the manner of bases: a mantle of Seagreene, laced and fringed with golde, tyed with a knot vppon one shoulder, and falling down in soldes behinde, was fastened to the contrary side: on their heads garlands of Sedge, with trumpets of writhen shels in their hand: Buskins of seagreene laid with siluer lace. These persons thus attired, entred with this song of 90 source parts, and a musicke of twelue Lutes.

Youth of the Spring, milde Zephirus blow faire,
And breath the ioyfull ayre,
Which Tethys wishes may attend this day;
Who comes her selfe to pay
The vowes her heart presents,
To these faire complements,

Breath out new flowers, which yet were neuer knowne
Vnto the Spring, nor blown
Before this time, to bewtifie the earth;
And | as this day gives birth
Vnto new types of State,
So let it bliffe create.

80

a Ti

the

Of

01

An

W

An

So Ex

W

Th

By

01

F

A

Beare Tethys message to the Ocean King,
Say how she ioyes to bring
Delight vnto his Ilands and his Seas;
And tell Meliades
The of-spring of his b[l]ood,
How she applaudes his good.

The fong ended, Triton, on the behalfe of Zephirus, IIO deliuers Tethys message with her Presents (which was a Trident to the King, and a rich sword and skarse to the Prince of Wales) in these wordes:—

From that intelligence which moves the Sphere Of circling waves (the mightie Tethys, Queene Of Nymphes and rivers, who will straight appeare, And in a humane Character be seene) We have in charge to say, that even as Seas And lands, are gradd by men of worth and might, So they returne their fauours; and in these 120 Exalting of the good Seeme to delight. Which she, in glory, lately visiting The Sweete, and pleasant Shores of Cambria, found By an unufuall, and most forward Spring Of comfort, wherewith all things did abound, For iov of the Investiture at hand Of their new Prince; whose Rites, with acts renownd, Were here to be solemniz'd on this Strand: And therefore streight resolues t'adorne the day With her al-gracing presence, and the traine 130 Of I some choice Nymphs, she pleas'd to call away From severall Rivers which they entertaine. And first the louely Nymphe of stately Thames

(The darling of the Ocean) fummond is:
Then those of Trent and Aruns gracefull streames,
Then Darwent next with cleare-wau'd worthinesse.
The beauteous Nymph of Chrystall-streaming Lee
Gives next attendance: then the Nymph of Ayr
With modest motion makes her sweete repaire.
The Nymph of Seuerne follows in degree,
With ample streames of grace: and next to her
The cheerefull Nymph of Rother doth appeare
With comely Medway, th'ornament of Kent:
And then foure goodly Nymphes that beautifie
Cambers faire shores, and all that Continent
The graces of cleare Vske, Olwy, Dulesse, Wy.

All these within the goodly spacious Bay
Of manifold inharboring Milford meete;
The happy Port of Vnion, which gaue way
To that great Hero HENRY, and his fleete,
To make the blest conjunction that begat
O greater, and more glorious far then that.

From hence she sends her deare lou'd Zephirus, To breath out her affection and her zeale To you great Monarch of Oceanus, And to present this Trident as the seale And ensigne of her loue and of your right.

And therewithall she wils him, greete the Lord And Prince of th'Iles (the hope and the delight, Of all the Northerne Nations) with this sword That she vnto Astræa sacred found, And not to be vnsheath'd but on inst ground. Herewith, sayes she, deliner him from mee This skarffe, the zone of Lone and Amitie, T'ingird the same; wherein he may surnay.

140

150

160

Infigur'd all the spacious Emperie That he is borne unto another day. Which, tell him, will be world enough to yeeld All | workes of glory ever can be wrought. Let him not passe the circle of that field, 170 But thinke Alcides pillars are the knot: For there will be within the large extent Of these my waves, and watry Government More treasure, and more certaine riches got Then all the Indies to Iberus brought; For Nereus will by industry unfold A Chimicke secret, and turne fish to gold, This charge she gaue, and lookes with such a cheere As did her comfort and delight bewray, Like cleere Aurora when the doth appeare 180 In brightest roabes to make a glorious day.

The Speech ended, the Naydes daunce about Zephirus and then withdraw them aside; when suddenly, at the found of a loud and fuller mufique, Tethys with her Nymphes appeares, with another Scene, which I will likewise describe in the language of their Architector who contriued it, and speakes in his owne mestier to fuch as are vnderstaders & louers of that defign. First at the opening of the heavens appeared 3 circles of lights and glaffes, one with[in] another, and came 190 downe in a straight motion fiue foote, and then began to mooue circularly: which lights and motion for occupied the eyes of the spectators, that the manner of altering the Scene was scarcely discerned: for in a moment the whole face of it was changed, the Port vanished, and Tethys with her Nymphes appeared in freed of 100m

Seeme of minte.

the top of

and al

in the !

增加值

in this gr

the form

The hea

He a m

Williams

the best

Sant W

nit a diffe

ETTS

of Sea

tin dis

tro 3

trans

FD !

oth

001

191

6

N

their feuerall Cauerns gloriously adorned. This Scene was comparted into 5 Neeces, whereof that in the middest had some slender pillowes of whole round, and were made of moderne architecture in regard of roome: 200 these were of burnisht gold, and bare vp the returnes of an Architraue, Freeze, and Cornish of the same worke: on/which, vpon eyther side was a Plinth, directly ouer the pillers, & on them were placed for finishings, two Dolphins of siluer, with their tailes wreathed together, which supported ouall vases of gold.

Betweene the two pillers on eyther fide were great ornaments of relieuo: the Basement were two huge Whales of siluer. Aboue in an action mounting were two Sea-horses, and aboue them, on each side of Tethys 210 seat was placed a great Trident. The seate or Throne it selfe was raised sixe steps, and all couered with such an artificiall stuffe, as seemed richer by candle, then any cloth of gold. The rests for her arms were two Cherubines of gold: ouer her head was a great skallop of siluer, from which hung the soldes of this rich drapery.

Aboue the Skallop, and round about the fides was a refplendent freeze of iewell glaffes or lights, which shewed like Diamonds, Rubies, Saphires, Emeralds, and fuch like.

The part which returned from the two Plinthes that bare vp the Dolphines, was circular, and made a hollownesse ouer Tethys head, and on this circle were 4 great Chartuses of gold, which bore vp a round bowle of silver, in manner of a fountaine, with mask-heads of gold, out of which ran an artificiall water. On the middest of this was a triangular basement formed of scrowles & leaves, and then a rich Vayle adorned with flutings, and inchased worke, with a freeze of fishes, and a battaile of Tritons, out of whose 230 mouthes, forang water into the Bowle vnderneath. On the top of this was a round globe of gold full of holes, out of which iffued abondance of water, some falling into the receipt below, fome into the Ovall vafe, borne vp by the Dolphines; and indeed there was no place in this great Aqua / tick throne, that was not filled with the sprinckling of these two naturall seeming waters, The Neeces wherein the Ladies fate, were foure, with Pillasters of gold, mingled with rustick stones shewing like a minerall to make it more rocke, and Cauern-like, 240 varying from that of Tethys throne. Equally with the heads of the Pillars was an Architraue of the fame work: aboue was a circular frontispiece, which rose equall with the Bowle of the fountaine forediscribed. On the rustick frontispice lay two great figures in Rileue, which feemed to beare vp a Garland of Sea-weeds: to which from two antick Candlestickes which stood ouer the Pillasters, were hanging Sibells of gold. And these were the finishings of the top of the two Neeces next to that of Tethys. 250

l. 199, = Niches. l. 200, = Pillars.

In the space betweene the frontispice and the Architraue, stood a great Concaue shel, wherein was the head of a Sea-god, and on either side the shell to fill vp the roome, two great mask heads in persile. The other two Neeces which were outermost, were likewise borne vp with Pillasters of gold, and for variation had square frontispices, and against the streight Architraue of the other was an Arch. All these were mingled with rustick, as before.

In the middle betweene the frontispice & the Arch, 260 was a bowle or fountaine made of source great skallops, borne vp by a great maske head, which had likewise source aspects, and lying vpon this Arch (to fill vp the Concaues) were two sigures turned halfe into sishes: these with their heads held vp the sides of the Bowle: about this were three great Cherubines heads, spouting water into the Bowle. On the middest of the square frontispice stood a great vase adorned. The / rest of the ornaments consisted of maske-heads, spouting water, swannes, sestons of maritime weedes, great 270 shels, and such like; and all this whole Scene was silled with the splendor of gold and siluer: onely some beautifull colours behinde to distinguish them, and to set off the rest.

The whole worke came into the forme of a halfe round: there fate three Ladies in each Neece, which made fixe of a fide: the Queene in middeft, and the Lady Elizabeth at her feete.

Now concerning their habite: first their head-tire was composed of shels and corrall, and from a great 280 Muriake shell in forme of the crest of an helme, hung a thin wauing vaile. Their vpper garments had the bodies of sky-colored tassataes for lightnes, all embroidered with maritime inuention: then had they a kinde of halfe skirts of cloth of siluer imbrodered with golde, all the groud work cut out for lightnes, which hung down ful, & cut in points: vnderneath that, came bases (of the same as their bodies) beneath their knee. The long skirt was wrought with lace, waued round about like a Riuer, and on the bankes sedge and Sea-290 weedes, all of gold. Their shouders were all imbrodered with the worke of the short skirt of cloth of siluer, and had cypresse spangled, russed out, and sell in a russe about the Elbow. The vnder sleeues were all imbrodered as the bodies: their shoes were of Satin, richly imbrodered, with the worke of the short skirt.

In this habite they descended out of their Cauernes one after another, and so marched vp with winding meanders like a Riuer, till they came to the Tree of victory; which was a Bay erected at the right side of 300 the state, vpon a little mount there raised; where they offer their / seuerall slowers in golden vrnes which they bare in their hands: whilst a soft musique of twelue Lutes and twelue voyces, which entertained the tune, exprest as a Chorus, their action in this manner.

Was ever howre brought more delight To mortall fight,

Then this, wherein faire Tethys daignes to shew Her, and her Nymphes arow In glory bright?

See how they bring their flowers, From out their watry bowers,

To decke Apollos Tree, The tree of victory.

About whose verdant bowes, They Sacrifice their vowes,

And wish an euerlasting spring Of glory, to the Ocean King.

This fonge and ceremony ended, they fall into their first daunce, after which Tethys withdrawes and reposes 320 her vpon the Mount vnder the tree of victory, entertain'd with Musique and this Song.

310

If ioy had other figure

Then foundes, and wordes, and motion,
To intimate the measure,

And height of our devotion;

This day it had beene show'd.

But what it can, it doth performe,

Since nature hath bestowd

No other letter,

To expresse it better,

Then in this forme;

Our motions, soundes, and wordes,

Tun'd to accordes;

Must shew the well-set partes,

Of our affections and our harts.

After / this Tethys rifes, and with her Nymphes performes her fecond daunce, and then repofes her againe vpon the Mount, entertaind with another fonge.

340

Are they shadowes that we see?
And can shadowes pleasure give?
Pleasures onely shadowes bee
Cast by bodies we conceive,
And are made the thinges we deeme,
In those sigures which they seeme.
But these pleasures vanish fast,
Which by shadowes are exprest:
Pleasures are not, if they last,
In their passing, is their best.
Glory is most bright and gay
In a stash, and so away.

350

Feed apace then greedy eyes
On the wonder you behold.
Take it sodaine as it flies
Though you take it not to hold:
When your eyes have done their part,
Thought must length it in the hart.

After this Songe Tethys againe rifes, and with her Nymphes, taketh out the Lordes to daunce their 360 Meafures, Corantos and Galliardes; which done, they fall into their third and retyring daunce, wherewith they returne againe into their feuerall Cauernes, and fodainely vanish. When to avoid the confusion which vsually attendeth the desolue of these shewes; and when all was thought to be finisht, followed another entertainment, and was a third shew no lesse delightfull then the rest, whose introduction was thus.

Zephirus marching a certaine space after Tethys and her Nymphes, attended with his Tritons, a sodaine 370 flash of lightning causes them to stay, and Triton deliuereth this speech.

Behold, | the Post of heaven, bright Mercury
Is sent to sommon and recall againe,
Imperial Tethys with her company,
Vnto her watry Mansion in the maine:
And shift these formes, wherein her power did daigne
T'inuest her selfe and hers, and to restore
Them to themselves, whose beauteous shapes they wore.

And then bowing himselfe towardes the State, 380 craueth their stay, and prepareth them, to the expectation of a returne of the Queene and her Ladies in their formes, with these wordes.

And now bright Starre the Guidon of this state,
And you great Peeres the ornaments of power,
With all these glittering troupes that have the fate,
To be spectators of this blessed houre.
Be pleased to sit a while, and you shall see
A transformation of farre more delight,
And apter drawne to nature, then can be
Discrib'd in an imaginary sight.

390

Triton having ended his fpeech, Mercury most artificially, and in an exquisite posture descends, and sommons the Duke of Yorke, and six yong Noblemen to attend him, and bring backe the Queene and her Ladies in their owne forme, directing him to the place where to finde them; with this speech.

Faire branch of power, in whose sweete feature here
Milde Zephirus a figure did present
Of youth and of the spring-time of the yeare;
I sommon you, and six of high descent
T'attend on you (as hopefull worthyes borne
To shield the Honour and the cleare Renowne
Of Ladies) that you presently returne
And bring backe those, in whose faire shapes were showne
The late-seene Nymphes in figures of their owne;
Whom you shall finde hard by within a groue
And Garden of the spring addrest to some.

Hereupon the Duke of Yorke with his attendants departing to performe this feruice, the lowde Mufique foundes, and fodainely appeares the Queenes Maiefty in a most pleasant and artificiall Groue; which was the third Scene, and from thence they march vp to the King conducted by the Duke of Yorke, and the Noblemen, in a very stately manner.

And in all these shewes, this is to be noted, that there were none of inseriour fort, mixed amongst these great Personages of State and Honour (as vsually there have beene) but all was performed by themselves with a due reservation of their dignity. And for those two 420 which did Personate the Tritons, they were Gentlemen knowne of good worth and respect. The introducing of Pages with torches, might have added more splendor, but yet they would have pestred the roome; which the season would not well permit.

And thus haue I deliuered the whole forme of this shew, and expose it to the censure of those who make it their best show, to seeme to know: with this Postscript.

Prætulerim scriptor delirus inersque videri Dum mea delectant mala me, vel denique fallant, Quam sapere & ringi. 430

S. D./

VI.

HYMENS TRIUMPH.

1615.

NOTE.

The original edition of 'Hymens Triumph' was published in 1615. The title-page is as follows:—

HYMENS TRI-VMPH.

A Pastorall Tragicomædie.

Prefented at the Queenes Court in the Strand at her Maiesties magnificent entertainement of the Kings most excellent Maiestie, being at the Nuptials of the Lord Roxborough.

By Samvel Daniel.

Hinc . Lucem . Pocula . Sacra.

LONDON

Imprinted for Francis Constable, and are to bee fold at his shop in Pauls Church-yard at the signe of the white Lyon. 1615 [12°].

A beautiful exemplar is in the British Museum (C. 39. a. 41). Our text (4to, 1623) has only slight variations in orthography. It corrects the 'errata' noted at end of 'except one which it mis-corrects by 'loweneffe' for 'loueneffe' corrected by the Author into 'loneneffe.' At 1. 30 (p. 336) I have altered 'fave' into 'fafe,' and 1. 44 (ibid.) 'thinks' into 'things'—and so elsewhere obvious misprints are corrected. Opposite is title-page of our exemplar and text,

HYMENS

TRIVMPH.

A Pastorall Tragicomædie.

Presented at the Queenes Court in the Strand, at her Maiesties magnificent entertainement of the Kings most excellent Maiesty, being at the Nuptials of the Lord Roxborough.

By SAMVEL DANIEL.

LONDON,

Printed by Nicholas Okes for Simon Waterson.
1623.

TO THE MOST EXCELlent Maiesty of the Highest-borne

Princesse, Anne of Denmarke, Queene of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland.

Ere, what your facred influence begat (Most lou'd, and most respected Maiesty)

With humble heart, and hand, I confecrate

Vnto the glory of your memory:
As being a piece of that folemnity, 10
Which your Magnificence did celebrate

In hallowing of those rooses (you rear'd of late)
With fires and chearefull hospitality;
Whereby, and by your splendent Worthines,
Your name shall longer live then shall your walls:
For, that faire structure goodnesse sinishes,
Beares off all change of times, and never falls.
And that is it hath let you in so farre
Into the heart of England as you are.

And worthily; for neuer vet was Oueene 20 That more a peoples loue haue merited By all good graces, and by hauing beene The meanes our State stands fast established And bleft by your bleft wombe: who are this day The highest-borne Queene of Europe, and alone Haue brought this land more bleffings every way. Then all the daughters of strange Kings have done. For, / we by you no claimes, no quarrells have. No factions, no betraying of affaires: You do not spend our blood, nor states, but saue: 30 You strength vs by alliance, and your haires. Not like those fatall marriages of France, For whom this Kingdome hath fo dearely paid, Which onely our afflictions did advance: And brought vs farre more miferies, then aid. Renowned Denmarke, that hast furnished The world with Princes, how much do we owe To thee for this great good thou didft bestow, Whereby we are both bleft, and honoured? Thou didft not so much hurt vs heretofore. 40 But now thou hast rewarded vs farre more. But what do I on this high subject fall Here, in the front of this low Pastorall?

Your Maiesties most

This a more graue, and fpacious roome requires To fhew your glory, and my deepe defires.

Humble Seruant,

SAM. DANIEL. 48

The Prologue.

Hymen opposed by Auarice, Enuy, and Iealousie, the disturbers of quiet marriage, first enters.

Hymen.

IN this disguise and Pastorall attire,
Without my saffron robe, without my torch,
Or other ensignes of my duty:
I Hymen am come hither secretly,
To make Arcadia see a worke of glory,
That shall deserve an everlasting story.

Here, shall I bring you two the most entire And constant louers that were ever seene, From out the greatest suffrings of anoy That fortune could instict, to their full ioy: Wherein no wild, no rude, no antique sport, But tender passions, motions soft, and grave, The still spectators must expect to have.

For, these are onely Cynthias recreatives
Made vnto Phœbus, and are feminine;
And therefore must be gentle like to her,
Whose sweet affections mildely moove and stirre.

20

· IO

And here, with this white wand, will I effect As much, as with my flaming torch of Loue: And with the power thereof, affections moone In these faire nymphes, and shepheards round about.

Enuy. Stay Hymen, stay; you shall not have the day Of this great glory, as you make account:
We will herein, as we were ever wont,
Oppose you in the matches you addresse,
And undermine them with disturbances.

Hym. Now, do thy worst, base Enuy, thou canst do, Thou shalt not disappoint my purposes.

Auarice. Then will I, Hymen, in despite of thee, I will make Parents crosse desires of love, With those respects of wealth, as shall dissolve The strongest knots of kindest faithfulnesse.

Hym. Hence, greedy Auarice; I know thou art A hagge, that do'st bewitch the mindes of men: Yet shalt thou have no [part] at all herein.

Ieal. Then will I, Hymen, do thou what thou canst; 40 I will steale closely into linked hearts; And shake their veines with cold distrustfulnesse; And ever keepe them waking in their feares, With spirits, which their imagination reares.

Hym. Disquiet Iealousie, vile fury, thou
That art the ougly monster of the mind,
Auant, be gone! thou shalt have nought to do
In this faire worke of ours, nor evermore
Canst enter there, where honour keepes the doore.

And therefore hideous furies, get you hence, This place is facred to integrity, And cleane defires: your fight most loathsome is Vnto so well dispos'd a company. 50

Therefore be gone, I charge you by my powre,
We must have nothing in Arcadia, sowre.
Enuy. Hymen, thou canst not chase us so away,
For, looke how long as thou maks the marriages,
So long will we produce incumbrances.
And we will in the same disguise, as thou,
Mixe us amongst the shepheards, that we may

Effect our worke the better, being unknowne;
For, ills shew other faces then their owne.

The Speakers.

THIRSIS.

PALEMON, friend to Thirfis.

CLARINDO, SILUIA difguifed, the beloued of Thirfis, fupposed to be flaine by wild beafts.

CLORIS, a Nymph whom Clarindo ferued, and in loue with Thirfis.

PHILLIS, in loue with Clarindo.

MONTANUS, in loue with Phillis.

Lydia, Nurse to Phillis.

Dorcas. Forresters.

SILUANUS. FORFICEIS.

MEDORUS, father to Siluia. CHARINUS, father to Thirfis.

Chorus of Shepheards.

ACTVS. I. SCENA. I.

Thirsis. Palæmon.

O to be reft of all the ioyes of life,
How is it possible Palæmon, I
Should euer more a thought retaine
Of the least comfort vpon earth
againe?

No, I would hate this heart, that hath receiu'd [come So deepe a wound, if it should ever

To be recur'd, or would permit a roome

To let in any other thing then griefe.

Pal. But Thirsis you must tell me what is the cause?

Thi. Thinke but what cause I have; when having pass defined.

The heates, the colds, the trembling agonies
Of feares, and hopes, and all the strange assaults
Of passion, that a tender heart could feele
In the attempt, and pursuite of his loue:
And then to be vndone, when all was done:

To perish in the hauen, after all Those Ocean suffrings, and euen then to haue My hopefull Nuptiall bed, turn'd to a graue.

y hopefull Nuptiall bed, turn'd to a graue. 20

Pal. Good Thirs by what meanes, I pray thee tell.

30

Thi. Tell thee? alas Palamon, how can I tell And liue? doest thou not see these fields have lost Their glory, since that time Siluia was lost? Siluia, that onely deckt, that onely made

Arcadia shine; Siluia who was (ah woe the while) So miserable rent from off the world,

So rapt away, as that no figne of her,
No peece was left to tell vs by what meanes:
Save onely this poore remnant of her vaile.

Save onely this poore remnant of her vaile,
All torne, and this deere locke of her rent haire;

Which holy reliques here I keepe with me,
The fad memorialls of her difmall fate.

Who fure deuoured was vpon the shore

By rauenous beafts, as fhe was walking there Alone, it feemes; perhaps in feeking me,

Or els retir'd to meditate apart

The ftory of our loues, and heavy fmart.

Pal. This is no newes, you tell, of Silvias death.

That was long fince: why should you waile her now? 40

This. Long since Palæmon? thinke you any length

Of time can euer haue a powre to make

A heart of flesh not mourne, not grieue, not pine? That knows, that feels, that thinks as much as mine.

Pal. But Thirsis, you know how her father meant To match her with Alexis, and a day To celebrate the nuptials was prefixt.

Thi. True, he had fuch a purpose, but in vaine, As oh it was best knowne vnto vs twaine.

And hence it grew that gaue vs both our feares, 50 That made our meeting stealth, our parting teares. Hence was it, that with many a fecret wile, We rob'd our lookes th'onlookers to beguile. This was the cause, oh miserable cause. That made her by her felfe to stray alone, Which els God knows, she neuer should have done. For had our liberty as open beene. As was our loues, Siluia had not beene feene VVithout her Thirsis, neuer had we gone But hand in hand, nor euer had mischance Tooke vs afunder; she had alwayes had My body interpof'd betwixt all harmes And her. But ah we had our liberty Layd fast in prison when our loues were free. Pal. But how knowst thou her love was such to thee?

Thi. How do I know the Sun, the day from night?

Pal. Womens affections do like flashes proue,

They oft shew passion when they feele small loue.

Thi. Ah do not so prophane that precious sexe,
Which I must euer reuerence for her sake,
Who was the glory of her kind; whose heart
In all her actions so transparant was
As I might see it cleere and wholy mine

As I might fee it cleere and wholy mine,
Alwayes obseruing truth in one right line.

How oft hath she beene vrg'd by fathers threats,
By friends perswasions, and Alexis sighs,
And teares and prayers, to admit his loue,
Yet neuer could be wonne! how oft haue I
Beheld the brauest heardsmen of these plaines,
(As what braue heardsman was there in the plaines 80

22

III.

The Speakers.

THIRSIS.

PALÆMON, friend to Thirfis.

CLARINDO, SILUIA difguifed, the beloued of Thirfis, fupposed to be flaine by wild beafts.

CLORIS, a Nymph whom Clarindo ferued, and in loue with Thirfis.

PHILLIS, in loue with Clarindo.

MONTANUS, in loue with Phillis.

Lydia, Nurse to Phillis.

DORCAS. Forresters.

MEDORUS, father to Siluia.

CHARINUS, father to Thirfis.

Chorus of Shepheards.

ACTVS. I. SCENA. I.

Thirsis. Palæmon.

O to be reft of all the ioyes of life,
How is it possible Palæmon, I
Should euer more a thought retaine
Of the least comfort vpon earth
againe?

No, I would hate this heart, that hath receiv'd [come So deepe a wound, if it should ever

To be recur'd, or would permit a roome To let in any other thing then griefe.

Pal. But Thirfis you must tell me what is the cause?
Thi. Thinke but what cause I have; when having pass'd

The heates, the colds, the trembling agonies Of feares, and hopes, and all the strange assaults Of passion, that a tender heart could feele In the attempt, and pursuite of his loue:

And then to be vndone, when all was done;

To perish in the hauen, after all Those Ocean suffrings, and euen then to haue My hopefull Nuptiall bed, turn'd to a graue.

20

Pal. Good Thirsis by what meanes, I pray thee tell. Thi. Tell thee? alas Palæmon, how can I tell And liue? doest thou not see these fields have lost Their glory, fince that time Siluia was lost? Siluia, that onely deckt, that onely made Arcadia shine; Siluia who was (ah woe the while) So miserable rent from off the world, So rapt away, as that no figne of her, No peece was left to tell vs by what meanes: Save onely this poore remnant of her vaile. 30 All torne, and this deere locke of her rent haire: Which holy reliques here I keepe with me. The fad memorialls of her difmall fate. Who fure deuoured was vpon the shore By rauenous beafts, as fhe was walking there Alone, it feemes; perhaps in feeking me, Or els retir'd to meditate apart

The ftory of our loues, and heavy fmart.

Pal. This is no newes, you tell, of Silvias death.

That was long fince: why fhould you waile her now? 40

Thi. Long fince Palæmon? thinke you any length

Of time can ever have a powre to make

A heart of flesh not mourne, not grieve, not pine?

That knows, that feels, that thinks as much as mine.

Pal. But Thirsis, you know how her father meant To match her with Alexis, and a day To celebrate the nuptials was prefixt.

Thi. True, he had fuch a purpose, but in vaine, As oh it was best knowne vnto vs twaine.

And hence it grew that gaue vs both our feares, 50 That made our meeting stealth, our parting teares. Hence was it, that with many a fecret wile, We rob'd our lookes th'onlookers to beguile. This was the cause, oh miserable cause. That made her by her felfe to ftray alone, Which els God knows, she neuer should have done. For had our liberty as open beene, As was our loues, Siluia had not beene seene VVithout her Thirfis, neuer had we gone But hand in hand, nor eyer had mischance 60 Tooke vs afunder; fhe had alwayes had My body interpof'd betwixt all harmes And her. But ah we had our liberty Layd fast in prison when our loues were free. Pal. But how knowst thou her love was such to thee?

Thi. How do I know the Sun, the day from night? Pal. Womens affections do like flashes proue, They oft shew passion when they feele small loue.

Thi. Ah do not so prophane that precious fexe, Which I must euer reuerence for her sake, 70 Who was the glory of her kind; whose heart In all her actions fo transparant was As I might see it cleere and wholy mine, Alwayes obseruing truth in one right line.

How oft hath she beene vrg'd by fathers threats, By friends perfwafions, and Alexis fighs, And teares and prayers, to admit his loue, Yet neuer could be wonne! how oft haue I Beheld the brauest heardsmen of these plaines, (As what braue heardsman was there in the plaines 80

III. 22 Of all Arcadia, that had not his heart Warm'd with her beames) to feeke to win her loue!

Ah I remember well (and how can I But euer more remember well) when first Our flame began, when scarce we knew what was The flame we felt, when as we fate and figh'd And look'd vpon each other, and conceiu'd Not what we ayld; yet fomething we did ayle, And yet were well, and yet we were not well: And what was our difease we could not tell. Then would we kiffe, then figh, then looke: and thus In that first garden of our simplenesse We fpent our child-hood: but when yeeres began To reape the fruite of knowledge; ah how then Would she with grauer looks, with sweet stern brow Check my prefumption and my forwardnes; Yet still would give me flowers, stil would me shew What she would have me, yet not have me know.

Pal. Alas with what poore Coyne are louers paid, And taken with the fmallest bayte is laid? 100

Thi. And when in fport with other company,
Of Nimphes and shepheards we have met abroade
How would she steale a looke: and watch mine eye
Which way it went? and when at Barley breake
It came vnto my turne to rescue her,
With what an earnest, swift, and nimble pace
Would her affection make her feet to run,
Nor farther run then to my hand? her race
Had no stop but my bosome, where no end.
And when we were to breake againe, how late
And loath her trembling hand wold part with mine,
And with how slow a pace would she set forth

To meet the 'ncountring party, who contends T'attaine her, scarce affording him her fingers ends?

Pal. Fie Thirsis, with what fond remembrances
Doest thou these idle passions entertaine?
For shame, leave off to wast your youth in vaine,
And seede on shadowes: make your choice anew.
You other Nimphes shall find, no doubt will be
As louely, and as faire, and sweete as she.

Thi. As faire and fweete as she? Palæmon peace: Ah what can pictures be vnto the life? What sweetnes can be found in Images? Which all Nimphes els besides her seemes to me. She only was a reall creature, she, VVhose memory must take vp all of me. Should I another love, then must I have, Another heart, for this is full of her, And euermore shall be: here is she drawne At length, and whole, and more, this table is 130 A ftory, and is all of her; and all Wrought in the livelieft colours of my blood: And can there be a roome for others heere? Should I disfigure fuch a peece, and blot The perfectft workmanship that love ever wrought? Palæmon no, ah no, it cost too deere, It must remaine intire whilst life remaines, The monument of her and of my paines.

Pal. Thou maiest be such a fond Idolater
To die for loue; though that were very strange.
Loue hath sew Saints, but many confessors.
And time no doubt will raze out all these notes,
And leaue a roome at length for other thoughts.

Thi. Yes, when there is no fpring, no tree, no groue

In all Arcadia to record our loue:
And tell me where we were (the time we were)
How we did meete together, what we faid,
Where we did ioy, and where we fat difmai'd;
And then I may forget her, not before.
Till then I must remember one so deere,
When every thing I see tells me of her.
And you deere Reliques of that martred Saint,
My heart adores, you the perpetuall bookes
Whereon when teares permit, mine eyes still looks:
Ah you were with her last, and till my last
You must remaine with me; you were reserved
To tell me she was lost, but yet alas,
You cannot tell me how: I would you could:

White spotlesse vaile, cleane, like her womanhood, Which whilome couerdst the most louely face 160 That euer eye beheld. VVas there no message sent From her by thee? Ah yes, there seemes it was; Here is a T made with her blood, as if Shee would have written, Thirsis, I am slaine In seeking thee; sure so it should have beene, And so I reade it, and shall ever so.

And thou fweet remnant of the fairest haire, That ever wau'd with winde! Ah thee I found When her I hop'd to finde, wrapt in a round, Like to an O, the character of woe; As if to fay, O Thirsis, I die thine. This much you tell me yet, dumbe messengers, Of her last minde; and what you cannot tell That I must thinke, which is the most extreame Of wosulnesse, that any heart can thinke.

Pal. There is no dealing with this man, I see.

This humour must be let to spend it selse
Vnto a lesser substance, ere that we
Can any way apply a remedy.
But I lament his case, and so I know
Do all that see him in this wosull plight:
And therefore will I leave him to himselse,
For sorrow that is sull, hates others sight.

Thir. Come boy, whilst I contemplate these remaines

Thir. Come boy, whilft I contemplate thele remaines Of my loft loue, vnder this myrtle tree, Record the dolefull'st fong, the fighingst notes, That musicke hath to entertaine bad thoughts. Let it be all at flats my boy, all graue, The tone that best besits the griefe I haue.

The Song. 190

Had forrow euer fitter place

To alt his part,
Then is my heart,
Where it takes up all the space?
Where is no veine
To entertaine
A thought that weares another face.
Nor will I forrow euer haue,
Therein to be,
But onely thee,
To whom I full possession gaue:
Thou in thy name

Thir. So boy, now leave me to my felfe, that I May be alone to griefe, entire to mifery.

Must holde the same, Vntill thou bring it to the graue.

1. 205, 'Pal.' wrongly prefixed here in 4to of 1623.

SCEN. II.

Cloris.

Clarindo.

TOw gentle boy Clarindo, hast thou brought My flockes into the field? 210 Cla. Mistris I haue. Clo. And hast thou told them? Cla. Yes. Clo. And are there all? Cla. All. Clo. And hast thou left them safe my boy? Cla. Safe. Clo. Then whilft they feede, Clarindo, I must vse Thy feruice in a ferious businesse; But thou must doe it well my boy. 220 Cla. The best I can. Clo. Do'ft thou know Thirfis? Cla. Yes. Clo. But know'st him well? Cla. I have good reason to know Thirsis well. Clo. What reason boy? Cla. I oft have feene the man. Clo. Why then he knowes thee too? Cla. Yes I suppose, vnlesse he hath forgotten me of late. Clo. But hath he heard thee fing my boy? 230 Cla. He hath. Clo. Then doubtles he doth well remember thee. Well, vnto him thou must a message do From thy fad miftres Cloris; but thou must Doe it exactly well, with thy best grace,

Best choice of language, and best countenance.

I know thou canst doe well, and hast a speech And fashion pleasing to performe the same. Nor can I haue a fitter messenger In this imployment then thy felfe my boy. 240 For fure me thinkes, noting thy forme and grace, That thou hast much of Siluia in thy face: Which if he shall perceive as well as I, Sure, he will give thee audience willinglie. And for her fake, if not for mine, heare out Thy message; for he still (though she be dead) Holds sparkles of her vnextinguished. And that is death to me: for though fometimes Siluia and I most deere companions were, Yet when I faw he did fo much preferre 250 Her before me, I deadly hated her: And was not forry for her death, and yet Was forry she should come to such a death. But to the purpose: goe to Thirsis, boy: Say, thou art Cloris feruant, fent to be The messenger of her distressed teares: Who languishes for him, and neuer shall

Cla. I will.

Clo. Nay but ftay boy, ther's fomething elfe: 260
Tell him, his cruelty makes me vndoe
My modefty, and to put on that part
Which appertaines to him, that is to wooe:
And to difgrace my Sexe, to fhew my heart,
Which no man elfe could have had powre to doe.
And that vnleffe he doe reftore me backe
Vnto my felfe, by his like love to me,
I cannot live.

Haue comfort more, vnlesse he giue it her.

Cla. All this I'le tell him too.

Clo. Nay but ftay boy, there is yet more: 270
Tell him, it will no honour be to him,
When euer it fhall come to be made knowne,
That he hath beene her death that was his owne.
And how his loue hath fatall beene to two Diftreffed Nymphes.

Cla. This will I tell him too.

Clo. Nay but stay boy, wilt thou say nothing else?
As of thy selse, to waken up his loue?
Thou mayst say something which I may not say,
And tell him how thou holdst me sull as faire,
280
Yea and more saire, more louely, more compleate
Then euer Siluia was; more wise, more staid:
How shee was but a light and wauering maid.

Cla. Nay there I leave you, that I cannot fay.

Clo. What fayft thou boy?

Cla. Nothing, but that I will Endeauour all I can to worke his loue.

Clo. Doe good my boy: but thou must yet adde more,
As from thy selfe, and say, what an vnkind
And barbarous part it is to suffer thus 290
So beauteous and so rare a Nymph to pine
And perish for his loue; and such a one,
As if shee would have stoop'd to others slame,
Hath had the gallantst heardsmen of these fields
Fall at her seete: all which she hath despis'd,
Having her heart before by thee surpriz'd;
And now doth nothing else, but sit and mourne,
Speake Thirsis, weepe Thirsis, sigh Thirsis, and Sleepe Thirsis when she sleepes, which is but rare.
Besides, good boy thou must not sticke to sweare,

Thou oft hast seene me sowne, and sinke to ground In these deepe passions, wherein I abound. For something thou maist say beyond the truth, By reason of my loue, and of thy youth:

Doe, good Clarindo sweare, and yow thus much.
But do'st thou now remember all I say,
Do'st thou forget no parcell of my speech,
Shall I repeate the same againe to thee?
Or els wilt thou rehearse it vnto mee?
That I may know thou hast it perfect, boy.

Cla. It shall not need: be sure I will report, What you enioune me, in most earnest fort.

Clo. Ah doe good boy. Although I feare it will, Auaile me little: for I doubt his heart Is repossessed with another loue.

Cla. Another loue? Who may that be, I pray?
Clo. With Amarillis, I have heard: for they
'Tis thought, will in the end make vp a match.

Cla. With Amarillis? Well, yet will I goe, And try his humour whether it be so?

And try his humour whether it be so?

Clo. Goe good Clarindo, but thou must not faile

To worke effectually for my auaile.

And doe not stay, returne with speed good boy,

My passions are to great, t'indure delay.

ACT. I. SCEN, III.

Clarindo folus.

Thirs in love with Amarillis? then
In what a case am I? what doth availe,
This altred habite, that belies my Sexe?
What boots it t'have escap'd from Pirats hands

Cla. All this I'le tell him too.

Clo. Nay but ftay boy, there is yet more: 270
Tell him, it will no honour be to him,
When euer it shall come to be made knowne,
That he hath beene her death that was his owne.
And how his loue hath fatall beene to two Diftressed Nymphes.

Cla. This will I tell him too.

Clo. Nay but stay boy, wilt thou say nothing else?
As of thy selfe, to waken up his loue?
Thou mayst say something which I may not say,
And tell him how thou holdst me full as faire,
280
Yea and more faire, more louely, more compleate
Then euer Siluia was; more wise, more stai'd:
How shee was but a light and wavering maid.

Cla. Nay there I leave you, that I cannot fay.

Clo. What fayft thou boy?

Cla. Nothing, but that I will

Endeauour all I can to worke his loue.

Clo. Doe good my boy: but thou must yet adde more, As from thy selfe, and say, what an vnkind And barbarous part it is to suffer thus 290 So beauteous and so rare a Nymph to pine And perish for his loue; and such a one, As if shee would have stoop'd to others slame, Hath had the gallantst heardsmen of these fields Fall at her seete: all which she hath despised, Hauing her heart before by thee surprized; And now doth nothing else, but sit and mourne, Speake Thirsis, weepe Thirsis, sigh Thirsis, and Sleepe Thirsis when she sleepes, which is but rare. Besides, good boy thou must not sticke to sweare, 300

320

330

Thou oft hast seene me sowne, and sinke to ground In these deepe passions, wherein I abound. For something thou maist say beyond the truth, By reason of my loue, and of thy youth:

Doe, good Clarindo sweare, and vow thus much.
But do'st thou now remember all I say,
Do'st thou forget no parcell of my speech,
Shall I repeate the same againe to thee?
Or els wilt thou rehearse it vnto mee?
That I may know thou hast it perfect, boy.

Cla. It shall not need: be fure I will report, What you enioune me, in most earnest fort.

Clo. Ah doe good boy. Although I feare it will, Auaile me little: for I doubt his heart Is repossessed with another loue.

Cla. Another loue? Who may that be, I pray? Clo. With Amarillis, I have heard: for they 'Tis thought, will in the end make vp a match.

Cla. With Amarillis? Well, yet will I goe, And try his humour whether it be so?

Clo. Goe good Clarindo, but thou must not saile To worke effectually for my auaile.
And doe not stay, returne with speed good boy, My passions are to great, t'indure delay.

ACT. I. SCEN. III.

Clarindo Solus.

Thirs in love with Amarillis? then
In what a case am I? what doth availe,
This altred habite, that belies my Sexe?
What boots it t'have escap'd from Pirats hands

And with fuch wiles to have deceiu'd their wills, If I returne to fall on worfer ills? In loue with Amarillis? is that fo? Is Siluia then forgot? that hath endur'd So much for him? doe all these miseries (Cauf'd by his meanes) deferue no better hire? VVas it the greatest comfort of my life. To have return'd, that I might comfort him? And am I welcom'd thus? ah did mine eyes Take neuer reft, after I was arriu'd Till I had feene him, though vnknowne to him? Being hidden thus, and couer'd with disguise Of masculine attire, to temporize Vntill Alexis mariage day be past, VVhich shortly as I heare will be: and which VVould free me wholly from my fathers feare: VVho if he knew I were return'd, would vet Vndoe I doubt that match, to match me there; Which would be more then all my fuffrings were. Indeed me thought when I beheld the face

340

Indeed me thought when I beheld the face
Of my deere Thirs, I beheld a face
Confounded all with passion, which did much
Afflict my heart: but yet I little thought
It could have beene for any others love.
I did suppose the memory of me,
And of my rapture, had possest him so,
As made him shew that countenance of woe.
And much adoe had I then to forbeare
From casting me into his armes, and yeild
What comfort my poore selse could yeild, but that 360
I thought our ioyes would not have bin complete,
But might have yeilded vs anoyes as great,

Vnlesse I could come wholly his, and cleer'd From all those former dangers which we fear'd: Which now a little stay (though any stay Be death to me) would wholly take away.

And therefore I refolu'd my felfe to beare This burthen of our fufferings yet a while, And to become a feruant in this guife, To her I would have fcorned otherwife: And be at all commands, to goe, and come, To trudge into the fields, early, and late; Which though I know, it misbecomes my state, Yet it becomes my fortune, which is that, Not Phillis, whom I ferue: but fince I ferue, I will doe what I doe most faithfully.

But Thirsis, is it possible that thou Shouldst so forget me, and sorgee thy vow? Or is it but a flying vaine report, That slanders thine affection in this fort? It may be so, and God grant it be so: I shall soone finde if thou be false or no: But ah here comes my Fury, I must flie.

380

370

ACT. I. SCEN, IIII.

Phillis. Clarindo.

A H cruell youth, whither away so fast?

Cla. Good Phillis do not stay me, I have hast.

Phi. What hast shoudst thou have but to comfort me,
Who hath no other comfort but in thee?

Cla. Alas thou do'st but trouble me in vaine, 390 I cannot helpe thee: t'is not in my powre.

Phil. Not in thy powre Clarindo? ah if thou Hadst any thing of manlines, thou wouldst.

Cla. But if I have not, what doth it availe In this fort to torment thy felfe and me? And therefore pre-thee Phillis, let me goe.

Phil. Ah whither canst thou go, where thou shalt be More deerely lou'd and cherisht then with me?

400

Cla. But that my purpose cannot satisfie,

I must be gone, there is no remedie.

Phi. O cruell youth, will thy heart nothing moue? Shew me yet pittie, if thou shew not loue.

Cla. Beleeue me Phillis I doe pittie thee; And more, lament thy error, so farewell.

Phi. And art thou gone hard-hearted youth? haft thou Thus disappointed my desires, and let My shame t'afflict me worser then my loue? Now in what case am I, that neither can Recall my modestie, nor thee againe?

Ah were it now to do againe, my passions should 410 Haue smothred me to death, before I would Haue shew'd the smallest sparkle of my slame:
But it is done, and I am now vndone.

Ah hadft thou beene a man, and had that part
Of vnderstanding of a womans heart,
My words had beene vnborne, onely mine eies
Had beene a tongue enough to one were wife.
But this it is, to loue a boy, whose yeares
Conceiues not his owne good, nor weighes my teares:
But this disgrace I iustly haue deseru'd.

420

SCEN. V.

Lidia. Phillis.

So Phillis haue you, and y'are rightly feru'd.

Haue you disdain'd the gallanst Forresters,
And brauest heardsmen all Arcadia hath,
And now in loue with one is not a man?

Assure your selfe this is a just reuenge
Loue takes, for your misprission of his powre.

I told you often there would come a time,
When you would sure be plagu'd for such a crime: 430

But you would laugh at me, as one you thought
Conceiu'd not of what mettall you were wrought.

Is this you, who would wonder any nimphes Could euer be fo foolish as to loue?
Who is so foolish now?

Phil. Peace Lidia, peace,
Adde not more griefe t'a heart that hath too much:
Do not infult vpon her mifery,
VVhofe flame, God wot, needs water, and not oyle.
Thou feeft I am vndone, caught in the toyle
Of an intangling mischiefe: tell me how
I may recouer, and vnwinde me now.

Lid. That doth require more time; we wil apart Confult thereof, be you but rul'd by me,
And you shall finde, I, yet, will set you free. Exeunt.

The fong of the first Chorus.

Loue is a ficknesse full of woes,
All remedies refusing:
A plant that with most cutting growes,
Most barren with best vsing.
Why so?

More we enioy it, more it dyes, If not enioy'd, it fighing cries, Hey ho.

Loue is a torment of the minde,
A tempest everlasting;
And Ioue hath made it of a kinde,
Not well, nor full nor fasting.
Why so?

More we enioy it, more it dies If not enioyd, it fighing cries, Hey ho.

460

ACT. II. SCEN. I.

Siluanus. Dorcas. Montanus.

In what a meane regard are we now held,
We active and laborious forresters?
Who though our living rurall be and rough,
Yet heretofore were we for valour priz'd,
And well esteem'd in all good companies:
Nor would the daintiest nymphs that vallyes haunt
Or fields inhabite, ever have despis'd
Our silvane songs, nor yet our plaine discourse;
But gracefully accepted of our skill,
And often of our loves, when they have seene
How faithfull and how constant we have beene.

Dor. It's true Siluanus, but you fee the times Are altred now, and they fo dainty growne, By being ador'd, and woo'd, and followed fo Of those vnsinowed amorous heardsmen, who By reason of their rich and mighty flockes, Supply their pleasures with that plenteousnesse,

As they disdaine our plainnesse, and do scorne Our company, as men rude and ill borne.

Sil. Well, fo they doe; but Dorcas if you marke How oft they doe miscarry in their loue, And how difloyall these fine heardsmen prooue: You shall perceive how their aboundant store Payes not their expectation, nor defires. Witnesse these groues wherein they oft deplore The miserable passions they sustaine; And how perfidious, wayward, and vnkinde, 490 They finde their loues to be; which we, who are The eyes, and eares of woods, oft fee and heare. For hither to these groues they must resort, And here one wayles apart the vlage hard Of her disordred, wilde, and wilfull mate: There mournes another her vnhappy state. Held euer in restraint, and in suspect: Another to her trusty confident, Laments how she is matcht to such a one As cannot giue a woman her content. 500 Another grieues how shee hath got a foole, Whose bed, although she loath, she must endure, And thus they all vnhappy by that meanes Which they accompt would bring all happinesse; Most wealthely are plagu'd, with rich distresse.

Dor. And so they are, but yet this was not wont
To be the fashion here; there was a time
Before Arcadia came to be diseas'd
With these corrupted humours reigning now,
That choise was made of vertue and desert,
Without respect of any other endes:
When loue was onely master of their hearts,

And rul'd alone: when simple thoughts produc'd Plaine honest deedes, and euery one contends
To have his fame to follow his deserts,
And not his shewes; to be the same he was,
Not seem'd to be: and then were no such parts
Of false deceivings plaid, as now we see.

But after that accurfed greedinesse Of wealth began to enter and possesse The hearts of men, integritie was loft, And with it they themselues, for neuer more Came they to be in their owne powre againe. That Tyrant vanquisht them, made them all slaues, That brought base seruitude into the world, Which elfe had neuer bin; that onely made Them to endure all whatfoeuer weights Powre could deuise to lay vpon their necke. For rather then they would not have, they would not be But miferable. So that no deuice 530 Needes elfe to keepe them under, they themselues Will beare farre more then they are made; themselves VVill adde vnto their fetters, rather then They would not be, or held to be great men.

Sil. Then Dorcas, how much more are we to prize
Our meane estate, which they so much despise?
Considering that we doe enioy thereby,
The dearest thing in nature, Liberty.
And are not tortur'd with those hopes and seares,— Th'affliction layd on superfluities,— 540
VVhich make them to obscure, and serue the times:
But are content with what the earth, the woods
And rivers neere doe readily afforde
And therewithall furnish our homely borde.

560

570

Those vnbought cates please our vnlearned throats
That vnderstand not dainties, euen as well
As all their delicates, which doe but stuffe
And not sustaine the stomacke: and indeede
A wel observing belly doth make much
For liberty; for hee that can but liue,
550
Although with rootes, and haue no hopes, is free
Without the verge of any sou'rainty;
And is a Lord at home, commands the day
As his till night, and then reposes him
At his owne houres; thinkes on no stratagem
But how to take his game, hath no designe
To crosse next day; no plots to vndermine.

Dor. But why Montanus do you looke so sad?

What is the cause your minde is not as free
As your estate? what, have you had of late
Some coy repulse of your distainfull nymph,
To whom love hath subdu'd you? who indeede
Our onely master is, and no Lord else
But he, hath any power to vexe vs here;
Which had he not, we too too happy were.

Mon. In troth I must confesse, when now you two Found me in yonder thicket, I had lost My selfe, by having seene that which I would I had not had these eyes to see; and sudge If I great reason have not to complaine:

You see I am a man, though not so gay And delicate clad, as are your fine And amorous dainty heardsmen, yet a man; And that not base, not vn-allyde to Pan; And of a spirit doth not degenerate From my robustious manly ancestours,

23

III.

Being neuer foild in any wrastling game, But still have borne away the chiefest prize In euery braue and active exercise. Yet notwithstanding that disdainfull mayd, Prowd Phillis, doth despise me and my loue. And will not daigne fo much as heare me speake, But doth abiure, forfooth, the thought of loue.

Yet shall I tell you (yet asham'd to tell;) This coy vnlouing foule, I faw ere while Soliciting a youth, a fmooth fac'd boy, Whom in her armes she held (as seem'd to me. Being closely busht a prety distance off,) Against his will; and with strange passion vrg'd His stay, who seem'd, struggled to get away;

And yet she staid him, yet intreates his stay.

At which strange fight, imagine I that stood Spectatour, how confoundedly I stood, And hardly could forbeare from running in To claime for mine, if euer loue had right, Those her imbraces cast away in sight: But staying to behold the end, I staid Too long; the boy gets loofe, her felfe retires, And you came in; but if I liue, that boy Shall dearely pay for his misfortune, that He was beloued of her, of whom I would Haue none on earth beloued, but my felfe.

Dor. That were to bite the stone, a thing vniust, To punish him for her conceived lust,

Mon. Tush, many in this world we see are caught,

And fuffer for misfortune, not their fault. Sil. But that would not become your manlines,

590

580

Montanus, it were shame for valiant men To doe vnworthily.

Mon. Speake not of that, Siluanus, if my rage 610 Irregular be made, it must worke like effects.

Dor. These are but billowes, tumbling after stormes, They last not long; come let some exercise Diuert that humour, and convert your thoughts To know your selfe; scorne her who scorneth you; Idolatrize not so that Sexe, but hold A man of strawe more then a wife of gold. Execunt.

ACT. II. SCEN. II.

Lidia. Phillis.

Ou must not Phillis, be so sensible

Of these small touches which your passion makes.

Phi. Small touches Lidia, do you count them small?

Can there vnto a woman worse befall

Then hath to me? what? have not I lost all

That is most deare to vs, love and my same?

Is there a third thing Lidia you can name

That is so precious as to match with these?

Lid. Now filly girle, how fondly do you talke?

How haue you loft your fame; what for a few
Ill fauour'd louing words, vttred in ieaft 630

Vnto a foolish youth? Cannot you say
You did but to make triall how you could,
If such a peeuish qualme of passion should
(As neuer shall) oppresse your tender heart,
Frame your conceit to speake, to looke, to sigh
Like to a heart-strooke louer; and that you
Perceiuing him to be a bashfull youth,
Thought to put spirit in him, and make you sport.

Phi. Ah Lidia, but he faw I did not fport,
He faw my teares, and more: what shall I fay? 640
He faw too much, and that which neuer man
Shall euer see againe whil'st I haue breath.

Lid. Are you so simple as you make your selfe? What did he see? a counterseited shew
Of passion, which you may, if you were wise,
Make him as easily to vnbeleeue,
As what he neuer saw; and thinke his eyes
Conspir'd his vnderstanding to deceiue,

How many women, thinke you, being espide
In neerer-touching cases by mischance,
Haue yet not onely fac'd their louers downe
For what they saw, but brought them to beleeue
They had not seene the thing which they had seene,
Yea and t' sweare it too; and to condemne
Themselues? such meanes can wit deuise
To make mens mindes vncredit their owne eies.

And therefore let not fuch a toy as this
Difeafe your thoughts: and for your loffe of loue,
It is as much as nothing. I would turne
A paffion vpon that fhould ouerturne
660
It cleane, and that is wrath; one heate
Expels another. I would make my thoughts of fkorne

To be in height fo much aboue my loue,
As they should ease and please me more by farre.
I would disdaine to cast a looke that way
Where he should stand, vnlesse it were in skorne,
Or thinke a thought of him, but how to worke
Him all disgrace that possibly I could.

Phi. That Lidia can I neuer doe, let him

Do what he will to me: report my shame, 670 And vaunt his fortune, and my weaknesse blame.

Lid. Nay as for that, he shall be so well charmd Ere I haue done, as you shall feare no tales.

Phi. Ah Lidia, could that be without his harme, How bleffed should I be: But see where comes My great tormentor, that rude Forrester. Good Lidia let vs flie, I hate his fight Next to the ill I fuffer: let vs flie. We shall be troubled with him wofully.

Lid. Content you Phillis, stay and heare him 680 fpeake:

We may make vse of him more then you thinke. Phil. What vie can of so grosse a peece be made? Lid. The better vse be sure, for being grosse: Your fubtler spirits full of their finesses, Serue their owne turnes in others businesses.

ACT. II. SCEN. III.

Montanus. Lidia, Phillis.

Hat pleasure can I take to chase wild beasts, When I my felfe am chac'd more egarly By mine owne paffions, and can finde no rest? Let them who have their heart at libertie, Attend those sports. I cannot be from hence, Where I receiu'd my hurt; here must I tread The maze of my perplexed miserie.

And here see where shee is the cause of all! And now, what shall I doe? what shall I say? How shall I looke? how stand? which vtter first? My loue or wrath? Alas I know not which.

Now were it not as good haue beene away, As thus to come, and not tell what to fay?

700

Phil. See Lidia fee, how fauagely hee lookes! Good let vs goe, I neuer shall endure
To heare him bellow.

Lid. Prethee Phillis stay
And giue him yet the hearing, in respect
Hee loues you; otherwise you shew your selfe
A sauage more then hee.

Phil. Well, if I heare,

I will not answere him a word, you shall reply: And prethee Lidia doe, reply for mee.

Lid. For that we shall, Phillis, doe well enough
When he begins, who seemes is very long
To give the onset; sure the man is much
Perplexed, or he studies what to say.

Phil. Good Lidia see how he hath trickt himselfe!

Now sure this gay fresh suite as seemes to mee

Hangs like green Iuy on a rotten tree. [goates:

Lid. Some beafts do weare gray beards befide your And beare with him, this fuit bewraies yong thoughts.

Mon. Ah was it not enough to be opprest With that confounding passion of my loue And her disdaine, but that I must be torne With wrath and enuy too, and have no veine Free from the racke of sufferings, that I can Nor speake nor thinke but most distractedly?

How shall I now begin, that have no way To let out any passion by it selfe, But that they all will thrust together so As none will be expressed as they ought? But something I must say now I am here.

And be it what it will, loue, enuie, wrath,
Or all together in a comberment,
My words must be like me, perplext and rent;
And so I'le to her.
730

Phi. Lidia, see he comes!

Lid. He comes indeed, and as me thinkes doth shew More trouble in his face by farre, then loue.

Mon. Faire Phillis, and too faire for fuch a one,
Vnlesse you kinder were, or better then
I know you are: how much I haue endur'd
For you, although you scorne to know, I feele,
And did imagine, that in being a man
Who might deserue regard, I should haue bin
740
Prefer'd before a boy. But well, I see
Your seeming and your being disagree
[thus Phil. What Lidia, doth he brawle? what meanes he
To speake and looke in this strange fort on me?

Mon. Well modest Phillis, neuer looke so coy,

These eyes beheld you dallying with a boy.

Phil. Me with a boy, Montanus? when? where? how?

Mon. To day, here, in most lasciuious sort

Lid. Ah, ha, he fawe you Phillis, when
This morning you did striue with Cloris boy
To have your Garland, which he snatcht away,
And kept it from you by strong force and might:
And you againe laid hold vpon the same,
And held it saft vntill with much adoe
He wrung it from your hands, and got away:
And this is that great matter which he saw.

Now fye Montanus fye, are you fo groffe, T'imagine fuch a worthy Nymph as fhee Would be in loue with fuch a youth as he?

Why now you have vndone your credit quite; You never can make her amends for this So impious a furmise, nor euer can Shee, as fhee reason hath, but must despise Your groffenesse; who should rather have come in And righted her, then suffer such a one To offer an indignity fo vile, And you stand prying in a bush the while.

Mon. What do I heare? what, am I not my felfe? How? have mine eves double vndone me then? First seeing Phillis face, and now her fact, Or else the fact I saw, I did not see? And fince thou hast my vnderstanding wrong'd, And traytour-like giuen false intelligence, Whereby my judgement comes to passe amisse. And yet I thinke my fence was in the right: And yet in this amaze I cannot tell, But howfoere, I in an errour am, In louing, or beleeuing, or in both. And therefore Phillis, at thy feet I fall, And pardon craue for this my groffe furmife.

Lid, But this, Montanus, will not now fuffise, You guite have lost her, and your hopes and all. Mon. Good Lidia yet intreate her to relent,

780

And let her but command me any thing That is within the power of man to do, And you shall finde Montanus will performe More then a Gyant, and will stead her more Then all the Heardsmen in Arcadia can.

Lid. Shee will command you nothing; but I wish You would a little terrifie that boy As he may neuer dare to vie her name

800

But in all reverence as is fit for her.
But doe not you examine him a word;
For that were neither for your dignity,
Nor hers, that fuch a boy as he should stand
And instifie himselfe in such a case,
Who would but faine vntruths vnto your face.
And herein you some service shall performe,
As may perhaps make her to thinke on you.

Mon. Alas, this is a worke fo farre, fo low Beneath my worth, as I account it none; Were it t'incounter fome fierce mountaine beaft Or Monster, it were something fitting mee. But yet this will I doe, and doe it home, Affure you Lidia: as I liue I will.

Phil. But yet I would not have you hurt the youth, For that were neither grace for you nor mee.

Mon. That as my rage will tollerate must be.

ACT II. SCEN. IV.

Cloris. Clarindo.

810

H Eere comes my long expected messenger,
God grant the newes hee bring may make amends

For his long stay; and sure, I hope it will. Me thinkes his face bewraies more iollytie In his returning then in going hence.

Cla. Well, all is well; no Amarillis hath Supplanted Siluias loue in Thirfis heart, Nor any shall: but see where Cloris lookes For what I shall not bring her at this time.

Clo. Clarindo though my longing would be faine 820 Difpatch'd at once, and heare my doome pronounc'd All in a word of either life or death, Yet doe not tell it but by circumstance. Tell me the manner vvhere, and how thou foundst My Thirfis, what hee said, how look'd, how far'd, How he receiu'd my message, vsed thee; And all in briefe, but yet be sure tell all.

Cla. All will I tell, as neere as I can tell. First after tedious searching vp and downe, I found him all alone, like a hurt Deare, 830 Got vnder couer in a shadie groue, Hard by a little christall purling spring, Which but one fullen note of murmur held; And where no Sunne could fee him, where no eye Might ouerlooke his lonely privacy; There in a path of his owne making, trode Bare as a common way, yet led no way Beyond the turnes he made (which were but fhort) With armes a croffe, his hat downe on his eyes (As if those shades yeelded not shade ynough, 840 To darken them) he walkes with often stops, Vneuen pace, like motions to his thoughts.

And when he heard me comming, for his eares Were quicker watches then his eyes, it feem'd; Hee fuddenly lookes vp, staies suddenly, And with a brow that told how much the fight Of any interrupter troubled him, Beheld me, without speaking any word, As if expecting what I had to say. I finding him in this confus dismay, Who heretofore had seene him otherwise:

I must confesse, (for tell you all I must,)
A trembling passion ouerwhelmd my breast,
So that I likewise stood confus and dumbe
And onely lookt on him, as he on me.
In this strange posture like two statues we Remaind a while; but with this difference set:
He blusht, and I look'd pale; my face did shew
Ioy to see him, his trouble to be seene.

At length bethinking me for what I came, What part I had to act, I rowzd my spirits, And set my selfe to speake; although I wisht He would have first begun; and yet before A word would issue, twise I bowd my knee, Twice kist my hand; my action so much was More ready then my tongue: at last I told Whose messenger I was, and how I came To intimate the sadde distressed case Of an afflicted Nymph, whose onely helpe Remaind in him: he when he heard the name Of Cloris, turnes away his head, and shrinkes,

As if he grieued that you should grieue for him.

Clo. No, no, it troubled him to heare my name,
Which he despises; is he so peruers
And wayward still? ah then I see no hope.

Clarindo, would to God thou hadst not gone,
I could be, but as now, I am vndone.

Cla. Haue patience Mistres, and but heare the rest.

When I perceiu'd his suffrings, with the touch

And sodaine stop it gaue him, presently

I layd on all the waights that motion might

Procure, and him besought, adiur'd, invok'd,

By all the rights of Nature, pietie,

860

And manlines, to heare my message out.

Told him how much the matter did import

Your safety and his same. How he was bound
In all humanity to right the same.

Clo. That vvas vvell done my boy, vvhat faid he then?

Cla. Hee turnes about, and fixt his eyes on mee,

Content to giue his eares a quiet leaue,

To heare me; vvhen I faild not to relate

All vvhat I had in charge; and all he heares,

And lookes directly on me all the vvhile.

Clo. I doubt he noted thee more then thy vvords; But now Clarindo, vvhat vvas his reply?

Cla. Thus. Tell faire Cloris, my good boy, how that I am not so disnatured a man,
Or so ill borne, to disesteeme her loue,
Or not to grieue, (as I protest I doe)
That she should so afflict her selse for mee.

900
But——

Clo. Ah now comes that bitter vvord of But Which makes all nothing, that vvas faid before. That fmooths and vvounds, that ftroakes and dashes Then flat denyals, or a plaine disgrace. [more But tell me yet vvhat followed on that But?

Cla. Tell her (faid hee) that I defire shee would Redeeme her selfe at any price shee could, And neuer let her thinke on mee; vvho am But euen the barke, and outside of a man, That trades not vvith the liuing, neither can 910 Nor euer vvill keepe other company Then vvith the dead. My Siluias memory Is all that I must euer liue vvithall. With that his teares, vvhich likewise forced mine,

Set me againe vpon another racke Of paffion fo, that of my felfe I fought To comfort him the best I could deuise. And I befought him that he vvould not be Transported thus; but know that with the dead He should no more converse: and how his love Was liuing, that vvould give him all content, And vvas all his intire, and pure, and vvifht To live no longer then shee should be so. When more I vvould have faid, he shooke his head And villd me speake no further at that time. But leave him to himselfe, and to returne Againe anone, and he vvould fell me more; Commending me for having done the part Both of a true and mouing messenger. And fo I tooke my leaue, and came my vvay. 930 Clo. Returne againe? no, to what end.

Clo. Returne againe? no, to what end,
If hee be [thus] conceited, and so fond
To entertaine a shadow; I have done,
And vvish that I had never done so much.
Shall I descend below my selfe, to send
To one is not himselfe? Let him alone
With his dead Image: you shall goe no more.
Have I here fram'd vvith all the art I could
This Garland deckt vvith all the various slowres
Arcadia yeelds, in hope hee vvould send backe
Some comfort, that I might therwith have crown'd 940
His love, and vvitness'd mine, in th'endles round
Of this faire ring, the Character of faith?

But now he shall have none of it, I rather vvill Rend it in peeces, and dishatter all Into a Chaos, like his formeles thoughts. But yet thou faift hee wild thee to returne, And he would tell thee more.

Cla. Yes so hee saide.

Clo. Perhaps thy vvords might yet fo vvorke vvith him 950

As that hee takes this time to thinke on them, And then I should doe vvrong to keepe thee backe. Well thou shalt goe, and carry him from mee This Garland, vvorke it vvhat effect it vvill.

But yet I know it vvill doe nothing. Stay
Thou shalt not goe, for sure hee said but that
To put thee off, that he might be alone
At his idolatrie, in vvorshipping
A nothing, but his selse made images.
But yet he may be vvearied with those thoughts 960
As having worne them long, and end they must:
And this my message comming in sit time,
And moovingly delivered, may take hold:
He said thou wert a mooving messenger.
Clarindo, did he not?

Cla. Yes fo he fayd.

Clo. Well, thou shalt goe; and yet if any thought
Of me should moue him, he knowes well my minde
(If not too well,) and where he may me finde.
Thou shalt not goe Clarindo, nor will I
Disgrace me more with importunity:
And yet if such a motion should take fire,
And finde no matter ready, it would out,
And opportunities must not be slackt.
Clarindo, thou shalt go, and as thou goest,
Looke to my slocke, and so God speed thee well.

SCEN. V.

Clarindo, alias Siluia Solus.

For hereby haue I meanes to fee my loue; Who likewise sees me, though he sees me not; Nor do I fee him as I would I did. 980 But I must by some meanes or other make Him know I liue; and yet not so as he May know that I am I, for feare we might Miscary in our loyes by ouer haste. But it is more then time his fuffrings were Releeu'd in some close fort; and that can I deuise No way to doe, but by relating how I heard of an escape a nymph did make From pirats lately, and was fafe return'd. And so to tell some story that containes 990 Our fortunes and our loues, in other names; And wish him to expect the like euent: For I perceive him very well content

For I perceive him very well content
To heare me fpeake; and fure he hath fome note,
Although fo darkly drawne, as that his eyes
Cannot expressly reade it; yet it showes
Him something, which he rather seeles, then knowes.

The fong of the fecond Chorus.

Defire that is of things ungot,

See what travaile it procureth,

And how much the minde endureth,

To gaine what yet it gaineth not:

For neuer was it paid,

The charge defraide,

According to the price of thought.

ACT. III. SCEN. I.

Charinus, the father of Thirsis. Palæmon.

Alæmon, you me thinkes might fomething worke
With Thirfis my aggrieued fonne, and found
His humour what it is: and why he thus
IOIO
Afflicts himfelfe in folitarinesse.
You two were wont to be most inward friends,
And glad I was to see it; knowing you
To be a man well tempred, fit to fort
With his raw youth; can you do nothing now,
To win him from this vile captiuity
Of passion, that withholdes his from the world?
Pal. In troth, Charinus, I have oftentimes,

1020

As one that fuffred for his grieuances,
As one that fuffred for his grieuances,
As flayd to finde a way into the cause
Of his so strange dismay; and by all meanes
Aduis'd him make redemption of himselse,
And come to life againe, and be a man
With men: but all serues not, I finde him lockt
Fast to his will, alleadge I what I can.

Char. But will he not impart to you the cause? Pal. The cause is loue; but it is such a loue, As is not to be had.

Cha. Not to be had?

Palæmon, if his loue be regular,

Is there in all Arcadia any she,

Whom his ability, his shape, and worth

May not attaine, he being my onely sonne?

Pal. She is not in Arcadia whom he loues,

Nor in the world, and yet he deerely loues.

Cha. How may that be, Palæmon? tell me plaine.

Pal. Thus plainly; he's in loue with a dead woman, And that so farre, as with the thought of her Which hath shut out all other, he alone Liues, and abhorres to be, or seene, or knowne.

Cha. What was this creature could possesse him so?

Pal. Faire Siluia, old Medorus daughter, who 1041

Was two yeares past reported to be slaine

By sauage beasts upon our Country shore.

Cha. Is that his griefe? alas, I rather thought It appertain'd vnto anothers part To wayle her death: Alexis should doe that, To whom her father had disposed her, And she esteemed onely to be his. Why should my sonne afflict him more for her, Then doth Alexis, who this day doth wed 1050 Faire Galatea, and forgets the dead? And here the shepheards come to celebrate His joyfull nuptials with all merriment; Which doth increase my cares, considering The comforts other parents do receive: And therefore good Palæmon worke all meanes You can to win him from his peeuish will. And draw him to these shewes, to companies, That others pleafures may inkindle his;

And tell him what a finne he doth commit, 1060 To waste his youth in solitarinesse, And take a course to end vs all in him.

Pal. Assure your selfe Charinus, as I have So will I still imploy my vtmost powre, To saue him; for me thinkes it pitty were, So rare a peece of worth should so be lost, That ought to be preserved at any cost.

III.

ACT. III. SCEN. II.

Charinus. Medorus.

Edorus come, we two must sit, and mourne 1070
Whilst others reuell. We are not for sports,
Or nuptiall shewes, which will but shew vs more
Our miseries, in being both depriu'd
The comforts of our issue; which might haue
(And was as like to haue) made our hearts
As ioysull now, as others are in theirs.

Med. Indeed Charinus, I for my part haue
Iust cause to grieue amidst these sestions,
For they should haue beene mine. This day I should Haue seene my daughter Siluia how she would 1080
Haue womand it; these rites had beene her grace,
And she had sat in Galateas place.
And now had warm'd my heart to see my blood
Preseru'd in her; had she not beene so rapt
And rent from off the liuing as she was.
But your case is not paralell with mine;
You haue a sonne, Charinus, that doth liue,
And may one day to you like comforts giue.

Cha. Indeed I have a fonne; but yet to fay he lives,

I cannot; for who lives not to the world, Nor to himselfe, cannot be sayd to live. For ever since that you your daughter lost, I lost my sonne: for from that day he hath Imbrak'd in shades and solitarinesse, Shut him selfe vp from light or company. Of any living: and as now I heard. By good Palæmon, vowes still so to doe.

Med. And did your sonne, my daughter loue so deare? Now good Charinus, I must grieue the more, If more my heart could suffer then it doth; I 100 For now I feele the horrour of my deede, In hauing crost the worthiest match on earth. Now I perceiue why Siluia did resuse To marry with Alexis, hauing made A worthier choice; which oh had I had grace To haue foreseene, perhaps this dismall chance Neuer had beene, and now they both had had Ioy of their loues, and we the like of them.

But ah my greedy eye, viewing the large
And spacious sheep-walkes ioyning vnto mine,
Whereof Alexis was possest, made me,
As worldlings doe, defire to marry grounds,
And not affections, which have other bounds.
How oft haue I with threats, with promises,
With all perswasions, sought to win her minde
To fancy him, yet all would not prevaile!
How oft hath she againe vpon her knees
With teares besought me; Oh deare father mine
Doe not inforce me to accept a man
I cannot fancy: rather take from me,
The life you gaue me, then afflict it so.

Yet all this would not alter mine intent,
This was the man she must affect or none.
But ah what sinne was this to torture so
A heart forevow'd vnto a better choice,
Where goodnesse met in one the selfe same point,
And vertues answer'd in an equal ioynt?
Sure, sure, charinus, for this sinne of mine
The gods bereast me of my child, and would

Not have her be, to be without her heart, Nor me take ioy where I did none impart.

heart, 1130 impart.

Cha. Medorus, thus we see mans wretchednesse That learnes his errours but by their successe, And when there is no remedie; and now VVe can but wish it had beene otherwise.

Med. And in that wish Charinus we are rackt;
But I remember now I often haue
Had shadowes in my sleepe that figures bare
Of some such liking twixt your childe and mine.
And this last night a pleasing dreame I had
I 140
(Though dreames of ioy makes wakers minds more sad)
Me thought my daughter Siluia was return'd
In most strange fashion, and vpon her knees
Craues my good will for Thirsis, otherwise
She would be gone againe and seene no more.

I at the fight of my deare childe, was rapt VVith that excesse of ioy, as gaue no time Either for me to answere her request,
Or leave for sleepe to figure out the rest.

Cha. Alas Medorus, dreames are vapours, which 1150 Ingendred with day thoughts, fall in the night And vanish with the morning; are but made Afflictions vnto man, to th'end he might Not rest in rest, but toile both day and night.

But fee here comes my folitarie fonne:
Let vs ftand close Medorus out of fight,
And note how he behaues himfelfe in this Affliction, and diftreffed case of his.

SCEN. III.

Thirsis solus.

1160

Of my destruction, which the Sun hath twice Returnd vnto my grieses, which keepe one course Continually with it in motion like, But that they neuer set: this day doth claime Th'especiall tribute of my sighes and teares; Though, euery day I duely pay my teares Vnto that soule which this day left the world.

And yet I know not why? me thought the Sun Arose this day with farre more cheerefull raies, I170 With brighter beames, then vsually it did, As if it would bring something of release Vnto my cares, or else my spirit hath had Some manner of intelligence with hope, Wherewith my heart is vnacquainted yet:
And that might cause mine eie with quicker sence, To note th'appearing of the eie of heauen;
But something sure I feele which doth beare vp
The weight of sorrow easier then before.

SCEN. IV.

Palæmon. Thirfis.

1180

Hat Thirs is still in passion? still one man? For shame shew not your selfe so weakely So seebly ioynted, that you cannot beare [set, The fortunes of the world like other men. Beleeue me Thirs you much wrong your worth: This is to be no man, to have no powers.

Passions are womens parts, actions ours; I was in hope t'haue found you otherwise.

Thir. How? otherwise Palæmon? do not you
Hold it to be a most heroicke thing
To act one man, and do that part exact?
Can there be in the world more worthinesse
Then to be constant? is there any thing
Shewes more a man? What, would you have me change?
That were to have me base, that were indeed
To shew a feeble heart, and weakely set.

No no Palæmon, I should thinke my selfe. The most vnworthy man of men, should I But let a thought into this heart of mine. That might disturbe or shake my constancy.

120

And thinke Palæmon I have combates too,
To be the man I am, being built of flesh,
And having round about me traytors too
That seeke to vndermine my powres, and steale
Into my weakenesses, but that I keepe
Continuall watch and ward vpon my selfe,
Least I should be surprized at vnawares
And taken from my vowes with other snares.

And even now at this instant I confesse, Palæmon, I doe seele a certaine touch Of comfort, which I seare to entertaine; Least it should be some spie, sent as a traine To make discovery of what strength I am.

1210

Pal. Ah worthy Thirfis, entertaine that spirit What euer else thou doe: set all the doores Of thine affections open thereunto.

Thir. Palamon no. Comfort and I have beene So long time strangers, as that now I feare To let it in, I know not how t'acquaint My selfe therewith, being vsed to converse With other humours, that affect me best. Nor doe I loue to have mixt company VVhereto I must of force my selfe apply.

1220

Pal. But Thirs is thinke that this must have an end, And more it would approoue your worth to make The same your worke, then time should make it his.

Thir. End fure it must Palamon, but with me:

For so I by the Oracle was told
That very day wherein I lost the day
And light of comfort that can neuer rise
Againe to me: when I the saddest man
That euer breath'd before those Altars fell,
And there besought to know what was become
Of my deare Siluia, whether dead, or how
Reast from the world: but that I could not learne.
Yet thus much did that voice divine returne:
Goe youth, reserve thy selfe, the day will come
Thou shalt be happy, and returne againe.
But when shall be the day demanded I:
The day thou dyest, replide the Oracle.

So that you fee, it will not be in these But in th'Elizian fields, where I shall ioy: The day of death must bring me happinesse.

Pal. You may mistake the meaning of those words Which is not knowne before it be fulfill'd. Yeeld you to what the gods command, if not Vnto your friends desires: reserve your selfe For better dayes, and thinke the Oracle Is not vntrue, although not vnderstood.

But howfoeuer, let it not be faid

T250

That Thirfis being a man of fo rare parts, So vnderstanding and discreete, should pine in loue And languish for a filly woman thus:

To be the fable of the vulgar, made
A scorne, and laught at, by inferiour wits.

Thir. In loue Palæmon? know you what you fay? Doe you esteeme it light to be in loue? How have I beene mistaken in the choice Of fuch a friend, as I held you to be, That seemes not, or else doth not understand 1260 The noblest portion of humanity, The worthiest peece of nature set in man? Ah know that when you mention loue, you name A facred mistery, a Deity, Not vnderstood of creatures built of mudde, But of the pureft and refined clay Whereto th'eternall fires their spirits conuey. And for a woman, which you prize so low, Like men that doe forget whence they are men; Know her to be th'especiall creature, made 1270 By the Creator as the complement Of this great Architect the world; to hold The fame together, which would otherwise Fall all afunder: and is natures chiefe Vicegerent vpon earth, supplies her state.

And doe you hold it weakenesse then to loue?
And loue so excellent a miracle
As is a woman! ah then let mee
Still be so weake, still let me loue and pine
In contemplation of that cleane, cleare soule,
That made mine see that nothing in the world
Is so supreamely beautifull as it.

Thinke not it was those colours white and red Laid but on flesh, that could affect me so. But something else, which thought holds vnder locke

And hath no key of words to open it.

They are the smallest peeces of the minde
That passe this narrow organ of the voyce.

The great remaine behinde in that vast orbe
Of th'apprehension, and are neuer borne.

1290

And therefore if your iudgement cannot reach Vnto the vnderstanding of my Case,
You doe not well to put your selfe into
My Iury, to condemne me as you doe.
Let th'ignorant out of their dulnesse laugh
At these my sufferings, I will pitty them
To have beene so ill borne, so miscompos'd
As not to know vvhat thing it is to loue.

And I to great Apollo here appeale
The foueraigne of the Muses, and of all 1300
Well tun'd affections, and to Cinthia bright,
And glorious Lady of cleere faithfulness;
Who from aboue looke down with blisfull beames
Vpon our humble groues, and ioy the hearts
Of all the world, to see their mutual loues;
They can iudge what worthinesse there is
In worthy loue. Therefore Palæmon peace,
Vnlesse you did know better what it were.

And this be fure, when as that fire goes out In man, he is the miferableft thing On earth, his day-light fets, and is all darke And dull within; no motions of delight, But all opprest, lies struggling with the weight

1310

Of worldly cares: and this olde Damon faies, Who well had felt what loue was in his daies.

Pal. Well Thirfis, well, how ever you do guilde
Your passions, to indeere them to your selfe,
You never shall induce me to beleeve,
That sicknesses can be of such effect:
And so farewell, vntill you shall be well.

1320

SCEN. V.

Medorus. Charinus.

Gods, Charinus, what a man is this?

Who ever heard of fuch a constancy?

Had I but knowne him in enioying him,

As now I doe, too late in loofing him,

How blest had beene mine age! but ah I was

Vnworthy of so great a blessednesse.

Cha. You fee, Medorus, how no counfell can Prevaile to turne the current of his will,

To make it run in any other course

Then what it doth; so that I fee I must

Esteeme him irrevocably lost.

But harke, the shepheards festivals begin, Let vs from hence, where sadnesse were a sin.

Here was prefented a rurall marriage, conducted with this Song.

From the Temple to the Boord,
From the Boord vnto the Bed,
We conduct your maidenhead:
Wishing Hymen to affoord
All the pleasures that he can,
Twixt a woman and a man.

1340

1330

ACT. IIII. SCEN. I.

Thirsis Solus.

Thought these simple woods, these gentle trees
Would, in regard I am their daily guest,
And harbour vnderneath their shady roofes,
Not have consented to delude my grieses,
And mocke my miseries with salse reports:

1350
But now I see they will afflict me too.

For as I came by yonder spreading Beech Which often hath the Secretary beene
To my sad thoughts, while I have rested me
(If love had ever rest) vnder his gentle shade,
I found incaru'd, and saire incaru'd, these words:
Thy Silvia, Thirsis, lives; and is return'd.
Ah me, that any hand would thus adde scorne
Vnto affliction; and a hand so faire
As this may seeme to be; which were more sit,
I 360
Me thinkes, for good, then to doe injurie;
For sure no vertue should be ill imploy'd.

And which is more; the name of Silvia was Caru'd in the felfe fame kind of Character
Which she aliue did vse, and wherewithall
Subscrib'd her vowes to me, who knowes it best;
Which shewes the fraud the more, and more the wrong.
Therefore you Stars of that high Court of Heauen,
Which doe reueale deceits, and punish them,
Let not this crime, to counterfeit a hand
To couzin my desires, escape the doome.
Nor let these riots of intrusion, made
Vpon my lonenesse, by strange company
Afflict me thus, but let me haue some rest.

Come then, refresher of all living things,
Soft sleepe, come gently, and take truce with these
Oppressours, but come simple and alone.
Without these Images of fantasie,
Which hurt me more then thou canst do me good:
Let me not sleepe, vnlesse I could sleepe all.

1380

SCEN. III.

Palæmon. Thirsis.

A Las, he here hath laid him downe to rest,

It were now sinne his quiet to molest;

And God forbid I should; I will retire

And leave him, for I know his griess require

This poore relieuement of a little sleepe. [free?

Thir. What spirit here haunts me? What no time

1390

Ah, is it you Palamon? would to God You would forbeare me but a little while: You shew your care of me too much in this, Vnseasonable loue skarce kindnesse is.

Pal. Good Thirsis, I am forry I should give The least occasion of disease to you; I will be gone and leave you to your rest.

Thir. Doe good Palæmon, go your way, farewell; And yet Palæmon stay, perhaps you may By charmes you haue, cause sleepe to close mine eyes; For you were wont, I doe remember well, To fing me Sonnets, which in passion I 1400 Composed in my happier dayes, when as Her beames inflam'd my spirits, which now are set. And if you can remember it, I pray Sing me the song, which thus begins: Eyes hide my loue,

Which I did write vpon the earnest charge Shee gaue vnto me, to conceale our loue.

The Song.

Eyes hide my loue, and doe not shew
To any but to her my notes,
Who onely doth that cipher know,
Wherewith we passe our secret thoughts:
Belie your lookes in others sight;
And wrong your selves to doe her right.

Pal. So now hee fleepes, or elfe doth feeme to fleepe; But howfoeuer, I will not trouble him.

SCEN. III.

Clarindo. Thirfis.

She where he lies, whom I fo long to fee;
Ah my deare Thirs, take thy quiet rest,
I know thou needst it; sleepe thy fill, sweet loue, 1420
Let nothing trouble thee; be calme oh windes,
Be still you heards, chirp not so loud sweet birds,
Lest you should wake my loue: thou gentle banke
That thus are blest to beare so deare a weight,
Be soft vnto those dainty lymmes of his;
Plie tender grasse, and render sweet resresh
Vnto his weary senses, whilst he rests.

Oh could I now but put of [f] this difguife,
With those respects that setter my defire,
How closely would I neighbour that sweet side! 1430
But stay, he stirres; I seare my heart hath brought
My seete too neare, and I haue wakened him.

Thir. It will not be, sleepe is no friend of mine,
Or such a friend, as leaves a man, vvhen most
He needes him. See a new assault: vvho now?
Ah tis the boy that vvere vvith me erewhiles,
That gentle boy; I am content to speake
With him, he speakes so pretily, so sweet,
And vvith so good respective modesty:
And much resembles one I knew once vvell:

1440
Come hither gentle boy, vvhat hast thou there?

Cla. A token fent you from the Nymph I ferue.

Thi. Keepe it my boy, and weare it on thy head.

Cla. The gods forbid, that I, a servant, should Weare on my head, that vvhich my Mistresse hath Prepar'd for yours: Sir, I beseech you vrge No more a thing so ill becomming me.

Thi. Nay fure I thinke, it better vvill become Thy head then mine; and therefore boy, thou must Needes put it on.

1450

Cla. I trust your lonenesse hath not so Vnciuil'd you, to force a messenger To doe against good manners, and his vvill.

Thi. No, good my boy, but I intreate thee now Let me but put it on, hold still thy head, It shall not be thy act, but onely mine: Let it alone good boy, for if thou saw'st How vvell it did become thee, sure thou vvouldst. Now, canst thou sing my boy some gentle song?

Cla. I cannot fing, but I could vveepe. 1460
Thi. Weepe, why?

Cla. Because I am not as I wish to be.

Thi. Why so are none; be not displeased for this;

And if you cannot fing, tell me fome tale To passe the time.

Cla. That can I doe, did I but know what kinde Of tale you lik't.

Thi. No merry tale my boy, nor yet too fad, But mixed, like the tragicke Comedies.

Cla. Then fuch a tale I have, and a true tale, 1470 Beleeue me Sir, although not written yet In any booke; but fure it will, I know: Some gentle shepheard, moou'd with passion, must Record it to the vvorld, and vvell it vvill Become the vvorld to vnderstand the same. And this it is: There was fometimes a Nymph. Isulia nam'd, and an Arcadian borne; Faire can I not awouch shee vvas, but chast. And honest sure, as the euent will prooue: Whose mother dying, left her very young 1480 Vnto her fathers charge, vvho carefully Did breed her vp, vntill shee came to yeares Of vvomanhood, and then prouides a match Both rich, and young, and fit enough for her.

But shee, vvho to another shepheard had Call'd Sirthis, vow'd her loue, as vnto one Her heart esteem'd more vvorthy of her loue, Could not by all her fathers meanes be vvrought To leaue her choice; and to forget her vow. 1489

Thi. No more could my deare Siluia be from me. Cla. Which caused much affliction to them both, Thi. And so the selfe same cause did vnto vs.

Cla. This Nymphoneday, furcharg'd vvith loue & griefe, Which commonly (the more the pitty) dwell As Inmates both together, vvalking forth

With other Maydes to fish vpon the shoare;
Estrayes apart, and leaves her company;
To entertaine her selfe vvith her owne thoughts:
And vvanders on so farre, and out of sight,
As shee at length vvas suddenly surpriz'd

I 500
By Pyrats, vvho lay lurking vnderneath
Those hollow rocks, expecting there some prize.
And notwithstanding all her pitious cryes,
Intreaty, teares, and prayers, those sierce men
Rent haire, and vaile, and carried her by force
Into their ship, vvhich in a little Creeke
Hard by, at Anckor lay, and presently hoys'd saile,
And so away.

Thi. Rent haire and vaile? and so Both haire and vaile of Siluia, I found rent, Which heere I keepe with mee. But now alas 1510 What did shee? what became of her my boy?

Cla. When shee was thus inshipp'd, and woefully Had cast her eyes about to view that hell Of horrour, whereunto shee was so suddenly Implung'd, shee spies a woman sitting with a child Sucking her breast; which was the Captaines wise. To her shee creepes, downe at her seet shee lyes; O woman, if that name of woman may Moue you to pitty, pitty a poore maid, The most distressed soule that euer breath'd; I520 And saue me from the hands of these sherce men, Let me not be defil'd, and made vncleane, Deare woman now: and I will be to you The faithfull'st slaue that euer Mistresse seru'd; Neuer poore soule shall be more dutifull, To doe what euer you command, then I.

No toile will I refuse; so that I may Keepe this poore body cleane and vndeflowr'd, Which is all I will euer feeke. For know It is not feare of death layer me thus low, But of that staine will make my death to blush.

Thi. What, would not all this moue a womans heart? Cla. All this would nothing mooue the womans heart. Whom yet shee would not leave, but still befought: Oh woman, by that Infant at your breaft, And by the paines it cost you in the birth. Saue me, as euer you desire to haue Your babe to joy and prosper in the world: Which will the better prosper sure, if you Shall mercy shew, which is with mercy paid.

1540

Then kiffes shee her feet, then kiffes too The Infants feet: and oh fweet babe (faid shee) Could'ft thou but to thy mother speake for me. And craue her to have pitty on my case; Thou might'st perhaps preuaile with her so much, Although I cannot; child, ah could'st thou speake!

The Infant, whether by her touching it Or by instinct of nature, seeing her weepe, Lookes earnestly vpon her, and then lookes Vpon the mother, then on her againe, 1550 And then it cryes, and then on either lookes: Which shee perceiuing, blessed child, said shee, Although thou canst not speake, yet do'st thou cry Vnto thy mother for me. Heare thy child Deare mother, it's for me it cryes, It's all the speech it hath: accept those cryes, Saue me at his request from being defilde; Let pitty mooue thee, that thus mooues thy childe.

III.

The woman, though by birth and custome rude,—
Yet having veynes of nature, could not bee 1560
But peircible,—did feele at length the point
Of pitty, enter so, as out gusht teares,
(Not vsuall to sterne eyes) and shee besought
Her husband to bestow on her that prize,
With safegard of her body at her will.

The Captaine feeing his wife, the childe, the nymph, All crying to him in this pitious fort;
Felt his rough nature shaken too, and grants
His wives request, and seales his grant with teares;
And so they wept all soure for company:

I 570
And some beholders stood not with dry eyes;
Such passion wrought the passion of their prize.

Thi. In troth my boy, and even thy telling it Mooves me likewife, thou dooft fo feelingly Report the fame, as if thou hadft beene by. But I imagine now how this poore nymph When shee receiv'd that doome, was comforted?

Cla. Sir, neuer was there pardon, that did take Condemned from the blocke, more ioyfull then
This graunt to her. For all her mifery
Seem'd nothing to the comfort shee received,
By being thus saued from impurity:
And from the womans feet shee would not part,
Nor trust her hand to be without some hold
Of her, or of the child, so long as shee remain'd
Within the ship; which in few dayes arriues
At Alexandria, whence these Pirats were;
And there this woefull maide for two yeares space
Did serue, and truly serue this Captaines wife,
Who would not loose the benefit of her

Attendance for her profit otherwise.
But daring not in such a place as that
To trust her selfe in womans habite, crau'd
That she might be appareld like a boy:
And so shee was, and as a boy shee seru'd.

Thi. And two yeares tis, fince I my Siluia lost.

Cla. At two yeares end, her Mistresse sends her forth Vnto the Port for some commodities,

Which whilst shee sought for, going vp and down Shee heard some Merchant men of Corinth talke, 1600 Who spake that language the Arcadians did,

And were next neighbours of one continent.

To them all wrapt with passion, down she kneeles. Tels them shee was a poore distressed boy. Borne in Arcadia, and by Pirats tooke And made a flaue in Egypt, and befought Them, as they fathers were of children, or Did hold their natiue countrey deare, they would Take pitty on her, and relieue her youth From that fad feruitude wherein shee liu'd: 1610 For vyhich shee hop'd that shee had friends aliue VVould thanke them one day, and reward them too: If not, yet that shee knew the Heauens vvould doe. The Merchants moou'd with pitty of her cafe, Being ready to depart, tooke her with them, And landed her voon her countrey coast. Where when shee found her selfe, shee prostrate falls. Kiffes the ground, thankes gives vnto the gods; Thankes them vvho had beene her deliuerers.

And on shee trudges through the defart woods, 1620 Climes ouer craggy rockes, and mountaines steepe, Wades thorough riuers, struggles thorough bogs,

Sustained onely by the force of loue; Vntill shee came vnto the natiue plaines, Vnto the fields, vvhere first shee drew her breath.

There lifts shee vp her eyes, salutes the ayre, Salutes the trees, the bushes, slowres, and all: And oh deare Sirthis, heere I am, said shee, Heere, notwithstanding all my miseries: I am the same I was to thee; a pure, A chast, and spotlesse maide: oh that I may Finde thee the man, thou didst professe to be.

Thi. Or else no man, for boy who truly loues, Must ever so; that dye will never out: And who but would love truly such a soule?

Cla. But now, the better to haue notice how
The state of things then stood, and not in haste
To cast her selse on new incumbrances,
Shee kept her habite still, and put her selse
To serue a nymph, of whom shee had made choice 1640
Till time vvere sitting to reueale her selse.

1630

Thi. This may be Silvias case; this may be shee; But it is not: let mee consider vvell: The teller, and the circumstance agree.

SCEN. III.

Montanus. Thirsis. Chorus.

A H firrha, haue I found you? are you heere
You princock boy? & with your garland on?
Doth this attire become your peeuish head;
Come, I must teach you better manners, boy.

1650
He stabs Clarindo and dashes off his garland.

So Phillis, I have done my taske, and heere I bring the Trophey to confirme the same.

Thi. Ah monster man, vile wretch, what hast thou done? Alas, in what a strait am I ingaged heere? If I pursue reuenge, I leaue to saue. Helpe, helpe, you gentle swaines, if any now be neare, Helpe, helpe: ah harke, euen Eccho helpes me cry helpe.

Cho. What meanes this outcry? fure fome fauage beaft Difturbs our heards, or else fome Wolfe hath seaz'd 1660 Vpon a Lambe.

Thi. A worse thing then a Wolse More bloody then a beast, hath murthered here A gentler creature then a Lambe: therefore Good swaines pursue, pursue the homicide. That ougly wretch, Montanus, who hath stabd This filly creature heere, at vnawares.

Cho. Montanus? why, we met him but euen now,
Deckt with a garland, grumbling to himselse;
We will attach that villaine presently:
Come sirs, make haste, and let vs after him.

1676

SCEN. IIII.

Palæmon. Thirsis.

A Las, what accident is here falne out?

My deare friend Thirs, how comes this to passe?

Thi. That monster man Montanus, heere hath stab'd A harmlesse youth, in message sent to me.

Now good Palæmon helpe me hold him vp,

And see if that we can recouer him.

Pal. It may be Thirs is, more his feare then hurt: Stay him a while, and I will haste and send 1680 For Lamia, who with oyntments, oyles and herbes If any helpe remaine, will helpe him fure.

Thi. Do good Palæmon, make what hast you may, Seeke out for helpe, and be not long away.

Alas sweet boy, that thou should'st euer haue

So hard misfortune, comming vnto me,

And end thy tale with this sad tragedy;

That tale which well resembled Silvias case,

Which thou resemblest; for such browes had she,

Such a proportion'd sace, and such a necke.

What have we here, the mole of Siluia too? What and her breasts? what? and her haire? what all? All Siluia? yes, all Siluia, and all dead. And art thou thus return'd againe to me? Art thou thy felfe, that ftrange deliuered nymph? And didft thou come to tell me thine escape From death to die before me? had I not Enough to doe, to wayle reported harmes But thou must come to bleed within my armes? Was not one death fufficient for my griefes But that thou must die twice? why thou wert dead To me before. Why? must thou dye againe? Ah, better had it beene still to be lost Then thus to have beene found; yet better found Though thus, then fo loft as was thought before. For howfoeuer, now I have thee yet Though in the faddest fashion that may be. Yet Siluia now I have thee, and will I No more for euer part with thee againe: And we this benefit shall have thereby. Though fate would not permit vs both to have One bed, yet Siluia we shall have one grave.

And that is fomething, and much more then I Expected euer could haue come to passe.

And fure the gods but onely fent thee thus To fetch me; and to take me hence with thee; And Siluia fo thou shalt. I ready am T'accompany thy soule, and that with speed. The strings I feele, are all dissolu'd, that hold This woefull heart, reserved it seemes for this, And well reserved, for this so deare an end.

1720

SCEN. V.

Chorus. Palæmon.

So, we have tooke the villaine, and him bound Fast to an Oake, as rugged as himselfe. And there he stares and gapes in th'ayre, and raues Like a wilde beast that's taken in the toyle: And so he shall remaine, till time we see What will become of this his sauage act.

Cheere Thirfis, Lamia will come prefently

And bring the best preservatives she hath.

What now? Who lyes discovered heere? Ay me,
A woman dead? Is this that boy transform'd?

Why, this is Silvia. O good Thirsis how Comes this to passe? Friend Thirsis, Thirsis speake.

Good Thirsis tell me. Out alas he sownes,
As well as she, and both seeme gone alike.

Come gentle heardsmen, come and carry them
To yonder sheepe-cote quickly, that we may
(If possible) recouer them againe.

I 740
If not, performe those rites that appertaine
Vnto so rare a couple. Come my friends, make hast.

The fourth Song of the Chorus.

Qu. Were ever chast and honest hearts Expos'd vnto so great distresses? Anf. Yes: they that act the worthieft parts, Most commonly have worst successes. Great fortunes follow not the best. It's vertue that is most distrest.

Then fortune why doe we admire 1750 The glory of thy great excesses? Since by thee what men acquire, Thy worke and not their worths expresses. Nor dost thou raise them for their good: But thave their illes more understood.

ACT. V. SCEN. I.

Chorus. Palæmon.

Id euer yet Arcadia heare before Of two fo worthy louers, as we find Thirsis and Siluia were? or euer had 1760 Cleare truth, and fimple constant honesty. So lamentable an euent as this? But heere comes foorth Palamon, we shall now Learne all of him, what hath beene done within. Pal. Goe Pollio, fummon all th'Arcadia youth Heere, round about, and will them to prepare To celebrate with all delights they can This ioyfull houre, that hath restor'd to vs The worthiest paire of hearts that euer were. Will them to shew the height of musiques art, 1770 And all the straines of cunning they can shew: That we may make these rockes and hilles about, Ring with the Eccho of redoubled notes.

And will Charinus and Medorus too,

The aged parents of this worthy paire,

To come with fpeed, whose ioy, good soules, wil be

More then their speed; and yet their speed I know,

Will be beyond th'allowance of their yeares,

When they shall vnderstand this happy newes.

And fummon likewise all the traine of nymphes 1780 That glorifie our plaines, and all that can Giue honour to this day.

Goe Pollio hast away, and as you go
Vnbind Montanus that rude sauage swaine:
And though he be vnworthy to be here,
Yet let him come. He hath beene in his dayes
Held a good sellow, howsoeuer now
His rage and loue transported him in this.

Cho. Palæmon, we are glad to fee you thus Delightfull, now we hope there is good newes.

Pal. Good newes my friends, and I will tell it you.

Siluia and Thirsis being to my cottage brought,
The skilfull Lamia comes and searcht the wound
Which Siluia had received of this rude swaine,
And finding it not deadly, she appliede
Those remedies she knew of best effect.

And binds it vp, and powres into her mouth
Such cordiall waters as review the spirits:

Life was not quite gone out, but lay opprest.

With like endeauours we on Thirs worke,

And ministred like Cordials vnto him:

And fo much wrought, as she at length perceiu'd

SCEN. II.

Phillis. Lidia. Cloris.

Witterly sham'd: this youth turn'd woman is.

Clarindo, Siluia is become; how now?

Can I for euer looke on her againe?

Or come in any company for shame?

Now must I needs be made a common ieast

And laughing stocke to euery one that shall

But heare how grossely I behau'd my selfe.

Lid. Faith Phillis as it is falne out, your cafe Is very crazy, and to make it whole There is no way but euen to laugh it out, And fet as good a face, as you can doe Vpon the matter, and fay thus: How you Knew well enough it was no man whom you Affected fo, who neuer could loue man Nor euer would, and that by meere inftinct And simpathy of Sexe, you fancied him: So put it off, and turne it to a feast.

Phi. That shall I neuer do, but euer blush Either, to thinke what she will thinke of me, Who did bewray my selfe so foolishly.

Lid. Are you here Cloris? you are bleft to day 1890 For being miftres vnto fuch a boy:
You may reioyce that euer this fell out.

Clo. Reioyce? ah Lidia, neuer was there nymph Had more occasion to be fad then I, For I am quite vndone and sham'd hereby. For I imploy'd this my supposed boy In message vnto Thirsis, whom I lou'd

1880

I must confesse, more dearely then my life:
And told him all the secrets of my heart.
And therefore with what face can euer I 1900
Looke vpon them that know thus much by me?
No Lidia, I will now take Thirsis course:
Hide me for euer in these desert woods,
And neuer come in company againe;
They shall not laugh at me in their great ioyes.

Lid. But Cloris, I would laugh with them, were I as vou.

And howfoeuer felt my felfe within,
Yet would I feeme be otherwife without.
Cannot you fay, that you knew well enough
How it was Siluia that you intertain'd,
Although you would not feeme to take fuch note;
And thereupon imploy'd her in that fort
To Thirf is, knowing who it was would give
To him the greatest comfort vpon earth,

And thus faire Nymphes you fitly may excuse
These simple slips, and know that they shall still Haue crosses with their piles, who thus do play
Their fortunes with their loues, as you two did;
But you must frame your countenance thereto
And looke with other faces then your owne.

As many else do here, who in their parts
Set shining lookes vpon their cloudy hearts.
And let vs mixe vs with this company
That here appeares with mirth and iollity.

The Song of the fifth Chorus.

Who ever faw so faire a sight, Love and vertue met aright: And that wonder Constancy,

Like a Comet to the eye

Seldome euer seene so bright?

Sound out aloud so rare a thing,

That all the Hilles and Vales may ring.

Looke Louers looke, with passion see,
If that any such there bee:
As there cannot but be such
Who doe feele that noble touch
In this glorious company,
Sound out aloud, &c.

FINIS.

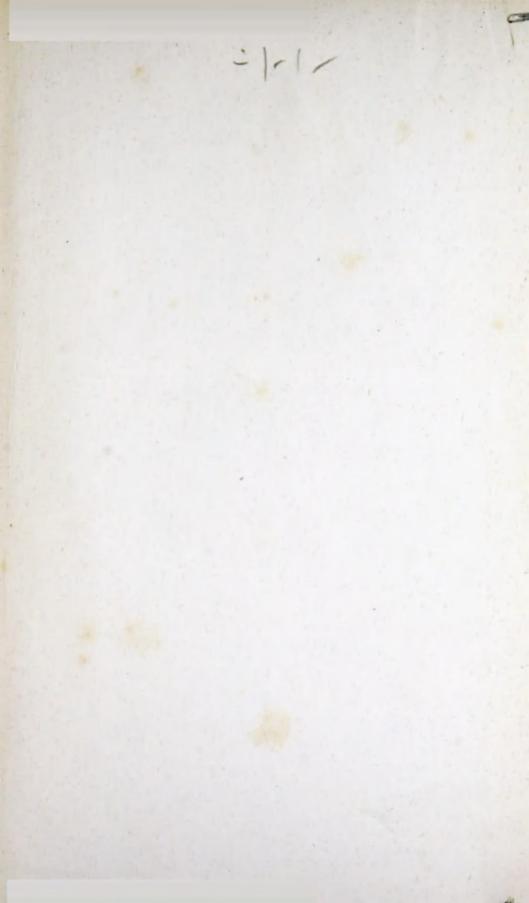

1939

END OF VOL. III.

ERRATUM-NOTE

The line-marking in 'Philotas' (p. 155) inadvertently loses ten lines by repetition of 1450; and (p. 169) leaps from line 1900 [1890] to 2000—thus gaining ninety lines thenceforward. The student will please 'take a note' of this.

CALL NUMBER)amel PK 2241 A14 AUTHOR____

