Records of Early English Drama

The aim of Records of Early English Drama (REED) is to find, transcribe, and publish external evidence of dramatic, ceremonial, and minstrel activity in Great Britain before 1642. The general editor would be grateful for comments on and corrections to the present volume and for having any relevant additional material drawn to her attention.

Acknowledgments

Grateful and particular thanks are due for the gracious and most helpful co-operation of Mrs Marjorie M. Rowe, Devon county archivist, and to the entire staff at the Devon Record Office, as well as to Mrs Audrey Erskine, archivist at Exeter Cathedral. These people contributed their expertise, assistance, and encouragement far beyond the fulfillment of their official duties. They gave their time courteously - and saved me from embarrassment - on numerous occasions.

Thanks also go to the executive committee, the editorial board, and the distinguished staff of the Records of Early English Drama. I particularly want to express deep and affectionate gratitude to Alexandra F. Johnston, who first encouraged me to undertake this project; she generously shared her time, knowledge, and valuable experience; she helped me to secure funding; in fact, she has guided the REED project from its inception. I wish also to thank Sally-Beth MacLean for her tireless editorial work, her numerous helpful suggestions, her ability to compromise or to stand firm when one or the other was needed, and her patience when deadlines were difficult to meet. Abigail Young translated the long and difficult Latin passages, unearthed several additional entries from ecclesiastical sources, compiled the Latin glossary, and collated the MSS and prepared the text for the Bishop Quinel entry; her knowledge of both Latin and church history was invaluable. Anne Quick carefully checked all transcriptions against photocopies of the original manuscripts, prepared the English glossary with the able assistance of William Cooke, and proofread the manuscript. Theodore R. DeWelles proved the most thorough bibliographer and most tireless sleuth I have met, tracking stray entries from Hatfield House to Israel and always willing to track farther when asked. Mary Blackstone read the secondary sources for clues to entries which might have been missed in the original documents. Ian Lancashire provided me with the original list of primary and secondary sources which might prove useful to the project. Elza Tiner did extensive work identifying the patrons of professional companies. Darlene Money served as copy editor and proofreader and also checked the index. Annette Jacob helped to check entries and document descriptions and ordered photocopies of Mss. William Rowcliffe and Donna Best were responsible for the typesetting. William Edwards checked the translations of the French entries in Appendix 3.

Many others not directly involved in this project deserve thanks for their cooperation and assistance when help was requested. Mrs Dorothy Clarke both checked and made transcriptions of manuscripts at the Public Record Office. Maurice Davis of Netanya, Israel allowed REED to obtain a copy of Philip Wyot's journal. Lt. Col. Cedric Delforce, administrator of the estate of the earl of Devon, answered queries about the Courtenay family papers. Christopher McDonough, professor of classics at the University of Toronto, checked the edition of Quinel's statutes. P.W. Ellis, librarian of the Devon Area Central Library; Miss Jane Fowles, archivist to the marquess of Bath; Gerald Gibbens, curator of the Museum Sidmouth; Stanley Goodman, of the Old Plymouth Society; Miss Margaret Holmes, archivist at the Dorset Record Office; P.L. Hull, archivist of the Cornwall Record Office; Richard Johnson, bibliographer at the Newberry Library; Maryanne Kowaleski, assistant professor of history at Fordham University; G.T. Paley, former Devon local history librarian; Derek M.M. Shorrocks, archivist at the Somerset Record Office; Miss E.A. Stuart, senior assistant at the West Devon Record Office; and R.H. Harcourt Williams, archivist to the marquess of Salisbury, all responded to queries and provided transcriptions or copies of documents when they were needed.

One can hardly express adequate appreciation for teachers and colleagues from whom one has learned and received encouragement. From a succession of such supporters I would like to acknowledge my mentors, the late Hardin Craig and Virgil Whitaker; Stanley Kahrl for his enthusiasm and for his success in obtaining the National Endowment for the Humanities grant that supported a fifteen-month stay in Devon; David Bevington, Arthur Cawley, and Martin Stevens for their acceptance and belief; John Elwood for somehow finding travel money and release time for my work; and a host of colleagues, including Robert Potter and David Staines, who showed interest and offered ideas.

I also wish to thank the following institutions for permission to publish extracts from manuscripts in their possession: the Devon Record Office at Exeter, the West Devon Record Office at Plymouth, the Exeter Cathedral Library, the North Devon Athenaeum of Barnstaple, the British Library, the Public Record Office, and the Library of the Marquess of Salisbury at Hatfield House.

As all of the research for this project had to be done in England, it required numerous trips and considerable expense. My gratitude is due to the following agencies, which have provided the financial aid to conduct the project: the National Endowment for the Humanities for a research grant, 1979–80, and for additional travel money; the American Council of Learned Societies for Grants-in-Aid, 1975 and 1978; the E.O. Holland Fund of Washington State University for travel grants in 1978, 1979, 1981, and 1982; and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada for the negotiated grant that made possible editorial visits to Toronto and, indeed, publication of this volume.

My special gratitude and appreciation go to my wife, Barbara D. Palmer, who has provided the encouragement and the stimulus for me to complete this lengthy project.

She also has sacrificed time from her own academic and research schedules to serve as editor, critic, and even typist as occasion demanded. I dedicate this book to her.

Historical Background

County of Devon

When Devon was made a part of Wessex in the tenth century, it had already been organized as a county not very different in configuration from that defined by its present boundaries. Geographically, the county is dominated by the bleak and inhospitable Dartmoor and Exmoor. In Saxon times, its inhabitants tended to concentrate in the valleys of the rivers leading down to the sea from these moors: the Dart, Exe, Otter, Plym, Taw, and Torridge. At the time of the Domesday survey, although Devon was the third largest county (after Yorkshire and Lincolnshire) and the fourth most populous (after Lincoln, Norfolk, and Suffolk), it had only four towns: Barnstaple, Exeter, Lydford, and Totnes. Each of these had a castle built or renewed by Alfred the Great, and each had its own mint. Still, most of the county's inhabitants were farmers and miners scattered over the valleys of the moors.

But after the Norman invasion, a change took place. Within two centuries, Devon was virtually enclosed. The result was a general migration of landless peasants into towns. Enclosure explains both the rapid formation of new towns and the availability of the cheap labour needed to make the wool industry boom. By 1238, the county had nineteen boroughs.3 (None of these was yet on the open sea: for reasons of safety, the early ports had been built as far upstream as the small ocean-going vessels could safely navigate - Barnstaple, Bideford, Exeter, and Totnes.) At the same time as the formation of these towns, sheep were 'first introduced upon a big scale by the Cistercian monks of Buckfastleigh. '4 By the end of the twelfth century, when the English government first took an interest in the wool industry, Devon was stocked with more sheep than any other county. With an abundance of cheap labour and of the required running water, the woollen industry soon became the county's chief industry and remained so throughout the Middle Ages and Renaissance. Because deep-water ports were needed for the growing wool trade with the continent, towns were built at the mouths of Devon's important rivers: Dartmouth, Exmouth, Plymouth, Teignmouth. With the establishment of these new coastal towns, shipping, and later fishing, became increasingly important. It is the wool towns and the shipping towns that provide most of the records of early English drama in the county.

As the seaports grew, other benefits accrued to the county. There are not many deposits of tin in Europe, and the best and most abundant of them are in Devon and Cornwall. Because the Devon ports were ideally situated for trade with southwest France, Spain, and the Mediterranean, and because tin was in demand for pewter, bronze, and other products, Devon and Cornwall possessed a virtual monopoly on the production of tin for western Europe. Perhaps more important was the wine trade. The growth of this business was closely connected with the acquisition of Aquitaine through the marriage of Henry 11 to Eleanor of Aquitaine in 1152. The ports of Plymouth and Dartmouth owe their very existence and early growth to the political and commercial relations established by this union. Py 1500, only London and Hull exceeded the Devon ports in the importation of wine from southwest France. As the seaports expanded for commercial purposes, they also became increasingly important militarily, both as bastions of defence and as ports of embarkation for foreign wars.

Thus throughout the Middle Ages and Renaissance, Devon experienced a relatively consistent growth in political, military, and economic significance. By the end of the sixteenth century, it had a population of some 227,000, most living in Exeter and thirty-eight market towns. In the towns, wealthy merchants were both political and economic forces. In the county, the aristocracy had never controlled vast tracts of land, as it did in many counties under the feudal system. In the sixteenth century, after the Courtenays lost power, the only members of the aristocracy residing in Devon were the earls of Bath and Bedford; thus, most of the county was controlled by the resident gentry. This combination of landed gentry in the county and wealthy merchants in the ports and wool towns moved Devon more rapidly than many counties out of feudalism into capitalism. That fact may account both for the numerous local entertainers and for the surprisingly large number of travelling groups willing to venture so far from London or their home bases.

Boroughs

BARNSTAPLE

One of the four borough towns in Devon at the time of the conquest, Barnstaple retained its importance throughout the period of this study. It was an important protected port, particularly for trade with Ireland, Scotland, and other English west-coast ports, and as a shortcut across the Bristol Channel to Pembroke and Milford-Haven. But Barnstaple was not merely a place for ships to come and go; it was a large market town, and it had a famous Michaelmas fair. It was also a centre of the wool industry. In fact, if the aulnager's accounts are to be trusted, at the end of the fourteenth century Barnstaple and its environs accounted for half the cloth sales in Devon. 11 Later, its population grew to about two thousand by 1560 and about four thousand by 1640. 12

Judging by expenditures in the receivers' accounts, its chief times of festivity seem to have been Christmas, Corpus Christi, and Michaelmas. To this day, celebrations and parades are associated with the Michaelmas fair; in the Renaissance, bull-baiting seems to have been a major attraction at the fair. At Christmas a mummer's play or some other portable play was presented by local amateurs. The records are less specific about what took place at Corpus Christi. There seems to have been a procession at least in some years, and there are frequent expenses for setting up stalls or tables. On Midsummer Eve the mayor walked the boundaries accompanied by local musicians. And like all the towns for which there are records, Barnstaple had its share of church ales.

Although accounting procedures clearly changed from time to time and there are long periods even in the extant records when no payments to entertainers are recorded, still those records reveal, for instance, fifty-nine visits by acting companies between 1532–3 and 1636–7, including most of the important troupes of Shakespeare's time – Leicester's, Worcester's, the queen's, Strange's, even the king's men in 1604–5. Considering its distance from major population centres and that it was at the end of the highway rather than on the way to a larger town, the number of entertainers who came to Barnstaple is somewhat surprising and gratifying.

As was the case with numerous towns in the seventeenth century, dominated as they were by middle-class merchants, Barnstaple came under heavy puritan influence, perhaps especially because of the local power of the strongly puritan earls of Bedford. After 1616–17, nearly all the payments to players were to guarantee that 'they should not play within the Towne.' It seems odd that players should continue to appear for another twenty years after they were no longer welcome, especially at a town so remote as Barnstaple. If they were consistently sent away, one wonders how they could possibly have existed on the payments made to prevent their playing — or for that matter, how they stayed in practice if they were almost never allowed to act.

Among the extant Barnstaple receivers' rolls, one series covers seventeen of the twenty-one years between 1461–2 and 1481–2. These few rolls, made at a time when entertainers were receiving gratuities (even refreshments after performances) and when those payments were being consistently recorded, contain 180 entries relevant to this collection, compared to only 156 entries from the other 103 years of extant accounts. That is five times the average for the other years. During the same twenty-one-year period, the Exeter accounts record only one bull-baiting and one bear-baiting — no minstrels, mimes, players, musicians, tumblers, or fools. Are we to assume that entertainers by the score were bypassing Exeter and going on out to Barnstaple? Surely this apparent concentration of entries from one brief period reflects not a short-lived renaissance of entertainment at Barnstaple under Edward IV, but rather, an idea of what the complete picture for the county might look like if all receivers' accounts were as detailed as these seventeen and if there had not been long periods at many towns when the civic fathers neglected to provide gratuities to entertainers.

DARTMOUTH

At the time of the Domesday survey of 1086, the only port on the Dart River was Totnes. Three small villages, Clifton, Dartmouth, and Hardeness, on the south bank of the river's mouth, and a larger one, Kingswear, on the north bank, were under the control of the lord of Totnes. 14 Kingswear was the market town, but when the largerdecked ships came into use in the twelfth century Dartmouth's superior harbour soon made it more important than Kingswear or Totnes. In 1147, the great northern European fleet gathered at Dartmouth for the start of the Second Crusade, and in 1190 more than one hundred ships assembled there to begin the Third Crusade. 15 As early as 1200-1210 Dartmouth had been made the borough of Clifton-Dartmouth-Hardeness for more efficient management of its growing position as a port and trade centre. 16 Although it was outstripped by Plymouth, Dartmouth retained its significant position throughout the Middle Ages and Renaissance. A typical impressment of ships for troop transport to France in the fifteenth century took twenty from Dartmouth, ten from Plymouth, and three from Exeter. 17 As late as 1572, Dartmouth still had far more ships registered than did Plymouth, 18 although Plymouth's deeper moorage attracted more foreign vessels. Dartmouth's sheltered position also made it much better protected from foreign attack, especially after the erection of a stronger castle at the river's mouth in the late fifteenth century and the construction of a great chain that could be stretched from the castle across to the Kingswear side. 19

Dartmouth has fortunately preserved an almost bewildering variety of its medieval and Renaissance records. Although few of these exist in unbroken series, sufficient evidence remains to show that Dartmouth had a tradition of local drama and other entertainments and that at least ten different companies of actors came to town, Queen Elizabeth's most often (four times). The records seem to suggest that the chief times of local festivity were Easter week (references to a Palm Sunday procession and an Easter sepulchre), St George's Day (23 April, references to gathering money and St George's sword and armour), and Corpus Christi Day (regular expenses for gunpowder and the firing of cannon).

An unusual revelation of the Dartmouth records is that they show no acting companies being sent away without playing until 1634–5, very late compared to Dartmouth's neighbours and indeed much of England. That fact seems to fit the general character of the town, which the records show to have been less puritanical than its sister port, Plymouth; Dartmouth remained a loyalist stronghold in the Civil War until forced by Fairfax to surrender. The court books of Dartmouth record more complaints, for instance, about illicit games – and more different kinds of illicit games – than any other town in Devon. Year after year the authorities recorded complaints that the citizens were using the churchyard as a ballpark and the archery grounds as a bowling green rather than for the target practice required by law of all male adults (there were not even any targets set up). There are also far more complaints about houses of ill repute than elsewhere. Dartmouth during the Renaissance, in short, appears to have been rather like San Francisco after the gold rush, with concerned city fathers trying to maintain order but with a transient population and a great variety of entertainment for visitors. It is the kind of town for which one could wish to have a very complete and detailed collection of records pertaining to entertainment.

EXETER

The residents of Totnes and Exeter will argue about which is the older town, but certainly Exeter has great antiquity. It was an important town and the southwest military bastion under Roman occupation; the Romans walled the town and built major roads connecting it to Bath and London. It was a royal city at least as early as AD 658, when it was the seat of the Damnonian king Geraint, and thereafter it was often inhabited by royalty: Alfred, Edward the elder, Athelstan, and Edgar. 20 Elfreda, countess of Devon, was the mother of Ethelred the Unready, whose queen, Emma, became the first 'Paramount Lady of Exeter,' a title held by English queens throughout the Middle Ages. 21 In 1068, when William the Conqueror finally persuaded the citizens of Exeter to capitulate, he built one of his strongest castles there - Rougemont - and rebuilt the Roman walls around the city. On the basis of information obtained from the Poll Tax of 1377, Exeter's population has been estimated at about 2340, hardly impressive by modern standards but enough to make it one of the more important provincial towns. 22 By the reign of Elizabeth it ranked probably fifth or sixth outside of London in wealth and population; the estimated population in 1638 is about 10,000, already spilling out of the walled ninety-three acres into suburbs along the roads from the four main gates. 23

During the Middle Ages Exeter declined as a port chiefly for two reasons: the construction in 1282 of the countess of Devon's fish weir below the city forced the overland transport of goods from Topsham or Exmouth, and the steady rise in tonnage of new ships made the shallow waters of the Exe impossible for them to navigate. 24 But even as it was eclipsed as a major port, Exeter was becoming a prosperous market town. Although sheep raised on the moors produced wool of inferior quality, it was adequate for the manufacture of serge. Serge was in tremendous demand in France and Spain because it was much cheaper than the better woollens. Exeter, and later Tiverton, became the chief suppliers for this market. 25 Throughout the period of this study, Exeter 'was the social and cultural capital of a large province, a cathedral city, an industrial town, and a busy port.'26

Perhaps not surprisingly in light of its antiquity and early importance, Exeter has, outside of London, one of the largest and most nearly complete collections of civic records in England. The rolls of the weekly mayor's court, for instance, are continuous from 1263–4. The Chamber Act Books are extant from 1508 onward. The first receivers' account roll dates from 1304–5, and this series is nearly complete from 1339–40 on. Exeter is also fortunate to have most of the manuscripts of John Vowell alias

Hooker, uncle of Richard Hooker and one of the finest of Renaissance antiquarians. His 'Commonplace Book,' 'Description of the Citie of Excester,' and other writings serve not only as a basic history of the town but also as a custumnal, recording such matters as the basic duties of the city waits.

One would expect to be able to put together from all of these records a very full picture of entertainments at Exeter, and indeed they have provided hundreds of entries for this volume. Unfortunately, accounting procedures changed from time to time, and the receivers' accounts are often not specific regarding gifts and gratuities, where one expects to find payments to entertainers. In the fourteenth century, such gifts were usually merely summarized; in the sixteenth century, they were itemized in separate paper books, and only a few of these have survived. Nevertheless, much important information can be gleaned from these documents. We know, for instance, that Exeter may have had one of the earliest Corpus Christi cycles, considered a tradition in 1413–14. It also records the earliest Robin Hood play I have thus far encountered, in 1427. It had city waits from the middle of the fourteenth century. And it hosted a wide variety of entertainment, from Henry v's leopard keeper, to a 'Tournament of Tottenham,' to the best acting companies of the Renaissance.

Exeter became the see of Devon and Cornwall in 1050, and as St Peter's was not a monastic cathedral, the Dissolution caused no disruption of its records. As a result, the cathedral and diocesan records at Exeter are almost overwhelming in their number and variety. Among the diocesan records at the Devon Record Office, for instance, are the extraordinarily rich episcopal registers from 1257; act books from 1513; deposition books beginning in 1508, complete after 1566; and incomplete sixteenth-century consistory court depositions and presentments. In St Peter's Cathedral library, along with the more famous Exeter Book and Domesday Book, there are, among many other records, cathedral statutes, 1100–1663; fabric rolls from 1279; stewards' accounts from 1296; refectory accounts from 1305; visitations from 1313; chapter act books beginning in 1382 although not a complete series; dean and chapter ordinary and extraordinary expenses from 1377; manorial ministers' and collectors' accounts from 1386; obit books from 1428; excrescence accounts from the same date; quotidian accounts beginning in 1479; Liber Officiorum of the dean and chapter's peculiars, 1521–1629; and vicars choral account books from 1586.²⁷

Except for prohibitions and warnings in the bishops' registers, these many sources and others produce disappointingly few references to early drama. What seems clear is that the bishops were eager to suppress profane and scurrilous plays and that neither dean and chapter nor vicars choral were fundamentally interested in religious drama. The emphasis was always on processions, such as the annual procession in and around the cathedral on Corpus Christi Day, financed by the parish of Widdecombe-in-the-Moor with an oblation also from the Skinners' guild of Exeter, which was responsible for the play at Corpus Christi when one is noted in the civic records. (Widdecombe paid for the oil and wax, the Skinners gave gratuities to the canons in charge of the procession.) As early as 1397, the cathedral also presented something called the 'Prosa sancti Andree' after a procession to the altar of St Andrew, but the entries do not indicate that there was anything dramatic about the presentation.

Exeter provides most of the earliest churchwardens' accounts in the county — in fact, some of the earliest in England. The accounts of St John at Bow begin in 1412, those of Holy Trinity in 1415, St Mary Steps in 1421, St Petrock in 1425, St Mary Arches in 1507, and St Mary Major in 1530. In a large borough, individual parish churches would have had no concern either with civic productions or with visiting entertainers, as they would, for instance, at St Andrew's, Ashburton. Consequently the Exeter churchwardens' accounts contain only a few scattered references to Robin Hood and St George presentations. We could certainly not know from them that by 1509 there were so many Robin Hood 'riots' in Exeter that the city council called a virtual halt to them; this we discover from the Chamber Act Books.

As at York, Coventry, and elsewhere, a potential source of additional dramatic references should be the records of craft guilds in Exeter. Although Exeter seems never to have had as many guilds as some of the larger towns, we do know from the mayors' court rolls and surviving guild records that there were several important ones: the Corpus Christi guild (Skinners); St John the Baptist (Tailors); Assumption of the Blessed Virgin (Tuckers, Weavers, and Shearmen); Holy Trinity (Cordwainers); Blessed Virgin and St Clement (Bakers); St Eligius (Smiths); Barbers; and the Cappers and Haberdashers. Extensive records remain only of the later guild of Weavers, Fullers, and Shearmen, and they are of no help to the history of drama. For the Tailors' guild, only a minute book, 1478-1600, has been preserved. It contains an inventory that mentions torches, streamers, and a banner, but nothing related to the Corpus Christi plays or other drama. For the beginning of the fifteenth century, when some of the guilds seem to have been involved in the production of a Corpus Christi cycle, no relevant records remain. At the close of the century, only the Skinners were responsible for a Corpus Christi play, and their records do not survive.

Although Exeter was not, like Plymouth, given to spontaneous 'triumphs' and celebrations, the records show that there was considerable regularly scheduled civic pageantry providing entertainment of one sort or another. Chief among these were:

May Day: parades and May or Robin Hood plays (15th-early 16th c)
Corpus Christi (sixty days after Easter): processions, plays (15th-early 16th c) Nativity of St John the Baptist (Midsummer, 24 June): perambulation of the city boundaries, torchlight parade with music, annual muster (15th-17th c)
St Poton advisorable and Lampace (14 August) and single and learning the contraction of the city

St Peter ad vincula, or Lammas (1 August): opening of the annual fair, with a parade of dignitaries and musicians (14th-17th c)

Election day (Monday after Michaelmas, 29 September): waits playing throughout the city (14th?-17th c)

Swearing in of new officers (Monday after Election day): parade to the guild-hall, music (13th?-17th c)

Law day (Tuesday after the swearing-in): new mayor's first court, accompanied by city waits (13th?-17th c)

Principal feast days (especially Christmas, Easter): procession of mayor and council to St Peter's Cathedral, preceded by sergeants, waits, and choirboys (16th-17th c)

There were also occasional royal entries and the like, but unlike many cities Exeter did not normally mount elaborate shows and pageants for these; a parade of dignitaries and musicians simply met the royal visitor at the city gate and presented him or her with the keys and a gift of money.

Like most major boroughs, Exeter was governed by the mayor and the council of twenty-four. These were almost exclusively wealthy merchants engaged in the wool industry or the wine trade and other shipping. As Exeter, after 1537, was considered a county as well as a city, it held its own quarter sessions distinct from those of the county justices of the peace, in addition to the weekly mayor's court and the mayor's tourn for minor offences.

The administration of Exeter Cathedral was somewhat more complicated. Although the bishop was nominally in charge, the cathedral was actually run by the dean and chapter, consisting of twenty-four canons. They made the ordinances and statutes and held the purse-strings. They were supposed to be in residence, but numerous complaints by various bishops over the centuries and ordinances passed by as few as five or six canons suggest that there was considerable absenteeism. In any event, the actual day-to-day operation of the cathedral was left to the canons' deputies, the vicars choral. We thus have two separate sets of records for the cathedral, those of the canons and those of the vicars choral.

PLYMOUTH

Plymouth is famous in both history and legend, not only as the site of Drake's game of bowls and the first encounter with the Spanish Armada but also, as Geoffrey of Monmouth and Spenser remind us, as the place where Corineus slew the giant Gogmagog. Before Sutton Prior and its suburbs were incorporated in 1439 as the borough of Plymouth (the first mayor served in 1441), the town itself exercised little political power, partly because it was a dependency of Plympton Priory and partly because it was not considered defensible against foreign attack. But the harbour itself became an important military and trading port shortly after Eleanor of Aquitaine became queen of England with Henry It's accession in 1154: for the next three centuries, the rich wine- and salt-producing area of Gascony was under English rule, and a busy trade of those products for English wool was soon begun. As the closest deep-water port to Bordeaux, Plymouth profited greatly from this trade. Also, because of this proximity and its ability to harbour numerous large ships, Plymouth was a natural site from which to launch military expeditions to Spain, France, and Portugal. Edward the Black Prince sailed from Plymouth with three hundred ships in 1356 and returned there with the French King John II prisoner. ³⁰ In the fifteenth century, in addition to its military and trading importance, Plymouth became, with Dover, one of the two permanently licensed ports of embarkation for the lucrative trade of transporting pilgrims to the shrine of St James of Compostella. And, like Dartmouth and other Devon ports, Plymouth received enormous economic stimulus in the sixteenth century by the discovery of the Newfoundland fishing grounds. By 1595, two million fish were brought home to Plymouth in a single month, with Dutch and French ships waiting in harbour to buy them all. ³¹ Also by that time, Plymouth's population had grown to between eight and nine thousand, nearly as large as Exeter's. ³² In fact, to judge by the assessment of 1334, a century before Plymouth had even become a borough, it had already surpassed Barnstaple and Dartmouth in wealth and was not far behind Exeter. ³³ The lay subsidy of 1523 reaffirms its position as the third wealthiest town in Devon. ³⁴

After the borough's incorporation, the civic government, too, rapidly achieved a position of wealth and power, particularly after the Dissolution, when half its income no longer had to be paid to the prior of Plympton in harbour duties. The receivers' accounts show that the corporation's usable income jumped from an average of about £30 at the beginning of the sixteenth century to over £300 by 1600. As elsewhere, the town was governed by a council of twenty-four, composed mainly of wealthy merchants, and a mayor. The mayor, elected yearly, was usually a merchant also, although

Sir Francis Drake was once elected.

The earliest extant records useful for a study of entertainment in Plymouth begin in 1490-1, from which year there is an almost unbroken series of receivers' accounts. These records reveal a rich tradition of local drama and spectacle. The chief days of celebration apparently were May Day, when the yearly muster was held, an elaborate maypole erected, morris dancing and plays performed, and barrels of ale consumed; Corpus Christi Day, when a play was performed, pageants were constructed, a 'ship of Corpus Christi' was taken about the town, and all taverns were closed while an ale took place in St Andrew's churchyard; Midsummer, with less clearly specified celebrations; and the local holiday called Freedom Day, 21 September (St Matthew's Day), when the mayor walked the bounds of the freedom and apples, nuts, pears, and cakes were distributed to poor children. In the reign of Elizabeth, Coronation Day (17 November) was also an occasion of celebration, as was 'Deliverance Day' (Guy Fawkes day, 5 November) during the Jacobean period. Plymouth was also more likely than most towns in Devon to find additional causes to celebrate: the arrival of foreign dignitaries, a birth in the royal family, a military or naval victory, the return of Sir Francis Drake, or the bringing in of fresh water for the town.

The extant records tell us very little about the number and functions of Plymouth guilds. We know only that there was a Corpus Christi guild in charge of the Corpus Christi celebrations, and that the Tailors' guild was expected to build and maintain a pageant for the procession. Only a few St Andrew's churchwardens' accounts are extant. One of them, for 1498–9, tells us that a source of income was 'dancing money'; whether this was the morris dance of later years or something else is not clear. The first notice of civic waits occurs about the same time, in 1496-7.

From 1494-5 onward, the receivers' accounts show that professional and amateur entertainers from elsewhere came to Plymouth, first minstrels, then bearwards, trumpeters, Henry VIII's camelward, and that entrancing servant of the duke of Suffolk with the dancing bear and the dancing wife.' The first troupe of travelling actors recorded in Plymouth was the king's players in 1526-7. Thereafter, acting companies came in increasing numbers until the 1590s, usually the same companies that appeared at Exeter and Barnstaple. But after 1592-3, something - perhaps that same influence of the nearby and strongly puritan earls of Bedford that had outlawed dancing and bowling at Tavistock as early as 1573 - proved fatal to professional drama at Plymouth. 35 Only in 1598-9, when the queen's and Mountjoy's players appeared, and in 1618-19, when Princess Elizabeth's big troupe of twenty actors came with a warrant signed by the king, were players rewarded for performing. While most towns, under puritan influence, had begun sending players away by 1620, Plymouth's action is unusually early. The local May Day celebration did continue until 1613, but there is no mention of a maypole after 1579, nor of morris dancers after 1604. By the time of the Civil War, Plymouth, unlike the royalist stronghold Exeter, was solidly puritan and resisted a three-year siege by the troops of Charles I. 36 The records of Plymouth thus present a vivid picture of the sudden flourishing and, a hundred years later, the almost equally sudden demise of local and professional entertainment at a prospering but increasingly conservative city.

TOTNES

Totnes was another of the four towns in Devon fortified by Alfred; later it had a Norman motte-and-bailey castle, a priory, a thriving market, and a fair. At the time of the Domesday Book survey, Totnes was the third most important port after Exeter and Barnstaple. But with the advent of larger ships, because it was so far upstream it rapidly diminished in significance as a port. As early as 1334, 'it was already losing trade to Dartmouth,' and had been far outstripped by Plymouth. 'Thereafter, Totnes was content to be a wool and market town.

But Totnes did not dwindle in this capacity. As a centre for the tin and cloth trades, it became increasingly wealthy until the seventeenth century. Its merchants simply used the port facilities at Dartmouth for exporting goods. In 1576–7, only fifteen Dartmouth men were engaged in overseas trade, and they were almost exclusively importers; by contrast there were forty-one Totnes traders using the port, and they were primarily exporters. The lay subsidy of 1523–5 shows that Totnes ranked second only to Exeter in merchant wealth in Devon and as high as fifteenth among all provincial towns in England. By the early seventeenth century it had three annual fairs and numerous markets, and its population had reached about 2500. 40 have hosted numerous groups of entertainers because of its fairs and markets, its surviving records pertinent to the study of early drama are disappointingly scarce. Only enough remains to tell us that Totnes did indeed have a strong tradition of local drama and was a regular stopping place for travelling entertainers. No receivers' accounts exist before 1554-5 and only six between that date and 1584-5. But each of those six contains a number of contributions for this collection, including payments to the queen's players, Leicester's, Worcester's, and several other companies. There are seventeen receivers' accounts between 1605-6 and 1642-3, but these give no additional information, because the arrangements to dispense gratuities changed sometime after 1585. We learn from an incomplete series of mayor's accounts that this task had passed to the mayor, although the extant accounts are too late to include many entries. More important, in 1631-2 the mayor, Samuel Wise, records receipt of a fine from a group of players caught drinking after hours 'in a tipling house'; the significance of this entry is that if the players had not broken the law we would not know either from the mayor's account or the receivers' account that they had been in town at all. We cannot know how many other unnoticed troupes of players passed through Totnes, even in the few years when some gratuities are recorded. Similarly, we know much more about the local drama - plays acted by 'the boys of Totnes' - from their visiting performances at Dartmouth and Plymouth than we learn from any references to them at home.

Parishes

Of some 430 parishes in Devon whose records were checked in this search, only forty-five have preserved — or had until recently — appropriate records early enough to provide entries relating to entertainment. Two of these, Ashcombe and Bigbury, have lost or misplaced their earliest churchwardens' accounts. That leaves forty-three, or just ten per cent, on which to base generalizations about the nature and extent of parish drama. While this may not seem an impressive number, the surprising thing is that any relevant records have survived at all: from 1538, every parish was required to keep its register of births, deaths, and marriages, but no church could be expected to keep for centuries the annual accounts of receipts and petty expenses that give us our only clues to local drama. In any case, a modern pollster might be very well satisfied with that extant ten per cent, for it seems a truly representative cross-section of the county. It includes moorland and sea-coast parishes, urban and rural, rich and poor, congested and isolated, compact and far-flung.

Keeping in mind that not one of these parishes has complete and detailed accounts from early in the Middle Ages – none before 1392 – and continuing all the way through the Renaissance, we still learn from these fragments that sixty per cent show clear evidence of drama and other entertainment, a percentage that holds for both rural and urban parishes. In addition, almost every parish held church ales or other incomeproducing events that could well have provided relevant entries had the records been more specific. All told, we know of thirty-six parishes that definitely held church ales. Some parishes had other means of raising money that at least suggest some kind of entertainment was provided: the 'gathering money of St George' at Dartmouth, the 'maidens' money' at Morebath, the 'dancing money' at Plymouth, and the 'young men's store' in many parishes.

Rather than the system of two churchwardens in charge of income and expenses familiar to most of England, Devon parishes generally had a far more complex system, regardless of their size. Often there were the 'four men,' a sort of village council before which all other groups rendered their accounts. Reporting to the four men would be churchwardens, and coexistent but not necessarily responsible to the churchwardens would be the wardens of various 'stores.' For example, at Chagford during the 1480s, accounts were rendered by the Hoggeners, who collected customs from the four quarters of the village and from the alewardens; by wardens of the Blessed Virgin 'in capella, in charge of expenses for the Mary chapel; by wardens of the Blessed Virgin 'in ecclesia,' who derived income from the church sheep and pasture rental and were responsible for lights in the church; by wardens of St Michael, the churchwardens proper who took care of the church fabric; and by wardens of the great guild of St Katherine, who rented cattle and sheep, collected from fraternity members, and paid the rector his salary. In 1513-14 the Hoggeners paid for the building of fourteen 'pageants' but in the following year the 'church receivers' paid for five more, so that the division of responsibilities is not always clear. By the 1530s, the Hoggeners had become the wardens of the High Cross, a guild of St Nicholas had replaced one of the two St Mary's guilds, and there were new guilds of St Eligius and St Anthony. After the Reformation, instead of being disbanded, these guilds simply changed their names to something less 'papist': Robin Hood and his Hoodsmen, for instance, and the alewardens, the young men's store, the maidens' store, the market wardens, and the St George wardens. The whole arrangement seems complicated, but it was a way of keeping the community involved in church and temporal affairs, and it was apparently the normal arrangement in Devon parishes outside of borough towns - that is, where the parish officials were also the temporal officials. In the 1530s, for instance, accounts were rendered by as many as ten different 'stores' in the tiny parish of Morebath. 43

Another uncommon characteristic of Devon parishes was that there seemed to be no prejudice against appointing women as churchwardens. This was not the case elsewhere, at least not in the eastern counties: in all of Norfolk and Suffolk, for instance, there is not a single example of a woman's having served as churchwarden. But in Devon, although men still far outnumbered women as churchwardens, no one noted it as unusual when Agnes Francis was appointed churchwarden at Shobrooke, or Cecily Gybb at Clyst St George, or Joan Rumbelow or Margyt Borston or Margaret Taylor at Morebath. 44 Again we seem to have a conscious effort to involve the entire community in parish affairs – women, men, maidens, young men.

Households and Monasteries

Household and monastic expense accounts useful to a study of entertainment in Devon are, unfortunately, almost nonexistent.

There are a few merchants' account books, mostly irrelevant to this study, and two diaries of some help, but accounts from such powerful families in Devon as those of Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir Francis Drake, or the Lords Russell, Courtenay, and Dinham are almost nonexistent. From the Courtenay family there remain only fragmentary accounts for parts of four years: a roll of about 1395 when the earl of Devon still remained at Okehampton Castle; a book of expenses of Katherine, countess of Devon, for 1523–4; a book of expenses for January and February of 1519; and a book of expenses of Henry, marquess of Exeter for part of 1525.

Monastic accounts in Devon were, if anything, even less carefully preserved. Unlike some areas such as Yorkshire and Suffolk, where literally thousands of accounts rolls are extant, Devon seems to have lost virtually all of these at the Dissolution. Great masses of title deeds, wills, and court rolls were kept by the lords and the towns who benefited from the dispersion of monastic lands, but the records of daily expenses have not survived. We are left with little clue to entertainment at such great religious houses as Torre Abbey, Tavistock Abbey, Buckfast Abbey, Plympton Priory, or the collegiate churches at Crediton and Ottery St Mary. Only one entry in this entire collection is of monastic origin.

Plays and Players

What the extant records tell us about professional drama in Devon is that it was both earlier and more widespread than the old histories of English drama would lead us to expect. In the twelfth century, members of the clergy were warned not to associate with the players – nor to imitate them. In 1339, Bishop Grandisson complained that actors were performing plays under the shelter of a structure overhanging a cemetery in Exeter. By the time civic officials were giving gratuities to players, we find that all the major touring companies were making regular visits to Devon and that there were also a number of local professional companies that seem not to have strayed much beyond the boundaries of Devon: the players of Master Cayne, the bishop of Exeter, Master Greenfield, Thomas Triplyn, and others. What we do not learn is anything about the repertory of all these companies: neither a single title of a play nor a description of a performance is included in the extant records.

One rather interesting connection between patronage and political power deserves to be pointed out. Without reference to history books, a researcher can tell from the patrons of the professional entertainers who was in power in government and who was out at any particular period in history. To give just one example, at Barnstaple during the reign of Edward IV, there are early payments to minstrels of the kingmaker, Warwick; these cease abruptly with his fall from favour, and instead there appear payments to minstrels of the queen (Lady Elizabeth Grey) and of her brother, Lord Rivers. The king's own entertainers, and those of his brothers Gloucester and Clarence, appear frequently, as do those of Edward's most powerful nobles, Norfolk and Buckingham. But of Lancastrian supporters, only the entertainers of the local duke of Exeter appear in the records. The same thing happened, of course, in Yorkshire, Suffolk, Kent, and elsewhere in England, but the change is particularly apparent in the Barnstaple records because of their detail and completeness during this period.

The nature and extent of amateur drama in Devon conform fairly closely to what researchers have found in other parts of England. There seems to have been more folk drama than religious drama, and it occurs earlier than is generally supposed. Even disregarding Bishop Grandisson's objections to scurrilous and profane plays or games, there is still clear reference to a May play as early as 1417 and to the first Robin Hood play in 1427. The most popular folk plays seem to have been Robin Hood plays, though there is evidence of St George plays as well. Robin Hood is mentioned in the records of a surprising number of towns and villages: Ashburton, Barnstaple, Braunton, Chagford, Chudleigh, Colyton, Exeter, Farway, Honiton, and Woodbury. One must be careful, however, in concluding that all of these references are to actual drama: as the chief function of Robin Hood and Little John was to collect money for the parish church and often to serve as alewardens, some of their appearances may not have been dramatic in any real sense. The records are clear in a few cases, but not clear in most.

In religious drama, the emphasis seems to have been on nativity rather than resurrection plays; at least plays were performed at Christmas more often than at any other time. The clerks, doubtless assuming that anyone who cared to read their accounts would know what the plays were about, seldom bothered to note titles or subjects. Clearly, however, Corpus Christi plays were not common in the county. Plymouth notes players at Corpus Christi in only one year, 1516. Pageants were to be provided for the Corpus Christi guild annually, at least one of which ('the shipp') went about the town; but according to the Plymouth records, the highlight of the day was the church ale at St Andrew's, all wards being required to attend. Some kind of celebration also took place at Barnstaple on Corpus Christi Day, though the records give no clue to its nature. At Ashburton, in addition to the Christmas play and the Robin Hood play, there was a Corpus Christi play. It seems not to have been the same play every year: in 1538 there is an expense for Herod; in 1556, God and 'St Rosmont' appeared in it; and in 1559 Christ is mentioned. Finally, we learn that Exeter once had a Corpus Christi cycle drama, which in 1414 was disrupted by a recalcitrant skinner who was supposed to give the actors their parts but either refused to do so or else corrupted the scripts. There is no other mention of this cycle play, and there are no civic expenses for it. For several years toward the end of the fifteenth century, a single play was presented on Corpus Christi Day by the Skinners' guild. The town council did contribute toward the expenses of this play, but they made no regulations concerning it and give no clue to the method of presentation.

Playing Places and Properties

For local actors, the first choice of location was always the parish church; playing sites other than the church are very seldom mentioned, although in one or two instances the churchyard may have been used. At Woodbury in 1574–5, for instance, twenty-five yards of canvas were purchased to make Robin Hood's house, a structure that presumably would be set up outside the church. And at Morebath, the churchyard was cleaned before 'revel Sunday' or 'St George's Tide, 'when a St George play or other entertainment was provided. Christmas mummers, of course, could perform almost anywhere; in borough records they are most likely to be rewarded for performing at the mayor's house, and on one occasion in the street before his doorway.

Professional actors understandably preferred a site that could accommodate large audiences and where admission could be controlled – that is, after they had acted the obligatory mayor's play at the mayor's house or wherever convenient. In towns large enough to have a guild-hall, that would be the first choice. (The guild-hall at Exeter, rebuilt in 1330 and still standing, was often the site of such performances.) If the guildhall was not available or if the village had none, the church was the obvious alternative. It seems not to be generally recognized that the professional actors continued to perform in churches well into the Elizabethan age. This was true from Lincolnshire to Essex to Devon. Certainly as late as the 1560s, Leicester's and the queen's players were still acting in churches at Dartmouth and Tavistock, respectively. Although we do have Bishop Grandisson's complaint about the actors performing under an overhanging structure in a churchyard, which they had fitted up as a stage, nowhere is there any hint that they ever acted from board and barrel stages at street corners or on village greens. Nor, if we can judge by the records, did they ever act in inns or innyards, except occasionally for the 'mayor's play' at Barnstaple. In fact some negative evidence strongly suggests that they did not do so. An order by the Devon county justices of the peace on 19 April 1604 accuses innkeepers of almost every conceivable abuse allowing gambling, whoring, swearing, riotous behaviour - but it does not mention plays despite the known antipathy of the justices to plays. That same order reminds constables throughout the county that no person who was a resident of the parish where an inn was located, or a resident of any parish adjoining, was allowed to frequent that inn. If actors had tried to perform at the inns, they would have drawn no local customers. The evidence suggests that they did not bother to try.

Although the expense accounts of a number of parishes show that costumes and hand properties were provided to local players when needed - painted cloaks, a fool's coat, beards, heads of hair, golden skins, a silver arrow for Robin Hood - it does not appear that either amateur or professional actors required much if anything in the way of staging. Aside from the canvas house for Robin Hood at Woodbury, only two entries out of the hundreds concerning drama in the county suggest that players used anything but the bare floor for a stage. At Dartmouth in 1567-8 there is an expense for 'carying of bordes to the curche for the players,' and at Plymouth a single similar entry for 'bearing of Bordes' to the guild-hall along with 'other fourniture' for a play presented in 1580 by Worcester's men. There is one expense at Barnstaple for mending the ceiling of the guild-hall broken by the players, but whether that entry suggests elaborate staging or sheer carelessness is debatable. In any case, if the church was the normal playing place, actors would hardly need anything more elaborate than what was already available, the nave floor before the choir screen, for the normal choir screen of a medieval church would have provided an almost ideal stage façade. There would be the doorways to the north and south aisles or chapels for exits and entrances, and the larger centre entrance to the choir in case a bed or throne were needed, and there would be the rood loft in case an actor needed to appear 'above' or 'on the castle walls. '(The dismantling of rood lofts in the reign of Elizabeth would of course have hindered the latter possibility.) What is clear, at any rate, is that even at Ashburton, where there were many expenses for costumes, there were no expenses at all for staging. And nowhere in the county is there any clue that religious drama was ever presented from pageant wagons. Plymouth had its 'shipp' of Corpus Christi that went about the town, but there is no hint that it was used in connection with a play.

Gaps in the Records

Ironically, the closer a researcher comes to 'completeness' in a project such as this, the more apprehensive that person becomes that the mass of records collected will still not give a true picture of entertainment in the county. To what extent would the records of ten abbeys, two collegiate churches, and numerous priories have altered that picture? Would the conclusion then have been that religious drama in Devon consisted primarily of saints' plays and resurrection plays instead of nativity plays? Or can we be sure that the missing records of half the boroughs in the county would have paralleled those of Exeter and Barnstaple? Would survival of the churchwardens' accounts that are missing from ninety per cent of the parishes in Devon simply have increased the number of entries without altering the general impression given by the surviving ten per cent? We cannot know. We can only be aware that what is extant is one scene from a larger play and be very cautious about making generalizations.

In some ways more disturbing than these great gaps in the extant records is the knowledge that the records that do exist can be very misleading. Scribes in any age tend to make note of the unusual rather than the commonplace. If the queen's players come to town, that may be worth noting, but if everyone in the village saw the resurrection play last Easter, why bother to record the fact unless special expenses were involved? We cannot know what was left out of the records, but we have some clues that a very great deal was in fact omitted. For example, to judge by the Exeter receivers' accounts, one would conclude that the only Corpus Christi play presented was the one mounted by the Skinners in nine of the years between 1481 and 1497. If one troublemaker had not been summoned to the mayor's court in 1414, we would never know that Exeter once had a Corpus Christi cycle. We would only know that the Dominicans and the Franciscans had some vague connection with a Corpus Christi procession at that time. Similarly, when one reads the complaint of the churchwardens of Brixham in 1584 that they will have to find a new source of income now that 'the libertye of Brewynge of Chourcheale is taken awaye' and that in the same year the wardens of Shobrooke sold their brewing equipment, one might conclude that church ales disappeared forever. But court records show that Colbrooke, for instance, held church ales until 1636-7. It appears that almost every parish produced revenue by holding church ales and that the tradition of doing so was at least as old as 1444.

Some of these ales clearly provided the customers with drama and other entertainment; are we to conclude that the churches that do not mention such entertainment provided none? One would hardly think so. Even today at a church ale or village fest there are likely to be games and contests, singing and dancing, at the very least a Punch and Judy show or morris dancers with a hobby-horse. The fact that entertainments were common is indicated not by the parish records, which keep very quiet about these forbidden practices, but by the constant complaints and prohibitions issued by the county justices of the peace. Their order of 1595 forbids 'Mynstralcy' and 'dauncynge' at the time of 'Maye games, playes, Church or parishe Ales.' From 1599 on, the justices frequently prohibited revels and May games and maypoles and drinkings. The curiosity is that we would not know of a single one of the entertainments to which they object, whether Rewe revel or Collumpton maypole, if they had not bothered to object. Unfortunately, many of the prohibitions do not name the specific villages but complain generally about 'manie great outrages' and 'the infinite number of Inconveniences dailye ariseinge' from revels and church ales and other entertainments such as bear-baiting and bull-baiting. What they do tell us is that long after such references disappear from parish records the entertainments were still going on.

These are only a few examples of the kinds of information too often missing even from the extant records. There are many others. To cite another, we learn from a plea roll that as early as 1325 there were 'ystrionibus maribus et feminis' in Exeter, but except for the dancing wife in 1531 none of these women entertainers ever appears in the records. They were present, but without that one gratuitous grammatically explicit phrase we would not know of their existence. Perhaps these scattered examples suggest why a researcher feels not only that the extant records are a small sample upon which to base generalizations but also that even those records we do have are not telling the whole truth. Did all professional entertainers except bearwards really disappear from Barnstaple between 1485 and 1525, or did a change in bookkeeping methods omit them from the receivers' accounts? Did the Skinners of Exeter give over their Corpus Christi play in 1497, or did the town council simply stop subsidizing it? These are frustrating questions and the answers merely guesses. It is to be hoped that these records of early drama in Devon will add considerably to our knowledge, but they can hardly give a complete or totally accurate picture.

The Documents

Diocese of Exeter

Penitential of Bartholomew of Exeter

London, British Library, Cotton Vitellius A xII; 1150-70; Latin; vellum; 185 leaves; 200mm × 150mm (175mm × 60mm), 2 cols; foliated in later ink; repaired and rebound in leather in 1869.

Bartholomew's Penitential comprises ff 136–84 of this manuscript, the remainder of which is a collection of early works chiefly on alchemy. The writing is clear, but the exterior margins are frayed, resulting in the loss of some chapter numbers and a few letters at the ends of lines. Some pages have footnotes in an early but different hand.

The document amounts to a precedent book, a collection from church fathers and councils of activities that should or should not be observed. It has nothing directly to do with the diocese of Exeter; but as Bartholomew was bishop of Exeter the book doubtless influenced his administration of the diocese. His Registrum Commune, unfortunately, is not extant to verify this presumption.

Register of Bishop John de Grandisson

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Chanter 3; 1331-60; Latin; parchment; i+221+ii; 305mm \times 225mm; foliated by the scribe j to CCxxj; 19th c. binding in board and half-calf.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Chanter 4; 1333-60; Latin; parchment; 242 + v; 305mm × 225mm; foliated by the scribe j to CCxlij; 19th c. binding in board and half-calf.

These two volumes are in many ways the most interesting of the Exeter bishops' registers. They contain numerous calls for public processions, which do not appear in the present collection, and record the constant efforts by Bishop Grandisson to reform the clergy and to prevent insolencies by boy-bishops and choristers. Chanter 3 has the controversial references to 'the theatre of our city of Exeter,' which we have here given the safer translation, 'a public place' – though Grandisson does seem to have a particular public place in mind. Chanter 4 (f 136v) contains a curious account of a Robert Hode, who after his ordination lapsed into apostasy, left the priory of Plympton, and for a long time 'extitisset in seculo dampnabiliter vagabundus'; when he at length repented his evil ways and applied for readmission to the monastery, the prior told him firmly, 'In nullo modo.'

Register of Bishop Thomas Brantyngham

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Chanter 7; 1370–94; Latin; parchment; 298 leaves; 320mm × 225mm; modern foliation; parts of margins of ff 1–24 lost when MS rebound, some mould; 19th c. binding in board and half-calf.

The first 154 folios once comprised a separate institutions book. Then follow fiftysix numbered folios, three unnumbered folios, eighteen numbered slips of accounts and receipts, and sixty-seven more numbered folios.

There are no direct references to drama in this volume, though there are many calls for processions. Chanter 7 is partly a continuation of Brantyngham's Register from Chanter 6, largely dating from 1385–94. The register reflects the troubled times, with references to the plague, to Wycliffites, and to the Peasant Revolt (in 1388, there are excommunications of the peasants who violently amputated the genitalia of John Pypard, a priest from Plymouth, and of Henry de Synford, a monk of Totnes). Wars against France, Spain, Scotland, and the anti-pope are also mentioned.

Register of Bishop Edmund Lacy

Exeter, Devon Record Office; Chanter 11; 1420–55; Latin; parchment; 340mm × 250mm; 581 leaves; foliated j to CCCClxxxxv by scribe, continued in modern ink from 496 to 581, these last pages consisting of wills and ordinations and probably originally bound separately; 19th c. binding in board and half-calf.

In addition to the two entries transcribed here, Bishop Lacy's Register contains many mandates for good crops, success of the English in war, against 'turbid tempests and vehement inundations,' for the success of Cardinal Beaufort at a peace conference, and the like. There is also an order that the parishioners of Plympton have their palms blessed by the prior rather than by their chaplain for their Palm Sunday procession.

Statutes of Bishop Peter Quinel

Exeter, Cathedral Library, D & C Exeter Ms 3549A; 15th c. copy of Bishop Quinel's statutes of 1287; Latin; parchment and paper; ii + 116 + ii; 170mm × 245mm (100mm × 173mm); 17, 2-78, 84; catchwords; modern pencil foliation; frequent blue initial letters surrounded by red penwork, rubricated section headings and some slight rubrication of text; 16th c. (?) binding of dark brown leather on wood.

Although the original manuscript is no longer extant, thirteen manuscript copies of Bishop Quinel's statutes survive from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. None of these Mss was suitable to be used as a base text. D & C 3549A is described here because it is not described by the editor of the standard edition of these statutes. For a full discussion of the statutes and their Mss, see endnote on pp 437–9 to this entry.

Boroughs and Parishes

ASHBURTON

St Andrew's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 2141A PW1; 1479–1580; Latin and English; paper; 241 leaves; 278mm × 210mm; modern pencil foliation (f 156 repeated); leaves in fair condition but unfortunately amended with non-transparent paper tape; bound in board and leather.

Accounts at the church of St Andrew were rendered on 6 May. They were transcribed and published in 1979 by Alison Hanham; those in Latin were translated and entries were often summarized. Between 1479 and 1549, there are frequent expenses for the repair of pageants or tabernacles; these would at first seem to be entries relevant to this study, but the context makes clear that these were fixed shrines inside the church. In 1523–4, for instance, a new tabernacle was built 'over the altar of St John.' In 1549–50, these pageants or tabernacles were taken down, along with the images of saints, and burnt.

BARNSTAPLE

Receivers' Accounts

Barnstaple, North Devon Athenaeum, Book 3972; 1389–1649; Latin and English; vellum, parchment, and paper; 242 documents comprising 308 leaves; dimensions of leaves irregular (length varies from 300mm to 740mm; width varies from 200mm to 400mm); numbered by document 1–242 (two are numbered 189 and one between 89 and 90 not numbered); 19th c. board and leather cover, title: Receivers' Accounts, 1386–1643.

This is a collection of original documents put together at the expense of J.O. Halliwell-Phillips when he examined the Barnstaple records in the late nineteenth century. Included are surviving accounts of the receivers, bailiffs, bailiffs of Richmond's lands, wardens of the long bridge, collectors of rents, one chamberlain's account, four St Peter's churchwardens' accounts, three from the wardens of St George's guild and one from St Nicholas' guild. Of all these, only the 103 receivers' accounts contain entries pertinent to this study.

Halliwell-Phillipps clearly intended to include all the early civic accounts in this one volume, but he missed twenty-six receivers' accounts. Seventeen (numbers 2003–19) are from the reign of Edward IV. Fifteen of these are single membranes, varying in width from 220mm to 385mm and in length from 610mm to 840mm. Number 2005, for 1463–4, contains two membranes, 255mm × 580mm and 255mm × 240mm. Number 2014, for 1475–6, likewise has two membranes, 280mm × 560mm and 280mm × 120mm. All of these rolls are in Latin.

In addition to these seventeen, Halliwell-Phillipps omitted a single roll for 1607–8, number 2525; parchment, English; 360mm × 650mm. Finally, there are eight damaged and/or fragmentary paper accounts, numbers 2517–24. The first four are for 1554–5, 1555–6, 1556–7, and 1558–9. Numbers 2521 and 2522 are rough drafts of the extant receiver's account for 1640–1. Numbers 2523 and 2524 are undated fragments for either 1562–3 or 1563–4. These fragments are all in English, on paper 300mm × 400mm.

All of the Barnstaple receivers' accounts run from Michaelmas to Michaelmas.

Philip Wyot's Journal

Toronto, Records of Early English Drama, English Ms 1; transcription, begun 22 April 1800, of extracts, relating to the years 1586–1608, from the journal of Philip Wyot, town clerk of Barnstaple (and from other MSS relating to Barnstaple); English; paper; 64 leaves (41–64 blank); booklets of varying length bound together; modern pencil foliation (to f 42; f 1 also unnumbered); no decoration; original (?) tan board binding with paper spine, no title, but 'Henry Gribble, Barnstaple | 22 April 1800' on flyleaf; 'Extracts from an old Manuscript in the | Possession of William Palmer of Barnestaple Clerk | wrote by Philip Wyot Townclerke of Barnestaple | beginning at the year 1586 to 1608 | It I find Philip Wyot Stild Townclerk in 1558' on f 2). Transcription by Henry Gribble.

J.R. Chanter in his 'Introductory Note' to Philip Wyot's Diary (Sketches of the Literary History of Barnstaple, pp 89–90) states that in 1810 there were two or three copies in abridged form of the lost original. The copy that Chanter used in his 1866 edition was 'the only perfect one now in existence, though there are several imperfect and partial ones.' The REED MS of the diary is not the one Chanter used. It probably is one of the other versions that Chanter alludes to in his introduction.

Decree in Chancery

Exeter, Devon Record Office, R 2379 A/Z 2; late 18th c.; English; paper; 6 leaves; 372mm × 227mm; contemporary pagination (1–11); bound with 5 other booklets in 18th c. board binding with gold title on red spine: CHARTERS | &c | BIDEFORD.

This is a copy of a copy apparently made on 8 July 1656 of a Chancery decree made during Trinity term 1608. It is in a collection containing copies of various charters and other documents pertaining to the borough of Bideford. While the date of the decree is 1608, there is no indication in the complaint of the dates on which the feoffees of the long bridge squandered town money by attending stage plays. Although the copy was made fifty years later, there is no reason to doubt the authenticity of the document.

BRAUNTON

St Brannock's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1677A/PW1a; 1554–1611; English; paper; 135 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; modern foliation; heavily but carefully repaired; leather binding.

The book is a collection of originally separate leaves. It begins with the accounts of the wardens of 'the store of St Brannock,' apparently the churchwardens, 1555—1611; then it begins again in 1554 with the accounts for the store of St John and St George and continues until 1599, when the two sets of wardens were combined. The collection concludes with a series of constables' accounts for 1591—9, a few miscellaneous accounts of vicars and collectors for the Marshalsea, and finally a few later seventeenth-century fragments of parish register. In general, the guild of St John and St George was responsible for the vicar's salary and church lights, and the wardens of St Brannock's for the church fabric and civic affairs, but there is some cross-over even in the early accounts. By 1570, there is hardly a discernible distinction. Each guild held two church ales a year, St Brannock's at Christmas and Midsummer, and St John and St George's at Easter and Whitsun. The latter guild was in charge of the Robin Hood play, while St Brannock's wardens appear to have paid visiting players. The early accounts show clearly that there was a tabernacle or shrine to St George in the church.

Visitations Book

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1677A/PW5, formerly Phillipps MS 15755; 1608-28; paper;

72 leaves; 150mm \times 200mm; modern pencil pagination 1–144 (pp 62–110 blank); fair condition; 19th c. leather binding.

The book consists almost entirely of presentments occasioned by the rural dean's visitations.

St Michael's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1429A/PW3; 1530-8; Latin; paper; 33 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; first 29 leaves paginated 156-213 in pencil, last 4 unnumbered; separate sheets gathered and bound in 19th c.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1429A/PW4; 1538–46; Latin and English; paper; 34 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; numbered in pencil but not consistently by page or by folio for the first 17 leaves, the last 17 foliated only, so that the 34 leaves are given numbers 1–48; separate sheets gathered and bound in 19th c.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1429A add/PW1; 1551–62; English; paper; ii + 32 + i; 308mm \times 210mm; some pages foliated in pencil but not in the order of the binding, others unnumbered; heavily repaired with many fragmentary leaves; repaired and rebound c 1900.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1429A add/PW2; 1563-71; English; paper; 26 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; incomplete and inconsistent foliation in pencil; heavily repaired with some fragmentary leaves; separate sheets gathered and bound in 19th c.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1429A add/PW3; 1572-99; English; paper; 71 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; a few folios numbered in pencil but not in correct sequence; heavily repaired; sheets gathered and bound in 19th c.

There is one earlier volume in this series, 1429A/PW1, 1480–97, but it contains nothing relevant. In the seven volumes, in addition to the accounts of the churchwardens of St Michael's, there are accounts of the guilds of St Mary 'in capella,' St Mary 'in ecclesia,' St Katherine, St Nicholas, St Eligius, St Anthony, St George, the high cross, the holders, the four men, the Hoggeners, the hoodsmen, the maidens, the youngmen, the receivers of charitable gifts, the custodians of market and shambles, the market wardens, and the alewardens. There were not, however, eighteen different guilds or stores; the names and functions simply changed over the years, and numerous reorganizations occurred, so that it would be extremely difficult to form a consistent picture of the various sources of income for the church. There seem not to have been more than six guilds or stores at any one time.

CHUDLEIGH

St Martin's and St Mary's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, East Devon Record Office; Chudleigh PW1; 1561–1677; English and Latin; paper; 812 leaves; 290mm × 210mm; paginated in pencil 1–802, 5 unnumbered leaves at the end; bound in 1847 in board and leather, with brass clasps.

This contains chiefly accounts of the four men (the civic and parish officers), but there are also accounts of the market men, Our Lady store, the lightstore, the wardens of the high store, the young men (or Hoggeners), and of Robin Hood and Little John. After 1629, accountings are rendered only by the churchwardens. In the sixteenth century, the main sources of income were the usual church ales and the Robin Hood play, which in 1561 contained nine actors, including Robin Hood, Little John, and the inevitable Vice. This record provides one more indication in a growing list that the presence of a vice figure is no evidence of morality influence.

In the seventeenth century, the Chudleigh account book contains yearly payments of 20s to Mr Wolcome for 'the sporting place.' This is occasionally called the bowling green, but it seems also to have been the site of the football games and perhaps of other entertainments as well. Why the church should have to rent it from Mr Wolcome is not explained. In 1613 a fine of 15s was paid because the football players spoiled the grass.

Unlike other towns, Chudleigh had no set date for rendering accounts. May and July occur most often, but any month except April and November was likely to be chosen; consequently, some accounts are for as little as nine months, others for as many as eighteen.

COLYTON

Bishop's Audience Court Depositions

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Chanter 858; 1572-5; English and Latin; paper; 160 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; modern foliation in pencil; half-calf binding.

The book is in good condition, but it is written in a hasty hand, apparently by the court recorder at the time the depositions were made; consequently, some readings are uncertain, especially in the heavily abbreviated Latin introductions to and dispositions of the cases. The cases themselves are those that fell under ecclesiastical rather than civil court jurisdiction, from the parishes in Devon and Cornwall that were among the bishop's peculiars. Fourteen other such deposition books exist, from 1508 to 1640, but they contain no entries relevant to this study.

CREDITON

Warden's Account for the Corporation of Crediton

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1660 A/41; 1581-2; English; parchment; 5 membranes sewn end to end, written on one side only, 1-5; roll 3000mm × 340mm.

Crediton, a cathedral town before the see was moved to Exeter, was always an important town. By the mid-sixteenth century its budget was nearly as large as that of Exeter. Because it lay on the main road between Exeter and Barnstaple, both of which hosted a great many professional entertainers, it is incredible that those travelling professionals did not also stop at Crediton. Yet despite its wealth and lavish spending habits (the schoolmaster, eg, received an annual stipend of forty marks, five times the average in the county), there is no evidence in the extant records that actors were rewarded, or even came to town. Possibly, as at Exeter in the sixteenth century, the chief civic officer (the headwarden) gave gratuities to players from his very considerable expense account of £60, so that payments to them do not appear in the account rolls. Whatever the reason, the virtually complete series of account rolls (parchment books after 1604) from 1551 to 1642 contains almost nothing of interest to this study. For the period before 1642, account rolls are missing only for the years 1561-2, 1600-1, 1609-11, 1614-15, 1622-3, and 1629-30. Crediton seems one clear instance in which the absence of references to entertainers in the records does not imply their absence from the town.

Borough Court Books

Exeter, Devon Record Office, SM 1986; 1577-92; Latin and English; paper; 567 leaves; 415mm × 285mm; pencil foliation; tooled leather binding, clasps missing.

There is a series of these borough court books from 1484 to 1649 (SM 1981–SM 1989). Although only two contain entries relevant to this study, they also have many grand jury presentments regarding the playing of unlawful games, a number of which are not listed in the OED. Many complain about the playing of various ball games in the churchyard (including stool-ball, the ancestor of cricket), which resulted in numerous broken windows and fines to the players.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, SM 1987; 1601–12; Latin and English; paper; 657 leaves; 415mm × 285mm; pencil foliation; tooled soft leather binding backed with a fragment of an Italian play, Prima Giornata or Giornata Prima, the fragment containing a dialogue between two characters, Pip and Nan. The flyleaf is part of an illuminated plainsong service book.

St Saviour's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61218; 1494-5; English and Latin; parchment; 1 mb; 400mm × 310mm, receipts and expenses in 2 columns.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61333; 1533-4; English; parchment; 2 mbs; 550mm × 260mm (each); written mbs 1-2, 2d-1d.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61341; 1540-1; English; parchment; 3 mbs; 700mm × 325mm; written mbs 1-3, 3d-1d.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61342B; 1541-2; English; parchment; 2 mbs; $600 \text{mm} \times 270 \text{mm}$; written mbs 1-2, 2d-1d.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61391; 1551-2; English; paper; 7 leaves (1 blank leaf cut away); 320mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unnumbered.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61391A; 1552-3; English; paper; 5 leaves stitched together at top; 420mm × 300mm.

These are the first pertinent documents from a series of several thousand individual items within the time period of this study. The documents examined include accounts of the churchwarden (the church was dedicated as Holy Trinity but popularly called St Saviour's), the chantry warden, the warden of the high store and Blessed Virgin Mary, the warden of the high altar, the mayor, the receiver, the warden of the rents, as well as scattered expenses for the upkeep of the castle, collections for the fleet, fines, minutes of the common council, watch and ward expenses, and other assorted bills and expense accounts. These individual documents are indexed and shelved chronologically without regard for type or class; they are of such a disparate nature as to defy any general description. Some are single sheets of parchment, others paper booklets, of no standard size or shape.

The relationship of various officials at Dartmouth is not completely clear. As there are no receivers' accounts before 1544 and no churchwardens' accounts after 1554, and as accounts from both officers do not exist for any single year, it seems likely that the two offices are the same and that the title gradually changed. The office of collector of the rents, however, is distinct: separate accounts of receiver and collector do exist for various years, even though the kinds of payments they make are similar. One cannot predict, for instance, whether the receiver or the collector of rents will reward a visiting company of actors. And in a few years, it is the mayor who rewards

Other entries in the 1494-5 churchwardens' account show that there was a procession on Easter as well as an Easter sepulchre; whether or not these were related to the play is not indicated. The churchwardens' account for 1497-8 (DD 61237), while it suggests no play, contains this curious entry: 'Item paid for makyng of the crossys to set in the treys in ye church yerd – jd.' Other accounts list among receipts the 'St George gathering money,' entries that suggest that St George's sword and armour were not mere fixtures in the church.

Churchwardens' accounts were rendered usually at Michaelmas, like the mayors' and receivers' accounts.

Mayors' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61322; 1528–30; English; paper; 4 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; leaves unnumbered; no binding.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61330; 1531–3; English; paper; single sheet; 425mm \times 310mm; damaged and incomplete.

DD 61331 is a rough draft of the above but more complete; it consists of three paper leaves, $360 \text{mm} \times 275 \text{mm}$, sewn together at the top. The entries relevant to this study are not significantly different.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 62560; 1633-4; English; paper; 6 leaves (last blank); 400mm × 145mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 62604; 1634-5; English; paper; 6 leaves (last blank); 335mm × 235mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Receivers' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, SM 2002; 1509–73; Latin and English; paper; 190 leaves; 280mm × 200mm; foliated 1–100 in modern pencil, remaining 90 leaves blank and unnumbered, except that f [189v] contains various memoranda of 1536–7 and f [190v] contains a memorandum of 1511; 16th c. tooled leather binding.

Although the book is titled 'Mayors' and Receivers' Accounts, 'it begins and ends as a memorandum and quietus book, including memoranda of debts owing to the town, discharges for mayors, receivers, water bailiffs, and the collector of the rents, summaries of expenses for castle and harbour repairs, and the like. One fourteen-year period, however, between 1555 and 1569, has itemized expenses for the collector of the rents (ff 47–93v). His expenses are of the same kind, but not identical to, those of the receiver that survive as individual items. As both officials made payments for both church and town, whatever their distinctions, there clearly was considerable overlapping of responsibilities; it appears that after 1579–80 only the office of receiver survived, as no later collectors' accounts exist.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61448; 1569-70; English; paper; 6 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61460; 1573-4; English; paper; 10 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61503A; 1579-80; English; paper; 8 leaves (1st and last 3 blank); 300mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61583; 1591-2; English; paper; 8 leaves; 310mm × 204mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61619; 1598-9; English; paper; 12 leaves (last 5 blank); 300mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 61763; 1608-9; English; paper; 10 leaves (last 4 blank); 310mm × 200mm; 1 gathering; unfoliated; unbound.

EXETER

Mayor's Court Rolls

The city of Exeter possesses a most remarkable and virtually complete series of mayor's court rolls from 1282 onwards. As these rolls deal mainly with civil law – suits for debt, assault and battery, and the like – they do not normally come within the province of the present study, even when the person charged with debt or selling unsealed beer is a minstrel or a luter. There are, however, a number of entries that are pertinent, mainly appointments of city waits but also the earliest mention of the Corpus Christi play in Exeter, in 1414.

The rolls consist of records of the mayor's court, each recorded usually on a separate membrane and the whole collection for one year, Michaelmas to Michaelmas, stitched together at the top. The number of membranes for any one year varies from thirty-six to ninety-six, but the norm is fifty-two, one for each week's court. These vary in size from 210mm to 310mm in width, and 470mm to 840mm in length; the average is 250mm × 600mm.

As the entire series before 1642 contains some twenty thousand parchment membranes of tiny writing, front and dorse, in heavily abbreviated Latin, it was not possible, for this study, to read every word of every roll. The early rolls were spotchecked, and from the reign of Richard II onwards they were carefully read until 1508, when the Chamber Act Books begin and relevant entries were transferred from the court rolls to the act books. While no one, so far as is known, has read the entire series, various portions of it have been read by different scholars for various purposes, so that the likelihood of any important entry having been missed is slim.

Receivers' Account Rolls

This remarkable series of account rolls begins with an isolated roll for 1304–5 and then from 1339–40 continues in almost unbroken sequence right through 1642; perhaps two dozen rolls are missing from the three centuries. The parchment rolls vary in length from one to seven membranes sewn end to end, and the membranes themselves vary too widely in size to permit meaningful generalizations. All are in Latin.

Of the paper books that survive, there are isolated books for 1523–4, (Box 213, Book 1), 1556–7 (Box 214, Book 5), 1557–8 (Box 214, Book 10), and 1562–3 (Box 214, Book 11); from 1573–4, there is a series of fifty-three books for all but twelve years through 1637–8. Most of these latter are sewn to the vellum account rolls. The books are in English, vary from forty-two to four leaves, the average being eight, in one gathering and usually with a paper cover; 300mm × 200mm.

While the series as a whole contains a mine of information about entertainment in Exeter, it is also disappointing in many ways. The early rolls tend to summarize gifts into a composite total, and, with the exception of the early decades, those of the fifteenth century seldom mention payments to visiting entertainers. The explanation for the missing payments may lie in the practice of the receivers in the sixteenth century, when such payments were itemized on separate paper books and only rarely on the parchment rolls. None of these paper books exists for years earlier than 1523, however, and there is none for many of the years thereafter. Consequently, there are long periods in the records when the only relevant entries concern the city waits; only the rare periods such as the 1430s give us some notion of the number of entertainers who came to Exeter.

City Council Chamber Act Books

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/1, Act Book 1; 1508–38; English; paper; 199 leaves; 200mm × 285mm; foliated in ink 1–195 in modern hand, last 4 leaves fragmentary and unnumbered; plain parchment cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/2, Act Book 2; 1509-60; English and Latin; paper; ii + 206; 200mm × 285mm; foliated 1-196 in ink in later hand, ff 1-204 also paginated 1-408, including an index of 7 leaves by Richard Izacke, last 2 leaves blank and unnumbered; plain parchment cover.

The flyleaf contains a few isolated notes, one dated 1559; the second unnumbered leaf is an inventory, dated 10 October 1537, of the ornaments of St George Chapel delivered up by Mr Lake, the mayor's chaplain. From there, the book begins with chamber acts of 5 October, 9 Henry VIII; but ff 5–15 are blank and at f 16 is a redaction, or custumnal, of acts passed since 1 Henry VIII. At f 25v the scribe has got back to the present, and the entry on that page is for 22 December, 9 Henry VIII. From that point on the entries are more or less chronological to 1 June 1560.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/3, Act Book 3; 1560-81; English; paper; 252 leaves; 200mm × 300mm; paginated in ink by contemporary hand 1-492, with 6 blank unnumbered leaves at the end; vellum cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/5, Act Book 5; 1588–1601; English; paper; iii + 286 + iii; 200mm × 300mm; foliated in ink 1–286, numbered in pencil 1a–1d, 1–573 with the 3 blank leaves at end not numbered; vellum cover.

The Act Book itself stops at f 277v; an index by Izacke fills ff 279-86.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/6, Act Book 6; 1601-11; English; paper; 239 leaves; 200mm × 300mm; foliated 1-231, with an additional gathering of 8 leaves containing Izacke's index to the volume; vellum-covered paper binding.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/7, Act Book 7; 1611-34; English; paper; 436 + xii; 200mm × 300mm; foliated in ink 1-436, final gathering of 12 leaves containing Izacke's index not numbered, also paginated in modern pencil 1-895, the last page blank and unnumbered; vellum cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/B1/8, Act Book 8; 1634–47; English; paper; 219 leaves; 200mm × 300mm; paginated in pencil 1–453, last 15 leaves containing Izacke's index unnumbered; vellum cover.

Freemen's Book

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, Book 55; 1265–1696; Latin and English; paper; 300mm × 410mm; 238 leaves; foliated 1–238; board and leather binding.

The original title of the book is 'Repertorium testamentorum finium & omnium Aliorum memorandorum in Rotulis Ciuitatis Exonie inuentorum.' Intended at first to be a court memorandum book, it begins in 11 Richard II with memoranda dating back to 1265 but breaks off at f 37v with 11 Richard II. It begins again on f 38v with 32 Henry VI and is continued with various legal notices and chartularies until 1696. But long lists of freemen of the city take up more than half of the book, and it is from these lists that the entries pertinent to this study are taken.

Exeter Cathedral Inventory

Exeter, Cathedral Library and Archives, D & C 3671; 1327; Latin; parchment, with paper flyleaves; iv + 24 + iv; modern pagination (part 18th c.); 345mm × 240mm; single booklet; no decoration; some staining, pp 15, 18, long original split, p 3; 18th c. board binding covered with marbled pink paper, leather spine.

Exeter Cathedral Chapter Act Books

Exeter, Cathedral Library, D & C 3550; 1382–1439; Latin; paper; 300mm × 230mm; 146 leaves; foliated j to Clxiij in pencil, 3 leaves unnumbered; heavily repaired; board and leather binding.

Exeter, Cathedral Library, D & C 3551; 1521-35; Latin; paper; 275mm × 180mm; 325 + v; 16th or 17th c. Arabic foliation 1-325, with an unnumbered index of 5 leaves; 19th c. half-calf binding.

These 'act books' seem to be books of notes taken at meetings of the cathedral dean and chapter. They consist primarily of memoranda of decisions made by the chapter, warnings to clerics about absenteeism or misbehaviour, and so on. The entries are in many hands, even during a single year.

Exeter Cathedral Dean and Chapter Account Book

Exeter, Cathedral Library, D & C 3779; 1485–1567; Latin and English; paper; 300mm × 215mm; 240 leaves; foliated in later ink; board and leather binding.

This was probably a rough paper account book, kept for later entries onto rolls; in any case it is not neat and tidy and does not seem intended as a final copy. It contains accounts of pensions from 1485 to 1595, followed by ordinary expenses and various memoranda from 1485 to 1567. Only expenses are listed, without receipts. Accounts are from Michaelmas to Michaelmas. In 1485–6, 1488–9, and 1490–1 there are payments to 'Custodi br'; one is tempted to read the abbreviation 'vr' and expand to 'vrsorum,' thus producing payments to a bearward, but the initial letter seems clearly b, not v.

Exeter Cathedral Vicars Choral Accounts

Exeter, Cathedral Library, D & C Vicars Choral Book III; 1610–33; English; paper; 308mm × 205mm; 24 leaves; unfoliated; parchment cover marked 'An Account Book from 1610 to 1633.'

This is the second of three Vicars Choral account books, the first, VC II, dating from 1586–1607, and the third, VC IV from 1627–45; there are no relevant entries in the other two books. The accounts run from 21 September, the feast of St Matthew, rather than from Michaelmas to Michaelmas.

Trinity Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1718A add/PW2; 1415-85; Latin; parchment; 59 mbs; size varies from 275mm to 310mm wide × 305mm to 520mm long; irregular bundle stitched together at top; unnumbered and not in chronological order; in fair condition but unrepaired.

These are mainly churchwardens' accounts containing nothing pertinent to this study. Membranes 4–9, however, are accounts of the guild of St George between 1477 and 1485, and these do contain some entries of interest. Although it was located at Holy Trinity, the fraternity apparently had members from other Exeter parishes. It had an annual feast on St George's Day, sold beer at church ales, seems to have had a procession, and owned vestments of St George but nothing that is clearly play gear. Later accounts (PW3, 1510–46) show that the guild was a major source of income for the church, but nothing is recorded except annual receipts from the guild. These later accounts also record receipts from an annual 'colleccione puellarum vocata le pryce Maydens' but give no hint of what that celebration entailed. A final collection of accounts (PW4, 1547–56) contains nothing relevant.

St John's Bow Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, DD 36765-DD 36772; 1412-1598; Latin and English; parchment; number of mbs variable; length varies from 210mm to 570mm; width from 120mm to 330mm; mbs stitched into rolls:

DD 36765: 10 mbs, 1412-22 DD 36766: 32 mbs, 1425-59 DD 36767: 18 mbs, 1461-83 DD 36768: 15 mbs, 1485-1508 DD 36769: 30 mbs, 1508-44 DD 36770: 5 mbs, 1547-52

DD 36771: 2 mbs, 1553-4 and 1555-6

Many of the entries in these accounts are fascinating but do not certainly belong in this collection: the Easter sepulchre in 4 Henry VI, a movable 'trabs' with stars in 23 Henry VI, numerous church ales with entertainment not specified, mysterious income from the fraternity of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary of the city of Exeter (Weavers), etc. What is clear is that St John's Bow had a long history of dramatic or semi-dramatic activity that the records printed here do not reflect.

The accounting year was All Saints to All Saints, except in 1457-8, when it was Michaelmas to Michaelmas.

Account Roll of Henry VII

London, Public Record Office, E101/414/16; 1497; English; paper; 136 leaves; 138mm × 210mm; modern foliation; good condition; vellum binding (probably contemporary), leather strengthening at spine, original leather closure lost, now enclosed in modern box.

Bill of Complaint of John Yeo against Thomas Wyncott

London, Public Record Office, C1/1284/11; 1547–51; English; parchment; single sheet; $180 \text{mm} \times 305 \text{mm}$ (160mm \times 265mm); good condition; mounted and bound in with other documents in modern red cloth binding.

Thomas Wyncott's Answer to the Complaint of John Yeo

John Hooker's Commonplace Book

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, Book 51; 1590; English; paper; 371 leaves; 275mm × 415mm; foliated 1–364, with 7 blank unnumbered leaves at the end; bound in board and leather cover.

Called 'The Common-place Book of John Vowell alias Hoker, Chamberlain of the City of Exeter,' this is really a custumnal or Domesday book with a history of the city appended. Hooker, 1525–1601, was Richard Hooker's uncle and foster-father. He first became chamberlain of the city in 1555, and this book was doubtless compiled over a period of many years. Hooker himself used it when he wrote his magnum opus, The Description of the Citie of Excester, which has been plundered by every subsequent historian of the city. The history continues through 1589, and the final page lists the mayor and bailiffs for 1590.

Description of the Citie of Excester

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, Book 52; c 1590; English; paper; 540 leaves; 270mm × 390mm; foliated 1–524 by Hooker, 18 leaves at end unnumbered; board and leather binding.

This is John Hooker's great history of Exeter. It seems to have been completed in 1597; of the eighteen unnumbered leaves at the end, all but two are blank, and these contain the names of freemen admitted to the city between 1597 and 1600. The book is in Hooker's hand and is not illuminated but contains rubrics throughout.

Mayor's Letter to Sir Thomas Lake

London, Public Record Office, SP 14/97/140; 1618; English; paper; single sheet; 310mm × 210mm (185mm × 150mm); good condition; bound and foliated with other documents (f 307) in red cloth with leather spine and corners.

Ancient Letters

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/X1/Letter Book 60 D; 1624; English; paper; 290mm × 205mm; numbered 267 in modern hand.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Exeter City Archives, G1/X1/Letter Book 60 E; 1634; English; paper; 235mm × 200mm; numbered 365 with stamp counter.

The first of these 'ancient letters' is a copy made by the town clerk, Samuel Izaack, of a letter from Sir Henry Herbert, Master of the Revels. The letter is reprinted, with omission of some difficult passages, in the Historical Manuscripts Commission Report on Exeter, together with a note (p 172), 'An abstract of this taken from Stuart Moore's Calendar is printed in J.T. Murray, i, 362; ii, 272, altering the date to 1623.' Why Murray changed the correct date is not clear. The second letter is simply a recommendation from the mayor of Wells to the mayor of Exeter on behalf of Henry Loxton, who became one of the waits of Exeter.

John Hayne's Diary

Exeter, Devon Record Office, MS 36; 1631–43; English; paper; x + 147 + x; 178mm × 143mm, 2 cols (ruled into 6 vertical cols); 20th c. foliation superseding contemporary (inaccurate) foliation; fair condition (some pages loose); repaired and rebound c 1920 in dark brown leather, with gold decoration on spine and gold embossed title: MS | HOUSEHOLD | EXPENSES | &c || JOHN HAYNE | EXETER | 1631–1643.

FARWAY

St Michael's Churchwardens' Book

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 67A PW1; 1564-1678; English; paper; 45 leaves; 200mm × 300mm; foliated 1-25 (19 of the last 20 leaves blank); paper covers.

The booklet is in fragile condition. The faded ink of the earliest entries was 'amended' in 1631 by Thomas Wood, whose tracing over in darker ink has made some entries almost illegible. The entries are mostly summaries of accounts or simple quittances of churchwardens and wardens of the poor, with occasional memoranda of elections and of extraordinary expenses. The chief source of income seems to have been the annual Whitsun ale, but these summaries provide no details about entertainment. The summary accounts cease in 1591; the remainder of the notes are concerned with the succession to the wardenship.

St Michael's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1639A PW1; 1570–1651; English; paper; 168 leaves; 180mm × 275mm; foliated in modern pencil; many fragmentary leaves, ink badly faded and often illegible; repaired and bound in calf.

Listed as 'churchwardens' accounts, 1517–1651,' in fact the earliest entry is 1570. As the wardens' expenses consistently exceed their income before the introduction of rates in the 1590s, there were clearly other sources of parish income not reflected in these accounts. The sidemen's accounts of secular expenses are not extant but may have contained the sources of additional income. Accounts are from the feast of St Andrew, 30 November.

KILMINGTON

St Giles' Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 3047A PW2; 1609–37; English; paper; i + 33 + v; 320mm × 208mm; pencil pagination (for repair); repaired and rebound c 1980.

MOREBATH

St George's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 2983A PW1; 1526–1635; English; paper; 205 leaves; 205mm × 310mm; foliated in pencil 1–205, also paginated in a different hand 1–410; 19th c. calf binding.

Listed as accounts from 1520–1635, the accounts in fact run from 1526–1596, with a single sidemen's account for 1635. They are in fair condition but are not bound in chronological order, the first being for 1570 and the last for 1566. The accounts include returns of the churchwardens as well as those of the wardens of stores or guilds, as many as ten in 1534. At one time or another, there are accounts for the wardens of the young men, alms light, Our Lady, St George, Jesus, St Sidwell, St Sonday, the four men, St Antony, the maidens, the high store, the three men, the five men, the sheepwardens, the grooming wardens, and the alewardens. The great guild seems to have been the guild of St George; most of the entries included here are from that guild's accounts. Morebath was somewhat unusual in that the churchwardens were frequently women. It was also unusual in that it had no fixed accounting date; accounts were rendered in July more often than in any other month, but the date could vary from February to November.

OKEHAMPTON

Journal of John Rattenbury, Town Clerk

Some Account of the Barony and Town of Okehampton: Its Antiquities and Institutions. Including the Journals kept by Messrs. Rattenbury and Shebbeare, Gents. and Burgesses from the 21 James I., to the Death of William III; with Notes Genealogical, Descriptive, and Explanatory. W.H.K. Wright (ed) (Tiverton, 1889).

PLYMOUTH

Receivers' Accounts

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 130; 1490–1561; English; paper; 271 leaves; 225mm × 300mm; foliated in 16th c. hand 1–272 (f 48 accidentally repeated as f 47, so that numbering is off thereafter by 1; ff 250, 251 missing), the whole renumbered 1–271 in pencil; repaired and in good condition; parchment cover.

This is the earliest book of receivers' accounts; it begins in 1490–1, continues to 1549–50, and ends with a lone account for 1560–1 and a partial account for 1500–1. As the transcriptions show, the book is rich in information about entertainment in Plymouth, often including details such as playing places not provided by accounts from other boroughs.

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 131; 1560-9; English; paper; 67 leaves; 220mm × 320mm; 1 gathering, stitched at f 34; first 50 leaves foliated in modern pencil, last 18 blank; unrepaired, in very good condition, though unprotected first leaf suffers from discoloration; no cover.

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 132; 1569–1658; English; paper; 304 leaves; 300mm × 430mm; foliated 1–302 in 17th c. hand, (f 303 unnumbered, f 304 numbered 282); fine 19th c. board and leather covers, with gold lettering: 'Borough of Plymouth Receivers' Accounts, 1570–1658.

Although this is called the Widey court book, its first 302 folios are receivers' accounts; the final leaf contains a list of citizens who contributed to gifts for James 1 in 1615 and Charles 1 in 1631. The accounts do, however, give considerable information about local entertainment, particularly on May Day.

Black Book

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 46; 1535–1707; English and Latin; paper; 360 leaves; 240mm × 380mm; 8 leaves at the beginning unnumbered, remainder foliated 1–352; original board and leather binding.

R.N. Worth, Calendar of the Plymouth Municipal Records, describes the Black Book: 'This is a large folio containing 360 leaves of thick paper, bound in oaken boards covered with leather. Commonly known, from the dark colour of its binding, as "The Black Book," it is called in the old records the "town ligger," entry being made in 1535–6 that for it and for writing therein all that was in the old ledger twenty shillings were paid. The earliest dated contemporary entry is for 1540; and the original intention evidently was to make the book a record of all matters of importance relating to the civic life.' It begins with a list of mayors since the reincorporation of the borough from Sutton Prior to Plymouth, the first in 1441; from 1500 to 1540, beside each mayor's name, is a brief history of England for that year in the style of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. Clearly, the entries made in 1540 are of ordinances of much earlier date, as there was no guild of Corpus Christi in 1540. After 1540, the entries continue sporadically until 1707, most of those during the Commonwealth period having been obliterated at some later date.

St Andrew's Churchwardens' Accounts

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 129; 1483-1583; Latin and English; paper; 167 leaves; 210mm × 310mm; no foliation; repaired and in good condition; cased in thick leather wrapper.

The flyleaf inscription reads: 'Iste liber deliberatus fuit Thome Tresawell maiori ville ac burgi de Plymouth xxj die Octobris anno regni regis Edwardi iiij xxij per Thomam Tregarthen maiorem burgi predicti Anno precedente viz. Anno xxj Eiusdem domini Regis.' There are some St Andrew's churchwardens' accounts and a few mayors' accounts at the beginning, particularly those that relate to the building of an aisle and the steeple of the church. Folios 6–20 and 24–84 are blank; the remainder of the volume contains accounts of the collectors of the tonnage and of assize rents from 1514 to 1583.

Receipt for Fees to the King's Retinue

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 359/62; 1625; English; paper; single sheet folded once into 2 leaves but written only on 1r; 275mm × 400mm.

This list of fees paid on the king's visit 15 September 1625 is identical to the list surviving from Totnes on the preceding day. Both bills were made out by Peter Newton, but at Plymouth Thomas Kynnaston received the fees, whereas John Wilson had received them at Totnes.

Waits' Petition to the Mayor

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 359/53; undated, c 1639; English; paper; single sheet; 300mm × 380mm.

This petition from the waits for cloaks and better wages is undated but may well belong to 1638–9, the first year since 1603 that cloaks were purchased for them. The waits claimed that their office was instituted by Sir Francis Drake, though in fact the borough had waits as early as 1496–7.

Draft Order concerning the Town Drummer

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, W 361/60; undated, 17th c.; English; paper; single sheet; 210mm × 250mm.

This seventeenth-century draft order is undated and unsigned. As it refers to 'theise perilous tymes of danger,' it could date from the Civil War; a plague year, however, seems more likely in that the drummer is discharged from watch and ward. The two serious plagues in Plymouth occurred in 1625 and 1636, and either date seems possible for this handwriting.

PLYMSTOCK

All Saints' Churchwardens' Accounts

Plymouth, West Devon Record Office, 694/52; 1554–1700; English; paper; 654 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; modern pagination, 1–1327 (pp 3, 4 both numbered 3 and remaining pagination consequently off by 1 page); 19th c. calf and board binding, combining six originally separate books: 1–168, 169–305, 306–537, 538–819, 820–1201, 1202–1327.

Receipts have not always been bound with the payments for the same year. The book contains accounts of both the wardens and the overseers of the poor; the wardens' accounts run from 1554–83 and 1631–41, only the earlier ones containing entries relevant to this study. At least until the wardens' accounts break off at 1583, the chief yearly source of income was a Whitsun ale, but the records do not make clear that dramatic or musical entertainment was provided. In two years, 1562–3 and 1563–4, the church also received considerable winter income from a source identified only as 'the store of saynt Erasmus'; this may have been some sort of Christmas festivity, but the record gives no clue.

SHOBROOKE

St Thomas a Becket's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office; 1048A/PW1-PW78; 1562-1620; English; paper; mostly single sheets folded once to make 4 sides; size varies from $165mm \times 220mm$ to $200mm \times 320mm$.

The accounts indicate that the chief sources of church income were church ales and a summer celebration, but they give very little information about the entertainment provided. These festivities ceased in 1581 with the renewal of the prohibition of unlawful games; in 1584–5 the ale-brewing equipment and the summer pole were sold; church ales were revived in 1588–9, but in 1595–6 they were given up and the parish went into the business of raising sheep for its income. The extant accounts thus give only a glimpse of a dying tradition.

SOUTH TAWTON

St Andrew's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 2915A/PW1; 1524–1613; Latin and English; 112 leaves; 200mm × 300mm; foliated in pencil; repaired and bound, although few leaves are entire.

Even the earliest of these accounts reveal nothing about local entertainment. The churchwardens record receipts from the alewardens as well as from the guilds of St George, St Mary, St John, St Katherine, and Jesus and Mary, but as those guild accounts are not extant, any references to fund-raising entertainments are also lost.

TAVISTOCK

St Mary's Abbey Plea Roll

Exeter, Devon Record Office, Bedford Papers W 1258 Add 1/3; 1325; Latin; parchment; 3 mbs; 275mm × 600mm; written continuously (1-3); stitched in incomplete roll, with membranes missing at both ends as indicated by stitch marks.

This fragment of a plea roll, among the Bedford papers deposited at the DRO, records part of the case of succession as abbot of Tavistock between abbot-elect Robert Busse and John Courtenay. The depositions were rendered 15 November 1325. A summary of the case is given by H.P.R. Finberg in 'The Tragi-Comedy of Abbot Bonus,' W.G. Hoskins and H.P.R. Finberg, Devonshire Studies (London, 1952), 198–211. Briefly, Busse was elected, but John Courtenay, the disappointed candidate, together with two other monks, John Fromund and Richard Montori, contested the election and submitted thirty-one accusations against Busse ranging from bastardy to incontinence and assault. Despite the charges, Busse's election was upheld. The reference to male and female 'histriones' is in the twenty-fifth paragraph of charges.

St Eustace's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 482A/PW1-PW48; 1392-1640; Latin and English; parchment; 48 mbs; size varies from 100mm \times 135mm to 570mm \times 900mm; poor condition, many fragmentary and only partially legible.

This series of rolls scattered over 250 years includes churchwardens' accounts, bills, receipts, poorwardens' and constables' accounts, lightwardens' and torchwardens' accounts, and one fragment from the store of Jesus. The only pertinent entries are from the reign of Elizabeth, but these are interesting in that they show churchwardens giving gratuities to professional acting companies.

TOTNES

Borough Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/1; 1605-43; English; paper; 32 loose accounts of varying size; no foliation.

This bundle of accounts includes thirty-two mayors', receivers', and St Mary's churchwardens' accounts, as well as accounts of the Magdalene almshouse, flesh shambles, deputy portreeve, poorwardens, bridgewardens, quayage, and shipmoney. The three containing relevant entries are all mayors' accounts. The first (2 leaves, 200mm × 150mm) is dated 26 February 1628, but as it is a supplemental account of Philip Holditch, who was mayor in 1623–4, it was probably submitted late but reflects the earlier date. The second (2 leaves, 200mm × 300mm) is the account of Samuel Wise for 1631–2; and the last (4 leaves, 200mm × 320mm) is that of Lawrence Adams for 1633–4.

Receivers' Account Rolls

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/3; 1554–5; English; parchment; 2 mbs; 250mm × 790mm and 250mm × 240mm; written 1, 2, 1d, 2d; unnumbered.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/4; 1560-1; English; paper; 2 leaves; 210mm × 320mm; paginated 1-4 in later ink.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/5; 1569–70; Latin; paper; roll of 2 mbs; 320mm × 380mm; written 1, 2, 2d; unnumbered.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/6; 1573-4; Latin; paper; roll of 3 mbs; 300mm × 385mm; written continuously; unnumbered.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/7; 1575-6; Latin; paper; roll of 2 mbs; 320mm × 400mm; written continuously; unnumbered.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/7/8; 1584-5; English; paper; incomplete book of 3 leaves; 225mm × 350mm; unnumbered.

Unfortunately these are the only six receivers' accounts of expenses remaining from the sixteenth century. They cannot reveal much, but they do show more hospitality toward travelling professionals than was the case at Plymouth.

Fees to the King's Retinue

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 1579A/18/4; 1625; English; paper; single sheet, 275mm × 400mm, folded once.

This is the bill and receipt of payment for fees paid to the king's officers when the royal entourage passed through town on 14 September 1625. The borough gave the king a gift of £200 and arranged an oration, but provided no entertainment (Mayor's account, DRO: 1579A/7/47).

WINKLEIGH

All Saints' Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 2989A/PW20; 1568-9; English; paper; 2 leaves sewn together at the top; 100mm × 400mm.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, 2989A/PW21; 1576–7; English; paper; roll of 3 leaves; 100mm × 400mm.

Between 1520 and 1640 there are thirty-six extant accounts, loose and often fragmentary, mainly of the four men or chief wardens, though there are a few early accounts of the stores of St George, St Katherine, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and All Saints. St George's guild was responsible for church ales, but there is no indication of entertainment connected with them. At least one wardens' account mentions expenses for mending the tennis court. The accounting year was from All Saints.

WOLBOROUGH

St Mary's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, East Devon Record Office, Wolborough PF9; 1580; English; paper; roll of 4 leaves; 320mm × 360mm.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, East Devon Record Office, Wolborough PF16; 1600; English; paper; 4 sheets stitched together at top; 310mm × 375mm.

Thirty accounts between 1554 and 1631 are extant. The church derived considerable income in the sixteenth century from ales and collection of the 'Seedge mony.' The use of the 'Seedge mony' is clear enough — to pay the clerk's wages — but the method of collecting is never explained. It was turned over to the four men by the alewardens at six-month intervals. Similarly, while there are frequent repairs to the bull chain, it is not clear that bull-baiting was a source of income. In 1600, some sort of stage seems to have been erected in the street, but its use is obscured by the fact that the account is badly mouldered and partly illegible. Accounts were rendered in late December.

WOODBURY

St Swithin's Churchwardens' Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, East Devon Record Office, Woodbury PW1; 1537-1792;

English; paper; 410 leaves; 190mm × 250mm; paginated in pencil 1-820; rebound in leather in 19th c.

The accounts are in good condition, not having needed repairs; some are slightly clipped, however, to fit the new format, and notes and amounts in the external margin are sometimes partially excised. The accounts are carefully written and virtually every hand easily legible. This was the clean copy, as there are yearly expenses both for writing into the 'paper book' and for copying into this book. Accounts are complete from 1537–8 onward except for 1568–9, 1608–9, and 1610–11. The notes of items stolen in the 1545–6 inventory were made later, as the theft occurred during the 1547–8 accounting year. Accounts were usually rendered on Michaelmas.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, East Devon Record Office, Woodbury PX1; 1536-1708; Latin and English; paper; 66 leaves; 195mm × 280mm; foliated in later hand 1-66; bound in leather.

This is a composite book bound in considerable disorder. It begins with alewardens' accounts for 1535–6 to 1537–8, skips to 1570–1, continues (with gaps) to 1599, goes to overseers' notes on rates and apprentices from 1631 and 1663–89, returns to alewardens' accounts from 1555 (with gaps) to 1565, then alewardens' accounts from 1541 (with gaps) to 1555 and one for 1585–6, a rate for 1636, and ends with overseers' notes between 1598 and 1708. Alewardens' accounts were rendered at Michaelmas.

COWICK PRIORY

Compotus of St Andrew Priory

Exeter, Devon Record Office, W 1258/G4/53/1-5; undated, ('tempus Ed IV'); Latin; parchment; 2 mbs; 620mm × 265mm, 340mm × 260mm.

This is one of a series of compotus rolls, nearly complete between 2/3 Edward IV and 26/7 Henry VIII, with one summary roll surviving for 3/4 Henry IV. Altogether there are sixty-one rolls in the series, which is part of the Bedford papers relating to Devon and Cornwall now on deposit at the DRO. These are compoti of the manor of Cowick Priory, sent as obedientiary rolls to Tavistock Abbey, not cellarers' or priors' accounts for the priory itself. Consequently, except for the one stray boy-bishop entry, one does not expect, or find, references to entertainment at the monastery. The one reference is in a roll that is illegible at the top, where its date would be. Judging by names that appear in this and other rolls, its date should be in the latter half of the reign of Edward IV. There are two years in that period for which there is no corresponding roll, 1473–4 and 1475–6; such names as William Huddefield, John Denys de Orlegh, and John at Wille could have occurred at either of those dates, and this roll almost surely belongs to one of the two years.

There is another series of obedientiary accounts sent to Tavistock Abbey from Plymstock between 1392 and 1522, but the seventeen extant rolls contain nothing relevant to this study.

COURTENAY

Livery Roll

London, British Library, Add. Roll 64320; 1384-5; Latin and French; parchment; single membrane; 710mm × 320mm; right edge damaged and repaired, fair condition.

Household Accounts

Exeter, Devon Record Office, CR 500; c 1390; Latin; parchment; 2 mbs; mb 1:600mm × 254mm, mb 2:358mm × 257mm; mb 1 attached at bottom to top of mb 2 to form one continuous sheet.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, CR 488; c 1390; Latin; parchment; 1 mb; 475mm × 263mm; torn where formerly attached at top.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, CR 1466; c 1395; Anglo-Norman, English, and Latin; parchment; 9 mbs; 4920mm × 230mm; incomplete.

CR 1466 is incomplete at the top; it begins in medias res, with stitching and thread remaining at the top of the first membrane. As the beginning of the roll is missing, there is no date; but references to the children of Edward Courtenay, earl of Devon, fix the date about the middle of the 1390s. The sections from which the two relevant entries are transcribed relate to expenses for a trip to London, one occurring at Frome-Selwood, Somerset on the journey, and the other at London.

London, Public Record Office, E 36/218; 1519; English; paper; i + 40; 300mm \times 180mm approximately; modern pencil pagination; incomplete, damaged, and badly faded; no binding.

London, Public Record Office, E 36/223; 1523-4; English; paper; 138 leaves; 280mm × 200mm approximately; modern pencil foliation; incomplete, damaged, and badly faded, repaired with gauze; half-calf 19th c. binding.

London, Public Record Office, E 36/225; 1525; English; paper; 122 leaves; 300mm × 200mm; original pencil foliation later replaced by ink pagination; heavy marginal damage but text mainly intact and legible; half-calf binding.

The last three accounts are badly deteriorated household books from the reign of Henry VIII, doubtless confiscated along with other papers at the earl's attainder. E 36/218 is a fragmentary book of expenses for January and February of 1519, when the earl was at court and in London. There is an eighteenth-century copy of this manuscript among the Courtenay of Powderham papers now housed at the Devon Record Office (Courtenay 1508m/London/Account book 23). PRO: E 36/223 is a fragmentary household book of Catherine, countess of Devon for 1523–4. E 36/225 is also a fragmentary book for a portion of the expenses in 1525 of Henry, marquess of Exeter. Although the outside margins are badly damaged, this book is much more legible than the other two.

One other Courtenay account book is extant, that of Lady Elizabeth Amerideth, guardian of Sir William Courtenay, 1638–48 (DRO: Courtenay 1508m/ Devon/Accounts v 29), but its only relevant entry, a payment to 'Sir Wm Walers Trumpetter,' occurs in the spring of 1645, beyond the scope of this volume.

Quarter Sessions Order Books

Exeter, Devon Record Office, QS 1/1; 1592–1600; English; paper; 184 leaves; 295mm \times 200mm; modern pagination; parchment cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, QS 1/4; 1614–18; English; paper; 186 leaves; $295 \text{mm} \times 195 \text{mm}$; no pagination; parchment cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, QS 1/5; 1618–25; English; paper; 327 leaves; 295mm \times 195mm; paginated in modern ink 1–653 (pp 325 and 326 both numbered 325, numbering thereafter off by one page); parchment cover.

Exeter, Devon Record Office, QS 1/6; 1625–33; English; paper; 224 leaves; 295mm × 195mm; paginated in modern ink; parchment cover.

Unfortunately, the quarter sessions books of the Devon county justices of the peace do not begin until 1592. They are remarkably lucid and informative, and one could wish for the existence of such books at an earlier period, when religious and other amateur drama was being suppressed.

Orders for Suppression of Church Ales and Revels

London, Public Record Office, SP 16/255/39; 10 January 1599; English; paper; single sheet; 276mm × 170mm (127mm × 158mm); foliated for binding as f 107, numbered 39.1 on reverse; good condition; bound with other documents in grey board with blue cloth spine and corners, red labels.

London, Public Record Office, SP 16/255/39 1-1v; 24 July 1615; English; paper; single sheet; 277mm × 170mm (190mm × 130mm); foliated for binding as f 108, numbered 39 III on reverse; good condition; bound as above.

Draft Inquiry, Somerset Justices of the Peace

Editorial Procedures

The material in this edition is arranged by place, type of document, and chronology. Entries pertaining to the diocese of Exeter in general have been placed first, in chronological order. (Any references to specific places will be cross-referenced under location in the index.) Parishes and boroughs follow in alphabetical order, the entries for each place being chronological. Within boroughs, when entries from a particular year are from more than one source, the following order of document classification will be observed: court rolls/books; mayors' accounts; receivers' accounts; cathedral accounts (in the case of Exeter); parish accounts; and miscellaneous documents.

Following boroughs and parishes will be transcriptions from monasteries, private households, and the Devon County Quarter Sessions Books. (Any references to specific places will be cross-referenced under location in the index.) The few undated entries as well as entries from household accounts referring to payments made outside of Devon will be placed in appendixes. The editorial headings give dates in as much detail as possible, document identification, and folio or page numbers.

An attempt has been made in the edited text to approximate the format of the original manuscripts. As far as possible, headings and marginalia appear in the positions they occupy in the manuscripts, although the routine marginalia identifying types of payments have been standardized in editorial subheadings throughout. Original paragraphing has been preserved, but not original lineation.

The texts themselves are not emended, except in the case of Bishop Quinel's 'Statutes of Exeter,' where a collation of thirteen extant manuscripts was required to derive an error-free text. Original spelling, capitalization, and punctuation have been preserved throughout, but gratuitous marks such as line-fillers have been ignored. 'I' and 'J' have been uniformly rendered as 'I'; 'Xp' is expanded as 'Chr,' as in 'Christi.' The few entries taken from printed sources preserve the spelling and punctuation of those sources but do not follow the early printers' habit of italicizing numerous words and phrases. The varying forms 'vv' and 'VV,' used occasionally by early printers, are standardized to 'w,' 'W.'

Most scribal abbreviations have been expanded, with the letters supplied printed in italics. When it was not possible to tell from the context whether the scribe intended a singular or a plural ending, the word has not been expanded and the abbreviation sign has been indicated uniformly by an apostrophe, as in 'Et de iiij d datis minstrall'. Abbreviations for amounts of money ('li,' 's,' 'd,' and 'ob') as well as for other common words ('Mr,' '&c') have not been expanded. Shortened forms of personal names have been expanded to their full forms. Superior letters have been silently lowered to the line, except when they are used with numerals and confusion might result, as in 'Henrici viij'o' or 'xxtie.' The Latin genitive singular of 'Exon' has been uniformly expanded as 'Exoniensis,' as it is not possible to tell when a scribe may have intended 'Exonie' instead.

Dating

Because the vast majority of the documents used for this collection follow the fiscal year from Michaelmas, 29 September, to 28 September of the next year, and also because it is not usually possible to tell in which month a payment to players was made, the usual accounting year dating from Michaelmas to Michaelmas has been employed here. The entries thus will normally be given a split date, such as 1525–6; when the exact account date is known, it will be given in the subheading for that entry. The reader should be reminded that the dates between 1 January and 25 March will be given as they occur in the entries according to the contemporary calendar, which did not change the year until 25 March, Lady Day. Thus under an entry listed in the heading 1525–6, if the entry gives a date of 14 February 1525, that year would be 1526 by our modern calendar. Dates for entries taken from documents using a different fiscal year than Michaelmas to Michaelmas will be duly noted in editorial subheadings. Dates of the feast days mentioned in numerous entries are listed in Appendix 5.

Principles of Selection

Every effort has been made in this edition to include all unambiguous references to drama and music as well as to entertainments such as bear-baiting and morris dancing. When an entry obviously refers to entertainment but does not specify the precise nature of the entertainment, that entry has also been included. Thus there are references to the 'revels' at Ashburton, Chulmleigh, Morebath, Rewe, and Shobrooke. On the assumption that, as at Plymouth, they involved singing and dancing and perhaps drama, the maypole and summer 'rode' celebrations at Chagford, Chudleigh, Collumpton, Hennock, and Shobrooke are included as well as the May games of Colyton and Plymouth. Because the annual 'carving of Gogmagog' on Plymouth Hoe seems to be associated with the May games, that too has been noted — although it may have been no more 'dramatic' than a carved white horse in Somerset.

Unless there is clear evidence of dramatic or musical entertainment, church ales have been excluded from this collection. There is a strong temptation to assume that at least the Whitsun wardens at Dean Prior and the wardens of the guild of St Erasmus at Plymstock provided entertainment at their ales, but in the absence of any evidence the entries have been deleted. For the information of those who feel that a church ale automatically would include some form of entertainment, a list of the Devon parishes known to have held church ales follows. The dates indicate the first and last (or only) mention of an ale in the extant records.

Ashburton (1487-1622) Barnstaple (1526-59) Braunton (1554) Brixham (1584) Broad Clyst (1522) Chagford (1480-1571) Chudleigh (1561-94) Chulmleigh (1541-77) Colbrooke (1637) Collumpton (1608) Dartington (1483-1616) Dean Prior (1566-9) Exeter Holy Trinity (1483-1547) Exeter St John's Bow (1444) Exeter St Mary Steps (1554) Farway (1564-7) Harberton (1607) Honiton (1570-81)

Kilmington (1556) Kingsbridge (1557–81) Modbury (1542-7) Monkhampton (1542) Morebath (1529-80) Plymouth (1499-1536) Plymstock (1554-83) Rewe (1620) Shobrooke (1562-94) Sidbury (1621) South Tawton (1524-71) Stoke Gabriel (1611-21) Torbryan (1560) Washfield (1568-82) Winkleigh (1519-33) Wolborough (1554-1600) Woodbury (1541-1606) Woodland (1560-3)

While church drama has been included in this collection, processions and ceremonies within the church, as well as expenses for singing, organ playing, bell-ringing, and the like are excluded. As there is no reference to drama, expenses for building or repairing the Easter sepulchres at Dartmouth, St John's Bow, Morebath, and Woodbury have been deleted. The same is true of pageants and tabernacles when they were not clearly taken outside the church for celebrations primarily popular rather than ecclesiastical. Ashburton, for instance, had tabernacles of Holy Trinity, St Andrew, St Christopher, St George, St John, St Mary, and St Thomas, but there is no hint that they were ever taken outside the church or used for any of Ashburton's many dramatic performances. Chagford may have held the record for these structures with nineteen pageants and a tabernacle of St Eligius. Other such tabernacles were at Braunton; St Petrock's, Exeter; Kilmington; and Woodbury. The yearly Corpus Christi celebration and procession at Exeter Cathedral are also excluded, as they took place in and around the cathedral; other processions, purchases of musical instruments, and such items as payments to choristers similarly are excluded. While references to boy-bishops and abbots of misrule throughout the county will be found in this collection, the cathedral's boy-bishop service will not: it is a straightforward religious service promulgated by Bishop Grandisson to prevent the horseplay common elsewhere. 47

Ceremonial practices such as the annual walking of the boundaries or mayors' feasts are not included unless there is clear evidence of music or other entertainment; guild feasts and the mayor of Exeter's annual procession to the cathedral likewise are excluded, even though the latter includes a payment to the choirboys in the procession. (That procession, incidentally, is still an annual feature of Exeter's civic pageantry.) The same exclusion pertains to royal entries into Exeter: while such entries often produced magnificent shows and pageants elsewhere, there is no evidence that similar spectacles occurred at Exeter. ⁴⁸ Except for the visit of Henry IV in 1402, when he and his queen were entertained by waits and minstrels, the royal visitor would merely be met at the gate by appropriately dressed civic and ecclesiastical dignitaries, welcomed, and escorted to his or her lodging. The only entertainment provided was food, drink, a gift of money, and perhaps a tour of the city, as in the instance of Richard III's inspection of the castle and his shock at hearing it called Rougemont, a scene later made famous by Shakespeare.

Court cases involving individual entertainers are transcribed only if the case relates to the performance of their art, however peripherally. Such cases as the 1471 Exeter mayor's court decision that 'Master John Fool,' a juggler, was guilty of assault and battery on a Spaniard have been deleted, but that of a harper who lost his harp is included. Because they give evidence of travelling players in the county, one instance of an acting troupe caught drinking after hours and another involving the murder of an actor also are retained.

Bull-baitings are included, but routine annual costs for repair of bull chains, ropes, stakes, and the like are not unless the entry actually refers to a bull-baiting. Likewise, expenses for shooting of guns or for drums or drumsticks for Midsummer musters are omitted, although drummers at celebrations such as May Day are included.

After some deliberation, it was decided not to print references to sports, games, and contests. A study of games in Devon, both legal and illicit, is fascinating in itself but beyond the scope of this project. It is also the source of extended controversy over which of the literally hundreds of possible entries ought to qualify. Would the endless church-organized fox, badger, and wildcat hunts qualify as sports, for instance, or the proposed musket-shooting contest between Dartmouth and Totnes in 1616? One also must sacrifice, however, somewhat more interesting entries such as those pointing to the possibility of an early church-sponsored football league. Certainly one is surprised to discover the churchwardens buying footballs at Halberton and at Coldridge or paying to repair the lawn on the bowling green at Chudleigh ruined at the football match. The early references to tennis courts at Dartington, Dartmouth, and Winkleigh also are omitted here, as well as the bowling greens at Chudleigh, Dartmouth, Exeter, Halberton, Plymouth, and Sheepstor. The number of presentments for unlawful games is almost startling, as are those for breaking windows while playing cricket in the churchyard during the time of divine service. Among the unlawful games for which presentments were made are the following, some of which are unidentified by the OED:⁴⁹

alias (or ales)
boiling
bowling alleys carding
coillyng
coyting
globes
keylles
klasshe

nine holes shuffleboard skystgrote stool ball (early cricket) tables taxillos (dice) trappe tutte

Finally, this collection cannot include the myriad entries that made interesting the days on end when no references to dramatic performances appeared in the records, entries that brought to life and humanized the people of the Middle Ages and Renaissance. It was the sidelights of history, some amusing, some pathetic, that painted a picture of Devon that cannot be conveyed in this collection of dramatic records. There was the beautiful Dartmouth 'Magnificat,' inserted without contextual gloss into a 1484 court book. There was the raped woman with no legal recourse except to sue the rapist for money to help support her illegitimate child, or the ineffective deposition of Alicia Braninger that Sir Walter Raleigh was the father of her illegitimate child. There was the touching enthusiasm of Exeter civic leaders as they offered the newly imported orange marmalade to the countess of Devon, and the troubles resulting from the Prayer Book Rebellion, and the desperate attempts by churchwardens to conform to their rulers' religious views by tearing down and rebuilding and tearing down again their shrines and rood lofts. To read the Devon County Quarter Sessions Books is almost to read a detailed refutation of every generalization about law and order and conformity proposed in Tillyard's The Elizabethan World Picture - and it is also to understand something of the fierce pride and determination of the people in a rural county faced with externally imposed changes in their way of life.

For a third parish, Axminster, we have a lost document of another kind; see 41 Charles Sisson, 'Shakespeare Quartos as Prompt Copies: with Some Account of Cholmeley's Players and a New Shakespeare Allusion, 'Review of English Studies, 18 (1942), 129-43, who mentions a Star Chamber case dating from the late 16th or early 17th century and involving libellous stage players of Axminster. Sisson does not document the reference, and I have been unable to locate the record at the PRO.

These 'pageants,' like most others in the county, were apparently shrines or taber-42 nacles permanently located in the church. They were not related to any cycle drama and probably not to external religious processions.

Agnes Francis was churchwarden of Shobrooke in 1575-6 (DRO: 1048A/PW10, f 1). Cecily Gybb was warden of Clyst St George in 1596-7 (DRO: Clyst St George PW5). Margaret Taylor and William Norman's mother were wardens NOTES at Morebath in 1571, Joan Rumbelow in 1557, Margaret-at-Borston in 1528 (DRO: 2983A/PW1, ff 5, 156, 172v). Among others in the county, Elizabeth Grendfyld was churchwarden at Kilmington in 1557–8 and Joan Banke in 1560–1 (DRO: 3047A/PW1, ff 5, 7v).

A great many of these title deeds and other evidences came into the possession of the earl of Bedford, who at the Dissolution was grantee of Tavistock Abbey and other monastic lands. After centuries in the library at Woburn Abbey, they have now been deposited in the Devon Record Office.

The boy-bishop was involved in the services at Exeter Cathedral on 27 and 28 December. The text for the service is in Bishop Grandisson's 'Ordinale Exoniensis' in the cathedral library (D & C 3502, f 30). George Oliver, Lives of the Bishops of Exeter (Exeter, 1861), pp 228-9, cites a few regulations concerning the boybishop – the maximum amount to be spent on his breakfast, for instance – but these are not now to be found among the civic or cathedral records.

For a discussion of these entries, see John Gidley, History of Royal Visits to the Ancient and Loyal City (Exeter, 1863), and Cecily Radford, 'An Unrecorded Royal Visit to Exeter, Report and Transactions of the Devonshire Association, 63 (1931), 225–63. Royalty who visited the city included Edward I (1285 and 1299), Edward the Black Prince (1371), Henry IV (1402), Henry VI (1451), Edward IV (1469), Queen Margaret (1471), Richard III (1485), Henry VII (1497), and Katherine of Aragon (1501).

The jury presentments in the early Dartmouth Court Books, 1484–1649 (DRO: SM 1981–SM 1989) contain references to almost all of these illicit games as well as complaints of all sorts about the times and places they were played. SM 1981 also contains (ff 3v–6) the beautiful Dartmouth 'Magnificat.'

Iohannes &c. dilecto in christo filio .. Archidiacono Exoniensis vel eius .. Officiali: salutem, graciam & benediccionem. Inuidus hostis antiquus malorum omnium insensator, qui agit assidue vt tranquillitatis humane delicie, extra mundi terminos exularent, ibi, sue venena nequicie, lacius nititur diffundere: vbi se seuerius estimat obfuturum. Sane, licet artes mechanicas, vt rerum experiencia continue 10 nos informat: mutuo, necessitate quadam, oporteat se iuuare: pridem tamen intelleximus, quod non nulli nostre Ciuitatis Exoniensis inprudentes filij, inordinate lasciuie dediti, fatue contempnentes que ad ipsorum & vniuersalis populi indigenciam, fuerunt vtiliter adinuenta, quendam ludum noxium qui culpa non caret, immo verius ludubrium in contumeliam & opprobrium allutariorum, necnon eorum artificii, hac instanti die dominica, in theatro nostre Ciuitatis predicte publice peragere proponunt, vt inter se statuerant & intendunt, ex quo ut didicimus, inter prefatos artifices/ & dicti ludi participes, auctores pariter & fautores, graues discordie, rancores & rixe, cooperante satore tam execrabilis ire & inuidie vehementer pululant & insurgunt. Adeo, quod nisi ab illorum illicito proposito, spiritu ducti consilij sanioris, se abstineant totaliter & desistant, insultus & aggressus terribiles, pacis Regis & regni turbacio, verbera & sediciones, ac eciam ex consequenti, animarum amarius deploranda 25 pericula proch dolor insequentur: Considerantes igitur, quanta mala corporum & animarum sub velamine & colore ludi eciam liciti stimulante diabolo, eueniunt & contingunt? ad resistendum in quantum possumus talium fluctuum & procellarum principijs ne deterius inde sequatur, non inmerito prouocamur. Quocirca, vobis iniungimus firmiter & mandamus: quatinus ne aliqui, quocumque nomine censeantur, dictum ludum tam acerbis periculis indicia ministrantem, in nostra diocesi, et presertim in nostra Ciuitate predicta, inchoare, vel inchoatum perficere presumant quomodolibet vel attemptent? primo, secundo, tercio & peremptorie inhibeatis publice & expresse, sicuti ipsis tenore presencium inhibemus, sub pena excommunicationis maioris, quam in ipsos & ipsorum quemlibet si monicionibus & inhibicionibus huiusmodi non paruerint cum effectu "[exnunc, prout extunc] ferimus in hijs scriptis. ministratos dicit in vim iuramenti sui vt sequitur. videlicet.

That [on] Iohn Blackmore [came vnto this respondent] and this respondent three daies before ascention daie last past met together at the saide Blackmores house in Coliton where Blackmore tolde this respondent that he had bespoken certen pieces of gonnes and other Chamberes at Seaton against [assentio] the tyme they I were to be vsed which was Ascention daye following and prayed him this rondent that he would take the paynes to trawayle with his horse vnto Seaton and fetche the sayd Chambers and bring them vnto the forsaid Blackmores house. Wherupon this respondent graunted and [did bring the said peces vnto Blackmores house] went vnto Seaton Whether within a short space the said Blackmore came and mett with this respondent and helped him to lode the said gonnes. and after he had so donne this respondent by the said Blackmores appoyntment brought them to Blackmores house in Coliton and vnladid them at his dore. And on Ascention daye [last] following the said Peces were planted on the Church of Coliton but by whome he knoweth not yet he verely beleueth the said Blackmore to bee the doer therof. And afterwardes vpon misliking of this action by some of the parish the said Blackmore tooke them downe and caryid them to his house. and aboute xij of the clock at noone the same day brought one of them 10 and placed him a quoytes cast from the Church dore in the Churchyarde and shot him of and likewise after supper he brought an other and placed him in the Churchyard as aforsaid which hee shot of and brake in the discharge but did no harme eyther to the people or to [the] any parte of the Churche And further this respondent 15 saith that neyther he nor the sayd Blackmore were at morning prayer the same tyme, by meanes he applyed his markett and that the I said Blackmore was absent only in setting forth that play then in hande. Also he saith that the same day at the end of morning prayer there came into the Churche yarde of Coliton certen persons to the nomber of an C with a minstrell and horses coverd with white certin 'young men' [children bo] [women] ryding on them. And so went about som part of the Churche yarde [al] and there shott of certen calyuers without offence as this respondent thinketh et aliter nescit deponere per me Robart 25 Tamson

Iohannes Blackmore alias Hellyer. confesseth this article to be trewe in every parte saving that after he had placed the Chambers on the leads of Colyton Church and that his doing 'was' misliked he tooke them downe againe and caryid them to his house and at xij of the clock in the after noone of the same day brought onely one pece into the midle of the Church yard and there dischargid him to the hurt of none present nor any parte of the Church or windowes. likewise after supper when the youth had dischargid theire calyuers in the Church yarde this respondent brought one other chamber and placed him against an Ash in the Church yarde and I there in discharging of him the same burst in peces yet to no harme at alle wherof he thanketh god. ferther saith that the same day he was absent from his Church in the for noone being applyed in repayring the Queenes

Judgments against the Dartmouth Maypole

Henry Burton: A Divine Tragedie pp 9–10

Example 16.

At Dartmouth 1634, upon the coming forth and publishing of the book for sports, a company of younkers on May-day morning before day, went into the countrey, to fetch home a May pole with Drumme and Trumpet, whereat the neighbouring Inhabitants were affrighted, 30 supposing some enemies had landed to sack them, the Pole being thus brought home, and set up, they began to drink healths about it, and to it, till they could not stand so steady as the Pole did, whereupon the Major and Justice bound the ringleaders over to the Sessions, whereupon these complaining to the Archbishops Vicar 35 Generall, then in his visitation he prohibited the Justices to proceed against them in regard of the Kings book. But the Justices acquainted him, they did it for their disorder, in transgressing the bounds of the book, hereupon these libertines scorning at Authority, one of them fell suddenly into a Consumption, where-lof he shortly after died; 40

now although this revelling was not on the Lords day, yet being upon any other day and especially May-day, the May-pole set up thereon, giving occasion to the prophanation of the Lords day the whole yeer after it was sufficient to provoke God, to send plagues and judgements among them.

Example 17.

In the same year 1634. and in the same Shire, one Edward Amerideth a Gentleman, having been pained in his feet, and being upon his recovery, whereupon one said unto him, he was glad to see him so 10 nimble. Amerideth replied, that he doubted not, but to daunce about the May-pole the next Lords day: But behold the hand of the Lord, for before he moved out of that place, he was smitten with such a feeblenesse of heart, and dizsinesse in his head, that desiring help to carry him to an house, he died before the Lords day came, so fearfull it is to fall into the hands of the living God.

The Epistle Dedicatorie

... For be the Preachers neuer so godlie and earnest to call, let all the great belles of S. Peters ring out neuer so lowd, there will not be halfe so manie gained into the Church: as one with a pipe and whistle shall gaine into the streetes to see vaine and foolish spectacles. For let there be a beare baiting, a bull baiting, an enterlude, or anie such vanitie, euerie man is in hast to runne headlong to it, & the time neuer too long to have there fill thereof. And yet if there be no such plaies or games, they will rather sit idle in the streetes, than be well occupied in the churches.

...for when souer there is anie Sermon, send you one out into the streetes, and there shall you find the greatest number, some to knocke there heeles against the stalles, some to walke vp and downe the streetes, some sitting at the tauerne gulping and drinking, some at gaming and plaieng, some piping and daunsing, and finallie none well occupied....

The office of the Bull ring keeper, named commonlie the Maior of the Bull ring.

The Maior of the Bull ring, is an office of countenance, and appointed for the keeping of a good order in such things as be committed to his trust and office.

First when anie bull or beare baiting be appointed, he is first to make the Maior priuie thereof, and no baiting to be vsed within the citie, but that the said Maior be present or giue leaue therevnto. Also he shall see all things to be well and orderlie vsed at such pastimes.

sig I.iv

The office of the Watchemen and Wardens.

Sermon before Sir Robert Foster, Justice of Assize

Thomas Trescot: The Zealous Magistrate p 4 (7 August)

... A pittifull thing it was, that those which should curbe and restraine others, should be sonnes of Belial, lawlesse, yoaklesse themselves, That those which should set bounds to others, will keep no limits themselves, that those which should have beene the Governours of the people, should be little better than Christmasse-Lords, Lords of mis-rule, and disorder; ...

p 11

I should also desire them to study garbs and fashions, and complements lesse, and study God, and Christ, and themselves more; that they would not spend more time in trimming their heads, than in ordering their hearts, in kembing their haire, than in saying their Prayers, and not bestow so much cost upon their bodies, which must be but meat for Wormes, and wholly neglect their soules which might bee companions for Angels: I should desire them likewise, to be as zealous for their Lord and Master, as they are oftentimes for their Mistresse, to be more in love with the vision of God the Creator, than with the painted vissage of a Creature: To give over Ben, and Shakespeare, and fall upon Moses and the Prophets, to be better read in Saint Peter than in Sir Philip, and not to read Monsieur Balzacs Letters with more delight, than they doe Saint Pauls Epistles....

...Besides, the very language it selfe, what is it oft times, but a few shreds and scraps dropt from some Stage-Poet, at the Globe or Cockpit, which they have carefully bookt up, to serve them for such an occasion....

15

p 18

Sir Henry Rosewells case. ... Was it never knowne that a Base Fidler hath beene countenanced 20 against a Iustice of peace, and that in open Court too, in the very face of his Countrey?...

Oh then it highly concernes those, whom God hath substituted to be his Vice gerents, to vindicate the contempt of his holy-Lawes, that in particular of his holy day, to free it not onely from the abuse thereof, by Hucksters, Pedlers, Carriers, and the like; but to purge it also from prphanation by Bacchanalian Revellings, and Heathenish Maygames, with other like filth, and ordure, (the consequence of both these) which yet in some places are more zealously observed, and stood for, than either the Lawes of God, or the King. I hope those whom this concerns wil give me leave to speak freely, and I shall speak the words of truth and sobernesse. 'Twas within these 15 years that a most wholsome order was made by the Iudges of this Circuit, for the suppressing of Church-Ales and Revells, which in many places is Sabbath-day work. Oh then that it would seem good in the (.) yes of your Lordship, that by your authority, so wholsome an order, which now (like the engravings on Tomb stones) is quite worn out, might receive new force and vigour, that so you would be pleased with the sword of Iustice, to stab all those unlawfull Assemblies, (meere Conventicles of bad fellowes) that they may receive their deaths wound....

Hawkins' Departure from Plymouth STC: 12962 p 16 (12 June)

The greater part of my Companie gathered aboord, I set sayle the 12. of Iune 1593. about three of the Clocke in the afternoone, and made a bourd or two off and in, wayting the returne of my boat, which I had sent a-shore, for dispatch of some businesse: which being come aboord, and all put in Order, I loost neere the shore, to give my farewell to all the Inhabitants of the Towne, whereof the most part were gathered together vpon the Howe, to shew their gratefull correspondency, to the love and zeale which I, my Father, and Predecessors, have ever borne to that place, as to our naturall and mother Towne. And first with my noyse of Trumpets, after with my waytes, and then with my other Musicke, and lastly, with the Artillery of my Shippes, I made the best signification I could of a kinde farewell. This they answered with the Waytes of the Towne, and the Ordinance on the shore, and with shouting of voyces; which with the fayre evening and silence of the night, were heard a great distance off....

Ryght honorable
Syr Thomas Gorge, gaue me to vnderstand of yowr Honours desyer,

of my youthe that sings, whose yeeres of apprentyshyp, I long sythence boght, by my own travayll, & great charge, haue broght hym vp, my self recevyng smale, or [li] no contentment but yn musyck; he wanting the rest of no valew, being of many bad the best; & I assure your Honour? no way answerryng the report made of hym. my lord yowr fathers contynuall favors, has bovnd mee in greatest duty, & vowyd servyce, & so haue I caryed a mynde, ever most ready, & wyllyng, for the best merytts at yowr Honours hands; in regard wherof I shold not know how to deny, what I estyme farr aboue hys valew, with the loss of all my contentment; thogh ryghtly 10 & with others no way to be so regardyd: but may hyt please yowr Honour: my reputatyon ys callyd yn questyon as thogh I had requyryd, or forcyd thys yowth, with others to be delt with all agaynst reason, & the law? to be gellt: which rumor being spredd ys most dysgracefull: I wyll wryte no farder not knowyng whom hyt conserns, 15 thogh tuchyng my self neere,: of whose aucthor I being resolvyd, I shallbe more wyllyng to answear yowr Honours desyer: els must I swallow thys vnlokyd & vndeservyd dysgrace as I may, & resolue to put on a resolutyon to endure the hardest measure, can be offryd, or layd on mee, which yf thys tyme afoorde hyr maiestyes subjects; 20 I must have patyence & keepe the lyberty of my thoghts, to my self, so hopyng of better fruyts of no yll deserts from yowr Honour? & in deede to enioy that lyberty, which befytts all gentyllmen, & which I purpose; I humbly take my leaue, at modbury thys 15 august 1595 yowr Honours to be commandyd 25 (signed) Rychard Champernovn.

Ryght honorable

I am very sory, yf in any thyng that I haue wrytten I shold moue yow to any doubtfull or contrary concept then I meant: I am to gyue yowr Honor my humble thancks, in that hyt has pleasyd yow to thinke 35 the best of hytt: but what most greevyd mee, wat that syr francys drake wrote to mee that hyt shold be informyd vnto yowr Honor, & in covrt, that I to satisfy my own humor, shold vse boyse to contynew theyr voyces, otherwys then wer fytt for any professyng christyanyty: which as I held hyt a great dysgrace, so am I exceedyngly wrongyd, by such as haue byn thorygynal aucthors of any such thyng to be don by mee: but I must confess being naturally & often oppressyd with melancholy more then I wold wysh; I haue in that respect (thogh to my charge with my purs) boght such as I have found whose voyces contentyd mee: & trewly syr yf I shold meerely lack thys yowth, I know not whear, nor when, to gett an other which yf I myght doo, yowr Honor shold not so readyly requyer hym, as I wold be wyllyng to yeelde hym yow: yet most assurydly ys hys report (as I perceyue) for hys voyce farr in deede beyond hys desert; as the case now standeth mee, lackyng hym, my whole consort for musyck; which most delytes mee, wer clean overthrowen; which I humbly submytt to yowr Honors good consyderatyon. & tuchyng the note yow desyer to be satisfyed in. trewly vpon syr francys drakes letter to mee, I much doubtyd tha yowr Honor had som porpose, to vse 15 som hard measure towards mee; which movyd mee to wryte as I dyd, wherin I only ment, that yf in thys hyr maiestyes tyme, being a most happy tyme for all chrystyans to lyue in. I shold haue any hard measure, (especyally being so interestyd in hym as my covenant & vowyd servant), by any of that hows, which I haue only followyd 20 & honoryd, & from whom I have allways recevyd so many favors & vpon whose branches after the tree, I desyryd to take holde to defend me, yf any wrong shold be offryd mee, I shold be exceedyng sory & shold thynke my self most vnhappy, to fall into the offence of any comming from hym, whom I haue byn & am so much bovnd to honor: & so desyrous to cleere my self of the dysgracefull report made of mee to your Honor agaynst the orygynall auctor of the same: with desyer of contynewance of your Honors best thoghts of mee, I humbly take my leaue

EDGCUMBE OF MOUNT EDGCUMBE

1553-8
Remembrance of Sir Richard Edgcumbe

John Prince: Worthies of Devon

pp 284-5

(n) Trevanion.

Yea, even to such as were his Enemies, being in Distress, he rather lent a Hand to take them up, than a Foot to tread them down, as by this Story following may plainly appear. There was a Knight, dwelling in the same Shire (n), with whom, for divers Causes, in King Edward's days, he had sundry Quarrels; which as at first they bred inward Misliking between them, so at last they brake forth into open Hatred. This Knight, in the troublesome Change of Queen Mary's Reign, partly for Religion, and partly for other Causes, was clap'd into Prison: And though the Matters discovered against him were hainous. and his Enemies (at that time bearing great sway) very grievous, yet he obtained so much Favor, as to be Tryed by Certificate, from the Gentlemen of the chiefest Authority in his Country, for his Behaviour therein. According to whose Report to the Council, he was to be either delivered, or more straightly to be dealt with. This granted, he conceived very good hope of every other's friendly Advertisement; and feared only the hard Favor of our Sir Richard; who he doubted would use the Sword of Revenge (then put into his hands) to his Enemies destruction. It hapned, that upon return of their Answer he was delivered; and being at Liberty, to the end he might know, how his Country-mens minds were affected towards him, he by means, procured a Copy of all these advertisive Letters; in perusing of which, he found that such as bore him fairest Countenance, wrote most against him; and that Sir Richard Edgecombe's Certificate made most for him: So as, in all likelihood, his greatest Enemy in Show, was the chiefest cause of his Deliverance in Deed.

I would stay here in praise of this noble Mind, who shewed his Valor in Conquering his own Affections; his Vertue in abstaining from Revenge, being offered; and his Christianity in doing Good for Evil; but that I am carried forth with no less wonder at this Knight's Thankfulness: Who pretending as though he wist not of this Courtesy, to the outward shew, continued his wonted Enmity until the next Christmas after.

At which time, on a Night, word was brought to Mount Edgcomb That a Company of armed Men were lately Landed from Plymouth, marching up to the House. Sir Richard, having heard before, that this Knight was in that Town, and mistrusting, he had picked out this time to come and set upon him unawares, resolved to shew himself neither discourteous to them he knew not, through Fear; nor yet to lie open to his Enemies, if they pretended any such Practice, through Heedlesness; he therefore caused his Gates to be set wide open, and placed his Servants on both sides the Gate and Hall, where they must pass, with Swords and Bucklars: but they coming in, turned this Doubt into Pastime, for their Armor and Weapons were only painted Paper, as by nearer approaching was perceived; and instead of trying their Force with Blows, in fighting with Men, they fell to make proof of the Ladies Skill in Dancing.

These Pastimes at last being ended, they were led into another Room to be Banquetted: where this Knight taking of his Vizard, and disclosing himself to Sir Richard Edgcomb, uttered, That having known the great Courtesy shewn him in his Trouble, besides his looking, and contrary to his deserving, he was come thither to yield him his most due Thanks for the same; assuring him, that he would from thence forth, rest as faithful his Friend, as ever before he had 25 shewn himself a professed Enemy. In witness of which his true meaning, and to strengthen the Friendship newly begun, in Goodwill, with a fast Knot of Allience, he there presented him a young Gentleman his Nephew, a Ward, and the Heir of his House (who being of fair Possessions, came amongst the other Company, masked in a Nymph's attire) to Match with one of his Daughters; which Marriage afterwards came to pass. And here I should also run out into Commendation of this rare Thankfulness, save that this Knight's many other Shews of his right noble Mind, are so well known, that they need not, and so great, that they cannot, be praised enough.

APPENDIX 2 Stonehouse Churchwardens' Accounts

No extant relevant records for the Plymouth suburb of Stonehouse have been located. But in the 19th century the Plymouth historian R.N. Worth reported some 'very decayed and fragmentary' accounts from the Churchwardens' Book of East Stonehouse, commencing in 1594. In his report is the following brief paragraph:

Under 1602 are the words 'John Trevill Elected' – with subsequently a scratched-out account of John Trevill for "playes and other pfitts;" while in the same year (1602) we have "John Warren oweth to...his play." (R.N. Worth, 'Notes on the Early History of Stonehouse,' Annual Reports and Transactions of the Plymouth Institution and Devon and Cornwall Natural History Society, 9 (1884–7), 360).

Sample Church Ale Expenses: Braunton, 1562

As noted in the Introduction, church ales were an almost universally practiced method of obtaining revenue for parish churches. Although these ales would logically have provided entertainment of some sort for those who attended, if it were locally provided – and without charge – it does not appear in the records. Since REED can report only the specific evidence of entertainment which survives, most of the alewardens' records from Devon have had to be omitted from this collection. One sample page from one alewardens' account book may, however, give the reader some idea of what transpired at these church ales. The page is from the accounts of the Wardens of St John and St George at Braunton, the account rendered 17 October, 1562 (1677A/PW1a)

Translations

The Latin documents have been translated as literally as possible in order to help the reader understand what the documents say. The arrangement of the translations parallels that of the text for the records. Place names and given names have been normalized but not surnames. Names of patrons appearing in the Complete Peerage are standardized according to that spelling. Names of members of the House of Commons not in the Peerage, or names of persons listed only in DNB, are standardized according to the spellings found in the History of Parliament series and the DNB, respectively. Spellings of the surnames of patrons not found in these standard sources but which are variants of surnames found in the patrons' index are standardized to the spelling given in that index. All other surnames are left in the spelling of the text. Furthermore, 'harper,' 'luter,' and similar words following Christian names have been capitalized and treated as surnames; thus 'John Harper' may refer to a man of that name or to a harper called John. Capitalization and punctuation are in accordance with modern practice. As in the text, diamond brackets indicate obliterations and square brackets cancellations.

Round brackets enclose words not in Latin but needed for grammatical sense in English. In the translations of account entries, the words which appear in these round brackets represent the subject and verb known to be governing each entry. These governing phrases were usually written out in full only a few times, at the beginning of each account heading or subheading, for example, 'Gifts and grants' or 'Necessary expenses.' They were not repeated for each item. It appears that once a corporate body found a set of formulae which fitted its needs, it tended to use the same or similar formulae year after year, despite changes of accountant or auditor, who doubtless copied them from earlier account books.

Now that five REED volumes containing translations of Latin documents have appeared, it seems appropriate to make a few general remarks about the translation of various Latin terms used to describe performers. It is especially appropriate to do so in the context of the Devon records because various classes of civic records, such as accounts, continued to be kept in Latin in that county to a later date than hitherto encountered. Whereas in the glossary it will not only be possible, but necessary, to discuss in detail the various shades of meanings and definitions available for these words, it is impossible to present or preserve all these shades of meaning in the translation. There a set of English terms must be devised which can serve as equivalents to these technical Latin terms while neither unduly widening nor restricting the range of possible meanings which ought to be represented.

The Latin terms for performers can be divided into two groups: the agentive nouns formed from a verbal or nominal root and the agentive suffixes '-or' and '-tor,' and that elusive set of synonyms, 'histrio,' 'mimus,' and 'ministrallus.' It is a comparatively simple operation to find English equivalents for translation purposes for the agentive nouns both because English agentive nouns are usually formed in the same way, and because these nouns offer intrinsic clues to their meaning by virtue of their formation. For example, given that 'lusor' is derived from the verbal stem 'lus-' (itself derived from 'ludere') and the agentive '-tor,' the analogous English formation, 'player' is the obvious choice for a translation equivalent. The same procedure has been used for most other agentive nouns used as performer terms.

It is a far more complex operation to find appropriate English equivalents for the three synonyms 'histrio,' 'mimus,' and 'ministrallus.' Their formation offers no intrinsic clue to their meaning or guide to their use. Instead it is necessary to rely upon the evidence of their usage in a variety of contexts and of their definition in contemporary lexicons and word-lists current in the British Isles. Although it is possible to arrive at working definitions in this way, equivalents for translation are much harder to determine. In previous REED volumes, the English derivative 'minstrel' was used as a translation for 'ministrallus,' and the colourless and noncommittal 'entertainer' for 'histrio' and 'mimus.' Indeed it would be tempting to use the same translation for all three synonyms, but synonymity is not the same as identity. Therefore, in the future, REED translations will distinguish between all three words.

The situation in Exeter, at least, is complicated by the absence of an official title in Latin for the city waits. They are designated by various performer terms, such as 'ministrallus' or 'fustulator,' and occasionally by a uniquely Devonian noun, 'administrallus,' which appears to be a more general occupational term for civic and noble servants than the English 'wait.' This Latin usage creates a certain awkwardness in official documents, such as the receipt of pledges for the waits' badges, where some occupational title would seem to be more appropriate than a performer term. The policy of literal translation is followed here as elsewhere, however.

The following list gives the most common Latin performer terms in Devon, as well as some of the uncommon ones, with their translation equivalents. For a full discussion of these words, and the research upon which the list and the above discussion is based, see the article by Abigail Ann Young in REEDN 1984:2 and 1985:1, 'Plays and Players:

The Latin Terms for Performance,' and consult the glossary.

And because many bodies of the saints and of (those who are) to be saved, to which all honour and reverence is due, are buried in consecrated churchyards, we strictly command parish priests publicly to announce in their churches that no one shall presume to carry on wrestling, dances, or other improper sports/plays in churchyards, especially on the vigils and feasts of the saints since the sacred canons (ie, canon law statutes) loathe for such stage-plays and spectacles of derision to be introduced, by which the decency of churches is polluted. But if, after the announcement (has) been made, some have carried on sports/plays of this sort, however improperly (they are so) called, since crimes arise from them, the aforesaid priests shall report their names to the archdeacon of the district or his official so that they may punish them canonically for their faults.

(Chapter seventeen)

Of the life and integrity of clerics

...Likewise, clerics should be decent and sober, abstaining from excessive drinking and intoxication. For, as blessed Gregory says, there is nothing more disgusting than an overindulgent person whose mouth is fetid; whose face is pale; whose fingers tremble; and in whose heart there lies no place of seclusion. And in order that, just as the way of life of clerics and entertainers is different in every way, so too it should appear (to be), we strictly command that priests in particular not attend dinner parties unless specially invited by the master of the house. But if it happens that they are invited, they should not guzzle, but should return sober to their own homes immediately after the meal. They should never frequent taverns, unless they are on a trip for the sake of a pilgrimage, but they should always live decently and soberly, in such a way that they know how, and are able, to tell the difference between the sacred and the profane, the clean and the unclean at all times, just as is fitting.

Likewise, because all indulgence in pleasure through which material for dissoluteness might arise ought particularly to be shunned among clerics, we order that clerics should not attend to entertainers and jesters, gamble and play at dice, nor be onlookers or participants in others' playing, nor should they presume to attend public spectacles for the purpose of watching. They should not use hunting birds or dogs.

These, and very many other things are forbidden to clerics, whose way of life is removed from the activities of the laity whom they ought to excel in devotion as much as in station.

Order against the vicars of the church of Exeter

John, etc, to our beloved sons, _____, the subdean, and Master William de Nassynton, canons of our church of Exeter, greetings, etc. We have learned, not without serious displeasure, from the account of trustworthy persons that some vicars and other ministers of the said church, having put on masks, do not even fear to practise in a manner worthy of condemnation dissolute behaviour, laughter, jeering, and other excesses irreverently as an offence to God and a marked impediment to divine worship and a scandal to our very church during the solemnities of the church service and especially in this famous feast of the Holy Innocents: thus, through their mimings' obscene ravings, they cheapen the honour of clerics in the sight of the people. Wherefore we, by virtue of the office enjoined upon us, being devoted in no small way to the honour of the house of God and wishing to forewarn rash persons daring in the future (to do) such things, by firmly enjoining you and each one of you (and) rousing your devotion, order that when the said vicars and ministers have been called together before you without delay upon your receipt of the present letter you shall forbid each and every one of them on our behalf, publishing our present order and its contents, to presume to do the aforesaid things or their like from now on, if they wish to avoid canonical punishment. But the day of the receipt of the present (letter), etc. Given at Crediton on the sixteenth day of December.

Monition against Robert Lucy to remove the posts fixed in sacred ground near the church of St Martin, Exeter.†

John, etc, to our beloved son, Master Robert Hereward, canon of our church of Exeter: greetings, grace, and blessing. Although according to civil and also canonical sanctions ground sacred and consecrated to God by bishops ought to be free and completely exempt from profane uses to the extent that it will be able to owe secular service to no one by prescription or agreement, nevertheless one Robert Lucy, neither considering nor heeding this, but rather aspiring, as it seems, to the reproach, injury, and contemptuous treatment of God his creator and the holy church his mother, notoriously maintains a balcony or canopy erected and constructed upon posts fixed in ground known to be sacred and dedicated, within the boundary of the churchyard of our aforementioned church of Exeter, that is, next the close-gate near the church of St Martin, not without a boldness deserving damnation and in other ways notoriously, improperly, and unjustly. For this reason, the processions which occur in the church will not be able to go around and make proper stations as would be fitting and, what is known to be more dangerous and damnable, there in that yard, beneath the aforesaid roof (literally, house or room) occurs a gathering of rogues, actors, whores, and other vile persons hindering the peace of the ministers of our aforesaid church of Exeter and putting on stage-plays to the grave detriment of ecclesiastical liberty and the scandal of many. Since therefore the church to which the aforesaid ground is known to belong ought to have the space above (it) free up to the sky, we entrust to you, on the prudence of whose judgment we rely, and order you to warn and persuade effectively the aforesaid Robert and others involved in this matter completely to remove or cause to be removed the said posts and balcony within a certain (and) suitable period of time to be determined by your choice. Otherwise you shall compel them to do this by ecclesiastical censures and canonical compulsions and you shall proceed against them by our authority by virtue of our office just as should be done by law. Given at our manor of Clyst on the twentysecond day of June in the aforesaid year.

^ROttery

John, etc, to his beloved son, the warden of our collegiate church of St Mary of Ottery, of our patronage, foundation, and diocese: greetings, etc. Since, as we have heard with displeasure, the choirboys of the said church do not stay quietly together in the house which we have caused to be made for this purpose, scorning our ordinance to this effect, and because they, together with some older members of the choir, whom (they) follow and assist, run about even at the time of divine office, we order you to warn the same (boys) sternly that each and every one of them shall sleep and stay quietly every night within the approaching feast of St Thomas the apostle in the said house ordered for them and they shall attend choir, and you shall subtract 2 d a week from the stipend of anyone (who) neglects to do this. Also the schoolmaster or his deputy shall sleep in the boys' room. And because the beating of boys for their faults in choir, or their being absent, or their being otherwise delinquent as a penalty established in our first ordinance does not sufficiently prevent them from (doing) forbidden things, we wish and order that any who absent themselves from the divine office, unless because of school, for a whole day shall lose 3/4 d; for a solemn hour (ie, part of the daily office), 1/4 d; and for another terrible fault, 1 d; and they shall also be beaten. Moreover, you shall warn the secondary clerics of the aforementioned church, among whom the stuff of dissension and waywardness is said to flourish, that they shall remove or cause to be removed completely during the said feast the sand and other clayey material (which is) blocking the entrance to the house which we ordered for them; otherwise you shall subtract 3 d a week from the stipend of each one until they do it. Furthermore, since we have learned that the aforesaid choirboys, not content on the feast of the Innocents last past with their dissolute behaviour and insolences within the parish of the said church, wandered to various places outside the same parish on many days following the same feast, leaving the said church unserved for their part in the meantime, we order you to forbid them more strictly henceforward from going outside the said parish on the said feast in any way on pain of their removal; rather, they shall present themselves devoutly and humbly in the choir at divine office on the night following the said feast....

Therefore you shall inform us, within the approaching Christmas(-tide), in a letter of yours containing the text of this (letter), of what you have done about the foregoing and what the said persons have done. Given at Chudleigh on the ninth of December (1339).

Chapter 52

Concerning spending the night and bounds Likewise, we establish that no canon, vicar, or secondary shall cause or allow choirboys to spend the night with them, or sleep in bed with them; nor shall they take them outside the parish of Ottery on the feast of Holy Innocents, or in the week following or grant them permission to roam.

Register of Bishop John de Grandisson DRO: Chanter 3 ff 156-6v* (11 July)

Letter for the evil brotherhood of Brothelyngham ® John, by divine mercy bishop of Exeter, to (our) beloved sons in Christ, _____, the archdeacon of Exeter's official, and _____, rural dean of Exeter, and also Sir Robert de Eglosayl, rector of the church of St Paul of Exeter: greetings, grace, and blessing. Since holy devotion has been planted in the field of the Lord to this end, that it produce in it (ie, the field) the flowers of righteousness and the rich fruits of honourable behaviour, we are rightly appealled to, by virtue of our office, to mow down the briars and thorns by which such a holy planting could be dishonoured or disrupted. Since it has come to our attention, not without grave disquiet (to us), that in our city of Exeter an abominable sect of some evil persons has sprung up recently with the aid of the Sower of evil deeds under the name of the order - nay, rather, the horror - of Brothelyngham: which (evil persons), forming not a convent but a clearly unlawful and suspect conventicle, appointed for themselves under the name of Abbot_____, an insane and mad man, but one extremely well suited to their activities; and, dressing the same man in a monastic habit, worshipping him set in a public place as if (he were) their idol, at the blast of a trumpet which they had established for themselves instead of a bell, they followed clerics as well as laymen through the streets and roads of the same city some days ago with a very great multitude of persons on horseback and on foot; then, putting themselves in their way, they seized them; and they dragged some people from their homes; and they held these people against their will for quite a long time with rash and at times sacrilegious daring until they had extorted from the same persons set sums of money in lieu of a sacrifice - but more properly a sacrilege. And although these things appear to be tried under the colour and guise of a diversion - nay, a derision - it is nevertheless undoubtedly theft, since (something) is taken from those (who are) unwilling, and robbery. Therefore we, wishing to uproot completely the aforesaid opprobrious and detestable sect (which is) damnably scornful of sacred religion and disquieting in many ways to the devotion of religious men and also truly threatening confusion to the peace of the realm and church lest it spread further with loss of souls and peril to persons and property, firmly enjoin you singly and jointly and order that on this very Sunday in our cathedral church and in every church and chapel in the said city and its suburbs, you shall prohibit or cause to be prohibited publicly and expressly, just as we even more strictly prohibit by the tenor of the present (letter), anyone henceforth from presuming to form such conventicles in the said city or the suburbs under pretext of this sort (of sect, which is) not an order but a horror, as we have said before; or from presuming to join them; or from presuming to enter, defend, or hold to in any way the said very dangerous and suspect sect, under pain of greater excommunication to be invoked against those contravening or anyone of them. Also, we proclaim generally to all whom the matter concerns that if they do not effectively obey your - actually, our - admonitions in this regard, not only will we proceed against them and each one of them, insofar as the guilt of each one demands, in accordance with canonical sanctions, but we will also describe so dangerous and pernicious a thing to the Royal Majesty by example, so that those whom ecclesiastical discipline does not compel, temporal stricture may restrain and punish with speedy remedy. Moreover, you should inform us in a letter patent to this effect of the date of receipt of the present (letter) and what you have done about the foregoing before the next feast of St James the apostle. Given at our manor of Chudleigh on the eleventh day of July in the year of the Lord 1348 and in the twenty-first year of our consecration.

Register of Bishop John de Grandisson DRO: Chanter 3 f 172v* (9 August)

John, etc, to (our) beloved son in Christ, _____, the archdeacon of Exeter or _____, his official: salvation, grace, and blessing. The envious ancient Enemy, kindler of all evils, who works incessantly that the joys of human peace be banished beyond the boundaries of the world, strives to diffuse the more widely the poisons of his wickedness in that place where he thinks he will do the greater harm. Indeed although the skilled trades, as practical experience constantly teaches us, ought to help one another in turn in any need, nevertheless we learned some time ago that some imprudent sons of our city of Exeter, inordinately given over to wanton behaviour (and) foolishly contemptuous of things usefully devised for their needs and those of all the populace, are proposing, as they had agreed and are planning among themselves, to practise openly on this very Sunday in a public place of our aforesaid city an objectionable diversion which does not lack for fault: nay, (not a diversion) but a derision, as invective and a reproach against the Shoemakers and also against their craft, wherefore, as we have learned, serious disputes, rancours, and brawls are sprouting forth vigourously and growing, with the help of the Sower of such detestable anger and envy, among the aforesaid craftsmen and those taking part in the said sport, both leaders and supporters. Therefore, because insults and terrible attacks, the disturbance of the king's peace and that of the realm, blows and dissensions and even - alas! - as a consequence, dangers to the soul more bitterly to be deplored will follow unless they, led by a spirit of better counsel, totally abstain and desist from their illicit plan, we, considering therefore how many evils of body and soul occur and come about at the Devil's prodding under the colour and guise even of lawful play, not unsuitably rouse ourselves to resist in as much as we are able the beginnings of such storms and turbulence lest a worse (situation) follow. Wherefore, we firmly enjoin and command you that no persons by whatever name they are known shall presume in any way or attempt to begin or to finish once begun the said sport (which) provides proof of such keen danger in our diocese and especially in our aforesaid city. You shall forbid (them) in the first instance, the second, the third, and peremptorily, publicly, and expressly, just as we forbid them by the tenor of the present (letter), under pain of greater excommunication which we in this writing impose upon them and any one of them thenceforward if they do not effectively obey these warnings and prohibitions henceforward.

Moreover, because the aforementioned craftsmen, who, as we have heard from the clamorous report of the people, so excessively receive and extort in selling their wares more than the just price in modern times from those contracting with the same (craftsmen), because their immoderation feeds such activities and moreover, (because) they, not content with a just profit without theft, are falling into present danger to their souls, we enjoin and command you as above publicly and solemnly to warn each and every craftsman aforesaid and effectively to persuade (them) and cause them to be warned and persuaded in a similar way by the curates of the churches of our said city and even to be forbidden, just as we forbid them by the tenor of the present (letter), from exceeding henceforward in any way in selling the things which belong to them the price set for public use by our most excellent prince and lord, the illustrious king of England and France, and his council, but (rather) they should more strictly keep and observe the edict soundly established in this respect. But you shall notify us properly before the octave of the Assumption of blessed Mary of the day of receipt of the present (letter), the manner and form of execution of our present order, and also the names and persons of those contravening the aforesaid and of their supporters by your letter patent clearly containing the text of this (letter). Given at Chudleigh on the ninth day of the month of August in the year of the Lord 1352 and in the twenty-fifth (year) of our consecration.

Register of Bishop John de Grandisson DRO: Chanter 3 ff 208v-9* (31 December, containing letter of 10 December)

The bishop's prohibition of dishonourable sports/plays

To their very reverend father in Christ and lord, Lord John, by the grace of God, bishop of Exeter, his own humble and most devoted sons and prayers, the warden and chapter of your collegiate church of St Mary of Ottery, of your foundation, patronage, and diocese, (send) the obedience and reverence due to so great a father with all honour. We received the command of your reverend paternity on the twelfth day of the month of November last past in these words:

John, by divine mercy bishop of Exeter for his beloved sons in Christ _, the warden, and the chapter of the collegiate church of St Mary of Ottery of our foundation, patronage, and diocese (wishes) health and uprightness of clerical behaviour. It has come to our notice not without grave displeasure of heart and consternation that in past years and in some (years) preceding on the very holy feasts of the Lord's birth, and of Sts Stephen (and) John the apostle and evangelist, and of the Holy Innocents, when all the faithful in Christ are bound to devote themselves more piously and more undistractedly to divine praises and ecclesiastical offices, some ministers of our aforesaid church, together with boys, having put aside the fear of God, have rashly presumed because of the pernicious example of some churches to engage in tasteless and harmful diversions unbecoming clerical uprightness - nay, rather (they are) more truly engaging in detestable parodies of divine worship within the church itself - not only at matins and vespers and the other hours (ie, parts of the daily office) but what is more horrible, during the solemnities of the masses, disfiguring in many ways vestments and other furnishings of the church to no small extent to our own detriment and shame and (that) of our same church, that is, by the spattering of filthy mud: not only are the people, gathering at the church at those times in particular according to Catholic custom, drawn away from due devotion by their jeering gestures and derisory laughter but (the people) are dissolved into disorderly laughter and illicit mirth; and divine worship is mocked and the office is basely hindered (by those things). And thus what had originally been devised to rouse and increase the devotion of the faithful has been converted or rather perverted, into irreverence and contempt of God and the saints, not without commission of blasphemy, by the insolences of such men. Therefore we, unable any further to pass over without a remedy such unspeakable abuses under (this) guise with a clear conscience, enjoin and command you under pain of suspension and excommunication that you totally desist from such insolences and mockeries hereafter and permit no such things to be done in any way in the same church henceforth; but that you exert yourselves to carry on the divine office more reverently than has been customary, just as the reverence of those days demands. And lest anyone henceforth ever be able to excuse himself in this regard out of ignorance, we order you, ____, the warden, by this present (letter) solemnly to proclaim before the coming feast of Christmas in the presence of all the ministers our letter and to cause our same letter to be transcribed faithfully into four or five books of the church in more common use lest it pass into oblivion. But if any presume to come against our present command, you shall cite them or cause them to be cited peremptorily to appear before us on the third court day after the end of the said feasts to answer concerning such rash presumption and to receive suitable penance. But you shall certify to us by your letter patent containing this text (and) signed with your common seal the date of the receipt of the present (letter) and what you will have done in this regard before the feast of the Circumcision of the Lord. Given at our manor of Chudleigh on the tenth day of the month of December in the year of the Lord 1360. And in the thirty-fourth year of our consecration.

We have published that order of yours, reverently received by us on the aforesaid day, before each and every minister of the church and we have caused your order of this kind to be transcribed in five books of the church in more common use for perpetual memory. And we, each and every one, have reverently obeyed the same your order. And because none have presumed to come against your present order, we have not proceeded to cite those delinquent in this respect. And thus we have reverently executed your order in every respect. Given at

Register of Bishop Thomas Brantyngham DRO: Chanter 7 f 14v (31 July)

Thomas, etc, to the discreet men, the archdeacons of Totnes and Barnstaple and the dean of Torrington and also the rector of the parish church of Torrington and each and every curate in the same archdeaconries (who) celebrates mass: greetings in the Lord.

We have received the serious suit of John Skidmore, the marshall of our hall, alleging that certain persons, our subjects, unmindful of their own salvation, of whose names and persons we are ignorant, took and carried away one harp from our cart and kept it with them and keep, take possession of, and conceal (it) without a reasonable cause or any permission, rashly and improperly, against the will of that John Skidmore and to his very grave prejudice, not without serious danger to their souls. He has sought ecclesiastical remedy from us upon this matter. Therefore, firmly enjoining your devotion collectively or individually by virtue of (your) obedience, we order and command that, on behalf of the said John, in churches and other places of the aforesaid archdeaconries in which you will have been requested to do (so) - since the greatest number of people will be present in the same churches - you shall admonish the thieves, carriers-away, keepers, possessors, and concealers of the aforesaid harp that within the eight days immediately following your warning they shall restore this harp (and) actually deliver and hand (it) over, under pain of the greater excommunication with which you shall blast the same canonically upon the lapse of the aforesaid period for their previous fault and delay. You shall excommunicate them and afterwards you shall by our authority publicly and solemnly denounce them as excommunicated and cause them to be denounced with ringing bells, kindled and extinguished candles, and with all other solemnity customary in similar denunciations on appropriate Sundays and feast-days in the aforesaid places until they actually obey your warnings by restoring the said harp. And you shall certify what you have done about the foregoing and what each of you has done, to us before Michaelmas next coming with the tenor of the present (letter), co-sealed by (joint) authority. Given at (Bishop's) Tawton on the last day of July in the year of the Lord 1372. And in the third year of our consecration.

Indulgence

Likewise, on the sixteenth day of the aforesaid month in the year of the Lord said above, in the same place, the lord (bishop) granted forty days of indulgence to all persons truly penitent and (who have) confessed who confer, leave as a legacy, or in any way assign any of the goods bestowed on them by God to the support of the confraternity of minstrels of St Mary Magdalene at Launceston as free alms of love.

Register of Bishop Edmund Lacy DRO: Chanter 11 ff 370-70v* (26 August)

Likewise, on the twenty-eighth day of the month of August in the year of the Lord aforesaid at Clyst there came forth a letter of warning against the ball-players in the churchyard of the collegiate church of St Mary of Ottery in the diocese of Exeter, whose tenor is as follows:

⁸ Against players in the churchyard°

Edmund, bishop of Exeter by divine permission, to (our) beloved sons in Christ, the warden of our collegiate church of St Mary of Ottery, the minister, and the chanter of the same: greetings, grace, and blessing. Although the reason of civil law as well as the authority of the sacred canons order that places consecrated to God be venerated by all and by no means profaned or in any way violated by a jarring or unsuitable activity, whether in working, jesting, or playing - for, according to the canonical sanctions, sanctity should befit such places of God with the result that the worship of Him in Whose peace (that) place is fashioned may be productive of peace, seeing that then the entering in and exiting from these places in due veneration would be humble and decent, and quiet behaviour in them (would be) pleasing to God and an example of sincere devotion for those beholding (it) not only to instruct but also spiritually to restore those contemplating (it), and (seeing that) there would take place in sacred places of this kind, in which it is fitting for God to be entreated with peace and quietness of life in earnest prayers for the living and the dead, no

laughter, shouting, immoderate mirth, indecent and indiscreet dances, indecent mockeries, and harmful plays proper to the market-place or the stage which ought to occur in places apt for viewing such as in the theatre where men are accustomed to come to spectacles, not in sacred places - (and) moreover (although) everything of this kind and things similar to them, which might be able ... | to detract from, diminish, and disturb the devotions of the faithful and divine worship, and offend the eyes of divine majesty, should be utterly and completely foreign to these places and are indeed wholly prohibited and forbidden by divine and human law; nevertheless some persons, clergy and laymen whose names and persons we do not know, do not fear, as we have learned from reliable testimony and public repute, to play, or rather to make mock, at a ball game commonly called tennis in the churchyard of the church of the aforesaid college of St Mary consecrated in that place for Christian burial - which church and its aforesaid churchyard are judged to be on an equal footing in law - as if (they were) in a profane place or a theatre, and to engage in empty, foul, and profane conversations and idle and vain oaths and very often in unlawful perjuries, and hence frequently to create brawls and arguments and to raise and cause loud shouting in the said churchyard, worthlessly and damnably disturbing and equally detracting as (it Warning against were) by forbidden spectacles from the honour and devotion of Christian people desiring to entreat God in the same place for the salvation of the souls of the departed, to the great peril of their own souls and as a manifest and notorious offense to the divine majesty.

players in the churchyard of the collegiate church of Ottery

> And so that they might engage the more freely in their unspeakable games of this kind, piling evil upon evil, they have violently removed, snatched, taken down, broken, and cast away secretly at various times a timberwork, offering an obstacle to those playing this game, (which timberwork is) upon the roof of a building (literally, house) located in the aforesaid churchyard where they wish to play this prohibited game, from the roof of this house, (thereby) violating wrongly and wickedly ecclesiastical liberty and rights, (and) damnably incurring ipso facto the sentence of the greater excommunication laid down accordingly in the constitutions of the holy fathers against those offending in such a way.... Chapter Act Book EUL: Cathedral D & C 3550 f xxi

Decision (between) the vicar Forn and his colleagues

Be it known that Sir John Forn, vicar in the cathedral church of Exeter was summoned on Saturday, the morrow of the feast of the Apostles Peter and Paul, that is, on the last day of June in the year of the Lord, etc, (13)86 on a charge of contempt, because the same Sir John threw (or cast) a piece of wood (a pole?) in the churchyard of the said church of Exeter while playing among laymen, without any shame for his insolences and excesses, when he should have been at the morning mass on the eve of the said feast just as the canons and vicars, his colleagues, and the rest of the ministers of the aforesaid church were at the same (mass), (which was) a great scandal for the said cathedral church and to his (religious) profession and a bad example to very many, both clerics and laymen. Indeed, this Sir John, personally appearing on the said day in the chapter house of Exeter before the president of the chapter and the canons written below met in chapter, after the aforementioned had been both charged against him and confessed by him there at that time, placed himself at the mercy of the chapter upon the same (charges). Whereupon the same president and chapter, conferring further on the same matter, ordered upon their express consent there at that time that one-fourth of his salary for one term which he will receive from the exchequer shall be applied to the use of the church fabric for that first offense; and on the second occasion, if he has failed in any greater or similar (respect), of which (offense) he has been convicted in the event, then one-third of his salary for one term shall be applied to the same purpose as is stated above. And if he has been found guilty of such (an offense) a third time - God forbid! - let him be deprived of his vicarage and his office completely according to the form of the statute (which has been) promulgated accordingly in this regard. And thus the dean and chapter shall proceed likewise against each and every vicar in the same church if it happens that the same or any one of them is delinquent in the future as is stated above according to the extent of his fault. Present there at that time:

Master Hugh Hickelyng, president of the chapter; Bosoun, Brokes, Bridham, Braybrokes, Schillingford, Feriby, Blacborne, Pouton, Pyl, and Broclond, and Master John More, notary public, and Robert Lyngham, clerk.

Mayors' Court Roll DRO, ECA: MCR 1/2 Henry V
mb 38d* (18 June)

Although a play has usually been played annually at the feast of Corpus Christi in the city of Exeter by ancient custom up until just a short time ago, because the mayor and commonalty of the same city have ordered by unanimous consent and agreement among themselves for the greater convenience and honour of the same (city) that the aforesaid play ought to be played annually on Tuesday in Whitsun week; and (although) the mayor and commonalty for the present had fixed in advance and determined Tuesday in Whitsun week last past as the day of the playing of that play and that two, three, or four (members) of each craft of the same city ought to have set portions of that play called 'pageants' and should find players of a number sufficient to play the aforesaid pageants at their own expense; and (although) set pageants and sections extracted from the ordinal of the aforesaid play were delivered in writing to John Benet and William Frenssh and others as (being) chief masters of the Skinners' craft by Peter Sturte, the mayor at that time, with the agreement of the aforesaid commonalty in order to play the aforesaid play according to the apportionment and effect of the aforesaid pageants and sections, (nevertheless) the same John Benet went on that Tuesday and earlier to various players assigned to play the sections and pageants of the said Skinners' craft and of the other crafts and suborned them (and) encouraged (them) not to perform their (the mayor's & commonalty's, that is, the official) sections. And on that day John himself kept close by him the various sections, otherwise (called) 'speeches' assigned to the said Skinners and in his care for the playing of the said play, with the result that two pageants and sections of the craft of the aforesaid Skinners (which) were required to be played that day were left over, as an insult to the entire city and a slur upon the mayor and the whole aforesaid commonalty, and contrary to the aforesaid order. And immediately on the same day, when the aforesaid play had not yet been completely played, the aforesaid mayor spoke to the said John Benet about the aforesaid default and asked him why he interfered in this way with the aforesaid play and insulted the mayor and commonalty so. He answered him derisively, and said with a scornful expression, turning his back on him, 'By God, a man shall not be hanged without a chance to defend himself in court.' And so he went away from him contemptuously and scornfully. And since a common rumour and outcry were raised about this by the community of the said city, concerning the said insult and contempt toward the same mayor, the aforesaid John Benet, having spoken upon and about the foregoing, submitted himself humbly thereupon to the mercy of the same mayor in a full session of the court of the aforesaid city held at Exeter on the Monday next before the feast of the Nativity of St John Baptist in the second year of the reign of King Henry the Fifth after the conquest, etc.

Endnotes

4-6 Bishop Peter Quinel's Statutes

These statutes survive in thirteen known manuscripts, twelve of which were examined for the collation and edition prepared by Frank Barlow for Powicke and Cheney, Councils and Synods, vol 2, pt 2, pp 982–1059. A thirteenth manuscript not used by Barlow was brought to our attention by the archivist of the Exeter Cathedral Library, Mrs Audrey Erskine. Its shelfmark is Exeter Cathedral Library, Dean and Chapter Archives 3549a.

Unlike most REED editions of texts surviving in multiple manuscripts, this one does not use a base text to which the others are collated. BL: Harley 220 was chosen by Barlow as the base text for his edition because that manuscript contains the best text of the penitential Summula of Bishop Quinel, which is also printed in Councils and Synods. No one of the thirteen manuscripts could be preferred on the basis of the sections included here. Indeed, Barlow himself concluded that there was no one best manuscript of the statutes (p 983). The text printed here is therefore based upon a full collation and recension of all the manuscripts.

The selection of the readings to appear in the printed text and collation makes the most reasonable compromise possible between the recensionist methods of textual criticism and REED's rigorous demand that the minutiae of scribal usage be preserved. The majority of the manuscripts have been followed as a guide to spelling whenever possible. However, the manuscripts themselves are not internally consistent on two points: the uses of the 'u' and 'v' letter forms, and the use of the long and short 'i' forms. Therefore, editorial consistency has been imposed: the 'v' form is used initially and the 'u' form elsewhere, and the long 'i', ('j') is used only as the final character in a series of 'i's. Punctuation and capitalization are also supplied. In general, as little punctuation as possible is used, and is inserted only as deemed necessary to make the periodic structure of some of the sentences clear. The first letter in each new sentence and in the title is capitalized, as well as the first letter of proper names. Otherwise lower case is used.

The practice of preferring readings represented by the largest number of manuscripts has not been followed. Instead, those readings have been chosen that produce correct Latin syntax, even when they are represented by the smaller number of manuscripts. At times the less well-represented reading has been preferred when it was more suitable to the canonical context.

Thus the text presented here contains the best readings to be found in all the available manuscripts. Although every word can be found in one or more of the manuscripts, the whole cannot be found in any one of them. Therefore, in keeping with the usual practice of REED collations, a critical apparatus of alternate readings has been included. Minor variations in spelling, capitalization, and word division are not noted in the apparatus, where only the more significant variants are recorded. In an edited text of this kind it has been impossible to follow the standard REED policy of indicating expansions by italics. The difficulties in recording all the differences in abbreviation and indicating them in the apparatus, as well as in determining in some cases which form of abbreviation to choose, would have been almost insurmountable, and any solution would have produced a very awkward text.

The manuscript sigla assigned by Barlow in the introduction to his edition (pp 982-4) have been used here. The new manuscript has been designated as P. A list of the sigla is provided below, together with remarks specifically relevant to the sections used in this volume. For a fuller description of the manuscripts, their affiliations, and the place of these statutes in the general history of English canonical collections, see Barlow's introduction.

P: Exeter Cathedral, D and C Archives, 3549a. Chapter 13, title f 31, REED section f 31v; chapter 17, title f 35, REED section f 36-6v.

According to Barlow (p 983), there are three families: AC, BDEHKLN, and FG. He assigns I to no family. P belongs to the same family as AC.

6-7 DRO: Chanter 4 f 174v

The double dots (l. 17) were used in medieval documents in a way analogous to the use of A.B. in modern legal formulae or form books. Normally, they indicate either that the name of the addressee was unknown to the sender (unlikely in this case) or that the letter was addressed to that person not in his proper persona, but in an official capacity, to be opened and acted upon by whoever was currently exercising the office. In any age of often slow communications, the identity of a prior or subdean might change between the sending of the letter and its arrival. Addressing it to '.. subdecano,' rather than 'Iohanni Smythe subdecano,' would ensure that it was acted upon.

9-10 DRO: Chanter 3 ff 156-6v

There was of course no such order or place as 'ordinis...de Brothelyngham'. The editor of the complete register of Bishop Grandisson, F.C. Hingeston-Randolph, noted the difficulty and hazarded the guess 'that the Bishop, in his indignation, invented a name for them, and stigmatized them as the iniquitous fraternity of scoundreldom' (p 1055, n.1). It is likely that the letter was intended to suppress an abbot of misrule and his followers, or possibly, given the date, a hocking game. The invented place-name Brothelyngham, which in modern English might be 'Wretchton,' is not unlike the invented place-name 'Marham,' used in Shrewsbury as one of the designations of the abbot of misrule.

Hingeston-Randolph, in the note quoted in part above, accepts the phrase 'in teatro' (p 10, l. 2), which appears both here and in a later document from this register also printed here (p 11, l. 17), as evidence for an actual permanent theatre in Exeter at this date. But the word 'theatrum' had a more general range of meanings than simply 'a theatre' and M.H. Marshall, in her article 'Theatre in the Middle Ages,' Symposium, 4 (1950), 1–39, 366–89, cites these two episcopal letters as examples of the use of 'teatrum' to mean a market-place or public square (p 381). Although in the absence of any concrete evidence for the existence of a theatre in Exeter at the time, 'theatre' cannot be used as the translation of 'teatrum', here, a specific place is almost certainly being referred to and therefore the expressions 'market-place' or 'public square' are inappropriate. So 'in teatro' has been left in Latin in the translations of these two episcopal letters. In the later episcopal letter of Bishop Lacy (p 16, l. 4), however, the phrase has been translated as 'in a theatre' because its application is very general and because it is used in conjunction with a very traditional definition of 'teatrum.'

The use of the phrase 'pro campana' (p 10, ll. 3-4) together with the verb 'adorare' as well as the use of the noun 'sacrificium' four lines below suggest that Grandisson either perceived or wished to imply that this ceremony was somehow a travesty of either the devotions to the eucharist or the eucharistic processions associated with Good Friday and Corpus Christi Day.

11-12 DRO: Chanter 3 f 172v

This document is dated on a Thursday and states that it is intended to stop a 'ludus' that was to take place on the Sunday. Since the bishop could not even be sure that the letter would arrive in time, it is curious that it was not written sooner if he had known about the 'ludus' for some time, as 'pridem' (l. 11) implies. Perhaps the original letter contained the common expression 'non pridem,' 'not long ago,' and the 'non' was lost in making the register copy.

It is difficult to translate the words 'ludum,' 'ludi' (ll. 15, 19), although the language suggests a game of some kind with satiric and perhaps mimetic overtones. The translation of 'ludus' varies here in different contexts. Fr Leonard Boyle, o.p., who has been very helpful with these episcopal registers, suggests that this 'ludus' may have been a parody of quoits or horseshoes, using real shoes and intended to 'get at' the shoemakers for their high prices.

12-14 DRO: Chanter 3 ff 208v-9

The name of the month in 'xij' die mensis Nouembris' (l. 31) is clearly an error for 'Decembris.' A letter written on 10 December cannot have been received on 12 November: one date or the other must be wrong. Copies of the bishop's letter were sent to the three other collegiate churches in the diocese: the Cathedral, Glasney, and Crediton. Their replies, similar assurances of obedience, were all registered, and provide the correct dating as December. These other replies are not included.

15-16 DRO: Chanter 11 ff 370-70v

This document is written on the middle of a manuscript page with other material above and below it; the scribe appears to have provided insufficient space there to register a copy of this letter. It continues on the top of the next page and is thereafter written consecutively and without interruptions. The later marginalia on the first sheet act as a guide to find the remainder of the document.

19 DRO: 2141A/PW1 f 45

As this is a small payment, clearly not related to salary, and as it follows an expense for mending player clothes, it may well be related to the play, perhaps even to those who acted it.

23 DRO: 2141A/PW1 f 115v

These players are not identified elsewhere; the entry is another indication that our knowledge of the extent of Devon drama is scanty at best.

34 NDA: Roll 2013 mb 1

It is tempting to conclude that this tumbler (l. 18) was a woman, but it is unclear how much weight is to be put on the 'la' in a macaronic phrase like this. It may only serve to introduce the vernacular, although 'le' is more common. Cf Barnstaple Receivers' Accounts (p 33, l. 6 footnote) above.

38 NDA: Book 3972 no 51 mb 2
The receiver has mistakenly dated this roll from 24 Henry VIII to 24 Henry VIII. As there is an account roll for 24-5 Henry VIII, this roll must be for 23-4 Henry VIII.

38 NDA: Book 3972 no 44 mb 2
The only other reference to Cornish players at Barnstaple is to the players of Liskeard in 1538-9. Possibly this is the same troupe.

- 43 NDA: Book 3972 no 65 mb 2

 The lord is probably but not certainly the earl of Bath. There was no earl of Devon at this time; the earl of Bath was lord lieutenant for Devon from 1556 and made frequent visits to Barnstaple.
- 43 NDA: Rolls 2523, 2524 mb 1
 Documents 2523 and 2524 are apparently pp 2 and 3 of the paper draft for either 1562-3 or 1563-4. Page 1, with the date, is missing, as are the final parchment copies for both years.
 The handwriting is the same as that of the account for 1561-2, and the names of civic employees permit limitation of the date to 1562-3 or 1563-4.
- 47 REED: English MS 1 ff 21v-2
 The marginal numbers probably refer to the folio numbers of the MS from which these entries were copied. The entry included from f 21 above may therefore have come from an original f 114, according to the number noted above the entry.
- 49 NDA: 3972 no 189a mb 1
 Halliwell-Phillipps accidentally repeated the numbering of documents at 189. This is the second document so numbered, the first being a collector's account for 14-15 James 1.
- 51 Book 3972 no 217 mb 1
 Document 218 in this collection is a paper draft of 217, for 1630-1. In this draft, the entry reads: 'And of x s. given to players by mr Maiors order to ridd the Towne of them.'
- 51-2 DRO: Bideford, R2379 A/Z2 mb 1d This entry is from a 1656 copy of the 1608 court decree in which the parishioners of Bideford had brought suit against the feoffees of the Long Bridge for misusing income properly belonging to the parish.
- 55-6 DRO: 1429A add/PW2 f 5
 This is not the church ale, for which there is a separate account, as well as an account of ale sold by the guild of St George. The hoodsmen seem to have sold their ale at some sort of spring festival or entertainment. Chagford still holds an annual 'church ale' at the vicarage, the dramatic entertainment now being a locally adapted variant of the Punch and Judy show.
- 56 DRO: 1429A add/PW3 f 32

 This note is nearly illegible; the paper is fragmentary, a caustic ink has burned through what remains, and the original note has been much revised and interlined. Clearly the 'Sommer Rode' has been sold for 18 d between the making of the account and its audit. The silver arrow for the Robin Hood play remains, but it is not mentioned again in these accounts.
- 57 DRO, EDRO: Chudleigh PW1 p 5
 The medieval difficulty in adding and subtracting pounds, shillings, and pence is exemplified by this account: the wardens have undercast expenses by 1 d and given the remainder as 44 s 7 d instead of the correct 48 s 6 d.

58 DRO, EDRO: Chudleigh PW1 p 50
The expenses for this year are identical to those of 1568; clearly the clerk has erred in making his final drafts, repeating one year and omitting the other.

58 DRO, EDRO: Chudleigh PW1 p 85
As the Four Men were not in the habit of making payments to choir members, it seems likely that these singing men were minstrels — especially since the Four Men did not make the payment without 'consente of the reste.' It should be noted, however, that 'singing men' is a term often applied to church singers (as at Exeter and Crediton).

58 DRO, EDRO: Chudleigh PW1 p 100
This payment must have been to Nicholas Sexson for the singing boy: Sexon or Saxon was not a boy but a sort of under-constable and sometime bailiff of the parish. As in the payment to five singing men in 1577–8, the context does not make clear whether this boy was an entertainer or for some reason singled out of the choir for payment.

58-9 DRO, EDRO: Chudleigh PW1 p 163 'Hennocke' is the neighboring parish. Account of the payment appears to be duplicated.

Immediately preceding this entry is 'Item payd Edment Bainston for dyet bestowed one Bovey men by consent iij s vj d,' but the context gives no clue to the reason for this hospitality to the men of Bovey Tracy. It may have been for a mumming or for a 'summer rode,' as in the 1588 payment to 'hynnycke men,' but one cannot make this assumption.

This was not one of the four in-church collections during the year. Apparently it was a 'gathering' about town, one would think with some sort of entertainment accompanying it, as the church owned a sword and armour for St George. Compare the plough-boys' plays and gatherings in Lincolnshire, where a version of a St George or mummers' plays was performed about the village to collect money for the church. See, eg, E.H. Rudkin, 'Lincolnshire Plough Plays,' Folk-Lore, 50 (1939), 88–97. While there is no positive evidence that St George's sword and armour were taken out of the church for gatherings or other entertainment, neither is there any evidence, from the beginning of the extant churchwardens' accounts in 1430, that these items were part of a fixed shrine to St George in the church, or even that there was such a shrine.

71 DRO, ECA mb 1 There are two rolls for this year, one marked '38 Edward III, Michaelmas to Christmas,' the other '38/39 Edward III.'

73 DRO, ECA mb 1
The fairly regular payments to the friars for the Corpus Christi procession between this date and 1424 have been included because we know from a Mayor's Court Roll of 1413 that there was also a Corpus Christi play at this time; what connection, if any, the procession had with the drama is not indicated in the extant records. In case subsequent research should establish a connection, it seemed worthwhile to record the dates of the procession.

81 DRO, ECA mb 2, 2d

There is a discussion of the meaning and origin of 'administrall',' a word apparently unique to the city of Exeter, in the Latin glossary. An ambiguous abbreviation is apparently used for this word in the Receiver's Account Roll for 1414–15 where it appears as 'administr',' which can also be an abbreviation for the more usual 'administer.' In 1431–2, 1432–3, and 1445–6, it appears as two words, 'ad ministrall',' but is treated as one word syntactically.

82-3 DRO, ECA: MCR 1/2 Henry v mb 38d Cecily Radford, in 'Three Centuries of Playgoing in Exeter,' translated this entry and dated it Monday before Midsummer, 1413 (pp 241-2). As the roll dates from Michaelmas to Michaelmas, 1-2 Henry v, the date would be 18 June, 2 Henry v, or 1414.

89 DRO, ECA mb 2
So far as I am aware, this is the first recorded performance of a Robin Hood play (l. 22-3); the entry, however, does not suggest that the play was new or unfamiliar.

The purpose of the waits' finding pledges from amongst the substantial citizens of Exeter was to guarantee that the expensive silver collars and chains that were part of the waits' uniforms – as well as their instruments, owned by the town – would be kept safely. At King's Lynn, Norfolk, where the waits were also required to find 'sureties,' one of the last duties of the outgoing mayor was to collect the collars and chains from the waits; the new mayor then redistributed them. Cf Malone Society Collections XI (Oxford, 1980), 61–9.

92-3 DRO, ECA mb 2
The last name 'Saverde' (l. 4) is probable but uncertain due to a crease in the MS. There was no queen (l. 7) at this time. Catherine of Valois, the queen mother, may be intended, but she was already married to Owen Tudor.

Many entries on this roll have been deleted without explanation. The context gives no hint about the nature of 'la Tornment de Totyngham'. The Middle English poem, 'The Tournament of Tottenham,' is singularly dramatic and may well have lent itself to adaptation as a combat play. The exact meaning of the entry is not clear, because it is not certain whether the 'de' of 'de la' is a Latin or a vernacular word here. In either case, the meaning 'about' or 'concerning' is possible; if 'de' is a vernacular preposition, it might instead introduce the object of the verb. The translation covers both possibilities.

93-4 DRO, ECA mb 1d The beginning of mb 1d, which formed the exposed cover of the roll, is extremely faded and worn.

96 DRO, ECA mb 4
This entire roll, but particularly mbs 4 and 4d, is very badly faded and in places illegible.

98 DRO, ECA mb 2

This roll contains the usual expenses for torches at the feast of St John the Baptist, but no entertainers are mentioned in connection with the feast.

101 DRO, ECA mb 1d

Floyersmarsh (l. 25) was an area outside the city walls near the River Exe.

107 DRO, ECA mb 1d

This payment to the Corpus Christi brotherhood is part of a complicated series of adjustments to the 1480–1 audit, of which it forms part. The receiver was found in the end to owe the city £32 8 s 2 d, which he had to pay to John Kelly for safekeeping after the reconciliation of accounts for 1480–1. On 10 January 1483, the £32 were used to obtain a royal annulment of the Tailors' charter and the remainder of 8 s 2 d was given to the Corpus Christi brotherhood. The phrase 'hoc anno' in the section included thus refers to 1482–3, although the money itself had been received by the city in 1480–1.

As a series of entries between this date and 1496-7 eventually makes clear, the Skinners' guild presented a Corpus Christi play for which the city provided some economic support.

125 DRO, ECA mb 2d These memoranda are among final adjustments to the accounts for 1523-4, although they are dated 21 September 1527.

133-4 DRO, ECA mb 4d There is a payment this year and in 1537-8 (p 135) regarding the house of Thomas Wayte, but the entry does not make clear that he was one of the city waits.

135-8 DRO, ECA: G1/B1/2 f 192v

There is no court book for this year to clear up this curious case of the missing harp (harper?). The depositions are somewhat confused by the fact that both the harper and the contentious gentleman are named Callerd.

139-40 DRO, ECA: G1/B1/2 f 66v

The marginal notations are later. The first word, 'Waytes,' appears to be in John Hooker's hand, the remainder in that of Richard Izacke. The final entry was added later, though in the same hand.

140 DRO, ECA mb 4d

These two entries have been added, in a hasty hand, at the bottom of the schedule of fees and salaries for civic officials.

The document is undated. Since it is addressed to Sir Richard Rich, Lord Chancellor from 23 October 1547 to 21 December 1551, it very probably was written during his tenure (see S.T. The act was incorrectly dated 1550 and incorrectly altered to 1559; a different hand has attempted to put the error right by adding 3 Elizabeth, but succeeded only in compounding the error. Folios 21v and 22v make clear that the correct date is 1560.

208-9 DRO: 2983A/PW1 f 177v

Nothing in the Morebath records indicates whether the George, the horse, and the dragon were used for a play, a procession, or simply for some sort of tableau. Subsequent entries show that the annual 'revel Sunday' was at 'St George tide,' or the Sunday nearest 23 April; there are receipts for a church ale at this time and musicians were paid for playing. The revel and ale were the responsibility of the wardens of the Store of St George, so that there is clearly a connection between St George and the annual festivity, but the wardens do not bother to explain what entertainment was provided.

Catherine of Aragon landed at Plymouth on 2 October 1501. The capture of Boulogne-sur-mer, across the channel, by English forces in 1544 gave particular cause of celebration in Plymouth, which had suffered periodic French raids from that port (see Cornish, 'Strolling Players in the West,' p 151).

231 WDRO: W 130 f 236v

The men of Stonehouse, now a suburb of Plymouth, were rewarded twice at Plymouth's May Day celebration. Clearly they entertained, but what they did is nowhere specified. As they are not the morris dancers, they may have done a men's play or mumming – or, as the church dedication was to St George, possibly a St George play.

232 WDRO: W 130 f 245v

On 10 September 1547, the Lord Protector Somerset soundly defeated the Scots under the Scottish governor, the earl of Arran, in the battle of Pinkie Cleugh. News of the victory must have reached Plymouth sometime after 29 September, the start of the new accounting year.

Accounts from 1550-1 through the reign of Mary are missing. This account is dated 2-3 Elizabeth; but in W 131, 'Receiver's Book #2,' there is a full and quite different account for 2-3 Elizabeth. 247 WDRO: W 132 f 37v

Sir Francis Drake took this expensive drum on his circumnavigation of the globe; as there is no indication in 1580 of its being returned, it is possible that the famous 'Drake's Drum' is in fact Plymouth's drum.

248 WDRO: W 132 f 49

As normally happens amongst early records, here the expenses for building the 'Turke' are faithfully recorded without any clue as to what was done with him. Obviously he was part of the May Day celebration. It might be noted that all references to Gogmagog disappear from the Plymouth records five years earlier; possibly a Turk seemed a less objectionable symbol of paganism to the increasingly puritanical authorities at Plymouth. The Turkish knight, of course, was a standard character in the surviving later men's plays.

249 WDRO: W 132 f 54

The nature of the entertainment (ll. 17–18) is not indicated, but an expense of £10 suggests something rather lavish. This was the year in which Sir Francis Drake was elected mayor of Plymouth and the expense may reflect the entry of the new mayor and his wife from their estate outside town.

251-2 WDRO: W 132 f 75v

The lord admiral's appearance (p 251, ll. 41-2, p 252, ll. 1-3) was connected with preparations for the expected arrival of the Spanish Armada.

In this year, with the help of Sir Francis Drake, the town diverted river water through 'the leate' to provide Plymouth with fresh water, a project that aided considerably in the subsequent growth of Plymouth. Many entries for this year concern the 'bringing in of the river.'

254 WDRO: W 132 f 95v

Elizabeth I was crowned queen on 15 January 1559, but the date usually celebrated as 'coronation day' during her reign was 17 November, the date of her accession to the throne. In this instance, the 17 November date is supported by the fact that this entry follows one dated earlier in November.

255 WDRO: W 132 f 100

Plymouth's Freedom Day fell on St Matthew's Day, 21 September. This was later thought to commemorate the deliverance of the city from foreign attack, but it was in fact the day the mayor walked the boundaries of the freedom or city limits. As part of the boundary was water, boys were sent in boats to delineate it while the mayor retained his dignity on land. In Plymouth as in Exeter, on this day the mayor gave fruit and nuts to the poor boys and the day became an occasion for celebration (and at times riotous behaviour).

King Charles was at Totnes on the preceding day, 14 September; there, the identical expenses are identified as 'fees due' rather than the 'presents' implied by the Plymouth entry. There is no record of the king's having passed through Exeter on his way to Totnes and Plymouth.

270-1 wdro: W 359/62 single sheet

Although these expenses are recorded in the receiver's account for this year, Kynnaston's receipt has been reprinted here as it parallels the receipt given one day earlier to the borough of Totnes.

275-6 WDRO: W 359/53 single sheet

1638–9 seems the likely date of this petition: in that year the waits were provided with new cloaks, their first since 1603. The waits were incorrect about the £10 salary, however, and their pay for 1638–9 remained, as always, £4. Their argumentum ad verecundiam, crediting Sir Francis Drake with establishing the Plymouth waits, is also incorrect. It should be noted, however, that the Plymouth waits were doubtless aware of the £10 annual salary being paid the Exeter waits at this time and were applying pressure to correct the inequity.

In this year the parish sold its church-ale equipment; these two entries are among the items sold.

This entry is among expenses for the church ale.

The plea roll concerns the case of succession as abbot of Tavistock between abbot-elect Robert Busse and John Courtenay. Although the accusation above was made sometime in 1324, the depositions were heard on 15 November 1325. A summary of the depositions and the course of the dispute is given by H.P.R. Finberg, 'The Tragi-Comedy of Abbot Bonus,' pp 198–211. Briefly, Busse was elected, but John Courtenay, the disappointed candidate, together with two other monks, John Fromund and Richard Montori, contested the election and submitted thirty-one accusations against Busse, ranging from bastardy and usury to misappropriation of abbey funds, incontinence, and assault. Despite the many charges, Busse's election was upheld. The reference to actors and actresses above occurs in the twenty-fifth paragraph of charges, none of the others being relevant to this study.

279 DRO: 482A/PW31 mb 1

The date is probable but not certain. The document is a virtually illegible fragment, rendered partly legible by high-contrast copier.

281 DRO: 1579 A/7/6 mb 3

Cartley is most probably for Courtenay. The spelling probably gives a clue to early pronunciation (cf Friskney, Lincs, pronounced 'Frickley').

281 DRO: 1579 A/7/7 mb 2

The generally careless hand and spelling give no clue as to whether the scribe means 'waits' or 'weights' here (l. 19).

281 DRO: 1579 A/7/8 f 1

In this year the large sum of £33 s 4 d was 'spent vppon Sir Walter Tawly,' but no details are given.

282 DRO: 1579 A/7/1 f 1v

This account is titled 'Mr holldiche account presented 26th ffebuerij 1627' and is clearly part of a mayor's account. But there is a mayor's account for that year and Philip Holditch was mayor in 1623–4, not 1626–7. This portion of the account may have been submitted late because it contains some large loans made to the town and to the mayor of Plymouth, which may have come due in 1627. There is a note at the end of two sums that Mr Holditch received on 20 November 1624. In any case, the account seems fairly sure to be an addendum to the account of 1623–4.

282 DRO: 1579 A/18/4 f 1

In the mayor's account for this year, there is a gift of £200 to King Charles at his coming. On the following day, 15 September 1625, the mayor of Plymouth was presented with a similar bill (see pp 270-1).

284 DRO, EDRO: Woodbury PX1 f 47v
The date 1542 and a note are written in the margin in the hand of Matthew Lee, who on 1 June 1790 wrote the headnote to this rate book and transcribed the first entry. The date, however, is 33 Henry VIII, 1541.

287 DRO: W 1258/G4/53/1-5 mb 2

The date of this roll is illegible. However, as many of the names mentioned in this account occur in other accounts of the 1470s, and as there is no other account dated 18–19 Edward IV, 1478–9 is the most likely date.

295 DRO: QS 1/1 pp 298-9

This order was reaffirmed without mention of entertainments on 16 April 1607 and 16 July 1612. On 10 July 1610, the justices ordered an inquiry into abuses of the ordinance.

295-6 DRO: QS 1/4 f 73v

The original of this order, here dated 19 July 1613, is not to be found in the previous Quarter Sessions Book for 1608–13, although church ales had been forbidden on 10 July 1610 and on 16 July 1612 (QS 1/3 ff 95, 192).

297 DRO: QS 1/5 p 182

A virtually identical version of this order, apparently entered out of place and deleted, occurs on p 176 of this volume.

303-4 WDRO: W 361/60 ff 1-1v

1625 and 1636 were both 'perilous tymes of danger' from plague in Plymouth; the handwriting seems more appropriate to the latter date.

304 Somerset Record Office: Trevelyan Papers, CC/WO/57/11 Bundle 11 single sheet According to Mary Siraut, who has been working with the Trevelyan Papers, this is a draft testimony for a trial to be held at the Devon quarter sessions. While the handwriting appears to be early seventeenth century, no such trial is recorded in the Devon Quarter Sessions Books, which begin in 1592. According to Siraut, Willoughby was baptised in 1574 and went to London about 1594. As the manuscript notes that the manslaughter took place four (or possibly five) years earlier, it seems unlikely that the inquiry could antedate the extant Quarter Sessions Books: the latest date for the manslaughter would in that case be 1588, when Willoughby was only fourteen. 1613, when at least one other record is known to be missing from the Quarter Sessions Book, is a possibility.

Patrons and Travelling Companies

The following list has two sections. The first gives companies alphabetically by patron, according to the principal title under which their playing companies and entertainers appear, with cross-references from other titles, if they are also so named in the records. The second section lists companies identified by place of origin, including counties for locations wherever identification is certain.

The biographical information supplied here has come entirely from printed sources, the chief of which are the following: S.T. Bindoff (ed), The History of Parliament: The House of Commons 1509-1558, 3 vols (London, 1982); Calendar of Patent Rolls (edited through 1576); Calendar of State Papers; G[eorge] E[dward] C[okayne], The Complete Peerage...; The Dictionary of National Biography; James E. Doyle, The Official Baronage of England Showing the Succession, Dignities, and Offices of Every Peer from 1066 to 1885, 3 vols (London, 1886); P.W. Hasler (ed), The History of Parliament: The House of Commons 1558–1603, 3 vols (London, 1981); Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, Henry VIII, 21 vols and Addenda (London, 1864–1932); F. Maurice Powicke and E.B. Fryde (eds), Handbook of British Chronology; and Josiah C. Wedgwood and Anne D. Holt, History of Parliament: Biographies of the Members of the Commons House 1439-1509 (London, 1936). All dates are given in accordance with the style in the sources used. The authorities sometimes disagree over the dates of birth, death, creation, succession, and office tenure. Where this evidence conflicts, the Calendar of State Papers, Calendar of Patent Rolls, and similar collections are preferred; for example, List of Sheriffs for England and Wales from the Earliest Times to A.D. 1831, Public Record Office, Lists and Indexes, no 9 (London, 1898); J.H. Gleason, The Justices of the Peace in England: 1558 to 1640 (Oxford, 1969); and J. C. Sainty, 'Lieutenants of Counties, 1585-1642,' Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research, Special Supplement no 8 (May, 1970).

Normally each patron entry is divided into four sections. The first lists relevant personal data and titles of nobility with dates. Succession numbers are given only for the most important titles held by a person, as well as for those titles by which he or she is named in the records. These numbers follow the absolute sequence given in The Complete Peerage rather than the relative ones that begin afresh with each new creation. Knighthood dates are included only for minor gentry not possessing higher titles. The second section lists jobs showing local connections and includes those known to have been used within titles of playing companies. Purely expeditionary military titles have been largely omitted, along with most minor Scottish and Irish landed titles. For patrons holding peerage titles, minor civil commissions not given in The Complete Peerage and The Dictionary of National Biography have been omitted. Readers desiring further information on these patrons are advised to consult the Calendar of Patent Rolls and Letters and Papers of Henry VIII. Where possible, the date of an appointment is taken from the date of a document assigning that position. If the appointment is stated in the document to be 'for life,' then these words follow the job title. If the original document has not been edited and a secondary source is used that states 'until death,' then this form appears. Otherwise dates of appointment and termination are given, if available. If the length of time an office is held is not known, then only the date of appointment is given. Alternatively, if the only evidence comes from a source dated some time during the period of tenure, then the word 'by' plus date appears. If only the date of termination is known, 'until' is used. Finally, if no dates at all are available, 'nd' follows the title of the job. A '?' following a date indicates uncertainty regarding the dating of a document in the sources or differentiation in the case of several patrons by the same name who might have held the post. For all minor commissions such as commissions of jail delivery, commissions post mortem, and commissions of the peace (JP), years only are given. If the dates of these commissions cover several years in sequence, then the earliest and latest years of the sequence are separated by a dash. The third section, for which information is often incomplete or unavailable, contains the names and locations of the patron's principal seats, and locations of other properties he or she is known to have held. Extensive property lists have been condensed. Place names for which no standard modern spelling is available are enclosed in single quotes to indicate spelling from the original source. The fourth section is an annotated index by date of the appearances of each patron's company or companies in the records. Following the date are the page numbers in parentheses where the citations occur. If a patron's company appears under a title other than the usual or principal one, this other title is in parentheses next to the designation of the company. Companies named according to a patron's civil appointment are indexed under the name of that post as it appears in the records: for example, 'Lord Admiral' and 'Chancellor.' Companies belonging to ecclesiastical officials beginning with 'Lord' in the records are listed under the ecclesiastical title alone: for example, 'Canterbury,' 'Cardinal. 'All other companies appear under their patron's principal landed title.

The reader may also wish to refer to the index for additional references to some of the patrons and to various unnamed companies and their players. When it has been possible to identify a patron of an unnamed company, the reference has been included here; otherwise the only references to such are in the index.

Glossaries: Introduction

The purpose of the glossaries is to assist the reader in working through the records text; definitions are given only for those senses of a particular word which are used in the records printed in this volume. The criteria for the selection of glossary entries are discussed below, under the headings Latin Glossary and English Glossary. The glossaries include both words found in records printed in the main text and words found in records printed or quoted in the appendixes and endnotes.

As a rule, only one occurrence of each word, or each form of each word, will be listed; 'etc' or 'et al' following this occurrence means that there are more occurrences of that word or form. Where common sense indicates, as in the case of difficult words or those with multiple senses, more occurrences may be listed for the sake of clarity. Where the one occurrence listed is not the sole occurrence, it will be the first chronologically; multiple occurrences, however, will be listed in page order rather than chronological order. Within the references, page and line numbers are separated by an oblique stroke. If words occur within marginalia, this is indicated by a lower-case 'm' following the page and line reference. Manuscript capitalization has been ignored, except where proper names are glossed.

Latin Glossary

Words are included in the Latin Glossary if they are not to be found in the Oxford Latin Dictionary (OLD), now the standard reference work for classical Latin. Words listed in the OLD whose meaning has changed or become restricted in medieval or Renaissance usage are also glossed. If a word may be found in the OLD, but appears in the records text in an obscure spelling or an unusual or anomalous inflectional form for which the dictionary provides no cross-reference, that word has been included and its standard lexical entry form indicated, without giving a definition. There are exceptions to this rule, where the spelling variations or anomalous inflectional forms have been treated as scribal errors and more correct forms given in textual notes. Forms thus noted are not repeated in the glossary.

Most of the Latin words used in the records are common classical words whose spelling has changed according to common medieval variations. The results of these common variations are not treated here as new words, nor are forms of glossed words resulting from such variations cross-referenced. These variations are:

ML c for CL t before i
ML cc for CL t in a final position
ML e for CL ae or oe
ML ff for CL f, common in an initial position
ML addition of h
ML omission of CL h
ML variation between i and e before another vowel
ML n for CL m before another nasal
Intrusion of ML p in the CL consonant cluster mn or ms
ML doubling of CL single consonants
ML singling of CL double consonants

No attempt has been made to 'correct' these spellings to classical norms; rather, scribal practice has been followed in such cases. Where the same word occurs in spellings which differ according to the list above, the most common spelling is treated as standard and used for the headword. However, we have conformed to the practice of the OLD as regards 'i/j' and 'u/v' variation: in this glossary, only the letter forms 'i' and 'u' are used.

All variant spellings requiring to be listed will be found under the headword and set apart in boldface type. In cases in which they would not immediately follow the headword alphabetically, they are also listed separately and cross-referenced to the main entry.

It is difficult to know in some cases whether certain words are being used in a CL sense, or in one of the modified senses acquired in Anglo-Latin usage during the Middle Ages. In these cases the range of possibilities has therefore been fully indicated under the appropriate lexical entry. This is in keeping with the new approach to the Latin glossary begun in Cumberland, Westmorland, Gloucestershire, in which unclear, technical, or archaic terms have been given stock translation equivalents but then receive a fuller treatment in the glossary. This can be seen especially in legal terms and those relating to performers, entertainers, and their activities.

Multiple occurrences of each sense may be listed for words defined in more than one sense; in fact, several occurrences of a given sense may be listed if it is difficult to distinguish the senses in context. All headwords are given in a standard dictionary form: ie, nouns are listed by nominative, genitive, and gender; adjectives by the terminations of the nominative singular, or in the case of adjectives of one termination, by the nominative and genitive; verbs by their principal parts. The abbreviation qv is used to refer the reader to the definition of the word in the OLD; for internal cross-references, the expression see has been used. The expression 'etc' after an occurrence indicates the existence of further occurrences of that word in other documents. A single occurrence followed by 'et al' indicates that, although there are other occurrences of that word or sense, its use is restricted to a single document.

English Glossary

The English glossary lists, for the most part, words which have not survived in modern English and words which, in the records, bear meanings which do not survive in modern use. All variant spellings of such words are listed. Forms of words interesting from a purely morphological or phonological point of view have not generally been included in the glossary, but unusual spellings of words which might not be easily identified (eg, 'haynderaunce' for 'hindrance') are listed. Words that look unusual because of the absence of an abbreviation mark (eg, 'pd' for 'paid') have not been glossed. It is assumed that the reader is familiar with such common spelling alternations as 'au/a,' 'c/s,' 'i/e,' 'i/y,' 'o/oo,' 's/z,' 'u/v,' and 'y/p (eg, 'ye' for 'be'). Combinations such as 'therle' (for 'the earl') have been listed only if one of their elements is a word that requires glossing or if they seem particularly obscure. When variant spellings of the same glossed word occur, the commonest spelling has normally been chosen as headword. Spellings separated from their main entries by more than two intervening entries have been cross-referenced.

Anglo-Norman Glossary

There is no Anglo-Norman glossary, because the Anglo-Norman text is so short. The one word in it which requires glossing has been glossed at the foot of the page in the records text.

administer, -tri n m assistant, servant, attendant 90/21, et al administrallus, -i n m 1. servant of a noble household or a town; 2. minstrel, entertainer (found in the service of both noble households and towns). This word has not been recorded outside the town accounts of Exeter, where it occurs between the years 1410–11 and 1473–4. It is the diminutive of administer, the compound form of 'ad' and 'minister,' just as ministrallus is the diminutive of 'minister' itself. The usage of administrallus seems to become progressively more restricted during the fifteenth century. The fact that in 1411–12 it was already being used to refer to the town waits shows that it could be from the beginning a synonym for ministrallus. By the 1460's, when it is beginning to go out of use, it is used only to refer to the waits. But at what point the original, etymological sense of 'servant' was completely lost cannot be determined from the little context these accounts provide. During the period of its widest use, the 1410's through the 1440's, it is often impossible to say which sense is being used. 81/18, etc; adminstrallus 87/10, etc; aministrallus 84/9

adtunc adv at that time, then 83/3

aula, -e n f hall, centre of activity in a household 14/19; gild aula guild hall, centre of town government 111/40 balatio, -onis n f dancing. This noun, and the verb from which it derives, 'ballare,' are post-classical, and indeed patristic in origin. They were used to describe a sort of dancing introduced from pagan ceremonies or folk customs (as it was believed) into Christian observance of saints' days and weddings. Long after classical pagan practices were forgotten, the need to prohibit dancing on sacred occasions and in sacred precincts continued to be felt, and these words continued to be used, especially by canonists. 3/10

histrio, -onis n m entertainer; in CL, actor of the better sort, in later Latin, eg, patristic Latin, one who performed in the often obscene farces and ritual drama of the later Empire. The latter is clearly the sense in which the word was originally intended in the quotations from Augustine in Bartholomew of Exeter (3/19, 4/1), but one cannot be sure how much of that sense was understood by Bartholomew himself or by his readers. It is certainly very likely that some knowledge of the late Classical milieu and/or of patristic usage influenced the use of the word by highly educated ecclesiastics in their formal prose, eg, Bishop Quinel in the Exeter synodal statutes of 1287 (5/13, 6/5). However, the usual sense in ML usage in England is as a generic term, synonymous with ministrallus and mimus, which often refers to a musician. A histrio may be in the employ of a town, and in the Exeter records, it is sometimes the noun used to refer to the town waits, 95/22m, etc. Histriones are also found in the employ of noble or other individual patrons, 92/17, etc; hustrio (always used in reference to waits) 92/27, etc; iustrio 89/30; ystrio 279/2

Index

The index combines subjects with names and places in a single listing for ease of reference. When identical headwords occur in more than one category, the order is people, places, subjects, and titles of books or plays; thus 'Bath, earls of' precedes 'Bath, Somers', and 'Robin Hood (play character)' precedes 'Robin Hood plays'.

Place names, titles of nobility, and given names appear in the modern form where that could be ascertained. Surnames are normally cited in the commonest form occurring in the text, but in the index capitalization and the use of i/j and u/v are assimilated to modern practice. Both place names and surnames are followed by variant spellings in parentheses. Saints' names are indexed under 'St', alphabetized as if spelt out. The chief sources used for identifying persons were The Dictionary of National Biography and F. Maurice Powicke and E.B. Fryde (eds), Handbook of British Chronology, 2nd ed (London, 1961). Sources for the identification of patrons, sovereigns, and other magnates are specified in the headnote to 'Patrons and Travelling Companies', to which the index refers throughout.

The format for names and titles has largely been taken from R.F. Hunnisett, Indexing for Editors (Leicester, 1972). Hence members of noble families have been distinguished by their family relationships when those are known, rather than by succession numbers. Occupations are specified only when considered relevant (eg, 'Perry, William, player').

Certain broad topics such as 'costumes' and 'musical instruments' are given to aid research. The pertinent members of these classes are then either listed as subentries or referred to by cross-references.
