

1966

INTERNATIONAL HEADLINES: As the war in Vietnam continues and protests expand, monthly draft calls rise to ten times the average for 1965. In China, Mao Tse-tung launches the Cultural Revolution, with officially-sanctioned violence by the Red Guards.

NATIONAL HEADLINES: A sniper atop the tower at the University of Texas kills 12 and wounds 31. For the second time in two years, there is violent rioting in the Watts section of Los Angeles. Increasing use of drugs, particularly LSD, becomes a national concern. The first artificial heart transplant in a human is a success.

FADS AND FASHION: Miniskirts are the fashion rage in both England and the U.S. Colorful mod clothes for men become fashionable.

SPORTS: Muhammad Ali reigns supreme as world heavyweight boxing champion; a year later, his reign will be interrupted when the government prosecutes him for refusing to be inducted into the armed forces. The Green Bay Packers edge the Dallas Cowboys in a classic NFL title game. The Baltimore Orioles defeat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series, and, after his greatest season, Dodger pitching ace Sandy Koufax retires due to arthritis. Bill Russell leads the Boston Celtics to their eighth consecutive NBA championship. Jack Nicklaus establishes himself as the world's greatest golfer by winning the Masters and the British Open.

MOVIES: Big at the box office are Hawaii, The Bible, Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?, and the year's most-honored movie, A Man For All Seasons (starring Paul Scofield). A Man And A Woman is one of the decade's most popular foreign films. Raquel Welch becomes Hollywood's hottest sex symbol of the decade.

TELEVISION: The most beloved of all cult television series, Star Trek, debuts this fall. Batman is the television phenomenon of the year, becoming an overnight trendsetter before quickly fading out. Another explosive new fad series is The Monkees. Also debuting is the influential Mission: Impossible. Most popular series include Bonanza, The Red Skelton Hour, The Andy Griffith Show, The Lucy Show, and The Jackie Gleason Show.

THEATER: Three musicals achieve enduring success — Man of La Mancha, Mame, and Sweet Charity.

BOOKS: The Valley Of The Dolls by Jacqueline Susann is the year's #1 best seller. Truman Capote's In Cold Blood is the most-acclaimed book.
