Hello Mr. DeCloet,

Please find this correspondence as a follow up to the last time we spoke. You should know that I have not yet heard back from Brent Jang. Mr. Jang was the first reporter in Canada that I spoke to in detail about the anomaly I reported.

Subject: Notice to Air Canada Shareholders

To Whom It May Concern,

This correspondence shall serve to inform the Shareholders of Air Canada that flight crews and ground crews are knowingly violating Aircraft Operating Manual requirements, Ramp OPS Manual requirements and Standard Operating Procedure requirements on both departures and arrivals. I have shared significant evidence to support this claim with several parties both within Canada and abroad.

Please also be informed that personnel at several media outlets have contacted me and very recently a copy of my Air Safety Report filed with Air Canada and ACPA on December 10, 2003 was requested. I complied with this request and that report is now in the hands of the media outlet who made the specific request. The Air Safety Report is titled "Deplaning passengers with an engine operating"

Hi Kevin,

I have been tied up with following Air Canada labour talks recently, but please keep me posted on your file.

Regards,
Brent

Hello Brent,

Thank you for requesting an update on my file. I also want to thank yourself and the Globe and Mail for allowing me the liberty to post comments on several articles relating to my experiences with Air Canada and ACPA.

There have been many developments with my case since we last spoke. I remain very receptive to corresponding with you and allowing yourself and the Globe and Mail to examine and scrutinize the contents of my entire file. That being said I must emphasize that due to the time period involved there have been a number of sensitive developments that are enclosed and recorded within this file. Although extensive the pages are all numbered and there is a Table of Contents reference document.

Please let me know how you would like to proceed.

Be well,
Kevin
