

White Nationalist and Far-Right Search Traffic in Ireland

Between September 2020 and February 2021 Moonshot tracked white nationalist and far-right extremist search traffic in Ireland. This analysis tracked searches for propaganda, extremist music, attempts to join or contact extremist groups and common extremist conspiracy theories.

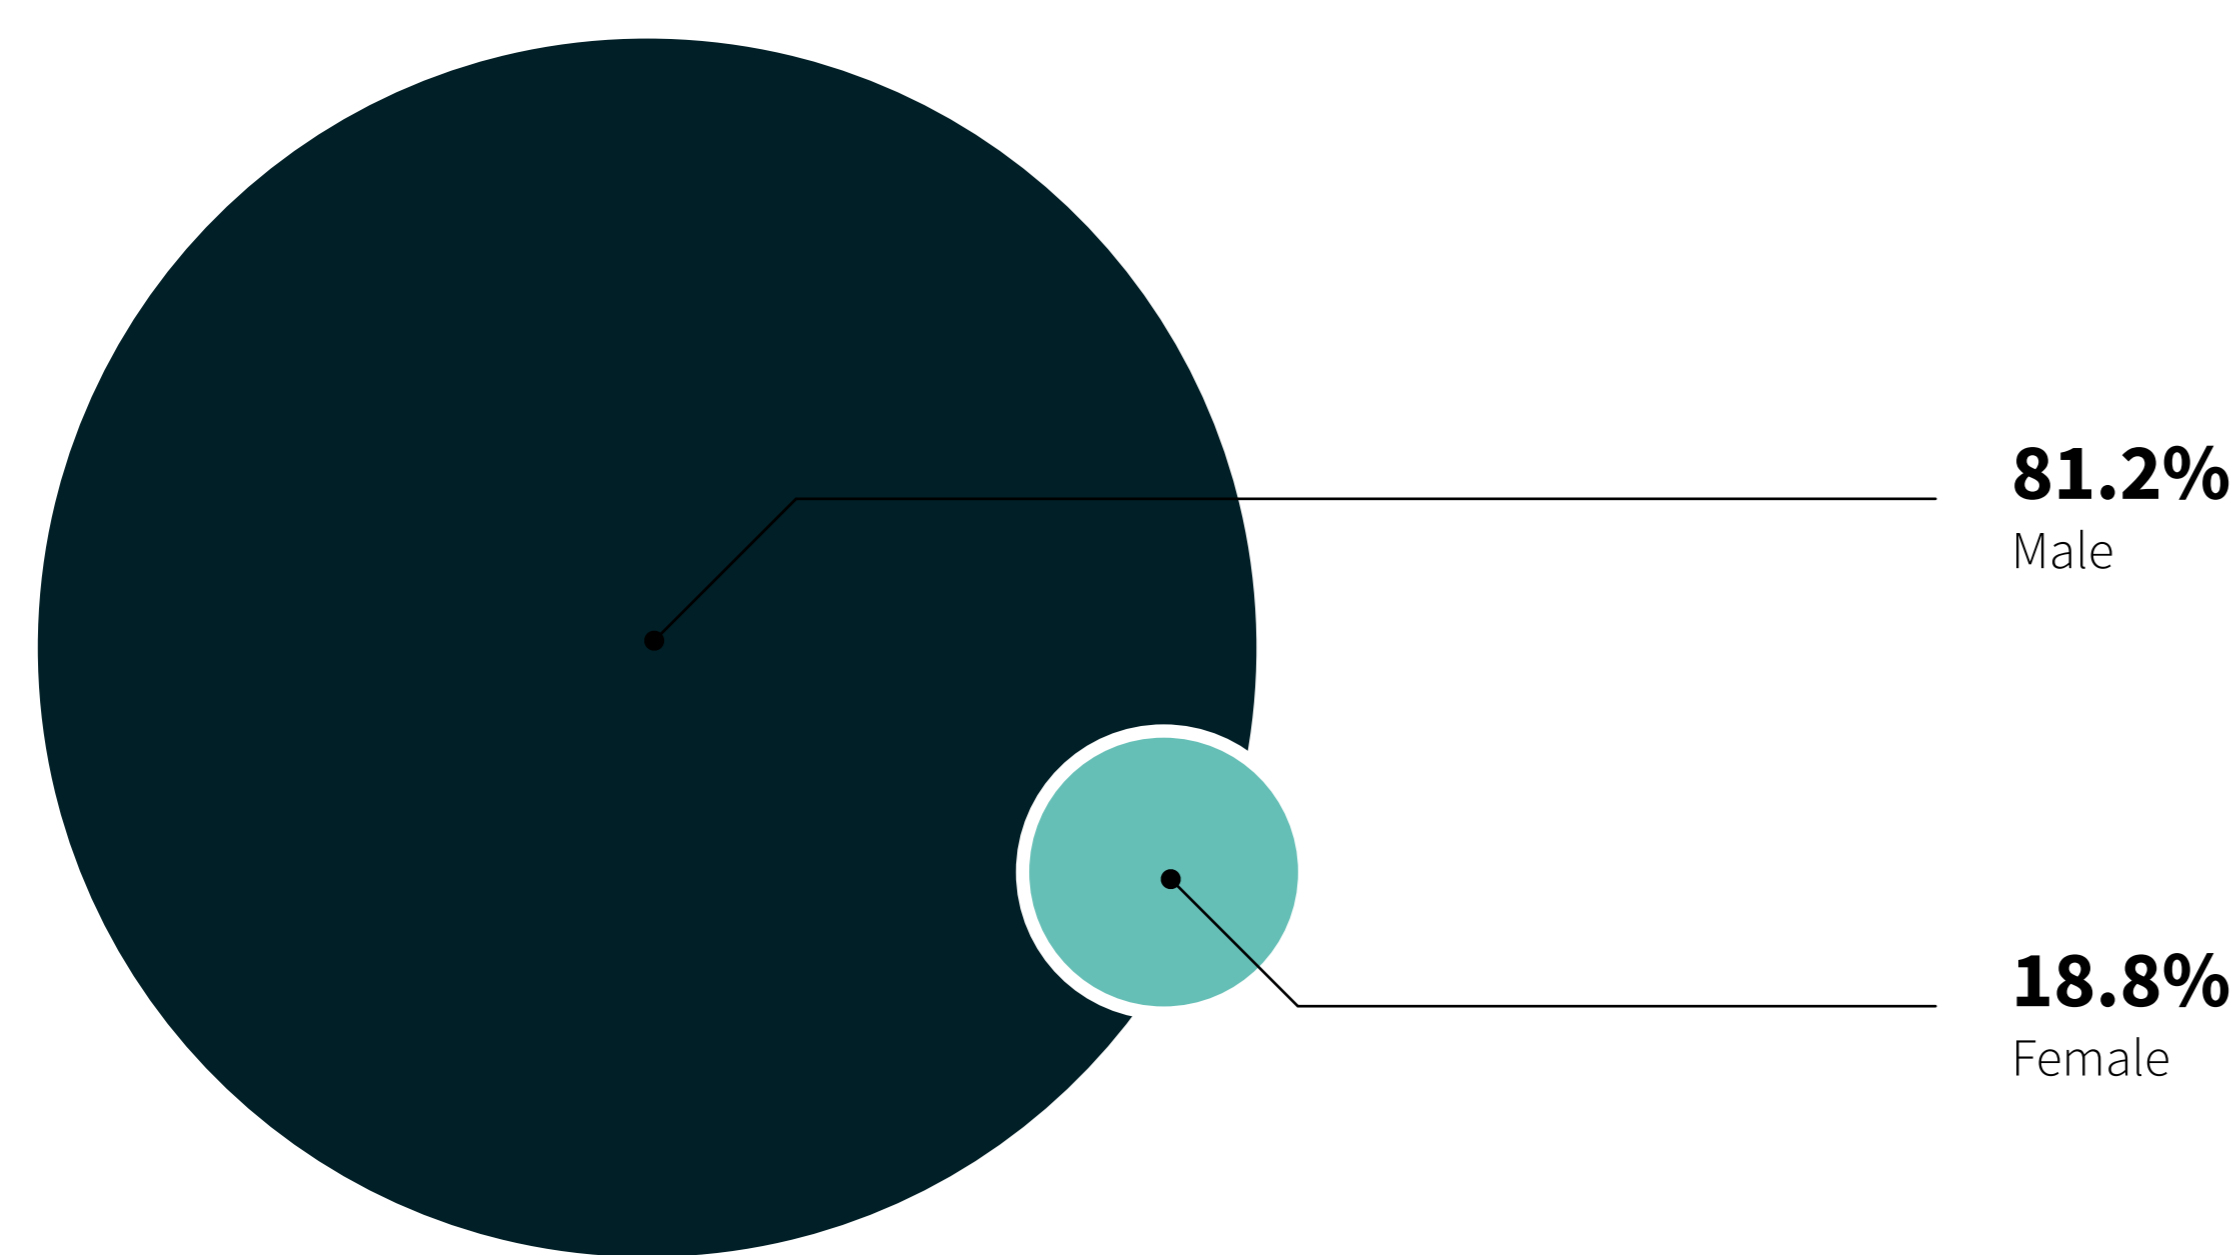

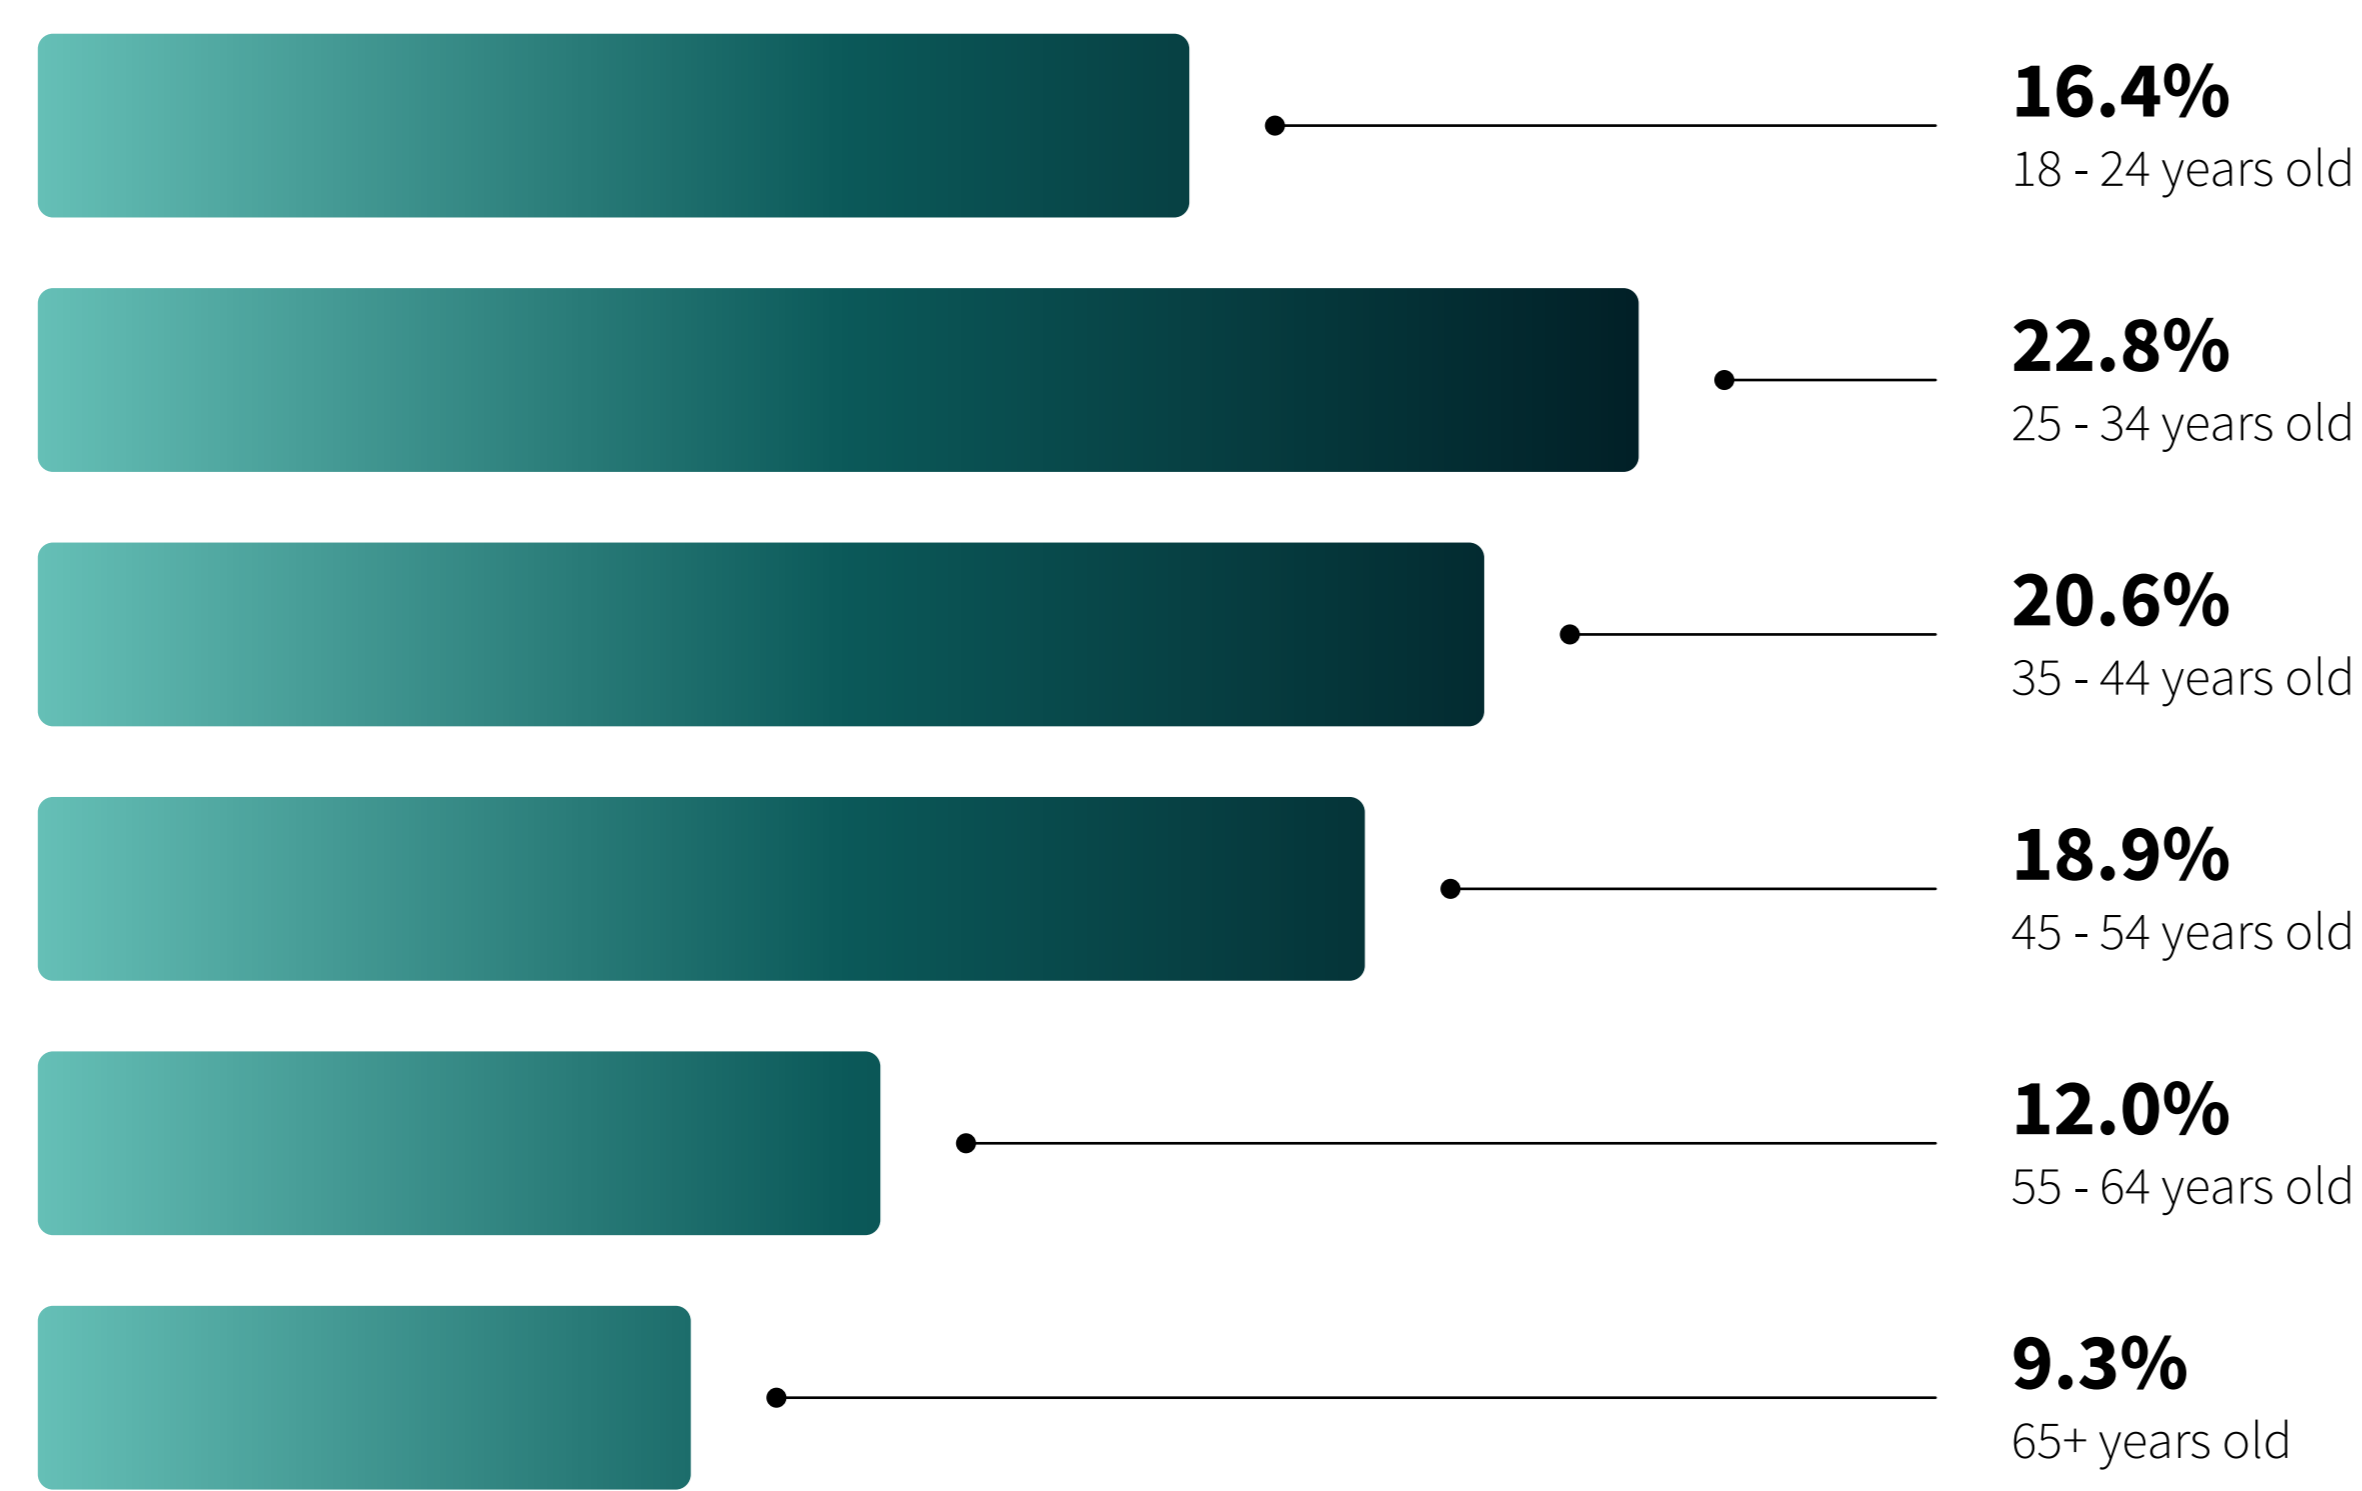

Although smaller in number than their US or UK counterparts, the Irish far-right extremist audience is actively searching for highly niche extremist material. This could indicate that Ireland has a small but dedicated far-right scene.

Even when weighted by population, Dublin was the county with the highest number of searches, followed by Carlow and Longford.

Who is searching?

Age could not be determined for 64.3% of all searches; gender could not be determined for 63.7% of all searches.

Where are they searching from?

Number of searches by day

