Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1872, by HARRIET MALLARD, In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

BIBLE EVERGREENS.

I Sabiour which is Christ the Lord.

A Saviour which is Christ the Lord! Seraphic notes proclaim the word, Angels of light His godhead own, And from the high eternal Throne Announce the long-expected One— The great Jehovah's mighty Son, A glorious Prince, to be adored— A Saviour which is Christ the Lord.

The Son of God, to sinners given; Glory to Him in highest Heaven; New joys immortal now have birth, Good will to men and peace on earth, This natal day of holy things; We've tidings born on heavenly wings— Let every soul the song record A Saviour which is Christ the Lord.

It dawned for bliss this welcome day; He comes! the life, the truth, the way, The great efficient sacrifice, The one that love divine supplies, To ransom from the power of sin, A crown unfading he shall win For all that choose his ways, his words; This Saviour, He is Christ the Lord.

BIBLE EVERGREENS

Let there be Light.

"The spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light."

A thwart the broad chaotic night A voice is heard : let there be light ; And darkness, with relinquished rein, To lucid beauty yields the plain.

Let there be light; an orb of fire— A globe of glory—bids retire The shades that wrapped this earthly ball Around, as by some ebon pall.

Let there be light; creation's bloom Smiles out from void and sightless gloom. Let there be light; the lovely queen Of eve her placid face is seen.

Let there be light; of spirit power, 'T has come at God's appointed hour. Let there be light; a star appears— 'Tis Bethlehem's Star—the hope of years.

Now on the long bewildered sight It sheddeth rays, redeeming—bright; It luminates the path—the way That leadeth to eternal day.

The Unrejected Offering.

"And the Lord had respect unto Abel, and to his offering."

Mercy, with heaving bosom, stood There by that altar, bathed in blood, Where first the "righteous Abel" lies— The typifying sacrifice.

The mystic flood, the crimson stream, It shadows forth that darling theme Which filled her gentle beaming eye; There, the Immortal Fountain nigh.

When love divine a "ransom found," By which the sinner, lost and bound, Should be redeemed, and saved, and shriven, And find Eternal Life in Heaven.

There list'ning, while on hallowed air, Faith pours the early trustful prayer, She sees the savoury incense rise, Accepted far above the skies.

We read it in symbolic lines Of what that Counsel High designs, Of the triumphant glorious reign Of One from "The Foundation slain."

A Precious Promise.

"I will not leave you comfortless."

I will not leave you comfortless ! Oh, precious heavenly word.I will not leave you comfortless, Thus saith our gracious Lord.

'Twas on the last sad evening In which he was betrayed, To the beloved disciples— Some doubting—all afraid :

"Let not your heart be troubled," For you I will prepare,

And yet know the way that leadeth [•] To the heavenly mansions fair.

"I will not leave you comfortless;" Ask, ever in my name; I am the Mediator,

I will present your claim,

To my Father ever merciful,

He ne'er will thee deny ; Ask in the name of Jesus And mercy shall be nigh.

I will not leave you joyless— I'll send him to abide— The Holy Ghost, the Comforter, With richest gifts supplied.

Now, if you love the Father, And Jesus Christ the Son, -And God the Holy Spirit, Thy heaven is now begun.

Keep faithful my commandment; Keep, ever keep my word, Then he that dwelleth with you Shall be your guide and guard.

Keep this, my new commandment, And love each other too, Then, the all-sufficient Comforter Shall always be with you.

The Resurrection and the Life.

"Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

> Jesus wept— Though strong to save, Then called the sleeper From the grave; With godlike voice, Divine and loud, He claimed of death The youthful prey;

His mighty bars He bursts away, Lo ! Lazarus wrapt In burial shroud.

The scoffer, now With dread surprise; Sees at His call the dead arise And leave the dark abode; And many there The word believed, And Christ, the Nazarene received, And owned the Son of God!

Mith Christ is Paradise.

"And he said unto Jesus, Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

The conflict now with justice, stern, And death, its close is near; The malefactor's fainting heart— 'Tis perishing in fear: The heavens above his guilty head Frown everlasting night, While memory's page of sin—of crime— Is black before his sight. And earth with callous, tearless eye, Upon the sword, hath smiled, That mortal hand thus holds severe To pierce her fallen child.

Sacred compassion standeth near, And claimeth to preside. That for the sufferer's penitence. A space she may provide. Love, everlasting love divine, 'Twas thine alone-the power-Contrition timely to bestow At the expiring hour. Grace, sovereign, saving, heavenly grace. Was pleased then to attest Its own supreme efficiency To make the vilest blest. The hopeless, dying one his need 'Tis given him deep to feel, And faith to cry-to look to Him Who can his pardon seal. Jesus, the mighty Son of God, Responsive to his prayer, He saith, To-day in Paradise, Thou shalt be with me there.

The Many Mansions.

"In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you."

Saviour, yes, thou wouldst have told us If thy Father's house had place Not for us—the earth-worn, weary, Saved by thy triumphant grace.

Faith descrieth now the mansions Where thy ransomed soon shall rest—
Bowers of holy light and beauty Which thy loving hand hath dressed—
Everlasting habitations Ready waiting there to greet
All that in the heavenly kingdom Ask through Christ, a share—a seat.
Glorified, divine Redeemer, Hope hath triumphed o'er the gloom
Once that tried our fainting spirit, Resting on the grave—the tomb.
Son of God ! that upper temple, Luminated now by Thee—
We believe its bliss eternal

Thou hast willed that we shall see.

Free Indeed.

"If the Son shall make you free, then shall you be free indeed."

Son of God, the price to free— Faith beholds it—paid by thee; What eternal wisdom willed, Jesus, thou hast now fulfilled.

Thou from the foundation slain, Thou in Zion chosen, lain— Heaven's appointed corner stone, Here as our Emanuel known. Thou hast made us free, indeed; Thou dost with the Father plead— All-sufficient sacrifice— Slain with thee, with thee we rise.

Wake we from the sleep of sin Strong in thee, the crown to win Of life—and by thy saving power Find we now Thy name a tower.

God is Lobe.

God, the mighty, great, and wise, Omnipresent Lord of power, Reigning, ruling earth and skies-Life sustaining every hour, Giver of creation's breath, Center of the world above, He that holds the keys of death Is the God of deathless love. Holy justice, stern, severe, Claiming every title still; When He came the sad to cheer-Great Redeemer, to fulfill All the pleasure of the Lord, Price he offered that may prove That which claimed the long award-That may witness "God is Love."

God of mercy, truth, and peace, Come and sanctify this heart; Bid these gloomy fears to cease— Give assurance of a part
With the blessed Prince of Life; Come, thou ever-kindly dove;
Thou canst end all doubt and strife— Thou canst witness "God is Love."
King of Kings, before whose throne Heavenly hosts their crowns they cast;
He who is the Lord alone— Great, Eternal, First and Last;
Holy Judge of quick and dead, At whose voice the pillars move
Of the universe He spread, Calls His name the "God of Love."

Salvation of the Lord.

"Salvation belongeth unto the Lord."

Poor doubting, fearing, trembling soul, Benighted where the blast

Is threatening loud thy shivering bark, Come, and thy anchor cast,

Where waves of wrath—of death and sin Obey the mighty voice

When moored within this haven fair All clouds shall disappear;

"The Christ," the Sun of Righteousness, Thy fainting soul will cheer;

The tempest-toss'd on sorrow's sea Shall find, for every ill, An all-sufficient, perfect cure, When bending to His will.

Before the highest throne of heaven They chant this blissful song;
The saved by grace, the justified, The happy, ransomed throng—
To Christ the Lord, our righteousness, Belongs eternal praise;
He only hath salvation, This ancient one of days.

Our Advocate.

"We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, who ever liveth to make intercession for us."

> Sorrowing one, dismiss thy fear, Let the Word thy spirit cheer; Jesus, Advocate, in love Pleads thy cause in courts above; Christ, the Mediator, there Counts thy tears—he hears thy prayer; Great High Priest, within the vail Offering that which shall prevail, And acceptance find for thee, And secure thy pardon free; Holy incense, all divine, Richer far than rubic mine

Sacred drops—with sovereign power They demand a plenteous shower— Shower of all-sufficient grace Sprinkling for the fallen race.

All that turn and look shall live, Life and hope are his to give; An Advocate at God's right hand Doth thy pardon full demand; He the hopeless debt for thee Paid—and now he saith, be free— Free to share my pardoning love And the mansions built above; Now, behold the open door; Enter ye, and fear no more.

Be Loved them to the end.

"Having loved his own that were in the world, he loved them to the end."

Jesus, the holy Son of God, The hopeless sinner's friend, While dwelling with humanity He loved—loved to the end.

When that dark hour was nearing When crimson drops should stainThe sod of sad Gethsemane, That witnessed to his pain,His more than mortal agony When He the cup received

And drank, that so the captive

Of death should be reprieved; While envy, wrath and mockery Their voices loudly blend, He loved His own-this Saviour-He loved them to the end. Come, now, ye sorrowing, doubting. And at his cross low bend ; He'll succour, save and pardon, And love thee to the end. Have shafts of cruel hatred Thy spirit grieved and riven-No ear of human sympathy To thee been lent or given ? Then to this Mediator Thy deepest woes reveal-Thy care, thy grief, infirmity, He liveth now to feel. The clouds that frown and threaten He will in mercy rend; Come, prayerfully, and trust him That loveth to the end. The Beauty of Holiness. "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." Worship the Lord With holy contrition; Bow low at his feet

In perfect submission;

10	PIPPE FARMATERIS
	Come, bring to his altar
	The pure sacrifice—
	The heart that is humble
	He freely supplies.
	With graces and beauties,
	And heavenly delight
	That ravish the soul
	And the spirit invite
	Away to the mansions,
	The blissful abode
	Prepared for the people—
	The children of God.
	O! worship the Lord
	In beauty, in truth—
	The strength of the aged,
	The guide of the youth;
	The ever-blest Father
	And Son glorify,
	And the Holy Spirit
	That bringeth so nigh.
	The perfect salvation,
	A cure for our fear-
	The word that enlightens
	Our darkness so drear;
	The glorious Trinity
	Worship and adore
	In the beauty of holiness
	Now and evermore.

My Strength and My Redeemer.

"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

> Now from every earthly refuge, Saviour, I would turn to Thee; Thou my strength and my Redeemer, Deign my darkened soul to free-Break the voke of heavy bondage-Unbelief-and bid retire All but min'string spirits holy, Angels, such as shall inspire Heaven accepted meditations; Let my words but speak thy praise, And let thy indwelling spirit Give me songs of love to raise: Indite for me my petitions When before thy throne I come; Guide me ever by thy presence, Bring me gently, safely home.

Wait on the Lord.

"Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart."

Christian, from thy fear and trembling, Rise, and to that altar fly, Where the heart, when brought an offering, "Saving health" it findeth nigh; Grace divine, and all-sufficient, There shall bid thy soul be strong When, at Mercy's footstool waiting, Hope and joy shall be thy song;
Wait, and thou shalt find thy helmet, That which shall not fade or fail,
And entire thy mail—thy armor— That which shall thy need avail.

Heabenly Care.

"The needy shall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor shall not perish forever."

> All thy hopes they shall not perish, Child of poverty and care, Heaven thy fainting heart will cherish, Let thy trust be centred there.

Ever mindful of the sparrow; Sooner such will God forget, Than his poor, when want and sorrow May their pilgrim path beset.

Now thy unbelief dismissing, Bid the morrow's empty board Wait, nor ask to-day the service Which the dawn may see restored.

Expectations—fondest, dearest— Are they at the point to die? Clouds surcharged that now thou fearest Mercy bid, may pass thee by.

Compassed by Heabenly Fabor.

"For thou, Lord, will bless the righteous; with favor wilt thou compass him as with a shield."

> With the heavenly favor shielded, Servants of the Lord of life, Though the storms of danger thicken, Pass they safe the bounds of strife.

Mercy there the portal keepeth, Where the righteous seeketh rest, Pity there, she never sleepeth When the justful are oppressed.

Love's own fount that faileth never, Springing holy ever free, Shall their need supply forever, Here and through eternity.

, I will cry unto God.

"I will cry unto God most high, unto God that performeth all things for me."

Let me find a timely refuge,

Lord of love, beneath the shade, Shelt'ring wings that shall not weary When the tempest doth pervade.

Even now, the storm it rageth, Winds most pitiless they blow, Earth refuseth her defences, Grief my spirit bendeth low. Hope that strove and o'er the sadness Held a flickering lamp of light, Fainted while we saw it smothered, Not to glad again the sight.

Let me fly, O God, to hide me Where the strife shall pass me by, At thy word there shall be stillness, Let me, Abba Father, cry.

Send thou, mighty One from heaven, Mercy; envoys too, of power;Let thy truth be found an helmet For thy saved, this needful hour.

The Children's Blessing.

"Suffer little children to come unto me."

Oh favored children thus caress'd, In Jesus' arms received and bless'd; The heirs of heaven accepted made, His sacred hand in love was laid In tenderest mercy on your head, With dews of grace divinely shed.

Forbid them not to come to Me, They are my lambs, and they shall see The pastures of my glorious rest. Come, little children, come be blest, For them I have a high abode— The heavenly kingdom of my God.

Of such the throng now shelter'd there, I make the little ones my care; O bring them on the arms of faith, In love the Holy Saviour saith, I will transplant them 'bove the skies, To bloom for aye in Paradise.

The darling flowers—the plants of earth— Shall know a new immortal birth ; The fairest here, they bloom to die, But life—new Life—I will supply. O, bring the children to the Lord, He will fulfill his gracious word.

Glad Rews.

"Zion heard, and was glad."

Glad news, glad news for Zion ! Is floating on the breeze, For many a heathen nation The heavenly light now sees.

The isles that deck the ocean, The gospel banner hail; They cheer with true devotion, And welcome every sail

That wafts the story-thrilling Of our redeeming God, And blessed feet most willing To press the mountain's sod,

That come with spirits burning To publish pard'ning peace, And ardent bosoms yearning To bid their idols cease.

Lo! on the distant hill-tops, Where mystic altars blaze, A new and crystal fountain Its healing power displays.

Rejoice, rejoice, Oh Zion now! See Mercy's chariot rolls; O! help and early pay the vow,

Its resting place the poles.

The Day Star.

Light, celestial orbs eclipsing, Day-star, in our hearts arise; Spirit of the true adoption, Come and bear us to the skies.

On the wings of faith transport us And permit a heavenly view Of the Tree of Life there blooming, Ever verdant, ever new.

Glad we hail the blessed tidings Of this glorious Eastern Star; Star of hope, of life eternal, Radient still in lands afar. Blessed star, thou still art guiding Ever with thy quenchless light; From the gloomy vales of darkness Thou dispellest death and night.

Where the reign of sin and terror Held an undisputed sway, There the brightness of thy rising Rends the thickest films away.

Now the dawn of life immortal Greets the waiting heathen eye; God the Father, Son, and Spirit, Brings the full salvation nigh.

Distrust not the Lord.

"Why are ye so fearful?"

Why are ye so fearful? Sad victim of care;
The Lord, the great shepherd, His pastures are fair;
Besprinkled with manna, A daily supply—
Oh, why are ye fearful? His mercy is nigh.

Though filled with the tempest, Be drenched by the storm; He'll smooth the rough waters, His word will perform; He's reigning in glory, He sleepeth no more, He's bread for the hungry And care for the poor.

To heirs of salvation His tokens of love Are angels attendant Sent forth from above; Oh, trust in his mercy, Obeying his will; The storms that assail thee, He'll bid them "Be still."

The Lobe of Christ;

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ,"

Oh, triumph in redeeming love, Ye children, heirs of grace, You're called, and justified, and saved, In Heaven you have a place.

Ah, who is he that may condemn, 'Tis Christ that died for thee; All things are yours, and freely given,

The Kingdom you shall see;

Nay, more, the conqueror's crown, through him, Jesus, the Saviour, Lord, That fills the mediatorial throne Shall be your blest reward. Shall persecution's dread array,With all her boasted power,Combined with famine, want and pain—Dark tribulation's hour,

Or sin, or death, or aught presume, Of all these present things To drive the saved, the ransomed soul From His kind, shelt'ring wings.

Oh! love divine, through Him, the Christ, Thou'lt bring us safely home, Persuaded by the Spirit's breath We'll fear no things to come.

Our High Priest.

"Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you," Casting all your care upon Him, On the word of Jesus lean; Humbly trusting in his mercy, Soon his hand it shall be seen.

For His sympathizing bosom, "Great High Priest," is touched for thee; Though within the vail now entered, He thy grief and want will see.

Once he press'd an earthly pillow, Once he wore a thorny crown; And a storm of fierce temptations Sought to bend his spirit down.

Christ that knew of constant sorrows; Made acquainted oft with grief, Lives to feel for thy affliction; He will send thee sweet relief.

Cast thy care, believe and trust Him, Watch to know and do His will, You shall find that daily manna Lacketh not thy board to fill.

The Lord thy Shade.

"The Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand." The Lord that built the heavens. And earth's foundation laid, He is thy life, thy portion, Thy refuge, strength, and shade;

Thy helper and redeemer From sorrow, sin and wrong; Thy shepherd, friend and keeper, Oh, bring a grateful song.

Come ye before his presence With off'ring of his choice— The heart, the willing incense, Responsive to his voice.

The Lord, he will preserve thee, Will set thy spirit free From death and sin's dark bondage Christ hath atoned for thee. Come, now, by faith relying Upon his holy word; Leave all for this inheritance, The kingdom of your Lord.

He is a tower, a shadow, A rock, a resting place; He'll shed on thee abundantly His free, abounding grace.

The Serbants of Righteousness.

"Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness,"

Dost thou find the fetters broke; Bonds of sin their strong control; Welcome ye the Master's yoke ? Answer-hopeful, trusting soul; Dost thou find thy willing heart Leaping to obey the call Of righteousness, though bid to part With hidden idols, one and all? Then the Son hath made you free, And we hail thee free, indeed; You by grace the land shall see Where the ransomed flock shall feed, Led by Him, the Lamb, the Lord, Jesus, now the glorified, 'Tis by his unfailing word That with Him ye shall abide.

Redemptiou.

"The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants, and none of them that trust in him shall be desolate."

Servant of the living God, If thy spirit, weary, faints, Christ, the mighty to redeem, Shields the weakest of his saints.

Desolation's cheerless shade

Shall not cross thy pilgrim way; Clouds that gather thick and fast Shall not hide the heavenly ray

Of the Sun of Righteousness,

Beaming from the fount of light; Sorrow, with her mantle cold,

May not screen it from thy sight.

Love divine, it faileth not,

Though thy flesh, thy heart expire; Soon thy soul among the just Shall possess a raptured lyre; Clad in robe prepared of love, Shall have entered into rest, Where the loudest notes ecstatic Are by ransomed ones expressed.

The Fullness of Christ.

"For it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." Fullness of eternal wisdom, Fullness of abounding grace, Fullness of complete redemption, Fullness, too, of lasting peace.

Dwell in Him, the blessed image Of the great Invisible; Son of the eternal Father, Transcript of his holy will.

Fullness of life-giving power, Strength of heaven for all the weak, Armor for the holy warfare, For the helpless, faint and weak.

Weak in faith and "poor in spirit," Servants of this gracious Lord, Now the voice of saving mercy Calls you to the heavenly board;

Bids you to the feast of fullness, Ocean of that water pure, Love's unmeasured, free salvation, Sin's immortal, perfect cure.

Riches of the full assurance Of the hope of life and heaven; Anchor for the trembling vessel From his fullness, ready given.

Knowledge, truth, and love, and mercy, Gifts, a free, exhaustless store Dwell in Him, the Mediator, To dispense to all the poor.

Beaben-born Charity.

"Let all your things be done with charity."

Let this queen of Christian graces, Charity ; her hand supplied With her golden, sacred scepter, O'er thy walks, thy deeds, preside.

When the shiv'ring, sorrowing, knocketh— Hungry at thy gate—thy door, Let her spirit guide thee—teach thee Not to bid them call no more.

Let her, when thy brother's burden Presseth sore, of grief, of care, Then sustain thy heart, thy shoulder, Joyfully the weight to share.

Let her voice, of accent holy,

Unforbidden then be heard,

If to whelm the weak, the erring, Stern reproach may be preferred.

Charity, her mantle heavenly, Shall be found to pardon—hide Sins that else to pride were deadly, Christ, the robe he did provide.

The Lord is my Shepherd.

The great Omnipresent, Omnipotent One, That settled the mountains And fashioned the sun :

That spread out the heavens, And named all the stars, And set for the ocean Its bounds and its bars.

This Lord is my Shepherd, No want shall I know; A faithful, kind shepherd, All grace to bestow.

He is the Jehovah, Jehovah alone; I am, is the name By which he'll be known.

The Immortal Invisible, God only wise, In sacred compassion He doth not despise.

Though highly exalted Above all the praise That highest archangel Or seraphim raise; From the height of his glory, For to condescend,To say he's my Shepherd, My Father, my Friend.

Yes, he is a shepherd, A shepherd by choice, He said that his people Would all know his voice.

By name he would call them, And safely would lead; Come, follow this shepherd,— You never shall need.

Haste, haste to the Rock That was smitten for thee; The Rock of all Ages, The fountain is free.

Then come to the well-spring, And thirst not again; The shepherd will heal All thy sickness and pain.

Drink, drink of this water, And eat of this bread; 'Tis heavenly provision, The table is spread.

The draught, it is healing, Life giving, divine; This proffered salvation, Ye doubting, is thine.

Fly, then, to the refuge, Be sheltered, be led— The oil of Heaven's gladness Shall rest on thy head.

He leadeth in pastures Where evergreens grow, And the still and deep waters, They cease not to flow.

You there shall recline In the shade of the tree; The shepherd's kind bosom Thy pillow shall be.

The tree by the side Of the pure, crystal river That springs from the throne Of the almighty giver.

There's life in the fruit Which its full branches yield, And with its broad leaves Shall the nations be healed. The Lord, the Redeemer Will surely receive— He named the condition, 'Tis only "believe."

Clouds Dissolbing.

"Clouds and darkness are around about him, righteousness and judgment are the habitations of his throne." -

> Dark, dark indeed the shades that fill The way He bids me go; I look for light to do His will;

I ask His truth to know.

Thick clouds portentious gather near, And all but cast a vail Before the eye of faith, and fear, It would my trust assail.

Ah! unbelief, begone—I've found His word—'tis written fair, Though clouds and darkness, they surround, The Lord is reigning there.

Righteous and true he shall be known; His mercy shall appear; "The habitation of His throne"

Is holy judgment clear.

He will preserve my waiting soul; He is exalted high;

His power and love are told in song By saints above the sky.

What heavenly light divine is sown For all in heart made pure; I will rejoice in Thee alone, Thou blessed refuge sure.

Purity of the Mord.

"Thy word is very pure."

Thy word is very pure, Established ever sure, Forever to endure;

We glorify thy name. Thy word of truth, of power, It cheers the darkest hour, Though storms around may lower

Thy word is still the same.

Thy blessed word most holy, To all the meek and lowly A glorious treasure truly,

The gift, the book divine; The volume richly stored With words of Christ, the Lord, By humble hearts adored—

I call this treasure mine.

This word beyond compare Forever may I share, And may its truths prepare

My soul for that abode; Where righteousness and peace abound, Pleasures forevermore are found, And the redeemed the Lamb surround, And praise my Father, God.

Peace, be Still.

I'm tempest tossed, on troubled waters; Saviour, if it be Thy will, Touch these angry, raging billows, Say, in mercy, "Peace, be still."

None but Thee, O gracious Master ! Can the tide of ills control; Speak, and winds and waves shall own thee, And the surges backward roll.

Overwhelmed with grief and anguish, Sinketh fast this shiv'ring bark; Hopes, they only bloom to vanish;

Gath'ring clouds grow dark, more dark.

Let me see Thee near approaching,

With thy peace my spirit fill; Help, and sanctify, and save me; Bid these earthly cares "Be still."

Consider the Rabens.

Consider the ravens ; Remember the sparrow ; 'Twill strengthen thy faith,

And wisdom ye'll borrow: Go learn of the insect,

The meanest in dust, In God, thy kind Father To anchor thy trust!

The raven, the sparrow, And all he supplies; Every wing of light beauty That cleaveth the skies;

To them neither treasure

Or garner is given; Their share and their portion, They seek it of Heaven.

Then fear not, though Poverty's vale be thy lot. Of price above sparrows Thou'lt ne'er be forgot; The hand that creation So fully supplies, To children choice favors It never denies.

The Established Throne.

"The Lord's throne is in heaven."

God of my trust, I know thy throne Is high—in highest heaven, Where songs, triumphant songs are known By ransomed souls forgiven.

Thy throne of mercy, gracious Lord, Is builded on the ground; Established, like thy holy word Where life alone is found.

O Thou most holy, just, and wise, Permit my heart to share The worship of the upper skies, To hold communion there.

Give me, O Father heavenly, kind, This pledge of heavenly things;A will entire to thee resigned, Proof that thy spirit brings.

The earnest of indwelling grace, Thy presence and thy love; The smile of my Redeemer's face, And bear me safe above.

Give day by day renewing power, And sanctify for Thee; My soul entire for coming hour, That I that throne may see.

Joy in Sorrow.

"I will be glad, and rejoice in thee."

O thou most high and holy God, I will rejoice in thee, Though suff'ring now thy chast'ning rod, Thou'rt gracious still to me.

Thy truth and mercy shall endure Forever—evermore; All earthly ills thy love can cure— Oh! blest eternal store.

Yes, I will glory in the Lord, Will be exceeding glad; And joyful in thy heavenly word, Though sorrowing, sick, and sad.

The Lord will be a refuge sure For every child of care; Turn now from every earthly lure, And life and favor share.

Go you of every form of grief, Approach the Saviour's feet; Forsake your sinful unbelief, And mercy shall thee greet.

Ministering Spirits.

'Tis written in thy holy word, In living lines—I read it plain; That heirs of thy salvation, Lord, Angelic ministers obtain.

In mercy sent—in heavenly love, To hold their watch around our rest, And point us to the land above— How rich! of such a guide possessed.

And have I then a guardian sent ? Then will I yield no more to doubt;I know a hand unseen was lent To lead from threatening dangers out.

O thou my guardian angel fair ! Thy wing untiring grant to wave; Forsake me not, but safely bear, Away beyond the grave.

The Cobenant of Grace.

"He will ever be mindful of his covenant." His everlasting covenant

Of mercy, truth, and grace; Of peace, and life, and blessedness, With all the ransomed race— Shall never be forgotten, But present with the Lord, Who ever will be mindful Of his most holy word.

His promises of power, To all who ask his care; A never failing helper, And bread a daily share;

He never will forget thee—

Thy God the word hath spoke : His own eternal covenant,

It never can be broke.

Hope and Trust.

"For in thee, O Lord, do I hope." My hope, O Lord, is anchored, All sure, within the vail; I trust thy precious promises Though dangers thick assail.

The waves of fierce temptation Besiege my trembling soul; But, Lord, thou wilt control them— Wilt bid them backward roll.

I know, O blessed Jesus, Thou'lt suffer but the share That with thy grace sustaining I may triumphant bear.

O thou that knew temptation In all its varied power— I crave thy kind assistance In this portentous hour. O give me now the vict'ry, Be pleased to set me free; Thy name shall have the glory, Thou holy One in Three.

Quickening Grace.

"Quicken me after thy loving kindness," O God, I ask thy quick'ning grace, In its renewing power; Thy blessed promises I trace, But clouds around me lower; Come, Holy Spirit, shed thy light-My faith is weak—I need— I ask thy help; my prayer indite, Blest Saviour, intercede. My heart is dark, and hard, and cold, Beset by doubts and fear; Come, heavenly Dove, thy wing now fold Around my soul to cheer; Thy loving kindness never fails, But, oh! this unbelief My hope, my trust, my faith assails, Dear Saviour, send relief. According to thy holy word So loving, heavenly, kind; Come, sanctify my spirit, Lord, And help me now to find In thee the refuge of my soul, A shelter from the storm ; The waves of unbelief that roll, And fears of every form.

Waiting on the Lord.

'Though I walk in the midst of trouble, thou wilt revive me."

Though walking now where grief and tears My fearful steps surround; And where no earthly comfort cheers The hopeless, barren ground ; Where troubles, like an angry storm, Unbidden, round me rise, And thick'ning mists of fear transform My fainting hope-that dies ;-I know, O thou my heavenly friend-My Father-gracious, kind, Thou wilt in mercy deign to send Some angel hand to bind This spirit, that was doomed to break When sorrow's power was shed, Unsparing, for thy name's dear sake On this poor, aching head; Thy word shall bid each cloud remove-E'en now, through the disguise, I see a token of thy love That yields my soul supplies; Sweet mem'ries of thy faithful hand Come round me while I weep; Ranged as a true, unyielding band Of sentinels, to keep Their watch, there by the gloomy way Where impious unbelief

Would claim the sceptre, and display Her banner, dyed with grief; Thou wilt my languid faith inspire;

With joy my cup wilt fill; Revive and tune my saddened lyre Accordant with thy will.

Healing Mercy.

"He hath heard my voice, and my supplication," The Lord my prayer hath heard, Hath lent his gracious ear; In honor of his name, his word, I now record it here. 'Twas when o'erwhelmed with fear, And sinking near the grave, He came, the gracious Helper near, In pity came to save. My supplicating voice Sought not His ear in vain ; In life I now rejoice, Although to die were gain. To die in Him, who died-It were the dawn of day; He hath death's power defied, The vict'ry borne away. The tomb his servants share Is sacred, hallowed ground; All that his image bear By angels shall be found.

Be gather'd with that band— The ransomed that surround The throne in that blest land Where joy and peace abound.
Down by the swelling surge Of Jordan's darksome tide— Just on the trembling verge, My journey lay beside.
Long by the lonely stream That laves this barren shore, My watchful spirit caught a beam On seraph pinions bore;
A ray of that bless'd light That gilds the blissful plain; It did my soul invite Away from sin and pain.
It was my choice to stay, Though heavenly gain to go; My loved ones by the way, Still on my heart, I know
By heavenly hand were laid— They begg'd me tarry still; I sought His gracious aid— I ask'd to know his will.
It was his will to spare; I bless his healing hand; His goodness now I see, Here in this living land.

Mercy our Trust.

"I have trusted in thy mercy."

I have trusted in thy mercy, I have gloried in thy grace; Shall this trust be unavailing— Shall I seek in vain thy face.

Long, not long wilt thou forget me, Thou in mercy wilt appear To dispel these storms thick gath'ring, Thou the darkest skies canst clear.

I have trusted in thy mercy, Found thy name a sure defense; Ever present to defend me; Unbelief thou'lt banish hence!

I believe, and I will trust thee— Help, O help my unbelief; Known but unto thee, O Father, Each mysterious source of grief.

All-sufficient, gracious helper, Speak, and end the causeless strife; Present help in time of trouble— Thou the way, the truth, the life.

Early called to love and praise thee, And to find thy promise sure; I shall see thy hand revealed, Covenant mercy shall endure.

Rejoice Ebermore.

Rejoice, and evermore rejoice, If you have made the better choice; Glory in free grace, free grace, Heaven shall be your dwelling place.

Evermore rejoice in love, You "Our Father's" care shall prove; Joy, and bless the favor'd day That he turned thy feet away

From the paths of death and sin, Bade thee seek, and saw thee win Heaven's immortal, priceless gem, An everlasting diadem.

More pure than all of earthly mold, Than diamond's sheen, or finest gold, The "Hidden Pearl;" 'tis free to all That meekly for the treasure call.

Rejoice, the days are on the wing; Soon with sainted choirs you'll sing: In Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Joy and rejoice, and ever boast.

Seeking Jesus.

"I know ye seek Jesus."

Fear not, you're seeking Jesus, The Saviour crucified;I know you're seeking, sorrowing, The loving Lamb who died.

He lives again—he's risen ; Behold, they laid him here ! I know you're seeking Jesus— You may dismiss your fear.

Go, quick, and tell your brethren He's risen from the dead: Still seek and follow Jesus, The Christ—the living Head.

Behold the open sepulchre, Their watch the angels keep, And all who sleep in Jesus Will find it precious sleep.

Now death has lost the vict'ry, The grave has lost its gloom; Oh, seek and know the Victor, He'll bring thee from the tomb.

The Strength of Zion.

"I will rejoice in thy salvation."

Oh! thou mighty God of Jacob— Strength of Zion—if thy will, Hear us in our day of trouble, Our petitions now fulfill.

From thy sanctuary send us Thy refreshing, cheering grace; In the name of Christ, our offering, These our prayers to thee we raise.

We no other trust desire,

Than remembrance of thy power; From thy holy heaven assist us,

Let this be thy favor'd hour.

We'll rejoice in thy salvation, We will glory in thy word ; In thy name our banners raising, Shout thy praise, victorious Lord.

All-sufficient Grace.

"My grace is sufficient for thee."

Grace, all-sufficient, heavenly grace— And is this promise mine? Is it for all that seek thy face, Blest Jesus, thus to find

A never failing, gracious store ? A heavenly treasure filled! Blessings descending evermore, Profusely round distilled. Oh, highly favor'd, sacred hour. That fixed my happy choice; That witness'd thy redeeming power, In which I now rejoice; All glory to thy precious name, Thanks to thy pard'ning love, Thanks to the Holy Spirit's flame That came the word to prove. There's all-sufficient, mighty grace, For every time of need, In Christ, the safe abiding place-Oh heavenly, glorious meed! From storms of danger, death, and strife, Ye win the soul away; From scenes with gath'ring ills most rife, To hopes of perfect day. Divine Teaching.

"O God, thou hast taught me from my youth."

Father in heaven, thy gracious hand Hath led me all the way;

In childhood's hour-in youth's frail morn, Thou wast my hope, my stay.

Taught by thy word, thy spirit's voice, I learned thy name to fear ; To trust thy blessed promises, And found a helper near. When by thy faithful, chast'ning rod, My heart was well subdued, Thy reconciling love alone Hath all my soul renewed. When clouds were gath'ring thick, to pour The storm to overwhelm The trembling bark—a whisper spake, "Thy pilot's at the helm !" Fear not, he walks upon the wave: He'll bid its fury cease ; He came-allayed the threat'ning surge; Commanded-there was peace. Quench not the Spirit. "Quench not the spirit." Oh! quench not the spirit, The spirit to thee. Like the dove, ever gentle, To light or to flee— Is seeking to win thee, Permit the kind guest, Now welcome his visits-Allow him to rest.

Most fondly he's hovering, Oh, bid him good cheer; He'll guide thee, and guard thee, Protect thee from fear.

His visits are heavenly, He comes to explain The word of the Father, And Son that was slain.

If fearful, if faithless, In danger to stray, With kindness he'll lead thee, And point thee the way.

And level the mountains, Or storms that arise; And fill all thy soul With grateful surprise.

Quench, quench not the spirit, O may he abide— This heavenly, blest comforter, Jesus supplied.

He said he would send him, And he should reveal, And on the Atonement Would set his own seal.

His earnest, mysterious, The seal of the Lord, The faithful, true witness, Confirms the record—

Of God, ever faithful, Who finished—begun— The perfect redemption Wrought through the blest Son.

The Charge of Angels.

"For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways."

What, oh, what, shall ever harm You that trust the heavenly arm ? Dwelling in "the secret place," Presence of the God of grace.

What can harm thee—bid thee fear? Ever sheltered—ever near. Shadowed by the lasting rock, Which defends—protects the flock.

He will guard thy life, thy breath ; Shield thee from the shafts of death, When in terror's dark array ; Dread destruction walks by day.

When the deadly damps, they fall, Gath'ring round the fatal pall; When dire pestilence, her hand Raises, with remorseless wand,

God will there defend thy head, And a covert for thee spread; "Give his angels charge to keep" All thy walks by day—thy sleep.

Jesus made thy soul his care; He hath broke the "fowler's snare;" "He hath set his love on thee," Thou shalt his salvation see.

The Path of Life.

"Thou wilt show me the path of life."

My God, my all-sufficient guide, On thee my soul is staid; I ask no other arm beside, Naught but thy hand for shade.

Thou art the shadow of the Rock Here in this weary land; The tender shepherd of that flock That bless thy faithful hand.

I know thou'lt lead, wilt guide secure, Wilt show the holy way— The path of life, so bright and pure, That leads to perfect day.

The heavenly way, O make it plain Before my wavering sight; And let not all my hopes be vain, But deign my name to write—

With all the truly sanctified Who walk with God below, In that blest book thou didst provide For them—thy love who know.

Though here beset with fears, with sin, A dang'rous, thorny road, Through Thee I shall the vict'ry win, Oh Christ, my Saviour, God.

Anwabering Trust.

"Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show you to-day."

> Distrust, in pall of anguish, Has wrapped the Hebrew host, They meet the deep, deep waters, They've reached the verge—the coast. The oppressor now is hasting— His chariots are near,

And hope no more the sadness Presumes to light—to cheer; The apathetic mountains,

A pass they now deny, And faith, her drooping pinions Are found too weak to try ! Know, Israel, thy helper, God of the wave, the hill ; Fear not, but wait before him, In holy trust be still ; His arm shall bring salvation, You shall deliv'rance see ;

The Lord, he hath descended, His hand hath made thee free.

Anfailing Mercy.

"His mercy endureth forever."

Oh! bless the glorious giver, He will forsake thee never, His mercy endureth forever;

Now bless and praise the Lord ; His wisdom is unbounded, With care he hath surrounded, Our faith, it is well founded, Secure upon his word. In heaven he ever reigneth, His mighty hand sustaineth, And his power and truth remaineth;

His favors, they are showers, He is our rock, most sure, Forever to endure, The holy, just, and pure, This gracious God is ours.

His grace, it faileth never, Of life the well—the river, And strong for to deliver

From every form of ill; Oh, ever adore and trust him, And never, no, never, distrust him, But bring a grateful anthem,

Come, seek and do his will.

He's mercy for every nation, Of highest or lowest station, He off'reth to all salvation,

In Christ, the glorious way That leads direct to heaven, Where golden harps are given, To all the new arriven,

There in the realms of day.

Glory to God, the highest, Who mercy ne'er denyeth, But evermore supplieth The living, that pervade The ocean, earth, and air, And heavenly regions fair, For with a father's care

Provision he hath made.

The raven and the sparrow, They fear not for to-morrow; Come, every child of sorrow,

You have a mighty friend; Come, if thy lot be dreary, If sick, or sad, or weary, Come, and the Lord will cheer thee, Will mercy on thee send.

Paths of Mercy and Truth.

"All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth unto such as keep his commandments."

Mercy paves thy pilgrim pathway, Drawn by the paternal hand, Trav'ler, ye that now revereth Heaven—its law—its high commands.

Truth, her lamp, it waneth never For thee;—if it seem to fade, Know, thou erring, weak believer, From its light thy foot hath strayed.

Mercy, with her gracious chalice, Walketh, watcheth all the day; Truth hath made her habitation Ever in the narrow way.

All without is fearful !—fearful ! Darkness, fatal, reigns to hide Lurking snares of death and danger Which the foe, he hath supplied.

The Pilot is Jesus.

"Then he arose, and rebuked the winds, and the raging of the water, and they ceased, and there was a calm."

Oh, fearful ! the winds and the waves are at war, The watchful their vigils still keep, But blind unbelief the vision would mar, And lull the lost sinner to sleep.

See mercy's bright beacon, with heaven-kindled ray, Is lighted to guide and to cheer; There's anchorage ground in yon placid bay, Where moorings are safe from all fear.

Death's dark, low'ring tempest, is gathering near, Its surges you may not control, Now the ship, the blest Gospel, it speaks the most clear, Ho! welcome this life-boat, sad soul.

Oh, sinner, poor sinner, that harbor is free, Look forth to the eternal shore;
You ne'er shall be stranded—a Pilot you'll see, The life-boat, 'twill take you safe o'er.

'Twill bear thee aloft, though billows swell high, And fill thee with fear and dismay;

They may threaten thy bark, and ascend to the sky, But the life-boat—'tis safe—you're away.

The Pilot is Jesus, that walked on the wave; Who spake, and the storm it was o'er;

He'll bring thee to port—he's mighty to save.

And your anchor shall drag nevermore.

Faith.

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen."

> The things now hid from mortal ken, Within the vail, on high,

Faith, with her vision, ever sheen,

Alluringly brings nigh;

Substantial as the gracious throne Evinced divinely clear,

The proofs she ever deigns to bring The child of God to cheer.

Of that eternal, blest abode, Port of the perfect rest Where all the ransomed of the Lord Forever shall be blest ; Shall drink from that immortal fount, Life's pure, unfailing spring ; Oh, faith divine, what rays of bliss Illume thy hand—thy wing.

'Twas by thy sanctifying light Prophets and elders found The paths of truth and righteousness On this low, barren ground; Obedient to thy kindly voice, Their ever-watchful ear Received the mandate of the word Proclaimed so timely near. 'Tis through the medium held by thee We know this world so bright, Came at the call of sovereign power From dark, chaotic night; The orbs that through the ether fields Roll their unwearied round, The valid witness of their birth Alone by thee is found. Framed by the word of God alone, Designed by heavenly skill,

Thou hast the mirror where we trace The signet of his will,

Embodied in that mandate loud, Immutable and clear—

Decree that said, "Let there be light," That bade each star appear.

The heaven-accepted sacrifice, The off'ring that was brought, Type of the sanctifying flood,

By faith was fully fraught;

2	BIBLE EVERGREENS
	The excellence of that perfume That reached the highest throne,
	With righteous Abel's orison-
	It was by faith alone.
	God, by his own indwelling power, This testimony gave,
	That faith can find, can bring the gift
	That claims the grace to save;
	Wisdom, and everlasting love,
	Pleased with the nectarine,
	Bestrewed this altar—early reared,
	With favors all divine.
	Death, with his arrow pointed drawn,
	Abashed, retires to see,
	The mantle holy Enoch wore—
	The garb bestowed by thee; Faith, hand-maid of the heavenly king,
	Who kindly deigned to spread
	The panoply of paradise
	To guard his waiting head.
	To gaara mo watering hour.
	A passport robe of righteousness,
	Helmet-impervious mail;
	Dress of such resurrection hue
	As they beyond the vale
	Of pain, and sin, and care, and grief,
	In bliss, forever wear;
	'Twas thine his walk with God to see,
	Thou led'st him safely there.

Without thy all-sufficient aid, That road may not be found, That upward path, the paved highway, Where life and peace abound; Recipients of that rich reward-The crown of life-of heaven, To thee, O Faith, great polar star, Their helm below had given. Relying on the Saviour's word, Thy children, heirs of rest, Whose glorious inheritance Is found a portion blest; Attracted by the shining coast, They launch the fearless bark, With thee o'er rough and angry seas, Braved threat'ning billows dark. We see thy architectural skill High on the deluge flood, That merged a sin-polluted world-Long suffered ;--warned of God ; Heir of thy own wrought righteousness. He saw the fabric rise, Where unbelief profaned the Lord, His threat'nings dared despise. Moved by the hand of filial fear He builded; watchful long; A refuge from the verging storm, That whelmed the scoffing throng;

Faith, mighty helper of the past, Supporter of the low, The fruit of every precious growth, 'Tis thine to nurse, to sow.

When Abraham, servant of the Lord, The ancient call received,
'Twas by thy consecrating charm The promise he believed;
A stranger, pilgrim; heavenward bound, To thee a willing hand,
'Gave—and thou leadest all the way,

And cheered in distant land.

The Prodigal.

"I will arise, and go to my father."

I'll leave this land of want and care, I will arise, and go; I'm perishing with hunger here, Whene near mill nim show :

Where none will pity show; This land, the witness of my sin,

My servitude and shame; My Father's pardon I would win,

I'll own my guilt and blame; Just as I am, I'll seek his face—

He 's bread, and that to spare; I'll only ask a servant's place, May I but shelter share;

I'll tell him how this spirit writhed Beneath the frown of heaven, Its anguish when the cup received, In righteous judgment given.
 The tender, fond, paternal eye, That watched his coming long, It doth the contrite one descry, Forgets, forgives his wrong; Compassion, tenderness and love, The Father's heart divide, He meets no more the haughty brow That once his hand defied, But floods of true, repentant tears, From heart subdued, sincere, Repay the Father's injured breast— The lost is doubly dear; His tattered garments, worn and soiled, The choicest robes misplace,
And hands that sought the humblest toil, • Most costly rings they grace.
Now mirth and music rich abound, With haste the feast is spread ; For this, the long-lost son is found, Alive, as from the dead.
So, when a sinner turns to God, With angels there is joy, And all in the divine abode Their golden harps employ.

Heabenly Misdom.

"Wisdom is better than rubies."

Above all price of rubic mine, The pearls of heavenly wisdom shine; Oh, who their beauties ere would dare To prize—with aught of earth compare; Her voice is heard throughout the waste In words most excellent and chaste, She loves to call, to win the youth, Her lamp will guide in paths of truth.

Now, list to her, she will impart, A wise and understanding heart, Her lips, they drop with prudence sweet, Where light and grace together meet; Her dwelling-place is hung around With flowers of knowledge, heavenly ground.

She beck'neth to her glorious shrine, All radiant with a light divine, A counsellor forever near When fainting hope would yield to fear; A shelter from the woes and strife That strew the cloudy path of life.

By her the righteous scepter'd hand, The kingly crown may bless the land, And princes, too, inspired may wave, By strength of wisdom, scepters brave; Her love is overflowing, free, A well of life it sure shall be, And they that early seek shall find Its sacred waters well refined.

Riches and honors, they abound, Where'er her gentle steps are found, Riches most durable and rare, Of righteousness divinely fair; Her fruit with gold she'll not compare, Her revenue we all may share, The choicest silver—diamonds bright But fade before her brilliant light; She leads the way—this perfect guide, She'll see thy treasures well supplied.

Then yield to her thy heart, thy love, Her ark will bear thee safe above To heaven, her throne, where high she dwelt, And angels at her foot-stool knelt, Before Jehovah's mighty hand Had set to earth such beauties bland,

And spread the fountains of the deep Where hidden diamonds silent sleep; She held her counsels far on high, Away beyond the ethereal sky; When God, with infinite display From chaos called and blest the day, And strewed the azure vault, so clear, With sparkling orbs, to grace, to cheer; With God, the ever-living God, Wisdom the holy pavements trod, Ever rejoicing in his sight, Wisdom is truly "God's delight."

Oh, harken to her lovely voice, Make her thy early, happy choice; You, in the blushing morn of days, For blest are they that keep her ways. The wisdom of God's ways and word, Wisdom of Christ, our risen Lord, But if we scorn and hate the right, We love the road to deathless night.

Charity Exemplified.

"Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble."

LADY.

Oh, frown not on the beggar girl, Haste not to close the door, You may not know the anguish That wrings that bosom's core; She may, in grief and sadness, Now feel the orphan's woe, Or weep, her faithful loved ones By sickness now laid low.

FOR CHRISTMAS.

Go, quickly, haste, and call her. Go ask her to come in : To treat the poor so rudely 'Tis fearful, deadly sin ! 'Tis late, and cold, and dreary, And falling fast the snow, Oh, mercy, pity, charity, How could you tell her, no? Come in, poor little stranger, Come, sit here by the fire; You're wet, and cold, and weary ? Permit me to inquire---I am your friend; come, tell me, Why you must ask for bread? I fear those tears that blind you Are by an orphan shed?

CHILD.

I am, my dear, kind lady, Half-orphan-as they say, And I feared my only parent, She would have died to-day ; He's ill, my eldest brother.

And I must hasten home, I left the children hungry-

They'll watch to see me come.

LADY.

Just stop a moment, daughter,

We'll send our man with you ; He'll help you with your basket,

And take another, too.

BIBLE EVERGREENS

Oh, Father of the Fatherless, Though joyful to receive, It is thy promised blessedness When we thy poor relieve.

A Flower Anique.

TO A SISTER.

"For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

> Dear sister, take this flower, It grew on hallowed ground; With trembling hand I plucked it From off that sacred mound : The grave, where late our mother. We laid with hope so rife: In Him, the resurrection-Who said-"I am the life." A little vine, with tendrils, Had wound it round and round ; Half hidden by the branches, This lovely flower I found ; No hand, I knew, had planted it, No tear had there bedewed: It grew so wild and lonely In that deep solitude. I thought, perhaps, to class it— To find for it a name : That Flora might interpret,

Or tell from whence it came;

But vain were my researches, This modest flower, so meek ! 'Tis filial love shall name it— We'll call it Flower Unique.

I know, with me, you'll cherish it, It was the first to bloom; The first to hold sad vigil

By our loved mother's tomb; To cast its fragrant tribute

Above our honored dead, To cheer the desolation

Where many tears were shed.

Though nameless, 't has a language-

It speaks with wondrous power; Though silent, soft, and voiceless,

The language of a flower.

It has, indeed, a diction, The eye of faith may read ;

It adds a line—a precept, Such as we ever need.

It tells us 'twas Infinity,

That planted there the vine; 'Twas God who taught the tendrils

Around the sod to twine; That He who called the flowret,

From earth, so pure and fair,

Will not forget his covenant--

He knows the sleeper there.
