7. Board of education of city of first class may provide separate schools for white and colored children in grades below high school, provided equal educational facilities are furnished; but where location of school for one of these classes is such that access to it is beset with such dangers to life and limb that children of class for which it is designated ought not to be required to attend it, such children are denied equal educational facilities, and the action of board requiring them to attend such school and denying them admission to any other is abuse of discretion. Where children would be required to cross 16 tracks on which trains were constantly passing. Williams v. Board of Education of Parsons [Kan.] 99 P 216.

8. Ky. Acts 1904, c. 85, prohibiting teaching pupils of both races, so far as it applies to corporations whose charter state may alter, amend or repeal, does not violate federal constitution. Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45, 53 Law Ed. 81.

10. Under Act June 18, 1895 (P. L. 203), §§ 11-14, 21, principals or other persons in charge of school must exclude such persons. Commonwealth v. Rowe, 218 Pa. 168, 67 A 56. Duty is placed upon principals or other persons in charge of schools, and not upon directors. Id.

11. General police power to pass ordinances and make regulations for promotion of health or suppression of disease does not include passage of such ordinance. Peopls v. Chicago Board of Education, 234 Ill. 422, 84 NE 1046.

12. Ordinance refusing admission to schools of one not vaccinated within 7 years held unreasonable and void. People v. Chicago Board of Education, 234 Ill. 422, 84 NE 1046.

13. One who has chosen to establish himself on small island, most of which is owned by him, and who is only permanent inhabitant, cannot compel town to furnish school facilities upon island for his children, only two of whom are under 14, one of these being under school age, even though he is required by law to send one of them to school. Davis v. Chilmark, 199 Mass. 112, 85 NE 107.

14. Where children entitled to school privileges in city, if required to attend certain school designated by board of education, would be exposed to daily dangers to life and limb so obvious and so great that their parents in exercise of reasonable prudence should not permit them to incur hazard necessarily and unavoidably involved in such attendance, they should not be compelled to attend school so designated. Williams v. Board of Education of Parsons [Kan.] 99 P 216.

15. Under Laws 1898, p. 21, No. 25, amended by Laws 1900, p. 18, No. 23, permitting child who can conveniently be better accommodated in school of adjoining and may enforce their right to attend school in,[16] and be transported at the district's cost to, the district to which they have been transferred by proper proceedings.[17]

§ 3. School districts, sites and schools.[18]—See 10 C. L. 1599—Notice of an election to determine whether a district shall adopt the provisions of a particular law must accurately name the place of the election [19] and sufficiently inform the voters of the business to be transacted.[20] Only voters possessing the statutory qualifications may vote at such an election.[21]

The right to use school buildings for other than purely school purposes may be granted by statute.[22]

*Formation, alteration, consolidation and dissolution of districts.*See 10 C. L. 1600—The formation, alteration and consolidation of school districts is usually regulated by statutes,[23] which are liberally construed.[24] These statutes usually contain limitations with reference to the territory which may be included or affected by the change,[25] and usually provide that the action taken shall be voluntary on the part district to "demand" privileges of said school, its tuition to be paid by district of its residence, etc., "demand" implies application to board of its residence and not mere assertion of right, and law contemplates application to board of adjoining district to determine question to receive children of other district, refusal in either case being subject to appeal and final determination by county examiners of teachers. Town of Wallingford v. Clarendon, 81 Vt. 245, 69 A 734. Laws 1904, p. 60, No. 36, took away right to appeal. Id.

16. Action is properly brought only on relation of transferred child by its next friend. Teeple v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 49. Child of school age and not parent, guardian, or person in custody of such child, is one transferred for educational purposes, and hence parent or guardian, not being resident of transferred district, cannot sue to compel such district to hire teacher or provide facilities. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 6449-6453; Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 5959a-5959e. Id.

17. Mandamus to transport children to school improperly issued where not shown that trustee had money on hand which he could lawfully devote to such purpose or that advisory board had appropriated money for that purpose alone. Dunten v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 733. To sustain mandamus to compel transportation of children to school, it must be shown that trustee had in his hands sufficient sum appropriated for such purpose by advisory board. Waters v State [Ind.] 88 NE 67. Mere allegation that trustee had sufficient sum to pay for cost of transportation held insufficient. Id.

19. Notice of election which states election would be held in school house held defective where there were two school houses in district far separated one from other. State v. Green, 131 Wis. 324, 111 NW 519.

20. Mere statement to qualified electors that meeting was to determine whether or not they wished to adopt and ratify provisions of general charter law relating to schools, which had been adopted by city council, held insufficient to give requisite information as to business to be transacted. State v. Green, 131 Wis. 324, 111 NW 519.

21. Under St. 1898, § 925—113, amended by Laws 1899, c. 287, p. 502, state's electors qualified to vote at election to determine whether district under general law shall ratify adoption of general city charter law applicable to schools. State v. Green, 131 Wis. 324, 111 NW 519.

22. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 9763 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4477), regarding use of schoolhouses by literary societies, etc., members of such society properly authorized to use same may enter building by means of key obtained from one not authorized to deliver it, though board had closed buiding against them improperly. State v. Kessler [Mo. App.] 117 SW 85.

23. Acts 19th general assembly, c. 118, p. 111, including certain territory in limits of independent school district within city, held not retroactive because bringing within city district territory annexed recently before passage of act, it being held that enlargement of city school district was effective only from time of act. Independent School Dist. of Fairview v. Independent School Dist. of Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 668. Act held not unconstitutional as affecting vested rights of another district. Id. Code, § 2794. Independent School Dist. of Frazer v. Jones [Iowa] 120 NW 315. Code Supp. § 2793a relates to enlarging existing districts, and not to newly established districts. Id.

24. Rev. St. 1899, § 9742 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4463), regarding formation and consolidation of districts, will be liberally construed. State v. Andrae [Mo.] 116 SW 561. Rev. St. 1899, § 9742 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4463), regarding arbitrators in consolidation proceedings, held not delegation of judicial power prohibited by Const. art. 6, § 1. Id.

25. Under Const. art. 7, §§ 3, 8; Const. art. 6, §§ 5, 8, regarding formation of districts "within counties," etc., and Const. art. 11, § 10, authorizing constitution of city or town independent district, legislature cannot constitute city or town situated in two counties single district. of the people,[26] though occasionally it is left to the discretion of the school board,[27] and sometimes, as in the case of consolidation in Kansas, the action of the people is ineffective unless the county superintendent in the exercise of his discretion sees fit to declare it,[28] though he possesses no disorganizing or consolidating power of his own.[29] The action by the people in this regard is usually accomplished by means of an election called as required by statute,[30] at which the proposition must be approved by the requisite vote,[31] or, as in Kansas in the case of a change of boundary, by proper petition to the county superintendent,[32] which petition it has been held may, under certain circumstances, be oral.[33] The division of property between districts after the change [34] and the status of the district's debt are also generally regu-

Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 616a (Batt's Ann. Civ. St. art. 3994), authorizing incorporation of certain towns into school districts not to exceed certain size, encroachment to extent of 1½ square miles upon other district, where number of children of scholastic age is not shown, held not improper. 30. Under Acts 32d General Assembly (Laws 1907, p. 153), c. 155, § 2, providing for calling of election to consolidate school districts, corporation having largest number of voters need not be entirely within city limits, sole test being number of voters within district, though part of voters may be without city. State v. Grefe [Iowa] 117 NW 13. Under Acts 30th General Assembly (Laws 1904, p. 7), c. 8, census of state is competent evidence as to district of city having largest number of voters as required by Acts 32d General Assembly (Laws 1907, p. 153), c. 155, § 2, regarding establishment of consolidated district. Held evidence, though more than two years old. Id. Evidence that district outside city limits, but within school district, was rural, separated into farms, and contained only 150 voters, held competent. Id. School register completed near time of filing petition in pursuance of Code, § 2755, held competent. Id. Acts 32d General Assembly (Laws 1907, p. 153), c. 155, is not unconstitutional for failure to express its subject in its title, as impairing abligation of contracts, depriving people of management of their own affairs, as being class legislation, or as taking private property for public use without just compensation. Id.

31. Under Laws 1901, c. 305, p. 557, § 1, providing for voluntary disorganization and consolidation of adjacent school districts, majority of voters in district must vote for proposition to disorganize and consolidate or proposition is lost. Majority of those who attend meeting is insufficient unless that also be majority of voters in district. Gardner v. State, 77 Kan. 742, 95 P 588. Statute contemplates that all districts proposing to disorganize and consolidate must vote on same proposition which must carry in all or be lost. Id. Action held insufficient where districts voted for many different propositions. Id. Batt's Ann. Civ. St. art. 3994, regarding change of established school districts only with consent of majority of voters in all affected districts, applies to changes made in districts created by commissioner's court, and not to changes resulting from incorporation of independent districts. Brewer v. Hall [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 788.

32. Statute contemplates filing of petition with county superintendent for change of boundaries of school district as basis for issuance by him of notice setting time for hearing upon requested change. School Dist. No. 116 v. Wolf [Kan.] 98 P 237.

33. Where verbal request is made for change and proper notice is given, interested parties appear, order is made, appeal is taken to board of county commissioners, and order is affirmed, proceeding is only irregular, and not void. School Dist. No. 116 v. Wolf [Kan.] 98 P 237. Such order so made and affirmed is final, and is not subject to collateral attack in action for injunction. Gen. St. 1901, § 6121. Id.

34. Under Act March 8, 1901 (Sess. Laws 1901, c. 28, art. 1, p. 187 [Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, §§ 6219-6223]), and Const. art. 17, § 8 (Burns' Ed. § 337; Snyder's Ed. p. 342), former establishing higher school in Woods county, and latter detaching territory from Woods county to form Alfalfa county, embracing location of high school, high school became property of Alfalfa county, and it was duty of county commissioners to appoint trustees thereof. Wilhite v. Mansfield [Okl.] 99 P 1087. Under B. & C. Comp. St. 3365, as amended by Laws 1903, p. 125, regarding division of assets on formation of new districts, tax collected for building and repairing is divisible asset, and it is immaterial whether amount be taken from proceeds of tax or from other funds. School Dist. No. 61, Polk County v. School Dist. No. 32, Polk County [Ore.] 98 P 523. If such tax is trust fund, it would continue such in hands of new district, and hence division would not be diversion contrary to Const. art. 9, § 3. Id. When board of county commissioners creates new school district out of territory taken from existing districts, as authorized by Gen. St. 1894, § 3674, it may make division of moneys, funds and credits to district affected by change at subsequent regular meeting without notice or hearing therein. School Dist. No. 131 v. School Dist. No. 5 [Minn.] 120 NW 898.

lated by statute,[35] as is the matter of appeal,[36] be had where taken in proper time [37] and after due notice.[38] The effect of the change is to transfer the inhabitants of the affected districts to the new district as voters.[39] The organization of an incorporated town alone has no effect upon the boundaries of school districts.[40] The validity of curative statutes is governed by the usual rules.[41]

Establishment of high schools.[See 10 C. L. 1603]—The proposition of establishing a county high school, when submitted to the voters, must be sustained by the requisite vote,[42] and any misapprehension of the board of county commissioners as to the actual result of the vote cannot change its effect.[43]

Sites.[See 10 C. L. 1603]—Except in case of emergency, and until the wishes of the voters may be consulted,[44] all matters regarding school sites must usually be referred to the people of the district,[45] at an election after due notice [46] designating the site

35. Entire school district as it existed prior to change continues liable to creditors to same extent after diversion as before. State v. Grefe [Iowa] 117 NW 13. Debt once existing must remain debt against corporation that created it, and its obligation is not destroyed by a change in corporate limits. Change in boundaries of district held not to affect its liability on bonds previously issued. Wayne County Sav. Bank v. School Dist. No. 5 of Mikado Tp., 152 Mich. 440, 15 Det. Leg. N. 252, 116 NW 378.

36. Under Acts 29th Leg., p. 281, c. 124, §§ 70, 71, 25, regarding management of schools by trustees and providing for appeal to county superintendent, appeal to court from action of trustees in consolidating schools lies only after remedy by appeal to superintendent of public instruction has been exhausted. McCollum v. Adams [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 526. Action to recover sum apportioned abolished school used after consolidation to support consolidated school. Id. Where impossible to obtain ruling of superintendent of public instruction to action consolidating schools and claim for money apportioned to school abolished by consolidation and now used to maintain consolidated school in time to give children benefit of funds in controversy, remedy is by appeal to superintendent and injunction against using funds pending appeal. Id.

37. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 9742 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4463), regarding time for appeal in consolidation proceedings, it will be presumed that appeal was properly taken in absence of showing on record of county superintendent, he not being required to keep record. State v. Andrae [Mo.] 116 SW 561.

38. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 9742 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4463), regarding consolidation of districts and appeal, it will be presumed that clerk did his duty with regard to posting notices, and petition for appeal is not insufficient for failure to show such fact where alleged that no votes were cast for consolidation. State v. Andrae [Mo.] 116 SW 561.

39. Act of county superintendent changing boundary line of district as authorized by Ky. St. § 4458, so as to include whole of certain farm, has effect of transferring tenants on farm into new district as voters. Farmer v. Pace [Ky.] 116 SW 324.

40. Code 1897, § 599. Independent School Dist. of Frazer v. Jones [Iowa] 120 NW 315.

41. Laws 1907, c. 244, p. 384, purporting to legalize and validate steps taken to disorganize and consolidate certain districts, held not curative but creative in effect and void as special legislation. Gardner v. State, 77 Kan. 742, 95 P 588.

42. Before provisions of Laws 1905, 397, p. 658, providing for establishment of county high schools, can be legally adopted, proposition when submitted at general election must receive majority of votes cast upon any question or office voted for at such election. Board of Education of Humbolt v. Klein [Kan.] 99 P 222.

43. Where only 1,821 of 4,558 votes were cast in favor of adopting provisions of 1905 high school laws while only, 1,205 were cast against it, proposition failed to carry, and fact that board of county commissioners, under misapprehension of laws, declared result and assumed proposition was carried, does not affect result. Board of Education of Humbolt v. Klein [Kan.] 99 P 222.

44. In cases of emergency, such as fire, pestilence or danger of action of ejectment or damages after lawful notice to vacate premises belonging to other persons, and for temporary purposes until electors may be consulted, directors may themselves remove school, but this does not justify wilful disregard of peoples' wishes regarding permanent location of school thus removed and provision for its future conduct. Arbitrary removal from center of district, at notice of owners to vacate site, to remote portion thereof and attempted location there without giving electors opportunity to vote upon question, and after voters had at previous elections voted against removal held improper. State v. Lyons, 37 Mont. 354, 96 P 922.

45. School board has no power to build or remove school buildings and to purchase or sell school lots until they have referred matter to electors and been directed to act. Pol. Code 1895, § 1797, as amended by Laws 1897, p. 130. Arbitrary removal of school building from center of district. State v. Lyons, 37 Mont. 354, 96 P 922. Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 46, § 428, 429, providing for submission to electors of school districts various questions of public policy, do not on their face seem intended to regulate hold-in substantial compliance with statute,[47] and at which the requisite vote is cast.[48] In some states, however, the action may be taken only after proper notice and petition[49] addressed to the county superintendent,[50] while in others the matter is one resting in the sound discretion of the school committee.[51] It has been held in connection with the matter of sites that a statute prohibiting the placing of schools within a certain distance of one another does not prevent the repair of an old established school which violates the statutory requirement as to distance,[52] that the board may accept a gift of a new site prior to the determination of the legality of the removal proceedings,[53] that the failure to vote the necessary funds for removal does not invalidate the decision to remove where such funds are donated to the district,[54] and that in condemnation proceedings the question of the location of a school site and the necessity of taking land therefore is vested entirely in the school authorities and is not for the commission or jury.[55]

§ 4. Organization, meetings and officers.[56] See 10 C. L. 1604—The school township is a corporation having control of the schools, schoolhouses and school funds,[57]

ing of any elections for choice of school site, and hence do not by implication repeal provisions of such other acts. Southworth v. School Dist. No. 131, Board of Education, 238 Ill. 190, 87 NE 403. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 122, § 166, board of education had no power to select suitable site for school after election at which no site received majority of votes. Id.

46. To establish validity of election to determine location of school site, it is jurisdictional prerequisite that board give notice and that record show same. Southworth v. School Dist. No. 131, Board of Education, 238 Ill. 190, 87 NE 403.

47. Designation that schoolhouse be located so as not to be more than 2½ miles from any point of certain specific boundary line set out, and as near as practicable to center, held sufficient. Ky. St. § 4464 (Russell's St. § 5736). Taylor v. Cundiff [Ky.] 118 SW 379.

48. Election to select schoolhouse site is not "duly called and held" within Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 122, § 166, amended by act effective July 1, 1908, legalizing choice of sites by board, where election was held without any site receiving majority. Southworth v. School Dist. No. 131 Board of Education, 238 Ill. 190, 87 NE 403. Rev. St. 1899, § 9750, subd. 11 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4470), regarding majority vote to remove site nearer center of district, means majority of taxpayers present and voting. Tucker v. McKay, 131 Mo. App. 728, 111 SW 867.

49. Order of superintendent made upon improper notice and petition for change of site of schools, on appeal after refusal of trustee to sign petition signed by majority of school patrons, is without effect. Brandt v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 337. If building of new schoolhouse on existing site is sought, appeal may be taken to county superintendent of schools from refusal of township school trustee to sign petition for erection of building already signed by majority of school patrons. Id.

50. Under Acts 1893, p. 17, c. 18, change of schoolhouse site can be affected only by concurrent desires of majority of school patrons, trustee of school township, and county superintendent of schools, wishes of first two parties to be expressed by signing petition, and last by order for or against. Hence, statute is not complied with where trustee refused to sign petition. Brandt v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 337. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 6590, 6591, in so far as they relate to removal of school buildings and changing of school sites, were repealed by Acts 1893, p. 17, c. 18, Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6590. Id.

51. Rebuilding of school and change of site are matters vested by statute in sound discretion of school committee, and are not to be restrained by courts unless in violation of some provision of law, or committee is influenced by improper motives, or there is misconduct on their part. Venable v. Pilot Mountain School Committee, 149 N. C. 120, 62 SE 902. Fact that member of board contributed to fund of $400 to buy site in center of town for school, it being agreed that old site worth $300 was to be transferred to donors of new site, does not invalidate transaction where new site was worth more than old and member did not profit personally from transaction. Id. Fact that brothers of two of committee contributed to purchase of new site cannot be held per se any interest invalidating action of board in absence of any evidence that they in any way influenced any member of board. the validity of whose organization can only be attacked seasonably [58] in a direct proceeding.[59]

The procedure for calling elections depends upon the statute of local jurisdiction.[60]

Trustees and boards of education. See 10 C. L. 1604—The governing board of the school district is usually a board of directors clothed only with statutory power.[61] This board, whose number is controlled by statute [62] and whose members are civil officers,[63] can exercise its powers only when acting as a body at meetings called and held in the manner and place provided or authorized by law,[64] and must keep a complete record of its acts,[65] which may be supplemented by parol in certain particulars.[66]

School officers. See 10 C. L. 1605—This section deals only with matters peculiar to school officers, all other matters being treated in another topic.[67] All matters regarding the eligibility,[68] qualification [69] and disqualification,[70] compatibility of offices,[71] oath,[72] time [73] and power to select officers [74] and fill vacancies,[75] validity of 59. Cannot be collaterally attacked in suit to enjoin collection of taxes. Black v. Early, 208 Mo. 281, 106 SW 1014. Validity can be attacked only by quo warranto. Id. It is not collateral attack on school district for taxpayers to resist collection of tax on ground that district had now power to levy same, though reason given for lack of authority may be lack of constitutional power in district to exist. Parks v. West [Tex.] 111 SW 726. District located in two counties. Id. Fact that school district sought to become and was made party to suit tendering issue of its corporate existence does not estop it from raising defense that its corporate existence cannot be collaterally attacked in proceeding. Black v. Early, 208 Mo. 281, 106 SW 1014.

60. While there is no express provision as to when and how election shall be called yet, when exigency arises requiring trustees to consult electors for authority to act, they must do so, and when there are no express provisions as to how they shall proceed, provisions touching periodical meetings for election of trustees, or for calling special elections to obtain authority to issue bonds and like, furnish safe guide. Under Public School Act Oct. 19, 1903 (P. L. p. 5), though such plant be separate and distinct from schoolhouses themselves. Scola v. Montclair Board of Education [N. J. Law] 71 A 299. Board of directors of school district is body clothed with authority to discharge such functions of public nature as are expressly prescribed by statute. It can exercise no power not expressly conferred or fairly arising by necessary implication from those conferred. State v. Kessler [Mo. App.] 117 SW 85. 64. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 9761 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4476), meeting must be held within district. State v. Kessler [Mo. App.] 117 SW 85. Action taken at meeting held without district held void. Id.

65. Under St. 1899, § 9750 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4469), regarding records of school meetings, record held not so incomplete as to defeat action taken, where actual vote taken was not shown but proposition voted upon was recorded as carried. Tucker v. McKay, 131 Mo. App. 728, 111 SW 867.

66. Oral evidence to show what actually took place at meeting and that record was carried is competent. Tucker v. McKay, 131 Mo. App. 728, 111 SW 867.

67. See Officers and Public Employes, 12 C. L. 1131.

68. Evidence held insufficient to show ineligibility to office of county superintendent through lack of residence. State v. Scott [Ind.] 86 NE 409.

69. To be eligible to office of county superintendent, one must possess license required by statute. Post-graduate diploma of state normal school held insufficient. Acts 1905, p. 492, c. 163, § 1; Burns' Ann. St. 1905, § 5902a. State v. Bradt, 170 Ind. 480, 84 NE 1084.

70. Evidence held not to show that county superintendent of schools lost residency in county so as to become disqualified under Rev. Laws 1905, § 2667. State v. Hays, 105 Minn. 399, 117 NW 615.

71. Under rule prevailing in Minnesota, offices of county superintendent of schools in one county and superintendent of the selection,[76] the effect of an invalid election,[77] tenure,[78] the effect of a forged resignation,[79] removal,[80] salary,[81] bonds,[82] duties,[83] and judicial control of school officers,[84] are usually controlled by local statutes.

schools of town in another county are not incompatible. State v. Hays, 105 Minn. 399, 117 NW 615.

72. Oath of clerk of school district held not defective under Const. art. 5, § 8, for failure to name office duties which were sworn would be faithfully performed. State v. Ladeen, 104 Minn. 252, 116 NW 486.

73. Under Gen. Laws 1907, pp. 790, 875, § 169, regarding election of boards of education by council at April meeting, election in April 1908 held unauthorized where act by its terms did not become effective until April 1909. State v. Waldrop [Ala.] 48 S 394.

74. Under § 199, relating to election only of such officers as were not provided for by new charter under such act, there is no authority for election of new board of education as constituted under Act Feb. 11, 1891, amending old charter, until incumbent's terms expired. State v. Waldrop [Ala.] 48 S 394. Public Laws 1888, p. 22, c. 728, cl. 2, § 22, providing for election of members of school committee of Woonsocket by city council, does not conflict with Const. art. 7, § 1, of amendments, providing that electors shall have right to vote in election of all civil officers, latter expression meaning not that they shall have right to vote for all civil officers but only for all civil officers required to be elected by people. In re Election of School Committee [R. I.] 72 A 417.

75. Provision in New Britain city charter, Sp. Acts 1905 (14 Sp. Laws, p. 915), providing that city council shall fill all vacancies in any office, and also providing for consolidated school district, is effective as against Gen. St. 1902, § 2818, providing for filling vacancies in school committees by such committee. State v. Hatch [Conn.] 72 A 575.

76. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6376, providing that county auditor shall be clerk at election of county superintendent by township trustees, and shall keep a record in book kept for that purpose, is directory only, and total absence of same does not invalidate election. Election in such case may be shown by parol or other written evidence. State v. Scott [Ind.] 86 NE 409.

77. Failure of township trustees to make valid election on date set for such election in Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6376, does not preclude election at subsequent time. State v. Scott [Ind.] 86 NE 409. Where attempted election is fruitless, duty of trustees to elect remains unperformed and continuing, and no failure or delays less in obligation to perform and to do so without unnecessary delays. As soon as auditor learns of result of unsuccessful election, he must notify trustees to reassemble for purposes of election, and, if he neglects to do so, trustees must themselves assemble to elect as soon as notice gets to them from other reliable sources. 78. Loc. Acts 1896-97, p. 514, creating special school district, held to create life tenure of members of school board conditional only on residence in district. State v. White [1Aa.] 49 S 78. Members of school board of town within such special district cannot be ousted by quo warranto under Gen. Acts 1907, p. 486, alleged to repeal Loc. Act. Id. Gen. Acts 1903, p. 289, amended by Gen. Acts 1907, p. 486, § 6; regarding redistricting public schools, held not to impliedly repeal Loc. Acts 1896-97, p. 514, creating special district out of certain township, etc. Id. Town within limits of such special district and subject to provisions of such act held not such town as was referred to in later general act, and its existence is hence unaffected. Id. Loc. act held not repealed by Gen. Acts, § 200, repeaing all laws, general and special, in conflict therewith. Id. Section 177, General Act above, held to exempt districts in which members of board of education hold office by life tenure and hence to exempt town in special school district established by local act above. Id. One entitled to hold office for 4 years, or until his successor is elected and qualified, is not entitled to hold over for full term of 4 years for mere reason that successor was not elected and qualified at time of expiration of his term, but his right to office ceased moment qualified successor presented himself to assume it. State v. Scott [Ind.] 86 NE 409.

79. Evidence held to show that resignation of members of board was forgery, and hence that appointment to fill vacancy was void, and likewise contract entered into majority consisting of new appointee and another. Terry v. Terry [Ky.] 117 SW 284.

80. See Quo Warranto, 12 C. L. 1536. If school district was legally laid out and election of trustees held therein under Acts 1905, p. 425, fact that portion of that act relating to local taxation in districts for school purposes was held unconstitutional did not oust trustees from office, nor did Acts 1906, p. 61, have that effect. Griffin v. Brooks, 129 Ga. 698, 59 SE 902. Upon detachment of territory within which school district officer resides from school district of which he is officer, his office immediately becomes vacant ipso facto, and may be filled by appointment. School Dist. No. 116 v. Wolf [Kan.] 98 P 237. County commissioners have no power to remove county superintendent of schools, but may only fill office after it has become vacant through act of incumbent or has been vacated by proper judicial proceedings. State v. Hays, 105 Minn. 399, 117 NW 615. Under Act June 6, 1893 (P. L. 330), providing for removal of directors for failure to provide suitable and adequate school accomodations, etc., since statute does not provide for appeal, appellate court will consider matter as on certiorari and look to record only to ascertain whether court exceeded its jurisdiction. In re Slippery Rock Tp. School Dist., 222 Pa. 538, 71 A 1085.

81. Under Ky. St. § 4419, regarding salaries of county superintendents, fiscal court must fix salary before beginning of term, but if not so fixed it may be fixed later,

§ 5. Property and contracts.[85] Contracts.[See 10 C. L. 1608]—Matters common to all public contracts are treated elsewhere.[88]

The power of school officers to contract is limited by statute,[87] and all persons contracting with them are charged with notice of the extent of their authority.[88] They usually have the power to provide necessary school supplies,[89] furniture [90] and buildings,[91] where they can do so with the money at their disposal.[92] Their con-and when fixed cannot be changed during incumbent's term. Breathitt County v. Noble [Ky.] 116 SW 777. Salary being fixed by statute, it cannot be changed by agreement, waiver, estoppel or other implication, and hence acceptance of smaller amount is no bar to suit for full amount. Id. Held, where superintendent was allowed 15 cents for pupil for first nine months, he must be allowed some rate thereafter. Id. Holdover tax collector who gives bond required and performs duties of his office with full knowledge that smaller sum than maximum fixed by statute has been allowed by board for his compensation cannot recover greater sum. Under Gen. St. 1896, c. 50, §§ 4, 5, allowing commission of 5 per cent unless smaller sum is agreed upon, where board prior to collector's qualification allowed sum of $200 only. Wood v. Warwick, School Dist. No. 5, 28 R. I. 299, 67 A 65. Mere fact collector holding over had received 5 per cent commission during previous year gives him no right to same commission during subsequent years. Id.

82. Risk of county school commissioner's bond may not be increased without releasing sureties by his being intrusted by county board of education with large sums of money to be disbursed under orders of county board of education, which moneys were not received as part of common school fund, nor at times provided by law for payment of such fund. Board of Education of Miller County v. Fudge, 4 Ga. App. 637, 62 SE 154. Sureties upon bond of county school commissioner are not liable upon bond provided for faithful discharge of his duties for any moneys borrowed by board of education. In case of loans to county boards of education, entire transaction is individual and not official. Id. In case where action cannot be maintained against sureties of official bond because act of principal is personal and not official, neither can action be maintained upon contract as against principal, though he may be individually liable in different manner. Id.

83. Act No. 17, p. 19, of 1907 (extra session), held constitutional, and to make it plain duty of parish treasurers acting as treasurers of school boards to turn over to their successors, parish superintendents of schools, thereby made treasurers of such boards, books, etc., pertaining to office, and duty may be enforced by mandamus. State v. Romero, 122 La. 885, 48 S 312. Funds derived by county boards of education from borrowing money are not included in county school funds, and proper receipt and disbursement of such borrowed money is not one of duties of county school commissioner by virtue of his office. Board of Education of Miller County v. Fudge, 4 Ga. App. 637, 62 SE 154.

84. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 946, prohibiting issuance of mandamus against governor, writ cannot be issued against state board of education of which governor is member since writ must go against all or none. McFall v. State Board of Education [Tex.] 110 SW 739.

89. Broad discretion is reposed in boards of education regarding purchase of necessary supplies for schools, and, in purchase of fuel, gradation of quality of coal, heating capacity, adaptability to heating apparatus, and experience or skill of janitors and other persons managing school furnaces, are essential facts to be considered in making selection therefor, which may render it inadvisable to accept lowest priced coal offered; and where it appears that board has complied with requirement that it act in good faith for best good of schools according to light and understanding of its members, acceptance of other than cheapest coal will not be enjoined Gosline v. Toledo Board of Education, 11 Ohio C C. (N. S.) 195.

90. Const. 1902, § 136 (Code 1904, p. ccxlv), regarding expenditure of money raised for schools as district, city, etc., raising sum may see fit, does not prohibit legislative action giving state board of education power to select school furniture. Commonwealth v. Norfolk School Board [Va.] 63 SE 1081. Code 1904, § 1538, amended by Acts 1906, c. 293, pp. 513, 515, and re-enacted § 10, regarding power of city school board to "provide" furniture, etc., and Act March 15, 1906, c. 248, p. 432 (Code 1904, § 1433), giving state board of education power to "select" school furniture, etc., held pari materia under which city board could by contract engage to "provide" only furniture of kind "selected" by board. Id.

91. Under St. 1898, §§ 423, 430, authorizing school directors to rent or build schoolhouse and to levy tax to rent same, board may rent part of parochial school where district schoolhouse is inadequate. Dorner v. School District No. 5, 137 Wis. 147, 118 NW 353. Subscription list whereby money was contributed to erect building, upper portion to be used by lodge and lower for school purposes, under direction of joint committee which supervised schools for several years, etc., held to constitute contract between lodge and community entitling community to use of lower portion for school purposes. Rhodes v. Maret [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 433.

92. Board is without power to contract for plans and specification of $400,000 building racts, however, can bind the district and their successors [93] only when action has been properly [94] taken at a corporate meeting held as provided by law,[95] by a board at least de facto the board of the district,[96] and where they have complied with the statutory provisions regarding bids,[97] if any,[98] and have obtained the requisite municipal consent where that is required.[99] Their contracts are governed by the ordinary rules as to the individual liability of officers under their contracts,[1] and the validity of a contract in which the officer entering into it is interested.[2]

Change of text books and publisher's bonds. See 10 C. L. 1608—Statutes regarding change of text books are for the protection of the public only;[3] the state is the where only $200,000 has been appropriated regardless of fact that additional appropriations were expected. Perkins v. Newark Board of Education, 161 F 767. Contract for building of schoolhouse at cost in excess of amount raised for that purpose from issue of bonds is not illegal and void for want of authority on part of board of education to make such contract after having underestimated amount of money needed. McAlexander v. Haviland Village School Dist., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 590.

93. Board held bound by acts of predecessor providing for selection of plan and architect of building by competition. Palmer v. Pittsburg Central Board of Education, 220 Pa. 568, 70 A 433. Architects entering competition under rules prescribed by committee in line with its authority held entitled to injunction to prevent succeeding board from hiring architect without following plan proposed by its predecessors. Id.

94. Where board of education appointed committee to take charge of erecting building and unanimously adopted report of such committee deciding to select plan and architect by completion, since such adoption of committee's plan was full authorization to committee to proceed in manner it recommended, everything thereafter done in accordance with report was action of board and binding upon board and its successors. Palmer v. Pittsburg Central Board of Education, 220 Pa. 568, 70 A 433. It is unnecessary that full board specifically approve instructions to architects prescribed by committee in order that they be bound by such rules, where method approved by board necessarily implied such instruction. Id.

96. Contract to teach entered into for district by de jure and de facto trustees constituting majority of board is binding on district. Johnson v. Sanders [Ky.] 115 SW 772.

97. Under School Act Oct. 19, 1903 (P. L. pp. 5-21), §§ 52, 53, 243 requiring advertisements for proposals for building, enlargement or repair of school buildings, and that no bid not conforming to specifications shall be received, board of education cannot modify specifications and after deductions from bid of lowest bidder award him contract under modified specifications. Scola v. Montclair Board of Education [N. J. Law] 71 A 299. Contract for building of schoolhouse awarded to contractor who has been permitted to change his bid by omitting various items and thus reducing aggregate cost to amount realized from sale of bonds is contract made without notice or competition, and is illegal and void under § 3988. McAlexander v. Haviland Village School Dist., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 590.

98. Director of schools is not required, under §§ 3988, 4017, to go to expense of advertising for bids for every trivial thing in way of supplies which may have been ordered by board to be purchased. Gosline v. Toledo Board of Education, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 195. Neither Rev. St. § 3987, specifically empowering boards of education, among other designated things, to provide fuel; nor § 3988, prescribing for bids for certain designated supplies and contracts, but omitting mention of fuel; nor § 4017, requiring director of schools, where one is chosen, to advertise for bids, etc., without providing when or how he shall advertise therefor, requires advertising for bids for coal or purchase from lowest responsible bidder. Board must only act in good faith and for best good of schools according to their light and understanding. Board held to have so acted. Id.

99. Consent of common council is condition precedent to entering into any contract for erection of building. Under Acts 1903, p. 418, c. 225, § 7 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6497), no recovery can be had under contract involving more than mere change in plan of building as originally contracted for. Slattery v. School City of South Bend [Ind. App.] 86 NE 860. City board of educaton cannot bind city by their contracts unless empowered to do so. Contract with architect held not binding. Lawrence v. Toothaker [N. H.] 71 A 334.

1. Mere fact that board of education had no power to contract for and on behalf of city does not render members of board individually liable when they attempt to do so. Contract with architect who entered into contract believing it bound city. Lawrence v. Toothaker [N. H.] 71 A 534.

2. Trustee is prohibited by law from making contract with his district in which he is pecuniarily interested. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 105, § 82, as amended by Sess. Laws 1905, p. 71. Independent School Dist. No. 5 v. Collins [Idaho] 98 P 857. Penalty attached to contracts in which trustee is interested is that no action can be maintained or recovery had against district upon contract (Id.), but that does not change rule that money paid by municipal corporation upon void contract may be recovered back (Id.). Complaint in action brought under above statute must allege that contract was made while defendant was trustee. Id.

3. Ky. St. 1903, § 2957, regarding change of text books is not for benefit of book sellers real party in interest in a suit upon the seller's bond,[4] and, though the county superintendent has certain statutory duties with reference to the suit,[5] he cannot bind the state by acts in excess of such authority.[6]

Bonds for the protection of school boards. See 10 C. L. 1608—School corporations are frequently authorized [7] or required to take bonds for the protection of subcontractors,[8] and made liable under certain conditions for their failure to do so.[9] To be available to the subcontractors, such bonds must come within the statute,[10] and the suit thereon must be properly brought.[11]

Property. See 10 C. L. 1606—The title to property of a school district is divided between the board and its members, the equitable title being in the former and the legal title in the latter.[12] A board of education may lose title by adverse possession to property held by it for sale and not devoted to any public use.[13] The board has general power to control the school property [14] and may rent [15] or sell it [16] even to a lower bidder [17] where they act in good faith.[18] but only for that of public and sellers of discarded books have no right to compel obedience of statute. Allyn v. Louisville School Board [Ky.] 115 SW 206.

4. Under Civ. Code Proc. §§ 18, 21, requiring suits to be brought by real party in interest, in action on text book bond required by Ky. St. 1903, § 4424, commonwealth is real party in interest, and action brought in name of commonwealth and county superintendent, satisfaction of judgment obtained in which is later sought to be set aside in some of same parties, cannot be dismissed by county superintendent against objection of county attorney. Heath & Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 69.

5. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 4422, as amended by Act March 1902, and §§ 4423, 4424, regarding suits, etc., on school book bonds, county superintendent has power only to sue, collect, and pay proceeds into school fund and not to compromise judgment by accepting note for portion thereof and enter satisfaction of judgment. Heath & Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 69.

6. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 4424, regarding text book bond, action to recover on note improperly accepted in compromise of judgment on bond by county superintendent does not estop state from suing to set aslde satisfaction entered after such compromise since acts were outside agent's authority. Heath & Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 69. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 130, regarding county attorney's duty as to unsatisfied judgments in favor of county, he may require payment of judgment rendered on text book bond given under Ky. St. 1903, § 4424, and object to dismissal of action to set improper satisfaction of such judgment aside. Id.

7. Rev. St. 1899, § 6761, expressly authorizes municipal and public bodies to contract for payment of all claims which may be made for labor and materials furnished in construction of public buildings and may cover that in bond so that it inures to benefit of third parties not named. Eau Claire-St. Louis Lumber Co. v. Banks [Mo. App.] 117 SW 611.

8. Board of trustees of Indiana State Normal School may by contract require contractor constructing building to pay laborers and materialmen and take bond conditioned on his making payment. Acts 1903, p. 373, c. 208, § 2. National Surety Co. v. Foster Lumber Co. [Ind. App.] 85 NE 489.

9. Evidence held sufficient to show district not liable to subcontractors and materialmen for failure to take bond of principal contractor as required by Gen. Laws 1901, c. 321, p. 535, where liability might have been enforced against contractor had action been timely. Wilcox Lumber Co. v. School Dist. No. 268 of Otter Tail County, 106 Minn. 208, 118 NW 794.

10. Bond held not to come within Rev. St. 1899, § 6761, for failure to contain clause carrying condition that it be for payment for all material used and labor performed on such work whether by subcontract or otherwise. Eau Claire-St. Louis Lumber Co. v. Banks [Mo. App.] 117 SW 611. Bond held so drawn as to protect school district only. Id.

11. Suit on bond under Rev. St. 1899, § 6761 must be in name of school district for use of plaintiff. Rev. St. 1899, § 6762 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3328). Eau Claire-St. Louis Lumber Co. v. Banks [Mo. App.] 117 SW 611.

12. Deed conveying land to directors conveys equitable title in board, legal title being in directors. O'Donnell v. Robson, 239 Ill. 634, 88 NE 175.

13. Comp. Laws 1907, §§ 2856, 2866x, 2884. Abandoned school property in city held for sale. Pioneer Investment & Trust Co. v. Salt Lake City Board of Education [Utah] 99 P 150.

14. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3992, regarding control of schoolhouses, etc., by trustees, trustees held to have succeeded to trusteeship of lodge holding lower part of building erected on lodge's land for school purposes which building was erected by subscription under agreement that top portion be used for lodge and lower portion for school purposes. Rhodes v. Maret [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 433.

15. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 122, cl. 10, § 147, board of school directors have power to rent to fraternal orders use of portions of school buildings not needed or used for school purposes where schools were not disturbed, property injured and money went to increase term of school possible by one month. Lagow v. Hill, 238 Ill. 428, 87 NE 369.

16. When real estate owned by district is

*School lands.*See 10 C. L. 1607—Title to school lands cannot be acquired by adverse possession as against the state.[19] School land sold and kept in good standing cannot be resold by the commissioner,[20] nor can a sale [21] or lease be canceled by him.[22] The purchaser must show the invalidity of the prior sale,[23] comply with the statutory requirements regarding residence,[24] and may lose his title by default, forfeiture and resale.[25]

The commissioner's deed is not always evidence of a conveyance from the state [26] unless properly supplemented by the proper records.[27] Forfeiture of school land purchase by commission of general land office is not conclusive,[28] but his certificate of occupancy is for certain purposes.[29] Whether there has been an informal cancellation of a lease is a question for the jury.[30] not needed as school site, trusees of such district may sell same, and if money is needed toward purchase of new site it should be so applied, and if not, then it may be applied to any legitimate needs of district for school purposes. Ky. St. 1903, § 4439. Gatliff v. Inman [Ky.] 115 SW 254.

17. Action of trustees in accepting bid lower than others offered held no abuse of discretion under circumstances. Gatliff v. Inman [Ky.] 115 SW 254. On resale of lot trustees need not recognize bid of one who had previously failed to complete purchase, one unable to pay bid, or one not bidding in good faith but doubt as to good faith is insufficient and bids should be accepted in order of amount giving each reasonable opportunity to comply with terms of sale. Id. Bidder at sale cannot refuse to execute bond after sale until he can examine title, etc., but must have done so before sale and cannot complain of resale where he failed to execute bond within 30 minutes after demand as required by trustees. Id.

18. Trustees are presumed to act for best interests of district and they may sell either publicly or privately, and when they act their action is final, and unless it is shown that the have acted corruptly or fraudulently in the sale of the real estate their action is not subject to review. Gatliff v. Inman [Ky.] 115 SW 254.

19. Purchaser of lands from state may maintain action for possession as against persons maintaining dam and claiming title by prescription. Kinney v. Munch [Minn.] 120 NW 374. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4807 (Pierce's Code, § 1519), regarding operation of statute of limitations against state, does not permit adverse possession of school lands against state. To so construe statute would violate Enabling Act (Act Feb. 22, 1889, c. 180 [25 Stat. 679] § 11; Const. Art. 16, § § 1, 2). O'Brien v. Wilson [Wash.] 97 P 1115.

20. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78. Commissioner has no right to sell land while prior valid sale subsists, but has power only to see to compliance by purchaser with conditions imposed upon him. Resale does not give purchaser color of title. Pohle v. Robertsen [Tex.] 115 SW 1166.

21. Commissioner of land office cannot cancel award to school land purchaser, such power being judicial and vested in courts. Trimble v. Burroughs [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 551.

22. Fact that lessee of school lands seeks to purchase same and tenders surrender of lease does not authorize refusal to sell, cancellation of lease, and sale to another, but merely requires lessee to hold to his lease, lease not being affected by tender where purchase by lessee is refused. Halbert v. Terrell [Tex.] 112 SW 1036.

23. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

24. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4218l, permitting absence from land to earn money with which to pay for same not exceeding six months per year, held not repealed by Laws 1905, c. 103, p. 159, repealing all conflicting laws and requiring three years residency, former law being not repugnant to latter but merely declares what shall not break continuity of occupancy. Gaddis v. Terrell [Tex.] 110 SW 429. Under Acts 29th Leg. c. 103, p. 163, § 6, purchaser need not reside on either home or additional section within three years of award of latter where he has lived three years on former. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

25. Where there is sale of school land followed by default, abandonment, nonpayment of taxes, notice of forfeiture, proper service, but defective return, proper posting and marking record canceled, lease by state, inquiry to state officials by prospective purchaser followed by resale, actual possession and valuable improvements, assignees of original purchases cannot maintain ejectment. Thayer v. Schaben [Kan.] 98 P 1134; Burgess v. Hixon, 75 Kan. 201, 88 P 1076.

26. Except as changed by statute, deed of commissioner of school lands is not alone evidence of conveyance of title from state, but such parts of record of court proceedings upon which deed is based as show forfeiture of land title thereto in state are necessary as prima facie evidence that deed carried state's title. Feder v. Hager [W. Va.] 63 SE 285. Code 1899, c. 105, § 19, as amended by Acts 1905, c. 42, p. 406 (Code 1906, § 3531), wherein reference is made to such deed as evidence applies only to suits and proceedings under said chapter. Id.

27. Court proceedings introduced to support deed are not evidence that state had title which was thereby conveyed, if they contain no reference to such fact of title. Feder v. Hager [W. Va.] 63 SE 285.

28. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

29. Certificate of occupancy issued by commissioner of General Land office held conclusive of fact of occupancy so far as

§ 6. Fiscal affairs.[31]—See 10 C. L. 1606 *School bonds.*See 10 C. L. 1611—All matters concerning the issuance of school bonds must ordinarily be submitted to the school electors,[32] and after they have expressed their wishes, the board has no discretion but to carry them out.[33] The issue of bonds must be based upon a constitutional tax levy,[34] must mature at the statutory rate,[35] and sufficient provision must be made for interest and sinking fund.[36] The discretion of boards of education with regard to bond issues, will sometimes be controlled by injunction[37] or mandamus in proper cases.[38] The ordinary rules as to the validity of bonds apply.[39] question of allowance of additional section is concerned. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

32. Since act of 1889 (Hurd's St. 1905, c. 122, p. 1826, § 218), it is necessary that voters of district vote upon amount of bonds to be issued and date of their payment before any bonds may be issued or money borrowed to erect school house. People v. School Directors of Dist. No. 248, 139 Ill. App. 620. Under Const. §§ 157, 187 regarding assent of voters to increased tax levy, and maintenance of separate schools, issue of bonds for white schools cannot be enjoined because question of issuance was not submitted to colored voters, and hence not sustained by requisite number of voters, since such questions are determined by white or colored voters alone as they are affected, neither being taxed for support of other's schools. Crosby v. Mayfield [Ky.] 117 SW 316. Such procedure is not discrimination against races under U. S. Const. Id. Priv. Acts 1908, p. 38, c. 31, permitting issuance of bonds for high school, held void under Const. art. 7, § 7, prohibiting municipalities from contracting debt or levying tax, except in case of necessary expenses, unless authorized by electors. Hollowell v. Borden, 148 N. C. 255, 61 SE 638. Held unconstitutional, regardless of fact that bonds could be paid without assessment of special tax, and issuance held not necessary expense. Id. School district bonds issued without first submitting question of issuance to electors, and issued by district under express provisions of act under which it had insufficient qualification to issue them, provisions of act being printed on bonds, are void. State v. School Dist. No. 50 [N. D.] 120 NW 555.

33. Officers of school district are in effect agents of voters and taxpayers, and when district, at regularly called and conducted election, votes to issue bonds of district and from proceeds to build school house, such vote is instruction by principal, and such officers have no discretion as to obeying their instructions. Where officers refused to issue bonds after vote, and entered into stipulation with one seeking to enjoin issuance to dismiss suit admitting allegations of complaint. Schouweiler v. Allen [N. D.] 117 NW 866. Rev. Codes 1905, § 911, providing for issuance of bonds if approved by majority vote, is mandatory. Id.

34. Issuance of bonds based on greater annual tax levy than 20 cents per $100, which levy has been held unconstitutional, will be enjoined. Snyder v. Baird Independent School Dist. [Tex.] 113 SW 521.

35. Under Act Mar. 6, 1907 (St. 1907, c. 47, pp. 93, 94), and Act Mar. 12, 1907 (Acts 1907, c. 59, p. 106) as amended by Act Feb. 8, 1908, § 2, relating to issuance of bonds, district cannot issue bonds maturing at rate exceeding $1,000 per annum. State v. McBride [Nev.] 99 P 705. Cannot issue bonds to mature at rate of $1,000 per annum for 8 years and at rate of $1,500 per annum for eight years thereafter. Id.

36. Under Const. art. 10, § 12 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 287), regarding provision for interest and sinking fund of any indebtedness, estimate for such purposes for bonds sold after but not before time of such estimate is proper, and tax levied thereunder cannot be enjoined because estimate was for interest, etc., on bonds unsold. Black v. Early, 208 Mo. 281, 106 SW 1014.

37. Unwarranted, unauthorized exercise and abuse of authority in submitting question of issuing bonds. McAlexander v. Haviland Village School Dist., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 590.

38. Under Laws 1907, p. 522, regarding issuance of bonds by trustees, trustees cannot be compelled by mandamus to sign contract to lithograph $3,500 of bonds where they consider $2,000 enough and it nowhere appears that bonds can be sold for statutory price, even though electors have authorized issue of $3,500. Lanford v. Drummond, 81 S. C. 174, 62 SE 10. Petition for mandamus to compel borrowing of money to build school house by issuing bonds held defective for failure to allege that district was not indebted to constitutional limit, that money was on hand to build school, or that voters had voted on amount of bonds, etc. People v. School Directors of Dist. N. 248, 139 Ill. App. 620.

39. See Bonds, 11 C. L. 424. Fact that bonds are refunding bonds issued in lieu of presumably valid obligations does not validate their issuance where prohibited by Laws 1887, c. 11, p. 39, § 9. State v. School Dist. No. 50 [N. D.] 120 NW 555. Recital that bonds are issued to refund present indebtedness "as authorized by act of legislature (Laws 1887, p. 39, c. 11), entitled," etc., held not to estop school district from urging defense that bonds were illegally issued even against innocent purchaser. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that school bond sued against was valid and binding upon school district. Wayne County Sav. Bank v. School Dist. No. 5, 152 Mich. 440, 15 Det. Leg. N. 252, 116 NW 378.

Miscellaneous power to expend money and create indebtedness. See 10 C. L. 1613 School money may only be expended for proper purposes,[40] and after it has been properly appropriated for such purposes.[41]

School districts are frequently permitted or required to issue orders [42] to a limited amount,[43] or in anticipation of taxes already levied.[44] Such orders must be authorized at the proper meeting of the board,[45] and must be issued for proper purposes.[46] In some states they are not negotiable,[47] cannot be made payable outside of the state,[48] and are not necessarily void for defects of execution.[49] The burden of showing their invalidity is usually on the one asserting it.[50] School districts may also borrow money where authorized to do so by statute,[51] or, where sanctioned by the proper authority,[52] upon a sufficient showing of necessity.[53] In some states, districts may render themselves liable to other districts for tuition.[54]

40. Tax collector who makes expenditures not required nor authorized by the board is not entitled to reimbursement therefor. Wood v. School Dist. No. 5, 28 R. I. 299, 67 A 65. Tax collector who gives bond with surety company as surety, though not required nor authorized to do so, is not entitled to reimbursement for amount expended therefor. Id.

41. Under Acts 1899, pp. 150-158, c. 105 and amendment thereof in 1901 (Acts 1901, pp. 415, 418, c. 185), power of township trustee to expend township money is limited to cases in which township advisary board has appropriated same for such purposes. State v. Anderson, 170 Ind. 540, 85 NE 17. Trustee is not subject to mandamus to compel transportation of children to school in absence of appropriation therefor. Id.

42. School board or executive committee acting as board has power to create obligations against district and to audit claims and control issuing of orders or warrants, and power to do this carries with it duty to do so where interest of the public is concerned. Laws 1901, c. 160, p. 194, §§ 522-530. Rogers-Ruger Co. v. Brule School Directors [Wis.] 120 NW 849.

43. Indebtedness contracted and incurred for necessary and lawful purposes by district by virtue of organic act (Act May 2, 1890, c. 182, 26 Stat. 81) and laws of territory of Oklahoma prior to taking of first assessment for purposes of territorial and county taxation, is valid if issued within limit of 4 per centum of value of taxable property as ascertained by said assessment, but warrants prior to first assessment issued for such purposes in excess of said 4 per centum limit are void. Ray v. School Dist. No. 9 [Okl.] 95 P 480.

44. R. S. c. 146a, § 2, as amended May 11, 1901, held to authorize school authorities to sell warrants drawn against and in anticipation of taxes already levied for cash, or, in other words, to borrow money to meet necessary expenses of schools, after tax has been levied for said expenses to extent of 75 per cent of such tax levy previously made. Gray v. Peoria School Inspectors, 135 Ill. App. 494. Board of school inspectors of Peoria held to be one of school corporations which, by R. S. ch. 146a, § 2, as amended by Act May 11, 1901, is authorized to issue and dispose of warrants against tax already levied. Id. Fact that board states amount needed and city council levies tax, and hence board only indirectly levies tax, held not to change rule. Id.

45. Evidence held insufficient to establish fact that meetings at which certain orders were issued were special meetings, that only president and secretary were present, or that orders were not properly audited. Rogers-Ruger Co. v. Brule School Directors [Wis.] 120 NW 849. Asking officer whether any meetings were held which he did attend because he had no notice of meeting held insufficient proof of lack of notice. Id.

46. Orders issued to president and secretary are not void in absence of showing for what they were drawn and that they were not drawn for salaries properly allowed officers. Rogers-Ruger Co. v. Brule School Directors [Wis.] 120 NW 849.

47. Orders drawn in anticipation of taxes as provided by R. S. c. 146a, § 2, as amended May 11, 1901. Gray v. Peoria School Inspectors, 135 Ill. App. 494.

48. Orders drawn in anticipation of taxes as provided for by R. S. c. 146a, § 2, as amended May 11, 1901. Gray v. Peoria School Inspectors, 135 Ill. App. 494.

49. Orders drawn in anticipation of taxes as provided by R. S. c. 146a, § 2, as amended May 11, 1901, merely stating that they were "issued in anticipation of taxes of 1905," held not wholly void but defective of execution. Gray v. Peoria School Inspectors, 135 Ill. App. 494. Where orders were improperly made payable out of state, and were imperfectly executed but not wholly void under R. S. c. 146a, § 2, as amended May 11, 1901, providing for issuing orders in anticipation of taxes, they will be presumed to have been issued for proper purposes in absence of contrary allegation, and their payment will not be enjoined. Id.

50. Burden of showing invalidity of school orders is on one asserting invalidity. Rogers v. Brule School Directors [Wis.] 120 NW 852.

51. Acts 1905, p. 507, authorizing certain special school district to borrow not to exceed certain sum, held impliedly repealed by acts 1905, p. 651, authorizing any special school district to borrow for building purposes without limitation. Hampton v. Hickey [Ark.] 114 SW 707. Power to make arrangements for efficient operation of schools conveyed by Pol. Code 1895, § 1363 does not include power to borrow money. Board of Education v. Fudge, 4 Ga. App. 637, 68 SE 154.

52. Discretionary power of trustees of adjoining townships to establish joint school districts and build joint school houses when properly petitioned, subject to appeal to

Taxes and revenues.[See 10 C. L. 1609]—Subject to general constitutional provisions,[55] such as provisions against special legislation,[56] provisions requiring uniformity of taxation,[57] and provisions regulating the rate of taxation,[58] all matters relating to the levy of school taxes, such as the binding effect of the estimate of the school authorities upon the board of tax levy,[59] the validity of the latter's action,[60] county superintendent, and to decide upon location, plan, and maximum cost of such building (Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 6001, 6002a, 6028, 5920; Acts 1901, p. 514, c. 224, amending § 5920) was not in any way limited by advisory board law (Acts 1899, p. 150, c. 105), except that required expenditure must be first sanctioned by board. Acts 1901, p. 415, c. 185, amending Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 8085a, 8085f. Advisory Board of Harrison Tp. v. State, 170 Ind. 439, 85 NE 18.

53. Provision contained in Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8085f, amended by Acts 1901, p. 415, c. 185, for finding by board of existence of public necessity for improvement, is expressly obviated by Acts 1903, p. 431, c. 229. Acts 1903, p. 431, c. 229, held not unconstitutional for defective title, as amending statutes by reference to their title, nor as supplementary to a repealed act. Advisory Board of Harrison Tp. v. State, 170 Ind. 439, 85 NE 18. Under provision of latter act, petition signed by majority of patrons of the two districts, and not by majority of each, is conclusive evidence of emergency required by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8085f, as amended in 1901. Id. Facts averred in complaint held to clearly bring case within Acts 1903, p. 431, c. 229, making petition of majority of patrons of both districts conclusive evidence of emergency, etc. Id.

54. Where directors gave children permission to attend school in adjoining district where they were accepted, and directors of former district paid the annual bills for several years, they were liable for such tuition until withdrawal of their permission was brought to attention of latter district. Town of Wallingford v. Clarendon, 81 Vt. 245, 69 A 734.

55. Acts 1905, p. 425, is not unconstitutional for defect in title, for failure to specify that tax shall be used for instruction of children in elementary branches of English, for failure to provide that schools shall be free, to all, or for failure to provide that schools for races shall be separate, since act in these regards will be construed with reference to existing laws. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. Neither is act unconstitutional as providing that tax shall be imposed on all property in county, since it will be construed in connection with exemption statutes. Id. Act is not unconstitutional as depriving person of property without due process of law in failing to provide for contesting elections held thereunder or for having his rights or interest thereunder passed upon. Id. 2 Laws 1887-88, c. 637, p. 376, special law, authorizing tax for common school district thereby incorporated, is not repealed by subsequent amendment to constitution prohibiting special laws, it not being intended that amendment should be retroactive. Smith v. Simmons, 33 Ky. L. R. 503, 110 SW 336. 2 Laws 1887-88, c. 637, p. 376, incorporating certain school district and providing for tax in addition to common school fund, held not to conflict with constitutional provision requiring uniform system of common schools. Id. School Law of 1903 (P. L. p. 5) is not unconstitutional because it creates an appointive board of estimate, with power to fix amount to be raised by taxation. In re Newark School Board [N. J. Law] 70 A 881.

56. Laws 1907, c. 368, p. 534, providing for levy of special tax for construction, etc., of high school building for Scott county, Kansas, held invalid as special legislation contrary to Const. art. 2, § 17. Deng v. Scott County Board of Com'rs, 77 Kan. 863, 95 P 592.

57. Acts 1905, p. 425, as amended by acts 1906, p. 61, regarding local school district taxation held not unconstitutional as conflicting with Const. art. 8, §§ 3, 4 (Civ. Code 1895, §§ 5908, 5909), as imposing ununiform tax or as establishing new political subdivisions of state, in view of Const. amend. 1903, authorizing local public school taxation. Henslee v. McLarty, 131 Ga. 244, 62 SE 66. Const. art. 5, § 1, limiting poll tax to $2 is inapplicable to special school district created under Revisal 1905, § 4115, which is held to be included in term municipal corporation as used in Const. art. 7, tax in such district being limited to that approved by vote of electors and must be uniform and ad valorem. Perry v. Franklin County Com'rs, 148 N. C. 521, 62 SE 608.

58. Under Const. art. 11, §§ 4, 5, 10, art. 7, § 3, regarding constitution of school districts and school taxes, corporation for school purposes only is not incorporated city or town, and hence Acts 30th Leg. Sp. Laws, c. 6, p. 79, creating special district and authorizing levy of tax exceeding 20 cents per $100, is void so far as tax is concerned. Snyder v. Baird Independent School Dist. [Tex.] 111 SW 723. Under Const. art. 7, § 3, public free school district consisting of village and surrounding territory cannot levy tax in excess of 20 cents per $100. Brewer v. Hall [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 788. Under Const. art. 7, § 3, regarding amount of tax levy in certain districts, independent district incorporated for school purposes only is not exempted from operation of constitutional provision as being incorporated city or town, though district comprises incoporated town and rural territory, and hence election to determine question of additional tax after maximum under constitution had been levied is void. Jenkins v. De Witt [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 610.

59. City council of Peoria held bound to levy such sum for taxes for educational purposes as board of school inspectors fixes, not exceeding statutory limit of such taxation. Peoria special charter. People v. City Council of Peoria, 139 Ill. App. 488. Council cannot cut down either amount or rate of levy. Id. Special charter of Peoria, in force Feb. 20, 1869, held still in force so far as relates to subject of public schools, notwithstanding subsequent adoption by city of Peoria of what property is exempt,[61] the taxation of tracts extending into two districts,[62] the necessity of an election prior to the levy,[63] the sufficient compliance with the preliminaries to the election,[64] the validity of the election returns,[65] and the certificate of the tax voted,[66] the effect of voting an amount in excess of that permitted by statute,[67] the effect of an election held under an unconstitutional statute,[68] the power to rescind action previously taken,[69] the right of the school authorities to en-general act for incorporation of cities. Id. Estimate furnished to city by school board of amount needed to meet expenses of maintenance of schools for year was not controlling on city except to minimum amount provided by statute. Levy over minimum amount held left to discretion of city, and cannot be affected by mandamus. (Acts 1873, p. 73, No. 36). State v. New Orleans, 121 La. 762, 46 S 798. Under Const. art. 9, § 3, regarding division of county into school districts, wherein school is to be maintained at least 4 months, and Revisal 1905, § 4112, regarding levy of school tax, duty of county commissioners to levy tax is peremptory but amount to be levied rests in judgment and discretion unaffected by amount asked for by board of education of district, and hence levy of tax to bring amount desired by board of education cannot be enforced by mandamus. Board of Education of Cherokee County v. Cherokee County Board of Com'rs [N. C.] 63 SE 724.

60. Fact that board of county commissioners acted under misapprehension of legal effect of election returns and levied high school tax for one year will not estop board from claiming proposition was never legally carried in action brought to compel them to levy tax another year. Board of Education v. Klein [Kan.] 99 P 222. Order of commissioners' court for tax held not insufficient to show election was held. Taylor v. Cundiff [Ky.] 118 SW 379.

61. Tax of 10 mills authorized by Const. art. 232 to be levied in aid of public schools is not special assessment, and hence property exempt from taxation by constitution is not subject to it. Louisiana & N. W. R. Co. v. State Board of Appraisers, 120 La. 471, 45 S 394.

62. Under Laws 1894, p. 1235, c. 556, tit. 7, § 63, regulating taxation of tracts of land extending into two school districts, corporation is not person within meaning of law so that it can complain of taxation in each district of proportionate part of its property therein. People v. Marens, 62 Misc. 317, 116 NYS 189.

63. Where election was held on June 18, 1907, adopting law for taxation for school districts under provisions of Acts 1906, p. 61, and complaining parties had previously made their tax returns for state and county purposes, but it was not shown that tax was levied by county authorities prior to election or that day for so doing had arrived, it was not illegal for district school tax to be levied and collected for that year. Cairo Banking Co. v. Ponder, 131 Ga. 708, 63 SE 218.

64. Petition to ordinary held as whole to be petition for county election, and hence order for county election was not void because based on petition for district election. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. In absence of showing to contrary, notices of election will be held to have been properly posted. Taylor v. Cundiff [Ky.] 118 SW 379.

65. Evidence held to authorize finding against contention that returns from certain precincts should be excluded because election was held to place other than lawfully established precincts. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. That registrars, because of lack of sufficient time before election, failed to purge registration list, but furnished to election managers unpurged lists, except at one precinct, where no list was furnished, and that superintendent of election failed to consolidate returns from several precincts promptly at noon next day succeeding election, and received returns from precinct which did not arrive until 2 o'clock, and received returns which had been sent by mail to ordinary and by him opened and delivered to superintendents, are irregularities resulting from failure to observe statutory provisions which are merely directory, and, in absence of any fraud or evidence that persons had voted who were not authorized to vote, or had been deprived of voting who were entitled to vote, and that such votes would have changed result of election, will not be sufficient cause to set aside entire election. Id.

66. Under Code, § 2767, secretary of board of school directors must certify to board of supervisors any tax voted by electors, unless vote is rescinded, and this notwithstanding any action board may take. Kirchner v. Wapsinonoc School Directors [Iowa] 118 NW 51. Fact that secretary in his certificate requested board to levy tax as required by statute held not to invalidate certificate. Id. Clerk's certificate stating that tax has been voted "on taxable property of district" held not nullity as implied intention to tax district's property. Id.

67. Under Code, § 2149, subd. 7, school tax is not void because electors voted larger sum than could be raised in any one year, since statute provides that supervisors shall levy only so much of tax as statute permits. Kirchner v. Wapsinonoc School Directors [Iowa] 118 NW 51.

68. Local school district election to authorize levy, and collection of tax provided for in acts 1905, p. 425, declared unconstitutional, held prior to amendment by Acts 1906, p. 61, will not warrant assessment and collection of tax provided for by amendatory act. Dolvin v. Lewis, 131 Ga. 29, 61 SE 913; Jordan v. Franklin, 131 Ga. 487, 62 SE 673.

69. Under Code, § 2750, as amended by acts 28th Gen. Assem. (Laws 1900, p. 81, c. 104), it is discretionary with board to call meeting to vote to rescind former vote to assess tax for school house. Kirchner v. Wapsinonoc School Directors [Iowa] 118 NW 51. After previous action of school electors in voting certain tax which has been levied force the payment to them of taxes already levied and collected,[70] procedure to contest the levy or collection of taxes,[71] and matters which will be considered in such actions, are governed by local statutes.[72] Such statutes are governed by the ordinary rules of construction.[73]

Property of absentees.—In Maryland funds left by persons presumed to be dead from the continuance of their absence may be administered for the benefit of the schools.[74]

State school funds.[See 10 C. L. 1612]—The basis[75] and prerequisites of the apportionment of state school funds,[76] the purposes for which it may be used,[77] and the recovery back of funds not used are regulated by statute and constitution.[76] and partially collected, school electors have no right to ask for vote to rescind previous action. Id.

70. Where county board pursuant to unconstitutional acts levied taxes for benefit of high school districts, and taxpayers voluntarily paid same, such funds are public funds which may be distributed to school districts for which raised under provisions of subsequent legislation. School Dist. No. 30 v. Cuming County [Neb.] 116 NW 522. County has no vested right to public fund created by levy of taxes for benefit of high school districts under unconstitutional statute, and where it collected and held taxes for benefit of such districts, it cannot question distribution of funds to such districts by subsequent legislation. Id. Payment to school board of taxes for school purposes is not to be postponed until all taxes of particular year are collected but should be turned over from time to time as received. Constitute trust fund payment of which can be enforced. Board of School Directors v. Police Jury [La.] 49 S 5.

71. Held no abuse of discretion to deny injunction sought on ground that railroad property had been omitted from taxation under denial in sworn answer and evidence in case. Cairo Banking Co. v. Ponder, 131 Ga. 708, 63 SE 218. Under Const. § 157, where school was condemned by county superintendent and erection of new building ordered, trustees may levy annual tax until amount is sufficient to build new school, and fact they ultimately contracted to build school for amount in excess of that raised does not render tax void but only indebtedness in excess of amount raised. Trustees of White School Dist. No. 15 v. Cummins, 33 Ky. L. R. 739, 111 SW 286. Taxpayer is not entitled to injunction to restrain entire tax where portion thereof is valid and he failed to tender amount of tax properly due. Black v. Early, 208 Mo. 281, 106 SW 1014.

72. Validity of de facto school district cannot be attacked in suit to restrain collection of taxes levied for payment, etc., of bonds. Black v. Early, 208 Mo. 281, 106 SW 1014. As general rule, courts of equity will not deal with contests of election; but, where statute authorizes tax on property, and provides that law shall become effective in any county or school district only upon election at which application of law should be favored by requisite vote, if after pretended election, levy of tax is attempted, equity will, on appropriate allegations of taxpayer, inquire into validity of election. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41.

73. In view of legislative intent as gathered from entire act of 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 425), as amended by Acts 1906, p. 61, and of language used in amending portion of latter act, word "now" as contained in second line of fourth section in reciting entire act as amended was evidently a clerical error and should read "not." Cairo Banking Co. v. Ponder, 131 Ga. 708, 63 SE 218. Word "town" as used in Priv. Laws 1907, p. 1267, c. 482, § 50, held to have been used with reference to election, required to be held as provided by act and to refer only to portion of town lying within school district and hence that act did not authorize taxing for school purposes persons in town outside school district. McLeod v. Carthage Com'rs, 148 N. C. 77, 61 SE 605.

74. Under Acts 1908, p. 260, c. 125, Code Gen. Pub. Laws 1904, art. 93, § 134, and Baltimore City charter, city's agent held properly appointed administrator of fund left by one formerly resident of city who has not been heard of for more than seven years, to enable its use for benefit of schools. Savings Bank of Baltimore v. Weeks [Md.] 72 A 475. Petition in such case need not allege that there were no creditors or relatives of such supposed deceased. Id.

75. Under Const. 1885, art. 12, § 7, which contemplates apportionment of state school fund upon basis of counties as units, Laws 1905, c. 5381, p. 32, § 1, is unconstitutional as making certain schools with average daily attendance of 80 per cent beneficiaries of act. Santa Rosa County Board of Public Instruction v. Croom [Fla.] 48 S 641.

76. Acts 1907, p. 467, § 12, held to authorize county school commissioner to pay portion of public school fund to trustees of Boynton school system only upon estimate made by board of education of county. McGill v. Osborne, 131 Ga. 541, 62 SE 811.

77. Under Loc. Acts 1898-99, p. 30, Code 1907, §§ 133, 134, 138, 158, Gen. Acts 1907, p. 728, § 3, Code 1907, §§ 133, 134, 138, 158, does not relate to high schools erected under Gen. Acts 1907, p. 728, and board of revenues cannot appropriate county funds to aid in their construction. Kumpe v. Bynum [Ala.] 48 S 55. Appropriation enjoined at instance of taxpayer. Id. Evidence held to show that employment by trustees of professors of sectarian college which had been destroyed by fire was not such use of school funds for sectarian purposes under Const. § 189, as warranted refusal by county superintendent to turn school district funds over to district. McDonald v. Parker, 33 Ky. L. R. 805, 110 SW 810. School taxes received from state by graded common school cannot be used to purchase a lot or erect or furnish a school building but must be used for educational

§ 7. Teachers and instruction.[79] Employment, control and dismissal. See 10 C. L. 1613—Teachers must ordinarily be hired at a regular meeting of the board,[80] for a definite term,[81] by a contract in writing.[82] Only teachers possessing the required certificates[83] properly filed may be hired.[84] The dismissal of teachers is restricted by statute[85] and hearing is sometimes but not always required.[86] The ordinary rules governing measure of damages for breach of contract are applicable.[87]

Salary. See 10 C. L. 1614—In New York the salary of teachers has been fixed by statute[88] with a view to immediate uniformity.[89] Its provisions are inapplicable purposes only. Crabbe v. Graded Common School Dist. Trustees [Ky.] 116 SW 706. Under Const. art. 9, §§ 2, 3, regulating use of revenues of common schools, model training school intended to be established at normal school by Laws 1907, c. 97, p. 181, is not common school and so much of law as provides for apportionment of common school fund in support thereof violates constitution. School Dist. No. 20 v. Bryan [Wash.] 99 P 28.

78. Under Const. § 186, St. 1909, §§ 4375, 4376, 4480, regarding distribution of state school fund, funds paid district but not used during certain year are recoverable from district only after lapse of second year without demand of funds and hence funds should be paid on demand at any time during second year. Crabbe v. Graded Common School Dist. Trustees [Ky.] 116 SW 706.

83. Under Ann. St. 1906, §§ 9766, 9796, regarding necessity of teacher's license to valid contract of employment, requirement is satisfied if teacher has certificate in force when hiring occurs and obtains another extending over term of employment upon expiration of other. Hibbard v. Smith [Mo. App.] 116 SW 487.

84. Under Ann. St. 1906, § 9766, regarding filing of teacher's certificate before attestation of contract of employment by clerk, it is sufficient if certificate be filed after attestation. Hibbard v. Smith [Mo. App.] 116 SW 487.

85. Teacher holding city certificate who was elected for indefinite term held protected from removal by Pol. Code § 1793, except for causes mentioned in § 1791. Barthel v. San Jose Board of Education, 153 Cal. 376, 95 P 892. Election and dismissal of teachers in public schools are not municipal affairs which may be regulated in manner in conflict with that provided by general law by freeholders' charter. Id. Under San Jose charter, art. 9, §§ 5, 13, regarding election, dismissal, etc., of teachers, probationary teacher duly elected for year can be dismissed only on adverse report by classification committee. Id.

86. Board of education may dismiss teacher for lack of qualifications without giving her a hearing. 34 Stat. 321, c. 3446, § 10, does not apply to such cases. United States v. Hoover, 31 App. D. C. 311. 34 Stat. 316, c. 3446, creating board of education for District of Columbia will be liberally construed so as to give board discretion in carrying out its objects. Id. Existence of charges resulting in dismissal of teacher cannot be shown by introduction of letters written third persons by superintendent after dismissal where his letters could not bind the board and were not board's letters. Id.

87. When such contract is disregarded by district, it is teacher's duty to decrease damages by seeking other employment. Byrne v. Independent School Dist. of Struble [Iowa] 117 NW 983. If discharged teacher does not accept other employment, her damages should not be diminished for failure to secure it unless it be shown that by reasonable diligence she might have secured employment of same grade in same locality where she was engaged to teach. Answer held not to state facts sufficient to constitute defense. Id.

88. Teacher employed for term of years held entitled to recover unpaid balance of salary on basis provided for by schedule adopted by board. Eagan v. Board of Education, 115 NYS 165. Statutory provision that no teacher receive more than sum scheduled to be paid for seven years' service unless approved as "fit and meritorious" held void for indefiniteness. Id. Under Laws 1906, p. 11, 31, c. 473, superseding Laws 1898, p. 384, c. 182, § 96, board of education had power to provide for high school of commerce although expenditures for same were not included in estimates contemplated by act of 1898 and its amendments and hence one performing duties of principal is entitled to have board of estimate and apportionment fix his salary as provided by his appointment. People v. Troy Board of Estimate, 115 NYS 907.

89. Laws 1900, c. 751, p. 1607 (N. Y. City Charter § 1091) § 4, regulating salary of teachers and rendering same uniform, held to intend immediate uniformity so that provision therein relative to annual increases did not entitle one whose salary was above to persons not possessed of the requisite certificate [90] and to persons who have not been regularly appointed to the position the salary attached to which is sought.[91] In Ohio a contract stipulating against any charge by the teacher for attending teacher's institute is void as against public policy.[92]

§ 8. Control and discipline of scholars and regulation of attendance.[93]—See 10 C. L. 1616—School authorities are vested with a broad discretion in the government and discipline of pupils,[94] and in the exercise of that discretion may make all needful rules and suspend any pupils for noncompliance therewith.[95] This power has been held to extend to drunkenness and disorderly conduct,[96] refusal to take part in commencement exercises,[97] and under certain circumstances offenses committed outside of school hours and the presence of the teachers,[98] but not to permit the requirement that pupils pay damages for school property accidentally injured or destroyed under penalty of suspension.[99] The action of the school authorities in this regard is final and conclusive [1] unless the person aggrieved [2] can show that they have acted maliciously, oppressively or arbitrarily.[3] minimum to annual increase until salaries of those in class with her had come to equal hers as result of successive annual increments. McHench v. New York City Board of Education, 127 App. Div. 294, 111 NYS 303. Laws 1897, p. 394, c. 378, § 1091, as amended by Laws 1900, p. 1607, c. 751, § 4, relative to salaries of teachers held to entitle teacher to no change until end of year during which act went into effect but that salary when above minimum required by appropriate schedule should be continued to end of year and teacher be then placed in proper schedule provided salary was not thereby decreased. Loewy v. New York City Board of Education, 59 Misc. 70, 112 NYS 4.

90. Greater New York Charter (Laws 1897, p. 404, c. 378, § 1117), relative to permanency of teacher's position, held inapplicable to one whose license expired within current year except for such time as he was licensed. Wood v. New York City Board of Education, 59 Misc. 605, 112 NYS 578. Appointment of teacher as vice-principal subject to his receiving license held subject also to by-law that no one not holding first assistant teacher's license should be appointed assistant principal so that one holding assistant teacher's license only could not recover salary of assistant principal. Id.

91. Under New York Charter (Laws 1901, p. 473, c. 466, §§ 1091, 1101), one acting temporarily as head teacher, but who was not shown to be eligible to appointment as head teacher, and who has never been so appointed, cannot sue to recover salary attached to office of head teacher, though he has continually performed duties of such position. Hazen v. New York City Board of Education, 127 App. Div. 235, 111 NYS 337. Held under Laws 1900, p. 1605, c. 751, that one contracting to render such services as might be required of him and who was employed largely at instructing and somewhat in assisting principal was not vice-principal or first assistant within law so as to be entitled to compensation provided therein for such positions. Wood v. New York City Board of Education, 59 Misc. 605, 112 NYS 578.

94. Courts should not interfere with exercise of such authority unless it has been unreasonably or illegally exercised. Board held not to have abused discretion in suspending pupils causing publication of poem in paper. State v. District Board of School Dist. No. 1, 135 Wis. 619, 116 NW 232.

95. St. 1898, § 439. Rules made by themselves or by teacher with their consent. State v. District Board of School Dist. No. 1, 135 Wis. 619, 116 NW 232. Large discretion is allowed teacher and board within statute in determining what course of conduct on part of pupils is necessary for good of schools. Any conduct on part of pupil tending to demoralize other pupils, interfere with proper and successful management of school, i. e. impair discipline, which teacher and board shall consider necessary for best interest of school may subject offending one to statutory punishment. Kirby's Dig. § 7637. Douglas v. Campbell [Ark.] 116 SW 211.

96. Kirby's Dig. § 7637. Douglas v. Campbell [Ark.] 116 SW 211.

97. Under Ky. St. 1903, §§ 4367, 4473, regulating school discipline, pupil may request to be excused from part assigned to him in commencement exercises, but if principal deems his reasons insufficient and he refuses to take part as commanded he may be suspended where such exercises were annually provided for by trustees as part of regulations. Cross v. Walton Common School Trustees, 33 Ky. L. R. 472, 110 SW 346.

98. School authorities have power to suspend pupil for offense committed outside of school hours, and not in presence of teacher, which has direct and immediate tendency to influence conduct of other pupils while in school room, to set at naught proper discipline of school, to impair authority of teachers and to bring them into ridicule and contempt. Publication of poem in paper held to warrant suspension. State v. District Board of School Dist. No. 1, 135 Wis. 619, 116 NW 232.

suspension of pupil by principal is final and conclusive and cannot be questioned by courts unless they acted arbitrarily or maliciously. Suspension for refusal to take part in commencement services held not arbitrary or malicious. Cross v. Walton Common School Trustees, 33 Ky. L. R. 472, 110 SW 346.

2. It will be presumed that teacher and board have best interests of school at heart, and that they have acted in good faith in exercising authority with which law has clothed them and burden is upon him who calls in question their conduct to show that they have not been actuated by proper motives. Douglas v. Campbell [Ark.] 116 SW 211.

3. Cross v. Walton Common School Trustees, 33 Ky. L. R. 472, 110 SW 346. If teacher and board should through malice, arbitrarily and without reason suspend pupil, pupil would have his remedy by mandamus and parent for damages if any have been sustained. Douglas v. Campbell [Ark.] 116 SW 211. Only requirement necessary to review of dismissal of student from school is that action be so unreasonable and oppressive as to warrant conclusion that action was malicious, unfair or from some improper motive, some motive other than proper enforcement of regulations of school and maintenance of proper discipline. Evidence held insufficient to warrant finding of improper dismissal. Manson v. Culver Military Academy, 141 Ill. App. 250.

SCIRE FACIAS.[30]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[31]

Scire facias is a common-law judicial writ to revive judgments, or to obtain satisfaction thereof from sureties upon bail or other recognizances taken in the proceedings in which the judgment is rendered.[32] It is considered both as a process and declaration, and hence its informalities are properly taken advantage of by demurrer,[33] and it is subject to proper amendment.[34] Appearance and pleading without objection waives the right to insist upon a declaration [35] and objections to the form of the writ,[36] while answering after demurrer to writ has been overruled waives the demurrer.[37]

SEARCH AND SEIZUR

The scope of this topic is noted below.[38]

§ 1. What is an unreasonable search and seizure.[39]—See 10 C. L. 1618—The constitutional inhibition against unreasonable searches and seizures applies exclusively to searches and seizures made through governmental agencies.[40] It applies to executive as well as judicial officers.[41] The entering of private property by officers without a warrant on mere suspicion that a misdemeanor is being committed there is an unreasonable search,[42] but the search of a suspect by police officials,[43] or the entering by sanitary officers into certain places of business during business hours,[44] is not. Search and seizure is available only in the furtherance of public prosecutions.[45]

SEDUCTION.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[49]

§ 1. Nature and elements of the tort.[50]—See 8 C. L. 1871—Where it is held that the gravamen of seduction as a tort is the unlawful intercourse,[51] the use of force does not necessarily negative the legal conception of seduction so far as civil liability is concerned,[52] even where the female herself is the complaining party,[53] and under the same conception of the tort, the previous chastity of the female is also immaterial except upon the question of damages.[54] Where the consent of the female is a material element, it is not necessarily negatived by previous force.[55]

§ 2. Civil remedies and procedure.[56]—See 10 C. L. 1619—An action for seduction may be brought for a minor by a parent or guardian.[57]

§§ 1-6; Dec. Dig. §§ 1-8; 25 A. & E. Enc. L. (2ed.) 147; 19 A. & E. Enc. P. & P. 323; 19 A. & E. Enc. P. & P. 414.

47. No service being had or contemplated other than upon or against the offending thing and the person in whose possession it is found. State v. Hooker [Okl.] 98 P 964.

48. Not sufficient to say at a "place" in possession of defendant. State v. Fezzette, 103 Me. 467, 69 A 1073.

Note: In Velthouse v. Alderink, 153 Mich. 217, 15 Det. Leg. N. 452, 117 NW 76, the majority of the court, after declaring it to be settled that a father may recover for seduction of his daughter, notwithstanding that the act complained of was accomplished by force, several Michigan cases being cited to the proposition, extended this doctrine to the case where the action is by the injured female herself, and in reaching this conclusion the court purported to follow Marshall v. Taylor, 98 Cal. 55, 33 P 867, 35 Am. St. Rep. 144, where it was declared that the force merely aggravated the injury, citing Furman v. Applegate, 23 N. J. Law, 28; Kennedy v. Shea, 110 Mass. 147, 14 Am. Rep. 584; White v. Murtland, 71 Ill. 250, 22 Am. Rep. 100. Carpenter, J., however, dissented from the conclusion reached by the majority on the ground that in the case at bar the act was accomplished wholly by force as distinguished from a case where it is accomplished in part by artifice and in part by force, and on the ground that the declaration itself made out a case of rape as distinguished from seduction, and on this latter ground he distinguished Marshall v. Taylor, supra, which, according to his interpretation, involved merely a variance which was not objected to. He concurred, however, in the affirmance of the judgment for the plaintiff on the ground that declaration made out a case at common law for damages, regardless of the reference to the seduction statute, but the majority of the court refused to hold that the reference to the statute could be disregarded and based its affirmance squarely upon the doctrine above announced.—[Ed.]

Evidence and trial. See 10 C. L. 1619—The rule requiring corroboration applies only to criminal cases.[58]

§ 3. The crime.[59] See 10 C. L. 1619—Persuasion is an element of the crime.[60] In some jurisdictions, previous chastity of the female is also an element,[61] and hence subsequent acts of intercourse do not constitute separate offenses,[62] and limitations run from the first act.[63] Under the South Carolina statute, the seduction must be accomplished by means of deception and promise of marriage.[64] The persuasion or inducement essential to constitute the offense may consist in a promise of marriage alone,[65] but such promise must have been relied on and not have been contingent on the occurrence of a problematic event.[66] The term "unmarried" as used by the statutes means never having been married.[67] The term "virtuous" has reference to physical and not moral status or condition.[68]

§ 4. Indictment and prosecution.[69] See 10 C. L. 1619—All the essential elements of the crime must be alleged,[70] but in some states previous chastity need not be alleged, though unchastity at the time of the act charged is a defense.[71]

Suspension of prosecution by marriage. See 10 C. L. 1620—Some statutes make the suspension contingent on support for a definite time after marriage.[72]

Burden of proof, evidence and instructions. See 10 C. L. 1620—The burden is on the state to prove the offense and its commission on a day within the statutory bar of limitations,[73] and every element of the offense must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.[74] Usually the testimony of the prosecutrix must be corroborated.[75] It is often held that previous chaste character will be presumed.[76]

SEQUESTRATION.[78]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[79]

In Texas. See 10 C. L. 1622—Sequestration will lie when plaintiff makes oath that he fears that the person in possession will injure or waste the property or remove it from the jurisdiction.[80] The writ may be granted although the plaintiff has never been in possession of the property.[81] The affidavit must give a sufficient description,[82] with the value of each item if the property be personal.[83] Where real property is sequestered, it is enough to describe and state the value of the whole number of acres.[84] Several grounds for the issuance of the writ may be alleged conjunctively if they are not inconsistent [85] and if not stated in the alternative.[86] Unless the delay is such as to warrant the inference that conditions have changed, lapse of time between the making of the affidavit and the commencement of suit affords no ground for a motion to quash.[87] In establishing the value of the property sequestered and of its use, the ordinary rules as to evidence apply.[88] A chattel mortgage authorizing the mortgagee to retake possession on breach of condition constitutes a complete defense to a reconvention for damages for making false affidavit and maliciously suing out the writ.[89] The bond in replevin of property sequestered must conform to the statutory requirements with regard to sequestration of real or personal property respectively.[90] A judgment on a bond in sequestration of land, conditioned against damage and for the payment of rents, includes growing and unharvested crops severed from the land during the pendency of the litigation.[91]

In Louisiana. See 10 C. L. 1623—Where it appears that plaintiff has no title nor right to the property, the writ is properly dissolved.[92] The order of dissolution is appealable if the writ was issued to protect property rights.[93] If the defendant

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[95]

§ 1. Nature and extent of right in general.[96]—See 10 C. L. 1624—A set-off is a final demand growing out of an independent transaction, liquidated or unliquidated, not sounding in damages merely, subsisting between the parties at the commencement of the suit.[97] Except as confined to demands of similar nature under statute, it is purely an equitable right.[98] A counterclaim [99] or plea in reconvention [1] has all the characteristics of an independent suit, and must be tested by the ordinary rules relating to jurisdiction.[2] If the case be a proper one, defendant is entitled as a matter of right to plead and prove his counterclaim,[3] and such right is not defeated by the fact that a third party has a lien on the cause of action.[4]

*Equitable set-off.*See 10 C. L. 1624—Where no relief can be had at law, equity will order a set-off if justice requires it,[5] but facts constituting a complete legal defense cannot be made the basis for an equitable counterclaim.[6] Equity will grant relief

94. Under Code Prac. art. 279, providing that property sequestered may be delivered to defendant if proper bond is furnished within 10 days, and that if he fail to do so, the plaintiff has the same right, where defendant fails to file bond within 10 days, the right became exclusive in plaintiff, regardless of order to show cause why defendant should not be permitted to do so. Hecker v. Bourdette, 121 La. 467, 46 S 575.

95. Set-off of judgments (see Judgments, 12 C. L. 408) and effect of failure to assert set-off (see Former Adjudication, 11 C. L. 1537) are treated elsewhere.

In summary proceedings to obtain possession of premises for nonpayment of rent, it was error to disregard tenant's defenses set up by way of counterclaim for goods sold landlord to knowledge of assignee of the rents. Costello v. Seidenberg, 110 NYS 924. Held that evidence of damage for withheld possession set up as counterclaim in action for rent should have been submitted to jury. Bailey v. Krupp, 59 Misc. 459, 110 NYS 994.

4. Defendant's right to set off judgment recovered by attaching creditor on merits not defeated by lien for attorney's fees for plaintiff in action on attachment bond. State v. U. S. Fidelity & Guar. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1081.

5. Insolvency of plaintiff. Willson v. Williams, 108 Md. 522, 70 A 409. Set-off allowed of mutual credits in suit upon promissory note, since, under strict rules of law, justice could not be effectuated. Tuttle v. Bisbee [Iowa] 120 NW 699.

6. In suit against surety on bond of trustee in bankruptcy, surety could not set up by way of equitable counterclaim that it was where there are mutual credits between the parties founded on the existence of some debt due by the crediting party to the other,[7] although not constituting a legal counterclaim nor seeming within the statute of set-off.[8] Insolvency is a distinct ground of equitable set-off,[9] but such set-off will not be allowed if it creates a preference as to the other creditors.[10] The debtor of an insolvent cannot set off claims acquired after the execution of the assignment.[11] A wrongdoer who has in good faith taken goods in a crude state and enhanced their value may set off such value in suit for wrongful taking.[12] Expenses incurred in extinguishing an outstanding title cannot be offset by the vendee as against the purchase price where he is estopped from asserting such title.[13]

Statutory set-off and counterclaim. See 10 C. L. 1624.—It is generally provided that a counterclaim or set-off must be either a cause of action arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint as the basis of the plaintiff's claim [14] or connected with the subject of the action,[15] or, in an action on contract, any other cause of ac-not bound by decision of federal court in bankruptcy proceeding, since such defense was good at law. Cohen v. American Surety Co., 129 App. Div. 166, 113 NYS 375.

7. Total items of each year's services rendered by maker of note properly applied as credit on note on last day of each year, note providing for 8 per cent interest on interest not paid at maturity. Tuttle v. Bisbee [Iowa] 120 NW 699.

8. In suit by insolvent nonresident upon joint promissory note, defendants could set off individual claims although not joint. Piotrowski v. Czerwinski [Wis.] 120 NW 268. Such rights may be the proper subject for equitable counterclaim, under Prac. Act 1879 (Laws 1878-79, p. 43, c. 83, § 5), although not founded on any debt which could be called "mutual" under definitions established under statutes. Hubley Mfg. & Supply Co. v. Ives [Conn.] 70 A 615.

9. Judgment for cases due insolvent set off against debt not reduced to judgment claimed by adverse party. Willson v. Williams, 108 Md. 522, 70 A 409. Shareholder in insolvent corporation may, when sued for his liability for unpaid stock aside from suit for accounting in behalf of all creditors, set off a claim against the corporation for money loaned to it. Austin-Powder Co. v. Commercial Lead Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 67. Set-off of mutual indebtedness may be had where one of parties becomes insolvent, although amount sought to be canceled by set-off not due. Brown v. Sheldon State Bank [Iowa] 117 NW 289. A surety company sued by an assignee of principal for the recovery of money deposited with it as collateral could, after judgment against it upon another bond, set off such deposit against assignee's claim. Sullivan v. Bankers' Surety Co., 59 Misc. 54, 112 NYS 173.

10. In suit by trustee in bankruptcy to recover assets preferentially transferred, defendant was not entitled to offset money paid as guarantor of bankrupt's notes, since under facts it would result in giving the very preference which act is intended to prevent. Moody v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 233.

11. Would enable him to acquire preference to full extent of claim. Richardson v. Anderson [Md.] 72 A 485.

12. One who in good faith had felled trees not included in his lease and manufactured cross ties from them could recover enhanced value in set off. Milltown Lumber Co. v. Carter, 5 Ga. App. 344, 63 SE 270. Same rule applies if defendant not original trespasser but has innocently bought from trespasser. He may have value he himself has added and value added by vendor if latter has acted in good faith. Id.

13. Estoppel by knowledge of outstanding title at time of purchase and by relation of landlord and tenant. De Steagner v. Pittman [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 481.

14. Claim for value of services performed in making collections properly set off against claim for advances made to traveling salesman, although no compensation agreed on for such collection. French, Finch & Co. v. Hicks [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 691. Cutting of other trees than those included in contract or negligent cutting, injuring defendant's fencing, were matters arising out of transaction sued on and connected with subject of action under Civ. Code Prac. § 96. Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith [Ky.] 118 SW 307. In suit for balance due on goods, defendant might properly plead in reconvention that plaintiff had received land in part payment, together with abstract of title which he had converted to his own use. Rev. St. 1895, art. 755. Hamilton v. Dismukes [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 1181. In action for sequestration of mules claimed by plaintiff, and for their rental value while in defendant's possession, defendant could properly plead in reconvention a breach of contract by plaintiff in not allowing him to carry out grading contract for which he bought the mules from plaintiff. Bateman v. Hipp [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 971.

15. Counterclaim for price of sewing machines admissible under Revisal 1905, § 481, in suit for damages for defendant's failure to furnish successful agent for resale of machines. John Slaughter Co. v. Standard Mach. Co., 148 N. C. 471, 62 SE 599. In action by one joint tort feasor against the other for reimbursement for money paid to person damaged, held that defendant's counterclaim for reimbursement against plaintiff for money paid to another party injured by same cause was one directly connected with subject of action set forth in complaint. Fulton County Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hudson River Tel. Co., 130 App. Div. 343, tion also on contract and existing at the commencement of the action,[16] but only in the latter case is it necessary that the counterclaim be due when the action is begun.[17] Where the cause of action arises out of the same transaction, it is immaterial whether plaintiff's cause of action is in tort or contract.[18] The statutory right of set-off is confined to demands or claims of a similar nature.[19]

Recoupment.[See 10 C. L. 1626]—In order that recoupment may lie, the cross claim must arise out of or be connected with the contract[20] or transaction which constitutes the plaintiff's cause of action,[21] and can be availed of only to that extent.[22] Damages for failure to carry out the contract sued on may properly be determined under a plea in recoupment.[23] While a plea of recoupment alone is equivalent to an admission that plaintiff has a cause of action, a mere notice of recoupment coupled with a plea of nonassumpsit does not have such effect.[24]

§ 2. To be available as a set-off or counterclaim, a demand must, ordinarily, have been a vested and subsisting cause of action at the time of the commencement of plaintiff's suit.[25]—[See 10 C. L. 1629]—The cause of action must have accrued at the time of the commencement of plaintiff's suit,[26] or concurrently therewith.[27] Where

113 NYS 22. In action for balance due on partition of land between tenants in common, damages for breach of independent contract to keep premises in repair could not be set up as counterclaim under Kirby's Dig. § 6099, providing that counterclaim must arise out of transaction set forth in complaint, or be connected with subject of action. Mitchell v. Moore [Ark.] 112 SW 216. Where only connection between two causes of action is that each grew out of transactions concerning same tract of land, it is not sufficient as basis for counterclaim. Id.

16. Counterclaim for price of sewing machines admissible under Revisal 1905, § 481, providing that where suit is on contract any other cause of action in contract may be pleaded, in suit for damages by vendee for defendant's failure to furnish honest agent for resale of machines. John Slaughter Co. v. Standard Mach. Co., 148 N. C. 471, 62 SE 599. Costs awarded against plaintiff in former trials properly pleaded as counterclaim under Code Civ. Proc. § 501. Braun v. Finger, 113 NYS 573.

17. Counterclaim of instalment of purchase price of sewing machines sold to plaintiff available in action ex delicto founded upon defendant's failure to furnish honest agent for resale of machines, although such instalment fell due after commencement of action. Revisal 1905, § 481, subs. 1. John Slaughter Co. v. Standard Mach. Co., 148 N. C. 471, 62 SE 599.

19. Civ. Code 1895, §§ 3996, 4944. Geer v. Cowart, 5 Ga. App. 251, 62 SE 1054. Counterclaim which does not arise out of, or is not connected with, the subject-matter upon which the complaint is based, is bad on demurrer for want of facts although the facts set forth might have constituted a good defense if pleaded by way of answer. State v. Spencer [Ind. App.] 86 NE 492.

20. On suit upon promissory note, damages arising out of plaintiff's breach of independent contract to extend time not pleadable in recoupment. Jester v. Bainbridge State Bank, 4 Ga. App. 469, 61 SE 926.

21. Defendants could not recoup against purchase price for husker failure to furnish pea-hulling attachment where husker was sold by company and contract therefor made with it, and pea-hulling attachment was sold by plaintiff under independent contract with him. Hinchman v. Johnson, 108 Md. 661, 71 A 424. Damages for delay in delivering books bought from plaintiff may be set up in recoupment in action for purchase price. Roberts-Manchester Publishing Co. v. Wise, 140 Ill. App. 443.

22. Defendant, sued for purchase price of certain furniture, could not recoup for damages arising through plaintiff's failure to make prompt delivery of other furniture, bought at same time, it appearing that contract of purchase was severable and not entire. Barlow Mfg. Co. v. Stone, 200 Mass. 158, 86 NE 306.

23. In action by subcontractor to recover on contract for construction work, if defendant had suffered damage on account of plaintiff's breach of the contract a plea of recoupment is the procedure by which defendant may have his damages considered. Poull & Co. v. Foy-Hays Const. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 785. Such plea may be maintained against partnership, although contract was entered into and partially carried out by one of members before partnership was formed (Posey & Co. v. West Const. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 402), even though action by partnership purports to be upon a quantum valebat, the material, however, having been delivered and received pursuant to the contract (Id.).

Held to have accrued: Judgments that are subsisting claims against plaintiff when acquired by defendant may be offset by him the counterclaim arises out of the same transaction, it is sufficient if it is due when filed.[28] It is only where the counterclaim is one in contract that the demand must be due when suit is commenced.[29] A statute requiring plaintiff to pay all damages arising from an unjustifiable seizure of mortgaged property does not change the rule.[30]

§ 3. Demands must be mutual, and the parties must stand in the same right and capacity.[31]—See 10 C. In suit for rent, where lease contained absolute obligation to make payment on 1st of month in advance, held that, if premises were rendered untenantable by fire, suspension of rent contemplated by lease might have been set up as counterclaim if such condition existed when next payment of rent was due. Einstein v. Tutelman, 59 Misc. 462, 110 NYS 1025. Plaintiff brought suit to enforce specific performance of clause in contract for release of obligations of maintenance of defendants. Held, plaintiff having breached contract before commencement of suit, defendants could set up such breach and enforce rescission by way of counterclaim. Mootz v. Petraschefski, 137 Wis. 315, 118 NW 866. Plaintiff's assignor having agreed to release certain stranded vessels, under contract whereby insurer would be saved from damage and not merely indemnified against loss, latter, when sued for contract price of services, could counterclaim for damages sustained by reason of delay in releasing boats, though payment had not been made to owner. Klauck v. Federal Ins. Co., 131 App. Div. 519, 115 NYS 1049.

Held not to have accrued: Counterclaim for damages arising out of wrongful issuance of attachment cannot be pleaded in answer to complaint in original action, there being no cause of action until writ dissolved. Veysey v. Bernard, 49 Wash. 571, 95 P 1096. Debtor of assignor for benefit of creditors cannot offset his liability as accommodation endorser on note to trust estate not yet due; otherwise if due when assignment made. Richardson v. Anderson [Md.] 72 A 485. In action to evict tenant for nonpayment of rent, held that tenant could not set off, against rent that had already accrued, damages arising from having to abandon premises by orders of tenement house department. Kressner v. Manganaro, 114 NYS 889. Evidence held to show that defendant had no basis for counterclaim for work and services set up in suit to recover money already paid by plaintiff for machinery to be constructed by defendant, it appearing that defendant had not fulfilled his contract. Vollmer v. Hayes Mach. Co., 129 App. Div. 426, 114 NYS 446. Cause of action set up in counterclaim held not to have accrued where it was based on damages for plaintiff's conversion before sale of grain covered by chattel mortgage given to him by defendant, conversion not taking place until after plaintiff had commenced foreclosure proceedings. Strehlow v. McLeod [N. D.] 117 NW 525. Judgment recovered by garnishee against debtor's estate could not be set off where it had been recovered subsequent to garnishment. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co. [Cal.] 100 P 242. Judgment for damages for injury to skins, for labor upon which suit was brought, not existing at commencement of action, could not be interposed as counterclaim. Rosenfeld & Co. v. Solomon, 61 Misc. 238, 113 NYS 723. In action for work and labor performed in dying skins, defendants could not, under Mun. Ct. Act, § 151, subd. 2, providing for counterclaims arising on contract and existing at commencement of action, interpose judgment recovered for damages done to such skins, although counterclaim was interposed before judgment recovered. 27. Cause of action stated in counterclaim, based upon plaintiff's breach of contract not to sue on promissory note, held to have arisen concurrently with plaintiff's act in bringing suit, and consequently maintainable as counterclaim. Hall v. Parsons, 105 Minn. 96, 117 NW 240.

28. Promissory note could properly be pleaded as counterclaim, although it was not due when action was commenced, but became due before answer was filed. Code Civ. Proc. § 437, subd. 1. California Canneries Co. v. Pacific Sheet Metal Works [C. C. A.] 164 F 978.

29. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 438, providing that counterclaim may be pleaded when it arises out of same transaction or is connected with subject of action, or where it arises on contract where plaintiff's claim is also on contract existing at commencement of plaintiff's action. California Canneries Co. v. Pacific Sheet Metal Works [C. C. A.] 164 F 978.

30. Rev. Code 1905, § 7515, relating to conditions of undertaking required to be given by plaintiff before seizure of mortgaged property, and providing that plaintiff pay all damages which defendant may sustain by reason of unjustifiable seizure, in no way changes rule that counterclaim is restricted to cause of action in existence when action commenced. 33. Claim on certificate of deposit representing money borrowed against insolvent action,[34] and must be brought in consequence of plaintiff's demand,[35] but, where separate judgments may be had, a counterclaim based upon a separate contract between several plaintiffs and one defendant may be pleaded.[36] That a third party has assumed to pay part of the debt does not prevent a set-off of the whole amount,[37] but a joint note of plaintiff and a third person cannot be set off, although the third person is surety merely.[38] A debt accruing to one in his individual capacity cannot be pleaded against a debt due from him as trustee,[39] nor can claims held by the same person in different representative capacities be set off against each other.[40] An administrator may set off claims accruing during his decedent's lifetime,[41] and one sued for a debt by the administrator may set up damages consequent upon intestate's death.[42] A surety may, with the consent of his principal, set up a debt due the latter.[43] When the action is brought by the assignee, claims against the assignor may be pleaded [44] to the extent of the interest assigned,[45] but claims bank and claim of insolvent's receiver for amount owing by claimant on open account, held mutual and might be set-off against each other. Brown v. Sheldon State Bank [Iowa] 117 NW 289. Judgment for costs and open account not reduced to judgment are obligations of same kind or quality. Willson v. Williams, 108 Md. 522, 70 A 409. Plaintiff brought suit to recover for boarding defendant's horses, defendant set up damage to his wagons through plaintiff's failure to furnish suitable place for their accommodation. Held, that relation of bailor and bailee of wagons existed and that damage resulting from breach of contract would be set-off. Van Horn v. New York Pie Baking Co., 110 NYS 964. Underwriters sued by wrecking company for contract price of salvage services were not entitled to counterclaim for owner's damages for delay in floating vessels, contract with wrecking company disclosing neither benefit to, nor interest on part of owner. Klauck v. Federal Ins. Co., 111 NYS 1037.

34. Individual demand of one defendant for damages occasioned by plaintiff's negligence in making collection of certain notes not available in set-off against plaintiff's joint demand for legal services against two defendants. Priest v. Dodsworth, 235 Ill. 613, 85 NE 940. Counterclaim for tortious injury to child would not avail defendant wife in suit for wages due servant, since right to child's services and right to sue for their loss belongs to father exclusively. Weiss v. Rosenbaum, 115 NYS 121. St. 1907, p. 706, c. 372, providing that when defendant seeks affirmative relief against any party to action relating to transaction he may file cross complaint, held not to entitle guarantor of promissory note to bring in coguarantors and have contribution between them determined. Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel [Cal. App.] 101 P 31.

35. Reconventional demand not available when brought contingently against plaintiff's vendor in suit on warranty where vendor had made no claim against defendant. Andrews v. Sheehy, 122 La. 464, 47 S 771.

36. In foreclosure of mechanics' lien, counterclaim based upon separate contract between plaintiffs and defendant could properly be pleaded under Code Civ. Proc. 3416, providing for separate deficiency judgments. Valett v. Baker, 129 App. Div. 514, 114 NYS 214.

37. Costs awarded to insolvent party could be set off against such party's claim to amount not reduced to judgment but admitted to be due, although codefendant had assumed to pay part of such costs. Willson v. Williams, 108 Md. 522, 70 A 409.

38. Defendant cannot be compelled to set off against plaintiff's demand, joint note of plaintiff and another, although it is proven that plaintiff is principal and third person merely surety. Cross v. Gall [W. Va.] 64 SE 533. Section 3890, Code 1906, has no application to any case except joint suit against principal and sureties particularly covered thereby. Id.

39. Plaintiff as lessor of mine had no right to retain in its possession trust funds belonging to defendant lessee consisting of proceeds of ore previously mined, in order that it might off-set against such funds an amount of damages alleged to be due it for violation of terms of lease. Florence-Goldfield Min. Co. v. First Judicial Dist. Ct. [Nev.] 97 P 49.

40. Maker of promissory note held by receiver of insolvent bank has no right to set off deposit in bank standing in his name as executor. Stasel v. Daugherty, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 424.

41. Defendant could offset claim for services performed for plaintiff's decedent against claim for money loaned, since rights of other creditors not prejudiced, as that portion of debt which was paid in life time of deceased cannot be regarded as an asset of the estate. Printy v. Cahill, 235 Ill. 534, 85 NE 753.

42. One sued by administrator on note and mortgage made to decedent could set off damages caused to him through death of administrator's intestate and consequent failure to perform contract for services as dentist in defendant's office, it not appearing that defendant could have made as favorable terms with equally skillful dentist. Mendenhall v. Davis [Wash.] 100 P 336.

43. Failure of title to principal as to part of property, for sale of which injunction bond forming basis of suit was given. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Walker [Ala.] 48 S 600.

44. Loss sustained by employer through employe's neglect may properly be counterclaimed in suit by employe's assignee for wages. Sand v. Kenney Mfg. Co., 113 NYS 972. In action for money deposited in against third persons, not parties to the assignment, cannot be set off against him.[46] A claim against a firm, of which plaintiff was formerly a member, cannot be set off where the suit is brought by the plaintiff in his individual capacity,[47] although an individual sued by partners may plead a claim against them to the extent that the claim accrued while the right thereto remained in the firm as such.[48]

§ 4. To admit of set-off or counterclaim the main action must be similar in form and remedy to that required for the other.[49]—See 10 C. L. 1627—Unliquidated damages cannot be set off against a claim founded upon contract,[50] nor against a liquidated claim,[51] unless the law provides a pecuniary standard for its measurement.[52] A claim arising ex delicto cannot ordinarily offset one arising ex contractu [53] or vice versa,[54] unless both causes of action are incident to the same transaction,[55] in which case it is immaterial whether the cause of action sought to be counterclaimed arises out of contract or tort.[56] A cause of action arising on conescrow to pay certain water rents on understanding that balance was to be applied on trustee's claim for services, held that in action by subsequent assignee of fund defendant could set up his rights under contract as to balance of fund by way of counterclaim. Natella v. Primstein, 114 NYS 342.

45. In action by assignee of notes executed by defendant to third party, defendant was not entitled to recover upon his counterclaim against assignor any greater sum than amount of notes with interest. Price v. Gatliff's Ex'rs, 33 Ky. L. R. 324, 110 SW 332.

46. Defendants, sued for money advanced to their employe to be used for their benefit, could not counterclaim against shipbrokers who had helped to procure advancement of money for misdeeds, it not appearing that plaintiff claimed as assignee through broker but in an independent cause of action. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Sloman, 194 N. Y. 506, 87 NE 811.

47. In suit by attorney for services, defendant could not set off claim against firm for printing. Cahill v. Dellenback, 139 Ill. App. 320. Depends on actual facts; and immaterial that defendant had no notice of dissolution of partnership. Id.

48. Where plaintiff brought suit on note for threshing machinery given by defendant, discounted by plaintiff's firm and later acquired by plaintiff who was member of firm, defendant could under Code Civ. Proc. § 106 (Cobbey's St. 1907, § 1109), set off his claim under contract with firm for sale of other machinery to extent that such claim had accrued at time firm owned note. Fish v. Sundahl [Neb.] 118 NW 82.

52. Set-off based upon failure of plaintiff to comply with covenants in deed providing for the supply of certain apparatus to be used in mine sold held not open to objection that damages were unliquidated, law giving pecuniary standard for their measurement. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Walker [Ala.] 48 S 600.

53. Civ. Code 1895, §§ 3996, 4944. Geer v. Cowart, 5 Ga. App. 251, 62 SE 1054. Claim in tort for damages sustained by reason of annoying suits and malicious prosecutions could not be set-off in action on contract for goods sold, although such actions grew out of same subject-matter as that upon which plaintiff's suit was founded. Brash v. Ehrman [Fla.] 47 S 937.

54. Defendants, when sued for wages due servant, could not counterclaim for tortious injury to their child. Weiss v. Rosenbaum, 115 NYS 121.

55. Where plaintiff brought suit for wrongful interference with easement to take away timber from defendant's land, defendant could not plead as counterclaim that plaintiff had cut timber, not sold, on another tract and under violaton of a contract not sued on by plaintiff. Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith [Ky.] 118 SW 307. Such tort might be waived and claim pleaded as set-off where only value of timber is claimed. Id. In replevin for horse held by defendant for keep, defendant might properly set up in defense his justifiable claim for sum due him as liveryman bailee, but he could not interpose as counterclaim another action on contract. Campbell v. Abbott, 60 Misc. 93, 111 NYS 782. It has long been settled that to avoid multiplicity of actions a defendant, when sued upon contract, may file counterclaim, even though it be in nature of tort arising out of same transaction. Caraway v. Kentucky Refining Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 189.

56. Damages by reason of wrongful taking of threshing machine properly counterclaimed on action for purchase price. Northwestern Port Huron Co. v. Iverson [S. D.] 117 NW 372. Damages for failure to deliver tomatoes according to contract properly counterclaimed in replevin by plaintiff for tomatoes delivered but not paid for. Code Civ. Proc. § 605. Howard v. Haas, 131 Mo. App. 499, 109 SW 1076.

tract may be offset by a claim ex contractu, although founded upon the commission of a tort.[57] A cause of action founded on tort is not usually allowed as a counterclaim to another cause of action founded on tort.[58]

§ 5. Pleading and practice.[59]—See 10 C. L. 1628—The defendant is entitled to file a counterclaim at the time he files his answer.[60] It is not necessary that the answer in express terms designate the counterclaim as such, if it appears that it was so intended.[61] A pleading may serve both as a counterclaim and as an answer where it is filed as the separate pleading of several defendants,[62] but, where allegations which may constitute both a defense and a counterclaim are by express nomination, pleaded as a defense only, they must be treated as such.[63] The plea of set-off or counterclaim must contain the substance of a declaration [64] and must be tested by the rules applicable thereto.[65] It must not be pleaded contingently or hypothetically,[66] but affirmatively,[67] setting forth plainly the nature and extent of the claim.[68] If the statute requires it to allege that it rises out of the transaction

57. Judgment procured by defendant's assignor may be set-off against claim on bond for wrongful attachment, since such claim is one ex contractu, although founded on commission of tort. State v. U. S. Fidelity & Guar. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1081.

58. In action for false representations whereby plaintiff was induced to pay defendant a certain sum, latter could not, under Kirby's Dig. 6098, set up as counterclaim based upon wrongful arrest of defendant on charge of obtaining money under false pretenses and embezzlement. Under Code, it is improper to plead counterclaim by using phrase "by way of counterclaim;" it should be pleaded directly. Stroock Plush Co. v. Talcott, 129 App. Div. 14, 113 NYS 214.

62. Pleading contained but one statement of fact, facts as set forth purporting to be pleaded by each defendant for himself, one demanding judgment for damages, the others for costs. Held, pleading good as counterclaim in favor of the one so pleading it. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Rudy [Ind. App.] 87 NE 555.

63. Allegations pleaded as "second and separate defense" could not be treated as counterclaim, especially as question turned upon want of reply, although prayer was for affirmative relief. Ortiz v. Cornell, 116 NYS 89.

64. Although Code 1907, p. 1202, form 37, enlarges subject of set-off, it does not relieve defendant from setting up in his plea an indebtedness from plaintiff to him. Light v. Henderson [Ala.] 48 S 588.

65. Held sufficient: Counterclaim, in suit for price of lumber sold under repudiated contract, not defective in failing to allege defendant's willingness to perform, there being no obligation to perform after repudiation. Holliday-Klotz Land & Lumber Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 436. Where defendant was a citizen of Connecticut, and plaintiff a Massachusetts corporation sued on judgment rendered by a Rhode Island court, defendant could under Practice Act 1879 (Laws 1878-9, p. 43, c. 83, § 5), counterclaim for unliquidated damages for breach of contract. Hubley Mfg. & Supply Co. v. Ives [Conn.] 70 A 615.

Held insufficient: Allegations of fact in counterclaim against claim for services in stabling defendant's horses held not sufficient to state cause of action for money illegally paid to plaintiff. Armstrong v. St. Louis County Com'rs, 103 Minn. 1, 114 NW 89. Averment that former partner had received partnership assets, for which he had not accounted to one who was sued in replevin by vendor of engine and boiler, not sufficient averment to show such liability as partner in possession of funds as would make it available in set-off. Eureka Knitting v. Snyder, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 336. Plea, seeking set-off for value of certain personal property turned over to plaintiff, demurrable in not alleging that property belonged to defendant. Light v. Henderson [Ala.] 48 S 588. Plea seeking set-off for value of certain personal property to plaintiff but averring no indebtedness for same is demurrable Id. In replevin action for piano, defendant could not maintain counterclaim based upon fraud in sale, where equitable relief of cancellation of notes for purchase price was payed in justice court, justice having no equitable jurisdiction. Small v. Speece, 131 Mo. App. 513, 110 SW 7.

67. In foreclosure of mechanic's lien damages, at rate per day fixed by contract, for each day defendant was kept out of possession, could not be recovered in absence of affirmative plea. Steltz v. Armary Co. [Idaho] 99 P 98.

68. Contractor garnisheed set up that defendant subcontractor was indebted to garnishee for damages incurred in building a certain railway line, but failed to definitely set forth in the complaint, or is connected with the subject of the action, it is demurrable if it fails [69] to do so. If the counterclaims are in fact separately stated, they need not so allege,[70] but unless a counterclaim is interposed as an answer to the entire complaint, it must distinctly refer to the cause of action which it is intended to answer,[71] and, where no such statement is made, it must be assumed that it is pleaded as a complete defense and must be tested as such.[72] When off-set is set up by notice, a former adjudication of the claim sought to be set off cannot be pleaded.[73] Unless set-off or counterclaim is pleaded no proof thereof can be made,[74] but in a proper case, if evidence is introduced without objection, a set-off may be adjudged.[75] Objections to the form of the counterclaim should be made by demurrer or replication.[76] Where the counterclaim is not properly itemized,[77] or if the notice of set-off is deficient, the plaintiffs must move before trial for a more specific bill of particulars,[78] but objection to the sufficiency of the notice of set-off cannot first be raised on appeal.[79] A plea of recoupment may be withdrawn as a matter of right at any time before the publication of the verdict.[80] It is within the discretion of the court to allow plaintiff to dismiss his suit after notice of set-off has been filed.[81] The right to a set-off cannot be determined on the hearing of a motion for an order to tax costs.[82] When a plea of set-off is accompanied by a state claim or fix amount. Held insufficient. Monroe Grocer Co. v. Perdue & Co. [La.] 48 S 1002.

74. Defendant could not prove right to additional credits in suit on notes where no set-off, counterclaim, or payment was pleaded. Rev. St. 1895, art. 1266. Richey Grocery Co. v. Warnell [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 SW 419. Failure to plead breach of warranty as counterclaim in suit for price of goods. Wilmerding v. Strouse, 112 NYS 1091. Instruction that defendant be allowed expenses and brokerage fees for transfer of land in which he had defrauded plaintiff properly refused, not being pleaded. Jameson v. Kempton [Wash.] 100 P 186. In quantum meruit for value of certain mantels and materials furnished defendant, it was error to permit recovery by defendant of damages sustained by him on account of defective workmanship, such counterclaim not being pleaded. Central Mantel Co. v. Thaler, 133 Mo. App. 86, 113 SW 220.

75. While set-off must be specially pleaded, and evidence in support of it not admissible unless so pleaded, when such evidence is introduced without objection, and right to recover is not confined by the prayers to the pleadings and evidence, the jury, or court sitting as jury, may find the set-off in defendant's favor. Richardson v. Anderson [Md.] 72 A 485. After plaintiff's evidence had been introduced on appeal in suit brought in justice court, defendant offered to prove set-off which had not been pleaded either in justice court or in circuit court. Held, evidence thereof should have been admitted, adverse party not having asked for bill of particulars. Cook v. Baker, 137 Ill. App. 401.

81. Where matter of set-off had already been decided in another court adversly to defendant, it was no abuse of discretion for court to allow him to dismiss his case and to carry set-off with it. Menke v. Barnhart, 137 Ill. App. 223. Where defendant based set-off upon contract for services but failed to show that contract was fully performed on his part, and court of own motion offered leave to withdraw plea of set-off, mere fact that defendant moved to be allowed to introduce evidence of a quantum meruit which motion was refused, did not justify court in subsequently refusing plea to be withdrawn. Cooper v. Andrews & Co., 137 Ill. App. 334.

plea of the general issue to the plaintiff's entire claim, the set-off does not operate as an admission of the correctness of the plaintiff's account.[83] A general denial to the counterclaim puts in issue the facts upon which it is based.[84] Where the matter of recoupment grows out of the same transaction upon which the suit is brought, the recoupment may be proven under the general issue.[85] The burden is upon the defendant to prove his set-off [86] with detail and precision [87] by sufficient evidence.[88] That a tender of part of the amount claimed is made does not preclude defendant from setting up any counterclaim he may have.[89] Waiver is a defense was counterclaim.[90] The offsetting of defendant's claim by way of counterclaim is a complete bar to a subsequent action based upon such claim.[91] Where the amount of the claim and the amount of the counterclaim are equal, an affirmative judgment for defendant for the amount of the counterclaim and for costs is improper,[92] and it is error to give judgment for the full amount of the counterclaim where plaintiff has established his claim which exceeds the amount of the counterclaim.[93]

SEWERS AND DRAINS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[94]

§ 1. State and municipal authority and control.[95] See 10 C. L. 1631—The construction of sewers by a municipality may be authorized by statute,[96] and legislative enactments, such as those providing for the connection of improved premises with the public sewer,[97] or authorizing one municipality to invade the territory of another to dispose of sewage,[98] are a proper exercise of the police power. Such statutes must conform to constitutional limitations.[99] A sewer is usually considered a public utility within the meaning of constitutional provisions permitting a debt in excess of the usual limitation where the purchase of public utilities is involved.[1] The authority of trustees of a district created for the disposal of sewage is to be determined by a construction of the act.[2] The right to construct and

L. 1442), public works and improvements in general, including special assessments therefor (see Public Works and Improvements, 12 C. L. 1478), the pollution of streams by sewage (see Waters and Water Supply, 10 C. L. 1996), and to drainage district bonds (see Municipal Bonds, 12 C. L. 897), are more fully treated elsewhere.

96. Laws 1902, c. 124 (P. L. p. 371), authorizing construction, etc., of sewers by incorporated towns, applies to any town incorporated at time proceedings under Act are begun. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2. Power of village under village law, to construct sewer at its own expense, is not abridged by orders made by board of health under Laws 1893, p. 1519, c. 661, § 72, authorizing board to require sewer system to protect water supply. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. City may be authorized to construct sewers and drains, but is not bound to do so. Schweriner v. Philadelphia, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 128. City authorized to improve park, under no obligation to provide sewers with sufficient capacity to carry off water. Id.

Town not restricted by Act of Oct. 29, 1907 (P. L. 1907, p. 707), as to location of disposal works. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77. Affirmed by different reasoning. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2.

99. Laws 1902, c. 124 (P. L. 1902, p. 371), sufficiently expresses object of act in title. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2. Act Cong. May 19, 1896 (29 Stat. 125, c. 206), authorizing commissioners to make drainage connections with lots of nonresidents and to assess cost, and imposing fine upon residents for failure to comply with act, is unconstitutional and void as discriminating between residents and nonresidents. District of Columbia v. Brooke, 29 App. D. C. 563.

1. As in Const. art. 10, § 27. State v. Millar [Okl.] 96 P 747.

2. Under sanitary district act as to city of Chicago and adjoining municipalities, board of trustees of said district are not authorized to construct and levy assessments for sewer connecting with outlet. City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417. History and previous enactments as to drainage district, considered. Id. Sanitary district act was enacted for construction of main channel or outlet for sewers and drains of various municipalities within district and to build additions so as to connect all sewers and drains with such main channel. Id; City of Chicago v. Green, 239 Ill. 304, 87 NE 1021. Act May 14, 1903 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24), enlarging boundaries of sanitary district of Chicago, construed, and words "adjuncts" and "additions" held synonymous with "auxiliary channel." Did not mean city sewers connecting with sanitary district so as to authorize district authorities to take charge of building of sewmaintain a sewer imposes upon the land over which it is constructed a perpetual servitude, constituting a perpetual easement in favor of the city,[3] and such right may be acquired by prescription.[4] Permission for the construction of a sewer across the Illinois and Michigan canal is not within the constitutional provision that such canal be not sold or leased except by vote of the people.[5]

The legislative authority to enact drainage statutes is derived generally from the police power, the power of eminent domain, or the taxing power.[6] The element of public health may be considered the prime factor,[7] with the benefits and assessments as incidental.[8] From their beneficial nature, statutes of this kind will be upheld by the courts[9] and liberally construed,[10] though, as in other statutes, constitutional limitations must be observed.[11] The act determines whether a drainage law includes the subject of overflowed lands,[12] or whether natural water courses may be included in establishing a drainage ditch.[13]

ers of municipalilites within district. City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417; Id., 239 Ill. 304, 87 NE 1021.

3. A freehold estate in land to be acquired by deed, prescription or condemnation. City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417. Mere license insufficient, being revocable. Id; City of Chicago v. Green, 239 Ill. 304, 87 NE 1021.

4. Ditch maintained over ten years. Sturges v. Meridian [Miss.] 48 S 620. City could not enlarge ditch by excavation or increasing flow of water. Id. Sewer constructed with permission of owner under oral agreement and maintained 7 years, until owner's death, and then 17 years more. Alderman v. New Haven [Conn.] 70 A 626. Easement may be acquired by 15 years' adverse use. Id. Use none the less adverse because beginning under contract where city claimed right. Id. Possession and use held so open that knowledge would be imputed to individual and successors in title. Id. Where city accepted proposition of landowner and was permitted to construct sewer, allowing owner connections without assessments and giving up proposed street, such sewer was constructed under an agreement which if written would be enforcible against owner and successors. Id. Not mere license, and equity would enforce. Id. Evidence of what occurred at meeting where oral contract granting permission to construct sewer was entered into, admissible. Id. Records of common council admissible to show acceptance of owner's proposition. Id.

5. Permission by commissioners not within constitution (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 75). City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417.

6. Proceedings under Montana statute essentially of eminent domain. Summers v. Sullivan [Mont.] 101 P 166. Right to order local improvements derived from police power. Soliah v. Cormack [N. D.] 117 NW 125.

7. That proposed improvement is one of public utility is jurisdictional fact, and otherwise governmental power should not be exercised. State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412. Drainage improvements only to be entered upon to promote public health convenience or welfare. Id. Individuals cannot improve property through agency of government when public will not be benefited. Id.

8. Assessments incidental. Soliah v. Cormack [N. D.] 117 NW 125. A government in promoting public health, convenience or welfare will incidentally cast special benefits upon property of individuals which is reclaimed, and for this reason cost and expense of improvement may be taxed to property receiving special benefits. State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412.

9. Patent clerical error corrected, since otherwise drainage act would be destroyed. In re Barker [Ky.] 116 SW 686. Where title to Act March 27, 1908 (Acts 1908, p. 212, c. 73), expresses purpose to amend Carroll's Ky. St. 1903, § 2380, subsec. 11, etc., and body of act refers to subsec. 2, though amendment is pertinent to subsec. 11, legislature intended to amend and re-enact subsec. 11, though subsec. 2 remains in full force. Id. Drainage statutes often loosely drawn and only to be upheld by reason of public nature of work and actual benefits accruing to persons taxed. Appeal of Chandos [Wis.] 120 NW 523.

10. Liberally construed to promote public health, drainage and reclamation of wet or overflowed land. State v. Baxter, 104 Minn. 364, 116 NW 646.

11. Drainage Act of 1881 (Comp. St. 1907, c. 89, art. 1), restricted by title to draining swamp and marsh lands, is not void as contravening Const. art. 3, § 11, as to title of act. Omaha & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116.

12. Drainage Act of 1881 and subsequent enactments not intended to embrace subject of overflowed lands, especially where caused by surface waters. Campbell v. Youngson [Neb.] 118 NW 1053.

13. Ky. St. 1909, c. 76, art. 8 (Russell's St. 1909, §§ 4455-4485), authorizes inclusion of natural water courses as well as artificial ditches in establishing drainage ditch. Ex parte Barker [Ky.] 116 SW 1176, additional opinion to 116 SW 686.

§ 3. Independent organizations controlling drainage, reclamation and sanitation.[15]—See 10 C. L. 1632—The authority to make improvements as to drainage may be conferred upon districts especially organized for that purpose and upon municipal corporations,[16] as well as upon county boards or special officers.[17] Drainage districts are quasi corporations[18] organized for a special and limited purpose,[19] with powers restricted to such as the legislature deems necessary.[20] An action for the recovery of benefits by one district against another may be authorized.[21]

*Limitation of drainage districts.*See 10 C. L. 1633—Under the statutes contiguous tracts of land extending into two or more counties may be included in one district,[22] branch ditches may be included,[23] and the boundaries of drainage districts may overlap.[24] A change of boundaries by commissioners may be subject to notice to the landowners.[25] Injunction may be maintained where the owner of land entirely outside a district connects with a drain without authority.[26]

16. Competent for state to authorize creation of governmental agencies for enforcement of its police power (State v. Fuller [Neb.] 120 NW 495), and by great weight of authority, authority to make improvements as to drainage may be conferred upon municipal corporations, county boards, special officers, or districts organized for the purpose (State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412).

17. Legislature may clothe county commissioners, supervisors or other administrative officers or boards with authority to establish drainage districts for reclamation of lands which constitute a menace to public health. State v. Fuller [Neb.] 120 NW 495. Drainage Act (Rev. Code 1905, §§ 1818-1850) held not in conflict with Const. § 25, vesting legislative power of people in legislative power of people in legislative assembly. Not unwarranted delegation of legislative power to board of drainage commissioners. Soliah v. Cormack [N. D.] 117 NW 125. See, also, post, § 4.

18. Drainage district quasi corporation if act under which it is organized does not make it corporation in fact; but not created for political or governmental purposes. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist., 236 Ill. 36, 86 NE 163. Drainage district a public corporation. People v. Anderson, 239 Ill. 266, 87 NE 1019. Corporations organized under various drainage acts have same powers, rights and liabilities, though methods of procedure may differ. Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Dowd, 132 Ill. App. 499.

19. Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Dowd, 132 Ill. App. 499. Drainage district an involuntary public corporation created and organized as an instrument of state to effect specified purpose in specified way. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drain. Dist., 140 Ill. App. 298.

21. Under drainage statute, Rev. St. 1905, p. 837, §§ 2, 4, 5, 6, it is error for court to submit issues of suit by one district against another for recovery of benefits to jury, but should be determined by court. Union Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Drain. Dist. 1, 134 Ill. App. 478. Declaration by drainage commissioner under Farm Drainage Act, § 41 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, § 116), to recover benefits resulting from improvement, fatally defective when failing to allege that channel improved was on defendant's land. Vermilion Special Drainage Dist. Com'rs v. Shockey, 238 Ill. 237, 87 NE 335.

22. Legislature not rendered powerless to include contiguous tracts of land into one district by fact that such lands extend into two or more counties. State v. Fuller [Neb.] 120 NW 495. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 474, c. 153 (Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, § 5598 et seq.) authorizing commissioners of one county upon proper petition to establish a drainage district including lands in another county, is valid. Provision that county board wherein greater area is situated should act is reasonable. Id.

23. Comp. St. 1907, c. 89, are. 1, § 2, authorizing inclusion of branch ditches, etc., is not confined to ditches designed to drain land lateral to line of main ditch. Includes ditch north and east of initial point of main ditch. Omaha, & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116.

24. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 474, c. 153 (Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, § 5598 et seq.), boundaries of drainage districts may lawfully overlap. State v. Fuller [Neb.] 120 NW 495.

25. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 474, c. 153 Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, § 5598 et seq.), commissioners may change boundaries of district before rights of third parties accrue, but landowners must have three weeks' notice of election. State v. Fuller [Neb.] 120 NW 495. Notice should correctly describe boundaries of proposed district. Id. Where commissioners after notice of election change boundaries of district and do not change notice of election, landowner within altered district who did not participate in election may by timely action maintain quo warranto to dissolve district and oust officers. Id.

26. Lawrence v. Broadwell Special Drain Dist., 134 Ill. App. 590. Drainage Act 1885, § 42, permitting connection, etc., does not permit owner of outside tract to connect with district, where drainage of lands of others who have taken no action and assumed no burden is diverted. Id.

§ 4. Procedure in authorization and construction of sewers and drains.[27]—See 10 C. L. 1633—Petition or application for drain or district. See 10 C. L. 1635—The statutes may provide for a preliminary hearing by some governmental agency to determine whether the proposed drain will be a public benefit,[28] and thereupon the proposition of whether the benefits of the act shall be availed of may be submitted to vote.[29] Whether the procedure be that of petitioning for a district or applying for a drain, the statutes usually require that the applicants be freeholders,[30] landowners,[31] or persons residing within the district to be benefited.[32] The requirement of notice is essential,[33] though varying in the various states,[34] and provision for the same by a supplemental petition may be made.[35] It may be stated generally that all persons affected by the proposed proceeding must be made parties,[36] and the requirement will extend to political subdivisions.[37] The accuracy of the description

28. Necessary that some governmental agency be invoked to determine whether an improvement will in fact be benefit. State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412. Laws 1907, p. 474, c. 153, construed, and necessary inference that county board must determine public utility of proposed district. No imperative duty to fix boundaries if reclamation would not promote public health, convenience or welfare. Id. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 646, c. 448, § 3, court properly proceded on first hearing to determine whether proposed ditch would be public benefit and utility. Retrial at second hearing properly denied. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736.

29. After county board has determined that district would be public benefit, legislature may provide that property owners vote on proposition as to whether benefits of act be availed of. State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 124, 117 NW 412. Provisions that only property owners vote, that vote be cast for each acre of land in district, that nonresident owners and foreign corporations owning land affected be allowed to vote, are proper. Bill of Rights, § 22, as to elective franchise, inapplicable. Id.

30. Person having in equity a right to premises in fee, a freeholder within statute. Bakker v. Fellows, 153 Mich. 428, 15 Det. Leg. N. 535, 117 NW 52. Lessee for life a freeholder under Comp. Laws § 8787, within Comp. Laws, § 4319, requiring application to be signed by 10 freeholders. Id.

31. Only landowners in proposed territory qualified to be petitioners for drainage district. People v. Seaman, 239 Ill. 611, 88 NE 212. Evidence held to warrant conclusion that "Newell Marks," a landowner in a district who was promotor of organization, and later commissioner under name of "H. N. Marks," was same person. Id.

32. Petition filed with court, praying for incorporation of drainage district held to sufficiently allege that it was signed by one-half of adult owners of lands within proposed district. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Under Kirby's Dig. § 1438, where drainage ditch is to be located in two counties, only those whose lands are liable to be benefited may proceed to establish a joint drainage district. Where no lands to be benefited in one county, district could not be formed. Beasley v. Gravette [Ark.] 110 SW 1053. Laws 1895, p. 274, c. 115, § 4, as to drainage districts, contemplates inclusion of other lands than those benefited thereby. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pierce County [Wash.] 97 P 1099.

33. Notice of hearing of county commissioners, jurisdictional. Johnson v. Morrison County [Minn.] 119 NW 502. Under drainage Act (Laws 905, p. 456, c. 157), petition for main drain, and subsequent supplemental petition for an arm, are not one proceeding, so that party served with notice of principal petition is deemed to have notice of supplemental petition. Righter v. Keaton, 170 Ind. 461, 84 NE 977. Statute does not fix time of giving notice of filing, and service must therefore be made within a reasonable time. Id.

34. Under Rev. Codes, § 2415, proceedings for drain are not invalid for failure to name nonconsenting landowner, where land is described. Allegations of complaint as to nonconsenting landowner held insufficient. Summers v. Sullivan [Mont.] 101 P 166. In proceedings to condemn a drainage right of way, a married woman having only an inchoate right of dower in her husband's land is not a necessary party. Id.

35. In drainage proceeding, jurisdiction may be extended over all persons by supplemental petition. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 5629; Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6148. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Acts 1905, p. 456 c. 157, § 8, provides right to file supplemental petition for arms or branches of drain, notice of which shall be given as provided in filing of original petition. Richter v. Keaton, 170 Ind. 461, 84 NE 977.

36. All landowners affected by proposed establishment of public drain are required to be made parties. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Includes holders of easements. Id. Any party whose lands are affected by drainage proceeding may file petition therein to be made party during progress of work. On filing of petition, it is right and duty of court or judge to protect landowner's interest as circumstances may require. Id.

37. Necessary, either by original or supplemental proceedings, to make political subdivision having ownership or quasi own-of the land in the petition varies with the procedure of the various states.[38] Pending proceedings may be protected by a saving clause where a statute is repealed.[39]

The formation of a district may be effected by user,[40] and a new district may be organized for the maintenance of such ditches which become out of repair.[41] A subdistrict need not be formed for a small extension of one ditch.[42]

A report by viewers or commissioners See 10 C. L. 1637 is usually provided by the statutes as a step in the proceedings.[43] Such report may be in the nature of a decision,[44] being prima facie evidence of the facts therein set forth.[45] A report will not be held defective for a slight irregularity.[46] ership of bridge or highway affected by drain a party, that public interest may be represented in determining whether taking is necessary. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Township trustee, upon whose township rests primary duty of repairing a bridge, should be party. Id.

38. In petition that county commissioners entertain proceeding, description of proposed ditch need only be stated with approximate accuracy. Johnson v. Morrison County [Minn.] 119 NW 502. Petition under Rev. St. 1899, § 8319 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3935), held to sufficiently describe proposed district and levee, boundary lines and description being stated with greatest detail, and also describing ditches, levee, giving general course, etc. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

39. Pending proceedings for ditch, within saving clause of Acts 1905, p. 456, c. 157, may be completed as though act had not been passed. Johnson v. Amacher [Ind.] 86 NE 1014. Under Act March 6, 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 456, c. 157), providing new drainage law, repealing other laws, but providing that repeal does not affect pending proceedings where lake exceeding 10 acres in area will not be affected, petition held to show that lakes would be affected by plan of drainage when branch was to commence at outlet of lake more than 10 acres in area, etc. Kunkalman v. Gibsson [Ind.] 84 NE 985. Statute does not require that there be both an attempt to lower a lake and an actual situation in which the construction of drain will have that effect to terminate drainage proceeding, but either sufficient. Kunkalman v. Gibson [Ind.] 86 NE 850. Where attempt in fact to affect protected lake when Act of 1905 (Laws 1905, p. 456, c. 157) became effective, there was no authority to continue proceeding. Time referred to necessarily testing time with every drainage proceeding then pending. Kunkalmann v. Gibson [Ind.] 84 NE E 985. Act of 1885 not continued in force as to existing drainage proceedings by virtue of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 243, 248. All former "acts" repealed. Id. No disturbance of vested rights of plaintiffs by repeal of drainage act of 1885 (Acts 1885, p. 159, c. 40) by Act of 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 456, c. 157). Id.

40. Under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 867, c. 42, § 151), § 76, providing for formation of drainage districts by user, only such lands can be included as those of which owners have voluntarily connected with main ditch or branches. People v. Strandstra, 238 Ill. 341, 87 NE 286.

41. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42, § 152, permitting formation of drainage district to include lands interested in maintenance of ditches, out of repair, previously constructed by voluntary action of parties, commissioners of highways, in corporate capacity and as representatives of public, are to be considered as owners of land, where ditch was originally constructed in highway by commissioners and adjoining owners have merely drained their lands thereunto. People v. Magruder, 237 Ill. 340, 86 NE 615. Commissioners held to be in same category with, and subject to same burdens as, other landowners, the situation being the same as though lands in highway were owned by private persons without burdens of easement. Id. It is not fatal to the organization of a drainage district under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42, § 151, that certain lands, owners of which contributed toward improvement of existing ditch which left system of combined drainage in existence, which is now out of repair, etc., are not included in petition for such organization. Id. Under Hurd's Rev. St. c. 42, § 151, owners of land draining into ditch both before and after improvement thereof, but who contributed nothing to expense of improvement, are parties who have by voluntary action constructed ditches, etc., where before improvement was made such owners were owners of lands which with other land described in petition required combined system of drainage, where they had constructed ditches draining into ditch draining highway prior to deepening of latter and such deepening left system of combined drainage in existence. Id.

42. Where district organized under farm drainage act, it was not necessary to organize a subdistrict to extend one ditch 800 feet from the upper end. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306.

43. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 641, c. 448, surveyors and viewers may be appointed after which merits of ditch are determined at hearing. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736. Under Code Supp. 1907, tit. 10, c. 2, § 1989a2 et. seq., survey and report by engineer is prerequisite to authority of board of supervisors to establish district. Hartshorn v. Wright County Dist. Ct. [Iowa] 120 NW 479. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 448, as to majorities, report by two of three reviewers appointed by county court is valid. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849.

44. Proceeding may be dismissed at any time before report of commissioners. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255.

45. Acts 1907, p. 508, c. 252. Zehner v. Milner [Ind.] 87 NE 209. Proper evidence on remonstrance. Id.

46. Commissioner's report stating amount of damages to each tract separately, so that

*Remonstrances.*See 10 C. L. 1636—The statutes usually provide an opportunity for hearing objections before a final order is entered.[47] The right of remonstrance being given by statute can only be enjoyed by a compliance with the terms on which it rests.[48]

*Final hearing; organization of district; order for work.*See 10 C. L. 1637—At the final hearing, the feasibility of the proposed drain may be submitted to the jury [49] under appropriate instructions.[50] In the absence of statute, general procedure provisions obtain.[51] Objections to reports of viewers should be timely,[52] though the proceedings are usually to be liberally construed.[53] Where authority as to the con-addition was all that was necessary to ascertain aggregate, held in sufficient compliance with statute requiring statement of aggregate. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. While commissioner's report did not state whether proposed district would embrace all of land to be damaged and benefited, it did state that 3,500 acres of land, with names of owners, would be reclaimed and drained, and though falling short of statute, under Rev. St. 1899, § 8331 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3941), defect was mere irregularity and not jurisdictional question. Id. Objection to reviewer's report as not made in accordance with law in that route specified was not followed, improperly raised. Johnson v. Amacher [Ind.] 86 NE 1014.

47. In a ditch proceeding under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 641, c. 448, where court appoints engineer and viewers and requires filing of their respective reports, notice of the second and final hearing must be given and an opportunity for objections by parties interested afforded. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736. Chapter to be construed as a whole. Id. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 641, c. 448, three classes of cases are contemplated: First, court may finally establish ditch at first hearing, as where petitioners agree to pay all expenses; second, court may deny petition at first hearing where objections are sufficient and to avoid unnecessary expense; third, at first hearing, objections may not be so clear as to justify conclusion adverse to petitioners, and merits may not justify immediate establishment of ditch. Id. In latter case, surveyor and viewers are appointed and merits determined after investigation and hearing. Id. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 641, c. 448, action of court in determining questions as to public utility of ditch and benefits and damages on reports of surveyor and viewers appointed on prior proceedings dismissed on merits, after which ditch extension was ordered, and on second hearing excluding objection to ditch, was error. Id. In ditch proceeding under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 641, c. 448, petitioners who appeared at first hearing and demanded additional damages at second hearing were not prevented by estoppel or election of remedies from objecting to establishment of ditch. Id.

48. Righter v. Keaton, 170 Ind. 461, 84 NE 977. Right to have petition for drain dismissed under Act 1905, p. 456, c. 157, dependent upon signature of two-thirds of parties interested, and assessable as determined by preliminary report. Id. Remonstrance not signed by two-thirds of persons affected should be overruled. Id. Failure of petitioner to do duty with respect to notice of arm to drain did not modify statute or affect class necessary to vote on remonstrance. Id. Under facts, reasonable time had not elapsed when remonstrance was filed, and court could have ordered petitioner to give required notice. Statute to be liberally construed. Id. As a ground of remonstrance against a final report, it is not sufficient to use the general terms of the statute that the report is not according to law, but the particulars must be specified (under Acts 1905, p. 461, c. 157, § 4). Northern Indiana Land Co. v. Tyler, 170 Ind. 468, 84 NE 828. Remonstrance insufficient even if drainage commissioners did not file report within time directed by court. Northern Indiana Land Co. v. Tyler, 170 Ind. 468, 84 NE 828.

49. Whether proposed ditch will be benefit to lands assessed and a public utility, question for jury. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 115 SW 849.

50. Not erroneous to charge jury to consider that parties liable for cost are liable for maintenance and repairs. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849.

51. For government of courts, wherein jurisdiction over drainage proceedings is vested. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1.

52. Where, on proceeding to establish ditch, parties announced themselves ready and went to trial before jury, motions to quash report of viewers and to file report of reviewers came too late. Such motions matters in abatement waived by going on trial. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849. Objection to reviewer's report improperly raised by unverified motion to dismiss after return of adverse verdict. Johnson v. Amacher [Ind.] 86 NE 1014. Where remonstrator's exceptions to preliminary report went to merits, motion to dismiss on ground that report was not filed within time directed by court was too late. Such motion should have been made at earliest opportunity. Northern Indiana Land Co. v. Tyler, 170 Ind. 468, 84 NE 828. Remonstrators had recognized validity of report by objecting to merits. Id. Under Acts 1905, p. 458, c. 157, § 3, providing that preliminary report of drainage commissioners be prima facie evidence of facts stated in subsequent proceedings, where remonstrators waived right to strike out such report for failure to file in time, they waived right to object to its subsequent admission as prima facie evidence. Id.

53. Under Acts 1905, p. 470, c. 157, § 8, providing that act be liberally construed, etc., court committed no reversible error in permitting preliminary report to be read in evidence. Northern Indiana Land Co. v. Tyler, 170 Ind. 468, 84 NE 828. Refusal to struction of the entire drain is vested in the courts,[54] mere improper use of the power will not render a judgment ipso facto void.[55] Such courts may condemn property [56] or order and complete the construction of a public drain extending into another county.[57]

As a result of the final hearing, the court may promulgate the order for the establishment and construction of the ditch,[58] which order should conform to statute [59] and should definitely locate the ditch.[60] An order of county supervisors may be confined to the approval of plans adopted by an engineer,[61] and the order of a county board considered as an exercise of legislative or administrative discretion, is subject to rescission.[62] Authority may be granted to county supervisors to fix such conditions as to letting contracts as are necessary to protect the persons and townships affected by the proceedings.[63] In the absence of statute, a drainage district may properly extend its outlet into another county.[64] The determination of the legality of the organization of a drainage district may be vested in a county court,[65] and the judgment rendered is regarded as conclusive.[66] allow filing of report of reviewers, harmless where merely advisory and question remained at trial whether on evidence ditch should be opened. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849.

54. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6147, providing that drainage commissioner be at all times under control of court, applies to orders of judge in vacation. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Commissioner and contractor in drainage proceeding agencies or arms of court. Necessarily incident to authority to construct drain that both be under jurisdiction and subject to contempt for disobedience of ad interim orders of court or judge in vacation. Id.

55. Since courts possess broad powers. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Judgment establishing public drain not invalid because seriously injuring or destroying highway bridge. Id.

56. Circuit court has jurisdiction to condemn property for drainage purposes, under statute. Zehner v. Milner [Ind.] 87 NE 209. Where mill is run almost for private use or benefit and does very little grinding for toll, drainage commissioners may take dam for public use in preventing overflows and removing stagnant water though mill dam was originally secured by condemnation. Id.

57. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1.

58. Under Gen. Laws 1907, c. 448, p. 641, court is not necessarily bound by finding on first hearing that ditch will serve public ends. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736.

59. Rev. Laws 1905, p. 303, c. 230, § 1, construed and in establishing ditch, where waters are to be diverted from natural course, ditch should follow general direction of watercourse when practicable. State v. Baxter, 104 Minn. 364, 116 NW 646. Departure permissible when necessary. Id.

60. Order required by Laws 1905, p. 315, c. 230, § 10, establishing ditch, must in itself, or by reference to engineer's report, definitely locate ditch by giving proper starting point, route and terminous. Order void. Johnson v. Morrison County [Minn.] 119 NW 502.

61. Under Code Supp. § 1989a5, § 1989a2, § 1989a3. May not adopt or consider other plans not recommended by competent engineer. Hartshorn v. Wright County Dist. Ct. [Iowa] 120 NW 479.

62. State v. Ross [Neb.] 118 NW 85. County board upon petition may rescind order for ditch where no rights have accrued in consequence of order and no proceedings have been taken thereunder except employment of engineer who performed portion of preliminary work of surveying. Id.

63. Authority granted boards of supervisors of counties by Pub. Acts 1905, p. 32, No. 21, amending general drain law, is within Const. art. 4, § 38, providing that legislature may confer powers of local legislative and administrative character on county boards. Chandler v. Heisler, 153 Mich. 1, 15 Det. Leg. N. 333, 116 NW 626. Laying of drains a neighborhood matter. Id. Condition precedent to construction of drain, implied by resolution of county board of supervisors acting under Pub. Acts 1905, p. 32, No. 21, required that permission be signed by majority of members of each township board, the townships necessarily acting severally. Id. Resolution imposing conditions precedent to contract, not invalid as delegation of legislative authority to township boards or members, the power being for the protection of rights of township. Id. Supervisors, in imposing condition precedent, pursuant to Pub. Acts 1905, p. 32, No. 21, might permit township board, in consenting, to dispense with formality usually required, and signatures of individuals were proper. Id.

65. Rev. St. 1899, § 8331 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3941), expressly gives county court jurisdiction. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

66. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8331 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3941), where parties within district were notified of hearing before county court as to assessment and incorporation of district, judgment rendered after hearing was conclusive upon all objections to incorporation of district, legal or jurisdictional. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Finding as to necessity of proposed district and that drain would be useful for drainage of land to be used for agriculture held in substantial compliance with statute. Id. Where orders of county court in proceedings for organization

Proceedings for drains have been held to be in rem, subject to being brought forward from time to time on notice.[67]

Validity and performance of contracts See 10 C. L. 1037 for drains is controlled largely by the general rules governing public contracts [68] and other public works.[69] Statutory provisions govern an officer's authority in accepting work [70] and paying for the same.[71] The employment of a drainage commissioner as an engineer may be violative of statute.[72] In the absence of contractual provisions to the contrary, a contractor may employ the usual and approved means of excavation,[73] and is not liable for damages naturally resulting to adjacent lands,[74] though reasonable care should be used to avoid injury.[75]

Attack on proceedings. See 10 C. L. 1038—Objections to a drainage improvement must be of a substantial character [76] by a proper party litigant,[77] and while injunction is proper in certain cases, as where the proceedings are defective,[78] a landowner cannot disregard a court vested by statute with authority as to the drain and proceed in another court.[79] Usually acts of drainage commissioners can not be questioned collaterally,[80] unless a jurisdictional defect is shown.[81] Per-of drainage district state that due notice has been given according to law, and that court has jurisdiction of parties and subject-matter, finding cannot be contradicted by parol. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Highway Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. Where nothing in record to contradict findings, district held duly organized, and report of commissioners in accordance with levee act, duly confirmed. Id.

67. Proceedings need not be kept on docket, but may be brought forward on notice, on supplementary petition. Staton v. Staton, 148 N. C. 490, 62 SE 596. Judgment, in proceeding under Revisal 1905, §§ 3983-4028, for right to drain into canal, confirming report of commissioners, duties of parties and amount each should pay, is not final. Id. Supplementary proceeding under drainage act (Revisal 1905, §§ 3983-4028). setting out that repairs are needed, etc., is not uncertain for restating termini of canal. Id. Sufficient in original proceeding or plaintiff should be allowed to amend. Id. Proceedings not highly technical, but intended to be inexpensive, molded from time to time by orders of court as may best promote beneficial results contemplated. Id.

69. See Public Works and Improvements, 12 C. L. 1478.

70. Under drainage act (Laws 1887, p. 148, c. 97), authority of county surveyor is limited to inspecting work when completed, and accepting same. Cannot authorize incurring of extra expenses. Bowler v. Renville County, 105 Minn. 26, 116 NW 1028. Acceptance of completed ditch with knowledge of extra work by contractor not ratification to render county liable. Id.

71. Laws 1905, p. 321, c. 230, § 17, with proviso at end, authorizing partial payments on drainage contracts when approved by county auditor and engineer in charge of work construed, and payments authorized without consent of county commissioners. Moody v. Brasie, 104 Minn. 463, 116 NW 941.

72. Under Rev. St. 1899, §§ 8318-8345, (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 3935-3947), as to duties of drainage commissioners, employment of one by other two as engineer would be against intent of law and in violation of absolute prohibition, in § 8336. Seamon v. Cap-au-Gris Levee Dist. [Mo.] 117 SW 1084. Compensation not recoverable. Id.

73. Not liable for injuries to adjacent property. Fitzgibbon v. Western Dredging Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 878.

74. While carrying plan of drainage into execution. Fitzgibbon v. Western Dredging Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 878. Where contract for ditch provided that same be cut across course of stream, but did not bind contractor to care for surplus water by establishing dams and by-passes, contractor in undertaking to excavate ditch according to plans was not liable for injuries caused by overflow. Id.

75. Fitzgibbon v. Western Dredging Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 878.

76. Evidence that lands would be injured by drain insufficient to sustain finding to that effect. Backus v. Conroy, 104 Minn. 242, 116 NW 484.

77. Objections that drainage district improperly included certain lands improper, where litigant had no pecuniary interest in same; no allegation that plaintiff's property was of class not benefited. Esteves v. Bayou Terre-Aux-Boeufs Drainage Dist. Com'rs, 121 La. 991, 46 S 992.

78. Injunction proper to prevent county drain commissioner from proceeding to construct a drain, where conditions precedent imposed by county supervisors pursuant to statute are disregarded. Chandler v. Heisler, 153 Mich. 1, 15 Det. Leg. N. 333, 116 NW 626. Where three railroad companies (owner, lessee and sublessee) joined to restrain proceedings, under drainage act of 1881 (L. 1881, p. 236, c. 51) on ground that due notice was not given, plaintiffs have burden of showing want of knowledge of existence of proceedings at time to appear and contest same. Omaha & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116.

79. Karr v. Putnam Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1.

sons not parties to the drainage proceedings may enjoin the wrongful overflowing of lands,[82] and an injury to public highway bridges may be prevented,[83] but, where the proceedings are in the exercise of eminent domain, an impairment of rights, which is an element of damages, will not give rise to a cause of action by injunction.[84] A ditch constructed under an unconstitutional statute may be regarded as a private enterprise.[85] An information in the nature of quo warranto against individuals, assuming to exercise the powers of drainage commissioners, is the proper method to challenge the legal existence of a district.[86] The landowners may be allowed to join as relators,[87] and the drainage commissioners in answering must either disclaim or justify.[88] On an appeal by the individual commissioners, they cannot assign as error an error which only affects the district.[89]

Incidental remedies and review. See 10 C. L. 1639—Usually the statutes provide for an appeal upon proper notice [90] and other conditions [91] to a court of limited powers.[92] Such statutes are required to be liberally construed.[93] The appeal to the Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Presumed that record shows appearance by county and consent to judgment which would authorize order, though county not mentioned in petition or report. Id. Allegation by board of county commissioners that board had never been made party to drainage proceedings held bad on demurrer as legal conclusion, though allegation that neither board or county was named in complaint or petition as party. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Under Burn's Ann. St. 1901, § 5624, county may be party in effect without being so named. Id.

82. Injunction proper to prevent wrongful overflowing of land by drainage commissioners where drain does not traverse land and plaintiffs are not parties to drainage proceedings. Smafield v. Smith, 153 Mich. 270, 15 Det. Leg. N. 487, 116 NW 990. Injunction denied where drain would not flood plaintiff's land beyond degree contemplated when certain river was dredged to provide outlet and plaintiff's presumed paid for land taken. Id.

83. Right to enjoin threatened injury to public highway bridge by establishment of drain not in both county and township. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 571, 85 NE 1. Not dependent upon varying circumstances, as size of bridge, importance of highway, ability of township, taking of steps by latter to cause appropriation by county for undertaking. Id.

84. Under Rev. Code, § 2412, fact that establishment of drain will be an impairment of landowners, irrigation rights is an element of damages, not giving rise to cause of action to prevent the drain. Summers v. Sullivan [Mont.] 101 P 166.

85. Ditch constructed under unconstitutional statute (L. 1907, p. 215, c. 191) by supervisors is without authority, being in fact simply private enterprise. Lyon County v. Lien, 105 Minn. 55, 116 NW 1017.

86. People v. Anderson, 239 Ill. 266, 87 NE 1019; State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Proper to question title of drainage commissioners to office. People v. Anderson, 239 Ill. 266, 87 NE 1019. Attorney general may file information questioning powers of drainage district. Id. Information sufficient where allegations of usurpation of power in general terms. People v. O'Connor, 239 Ill. 272, 87 NE 1016.

87. Where landowners question rights of drainage commissioners to incorporate lands, on quo warranto, it is practice to allow several landowners to join as relators. People v. O'Connor, 239 Ill. 272, 87 NE 1016.

88. Default, disclaimer. People v. O'Connor, 239 Ill. 272, 87 NE 1016.

89. Service of process. People v. O'Connor, 239 Ill. 272, 87 NE 1016.

90. Where an appeal is not simply from an award of damages, but is from the joint action of two boards in different counties, notice of appeal should be given to auditor of each county, since all are persons interested, neither board can act without concurrence of other, and final action of district court under statute might materially affect orders of respective boards in joint session. Appeal of Head [Iowa] 118 NW 884. Where petition, under Drainage Act (Acts 1905, p. 456, et seq. c. 157), is dismissed on ground that two-thirds of landowners affected, as shown by preliminary report, have remonstrated on appeal, all persons remonstrating should be made parties by being named in assignment of errors. Lauster v. Meyers, 170 Ind. 548, 84 NE 1087. So that case may be reviewed on merits. Where remonstrant omitted, appeal will be dismissed. Id.

91. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8292, as amended by Acts 1903, p. 235, and Acts 1905, p. 185, (4 Ann. St. pp. 3922, 3923), appellants in proceedings to establish drainage district, on appeal to circuit court shall file written application specifying matters appealed from. Drainage Dist. No. 4 v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 549. Under Burn's Ann. St. 1908, § 1354, want of approval of appeal bond filed within prescribed time with county auditor is not ground for dismissal. Appellant may file in court sufficient bond with acceptable surety. Miller v. Wabash R. Co. [Ind.] 85 NE 967.

92. Under Code Supp. 1907, §§ 1989a6 on appeal from order of supervisors establishing or refusing district, district court is limited to affirming or reversing orders of supervisors and to making orders requisite to give effect to court's decree. Cannot decree establishment of district substantially different from that under consideration. Hartshorn v. Wright County Dist. Court [Iowa] 120 NW 479. Under Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a6, there is no purpose to confer original powers in premises on appellate court.

supreme court should be from a final order,[94] and may be limited.[95] In certain cases, certiorari is the proper remedy.[96] The question of drainage has been held

At most, court has power to try case de novo upon issues before supervisors, and can make no order which board could not have made. Id. While Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a46, providing that failure to appeal from order of supervisors be waiver of illegality, and that remedies provided by act be exclusive, may take away right to have proceedings of board reviewed by certiorari, it does not limit review of judgment of district court entered on appeal from such board. Id. Where county board of supervisors under statute had no power to establish a drainage district not planned or recommended by competent engineer, district court on appeal could not exercise such power. Id. On appeal from action of supervisors in establishing a drain, the district court should be very reluctant to interfere. Id. On appeal, district court has no authority to establish district for benefit of intervenors who did not appeal. Id. Decree of district court on appeal, shortening proposed ditch by mile and cutting out area of 3½ miles, is substantial variance from district proposed by supervisors and beyond power of court to decree. Id. Where no notice, district court had no jurisdiction to enter order by two boards in joint session. Appeal of Head [Iowa] 118 NW 884. Only two questions reviewable on appeal to circuit court, viz., whether compensation has been allowed for property appropriated, and whether proper damages have been allowed for property affected by improvement. Drainage Dist. No. 4 v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 549. Appeal which did not specify particular order appealed from, and which specified, as objections to reports of viewers and findings of court, that assessment was out of proportion and excessive, that ditch was inadequate, and that petitioner had protected its property and would derive no benefit from ditch, should be dismissed for failure to comply with statute. Id. On appeal, circuit court could not decide whether Rev. St. 1899, § 8285 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3920), authorizing viewers to assess damages and benefits, was in violation of Const. art. 3 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 172). Id. On appeal to circuit court, which should have been dismissed, appellant is not deprived of constitutional right to trial by jury, by action of court in discharging jury and rendering judgment of affirmance. Id. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 6151, 6027, when appeal is taken from board to circuit court, it must proceed de novo and determine case on merits, and not upon mere question of practice. Discretion lodged in circuit court is either to execute final judgment or remand cause with directions for proper execution. Miller v. Wabash R. Co. [Ind.] 85 NE 967. Remand at intermediate stage with directions to permit filing of remonstrance, error. Id. Under circuit court drainage law of 1881 (Acts 1881, p. 399, c. 43, § 4; Rev. St. 1881, § 4276), and Act of 1885 (Acts 1885, p. 134, c. 40, § 4; Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 5625), judgment of court establishing drain and approving assessments is valid. Lake Shore Sand Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 754.

93. Under Drainage Act, § 47 (Acts 30 Gen. Assem., p. 74, c. 68), that statute be liberally construed, failure of auditor of one county to keep record of proceedings for establishment of drain in two counties in drainage record book as required by statute did not invalidate proceedings. Appeal of Head [Iowa] 118 NW 884.

94. Under Laws 1905, p. 303, c. 230, appeal is only provided where petition for ditch is refused and upon questions of damages. State v. Posz, 106 Minn. 197, 118 NW 1014. In drainage proceedings order is final and appealable when it defeats the proceedings and requires that it be started over. Order of county court sustaining challenge to array of jurors who made unauthorized additional assessment, interlocutory, not final. Claussen Park Drainage & Levee Dist. Com'rs v. Dailey, 239 Ill. 428, 88 NE 201. Being final, appeals were properly taken from judgments establishing drains and approving assessments, either in term time under Rev. St. 1881, § 638 (Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 650; Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 679), or in vacation under Rev. St. 1881, § 640 (Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 652; Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 681). Lake Shore Sand Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 754. Where appeal taken from judgments under Rev. St. 1881, § 638 (Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 650; Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 679), it was term time appeal, governed by such statute as to who should be named in assignment of errors as appellants. Id. Under Drainage Act 1905 (Act 1905, p. 461, c. 157), § 3, authorizing interlocutory appeal from circuit or superior court to supreme court and § 9 (p. 472) authorizing appeal from final judgment, where defendants permitted exceptions to preliminary report to be overruled, and matter referred back to commissioners for final report, and final report was filed before attempt to appeal, appeal was waived. Renicker v. Davis [Ind.] 85 NE 964.

95. On appeal from circuit court in proceedings to establish drainage ditch, supreme court cannot consider errors of county court not properly brought before circuit court. Can only determine whether circuit court trying case anew committed error. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849.

96. Certiorari available to review order of county commissioners acting under L. 1905, p. 303, c. 230, in establishing ditch where no appeal provided by statute. State v. Posz, 106 Minn. 197, 118 NW 1014. Certiorari proper to test question of law in establishment of ditch, as to whether court erroneously denied hearing of objections at second hearing and had no jurisdiction to establish ditch finally at first hearing. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736. General drain law (Pub. Acts 1897, p. 367, No. 254, c. 5, § 3), providing remedy of certiorari was evidently intended for reviewing action of drain commissioners in establishing drain. Chandler v. Heisler, 153 Mich. 1, 15 Det. Leg. N. 333, 116 NW 626. Appeal to township board under general drain law (Pub. Acts 1897, p. 367, No. 254, c. 5), not permissible where board has duty inconsistent with that required when sitting in review of proceedings. Id.

a matter of governmental policy not reviewable by the courts.[97] In the absence of a contrary showing, the proceedings are presumed regular on appeal.[98]

*Costs.*See 10 C. L. 1640—The imposition of a fee as costs, in the absence of statute, is improper where parties in proceedings to establish a ditch employ counsel, and litigate at arm's length [99] and costs should not be awarded against a district.[1]

In regard to sewers, as in other municipal improvements or contracts,[2] the charter or statutory provisions contain rules relative to the passage of ordinances, fixing the plan of work [3] or requiring authority from voters,[4] without which the contract or tax bill is void.[5] Statutes often provide for the creation of a sewerage district which contracts for the improvement.[6] The erection of a sewage disposal plant could not be questioned upon the ground that the town had not acquired title, where condemnation was authorized.[7]

§ 5. Compensation to property owners for lands taken or damaged.[8]—See 10 C. L. 1640—A drainage district, for the purposes of its organization, is clothed with the

97. Power to exercise control over administrative bodies not to be conferred on courts. In re Johannes [Neb.] 120 NW 176. Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, authorizing appeal from decision of county board upon question of public utility, is void. Id.

98. In absence of contrary showing, it will be presumed that notice of clerk of county court in proceedings to establish drainage district was in subtantial compliance with Rev. St. 1899, § 8320 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3936), as to description, when hearing would be held, etc. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Under Code, § 4648, that proceedings of officers or courts of limited jurisdiction be presumed regular, in support of a judgment or decree, it will be presumed that notice essential to validity of action was given. Appeal of Head [Iowa] 118 NW 884. Burden of proving no statutory notice as required rests upon objector. Id.

99. Provision in judgment establishing ditch, declaring that plaintiff's attorney is entitled to reasonable fee to be taxed as costs, is not final order, not being enforcible without further action, and error does not call for reversal. Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849.

1. Execution for costs against individual commissioners, not drainage district, proper. People v. O'Connor, 239 Ill. 272, 87 NE 1016. Costs properly adjudged against commissioners on judgment of ouster, where district organized by user and suit against commissioners individually. People v. Strandstra, 238 Ill. 341, 87 NE 286. In an action by drainage commissioners to recover amount of benefits to land b ond district, where demurrer was sustained, it was improper to award an execution for costs against district. Vermilion Special Drainage Dist. Com'rs v. Shocky, 238 Ill. 237, 87 NE 335.

2. The procedure in authorization and construction of public improvements is fully treated in Public Works and Improvements, 12 C. L. 1478 and Public Contracts, 12 C. L. 1442.

3. To render proceedings to construct sewer valid under Kansas City charter, there must be an ordinance as a prerequisite prescribing dimensions, material and character of sewer, and public letting of contract after notice. McCormick v. Moore [Mo. App.] 114 SW 40. Proceedings invalid where specifications finally prepared for construction of sewer contained material alterations from plans on file when the bids were made. Id. Under Kansas City charter, art. 9, § 10, where ordinance did not give dimensions or character of manholes, catchbasins, etc., so as to enable intelligent bid for work, it was insufficient. Id. Under Village Law, Laws 1897, p. 440, c. 414, § 260, requiring map or plans as precedent to adoption of sewer system, such map need not embrace every lateral sewer which may become necessary. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127.

4. Where Laws 1907, p. 388, c. 428, as to sewer system, did not provide how village should carry out portion of agreement, general village law was applicable. Authority from voters prerequisite to tax levy and issuance of bonds to carry out contract. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. Sewer by city and village. Id. Where proposition submitted to voters authorized sewer at $100,000, with $59,800 to be raised by issue and sale of bonds, tax levy for balance was authorized by necessary implication. Id. Under Act 1902, c. 124 (P. L. 371), action of sewerage board is only preliminary to legislative action by governing body of town and by voters at special election. Fixing site of disposal works as land in which member of board is interested, not voidable in absence of fraud. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2.

5. Under Kansas City Charter, art. 9, § 10, where only plans referred to by ordinance were general plans, without details as to dimensions, material, etc., tax bill issued for improvement was void. McCormick v. Moore [Mo. App.] 114 SW 40.

6. Under Laws 1903, p. 29, § 7, city not liable. Board v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101.

7. Prosecutors, having waited until plan of sewerage board as to disposal plant was approved by voters, could not, by certiorari, question contract for erection of plant upon ground that town had not yet acquired title, since title by condemnation was authorized by law. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77; afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2.

power of eminent domain,[9] and compensation must be made for lands taken or damaged.[10] All statutory requirements must be alleged and proved to recover for the land taken.[11] The authority of a levee district to arbitrate damages suffered by landowner by the construction of levee may be vested in a board of directors.[12]

For what allowed. See 10 C. L. 1640—Damages have been allowed for the perpetual maintenance of a bridge, rendered necessary by a ditch.[13] Where a remedy was provided by statute, a landowner had no title to the title of an old drain, supplanted by a new one.[14]

Amount and ascertainment thereof. See 10 C. L. 1640—Where three companies are interested in railroad to be damaged by a ditch proceeding, the question of damages should be settled in an original proceeding, not collaterally.[15] Under some procedures, the question of damages may be deferred to a second hearing.[16] The overruling of a demurrer to an answer in a proceeding for compensation was harmless where the plaintiff could have the issue determined on merits.[17]

Appeals See 10 C. L. 1641 should be taken from a final judgment.[18] The right may be denied where the statute renders a justice's judgment final and conclusive.[19]

10. Lands taken or damaged are taken or damaged for public use. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist., 236 Ill. 36, 86 NE 163. District prohibited by constitution from taking or damaging property without compensation. Id. Drainage district organized under Act May 29, 1879 (Laws 1879, p. 120), and amendments is liable (§ 2) for damages sustained by lands above district by construction of levee, ditch or drain. Id. Not relieved from liability on theory that drainage district is governmental agency and that damage resulted from exercise of state's police power. Id. 13. Where railroad constructs bridge over ditch under Acts 30th General Assembly, p. 66, c. 68, § 19, it is entitled to damages for perpetual maintenance of bridge. Duty to take care of bridge permanently. Mason City, etc., R. Co. v. Wright County Sup'rs [Iowa] 116 NW 805. Judgment for $2,200 damages to railroad for establishment of drainage district, supported by evidence. Id. Where railroad agreed to construct bridge and that opening in embankment be as large as ditch planned at that place, evidence of secret intention of engineer to make ditch unusually large so as to require unusually large bridge was inadmissible. Unlawful to place piling or other obstructions in ditch, and, under Acts 30th General Assembly, p. 66, c. 68, § 19, ditch must be constructed in accordance with plans and specifications of engineer. Id.

14. Landowner had no title to tile of old drain constructed under Code, § 1952, supplanted by new drain under Acts 30th General Assembly, c. 68, § 46 (Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a25). Remedy provided by latter statute. Smittle v. Haag [Iowa] 118 NW 869. Exclusive against supervisors in absence of bad faith, though not availed of. Id. If remedy by statute not exclusive and plaintiff might recover damages for removal of old title in establishing new drain, measure of damages would not be cost of restoring tile, especially since not restored. Id. Landowner who treated Code, § 1952, as constitutional, and acquiesced in proceedings had thereunder for 20 years, cannot question constitutionality of statute on claim that title of drain became part of his land by operation of law, through invalidity of statute and proceedings. Id. Acts 30th General Assembly, c. 67, 68, curative of all defects in Code, § 1952, validating all proceedings except those relative to assessments. Power of reassessment and relevy was conferred. 16. Under Gen. Laws 1907, c. 448, p. 641, court may defer question of damages to adjoining owners until second hearing, when expedient or necessary. Heinz v. Buckham, 104 Minn. 389, 116 NW 736.

17. Where a defendant filed petition for assessment of compensation through deprivation of property by change of city's drains, and city brought present action to enjoin such condemnation proceedings as unnecessary, whereupon defendant filed an explanatory or qualified denial in effect setting forth defendant's view of facts alleged, an order overruling plaintiff's demurrer to such answer for want of facts was not ground for reversal, since on merits plaintiff could have issue determined. City of Columbia v. Melton, 81 S. C. 356, 62 SE 245.

18. Order of court on appeal from assessment of damages in ditch proceeding, assessing damages and ordering judgment, is not final order within Gen. Laws 1905, p. 334, c. 230, § 51, or an appealable order within § 41. Prahl v. Brown County, 104 Minn. 227, 116 NW 483.

§ 6. Provision for cost.[20]—See 10 C. L. 1641—The preliminary expenses may be assessed upon all the lands of the district where a drain is denied.[21]

Bonds See 10 C. L. 1641 may be required to protect the county against the expenses of the preliminary proceedings.[22] Drainage districts in incurring indebtedness are subject to limitations,[23] and the election by which a drainage district votes a tax and the issuance of bonds may be required to be under the auspices of a police jury.[24] The submission of an issue of bonds for two distinct systems of sewers, so that voters had no alternative but to vote for or against both systems is invalid.[25] Proceedings to contest an election for a tax and issuance of bonds are subject to limitations.[26]

Local assessments.[27]

*Power to assess and property liable.*See 10 C. Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42), §§19, 20, appeal cannot be taken from judgment of justice's court as to damages to landowners, judgment by statute "shall be final and conclusive" and appeal not permissible under general statute. Niles Drainage Com'rs v. Harms, 238 Ill. 414, 87 NE 277. Failure of act to provide appeal does not render same unconstitutional, since freehold is not involved. Id.

Laws 1901, p. 413, c. 258, § 2, requiring bond, is for protection of county against expenses necessarily incurred in preliminary proceedings which are essential to determination of merits of petition, in case board finds against petitioners on merits and fail to establish ditch. Freeborn County v. Helle, 105 Minn. 92, 117 NW 153. In action on ditch bond pursuant to Laws 1901, p. 413, c. 258, § 2, where board of county commissioners had made order establishing ditch, which order was vacated in an independent action to which neither obligors of bond nor petitioners were sureties, for an alleged failure to comply with law as to adjournments on hearing, facts did not show breach of bond. Id. Petitioners for ditch not liable upon bond for expense incurred in employment of engineer to lay out ditch, where order establishing ditch is set aside, since condition of bond is for paying costs when commissioners find against impairment. State v. Ross [Neb.] 118 NW 85.

23. Under Const. art. 281, authorizing drainage districts, upon vote, to incur debt and issue bonds upon basis of ad valorem tax, not exceeding 5 mills on dollar, and also authorizing districts, on same condition, to incur debt and issue bonds upon basis of specific tax, not exceeding 25 cents per acre, bonds in either case not to run over 40 years, where a debt could not be incurred upon either basis, being excessive, it could not be incurred upon theory that both bases might be combined, so that debtors of ad valorem and specific taxes would be bound, each class, for the whole. Power to levy assessments properly delegated to drainage board. Not unconstitutional. Soliah v. Cormack [N. D.] 117 NW 125.

29. Power not affected by fact that contemplated improvement failed. Northern

Where a district is voluntarily entered into, the burden may be considered self-imposed.[31] The expense of constructing a drainage ditch should be assessed against the property to be benefited,[32] and an assessment should be made for the actual benefits only.[33] The statutes contain provisions regarding lands outside a district,[34] lands within municipalities,[35] and railroad lands.[36] A second assessment may be made to complete a drainage system when the first proves inadequate,[37] and lands subsequently annexed to a district may be required to pay their proportionate share of the cost.[38]

In levying sewer assessments, as in other public improvements,[39] it is essential that the assessment be levied under a valid and constitutional statute,[40] though

While improvement of joint county ditch may not be affected by proceedings for establishment of ditch wholly within county, yet joint county ditch may be widened and deepened by the commissioners of one of abutting counties where purpose is to provide more adequate outlet for streams emptying therein, and cost of such an improvement may properly be assessed upon those most benefited thereby. Love v. Simon, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 359.

33. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380. Assessments cannot exceed benefits. Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Dowd, 132 Ill. App. 499. Where tract of land taxed at $1,200 was assessed $800 for drain, and it appeared that land previously was swamp land and useless, but by improvement became available for pasture and was doubled in value, assessment did not exceed benefits. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432. Code Supp. 1907. § 792a (Acts 28th General Assembly, p. 14, c. 29, § 1), limiting assessments in cities and towns, inapplicable to assessment for drain. Tax in excess of 25 per cent of value of land proper. Id. Mere matter of distance of lands from outlet of drainage ditch, save as to land thereat which may be drained otherwise than through ditch immaterial in estimating benefits. In re Castner [Iowa] 119 NW 980. Under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, § 115), § 40½, requiring necessary bridges to be constructed by commissioners, etc., expense of constructing bridge or culvert along or across a railroad right of way must be borne by the drainage district where there is no natural watercourse. People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669.

34. Farm drainage act (Sess. Laws 1885, p. 78) does not provide for assessment upon lands benefited outside district in question unless lands are, or may become, part of another district, or the channel is across the lands to be assessed. Vermillion Special Drainage Dist. Com'rs v. Shockey, 142 Ill. App. 272.

35. Property located wholly within town, though benefited, not subject to assessment. Quick v. Templin [Ind. App.] 85 NE 121. Under Act March 6, 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 407, c. 129, § 267), towns and cities are given exclusive jurisdiction over sewers and drains within corporate limits. Id. Where county surveyor had no authority over drains within corporate limits of town, he would be assumed to have followed law. Assessments presumed made on ditch without town. Id. Assessment imposed upon town by drainage district not subject to objection that it is tax for extraordinary expenditures requiring consent of town auditors and assessors as to levy. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Highway Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394.

36. Acts 30th General Assembly, p. 64, c. 68, §§ 12, 19, construed, and railroad assessments in latter section held entirely distinct from others. Railroad property not to be classified in tracts of 40 acres or less as provided by § 12. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380.

37. People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669.

38. Under Levee Act, § 58 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42), lands annexed can be compelled to pay proportionate share of original cost of improvement at any time after being brought into district, either by being assessed in separate proceeding or together with other lands. Schafer v. Gerbers, 234 Ill. 468, 84 NE 1064. Where entire cost of original work paid by former assessment before annexed lands brought into district and no future work requiring additional outlay, proportionate share of annexed land should be paid and amounts collected rebated proportionally to lands originally assessed, so that all property pay just proportion. Id. Payments made by owners of land originally assessed do not relieve land afterward annexed to district from bearing its proportionate share of cost of improvement. Id.

40. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Laws 1903, p. 231, c. 124, supersedes all other legislation upon subject of sewer construction in cities of third class; such act being inconsistent with former acts not previously repealed, in that there is a different mode of initiation and procedure in enforcing assessments. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956. Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, for designation of districts to be constitutional limitations relative to taxation are usually considered inapplicable.[41] The special assessments may be levied upon adjacent or abutting property especially benefited,[42] or according to the general public benefit.[43] The existence of a sewer is no defence against an assessment for a new sewer,[44] but a special assessment could not be levied where a city had not acquired the right to enter on the land.[45]

Procedure. See 10 C. L. 1643—Officials in exercising the power of levying assessments should act in pursuance to statute, with reasonable strictness,[46] and the levy may be required to be made at a meeting within the district[47] and in pursuance to an estimate.[48] Power to increase assessments by a board of supervisors does not authorize an arbitrary increase,[49] and it may be required that petitions for an assessment should clearly set out the purpose for which the money is to be used.[50] The lands should be classified on an equitable basis[51] and the report submitted charged with construction of sewers, and providing manner of apportionment, held not special legislation as to cities to which applicable. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Though only one city at time of passage could derive benefit from act. Id. To sustain statute authorizing city to apportion sewer assessments, it is unnecessary to hold legislative power as unlimited, so as to prevent judicial interference, where manifest injustice or violation of constitutional principle is shown in enforcement of rule prescribed. Legislative authority limited by rule that purpose of tax be public, and must directly appertain to district taxed. Id. Laws 1903, p. 907, held constitutional where no showing to contrary in individual case. Id.

41. Const. art. 15, § 1, requiring lands to be listed for assessment, valued for taxation and assessed separately, not applicable to special assessments. McGarvey v. Swan, [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Const. art. 1, § 28, requiring all taxation to be equal and uniform, not restriction of power to levy municipal special assessments. Id.

42. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. State basing apportionment of assessment upon area and frontage establishes equitable and just rule. Id. In an assessment upon lots to defray the cost of a local sanitary sewer, the municipality is not required to make a deduction because of the proximity of a public park which does not directly abut thereon. Close v. Parker, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 85. Provisions of municipal code, as to improvements for which special assessments are made, that "corporation shall pay cost of intersections" has reference to parts of street improvements at intersection of streets one with another, and has no application to the crossing of a street by sewer for purposes of local sanitary drainage. Id.

43. Property benefited liable though nonabutting, and no laterals laid to it. Beckett v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 659. Where city established sewer system and subsequently extended corporate limits so that two sewer districts were formed, on proposal to construct sanitary sewer in first additional district and storm sewer in the other, each to be independent, such proposed sewers were public for which whole city could be taxed, though only limited portion would be drained. State v. Wilder [Mo.] 116 SW 1087.

44. Property enhanced in value, though at present unnecessary. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. That corner lot has been once assessed for sewer along one street shown not constitutional reason for a subsequent assessment along and through other street. Id.

45. Under Local Improvement Act, § 53 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 435, c. 24, § 559). City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417.

46. McDougall v. Bridges [Wash.] 100 P 835. Reasonably substantial following of statutory method of making public improvements by special assessments is essentially a jurisdictional matter. Failure to proceed, under Laws 1903, p. 231, c. 124, as to sewer assessment rendered same void. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956. Laws 1905, p. 281, c. 150, providing that special assessment be not set aside unless made fraudulently and in bad faith, not intended to reach beyond irregularities and include jurisdictional facts. Id.

47. Assessment at meeting outside district in absence of and without notice to clerk, void. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631.

48. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 3738 (Pierce's Code, § 4554), as amd. Laws 1905, p. 363, c. 175, as to levy by drainage commissioners, a levy in excess of amount required for maintenance and repairs, made without previous estimate and in part to pay outstanding warrants, is void. McDougall v. Bridges [Wash.] 100 P 835. Excess not separable from amount legally to be levied for maintenance. Id. Officials of a drainage district have no power to create an indebtedness in advance for work, and then levy an assessment. Schafer v. Gerbers, 234 Ill. 468, 84 NE 1064.

49. Court will remedy abuse of power. In re Castner [Iowa] 119 NW 980. Increase of assessment not justified by evidence. Under circumstances showing hostility of officials, little weight should be given to usual presumption that assessment, being official action, was properly raised. Id.

50. Petition for levying original assessment (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42, §§ 11-13), or for additional assessment (§ 37), must clearly set out nature of work or purpose for which money is to be used. Property owners have right to be heard as to act materially affecting extent or cost of improvement. Schafer v. Gerbers, 234 Ill. 468, 84 NE 1064. Petition sufficient to show purpose for which money was to be raised. Id.

51. Under Code 1907, § 1989-a12, as to within the time specified.[52] Drainage commissioners may be required to make a new classification where the prior one is unfair.[53] Statutory provisions govern reassessments,[54] the extension of a tax for repairs,[55] or whether a new assessment for the enlargement of a drain by supplemental petition is proper.[56] Drainage commissioners making an assessment, who are also property owners in the same district, may be disqualified.[57]

Procedures for sewers must conform to the requirements of notice and hearing,[58] and any ditch assessment made without notice to the landowner is void,[59] classifying lands receiving benefits on scale of one hundred, where petitioner's land was all swamp land receiving greatest benefits, method of apportioning assessments on other lands was immaterial. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432. Real question whether assessment was equitable. Id.

52. Code Supp. 1907, § 1989-a12, requiring drainage commissioners to inspect and classify land benefited within 20 days, held directory rather than mandatory. No requirement that report be submitted within 20 days. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432.

53. Under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42), § 21, where commissioners find prior classification to be unfair, it is their duty to make a new one. Nothing left to discretion. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631. Where new classification quashed on certiorari, fact did not affect duty to make new classification. Not authorization of abandonment. Id. Resolution adopted after assessment due, purporting to ratify levy, ineffective. Id.

54. Under Acts 30th Gen. Assem. p. 60, c. 67, §§ 3, 4 and c. 68 (p. 65), providing for reassessments and relevy, a reassessment would not be prevented by fact that former illegal levy had been paid. Howard v. Emmet County [Iowa] 118 NW 882. Under Code, § 1940, as to notice and Acts 30, Gen. Assem. pp. 59, 61, cc. 67, 68, as to hearing on reassessment, board may make equitable adjustment of landowner's claims and consider damages. Id.

55. In assessment under Farm Drainage Act § 41 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, § 116), no new classification is required, but tax must be extended on classification previously adopted. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306. Under Farm Drainage Act § 41 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, § 116), where assessment extended according to classification made when district organized, no notice of assessment required. Id.

56. Laws 1905, p. 716, c. 419, as to drainage construed, and, under the various sections, commissioners could not make a new assessment of benefits for an enlargement of a drain by supplemental petition under last paragraph of § 10. Appeal of Chandos [Wis.] 120 NW 523. Demurrer by drainage commissioners to remonstrance against supplemental petition by commissioners for new assessment of benefits related back to petition, and should be sustained if petition was insufficient. Id.

57. Nutwood Drainage & Levee Dist. v. Reddish, 234 Ill. 130, 84 NE 750. Disqualification of commissioners being landowners unobjectionable, where classification by previous officers. Spreading of assessment mere mathematical computation. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631. Classification not invalidated by fact that commissioners were landowners, when assessment under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42). People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. In assessment under Farm Drainage Act, § 41 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, § 116), commissioner owning land in district is not incompetent to make assessment. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306.

58. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Where Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, authorizes city to regulate procedure of assessments, and no showing by petition in relation to such municipal regulations, it must be assumed on review that required notices and hearing to constitute due process of law were provided for and complied with. Id. Where statute prescribes district to be specially assessed and fixed standard of apportionment so that only mathematical calculation is required to determine amount of assessment, a hearing upon the question of benefits or the application of the statutory rule is not necessary to constitute due process of law. Id.

59. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. Act May 23, 1907 (Acts 1907, pp. 890-910), providing (§ 8, par. g.) for publication of notice to persons interested in assessments with 30 days for exceptions, complies with constitution as to due process of law. Caton v. Western Clay Drainage Dist. [Ark.] 112 SW 145. Acts 30th Gen. Assem. p. 61, c. 68, §§ 12, 19, construed and latter section held to provide for notice (as provided in §§ 3, 12) and appeal (§ 14), wherefore not unconstitutional. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380. Drainage Act (Rev. Codes, 1905, §§ 1818-1850) not violative of 14th amendment of federal constitution or state Const. § 13, as to taking of property without due process of law. Soliah v. Cormack [N. D.] 117 NW 125. Statute providing for organization of drainage districts with special assessments in proportion to benefits received, and that notice be given to property owners, with right to appeal from order of assessment, violates no constitutional rights, such as taking of private property for private use (State v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412), taking of property for public use without compensation (Id.), taking of property without due process of law (Id.). Laws 1907, p. 678, c. 448, § 40, providing that owners of lands, benefited by construction of new ditch and its connection with ditch already constructed for which land was not assessed, shall pay same proportion of benefits received by their lands that lands assessed for original ditch were forced to pay, are unconstitutional as deprivation of property for public purpose without compensation and but an owner properly advised of the proceeding will be charged with notice of subsequent actions.[60] Sewer commissioners may not delay an assessment an unreasonable time.[61]

Validity of assessment and objections thereto. See 10 C. L. 1644—Usually the proceedings are not subject to collateral attack,[62] and injunction can only be maintained if the assessment is void.[63] A party objecting to an assessment has the burden of establishing its invalidity[64] and only objections going to the jurisdiction of the court should be urged against an application for judgment for nonpayment of an assessment.[65] The sufficiency of objections by the owners may be quesdue process of law. Lyon County v. Lien, 105 Minn. 55, 116 NW 1017. Other portions of statute not affected. Id.

60. Landowner by statute charged with notice of proceeding which he instituted. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. Under Act March 6, 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 458, c. 157), § 3, requiring petitioners to note date of hearing and notify persons not petitioners either personally or through sheriff, landowner, who was petitioner but was dismissed before proof of notice was made, was not entitled to additional notice. Id. Under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42), owners of land having been notified of classification are not entitled to notice of levying of drainage tax. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Under Rev. St. 1899, c. 122, art. 5 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 3935-3947) and § 8337, legislative intent was that landowner in court at commencement of proceeding was in court at all stages of procedure; supplemental assessment without notice not taking of property without due process of law, where landowner a petitioner. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Under Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a12, where notice given that supervisors would take action on commissioner's apportionment of assessments, adjournment to subsequent day did not deprive them of jurisdiction or require further notice. Gray v. Anderson [Iowa] 118 NW 526. Under Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a12, where notice given landowners that supervisors will act on apportionment of commissioners at hearing, at which hearing board might "increase, diminish, annul or affirm apportionment," no further notice is necessary. Id. Reduction of some assessment would involve increase of others, and landowners must take notice. Id.

61. Under St. 1904, p. 336, c. 384, § 3, sewer commissioners could not delay assessment until completion of system, but must levy for completed sewers or sections as soon as reasonably possible. Dunn v. Taunton, 200 Mass. 252, 86 NE 313. Failure to levy assessments for an unreasonable time, as required by St. 1904, p. 336, c. 384, § 3, ground for removal of sewer commissioners. Id.

62. No objections can be urged in an action collateral to proceedings in county court as to an assessment, except such as question jurisdiction. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Highway Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. Under Portland city charter §§ 389, 390, action of city council in establishing sewer district, determining benefits and making assessment is conclusive on courts on collateral attack, unless prima facie fraudulent. Beckett v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 659.

63. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. Levied without authority of law. Carr v. Arnold, 239 Ill. 37, 87 NE 870. That other persons were assessed over whom court had no jurisdiction cannot prevail plaintiff seeking to restrain assessment against his land. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. Under Burn's Ann. St. 1908, § 270, re-enacting the equity rule for the joinder of parties, several parties whose lands were specially assessed to repair a drain, and who claimed such assessment as void, because the lands were not liable, were entitled to join in suit to restrain enforcement. Quick v. Templin [Ind. App.] 85 NE 121. Bill to enjoin collection of taxes where certain taxes had been held illegal, and quo warranto to test legality of district was pending, held fatally defective in failing to allege threat or intention of commissioner's to levy another assessment. Carr v. Arnold, 239 Ill. 37, 87 NE 870. Where assessment for township ditch is in excess of benefits conferred, its collection may be enjoined, notwithstanding trustees had jurisdiction to order improvement, and all proceedings were regular. Stemen v. Hizey, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 601. Where answer in suit to enjoin assessment, denies many allegations of complaint, but affirmative allegations reveal invalidity of assessment, judgment is properly rendered for plaintiff on sustaining of demurrer and refusal of defendant to plead further. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956. Where, in construction by municipality of local sewer for sanitary purposes, by inadvertence of an assistant engineer employed to fix grade thereof, contract or specifications is departed from as to depth of sewer but without affecting its cost or efficiency, and error is not discovered until after work of construction is completed, and no substantial injury to rights of the lot owners is apparent, assessment against such lot owners will not be enjoined. Close v. Parker, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 85.

64. Presumption that assessing officers did their duty. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666; In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380; People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669. Where landowners objected to tax, because district was charged for construction of bridge over natural watercourse, along or across a railroad right of way, they should introduce evidence to establish such fact. People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669. Under statutes, since division of drainage tax could have been made subsequent to Sept. 30, introduction of record to and including that date was insufficient to rebut presumption that tax had been legally divided into installments and made matter of record. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

65. People v. Seaman, 239 Ill. 611, 88 NE

tioned on a motion to strike.[66] Where a county court sustained an objection to an additional assessment roll, it could make no further order for assessment.[67]

Waiver or correction of irregularities.[See 10 C. L. 1645]—Objections to assessments are subject to the principles of waiver[68] and estoppel.[69] The fact that a commissioner's report was defective and presented a jurisdictional question could not be raised in an action to collect a drainage tax, where it was adjudicated on the incorporation of a district.[70]

Review of assessment proceedings.[See 10 C. L. 1645]—The statutes usually provide for an appeal from an order fixing an assessment[71] after notice to the parties affected,[72] and injunction to restrain an execution is an improper method of re-

212. Irregularities in levy, which do not go to substantial justice of tax, are not ground for refusing to enforce its collection. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. In proceedings to compel collection of drainage assessment, an objection that district was not legally organized, and that commissioners were de facto officers, could not be upheld, since assessment was payable to district not individuals. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Highway Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. Where order of county court confirming assessment rolls recites no jurisdictional facts, and record does not show notice, jurisdiction of county court does not appear on face of proceedings. No presumption to authorize confirmation of assessment roll against city. Id.

66. Not necessarily by plea or demurrer. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306. Objections properly stricken from files without hearing evidence, when not possibly effective to question validity of assessment. Id. Objection not sustained by evidence properly overruled. Id.

67. Under original petition. Claussen Park Drainage & Levee Dist. Com'rs v. Daily, 239 Ill. 428, 88 NE 201. Provision of order that, if property owners objected to spreading of assessment, jury should spread, not authorized by law. Challenge to array of jurors, who spread assessment pursuant to order, properly sustained by county court. Id.

68. Landowner appearing and failing to object to reassessment waived same. Howard v. Emmet County [Iowa] 118 NW 882. Contention that assessment was levied to pay indebtedness already incurred held waived by stipulations. People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669. Where landowner notified of classification under farm drainage act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42), he should then appear and object, if he so desires, since failure means waiver. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Landowner cannot raise objection to classification on application for judgment against land for drainage tax. Id. Where classification acquiesced in for 20 years, any objection as to manner in which it was made would be regarded as waived. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631. Suit to enjoin assessment dismissed where landowner had knowledge of proceedings, permitted drain to be built, and accepted benefits. Laches and want of equity. Von Cotzhausen v. Dick [Wis.] 119 NW 822. Landowner signing petition for drain chargeable with constructive notice of decision and subsequent proceedings in establishing ditch, making apportionment and assessment Id.

69. Drainage commissioner who participated in preliminary steps for establishment of district, including assessments, estopped to object that court was without jurisdiction to confirm assessment. Grantee held to have notice and also estopped. People v. Seaman, 239 Ill. 611, 88 NE 212. Petitioner for formation of district with notice of hearing could not subsequently urge invalidity of districts' incorporation in action against him to recover taxes. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Where landowner did not object to formation of district, inclusion of land, or petition to determine districts' debt, appeal being provided for all such proceedings, he was estopped to question assessment, except as to constitutionality of law under which assessment made. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pierce County [Wash.] 97 P 1099. Under Laws 1899, p. 373, c. 150, as amended by Laws 1901, p. 388, c. 107, § 3, as to procedure of assessments, property owners who, in response to preliminary notice, did not object to creation of district and sewer improvement, are not precluded from subsequently objecting to assessment. City of Pueblo v. Colorado Realty Co. [Colo.] 99 P 318. Construing various sections. Id.

70. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

71. County board in fixing assessments for ditch under Comp. St. 1907, c. 89, art. 1, acts judicially; judgment subject to revision and correction in direct proceedings. Omaha & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116. Under farm drainage act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42) as to assessments on graduated scale, and as to appeals, county or circuit court on appeal takes jurisdiction merely to correct errors, not to hear matter de novo and make an independent classification. People v. Grace, 237 Ill. 265, 86 NE 628. Appeal from classification under statute does not vacate classification. Classification of commissioners in force until modified on appeal as provided by statute. Id. Levy by commissioners pending appeal, valid. Judgment may be rendered for legal rate as established by final classification. Id. On appeal classification of drainage commissioners may be laid before jury to correct errors. Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42), § 25. Id.

72. Under Code, § 1947, as to appeal from order fixing assessments, and § 1946 as to apportionment of cost, with notice to petioners, appeal from assessment without notice to petitioners was properly dismissed. Poage v. Grant Tp. Ditch & Drainage Dist. No. 5 [Iowa] 119 NW 976. Parties affected by assessment of damages and benefits are necessary parties to appellate proceedings. In re Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 [Iowa] 120 NW 83. Failure to serve notice of appeal on four view.[73] Drainage commissioners disqualified from making an assessment by being property holders in the district, are necessarily incompetent to sit as a commission to determine questions of fact arising upon objections.[74] Writ of error may be a proper method of review,[75] and the consideration of the validity of a sewer assessment has been refused when submitted on reserved questions.[76] The right to appeal from an assessment and to demand a jury trial may be denied an owner who is only assessed to pay the cost of construction of a sewer.[77]

Collection.[See 10 C. L. 1846]—A county collector of revenue may be authorized to sue for the recovery of drainage taxes,[78] and, in such suits, statutory requirements relative to the assessments are liberally construed.[79] A statutory provision as to the filing of a delinquent tax list has been held merely directory,[80] not affecting a state's right to sue.[81] Proceedings for the collection of an assessment cannot be prevented by the fact that debtor has a counterclaim.[82] Statutes may authorize the persons first named in petition fatal to jurisdiction of court. Id. Acts 32d General Assembly 1907, p. 100, c. 95, authorizing employment of counsel to represent districts on appeal, does not change necessity of notice to confer jurisdiction on appellate courts. Id.

73. Omaha & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116.

74. Nutwood Drainage & Levee Dist. v. Reddish, 234 Ill. 130, 84 NE 750. County court erred in compelling petitioners to try objection before prejudiced tribunal. Id.

75. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, p. 625, authorizing writ of error in special assessment proceedings, not affected by repeal of Levee Act, § 25 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42), as to writs of error and appeals. Judgment order of county court, reviewable. Schafer v. Gerbers, 234 Ill. 468, 84 NE 1064. Nothing in levee act as now amended referring to review by writ of error. Id.

76. Only constitutional questions to be considered. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Will not consider validity of sewer assessment from constitutional standpoint on allegation that city levied according to area without regard to benefits, in absence of showing procedure adopted in levy, since such allegation does not disprove consideration of benefits. Id.

77. Under Act May 16, 1891 (P. L. 75), §§ 2, 6, as amended by Act April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124), owner of property assessed only to pay cost of construction of sewer does not have right to appeal from assessment and demand jury trial. Only person whose property is taken injured or destroyed, or who is assessed to pay damages for property injured, etc., who possesses right. Seventh Street Sewer, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 484. Under Act May 16, 1891 (P. L.) 75), §§ 2, 6, as amended by Act April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124), only remedy of owner assessed for benefits to pay cost of sewer exclusively is to file exceptions to report of viewers and thus secure modification. Id. Jury trial denied on statement of property owner that viewers had made excessive assessment for benefits and that assessment against city should have been larger. Id.

78. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8332 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3942), and §§ 9194, 9291, 9302, 9309 (pp. 4233, 4268, 4272, 4281), county collector of revenue has authorty to sue owner of land within drainage district to recover special drainage and back taxes. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

79. When valid assessment is shown, its entry upon tax book, and failure to pay it when due, a good cause of action is made out. All other requirements and proceedings are mere formalities intended to assist collection. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Where valid drainage assessments entered on books, taxes were valid notwithstanding irregularities in entry, extension, and certificate of assessments, and informality of certificate of authenticity of county clerk. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8344 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3947), provisions of art. 5 to be liberally construed. Id. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8332 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3942), § 9291 (p. 4268), and § 9313 (p. 4283), as to delinquent taxes, drainage taxes due Jan. 1, and July 1, 1896, did not become delinquent until Jan. 1, 1896, and suit brought Dec. 28, 1900, was not barred by limitations, being brought within 5 years after deliquency. Id.

80. Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, p. 851, § 106, held directory, not mandatory. Statute considered in connection with Revenue Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 120), § 191, that no tax be illegal because not returned within time required by law. People v. Hulen, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

81. Where levy of special taxes properly made, and taxes not paid, failure to return and certify taxes as delinquent did not affect state's right to sue for taxes. Suit maintainable 5 years after taxes should have been returned as delinquent. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 576. Failure to return unpaid special taxes as delinquent destroys tax bill of prima facie affect as evidence that taxes are past due and payable Id. Failure to return would not affect state's right to lien for taxes where properly levied and unpaid. Id.

82. In action by county collector of revenue for drainage and levee taxes, defendant could not set off value of old levee for which promoters of district had promised to reimburse him in consideration of signing of petition for district, since neither collector nor district owner of taxes sued for. State v. Dumphy [Mo.] 115 SW 573. Suit by collector as trustee for owners of taxes. Id. Bill to enjoin a sale of land under drainage assessment because amount to be earned by complainant in constructing portion of drain would cover assessment is without equity, since delinquent should pay assessment and collect contract price Harrington v. Dickinson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 996, 118 NW 931. Decree of sale in suit by auditor general to sell land delinquent for assessments precludes objections on injunction that owner is en-payment of assessments under protest.[88] A city board of health required by ordinance to record its proceedings and orders can not establish a lien on a lot for the expense of draining it when the order to drain was not entered on the minutes.[84]

§ 7. Management and operation; duty to properly construct, maintain, and repair works, and provide drainage.[85]—See 10 C. L. 1646—A drainage district may be required to construct a bridge where a natural channel is enlarged, pursuant to statute so as to be impassable.[86] Where a railroad company established a satisfactory culvert to handle the waters of a natural channel, it could not be compelled under a drainage act to furnish additional improvements to take care of the water discharged into such channel by a drainage system.[87] Ordinarily, drainage corporations are not liable for negligence in the performance of duties,[88] but the drainage commissioners may be liable.[89] Proceedings of drainage commissioners at a meeting held outside the district have been held illegal and void.[90] A mandatory duty imposed upon drainage commissioners as to widening a drain may be enforced by a manda-

titled to credit or that reassessment was not ordered by supervisors. Property to have been determined in prior suit. Id. Decrees and sales in tax foreclosure proceedings only to be set aside when taxes paid or land exempt. Objections held irrelevant. Id. Agreement with tax collector to offset amount to become due landowner on completion of contract to build portion of drain, invalid. Id. No authority for paying taxes in installments. Id.

83. Comp. Laws 1897, § 4359, held to authorize payment of drain taxes under protest, as given to taxpayers by general tax law. Williams v. Merritt, 152 Mich. 621, 15 Det. Leg. N. 204, 116 NW 386. General statute authorizing payment of taxes under protest does not apply to drain taxes. Id. Taxpayer entitled to recover entire tax paid under protest where contracts illegal and legal portion of tax not severable. Id.

84. Proceedings by board of health pursuant to Kirby's Dig. §§ 5722, 5723. Dinning v. Moore [Ark.] 117 SW 777. Defective report of commissioners adjudicated by county court incorporating district, not cause for objection, in action to collect drainage tax. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

86. Under Farm Drainage Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, 810) §§ 41, 74, where drainage district so enlarges natural drain through farm that it is impossible for owner to get from one portion of farm to another, which was possible before enlargement, such district must provide bridge, though land was situated in another drainage district so far as local drainage was concerned, and though right to construct such enlargement was secured by voluntary agreement instead of by condemnation, since statutory requirement of bridge applies to both cases. Lake Fork Drainage Dist. Com'rs v. Biggs, 134 Ill. App. 239.

Code, § 2021, that railway companies shall keep in good repair bridges over drains, etc., does not apply in such case. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Wright County Sup're [Iowa] 116 NW 805.

88. Duties and powers assumed in invitum and no liability to respond in damages for neglect in performance of duties, unless so provided by statute. Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Dowd, 132 Ill. App. 499. Drainage district not liable to respond in damages when causing overflow of land. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist., 140 Ill. App. 298. Drainage district not liable for unauthorized acts of commissioners for which they are personally liable. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist., 236 Ill. 36, 86 NE 163. Intentional neglect of statutory duty as to widening drains. Langan v. Milk's Grove Special Drainage Dist. No. 1, 239 Ill. 430, 88 NE 182.

89. In action under Levee Act, § 50 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42), making drainage commissioners liable for neglect of duty, an instruction that owner might recover damages if the commissioners might have furnished adequate drainage by a practical and feasible plan, but failed to do so should have been given. Binder v. Langhorst, 234 Ill. 583, 85 NE 400. Instruction that, if money was insufficient, commissioners should levy an additional assessment, should also have been given. Id. In action under levee act, error to instruct that commissioners could not be found guilty except for neglect of statutory duty, when failing to inform what duty was. Id. Commissioners not relieved by fact that ditch as constructed by former commissoners was inadequate. Duty to furnish drainage and to correct mistakes so as to secure adequate protection. Id. Commissioners not relieved from liability because natural conditions caused flooding. Id. Power of commissioners under direction of court to construct any work necessary for ample drainage of lands, whether within or without district, and to raise moneys by assessments, is plainly given by statute. Id.

90. People v. Anderson, 239 Ill. 266, 87 NE 1019. Jurisdiction of drainage commissioners confined to territorial limits of district. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631.

91. Langan v. Milk's Grove Special Drainage Dist. No. 1, 239 Ill. 430, 88 NE 182. Petition in mandamus to compel drainage com-

mus,[91] and mandamus will lie to compel the removal of conditions of drainage which constitute a wrong and inflict an injury on property,[92] but the remedy is inapplicable as to discretionary duties.[93] The employment of labor by a drainage official may be authorized so as to bind the district.[94] Jurisdiction as to repairs of drains may be vested in municipalities within the corporate limits.[95] Liability of a municipality as to the maintenance of sewers may be predicated upon the negligent construction of such improvements.[96] A city required by charter to promptly repair sewers is not an insurer against injuries to property from obstructions.[97] A missioners to deepen and widen main and lateral drains held sufficiently certain showing it was practicable to enlarge ditches to carry away water. Petitioner not required to ascertain exact character and amount of work necessary, or furnish plans. Id. Farm Drainage Act, §§ 17, 41 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, §§ 91, 116), as to duty of drainage commissioners to provide ditches, is mandatory. Ample power conferred for performance of duty. Id. Proceeding by mandamus to compel widening of drain, an action at law, governed by rules of pleading as to such actions. Statute of limitations not available unless pleaded. Id. Averment that petitioners requested drainage commissioners to deepen and enlarge ditches, sufficient averment of demand. Id. Under facts, no merit in defense of laches. Id. Judgment commanding commissioners to deepen and widen ditches so as to provide outlet of ample capacity to carry off waters from petitioner's land held sufficiently definite and certain. Id.

92. By property owner. Latham v. Holland, 133 Ill. App. 144. Property owners entitled to insist that drainage commissioners construct ditches of sufficient capacity to protect lands from overflow, provided cost of whole work did not exceed benefits to be derived. Id.

93. Under Farm Drainage Act, § 17 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42, § 91), authorizing drainage system, with preference to tile drains, and § 76 (§ 151), providing that ditches, when open, be of tile drains if practicable, determination of whether tile drain is practicable is for commissioners, and cannot be reviewed by mandamus unless fraudulent. People v. Henry, 236 Ill. 124, 86 NE 195. Petition insufficient to aver fraud. Id.

94. Under Act 1905, p. 231, §§ 16, 33, as to levee district, president of district had power to hire work done on private levees, and district was liable for payment, where work necessary to protect district from overflow and partly constructed levees from damage. Red River Levee Dist. No. 1 v. Russell [Ark.] 114 SW 213. Where president of levee district has ordered work done under supervision of board's chief engineer, and has power to bind district, engineer would be acting within scope of authority, and action would bind district. Id.

95. Under Acts 1905, p. 407, c. 129, § 267, giving towns exclusive jurisdiction of drains within corporate limits, and Acts 1905, p. 474, c. 157, § 10, as to repairs, etc., county surveyor may only repair drains outside town. Quick v. Templin [Ind. App.] 85 NE 121.

96. Not liable for erroneous judgment as to what will be adequate. Schweriner v. Philadelphia, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 128. City liable for negligence in plan, construction and maintenance of public sewers. State v. Concordia [Kan.] 96 P 487. Where city sewer becomes choked because of want of ordinary care by city, fact that an extraordinary flood occurred will not relieve the city, negligence of city being proximate cause. City of Richmond v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 449. Complaint held to contain unnecessary verbiage and repetitions, but stating cause of action as to negligent construction of sewer whereby plaintiff's premises were flooded. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1006. Sufficient as against demurrer. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 87 NE 161. Declaration alleging sewer to be choked, wherefore water entered plaintiff's lot and dwelling, and concluding that plaintiff was otherwise damaged, sufficient to cover damage to all buildings on lot. City of Richmond v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 449. If not sufficiently advised of damages by declaration, bill of particulars should be demanded. Id. Where city sued for overflow caused by sewers being insufficient, evidence of complaints to engineer of other overflows was inadmissible. Facts of overflows admissible. Id. Opinion evidence of civil engineers as to whether sewers were of sufficient capacity to drain area, properly admitted. City engineer of 30 years' experience, who was engineer when city constructed system, and who was familiar with pipes, etc., competent witness. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 87 NE 161. Evidence sufficient to establish negligence by city in plan devised for drainage of city. Plaintiff's premises flooded. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1006; City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 87 NE 161. In action for injuries from falling into open drain in street, where city entered general denial, plaintiff had burden of showing negligence in falling to maintain place in reasonably safe condition. Parker v. Bedford [Iowa] 117 NW 955. Instruction that city was only bound to maintain sewers to meet ordinary conditions, and that if there was an extraordinary flood, "and not such as reasonably might be expected," city would not be liable, held proper. Quoted clause properly interlined to submit question if flood was extraordinary. City of Richmond v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 449. Construction of greenhouse on land liable to overflow, as contributory negligence, question for jury. Knowledge of danger held for jury. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1006. Finding of no negligence justified by evidence. City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 87 NE 161. Whether city was negligent in leaving drain without barriers near traveled street, for jury. Parker v. Bedford [Iowa] 117 NW 955.

97. Only liable for negligence. Katzenstein v. Hartford, 80 Conn. 663, 70 A 23. Under averments, plaintiff could only recover damages for negligent failure to remove obstrucsuperintendent of highways has been held personally liable for the laying of pipe across private land to connect a catch basin in a street with a ditch,[98] but the city was not liable for the negligence of such superintendent in failing to keep the ditch free from obstructions.[99]

§ 8. Private and combined drainage.[1]—See 10 C. L. 1047—Two or more adjoining landowners may lawfully join in the construction of a ditch solely upon the premises of one to drain a pond partly situated on the lands of all such proprietors.[2] The owner of dominant land is not entitled to discharge waters at such points as he pleases where a mutual system of drainage is entered into.[3] Parol permission for a drainage ditch is a mere license and is revoked by the conveyance of the land.[4]

§ 9. Obstruction of drains.[5]—See 10 C. L. 1048—A person obstructing a drain may be guilty of a nuisance.[6] The action for damages for the obstruction of a ditch, with relief by injunction as ancillary is not appealable to the circuit court under the Ohio practice.[7]

SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[8]

1. The office; election or appointment.[9]—See 10 C. L. 1048—Usually by statute, tions after notice. Id. Evidence of character of obstruction admissible to show no negligence of city in failing to remove. Evidence of other obstructions that one complained of admissible, where no claim that main sewer was defective or insufficient. Id.

98. Smith v. Gloucester, 201 Mass. 329, 87 NE 626. Laying out of street not authority for constructing pipe over private land. Id. City not liable for laying pipe across private land, etc. Id.

99. Act of superintendent not act of city. Smith v. Gloucester, 201 Mass. 329, 87 NE 626. Evidence did not warrant finding that city had made drain its own, so as to be liable for obstructions. Id. Evidence held not to warrant finding that pipe line, catchbasin and easement in ditch were adopted by city as main drain, under Rev. Laws 1902, c. 49, § 1, or otherwise. Id. That water was run from catchbasin through pipe into ditch for over 20 years might have subjected land to easement, but use made by public, not city. No liability. Id. Where ditch limited to carrying off surface water collected in catchbasin, it could not become a main drain or sewer so that city would be liable as a commercial enterprise. Id.

a sheriff is required to give bond,[10] and the failure to comply with such condition may render the office vacant and authorize the appointment of a successor without notice.[11] The statutes of Indian Territory make the United States marshals sheriffs, with the rights and liabilities of that office.[12] Where a sheriff is disqualified from serving a venire, the duty is to be performed by the coroner,[13] but if both are disqualified, an elisor must be appointed.[14]

§ 2. Powers, duties and privileges.[15]—See 10 C. L. 1649—A sheriff owes a two-fold duty, one to the public and one to private individuals who are concerned in the execution of civil or quasi civil process.[16] In the absence of constitutional limitations the legislature has power to define, add to and vary the duties of a sheriff.[17] The powers and duties of constables or peace officers as to the arrest of a person committing a crime are the same as sheriff's.[18] A sheriff cannot appoint or detail deputies to act as a guard for private property except to prevent threatened crime.[19] A sheriff may be an ex-officio tax collector,[20] and it has been held that the collection of taxes after the expiration of a term was not usurpation of office within a statute punishing such offense.[21]

§ 3. Compensation.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1649—The compensation of sheriffs is determined entirely by statute, and the various enactments provide an allowance for keeping prisoners,[23] or attending court,[24] that expenses be approved or audited,[25] that the compensation of one deputy be paid by the sheriff,[26] or that uncollected

24. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4900, art. 1531e, as to sheriff's duty in attending courts, and art. 2460, as to compensation, county was liable only for $2 per day for attendance of sheriff or deputy upon criminal district court. Ledbetter v. Dallas County [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 193. County not liable for pay for two deputies, though appointment of extra deputy authorized by court and necessary. Id.

25. Under facts shown, sheriff had approval of commissioners' court as to employment of two guards at county jail. Required by Rev. St. art. 4898. Ledbetter v. Dallas County [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 193. $1.50 per day for each necessary guard appointed allowed by Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 1098. Id. Appointment of jailer as authorized by Cods Cr. Proc. art. 52, immaterial. Id. County commissioners in making allowances to sheriff may properly include items of carfare in service and return of summons and in serving warrants of arrest on persons charged with lunacy, and telephone tolls where expended in matters pertaining to duties of the office, where by fees belong to the county.[27] A sheriff is also generally entitled to reimbursement for expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of the duties imposed on him by law.[28] A sheriff is entitled to commissions where an execution is issued and levied, though the judgment is satisfied by payment to the plaintiff's attorney.[29] Where a member of a state constabulary cannot by statute collect a fee for serving a criminal warrant, he cannot collect the same for the use of the state.[30]

§ 4. Deputies, undersheriffs and bailiffs.[31]—See 10 C. L. 1650—The appointment of a deputy may be mandatory.[32] Under a statute requiring the filing of a certified copy of the certificate of a deputy, the appointment is made a matter of public record.[33] Where a sheriff is disqualified from performing a duty, the disqualification will apply to a deputy.[34]

§ 5. Liabilities and rights. A. Liability in general.[35]—See 10 C. L. 1651—Generally, a sheriff is never liable at the suit of third persons unless expressly bound by the duty of his office,[36] though there is an exception to the rule, in that the sheriff owes a duty to his prisoner to keep him in health and free from harm.[37] Legal process, regular on its face and issued by competent authority, is a protection to a sheriff acting in obedience thereto,[38] but the protection obtains only when using cars and telephone the business of the office may be expedited and saving effected to the county over other methods of performing the same service. Boes v. Montgomery County Com'rs, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 76. Auditing and allowing of bill for expenses by circuit court held unnecessary, determination of action to recover same being sufficient audit. Harkreader v. Vernon County [Mo.] 116 SW 523.

26. Code Supp. 1907, § 510b, construed, and deputy required in all counties, for whose compensation sheriff, not county, is liable. Statute allows other deputies if fixed by supervisors, but "chief deputy" to be paid by sheriff, and where chief deputy was sole deputy, sheriff was responsible. Culver v. Fayette County [Iowa] 120 NW 627. Under Code Supp. 1907, § 510b, where deputy appointed and salary fixed at $50 per month by supervisors, to be paid by sheriff, latter could not escape obligation by having duties discharged under private contract at less rate. the officer is acting within the scope of the writ,[39] and a sheriff is not protected when the process is issued without jurisdiction.[40] Usually sheriffs are liable for the acts of deputies in serving process or performing duties which they are called on to perform by virtue of their office,[41] but the liability does not extend to wanton, extraofficial acts.[42] In an action by a sheriff against his deputy for an accounting, it is no defense that they both hold their offices through an unlawful contract.[43] A sheriff and sureties have been held liable for the escape of a person arrested on a writ of capias ad respondendum, though a copy of the writ and affidavit was not actually served.[44]

(§ 5) B. Failure to execute process or insufficient execution.[45]—See 10 C. L. 1651—The failure or refusal of a sheriff to execute process renders him liable for the resulting damages,[46] though sometimes the failure to execute a writ may be excused by written consent.[47] At common law, an officer was bound to levy execution on a defendant's property whether claimed by third persons or not,[48] but generally, by statute, a sheriff may now refuse to levy unless an indemnity bond is given.[49] In an action for damages for failure to levy an execution, the burden is upon the sheriff to justify his official conduct.[50] An execution prematurely issued is voidable, not void, and, unless quashed, protects the officer.[51] A deposit of fees may be precedent to the execution of a foreign writ.[52] A rule issued against a constable to show cause why he should not pay over moneys due on executions may be made absolute without waiting for the constable's voluntary appearance and answer.[53] An officer having a vested interest in an execution is disqualified from executing it.[54]

(§ 5) C. Failure to return process and false return.[55]—See 8 C. L. 1900—An officer failing to make a return of an execution is prima facie liable for the amount of the judgment.[56] A false return is not cause for complaint where the damage is due to the plaintiff's own default or misconduct.[57] Where a sheriff's return calling in outstanding county warrants for cancellation and reissue did not negative the fact that the townships named were all that there were in the county, such fact would be judicially noticed.[58]

third person unless he has knowledge of the ownership,[66] and prima facie ownership by virtue of possession is usually sufficient to authorize a levy.[67] Under statutory provisions, where a sheriff is sued in conversion for property attached, the litigation may be turned over to the plaintiff in the original action.[68] An attachment is a good defense in an action by a fraudulent vendee against a sheriff for seizing the property attached.[69] Where a constable wrongfully levied upon exempt property, the measure of damages was the value of the property and the value of the use and hire of such property.[70] Actions against a sheriff for conversion,[71] or to enforce liability in an official capacity,[72] may be barred by limitations.

(§ 5) F. Misappropriation of proceeds.[73]—See 10 C. L. 1653—Generally a sheriff collecting money upon legal process must pay it over to the persons entitled thereto.[74] A sheriff selling property for taxes and failing to collect the price is responsible to the state and county.[75] A sheriff is also liable for surrendering the property of a prisoner to another in disregard of the prisoner's rights,[76] or for delivering property seized in detinue after the tender of sufficient bond.[77]

(§ 5) G. Rights of levying officers.[78]—See 10 C. L. 1653—A sheriff who levies upon chattels by virtue of an execution acquires a special property therein and may sue one who takes them from his possession,[79] and statutory provisions permit the continuance of the action by the undersheriff where the sheriff dies.[80] Property in the custody of the sheriff, who places it in the care of a custodian or keeper, is in the absolute control of the sheriff, and the custodian has no lien thereon for his fees or the costs of keeping.[81] Where live stock is seized for delinquent taxes, a sheriff is entitled to reimbursement for the reasonable cost of keeping the same between seizure and sale.[82] A constable has been held not guilty of contempt in refusing to obey an order requiring the acceptance of a delivery bond when such order was without jurisdiction.[83]

§ 6. Liability on bonds.[84] See 10 C. L. 1654—The statutes provide who shall approve a sheriff's bond,[85] and ordinarily the official bonds cover the entire term of office.[86] The obligation is not be to extended beyond its express terms,[87] and the liabilities of sureties are largely dependent upon statutes to be construed in connection with the obligation.[88] A surety is, as against the public, liable for the misfeasance of a sheriff where the bonds for the previous year were void because of the forgery of one surety's signature.[89] The liability of sureties on an indemnity bond is measured by the obligation,[90] and sureties on such a bond given to make a levy are not released by the fact that the property was sold to one of the deputies in violation of law.[91] It may be stated generally that a sheriff is liable on his official bond for breach of duty, either to the public or to individuals concerned in execution of process,[92] and liability has been predicated upon the misappropriation of proceeds collected,[93] a false return,[94] a wrongful seizure of property,[95] an excessive levy,[96] the failure to take security,[97] and an unlawful arrest.[98] A sheriff failing to collect taxes, which are not returned and allowed as delinquent, may be required to account to the county and state as if collected.[99] Recoveries on a bond for the involuntary escape of a prisoner are limited to the actual damages arising out of and measured by the act itself.[1] Neither a constable nor his sureties are liable where a levy is released under ample security.[2] A suit for damages in the commission of a tort cannot be joined in one count with a suit on official bonds of the officers for committing such tort.[3] A petition in an action for damages for trespass has been held not to state a cause of action against the surety where there was no allegation of aid or benefit from such trespass.[4] A sheriff is not liable for breach of bond in failing to accept property tendered in a detinue suit after the expiration of his term,[5] and in such an action it is a defense that the property was tendered to the plaintiff, who also refused to accept it.[6] A complaint for breach of bond in that a sheriff refused to deliver property seized in detinue, though a sufficient bond was tendered, is not demurrable for failing to set out the writ of detinue,[7] the bond tendered,[8] or because showing that the property was in custody of the law.[9] Generally, in suits on an official bond for failure to sell property, the sheriff can show that the same is not subject to execution.[10] As an official bond is simply collateral security for the performance of an officer's duty, the action is barred by limitations when the suit for breach of duty is barred.[11]

The registration, enrollment or ownership of a vessel does not control her physical situs.[19]

§ 3. Master and officers.[20]—See 10 C. L. 1655—The authority of a master to arrest passengers cannot be delegated to another unless necessitated by danger to the ship or other passengers.[21] A mate in charge of the unloading is a vice-principal.[22]

§ 4. Seamen.[23]—See 10 C. L. 1655—One must be a regular employe on a vessel to have the rights of a seaman.[24] After the termination of their contract term of service, seamen are not released from their ordinary duties as seamen until they can be conveyed to some port where they can be discharged,[25] but they cannot, after such termination, be required to engage in other business.[26]

*Shipping articles.*See 10 C. L. 1655—Shipping articles to be binding must be executed by persons having capacity to contract[27] and due authority in the premises,[28] and should set forth the nature and, so far as practicable, the duration of the intended voyage or engagement.[29] Rights of seamen thereunder are governed by the law of the country where the contract was made.[30] A change of voyage entitles mariners to damages,[31] but in order to release them from their contract the change must be made willfully by the master and enforced against their consent,[32] and must be material.[33] The parol evidence rule applies to shipping articles.[34]

*Wages and subsistence.*See 10 C. L. 1655—The court will take judicial notice of the fact that seamen's accrued wages rarely aggregate $100.[35] Seamen have a lien upon the vessel for their wages.[36] A seaman forfeits his wages by desertion, that is, unlawful and wilful abandonment of the vessel without intention of returning to duty,[37] but not by a mere breach of duty by leaving without permission or failure to return where there was no original intention not to return,[38] though a seaman failing to return to a ship after leave is chargeable with the excess wages paid out to fill his place[39] and with fines imposed according to law.[40] A seaman may by his conduct be precluded from recovering costs in an action for wages, though he has incurred no forfeiture of the wages themselves.[41]

Expense of enlisting seamen. See 10 C. L. 1655

Care of injured seamen. See 10 C. L. 1656—A vessel is liable for damages for failure to give an injured seaman proper medical treatment and attention,[42] and is chargeable with the cost of his maintenance and care,[43] regardless of any question of negligence on the part of the vessel's officers.[44]

§ 5. Mortgages, bottomry, maritime and other liens on the vessel, craft or cargo.[45] See 10 C. L. 1656—The lien of a mortgage will not attach to after-acquired vessels as against intervening equities of strangers,[46] but a mortgage upon a vessel owned by the mortgagor at the time takes precedence over subsequent claims,[47] and, when recorded pursuant to the provisions of the act of congress, has the effect of a mortgage on real estate.[48] Under the American decisions, a draft given by the master to the charterer for an advance to be supplied to the vessel's disbursements, such draft being made payable out of the first freight received and secured by a pledge of the vessel and freight, is equivalent to a loan on bottomry.[49]

Maritime liens are given primarily for the benefit of commerce[50] and apply only to vessels engaged in maritime service.[51] They apply not only to the vessel but also to its necessary equipment,[52] and to foreign as well as domestic vessels.[53] An act providing for such lien will not be so construed as to defeat the purpose of the legislature.[54] The lien given for damages caused by a vessel is a sort of an equitable attachment[55] and is not limited to the case of damages done to trans-portable property,[56] but does not extend to freight money due the owner on the cargo.[57] Damage liens on the same vessel, resulting from collisions on different dates, take priority in the inverse order of such dates.[58] When such a lien is not within the jurisdiction of admiralty, it is enforcible in the state courts.[59] Liens for seamen's wages,[60] towage and wharfage,[61] repairs, supplies and expenses,[62] are treated elsewhere. The effect of bankruptcy is treated in another topic.[63] The court will take cognizance of any agreement between the parties,[64] but a vessel is not relieved from a lien for lighterage, as between it and the lienor, by reason of any contract between it and the shipper to which the lienor is not a party.[65] A mutual understanding is essential to create a lien except in emergency cases.[66] The rights of a lienor may be defeated by his laches [67] or by his failure to present his claim in an action in rem,[68] but not by his failure to enter merely personal action against the owner.[69]

Liens created by state laws may be enforced in another jurisdiction where the property is being administered,[70] or in admiralty,[71] unless the subject-matter is not within the jurisdiction of the admiralty courts,[72] in which case they may be enforced in the state courts.[73] The court may apportion liens between several vessels according to the terms of a joint contract therefor,[74] adjudicate the liens in accordance with their priority,[75] and make disbursement of all proceeds according to ownership thereof.[76]

be construed in the light of custom,[79] but its express provisions will not be overridden by custom [80] or otherwise.[81] A reference in the charter party to a certain clause in a bill of lading does not incorporate therein the entire bill of lading.[82] A charter whereby the owner is to navigate the vessel for the charterer operates as a demise, with a continued responsibility on the part of the owner for her proper navigation,[83] and in such case the owner is responsible for acts of navigation by a pilot,[84] unless the vessel is under the command of a compulsory pilot.[85] In some instances, the relation between owner and charterer is regarded as that of bailor and bailee.[86] A charterer cannot shift an obligation upon the vessel by directing the master to perform it.[87] Where the charterer undertakes to keep the vessel in repair, he cannot hold the owner liable therefor.[88] An exemption clause is waived by an unnecessary deviation of the vessel from its agreed course.[89] The burden is upon charterers to avoid liability for loss of the vessel while in their possession [90]

79. Under provision permitting cleaning at least once every six months and suspension of hire during time of cleaning, such time may be estimated from time last cleaned, and not necessarily from time of commencement of hire, regardless of her actual condition. Munson S. S. Line v. Miramar S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 722. Under clause providing that charterer shall procure and pay for all consular charges except those pertaining to the captain, officers or crew, it was duty of owner to procure and pay for bill of health pertaining to such persons so excepted. Expression "weather working day" in charter was construed according to custom of Savannah port providing that rain during working hours previous to noon shall prevent that day from counting. Pyman S. S. Co. v. One Hundred Tons of Kainit, 164 F 364. In case of overlap, a charter running for about certain period is construed to run for one round voyage of character contemplated in charter, unless delay was due to charterer's own fault. The Rygja [C. C. A.] 161 F 106. Where vessel chartered for period of "about six calender months," with option of extending period for six months, last six months was construed to commence to run with time she entered upon second voyage, and when chartered arrived in New York 30 days before the expiration, held to be entitled to his option to redeliver vessel in European port, with damages for prevention. Id. A break down clause providing that payment of hire shall cease until she be again in efficient state to resume her service relates only to physical efficiency, and not to procuring of survey and Loyd's certificate. The Queen Olga, 162 F 490. Liability for loss of cargo in loading is in accordance with terms of charter party, and stipulation that loading at a later place should be at shipper's risk and expense held to include exception as to acts of God, perils of the sea, etc., which was inserted, particularly in respect to former place. The Exmoor, 163 F 642.

Where owner by oral contract let boat, including master's services, such master remains agent of owner, and the charterer is not liable for damage resulting to boat solely through negligence of master in having mooring line too short, as result of which boat filled and sunk. Zabriskie v. New York, 160 F 235.

84. Acts of pilot are acts of navigation for which responsibility rests on owner, although charterer agreed to provide and pay for pilotage and port charges. The Leader, 166 F 139.

85. Pilot in such case is agent of neither owner nor charterer. The Hathor, 167 F 194.

86. Relation of bailor and bailee exists between owner and charterer of vessel under management of captain selected by owner in determining their relative liability for loss of vessel caused by overloading in captain's absence, vessel being in a sense in charge of charterer and, unless owner knew or had reason to believe that captain was neglecting his duties, it being charterer's duty to notify owner of the captain's absence before allowing loading to continue. or for nonpayment of charter hire,[91] and while they may offset against such hire due damages for the wrongful withdrawal of a vessel,[92] they will be held liable for failure to fulfill their contract with an assignee, as a result of which the owner takes back the vessel.[93] The charterer may recover damages from the owner caused by failure to provide service as agreed.[94] A receipt in full does not release a claim for such damages where they were not discovered until after the receipt was given.[95] An owner is liable in damages for failure to fulfill a charter [96] within the specified time,[97] but there is no liability in rem against a vessel for failure to enter upon a charter.[98] Where the vessel is not delivered in time for the first voyage the charterers may refuse to accept her until time for the second.[99] At the expiration of a fixed period, charterers are no longer entitled to possession.[1] A charter will not be construed unreasonably so as to permit cancellation.[2] When the number of lay days is specified and dispatch money allowed, the charterers must bear any extra expense incurred by them in accelerating the discharge.[3] Lay days ordinarily begin at the beginning of the loading or unloading,[4] and the date of such beginning is a question of fact.[5] Express provisions as to when lay days shall begin are controlling.[6] A vessel having brought her cargo to destination with no stipulation

Vaccarezzo v. 567,000 Gallons of Molasses [C. C. A.] 161 F 543.

92. Vessel was wrongfully withdrawn for nonpayment where hire in arrears was tendered before such withdrawal. Luckenbach v. Pierson, 168 F 403.

93. In this case, charterer failed to furnish proper fittings to assignee as agreed for carrying oil in bulk. Guffey Petroleum Co. v. Coastwise Transportation Co., 168 F 379.

94. Damages may be recovered for delay in loading or discharging when caused by insufficient supply of steam to operate winches which power owner agreed to furnish. Munson S. S. Line v. Miramar S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 722. Damages resulting from condition of vessel cannot be recovered from owner where vessel was delivered to charterer in condition agreed. Charterer could not recover for odor of creosote where vessel was cleaned as specified. Church Cooperage Co. v. Pinkney, 163 F 653.

95. Church Cooperage Co. v. Pinkney, 163 F 653.

96. Liable although he was mistaken as to nature of cargo. The Margaretha [C. C. A.] 167 F 794.

97. Charterer may recover only damages properly caused by delay in delivering vessel, and may not recover for ungathered bananas which were destroyed by storm during delay. Lombard S. S. Co. v. Lanasa & Goffe S. S. & Importing Co. of Baltimore City, 163 F 433. In absence of contract from delivery on particular day, vessel is not liable for damages for delay. But delay simply extends time within which demurrage may be charged against charterer. Milburn v. Federal Sugar Refining Co. of Yonkers [C. C. A.] 161 F 717.

98. The Margaretha [C. C. A.] 167 F 794.

99. Where there is fixed time for trips, charterer is not in such case responsible for hire for intervening time. Lombard S. S. Co. v. Lanasa & Goffe S. S. & Importing Co. of Baltimore City, 163 F 433.

1. This kind of charter presents considerable difficulties by reason of uncertainty as to length of voyage, and charterer is liable at the charter rate of freight for overlap, and for difference between charter rate and market rate in addition. The Rygja [C. C. A.] 161 F 106.

2. "Ready for loading by" a certain day does not permit cancellation if ready to load at any time during such last day, and "ready for loading" means ready in so far as information requested and furnished them by charterer will permit, the presence of necessary ballast when character of cargo is unknown not being unreadiness. Ruprecht v. Delacamp, 165 F 381.

3. Charterer who, in order to secure discharge money, accelerates discharge by night work, is liable for extra expense thereby incurred, though discharge is by brokers representing both him and ship. The Bencliff [C. C. A.] 161 F 909.

4. In estimating dispatch money, the lay days commence at time discharge actually begins, where both parties are ready and commence at time prior to that stated in charter. Elder Dempster S. S. Co. v. Earn Line S. S. Co., 163 F 868.

5. Earn Line S. S. Co. Ennis [C. C. A.] 165 F 633.

6. For purpose of computing dispatch money, lay days do not commence until time fixed in charter party, and where it is provided that they shall not commence until 24 hours after entry, they do not commence prior thereto, although vessel may have commenced discharging at once. Elder

as to lay days or demurrage performs her contract by discharging it in a safe place if no one claims it after a reasonable time.[7]

§ 7. Navigation and collision. A. Rules for navigation and their operation in general.[8] See 10 C. L. 1658—By their terms, the rules of navigation are not so iron-clad that literal compliance with them always exempts from liability, nor does a departure from them always cause liability.[9] The articles of the statutory navigation rules are of superior authority in case of conflict with the pilot rules.[10] Statutory rules of navigation do not apply where the vessels are co-operating in an agreed manoeuvre.[11] Failure to stand by and give assistance as required by statute raises a presumption of fault.[12]

(§ 7) B. Lights, signals and lookouts.[13] Lights. See 10 C. L. 1659—Obedience of the important requirement of the law as to displaying lights must be certain and unremitting,[14] and in some cases, lights must be displayed even in the absence of such law or any regulation.[15] Evidence of lack of lights after the occurrence of the collision has comparatively little weight.[16] The mere fact that a vessel carried proper lights may cast the responsibility for a collision upon the other vessel.[17] A party cannot recover damages for a collision caused [18] by his own negligence.[19]

Signals. See 10 C. L. 1659—A vessel is liable for a collision caused by violation of the signal rules,[20] inattention,[21] or failure to follow up the signals given.[22]

Dempster S. S. Co. v. Earn Line S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 168 F 50.

14. Under art. 11 of pilot rules for inland waters, providing that where vessel is of 150 feet or upward in length two lights must be displayed at anchor, the stern light lower than one forward, to indicate they are both on same vessel, and direction she is pointing, nor is it any excuse for this being left undone that a defective light is being repaired, it being the master's duty to know that lights are continually up. The Santiago, 160 F 742. Sailing vessels are governed by rule 5 of the statutory rules for rivers and harbors, and not by rule 11 of pilot rules regarding lights to be carried by barges and towed canal boats. The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371. Dredge held at fault for navigating without lights. United States v. Port of Portland, 161 F 193. Tug and tow held in fault for not exhibiting colored light. The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371. Scows held in fault for carrying but one light in violation of rule 11 of harbor inspectors, requiring two. The H. B. Rawson [C. C. A.] 162 F 312. Scow held at fault for negligently being adrift without lights. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 860.

15. Where there is no harbor regulation concerning display of signal lights by anchored vessel, the determination of negligence for failure to display same depends upon particular circumstances of time and place. Failure to display signals would be negligent if there are so many vessels usually plying to and fro that collision would likely result, but not if the vessel is moored where few vessels are plying and out of the way of incoming and outgoing vessels. Carscallen v. Coeur D'Alene & St. Joe Transp. Co. [Idaho] 98 P 622.

16. Evidence concerning lack of lights, based on ex parte examination made after collision, has little weight as against positive evidence of owners and navigators, where no notice of finding or inspection was given to parties in interest. The Dorchester, 163 F 779. Positive evidence that lights were burning 40 minutes before, corroborated by statements in log that they were burning immediately after, will prevail against testimony of persons that they were not burning when they boarded vessel after severe collision. Pennell v. U. S., 162 F 64.

17. Where overtaking steamer collided with tows, all of which carried proper lights. The Patience, 167 F 855.

18. Proximate cause is for the jury. Ives v. Gring [N. C.] 63 SE 609.

19. Collision between tug and marine railway which carried no lights. Ives v. Gring [N. C.] 63 SE 609. Burden is on defendant to set up and prove contributory negligence on the trial under Revisal 1905, § 483. Id.

20. Vessel proceeding in violation of signal rules takes risk of not hearing other signals and of not having her own signals Lookouts. See 10 C. L. 1659—A proper [23] and diligent [24] lookout, properly stationed,[25] is an essential requirement.

(§ 7) C. Steering and sailing rules.[26] See 10 C. L. 1659—A vessel must not attempt to pass too close to other vessels,[27] and must stop and reverse when a head-on collision is imminent.[28] Although sailing vessels have the right of way as against steamers,[29] and the privileged one of two steam vessels has the right to rely upon the other keeping out of her way,[30] yet such privileged vessel is bound not to em-heard. The Gerry, 161 F 413. Vessel liable for failure to give signals according to Int. Nav. Rule 8. The M. E. Luckenbach, 163 F 755. Failure of overtaking tug with tow to signal as to which side of another tug and tow she would attempt to pass on. Id. In a narrow channel, in undertaking to pass on starboard side of meeting vessel, if vessel receives no assenting signal, it is her duty to stop and reverse until course of the other is ascertained. See rules 11, 18, 25, in this instance. The Gerry, 161 F 413. Negligence to proceed without receiving assenting signal. The M. E. Luckenbach, 163 F 755. It is the duty of a steam vessel which receives no answering signal in a fog to sound alarm signals, stop and reverse if necessary, until the course and position of other vessel can be ascertained, under rules 26 and 15, governing navigation on the Great Lakes. Hawgood Transit Co. v. Mesaba S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 697. Where steamship is uncertain of course of tug by reason of such tug's failure to comply with signal, she must slow down and signal such fact, in accordance with rule 3 of pilot rules or she will be held guilty of contributory negligence, although rule 21 (art. 19, I. N. Rules, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2883), requires such former vessel to keep her course and speed. In this case, she continued porting her helm and, although the initial fault was with the tug, was held to be in part fault. The Robert Dollar [C. C. A.] 160 F 876. Rule for giving the bend signal is imperative upon every vessel approaching a bend or curve, whatever may be her own intention as to future navigation after she shall have reached it. Inland rule 5, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2882. The Winnie [C. C. A.] 161 F 101. Vessel held liable for not giving bend signal. Id. One was negligent for not stopping and waiting for vessel whose fog signals were heard before changing her course to enter port, the other was negligent for not stopping and navigating carefully on hearing fog signals of former vessel, in accordance with art. 16, Inland Rules (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2880). The Tremont, 160 F 1016. Rule requiring steam vessels to sound fog signals in thick weather is imperative. Under rule 14 of navigation on the Great Lakes (28 Stat. 645), fog signals are to be sounded at intervals of one minute, and giving of passing signals is not sufficient. Hawgood Transit Co. v. Mesaba S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 697.

21. The Winnie [C. C. A.] 161 F 101. Duty of dredge and scow to sound fog signals and to hear approach of steamship. The Kennebec, 167 F 847. Failure of lookout to hear fog signal is immaterial when it was heard by the mate. Pennell v. U. S., 162 F 64. Liable for inattention in failing to hear and comply with signals. The No. 4 [C. C. 22. Both equally liable where neither followed up their own signals. The Reliable, 167 F 571.

23. Must keep proper lookout. The Dorchester [C. C. A.] 167 F 124; The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371; The H. B. Rawson [C. C. A.] 162 F 312; Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 860. Steamer held liable for not having proper lookout. The Charles G. Endicott, 163 F 797. Dredge held at fault for navigating without lookout. United States v. Port of Portland, 161 F 193. The sole fault was with steamer for not maintaining proper lookout where schooner was sailing near mouth of river in light wind and kept her course and speed with lights easily to be seen on the vessel, though not seen until too late by master or lookout by reason of their negligence. The Dorchester, 163 F 779.

24. Law imposes upon lookout of steam vessel utmost diligence. The Dorchester, 163 F 779.

25. Bark held liable for improper stationing of lookout and inattention of officers. The Annasona, 166 F 801. Ferryboat was guilty of contributory fault by not having lookout properly stationed. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 860. Improper stationing of lookout on tug does not make it liable unless that be contributing cause. The Pawnee, 168 F 371.

28. The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371.

29. Steamer is required to notice and provide for a sailing vessel's leeway, under usual rule requiring former to avoid the latter. The Bulgaria, 168 F 457; The Dorchester, 163 F 779. Steamer held at fault for proceeding at full speed into the schooner, where, in lower New York Bay, Steamer was going at 13 miles per hour and schooner at three knots, and latter kept her course and speed, except that just before collision she turned to starboard and thereby lessened injury. The Charles G. Endicott, 163 F 797.

30. Privileged vessel is not necessarily at fault for keeping her course and speed, although burdened vessel failed to answer her signals. The Deveaux Powell [C. C. A.] 165 F 634. Light schooner is liable for suddenly changing her course and getting in way of laden schooner which had right of way. The Benjamin A. Van Brunt, 168 F 103. Burdened vessel cannot depend on privileged one varying from its legal rights barrass the other, either by changing its course or by an excessive rate of speed.[31] There is no right of way when it is obvious that, if adhered to, there is danger of a collision.[32] Vessels approaching each other must pass port to port,[33] but this rule applies only when they are approaching head-on or nearly so.[34] The rules for narrow channels [35] require that, if safe and practical, vessels shall keep on the side of the fairway which lies to the starboard side,[36] and shall navigate at a speed consistent with the safety of other vessels,[37] especially in case of a fog.[38] A like care is required in a harbor,[39] and reasonable care of a steamer in a fog at sea in the course of regular navigation.[40] A vessel should slow down upon becoming uncertain of the course of a meeting vessel.[41] Where a vessel collides with another which she is passing from behind, she has the burden of showing not only that she was free from negligence but that the other vessel was negligent.[42] or relieve itself from liability by showing its obedience to invalid rule; starboard hand situtions is not changed by signals and inspector's rule 9 permitting her to adopt a two whistle course and pass ahead, since inspector's rule is repugnant to starboard hand rule and invalid. The Pawnee, 168 F 371. Burdened ferryboat held at fault, under I. Nav. Rules, arts. 19, 22, 23, in crossing, without slacking, ahead of steamer with right of way. The John H. Starin [C. C. A.] 162 F 146.

31. Under Nav. Rules of 1864, Rules 20 and 21. Pennell v. U. S., 162 F 64. Steamer having right of way held at fault, under I. Nav. Rules, art. 21, in failing to keep her course. The John H. Starin [C. C. A.] 162 F 146. Privileged vessel held at fault in changing her course. Montgomery v. Chatfield [C. C. A.] 162 F 882.

32. The John H. Starin [C. C. A.] 162 F 146. Vessel that has the right of way is not thereby exempt from taking all proper steps to avoid collision. The Aries, 165 F 514. Schooner held liable for negligent navigation in not avoiding tow carrying proper lights. Id. Approaching steamer is liable for not stopping upon seeing a dangerous maneuver of tug with tows. 35. "Narrow channels" are bodies of water navigated up and down in opposite directions and do not include harbor waters with piers on each side. I. N. Rules, art. 25. The No. 4 [C. C. A.] 161 F 847.

36. Under I. N. Rules art. 25 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2883) which is held applicable to the Columbia River in vicinity of Westport Light. United States v. Port of Portland, 161 F 193. Vessel held liable for damage resulting from failure to keep on side of fair way or midchannel that lay to starboard side of vessel where evidence showed that collision occurred as a result of vessel at fault being on port side and also from her suddenly changing her course contrary to rule 25. The Abram F. Skidmore, 160 F 265. Vessel is liable for collision caused by its failure to keep on right hand side of 600 foot channel. The Winnie [C. C. A.] 161 F 101. Scow held not in fault by reason of fact that in shifting her position she swung across course of tug and tow rounding a bend, and tow was injured by being run against bridge abutment, where tug was on wrong side of river contrary to rules. The Three Brothers, 162 F 388.

37. The Kennebec, 167 F 847.

38. The No. 4 [C. C. A.] 161 F 847. Collision in fog which occurs despite all efforts to avoid it must, as a rule, be due to excessive speed of one or both; in such case 8 knots an hour is excessive, under Inland Regulations, art. 16. Id. Speed of five or six knots an hour in fog is excessive for a tug with long hawsers in a narrow channel, and such tug is liable for collision although part of such speed is due to flood current. The Matanzas, 166 F 985.

39. Ferryboat held solely liable for excessive speed in fog, getting out of course and sinking car float at pier. The Somerville [C. C. A.] 162 F 681. Speed of five miles an hour in dense fog in crowded harbor held excessive. Id. Vessel outward bound and passing to stern of anchored schooner navigated with care at slow speed outside the dredged channel, on anchorage ground and on her own side, held not at fault for collision from meeting steamer in fog. The Simon Dumois [C. C. A.] 163 F 490. Steamer is bound to use only such precautions as will enable her to stop in time to avoid collision, after an approaching vessel going at moderate speed comes in sight; in case of dense fog this might require both vessels to come to standstill, until course of each was definitely ascertained, while in lighter fog it might authorize each to keep their engines in sufficient motion to preserve their steerageway. The Kennebec, 167 F 847.

40. Doctrine of maritime courts is that steamer in fog must not run at such speed as will prevent her from reversing and stopping before colliding with vessel which she ought to have seen; seven knots an hour held to be excessive, but 3½ knots an hour not, there being nothing in the very complete log of other vessel to indicate greater speed. See Nav. Rules 1864, No.'s 20, 21. Pennell v. U. S., 162 F 64. Collison held due to excessive speed of gunboat, since brig was not at fault and could not have avoided collision after hearing whistle. Id.

41. Complainant held in fault for not slowing to steerage way, as required by rule three, when her master became uncertain as to the course of other vessel. The Esparta [C. C. A.] 160 F 289.

42. The M. E. Luckenbach, 163 F 755. Overtaking steamer held solely liable for

(§ 7) D. Vessels anchored, drifting, grounded.[43] See 10 C. L. 1660—Although anchorage grounds are not used exclusively for anchoring,[44] vessels navigating there must do so with the utmost caution,[45] and where there is a collision, the usual presumption is that the moving vessel is at fault.[46] A vessel is liable for a collision caused by its being anchored with due care,[47] or as required by the harbor regulations.[48]

(§ 7) E. Tugs and tows, pilot boats, fishing vessels, etc.[49] See 10 C. L. 1660—A tug contracts with its tow as an expert,[50] and is liable for liability to handle the tow[51] and for negligence,[52] which liability continues until the tow is safely anchored;[53] but a tug is neither a common carrier nor an insurer,[54] and, hence, its liability must be predicated upon negligence[55] proximately resulting in the injury complained of.[56] Where damage results to the tow through the negligence of the collision with tows, all of which carried proper lights, negligence of steamer being either in failing to locate tow or in failing to keep away from it. The Patience, 167 F 855.

44. May be used for necessary navigation with due regard for right of vessels anchored there. The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371.

45. Vessels must not proceed at excessive speed in anchorage grounds. The Merrill C. Hart, 162 F 371. Law requires steam vessel entering anchorage ground upon dark night to carefully feel her way to avoid accidents. The Santiago, 160 F 742. It is always a question of fact whether the speed is excessive or not, and in determining that question, the locality, hour, state of weather, darkness of night, surroundings and all circumstances of case, are to be fully considered. Id. Vessel held not negligent in navigating at four miles an hour through anchorage grounds. Id. Vessels causing extraordinary swells although navigated in the usual manner are liable for their effects upon innocent vessels in dock, since the latter are not expected to so manage as to receive such swells without harm. The Hendrick Hudson, 163 F 862. While vessel is usually liable for damage caused by its swells to vessels lying at bulkhead, although going at its usual speed, she is not liable for injury which could not have been anticipated, as where injury was caused to other vessel by swell throwing it against unknown projection, where passing vessel for many years had passed same place at same speed without causing injury. The New York [C. C. A.] 167 F 315. Vessel held not liable for injury caused by swells which were no greater than those incident to reduced speed, especially in the absence of any evidence of negligence, and evidence that swells were caused by her was not clear. The Providence, 168 F 564.

46. The Santiago, 160 F 742. If vessel lying at anchor in plain view is run into by another, the reasonable presumption is that collision resulted from negligence in operation of moving vessel, but if it appear that, while moving boat was being properly navigated, her rudder chains suddenly broke and she became unmanageable, no such presumption arises, such presumption existing only in absence of, and not in presence of explanation. Dentz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 75 N. J. Law 893, 70 A 164.

47. Mud scow negligently moved and went adrift. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet [C. C. A.] 162 F 860. Steamship advancing cautiously at night through channel past dredge at very slow speed held not at fault for collision with loaded scow cast adrift by dredge so as to extend far out into channel, and having no one on board and insufficient light. The Cretan, 163 F 546. There is prima facie presumption of negligence when vessel goes adrift. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F §60.

54. The El Rio, 162 F 507. Tug not liable for injury from collision caused by weather. The Pottsville, 164 F 447. Where tug parted from its tow of coal boats which drifted and caused damage in fog, there being no fog when tug was sent out, tug was not liable because some riverman thought there was "liable" to be some fog. Bray v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 277.

55. Tug not liable unless negligence is shown. Morris & Cummings Dredging Co. v. Moran Towing & Transportation Co., 163 F 610. Burden of proving lack of care is on complainant. The El Rio, 162 F 567.

56. Tug not liable where it was claimed she was negligent in going out in unfavorable weather, but it was not shown that injury was due to weather and not to some unexplained cause. Morris & Cumings Dredging Co. v. Moran Towing & Transportation Co., 163 F 610.

tug, the latter is liable.[57] It is the duty of the tug to make up the tow.[58] As regards other vessels, a tug must navigate in accordance with rules and regulations,[59] and without negligence.[60] A tug is not liable for the insufficiency of its tow's anchor chains.[61] On the other hand, the tow is not responsible for the negligence of the tug,[62] but the tow must also exercise due care to avoid an accident made imminent by reason of the negligence of the tug and the other vessel.[63] A tow is not liable for casting off its hawsers when danger is imminent.[64]

Great vigilance and caution is required of ferryboats navigating a harbor.[65]

(§ 7) F. Sole or divided liability and division of damages.[66]—See 10 C. L. 1661— A failure to comply with the statutory requirements is presumed to have contributed to the collision,[67] and where the fault on the part of one vessel is clearly Vessel having entered upon her towage contract is liable for injury to barges occurring thereafter through lack of proper care or attention, performance of contract being construed as entered upon where tug went to where barges were to take them in tow and then, although they were ready, left them till next day, during which time they drifted on shore and were damaged. The Somers N. Smith, 159 F 1016. Tug is liable for damage resulting to vessel stranded while in tow, where towed barge struck on unknown obstruction, the master of tug not apparently understanding situation and being outside dredged basin used as anchorage ground. The Resolute [C. C. A.] 160 F 659. Tugs jointly towing a vessel are both liable for damage, although one is a helper acting under orders of master of other. The Anthracite, 162 F 384.

58. But if tug selects positions to be occupied by component vessels, attends to leading hawser, and prescribes distance apart of different tiers, then details of making fast the lines may be left to herself where she has her own master aboard. The Edwin Terry [C. C. A.] 162 F 309.

59. The M. E. Luckenbach, 163 F 755. Held to be sole fault of tow and tug being on the wrong side of channel of river, passing at that point being usual and proper and steamer keeping as close to proper bank as it could get. The Frank K. Esherick [C. C. A.] 163 F 224. Tug liable for navigating on port side of channel contrary to law. The Little, 168 F 393. Tug was at fault for not keeping out of way of schooner carrying proper lights and keeping in her course. The Dauntless, 163 F 431. It is duty of tug to see that tow carries lights. North American Dredging Co. v. Cutler [C. C. A.] 162 F 457. Overtaking vessel is not required to distinguish indistinct lights of tug to ascertain where there is a tow. Id. Tug held solely liable for personal injury occurring to one on scow caused by tow line, where no lights were on tow. Id.

60. Tug is liable for damages caused to another tow through failure to properly manage her tow, whether from not having a proper lookout, too long a tow or otherwise, where it is shown that every precaution was used to keep other tow out of way. The Prinz August Wilhelm, 166 F 995. Tug with tows is not ordinarily negligent for navigating at sea at night at speed of from four to six knots. The Patience, 167 F 855. Tug may be guilty of negligence in going more than 200 feet out of its course and out of regular channel and colliding with marine bridge. Ives v. Gring [N. C.] 63 SE 609. Tug held in fault for proceeding independently of orders from tow and for suddenly changing her course. The Annasona, 166 F 801. An unnecessarily long tow at night does not render tug liable for collision with steamer unless shown to have been contributing cause. The Patience, 167 F 855. Tug held negligent for stringing tows across three-fourths of channel. North & East River Steamboat Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 682. Dredge held at fault for too long extension with 100 ft. cutter and 27 pontoons trailing 1,000 feet. United States v. Port of Portland, 161 F 193. Tug was at fault for having tow nearly a mile long, nearly stationary and across usual course of vessels. The Aries, 165 F 514. Tug is liable for failing to give sufficient room to allow for effect of tide on tow. The Williamsport, 167 F 184. Tug is liable for attempting to execute dangerous maneuver upon approach of crossing steamer. The Algeria, 162 F 1006.

61. The William S. Kirby, 163 F 783.

62. Towed car float is not responsible for collision occasioned solely through fault of the tug towing it. Eugene F. Moran v. New York Cent. & Hudson R. R. Co., 212 U. S. 466, 53 Law. Ed. —.

63. Tow held at fault because of inattention, improper stationing of lookout, and failure to follow promptly a change of course by tow. The Annasona, 166 F 801.

64. The Algeria, 162 F 1006.

65. Rules are stricter than those applicable to vessels at sea. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 860. Ferryboat held at fault in failing to have proper lookout. Id.

67. In absence of evidence to contrary, this presumption attends every fault, and requires a showing that such failure to comply could not have so contributed. The Henry O. Barrett [C. C. A.] 161 F 481. Fact that ship was at time of collision in actual violation of statutory rule designed to prevent collisions places burden upon her to established and is sufficient alone to account for the accident, the presumption is adverse to any claim of fault on the part of the other vessel,[68] but where everything about a vessel indicates a reasonable degree of diligence, the probability that she complied with her duty is prima facie established.[69] Where there is a conflict of testimony, circumstantial evidence may be considered to determine the fault.[70] No recovery may be had when the collision is due to inevitable accident.[71] Whether in a particular case the injury was due to the fault of one of the vessels or of both must be determined with reference to the rules of navigation, which have already been considered.[72]

The rule of equal division of damages among the guilty vessels generally prevails,[73] and such damages are assessed between the vessels, irrespective of the fact that more than one vessel belongs to the same owner.[74]

(§ 7) G. Ascertainment and measure of damages.[75]—See 10 C. L. 1662—The measure of damage is the amount necessary to make good the loss[76] and not the difference in the market value.[77] Interest is not allowed on a claim for damages against the United States.[78] In any case only such damages are allowable as are definitely ascertained.[79] show that such violation could not have contributed to collision. Hawgood Transit Co. v. Mesaba S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 697.

68. Any reasonable doubt will be construed in favor of other vessel. United States v. Port of Portland, 161 F 193; North American Dredging Co. v. Cutler [C. C. A.] 162 F 457. Where fault of one vessel is clearly established, it is not enough for her to raise a doubt with regard to management of other. Where collision was caused by tug which initiated passing agreement without being able to handle her unwieldy tow. Thames Towboat Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 617.

70. It is proper to consider manner in which vessels were manned, and, when one was manned by competent, fresh seamen, with lookout, and other was in charge of unlicensed deckhand with no lookout, latter was held solely at fault. The Henry O. Barrett [C. C. A.] 161 F 481. To ascertain fault, speed and distances may be tested by known facts. The Erandio, 163 F 435. Fact that log of vessel fails to mention alleged faults of another vessel contributing to collision tends to discredit her claim. Pennell v. U. S., 162 F 64.

71. This is a rare case, as where leading vessel was stopped by ice and following vessel, using due precaution, ran into her. The Erandio, 163 F 435. Loss attributed solely to weather conditions must be borne by libelant, as where there was no negligence on part of crew of other vessel and they labored for several hours in adverse weather to prevent possibility of such collision. The William S. Kirby, 163 E 783.

72. See ante this section, subsections A. to E. inclusive.

73. It prevails in some cases, at least, when one vessel is libelant as well as when they are all on the same side. The Eugene F. Moran v. New York, etc., R. Co., 212 U. S. 466, 53 Law Ed. —. Damages equally divided. The Algeria, 162 F 1006; The Tremont, 160 F 1016; Id [C. C. A.] 161 F 1; The No. 4 [C. C. A.] 161 F 847; Hawgood Transit Co. v. Mesaba S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 697. Half damages were allowed libelant and reference ordered, where pilotboat was run down by steamer on board which former had agreed to put pilot, neither being properly attentive. The Monterey [C. C. A.] 161 F 95. Where two vessels are equally at fault, each is liable for its respective share of damage to cargo, and, in case one has been exempted by previous contract with cargo owner, only half damage may be recovered from other, such not being in reality a case of joint tort feasors and rule therefor not applying. The Maine, 161 F 401.

74. Fact that owner of one of vessels at fault is also owner of injured vessel not at fault is not material. The Eugene F. Moran v. New York, etc., R. Co., 212 U. S. 466, 53 Law Ed. —.

(§ 7) H. Common-law liability for negligent navigation.[80] See 10 C. L. 1862 Where a vessel commits no fault, it cannot be held liable for collision on a mere unproved hypothesis that if she had done something other than what she did the collision might not have occurred.[81] In determining the negligence of the pilot, the question is whether he did all that reasonable prudence required him to do in view of the dangers, emergencies and conditions surrounding him.[82] The fact that a structure is a nuisance does not authorize a vessel to run into it.[83] Negligence in particular aspects has already been treated.[84]

§ 8. Carriage of passengers.[85] See 10 C. L. 1882 A passenger[86] may maintain an action against the vessel for failure to furnish proper accommodations[87] and safe conveyance,[88] and for injury resulting from the official acts of the master[89] or the misrepresentations of an agent,[90] but not for an injury entirely attributable to accident[91] or to unofficial acts of the vessel's officers.[92] The ordinary rules apply as to the admissibility of evidence[93] and the amount of damages.[94] A clause in a ticket limiting the liability for damage occurring to baggage through negligence is valid[95] and binding, notwithstanding that such clause was not called to the passenger's attention.[96]

88. Vessel liable for injury to passenger by being caught in coils of lines over which he was crowded without warning and not seeing them, there being no contributory negligence in such case. The Annie L. Vansciver, 161 F 640.

89. Shipowners are liable for false imprisonment and arrest of passenger, as where he was arrested by watchman without justification, dragged down stairway by collar and kept in custody for an hour, the damage properly allowed in case at bar being $1,000. Ragland v. Norfolk & Washington (D. C.) Steamboat Co., 163 F 376.

90. Steamship company is liable for misrepresentations made by its agent to passengers, damages resulting therefrom, and passage money wrongfully obtained, where it is not charter contract but joint enterprise, as where company contracted with corporation to bring laborers to Seattle at so much passage per head, after their having been procured by corporation, and where representative of corporation so contracted with Japanese laborers, but tickets were issued to Victoria, B. C., and received by laborers who could not read, and as soon as they learned of fraud they left vessel and brought suit. The Stanley Dollar [C. C. A.] 160 F 911.

91. Vessel is not liable where passenger was injured by skylight which he himself had misplaced. The Caracas, 163 F 662.

92. Vessel is not liable for assault and battery by master, remedy being in personam. The Vueltabajo, 163 F 594.

93. Evidence of the custom of vessel in making landings and discharging passengers is inadmissable in action by passenger for injury received in landing, where she was precipitated into lake by sudden starting of boat, and evidence was conflicting on question of negligence. McKay v. Anderson Steamboat Co. [Wash.] 99 P 1030.

99. Carrier must receive and carry goods, as able, in order of their tender. Ocean S. S. Co. v. Savannah Locomotive Works & Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 SE 577. Advance bookings will not be allowed as method of discrimination. Merchants' & Miners' Transp. Co. v. Granger [Ga.] 63 SE 700. Rule against carrier giving preference to shippers does not prevent carrier by sea from making bookings in advance, where opportunity is open to all shippers or where its extension to one class of shippers only does not interfere with carrier's duties to other shippers. Ocean S. S. Co. v. Savannah Locomotive Works & Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 SE 577. In a proper case equitable relief will be granted shipper against discriminating favors to other shippers. Merchants' & Miners' Transp. Co. v. Granger [Ga.] 63 SE 700, following Ocean S. S. Co. v. Savannah Locomotive & Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 SE 577. Equity will interfere to prevent advance bookings which work unjust discriminations between shippers, as where privilege of advance booking was granted to foreign and not to domestic shippers. Merchants' & Miners' Transp. Co. v. Granger [Ga.] 63 SE 700.

1. Carrier, not public institution by terms of its charter, may select goods it proposes to carry and refuse to accept goods in excess of its carriage capacity. Ocean S. S. Co. v. Savannah Locomotive Works & Supply Co., 131 Ga. 831, 63 SE 577.

2. Contract of affreightment implies that ship's owner will diligently and directly carry goods on agreed voyage (Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber & Mill Co., 167 F 228); directly means without unnecessary deviation, deviation being defined as any unnecessary or unexcusable departure from usual course or general mode of carrying on voyage, thereby changing risk (Id.).

3. Where carrier contracts to not place more than a certain amount of shipper's goods on any one vessel, he is liable for any damages which he might have anticipated resulting from breach thereof, such as difference which shipper fails to recover from insurance company by reason of such breach. Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Transit Co., 161 F 790. While it is not customary to incorporate in contract for carrying coal, an agreement as to what boat shall do the towing, when so incorporated, is binding. Flannery v. New England Transp. Co., 168 F 397.

6. Reception of goods by master, or other person authorized on board or at wharf near vessel, binds ship for their safe carriage and delivery. The Pokanoket, 161 F 383.

7. No recovery may be had from steamship company for its failure to carry goods unless there shall have been a binding contract therefor, and where there was delayed delivery by shipper after cargo was complete under offer to carry made by defendants, there was no mutuality of agreement, and acceptance of one car load for shipment does not make vessel liable for refusal to accept the balance, but shipper may recover from railroad company causing delay by disregard of his directions, though such company relied upon notice given out by vessel. White v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 61 Misc. 268, 113 NYS 805. Duty of carrier to the public does not require it to violate valid special contract. Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Transit Co., 161 F 790. Neutral carrier is liable for his failure to fulfill contract to carry contraband of war, where he knew the war conditions, and his undertaking will be enforced by courts of neutral state, a clause exempting him from liability for damages occasioned by "arrest, or restraint of princes, rulers, or people" being construed as applying only to actual arrest or seizure and confiscation and affording no ground for repudiation of contract by reason of danger. Balfour, Guthrie & Co. v. Portland & Asiatic S. S. Co., 167 F 1010.

8. Not only must vessel have full complement of licensed officers and sufficient crew, but they must be competent and equal to any likely emergency. Under Rev. St. 4463. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom [C. C. A.] 162 F 250.

9. Carrier held liable for injury to cargo in loading, although loading agent was loading company employed at shipper's request. Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav. & Imp. Co., 165 F 356.

10. Vessel is liable for its unseaworthy condition, whether common or private carrier, and where libelant was ignorant of vessel's condition by reason of negligent examination. Braker v. F. W. Jarvis Co., 166 F 987.

11. Whether such vessel be engaged in

A vessel which is not a common carrier is not liable for loss of cargo not due to its negligence but to some external cause,[13] its liability thus being essentially different from that of a common carrier.[14] A vessel assumes the risk of damage resulting from the carriage of dangerous explosives, the character of which is known to it.[15] The regulations concerning shipments of dangerous substances apply to foreign private steam vessels carrying from ports of the United States.[16] A shipper is, by long usage, entitled to a bill of lading, but the master may endorse thereon any claim he has for demurrage,[17] and a "boat note" may be received in evidence as complimentary thereto.[18] In an action by the shipper against the carrier for loss of goods, a provision in the bill of lading that the carrier shall have the benefit of the insurance is not available as a defense,[19] although the insurance has been collected.[20] The burden is upon the carrier when sued for a loss to prove that there was insurance to the benefit of which he is entitled.[21] In an action for loss the shipper must prove his affreightment contract, payment of freight and ownership,[22] although such ownership may be special.[23] The measure of damages for a loss of goods is the actual loss sustained.[24]

coastwise or in foreign commerce, its liability is that of insurer, in the absence of same valid agreement to contrary. Jahn v. Steamship Folmina, 212 U. S. 19, 53 Law. Ed. —. Charterers are liable to owner of cargo for damages resulting thereto through a defective pier, although not themselves negligent, being common carriers. Vogemann v. American Dock & Trust Co., 131 App. Div. 216, 115 NYS 741. Carrier is liable for shortage due to goods being stolen from warehouse before delivery to shipper. Evans v. New York & P. S. S. Co., 163 F 405. Goods are at ship's risk with respect to contents until delivery, and ship is liable for deficiency in absence on valid exception in bill of lading. The Seneca, 163 F 591.

12. When injury resulted from cause excepted in bill of lading, carrier is not responsible unless negligence be shown, as where injury was caused by heat and possibly without negligence, vessel being well ventilated. The St. Quentin [C. C. A.] 162 F 883. Strike clause in bill of lading is binding, though in small type, and constitutes good defense in action for damages caused by delay in discharging cargo of onions occasioned by strike. The Toronto, 168 F 386. Assumption of risk or carriage by shipper does not relieve carrier from liability for his own or his agent's negligence, where there was injury to cargo in loading. Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav. & Imp. Co., 165 F 356. Unnecessary deviation from course is waiver of exemption clause. Globe Nav. Co. v. Russ Lumber & Mill Co., 167 F 228. Burden of proof is upon carrier to show that goods were injured in manner excepted by terms of bill of lading, where they were received in good order and found to be damaged by seawater at end of voyage. Jahn v. Steamship Folmina, 212 U. S. 19, 53, Law Ed. —.

13. Lighter is not ordinarily a common carrier. The Wildenfels [C. C. A.] 161 F 864. A lighter, hired exclusively to convey goods of one person to particular place for agreed compensation, is not common carrier. Id. Where lighter is not negligent, it is not liable for damage to cargo of tow, as where tow, by reason of its unseaworthiness, dumps its cargo. The G. N. Hannold, 166 F 637.

14. Hence it was at least discretionary with court, after evidence had been concluded, to refuse to permit amendment alleging vessel to be common carrier, since it had effect of changing action from one ex delicto to one ex contractu, or of adding the latter. The Wildenfels [C. C. A.] 161 F 864.

22. Evidence held sufficient to go to jury in support of plaintiff's claim. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom [C. C. A.] 162 F 250.

23. Shipper of grubstaking outfit is owner thereof until delivery to miners, and is entitled to sue vessel for damage thereto, even though title had passed. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom [C. C. A.] 162 F 250.

24. Recovery may be for market value at destination, which jury may ascertain by adding to price at place of shipment the

Where from the evidence it must be presumed that the minds of the parties never met, an agreement for an exclusive interchange of traffic between two carriers must be held not to have existed.[25]

The Harter Act.[See 10 C. L. 1664]—The Harter Act relieves the shipowner from liability for fault in the management of the vessel,[26] but not from liability for his own fault, negligence or other tort,[27] or for theft of the cargo;[28] nor can it be invoked where the goods have not been placed on board and the voyage has not commenced.[29] Notwithstanding the exceptions given by the Harter Act, an innocent cargo owner is entitled to recover his entire damage in case of a collision from the carrying and noncarrying vessel, and the latter's right, set-off, or recovery from the carrying vessel, is not affected.[30] An agreement made in consideration of a lower rate, to exempt a private carrier from injury to cargo from negligence, is not in violation of the Harter Act and is valid and enforcible,[31] and when, in case of a collision, both vessels are libeled and it appears that both were in fault, the fact that, by reason of the exemption, no recovery can be had against the carrying vessel, does not increase the liability of the other vessel.[32] Where the loss is admitted, the burden is clearly upon the owner to show that the vessel was seaworthy at the commencement of the voyage.[33] The master, in the case of vessels engaged in foreign trade, is required to give the shipper a bill of lading.[34] To sustain a conviction under the criminal provisions in the Harter Act,[35] the indictment need not make allegations as to matters of proof.[36] The violation must be clear and not a mere presumption.[37]

§ 10. Freight and demurrage.[38] Freight.[See 10 C. L. 1664]—Freight is due only on the goods actually carried[39] to the destination.[40] A party paying freight in good faith may be subrogated to the water carrier's lien.[41] cost of carriage and interest. Northern Commercial Co. v. Lindblom [C. C. A.] 162 F 250.

25. In case of alleged agreement between steamship line and railroad. Graham v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 262.

26. Where due diligence has been observed, faults in navigation or management of ship are not by construction of law faults of owner, and owner is not liable for damage to cargo, under Harter Act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445). The Jason, 162 F 56. Owner is not liable in case of damage to cargo from water being pumped out, the damage resulting from valve being left partly open and not from any defect of valve, it being closed at time of loading. Sun Co. v. Healy [C. C. A.] 163 F 48.

33. Under Harter Act (27 Stat. 145), an instruction held confusing as tending to impress the jury that burden was on plaintiff to show unseaworthiness. I. C. Levy's Son & Co. v. Gibson Line of Steamers, 130 Ga. 581, 61 SE 484.

34. Under § 3 of the Harter Act. A shipper required to sign and accept bill of lading containing improper charge is not bound thereby so that it will take the place of the original bill of affreightment and prevent his recovery of freight overpaid and of damages. Equi Valley Marble Co. v. Becker [C. C. A.] 165 F 437.

35. Manager, agent, master or owner inserting in bills of lading provisions exempting them from liability for negligence, or refusing to insert therein certain statements, are subject to indictment and prosecution therefor. United States v. Cobb, 163 F 791.

36. Where bill shows on its face that it was signed by another, no averment that it was signed by defendant's authority need be made. United States v. Cobb, 163 F 791.

37. Bill held to not violate §§ 1 and 2, and to reasonably comply with § 4. United States v. Cobb, 163 F 791.

39. Where captain refuses to carry cargo of agreed amount, shipper is liable for freight only on amount carried, and freight overpaid in such case, under compulsion, may be recovered back. Clancy v. Dutton, 129 App. Div. 23, 113 NYS 124.

40. Under rule in this country freight may be recovered back, if paid in advance, in case of nondelivery, if there be no contract to the contrary. Burn Line v. U. S. & A. S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 298.

Demurrage.[See 10 C. L. 1665]—Stipulations in a bill of lading as to demurrage are to be construed according to prevailing custom [42] and the intent of the parties,[43] and are binding.[44] A detention by reason of a legal seizure on a claim subsequently dismissed creates no action for demurrage, where the libeling of the vessel was not in bad faith or malicious.[45] In the absence of a contract therefor, one is not liable for demurrage when the delay is caused by unavoidable detention by acts of a third party,[46] unless the contracting parties may be held to have foreseen such acts.[47] Demurrage for less than a day is equivalent to a day.[48]

The liability of a charterer for demurrage is dependent upon the terms of the charter.[49] Ordinarily, the charterer is liable for delay occasioned by his own fault,[50] but not when due to the fault of the owner.[51] A mere mistake in judgment is not lien. Bennett Bros. Lumber Co. v. Robinson [C. C. A.] 159 F 910.

42. Coal vessel is not entitled to demurrage because transatlantic steamers arriving after it, in accordance with contracts and long custom, were permitted to discharge first at wharf other than that at which coal barges were usually discharged, though entitled to precedence, after arriving coal barges and after assignment to berth, over any other vessel as to such berth. Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 F 722.

43. Demurrage not defeated by conditions with regard to which the parties cannot be presumed to have contracted as where company gave precedence to vessels carrying cargoes of coal for its own use, in absence of express provision therefor. Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 F 722. Counterclaim for failure to receive goods was dismissed where no agreement therefor was shown except when formal declarations were made, upon which proper action was taken. Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 166 F 993.

44. Where amount of demurrage is specified in bill of lading, parties are bound by its terms; hence, where bill provided that demurrage should be estimated on discharge of 300 tons per day, number of vessels given precedence is immaterial. Ross v. Cargo of 3,408 Tons of Pocahontas Coal, 165 F 722.

45. Watt v. Cargo of Lumber [C. C. A.] 161 F 104.

46. Consignee held not liable for delay in discharging cargo where delayed by dredges engaged in improving the waterway, where obstruction was not known when the dock was designated. Roney v. Chase, Talbot & Co., 160 F 268.

47. Demurrage is allowed where delay was caused by dredging by government, though no mention of demurrage is made in contract, there being nothing unforseen or extraordinary about the dredging. Roney v. Chase, Talbot & Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 309.

48. Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 166 F 993.

49. Where charter provided that lay days should commence at certain time. Charterer had to bear loss occasioned by delay after such time in getting berth, where such delay was due to owner of berth. Pyman S. S. Co. v. Mexican Cent. R. Co., 164 F 441. Charterer must pay demurrage for any unreasonable delays not vessel's fault. The obligation as to time of discharge being treated as entirely upon charterer, it being presumed that vessel is anxious to deliver as soon as possible. Milburn v. Federal Sugar Refining Co. of Yonkers [C. C. A.] 161 F 717. Owners are entitled to recover demurrage from charterer for delay, under charter providing for customary dispatch, where delay resulted from vessel's detention at first port longer than was anticipated and without her fault, as result of which berths reserved for her in last port were occupied and she was obliged to wait, the charterer being bound by custom of port. Leary v. Talbot [C. C. A.] 160 F 914. Where, by charter party, charterer is required to discharge vessel with "customary dispatch," demurrage is charged from time vessel reaches designated berth although obliged to wait her turn, there being no proof of any contrary custom of port. Swan v. Wiley, Harker & Camp Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 905. Proof that vessel was delayed beyond customary time for unloading such cargoes throws upon charterer burden of proving facts excusing such delay by introducing proof of actual circumstances of delivery and his reasonable diligence thereunder. Roney v. Chase, Talbot & Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 309. Liability for loss occasioned by legal proceedings or penalties rests upon one whose duty it was under charter to comply with legal requirements. This was case of failure to procure bill of health, with duty to procure on owner. The Queen Olga, 162 F 490.

50. It is duty of charterer to name berth of discharge, and he will be liable for delay occasioned by delay in doing so. Swan v. Wiley, Harker & Camp. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 905. Charterers cannot avoid paying demurrage where delay was caused by their failure to perform a duty, even though they directed the master to perform it. Hammett v. Chase, Talbot & Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 1005. Where cargo is not as specified in charter, demurrage is recoverable for delay caused thereby, but not for time lost in obtaining tug unless due to charterer's default, or for time of towage charged as lay days for loading, under charter which required charterer to pay towage between two points of loading. Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber, 13 F 657.

51. Owner refused to discharge without settlement of prior claim for demurrage at port of loading. Hagan v. Cargo of Lumber 163 F 657. Where the duty of discharging is upon owners, neither charterer nor cargo is liable for delay beyond lay days, unless it be shown to be fault of one or the other. West Hartlepool Steam Nav. Co. v.

sufficient basis for a claim of fraud in the execution of a charter so as to relieve the payment of demurrage.[52]

§ 11. Pilotage, towage and wharfage.[53] Pilotage.[See 10 C. L. 1666]—The pilot of a vessel approaching a drawbridge is required to exercise only ordinary care,[54] and may usually presume that the persons in charge of the bridge will commence to open the draw in time.[55]

Towage.[See 10 C. L. 1666]—Towage is destinguished from salvage in a subsequent section.[56] In the absence of negligence, a tug may collect for its service though unsuccessful therein.[57] Ordinarily, a tug has a lien upon the vessel and its cargo for towage services.[58]

Wharfage.[See 10 C. L. 1667]—A demand for wharfage is not an assertion of sovereignty within the provision of the Federal constitution prohibiting states from levying a duty on tonnage without the consent of congress,[59] the essence of such demand being the use of the private property of the wharfinger.[60] What constitutes chargeable use of a wharf depends largely upon the circumstances of the particular case.[61] The wharfinger has a lien on the vessel for wharfage.[62]

The wharfinger is liable for damages caused by his negligence,[63] but the burden of proof as to such issue is on the vessel.[64] On the other hand, a vessel is liable for the actual damage caused to a dock through its negligence.[65]

§ 12. Repairs, supplies and like expenses.[66]—[See 10 C. L. 1667]—Between the owner and the master, the ordinary rules of principal and agent apply in relation to incurring liabilities, except in so far as the peculiar exigency involved alters it.[67] A very similar rule applies to the creation of a lien by the master,[68] managing owner,[69] or a special owner in charge,[70] the basis of such a lien being benefit received by the vessel.[71] Where the contract is had directly with the owner, the presumption is that the credit was extended to him personally.[72] Where the ship's husband is not a part owner of the ship, all the owners are responsible in solido for his just expenditures and charges, but where he is part owner, each is liable only for his own share.[73] The repairer of a vessel is liable for only such damages for

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 836. 57. Towage may be collected though towed lighter be sunk, no agreement to take especial care of lighter nor any negligence on part of tug being shown. The Patrick McGuirl, 168 F 453. Towage may be recovered although tow became stranded, where tug was not negligent. Neall v. P. Dougherty, Co., 168 F 415.

62. Lien in nature of maritime lien exists against domestic vessel of state, navigating waters of United States, for dockage, which lien is enforcible in admiralty courts of United States, under B. & C. Comp. Or. 1901, § 5706, where wharfage was extended at request of owner. The George W. Elder, 159 F 1005. Before any lien can accrue against vessel for wharfage of lighter and damages for loss of use of same, it must appear that lighter was delivered to master or someone authorized by master or owner to receive same. The Garonne [C. C. A.] 160 F 847.

63. Where pier was worm eaten and cargo damaged by its collapse, owners of pier are liable. Vogemann v. American Dock & Trust Co., 131 App. Div. 216, 115 NYS 741. Recovery may be had where injury resulted from grounding of lighter, which was being properly handled, upon submerged piles which owner of wharf had left in dock. Philadelphia Transportation & Litherage Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 160 F 557. Owner of bulkhead is liable for injury to vessel thereat occasioned by hidden obstruction unless master knew or was notified of danger, although she took position farther along than berth assigned. Schoonmaker v. New York [C. C. A.] 167 F 975.

67. Exigency arises from voyage or necessity when master is out of touch with principal, and it is necessity, not necessaries, that is basis of rule that gives master authority. May v. Hurley [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 913. Under general authority which master of ship has, he may make contracts and do all things necessary for due prosecution of voyage in which ship is engaged, but this does not usually extend to case where, owner can himself interfere, as in home port, or in port where he has appointed agent who can do things required. May v. Hurley [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 913. Master of vessel has authority to incur necessary outfitting expenses, and owner is liable therefor in case where German vessel put in at New Orleans for cargo, the laws of Germany and of this country not differing in respect thereto. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Sloman, 194 N. Y. 506, 87 NE 811. Owner is liable for supplies ordered by master although by terms of charter of which libelants had no knowledge charterer was to pay for same, where master was engaged by broker in whose hands owner had placed vessel with instructions that he should not be at any expense in outfitting vessel. Rudolph v. Bryan, 161 F 233. Managing owner in home port cannot alone bind co-owners to personal liability for supplies where no one was made master or ship's husband or agent and vessel was lying within easy reach and constant access of city where co-owners lived. Such co-owners have power to absolutely relieve themselves from liability by notice, there then being no implied agency. Briggs v. Barnett, 108 Va. 404, 61 SE 797. One advancing money to master which was used in paying obligations for necessities for vessel may recover from owner in action for money had and received, as, where plaintiff cashed draft of master on owner, pledging vessel and cargo as security under mistaken belief that it was valid, he may disregard such void draft and sue as above stated, even after another court has refused judgment on draft. In such action, the owners can set up as counterclaim claims against the brokers who secured supplies, plaintiffs not claiming as assignees of such brokers; nor will any item of necessities be disallowed because the owner had paid it to a third party; nor will money paid for brokers' commissions be disallowed in such case. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Sloman, 194 N. Y. 506, 87 NE 811.

68. Since master cannot bind vessel for payment of borrowed money if owner can be consulted, vessel is not bound on bare statement of master that money was needed to pay crew, where lender knew owners, that they lived in same state, were responsible, and had agent in same port, neither being consulted and the money not being so needed or used. The George W. Anderson, 161 F 760.

69. Repairs and not construction work, ordered by the master and managing owner in a foreign port, in the absence of a contrary showing, are presumed to create a lien, the alterations not changing the character of vessel and being such as to better fit her for a particular business. The Emma B., 162 F 966. Advances made to master and managing owner without inquiry as to credit or standing of owners and not shown to have been needed or used for vessel do not give rise to a lien. Id.

70. Where owner, under contract of sale, allows purchaser to assume entire control and makes him the owner pro vice, he must be deemed to consent that such special owner may create liens binding on former's interest as security for performance of contracts of affreightment and for maritime service. The Garonne [C. C. A.] 160 F 847.

71. Vessel is not liable for supplies not shown to have been ordered by proper authority or delivered to vessel or someone authorized to receive them although person ordering represented himself as being either captain or cook and goods were charged to vessel. The Curtin, 165 F 271. Lien may be created without labor and material having been furnished on credit of vessel, where not required by state statute authorzing lien. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Metropolitan S. S. Co., 166 F 782. Services or supplies must have been furnished to particular vessel upon which lien is claimed. The Alligator [C. C. A.] 161 F 37.

72. No lien applies against vessel for supplies or labor furnished in foreign port where contract therefor is had direct with known owner, in absence of any special contract or mutual understanding to that effect, and the burden of proving that there was such contract or understanding is upon the party claiming the lien. The Clinton [C. C. A.] 160 F 421.

73. Obligation in absence of special contract, being several in latter instance, but one voluntarily paying more than his share cannot recover contribution from another, since essence of contribution is that there be a joint or a joint and several liability. Briggs v. Barnett, 108 Va. 404, 61 SE 797. One holding position of tenant in common with other owners of vessel is entitled to reasonable pay for his special services in connection with repair of vessel and for his individual appliances used, though there is no express contract therefor. Id. Held to be tenants in common and not joint owners where each had an individed interest in vessel lying aground, and that third person defective work as proximately result therefrom and which might have been anticipated.[74]

§ 13. Salvage.[75]—See 10 C. L. 1668—Salvage is a reward, upon the basis of risk to life and property, for assistance rendered a ship or vessel, or its cargo, or the lives of persons belonging thereon, by which they are rescued from danger or loss.[76] It is not necessary that the loss should appear inevitably certain.[77] Salvage is distinguished from towage in the degree of peril of the rescued vessel and the danger attending the rescue.[78] The owners may collect salvage for themselves though not present, and it sometimes occurs that the award to them includes the services of the master and crew.[79] The fact that the owner of a salving vessel has at the time chartered her to the owner of that which is salved does not disentitle him from claiming salvage.[80] Where the property is saved by different vessels, they are entitled to share in proportion to the risk and the value of the services rendered.[81] There is no fixed rule for salvage allowance.[82] The principal considerations in determining the amount of salvage are the increased dangers to the salvors other than those incurred by all who go to sea, peril other than that of the contemplated voyage, skill and labor required in the rescue and the amount of time consumed, considered in connection with the degree of peril from which the other vessel was rescued and the value of the salved property.[83] Salvage should be awarded

76. Salvage is reward allowed for services in saving property from danger or imminent peril of loss to owner, by one on whom rests no legal obligation to perform such service. The Job H. Jackson, 161 F 1015. Salvage was allowed although salvors were warned not to rescue vessel by owner and master who failed to make known his authority. The White Seal [C. C. A.] 162 F 642. Term ship or vessel does not include a dry dock, floating bridge, or meeting house permanently moored and attached to wharf, lighted gas bouy, or dismantled boat used as hotel, but in case at bar was held to include caisson lashed to vessel for transportation, being then considered cargo though not actually on board. Gonzales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299.

77. Although danger must be apparent, fact that peril was slight or duration of service brief will not prevent recovery, if claimants are otherwise entitled thereto. Gonzales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299.

78. The Carroll, 163 F 425. Tugs coming in response to signal for a tow hoisted by principal salvor and taking no risk are not entitled to salvage. The Job H. Jackson, 161 F 1015. Where the danger is not certain and extreme and service is not in its nature different from customary towage employment of salvor, an allowance bearing some relation to cost of service if rendered under contract is fairer than percentage of value of salved property. The Carroll [C. C. A.] 167 F 112. Where lack of enterprise, skill and perseverance was shown by owner's tug seeking vessel as compared with that shown by tug claiming salvage, and former had apparently abandoned search, vessel recovered was held to be direlect. The Gibson, 160 F 230.

79. In such case, owners are accountable to master and crew for their share. Gonzales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299.

80. Exceptional services are not presumed to be within the contract. Gondales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299. Where contract of vessel is for day seryice and she saves property of her employer after the day's work is done, she is entitled to salvage therefor. Id.

82. It rests in sound dircretion of court, and, although old rule in cases of derelict was 50 per cent, now allowance may be either more or less. The Job H. Jackson, 161 F 1015.

83. In case at bar, only consideration in relation to the salved property and time consumed held to apply. The Sun, 161 F 385. Court in determining amount may take into consideration injury suffered and time lost in undergoing repairs, though no allowance can be made therefor, and also risk taken and value of property saved. Gonzales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299.

Amount allowed: 20 per cent of value of property saved. Gonzales v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 299. Tug allowed $850, including amount paid for assistance, for saving launch. The White Seal [C. C. A.] 162 F 642. Award of 12½ per cent of value of ship, cargo, and freight money of that first rescued and 7½ per cent from each of the others, where one tug rescued another tug towing five barges with that discreet liberality which will encourage others to like undertakings,[84] but should not be such as to deter vessels in distress from accepting the necessary help.[85] The judgment in a salvage suit is binding upon all who have any interest in the res.[86] Until it has paid the owner, the insurer is not entitled to set off against the claim of the salvor its liability for damage occasioned by the salvor's delay.[87] Salvage of a wrecked vessel undertaken under contract is treated in another section.[88]

§ 14. Vessels or persons liable for loss and expense, and limitation of liability therefor.[89]—See 10 C. L. 1670—Where a charterer is compelled by suit to respond in damages to a cargo owner for injury to the cargo caused by a wharfinger's negligence, the charterer has a right of recovery over against the wharfinger,[90] and the judgment in favor of the cargo owner against the charterer is conclusive upon the wharfinger,[91] provided the latter had proper notice of the suit against the charterer.[92] Neither the owner nor the charterer is liable for the acts of a compulsory pilot.[93] The sinking of a vessel without known external cause is presumptively due to unseaworthiness.[94] So, also, the presumption of negligence is against a vessel going ashore in clear and calm weather on a route traveled before under the same command.[95] There is no fault in discarding property damaged beyond profitable repair.[96] Various specific liabilities are treated elsewhere in this topic.[97]

Limitation of liability.[See 10 C. L. 1670]—A libelant who is chargeable with privity of knowledge[98] of the fault causing the disaster is not entitled to a limitation of

in Chesapeake Bay. The Carroll, 163 F 425. Salvage 40 per cent of vessel by agreement. The Jason, 162 F 56. Tug and crew were allowed 50 per cent, 75 per cent of which was to go to vessel and 25 per cent to crew, those going on board to receive a larger share. The Gibson, 160 F 230. Award of 12½ per cent on one vessel and 7½ per cent on each of the two others was not disturbed, though considered very liberal where service was not much different from towage and danger not certain. The Carroll [C. C. A.] 167 F 112. $3,500 was awarded for rescue of schooner and cargo worth from $2,600 to $40,000 by vessel worth, with tows and cargo, about $200,000 30 hours and 36 miles deviation from course being required, where service was not of high merit or attended with any special danger, although rescued vessel was helpless and in some danger of being driven ashore. Privity of corporation owner is measured by that of its managing officers within meaning of Rev St. § 4283, in suit for limitation of liability as owner, where unseaworthiness of vessel was cause. Oregon Round Lumber Co. v. Portland & Asiatic S. S. Co., 162 F 912. Promulgation of regulations which reiterate international rule as to speed in fog is sufficient to negative privity or knowledge of fault on part of steamship company, and sufficient to entitle owners to limited exemption from liability provided by law; and in such case burden of proving that such rules were not promulgated in good faith, or that their willful violation occurred and was countenanced by the company, is upon claimants. Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 210 U. S. 95, 52 Law Ed. 973. Mere proof of negligence does not necessarily establish privity of knowledge on part of owner of vessel, under U. S. Rev. St. § 4283, according to shipowners a limited exemption from liability. Id. Privity of knowledge of excessive speed cannot be imputed from existence of subsidy contract, such contract being with French government and requiring high average annual speed with premium and penalty attached. liability.[99] "Freight pending[1] should be surrendered when action is brought for limitation of liability,[2] unless there be an honest controversy as to the existence of such freight pending.[3] The limitation of the liability of a ship owner does not apply where he is sought to be charged upon a personal contract.[4] The question of a right to limit liability involves a right to contest it.[5] The costs of invoking the statute cannot be recovered on an uncontested petition.[6] In the proceedings the vessel should be appraised at its actual value at the time of the injury.[7] In such action, in the courts of this country, by a foreign owner, the foreign laws applicable will be given their full force,[8] but the international rules of navigation will be interpreted in accordance with the rulings of the courts of this country.[9]

§ 15. General average.[10]—See 10 C. L. 1670.—Where ship and cargo are saved together, the total salvage paid for the benefit of all is apportioned upon the ship and cargo according to their respective values,[11] unless the accident was due to negligence of the vessel.[12] All rights therein are determined by the law of the place of destination or where ship and cargo finally separate.[13] The owner of a cargo sacrificed for the benefit of the vessel is entitled to contribution.[14] An ad-

99. Libelant who is chargeable with privity of unseaworthiness of vessel sinking from such cause is not entitled to limitation of liability, as in case of vessel not having been properly examined and surveyed, the defects having been evident. Oregon Round Lumber Co. v. Portland & Asiatic S. S. Co., 162 F 912.

1. Receipts from passengers and freight on trip over need not be surrendered as freight pending in proceedings for limitation of liability for claims arising out of collision on return trip, under U. S. Rev. St. §§ 4283, 4284, the voyage being from Havre to New York and return, unless such freight and passage be prepaid under an absolute agreement that such sums are in any event to belong to owner, in which case they are to be considered freight pending. Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 210 U. S. 95, 52 Law Ed. 973. No part of an annual subsidy paid steamship company need be surrendered as freight pending in proceedings for limitation of liability, under U. S. Rev. St. § § 4283, 4284, such subsidy being paid by French government for operation of weekly steamship between Havre and New York. Id.

2. Where vessel surrendered was at time of injury engaged in raising sunken vessel for stated sum, such sum may be considered as "freight pending" within the meaning of the statute, and must be surrendered, but nothing may be deducted therefrom by reason of petitioner's failure to surrender other vessels and appliances used in the service. The Captain Jack, 162 F 808.

3. Limitation of liability will not necessarily be refused by reason of failure to surrender pending freight, where there is such controversy and owner is perfectly solvent. Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 210 U. S. 95, 52 Law. Ed. 273.

4. Act of Congress, 23 St. 57, applies to limit individual liability of shipowner to that proportion of debts that his interest bears to whole value of vessel, only where he is charged as shipowner. Richardson Fueling Co. v. Seymour, 235 Ill. 319, 85 NE 496.

5. When petitioner's right to contest and limit has been decided in her favor on appeal, it only remains to determine whether claimant is entitled to recover and, if so, to what extent. The Tommy, 168 F 563.

6. May be recovered on any contested issue against the losing party. The W. A. Sherman [C. C A.] 167 F 976.

7. All allowance should be made for subsequent repairs at their market value at present time, not at cost. The Captain Jack, 162 F 808.

8. French law, authorizing recovery against vessel for loss of life, will be enforced against French vessel seeking limitation of liability in courts of the United States, although interpretation of French courts of the rule as to speed in fog would hold such vessel not at fault. Desloins v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 210 U. S. 95, 52 Law. Ed. 973.

9. One seeking benefit of law of the United States for limitation of liability of shipowners will have question of liability determined by international rule as to speed permissible in a fog, as interpreted by rules of courts of United States, as where owner of French vessel sues Brittish vessel for loss in collision. Deslions v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 210 U. S. 95, 52 Law. Ed 973.

11. The Jason, 162 F 56.

12. Where stranding must be charged to vessel's own negligent navigation, she is not entitled to recover contribution in general average from cargo owners on account of salvage, as where she sailed for more than an hour by inacurate chart in shoals which vigilant outlook should have seen. The Jason, 162 F 56.

13. In Portugal, loan on bottomry contributes to general average but not in America. Monsen v. Amsinck, 166 F 817.

14. Following decision by the House of Lords of Great Britain and there being no contrary decision in this country; where spontaneous combustion occurred due to inherent quality of cargo known to both parties, The Wm J. Quillan, 168 F 407. This right is not affected by Harter Act, and while in such action shipowners are entitled to have salvage payments made by respective vance on freight is liable to contribution.[15] Expense for the benefit of both owner and insured is a general average charge.[16]

§ 16. Wreck.[17]—See 4 C. L. 1487—Delay in raising a sunken steamer, when caused by stormy weather, does not preclude recovery of the contract price for the service performed.[18] The owner has no interest in a salvage contract made by the insurer.[19]

§ 17. Marine insurance.[20]—See 10 C. L. 1671—The policy as a whole and each part thereof should be given its natural and logical construction,[21] in accordance with the laws of the place where issued.[22] A stipulation as to manner or place of navigation is binding,[23] but may be modified or waived by parol agreement.[24] Con-parties taken into the general average adjustment, they are not entitled to an affirmative recovery of any balance due him on any such adjustment. The Jason, 162 F 56.

15. Fact that master's draft is given for advance does not prevent it from being advance on freight and liable to contribute in general average, where charter provides that charterer shall advance cash for ordinary disbursements at port of loading, although advance is not endorsed on bill of lading. Monsen v. Amsinck, 166 F 817.

16. Such as expense of towing a vessel to a certain port for repairs, although she takes on a cargo which is not liable for such charge and such trip was in completion of the voyage. Dollar v. La Fonciere Compagnie, 162 F 563.

21. Policy of marine insurance held to consist of three papers, and not of a typewritten paper alone, such paper appearing incomplete. Kuh v. British America Assur. Co., 59 Misc. 589, 112 NYS 410 Typewritten rider is considered, but loss is confined to particular risks insured against. Kuh v. British America Assur. Co., 130 App. Div. 38, 114 NYS 268 Where policy provision not clearly applicable provided no right of abandonment unless constructive total loss exceeded 75 per cent of value, and rider provided for such right in case loss exceeded 50 per cent and was clearly applicable, the rider controlled. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32. Phrase existing insurance in policy includes any other insurance during continuance of risk. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Providence-Washington Ins. Co., 167 F 223. Provisions merely for simplification of proof are not to be construed as limitation of liability, and hence, where policy of "disbursement insurance" stated to be "against risk of total or constructive total loss of the vessel only" and contained the clause, "total or constructive total loss paid by insurers on hull to be a total loss under this policy," it was held that proof of the fact of such loss, however established, authorizes recovery. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. C. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32. Clause read "This insurance is not to cover more than $100,000 by any one steamer, or in any one place at any one time." Held that amount stated referred to value of cargo and not amount of recovery, and only such part of loss could be recovered as said amount bore to such entire value. Hood Rubber Co. v. Atlantic Mut. Insurance Co., 161 F 788; Hood Rubber Co. v. Rutland Transit Co., 161 F 790. Under War-risk policy, coaling contrary to instructions of owner but in accordance with provisions of policy does not release insurer, route being direct and ordinarily safe and act of coaling being reasonable, nor does carrying of false documents which were surrendered, nor taking on freight clerk during voyage who was not connected with belligerent government. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Maritime Ins. Co., 161 F 166. Usual policy against war risks will be construed to cover risk of vessel's seizure and capture, and provision that it should cover only "those risks excluded by the 'warranted free of capture, seizure or detention' clause in marine policy or policies" must be construed as referring to marine policies generally, and not to any particular policy on vessel. Id; Coastwise S. S. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 161 F 871. A running-down clause of a policy covers only cases where insured vessel actually comes into collision with another vessel, and does not extend to damages caused by her in causing two other vessels to come together. Western Transit Co. v. Brown [C. C. A.] 161 F 869.

22. Insurance policy issued on American vessel in England, at which place delivery was made and permium paid, is English contract. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Maritime Ins. Co., 161 F 166.

23. There can be no recovery where vessel is navigating elsewhere than provided. Norris v. China Traders' Ins. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 1025. Scope of policy is only for voyage insured. which voyage must be prosecuted with diligence and by best known route. Ship must be seaworthy at commencement of each stage of voyage, reasonable precaution being taken for safety and termination without delay or loss, to accomplish which reasonable and customary means may be adopted without releasing insurer. Northwestern S. S. Co. v Maritime Ins. Co., 161 F 166.

24. While policy is subject to statute and cealment of any material fact which the insured knows and ought to disclose [25] and which is unknown to the insurer [26] will avoid the policy.[27] The insurer is liable in accordance with the terms of the policy,[28] provided action is begun within the time specified therein,[29] and is bound by the decree in the salvage suit.[30] The insured need not plead matters of defense.[31] The burden of proof to establish the right of abandonment is upon the assured as libelant [32] and must be promptly claimed.[33] Such right depends upon the facts as they actually exist [34] and must be determined as of the time of abandonment.[35] It does not depend upon the certainty of loss but upon high probability thereof.[36] Under the American maritime rule, constructive total loss, with the right of abandonment to the insurers, exists in the event of damage in excess of one-half the insured valuation.[37] Where the right of abandonment is the only issue, formal proof of loss is not essential.[38] A latent ambiguity in the policy may be explained by parol.[39] An insurer of goods, upon payment of the loss becomes subrogated to the assured's right of action,[40] but is controlled by any pre-rules governing other contracts, the rule barring parol evidence to vary written contract does not apply in such case, and insurer has right to waive condition made for its benefit, but questions of fact concerning such matter are for jury. Condition was waived by failure to object, receiving premiums thereafter and proof of loss and statement that loss would undoubtedly be paid. Norris v. China Traders' Ins. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 1025. As to what will constitute breach or waiver of provision of warranty under policy is question of law. Robinson v. Insurance Co. of North America, 129 App. Div. 1, 113 NYS 105.

25. Applicant is required to disclose fully all material facts known to him but not those unknown or immaterial or which are of common knowledge to those engaged in insurance business. Materiality to be determined from all circumstances and conditions. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Maritime Ins. Co., 161 F 166. Where vessel carrying contraband goods bound from Seattle to Vladivostok during war between Russia and Japan was insured against war risks, and true nature of cargo and intention to clear at Shanghai was not disclosed, but policy contained permission to run blockade, and fact that cargo would probably be treated as contraband if captured was known to insurer. Id.

26. Insurer may not avoid payment on account of defects known at time of taking risk as where double permium is paid in consideration of fact that vessel is not completely seaworthy as required by policy. Farmers' Feed Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America [C. C. A.] 166 F 111, afg. 162 F 379.

27. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Balfour [C. C. A.] 168 F 212.

28. Owner may recover from insurer his damages for delay under terms of policy, and not because caused by wrecking company employed by insurer. Klauck v. Federal Ins. Co., 111 NYS 1037.

29. Contractual limitation of one year within which to commence action is binding and is not affected by defendant's agreement to hear part of loss by fact that he had not refused to pay by reason of such clause, or by fact that carrier's liability had not been adjudicated. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Providence-Washington Ins. Co., 167 F 223.

30. Such decree is admissible in evidence though not entered until after insurance action was commenced. Standard Marine Ins. Co. v. Nome Beach Lighterage & Transportation Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 119.

31. Not necessary for plaintiff to plead warranties that goods were free from claim on account of capture, seizure, detention or destruction by any belligerent nation, or by or from any officer or person claiming to act in their name. Kuh v. British America Assur. Co., 59 Misc. 589, 112 NYS 410.

33. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32.

34. Assured cannot be required to abandon, whatever be the actual or prospective loss, but his right to do so depends wholly upon facts as they actually exist, and not upon whether it was more profitable for him to do so or not. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32.

35. Right is not changed by subsequent events, although they may be shown so far as they relate back prior to abandonment. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32.

36. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32.

37. Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32. Customary value of wrecking services performed in attempted rescue may be considered as evidence of the high probability of constructive total loss, although such services were performed under a conditional contract and were not required to be paid for. Id.

39. Where attached rider referred to another policy by a number in which no policy had been issued, real intention may be shown by evidence of company's custom. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Balfour [C. C. A.] 168 F 212. Different parts of marine policy covering shipments while on land and sea considered, and policy held ambiguous so as to authorize parol proof that underwriters, by agreement to pay "for loss in weight in excess of one per cent. on entire shipment," meant to pay for loss due to leakage and wear and tear of voyage, so that plaintiff was not required to plead and rely solely on perils enumerated in policy, which were only sea perils. Kuh v. British America Assur. Co., 59 Misc. 589, 112 NYS 410.

40. Irrespective of whether there is express

vious waiver thereof by the assured.[41] The insurer has the power to enter into and release a contract for the salvage of an insured wreck.[42]

§ 18. Maritime torts and crimes.[43]—See 10 C. L. 1672—Various specific torts are considered in other sections.[44]

*Liability for personal injuries.*See 10 C. L. 1672—The vessel as well as the owner is liable for personal injuries caused by defects in the vessel,[45] or by negligence in her maintenance [46] and operation,[47] and for unjustifiable assaults of the master,[48] except when the injured party is guilty of contributory negligence [49] or where the rule as to assumption of risk applies.[50] Unless there is an actual demise of the provision therefor in contract. Walter Baker & Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 162 F 496. Insurer, having paid insurance, acquires corresponding right in any damages to be recovered by assured from party responsible for loss which right may be enforced by action at law in name of assured, or, when case admits of proceeding in equity or admiralty, by suit in his own name. Stockton Mill. Co. v. California Nav. & Imp. Co., 165 F 356.

45. Vessel is liable for injury to seaman resulting from use of inefficient tow line vessel being unseaworthy in such respect, seaman not being negligent, and it not being shown that a proper chain could not have been procured. The Fullerton [C. C. A.] 167 F 1. Owner of boat owes to person making repairs reasonable care, and is responsible for injury caused by his stepping on defective covering of manhole while engaged in lawful errand under direction of foreman. Casey v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 128 App. Div. 86; 112 NYS 522. Owner of vessel is liable for drowning of a seaman resulting from attempt to open a defective port. Puget Sound Nav. Co. v. Lavender [C. C. A.] 160 F 851. Where non-expert witness testifies as to condition of port so that result of attempt to open it is obvious, it is not error to permit him to testify as to such probable result. Id. Owner is liable for injury to seaman occasioned by negligent construction of hatch cover, since such hatch cover when in place constituted a "way" within the meaning of employers' liability act (Laws N. Y. 1902, p. 1748, c. 600). Negligence is question for jury. La Compagnie Gererale Transatlantique v. Maguire [C. C. A.] 168 F 34.

46. Negligence on part of owner may be shown by evidence of uncovered manhole and insufficient light, by reason of which an employe was injured. Clinton v. Munson S. S. Line, 116 NYS 383. Held to be no evidence to justify finding that cover was taken and left off manhole by fellow-servant, but to show that it was custom of vessel for it to be left off. Id. Unless vessel is guilty of negligence, it is not liable for injury to stevedore from stepping on loose planks where their presence and fact that they were loose were apparent. The Clan Graham, 163 F 961.

47. Vessel liable for retaining winchman of whose carelessness it had previous notice. In case of injury to stevedore resulting from negligence of winchman, where three complaints of winchman's carelessness had been made by foreman to commanding officer of vessel, the vessel being required to use ordinary care in selection and retention of its servants, was held liable. The Brookby, 165 F 93. Vessel liable for injury to a regular employe ordered to do work out of his regular employment and with the dangers of which he is not familiar, there being no assumption of risk and it not appearing that he was negligent. Smith v. Cook, 164 F 628. Vessel is not liable for injuries to stevedore not caused by defects in appliances furnished. The Ranza, 164 F 699. No failure of duty in leaving hatchway open where it was reasonably protected by railing and seaman had opportunity to know condition and position of hatch. Campbell v. Trinidad Shipping & Trading Co., 165 F 270. Vessel is not liable for injury to seaman through exposure which was no fault of officers, in case of loss of fingers from frost bite, where he was relieved from duty as soon as it was known he was suffering from cold and every proper attention given him. The Teviotdale, 166 F 481.

48. Seamen are entitled to recover damages from both master and ship for unjustifiable assaults of master committed in wanton disregard of their personal rights and for inflicting cruel punishments. Belyea v. Cook, 162 F 180.

49. Reasonable prudence would require employe to take proper precautions to avoid falling into hatchway in dark, such as calling for help or previous notice that he would need a light where want could have been anticipated. Kennedy v. Netherlands American Steam Nav. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 382. Question of contributory negligence may become question of law for determination of court when it is manifestly the cause of injury that is, when the minds of the jury could not fail to agree, as where an employe was injured through placing riffle in chute by means of ladder unnecessarily used, instead of standing on overturned chute. Stewart v. Balfour [Wash.] 98 P 103.

50. Rule as to assumption of risk by seamen is not applicable to one casually employed in coaling. Oregon Round Lumber Co. v. Portland & Asiatic S. S. Co., 162 F 912. Employe on vessel who does not take usual and manifestly safer course in performance of work assumes risks thereof. Stewart v.

vessel [51] or other cause necessitating his release, the liability of the owner continues,[52] but such ownership must be sufficiently alleged [53] and proved.[54] So, also, negligence, as a ground of liability, must be pleaded properly [55] and proved.[56] A recovery may be had for an injury caused by an employe,[57] unless such employe is a fellow-servant of the person injured.[58] The damages allowed should be reasonable as determined from the injury,[59] loss of time,[60] and expenses.[61] A release signed by seaman who left the vessel during the voyage does not estop him from maintaining an action for mistreatment.[62]

Maritime crimes.[See 10 C. L. 1672]—Owners and masters of vessels should be held to the strictest accountability and required to exercise the highest degree of skill and care.[63] The captain's duty is a personal one,[64] and he is criminally liable for Balfour [Wash.] 98 P 103. There is no assumption of risk unless employe had knowledge or means of knowing the danger, as in case of carpenter drowned by reason of barge capsizing through unseaworthiness. Oregon Round Lumber Co. v. Portland & Asiatic S. S. Co., 162 F 912. Where vessel goes to sea in violation of Rev. St. § 4561, as amended at 30 Stat. 758, making it a penal offense to knowingly send to sea an American vessel "in such an unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered," there is no assumption of risk by seamen shipping thereon. The Fullerton [C. C. A.] 167 F 1.

51. Must be such demise as destroys relation of master and owner and substitutes that of bailor and bailee or the master is held to remain servant and agent of owner. There is no demise of control of servants unless hirer has right to discharge them and employ others in their place. Nelson v. Western Steam Nav. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 325. Control of vessel may be shown by evidence of payment of damages resulting from collision. Id. Liability for injury to employe on vessel is not determined from ownership but from possession and control of vessel, and hence, where respondent had sold vessel but it was still operated in its name without its knowledge or consent, injured employe could not recover from such respondent. Id.

52. Owner is not relieved from liability for negligence of his employe, causing injury to one not his employe, by fact that such employe was assisting to unload under direction of stevedores, unless injury directly resulted from such direction. Stewart v. Balfour [Wash.] 98 P 103.

53. Allegation of ownership of vessel is not insufficient after verdict where it is alleged in present tense but negligent acts are specified as those of the defendant, in the absence of demurrer or motion to make pleading more certain. Puget Sound Nav. Co. v. Lavender [C. C. A.] 160 F 851.

54. In personal injury case, ownership of boat may be prima facie shown by insignia thereon, there being no presumption that two corporations will use exactly same design. Casey v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 128 App. Div. 86, 112 NYS 522.

55. In absence of objection thereto, a general allegation of negligence is sufficient. Phillips v. Portage Transit Co., 137 Wis. 189, 118 NW 539.

56. Burden is on plaintiff to show more than possible liability of defendant, but he must show such circumstances as would justify inference that injury resulted from neglect of duty by defendant and exclude idea that it was due to cause for which defendant was not responsible. Kennedy v. Netherlands American Steam Nav. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 382. Where system adopted by defendant for lighting hatchway was sufficient, company was not liable for temporary interference with passage of light where it was not shown to have been done by direction of defendant company or any one representing it, or that company was chargeable with notice. Id.

58. If injury is caused by negligent act of fellow-servant, master is not liable therefor. Kennedy v. Netherlands American Steam Nav. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 382. Vessel employing contractor to do loading is not liable for injury to employes of contracting stevedores caused by manner in which they did work, as in case of inefficient lighting by fellow-servant with candles furnished by contracting stevedores. The Clan Graham, 163 F 961. Vessel is not chargeable with injury to stevedore occurring through negligence of winchman, though due to machinery not being properly oiled, where there was no notice or complaint to officers. The Hilarius, 163 F 421. Winchman and another employe working under orders of same contracting stevedore are fellow-servants, although winchman was furnished by vessel from crew and stevedore was employed by charterer. The Brookby, 165 F 93. Winchman furnished by ship under charter party and stevedore furnished by charterer are not fellow-servants. The Boveric [C. C. A.] 167 F 520. Mate in charge of unloading is vice-principal and not fellow-servant of employe injured, and owner is liable for such mate's negligence, where mate caused injury through his carelessness while drunk. Nelson v. Western Steam Nav. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 325.

59. Damages allowed to seamen for exposure held reasonable. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Turtle [C. C. A.] 162 F 256. For loss of a right arm entailing much pain and suffering, an award of $17,500 to mate earning $150 per month is not excessive. The Fullerton [C. C. A.] 167 F 1.

60. Evidence of earnings of like voyage in previous year competent to be considered in determining damage. Puget Sound Nav. Co. v. Lavender [C. C. A.] 160 F 851.

61. Injured seaman cannot recover hospital and medical expenses before payment. Nelson v. Western Steam Nav. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 325.

62. Belyea v. Cook, 162 F 180.

63. Van Schaick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 847.

64. Captain has no right to rely upon statements of inspectors, and it is part of disaster resulting through his misconduct, negligence or inattention to his duties,[65] regardless of the question of intent,[66] especially where the circumstances are such as to call for extraordinary watchfulness;[67] but in order to sustain a conviction, it is necessary to prove that the defendant was captain, that he was guilty of misconduct, negligence or inattention, resulting in the disaster.[68] Questions of fact are usually for the jury as in other cases.[69]

SLAVES.[71]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[72]

*Peonage.*See 10 C. L. 1673—Voluntary service by the debtor is lawful,[73] and a statute making criminal the fraudulent breach of a contract of employment is not involved.[74]

*Slave marriages, their offspring and inheritance.*See 10 C. L. 1674—Slave marriages were binding in morals but did not produce any of the civil effects which result from a lawful marriage,[75] and such unions could only be validated by ratification after emancipation or by express legislation,[76] and consequently the issue of such unions was illegitimate.[77] Issue of marriages contracted in slavery was legitimated by statute in Kentucky.[78]

SODOMY.[79]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[80]

Copulation per os is within the Iowa statute.[81] Actual penetration must be proven,[82] and may be shown by facts and circumstances.[83] The indictment must charge a crime.[84] Evidence as to experiments under similar conditions, tending to show at what distance the act of penetration would have been visible at night, is admissible.[85]

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[86]

§ 1. Nature and propriety of remedy in general.[87] See 10 C. L. 1674—Specific performance being a purely equitable remedy, the granting of such relief is not an absolute right but rests in the sound discretion of the court,[88] controlled by settled principles of equity.[89] The fact that the plaintiff is able to establish a valid contract at law is not alone sufficient,[90] and, per contra, equity may give relief though the contract is not legally enforcible.[91] As a general statment, the contract must be reasonable, fair, certain, legal, mutual and founded upon a valuable or at least meritorious consideration,[92] but since the decision of each case depends largely upon particular circumstances, the rules governing must be more or less flexible.[93] Relief will, as a general rule, be granted when it is apparent from all the circumstances of the particular case that it will subserve the ends of justice and work no hardships upon the party who has entered into the contract[94] and where a refusal would operate as a fraud upon plaintiff's rights.[95] The relief, on the other hand, will be refused where it would operate in a harsh, inequitable and unjust manner,[96] or where performance is impossible,[97] and, as in other cases, equity will consider the comparative hardship of granting or refusing relief.[98] Where performance in toto is impossible,[99] as where vendor's wife is not a party to the contract to convey and refuses to release her dower, equity will not intervene,[1] except that part performance may be decreed, if the complainant so desires, of so much as may be performed.[2] Relief will further be denied where the complainant has an adequate remedy at law.[3] A contract may be specifically enforced despite the fact that it stipulates for a sum as liquidated damages on its breach.[4] A party insisting upon specific performance must make out a complete equity[5] and come with clean hands.[6] He must show himself to have been ready and willing.[7]

98. If the enforcement of the contract would impose a great burden on the defendant, with a slight or no corresponding benefit to the plaintiff, or such enforcement would be detrimental to the interest of the public, a denial of relief is warranted. Erection of station at certain place. Herzog v. Atchison, etc. R. Co., 153 Cal. 496, 95 P 898.

99. The contract must be one which can be enforced in its entirety. Tombigbee Valley R. Co. v. Fairford Lumber Co. [Ala.] 47 S 88. Partial enforcement, piecemeal, will not suffice. Id. One may not be compelled to accept part performance but has the option to do so. Stromme v. Rieck [Minn.] 119 NW 948.

1. If a wife refuses to join her husband in the conveyance of lands and there is no fraud on the husband's part in her refusal, a court will deny specific performance (Aiple-Hemmelmann Real Estate Co. v. Spelbrink, 211 Mo. 671, 111 SW 480), unless it further appears that complainant is willing to pay the full purchase money and accept a deed from the vendor alone, with covenants called for in the contract (Id.).

2. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497. Where statutes make a contract for sale of a homestead by a husband alone invalid, equity will not enforce performance as to any excess over the statutory limitation of value of homestead nor will damages be awarded in lieu thereof. Mundy v. Shellaberger [C. C. A.] 161 F 503. Where a husband alone signs a deed for land not a homestead, it may be enforced against him to the extent of his ability to perform but cannot affect the wife's interest. Stromme v. Rieck [Minn.] 119 NW 948.

3. Bernier v. Griscom-Spencer Co., 161 F 438. In a contract to assign a patent to a corporation which was then to sell stock and perform other conditions or reassign the patent, it was held that an action at law was not adequate upon failure to perform conditions equity would compel reassignment although it amounted to a forfeiture. Telegraphone Corp. v. Canadian Telegraphone Co., 103 Me. 444, 69 A 767.

4. Moss v. Wren [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 149. A vendor may enforce specific performance of a contract to convey land although there is a stipulation in the contract for a forfeiture of earnest money in case of failure of the vendee to comply with terms, the vendor to accept the same as liquidated damages for nonperformance. Moss v. Wren [Tex.] 113 SW 739. A contract for the sale of land, although providing for a forfeiture of $1,000 by the party failing to perform, may be specifically enforced. Newton v. Dickson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 143.

5. The plaintiff must state and prove that he is entitled to equitable relief. Stiles v. Hermosa Beach Land & Water Co. [Cal.

§ 2. Subject-matter of enforcible contracts.[8]—See 10 C. L. 1677—Generally speaking, any fair and valid contract[9] may be specifically enforced if the elements of equity jurisdiction are present.[10] Thus equity will enforce a proper contract to convey land almost as a matter of course,[11] and, by statute in Montana, conveyance by the representative of a deceased vendor may be compelled.[12] Specific performance of contracts for sale of personal property are not usually enforcible, as the breach ordinarily may be compensated for in damages.[13] But specific performance may be decreed where the article cannot be purchased in the market and the delivery of the thing itself, and not mere pecuniary consideration, is the redress practically required,[14] as for example the transfer of stock not procurable in the market and of a pecuniary value not readily ascertainable.[15] An agreement to transfer or assign a patent may be specifically enforced,[16] as well as a contract to assign future inventions.[17] Principles guiding a court of equity are the same in decreeing specific performance of such contracts as in the case of those relating to realty.[18] Contracts to dispose of property by will are enforcible,[19] as are contracts to adopt[20] or to convey land in consideration of support.[21] Oral contracts to make a testamentary disposition will not be enforced, however except upon the clearest and most convincing evidence.[22] A partnership agreement may be enforced.[23] Equity will enforce an award of an arbitrator appointed by the parties[24] or a compromise,[25] but is without authority to carry out a mere agreement to submit matters in controversy to arbitration.[26] Specific performance may be had of provisions of contract calling for the payment of certain sums as liquidated damages where the actual damage could not readily be ascertained.[27] A contract to make a contract is enforcible,[28] and equity may compel the execution of a mortgage to secure money advanced.[29] In the absence of controlling public interest or other equities of the complainant in the case, or of clear evidence that irreparable injury will result, a court of equity ought not to compel the enforcement of a contract which cannot be consummated by a speedy, final decree, but which involves the supervision of a continuous series of acts, extending through a long period of time and requiring special skill and knowledge,[30] contracts of employment being a common illustration of this rule.[31] The agreement of a public service corporation to furnish service in return for the grant of franchise may be enforced.[32]

finally concluded and agreed upon,[34] which must be distinctly proved.[35] A contract which has been rescinded [36] or abandoned cannot be enforced,[37] but, where one has no right to rescind, an attempt to do so does not affect the right to performance.[38] Contract rights accruing on a rescission may however, be enforced.[39] One not a party to a contract cannot be compelled to carry it out,[40] unless he be a subsequent purchaser with notice,[41] or other person in privity,[42] nor can he maintain an action for its specific performance.[43] The contract of a duly authorized agent may be enforced in equity,[44] but not that of an unauthorized agent [45] unless ratified.[46]

Colonna, 108 Va. 230, 61 SE 770; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. McLellan [Cal.] 99 P 194; Stanton v. Driffkorn [Neb.] 118 NW 1092; Thompson v. Burns [Idaho] 99 P 111. Written option withdrawn before acceptance. Ward v. Davis [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 779, 117 NW 897. Cannot enforce offer to transfer bank stock where the owner thereof withdrew his offer within the time limit set and before any acceptance. Blanks v. Sutcliffe, 122 La. 448, 47 S 765. A mere moral claim is not sufficient ground upon which to base an action for specific performance, such relief must be had upon the ground of contract obligation. Starnes v. Hatcher [Tenn.] 117 SW 219.

35. Colonna Dry Dock Co. v. Colonna, 108 Va. 230, 61 SE 770. One seeking to enforce specific performance is bound to establish clearly and satisfactorily existence and terms of contract. Prairie Development Co. v. Leiberg [Idaho] 98 P 616. Evidence insufficient to show any agreement to surrender notes in return for the reconveyance of land. Elwell v. Hicks, 238 Ill. 170, 87 NE 316. See further, § 3E, Necessity of Written Contract, as to proof of parol contracts.

36. Monds v. Birchell, 59 Misc. 287, 112 NYS 249. Where a part payment was made under an agreement to purchase land and the contract provided that if, upon objections pointed out, the vendor did not make the title marketable within a reasonable time then upon demand the vendor would repay the advance paid and the contract then terminate, the fact that the title was not good and the vendor refused to make it good entitled the vendee to rescind without a demand for the advance paid, and when he so rescinded his right to enforce terminated. Johnson v. Lara, 50 Wash. 368, 97 P 231. Evidence in an action for specific performance held not to prove an irrevocable agreement to convey land by parties executing mutual wills. German v. Camburn [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 719, 117 NW 641.

37. Where contract has been abandoned, it is not error to refuse specific performance. Abandoned by both parties. Saxon v. White [Okl.] 95 P 783. Nonpayment of instalments, taxes, and assessments held to be an abandonment of a contract preventing its enforcement. Voight v. Fidelity Inv. Co., 49 Wash. 612, 96 P 162.

38. Swanston v. Clark, 153 Cal. 300, 95 P 1117.

39. A covenant in a contract assigning patent rights that provided that upon failure of the assignee to perform certain conditions the assignments should terminate and become void and the plaintiff should have, hold and repossess them, etc., held to create an obligation to reassign the patent rights enforcible in equity. Telegraphone Corp. v. Canadian Telegraphone Co., 103 Me. 444, 69 A 767.

40. Where rights in patent jointly owned are transferred to trustee without power to sell, a contract of sale by him as trustee cannot be enforced even as to his own interest, for purchaser was charged with notice of rights of other parties. McDuffee v. Hestonville, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 36. Will not require wife to release dower where she never consented to transfer of land. Aiple-Hemmelmann Real Estate Co. v. Spelbrink, 211 Mo. 671, 111 SW 480.

41. One taking land with the knowledge of the existence of a contract by the grantor to sell the same may be compelled to convey although not a party to such contract. Van Dyke v. Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 A 593; Drake v. Brady [Fla.] 48 S 978. Equity will enforce a proper contract relating to land against all persons taking with notice of it. Codman v. Bradley, 201 Mass. 361, 87 NE 591.

42. Wherever, regardless of form and technical character of a contract, performance of a covenant in respect to lands would have been decreed between the parties, it will be decreed as between persons claiming under them in privity of estate or of representation or of title. Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co. [Md.] 71 A 442. Where a lumber company sold certain lumber to complainant and then made another agreement differing in terms subsequently orally agreeing to haul and cut the timber, one who purchased with the knowledge of the first agreement and of the oral agreement could not be compelled to perform the acts of cutting and hauling the timber. Ohio Pail Co. v. Cook & Co., 222 Pa. 487, 71 A 1051.

43. Hills v. McMunn, 135 Ill. App. 338. Where a deed is made to a grantee and "his wife," whose name is not given, she becomes the owner at her husband's death and can enforce the contract. McArthur v. Weaver, 129 App. Div. 743, 113 NYS 1095.

44. Evidence sufficient to show agent's authority. Kempner v. Gans [Ark.] 112 SW 1087.

45. Evidence held to show contract of sale made by an unauthorized agent. Foss Inv. Co. v. Ater, 49 Wash. 446, 95 P 1017. Where agent's authority had been revoked prior to his executions of agreement. Hagler v. Ferguson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 673. A contract for sale of land made by an agent in excess of his authority cannot be

(§ 3) B. Mutuality of contract.[47]—See 10 C. L. 1680—The contract must by its terms impose mutuality of obligation,[48] or there must have been part performance,[49] or an offer to perform by the party seeking to enforce.[50] An optional contract to convey land founded upon a consideration may be specifically enforced upon an acceptance of the terms of the contract and a tender of the price within the time specified,[51] but the mere tender of performance of personal services, the performance of which cannot be compelled in equity, is not sufficient to relieve the case of lack of mutuality of remedy.[52] In enforcing a unilateral contract, the courts will exercise their discretion with great care.[53] Denying specific performance does not deny the legality or obligation of a contract, for there is a distinction in equality between mutuality in the obligation of contracts and mutuality in the remedy.[54]

(§ 3) C. Definiteness of contract.[55]—See 10 C. L. 1681—The contract must be enforced (Hagler v. Ferguson [Tex.] 118 SW 133), despite the fact that the purchaser may be willing to waive unauthorized terms (Id.).

46. Where a husband enters into a contract for the sale of his wife's real estate and she thereafter confirms his act and stands ready to perform, the other party cannot take advantage of the statute against a power of attorney between husband and wife to sell estate to repudiate the obligations undertaken by him. Stromme v. Rieck [Minn.] 119 NW 948.

Where plaintiff's acts required continuous skilled work which equity would not compel performance of, they could not enforce performance. Tombigbee Valley R. Co. v. Fairford Lumber Co. [Ala.] 47 S 88. Lease to become void upon payment of $2,000 at any time by parties of second part. Ulrey v. Keith, 237 Ill. 284, 86 NE 696. Offer in a unilateral contract may be withdrawn at any time, preventing decree for performance and leaving the plaintiff to his remedy of law. Leuschner v. Duff, 7 Cal. App. 721, 95 P 914. Party must have performed or be able to be compelled to perform. Id. Covenant to convey and covenants to pay the first installments of the purchase price held not mutual and concurrent. Voight v. Fidelity Inv. Co., 49 Wash. 612, 96 P 162. A contract for interchange of service between telephone companies was silent as to question of continuation or discontinuation, and held not enforcible as lacking in mutuality. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644. Not a lack of mutuality where the contract in a preamble states that, "whereas the plaintiff intends to construct a railroad," etc., where it is plain that is not a covenant to build a railroad (which covenant could not be enforced). Tidewater R. Co. v. Hurt [Va.] 63 SE 421. Agreement to buy shares of stock wherever either party was able and to then divide them was mutual and enforcible. Sherman v. Herr, 220 Pa. 420, 69 A 889. Under the terms of an option providing for the payment of the purchase price in installments and a forfeiture of amounts in case of failure to pay in full, there was no mutuality of contract entitling the vendee to enforcement until payment had been made in full. Rude v. Levy, 43 Colo. 482, 96 P 560. definite and certain in its terms,[56] as in the description of the subject-matter,[57] and a greater degree of certainty is required than in an action at law.[58] Where, however, the terms, though not sufficiently definite, may be identified by reference to an external standard[59] or by parol,[60] the contract may be enforced. Where the contract has been acted under and interpreted by the parties, specific performance will not be refused because of its uncertainty.[61]

56. Krah v. Wassner [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404. Evidence of a statement by a party that if a child would stay with him he would see that she had plenty, an education and clothing, falls far short of a promise to convey a particular piece of land, so that it may be enforced. Collins v. Harrell [Mo.] 118 SW 432. Memorandum stated a sale of three houses in Danvers belonging to the D. estate. It was held that this description was not certain on its face and was open to becoming wholly indefinite, and the plaintiff should allege facts sufficient to state a case clearly, which calls for specific performance by setting out in substance that three houses referred to were the only ones owned by defendant in the town. Harrigan v. Dodge, 200 Mass. 357, 86 NE 780. Bond for deed did not set forth purchase price nor terms of payment, nor was there anything on the face of the paper to indicate what the purchaser was to perform. La Belle Coke Co. v. Smith, 221 Pa. 642, 70 A 894. Agreement to devise held not too uncertain, indefinite and unfair to permit of specific performance. Sarasohn v. Kamalky, 193 N. Y. 203, 86 NE 20. No rental fixed, no duration of term in an alleged lease sought to be enforced. Lanahan v. Cockey, 108 Md. 620, 71 A 314. Failure to specify any time when a mortgage should mature and be payable prevented specific performance. Poole v. Tannis, 137 Wis. 363, 118 NW 188. Deed of land with contract to reconvey upon terms held definite and enforcible. Porter v. Farmers' & Merchants' Sav. Bank [Iowa] 120 NW 633. Cal. Civ. Code, § 3390, subd. 6, provides that on agreement the terms of which are not sufficiently certain to make the precise act which is to be done clearly ascertainable cannot be enforced. Claim that a secured note to be given for balance of purchase price, but such was not incorporated in the agreement in a sufficiently definite manner. Marsh v. Lott [Ca'. App.] 97 P 163. A contract for the sale of real estate, stipulating for a mortgage back, stating certain terms and that it was to be executed with the conveyance, is sufficiently definite to be enforced, and it is immaterial that certain terms usually stated in mortgages were not included. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885. Complaint setting out a lease with option to purchase held to show a contract sufficiently certain. Swanston v. Clark, 153 Cal. 300, 95 P 1117. According to letters, the seller was to give a full warranty deed, the property to be vacant. The seller, being unwilling to give full warranty, reformed the deed sent to him and warranted only against acts by the grantor. He also refused to agree to deliver the property vacant. Cavagnaro v. Johnson [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 995.

Negative specific performance by way of injunction must be sustained by usual requisites as to certainty of terms of contract. Streator Independent Tel. Co. v. Interstate Independent Tel. Co., 142 Ill. App. 183.

Where land described is fully known to both parties, the fact that it is described as of a wrong county which it adjoins is immaterial. Robbins v. Clock, 59 Misc. 289, 112 NYS 246. No description in the evidence of the land sought to be conveyed. Davis v. Wheeler [Mo.] 114 SW 1199.

58. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163.

59. Bill held to contain sufficient averments to show that the uncertainty of a boundary in a contract was rendered certain. Wilkins v. Hardaway [Ala.] 48 S 678. A greater degree of certainty and definiteness is required for specific performance than to obtain damages at law. Description of an invention held sufficient. McRae v. Smart [Tenn.] 114 SW 729.

60. Where terms are capable of being made certain, they are held to be certain. Contract to buy stock when able. Price was certain, for it was fixed by the price paid at purchase. Sherman v. Herr, 220 Pa. 420, 69 A 899. A description giving one boundary line and certain other points and the number of acres was held to be sufficiently identified so that it might be made certain by parol and enforced. Kight v. Kight [W. Va.] 63 SE 335. Where description of land is not specific, but locates the same where the vendor owns but one piece of property, the presumption that this is the property intended is sufficiently strong to make the description so certain that specific performance may be had. Agreement for sale of real estate described as 56 x 155 ft. to an alley, on the east side of Broadway between Sixth and Seventh streets in a city named, being part of lot 7 in block 17, Ord's survey. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885. A description of phosphate mining property held capable of being made certain. Bradley v. Heyward, 164 F 107. Sufficient if it can be made certain from surrounding circumstances. The fact that the time of performance is not fixed does not prevent specific performance. The legal implication is that performance will be made within a reasonable time. Inglis v. Fohey, 136 Wis. 28, 116 NW 857.

grant relief where the contract is illegal [63] or void,[64] or where it is of such a nature that it would be unconscionable to enforce it.[65] There need not be a sufficient ground for rescission,[66] but it is sufficient if there is a substantial misrepresentation which induced the defendant to contract,[67] even though innocently made.[68] Mere hardship alone, however, aside from any question of fraud or other circumstances, furnishes no ground for refusing specific performance,[69] and a contract, fair as of the time when entered into, will not be refused performance because of a great loss or increase in value to one party by subsequent developments.[70] Even where the Contract of sale by a subagent for purpose of himself acquiring title. Fisk v. Waite [Or.] 99 P 283. When the enforcement of skillfully drawn timber contracts is sought, a due regard to the rights of parties and the conservation of one of the most valuable natural resources of the state imposes upon the court the duty of requiring that the contract be free from ambiguity, understood by the parties, and based upon a valuable consideration. Hardy v. Ward [N. C.] 64 SE 171. Facts held to show that advantage was taken of the defendant, an aged, inexperienced and ignorant woman. Banaghan v. Malaney, 200 Mass. 46, 85 NE 839. Where a contract called for payments by instalments, entitling to conveyance after the first payment, and there would then be no contract signed by anyone to be charged calling for a subsequent payment of $70,000 four years later and no security therefor, the contract is not just and reasonable. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163.

Held not unfair: No facts alleged which made it appear that an agreement by a railroad company to erect and maintain a station at a particular place in consideration for the transfer of land was fair and just and that it would be equitable to enforce it. Herzog v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 153 Cal. 496, 95 P 898. No evidence of fraud or mistake in a contract to convey land so as to prevent specific performance. Elliott v. Elliott [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1142. No evidence of fraud in the release by a vendee of his rights under a contract of sale and a leasing of the land. Swanson v. James [Neb.] 116 NW 780. No fraud in contract for sale of land. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885; Prichard v. Mulhall [Iowa] 118 NW 43. Where plaintiff, unable to get $450 for certain lots, finally agreed to sell for $350, and the land proved to be worth between $750 and $10,000, there was no evidence of fraud preventing a decree for performance. Robbins v. Clock, 59 Misc. 289, 112 NYS 246. Contract between city and water works company for purchase of plant held not unconscionable. City of Eau Claire v. contract is found to have been procured by unfair or inequitable means, equity may still enforce it if it would otherwise work an injustice.[71] Mere inadequacy of price will not in general prevent specific performance of a contract to convey land [72] unless it is so gross as to show fraud or shock the conscience,[73] yet it is a circumstance which will be taken into consideration with all the facts in determining whether a court of equity is called upon to compel performance.[74] What was the real consideration may be determined despite the fact that there is a seal.[75] By statute in some states, an adequate consideration is a prerequisite to the aid of equity in compelling performance,[76] and this is so despite the fact that the parties have fixed the amount after mature deliberation.[77]

(§ 3) E. Necessity of written contract.[78]—See 10 C. Code, § 3391, specific performance cannot be granted against a party if he has not received an adequate consideration, if it is not just and reasonable. Cummings v. Roeth [Cal. App.] 101 P 434. South Dakota Code provides that specific performance cannot be enforced if the consideration is inadequate. Phelan v. Neary [S. D.] 117 NW 142.

79. Contract invalid under statute of frauds not enforced. Rogan v. Arnold, 135 Ill. App. 281; Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 87 NE 696. To meet the statute of frauds, the contract for sale of lands must express a valuable consideration and describe the subject-matter directly, or make reference to something outside of the writing by resort to which certainty may be established. Alabama Cent. R. Co. v. Long [Ala.] 48 S 363. Rev. St. 1899, § 173, of Missouri, providing that the vendee in a written contract with a decedent for the conveyance of land may petition the probate court to enforce the same by deed from the administrator, does not authorize such performance of an oral contract. McQuitty v. Wilhite [Mo.] 117 SW 730.

80. The doctrine that specific performance will not be granted when the party invoking its aid has not parted with any consideration or property, and no irreparable damage is suffered, and no fraud inflicted upon him, and he is in statu quo at the time of the commencement of the action, applies to parol contracts only, and not to the attempted enforcement of a written contract. Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731.

81. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404. Part performance must be unequivocal and relate to contract. Collins v. Harrell [Mo.] 118 SW 432. Sufficient part performance to avoid the statute. Ready v. Schmith [Or.] 95 P 817. Where one is put in possession of land under an oral contract by which he was to receive title provided he supported the grantor during his life, he is entitled to specific performance where he did this and also made expensive improvements. By statute. Felt v. Felt [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 994, 118 NW 953. Equity will compel performance of an oral contract to convey lands where the contract is definite and certain and there have been such acts of part performance that neither party can be restored to his former position. Taking off briars and weeds and making improvements ance by the plaintiff depends on the circumstances of each case.[82] Some act of the purchaser showing an assertion of dominion over the land in his own right as purchaser is necessary,[83] such as improvements made on the premises.[84] Possession, in order to take a parol contract out of the statute so that it may be enforced, must be exclusive,[85] but a joint possession of the property by consent of the plaintiff does not change the fact of exclusive possession by the plaintiff.[86] Proof of a parol contract to convey land must be clear and convincing.[87] It is the practice to decree performance of oral contracts to convey land in cases in which the contract in the bill is admitted, or substantially admitted, by the answer.[88, 89]

§ 4. Performance by complainant.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1085—One seeking specific performance must show that he has performed,[91] or, if performance by him is not a on adjoining land not sufficient. Hoover v. Baugh, 108 Va. 695, 62 SE 968. In order that an oral contract relating to lands may be enforced, it must be clear, definite and unequivocal in all its terms, and established by clear and satisfactory proof and there must be a partial performance (Crane's Nest Coal & Coke Co. v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 108 Va. 862, 62 SE 954), and furthermore, the agreement must have been so far executed that a refusal of full execution would operate as a fraud on the other party and place him in a situation which does not lie in compensation and the acts of such partial performance must refer to, result from, or be made in pursuance of, the agreement proved (Id.). Entry upon land and delivery of a horse to vendor and clearing a small space and planting crops, etc., held insufficient. Id. Where the vendee relies upon possession to take the case out of the statute, he must show a possession delivered to him by the vendor pursuant to the contract under which he seeks a conveyance. Parol contract to make a will will be enforced where there has been sufficient performance to take the contract out of the statute. Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 88 NE 104; Starnes v. Hatcher [Tenn.] 117 SW 219. Payment of entire purchase price and entering into possession. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404.

82. Oral contract to devise realty. Peterson v. Bauer [Neb.] 119 NW 764.

83. Where the owner of land by himself or through his agent makes a verbal contract of sale of such land to another for an agreed price and puts the vendee in possession, upon compliance with the terms of his contract of purchase, a court of equity will, in favor of such purchaser, enforce specific performance, notwithstanding the statute of frauds. Demps v. Hogan [Fla.] 48 S 998.

84. The purchase money paid by the plaintiff and improvements made on the land by him were sufficiently substantial. Babcock v. Lewis [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 584. Where complainant paid part of purchase price, was put in possession by the agent, and had expended $600 in improvements upon the land, he may have performance of an oral contract. Jones v. Gainer [Ala.] 47 S 142.

85. Sufficient if as exclusive as terms of contract would permit. Conveyance of land if son would furnish a home thereon during life of owner. His possession with owner sufficient. Taylor v. Taylor [Kan.] 99 P 814. Possession as tenant of vendor is possession of the vendor, and not sufficient to take the parol contract out of the statute. Babcock v. Lewis [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 584.

86. Plaintiff in possession had dug a well and put in a stable foundation, and the fact that he afterwards allowed vendor to occupy with him was immaterial if it was subordinate to the plaintiff's possession. Babcock v. Lewis [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 584.

87. A mere declaration of intention to convey land is insufficient. Collins v. Harrell [Mo.] 118 SW 432. To warrant specific performance of an oral contract to convey, even when taken out of the statute of frauds by proof of the making of improvements, there must be clear and convincing testimony as to the contract. Not sufficient. Wills v. Westendorf [Iowa] 118 NW 376. Evidence insufficient to establish a parol contract for sale of land with such certainty as to entitle plaintiff to a decree. Jones v. Jones [Ala.] 47 S 80.

Smart [Tenn.] 114 SW 729. Plaintiff willfully and persistently violated contract for separate support which she sought to have enforced. Chandler v. Chandler, 220 Pa. 311, 69 A 806. In an action for performance of an oral contract to adopt and leave property by will, performance by complainant is shown by evidence of residing with adopted parent 18 years, performance of duties faithfully, and that leaving was by consent. Peterson v. Bauer [Neb.] 119 NW 764. Specific performance will be decreed although the complainant has committed acts entitling the vendor to forfeiture by cutting timber on premises, the subject of the contract where the title remained in the vendor as security for the balance of the purchase price and the provision against cutting timber being for purpose of preserving the security, where timber cut amounted to only $70 and the balance due on the purchase price was $700 and the premises, because of improvements made by complainant, were worth $2,000 or $3,000. Van Dyke v Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 A 593. In precedent condition, that he is willing and able to perform,[92] as by showing an offer to perform or tender,[93] but performance or offer to perform is excused where it appears that it would have been useless.[94] Where parties have rendered performance by themselves impossible,[95] or have once refused to perform,[96] they cannot compel performance. A subvendee cannot compel performance except upon payment of the whole amount due from the original vendee of all the tract.[97] If time is es-connection with a naked option or offer to sell, even though the same be in writing, a full and proper tender to the vendor of the consideration in accordance with the terms of the instrument is an essential condition precedent to a suit for specific performance, where the only consideration stated is the usual $1 and it further remains for the vendee to perform some acts before the option develops into a contract. Rude v. Levy, 43 Colo. 482, 96 P 560. Where a contract for the sale of land calls for the delivery of notes on the part of the vendee for deferred payments of the purchase price, the personal liability of the vendee is a controlling element, and the tender of notes of an assignee does not satisfy the terms nor warrant the assignee in asserting a right to specific performance based upon such tender. Montgomery v. De Picot, 153 Cal. 509, 96 P 305. Failure to comply with development provisions in oil lease. Gillespie v. Fulton Oil & Gas Co., 140 Ill. App. 147.

92. In re Grogan's Estate [Mont.] 100 P 1044. Sufficient if ability or willingness are shown and it may be doubted whether performance, etc., is material, when the bill shows part performance further prevented by act of defendant and that further offers to perform would not be accepted if tendered. Part of purchase money paid and ready to pay balance upon tender of deed as required. Vendor refused a deed. No need to tender balance. Campbell v. Lombardo, 153 Ala. 489, 44 S 862. Where one is in possession of property which defendant has agreed to sell to him, he is in a continual state of showing his intention of carrying out his agreement to buy, and where the defendant takes no steps to deny the continuance of the contract, equity will not allow the lapse of time to prejudice the complainant's right to specific performance. Van Dyke v. Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 A 593. The complainant cannot demand specific performance of a contract where he repudiates part thereof. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497.

Agreement to transfer an acre of land in consideration of the transfer of a half interest in a fence held enforcible without tender of a deed of the interest in the fence, in the absence of evidence of an agreement to transfer the same by deed. Ready v. Schmith [Or.] 95 P 817. A bill praying for performance of a contract to convey waterworks on payment by the complainant of such part of the purchase price as might be ascertained to be due was not the equivalent of a tender of the price which was required by the contract. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497. An offer to pay the purchase price is sufficient. Need not deposit money in court. Anse La Butte Oil & Mineral Co. v. Babb, 122 La. 415, 47 S 754.

94. Campbell v. Lombardo, 153 Ala. 489, 44 S 862; In re Grogan's Estate [Mont.] 100 P 1044; Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731. The general rule is that repudiation of an executory contract by one party relieves the corresponding obligor from the necessity of tendering performance as a prerequisite to maintaining a bill for specific performance. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163. Where defendants have, by steps taken, asserted a termination of the contract. Van Dyke v. Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 A 593. The vendor of land having repudiated the contract and transferred the land to another, it was unnecessary for complainant to make a tender before bringing his bill. Cumberledge v. Brooks, 235 Ill. 249, 85 NE 197. Tender of price not necessary where vendor demands a larger sum than agreed on. Porter v. Farmers' & Merchants' Sav. Bank [Iowa] 120 NW 633. The rule that no tender is necessary where it would be useless is not, however, applicable to unilateral contracts such as an option to purchase, for there is no mutuality until the tender accepting the option is made. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163. A repudiation of the contract renders it unnecessary for the plaintiff to make a formal tender of the amount actually due. Defendant refused to settle on basis contracted for. Babcock v. Lewis [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 584; Bodcaw Lumber Co. v. White, 121 La. 715, 46 S 782.

95. Where parties make performance on their own part impossible by transfering land to bona fide purchasers, they cannot demand performance. Groden v. Jacobsen, 129 App. Div. 508, 114 NYS 183.

96. Where a tender of a drawn deed in good faith is refused as not conforming to the contract, it is the vendee's duty to show the contract or furnish a copy thereof, or to draw a deed himself and submit it to the vendor. If he refuses to do either, he cannot then demand specific performance. Skinner v. Creasy [Ky.] 116 SW 753. Where a vendee does not insist on performance but demands a return of deposit made and a rescission, he cannot later seek to compel performance. Whalen v. Stuart, 194 N. Y. 495, 87 NE 819. Where one party cannot fully perform and the other refuses to accept part performance, the latter cannot later compel performance. Vendee claimed vendor did not have clear title, but vendor claimed it was alright and refused to take any steps but sold to another after notice to the vendee of his intention so to do. Vendee could not have specific performance against purchaser with notice. Newman v. Johnson, 108 Md. 367, 70 A 116.

sential, the stiulation in regard thereto must be strictly complied with, and failure to perform on the exact day cuts off the rights of the defaulting party,[98] unless excused[99] or waived.[1] If, however, time is not of the essence, and performance is not demanded or tendered, the rights of the defaulting party are not lost by a failure to strictly comply with the terms[2] if there is no unreasonable delay.[3] Where time is stipulated to be of the essence of the contract,[4] it will be held decisive of the question in equity,[5] unless such stipulation is contrary to the manifest equity disclosed by all the facts and circumstances of the case.[6] He who seeks performance must, however, show himself ready and able to perform.[7] The burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to excuse nonperformance or offer to perform for a long period.[8] Specific performance will not be decreed unless conditions precedent have occurred or been performed,[9] but a failure to perform a covenant which is not a condition precedent, but is dependent upon performance by the defendant, will not prevent specific enforcement.[10] A party does not forfeit his right to the interposition of a court of equity to enforce performance if he reasonably and in good faith offers to comply, and continues ready to comply, with its stipulations, although he may err in estimating the extent of his obligations.[11] There is a conflict of opinion as to

98. Where time is of the essence, plaintiff must show strict compliance with the terms of payment in order to recover damages in an action for specific performance. Hardy v. Ward [N. C.] 64 SE 171. Conclusion irresistible that payment at time specified was made a condition precedent to right to acquire title. Souter v. Witt [Ark.] 113 SW 800.

99. Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Where time is of the essence, but performance is rendered impossible by acts of the defendant despite every reasonable effort by the complainant to make a tender and complete the contract, equity will not refuse performance. Exception to the general rule that specific performance will not be granted in favor of plaintiff, himself in fault. Abernathy v. Florence [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 161. Where time was not of the essence, a delay by the vendee to discover whether an adjoining owner was claiming title to a part of the premises was reasonable and did not prevent him from compelling specific performance. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885. If time is not of the essence of a contract, it is sufficient if the complainant can give clear title at the time of the decree, despite the fact that it was incumbered at the time of bringing the bill. Agens v. Koch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 348. Where one goes into possession with vendor's consent, mere delay will not cut off his right to relief until the vendor places a limit to the lapse of time by a demand for payment at a specified time. Jones v. Gainer [Ala.] 47 S 142. Where the purchase price of land was split up into small notes and the contract provided that upon failure to pay there should be a forfeiture, the payments to be considered as rent, a failure to pay notes when due was held immaterial, and the vendee entitled to specific performance upon tender of balance due. Turpin v. Beach [Ark.] 115 SW 404.

3. Unreasonable delay in doing the acts to be done will justify and require the denial of relief. Joffrion v. Gumbel [La.] 48 S 1007. A delay of two or three months will not ordinarily suffice to deprive of relief, except possibly where values are fluctuating. Tacoma Water Supply Co. v. Dumermuth [Wash.] 99 P 741. A party may, however, lose his right to specifically enforce performance of a contract by mere lapse of time. Id.

It is sufficient if title is made good before entry of decree. Wiley v. Verhaest [Wash.] 100 P 1008. The fact that the defendant does not have title to land contracted to be sold does not deprive equity of jurisdiction where it does not appear that he cannot acquire title. Krasnow v. whether a party is entitled to waive a breach of an agreement to perfect the title within a reasonable time and demand performance, some holding that there is an absolute termination of all obligations as to each party,[12] and others holding that a provision of this kind is for the benefit of the vendee and that he may elect to terminate or elect to waive that right and wait until the vendor can perfect his title if it can be done within a reasonable time.[13]

§ 5. Actions.[14] *Jurisdiction.*See 10 C. L. 1687—A submitted controversy arising out of a sale of land may be treated as a bill for specific performance.[15] Where an Indian nation is exempt from civil suit, a bill cannot be brought in equity to force performance of a contract for the payment of money.[16]

*Parties.*See 10 C. L. 1687—All parties in interest must be joined.[17] The absence of parties will not prevent a decree where there is no dispute as to facts and the only question of law does not render the title unmarketable.[18] An action is properly brought in the name of a vendee, although he has contracted to sell the same premises to another but on different terms.[19] Parties no longer interested nor having title at the time of commencement of proceedings, although interested between the time of the contract and the time proceedings were begun, are not necessary parties.[20]

Where a woman contracts for the sale of land and is later married and has children, she cannot compel performance unless they are made parties so as to be bound by the decree. Triplett v. Williams, 149 N. C. 394, 63 SE 79. Even if conveyance of land contracted to be sold was made to third parties without any statement of trust, but the vendor retained control and the right to sell, such third persons were properly parties in an action to enforce performance of the contract. East River & Astoria Land Co. v. Kindred, 128 App. Div. 146, 112 NYS 540. Where a husband who has agreed to convey property dies and his wife brings ejectment against the complainant in possession, she is a necessary party to his bill for performance. Collins v. Leary [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 603. In a suit for specific performance of a contract to convey where the vendor has died, his heirs are necessary parties defendant. Id. Wife is a necessary party to a bill to enforce performance of a contract to convey to a man and his wife. Krah v. Wessmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404. Action to compel performance of a contract to convey, the grantor having died. Held, it was no defense in an action by the executors to compel purchase that the widow and heirs were not parties, for they had no interest in the land. Hald v. Claffy, 131 App. Div. 251, 115 NYS 561. The heirs must be made parties to a suit, under the Missouri statute, to enforce a contract to convey land by a party deceased. McQuitty v. Wilbite [Mo.] 117 SW 730. One having an equity in an insurance policy is not a necessary party to a bill to compel specific performance of contract relating to insurance. State Nat. Bank v. U. S. Life Ins. Co., 238 Ill. 148, 87 NE 396. In the case of a bill for specific performance of a contract to convey lands, the only proper parties in general are the parties to the contract itself. Purchasers from the vendee are not proper parties. Steinman v. Hagan, 108 Va. 563, 62 SE 348.

18. The absence of parties having an interest in the construction of a will from a suit to compel performance of a contract to buy will not prevent a decree for performance where there is no dispute as to facts and the only question of law does not render the title unmarketable. Hardenbergh v. McCarthy, 130 App. Div. 538, 114 NYS 1073.

20. In an action to compel renewal of a lease to a partnership, it is immaterial that between the commencement and the end of the term strangers to the lease were partners where at the time of bringing suit the partners were the same. Gorder v. Pankonin [Neb.] 119 NW 449. Where one who has agreed to convey land to complainant conveys to a third party, with knowledge of such agreement, it is not necessary in a bill against such third parties to join the person making the agreement to convey. Van Dyke v. Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 A 593.

21. McDonald v. Benge, 138 Iowa, 591, 116 NW 602. Mistake is not a ground of defense to specific performance of a contract unless it appears that there was some reasonable ground for misapprehension. Bradley v. Heyward, 164 F 107.

pure mistake of fact, on the part of one party to a bill for specific performance,[22] but the mere fact that one did not fully understand the contract entered into is no defense.[23] Whether laches will bar relief depends on all the circumstances of each case.[24] Inability of the party sought to be charged to perform is a defense.[25] It is a good defense that an agent was acting for an undisclosed principal.[26] A price much less than the actual value is not of itself a defense.[27] A defense, although not pleaded, may be good if there is evidence on the subject,[28] but a trial on the merits without demurrer is a waiver of the defense of adequate remedy at law.[29] Where parties themselves do not raise the question of invalidity of the contract on the ground of public policy, the court will not take note of it.[30] The causes for which specific performance will be denied under the Montana Code must be interposed by the defendant as defenses and the burden of proof to establish them is upon him, and it is not incumbent on the plaintiff to avoid every negative statement contained in the provisions of the Code.[31] For a consideration of further special defenses alleged see cases below.[32]

22. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404.

23. The mere fact that one did not know the contents of a contract signed is no defense to an action to enforce it where it does not appear that there was any duress or that the party was mentally weak. Ellis v. Keeler, 126 App. Div. 343, 110 NYS 542. The mere fact that one is old and has no one to advise him is no defense to an action to compel performance of his contract. 83 years old. Id.

24. Nowell v. McBride [C. C. A.] 162 F 432. No evidence of laches in asserting title to mining claims under a partnership agreement. Whistler v. MacDonald [C. C. A.] 167 F 477. Where one is in possession under a contract to convey and what he assumes is a valid deed, it is not laches to fail to bring suit for specific performance for 20 years. Stonehouse v. Stonehouse [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 21, 120 NW 23. Delay of 14 months not laches. Robbins v. Clock, 59 Misc. 289, 112 NYS 246. The mere lapse of time without any material change in the value of the property involved is not necessarily conclusive. Nowell v. McBride [C. C. A.] 162 F 432. Where no time for performance is stated, it was not unreasonable to delay two months before attempting to enforce a contract to convey. McArthur v. Cheboygan [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 45, 120 NW 575. See further on question of delay, § 1 and § 4, supra. No rule respecting the length of delay which will be fatal can be laid down, for each case must depend on its peculiar circumstances. Joffrion v. Gumbel [La.] 48 S 1007. Must institute a suit within a reasonable time and before any material change affecting the interests of the parties has taken place. Id. Where one party, arbitrarily or otherwise, notifies the other that he will not perform the contract, the bill for specific performance must be speedily filed, unless the party receiving notice be in possession. Delay held to be satisfactorily explained. Agens v. Koch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 348. Where one has a remedy at law for damages which is barred by the lapse of time under the statute of limitations, he cannot compel performance of the contract after the lapse of a similar period. Clark v. Van Cleef [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 260. Under the rule that a party must have been ready, eager and prompt at all times, the rule of laches is more strongly applied in cases of specific performance than in other cases. Parties had played fast and loose with an agreement for the transfer of mineral rights in land for a period of twenty-five years. Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Clintwood Coal & Timber Co., 108 Va. 433, 62 SE 329.

32. One cannot defend an action for specific performance on the ground of forfeiture where he himself was unable to perform at the time. Zempel v. Hughes, 235 Ill. 424, 85 NE 641. Where, under a contract to convey land, a default by the assignors of complainants to make payment has been waived and further attempts to make payments by complainant have been prevented by the inequitable conduct of the defendant, the latter cannot defend on the ground of forfeiture in an action for specific performance. Hickman v. Chaney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1003, 118 NW 993. Where a deed is in fact a mortgage, the agreement being to reconvey if the mortgagor find a purchaser within a year, it is no defense that the mortgage is to be paid off by means of the purchase price and not from some independent source, for such is the plain term of the agreement. Porter v. Farmers' & Merchants' Sav. Bank [Iowa] 120 NW 633. The failure of complainant to adverse the application of defendant for a patent to lands will not estop him from obtaining a decree for specific performance of a contract to convey such land, for complainant's suit amounts to the establishment and enforcement of a trust. Nowell v. McBride [C. C. A.] 162 F 432. Where an agreement to convey land included a larger tract than the description in the deed, a protest by the Pleading. See 10 C. L. 1689—Specific performance will not be granted on a bill for another purpose,[33] though a prayer for general relief will authorize award of specific performance.[34] The bill should allege all facts necessary to make out the plaintiff's right to relief,[35] such as the terms of the contract,[36] performance or offer and ability to perform,[37] title,[38] and in some jurisdictions the consideration,[39] and that the remedy at law is inadequate.[40] The bill must set out the plaintiff's right fully, clearly, and with certainty.[41] A complaint seeking to enforce an oral agreement, vendors against the retention of the disputed tract by the vendee, not having been made until after entry into possession thereof by the vendee, affords no reason for the refusal by a court of equity to compel performance of the agreement to convey. Starrett v. Boynton [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 183.

33. Cannot be decreed on bill for partition. Felt v. Felt [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 994, 118 NW 953.

34. Williamson v. Warfield, Pratt, Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168.

35. It is incumbent on the plaintiff to state such facts as will enable the court to decide whether the contract is of such a character that it would not be inequitable to enforce it. Stiles v. Hermosa Beach Land and Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 91. No case for specific performance where contract calls for performance within 10 months and bill is brought at end of 7 months, and bill does not allege any default or intended default. E. Sondheimer Co. v. Richland Lumber Co., 121 La. 786, 46 S 806. Where complainant has been in possession of land in question since a certain date, his bill should show such fact. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404.

36. Must allege terms and conditions of agreement. Campbell v. Timmerman, 139 Ill. App. 151. Interest of a party and extent thereof in lands not made clear. Jones v. Jones [Ala.] 47 S 80. Under the Montana Code, if a petition shows a contract fair on its face and one the specific performance of which may be decreed, it is sufficient without negativing all the defenses enumerated by the code. In re Grogan's Estate [Mont.] 100 P 1044.

37. Complaint must allege performance or show a readiness to perform on the part of the complainant. Complaint alleged verbal agreement to partition between widow and children and that widow repudiated. No allegation of a tender of a deed, etc., by complainant. Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 87 NE 696. A mere assertion by a complainant that he was at all times ready, willing, and able to carry out the contract on his part will not suffice, when the admitted facts on the face of the bill refute the assertion. Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Clintwood Coal & Timber Co., 108 Va. 433, 62 SE 329. Bill must allege readiness to perform and ask for performance. Hoover v. Baugh, 108 Va. 695, 62 SE 968. Must be proof or allegation to the effect that at the time of tender complainant was able to perform in accordance with the terms of the contract (Dietz v. Stephenson [Or.] 95 P 803), and that, at all or any times since, he bas been ready, able, and willing to perform (Id.). Complaint must show a readiness on plaintiff's part to perform. Chandler v. Chandler, 220 Pa. 311, 69 A 806; Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 88 NE 104. Allegations of petition to enforce conveyance of school lands held sufficient to show that plaintiff could comply with the law in regard to such lands. Pope v. Taliaferro [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 309. Bill failed to show a sufficient tender of purchase money. Mitchell v. Wright [Ala.] 46 S 473.

38. A bill need not set forth that the defendant is the owner of the premises. Inability to perform is a matter of defense. Harrigan v. Dodge, 200 Mass. 357, 86 NE 780. A bill by vendee against vendor which does not show title in the vendor is bad on demurrer. Ryan v. Martin, 165 F 765. A statement that plaintiff was the owner and entitled to possession of land at the time of contracting to convey that the title, however, stood in the name of a sister, who subsequently transferred to the wife to be held for her husband, states a good cause of action where both are made parties. East River & Astoria Land Co. v. Kindred, 128 App. Div. 146, 112 NYS 540. A bill to compel conveyance of land by one party of land in the name of another should show such situation. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404.

39. In California a complaint in order not to be demurrable must state such facts as will enable the court to decide whether the consideration is adequate and that the contract as to the defendant is just and reasonable. Stiles v. Hermosa Beach Land & Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 91. A complaint specifically stating the consideration and that it is fair and just is not demurrable as failing to present facts that will enable the court to say that the consideration is adequate and the contract just. Brown v. Sebastopol, 153 Cal. 704, 96 P 363.

40. Bernier v. Griscom-Spencer Co., 161 F 438.

41. A bill is defective in averment which fails to set out with sufficient particularity and clearness the terms of the contract. Mitchell v. Wright [Ala.] 46 S 473. In a suit by an assignee to compel performance of a contract to lease to lessees and their assignees, it is sufficient to allege the fact that complainant is assignee without further facts to prove it. Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co. [Md.] 71 A 442. Contract to pay for services between father and son held set out with sufficient certainty. Stonehouse v. Stonehouse [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 21, 120 NW 23. May refuse relief where facts set out in the bill are meagre and not a full disclosure of the entire transaction. Newman v. Johnson, 108 Md. 367, 70 A 116. Facts and circumstances entitling appellant to the relief prayed for are not averred by full, clear, positive, and distinct statements as the rule requires. Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Clintwood Coal & Timber Co., 108 Va. 433, 62 SE 329. A de-which is subject to the statute of frauds, should state sufficient facts to take it out of the statute.[42] The greatest strictness is required in the conformation of allegations and proofs in the case of a request for specific performance,[43] but a bill is not demurrable because certain remote inferences might be drawn from the facts alleged rendering a decree improper.[44] A petition setting out a written contract for the sale of land, which is disavowed subsequently by setting forth an oral contract changing its terms, states no cause for equitable jurisdiction.[45] An answer to enforce an agreement to convey land alleging rescission as provided for but not offering to restore the complainant to his position prior to entering upon the agreement is bad on demurrer.[46] A general demurrer does not lie to an answer which, although admitting the execution, denies some of the essential facts entitling to relief and also sets up further facts which, if true, constitute a good defense.[47] The trial court should require an amendment to the complaint where an issue material to the determination of the case has been tried without being presented in the pleadings.[48]

Evidence. See 10 C. L. 1690—The contract sought to be enforced must be shown by competent and satisfactory evidence.[49] Parol evidence will be heard not to vary or contradict the written contract but to put the court in possession of all of the facts and circumstances surrounding the contract to the end that it may ascertain, whether there was any element of fraud, mistake or unfair advantage taken by the party seeking the aid of the court.[50]

The relief granted. See 10 C. L. 1691—Equity will adapt its relief to the state of facts existing at the time of the entry of the final decree.[51] Where jurisdiction is properly acquired, the court will proceed to do complete justice by adjudicating all matters involved[52] and to that end may grant injunctions.[53] Damages may be scription in an amended complaint of various parcels by metes and bounds, without further facts to identify, held incomplete. Bogard v. Barhan [Or.] 96 P 673. An amended complaint intending to describe a 5 A. tract which did not close, but if closed by extending the last distance given described more than 60 A, was insufficient. Id. An amended complaint describing but three sides of a quadrangular tract of land is defective. Id.

42. A complaint alleging and seeking to enforce an oral partition agreement was demurrable for failing to allege such part performances as took the contract out of the statute of frauds. Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 87 NE 696.

43. Jones v. Mahone [Ala.] 47 S 195.

44. Bill is not demurrable on ground that enforcing performance will infringe on defendant's homestead, either in the particular tract or in the right of selection from a larger tract, where it does not appear in the bill that the land in question is part of the homestead, though it does appear that it is part of a larger tract owned by defendant, for it is not to be presumed from that fact alone that it was a part of the homestead. Wilkins v. Hardaway [Ala.] 48 S 678.

45. Lyons v. American Cigar Co., 121 La. 93, 46 S 662.

46. In an action on a lease with an option to purchase, an answer alleging rescission by the lessor prior to election by the lessee to purchase, which does not offer to repay the money expended by the lessee in improvements but only the money paid by the lessee to the lessor, and to restore everything received under the agreement, is bad on demurrer. Swanston v. Clark, 153 Cal. 300, 95 P 1117.

47. Where plaintiffs sought specific performance of a contract to convey land and defendants in answering admitted its execution but not all the essential facts entitling plaintiff to a decree, and further pleaded facts which, if true, were a good defense, it was error to sustain a general demurrer to the answer. Benedict v. Minton [Neb.] 120 NW 429.

48. Stiles v. Hermosa Beach Land & Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 91.

49. Creecy v. Grief, 108 Va. 321, 61 SE 769; Thompson v. Burns [Idaho] 99 P 111. Testimony of statements by the owner of land made prior to an alleged oral contract to convey that he intended to give the land to the complainant is entitled to little weight in an action to enforce the oral agreement. Wills v. Westendorf [Iowa] 118 NW 376.

In negative specific performance by way of injunction, degree of proof required is same as in suit for positive performance, that is, it must be clear and satisfactory. Streator Ind. Tel. Co. v. Interstate Ind. Tel. Co., 142 Ill. App. 183.

50. Rudisill v. Whitener, 149 N. C. 439, 63 SE 101.

51. Bill brought to enforce payments by instalments. Pending hearing of bill, all payments became due and were enforced in final decree. Bauer v. International Waste Co., 201 Mass. 197, 87 NE 637.

52. Abatement of price is allowed as an incident to the action of specific perform-awarded in lieu of specific performance,[54] but only when specific performance could not be had,[55] and only when the case is one for equitable interposition, such as would entitle the plaintiff to specific performance but for intervening facts.[56] The ance in order to do substantial justice. Knudtson v. Robinson [N. D.] 118 NW 1051. May have title quieted on a cross bill in an action for specific performance. Gish v. Ferrea [Cal. App.] 101 P 27. In suit for specific performance with abatement from the agreed price because of outstanding lease, evidence held insufficient to show the amount of damage to plaintiff because of such lease. Kuhn v. Eppsteln, 239 Ill. 555, 88 NE 174. May grant that which is equitable under the evidence and deny specific performance, although the defendant did not raise the question of the right to such relief. Newman v. French, 138 Iowa, 482, 116 NW 468. Where under a contract to convey land to complainant upon support and care of the owner during his lifetime but the owner left the complainant, she was not entitled to specific performance during his lifetime, but he might be restrained from conveying to others and the fee decreed to vest in her after her obligations had been fully performed. Id. In a suit for specific performance of a contract to convey land, where the vendor is charged with the rental value of the land during the period that conveyance is refused and the vendee with interest on the purchase price, the rule of partial payments should be applied and the rental charged against the interest due each year, and hence no interest charged on the rental value. Haffey v. Lynch, 193 N. Y. 67, 85 NE 817. Where amounts tendered by complainant under a contract of sale of land were not the full amount due when tendered, he should pay interest on the full amount due up to the time of the decree. Hickman v. Chaney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1003, 118 NW 993. Where specific performance of a contract to convey property is decreed, the letter of the contract is not allowed to stand in the way of an equitable adjustment as to interest on the one hand and rents and profits on the other. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497. Equity may decree an accounting where it has jurisdiction of the bill for performance. Collins v. Leary [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 603. Where a vendee in an action to compel specific performance shows an unmarketable title, he may recover, under the Rhode Island statutes, the deposit made and payments and expenses. Lowe v. Molter [R. I.] 71 A 592. Where plaintiffs having an option to purchase occupied as lessees and made a tender which was refused upon a decree for specific performance, the vendor will not be compelled to pay taxes, etc., accruing since the tender, the vendees having occupied the premises without any liability for rent. Swanston v. Clark, 153 Cal. 300, 95 P 1117. Where right to transfer of land denied, cannot have damages for loss of rentals. Cummins v. Roeth [Cal. App.] 101 P 434. Decree entered ordering defendant to convey without warranties, upon payment of a certain sum by plaintiff and, in case of failure to pay, the defendant to have possession of the premises and the plaintiff to have his costs. Walton v. McKinney [Ariz.] 100 P 471.

53. Restrain transfer of land pending happening of a condition precedent. Newman v. French, 138 Iowa, 482, 116 NW 468. Enjoined from claiming any interest in an invention on agreement to convey which was also enforced. McRae v. Smart [Tenn.] 114 SW 729.

54. In an action for specific performance, the damages may be adjusted in the action if specific performance be refused as impracticable. Performance held practicable. Robbins v. Clock, 59 Misc. 289, 112 NYS 246. Where specific performance was denied because of the alteration of the contract so that the amount tendered was not the real balance due, and there was no evidence that the plaintiff was responsible for the alteration or had been in possession of the land, he was entitled to recover payments made. Lowe v. Maynard [Ky.] 115 SW 214. A bill to compel specific performance may be retained, notwithstanding performance is refused for lack of proof for the purpose of allowing the purchaser compensation, where it appears that he went into possession and made valuable improvements on the land upon the faith of his contract, if he has not adequate remedy at law. Jones v. Gainer [Ala.] 47 S 142.

55. In order for a decree to provide for a money payment for damages, it must be established that specific performance could not be had. Will v. Barnwell, 60 Misc. 458, 112 NYS 462. Money judgment proper where specific performance is impossible. Krasnow v. Topp, 128 App. Div. 156, 112 NYS 546.

56. A plaintiff praying for specific performance cannot compel the chancery court to retain jurisdiction of his cause solely for the purpose of assessing damages, when for any reason other than the infirmity of his claim both at law and equity, the peculiar equitable relief sought is denied. Institution for Savings v. Puffer, 201 Mass. 41, 87 NE 562. Where a bill is brought to enforce performance of a contract to convey a homestead which is invalid, and the original party has died and his estate been finally settled, the bill will not be retained to assess damages but the action will be dismissed as improperly brought. Knudston v. Robinson [N. D.] 118 NW 1051. Where complainant in a bill for specific performance failed to show any ground for equitable relief, it was error to retain jurisdiction and award a decree for money loaned. Brauer v. Laughlin, 235 Ill. 265, 85 NE 283. Where a complaint did not show cause for equitable relief, which was all that was asked for, a demurrer will be sustained although the complaint states a cause of action for damages. Dingwall v. Chapman, 63 Misc. 193, 116 NYS 520; Morrison v. Chapman, 63 Misc. 195, 116 NYS 522. In a suit to specifically perform a void contract, the complainant cannot recover for services as on a quantum meruit. McKinney v. Big Horn Basin Development Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 770. The power to grant relief by way of compensation exists only as ancillary to grant specific performance, and, where there is no court, however, is not bound to retain a bill for specific performance for the purpose of giving relief in damages, where plaintiff does not even request it.[57] The court will not decree a vain and unless thing.[58] The court cannot compel parties to perform on terms never agreed upon.[59] Where defendant admits a substituted contract, the complainant is entitled to have a decree for the specific performance of the substituted contract if he chooses to perform it on his part, and he can have such relief in his suit on the original contract.[60] In Kentucky if no defense is made, the plaintiff cannot have judgment for any relief not specifically demanded.[61] In an action for specific performance, where a general denial is filed, it is error to make a decree quieting plaintiff's title.[62]

Decree.[See 10 C. L. 1695]—The contract merges with the decree which should leave defendant no alternative but to perform,[63] but the performance decreed may be in the alternative.[64] While the court cannot enforce a decree, requiring a nonresident to execute a deed, its decree may be made effective under the provisions of statutes.[65] In some states a decree may be entered for specific performance which will operate as a conveyance.[66]

Appeal.[See 10 C. L. 1695]—The rule that, in case of conflicting evidence, a finding will not be disturbed on appeal is limited in actions for specific performance by the necessity of establishing the contract and the terms thereof clearly and satisfactorily.[67] Where, in an action for specific performance and injunction, specific performance is denied but an injunction granted and the complainant does not appeal but the defendant appeals from the decree granting the injunction, the question of whether a case for specific performance was made out is not open.[68]

STARE DECISIS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[69]

§ 1. The doctrine and its application.[70]—[See 10 C. L. 1695]—The doctrine of stare jurisdiction to decree specific performance and no other special equity intervenes, the bill cannot be retained for the purpose of awarding damages. Bromberg v. Eugenotto Const. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 60.

57. Banaghan v. Malaney, 200 Mass. 46, 85 NE 839.

58. Would not enforce lease against party who was entitled to cancel at will. Ulrey v. Keith, 237 Ill. 284, 86 NE 696.

59. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497.

60. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404.

61. Civ. Code Prac. § 90. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Davidson [Ky.] 115 SW 770. Where there is an equitable petition for damages to which a defense is made, and there is a prayer for all proper and equitable relief, the court has a right to enforce specific performance. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Davidson [Ky.] 115 SW 770.

62. Mancuso v. Rosso [Neb.] 116 NW 679.

63. Must not be an option on behalf of either party. Thompson v. Burns [Idaho] 99 P 111.

64. Decree in an action to compel performance of a contract to convey land which is in the alternative, either to settle according to the terms of the contract or to pay the full purchase price with interest, is proper. Prichard v. Mulhall [Iowa] 118 NW 43.

65. Maryland Code by appointment of trustees to convey. Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co. [Md.] 71 A 442.

66. Ready v. Schmith [Or.] 95 P 817.

67. A substantial conflict does not arise where there is some evidence to support a contract. Prairie Div. Co. v. Leiberg [Idaho] 96 P 616.

68. Hazard v. Hope Land Co. [R. I.] 69 A 602.

69. Conclusiveness of adjudication of facts is elsewhere treated (see Former Adjudication, 11 C. L. 1537), as is the binding effect of previous decision on a subsequent review of the same case (see Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118).

decisis is to be distinguished from that of former adjudication.[71] The rule of stare decisis is founded on public policy,[72] adherence to established precedents being a cardinal principal in jurisprudence.[73] Former decisions will not be overruled except for very cogent reasons,[74] or unless the court is satisfied that they were clearly and palpably wrong,[75] but except as to decisions which have become rules of property,[76] a wrong decision may be overruled.[77] In overruling a previous decision, particularly one which may affect title to property, the court should expressly indicate such overruling.[78] Long acquiescence in a decision strengthens it as a precedent,[79] as does the concurrence of a long line of decisions.[80] Although the doctrine is applicable to decisions rendered by a divided court,[81] it is not as a rule readily applied to such decisions,[82] and a decision by an evenly divided court[83] or one where a majority of the court concurred in the result only[84] does not settle any rule of law. The doctrine should not be extended and applied to an erroneous decision on general mercantile law which is contrary to accepted doctrine and recognized business methods.[85] The last expression of the court on a question is controlling as against prior opinions conflicting with it.[86] The decision of a court of supreme jurisdiction overruling a former decision is, as a general rule, retrospective in its operation.[87] There is an exception to this principle,[88] but such exception will not be extended to an erroneous decision on general mercantile law.[89] The overruling of a decision as to one proposition of law declared by it does not argue unsoundness

75. Refusing to overrule decision that a statute requiring freehold qualifications as to city office holders was constitutional. Kahle v. Peters [W. Va.] 62 SE 691.

76. See post, § 3.

77. Nothing to prevent a court from overruling its own decisions. McCollum v. McConaughy [Iowa] 119 NW 539. Erroneous construction of a statute when its correction will not inflict serious injury on any one and will enforce the legislative intent. Law v. Smith, 34 Utah, 394, 98 P 300. Overruling decisions that statute prohibiting soliciting orders for the purchase or delivery of intoxicating liquor was unconstitutional as to nonresidents. McCollum v. McConaughy [Iowa] 119 NW 539.

78. Fisher v. Wagner [Md.] 71 A 999.

79. Nortnass v. Pioneer Townsite Co. [Neb.] 117 NW 951. Decision, which has stood for 25 years, that a deed of trust should be treated as an incumbrance in applying certain statutes, will be followed. Hollywood Lumber Co. v. Love [Cal.] 100 P 698.

80. As to tax bills issued for street improvement. Coulter v. Phoenix Brick & Const. Co., 131 Mo. App. 230, 110 SW 655.

81. Doctrine should be applied to a decision of four of five justices where the case was carefully presented and considered at great length and there has been no change in the trend of judicial opinion unfavorable to it and it has been received with favor by the profession. Willcutt & Sons. v. Driscoll, 200 Mass. 110, 85 NE 897.

82. Adopting dissenting opinion in a former case in which the decision was rendered by three of the justices. Thompson v. Shelverton, 131 Ga. 714, 63 SE 220.

83. Westhus v. Union Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 168 F 617; Kinney v. Conant [C. C. A.] 166 F 720; City of Kalamazoo v. Crawford [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 669, 117 NW 572.

84. Expressions in the opinion are only entitled to consideration as the views of the judge who wrote the opinion. State v. Goodwin, 81 S. C. 419, 62 SE 1100.

85. Overruling decision that assignee of draft with bill of lading attached as security becomes the owner outright of the goods, and responsible for the stipulations of the bargainor given in the original contract of sale. Mason v. Nelson Cotton Co., 148 N. C. 492, 62 SE 625.

86. Martin v. St. Joseph [Mo. App.] 117 SW 94.

87. Effect is not that the former decision was bad but that it never was the law. Mason v. Nelson Cotton Co., 148 N. C. 492, 62 SE 625.

88. Where a constitution or statute has received a given construction by the courts of last resort, and contracts have been made and rights acquired under and in accordance with such construction, such contracts may not be invalidated, nor vested rights acquired under those impaired, by a change of construction made by a subsequent decision. Mason v. Nelson Cotton Co., 148 N. C. 492, 62 SE 625.

89. Not extended to a decision that the assignee of a draft with bill of lading attached as security is liable for a breach of warranty. Mason v. Nelson Cotton Co., 148 N. C. 492, 62 SE 625.

therein as to other separate and distinct propositions enunciated thereby.[90] A precedent established in a court of equity may, from the differing nature of the tribunals, be inapplicable in a court law.[91]

§ 2. Decisions and obiter dicta.[92]—See 10 C. L. 1696—To constitute a precedent, a decision must be upon a question presented to the court under the issues and essential to the disposition of the cause,[93] and actually decided.[94] The value of former adjudications as precedents is usually confined to the issue directly involved [95] and to cases where the facts and issues presented are for practical purposes the same,[96] and such cases will be tested and interpreted as based on and applicable to the state of facts [97] stated in the opinion.[98] The mere failure of the court to discover and point out other objections to the ruling brought under consideration should not be construed as approving it in all other respects.[99] A statement which is not necessary to a decision of the case is obiter dicta,[1] and is entitled to no greater weight than would be given it as an expression of an opinion of the justice writing the opinion,[2] but dictum is not always to be disregarded.[3]

§ 4. Courts of different jurisdictions. A. Inferior and appellate.[9]—See 10 C. L. 1697—Until a case decided by the supreme court of the state has been overruled by that court, the law there announced is binding upon the lower court,[10] and the appellate courts of intermediate jurisdiction are also conclusively bound,[11] except in the case of a state court where a federal question is involved.[12] Decisions of an inferior court are not binding on the court of last resort.[13] A decision of a question of law by the appellate division of the supreme court of New York should control a judge at special term,[14] and it is the duty of the judge of the special term to follow the decision of the appellate division in the same department where there is a conflict between such decision and that of the appellate division of another department.[15] The court of civil appeals of Texas is bound by the decisions of the court of criminal appeals on matters pertaining to the enforcement of the criminal law,[16] but is not bound to follow a construction of a statute which affects a civil transaction.[17] The constitution of Missouri provides that the court of appeals shall follow the last previous ruling of the supreme court on the question,[18] and inference from remarks of the court of appeals outside the point of decision should not be drawn against express decision of the supreme court.[19] property.[22] This has sometimes been done, even where it involves an overruling of federal decisions.[23] If there is no decision of the state court upon the statute, decisions of another state which has a like statute will be looked to,[24] but the decision to be followed must be a decision of the highest state court.[25] When rights have vested or contracts have been made under such statutes before it has received interpretation by the state court, the federal court will exercise its independent judgment,[26] irrespective of decisions of the state court subsequently rendered,[27] and in interpreting the rights of parties under transactions made prior to the change of opinion of the supreme court of the state, the federal court will follow its own decisions made prior to such change.[28] They are not bound where the determination of the general law is involved,[29] except where there is a statutory regulation;[30] and, when a contract is executed and is to be carried out within the state, the decisions of the highest courts of the state will be of most pursuasive influence.[31] The effect of a violation of the provisions of a state statute upon collateral and independent contracts is a matter of general law, as to which the federal court must exercise its independent judgment.[32] The decision of the state courts of last resort as to matters of purely local law is binding upon the federal court,[33] and, where the decision of the state court, though based upon the common law, is deemed of an application especially local, this decision is given an authority almost as great as would be assigned to it if it construed a state statute;[34] and the rule of public policy established by a state by its statutes or the decisions of its highest courts will be followed, although directly opposite to that established by the federal court.[35] Whether a suit in a federal court involves the necessary jurisdictional amount is not a local question controlled by the statute of the state or the ruling of its supreme court,[36] and, where a federal question is involved, the construction of the state court is not conclusive.[37] The federal courts will follow the construction given by the local courts to a statute of a territory where such statute has been in existence for a considerable time and property rights have been predicated on it.[38]

When state courts follow federal decisions.[See 10 C. L. 1700]—Where a federal question is involved, the decisions of the federal courts thereon are binding upon the state courts,[39] and federal decisions are the final authority as to what constitutes a federal question.[40] Where varient views are entertained by the federal courts, it is the duty of the state court to decide for itself,[41] and, when it has done so upon full consideration, it will adhere to the rule laid down,[42] and, so far as the federal decision relates to the administration of justice within the state and the powers and proceedings of the state tribunals, it is not controlling.[43] The fact that the af-

(§ 4) C. Different federal courts.[45]—See 10 C. L. 1701—The lower federal courts are bound by the decisions of the supreme court of the United States and those of the circuit court of appeals in their own circuit,[46] but are not bound by those of a federal court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, or even the decisions of a federal court of appeals in another circuit.[47] Although the questions propounded have been adversely decided in another circuit court of appeals, still they will be entitled to an independent consideration and judgment in the circuit court of appeals in which they are brought.[48] Federal courts of one circuit ordinarily concur in the decisions of the circuit court of appeals in another circuit,[49] but the decision of another circuit will not be followed if it would involve a conflict of results for which there would be no remedy.[50] Where no direct attack has been made upon a prior adjudication by a circuit court of the question sought to be subsequently raised in a similar suit in the court of appeals, the prior adjudication, unless clearly erroneous, should be followed.[51] The circuit court of appeals of the District of Columbia will follow the decision of a circuit court of appeals of another district in a patent case, where there is no material difference in the case and especially where there has been a protracted litigation.[52]

(§ 4) D. Different state courts.[53]—See 10 C. L. 1701—The construction placed upon the statute of a state by its own judicial tribunals will be followed by the courts of other states in determining the right of parties under such statute.[54] They are not, however, bound by the interpretation placed upon the common law,[55] but it has been held that, in a transitory common-law action, the interpretation of the common law obtaining in the state where the action accrued will govern,[56] and that, if a litigant had no case in the courts of that state, he had none elsewhere.[57] The court of one state is not bound as a matter of comity to enforce, against a citizen of that state, a stockholder's liability arising under the laws of another state.[58] Comity applies only to questions which have been actually decided and which arose under the same facts.[59]

64. Determination of boundary by legislature, conclusive. State v. Bowman [Ark.] 116 SW 896; De Loney v. State [Ark.] 115 SW 138. Where "Choctaw Strip" tendered to Arkansas by federal government (Act Cong. Feb. 10, 1895, c. 571, 33 Stat. 714, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 378) and accepted (Acts of state legislature 1905, p. 124), courts would not question boundary, but would assume that state had jurisdiction over crimes in such "strip." State v. Bowman [Ark.] 116 SW 896.

65. State v. Bowman [Ark.] 116 SW 896. Proof of private survey not authorized by adjoining states is not competent evidence of location of state boundary. De Loney v. State [Ark.] 115 SW 138. Flagstaff man in corps of surveyors employed by Indian commission could not testify as to state boundary where survey not authorized by states. Id. Evidence of whether house was north or south of former bank of river properly received on issue as to location of house as to Texas-Arkansas boundary formed by Red river. Id. Ancient public boundaries may be shown by general reputation, tradition, and by hearsay declarations of persons with knowledge, before the controversy arose. Id.

66. South bank of Red river, and not thread of stream, is Texas-Arkansas boundary. Shown by Spanish-American treaty (8 Stat. 252 et seq.) that river belong to United States; by Mexican-American treaty of 1828 (8 Stat. 372); by act of Cong. June 16, 1836; by Cont. Ark. 1836 and subsequent constitutions; by act of Texas congress of 1836 (Laws 1836, p. 133); and by Act Cong. 1845 (Act March 1, 1845, 5 Stat. 797), admitting Texas to union. De Loney v. State [Ark.] 115 SW 138.

67. De Loney v. State [Ark.] 115 SW 138.

68. De Loney v. State [Ark.] 115 SW 138; Rober v. Michelsen [Neb.] 116 NW 949. Land changed by process of erosion and accretion from Nebraska to Iowa, and not restored to former state by avulsion. Id. Where islands in Mississippi river were gradually washed to the Arkansas shore, they became part of the state of Arkansas. Sutton v. Archer [Miss.] 46 S 705. Western boundary of Missouri (extended by Act Cong. June 7, 1836, 5 Stat. 34, c. 86) remains center of stream, though by erosion land east of original boundary line is taken from Missouri. Missouri v. Kansas, 213 U. S. 78, 53 Law. Ed. —. Where Columbia river contained two ship channels and middle of north channel was described as boundary between Oregon and Washington (Act Feb. 14, 1859; 11 Stat 383, c. 33), such channel remains the boundary, subject to changes by accretion. Washington v. Oregon, 211 U. S. 127, 53 Law. Ed. 118. Not changed by fact that channel shifted and south channel became main channel. Id.

may be retained by congress,[70] but an Indian citizen is otherwise subject to the jurisdiction of a state.[71] Where two states have concurrent jurisdiction over a river which is a boundary, the state which first acquires jurisdiction may finally punish an act malum in se, prohibited by both states,[72] but where the act is merely malum prohibitum and only prohibited by one state, the rule differs.[73] Jurisdiction over a portion of the Potomac river was lost by the state of Virginia on the cession to the United States of the territory now the District of Columbia.[74]

§ 2. Property.[75]—See 10 C. L. 1702—As a sovereign, the state holds the property right of unobstructed navigation of its waters in trust for the people.[76] Property for a private, as distinguished from a public use, may be acquired.[77] The public property of the state cannot ordinarily be devoted to private use.[78] A state is not to be deprived of its property by adverse possession,[79] and the rights of a state are not to be diminished by statute unless clearly disclosed by express terms or necessary implication.[80] Grants of public land by a sovereignty to corporations or individuals must be construed liberally as to the grantor and strictly as to the grantee.[81] A conveyance by a state of part of its swamp lands, by bargain and sale

70. Authority of congress to regulate commerce with Indian tribes superior to authority of state within whose limits are Indians. Dick v. U. S., 208 U. S. 340, 52 Law. Ed. 520. Stipulations in agreement between United States and Nec Perce Indians that federal laws as to intoxicating liquors apply to lands ceded to United States or allotted to Indians, not an invasion of sovereignty of Idaho. Id.

71. Under Act Cong. Feb. 8, 1887, c. 119, § 6, 24 Stat. 390, Indian allottee is citizen of United States and state of residence, and cannot claim immunity from criminal laws of state as to fish and game by virtue of federal treaties. State v. Morrin, 136 Wis. 552, 117 NW 1006. See, also, Indians, 11 C. L. 1898.

72. Nielsen v. Oregon, 212 U. S. 315, 53 Law. Ed. —.

73. Nielsen v. Oregon, 212 U. S. 315, 53 Law. Ed. —. State of Oregon cannot, because of concurrent jurisdiction, under Act Cong. Feb. 14, 1859; 11 Stat. 383, c. 33, over Columbia river, make operation of purse net within limits of Washington criminal, when authorized by license of latter state. Id.

74. In view of acts of Maryland and Virginia in ceding territory to United States, compact of those states of 1785 that rights of fishing on Potomac be common to citizens of both states was never effective in the ceded territory. Evans v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 544. When territory ceded, legislative power passed immediately to congress which in exercise of police power might regulate fishing. Id. Virginia's easements and privileges, lost by cession of territory to federal government, were not revived by recession of portion of land (Act Cong. July 9, 1846; 9 Stat. 35, c. 35). No express revival and consequently no revival by implication. Id. Controversy between Maryland and Virginia, resulting in arbitration award approved by congress (Act March 3, 1879, 20 Stat. 481, c. 196), of no effect as to portion of river in District of Columbia. Id. No acceptance by congress of terms of award or grant of jurisdiction as to waters of Potomac. Id. Citizen of Virginia subject to conviction for violation of law as to fishing in District of Columbia. Id.

78. District agricultural association formed under St. 1880, p. 62, c. 69, as re-enacted by St. 1891, p. 138, c. 126, held to hold property as agent for state, and amendment of 1895, St. 1895, p. 14, c. 8, § 10½, authorizing transfer of such property to subsidiary, private corporations, was void under Const. art. 4, § 31. Sixth Dist. Agr. Ass'n v. Wright [Cal.] 97 P 144.

79. One cannot acquire by occupancy title to parts of lots beyond high-water mark of meandered river, since limitations do not run against state. Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids [Iowa] 120 NW 966. Title to school lands cannot be acquired by adverse possession against state. Kinney v. Munch [Minn.] 120 NW 374. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4807 (Pierce's Code, § 1519), making limitations applicable to actions by state, etc., does not authorize acquisition of title to school lands by adverse possession. Such construction would be repugnant to Enabling Act (Act Feb. 22, 1889, c. 180, 25 Stat. 679), § 11, and Const art. 16, § 2, requiring school lands, to be disposed of at public sale, etc. O'Brien v. Wilson [Wash.] 97 P 1115. Repugnant to Const. art. 16, § 1, that public lands be held in trust for people, etc. Id.

80. General expressions granting city power to assess persons benefited by public improvement do not impart permission to assess state's property. State v. Kilburn [Conn.] 69 A 1028. Charter of Hartford, § 132, authorizes assessments on land "belonging to" state. "Belonging to" imparts beneficial ownership. Id. No implication that land on which state has mortgage for benefit of school fund is to be assessed. Id.

deed purporting on its face to deal with the full title, transfers to the grantee therein an after-acquired title.[82]

§ 3. Contracts.[83]—See 10 C. L. 1703—A state can only be bound by a contract of its officers where they act in conformity to law,[84] and a state's contract cannot be enlarged, diminished or varied by a subordinate officer.[85] In its governmental capacity, a state may contract for the sale of an article manufactured in its state prison.[86] Legislation authorizing the union of resident corporations, when mutually concerted by different states, is not prohibited by the federal constitution prohibiting agreements between states.[87] A state is as liable for breach of contract as an individual[88] and is also subject to estoppel,[89] but liability cannot be predicated upon a contract unless the state is a party.[90]

§ 4. Officers and employes.[91]—See 10 C. L. 1703—The determination of the qualifications of members of a state legislature may be constitutionally vested in that body.[92] Apportionment acts should conform to constitutional limitations as to ratios,[93] but courts will not declare a legislative apportionment act unconstitutional where there is no valid prior enactment to fall back on,[94] and a legislative appor-

State v. Schnitger, 16 Wyo. 479, 95 P 698. Legislative apportionment act of 1901 (Laws 1901, p. 98, c. 91), fixing ratios, is repealed by act of 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 81, c. 69), whereby ratios are based on number of inhabitants and number of senators and representatives. Id. Provisions of apportionment acts of 1893 (Laws 1893, p. 55, c. 26), 1901 (Laws 1901, p. 98, c. 91) and 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 81, c. 69), establishing districts, are authorized by constitution and if other portions be invalid, valid portions are severable. Id. In absence of express ratios in legislative apportionment act, ratios are number of inhabitants of state divided by number of senators or representatives fixed by act. Id. Senatorial and representative district is a territorial unit, and cannot be senatorial district alone. Id. Right of new counties to representation to be considered in any apportionment. Id. Court will take judicial notice of membership of legislature, terms of officers as constituted, and journals of either branch, as far as germane to validity of apportionment act. 94. State v. Schnitger, 16 Wyo. 479, 95 P 698. Legislature elected under inequitable tionment of congressional districts is not judicially reviewable where there are no constitutional provisions controlling apportionment.[95] The legislature has broad discretionary power to investigate any subject respecting which it may desire information to aid in the proper discharge of legislative functions,[96] or to perform any other act delegated to it by the fundamental law, through duly authorized committees.[97] The number of employes of a senate may be limited by constitutional provisions.[98]

The powers and duties of state officers are governed by constitutional and statutory provisions.[99] Compensation may be in the form of a salary, with fees to be apportionment act is not illegal, since court cannot inquire into qualification of members. Id. Court has no power to apportion. Id. Where Const. art. 3, subtit. "Apportionment," § 4, provided for 16 senators and 33 representatives, and Acts 1893 (Laws 1893, p. 55, c. 26), and 1901 (Laws 1901, p. 98, c. 91) established new districts, pursuant to which senators and representatives were elected and classified according to constitution, so that 13 senators, including one from new district, held over, though it be conceded that legislative acts were invalid, court could not compel election under apportionment in constitution. Id. Election under constitutional apportionment would result in 19 senators and 36 representatives, contrary to constitutional provision that representatives be not less than twice number of senators. Id. Voters in two of new counties would have to submit to representation by nonresidents, in whose election they had no voice. Id. 99. Power to offer reward for apprehension of criminal, discretionary with governor (Ky. St. 1903, §§ 1932, 1933). Hager v. Sidebottom [Ky.] 113 SW 870. Under Const. art 6, § 8, that governor cause laws to be faithfully executed, he is entitled to institute suit for and in name of state. State v. Huston [Okl.] 97 P 982. Under Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. Okl. 1903, § 6567, attorney general has no power to bring suit in name of state, prosecute or defend same in district court of state, in any civil or criminal cause in which state may be party or interested, except when requested by governor or branch of legislature. Id. Under Ky. St. 1903, §§ 118, 127, 135, where commonwealth's attorney refused to institute civil proceedings at suggestion of governor, latter might employ special counsel at state's expense to assist and co-operate with county attorney in prosecution of such proceedings. James v. Helm, 33 Ky. L. R. 871, 111 SW 335. Private secretary of governor cannot discharge duties of governor in his absence. Act 1906, p. 260, c. 30. Hager v. Sidebottom [Ky.] 113 SW 870. Cannot offer reward. Id. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 452, secretary of state must keep office open for transaction of business from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m., except holidays. When open after 4 p. m., must receive business presented. Grant v. Lansdon [Idaho] 97 P 960. Refusal to file certificate of nomination after 4 p. m., improper. Id. Duties of state auditor defined by constitution. Daily v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 4, Supreme court must take judicial notice of fact that auditor is without authority to collect current undefaulted insurance taxes on behalf of state, either as official or individual. Chandler v. Eastman [N. H.] 71 A 221. Publication of index to biographical sketches of state men, requiring over 100 pages of printed matter, in place of special bulletins, not authorized. Id. Under Laws 1893, p. 28, c. 31, § 7, authorizing trustees of state library to issue alphabetical list of books received, etc., where list arranged alphabetically accord-collected for the state's benefit.[1] The state is not liable for the torts of officers though committed in the discharge of official duties,[2] and as a rule the state's rights are not affected by the laches [3] or illegal conduct of its officers.[4] A state treasurer acting as the custodian of municipal warrants, who sells them without authority before funds are raised by municipality for redemption, is liable for conversion.[5]

§ 5. Fiscal management.[6]—See 10 C. L. 1703—Appropriation laws are to be construed to effect their object,[7] but such laws must conform to constitutional limitations relative to the manner of passage,[8] the purpose of the appropriation,[9] and the amount thereof.[10] Also, appropriations must be for a proper purpose,[11] and a

Laws 1907, p. 465, c. 151, being an "appropriation" of "the proceeds of the one mill tax for the years 1907 and 1908," is an appropriation of the whole amount of the tax, not the portion actually collected during the biennium. Id. "Proceeds" defined as "the amount proceeding or accruing from some possession or transaction," "yield, issue, product." "Levy" is "the amount accruing from a tax or execution. Id. Comp. St. 1905, c. 87, § 19, appropriating income from grants of land to use of university, creating board of regents with power to expend such funds, etc., is a complete appropriation of income from trust funds to beneficiary. Id. Const. art. 3, § 19, as to biennial appropriations, inapplicable to trust funds devoted by congress to specific use. Id.

8. Acts of 1907, p. 19, No. 17, providing for consolidation of offices of superintendent of public schools and treasurer of school boards, with requirement that latter receive no compensation, etc., not in conflict with Const. art. 75, where, from facts, constitutional provision that governor enumerate legislation at special sessions complied with. State v. Romero, 122 La. 885, 48 S 312. Order of general assembly to state treasurer to pay debt with money is not "pledging faith of state" within Const. art. 2, § 16, as to reading bills on passage. Battle v. Lacy [N. C.] 64 SE 505. Act authorizing state treasurer to deliver bonds previously issued for payment of debt not within Const. art. 2, § 16. Id. Sp. Sess. 1907, Act No. 21, re-enacting Acts 1906, p. 69, No. 49, § 13, with appropriations to meet expense of primary elections, not violative of Const. 1898, art. 55, requiring appropriations, except general appropriation bills, to be in separate bill embracing only one subject. State v. Michels, 121 La. 374, 46 S 430.

9. Under Const. art. 3, § 19, providing that appropriations end with expiration of first fiscal quarter after adjournment of next regular session of legislature, it is not essential that money be actually drawn during two-year period, but expense for which appropriation is made should be incurred during such period. State v. Brian [Neb.] 120 NW 916. Unexpected surplus of appropriation lapses, not uncollected portion. Id.

10. Whether appropriation is debt within Const. §§ 49, 50, relative to limitations as to incurring of indebtedness, depends upon character of appropriation and manner of payment. James v. State University [Ky.] 114 SW 767. Act March 16, 1908 (Acts 1908, p. 22), being appropriation to university to be paid in successive years, is not in violation of Const. §§ 49, 50, it not appearing that there will be deficit where payments are to be made. Id. Not indebtedness against commonwealth prohibited by Const. §§ 49, 50, being subject to reduction or change by legislature. Id. Const. art. 10, § 23 (Burns' Ed. § 289), construed to mean that state might contract debts in addition to debts of territory of Oklahoma, or such debts as were expressly assumed by constitution to meet casual deficits or failures on revenue, but such debts, direct and contingent, singly or in aggregate, must not exceed $400,000. In re Menefee [Okl.] 97 P 1014. Mandatory that moneys arising from sale of refunding bonds be applied to repay debts and liabilities, and no other purpose (Const. art. 10, § 25 Burn's Ed. § 291). Id. Refunding bonds neither create nor increase debt, but change form of existing indebtedness. Laws 1907-08, p. 155, c. 7, for issuance of refunding bonds, may take effect, without legislature may properly recognize state institutions [12] and claims founded on justice and equity,[13] or incur reasonable necessary expenses in performing their duties.[14] Specific constitutional provisions limit the legislative power in establishing state depositaries [15] or extending appropriations for the compensation of officers.[16] warrants are subject to the limitation of indebtedness.[17] An agreement appointing a bank as state depositary, with no provision as to termination, is terminable by notice of either party.[18] A taxpayer may maintain an equitable action to prevent a secretary of state and state treasurer from disbursing state moneys for illegitimate purposes.[19]

submission to election. Id. Const. art. 10, § 29 (Burn's Ed. § 295), requiring certificate of auditor and attorney general, does not require joint execution. Bonds equally valid if signed separately. Id.

11. Primary election law (Acts 1906, p. 69, No. 49), requiring state to pay part of primary election expenses, not violative of Const. 1898, art. 58, as to granting funds to person, etc. State v. Michels, 121 La. 374, 46 S 430. Not violative of Const, 1898, art. 212, providing that all elections "except" primary and municipal elections in certain towns be at state's expense. Id.

12. St. 1897, p. 447, c. 274, appropriating a sum for maintenance of home under auspices of Woman's Relief Corps made home state institution, under exclusive management of state. Within Const. art. 4, § 22, prohibiting appropriations except to corporations under management of state. Board of Directors of Women's Relief Corps Home Ass'n v. Nye [Cal. App.] 97 P 208. No constitutional prohibition from converting private corporation into state institution, provided purposes of such corporation are within general legislative powers or involve function of government. Id. St. 1897, p. 447, c. 274, appropriating a sum to home under auspices of Woman's Relief Corps not to be held a gift prohibited by Const. art. 4, § 31. Duty of state to care for citizens unable to support themselves. Id. Appropriation for home under auspices of Woman's Relief Corps (St. 1897, p. 447, c. 274), not unconstitutional as special legislation. General power of state to care for citizens unable to help themselves and under Const. art. 4, § 25, subd. 33, legislature may enact special law where general law inapplicable. Id. State university and state normal schools are educational institutions for which legislature may make appropriations without submitting questions to voters, under Const. § 184. James v. State University [Ky.] 114 SW 767. Change of name and departments under Act March 15, 1908 (Acts 1908, p. 22), not change of university as public corporation and state institution as to appropriations. Id.

13. McSurely v. McGrew [Iowa] 118 NW 415.

14. State v. Frear [Wis.] 119 NW 894. Resolution for legislative investigation and expenses not debt within Const. art. 8, § 8, as to passage. Term "debt" not reference to ordinary legislative expenses. Id. Resolution appropriating money to defray expenses of legislative investigation not violative of Const. art. 6, § 2, making secretary of state the state auditor, where expenses to be audited according to St. 1898, § 127. Where expense accounts to be audited by secretary of state on certificate of chairman of committee of facts, to which legislative fee bill to be applied in gain case, but no auditing authority conferred upon chairman. Id.

15. Laws 1908, c. 96, providing for establishment of state depositaries, etc., is not in conflict with Const. § 137, requiring statements of funds in treasury by state treasurer, verified by governor, etc. State v. Edwards [Miss.] 46 S 964.

16. Under Const. art. 5, § 56 (Burns' Ed. § 129), before appropriations for compensation of any officer or employe can be made office must be created and salary fixed, or employment authorized and compensation provided for either therein or in separate bill. Bryan v. Menefee [Okl.] 95 P 471. Under Const. art. 5, § 56 (Burns' Ed. § 129), an appropriation to cover compensation of employes, not prior to that time authorized by law, and compensation fixed, can only be enacted as a separate appropriation bill embracing but one subject. Id. Appropriation by separate bill containing but one subject providing for contingent expense of state officer, is valid. Warrant properly drawn against such contingent fund to pay for clerical assistance is valid. Id.

17. Issuance of warrant not creation of indebtedness within Const. art. 10, § 29, where issued by proper officer for payment of money by virtue of valid appropriation, money being in treasury or tax levy made with provision for collection. Bryan v. Menefee [Okl.] 95 P 471. Evidence of indebtedness as used in constitution means indebtedness as usually evidenced by bond. Id.

18. Agreement to be terminated by some certain unequivocal act. State Nat. Bank v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 678. Where Ky. St. 1903, § 4692, as to state depositaries, is silent as to time depositary shall act as such, the relation, in the absence of agreement, continues during the mutual will of state treasurer and depositary designated. Id. Where bank agreed to pay 2½ per cent. interest, its refusal to execute renewal bond did not affect agreement, such renewal bond being only to protect state's interest (Ky. St. 1903, § 4693). Bank not relieved from liability for interest where continuing to act as depositary, though use of fund deemed by bank unsafe. Id.

19. Where attorney general refuses to act. State v. Frear [Wis.] 119 NW 894.

ranted by law.[21] The power to examine all claims may rest in a state board of examiners,[22] and such officers act in a quasi judicial capacity.[23] The allowance of a claim may be compelled by mandamus when refused arbitrarily upon questions of law alone,[24] but where a state has consented to be sued and provided a court for actions involving claims,[25] such court may render a recommendatory judgment as to a claim disallowed by the examiners.[26]

The jurisdiction of a specially provided court of claims as to parties[27] and matters of practice[28] is governed by the statutes relative thereto. In such a court, the state has been held liable for damages involved in the construction of canals,[29] as where the state neglected to repair a bridge,[30] for land appropriated in construct-

Dec. Dig. §§ 169-187; 26 A. & E. Enc. L. (2ed) 476.

21. Cannot arise by implication. Hager v. Sidebottom [Ky.] 113 SW 870.

22. Under Const. art. 4, § 18, state board of examiners is given power to examine all claims against state except salaries and compensation of officers fixed by law. Thomas v. State [Idaho] 100 P 761. Power cannot be exercised by district court in entering judgment against state and thus seeking to bind examiners. Id.

23. May exercise discretion in discharge of official duties. State v. Cutler, 34 Utah, 99, 95 P 1071.

24. State v. Cutler, 34 Utah, 99, 95 P 1071. Allowance of stenographer's fees. Id.

25. Where state provides court in which actions involving claims must be brought, such court has exclusive jurisdiction of such actions. Thomas v. State [Idaho] 100 P 761, Under statute creating Albion State Normal School (Rev. Codes, §§ 517, 519, 520), and Const. art. 5, § 10, supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction in actions involving claims against state. Id. Consent is given board of trustees to sue and be sued. Id. Action against board of trustees of Albion State Normal School to recover money judgment is in fact action against state, board of trustees being mere agents of state in administration of affairs of school. Id. Intention of legislature to provide for suits against trustees in any court of competent jurisdiction, but when claims were involved, supreme court alone had jurisdiction. Id. Judgment of district court against trustees of normal school in fact judgment against state and insufficient as claim to be filed against state with state board of examiners. Id.

26. Thomas v. State [Idaho] 100 P 761. Where services performed by superintendent of state capitol grounds under employment of capitol building board, and claim disallowed by state board of engineers, appropriation by legislature would be equitable and just. Daniels v. State [Idaho] 98 P 853.

27. Jurisdiction of court of claims to bring in other parties, under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 264, 281, is limited to proceedings in which state has consented to be sued. Elmore & Hamilton Cont. Co. v. State, 62 Misc. 58, 115 NYS 1071. Motion to bring in county as party defendant will be denied where claim is presented for damages in construction of road in such county, under Code Civ. Proc. § 281, since court has no jurisdiction over such county. Id.

28. Under statutes relative to practice in state court of claims (Code Civ. Proc. § 1022, providing generally that courts state facts and conclusions of law separately; § 3347, subd. 7, 4, where rule does not apply to court of claims; Code Civ. Proc. § 265, and Laws 1897, p. 15, c. 36, as to such court, and amendment, Laws 1906, p. 1887, c. 692, § 3), later provisions control, and court of claims must state separately conclusions of law and facts found in conformity to practice of supreme court. Ostrander v. State, 192 N. Y. 415, 85 NE 668.

29. Under Canal Law (Laws 1894, p. 629, c. 338), § 37, one injured by widening and deepening of ditch to convey surplus waters of canals may prosecute his claim for damages without any other legislative authority. Town of Lenox v. State, 61 Misc. 28, 114 NYS 744. Town may maintain claim against state where widening of ditch to convey surplus waters of canal was done negligently, resulting in destruction of two highway bridges. Id. State liable for damages in deepening or widening ditch, but not for expense of better bridge constructed. Id. State, in constructing barge canal, may locate its banks where it would, subject only to liability for compensation for damage to be obtained through court of claims. Meneely v. Kinser Const. Co., 128 App. Div. 799, 113 NYS 183. Where obstruction of stream involved in state plan for construction of barge canal, remedy of riparian owner was against state, through court of claims. Contractor not liable where stream obstructed by direction of state engineer. Id. State might construct canal so as to injure riparian rights, liability being clearly indicated by statute. Laws 1903, p. 342, c. 147, § 13, shows contemplation of legislature to provide for damages in addition to compensation for lands, structures or waters appropriated. Meneely v. Kinser Const. Co., 130 App. Div. 325, 114 NYS 1136. Contractor protected by state's right. Id. State liable for all damages where lands overflowed by water discharged from canal into creek flowing through plaintiff's lands, though creek swollen by heavy rains, where no showing that without discharge plaintiff's lands would have been overflowed. Carhart v. State, 61 Misc. 13, 114 NYS 544. On claim against state for damages for flood caused by escape of waters from canal feeder, evidence of heavy rains at some distance from claimant's farm, though somewhat remote, was not incompetent or inadmissible as matter of law. Ostrander v. State, 192 N. Y. 415, 85 NE 668.

30. Where state appropriated bed of stream for canal and built new bridge to replace one out of repair, excluding travel for long time, though not allowing town to repair, state was liable to owner of hotel

ing such improvements,[31] or where a duty to keep a bridge in safe condition was disregarded.[32] The state is not liable for injury resulting from an insufficiently guarded road constructed by an independent contractor.[33] To put a state in default for the payment of an ordinary claim, the holder must apply to the proper state official and present claim and vouchers in required form.[34] An individual and a sovereign power cannot be regarded as joint tort feasors in an alleged conspiracy.[35]

§ 7. Actions by and against state.[36]—See 10 C. L. 1704—A sovereign state cannot be sued without its consent,[37] and the provision by which such consent is often given [38] is to be strictly construed.[39] The appearance of an attorney general, in an action where the state was made a party without statutory authority, did not operate to waive the state's exemption.[40] The exemption applies to a state agency,[41] though it has been held that boards, commissions, and bodies created by legislative authority, have an incidental capacity to sue and be sued.[42] Though a state has consented to be sued in its own courts, the right does not exist in a federal court.[43] adjacent to bridge, who suffered damage for want of public access thereto. Kline v. State, 61 Misc. 18, 114 NYS 318. State cannot close bridge forming part of a public highway and arbitrarily and negligently omit to make repairs without rendering itself liable to special damages occurring to abutting owner on highway. Id. Damages that occur where repairs and improvements are diligently prosecuted by a state are damnum absque injuria. Id.

31. Court of claims, in adjudging compensation for land appropriated by state, cannot place value below that given by any witness. Buchard v. State, 128 App. Div. 750, 113 NYS 233. Claimant for compensation for land appropriated by state is entitled to reimbursement for expense of obtaining clerks search showing her title, which is prerequisite to payment of claim, since otherwise she would not receive full compensation as entitled by constitution. Id. Cost of search not disbursement within Code Civ. Proc. § 274, providing that no disbursements be allowed by court of claims. Burchard v. State, 128 App. Div. 750, 113 NYS 233. State cannot take land for canal without disbursement. Id.

32. Where state, with duty of keeping bridge in safe condition, permitted use of same by street railway on condition that it pay damages that might occur from construction and maintenance of railway, and bridge, being weakened by continuous use, collapsed, resulting in injury of passenger, which was paid by state, state could not recover such damages from railway, the consent not binding the company to maintain the bridge in a safe condition. People v. Syracuse Rapid Transit R. Co., 129 App. Div. 800, 114 NYS 776. Primary duty to keep bridge in safe condition upon state as far as traveling public is concerned. Laws 1894, pp. 621, 630-633, 643, c. 338, §§ 23, 50, 53, 111. Real cause of injury, gross negligence of state. Id. Where duty, state properly liable for damages resulting to claimant and costs of enforcing same. Laws 1894, p. 629, c. 338, § 37, and Laws 1899, p. 621, c. 280, § 1. Id.

33. Held independent contractor. Coolidge v. State, 61 Misc. 38, 114 NYS 553.

39. Must be clear and unambiguous. Thomas v. State [Idaho] 100 P 761.

40. In action to admeasure dower which had escheated to state, appearance of attorney general generally in action, and also upon hearing before referee on title, did not work waiver by people of jurisdictional question involved in making state a party. Smith v. Doe, 111 NYS 525. Judgment not conclusive where no statutory authority to make state party. Id.

41. Officers of dispensary created by law are officers of government, and are not suable as such except by express provision of law. Fowler v. Rome Dispensary, 5 Ga. App. 36, 62 SE 660.

42. For that purpose to be regarded as corporations sub modo. Stern v. State Board of Dental Examiner, 50 Wash. 100, 96 P 693. State board of dental examiners not exempt from suit by individuals. Id. Action against state dental board of examiners by attorney for services in assisting in prosecutions pursuant to employment by board is in no sense an action against the state. State not bound by judgment, and none of its funds charged with payment. Id. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5676 (Pierce's Code, § 1358), as to enforcing judgments against counties and other public corporations, not applicable to judgments against state dental board. Not public corporation of character specified, not paying by orders and warrants but, by § 3031 (Pierce's Code, § 4474), handling its funds as individuals. Id. If mandamus proper to enforce payment of judgment, it is concurrent, not exclusive. Receivership proper remedy. Id.

43. Murray v. Wilson Distilling Co., 213 U. S. 151, 53 Law. Ed. —. Bill in equity to compel specific performance if contract between individuals and state cannot, as

A suit against state officials to enjoin the enforcement of unconstitutional legislation,[44] a suit to compel the performance of official duties,[45] or a suit where the state has no pecuniary interest or substantive right to protect,[46] is not an action against the state.

A state's power to maintain a suit has been exercised where an obstruction in a city street constituted a public nuisance,[47] where the navigation of a canal was obstructed,[48] and where money was received which a claimant was not entitled to.[49] against objection of a state, be maintained in federal court. Id. Considering constitution and statutes of South Carolina establishing dispensary system, relation of debtor and creditor arose where state through officers purchased liquor. Id. Relation of debtor and creditor not altered by winding up act of Feb. 16, 1907. Id. Bill by vendors of liquor to enjoin dispensary commission, appointed to close out South Carolina dispensary, from disposing of fund and asking a receiver, on ground that fund of commissioners was trust fund to pay creditors, not maintainable, being suit against state within 11th Amendment. Id.; Murray v. South Carolina, 213 U. S. 174, 53 Law. Ed. —. Action to enjoin attorney general from instituting criminal proceedings, in effect an action against the state, and not maintainable in federal courts under Const. Amend. 11. Logan v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co., 157 F 570.

44. Not action against state since officers are judicially regarded as acting in personal capacities. Bennett v. Vallier, 136 Wis. 193, 116 NW 885; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 211 U. S. 210, 53 Law. Ed. 150. Immaterial whether officers are specially charged with enforcement of statute or whether duty devolves on them under general laws. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 F 925. Suit to prevent enforcement of unconstitutional act not against state, as officers are ministerial subject to control of equity. Merchants Exch. v. Knott, 212 Mo. 616, 111 SW 565. Suit in federal court to prevent enforcement of rates not violative of Const. Amend. 11. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 F 925; Consolidated Gas Co. v. New York, 157 F 849; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hadley, 161 F 419. Where rate statutes were repealed and others substituted, repeal did not abate suits, and supplemented bills might be filed to enjoin enforcement of new acts. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 F 925. Action of federal court in enjoining state officers from enforcing unconstitutional statute involves no question of state rights or right of local self-government. Id. Rates fixed by Virginia state corporation commission subject to injunction by federal court of confiscatory, though commission for some purposes is a court. Proceedings to establish rates legislative. Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 211 U. S. 210, 53 Law. Ed. 150. Bill to enjoin enforcement of rates as confiscatory is not bad as attempt to enjoin legislation. Id. Not barred by U. S. Rev. St. § 720, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 581, forbidding federal courts from enjoining proceedings in state courts, since act looks to character of proceedings not body. Id. Suit not within prohibition of Rev. St. § 720 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 581), where no proceedings begun in state court. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954. Federal circuit court on principles of county should not entertain suit to enjoin rates before appeal to highest state court. Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 211 U. S. 210, 53 Law. Ed. 150.

Relief denied: Bill to enjoin enforcement of California statute, imposing license tax on corporations (St. 1905, p. 493, c. 386, as amended by St. 1906, p. 22, c. 19, and St. 1907, p. 664, c. 347), held not to state cause of action, since defendant secretary of state was charged with no duty to enforce law, had only made threats and no presumption that statute would be construed to render it obnoxious to federal constitution. Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Curry, 162 F 978. District court has no jurisdiction of quo warranto to oust railroad commission on ground that future acts would injure relator as unjust discrimination. State Railroad Commission v. People [Colo.] 98 P 7. Judicial department has no jurisdiction to interfere in advance of action with railroad commission acts, being state board performing functions of governmental character. Id.

45. Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 152.

46. Ex parte Fitzpatrick [Ind.] 86 NE 964. Requiring state board to pay costs of opinion of supreme or appellate courts is not requiring state to pay in ordinary sense, though payment is made from fund derived from state. Id. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 620 providing that, in actions on relation of state, relator pay costs, except when relator is state officer by virtue of his office, and considering prior statutes, express provisions and policy of law are against taxation of costs or fees to state. Id.

47. City's right not exclusive. Alabama Western R. Co. v. State [Ala.] 46 S 468. Public street, public highway. Id.

48. State as trustee for people has right to intervention of court to protect valuable right of free navigation. State v. Columbia Water Power Co. [S. C.] 63 SE 884. State's property right might be protected by injunction. In addition to being permanent nuisance. Id. Remedy by indictment not exclusive nor adequate. Id. Under Civ. Code 1902, § 641, state by attorney general might file information against persons who intruded on property of state or erected nuisance thereon. Even if attorney general's right to enjoin obstruction of navigation of canal as nuisance were doubtful. Id. Refusal to enjoin obstruction when right to free navigation established by law and express contract would be arbitrary. Application not to be refused on ground that benefits to city exceed value of right to free navigation. Id. No defense that necessity of free navigation has ceased when contract for same. Id.

49. An action by state is proper to enforce obligation. Commonwealth v. Bacon, 33 Ky.

The state can always proceed by mandamus to enforce a legal duty created by the authority to which it has intrusted power to create it;[50] but the use of the state's name in mandamus may be altogether unnecessary.[51] The common-law prerogative right of a sovereign to priority in payment of demands due is sometimes exercised by a state.[52] A state which institutes a suit in its own behalf to some extent subjects itself to the rules applicable to ordinary suitors.[53] Limitations do not run against a state[54] unless the privilege is waived[55] or an estoppel arises.[56] In mandamus to compel the issuance of a warrant by the auditor to pay a reward offered by the governor, a meritorious defense should be allowed, though not tendered in time.[57]

STATUTES.

L. R. 935, 111 SW 387. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 3974, as to presentation of bills for public printing, commissioners act simply in ministerial capacity, and where claim approved by mistake, or by being misled by claimant, state may recover money improperly received. Id.

50. When state invests city with power to make orders as to construction and operation of street railroad, it charges those against whom orders are directed with duty of obeying, and obligation is therefore imposed by law. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942. Where Gen. St. 1902, § 3824 (Pub. Acts 1907, p. 806, c. 219) authorizes city control over street railway tracks, etc., and also authorizes mandamus to compel obedience, procedure may be in name of city, of state on relation of city, or in name of state alone. Id. Mandamus entitled "State ex rel.," is procedure by state as plaintiff to enforce its laws. Id.

51. Mandamus by certain counties to compel assessment of railroad's property. Where counties real partie's complainant, with right to sue in their own name. State v. Enloe [Tenn.] 117 SW 223. Right of counties to use name of state in mandamus to compel assessment of tax not authorized by Shannon's Code, § 495. Not within §§ 5165 5187, as to proceedings by state against corporations and to prevent usurpation of office. Id. No statute authorizing state's name to be used in such case. Id. Where state is to be bound by proceedings to collect taxes by suits at law or equity or other debts due state, it must appear by attorney general. Shannon's Code, § 5756, subsec. 5, § 6105. Id. Demurrer to mandamus properly sustained where counties acting in name of state sought to compel assessment of certain railroad properties, and effect would be to deprive state of benefits previously obtained for right which would be burden in reality. Id. Whether state be considered real party or not. Id.

52. State is entitled to priority over other creditors of defaulting public officer in collection of its delinquent revenue on his bond. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Rainey [Tenn.] 113 SW 397. Part of common law transmitted to Tennessee from North Carolina. Id. Under the common law, state is entitled to priority of payment out of the effects of an insolvent, and rule not changed by statute. Booth v. State, 131 Ga. 750, 63 SE 502. State entitled to priority of assets bank, which was state depositary against individual creditors and depositors. Id.

53. State v. Holgate [Minn.] 119 NW 792. Equitable action by state opens door to any defense or cross complaint germane to controversy that defendant may see fit to interpose. State v. Kilburn [Conn.] 69 A 1028; State v. Holgate [Minn.] 119 NW 792. Claims and demands arising out of independent transactions are in effect suits against the state and cannot, without state's consent, be asserted as set-off or counterclaim. Id. In mandamus by state to compel payment of taxes collected and in possession of county treasurer, defendant cannot plead, by way of set-off or counterclaim, that other money formally collected had been lost through failure of banks, where deposited and paid in expectation of refund from banks and bondsmen. Id. State party to action subject to estoppel as other party litigant. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Douglas County, 134 Wis. 197, 114 NW 511.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[58]

§ 1. Enactment.[59] See 10 C. L. 1705—The legislature has full power to legislate on any subject and to adopt its own rules, regulations, and methods of enacting such legislation, unless prohibited by the constitution.[60] Legislative rules or constitutional requirements relating to the passage of bills by the legislature,[61] such as those requiring notice of special legislation,[62] those relating to readings of the bill,[63] and entry of the final vote in the journals,[64] must of course be complied with,

58. It includes general rules as to enactment, amendment, interpretation and repeal of statutes, and the rules as to special or local legislation, and subjects and titles. It excludes constitutional limitations generally (see Constitutional Law, 11 C. L. 689) and the interpretation of particular acts (see topic dealing with subject-matter).

61. Journal record of bill and amendment held to show compliance with Const. art. 3, § 15, in passage of bill. Tarr v. Western Loan & Sav. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 1049. Gen. Acts 1907 (Spec. Sess.), p. 80, is void because senate journal shows that bill was reported back from one committee after having been referred to another. Const. 1901, § 62, violated. Tyler v. State [Ala.] 48 S 672. Const. 1901, § 63, having been violated on final passage of bill, defect was not cured by proper passage of amendment suggested by governor on returning bill. Last vote, under Const. 1901, § 125, is only on amendment. State v. Martin [Ala.] 48 S 846. Bill originating in senate was there passed, and amended and passed in house, and senate now concurred in amendments, and conference committee agreed on amended bill, and senate adopted report by aye and nay vote by constitutional majority. Held, bill legally adopted by senate in accordance with rule 39 adopted for 1903 session. Stephens v. Labette County Com'rs [Kan.] 98 P 790.

62. Const. 1901, § 106, requiring notice of intention to apply for local or special law, is mandatory, and invalidates a law passed without it. Larkin v. Simmons [Ala.] 46 S 451. Portion of law held valid, having been published in accordance, with Const. 1901, § 106. Immaterial that substance of another section, held void and expunged, was not published. Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126.

Notice insufficient: Notice of intention to apply for law for transfer of causes in county court and to invest circuit court with jurisdiction held insufficient to authorize passage of Act Aug. 1, 1907, relating to courts. Larkin v. Simmons [Ala.] 46 S 451.

Notice sufficient: One day's notice by member introducing bill, under Comp. Laws, §§ 8569, 8570, 8571, held sufficient where it repealed local corporation charter. Const. art. 15, § 16, requiring notice of "alteration" of corporate charter, inapplicable. People v. Calder, 153 Mich. 724, 15 Det. Leg. N. 619, 117 NW 314.

Notice necessary: Constitutional requirements as to manner of passing acts authorzing counties, etc., to issue bonds, are mandatory. Compliance therewith necessary to validity of legislation. Wittkowsky v. Jackson County Com'rs [N. C.] 63 SE 275. Word, "County," used in Const. art. 2, § 14, prescribing mode of passing laws authorizing counties, etc., to issue bonds, includes townships and similar subdivisions. Id.

Notice unnecessary: Acts 1908, c. 97, changing mode of administration of board of Yazoo-Mississippi delta, does not violate Const. § 234, that no bill changing boundaries or affecting revenue of district shall be considered unless published, etc. Babo v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Com'rs [Miss.] 46 S 819. Const. 1890, § 234, that no bill affecting taxation or revenue in Yazoo-Mississippi levee district shall be considered in legislature unless published four weeks in newspaper, etc., does not apply to Acts 1908, p. 59, c. 73, § 7, imposing privilege tax on fire insurance companies and prohibiting imposition of any further tax by local subdivisions or levee districts, since latter act is general and affects Yazoo-Mississippi district only incidentally. Royal Ins. Co. v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Com'rs [Miss.] 48 S 183.

63. Where record shows bill was "read in full" before final passage, this shows reading in full, "section by section," as required by constitution. Tarr v. Western Loan & Sav. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 1049. Bill authorizing state treasurer to issue bonds to pay debt, or to pay debt with money, does not "pledge the credit of the state" within Const. art. 2, § 16, requiring such bills to be read three times in each house. Battle v. Lacy [N. C.] 64 SE 505.

64. Colorado Const. art. 5, § 22, that "no bill shall become a law * * * unless on though provision is sometimes made for suspension of rules in emergency cases.[65] Whether an act is a special or local law, so as to require notice of intention to apply for it, is a legislative, not a judicial, question.[66] Revenue bills must originate in the lower house in some states.[67] A revenue bill is one having for its main object the raising of revenue. The term did not include a bill having a different purpose but under which revenue is incidentally created.[68]

Authentication and approval. See 10 C. L. 1705—Where the constitution provides only for presentation to and approval by the governor, an act is not invalidated by failure to comply with a rule of the legislature requiring authentication of bills by the presiding officers of both houses.[69] Authentication, in accordance with rules, by the presiding officers of both houses, is not conclusive evidence of the passage of a bill or of its contents when passed, and it may be contradicted or controlled by journal entries.[70] Authentication by a de facto presiding officer is sufficient.[71] Approval of a bill differing from that passed is ineffective.[72] Approval by the governor is the last legislative act essential to the enactment of a statute.[73]

Special sessions See 8 C. L. 1977—are ordinarily authorized to consider only such matters as are embraced within the call by which the session was convoked.[74]

When effective. See 10 C. L. 1705—Statutes usually become effective when approved,[75] or within a stated time after their approval [76] or after the adjournment of its final passage the vote be taken by ayes and noes, and the names of those voting be entered on the journal," is mandatory. Failure to comply is fatal to act. Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Duke [C. C. A.] 164 F 180. Sess. Laws 1901, p. 161, c. 67, never became law, because vote on final passage was never entered on journal. Id. Where bill was passed by one house, amended by the other, and returned, it was not necessary to enter ayes and noes and names of those voting on the amendment on the journal. Const. art. 5, § 24, applies to final passage of original bills. Johnson v. Great Falls [Mont.] 99 P 1059. Const. 1901, § 63, violated where, on final passage of bill, senate journal showed that there were 14 yeas and 14 nays, and that presiding officer cast ballot for bill, and journal set out names of those voting for, but omitted those voting against, the bill. State v. Martin [Ala.] 48 S 846.

65. Const. art. 3, § 15, providing for three readings of bills on separate days, and that such provision may be dispensed with by two-thirds vote in urgent cases, applies to amendments as well as original bills, and three readings of amendment may be dispensed with in same way. Tarr v. Western Loan & Sav. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 1049. Acts 1908, p. 594, c. 336, was passed under vote dispensing with three readings on separate days, as permitted by Const. 1902, § 50, but did not contain an emergency clause making it effective at once, as allowed by § 53. Held valid. No emergency clause needed. Conek v. Skeen [Va.] 63 SE 11, Fort Worth City Charter, Laws 1907, § 163, held to contain sufficient declaration of emergency, under Const. art. 3, § 32, to warrant suspension of rule requiring three readings and immediate operation of law on passage. Orrick v. Fort Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 677.

66. Under Const. art. 5, § 25. Caton v. Western Clay Drainage Dist. [Ark.] 112 SW 145.

67. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002.

68. Sess. Laws 1907-08, c. 81, art. 9, for discovery of property for listing and taxation, is not revenue bill; origin in senate proper. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002.

69. Approval by governor makes bill the law, though not signed by president of senate. Simon v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 991.

70. Simon v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 991.

71. Governor being ill, authentication by president of senate as such and also as governor held sufficient. Simon v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 991.

72. Where bill as passed by two houses contained certain sections which were not in bill as signed by speaker of house, president of senate, and governor, it was invalid; cannot be presumed that bill passed would have been signed, or that that signed would have been passed. King Lumber Co. v. Crow [Ala.] 46 S 646.

73. Stuart v. Chapman [Me.] 70 A 1069.

74. Act No. 17, p. 19, of 1907 (Extra Sess.), relating to care of parish school funds, is germane to objects expressed in governor's call. State v. Romero, 122 La. 885, 48 S 312. Acts 1908, p. 1112, providing scheme for raising revenue for development of penitentiary system and care of convicts, held within object expressed in call for session of legislature by which it was passed. Carroll v. Wright, 131 Ga. 728, 63 SE 260.

75. When no time is fixed for the taking effect of an act, it becomes effective from the day of its approval. Montgomery Trac. Co. v. Knabe [Ala.] 48 S 501.

76. Where act provides that it shall take effect six months after its passage, this means six months after its approval. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Brennaman [Colo.] 100 P 414.

the session,[77] in the absence of an emergency clause.[78] The declaring of an emergency by the legislature by expressing in the act that it is immediately necessary for the preservation of the public place, health, and safety, when it is not of the class specifically excepted from its application is conclusive on the courts.[79] Nothing appearing to the contrary, statutes approved on the same day are presumed to have been approved contemporaneously.[80] The numbering of statutes is not a legislative, but a ministerial act,[81] and no presumption as to order of time in which statutes were passed can arise from their numbering.[82] Where a statute provides that it shall take effect and operate from and after a day named, the phrase "from and after" includes the day from which the reckoning is to be made.[83]

Submission to popular vote See 10 C. L. 1708 is sometimes necessary before a law becomes effective.[84] Initiative and referendum provisions in state constitutions do not violate the federal constitution.[85] A statute enacted under the initiative and referendum clause of a constitution is not subject to the veto power of the governor.[86]

Publication See 10 C. L. 1706 is sometimes a prerequisite to the law taking effect.[87]

The journals, the enrolled bill, and other evidence. See 10 C. L. 1706—Whether a purported public statute is or is not a law is a question of law,[88] in determining which judicial notice will be taken of the published legislative journals.[89] Legislative journals are the sole evidence of their proper contents. They cannot be aided or varied by loose memoranda made by clerical officers.[90] The only official journal is that filed in the office of the secretary of state, and this must control when there is a discrepancy between it and the printed journal.[91] Courts will go behind a statute and examine the legislative records only when some defect therein is suggested.[92] An enrolled statute imports absolute verity and is conclusive evidence of the passage of the act and of its validity,[93] unless the journals of the legislature show affirmatively, clearly and conclusively, and beyond all doubt, that the act was not passed regularly and legally,[94] and this rule applies to the title as well as to the body of the act.[95] In Kentucky an enrolled bill cannot be impeached by the journals of either house,[96] and where the enrolled statute is plain and unambiguous, there is

77. Laws 1908, p. 172, c. 10, § 5, creating lien for assessments, did not take effect until 90 days after adjournment of session. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559. Section 44 of General Game Law (Laws 1907, p. 81) became effective 30 days after adjournment of session enacting it (Code 1896, § 5540), there being no express provision as to when it should become effective. Glenn v. State [Ala.] 48 S 505. Where an act provides that it shall go into effect immediately upon its approval by the governor, and it becomes a law without the governor's approval, it does not become effective until 60 days from final adjournment of session of legislature at which it was enacted. Thompson v. State [Fla.] 47 S 816.

78. Act providing for preliminary examination in felony cases (Laws 1907, p. 243) had no emergency clause, did not become effective until July 14, 1907, and did not apply to robbery case begun before that time. State v. Moran [Mo.] 115 SW 1126.

95. Stephens v. Labette County Com'rs [Kan.] 98 P 790. Where journals were self-contradictory, but, reasonably construed together, indicated that title of bill was same when adopted by both branches as it appears in enrolled bill, presumption in favor of validity is sustained. Id.

no necessity, in construing the statute, to call to aid the legislative journals or other extraneous matter.[97] Where there is a conflict between the language of the bill as enrolled in the office of the secretary of state and as it appears in the volume published by the public printer, the former controls.[98]

§ 2. Special or local laws. In general.[99] See 10 C. L. 1706—"Local" means applicable only to a portion of the territory of the state.[1] A private bill is one which applies only to individuals or private corporations.[2] A general law is one which applies equally and uniformly[3] to all persons or things of a class.[4] A special act is one which applies only to particular persons or things of a class, or one which grants some special right, privilege or immunity, or imposes a special burden or disability.[5] The test of generality is not whether an act embraces all of the governed,[6] but whether it operates alike on all similarly situated.[7] Whether a law is

4. P. L. 1902, p. 371, authorizing incorporated towns to construct, operate and maintain systems of sewers, applies to any town which may be incorporated at time proceedings under act are begun. Act is valid. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2. Laws 1907, c. 230, prohibiting running at large of live stock in counties where three-fourths of lands outside corporate limits are fenced, and requiring county board to determine whether three-fourths of lands are fenced on petition by 10 or more freeholders, is valid, applying generally; not discriminatory. State v. Storey [Wash.] 99 P 878. Public Service Commissions Law (Laws 1907, p. 889, c. 429) is general and public, not private or local law. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755. Provision in Motor Vehicle Act, § 18, that proof of excessive speed and injury makes prima facie case of negligence, does not make it special legislation. Hartje v. Moxley, 235 Ill. 164, 85 NE 216. Exemption of women from provisions of registration statute (Code, § 1131), valid, since they are allowed to vote only on certain questions, and not at general elections. Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 138 Iowa, 730, 117 NW 309.

5. "Special" means that same right, privilege or immunity has been granted to, or some burden imposed upon, some portion of the people less than all. People v. Wilcox, 237 Ill. 421, 86 NE 672. A law is not general if it confers particular privileges or imposes peculiar disabilities or burdensome conditions in the exercise of a common right upon a class arbitrarily selected from the general body of those who stand in precisely the same relation to the subject of the law. Cal. St. 1907, p. 836, c. 447, as to proof in actions on insurance contracts, is invalid. Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 994. Appeal statute which gave appellate court power to render final judgment against one party but not other held special legislation. Statutes must confer equal rights and burdens upon all. Hayward v. Sencenbaugh, 235 Ill. 580, 85 NE 939. Statute making certain acts criminal only when committed against citizens or residents of state of Nebraska, invalid as special legislation. Greene v. State [Neb.] 119 NW 6. Primary Election Law of 1906, § 2, defining political party as one casting at least ten per cent of votes for governor at last election, is not invalid as special law creating special privileges, in violation of Const. 1898, art. 48. State v. Michels, 121 La. 374, 46 S 430.

6. A law is general, not because it embraces all of the governed, but because it may do so when they occupy the same position as those who are embraced in its terms. Saylor v. Duel, 236 Ill. 429, 86 NE 119.

7. See, also, post, Classification. That a law does not operate equally on every individual or municipal corporation in the state does not make it special. A law is general if it operates alike on all similarly situated. Dawson Soap Co. v. Chicago, 234 Ill. 314, 84 NE 920. Under Const. art. 3, § 56, prohibiting special or local laws on certain subjects and in all cases where a general law can be made applicable, unless notice is given, etc., a special law is one applicable to certain persons or matters. A law is general if it applies equally and uniformly to all things or persons within the territorial limits described. Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 289. Whenever a law of a general nature is in terms applied to the state generally, it is uniform in operation, though practically it does not operate in every part of the state. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002. Application rather than subject determinative of general or special is to be determined by the subject-matter and not by its form.[8] Where a law is enacted to accomplish a governmental purpose and carry out a direct mandate of the constitution, and the nature of the subject is such that no general law could be made to apply, it is no objection to the validity of the law that it is special in form.[9] Local or special legislation is prohibited by constitutional provisions in most jurisdictions.[10] In some, the constitution prohibits special legislation on certain enumerated subjects,[11] and such provisions are mandatory.[12] whether act is special or general. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177. Acts 1908, p. 359, c. 654, is general in that it provides complete system for construction, regulation and control of public roads, though technically local in that it applies only to Anne Arundel county. Anne Arundel County Com'rs v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 72 A 542. Laws Ex. Sess. 1906, c. 55 (Burnit Record Act), authorizing restoration of lost or destroyed records, is not local or special legislation. People v. Fallon [Cal.] 99 P 202. St. 1907, p. 414, c. 189, making it crime to receive bank deposits with knowledge of banks' insolvency, is not invalid, as special legislation. Ex parte Pittman [Nev.] 99 P 700. Laws 1907, p. 400, c. 250, regulating sale of black powder to miners, is not special legislation. Ex parte Williams [Kan.] 98 P 777. Acts 1904, p. 214, c. 116, providing that any corporation chartered as social club and paying tax to state may distribute liquors to members without paying any other tax or license, is general, not special. City of Norfolk v. Trade & Business Men's Ass'n. [Va.] 63 SE 987. Code 1904, §§ 1759, 1766, is not a local or special law, since it applies equally throughout the state and makes all persons guilty of violations guilty of misdemeanor (regulating sale of poison). Bertram v. Com., 108 Va. 902, 62 SE 969. Cobbey's St. 1907, § 9800 et seq., regulating practice of medicine, not invalid as special legislation. Mathews v. Hedlund [Neb.] 119 NW 17. An act under which special elections for relocation or removal of county seats are provided for, applicable to all the counties of the state alike, is not special or local, within Const. art. 5, §§ 32, 46. Const. art. 3, § 18, prohibiting passage of special or local act altering or discontinuing highways, is violated by Laws 1895, p. 2067, c. 1018, empowering Rochester water commissioners to close highway in certain town, without consent of town highway commissioners, to improve its water supply. City of Rochester v. Gray, 60 Misc. 591, 112 NYS 774. Acts 1906, p. 121, providing for change of county lines in certain cases, held not special but general; does not violate Civ. Code 1895, §§ 5926, 5732, prohibiting special legislation in certain cases. Manson v. College Park, 131 Ga. 429, 62 SE 278. Should Laws 1905, p. 883, c. 375, be construed as re-enactment of charter of hospital exempting it from taxation, it would be void under Const. art. 3, § 18, prohibiting local or special laws granting exemptions from taxation. People v. Raymond, 126 App. Div. 720, 111 NYS 177. Const. art. 3, § 7, prohibiting special acts changing methods of collecting debts or enforcing judgments, is violated by Mechanic's Lien Law (1901), § 28 (P. L. 445), giving subcontractor or materialman right to issue attachment execution against owner or other party, being for benefit of special class of creditors. Vulcanite Portland Cement Co. v. J. W. Allison Co., 220 Pa. 382, 69 A. 855. Act June 4, 1901, § 46 (P. L. 452), relating to mechanics' liens, provides that, where judgment is recovered on claim which names property essential to business of public service corporation, claimant shall have execution as in other cases of judgments against corporations, thus giving remedy by proceeding in personam. Held invalid as special legislation, ordinary remedy to enforce liens being by proceeding in rem only. Vulcanite Pav. Co. v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., 220 Pa. 603, 69 A 1117. Laws 1907, p. 269, c. 139, providing for drawing of juries in counties having a city or cities aggregating 30,000 or mors population, is a general law, within Const. art. 3, § 56, prohibiting special laws relating to drawing of juries, though act differs from jury law in other parts of the state. Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 289; Logan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1028; Pate v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 759; Northern Tex. Trac. Co. v. Danforth [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 147. Cal. St. 1907, p. 836, c. 447, requiring disclosure of certain proof by insurance companies defending actions on contracts, invalid as special legislation regulating practice, prohibited by Cal. Const. art. 4, § 25, subd. 3. Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 994. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 37, § 300, authorizing judges of municipal courts to instruct juries orally or in writing, is not invalid as special or local law regulating court practice (Const. art. 4, § 22) nor does it lack uniformity of operation (Const. art. 4, § 34). Morton v. Pusey, 237 Ill. 26, 86 NE 601. Municipal Court Act, § 23, is invalid because it attempts to provide special mode of procedure in appellate court in cases brought up from municipal court. Clowry v. Holmes, 238 Ill. 577, 87 NE 303. Act granting franchise to existing corporation to construct canal and toll locks in river not violative of Const. art. 11, § 2, prohibiting creation of private corporations by

Some constitutions prohibit special laws where a general law can be made applicable.[13] Under such a constitutional provision, it is usually held that the legislative determination of the question whether a general law can be made applicable is conclusive on the courts,[14] except where there has been a clear disregard of the constitutional limitation.[15] But in Kansas the question has now been made a judicial one upon which the courts may pass,[16] and, in that state, the principle that an act is presumptively valid and must be upheld, if possible, is not in such case applicable.[17] In some states, local or special acts may be passed on some subjects when the procedure prescribed by the constitution is followed.[18] A law making an appropriation to an individual or corporation is valid though it is not and cannot be made general.[19]

Classification. See 10 C. L. 1708—A reasonable classification of objects of legislation or localities may be resorted to without rendering an act objectionable as a local or special law.[20] The classification must be reasonable and not merely ar-special act. State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Or.] 98 P 160. Under Const. art. 8, § 1, prohibiting creation of corporations by special act where object of incorporation can be attained under general laws, whether general laws suffice or special act is necessary is question for legislative discretion, not reviewable by courts. Economic Power & Const. Co. v. Buffalo, 59 Misc. 571, 111 NYS 443. Const. art. 12, § 1, that corporations must be formed under general laws, construed with § 4, defining "corporations," refers only to private corporations, not to hospital for insane maintained by state, which is state agency. Napa State Hospital v. Dasso, 153 Cal. 698, 96 P 355.

12. No special acts can be passed on such subjects. People v. Wilcox, 237 Ill. 421, 86 NE 672.

13. Laws 1908, p. 50, c. 52, creating new court for Wyandotte county, is void because special. State v. Hutchings [Kan.] 98 P 797. General law can be made applicable to whole state and adequate to furnish reasonable facilities for discharging the judicial business which now comes or may come within cognizance of the district court in any county. Id. Laws 1907, p. 94, c. 72, providing for erection and removal of bridges in Cloud county and authorizing commissioners to issue bonds for expense, is invalid, under Const. art. 2, § 17. Anderson v. Cloud County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 721, 95 P 583. Laws 1907, p. 384, c. 244, attempting to legalize steps taken in disorganization and consolidation of certain school districts, is not curative but creative act, and is special and void under Const. art. 2, § 17. Gardner v. State, 77 Kan. 742, 95 P 588. Laws 1907, p. 536, c. 370, attempting to disorganize certain school districts and consolidate them into one is void. State v. Nelson [Kan.] 96 P 662. Laws 1907, p. 285, c. 179, special act purporting to create city court of Chanute, is void because a general act can be passed giving similar judicial facilities to cities with like conditions. State v. Nation [Kan.] 96 P 659. Laws 1907, p. 534, c. 368, providing for special tax levy for construction and equipment of county high school building for Scott County, is special and invalid. Deng v. Scott County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 863, 95 P 592.

14. Whether general law can be made applicable is for legislature, not for courts. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Determination by legislature that no general law can be made applicable is not open to review. People v. Wilcox, 237 Ill. 421, 86 NE 672. Prior to constitutional amendment of 1906, enactment of special law was conclusive determination by legislature that general law was not applicable. Stephens v. Labette County Com'rs [Kan.] 98 P 790.

15. Whether general law can be made applicable is for legislature. Courts may interfere only in cases of clear disregard of constitution. Board Directors of Woman's Relief Corps Home Ass'n v. Nye, [Cal. App.] 97 P 208.

16. Under Const. art. 2, § 17, that in all cases where a general law can be made applicable no special law shall be passed, the question whether a general law is applicable must be first solved by the legislature, but on an attack being made on an act, the final solution of the question is for the courts, the decision of the legislature not being conclusive. Anderson v. Cloud County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 721, 95 P 583; State v. Nation [Kan.] 96 P 659; Gardner v. State, 77 Kan. 742, 95 P 588; State v. Nelson [Kan.] 96 P 662.

17. Anderson v. Cloud County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 721, 95 P 583.

18. In South Carolina a bill for a special charter may be introduced by a two-thirds vote of both houses, and may then be passed as any other bill. Const. art. 9, § 2. McMeekin v. Central Carolina Power Co., 80 S. C. 512, 61 SE 1020.

19. McSurely v. McGrew [Iowa] 118 NW 415. Laws 1907, p. 257, c. 255, legalizing acts of supervisors of county releasing treasurer from liability on bond for loss of funds deposited in approved bank which failed, is valid, no general law being applicable. Id. Act does not repeal Code, § 1457, prohibiting release of treasurer, so as to require general law. Id.

20. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Laws may be enacted applicable only to certain classes if the classification is reasonable. Ex parte Pittman [Nev.] 99 P 700. The legislature has power to arrange municipalities into different classes and to grant each class powers different from the others. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177.

bitrary,[21] that is, it must be based upon some sound distinction.[22] The question

21. It is sufficient if the classification is based on some reasonable ground, some differences which bear a just and reasonable relation to the classification, and is not merely arbitrary. Ex parte Williams [Kan.] 98 P 777. The classification must not be arbitrary but must be founded upon some natural intrinsic or constitutional distinction, and some reason must appear why the act is not made to apply generally to all classes. Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 994.

22. Classification must be based on substantial distinction rendering special legislation for each class proper. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. An act applying uniformly to the whole of any single class of individuals or objects, where the classification is founded upon some natural intrinsic or constitutional distinction, is a general law. Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 994. Upon subjects as to which the constitution does not specifically prohibit special legislation, special laws may be upheld when applicable to a particular class, where the classification rests upon some ground marking them as proper objects for special legislation. People v. Wilcox, 237 Ill. 421, 86 NE 672. Special laws may be justified by classification only on the ground of imperative necessity growing out of peculiar conditions. Vulcanite Portland Cement Co. v. J. W. Allison Co., 220 Pa. 382, 69 A 855. Legislature cannot adopt merely arbitrary classification. It must rest upon such a difference in the situation and circumstances of the persons or subjects placed in different classes as suggests the necessity or propriety of different legislation with respect to them. Euziere v. Tracy, 104 Minn. 378, 116 NW 922. A classification of municipalities, such as counties, cities, villages, and towns, may be made a basis for legislation if such classification is based on a rational difference of situation or condition found in municipalities placed in different classes. Dawson Soap Co. v. Chicago, 234 Ill. 314, 84 NE 920. Legislature may provide different laws and different penalties touching the same character of offenses in different political subdivisions of the state, the only limitation upon the power being that law must operate uniformly on all citizens in the subdivision, or on all to whom it applies and its classifications must be reasonable within the sphere of its operation. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Act not local when bringing municipalities similarly conditioned in class as to which act is to have uniform operation. Not special because conferring exclusive powers on class. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177.

ILLUSTRATIONS. Classification proper: Act by which any district in which secretary of state had placed voting machine could determine whether or not it would use it, not local or special. Mara v. Bayomme [N. J. Law] 71 A 1131. P. L. 1906, p. 203, § 4 (Bishop's law), regulating sale of liquors, is not invalid as granting special privileges, classification of inns, taverns, hotels, etc., being valid. Meehan v. Jersey City Com'rs, 75 N. J. Law, 557, 70 A 363. P. L. 1905, p. 237, turnpike statute, operates alike on all counties similarly situated. Clarion County v. Clarion Tp., 222 Pa. 350, 71 A 543. Laws 1907, p. 72, c. 55. giving preference rights in taking over roads, trails, etc., to those having franchises or contracts, held not special or invalid, being based on reasonable classification. Duffield v. Ashurst [Ariz.] 100 P 820. Pub. Acts 1903, p. 277, No. 195, imposes inheritance tax and exempts transfers of personalty to lineal heirs where value is less than $2,000, and taxes entire transfer where personalty is worth more than $2,000. Classification valid. No discrimination between members of same class. In re Fox's Estate, 154 Mich. 5, 15 Det. Leg. N. 674, 117 NW 558. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 38, § 256a, makes cities and counties liable to owners for three-fourths of damage to property caused by riots. That villages and towns are not made liable does not invalidate act, classification being sound. Dawson Soap Co. v. Chicago, 234 Ill. 314, 84 NE 920. In act providing for separation of unplatted lands from corporate limits of cities of 10,000 or less, and excepting cities having home rule charters, classification of cities into those having and those not having home rule charters is valid. Euziere v. Tracy, 104 Minn. 378, 116 NW 922. Statute providing for separation of unplatted lands from city limits held not invalid because it gives benefit of act only to owners of 40 acres of land or more, and excludes others. Classification valid both as to character of land, used for agricultural purposes, and amounts owned. Id. The financial condition of counties as shown by the relation between bonded indebtedness and the assessed valuation of property is a proper basis for classification for the purpose of legislation with reference to increase of indebtedness by issuing bonds without popular vote. Gen. Laws 1907, c. 130, valid. Wall v. St. Louis County, 105 Minn. 403, 117 NW 611. Veteran soldiers and their dependent relatives, and nurses and their relatives, constitute special class, and legislature may provide for their support and maintenance by special laws, and may provide differently for the soldiers and for their female relatives and nurses. Board of Directors of Woman's Relief Corps Home Ass'n v. Nye [Cal. App.] 97 P 208.

Classification improper: Act regulating control and use of playgrounds which divides city playgrounds into two classes according to acreage, invalid, classification being illusory. Strock v. East Orange [N. J. Law] 72 A 34. Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, provides for designation of assessment districts to be charged with special assessments for sewers, and mode of apportioning same, and makes act apply to every city "heretofore" "incorporated under special charter," "having population of not less than 10,000," "to be determined by last preceding federal census," and "having power to make special assessments for construction of sewers." Held that none of characteristics quoted above make the classification improper or the act special. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Laws 1905, p. 159, c. 77, providing for county seat removals in organized counties not having more than 6,500 inhabitants, and in which no court house had been con-

of classification is, however, primarily for legislature,[23] and it is only in cases where it is manifest on the face of the statute that the classification adopted by the legislature is purely arbitrary that courts will interfere.[24]

Based on population. See 10 C. L. 1709—Classification of cities for various purposes of municipal government, by population, is proper if such classification appears to be reasonable and not arbitrary,[25] and the fact that only one city is within the class at the time does not of itself necessarily render the act special.[26] Where population is the basis of classification, the subject-matter must be such as suggests a necessity for the legislation arising out of the fact of population.[27]

Local option laws See 10 C. L. 1709 are usually held valid.[28]

County and township affairs. See 10 C. L. 1709—The validity of acts applicable to such matters depends upon local constitutional provisions.[29]

Municipalities. See 10 C. L. 1709—Special laws changing municipal charters[30] or structed prior to taking effect of act, is unconstitutional as special legislation. Ex parte Connolly [N. D.] 117 NW 946. Act includes counties to be subsequently organized, but classification into counties having no court house at certain date, and those having a court house, is arbitrary. Id.

23. Though necesary that it be founded on some appreciable difference in condition, existing or to be apprehended. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177.

24. Euziere v. Tracy, 104 Minn. 378, 116 NW 922. Abuse of legislative discretion as to classification should be reasonably clear to justify interference by courts. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

25. Act 32d General Assembly, p. 38, c. 48, providing organization of government for cities of over 25,000, not special law within Const. art. 3, § 30. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177. Gen. Laws 1907, c. 52, p. 61, providing for issuance of bonds by cities having population of 50,000 or more, is not invalid as special legislation. Farwell v. Minneapolis, 105 Minn. 178, 117 NW 422.

26. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Fact that only one city may enjoy privileges of act immaterial in determining special legislation. Eckerson v. Des Moines, 137 Iowa, 452, 115 NW 177. That act authorizing acquisition of waterworks systems was applicable only to cities of over 50,000 population did not make it special legislation, though there was only one such city in state (under Kansas decisions), Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kansas City, 164 F 738.

27. Gen. Laws 1907, c. 458, providing for appointment of superintendent of highways in counties having less than 200,000 population, is invalid. Classification by population not valid in legislation of this kind. Hjelm v. Patterson, 105 Minn. 256, 117 NW 610.

28. Legislature has power to pass local option laws, and hence may fix time when licenses shall terminate in towns which have adopted no license system. People v. Bashford, 128 App. Div. 351, 112 NYS 502. Local option law of 1907 not special because it is only applicable to particular localities where adopted by vote of people. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Under Delaware constitution legislature has power to provide for submission of local option laws at special election. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Laws 1907, p. 304, § 19, giving county court final jurisdiction to determine contests in local option election cases, is not special legislation, though denying right of appeal in such cases. Saylor v. Duel, 236 Ill. 429, 86 NE 119.

29. Acts 1906, p. 121, providing for change of county lines, not invalid as special legislation. Town of Maysville v. Smith [Ga.] 64 SE 131. Repeal of town charter by special law not prohibited by Const. art. 3, § 34, or by subd. 12 of section as to general legislation. Board of Tp. Com'rs v. Buckly [S. C.] 64 SE 163. Statute authorizing issuance of bonds for construction of court house and jail in particular county, valid. State v. Lytton [Nev.] 99 P 855. Act Feb. 17, 1906, establishing town government for town on Sullivan's Island, is not invalid as special law, under Const. art. 3, § 34, or art. 7, § 11, owing to special conditions existing there. Board of Tp. Com'rs v. Buckly [S. C.] 64 SE 163. Legislature has power to create fencing district by special act and to change limits by subsequent act. Henderson v. Dearing [Ark.] 117 SW 1066. P. L. 1903, p. 18 for relief of sick and indigent having no legal settlement in state, held not local or special, though mode of caring for such persons varied in different counties, and though it provided different mode of caring for residents and nonresidents. Pulaski Tp. Poor Dist. v. Lawrence County, 222 Pa. 358, 71 A 705. St. 1898, § 1152, providing for assessment and collection of taxes by officers of adjoining town in case of failure to elect officers and assess and collect taxes, does not violate constitutional provisions as to town government, nor as to uniformity thereof, since it affects all alike and provides for emergency only. Strange v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. County ordinance passed pursuant to void statute would be invalid. Ex parte Young [Cal.] 97 P 822.

30. Under Const. art. 3, § 27, municipal charter cannot be amended by local or special law. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Laws 1907, p. 398, providing for carrying into effect initiative and referendum powers granted by constitution, is not an amendment of Portland city charter, but suspends its operation. Does not violate Const. art. 11, § 2. Long v. Portland [Or.] 98 P 149; Long v. Portland [Or.] 98 P 1111. Chicago City Charter, art. 5, cl. 45, giving regulating the internal affairs of a municipality [31] are prohibited in same jurisdictions. In others, legislation of this character is permissible [32] where the constitutional mode of procedure is followed.[33] An act conferring upon a municipality powers to be exercised by it as a governmental agency, in carrying out a mandate of the constitution, is valid.[34]

§ 3. Subjects and titles.[35]—See 10 C. L. 1710—Constitutions usually provide that a statute shall embrace but one subject,[36] which must be expressed in its title.[37]

city power to prohibit exhibition of immoral or obscene pictures, applies to every city incorporated under act, and is not special within Const. art. 4, § 22, prohibiting special laws incorporating cities or amending charters. Block v. Chicago, 239 Ill. 251, 87 NE 1011.

31. P. L. 1906, p. 203, § 4 (Bishops' Law), regulating sale of liquors, does not violate Const. art. 4, § 7, subd. 11, prohibiting special, private or local laws regulating internal affairs of municipalities. It operates equally on all, and does not regulate internal affairs. Meehan v. Jersey City Com'rs, 75 N. J. Law, 557, 70 A 363. An ordinance licensing bawdy houses in a city did not relate to "municipal affairs" within the meaning of Const. art. 11, § 6, providing that city charters shall be subject to general laws, except as to municipal affairs; hence ordinance does not suspend statute covering bawdy houses. Farmer v. Behmer [Cal. App.] 100 P 901.

32. Constitution authorizes legislature to confer special powers on municipalities, and this includes power to authorize municipal license tax. Hardee v. Brown [Fla.] 47 S 834. P. L. 1905, p. 260, prohibiting discharge of sewage into waters of state but allowing continuance of existing systems maintained by municipalities and discharging into such waters, held not to violate Const. art. 3, § 7, prohibiting local or special laws granting special privilege to any corporation, association or individual. Municipal corporations not within constitutional provision. Commonwealth v. Emmers, 221 Pa. 298, 70 A 762. Loc. Act, 1907, p. 902, authorizing annexation of territory to city and election to determine whether act shall become effective, does not violate Const. 1901, § 104, par. 29. State v. Birmingham [Ala.] 48 S 843.

33. In Virginia, legislature may amend municipal charter in manner provided in Const. art. 4 if special act is passed by recorded vote of two-thirds of each house as required by art. 8, § 117. Miller v. Pulaski [Va.] 63 SE 880.

34. Const. art. 12, § 1, was intended to prevent the legislature from conferring upon cities and towns corporate powers to be exercised in the performance of functions for which they were primarily created. Intention was not to prevent legislature from conferring powers to be exercised as governmental agency in carrying out mandate of constitution. State v. Lawrence [Kan.] 100 P 485.

36. If the matters claimed to constitute two subjects are not separate and distinct but are connected with each other and germane to the primary objects of the statute, the act containing them is not invalid. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. An act is proper if all parts of it have a natural connection and can reasonably be said to relate directly or indirectly to one general legitimate subject of legislation. State v. Ross [Mont.] 99 P 1056. There is in New York no constitutional objection to embracing several separate matters in a general, as distinguished from a private or local, bill. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755.

Act valid; subject single: That an act provides for a penalty which is enforcible by civil or criminal procedure does not make it invalid as relating to more than one subject. Pearson v. Bass [Ga.] 63 SE 798. Laws 1907, p. 287, prohibiting gambling, providing remedies for recovery of money lost, and creating penalties, is not invalid for providing for criminal and civil remedies in one act. State v. Ross [Mont.] 99 P 1056. Legislature may in same act provide for recovery of penalty for violation of provisions and also fix measure of damages. Pearson v. Bass [Ga.] 63 SE 798. That local option law made certain acts (false swearing and forged signatures in petition for election) crimes did not make it void as embracing more than one subject. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Public Service Commissions Law of 1907 does not contain more than one subject. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755. Appropriation made by separate bill containing but one subject, providing for contingent expense of state officer, is valid. Bryan v. Menefee [Okl.] 95 P 471. An appropriation to cover compensation of employes in the executive, legislative, or judicial departments of the state, where such employment had not been authorized by statute and their compensation fixed prior to the passage of such general appropriation bill, can only be enacted as a separate appropriation bill, embracing but one subject. Id. Act No. 57, p. 81, of 1898, relating to use of slot machines, does not embrace more than one subject, nor is text broader than title, within Const. art. 31. State v. Abrams, 121 La. 550, 46 S 623. Acts 1907, p. 147, c. 132, providing for punishment of keepers of disorderly houses, and for suppressing them by injunction, does not relate to more than one subject. Lane v. Bell [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 918. Title of Act No. 85, p. 124, of 1886, and act, have but one subject, punishment of physicians who, by prescriptions, assist in evading liquor laws. State v. Breaux, 122 La. 514, 47 S 876. Acts 1907, p. 1538, c. 460, intended to reduce fire loss, is not invalid because embracing provision for expense and means of carrying out law. Rhinehart v. State [Tenn.] 117 SW 508. Title, "An act to provide for the appointment of additional judges * * *; making an appropriation and declaring an emergency," expresses but one subject, latter clause being related to former. In re Seventh Judicial Dist. County Com'rs [Okl.] 98 P 557. Const. 1898, art. 55, requiring appropriations, except in general appropriation bill, to be made by separate bills, each embracing but one subject, is not violated by primary election law which provides an appropriation to carry out its provisions. State v. Michel, 121 La. 374, 46 S 430. Bill relates to but one object, expressed in title. Id. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24, provides for appointment of stenographers, making up and filing of statement of facts, etc. Held, title embraces but one subject, appellate procedure. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Stoker [Tex.] 113 SW 3. Acts 1907, p. 786, amending charter of city of Macon, does not refer to more than one subject. Richardson v. Macon [Ga.] 63 SE 790. Laws 1900-01, p. 239, ratifying and legalizing grants and privileges given by city council to railroad and utilized by latter, has single subject. State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 391. Sp. Laws 1907, p. 81, c. 7, incorporating and granting charter to city of Fort Worth, does not embrace more than one subject, though it makes city independent school district and provides for administration of schools therein. Orrick v. Ft. Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 677.

Act void: Act No. 103, p. 157, of 1902, amending and re-enacting Act No. 137, p. 177, of 1890, making it felony to trespass on another's timber lands, is void because creating several offenses not cognate; hence violatee Const. art. 31. State v. Peterman, 121 La. 651, 46 S 672; State v. Davis, 121 La. 623, 46 S 673.

37. Title Sufficient. In general: Title of Laws 1903, p. 187, sufficient. Vineyard v. Grangeville City Council [Idaho] 98 P 422. Object of Act No. 57 of 1908, as expressed in title and body of act, same. State v. Scheffield [La.] 48 S 932. Provisions of Loc. Acts 1905, p. 770, No. 579, held germane to title. Township of Stambaugh v. Iron County Treasurer, 153 Mich. 104, 15 Det. Leg. N. 368, 116 NW 569. Title of Laws 1870, p. 14, "to appropriate funds for construction of steamboat canal at," etc., is broad enough to include provision requiring payment of certain per cent of tolls to state as condition of appropriation. State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Or.] 95 P 722. Acts 1906, p. 25, c. 10, entitled "An act to promote the sheep industry and to provide a tax on dogs," does not violate Const. § 51, object being promotion of sheep industry, and dog tax being a means thereto. McGlone v. Womack, 33 Ky. L. R. 811, 864, 111 SW 688. Title of dentistry act (St. 1901, p. 564, c. 175), sufficient. Ex parte Hornef [Cal.] 97 P 891. Title, "An act to regulate the practice of medicine and surgery," broad enough to include provision as to who may call himself "doctor." Title of original act regulating pharmacists and sale of poisons (Acts 1885-86, p. 405, c. 364) is sufficient. Bertram v. Com., 108 Va. 902, 62 SE 969. "Physician" or "Surgeon." State v. Pollman [Wash.] 98 P 88. Oklahoma law providing for guaranty of bank deposits (Laws 1907-08, p. 145, c. 6, art. 2, as amended p. 153, c. 6, art. 3) is valid, guaranty provisions being within title. Noble State Bank v. Haskell [Okl.] 97 P 590. Title, "An act to incorporate the Economic Power & Construction Company" (Laws 1893, p. 949, c. 459), is sufficient to cover provisions creating corporation, defining its objects, powers, organization, etc. Economic Power & Const. Co. v. Buffalo, 59 Misc. 571, 111 NYS 443. Also sufficient to cover special franchise to occupy streets and highways of state, this being only a power of the corporation. Id. Act creating corporation and giving it power to transmit and utilize power is private act within Const. art. 3, § 16 (one subject, expressed in title), though bill expressly declares powers conferred for public purpose and use. Id. Title of Loc. Acts 1901, p. 485, No. 439, operation of electric cars, held broad enough to cover provision as to right of action for damages resulting from violation. Fortin v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 741, 117 NW 741. Title of P. L. 1905, p. 161, license fees by brokers, etc., sufficient. Commonwealth v. S. W. Black Co. [Pa.] 72 A 261. Title of anti-trust act (Laws 1889, p. 257, c. 148) sufficient, being general, though act does not express intent with which acts must be done, title containing a recital as to intent. Knight & Jillson Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823. Laws 1905, p. 244, c. 136, § 2, limiting appointment of officers of militia to two years, is germane to title of act. State v. Peake [N. D.] 120 NW 47.

Liquor and local option laws: Title of Acts 1907, c. 16, pp. 29-33, liquor law, sufficient. Rose v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 103. Title of Acts 1907, p. 727, liquor law, broad enough to include provisions relating to prescriptions by persons other than physicians, and prohibiting certain acts on Sunday. McAllister v. State [Ala.] 47 S 161. Title of Laws 1907-08, p. 594, c. 69, sufficient, though it contained brief abstract of contents of act, general object of which was to prohibit sale of intoxicants except as therein provided. State v. Hooker [Okl.] 98 P 964. Laws 1897, c. 72, §§ 11, 16, giving right of action for damages for sale of liquor to intoxicated persons, being regulations and restrictions of sale of liquor, are within scope of title of act. Palmer v. Schurz [S. D.] 117 NW 150. Title of Laws 1907, p. 297, local option law, not misleading or deceptive. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Title of Laws 1907, p. 297, local option law, held sufficient, matters treated in act being all related to general subject expressed in title. Id.

Relating to municipal affairs: Act March 20, 1901 (P. L. 1901, p. 116). Title, "An act to authorize any town or city of this state to enter into contracts with railroad companies whose roads enter their corporate limits, to change or elevate their railroads, and, when necessary for that purpose, to vacate, change the grade of, or alter the lines of any streets or highways therein," held sufficient. Morris & E. R. Co. v. Newark [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 194. Title of Acts 1908, c. 97, regulating mode of procedure of board of commissioners of Yazoo-Mississippi levee district, was sufficient, as identity of board was sufficiently shown. Bobo v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Com'rs [Miss.] 46 S 819. Acts 1907, p. 786, § 7, amending Macon city charter, conferring certain powers on recorder, is within title. Richardson v. Macon [Ga.] 63 SE 790. Title, "An act providing for the organization and government of cities and villages," is sufficiently broad to embrace every subject-matter incident to the administration of city and village government, which includes designation of offices and how they may be united and filled. Vineyard v. Grangeville City Council [Idaho] 98 P 422. Laws 1907, p. 124, c. 91, providing for expense of widening street, treats but one subject, which is expressed in title. In re Lockitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32. Title of P. L. 1902, p. 371, c. 124, sufficiently expresses object of act including authority to construct sewage disposal works beyond limits of town. Frelinghuysen v. Morristown [N. J. Law] 70 A 77, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 2. Title "to authorize cities to purchase lands" does not embrace a provision giving power to condemn. Griffith v. Trenton [N. J. Law] 69 A 29. Title of Laws 1907, p. 153, authorizing consolidation of cities of certain size into independent school districts, is sufficient. State v. Grefe [Iowa] 117 NW 13. Title of Oregon Laws 1901, p. 417, creating part of Portland and authorizing dry dock, sufficient, though not referring to dry dock, such subject being germane to general purposes of act. The George W. Elder, 159 F 1005. Title of Laws 1902, p. 1196, c. 506, amending charter of village, held sufficient to embrace matters treated. Scott v. Saratoga Springs, 115 NYS 796. Acts 1906, p. 61, title of which describes tax to be levied thereunder as "local tax for educational purposes," is not invalid on ground that provision for levy of local tax for public schools is not within title. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. Title of Acts 1908, p. 594, c. 336, removal of court house of any county, sufficient. Conek v. Skeen [Va.] 63 SE 11. Acts 1906, p. 121, change of county lines, held not invalid for expressing more than one subject in title, nor as containing matter not referred to in title. Manson v. College Park, 131 Ga. 429, 62 SE 278. Acts 1906, p. 121, providing for change of county lines, not invalid as treating matter not included in title, nor as treating more than one subject. Town of Maysville v. Smith [Ga.] 64 SE 131.

Relating to governmental and judicial affairs: Title of apportionment acts of 1893, 1901, 1907, "An act fixing the state senatorial and representative districts and determining the legislative representation thereof," relates to cognate subjects germane to apportionment. State v. Schnitger, 16 Wyo. 479, 95 P 698. Title is sufficient to cover legislative recognition of organization of new counties and declaration of right of such counties to be represented, since that right is given by constitution to each county. Id. St. 1903, p. 365, c. 266, creating board of bank commissioners and prescribing duties, is valid, containing no provision outside title. People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo [Cal.] 97 P 306. Primary Election Law of 1907 (p. 457, c. 209) does not violate Const. art. 2, § 19, title being sufficiently broad. State v. Nichols, 50 Wash. 508, 97 P 728. Laws 1907-08, p. 155, c. 7, providing for funding indebtedness of state and issuing bonds, is valid as to subject and title. In re Menefee [Okl.] 97 P 1014. Title of Public Service Commissions Law of 1907 (c. 429), sufficient. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755. Title of Acts 1908, p. 1112, providing for revenue for convict system by licensing sale of liquors, etc., held sufficient. Carroll v. Wright, 131 Ga. 728, 63 SE 260. All provisions of act relating to nomination and election of United States senators are germane to subject expressed in act. State v. Blaisdell [N. D.] 118 NW 141. Title of P. L. 1905, p. 237, sufficiently expresses subject of act (maintenance of turnpikes for public use free of tolls). Clarion County v. Clarion Tp., 222 Pa. 350, 71 A 543. Comp. St. 1907, c. 89, art. I, valid as to lands in question, though title restricted to drainage of marsh and swamp lands. Omaha & N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116. Title of Acts 1908, c. 118, partially repealing and amending statute relating to appraisers of estates, held sufficient under Const. art. 3, § 29. Barron v. Smith, 108 Md. 317, 70 A 225. Use of word "alternative" in title of St. 1907, p. 753, c. 410, providing for new method of appeal, is not misleading, since act provides method which may be substituted for existing method. In re McPhee's Estate [Cal.] 97 P 878. Laws 1905, p. 386, c. 163, abolishing defense of assumed risk, was not invalid as encroaching on defense of contributory negligence, latter subject not being expressed in title. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Barwick [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 953. Acts 1907, p. 367, dividing state into circuits and fixing time of holding courts, does not embrace matters not cognate to subject expressed in title. Chambers v. Morris [Ala.] 47 S 235.

Criminal law and procedure and police regulations: Title of anti-cigarette law (1907, p. 293, c. 148), sufficient. State v. Winsor, 50 Wash. 407, 97 P 446. That act provided for making of certain defenses by one charged with violations of its provisions did not make it invalid. Pearson v. Bass [Ga.] 63 SE 798. Title, "The Penal Code. An act relative to crimes and punishment and proceeding in criminal cases," sufficient to include section prohibiting opening theatres for amusement on Sunday. In re Donnellan, 49 Wash. 460, 95 P 1085. Title of Acts 1903, p. 376, c. 169, to prohibit "shooting on Sunday," included offense denounced by § 6, having in possession in open air implements for shooting, on Sunday. State v. Sexton [Tenn.] 114 SW 494. Title of act relating to protection of game, etc., also included amendment made by Laws 1907, p. 639, c. 185, providing for speedy trial of persons charged with violating its provisions, and disposition of fines, forfeitures, etc. Id. Laws 1907, p. 107, c. 49, to amend previous act, and "generally to suppress gambling," valid, though it makes it an offense to wager money on cards. Singleton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 625, 111 SW 736. Not necessary that title of Laws 1907, p. 287, prohibiting gambling and providing remedies for recovery of money lost, should refer specifically to penalties. State v. Ross [Mont.] 99 P 1056. Title of Laws 1891, p. 127, c. 69, § 25, prohibiting opening of theatres on Sunday, sufficient. In re Donnellan, 49 Wash. 460, 95 P 1085. Provision that proof of excessive speed and injury makes prima facie case of negligence in Motor Vehicle Law, § 13, is included in title, "An act regulating the use

While this provision is mandatory[38] and must be complied with,[39] yet it should not be so exactingly enforced as to cripple legislation,[40] but, it and the legislation being considered, should be construed so as to effectuate the object sought to be attained.[41] The meaning of terms used in the title is to be tested and determined by the same rules as words used in the body of the act,[42] and the title and the body of the act are to be considered together.[43] A title need not be an index to, nor an ab-and speed" of motor vehicles. Hartje v. Moxley, 235 Ill. 164, 85 NE 216. Title of Loc. Acts 1900-01, p. 688, "in relation to trials of misdemeanors in Fayette County, Alabama," is sufficient, and provisions of act are germane thereto. Glasscock v. State [Ala.] 48 S 700.

Title not sufficient: Mechanics' lien act as amended in 1889, title of which refers specifically only to "mechanics, laborers and materialmen," would be invalid if construed to include contractors, as title does not include them. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215. Any provision giving rights to others than those named would be void, construing act and amendments. Fleming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719. Sess. Laws 1907, p. 350, c. 159, entitled "An act relating to the power of counties of the first class to construct or aid in the construction of canals," etc., is void because title does not cover § 3, which attempts to validate prior acts of county in issuing bonds. State v. King County, 49 Wash. 619, 96 P 156. Title of St. 1907, p. 59, c. 32, "to provide for appointment of stenographers," etc., held not broad enough to cover provision as to use of testimony taken on preliminary examinations on subsequent trial. State v. Gibson [Nev.] 96 P 1057. Title of Laws 1907, pp. 92, 93, c. 41, "to protect the lives and property of the traveling public and the employes of railroads," is too indefinite to express subject of act, which makes it unlawful to run trains outside yard limits without full crews of specified numbers. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State [Tex.] 113 SW 916. Title of Laws 1903, c. 25, relating to defense of limitations in actions by state or municipality, is not broad enough to include provision as to actions by individuals. Blalock v. Condon [Wash.] 99 P 733. Title of Loc. Acts 1903, p. 160, "An act to extend the corporate limits of the town of Elba," is not broad enough to include § 2, which provides that town shall not be liable for maintenance and repair of bridges in new territory, etc. Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126. Gen Laws 1907, p. 790, relates, according to title, to cities and towns. Section 120, relating exclusively to counties, is void, as without title. State v. Miller [Ala.] 43 S 496. Acts 1905, p. 135, § 5, is entitled "An act to create the office of state dairy commissioner, and to define his term of service, duties and powers." Provisions attempting to establish standard of purity of dairy products, and providing for prosecutions and penalties under act, were not within title, and void. City of St. Louis v. Wortman, 213 Mo. 131, 112 SW 520.

38. Const. 1890, § 71, that title must indicate subject of act, and Code 1896, § 3406, applying same principle to ordinances, are mandatory. Sample v. Verona [Miss.] 48 S 2.

39. If the subject is not expressed in the title or if the act embraces more than one subject, the act will be void. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. The requirement that the title shall "express" the object of the act is not met by the title "embracing" the subject-matter. Jersey City v. Speer [N. J. Law] 72 A 448.

40. Constitutional requirement as to subject and title mandatory, but not to be exactingly enforced or so construed as to cripple legislation. In re Seventh Judicial Dist. County Com'rs [Okl.] 98 P 557.

41. Object is to prevent the combination in one act of several distinct and incongruous subjects, and fairly appraise the legislature and the people of the nature of pending legislation. Const. art. 3, § 29; one subject, described in title. Somerset County Com'rs v. Pocomoke Bridge Co. [Md.] 71 A 462. The only purpose of the constitutional requirement is to prevent the joining in one act of incongruous and unrelated matters. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. The rule is the same whether the act be one to be passed by the legislature or submitted to popular vote. Id. Const. art. 3, § 16, was designed to prevent two evils: (1) Grouping of two or more separate matters in a single, private of local bill; (2) failure to express in title the single subject to which bill relates. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755. Purpose of Const. art. 2, § 19, is beneficial, and courts should not hesitate to declare void statutes which do not conform thereto, especially where they are retroactive in effect. State v. King County, 49 Wash. 619, 96 P 156. In determining whether a provision is embraced within the title of an act, a liberal construction is to be given the constitutional requirement (People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865), and unless the act contains matters having no proper connection or relation to the title, it will not be held void as to such matters (Id.). Courts cannot by construction enlarge scope of title provided by legislature. City of St. Louis v. Wortman, 213 Mo. 131, 112 SW 520. The rule that a penal statute is to be strictly construed does not apply so as to extend or expand the general words used in the body of an act beyond the scope of its title, or to limit them within the subject of the title so as to make the act invalid. Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823.

42. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215.

43. Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823; In re McPhee's Estate [Cal.] 97 P 878. If statute is within spirit of title and object there expressed, it is valid. Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823. Title is to be considered but does not control when interpretation may be gathered from act and its history. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Pew [Va.] 64 SE 35. Inser-stract or synopsis of the contents of an act,[44] nor need it mention specifically details of the act;[45] it is sufficient if it fairly indicates the general subject,[46] and reasonably covers all the provisions of the act,[47] and is not misleading.[48] The title need not set out specially what will follow legally and logically from the proposed legislation.[49] If the title contains a reference to the subject, it is sufficient though coupled with a false description.[50] That the title of an act is unnecessarily comprehensive[51] or prolix,[52] or that it expresses more than one subject,[53] does not in-tion of black letter line over section by compiler not controlling over body of act. Id. The title is to be construed in the light of the general object and purpose of the act. State v. Peake [N. D.] 120 NW 47.

44. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Title need not be index; sufficient if expressive of subject, provisions being cognate and germane to subject. Ex parte Hallawell [Cal.] 99 P 490. Constitutional requirement to be liberally construed; all that is required is reasonably intelligent reference to subject of act; title need not be catalogue or abstract of contents of act. In re McPhee's Estate [Cal.] 97 P 878.

45. General title suffices; need not contain details. In re County Com'rs [Okl.] 98 P 557; Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823. Title need not be an index and need not give details; need only call attention to subject-matter of act so as to give notice of matter being legislated upon. State v. Nichols, 50 Wash. 508, 97 P 728. Act is not invalid because it includes details germane to general subject but not expressed in act. Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823.

46. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865; City of St. Louis v. Wartman, 213 Mo. 131, 112 SW 520. The generality or comprehensiveness of a title is no objection if it is not misleading or deceptive and fairly directs the mind to the subject legislated upon. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

47. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Title may be general; sufficient if provisions of act are all referrable and cognate to subject expressed therein. State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 391; Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126. General titles, expressive of the subject of the act, include all special matters relating thereto without specially naming them. In re Donnellan, 49 Wash. 460, 95 P 1085. Any number of provisions may be included in an act so long as they are not inconsistent with or foreign to the general subject and in furtherance of such subject. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. The title may be expressed in general words, or it may be a brief statement of the subject, or it may be an index to, or abstract of the contents. State v. Hooker [Okl.] 98 P 964. A title should not only fairly indicate the general subject of the act but should be sufficiently comprehensive to cover to a reasonable extent all its provisions, and must not be misleading by what it says or omits. Somerset County Com'rs v. Pocomoke Bridge Co. [Md.] 71 A 462. The constitutional requirement as to subject and title has no application to a section of the statutes which makes the commission of different acts misdemeanors and provides separate punishments for the commission of such acts, providing the offenses defined are germane to the title and subject of the act in which the section is embraced. Rev. St. 1899, § 3045, relating to druggists and their licenses, not void under Const. art. 4, § 28. State v. Hamlett, 212 Mo. 80, 110 SW 1082. Const. 1901, § 45, is satisfied if act has but one general subject fairly indicated in title, and such title will support all matters reasonably connected with it and all proper agencies, instrumentalities or measures to facilitate its accomplishment and germane or cognate to title. Glasscock v. State [Ala.] 48 S 700. The requirement is obeyed if all the provisions of the act relate to one subject indicated in the title, and are parts of it, or incident to it, or reasonably connected with it. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. If provisions of act appear to be in furtherance of general purpose expressed in title, act will be upheld. State v. Peake [N. D.] 120 NW 47. Any phraseology which clearly indicates the subject to which all details of the act relate is sufficient. Title of Australian ballot law sufficient to cover § 25 of c. 78, Laws 1893, § 3 of c. 222, Laws 1905. Getty v. Holcomb [Kan.] 99 P 218. The title need not refer all the exceptions and provisos in the body of the act which relate to the general subject expressed in the title. Act relating to cities of 10,000 or less not invalid because title did not refer to exception of cities having home rule charters. Euziere v. Tracy, 104 Minn. 378, 116 NW 922. Act not void because proviso, restricting its operation, was not mentioned in title. Lane v. Bell [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 918.

48. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

49. Title of P. L. 1901, p. 639, as to legal relation of illegitimate children to other children and to mother and her heirs, sufficient though not referring to exemption from collateral inheritance tax of estates from mother to legitimated children. Commonwealth v. Mackey [Pa.] 72 A 250.

50. Wisconsin River Imp. Co. v. Pier, 137 Wis. 325, 118 NW 857.

51. That the title is broad enough to include matters not embraced in the act does not invalidate it. Advisory Board of Harrison Tp. v. State, 170 Ind. 439, 85 NE 18. When subject expressed in title is not misleading, the fact that the subject embraced in the act is less comprehensive than that expressed in title does not invalidate act. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Simon [Fla.] 47 S 1001.

52. That title recites purpose of act at greater length than necessary is no objection to the validity of the title or the act. State v. Ross [Mont.] 99 P 1056.

53. Plurality of title is not an objection to an act which deals with but one subject. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

validate it if it fairly indicates the matter treated and is not misleading, and if the act itself treats of but one subject.[54] Whether an act is invalid because of plurality of subject must be determined from the body of the act.[55] An amendatory act, the title of which recites the title of the act amended, is valid if its provisions are germane to the subject expressed in the title of the original act.[56] An amendment embracing matters not included within the scope of the title of the original act is invalid.[57] If the title of an original act is sufficient to embrace matters covered by the provisions of an amendatory act, the sufficiency of the title of the latter is unimportant.[58] An act adopting a part of another act is valid if the part adopted relates to the general subject expressed in the title of the adopting act.[59] Where a statute has been re-enacted in the code, the sufficiency of the title of the original act is immaterial.[60] A defect in an act in that a provision of it is not within the scope of the title may be cured by subsequent amendments.[61]

Partial invalidity.[62]—Where the provisions of an act are broader than its title, it is still valid as to such provisions as are within the scope of its title,[63] provided

That the title expresses more than one subject is immaterial if the act itself treats but one subject; as the portion of the title which treats of another subject may be treated as surplusage. State v. Ross [Mont.] 99 P 1056. If there is but one subject in the act and the title expresses more than one, the subject expressed in the title and not embraced in the act would be regarded as surplusage (People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865); and the word "subject" is not synonymous with "provision" (Id.).

54. That the title is more comprehensive than the letter of the act does not invalidate it when the act from its nature embraces the subject and spirit of the title. Knight & Jillison Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 828. A title is not bad merely for comprehensiveness, but it is bad if it is so indefinite as to express no subject, or if it does not express the particular subject of the act. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State [Tex.] 113 SW 916. The constitutional requirement as to what shall be embraced in an act has no application to its title but only to its enacting clauses. Jersey City v. Speer [N. J. Law] 72 A 448.

55. Laws 1907, p. 297, local option law, deals with one subject. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

56. Sess. Laws 1889, pp. 313, 314, amending Sess. Laws 1887, p. 336, valid. Colorado Farm & Live Stock Co. v. Beerbohm, 43 Colo. 464, 96 P 443. The title of an amendatory act, amending a section or sections of a prior act, is sufficient if it refers to the section or sections amended and names the title of the act amended, and the subject-matter of the amendment is embraced within the title of the original act. Vineyard v. Grangeville City Council [Idaho] 98 P 422. Laws 1905, p. 226, c. 117, amending Laws 1899, p. 220, c. 128 (as amended in 1903), does not add new subject but is included in subject expressed in title of original act (stock law). Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex.] 114 SW 1171. Act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act'," etc. (reciting title), held sufficiently entitled as it was in fact supplemental. Mara v. Bayonne [N. J. Law] 71 A 1131. To amend, repeal, or add to any part of the code, it is necessary only to refer to the proper chapter and section, and adopt and express in the title of the amendatory act the number and subject of such chapter if the provisions of the amendatory act are germane to the subject of the chapter. Bertram v. Com., 108 Va. 902, 62 SE 969.

57. Pub. Acts, 1897, p. 138, No. 121, amending Haw. Ann. St. § 6025 (authorizing sale of real estate of decedents to pay debts and expenses), and authorizing sale to preserve estate or when it is for best intereets of estate, is void because not embraced in title of original act. Bresler v. Delray Real Estate & Investment Ass'n [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 28, 120 NW 21. Laws 1901, p. 370, No. 238, amending general railroad law (Comp. Laws, c. 164), invalid because relating to street railroads, while title of act amended referred only to railroads. Ecorse Tp. v. Jackson, etc., R. Co., 153 Mich. 393, 15 Det. Leg. N. 528, 117 NW 89. Acts 1891, p. 221, amending previous statutes as to fees and compensation of district attorneys, are void because subject-matter is not germane to subject expressed in title of amending act nor of act amended. Teller County Com'rs v. Trowbridge, 42 Colo. 449, 95 P 554. Act amending one section of an act and referring to another in title would be void under Const. § 51. In re Barker [Ky.] 116 SW 686. Act April 1, 1901, entitled "an act to amend section 19 of chapter 10, Comp. St. 1899, and to repeal said section as now existing," is void because the matter sought to be added is not germane to subject of act as enacted. Prowett v. Nance County [Neb.] 117 NW 996.

63. Omaha, N. P. R. Co. v. Sarpy County [Neb.] 117 NW 116. Const. art. 4, § 13, provides that where an act embraces a subject not expressed in the title it shall be void they are severable from the provisions not included within the title.[64] When two subjects are expressed in the title of a bill and the body of the act embraces both, the entire act is void.[65] In Utah, general appropriation bills are exempted from the constitutional provision requiring all bills to contain but one subject, to be expressed in the title, but this does not permit the amendment, modification or repeal of an act by a general appropriation act under a general title.[66]

§ 4. Amendments, adoptions, codes and revisions.[67]—See 10 C. L. 1714—The presumption is that no change in existing law is intended unless expressly declared; and when an act creating a right or remedy does not prescribe procedure, it will be assumed that the general mode of procedure then existing was intended to apply unless expressly excluded.[68] In some states a bill cannot be amended, during its passage, in such a way as to change the object of the bill.[69]

*Reference to act amended.*See 10 C. L. 1714—In most jurisdictions an act cannot be amended by reference to its title merely. The act amended must be set out and re-enacted in the amending statute,[70] but this rule does not apply, in some states, to amendments to sections of a code.[71] An act may be amended by adding a new section without re-enacting the entire act.[72] A statute which is complete in itself as to the matter not expressed. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. If act contains matter not expressed in title, it is void only as to such matter. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1170. Words "or to disturb in any way said relation" are not covered by title of Acts 1901, p. 63, as amended by Acts 1903, p. 91, and such provision is void, but this does not affect validity of balance of act. Pearson v. Bass [Ga.] 63 SE 798. Provisions of Sp. Laws 1907, p. 81, c. 7, charter of Ft. Worth, relating to it as independent school district, are severable from remainder, and if invalid, because not within title, do not affect validity of balance. Orrick v. Ft. Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 677. That title of amendatory act mentioned a statute which was not amended by body of act did not invalidate act as to matter contained in it to which title referred. Reference to act not amended could be treated as surplusage. Chattanooga Sav. Bank v. Tanner [Ala.] 47 S 790. Where only one subject is expressed in the title and the body of the act embraces matter not within the purview of the title, if such matter is distinct and severable from that expressed in the title and the two are not dependent the one on the other, the courts will permit the one to stand though the other is expunged as void, provided effect can be given to the legislative intent. Section 1 of Loc. Acts 1903, p. 160, providing for extension of limits of town, valid, though § 2, relating to repair of bridges, etc., is void. Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126.

64. Where part not germane to title is severable, it may be dropped and balance of act upheld. Thornton v. Bramlett [Ala.] 46 S 577. Matters expressed in title and treated by act being severable from other matters not expressed in title, act is enforcible as to matters expressed. Bryant v. Skillman Hardware Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 23. If an act embraces some matter not expressed in its title, it is unconstitutional only as to that part unless the provisions are so connected in subject-matter, meaning or purpose that it cannot be presumed that the legislature would have passed or the people voted for, the one without the other. Laws, § 4121, by reference to section of criminal code without restating it. State v. Gibson [Nev.] 96 P 1057. Statute providing that "§ 34 of an act entitled," etc., should be amended by adding a section authorizing, etc., violated Const. art. 3, § 36, prohibiting amendment by reference. Henderson v. Act held valid: Acts 1900, p. 170, does not violate Const. art. 4, § 45, as amendment is re-enacted and published at length. Thornton v. Bramlett [Ala.] 46 S 577. Title of Act No. 89 of Laws 1905 expresses fully subject of act, measure of damages and distribution of amount recovered in actions under survival act, and Const. art. 4, § 25, prohibiting revision, alteration or amendment by reference to title only, is not violated by it. and does not purport to amend any other is not within this requirement, though it operates to amend or change existing law.[73] That an act refers to other acts to indicate procedure or facts upon which it shall operate does not make it an amendatory act,[74] though the statutes referred to may be modified or amended by implication.[75]

Effect of amendments and adoptions. See 10 C. L. 1715—The effect of an amendment is to so change the original act as to make it read in the same manner it would have read, and to give it the same effect it would have had, if originally enacted as amended.[76] Where an amendment preserves a section of the statute amended and adds new matter, it is equivalent to an independent statute embodying the new matter.[77] When an act has been properly amended, amendments to the act as amended become amendments of the original act.[78] Amendatory sections are to be treated, as to matters occurring after their enactment, as parts of the original act.[79] In the absence of any constitutional or legislative provision on the subject, an amending act may operate as a repeal of the statute amended.[80] But the general rule is that an amendment is only a repeal as to the portions of the original act left out of the amendment,[81] and as to the portion unchanged, in form or substance, the amendatory act is a mere continuation of the original act,[82] which remains in force as of the date of its original enactment.[83] This latter rule

Where no section of a statute was re-enacted but an additional section was added and the title of the original act, the first section of which had been twice amended, was set out, and reference made to the amendments of the first section, Const. art. 3, § 36, was not violated. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1170.

73. Const. art. 2, § 37 (amendment, etc., by reference), does not prevent enactment of statutes, complete in themselves, which supersede or limit the effect of others. Primary Law valid. State v. Nichols, 50 Wash. 508, 97 P 728. Acts 1908, c. 118, § 1, construed as partial repeal of statute relating to appraisers of estates, and not an amendment; hence reference to title and section sufficient. Barron v. Smith, 108 Md. 317, 70 A 225. Act No. 89, Pub. Acts 1905, does not affect or amend Comp. Laws, § 10,117, hence no violation of constitutional prohibition against amendment by reference only. Norblad v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 887, 118 NW 595. Laws 1903, p. 87, c. 67, "An act to provide for payment of expenses incurred in compliance with an act entitled, 'an act,'" etc., is not invalid as an attempt to amend by reference only, since it is an act of procedure complete within itself. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Pierce County [Wash.] 97 P 1099. P. L. 1905, p. 237, is complete act (relating to turnpikes), and not amendment of P. L. 1887, p. 310; hence Const. art. 3, § 6, prohibiting revival, amendment or extension of any law by reference to title, is not violated. Clarion County v. Clarion Tp., 222 Pa. 350, 71 A 543. Act complete and original, not purporting to change existing law, does not violate constitutional prohibition against amendment, etc., by reference only, though it provides that powers conferred by it shall be exercised in accordance with existing general laws. City of Pond Creek v. Haskell [Okl.] 97 P 338. P. L. 1905, p. 161, relating to licensing of brokers is complete act, though it operates to amend and extend existing law; hence does not violate Const 1874, art. 3, § 6, as to amendments. Commonwealth v. S. W. Black Co. [Pa.] 72 A 261.

Portions of an amended section which are not altered are to be considered as having been the law from the time they were enacted, and the new provisions are considered to have been enacted at the time of the amendment. In re McGee's Estate [Cal.] 97 P 299. Amendments to laws regulating motor vehicles did not affect powers of park commissioners to make rules as to parks and streets, which powers were saved by acts is statutory in Illinois.[84] The rule that an amendemnt is deemed a continuation of the provisions of the original law which are unchanged applies only to existing laws, not to those that have been repealed.[85] The invalidity of an amendatory act which seeks to extend the provisions of the original act does not make the original act invalid.[86] Where an amendment did not materially change or repeal existing law, but put into one section what had been in three, its validity or invalidity was immaterial.[87] Where an existing general law is amended so as to leave it in full force and effect so far as it goes and the only amendment consists in the addition of new matter, a limitation in the amendatory statute providing that such statute shall not affect pending suits or proceedings qualifies only the addition made to the statute, not the pre-existing general law.[88] One statute may adopt a part or all of another law or statute by a specific and descriptive reference thereto, and the effect is the same as if the law or statute or the part adopted had been written into it.[89] When so adopted, only such portion is in force as relates to the particular subject of the adopting act and is applicable and appropriate thereto.[90] That an act, to fix the statute of a proceeding under it, refers to a repealed act, does not affect its validity.[91] To the extent that a statute refers to the provisions of a repealed statute and adopts them, the repealed law is re-enacted and becomes law as much as though fully set out.[92] A statute adopting the provisions of another statute by reference adopts it as it exists at the time of adoption [93] and continues it in force as a part of the adopting statute, regardless of subsequent amendment or repeal of the statute adopted.[94] The provisions of an existing act are extended by a supplemental act when the latter simply carries forward all the provisions of the original act.[95] If the purpose be to ingraft a radically new provision on the original act, some other word than "extended" must be used.[96]

Revisions and codes. See 10 C. L. 1715—The object of a revision is to consolidate and simplify the law, to bring together statutes relating to the same matters, to expunge obsolete and redundant matter and correct imperfections in text,[97] but not ordinarily to change the law.[98] Mere verbal changes in the revision of a statute do not alter its meaning.[99] Where a compilation of laws, prepared by a commissioner, is adopted as a separate, independent act, it becomes law, regardless of the authority of the commissioner as to the insertion of new matter.[1] That a statute was embodied in the code did not give it validity, where the code was adopted before the statute was enacted.[2] The code proper, as adopted by the legislature, is amended. Commonwealth v. Tyler, 199 Mass. 490, 85 NE 569.

§ 5. Interpretation. A. Occasion for interpretation.[4]—See 10 C. L. 1715—Statutes are to be construed by the court.[5] Resort to rules of construction is proper only when there is some ambiguity or uncertainty in the language used.[6] When the language is plain and unambiguous, its meaning cannot be limited or extended by the courts,[7] and in such case there is no necessity nor room for judicial construction.[8] Legislative questions submitted to the supreme court must be connected with pending, not with completed, legislation,[9] and sufficient time for argument and careful consideration must exist before the adjournment of the legislature.[10]

(§ 5) B. General rules.[11]—See 10 C. L. 1716—It will be presumed that the legislature acted with knowledge of the law[12] and of the constitutional limitations upon its powers,[13] and it will not be assumed that the legislature intended to exceed its jurisdiction[14] or to change established principles of law[15] or procedure,[16] unless such intent is clearly manifested. Statute provided that no teacher should receive more than sum scheduled to be paid for seventh years' service unless and until services should have been approved as "fit and meritorious." Last clause too indefinite and uncertain. Proviso void. Eagan v. Board of Education, 115 NYS 165. Laws 1907, p. 63, c. 47, § 3, providing for determination by superior judge of "next nearest judicial district" adjoining district in which certain county is situated as to whether certain division of county would have constitutional number of inhabitants in each part, unconstitutional as indefinite and uncertain, where three districts fulfilled requirements. State v. Pacific County Super. Ct., 47 Wash. 453, 92 P 345.

22. A statute is to be construed so as to give it a reasonable effect, pursuant to the legislative intent. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Batesville & W. Tel. Co. [Ark.] 110 SW 1047. Construction consonant with reason and common sense should be sought. Darlington Lumber Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 530. Where a statute is capable of two meanings, and one is more reasonable and hence more probable than the other, this fact may be considered on the question of intent. Carter v. Whitcomb, 74 N. H. 482, 69 A 779. Where a statute cannot in the nature of things be made to apply, it must be held that it does not apply and that legislature did not intend that it should. State v. Harsha [Kan.] 101 P 454. It is usually safe to reject an interpretation that does not naturally suggest itself to the mind of the casual reader but is rather the result of a laborious effort to extract from the statute a meaning which it does not at first seem to convey. Shulthis v. MacDougal, 162 F 331.

23. In re Caldwell, 164 F 515. Uncertain or ambiguous words should always be construed so as, if possible, to give a reasonable and just result. State v. Louisiana & M. R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 956. Statute should be given such construction as will avoid absurdity, hardship or injustice and as will bring it within legislative authority. Harvey v. Hoffman, 108 Va. 626, 62 SE 371. Where two constructions are possible, that will be adopted which will not lead to absurd conclusions. Landrum v. Graham [Okl.] 98 P 432. Statutes should be so construed as to give sensible and intelli-

clusively presumed that the legislature has acted in good faith.[24] Rules of construction are sometimes provided by statute.[25] Such rules are not exclusive or applicable in all cases[26] and should not be applied so as to thwart the intent of the legislature as expressed in the statutes to be construed.[27] An unscientific and bungling statute cannot be construed and interpreted by the same strict scientific rules as a consistent and scientific statute.[28]

Legislative intent and purpose. See 10 C. L. 1716—The cardinal rule of construction is to ascertain and effectuate the legislative intent,[29] and that construction should be adopted which will carry out the apparent purpose of the legislature,[30] and gent meaning to every part and to avoid absurd and unjust consequences. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390. A statute is to be sensibly construed, and general terms so limited in their application as not to lead to injustice or oppression. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Kelly [C. C. A.] 160 F 316. A construction which will lead to mischievous and absurd results will not be adopted if any other construction, more reasonable, is possible. Curry v. Lehman, 55 Fla. 847, 47 S 18. An unwise or unjust purpose will not be imputed to the legislature when it can be avoided by a reasonable construction. Pattison v. Clingan [Miss.] 47 S 503. Where meaning is doubtful, results may be considered, and construction leading to oppression, invasion of rights, or hardship should be rejected, if possible, without doing violence to language used. Nance v. Southern R. Co., 149 N. C. 366, 63 SE 116. Statutes should receive a sensible construction so as to effectuate the legislative intent and avoid an unjust and absurd conclusion. Provisions of immigration law excluding aliens afflicted with certain diseases, etc., are applicable to Chinese immigrants otherwise entitled to admission. In re Lee Sher Wing, 164 F 506.

24. Repeal of charter of corporation. People v. Calder, 153 Mich. 724, 15 Det. Leg. N. 619, 117 NW 314.

25. Rev. St. 1874, c. 131, establishing rules of construction, by its own terms, applies to all laws existing when it was enacted, as well as to subsequent laws. People v. Zito, 237 Ill. 434, 86 NE 1041.

26. Rev. St. 1899, § 4160, subd. 17, does not fix definition of word "residence" for all purposes. State v. Shepperd [Mo.] 117 SW 1169.

27. People v. Zito, 237 Ill. 434, 86 NE 1041.

28. Reynolds v. Bingham, 126 App. Div. 289, 110 NYS 520; Town of Pelham v. Shinn, 129 App. Div. 20, 113 NYS 98; Hodgins v. Bingham, 128 App. Div. 151, 112 NYS 543.

29. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 450; People v. Glynn, 128 App. Div. 257, 112 NYS 695; State v. Barrett [Ind.] 87 NE 7; Sunflower Lumber Co. v. Turner Supply Co. [Ala.] 48 S 510; Grinstead v. Kirby, 33 Ky. L. R. 287, 110 SW 247; Dekelt v. People [Colo.] 99 P 330; State v. Barco [N. C.] 63 SE 673; Empire Copper Co. v. Henderson [Idaho] 99 P 127. The cardinal rule of construction is to ascertain and give effect to the general intent of the act, if that can be discovered. State v. Weller [Ind.] 85 NE 761. Sole object of construction is to arrive at legislative intent. Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 138 Iowa, 730, 117 NW 309. Obvious intention of legislature should control, especially when object of act is wholesome. Armstrong v. Modern Brotherhood of America, 132 Mo. App. 171, 112 SW 24. Ingenious distinctions not controlling, intent being evident. State v. Scheffield [La.] 48 S 932. Under Kirby's Dig. § 7792, it is duty of courts to construe general terms, phrases and provisions liberally, with a view of ascertaining true intent of legislature. Brown v. Nelms [Ark.] 112 SW 373. Legislative intent controls scope of statute whether plainly expressed or discoverable by aid of rules of judicial construction. State v. Railroad Commission, 137 Wis. 80, 117 NW 846. Penal as well as other statutes are to be so construed as to effectuate legislative intent. State v. Bass Pub. Co. [Me.] 71 A 894. Statutes for disposal of public lands presumptively intended to produce best results for all concerned. Such intent should be effectuated if possible. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Rules of construction permit of looking at act as whole to its subject-matter, its spirit and reason, of giving words broad or narrow meaning within their reasonable scope, of supplying clearly omitted words, of changing words clearly misplaced or used erroneously, and thus spelling out real intent. State v. Railroad Commission, 137 Wis. 80, 117 NW 846.

30. Moody v. Brasie, 104 Minn. 463, 116 NW 941. Object of law. Gibson v. People [Colo.] 99 P 333. Legislative purpose and object are to be borne in mind. Dekelt v. People [Colo.] 99 P 330. Such construction should be adopted as will not defeat manifest object of statute. City of Cheyenne v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 244; Greenough v. Police Com'rs [R. I.] 71 A 806. Evil sought to be remedied and object sought to be obtained. Marquette Third Vein Coal Co. v. Allison, 132 Ill. App. 221. Where language is not explicit, evils sought to be remedied and remedy proposed are to be considered. Dekelt v. People [Colo.] 99 P 330. The intention is to be gathered from the necessity and reason of the enactment and the meaning of words enlarged or restricted according to the true intent. People v. Sholen. 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390. Purpose of act being to prevent deception, it will be construed to effectuate that purpose. State v. Pollman [Wash.] 98 P 88. To clear up obscurities, act should be read with reference to its leading idea. State v. Railroad Commission, 137 Wis. 80, 117 NW 846. Statutes will be interpreted so as to carry out the object of the legislature, which in the case of Laws 1897, p. 394, c. 378, § 1091, as amended by laws 1900, p. 1607, c. 751, § 4, was to secure uniformity of salaries. Loeuy v. New York Board of Education, 59 Misc. 70, 112 NYS 4. Construction which completely nullifies a plain statutory provision cannot be adopted when the law is susceptible of another construction which is reasonably in harmony where this clearly appears from the language used, resort cannot be had to other rules of construction,[31] and the meaning of the language used cannot be extended by construction.[32] Where a general intention is expressed in a statute and the act also expresses a particular intention incompatible with the general intention, the particular intention is to be considered in the nature of an exception.[33]

The entire act is to be considered[34]—See 10 C. L. 1717 and construed as a whole,[35] and such a construction adopted as will avoid conflict in its provisions[36] and give effect to every word and part of the statute if possible.[37] Where there are specific with apparent object sought to be accomplished by legislature. State v. Duis [N. D.] 116 NW 751. Construction of Rochester charter will not be adopted which would make farce of liquor tax law and its enforcement. People v. Craig, 111 NYS 909. Construction of charter of Greater New York should be adopted which will give effect to legislative intent and obviate evils sought to be avoided. People v. Ahearn, 115 NYS 664. Even in penal statutes, mischief and remedy must be considered, and strict letter may yield to spirit of law. Babo v. Yazoo Mississippi Delta Com'rs [Miss.] 46 S 819. Regard must be had to the subject-matter of the statute as well as its language, and to the consequence that would follow the proposed construction. State v. Audette, 81 Vt. 400, 70 A 833.

31. United States v. Musgrave, 160 F 700. Language may be so plain and specific that its meaning cannot be changed by any general principles of construction. People v. Long Island R. Co., 194 N. Y. 130, 87 NE 79. If language used is unambiguous, resort must be had to that alone. Commonwealth v. International Harvester Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 703. When language is clear, intention expressed by it must control. Empire Copper Co. v. Henderson [Idaho] 99 P 127. Language actually used, taken in its fair and obvious meaning, is test of intention. State v. Montello Salt Co., 34 Utah, 458, 98 P 549. That statute may lead to some confusion cannot control or change plain language as used in act. Lahart v. Thompson [Iowa] 118 NW 398. Court will give statute meaning which it is apparent that legislature, from language used, had in mind at time. State v. Hanson, 60 Neb. 724, 117 NW 412. Rules of construction do not justify the disregarding of plain language of the statute. Neither rule of liberal nor strict construction justifies judicial legislation. City of Detroit v. Detroit United R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 48, 120 NW 600. Only where an ambiguity, such as apparent conflict with other laws or with the constitution, arises, may the courts look beyond the words of the statute to ascertain the legislative intent. Commonwealth v. International Harvester Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 703.

32. The courts are powerless to extend a remedy which lies with the legislature. Board of Health v. Phillipsburg [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 750. A law which says that a salary shall not be reduced cannot be preverted into meaning that the salary must be increased. Laws 1897, p. 394, c. 378, § 1091, as amended by Laws 1900, p. 1607, c. 751, § 4, applying to powers of board of education of city of New York. Loewy v. New York Board of Education, 59 Misc. 70, 112 NYS 4.

33. State v. Moore, 108 Md. App. 636, 71 A 461.

34. In re Klein's Estate, 152 Mich. 420, 15 Det. Leg. N. 230, 116 NW 394; State v. Central Vermont R. Co., 81 Vt. 463, 71 A 194. Entire act must be considered in ascertaining what constitutes offense under dental act (Rev. Pol. Code, art. 10, c. 4, § 289). State v. Carlisle [S. D.] 118 NW 1033.

35. The legislative intent must be gathered from the whole act. Board of Health v. Phillipsburg [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 750; Dekelt v. People [Colo.] 99 P 330; Willis v. Kalmbach [Va.] 64 SE 342. Intention of the whole act will control interpretation of parts. Lederer Realty Corp. v. Hopkins [R. I.] 71 A 456. All parts of the act are to be considered together and such construction given as will best effectuate the intention of the legislature. State v. People's Nat. Bank [N. H.] 70 A 542. Letter of law will not be followed when not consistent with legislative intent as shown by act as whole. Curry v. Lehman, 55 Fla. 847, 47 S 18. Statute presumed to be harmonious and consistent, and to be construed as a whole. State v. Standard Oil Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 902. Statute, after amendment, must be considered as a whole with amendment, according to plain and obvious meaning. George v. Woods [Miss.] 49 S 147. One section of statute will not be so construed as to render another abortive, if they can be made to harmonize by any reasonable construction. Lawson v. Tripp, 34 Utah, 28, 95 P 520. Rule that words are to be construed in connection with context, especially applicable to criminal statutes. People v. Hemleb, 127 App. Div. 356, 111 NYS 690. Several sections of act are to be considered as whole and harmonized if possible. Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 138 Iowa, 730, 117 NW 309. Where form of notice is part of legislative act, and is not contradictory with other provisions, form must be considered as legislative exposition of question or proposition to be voted upon. People v. School Directors, 139 Ill. App. 620.

36. Statute should be so construed as to reconcile apparent conflict between two provisions. Hill v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 117. Should be so construed as to avoid apparent conflict, if possible, and give effect to every part. Ingle v. Batesville Grocery Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 241. If different portions seem to conflict, courts must harmonize them if possible, favoring such construction as will give effect to all. Trapp v. Wells Fargo Exp. Co. [Ok.] 97 P 1003. Of two constructions, either of which is warranted by the words of the act, that should be preferred which best harmonizes with the entire act. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390.

37. No portion being disregarded or rendered nugatory. Attorney General v. Detroit Board of Education, 154 Mich. 584, 15 Det. Leg. N. 902, 118 NW 606; United States v. MacVeagh, 29 S. Ct. 556; State v. Rutland R.

provisions relating to a particular subject, they must control as to such subject as against general provisions occurring elsewhere,[38] but a particular provision should not be given a meaning at variance with general provisions, unless the language demands it.[39] The grant of a specific power or the imposition of a definite duty confers by implication authority to do whatever is necessary to execute the power or perform the duty.[40] The numbering of sections in an act is a purely artificial and unessential arrangement resorted to for convenience only, and can never be allowed to prevent a correct construction of the act as a whole,[41] though the numbering of sections in a chapter of a code has been held important.[42] An enumeration of certain specified things excludes all others not therein mentioned,[43] but this rule does not apply where there are no others that could have been excluded.[44] When a statute limits a thing to be done in a particular way, it necessarily requires that it shall not be done otherwise.[45]

Ejusdem generis.[See 10 C. L. 1717]—The general rule is that where general words follow particular ones, the general words will be held to apply to persons or things or conditions of the same character as those covered by the particular words.[46] But this rule will not be applied when to do so would defeat the legislative intent as shown by the act as a whole,[47] nor when the particular words embrace all the persons or objects of the class mentioned,[48] nor where the general word itself indicates a thing different from that indicated by the particular word.[49]

Entire act or section should be considered and every word given effect. Nance v. Southern R. Co., 149 N. C. 366, 63 SE 116. Effect should be given to every word and clause, and such construction as will make a proviso repugnant to the body of the act avoided, if possible. State v. Weller [Ind.] 85 NE 761. All language to be considered and so interpreted as to effectuate legislative intent. Rohlf v. Kasemeier [Iowa] 118 NW 276. Meaning clearly expressed should be given to law; if language ambiguous, true intent should be ascertained, if possible. McLeod v. Carthage Com'rs, 148 N. C. 77, 61 SE 605.

38. Though general provisions standing alone would be broad enough to include particular subject. King v. Armstrong [Cal. App.] 99 P 527.

39. Particular provision should not be given special meaning at variance with general intent, unless language demands it. People v. Long Island R. Co., 194 N. Y. 130, 87 NE 79.

Where words of specific and limited signification are followed by general words of more comprehensive import, the general words are to be construed as embracing only such persons, places and things as are of like kind or class to those designated by the specific words, unless a contrary intention is clearly shown. Wiggins v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 718.

47. United States Cement Co. v. Cooper [Ind.] 88 NE 69. The rule always yields to manifest legislative intention. State v. Prather [Kan.] 100 P 57. Where it clearly appears that such general words are not so limited, they will not be so construed. Mertens v. Southern Coal & Min. Co., 235 Ill. 540, 85 NE 743.

48. In such case, general words must be given independent meaning or none at all. United States Cement Co. v. Cooper [Ind.] 88 NE 69.

49. Rule of ejusdem generis not applicable where statute relating to crime of assault used terms "stick or other weapon," since a stick is not technically a weapon. Held, any foreign matter or substance used committing an assault, capable of producing injury or pain, is "weapon." Martin v. State [Ala.] 47 S 104

(§ 5) C. Aids to interpretation.[50] The title See 10 C. L. 1718 as well as the body of the act may be considered in ascertaining the legislative intent,[51] but cannot, of course, control the provisions of the statute.[52]

Surrounding conditions See 10 C. L. 1718 and contemporary facts and circumstances relative to the subject-matter,[53] including the objects sought to be attained and the evils sought to be remedied,[54] may be considered.

Legislative history. See 10 C. L. 1718—The history of legislation on the subject and prior acts,[55] including acts that have been repealed,[56] and their construction,[57] may be considered, and legislative records and debates[58] and the history of a constitutional convention has, also, been held competent,[59] but the intentions, motives,

51. State v. Northwestern Tel. Exch. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 534. The title or subtitle, as well as the enacting clause, may be looked to in determining the intention of the legislature. Robinson v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 52. Reference may be had to the title, even after the act has been re-enacted in the Code and the title omitted. Wimberly v. Georgia Southern & F. R. Co., 5 Ga. App. 263, 63 SE 29. The title of an act, while it may not be used to extend or restrain any positive provisions found in the body of the act, may be resorted to in a case of doubt for the purpose of ascertaining its meaning. United States v. Nakashima [C. C. A.] 160 F 842.

52. Title of act of congress need not embrace all its provsions; hence body of act must be looked to for intent. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

53. Existing conditions, which it will be presumed legislature intended to meet, and existing laws may be considered. Bull v. New York City R. Co., 192 N. Y. 361, 85 NE 385. If meaning be doubtful, court may consider contemporary circumstances and facts leading to enactment, and read law in light of surrounding facts. City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417. Statute must be read in light of circumstances existing at time of enactment of constitution as then written, and of law as then declared. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 550, 70 A 387.

54. Object to be attained and evils to be remedied, as well as language, may be considered. City of Chicago v. Green, 238 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417. Object sought to accomplish is excellent aid. James v. U. S. Fidelity & Guarantee Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 406. The mischief intended to be prevented by a statute may be considered. Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. v. Haug, 136 Wis. 350, 117 NW 811. Occasion and necessity for law and mischief and remedy should be considered. Norfolk & Portsmouth Trac. Co. v. Ellington's Adm'r, 108 Va. 245, 61 SE 779. Courts may look to old law, the mischief, and the remedy. State v. Stewart [Wash.] 100 P 153. Evil to be corrected, language of act, title, history of enactment, and state of law already in existence, may be considered. Curry v. Lehman, 55 Fla. 847, 47 S 18. History of times and evils sought to be cured may be considered. Commonwealth International Harvester Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 703. What may be, as well as what is presently being effected, must be considered. Hathorn v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 194 N. Y. 326, 87 NE 504.

55. Legislative history generally held inadmissible. Tennant v. Kuhlemeier [Iowa] 120 NW 689. History of legislation on subject and prior acts considered, in construing act. Nance v. Southern R. Co., 149 N. C. 366, 63 SE 116. Legislative history and prior laws and their construction to be considered. State v. Rutland R. Co., 81 Vt. 508, 71 A 197. History of liquor legislation consulted in construing liquor law. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 450. Laws 1879, p. 77, descent of property, cannot be construed so as to permit persons related to decedents in third degree to take by representation, when that construction would change construction given law for 20 years, and construction given by many re-enactments and judicial decisions, no later law expressly changing it. Green v. Bancroft [N. H.] 72 A 373. Reference to history of legislation and earlier statutes on subject always competent and often of great value. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387.

56. A repealed law may be considered for the purpose of interpreting a living statute. Advisory Board of Harrison Tp. v. State, 170 Ind. 439, 85 NE 18. Where there is doubt as to meaning of excepting clause, other statutes on same subject may be considered though some have been repealed. Steck v. Prentice, 43 Colo. 17, 95 P 552. Though by the Revised Statutes of the United States all statutes, prior to 1873, any part of which is embraced in the revised statutes, are repealed, the original acts may be consulted in construing any section of the revised statutes, especially in view of the authorization of marginal notes by the act authorizing the revision. People's U. S. Bank v. Goodwin, 162 F 937.

57. It is presumed that legislature was informed of existing laws and practical construction they had received. State v. Rutland R. Co., 81 Vt. 508, 71 A 197.

58. Congressional records and debates may be considered (construing provision of customs laws). Shallus v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 653.

59. History of proceedings in constitutional convention may be consulted as aid to interpretation, but is of little aid or importance where provision to be construed is clear. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. History of constitutional convention and debates therein considered in determining ef-and purposes of individual legislators is held incompetent.[60] Consideration given to subject-matter by a state legislature is held immaterial when a federal court is considering the act.[61] Communications to the law-making body by other persons cannot be considered.[62]

*Official construction.*See 10 C. L. 1718—Practical construction of a statute by the officers charged with its enforcement may be considered [63] and given more or less weight, according to circumstances,[64] but this rule is inapplicable where the language of the statute is plain [65] and the official construction is in violation of it.[66]

Construction placed by courts of other countries on similar provisions of law may be considered.[67]

Contemporaneous construction See 10 C. L. 1718 placed on the statute at the time of enactment, and soon thereafter, is entitled to great weight.[68]

Legislative construction See 10 C. L. 1718 of a statute is entitled to weight but is not conclusive.[69]

Common law.[70]—All statutes capable of more than one construction are to be examined in the light of common-law principles.[71] When a statute is merely defect of constitutional provision as to local and special laws. People v. Wilcox, 237 Ill. 421, 86 NE 672.

60. Opinions of individual legislators, remarks on passage of act, debates, motives and purposes of individual legislators, or intention of draughtsman of act, are held too uncertain to be considered. Tennant v. Kuhlemeier [Iowa] 120 NW 689. Code commission being mere draughtsman, its intent, though admissible, cannot control legislative intent as shown in act finally adopted. Id.

Co., 81 Vt. 508, 71 A 197. Where statute is ambiguous, long-continued practical construction of it by authorities charged with its execution will be given great weight. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 193 N. Y. 543, 86 NE 565. Penal statute should not be construed in manner different from that adopted by attorney general, upon whose opinion respondent relied, unless clear and unambiguous language so requires. State v. Hay [Wash.] 99 P 748. Construction placed on statute by attorney general's department, on which defendant acted, followed by court. State v. Brady [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 895. Federal supreme court followed construction placed by land department on swamp land laws applicable to Louisiana. Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 53 Law. Ed. 92. Opinion of interstate commerce commission on interstate commerce act and its interpretation, entitled to great weight. Greenwald v. Weir, 130 App. Div. 696, 115 NYS 311.

64. Practical construction entitled to more or less weight, according to circumstances when long continued, as for 50 years, it is entitled to controlling weight. State v. Frear [Wis.] 120 NW 216.

65. The rule that contemporaneous, long, uniform and practical construction by administrative officers of statute will be followed by court, inapplicable, where statute was not doubtful and no practical construction of it was shown. Burton Co. v. Chicago, 236 Ill. 383, 86 NE 93.

claratory of the common law, it is to be construed as near to the reason and rule of the common law as may be.[72] Statutes intended to remedy defects in or supersede the common law must be read and construed in the light of that law.[73] Where words of a definite signification under the common law are used in such statutes, and there is nothing to show they are used in a different sense, they are deemed to be employed in their known and defined common-law meaning.[74]

Statutes adopted from other states or countries See 10 C. L. 1719 are presumed to have been adopted with the judicial construction which has been there previously placed upon them.[75]

Re-enactment statutes. See 10 C. L. 1719—Where a statute is substantially re-enacted, it is presumed to have been re-enacted in view of the previous judicial interpretation of it,[76] if there has been such interpretation,[77] unless the language used shows a contrary intent.[78] Similarly, where a term used in a statute has been construed by appellate courts of the state, it will be understood to have been used as construed by the courts.[79] A change in the language of a statute indicates, of course, an intent to change the meaning.[80] A statute should be construed with respect to a limitation impressed upon its operation by its original title, notwithstanding its re-enactment as part of a practice act.[81]

Where statute is re-enacted in Code unchanged, after judicial construction, it will be presumed that such construction was correct and effectuated legislative intent. State v. Branner, 149 N. C. 559, 63 SE 84. The re-enactment of a statute without change is, in the absence of weighty evidence to the contrary, an adoption of previous judicial construction. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. Where provision of practice act is re-enacted in same language in a code, presumption is that legislature intended it to have same meaning as it had been construed by courts to have in practice act. State Commission in Lunacy v. Welch [Cal.] 99 P 181.

77. Cannot be assumed that legislature, in re-enacting statute, adopted a judicial construction which was unknown to state officials, state's counsel and members of court. Inference must rather be that law was not construed as claimed, but in accordance with views of officials. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387.

83. Acts passed on same day, separately, or at same session, are to be construed together, presumption being that they are all intended to operate, and may not be revoked or altered by construction, when the words may have their proper operation without it. Trapp v. Wells Fargo Exp. Co. [Okl.] 97 P 1003. Laws 1903, p. 1424, c. 627, is general law, amending Laws 1893, p. 462, c. 238, also general law, both relating to railroads, former should be construed with general railroad law, in harmony therewith if possible. In re New York, W. & B. R. Co., 193 N. Y. 72, 85 NE 1014.

84. Statute to be construed as part of system, not alone. Co-ordinate rules and statutes to be considered. Minnich v. Packard [Ind. App.] 85 NE 787. Where one statute confers limited jurisdiction over offenses generally and another larger jurisdiction over specified offenses, the latter must be given effect according to its terms, and both must stand together, one as law of general subject and other as law of special offense. State v. Stanley [Vt.] 71 A 817. A statute should be so read and applied as to make it accord with the spirit, purposes and objects of the general system of law of which it forms a part. Presumption is that legislature knew existing law and intended statute to harmonize with it. State v. Snyder [W. Va.] 63 SE 385. All laws upon a subject or germane to it should be construed together so that all may be given effect as parts of a harmonious whole, and legislature will be presumed to have enacted laws with reference to those already in existence. Ensley v. State [Ind.] 88 NE 62. All statutes which are consistent and can stand together, though enacted at different dates, relating to same subject, are treated prospectively and construed together as though constituting one. In re Kreiner [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 110, 120 NW 785. Amending statutes are to be construed as a part of the acts amended, and both are to be construed as a part of the same statutory scheme. In re Klein's Estate, 152 Mich. 420, 15 Det. Leg. N. 230, 116 NW 394. Words given usual ordinary meaning unless contrary intent clearly appears. Booker v. Castillo [Cal.] 98 P 1067. It will be assumed that words were used in accustomed and approved sense, and that if some other meaning was intended, some other appropriate expression would have been used. Town of Southington v. Southington Water Co., 80 Conn. 646, 69 A 1023. Words should be taken in ordinary sense and given such force as will effectuate legislative purpose. City of New York v. Manhattan R. Co., 192 N. Y. 90, 84 NE 745. Words to be construed in plain, popular and usual meaning, unless this would defeat legislative intent. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215. Prima facie, the word "child," or "children," or other terms of kindred, means legitimate child, children or kindred only, not illegitimate. Jackson v. Hocke [Ind.] 84 NE 830. "Operation" is a a well understood technical meaning,[89] and unless the intention to give them some special or unusual significance clearly appears.[90] Words of doubtful meaning are to be construed with the context [91] and in accordance with the legislative purpose [92] and intent [93] as shown by the entire statute.[94] Words having a well settled meaning in the law are to be given that meaning in the absence of evidence of a contrary intention.[95] It is presumed that the legislature intended what the language used expresses,[96] and the language cannot be changed or given a different meaning by construction [97] if a reasonable and just result can be reached. But a statute need not be read literally when to do so would render it senseless [98] or absurd,[99] or defeat the evident legislative intent.[1] Thus, when necessary to effectuate the intention of the lawmakers, plain clerical errors may be corrected,[2] and words inaptly or incorrectly used may be changed [3] or given an extended meaning.*

"thing" within the letter and spirit of the statute, "thing" being a comprehensive term as used in U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2658. United States v. Somers, 164 F 259. Words "provide" and "select," as used in statute relating to school supplies, are not synonymous. Act March 15, 1906, p. 432, c. 248, and Acts 1906, pp. 513, 515, c. 293. Commonwealth v. Norfolk School Board [Va.] 63 SE 1081. "In the same manner," as used in Act of Congress March 3, 1905, held not to include time. Porter v. Brook [Okl.] 97 P 645.

"Passenger train" and "regular passenger train" have no technical meaning, within Rev. St. 1899, § 4160, and hence are to be taken in ordinary sense. State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 117 SW 1173.

90. Words of a statute are to be taken in ordinary meaning (Pub. St. 1901, c. 2, § 2), in absence of evidence that they have attained special significance in law. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 44 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. A legislative investigation duly authorized in the courss and in aid of ordinary legislative business does not create a debt within the meaning of Const. § 8, art. 8, restricting manner of creating debt. State v. Frear [Wis.] 119 NW 894. The term "debt" as used in § 8, art. 8, of the state constitution, does not refer to mere ordinary legislative expenses, but refers to matters of the sort mentioned in the preceding § 6. Id.

91. Words used to be construed in connection with context. Rohlf v. Kasemeier [Iowa] 118 NW 276.

92. Words of doubtful meaning are to be construed with context and in accordance with legislative purpose. State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 117 SW 1173.

94. Legislative intent as shown by entire statute controls in ascertaining meaning of word, though its use is inappropriate. People v. Willison, 237 Ill. 584, 86 NE 1094.

95. Where a term or word is not defined by statute, the court must look to its common-law meaning. State v. Shepperd [Mo.] 117 SW 1169. Words having a precise and well settled meaning in the jurisprudence of a country are to be understood in the same sense when used in a statute, unless a contrary intent is clearly shown. Loewy v. Gordon, 129 App. Div. 459, 114 NYS 211. A word which is well known and has a fixed and definite meaning at common law will be restricted to that sense. Fort v. Brinkley [Ark.] 112 SW 1084.

96. Legislature must be presumed to have intended what language used expresses, when construed with context. Barron v. Kaufman [Ky.] 115 SW 787.

97. Words may neither be stricken out nor added if reasonable construction can be given language used. Nance v. Southern R. Co., 149 N. C. 366, 63 SE 116. Nothing can be added to or subtracted from statutory words of general scope and comprehension unless there is an adequate ground for the conclusion. Kunkalman v. Gibson [Ind.] 84 NE 985.

98. Where words taken in their literal sense render a statutory provision absurd and senseless, a more liberal construction must be given them. State v. People's Nat. Bank [N. H.] 70 A 542.

99. The interpolation of words by construction is allowable only when necessary to rescue an act from an absurdity, or to carry into effect a purpose obviously plain from the act as a whole. Barron v. Kaufman [Ky.] 115 SW 787.

1. A thing within the intention of the statute is within the statute, though an exact literal construction would exclude it. In re Low, 128 App. Div. 103, 112 NYS 619. In construing word "servant," courts have not consdered themselves bound by definitions of dictionaries, but have construed it to carry intent of legislature into effect. In re Caldwell, 164 F 515.

2. Insertion of word "not" in statute being clearly clerical error, statute was construed as though it were not there. Bobo v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Com'rs [Miss.] 46 S 819. Patent clerical error may be corrected when to refuse to do so would result in destroying entire law on subject. In re Barker [Ky.] 116 SW 686. Where amendatory act by mistake referred to wrong section of statute amended, error was corrected. Id.

3. Inapt words may be disregarded and act should be construed and intent gathered from entire act, read in connection with title and evident purpose. St. Louis, etc., R. C. v. State [Ark.] 112 SW 150. Term "paragraph" will be construed to mean

Grammatical rules of construction should be considered and applied with other rules where there is no conflict between them, and effect given to all.[5] They are not controlling where an intent in conflict with them is disclosed,[6] but they are not unimportant and may influence a doubtful case,[7] and where there is nothing out of accord therewith, either in the particular language or general intent of the act, they are of controlling force.[8]

General words in a statute are not to be construed as imposing a liability on the state.[9] Where the intention can be ascertained from the language of an enactment, the court will not consider itself bound to follow the words last used.[10]

(§ 5) E. Exceptions, provisos, conditions and saving clauses.[11] See 10 C. L. 1720 The office of a proviso is to limit the operation of the enactment[12] by excluding therefrom something which might otherwise come within its scope,[13] and not to impair or destroy the main purpose or to enlarge the meaning or effect of the statute to which it is added.[14] Provisos are often inserted out of an abundance of caution, to preclude a possible construction at variance with the legislative intent, and where such a purpose is apparent, they are to be construed strictly, and their scope limited to avoid a result manifestly not in harmony with the legislative intent.[15] But a plain and unambiguous exception must be given effect according to its terms, though the principal clause is thereby rendered meaningless or ineffective.[16] Provisos of exemption in penal statutes are liberally construed.[17] Though a proviso is void and unenforcible, it cannot be disregarded in construing the section to which it is attached.[18] The general intent of an enacting clause will be controlled by the particular intent subsequently expressed in a proviso or exception.[19] Ordinarily, a proviso affects only the section to which it is attached.[20] But where it plainly appears from a consideration of the entire act that the provision was intended as an independent enactment, it will be so construed without reference to the limitations of the preceding portions of the section to which it is apparently a proviso.[21]

"section" when to do so will effectuate legislative intent. Alfrey v. Colbert [C. C. A.] 168 F 231. "Or" any be read "and" when legislative intent requires it. James v. U. S. Fidelity & Guar. Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 406. Whenever it is clear that either of the words "or" or "and" has been mistakenly used for the other, the word intended will be substituted for the one mistakenly used so as to carry out the legislative intent. Not that one word ever has meaning of other, but that evident mistake may be corrected. State v. Hooker [Okl.] 98 P 964.

4. Female minor may have disabilities as minor removed, under Rev. St. 1935, art. 3499, etc., though statute uses words "he" and "his," in view of rule of construction in Final Title, § 3, of revised statutes and art. 3268, cls. 3, 6. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Wheeler [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 83.

Provisos and exceptions are intended to restrain the enacting clause, to except something which would otherwise be within its terms. State v. Barrett [Ind.] 87 NE 7.

15. State v. Twin City Tel. Co., 104 Minn. 270, 116 NW 835. Provisos appended to statutory enactments will be construed in accordance with their general purpose, which is to take something out of the enacting clause which might otherwise come within its scope. Moody v. Brasie, 104 Minn. 463, 116 NW 941. Proviso to Laws 1905, § 17, c. 230, p. 321, held to authorize payment on drainage contracts without approval of county commissioners. Id. Statutes general in their terms are frequently construed to admit implied exceptions.[22]

(§ 5) F. Mandatory or directory acts.[23]—See 10 C. L. 1721—Statutory prescriptions in regard to the time, form and mode of proceedings by public functionaries are generally directory, as they are not of the essence of the thing to be done.[24] But where a statute gives a right or provides a remedy, the manner provided in the statute whereby the right may be acquired must be strictly followed.[25] The word "may" usually denotes discretion or permission, but its use is not decisive of the question whether a statute is mandatory.[26] It is sometimes equivalent to "must" or "shall," and is then mandatory.[27] Its meaning in a particular case depends upon the legislative intent as shown by the entire act.[28] The word "may" will be construed to mean "shall" whenever the rights of the public or third persons depend upon the exercise of the power or performance of the duty to which it refers,[29] and such is its meaning in all cases where public interest and rights are concerned, or a public duty is imposed upon public officers, and the public or third persons have a claim de jure that the power shall be exercised.[30]

(§ 5) G. Strict or liberal constructions.[31]—See 10 C. L. 1721—Strict construction means a close and conservative adherence to the letter of the statute and leads to the exclusion of cases not clearly within its terms.[32] Statutes liberally construed may be extended to include cases within the mischief sought to be remedied, unless such construction does violence to the language used.[33] A statute may be remedial as to some, and penal as to other, persons included within its terms.[34] Statutes which provide a penalty recoverable by the party aggrieved are in many cases construed as remedial as well as penal.[35] Such statutes are to be construed strictly on account of the penalty and liberally to prevent the mischief aimed at by the act and to advance the remedy thereby given.[36]

Penal statutes.[See 10 C. L. 1722]—A penal statute is one which inflicts a forfeiture for violation of its provisions.[37] It involves the idea of punishment and its character is not changed by the mode in which it is inflicted, whether by civil or criminal procedure.[38] Penal statutes are, as a general rule, to be strictly construed,[39] and cannot be extended by construction to include persons or things not clearly included by their terms.[40] But the rule of strict construction is subject to the qualification that the legislative intent is to be ascertained and given effect,[41]

Prather [Kan.] 100 P 57. Criminal statutes must be strictly construed to avoid the creation of penalties by construction. Groff v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 769. Statutes penal in nature should not be extended by construction beyond their natural meaning. Independent School Dist. No. 5 v. Collins [Idaho] 98 P 857. One cannot recover penalty without bringing himself strictly within terms of statute and showing compliance therewith. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. McClerkin [Ark.] 114 SW 240. Penal statutes strictly construed; one seeking to recover penalty must bring case clearly within meaning and language of law. Cox v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 148 N. C. 459, 62 SE 556. Penal statutes cannot be extended by construction to meet the gravity of a particular offense. Hatton v. State [Miss.] 46 S 708. Criminal statutes should never be construed so as to catch those who have honestly conformed to the law as it has been expounded by the proper authorities, and, where the court of appeals has held a certain thing allowable under a statute, refined distinctions should not be drawn so as to include persons within statute who have relied on the judicial construction. Commonwealth v. Standard Oil Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 902. Operation and scope of criminal laws should not be enlarged by implication; where there is any well-founded doubt as to any act being a public offense, especially when not malum in se, it should not be declared such. McCord v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 101 P 280. One who was not beyond reasonable doubt within the class by the express terms of the statute may not be brought within it after the event by interpretation. Ex post facto law by judicial construction as pernicious as ex post facto legislation. Martin v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 168 F 198. In construing penal statute, courts will not go beyond clear meaning and purpose of statute and attempt to spell out creation of new offense not clearly indicated by ordinary meaning of words used. People v. Briggs, 193 N. Y. 457, 86 NE 522; People v. Weinstock, 193 N. Y. 481, 86 NE 547.

41. Such reasonable view must be taken as will effectuate the intent and purpose of the act. Groff v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 769. A penal statute or one in derogation of common law, though to be strictly construed, should not be hedged in to less than the legislative intent if that be clearly revealed by act as whole. Wabash R. Co. v. U. S.

and, where the statute is perfectly clear, there is no room for construction.[42] The rule of strict construction is modified by statute in some states.[43] Where there is doubt as to the construction of conflicting provisions of a criminal statute, that interpretation should be given which best protects the rights of the accused to a trial according to the common law.[44]

Statutes changing common law. See 10 C. L. 1722—Statutes in derogation of the common law,[45] or which create new disabilities,[46] or which impose restrictions upon personal or property rights,[47] or grant new rights and privileges,[48] are to be strictly construed. A statute which affords a remedy supplying defects in the common or statutory law is penal,[49] the only exception to this rule being where a statute provides for more than actual compensations, such as double or treble recovery for the commission of some wrong which would have given the party injured a cause of action at common law for actual compensation. In such cases the statute allows the party no cause of action for a newly-created offense.[50]

Tax laws are to be construed strictly,[51] and in case of doubt or ambiguity every intendment is against the taxing power.[52] The rule of strict construction extends to exemptions as well as to impositions.[53] Statutory provisions relating to special assessments are strictly enforced, but those relating to general taxes are liberally construed when an irregularity complained of has not been prejudicial.[54] A stat-

Rule of strict construction of penal statutes is subject to qualification that legislative intent is to be ascertained, and statute is not to be too narrowly or broadly construed, but legislative design is to be carried out. Mills v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 238.

45. Statute in derogation of common law should be strictly construed, as one permitting a summary proceeding. Bank of North Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N. C. 594, 61 SE 570. Statutes highly penal in character, in derogation of the common law, are to be strictly construed and not extended by construction. Acts 1905, p. 73, c. 50, requiring certain duties of coal mining corporations for benefit of miners, held penal in character. Sourwine v. McRoy Clay Works [Ind. App.] 85 NE 782.

46. A statute creating a liability not before existing ought not to be extended to include others than those designated or fairly within its terms. Alexander v. Crosby [Iowa] 119 NW 717.

47. Statutes restricting private rights of person or property should be strictly construed in favor of citizens. Nance v. Southern R. Co., 149 N. C. 366, 63 SE 116. A law placing a privilege or occupation tax on the business of plumbers is in the nature of an abridgment of personal liberty and should receive strictest construction. Wilby v. State [Miss.] 47 S 465. Laws restrictive of common rights are strictly construed; do not apply to persons not named. Ex parte Dillin, 160 F 751.

48. Where a statute gives a new right or privilege under certain circumstances, conditions, or qualifications, the party claiming such right must bring himself within the requirement of the statute by his pleading. Gillespie v. Fulton Oil & Gas Co., 236 Ill. 188, 86 NE 219. When a statute giving a privilege unknown to the common law, or enlarging a privilege, authorizes something to be done in the manner therein described, it by necessary implication forbids that it shall be done in any other way, though that other would be just as good or better. ute for the raising of revenue, though accompanied by provisions of a highly penal nature, is still to be construed as a whole and in a fair and reasonable manner and not strictly in favor of a defendant.[55]

Remedial statutes.[See 10 C. L. 1722]—Remedial statutes,[56] such as those relating to judicial procedure,[57] are to be construed liberally to effectuate their purpose [58] as to all persons who come within their terms,[59] but when in derogation of common law, strict construction is the rule in determining what persons are within their terms.[60]

(§ 5) H. Partial invalidity.[61]—[See 10 C. L. 1722]—If invalid portions of an act are separable from the valid portions,[62] so that the latter are enforcible alone,[63] and it may be presumed that the legislature would have passed the valid portions in any case,[64] the valid portions may be sustained and the invalid portions stricken.

Laws, § 6235, authorizing recovery of penalty by shippers aggrieved by violation by carriers of duty to transport freight are not penal, but remedial statute. Robinson v. Harmon [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 713, 117 NW 664. Rev. St. 1899, § 2864, giving right of action for penalty for death caused by negligence in management of trains, is penal; §§ 2865, 2866, giving right of action for death by wrongful or negligent act, is remedial. Crohn v. Kansas City Home Tel. Co., 131 Mo. App. 313, 109 SW 1068.

57. Codes are to be liberally construed, but not so liberally as to destroy the effect of provisions therein. State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct. [Mont.] 99 P 139. Purpose of code was to simplify practice, and it must, by its own provision, be liberally construed. State v. Clallam County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 100 P 155. Statutes making duly authenticated copies of records admissible in evidence are to be given reasonable, if not liberal, construction. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003. Remedial statute, as to pleading and procedure, should be liberally construed, so as to permit court to bring parties to an issue. Asheville Land Co. v. Lange [N. C.] 63 SE 164. All statutes making provisions in aid of appeals are to be liberally construed and applied. Mitchell v. California & O. S. S. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 202. Statutes giving right of appeal should be liberally construed in furtherance of justice. Should be construed to give equal rights to both parties. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390. 63. Severable provision may be upheld though others invalid. Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45, 53 Law. Ed. 81. If the elimination of the invalid portion of a statute will leave the remainder complete in itself, sensible, and capable of being executed against all alike, the remainder will be enforced. State v. Barrett [Ind.] 87 NE 7. In determining whether a statute partially invalid may be upheld as to the balance, the test should be the sufficiency for practical working purposes of the portion of the act remaining after the constitution has been applied. Oliver v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 238. Where parts of law, viewed by themselves, are invalid, and other parts so viewed are not, former may be condemned and latter upheld, if they are separable, otherwise not. If act, as whole, has one or more features pervading entire act, it must be regarded as an entirety and all be condemned. Bonnett v. Tallier, 136 Wis. 193, 116 NW 885.

Invalidity of provisions in railroad commission statute relative to disposition of fines and penalties recovered, and for suspension or remission of fines, held not to affect validity of rest of act. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 969. Criminal feature of Acts 1900, p. 170, could be dropped and balance of act (stock law) be held valid. Thornton v. Bramlett [Ala.] 46 S 577. Where an act amending charter of town provided for condemnation of land for furnishing water to inhabitants of town and to others, the private and public uses were not separable, and provision being invalid as to private purpose, entire act was void. Miller v. Pulaski [Va.] 63 SE 880. An act requiring railroad companies to keep water-closets at depots in sanitary condition is valid when applied to existing water-closets, but invalid as to requirement for construction of such closets, no reasonable time for construction being allowed. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. State [Tex.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 462, 107 SW 525. Acts 1897, p. 85, the object of which is to authorize and confirm bond issues by counties, is valid as to that purpose, though § 8, which alone refers to elections already held, should be held, invalid. Lippitt v. Albany, 131 Ga. 629, 63 SE 33. Provisions of act regulating pharmacists and sale of poisons, making pharmacy association only informers, if invalid, do not render void the other provisions of the act. Bertram v. Com., 108 Va. 902, 62 SE 969. Invalidity of § 2 of Senate Bill No. 152 of 10th Legislature does not affect validity of rest of bill, creating judicial district. Knight v. Trigg [Idaho] 100 P 1060. Laws 1902, c. 3, § 64, required domestic corporations to pay annual license tax and § 65 required foreign corporations to pass tax twice as large, and act was held invalid as to foreign corporations and was repealed and re-enacted, making tax same for both, a section of later act providing that repeal should not affect penalties which had accrued under former act. Held this saving clause showed that valid part of act of 1902 would have been passed in any case, and hence invalidity of portion relating to foreign corporations did not affect validity of portion relating to domestic corporations. Ohio-Colorado Min. & Mill. Co. v. Elder [Colo.] 99 P 42. Primary Law of 1907 could be held valid as to remainder though §§ 30, 31 or §§ 7, 9, 10, 24, 36, and others relating to nomination of representatives and senators, were held invalid. State v. Nichols, 50 Wash. 508, 97 P 728. Partial invalidity of statute held not to render all void (statute authorizing dissolution of banks, which violate law). People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo [Cal.] 97 P 306. Legislative apportionment acts of 1893, 1901, 1907, contain provisions establishing senatorial and representative districts, and also recognition of new counties and their right to representation. Laws 1903, p. 308, c. 132, § 2, authorizing suit for injunction and damages where one's picture is used for advertising purposes without the written consent of the person, or his parent, is valid so far as it regulates use of one's picture, though provision as to written consent may be invalid as restriction of personal rights. Wyatt v. James McCreery Co., 126 App. Div. 650, 111 NYS 86. Laws 1903, p. 308, c. 132, is valid in part though portion requiring written consent to permit use of photograph for advertising purposes be held void as unreasonable. Wyatt v. Wanamaker, 58 Misc. 429, 110 NYS 900. Acts 1907, p. 336, making railroad companies liable in damages for fires started by locomotives, is valid and enforcible as to that provision, though it should be held void as to other persons, or as to fires communicated by means other than locomotives. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Shore [Ark.] 117 SW 515. Laws 1907, Act No. 193, p. 453, requiring carriers to furnish cars to shippers when demanded, etc., may be upheld as to intrastate business (§ 1) though invalid as to interstate business (§ 17). Oliver v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 238. Provisions of Acts 1907, p. 1538, c. 460, concerning prevention of fires, etc., could be upheld, where § 4, authorizing investigations by insurance commissioner, to be condemned as providing for unlawful search and seizure. Rhinehart v. State [Tenn.] 117 SW 508. Invalidity of N. Y. Laws 1905, c. 736, and Laws 1906, c. 125, as to gas pressure and penalties, does not affect validity of other provisions as to gas rates. Wilcox v. Consolidated Gas Co., 212 U. S. 19, 53 Law. Ed. —. Those portions of Laws 1907, p. 495, c. 254, defining liability for injuries to railroad employes, which confer judicial powers on juries, and which attempt to extend rights and liabilities to injuries occurring in other states, are separable from remainder of act, and do not affect its validity. Kiley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 309. Provision for referendum in school law valid, though provision for use of voting machines at election of officers invalid. to have a retroactive effect, it will be so construed.[72] The mere fact that the language used is sufficiently broad to embrace matters existing at the time of the passage of the act will not alone give it a retrospective operation.[73]

The rule that statutes are presumed to have only a prospective operation does not apply to those affecting only remedies or modes of procedure.[74] A statute which is purely remedial, affording a new remedy without affecting or impairing existing rights, applies to proceedings begun after its passage, though relating to acts done previously.[75] Where a statute affecting a remedy will in a particular case operate to defeat or change a right, if given a retroactive effect, it will not be held applicable.[76] A statute of limitations will not be given a retroactive operation unless it appears by express provision or necessary implication that such was the legislative intent.[77] In an equity suit for injunctive relief, the rights of the plaintiff, where they depend upon a statute, are to be determined with reference to the statute in force at the time when relief, if any, is awarded.[78]

Ex post facto laws, and laws impairing contract obligations or vested rights, and limitations upon the power to enact them, are elsewhere discussed.[79]

Curative acts. See 10 C. L. 1724—A curative act is necessarily retrospective in character and undertakes to cure or validate errors or irregularities in legal or administrative proceedings or to give effect to contracts which have failed to comply with some technical requirement.[80] A curative act may be passed whenever the irregularity consists in the doing of an act, or the doing of it in such manner as the legislature might have made immaterial or authorized by prior law.[81] Such an act is necessarily special and is not objectionable on the ground of nonuniformity.[82] Retroactive, curative laws may heal irregularities in an action, but they cannot cure a want of authority to act at all,[83] and if the defects are jurisdictional or relate to substantive contract rights, they cannot ordinarily be cured by a healing act.[84] A curative statute validating evidences of indebtedness cannot create any original liability or cause of action.[85] A curative act cannot give life or validity to that which was void.[86] The application of a curative act depends upon its terms.[87] Generally speaking, the legislature may by subsequent acts validate and confirm previous acts of a corporation otherwise invalid.[88]

§ 7. Repeal. A. In general.[89]—See 10 C. L. 1724—A partial repeal may be effected by reference to title or section only.[90] The scope and effect of a repealing act, and the extent to which it operates as a repeal, depend, of course, upon its terms.[91] A clause repealing all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the repealing law operates only on laws repugnant to the repealing act.[92] A clause repealing all former acts within the purview of an act repeals only former statutes relating to cases covered in the body of the repealing act.[93] A repealing statute, though absolute in terms, and declared to be in full force and effect from the time of publication, as therein provided, may nevertheless continue in force, for some purposes and to some extent, the provisions of the statute repealed.[94] Where a provision is repealed by one law and re-enacted as part of another, it continues in force.[95] Where a statute repeals all acts in conflict with it and is intended as a substitute for a former act, and the substituted act is unconstitutional, the repealing clause is also void.[96] The annulment by congress of an act passed by a territorial legislature does not relate back to the time of enactment of the law. The act remains in force until congress has acted.[97] A special law applicable to a particular locality does not repeal a general law embracing such locality where the manifest intention of the legislature is merely to amend or broaden the scope of the general law.[98]

Effect. See 10 C. L. 1725—Existing rights and powers,[99] or liabilities or penalities,[1] and pending judicial proceedings,[2] are frequently taken out of the operation of a repeal by saving clauses. Where a repeal statute does not contain a saving clause, a general saving clause may apply.[3] A proviso or saving clause will be strictly construed and will not be held to embrace anything which is not fairly within its terms.[4] If a statute giving a special remedy is repealed without a saving clause in favor of pending suits, all suits thereunder must stop where the repeal finds them.[5] Where a statute repeals a law and saves the rights of the state, only the cause of action is saved, and it must be prosecuted under some other law than that repealed.[6]

The repeal of a law conferring jurisdiction See 10 C. L. 1725 takes away all right to proceed in all matters pending at the time of the repeal, unless there is a saving clause,[7] and this is true of appellate as well as original jurisdiction.[8]

Effect on vested rights. See 10 C. L. 1725—The repeal of a statute does not impair vested rights or existing contract obligations,[9] nor does it affect judgments theretofore regularly pronounced under the act repealed.[10]

Effect on crimes. See 10 C. L. 1725—One may be convicted for an offense committed before the repeal of the law creating it.[11]

But this effect was given the above statutes in view of § 1608 of the charter, which in effect throws back the provision of § 1482 to the time of the consolidation act, and § 2143 of the consolidation act, which declares that the penal code is to have the same effect as if passed subsequent to it (Id.), and in view of the fact that the provision of the penal code relating to the admission of children to theaters was passed subsequent to the consolidation act (Id.).

99. Acts 1907, p. 536, c. 5823, establishing municipality of city of Miami and giving it power to impose license taxes, was not repealed by the general act subsequently passed (Acts 1907, p. 41, § 5597) permitting license taxes by cities on express companies, not exceeding $50 in cities of 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants, since, though act contained general repeal clause, it expressly saved rights and powers conferred by special charter. Curry v. Lehman, 55 Fla. 847, 47 S 18.

17. Repeals by implication are not favored and will never be presumed where old and new statute may well stand together. State v. Hatch [Conn.] 72 A 575. Repeals by implication are not favored, and one statute will not be held to have repealed another if the two can possibly be reconciled. Birch v. Steele [C. C. A.] 165 F 577. To be in conflict, there must be express conflicting provisions. There is no conflict where one is silent on matter as to which other speaks. City of St. Louis v. Klausmeier, 213 Mo. 119, 112 SW 516. To effect a repeal by implication on account of repugnancy, the repugnancy must not only be plain but the provisions of the two statutes must be incapable of any reasonable reconcilement. Pearson v. Mills Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 407. The doctrine of implied repeal can be invoked and applied only where there exists between the two statutes such a repugnancy that they cannot consistently stand together. State v. White [Ala.] 49 S 78; Heydecker v. Price, 136 Ill. App. 512.

18. Where they are irreconcible, and both cannot be given effect, the latest in point of time will prevail. Ayers v. Chicago, 239 Ill. 237, 87 NE 1073; Spurlin v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 128; Martin v. Ferguson, 33 Ky. L. R. 761, 111 SW 281; Commonwealth v. Internat. Harvester Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 703. Where statutes conflict in terms, the later prevails over the earlier, and the specific over the general. Jones v. Broadway one.[19] A subsequent statute covering the entire subject, and evidently intended as a substitute for existing laws, operates as a repeal of prior acts on the subject,[20] though there is no express repeal and no necessary repugnancy between the acts.[21] A re-enactment of a statute which omits provisions of the former statute operates as a repeal of the matter omitted,[22] but a statute is not repealed by its re-enactment, with a material change, by a later statute which does not expressly repeal the former one,[23] and the re-enactment of an existing statute in substantially the same words operates to continue it.[24] No contrary intention being expressed in the act adopting a code, all general statutes of a public nature in force when the code is adopted and promulgated, and not embraced therein, are repealed.[25] But the adoption of a code, prepared by a commission acting under instructions to omit obsolete or repealed laws, does not repeal former laws omitted from the code which had not been repealed or become obsolete.[26] In case of conflict between a general and special act, the special act will prevail,[27] and a general law will not impliedly repeal a special law previously enacted [28] unless the two are so glaringly

Roller Rink Co., 136 Wis. 595, 118 NW 170. If the two are irreconcilable, the one which was approved last will prevail, even if they took effect on the same day. State v. Marion County Com'rs [Ind.] 85 NE 513. Where two inconsistent statutes relating to same subject-matter, but passed at different times, are both incorporated into a general revision, the court, in construing them, will ascertain the dates of enactment and give effect to the latest expression of the legislature. State v. Hennepin County Dist. Ct. [Minn.] 120 NW 894. Any provision of the Civil Code is subject to a general law necessarily in conflict therewith subsequently passed, wherever that law may be placed. People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo [Cal.] 97 P 306. As to convict convicted of an offense committed after the indeterminate sentence law of 1897 took effect, that law repeals by implication the act of 1883 providing for diminution of time by good behavior. McCoy v. Reid [Ind.] 87 NE 1086.

Whether general or special. Hampton v. Hickey [Ark.] 114 SW 707. Where a statute is designed to create a new and independent system and is not merely cumulative of the common law or of existing statutes and disposes of the whole subject of legislation, such statute displaces the old system without an express repealing clause. § 1276 of Mansfield's Digest, in force in Indian Territory, held repealed by Act of Congress March 3, 1905. Porter v. Brook [Okl.] 97 P 645. The insertion in an act, intended as a revision and substitute for former acts, of the clause, "all acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed," does not change the general rule that such revising act repeals all former acts for which it is intended as substitute. Smock v. Farmers' Union State Bank [Okl.] 98 P 945. Laws 1905, c. 86, providing complete system of regulating automobiles, repeals Pub. St. 1901, c. 264, § 18, so far as latter makes automobile speeding offense against police of city. Rockingham County v. Chase [N. H.] 71 A 634. Gen. St. 1867, c. 251, §§ 10, 14, prohibiting fishing in certain waters, repealed by fish and game laws in Gen. Laws 1878, in view of legislative history. State v. Rolfe [N. H.] 72 A 691. Laws 1905, p. 713, c. 168, is repealed by Laws 1907, p. 154, c. 104 (pure food law), latter act covering same subject, being more comprehensive and creating new offenses and penalties. State v. Squibb, 170 Ind. 488, 84 NE 969.

28. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811. Special act will not be presumed to have been repealed by general act. State v. Clausen [Wash.] 99 743. Loc. Acts 1896-97, p. 514, not repealed by Gen. Acts 1907, p. 879. State v. White [Ala.] 49 S 78. A special and local statute providing for a particular case or class of cases is not affected by a statute, general in its terms, broad enough to include cases embraced in the special law, unless the intent to repeal or alter is manifest. State v. Hatch [Conn.] 72 A 575. Laws 1891, p. 108, general election law, repealing inconsistent acts, did not repeal Act April 25, 1889, relating to annexation of cities and villages by special petition and inconsistent [29] as to clearly manifest a legislative intent that the general act shall operate as a repeal.[30] A special statute operates to limit the effect of a prior general law from which it differs.[31] A constitutional provision requiring taxes to be levied by general laws does not repeal or make inoperative special laws previously passed.[32] In case of conflict between a statute and an ordinance, the statute must prevail.[33]

Repeal of common law. See 10 C. L. 1722—Statutes in derogation of the common law are construed strictly and as not operating to repeal prior law beyond their words or the clear repugnance of their provisions.[34] The common law on a given subject may be repealed by express words contained in the statute,[35] or, impliedly, by such repugnance in the two laws as indicates that they may not both operate together, or by such a revision of the whole subject matter as indicates an intent to substitute the statute for the prior law.[36] A subsequent statute revising the whole subject-matter of the former law, and evidently intended as a substitute for it, operates as a repeal,[37] and this doctrine applies with special force where, in the case of a criminal statute, not only the subject-matter is included, but the common-law offense is defined and enacted by a statute prescribing a penalty.[38] When the statute contains no express words of repeal, and the common law and a subsequent affirmative statute differ on a given subject, the common law gives place to or is repealed by the statute only when the matter is couched in exclusive words or in negative terms, or the matter of the statute is so clearly repugnant that it necessarily implies a negative.[39]

STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.[40]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[41]

Grounds for stay. See 10 C. L. 1726—The court may postpone the hearing of an action at law until after the hearing of a cause in chancery involving the same matters,[42] or when it appears that the same matter is a subject of litigation in another court.[43] While the actions and parties must be alike,[44] they need not be identielection, latter being special act. Village of East Springfield v. Springfield, 238 Ill. 534, 87 NE 349. Statute requiring certain street railway company to place tracks on roads and streets so as to leave 14-foot space for vehicles, not repealed by later general act giving county commissioners power to compel railway companies to change character and location of tracks. Anne Arundel County Com'rs v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 72 A 542.

42. Vaughan v. Brooke, 153 Mich. 478, 15 Det. Leg. N. 537, 116 NW 1086.

43. One party brought action to cancel lease and the other then brought action for rent under lease in municipal court. Held that injunction staying latter action should issue upon undertaking being given and approved for payment of rent in case cancel-

cal in all respects.[45] In a court of record, a second action may be stayed in the discretion of the court until the costs of the former trial on the same matter have been paid,[46] whether such second action be brought prior or subsequent to the award of costs in the first,[47] unless the remedies sought are different;[48] but there is no authority for granting such stay in the municipal court of New York.[49] No stay not necessary for the protection of the parties should be granted.[50]

Power to grant. See 10 C. L. 1727—All courts, whether of law or equity, possess inherent power to stay proceedings before them to the end that abuse, oppression and injustice may be prevented.[51] Where two tribunals have equal jurisdiction, a stay should be granted in the court in which the action was last brought.[52] A federal court of equity may enjoin an infringement on property rights by criminal proceeding threatened to be brought in the state court,[53] the procedure in such case being an injunction against the litigant actors in the criminal action, such being the only way by which a court of equity may stay proceedings in a court of law.[54] The bankruptcy court after adjudication has power, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the district court,[55] to stay proceedings by a restraining order, during the statutory period and pending bankruptcy, upon claims which are provable,[56] unless it be a matter wherein the trustee is not concerned,[57] but this power is permissive and not mandatory.[58]

lation of lease should be denied. Van Riempst v. Weiher, 116 NYS 218. Federal court will stay its own proceedings where complainant subsequently sues in state court in regard to same matter, but it will later determine any question remaining undermined by state court. Vowinckel v. Clark, 162 F 991.

44. Subsequent action for same debt will not be stayed where parties and evidence of debt are different. Brown v. Kight, 63 Misc. 58, 116 NYS 592.

45. Since law looks to substance of things, postponment is matter of convenience in practice and not always of strict right. De La Vergne Mach. Co. v. New York & Brooklyn Brew. Co., 125 App. Div. 649, 110 NYS 24.

46. Under Comp. St. § 9992. Clark v. Bay Circuit Judge, 154 Mich. 483, 15 Det. Leg. N. 811, 117 NW 1051; City council of Montgomery v. Shirley [Ala.] 48 S 679.

47. First action was dismissed for want of prosecution. Ryan v. Benjamin, 128 App. Div. 51, 112 NYS 441; Conlon v. National Fireproofing Co., 128 App. Div. 270, 112 NYS 652.

48. The former being an action in equity, the latter an action at law, no stay granted. Maass v. Rosenthal, 62 Misc. 350, 115 NYS 4.

49. Since Code Civ. Proc. § 779 has no application to the municipal court, being limited to courts of record by subd. 6 of § 3347. Hirschfield v. Hassett, 59 Misc. 154, 110 NYS 264; Roth v. Wallach, 59 Misc. 515, 110 NYS 934; Goldman v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 657, 114 NYS 182.

50. Under Const. art. 6, § 5, and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1310, 1343, 1344, 3188, regulating appeals from the city court of New York, a special term of the supreme court cannot stay on motion a judgment regularly entered in the city court and affirmed by the appellate term. Stern v. Barrett Chemical Co., 124 App. Div. 377, 108 NYS 811.

51. Where a court, having jurisdiction both at law and in equity, stays a law action pending before it in order that the whole controversy may be settled in an equity suit also pending before it, such stay was an injunction, and was appealable. Griesa v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 48.

52. The supreme court will entertain jurisdiction if matters are involved of which surrogate court does not have jurisdiction; otherwise not. In re Farrell, 125 App. Div. 702, 110 NYS 41.

53. Held not in conflict with prohibition against federal court issuing an injunction to stay proceedings in state court (§ 720, Rev. St. U. S. [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 581]), or enjoining state (eleventh amendment to constitution), and to be a justifiable exception to general rule that courts of equity cannot enjoin criminal proceedings. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas. Co., 162 F 954.

54. Injunctive power is invoked in such case, though words "restrain and enjoin" be not used. Griesa v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 48.

55. Construing § 11 (30 Stat. 549 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3426]) and § 2, subd. 15 (30 Stat. 546 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3421]). Beekman Lumber Co. v. Acme Harvester Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 1087.

56. Creditor commencing suit in inferior court and refusing to obey order of referee as to stay was adjudged guilty of contempt. In re Mustin, 165 F 506.

57. Where a bond was given pending suit, that any judgment obtained would be paid, subsequent bankruptcy of defendant is not ground for stay of such action, the trustee having no interest in surety bond given, and such stay not being required under § 11 of the bankruptcy act (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3426), and the state practice in New York applying. In re Mercedes Import. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 427.

58. Construing Bankr. Act, July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 11, 30 Stat. 549 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3426), providing that such stay may

Proceedings to obtain a stay. See 10 C. L. 1727—An order of a municipal court granting a stay for a longer period than permitted by law is without force,[59] and no order granting a stay in such court is appealable.[60]

Effect of stay. See 8 C. L. 2000—An injunction to stay legal proceedings does not operate upon the court but upon the parties to the litigation.[61] At the end of the time or fulfillment of the condition terminating stay, plaintiff is entitled to trial without notice to the defendant.[62]

Waiver of stay. See 6 C. L. 2001—The right to a stay of the prosecution of claims against a bankrupt is waived unless the stay be applied for.[63]

STEAM.[64]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[65]

In an action for injuries caused by a boiler explosion, evidence of prior explosions and conditions is admissible to show the condition of the boiler at the time of the accident, as is also evidence of condition shortly after the accident.[66]

STENOGRAPHERS.[67]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[68]

The Texas statute providing for the appointment of stenographers has been held valid.[69] A court has inherent power to select and appoint its own stenographers [70] and fix their compensation,[71] and such compensation becomes a charge against the state as a liquidated claim.[72]

It is the duty of an official stenographer to furnish a transcript of his notes in narrative form when requested by a party to the suit,[73] and if he refuses, he may be compelled to do so,[74] but having rendered such service, he is entitled to compensation.[75] A stenographer employed by a referee may recover fees from either be granted. Feigenspan v. McDonnell, 201 Mass. 341, 67 NE 624.

59. Municipal Ct. Act (Laws 1902, p. 1486, c. 580) limits stay to five days, but where defendant relied on invalid stay, he should be granted relief. Goldstein v. Rosenthal, 113 NYS 1012; Sowden & Co. v. Murray, 114 NYS 164.

60. Granted for nonpayment of costs in municipal court. Hirschfield v. Hassett, 59 Misc. 154, 110 NYS 264; Roth v. Wallach, 59 Misc. 515, 110 NYS 934.

62. Judgment had by default. Tuska v. Jarvis, 61 Misc. 224, 113 NYS 767.

63. Mere adjudication of bankruptcy does not operate as stay against prosecution of claim, but order of stay may be obtained by application therefor to state courts. Under provisions of Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 11, 30 Stat. 549 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3426), especially where property levied on would not pass to trustee. Maas v. Kuhn, 130 App. Div. 68, 114 NYS 444.

69. Title of acts 30th Legislature (Gen. Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24) does not contain more than one subject. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Stoker [Tex.] 113 SW 3.

70. State v. Cunningham [Mont.] 101 P 962.

71. Rev. Codes, § 262, authorizing the board of examiners to employ clerical help for any state affair or board, does not apply to supreme court stenographers, and therefore the said board has no authority to fix compensation of such stenographers. State v. Cunningham [Mont.] 101 P 962.

party to the reference,[78] but such fees must be reasonable.[77] A contract for furnishing a transcript of testimony which has been given does not include testimony thereafter to be taken.[78] If no authority is given by statute, traveling expenses cannot be collected.[79] Under a statute of Utah, a district judge may contract to pay a stenographer certain mileage without reference to the amount actually paid for such travel,[80] and if the state board of examiners refuse to pay such mileage, mandamus will lie.[81] Under a statute of Texas providing for the compensation of stenographers out of the fees collected and turned over to the county, a stenographer is entitled to such fees whether they are collected during his term of office or thereafter.[82] An official stenographer's appointment does not necessarily terminate with the death of the judge who made the appointment.[83]

STIPULATIONS.[84]

Right to Make and Form and Construction, 1962. | Enforcement and Effect, 1963.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[85]

Right to make and form and construction. See 10 C. L. 1728—A stipulation may be entered into by the agents of the parties.[86] Stipulation of counsel as to matters relating to the conduct of the case bind their clients,[87] but an oral stipulation which is not made in open court and entered of record is not enforcible.[88] The parties may by stipulation amend the pleadings,[89] waive the right to move to vacate,[90] substitute an agreed statement for findings,[91] present evidence on appeal,[92] or give to evidence a character which otherwise it would not have,[93] and they may, by stipulation, waive formalities,[94] or waive objections to evidence,[95] or substitute parties,[96] or stipulate as to matters relating to the entry of the judgment,[97] but they cannot establish rules of procedure.[98] A stipulation between parties litigant as to the constitutionality of a statute is void.[99] A stipulation should be so construed as to effectuate the object had in view.[1]

91. Quist v. Hill [Cal.] 99 P 204.

92. Parties stipulated that the transcript of evidence might be used by either on appeal without certificate from the judge. Held, although not the proper method, that neither party could complain if the court gave the stipulation effect. Houtz v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 99.

Enforcement and effect. See 10 C. L. 1729—A stipulation between attorneys relating to the conduct of the suit should be enforced unless good cause is shown to the contrary.[2] The express terms of a stipulation of facts bind the parties [3] and pre-

93. Affidavit of publisher attached to mailing lists of the paper containing the notice of assessment on insurance policy held prima facie evidence of the mailing and receipt of the notice because of the stipulation of facts. Underwood v. Modern Woodmen [Iowa] 119 NW 610. Parties stipulated that either party might read from abstract of title any instrument therein contained as if the loss of the original had been proven. Held that it did not permit appellant to read the instrument from the record without proof of the loss of the original. Whittaker v. Thayer [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 787.

94. Parties stipulated upon appeal to district court that no question would be raised as to whether the claim was a personal or official liability. In re Pope's Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 191.

95. Stipulation, whereby a case is submitted to a trial court upon a deposition, acts as a waiver to any objections to such deposition. Steele v. Crabtree [Iowa] 120 NW 720. Objections to a map offered as evidence held waived by stipulation. City of Victoria v. Victoria County [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 67.

96. One appointed as committee for an incompetent defendant is bound by his own stipulation substituting himself as defendant in lieu of the incompetent. Capen v. Delaney, 128 App. Div. 648, 113 NYS 50. Where a sheriff died pending suit for conversion, and by stipulation of the parties the deputy sheriff was substituted as sheriff and not as undersheriff, held that defendant could not object at the trial that the substitution was irregular. Dickinson v. Oliver [N. Y.] 88 NE 44.

97. Parties stipulated that the justice should have two weeks to make his decision after the receipt of last brief. Held decision was in time within the Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1486, c. 580). Beinert v. Tivoli & Co., 62 Misc. 616, 116 NYS 4.

98. Parties agreed that six separate actions involving the same facts should be tried at once. On appeal, the six judgments were brought up in a single transcript. Held that the stipulation could not be urged to change the rules of procedure in the court. Mobile Imp. & Bldg. Co. v. Stein [Ala.] 48 S 368. A federal court of equity will not permit the parties by stipulation to substitute state practice for the equity practice of that court. Stipulation of council that a ruling upon a formal demurrer to the answer should have the same effect as upon a demurrer to an answer in a law action will not be permitted. Vitzthum v. Large, 162 F 685.

99. Respondent admitted in argument that certain acts were unconstitutional. Held that the parties could not determine the validity of a statute but that it was a matter of law for the court to decide. State v. Schnitger, 16 Wyo. 479, 95 P 698.

1. A stipulation to suspend the sale of mortgaged property, until the commissioners of appraisal are appointed to determine the value of a portion of the property to be taken by the city, should not be disregarded. Mayer v. Jones, 132 App. Div. 106, 116 NYS 300. Held that the stipulation of the parties was not an agreed case supplanting the pleadings but that it pertained merely to the evidence on trial, as both parties amended their pleadings without regard to the stipulation. Clason v. Matko [Ariz.] 100 P 773. Plaintiffs agreed to a continuance on condition that they should not be required to pay further premiums pending the suit. Held that the stipulation did not entitle plaintiff's to have rules declared in the action by which future assessments should be made. Jones v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. [N. C.] 64 SE 166. Parties stipulated to a dismissal, but provided that the dismissal was with leave to reinstate the action at any time without notice. Held that it was not the intention of the parties to constitute a final disposition of the action. McGoodwin v. Lusterine Min. & Polishing Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 521, 110 SW 409. Parties stipulated that the rents accruing during foreclosure should "be held to abide the event of the action." Held that the intent of the stipulation was that the accrued rent should go to plaintiff if defendant was found personally liable for any deficiency. Rutherfurd Realty Co. v. Cook, 130 App. Div. 76, 114 NYS 274. Stipulation that a township included in a certain boundary was included in list of lands granted to state, under swamp land act (9 Stat. 519), held to refer only to township as property surveyed by government surveyors. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340. Stipulation of parties that one died seised of certain property held to mean seised in fee simple and that the legal definition would not apply. Hobson v. Huxtable, 79 Neb. 334, 116 NW 278. Where it is stipulated that all proper pleadings in assumpsit for recovery of commissions for sale of real estate should be considered, there is no necessity of a special count on the contract or of any other formal pleading. Tanner v. Clapp, 139 Ill. App. 353. A stipulation of the parties that a lien should be satisfied out of the judgment held to conclude the parties from questioning the validity of the lien. McCall v. Cohn, 113 NYS 540.

clude the denial of such facts [4] and any objection for want of proper pleadings.[5] If no agreement is made that the court may draw inferences of fact, all the elements required to establish the claim must be found in the stipulated facts.[6] A stipulation to the entry of a judgment waives the right of appeal therefrom,[7] and is a waiver of an alleged error in overruling a plea in abatement.[8] The court, in an action in which the parties are entitled to a jury trial, cannot make findings of fact and conclusions of law unless the stipulation of the parties so provide.[9] A stipulation that one of two actions was for a new judgment is binding in determining its effect on the other action, which was a scire facias proceeding.[10] A stipulation avoiding the announcement of an exception will not relieve counsel from making the necessary objections at proper times.[11] One who is bound by a stipulation cannot be heard to question its validity because there may have been others who might have questioned it.[12] A court cannot relieve one party from a stipulation, in whole or in part, and still leave the other party concluded and bound by it.[13] A court of equity will not specifically enforce a stipulation for judgment which does not contain all the compromise agreement.[14] A stipulation entered into during a trial is binding between the parties on a subsequent trial.[15] Absolute judgment is liable to be rendered against one on appeal if he stipulates to that effect.[16] A stipulation changing the forum from law to equity is binding upon the parties.[17] An ultra vires stipulation is ground for setting aside a judgment rendered by virtue of such stipulation.[18] A stipulation entered into in advance of the trial that the de-

4. One having entered into a stipulation of facts cannot later claim that the record did not show such facts. North v. Graham, 235 Ill. 178, 85 NE 267. A stipulation quieting title in plaintiff cannot later be attacked on the ground that the instrument under which plaintiff holds is not a deed but a mortgage. Armstrong v. Campbell [Iowa] 118 NW 898. Where a stipulation of facts in an action on an insurance policy referred to an assessment as having been made "for the month of October," the plaintiff will be estopped from denying that the assessment was not due in that month. Underwood v. Modern Woodmen [Iowa] 119 NW 610.

8. Forty-Acre Spring Live Stock Co. v. West Texas Bank & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 417.

9. Parties stipulated, after the evidence had been submitted to the jury and motion made for a directed verdict, that the court might submit the value of the property and determine the other questions as those of law. Held that the court had not the right to make findings of facts and conclusions of law. Lumley v. Miller [S. D.] 119 NW 1014.

10. Held that, according to the stipulation, the former action was one of debt on the judgment and therefore not ground to quash the writ of scire facias. Bick v. Dry [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1146.

11. Counsel stipulated that at all times when there was an adverse ruling of the court the counsel might have an understanding between themselves that in that case an exception be noted. Held that this stipulation did not include a general objection to all the evidence. State v. Bridgham [Wash.] 97 P 1096.

12. That a stipulation for the allowance of certain claims was not binding upon part of the heirs and creditors of a decedent's estate does not make it invalid as to those who executed it. In re McNamara's Estate, 154 Mich. 671, 15 Det. Leg. N. 924, 118 NW 598.

13. Held that an order permitting plaintiff to submit additional evidence, without giving defendant the opportunity to rebut such evidence was error. Adams v. Hartzell [N. D.] 119 NW 635.

14. Held that the stipulation omitted important features of the compromise scheme and that one of the parties had entered into the stipulation through mistake. Cook v. Newby, 213 Mo. 471, 112 SW 272.

15. Held not error for the court to refuse a charge to the effect that such stipulation was not binding in the subsequent trial. Combest v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 354.

16. Plaintiff appealed from the decision of the appellate division, which reversed the judgment and granted new trial, and stipulated that in case of affirmance judgment absolute should be rendered against him. The court of appeals, on finding against him, rendered judgment absolute. Tousey v. Hastings, 194 N. Y. 79, 86 NE 831.

17. Appellant estopped from avoiding the decree on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Darst v. Kirk, 132 Ill. App. 203.

18. Lower court was misled by void stipulation. People v. Santa Clara Lumber Co., 60 Misc. 150, 113 NYS 70.

fendants, if liable at all, are liable in solido, is binding upon the parties.[19] A stipulation amending the pleadings is not an admission of the correctness of the allegations.[20] The parties to a stipulation will be justified in relying on its performance.[21]

STREET RAILWAYS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[22]

§ 1. The franchise or license to operate a street railway and regulation of its exercise.[23]—See 10 C. L. 1730—A street railway company in New York must secure a certificate of public necessity and convenience.[24] The state, as trustee of the streets and highways, may prescribe the terms and conditions upon which they may be occupied,[25] and the consent of the local municipal authorities[26] is usually required.[27] Where municipal consent is a prerequisite, the city may impose a valid[28]

20. Therefore not a proper basis for a judgment. Phelan v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 113 NYS 35.

21. Pending a suit to establish and foreclose a mortgage, the mortgagee stipulated he would redeem the property from a tax sale, but bought it instead. Held that the mortgagor was the beneficial owner. Teich v. San Jose Safe Deposit Bank [Cal. App.] 97 P 167.

22. This topic is limited to the law of street railways, excluding their ordinary character as carriers (see Carriers, 11 C. L. 499), corporations (see Corporations, 11 C. L. 810), or employers (see Master and Servant, 12 C. L. 665), but including railways which though not upon streets or strictly urban, are more akin in the character of their public service to street railroads than to ordinary railroads (compare Railroads, 12 C. L. 1542).

24. Determination that public convenience did not require trolley line is not res judicata on subsequent application of another company. People v. Aldrigde, 126 App. Div. 484, 110 NYS 820. Trolley road which secured certificate of public convenience from commissioners in 1903, but which in 1906 had made so little progress that application to revoke charter was pending, has no claim to protection against granting certificate to a proposed parallel line. People v. Aldridge, 126 App. Div. 484, 110 NYS 820.

25. Laws 1901, p. 370, No. 238, giving interurban railways right to occupy highways under certain conditions, amending general railroad laws, Comp. Laws, c. 164, held unconstitutional as not germane to purposes expressed in title. Ecorse Tp. v. Jackson, etc., R. Co., 153 Mich. 393, 15 Det. Leg. N. 528, 117 NW 89.

26. Term "legislative authority of the city," as used in Laws 1903, p. 364, c. 175, as amended by Laws 1907, p. 192, c. 99, authorizing legislative authority of city to grant franchise, held to mean council and mayor, and ordinance passed by council and approved by mayor is effective, notwithstanding amendment to charter requiring submission to voters. Benton v. Seattle Elec. Co., 50 Wash. 156, 96 P 1033. Ordinance authorizing construction of second track, not submitted to mayor for approval as required by Act April 3, 1902, held a nullity. Specht v. Central Pass R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 356.

27. Company which has lost municipal consent to use street through failure to perform conditions imposed cannot, without municipal consent, use tracks of another. City of Erie v. Erie Trac. Co., 222 Pa. 43, 70 A 904.

28. Where restriction imposed is unlawful, it is invalid, but the location is legal. Se-and reasonable condition upon the granting of the same,[29] such as requiring the completion of the construction work within a designated period,[30] repair of streets,[31] etc., and a company cannot, while enjoying the benefits of a franchise, repudiate its burdens.[32] The granting of a municipal franchise is frequently conditioned upon the consent of property owners abutting on the street proposed to be occupied,[33] although such requirement does not apply where the street is vacated for the use of the company.[34] The city determines in the first instance whether such consent has been obtained,[35] and, where the consent of the requisite number has been duly given, it is immaterial that the consent of others was invalidly obtained.[36] An abutter consenting to the construction work being done,[37] or remaining silent while large sums of money are being expended,[38] cannot ordinarily enjoin its completion, and in all cases the public interests must be considered.[39] Except as owner of the fee in the street,[40] he cannot enjoin the maintenance of a public lectmen of Clinton v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 279, 85 NE 507.

29. City of Chicago held to have power to exact compensation for privilege of occupying street. Venner v. Chicago City R. Co., 236 Ill. 349, 86 NE 266. Ordinance granting privilege of occupying street and requiring company to pay city 55 per cent of net earnings held not invalid as making city and company partners in operation of system. Id. Ordinance granting franchise upon payment of 55 per cent of "net earnings," and providing for a board of supervising engineers to supervise re-equipment and operation, so far as necessary, to reach conclusion as to what net earnings would be, held not invalid as taking control of system from directors and delegating same to engineers. Id. Restriction requiring half fares for pupils attending schools, etc., imposed by town of Clinton as condition of granting location, held not affected by subsequent legislation, nor by St. 1887, p. 916, c. 284, organizing Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Company, which assumed burden of restriction when it purchased road to which location was given. Selectmen of Clinton v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 279, 85 NE 507.

30. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 3833, city may require completion within shorter time than that fixed by statute as a condition of its approval of plans. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942. Failure to complete within time fixed by city in order approving plans does not excuse company from thereafter so doing, and its lessee stands in its shoes in this respect. Id.

31. May require company to repave portion used with designated material. Village of Madison v. Alton, G. & St. Louis Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 346, 85 NE 596.

32. Since, under Pub. St. 1882, c. 113, § 2, et seq., lawful restrictions imposed by municipal authorities upon right to occupy streets are conditions precedent to granting of franchise to be a corporation. Selectmen of Clinton v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 279, 85 NE 507. Held, in view of Pub. St. 1882, c. 113, § 43, that municipal authorities, in granting location, could impose restrictions as to fares not unlawful in themselves and company accepting and organizing on basis of such restrictions could not question reasonableness (Id.), and especially where application is not made to railroad commissioner to have same modified (Id.).

33. Act April 21, 1896 (P. L. p. 329), giving municipal authorities power to grant franchise to occupy street upon consent of owners of one-half of abutting property, such consent was limitation belonging to abutters, regardless of ownership of fee. St. Columba's Church v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 692. Act April 21, 1896 (P. L. p. 329), prohibiting construction of street railroad without consent of one-half of abutters, etc., held to apply to original construction, and company could be given permission to construct second track without such consent. Specht v. Central Pass. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 356. Under Act 1903 (Laws 1903, p. 285), city may grant use of streets without consent of abutting owners, notwithstanding City and Village Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24), § 62, cl. 90, the former controlling. Venner v. Chicago City R. Co., 236 Ill. 349, 86 NE 266.

34. Tomlin v. Cedar Rapids & Iowa City R. & Light Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 93. And need not compensate abutting property owners. Id.

35. Where council held condition attached to consent void and passed ordinance granting franchise, abutter's remedy was to review by certiorari. St. Columba's Church v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 692.

36. Where company secured consent of two-thirds of abutters to occupy highway, as required by Comp. Laws, c. 164, § 51, art. 2, as amended by Laws 1901, p. 370, No. 238, without fraud, right is not affected by fact that consent of others was acquired by fraud. Ecorse Tp. v. Jackson, etc., R. Co., 153 Mich. 393, 15 Det. Leg. N. 528, 117 NW 89.

37. Words, "I know where you want to go, and go ahead and I will see you in a few days," held to show consent. Maust v. Pennsylvania & M. St. R. Co., 219 Pa. 568, 69 A 80.

38, 39. Maust v. Pennsylvania & M. St. R. Co., 219 Pa. 568, 69 A 80.

40. Bill by abutter to compel removal of tracks from street should show whether based upon ownership of fee in street or upon rights as an abutter. St. Columba's Church v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 692. Where it appears that company, nuisance unless he suffers special injury.[41] Subject to constitutional and statutory restrictions, a city and a street railway company may agree upon their mutual rights,[42] and, upon inability to do so, may appeal to the courts.[43] The right to occupy a street does not authorize the placing of unreasonable obstructions therein,[44] and as to what constitutes an unreasonable obstruction is a question of fact.[45] A franchise duly accepted by the company [46] and acted upon [47] becomes a contract,[48] and cannot ordinarily [49] be altered or changed [50] except by mutual agreement based upon a sufficient consideration.[51]

Rights and duties under franchise. See 10 C. L. 1734—The rights and duties of a street railway company are largely controlled by the terms of its franchise,[52] which without license from plaintiff, placed wires through trees upon her hand, held trespasser, in absence of proof of public authority. Bathgate v. North Jersey St. R. Co., 75 N. J. Law, 763, 70 A 132.

41. St. Columba's Church v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 692; Woods v. Lincoln Trac. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1067. Where it is not shown that petitioning abutter's ingress and egress will be affected, and only injury will be from noise, etc., suffered by all abutters, he cannot enjoin occupancy as a public nuisance. Ayers v. Citizens' R. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1066.

42. Act March 20, 1901 (P. L. 1901, p. 116), held sufficient as to title, and to authorize city to agree to pay specified sums upon separation of grades (Morris & E. R. Co. v. Newark [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 194), and payment thereof does not constitute a donation or appropriation of public funds within prohibition of §§ 19, 20, of art. 1, Const. (Id.).

43. Jurisdiction of court of equity under Act June 19, 1871 (P. L. 1360), to determine conflicting rights, etc., does not extend to questions involving validity of charters or forfeiture thereof. Myersdale & S. St. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania & M. St. R. Co., 219 Pa. 558, 69 A 92.

44. Not permissible to provide platform along street for use of passengers. Robinson v. Helena Light & R. Co. [Mont.] 99 P 837. Company occupying street cannot receive freight therein when to do so will unreasonably block the street and interfere with public use thereof. Town of Ft. Edward v. Hudson Valley R. Co., 127 App. Div. 438, 111 NYS 753. Injunction should be granted only after full hearing, since public as well as company is inconvenienced thereby. Id.

45. Not only the actual obstruction, but any littering of the highway by reason of receiving freight thereon so as to frighten horses, would be chargeable to the railroad company both as cause and occasion thereof. Town of Ft. Edward v. Hudson Valley R. Co., 127 App. Div. 438, 111 NYS 753.

46. Written acceptance in name of president and secretary and bearing corporate seal is prima facie evidence of acceptance. City of Niles v. Benton Harbor-St. Joe R. & Light Co., 154 Mich. 378, 15 Det. Leg. N. 757, 117 NW 937. Where charter provides that corporate powers shall be exercised by board of directors, acceptance of franchise by board is binding on stockholders. Venner v. Chicago City R. Co., 236 Ill. 349, 86 NE 266.

47. Village of Madison v. Alton, G. & St. Louis Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 346, 85 NE 596.

48. Columbus St. R. & Light Co. v. Columbus [Ind. App.] 86 NE 83; Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. New Castle [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1067. Special charter, when adopted, becomes contract. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 193 N. Y. 543, 86 NE 565.

49. Under Act Feb. 6, 1865 (Laws 1865, p. 597), amending Act Feb. 14, 1859 (Laws 1859, p. 530), authorizing, among other things, the changing of any contract by council with written consent of other party, ordinance adopted Feb. 11, 1907, constituting agreement between city and company whereby latter surrendered all rights and accepted in lieu right to continue for 20 years under certain conditions, held not ultra vires (Venner v. Chicago City R. Co., 236 Ill. 349, 86 NE 266), and such contract could be entered into by company notwithstanding objection of single stockholder (Id.). Original franchise ordinance held repealed by new franchise ordinance covering practically every subject contained therein. Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. New Castle [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1067. On rehearing former opinion, in 114 NW 422, held merely to hold that company was rightfully occupying street, and not to pass upon right of city to revoke right in future. State v. Lincoln St. R. Co., 80 Neb. 333, 118 NW 326.

50. Shreveport Trac. Co. v. Shreveport, 122 La. 1, 47 S 40. Fixing rates. Id. Cannot change character of materials to be used in paving. Village of Madison v. Alton, G. & St. Louis Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 346, 85 NE 596. Where company is granted right to construct and maintain tracks "along and across the streets of the city," and constructs certain lines in conformity to a system which contemplates additional lines and branches as public needs require, city cannot arbitrarily revoke franchise except as to tracks constructed. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Denver, 161 F 769.

51. Right of city to designate kind of poles to be used, and free carriage of children under six, held sufficient consideration for new franchise ordinance relieving company from obligation to pay for paving. Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. New Castle [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1067. Where amendatory franchise ordinance is based on a consideration and is not tainted with fraud, it will not be set aside as injudicious or for inadequacy of consideration. Id.

52. Ordinance giving right to occupy street and to construct necessary switches, curves, cross-overs, and turnouts, held not to authorize construction of curved track across sidewalks. Breen v. Pittsburg, Harmony, Butler & N. C. R. Co., 220 Pa. 612, 69 A 1047. Franchise to construct and op-must be strictly construed against it[53] and in favor of the public.[54] Where a franchise does not specify its duration, it is measured by the corporate life of the grantee.[55] The route and construction must be in accordance with the approved[56] plans submitted as a basis for municipal consent and any germane condition imposed.[57] Street railway companies are quasi public corporations and are bound to exercise their franchises for the benefit of the public,[58] and cannot ordinarily[59] discontinue service at will.[60] A company succeeding to the franchise of another by novation[61] or lease[62] must perform its obligations. Mandamus at the instance of the proper relator[63] will lie to enforce franchise duties,[64] and quo warranto lies in case of misuse of the franchise.[65] The courts cannot enforce a charter provision for proper car service by prescribing a schedule, the matter being in the first instance executive.[66] erate a street railway does not authorize it to permit another to use its line without municipal consent and against municipal protest. City of Erie v. Erie Trac. Co., 222 Pa. 43, 70 A 904. Street railway having charter power to extend branch lines held to have power to contract with another for use of line to connect main line with extension (Hannum v. Media, etc., Elec. R. Co., 221 Pa. 454, 70 A 847), and abutting property owners cannot complain thereof (Id.). Where permission to cross bridge was given on condition that company should construct and maintain the railway at own expense, and should pay all damages that might occur to the state or to individuals in consequence of the construction and maintenance of the railway, held that company need not reimburse state for damages paid to one injured by car breaking down bridge because of its insufficiency due to age. People v. Syracuse Rapid Transit R. Co., 129 App. Div. 800, 114 NYS 776.

53. Columbus St. R. & Light Co. v. Columbus [Ind. App.] 86 NE 83.

54. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 126 App. Div. 36, 110 NYS 720.

55. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Denver, 161 F 769.

56. Where plan under Gen. St. 1902, § 3833, was presented as an entirety, an approval thereof is an approval of it as an entirety. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942. Amendment to charter of Connecticut Railway & Lighting Company in 1905, though confirming and validating location and construction as made, does not prevent state from compelling, by mandamus, the completion of route according to approved plans. Id.

57. Condition of approval of plans submitted under Gen. St. § 3833, that grade of street be brought to specified grade, and that street be made safe, held germane and proper. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942.

58. Selectmen of Amesbury v. Citizens' Elec. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 394, 85 NE 419.

59. Various statutes and the charter of Citizens' Electric Street Railway Company and of its predecessor's considered, and held that it was not under any obligation to continue line. Selectmen of Amesbury v. Citizens' Elec. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 394, 85 NE 419.

60. Where extension has been completed and put into operation, no part of it can be abandoned at will of company. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942. St. 1906, p. 302, c. 339, now St. 1906, p. 614, c. 463, pt. 3, § 76, authorizing mayor to petition supreme judicial court to compel street railway unlawfully discontinuing a part of its line, being remedial only, may be invoked, though discontinuance occurred before its enactment. Selectmen of Amesbury v. Citizens' Elec. St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 394, 85 NE 419.

61. Where company, which had franchise to enter city and was obligated to pay certain amount towards paving, agreed to surrender franchise and be released from such obligation, and another company receiving franchise agreed to assume same, all being a part of same transaction, held a novation (City of Niles v. Benton Harbor-St. Joe R. & Light Co., 154 Mich. 378, 15 Det. Leg. N. 767, 117 NW 937), and company was bound to pay same though franchise required it to apply for right of grade crossing over certain railroad tracks and provided that if application was denied, rights should cease at election of city council, etc. (Id.), and even if it was to be relieved if application was refused, it must show due diligence to secure same, and mere showing that application was refused is insufficient (Id.), and in any event, it is bound until city elects to cancel franchise (Id.). Statutes held to authorize transfer of street railway franchise without formal or express consent of state. O'Sullivan v. Griffith, 153 Cal. 502, 95 P 873.

62. Must complete extension begun and put same in operation (State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942), and it is no defense to mandamus that it was not a party to proceedings for the proposed extension (Id.).

63. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 3824, mandamus to compel company to obey order of city as to placing of tracks, etc., may be in name of city, but it may also be in name of state, or in name of state on relation of city. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942.

64. Oklahoma City v. Oklahoma R. Co., 20 Okl. 1, 93 P 48.

§ 2. Property and acquirement thereof.[68]—See 10 C. L. 1738—Where there is a conflict of authority as to whether a street railway constitutes an additional burden,[69] where the affirmative rule prevails, the right must be acquired by contract,[70] prescription,[71] or condemnation.[72] The power of a company to condemn private property depends upon the state constitution, statutes, and charter.[73] With municipal consent,[74] a company may usually lease its property to another.[75] A deposit for the protection of abutters should not be released until its purpose has been fully served.[76] A bond does not become binding until actually delivered for a valuable consideration.[77]

69. Use of street for street railway purposes held additional burden under Const. 1890, § 17, providing that private property should not be taken or damaged. Slaughter v. Meridian Light & R. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 6. In determining whether use of street by street railway company is a legitimate use, state constitution and laws must be looked to rather than common law. Id. For general treatment, see Eminent Domain, 11 C. L. 1198. Construction of spur tracks connecting with car barns held not additional servitude, and property owner can recover only for negligent construction. Donner v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 527, 113 SW 669.

70. Where private grant gives grantor right to revoke so-called lease upon granting a new route, injunction to restrain use held properly refused where notice to remove did not designate new route. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Rome R. & Light Co., 131 Ga. 95, 61 SE 1116.

71. Where legislative grant authorized use of two elevated tracks, user thereof was interrupted by construction and use of third track between same so built that original tracks helped to support such third track, and burden was thereby increased before 20-year period expired. Roosevelt v. New York El. R. Co., 58 Misc. 463, 111 NYS 440. That abutter acquiesced in use of two original tracks of elevated road for 17 years does not affect right where third track was built which increased traffic capacity of road. Id.

72. Company starting to lay its tracks in the street in which abutters own to the center, without condemning right or agreeing with abutters, is a trespasser (Duncan v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 252, 111 NYS 210), and abutter is entitled to such damages as he suffers and injunctive relief, unless company as an alternative will pay the amount which would be awarded in condemnation (Id.).

73. Suburban and street railroad companies incorporated under Civ. Code 1895, § 2180 have power to condemn private property outside limits of incorporated towns and cities. Piedmont Cotton Mills v. Georgia R. & Elec. Co., 131 Ga. 129 62 SE 52. Laws 1894, p. 1873, c. 752, amending rapid transit act of 1891, authorizing city to construct subway, held not to enlarge city's governmental functions, but made it a railroad corporation, in effect, to construct subway, and city must make compensation to abutters as other roads. In re Low, 128 App. Div. 103, 112 NYS 619. Where company has charter power to make connections in designated counties, it has authority to enter city in one of designated counties. City of Niles v. Benton Harbor-St. Joe R. & Light Co., 154 Mich. 378, 15 Det. Leg. N. 757, 117 NW 937.

74. Where company leased property to another, municipal assent as required by Const. art. 12, § 20 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 309), will be presumed in absence of evidence (Chlanda v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 244, 112 SW 249), and where plaintiff introduced lease in evidence, he cannot thereafter object that it is void for failure of defendant to show municipal assent (Id.).

75. Contract granting use of property for 40 years in consideration of specific rent and performance of certain duties in nature of restoration of property at end of term held a lease, and to relieve lessor from liability for torts of lessee. Chlanda v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 244, 112 SW 249. Validity of lease cannot be determined summarily on a motion by creditors of lessee in creditor's suit, but can be questioned only in a plenary suit to which all interested are parties. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 467.

76. On application to have fund, deposited under charter of Boston Elevated Railway Company (St. 1894, p. 766, c. 548) as a fund out of which executions for damages to abutters by construction and operation might be paid, released, court cannot assume that sole ground for creation of fund was uncertainty of enterprise and release same, while some claims remain unsettled, on ground that success of company is a settled fact. Boston El. R. Co. v. Chapin, 199 Mass. 137, 85 NE 75.

79. Laws 1867, p. 1275, c. 489, § 9, provided that company should pay 5 per cent of net income from passenger traffic to the city in such manner as legislature "may hereafter direct." Laws 1868, p. 2033, c. 855, § 2, specified that pursuant to § 9 of act 1867, com-

gross [80] earnings are frequently imposed, and likewise, a franchise tax for the use of the streets,[81] based upon the number of cars,[82] is sometimes demanded.[83] An ordinance will not be construed as a contractual relinquishment of the right to impose license fees unless an express intent to do so appears.[84]

§ 4. Street railway corporations. Powers, receivers, etc.[85] See 10 C. L. 1739 Unless restricted, a street railway company may ordinarily mortgage its property,[86] and the terms thereof are determinative of the property covered thereby.[87] The pany should pay 5 per cent of its net income to comptroller, quarterly. Held that tax was created by act 1867, and should be computed on income from passenger traffic. City of New York v. Manhattan R. Co., 119 App. Div. 240, 104 NYS 609. "Net income" held to mean that sum remaining after deducting cost of producing same (City of New York v. Manhattan R. Co., 192 N. Y. 90, 84 NE 745), but without reduction of taxes, rentals, damages to abutting owners for trespass upon their interest in street, or interest on bonds (Id.), and where referee made only a general finding as to taxes upon entire system, and did not apportion taxes on portion from which income accrued, no deduction could be made on account of such taxes (Id.). Under Laws 1867, p. 1275, c. 489, § 9, requiring company to pay to city 5 per cent of net income "from passenger traffic," amounts paid for general taxes, rental, damages to abutters for trespass, interest on bonds, etc., should not be deducted from gross receipts. City of New York v. Manhattan R. Co., 119 App. Div. 240, 104 NYS 609.

80. Laws 1892, p. 705, c. 340, § 4, construed, and held that, while report of earning was to be made at end of each fiscal year, the obligation to pay percentage of gross earnings arose whenever daily earning for "any period of six months" exceeded on average of $1,700 per day, though not in some fiscal year. City of New York v. Union R. Co., 125 App. Div. 861, 110 NYS 944. Under St. 1897, p. 504, c. 500, § 10, amending St. 1894, p. 768, c. 548, § 21, imposing franchise tax based upon "gross earnings of all the lines of elevated or surface railroads," etc., such tax is computed upon earnings from railroad in transporting passengers, as distinguished from other income incidental to business. Boston E. R. Co. v. Com., 199 Mass. 96, 84 NE 845.

81. Obligation imposed by Laws 1892, p. 705, c. 340, § 4, held not a tax but a charge for use of street by consolidated company in lieu of all other charges therefore imposed on constitutent companies. City of New York v. Union R. Co., 125 App. Div. 861, 110 NYS 944.

82. Charter of street railroad company (Laws 1860, p. 1042, c. 513) provided that company should be subject "to the payment to city of same license fees annually, for each car run thereon, as is now paid by other city railroads in said city." At time, no company paid license on each car run during year, but paid on basis of greatest number of cars in use at busiest season, and for 40 years company in question paid on such basis. Held that terms of charter being vague, practical construction adopted should be followed by court. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 193 N. Y. 543, 86 NE 565, rvg., 126 App. Div. 36, 110 NYS 720; Id., 126 App. Div. 39, 110 NYS 722.

83. Under ordinance approved June 8, 1908, requiring payment of certain annual license fee on or before June 1 of each year, such fees are not inforcible until June 1, 1909, though ordinance prescribed that it should be enforcible "on and after June 1, 1908." Atlantic City & S. R. Co. v. Ventnor City [N. J. Law] 71 A 1132.

84. Issue of permit for certain period in consideration of stipulated sum does not create an inviolable contract in absence of expressed intention to that effect. St. Louis v. United R. Co., 210 U. S. 266, 52 Law Ed. 1054.

86. Const. § 203, declaring that no corporation shall lease or alienate its franchise so as to relieve franchise or property held thereunder from liabilities of lessor or grantor, does not affect right to mortgage, and hence, where mortgaged in good faith for more than value at time judgment is obtained against it for negligence in operation, such judgment is not enforcible against property on lands of purchaser at sale to pay mortgage debt. Russell's Adm'r v. Frankfort & Suburban R. Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 289.

87. Mortgage on all after-acquired engines, machinery, tools, and equipment of every description used in operating mortgagor's lines, held to cover machinery installed in after-acquired buildings which were not included in mortgage, such machinery being used in operating lines. Guaranty Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 166 F 569. Mortgage covering all the property of mortgagor and specifically enumerating number of lines of roads either owned or leased by it, and providing that it should include all "equipment of every description now used or which may hereafter be used or employed upon said lines or routes, whether now owned by company or hereafter to be acquired for use upon or in connection with the same," held to cover rolling stock and all personal property subsequently acquired by mortgagor and devoted to use generally on its system which included, not only enumerated lines, but after acquired lines operated in connection therewith. Id. Company made contract with construction company whereby it was to pay latter cost of construction and 15 per cent. After work was partly done and materials furnished, franchise was declared void, and company gave money and bonds to one owning and controlling both companies equal to amount due, he agreeing to hold company harmless on construction contract, which was silent as to ownership of material furnished. Held that bond issue general principles relating to bonds [88] and mortgages [89] are elsewhere treated. In a suit by stockholders to avoid an existing monopolistic combination,[90] receivers of certain of the constituent roads appointed prior to the commencement of the suit are proper, but not necessary, parties.[91] Provision deferring re-entry for nonpayment of rent until one year after default becomes inapplicable where the system is disrupted by foreclosure of mortgages.[92]

Receivers. See 10 C. L. 1739—The general rules as to the grounds for appointment of receivers [93] and the conduct of the receivership [94] apply. Receivers may do whatever is reasonably necessary to render the road efficient,[95] and should cancel all disadvantageous contracts [96] and leases,[97] unless it would be inequitable to do so,[98] and discontinue all burdensome privileges.[99] Where the receivers discontinue a was supported by sufficient consideration, and on delivery thereof and payment of money, materials became property of company and subject to antecedent mortgage covering after-acquired property. Haynes v. Kenosha St. R. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 568.

88. See Bonds, 11 C. L. 424. Evidence held insufficient to show that holder of bonds agreed that interest thereon should be deemed paid if net earnings be transferred to surplus fund and dividends declared. Jackson & S. Trac. Co. v. Green [C. C. A.] 167 F 806.

89. See mortgages, 12 C. L. 878. As to materials that are affixed to and made a part of a railroad, which is subject to a mortgage both present and future property will be subject to the lien of such mortgage in favor of bona fide mortgage bondholders, in superiority to any contract between vendor of the property and the railroad. Haynes v. Kenosha St. R. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 568.

90. Where street railways have entered into a monopolistic combination, appointment of receivers for some of the constituent roads does not of itself take them out of combination. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 165 F 945.

91. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 165 F 945.

92. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 463.

93. Where, in creditors' suit against insolvent lessee of a street railway system, to which lessor became a party, receiver was appointed who operated for all parties in interest until foreclosure suits were instituted by lessor's bondholders and affairs of lessee have been so far liquidated that they may be soon wound up and an accounting had between it and the lessor, separate receivers should be appointed to represent the adverse interests. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 463.

94. Where system was placed in hands of receiver in suit by creditors of lessor, but with consent of lessor, to be operated for benefit of all interested, all damage claims and liabilities incurred during such operation, will be made charge upon entire property so far as they cannot be paid from earnings and property of lessee. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 463. Where a receiver is appointed for a lessee street railway company, and subsequently, on foreclosure by the bondholders of the lessor company, a separate receiver is appointed, any insurance placed upon the property by the receiver of the lessee company should be transferred to the receiver of the lessor, the former accounting for so much of the premium as covered the period of his responsibility. Id.

95. And to perfect the service in return for franchise given. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 445. Recommendations of receivers proposing changes in operation of cars to give increase service, adopted. In re Forty-Second Street, etc., R. Co., 160 F 226. Where, after a receiver has been appointed at the request of a creditor to operate a leased street railway line, a separate receiver is appointed in foreclosure by the bondholders of the lessor company, the receivers of the lessor will adopt and confirm all contracts concerned with the operation of the system which were adopted or entered into by the receivers of the lessee. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 463.

96. Receiver will not be required to continue arrangement by which company furnishes power and use of tracks to independent company free. Central Trust Co. v. Third Ave. R. Co., 165 F 494. Receiver in foreclosure will not, in absence of great necessity, be authorized to discontinue operation of cars over part of line where it would thereby forfeit franchise thereto, although to continue it must pay rent to another company for use of tracks which would render it temporarily unprofitable. Lorain Steel Co. v. Union R. Co. 165 F 500.

97. Where rent is excessive. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 459; Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 462.

98. Where contract letting advertising space in cars has been modified by receivers of company with approval of court, and lessee has presumably made contracts in reliance thereon, it will not be disturbed in absence of strong reasons. Morton Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 165 F 493.

99. Receivers should curtail transfer privileges, where it will increase earnings, where no law requires the issuing thereof. In re Receiverships of Street Rys., 161 F 879. Where receivers of leased system discontinued one lease line and it was being operated independently, held authorized to discontinue transfers on due notice to public. Guaranty Trust Co. v. Second Ave. R. Co., 165 F 487. Receivers of a street railway system will not be required to continue to supply power and the use of its tracks lease after operating beyond the period for which rent has been paid, they must account to the lessor for the net receipts during such period,[1] and must comply with the terms of the lease as to the return of the property.[2] Necessary operating expenses incurred by receivers have preference over secured debts,[3] and upon a sale under mortgage foreclosure, the decree should reserve the right to impose liens thereafter, if necessary, for such expenses.[4] General defaults of the insolvent company must be presented as claims against the estate,[5] and tort claims cannot be given preference over secured liens.[6] The negligence of the receivers of a sublesse does not create any claim against the leasee or its receivers.[7] Receivers operating leased lines as a unitary system need not keep the earnings separate to meet the claims against the respective lessors.[8] The mere fact that leased property now to another company without compensation. Central Trust Co. v. Third Ave. R. Co., 165 F 494.

1. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 472; Morton Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 165 F 489. Receiver of a leased line who elect not to operate the same should account to the lessor for net receipts received between the last rent day and the date of returning the property. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 477.

2. Where lease provided that, upon termination thereof for default, lessee should return certain money, etc., held that receivers of lessee need not return same where none of it came into their hands, but lessor had claim against lessee's estate for damages. Morton Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 165 F 489. Where, at time of leasing, cash in lessor's treasury was turned over to lessee as owner and not as lessee, lease providing that, if it should be terminated by reason of lessee's default, money should be deemed a loan, etc., and be returned with other property, receivers of lessee are not required to return it where none of the money came into their hands, but lessor should present claim against property of lessee. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 472. Upon cancellation of a long term lease providing that lessee should maintain property and return same, and substitutes for such as has ceased to exist, receivers must comply therewith, and property of same kind exclusively used on line at time of appointment of receivers may be assumed to be substitutes (Id.), but electric cars could not be presumed to be substitutes for horse cars which were transferred to other part of lessee's line (Id.). Coal and repairs in power house which were adapted to use for general system should not be considered as substitutes, but repairs adopted for use only on leased line should be. Central Trust Co. v. Third Ave. R. Co., 165 F 478.

3. Where it appears that one fourth of expenditure for bridge repairs was necessary for the continued operation and had been performed on credit of earnings within six months prior to appointment of receivers, but other threefourths was not necessary, preference should only he allowed for one fourth. Guaranty Trust Co. v. Philadelphia & L. V. Trac. Co., 160 F 761. Fact that receiver's certificates were rendered necessary to repair waste committed by lessee held not to entitle lessor and its bondholders to have them declared first lien on lessee's property to displacement of claims for material and supplies furnished lessee within four months prior to appointment of receivers. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 455. Receiver's certificates to the amount of $3,500,000 authorized superior in lien to the general and collateral trust mortgage and the refunding mortgage. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 161 F 787. Receivers of two street railway companies, one leased to the other, authorized to issue receivers' certificates, and make them a preferred lien where necessary to keep the railways in operation for the benefit of creditors. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 242. Money acquired by certificates issued by receivers of a street railway and made a prior lien to mortgages on the property may be used to maintain leased property where its maintenance is essential to the proper operation of the entire property, and especially where such expenditure is required by the lease. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 165 F 477.

4. For receivership charges and expenses of operation, including personal injury claims, and balances which may be found due to lessors whose lines have been returned for personal property wrongfully withheld. Guaranty Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 166 F 569.

5. Where lessee neglected to pay taxes and assessments against property as provided by lease, receivers are not bound to indemnify lessor, but he must present claim against estate of lessee. Morton Trust Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 165 F 489. Where, under the lease of a street railway, it was provided that the property should be kept in good repair and should be retransferred in toto with all the substitutes, additions and increments, and a receiver took charge of the leased line in foreclosure proceedings, the claim against the lessee for damages and waste and broken covenants will be referred to a special master for investigation and report. § 5. Location and construction.[10] Location.[See 10 C. L. 1740]—The location of the tracks in the street is usually fixed by the franchise,[11] statute,[12] or some special board,[13] which must be liberally construed.[14] A location once made[15] exhausts the power of the company in respect thereto,[16] although municipal or county authorities may usually require a relocation[17] upon equitable principles of indemnity.[18] A company possessing a franchise with a definite location has priority over a subsequent grant of the same location to another.[19]

11. Power given city council by Bristol city charter to designate route held not limited by Const. 1902, art. 4, § 58, prohibiting legislature from enacting any law whereby private property is taken or damaged without just compensation, nor by Code 1904, § 1294, providing that tracks shall not unnecessarily interfere with use of street. Wagner v. Bristol Belt Line R. Co., 108 Va. 594, 62 SE 391. Location by city council of tracks on one side of center will not be judicially interfered with in absence of fraud or abuse of discretion. Id. Where grant of location required tracks to be laid flush with surface of street, and so maintained as not to unnecessarily impede travel, held that abutter's rights were not impaired, though track was only six feet from curb and team could not stand in space while car passed (Id.), company being obliged to allow reasonable opportunity for vehicles to stop at curb to unload goods and passengers (Id.).

15. Where charter does not prescribe exact location, the location is the final selection and demarkation of route by directors. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Stevens [Conn.] 69 A 1052.

16. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942.

17. Acts 1908, p. 359, c. 654, repealing specified acts, and providing that county commissioners may compel street railway companies to change the character and location of tracks upon public roads, held not violative of Const. art. 3, § 29, providing that every law shall contain but one subject which shall be expressed in title. Anne Arundel County Com'rs v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 72 A 542.

18. While legislature may amend charter so as to require change of location of tracks, it can be enforced only upon fair principles of indemnity as to expenditures in good faith in reliance upon charter. Ann Arundel County Com'rs v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 72 A 542.

19. Company whose rights in the street have been lost by failure to complete line cannot question right of another to occupy street. Myersdale & S. St. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania & M. St. R. Co., 219 Pa. 558, 69 A 92. Where it does not appear that purchaser of rights, privileges and franchise of company participated in organization of complainant company or conveyed his interests to it, complainant cannot question rights of another company in the street. Id.

20. Where franchise required commencement of work within 60 days, evidence of conversations between one of grantees and members of council before granting of franchise as to impossibility of procuring rails, and of grantee's conclusion therefrom that no physical work need be done within 60 days, is inadmissible, as being a conclusion, and it not being necessary to have rails to commence work. Spencer v. Palestine [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 857. Preparing of map of city drawing up specifications, incorporating payment of first year's franchise tax to state, letting of contract for machinery, and erecting of six poles not of character or in position to be of use, held not a "commencement of work" within franchise provision that if work was not commenced within 60 days deposit should be forfeited. for a failure to do so unless it expressly so provides.[21] Where an extension is approved as a whole and the company constructs a part thereof, it must complete the whole extension within a reasonable time.[22] A street railway company must exercise reasonable care in the construction of its tracks [23] and the erection of its poles,[24] and where it makes an excavation in the street, it must properly guard the same,[25] although it is not liable for an excavation in or about its tracks made by another [26] unless it assumes to guard the same.[27] This common-law duty may be supplemented by statute [28] or by franchise contract.[29] The municipal authorities in Connecticut may require the electric conduits to be placed under ground.[30] A company, however, is not ordinarily liable after it abandons its property.[31] Since

21. Without suit for that purpose. Spencer v. Palestine [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 857.

22. State v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 942.

23. Company laying tracks in street in endeavor to acquire franchise held bound at common law, and under ordinance, to keep tracks and streets in reasonably safe condition. Citizens R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. Must keep track in safe condition of repair, and, on city changing grade of street, it must lay tracks at new grade. City of New York v. Bleecker St. & F. Ferry R. Co., 115 NYS 592. Maintenance of rail with edge chipped off held not negligence. Stern v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 193 N. Y. 328, 85 NE 1089. Liable where it allows rails to protrude above surface of street in dangerous manner. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. Evidence that rails projected from three inches to foot above surface of street, and that plaintiff stumbled over same while trying to avoid runaway team, held to make prima facie case of negligence. Huff v. St. Joseph R. L. H. & P. Co., 213 Mo. 495, 111 SW 1145. In action for injuries caused by car leaving switch and striking plaintiff, evidence of defect held to make question for jury. Geiser v. Pittsburg Rys. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 351. Where company placed track in street in endeavor to acquire franchise, and on failure to acquire it, sold property, etc., to another, the purchaser, knowing of existence of track in street, is liable for failure to keep in a reasonably safe condition. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. Must keep track in safe condition for vehicles. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 138 Ill. App. 520.

24. Where company was unable to procure right to set pole supporting wires behind curb line, negligence cannot be predicated on placing it six inches outside of curb line, where it would increase obstruction to set it farther out. Lanigan v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 125 App. Div. 622, 110 NYS 30. Held not negligence to fail to place hub stone at foot of pole placed six inches from curb line. Id.

25. Held negligent in maintaining warning light where excavation extended to middle of street and light was on right hand side. Ripley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 350, 111 SW 1180. Count alleging that defendant removed dirt from under ties at place much frequented by public and did not light place to warn pedestrians that plaintiff stumbled and fell and was struck by car, held not demurrable for failure to allege that crossing was provided by defendant or used with its knowledge (Smith v. Gulfport & Mississippi Coast Trac. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 295), nor as failing to show a duty on defendant to maintain crossing in safe condition (Id.).

26. Company is not primarily bound to guard trench dug by city water department. Phinney v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 286, 87 NE 490. Where defendant was not responsible for excavation extending under its tracks, no liability attaches because of involuntary successful attempts of its employes to warn plaintiff and to get horse out. New York Mail Co. v. Joline, 112 NYS 1067.

27. Where trench dug by city water department passes under track, and to avoid taking down and replacing guards every time car passed, company agreed to station watchman thereat, it is liable for his negligence. Phinney v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 286, 87 NE 490.

28. Where law requires company to keep rails flush with street or so nearly level as not to materially interfere with travel, instruction that company was not required to keep tracks in a reasonably safe condition, and was not required to keep space between rails filled with "dirt, cinders, or any other materials," but was only required to exercise ordinary care to keep space in reasonably safe condition, was misleading. Huff v. St. Joseph R. L. H. & P. Co., 213 Mo. 495, 111 SW 1145.

29. Company purchasing property and franchise of another, which franchise bound seller to keep tracks and street in reasonably safe condition, is bound by such contract so long as it permits tracks to remain in street. Citizens R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62.

30. Held, under Revision of 1902, §§ 3905, 3824, that municipal authorities have power to compel placing of electric conductor under ground, subject to review by railroad commissioners (Appeal of New York, etc., R. Co., 80 Conn. 623, 70 A 26), notwithstanding Sp. Laws 1905 p. 711, § 3, amending charter and giving general authority to locate conduits in, under, or over streets, etc. (Id.). "Appeal" held proper process to review action of municipal authorities compelling placing of conduits under ground. Id. Gen. St. 1902, § 3905, authorizing appeal to judge of superior court from orders of municipal authorities as to placing of conduits, etc., does not authorize court to interfere with purely legislative or administrative matters, and refusal of council to allow placing of overhead wires on ground of public safety is final. Id.

31. Where purchaser of property of coma city is primarily liable for the condition of its streets,[32] it may prohibit any disturbance of the surface without a permit,[33] and may recover over against the company on being held liable for an injury, especially where the company has agreed to hold it harmless.[34] It may also make reasonable regulations as to kind of materials used, etc.[35] The company is liable only for injury resulting proximately from its negligence[36] and without contributory negligence.[37] The manner of crossing the tracks of a steam railroad company in the street is frequently prescribed by statute,[38] and where not so regulated, the companies may agree thereon.[39] Such contracts, however, do not usually run with the land or road.[40] In the absence of statute,[41] ordinance,[42] or contract,[43] a company is not bound to pave the portion pany which had laid tracks in street, but had not used same, after injury, took up track, held to show that there had been no abandonment. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62.

32. Rev. Laws, c. 112, § 45, defining liability of street railway companies for defects in street between track, etc., held not to relieve city from liability for defect not necessary to operation of cars. Cammett v. Haverhill, 197 Mass. 76, 83 NE 331.

33. Laws 1901, p. 168, c. 466, § 391. Schuster v. Forty-Second St., etc., R. Co., 192 N. Y. 403, 85 NE 670.

34. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62.

35. Ordinance provided that only "Johnson" or "girder" rails should be used on streets repaved with asphalt or brick, and petition for injunction to restrain use of T rails alleged that "safe and permanent streets can be made with brick only when tracks are constructed with Johnson rails." Held not demurrable, though not very explicit. City of New Albany v. New Albany St. R. Co. [Ind.] 87 NE 1084.

36. Maintenance of rail with edge chipped held not proximate cause of injury caused to one stepping thereon and slipping into hole in street. Stern v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 193 N. Y. 328, 85 NE 1089. Baltimore City Code 1906, § 24, requiring railroad companies to keep the streets covered by tracks in "thorough repair," etc., held not to impose absolute liability. Miller v. United Rys. & Elec. Co., 108 Md. 84, 69 A 636. Not liable for defect in cable slot in absence of notice, actual or constructive and negligent failure to repair. Id.

37. Negligence for jury in running into excavation with automobile, the excavation extending to middle of street, but warning lights being on one side. Ripley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 350, 111 SW 1180.

38. Under Act June 19, 1871 (P. L. 1361, § 2), grade crossing with railroad is to be avoided unless impractical to avoid (Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Danville & B. St. R. Co., 221 Pa. 149, 70 A 578), and relative danger to public is not the test (Id.).

39. Where franchise authorizing street car company to cross steam railway tracks does not prescribe details thereof, safety secured by contract regulating same is sufficient consideration, though burdens are all on one side (Evansville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Evansville Belt R. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 21), but, since steam railroad occupying street is subject to right of city to authorize street railway to pass over same, mere granting of right to cross by railroad to street car company having franchise so to do is not a sufficient consideration (Id.).

40. Contract regulating manner of crossing of street railway with steam railroad, and imposing cost of construction and maintenance on former, is not a covenenat running with the road. Evansville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Evansville Belt R. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 21. Purchase at mortgage foreclosure sale does not establish such privity of contract as to make purchaser liable on contract entered into by mortgagor after execution of mortgage whereby it assumes cost of constructing and maintaining crossing. Id.

41. Railroad Law (Laws 1890, p. 1112, c. 565), § 98, requiring company to keep in permanent repair portion of street between track, etc., held to require more than patching of old pavement, when, through changed conditions, improved kind of pavement is required, and where company continues to operate under franchise, it becomes obligated. Under Laws 1884, p. 309, c. 252, and ordinance granting right to occupy street, imposing absolute duty to repair and to keep in permanent repair, etc., company held bound to repave when new pavement was required by condition of street, of which city was judge, but company must be given opportunity to do so before it can be charged with costs thereof. City of New York v. Broadway & S. A. R. Co., 115 NYS 872; City of New York v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 115 NYS 878. Railroad Law (Laws 1890, p. 1112, c. 565), § 98, requiring company to keep in permanent repair portion between tracks and for two feet out side, held to require it to repave where city repaves street. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 60 Misc. 487, 113 NYS 869.

42. Ordinance granting franchise, merely providing that if city elected to pave street company should pave between tracks, was not an exemption from imposition of additional burden, and Act April 17, 1908, requiring it to pave two feet on either side of track, is valid. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559.

43. Under franchise requiring grantee to keep space between tracks in thorough repair (Laws 1860, p. 715, c. 411, confirming grant, and Railroad Law [Laws 1890, p. 1112, c. 565], § 98, requiring all railroads to

of the street occupied by it,[44] and a mere contract to "repair" does not impose such burden.[45] Where the company repaves, it must use the same materials as the city used in the remainder of the street.[46] Where the company fails to pave as required by statute or contract, the city may resort to mandamus,[47] or it may proceed, after due notice,[48] unless waived,[49] to pave and recover the cost thereof from the company. Under the Iowa statute, the costs assessed against the company by the city council[50] are for the benefit of the abutting property owners.[51] Notice to repair is not ordinarily required.[52]

§ 6. Injuries to passengers.[53]

§ 7. Injuries to employes.[54]

§ 8. Injuries to persons other than passengers or servants. A. General rules as to negligence and contributory negligence.[55] See 10 C. L. 1741. The only duty owed to licensee or trespasser on the tracks[56] or on the cars is not to willfully or keep in repair pavement in such space), held that company acting under franchise was obliged to repave when necessary, and upon refusal to do so was liable for cost thereof. City of New York v. Ninth Ave. R. Co., 115 NYS 876. Ordinance requiring grantee to keep street between tracks and adjacent thereto in as good repair and condition as other parts of street are kept by city obligates grantee to pave where it is necessary to put into condition corresponding to rest of street. Columbus St. R. & L. Co. v. Columbus [Ind.] 86 NE 83.

44. City of New York v. Bleecker St. & F. Ferry R. Co., 115 NYS 592; Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. New Castle [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1067. Company bound by statute or contract to keep pavement within tracks in repair must bear its proportion of cost of new pavement, and keep same in repair. City of New York v. Bleecker St. & F. Ferry R. Co., 115 NYS 592.

45. Columbus St. R. & L. Co. v. Columbus [Ind.] 86 NE 83; Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. New Castle [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1067.

46. City of New York v. Bleecker St. & F. Ferry R. Co., 115 NYS 592.

47. Where franchise required company to pave space between rails and one foot outside thereof with same material that city was using in paving street, and to do work at same time, evidence that city was paving street and that company had refused held to warrant mandamus (Denison & S. R. Co. v. Denison [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 780), and writ commanding it to use same material as the city and to pave at the same time as city does its work held not too indefinite as to material and time. Id.

48. Where notice by city to repave is definite as to extent thereof, mere fact that in approximating square yards included, it makes error, does not preclude recovering for full amount. City of New York v. New York City R. Co., 60 Misc. 487, 113 NYS 869. Notice making no distinct statement to company to repair pavement or lay new pavement within 30 days, nor statement as to what portion of pavement company should pay for, is insufficient, under Laws 1890, p. 1112, c. 565, § 98, to charge company with cost. City of New York v. Bleecker St. & F. Ferry R. Co., 115 NYS 592.

49. Letter of company that it was advised that it was not responsible for repaving, and that it did not care to negotiate in respect thereto, held waiver of notice to repave. City of New York v. Ninth Ave. R. Co., 115 NYS 876. Letter of company to department of public works that, for any repavement by city for which company was lawfully liable, it would reimburse the department, held waiver of notice to repair. City of New York v. Broadway & S. A. R. Co., 115 NYS 872.

50. Assessment by city council under Code, § 835, for paving between rails, held to be conclusive only of value of pavement, and not of company's liability therefor, or amount to be collected on behalf of each abutting owner (City of Oskaloosa v. Oskaloosa Trac. & L. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 736), and provision for appeal from assessment, added by Code Supp. 1907, § 835, if applicable at all to prior assessments, only relates to determination of value of pavement (Id.).

51. Under Code, § 835, city cannot recover anything in its own right for paving between rails except as an abutting owner, the assessment thereunder being for benefit of abutters. City of Oskaloosa v. Oskaloosa Trac. & L. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 736. Neither another company which had formerly had tracks in street, but whose rights had been forfeited, nor city, by reason of ownership of pavement between such tracks, or ownership of street, is an abutting owner. Id.

52. Laws 1890, p. 1112, c. 565, § 98, as amended by Laws 1892, p. 1404, c. 676, requiring company to keep portion of street in repair under supervision of local authorities, and authorizing latter to repair at expense of companies on 30 days' notice, construed, and held that notice was not condition precedent to duty to repair. Schuster v. Forty-Second St., etc., R. Co., 192 N. Y. 403, 85 NE 670.

56. Evidence held to show that decedent was not using footpath when killed, and insufficient to show that public ever used wantonly injure him,[57] and to exercise reasonable care after discovering his peril.[58] A company occupying a street [59] has no exclusive [60] or superior [61] rights therein, but only equal rights [62] with one using the same as a public street, and both the company [63] and the traveler [64] must exercise reasonable care [65] under the particular surrounding circumstances.[66] Since, however, a car is confined to a particular portion of the street,[67] in a limited sense it has the right of way.[68] In the use of its

57. Prenderville v. Coney Island & B. R. Co., 115 NYS 633. Where conductor approached boy 9 years old stealing ride on folded running board with hands extended, but said nothing and made no threat, company is not liable if boy became frightened and fell off. Id. Since a trespasser is not a passenger, an assault by conductor cannot constitute a breach of contract of carriage. Rothstein v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 527, 114 NYS 344.

One using track in street is not a trespasser. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93. Question of abstract rights in street held immaterial in view of actual fact. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. If motorman sees one driving toward track so that if both pursue their course a collision will ensue, he must stop his car though driver ought not to proceed. Carrahan v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 198 Mass. 549, 85 NE 162. Rights of company and of persons using street are equal, and latter may assume that company will use ordinary care to avoid collision. Indiana Union Trac. Co. v. Pheanis [Ind. App.] 85 NE 1040. Where motorman had ample opportunity to observe plaintiff crossing track, plaintiff cannot be charged with negligence because crossing may involve lessening of speed of car. Robkin v. Joline, 114 NYS 98.

"Ordinary care" means such care as a man of average prudence and skill would exercise in operation of car under same circumstances. Louisville R. Co. v. Boutellier, 33 Ky. L. R. 484, 110 SW 357. Owes special duty to one on tracks in crossing same to take passage. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569.

64. Mere fact that pedestrian has equal right in street does not authorize him to go onto track without taking any precautions because track is not at that moment occupied by car. Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821.

65. Each must so act as not to unreasonably hinder or endanger other in use of same. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Right to use street must be exercised with due care to prevent accident. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Equal right in street does not excuse negligence. Reidel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821. Instruction requiring motorman to use "all means at his command" requires too high degree of care. Elgin, A. & S. Trac. Co. v. Wilcox, 132 Ill. App. 446.

66. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. While duty of using reasonable care is same at all times, danger incident to a crossing may require greater precautionary acts. Denis v. Lewiston, B. & B. St. R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047. Where conditions are unusually dangerous, commensurate care must be exercised. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700. Because of frequency of teams and pedestrians at crossing, ordinary care requires that motorman have car under control. Denis v. Lewiston, B. & B. St. R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047. In determining care to be used, character of street, its congested condition, frequency of cars, etc., must be considered. Boyce v. New York City R. Co., 126 App. Div. 248, 110 NYS 393; Savage v. Chicago & Joliet R. Co., 142 Ill. App. 342. Greater care required at crossings. Chicago City R. Co. v. Kastrzewa, 141 Ill. App. 10. Where shadows of columns darkened plaintiff's position on or near track and curve in track prevented headlight from illuminating same, such circumstances increased rather than obviated duty of keeping lookout. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969.

67. Due consideration must be given to fact that street car company is confined to a fixed portion of street, that its cars are propelled by powerful motive force, etc. Bremer v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 382. Words "car track," as used in instruction referring to a person standing thereon, held to mean space covered by passing cars. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 100 P 300.

68. While car has right of way, due care under the circumstances must be exercised to avoid injury. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93; Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836. Fact that company owns right of way in electric power, the company must exercise care commensurate with the dangers incident thereto,[69] must properly equip its cars[70] and man them with competent employes,[71] who must operate the cars at a reasonable speed[72] and give proper warnings.[73] The motorman[74] must keep a lookout[75] and have the car under street does not affect its relation to public where its patronage was dependent upon its relation to street. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Company between blocks does not have paramount right of way over "all and every portion" of the street, but only over such portion as is necessary to operate its cars. Newman v. New York & Q. C. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 12, 111 NYS 289.

69. Must keep wires in a reasonably safe condition. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 100 P 300. That wire broke loose from fastenings and sagged towards street for two weeks held to warrant a presumption of negligence. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 101 P 204. Where sagging wire did not hang low enough to be dangerous to persons and was used for 10 days by company in that condition, plaintiff held not negligent in using street and coming in contact. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 100 P 300. For general liability incident to use of electricity, see Electricity, 11 C. L. 1185.

70. Not necessarily bound to equip cars with lights in common use, since it may have a better one. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356. Cars must be provided with sufficient light to enable motorman to see a sufficient distance to do whatever reasonable care may demand to avoid collision. Id. Franchise ordinance held not to require cars to have fenders. Englund v. Mississippi Valley Trac. Co., 139 Ill. App. 572.

71. One who has had four months' service as conductor and one month's service as motorman held of sufficient experience to be placed in charge of car as motorman. Cloud v. Alexandria Elec. R. Co., 121 La. 1061, 46 S 1017. Where motorman did all that could possibly have been done to avoid injury, negligence in hiring him on account of youth is immaterial. Id.

72. Must operate at speed compatible with lawful and customary use of streets by others. Savage v. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co., 238 Ill. 392, 87 NE 377; Chicago City R. Co. v. Kastrzewa, 141 Ill. App. 10. Speed at which car may be run depends somewhat upon sufficiency of light used. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356; Chicago City R. Co. v. Nonn, 133 Ill. App. 365. Held that court properly left it to jury to say whether rate was compatible with lawful and customary use of street. Savage v. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co., 238 Ill. 392, 87 NE 377. Unless expressly permitted, speed should not be greater than is reasonable and consistent with the customary use of highway with safety. Newport News & Old Point R. & Elec. Co. v. Nicolopoolos [Va.] 63 SE 443. Finding that speed of 15 miles per hour was negligent held not erroneous as matter of law. Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103. Evidence as to distance decedent was knocked and car ran after striking him held to show excessive speed. Louisville R. Co. v. Byer's Adm'x [Ky.] 113 SW 463. Having refused instruction that plaintiff could not recover if decedent stepped onto track too close to car to enable motorman to stop in time to avoid injury, in exercise of ordinary care, court should have charged that under such circumstances recovery could not be had unless inability to stop was due to dangerous rate of speed at which car was being run. Id. Instruction that if car was running at ordinary rate, that is, not exceeding 12 miles an hour, and plaintiff suddenly and imprudently drove upon track ahead of car, he was negligent, held not erroneous as charging that speed in excess of 12 miles was not ordinary and rendered plaintiff's negligence immaterial. Engelber v. Seattle Elec. Co., 50 Wash. 196, 96 P 1039. Ten miles an hour in middle of block not negligent speed. Wilson v. Chicago City R. Co., 133 Ill. App. 433. Negligence in running eight or nine miles an hour on crowded street with brake chain entirely unwound held for jury. Chicago City R. Co. v. Hackett, 136 Ill. App. 594.

73. Chicago City R. Co. v. Kastrzewa, 141 Ill. App. 10; Stewart v. Omaha & C. B. St. R. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1106. Instruction requiring "proper" warning held not erroneous in use of word "proper," since it adds nothing. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700.

74. Instruction held erroneous as allowing recovery if conductor, who owed no duty to keep lookout, failed to do so. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaar [Ky.] 112 SW 1130.

75. Newport News & Old Point R. & Elec. Co. v. Nicolopoolos [Va.] 63 SE 443; Mobile Light & R. Co. v. Baker [Ala.] 48 S 119; Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Must keep lookout for peril of travelers, and on discovering same must use reasonable care to avoid injury. Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 496. Motorman, from time immediately before car starts until after it stops, must keep lookout. Louisville R. Co. v. Johnson's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 207. While it is technically the duty of motorman to keep lookout, such duty is not owed to one lying on embankment which was not used by public. Trigg v. Water, Light & Transit Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 972. That child was running parallel to track and so close that a step or two would place her on it does not as a matter of law excuse motorman from seeing another child in danger. Davis v. Westmoreland County R. Co., 222 Pa. 356, 71 A 538. Must keep lookout for pedestrians on bridge, even at night and though it maintained slats and columns to show its section of bridge. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Fact that company placed slats on bridge, similar to cattle guards, held not such warning of company's exclusive use of that portion of bridge as to relieve it of duty to keep lookout. Id. Instruction that if motorman failed to keep lookout for deceased on track, etc., held not erroneous as requiring control.[76] A company cannot maintain a nuisance [77] and must observe regulatory measures for the protection of the public,[78] and a failure to do so is usually per se negligence.[79] A street car company, however, is only liable for negligence [80] proximotorman to keep lookout for particular person. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569.

76. Required to anticipate possible injury to pedestrians at crowded crossing and to take precautions accordingly. Chicago City R. Co. v. O'Leary, 136 Ill. App. 239; Chicago City R. Co. v. Hackett, 136 Ill. App. 594. Cars must be kept so under control as not to unnecessarily expose others, rightfully using street, to danger. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356.

77. Under Laws 1890, p. 1108, c. 565, as amended by Laws 1901, p. 1529, c. 638, providing that, where road is operated one year under a change of motive power, such fact shall be presumptive evidence that right was duly obtained, where it is conceded that overhead trolley system has been maintained for over a year, no recovery can be had on the theory of a nuisance. Hollis v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 128 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 4.

78. Title of Local Acts 1901, p. 485, No. 439, entitled "An act to regulate the operation of electric cars within" designated county, held sufficiently broad to cover provision making company failing to equip cars with brakes as required liable to persons injured by reason thereof. Fortin v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 154 Mich. 316, 15 Det. Leg. N. 741, 117 NW 741. Municipal ordinances requiring suitable and seasonable warnings at crossings are valid. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836. Since, under "Enabling Act," Kansas City had exclusive control over its streets, etc., street railroad operating in city was not obliged to stop car before crossing steam railroad tracks, as required by Rev. St. 1899, § 1180 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 995). Wills v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 625, 113 SW 713. Ordinance requiring cars to slacken speed to rate not exceeding 3 miles per hour when approaching car, "when such car has stopped or is about to stop to permit passengers to get off or on," has no application when passenger has alighted and car has proceeded nearly a block. Detroit United R. Co. v. Nichols [C. C. A.] 165 F 289. Although Const. art. 17, § 9, forbidding "construction" of street railways without the consent of local authorities, applies only to construction, city's power of regulation extends to operation. City of Erie v. Erie Trac. Co., 222 Pa. 43, 70 A 904.

79. Speed in excess of lawful rate is negligence. Wilson v. Puget Sound Elec. R. Co. [Wash.] 101 P 50; Engelker v. Seattle Elec. Co., 50 Wash. 196, 96 P 1039. Evidence held to show dangerous rate of speed in excess of lawful rate. Wilson v. Puget Sound Elec. R. Co. [Wash.] 101 P 50. Where regulatory statute is for general benefit of public, failure to comply therewith is at least evidence of negligence. Fortin v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 154 Mich. 316, 15 Det. Leg. N. 741, 117 NW 741.

80. Request for ruling excluding distinction between negligence and mere error of judgment properly refused. Blackburn v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 186, 87 NE 579. Instruction that it was duty of railroad to do all that it could to avoid injury, held erroneous. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434.

Negligence for jury: In passing one signaling to car to stop at a high rate of speed and striking one just beyond. Savage v. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co., 238 Ill. 392, 87 NE 377. Speed of 15 to 20 miles per hour within city. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Tomlinson [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 871. In running into one hurrying across tracks to take car, motorman having seen signal. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 774. In taking handle from controller and losing control of car while in close proximity to wagon, and after inducing plaintiff to believe that car would stop. Cowart v. Savannah Elec. Co., 5 Ga. App. 664, 63 SE 804. Running up aside truck on curve where car would strike same on making the curve. Leonard v. Joline, 61 Misc. 336, 113 NYS 682. Speed and lookout maintained, night being unusually dark and stormy, and people being in habit of using street to drive on. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700. Evidence, in action for death caused by collision, that car was run at unlawful rate of speed, held to make case of negligence for jury. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Where workman in trench slipped and in falling grasped rail and had fingers cut off, it cannot be held as a matter of law that it was not negligence to fail to give usual warning of approaching car, on theory that he was suddenly thrown into danger since he might have jumped into ditch instead of grasping rail (Hanley v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 55, 87 NE 197), nor can it be said that company was not negligent in running at 18 or 20 miles per hour, since if had been going slower he might have released hold (Id.).

Held negligent: In backing five cars without lookout on rear on thoroughfare used as a public street. Obenland v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 127 App. Div. 418, 111 NYS 686. Running at excessive speed with motorman on rear end. Vandenbout v. Rochester R. Co., 129 App. Div. 844, 114 NYS 760. Negligent speed. Plunkett v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 572, 114 NYS 276. Operation of car, between dusk and dark, at high rate of speed, and without light or signal, past car discharging passengers. Donnelson v. East St. L. & S. R. Co., 235 Ill. 625, 85 NE 914. Evidence held to sustain finding that no warning was sounded. Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103. In action for injuries caused by car taking switch, evidence held to sustain finding of negligence in maintaining defective switch or in blocking same. Reynolds v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1135. Evidence of speed and failure to give warning, as required by ordinance, held to sustain finding of neg-mately causing injury,[81] and the employes may ordinarily assume that one in a safe place will not heedlessly go into a position of danger,[82] until the contrary appears.[83] It is not liable for acts of its employes beyond the scope of their authority,[84] nor for the acts of third persons.[85] Except where the doctrine of comparative negligence exists,[86] contributory negligence defeats recovery,[87] unless the defendant is guilty of gross or willful negligence,[88] or, after discovering plaintiff's ligence. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836.

Held not negligent: Where plaintiff fell from wagon onto track suddenly and motorman did all in power to stop and would have succeeded had fuse not blown out. Moyer v. United Trac. Co., 221 Pa. 147. 70 A 551. Where plaintiff in charge of extension work on bridge gave no signal to motorman to stop, but took hold of girder swinging over the track and held it back and was injured because of inability to hold same which swung against second car and caught plaintiff. Fay v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 375, 113 NYS 689.

81. Morse v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 553. Instruction on duty to keep lookout held not to make company liable for failure to keep same without regard to whether it contributed to injury. Jacksonville Elec. Co. v. Hellenthal [Fla.] 47 S 812. Instruction held erroneous as allowing recovery if car was not under control and was running at excessive speed, although plaintiff was too near car to have enabled motorman to have avoided injury had car been under control and running at reasonable rate of speed. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaar [Ky.] 112 SW 1130. Instruction authorizing recovery on finding that operatives were negligent, and that such negligence "directly contributed to cause such injury," held erroneous as not requiring negligence to be cause of injury. Hof v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 445, 111 SW 1166.

Held proximate cause: Failure to keep lookout of collision. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569. Although decedent was knocked onto track by passing wagon, recovery may be had where but for negligent speed of car it could have been stopped in time to have avoided injury. Louisville R. Co. v. Buckner's Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 90. Where, if proper lookout had been maintained, plaintiff's perilous position would have been discovered in time to have avoided injury, failure to keep lookout was proximate cause of injury. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798.

Not proximate cause: Where motorman saw boy as soon as he manifested intention to cross track, failure to maintain lookout on front car was immaterial. Downey v. Baton Rouge Elec. & Gas Co., 122 La. 481, 47 S 837. Lack of control and excessive speed, where plaintiff stepped onto track too near car to have enabled motorman to have avoided injury had car been under control and running at reasonable speed. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaar [Ky.] 112 SW 1130. Where there is no evidence connecting death occurring several months after accident with the same directed verdict for defendant held proper. Krikorian v. Rhode Island R. Co. [R. I.] 71 A 369.

For jury: Whether violation of ordinance prohibiting horse to be driven faster than a walk, before reaching crossing, contributed to collision. Mullane v. St. Paul City R. Co., 104 Minn. 153, 116 NW 354.

82. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Where motorman saw child playing on sidewalk, he was not negligent in diverting his attention to other duties, and, where it was impossible to avoid injury after discovering child running towards track, there is no liability. Cloud v. Alexandria Elec. R. Co., 121 La. 1061, 46 S 1017.

83. Cannot rely thereon after danger becomes imminent. Randle v. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 114. Where motorman had reason to believe that one crossing track intended to go to platform at which passengers were received, he owed double duty to stop at platform and to avoid collision. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459.

84. Motorman attempting to clear tracks by pushing wagon held acting within scope of employment, though he undertook to push wagon to top of grade. Chapman v. Public Service R. Co. [N. J. Law] 72 A 36. Evidence held to show no authority on part of superintendent of electric railway company to direct employe of such company and of a power company to take care of high tension wires so as to render power company liable for his acts. Clough v. Rockingham County L. & P. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 223.

85. Company is not liable for injuries to one hit by bundle of papers gratuitously thrown from car by passenger without request from conductor. Louisville R. Co. v. Holmes [Ky.] 117 SW 953. Testimony of passenger that he threw bundle of papers from car and of conductor that he did not held to overcome testimony of one witness that conductor threw same.

86. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 2322, plaintiff can only recover where his negligence is less than defendant's. Macon R. & L. Co. v. Carger, 4 Ga. App. 477, 61 SE 882.

87. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Cobb [C. C. A.] 164 F 41; Anniston Elec. & Gas. Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798; Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821. Held error to refuse instruction that any negligence of plaintiff, however slight, contributing to injury defeats recovery. Hartman v. Joline, 112 NYS 1057. Where child was negligent in running ahead of cars, negligence in providing brakes held immaterial. Downey v. Baton Rouge Elec. & Gas Co., 122 La. 481, 47 S 837.

88. Complaint held to charge simple negligence in running at excessive speed. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Count held to charge simple negligence in failing to keep lookout, and held error to sustain demurrer to defense of contributory negligence. Mobile Light & R. Co. v. Baker [Ala.] 48 S 119.

Gross negligence: To run grip car on populous street without keeping lookout. Mc-perilous position, fails to use ordinary care to avoid injury,[89] provided it proximately contributes to the injury.[90] While a traveler may cross the tracks at other points than at street intersections,[91] or at a crossing which is torn up for repair,[92] and may ordinarily assume that the company will exercise due care,[93] he must observe reasonable care on his part [94] under all the surrounding facts,[95] and is not excused by defendant's negligence.[96] While the same degree of watchfulness is not required in crossing the tracks of a street railway as in crossing those of a steam railroad,[97] ordinary care may dictate that one look and listen before

Namara v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 645, 114 SW 50. Evidence that plaintiff, an old man, was run down while hastening along path adjacent to track, after signaling car to stop, to reach stopping place. Jackson Elec. R. L. & P. Co. v. Carnahan, [Miss.] 48 S 617.

89. While company, after discovering peril of one negligently on track, must use reasonable care, it is not liable for antecedent negligence. Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821. See post, subsec. B. & C. Mere fact that plaintiff did not look after leaving curb held not to warrant dismissal, where motorman had ample opportunity to observe plaintiff attempting to cross. Robkin v. Joline, 114 NYS 98.

90. Decedent's negligence in stepping immediately in front of car held proximate cause of death from collision. Lintz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. Fact that workman in trench near tracks knew that pipe on which he was standing had become slippery held not, as a matter of law, to have required him to anticipate that, if he slipped and in falling grasped the rail to prevent falling, his fingers would be cut off by car, the approach of which he had no notice. Hanley v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 55, 87 NE 197.

Not proximate cause: Contributory negligence in getting on moving engine where he had reached place of safety and was injured by street car colliding therewith. Garrett v. Beaver Valley Trac. Co., 222 Pa. 586, 71 A 1083.

91. Boyce v. New York City R. Co., 126 App. Div. 248, 110 NYS 393.

92. Not contributory negligence to use crossing which is being repaired, if still passable and open for travel. Springfield Consol. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 137 Ill. App. 561.

93. May assume that company will not exceed speed limit. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451; Hauck-Haerr Bakery Co. v. United R. Co., 127 Mo. App. 190, 104 SW 1137. Person seeing car approaching is not, as a matter of law, entitled to assume that it is approaching at lawful rate. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434. One crossing track is charged with knowledge of speed permitted by ordinance. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Where court had charged that plaintiff could assume that car was approaching at a lawful speed, held error to modify requested charge that, if it was apparent to person exercising ordinary care that car would inevitably overtake him unless speed was slackened, it was imprudent for plaintiff to assert his right to proceed, "though it was motorman's duty to slow down and stop to enable him to cross," by omitting quoted part. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434.

94. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969; Carrahan v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 198 Mass. 549, 85 NE 162; Birmingham R. L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93; Tognazzi v. Milford & U. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 7, 86 NE 799. "Ordinary care," as applied to driver of wagon on street car tracks, means such care as a man of average prudence, driving wagon in the city and on the street where accident occurred, would have exercised under same circumstances. Louisville R. Co. v. Boutellier, 33 Ky. L. R. 484, 110 SW 357. Instruction that if plaintiff, before going onto tracks, "looked a distance she thought sufficient" and saw no car she was not negligent, held error. Detroit United R. Co. v. Nichols [C. C. A.] 165 F 289. In the rightful use of street one may go upon track, but he must exercise reasonable care to avoid injury. Deitsch v. Trans St. Mary's Trac. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 841, 118 NW 489. Where excessive speed was manifest to one in plaintiff's position as he was about to cross, he is chargeable with knowledge thereof. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Traveler seeing car approaching must determine whether, in the exercise of reasonable care, he has a reasonable opportunity to cross in safety. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434. Instruction that, when pedestrian attempts to cross street car track at such distance from approaching car that he has reasonable ground to suppose that he will be able to cross, it is driver's duty to give him a reasonable opportunity to pass held not erroneous as making his mere "supposition" the standard of care. Sperry v. Union R. Co., 114 NYS 286.

95. Lintz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. Fact that when collision occurred plaintiff was crossing to reach platform at which car would likely stop must be considered. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Instruction that, when pedestrian attempts to cross street car track at such distance from approaching car that he has reasonable ground to suppose that he will be able to cross, it is driver's duty to give him a reasonable opportunity to cross, held not erroneous as excluding speed of car, etc. Sperry v. Union R. Co., 129 App. Div. 594, 114 NYS 286.

96. Instruction on negligence if speed limit was exceeded held not to allow recovery without regard to plaintiff's negligence. Engelker v. Seattle Elec. Co., 50 Wash. 196, 96 P 1039.

R. & L. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 833. Not per se negligence to not stop, look, and listen. Bremer v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 382. Failure to look and listen is per se negligence, if it appears that a reasonable use thereof would have disclosed the danger. Riedel v. Wheeling Tract. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821. Fact that pedestrian looked before leaving curb to cross track does not relieve him from duty of looking again. Glynn v. New York City R. Co., 110 NYS 836. Pedestrian seeing car 375 feet away is not bound as a matter of law to look a second time as he crosses. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Circumstances may make it negligence in fact. Denis v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047. Whether it is negligence not to look and listen depends upon all the surrounding facts and circumstances. Id. Driver of heavy load must look both ways. Langlois v. Chicago City R. Co., 141 Ill. App. 439. Unexcused failure to look, negligence, as matter of law, where looking would have disclosed danger. Cotter v. Chicago City R. Co., 141 Ill. App. 101.

Boise Trac. Co., 14 Idaho, 327, 94 P 432, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 254. * * * The motorman ordinarily is justfiied in assuming that a person using the highway will exercise ordinary care for his own protection (8 C. L. 2023, note 32). * * * See, for example, Baly v. St. Paul City R. Co., 90 Minn. 39, 95 NW 757; Bresee v. Los Angeles Trac. Co., 149 Cal. 131, 85 P 152, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1059. The general rule is none the less certain that at a street crossing the motorman in charge of a car approaching one discharging passengers is bound to keep a sharp lookout for * * * persons who may attempt to cross the tracks behind the standing or moving car, to have his car under control, * * * and to give such signals as will usually protect travelers who are in the exercise of ordinary prudence. Louisville City R. Co. v. Hudgins, 124 Ky. 79, 30 Ky. L. R. 316, 98 SW 275, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 152. And see Chicago City R. Co. v. Robinson, 127 Ill. 9, 18 NE 772, 11 Am. St. Rep. 87, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 126; Cincinnati St. R. Co. v. Whitcomb, 14 C. C. A. 183, 66 F 915; Birmingham R. & Elec. Co. v. City Stable Co., 119 Ala. 615, 24 S 558, 72 Am. St. Rep. 955. * * * Traction Co. v. Lushby, 12 App. D. C. 295, 301. * * * The rule in this state accords. In Watson v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 53 Minn. 551, 55 NW 742 Gilfillan, C. J., said: "At street car crossings as high a degree of care is required of those in charge of electric cars as of other persons using the highway." And see Gray v. St. Paul City R. Co., 87 Minn. 280, 91 NW 1106; Peterson v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 90 Minn. 52, 95 NW 751.

On the other hand, a traveler on a street has a right to rely on the exercise of prudence * * * by the motorman, and is not bound to anticipate negligence on his part. O'Brien v. St. Paul City R. Co., 98 Minn. 205, 108 NW 805; 10 C. L. 746. Thus, where he has alighted from a car and is passing behind it, and undertakes to cross another track, "he no doubt has a right to expect that any car which might be upon the other track would not run at a dangerous rate of speed and would be lawfully managed" (Creamer v. West End R. Co., 156 Mass. 320, 31 NE 391, 32 Am. St. Rep. 456, 16 L. R. A. 490), and that it would be under control, * * * and that it would give the usual warning of its approach (Scott v. San Bernardino Valley Trac. Co., 152 Cal. 604, 93 P 67; Spiking v. Consolidated R. & P. Co., 33 Utah, 313, 93 P 838; Binns v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 89 App. Div. 359, 85 NYS 874; Evansville St. R. Co. v. Gentry, 147 Ind. 408, 44 NE 311, 62 Am. St. Rep. 421, 37 L. R. A. 378; Smith v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 95 Minn. 254, 104 NW 16; White v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 63 A 931). "There is no priority of right, so that the right of neither is exclusive. * * * Life and limb are of more consequence than circumstance may excuse a traveler from so doing.[99] Where a perilous situation is quick transit. The opposite doctrine seems to have found lodgment in many minds, and there seems to be disposal to assume that a foot passenger has no right upon a public street as against a street car. * * * As a matter of law it is as much a duty of vehicles to keep out of the way of footmen, and especially at crossings, as it is for the latter to escape being run over, giving due consideration to the great difficulty of guiding and arresting the progress of a vehicle." Spear, J., in Cincinnati St. R. Co. v. Snell, 54 Ohio St. 197, 43 NE 207, 209, 32 L. R. A. 276. The traveler himself, however, owes the duty to exercise due care in protecting himself and in avoiding harm. * * * In some jurisdiction that care is held to be practically the same as the caution required of travelers about to cross the tracks of an ordinary freight and passenger railroad upon a rural highway; that is, he must, at his peril, "stop, look, and listen." For example, see Hoelzel v. Crescent City R. Co., 49 La. Ann. 1302, 22 S. 330, 38 L. R. A. 708; Hornstein v. United R. Co., 195 Mo. 440, 92 SW 884, collecting cases at 887, 113 Am. St. Rep. 693, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 729. This is the rule in Pennsylvania. Berger v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., 141 F 1020. That this position is not tenable clearly appears from what has been previously said as to the primary distinction between the mutual rights and duties recognized by law as existing between users of the highway and of a street car company. * * * Accordingly, this general rule is that the same care or watchfulness is not required in crossing a street car track as in crossing a railway track. Lynam v. Railway Co., 114 Mass. 88, per Gray, J.; Robbins v. Springfield St. Co., 165 Mass. 30, 42 NE 334; Hall v. West End R. Co., 168 Mass. 461, 47 NE 124; White v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 167 Mass. 43, 44 NE 1052; Marden v. Portsmouth, etc., R. Co., 100 Me. 41, 60 A. 530, 109 Am. St. Rep. 476, 69 L. R. A. 300 (a leading case); Newark R. Co. v. Block, 55 N. J. Law, 605, 27 A 1067, 22 L. R. A. 374; Consolidated Trac. Co. v. Scott, 58 N. J. Law, 682, 34 A 1094, 55 Am. St. Rep. 620, 33 L. R. A. 122; Richmond R. & Elec. Co. v. Garthright, 92 Va. 627, 24 SE 267, 53 Am. St. Rep. 839, 32 L. R. A. 220; Richmond Passenger & Power Co. v. Gordon, 102 Va. 498, 46 SE 772; Chauvin v. Detroit United R. Co., 135 Mich. 85, 97 NW 160; Pilmer v. Boise Trac. R. Co., 14 Idaho, 327, 94 P 432, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 254; Spiking v. Consolidated Railway & Power Elec. Light & Gas. Co., 33 Utah, 313, 93 P 838; Perue v. Citizens, 131 Iowa, 710, 109 NW 280; Kramm v. Stockton, Elec. R. Co., 3 Cal. App. 606, 86 P 738, 903; Niebeyer v. Washington Water Power Co., 45 Wash. 170, 88 P 103; Saylor v. Union Trac. Co., 40 Ind. App. 381, 81 NE 94. More specifically, "persons crossing street railway tracks in the city are not obliged to stop, as well as look and listen, before crossing such tracks, unless some circumstances may make that ordinary prudence." Taft, J., in Cincinnati St. R. Co. v. Whitcomb, 14 C. C. A. 183, 66 F 915; Brooklyn Heights R. Co. v. Gentry, 147 Ind. 408, 44 NE 311, 62 Am. St. Rep. 421, 37 L. R. A. 378. Failure to look and listen may constitute contributory negligence as a matter of law. Hooks v. Huntsville, R., L. & P. Co., 147 Ala. 700, 41 S 273; Blackwell v. Old Colony St. R. Co., 193 Mass. 222, 79 NE 335; Price v. Rhode Island R. Co., 28 R. I. 220, 66 A 200, 125 Am. St. Rep. 736; Phillips v. Washington & R. R. Co., 104 Md. 455, 65 A 422. The rule as to the requirement of looking and listening is not a "hard and fast one" (Mitchell, J., in Holmgren v. Twin City Rapid Transit Co., 61 Minn. 85, 63 NW 270; Shea v. St. Paul City R. Co., 50 Minn. 395, 52 NW 902), nor does "it apply with the same force" as at a railroad crossing (Lovely, J., in Metz v. St. Paul City R. Co., 88 Minn. 48, 92 NW 502. And see Shea v. St. Paul City R. Co., 50 Minn. 395, 52 NW 902; Smith v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 95 Minn. 254, 104 NW 16, and cases there collected), nor "in its strict sense" (The Traction Co. v. Lusby, 12 App. D. C. 295). And it has been held that mere "failure to look and listen does not per se constitute negligence." Spear, J., in Marden v. Portsmouth, etc., R. Co., 100 Me. 41, 60 A 530, 109 Am. St. Rep. 476, 69 L. R. A. 300; In Pilmer v. Boise Trac. Co., 14 Idaho, 327, 94 P 432, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 254, Sullivan, J., quotes from Richmond, J., in Richmond Passenger & Power Co. v. Gordon, 102 Va. 498, 46 SE 772, and approves the following instructions as a correct statement of the law: "While, generally speaking, one who is about to cross a street railway should both look and listen for cars, this is not an inflexible rule, nor is it to be enforced with any such strictness as in the case of ordinary steam railroads. It is not negligence as a matter of law to omit to do so. The question is whether men of ordinary prudence, exercising ordinary care and prudence, would have thought it necessary to do so." And see Evansville St. R. Co. v. Gentry, 147 Ind. 408, 44 NE 311, 62 Am. St. Rep. 421, 37 L. R. A. 378. Indeed, mere failure to look, it has been held, does not necessarily prevent recovery. Benjamin v. Holyoke St. Co., 160 Mass. 4, 35 NE 95, 39 Am. St. Rep. 446. In the nature of things, when failure to look and listen constitutes negligence must depend on the peculiar circumstances of each case. As Brown, J., said in Russell v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 83 Minn. 304, 86 NW 346: "Failure to look and listen might be conclusive or at least very strong evidence in one case, and in another of no controlling force at all. The ultimate determination of the question must depend largely in each case on the circumstances." And see Start, C. J., in Curran v. St. Paul City R. Co., 100 Minn. 58, 110 NW 259, and O'Brien v. St. Paul City R. Co., 98 Minn. 205, 108 NW 805. —From opinion of Jaggard, J., in Bremer v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 382.

99. Negligence in failing to look and listen depends upon all the circumstances and where car was at such distance that if it had been seen it would not have been negligence to attempt to cross, failure to look will not preclude recovery. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836. Where driver does not know of existence of street and physical conditions are not such as to reveal same, no absolute duty to look and listen. Id. Neither haste nor preoccupation of mind will excuse failure to created through the negligence of the defendant, plaintiff is not held to the same strict account [1] provided his own negligence did not contribute to the situation.[2] The question of negligence is usually for the jury.[3] While the negligence of the driver will defeat recovery by the master for injuries to the wagon,[4] it will not prevent recovery by the other occupants unless he is acting under their control and direction.[5] Such occupants, however, must exercise ordinary care for their own safety.[6] Negligence of the husband will defeat his recovery for injuries to the wife.[7] look and listen. Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821.

1. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Defendant cannot negligently place one in perilous position and complain that he does not act with the prudence which one would exercise under ordinary circumstances. Id. Where front wheels are on track where car is seen approaching very rapidly 20 or 30 feet away, it cannot be said as a matter of law that prudent man would have gone ahead or backed up. Adams v. Union Elec. Co., 138 Iowa 487, 116 NW 332. Negligence for jury in driving ahead instead of swinging to right to avoid car striking wagon on turn, car through negligence of company not being discovered until directly opposite plaintiff. Leonard v. Joline, 61 Misc. 336, 113 NYS 682.

2. Where plaintiff walked so fast that he could not stop before going onto track ahead of car, he cannot excuse himself under doctrine of "sudden peril." Rundgren v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 156, 87 NE 189.

3. Negligent as matter of law: In going onto track immediately ahead of brightly lighted car. Pietraroia v. New Jersey & H. R. R. & Ferry Co., 131 App. Div. 829, 116 NYS 249. Where one riding on seat of furniture paid no attention to approaching cars though driver stopped before van cleared track. Caminez v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 127 App. Div. 138, 111 NYS 384. One attempting to cross when the danger is so obvious that reasonable men could not differ in opinion about it. Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821.

Negligence for jury: Where flagman got too near track while flagging a team and was run down by car coming without warning from direction in which plaintiff looked just before commencing to signal. Ross v. Joline, 115 NYS 106. In attempting to cross after signaling to stop. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 774. In approaching tracks with automobile at rate of 4 or 5 miles per hour and without stopping, view being obstructed until within few feet of track. Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103. Where driver of automobile did not discover approaching car until within few feet of track, held not negligent as matter of law in going on instead of trying to stop in absence of evidence that automobile could have been stopped in such space. Id. Evidence held to make contributory negligence of one riding in, but not driving, automobile for jury. Wilson v. Puget Sound Elec. R. Co. [Wash.] 101 P 50. Where plaintiff standing at curve at such distance as to be safe if car was run at ordinary speed was struck because of wide swing due to excessive speed. Cordray v. Savannah Elec. Co., 5 Ga. App. 625, 63 SE 710. Where plaintiff, unloading onto platform between tracks, cramped horse so that he thought that car could pass though he was mistaken or horse moved. Obenland v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 127 App. Div. 418, 111 NYS 686. Where company sent flagman whose duty it was to warn men working in trench near track of approach of cars and he had regularly done so, workman was not negligent as matter of law in relying thereon instead of entirely upon own observation (Hanley v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 55, 87 NE 197), and company will not be permitted to say that he should have depended entirely upon himself (Id.).

Negligent: In standing between rails waiting for car which struck him, and in failing to get off notwithstanding he saw car 30 feet away. Wood v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 1121. Where facts clearly show that had plaintiff looked he would have seen car, his protest that he did not see car is of no avail. Riedel v. Wheeling Trac. Co., 63 W. Va. 522, 61 SE 821. Where plaintiff, seeing car approaching a little distance off and knowing that it would not stop unless signaled, stooped over rail to strike match to give signal, and was struck. Norfolk & P. Trac. Co. v. White [Va.] 63 SE 418. Testimony of plaintiff that he looked back four times as he turned onto track, where he testified on former trial that he looked back once. Bang v. New York & Q. C. R. Co., 128 App. Div. 134, 112 NYS 530.

Not negligent: Where plaintiff was struck by car, suddenly taking switch, through negligence of company. Reynolds v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1135. One crossing tracks is not negligent if it reasonably appears to him in the exercise of ordinary care that he can cross in safety, though he is in fact mistaken. Grimm v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 883.

4. Louisville R. Co. v. Boutellier, 33 Ky. L. 484, 110 SW 357; Potter v. Ft. Wayne & W. U. Trac. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 694.

5. Negligence of experienced automobile driver cannot be imputed to lady passenger who had and assumed no control over him. Chadbourne v. Springfield St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 574, 85 NE 737. Evidence held to authorize finding that mother was guest of 20 year old son who was driving. Peabody v. Haverhill, etc., R. Co., 200 Mass. 277, 85 NE 1051. Mere fact that plaintiff was mother of driver or that latter turned back at her request to get mother's glasses, held not to show that driver was under control of mother. Id.

6. Caminez v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 127 App. Div. 138, 111 NYS 384. Where husband with whom wife was riding was an experi-

"Last clear chance" doctrine.[See 10 C. L. 1743]—Where the person in charge of and operating the car [8] discovers one in peril in time to avoid injuring him but fails to do so, recovery may be had despite contributory negligence [9] which becomes a remote condition thereof.[10] It is not necessary that defendant's acts be wanton or willful.[11] The defendant, however, must have actual knowledge [12] of plaintiff's peril [13] in time, under existing conditions,[14] to avoid injury.[15] The doctrine of enced and competent driver and had full control of team, finding that wife was not negligent in not looking and listening sustained. Denis v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047. Where experienced automobile driver following street car on narrow bridge turned out to pass in only direction that he could, held that inexperienced guest was not negligent as a matter of law not warning driver not to turn out onto adjoining track. Chadbourne v. Springfield St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 574, 85 NE 737. Evidence that plaintiff, riding with her 20 year-old son who was driving looked for car, but view was somewhat obstructed, held to authorize finding of due care. Peabody v. Haverhill, etc., R. Co., 200 Mass. 277, 85 NE 1051.

7. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62.

8. Instructons as whole held to charge motorman alone with duty of exercising reasonable care, he being in control of movements of car. Heinzle v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 213 Mo. 102, 111 SW 536.

9. Anniston Elec. & Gas. Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798; Bladecka v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 965, 118 NW 963; Cole v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 440, 113 SW 684; Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980. Last clear chance doctrine assumes negligence of decedent. Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980. Notwithstanding plaintiff's negligence, evidence warranting finding that motorman might have avoided accident by exercise of due care after discovering plaintiff's peril supports general verdict. Wichita R. & L. Co. v. Liebhart [Kan.] 101 P 457. Whether plaintiff was lying drunk on track or was rendered unconscious by passing car is immaterial where car thereafter negligently ran over him. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Instruction that contributory negligence would not defeat recovery, etc., held erroneous as not limiting principle to humanitarian doctrine. Ross v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 472, 112 SW 9. Evidence held to support finding that motorman discovered plaintiff about to go onto track in front of car in time to avoid injury but negligently attempted by increased speed to pass him. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 774.

Negligence for jury: Where motorman saw old man about 4 or 5 feet from track approaching, apparently unconscious of his peril, and made no effort to stop until within 8 feet of him. Louisville R. Co. v. Knocke's Adm'r [Ky.] 117 SW 271. As to negligence in failing to stop after discovering plaintiff attempting to cross. Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 496. Evidence as to speed, distance within which car could be stopped and surrounding facts. Waddell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 213 Mo. 8, 111 SW 542. Negligence in backing in attempt to remove body held for jury, evidence being conflicting as to exact situation. Lintz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. Where facts are in dispute or different reasonable inferences can be drawn therefrom, questions whether motorman realized plaintiff's danger and whether he could have avoided injury by exercise of reasonable care. Randle v. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 114. Whether ring of gong was sufficient exercise of care to avoid injury to one walking near track held for jury. Id. Whether, after discovering plaintiff's driver going onto track, motorman could have avoided injury by exercise of reasonable care. Hauck-Hoerr Bakery Co. v. United Rys. Co., 127 Mo. App. 190, 104 SW 1137. Failure to discover plaintiff's negligence and to exercise reasonable care to avoid injury by stopping or giving warning signals. McNamara v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 645, 114 SW 50. Evidence held for jury whether lights were lighted and whether in exercise of due care motorman could have seen plaintiff on track in time to have avoided injuring him. Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980.

Held negligent: Evidence held to sustain finding that motorman saw decedent's peril in time to have avoided injury by exercise of due care. Roanoke R. & Elec. Co. v. Young, 108 Va. 783, 62 SE 961. Evidence of motorman as to speed of car, discovering plaintiff hemmed in on or near track, and actions thereafter, held to show that he recklessly ran into him with knowledge of his peril. Bladecka v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 965, 118 NW 963.

10. Randle v. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 114. Where motorman failed to exercise due care to avoid injury after discovering plaintiff's peril, plaintiff's original negligence becomes a mere condition. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798.

11. Heinzle v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 213 Mo. 102, 111 SW 536.

12. Knowledge of peril must be shown and proof of failure to look is not sufficient. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Complaint alleging that motorman knew "or by the exercise of reasonable care" could have known of plaintiff's peril, etc., held insufficient. Id. Where plaintiff, running alongside of car to board it when it stopped, was caught between such car and another going in opposite direction, and only evidence as to when he was discovered was testimony of motorman that when he discovered plaintiff he was so close that he did not have time to stop, no recovery can be had. O'Farrell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 615.

13. Not applicable where collision was caused by wagon wheel slipping along rail as driver attempted to turn out although

"last clear chance" has no application where the plaintiff knowingly encounters danger [16] or his negligence continues and contributes to the injury and is not a mere condition precedent.[17]

(§ 8) B. Travelers on highway. Injuries to pedestrians.[18] See 10 C. L. 1744. Pedestrians having an equal right in the street,[19] the company must exercise reasonable care for their safety;[20] but a motorman having reasonable grounds for believing that one on the track has knowledge of the approaching car [21] may ordinmotorman saw wagon for couple of blocks. Hebeler v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 551, 112 SW 34. Motorman, who mistook one lying near track for piece of dirt, is not legally bound to slacken speed. Trigg v. Water, Light & Transit Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 972. Since child 6 years old is too young to appreciate danger, motorman seeing her start diagonally towards street car tracks to cross is bound to realize danger. Heinzle v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 213 Mo. 102, 111 SW 536. Where deceased signaled motorman to stop, thereby indicating her knowledge of car's approach, fact that she continued to walk rapidly toward track did not charge him with notice that she was going onto same, it not being necessary to do so to board. Liutz v. Denver City Tramway Co., 43 Colo. 58, 95 P 600. Motorman, having right to assume that one standing between rails waiting for car would get off in time to avoid injury, held not negligent in striking him, where is appeared that car stopped promptly. Wood v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 1121. Duty of having car under control and of giving usual signals is part of duty of exercising ordinary care to discover the peril of persons crossing tracks and to avoid injuring them after their peril is discovered. Louisville R. Co. v. Knocke's Adm'r [Ky.] 117 SW 271.

14. Speed of car can only be considered on question of negligence in stopping car after discovering plaintiff's peril. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Where motorman sees one about to cross ahead of car, he must make reasonable use of means at hand to avoid injury without regard to such person's negligence. Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 496.

15. Unless car can be stopped in time to avoid a collision after discovery of peril, there is no subsequent negligence. Mobile Light & R. Co. v. Baker [Ala.] 48 S 119. No recovery where motorman did every thing possible to stop car after discovering plaintiff's danger. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Cobb [C. C. A.] 164 F 41. Where plaintiff suddenly appeared from behind wagon and onto space between tracks just as car reached that point, no liability. Norfolk R. & L. Co. v. Higgins, 108 Va. 324, 61 SE 766. Evidence held to show that motorman acted with due diligence after discovering plaintiff lying on track on bridge. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969.

16. Does not apply where one drives in front of approaching car knowing that he will not have time to cross in safety. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523.

17. Denis v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047; Denver City Tramway Co. v. Cobb [C. C. A.] 164 F 41. No recovery where plaintiff negligently failed to look to moment of accident. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Cobb [C. C. A.] 164 F 41.

20. Where motorman sees pedestrian on or dangerously near track, he must give warning. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93. Evidence held to sustain finding of negligence in maintaining lookout at street intersections. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569.

Negligence for jury: Running at high rate of speed around curve where car could not be seen for any great distance. Morris v. St. Paul City R. Co., 105 Minn. 276, 117 NW 500. In suddenly backing car without signaling, at night. Canerdy v. Port Huron, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 85, 120 NW 582. Speed and failure to give signals. Savage v. Chicago & J. R. Co., 142 Ill. App. 342. Motorman must approach car from which passengers are being discharged with car under control. Bremer v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 382. Whether plaintiff's position near track when seen by motorman was one of obvious peril. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93. Where evidence is conflicting as to whether car stopped to allow passengers to alight and suddenly started as plaintiff was crossing, etc. O'Leary v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 187, 85 NE 233. Verdict on conflicting evidence sustained. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Scanlon, 136 Ill. App. 212; Chicago City R. Co. v. Phillips, 138 Ill. App. 438.

Not negligent: Evidence of speed, giving of warnings, and efforts to stop on slippery rails, held to show due care to avoid striking deceased. Fay v. Hartford & S. St. R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 364. Where plaintiff is aware of approaching car, and danger from attempting to cross ahead of it is apparent, employes need not give warning or slow down. Mullen v. Joline, 111 NYS 776. Speed of 12 to 20 miles per hour in sparsely settled part of city, where tracks are on embankment seldom used by public. Trigg v. Water, Light & Transit Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 972. No simple negligence antecedent to collision, unless motorman could have discovered plaintiff's attempt to cross in time to have avoided injury. Mobile Light & R. Co. v. Baker [Ala.] 48 S 119.

21. It cannot be assumed that a person has knowledge of approach of car from mere fact that he is within sound of bell. Riley v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 72 A 562.

arily assume that he will leave the same in time to avoid danger, but such presumption cannot be indulged after the danger becomes imminent.[22]

While a pedestrian has the right to cross the tracks of a street car company, he must exercise due care,[23] and must look and listen at such points as to make it effective.[24] Crossing in front of known approaching car is not negligence per se, [25] especially where there is an implied invitation to do so.[26]

22. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93.

23. While pedestrian may cross street between crossings, company has paramount right of way, and pedestrian must exercise due care. Glynn v. New York City R. Co., 110 NYS 836.

Negligence for jury: In stepping ahead of car. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569. Where evidence is conflicting as to whether car stopped to allow passengers to alight and suddenly started as plaintiff was crossing, etc. O'Leary v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 187, 85 NE 233. In going onto track where plaintiff noted position of car when he left curb and again when he came to track. Robkin v. Joline, 114 NYS 98. Where old lady was run down at night by car going at excessive speed, there being a headlight on car, and she testifying that she looked. Plunkett v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 572, 114 NYS 276. In attempting to cross ahead of approaching car, which attempt would have been successful if plaintiff had not slipped and fell. Vandenbout v. Rochester R. Co., 129 App. Div. 844, 114 NYS 760. In going behind car at night, which suddenly backed onto plaintiff. Canerdy v. Port Huron, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 85, 120 NW 582. Where decedent looked in both directions before leaving curb and was struck by car running at excessive speed. Boyce v. New York City R. Co., 126 App. Div. 248, 110 NYS 393. Whether one repairing tracks of railroad company, which required him to work on or very near street railway tracks, in bending over to place plank after seeing car approaching 150 feet away, which struck him was negligent. Malizia v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 127 App. Div. 202, 110 NYS 1003. Where plaintiff was struck by car in daytime, where she testified that she looked and saw no car, and there was evidence from which it might be inferred that view was obstructed. Thornton v. Interurban St. R. Co., 128 App. Div. 872, 113 NYS 127. In going onto track ahead of approaching car, it having been signaled to stop at intermediate point. Savage v. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co., 238 Ill. 392, 87 NE 377. Where plaintiff testified that she looked but did not see car rounding curve, evidence being conflicting as to whether car was clearly visible. Morris v. St. Paul City R. Co., 105 Minn. 276, 117 NW 500. Where, at time plaintiff entered into danger, car was at such distance that he might reasonably believe that he could cross in safety, and collision was due to excessive speed. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Crossing in front of approaching car with knowledge of excessive speed. Id. Where one alighting from car looked for car on adjoining track when his car had proceeded about 10 feet, negligence in not again looking as he stepped onto track held for jury. Stewart v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1106. In passing from bench provided for passengers across tracks ahead of car, to reach boarding place. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569. Evidence that view was somewhat obstructed, that arc light was so situated as to tend to dazzle plaintiff's sight, held to make negligence in going onto track for jury. Hof v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 445, 111 SW 1166.

Negligent: Attempt to cross so close that accident is probable unless car stops. Moreland v. Chicago City R. Co., 141 Ill. App. 164. Where plaintiff saw car approaching rapidly 50 or 60 feet away and attempted to cross. Mullen v. Joline, 111 NYS 776. Where plaintiff saw car approaching but paid no heed to it after leaving curb to cross. Tully v. New York City R. Co., 127 App. Div. 688, 111 NYS 919. Fact that pedestrian testified that he looked but did not see the car held not to authorize recovery, where it appears from facts disclosed by him that he could have seen car had he used due care. Farese v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 959. In passing around car from which plaintiff had just alighted onto adjoining track without discovering approaching car, it appearing that she was following another and that car was running at excessive speed. Bremer v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 382.

Negligent as matter of law: In walking diagonally across track in front of rapidly approaching car without looking for one approaching from opposite direction. McVaugh v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., 221 Pa. 518, 70 A 822. One crossing track without looking after leaving curb. Glynn v. New York City R. Co., 110 NYS 836. In going ahead of car known to be rapidly approaching, having just alighted from another. Thomas v. Kansas City El. R. Co. [Kan.] 99 P 594. Walking in close proximity to track, knowing that if car came he would be struck without looking or paying any attention to cars. Fay v. Hartford & S. St. R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 364. In failing to look for greater distance than 50 feet up track before going thereon. Detroit United R. Co. v. Nichols [C. C. A.] 165 F 289. Cripple about 60 years old, in attempting to cross ahead of car which he saw approaching and in disregard of warnings. Callaghan v. Boston El. R. Co., 200 Mass. 450, 86 NE 767.

Not negligent: Where pedestrian suddenly walked into side of car to escape approaching team. Rose v. Alcott [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 67.

24. Looking from sidewalk at time when view was obstructed held insufficient. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Cobb [C. C. A.] 164 F 41.

25. But circumstances may render it negligence as matter of law. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Pe-

Children run over. See 10 C. L. 1747.—While the company is liable only in case of negligence,[27] due consideration must be given to the heedlessness and non-appreciativeness of childhood to danger.[28] Ringing of the bell is immaterial where injured child was too young to appreciate the warning.[29] Contributory negligence cannot be imputed to a child under seven,[30] and, until he becomes sui juris,[31] his conduct must be measured by the care to be expected of one of his age.[32]

(§ 8) C. Accidents to drivers or occupants of wagons.[33]—See 10 C. L. 1748.—While the motorman need not stop or slacken speed every time that he sees a team crossing the track, ordinary care[34] requires him to keep a vigilant lookout for those in danger,[35] although he need not anticipate that a team will suddenly change its course and go onto the track ahead of the car.[36] A rule requiring the motorman to have the car under control as it approaches a fire engine house is reasonable.[37] Negligence is usually a question for the jury.[38] One about to drive upon the destrian may cross track, though car is approaching, where he has reason to believe that car will slow down at crossing and give him time to cross. Vandenbout v. Rochester R. Co., 129 App. Div. 844, 114 NYS 760.

26. Where company provided bench for passengers on side of tracks opposite to boarding point, it impliedly invites them to cross tracks ahead of car, and must keep lookout. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569. Where plaintiff, who had just alighted from car, saw another on adjoining track, he could not go to jury on his right to rely, and his reliance in fact, on sign directing motormen to "go slowly," and on defendant's practice to slow down under like circumstance. Rundgren v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 156, 87 NE 189.

27. Evidence that motorman saw child running toward track when 40 feet away, and that car could have been stopped in 25 feet held to warrant finding of negligence. Tatarewicz v. United Trac. Co., 220 Pa. 560, 69 A 995. Rule that company is not liable where a child suddenly leaves place of safety and goes onto track is not applicable where company has notice in time to stop. Id. Evidence that car which struck boy was running "very, very fast," at "a high rate of speed," etc., held to make negligence for jury. Dirigolano v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 257. Where child suddenly ran ahead of car, negligence of company for jury. Feinstein v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 114 NYS 587. Could not anticipate that boys watching fire would run in front of car. Wilson v. Chicago City R. Co., 133 Ill. App. 433.

28. Evidence for jury where child was injured at crossing. Chicago City R. Co. v. Reddick, 139 Ill. App. 160; Rastetter v. Peoria R. Co., 142 Ill. App. 417. Negligence for jury in not running car at lower rate and in not having slack on brake taken up, there being several hundred children just out from school near track. Hackett v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 116, 85 NE 320. Whether motorman who saw boys playing on top of snow bank adjacent to track, or saw plaintiff attempting to climb up bank, used due care. Fogarty v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 964. Evidence held not to show negligence where children ran in front of car. Chicago City R. Co. v. Roberts, 139 Ill. App. 9.

29. Chicago City R. Co. v. Reddick, 139 Ill. App. 160.

30. Hackett v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 116, 85 NE 320. Child 4½ years old held too young to appreciate danger, and instruction on contributory negligence should not have been given. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaar [Ky.] 112 SW 1130.

31. Charge of trial court held to show that case was not tried on assumption that deceased child, 8½ years old, was sui juris. Grealish v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 114 NYS 582.

32. Colehour v. Rockford & Interurban R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 558. Child 13 years old held negligent in crossing track without looking after leaving curb. Glynn v. New York City R. Co., 110 NYS 836. Eight year-old boy held negligent in running immediately ahead of cars. Downey v. Baton Rouge Elec. & Gas Co., 122 La. 481, 47 S 837. Child 6 years old, in playing on snow bank adjacent to track and slipping onto track ahead of car, or in slipping back onto track while climbing up snow bank, is not negligent as matter of law. Fogarty v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 964.

38. Negligence for jury: Where evidence tends to show that motorman, having car under control and able to stop before striking plaintiff, suddenly increased speed as plaintiff approached. Migans v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A tracks must exercise ordinary care,[39] or rather, care commensurate with dangers incident to the particular crossing.[40] In the exercise of ordinary care, drivers may change their course as they see fit.[41] It is not per se negligence to cross the tracks withouut looking and listening,[42] and one seeing an approaching car is not arbitrarily obliged to stop,[43] though it is said to be negligence as a matter of law to attempt to cross when it is obvious that a collision will result unless the car is stopped.[44]

168. Negligent speed. Hauck-Hoerr Bakery Co. v. United R. Co., 127 Mo. App. 190, 104 SW 1137. Whether motorman exercised due care in keeping lookout and in taking steps to avoid collision. Louisville R. Co. v. Boutellier, 33 Ky. L. R. 484, 110 SW 357.

Negligent: Where motorman on car passing immediately in front of engine house approached with car at full speed and failed to see signal to stop, resulting in collision with hose cart. Dale v. New Orleans R. & L. Co., 121 La. 945, 46 S 929. Where motorman increased speed and ran into plaintiff where if he had been observant he would have seen plaintiff on track, but with sufficient time to cross if speed was not increased. Fallon v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 179, 87 NE 480. Evidence that car was far enough away to enable plaintiff to cross if motorman had been attentive and slowed up, but that he was engaged in conversation with conductor. Paff v. Union R. Co., 125 App. Div. 773, 110 NYS 145. Evidence of collision with wagon, excessive speed, and failure to give timely warning, held to sustain finding of negligence. Vincent v. Lehigh Valley Transit Co., 220 Pa. 350, 69 A 812. Evidence that motorman saw plaintiff when 100 feet distant, that car could be stopped in 90 or 100 feet, and that motorman applied brakes and then released same, held to sustain finding of negligence. Peabody v. Haverhill, etc., R. Co., 200 Mass. 277, 85 NE 1051. Where, notwithstanding negligence of driver, motorman could, in exercise of ordinary care, have avoided injuring one riding with him, recovery may be had whether failure to stop car was due to excessive speed or on account of his not maintaining lookout. Paducah Trac. Co. v. Sine, 33 Ky. L. R. 792, 111 SW 356.

39. Denis v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047.

Negligence for jury: Where driver of covered wagon testified that he looked through window and saw no car as he turned onto track. Shiles v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 68. In turning onto track to cross to barn, team being struck on second track. Wright v. Pittsburg R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 347. Where evidence authorized finding that when plaintiff approached tracks it was apparently safe. Migans v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 168. In attempting to cross tracks after seeing car 175 or 200 feet away, which was approaching at high speed. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434. Where, as plaintiff was about to turn team in street, necessitating going onto track, he observed car 900 feet away and did not again look. Grimm v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 833. Where plaintiff saw car but had time to cross if speed had not been increased. Fallon v. Boston El. R. Co., 201 Mass. 179, 87 NE 480. Where driver might have passed in safety had car not been running at excessive speed. Adams v. Union Elec. Co., 138 Iowa, 487, 116 NW 332. In looking for car, in view of obstructions and surrounding physical facts. Hauck-Hoerr Bakery Co. v. United R. Co., 127 Mo. App. 190, 104 SW 1137. Whether plaintiff, who was driving on track on dark, stormy night, used due care in keeping lookout. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700.

Held negligent: In driving onto tracks about 15 feet ahead of approaching car, whether at crossing or just beyond. Fitzgibbon v. Joline, 115 NYS 123. Looked and listened half block away, it not appearing whether view at that point was obstructed, nor at intervening points. Enders v. Brooklyn Union El. R. Co., 131 App. Div. 170, 115 NYS 155. In knowingly driving across track in such close proximity to car as to be struck before he can cross. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Driver of covered wagon in turning onto track without looking or listening, having crossed track and driven about 300 feet since last looking. Tognazzi v. Milford & U. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 7, 86 NE 799.

Not negligent: Evidence of obstructed view until onto tracks, speed of car, and failure to give signals of approach, held to show due care of driver struck by car. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836. Deliveryman in rear of covered ice wagon, who could look out only by leaning backward and around cover, held not negligent in not seeing car. Paducah Trac. Co. v. Sine, 33 Ky. L. R. 792, 111 SW 356. Where one seeing car approaching decides, in the exercise of reasonable prudence, that he can safely cross, he is not negligent in so doing though collision occurs. Adams v. Union Elec. Co., 138 Iowa, 487, 116 NW 332.

40. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700.

42. See ante, § 8A.

43. Adams v. Union Elec. R. Co., 138 Iowa, 487, 116 NW 332. While cars ordinarily have right of way over other vehicles, and driver of latter owes duty of looking before going onto track, where circumstances are such that he may reasonably assume that he has time to cross, it is not negligence to attempt to do so. Dietsch v. Trans St. Mary's Trac. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 841, 118 NW 489.

44. Langlois v. Chicago City Ry. Co., 141 Ill. App. 439; Sampsell v. Wilkie, 138 Ill. App. 518.

Driving on or near the tracks.[See 10 C. L. 1750]—While a company has a limited superior right of way over teams between street intersections,[45] it has no exclusive right to the space occupied by its tracks,[46] and one driving thereon is not a trespasser.[47] Both the company [48] and one driving on the track [49] must exercise reasonable care to avoid injury, and a motorman has no right to assume that such person will leave the track in time to avoid danger where it is apparent that he is un-

45. Held error to refuse to charge as to company's paramount right of way over one driving on tracks between crossings. Jaffa v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 131 App. Div. 852, 116 NYS 324.

46. Motorman has no exclusive right of way and must keep lookout and when it becomes apparent that vehicle on track will not get off in time to avoid collision, car must stop. Baldie v. Tacoma R. & P. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 162. Public having equal right with company in use of streets, use of portion occupied by tracks is not usually negligence. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569.

47. McKenzie v. United R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 13.

48. Mere fact that car has right of way does not relieve motorman as a matter of law from anticipating danger. Baldie v. Tacoma R. & P. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 162. Where motorman sees buggy hanging to or sliding along rail, ordinary care requires that he stop car or slacken speed. Kinten v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523.

Negligence for jury: In running into rear of wagon, evidence showing that in rounding curve motorman could not sand track, that trolley came off, that no explanation was made as to cause of trolley coming off, and tending to show that car was not in good shape. Conlon v. Pittsburg R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 233. In colliding with buggy hanging to or sliding along rails. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Car going at excessive speed, colliding with rear of wagon on bridge. Fledderman v. St. Louis Transit Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1143. Where car ran into rear of automobile driven on tracks, evidence as to darkness, speed and failure to give signals, held to make negligence for jury. Baldie v. Tacoma R. & P. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 162. In running into rear of buggy which was near tracks in narrow street. Heidemann v. St. Paul City R. Co., 105 Minn. 48, 117 NW 226. Evidence that work train which ran down plaintiff was operated at high speed without lookout at rear of backing train. Indiana Union Trac. Co. v. Pheanis [Ind. App.] 83 NE 1040. In running car at high rate of speed at night and colliding with wagon on track, without giving signal. Ball v. Camden & T. R. Co. [N. J. Err. App.] 72 A 76.

Negligent: Evidence as to clear view held to show that motorman should have seen wagon on track in time to have avoided it. McKenzie v. United R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 13. Where motorman saw plaintiff attempting to turn off from tracks, but unable to do so because of teams, and made no effort to stop car. Ross v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 472, 112 SW 9. In sounding gong and increasing speed while passing vehicle in narrow street, which brought horse in close proximity to car, thereby frightening horse and causing injury. Sauter v. International R. Co., 128 App. Div. 400, 112 NYS 863. Where motorman saw team 25 rods distant and should have known that sleigh bells would prevent driver from hearing signals, failure to slacken speed and to control car held to sustain finding of negligence. Denis v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 70 A 1047.

49. One driving on street car track need not look constantly to the front and rear, but must exercise ordinary care. Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980. One unnecessarily driving on tracks must exercise reasonable care for own safety, and cannot rely on motorman giving signal. Paladino v. Staten Island Midland R. Co., 127 App. Div. 183, 111 NYS 715.

Negligence for jury: In driving near or onto tracks in narrow street. Heidermann v. St. Paul City R. Co., 105 Minn. 48, 117 NW 226. Driving automobile on track at night without looking back. Baldie v. Tacoma R. & P. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 162. One driving 120 or 140 feet onto tracks without looking. Carrahan v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 198 Mass. 549, 85 NE 162. In attempting to turn to right in leaving track, instead of to the left, especially in view of fact that van made it impracticable to turn to left. Brunhild v. Chicago Union Trac. Co., 239 Ill. 621, 88 NE 199. Failing to discover car approaching from rear, although plaintiff testified that he looked back. Fledderman v. St. Louis Transit Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1143. Where plaintiff, driving on tracks, attempted to turn off, but was unable to do so because of teams. Ross v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 472, 112 SW 9. Where it appears that plaintiff drove out of alley onto track where view was somewhat obstructed. Vincent v. Lehigh Valley Transit Co., 220 Pa. 350, 69 A 812. Driver of huckster wagon who attempted to cross tracks but found rails too high and drove down track, looking for place to turn off. Indiana Union Trac. Co. v. Pheanis [Ind. App.] 85 NE 1040. In driving on tracks without keeping lookout to rear. Ball v. Camden & T. R. Co. [N. J. Err. App.] 72 A 76.

Negligent: In unnecessarily driving on tracks without paying any attention to own safety. Paladino v. Staten Island Midland R. Co., 127 App. Div. 183, 111 NYS 715. Where driver drove 200 yards or more on track without looking or listening for car and was run into. Hinode Florist Co. v. New York & Q. C. R. Co., 131 App. Div. 118, 115 NYS 252. Testimony of plaintiff, who was driving on track, that "after driving several blocks, I looked back, and saw car right back of me, and I was just about to turn out when the car struck me," held not, as matter of law, to show due care. Jaffa v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 131 App. Div. 852, 116 NYS 324.

aware of the approaching car and no signal is given.[50] Negligence of the driver is not imputed to one in the vehicle unless the driver was under his control.[51]

Frightening horses. See 10 C. L. 1752—The company is not liable for injuries caused by horses taking fright at such noises as are usual, necessary, and incidental to the lawful use of cars,[52] but recovery may be had for negligence.[53]

(§ 8) D. Bicycle riders; automobiles; animals.[54] See 10 C. L. 1752—A street railway company must exercise due care to avoid colliding with bicycle riders,[55] automobiles,[56] or other vehicles[57] and animals[58] on the track, but is relieved from liability by contributory negligence.[59]

§ 9. Damages, pleading, and practice in injury cases.[60] See 10 C. L. 1752—By statute, in some states, notice of injury from defective street must be given.[61]

Pleadings. See 10 C. L. 1752—The complaint must show a duty resting upon defendant[62] and a violation thereof,[63] and must characterize the negligence relied upon,[64] a specific allegation controlling a general charge of negligence.[65] While

56. Evidence held to warrant finding of negligence on part of motorman in not discovering automobile stalled near track, and avoiding collision. Lawrence v. Fitchburg & L. St. R. Co., 201 Mass. 489, 87 NE 898. Where bridge was so narrow that it was impossible to pass car without turning onto adjoining track, motormen must anticipate such situations and approach with cars under control. Chadbourne v. Springfield St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 574, 85 NE 737.

57. Where motorman ran into heavy truck on track as it was turning off, without making any effort to slacken speed, held negligent. Koehler & Co. v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 111 NYS 600. Negligence of motorman in running into steam street roller, speed being excessive, held for jury. Parker-Washington Co. v. St. Louis Transit Co., 131 Mo. App. 508, 109 SW 1073.

58. Negligence for jury, in taking no precaution on discovering cows near track 75 or 80 feet ahead, they being in safe place at time. Craft v. Peekskill Lighting & R. Co., 128 App. Div. 878, 113 NYS 235.

59. Negligence for jury, in passing behind standing car which suddenly backed up, there being nothing except trolley pole to indicate that it was backing. Singley v. Easton Transit Co., 221 Pa. 174, 70 A 718. Of engineer of steam roller in going onto track to get off soft asphalt after seeing approaching car, latter running at excessive speed. Parker-Washington Co. v. St. Louis Transit Co., 131 Mo. App. 508, 109 SW 1073.

Not negligent: Finding of due care sustained where it appears that automobile driver when 20 feet from track observed car 150 feet away and thought that he could cross, which he could have done had speed of car not been increased. Joerg v. Public Service R. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 1126. Evidence that driver saw no car as he drove onto track with heavy truck and was run into by rapidly moving car as he was turning off held to support finding of due care. Koehler & Co. v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 111 NYS 600. In remaining in stalled automobile after discovering car approaching 700 feet away, relying on motorman discovering automobile and stopping. Lawrence v. Laws c. 51, § 20, requiring notice of injury to be given to county, city, town, or person obliged to keep way in repair, is not applicable where negligence relied on was failure of man sent by company to guard trench dug by city to properly discharge duties. Phinney v. Boston El. R. Co. 201 Mass. 286, 87 NE 490.

62. Complaint alleging that sublessee was in possession and operating cars held not to state cause of action against receivers of lessee or of sublessee, there being no allegation connecting them. Henning v. Sampsell, 236 Ill. 375, 86 NE 274.

63. Complaint alleging duty to provide and maintain proper appliance to stop car without alleging that such appliances were not provided states no cause of action. Hackett v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 116, 85 NE 320.

64. General allegation that defendant negligently ran car into plaintiff without specifying particular wherein company was negligent held insufficient as a count in trespass or in trespass on the case. Newport News & Old Point R. & Elec. Co. v. Nicolopoolos [Va.] 63 SE 443. Petition held to state a cause of action for running into plaintiff while standing at curve but not on it is not necessary to name the negligent servant,[66] where negligence of servants is charged, it must appear that they were acting within the scope of their authority.[67] Where distinct charges of negligence are alleged, they must be consistent.[68] A motion to make more specific is proper where the complaint does not enable defendant to ascertain what car caused the injury.[69] Wrongful occupation of the street must be pleaded.[70] In some states, the complaint must show due care on the part of plaintiff.[71]

Ownership and operation of car is not put in issue by a general plea of not guilty,[72] and where defendant relies upon particular facts to justify violation of speed ordinance, it must plead the same.[73]

Burden of proof and evidence. See 10 C. L. 1754—Plaintiff has the burden of proving all the essential allegations of his complaint,[74] including defendant's[75] negli-track, who was struck by outward swing of car, there being a crowd listening to street vendor. Cordray v. Savannah Elec. Co., 5 Ga. App. 625, 63 SE 710. Complaint held to charge negligence in failing to give proper warnings and in speed of car. Engelman v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 514, 113 SW 700. Complaint alleging that while plaintiff was necessarily upon track its car propelled with great force struck his wagon, and his injuries were due solely to the carelessness and negligence of defendant, held sufficient. Wright v. United Trac. Co., 115 NYS 630. Complaint alleging that motorman discovered plaintiff in time to have avoided injuring him if brakes had been in working order held not demurrable for failure to allege particular defects. Smith v. Gulfport & Mississippi Coast Trac. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 295. Declaration held sufficient in action by pedestrian injured at crossing. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Scanlon, 136 Ill. App. 212. "Defendant then and there, by its servants, agents, and employees so carelessly, recklessly, willfully, negligently" drove and managed its car that "by and through the negligence * * * of the defendant through its said servants" the plaintiff was injured. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Mileham, 138 Ill. App. 569.

65. Evidence that motorman, in exercise of ordinary care, could have seen horse in time to stop held inadmissible under general allegation of negligence, which is followed by specific allegations not embracing such negligence. Dalton v. United Rys. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 561.

66. Complaint averring negligence of company in general terms is sufficient without alleging name of negligent servant. Anniston Elec. & Gas. Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798.

67. Complaint held to sufficiently charge that servants were acting for defendant in performing negligent acts, although containing no direct allegation. Cincinnati, L. & Electric St. R. Co. v. Cook [Ind. App.] 88 NE 76.

68. Count held inconsistent as charging simple negligence, wanton negligence, and failure to use due care after discovering peril. Anniston Elec. & Gas Co. v. Rosen [Ala.] 48 S 798. Petition alleging negligence in failing to keep vigilant lookout for children, in discovering plaintiff approaching tracks in time to avoid injury, and in failing to approach crossing with car under control held consistent. 74. Evidence held to sustain finding that decedent was run into while on track, and was not knocked on to track ahead of car by passing wagon. Louisville R. Co. v. Buckner's Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 90. Evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff was run into at street intersection by rapidly moving car, and not while crossing street diagonally and while suddenly passing from behind wagon onto track. Austen v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 115 NYS 582. Evidence held to show that decedent's death was caused by injury received before car struck him. Brink v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 1120.

75. Must prove defendant's ownership of car. Frisby v. St. Louis Transit Co., 214 Mo. 567, 113 SW 1059; Mobile Light & R. Co. v. MacKay [Ala.] 48 S 509. Ownership of car may be shown by reasonable inferences from facts in case. Frisby v. St. Louis Transit Co., 214 Mo. 567, 113 SW 1059. While defendant's counsel may concede ownership in opening statement, such concession is not available on appeal unless preserved in record. Id. Though defendant was named in caption as "Mobile Light & Railroad Company," held that jury might infer from plaintiff's testimony he had a mule killed on certain street, and that railroad runs on said street, that it was the track of the "Mobile Light & Railway" and that "they "operated cars. Mobile Light & R. Co. v. MacKay [Ala.] 48 S 509. Evidence held insufficient to show ownership, inferences from facts being equally applicable to gence,[76] since the law presumes due care,[77] although proof of the accident may raise a presumption of negligence under the doctrine of res epsa loquitur in some cases.[78] Proof of violation of franchise or regulatory provision for public protection is prima facie proof of negligence.[79] Defendant's negligence must be shown to be the proximate cause of the injury.[80] It is only necessary, however, to prove the substance of the allegations,[81] and where several negligent acts are averred, recovery may be had on proof of any one.[82] Plaintiff must recover on the particular negligence alleged,[83] and there must be no fatal variance between the allegations and proof.[84] Where a street car company employes a motorman under twenty-one, it has the burden of proving his competency in case of accident.[85] In some states, the burden of proving due care of plaintiff rests upon him,[86] but in other states such care is presumed,[87] but wherever the burden rests, the evidence of both parties must be considered in determining the question.[88] The usual rules as to time of producing evidence applies.[89] In the production of evidence the usual

76. Fay v. Hartford & St. R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 364. Where evidence wholly fails to show how far car was away when plaintiff stepped onto track or the surrounding circumstances, finding of negligence on part of defendant is unwarranted. Tully v. New York City R. Co., 127 App. Div. 688, 111 NYS 919. Where decedent's conduct and situation at time of accident is not shown and defendant's negligence is speculative, verdict for defendant was properly directed. Morse v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 553.

77. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523.

78. Applicable: Where trolley pole jumped track and no effort was made to prevent injury until pole became disconnected and fell onto driver of nearby wagon. Washington v. Rhode Island R. Co. [R. I.] 70 A 913. Where bolt is seen to fall from elevated tracks as train was passing and to strike plaintiff, doctrine of res ipso loquitur applies. Sturza v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 113 NYS 974. Testimony of track walker that he examined track following day and found no bolt missing, and testimony of foreman and track supervisor that no such bolt was used in track, held not as a matter of law to overcome presumption. Id. Sagging wire giving shock to passerby coming in contract therewith. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 100 P 300.

Inapplicable: Where uncontradicted evidence shows that turn out switch was of standard pattern and was properly laid, no recovery can be had under doctrine of res ipsa loquitur for injury received by one thrown from wagon which skidded against it. Alcott v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law] 71 A 45. Falling of wheel into cable slot held insufficient to raise presumption of negligence. Miller v. United R. & Elec. Co., 108 Md. 84, 69 A 636.

79. Violation of provision of franchise as to manner of guarding wires is prima facie negligence. Conrad v. Springfield Consol. R. Co., 240 Ill. 12, 88 NE 180.

80. While proximate cause may be shown by circumstantial evidence, it must be established by facts affording a logical basis for an inference as to cause. Morse v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 553. Mere fact that car was going at excessive speed at time of accident does not of itself show that it was proximate cause of collision. Id.

81. Where it is alleged that car was running at negligent rate of speed, to-wit, 45 miles per hour, it is sufficient to prove negligent speed though less than 45 miles per hour. Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103.

82. Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103.

83. Where negligence alleged was excessive speed, instruction submitting question whether motorman in exercise of ordinary care could have stopped car after plaintiff was knocked onto track held error. Louisville R. Co. v. Buckner's Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 90. Instruction authorizing recovery if defendant was negligent, etc., held erroneous as not limiting negligence to that alleged. Hof v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 445, 111 SW 1166.

84. No variance: Between allegation that plaintiff was driving "at or near the tracks," and proof that he was driving longitudinally on the same. Murphy v. Evanston Elec. R. Co., 235 Ill. 275, 85 NE 334. Proof held not variant from allegation as to hole between rails at crossing. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Fitzgerald, 138 Ill. App. 520. Complaint alleging that team "was struck and knocked down and run over by defendant's cars" held broad enough to admit evidence of collision with second car which ran into horses as they were being removed. (South Tacoma Fuel & Transfer Co. v. Tacoma R. & Power Co., 50 Wash. 686, 97 P 970), and, in any event, it must be regarded as part of same transaction (Id.).

90. Where plaintiff was unconscious when run over, his testimony as to his position is without probative force. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Evidence that after accident motorman would not stop car, but wanted to get away and desired to beat those endeavoring to detain him, held irrelevant. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434. Though injuries and death are conceded, evidence of character of wounds is admissible to show where deceased was struck and position when struck. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Where the insufficiency of headlight is alleged, evidence of civil engineer experienced in construction of street railways that at time of accident searchlights of considerable power were in use and approved, held relevant. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356. Although child killed was too young to be chargeable with negligence, plaintiff is not excused from showing her conduct and situation as bearing upon defendant's negligence. Morse v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 553. Where car was making nonstop trip and track was clear, held not error to allow evidence of speed several blocks from point of collision. Hillary v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 104 Minn. 432, 116 NW 933. Fact that injury occurred in thickly populated portion of city may be shown, though not pleaded. Reynolds v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1135. Fact that witness did not form estimate of speed as car passed but did so afterwards, goes only to weight of evidence and not to admissibility. Dalton v. United R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 561. Evidence of condition of street outside of track relevant as bearing on negligence of plaintiff in driving on track. Murphy v. Evanston Elec. R. Co., 235 Ill. 275, 85 NE 334. Testimony that car was going very fast as it passed her, that it stopped one or two blocks beyond and then started and ran very fast until it struck plaintiff, held not objectionable as relating to speed several blocks away. Id. In action for injury received by tripping over rail, the issue is negligence in maintaining tracks in safe condition and it is immaterial whether it is rightfully in street. Huff v. St. Joseph R. L. H. & P. Co., 213 Mo. 495, 111 SW 115. Where one attempts to board moving car, it is immaterial whether intention so to do was entertained when he left curb or came afterwards. Leighton v. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 283, 85 NE 309.

Ordinances: Ordinance requiring suitable and seasonable warning at crossings admissible on issue of negligence. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Martin [Colo.] 98 P 836. Where negligence charged is failure to give proper warning at crossings, ordinance requiring giving of suitable warnings is admissible. Id.

Rules of company: Where the violation of a rule results in injury, such rule is admissible on issue of negligence though it exacts higher duty than imposed by law, and was unknown to person injured. Sullivan v. Richmond L. & R. Co., 128 App. Div. 175, 112 NYS 648. Where automobile was struck while turning out to pass car on narrow bridge by car going in opposite direction, rule of company prohibiting two cars to be on bridge is admissible as bearing on negligence. Chadbourne v. Springfield St. R. Co., 199 Mass. 574, 85 NE 737. Rules of company as bearing on negligence, held inadmissible. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaugh [Ky.] 118 SW 276.

Prior and subsequent conditions: Evidence of condition of switch four hours after accident, there being evidence that conditions remained unchanged for long time after accident, admissible. Reynolds v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1135.

Custom: Evidence of custom of stopping cars at crossing to permit vehicles to cross when they were in position of one with which car collided, is admissible. Daniels v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 153 Mich. 96, 15 Det. Leg. N. 388, 116 NW 548.

91. Admissible: Declarations of motorman immediately after accident. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Declarations of motorman made at time and place of accident that he saw the man and his fate and tried to stop but could not. Louisville R. Co. v. Johnson's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 207. Where pleadings raise issues as to plaintiff's negligence and last clear chance doctrine, held error to exclude declarations of motorman made immediately after accident which might bear thereon. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451.

Inadmissible: Declarations of motorman immediately after collision with wagon that driver thereof had bothered him all across a bridge, held inadmissible where collision did not occur on the bridge. Brauer v. New York City Interborough R. Co., 131 App. Div. 682, 116 NYS 59. Declarations by motorman subsequent to collision. Mobile L. & R. Co. v. Baker [Ala.] 48 S 119. Declaration of conductor to motorman to keep still and not to make statement. Louisville R. Co. v. Johnson's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 207. Declaration of by-standers as to cause of accident, they not being connected with accident. Id. Statement by bystander that it was no wonder that decedent was hurt, in view of conduct of his companions, being merely an expression of opinion. Id. Declarations of motorman two or three minutes after accident as to how same happened. Morse v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 553. Declarations of motorman after accident as to how same happened held not binding on company. Id.

92. Statement of motorman out of court are admissible to impeach his testimony, but not as evidence of facts. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969.

93. Question of nonexpert "Now, from the way the curve was there, you may state what that indicated to you as to how the accident happened" inadmissible. Cincinnati, L. & A. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Cook [Ind. App.] 88 NE 76. Testimony that at time of accident witness saw flash of electricity and thought that he saw something roll held not objectionable as "not descriptive." Leighton v. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 283, 85 NE 309.

erning experiments,[94] expert testimony,[95] etc., apply. One not an expert may testify as to speed.[96]

Instructions. See 10 C. L. 1756—The instructions as a whole should fairly and fully submit the case to the jury,[97] conforming to the issues raised and supported by the pleadings [98] and the evidence,[99] without being argumentative [1] or misleading.[2]

94. Where person in picture was sitting up near rails where headlight would strike him but person injured was lying down and in shadow of bridge column where he could not easily be seen, difference renders pictures inadmissible. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Where witness stated generally that picture clearly represented the scene of accident but stated specifically that position of person in picture was different from plaintiff's position at time of accident, latter qualifies former. Id. Held that motorman did admit that dummy figures in pictures introduced to illustrate plaintiff's position were true representations of his position. Id. Nonexpert who has made observations cannot testify how far ahead one on platform can see with single incandescent bulb where power of bulb is not stated. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356.

95. Expert in operation of cars may testify as to distance in which car could be stopped running at speed of car in question. Randle v. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 114. Motorman of 17 years experience. Bladecka v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 965, 118 NW 963. Motorman of 5 or 6 years experience. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523.

96. Kern v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 451. Person who has been in habit of watching cars and estimating speed for years held qualified to testify as to speed on particular occasion. Fledderman v. St. Louis Transit Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1143.

97. Request for ruling on liability held properly refused as excluding question of contributory negligence. Blackburn v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 201 Mass. 186, 87 NE 579. Instruction held to ignore defendant's theory that plaintiff jumped from wagon and ran diagonally across track into side of car. Norfolk R. & L. Co. v. Higgins, 108 Va. 324, 61 SE 766. Where plaintiff was knocked down while walking on path along track, held that defendant was entitled to have liability on theory of simple negligence, coupled with contributory negligence, presented, and also right to presume that such pedestrian would leave path. Jackson Elec. R. L. Co. v. Carnahan [Miss.] 48 S 617. Where it was defendant's theory that plaintiff, seeing car, stepped onto track too close to same to enable motorman with means at hand to stop, and was knocked onto adjoining track too close to car thereon to enable motorman thereof to stop, instruction thereon should have been given that no recovery could be had unless inability to stop was due to negligent speed. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaugh [Ky.] 118 SW 276. Where court charged that, if accident happened as detailed by defendant's witnesses, to find for defendant, held error to refuse instruction that, if it happened as described by plaintiff's witnesses, they might still find for defendant, there being still a question of fact whether defendant was negligent and plaintiff was free from negligence. Netterfield v. New York City R. Co., 129 App. Div. 56, 113 NYS 434. Held error to refuse instruction that if, when approaching girder, motorman saw that his car could pass in safety, and plaintiff, who was holding swinging girder away from track, gave no signal to stop, verdict must be for defendant, girder having come into contact with second car because plaintiff let same loose Fay v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 375, 113 NYS 689. Instruction as to negligence of parents in allowing child to play in street, approved. Englund v. Mississippi Valley Trac. Co., 139 Ill. App. 572. Instruction as to contribution negligence of driver crossing track with approaching car in plain sight, approved. Chicago City R. Co. v. Soszynski, 134 Ill. App. 149. Instruction as to duty of motorman to anticipate danger, approved. Id.

98. Not supported: Instruction limiting recovery to finding that plaintiff was struck by "front of car." Leighton v. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 283, 85 NE 309. Instruction on last clear chance doctrine. Toledo R. & L. Co. v. Campbell, 79 Ohio St. 441, 87 NE 1142.

99. Supported: Held proper to instruct on duty to keep lookout, although there was no evidence of failure to do so, it being necessary to define legal duties of motorman. Louisville R. Co. v. Byer's Adm'x [Ky.] 113 SW 463. Evidence as to collision with buggy held to warrant instruction on last clear chance doctrine. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Evidence held to tend to show negligence in keeping lookout, and to support instruction on duty. Louisville R. Co. v. Byer's Adm'x [Ky.] 113 SW 463.

Not supported: Instruction based on sudden driving of plaintiff onto track held not supported where no one saw wagon until after accident and after it was off track. Murphy v. Evanston Elec. R. Co., 235 Ill. 275, 85 NE 334. Where accident occurred through negligence of defendant or of decedent, held error to instruct that there could be no recovery in case of mere "accident." Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980. Instruction that due diligence required of motorman to stop car to prevent collision requires that he shall use ordinary care to avail himself of all the means within his power to stop car held erroneous, where issues are negligence as to speed and keeping lookout. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Tomlison [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 871.

1. Instruction limiting recovery to discovered peril held argumentative. Birmingham R. L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93.

2. Misleading: Instruction limiting recovery to discovered peril. Birmingham R. L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93. In-

They must be consistent with one another[3] and should not invade the province of the jury,[4] assume facts in dispute,[5] or unduly emphasize particular facts.[6] Requested instructions, substantially covered by those given, need not be submitted.[7]

§ 10. Statutory crimes.[8]—See 10 C. L. 1759—Municipalities of Ohio have no power to enact penal ordinances requiring interurban cars to stop at street intersections.[9] By ordinance, cars in Detroit must run to the end of the line unless there is through car following in the same block in which case the car may be turned back to restore service,[10] in which case a transfer must be given,[11] and upon violation the company is subject to a penalty.[12]

SUBMISSION OF CONTROVERSY.[13]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[14]

An agreed case stands for a petition, answer, all the evidence, and a verdict struction that motorman performed his whole duty by sounding whistle. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co. v. Wanic, 132 Ill. App. 477. Instruction that one who by pursuing his course without increase of speed would naturally first reach intersecting point has right of way, as making jury believe that fact that plaintiff first reached such point was decisive of right to recover. Carrahan v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 198 Mass. 549, 85 NE 162.

3. Instruction that, if plaintiff was negligent in driving along track, "then he cannot recover," and instruction submitting last clear chance doctrine, held conflicting. Gessner v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 584, 112 SW 30.

4. Held to invade: Instruction that plaintiff was negligent in allowing himself to be or remain in close proximity to track. Birmingham R. L. & P. Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 48 S 93. Instruction limiting recovery to discovered peril. Id. Where negligence and contributory negligence were questions of fact, charge that, if jury believe testimony of plaintiff and his witnesses, then plaintiff has proven defendant's negligence and his freedom from negligence, held erroneous. Bingham v. Joline, 114 NYS 112.

5. Erroneous: Instruction held erroneous as assuming that defendant was negligent either in failing to control the car or to check its speed or stop it. Gessner v. Metropoltan St. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 584, 112 SW 30.

Not erroneous: Where defendant did not contest its duty to keep lookout, instruction properly assumed such duty. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. Instruction that: If therefore you find from the evidence that M. L. K. was at the time and place in position of imminent danger, and by reason of the fact that the buggy in which he was seated was upon or approaching track, etc., held not to assume that place was one of danger simply because buggy was on or near track. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Instruction that if motorman failed to keep lookout for deceased on or along track, etc., held not erroneous as assuming that he was walking along track. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Levyson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 569.

6. Instruction on contributory negligence, held properly refused as improperly pointing out particular things with respect to which driver should have exercised ordinary care. Louisville R. Co. v. Boutellier, 33 Ky. L. R. 484, 110 SW 357. Instruction that if motorman was exercising due care and had car under control, but plaintiff came onto track so close that it was impossible to avoid injury by exercising of ordinary care, there is no liability, held not erroneous. Goldstein's Adm'r v. Louisville R. Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 194.

7. Held covered: Instruction on right of employes to assume that driver of vehicle will exercise reasonable care. Jacksonville Elec. Co. v. Hellenthal [Fla.] 47 S 812. Instruction on rights of company because confined to track. Id. Instruction as to liability in case of pure accident. Id.

10. Right to turn cars to restore service, under ordinance requiring cars to run to end of line, except in cases of unavoidable delay, when cars may be turned back to restore service, is not affected by fact that there are cars in barn which might have been sent back. People v. Detroit United R. Co., 154 Mich. 514, 15 Det. Leg. N. 820, 118 NW 9.

11. Notice to conductor on receiving car to accept passengers without transfers is not a compliance, especially where unknown to passengers who were not aware of practice. People v. Detroit United R. Co., 154 Mich. 514, 15 Det. Leg. N. 820, 118 NW 9.

12. Prosecution under ordinance requiring cars to be run to end of line, except in specified cases, held a prosecution in name of state, and not a civil proceeding on behalf of passenger. People v. Detroit United R. Co., 154 Mich. 514, 15 Det. Leg. N. 820, 118 NW 9.

returned to the court.[15] It is essential to the consideration of an action submitted that the controversy be real, that the subject-matter be properly described, that all the parties agreeing thereto be persons sui juris,[16] and that the relief demanded be set forth,[17] but facts plainly evident or immaterial to the issue need not be shown.[18] The controversy must be one that may be determined by an action as distinguished from a special proceeding.[19] A court of equity may determine the question of title upon an agreed statement.[20] Statutes authorizing submission of controversies generally apply only to cases where the submitted facts alone are relied on.[21] A court of equity may set aside an agreed statement made under a mutual mistake.[22] The judgment must be strictly upon the agreed facts [23] where there is no reservation that the court may draw inferences therefrom,[24] and must be sustained thereby,[25] since the court will not go outside the facts and issues stated.[26] Submission under a stipulation of facts precludes objection for want of proper pleading by either party,[27] but does not prevent objection to jurisdiction.[28] Judgment on an agreed statement may be reviewed by error [29] if the statement is properly made of record.[30] The agreed statement of facts in a submitted cause is not evidence in a subsequent proceeding.[31].

§ 1. Definition and nature.[33]—See 10 C. L. 1760—Subrogation is an equitable doctrine that gives a party secondarily liable, who pays a debt, the right to any securities or remedies which the creditor may hold against the principal,[34] and is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another is primarily liable.[35] It is the mode adopted to compel the ultimate payment of a debt by any one who in justice, equity, and good conscience ought to pay it,[36] regardless of contractual relation,[37] and contemplates some original privilege on the part of him to whose place substitution is claimed.[38] It is generally confined to the relation of principal and surety and guarantors, or where a person is compelled to remove a superior title in order to protect his own, and also to cases of insurers,[39] but has been steadily growing in importance and extent in its application,[40] and is founded on the facts and circumstances of each particular case and on the principles of natural justice,[41] so that a court may consider it with other existing equities in the case.[42]

§ 2. Right to subrogation.[43]—See 10 C. L. 1760—It is usually essential that the person making the payment be under some obligation regarding it, or have some interest to be protected by it,[44] but this rule is relaxed in certain cases,[45] though subrogation is never allowed in favor of a person who is himself primarily liable for the debt,[46] or who will thereby reap advantage from his own wrongdoing.[47] It is allowable in favor of a surety,[48] or a guarantor,[49] or an insurer.[50] Other cases in who pays the compensation of officers of the court for services which are properly taxable as costs will not be subrogated to their rights.[68]

The doctrine of subrogation applies only where payment has been made in full,[69] at least so far as the rights of the principal creditor are concerned.[70]

§ 3. How forfeited or lost.[71]—See 10 C. L. 1781—The right to subrogation may be lost by failure to exercise it until after the statute of limitations has barred it.[72]

§ 4. Remedies and procedure.[73]—See 10 C. L. 1761—The right of subrogation cannot be invoked against one not a party to the suit.[74] It must in any case be pleaded and proved,[75] but may be allowed under a pray for general relief.[76] One asserting the right is not entitled to a postponement in order that the assets or securities may be marshalled,[77] nor can one entitled to the right be permitted to interfere with or delay injuriously the right of a principal creditor to pursue every remedy open to him for the collection of his debt,[78] nor can he force a creditor into a court of equity for the purpose of enforcing the collection of collateral notes.[79] A surety is entitled to exercise the right against the debtor but it does not give him the right to control the action of the creditor,[80] but special circumstances may take the case out of this general rule and give the surety a right to require the creditor to look to certain liens before calling upon the surety,[81] and a surety may prosecute his claim in bankruptcy in the name of the principal creditor, when subrogation takes place after proof of the debt.[82] In this connection the topic dealing specifically with the relation of principal and surety should be consulted.[83]

Like any other contract, a subscription must be on consideration [86] and is vitiated by fraud.[87]

§ 2. Rights and liabilities arising from subscriptions.[88]—See 8 C. L. 2944—The subscription contract is to be construed according to the usual rules governing other contracts;[89] hence such a contract is not assignable if it requires the exercise of personal skill and experience.[90] Whether the liability on the subscription is several, or joint and several, depends upon the terms of the contract.[91] Where each subscriber promises to pay the amount set opposite his name, the obligation is several,[92] and failure of one to pay cannot enlarge the liability of the others;[93] but if the total sum subscribed is in excess of that required, the amount collected from each subscriber should be proportionately less.[94] The subscription may be conditional, and if the conditions are not complied with, no liability arises.[95] A subscription made upon condition that a further sum shall be raised within a certain time requires either that the money be actually paid or that valid obligations therefor be given [96] in good faith.[97] An assignee of a subscription agreement takes subject to all the equities in the hands of the assignor.[98]

§ 3. Enforcement, remedies and procedure.[99]—See 19 C. L. 1762—Where some of the subscribers have paid the whole amount, they may maintain an action for contribution against those who have not paid,[1] but only for a proportionate share of the amount expended in accomplishing the object of the subscription.[2] Instructions in an action on a subscription must not be argumentative.[3]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[5]

The common-law rule that if one counsels another to commit suicide, and the other, by reason of the encouragement and advice, kills himself, the adviser is guilty of murder as an aider and abettor, provided he was present when his advice was carried out, has been changed by statute in different states;[6] but if one has counseled another to commit suicide and later endeavors to persuade the other to abandon it, he is not guilty of a crime.[7] Where suicide is not a violation of law, it has been held not a crime for one to furnish the means to another to commit suicide.[8]

SUNDAY.

The scope of this topic is noted below.

§ 1. Sunday as dies non juridicus.[10]—See 10 C. L. 1762.—Judicial business[11] may not be transacted on Sunday but ministerial acts may be lawfully performed on that day.[12]

§ 2. Violation of Sunday laws as defense to actions.[13]—See 10 C. L. 1762.—A contract executed[14] on Sunday is usually held to be void[15] as to one having some voluntary agency in consummating the contract on that day,[16] and is not susceptible of ratification,[17] and, while it may be subsequently adopted by the parties without formality,[18] it cannot be made to take effect from the beginning;[19] and acts done on a week day which are mere incidents to a Sunday transaction, will not save it from the condemnation of the statute.[20] Some courts hold, however, that a Sunday contract is voidable only.[21] Conversation relative to Sunday contract may be used to explain a subsequent contract.[22] The courts will not lend their aid in the enforcement of contracts which are illegal because made on Sunday but will leave the parties where it finds them,[23] and this is equally true whether the effort is made to sue directly on the contract or to interpose it as a defense to an otherwise valid cause of action.[24] A creditor who receives and retains a payment made on Sunday is estopped from denying such payment.[25]

§ 3. Sunday laws and prosecutions for their violation.[26]—See 10 C. L. 1763—Sunday means the entire day, from midnight Saturday until midnight Sunday.[27] A legislature may impose upon society the civil duty of observing one day in seven as a day of rest,[28] and laws to that effect are not unconstitutional,[29] but it is beyond its power to impose the observance of Sunday as a purely religious duty.[30] Constitutional religious rights are not violated by a statute prohibiting the sale of property on Sunday.[31] The scope of a law or ordinance with reference to the things, the sale of which is prohibited on Sunday, is a matter of construction.[32] Sunday laws usually except works of necessity and charity from their prohibitions.[33] By

32. "Goods, wares, and merchandise," and "other articles and things whatsoever," held to include newspapers on sale on tables and shelves of newsdealer. Newcastle City v. Treadwell, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 30.

33. Barbering not a work of necessity. State v. Kuehuer [Mo. App.] 110 SW 605; Ex parte Caldwell [Neb.] 118 NW 133. Sales or deliveries of ice or fresh meat is not a work of necessity. State v. James, 81 S. C. 197, 62 SE 214. One who desires to set up the defense that his opening of a grocery on Sunday was a work of necessity or charity must prove by satisfactory evidence that the sales which he made were of a character that would bring them within a proper definition of works of necessity or charity. Schlichte v. State, 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 265. The opening of a grocery on Sunday, for the purpose of selling to all who may come, is not a work of necessity, and is a clear violation of the statute forbidding the performance of common labor on that day.

NOTE. Sale of foodstuffs as work of necessity: The delivery of foodstuffs on Sunday may be recognized as a work of necessity (City of Topeka v. Hempstead, 58 Kan. 328, 49 P 87), but the sale of such commodities is not so privileged (State v. James, 81 S. C. 197, 62 SE 214, 18 L. R. A. [N. S.] 617; Arnheiter v. State, 115 Ga. 572, 41 SE 989, 58 L. R. A. 382; Commonwealth v. Crowley, 145 Mass. 430, 14 NE 459), nor is statute in Pennsylvania, cities of the third class have authority to enact Sunday laws forbidding the sale of merchandise on that day.[34] Some states make it unlawful to give public exhibitions or amusements on Sunday,[35] but in Texas it is lawful if no admission fee is charged.[36] The keeping open of theater and selling tickets therein on Sunday is labor within the meaning of an ordinance prohibiting labor on that day.[37] The rule ejusdem generis applies in determining what acts fall within the prohibition.[38] Playing of baseball on Sunday is not a crime under the New York statute unless an admission is charged or the repose of the community is disturbed.[39] There seems to be a conflict of opinions in New York relative to the status of moving picture exhibitions given on Sunday.[40] A farm laborer who sells refreshments on only one Sunday is not guilty of violating a statute against "conducting a business" on that day.[41] Having in possession in the open air the implements of shooting on Sunday is prohibited by statute in Tennessee.[42] If a train is detained by unavoidable circumstances, it may continue until it reaches its destination without violating the Georgia statute forbidding the running of trains on Sunday.[43] By statutes of North Carolina the permission of the railroad company to the running of the trains is an essential ingredient of the offense.[44] A conviction cannot be had upon a statute prohibiting the performance of business on Sunday unless the complaint or record negatives the exceptions as to necessary and charitable acts,[45] and one conviction for opening place of business on Sunday is a bar to prosecutions for opening at other times on the same day,[46] as the separate acts only constitute one entire offense,[47] but one may, by reason of separate violations of the Sunday law, commit the single crime of conspiracy to defeat such law.[48] The time of committing the offense of running freight trains on Sunday is not material.[49] In Greater New York a theatrical license which allows Sunday the sale of fruits, ices and pastries (City of Gulfport v. Stratakos, 90 Miss. 489, 43 S 812; Burry's Appeal, 1 Monaghan [Pa.] 89; Connor v. Quest, 36 L. T. [N. S.] 28) even within the statutory exception permitting sales of "milk, bread and other necessities" (State v. Jacques, 69 N. H. 220, 40 A 398), nor is the sale of milk permissible under a statute permitting its delivery on Sunday (Commonwealth v. Martin, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 154), but an exception has been made as to the sale of lemons on the ground of their well known medicinal value (State v. Campbell, 206 Mo. 579, 105 SW 637). It cannot be assumed in the absence of proof that the sale of meat on Sunday is a work of actual present necessity (People v. Hagan, 36 Misc. 349, 73 NYS 564).—Adapted from 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 617.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[52]

§ 1. Nature, occasion and propriety.[53]—See 10 C. L. 1765—Supplementary proceedings are not special proceedings but are proceedings in an action,[54] but while collateral to an original action are quite independent of it,[55] and, being summary in character, contemplates no pleadings or formal issue, their purpose being to discover property [56] which cannot be reached by ordinary processes.[57] It is the proper remedy to prevent disposition of property by a pledgee of the debtor, pending an action to determine the rights of property.[58] United States courts have authority to conduct examinations supplementary to execution as provided by the state laws.[59] In New York this proceeding may be brought before a city court justice.[60] In New Jersey, the district courts have jurisdiction thereof,[61] and a supreme court examiner may take depositions upon an order of discovery.[62] An agreement on consideration to refrain from supplementary proceedings is binding.[63]

§ 2. Proceedings necessary on which to base remedy.[64]—See 10 C. L. 1766—A final adjudication [65] in due form,[66] and in some states issue and return of execution,[67]

L. 1767—Such order may reach United States consol bonds [87] and also real estate situated in the county where the order is made [88] when the debtor has not parted with title thereto,[89] unless the action be only for the recovery of costs.[90] It may also reach the leviable interest of a debtor in his property, though subject to a past due mortgage,[91] and other property not exempt.[92] Where such order is in form a court order instead of a judge's order, it is not void but voidable.[93] Two orders cannot be in force at the same time.[94] Harmless errors in its issuance will be disregarded.[95]

(§ 5) B. Receivership or other equitable relief.[96] Receivership. See 10 C. L. 1737 When a receiver is appointed as authorized by statute,[97] he is immediately vested with title to the debtor's property for the benefit alone of that creditor for whom the proceedings were instituted.[98] The court has no power to order the transfer of an interest to a receiver when such action would destroy the right of redemption.[99] A receiver does not take title to realty but only the right of possession,[1] and his authority does not extend beyond the rights of the creditor.[2] He pays money to the plaintiff at his peril during the time allowed defendant in which to appeal.[3]

Action against third party. See 10 C. L. 1767—In California, by order of the court or after a denial of indebtedness without such order,[4] a creditor may bring an action against the debtor of judgment debtor,[5] which action is designed to take the place of a creditor's bill,[6] and is not dependent upon a prior garnishment of the debt.[7] In such action the right of the creditor in garnishment upon execution to recover the debt from the garnishee is superior to any claim or demand accruing subsequently,[8] and any variance in the pleading and proof therein that could not mislead or prejudice the defendant will be disregarded.[9] The garnishee may set off his claims existing against the judgment debtor at the time of the garnishment.[10] Such action is not barred by the statute of limitations, unless action is barred against the judgment debtor.[11] In an action against a third party to recover property fraudulently transferred, the gist of the action is the debtor's fraud,[12] and the creditor must allege and prove not only that a conveyance was made with intent to defraud subsequent creditors but also that the property was being concealed and withheld from the reach of civil [13] process, and that the debtor did not then have sufficient other property to pay his debts,[14] except in a case where it is contended by the plaintiff that it is still his property and merely transferred in trust.[15] A strong presumption of fraud will warrant a suit by the receiver to set aside a transfer,[16] and, while he need not make the debtor a party to such suit,[17] there should be actual notice to him of leave to sue.[18] If the receiver allege his due appointment, he need not aver that the judgment was duly recovered.[19] He may employ the attorney of the creditor to conduct the action.[20] He should not bring an action against innocent purchasers from transferee.[21]

(§ 5) C. Contempt.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1767—Obedience to orders may be enforced by contempt proceedings.[23] Contempt proceedings will not lie against a judgment debtor for false swearing upon his examination,[24] for failure to devote all his earnings to his creditors [25] or when the debtor's ability to comply with the order is not shown.[26] Proper service of the order [27] and its validity at the time of violation [28] are essential. SURETY OF THE PEACE.[33]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[34]

Where there are reasonable grounds for apprehending that one will commit an offense, the court may require a bond,[35] and an order requiring such bond is not appealable.[36] Actual violence, or a menace of violence, or any other act intended and calculated to excite alarm or to provoke a breach of the peace, is a violation of a bond to keep the peace.[37]

SURETYSHIP.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[38]

§ 1. Definitions and distinctions.[39]—See 10 C. L. 1768—There must be a principal to the obligation before a condition of suretyship can arise.[40] An accommodation indorser is in effect a surety,[41] but there is a distinct difference between an ordinary indorser and a surety in their remedies to secure repayment.[42] The creation

§ 2. The requisites of the contract.[45] See 10 C. L. 1768—It is essential to its validity that the surety be not disqualified by law to enter into such contract.[46] While it is necessary that there be a principal obligation,[47] failure of the principal to sign the bond does not necessarily invalidate the obligation.[48] Although a bond may not be so broad in description as the contract which it secures [49] or not exactly in statutory form,[50] it may yet be binding. Failure of the sureties to justify, when required by statute, is fatal to the validity of the bond.[51] A party may become a surety by his act of accepting a deed stipulating that he will assume and pay the mortgage indebtedness.[52] While a bond may be delivered in escrow to the principal,[53] it may not be so delivered to the obligee.[54] Mere irregularity in the filing [55]

46. In Georgia a married woman may not be surety for her husband (McDaniel v. Akridge, 5 Ga. App. 208, 62 SE 1010), nor bind her separate estate therefor, nor assume nor pay her husband's debts, if creditor has reasonable cause to believe such is the effect of contract, but mere cause to suspect is not sufficient as notice (Third Nat. Bank v. Pal, 5 Ga. App. 113, 62 SE 826), but as against a bona fide holder for value, a married woman signing negotiable instrument will not be permitted to show that she was surety, for purpose of invalidating her contract, under Civ. Code § 2488. Smith v. First Nat Bank, 5 Ga. App. 139, 62 SE. 826. In Kentucky a married woman cannot be personally held as surety on note but she may pledge her separate property therefor or her general property with her husband's consent (Daviess County Bank & Trust Co. v. Wright, 33 Ky. L R. 45, 110 SW 361), and may be held as principal when she signs as such (Swearingen's Ex'r & Trustee v. Tyler [Ky.] 116 SW 331). Where payee refused to accept her except as principal, she is estopped to claim she signed as surety, though money received was used by her husband who also signed note, it being an ordinary business transaction where the payee received no benefit except interest. Id. Fact that married woman does not claim her right to be relieved on ground of coverture does not prevent her later pleading discharge from judgment on other grounds common to all sureties, such as statute discharging judgment after seven years. Contract to assume and pay mortgage is not covenant of seisin or covenant against incumbrances since they do not inhere in and run with land, and it is not an integral part of the deed; and such clause is construed according to laws of state where contract was made, not where land is situated. Clement v. Willett, 105 Minn. 267, 117 NW 491. No personal liability, though deed specifies, taken subject to mortgage. Perry v. Ward [Vt.] 71 A 721. Where land was transferred subject to mortgages but not agreement to pay or assume, grantee, or his estate, was not personally liable, though assignor was husband of assignee. Kinney v. Heuring [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1053. In Minnesota, contrary to rule in Iowa, stipulation in deed to assume and pay mortgage for which grantor himself is not liable does not create personal liability, though where grantor had assumed, either he or mortgagee may maintain action against grantee. Clement v. Willett, 105 Minn. 267, 117 NW 491.

Old [Utah] 99 P 460), and intention of parties is sought to be ascertained and the same rules apply as to the construction of contracts in general, court being governed by language and nature of circumstances (Cerero v. American Surety Co., 59 Misc. 548, 111 NYS 615). Agreement to build, construct and complete, requires to furnish material and is an agreement to protect against liens, which are not a cause but a consequence flowing from nonpayment. Stoddard v. 80. Under Civ. Code, § 812, and Laws 1901, p. 1290, surety on guardian bond entitled to surety on a building contract is liable to the extent of the bond for amounts expended above the contract price after the contractor has abandoned the work,[81] but where, by consent he takes charge, he is not bound by any statements of the contractor made thereafter.[82] A judgment against sureties is limited to the amount fixed in the bond [83] and the actual loss or expenditure of the creditor.[84]

§ 4. The surety's defense. A. Legal defenses to surety's liability.[85]—See 10 C. L. 1770—A surety for pay cannot attack the constitutionality of an act requiring its principal to give bond,[86] or plead invalidity of his appointment,[87] or the action requiring the bond.[88] The burden is upon a surety to sustain a defense of ultra vires.[89] A surety may interpose the defense of usury [90] and of the statute of limitations by pleading such defenses.[91] Partial payment by a principal will toll the statute of limitations as to the defense of a surety.[92]

(§ 4) B. Defenses based on extinguishment or absence of principal's liability.[93]—See 10 C. L. 1770—A surety has the benefit of any defense which might be available to the principal,[94] such as failure of consideration,[95] release,[96] or absence of contractual liability,[97] since their liabilities are the same.[98] But while the general rule prevails that, where there is no liability on the principal, none exists against the sureties,[99] an exception is found where a person becomes surety for a married

But there is liberal construction of contract where sureties are not injured, and surety on contractor's bond is not released where another is placed in charge of work by owner under agreement with surety after abandonment by contractor. Title Guaranty & Trust Co. v. Murphy [Wash.] 100 P 315. Strict rule as to change of contract applies regardless of injury to surety, unless statute to the contrary, but since no injury resulted to surety from alteration, he was not released under Rev. Code, §§ 5686, 5673-4 Dodd v. Vucovich [Mont.] 99 P 296. Surety is bound only by strict terms, and it is not question of whether he is harmed or benefited, and advance payments made contrary to contract may discharge him. Eager v. Seeds [Okl.] 96 P 646. A change not injuring was held not to discharge surety. Eureka Stone Co v. First Christian Church [Ark.] 110 SW 1042.

17. Surety was not released by modification by parol which did not become binding by performance or otherwise (Willis v. Fields [Ga.] 63 SE 828), or by extension of time to which principal did not consent and where no consideration was given (Moyses v. Schendorf, 238 Ill. 232, 87 NE 401), or by unenforcible agreement by creditor to indulge principal (Corydon Deposit Bank v. McClure, 33 Ky. L. R. 679, 110 SW 856), or by mere mention of a change or giving right to apply therefor without consent that it may be made (McMullen v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 167 F 460). Extension of time granted where not provided for is a material variation. Id.

18. Invalid assignment by tenant of lease by assigning bogus copy while plaintiff retained original and had no part in such assignment did not release surety on lease. Fleck v. Feldman, 110 NYS 412.

19. Since act constituting change must have been done without consent of surety and by consent of one authorized to make it valid in order to release surety, an endorsement on note is not alone sufficient to show binding extension of time by payment of interest. consideration [24] or the acceptance of a new obligation due at a later time,[25] without the consent of the surety [26] and by authority of the creditor,[27] extinguishes the surety's liability,[28] as does any act whereby the creditor to the possible injury [29] of the sureties, interferes with their right to protect themselves,[30] unless it amount to a mere indulgence,[31] failure or refusal of the creditor to prove a debt in bankruptcy [32] or failure to present his claim against the estate of a deceased principal, does not release the surety,[33] but when the creditor has the right and opportunity to apply property of the principal to the satisfaction of his debt, his failure to do so effects such release.[34] A request upon the creditor to take action against the principal must conform to the statute to be available as a release.[35] While, as in the case of other alterations of contract, the burden is on the surety to show an actual and binding change,[36] any extension of time is presumed to be to his prejudice.[37].

(§ 4) E. Defenses based on impairment of surety's secondary remedies against principal, cosureties, or collateral securities.[38]—See 10 C. All that surety has right to require of creditor is that no affirmative act shall be done that will operate to his prejudice, as the law affords him sufficient protection. Yerxa v. Ruthruff [N. Dak.] 120 NW 758. Surety cannot relieve himself from liability by simple request of creditors to proceed against principal, nor will mere passiveness on the part of the creditor relieve him, especially where active diligence would hazard releasing surety. (§ 4) F. Defenses based on fraud or concealment by creditor of material facts.[43] See 10 C. L. 1772—Fraud by the obligee against either the principal [44] or the surety, unless waived by a subsequent act [45] or by an existing legal presumption in the case of official bonds,[46] is a sufficient defense; but the mere concealment of an immaterial fact [47] or a collateral matter [48] or even a false statement by a public officer not amounting to a breach of duty [49] does not constitute fraud.

(§ 4) G. Other defenses.[50] See 10 C. L. 1773—When a bond is signed by the surety upon a certain consideration, failure thereof relieves him from liability.[51] A new bond does not necessarily terminate the old, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.[52] Mere failure by plaintiff to inform the court, where an action is brought on contract against two parties that the relation of principal and surety exists, does not release the surety.[53] In a suit on a supersedeas bond, the sureties may prove tender and failure of the creditor to accept and thereby absolve themselves to amount of value thereof.[54] The temporary hindrance or claim, by a receiver in bankruptcy, of property afterwards released will not affect the sureties' liability.[55]

§ 5. Rights of surety against principal and cosurety.[56] See 10 C. L. 1773—Except in the case of a bail bond,[57] a surety can maintain an action against his principal in a court of law, or in a court of equity when equitable matters are involved,[58] upon an implied promise [59] for reimbursement in the full amount [60] which he has

57. There is no implied promise and the law will not enforce an express promise of principal or even of third party to reimburse the surety for loss on a bail bond given in criminal case, since it would be against public policy as giving the public the security of one person only instead of two. Carr v. Davis [W. Va.] 63 SE 326.

58. The right of surety to recover from principal the amount paid may be established in court of law, but his right to stand in the place of his creditor as to all securities, funds, liens and equities which he has may be established only in court of equity. 60. Surety may recover of his principal actually [61] been out in the payment [62] of any valid [63] and accrued [64] claim against his principal, for which he was liable, and including interest thereon at the legal rate from the date of his payment.[65] He should plead all facts essential to his recovery.[66] Ordinarily a surety has no right to initiate affirmative action against the principal until he shall have paid the debt [67] but is permitted by equity, in some instances, to bring an action prior thereto.[68] A surety by paying the whole of [69] his principal's obligation acquires the right [70] to be subrogated to all the rights, the costs which he has been compelled to pay in action brought against him as surety, since he is entitled to be reimbursed and made whole. Ordinary v. Connolly [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 363.

61. Cosurety gets the benefit of any compromise settlement, since a surety is not permitted to speculate off his principal or cosurety (Burrus v. Cook [Mo.] 114 SW 1065), nor to settle by giving his own note and then to recover full amount off the principal (Sandoval v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. [Ariz.] 100 P 816).

62. Where surety gave principal money to pay debt, he makes principal his agent for that purpose and principal is estopped to claim he paid debt with his own money whether identical be money used or not. Holtzclaw v. Craynor Smith Lumber Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 271.

63. Surety cannot recover for unauthorized payment of void judgment (More v. Churchill [Cal.] 101 P 9); nor of a judgment obtained against it on motion without authority of law, though there is provision therefor in stay bond, being a condition outside requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 943, and without consideration (United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. More [Cal.] 101 P 302). A principal is given no right in law or equity to recover on behalf of his surety money paid on a void judgment by such surety. Civ. Code, § 1559, permitting a third person to sue upon contract made for his benefit nor §§ 1050, or 2846, do not apply here, and his remedy is by defense if sued by surety. More v. Churchill [Cal.] 101 P 9.

64. A surety legally bound to pay an obligation has undoubted right to pay same and proceed against his principal or cosureties for repayment, as soon as his principal is in default and without waiting for suit to be brought against him. St. 1901, § 5007, an attempt of principal to escape payment by fraud is made ground of action, even before maturity. Id. Blanchard v. Blanchard, 61 Misc. 497, 113 NYS 882. Notice to cashier to charge against his account and cashier's agreement to do so is sufficient in equity to constitute a payment, though check had not been given at time suit was begun or note formally cancelled, and fact of cancellation might be shown by supplemental petition. Gribben v. Clement [Iowa] 119 NW 596.

68. Under the equitable rule, a surety after debt has become due may maintain bill to require principal debtor to pay it whether surety has been sued for it or not. Downing v. Robinson [Md.] 71 A 129. As between grantor and grantees, grantee becomes primarily liable for mortgage assumed and grantor is in position of surety, and upon failure of grantee to pay grantor may sue and recover amount due, whether he has paid it or not. Perry v. Ward [Vt.] 71 A 721. Under the stipulations of an excise bond as soon as liability is incurred, it becomes principal's duty to protect surety and surety need not wait to enforce his claim until he has paid the debt, but his cause of action is complete when he becomes legally liable. Sullivan v. Bankers' Surety Co., 59 Misc. 54, 112 NYS 173. Payment is not necessary before surety may recover from third party who has assumed principal's obligation, as where he took over trust deed held by surety as security. Elmer v. Campbell [Mo. App.] 117 SW 622.

69. Where surety pays only part of note, he has no right of subrogation but only right to sue principal for the amount paid; but, where there is security, and he pays full note, he is entitled to be subrogated to benefit of such security (Jefferson v. Century Sav. Bank [Iowa] 120 NW 308); as he is, also where the purchaser of mortgaged premises assumed the payment of the mortgage debt, and surety on mortgage paid the entire deficiency (Van Meter v. Poole, 130 Mo. App. 433, 110 SW 5).

70. Surety on payment of debt does not become ipso facto, subrogated to rights of creditors but only acquires right to such remedies and securities held by the creditor against the principal debtor.[71] A surety may prosecute his claim in bankruptcy in the name of the principal creditor when subrogation took place after proof of the debt.[72] It is not sufficient to save a principal from liability in an action by his surety that he indemnify and save such surety harmless, but he must actually pay the debt.[73] As between themselves, the mere form of an instrument of surety will be disregarded in the face of convincing evidence of its actual character.[74] In an action by surety against principal or cosurety, the statute of limitations runs from the time of payment by the surety.[75] All persons who are bound, although by different instruments executed at different times, for the same debt or duties of the same individuals, are bound as cosureties to contribute to any loss which either may sustain,[76] but a cosurety owes no affirmative duty to protect another against the contingency of liability for such contribusubrogation which he must assert before such legal remedy is barred. Burrus v. Cook [Mo.] 114 SW 1065. Surety has right to be subrogated to rights of creditor in a certain amount though she does not ask for it specifically, but asks for the whole fund and for all general and equitable relief. Ryan v. Logan County Bank [Ky.] 116 SW 1179.

71. See Subrogation, 12 C. L. 1760. Though such surety be wife of principal, and such security be a judgment against a third party. Ryan v. Logan County Bank [Ky.] 116 SW 1179. A husband or his heirs who is surety on mortgage given by his wife is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of mortgagee as against another heir of his wife. Wilder's Ex'x v. Wilder [Vt.] 72 A 203. Under St. 1903, § 4666, surety on payment of a judgment may have it assigned to him and is entitled to have execution issued for such amount as will fully reimburse him, including interest on amount he has expended. Patton's Ex'r v. Smith [Ky.] 114 SW 315. So far as necessary to protect rights of surety, payment of a debt does not extinguish it, but it still subsists with its liens and priorities to enable him to recover from his principal and compel contribution from his cosuretes and he is entitled to all rights and remedies of the creditor since such payment operates as an equitable assignment (Burrus v. Cook [Mo.] 114 SW 1065), but equity will not make the assignment where the sole purpose is to avoid the statute of limitations (Id.). Ordinarily, where the owner transfers property without express provision in reference to mortgage debt, the grantee takes subject to mortgage, but mortgagor is yet principal; and, if the land is sold to satisfy debt, grantee is entitled in equity to be subrogated to rights of mortgagee as against mortgagor and his remedy is in accord with rules in relation of principal and surety. Kinney v. Heuring [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1053. Sureties on bond of a delinquent official upon payment of such delinquency become subrogated to the rights of the state. State v. Reid, 122 La. 590, 47 S 912. Upon payment being made by surety, he is entitled to reimbursement by reason of any agreement therefore had with his principal or may sue upon the implied promise which the law raises in his favor or may be subrogated to rights of creditor, under Rev. St. 1901, § 3555, and the measure of recovery is the same whether action is brought on express or implied promise to reimburse for loss. Sandoval v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. [Ariz.] 100 P 816. Right of surety on public contract to be subrogated to contractor's right to reserve fund representing work done previous to assignment, in the hands of the government, is superior to any rights of assignees of contractor. Hardaway v. National Surety Co., 211 U. S. 525, 53 Law Ed. ——. Payment of judgment by surety cancels it as to both, since he should have it assigned to a trustee for his benefit; but, where he does not intend to extinguish the judgment, equity will subrogate him by appointing a trustee without such assignment. Bank of North Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N. C. 594, 61 SE 570. Several states have statutes held valid, to the effect that upon producing receipt showing payment surety may obtain judgment against principal through the clerk of court, who may then issue execution thereon. Id. In such case, as in case of any summary remedy, where no provision is made for notice, principal is entitled to reasonable notice. Id. Surety who advances money to his principal to enable him to redeem his property from mortgage is not entitled to be subrogated to rights of the mortgagee, the mortgage lien having been extinguished thereby. Handford v. Edwards [Ark.] 115 SW 1143.

It is essential for purpose of contribution that sureties be bound for same principal and for performance of same duty, although not dependent on privity or knowledge. Bankers' Surety Co. v. Wyman [Iowa] 120 NW 116.

tion.[77] To make one surety liable as principal to another surety, it must appear positively or by fair inference that such was the intent.[78] A cosurety who takes over property of the principal and disposes of it is in the position of trustee of the proceeds for the benefit of all the sureties.[79] Where successive bonds remain in full force, sureties are deemed cosureties.[80] When a principal debtor has given any security or other pledge to his surety, the creditor is entitled to the benefit thereof.[81] A surety may foreclose a recorded mortgage given for his security as against the principal or a purchaser of the property from the principal,[82] but ordinarily such right exists only when the principal is insolvent.[83] He has the right to assign security held by him to a third party who pays the debt,[84] and to retain money of the principal in his hands to offset his accrued liability,[85] but a principal, who applies money of a surety which he may happen to have in his hands to the payment of the obligation, is guilty of misappropriation.[86]

89. The remedy to enforce the obligation of surety on bond given to discharge mechanic's lien, and conditioned for payment of any judgment which may be rendered against the property, is not by action at law upon the bond but by action in equity, in which all parties interested, including surety on the bond, are made parties, and it is not a condition precedent to the bringing of the action that lienor shall exhaust his remedy against the landowner by recovering a judgment of foreclosure. the surety alone.[91] Any condition precedent that is not unreasonable, such as the commencement of action within a certain time,[92] the giving of a notice,[93] or the making of a demand before commencing suit,[94] must be complied with. If a bond does not express the intent of the parties, it must be reformed before it can be enforced, except in accordance with its terms as actually expressed.[95] An action is regarded as being only upon the contract set out.[96] A declaration incidentally mentioning a party as surety contains a sufficient allegation of suretyship.[97] Although a surety contract is not to be varied by a contemporaneous oral agreement,[98] a surety signing an obligation as joint maker may show by parol that he is surety only,[99] but the presumption of joint obligation arising from the language of the instrument must be overcome by the evidence.[1] The obligee must have conformed to the strict terms of the contract [2] and must show the default of principal [3] and the amount thereof [4] before he can recover from the surety. Where the plaintiff alleges a joint and also a several obligation on the part of sureties, he may recover on joint obligation alone,[5] but where a joint action against a principal and his surety is continued as to the former, it should also be continued as to the latter.[6] So long

98. Not by sheriff's promise that liability on bail bond would be less than expressed therein. Snowden v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 439, 110 SW 442.

99. Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 5 Ga. App. 139, 62 SE 826. Although name first signed is presumed to be principal, the arrangement of names is not conclusive and fact as to who is surety may be shown. Swearingen's Executor & Trustee v. Tyler [Ky.] 116 SW 331. Although fact of suretyship does not appear on face of note. Duggan v. Monk, 5 Ga. App. 206, 62 SE 1017. Signer may show that he was a surety only and that extension was without his consent as between original parties or if non-negotiable, since Code Supp. 1907, § 3060, applies only to holder of negotiable instrument in due course. Fullerton Lumber Co. v. Snouffer [Iowa] 117 NW 50. Statute discharging judgment against sureties after seven years have expired without execution being issued is available, even though record does not show defendant to have been surety. Columbia Bldg., Loan & Sav. Ass'n's Assignee v. Gregory, 33 Ky. L. R. 1011, 112 SW 608.

1. Evidence held sufficient to show defendant to be principal on note and decedent his surety only. Cotton v. Cotton's Ex'x [Ky.] 115 SW 783.

2. Since he will not be permitted to say that he paid out money in a way or to an extent not authorized by the contract, even though it went in relief of the possible obligations of the surety. Bessemer Coke Co. v. Gleason [Pa.] 72 A. 257.

3. In suit on appeal, default of principal in payment of judgment was not shown, Rabb v. Thomas, 137 Ill. App. 255. Breach of lease must be shown. Revel Realty & Sec. Co. v. Maxwell, 115 NYS 1033.

4. May show the amount of claims and that they are enforcible whether the claimants appear in the action or not. Exposition Amusement Co. v. Empire State Surety Co., 49 Wash. 637, 96 P 158.

5. Since defendant surety was not precluded by such pleading from setting up his defense to a joint obligation. Union Oil Co. v. Mercantile Refining Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 919.

6. Medlock v. Wood, 4 Ga. App. 368, 61 SE 516.

as a judgment against a principal stands, that against the surety cannot be impeached, since his liability exists the same whether the judgment be right or wrong.[7] An execution creditor may proceed against the property of either the principal or the surety.[8] In an action of surety against principal in the same court in which the obligee has a judgment against both, the court may properly order any amount collected to be paid to the clerk of the court for the benefit of the owner of the judgment.[9] Sureties are not estopped from denying liability to the obligee by acts merely tortuous toward the principal,[10] but may waive their rights of defense by failure to disclose the suretyship,[11] or in an action may lose such rights by failure to properly select and plead their remedy.[12] In an action against the principal for reimbursement, the pleadings need to be drawn with care.[13] A surety on a materialman's bond is not thereby estopped from setting up a lien against the property.[14]

TAXES.

7. And in case suit be brought by the surety to set aside such judgment for fraud, the principal must be party to it. Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 Law. Ed. 74. Judgment against surety on bond is conclusive as to matters at issue, but liability of officer is not recoverable against his estate (United States Fidelity & Guarantee Co. v. Haggart [C. C. A.] 163 F 801), as on a bond for payment of any judgment obtained (City of Chamberlain v. Quarnberg [S. D.] 119 NW 1026) or on bond in garnishment (Jordan v. Thornton, 5 Ga. App. 537, 63 SE 601). Issues decided conclusive against surety or in action on supersedeas bond (Mershman v. Robert Field Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 1119), in the absence of fraud or collusion (Wiseman v. Swain [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 145.)

8. Jordon v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank, 5 Ga. App. 244, 62 SE 1024. It is not necessary in order to charge sureties on appeal bond that execution on judgment recovered in appellate court should be issued against principal, since upon affirmance surety becomes liable to same extent as principal obligor. Sandoval v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. [Ariz.] 100 P 816.

10. Such as appropriating material contractor left and requesting owner not to sue until they could see what could be done about getting things in shape to go on with the building, or in acquiring property from contractor's wife under agreement to apply it to completion of work. School Dist. of Barfield v. Green [Mo. App.] 114 SW 578.

11. Where maker of note induces assignee to take it, by representing it to be good and that it will be paid on maturity and did not disclose fact that he was surety for the payee, he cannot afterwards assert an equity against the assignor, who is payee, to defeat the assignee in his recovery. Harris' Ex'rs v. Walker [Ky.] 115 SW 220.

12. Remedy is at law by plea of non est factum where surety signs with condition preventing its becoming his act until a contingency happens, unless failure to comply with such condition would constitute fraud upon him in which case his remedy would be either at law or in equity. Hunter v. First Nat. Bank [Ind.] 87 NE 734.

13. Proper plea is non damnificatus where condition of obligation is to indemnify and save harmless, but plea setting forth affirmatively the special manner of performance is proper where condition is to discharge and acquit. Perry v. Ward [Vt.] 71 A 721.

14. No privity between him and owner to prevent, though settlement made with guarantee company which lienor agreed to indemnify, before suit begun on leins, especially where lien exceeds amount of bond. Pine Bluff Lodge of Elks No. 149 v. Sanders [Ark.] 111 SW 265.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[15]

§ 1. Nature and kinds, and power to tax.[16] See 10 C. L. 1776—A tax is not a debt in the ordinary sense of that word,[17] but is, strictly speaking, an exaction of the sovereign power from the individuals subject thereto for the purpose of the support and conduct of the government,[18] and, while other exactions, more or less in the nature of taxes, are made by the sovereign power,[19] the distinguishing feature of a tax is that it is imposed for the support of the government.[20] Taxes in this sense

15. This topic is confined to the treatment of taxes, levied by the state and subdivisions thereof (see Internal Revenue Laws, 12 C. L. 323; Intoxicating Liquors, 12 C. L. 332, and similar topics) for the purpose of revenue. As to so called taxes imposed in the exercise of the Police Power, see Licenses, 12 C. L. 593; Foreign Corporations, 11 C. L. 1508; Animals, 11 C. L. 109; Corporations, 11 C. L. 810. As to special assessments for public improvements, see Public Works and Improvements, 12 C. L. 1478. 17. Taxes on land are not debts nor personal charges against the owner. Lucas v. Purdy [Iowa] 120 NW 1063. See post, § 11B.

18. Every burden which state imposes on its citizens with view to revenue is levied under taxing power, whatsoever its name. Yomhill County v. Foster [Or.] 99 P 286. Tax is pecuniary burden imposed for support of government. City of Savannah v. Cooper [Ga.] 63 SE 138. Special taxes voted in favor of railroads are not special assessments. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Shaw, 121 La. 997, 46 S 994.

20. Taxation exacts money from persons as their share of public burden. Lucas v. Purdy [Iowa] 120 NW 1063. Theoretically, taxpayer receives just compensation in benefits conferred by government in proper application of taxes. Id.

may be divided into three classes; to-wit: Property taxes in general;[21] inheritance or transfer taxes;[22] and income taxes.[23] Within the first of these classes, the most natural division is according to objects or persons taxed,[24] which includes the particular methods that may be adopted as to particular objects or persons.[25] All taxation is statutory, and, while it is the duty of every citizen to bear his proportion of the public expense, he cannot be compelled to do so except as provided by statute.[26] The power to tax is an attribute of sovereignty, inherent in the legislature,[27] and subject only to constitutional limitations,[28] such as those relating to the character of the laws by which taxes may be imposed,[29] purposes of the tax,[30] equality and uni-

21. See post, § 2. Persons, Objects and Interests Taxable. Tax imposed on carrying on business, trade or profession is not direct tax on property. Salt Lake City v. Christensen Co., 34 Utah, 38, 95 P 523. See Licenses, 12 C. L. 593. Two per cent paid on premiums received by foreign insurance companies, as provided by Rev. Laws 1905, § 1625, is not a gross earnings tax. Real and personal property of the company within the state is taxable the same as property of individuals. Mutual Benefit Ins. Co. v. Martin County, 104 Minn. 179, 116 NW 572.

22. See post, § 15.

23. See post, § 16.

24. See post, § 2, Persons, Objects and Interests Taxable.

25. See post, § 2A, Taxable Property and Its Classification.

26. Schmuck v. Hartman, 222 Pa. 190, 70 A 1091. As general rule personal liability for taxes must be created by express statutory words and not by inference. Rogers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 85 NE 405. Liability to pay taxes arises from no contractual relation between taxable and taxing power, and cannot be enforced by common-law proceedings unless statute so provides. Schmuck v. Hartman, 222 Pa. 190, 70 A 1091.

27. Whole power of taxation within defined limits is with legislature. In re Lochitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32. A uniform tax on all real and personal property in a taxing district for the construction and repair of highways is for a governmental purpose, and if unwise, unjust or oppressive, relief must be sought from the legislative and not from the judicial department. State v. Marion County Com'rs [Ind.] 85 NE 513.

28. Powers of legislature relative to taxation is unlimited, except as restricted by state or federal constitutions. State v. Marion County Com'rs [Ind.] 85 NE 513. Where neither constitution nor statutes impose absolute restrictions on power of taxation, courts may not arbitrarily impose any unless taxing power is abused, that is, not unless a tax is clearly oppressive or discriminatory. Salt Lake City v. Christensen Co., 34 Utah, 38, 95 P 523. Taxing power, when confined to its legitimate sphere, is one which knows no stopping place until it has accomplished the purpose for which it exists, and it exists for purpose of collecting from every lawful object of taxation its proportionate share of public burden. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002. Laws 1907, c. 237, making counties liable for support of feeble minded held not to violate Const. § 174, limiting to four mill tax. State v. Lewis [N. D.] 119 NW 1037. Const. Art. 9, § 1, declaring that general assembly may provide for revenue tax on peddlers, etc., did not deprive it of authority to enact Hurd's Rev. St., c. 24, art. 5, § 1, authorizing cities to impose license tax on vehicles for revenue purposes. Harder's Fireproof Storage & Van Co. v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 58, 85 NE 245.

Power to tax national banks: Before state statute denying right to deduct debts from stock in national banks, but allowing such deduction from other investments, can be held to violate Rev. St. U. S., § 5219, prohibiting state from taxing such stock at greater rate than is assessed on other moneyed capital in hands of individuals, it must appear that such other capital exists in such amount as to operate as a discrimination against such banks, and that it is of such character as to come in competiton with national banks. West Virginia Nat. Bank v. Dunkle [W. Va.] 64 SE 531.

29. That Acts 1907, p. 760, § 120, relative to special road and bridge tax, are embodied as section in printed code of 1907 imparts to it no validity, since it was adopted, after code was adopted. City of Anniston v. Calhoun County Com'rs [Ala.] 48 S 605. Statutes 1883, p. 273, is general law for cities of 6th class enacted pursuant to Const. art. 11, § 12, making it duty of legislature to vest in cities power to assess and collect taxes for municipal purposes. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 790, relating to duties of county boards of revenue, etc., held void as to that provision as not expressed in title. State v. Miller [Ala.] 48 S 496. Acts 1906, p. 61, amending Acts 1905, p. 425, is not unconstitutional on the ground that body of act is not expressed in its caption. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. Such act is not void because it fails to express the purpose of the tax. Id. Sess. Laws 1907-08, p. 729, are purely remedial. It does not attempt to levy a tax but only to confirm pre-existing rights by providing means of collecting taxes on omitted property. Such statute is not repugnant to § 19, art. 10, of the constitution providing that every statute levying a tax shall specify the purpose for which it is levied, and it shall not be devoted to any other purpose. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002.

30. Must be levied for a public purpose. Widening of a street is a public purpose (In re Lockitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32), under Bill of Rights, art. 9, but the legislature has large discretion in determining what formity,[31] double taxation,[32] obligations of contracts,[33] and due process of law.[34] Absolute uniformity, however, is unattainable and impracticable and hence a reasonable classification is permissible,[35] as to both persons and property,[36] and the state constitutes a public purpose. (City of Burlington v. Central Vermont R. Co. [Vt.] 71 A 826). Acts 1906, p. 356, No. 262, authorizing city of Burlington to raise money to construct and maintain public wharf construed to be for public purpose. Id. Taxing power cannot be used to require the taxpayers to donate to the support of an existing art museum, the constitution art. 10, §§ 3, 10, art. 4, §§ 46, 47, art. 9, § 6, being prohibitive. State v. St. Louis [Mo.] 115 SW 534.

31. Under rule of uniformity theory upon which taxes are imposed is that property shall contribute in proportion to its value and thus bear as near as may be its equal share of the burden. City of Owensboro v. Sweeney, 33 Ky. L. R. 823, 930, 111 SW 364. Rate must be equal and uniform throughout taxing district, whether state or local. Yamhill County v. Foster [Or.] 99 P 286. The fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States requires a system of taxation which gives equal protection of the laws to real estate located in the same district, but this constitutional provision is not violated by a special assessment to maintain a boulevard. Field v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 662, 111 SW 129, following Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115. Constitutional provision imposing equality and uniformity is limited to direct property tax which is assessed and collected in usual way, and does not apply to occupation or license tax. Salt Lake City v. Christensen Co., 34 Utah, 38, 95 P 523. In assessment and collection of taxes due on omitted property, it is uniformity of burden, and not identity of method of enforcement, which is required by constitutional principles. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002. The legislature is not bound to impose the same franchise tax on all corporations, the ordinary rules of taxation not applying in such case. People v. Glynn, 194 N. Y. 387, 87 NE 434.

32. As general rule, the scheme of taxation seeks to avoid double taxation. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. State is not entitled to double taxes does not amount to double taxation. v. Allen [W. Va.] 64 SE 140. In case of double assessment, one payment is all state can require. Id.

Held not double taxation to tax shareholder upon shares in addition to taxing corporation on its capital. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. That a corporation has paid taxes levied on its property, "including the value of its franchise," does not render void the initiative measure of 1906 imposing a gross earnings tax, where at the time of the assessment there was no law requiring a corporate franchise to be assessed. State v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 99 P 427. Imposition of license tax in addition to general taxes on same land under same title. State Laws 1903, p. 39, imposing annual license fee on corporations. Id. Taxation of real estate mortgage in addition to land is not double taxation in violation of Const. Art. 14, §§ 11, 12. Stumpf v. Storz [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 87, 120 NW 618. Statute providing for taxation of all shares of stock of domestic corporations wherever held does not affect right of state in which stock is owned to tax same. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Wright, 166 F 153. An occupation tax measured by a percentage of the gross earnings of a telephone company, whose franchise is also taxed in connection with its tangible property according to its value as a going concern, is not double taxation. Nebraska Tel. Co. v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 284.

Held double taxation: Local tax on railroad property must be cancelled in proceeding under statute to determine whether local assessment or assessment of state board of assessors is correct. In re Lehigh Valley R. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 126. Where, after consolidation of number of subsidiary and leased lines under name of one railroad company, all intangible property was assessed against such company, it could not be again assessed on its intangible property. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 287.

33. Provision in charter of corporation, fixing specified sum as taxes in lieu of all other taxes, is not a contract that no greater tax shall be laid, and a statute laying a greater tax does not impair the obligation of a contract. Gaar, Scott & Co. v. Shannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 361. Where town makes contract for light and water and levies tax to pay therefor, and subsequent retroactive law limits power of town to tax to lower rate, such statute is void as to such prior contract and courts will compel town to levy tax at a rate sufficient to meet it. Welch Water, L. & P. Co. v. Welch [W. Va.] 62 SE 497. Gen. Laws 1903, c. 253, p. 377, increasing gross earnings tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent., impairs no contractual or other vested rights. State v. Great Northern R. Co., 106 Minn. 303, 119 NW 202; State v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 106 Minn. 290, 119 NW 211.

34. Law authorizing assessment of omitted property which affords owner opportunity to question its validity either before the amount is determined or in subsequent proceedings for collection does not violate due process limitation. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002. Laws Fla. 1907, pp. 13, 14, c. 5596, providing for assessment of property for not more than three prior years where such property has escaped taxation, held to provide for notice and hearing. Jackson Lumber Co. v. McCrimmon, 164 F 759. Notice to property owners and opportunity to be heard at some time during proceedings is requisite to validity of assessment, but statute does not violate due process clause where it provides for notice by publication. Id. Rev. St. § 2833, so far as it requires levy of per capita tax on dogs upon real estate upon which they are kept, though owner of land had no knowledge that they were there, is an arbitrary and unreasonable exercise of police power and void. Mirick v. Gims, 79 Ohio St. 174, 86 NE 880.

35. Approximate uniformity is all that is has a wide descretion in selecting and classifying objects for taxation.[37] Nor is required, perfect uniformity in valuation being unattainable. Yamhill County v. Foster [Or.] 99 P 286.

Held to comply with rule of uniformity: Laws 1907, p. 126, c. 107, imposing a license tax on corporations held not void as violating constitutional provision of uniformity. Blackrock Copper Min. & Mill Co. v. Tingey, 34 Utah, 369, 98 P 180. Acts 29th Leg. 1905, pp. 21, 100 c. 19, 72, imposing a franchise tax on corporations, imposing a like tax on all foreign corporation and is not void as discriminatory in favor of domestic corporations subject to less tax, classification being based on legitimate distinctions. Gaar, Scott & Co. v. Shannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 361. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 794, 797, providing for taxation of stock of foreign corporations owned by residents, is valid. State v. Nelson [Minn.] 119 NW 1058. Tax on railroads at average rate borne by other property is not unequal though railroad rate is not equal to saving's bank rate nor equal and proportional to rate on other property. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. Act of 1870, p. 54, c. 21, authorizing city of Lawrence upon vote of qualified electors to issue bonds in aid of university and levy taxes to pay same, is not in violation of Const. art. 11, § 1, providing for uniform rate of taxation. State v. Lawrence [Kan.] 100 P 485. Statute permitting deduction debts from credits is not void under Const. art. 9, § 1, as violating rule of uniformity. Scandinavian Mut. Aid Ass'n v. Kearney County [Neb.] 118 NW 333. Deduction of debits from credits is not violation of Const. art. 14, § 11, requiring uniform rule and that property be assessed at its cash value. Stumpf v. Storz [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 87, 120 NW 618. St. 1898, § 1152, held not void because there was no board to review assessment under act and hence violative of requirement of uniformity. Strange v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. Act April 20, 1905 (P. L. 237), relating to appropriation of turnpikes for public use, does not violate constitutional provision demanding uniformity of taxation. Does not involve legality of taxation. Clarion County v. Clarion Tp., 222 Pa. 350, 71 A 543. Rev. St. 1895, art. 5048, levying a poll tax, held not void for inequality or nonuniformity. Solon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 349. Acts 1907, p. 1540, c. 460, imposing tax on gross insurance business to provide a fund for investigations by the insurance commissioner surplus if any to be paid into the state treasury, does not violate rule of uniformity. Rhinehart v. State [Tenn.] 117 SW 508. Classification of businesses and professions under Rev. St. 1898, § 206, subd. 87, for purpose of levying a license tax, while in one sense arbitrary, held not unreasonable. Salt Lake City v. Christianeen Co., 34 Utah, 38, 95 P 523.

Held to violate rule of uniformity: Under Const. art. 9, § 2, requiring legislature to provide for uniform and equal assessment, Laws 1907, p. 455, § 9, providing for apportionment of state taxes to be collected by several counties not based on assessed valuation thereof for current year was void. Yamhill County v. Foster [Or.] 99 P 286. Under Laws 1885 (P. L. 61), providing that whenever any person shall, subsequent to time of valuation and assessment for local taxes, bring into it taxing district any stock of goods or merchandise to be sold in a place of business temporarily occupied without intention of engaging permanently in business at such place, such stock shall be taxed at the current rate, held that "in such place" means "place of business" and creates an unsubstantial and illusory classification of property. Lang v. Berrien [N. J. Law] 71 A 117. Russell's St. § 4284, relative to discriminatory taxation of foreign insurance companies held in conflict with Const. §§ 60, 171, 180, 181, requiring equality and uniformity. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 117 SW 376. Where foreign corporation made statement under St. 1909, § 4078, as basis for valuation of its franchise for 1905, and franchise was not assessed until 1907, an assessment under St. 1906, § 4080, whereby assessment was materially increased, held void as violating rule of uniformity. James v. American Surety Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 411. Const. pt. 2, c. 1, § 1, art. 4, authorizing levy of proportional and reasonable assessments on all inhabitants and estates within state, does not authorize tax on sales of shares of corporate stock, because if such is property tax it is not proportional. In re Opinion of the Justices, 196 Mass. 603, 85 NE 545.

36. Gen. Laws 1907, c. 328, p. 448, "mortgage registry Law," is valid. It provides for vaild classification of subjects of taxation and a uniform tax on such subjects. Mutual Benefit Ins. Co. v. Martin County, 104 Minn. 179, 116 NW 572. The subject of taxation is security or lien, and not the debt. Id. Ordinance imposing occupation tax that "the sum and amount of occupation tax or taxes on the gross receipts required to be paid under existing ordinances" may be deducted, is not void because not uniform, since all persons engaged in the same occupation are taxed upon the same basis and in like manner. Nebraska Tel. Co. v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 284.

37. Ayres v. Chicago, 239 Ill. 237, 87 NE 1073. The apportionment of taxation for public purposes is within the discretion of the legislature. Gubner v. McClellan, 130 App. Div. 716, 115 NYS 755. The manner of classifying property is for the legislature. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. Legislature may select subjects of taxation and exempt classes of property not named, but it cannot limit proportion to be paid by particular property. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. The legislature may tax the constitutent elements of property or tax at its full value the thing which represents those elements, as by taxing separately the corporate shares and corporate capital. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. Nothing but express constitutional limitation on legislative authority can exclude anything to which authority extends from grasp of taxing power, if legislature selects it for revenue purposes. Harder's Fireproof Storage & Van Co. v. Chicago, absolute equality always obtainable.[38] When the tax itself is equal and uniform, it is not invalidated as to one tax payer by reason of failure to enforce it against another.[39] The state may be divided into taxing districts.[40]

The levy of a tax is an exercise of the legislative, not the judicial power,[41] and the power to tax implies the power to collect and to prescribe the method of so doing and to define the interest to which taxes shall attach as liens, and what interest shall pass at a sale for taxes.[42] Mere nonuser by a government of its power to levy a tax is not a forfeiture of the power.[43]

Municipal corporations See 10 C. L. 1779 can levy only such taxes as they are authorized to levy by statute or charter,[44] and subject to constitutional limitations the legislature has unlimited descretion in the matter of delegating the taxing power to municipalities.[45] Upon the legislative grant, as thus restricted therefore, depend the territorial limits of the municipality's taxing power,[46] and also the pur-

H. 552, 70 A 387. Under Const. amend. 1903, authorizing local taxation for public schools, Acts 1905, p. 425, amended by Acts 1906, p. 61, held valid. Henslee v. McLarty, 131 Ga. 244, 62 SE 66. The question of taxibility of property is not a matter of contract but rests with the sovereign. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Shaw, 121 La. 997, 46 S 994. The state has a right to impose a tax upon the property within its borders regardless of uses to which property is devoted. State v. Northwestern Tel. Exch. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 534.

38. Where particular item used in finding average rate on property outside of railroad property, with view to fixing rate on railroad property, is so inconsiderable as not to affect average rate so found beyond fraction of a cent, rate so found is average rate as nearly as it practically can be determined. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. Assessment on railroad property appraised at $28,000,000, in the amount that taxes are assessed on average on $28,000,000 of property in general throughout state, is equal, though as between some individuals some pay more and some less than the railroad. 44. The legislature being authorized to permit a city to impose a license tax on vehicles for privilege of using the streets, the fact that the tax was to be set aside as a special fund for improving the streets did not render void Hurd's Rev. St. c. 24, art. 5, § 1, authorizing such tax, nor the ordinance imposing it. Harder's Fireproof Storage & Van Co. v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 58, 85 NE 245. Baltimore Charter, § 6, authorizing city to license, tax and regulate all businesses, trades and avocations, authorizes charge on commission merchants for privilege of selling in the city market; such charge is a tax for revenue and not a license or regulation tax. Meushaw v. State [Md.] 71 A 457. Tax levied prior to execution of contract for public improvement and under guise that it was for public buildings, and transferred to general fund, to meet deficiency therein, held illegal. Ault v. Hill County [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 423. Ann. Code 1892, §§ 2926, 3018, 3020, 3748, 3771, authorizing municipalities to tax property acquired prior to Feb. 1st for current year, held not to authorize taxation of property included in corporate limits by extension thereof in April. City of Gulfport v. Todd [Miss.] 46 S 541.

45. Harder's Fireproof Storage & Van Co. v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 58, 85 NE 245. Const. art. 9, § 9, authorizing general assembly to vest in corporate authorities of cities and towns power to levy special assessments is to assess equal and uniform taxation, applies only to taxation of property and not to intangible rights, such as use of the public streets. Id. No person or municipality can acquire as against the state a vested right to taxes or the right to collect them when levied, and since the yearly tax of $200 imposed for municipal revenue purposes on commission merchants using city market, in erection of which city had expended larger sums, held not unreasonable. Meushaw v. State [Md.] 71 A 457. State has right to take away power to tax and subjects of taxation, when this is done under delegated authority, it is no less effective. Gasaway v. Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 991. Where a city under the delegated power of eminsnt domain takes property for a public purpose, a sale thereof by county for unpaid taxes is void under Const. art. 7, § 2. Id.

46. Priv. Laws 1907, p. 1267, c. 482, held not to authorize levy of tax on citizens outside a school district who would not be benefited by the school and hence was not unconstitutional. McLeod v. Carthage Com'rs, 148 N. C. 77, 61 SE 605.

pose for which taxes may be levied [47] and the character thereof.[48] As a general rule a maximum rate of taxation is prescribed which cannot be exceeded.[49] A grant of taxing power to a municipality is strictly construed.[50]

Construction of tax laws. See 10 C. L. 1780—Tax laws as a rule are to be construed on the same general basis and under the same rules as laws in general,[51] and a statute imposing a tax must be construed in connection with other tax laws, prior and contemporaneous,[52] and also in the light of legislative history on the subject [53] and the practical understanding and construction placed thereon by taxing officials

47. "For county purposes" in Const. art. 10, § 11, limiting taxation to 40 cents on $100 means all subdivisions of the county for use of which taxes may be imposed. State v. 48. Operation of Laws 1901, p. 243, § 9696x, imposing a poll tax, is made optional with the county court. Johnson v. Scott, 133 Mo. App. 689, 114 SW 45.

49. Estimate furnished city by school board of amount needed for current expenses was not controlling except to minimum amount provided by No. 36 of 1873, p. 73. State v. New Orleans, 121 La. 762, 46 S 798. Acts 1908, p. 56, c. 72, makes 18 mills the maximum rate counties can levy for 1908, and 1909, and applies to current as well as special extraordinary levies provided for by Code 1906, § 324. Wells v. McNeill [Miss.] 48 S 184. Bessemer City charter, § 45½, held void as in violation of Const. § 216, providing that no city shall levy a higher rate of taxation than one half of one per cent on the value as assessed for state taxes during the preceding year. City of Bessemer v. Southern R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 103. Under Const. art. 8, § 9, fixing maximum rates for "county purposes," etc., and "other permanent improvements," power to tax for the latter purpose cannot exceed limit for former. Ault v. Hill County [Tex.] 116 SW 359. Under Const. § 157, prohibiting a taxing district from becoming indebted beyond revenue provided for year without assent of voters, fact that it exceeded such limit did not invalidate tax levy. Trustees of White School Dist. No. 15 v. Cummins, 33 Ky. L. R. 739, 111 SW 286.

51. See, also, Statutes 12 C. L. 1919. Statutory provisions are liberally construed when irregularity complained of has not been prejudicial. State v. Several Parcels of Land [Neb.] 119 NW 21. In construing tax laws the legislative intention is the only guide, and court cannot extend meaning of the law so as to include things not named nor permit new names to be given old things to escape taxation. White v. Walsh, 62 Misc. 423, 114 NYS 1015. Act relative to transit duties (Act March 4, 1869, P. L. 226), to effect that tax thereby provided for should be paid until legislature should impose uniform tax applicable to all railroad and canal companies, refers to time when tax should be imposed and not to time when law authorizing its imposition should be enacted or take effect. State v. United New Jersey R. & Canal Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 228.

52. Acts 1906, p. 61, amending Acts 1905, p. 425, is not void because not making certain exemptions, as it is to be construed in connection with sections providing for exemptions. Coleman v. Emanuel County Board of Education, 131 Ga. 643, 63 SE 41. Const. art. 5, art. 7, and amendment of November, 1900, construed and held to prohibit levy of any poll tax in excess of two dollars. Southern R. Co. v. Mecklenburg County Com'rs, 148 N. C. 220, 61 SE 690. Sp. Act. Jan. 4, 1859 (P. L. 828), relating to taxation of property of railroad companies in city of Pittsburg, was not repealed by Act March 7, 1901 (P. L. 20). Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pittsburg, 221 Pa. 90, 70 A 271. Ann. St. 1906, p. 4315, providing that toll bridges owned or operated by railroad company, stock company, etc., shall be taxed, does not authorize taxation of a boundary bridge unless it is a toll bridge, since to construe it, as authorizing taxing of an interstate bridge, not a toll bridge would violate Ann. St. 1906, pp. 275, 278, requiring uniformity. State v. Louisiana & M. R. R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 956. Rev. Laws, c. 14, § 24, providing for taxation of foreign and domestic insurance companies on net value of their policies, and § 28 providing for taxation of foreign insurance companies provide two separate methods of taxation, and a foreign company which has paid taxes under the latter is not subject to taxation under the former. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Com., 198 Mass. 466, 84 NE 863. Object of Rev. Laws, c. 14, § 28, is to make taxation under such section no more burdensome on foreign companies doing business in the state than on domestic companies doing business in a foreign state. Id.

53. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 8496, 8499, 8503, 8538, 8555, providing that railroads give statement of capital stock, annual gross and net earnings, etc., considered in light of history of legislation on railroad taxation, requires that, in finding value of railroad property, money on hand must be considered as earnings and cannot be retaxed as money. Clark v. Vandalia R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 851. P. S. 713, 714, 715, imposing valuation tax on corporate franchises and providing that corporations may in lieu thereof pay a gross earnings tax, construed with legislative history and §§ 694, 695, and held that rate of gross earnings tax is to be determined on the gross earnings during the fiscal year for which the tax is paid. State v. Rutland R. Co., 81 Vt. 508, 71 A 197.

and the public,[54] but such construction is not binding upon the courts.[55] Tax laws are presumptively prospective and not retrospective in their operation,[56] and are construed strictly against the taxing power,[57] especially to prevent double taxation.[58] Any method of taxation prescribed which seeks to secure uniformity should receive judicial sanction.[59]

Notes and bonds are "property" within Laws 1905, p. 436, c. 8. Hall v. Miller [Tex.] 115 SW 1168.

Not property: Under Mill. Act. (Rev. Laws, c. 196), treating common rights to use water by a dam for mill power as a mere potentiality until exercised, the possibility of deriving power from a stream before appropriation therefor is not taxable and when appropriated it is taxed as between different owners to the property to which it is applied. Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 200 Mass. 82, 85 NE 880. A "trade mark" is not property within St. 1909, § 4020. Commonwealth v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 766.

NOTE. Trademarks as taxable property: Under a state constitution providing that "all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, unless exempted by this constitution," it is held that tradmarks are not property within the contemplation of the constitutional section. Commonwealth v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 766.

A trademark, although it cannot be sold or assigned apart from the business to which it is attached (MacMahon v. Denver, 113 F 468), is today generally recognized as property, and entitled to protection as such (Derringer v. Plate, 29 Cal. 293, 87 Am. Dec. 170; Avery & Sons v. Meikle, 81 Ky. 73). The question in the principal case, however, is whether it is such property as was contemplated in the constitutional provision quoted. Such provisions are designed to secure equality in taxation (People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 170), and the courts have generally held that they do not require the taxation of every form of property right (Arapahoe County Com'rs v. Rocky Mountain News Print. Co., 15 Colo. App. 189, 61 P 494; State v. Savage, 65 Neb. 714, 91 NW 716). When extraordinary forms of property are sought to be taxed, there is substantial unanimity that such property must be specially designated (People v. Feitner, 167 N. Y. 1, 60 NE 265 [stock exchange seat]; Willis v. Com., 97 Va. 667, 34 diction of the taxing power is subjected to taxation,[62] property intended to be relieved from the burden of taxation being protected by special exemptions based on the purposes for which it is used.[63]

The power to classify for the purpose of taxation has already been considered.[64] One of the most frequent classifications is with reference to the mode of assessment,[65] as where property is subjected to a single tax to be assessed in a certain manner in lieu of all other taxes.[66] Under this rule the method of computing or ascertaining the tax is a question of construction.[67]

SE 460 [ground rents] and a method of assessment devised (State Board v. Holliday, 150 Ind. 216, 49 NE 14.) Thus while good will, the legal characteristics of which are closely akin to those of trademarks, has been held not taxable per se under a state constitutional provision (Hart v. Smith, 159 Ind. 182, 64 NE 661, 58 L. R. A. 942), it is taxable when so designated as part of a corporation's capital (People v. Dederick, 161 N. Y. 195, 55 NE 927). The principal case correctly holds, therefore, that the trademarks are not necessarily taxable as "property" under the constitutional provision, but they would be taxable if a statute taxed the business as a unit. See Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 166 U. S. 185, 41 Law. Ed. 965.—From 9 Columbia L. R. 561.

62. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 5063, and Laws 1905, p. 436, c. 8, personalty located in state owned by nonresidents is subject to taxation. Hall v. Miller [Tex.] 115 SW 1168. Const. art. 8, § 1, requiring all property owned by natural persons or corporations to be taxed, embraces every kind of property within state, whether owned by citizens or nonresidents. Id. Rev. St. 1895, art. 5061, making all propery not exempt subject to taxation is in harmony with such constitutional provision. Id. 85. "Franchise" means not right to do the thing, but doing of it, so the fact that the act of the company in doing it was ultra vires is immaterial. James v. Kentucky Refining Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 468. "Franchises" in Const. Art. 13, § 2, providing that all property defined to include franchises shall be taxed in proportion to value considered in connection with §§ 3, 12, and art. 12, § 7, does not mean mere right of corporation to exist but includes the right to carry on business. Black Rock Copper Min. & Mill. Co. v. Tingey, 34 Utah, 369, 98 P 180. Tax against corporate franchise under Russell's St., § 6050, is a property tax, being on all intangible property of the corporations. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. Franchise tax imposed by Ky. St. 1903, § 4077, is not an occupation tax, nor tax on privilege of doing business, but a tax on the business. James v. Kentucky Refining Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 468.

What franchises are taxable: Statutes of Kentucky deal with two classes of corporations, one of which exercises some special privilege upon which St. 1909, § 4077, imposes a franchise tax in addition to other taxes, and the other class being ordinary commercial corporations not subject to such tax, but its property is taxable the same as property of individuals under § 4085. Commonwealth v. Walsh's Trustee [Ky.] 117 SW 398. Ky. St. 1903, § 4077, imposing a franchise tax on corporations, held to apply to corporation manufacturing cotton seed oil and owning cars by which the product was transferred to its customers on a mileage basis. 2. Under Const. § 170, exempting public property, a sinking fund created to liquidate bonded debts for waterworks system, is but so much taxes though invested in interest bearing securities and is exempt. Commonwealth v. Sinking Fund Com'rs [Ky.] 112 SW 1128. Under Pub. St. 1906, § 496, exempting property devoted to public use, a lighting plant of a village is exempt. Village of Swanton v. Highgate, 81 Vt. 152, 69 A 667. Under Const. § 170, exempting public property, a municipal waterworks system is exempt. City of Covington v. District of Highlands, 33 Ky. L. R. 323, 110 SW 338.

NOTE. Taxation of municipal waterworks: A city erected waterworks to supply itself and its inhabitants with water. Held, such property was exempt from taxation under a statute providing for exemption of public property devoted to public purposes. Commonwealth v. Covington, 32 Ky. L. R. 837, 107 SW 231. While it is suggested that provisions for a water supply are more properly subjects of private enterprise, Abbott, Municipal Corporations, § 455, the courts have universally granted municipal corporations the right to provide water, as well as light, for their own use (David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Or. 98, 12 P 174; Livingston v. Pippin, 31 Ala. 542), and they may also incidentally supply their citizens (Kane v. The Mayor, 15 Md. 240; City of Crawfordsville v. Braden, 130 Ind. 149 28 NE 849. 30 Am. St. Rep. 214), this being frequently justified as a valid exercise of the police power (Ellinwood v. Reedsburg, 91 Wis. 131, 64 NW 885; City of Crawfordsville v. Braden, supra). Property so used is everywhere considered as being employed for a public purpose (Warner v. Gunnison, 2 Colo. App. 430, 31 P 238; Smith v. Lincoln, 170 Mass. 488, 49 NE 743), and, in accord with principal case, not subject to taxation) Smith v. Nashville, 88 Tenn. 464, 12 SW 924, 7 L. R. Power Plant Co., 222 Pa. 319, 71 A 207. Whether a corporation is public or a quasi public so as to be exempt from local taxation depends upon what it is authorized to do and may be compelled to do under its charter. Id. A corporation chartered to supply water and power to the public and to individuals in a named district is quasi public and its real estate is exempt from local taxation. Id.

4. Lands are not taxable while both the legal and equitable title remains in the government; title so held where one offered to exchange certain rights or lands for lien lands. Johnson v. Crook County [Or.] 100 P 294. Lands purchased from the state between February 1st and October 1st are not liable for taxes for that year. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952. Under Const. art. 10, § 4, property belonging to the state is exempt and Sess. Laws 1887, p. 336, amended by Sess. Laws 1889, p. 313, providing that land sold shall be exempt so long as title is vested in the state, is not an invalid exemption but a condition held out as an inducement to purchase. Colorado Farm & Live Stock Co. v. Beerbohm, 43 Colo. 464, 96 P 443. Under Const. art. 11, § 9, art. 7, § 6, held timber on county school lands was exempt so long as owned by the county but when sold was not exempt from taxes levied after the sale and was subject to tax imposed by Acts 1905, p. 72, c. 52. 19. Const. art. 9, § 3, providing that the legislature may exempt certain property, precludes it from exempting any property not enumerated by general or special legislation. Consolidated Coal Co. v. Miller, 236 Ill. 149, 86 NE 205. Capital stock of a corporation not being enumerated in such provision, a statute attempting to exempt it is unconstitutional. Id. The constitution makes no provision for exemption of personal property used for schools, and Code 1907, § 2061, declaring that such property shall be exempt only when "owned and used for school purposes by person to whom it is assessed," is valid. Anniston City Land Co. v. State [Ala.] 48 S 659. Under original Rapid Transit Laws: Laws 1891, p. 3, c. 4; Laws 1902, pp. 1610-1614, Laws 1896, p. 796; Laws 1894, p. 1884, special franchise to operate a subway acquired under assignment of the contract with the city is exempt. People v. State Tax Com'rs, 126 App. Div. 610, 110 NYS 577. Under Tax Laws, Laws 1896, p. 801, and Laws 1891, p. 3, c. 4, the subway or franchise to operate it is taxable to the city and not to the operator, and as the city is exempt the operator is also exempt. Id. Laws 1896, p. 796, c. 908, amended by Laws 1899, p. 1589, held not to de-statute creating it [20] and bring himself within its terms,[21] but this rule does not relieve the court from interpreting exemption statutes under the ordinary rules of construction,[22] according to which the exemption will not be allowed unless clearly conferred;[23] but the rule that a general statute repeals all prior laws on the same subject [24] will not be indulged so as to violate an express promise of the legislature prive the operator from exemption contained in Laws 1894, p. 1884, and re-enacted by Laws 1900, p. 1360. Id. Laws 1896, p. 715, amending Laws 1891, p. 3; Laws 1900, p. 1360, and Laws 1905, p. 1483, construed and held to be consistent only with the theory that the operator is not liable for any tax because of rights under the contract with the city for its operation which exemption, under Laws 1892, p. 1492, is not repealed by Laws 1896, p. 795. Id. Under Const. art. 3, § 18, providing that exemption shall not be granted by special or local law, a law intending to re-enact a provision in a special charter granting an exemption is void. People v. Raymond, 126 App. Div. 720, 111 NYS 177.

20. When property in general is made subject to taxation as by Code, §§ 1303, 1308, one claiming exemption must point to statute or rule giving him such right. In re Boyd, 138 Iowa, 583, 116 NW 700.

21. Right to exemption can be established only by strict proof of all facts necessary to authorize it. People v. Ravenswood Hospital, 238 Ill. 137, 87 NE 305. In proceedings under Code Supp. 1902, § 1407a, to assess property withheld from taxation, the taxpayer has the burden to prove that the property is exempt. Bednar v. Carroll, 138 Iowa, 338, 116 NW 315. Evidence insufficient to show one within Gen. Laws 1905, pp. 521 523, c. 11, §§ 6, 12, exempting from poll tax, persons blind or otherwise disabled. McCormick v. Jester [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 278. One who claims the benefit of laws under which partial exemption is conferred on certain conditions must bring himself fairly within such laws. Coulson v. Baltimore [Md.] 71 A 990. Gen. St. 1902, §§ 2997, 2998, imposing a military tax on every person liable to military duty, does not exempt a well and strong man because of his poverty. Atwater v. O'Reilly [Conn.] 71 A 505. Under Sess. Laws 1899, p. 221, relative to exemptions of water rights, it is a question of fact whether a water right is taxable in whole or in part, or is wholly exempt. Swank v. Sweetwater Irr. & Power Co. [Idaho] 98 P 297. Bona fide sale of property two months prior to assessment day and investment of proceeds in nontaxable government bonds is not a trick to escape taxation within St. 1909, § 4051. Commonwealth v. Harris [Ky.] 118 SW 294.

22. Rule that statutes granting exemption are to be strictly construed does not relieve court from duty of interpreting exemption statutes by the ordinary rules of construction. Northwestern University v. Hanberg, 237 Ill. 185, 86 NE 734.

NOTE. Exemption of separate interests: By charter the land of the plaintiff was exempted from taxation "as long as said land belong to the university." Later an act was passed taxing the interest of persons holding under leases. Held, such interests were not within the exemption. Jetton v. University of the South, 208 U. S. 489, 52 Law. Ed. 584.

Exemptions from taxation are strictly construed, the presumption being that all that was to be given has been granted in express terms. Douglas County Agricultural Soc. v. Douglas County, 104 Wis. 429, 80 NW 740; Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co., 164 U. S. 662, 41 Law. Ed. 590. Where the land is owned by one person and the buildings by another, the two may be separately assessed (People v. Assessors, 93 N. Y. 308), and, though the land itself is exempt, the erections may be taxed as the property of the lessee by contract (People v. Com'rs, 80 N. Y. 573; Russell v. New Haven, 51 Conn. 259). Where the interest of the lessee has been made a separate estate, independently liable to taxation, and to sale on execution, such interest is considered taxable, notwithstanding the exemption of the fee. Philadelphia, etc. R. Co. v. App. Tax Court, 50 Md. 397; Zumstein v. Consolidated Coal & Min. Co., 54 Ohio St. 264, 43 NE 329. The common-law rule is that the landlord, unless otherwise agreed, is liable for all taxes during the term (McFarlane v. Williams, 107 Ill. 33), and must therefore reimburse the tenant for all payments made to protect the leased property. (Dawson v. Linton, 5 Barn. & A. 521). Though this may apply only to taxes affecting the reversion (Philadelphia, etc. R. Co. v. App. Tax Court, supra), here the tax is upon the only remunerative use to which the land can be put (Daugherty v. Thompson, 71 Tex. 192, 9 SW 199), and like a tax upon rents or income (Pollock v. Farmer's L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 429, 39 Law. Ed. 759), since it must surely affect the leasable value of the land, seems in effect against the fee. But in view of the strict construction applied to such statutes, the court does not consider the indirect tax upon the fee as within the exemption.—From 8 Columbia L. R. 512.

23. Exemption is never inferred. There must be an express provision. City of Trenton v. Humel [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1131. The rule that taxing laws are to be construed strictly extends to exemptions as well as to impositions. In re Bull's Estate, 153 Cal. 715, 96 P 366. Exemptions must positively appear by statute, and no species of property subject to tax will be excluded if it comes within the fair purview of the act. English's Estate v. Crenshaw [Tenn.] 110 SW 210. That an owner of vehicles used on the public streets paid an advalorem tax thereon, did not exempt him from the license tax for the purpose of using such vehicles in his business. Harder's Fireproof Storage & Van Co. v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 58, 85 NE 245. A foreign insurance company which has paid the 2 per cent tax required by Rev. Laws 1905, § 1625, is not exempt from the registry tax required by Gen. Laws 1907, c. 328. Mutual Benefit Ins. Co. v. Martin County, 104 Minn. 179, 116 NW 572.

24. Laws 1896, p. 797, c. 908, § 4, providing what property shall be exempt is a comprehensive enactment and repeals all prior acts, general or special, making exemptions. Peo-relative to an exemption.[25] The rule of strict construction does not apply to exemptions from special taxes.[26] The property usually exempted is that used for religious,[27] educational,[28] charitable,[29] hospital,[30] and cemetary[31] purposes.[32] Ex-ple v. Raymond, 126 App. Div. 720, 111 NYS 177. The fact that it repeals an exemption granted by special charter does not impair the obligations of a contract, since under the state constitution the right was reserved to alter or repeal all general laws and special acts. Id.

25. While General Tax Law (Laws 1896, p. 797) presumptively repeals all prior exemption statutes, such presumption will not be permitted when to do so will violate the express promise of the legislature operating to induce a person to transfer property in endowment of a corporation. People v. Raymond, 194 N. Y. 189, 87 NE 90.

26. Applies where exemption is claimed from general burden of taxation common on all property or on people generally, and, where tax is not such common burden but special tax, reaching only to special cases, the rule is that to subject such class of persons to tax requires a clear legislative intention. Such qualification applies to transfer tax. In re Mergentimer, 129 App. Div. 367, 113 NYS 948.

27. Under Const. 1874, art. 16, § 5, exempting churches adjoining lot used as water closet, held not exempt where such facilities could be best located on the church lot. Pulaski County v. First Baptist Church [Ark.] 110 SW 1034.

28. Const. 1901, § 91, exempts certain lots in cities and towns used for school purposes, and Code 1907, § 2061, exempts such property when it is owned and used by person to whom it is assessed for school purposes. Held, the exemption depended on the use of the property, and § 2061 was ineffective so far as it related to land and attempted to add ownership as a condition of exemption. Anniston City Land Co. v. State [Ala.] 48 S 659. Const. 1901, § 91, exempting property used for schools, exempts tract of land with buildings used as boarding school for young ladies. Id. Property owned by a private individual and used by him exclusively for educational purposes is exempt under Code 1906, § 4251, par. D. City of Jackson v. Preston [Miss.] 47 S 547. Under Act. April 8, 1903 (P. L. p. 395), exempting college buildings not conducted for profit, land belonging to such a college, necessary for use of the buildings and intended to be used for other buildings, is exempt. Stevens Institute v. Hoboken [N. J. Law] 70 A 730. Act. Feb. 14, 1855, amending Priv. Laws 1855, p. 483, exempting all property owned by Northwestern University, applies to land acquired subsequent to the amendment. Northwestern University v. Hanberg, 237 Ill. 185, 86 NE 734. Rev. St. 1898, § 1933, exempting property held by board of education, means all property "owned" by the board and cannot be held to intend only property used for school purposes. Wey v. Salt Lake City [Utah] 101 P 381. Building used as private military boarding school is not deprived of its exemption because the proprietor and his family reside in it. State v. Johnston, 214 Mo. 656, 113 SW 1083. "Exclusively used" in exemption statutes means primary and inherent use as distinguished from incidental and secondary use. Id. Where, by statute, schools maintained by public or private charity are exempt from taxation, an institution having a surplus income derived from tuition paid by students is not so exempt, though such surplus be used for improvements. Mercersburg College v. Poffenberger, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 100. Mere fact that institution gives free tuition to certain number of pupils does not make it so exempt, where surplus derived from pay pupils is used to enlarge number of free pupils but to make improvements. Id. School lands and buildings are not exempt from taxation where tuition paid exceeds amount necessary for maintenance, and in determining such excess, rental value of lands and buildings are not included in cost of maintenance. Id.

29. The master, wardens, and members of the Grand Lodge of Masons being incorporated to receive, hold, and invest charitable gifts, a gift to them is not divested of its character because turned over to the corporate board of trustees of that body, which is but an administrative board. Masonic Education & Charity Trust v. Boston, 201 Mass. 320, 87 NE 602. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 120, § 2, exempting property of institutions of public charity when used exclusively for charitable purposes, held, to be exempt, property must belong to and stand in the name of such institution and be used exclusively for such purpose; and a public hospital organized for profit could not claim exemption. People v. Ravenswood Hospital, 238 Ill. 137, 87 NE 305.

30. Laws 1896, p. 797, c. 908, exempting property used for hospital purposes, real estate owned by a hospital and leased out is not exempt though the proceeds are devoted to hospital purposes. People v. Raymond, 126 App. Div. 720, 111 NYS 177. Where the legislature passed an act creating a hospital corporation and provided that all its property should be exempt, held corporate property, whether used as a hospital or not, was exempt, notwithstanding subsequent tax law (Laws 1896, p. 797), providing that property used for other than hospital purposes should not be exempt. People v. Raymond, 194 N. Y. 189, 87 NE 90. Laws 1905, p. 833, c. 377, amending Laws 1864, incorporating Roosevelt Hospital, held not to re-enact the provisions of such statute relative to exemptions. People v. Raymond, 126 App. Div. 720, 111 NYS 177.

31. Laws 1879, p. 397, c. 310, forbidding tax on land actually used for cemetery purposes, exempts such land. In re Jerome Ave. in New York, 192 N. Y. 459, 85 NE 755.

32. NOTE. Tax exemption of religious, educational and charitable bodies as affected by field of operation: It is held in Carter v. Whitcomb, 74 N. H. 482, 69 A 779, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 733, that a local auxiliary to a foreign missionary society is not exempt from local taxation. This case is supported by the holdings that tax exemption of religious, charitable or educational institutions does not include such as operate outside the state (Alfred University v. Hancock, 69 N. J. Eq. 470, 46 A 178; In re Speed's, 216

emptions are sometimes allowed to encourage certain industries,[33] and in favor of persons who have rendered military service.[34] Some exemptions are based upon personal disability.[35] A franchise which is made an act of congress is not subject to taxation.[36]

Whether or not an exception is transferable depends upon whether it is a personal privilege or a quality conferred upon the property itself.[37] Where exempt

Ill. 23, 74 NE 809, 108 Am. St. Rep. 189), or foreign corporations (In re Prime, 136 N. Y. 347, 32 NE 1091, 18 L. R. A. 713; In re Balleis, 144 N. Y. 132, 38 NE 1007; In re Smith, 77 Hun, 134, 28 NYS 476; People v. Western S. F. Soc., 87 Ill. 246; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 38 NE 512, 26 L. R. A. 259; Rice v. Bradford, 180 Mass. 545, 63 NE 7; Port Huron v. Wright, 150 Mich. 279, 114 NW 76; In re Rothschild's Estate, 71 N. J. Eq. 210, 63 A 615, afd. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A 1118; Catlin v. Trinity College, 113 N. Y. 133, 20 NE 864, 3 L. R. A. 206; In re Hickok's Estate, 78 Vt. 259, 62 A 724), even when operating in part within the state (Humphreys v. State, 70 Ohio St. 67, 70 NE 957, 101 Am. St. Rep. 888, 65 L. R. A. 776. The English rule appears to be otherwise (Com'rs v. Pemsel [1891] A. C. 531), and in In re Jones' Estate [N. J. Eq.] 67 A 1035, a foreign educational institution was exempted from taxation upon the ground that its work was for the general good of a religious denomination not confined to any state or locality, while property devoted to charitable, religious or educational purposes within the state has been held exempt from taxation though owned by a foreign corporation (Litz v. Johnston, 65 N. J. Law, 169, 46 A 776; St. Vincent de Paul v. Brakeley, 67 N. J. Law, 176, 50 A 589).—Adapted from Carter v. Whitcomb, 74 N. H. 482, 69 A 779, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 733.

33. Exemption of railroads by Const. 1898, art. 230, includes special taxes voted in favor of railroads prior to adoption of the constitution. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Shaw, 121 La. 997, 46 S 994. Acts 1900, p. 50, c. 48, providing a five year exemption on certain mills, does not conflict with Const. 1890, § 182, granting a 10 years exemption in certain cases. Adams v. Winona Cotton Mills [Miss.] 46 S 401. Act 1900, p. 50, c. 48, exempting certain factories in course of establishment or which should thereafter be established for 5 years, held to apply to a mill company chartered February 1st, 1900, whose mills were in process of construction that year and which did not commence operations until August, 1901. Id. Growing ginseng, a plant which takes from 7 to 15 years to mature, is a part of the land and not personalty and not within St. 1898, § 1638, exempting growing crops. Kuehn v. Antigo [Wis.] 120 NW 823. Rev. St. §§ 3410, 3411, 3417, providing that whenever the outstanding circulation of any bank does not exceed 5 per cent of its capital "said circulation shall be free from taxation," does not apply to national banks, being intended only as an inducement to state banks to be converted into national banks. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 6. State bank, converted into national bank, held required to pay tax on outstanding circulation, though such circulation was less than 5 per cent of its chartered capital, not being exempt under banking and internal revenue acts. Id.

34. Soldier's exemption provided for by Code Supp. § 1304, unless his property or that of his wife exceeds $5,000, is not defeated by joint ownership by both of property of that value. White v. Marion [Iowa] 117 NW 254. Where a soldier's other property was valued at $2,340 and he owned a life estate yielding $400 or $500 and had a life expectancy of 12 years, the life estate was worth more than $2,660, his property was worth more than $5,000 and he was not entitled to the exemption provided by Code Supp. 1902, § 1304. Id. Under Code Supp. 1902, § 1304, giving an exemption to a soldier unless he or his wife owns property worth $5,000, where a soldier asserts that he did not own property of that value, he makes out a prima facia case without showing that his wife did not own that much property, and the burden is on defendants to show the contrary. Id. Where on appeal to the district court from ruling of the board of review refusing to allow a soldier's exemption, under Code, Supp. 1902, § 1304, the soldiers petition recited all the facts and the taxing power went to trial without objection and stipulated that no exemption had been allowed, held the court acquired jurisdiction, though no transcript of the proceedings of the board of review was filed. Id. Under Code Supp. 1902, § 1304, giving soldiers an exemption of $800 unless they have property worth $5,000 the value of the soldiers property is to be determined by its actual value and not from the valuation on the assessment roll. Id. In determining whether he has property worth $5,000, exempt property is to be included. Id. A life estate is property to be considered in determining whether he has property of the value of $5,000. Id. Where one filed his petition for a soldier's exemption and it was admitted of record that the board of review made no allowance, after which he appealed to the district court, held sufficient to show that he made his claim before the board and that it was denied. Id. Under Rev. St. U. S. § 4747, and Code, §§ 1309, 4009, exempting pension money interest received on pension money loaned out is not exempt. Bednar v. Carroll, 138 Iowa, 338, 116 NW 315.

35. Certificate of disability granted to a party by the road overseer will exempt him from poll tax. Under Laws 1901, p. 4427. Johnson v. Scott, 133 Mo. App. 689, 114 SW 45. Upon rescission of certificate of disability exempting party from payment of poll tax, such party becomes liable for payment of such tax. Id.

36. Under organic act for Hawaii ratifying and affirming franchises granted by Hawaiian government between July 7, 1898, and Sept. 28, 1899, such franchises are not exempt, not having been made acts of congress by such act. Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v. Wilder, 211 U. S. 137, 144, 53 Law. Ed. 121, 124.

37. Assignable when annexed to property and nonexempt property is so merged as to be inseparable, none is exempt.[38] A tax on exempt property wholly void may be recovered back.[39]

Contracts of exemption, See 10 C. L. 1791 being in derogation of a public right, are strictly construed against one claiming the benefits thereof.[40]

§ 4. Place of taxation.[41]—See 10 C. L. 1701—The situs of personal property for the purpose of taxation is, as a general rule, though not without exception,[42] at the owner's residence,[43] or principal place of business in case the owner is a corporaitself, but not when conferred upon owner as personal privilege. Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. State Board of Assessors [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 328. Under Morris Canal & Banking Company's Charter (P. L. 1824, p. 160), exempting property actually used and necessary for canal purposes, and Act March 14, 1871, (P. L. 444), authorizing the company to lease its franchises, held, there being no provision for exemption in the law authorizing the lease, the privilege so far as personal did not pass to the lessee. Id. A provision that the exemption should extend only to property possessed, occupied, and used by the company and necessary for canal purposes means that it is exempt only when possessed and used by the grantee of the privilege, and a lease of the property and franchises operated to suspend the exemption whether personal or annexed. Id. Exemption created by the act of congress, declaring that lands given as a bounty for military service shall be exempt for three years from date of patent, is a personal privilege to the patentee and does not pass with right of entry to his assignee. Herrick v. Sargent [Iowa] 117 NW 751.

38. Where lighting plant was exempt so far as used to supply light for village but not so far as it was used to furnish light for other villages. Village of Swanton v. Highgate, 81 Vt. 152, 69 A 667.

39. Masonic Education & Charity Trust v. Boston, 201 Mass. 320, 87 NE 602. Rev. St. 1898, § 264, providing for payment under protest and recovery back of assessment because of irregularity or error in proceedings, does not apply to assessment of exempt property nor preclude suit to annul such assessment. Wey v. Salt Lake City [Utah] 101 P 381.

40. Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. State Board of Assessors [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 328. A street railway company is not exempted by inviolable contract from the payment of a license tax to a city, unless the exemption is set out in such terms as admit of no other reasonable interpretation. St. Louis v. United R. Co., 210 U. S. 266, 52 Law Ed. 1054. Charter held by fair implication and construction of its terms not to exempt railway company from franchise tax. Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v. Wilder, 211 U. S. 137, 144, 53 Law. Ed. 121, 124.

42. Where property is physical in character and can acquire an actual situs, it must be taxed in county where situated. City of Galveston v. Guffey Petroleum Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 585. Foreign corporation owning ice houses and equipment on shore of a pond in one town, but transacting no business there except storing and cutting of ice, held not to "hire or occupy a manufacturing store or shop" in the latter town within Rev. Laws 1902, c. 12, providing for taxing of property in such town, but such property was taxable in the town where kept under St. 1903, p. 448, c. 437, § 71, Hilliard v. Fells Ice Co., 200 Mass. 331, 86 NE 773. Vessels may acquire an actual situs and place of enrollment and registration is not controlling if actual situs is elsewhere. City of Galveston v. Guffey Petroleum Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 585; State v. Higgins Oil & Fuel Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 617. City has no jurisdiction to tax vessels which have acquired an actual situs at another place. City of Galveston v. Guffey Petroleum Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 585. Rev. Laws c. 196, regulating mills and mill dams, does not affect property in another state, and in determinating what rights are taxable in Massachusetts, where water power created therein is used outside the state, act is without force. Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 200 Mass. 82, 85 NE 880.

43. Personalty is taxable in the district of the owner's domicile, and if taxed in the wrong district the tax is illegal. State v. Shepperd [Mo.] 117 SW 1169. Under Ann. St. 1906, pp. 4198-4322, requiring personalty to be taxed in district where owner resides, one owning a farm and living on it held taxable there, though he staid at night with his parents in another district. Id. Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 56, § 1, providing that personal property shall be taxed to the owner at his place of residence, and under §§ 10, 12, 16, 18, excepting animals, stock in trade, and other articles, a steam derrick used in erection of a mill at a place other than the residence of the owner is not subject to tax in the latter place, as it is not within the exception. Dresser v. Hopkinton [N. H.] 71 A 534. Pulp wood held not taxable as being employed in the mechanics arts in the taxing town, within Rev. St. 1903, c. 9, § 13. Inhabitants of Bradley v. Penobscot Chemical Fibre Co. [Me.] 71 A 887. Under Ann. St. 1902, p. 2252, prescribing rules for construction of statutes, and Ann. St. 1906, pp. 4198-4322, providing that personalty shall be assessed where the owner resides, held that, as the statute makes no distinction as to place where property of persons with families and place where persons without families shall be taxed, the rule of construction under the former section did not apply. State v. Shepperd [Mo.] 117 SW 1169. Under Const. art. 8, § 11, Rev. St. 1895, art. 5068, 5072, requir-

tion,[44] but a state may tax property which has acquired a situs therein, though it is owned by nonresidents,[45] unless it is wrongfully withheld in the state.[46] The state cannot impose a tax upon receipts from carriage and freight services performed outside the state by a railroad.[47] Taxation of subjects of interstate commerce is treated elsewhere.[48] Where property is of such a nature that it cannot acquire an actual situs, the legislature may give it an artificial situs,[49] but when property is physical in character, or of such a nature that it can acquire an actual situs, it must be taxed in the county where actually located.[50]

ing property to be taxed where situated, and requiring vessels to be listed in the county where registered or kept, held coasting vessels enrolled in Galveston county but used to transport oil, from Jefferson county where owner lived, to points along the coast, were taxable in the latter county. State v. Higgins Oil & Fuel Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 617. Place of residence of owner rather than place registered controls. Shrewsbury Tp. v. Merchants' Steamboat Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 958. Where corporate stock is pledged to a New York company, though delivered to it and transferred on the corporate books, and the effect of the Georgia statute is to vest the pledgee with legal title, yet the situs of the property is not transferred to New York, where the pledgor retains the right to retransfer, to vote it and receive dividends. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Wright, 166 F 153. Where an owner having possession of notes and mortgages covering chattel property resides in another county, such notes and mortgages are taxable in the county of the owner's residence, and not in the county in which property is situated, notwithstanding owner has an agent in county of situs of property who is authorized to receive interest and installments on the principal as they fall due. Parish & Co. v. Kauffman, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 342.

44. Corporation is to be regarded as resident of place where its principal place of business is located. People v. Marens, 62 Misc. 317, 116 NYS 189. A "water right" held personal property within Const. art. 12, § 17, and Pol. Code 1895, §§ 16, 3680, and property assessed in the district where the principal place of business of the owner was located. Helena Waterworks Co. v. Settles, 37 Mont. 237, 95 P 838. Vessels owned by New Jersey corporation, having its principal office in one county, are not taxable in another county though registered there pursuant to act of congress. Shrewsbury Tp. v. Merchants' Steamboat Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 958.

45. Hall v. Miller [Tex.] 115 SW 1168. Whether property is taxed by state of nonresident's domicile is immaterial on issue as to validity of tax thereon in another state. Theobald v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 87 NE 100. Money realized in course of business carried on in the state by a foreign corporation through a local agent and deposited in the banks of the state is taxable. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Assesor, 121 La. 1068, 47 S 27. Loans made by foreign insurance company to its policy holders, residents of the taxing state, as part of its business in such state, held taxable therein though notes were held abroad. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Assessors, 122 La. 129, 47 S 439. Under Rev. St. 1881, §§ 6271, 6273, 6297, 6330; Burns' Rev. St. 1901, §§ 8410, 8429, 8458, 8421, 8460, 8463; Laws 1891, pp. 199, 201, 204, 210, 213, 212, relative to taxation of presonalty of nonresidents, notes and mortgages of nonresident were properly taxed against a resident agent in the county where securities were kept, loans made, and property situated. Hathaway v. Edwards [Ind. App.] 85 NE 28, Notes belonging to nonresident but held by agents in Texas for collection, and collections deposited for owner's credit, held taxable in Texas. Hall v. Miller [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 165. Where nonresident sold lands and took purchase money notes secured by vendor's lien and left such notes with an agent in the state for collection, and proceeds were deposited in a local bank for owners's benefit and agents had no authority to reinvest such proceeds, the situs of the notes was within the state. Hall v. Miller [Tex.] 115 SW 1168. Funds set apart by domestic railroad company for foreign company under agreement, whereby former was to pay to latter part of gross earnings of railroad owned by foreign company but operated by domestic company, held taxable under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8421, providing for assessment of property of residents. Clark v. Vandalia R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 851. Where such funds were in hands of receiver of Indiana corporation, who had possession of the funds set apart for the Illinois company, taxes were to be collected from property of the Illinois company found in possession of the receiver as agent, under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8587. Id.

46. Where foreign insurance company bought out a domestic one which has secureties on deposit with state treasurer who wrongfully withheld them from purchaser, they could not be taxed while so withheld at residence of wrongful custodian. Board of Councilmen v. Illinois Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 924.

47. Tax imposed by Texas act of April 17, 1905, on gross receipts of railroad companies, whose lines are partly within state, is invalid. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 Law. Ed. 1031.

51. As general rule land is taxed in district in which it is located, and any statute creating exception to this rule is to be strictly construed. People v. Marens, 62 Misc. 317, 116 NYS 189. St. 1905, p. 124, c. 193, providing that tax deed shall convey all interest of owner subject to benefit of easements, etc., does not apply to taxation on

§ 5. Assessment, rating, and valuation. A. Necessity for assessment.[52] See 10 C. L. 1703—"Assessment" in tax statutes includes the whole statutory mode of imposing the tax from inception to conclusion,[53] but as here used it means merely the next step after the original laying or levy of the tax.[54] The assessing of property is a ministerial act, but the determination whether it is subject to assessment is judicial.[55] A legal assessment is essential to the validity of a tax.[56]

(§ 5) B. Assessing officers.[57] See 10 C. L. 1793—The appointment of assessing officers,[58] their qualifications,[59] and the manner in which the office is to be resigned and filled when so vacated,[60] are regulated by statute.

(§ 5) C. Formal requisites.[61] See 10 C. L. 1793—The legislature may prescribe such method of assessing property as it deems proper.[62] An assessment must be made by the appropriate officers or tribunals,[63] acting with due authority[64] and in property near boundary of state when beneficial use of land is made in connection with land in another state. Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 200 Mass. 82, 85 NE 880.

59. County assessor is a nonconstitutional officer whose qualifications may be prescribed by the legislature. State v. Goldthait [Ind.] 87 NE 133.

60. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 9141, 10251, requiring resignations to be made to appointing power where a township assessor did not make his resignation to the county auditor, and such resignation was conditional, acts of auditor and board of county commissioners in appointing a successor held void. State v. Huff [Ind.] 87 NE 141. Ex parte judgment of county auditor that vacancy exists in office of township assessor does not create vacancy. Id. Evidence insufficient to show abandonment of office by township assessor. Id.

62. Where it prescribes form of assessor's oath, it must be substantially complied with. Richardson v. Howard [S. D.] 120 NW 768. Assessor's oath, under Laws 1899, p. 38, attached to his return, held not to comply with the statute rendering tax sale thereunder voidable. Id. Under constitutional provision directing legislature to provide an equal and uniform rate of taxation and such regulations as will secure a just valuation of all property, the decision of the legislature as to the method to secure uniformity must be followed by taxing officers. Clark v. Vandalia R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 851. Ordinance changing date of assessment of taxes for municipal purposes from date specified in Pol. Code, §§ 3628, 3630, held authorized by St. 1883, p. 273, c. 49. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Act May 18, 1906 (P. L. 571), providing that railroad and canal property referred to in taxation act of 1888 (P. L. 269) shall be assessed in each taxing district, is void, and such property is taxable by the state board of assessors as provided by act of 1888. United New Jersey R. & Canal Co. v. Newark [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 275; New York Bay R. Co. v. Newak [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 276.

63. Assessor has no jurisdiction to assess property unless it is within his county, and his description should show his jurisdiction and it cannot be presumed. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. Under Laws 1885-86, p. 882; Laws 1891-92-93, p. 299, c. 103, c. 217; Laws 1894, c. 107; Ky. St. 1903, § 4095, power to assess turnpike franchise tax was vested in county board of supervisors, to the exclusion of assessing officers. Campbell Turnpike Road Co. v. District of Highlands [Ky.] 114 SW 286. Under statute providing that railroad track is assessable by state board of equalization and other land of railroad company by local assessor, an assessment of entire lot by assessor is erroneous where track extends across one corner of it. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cavins, 238 Ill. 380, 87 NE 371.

64. Under St. 1898, c. 548, § 331, providing that three or more assessors shall be elected and § 351 authorizing towns to fill vacancies, and Rev. Laws 1902, c. 8, providing that joint authority given to three or more public officers may be exercised by majority, where three assessors were elected and one died and the town voted not to fill the vacancy, the remaining two could make a valid assessment. Cooke v. Scituate, 201 Mass. 197, 87 NE 207.

the manner prescribed by law.[65] One claiming that property is taxable under a special law has the burden of showing such fact.[66] An assessment is not invalidated by the fact that the assessor is compensated by a commission on taxes levied.[67] Assessment in the name of a grantee, though his deed is void, saves land from forfeiture for nonassessment in the grantor's name.[68]

Notice. See 10 C. L. 1793—A sufficient notice [69] is essential to a valid assessment.[70] It is presumed that taxing officers performed their duty relative to giving notice.[71]

The roll or list. See 10 C. L. 1794—Proper listing is usually essential to a valid tax.[72] The assessment roll or list must be made up in the manner prescribed by law.[73] It must sufficiently describe the property [74] with reference to plats and

65. Under Act 1906, No. 182, p. 335, § 11, it is held that increase in assessment made pursuant to order of state board of equalization would be canceled when not made in method prescribed, and assessment would remain as originally returned. Police jury is not required to make out and publish estimates of expenditures within same year that it levies taxes to meet expenditures. Board of School Directors v. Police Jury [La.] 49 S 5. Assessment of nonresidents in violation of Laws 1896, p. 807, c. 908, § 29, prescribing method of assessment, held void, and there was no jurisdiction to sell. Schreiber v. Long Island R. Co., 127 App. Div. 286, 111 NYS 123. Laws 1892, p. 250, c. 143, § 68, provides method of assessment of real property of nonresident in City of Niagara Falls, and not Laws 1896, p. 807, general laws. Clinton v. Krull, 125 App. Div. 157, 111 NYS 105. Code 1887, § 472, amended by Code 1904, p. 246, relative to separate assessment of land and timber, held not void. Commonwealth v. Camp Mfg. Co. [Va.] 63 SE 978. Under Const. 1902, § 171, amended by Code 1904, pp. 234, 246, an assessment made in 1905, held properly made against land and timber separately without reference to Acts 1906, p. 555, c. 319. Id. Acts 1908, p. 331, c. 220, held not passed because there was no authority for making assessment provided for, but merely to change agency of state for making the assessment and duration thereof. Id.

66. All property being taxable under general laws unless otherwise taxable. St. Paul M. & M. R. Co. v. Howard [S. D.] 119 NW 1032. Where railway company attacks tax title on ground that land was taxable under mileage tax law, Laws 1890, p. 33, c. 21, it has burden to show that land was necessarily used in operation of its lines and so not subject to taxation under general laws. Id. Stipulation by company that there had been no actual physical use of such land for railroad purposes warrants finding that it was not actually used for railroad purposes. Id.

69. Laws 1892, p. 250, c. 143, § 68, providing method of assessment of lands to unknown owners, held sufficient to give notice to the owner of the portion intended to be assessed. Clinton v. Krull, 125 App. Div. 157, 111 NYS 105. Laws 1892, p. 250, providing that board of assessors shall assess each lot separately, giving name of owner, if known, and, if not, name of occupant, is not taking of property without due process. Id. Assessment of a tract, subdivided into lots and owned in part by a nonresident and in part by a resident as one parcel to the nonresident, constituted no notice to the owner, within Laws 1896, p. 810, c. 908, §§ 35, 36. People v. Lewis, 127 App. Div. 107, 111 NYS 398. Owner of life estate was served with notice of proposed street improvement thirty days after property was sold for taxes and two days before confirmation of sale. Held, that on day notice was served, life tenant was the owner of life estate and as such was the proper person to be served, and assessment thereafter levied was not rendered invalid for want of sufficient notice. Johnson v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 344.

70. Pub. St. 1906, § 566, requiring notice of place of hearing of complaints by tax listers, is mandatory and essential to the validity of the grand list. Smith v. Stannard & First Nat. Bank, 81 Vt. 319, 70 A 568. Ky. St. 1903, § 4122, requires board of supervisors to give notice to nonresident owners of raise in assessment by publication and such notice is jurisdictional. Ward v. Wentz [Ky.] 113 SW 892. Action of state board of valuation and assessment, sending out preliminary and final notices, as required, that assessment had been made against a railroad company, is final, and legal effect thereof is to be determined by what they did. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 326, 110 SW 265. Knowledge of landowner's agent that board of supervisors had raised his assessment did not dispense with notice required to be given by statute. Ward v. Wentz [Ky.] 113 SW 892.

71. In absence of showing, it is presumed that public officers complied with the statute requiring tax officers to furnish tax payers with notice to furnish a list of taxable property. Masonic Education & Charity Trust v. Boston, 201 Mass. 320, 87 NE 602. Where owner exhibits the notice actually served which does not comply with statutory requirements, he overcomes the presumption that proper notice was given. Ward v. Wentz [Ky.] 113 SW 892.

72. Before a man is chargeable for poll tax, it is ordinarily essential that he shall have first been listed as provided under Ann. St. 1906, p. 4427, but he waives such requirement by seeking his discharge from the obligation. Johnson v. Scott, 133 Mo. App. 689, 114 SW 45.

73. Mt. Vernon City charter, § 135, prescribing method of preparing assessment roll, held to have been substantially complied with and taxes levied were a valid lien. Wilcox v. City & County Cont. Co., 128 App. Div. 227, 112 NYS 532. Where taxes are boundaries,[75] subdivisions,[76] and ownership.[77] Two tracts of land should not be assessed as one tract.[78] In some states assessors are required to make copies of the assessment roll for certain purposes.[79]

*Irregularities.*See 10 C. L. 1796—It is presumed that taxing officers have performed their duty, and one objecting to a tax has the burden to prove its invalidity.[80] An irregularity will not avoid an assessment unless it has worked prejudice.[81] Irregubrought upon assessment roll by specific kind of authority, they stand or fall by virtue of that authority alone. Board of Com'rs of Jackson County v. Kaul, 77 Kan. 715, 96 P 45. Assessment in solido to two tracts belonging to different persons does not invalidate the assessment, Code 1906, § 4283, directing how roll is to be made up being directory only. Moores v. Thomas [Miss.] 48 S 1025. Under Const. 1906, § 178, relative to manner of assessing corporate franchises, a franchise to construct waterworks in a city is taxable, under § 181, in same manner as if owned by individuals. Adams v. Bullock & Co. [Miss.] 47 S 527. Assessment of water company for "capital invested in merchandise and manufacturing" includes its pipes, hydrants, etc. Adams v. Vicksburg Water Works Co. [Miss.] 47 S 530. Such assessment did not include solvent credits, they being a separate kind of property which should have been listed separately. Id. Assessment of "capital invested in merchandising and manufacturing" did not include corporate franchise to construct water works, such franchise being personalty taxable by itself. Adams v. Samuel R. Bullock & Co. [Miss.] 47 S 527. Where lumber company listed its property at one-half its value, a separate list prepared by assessor was not objectionable as double taxation. State v. C. A. Smith Timber Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 1135.

74. Correct description of land is essential to valid tax. Griffin v. Denison Land Co. [N. D.] 119 NW 1041. Description in assessment roll from which property can be identified is sufficient. Cone v. Lauer, 131 App. Div. 193, 115 NYS 644. Assessment is not void for failure to designate by name many years before applied thereto, larger tract of which the land assessed was a part or to give number of the lot under which the early settler drew it in a colonial allotment. Id. Assessment of land by description unknown to government surveys and maps held void. Cassedy v. Hartman [Miss.] 46 S 536. Where there are in the state four townships, number 4, range 4, a description in assessment giving such township and range but not county is insufficient. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. Description held sufficient. Moores v. Thomas [Miss.] 48 S 1025.

75. Description of parcel of land as portion of entire larger tract simply by block and number without reference to map is not prima facie sufficient to identify it. Stough v. Reeves, 42 Colo. 432, 95 P 958. Description held prima facie insufficient to identify lands. Id.

76. Failure to certify that tract was not subdivided does not render assessment void. Cone v. Lauer, 131 App. Div. 193, 115 NYS 644.

77. To make either the owner or his property liable, it should be assessed in his name, if known or ascertainable, as required by Hill's Ann. Laws, § 2752, amended by Laws 1893, p. 6, and §§ 2768, 2770, 2776, and an assessment in such case in the name of another is void. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. Entry in assessment roll of names and addresses in column "remarks" does not constitute an assessment of property of such individuals nor affect the validity of the assessment; entry is merely a memorandum to aid in collection of taxes. Cone v. Lauer, 131 App. Div. 193, 115 NYS 644. Assessment of individual interest of nonresident is void. Id.

Mistake in name of owner does not necessarily render tax invalid, and hence, if assessment of land belonging to James T. under name of Jane T. did not mislead the owner, he may not avoid a sale for taxes. Yellow Popular Lumber Co. v. Thompson's Heirs, 108 Va. 612, 62 SE 358. Whether he was misled held a question for the jury. Id. Validity of assessment on land does not depend on whether person in whose name the property is assessed is the owner. Glowner v. De Alvarex [Cal. App.] 101 P 432. Under Laws 1896, p. 801, c. 908, providing that when real property is owned by a resident of the district in which it is situated, it shall be assessed to him, the assessment to the husband of lands owned by his wife is void. In re Riddell, 116 NYS 261. Under Code, § 1383, amended by Laws 1904, p. 43, and § 1387 lien of personal taxes held not void because of omission of auditor to list same in name of owner under proper letter on his entering on the tax lists the names of owners in alphabetical order. Watkins v. Couch [Iowa] 120 NW 485.

78. A tax deed based thereon is void and the holder cannot recover from the owner taxes paid under it. Griffin v. Denison Land Co. [N. D.] 119 NW 1041. Within Rev. Codes 1905, § 1480, defining "tract" as used in revenue laws as any contiguous body of land owned by the same person, "contiguous" means land which touches on the sides, and two quarter sections which touch only at the corner do not constitute one tract. Id.

79. Under St. 1897, p. 504, c. 277, requiring county assessor to prepare certified copies of assessment roll of cities, he is required to make such rolls as part of his official duty and he cannot delegate it to another. Alameda County v. Dalton [Cal. App.] 98 P 85. Evidence sufficient to show that assessor did not make an independent contract for doing such work but that he was personally interested in the contract. Id. Provision that assessor shall only receive actual cost incurred in preparing such rolls contemplated that he should not be required to do extra work at his own expense. Id. In action for violation of such duty, county could show by contractor the number of days he was employed, the names of persons employed in assisting him, and amounts paid for their services. Id.

80. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

81. Chicago House Wrecking Co. v. Omaha [Neb.] 119 NW 253. Particular irregularities

larity in the process of taxation can be said not to amount to due process of law only when proceedings are arbitrary, oppressive or unjust.[82]

Lists by taxpayers. See 10 C. L. 1796—In most states provision is made for the listing of property by taxpayers,[83] and if he fails to do so it may be done by listers.[84] Such lists are not essential, however, to a valid assessment,[85] nor are they conclusive on the assessor,[86] but an assessment made in disregard of such return is erroneous.[87] In some states penalties are prescribed for failure to list,[88] and the state may make the assessment of the assessor conclusive from one who fails to furnish to the assessor a list of his property as required by statute,[89] but not where failure to make such return was without fraudulent intent, and founded on a belief are treated in connection with the essential requirements of a valid assessment. See ante, this subsection, subdivisions Notice; The Roll or List; etc. Proceedings for collection of cash road tax are not invalidated by fact that estimate was not entered in town book and signed by commissioners, where estimate made for Bradford County under Act 1846, P. L. 199, was adopted and levy made thereon. Elsbree v. Keller, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 497. Tax proceedings had under a land description which, though not the legal description, could represent no other parcel of land, are valid, where the owner has both record and actual notice that his property was listed and assessed by such description, land which had not been platted being described according to lot and block numbers it would have had if platted. Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy, 212 U. S. 152, 53 Law. Ed. —.

82. It is not necessary that notice be given of each step in the process of taxation. State v. Several Parcels of Land [Neb.] 119 NW 21.

83. Const. art. 13, § 8, providing that the legislature shall require each taxpayer to deliver to county assessor annually a sworn statement of his property, does not apply to assessments by cities for local purposes. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Insurance companies being exempted from Kirby's Dig. § 6936, requiring corporations to file schedules for taxation are required to file schedules specified in §§ 6906, 6910. Dallas County v. Banks [Ark.] 113 SW 37. Laws 1896, p. 795, c. 908, Laws 1899, p. 1591, c. 712, requiring persons subject to taxation on special franchise to make written report to tax commissioners describing the franchise, etc., did not prohibit commission from publishing such reports, and it could exhibit them to anyone interested in inspecting them. American District Tel. Co. v. Woodbury, 127 App. Div. 455, 112 NYS 165.

84. Under Pub. St. 1906, § 565, the list of a recusant taxpayer need not contain in detail the action of the listers in making up the list. Smith v. Stannard & First Nat. Bank, 81 Vt. 319, 70 A 568. List held sufficient. Id. Pub. St. 1906, § 555, providing that real estate in last appraisal shall be appraised at such appraisal, does not apply to real estate taxable to a person willfully omitting to return an inventory, and listers, in making of list of persons of latter class, must appraise the real estate and not take last appraisal. Id. Pub. St. §§ 503, 510, 571, specifying to whom and where taxable real estate shall be set in the list, applies where list is made up by listers because of willful omission to return an inventory as well as where the list is based on an inventory. Id. Under Gen. St. 1902, §§ 2296, 2302, 2303, 2305, imposing a duty on each taxpayer to bring in a verified list, a list filed in the proper office and certified by an official having authority to administer oaths, that he had administered the oath, is admissible in evidence. Whalen v. Gleeson [Conn.] 71 A 908.

85. An assessment is not void because the owner's agent did not comply with the statute in listing it. Ward v. Wintz [Ky.] 113 SW 892.

86. Under a statute requiring a railroad company to return all its real estate as "track" or real estate other than track and making the "track" assessable by the state board of equalization and other real estate assessable by local assessor, the company cannot change the character of its real estate by the manner in which it is returned, and if it makes an erroneous return the local assessor is not precluded from assessing but an error of the assessor in classifying renders the assessment void. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cavins, 238 Ill. 380, 87 NE 371. The values of property and securities contained in the sworn statement made by the president of a trust company, showing its capital stock and surplus and the values of property exempt, submitted to the assessor, is not binding on the assessor in assessing taxes against the company. Newton Trust Co. v. Atwood [N. J. Law] 71 A 110.

87. Where one made a return of personal property showing that it did not own any such property subject to taxation because of indebtedness, an assessment made notwithstanding such return is erroneous. People v. Odell, 129 App. Div. 475, 114 NYS 199.

88. Ky. St. 1909, §§ 4076b-4076k, providing for future for continued failure to list, does not apply where one lists a patent for a less number of acres than it purports to convey where he does not know how much he owns because of prior patents and adverse possession. Lockard v. Com. [Ky.] 118 SW 331. Where a charitable institution holds a fund which has never been taxed and no other personal property, mere failure of its trustee to make a return under Rev. Laws 1902, c. 12, §§ 5, 41, providing that in case of willful failure to make return exempt property shall be taxed for the current year, will not be deemed willful as a matter of law. Masonic Education & Charity Trust v. Boston, 201 Mass. 320, 87 NE 602.

89. Return of "no property" is no return where there is property. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 122 La. 129, 47 S 439.

that he had no taxable property.[90] Corporate stock need not be listed by the owner where the corporation is required to list it.[91]

(§ 5) D. Valuation of taxable property. In general.[92]—See 19 C. L. 1797—The legislature may decide the manner in which different forms of property may be valued and the manner in which taxes may be levied,[93] but it cannot delegate its power in this regard,[94] though the power to fix the rate is sometimes delegated even to subordinate, municipal boards.[95] Special methods of valuation are sometimes prescribed,[96] and special statutory rules are sometimes prescribed for the valuation of particular kinds of property.[97] It is presumed that taxing officials acted regularly in valuing property,[98] and, while a valuation may be attacked for fraud,[99] an overvaluation is alone insufficient to show fraud,[1] and excessive valuation is not alone ground for avoiding an assessment,[2] nor is an increase in the valuation of land

91. Owner of shares of stock of a domestic investment company is not required to list them under Cobbey's St. 1907, § 10927, as they are assessed under § 10955, which expressly provides that they shall be listed by an officer of the corporation. Bressler v. Wayne County [Neb.] 118 NW 1054.

94. James v. U. S. Fidelity & Guarantee Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 406. St. 1909, §§ 4080, relative to valuation of franchises of foreign corporations construed and held not delegation of taxing power. Id.

95. In city of Peoria, under its charter, in power to fix the rate of tax levied for educational purposes rests with school inspectors. People v. Peoria, 139 Ill. App. 488.

96. Under Act April 12, § 1905 (P. L. 142), providing for levy of road tax on the "last adjusted valuation" for county purposes, there is no such valuation until county commissioners have corrected the assessors return, and board of revision has given taxpayers opportunity to object. H. C. Frick Coke Co. v. Mt. Pleasant Tp., 222 Pa. 451, 71 A 930. Under Ann. Code 1892, § 3772, providing that lands not given in by any one shall be valued by the assessor, and § 3787, providing assessment shall be conclusive after approval, etc., held, where owner leaves valuation to assessor and does not object, he is liable for the taxes. Moores v. Thomas [Miss.] 48 S 1025. Bill attacking assessment on ground that valuation had not been fixed by assessors acting together as a board is properly dismissed where it appears that though the assessors made separate estimates, they subsequently met as a body, and made final assessment. Clark v. Burschell, 220 Pa. 435, 69 A 900. Where coal is sold and conveyed after the regular decennial appraisement, it is the duty of the county board of equalizaion under § 2792a of the Rev. St., passed April 23, 1904, upon application by owner of the surface to make equitable apportionment of the valuation between the owner of the surface and the owner of the coal according to the relative value of their respective interests. Johnson v. Lacey, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 411.

97. In taxing trust companies under Act 1903 (P. L. 405), the full amount of capital and accumulated surplus must be ascertained by deducting from gross assets the liabilities of the company. Fidelity Trust Co. v. New Jersey Board of Equalization [N. J. Law] 71 A 61. From the full amount of capital and surplus thus ascertained, the true value of all assets exempt is to be deducted. The balance is the amount to be assessed less the amount of assessment on their real estate. Id. In Pennsylvania the real estate of quasi public corporations, unless exempt from taxation, is taxed by including the value thereof in the assessment of capital stock. Conoy Tp. Sup'rs v. York Haven Elec. Power Plant Co., 222 Pa. 319, 71 A 207.

98. In a suit to enjoin collection of railroad taxes, the court must presume that the tax commissioners performed their duty and considered money of the company in valuing its property and cannot inquire into the evidence upon which they acted. Clark v. Vandalia R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 851. Where one company leased and operated a certain railroad during certain years during which it made separate reports to state auditor but board of valuation and assessment made no separate assessment of the franchise of the leased road, held, the board's action was a determination that it was of no value except as included in assessment of franchise of the lessor. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 287. Presumption is that decision of comptroller as to assessment and taxation of corporate franchises is correct. People v. Glynn, 130 App. Div. 332, 114 NYS 460. Verified tax returns as evidence are not conclusive on party making them to fix valuation for jurisdictional purposes. On appeal to federal supreme court in ejectment case. Spreckles v. Brown, 212 U. S. 208, 53 Law. Ed. —.

99. People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 NE 410. Where record of an assessment showed on its face that increase was made by supervisor of assessments, and not by county board of review, it could not be impeached, in an action for taxes by allegations of fraud on part of board of review. Id. In suit for unpaid taxes, evidence insufficient to show that assessment was fraudulent. Id.

1. People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 NE 410.

2. An assessment may be impeached for fraud but overvaluation or undervaluation does not of itself show fraud. People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 NE 410.

necessarily void merely because its condition has remained unchanged,[3] nor because of an irregularity in sending notices to taxpayers to file their statements.[4] As a general rule property is taxable at its true value [5] as of the date prescribed by statute,[6] and all elements of value must be considered.[7] In determining the value of property based principally upon its earnings, average earnings and expenses for a series of years must be considered,[8] and the valuation cannot be based on the earnings of a single year.[9] In determining the gross earnings in a certain district, the income derived therein is not the criterion.[10] The value of buildings which do not belong to the owner of the soil is what it would cost to replace them.[11] The right to deduct debts from credits is purely statutory.[12]

3. Increase in valuation of farm land for taxation is not rendered illegal by the fact that no improvements were made and that its condition was unaltered. Anderton v. Pawtucket Tax Assessors [R. I.] 71 A 797.

4. Increase in valuation is not rendered illegal by the fact that notice, under Gen. Laws 1896, c. 46, § 6, to persons to bring in their sworn statements, made the time for bringing in statements include, contrary to law, days prior to assessment, where the objecting party made no statement at any time and was not prejudiced by the notice. Anderton v. Pawtucket Tax Assessors [R. I.] 71 A 797.

5. Water power appurtenant to land in Massachusetts but used for power in a sister state is taxable in Massachusetts on a valuation of the uses to which it could be put in that state, and the uses to which it is put in connection with an additional water fall in the sister state, and then estimating the value imputable to the land in Massachusetts. Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 200 Mass. 82, 85 NE 880. The constitutional provision that all non-exempt property shall be taxed in proportion to its fair cash value is not self executing, but any deficiency is supplied by Pol. Code, § 3627, 3617, requiring property to be assessed at full cash value and defining such value as what property would be taken for in payment of a debt. Cheseborough v. San Francisco, 153 Cal. 559, 96 P 288. When it appears that one paid taxes on $3,500 worth of personalty and household furniture and it is stipulated that the property is worth less, he should not be assessed separately on a library worth $300. Commonwealth v. Harris [Ky.] 118 SW 294. There is a marked distinction between "true value" and "cash value" as used in tax statutes. Richardson v. Howard [S. D.] 120 NW 768. Land subject to mortgage may be assessed for taxation at its full value, without conflicting with U. S. Const. 14th Amend. Paddell v. New York, 211 U. S. 446, 53 Law. Ed. 275. Amount of mortgage debt on land need not be deducted from the assessment of the owner's personal estate. Id.

6. All taxes are assessed as of May 1st of each year, and all rights taxed with reference to that date, unless a distinct provision to the contrary appears. Rogers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 85 NE 405. Where, prior to day for assessing, a street was vacated and the bed thereof transferred to a street railway company which owned lots on both sides and intended to construct a terminal station, the lots should have been assessed as inside lots. People v. O'Donnel, 130 App. Div. 734, 115 NYS 509. In determining amount of a taxpayers balance on September 15th when he is required to make return, outstanding checks may be charged off. Commonwealth v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 766.

7. "Plottage" is a percentage added to the aggregate value of two or more contiguous lots held in one ownership, as representing an increased value pertaining to a group of lots because they admit of more advantageous disposition and improvement than as single lot. People v. O'Donnel, 130 App. Div. 734, 115 NYS 509. "Property" in Pub. St. 1901, c. 64, § 1, providing that a railroad shall pay an annual tax on the value of its property at a rate as nearly equal to the average rate on other property, construed in light of legislative history of taxation and other statutes and held that in determining average rate on savings bank deposits must be considered. Wyatt v. State Board of Equalization, 74 N. H. 552, 70 A 387. Tax on deposits in savings banks imposed by Pub. St. 1901, c. 65, is a tax on property. Id. Where one Indiana railroad company leased a part of its line to another for a percentage of the gross earnings, held, the funds set apart for the leased lines belonged to the lessor corporation to be considered in valuing its property. Clark v. Vandalia R. Co. [Ind.] 86 NE 851. The sale and removal of timber from lands does not entitle the owner of the land to any reduction of the decennial appraisement under Rev. St., § 2753. Johnson v. Lacey, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 411.

8. People v. State Tax Com'rs, 128 App. Div. 13, 112 NYS 392. Method of determining value of intangible property of a water company for assessment of franchise tax stated. Id.

9. The net earnings of a telephone company for a single year is not a proper criterion by which to determine the value of the system. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Dodge County, 80 Neb. 18, 117 NW 468.

10. Income derived from messages at station in a given district which comprises only part of a great telegraph system is not the proper measure of the gross earnings of that part of the system where the lines within such district are used for the transmission of messages having neither origin nor destination in the district. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Dodge County, 80 Neb. 18, 117 NW 468. That net earnings of a telegraph company are 13 per cent of its gross earnings does not justify the conclusion that net earnings of a particular district through which the system runs, is but 13 per cent of gross earnings of such part of the system, in the absence of proof that the ratio is the same. Id.

11. Tulane Imp. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 121 La. 941, 46 S 928. In such case the fact Valuation of corporate property, stock, and franchises. See 10 C. L. 1709—The value of a franchise is to be determined in the same manner as the value of any other property, so far as its nature permits.[13] In some states the method of valuing corporate franchises is specifically prescribed by law,[14] and the duty to make the valuation is imposed upon specified officials.[15]

(§ 5) E. Reassessment; omitted property.[16]—See 10 C. L. 1861—The state has power to enact retroactive laws for reassessment of undervalued property,[17] or property which has been omitted in former assessments,[18] and the fact that there is no immediate public need of the funds is no objection to such tax,[19] but property cannot be assessed as omitted where there has been a valid assessment of it.[20] In the absence of statutory authority taxing authorities cannot assess a taxpayer that they are on ground favorably located for commercial purposes does not add to their value. Id.

12. Rev. Laws 1905, § 836, givee such right only upon condition that the person claiming it makes the affidavit therein provided. State v. Nelson [Minn.] 119 NW 1058. Under Laws 1907, p. 69, c. 48, § 1, providing that credits shall not be taxed and no reduction allowed for debts, held, if total wealth can be once taxed without taxing credits, the constitutional provision requiring all property to be taxed is satisfied but a provision exempting money from taxation is void. State v. Parmenter, 50 Wash. 164, 96 P 1047. Credits are a mere right to demand money or property in the future and until transfer is made property is taxed wherever it is found, and total actual property in the state may be overtaxed without taxing credits. Id. Under Const. art. 13, § 14, Pol. Code, §§ 3617, 3627, 3628, 3650, held, that one having solvent assets secured by collateral security on personalty was entitled to have debts deducted therefrom, § 3629, subd. 6, not being applicable. Bank of Willows v. Glenn County [Cal.] 101 P 13.

13. People v. State Tax Com'rs, 128 App. Div. 13, 112 NYS 392. Method of fixing valuation of special franchise of water company stated. Id. Intangible property of a water company possessing no exclusive right to occupy streets is given value because it is supposed to be earning an income. Id. Value of property of a water company, especially its franchise and good will, cannot be ascertained until franchise tax and all other taxes and replacement fund have been deducted from current earnings. Id. Franchise tax is imposed on that part of capital stock which is employed within state, and not upon the dividends, though the amount of the dividends whether distributed yearly or allowed to accumulate and distributed as additional stock, may be considered to determine the value of the stock. People v. Glynn, 130 App. Div. 332, 114 NYS 460. Capital stock used for specific purposes mentioned in certificate of incorporation is "employed" rather than "invested" within the state, within the meaning of such statute, Laws 1901, p. 1365, c. 558, as amended by Laws 1906, p. 1196, c. 474, § 2. People v. Glynn, 194 N. Y. 387, 87 NE 434.

14. In fixing valuation of franchise of a foreign corporation, under St. 1909, § 4080, the gross earnings and net income must be considered. James v. U. S. Fidelity & Guarantee Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 406; James v. American Surety Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 411. Under Laws 1896, p. 803, c. 908; Laws 1899, p. 1590, c. 712, the owner of a special franchise which is assessed at full value is not entitled to a reduction of 20 per cent because real estate was erroneously assessed at but 80 per cent of its full value. People v. Woodbury, 63 Misc. 1, 116 NYS 209. Finding of board of arbitrators of Georgia as to valuation of property and franchises of a telegraph company for purposes of taxation, held not to include, as an element, any right given by 14 Stat. 221, and not to afford any ground upon which a federal court should enjoin collection of the tax based thereon. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wright, 166 F 954.

15. Under Tax Laws, §§ 42, 45, the state board of tax commissioners must annually fix the value of each special franchise, and, where it fails to do so, village assessors have no power to determine such value and enter the same in the assessment roll. People v. Keno, 61 Misc. 345, 114 NYS 1094.

16. Search Note: See Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 142, 600-602, 611, 1164, 1319-1323; Dec. Dig. §§ 109, 361-362½, 405, 406; 27 A. & E. Enc. L. (2ed.) 698.

17. Owner of omitted property may not complain that his property is assessed at actual cash value because other property has been heretofore assessed at much less than its real value. Anderson v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002.

18. Laws 1906, p. 115, c. 22, art. 3, requiring listing and payment of taxes on omitted land for 1901 to 1905, and providing for forfeiture for failure to do so, is constitutional. Eastern Kenturky Coal Lands Corp. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 857, 111 SW 362. Where one seeks to avail himself of the provisions of the act by listing an entire tract without indefinite exclusions, and so far as his petition shows he is owner of the entire tract, the petition is sufficient. Id.

19. The fact that public expenses have been paid for the years in which property was omitted, or that the purpose for which the tax was levied has been met with other funds, or that collection thereof will temporarily create a surplus of public revenue, is no constitutional reason why the tax should not be collected. Andersen v. Ritterbusch [Okl.] 98 P 1002.

20. Ward v. Wentz [Ky.] 113 SW 892. Under Code 1906, § 4296, declaring that approved assessment roll has effect of final judgment, while back taxes were assessed and assessment confirmed by council and list duly filed and approved, the council could not cancel such approval at subsequent meeting. Adams v. Clarksdale [Miss.] 48 S 242.

who has neglected to make a return for a particular year after the expiration of that year,[21] but assessment of back taxes[22] and of omitted property is generally provided for by statute.[23] Proceedings to make such assessments[24] must conform to statutory requirements,[25] and the assessment must be made by the proper authorities.[26] A proceeding to assess omitted property is a supplemental means of assessing property and not an action or proceeding.[27] The right of officers whose duty it is to see that omitted property is taxed is a continuing one against every tax payer, and is not terminated by the death of a tax payer.[28] In some states, a tax ferret contract is held to be contrary to public policy.[29] As a general rule,

21. Schmuck v. Hartman, 222 Pa. 190, 70 A 1091. Taxing authorities cannot assess a taxpayer, who makes a false return for a particular year after the expiration of that year, but the only remedy is to ascertain his liability as provided by Act June 1, 1889 (P. L. 425), providing that failure to assess or make return shall not relieve the taxpayer. Id.

22. Right of state revenue agent to assess back taxes is not exclusive; Code 1906, § 3421, authorizes a municipality through its clerk to do so. Adams v. Clarksdale [Miss.] 48 S 242. Legislature may provide for assessment of property for past years which has escaped taxation for such years. Jackson Lumber Co. v. McCrimmon, 164 F 759. Where omitted real property was in July, 1901, entered by the county auditor on the duplicate carrying taxes of 1900, which was the duplicate then in the hands of the county treasurer, it became the duty of the auditor under Rev. St., § 2803, to add to taxes of 1901 the simple taxes for each preceding year in which the property had escaped taxation. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Clark County Treasurer, 78 Ohio St. 227, 85 NE 49. "Current year" in Rev. St., § 2803, construed to mean current tax year, and not current calendar year. Id. Under Act June, 1906, art. 3, requiring all owners to pay taxes assessed for 1901-1905, a petition to list lands held not to sufficiently describe them. Commonwealth v. Gatliff [Ky.] 116 SW 263. Under such act, lands must be listed before January 1, 1907, and makes the county court the assessing tribunal. Held, where that tribunal held a petition to list insufficient, and petitioner failed to tender a sufficient petition within the prescribed time, his right to file could not be extended. Id.

23. Taxes on property omitted from assessment and discovered by assessor in subsequent year are collectible as current year taxes. State v. Goldthait [Ind.] 87 NE 133. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 10277, 10310, 10353, requires assessors to search for omitted property, taxes then assessed against such property being collectible as current year taxes. Id. Where a taxpayer has not been assessed on credits for former years, the board of review may assess them in subsequent years. Warner v. Campbell, 238 Ill. 630, 87 NE 853. Under Laws 1906, p. 88, c. 22, providing for assessing omitted property, the franchise of a foreign corporation may be assessed according to the law in force when assessment should have been made. James v. American Surety Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 411. In proceeding, under Code Supp., § 1407a, to assess withheld property, testimony of the owner is not conclusive, and judgment of the treasurer though not supported by evidence, is not void, and the owner must follow his remedy provided by appeal to the district court and cannot enjoin the tax. Bednar v. Carroll, 138 Iowa, 338, 116 NW 315.

24. Code 1906, § 3421, authorizing a city through its clerk to assess omitted property, does not apply to a proceeding by the revenue agent for the same purpose, which is governed by ch. 131, and notice of such omitted property was properly given to the revenue agent. Adams v. Clarksdale [Miss.] 48 S 242. Proceeding against trust company as trustee of designated beneficiary to assess omitted property is against the trustee, and not against the trust estate, and judgment is against the trust company which is personally liable under Ky. St. 1903, §§ 4023, 4050. Commonwealth v. Churchill [Ky.] 115 SW 189. Pendency of a proceeding to have omitted property listed for a certain year is ground for abatement of second proceeding for same purpose, though one is instituted by county auditor's agent and the other by the state revenue agent, each being on behalf of the state. Commonwealth v. U. S. Trust Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 314.

25. A complaint against a county and officials to compel it to put alleged omitted property on the tax list, which failed to state the name of any person whose property was omitted, held insufficient. Clark v. Lawrence County [S. D.] 120 NW 764.

26. Levy of tax on omitted property by board of review held an irregularity but not void. Chicago House Wrecking Co. v. Omaha [Neb.] 119 NW 253.

27. Proceeding to assess omitted property, under St. 1909, § 4260, instituted by filing statement by revenue agent, is on behalf of the state though the revenue agent receives compensation, and the proceeding is not an action nor a special proceeding but merely a supplemental means of assessing omitted property. Commonwealth v. Glover [Ky.] 116 SW 769. It is not necessary that the revenue agent verify his statement. Id. The provision that the statement contain "a description and value of the property proposed to be assessed" is mandatory. Id. Statement held sufficient as to cash, household effects, etc. Id.

28. Proceedings in discharge of such duty may be maintained against his estate. Gamble v. Patrick [Okl.] 99 P 640. Under Const. art. 6, § 6, discovery of omitted property is duty of assessor. State v. Goldthait [Ind.] 87 NE 133. Under Burns' Ann S., 1908, §§ 10277, 10310, 10353, assessors are required to search for property omitted in previous years. Id.

29. Under Const. art. 6, § 6, providing that county officers shall perform such duties as owners are entitled to notice of increase of assessment,[30] or of assessment of back taxes,[31] but the purpose of requiring notice to an owner before raising an assessment is merely to enable him to appear and be heard.[32]

*Appeals and review.*See 10 C. L. 1802—Reassessments and assessments of omitted property are usually reviewable by appeal.[33]

§ 6. Equalization, correction, and review.[34]—See 8 C. L. 2074—An improper assessment may be canceled,[35] providing the appropriate procedure is followed.[36] One seeking reduction of taxes cannot ask a greater reduction than prayed for in his petition.[37] An alternative demand for reduction of an assessment may be cumulated with a demand for cancellation.[38] Taxes may be abated only in the manner prescribed [39] and for statutory grounds.[40]

*The powers and jurisdiction of state and municipal boards of equalization.*See 10 C. L. 1802—The powers of boards of equalization are prescribed by statute.[41] As a general rule, such boards have no power to make an original assessment,[42] unless authorized by statute; [43] nor make a gross increase or decrease in valuation or as-may be directed by law, and county assessors being required to search for omitted property, a tax ferret contract for such purpose is contrary to public policy. State v. Goldthait [Ind.] 87 NE 133.

30. Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 120, requires notice to person affected of increase of assessment, and such reassessment cannot be made without such notice. People v. Centralia Gas & Elec. Co., 238 Ill. 113, 87 NE 370. In such case the owner of the property is such person and not necessarily the person in whose name it is assessed. Id.

31. Under Code 1906, § 4740, no time limit is fixed for serving notice on owners of assessment of back taxes, and delay in such service held not to avoid the assessment. Adams v. Clarksdale [Miss.] 48 S 242.

32. Failure to give notice does not invalidate the assessment where he actually appeared and had a hearing. People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 NE 410. Evidence held to show that notice of increase in assessment was mailed and received by some officer of defendant company. Id.

33. Where property, which it is sought to assess as withheld, has been in fact properly listed and taxes paid, the remedy of the owner for improper assessment is by appeal to the district court as provided by Code Supp. 1902, § 1407a. Bednar v. Carroll, 138 Iowa, 338, 116 NW 315. Remedy provided by Code Supp. 1902, § 1407a, authorizing review on appeal to district court of action of county treasurer assessing property withheld from taxation, is exclusive and one complaining cannot resort to equity unless the tax is illegal. Id. Finding by treasurer as to amount of withheld property held within his jurisdiction, and his decision was reviewable only by appeal as provided and not by suit to enjoin enforcement of the assessment. Id. Circuit court on appeal from county court, dismissing a proceeding to assess omitted property, may, after submission of the cause, allow amendment of answer to plead former judgment. Commonwealth v. Churchill [Ky.] 115 SW 189.

39. Assessors have no power to make an abatement of taxes in any way except as specified in Pub. St. 1882, c. 11, §§ 69-77. Rogers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 85 NE 405.

40. Where land was taxed as a whole and purchasers of a part of it applied for an apportionment, and the assessors made an apportionment and handed the collector a slip containing a direction to "abate" the original assessment, held not an abatement as the sale afforded no grounds for abatement. Rogers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 85 NE 405.

41. Laws 1868, p. 131, establishing a board of review, does not exclude from review before such board extraordinary assessment provided by St. 1898, § 1152, but, on contrary, § 1061 provides generally that the assessor must lay before the board their whole assessment. Stranger v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. While jurisdiction of board of review, sitting as annual board of equalization, is ordinarily confined to lots and lands in immediate vicinity of parcels as to which complaint is made, it may be exercised over lots and land in another locality or district within corporation, if not exercised for purpose of general revaluation of property in district, a purpose which may be inferred if additions are largely in excess of reduction. Mooney v. Richardson, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 111.

42. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 5124, amended by Acts 1907, p. 459, c. 11, a board of equalization has no power to add to rolls property not previously assessed nor to take therefrom property contained therein. Sullivan v. Bitter [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 193. Addition of property by board of equalization being void, owner was not required to show that he had applied to the board for relief in order to have the assessment annulled or enjoined. Id.

43. Under Kirby's Dig., § 7004, authorizing county boards of equalization to add to or sessment where the list returned by the assessor contains several different items.[44] Such boards must hold their meetings during the time prescribed by law,[45] and must consider the evidence submitted.[46] It is presumed that a board of equalization in equalizing assessments proceeded regularly and not arbitrarily.[47] The territorial board of Arizona acts judicially and its determination is not subject to collateral attack,[48] and it may base its orders upon records furnished.[49]

Notice See 10 C. L. 1804 to the taxing municipality is necessary in an appeal to a county board of taxation for cancellation of an assessment.[50]

Irregularities. See 10 C. L. 1805—Mere irregularities in the apportionment of a tax will not vitiate it.[51]

Review by the courts. See 10 C. L. 1805—Decisions of boards of equalization and correction are usually reviewable by the courts,[52] more or less specific provision being also made as to the modes [53] and scope of review,[54] procedure,[55] and relief to subtract from the value of property returned by the assessor and to add omitted property, it may add stock in insurance companies if such stock is taxable. Dallas County v. Banks [Ark.] 113 SW 37. Unless authorized by statute, a board of equalization cannot assess property not listed and valued by the assessor. Sullivan v. Bitter [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 193.

44. Board of equalization may not make a gross increase in the aggregate valuation where the list returned by the assessor has several different items therein. Nashville Lumber Co. v. Howard County [Ark.] 115 SW 936. Where the record of the board of equalization shows that it erroneously made a gross increase in valuation of property, its action cannot be upheld by proof that in equalizing the assessment it added items to the list as returned by assessor, and increased items listed. Id. Under Rev. St. 1895, tit. 104, c. 3, prescribing method of assessing, the commissioner's court, sitting as board of equalization, has no power to assess. Sullivan v. Bitter [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 193. The assessment of credits being as one item, where credits have been assessed, the board of review cannot in subsequent years increase the assessment because too low or erroneous in omitting certain credits. Warner v. Campbell, 238 Ill. 630, 87 NE 853.

45. Under Code 1906, §§ 4291, 4294, 3422, the mayor and aldermen have no power to equalize assessments after month of October, though meetings held in succeeding months were adjourned meetings of October. City of Biloxi v. Biloxi Real Estate Co. [Miss.] 48 S 729.

46. Where, on review of assessment, the assessor received a verified statement of the party complaining, which was undisputed, they could not reject it nor act otherwise than in accordance therewith unless the evidence before them justified it. People v. Hall, 130 App. Div. 360, 114 NYS 511. Where such statement by a telephone company showed that all its property, consisting of tools, equipment, etc., had been taxed as real estate by the board of state tax commissioners, the assessors could not fix an assessment on the real estate of the company on the ground that all tools and equipment were not in the highways of the town. Id.

47. United Globe Mines v. Gila County [Ariz.] 100 P 774.

48. The sufficiency of evidence to justify an order is not reviewable in the absence of fraud, or unless it acted arbitrarily, but the inquiry limited to ascertainment of whether the board had jurisdiction or acted arbitrarily or in bad faith. United Globe Mines v. Gila County [Ariz.] 100 P 774.

49. In equalizing assessments, the territorial board of equalization may base any order made upon abstracts of assessment rolls furnished by clerks of the county boards without inspecting the rolls from which abstracts are made. United Globe Mines v. Gila County [Ariz.] 100 P 774.

50. Shrewsbury Tp. v. Merchants Steamboat Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 958.

51. Where one recognized the apportionment of a tax by moving for abatement, he could not object that apportionment was void because notice required by Pub. St. 1882, c. 11, § 82, was not given. Rogers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 83 NE 405. One objecting to apportionment of a tax because notice required by Pub. St. 1882, c. 11, § 82, was not given, has burden to show that he was prejudiced. Id. Where tract of land was assessed as whole and was subsequently divided by sale and purchasers requested apportionment which was made, and thereafter petitioners asked an abatement, they could not object that request for apportionment was not in writing. Id.

52. Though no right of appeal is provided in favor of a taxpayer against an assessment, yet the supreme court, under general jurisdiction to determine all errors, may treat an appeal as a certiorari and correct record errors. Schmuck v. Hartman, 222 Pa. 190, 70 A 1091. One aggrieved by excessive valuation of his property has a remedy by appeal to the county commissioners and court of common pleas, and not by suit in equity. Clark v. Burschell, 220 Pa. 435, 69 A 900. Appeal under Act April 19, 1889 (P. L. 399), authorizing an appeal by an owner dissatisfied with valuation, does not prevent collection of tax. H. C. Frick Coke Co. v. Mt. Pleasant Tp. [Pa.] 71 A 930.

53. The action of the county board of taxation in increasing or decreasing the assessed value of property, which in their judgment is not truly valued as authorized by Law of 1906 (P. L. 210), is not reviewable on certiorari unless the board violates some legal rule in adjusting the value of the land. Town of Union in Hudson County v. Hudson County Board of Taxation [N. J. Law] 71 A 46.

54. Upon review of action of board of as-be granted.[56] Unless error is shown, it is presumed that such boards acted regularly,[57] and the appellant has the burden of proof.[58] The general rules as to saving questions for review apply.[59] Where a statute provides for an appeal from an assessment as settled by the board of review, equity will review the action of the board only when it has acted without jurisdiction.[60]

§ 7. Levies and tax lists.[61]—See 10 C. L. 1807—The word "levy" as applied to taxes is commonly employed to designate the several different proceedings from the laying of the tax to its collection. All of these proceedings are treated in other sections,[62] except the original imposing or laying of the tax, which is treated here. Subject to constitutional limitations,[63] the levy of taxes is entirely statutory [64] and sessment in assessing property and franchise of a leased railroad against the lessee, the court cannot inquire whether the action of the board was proper but only whether property of the lessor was omitted. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 287. No appeal or writ of error lies from a judgment of the circuit court made on an appeal from an order of the county court in respect to an erroneous assessment involving only a question of valuation. Ritchie County Bank v. Ritchie County Ct. [W. Va.] 63 SE 1098. If a taxpayer has two bank accounts, one taxable and the other not, and makes no return and nothing shows that in fixing the amount of assessment the assessor considered the non-taxable account, the assessment will be treated as if the assessor overestimated the taxable account, and is not open to review. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 122 La. 129, 47 S 439. Gen. Tax Law, § 45, added by laws 1899, p. 1592, c. 712, § 2, providing for review by certiorari of assessments of special franchises by the state board of tax commissioners, relates alone to assessments or valuations of different franchises and not to inequality of assessment of special franchises as compared with other kinds of property. People v. Woodbury, 63 Misc. 1, 116 NYS 209.

55. Under Code, § 1373, notice of appeal to review action of the board of review in reviewing an assessment must be given to give the court jurisdiction, and a proper transcript defining the issues must be filed, and, where the record contains neither, the supreme court will not consider merits of the controversy. Peterson v. Clarence Board of Review, 138 Iowa, 717, 116 NY 818. On appeal from board of equalization in fixing valuation, where it appeared that plaintiff had not filed the transcript of proceedings before the board, the court could permit the defect to be remedied. Kamrar v. Webster City [Iowa] 120 NW 120. On appeal to the district court to review the action of the board of review in reviewing an assessment, neither the consent of the parties nor silence of appellee can take the place of a proper record showing jurisdictional facts. Peterson v. Clarence Board of Review, 138 Iowa, 717, 116 NW 818. Under Code, § 1373, providing for appeals from action of the board of review in reviewing assessments, pleadings filed in the district court cannot obviate the necessity of formal appeal and proper transcript. Id. Where assessment is made without jurisdiction, failure to file written objections under Tax Laws, § 36, does not affect right of person taxed to review the assessment by certiorari. People v. Keno, 61 Misc. 345, 114 NYS 1094. On certiorari to review the action of the board of review in refusing to quash assessments, findings of fact and conclusions of law are not necessary, the theory on which proceedings before nonjudicial bodies are challenged being that the evidence does not admit of a finding but one way, and that contrary findings are jurisdictional errors of law. State v. Patterson [Wis.] 120 NW 227.

56. The remedy afforded by Gen. St. 1906, § 2006, has a narrow sphere and is limited to cases where payment shall be refused upon allegation of illegality of the assessment. Dade County v. Hardee [Fla.] 47 S 350. Reduction of assessment cannot be decreed in suit which is distinctly and exclusively for cancellation. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 122 La. 98, 47 S 415.

57. In absence of evidence to contrary, it is presumed that county board of taxation in revising tax lists and decreasing or increasing assessed values, under P. L. 1906, p. 210, acted properly and on due proof. Newton Trust Co. v. Atwood [N. J. Law] 71 A 110.

58. Burden of showing facts decreasing valuation. Newton Trust Co. v. Atwood [N. J. Law] 71 A 110. Where taxpayer appeals from action of board of equalization in valuing his property, he has burden of showing that action of board was erroneous. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Dodge County, 80 Neb. 18, 117 NW 468. On certiorari to valuation of manufacturing property as excessive evidence held to justify valuation. Royal Mfg. Co. v. New Jersey Board of Equalization of Taxes [N. J. Law] 70 A 978. On appeal from board of equalization, evidence held to warrant reduction of valuation from $7,500 to $6,500. Kamrar v. Webster City [Iowa] 120 NW 120.

59. See Saving Questions for Review, 12 C. L. 1763. On appeal to district court from a decision if county board of equalization, court is without jurisdiction to consider any questions other than those presented to board. Reimers v. Merrick County [Neb.] 118 NW 113.

62. See ante, §§ 5, 6; post, §§ 11, 12.

63. See ante, § 1. Under Const. § 180, an ordinance levying a tax must state the purpose for which it is levied, and an ordinance levying an advalorum and poll tax is void for failure to so state, though Ky. St. 1903, § 1839, authorizes such tax. Chesapeake, etc. R. Co. v. Com., 22 Ky. L. R. 882, 111 SW 234.

64. Held that cash road tax may still be must be made as provided by statute.[65] The amount of the levy is usually prescribed by statute,[66] but a levy slightly in excess of the estimate is not void.[67] A well defined rate must be fixed by the levying statute.[68] The presumption is that the tax was levied for a lawful purpose, and was a legal tax, and the burden is upon the objectors to overcome such presumption by competent proof.[69]

Mandamus See 10 C. L. 1809 will lie to compel the levy of a tax in a proper case,[70] if relief is promptly sought,[71] but will not lie to compel the exercise of discretionary powers in connection with the levy.[72] Nor will it lie to compel county commissioners to levy a tax not within their duty or power.[73] The writ will lie to compel reduction of an excessive levy.[74]

65. Statutes requiring certification held to have been complied with. People v. Kankakee & S. W. R. Co., 237 Ill. 362, 86 NE 742. Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 120, requiring amount of taxes for separate purposes to be separately stated, applies only to county and not to town taxes. People v. Cairo, V. & C. R. Co., 237 Ill. 312, 86 NE 721. Levy for "court expenses" without subdivision of such purpose is sufficient under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 120, providing that, when county taxes are levied for several purposes, the county board shall state the amount for each purpose. Id. Item for "printing books and stationery" is sufficiently certain. Id. Item for "salary of county judge, mine inspector, janitor," etc., is sufficient. Id. Item for "supplies and repairs of poor farm and salary of warden," is not certain. Id. In item "for supplies, light, heat, and water for court house and jail," there should be a separation of court house and jail supplies. Id. The term "miscellaneous purposes" is not sufficient. Id. Item for "salaries of officers" is sufficient. People v. Kankakee & S. W. R. Co., 237 Ill. 362, 86 NE 242. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 121, § 247, providing that, if election for levy of a tax to construct road shall be in favor of tax the commissioners of highways shall certify same to town clerk, who shall certify it to county clerk, who shall extend it on tax books for the current year, a tax voted for three years could be included in one levy and certificate. People v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 237 Ill. 154, 86 NE 720. Under Code 1906, § 3430, it is the duty of the mayor and aldermen of a city to submit to electors the question of increase of taxation. State v. Glennen [Miss.] 47 S 550. Only way burden of future taxes can be laid on people is that prescribed by Code 1906, § 331, providing for bond and election. Wells v. McNeill [Miss.] 48 S 184.

66. Act June 27, 1895 (P. L. 404), prescribing duty of controller as to annually advising commissioners as to probable expenditures for fiscal year, does not restrict power of commissioners to levying of taxes to limit of his estimate. Bradbury v. Burschell, 220 Pa. 439, 69 A 1108. Code 1906, § 1231, amended by c. 63, p. 256, acts 1907, saying that county court shall thereupon levy so many cents upon $100 valuation as will cover estimated amount necessary to be raised for county purposes, held not to limit amount to be raised for district road purposes. White v. Wirt County Court, 63 W. Va. 230, 59 SE 884.

67. Under Code, §§ 2806, 2807, requiring school directors to certify estimate of amount required and board of supervisors to levy taxes necessary to raise the fund, a levy which will create the fund of $277,699 is not excessive, though the estimate called for only $260,000. City of Cleveland, Tenn. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 166 F 677. County authorities may be compelled by mandamus to levy general tax up to constitutional limit if necessary to meet interest on valid county bonds. Commissioners of Pitt County v. MacDonald, McKoy & Co., 148 N. C. 125, 61 SE 643. Counsel of City of Peoria held, under the provisions of charter, required to levy taxes for educational purposes as fixed by school inspectors, not exceeding statutory limit, and mandamus allowed. People v. City Council of Peoria, 139 Ill. App. 488. In granting writ of mandamus to compel municipal corporation to levy tax, court may direct distribution of tax over number of years so as to prevent hardship on taxpayers. City of Cleveland, Tenn. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 166 F 677.

71. When taxpayers of town have voted taxes in aid of railways, mandamus will not issue to aid in assessing and collecting such taxes, where beneficiary has delayed and no steps were taken until after lapse of several years. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Coushatta, 122 La. 1079, 48 S 532. After 30 years, creditor of school board cannot demand levy of taxes and compel such levy by writ of mandamus. State v. New Orleans, 121 La. 762, 46 S 798.

72. Under Const. art. 9, § 3, Revisal 1905, § 4112, duty of county board of education and county commissioners to levy tax to maintain schools is peremptory, but it involves discretion as to amount, and mandamus will not issue to compel levy of tax according to estimate. St. 1908, § 9247, requiring every person making payment to state treasury to furnish the auditor with a description of the liability, etc., and § 10216, requiring foreign insurance companies to pay taxes into the treasury of the state, payment to the state auditor is not a payment. Dailey v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 4. Payment to state auditor of taxes by foreign insurance company, under Burns' Ann. March 30, 1811, authorizing the auditor general and treasurer to revise tax settlements, except such as have been appealed from or taken out of their office by other proceedings if request is made within 12 months, held in order to prevent resettlement, the tax must have been paid and 12 months passed since date of settlement without attempt to resettle. In re Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 165 F 789. Under Act Pa. March 30, 1811, providing for revision of tax settlements by attorney general and treasurer, except such as have been appealed from or taken out of their office, held officers may revise taxes which have been settled but not taken out of their hands, if action is taken within time prescribed and final discharge has not been allowed. Id. Where, after taxes had been settled against a corporation, it became bankrupt and taxes were resettled and reduced on capital stock and corporate loans which amounts were allowed by the referee, and tax on capital stock paid but tax on loans was reversed, payment of tax on the capital stock was a discharge as to it. and also, for listing persons who have paid taxes.[91] The mere payment of taxes gives no title.[92]

§ 9. Lien and priority.[93] See 10 C. L. 1811—Tax liens attach only upon performance of the statutory requisites thereto,[94] but having attached they are not affected by subsequent irregularities.[95] As a general rule they attach as of the date of assessment,[96] and cannot be affected by any subsequent change of ownership[97] or proceeding to which the taxing power is not a party,[98] unless the property is taken for public use[99] and the lien remains until the tax is paid or cancelled.[1] One who pays taxes to protect his interest is subrogated to the lien of the taxing power.[2] In proceedings to enforce the lien, jurisdiction must be acquired,[3] and such fact must appear from the record.[4] A complaint to enforce a lien must allege when the tax was assessed,[5] describe the property,[6] and conform to all substantial requirements the provisions of said original act as of the later date. Its affect is to invest commissioners appointed under the original act with power to adjust arrearages in taxes existing at the date of the supplemental act, and does not invest them with power to deal independently with future arrearages. City of Jersey City v. Speer [N. J. Law] 72 A 448.

91. Under Const. art. 2, § 38, in making and filing list of persons who have paid their poll tax, treasurer should embrace therein only the names of persons who have personally paid their tax. Tazewell v. Herman, 108 Va. 416, 61 SE 752.

94. Tax does not become lien until amount thereof is ascertained and determined and actual entry thereof made. Mandel v. Weschler, 128 App. Div. 505, 112 NYS 813. There can be no charge upon the property, no enforcible lien, until the proportionate share of the public burden has been officially determined. Jacobs v. Union Trust Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 913, 118 NW 921. Under charter of Detroit, there is no charge upon property extinguishable by payment until tax roll is received by receiver, and vendor is not liable for taxes paid by vendee who purchased after listing but before receiver had tax roll. Id. Under Act 1889, P. L. 79, as amended by Act 1889, P. L. 122, levy by city of third class does not become lien unless entered of record in office of prothonotary. Pennsylvania Trust Co. v. Jones, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 53. Act 1889, P. L. 79, providing that unpaid taxes shall be registered, is not in conflict with Act 1897, P. L. 277, providing that if not so registered they shall cease to be lien. Id.

Couch [Iowa] 120 NW 485. City council has no power to release lien for taxes. City of Middleboro v. Coal & Iron Bank, 33 Ky. L. R. 469, 110 SW 355.

2. Where one believing he had a valid mortgage on land, in good faith, paid taxes to protect it, he was entitled to an equitable lien, though his mortgage was barred. Childs v. Smith [Wash.] 99 P 304. One who pays taxes and acquires an equitable lien is subrogated to rights of the county and state against which limitations do not run. Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 1740, providing that they shall be a lien until paid. Id. Where he also pays special assessments and is subrogated to the lien of the city, he is barred in 10 years. Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 1740. Id.

3. Judgment foreclosing tax lien against unknown owners rendered upon citation by publication is not binding upon persons in actual possession not served. Sellers v. Simpson [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 888. Where affidavit of nonresidence for order of publication of process to foreclose a tax lien was mistakenly filed with justice of peace, who had no jurisdiction, and was then withdrawn and filed in the circuit court, such fact did not render it ineffective to sustain order of publication. Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co. v. Keener [Mo.] 117 SW 42. Judgment foreclosing tax lien against unknown owners held to foreclose all unknown owners made parties. Sellers v. Simpson [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 888.

4. A suit to foreclose a tax lien against unknown owners is a proceeding in rem, not strictly judicial, but a step in administration proceedings, and, jurisdiction being special, it must appear from record that facts exist which give the court jurisdiction. of the law.[7] For the purpose of enforcing its lien, the state may intervene in a suit and obtain an order for payment thereof out of the proceeds of a judicial sale.[8]

§ 10. Relief from illegal taxes.[9]—See 10 C. L. 1811—As a general rule the collection of an illegal tax may be enjoined,[10] especially when it is so provided by statute,[11] but equity will not interfere unless some recognized ground of equitable relief appears.[12] Hence, injunction will not issue on the ground of irregularities[13] or excessiveness of the tax.[14] Nor will it issue where a portion of the tax is legal and such portion has not been paid.[15] Enforcement of taxes against exempt property may be enjoined.[16] A petition to enjoin the collection must show grounds for equitable relief,[17] and the proof must show that the taxing authorities have acted, or are

6. A petition to enforce a lien for taxes against specific real property, which states the object and nature of the petition but omits the land against which the lien is claimed, is insufficient. Randall v. Snyder, 214 Mo. 23, 112 SW 529.

7. Sayle's Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 5232F, complied with, where petition was signed and verified by county attorney. Young v. Jackson [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 74.

10. Fiscal Ct. of Owen County v. F. & A. Cox Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 296. Tax levied without authority of law. Carr v. Arnold, 239 Ill. 37, 87 NE 870. Where sole question in proceeding to assess withheld property was whether it was exempt, and it was proven to be exempt, the enforcement of the tax could be enjoined. Bednar v. Carroll, 138 Iowa, 338, 116 NW 315. Supervisors of a town may be enjoined from levying on illegal road tax where by statute there is no adequate remedy at law. H. C. Frick Coke Co. v. Mt. Pleasant Tp., 222 Pa. 451, 71 A 930. In suit to recover back taxes against a foreign corporation where it appeared that it owed no taxes, back or otherwise, and to allow assessments would either compel it to pay illegal taxes or defend a multiplicity of suits, such assessments may be enjoined. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Adams [C. C. A.] 165 F 877.

11. Equity may enjoin enforcement of an unauthorized tax notwithstanding the remedy at law furnished by Code 1904, § 571. Town of Wytheville v. Johnson's Ex'r, 108 Va. 589, 62 SE 328.

12. A town treasurer will not be enjoined from levying upon personal property under his warrant, but, if an owner deems the tax excessive, his remedy is to pay under protest and sue to recover it back. Duluth Log Co. v. Hawthorne [Wis.] 120 NW 864. Equity will not interfere solely to vacate tax assessment. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6.

13. Irregularity in the assessment. Jackson Lumber Co. v. McCrimmon, 164 F 759 Such jurisdiction is confined to cases where the tax is not authorized, or persons exacting it are without authority or have proceeded fraudulently. Yamhill County v. Foster [Or.] 99 P 286. Error in assessing property in name of lessee is not ground for enjoining the tax, where the lessee is liable for the taxes and is not prejudiced. City of Norwalk v. J. W. Perry Co., 108 Va. 28, 61 SE 867. Federal courts will not enjoin collection of taxes imposed on foreign corporations because of methods used in valuation, unless fraud is shown or it is obvious that a wrong principle has been adopted. Jackson Lumber Co. v. McCrimmon, 164 F 759.

14. Jackson Lumber Co. v. McCrimmon, 164 F 759. Equity will not enjoin collection of a tax because it is excessive, unless the amount due is tendered. Porter v. Boyd Pav. & Const. Co., 214 Mo. 1, 112 SW 235.

15. City & County of Denver. v. Hallett [Colo.] 100 P 408; Clay v. Wrought Iron Range Co. [Ind. App.] 85 NE 119. One seeking to enjoin collection of tax must pay amount legally due before he can have relief against that which is illegal. People v. Centralia Gas & Elec. Co., 238 Ill. 113, 87 NE 370. If gas company is liable for taxes on any portion of deposit made by its consumers, it may not enjoin collection of tax as levied until it has tendered payment of the portion for which it is liable. Parsons Natural Gas Co. v. Rockhold [Kan.] 100 P 639. Injunction is the proper remedy to prevent the enforcement of an illegal tax, but as a general rule a court will not enjoin the enforcement of an entire levy if the valid portion can be separated from the invalid. Southern R. Co. v. Mecklenburg County Com'rs, 148 N. C. 220, 61 SE 690.

16. Colorado Farm & Live Stock Co. v. Beerbohm, 43 Colo. 464, 96 P 443. Where court has acquired jurisdiction to enjoin enforcement of taxes against exempt property, the subsequent, wrongful act of defendant in selling the property for taxes will not deprive it of power to grant such ultimate relief as plaintiff may be entitled to. Id.

17. Complaint to enjoin collection of taxes held not to sufficiently allege unlawful assessment, and allegations of discrimination and omission from assessment roll held vague and in the nature of conclusions. Duluth Log Co. v. Hawthorne [Wis.] 120 NW 864. Petition to enjoin collection of taxes on the ground that the property was exempt held bad as showing on its face that plaintiff was not entitled to the relief sought. Montgomery v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1061. Where a suit was brought against a tax collector to enjoin collection of taxes as illegal, and an amended bill was filed after sale to re-

about to act, illegally or fraudulently.[18] The state cannot maintain action to enjoin collection of municipal tax where no public interest is involved.[19] Sometimes special statutory provision is made in case of illegal taxes,[20] and in some states a void tax may be annulled [21] if relief is sought in proper time.[22] A property owner against whom a tax is sought to be enforced may defend without first paying the amount legally due, and judgment will be rendered for only such sum as is found legally due.[23]

Recovery back of payments. See 10 C. L. 1813—While taxes illegally exacted cannot be recovered in the absence of statutory provisions authorizing such a recovery,[24] as a general rule under the statutes of the various states, such taxes, when involuntarily paid,[25] may be recovered back,[26] provided, of course, the action is brought move the sale as a cloud, such bill was one to enjoin collection of taxes and not to remove cloud. Turner v. Jackson Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 923. In action to enjoin collection of taxes on timber on county school lands, allegations in the petition that plaintiff had become owner of the timber under conveyance from the county, held to show title in plaintiff. Montgomery v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1061. Finding in suit to enjoin collection of taxes that plaintiff had acquired from the county, by mesne conveyances, the right to cut the timber did not show that title to standing timber was in him. Id.

18. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. On contention that railroad property had been omitted and that thereby rate against plaintiff's property was increased, held not error to deny injunction under the sworn answer and evidence. Cairo Banking Co. v. Ponder, 131 Ga. 708, 63 SE 218.

19. State v. Shufford, 77 Kan. 263, 94 P 137.

20. If a tax is wrongly assessed upon personalty, the taxpayer's only remedy is application for abatement, under Rev. Laws 1902, c. 12, §§ 73, 74. Sweetser v. Manning, 200 Mass. 378, 86 NE 897. Since taxes are primarily a personal liability and not a lien on the land, one who becomes the owner of land after it is assessed cannot have the tax abated, under Rev. Laws, c. 12, § 73, permitting one aggrieved to apply for abatement. Dunham v. Lowell, 200 Mass. 468, 86 NE 951.

21. In action to annual a tax against a non-resident on mortgage notes, evidence held to sustain judgment for plaintiff. Theobald v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 87 NE 100.

22. Action to annul a tax for railroad purposes held in effect one to contest an election, and was barred after three months proclamation by Acts 1892, p. 140, No. 106. Dimmick v. Opelousas, etc., R. Co. [La.] 48 S 767.

23. People v. Centralia Gas & Elec. Co., 238 Ill. 113, 87 NE 370.

24. Slimmer v. Chickasaw County [Iowa] 118 NW 779. An excess in highway taxes, paid when the town was operating under the labor system, cannot be recovered. People v. Erie County Sup'rs, 193 N. Y. 127, 86 NE 348.

25. Payment in order to be involuntary, so as to entitle the taxpayer to recover back for illegality, must be made on compulsion to prevent immediate seizure or arrest. Cincinnati, etc., P. R. Co. v. Hamilton County [Tenn.] 113 SW 361.

Held involuntary: Where one's goods are seized or he is threatened with arrest, etc., payment of an illegal tax is involuntary and may be recovered. Johnson v. Crook County. [Or.] 100 P 294.

Held voluntary: Payment made without compulsion but with comprehension of its invalidity is voluntary, preventing a recovery though made under protest. Johnson v. Crook County [Or.] 100 P 294. Where one voluntarily handed assessor list of his property and paid taxes assessed. Slimmer v. Chickasaw County [Iowa] 118 NW 779. Where personal taxes were paid without protest at rate of previous year instead of giving bond as authorized. Gibson Abstract Co. v. Cochise County [Ariz.] 100 P 453. Payment under protest before time of payment is voluntary and cannot be recovered unless payment under protest at that time is authorized. Williams v. Merritt, 152 Mich. 621, 15 Det. Leg. N. 204, 116 NW 386. Foreign corporation paying franchise tax under protest that it is illegal is not entitled to recover it back, since payment in response to a demand under statute is voluntary. Gaar, Scott & Co. v. Shannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 361. Tax books in hands of county trustee, who was sole collector, and delinquent list thereafter to be furnished the constables prior to time tax became delinquent, did not have force of judgment and execution so as to render payment involuntary. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hamilton County [Tenn.] 113 SW 361. Payment under protest before taxes became delinquent, merely to prevent imposition of penalty, was voluntary. Id. Where fund claimed to be exempt is taxed, and, in a suit to recover the tax, the defense is that by failure to furnish a list of taxable property there can be no recovery, the defendant has the burden to show that the fund was taxable, though the list had been furnished. Masonic Education & Charity Trust v. Boston, 201 Mass. 320, 87 NE 602.

Complaint to recover illegal tax paid under protest held demurrable for not alleging that sheriff was in the act of executing a threatened sale, or that there was no other expedient. Johnson v. Crook County [Or.] 100 P 294.

26. By virtue of Code, § 1417. Slimmer v. Chickasaw County [Iowa] 118 NW 779. Notwithstanding failure of a taxpayer to list his property, he may recover taxes wrongfully charged against him, under Gen. St. 1901, § 7599, authorizing county commissioners to correct returns of assessor where a taxpayer has under-valued his property or in proper time.[27] General statutes providing for the recovery of interest do not apply to recoveries of taxes paid,[28] and a tax payer who sues under a statute to recover interest on taxes wrongfully exacted cannot recover independently of the statute,[29] nor can he set up the unconstitutionality of such statutes.[30] In Kentucky an action to recover taxes paid may be maintained against the collecting or disbursing officers of a county but not against the county itself.[31]

Refunding. See 8 C. L. 2079—In some states statutes provide for the refund of excessive taxes,[32] or taxes illegally exacted [33] or erroneously paid,[34] and in such case voluntary payment does not preclude relief,[35] but such statutes do not apply in case of mere irregularities.[36] As to the recovery of interest on taxes authorized to be refunded, it is held on the one hand that the obligation to refund excessive taxes carries with it the right to interest as a matter of course,[37] and on the other hand a statute providing for a refund does not authorize recovery of interest.[38]

§ 11. Collection. A. Collectors; their authority, rights, and liabilities.[39] See 10 C. L. 1815—Special statutory provisions cover most of the questions relative to ap-failed to return it. Board of Com'rs of Jackson County v. Kaul, 77 Kan. 715, 96 P 45. Suit may be maintained against a county in proper cases to recover taxes paid by mistake, as where 12 acres of land was assessed as 22 acres. Puget Realty Co. v. King County, 50 Wash. 349, 97 P 226.

27. Action by bank against city to recover taxes paid, on ground that U. S. bonds owned by bank had been assessed, held not maintainable when not brought within time prescribed. Grayson County Nat. Bank v. Litchfield [Ky.] 114 SW 289.

28. Board of Com'rs of Jackson County v. Kaul, 77 Kan. 715, 96 P 45.

29, 30. Home Sav. Bank v. Morris [Iowa] 120 NW 100.

31. Action cannot be maintained against a county for taxes wrongfully collected, but where they are in the hands of the collecting or disbursing agent, direct action may be brought against them. Fiscal Ct. of Owen County v. F. & A. Cox Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 296. In action against fiscal court and county treasurer to recover tax paid under protest, where it appeared that money was in the hands of the treasurer, a judgment against him was proper, but judgment against the fiscal court was improper. Id.

32. Laws 1907, p. 1682, amending Laws 1896, p. 795, providing for recovery back of excessive school taxes, have no application to a proceeding to recover from a county board of supervisors a refund of the excess of a school tax. People v. Erie County Sup'rs, 193 N. Y. 127, 86 NE 348. Where a taxpayer presents his claim for a refund of excessive taxes and is allowed a refund of state, county, and town taxes, but denied as to school and road taxes, and he accepts the same, he cannot, after three years, reopen the matter and obtain a reaudit. Id.

33. Laws 1907, p. 1862, c. 721, providing for refund of excessive taxes determined illegal on certiorari, under Laws 1880, p. 402, c. 269, repealed by Laws 1896, p. 795, c. 908, held not obnoxious to Const. art. 7, § 6, as a state demand. People v. Haverstraw Board of Education, 126 App. Div. 414, 110 NYS 769. Such statute is not unconstitutional as imposing upon one person the debt of another, since taxes are not debts, and, if they were, the statute merely adjusts the debt and returns to the debtor excess paid by him over what was due. Id.

34. Laws 1907, p. 1682, amending Laws 1896, p. 795, which repeals Laws 1880, c. 402, c. 269, providing for refund of taxes erroneously paid, held retrospective as well as prospective, notwithstanding use of "shall have been levied and collected." People v. Haverstraw Board of Education, 126 App. Div. 414, 110 NYS 769. Whether "shall have been," in statute relative to refund of taxes, is to be construed as making statute prospective only, held a question of legislative intent. Id. Failure of taxpayer to avail himself of remedy given by Acts 1864, p. 1260, c. 555, for reduction of valuation held not to preclude him from seeking remedy provided by this statute. Id.

35. Voluntary payment of taxes held not to preclude a taxpayer from relief under a statute relative to refund of excessive taxes. People v. Board of Education, 126 App. Div. 414, 110 NYS 769. Under Code, § 1417. Slimmer v. Chickasaw County [Iowa] 118 NW 779.

36 Under Pol. Code, § 3804, providing for refunding of taxes erroneously or illegally collected, mere irregularities, which do not invalidate the assessment, do not absolve a taxpayer from the duty of paying nor entitle him to a refund. Graciosa Oil Co. v. Santa Barbara County [Cal.] 99 P 483.

37. People v. Haverstraw Board of Education, 126 App. Div. 414, 110 NYS 769. That application of statute allowing refund of excessive taxes, with interest, is to give interest paying investment to taxpayer, held not ground for nullifying statute. Id.

38. Under Code, §§ 1417, 4341, in mandamus to compel refund interest on taxes wrongfully exacted, there could be no recovery of interest since statute does not provide for payment of interest. Home Sav. Bank v. Morris [Iowa] 120 NW 100.

pointment,[40] term,[41] qualifications,[42] and authority.[43] One legally elected tax collector becomes entitled to the office and emoluments thereof as soon as he takes the oath.[44] A tax collector has no legal authority to agree with a tax payer to substitute his responsibility for that of the tax payer.[45] Tax collectors are held to strict accountability,[46] and frequently are penalized for failing to pay over taxes collected.[47] Where a sheriff sells property and fails to collect the price, he becomes responsible therefor to the state,[48] and, where he fails to return taxes as delinquent he may be required to account for them and be subrogated to the rights of the state against the tax payer.[49] As between an incoming and outgoing collector, the former is entitled to fees for collections actually made by him.[50] Fees collected on delinquent taxes by a deceased collector's successor are held by him in trust for the heirs of deceased.[51] Liability of sureties on a collector's bond is regulated by statute.[52]

(§ 11) B. Methods of collection in general.[53]—See 10 C. L. 1816—A tax not being a debt in the ordinary meaning of that term,[54] the right to enforce payment by an action at law does not exist apart from statute.[55] In some states statutes

43. Under Loc. Acts 1905, p. 769, No. 577, and Id. p. 770, No. 578, §§ 1, 2, and Id. p. 1161, No. 667, township trustee held to have power to collect taxes accruing from transferred territory. Township of Stambaugh v. Iron County Treasurer, 153 Mich. 104, 15 Det. Leg. N. 368, 116 NW 569. Tax list in hands of county treasurer will authorize him to receive and collect taxes described therein, but, to authorize him to seize personal property or enforce a tax lien, clerk's warrant provided for by statute must be attached to the list, and, until such warrant is attached, there is no enforcible lien against personal property of the tax debtor. Platte Valley Milling Co. v. Malmsten, 79 Neb. 730, 116 NW 962.

55. City of Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass.

190, 87 NE 634. Code 1906, § 4256, making taxes debts and providing for collection by action, held to create new obligation and not to be retroactive, and not to apply to taxes due before its passage. Delta & Pine Land Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 48 S 190. In absence of statute there is no lien for taxes. They are primarily a charge against owner, and only manner of collecting them is by demand, distress or arrest. Dunham v. Lowell, 200 Mass. 468, 86 NE 951.

NOTE. The right of a federal or a state government to maintain an action for the recovery of taxes: Statutes imposing taxes generally make special provisions for their collection, but, nevertheless, these provisions may fail to accomplish their purpose; again, a tax law may provide no specific method for the collection of the tax. Under either condition the question is at once suggested whether or not a tax is a debt owing to the government which imposes it, the payment of which can be enforced by the ordinary remedies at law. Because of the necessity, in any governmental system, of obtaining taxes, the answer is of considerable importance.

The question suggested was presented squarely to the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, in the recent case of United States v. Chamberlin [C. C. A.] 156 F 881. The Act of Congress of June 13th 1898, provided that on a deed conveying lands the purchaser, or other person at his direction, should place revenue stamps of a value in certain proportion to the amount of the consideration for the conveyance; certain penalties were specified for failure to attach the required stamps. Defendant's testator conveyed certain lands, a consideration was expressed in the deed, and proper stamps for that sum were affixed to the deed. The government's petition alleges that the actual consideration was much greater than that expressed in the deed, and asks judgment for the stamp tax on the difference between the real and the expressed considerations. The court (Hook, J., dissenting) held that a tax is not a debt within the ordinary meaning of the term, nor in such sense that an action of indebitatus assumpsit may be maintained for its collection; there being no express authority in the statute for such a proceeding, the means of enforcing payment of the tax are limited to the penal proceedings contained therein.

The authorities on the proposition are in serious conflict. It is said in Cooley on Taxation, p. 18, that in general the conclusion has been reached that when the statute undertakes to provide remedies, and those given do not include an action at law, then a common-law action for the recovery of the tax as a debt will not lie. The assessment of the tax, although it may definitely establish a demand for the purposes of statutory collection, does not constitute a technical judgment; and taxes are not the result of contracts between parties, either express or implied. See Judson, Taxation, § 398.

This theory is supported by the decisions in City of Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. Law, 398; Packard v. Tisdale, 50 Me. 376; Andover & M. Turnp. Corp. v. Gould, 6 Mass. 40, 4 Am. Dec. 80; Carondolet v. Picot, 38 Mo. 125; McCracken v. Elder, 34 Pa. 239.

This doctrine, however, has two apparently weak points. (1) An extremely narrow and technical definition of debt; (2) An unwarranted curtailment of the attributes of sovereignty.

In its broad sense the word "debt" includes any sort of obligation to pay money and it is not confined to obligations founded upon contract. In re Lambie's Estate, 94 Mich. 489, 54 NW 173; Chalmers v. Sheehy, 132 Cal. 459, 64 P 709, 84 Am. St. Rep. 62. It is almost a general rule in construing revenue statutes that, if a duty is charged on any article, the word "charged" means that the owner is personally indebted for that sum; and by the common-law an action of debt is the remedy for the recovery of all sums certain, or capable of being made certain, whether the liability arise from contract or be created by statute. United States v. Lyman, 1 Mason, 481, Fed. Cas. No. 15647; Stockwell v. U. S., 80 U. S. [13 Wall.] 531, 20 Law. Ed. 491. Further, it is conceded to be a general rule that if a statute create a right and provide a particular remedy for its enforcement, that remedy is usually exclusive of others. But this is not a rule for the conduct of the state. In England the king is not bound by an act of parliament unless particularly named therein, and this rule is equally applicable to the federal and state governments in the United States. Actions of debt for the recovery of taxes are frequent in England, although parliament has provided a different remedy; and the prerogatives belonging to the king as public trustee enter equally into our political system. The Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 86 U. S. [19 Wall.] 227, 22 Law. Ed. 80; United States v. Erie R. Co., 107 U. S. 1, 27 Law. Ed. 385.

It would seem, then, that either by the adoption of a reasonable meaning of the term "debt," or by a more liberal recognition of sovereign attributes, such an action could be maintained. A recovery has been allowed frequently on one or both of these grounds. After a statute has imposed a tax, the definite extent of the taxpayer's liability is rendered ascertainable by the terms of the statute itself or by an assessment to be made by the designated officers. The amount thus imposed and susceptible of being reduced to a sum certain constitutes a debt owing to the goverment, for which the latter should be allowed to maintain an action. Meredith v. U. S., 38 U. S. [13 Pet.] 486, 10 Law. Ed. 258; United States v. Hazard, Fed. Cas. No. 15337; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa, 56; Tax Court v. Western Md. R. Co., 50 Md. 274; Jonesborough v. McKee. 2 Yerg. [Tenn.] 167; Succession of Mercier, 42 La. Ann. 1135, 8 S 732, 11 L. R. A. 817; State v. Georgia Co., 112 N. C. 34, 17 SE 10, 19 L. R. A. 485; Savings Bank v. U. S. supra; United States v. Erie R. Co., supra.

The case of Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 Law. Ed. 197, relied on in the principal case as overruling the Savings Bank Case, and frequently cited to the same effect, scarcely justifies the citation. It was there decided only that unpaid taxes were not debts owed to a city in such a sense that they could be reached by the creditors of the city; and it is worthy of note that the court there remarked that the nature of taxes is not affected by the fact that in some jurisdictions an action of debt may be instituted for their recovery.

The right to enforce the payment of taxes through the courts is certainly one which provide methods of collection,[56] and whether methods prescribed are exclusive or concurrent is to be determined from the language of the statute.[57] As a general rule the remedies provided are cumulative.[58] In Texas a personal claim and foreclosure of the lien on the land is maintainable.[59] In a proceeding to collect a tax, the court has no power to assess it.[60] The actual transfer of funds in specie is not always essential to constitute a collection.[61] The right to sue for taxes is not necessarily defeated by irregularities in their assessment.[61a] should be upheld, if possible; and the better reason, as well as numerous precedents, seem to do so. The logical result is well stated by Mr. Justice Miller in United States v. Pacific R. Co., 4 Dill. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 15,983,—"It is immaterial what you call the obligation of a citizen to pay his taxes; it is very clearly an obligation which may be enforced by the courts."—From 6 Mich. L. R. 487.

56. Laws 1906, p. 152, c. 2, making sheriff collector of delinquent taxes and Ky. St. 1909, § 4267, making it duty of auditor of public accounts to collect back taxes, held to provide to distinct methods not conflicting, and "back taxes" means those on which ordinary process had been exhausted. Commonwealth v. Louisville Water Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 712. The auditor of public accounts could not proceed under latter method on Nov. 29th to collect taxes delinquent on the 1st of the month, where tax warrants and ordinary process by the sheriff had not yet been issued. Id. Proceeding under Gen. St. 1902, § 2395, amended by Pub. acts 1907, p. 619, authorizing commitment of persons failing to pay military tax, is special statutory proceeding and not action governed by ordinary rules of proceedure, and its purpose not to enable collector to obtain a judgment nor require him to establish the validity of the tax. Atwater v. O'Reilly [Conn.] 71 A 505. Under Pol. Code, §§ 3820, 3821, 3822, 3791 to 3796, if taxes on rights of a mining lessee are not paid and no personal property can be found, the assessor can sell the rights under lease and give immediate possession to the purchaser. Graciosa Oil Co. v. Santa Barbara County [Cal.] 99 P 483. Tax on personalty against nonresident is tax on property within state and cannot be canceled on proof that it is uncollectible for want of personal property, under Laws 1908, p. 1871, relative to cancellation of such tax against a person which is void for want of jurisdiction of the person. In re Adams, 60 Misc. 333, 113 NYS 293. Under P. L. N. J. 1884, p. 236, providing for prohibiting corporations delinquent in payment of taxes from exercising corporate powers, a proclaimed corporation is not so far destroyed as to prevent adjudication in bankruptcy against it. In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 901. Rev. Laws 1902, c. 13, authorizing tax collector to collect by "action" in his own name, authorizes suit in equity to enforce trust for unpaid taxes created by a common-law assignment for benefit of creditors. City of Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 190, 87 NE 634. In such case collector properly makes assignor party defendant as one primarily liable for tax. Id. Under Civ. Code 1901, p. 3859, providing for immediate collection of current personal taxes at rate of previous year if person assessed does not own land, where such collection is made, county has no further claim in case current rate proves to be higher. Gibson Abstract Co. v. Cochise County [Ariz.] 100 P 453.

57. Code 1906, § 4256, held to provide additional method to collect taxes by action and to apply to back taxes, and § 4740, providing method of collection of back taxes by sale under § 4367, does not preclude use of such additional method. Delta & Pine Land Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 48 S 190. That inconvenience would result if another method of collecting back taxes than Code 1906, § 4740, were employed is without weight in determining exclusive character of that statute as method. Id. Suit to enjoin corporation from disposing of balance of its property until taxes are paid and for personal decree for taxes is not attachment in chancery. Id.

58. Tax collector proving his claim in bankruptcy proceedings does not waive right created for his benefit under bankrupt's common-law assignment for benefit of creditors in trust to pay claims. City of Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 190, 87 NE 634. Gen. St. 1902, § 2395, amended by Pub. Acts 1907, p. 619, authorizing collection of military taxes by imprisonment, does not repeal §§ 2381, 2394, 2412, 2938, providing for collection by levy on taxable goods, and collector may proceed under latter sections, and for want of goods levy on his body and commit him to jail without hearing. Atwater v. O'Reilly [Conn.] 71 A 505. That Code 1906, § 4256, provides for recovery of taxes by "action" held not to confine remedy to courts of law, especially in view of §§ 4738, 4742, 4743, giving revenue agent authority to sue in equity or law. Delta & Pine Land Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 48 S 190. Code § 1390, requiring treasurer to collect taxes, relates solely to collection in ordinary way, and § 1906, authorizing collection by distress of personalty, does not apply to suit under Acts 32d. 61. Where bank was used by collector as medium of collection, tax receipts being delivered to bank and payments being made directly to it and by it credited to collector's account, the delivery to the bank of receipt for its taxes, followed by credit of amount of such taxes to account of collector, constituted a collection. Brown v. Sheldon State Bank [Iowa] 117 NW 289.

(§ 11) C. Procedure to enforce collection.[62]—See 10 C. L. 1817—An entry canceling taxes, when void on its face, will not be permitted in any way to interfere with the collection of such taxes.[63] The collection of taxes is not a special or statutory proceeding in every sense, and when such proceedings are collaterally attacked for failure to follow the statute such failure will vitiate the proceeding only when substantial rights are denied.[64] Statutes relative to proceedings to collect have no application to proceedings to review the legality of the tax.[65]

*Limitations.*See 10 C. L. 1817—Proceedings to enforce collection must be commenced within the period prescribed.[66] The bar of limitations is available to a mortgagee.[67]

*Parties.*See 10 C. L. 1818—Where proceedings to enforce a lien for taxes are held to be in rem, they may be maintained against the present owner without joining former owners,[68] and even the name of the present owner is immaterial.[69] An action must be brought by one authorized to sue.[70] In some states statutes provide for making the assessor and collector parties.[71] The state is a necessary party only where it will be bound by the proceedings.[72]

*Notification.*See 10 C. L. 1817—Failure to make return of taxes as delinquent destroys the effect of the tax bill as prima facie evidence that the taxes are past due and payable in suit to collect taxes,[73] but does not necessarily defeat the suit.[74] No-

70. It is enough if written authority to collector to bring action is signed by selectmen, without addition of "selectmen" after their signatures. Inhabitants of Greenville v. Blair [Me.] 72 A 177. In action by town to recover taxes, it is not necessary for town to show that person acting as collector is collector de jure. It is enough if he is colector de facto. Id. Bivens v. Henderson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 426. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8572, providing that county auditor is not authorized to credit treasurer with uncollected delinquent taxes unless he shows by proper verified return that he is unable to find personal property from which to satisfy them does not require verification to make the return valid but only requires it to be verified on settlement with auditor. Id. A delinquent tax return is absolutely void if it does not appear therefrom that it was verified before a person authorized to administer oaths as required by Code 1906, § 843, nor can such error be supplied or cured by the record. Wilkinson v. Linkous [W. Va.] 61 SE 125. While means of obtaining jurisdiction to enter judgment for delinquent taxes must conform to statute, not every failure to conform to recognized practice, grammatical requirement or correct phraseology, will invalidate designation of newspaper in which to publish the delinquent list. be definite and certain.[86] Amendments are governed by the general rules.[87] The plea of res judicata is limited to taxes actually in controversy and does not apply to taxes for other years.[88] Where there is but one application for judgment for delinquent taxes and all objections are made by the same property owner, they may all be urged in the same proceeding though several taxes are involved.[89]

Evidence.[See 10 C. L. 1810]—In an action for taxes, the taxing power has the burden of proving a valid tax,[90] and the taxpayer has the burden of proving the assessment to be void.[91] The entry upon the tax book of an assessment shown to be valid and the failure of the property owner to pay it when due is sufficient to make out a good cause of action.[92] The question as to the domicile of the taxpayer may be one of fact.[93] Evidence of payment of city taxes on the property in controversy is not admissible to show payment of the state and county taxes sued for.[94]

In a suit for delinquent taxes, technical opposition by the taxing power to objections by the taxpayer as to validity of taxes should not be considered. Id.

90. In action to enforce personal liability for taxes, penalties and costs, plaintiff has burden to show that defendant owned land when assessment was made. Central Hotel Co. v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 880. Collector who institutes proceedings under Gen. St. 1902, § 2395, amended by Pub. Acts 1907, p. 619, to collect military tax by imprisonment, who shows that he is collector, that rate bills and warrant were delivered to him, that payment was demanded and refused, is entitled to order of commitment where defendant shows no reason for nonpayment. Atwater v. O'Reilly [Conn.] 71 A 505. Where it was not denied that a certain person owned land, which was duly and legally assessed, and the taxes were unpaid and delinquent and that plaintiff purchased the property by deed containing an insufficient description, held the court was warranted in rendering judgment foreclosing plaintiff's tax lien. Burkam v. Kunz, 41 Ind. App. 655, 84 NE 766.

91. Under Ky. St. 1903, §§ 3396, 3397, in an action for taxes, the taxpayer has the burden to plead and prove defects rendering an assessment void. Board of Councilmen of Frankfort v. Morgan, 33 Ky. L. R. 297, 110 SW 286. Has burden of proving that tax exceeds constitutional limit. Id.

92. All other requirements and proceedings being mere formalities and intended to assist and facilitate the collection of the taxes. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549.

93. In assumpsit for taxes, whether defendant's domicile was in the town where he was taxed at a certain time held for the jury. Smith v. Stannard First Nat. Bank, 81 Vt. 319, 70 A 568.

94. State v. Quillen [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 660.

95. Where judgment does not show that proper service has been made and record shows defective service, judgment is subject to collateral attack. Harris v. Hill [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 907. Decree foreclosing tax lien held void for want of jurisdiction where no certificate of delinquency was filed as required by statute and only notice to owner was publication of summons by county attorney in which owner's name was not mentioned. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999.

96. Decree foreclosing certificate of delinquency held void where the description did properly decrees that the order of sale shall have the force of a writ of possession,[97] and all presumptions are indulged in its favor where it is regular on its face.[98] The scope of the judgment rests in its terms.[99] Where illegal taxes are included in a decree, it should be corrected on motion to confirm.[1] A judgment should not be vacated without notice to the purchaser thereunder [2] and is not subject to collateral attack by proof that taxes had been paid before suit began.[3]

Execution See 10 C. L. 1819 may not usually issue in rem against the property if the owner is known and lives within the jurisdiction of the court.[4]

Costs. See 10 C. L. 1820

Appeal. See 10 C. L. 1820

(§ 11) D. Interest and penalties.[5]—See 10 C. L. 1820—Interest may usually be recovered on delinquent taxes [6] but not on penalties,[7] but in the absence of statute not apply to any property. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999. Where tax foreclosure judgment recited that the court found that there was an outstanding certificate of delinquency on lot 23 and it was ordered that judgment be given against the property heretofore mentioned giving number of the lot in a tabulated statement following surplusage not misleading to fact that the lot was referred to as 22 was not an irregularity sufficient to defeat the judgment. Stevens v. Doohen, 50 Wash. 145, 96 P 1032.

97. Judgment for delinquent taxes. Gibbs v. Scales [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 188.

98. Judgment rendered on service by publication reciting due service and regular in all respects held not subject to collateral attack by one for failure to show that he was in possession when suit was filed. Gibbs v. Scales [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 188. That county treasurer failed to answer owner's inquiry as to whether there were delinquent taxes for prior years was no justification for his belief that there were no such taxes, nor was it ground for setting aside proceedings foreclosing certificates of delinquency. Tacoma Gas & Elec. L. Co. v. Pauley, 49 Wash. 562, 95 P 1103. Evidence insufficient to show that county treasurer knew or could have known from record who owned land when he issued certificate of delinquency stating that owner was unknown where certificate was regular on its face and properly filed and foreclosure and sale thereunder were regular. Id.

99. Decree in tax lien foreclosure suit that mortgagee "be foreclosed of all equity of redemption or other interest in said premises," held not bar in favor of owner in a suit by mortgagee's assignee to foreclose. Gibson v. Sexson [Neb.] 118 NW 77.

1. Where illegal taxes are included in a decree under Comp. St. 1907, art. 9, c. 77, and attention of the court is called thereto by proper objection on motion to confirm the judgment, the motion should be denied and the decree corrected. State v. Several Parcels of Land [Neb.] 116 NW 682. A proceeding which deprives one of his property by means of a void tax is gross injustice under Comp. St. 1907, § 39, art. 9. Id.

2. If purchaser of land sold under tax judgment was not a party to proceeding in which judgment was rendered, it should not be vacated without notice to him. Pierce County v. Bunch, 49 Wash. 599, 96 P 164.

3. Judgment in tax suit cannot be set aside on collateral attack on proof that taxes for year specified therein had been paid before suit began. Cooper v. Gunter [Mo.] 114 SW 943.

4. Where owner of land in a city is known and ownership of land is not doubtful, city officials have no power to issue execution in rem against the property. Justice v. Parkin, 130 Ga. 869, 61 SE 1044. A fi fa, issued in such case and sale thereunder it, in the city of Fitzgerald is void. Id.

6. Decree rendered in suit to enjoin collection of taxes on ground that valuation was excessive, which reduces valuation, did not render void the taxes upon reduced valuation and such taxes drew interest. State v. Several Parcels of Land [Neb.] 118 NW 465. Presentation of certified copy of decree reducing valuation with demand that treasurer reduce valuation in order that taxpayer might know amount of his tax, held not such a tender as would stop running of interest. Id.

NOTE. Implied right to interest on taxes: In general taxes do not hear interest either as interest or damages, unless expressly so provided by statute (Texarkana Water Co. v. State, 62 Ark. 188, 35 SW 788; Greer v. Richards, 3 Ariz. 227 32 P 266; People v. Central Pac. R. Co., 105 Cal. 576, 38 P 905; Sargent v. Tuttle, 67 Conn. 162, 34 A 1028, 32 L. R. delinquent personal taxes do not bear interest.[8] In some states penalties are prescribed by statute.[9]

§ 12. Sale for taxes. A. Prerequisites of sale.[10]—See 10 C. L. 1820—The essential prerequisites of a valid tax sale are a valid,[11] unpaid, and delinquent tax.[12] The sale must be made under an existing law [13] and in strict conformity to statutory requirements,[14] such as those relating to the delinquent list,[15] jurisdiction of Wilmington v. McDonald, 133 N. C. 548, 45 SE 864. A judgment for taxes will bear interest like any other judgment from the date thereof (United States Trust Co. v. Ter., 10 N. M. 416, 62 P 987; Wheeling & L. E. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 13 Ohio C. C. 374; St. Joseph v. Forsee, 110 Mo. App. 237, 84 SW 1138), although there are some authorities to the effect that the interest upon tax judgments begins to run from the commencement of suit (City of Rochester v. Bloss, 185 N. Y. 42, 77 NE 794, 6 L. R. A. [N. S.] 695; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Com., 27 Ky. L. R. 1104, 1177, 87 SW 1088; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 666, 668, 94 SW 655; State v. Southwestern R. 7. Acts 1906, p. 115, c. 22, art. 3, requiring payment of taxes on land for 1901 to 1905 inclusive, is inoperative in so far as interest and penalties are concerned. Kentucky Union Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 587, 110 SW 398. Governor and attorney general may at any time before decree remit damages for failure of collector to turn over money collected. Adams v. Saunders [Miss.] 46 S 960.

8. Either from date of delinquency or date of order for judgment made to enforce payment thereof. State v. New England Furniture & Carpet Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 427.

9. Under St. 1909, § 4091, making one failing to pay taxes guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to fine, and § 4263, making it the duty of the revenue agent to commence suits for money due the state, held he could not sue to recover the penalty, as one charged with a misdemeanor does not owe the state any thing until convicted. Louisville Water Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 116 SW 711.

11. Under Laws 1896, p. 826, c. 908, § 89, there is no jurisdiction to sell, where taxes on resident lands are returned unpaid, unless assessment first be laid against land as such. People v. Lewis, 127 App. Div. 107, 111 NYS 398. Taxes against a man are not a lien on his wife's property, and a sale thereof, therefor, is void. Brocking v. O'Bryan [Ky.] 112 SW 631.

12. Sale held void where taxes had been paid, and state acquired no rights and transferred none to its purchaser. Trellieu Cypress Lumber Co. v. Albert Hansen Lumber Co., 121 La. 700, 46 S 699. Sale held void where taxes had been paid. Page v. Kidd, 121 La. 1, 46 S 35; Id., 121 La. 553, 46 S 624. Payment on assessment upon tract as whole nullifies sale of parcel which has been conveyed therefrom and assessed separately. State v. Allen [W. Va.] 64 SE 140.

13. Rights of parties in tax proceedings are fixed and governed by law in force at time of tax sale. Lawton v. Barker, 105 Minn. 102, 117 NW 249; Bente v. Sullivan [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 350.

14. Filing of application to court is essential. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999. Power of tax collector to sell land for delinquent taxes is naked power specially conferred by statute, which must be substantially complied with in order to create valid title. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995. County treasurer cannot make valid sale unless in such sale are included all taxes, with interest and costs, then delinquent, and sale for less is only sale of taxes and not of land, and its only effect is to transfer lien of county. Barker v. Hume [Neb.] 120 NW 1131. Sale is void where county clerk's certificate is made and recorded on date of sale. American Ins. Co. v. Dannehower [Ark.] 115 SW 950. Sale is void where clerk failed to record list of delinquent lands and notice of sale and certify in what newspaper list was published, as required by Kirby's Dig. § 7086. Frank Kendall Lumber Co. v. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 888.

Description of property: Sale held void where tax bills and judgment contained insufficient description of property. Turner v. Middlesboro [Ky.] 117 SW 422. Code 1906, § 4284, stating essentials of description, and § 4332, providing defects for which sale may be invalidated, declare the only matters which will invalidate a sale. Moores v. Thomas [Miss.] 48 S 1025. Where it is manifest from assessment roll that land and timber are assessed to unknown owner, though there is no separate assessment of land and timber, the purchaser of such land takes title to both. Eureka Lumber Co. v. Terrell [Miss.] 48 S 628. Sale of urban lots so misdescribed as not to identify them with lots in same square, owned by tax debtor, vests no title in purchaser. Lewis & Co. v. Brock [La.] 48 S 563.

15. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. (Wash.) 1751b, filing certificate of delinquency with clerk of court as to land delinquent for five years is prerequisite to foreclosure of tax lien by county. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999. Under statutes of Washington, until property is listed as delinquent by description sufficiently accurate to identify it, it is not subject to foreclosure and sale for nonpayment of taxes. Id. Publication of delinquent list setting forth amount due, penalties, and costs, as required by Pol. Code, § 3764, is prerequisite to valid sale to state at time fixed in such notice. Warden v. Broome [Cal. App.] 98 P 252. Under such statute where delinquent list stated that amount due was $19.90, when correct amount was $19.40, sale to state was void. Id. Under Laws 1897, p. 134, certificate of delinquency issued by county to itself on Jan. 31, 1908, for taxes for last half of year 1895, is valid as against objection the tax debtor or the property,[16] demand for payment,[17] and notice of sale.[18] A curative act is ineffective to validate a sale of land not subject to taxation,[19] or to validate a sale for void taxes.[20] Decrees and sales in tax foreclosure proceedings can be set aside only on the ground that taxes have been paid or that the property was exempt.[21]

(§ 12) B. Conduct of sale.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1821—A tax sale is administrative under the implied power of the state to enforce collection of taxes, and is not judicial in character.[23] It must be made by a duly authorized officer [24] at the time required [25] at the place designated,[26] and for the proper amount,[27] and all other stat-

that it could not be issued until after that time. Cavanaugh v. Roberts, 50 Wash. 265, 97 P 55. Fact of publication and posting of delinquent list is the jurisdictional requisite, and not proof thereof, which may be made by statutory affidavits at any time. Sternberger v. Moffat [Colo.] 99 P 560.

16. Court cannot enter valid decree foreclosing tax lien until it has acquired jurisdiction of person of owner by process or notice in some mode prescribed by law, or over property in rem. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999. Defendants in suit to subject land to taxes, having procured reversal of judgment for plaintiff after sale, were properly allowed to file supplemental answer alleging that certain infants owning an interest were not made parties. District of Clifton v. Pfirman, 33 Ky. L. R. 529, 110 SW 406.

17. Under Baltimore City Code 1879, § 44, providing that no sale shall be made by tax collector unless he has first given to person in possession statement of indebtedness and 30 days' notice of intention to enforce payment, where collector's report stated that bills had been delivered and, if not paid within 30 days, property "would be subject" to distraint, etc., notice would be presumed sufficient. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995.

18. In action to set aside tax deed where plaintiffs claimed under deed to them "as joint tenants and not as tenants in common," omission in bill of "not as tenants in common" was immaterial, since in any event they were entitled to notice of sale and of time of expiration of period of redemption. Brimson v. Arnold, 236 Ill. 495, 86 NE 254. Where treasurer's affidavit of posting notice of sale was filed and contained statutory requirements, under 2 Mills' Ann. St. §§ 3883, 3884, its conclusiveness could not be impeached by treasurer's testimony that he had no recollection of facts stated therein. Sternberger v. Moffat [Colo.] 99 P 560. Publisher's affidavit of publication of delinquent list and treasurer's affidavit of posting notice of sale when filed are conclusive proof of such facts, and evidence thereof is incompetent unless affidavit filed has been lost or mislaid. Id. Fact of notice as distinguished from proof thereof is the jurisdictional requisite proof by statutory affidavits being permissible at any time. Id. In proceedings to sell land of unknown owner, citation by publication addressed "To the sheriff or any constable of El Paso County:—Greeting," and commanding sheriff to summon the owner by publication, held fatally defective. Bowden v. Patterson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 182. Description of property, in notice of sale as lots "1 to 24," does not exclude lot 24 as "to" is not necessarily a word of exclusion, but its meaning is to be ascertained from the sense in which it is used. Stough v. Reeves, 42 Colo. 432, 95 P 958. Prima facie insufficiency of description in notice of sale held not overcome by testimony of abstractor that he thought he could identify the land, there being no evidence that it was generally known by said description. Id. Under Laws 1897, p. 367, c. 378, providing for sale when taxes are unpaid for three years, or water rents for four years, and that notice of sale shall state that "ownership of property" is published, etc., "ownership of property" means person to whom assessed. People v. Moynahan, 130 App. Div. 46, 114 NYS 417. "Minnie E. Tilter" is idem sonans with "Minnie E. Tiller," in summons in tax sale proceeding. Kelley v. Kuhnhausen [Wash.] 98 P 603. Where record of tax foreclosure proceeding shows upon its face that only service attempted was upon stranger as receiver of corporation defendant, but who had never been appointed receiver, the judgment was void. Gibson v. Sexson [Neb.] 118 NW 77. Where owner of land was actual resident thereon, service by publication in tax foreclosure proceedings was unauthorized, and tax judgment and deed were void. Rust v. Kennedy [Wash.] 100 P 998.

19. Laws 1888, p. 40, c. 23, quieting title to lands in Yazoo Delta, does not validate sale of swamp land before the state parted with title, since such land was not subject to taxation. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952.

20. B. & C. Comp. § 3135, declaring tax sales valid notwithstanding certain irregularities, held not to apply to an assessment which incorrectly describes the land to one not the owner, and who does not appear to have been the owner of a parcel to which the description applied. 24. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995.

25. Sale on June 11, 1883, for taxes of 1882, instead of on June 9, 1883, as required by statute, is void. McDaniel v. Berger [Ark.] 116 SW 194. Under Pol. Code, utory requirements must be complied with.[28] Due regard must be had for divisions and subdivisions when a separate sale is required.[29] The validity of a tax sale is to be determined by the laws in force at the time it was made.[30]

A certificate of purchase does not pass title, but only entitles the purchaser to a deed at the expiration of the period of redemption.[31] Outstanding tax certificates import an absolute and paramount right to the land, subject to the right of redemption, and constitute a cloud upon the title.[32] The validity of a tax certificate and the rights of the holder thereof are to be determined by the laws in force at the time it is acquired.[33] This rule, however, does not prevent the legislature from making changes in the manner of enforcing the lien.[34] Transfers of such certificates are regulated by statute.[35]

The proceeds of the sale are to be applied to taxes due[38] and expenses,[37] and the surplus returned to the owner,[38] or to such persons as have succeeded to the owner's rights.[39]

§ 3897, prescribing method of sale, the owner may not require it to be made on a particular day. Young v. Patterson [Cal. App.] 99 P 552. Sale void when made on wrong day. McLemore v. Anderson [Miss.] 47 S 801, afg. [Miss.] 43 S 878.

26. Under Acts 1878, p. 362, c. 227, and Code 1878, art. 11, § 49, relative to tax sales in Baltimore City, sales may be held at such place in the city as the collector, in his discretion, selects. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995.

27. Where unwarranted item is included in sale of land for taxes, penalty, and costs, the sale is void. Sibly v. Thomas [Ark.] 112 SW 210. Where lands were sold in 1906 for taxes for 1896 to 1905 inclusive for amount less than authorized by law, and after right to redeem was eliminated a governor's deed was executed, the sale and subsequent proceedings were governed by Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 936-940, and not by c. 2, Laws 1902. Hage v. St. Paul Land & Mort. Co. [Minn.] 120 NW 298. Such deed held valid. Id. Where state undertakes to tack taxes anterior to plaintiff's tax title to subsequent forfeiture sale, the objection of excessive amount should be interposed by answer, and, where no such objection is interposed, mere excess in amount of the judgment does not avoid it. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 NW 391.

28. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995. Sale void for failure to comply with requirement, as to mailing copy of application for deed to owner. Starks v. Sawyer [Fla.] 47 S 513. Where bids at tax sale were made on Nov. 15th, just before close of offices, and full consideration was paid the day following, the rule that payment be made "immediately" and "forthwith" was complied with. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 NW 391. Under Rev. Laws, c. 13, § 44, providing that, if because of irregularity in sale purchaser acquires no interest, he may within 2 years surrender his deed to city and recover money paid, and § 47, providing that sale shall be void if purchaser fails to pay collector within 20 days, and city is deemed purchaser, where bidder did not pay within 20 days, collector had no authority to extend time and substitute another as purchaser, and, where he did so, the sale was void against owner and substituted purchaser was entitled to recover from city. Spring v. Cambridge, 199 Mass. 1, 85 NE 160. Such substituted purchaser was "purchaser" within § 44, but not within § 43, providing that collector shall execute deed to purchaser. Id.

34. State v. Krahmer, 105 Minn. 422, 117 NW 780. Gen. Laws 1905, p. 40[illegible], c. 271, held not to impair any obligations of the contract. Id.

35. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 120, the writing of holder's name on back of tax certificate, with delivery thereof to transferee, is effective transfer of holder's rights. Larsun v. Glos, 235 Ill. 584, 85 NE 926. "Indorsement" in such statute means writing name of holder on back of certificate. Id. The endorsement of a tax certificate in blank is not sufficient to transfer the ownership thereof under statute providing that tax certificate is assignable by endorsement and that such assignment transfers all interest of purchaser at sale. Glos v. Larson, 138 Ill. App. 412.

36. Bailey v. Napier [Ky.] 117 SW 948.

37. Where sheriff seized live stock, he was entitled to reimburse himself out of the proceeds of the sale for cost of keeping stock between seizure and sale. Bailey v. Napier [Ky.] 117 SW 948.

38. Where sheriff levies on property which sells for more than taxes due, he is required to pay taxes from proceeds and return the surplus to the owner. Bailey v. Napier [Ky.] 117 SW 948.

39. After sale and before redemption a mortgagee's interest is practically transferred to the fund, and he is entitled to any excess over the tax lien paid by the purchaser. Farmer v. Ward [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 401.

(§ 12) C. Return of sale and confirmation thereof.[40]—See 10 C. L. 1823—A sale in suit for foreclosure of tax lien is a judicial sale,[41] and is not complete until confirmed.[42] Confirmation of such a sale may cure irregularities in prior proceedings,[43] but confirmation is not conclusive of the validity of a sale by a collector.[44]

§ 13. Redemption.[45]—See 10 C. L. 1823—Where an owner has the right to redeem, his title is not extinguished until the period for redemption has expired,[46] and so long as a party has the right of redemption it cannot be said that his property was taken without due process of law.[47] Statutes providing for redemption are to be liberally construed,[48] and it is held that a constitutional right to redeem from tax sales may apply to judicial as well as administrative sales.[49] Only such persons may redeem from tax sale as come within the terms of the statute, such as the owner [50] and persons having an estate or interest in the land.[51] Redemption must be made within the period prescribed [52] and as provided for by statute.[53] On re-

52. Under Laws 1901, p. 153, §§ 1, 2, relative to redemption of land sold for levee taxes, held the year allowed for redemption runs from date of sale and not from date of confirmation thereof especially in view of demption, the owner is usually required to pay the amount of taxes due, with interest [54] and other charges and penalties prescribed by statute.[55] One entitled to redeem is liable to the purchaser for interest only from date of sale to date of tender.[56] Questions relative to costs are regulated by statute.[57] A redemption results from payment or tender of the amount necessary to redeem [58] but not from a tender of a less sum.[59] Where parties stipulate as to the amount necessary to redeem, it is error to decree payment of a less sum.[60] Where a petition to redeem contains an erroneous description, leave to amend should be granted.[61] If a purchaser refuses to allow redemption on legal terms, a cause of action accrues in favor of one entitled to redeem for such purpose.[62] Redemption merely restores the person redeeming to the title which he previously held.[63]

54. In redeeming from judicial sale, purchaser is entitled to amount of his bid with interest. Douglass v. Hayes County [Neb.] 118 NW 114. On redeeming from a judicial sale, owner should pay full amount of taxes and costs paid by purchaser and 12 per cent interest thereon. Smith v. Carnahan [Neb.] 120 NW 212. Purchaser for less than amount of decree is entitled on redemption to 6 per cent interest on his bid if redemption is made within six months, and, for every additional month over six, 1 per cent in addition plus all taxes and assessments paid subsequently with interest. Hannold v. Valley County [Neb.] 117 NW 350. Where land sold under decree foreclosing tax lien is purchased by any other person than plaintiff in case, owner must pay purchaser amount of his bid plus 12 per cent interest. Butler v. Libe [Neb.] 117 NW 700. Gen. Laws 1905, c. 271, p. 407, does not deprive holder of tax certificate of right to refundment secured to him under prior law. State v. Krahmer, 105 Minn. 422, 117 NW 780. 57. Suit to redeem held within Pub. Acts 1899, p. 140, No. 97, precluding costs against either party in a suit instituted for purpose of setting aside sale for delinquent taxes. Haney v. Miller [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 770, 117 NW 745. Where bill to remove cloud and redeem from sale for delinquent drain tax is in effect a suit to set aside such taxes, the auditor general though a necessary party under Gen. Tax Law, § 144, is not entitled to costs on dismissal of the bill. Id.

58. If purchaser refuses to allow redemption, person desiring to redeem should make formal tender unless same is waived. Douglass v. Hayes County [Neb.] 118 NW 114. Where after sale of homestead owners filed suit to set it aside which was compromised within period of redemption and owners remained in possession, the transaction amounted to redemption. Bente v. Sullivan [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 350. Payment of taxes to auditor and procuring deed from state before expiration of period of redemption operates as redemption for owner's benefit, leaving no claim in state which can mature into title and creating no title which can be confirmed. Magee v. Turner [Miss.] 46 S 544. Acts 1897, p. 294, No. 229, providing for redemption by tender of amount due within specified time, does not apply to sales made by Auditor General prior to date act took effect. McFarlane v. Simpson, 153 Mich. 193, 15 Det. Leg. N. 467, 116 NW 982. Formal tender waived by refusal of the purchaser to accept anything less than a greater sum than he is entitled to. Douglas v. Hayes County [Neb.] 118 NW 114.

59. Tender of taxes and costs without penalties and surplus paid by the purchaser is insufficient to effect a redemption. Richards v. Fuller, 122 La. 847, 48 S 285.

60. Where, in action to redeem, parties stipulate of record as to amount to be paid, it is error to direct payment of less sum on decree of redemption. Snider v. Smith [Ark.] 115 SW 679.

61. Where petition to redeem contained an erroneous description which also entered into the decree but upon discovery thereof prompt motion was made for leave to amend, held error to deny such motion. Code Civ. Proc. § 144. Banchor v. Lowe [Neb.] 120 NW 452.

62. Douglass v. Hayes County [Neb.] 118 NW 114.

63. Redemption gives no new title but simply relieves the land from the sale which has been made. This is true whether redemption is made before or after expiration of period. Bente v. Sullivan [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 350. Action of state land commissioner in permitting one to redeem and executing a deed to him establishes merely his right to redeem but is no adjudication of his ownership. Meyer v. Snell [Ark.] 116 SW 208.

64. Owner of valid title originating by reason of first sale has in regard to subsesold or forfeited to it [65] or from the subsequent purchaser from the state,[66] but redemption of land, title to which has become visited in the state by forfeiture or sale, is a mere grace extended by the state and may be withdrawn at any time before actual redemption.[67]

Notice of the expiration of period of redemption. See 10 C. L. 1824—Statutory provision is generally made for notice of expiration of period of redemption,[68] and such acts may be retrospective as well as prospective.[69] Such notice must conform to statutory requirements,[70] and must be given to all persons entitled thereto,[71] and state the amount necessary to be paid,[72] and where given by publication statutory quent forfeiture to or vesting in state, right of redemption superior to the former owner. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 495. Under Code 1906, § 3529, owner of undivided interest in land forfeited to state may fully redeem tract in respect to which he owned such interest. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468.

65. Under Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 936-940, lands bid in for state and not assigned to purchasers within three years from sale at which they are offered to purchasers at highest price are subject to redemption by owner. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 NW 391.

66. Under Gen. Tax Laws 1893, pp. 388, 393, 394, amended by Laws 1907, pp. 294, 295, relative to redemption from purchaser from state, owner held required to pay such purchaser amount of an invalid drainage tax paid to the state by him. Haney v. Miller [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 592, 117 NW 71.

67. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 495. Privilege given by statute to redeem lands forfeited to state is mere grace of state and does not constitute vested property right. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468. State having no right to sell forfeited land, because it has once sold it under decree for some forfeiture or because it has been transferred to a junior claimant by Const. art. 13, § 3, the owner of forfeited title cannot redeem. Id.

68. Eight months and 13 days allowed by c. 271, p. 407, Laws 1905, within which holders of tax certificates may cause notices of expiration of redemption to be given, is reasonable. State v. Krahmer, 105 Minn. 422, 117 NW 780.

69. Acts 1903, p. 386, amending Comp. Laws, §§ 3959, 3960, by adding to persons entitled to notice of redemption and prescribing contents of notice, is retroactive and applies to deeds issued before it went into effect. Weller v. Wheelock [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 856, 118 NW 609. It affects remedy of tax purchaser and does not impair any vested right. Id. Pub. Acts 1905, p. 194, requiring notice to redeem to be served on person in actual possession, does not apply to sale made before act took effect. Curry v. Backus [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 103, 120 NW 796.

70. Where property was assessed to Peter Peterson, Jr., a redemption notice to Peter Peterson in whose name the property was taxed is sufficient. Peterson v. Wallace [Iowa] 118 NW 37. Where purchasers relied upon notices of redemption which were insufficient under Laws 1897, p. 294, requiring notices to entitle purchaser to possession, complainants were not barred by laches from claiming that notices were insufficient. G. F. Sanborn Co. v. Alston, 153 Mich. 456, 15 Det. Leg. N. 531, 116 NW 1099. Notice as to redemption by holder of tax deed to grantees under last recorded deed required by Acts 1903, p. 386, No. 236, held insufficient. Haden v. Closser, 153 Mich. 182, 15 Det. Leg. N. 397, 116 NW 1001. In action to determine validity of a tax title, fact that there was no evidence that holder of tax certificate presented it to auditor in order that notice to eliminate redemption should be issued did not invalidate the notice. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 NW 406. Form of notice of expiration prescribed by Laws 1902, c. 2, § 47, must be substantially followed. Lawton v. Barker, 105 Minn. 102, 117 NW 249. Notice failing to state year for which taxes were delinquent and rate of interest necessary to be paid on amount required to redeem held void. Id. Notice giving description of land by section, townships and range, but not stating whether township was north or south or range east and or west, and not specifying the state, held insufficient. G. F. Sanborn Co. v. Alston, 153 Mich. 456, 15 Det. Leg. N. 531, 116 NW 1099. Where sale is held Sept. 4, 1900, and redemption notice states that land must be redeemed before Sept. 4, 1903, such notice gives three full years as time for redemption and is not void. Michner v. Ford [Kan.] 98 P 273. Under Comp. Laws, § 3959, requiring as condition to issuance of writ of assistance under tax deed notice to owner to redeem, and § 3962, preventing owners who neglect to redeem from questioning title, owners are not barred for neglecting to redeem under notice void because of premature issue of the tax deed. Witsaten v. Olson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1010, 119 NW 3.

71. Failure to serve notice of redemption upon one in actual possession as cropper held to avoid the notice of redemption. Wallace v. Sache, 106 Minn. 123, 118 NW 360. Tax deed is void where holder of certificate failed to serve notice of redemption on person in possession in whose name land was taxed as required by Code, § 1441. Ashenfelter v. Seiling [Iowa] 119 NW 984. Under Laws 1896, p. 842, c. 908, § 134, providing that notice to redeem shall be given to actual occupant, no notice is necessary where land is unoccupied. Clinton v. Krull, 125 App. Div. 157, 111 NYS 105.

72. Where one purchased from the auditor general prior to passage of Acts 1897, p. 294, providing for redemption and served notice on one claiming a specified sum as necessary to redeem under the act, which did requirements must be observed.[73] Where so required by law, service of notice must be properly established.[74] Though a purchaser's notice of redemption is defective, technically, the owner cannot redeem without reimbursing him for taxes paid subsequent to service of the notice.[75] In some states an official whose duty it is to give the notice is subject to a penalty for failure to do so.[76]

§ 14. Tax titles. A. Who may acquire.[77]—See 10 C. L. 1825—One under moral or legal obligation to pay the taxes cannot become a purchaser either directly or indirectly,[78] and, if he attempts to do so, his purported purchase will amount merely to payment of the taxes [79] or a redemption.[80] Where a tax deed has been set aside not apply to such sale, such notice was at most only effective to estop the purchaser to refuse to accept redemption on the terms stated in case tender was made within reasonable time. McFarlane v. Simpson, 153 Mich. 193, 15 Det. Leg. N. 467, 116 NW 982. Tax deed held not void because notice of redemption stated an amount claimed to be in excess of the proper amount if including interest from earliest date the sum named could have been equalled. Michner v. Ford [Kan.] 98 P 273. Notice was not legally insufficient because it stated that amount required to redeem was a named sum "with interest on said sum at 12 per cent (since a named date) exclusive of costs to accrue on redemption." Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 NW 406.

73. Under Sess. Laws 1901, p. 58, c. 51, where a holder of tax certificate gives notice of redemption by publication, date of last publication must be at least 90 days preceeding maturity of certificate. Flickinger v. Cornwell [S. D.] 117 NW 1039.

74. Under Code, § 1441, providing that service of redemption notice shall be complete only after affidavit has been filed showing service, an affidavit is fatally defective if it fails to show under whose direction service was made. Peterson v. Wallace [Iowa] 118 NW 37. Evidence sufficient to show that owner was personally served with notice to redeem. Curry v. Backus [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 103, 120 NW 796. Notice was not invalidated because there was no proof that auditor delivered it to person holding certificate or that such person ever delivered the notice to sheriff for service. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 NW 406. Code 1894, § 1441, requiring affidavit of holder of tax certificate to service of notice of redemption to show at whose direction affidavit was made, must be complied with before right of redemption is lost. Ashenfelter v. Seiling [Iowa] 119 NW 984. Code 1897, § 1341, makes entry by treasurer in sale book of return of service of notice of redemption presumptive evidence only of completed service, and if there is an omission of any material step by which right may be cut off, presumption is overcome. Id. Code 1897, § 1341, makes it mandatory duty of treasurer when return of service of notice of redemption is filed with him to forthwith make written report to auditor, and until this is done auditor may assume that right to redeem has not expired and may rightfully accept redemption. Id. Return of service is held to be of prima facie validity notwithstanding number of irregularities. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 NW 406.

88. Sole remedy of purchaser in Illinois now is to obtain a refund of his money, former act, allowing him 100 per cent additional, having been repealed by implication. Heydecker v. Price, 136 Ill. App. 512. Owner of tax certificate of purchase may recover from owner of property, although tax sale was made upon void description. Construing § 214 of revenue act. Joliet Stove Works v. Kiep, 132 Ill. App. 457. Under Kansas City charter, art. 5, § 58, providing that defeated tax title holder shall recover from owner amounts paid for taxes and penalties, to do so his deed must have been executed substantially in accordance with art. 5, § 58, and he must have been defeated in a suit to recover the property. Russell v. Woerner, 131 Mo. App. 253, 110 SW 691. Purchaser at tax sale, who voluntarily abandoned his suit to recover posession, was not "defeated." Id. In such suit the "successful claimant" is the owner of the property and is necessary party to suit by purchaser to recover possession, in order that he may be bound for amounts paid by "defeated" tax title holder. Id. Where tax sale is set aside as void, purchaser has lien for amount of taxes paid, bring subrogated to the rights of the state. Seldon v. Dudley E. Jones Co. [Ark.] 116 SW 217. Where holder of tax deed is defeated in ejectment, he is entitled to lien for taxes paid, though his deed is based on an assessment made separately on each of three contiguous lots comprising property when it should have been made on the entire tract as single description. Lewis Academy v. Wilkinson [Kan.] 100 P 510. In suit to quiet title, defendant cannot enforce amounts paid on tax sales where lien of such payments is not established in ejectment. George E. Wood Lumber Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 47 S 202. Where grantee of tax purchaser was barred from recovering possession, he was held entitled to be subrogated to state's lien for taxes. Patton v. Minor [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 920. Conveyance of part of tract claimed by grantor under void tax deed operates as assignment to grantee of proportionate share of amount refunded by owner on cancellation and the value of improvements,[89] provided he complies with statutory requirements.[90] A purchaser at a void sale who converts the property to his own use is liable to the owner in conversion.[91] The purchaser's right to possession is regulated by statute.[92] In Michigan a purchaser must serve notice of reconveyance.[93] Equity has jurisdiction to quiet a tax title,[94] but the complainant must, of course, make out a case for such relief.[95]

(§ 14) C. Tax deeds.[96]—See 10 C. L. 1827—The prime essential of a valid tax deed is that it be supported by a valid sale,[97] and the deed must also be supported of deed. Warden v. Glos, 236 Ill. 511, 86 NE 116.

89. Ross v. Kelson [Kan.] 98 P 772. Purchaser at void sale held entitled to improvements. Page v. Kidd, 121 La. 1, 46 S 35; Id., 121 La. 553, 46 S 624. Where a tax sale is held void, purchaser is entitled to taxes paid, interest, and improvements. Hamilton v. Steele [Ky.] 117 SW 378. Where one, in good faith, held state school lands under tax sale void because land was not taxable, he was entitled to improvements upon recovery of land by the owner. Edwards v. Butler [Miss.] 47 S 801. Holder of tax deed, who is defeated in ejectment and claims and receives benefit of occupying claimant's land, should be reimbursed for that portion only of gross taxes paid which was levied on the value of land without improvements. Hills v. Allison [Kan.] 100 P 651. If tax deed holder be defeated in ejectment, and pursuant to his demand for benefit of occupying claimant's act, value of land and of improvements are separately established, owner may elect to accept value of land without improvements, and if deed holder refuse to pay it may order the land sold and establish liens on proceeds of sale. Id. Upon adjudication of counterclaim, where one in possession under tax deed has been defeated and claims compensation for permanent improvements and taxes paid, reasonable rent of premises without improvements should be offset, but not rent increased by improvements. Gibson v. Fields [Kan.] 98 P 1112. In such case rent is to be determined from cash price usually paid for use of like premises. Id.

What constitutes improvements: As a general rule, plowing and cultivating land therefore under cultivation does not constitute permanent improvement, but breaking and reducing wild land to cultivation does. Gibson v. Fields [Kan.] 98 P 1112.

90. Under Rev. Laws, c. 13, § 44, providing that, if by reason of irregularity of tax sale purchaser has no claim on property, he may surrender his deed and have his money refunded with interest, it is not necessary to enable him to surrender and recover that he be disturbed in his possession by paramount owner. Spring v. Cambridge, 199 Mass. 1, 85 NE 160. Under such statute purchaser must make surrender of deed, since it may be serviceable to taxing power in enforcing its rights. Id. Evidence that purchaser has transferred his rights to another is admissible. Id. Where holder of title goes into possession without giving notice required by Pub. Acts 1897, p. 296, he cannot recover for improvements placed upon land. Cook Land, Const. & Producing Co. v. McDonald [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 953, 118 NW 959.

91. Brocking v. O'Bryan [Ky.] 112 SW 631.

92. Gen. Tax Laws, §§ 142, 140, relative to notice before purchaser is entitled to possession, held applicable to all cases where purchaser has acquired a tax title at public sale or by purchase from the state. G. F. Sanborn Co. v. Alston, 153 Mich. 456, 15 Det. Leg. N. 531, 116 NW 1099. Right of purchaser for term of years for unpaid water rents, to take possession at expiration of period prescribed, under P. L. 1855, p. 471, c. 48, and P. L. 1859, p. 433, § 1, is right of entry authorizing ejectment and is barred in 20 years under the general statute. Beatty v. Lewis [N. J. Eq.] 68 A 95.

93. Notices of reconveyance served by purchaser of tax titles, which omit name of state and county in description in body of notices, are insufficient, though indorsed on the back "State of Michigan, County of——," and in blank space is written "Presque Isle." Curry v. Larke, 153 Mich. 348, 15 Det. Leg. N. 491, 116 NW 1075.

94. Equity has jurisdiction of adverse suit to quiet tax title, irrespective of statute, and hence, in such a suit, complainant may be granted relief, though he might not be entitled to confirmation of his title, under Kirby's Dig. §§ 661-675, authorizing confirmation where purchaser has paid taxes. Knauff v. National Cooperage & Woodenware Co. [Ark.] 113 SW 28.

95. One who sues under Comp. Laws, § 448, to quiet a tax title must prove that defendants have asserted some title where there is no record evidence of a cloud upon the title. Triangle Land Co. v. Nessen [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1054, 119 NW 586.

97. Tax deed, reciting that land was sold "in the county of A. and J. L. Gates to said A. county," held to show a sale to a county, and not a joint sale to the county and Gates, rendering the sale void. Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 278, 116 NW 758. Tax deed, reciting that "whereas James L. Gates and assignee of A. County," etc., shows that Gates presented himself as the assignee of A. county, and held that it could not be construed to mean that there was an assignee in addition to Gates. Id. Tax deed based on a void delinquent tax return is void. Wilkinson v. Linkous [W. Va.] 61 SE 152. Deed from county commissioners for land sold to county without foreclosure of cer-

by compliance with requirements as to the expiration of the period of redemption [98] and service of notice thereof,[99] and the requirements as to sealing [1] and filing.[2] It must be executed by a duly authorized official [3] to the person entitled thereto,[4] sufficiently describe the property,[5] and must contain all the recitals required by law.[6] Tax deeds are construed strictly in favor of the tax payer,[7] and one claiming thereunder has the burden to prove the regularity of every antecedent act essential to its validity.[8] A deed will be declared void for intrinsic defects apparent on its tificate of delinquency is a nullity. Smith v. Smith [N. C.] 63 SE 177. Under Code, § 1447, record entry that sale was invalid is official record, which cannot be changed until it is adjudged erroneous. Burchardt v. Scofield [Iowa] 117 NW 1061. Where land upon which taxes had been paid was subsequently sold for taxes, and, treasurer's attention being called to fact, he made entry upon tax sale record showing proper case for refund to purchaser, the owner could rely upon his action, and treasurer could not thereafter erase entry and issue deed to purchaser. Id.

98. Power to issue tax deed does not arise until after expiration of period of redemption. Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. v. Thompson's Heirs, 108 Va. 612, 62 SE 358.

99. Failure to comply with Laws 1899, p. 88, c. 15, §§ 63, 64, renders the deed void. Warren v. Williford, 148 N. C. 474, 62 SE 697.

1. Deed for levee taxes not sealed as required is void. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952.

2. Under Code 1906, § 4338, it is not essential to validity of tax deed that it be marked "filed" when it is lodged in the chancery clerk's office. Brannon v. Pringle [Miss.] 47 S 674.

3. Under Acts 1873, p. 186, c. 118, § 67, tax collector has no authority to issue tax deed, and one executed by him is void. Byrd v. Phillips [Tenn.] 111 SW 1109. Deed for levee taxes executed by sheriff, who had not given the statutory bond, is void. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952. Laws 1893, p. 167, requires that after its passage taxes in cities of the first class shall be collected by the county treasurer; § 7 provides that all taxes not levied as provided by the act shall be collected as provided by the city charters. Held, such act was prospective only, and deed was properly executed by city treasurer for taxes not levied thereunder. Silverstone v. Norton, 50 Wash. 531, 97 P 663. Tax collector of Baltimore city has no power to execute deed to mayor and city council for property sold to city by his predecessor. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995.

4. Under Civ. Code 1896, §§ 4063, 4067, 4074, assignment of tax sale certificate held not prima facie proved by recitals in deed. Copeland v. Bond [Ala.] 46 S 853.

5. Tax deed held not void for uncertainty of description or for uncertainty of recital as to whom payment of purchase price was made. Howell v. Gruber [Kan.] 97 P 467. Deed from tax collector to territory, reciting levy of taxes on "cabin and lot 6 of Block 60 and lot 7 of Block 60," and conveying all that lot last described, held to convey only lot 7. Abell v. Swain [Ariz.] 100 P 831.

6. Where county purchases at tax sale because there are no cash purchasers, certificate of sale as well as deed should show that there was no good faith cash purchaser on first day the property was offered for sale, and when it was thereafter offered there was no cash purchaser and that the whole amount of the property assessed was struck off to the county, and should otherwise truthfully state the facts, and a deed not setting out the facts showing why the sale was made to the county is insufficient, though it would be sufficient as to an individual. Rush v. Lewis & Clark County, 37 Mont. 240, 95 P 836. Where recitals in a deed show sale to county and deed obtained by virtue of sale to county, it must show county's right to purchase at such sales, and if it shows that the county was a competitive bidder, it is void. Kramer v. Smith [Okl.] 100 P 532. Deed need not recite amount due for each year but only gross amount necessary to redeem at the time it was executed. Hahn v. Hill Inv. Co. [Kan.] 100 P 484. Deed which does not show on its face amount for which each tract which it purports to convey was sold is void. Kramer v. Smith [Okl.] 100 P 532. Tax deed held void on its face for failure to show that four months had not elapsed since service of notice of application to purchase, as required by Code 1887, § 666, amended by Code 1904, c. 326. Bowe v. Richmond [Va.] 64 SE 51.

7. Courts are slow in cutting off rights of owners whose lands have been sold for taxes. Fitschen v. Olson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1010, 119 NW 3. One whose tax deed is void because of failure to serve notice of redemption cannot claim protection of Laws 1901, p. 791, c. 558, § 20, providing that when a deed substantially conforms to statute no one may question it without showing that he has paid taxes. Warren v. Williford, 148 N. C. 474, 62 SE 697. That date named in deed is out of harmony with other recitals does not justify assuming it to be result of clerical error, at least unless the date named is an impossible one or is in irreconcilable conflict with some other recital referring to the same matter. Price v. Barnhill [Kan.] 98 P 774. Statement in a tax deed showing that it was improperly issued is fatal to its validity, though occurring in course of recitals not required by statute. Id.

8. Purchaser held required to show that conveyance by receiver and special commissioner was confirmed by the court. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952. As against attack made before limitations have run, the fact that tax deed shows greater consideration than authorized by law is fatal to its validity, and it cannot be assumed that excess was occasioned by including face,[9] but under some statutes is not invalidated by mere irregularities in prior proceedings,[10] and is itself, when regular on its face, prima facie evidence of title in the clerk's fee for issuing deed. Glenn v. Stewart [Kan.] 97 P 863. Pol. Code, §§ 3787, 3786, 3764, 3765, 3767, 3786, relative to presumptions in favor of tax deed, does not include omission of jurisdictional requisite to valid sale, and deed is not conclusive that delinquent list and published notice stated correct amount due. Warden v. Broome [Cal. App.] 98 P 252. One claiming under deed for levee taxes, under Laws 1888, p. 4, c. 23, must point out sale under which he claims in order to invoke presumptions conferred by the act. Creegan v. Hyman [Miss.] 46 S 952.

9. Fitschen v. Olson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1010, 119 NW 3. Compromise tax deed which shows on its face that it is based on a tax sale certificate assigned by order of county commissioners, requiring payment of taxes which were not at the time a lien, is void on its face. Lanning v. Brown [Kan.] 98 P 771. Deed is void which recites consideration of 39 cents less than is necessary to redeem. Collins v. Jolley [Kan.] 100 P 477. Tax deed is void on its face where it appears that county's interest has been assigned for less than amount necessary to redeem. Wilks v. De Hart [Kan.] 95 P 836. Tax deed issued pursuant to sale held in 1892 for taxes of 1891, reciting that land sold was least quantity that would sell for amount due, is void on its face. Battelle v. Knight [S. D.] 120 NW 1102, following King v. Lane, 21 S. D. 101, 110 NW 37. Deed which shows on its face that preliminary steps have not been taken by taxing officers is void on its face. Whitehead v. Callahan [Colo.] 99 P 57. Deed of separate subdivisions of 40 acre tract, which shows on its face that tracts were sold en masse, is void on its face. Harris v. Brady [Ark.] 112 SW 974. Where deed showed on its face that land covered consisted of distinct, noncontiguous tracts and that they were sold en masse and not separately as required by statute, and that the tax was on the entire property but the amount against each tract did not appear, held deed was void. Whitehead v. Callahan [Colo.] 99 P 57. Where statute prohibits county from being competitive bidder, a statement in a tax deed that land was offered for sale "in accordance with Law" is a mere conclusion and can impart no validity to deed, plain recitals containing that county was bidder. Rush v. Lewis & Clark County, 37 Mont. 240, 95 P 836.

NOTE. Technical flaw as avoiding tax deed: A tax deed recited a sale to the county for the taxes of 1892 and an assignment of the certificate. The consideration was stated as "taxes, costs and interest due on said land for the years 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896, to the treasurer paid as aforesaid." To the recital of the amount paid for the assignment of the certificate, however, was added, "being the taxes, charges and interest due on said land for the years A. D. 1891, 1893, 1894, 1895." Held, that the tax deed was defective on its face and should be set aside. Price v. Barnhill [Kan.] 98 P 774.

This decision is in accord with the general rule as to tax deeds. Black, Tax Titles, § 409, says: "A tax title is a purely technical as distinguished from a meritorious title, and depends for its validity on a strict compliance with the statutes, and a court of equity will not interfere to correct an error of the officers in making out a deed of land sold by them for taxes." Altes v. Hinckler, 36 Ill. 265, 85 Am. Dec. 406; Keepfer v. Force, 86 Ind. 81; Bowen v. Andrews, 52 Miss. 596. Contra. Hickman v. Kempner, 35 Ark. 505, holding that it is not a substantial objection to the clerk's deed that it falsely recites that the land was assessed in the name of unknown owners. The recital of the grantee's place of residence in a tax deed is not conclusive. Billings v. Kankakee Coal Co., 67 Ill. 489. The deed must show that the land was sold for the taxes of a particular year, and an ambiguity in this respect cannot be explained by parol testimony. Maxcy v. Clabaugh, 6 Ill. 26. A deed is void when it appears that the property was not forfeited on the date nor for the taxes stated. Waddill v. Walton, 42 La. Ann. 763, 7 S 737. Recitals in a tax deed are on general principles of law conclusive as to the facts recited. Reckitt v. Knight, 16 S. D. 395, 92 NW 1077. A tax deed cannot be upheld if a fact showing that it was improperly issued is stated in recitals which are wholly voluntary and unnecessary. Douglass v. Lowell, 60 Kan. 239, 56 P 13.—From 7 Mich. L. R. 447.

10. Deed held not void for failure to show that assignee paid amount necessary to redeem, or that it was assigned for an excessive amount, or that it did not appear that subsequent taxes were a lien. Hahn v. Hill Inv. Co. [Kan.] 100 P 484. That sheriff sold more property than was necessary or failed to collect purchase price does not affect purchaser's title. Bailey v. Napier [Ky.] 117 SW 948. Where land for want of bidders is taken by county and after five years certificate is assigned and deed made under Gen. St. 1901, § 7672, the fact that it shows that taxes accruing while land was held by county were charged on tax roll in September of each year instead of in November does not invalidate deed. Taylor v. Adams [Kan.] 99 P 597. Tax deed is not void because certificate was assigned by county for slightly less than amount necessary to redeem, and error is one of computation. Troyer v. Reedy [Kan.] 100 P 476. Where such discrepancy is traced to amount charged as interest, it is presumed to have resulted from error in computation. Id. Amount of such discrepancy will not be regarded as substantial if interest charged is less than would result if computations in which fractions of a cent are carried out and greater than would result if such fractions are rejected at every stage. Id. Where in computing penalty county clerk treats fraction of between five and ten mills as cent, instead of rejecting it as required by statute, a deed based thereon is not void, the excess being due to error in calculation rather than to intentional overcharge. Glenn v. Stewart [Kan.] 97 P

the purchaser,[11] and one assailing it has the burden of proving it to be void[12] and of overcoming the statutory presumption.[13] Where the testimony overcomes the effect of the prima facie regularity of the tax sale proceedings afforded by the deed, one claiming under such deed must prove its validity.[14] In some states the probative effect of a deed depends upon whether it has been recorded for a certain period.[15] Authority to issue a second deed[16] may not be exercised unless the statutory conditions exist.[17] In some states statutes prescribe grounds for vacating tax deeds.[18] Curative acts validating irregular tax deeds may be retroactive.[19]

863. Tax deed is not invalidated by failure of the sheriff's affidavit to show on its face that it was taken before some officer authorized to administer oaths. See Code 1906, §§ 908, 884. Wilkinson v. Linkous [W. Va.] 61 SE 152.

11. Tax deed is prima facie evidence of ownership without proof of assessment proceedings. T. J. Moss Tie Co. v. Myers [Ky.] 116 SW 255. Findings that no notice of intention to take out a tax deed was served except by publication did not necessarily show that notice and service were not sufficient. Bandow v. Wolven [S. D.] 120 NW 881.

Matters presumed: Even before limitations have run, payments of subsequent taxes by holder of certificate are presumed to have been made at a date consistent with recitals in deed, and it is also presumed that publications of notice of sale and redemption were made for less rate than named in the statute. Glenn v. Stewart [Kan.] 97 P 863. Tax deed is prima facie evidence that property was subject to taxes against it. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Howard [S. D.] 119 NW 1032: Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 1767, expressly provides that tax deed executed by county treasurer is prima facie evidence that real estate was assessed as required by law. Tacoma Gas & Elec. L. Co. v. Pauley, 49 Wash. 562, 95 P 1103. It is presumed that amount stated in a deed as amount due is correct. Hahn v. Hill Inv. Co. [Kan.] 100 P 484. On an allegation that tax deeds were issued and recorded, in absence of averments to contrary, it is presumed that they were in form required by law and entitled to presumption of regularity of prior proceedings. Strange v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. In trespass, one claiming under tax title need not show legal assessment, advertisement for sale, nor a valid sale, in order to introduce his deed. Saunders v. Collins [Fla.] 47 S 958. Tax deed properly admitted. Id. Rev. Pol. Code, § 2213, making tax deeds regular on their face prima facie evidence of regularity of proceedings and truth of recitals, makes such deeds prima facie evidence that notice of intention to take out deed was given. Bandow v. Wolven [S. D.] 120 NW 881. Under Laws 1896, p. 850, c. 908, providing that provisions as to sales by state comptroller shall govern the county treasurer, etc., statutory presumptions as to regularity of proceedings applies to deed executed by treasurer. Clinton v. Krull, 125 App. Div. 157, 111 NYS 105.

12. Barnes' Ann. St. 1901, § 8624. Bivens v. Henderson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 426. In action to test validity of tax deed where plaintiff owns fee and defendant is in possession, under the deed which court holds good on its face, the plaintiff has the burden to show that the deed is ineffective. Taylor v. Adams [Kan.] 99 P 597.

13. Ann. St. 1906, p. 1788, making tax deed prima facie evidence that person named as defendant was the owner at time of sale, is not conclusive and may be overcome by proof to the contrary. Einstein v. Holladay-Klotz Land & Lumber Co., 132 Mo. App. 82, 111 SW 859.

14. Starks v. Sawyer [Fla.] 47 S 513.

15. Tax deed regular on its face, which has been of record for more than five years, except that it runs to executors of estate of person to whom certificate was issued and their heirs, should, under the rule of liberal construction, be admitted as a muniment of title. Robert v. Gibson [Kan.] 99 P 595. In action to try title against holder of tax deed which has been recorded for more than five years, question whether he took possession within two years after deed was recorded as he was required to do, must be presented by pleadings. Taylor v. Adams [Kan.] 99 P 597. Deed reciting that it is based on certificate issued for taxes of year prior to that in which taxes for which it was sold accrued is vulnerable on attack, even after having been of record for more than five years. Price v. Barnhill [Kan.] 98 P 774. Omission in tax deed not attacked for five years to state for what year taxes accrued held supplied by recital that total consideration was taxes of 1894, and subsequent years. Gow v. Blackman [Kan.] 96 P 799. Under Laws 1896, p. 481, c. 908, relative to presumptions in favor of tax deeds after two years. the title of the grantee is absolute. Cone v. Lauer, 131 App. Div. 193, 115 NYS 644.

16. Under Kirby's Dig. §§ 4729, 4730, 4897, 4732, 4898, state land commissioner may issue duplicate deed to "forfeit tax lands" in case of loss of original. Thornton v. Smith [Ark.] 115 SW 677.

17. Under Kirby's Dig. § 7116, providing that, where county clerk is satisfied from the records that several tracts were sold separately instead of together as recited in a deed, he may issue another deed reciting such fact, where the records did not show such fact, a corrected deed was void. Chatfield v. Iowa & Arkansas Land Co. [Ark.] 114 SW 473.

18. Laws 1896, p. 841, c. 908, § 123, making comptroller's deed subject to cancellation for defect in proceedings affecting jurisdiction, means jurisdictional defects. People v. Lewis, 127 App. Div. 107, 111 NYS 398. Laws 1896, p. 841, c. 908, §§ 131, 132, construed and defects enumerated in § 132, for which deed may be cancelled, etc., held to apply to all conveyances by the comp-

(§ 14) D. Remedies of original owner, and others claiming under or through him.[20] See 10 C. L. 1830 The remedies against a tax sale [21] are available only to those having the proper legal status.[22] In a suit to vacate a tax sale, all persons whose interests will be affected should be joined [23] or notified,[24] and all defects in the tax proceedings relied upon should be alleged.[25] In order to set aside a tax title, the complainant must show title in himself, or right to redeem,[26] unless otherwise provided by statute,[27] and defects in the tax sale proceeding, which render it void.[28]

troller executed before or after the passage of the act. Id. Comp. Laws, § 3893, providing that a tax sale shall not be set aside after confirmation, etc., refers to powers of equity to vacate the sale in the same proceeding for irregularities, and does not limit authority of courts in general to determine validity of sales. Horton v. Salling [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1114, 119 NW 912.

19. St. 1903, p. 63, validating tax deeds void for failure to recite correct date when right of redemption expires, is retroactive and validates a deed previously executed void for failure to recite date of expiration of redemption, as required by Pol. Code, § 3771, amended by St. 1895, p. 327, and operates to vest title in the state and one who purchased from the state prior to the act. Peck v. Fox [Cal.] 99 P 189. Tax deed executed to city of Baltimore by collector without authority, on December 7, 1883, was validated by Acts 1904, p. 504, c. 281, § 2, validating deeds defective in the manner the deed in question was defective. McMahon v. Crean [Md.] 71 A 995. Owner's right in property sold for taxes having been divested by sale, pursuant to which a void deed was executed, such statute did not impair any vested rights. Id.

22. Suit to confirm tax title which proceeds to final hearing as suit to cancel a tax title as cloud on another tax title, not within Kirby's Dig. § 7105, providing that no one except owner or one claiming under him, etc., may assail such title. McDaniel v. Berger [Ark.] 116 SW 194. An action to set aside a tax deed as a cloud on title should be brought by vendor, who yet has legal title, rather than by vendee who has a mere contract for title, although such contract states that property "is hereby bargained and sold," and permits vendee to take immediate possession. Gloss v. Cass, 230 Ill. 641, 82 NE 827.

23. In action to vacate tax deed as cloud, where a witness for the defendant produced a tax sale certificate indorsed on the back by the defendant and testified that he had purchased it from defendant prior to the suit, he was a necessary party. Complete justice cannot be done between the parties unless he is made a party. Larson v. Glos, 235 Ill. 584, 85 NE 926.

24. Proceeding to vacate judgment foreclosing tax certificate held void as to grantee of purchaser at foreclosure sale who had no notice thereof, though notice was given to person who foreclosed delinquent certificate. Ryno v. Snider, 49 Wash. 421, 95 P 644. In action to set aside tax deed brought against purchaser and one to whom he had transferred the land as security, as trustee, the latter, individually and other grantees were not made parties by name but were included as unknown owners and were in default, and were held not entitled to introduce quit claim deed from purchaser. Brimson v. Arnold, 236 Ill. 495, 86 NE 254.

25. Where bill to set aside tax deed does not refer to defects in publication of delinquent list nor to sufficiency of affidavit for publication, relief cannot be granted on such grounds, though proof shows defects. Stearns v. Glos, 235 Ill. 290, 85 NE 335. In bill to set aside tax title setting out proceedings for sale and their invalidity, a statement that deed was issued, whereby county treasurer conveyed, etc., cannot be construed as admission that title passed by conveyance. Kraus v. Congdon [C. C. A.] 161 F 18.

26. Despard v. Pearcy [W. Va.] 63 SE 871. Deed from plaintiffs' grantor to themselves and testimony that they had been in possession of land since date of such deed held sufficient to prove possession and to sustain a decree. Brimson v. Arnold, 236 Ill. 495, 86 NE 254. That land was distributed by probate court to heirs of tax record owner, from whom plaintiff derived title, showed sufficient title to enable them to seek to vacate tax foreclosure decrees for want of jurisdictional process. Preston v. Cox, 50 Wash. 451, 97 P 493.

27. In suit, under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. Wash. § 5521, by one in possession to set aside a tax deed plaintiff is not required to plead or prove title in himself. Kraus v. Congdon [C. C. A.] 161 F 18.

28. In trespass to try title, plaintiff must show invalidity of tax foreclosure judgment from record in order to overcome its effect as bar to his right to recover. Young v. Jackson [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 74. Where defendant in ejectment claims under tax deed, plaintiff is not confined in his attack on validity of the deed to grounds specified in Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 8639, requiring certain proof by bar claiming adversely to tax title. Bivens v. Henderson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 426. Where court can legally infer that description in tax deed conveys property described in bill to set aside deed, such deed cannot be set aside on ground of misdescription, and where description in deed, precept, and certificate of delinquency, is not sufficient legal description, there must be proof that land described in deed could not have been other property than that described in bill. Stearns v. Glos, 235 Ill. 290, 85 NE 335. In ejectment, where defendant exhibits title derived from sale for taxes regular in form and long subsequent to title exhibited by plaintiff, derived from like sale, plaintiff has burden to prove defect in defendant's title in that land was

Where both parties to the suit claim under a void tax sale, neither is precluded from showing the invalidity of the other's title,[29] but, under the rule that one deriving title from the complainant can attack the latter's title only by showing title in himself, the issue may be confined to the question as to whether the complainant's title was divested by the tax sale proceedings under which the defendant claims.[30] As a general rule, an owner who seeks to vacate a tax title is required to do equity [31] by reimbursing the purchaser for taxes paid by him,[32] interest [33] and improvements; [34] but whether tender thereof is required as a condition to maintaining action, depends upon statute,[35] and a statute requiring such tender has been held void.[36] In the absence of such a tender, the complainant cannot recover costs.[37] Equity will interfere to cancel a certificate issued to a purchaser at a void tax sale.[38]

Limitations. See 10 C. L. 1832—The period within which action to vacate a tax title must be commenced is prescribed by statutes in the various states,[39] but in a proper assessed in that year as seated land and exempt from sale. Floyd v. Kulp Lumber Co., 222 Pa. 257, 71 A 13. Statute requiring owner, in order to defeat tax title, to prove assessment defective shifted burden of proof from purchaser but did not change rule that each step required by law must be taken before a tax title can be procured. Hamilton v. Steele [Ky.] 117 SW 378.

Admissibility of evidence: In ejectment, on an issue as to whether land was assessed for certain year as seated as well as unseated land, so as to be exempt from sale, the assessment lists for preceding year and two years following year in question are admissible. Floyd v. Kulp Lumber Co., 222 Pa. 257, 71 A 13.

29. Meyer v. Snell [Ark.] 116 SW 208.

30. As between patent and tax title, the former must prevail unless tax proceedings were sufficient to divest title. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 F 999.

31. Owner seeking to avoid sale must do equity. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136. Where holder of equitable mortgage takes tax title in violation of stipulation with mortgagor to pay taxes, the mortgagor must, in order to have the tax sale vacated, pay the mortgage, though it be barred by limitations. Teich v. San Jose Safe Deposit Bank [Cal. App.] 97 P 167.

32. Indiana & Arkansas Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Milburn [C. C. A.] 161 F 531. Purchase on mortgage foreclosure of land charged with tax lien held by mortgagee as prior incumbrances could not sue to vacate tax lien without paying amount represented by tax certificate. Farmer v. Ward [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 401. In action, under Rev. Codes, § 6870, to quiet title against tax deed, where answer prayed that, if plaintiff had title, taxes paid be declared lien, such decree would be made where taxes were such that owner should have paid them. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136. Where, in action to foreclose equitable mortgage, plaintiff stipulated with defendant that he would redeem from tax sale, he to be reimbursed if unsuccessful in suit, defendants could have relief where he purchased from state instead of redeeming. Teich v. San Jose Safe Deposit Bank [Cal. App.] 97 P 167. In suit to quiet title against void tax deed, where taxes are declared a lien, proper practice in entering decree is to order plaintiff to make such payment within reasonable time, and then enter decree quieting title otherwise to deny any relief. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136.

33. In suit to quiet title against a void tax deed, where taxes are declared a lien, it is error to allow defendant interest on taxes paid at the rate provided, as the suit is one to redeem and only legal interest is allowable. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136.

35. 2 Mills' Ann. St. § 3904, providing that on recovery from purchaser at tax sale all taxes paid shall be ascertained and paid by person recovering before he shall obtain possession, did not require tender or deposit in court before suit brought. Whitehead v. Callahan [Colo.] 99 P 57. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 5679, complaint in action for recovery of land sold for taxes must allege tender to purchaser or his assignee or, grantee of all taxes, etc., paid and such tender refused. Ryno v. Snider, 49 Wash. 421, 95 P 644. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 5679, one who sues to set aside a tax deed against another in possession must plead, or at least prove, tender of taxes, interest, and costs paid by purchaser. Nunn v. Stewart [Wash.] 100 P 1004.

36. A statute, requiring one claiming land sold to the state for taxes in another's name to pay the taxes before suing to recover possession, is beyond the power of the legislature. Harvey v. Hoffman, 108 Va. 626, 62 SE 371.

37. In suit to remove tax deed as cloud, where before suit no tender was made defendant of amount due her for taxes paid, it was error on setting aside deed to decree costs against her. Bauer v. Glos, 236 Ill. 450, 86 NE 116. Before costs in suit to set aside tax deed can be taxed against holder of deed, he must have been placed by valid tender in position of refusing to do equity. Stearns v. Glos, 235 Ill. 290, 85 NE 335.

38. Though assessment was valid. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6.

39. The five year statute of limitations (Kirby's Dig. Ark. § 5060) will bar an attack on sale of land in foreclosure of tax lien. Indiana & Arkansas Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Milburn [C. C. A.] 161 F 531. Code Wash. 1881, § 2939, limiting time to bring suit to recover land sold for taxes to three years, was repealed by Act March 15, 1893, p. 385. Kraus v. Congdon [C. C. A.] 161 F 18. Action brought in 1908 to set aside tax deeds duly recorded in 1883, 1885, is barred.

case the equitable doctrine of laches may be invoked.[40] The applicability of such statutes to particular cases is a matter of construction.[41] A valid title may be acquired by limitations,[42] notwithstanding irregularities in the sale,[43] but limitations cannot be invoked in aid of a deed void on its face,[44] and, where a sale is void and the purchaser is not in possession, the legislature cannot transfer title to him by lapse of time alone.[45] The limitations as to suits to avoid a tax sale is not a curative statute, but the title thus acquired is in the nature of a prescriptive title in which the deed must constitute color of title.[46] Limitations where the state or municipality is the purchaser are treated elsewhere.[47] Limitations do not commence to run in favor of purchaser until confirmation.[48]

(§ 14) E. Acquisition of title by state or municipality and transfer thereof.[49]—See 10 C. L. 1834—The right of the state or municipality to purchase at tax sale[50] or to forfeit property for nonpayment of taxes is statutory, and the statutes

Strange v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. Under Code 1904, p. 321, providing that suit to set aside deed under Code 1904, p. 326, must be brought within two years, purchaser must comply with all provisions of Code 1904, p. 326, in order to plead the statute. Bowe v. Richmond [Va.] 64 SE 51. Where land is sold as against life tenant, limitations do not run against remaindermen until termination of the life estate. Kohle v. Hobson [Mo.] 114 SW 952.

40. One who delayed for seven years to attack a tax title, knowing that another held a tax deed and was willing to adjust on reasonable terms, held estopped to assail the deed for irregularity. McFarlane v. Simpson, 153 Mich. 193, 15 Det. Leg. N. 467. 116 NW 982. Doctrine of laches will not defeat complainant's suit to set aside tax deed, where land in controversy is wild and uncultivated, neither party being in possession, and aside from paying taxes, defendant has done nothing upon land. Indiana & Arkansas Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Milburn [C. C. A.] 161 F 531.

41. Limitations, under St. 1898, §§ 1188, 1189a, 1189b, for recovering land sold for taxes or to avoid tax deed, do not apply to action to annul at tax deed for fraud in proceedings. Boon v. Root, 137 Wis. 451. 119 NW 121. Laws 1903, p. 75, c. 59, requiring appeals in tax proceedings to be taken within 30 days, applies to equitable action to vacate tax foreclosure judgment, and that suit is also to quiet title is immaterial. McCausland v. Bailey [Wash.] 98 P 327. As against sales not included in deed to defendants in action to quiet title against tax sales, statute does not run against right of owner. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. Limitation prescribed by Sess. Laws 1901, p. 80, providing that validity of any sale shall not be questioned unless within two years, applies to sale and proceedings thereunder, and not to subsequent proceedings under control of tax purchaser. Flickering v. Cornwell [S. D.] 117 NW 1039. Limitation in general revenue law, fixing time within which action may be brought to recover land sold for nonpayment of taxes, applies only to deeds recorded under that law, and not to proceedings under Sess. Laws 1901, p. 51. Id. Action under Revisal 1905, § 1589, to cancel a tax deed is not an action to recover land sold for taxes within three year statute. Cauley v. Sutton [N. C.] 64 SE 3.

42. Where purchaser is in possession, his deed may be made basis of limitations against an action to try title. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290.

43. Acts 1897, p. 37, c. 1, § 71, limiting suits assailing tax title to three years after sale, precludes impeachment for irregularities, but not where the sale was void because of a jurisdictional defect. Harris v. Mason [Tenn.] 115 SW 1146. Action to redeem from sale made in 1881, based on objection that assessment was made in name of W. H. F. instead of A. J. F., the rightful owner, was barred in three years. Richards v. Fuller, 122 La. 847, 48 S 285. Action against one in possession under tax deed regular on its face, but based on a void assessment, is barred in four years, under Gen. St. 1906, § 591. Florida Finance Co. v. Sheffield [Fla.] 48 S 42.

44. Batelle v. Knight [S. D.] 120 NW 1102. Deed void for premature issue. Fitschen v. Olson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1010, 119 NW 3; Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. B. & C. Comp. § 3135, limiting suits to quiet title to two years from date of record of tax deed, does not reach jurisdictional defects in tax proceeding. Martin v. White [Or.] 100 P 290. Recitals of deed may be conclusive as to irregularities, but, if proceedings are void, a bar to a suit by owner must be more than mere lapse of time. He must be ousted from possession or the purchaser's title quieted. Id. Act Tenn. 1899, p. 1143, providing that tax title shall not be invalidated unless within three years after date, and not except on proof that land was not liable for taxes, will not validate title where clerk was without authority to make deed because of insufficiency of list filed by county trustee. Collier v. Goessling [C. C. A.] 160 F 604. Where a sale of state tax land is void, laches cannot be imputed to stranger to title in delaying 12 years before seeking to cancel the sale. Horton v. Salling [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1114, 119 NW 912.

50. Under Act Tenn. 1899, p. 1084, requiring county trustee to make public sale of land for delinquent taxes, and strike off to must be complied with.[51] Statutes providing for such forfeiture are valid.[52] The scope of the forfeiture [53] and extent of title acquired by the state on purchase by it [54] rests in the terms of the statute. The title acquired by the state can be assailed only by one having a proper status to do so.[55] The right to attack the title of the state may be barred by limitations [56] or lost by laches.[57] Rights acquired by the state under an adjudication to it for taxes may be waived.[58] One who seeks to cancel a void sale of state tax lands and purchase the lands himself should be required to pay the amount paid on such sale and subsequent taxes.[59] The acquisition of title by the state is usually distinguished from ordinary tax sales.[60]

A sale by the state [61] or municipality [62] must conform to statutory requirements.

the treasurer all lands sold where there is no bid sufficient to cover taxes and costs, and file with the clerk a list showing respective amounts due on each tract, a list containing figures between lines with nothing to show that they stood for dollars and cents, and no separation of state and county taxes, was void. Collier v. Goessling [C. C. A.] 160 F 604.

51. Sale by trustee of county to state was void, where trustee failed to file in office of clerk of court a certified list of land so sold, was required by Acts 1897, p. 34, c. 1, § 63. Harris v. Mason [Tenn.[115 SW 1146. Such defect could not be cured by filing such list after the property had been sold to an individual purchaser. Id. Where land was returned delinquent and the state bid it in at annual sale in 1893, under the tax law then in force, the state acquired absolute title. Haney v. Miller, 154 Mich. 337, 15 Det. Leg. N. 592, 117 NW 71. Rev. Laws, § 936, is a revision of Gen. Laws 1902, § 52, ch. 2, and reference to lands forfeited under § 936 is in legal effect a reference to lands forfeited under the laws of 1902. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 NW 391. Form of certificate prescribed by attorney general for the forfeited sale in 1906 is valid. Id.

52. Art. 13, § 6, of Const., forfeiting land for nonentry on tax books, is valid. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468. If title is taken by the state subject to redemption, it cannot be said that a party is divested of title without due process of law. Mich. Pub. Laws 1897, Act No. 229, held valid. Rusch v. John Duncan L. & M. Co., 211 U. S. 526, 53 Law. Ed. —.

53. Under early Virginia statutes, applicable to subject, forfeiture of particular land title for nonpayment of taxes assessed upon land of nonentry thereof upon books of commissioner was complete, embracing whole title. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468; State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 495. Acts 1838, p. 21, c. 8, § 17, providing that interest of state in lands forfeited should vest in trustee, held to vest in such trustee complete original title of lands forfeited to state for nonpayment of taxes, except as therein provided. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468.

54. Under Pol. Code, § 3788, providing that deed to state conveys absolute title as of 5 years from date of sale, sale vests equitable and deed the legal title in the state, and the owner after five years forfeite all rights except to redeem under § 3817 before the state sells or enters. Young v. Patterson [Cal. App.] 99 P 552.

55. Where state claims title under tax deed, defendant in ejectment cannot dispute state's title without showing that he was owner at the time of assessment, or holds under one who was owner. People v. Bain, 60 Misc. 253, 113 NYS 27. Where owner contracted to convey which contract was assigned, assignee could assail title of state claimed under tax title. Id.

56. Where the state took title to land under deed from the comptroller, Laws 1896, p. 841, c. 908, operated as a statute of limitations to cure any errors in the assessment against the former owner which might have been cured under such laws. People v. Bain, 60 Misc. 253, 113 NYS 27; People v. Pulver, 60 Misc. 256, 113 NYS 139. Three years' limitation of Code 1880, § 539, cannot be invoked by pendente lite purchaser. McLemore v. Anderson [Miss.] 47 S 801, afg. on rehearing [Miss.] 43 S 878. Purchaser of void title from state could not invoke limitations prescribed by Laws 1860, such limitations having been waived by Laws 1888, p. 42, § 5. Id.

57. Original owners may not quiet title against a purchaser because the deed from state shows that less than three weeks notice of sale was given, where suit was brought 12 years after the sale and it appeared that they were unwilling to pay the amount for which the land was sold. Flannigan v. Towle [Cal. App.] 96 P 507.

58. The state is bound by acts of its taxing officers in placing property previously adjudicated to the state for taxes, on the rolls for succeeding years, and receiving taxes from the debtor in possession, and such acts are considered a waiver by the state of the prior adjudication. Gauthreaux v. Theriot, 121 La. 871, 46 S 892.

59. Horton v. Salling [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1114, 119 NW 912.

60. In proceedings to sell lands for taxes, an order of chancery court to commissioner "to execute deeds to purchasers, conveying only such title as the decree or decrees were competent to pass," held not to apply to lands struck off to the state, as appeared from fact that state was not required to and did not pay tax commissioner amount of tax liens adjudged, and, instead of deed to state as was required to be given individual purchasers, there was merely provision for a certificate by the commissioner to the clerk of the county, whose duty it was to send copy to certain state officers. Indiana & Arkansas Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Milburn [C. C. A.] 161 F 531.

61. Where on sale of state tax land the auditor general accepted 6 per cent interest on state's claim, instead of 1 per cent. per month, as required by Pub. Acts 1893, p. 16, No. 16, § 74, the sale is void. Horton v. Salling [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1114, 119 NW

A grantee of the state of lands forfeited acquires only the rights of the state,[63] but he acquires all rights then held by the state,[64] and his deed is prima facie evidence of title,[65] but, where he seeks to quiet title, he has the burden of proof.[66] A sale by the state is complete when the purchase price is paid.[67] A tax deed from the state conveying delinquent state tax lands can receive no other construction than a deed between private persons.[68] Where the state actually has title, its deed is not invalidated by a misrecital of the date of the sale at which such title was acquired.[69]

§ 15. Inheritance and transfer taxes. A. Nature of and power to impose.[70]—See 10 C. L. 1837—An inheritance tax is not a tax on the property but upon the privilege of inheriting the same [71] and hence is not subject to constitutional limitations

912. A county auditor has authority, under Rev. Laws 1905, § 935, to execute a state assignment certificate for lands sold at regular delinquent tax sale after more than three years from date of the sale and before proceedings to sell under §§ 936, 937, Rev. Laws 1905, have been initiated in any one year. State v. Scott, 105 Minn. 69, 117 NW 417.

62. Code 1887, § 666, amended by Code 1904, p. 326, and Code 1904, pp. 311, 313, 324, construed with reference to the charter of the city of Richmond, under which property was bid off for nonpayment of city taxes and held to authorize sale for taxes only upon payment of city as well as state taxes. Bowe v. Richmond [Va.] 64 SE 51. Where, after land was sold to a city for prior taxes, a person purchased at subsequent tax sale, and the city conveyed to him on receipt of amount of taxes due on its lien, such transaction constituted payment of prior taxes and to that extent the conveyance was not void. Rogers v. Lynn, 200 Mass. 354, 86 NE 889.

63. Grantee in void commissioner's deed of land forfeited for taxes, who subdivided and platted the land and paid taxes on it as platted, held to have no title and did not, under Laws 1899, p. 133, cut off rights of the true owner. Morris v. Breedlove [Ark.] 116 SW 223. Purchaser from state did not acquire equitable title, where on sale to state county trustee did not file with clerk of court certified list of lands, as required by Acts 1897, p. 34, c. 1, § 63. Harris v. Mason [Tenn.] 115 SW 1146.

64. Deed from state conveying delinquent state tax lands subject to statutory right of owner to redeem conveys absolute title of state subject to such right. Haney v. Miller, 154 Mich. 337, 15 Det. Leg. N. 592, 117 SW 71. Sale of land as forfeited under decree passes to purchaser all interest vested in the state by forfeiture. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468. Transfer to other claimants made by Const. art. 13, § 3, and also conveyance under sale in suit to sell land as forfeited, constitute grants of state and create new titles. Id. Under Code 1906, §§ 3513, 3535, lands once sold as forfeited for nonentry on tax books, or transferred to junior claimants by constitution, cannot be again sold by state unless title so sold has been forfeited. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 468; Id. [W. Va.] 63 SE 495. Lands once sold by state, under Code 1906, §§ 3513-3535, being again involved in suit in which it appears that title originating at first sale is again in state for failure to redeem, but that taxes have in fact been paid, are properly dismissed from suit. State v. King [W. Va.] 63 SE 495. Though failure of former owner of land conveyed by defective deed to keep land taxed in his own name and pay taxes for five years works forfeiture of title, the deed is conclusive against state that title is in tax grantee and state cannot sell the land as forfeited. State v. West Branch Lumber Co. [W. Va.] 63 SE 372; State v. Snyder [W. Va.] 63 SE 385. Though statute does not mention state as one of persons concluded, it must be construed as including it. State v. Snyder [W. Va.] 63 SE 385. Express saving in § 29, in favor of state, county and municipal corporations, does not confer upon state power to set aside deed for purpose of availing herself of forfeiture of former owner's title, but only to enforce any lien has for taxes. Id. Code 1906, § 888, by estopping state from proceeding against grantee in defective tax deed to enforce forfeiture in name of former owner, grants such forfeited title to such grantee in advance of accrual of forfeiture. State v. West Branch Lumber Co. [W. Va.] 63 SE 372; State v. Snyder [W. Va.] 63 SE 385.

65. Commissioner's deed of land forfeited for taxes is prima facia evidence of title. Morris v. Breedlove [Ark.] 116 SW 223.

66. One who seeks to quiet title in himself by virtue of a deed from the commissioner of state lands, conveying land forfeited for taxes and in his possession, has the burden to show title. Morris v. Breedlove [Ark.] 116 SW 223. Where lands were forfeited to state in 1882 and sold by void sale and in 1906 one received a donation certificate from the state and built a house in 1907, but only lived on it seven days prior to February, 1907, held, as he had no deed and was not entitled to one, he could not sue to quiet title, he having none. McDaniel v. Berger [Ark.] 116 SW 194.

67. Sale on proper notice by the state of land sold to it for taxes is complete when purchase money is paid; delivery of deed is not essential. Young v. Patterson [Cal. App.] 99 P 552.

68. Grantee is entitled to performance of conditions therein named. Haney v. Miller, 154 Mich 337, 15 Det. Leg. N. 592, 117 NW 71.

69. McLemore v. Anderson [Miss.] 47 S 801, afg. on rehearing [Miss.] 43 S 878. Mere proof of a sale prior to date of sale recited is not proof of misrecital. Id.

NOTE. Constitutional law—Inheritance tax—Due Process of law: A. executed deeds in the nature of marriage settlements, conveying certain real and personal property to trustees, in trust, to pay income to his daughter D. for life, with remainder to her issue in fee; and giving her the power, in her discretion, to appoint the remainder "amongst her issue or heirs, in such manner and proportions as she may appoint by instrument in its nature testamentary, to be acknowledged by her as a deed, and in the presence of two witnesses, or published by her as a will." D. died, and by will she exercised the power of appointment in favor of the plaintiffs in error. The state of New York attempted to levy a transfer tax upon the interest appointed by D., under the Laws of N. Y. 1897, c. 284, which provide that when a person shall exercise a power of appointment derived from any disposition of property, such appointment shall be deemed a transfer, taxable in the same manner as though the property belonged absolutely to the donee of the power, and had been bequeathed or devised by such donee by will. Payment of the tax was resisted on the ground that the statute is unconstitutional because it deprives a person of property without due process of law, and because the reduction of the estate resulting from the imposition of the tax impairs contract obligations. Held, (1) that the tax is a transfer tax and, as such, within the taxing power of the state; (2) that no contract is impaired. (Holmes and Moody, JJ., dissent.) Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 Law. Ed. 882..

Inheritance taxes levied by the states are upheld on the ground that they are succession taxes and that a state has the power to control the devolution of property by will. Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 Law. ed. 998; Murdock v. Ward, 178 U. S. 139, 44 Law. Ed. 1009; In re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 32 NE 1096, 18 L. R. A. 709; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 Law. Ed. 287; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 Law. Ed. 192; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 Law. Ed. 1037; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 47 Law. Ed. 400; Campbell v. California, 200 U. S. 87, 50 Law. Ed. 382; In re Davis, 149 N. Y. 539, 44 NE 185; Cahen v. Brewster, 203 U. S. 543, 51 Law. Ed. 310; Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 47 Law. Ed. 1035; In re Gould Estate, 156 N. Y. 423, 51 NE 287. It was contended, however, that in this case the tax was not levied on a succession to property and that the appointee did not take under the power because the estate takes effect as if it had been created by the deed which raised the power. Wash. Real Prop., p. 320; 4 Kent Comm., p. 327; Christy v. Pulliam, 17 Ill. 59; Silvers v. Canary, 109 Ind. 267, 9 NE 904; Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns Ch. [N. Y.] 523. If such is the case, the vesting of the property did not depend upon the state's permission, and consequently the state had no authority to levy a succession tax. The estate created by the deed would then be a contingent remainder, the vesting of which the state would be unable to tax. In re Pell's Estate, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540, 63 NE 789, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791; In re Seaman, 147 N. Y. 69, 41 NE 401. It was urged, furthermore, in objection to the tax, that any instrument "in its nature testamentary" would be a sufficient exercise of the power, and so if the writing were void as a will, nevertheless it might be a valid appointment. Therefore, because the laws of New York in respect to wills did not give validity to the exercise of the power, the appointment, although made in the form of a will, should not be considered as such for the purposes of taxation. In re Lansing's Estate, 182 N. Y. 238, 74 NE 882; In re Stewart, 131 N. Y. 274, 30 NE 184, 14 L. R. A. 836. The two cases last named can be distinguished from the principal case, since in those cases the persons appointed by will under the power were those who would have received the property if the power had not been exercised; while in this case the plaintiffs were forced to resort to the will in order to take the property. The New York courts have invariably held that when there is a valid will which the appointee is obliged to accept in order to take the property, such appointee takes under the power and not under the instrument that created the power. In re Vanderbilt's Estate, 50 App. Div. 246, 63 NYS 1079; In re Seaver, 63 App. Div. 283, 71 NYS 544. The N. Y. Court of Appeals say this doctrine that the grantee under a power of appointment takes under the instrument which raises the power is a mere fiction of law and in substance it is the execution of the power that gives the grantee his property. form to such constitutional requirements as are applicable to them.[73] Municipal power to levy an inheritance tax is conferrable only by express grant,[74] but such a tax may be imposed by the legislature, without express, constitutional grant,[75] as an incident to the statutory right to inherit.[76] Statutes imposing such taxes are generally held to be prospective only.[77]

183 U. S. 278, 46 Law. Ed. 196. It seems, therefore, that the New York statute is valid in so far as the appointment is exercised by will, but the courts have hesitated to commit themselves as to what would be their decision if the power were exercised by deed. The contention that the law impaired the obligation of contract was disposed of summarily by showing that the remainderman had no contract with the donor or with the state, and that the state is not deprived of its sovereign right to exercise the taxing power upon the making of a will in the future by which the estate was given to the appointee.—From 6 Mich. L. R. 78.

NOTE. Property of a nonresident decedent under the New York Transfer Tax Act: Legislatures in taxing the privilege of acquisition by will or inheritance, see 7 Columbia L. R. 293, commonly include transfers from a nonresident decedent, of property within the state. Cf. N. Y. Laws 1896, c. 908, § 220, 1; see State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 17 A 82, 3 L. R. A. 372. Although such statutes are generally regarded as imposing a tax not on the estate but on the succession (In re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 32 NE 1096. 18 L. R. A. 709; In re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479, 36 NE 505; In re Wolfe's Estate, 89 App. Div. 349, 85 NYS 949, afd. 179 N. Y. 599, 72 NE 1152), it has been said that the assessment as to a nonresident's personalty cannot be on the succession (In re Bishop's Estate, 82 App. Div. 112, 81 NYS 474), since personalty passes by the law of the domicile. But as foreign law operates only by consent of the sovereign in whose territory the property has its actual situs, Story, Confl. of Laws, §§ 18, 550, the local transfer tax is really a condition precedent to the succession under the lex domicilii. That double taxation may result is no controlling objection. Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 Law. Ed. 439; see Greves v. Shaw, 173 Mass. 205, 53 NE 372.

The earliest Transfer Tax Act in New York, Laws 1885, c. 483, was construed, by a divided court, not to cover the personalty of a nonresident. In re Enston's Will, 113 N. Y. 174, 21 NE 87, 3 L. R. A. 464. The defect was cured by a change of phrase, Laws 1887, c. 713, § 1 (In re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 80, 27 NE 759, 12 L. R. A. 401), but it later appeared that adequate procedure had not been provided. In re Embury, 19 App. Div. 214, 45 NYS 881, afd. 154 N. Y. 746, 49 NE 1096. A line of decisions under the statute as next materially amended, however, at once established an aggressive interpretation. Thus, on the ground of the protection accorded either directly or to the ultimate assets represented (Callahan v. Woodbridge, 171 Mass 595, 597, 51 NE 176), "property within the state" was construed to embrace certificates of stock of domestic corporations, though kept by the nonresident decedent at his domicile (In re Bronson's Estate, 150 N. Y. 1, 44 NE 707, 55 Am. St. Rep. 632, 34 L. R. A. 238), bonds both of foreign (In re Morgan's Estate, 150 N. Y. 35, 44 NE 1126), and of domestic corporations, if deposited in New York (In re Whiting's Estate, 150 N. Y. 27, 44 NE 956, 55 Am. St. Rep. 640, 34 L. R. A. 332, and a New York bank account. In re Houdayer's Estate, 150 N. Y. 37, 44 NE 718, 55 Am. St. Rep. 642, 34 L. R. A. 235. And the steady course of enactment and of interpretation has ever since been towards enlarging the scope of the statute. In re Gordon's Estate, 186 N. Y. 471, 483, 79 NE 722. Contrast In re Phipps, 77 Hun [N. Y.] 325, 28 NYS 330, afd. 143 N. Y. 641, 37 NE 823, and In re Clinch's Estate, 180 N. Y. 300, 302, 73 NE 35; In re Daly's Estate, 100 App. Div. 373, 91 NYS 858, afd. 182 N. Y. 524, 74 NE 1116.

This tendency is well illustrated by a recent court of appeals decision. In re Ramsdill's Estate, 190 N. Y. 492, 83 NE 584, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 946. A resident of Massachusetts, dying intestate, left personalty both there and in New York. One group of distributees fell within the exemptions of the New York statute. 3 R. S. Tax Law, § 221. It was unanimously held that the Massachusetts administrator could not deprive the state of its pro rata tax on the succession of the nonexempt distributees, by paying them out of Massachusetts assets and applying the New York property wholly towards the satisfaction of the shares of the exempts. The theory was that the status both of the distributees and of the state under the Transfer Tax Act became fixed instantly at the intestate's death. In re Westurn's Estate, 152 N. Y. 93, 102, 46 NE 315. The various views to the effect that an intestate's personal estate is until the grant of administration in abeyance (Brown v. Bibb, 2 Cold. [Tenn.] 434, 437; McNearman v. Maxfield, 38 Ark. 631, 636), or for certain purposes in the administrator by relation back (Com. Dig., tit. Adm. B. 10; Babcock v. Booth, 2 Hill [N. Y.] 181; 1 Williams, Ex'rs. [7th Am. Ed.] 760), or in the custody of the law (Bartlett v. Hyde, 3 Mo. 490).

or more specifically, in the probate judge, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 95, § 19, concern the immediate legal title, and under modern law at least, in no respect the beneficial interest. The ownership of the administrator is of course purely temporary and special. Ledyard v. Bull, 119 N. Y. 62, 72, 23 NE 444; Schouler, Ex'rs & Adm'rs, § 242; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1088. His legal title will not necessarily be enforced against the distributees, standing on their equitable rights, when there are no debts. Richardson v. Cole, 160 Mo. 372, 61 SW 182, 83 Am. St. Rep. 479. Friendly settlements without administration have been often upheld. Babbitt v. Bowen, 32 Vt. 437; In re Losee, 119 App. Div. 107, 104 NYS 1132. Some courts have even recognized a direct legal title in the distributees, loosely describing them as tenants in common. Hyde v. Stone, 7 Wend. [N. Y.] 354, 357, 22 Am. Dec. 582; Herrington v. Lowman, 22 App. Div. 266, 47 NYS 863. A distributee's interest pending administration is subject to "trustee process" (Wheeler v. Wheeler, 20 Pick. [Mass.] 563), and if he dies before distribution his share goes to his representatives. Moore v. Gordon, 24 Iowa, 158. Distribution merely ascertains rights which have already vested. Kingsbury v. Scovill, 26 Conn. 349; Perryman v. Greer, 39 Ala. 133. Although these rights do not attach to any specific property (Pritchard v. Norwood, 155 Mass. 539, 30 NE 80), a distributee takes a beneficial interest in the whole mass of personalty; that liquidation is the common practice does not mean that his interest is merely a claim for a sum of money. Cooper v. Cooper, L. R. 7 Eng. & Ir. App. Cas. 53; cf. Brown v. Bibb, supra. It follows that in the principal case, at once upon the intestate's death, each distributee, exempt and non exempt alike, took a pro rata interest in the New York personalty. Since the state's right to the transfer tax attached at the same instant, beyond the power even of the legislature to divest (In re Lander's Estate, 6 Cal. App. 744, 93 P 202), the administrator's later apportionment could not affect the statutory liability.

The administrator's contention in the principal case had been granted below, without opinion, on the authority of In re James, 144 N. Y. 6, 38 NE 961, where the executor was allowed to avoid the New York tax on a nonexempt legatee by similarly marshalling assets. The appellate division was unanimously reversed, on the ground of the "obvious distinction between testacy and intestacy." What that distinction may be does not appear. That the executor's title passes at once by the will and the administrator takes only by virtue of his later appointment, is immaterial. Touchst., 474. The title of the former is as purely administrative as the latter's. Lane v. Albertson, 78 App. Div. 607, 619, 79 NYS 947. In general there is no difference between their rights, duties and powers. 1 Williams, supra, 775; Shoenberger's Ex'rs. v. Savings Inst'n, 28 Pa. 459, 466; Redf., Surr. Pr. (6th Ed.) 515. Such differences as may exist, see 6 Columbia L. R. 15, concern their dealings with third parties, not the beneficiaries. See Minor, Confl. of Laws, § 116. And a general legatee, like a distributee, simply takes a pro rata share in the whole residual personal estate. Cf. Kingsbury v. Chapin, 196 Mass. 533, 82 NE 700, 702. That the state's right to the tax is fixed at the instant of death, as argued in the principal case, has been repeatedly held also where decedent was testate. Assessment may be made before probate. People v. Barker, 150 N. Y. 52, 44 NE 785. The assignment of a residuary legacy to an exempt legatee before administration cannot change its taxability. In re Cook's Estate, 187 N. Y. 253, 79 NE 991. Where a legatee died within three days of the testator, his share was notwithstanding subject to the tax. In re Borup's Estate, 28 Misc. 474, 59 NYS 1097. The value at the testator's death, not that at the time of transfer of actual possession, controls the appraisal of a bequest. In re Davis's Estate, 149 N. Y. 539, 44 NE 185; In re Sloane's Estate, 154 N. Y. 109, 47 NE 978.

This discrepancy of result may best be explained by the advance in the court's attitude towards the scope of the statute with respect to nonresidents, since the date of In re James, supra, and in failing frankly to overrule that case the court of appeals, it is submitted, as observed a distinction between testacy and intestacy which seems unfounded in logic or justice. That no such distinction exists appears even to have been urged in an earlier decision under the statute by one of the judges concurring in the principal case. In re Romaine, supra, 85. Later adjudications may be expected to refine the present apparent difference. Such a disposition is indicated by the terms in which In re James, supra, is in the principal case expressly affirmed. Though the reported facts give no clear warrant for such interpretation, In re James is described as holding that the tax may be avoided where a specific legatee of a foreign testator can obtain satisfaction of his legacy in a foreign jurisdiction. Clearly, to exact through the executor a tax on a specific legacy of designated foreign property merely because unrelated portions of the same estate lie within the taxing state, would be in effect an exercise of sovereignty beyond the jurisdiction. A distinction between intestacy and testacy broadly, is unsound; but the application of the doctrine expressed in In re James, supra, to cases of specific legacies of foreign property is both logical and just. Such limitation will bring consistency, both in legal principle and in practical administration, into the inheritance tax law of New York.—From 8 Columbia L. R. 398.

97. In assessing a transfer tax on shares of stock of a railroad company incorporated under the laws of several states, only such proportion of the value of the stock should be taxed in New Hampshire as the value of the franchises and property situated there is of the total value of its property and franchises. Gardiner v. Carter, 74 N. H. 507, 69 A 939. Stock of railroad having lines in the state and also in adjoining states belonging to nonresident decedent on appraisal should be apportioned, in determining portion of property in the state on a basis of total mileage, or on valuation of all property. In re Thayer's Estate, 58 Misc. 117, 110 NYS 751. In determining the value of the good will, net earnings of a single year should be multiplied by a certain number of years, the number depending on the nature of the business. Concurrent jurisdiction of proceedings to collect transfer taxes is sometimes vested in several courts.[2] In some states an executor is subject to a penalty for failure to pay the tax within a prescribed period.[3] Rebates are sometimes allowed.[4] Whether the tax is a charge against the estate or is to be deducted from the bequests depends on the intention of the testator.[5] In the absence of direction in the will, or by statute, a pro rata distribution among all pecuniary legacies of sums paid as foreign death duties cannot be made.[6]

Inheritance Tax Law 1895, § 11, authorizing person dissatisfied with appraisement to appeal on giving security for costs, and amendment of 1901, § 21½, making adjudication of county court conclusive as to lien of tax, subject to appeal to supreme court, held not to prevent appeal by state, though it was not required to give an appeal bond. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 1782, § 120, providing for appeals in tax matters, the state could appeal from order of county judge assessing value of an estate, under Inheritance Tax Law, § 11, without giving bond, though statute requires an appellant to give security for costs. Id. State may appeal from determination of superior court of amount of tax. Becker v. Nye [Cal. App.] 96 P 333.

99. Mode of appraisal of shares of stock of an interstate railroad for purpose of assessing transfer tax, not having been fixed by legislature, is a matter of fact and not of law, and decision of surrogate court thereon is not reviewable. In re Thayer's Estate, 193 N. Y. 430, 86 NE 462. Under transfer tax law, where in objections to appraiser's report, there was no claim to the contrary, it is assumed on appeal that a transfer was made within the state. In re Keeney's Estate, 194 N. 1. Where point in appeal from order of county judge, approving appraiser's report and assessing value of estate under Inheritance Tax Law, was merely from finding approving report was not raised below, it cannot be raised on appeal. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390. Judgment of court of appeals, on appeal of an executor from such an order modifying and affirming the order, finally determines the rights of the executor even as to a tax on an interest of which he did not complain on the appeal but which he could have complained. In re Cook's Estate, 194 N. Y. 400, 87 NE 786. Under Inheritance Tax Law, § 11, providing for assessing of value of estate from report of appraiser and providing for appeal, an appeal from an order approving appraiser's report and assessing tax was from entire order. People v. Sholem, 238 Ill. 203, 87 NE 390.

Court of equity has concurrent jurisdiction, under Act. 1906, pp. 246, 247, c. 22, §§ 13, 14, 15, to require payment of the tax out of shares of those chargeable therewith. Barrett v. Continental Realty Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 750.

5. Bequest to individuals for their own benefit and to other individuals for charitable purposes, directing executors to pay the tax on legacies to individuals, held to exclude beneficiaries of charitable legacies from payment of taxes. Kingsbury v. Bazeley [N. H.] 70 A 916. Gifts for charitable purposes are not gifts to individuals within a clause in a will directing payment of inheritance tax on legacies to individuals. Id. Under Laws 1905, p. 433, c. 40, requiring executor holding property subject to tax to deduct it therefrom, a tax on property distributed through the courts is to be deducted from the legacy, and a testator, who makes no provision for payment of the tax, so intends. Id. In a testamentary gift of specific property in a sister state, the inheritance tax is a charge against the legacy, because under the law the testator cannot transfer by will his entire estate. 26. Telephone company. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Mobile, 162 F 523. Authority primarily in legislature. Id. California Civ. Code, § 536, authorizing construction of lines, did not, as originally passed March 21, 1872, nor until re-enacted, March 20, 1905, include telephone companies. Sunset Tel. & T. Co. v. Pomona, 164 F 561. Civ. Code § 536, as re-enacted March 20, 1905 (St. 1905, p. 491, c. 385), authorizing construction of lines, was repealed by implication by franchise act of March 22, 1905, (St. 1905, p. 777, c. 573), "except lines doing an interstate business." Id.

27. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Mobile, 162 F 523. City with charter power to establish and regulate sidewalks and streets, etc., has implied power to authorize use of street by telephone company. Given general control over streets. Id.

28. Code Ala. 1896, § 2490, authorizing construction of lines along "highways," held to authorize lines upon city streets. Streets being highways. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Mobile, 162 F 523. California Civ. Code, § 536, granting right to construct lines along "highways," includes "streets" municipal assent can only be shown by formal municipal action,[29] but the granting of a right of way by the state may be subject to a constitutional provision requiring consent from the municipalities,[30] and such consent, not being a franchise,[31] may be express or implied.[32] The granting of telephone franchises [33] may be subject to constitutional provisions requiring their sale.[34] The duty of advertising and selling the franchise may be conferred upon a board of public works,[35] and it has been held that the city, for the purpose of preserving effective competition in the business, might limit the bidders.[36] Also, to secure effective service, a city has been held to have authority to modify the terms on which the franchise was granted,[37] and, where a franchise lapses for failure to commence work within a specific time, the forfeiture may be waived and the time extended, in consideration of reduced rates to the inhabitants.[38] The sale of the franchise, being a public duty, may be compelled by mandamus,[39] and citizens may also compel a company to exercise its franchise by operating its plant.[40] Companies securing occupation in disregard of the constitutional provisions will be denied relief in courts.[41] An ordinance granting the right to construct a telephone system which is accepted creates a contract [42]

(Pol. Code, § 2618). Sunset Tel. & T. Co. v. Pomona, 164 F 561.

29. Cannot be shown by mere declarations of witnesses that municipal assent had been given. Town of Pelham v. Pelham Tel. Co., 131 Ga. 325, 62 SE 186. Parol statements of witnesses held inadmissible. Id. Such evidence might be competent on theory of estoppel, but not apparent from record that it was so restricted. Id. Under evidence, city of Pomona had never consented to perpetual occupancy of streets by telephone company. Sunset Tel. & T. Co. v. Pomona, 164 F 561. Expenditure of $10,000 by telephone company not evidence of contract to use streets indefinitely. Id.

33. Telephone franchise within Const. §§ 163, 164, is right to occupy some portion of public streets for maintenance of line, not right to operate telephone exchange. Bland v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 399, 109 SW 1180. "Granting" of franchise is in nature of contract for performance of public service. Primary object is not revenue but securing efficient terms. Louisville Home Tel. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 113 SW 855. Municipality has power to maintain and operate plants and use public streets for public utilities as telephones for benefit of itself and inhabitants. May discharge power by others, upon terms agreed upon on form prescribed by law. Id. See, also, Franchises, 11 C. L. 1560.

34. Telephone franchise held granted in strict compliance with constitutional and statutory requirements. Const. § 164, requires grant on bids and Ky. St. 1903, § 3636, prescribes rule as to passage of franchise ordinances. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Hickman, 33 Ky. L. R. 730, 111 SW 311.

35. Within power of city council. Louisville Home Tel. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 113 SW 855.

36. Louisville Home Tel. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 113 SW 855. Ordinance for public sale of telephone franchise to owner of existing franchise, eliminating owner of another franchise as bidder, does not render it repugnant to Const. § 164, prohibiting monopolies. Id.

37. Relation between city and owner of telephone franchise quasi contractual, ordinance modifying terms to secure effective service in competing with another company is not within Const. § 52, preventing release of indebtedness or liability due municipality. Louisville Home Tel. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 113 SW 855.

38. Not violative of Const. § 164, requiring sale of franchises. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Hickman, 33 Ky. L. R. 730, 111 SW 311. Not void as to passage, within Ky. St. 1903, § 3636. Id.

39. Mandamus to compel sale of telephone franchise as directed by ordinance involves enforcement of public duty; citizen and resident proper relator where other representative refuses to act. Louisville Home Tel. Co v. Louisville [Ky.] 113 SW 855. Application alleging that applicants are taxpayers, and that one expects to purchase franchise without showing how property or legal rights, or city's property or revenue, was injured, does not show applicant's private right to secure writ. Id.

40. Franchise granted for citizen's benefit, and in consideration of service to be furnished. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Hickman, 33 Ky. L. R. 730, 111 SW 311. Appropriate remedy an action in equity for specific performance. Id. Remedy at law inadequate. Id.

41. Telephone companies ignoring Const. §§ 163, 164, as to obtaining franchises, should be deprived of relief that would indirectly serve their ends. Bland v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 399, 109 SW 1180. See post, Line Contracts.

42. City of Rock Island v. Central Union Tel. Co., 132 Ill. App. 248; Southern Bell Tel.

which is irrevocable,[43] although such grant is not exclusive.[44] The carrying on of a telegraph business for compensation is not included within the duties or privileges of a railroad company.[45] The federal enactment to aid the construction of telegraph lines and to secure the same for governmental uses is inapplicable to telephone companies,[46] and such enactment does not authorize the occupation of city streets without the latter's consent.[47] The right of way granted is an easement,[48] and, being a property right, is entiled to constitutional protection.[49]

It is held that an abutting owner has no legal right to prevent the use of a public county road for a telephone line.[50] Where the title of abutting owners extends to the center of a highway, an easement does not include the grantable right for the maintenance of a telegraph line.[51] Statutory authority for the maintenance of lines does not authorize an invasion of private property,[52] but the right of way may be secured by condemnation.[53] A grant procured by fraud is ineffective,[54] and may subject a telegraph company to punitive damages.[55] A grant ambiguous as to location may be explained by parol evidence.[56]

A statute prohibiting foreign corporations from doing business in a state until the designation of a person upon whom process may be served may be inapplicable to a telegraph company.[57] The regulation of the hours of service of employes must be in compliance with constitutional provisions.[58]

& T. Co. v. Moore, 162 F 523. Where ordinance does not limit grant, it creates estate during life of corporation. Not grant in perpetuity and therefore invalid. City of Rock Island v. License fees and taxes.[See 10 C. L. 1843]—License fees must be reasonable.[59] The charter powers of a city may authorize the imposition of an occupation or business tax measured by the gross receipts of a telephone company,[60] though the franchise is also taxed.[61] Though a telegraph line used exclusively for moving trains and dispatching railroad business is not assessable separately from the railroad property,[62] the rule differs where the telegraph line is used for commercial purposes for compensation.[63]

Transfers, line contracts, leases and mortgages.[See 10 C. L. 1843]—The right under a contract to occupy the poles of telephone company for attaching wires is in the nature of an easement[64] within the statute of frauds,[65] and a parol license to use such poles is revocable at the will of the grantor.[66] The property transferred by a bill of sale must be determined from a construction of that instrument.[67] The necessity of affording proper facilities for the public will permit the combination of telephone systems,[68] and a provision against competition may be upheld.[69] A work-

58. Laws 1907, p. 332, regulating hours for service of telegraph operators and train dispatchers, is unconstitutional and void, in so far as applicable to interstate commerce. State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 212 Mo. 658, 111 SW 500. Laws 1907, p. 332, regulating hours of service of telegraph operators, held inoperative as to interstate commerce, where act of congress (Act Cong. March 4, 1907, c. 2937, 24 Stat. 1415, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 913) covered same subject. Id. Though act of congress became effective later than Missouri act. Id.

59. Finding of master that charge of rental of $3 per pole by city for occupancy of streets was reasonable held sustained by evidence. City of Memphis v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 600. In action by borough for license tax, an affidavit of defense that such tax was not based upon cost of inspection and was grossly excesive was sufficient to prevent judgment. Collingdale Borough v. Keystone State Tel. & T. Co., 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 351. Reasonableness of fee subject to inquiry in action for same. Id.

60. Nebraska Tel. Co. v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 284. Fact that tolls and rentals collected in city are in part for messages over lines partly beyond city limits does not invalidate tax. Id.

61. Franchise or right to occupy streets not identical with business or occupation of telephone company. Nebraska Tel. Co. v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 284. Not double taxation. Id. Provision for annual payment in franchise ordinances "in consideration of rights and privileges granted" is sum exacted by city for privilege of using its streets under proprietorship of streets. Id. Though termed "privilege tax," is in nature of rental for use of streets. Id. Exaction of percentage of gross earnings of business in ordinance granting franchise to telephone company is an exercise of taxing power of city. Is tax upon business or occupation of conducting telephone business. Id. Where franchise accepted subject to exercise of city's taxing power, telephone company cannot complain. Id. Provision in ordinance for deduction of sum of occupation tax or taxes on gross receipts required to be paid under existing ordinances, from tax levied, is not void because not uniform on persons or property. Id. Since by operation all persons engaged in same business are taxed upon same basis and in same manner. Id.

65. Streator Independent Tel. & T. Co. v. Interstate Independent Tel. & T. Co., 142 Ill. App. 183. Injunctive relief where in nature of negative specific performance of contract, for use of telephone poles, denied when contract indefinite and oral. Id.

66. No grant for specific period. Streator Independent Tel. & T. Co. v. Interstate Independent Tel. & T. Co., 142 Ill. App. 183.

67. Bill of sale transferring line of telephone poles and wires, warranting same to be free from incumbrances, that seller had authority to sell and convey and that title was warranted against lawful claim of all persons, did not convey absolute right of perpetual maintenance of system but only right enjoyed by seller at time of transfer. Lattner v. Interstate Tel. Co., 136 Iowa, 687, 112 NW, 653.

68. Legislature has recognized necessity by provision for mergers and combinations of such companies, contract between two telephone companies which provides for an exclusive interchange of business must be distinguished from contracts effecting mergers of gas or street railway companies, and is not void because of tendency to create monopoly or subversive of public interest and benefit; where system of lines has been built upon faith of such an interchange of business, claim on part of defendant company that contract is in restraint of trade and should be abrogated is not well founded. United States Tel. Co. v. Middle-

ing agreement whereby two telephone systems are connected may be so impressed with the interest of the public that neither party to the contract may disregard it,[70] and such agreement is not terminable at the will of the parties,[71] unless the contract expressly so provides.[72] Though the violation of constitutional provisions as to securing the right to operate a system may bar relief in the courts, severable portions of a contract will be upheld.[73] Where the relation of partnership does not exist, no damage will be allowed for the erection of a rival exchange in competition with that used together.[74] The lease of a "ticker" system and the guarantee of rent by a telegraph company will not be considered ultra vires.[75]

69. Provision against competition during existence of contract held not against public policy, being only incidental to main purpose of contract and, also, necessary restriction for faithful performance of contract. Wayne-Monroe Tel. Co. v. Ontario Tel. Co., 60 Misc. 435, 112 NYS 424. Main object lawful and beneficial to public. Id. Where contract only incidentally prevented competition and, hence, was not void as against public policy, sale of lines by one party to third company who was active competitor to other party did not render original contract void. Id.

70. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644.

NOTE. Right of telephone company to refuse connections with other companies: It is held in a recent case that although a telephone company is a common carrier of news it may refuse to furnish another company direct connection by means of its exchange, but that by furnishing such service to one it waived its right of refusal as to all. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644.

That a telephone company doing a public business is a common carrier of intelligence is now generally held to be the rule. As such it must serve the public impartially (Central Union Tel. Co. v. State, 118 Ind. 194, 19 NE 604, 10 Am. St. Rep. 114; State v. Nebraska Tel. Co., 17 Neb. 126, 22 NW 237), even though the complaining party is engaged in a competitive business (Chesapeake & P. Tel. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Tel. Co., 66 Md. 399, 7 A 402, 59 Am. St. Rep. 167; State v. Delaware, etc., Co., 47 F 633). These cases involve, however, only the question as to the right of the public to equal service, and not that of other companies to physical connection. Indeed the principal case seems to be squarely within the reasoning of the Express Cases, 171 U. S. 601, 29 Law. Ed. 805, which held that a railroad company is not a common carrier of express companies, and therefore need not supply to them the physical use of its properties.—From 7 Mich. L. R. 706.

71. Agreement and nature of business continuing. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644. Subject to discontinuation at any time with other party remitted to remedy of damages, unless business so impressed with public character and interest that court might say as matter of law that agreement could not be discontinued. Id. In latter case specific performance proper. Id. Where physical connection voluntarily made so that public acquires interest, voluntary act of parties is equivalent to waiver of primary right of independence, and imposes a public status not to be disregarded. Id. Where private property by consent invested with public interest, so that owner can no longer hold as private property but must be subject to rights of public. Id. Agreement of such fixed status as to be terminable only by retirement of one of parties from telephone business (Id.), though contract impressed with public character, or where subject-matter is impressed with public duty imposed by law, is enforcible by mandamus (Id.). Where two telephone systems were connected under working agreement and dispute arose as to compensation due, whereupon defendant refused to allow service, agreement could not be enforced by mandamus (Id.), there being another adequate remedy (Id.). Plaintiff's remedy was to pay compensation demanded under protest and sue for excess, he being under duty to obtain service for patrons. Id. Payment made would not be under threatened legal proceedings, mistake of law or facts, but with full knowledge of injustice in order to continue duty to public required by law. Id.

72. Contract between individuals owning and operating telephone systems which provides for physical connection of systems but stipulates for discontinuation after notice is not violative of public policy, patrons being bound to know that physical connection is liable to discontinuance. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644.

73. Where plaintiff owning rural telephone line with exchange in city of sixth class contracted for interchange of message with defendant on toll percentage basis, without obtaining permission to occupy streets (Const. §§ 163, 164), contract was severable and could be enforced as to business done without materially using streets. Bland v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 399, 109 SW 1180.

74. Where plaintiff and third person owned and operated telephone exchange as partners, toll lines owned individually being connected therewith, and defendant bought third person's interest, after which toll lines were controlled individually though long distance charges were shared equally and there was no agreement, defendant was not liable for damage to plaintiff's individual lines by erecting rival exchange in competition with firm exchange. Bishop v. Riddle [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 151.

75. Where corporation with usual powers to transmit telegrams, leased property and business of corporation transmitting sporting news, Board of Trade quotations, etc., by means of "tickers" and guaranteed pay-

§ 2. Construction and maintenance of lines, and injuries thereby.[76] See 10 C. L. 1848—The authority granted to permit the construction of a system carries with it the concomitant right to use suitable appliances in the erection and maintenance of such system,[77] and such appliances are not nuisances per se.[78] The construction and operation of lines is subject to reasonable police regulations by municipalities.[79] A city may prevent the unlawful obstruction of streets,[80] but cannot remove poles and wires which are authorized and do not interfere with the safety or convenience of travel,[81] and injunction will lie for interference with the property of an authorized system.[82] Where a telephone company unlawfully occupies streets, it cannot object that city, in ordering its removal, acted by resolution rather than by ordinance.[83] A landowner's consent[84] to the maintenance of a line on certain property does not authorize a change of the line and construction on another portion of the land.[85] Damages are recoverable for the unnecessary cutting of shade trees,[86] and injuries to trees may be punished by statute.[87] The wrongful invasion of property which is remedied before trial will authorize nominal damages.[88] An abutting owner may cause the removal of a pole placed at an improper place so as to subject him to spe-ment of rent reserved in similar lease by another corporation to third persons, contracts were not ultra vires. Midland Tel. Co. v. National Tel. News Co., 236 Ill. 476, 86 NE 107. All parties engaged in transmission of intelligence by electricity. Id. Guaranty of payment of rent not ultra vires, since it redounds to financial benefit of guarantor and advances objects and purposes for which corporation was created. Id. Where lease assigned but no provision to release lessee, latter remained liable for rent. Id.

79. Though city franchise unnecessary, construction and operation of telephone lines subject to municipal regulation. City of Texarkana v. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 734, 106 SW 915; Bishop v. Riddle [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 151. Telephone company must exercise right of entry under general powers conferred by state, subject to reasonable regulations of municipality. Village of Jonesville v. Southern Michigan Tel. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 968, 118 NW 736. Village under inherent police power may wholly exclude poles and wires from main business block of street, unless regulation would operate to prevent communication by company with persons whom it desired to reach and by law must serve. Id. Right not affected by fact that route designated by village would involve larger expenditure by telephone company. Id. Fact that route designated by village was less convenient would not affect right. Id. City may require permits for erection of poles in exercise of police power for benefit of public. Merritt v. Id. Rights of public in telephone system cannot prevent removal of pole located at improper place in street, causing special damage to abutting owner. Id. Whether use of street for erection of poles is reasonable, question of fact. Id. Where telephone pole so erected as to constitute an additional burden to property, property owner might either sue for damages or institute proceeding under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 893 et seq. Placing of pole not imposition of additional burden so as to change character of act from nuisance to appropriation of property. Id. Pole not permanent injury. Id. Complaint held to show damage to plaintiff by presence of telephone pole, in manner different from public at large, where pole obstruction to view, egress and ingress to plaintiff's business place. Id. Presumption that telephone pole was erected with city's consent, arising from absence of averments to contrary, held not to render complaint for abatement of nuisance bad. Id. Paragraph of complaint, sufficient to entitle complainant to injunction for removal of telephone pole improperly located, not bad for failure to ask damages. Id. No acquiescence in nuisance by grantor of plaintiff to preclude recovery, where location of telephone pole did not become nuisance until plaintiff erected building. Id. Plaintiff not bound to erect building with reference to pole, where no fixed legal rights for maintenance acquired by telephone company. Not acquired by grant or prescription. Id. Answer that pole was part of, and necessary to, operation of defendant's system was demurrable for failure to allege that precise location of pole was necessary. Id. Where pole was nuisance, evidence of effect of removal of same upon telephone company's business was properly excluded. Not proper defense, and question did not call for effect upon public at large. Id. Evidence of system, its extent and effect of change immaterial, since mere interference with business is no ground for removal of nuisance. Id. Number of wires attached to or connected with pole, immaterial. Id. Instruction held to sufficiently include question of egress and ingress. Id.

90. Davidson v. Utah Independent Tel. Co., 34 Utah, 249, 97 P 124. The degree of care must be proportionate to the danger to be reasonably apprehended from the location and nature of the appliances used. Greater danger, greater care. Id. Instruction in effect held to state correct duty. Id. Person passing along road crossed by telephone company need not anticipate danger at such crossings. Need not look for danger before passing under wire. Weaver v. Dawson County Mut. Tel. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 650.

91. Where poles maintained along edge of highway, they must be sound and serviceable. Burton v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [Ky.] 118 SW 287. Poles must be prevented from becoming dangerous, either by inherent defects or those occurring subsequently by decay. Id. Telephone company liable for injuries to traveler by falling of defective pole. Id. No ground for punitive damages where person injured by driving into telephone pole at side of road. Bevis v Vanceburg Tel. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 811. Complaint properly dismissed on demurrer where alleging in substance that owner of telephone pole permitted plaintiff to climb same to remove wire, that pole broke because of "rotten condition," injuring plaintiff, and that owner was liable to plaintiff because such pole was erected "without authority or right, and contrary to law," and permitted to remain in dangerous condition. Morris v. Rounsaville Bros. [Ga.] 64 SE 473. Only acts of negligence averred referred to persons using highway for lawful purposes. Id.

92. Evidence sufficient to establish fact that telephone company placed obstruction in road. South Texas. Tel. Co. v. Tabb [Tex Civ. App.] 114 SW 448. Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 698, permitting telephone company to use public roads, only permits use in such manner as not to incommode public. Id.

93. In action for injuries incurred by stepping into depression about new telephone pole, evidence held to justify finding that depression existed, where company dug hole for new pole. Merritt v. Kinloch Tel. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 19. Instruction as to duty of care in refilling excavations, where party injured by falling into depression made by new telephone pole, held to properly present issues of negligence charged in petition. Id.

94. Telephone company maintaining wires over navigable river must build same at height sufficient to permit passage of boats; must exercise reasonable care to prevent obstruction to navigation. Heinberger v. Missouri & K. Tel. Co., 133 Mo. App. 452, 113 SW 730. Not insurer against injury from fallen wires to travelers on river. Id. Evidence that personal injury was caused by collision of boat in which plaintiff was passenger with submerged wire presents prima facie case of negligence. Id. Immaterial that wire might not have been obstruction to larger boat, or one equipped with reversible engines. Id. Evidence of number of persons on boat and number drowned, admissible as part of res gestae. Id. Negligence of telephone company held for jury. Id. Complaint in action against telephone of a patron.[95] The companies are entitled to a reasonable time in which to make repairs after notice of the defect,[96] and it is essential that the negligence complained of be the proximate cause of the injury.[97] Disregard of statutes [98] or ordinances,[99] as to the maintenance of wires, establishes prima facie negligence.

§ 3. Telegraph messages. A. Duty and care.[1]—See 10 C. L. 1843—A telegraph company is engaged in a quasi public service,[2] and must serve the public without discrimination,[3] and conduct its business and the duties incident thereto with reasonable diligence and due care.[4] Messages to which there is no lawful objection company for negligence in maintenance of wires, fatally defective where negligence not charged in general terms and no facts averred sufficient to compel inference of negligence as would constitute proximate cause of injuries sustained. Cumberland Tel. § T. Co. v. Pierson, 170 Ind. 543, 84 NE 1088. Complaint held to seek recovery upon breach of contract formed by company's acceptance of franchise ordinance, but insufficiently showing existence of ordinance or negligent breach of terms. Id. Ordinance defectively pleaded where averment merely embodied pleader's conclusion as to substance and effect. Id. Where telephone company and city, being joint tort feasors, were jointly and severally liable for store burned, plaintiff could sue jointly and dismiss or discontinue as to either, and afterward take nonsuit as to other without releasing liability of either or barring another action against either for same cause. Staunton Mut. Tel. Co. v. Buchanan, 108 Va. 810, 62 SE 928. Evidence held to sustain verdict for plaintiff, where store burned and fire started by negligent maintenance of telephone wires. Id. Whether wire so located as to incommode public presents question for jury. South Texas Tel. Co. v. Tabb [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 448. Instruction predicated upon theory that unprotected guy wire was upon street, when claimed to be upon portion where sidewalk would have been, not erroneous since "street" includes sidewalk. Entire street between lot line open to travel. Davidson v. Utah Independent Tel. Co., 34 Utah, 249, 97 P 124. See, also, Electricity, 11 C. L. 1185.

95. Telephone company placing instrument in house of patron must exercise care of prudent man under like circumstances. Southern Tel. & T. Co. v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 418. Where reasonable grounds to apprehend that lightning will be conducted into house, and known devices exist for arresting same, telephone company must exercise due care in maintaining approved lightning arresters as will prevent accidents. Id. Evidence held to justify recovery for injuries by lightning conducted into house because of telephone company's failure to provide proper lightning arresters. Id. Instruction as to lightning arrester properly refused when ignoring evidence. Id.

96. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Pierson, 170 Ind. 543, 84 NE 1088. Averment that defect had existed "number of days or weeks" is in effect charge of number of days, insufficient to charge notice of defect and lapse of reasonable time. Id.

97. Where pole maintained without authority was knocked down in severe windstorm, and telephone company did not know or could not have known of accident by exercise of reasonable diligence, it was not liable to traveler injured by running over same. Burton v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [Ky.] 118 SW 287. Maintenance without authority not proximate cause. Id. Allegation that plaintiff drove against and was caught by slackened wire and thrown from wagon, insufficient for failing to show that being caught by wire caused plaintiff to be thrown. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Pierson, 170 Ind. 543, 84 NE 1088.

98. Telephone company negligent where wires placed only 13 feet above road crossing and permitted to sag until they interfere with legitimate travel, where Cobbey's St. 1907, § 11963 required wires to be 20 feet above road crossings. Weaver v. Dawson County Mut. Tel. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 650. Statute refers to private as well as public roads. Id.

99. In action against street railway and telephone company for injuries resulting from wires, an averment in the complaint that the telephone company placed wires in contravention of ordinances of city was sufficient to permit introduction of evidence of such ordinances. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Myane [Ark.] 111 SW 987. Action for injury from live wire resulting from street car-trolley pole breaking overhead telephone wire. Id.

4. Halsted v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 193 N. Y. 293, 85 NE 1078. Owes duty to serve general public with due care. Stewart, Morehead & Co. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 131 Ga. 31, 61 SE 1045. Public utility corporations should be required to furnish prompt and efficient service, reasonably adequate to must be accepted.[5] A contract is implied from the acceptance of a message for delivery [6] and, where a message in a foreign language is accepted for delivery in a foreign country, the company contracts to have agents who can intelligently receive and deliver such message.[7] Liability for the failure to furnish market reports contracted for is based upon breach of contract.[8] The state in the exercise of its police power may prescribe reasonable regulations for the conduct of the business of telegraph companies within its jurisdiction.[9]

Reasonable regulations by the company may be enforced [10] and conditions as to reasonable office hours,[11] stipulations as to the presentation of claims,[12] and life meet just demands of public. Hildreth v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 820. Duty to send messages with reasonable dispatch from nature of business. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Olivarre [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 930. Telegraph company must give correct names of offices on line when information is sought. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hawkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 539.

5. When presented during office hours on tender of usual charges. Cordell v. Western Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 402, 63 SE 71. Refusal to transmit an actionable tort. Id. No defense to refusal to accept and transmit messages that messages were not properly addressed, when obvious that they were to be sent to two places specified below body of messages sense of which was easily descernible. Id. Objection that messages were not in proper form insufficient to excuse failure to receive, where meaning was clear, and evidence failed to show semblance of excuse for operator's refusal to send. Id. Objection that messages were not signed immaterial where nothing indicating any unlawful purpose in same. Id. Operator may refuse obscene and slanderous messages or the like. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lillard [Ark.] 110 SW 1035. Message "No fire in depot. Is it agent's or passenger's place to make one? Wire answer," held proper. Id.

NOTE. Right to refuse telegraph message because of its character: While a telegraph company is liable in damages for the transmission of a message libelous upon its face (Peterson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 65 Minn. 18, 67 NW 646; 33 L. R. A. 302; Id. 72 Minn. 41, 74 NW 1022, 71 Am. St. Rep. 461, 40 L. R. A. 661; Id. 75 Minn. 368, 77 NW 985; 74 Am. St. Rep. 502, 43 L. R. A. 581; Great Northern Tel. Co. v. Archambault, 30 Lower Can. Jur. 221; Dominion Tel. Co. v. Silver, 10 Can. Sup. Ct. 238; Whitfield v. South Eastern R. Co., El. Bl. & El. 115), although there may be some question as to whether such transmission constitutes a publication (Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cashman [C. C. A.] 149 F 367, 9 L. R. A. [N. S.] 140), no such liability exists where the libelous character of the message is not manifest although it may in fact be libel (Stockham v. Western Union Tel. Co., 10 Kan. App. 580, 63 P 658; Nye v. Western Union Tel. Co., 104 F 628). It follows that, while a telegraph company is bound, as a common carrier, to transmit all proper messages delivered to it for that purpose (Peterson v. Western Union Tel. Co., supra), it is its right and duty to refuse a message which upon its face is clearly libelous or obscene (Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ferguson, 57 Ind. 495; Nye v. Western Union Tel. Co., supra; Gray v. Western Union Tel. Co., 87 Ga. 350, 13 SE 562, 27 Am. St. Rep. 259, 14 L. R. A. 95; Peterson v. Western Union Tel. Co., supra). The company is not, however, a censor of public morals and may not go behind the language used in the message to inquire into the motives of the sender (Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ferguson, supra), nor may it refuse to transmit a message expressed in proper language simply because it is against the interest of an employe to do so (Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lillard [Ark.] 110 SW 1035, 17 L. R. A. [N. S.] 836).—Adapted from 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 836.

10. However strictly held to general obligation, telegraph company may prescribe reasonable rules and regulations for conduct of its business and is entitled to protection from incidental hazards of operation. Halsted v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 193 N. Y. 293, 85 NE 10, 78.

11. May prescribe reasonable office hours. Suttle v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 480, 62 SE 593; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gillis [Ark.] 117 SW 749. Reasonableness of rule relative to office hours is for court. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gillis [Ark.] 117 SW 749. Where reasonable office hours fixed, company owes no duty to accept messages for transmission or to deliver after such hours. Starkey v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 853.

12. Stipulation requiring claims to be presented within 60 days, valid. Sykes v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 177. Right of recovery barred though company guilty of inexcusable negligence. Id. Stipulation reasonable and may be legally assented to. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Moss & Co., 5 Ga. App. 503, 63 SE 590. Claim presented should not only be in writing, but message for nonperformance or nondelivery or miscarriage for which damages are claimed must be identified, negligence complained of must be stated, and telegraph company should be fairly informed of nature and extent of plaintiff's demands. Id. Mere notice that claim will be made not compliance with stipulation to present claim. Id. Evidence of claim too vague and indefinite to put defendant upon inquiry and, also, insufficient where assurance that claim would be filed. Id. Filing of suit and service thereon within 60 days sufficient as presentation of claim if averments of petition conditions,[13] have been upheld. Such conditions are subject to waiver[14] and are binding only as to those who assent thereto by using the company's blank,[15] though it has been held that a telegraph operator who writes a message on the company's blank at the sender's request is the sender's agent and the latter is bound by the terms of the contract.[16] Where a sender asked the operator to write a message, not knowing how the name of the terminal office was spelled, the mistake of the operator in the address was held impatable to the company.[17]

Transmission. See 10 C. L. 1844—Messages must be promptly transmitted.[18] A company is not bound to transmit beyond its own lines[19] but must deliver to a connecting carrier,[20] and such connecting company is bound to receive and transmit the message upon compliance with reasonable terms and regulations.[21] A company was not liable for nontransmission of a message when offered over the telephone, and there was no proof that a written message would have been refused.[22] The company is not an insurer in the transmission of a message[23] but has been held liable for mistakes.[24] Stipulations limiting the company's liability by requiring the message to be repeated have been upheld.[25] sufficiently inform defendant of identity, nature and extent of claim. Id. Claim limited to actual damages and insufficient to authorize mental anguish. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Nelson [Ark.] 111 SW 274. Claim to company of loss of $75 "besides all mental worry and inconvenience" insufficient to authorize recovery for mental anguish. Id.

13. See post, Transmission, Delivery.

14. Company may waive condition as to reasonable office hours. Suttle v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 480, 62 SE 593. Company receiving and agreeing to deliver message at time not within office hours is under legal duty to do so. Special undertaking constitutes waiver of benefit of office hours. Id.

15. Stipulation that messages must be presented in writing at transmitting office is binding on those who assent thereto by use of blank. Mines v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 236. Operator receiving message for transmission in violation of requirement on message blank that same be presented in writing does not become the agent of sender who has no notice of such regulation. Id. No presumption that public dealing with company has notice of stipulations. Id.

16. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Receiving operator is sender's agent in writing body of message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Haukins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 539.

17. Duty of company to supply correct name. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Haukins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 539. Rules required operator to aid in avoiding errors. Id. 22. Not required to accept and send verbal message. Rich v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 93.

23. Telegraph company may be likened to common carrier, but, unlike common carrier, is not insurer in transmission of message. Halsted v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 193 N. Y. 293, 85 NE 1078.

24. Company responsible for unrepeated message where error in transmission causing change in middle initial of sender. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Sunset Const. Co. [Tex.] 114 SW 98, afd. on rehearing [Tex.] 116 SW 797. Error in transmission whereby middle initial of name was changed at least ordinary, if not gross, negligence. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Sunset Const. Co. [Tex.] 114 SW 98. Where telegraph company made mistake in transmitting message as to price of goods resulting in purchase, buyer was entitled to recover loss sustained. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lyons [Miss.] 47 S 344. Sender of telegram acting on faith of message negligently altered in transmission may maintain an action in tort for the damage for telegraph company's breach of duty. Stewart, Morehead & Co. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 131 Ga. 31, 61 SE 1045. Purchase of goods at enlarged price by sendee, where sender refused to ratify act, and telegraph company liable for damage proximately resulting. Id.

25. Company may by contract limit its liability for mistakes, delays or nondelivery caused by negligence of servants if not gross. Halsted v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 193 N. Y. 293, 85 NE 1078. Stipulation limiting company's liability for unrepeated message is binding in absence of willful misconduct or gross negligence. Wheelock v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 197 Mass. 119, 83 NE 313. Provision in contract that message should be repeated, and limiting liability in case of unrepeated messages, or, unless specially insured, to price of sending, is reasonable. Not necessary to use word "negligence" in such provision. Halsted v. Postal Tel. Cable Co. 193 N. Y. 293, 85 NE 1078. Where receiver of message has, by special request,

Delivery.[See 10 C. L. 1844]—The acceptance and transmission of the message carries the obligation of prompt delivery,[26] and the company must use reasonable diligence to find the addressee.[27] Reasonable rules limiting the territory in which messages are delivered free may be prescribed,[28] and extra compensation may be required when the addressee lives beyond such limits.[29]

Delivery to others for addressee.[See 10 C. L. 1645]

Spurious messages.[See 6 C. L. 1672]

(§ 3) B. Injury and damages.[30] Conflict of laws.[See 10 C. L. 1845]—The place of contract for the transmission of a telegram to another state is the place where procured it to be sent by telegraph, he becomes bound by any reasonable contract made with the telegraph company for its transmission, by sender. Receiver is limited in claim for damages for loss where stipulations for repetition or insurance of message have not been availed of, to amount stipulated in contract. Id. Where no willful misconduct, mere error in transmission of message would not warrant jury in finding of more than ordinary negligence. Id. Evidence insufficient to establish gross negligence where telegram as to price of cloth at "three eighty" was changed by mistake to "three eighth." Id. Provision that sender have message repeated "to guard against mistakes or delays" is valid, and not against public policy. Box v. Postal Tel. Cable Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 138. Regulation should be construed to refer to mistakes and delays as could be corrected and avoided by repetition and comparison. Id. Failure to have message repeated not to relieve company for negligent delay on transmission. Id. Provision does not relieve company from duty to send unrepeated message with reasonable promptness. Id. Company under obligation to send message with reasonable promptness for regular rate when accepted and rate paid. Id. No recovery for delay in delivery of unrepeated message sent to "H. J. Monsees" which was delivered addressed to "H. J. Monse" where blank contained stipulation exempting company from liability. Monsees v. Western Union Tel. Co., 127 App. Div. 289, 111 NYS 53. Provision in contract relieving telegraph company for liability for delay in delivery of nonrepeated message is void as contrary to public policy. Fox v. Postal Tel. Cable Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 399 Also violative of St. 1898, § 1778, imposing liability for damages occasioned by failure or negligence of servants in receiving, copying, transmitting, or delivering telegrams. Id.

34. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been within contemplation of parties when making contract, as probable result of breach. Id.; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Witt, 33 Ky. L. R. 685, 110 SW 889; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024; Hildreth v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 820; Sullivan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 129. Failure to deliver message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Kibble [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 643. Negligent delay of telegram must be proximate cause of injury. Hauser v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 503. Entitled to damages proximately resulting from wrongful refusal to receive message for transmission. Cordell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 402, 63 SE 71. Negligence in delaying delivery of message, whereby addressee missed two trains, proximate cause of his failure to arrive at funeral, though train on which he traveled was delayed by accident. Sutton v. Western Union Tel. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 577, 110 SW 874. Telegraph company's negligence held proximate cause of failure to give theatrical performance, where performance canceled on information of station agent that troupe was not on train, but message giving contrary information was not delivered. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Austlet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 624. Company liable for damages sustained by sender and wife from inclement weather as proximate result of failure to deliver message, whereby no one to meet sender and wife at destination. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 226. In action to recover damages for failure to properly transmit and deliver message, where punitive damages are not recoverable, plaintiff may recover compensation for injury received. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams [C. C. A.] 163 F 513. Evidence insufficient to show pecuniary injury from failure to transmit and deliver "death" message. Id. Where telegraph company contracted to furnish correct market reports but failed to do so, measure of damages to plaintiff relying on same was difference between incorrect price and correct price on market when price furnished. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bradford [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 686. Measure of damages against telegraph company for deviating from terms of message correctly reporting state of market for particular article, which receiver of message is induced by it to send forward for sale, is difference between actual state of market and terms of message as erroneously transmitted, providing plaintiff's actual loss amounts to that much. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Truitt, 5 Ga. App. 809, 63 SE 934. Plaintiff's duty to reship cotton seed where cost of shipping would be less than $250 diminution by sale at original point shipped. Could not dispose at expense of telegraph company. Id. Damages are ordinarily given as compensation for actual injury done. Civ. Code 1895, § 3905. Id. Where message authorized agent to purchase 200 bales of cotton at 9⅛ cents and was delivered reading 9¼ cents, but agent purchased 244 bales, company was liable for value of 200 bales at ⅛ cent per pound. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McCants [Miss.] 46 S 535. Telegraph company liable to sender for loss sustained where delay in delivery of message accepting offer results in failure of sale. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hoyt [Ark.] 115 SW 941. Where father telegraphed superintendent, where son attended school, in regard to son's condition and latter responded "Son very well," which message was altered in transmission to read "son very ill," plaintiff could recover for negligence causing unnecessary expense of trip to school. Duncan v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 552. Award of $345 for inconvenience and annoyance of hack ride for 20 miles, on failure to deliver telegram, excessive. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Collins [Ala.] 47 S 61.

35. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Special damages not recoverable where no notice. Lewin-Cole Commission Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 313. Where import of telegram is not apparent from its terms or made known to the operator receiving the same, no damages are recoverable beyond price paid for services. Holler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 336, 63 SE 92. Where telegraph message addressed to married man alone, not disclosing any interest of wife in subject-matter, telegraph company is not liable for mental anguish of wife caused by inability to attend funeral of sister. Id. Company receiving telegram is bound to take notice of such facts as are brought to its attention by telegram in connection with all known circumstances. Sullivan v. Western Union been a violation of the contract or a breach of duty, the aggrieved party is in any event entitled to nominal damages,[36] but speculative damages are not recoverable.[37] The amount paid by the sender for the transmission of the telegram is not special damages.[38] The person injured should use ordinary care to minimize the damages resulting.[39]

Tel. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 129. Damages caused by incurring unnecessary expense of shipping outfit, properly recoverable where telegram notifying party of shipment was promptly countermanded, but countermand was not delivered, since both telegrams were sufficient to inform defendant of damages which would ensue. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Sunset Const. Co. [Tex.] 114 SW 98. Evidence that sender knew by letter that sender and sick wife were to arrive, that message was expected, and that suitable conveyance was prepared, held competent under petition. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 226. Message "meet us" notice, and operator also informed that wife was sick. Id. Notice of condition of weather. Id. Where cypher message delivered with no explanation as to importance, telegraph company is liable for nominal damage in incorrectly transmitting, or at most for sum paid for sending. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024. Where message sufficiently indicates importance, though couched in unusual, abbreviated, or technical language, recovery will not be limited to nominal damages. Where message relates to business transaction, so that pecuniary loss will probably result from negligence in transmission or delivery. Id. Company liable if loss sustained should have been contemplated as probable and proximate result of negligence. Not essential that particular loss was contemplated, but as may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated. Id. Not essential that message disclose all details of transaction or business intended. Id. Company liable for failure to send message accurately and promptly, where notice of importance is communicated from extrinsic facts, same as notified by message. Id. Message "Close" in answer to "Offer 650 Tampa Nipe Bay, answer quick," clearly showed importance, and that pecuniary loss would result if not promptly and correctly transmitted. Id. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Olivarri [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 930. Telegram in foreign language not in same category as cipher messages. In order to defend on lack of notice of importance of telegrams, company must show that language would not convey notice of emergency and relationship of parties. Id. Even if defense, burden of proving lack of knowledge of importance of telegram rests upon telegraph company. Proof that clerk was ignorant of language used, insufficient, where clerk was not operator and nothing to show operator as unacquainted with same. Id.

36. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789; Sullivan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 129. No proof to support more than recovery for nominal damages. Tully v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 Ill. App. 312. Complaint held to show damages not naturally consequent from negligence in failure to deliver message, on demurrer. Trigg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 4 Ga. App. 416, 61 SE 855. Rambling about town by sender, a woman in delicate condition, on failure to meet her husband, cause of plaintiff's injuries rather than nondelivery of message. Id. On failure to deliver message regarding funeral arrangements of deceased brother, sender could at least recover nominal damages. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349.

37. Telegraph company failing to deliver telegram not liable for profits which sender who had opportunity to make proposed contract, might have made. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Adams Mach. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 412. Telegraph company not liable for damages where plaintiff only lost opportunity to make advantageous contract by error message. Error causing award of bid to another contractor. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Webb [Miss.] 48 S 408. Failure to deliver a message, whereby a contract was not consummated, will only entitle sender to nominal damages. James v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Ark.] 111 SW 276. Mistake in transmission, whereby cotton purchased for January instead of July delivery, but contract more advantageous. Id. Not liable for damages not contemplated by contract. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Sunset Const. Co. [Tex.] 114 SW 98. Where contractor shipped outfit because of company's negligence in failing to deliver message, company was not liable for profits which might have been made, since no notice communicated by either message or parties. Id. Damages not to be disallowed as speculative because party can only state amount approximately. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Austlet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 624. Sufficient, if from proximate estimate of witnesses satisfactory conclusion can be reached. Id. Plaintiff's damages not so speculative as to defeat recovery, where theatrical performance was prevented by failure to deliver message, and evidence showed $170 of tickets sold and paid for, $167 worth ordered, and where opinion of manager was that admissions would be near $600, of which plaintiff's share would be thirty per cent, minus $15 for lighting. Id.

39. Civ. Code 1895, § 3802. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Truitt, 5 Ga. App. 809, 63 SE 934. Complaint held to show injury caused by plaintiff's negligence rather than as result of negligent failure to deliver message. Trigg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 4 Ga. App. 416, 61 SE 855. Question of contributory negligence one of fact. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 226; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Witt, 33 Ky. L. R. 685, 110 SW 889. Where telegram received too late for funeral or to Mental anguish.[See 10 C. L. 1848]—Where the doctrine is recognized,[40] mental anguish is defined as intense mental suffering [41] rather than annoyance or regret,[42] and such damages must naturally and proximately result from the breach of contract or neglect of duty.[43] The recovery is ordinarily limited to certain degrees of have same postponed, sender was not guilty of not attempting to minimize damages in failing to do such acts. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Witt, 33 Ky. L. R. 685, 110 SW 889. Where message negligently altered in transmission so that addressee, a master, understood he was not authorized to close charter offered, it was not duty of addressee to ascertain correctness of message received. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024.

40. Recovery permitted. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Witt, 33 Ky. L. R. 685, 110 SW 889; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789; Foreman v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Iowa] 116 NW 724. Damages for mental anguish not recoverable. Duncan v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 552; Enloe v. Western Union Tel. Co., 5 Ga. App. 502, 63 SE 590.

41, 42. Johnson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 235, 62 SE 244.

43. Sender may recover for mental anguish proximately caused by failure to deliver message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. Delayed telegram must have announced event as sickness or death. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Mental suffering caused by absence of one whose presence would be consoling in time of grief is subject of recovery. Id. Mental anguish, unaccompanied by physical injury, ground for damages. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. Where physical injury, mental suffering cannot be dissociated from physical pain, and where latter is found former is implied. Id. Where right of recovery of anything else on contract recovery may be had in addition for mental anguish. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Physical and mental suffering proximate result of failure to deliver message, where message notified defendant that plaintiff was hurt and that sendee was plaintiff's mother necessitating prompt delivery. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Beal [Ala.] 48 S 676. Negligence of telegraph company, proximate result of wife's mental anguish where company after notice of urgency of message delayed delivery. Notice of escape from wreck, though husband in fact not entirely unhurt. Suttle v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 480, 62 SE 593. Where plaintiff informed of serious illness of son telegraphed that he would arrive on certain train, failure to deliver subsequent message concerning continued condition of son could not have caused mental anguish, when no proof that such message if delivered would have caused change in plaintiff's plans. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Leland [Ala.] 47 S 62. Telegraph company negligently delaying transmission of money, whereby corpse of plaintiff was delayed, is liable for mental anguish and humiliation arising because of plaintiff's failure to make prompt burial, and to see remains. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Quigley [Ky.] 112 SW 897. Damages recoverable where, because of delay in delivering death message to mother, no opportunity was afforded to attend funeral or have body brought home. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Arant [Ark.] 115 SW 136. Apprehension or fear that something will happen as result of delay in delivering telegram, which in fact does not happen, not basis of recovery. Where message delayed and body of dead wife shipped day late, no recovery permissible for fear that remains would not be shipped, would be buried, etc. Hart v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 638. Where message warned addressee to remain away from city infected with scarlet fever, mental anguish suffered because of exposure to desease for 18 hours was natural and probable result of delay in delivery and proper element of damages, though after events showed no danger. Rich v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 93. Damages for mental anguish recoverable where message to prepare burial for child was not transmitted, and plaintiff on arriving was not met by friends or relatives, no preparation having been made. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crowley [Ala.] 48 S 381. Damages for mental suffering only recoverable for time between which relatives could have arrived and actually did arrive. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 5553. Measure of damage for failure to deliver message requesting husband to attend sick children, is mental anguish of wife arising from husband's absence. Damages for increase and prolongation of anguish not recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steele [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 546. Where person suffered mental anguish while anticipating arrival of relatives to fever stricken city and failure of telegraph company to send warning message merely prolonged anxiety, damages were not recoverable. Rich v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 93. Damages for mental suffering caused by disappointment in not being met at train and nausea caused by discomfort in having to carry child and baggage from train to waiting room, without other damage, not recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Howle [Ala.] 47 S 341. Mental anguish damages recoverable where sender deprived of presence of addressee during burial of brother, but mental anguish arising from death not to be confounded with that resulting from company's negligence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Damages because plaintiff saw brother's body after decomposition had advanced so that features could hardly be recognized, not proper element. Wood v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. $750 recovery for failure to deliver death message, excessive by $350 where view of remains would afford little consolance, decomposition having set in at once. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Rhine relationship,[44] and usually notice of the importance of the message must be communicated.[45] The question of the existence of mental anguish is usually for the [Ark.] 117 SW 1069. $200 not excessive where, by failure to promptly transmit money, corpse of daughter was delayed in burial, etc. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Quigley [Ky.] 112 SW 897.

44. Parties must be closely related. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Brothers within degree. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Right to recover limited to cases of nearest relationship. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams [Ky.] 112 SW 657. Being deprived of receiving or bestowing the ministrations of husband or wife, father, mother, brother, sister, grandparent, and grandchild, in great sorrows of life and being deprived of their funeral rites, produces in every normal man and woman distress and severe pain, constituting mental anguish within statute. Johnson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 235, 62 SE 244. Deprivation only produces annoyance, regret, or vexation when the relations of uncle and aunt, nephew and niece, or cousins are considered. Id. No presumption of mental anguish as to first cousins. Id. Must be relation of parent and child, husband and wife, sister and brother, or grandparent and grandchild. Lee v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 55.

45. Information must be imparted by message itself, by facts within its knowledge, or brought to its attention at time of reading message. Suttle v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 480, 62 SE 593. Telegraph company cannot disregard knowledge of facts which are apparent and plead its own ignorance as excusing the failure to deliver a message. Id. Mutual anguish damages recoverable where telegraph company fully notified of urgency of message and agreed to deliver same day. Id. Where husband sought to notify wife of escape from wreck, though in fact having sustained injuries. Id. Message to husband regarding serious illness of child held to give notice that mental anguish would result from agent's failure to receive for transmission. Cordell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 402, 63 SE 71. Damages not recoverable unless telegraph company notified of importance of telegram, or by language put on inquiry. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Olivarri [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 930. Message that twins were born but would probably not live, with request to send immediately, sufficient to put telegraph company on inquiry and render company liable for mental anguish. Id. Message on its face relating to sickness and death, sufficient notice of importance. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shofner [Ark.] 112 SW 751. Telegraph company chargeable with notice of relationship by terms of message. Chargeable with notice of such purposes as may reasonably be inferred from language used on connection with subject-matter. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hankins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 543; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steele [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 546. Presumption of mental anguish when actual notice of near blood relationship. Father and son. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hankins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 543. Telegraph company liable where message notified of expected death of sender's wife, and because of delay son (addressee) did not arrive. Id. Message to "W. O. Steele," signed "Mrs. W. O. Steele," reasonably sufficient to indicate latter as wife of former, or to put company upon inquiry. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steele [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 546. Duty of telegraph company to inquire as to nature of message exists only where general nature of message plainly disclosed by terms or otherwise, as where collateral fact, such as relationship, is not shown. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Kibble [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 643. No duty to inquire purpose of message "Come at once." Id. Message "Come at once" insufficient to inform telegraph company that mental distress would probably result from failure to promptly transmit. Id. Where message relates to serious illness or death of person, telegraph company is bound to take notice that addressee has interest in subject of message (Fass v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 235), and that, in case of near relative, addressee will probably respond to message and set out to attend sick bedside or funeral at once (Id.). Message "Am feeling better; don't come," sent to wife in reply to her inquiry, puts telegraph company on notice that wife will probably suffer mental anguish on failure to receive message. Id. Some damage to be anticipated from failure to deliver death message, and not necessary that company be advised of exact damage. Foreman v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Iowa] 116 NW 724. Not necessary that telegraph company have notice of special relations of affection and friendship, where death message is sent. Question is of presumption of pain rather than notice. Id. Where relationship is by affinity and no facts are either pleaded or proved, showing any special friendship or affection, no presumption of pain or suffering should arise. Id. Suffering from failure to deliver message relating to death of near relative is presumed and damages follow as ordinary and natural sequence. Id. Damages recoverable by sender of telegram because of failure of father to attend funeral, when message not delivered. Not necessary that company have notice that sender would suffer. Id. In action for delay in delivering message, whereby sendee with relatives was not prevented from arriving at fever stricken city, sendee could not recover mental anguish damages because of fear for relatives in absence of notice to company of relationship, whereby company could reasonably contemplate that such anguish would be caused by its delay. Rich v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 93. Because of peculiar duties of telegraph company, sending of telegram shows that expedition is required, and it is unnecessary in order to recover for delay in delivery that circumstances requiring promptness be brought to company's knowledge, or even that message be unintelligible on its face. Western Union Tel.

jury.[46] Legislative enactments imposing liability for mental anguish damages have been held constitutional.[47]

Exemplary damages.[See 10 C. L. 1847]—In a proper case punitive damages are recoverable,[48] but such damages are not recoverable for breach of contract to promptly deliver messages.[49]

(§ 3) C. Procedure.[50]—[See 10 C. L. 1848]—The right to sue may be either in the sender[51] or the sendee,[52] and may be either on the contract[53] or for the breach of duty.[54] If on contract, the right of the sendee to sue is based on the proposition that the contract is made between the sender and the company for the benefit of sendee,[55] but in tort the sendee sues as the aggrieved party.[56] Suit may also be

Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Notice of relationship immaterial where telegram "John badly hurt; wants to see you" showed urgency of prompt transmission; charged with notice of relationship and that physical pain and suffering would naturally result from failure to deliver. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Beal [Ala.] 48 S 676. Death message "Come at once," notice of relationship of parties, and that mental anguish would probably result where surnames of decedent, sender, and addressee, identical. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712.

46. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. To authorize mental anguish damages, there need be no direct evidence of pain, such as expressions or exclamations of suffering, but jury may apply their own knowledge of human nature and experience to attendant facts and circumstances. Id. See, also, post, § 3c, Procedure.

47. Acts Ark. March 7, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 123, No. 68; Kirby's Dig. § 7947), providing that telegraph companies be liable for mental anguish or suffering on receiving, transmitting or delivering messages, is not unconstitutional, as depriving telegraph companies of equal protection of laws. Ivy v. Western Union Tel. Co., 165 F 371. Based upon reasonable classification. Id. Not unconstitutional as interference with interstate commerce, because applying incidentally to contracts for transmission of interstate messages. Id. Telegraph company being foreign corporation on doing business within state is subject to changes in laws, and such change is not unconstitutional impairment of contract. Where statute passed imposing damages for mental anguish. Id. Status of company not affected by acceptance of Act Cong. July 24, 1866, c. 230, 14 Stat. 221 (Rev. St. § 5263, et seq.; U. S. Comp. 48. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Punitive damages recoverable where telegram, notifying grandmother to prepare grave for child, disclosed on its face its importance, and was not transmitted until receiving office called for same following day, though wires open for sending. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crowley [Ala.] 48 S 381. Punitive damages recoverable where message inquiring regarding sick mother's condition was delivered to company at 1 P. M., received at 7 P. M., given to messenger for delivery at 9 P. M., taken to wrong person, and then not delivered until next morning when addressee lived within 2 blocks of receiving office. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hiller [Miss.] 47 S 377. Evidence insufficient to show willful or wanton neglect of duty warranting punitive damages in failing to deliver message, where undisputed evidence of effort to deliver and extraordinary circumstances of difficulty attending conduct of defendant's business at that time. Oxner v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 63 SE 545. Delayed delivery of telegram regarding mother's condition held not such wanton and gross negligence as to warrant punitive damages for $1,000. Excessive by $500. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hiller [Miss.] 47 S 377.

51. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Where sender of message is actual contracting party and has interest in transmission of message, he has benefit conferred in message that telegraph company will be held to have contracted in regard to extent notified either by message or extrinsic information. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hankins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 543. Because telegraph company owes contractural duty to sender to receive and deliver message, and because sender is entitled by contract to such benefit as his interest is disclosed, sender can recover for injury which would naturally result from delay or nondelivery of message. Action for delay in delivering telegram is upon contract within Ky. St. 1903, § 2515, providing limitations of five years. Id. Damages for failure or delay in delivering telegram not injurious to person within Ky. St. 1903, § 2515, prescribing limitation of one year. Id.

54. Duty to promptly deliver, statutory. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Telegraph company's failure to deliver death message is founded on breach of common-law duty, independent of contract. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653.

55. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789.

56. Action for breach of telegraph company's statutory duty to promptly deliver brought by a person whose name appears upon the message as the beneficiary, though neither sender nor sendee,[57] and the undisclosed principal may sue.[58]

The complaint should sufficiently set forth essential elements of the cause of action such as ownership of the telegraph line,[59] proximate cause of the injury,[60] damages,[61] notice,[62] and the like.[63] The plaintiff has the burden of proving every is in effect one for negligence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Sendee of message may recover damages for negligent delay of telegram when company has notice of benefit to sendee, either where message on face for benefit of sendee or company has knowledge. Holler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 336, 63 SE 92. Under statute, sendee sues as aggrieved party. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789.

57. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Person not mentioned in message, or whose interest is not communicated to company cannot recover damages for negligent delay of message. Holler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 336, 63 SE 92.

58. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. May sue on contract made by agent. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Rule applies where message is sent by agent for principal to third person. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Walker [Ala.] 48 S 102. Though plaintiff requested another to send telegram, if latter acted independently and not as agent, relationship was not established so as to entitle plaintiff to recovery. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Where plaintiff's relation to contract not disclosed to company and not apparent from message, being sent by undisclosed agent, damages for mental suffering caused by failure of relatives to attend funeral were not recoverable. Id. Where telegram regarding brother's illness was not sent to daughter at latter's request she was not party to contract entitling her to maintain action for breach in delivery. Heathcoat v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Ala.] 47 S 139. Fact that telegram regarding brother's illness was sent to daughter by father does not of itself show agency of sender, entitling addressee to maintain action for breach of contract to deliver it. Id. Where sender of telegram was not addressee's agent, there could be no ratification so as to entitle addressee to maintain action for breach of contract. Id. Message "Meet me at Montgomery, don't fail" discloses no relation between sender and addressee, mutual obligations or physical condition of sender, and, where no other allegations of notice to company, order of trial court limiting damages to cost of telegrams and expenses of plaintiff caused by delay was proper. Hildreth v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 820. Where person interested in telegram is undisclosed principal of both sender and sendee, he may recover. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Potts [Tenn.] 113 SW 789. Undisclosed principal of both sender and sendee of death message cannot recover damages for mental anguish, measure of recovery being only damages as apparent sender could recover the cost of telegram. Id.

59. Allegation that telegram was delivered to defendant at B. for transmission to R. is a clear and distinct allegation that defendant was owner of telegraph line between such points. Willis v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 11.

60. In action for negligent transmission of message, allegation that the offered charter would have been closed and voyage performed, if message transmitted as delivered to company, was proper to show proximate cause of injury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024.

61. Complaint insufficient to present damages consequent upon telegraph company's failure to deliver message, sustainable for nominal damages only, and defect not remedied by conclusions pleaded. Trigg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 4 Ga. App. 416, 61 SE 855. Petition alleging sending of message to telegraph office, that company refused message and ejected them from office, but failing to allege damages, held insufficient on demurrer, there being no contract relation, and if considered in tort, right of action would inhere in parties sent to send message. Enloe v. Western Union Tel. Co., 5 Ga. App. 502, 63 SE 590. In order to affect telegraph company with liability for injury arising out of special circumstance, notice of such circumstance must be brought home to the defendant by pleading and proof. Clio Gin Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 426. Where telegram delayed and plaintiff showed that it might have purchased articles at cost, slightly in excess of telegraphed price, which was permissible, and thus have saved storage charges, the loss of storage charges was of class of special damages which were not recoverable unless alleged and proved that defendant had knowledge at time of filing of telegram. Id. Where averred in complaint as paid, proof and recovery of sum paid for transmission are authorized under general sum claimed as damages. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. Amount paid by sender of telegram for transmission not being special damages need not be specifically claimed in complaint. Id. Petition, that by telegraph company's negligent delay in transmitting money to prepare plaintiff's daughter's remains for transportation plaintiff suffered mental anguish because of delay in transporting remains, lost time, and expended money, shows cause of action. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Quigley [Ky.] 112 SW 897. Special exceptions to portion of petition claiming mental anguish damages for fear and apprehension which are not recoverable, properly sustained. Hart v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 638. Pleadings relative to mental anguish construed and allegation of injury to wife because of husband's absence held not to be limited to period of his absence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Olivarri [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 930.

62. Petition should affirmatively disclose requisite of his cause of action,[64] and thereupon the telegraph company has the burden of excusing its act [65] by some valid defense.[66] Only competent evidence to as against demurrer, that defendant had sufficient notice of peculiar circumstances affecting measure of damages, from which both parties would reasonably contemplate injury which would ordinarily follow from breach. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steele [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 546. Petition held not to affirmatively disclose, as against demurrer, that defendant could have had notice that absence of husband would cause mental pain to wife during children's sickness. Id.

63. In action for negligent transmission of message, it was not error to refuse to strike parts of declaration explanatory of message, so as to declare cause of action. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024.

64. Hauser v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 503. Burden upon plaintiff to show cause of action where delay and error in delivery caused mental anguish. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lang [Ark.] 118 SW 405. Burden of showing breach of contract. Slaughter v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 688. No cause of action for delay in delivering telegram notifying common carrier to delay departure of boat, where no proof that carrier had agreed to comply with request. Tully v. Western Union Tel. Co., 141 Ill. App. 312. Undisclosed plaintiff must show that notice of her interest in message was conveyed to operator. Holler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 336, 63 SE 92. In action by addressee for failure to promptly transmit and deliver message, it was incumbent upon plaintiff to offer evidence to support conjoint averment that sender was agent and acting for benefit of addressee. Heathcoat v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Ala.] 47 S 139. Where error in transmission, plaintiff has burden of showing error to be caused by misconduct, fraud, or want of due care. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Sunset Const. Co. [Tex.] 114 SW 98. In action for delay in delivering telegram depriving plaintiff of privilege of attending sister's funeral, plaintiff has burden of showing negligent delay. Hauser v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 503. Plaintiff has burden of showing that defendant could have delivered message if transmitted; so held in action for failure to transmit. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crowley [Ala.] 48 S 381. Facts that addressee lived near telegraph office, that she had previously received message warning her of death of child and that another message would be sent sufficient to warrant inference that message could have been delivered if transmitted. Id. In action for injuries of any character, resulting from telegraph company's negligence, plaintiff should show notice to company either from message or from information imparted to company. Hildreth v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 820. Notice such that injurious consequences alleged should have been contemplated as natural, probable results of negligence complained. Id. In action for delay in delivering death message, sender has burden of showing that addressee lived within free delivery limits of terminal office, where sending operator had no information of whether addressee lived within such limits and sender did not notify, or pay extra charge for delivery beyond such limits. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Burden of showing that negligent delay was proximate cause of injury. Hauser v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 503. Burden of showing that injurious consequences resulted proximately from negligence. Hildreth v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 820. On failure to deliver telegram summoning physician, plaintiff must show that had message been delivered physician would have responded promptly, that failure to deliver was cause of failure to procure sendee's services. Slaughter v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 688. Evidence insufficient. Id. Burden of showing that he was damaged by breach. Id. In action for mental anguish, evidence that according to train schedules plaintiff could have reached funeral, if telegram promptly delivered, made prima facie case. Plaintiff not bound to negative contingencies which might have delayed arrival, as accidents. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shofner [Ark.] 112 SW 751. In action for delay in delivering telegram depriving plaintiff of privilege of attending sister's funeral, plaintiff has burden of showing that he could not by ordinary diligence have attended funeral. Hauser v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 503.

65. Telegraph company receiving message for delivery and failing to deliver is prima facie liable and has burden of excusing failure to deliver. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. Mistake in street address, death message. Id. Where, in action against telegraph company for nondelivery of telegram entrusted to it for transmission and delivery, such nondelivery is shown, burden is on company to remove the presumption of negligence thereby raised. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Griswold, 37 Ohio St. 301, followed. Sullivan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 129.

66. Benefits of different rule of law if sought must be proved or court will presume common law to prevail in sister state. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. In action against telegraph company for damages for failure to transmit message from New York to Ohio, provision of contract for transmission as to nonliability for an unrepeated message, which provision constituted good defense in New York but not in Ohio, is available to telegraph company. Plaut v. Western Union Tel. Co., 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 263. Upon failure to deliver death message, it is no defense that plaintiff saw brother's body before burial. Failure to perform duty shows actionable negligence. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. Telegraph company, notified that money to be transmitted is to prepare plaintiff's daughter's remains for transportation, cannot avoid liability on theory that corpse might have been otherwise delayed, as by sendee or railroad. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v.

prove the mistake,[67] delay,[68] nondelivery,[69] notice,[70] probable damages,[71] or other element of the cause of action,[72] warranted by the pleadings.[73] Reasonable pre-

Quigley [Ky.] 112 SW 897. Where telegraph operator accepted message and payment tendered, without mentioning any limitation of liability, fact that strike was on was not available as defense for nondelivery. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. In action for delay in delivering death message, whereby wife was deprived of privilege of attending funeral which might have been postponed, it was no defense that such death message was sent in name of employer, not at sending office, since business was transacted by employes. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625. Postponement message would have been received and opened by employes. Id. Recovery for delay in delivery not prevented by fact that employer, whose name was signed to message, was in another state where agent acted for employer in sending message and would have postponed funeral if message to employer had been sent. Id.

67. Copy of telegram admissible only on proof of loss of original. Mims v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 236. Writing not brought to notice of telephone company not admissible as original of message delivered to it. Id. Where telegram dictated by girl, age 15, to defendant's receiving agent from memorandum book and agent did not require writing on message blank, such book was admissible as evidence of message sent. Id. Where telegram was written by company's agent, message was admissible against company to prove that agent made mistake causing nondelivery. Id.

68. In action for delay in delivering message, telegram received by sendee was admissible, meaning of letters, figures, etc., and question whether deliverer was company's agent open to proof if uncertain or disputed. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553.

69. Conversation between company's agent and unidentified third person concerning undelivered telegram, where nothing to indicate that statements of latter would affect or bind plaintiff, properly excluded. Mims v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 236. Where message to "Jay Wood, 83 Depot St.," was directed to "Jay Woods, 38 Depot St.," city directory was competent evidence as showing negligence in failure to deliver. Slight variation from true name insufficient to deprive it of its character as evidence, being insufficient to mislead person of ordinary prudence. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. Failure to wire for better address evidence of negligence of telegraph company in failing to seek addressee. Id. Statement of witness that husband was well known where message was sent not objectionable as expression of opinion. Martin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 432, 62 SE 833. Where telegraph company offered evidence of inquiries for addressee at postoffice, evidence of mail carrier that he knew where addressee lived was admissible to show that telegram might have been delivered by exercise of greater diligence. Id. In action for negligent delay in delivering telegram, evidence, that husband of plaintiff told operator that he expected message and that wife wished to leave within few hours if it should arrive, was competent to show that residence of addressee could have been learned with inquiry. Bailey v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 1044. Evidence held to show actionable negligence in delivery of telegram received in small town at 5:33 p. m. and not delivered until 9:30. Id. Evidence of telegraph company's custom in delivering messages, where addressee lived beyond free delivery limits, properly excluded where no proof that addressee had knowledge of same or that custom was so general that knowledge might be presumed. Martin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 432, 62 SE 833. Delivery sheet showing time of delivery admissible after proof of genuineness, though such proof conflicting. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Evidence that witness asked agent if message was important, that latter replied he did not know, that witness offered to deliver and said he could find addressee, was proper. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712.

70. Evidence of surrounding circumstances admissible in determining if company was informed of importance of message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024. As to whether operator knew or should have known nature of message from others handled. Id. Evidence of notice to company of wife's illness, on sending telegram improperly received when not alleged in complaint. Fass v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 235. Parol evidence of recognized and generally understood meaning in business of abbreviated expressions and figures in telegram, which were not understood by parties not in business, is admissible. Merely translate writing for benefit of jury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024.

71. Evidence of physician that nervous excitement and worry of wife due to husband's absence might possibly produce serious injury to health, improperly admitted. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Olivarri [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 930. Evidence tending to render telegraph company liable for mother's death in that son was prevented from treating mother and by his presence rendering her more hopeful, properly excluded. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams, 33 Ky. L. R. 1062, 112 SW 651.

72. Reading of telegram to blind addressee proper as part of res gestae of delivery. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Evidence of mental anguish proper where delay in delivery of telegram resulting in addressee being deprived of privilege of attending funeral of sister. Bailey v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 1044. Conclusion erroneously admitted where witness had stated facts showing exercise of ordinary diligence to reach father after learning of illness. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 766. Where allegation of ownership of line not denied, pleadings were evidence in nature of admission of such fact.

sumptions are available,[74] and, where mental anguish forms an element of recoverable damages, direct proof of such suffering is as a general rule unnecessary.[75] Evidence of mental suffering may be precluded by the lack of notice,[76] or otherwise limited.[77] Questions of fact peculiar to these actions must be submitted to the jury.[78] Instructions must properly submit the issues,[79] be applicable to the evi-

Willis v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 11. Competency not affected where amended answer filed denying ownership. Id. Merely affected weight. Id. Where physician was not secured by failure to deliver telegram, evidence of whereabouts of such physician on following day was immaterial. Slaughter v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 688. Evidence of peculiar apprehensions, fears, and conclusions, which might be due to individual temperament, inadmissible, not being subject of direct proof, though mental anguish damages recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. In action for nondelivery of telegram where defendant introduced evidence that death of plaintiff's husband resulted from excessive use of liquor and morphine, such evidence tended to show less grief of wife than alleged because of deprivation of seeing body and rendered contrary evidence in rebuttal proper. Martin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 432, 62 SE 833. Where child died and was promptly buried, giving rise to suggestion that burial might have been delayed, evidence that plaintiff had other sick children and that doctor advised prompt burial was at most immaterial and not prejudicial. Cordell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 402, 63 SE 71.

73. Testimony of addressee that he would have gone to burial if message received in time, proper under complaint. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Evidence of sickness not cause for complaint where defendant did not avail itself of right to have allegation stricken since defendant might also have asked for instruction to disregard such evidence. Fass v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 235. Proof that reply telegram to postpone burial would have been sent to name of person sending death message, that such person was not at sender's office, but that same would be opened by employes, authorized by pleadings. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625. Where complaint for nondelivery of telegram alleged that husband's body had been delivered for dissection because of company's negligence, which allegation was not stricken, evidence that condition of body was such that plaintiff could not see it on obtaining possession was proper. Martin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 S. C. 432, 62 SE 833.

74. Though no direct evidence of what addressee would have done on receiving death message, reasonable presumption is that he would take first train for funeral. Especially where addressee did in fact do so, upon receiving delayed message. Sutton v. Western Union Tel. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 577, 110 SW 874.

75. May be inferred by jury from circumstances attending breach of duty or contract. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Morris [Ala.] 48 S 349. Mental anguish presumed, where telegram announcing serious illness of plaintiff's daughter not delivered, whereby plaintiff not present at death. Need not be affirmatively proved. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Blair [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 164. On proof of near relationship, mental anguish is inferred. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams, 33 Ky. L. R. 1062, 112 SW 65. Jury might infer mental suffering, though no direct proof thereof, where message sent referred to funeral arrangement and operator knew deceased and plaintiff were brothers. Message not delivered, resulting in no preparations or notice to relatives. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. Where operator knew relationship between sender and deceased person to be that of brotherhood, and message referred to funeral arrangements, mental suffering would be presumed to occur from failure to deliver message. Id. In such case injury natural result of failure to deliver and must have been in contemplation of parties when contract for transmission made. Id. Evidence tending merely to harrow feelings of jury, not admissible. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams, 33 Ky. L. R. 1062, 112 SW 615. Evidence tending to prove mental anguish of mother rather than plaintiff (son) properly excluded. A son prevented, because of delay in delivering a telegram, from reaching his mother before she died may not introduce evidence tending to show a more tender relation than usually exists. Id.

76. Evidence of mental suffering inadmissible where damages not recoverable, company not being notified by telegram sent by undisclosed agent of plaintiff's relation. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. No recovery for mental anguish where no evidence that sendees were at home or at place of business when message should have arrived. No proof that sendees would have notified relatives or made arrangements for funeral. Western Union Tel. Co. v. McMorris [Ala.] 48 S 349. In such case, evidence of postponement of funeral and that it rained on day of funeral was inadmissible. Id.

77. Where recovery for mental anguish caused by delay in telegram being delivered, depriving plaintiff of father's presence in attending husband's funeral she could only recover for suffering from time he would have reached her if message delivered, and not up to time he could have reached her after receiving message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Evidence of mental suffering since husband killed, inadmissible, since damages only recoverable for period during which plaintiff was deprived of friends. Id.

78. Question for jury with a message indicated its importance. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024. Whether true with respect to operator. Id. Whether operator was informed by extrinsic facts in addition to message. Id. Where message addressed to another to be delivered to plaintiff's husband, question of whether husband would receive message if sent was for jury. Cordell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 402, 63 SE 71. Failure of telegraph company's receiving agent to make any effort to correct address of undelivered telegram, properly submitted to jury for determination of wanton and reckless indifference justifying punitive damages. Mims v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 236. Jury question whether telegram received at time specified on "delivery sheet," when evidence as to genuineness of such sheet conflicting. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Where brother wired of death of father but message was changed to mother in transmission, and another brother wired of burial giving impression that both parents were dead, in seeking damages for mental anguish, question whether plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in ascertaining truth was for jury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Taylor [Ky.] 112 SW 844. Loss of time and money held under evidence properly for jury, in action for damages for negligent delay in transmitting money to send corpse of plaintiff's daughter. Cumberland Tel. Co. v. Quigley [Ky.] 112 SW 897. Explained by sudden illness, was not conclusive that plaintiff suffered no mental anguish, but at most raised question for jury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Blair [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 164. Where message announcing serious illness of daughter was not delivered and plaintiff prevented from being present at death, nonattendance of plaintiff at funeral, whether plaintiff should have driven nearly thirty miles and taken train, or could, by later train and drive of 14 miles, have arrived at funeral and thus mitigated mental anguish, held an issue of fact. Bailey v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 1044.

79. Instruction held to properly submit issue of damages. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 226. Proper instruction as to diligence of telegraph company in finding addressee submitted. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lewis [Ark.] 116 SW 894. Instruction held to properly submit issue of contributory negligence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 226. Instruction erroneous as authorizing punitive damages, not recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. In action for failure to deliver telegram, charge that negligence existed if defendant's servants failed to exercise ordinary care in delivering, or if in exercise of such care message could have been delivered in time, was sufficient though very general in absence of prayer for more specific instruction. Willis v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 11.

80. In action for delayed telegram, charge that, if telegram was delivered to plaintiff's father "before train passed his station" from time telegram was delivered to company at place sent, plaintiff could not recover, was properly refused, since train might have passed after father received telegram but before arriving at depot. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Charge that burial would be postponed if message promptly delivered, sustained by evidence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625. Submission of issue of damages which plaintiff sustained because of absence of brother, error, when brother was 15 miles from terminal office, and therefore his nonarrival was not caused by negligence of telegraph company. Landry v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex.] 113 SW 10. Instruction declaring it duty of telegraph company to deliver message received after office hours on same day, erroneous where conflicting evidence as to duty. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gillis [Ark.] 117 SW 749. Instruction as to measure of damages for failure to sell horse, where evidence showed no market value of horse, properly refused. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hoyt [Ark.] 115 SW 941. Instruction that if jury believed particular witness, they must find that reasonable diligence was used to deliver message, after addressee came within free delivery limits, properly refused as giving undue prominence to evidence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Submission of issue as to whether persons in charge of body would have been advised of postponment message, if sent, justified by pleadings and evidence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625. No pleading or evidence to justify submission of question of damages for failure of a brother, not named as addressee, to attend sister during husband's illness and death. Landry v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex.] 113 SW 10.

81. Instructions properly refused when depending on pleas to which demurrers had been sustained. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Charge that, if message for postponment of funeral had been sent, person or persons in charge would have complied, held authorized by allegations. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625. Charge that company's duty to make free delivery was conditioned on addressee's residence within such limits, and that until that condition was shown company was not in default under pleadings and evidence, properly refused where there was issue as to whether company had exercised reasonable diligence to make delivery within limits. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Instruction restricting plaintiff's right to recover for breach of special contract for immediate transmission and delivery of message, proper under allegations. Starkey v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 853.

82. Instruction that, if jury believed particular witness, they must find that reasonable diligence was used to deliver message after addressee came within free delivery limits. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Charge that there was no evidence that brother could have reached place of burial before funeral, if message had been delivered, properly refused. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Charge that, when message was delivered for sending, train had already passed, by which brother might have made connections. Id. Charge as to time of mental suffering for which plaintiff might recover. Id. Charge that there was no evidence that defendant left message claimed to have been delivered with certain person. Id.

argumentative,[83] misleading,[84] nor based on an assumption of facts.[85] The findings must be supported by the evidence,[86] and, in certain cases, a directed verdict is proper.[87] A limitation of damages recoverable may be insufficient to warrant a new trial.[88]

83. In action for delayed telegram claimed to have been sent by plaintiff's agent, instructions that it was possible that plaintiff understood that alleged agent was acting for her when he sent message, but that evidence must show he agreed to so act, held properly refused. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Instruction that jury consider fact that plaintiff was one of six living brothers and four sisters, all of whom were at burial except addressee, in determining whether plaintiff suffered mental anguish, properly refused. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Instruction that law does not authorize guess at amount of damages to be allowed for mental suffering, that evidence be considered carefully to first determine whether plaintiff suffered mental anguish, and that trifling suffering, such as men of ordinary suffering would overlook, would not warrant substantial damages, properly refused. Id. Instructions as to consideration of facts and circumstances in allowing damages for mental suffering, refused. Id.

84. Instruction requiring jury to determine what negligence charged in complaint was. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Instruction that sender could not recover unless addressee lived within free delivery limits, properly refused as misleading. Tending to make jury believe that sender could not recover unless he showed addressee's residence, though company did not exercise reasonable diligence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Instruction properly refused as to damages for mental suffering when involved and confusing. Id. Instruction of regarding plaintiff's burden of proof as to addressee being within free delivery limits, properly refused. Id.

85. Instruction assuming juror's minds as confused and uncertain on issue as to when and where message delivered, properly refused. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 48 S 712. Instruction as to free delivery limits properly refused as assuming that addressee lived outside limits. Id.

86. In action for delayed telegram, evidence held to support finding that, if message was promptly delivered, addressee would have shipped remains to home for interment. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Arant [Ark.] 115 SW 136. Finding of jury proper where uncontradicted evidence that, if telegram had been promptly delivered to third person for addressee, it would have been immediately sent to plaintiff, who would have promptly attended mother's funeral. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shofner [Ark.] 112 SW 751. Finding for plaintiff in suit for failure to deliver death message sustained by evidence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Rhine [Ark.] 117 SW 1069. Evidence held to sufficiently show that plaintiff would have attended funeral, though telegram did not state place of burial. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shofner [Ark.] 112 SW 751. Finding of jury that plaintiff would have had funeral postponed, if death message promptly delivered, warranted by evidence. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625.

87. Defendant entitled to general affirmative charge, where no tolls paid for sending telegram, no damage on estate and mental suffering damages being merely annoyance, not recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Howle [Ala.] 47 S 341. Where presumption of negligence because of nondelivery overcome, and evidence of diligence of telegraph company on finding addressee not rebutted, defendant was entitled to directed verdict. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Elliott [Ky.] 113 SW 228. Motion for nonsuit and prayer for instructions based on assumption that there was no negligence, properly refused under facts. Willis v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 11. Peremptory instruction properly refused, where at that stage of case no evidence of company's diligence to deliver message was introduced. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Elliott [Ky.] 115 SW 278. Directed verdict, error where message not delivered because of company's error in spelling name of terminal office. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hankins [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 539. Error in deciding, as matter of law, that there was no evidence of actionable negligence, when evidence showed no effort to deliver telegram, having mistake in street address. Woods v. Western Union Tel. Co., 148 N. C. 1, 61 SE 653. Directed verdict, error where evidence of flagrant negligence of telegraph company in delaying answer regarding purchase of bank stock, whereby terms of such sale were raised. Sutton v. Western Union Tel. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 827. Telegraph company negligently failing to deliver telegram, entrusted to it for transmission and delivery, is liable for nominal damages, and in a case where such failure is shown, error to arrest the case from the jury and direct a verdict for the defendant company. First Nat. Bank v. Telegraph Co., 30 Ohio St. 555, followed. Sullivan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 129.

88. In action for delay in delivering telegram to purchase cotton seed for shipment on Jan. 15th, where telegram sent Jan 4th, where no evidence that plaintiff could have procured necessary cars and loaded them within required time, and in view of fact that expense of handling product would entail loss equivalent, if not in excess of sum to be paid for storage, failure to permit recovery of damages for such amount was not sufficient cause for new trial. Clio Gin Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 426.

90. Penalty for refusal to transmit messages under Transportation Corporations Law (Laws 1890, p. 1152, c. 566), § 103, is only incurred by acts of partiality, bad faith, or discrimination. No penalty incurred where operator would only take message "subject to delay" when sender demanded delivery within an hour, but sender apparently must have known of strike of company's operators. Petze v. Western Union Tel. Co., 128 App. Div. 192, 112 NYS 516. Fact that message was with object of reporting neglect of duty of railroad's servants does not affect right to recover penalty imposed by Kirby's Dig., § 7946. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lillard [Ark.] 110 SW 1035. Where railroad station agent performed duties of operator in latter's absence, agency of station agent was sufficiently established to authorize recovery of statutory penalty. Id. Oral evidence of contents of telegram properly admitted where contents not in issue, and copy left in possession of company. Id.

93. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644.

94. Authorized by statute to maintain system, with certain restrictions. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 5802, individuals conducting telephone systems are subject to same obligations as corporations with respect to facilities, charges, service, etc. Id.

95. Each agency or exchange conducted by a corporation or individual, separate and distinct from others with respect to conduct of business and relation to public. Only impressed by character as quasi public agent, in respect to duty as to service. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644.

96. Must serve the public without discrimination. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Kelly [C. C. A.] 160 F 316. Should render equal service and upon same terms to patrons. Buffalo County Tel. Co. v. Turner [Neb.] 118 NW 1064. Telephone exchanges impressed with public use as common carriers of news and must furnish impartial service without discrimination to all persons of same class. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644. Required by common-law. Id. Under Laws 1906, p. 133, No. 124, § 1, requiring railroads to grant facilities and terms for installation or connection of telephones, mere refusal of railroad, on request of telephone company, to place telephone in its station on "same terms and conditions" as granted to another company, does not show violation of act. State v. Boston & M. R. Co. [Vt.] 71 A 1044.

97. Where business becomes that of common carrier, it becomes impressed with common-law duty of receiving and transporting commodities from connecting carrier as if offered by individual. Individual and patrons, on compliance with reasonable regulations and payment of compensation charged to others, is entitled to have his and their messages transmitted by exchanges of others having exchanges and operating systems. State v. Cadwallader [Ind.] 87 NE 644. Discrimination, where operator of system furnished immediate service to separate exchanges and patrons, and denied same service to another exchange and patrons of same class. Violative of common-law and Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 5802. Id. Where telephone service is furnished to one, another in same town is entitled to same service, not upon ground of primary right but because, having elected to furnish to one, same obligation arises in favor of others so situated. Id.

98. Acts Tenn. 1885, p. 122, c. 66, § 11, only declaratory of common-law, not to discriminate and enforcing obligation by penalties. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Kelly [C. C. A.] 160 F 316. Furnishing "party" line service to other subscribers before "direct" service was installed to plaintiff held not discrimination, where company's cables for direct service to plaintiff's district were full at time of application. Id. Acts Tenn. 1885, p. 122, c. 66, § 11, imposing severe penalties for discrimination, not to be construed to compel enlargement of plant to furnish immediate service, where service demanded by applicant could not be furnished, cables being full. Id. Where installation of cable would cost $7,000 and inferior but cheaper service could be furnished. Id. No discrimination by failure to furnish direct service by means of "backing up" wires, used only in cases of urgent necessity on special application, plaintiff not having brought himself within conditions under which such connections were allowed. Id. Telephone companies are under a general common-law obligation to supply reasonably adequate facilities for supplying service. Id. Obligation may be enforced by compelling enlargement of plant or seeking damages. Id. Instruction as to discrimination, misleading where stating that refusal to serve one of two persons on line would be unlawful and definition of "discrimination" did not sufficiently emphasize fact that such two persons must be similarly situated. Id.

3. When ignored in favor of others in like situation. Plummer v. Hattelsted [Iowa] 117 NW 680. Employe of telephone company, in charge of switchboard, subject to an action for unjust discrimination against patron. Where employe acted perversely, without authority, to gratify personal spite. Id.

4. Test whether restricting provision is unreasonable or liable to injure public. Central New York Tel. & T. Co. v. Averill, 129 App. Div. 752, 114 NYS 99. Where telephone company installed exchange in hotel in consideration of exclusive rights for ten years, and charged reasonable rates, rendering satisfactory service so that public could not complain of discrimination, contract could not be avoided by hotel company as grant of exclusive privilege in violation of public policy. Id. Especially where object was to permit rival telephone company to install exchange and enjoy exclusive privilege. Id.

5. Subscriber refusing to comply therewith, not entitled to service. Buffalo County Tel. Co. v. Turner [Neb.] 118 NW 1064. Defendant not entitled to service without prepayment of charges because of existence of asserted counterclaim, large portion of which is exorbitant and illegal. Id.

6. Nothing in record to warrant holding one week's delay, unreasonable. Buffalo County Tel. Co. v. Turner [Neb.] 118 NW 1064. Rural telephone subscriber presumed to know that telephone is liable to get out of order and that reasonable time must elapse before it is repaired. Id.

7. Where proper administration of business of telephone company required removal of switch installed with patron, court would not interfere, but if necessary would render assistance. Contract at most for adequate means of communication, and, when such means established by central switchboard, plaintiff's switch was unnecessary. Red Line Mut. Tel. Co. v. Pharris [Neb.] 117 NW 995. No right to perpetual maintenance of switch. Though contract contemplated only one line, it was not violated by construction of two lines. Id.

8. Same degree of care imposed on telephone company in undertaking to secure answers to calls over long distance lines as imposed on telegraph company in delivering messages to addressees. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. McCoy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 387. "Telegraph" includes any apparatus for transmitting messages by means of electric signals. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. 9. Telephone company liable to the addressee or persons called to the phone by patron for any negligence in transmission and delivery of message or call. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 95 P 1009. Evidence sufficient to support verdict for plaintiff where telephone company failed to secure answer to long distance sick call. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. McCoy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 387.

10. Not responsible for identity of person answering or messages passing. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 95 P 1009. Where a telephone company carelessly connects a patron with a wrong phone, and there is no contributory negligence on the part of the patron, it may be liable. Id. The business of telephone company, not transmission of messages, but to find and bring to telephone office party for whom call was made. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Flood [Tex. Civ. person.[11] Recovery may be had for the damages naturally and probably resulting from the breach of contract or negligent act[12] after notice of the proposed conversation,[13] and the plaintiff must not be guilty of contributory negligence.[14] Speculative damages are not recoverable,[15] and mental anguish damages are not recoverable where the plaintiff's own acts cause the suffering.[16] Liability for negligence in transmission of messages may be in tort,[17] and the company may be liable to an addressee.[18] Where based upon contract, it must appear that the contract was made by or was to inure to the plaintiff's benefit,[19] and liability for breach of contract must sufficiently appear from the petition.[20] Proper evidence should be introduced[21] and questions of fact should be submitted to the jury[22] under appropriate instructions.[23]

11. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 95 P 1009. Liable for negligence in this regard if notified of interest. Id.

12. Measure of damages for breach of contract to supply telephone service are such as arise naturally from breach, or may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated by parties contracting. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Solomon [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 214. Where statutory right to sue for wrongful death depends upon decedent's right, husband and children cannot recover for death caused by hemorrhage. Id. Where plaintiff obliged to get up at midnight and search for doctor for sick wife because of telephone company negligently failing to answer call, loss of time, extra effort, etc., constituted annoyance, for which actual damages were recoverable. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Jackson [Miss.] 48 S 614. Must appear that injury is proximate result of negligent act. Lebanon, Louisville & Lexington Tel. Co. v. Lanham Lumber Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 824. No recovery for injury to feelings caused by breach of contract to supply telephone service. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Solomon [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 214. No recovery for breach of general contract to provide telephone service, where breach resulted in delay in securing physician's attendance at childbirth, since such damage could not have been reasonably foreseen to follow breach or negligence of company. Id. In action for failure of telephone company to notify plaintiff of call whereby sale of mules was lost, measure of damages was difference in market value at time of call and when he could sell same by using ordinary diligence. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Flood [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1064.

13. Telephone company not liable for consequential damage caused by negligent failure to notify person of call, unless it knows in some way of nature and purpose of proposed conversation, so that damages may be said to have been within parties' contemplation. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Flood [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1964. Notice that man in mule business desired to talk to another man in same business by long-distance, insufficient to charge company with notice of contemplated contract so as to render company liable for loss of sale. Id.

14. Plaintiff's right of recovery not to be defeated on theory of contributory negligence, unless from facts jury might say that person of ordinary diligence would have exercised other means to reach person called. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Owens [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 89. Where telephone company on long distance sick call advised sender of message that person called was not at terminal and could not be found, sender had right to rely on information, and it was not contributory negligence so as to defeat recovery that sender did not telegraph. Id. Requested charge properly refused. Id.

15. Facts of petition charging telephone company for loss by fire, where service was not promptly given, held too speculative and remote to sustain cause of action. Lebanon, Louisville, & Lexington Tel. Co. v. Lanham Lumber Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 824.

16. No cause of action against telephone company where plaintiff's own acts cause of mental anguish. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Long [Ark.] 118 SW 405. Damage for mental suffering not recoverable where notice could, by ordinary prudence, be given person called. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Owens [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 89.

17. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 95 P 1009.

18. When notified of interest. McLeod v. Pacific States Tel. & T. Co. [Or.] 95 P 1009. Addressee need not be primary beneficiary, but liability extends if he has any interest. Id.

19. In suit for negligence in performing contractual duty to supply telephone service, where no injury to property or person. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Solomon [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 214.

20. Allegations of petition insufficient to present cause of action for preventing use of telephone, where alleging contract with "Alabama" telephone company, which was subsequently sold and resold to the present defendants, but under contract of absolute and unconditional bargain and sale whereby obligations and debts of seller were not imposed on buyer. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Jacoway, 131 Ga. 483, 62 SE 640.

21. In action for negligence of telephone company in failing to notify plaintiff of call, evidence of previous conversation over wire was inadmissible to show notice of what later call referred to, transactions being different. Wiggs v. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 179. Where defendant's superintendent testified that telephone company had no agent at receiving station authorized to accept business, plaintiff was properly permitted to show contract with another company at receiving station, whereby latter received messages for former. T. Co. v. Owens [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 89. Contract arrangement sufficient to show operator at receiving station to be agent of both companies. Id. Where under undisputed evidence defendant was responsible for acts of agent at receiving station, exclusion of contract to show such fact was not error. Id. Where undisputed evidence showed sick call on Oct 15, as alleged in amended petition, refusal of original petition, as evidence of call "on or about" Oct. 10, was harmless. Id. Exclusion of copy of ticket as to time of receiving call not error, where under evidence such ticket might have been misplaced. Id. Ticket showing time of call, inadmissible in absence of testimony as to meaning of figures representing date of call. Id.

22. Whether negligence of telephone company was proximate cause of injury held for jury. Wiggs v. Southwestern Tel. & T. Col [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 179. In action for failure to secure answer to long distance sick call, exercise of due diligence by company merely telephoning to place where person worked, and ceasing further efforts, held for jury. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. McCoy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 387.

23. No error in refusing requested instruction as to office hours where call received without objection, and from evidence terminal office was open when called. Southwestern Tel & T. Co. v. Owens [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 89. Where evidence conflicting, instruction as to whether existing condition was brought about by negligence of telephone company and was proximate cause of plaintiff's suffering was proper. Wiggs v. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 179. Refusal of requested charge, harmless where court correctly stated law as to diligence of telephone company in finding person called by long distance. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Owens [Tex. Civ. 27. No valid objection to governing body of a city making rates that council is not impartial, being in effect its own judge. Home Tel. & T. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 Law. Ed. 176. No valid objection that council could not act fairly being subject to recall, where such power was not exercised. Id.

28. Ordinance fixing telephone rates, not denial of due process of law, though enacted under section of charter not providing for notice and hearing, where such notice and hearing in fact accorded by ordinance. Home Tel. & T. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 Law. Ed. 176. Rate regulation on lower scale than that of competitor, not necessarily denial of equal protection of laws, since service of competitor may be more valuable. Id.

29. Home Tel. & T. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 Law. Ed. 176. Act Cal. March 11, 1901 (Cal. Stat. 1901, p. 265), under which company derived franchise, insufficient to authorize municipality to contract away charter power to regular rates. Id. Municipal authority to enter into contract fixing telephone rates during term of franchise must at very least be implied from controlling statutes, if it be conceded that anything less than legislative authority be sufficient to authorize same (a relinquishment of governmental powers). Id.

30. Under Const. art. 9, § 22 (Bunn's Ed. § 234), state corporation commission upon hearing petition to reduce telephone rates has duty of making finding of facts, upon which order is made. On appeal must certify facts found to supreme court. Pioneer Tel. & T. Co. v. Westenhaver [Okl.] 99 P 1019. Where no finding of facts, supreme court may remand case to commission with directions to find facts upon which order is based and certify same to court. Id.

31. Presumption obtains, though data obtains upon which commission acted was insufficient, where rates were not based entirely upon arbitrary conjecture. Railroad Com. v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co., 212 U. S. 414, 53 Law. Ed. —. Has burden of showing what part, if any, of depreciation fund accumulated from receipts was added to capital upon which dividends are to be paid. Id. Company seeking to enjoin rates as confiscatory and unreasonable has burden of proof. Id. No part of the depreciation fund accumulated by a telephone company from its receipts can be added to the capital upon which the company is entitled to a fair return, from rates established by a state commission. Id.

32. Where state railroad commission abolished free telephone service, and manager of exchange pursuant to directions, fixed charges without knowing that franchise in that city required free country serv-

pany voluntarily entering into contract with city, whereby latter confers rights in streets and in consideration thereof fixes maximum rates of service, may not repudiate the latter portion of the agreement as unauthorized.[33] A city telephone franchise prescribing monthly rates does not entitle patrons to long distance service without extra charge.[34] Excessive charges for services voluntarily paid without fraud, mistake of fact, or other ground for annulling the contract, are not recoverable.[35] respective interests [62] by contributing or offering to contribute their proportion of the purchase money [63] within a reasonable time.[64] In North Carolina, however, in the case of heirs, the general rule seems to have been somewhat modified.[65]

*Possession.*See 10 C. L. 1651—The possession of one tenant in common is in law the possession of all,[66] until an ouster is clearly and satisfactorily shown.[67] Only a cotenant can complain of the exclusive use of the property by the other tenant.[68]

*Adverse possession.*See 10 C. L. 1651—Since the possession of one tenant is presumed to be that of his cotenants also,[69] such possession can never become adverse to his cotenants,[70] unless it is open, notorious, hostile,[71] after an actual ouster,[72] with notice to the cotenant [73] of the hostile claim,[74] and for the full statutory period.[75]

Tenants in common by descent are placed in confidential relations to each other by operation of law as to joint property and same duties are imposed as if joint trust were created by contract between them, or act of third party. Being associated in interest as tenants in common, implied obligation exists to sustain common interest. Reciprocal obligation will be enforced in equity as trust. These relations of trust and confidence bind all to put forth their best exertions, and to embrace every opportunity to protect and secure their common interest, and forbid assumption of hostile attitude by either. Possession by joint tenant may become adverse if tenant in common by his acts and conduct disseises his cotenants by repudiating their title and claiming adversely to them. Carpenter v. Fletcher, 239 Ill. 440, 88 NE 162. To constitute disseisin there must be outward acts of exclusive ownership of unequivolent character, overt and notorious, and of such nature as by their import to impart information and give notice to cotenants that adverse possession and actual disseisin are intended to be asserted against them. Id. Evidence held sufficient to show disseisin. Id. Repudiation of cotenancy with cotenant's knowledge coupled with possession adverse to and incompatible with interest as cotenant held sufficient. Hess v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 618. Where tenant knows that cotenants are ignorant of their interest in property, it is their duty to either inform them directly of their interest or to take such open and notorious possession of property as to make it clear that they claimed against world and, where they failed to do either, they cannot claim laches. Stone v. Marshall [Wash.] 100 P 858.

Constructive notice from record: Possession of one tenant in common asserting exclusive right to land under deed conveying

It has also been held that a tenant in common cannot acquire color of title in himself by procuring an outstanding adverse title,[76] though the rule is otherwise if the adverse title is acquired by one tenant in common who is out of possession and who enters into possession under and by virtue of the title so acquired.[77]

Rents, profits, and proceeds.[See 10 C. L. 1852]—Where one of the tenants in common ousts his cotenant,[78] or holds sole, exclusive, and adverse possession under claim of title,[79] or has received the common property,[80] he may usually [81] be held to account to them for their proportionate share of the rents and profits of the estate.[82] The amount which may be recovered in such cases varies somewhat with the different jurisdictions and circumstances. Thus in some cases the proportionate share of the rents and profits actually received, only, may be recovered,[83] in others the proportionate share of the rental value may be recovered,[84] while in case of ouster it has been held that only mesne profits may be recovered.[85] The rents thus due do not con-

Evidence held not to show notice. Baumgarten v. Mitchell [Cal. App.] 101 P 43; Hamilton v. Steele [Ky.] 117 SW 378. Claim of exclusive right by tenant in actual possession and denial of rights of cotenant, not brought directly to notice of such cotenant, is insufficient. Sumner v. Hill [Ala.] 47 S 565.

74. After tenant has testified that he purchased from cotenant's grantor prior to latter's conveyance to cotenant, refusal of cross-examination to show absence of consideration in latter conveyance held error since evidence went to show exclusive hostile claim of ownership. Layton v. Campbell [Ala.] 46 S 775.

75. Pleading held bad for failure to state that period of limitation was complete before suit. Sumner v. Hill [Ala.] 47 S 565. Nothing less than 20 years is ouster between cotenants. Smith v. Smith [N. C.] 63 SE 177. Insufficient where tenant in possession of whole allowed it to be sold and took title in himself in absence of notice to cotenants. Id.

76. Title so acquired inures to benefit of all tenants in common. Carpenter v. Fletcher, 239 Ill. 440, 88 NE 162. Possession under partition decree held to be for all. Id. No tenant in common in possession for benefit of all cotenants can in any manner acquire color of title that will ripen into bar against his cotenants under seven years' statute of limitations. Id.

77. In such case, entry is hostile and not for benefit of cotenants. Carpenter v. Fletcher, 239 Ill. 440, 88 NE 162. Where tenant in common releases for valuable consideration to cotenant by quitclaim deed all his right, title and interest in certain land therein described, expressly including interest inherited by him from brother, then believed to be dead; and where also grantee goes into actual possession of land upon which he and his heirs make valuable improvements and continue in peaceable possession thereof for more than twenty-one years, such grantee and his heirs acquire good title to such interest as against grantor and his heirs although brother was not dead at time of execution of deed of release. Ward v. Ward, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 396.

81. If one tenant in common occupies whole estate without any claim on part of cotenants to be admitted into possession, and without hinderance to him of such possession, occupying tenant is not liable to his cotenants in action of account. Starks v. Kirchgraber [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1149. One in permissive possession without promise to pay rent is not liable. Cannon v. Stevens [Ark.] 115 SW 388.

82. Whether premises were occupied by tenant or leased. Starks v. Kirchgraber [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1149. In case of ouster it is sufficient to entitle plaintiffs to recover in their action for accounting of rents and profits to show ouster by their cotenant and his consequent possession, together with reasonable value of rents and profits for period they were precluded from enjoying fruits of premises. Id. If one tenant in common receives common property, either by consent or wrongfully, he holds it as trustee for his cotenant to extent of interest of that cotenant, and cotenant is entitled to proceed in equity for accounting. Sale of animals and retention of proceeds by one of two persons engaged in raising horses on shares. Rice v. Peters, 128 App. Div. 776, 113 NYS 40.

83. German v. Heath [Iowa] 116 NW 1051. In absence of agreement to contrary, tenant in possession of real property is liable to account to his cotenant only for what he usually receives, and then he is entitled to an allowance for taxes paid and for keeping premises in ordinary repair, and if he occupies premises himself same rule applies. Adams v. Bristol, 126 App. Div. 660, 111 NYS 231. Not liable for rental value but only profits made or rents actually received. Griffin v. Griffin [S. C.] 61 SE 160. Rental value will be received as evidence of profits made or rents actually received in absence of better evidence. Id.

84. Vermillion v. Nickell [Ky.] 114 SW 270.

85. Rule as to ouster does not apply where title and adverse claim against cotenants were not asserted, and cotenants stitute an outstanding lien or incumbrance on the latter's moiety,[86] and are usually chargeable with the proper portion of the taxes paid,[87] and the increased value due to the improvements made.[88] One tenant may show in defense to such an action that he holds the entire equitable title,[89] and the right to recover may be barred by limitations.[90]

The action for an accounting for rents and profits must be distinguished from that for use and occupation.[91]

*Contribution.*See 10 C. L. 1853—A tenant in common who discharges a lien upon the common property has a right to contribution from his cotenant, and as security is entitled to a lien upon his cotenant's share of the property,[92] but the right may be barred by limitations,[93] and laches.[94]

*Agency.*See 8 C. L. 2120—The ordinary rules as to agency usually apply.[95]

*Conversion.*See 8 C. L. 2120—A tenant may be liable to his cotenant for the conversion of things readily divisible.[96]

*Trespass and waste.*See 10 C. L. 1853—Under the common law a tenant in common who has parted with estate could not sue for waste committed previous to his conveyance,[97] but such recovery is now permitted by statute.[98]

*Actions.*See 10 C. L. 1853—As against every person not claiming under a tenant one may sue for and recover the entire tract in his own name.[99] In Illinois a cotenant

90. Where actual ouster by one tenant under claim of superior right is had, right of action against ousting tenant accrues in favor of tenant ousted, and running of statute of limitations commences eo instanti. Runs against rents from time first of them are due. Starks v. Kirchgraber [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1149. Action for recovery of rents and profits from cotenant is not barred by statute of limitations until four years have elapsed from accruing of such action. Schuster v. Schuster [Neb.] 120 NW 948.

91. Ground upon which tenant in common is liable to be called upon by his cotenant to account in action of assumpsit for proportionate share of money he has actually received as rent from stranger is entirely different from that which makes him liable for mere use and occupation, and hence, evidence tending to show use and occupation is properly excluded where statement did not sever use and occupation but appropriation of rents to own use. Dorrance v. Ryon, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 180.

92. Lien of tax deed. Lien may be enforced in equity by treating tax deed valid and subsisting for that purpose. Roll v. Everitt [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 263.

93. Right to enforce contribution for taxes accrues and statute of limitations begins to run from time of payment. Starks v. Kirchgraber [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1149.

94. Delay of ten years in enforcing claims for reimbursement held fatal. German v. Heath [Iowa] 116 NW 1051. Cotenants out of possession who had no knowledge of their interest in property until suit held not guilty of laches in not asserting their rights. Id.

95. Where one acted as representative of all in sale of certain land owned in common and ratified contract to sell made by such person with broker by signing contract of sale, he is liable with other parties for whole of commissions. Gillespie v. Dick [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 664. To bind cotenants to pay commission for making lease, it is not essential that there have been mutual absolute agreement in express words to pay specified sum as commission, but only necessary that facts and circumstances show mutual understanding. Knight v. Knight, 142 Ill. App. 62. Evidence held sufficient to show such understanding. Id.

Tenant in common who sells entire timber on land in which he owns half interest, and purchaser who buys with knowledge that seller owns but half interest, are liable to cotenants for latter's share. Collier v. Cameron & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 915. With respect to things so far indevisible in their nature that share of one cannot be distinguished from that of other, it is well established rule that one tenant in common cannot maintain trover against his cotenant for reason that two are equally entitled to possession; but this rule does not apply to such commodities as are readily divisible by count or measure into portions absolutely alike in quality such as grain or money. may bring ejectment against one claiming exclusive right to possession.[1] An action for the surplus in the hands of a mortgagee after foreclosure must be in the name of all cotenants.[2] An action for compensation and damages,[3] or injunction, is a proper remedy in cases of unlawful injury to common property, or of interference with its use and enjoyment.[4] A decree placing cotenants out of possession in possession may properly decree an accounting.[5]

The rights and remedy of partition. See 10 C. L. 1854—A tenant in common who has been disseised is not entitled to partition, but, to prevent a tenant in common from having partition, there must be an actual ouster.[6] Where tenant in common in possession, makes valuable improvements therein, he will under some circumstances be entitled to an equitable partition so as to give him the benefit of the improvements,[7] but the right depends largely upon the circumstances of each case.[8] Where one tenant in common of land conveys a specific portion entire of the tract, his vendee should be allotted, in its entirety, the portion sold him, if this can be done without detriment to the rights of the other cotenants.[9] In New York there is no statutory provision limiting the time for which rents may be apportioned in actions for partition.[10]

6. Fact that statute, authorizing sale of land for taxes as it existed when tax deed was made, authorized purchaser at tax sale to hold and enjoy real estate during term for which he purchased same does not prevent operation of rule, and hence of procuring of tax deed is not sufficient ouster to prevent partition. Notwithstanding strict rule that cotenant, who is disseisor, is chargeable with rents and cannot compel contribution for improvements, court of equity in partition proceedings may consider all of circumstances and somewhat modify rule in interests of justice. Though acts of one purchasing land at partition sale, who believed he was thereby sole owner, amounted to technical ouster of cotenant, he may enforce contribution for valuable improvements enhancing value of land greatly, and for payment of incumbrances. Parkhill v. Doggett [Iowa] 119 NW 689. It is not improper in such case to permit removal of inexpensive building. Id. Proper in partition to allow credit for improvements and deduct rent therefrom, statute of limitations having no application for reason that, in accounting between cotenants, betterments are to be regarded paid for pro tanto by rents. THREATS.[40]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[41]

It is not an offense at common law to threaten another with intent by intimidating him to compel him to refrain from working for another,[42] and, unless an offense under the statute is charged, no offense is charged.[43] The Connecticut statute which provides punishment for threatening or intimidating a person from working for another, may be violated even though such person was not intimidated,[44] and the clause "with intent to intimidate him" in said statute does not qualify all the provisions preceding it.[45] The law does not authorize the collection of just debts by the malicious threatening to accuse the debtor to crime.[45a]

TIME.[46]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[46a]

A calendar year means the year from January 1st to December 31st, inclusive.[47] A day is composed of 24 hours, extending from midnight to midnight.[48] The general method of computing time, when an act is required to be performed within a certain period, is to exclude the first day and include the last day of the period,[49] but in computation of time fixed by contract, the intentions of the parties will be deduced from the subject-matter or context.[50] The general rule is that a fraction of a day will not be taken into account,[51] but the rule is subject to exceptions.[52] An act which provides that it is to be in force from and after a certain date does not include that date.[53] As a general rule Sunday will be excluded where an act would otherwise be required to be done on that day,[54] and if the time fixed is less than a week, Sunday will be excluded in computing the time,[55] and if the last day falls on that day, it is usually excluded,[56] but days of grace allowed in an insurance policy injury to others,[84] that he respect the property [85] and existing rights of others,[86] that he use due diligence to avoid causing harm,[87] unnecessary discomfort [88] or inconvenience to others, and that he do no act merely for retaliation.[89] As a general rule one cannot recover for an injury to which his own acts have contributed.[90] It is no defense that the defendant did not know that an injury or loss would result,[91] or that the general legislation to prevent the injury is inadequate,[92] but he may show that compliance with the law would not have prevented the accident.[93]

§ 2. What is an injury or wrong.[94]—See 10 C. L. 1861—An injury, in legal contemplation, is a violation of some right recognized by law,[95] and, hence, a tort cannot arise from the proper exercise of legal rights,[96] even where such exercise is actuated by a malicious intent,[97] although there is a modern tendency to regard acts otherwise legal as illegal when prompted solely by malice,[98] and in some torts the intent

84. One injured has right of action against wrongdoer. Dillon v. Great Northern R. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 960.

85. One is not relieved from liability for willful destruction of another's property by fact that such property was located on his private preserves through necessity, as where, while plaintiff and his family were out in a boat, they were forced by storm, in order to escape great danger, to moor at defendant's dock, thereupon defendant's servant turned the boat loose and it was destroyed. Ploof v. Putnam, 81 Vt. 471, 71 A 188. Where one brings foreign substance on his land, he must take care of it and not permit it to injure his neighbor, hence one is liable for injury to land by seepage resulting from the negligent construction of ditch. 88. Noise of steam engine in residence district, making it impossible to converse in adjoining house, held to be nuisance in residence district. Reilley v. Curley [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 700. It is not sufficient that noise merely annoy, it must injure and must be such as to materially interfere with and impair the ordinary comfort of existence on the part of ordinary people, and noise from engine not interfering with conversation nearby is not nuisance. Peck v. Newburgh L. H. & P. Co., 116 NYS 433.

89. One must resort to his legal remedies. Hence, construction of unnecessarily high board fence on ones own premises may be private nuisance, under Rev. St. c. 22, § 6, where annoyance is dominant purpose. Healy v. Spaulding [Me.] 71 A 472.

An act which does not amount to a legal injury cannot be actionable because it is done with a bad intent. J. F. Parkinson Co. v. Santa Clara County Bldg. Trades Council [Cal.] 98 P 1027. One commits no tort in performing legal acts for his own advantage, though also actuated by malice. One theater is not liable for so contracting as to deprive another of valuable contracts. Roseneau v. Empire Circuit Co., 131 App. Div. 429, 115 NYS 511.

98. Banker who started a barber shop with sole purpose of driving local barber out of business held liable in tort. Tuttle v. Buck [Minn.] 119 NW 946.

NOTE: Liability in tort for maliciously destroying another's business by competition: It is an often enunciated principle that an improper motive cannot make illegal an otherwise legal act. 2 Cooley, Torts (3rd Ed.) 1505. There has been more recently, however, a not altogether unopposed tendency toward recognizing a wider scope of civil duty. 8 Columbia L. R. 496. Cases following this trend have sought to apply the rule that an act is unlawful if it intentionally injures another without legal justification or excuse. Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 57 NE 1011, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 51 L. R. A. 339; Klingel's Pharmacy v. Sharp, 104 Md. 218, 64 A 1029, 118 Am. St. Rep. 399. 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 976. the motive prompting the actor has been regarded in these cases as an important factor in ascertain-is of the essence of the injury.[99] On the other hand, the intent is immaterial where there is a legal injury.[1] A right may become extended into a wrong when it works injury to another without serving any useful or lawful purpose.[2] Wrongful interference with another's business is an actionable injury,[3] and so, also, wrongful interference with one's employment.[4] The unauthorized use of another's picture constitutes an actionable wrong in some states.[5] An action at law will not lie to recover damages for perjury alleged to have been committed in a former case in which the plaintiff may have been interested, nor for conspiracy to commit such perjury.[6]

§ 3. What is damage.[7]—See 10 C. L. 1861.

§ 4. Parties in torts.[8]—See 10 C. L. 1861.—When two persons cause a single and indivisible injury, they are joint tort feasors though acting separately[9] and are ing the justification or excuse. 5 Columbia L. R. 505; Aikens v. Wisconsin, 195 U. S. 195, 49 Law. Ed. 154; London Guar. & Acc. Co. v. Horn, 206 Ill. 493, 69 NE 526, 99 Am. St. Rep. 185. The determination of justification being a question of public policy, courts have naturally reached varying results. National Protective Ass'n S. F. & H. v. Cummings, 170 N. Y. 315, 63 NE 369; Pickett v. Walsh, 192 Mass. 572, 78 NE 753, 116 Am. St. Rep. 272, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1067. The principal case presents a decision on a set of facts often treated by legal writers, though with varying results. J. B. Ames, 18 Harv. L. R. at 420; Jeremiah Smith, 20 Harv. L. R. at 454. Tuttle v. Buck [Minn.] 119 NW 946 is interesting as indicating the more advanced tendency by a square holding that the shield of competition cannot be raised to protect the defendant acting only to satisfy his own malevolent purposes. Many court, however, would still insist that if the appearance of competition exists an investigation of motive is impolitic. See Passaic Print Works v. Ely, 105 F 163, 62 L. R. A. 673.—From 9 Columbia L. R. 455.

99. One is liable for malicious injury to business of another, injury being malicious when intentional and without legal excuse. Lohse Patent Door Co. v. Fuelle [Mo.] 114 SW 997. Attempt to interfere with lawful business of another is prima facie actionable, but defendants may plead that it was lawful, for their own advantage, and not for malice. J. F. Parkinson Co. v. 3. Willner v. Silverman [Md.] 71 A 962. Auctioneer may be liable for unnecessarily interfering with nearby merchant's business, where he molests and interferes with merchant's prospective customers, but not because he merely undersells the merchant, his business not being nuisance per se, nor has merchant any right to complain that auctioneer does not deal fairly with his customers. Gilly v. Hirsh, 122 La. 966, 48 S 422. One is liable where he attracts away barber's customers for the sole purpose of injury. Tuttle v. Buck [Minn.] 119 NW 946. A man is not liable for refusal to transact business with another, since he may engage with whom he pleases, and there is no law which forces him to part with his property, whether his refusal is based upon reasons or is result of whim, prejudice, or malice. Lewis v. Huie-Dodge Lumber Co., 121 La. 658, 46 S 685. Where one of a partnership, having become financially involved, made agreement, whereby he was not as an individual, to contract any indebtedness with any person other than defendant or companies in which he was interested, held not to constitute malicious interference with plaintiff's partnership business. McPherson v. Kenney, 198 Mass. 350, 84 NE 462.

4. Employe may recover from his employer for damages to his business by malicious circulation of letter by such employer. Willner v. Silverman [Md.] 71 A 962. It is actionable tort for one company to procure discharge of employe of another company in accordance with unjust rule agreed upon between them. Illinois Steel Co. v. Brenshall, 141 Ill. App. 36. Interference with lawful employment by threats is prohibited by Rev. St. 1899, § 2155, but such threat to be actionable must be of a substantial character adapted to influence a person of reasonable firmness. Carter v. Oster [Mo. App.] 112 SW 995.

5. Under Laws 1903, p. 308, c. 132, § 1, 2, when used for advertising purposes (Rhodes v. Sperry & Hutchinson Co., 193 N. Y. 223, 85 NE 1097), use may be restrained by statute, although no such right was given at common-law (Kunz v. Bosselman, 131 App. Div. 288, 115 NYS 650). Unauthorized use for advertising purposes is tort under Laws 1903, c. 132, p. 308, such statute being constitutional and good in part, although it were to be assumed that the requirement of written consent is unreasonable (Wyatt v. Wanamaker Supp, 110 NYS 900), and that part of law requiring prior obtaining of written consent of parent or guardian of minor being also valid (Wyatt v. James McCreery Co., 126 App. Div. 650, 111 NYS 86), use of accused person's photograph by public officers for purpose of identification will not be restrained (Mabry v. Kettering [Ark.] 117 SW 746).

9. This is true though there be no common duty, design, or concert of action be-jointly and severally liable,[10] nor is the liability of one lessened by the negligent acts of another.[11] Although defendants are not joint tort feasors, each will be liable to the full extent of the injury where the negligence of each was an efficient cause thereof.[12] A person may become liable by accepting the benefits of another's tort,[13] or lending assistance thereto,[14] but not by a reason of a lawful act [15] which does not involve a breach of duty.[16] The general rule that there is no contribution between joint wrongdoers [17] does not apply where one is blameless as between himself and another joint wrongdoer.[18] An individual and a sovereign power cannot be regarded as joint tort feasors.[19] The liability of persons acting in particular capacities and by reason of particular relationship is treated elsewhere.[20] tween them (Walton v. Miller's Adm'x [Va.] 63 SE 458), but there is no joint liability where the acts of negligence are not concurrent and injury does not grow out of common offense ,and, where one company properly loaded logs by which brakeman was killed and another company was carrier, there is no liability on loading company (Stephens v. Complaint is sufficient when it states that act was done for sole purpose of injuring plaintiff and not for purpose of serving legitimate purpose of defendant, the facts in themselves amounting only to an ordinary business transaction. Tuttle v. Buck [Minn.] 119 NW 946. Complaint for tortious injury, based upon violations of ordinance, should allege due enactment of such ordinance, its present force and effect, and set out its substance. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Pierson, 170 Ind. 543, 84 NE 1088. Pleading which shows that act of party was only passive and secondary is sufficent to entitle him to recover against active wrong-

A particular specification of misconduct is deemed to explain a preceding general charge.[24] Since each of the joint tort feasors is liable for the whole injury,[25] the injured party may proceed against one or all of several joint tort feasors,[26] but he is bound by whatever election he makes[27] and there can be but one satisfaction;[28] but the dismissal of an action against one,[29] or a covenant not to sue one,[30] or the obtaining of an unsatisfied judgment against one, does not operate as such release.[31] Where joint tort feasors are sued together, separate and different verdicts may be rendered,[32] but a judgment in tort is a unit and cannot be reversed as to one of two defendants and affirmed as to the other.[33]

One may proceed against them jointly or separately, since all are responsible without regard to degree of culpability and although part of damage may have resulted without fault of one, where separate acts of two parties are direct cause of one injury, it being impossible to apportion damage. Goldstein v. Tunick, 59 Misc. 516, 110 NYS 905. One may sue one or more of joint tort feasors or may dismiss his action against one or court may do so with his consent, and proceed against the other, and former will have no cause for complaint so long as he does not discharge the latter. Groot v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 152, 96 P 1019. Cotrespassers are jointly and severally liable. Staunton Mut. Tel. Co. v. Buchanan, 108 Va. 810, 62 SE 928.

27. But if party sue them all jointly and has judgment, afterwards he cannot sue any one of them separately, or vice versa. Gawne v. Bicknell, 162 F 587.

28. A release of one releases all joint tort feasors. Where servant was injured through defect in axle of wagon and also of street, his release of his master releases city. Mooney v. Chicago, 239 Ill. 414, 88 NE 194. Settlement with one joint tort feasor inures to benefit of all. Borchardt v. People's Ice Co., 106 Minn. 134, 118 NW 359. There can be but one recompense for a tort, and acceptance of compensation for injury from one releases others. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v Hilligoss [Ind.] 86 NE 485.

29. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Lester [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 499. Joint tort feasors may answer jointly or separately and court may dismiss action against one or more or make any direction as to one without affecting others. Tanzer v. Breen, 131 App. Div. 654, 116 NYS 110.

30. Release of one reserving right to sue others is in effect a mere covenant not to sue. Authorities discussed. Edens v. Fletcher [Kan.] 98 P 784; Texarkana Tel. Co. v. Pemberton [Ark.] 111 SW 257.

31. Nothing short of satisfaction or valid release of one joint tort feasor is available as a defense by other wrongdoers who are jointly liable. Tandrup v. Sampsell, 234 Ill. 526, 85 NE 331. Where two or more persons are jointly and severally liable for conversion, recovery against one must be followed by payment to be available as defense for another. Squire v. Ordemann, 194 N. Y. 394, 87 NE 435. Judgment without satisfaction against one of two joint wrongdoers who are sued separately is no bar to taking judgment against others, but, if they are sued jointly, taking judgment against one not only operates as a discontinuance but constitutes a bar to obtaining judgment against others. Cameron v. Kanrich, 201 Mass. 451, 87 NE 605. Where two are joined in action, plaintiff may prosecute his case to judgment first against one and then against the other, and judgment in first instance is not bar against judgment in the other. Tanzer v. Breen, 131 App. Div. 654, 116 NYS 110. The general rule in this country is that judgment against one joint tort feasor does not release others until after satisfaction, but in England and Virginia the mere recovery of judgment effects such release. Staunton Mut. Tel. Co. v. Buchanan, 108 Va. 810, 62 SE 928.

32. Different amounts may be awarded against them, punitive damages being allowed against one but not the other. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Roth [Ky.] 114 SW 264. Fact that action is brought against two parties jointly and that one is found not guilty does not release other from liability. Springfield Elec. L. & P. Co. v. Calvert, 134 Ill. App. 285.

33. Judgment in personal injury case against one street railway company and receiver of another. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Muttschall, 131 Ill. App. 639. But the judgment when rendered must stand or fall as to all, if rendered against all. Finley v. Southern R. Co. [Ga. App.] 64 SE 312.

TOWNS; TOWNSHIPS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[35]

§ 1. Creation, organization, status, and boundaries.[36] See 10 C. L. 1863.—Townships are the lowest grade of municipal corporations,[37] having but slight corporate autonomy,[38] and being in but a limited sense governmental agencies.[39] Their charters are repealable,[40] the principle of local self-government not being inherent therein,[41] and on repeal the inhabitants thereof must be subject to such government as the state under constitutional limitations may impose.[42] Limitations as to special legislation do not apply where the township involved may be deemed different in situation from all others.[43] Where a town is divided, the apportionment of indebtedness is governed by statute,[44] and a township has no vested rights in the delinquent taxes of detached territory, so as to prevent the division and the transfer of the right to collect from one town to another.[45]

§ 2. General powers and exercise thereof.[46] See 10 C. L. 1863.—Townships are usually endowed with very limited powers and liabilities.[47] A township being a mere subdivision of a county,[48] constitutional limitations imposed on "counties" are applicable.[49] The issue of railroad aid bonds may be permitted,[50] and a town of wrongdoer has any application in this country, but, in any event, it has no application to injury from crimes of lesser degree, or where recovery is sought from one standing in relation of matter to wrongdoer. Leeman v. Public Service R. Co. [N. J. Law] 72 A 8.

35. It treats of "townships," whether so-called or designated as "towns." Village and the like, though known as "towns," are treated in the topic Municipal Corporations, 12 C. L. 905. Matters common to all public corporations are treated in such topics as Public Contracts, 12 C. L. 1442; Public Works and Improvements, 12 C. L. 1473; Officers and Public Employes, 12 C. L. 1131.

38. Townships not corporate bodies; under Rev. St. 1905, § 1318, subd. 30, have only such corporate powers as are authorized by general assembly. Wittowsky v. Jackson County Com'rs [N. C.] 63 SE 275. While townships and other taxing districts are sometimes referred to as quasi municipal corporations, they are but territorial sections of counties, upon which power to perform functions of government of local application and interest is conferred. Id.

42. Board of Tp. Com'rs v. Buckly [S. C.] 64 SE 163.

43. Act establising town government (Act Feb. 17, 1906; 25 St. at Large, p. 280) not invalid as special legislation within Const. art. 3, § 34, where art. 7, § 11, authorizes system of government, and town in question being island largely used as summer resort, in fact property of state. Board of Tp. Com'rs v. Buckly [S. C.] 64 SE 163.

44. Where town divided under St. 1898, § 671, and § 672, provided for apportionment of indebtedness, etc., duty of apportionment under latter section rested on county board, and was precedent to enforcement of right to share of credits of town. Town of Emery v. Worcester, 137 Wis. 281, 118 NW 807. Ascertainment by county board clearly condition precedent. Id. Right to share, exclusively statutory and therefore exclusive. Id. Delegation of duty to town boards clearly not compliance with statute. Id.

45. Township of Stambaugh v. Iran County Treasurer, 153 Mich. 104, 15 Det. Leg. N. 368, 116 NW 569. Under Local Acts 1905, p. 770, No. 578; Act No. 577, p. 769, and Act No. 667, p. 1161, for purpose of changing territorial boundaries of townships and school districts, otherwise identical. Id. Legislature could validly empower township treasurer to receive moneys belonging to treasury, and to take steps to obtain same. Id. County treasurer and auditor general mere conduits through whom taxes were to be paid to township treasurer. Id.

Vote by town to buy water system and issue bonds, under St. 1904, pp. 469, 471, 473, c. 457, §§ 1, 5, 11, is within warning notifying voters that after acceptance of statute, under § 12, they would be called on to consider purchase, and, if they decided to buy, to pass necessary votes. Id.

52. Under Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 4202, 4203, 3441, et seq. as to authority over sidewalks, township authorities have power to prevent maintenance of sidewalk in unsafe condition, by abutting owner, especially where sidewalk almost essential to use of public highway. Welton v. Crystal Tp., 152 Mich. 486, 15 Det. Leg. N. 247, 116 NW 390. Under Comp. Laws, § 3441, et seq, making municipalities liable for injuries caused by defective sidewalks, etc., townships must maintain walks open to public in reasonably safe condition. Id. Sidewalk within limits of street in unincorporated village is under control of township authorities. Id.

53. Highways property of general public, not township. Posey Tp. v. Senour [Ind. App.] 86 NE 440. Strictly speaking, in the absence of statute, there is no local ownership of public highway bridges. Part of general system of highways. Karr v. Putnam County Com'rs, 170 Ind. 671, 85 NE 1. Township has no interest in public highways except that it is required to pay damages assessed on specific cases. Posey Tp. v. Senour [Ind. App.] 86 NE 440. Under Rev. Laws, c. 51, § 18, rendering town liable for defects in street, recovery can only be had where town had actual or constructive notice of defect. Craig v. Leominster, 200 Mass. 101, 85 NE 855. Notice of defect in street caused by moving building held under evidence not to be imputed to town officers. Id. Under Rev. Laws, c. 52, § 13, selectmen might require persons moving building to take precautions for protection of travelers. Id. Use of street for moving building, lawful, where permission secured from selectmen, under Rev Laws, c 52, § 13. Id. Where building moved and rope attached was left stretched 1½ feet above street in dark, it was defect in street. Id.

54. Township board must exercise taxing power in subordination to authority of county court to make apportionment required in Rev. St. 1899, § 9284 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4265). State v. Piper, 214 Mo. 439, 114 SW 1. Under statute, county court having township organization is required to apportion 80 per cent of tax to general county purposes and 20 per cent to county purposes. Id. Statute does not deprive township of right to levy road tax. Id. Statute not in conflict with Acts 1901, p. 254, authorizing road tax. Id.

Id. No liability on quantum meruit. Id. Remedy limited to assessment of damages under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 7775. Id. Gen. St. 1901, § 7826, does not authorize township boards to provide in whole or in part for arise from the mere rendition of services beneficial to a township and its inhabitants.[63] A contract by a township, and private parties for the building of a road which would benefit such private parties, and whereby the latter would pay the interest on the bonds for the work, is not contrary to good morals or public policy.[64] Where a contract for the purchase of a water plant is authorized, and the action taken is irregular, it may be ratified.[65] The right to rescind a bilateral contract with a town on the ground of fraud can only be exercised by the town.[66]

§ 5. Officers and employes.[67] —See 10 C. L. 1664.— Townships act, like other corporations, through duly authorized officers.[68] The authority to contract may be conferred solely on the trustee,[69] and, while road supervisors are commonly designated as township officers,[70] they are in no sense representatives of township as a body corporate.[71] The duties relative to highways may be imposed upon the supervisors[72] or trustees.[73] Clearly imposed duties may be compelled by mandamus.[74] The powers of a township advisory board are governed by statutes,[75] and such board may be a continuous body.[76] In the case of an emergency, statute may

63. Where attorneys rendered services in good faith for benefit of citizens to enforce railway franchise, believing themselves expressly employed by township and township employed other attorneys, there being no evidence that first attorneys looked to township for compensation, though entire board knew of their services, such facts were insufficient to raise an implied contract. Clark v. West, Bloomfield Tp., 154 Mich. 249, 15 Det. Leg. N. 721, 117 NW 638.

64. Agreement with owners of milldam where road would close new channel of stream and restore milldam. Electric Plaster Co. v. Blue Rapids City Tp., 77 Kan. 580, 96 P 68. Where township performed its portion of agreement, private parties could not object to liability on ground that contract was unauthorized (Id.), or was lacking in mutuality (Id.). Claim that officers declined to proceed unless mill owners would share expense, and that refusal would place them in unenviable light with patrons, insufficient to support theory that agreement was procured by duress. 74. Township supervisor failing to assess damages for materials taken in repairing highway (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 7775), may be compelled to perform duty by proper proceeding. Posey Tp. v. Senour [Ind. App.] 86 NE 440. Petition for mandamus to township trustee to furnish transportation for children of school age under Acts 1907, pp. 444, 445, c. 233 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 6423), insufficient since Acts 1899, pp. 150-158, c. 105, as amended by Acts 1901, pp. 415, 418, c. 185 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 9590-9602) prevents expenditure of township moneys unless approved by advisory board and prevents incurring of indebtedness, and petition did not show money on hand or authority to borrow. State v. Anderson, 170 Ind. 540, 85 NE 17.

New members assumed office impressed with duties and obligations of board and were bound to know provide for assessments by officers of an adjoining town.[77] Usually township officers are not personally liable for torts with reference to their official duties,[78] but, where an officer acting in a dual capacity neglected his duties and received the town's money for property, but failed to secure conveyance of the same, he was liable for return of money and interest.[79]

§ 6. Fiscal management.[80]—See 10 C. L. 1864.—Township funds are subject to legislative control,[81] and surplus moneys should be used according to statutes relative thereto.[82] Electors at a town meeting cannot authorize the satisfaction of a judgment for taxes at less than the amount of such judgment.[83] Statutes may authorize contributions to a town where the duty to repair highways is imposed and the expense is burdensome.[84]

§ 7. Claims.[85]—See 10 C. L. 1885.—The statutes may require that claims disallowed by a board of auditors be accompanied by a statement of the reason for such action,[86] and the want of jurisdiction of a board of supervisors to audit claims and assess taxes for payment thereof may be questioned by a taxpayer's action.[87] and abide by its acts. Id. Where membership of board changed pending suit, old members ceased to exist as officers. Id. No standing in court except to call attention to substitution. Id.

77. St. 1898, § 1152, providing for assessments by officers of adjoining town where people fail to elect town officers, makes temporary provision for emergency and is not violative of Const. art. 13, § 9, requiring officers to be elected by voters of town. Strange v. Oconto Land Co., 136 Wis. 516, 117 NW 1023. Town neglecting and refusing to elect officers cannot have town "authorities," and therefore officers of adjoining town may be lawfully authorized to act. Id. Statute does not violate Const. art. 4, § 23, requiring one system of town government, to be as nearly uniform as practicable, since rule is uniform for all towns. Id. Unconstitutionality not available to person assailing assessment, he not being injured. Id. Officers of adjoining town de facto. Id.

78. Officers not personally liable for damages to persons and property with respect to performance of official duties. Lienemann v. Costa, 140 Ill. App. 167. When unlawful or tortious act committed under guise of performing duty. Id. When ministerial duty performed in wrongful or negligent manner. Id. Where officers corruptly, willfully, or negligently fail to perform mandatory duty. Id. No liability attaches because of mere error or mistake or even negligence in performance of duties by township trustee. Theulen v. Viola Tp. [Iowa] 117 NW 26. Duties of township trustees quasi judicial, except duty of levying taxes. Id.

79. Town of Rolling v. Wunderlich [Wis.] 120 NW 515. Officer acting in dual capacity, receiving money for conveyance by society but failing to secure conveyance, and otherwise neglecting duties, clearly derelict in duty. Id. Where petition from association requested submission to town electors of question whether town should buy half of their half, and proposition was accepted, town prima facie purchased and association sold one-half interest in building and grounds, free from incumbrances. Sections 2, 4, supplementary to each other and fact that town received contribution from other towns did not bar receiving contribution from county. Id. Under statute "expense" and "whole expense" mean same, and court might order payment of portion of expense by county when so required by equity and justice. Id. Whether whole expense is burdensome, a question of fact. Id. Evidence held sufficient to justify decree awarding contribution from county. Id.

§ 1. Definition, and words or symbols available.[1]—See 10 C. L. 1865—A trade mark, is any sign, mark, symbol, word, or words which indicate the origin or ownership of an article as distinguished from its quality, and which others have not the right to employ for the same purpose.[2] It is not a subject of taxation, within the meaning of a statute of Kentucky, providing for the taxation of all property in that state.[3] No one can appropriate as a trade mark a generic name, or one descriptive of an article of trade, its qualities, ingredients, or characteristics,[4] unless by long usage they have acquired a meaning which denotes origin and identity,[5] and as to whether some words are a trade mark or merely descriptive depends upon the manner in which they are used.[6] Neither can an exclusive right be acquired to a geographical name,[7] nor to the use of a color unless connected with some symbol or design.[8] Nor can numbers, when used to indicate styles rather than origin and manufacture, be the subject of a valid trade mark.[9] Words used upon a manufactured article are not subjects of trade mark, unless so used as to identify the articles as that of one's manufacture.[10] Although words by themselves may not be a subject of a trade name, they may become so by being used in connection with other words.[11] No one can acquire a monopoly of a word that is a near imitation of one, the use of which is open to all for the truthful description of articles of trade and commerce.[12] A design though

One company cannot gain right to exclusive use in in its company name such words as "cheese cutter," which are merely descriptive of goods to which they are applied. Computing Cheese Cutter Co. v. Dunn [Ind. App.] 88 NE 93. "Spearmint" used upon chewing gum held descriptive. William Wrigley Jr., Co. v. Grove Co., 161 F 885. "Porosknit" as a trade mark for underwear, as descriptive. Chalmers Knitting Co. v. Columbia Mesh Knitting Co., 160 F 1013. "Elastic seam," as applied to drawers with an elastic strip, held descriptive term. Price-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639. "Flare Front," as applied to automobile lamps, held descriptive. Rushmore v. Manhattan Screw & Stamping Works [C. C. A.] 163 F 939. "Club," as applied to liquors, held discriptive. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Old Lexington Club Distilling Co., 31 App. D. C. 223. "Eureka," used upon pressboards, held not descriptive of grade. Case v. Murphey, 31 App. D. C. 245. "Monitor," used upon boiler injectors, held not descriptive but to denote origin. Edna Smelting & Refining Co. v. Nathan Mfg. Co., 30 App. D. C. 487. The termination "ota" is not a descriptive suffix, and when connected with "ceres," the name of the goddess of grain, is a valid trade mark on flour. Northwestern Consol. Milling Co. v. Mauser, 162 F 1004.

5. The word "Sunshine," used for many years to designate the origin and identity of stoves manufactured by complainant, held to be a valid trade-mark. Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. v. S. M. Howes Co., 201 Mass. 437, 87 NE 751.

6. "Stage," used upon appellant's playing cards, held descriptive and not part of his trademark but to indicate style, class, and grade. United States Playing Card Co. v. Clark Pub. Co., 30 App. D. C. 208.

7. "Lexington," used in the term "Old Lexington Club" to designate a whisky, held geographical name. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Old Lexington Club Distilling Co., 31 App. D. C. 223. "The American Girl" is a geographical descriptive name used to designate woman's shoes. Wolf Bros. & Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 413.

8. Buff-colored strip, in connection with the light colored body of a garment, held not distinguishing feature of its manufacture, but merely descriptive. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. J. A. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639.

9. Numbers held to indicate style of shoe rather than manufacture. Wolf Bros. & Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 413.

10. "Merrie Christmas" printed or woven at regular intervals in a ribbon, not a trade mark. Smith v. Krause, 160 F 270.

11. Held that the words "Lilliputian" and "Bazaar" were not a subject of a trade name standing alone, but where the words "Best & Co., Lilliputian Bazaar" were used to describe a place of business, another party could not use the words "Broadway Bazaar, Brooklyn's Best Lilliputian Store" to describe the same kind of business. Ball v. Broadway Bazaar, 194 N. Y. 429, 87 NE 674.

12. Held that "Ruberoid" was a misspelling of the word "rubberoid" and was not a simple in form may constitute a valid trade mark,[13] and is not invalid because stamped or cut into the goods.[14] The right of every man to his own name is indisputable, but he will not be permitted to use it in such a manner as to compass a fraud,[15] or to exclude others of the same name.[16]

§ 2. Acquisition, transfer and abandonment.[17]—See 10 C. L. 1867—A common-law property right may be acquired in a trade mark by use,[18] and acquirement does not depend upon any particular period of user. Once a trade mark is adopted in good faith and used, the right thereto inures.[19] Likewise, an alien's right of priority must be based on use in the United States.[20] One may have more than one trade mark for the same goods provided they indicate origin or ownership,[21] and also have separate trade marks for different classes or grades of an article,[22] nor it is material that the manufacture of an article had originally two or more purposes in adopting the particular mark,[23] or that he did not advertise such mark as his trade mark.[24] The mere advertisement of words or symbol without application to the goods themselves is insufficient to constitute a trade mark.[25] Consent to the appropriation of his trade mark by another is not to be inferred from long knowledge and silence,[26] nor will consent to the use of a patentee's name be inferred from mere assignment of the patent.[27] Rights acquired to trade mark under a lease expires with the term of the lease,[28] and, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the interest a retiring partner has in a trade mark remains with the partner who continues the business.[29] The right to a trade mark used to identify a patented article expires

28. A manufacturer of beer, known as "Laurer Beer," leased his premises to defendant. After the expiration of the lease, defendant continued to manufacture the beer under the same label. Held that defendant had no right to the use of the name "Laurer Beer Bottling Company." Laurer Brew. Co. v. Ehresman, 127 App. Div. 486, 111 NYS 266.

29. "Old Velvet," used to designate origin of a certain whisky, held the property of the remaining partner, and a transfer made by him later was valid and vested the trade-with the patent,[30] but as to whether a right to a name which is used upon a patented article expires with the patent depends upon whether the name is used to denote source of manufacture or type.[31] The assignor of a trade mark has no special right to the name of the assignee unless the latter's name is part of the trade mark,[32] but, if the assignee has acquiesced and approved of the use of his name in a certain manner, he will be estopped from using his name in that form.[33] An agreement, whereby manufacturers of similar products agree in what manner they will conduct their business, does not confer upon either the right to use the trade mark of the other.[34] A person's right to a registered trade mark in the United States is not forfeited because such person has been deprived of the right to manufacture the article in a foreign country.[35] The right to describe an article by the trade mark or patented name passes by implication of law to the person who purchases from the inventor or his assignee.[36]

§ 3. Infringement and unfair competition.[37] Infringement. See 10 C. L. 1368—A trade mark embraces and protects the component parts of an article.[38] The test of an infringement is whether the resemblance is calculated to deceive the ordinary buyer,[39] and the facts of each case must be taken into consideration to decide mark in the assignee. Bluthenthal v. Bigbie, 30 App. D. C. 118.

30. Held that elastic knitted strip in combination with the wooven body of a garment, and also the same color, became public property. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. J. A. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639. "Vertical Top," which was printed upon a cigar mold, held descriptive and that exclusive right to its use expired with the patent. Sternberg Mfg. Co. v. Miller, Du Brul & Peters Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 318. No one can be restrained from manufacturing the article unless he palms it off as the goods of the manufacturer, whose patent has expired. Id.

31. Held that the word "Monitor," which was used by the plaintiffs upon boiler injectors, was not a word indicating type, but manufacture, and that defendant's act in using such name was an infrigement of the plaintiff's trademark. Nathan Mfg. Co. v. Edna Smelting & Refining Co., 130 App. Div. 512, 114 NYS 1033. "Ludlow," as applied to valves and hydrants, held to have become generic within the meaning of the decision in the Singer Case. Ludlow Valve Mfg. Co. v. Pittsburg Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 26. Drawers under a patent were designated by the term "Elastic seam." Held that, upon the expiration of the patent, any one had the right to use the name to discribe goods of their manufacture. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. J. A. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639.

32. "Doctor A. Reed" printed above the design of a trademark held not part of such trademark. Reed Cushion Shoe Co. v. Frew [C. C. A.] 162 F 887.

33. Held that defendant could not use the phrase "Dr. A. Reed's Cushion Shoes" because of estoppel. Reed Cushion Shoe Co. v. Frew [C. C. A.] 162 F 887.

34. Complainant and defendant agreed that each would remove the trademark plate of the other when they refilled acetylene tanks. Held that this agreement did not constitute a license to use the tanks and was no defense to a suit for infringement. Prest-O-Lite Co. v. Post & Lester Co., 163 F 63.

35. The Carthusian Monks of France made a liquor, known as "Chartreuse." Said name was registered in the United States. They were expelled from France and their distillery was sold by the government to the defendants. Said defendants then manufactured and bottled liquor, using the same name, bottles, and labels as were used by the monks. The monks are manufacturing the same liquor in Spain as they did in France and selling the same in the United State, but put up in a somewhat different form. Held that defendants could not sell their product in the United States unless they used such words upon their labels and bottles that the public would not be deceived. Baglin v. Cusenier Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 25.

36. The corporate name "Mills-Edisonia" is permissible if used in connection with the exhibition of Edison machines. Edison v. Mills-Edisonia [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 191. A corporation who purchases machines of another's invention has a right to use the inventor's name to describe the machines used. Id.

Held an infringement of the trademark. Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. v. S. M. Howes Co., 201 Mass. 437, 87 NE 751.

39. To constitute a technical infringement of a trademark, the imitation must be identical, or the resemblance to the original must impart to an ordinary purchaser exercising reasonable care a misleading or false impression as to the origin of the goods he is buying. Hutchinson, Pierce & Co. v. Loewy [C. C. A.] 163 F 42. Held that the similiarity of names and the nearness of defendant's business, which was the

whether that particular case is an infringement.[40] Under the New York statutes it is an infringement of a trade mark to use the labels, marks, or name of another for the purpose of selling goods which were not manufactured by him.[41] An infringement of a name will not always be removed by merely using qualifying words.[42] Unfair competition consists in any marking, coloring, or advertising, by which the goods of one are sold for and on the reputation of those of another,[43] same as that of complainant, was sufficient to constitute an infringement of complainant's trade name. Ball v. Broadway Bazaar, 194 N. Y. 429, 87 NE 674. Held that defendants had no right to use the name of complainant's hotel "St. Francie" in the name of their hotel, "St. Francis Hotel Company," although the prices charged are not the same and they cater more to transient trade. Martell v. St. Francis Hotel Co. [Wash.] 98 P 116.

Stamp of a crescent shape, used upon drawers and boxes which contained same held not to so similate the stamp and boxes of complainant as to constitute unfair competition. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. J. A. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639. Where a firm engaged in the moving business by the name Scanlan & Bartell, inserted the name "White Line Moving & Storage Company, S. Williams, Proprietor" in the telephone directory near plaintiff's name, C. C. Williams, who was in the same business, held that the name "S. Williams" was used to get plaintiff's business and was unfair competition. Scanlan v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 862. Unfair competition for a bottle of beverages to use the bottles of his competitors and put the same upon the market containing goods of inferior quality. Breimeyer v. Star Bottling Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 119. Bottler of drinking water enjoined because of using a label and bottle which was similar to his competitor's product in color, style and type. National Water Co. v. O'Connell, 159 F 1001. Held that one, who had obtained knowledge of a secret formula by his associations with a firm manufacturing a patent remedy, would be restrained from selling or administering such remedy. Leslee E. Keeley Co. v. Hargraves, 236 Ill. 316, 86 NE 132. Held that complainant, the "Holeproof Hosiery Company," was entitled to a preliminary injunction because of unfair competition which consisted in the defendant using the word "No-Hole" in their name. "No-Hole Hosiery Company" and in simulating complainant's guaranty card. Holeproof Hosiery Co. v. Fitts, 167 F 378. The hiring of one who had been connected with another firm and using his name which was nearly similar to the name of the firm with which he was formerly with held unfair competition. L. Martin Co. v. Martin & Wilckes Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 409. Held that the use by the defendant of the words "Mill Wood," followed by "Mill Wood Distilling Co," and also labels and descriptive words, which were somewhat similar to words and labels used by the "Mellwood Distilling Co." and who used "Mell Wood" to designate their liquor, constituted unfair competition. Mellwood Distilling Co. v. Harper, 167 F 389. Druggist held chargeable with unfair competition by inviting the public to by "argyrol" of him and delivering nucleinate of silver in its place. Complainants used the artificial word "argyrol" to designate their product. Barnes v. Pierce, 164 F 213. Held that the "Sheffield Mill & Elevator Co." because of the use of the word "Sheffield" connected with the word "Mill" and because of their false representations were chargeable with unfair competition as against the "Sheffield-King Milling Co." Sheffield-King Milling Co. v. Sheffield Mill & Elevator Co., 105 Minn. 315, 117 NW 447. Where one manufactures a particular kind of bread and makes the loaves in a certain size, shape, and color, so that such combination denotes place of manufacture, such person will be protected against one imitating the loaves and wrappers. Geo. G. Fox Co. v. Hathaway, 199 Mass. 99, 85 NE 417. Defendant was enjoined from manufacturing the "Vertical Top" cigar mold upon which the patent of complainant had expired and further from using complainant's advertising matter, catalogues, etc., unless the defendant made it appear to the public that he, the defendant, was the manufacturer of the mold. Sternberg Mfg. Co. v. Miller, Du Brul & Peters Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 318. "Davids Ink" or "Davids Mucilage" followed by the words "Davids Manufacturing Company" held not to constitute unfair competition as against a firm using the same terms followed by the word "Thaddeus Davids Company," it also appearing that the defendant did not imitate complainant's labels in size, design, or color. Thaddeus Davids Co. v. Davids, 165 F 792.

44. One who manufacturers a roofing material called "Rúberoid" cannot enjoin another, manufacturing a like material, from using the name "RubberO" where it is not evident that the last named manufacturer did anything to deceive the public. Trinidad Asphalt Mfg. Co. v. Standard Paint Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 977.

connection with an appropriated name as will completely protect the rightful owner of that name from injury and the public from imposition.[45]

§ 4. Remedies and procedure.[46]—See 10 C. L. 1669—There is a common-law property right in a trade mark, the infringement of which gives rise to a cause of action.[47] In a technical trade mark case, question of deception, confusion, or injury, are unimportant,[48] and an injunction will be granted regardless of the intention of the infringer or the consequences of the infringement,[49] the question being whether there has been an injury to complainant's rights.[50] To entitle a party to an injunction, it must appear that the defendant, at the time of filing the bill, is doing, or threatening to do, that which constitutes, or will constitute, an invasion of complainant's rights.[51] Such a use of one's own name, unaccompanied by a caution or explanation so specific as to prevent confusion, may be enjoined,[52] but an averment in a bill for an injunction that the name was "calculated to deceive" is not sufficient.[53] A preliminary injunction will not be granted unless the proof is clear and conclusive,[54] but, if the essential questions involved in a suit for infringement of a trade mark were decided in another suit involving like questions, a preliminary injunction will be granted.[55] The fact that complainant allowed another than the defendant to infringe upon his rights will not deprive him of the right to an injunction.[56] Equity will withhold relief where the person asserting a grievance has not exercised reasonable diligence in seeking redress [57] and will be reluctant, except in a clear case, to enjoin a religious society,[58] but equity will not, as a general rule, refuse an injunction on account of delay, even though the delay may be such as to preclude an accounting of profits.[59] One seeking equitable relief against infringement must come into court with clean hands.[60] The decree must not be too broad.[61]

45. Sternberg Mfg. Co. v. Miller, Du Brul & Peters Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 318. Held that defendant could not use the term "Ludlow Valves," which had been used upon a patent which had expired, unless it use such words as would indicate source of manufacture. Ludlow Valve Mfg. Co. v. Pittsburg Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 26.

53. There should be a clear averment that the name is used with intent to deceive in the respects claimed in the bill. Industrial Press v. Smith Pub. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 842.

54. Held that the complainant case was so doubtful that the relief would be denied, as it was not conclusive that defendant had infringed the trademark upon his cigarettes. Anargyros & Co. v. Anargyros [C. C. A.] 167 F 753.

55. The questions involved had been decided in a previous suit. Carmel Wine Co. v. Palestine Hebrew Wine Co., 161 F 654.

56. A cigar manufacturer can enjoin the use of his name even though he allowed his brother to infringe upon his rights for a number of years, the said brother afterwards having assigned his rights. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co. v. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co., 222 Pa. 116, 70 A 968.

57. That complainants slept on their rights for 25 years, held to indicate no wrong in the defendants. Salvation Army in U. S. v. American Salvation Army, 62 Misc. 360, 114 NYS 1039.

58. It is not sufficient to show that the name and methods of such society bear a slight resemblance to another religious body. Salvation Army in U. S. v. American Salvation Army, 62 Misc. 360, 114 NYS 1039.

59. Held that plaintiff had not lost its right because of laches. Sheffield-King Mill. Co. v. Sheffield Mill & Elevator Co., 105 Minn 315, 117 NW 447.

60. The complainants advertised its water as "bottled at the spring" when in fact it was bottled in the city also declared in such advertisements that such water was a cure for certain diseases, which was contrary to the truth. Bear Lithia Springs Co. v. Great Bear Springs Co., 71 N. J. Eq. 595, 71 A 383. Equity will not apply the doctrine of estoppel to aid a person infringing another's name or trademark. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co. v. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co., 222 Pa. 116, 70 A 968. One who has had

In order to give a person a right of action for unlawful competition, it is not necessary that the public should be actually deceived, but it is sufficient if the infringement has a tendency to deceive,[62] and, in a bill to enjoin unfair competition, a court of equity upon granting an injuction may also decree an account of the profits made by the defendant by means of unfair competition;[63] but, in such case, the defendant is not also liable to account for damages suffered by complainant.[64] An exclusive or proprietary right in words is not necessary to obtain an injunction against unfair competition in trade by the deceptive use of such words.[65] Several persons can sue jointly in equity where they all suffer a common wrong at the hands of another.[66] A bill for an injunction is not demurrable because the complainant is not entitled to the full relief prayed for.[67] Where complainant and defendant are citizens of the same state, an action cannot be sustained in the federal court as one for unfair competition in trade solely.[68]

§ 5. Statutory registration, regulation and protection.[69] See 10 C. L. 1871—One who has a common-law right to a trade mark is entitled to have it registered,[70] and mere delay to assert one's right to a trade mark cannot be made the ground of successful opposition to its registration.[71] Such registration is prima facie evidence of ownership.[72] If in the opinion of the commissioner of patents the registration of a proposed trade mark will "be likely to cause confusion or mistake in the minds of the public" or "deceive purchasers," he is bound to reject it,[73] but, if two marks the benefit of a patent during its life cannot set up its invalidity later for the purpose of claiming the name by, which the patent was known, as a trademark. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. v. J. A. Scriven Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 639. Held not a fraud upon the public to use the fac simile of Dr. Keeley's signature on bottles although he was dead, but that its use represented that the contents was the genuine product. Leslee E. Keeley Co. v. Hargreaves, 236 Ill. 316, 86 NE 132. Complainants, manufacturers of "A. N. Chamberlain's Immediate Relief," denied an injunction to restrain defendants from infringing such trademark for the reason that complainants had misrepresented their medicine. Chamberlain Medicine Co. v. Chamberlain Medicine Co. [Ind. App.] 86 NE 1025. The assignment of a family name by a brother of a cigar manufacturer without any apparent intent to convey any particular formula or secret process is evidence of fraud upon manufacturer's rights and will deprive the assignee of the right to plead laches or estoppel. Portuondo Cigar Co. v. Portuondo Mfg. Co., 222 Pa. 116, 70 A 968.

61. Defendant who used complainant's trademark on stoves or parts of same could not be enjoined from selling such parts if he first removed the trademark. Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. v. S. M. Howes Co., 201 Mass. 437, 87 NE 751.

62. O'Connell v. National Water Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 545. But it is sufficient if the resemblance is such that they are likely upon comparison to mistake one article for the other. Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. v. S. M. Howes Co., 201 Mass. 437, 87 NE 751. Where the trademarks and labels are not identical but bear such close resemblance that it is plain that they were intended to mislead, their use may be enjoined. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co. v. Portuondo Cigar Mfg. Co., 222 Pa. 116, 70 A 968.

63. L. Martin Co. v. Martin & Wilckes Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 294. This is especially true if the defendant has acted fraudulently. Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. v. S. M. Howes Co., 201 Mass. 437, 87 NE 751.

73. Sections 2 and 4 of the trademark act (33 St. at L. 724, c. 592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 1008). Held proper for the commissioner of patents to reject the words do not prima facie conflict, the burden of proof is upon the complainant to show that the defendant's mark is in fact likely to deceive purchasers.[74] A word which has been used in connection with a number of patented articles to denote origin can be registered.[75] Registration under certain conditions is not effected because the person made a false oath in obtaining the registration.[76] The patent office should not recognize a property right in a mark and accord it registration, when the courts, upon the same facts, would decline to protect the mark when registered.[77] Descriptive words[78] or geographical names cannot be registered under the federal statute.[79] Under the "ten-years clause" a surname or descriptive words may be registered if used exclusively to denote origin of goods for more than ten years next preceding the enactment of the statute of 1905,[80] but, if the use of a

"Chancellor Club" as a trademark for cocktails, as the words would be confused with a prior trademark, "Club Cocktails." In re S. C. Herbst Importing Co., 30 App. D. C. 297. Registration of "Elderwiess Maltine" held properly rejected because of intent to use it as misleading brand on intoxicant and thereby incidentally injure nonintoxicating "Maltine Plain" sold by appellee. Schoenhofen Brew. Co. v. Maltine Co., 30 App. D. C. 340. Registration of a trademark for cement consisting of an Indian's head shown in profile held properly rejected as liable to be confused with another trademark consisting of a front view of an Indian's head and also used upon cement. In re Indian Portland Cement Co., 30 App. D. C. 463. "Jewel" as applied to gasoline or vapor stoves held properly rejected as liable to be confused with "Jewel" as applied to wood and coal stoves and that both belonged to the same genus. American Stove Co. v. Detroit Stove Works, 31 App. D. C. 304. Six pointed star with the letters "G. E." inscribed in monagram in the center held properly rejected as a trademark for beer as it would be confused with a six pointed star surrounded by two circles with the words "The Celebrated Star Lager Beer" inscribed within the inner and outer circle. Ehret v. Star Brewery Co., 31 App. D. C. 507. "Victoria" associated with design used as trademark upon millinery goods held not liable to be confused with "Victor" used with entirely different design as trademark upon similar goods. Andrew McLean Co. v. Adams Mfg. Co., 31 App. D. C. 509. Held that "Old Lexington Club" as a trademark for whisky would be confused with "Lexington Club" and could not even be registered under the "ten year's clause." Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Old Lexington Club Distiling Co., 31 App. D. C. 223.

74. Andrew McLean Co. v. Adams Mfg. Co., 31 App. D. C. 509.

75. Held that the word "Monitor" which the appellee had used on several forms of steam boiler injectors was a subject of trademark and had been used to denote origin and was not descriptive of any type of injector. Edna Smelting & Refining Co. v. Nathan Mfg. Co., 30 App. D. C. 487.

76. The oath was made that the use had been "exclusive" for 10 years previous. Held under the facts of the case that the words "such use had been exclusive" were surplusage and did not effect the registration. Capewell Horse Nail Co. v. Mooney, 167 F 575.

77. Held that appellee's mark should have been refused registration as the label which he used with the mark was a fraud upon the public and would not be protected in a court of equity. Levy v. Uri, 31 App. D. C. 441.

78. "Self-Loading" as applied to cartridges held descriptive word and not registerable as a trademark. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. v. Peters Cartridge Co., 30 App. D. C. 505. "Eureka" as a trademark for pressing boards held not descriptive of grade but a valid trademark. Case v. Murphey, 31 App. D. C. 245. "Club" as applied to liquors held descriptive. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Old Lexington Club Distilling Co., 31 App. D. C. 223.

79. "Orient," the letters E and I being printed as a monogram and the word inclosed in a wreath, was refused registration as a trademark for ink ribbons, it being held that the word was a geographical name under § 5, Trademark Act of Congress 1905. In re Crescent Typewriter Supply Co., 30 App. D. C. 324. "Lexington" which was used in the term "Old Lexington Club" as the name of a whisky held geographical name. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Old Lexington Club Distilling Co., 31 App. D. C. 223.

80. Held that the name "Wm. A. Rogers" as a mark applied to silverplated ware could be registered under 33 Stat. at L. 725, c. 592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 670, and was not a simulation of the marks "Wm. Rogers Mfg. Co." or "Wm. Rogers and Sons." Rogers v. International Silver Co., 30 App. D. C. 97. Held that the words "Shredded Whole Wheat" were descriptive of a product manufactured by different person and that appellant had not had the exclusive use of the words ten years prior to the statute. Natural Food Co. v. Williams, 30 App. D. C. 348. "Health Food" although descriptive could be registered as appellee had used the words exclusively as provided by the statute. Battle Creek Sanitarium Co. v. Fuller, 30 App. D. C. 411. "Exclusive" under this statute does not mean "the right to exclude." Held that "Sterling" was a descriptive word and that the appellant had not the exclusive use of word as provided in the statute. Worster Brew. Corp. v. Rueter & Co., 30 App. D. C. 428. Registration of the words "Old Tucker" was refused under this statute because another distilling company had used the words "J. C. Tucker Rye" as a mark for its brand of whisky. Brown-Forman Co. v. Beech Hill Distilling Co., 30 App. D. C. 485.

surname was invalid before such statute, it cannot be made valid by registration.[81] If the examiner of interferences sustains certain grounds of a demurrer and the opposition fails to ask leave to amend the allegations before the appeal to the commissioner, it is then discretionary with him to allow or refuse leave to amend.[82] Rules promulgated by the commissioner of patents and which are within his authority must be complied with,[83] and in an interference proceeding the decision of the patent office that a given words is valid as a trade mark is conclusive,[84] but if an applicant for registration of a trade mark is dissatisfied with the decision of the commissioner of patents, he may appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.[85] In a proceeding to determine the right of parties to register a trade mark, the last applicant has the burden of showing prior adoption and use.[86] A petition for the cancellation of a registered trade mark must contain a statement of fact sufficiently full to show that the petitioner has been injured by the registry of the mark he seeks to have canceled.[87] An apposition to a trade mark if filed within thirty days by the opponent's attorney may be verified by him within a reasonable time.[88]

TRADE UNIONS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[89]

§ 1. Nature of trade unions.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1872—Men may combine and cooperate for the advantageous marketing of their skill and labor,[91] but this right is limited by the right of the public to have industrial and commercial freedom maintained and promoted.[92] An unincorporated trade union may not be made defend-

81. Act Cong. Feb. 20, 1905, c. 592, § 1, 33 Stat. 724 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 1008). "Davids" which had been used as a trademark ten years previous to the statute held not made valid by such statute. Thaddeus Davids Co. v. Davids, 165 F 792.

82. Battle Creek Sanitarium Co. v. Fuller, 30 App. D. C. 411.

83. Rule 49 of the rules of the patent office relating to trademarks requiring certain questions to be raised within a stated time before the examiner of interferences held valid and that one who interfered could not later contend that no interference existed. Somers v. Newman, 31 App. D. C. 193.

84. The parties in this suit were rival applicants for registration of the name "Stage" as a trademark. U. S. Playing Card Co. v. Clark Pub. Co., 30 App. D. C. 208.

85. Held that the provisions in §§ 4914, 4915, giving a remedy by a bill in equity where a patent is refused is applicable in trademark cases under § 9 of the Act of Feb. 20, 1905. Atkins & Co. v. E. B. Moore, 212 U. S. 285, 53 Law. Ed. —.

86. Bluthenthal v. Bigbie, 30 App. D. C. 118.

87. The fact must not be left to conjecture, but most affirmatively appear. Demurrer sustained because the petition did not state sufficient facts. McIlhenny's Son v. New Iberia Extract of Tobacco. Co., 30 App. D. C. 337.

88. Held that the opposition filed in the first place was void and that the opposition, entitled an amendment, was a new opposition and as such came too late. Hall's Safe Co. v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 31 App. D. C. 498.

89. Deals with trade unions and employes' associations as organizations, and with the legality of their acts and the acts of their members in carrying out the purpose of the organizations, but excludes particular aspects of such acts as giving rise to questions to which other topics are specifically devoted. See Conspiracy, 11 C. L. 675; Constitutional Law, 11 C. L. 689; Injunction, 12 C. L. 152; Master and Servant, 12 C. L. 665, Threats, 12 C. L. 2124. See, also, Building and Construction Contracts, 11 C. L. 464. This topic also excludes the organization or formation of unions as corporations (see Corporations, 11 C. L. 810), or voluntary associations (see Associations and Societies, 11 C. L. 308.)

91. Kealey v. Faulkner, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 49.

92. Held that, though leading general purpose of Amalgamated Window Glass Workers of America was to protect and promote interests of its members, many of its ancillary purposes and methods plainly contravened public policy and rendered the asso-

ant in a suit to restrain acts in furtherance of a strike,[93] and such association cannot, in the absence of statutory authority, be sued in the name of its president,[94] but statutes have been enacted in many of the states modifying the common-law rule.[95] In equity, a few may be made plaintiffs or defendants for all,[96] but this rule depends upon their being members of a class who have a common interest.[97]

Union labels.[See 8 C. L. 2142]—Under the New York statute, others cannot use a colorable imitation of a union label, even though associated with distinguishing words or names,[98] and the question is not whether the public will be deceived but whether there is a "colorable imitation."[99]

Employer's associations.[See 8 C. L. 2142]—Employers may combine in unions or associations.[1] Such an association cannot collect a penalty for the disobedience of an order, unless the order was one which was rightfully and lawfully given.[2] While an individual employer may agree with a labor union to employ only its members,[3] yet, when such agreement is participated in by an association of employers, in whole or in part, in any community, it becomes oppressive and contrary to public policy.[4]

§ 2. The union and the public.[5]—[See 10 C. L. 1872]—The legality of a combination not to work for an employer depends upon the purpose for which the combination is formed.[6] Members of a trade union may peaceably quit their employment[7] for any ground that seems to them sufficient.[8] Thus, a demand for more wages and a shorter day is properly enforcible by a strike,[9] and to that end the strikers may seek the aid of fellow-workmen[10] employed by others,[11] but they cannot use ciation an illegal organization. Kealey v. Faulkner, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 49.

unlawful means to accomplish their purpose,[12] and if they do, a cause of action for damages arises.[13] It is no defense to an unlawful strike that the employer entered into an illegal combination with other manufacturers.[14] Intimidation or coercion by fines or threats of fines for the purpose of compelling members to quit work will be enjoined,[15] but unlawful acts of a few members of a union do not justify the court in enjoining the union,[16] and strikers may not be denied the right to pursue a legitimate end in a legitimate way simply because they have overstepped the mark and trespassed upon the rights of their adversary.[17] An employer has no concern with the imposition of fines by a union upon its members, unless such imposition is a violation of the right of the employer.[18] Nonunion men have a right to seek and gain employment and to come and go without being coerced by members of a union,[19] and if their dismissal is procured by the extortion of fines from their employer, or other unlawful means, they may recover damages of the union.[20] Picketing is usually held not unlawful per se,[21] but it has been held that picketing, although peaceable, is an act of intimidation and an unwarrantable interference with rights,[22] and that the slightest evidence of threats, violence, or intimidation of any character is sufficient to make picketing unlawful.[23] The boycott may be used by a labor union in furtherance of the objects of its existence,[24] provided the means by which it is enforced is not illegal,[25] but the union has no right, by unlawful means, to compel others to break off business relations with the one from whom they have withdrawn their patronage,[26] or to interfere with the business of another by means of force, menaces, or intimidation, so as to prevent others from entering into or remaining in his employ,[27] or to coerce the employer to pay a fine for breach of his agreement.[28] Whether the sending of "unfair" [29] notices is unlawful is not well settled.[30]

§ 3. The union and its members.[31] See 10 C. L. 1873.—The members of a union have no right to conspire together to suspend a member unlawfully.[32] So long as the by-laws of a union relate to matters in which no one is interested except the association and its members, and violate no rights of third parties or rule of public policy, they are valid,[33] and fines imposed upon a member for purposes of discipline may be proper and lawful,[34] but a fine imposed upon a member for the purpose of coercing him into injuring another in person or property or compelling him to do a criminal act, is unlawful.[35] The taking of an appeal from an order resulting from discipline of an association does not amount to a waiver of damages resulting from the illegal acts of the members,[36] but, where a member of an unincorporated trade union brings an action for unlawful expulsion and such further general relief, he will not be allowed to subsequently bring another action for damages for such expulsion.[37]

A stockholder in a corporation is not an employer of labor within the meaning of the by-laws of a union which admits such employers to its membership.[38]

TRESPASS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[45]

§ 1. Acts constituting trespass and right of action therefor.[46]—See 10 C. L. 1875

The action in trespass will lie for any violation of another's right of possession [47] by any unlawful and unauthorized entry upon his premises,[48] although there be no attempt to retain exclusive possession thereof [49] and no actual malice or injury intended.[50] Such acts as an invasion accompanied by the unauthorized erection of a fence,[51] cutting of timber,[52] or entering of a dwelling house,[53] and even, in some cases, the act of blasting on one's own premises so as to throw rock upon another's,[54] or upon the public highway from which injury results,[55] the occupancy of land under a tax deed void on its face,[56] the wrongful retention of possession of real property though lawfully secured [57] or when secured through fraud and misrepresentation,[58] the unlawful procurement of an eviction in an action at law,[59] and the

44. Treaty under constitution does not become law of land until ratified. United States v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165. Private rights not affected until ratification. Id.

45. Includes all matters relating to the remedy at law by action for damage for trespass on land. Trespass to try title under the Texas statute is also included. Trespass to the person (see Assault and Battery, 11 C. L. 285, and like topics), trespass as a taking within eminent domain laws (see Eminent Domain, 11 C. L. 1898), and degree of care owed to trespassers (see Negligence 12 C. L. 966, and topics treating of actionable negligence), are excluded.

54. Though there be no negligence. Blackford v. Heman Const. Co., 132 Mo. App. 157, 112 SW 287. Mere blasting on private premises is not necessarily a trespass but depends on circumstances. Miller v. Twiname, 129 App. Div. 623, 114 NYS 151. In blasting, measure of defendant's duty is reasonable care and prudence. Id. If one is rightfully using explosives on his own land in blasting, burden of proof to show negligence is on complainant. Birmingham Ore & Min. Co. v. Grover [Ala.] 48 S 682. Rule that one who, by blasting, throws rocks and material upon adjacent land of his neighbor is liable for injury resulting has no application when person blasting has right to use land upon which material is thrown. Miller v. Twiname, 129 App. Div. 623, 114 NYS 151.

55. One throwing material on traveler on highway by blasting on his own premises is ordinarily liable for trespass, irrespective of question of negligence, but this rule does not apply where plaintiff went on defendant's land on business and retreated to highway to avoid blast. Miller v. Twiname, 129 App. Div. 623, 114 NYS 151.

Trespass to the person.[62]—It is trespass to the person to commit any assault or direct physical injury.[63]

Right of entry and matters of justification.[See 10 C. L. 1876]—A person acting under an easement,[64] a proper license[65] or permission,[66] or necessity,[67] and the state, in cases of exigency or overwhelming necessity and in the exercise of eminent domain,[68] and municipal corporations, in some instances,[69] may invade private property without incurring a liability in trespass.

Parties in the tort.[See 10 C. L. 1877]—The one actually committing the trespass is liable, though he act at the instance of another.[70] A corporation is liable for a trespass committed by a vice principal in the performance of corporate business.[71]

§ 2. Actions.[72] A. At law.[See 10 C. L. 1878]—At common law, only, action on the case would lie for secondary trespass.[73] Trespass quare clausum fregit lies through fraud. Brown v. American Tel. & T. Co. [S. C.] 63 SE 744.

Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Tuvin [Ala.] 48 S 79. There cannot be a permitted trespass. Bright v. Bacon [Ky.] 116 SW 268.

67. NOTE. Trespass justified by necessity: A violent storm arose, whereby a boat and its occupants were placed in great danger, and in order to save them plaintiff was compelled to moor the boat to defendant's dock. Defendant's servant unmoored the boat, whereupon it was driven ashore by the violence of the tempest, without plaintiff's fault, and destroyed, and plaintiff and the occupants of the sloop were cast into the water and upon the shore, and were injured. In an action for damages, held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Ploof v. Putnam, 81 Vt. 471, 71 A 188.

The cases illustrating the doctrine announced in this case are few, but there appears to be authority in support of it. Among the several defenses that may be interposed to an action of trespass is that of necessity in entering upon the land of another for the preservation of life. Jaggard, Torts, Vol. 2, 678. Personal property of another may be sacrificed to prevent loss of life. Mouse's Case, 12 Co. 63. A traveler on a highway which has become impassable by a sudden and recent obstruction may pass upon adjoining land without becoming a trespasser because of the necessity. Campbell v. Race, 7 Cush. [Mass.] 408, 54 Am. Dec. 728; Morey v. Fitzgerald, 56 Vt. 487, 48 Am. Rep. 811. An entry upon another's land may be made for the purpose of preventing the spread of fire. American Print Works v. Lawrence, 23 N. J. Law 590, 57 Am. Dec. 420. In Proctor v. Adams, 113 Mass. 376, 18 Am. Rep. 500, defendant went upon plaintiff's beach for the purpose of saving and restoring to the lawful owner a boat which had been driven ashore, and was in danger of being carried off by the sea, and there was no trespass. There is authority to the effect that the owner of a shade tree, finding another's horse hitched to it, is not liable in trespass for removing the horse to a safe place. Gilman v. Emery, 54 Me. 460. 73. Trespass on case or secondary trespass was where act itself did not directly produce injury but damage resulted as consequence. Bever v. Swecker, 138 Iowa, 721, 116 NW 704. Under common law, action would be on case and not quare clausum fregit, for injury resulting from trespass alike for cursory and for prolonged trespass,[74] and, in some cases, the owner may either sue therein or have the election of other remedies.[75]

Parties.[See 10 C. L. 1879]—At common law, trespass could only be maintained against the immediate wrongdoer.[76] The right to maintain an action in trespass will lie in favor of such parties as a joint owner,[77] a co-tenant,[78] a life tenant where there is actual damage to his possession,[79] a wife in the exclusive possession of real property,[80] a husband in case of a trespass and assault upon his wife,[81] and a purchaser, without the grantor being made a party,[82] where such purchaser seeks to recover for trespass continuing after the purchase,[83] and not for that occurring prior thereto.[84]

Actual possession or title.[See 10 C. L. 1878]—The general rule, to which there are some exceptions and qualifications,[85] is that plaintiff must show actual [86] or constructive [87] possession under color of title [88] in himself or in his proper representative,[89] at the time the trespass was committed,[90] though possession at commence-subsequent to termination of act causing such trespass, as where injury arose subsequent to completion of road bed of railroad. Willis v. White & Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 942.

78. The right of one cotenant to maintain trespass against another is treated elsewhere. See Tenants in Common and Joint Tenants, 12 C. L. 2116.

79. A life tenant cannot maintain an action for trespass, except for actual damages to his possession; hence may not maintain action for conversion or removal of trees but may maintain trespass quare clausum fregit. Daffin v. Zimmerman Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 109.

84. A purchaser cannot recover for a trespass on land prior to its purchase by him. Boyd v. Schreiner [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 100; Porter v. Aberdeen & R. Co., 148 N. C. 563, 62 SE 741.

85. Under Code 1896, § 4137, owner of land may recover in action for timber trespass whether he be in possession at time of trespass or not. Long v. Cummings [Ala.] 47 S 109. Owner of land though not in actual possession may sue for trespass thereon, under Ky. St. § 2361, and since the word "owner" in statute meaning one who owns land by title of record deducible from commonwealth or who has acquired title by adverse possession, one who has acquired title by either way cannot recover. Scroggins v. Nave [Ky. App.] 119 SW 158. Owner is not prevented from maintaining action against second trespasser by reason of wrongful possession of first, since trespasser acquires no right to property, hence fact that marshal was in possession under void process is no defense to action for damages against collector of port wrongfully taking possession of vessel. Ker v. Bryan [C. C. A.] 163 F 233. One not in actual possession at time of alleged trespass may maintain an action against mere trespasser. Beauchamp v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 130. It is not essential in New York that state as plaintiff, in order to recover, must show title as against stranger. People v. Pulver, 60 Misc. 256, 113 NYS 139. Judgment should be for plaintiff where he has established prima facie case of title, and deeds set up by defendant to show title in him do not identify the land as that described in complaint. People v. Pulver, 60 Misc. 256, 113 NYS 139.

88. Phillips v. Babcock Bros. Lumber Co., 5 Ga. App. 634, 63 SE 808. Holder of invalid tax deed has no right to maintain action for trespass, even though he continues paying taxes on the land. Kraus v. Congdon [C. C. A.] 161 F 18.

89. One, having title and securing possession, may hold possession through his tenant sufficient to maintain action for timber trespass. McGee v. Louisiana Lumber Co. [La.] 49 S 475. Owner may set up possession of his tenant to establish prescription in himself. Moore v. Ensign-Oscamp Co. 131 Ga. 421, 62 SE 229.

90. Buck v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 699. Evidence held not to show pos-ment of suit is immaterial.[91] Plaintiff must recover upon the strength of his own title as shown,[92] and the burden is on plaintiff to show title [93] especially where title without possession is relied upon,[94] it being sufficient to defeat a prima facie case resting on title alone that defendant show title in a third party.[95] A plaintiff resting his case on title alone may make a prima facie case by showing that both parties claim under the same grantor,[96] since in such case the elder is the better title,[97] but this does not prevent the showing of another title from a different source.[98] A defendant cannot set up defects in an apparently good title personal to the real or original owner.[99] While in some cases possession is presumed from legal title,[1] plaintiff cannot base his action upon the constructive possession of land in the actual possession of another.[2] Title may not be proven where possession is the only issue.[3] A mere trespasser acquires no rights by occupancy for a less time than the limitation period.[4] Where the holder of the legal title enters under the same, no subsequent constructive possession of another, even under color of title, can overlap his possession[5].

93. Burden of proof is upon plaintiff to prove title when his title is put in issue. Warden v. Addington [Ky.] 115 SW 241. It is not necessary for defendant to show title in himself, since he is entitled to verdict when he shows that plaintiff never was in possession and that true title is in third person. Leverett v. Tift [Ga. App.] 64 SE 317. Burden of proof is upon a party claiming under exception in deed to show that land in question comes fully within such exception in accordance with intentions of parties. Shinnecock Hills & Peconic Bay Realty Co. v. Aldrich, 116 NYS 532. And it is not necessary that defendant show title in himself. Thurman v. Leach [Ky.] 116 SW 300.

94. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 3877, plaintiff never having been in possession must show title. Gaskins v. Gray Lumber Co. [Ga. App.] 64 SE 714.

5. Nearen v. State [Ala.] 47 S 338.

6. Trespass vi et armis to person, and trespass vi et armis and de bonis asportatis may be conjunctively alleged in complaint where alleged trespasses are parts of same transaction, hence, allegations of unlawful entry, assault and carrying away of goods as part of same transaction may be so joined. Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89.

7. Allegation that defendant by agent entered plaintiff's house and took from her possession and carried away her goods, etc., is sufficient. Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89.

basis for an action either in strict trespass or on the case.[9] Although the items of the damage sought,[10] and the elements warranting its allowance,[11] may be plead in general terms, the declaration must show that multiple damages are sought,[12] and it is not improper for it to contain an allegation of good faith.[13] An allegation of simple negligence will not sustain an issue in trespass,[14] nor will a plea of consent raise the question of negligence.[15] Plaintiff is entitled to recover upon proof of his possession and of wrongful entry by the defendant,[16] and need not prove want of consent to the trespass,[17] nor need he even prove title where the plea is the general issue;[18] but he must confine his proof to the issues raised by the pleadings,[19] and must sustain the full burden of proof when the trespass is alleged to have been in violation of the terms of a nonspecific contract,[20] where he seeks exemplary damages,[21] although in such case malice may be presumed from a total disregard of the rights of another,[22] and where plaintiff relies on title without possession.[23]

Evidence.[See 10 C. L. 1881]—While circumstantial evidence is admissible to show that the trespass was committed by the defendant and with its knowledge and consent,[24] and to show the extent of an injury not susceptible of exact proof,[25] immaterial evidence[26] outside the issues is inadmissible.[27] Plaintiff's erroneous statements to a third party do not estop him from introducing evidence to prove the facts.[28] least nominal damages where the evidence of trespass is clear,[29] and may determine undisputed boundaries to be as alleged in the petition,[30] but should refuse misleading instructions[31] and should leave the question of possession,[32] the allowance of exemplary damages,[33] the question of reasonable care in the use of one's own premises,[34] and the amount of damages where the evidence is conflicting,[35] for the determination of the jury.

Verdict and judgment.[See 10 C. L. 1885]—Since the validity of the estimate will be favored,[38] a verdict upon the issues raised by the pleadings[37] and sufficiently supported by the evidence is valid, although it may not appear whether the allowance made represents single or treble damages.[38] The proof must clearly sustain the allowance made in the verdict and judgment,[39] but the plaintiff is not precluded from recovering a less amount or on fewer items than alleged in the petition.[40] If the verdict fails to allow multiple damages under a proper state of facts, such allowance should be made in the judgment.[41]

(§ 2) B. In equity.[42]—[See 10 C. L. 1885]—Equity will not interfere to enjoin a single act of simple trespass,[43] but in the case of continued[44] and repeated trespass, injunction is the proper[45] remedy. To authorize equitable interference to restrain a threatened trespass, there must be some distinct equitable ground, such as insolvency,[46] the prevention of irreparable injury or multiplicity of suits.[47]

Equitable remedy will be granted with reluctance where the rights of the parties have not been determined at law,[48] and not at all where other persons are not affected,[49] or where such rights are in controversy at law,[50] but, after a determination of such rights, the granting of an injunction rests in the sound discretion of the court.[51] The mere fact that ownership may be alleged in the plaintiff,[52] or that the action involves a controversy as to boundary line, will not oust the court of equity jurisdiction,[53] nor is a complaint, which specifically sets out facts showing the necessity of resorting to equity,[54] necessarily bad by reason of its failure to allege possession.[55] Plaintiff need not establish an admitted title preliminary to securing equitable relief.[56] Damages for trespass may be allowed in the equitable action in accordance with legal rules.[57]

§ 3. Damages and penalties.[58]—See 10 C. law will not look with favor upon a trespasser in the determination of conflicting questions as to the amount of damage [69] but will take into consideration the nature of plaintiff's interest [70] and the question of defendant's good faith.[71] In an action of trespass for taking property, the measure of damages at common law is the value of the property.[72] The measure of damages to land is the diminution in its value,[73] unless the value of the thing taken exceeds such diminution, in which case the damages are measured from the higher value.[74] Where the appropriation of timber is accidental, or without bad faith, the damage allowed is ordinarily the market value at the stump.[75]

Nominal. See 10 C. L. 1886—At least nominal damages will be allowed for every trespass.[76]

Punitive. See 10 C. L. 1888—Where the trespass has been wantonly, knowingly and willfully committed,[77] with malicious intent,[78] apparent or presumed,[79] or accompanied by an unjustifiable assault,[80] or in flagrant disregard of legal requirements,[81] punitive damages may be allowed by the jury.[82] The measure of damages for willful timber trespass is the value of the timber at the time of demand or of bringing suit, although such timber may have been manufactured into lumber.[83]

Multiple. See 10 C. L. 1888—In some states by statute, where the pleadings [84] and evidence show that such damages are sought and that the trespass was without reasonable excuse,[85] multiple damages for timber trespass independent of injury to the land [86] may be allowed by the jury or court.[87]

§ 4. Criminal liability.[88]—See 10 C. L. 1888.—The Louisiana statute, making timber trespass a felony, has been declared unconstitutional.[89] Unauthorized fishing on private property may be made punishable as a crime.[90] An agent who, under contract authority given to his principal, enters the premises of another so contracting is not guilty of criminal trespass.[91] Under a statute providing that before criminal action will lie the trespasser must have been warned, such warning is sufficient if given within six months previous,[92] and by the person injured or by his authorized agent,[93] and, when properly given, is conclusive against the trespasser.[94] While a complaint is sufficient if it follow the statute,[95] although it does not show when the warning was given,[96] it should definitely describe the premises.[97] Evidence is admissible to show that prosecutor was in possession of the premises,[98] but evidence concerning a place not shown to be the trespassed property is properly excluded.[99] The burden rests on the state to show criminal intent or criminal negligence,[1] and, where the complaint conjunctively charges trespass after warning and refusal to leave, the state must prove both offenses,[2] but it is under no obligation to show that the defendant had no legal excuse for being on the premises.[3] The court should ordinarily instruct that if the alleged trespass was committed under mistake it is not criminal.[4]

93. Warning by agent under instructions of general superintendent is sufficient under Cr. Code 1896, § 5606, providing that person who, without legal cause, enters upon premises of another after warning not to do so shall be punished. Morrison v. State [Ala.] 46 S 646. Not sufficient if given by one in his capacity as officer, though he is also agent. Templin v. State [Ala.] 48 S 1027. Warning by landlord not in possession held not sufficient. Morrison v. State [Ala.] 46 S 646.

94. After warning, defendant cannot justify his act by claim that premises were vacant, and by claim of title under third party where prosecutrix had had possession for several years. Randle v. State [Ala.] 46 S 759.

95. Complaint held to charge offense to not be vague, indefinite, or uncertain, to not state conclusions, to show manner, by whom, and time of dispossession. Cofer v. State [Ala.] 47 S 1010.

96. Affidavit sufficient by charges warning which stated "that the offense of trespass in the premises of H., after warning, had been committed." Randle v. State [Ala.] 46 S 759.

97. Where charge is violation of Penal Code, 1895, § 220, description of land as "a certain field, the cultivated land of (prosecutor), at the time being held under a contract of purchase," though previous statements in accusation locate land as being in county of prosecution is insufficient. 7. One may obtain relief in equity under a verbal conveyance or gift. Altgelt v. Escalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989. Where grantee goes into possession of land not properly described in deed, pays for same and makes improvements thereon, he is entitled to benefit in equity of parol sale.

made,[10] actual,[11] prior,[12] and adverse possession[13] in good faith,[14] a vendor's lien,[15] or other sufficient evidence of title, and may resolve itself into a contest to determine the true boundary line,[16] but has not sufficient force to require the specific performance of a contract of conveyance.[17] It is in the discretion of the court to refuse to consolidate with action in trespass to try title, other matters not growing out of the same transaction.[18] The action may become barred by limitations.[19] A joint owner may recover the entire tract against one who has no interest in the corpus of the property,[20] or against one who is a mere trespasser.[21]

*Pleadings.*See 10 C. L. 1890—One claiming to be a possessor in good faith must allege facts which would justify belief in the validity of title,[22] but need not plead Isaacks v. Wright [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 970.

8. Acceptance of parol gift may be shown by immediate use and improvements made. Altgelt v. Escelero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989.

9. Continuous and exclusive possession is essential to validity of parol conveyance. Altgelt v. Escalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989. In such case, continued more than five years may establish title though not ordinarily having such effect. Id. Mere delivery of possession is not sufficient to establish parol conveyance or gift of land. Id.

10. Parol conveyance or gift is not supported by trifling improvements. Altgelt v. Escalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989.

11. One only occasionally entering upon land is not in actual possession thereof; hence, where one entered merely to cut and haul trees for firewood, he will not prevail against the actual owner. Jackson v. Pettigrew, 133 Mo. App. 508, 113 SW 672. Occasional entering is not actual possession such as will affect constructive possession of true owner. Haynes v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 427.

12. Since land may be recovered from naked trespasser on showing of prior possession defendants wrongfully dispossessed by writ of sequestration are entitled to recover possession, there being no evidence showing title in plaintiffs. Knox v. McElroy [Tex. Civ. App.]] 118 SW 1142.

13. One may obtain title by adverse possession if continued for length of time required by statute. Hoencke v. Lomax [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 817. Defendant's adverse possession ceases from date of possession by true owner, except as to any part of land held by him under inclosure. Haynes v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 427. While in order to acquire title by limitation it is essential that adverse possession shall have been claimed, it is not fatal that it shall have been claimed on mistaken theory different from that presented at trial, the question being assertion of title and not character of title asserted. Hayworth v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1197, rvg. [Tex.] 116 SW 43.

14. To constitute one a possessor in good faith, he must have been ignorant that his title is contested by one having a better right, and he must have believed that he was the true owner and have had grounds for such belief. Kaack v. Stanton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 702.

15. Upon default in payment of purchase price, vendor may recover land having first rescinded contract, in case where deed and note showed express lien. Bolden v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 91.

16. Shirley v. Walker [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 995. Defendant may have disputed boundaries determined by prayer for such affirmative relief after plea of not guilty. Gaffney v. Clark [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 606.

17. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3360, concerning limitations, does not apply in action on bond for title. Wright v. Riley [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1134.

18. In such action defendants are not entitled, as matter of right, to equitable relief by way of foreclosure of vendor's lien against them under conditional judgment giving them privilege of paying money into court. Bolden v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 91.

19. If note, having no reservation of a vendor's lien, becomes barred, holder has no further interest in land. Laird v. Murray [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 780. Defendant, who joined with another in executing deed to certain community property, is not relieved from effects of his delay to bring action by fact that such other was occupying property as homestead. Williamson v. Williamson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 370. One is not guilty of such laches as to start running of statute of limitation by reason of his failure to commence suit in trespass to try title, where he discovered error giving rise to action as soon as man of ordinary prudence would have done and commenced action thereafter. It only begins to run from time when exercise of reasonable diligence would have discovered mistake. It does not run where defendant so conducts himself as to lure plaintiff into security and to lead him to believe no mistake has been made. Isaacks v. Wright [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 970. One adjudged insane is presumed to remain so until contrary is shown, although, if he have lucid intervals, the statute commences to run from commencement of such interval. Kaack v. Stanton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 702. Defendant's plea of limitations is not involved in action where plaintiff's title is invalid. Pohle v. Robertson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 861. Where marriage relation does not actually exist, the woman may acquire property by limitation as against her pretended husband. Hayworth v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1197; rvg. matters of defense,[23] and may recover the land described under a prayer for general relief.[24] The description of the land in the injunction suit should be the same as that in the action with which it is connected.[25] Pleas of general denial, not guilty, statute of limitations, and of want of consideration, have the effect to admit possession in the plaintiff.[26] While the plea of defendant must specially set forth his equitable rights [27] to be good as against a general demurrer,[28] no allegation need be made that he has ever examined the title or knew what it was to be good even as against a special exception.[29]

Issues and proof. See 10 C. L. 1802—A plea of not guilty [30] puts upon the plaintiff the burden of proving title [31] against the world,[32] unless such title be admitted by the defendant,[33] or a common source of title,[34] or the fact that defendant is not a holder in good faith against plaintiff's established equitable title, be shown by a preponderance of the evidence.[35] A like burden rests upon a defendant seeking affirmative relief [36] to show title by adverse possession,[37] to establish a disputed boundary,[38] or to show any title or parol gift under which he claims, unless he prove actual possession,[39] permanent improvements, or such other facts as force the conclusions that nonperformance would cause the transaction to work a fraud upon him.[40] A purchaser who is shown to have paid a valuable consideration will be presumed to have purchased without notice of a prior conveyance,[41] and an outstanding legal title will constitute complete defense [42] when proven by competent
