28. Plea of defendant, alleging valid conveyance to him for valid consideration, that he made expenditures and improvements in good faith, and that he had good reason to believe his title to be valid, is good as against general demurrer. Haney v. Gartin [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 166.

29. Haney v. Gartin [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 166.

30. Such plea puts plaintiff on proof as to that part of land to which plea extends. Gaffney v. Clark [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 606.

31. Puts burden of proving title upon the plaintiff. Plaintiff cannot rely on weakness of defendant's title. Baile v. Western Live Stock & Land Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 325. Plaintiff cannot recover if he fails to prove title, even though defendant fails to prove a title specially plead. De Roach v. Clardy [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 22. Plaintiff must show title though defendant be naked trespasser. Uvalde County v. Oppenheimer [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 904. Plaintiff is not relieved from showing title because defendant relies unsuccessfully upon limitations. Id. Plaintiff's evidence must preclude possibility of tract claimed not being within limits of tract described. Charleroi Timber & Cannel Coal Co. v. Licking Coal & Lumber Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 682.

32. Connor v. Weik [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 650.

33. Where such admission is made in plea for affirmative relief introduced after plea of not guilty. Gaffney v. Clark [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 606. When defendant disclaims title, it is not necessary for plaintiff to prove his title, plaintiff's title being admitted by such disclaimer. Hildebrandt v. Hoffman [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 785.

34. Caruthers v. Hadley [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 80.

35. For one asserting prior equitable title to prevail against purchaser of legal title, he must show that such purchaser is not purchaser for value or that he had notice of prior equitable claim. Thomason v. Berwick [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 567.

36. Keck v. Woodward [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 75.

37. Burden of proof is on defendant to show adverse possession under which he claims, where he claims to have had pasture inclosed for more than ten years before suit was brought. Haynes v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 427. Burden is on defendant to prove continued occupancy or possession. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex.] 113 SW 265. Burden of proving title by limitation is upon party asserting it. Hayworth v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1197.

38. Although plaintiff does not sustain burden of proving title in principal action. Gaffney v. Clark [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 606.

39. Altgeld v. Escalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989. Burden is not on defendant in possession to show agreement or gift whereby his grantor claimed title. Pardue v. Whitfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 306.

40. Altgelt v. Escalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989.

evidence,[43] but defendant cannot rely upon any other title than that which he pleads.[44] Where the pleadings consist of a general allegation of title and a plea of not guilty, either party may show any title that he may have,[45] and, where the only issue is as to title, other questions need not be considered.[46] One basing his action upon a bond for title need not prove payment in accordance with the terms of such bond, except as against the vendor.[47] The uncontradicted return on the execution may constitute sufficient proof of title without the introduction of the sheriff's deed.[48] Where the execution of a lost deed is proven, its regularity as to form and manner of execution,[49] and the validity of an official act connected therewith, will be presumed;[50] but there is no presumption as to reservations in a lost deed,[51] or of the nonpayment of an old debt,[52] or of a title based merely on inferential circumstances.[53]

Evidence.[See 10 C. L. 1893]—Evidence of services rendered donor by donee inducing parol gift is admissible,[54] but evidence of improvements made or possession taken after grantor's death is not.[55] While it is improper to admit evidence collaterally attacking the title of a party whose lands are not involved in the suit[56] or to admit any evidence of title coming from a party who has failed to comply with a demand for the filing of an abstract,[57] it is in other cases proper to admit any evidence which throws any light upon the title or transaction in issue, such for example as a deed from a grantor whose title has been shown,[58] a lease referred to in the deed,[59] a material court order correctly describing the land,[60] and testimony concerning the execution of a lost deed,[61] facts excusing grantee from making an in-

43. Mere statement by party that he has transferred tract of land is not sufficient to show any outstanding title, no deed being introduced or particulars of transfer being sworn to. Hoencke v. Lomax [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 817. Insufficiently proven, where it does not appear by whom or in what right grant was made. Holland v. Nance [Tex.] 114 SW 346.

44. De Roach v. Clardy [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 22.

45. He may show either legal or equitable title and any facts to his interest. Pierce v. Texas Rice Development Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 857.

46. Where each claims under foreclosure of different liens, their priority was held immaterial. West Lumber Co. v. Lyon [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 652.

47. Sanderson v. Wellsford [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 382.

48. Where action is brought by purchaser at execution sale. Ayres v. Patton [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1079.

49. Including formalities of acknowledgment. Laird v. Murray [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 780.

50. McKee v. West [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 135.

51. No presumption of vendor's lien. Laird v. Murray [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 780.

52. The presumption is that an old debt for which no claim has been made for a number of years has been paid. Where it was claimed that deed never passed by reason of nonpayment of notes, payment was presumed. Millwee v. Phelps [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 891.

53. Where defendant claimed through purchaser with notice of prior conveyance from common grantor, there was no presumption in favor of those claiming under such purchaser from their long chain of title, payment of taxes, overseeing premises, etc., that there was reconveyance from prior grantee to common grantor, or that he was holding under deed of trust. Ryle v. Davidson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 823. Date of delivery of one deed cannot be determined, as matter of law, from date of delivery of another deed to another grantee, though of same premises and executed on same date. Beall v. Chatham [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 492.

54, 55. Altgelt v. Ascalero [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 989.

56. McGill v. Sites [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 220.

57. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 5260, 5261, but statute held not to apply as to the introduction of deed and note in evidence in action at bar on note, and to foreclose vendor's lien. Bolden v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 91.

58. The grantor must be shown to have had some title before his deed is admissible in evidence, it being sufficient where evidence shows that premises descended in regular sequence from patentee to one of grantors. Haney v. Gartin [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 166.

59. Neill v. Kleiber [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 694.

60. Instruments introduced in evidence should sufficiently describe the land but a probate order which refers to description contained in petition is sufficient. Shirley v. Walker [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 995.

61. Execution of lost deed by wife may be proven by circumstances. Texas Land & Cattle Co. v. Walker [Tex. Civ. App] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 40, 105 SW 545. Incidents of acknowledgement may be proven by circumstances where deed has been lost, the same proof not being required as to details of execution as where testimony of precise transaction is accessible. vestigation,[62] facts completing [63] or disclosing error in a chain of title,[64] an outstanding title in a third party [65] which does not rest solely in equity,[66] or concerning any matters throwing light upon the identity,[67] the title [68] or the possession of the land,[69] or the value of improvements made.[70] Where neither the issue of limitations nor that of innocent purchaser is raised by the evidence, evidence as to payment of taxes need not be admitted.[71] Errors in the admission of evidence which affect both parties alike and prejudice neither are immaterial.[72]

Instructions and jury questions. See 10 C. L. 1895—An instruction as to former adjudication of title,[73] or as to any other matter that is without foundation in the evidence,[74] or which improperly shifts the burden of proving a transfer of title,[75] should be refused. It is not error for the court to ignore a want of notice which is presumed,[76] to interchange terms of title which are practically synomymous,[77] or to refuse to instruct that a recorded deed does not give constructive notice.[78] Where the evidence is overwhelmingly against plaintiff's claim of title, an instruction in favor of defendant is proper.[79] In other cases the jury should be left to weigh the evidence.[80]

62. Evidence that grantor's agent after putting grantee in possession remained in vicinity for three years and knew of grantee's possession and improving of land admissible to excuse grantee for making investigation in case where there was misdescription in deed. Isaacks v. Wright [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 970.

63. Chain of title may be completed by circumstantial evidence, although deeds showing title from original grantee be not in evidence. McMahon v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 322.

64. Where defendant relies on title by adverse possession and connects himself in chain of title by conveyance, he will be permitted to show another deed in chain of title was not executed until time recorded, being about two years after apparent date. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex.] 113 SW 265.

65. Trimble v. Burroughs [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 551.

66. Since defendant cannot show outstanding equitable title in third party with which he is not connected in action by purchaser of school land, defendant claiming under prior lease to another cannot show application and award to lessee. Trimble v. Burroughs [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 551.

67. Defendant may correct calls in deed relied on by him by oral testimony although his answer makes no allegation of mistake. Moore v. Loggins [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 183. Surveys of adjacent tracts may be admissible to identify land in controversy. Sullivan v. Solis [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 456. Official county map made after commencement of suit may be introduced in evidence. Id. Plaintiff may introduce deeds containing uncertain descriptions providing he support them by proof making descriptions certain, hence, he may introduce deed showing 640 acres conveyed though he claim 700 but must explain discrepancy by satisfactory proof. Uvalde County v. Oppenheimer [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 904. Ambiguity in description in deed may be explained by applying description to land for identification. Raley v. Magendie [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 174.

68. Deeds from plaintiff's ancestor recorded shortly after execution are admissible in evidence as throwing light on old title in case where defendant claimed under lost deed, made by such ancestor pursuant to bond for deed previously given. Millwee v. Phelps [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 891. Evidence not relevant to question of title may be excluded. Robertson v. Hefley [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1159.

69. Evidence held to show defendants in possession under deed. Savage v. Cowan [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 319.

70. Evidence of value of improvements made is some evidence of the enhancement in value of land, to authorize courts finding under Rev. St. art. 5278, subd. 1. Haney v. Martin [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 166.

71. Being immaterial. Beall v. Chatham [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 492.

72. Admission of deed in evidence whereby common grantor derived his title is not prejudical. Robertson v. Hefley [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1159.

73. Since instruction should be refused which is without basis in evidence, an instruction concerning adjudication in former suit in which tract in question was not involved was properly refused. Pardue v. Whitfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 306.

74. The instructions held to accord with the evidence. Pardue v. Whitfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 306.

75. Instruction held not to shift burden of proof on defendant where jury were charged that before they could find for defendant they must find certain transfer to have been made, in case where plaintiff relies on resale to owner after such transfer. McCollum v. Buckner's Orphans' Home [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 886.

76. In case of valuable consideration paid, purchaser is presumed to have bought without notice of prior conveyance. McCollum v. Buckner's Orphans' Home [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 886.

77. "Prior claim" will be construed to refer to "prior deed" where, in the light of the evidence, there could be no misunderstanding. La Brie v. Cartwright [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 785.

78. Houston Oil Co. v. Kimball [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 662.

79. Bailie v. Western Live Stock & Land Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 325.

80. Pardue v. Whitfield [Tex. Civ. App.]

Judgment.—A judgment for plaintiff should include all ordinary costs,[81] should describe the land in accordance with the petition and evidence[82] should not include more land than that sued for[83] under a liberal view of the petition,[84] nor, where he claims under a parol gift, should it include more land than that of which he took possession.[85] Where defendant's plea is simply not guilty, the appropriate judgment when for defendant is that plaintiff take nothing by his suit.[86] The value of material taken from the premises and used in improvements need not be deducted from the allowance to the unsuccessful defendant for improvements.[87] No judgment is necessary on an issue that has been withdrawn.[88]

TRIAL.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[89]

§ 1. Joint and separate trials.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1896—It is within the discretion of courts of equity[91] and of law,[92] excepting municipal courts in some states,[93] to 115 SW 306; Uvalde County v. Oppenheimer [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 904. Whether land was deeded to defendant's grantor, held to be question for jury. McMahon v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 322. Execution of lost deed is question for jury. Texas Land & Cattle Co. v. Walker [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 40, 105 SW 545. Evidence held sufficient to submit issue of transfer and resale. McCollum v. Buckner's Orphans' Home [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 886.

81. Where defendant pleads not guilty, plaintiff is entitled to all costs, except fee of guardian ad litem of infant defendant, as provided under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1425, 1438, 5270, although he recover only part of that sued for. Perry v. Rogers [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 897.

82. Judgment for 160 acres held insufficient where petition alleged 320 and evidence showed 200. Downs v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 873.

83. Not recover land not embraced in tract though evidence may warrant. Raley v. Magendie [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 174.

84. Judgment is not necessarily objectionable for giving to plaintiff more land than he claimed where it follows description in petition and undertakes to settle no question of boundary. Hildebrandt v. Hoffman [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 785.

85. Although he claimed more. Combest v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 354.

86. The further adjudication of title in defendant adds nothing to it. McKee v. West [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1135. An award to defendant on plea of not guilty that he have possession is improper. Id.

87. But jury may find separately therefor. Fain v. Nelms [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1002.

88. As where an issue of damages was withdrawn by plaintiff in open court before rendition of judgment. Haynes v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 427.

89. Many important and distinct matters of trial procedure are given separate treatment in Current Law. See Dockets, Calendars and Trial Lists, 11 C. L. 1126; Continuance and Postponement, 11 C. L. 725; Argument and Conduct of Counsel, 11 C. L. 268; Examination of Witnesses, 11 C. L. 1420; Saving Questions for Review, 12 C. L. 1763; Jury, 12 C. L. 479; Questions of Law and Fact, 12 C. L. 1521; Instructions, 12 C. L. 218; Directing Verdict and Demurrer to Evidence, 11 C. L. 1085; Discontinuance, Dismissal and Nonsuit, 11 C. L. 1093; Verdicts and Findings, 10 C. L. 1974. Hence, this article includes principally only such matters as do not readily lend themselves to such separate treatment. The subjects of evidence (see Evidence, 11 C. L. 1346), pleading (see Pleading, 12 C. L. 1323), witnesses (see Witnesses, 10 C. L. 2079), are also fully treated elsewhere, as are also the right to physical examination (see Damages, 11 C. L. 958), matters peculiar to hearing in equity (see Equity, 11 C. L. 1235), and to criminal trials (see Indictment and Prosecution, 12 C. L. 1).

91. A court of equity has inherent power to unite suits for trial in absence of statute, except where to do so would be palpable abuse of discretion. Butler v. Secrist [Neb.] 120 NW 1109.

92. Though there be no statutory provision therefor. Vandalia Coal Co. v. Lawson [Ind. App.] 87 NE 47.

93. In New York, the municipal court cannot consolidate two actions. Hughes v. Holley, 62 Misc. 231, 114 NYS 947.

consolidate actions[94] having the same parties as plaintiff and defendant[95] and involving the same causes of action,[96] unless such consolidation has the effect of improperly changing the venue of an action.[97] Under some statutory provisions, actions may be consolidated, although separate judgments are required to be rendered,[98] and although one action is for tort and the other for breach of contract.[99] Consolidation makes the actions one for the purpose of appeal,[1] but the issues are not changed thereby.[2] The order of consolidation is not overcome by the entering of separate judgments under separate titles.[3] It is error to determine two cases on the evidence introduced in one where there is no consolidation or stipulation therefor,[4] or to recognize an invalid stipulation in this regard.[5] The defendant cannot delay the trial by request for a consolidation, the necessity of which is not shown.[6]

The court may separate causes improperly joined,[7] or may order separate trial of equitable defenses in an action at law,[8] upon proper motion[9] or demand being made therefor,[10] and may reserve matters at issue in another pending action for future determination.[11]

94. Consolidation of similar cases rests in sound discretion of court, under Rev. St. U. S. § 921. Vandalia Coal Co. v. Lawson [Ind. App.] 87 NE 47.

95. Where causes of action are different and parties not the same, the court has no power to unite actions. Code Civ. Proc. § 817, not applying in such case. Miller v. Baillard, 124 App. Div. 555, 108 NYS 973. Actions cannot be consolidated where positions of plaintiff and defendant in two actions are reverse under Code Civ. Proc. § 817, authorizing consolidation of actions having same plaintiff and defendant. Waiontha Knitting Co. v. Hecht, 58 Misc. 350, 111 NYS 10.

96. Held not error for court to refuse to join actions growing out of different transactions where defendant was not injured thereby. Bolden v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 91. Upon motions filed respectively by trustees of mortgage for consolidation of two actions, both suits seeking subetantially same relief, motion in first suit is sustained. Bird v. People's Gas & Elec. L. Co., 158 F 903. Action to cancel deed intended as mortgage and obtained through fraud, and action with same plaintiff and defendant to recover money, may be consolidated where it appears that money sought was part of price of land. Barnes v. Johnson, 33 Ky. L. R. 803, 111 SW 372. Actions to contest local option election. McCormick v. Jester [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 278. Consolidation of cross actions between same parties for breach of same contracts is within discretion of trial court, under Rev. St. § 921. American Trust & Sav. Bank v. Zeigler Coal Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 34. Improper to consolidate actions pending in different courts, on different issues and growing out of different contracts, notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. §§ 817, 818, permitting action pending in inferior court to be consolidated with one pending in supreme court, where between same parties and for same cause of action. Argyle Co. v. Griffith, 128 App. Div. 262, 112 NYS 773. Where plaintiff in replevin claimed lien on cow sold to defendant by H., court properly refused to consolidate such action with another pending against H. for accounting. Hight v. Oates [Ark.] 113 SW 40.

97. Defiance Fruit Co. v. Fox [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 460.

98. Under act May 11, 1905, p. 798, action by wife for personal injuries may be consolidated with action of husband for loss of her services and expenses. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Raines [Ark.] 119 SW 266.

99. Under Act of May 11, 1905, where same evidence necessary in both causes. Ashford v. Richardson [Ark.] 113 SW 808.

1. Hence, it having been stipulated that evidence in one should be considered evidence in other as far as possible, questions of fact cannot be considered on appeal where there is no proper certificate to such evidence. Ness v. Bothell [Wash.] 101 P 702.

4. Error even though actions between same parties and rest on same written guaranty. Auerbach v. Lamchick, 115 NYS 226.

5. Stipulation by parties to different actions that same facts tried at same time by same jury with same exception considered as saved, but that separate verdicts shall be rendered, does not have the effect of consolidating cases, and stipulation that all judgments shall be brought up on one transcript is invalid. Mobile Imp. & Bldg. Co. v. Stein [Ala.] 48 S 368.

6. Adams v. Mineral Development Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 624.

7. After demurrer has been sustained. Davis v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law] 72 A 82. In ejectment against landlord and tenant, where right of landlord is issue, plaintiff is not entitled to severance of action against tenant, who failed to answer. Lewis v. Townsend, 132 App. Div. 347, 117 NYS 48.

8. In such case the court may be required to order trials so that equitable claim will be tried first and the legal action be stayed. Goss v. Goss & Co., 126 App. Div. 748, 111 NYS 115; Cohen v. American Surety Co., 129 App. Div. 166, 113 NYS 375.

§ 2. Course and conduct of trial.[12]—See 10 C. L. 1897—Matters arising in the conduct of a trial, such as the order of trial,[13] examination of witnesses,[14] continuances,[15] the admission of an attorney to the case after trial has begun,[16] the determining of what shall be read to the jury,[17] and the exclusion from the court room of witnesses not under examination,[18] are largely discretionary with the trial judge.[19] It is the duty of the trial judge to rule in accordance with his best judgment upon every question raised,[20] and causes should be permitted to be heard on their merits where, in so ruling, positive violence is not done some rule of procedure or practice.[21] Every litigant has the right to be present at the trial in person and to be represented by counsel.[22]

*Remarks and conduct of judge.*See 10 C. L. 1898—While the court is allowed some latitude in his remarks,[23] and improper remarks which are not prejudicial are not grounds for a reversal,[24] such remarks being irregularities as distinguished from errors of law,[25] such irregularities will constitute ground for reversal when they

Under Laws, 1907, p. 447, § 16, what is sufficient cause for trying a case out of its order is determined in view of condition of docket, dispatch of business, saving time and expense, and other considerations, and held no abuse of discretion where no showing made against motion advancing action which had been pending nine years and of which there had been two previous trials. Richardson Fueling Co. v. Seymour, 235 Ill. 319, 85 NE 496.

14. Postponement of examination of witness held within court's discretion, especially where it does not appear what was sought to be proven by such witness. Chwala v. Herbert, 138 Ill. App. 371.

15. The court's discretion in granting a continuance should not be arbitrarily exercised, being a judicial discretion. Sun Ins. Office v. Stegar [Ky.] 112 SW 922. Plaintiff is entitled to trial when the case is ready, and no clear grounds for continuance exist where more than year transpired in which defendant had opportunity to take depositions and have survey made as he desired. Adams v. Mineral Development Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 624.

16. Held not error to refuse such admission where court offered to allow the continuance of the case till the next day on account of the illness of an attorney. First Nat. Bank v. Miller, 235 Ill. 135, 85 NE 312.

17. Held not error for court to permit counsel to read constitutional provision to jury, though it is court's province to give all proper instructions. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Rowsey's Adm'r, 108 Va. 632, 62 SE 363. It is not error for the judge to read pleadings to jury before they have been explained. Cincinatti Gas & Elec. Co. v. Coffelder, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 289.

22. Ziegler v. Funkhouser [Ind. App.] 85 NE 984.

23. It is not error on motion for directed verdict, where counsel as ground therefor states that settlement relied on is without consideration and void, for court in ruling to say "Yes, it would be binding. If a man makes a settlement he ought to be made to stick to it." Boswell v. Gillen, 131 Ga. 310, 62 SE 187.

24. When made in ruling on motion. Chicago City R. Co. v. Ratner, 133 Ill. App. 628. When not prejudicial and when general and applicable to both parties alike. Palmer v. Schurz [S. D.] 117 NW 150. When not such as to mislead or improperly influence jury. Eckels v. Halsten, 136 Ill. App. 111; Leighton v. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co., 235 Ill. 283, 85 NE 309. Where spectators applauded argument of counsel and judge prefaced his instruction to jury to disregard applause and not be influenced by it with remark that he gave such instruction by request, such was not sufficient ground for new trial. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Mote, 131 Ga. 166, 62 SE 164. Under Code Civ. Proc. 1895, § 4334, it is not reversible error for court, in discussing with counsel matters arising during progress of trial, to refer to evidence, provided he does not go out of lines of legitimate discussion or express approval or disapproval thereof. Realty Co. v. Ellis, 4 Ga. App. 402, 61 SE 832.

25. Erroneous remarks by court during trial constitute irregularities in proceedings, and not errors of law, coming under Code Civ. Proc. subd. 1, and not subd. 7, of grounds authorizing new trial. Hopkins v. Kitts, 37 Mont. 26, 94 P 201.

are prejudicial,[26] and so, also, when the remarks disclose the court's opinion of a material issue of fact,[27] or tend to cast discredit on a witness,[28] or to coerce the jury into a verdict.[29]

§ 3. Reception and exclusion of evidence.[30]—See 10 C. L. 1900—The function of a judge in determining the relevancy of evidence is that of a final arbiter.[31] The court must, however, pass upon the admissibility of all evidence offered.[32] In some states evidence of doubtful admissibility must be admitted.[33] The allowance of introductory questions is within the court's discretion.[34] An offer of proof must be predicated upon some pending question or prior examination of the witness.[35] The court's power in certain cases to limit the number of witnesses should be exercised with great care.[36] Disobedience of a rule to exclude the witnesses from the court room does not disqualify a witness where the party offering him is not in fault.[37] In some instances the court may summarize the evidence.[38]

*The order of proof.*See 10 C. L. 1902—The order of the admission of evidence is within the sound discretion of the court,[39] if not in violation of statute,[40] or rule

26. Held prejudicial to determine jury question by such remarks, as where court told jury that street railway company owed no duty not provided by ordinance, and where company knew danger of its trolley wire coming in contact with telephone wire, but not error to state that witness knew nothing about certain matter when it was true and self-apparent from his testimony. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Myane [Ark.] 111 SW 987.

27. Though such opinion be disclosed by question asked by court. Bryant v. Anderson, 5 Ga. App. 517, 63 SE 638. Held error in action for delayed telegram for court, where receipt of telegram was admitted by sendee and denied by defendant, to say to defendant's counsel "You are responsible for it." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Improper remark of court relating to admissibility rather than to weight of evidence is not serious error. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 596. Court may speak of materiality and value of evidence without being charged with commenting thereon. In re City of Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 330.

28. While remarks tending to discredit witness are prejudicial, remark that counsel can examine physician as to matters disconnected with relation of physician and patient is not. Landers v. Quincy, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 543. While court should not express opinion as to whether witness is able to determine matter of expert knowledge, it is not error to state, in ruling on objection that witness had not qualified himself, "I think Mr. D. may state whether or not he (plaintiff) was of sound or unsound mind or not." Kaack v. Stanton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 702.

29. Improper though in form of instructions. Highland Foundry Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 199 Mass. 403, 85 NE 437. Remark by judge that he would expect jury to reach verdict by certain time was not erroneous as coercing jury, where he afterwards requested them not to consider such remark. Prince v. Lowell Elec. L. Corp. 201 Mass. 276, 87 NE 558.

32. It is error for court to close case and refuse consideration to evidence, the admissibility of which has not been determined. Missouri-American Elec. Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 283.

33. If fact offered presents reasonable inference in favor of its relevancy, it should be admitted, and its weight left to jury. Kansas City, M. & O. R. Co. v. Young [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 764. It has long been rule in Georgia, where admissibility of evidence is doubtful, to admit it and leave its weight and effect to be determined by jury. Albany Phosphate Co. v. Hugger Bros., 4 Ga. App. 771, 62 SE 533.

34. Loveland v. Perkins & Dixon Lumber Co., 55 Fla. 500, 46 S 731.

35. Pike v. Hauptman [Neb.] 119 NW 231.

36. Rule that owner may testify concerning his loss by a given act, regardless of rules limiting number of witnesses, does not apply to mere stockholder in corporation. In re City of Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 330. Held error for court to limit number of witnesses, as to value of property damaged, to six. Ellis v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 395, 111 SW 839.

37. Hendelman v. Kahan, 50 Wash. 247, 97 P 109.

38. Proper summary of extensive items to be gathered from numerous depositions as to payments made for submission to jury. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Champion Ice Mfg. & Cold Storage Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 393.

39. Wells v. Boston & M. R. Co. [Vt.] 71 A 1103. Hence temporary sustaining of objection is not error where pertinency is left open and witness subsequently left to testify fully as to such matter. Webster v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 46, 61 SE 1080. Not interfered with unless clear abuse of such discretion. Wilson v. Jernigan [Fla.] 49 S 44. Introduction of tax deed as evidence out of its regular order of court,[41] as is, also, the reopening of the case for the introduction of further testimony,[42] provided such discretion is not abused.[43] Plaintiff should introduce in chief the evidence required to maintain his action,[44] but the court may admit in rebuttal any evidence reflecting on the defense,[45] though not strictly and exclu-is not reversible error where no harm results, though objected to. Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co. v. Deneen [Mo.] 119 SW 365. Introduction in chief of evidence which should have been introduced in rebuttal is not error, if not prejudicial. Camden Interstate R. Co. v. Lester [Ky.] 118 SW 268.

40. Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 101 P 204.

41. Miller v. Leib [Md.] 72 A 466.

42. Action of court will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is clear abuse of discretion. Central Nat. Bank v. National Metropolitan Bank, 31 App. D. C. 391; Spencer v. Alki Point Transp. Co. [Wash.] 101 P 509. Court may admit, after close of evidence, evidence which might properly have been introduced in original case. Bellingham v. Linck [Wash.] 101 P 843. Party cannot reopen his case in chief after he has rested except by court's permission. Wolfort v. Hochbaum [Ark.] 117 SW 525. Witness may be recalled for purpose of correcting testimony previously given by him. Chicago City R. Co. v. Walsh, 136 Ill. App. 73. Even after the submission of case to court, parol evidence may be admitted to explain ambiguous contract. Wood v. Kelsey [Ark.] 119 SW 258. Reopening for newly-discovered evidence. American Stove Co. v. Detroit Stove Works, 31 App. D. C. 304.

Reopening authorized: Not abuse of discretion where evidence was unknown till after trial and other pary was allowed opportunity to rebut it. Lueders v. Tenino, 49 Wash. 521, 95 P 1089. Held no abuse of discretion in court permitting defendant to reopen his case in chief to introduce testimony as to sale of stock, which sale had only been touched on in previous evidence. Wolfort v. Hochbaum [Ark.] 117 SW 525. Not error to reopen unless opportunity to meet such testimony be not allowed (Carr v. Way [Iowa] 119 NW 700), although party seeking reopening has rested (Murphy v. Herold Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 294; Casey v. Richards [Cal. App.] 101 P 36; Maxwell v. Wellington [Wis.] 120 NW 505), and the evidence has closed (Chandler Bros. v. Higgins [Ala.] 47 S 284), and argument has been concluded, provided time is given in which to meet such testimony (Burke v. Burke [Iowa] 119 NW 129), or intimation has been made that nonsuit will be directed (McCoy v. Nillick, 221 Pa. 123, 70 A 577), or motion for nonsuit has been filed in which case witness may then be recalled to testify as to something inadvertently omitted, but not to start anew to make out case in chief (Buck v. McKeesport [Pa.] 72 A 514).

Refusal authorized; Where court with case under advisement refused admission of testimony for reason that it should have been presented at proper time. Michner v. Ford [Kan.] 98 P 273. Where attorney for corporation defendant seeks thereby to prove vital fact of which he was before ignorant, that is that corporation had filed statutory designation. O'Brien v. Big Casino Gold Min. Co. [Cal. App.] 93 P 209. Where purpose is impeachment. Leake v. King Dry Goods, Co., 5 Ga. App. 102, 62 SE 729; Bartlett v. Illinois Surety Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 729. Where argument has been begun though witness was not obtainable before. Schwitters v. Springer, 236 Ill. 271, 86 NE 102. Where court has announced his intention to direct verdict. Currie v. Consolidated R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 356; Stewart v. Mundy, 131 Ga. 586, 62 SE 986.

43. This discretion is judicial and not arbitrary and was wrongly exercised in refusing admission to belated deposition where time required to introduce same would have been short and short continuance asked for had been refused and where it had arrived within five minutes after argument was begun. Sun Ins. Office v. Stegar [Ky.] 112 SW 922. In action by administrator of wife's estate to recover from estate of husband property which thus passed into his possession, it is error after final submission of case to refuse to hear new evidence, discovered by chance, which is not cumulative, but relates to payment by husband of debts of his wife, and is proffered as new defense. Miller v. McLean, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 424. Court should not consider documents filed with him in absence of parties after closing of proof. Wellman v. Blackmon [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1126, 119 NW 1102. It is abuse of discretion to not permit reopening to prevent nonsuit, except where defendant would be subjected to unfairness or undue prejudice or where plaintiff has appeared to delay and trifle with court (Ellenberg v. Southern R. Co., 5 Ga. App. 389, 63 SE 240), or to refuse reopening to admit evidence sufficient to prevent peremptory instruction, where defendant's case rested on existence of a certain custom and plaintiff desired to prove its nonexistence (Moreland v. Newberger Cotton Co. [Miss.] 48 S 187).

44. In negligence case plaintiff should show distance in which car causing injury could be stopped. Louisville R. Co. v. Gaar [Ky.] 112 SW 1130.

45. Complainant has right to rebut affirmative evidence offered by defendant in divorce action. Loftus v. Loftus, 134 Ill. App. 360. Plaintiff should be permitted to testify fully on rebuttal as to matters introduced in defense, though it be as to conversation, parts of which he touched on in presenting his case. Stanley v. Beckhan [C. C. A.] 153 F 152. Any competent evidence reflecting on evidence of defense is admissible in rebuttal, as where, in action by township against its treasurer, he testified that he paid certain order through bank, it is permissible to prove by cashier whether order was paid and method in which such treasurer carried his account. Alpena Tp. v. Mainville, 153 Mich. 732, 15 Det. Leg. N 605, 117 NW 338. Where defendant claims spark arrester to have been in good repair, plaintiff may rebut with evidence of other fires from same cause at

sively [46] rebuttal even after plaintiff has made a motion for judgment.[47] Such rebuttal, however, should be confined to the issues made or controverted by the defense,[48] and not be merely cumulative,[49] but the court's discretion in regard to the admission thereof should not be hampered by unreasonable conditions.[50] Testimony may be conditionally admitted with the stipulation that its competency will be shown, subject to its exclusion if such competency be not shown,[51] or its admission be made to depend upon the introduction of other testimony prior thereto,[52] or upon an offer to show its relevancy.[53]

Cumulative testimony.[See 10 C. L. 1904]—The court, in its discretion, may exclude cumulative evidence [54] of facts, otherwise conclusively proved [55] or admitted,[55a] but may not exclude evidence affecting the chief issue on the ground that it is merely cumulative.[56] An objection to a question is properly sustained where the expected answer would be a mere repetition.[57] near same time. St. Louis S. R. Co. v. Eccles & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 648.

46. Rebuttal evidence which necessarily includes greater period of time than that covered in evidence to be rebutted will not for that reason be excluded. Wilkins Adm'r v. Brock, 81 Vt. 332, 70 A 572. Where plaintiff's first evidence incidentally related to matters plead in defense, he is not thereby prevented from rebuttal. Rose v. Lewis [Ala.] 48 S 105. Admitted. Jaffe v. Nagel, 114 NYS 905; Horton v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 423. Admitted even when such rebuttal was properly admissible in the main case. Witt v. Latimer [Iowa] 117 NW 680; Crosby v. Portland R. Co. [Or.] 100 P 300; Kime v. Bank of Edgemant [S. D.] 119 NW 1003. Excluded. City of Marseilles v. Heister, 142 Ill. App. 299; Cleveland Seed Co. v. Moore, 142 Ill. App. 615. Evidence for first time made competent on surrebuttal should not be excluded on ground that it is not proper surrebuttal; construing St. 1898, § 4069 as to evidence of transactions with decedent and permitting party to examine witness who has been first examined by other party. Anderson v. Anderson, 136 Wis. 328, 117 NW 801.

47. Plaintiff by moving for judgment at close of defendant's case does not waive his right to contest defendant's affirmative defense. Frye v. Phillips, 46 Wash. 190, 93 P 668.

48. Should be confined to new matter brought out by defendant. Longino v. Shreveport Trac. Co., 120 La. 803, 45 S 732. Must be confined to facts controverted and not used to review case in chief. Wade v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 84. Where trial court refused to admit any evidence in support of tax title, it was error to allow plaintiff to introduce any evidence in rebuttal bearing upon validity of such tax deed. Best v. Wohlford, 153 Cal. 17, 94 P 98.

49. Scheerer & Co. v. Deming [Cal.] 97 P 155.

50. Cutter-Tower Co. v. Clement, 5 Ga. App. 291, 63 SE 58.

51. Uvalde County v. Oppenheimer [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 904; Schmidt v. Kurrus, 140 Ill. App. 132. Acts of an agent may be shown before his agency is proven subject to exclusion if agency be not established. German Ins. Bank v. Martin [Ky.] 114 SW 319. In action to recover for personal injuries, amount paid for medical treatment may be proven before proof that such charges are reasonable, but if later proof be not introduced, former proof should be stricken out. Schmitt v. Kurrus, 234 Ill. 578, 85 NE 261.

52. Defenses against original payee of negotiable instrument cannot be introduced until it is shown that plaintiff is not bona fide purchaser. Stouffer v. Erwin, 81 S. C. 541, 62 SE 843.

53. Objection to question, the relevancy of which is not apparent, may be sustained, where there is no offer to make such relevancy to appear. Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow [Fla.] 48 S 410. Where objection to question as irrelevant is wrongfully sustained, it may constitute reversible error though no offer was made to show substance of proposed testimony, no offer being demanded by court. Stanley v. Beckham [C. C. A.] 153 F 152. Where court below treated offer of proof as basis for ruling on admissibility of evidence, on appeal case must be treated as though such facts were in evidence and had been disregarded by lower court. Meyer v. Doherty, 133 Wis. 398, 113 NW 671.

54. Sherman Gas & Elec. Co. v. Belden [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 897; Royal Exch. Assur. v. Graham & Morton Transp. Co. [C. C. A.] 166 F 32. Where issue was mental capacity of feme grantor, questions as to her feelings, etc., at and before execution of deed was properly excluded where she had already covered matter in previous testimony by testifying as to her actions, behavior and condition at such time. United States Oil & Land Co. v. Bell, 153 Cal. 781, 96 P 901.

55. Mabry v. Citizens' Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 105 SW 1156. Evidence covered in case in chief may be excluded in rebuttal, no reason being shown why court should exercise his discretion otherwise. Higgins v. Los Angeles R. Co., 5 Cal. App. 748, 91 P 344.

55a. Mabry v. Citizens' Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 105 SW 1156.

56. Capron v. Douglass, 193 N. Y. 11, 85 NE 827.

57. Western Steel Car & Foundry Co. v. Cunningham [Ala.] 48 S 109.

Stipulations or admissions.[See 10 C. L. 1905]—Since a matter that is admitted need not be proved,[58] it is ordinarily within the discretion of the court to reject or receive evidence of a fact that is conceded.[59] An admission by the defendant does not preclude him from setting up defenses not affected by the admission,[60] nor can his absence be taken as an admission to supply a deficiency in plaintiff's proof.[61]

Evidence admissible in part or for one purpose only.[See 10 C. L. 1905]—Where evidence is offered in its entirety, it will be excluded unless admissible in its entirety.[62] Evidence competent for one purpose only is not rendered inadmissible because it tends to reflect on matters for which it is incompetent,[63] if its application is properly restricted,[64] but such application [65] and the existence of such special purpose [66] must first be clearly shown. A presumption is not rebutted by evidence offered solely for another purpose.[67] Evidence otherwise inadmissible is in some cases admitted to affect the credibility of the witness.[68]

Objection to and striking out evidence.[See 10 C. L. 1904]—Ordinarily evidence must be admitted and considered when not objected to [69] or when objection thereto is waived.[70] Objection to evidence must be made at the time of its admission,[71]

58. An admission may relieve plaintiff from necessity of proving his case, when entered under county court rule 31, and estop defendant from objecting to plaintiff's failure to offer evidence on any material point. Berry Bros. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 427. Admission by counsel during trial precludes necessity of proving fact admitted. Tananevicz v. Lamczyk, 134 Ill. App. 135.

59. But its relation to conceded fact and main issue may be such that any action of court thereon will be reversible. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329. Admission of all of testatrix's conversation held proper though part of it anticipated contestant's case. Id. Evidence of admitted facts properly refused. Modern Woodmen of America v. Cecil, 108 Md. 357, 70 A 331.

60. Admission of waiver of right to insist upon erection of engines under terms of contract cannot be construed as admission of waiver of any damages arising from breach of contracts so far as failure to ship engines within time for erection. Berry Bros. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 427.

61. Duffy v. Jacobson, 135 Ill. App. 472.

62. Exclusion not error though part of it may be admissible where offered in its entirety. Modern Woodmen of America v. Cecil, 108 Md. 357, 70 A 331.

63. Hubbard v. Allyn, 200 Mass. 166, 86 NE 356. Where counsel stated that it was presented only for purpose, admissible. Stronge v. Supreme Lodge, K. P., 189 N. Y. 346, 82 NE 433. That evidence, admissible in relation to only one of several issues, produced verdict is not alone cause for reversal, unless it appear that verdict resulted from improper use of such evidence. Kelland v. Jos. W. Neone's Sons Co. [N. H.] 71 A 947.

64. Remedy is to ask for restricted consideration. Hubbard v. Allyn, 200 Mass. 166, 86 NE 356. Record should show that such evidence has been so restricted. Town of Pelham v. Pelham Tel. Co., 131 Ga. 325, 62 SE 186. Jury should be told of restricted purpose and it is duty of counsel, not of court, to see that this is done. McKinney v. Carson [Utah] 99 P 660. Evidence inadmissible for other purposes may be admitted to affect credibility of the witness provided the court restrict it to that purpose. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Stewart's Adm'x [Ky.] 115 SW 775; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson [Ky.] 115 SW 798. Evidence admissible for impeachment only should be limited to such purpose. Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kelley [Ky.] 113 SW 882.

65. Uncalled for statement of counsel as to theory of case held not to limit issues. Trees v. Millikin [Ind. App.] 85 NE 123.

66. Evidence of a conversation will not be admitted to support or explain letters which are not in evidence. Phelan v. Neary [S. D.] 117 NW 142.

67. Adverse party is entitled to rely upon evidence, being limited to purpose stated. Barasch v. Kramer, 60 Misc. 475, 115 NYS 176.

68. See Witnesses, 10 C. L. 2079. Evidence of real estate conveyance not claimed under or not in issue held admissible only to affect credibility of witness and not to prove plaintiff's case. Tipton v. Tipton [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 842.

69. Incompetent evidence not objected to may be considered by jury. Sutton v. Western Union Tel. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 577, 110 SW 874. Incompetent evidence admitted without objection cannot be disregarded on motion for nonsuit. Mitchell v. Allen, 81 S. C. 340, 61 SE 1087. Incompetent evidence admitted without objection is accorded its full probative force. Hubbard v. Allyn, 200 Mass. 166, 86 NE 356.

70. Held that party waived conditions precedent to introduction of secondary evidence by introducing copy of contract evidencing transaction in question. Mullins v. Columbia County Bank [Ark.] 113 SW 206.

71. Otherwise it cannot be stricken out at close of testimony (Maryland, D. & V. R. Co. v. Brown [Md.] 71 A 1005), though incompetent (Culbertson v. Salinger [Iowa] 117 NW 6). Objection is properly overruled where not made till after question is answered. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Under Code, § 1058, when defendant is represented by counsel at taking of depositions, objection of want of proper notice comes too late if not made otherwise it will usually be deemed waived.[72] The objections necessary to sa questions for review are treated elsewhere.[73] The effect of overruling an objecti to documentary evidence is to admit it.[74]

A motion to strike out evidence properly objected to which definitely sta the grounds [75] will lie as a remedy for an answer which is not responsive,[76] is bas on hearsay,[77] or is otherwise incompetent,[78] provided such motion raises no n issue.[79] While the trial judge, of his own motion, may strike out evidence,[80] action must not be based on the assumption that the testimony of any witness true.[81] It is not error to refuse to strike out evidence elicited by the movant and counsel should not be permitted, in the face of proper objection, to get i proper evidence before the jury and then escape the consequences of their acti by consenting that it be stricken from the record.[82] A witness improperly tes fying after a ruling should be cautioned and the jury admonished to disregard su testimony.[84] A document, received in evidence, subject to objection and not aft wards excluded, is considered in evidence.[85]

§ 4. Custody and conduct of jury.[86] See 10 C. L. 1905—While the court m excuse a juror for cause at any time before the introduction of evidence,[87] it h no power to discharge the jury in a civil action after the cause has been submitt except in case of necessity or by consent of the parties.[88] It is not improper the court in the presence of the jury to ask litigants if they will try the cause w a less number than the full jury.[89] A verdict is not invalidated by statements till depositions are offered in evidence. Welch v. Lynch, 30 App. D. C. 122. Variance must be specifically pointed out at trial, since objection too late when made on appeal. Kellyville Coal Co. v. O'Connell, 134 Ill. App. 311.

72. Testimony not objected to will be considered as received by consent, and, if it is not irrelevant or immaterial, court errs in withdrawing it from jury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Merritt, 55 Fla. 462, 46 S 1024. It is in discretion of the trial court to refuse to strike out incompetent evidence introduced without objection. Caldwell v. U. S. Exp. Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 465. Party not objecting to evidence at time of its admission is not entitled to have it stricken out even though it be open to attack on proper grounds. Wilson v. Jernigan [Fla.] 49 S 44.

73. See Saving Questions for Review, 12 C. L. 1763.

74. Document being a decree. Bunting v. Powers [Iowa] 120 NW 679.

75. Motion to strike should definitely state grounds. Gaffney v. Mentele [S. D.] 119 NW 1030 (motion to strike should go only to that part which is inadmissible, motion to strike all was properly overruled where part admissible and part not). Fein v. Weir, 129 App. Div. 299, 114 NYS 426.

76. Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89; Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105; Elliff v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Or.] 99 P 76; Chase v. Woodruff [Wis.] 120 NW 499. Dexter, 234 Ill. 517, 85 NE 209. Contract between defendant and B Co. licensed defendant to deal in articles involving inventions, and authorized him to assign rights to corporation approved by B. Co. Without such approval defendant assigned to N. Co., B. Co. refused to recognize N. Co. and N. Co. entered into contract with defendant, reassigning rights, defendant agreeing to furnish articles to N. Co. for sale. Defendant was unable to furnish all demanded, and sued B. Co. Held that contract was not held in trust by defendant for N. Co. so as to make him a trustee of amount recovered for N. Co. Daly v. Seaman, 130 App. Div. 432, 114 NYS 1089. Where financially embarrassed, one.[21] An imperfect gift cannot be effectuated as a trust.[22] An executed trust is one wherein the scheme has been fully and completely declared at the outset by the trustor.[23]

Declaring or creating the trust. See 10 C. L. 1908—No technical language is necessary to create a trust but if it appears from the instrument that property was to be dealt with for the benefit of another,[24] the court will affix the character of a trust.[25] The instrument, however, must be definite and certain,[26] specify the property placed in trust,[27] transfer the legal title to the trustee,[28] designate the trustee [29] and the bene-corporation transferred property to corporation formed for that purpose, under agreement with unsecured creditors that profits should go to them, the latter corporation held as trustee. Gill v. Bell's Knitting Mills, 128 App. Div. 691, 113 NYS 90. ficiaries, or appoint some one to do so.[30] A consideration is usually required,[31] and the trust must be accepted by the trustee,[32] but need not be expressly accepted by the beneficiary if of a beneficial character.[33] When the instrument has been delivered [34] and the trust accepted, the legal title vests in the trustee,[35] and cannot thereafter be affected by any act of the grantor.[36] All contemporaneous papers must be considered together.[37] Where some tenants in common execute a trust agreement with the understanding that the others are to join therein, they are relieved by the failure of the others so to do.[38] Fraud vitiates a trust.[39]

*Spendthrift trusts.*See 10 C. L. 1909—Through the medium of a trust, a beneficial estate may be vested in one without the power of alienation [40] and beyond the reach of his creditors.[41] Where a spendthrift trust is created,[42] the trustee and beneficiary cannot by mutual agreement terminate the same.[43] Where, however, the trust has only the form of a spendthrift trust and vests the beneficiary with all the rights and incidents of ownership, creditors may reach the same.[44]

*Bank deposits in trust.*See 10 C. L. 1910—An ineffectual gift of bank deposit cannot be sustained as a trust in the absence of an intention to create a trust.[45]

fact that bonds were found in deceased's safety deposit box enclosed by rubber band with envelope, but not in it, bearing words "Belongs to G," plaintiff, held insufficient as declaration of trust. Gegan v. Union Trust Co., 129 App. Div. 184, 113 NYS 595.

28. Subject-matter of the trust must be transferred by owner to the trustee for the beneficial use of cestui que trust. Mahan v. Schroeder, 142 Ill. App. 538.

42. Will creating trust estate, income payable to designated beneficiary during his life with provision that if he should attempt to alienate or anticipate the same, his interest should cease and income should be added to principal and paid to his heirs, held to create spendthrift trust, beneficiary having only an equitable life interest not within rule in Shelley's case. Nightingale v. Phillips [R. I.] 72 A 220. Trust, providing that income should be devoted to son's exclusive personal use, protected from any claim of his creditors and against any judicial process for his debts, and should not be liable for the "support, contracts, debts," etc., of son's wife, held an active spendthrift trust and not a special trust to prevent son's wife from sharing in estate and hence not terminated by divorce. Van Leer v. Van Leer, 221 Pa. 195, 70 A 716. Will placing property in trust, one-half of income to be paid to children for 10 years, other to be added to principal, one-half of principal to be paid to them at end of 10 years and balance at end of 20 years, held not to create spendthrift trust. Pearson v. Hanson, 230 Ill. 610, 82 NE 813.

Validity.[See 10 C. L. 1910]—In some states, a trust may be created only for certain purposes [46] and must not be for the purpose of defrauding or delaying creditors.[47] The validity is usually tested by the law of the state where the trust is to take effect.[48] Where illegal trusts can be separated from the legal,[49] or the invalid portions from the valid,[50] the latter will be given effect if possible.[51] A mere reservation of power to revoke does not invalidate the trust.[52]

Construction.[See 10 C. L. 1910]—The construction of a deed of trust is a proper subject of equitable jurisdiction,[53] and it will be so construed as to give validity [54] and to effectuate the intention of the grantor [55] if possible. Where its terms are plain and unambiguous, the purpose and intent must be determined therefrom,[56] otherwise

46. While equity will never suffer a trust to lapse for want of a trustee, such trust by way of devise must be for a purpose authorized by St. 1898, § 2081. In re Adelman's Will [Wis.] 119 NW 929. Testator gave income of his estate to wife, and provided that on her death or remarriage property should go to children. He gave all his property to his wife and brother who were named as executors in trust to pay legacies. Held that valid trust was created under the statute of uses and trusts (1 Rev. St. [1st. Ed.] p. 2, c. 1, tit. 2, § 55, subd. 3). Doscher v. Wyckoff, 116 NYS 389. Under Civ. Code, tit. 4, §§ 847, 857, providing for what purposes an express trust may be created, trust to convey property to named persons after death of a life tenant is void. In re Leavitt [Cal. App.] 97 P 916. Where property was conveyed in trust to keep premises insured, pay taxes, to pay income to life tenant, and to convey to others at her death, the latter provision being void, only duties were to pay taxes, keep premises insured, and to collect and pay over rents. Id.

47. Conveyance in trust for benefit of third person, grantor and beneficiary intending thereby to shield it from imaginary liability under forged papers, there being in fact no such papers and beneficiary having no other debts, will not be held void under statute making deeds with intent to defraud creditors void. Criss v. Criss [W. Va.] 64 SE 905.

48. If will, directing trustees in certain events to sell property and give proceeds to certain college in New Jersey with directions as to how it should be used, be construed as creating trust in college, held that validity will be determined by laws of New Jersey and not by courts of New York construing will. Hasbrouck v. Knoblauch, 130 App. Div. 378, 114 NYS 949.

49. Where illegal trusts can be separated from legal and latter given effect without doing injustice or defeating that which maker might presumably have wished, the legal will be upheld. In re Buchner, 60 Misc. 287, 113 NYS 625.

50. Where will, given in trust for daughter during her life and then to her issue during minority, etc., was void as to latter beneficiaries as a perpetuity, trust held valid during lifetime of daughter. In re Wilcox, 194 N. Y. 288, 87 NE 497. Where it is apparent from whole will that it was testator's paramount purpose to secure to each child and his or her lineal descendants an equal share, provision, continuing trust in respect to one daughter's share after her death during lives of her children, will be rejected where in violation of statute against perpetuities. Lewine v. Gerardo, 60 Misc. 261, 112 NYS 192. Where will placed property in trust for use of E during life with provision that on his death it should be paid to his children in equal shares, unless some were infants, in which case it should be continued in trust, etc., held since it was testator's evident intent to give to children of E in equal shares, if provision continuing trust during minority be invalid, rest will be executed. Hardenberg v. McCarthy, 130 App. Div. 538, 114 NYS 1073. Where will created a complete and lawful trust, held not invalidated by a separable provision creating an invalid limitation over in event of a disconnected contingency. Schey v. Schey, 194 N. Y. 368, 87 NE 817.

51. In re McClellan's Estate, 221 Pa. 261, 70 A 737. Where an unascertainable part of a fund is given upon a void trust, and residue upon a valid trust, the whole fails. Van Syckel v. Johnson [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 657. Where property was placed in trust for 50 years for benefit of needy next of kin, held that void limitaion was integral part of scheme of distribution and rendered whole trust void. Walter v. Walter, 60 Misc. 383, 113 NYS 465.

52. Mere reservation of power to revoke does not invalidate trust where instrument otherwise manifests intent to divest declarant of her absolute control as owner or as cestui qus trust, during her life, and to deprive her of the rights of a beneficiary who has a power of disposition under the trust. McEvoy v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 201 Mass. 50, 87 NE 465.

53. Both at common law and under statute. Berger v. Butler [Ala.] 48 S 685.

54. Will, directing that proceeds of sale of real estate business, etc., be held in trust, income to be divided into three equal parts and disposed of in designated manner, construed as in effect three separate trusts, where necessary to give validity to will. Beatty v. Godwin, 127 App. Div. 98, 111 NYS 373. Trustee need not actually sever the trust fund in case of several trusts carved out of it, sufficing that each fund be made distinct, and each will be considered alone on question of legal suspension of absolute power of alienation. Post v. Bruere, 127 App. Div. 250, 111 NYS 51.

55. McNew v. Vert [Ind. App.] 86 NE 969.

56. Where testatrix provided that in certain contingency trustee should pay "all the aforesaid trust funds," mentioned in certain paragraphs to a named corporation, held that words "trust funds" meant trust estate and not trust moneys. Young v. Du Bois, 60 Misc. 381, 113 NYS 456.

surrounding facts and circumstances may be resorted to.[57] Where executor was directed to invest in a home for testator's daughter, etc., but took title under a deed specifying the trust without reference to the will, the land is held under the trust created by the deed and not by the will.[58] Where a trust depends upon an agreement between grantor and another, grantor's intention is immaterial.[59]

Necessity of writing. See 10 C. L. 1911—In most states an express trust must be expressed in writing.[60] Where parol trust is executed in the state where the land is situated and all the parties reside therein, its validity will be tested by the laws thereof.[61] A parol trust is sometimes merely nonenforcible and not void,[62] and hence need not be in writing if recognized by the trustee.[63] The statute of frauds is inapplicable to a fully executed trust,[64] and will not prevent the enforcement of a partly executed one where it would result in inequity.[65] Where a parol trust is enforcible, the evidence must be clear and specific.[66] Where a complaint alleges a trust agreement, it will be presumed to be in writing unless the contrary appears.[67] Independent of the statute of frauds, a parol trust cannot be ingrafted upon an absolute deed when inconsistent therewith.[68] A parol trust in personalty is usually valid.[69]

§ 3. Implied trusts, generally.[70] See 10 C. L. 1912—An implied trust is one which, without being expressed, is deducible from the nature of the transaction as a matter of intent,[71] and hence is frequently said to rest in agreement of the parties.[72] The Open question whether parol express trust is valid. Garrett v. Rutherford, 108 Va. 478, 62 SE 389. Oral agreement is insufficient, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1971, to establish express trust. Gerety v. O'Sheehan [Cal. App.] 99 P 545. Express trusts must be in writing under Rev. St. 1899, § 3416 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1949), § 3417 being applicable only to trusts implied of law. Bosch v. Miller [Mo. App.] 118 SW 506. Constructive trust cannot be changed to an express trust by an oral declaration, under Civ. Code, § 852. Norton v. Bassett [Cal.] 97 P 894. Verified answer by trustee, under void oral trust setting out terms of trust and declaring an intention of executing same, held a declaration. Schumacher v. Draeger [Wis.] 119 NW 305.

Gen St. 1902, § 1089, providing that no action shall be maintained on agreement for sale of any interest in real estate, unless agreement is in writing, does not make parol trust void. In re Fisk [Conn.] 71 A 559. Code, § 2918, requiring declarations or creations of trusts to be executed in same manner as conveyances, does not make a parol trust void, but only prescribes the character of evidence necessary to establish same, and has no application where trust is admitted or has been executed. Johnston v. Jickling [Iowa] 119 NW 746. Complaint held to charge express trust, and hence, under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4517 (Pierce's Code, § 4435), parol evidence is inadmissible to establish same. Spaulding v. Collins [Wash.] 99 P 306. Under Comp. Laws, § 9509, trust in land cannot be established by showing that it was deeded to defendant by complainant and wife under parol agreement to reconvey to complainant. Waldron v. Merrill, 154 Mich. 203, 15 Det. Leg. N. 708, 117 NW 631.

63. Where defendant admits that it purchased land of plaintiff at foreclosure under agreement to reconvey after selling sufficient to reimburse itself with commissions and that it intended to carry out agreement, court need not find a trust ex maleficio to authorize recovery by plaintiff. Hamnett v. Monongahela Trust Co. [Pa.] 72 A 512. That parol trust annexed to a deed absolute in form is void, does not render the deed void at the suit of an heir of grantor who has no other interest, since grantee may execute trust or may make a written declaration. Schumacher v. Draeger [Wis.] 119 NW 305.

common-law implied trust arising in favor of a grantor under a conveyance without consideration does not obtain where contrary to the intention of the parties.[78]

§ 4. Constructive trusts. A. Trusts raised where property is held or obtained by fraud.[74]—See 10 C. L. 1912—Constructive trusts are such as are raised in equity where property is fraudulently obtained,[75] or, acquired without fraud, it would be inequitable to allow holder of legal title to retain it.[76] Fraud is the prime element,[77] and a constructive trust usually arises where one occupying a fiduciary relation,[78] such as agent,[79] administrator or guardian,[80] spiritual advisor,[81] etc., to an-

75. Where one obtains property by undue influence or duress, equity will raise a constructive trust. Morris v. Vyse, 154 Mich. 253, 15 Det. Leg. N. 722, 117 NW 639. Breach of confidence, which court of equity will consider fraud, is procurement of title by one with the consent of another on a fraudulent promise as to the disposition to be made thereof, and an attempted holding of title in violation of promise and a confidential relation is not necessary. Where several persons conspire to defraud another out of his property and one secures legal title thereto, constructive trust may be enforced in action, to which all are parties. Gassert v. Strong [Mont.] 98 P 497. Where one having only a joint interest in a note secured by vendor's lien proceeds and forecloses the lien, his partner buying in the land and dividing the land between them, held that a trust arose in favor of other joint owner. Morris v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 130. Evidence held to sustain finding that canal properties bought at master's sale by defendant was for joint benefit of defendant and plaintiff, and hence plaintiff was entitled to accounting for one-half of money, bonds, and shares received by defendant therefor. Quirk v. Everett, 106 Minn. 474, 119 NW 63. Decedent posted notices of appropriation of water rights. Being without sufficient means, he interested defendants, and conveyed to them his rights with understanding that corporation should be formed and all rights conveyed to it. No corporation was formed and defendant individually acquired a contemplated lease of a canal and posted notices of appropriation covering substantially same right, held that defendants were trustees for partnership. (Beckwith v. Sheldon [Cal.] 97 P 867), and where lease was not definite as to rights conveyed thereby, evidence admissible of subsequent uses, etc. (Id.). First mortgagee obtained order directing sale and barring subsequent mortgagees. Third and fourth mortgagees assigned to second to procure stay of sale and to pay first mortgage, second mortgagee being unable to carry out intentions, purchased in good faith at sale under first mortgage. Held that she did not hold in trust for third and fourth mortgagees. Haag v. Baker [Kan.] 97 P 473. Where husband held in trust for sole benefit of wife and had no individual interest, agreement by wife with another to purchase at mortgage foreclosure and hold in trust, to refund to her the amount invested therein by her, is not such a fraud on husband as to prevent enforcement of a constructive trust as against such third person. Carr v. Craig, 138 Iowa, 526, 116 NW 720. Though agreement among three parties that, if any of them were awarded a city contract for removal of garbage, he should admit others to an equal share, made each the agent of the others, where one acquires contract, invests own capital and labor and assumes all risks, equity will not impress a trust. De Vita v. Loprete [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 1007. Where trust was within statute and must be maintained, if at all, as a constructive trust, held error to instruct that if grantor executed deed simply to vest legal title in grantee, intending to retain equitable title, it was trust property, etc. Henderson v. Murray [Minn.] 121 NW 214. Stakeholder of corporate stock, to be delivered to assignor if assignment is held invalid and to assignee if it is held valid, purchasing interest of either does not hold in trust for the other on his title being confirmed. Halman v. Burlen, 198 Mass. 494, 85 NE 167. Plaintiffs and defendant bought stock in corporation to be organized to operate mining claims and purchased option from one W. On discovering that W's option was unenforcible, defendant received back his money. Later he effected a compromise between W. and one holding valid option, and received 5,000 shares from W. for so doing, which were part of shares received by W. from corporation formed by optionees. All was done with knowledge of plaintiff, who took shares in new company in lieu of in proposed one. Held that defendant did not hold 5,000 shares in trust. Cranney v. McAllister [Utah] 101 P 985.

78. Where one joint optionee refused to contribute his share of advancement necessary to secure extension of option, held that there was no such fiduciary relation as to prevent the other from permitting option other uses the knowledge or power so possessed to acquire land to the detriment of the latter.[82] Where the principal has ceased to negotiate for purchase,[83] or where the agent has fully performed his duties,[84] the latter may purchase. While a mere naked promise to purchase property for another does not make it a fraud to purchase in own right,[85] yet if a fiduciary relation exists,[86] or the promisee is induced thereby to refrain from acquiring the property for himself,[87] equity will raise a constructive trust. Likewise, a mere refusal to carry out a void parol trust is not fraud,[88] except where a confidential relation exists,[89] or the grantor has been induced [90] by fraud to expire and securing a new one. Gaines v. Chew, 167 F 630. Agreement among persons interested in success of corporate enterprise looking toward the promotion thereof, held not to create fiduciary relation where they dealt at arm's length. Dobbins v. Peabody, 199 Mass. 141, 85 NE 102. Fiduciary relation between husband and wife is not sufficient to raise presumption of fraud. Mahan v. Schroeder, 236 Ill. 392, 86 NE 97. In action to establish a constructive trust in irregation enterprise, evidence held to show a fiduciary relation between defendants and decedent. Beckwith v. Sheldon [Cal.] 97 P 867. Where certain members of a lodge secured money from board of control under pretense that it was a loan, but bought property with it, such members will be considered trustees for the lodge. Hinsey v. Supreme Lodge K. of P., 138 Ill. App. 248.

79. Where agent purchases land in own name with own money, transaction will be regarded as a loan, and a resulting trust will arise. Schrager v. Cool, 221 Pa. 622, 70 A 889. Where one employed to negotiate a purchase acquires the property for himself, a trust will spring from the fraud. Id. Where agent to collect rents, pay taxes, insurance, etc., unbeknown to principal, hastens foreclosure of a mortgage and keeps principal in ignorance thereof, upon purchasing at foreclosure, he will be deemed trustee for principal. Enslen v. Allen [Ala.] 49 S 430. Under Civ. Code, §§ 2219, 2229, where agent purchasing bonds for principal, takes bonus stock in own name, he holds as trustee. Bone v. Hayes [Cal.] 99 P 172. Evidence that person selling bonds had stock to give as a bonus, that on same day that agent purchased bonds for principal he and his son received stock corresponding in amount seller was authorized to give with bonds, held to authorize finding that it was given as a bonus. Id.

80. Where administrator of an estate and guardian of minor children purchases at administrators sale, he will be held as a trustee thereof. Baker v. Lane [Ky.] 118 SW 963. Where administrator wrongfully takes possession of funds of complainant as estate property, and deposits it in a bank, administrator and bank are trustees in invitum. Peters v. Rhodes [Ala.] 47 S 183.

81. Where man, 70 years old, deeded land to spiritual advisor under promise by him to hold in trust and reconvey on demand, constructive trust will arise upon his refusal to keep promise. Henderson v. Murray [Minn.] 121 NW 214.

82. Where widow redeemed homestead from mortgage by buying at foreclosure and conveying a part thereof to mortgagee according to agreement, she will be held trustee of rest for children, she standing in a confidential relation to children as to homestead. Burel v. Baker [Ark.] 116 SW 181. Where husband, having money of wife in his possession, was directed by her to purchase real estate for her therewith, mere fact that unbeknown to her he gave his note therefor does not prevent trust arising in her favor, he having paid note with her money. Levy & Co. v. Mitchell [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 172. Where mother, through fraudulent partition sale, acquired property of children at grossly inadequate price, held that she became trustee thereof. Markley v. Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co. [N. J. Eq.] 69 A 1100.

83. Mackel v. Nolan [Cal. App.] 97 P 1128.

84. Where agent of vendor was directed by prospective purchaser to submit a specific offer and nothing more, which he did, and, when it was refused, agent's wife, with knowledge of all the facts, purchased same without giving prospective purchaser an opportunity to submit other offers, held that no constructive trust resulted. Rogers v. Genung [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 230.

85. Oral promise to purchase at foreclosure sale for benefit of another, and a refusal to convey to him, does not create a trust ex malificio, where promisee had no interest in land and paid no part of consideration. Lancaster Trust Co. v. Long, 220 Pa. 499, 69 A 993. Purchase, by one holding fiduciary relation to another, for himself of property, which it would have been to advantage of such other to have procured, is not fraudulent, although he had expressed intention to purchase for other, where latter did not part with anything in reliance thereon. Zeckendorf v. Steinfeld [Ariz.] 100 P 784.

86. Person under obligation to purchase and hold property for another cannot purchase in own right. Zeckendorf v. Steinfeld [Ariz.] 100 P 784. Where two agreed that either, as opportunity offered, should purchase certain stock to be equally divided between them, and one, having purchased the stock, holds it in trust. Sherman v. Herr, 220 Pa. 420, 69 A 899. Where surety agreed in certain contingencies to take property, operate mines, reimburse itself, and then reconvey, it cannot, by refusing to make agreed payments, cause property to be sold and purchase same in own right, and, if it does so, it becomes trustee ex malificio. Smith v. U. S. Fidelity & Guar. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 15.

87. Evidence held to show that defendant was permitted to acquire title at mortgage foreclosure, under parol agreement to refund to mortgagor amount she had invested. Carr v. Craig, 138 Iowa, 526, 116 NW 720.

88. Henderson v. Murray [Minn.] 121 NW 214.

89. Where land is conveyed to persons standing in confidential relation under oral promise to hold same in trust, refusal to do so is constructive fraud. Hansen v. Svarto convey under a parol trust, equity will usually intervene to give relief.[91] A constructive trust results where title is taken in the name of a third person without the knowledge of the person paying therefor.[92] The deposit of school funds by the treasurer in a private bank is not wrongful so as to create a trustee ex maleficio.[93]

(§ 4) B. Trusts by equitable construction in the absence of fraud.[94]—See 10 C. L. 1915—In the absence of actual fraud, equity will create a trust where necessary to prevent injustice.[95] One wrongfully acquiring the legal title to property,[96] or being vested with the same through mistake,[97] is generally held a trustee thereof for the one entitled to the same. An administrator or executor is ordinarily a trustee of the estate for the benefit of creditors.[98] In Missouri, a husband receiving and using money of his wife without her consent in writing, becomes a trustee of the property purchased.[99] A vendor under a contract for a deed, especially after receiving the money, is a trustee of the legal title for the purchaser.[1] Where life tenant converts person-

Bill alleging that parents deeded land to sons, relying upon the confidence imposed in them to fulfill their promise to hold same in trust for them during life, and upon parents' death to divide equally among all the children, held to state cause of action. Id. Where husband, through his wife's confidence in him, secures absolute deed coupled with a parol trust while she is sick and approaching the end, a trust ex malificio arises. In re Fisk [Conn.] 71 A 559.

90. Oral promise by heir to dispose of property in particular manner will result in a trust only when it induced ancestor to abstain from making will. Mead v. Robertson, 131 Mo. App. 185, 110 SW 1095. Conveyance on faith of parol agreement to hold for another creates an enforcible trust in favor of such person. Ryan v. Logan County Bank [Ky.] 116 SW 1179. Evidence held insufficient to show promise, heir being in adjoining room at time intestate was stating how he wished property disposed of, and it not appearing that she heard husband's promise to so dispose of property and acquiesced therein. Mead v. Robertson, 131 Mo. App. 185, 110 SW 1095. Finding in a will contest that the will was not vitiated by fraud or undue influence held not res adjudicata in a suit to establish a constructive trust on the ground that testator was induced to make will giving property to defendant by promises by defendant to give surplus income, etc., to his relatives. Smullin v. Wharton, 73 Neb. 667, 112 NW 622.

91. Where heir at law induces ancestor not to make a will by promises to distribute according to his wishes, constructive trust results. Mead v. Robertson, 131 Mo. App. 185, 110 SW 1095. Evidence held insufficient to show that deed from mother to daughter just prior to death was executed upon promise by daughter to execute mortgages thereon to her two sisters for their share. Licari v. McMonigle, 115 NYS 914.

In suit for specific performance by legal owner, defendant received commissioner's deed to entire land. Held that defendant was trustee of mineral rights for complainant. Steinman v. Jessee, 108 Va. 567, 62 SE 275. Sureties on note released mortgage indemnifying them under agreement that $75 of proceeds of sale he turned over to them to apply on note. Purchaser gave check for $75, which was given to one surety by cosuretles to give to payee. Surety deposited in a company's safe, intending to pay to payee later. Held that company held same in trust and could not apply to debt of maker. Elmer v. Campbell [Mo. App.] 117 SW 622.

96. Under Civ. Code, § 2224, providing that one gaining a thing by wrongful act is an involuntary trustee thereof, etc., grantee under deed by grantor, not possessing legal capacity to execute same, is an "involuntary trustee." Clapp v. Vatcher [Cal. App.] 99 P 549. Since action by executor for value of real estate deeded away by testator while of unsound mind is in nature of action for breach of trust, allegation of ownership by testator at time of death, and finding that sale made by defendant was made as trustee for testator, are not inconsistent. 97. Where defendant, an employe, was directed to draw deed to himself for certain lots, and deed to plaintiff for others, and by mistake included in his deed lots intended for plaintiff, he becomes trustee for plaintiff and plaintiff may enfore trust, especially where his deed subsequently recorded also includes the lots. Lamb v. Schiefner, 129 App. Div. 684, 114 NYS 34.

98. Although executor is ordinarily trustee of estate for benefit of creditors, where creditor has lost right to subject property to claim as against devisee, she does not commit a breach of trust by purchasing as individual. Rivarg v. Patterson, 59 Misc. 263, 112 NYS 250.

alty into realty, he becomes a quasi trustee thereof for remainderman.[2] Where vendor reserved lien to secure purchase price note and died after transferring the note, his heirs hold legal title in trust for the holder of the note and for purchaser.[3]

The statute of frauds does not apply to constructive trusts,[4] but the parol evidence must be strong and convincing.[5]

§ 5. Resulting trusts.[6]—See 10 C. L. 1915—While resulting trusts are frequently defined by statute,[7] they generally arise where one party pays the consideration for a purchase and title is taken in the name of another.[8] There seems to be a conflict of authority as to where a resulting trust can be implied from a voluntary conveyance without consideration,[9] but such rule has no application to a conveyance of land held in trust subject thereto.[10] Resulting trusts arise by operation of law,[11] but will not prevail if contrary to the intention of the parties.[12] It is not necessary that

Kollock v. Bennett [Or.] 100 P 940. Gen. St. 1902, § 1089, providing that no action shall be maintained on an agreement for sale of any interest in real estate, unless in writing, does not render parol evidence incompetent to prove personal accountability arising upon sale of land held as trustee ex maleficio. Ratliff v. Elwell [Iowa] 119 NW 740. Bill by testatrix alleging that testator paid entire consideration for land, deed of which was taken in name of another, from whom defendant acquired title with knowledge of all the facts, held sufficient to show resulting trust. Howe v. Howe, 199 Mass. 593, 85 NE 945. Woman living in meretricious relation with a man at time land was purchased and taken in his name, to establish a resulting trust, must show that she contributed to purchase price, and deals after purchase cannot create resulting trust. Hayworth v. Williams [Tex.] 116 SW 43. Woman living in meretricious relations with a man may establish a resulting trust by showing that they had worked together to a common purpose and that land was purchased with funds accummulated thereby. the beneficiary should have paid the entire consideration, but a trust will result pro tanto.[13] One claiming a trust must have been the owner of the money at the time of purchase,[14] and no trust arises from the fact that he loaned the money to the one taking the legal title.[15] A void parol express trust does not prevent a resulting trust from arising.[16] A resulting trust is not affected by a sale by trustee for the benefit of creditors of legal owner, where only the interest of the legal holder is sold.[17]

The statute of frauds is inapplicable to resulting trusts,[18] and, hence, they may be established by parol evidence.[19] A resulting trust rests upon presumption and is open to rebuttal.[20]

Presumption of gift or advancement. See 10 C. L. 1917—Resulting trusts being based upon the improbability of a gift of the consideration to a stranger,[21] the presumption of a trust does not arise between persons of close relations,[22] but a gift is rather presumed.[23] The presumption of a gift, however, is rebuttable.[24]

Oral agreement by two to stake out mining claim, and to acquire title in name of one for benefit of both when executed, creates trust in nature of a resulting trust and is not within statute of frauds. Hendrichs v. Morgan [C. C. A.] 167 F 106. Under Rev. Laws, c. 147, § 1, declaring that no trust concerning land, except such as may result by implication of law, shall be declared unless by instrument in writing, a resulting trust may be established by parol. 20. Where the owner of land conveyed same in payment of debt to person named by creditors, and the creditors took from such person a judgment note and cash, held that no resulting trust was created in the land in favor of creditors. Lutz v. Matthews, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 354.

21. Because of improbability of a gift to a stranger, law implies that one who holds title without having paid any value for it a trustee for person who in fact paid the price. Howe v. Howe, 199 Mass. 598, 85 NE 945.

22. Presumption of trust does not arise between husband and wife. Herbert v. Alvord [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 946. Where husband purchases property and has it conveyed to wife or expends money in improving her property, it will not be presumed that he intended to create trust. Hamby v. Brooks [Ark.] 111 SW 277.

23. Where property is deeded to daughter or granddaughter, a gift is presumed. Derry v. Fielder [Mo.] 115 SW 412. Where, upon partition between heirs, husband of one paid some of the owelty money for his wife to equalize partition, it will be presumed a gift. Sprinkle v. Spainhour, 149 N. C. 223, 62 SE 910. Husband purchased land belonging to estate of wife's father and gave notes therefore, taking bond for a deed. Notes were paid partly by money borrowed and partly with wife's distributive share, title being taken in husband's name. He sold enough to pay off loans. Held that wife had no resulting trust in remainder, transaction amounting to gift or loan. Stokes v. Clark, 131 Ga. 583, 62 SE 1028. T. dies during his minority, but if M. T. should survive his minority, then in trust to make over and dispose to F. M. T. absolutely, held that F. M. T. took absolute fee on coming of age. Mitchell v. Allen, 81 S. C. 340, 61 SE 1087. Under deed to F. in trust, for use of L. A. & E. in fee and to survivors of them, "provided, however, that if said A. or E. shall die leaving issue then to use of such issue, who shall take same per stirpes and not per capita," word "issue" includes grandchildren, so that under rule in Shelley's Case fee would not, on death of L., vest absolutely in A. and E. but on death of either use shifts to issue. Campbell v. Cronly [N. C.] 64 SE 213. Decree distributing residuary estate to trustee "in trust to manage, control, and care for said property and accumulations thereof" until youngest surviving child of testator should reach majority, and then to go one-third to widow, etc., held to decree a vested estate in remainder in widow, which descended to heirs, notwithstanding Civ. Code, § 863, providing that whole estate vests in trustee, which means estate necessary to execute trusts. Keating v. Smith [Cal.] 97 P 300. Where land was conveyed to trustee to collect rents, etc., and pay them to beneficiary for life, and to convey to her appointee by will or, in default of appointment, to her heirs, beneficiary took only an equitable life estate. McFall v. Kirkpatrick, 236 Ill. 281, 86 NE 139. Deed of land to F. in trust to and for sole use of a wife for life, remainder to the husband and his heirs forever, held to create an equitable life estate in the wife and equitable remainder in husband after termination of wife's estate. Dunkerson v. Goldberg [C. C. A.] 162 F 120. Where wife gave her real and personal property in trust for benefit of her husband by instrument which contained provisions usual to spendthrift trusts with additional provision that trustee should convey property to any person designated by husband, he takes fee. In re Morgan's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 500. Where will directed executors to form trust fund and to pay to widow the interest on $40,000, during life, held that widow became entitled to interest immediately upon testator's death, but same was not payable for one year. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Where testator bequeathed to son the occupancy, use, rents and profits of land and to protection appointed two trusts with power to do whatever they deemed best to secure to son full enjoyment thereof, son is entitled to possession and rents and profits except such as is necessary to preserve property, but if he does not occupy or commits waste trustees are entitled to control same to secure son the benefits thereof. Mattison v. Mattison [Or.] 100 P 4. Deed to one as trustee for "the heirs of his body" held to create trust for such children as he had at time of execution of deed. Turner v. Barber, 131 Ga. 444, 62 SE 587. Will expressed desire that testator's children by first and second wife should ultimately share alike in property and provided that if wife did not so divide surplus income as to effectuate such desire trustees should do so out of a special fund. Held that no special provision should be made by trustees where one of children died and mother inherited share. Harris v. Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912. Where will, creating trust, provided that it was to continue during natural life of widow, provision, that if she married she was to get the same interest as if he had died intestate, construed not to give her such interest absolutely, but in the trust as a trust. In re Horn's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 791. Fact that life estate of wife may be converted into a trust by her marriage does not prevent present vesting of remainder in children. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292. Testator gave money in trust, a certain amount of income to be paid daughters during life, any surplus after death of either to be paid to designated charities, and on death of daughters, to their children. Held that surplus income during life of daughters should go to them. In re Ferguson's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 896. Words "their heirs at law," in deed directing a trustee to pay rents to decedent and his wife Ellen, and at the death of the survivor to convey to their heirs at law, means heirs of decedent and such wife and not heirs of survivor. Crandall v. Ahern, 200 Mass. 77, 85 NE 886. Will giving property in trust, income to be used for benefit of testatrix's son N and wife during their life, principal to be paid at their death to "their three children," construed to give principal to testatrix's three grandchildren, by other children it appearing that N and wife had no children which testatrix well knew. Polsey v. Newton, 199 Mass. 85 NE 574. Opinion filed and judgment entered in supreme court, February 6, 1909, amended and corrected so as to make defendant's support payable out of corpus as well as income. Smullen v. Wharton [Neb.] 121 NW 441.

A. and E. in fee, "and to the survivors of them," upon death of one by way of shifting use, entire interest vests in other two, without right of survivorship between them. Campbell v. Cronly [N. C.] 64 SE 213. Deed, quit claiming to S, his heirs and assigns, habendum to S. for life, remainder to such of his children as arrived at age of 21, their heirs and assigns, to their use forever, held to create shifting use, fee vesting in S. for his use during life and then for use of such children as attained the age of 21, and when that class became determined, fee shifted to them under statute of uses (Simonds v. Simonds, 199 Mass. 552, 85 NE ant is given the right of occupancy instead of receiving the income, the right to the income does not cease until occupation privilege is exercised and when once exercised [31] is not irrevocable. Judicial determination of the amount a widow is entitled to under a provision giving to her so much of income and corpus as is necessary for her support has the same effect as if written in will creating the trust.[32] Where one deposits his own money in savings bank in trust for children but does not deliver bank book, he retains ownership and children are only entitled to amount remaining at his death.[33] A trust for maintenance of wife and children, made for evident purpose of supporting family, should be construed as vesting a life estate in wife with remainder in children.[34] Possible beneficiaries in the event of the exercise of a discretionary power of appointment have no interest until such power is exercised in their favor.[35] A trust may be made to take effect in the future.[36] Where beneficiary of life use of income has power to dispose of trust estate by will, a residuary bequest or devise is an execution of the power.[37]

Statute of uses. See 10 C. L. 1919—The statute of uses executes a dry or passive trust [38] and vests the legal title in the beneficiary.[39] Before the statute of uses can operate there must be a beneficiary in being to receive,[40] and, where the beneficiaries are infants, the statute will not ordinarily operate although the trustee is not in terms charged with any active duties.[41]

Rights between beneficiaries.[See 10 C. L. 1919]—Where beneficiaries have not been guilty of any fraud or unfair dealings,[42] they may ordinarily invoke an equitable division of their property according to their interests.[43] Where, in settlement of partnership affairs, one partner took a specified sum for his share, presumptively it included a trust interest in land held by the other.[44]

Income and principal.[See 10 C. L. 1919]—As to what constitutes income and what principal depends largely upon the character of trust estate.[45] Where bonds above par are a part of the original trust funds, the entire interest should be treated as income,[46] but where they are purchased with trust funds, a deduction from the interest must be made for depreciation in value of the bonds as they approach maturity.[47] Trust provisions for maintenance,[48] or awarding income to one and corpus to another,[49] are usually construed to take effect as of testator's death.[50] As to what expenditures are chargeable to income and what to corpus, where they are payable to different persons, depends largely the nature of the trust estate,[51] but ordinarily succession or transfer taxes are chargeable to the principal,[52] while current taxes are payable from the income,[53] unless the instrument creating the trust otherwise provides.[54] The cost of maintaining and preserving the corpus is also generally chargeable to the income,[55] but, where unproductive property is withheld from the market for the sole benefit of the remainderman, it must be charged to the

Where principal creditors spent large sums of money in preserving property in trust for all creditors, and finally, by conveyance to another trustee, excluded minor creditors, who apparently abandoned their rights therein, held that principal creditors were not guilty of such moral fraud as to defeat equitable suit by them for division. Seibel v. Higham [Mo.] 115 SW 987.

43. B. holding legal title in trust for himself, H. M. and S. equally, executed deed for delivery to grantee holding option and placed same in escrow. Option was not exercised. After B's death, H. secretly obtained deed and optionee quitclaimed to M., and upon sale to corporation, H. and M. received money. Held that S. and B's. heirs and corporation were on equal footing and on equitable division corporation must account for profits but is entitled to benefit of improvements. Seibel v. Higham [Mo.] 115 SW 987.

44. Strong evidence is required to overcome presumption. Burrows v. Williams [Wash.] 100 P 340.

45. In determining whether distribution of accumulated profits of joint stock company should be treated as income or principal, company must be treated as if it were a true corporation. Bishop v. Bishop [Conn.] 71 A 583. Ordinarily, one entitled to income of trust funds invested in stock is entitled only to dividends in nature of cash dividends, not including those in process of liquidation or deduction of capital. Id. "Cash dividends" include all distribution of surplus assets of corporation made pro rata to share holders through dividend declarations, whereby such surplus is separated from capital of corporation and becomes property of shareholder. Id. Stock issued by corporation under declaration of stock dividend is principal, and not income. Id. Where testator held bonds with interest coupons attached, upon which there was accrued interest at time of death, but it was not due and payable until thereafter, such interest must be considered income, and not principal. corpus.[56] Where the trustee erroneously pays out a part of the principal as income, he is personally liable to the remainderman,[57] and may retain from income erroneously withheld as corpus enough to indemnify himself.[58]

Rights of creditors and grantees. See 16 C. L. 1919—Unless limited by statute [59] or the instrument creating the trust, the beneficial interest of the beneficiary is ordinarily alienable.[60] Where, however, an estate is placed in trust for the "maintenance of a family," none of the beneficiaries has any distinct and separable interest of an alienable character.[61] A beneficiary can only alienate or incumber his own interest, whatever that may be.[62] While the rights of creditors are frequently prescribed by statute,[63] they can have no greater rights than the beneficiary has.[64] In New York a beneficiary of the income from personal property in trust cannot transfer the same,[65] except that, where the beneficiary is entitled to a remainder in the whole or in part of principal sum subject to a trust estate, he may release his interest, thus merging his interest in the remainder.[66] An assignment of income takes effect as between assignee and trustee from the date of giving notice to the trustee.[67] The recordation of an instrument as a mortgage on realty, when in fact it is a mere assignment of funds in the hands of a trustee, does not give constructive notice of the assignment.[68]

Application of statute of limitations to beneficiaries. See 10 C. L. 1920—Where the legal title is vested in the trustee, adverse possession [69] barring the trustee will bar the benficiaries.[70]

The statute of limitations does not commence to run in favor of a voluntary trustee until he repudiates the trust [71] and knowledge thereof is brought home to the beneficiary,[72] but it runs in favor of an involuntary trustee [73] from the time the trust arises,[74] provided the defrauded party has knowledge of facts.[75] Trusts which are not effected by the statute of limitations are only those technical and continuing trusts over which equity has exclusive jurisdiction.[76] Since trusts are established and enforced through equity, rights may be lost through laches,[77] but, ordinarily, laches cannot be predicated upon mere inactivity in the absence of knowledge of a repudiation of the trust,[78] and in no case can they be asserted where the trustee has recognized the trust.[79]

NOTE. Ignorance of cestui as tolling limitations in action for breach of secret trust: The defendant's testator, the trustee of a secret trust, committed breaches thereof without the knowledge of the plaintiff, the cestui. The defendant set up the statute of limitation. Held, since there was an express trust and the cestui had no knowledge of the breach, the defense failed. Russel v. Huntington Nat. Bank, 162 F 686.

The principal case accords with the rule laid down by American courts and text writers that, until there has been to the knowledge of the cestui such a breach as amounts to a repudiation, the Statute of Limitations does not act as a bar. Perry, Trusts § 863. This view is based upon the ground that the trustee is holding adversely, and from then on the statute begins to run. Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 90; Hill v. McDonald, 58 Hun 322, 11 NYS 813. The English cases generally cited to support this proposition seem misconstrued. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 M. & C. 41, 52; Pollock v. Gardner, 1 Hare 694; Lister v. Pickford, 34 L. J. Ch. 582. They clearly hold the statute of limitations inapplicable to express trusts (Attorney General v. The Fish Monger, 5 M. & C. 16), and seem to regard the time of repudiation as important only in determining whether laches will be imputed. Further, in imputing laches, the English courts are more zealous of the cestui's interest than American courts. Thus they have held that the above rule applies, though the trust is established by parol evidence (Richefoucauld v. Boustead, 1 Ch. 196) and that an agent having a fiduciary relation to his principal (Burdick v. Garrick, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 232), one who assumes to act as a trustee (Life Ins. v. Siddal, 3 D. F. & G. 58), or one who obtains the trust res by collusion in the fraud of the trustee (Soar v. Ashwell, L. R. 2 Q. B. 390), will be looked upon as an express trustee. It would seem that the American courts following their less liberal policy would oppose such extensions of the liabilities of an express trustee. Lammer v. Stoddard, 103 N. Y. 672, 9 NE 328; McClane's Adm. v. Shepherd's Ex., 21 N. J. Eq. 76; note 7 L. R. A. 370.—From 9 Columbia L. R. 89.

other unless the party named fails to qualify.[82] Ordinarily, the beneficiaries [83] must be made parties to the proceeding to appoint a trustee. In a judicial proceeding to appoint a trustee, the court cannot retain jurisdiction to administer the trust.[84] The court has large discretion in the appointment of a trustee,[85] but it is a better practice to appoint a resident trustee, unless special circumstances justify the appointment of a nonresident.[86] An adverse claimant of land has no interest which entitles him to be heard in appointment.[87] The refusal of a town council to accept a perpetual trust for the repair of testator's burial lot does not invalidate the trust, since its successors may accept.[88]

Succession and appointment. See 10 C. L. 1921—Where purchaser of lands buys as trustee of another, the duty devolves upon his personal representatives to execute the trust upon his death.[89] Where the order appointing a trustee directs that he shall first file a bond, he does not become a trustee until such bond is filed,[90] and a testamentary trustee is charged with notice of all orders of the probate court.[91] A testamentary trustee, who has been discharged as executor and has not qualified as trustee, cannot sustain his acts as trustee on his powers as executor.[92] If the trustee named cannot act, the court may make an appointment.[93] Whether a successor has discretionary powers given to the trustee originally named depends on the terms creating the trust.[94]

Resignation and appointment. See 10 C. L. 1921—Joinder in complaint for the judicial appointment of a trustee is a renunciation of the trusteeship.[95] An offer to resign upon written request signed by all stockholders who had signed trust indenture is not converted into an agreement by request duly signed where two signers withdrew signatures before the request was presented.[96] The fact that a trustee is incompetent does not invalidate the trust.[97]

A trustee may ordinarily invoke the aid of a court of equity in the management of the estate and the execution of the trust,[29] and, where he unreasonably delays in making a division of the estate,[30] a partition may be had by the parties in interest. A suit for the construction of a will creating a trust is properly brought in the county of testator's residence.[31] The administration of the entire trust may be placed under the control of the court,[32] and in Illinois a partition can only be made under the orders of a court.[33]

(§ 8) C. Management of estate and investments.[34]—See 10 C. L. 1923—While the management of the estate is usually left largely to the discretion of the trust, he is personally responsible if he exceeds his powers,[35] and, while a decree settling an account of the trustee is a protection as to all investments shown therein,[36] it does not protect as against future unauthorized investments, though of similar character.[37] The trustee must ordinarily keep the estate so invested as to be productive,[38] but he cannot invest in bank stock[39] in the absence of an authorizing statute.[40] A trustee may ordinarily invest in securities of a foreign corporation.[41] Where a trustee has discretion as to investment in lands, a purchaser of lands sold is not charged with the duties of seeing that proceeds are invested in land as required by trust deed.[42] It is the duty of a trustee to refuse to recognize an unlawful and void alienation of beneficiary's interest in the income of an estate.[43] With the consent

29. Trustee may in proper case apply to court for order protecting him in invading corpus of estate for maintenance of beneficiary and court may ratify prior disbursements. Pfefferle v. Herr [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 689. Where a trust is reposed in executors, they may invoke aid of court of equity to assist in managing and executing same. Strawn v. Trustees of Jacksonville Female Academy, 240 Ill. 111, 88 NE 460. Upon termination of trust, trustee may envoke court of equity to partition land among those entitled to same. Rackemann v. Tilton, 236 Ill. 49, 86 NE 168.

30. Expression of willingness on part of trustee to devide does not prevent finding of unreasonable delay. Davis v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 948. Robinson v. Robinson [Me.] 72 A 883. Where testatrix directed that one-fourth of residuary estate "be paid," and in view of other provisions, held that trustee had implied where one, settling a trust upon himself for benefit of wife and children, provided that he and "any successor appointed by him could sell the property," power is personal and trustee appointed by court cannot sell. United States Trust Co. v. Poutch [Ky.] 113 SW 107. Where wife is given life estate in land and after her death it is to be sold by trustee and proceeds divided among children, the latter have no interest in land, hence, upon surrender of interest by life estate, trustee may sell same. Riffe v. Liddell's Trustee [Ky.] 113 SW 106.

50. Sole surviving trustee, who is sole beneficiary, cannot convey under power of sale, especially where it is apparent that trustor intended to vest power in trustees collectively. Weeks v. Frankel, 128 App. Div. 223, 112 NYS 562. Where wife as sole surviving trustee had power to sell under will creating trust, fact that she was beneficiary of income for life did not invalidate sale, where she sold remainderman's interest also. Doscher v. Wyckoff, 116 NYS 389. Since under Code Civ. Proc. § 2818, and Laws 1896, p. 582, c. 547, § 146, power of sale may be executed by survivors upon death of one of the trustees, invalidity of appointment of successor to deceased trustee will not affect sale in which survivors joined. Levine v. Gerardo, 60 Misc. 261, 112 NYS 192.

51. Where power of sale given to executrix and trustee is given for other purposes than for carrying out trust created for executrix and trustee, and other persons will be benefited thereby, mere fact that executrix and trustee may derive a benefit from sale does not deprive her of the right to execute power. Doscher v. Wyckoff, 116 NYS 389. Where wife was trustee, she being beneficiary of income from property during life, remainder to go to son, she was not trustee and beneficiary of same interest. In some states a judicial proceeding is provided, which must be followed,[64] and the sale reported back for confirmation.[65] When a sale becomes necessary in the course of managing estate, the trust attaches to the proceeds.[66]

§ 12. Actions and controversies by and against trustees.[14]—See 10 C. L. 1927—Although the statutes of many states require an action to be prosecuted by the real party in interest, an exception is usually made in favor of a trustee of an express trust,[15] especially if such trust is in writing,[16] and a trustee who is vested necessary part of trust estate, and used same in connection with farm, part of trust, he should only be charged with legal rate of interest on value, where he did not make any profit from use or let any opportunity for more profitable use pass. Barber v. Barber [R. I.] 71 A 641.

15. Subscription contract provided that signers agreed to pay sum set opposite their names to a bank on acceptance by proper officers of United States of offer to convey certain land to be purchased with subscription for federal use. Held that bank was trustee of express trust and proper party to sue on contract. Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Vance [Cal. App.] 98 P 58. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 369, authorizing trustee of an

with legal title of securities may enforce same.[17] All trustees are necessary parties unless the action relates to a wrong or devastavit committed by one alone,[18] and, if they refuse to join as plaintiffs, they should be made defendants.[19] In some states, the beneficiaries are also necessary parties,[20] while in others the judgment against the trustee is binding on them.[21] Where a trustee is given power to prosecute and defend suits incidental to winding up the trust, he may sue to recover a certificate for the benefit of the estate.[22]

Liability of the trust estate for the expense and cost of litigation respecting the same lies largely within legislative control,[23] but, in the absence of plain legislative authority, the fund should not be depleted to pay the expense of unsuccessful litigation,[24] especially beyond the interest of the litigant therein.[25] A trustee for co-defendants confessing judgment is liable for costs where he unsuccessfully continues the litigation.[26] Where a beneficiary is compelled to sue to recover income due, his attorney is entitled to costs.[27] The expenses of a suit for the construction of a will with respect to a particular share should be charged to that share.[28]

§ 13. Compensation and expenses.[29]—See 10 C. L. 1928—All expenses and indebtedness reasonably incurred by the trustee in the management of the trust may be recovered,[30] and are usually a charge upon the entire estate.[31]

A trustee and the beneficiaries may contract with respect to the compensation of the former,[32] but, in the absence thereof, he is usually entitled to a reasonable express trust to sue, and declaring that person in whose name a contract is made for benefit of another is a trustee of an express trust, one making in his own name a contract for purchase of real estate for another may sue thereon. Tandy v. Waesch [Cal.] 97 P 69.

16. Rule that trustee of express trust cannot sue as trustee unless trust is created by writing is based upon Rev. St. 1899, § 3416 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1949), requiring express trusts in realty to be in writing, and has no application to personalty. Carroll v. Woods, 132 Mo. App. 492, 111 SW 885.

30. Trust estate should not be charged with costs of appeal taken in the interest of the trustee individually. In re Morton's Estate [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 680. When reputable counsel insert in a trustee's account a credit claimed by him against the trust estate, the presumption is that compensation thus claimed was for services rendered in aid of the trust, and not in effort to destroy it. 31. Although secured by mortgage on specific property. In re Innis [Minn.] 119 NW 48.

32. Ladd v. Pigott [Mo.] 114 SW 984. Where trustee wrote inquiring what commission would be reasonable and suggested that 1 per cent was usually allowed and beneficiary replied that 1 per cent seemed reasonable and directed him to compute on fee,[33] unless they are specifically fixed by statute.[34] In many states, a trustee receives commissions based upon the amount of estate handled,[35] in which case a trustee succeeding another is not entitled to full commissions,[36] although his predecessor may have waived his compensation.[37] The failure to execute a new bond upon the death of the surety upon the old bond does not defeat the trustee's right to compensation.[38] A trustee who acts in bad faith forfeits all compensation as trustee.[39]

§ 14. Accounting, distribution and discharge.[40]—See 10 C. L. 1929—A trustee has legal capacity to maintain an action in equity to settle his accounts,[41] and such suit may be prosecuted in the supreme court of New York.[42] In the absence of an adequate remedy at law,[43] any one in interest[44] may call a trustee in an accounting,[45] and the burden rests on the trustee to make a full disclosure of all funds,[46] and, where he refuses to do so or has failed to keep an account, every presumption is against him.[47] A judicially appointed trustee must usually account to the courts that basis and remit balance, held a contract. Id.

33. Commission of 1 per cent annually for managing personal estate held reasonable. Ladd v. Pigott [Mo.] 114 SW 984. Allowance of $10 per month for collection of $100 monthly rental and payment of insurance and taxes held liberal. In re Leavitt [Cal. App.] 97 P 916. Where, during administration, trustee deducted usual percentages, and in suit for partition will have little or nothing to do except turn over money and property, allowance of $3,000 held excessive and cut to $1,500. Rackemann v. Tilton, 236 Ill. 49, 86 NE 168. Where trustee negotiated 99 year lease which was of great value, held that $10,000 was not unreasonable. Knight v. Knight, 142 Ill. App. 62.

34. Civ. Code 1902, § 2590, providing for allowance to trustees of same commissions as are allowed executors and administrators, applies as well to commissions for extraordinary services, as provided by § 2561, as to commissions for ordinary services as provided by § 2560. Cunningham v. Cunningham, 81 S. C. 506, 62 SE 845.

35. Where trustee is also executor, he is not entitled to commissions as executor on sale made as trustee. In re Waterman, 60 Misc. 292, 113 NYS 280. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2730, 2802, 3320, prescribing compensation of trustees, trustee, succeeding a deceased trustee, is not entitled to commissions on funds received from representative of deceased trustee. In re Ward's Estate, 112 NYS 763. Widow and administratrix of insolvent trustee filed an account, showing trustee indebted to trust estate, which surety was compelled to pay. Trustee assigned commissions to surety. Held that widow and administrator could not recover commissions for substituted trustee. In re Scott's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 894.

36. Where trustee is removed for incompetency and unfitness, and trust remains to be executed, commissions should not be allowed. In re Williamsburgh Trust Co., 60 Misc. 296, 113 NYS 276.

of the state appointing him.[48] Where a trustee sells property in which she has a life estate, she is not presently chargeable with the money, since she is entitled to the use thereof.[49] Surplus income arising during the payment of annuities will be retained by trustee and accounted for at time of distribution.[50] The usual rules of evidence,[51] submission of issues,[52] burden of proof,[53] etc., obtaining in general suits for an account, apply. Where the county court of Texas has decreed the interest of the respective heirs in trust property, a decree of partition in the district court following such decree is not objectionable on the theory that the county court had exclusive jurisdiction.[54]

§ 15. Establishment and enforcement of trust and remedies of beneficiary.[55]—See 10 C. 56. Where upon disorganization of county assets thereof passed to county to which territory was annexed charged with trust for payment of creditors of disorganized county, equity has jurisdiction to declare trust and determine who is entitled thereto, and creditors need not resort to mandamus. Curtis v. Charlevoix County Sup'rs, 154 Mich. 546, 15 Det. Leg. N. 941, 118 NW 618. Equity has jurisdiction of suit by administrator to have trust declared in property purchased with money received from intestate's estate, claimed as a gift, and to restrain further disposition, and bill should not be dismissed on ground of adequate remedy at law. Chamberlain v. Eddy, 154 Mich. 593, 15 Det. Leg. N. 865, 118 NW 499. One claiming no interest or duties under a trust but asserting adverse legal title cannot invoke equity to construe trust. 73. Where deed by infant is disaffirmed by conveyance to another after coming of age, grantee under first deed cannot claim a constructive trust for him on ground that second gantee procured conveyance by fraud, grantor therein not complaining. Beauchamp v. Bertig [Ark.] 119 SW 75. Where husband receives conveyance from wife on death bed under parol trust for benefit of children and repudiates same under circumstances creating a trust ex maleficio, children have equitable right to enforce same. In re Fisk [Conn.] 71 A 559.

74. Unexplained delay of 20 years in bringing action to enforce constructive trust held laches, third persons having acquired rights. Lady Ensley Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Gordon [Ala.] 46 S 983. Where trust is kept secret from beneficiary until shortly before suit for breach thereof is brought, laches does not bar recovery. Russell v. Huntington Nat. Bank [C. C. A.] 162 F 868.

75. Limitations held to bar action to enforce constructive trust in 10 years. Lady Ensley Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Gordon [Ala.] 46 S 983.

76. Where trustee fraudulently kept trust from knowledge of beneficiary, limitations against action for breach thereof does not commence to run until fraud is discovered. Russell v. Huntington Nat. Bank [C. C. A.] 162 F 868. Where owner agreed to convey certain land provided contractees built certain railroad, a right to enforce constructive trust arose upon fulfillment of conditions. Lady Ensley Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Gordon [Ala.] 46 S 983.

77. While burden is on one seeking to impress a trust upon stock as having been received as bonus with bonds purchased by defendant as agent for plaintiff to show that they were so received, evidence will not be strained to exculpate defendant, especially where he has not rendered full account. Bone v. Hayes [Cal.] 99 P 172. To establish a constructive trust on the ground of fraud in entering into parol arrangement whereby title was acquired without any intention of observing it, the evidence must be clear and convincing.[78] The general rules as to pleadings[79] and evidence[80] apply.

(§ 15) D. Resulting trusts.[81]—See 10 C. L. 1031—The death of the holder of legal title does not prevent the establishment of a resulting trust.[82] Before a creditor can sue to impress a trust upon land as purchased with money of his debtor, he must exhaust his legal remedies.[83] The suit must be timely brought,[84] and the evidence must be strong and satisfactory[85] especially where a presumption of a gift is to be overcome.[86] A resulting trust cannot be ingrafted on an absolute deed in favor of the grantor.[87] The burden of proving a resulting trust rests upon the person asserting the same.[88] Affirmative defenses which are not connected with the transaction as pleaded and which do not arise out of the same are demurrable.[89]

§ 16. Following trust property.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1932—The conversion of personalty into realty, or vice versa, does not destroy the trust, but it will attach to the property in its changed form,[91] and, where trust property is wrongfully disposed of evidence must be clear and convincing. Carr v. Craig, 138 Iowa, 526, 116 NW 720.

79. In action to impress constructive trust upon shares of stock and to compel delivery thereof, it is not necessary to allege value. Kinard v. Jordan [Cal. App.] 101 P 696. Allegation that grantor was in possession of land at time of execution of deed and thereafter continued in possession held sufficient averment of ownership. Hanson v. Svarverud [N. D.] 120 NW 550. Allegation that V. obtained money from intestate by fraud and undue influence and invested same in land which she caused to be placed in defendants' names for her benefit held sufficient without allegation that V. was insolvent. Morris v. Vyse, 154 Mich. 253, 15 Det. Leg. N. 722, 117 NW 639.

80. In action to impress a trust upon stock alleged to have been received by defendant as bonus with bonds purchased by him as plaintiff's agent, plaintiff may show terms upon which bonds were sold to other purchasers after showing that they were all disposed of according to general plan. Bone v. Hayes [Cal.] 99 P 172.

Fitzpatrick [Mo.] 118 SW 51. Fact of payment must be established by clear and positive testimony. Turpin v. Mills, 108 Md. 678, 71 A 440. Evidence held insufficient to show that plaintiff was a partner in business conducted by her husband and another and a resulting trust in land bought with partnership money. Keuper v. Mette's Unknown Heirs, 239 Ill. 586, 88 NE 218. Evidence held insufficient to show that plaintiff and decedent were partners in saloon business, from which money was taken to buy land. Freeman v. Peterson [Colo.] 100 P 600. Proof of resulting trust held insufficient, all parties familiar with facts being dead. Geter v. Simmons [Fla.] 49 S 131. Evidence held insufficient to show trust in favor of deceased wife's heirs to property deeded to husband by her father. Colegrove v. Colgrove [Ark.] 116 SW 190. Evidence of declarations of deceased, that contract of purchase was in plaintiff's name, held to support finding that plaintiff purchased land which was taken in deceased father's name without her knowledge. Christensen v. Williams, 34 Utah, 127, 97 P 219. Evidence held to show that plaintiff contributed his share of purchase money for land, the title to which was taken in defendant's name. Gerety v. 91. Frank v. Firestone, 116 NYS 700; Tarnow v. Carmichael [Neb.] 116 NW 1031. Widow procured sale of land by administrator free from her homestead, although order required it to be sold subject thereto, it may be followed in equity [92] as long as it can be identified,[93] until it reaches the hands of a bona fide purchaser.[94] One purchasing property with notice of a trust therein takes subject thereto,[95] and he is bound to execute the trust although there is no writing to that effect.[96] If the trustee, however, has any interest as a beneficiary, the conveyance will be valid as to such interest.[97] The notice need not be actual but may be imputed from the knowledge of facts which would put an ordinary man on inquiry [98] and one knowingly dealing with a trustee is charged with notice of his powers.[99] A conveyance subject to a trust merely substitutes trustees and needs no consideration to support it.[1] A conveyance of trust property in satisfaction of the trustee's private debts, with knowledge of the trust on the part of the purchaser, is void,[2] and the purchaser becomes a trustee ex maleficio.[3] Before a trust deposit can be claimed in assets of an insolvent bank, it must have increased such assets, though it is not necessary to trace the identical money.[4]

§ 17. Termination and abrogation of trust.[5]—See 10 C. L. 1933—Where a trust has been fully performed according to its terms,[6] or the valid portion thereof,[7] it

6. Where trust is to terminate only when all debts have been paid, existence of mortgage debt incurred by trustee in manage-

thereupon terminates, but, until so performed, a court of equity has no power except in rare cases to terminate it.[8] A voluntary settlement executed without fraud or mistake [9] is irrevocable, in the absence of a reservation of power to revoke [10] except with the consent of all parties in interest.[11] A trust agreement may usually be abandoned or terminated by the parties in interest,[12] and, where land is conveyed to one in trust, an agreement annulling the "trust" annuls the entire transaction.[13] Voluntary donations in trust for a particular purpose is terminated by the failure of the purpose,[14] and the property remaining should be returned pro rata.[15] Where money is deposited in a bank in the name of the depositor in trust for another, the death of the beneficiary terminates the trust in the absence of some unequivocal act or declaration indicating an intention to make the trust absolute.[16]

the board of commissioners of the Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia are officers of the United States.[31] The Senate is the judge of the qualification of its members,[32] and, hence, a state law authorizing legislative candidates to make a declaration of their choice of United States senators, even if invalid as authorizing an election of such senators by the people instead of by the legislature,[33] cannot be attacked by an elector,[34] and such a provision is not affected by a separable provision absolutely requiring a pledge or declaration by legislative candidates as to their senatorial choice,[35] even though the latter provision be invalid.[36] The publication of information by a federal clerk or employe in respect to matter which was understood to have been kept secret, although for private gain, is not a crime.[37] Injunction will lie to prevent the manufacture of guns and carriages by a federal officer for the use of the United States, where such manufacture is an infringement of the complainant's patents,[38] but injunction will not lie where the patentee seeks by injunctive process to control property of the United States.[39] The action of a military governor in abolishing a hereditary office with its emoluments constituting a tort, in violation of the law of nations or a treaty, may be ratified by the government so as to exonerate such governor from liability.[40]

§ 4. Claims.[41]—See 10 C. L. 1938—Where a claim is recognized by congress, without negativing its succession in case of death, the right to enforce the demand passes to the personal representatives of the claimant.[42] Claims may be referred to certain officers,[43] and the statute may render the determination of the claim a duty enforcible by mandamus.[44]

United States v. MacVeagh, 29 S. Ct. 556. rvg., United States v. Cortelyou, 30 App. D. C. 45.

The court of claims has no jurisdiction of claims sounding in tort,[45] but citizens have a constitutional right to petition congress for redress of grievances, even though they do not constitute legal or equitable claims,[46] and either house of congress or a committee thereof may refer such a claim to the court of claims for investigation [47] and report,[48] the relief to be given, however, being a matter of legislative discretion.[49] Where a bill referred is for the payment of a specific amount in full payment and discharge of a claim, the findings of the court must be limited by the amount named.[50] Upon the reference of a claim for supplies taken by the federal forces during the Civil War, the loyalty of the claimant is jurisdictional under the Bowman Act [51] but not under the Tucker Act.[52] Findings of fact upon a reference under either of such statutes are res adjudicata,[53] and in the absence of newly-discovered evidence, fraud or false testimony, such questions cannot be reopened upon a subsequent reference,[54] but, where it appears upon the second reference that competent evidence was overlooked upon the first reference or that the findings thereon were based upon false testimony or procured by fraud, they may be reopened.[55] Upon a reference under the Tucker Act of a claim previously disallowed under the Bowman Act upon a finding of want of loyalty, the court may report the merits without reference to the question of loyalty.[56] Under the Tucker Act a bill authorizing suit to be brought in the court of claims cannot be referred to such court in advance of such suit.[57]

The court of claims is not bound by special rules of pleading, but will nevertheless conform to those rules deemed necessary by all courts for the orderly administration of justice and to secure to the defendants the benefit of the doctrine of res adjudicata,[58] and hence there is a misjoinder of petitioners where no one of them has any right, title or interest in or claim to the claims of the others.[59] There is some analogy, however, in special cases to the practice in chancery, and all claimants necessary to a complete disposition of the controversy must be before the court.[60]

UNITED STATES MARSHALS AND COMMISSIONERS.[73]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[74]

A marshal must exercise ordinary care in regard to property in his possession under process of court.[75] The duties and powers of sheriffs were imposed on marshals in Indian Territory.[76] United States commissioners are not courts of the United States.[77] Their powers and functions are defined by congress,[78] and their rules of procedure are prescribed by the courts,[79] and neither their powers nor their duties can be enlarged by implication.[80] Neither a genuine certificate or the record made by a commissioner is legal evidence of the facts on which the commissioner's decision was based,[81] and it does not create an estoppel.[82] A statute providing for a new office of commissioner with special jurisdiction over offenses committed on an Indian reservation and failing to provide for the appointment of such officer is ineffective.[83] Fees are governed by statute.[84]

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY.[85]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[86]

An unlawful assembly is sometimes defined by statute. An unlawful assembly is the meeting of three or more persons with intent to aid each other by violence or in any other manner either to commit an offense or illegally to deprive any person of any right or to disturb him in the enjoyment thereof.[87] Where not so defined, the common law will be looked to for a definition.[88] Unlawful assembly at common law is a distinct offense,[89] but, if it defined by statute and no punishment is provided, it is not a crime.[90] An acquittal of the offense of unlawful assembly is not a bar to a proscution for assault and battery based upon the same acts.[91]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[93]

The statute of charitable uses is, in so far as consistent with our institutions, a part of the common law of the states.[94] No set form of words is required in a conveyance to uses.[95] An estate in fee simple to commence in the future at the time of the happening of a contingency may be created by way of a use.[96] A deed operates under the statute of uses although the grantor was one of the grantees to uses.[97] In Florida the legal title to land is conveyed by the execution of a deed pursuant to the statute of frauds and the operation thereon of the statute of uses.[98] A use is not immediately executed by the statute of uses where the grantor contemplates the possibility of a gap intervening between the termination of a life estate and the commencement of the fee.[99] But is so executed where all persons who take under a shifting use are determined.[1] What constitutes active and passive trusts is treated elsewhere.[2]

USURY.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[3]

§ 1. Definitions, elements and indicia. In general.[4]—See 10 C. L. 1937—To constitute usury, there must be a loan or forbearance of money, with interest in excess of the rate allowed by law.[5]

*Intent.*See 10 C. L.1937—There is some conflict as to whether an unlawful intent is essential to constitute usury, it being held in some states that an intent to take unlawful interest is an essential element of usury,[6] while in other states a more or less contrary doctrine obtains,[7] but it is settled that the court will look to the real character of the transaction regardless of its form.[8] Intent is ordinarily a question

The aggregate of the exactions must exceed the legal rate. See 10 C. L. 1939—Usurious interest cannot be said to have been collected or received until the total amount received exceeds the principal of the loan with legal interest.[13] Compound interest is not usury,[14] and while there is some conflict as to the validity of an agreement for the compounding of interest entered into at the time of the original contract upon which the interest is predicated,[15] it now seems to be well settled that an agreement to pay interest upon interest that has already accrued at the time of such agreement is valid,[16] though the contrary has been held in the past by eminent authority.[17] The deduction of interest in advance is not necessarily usury.[18] Usury will not be inferred where the opposite conclusion can be reasonably and Donovan, 238 Ill. 283, 87 NE 356. Amount which would become due at end of term for which loan was made, not exceeding one year's interest in all, may be deducted. Covington v. Fisher [Okl.] 97 P 615.

fairly reached, though as a result of the transaction the creditor receives more than the principal and legal rate of interest.[19]

Discounts, bonuses, commissions and other deductions and charges. See 10 C. L. 1939—Usury cannot be predicated upon a bona fide sale at a discount,[20] but the lending of its credit by a company to its employees at a discount which amounts to more than the legal rate of interest is usury.[21] A loan is usurious where the total amount agreed to be paid exceeds the lawful rate of interest and brokerage,[22] though the usurious charge may be concealed as a charge for guaranteeing the payment of the loan,[23] but, in determining the amount of an exaction for a loan, bona fide charges in connection with collateral matters will not be considered.[24] Where the transaction is not usurious on its face but is claimed to be a device to cover up usury, the question is one of fact,[25] and the transaction will not be declared usurious where it is consistent with a contrary conclusion.[26]

The parties may remove the taint of usury. See 10 C. L. 1939

Usury statutes. See 10 C. L. 1940—Statutes providing penalties for usury[27] are strictly construed,[28] but the intention of the legislature will control rather than the letter of the statute.[29] Such statutes must, of course, conform to constitutional limitations.[30] The purpose of the Connecticut statute, providing that note and mortgage shall be void under certain conditions, is to prevent false information from being entered on the records, rather than to protect the borrower.[31]

§ 2. The defense of usury.[32]—See 10 C. L. 1940—The defense of usury is the personal privilege of the debtor or those standing in privity with him,[33] but it is not cut off by renewals[34] or mere substitution of securities.[35]

19. When debt, including both principal and interest, evidenced by coupons and notes, if paid according to the terms of contract, is free from usury, transaction is not rendered usurious by voluntary payment of debt before some of interest notes mature, although as result creditor would receive in aggregate a sum amounting to more than the principal and legal rate of interest. Eldred v. Hart [Ark.] 113 SW 213.

20. Sale of chose in action at discount exceeding legal interest. Dickson v. St. Paul, 105 Minn. 165, 117 NW 426. Acts 1908, p. 83, does not include absolute sale of property at discount exceeding legal rate of interest. Jackson v. State, 5 Ga. App. 177, 62 SE 726.

21. Redemption by employer of checks which were issued in payment of labor at discount. Kentucky Coal Min. Co. v. Mattingly [Ky.] 118 SW 350.

24. Deduction of mortgage tax without objections of borrower will not be considered, when statute makes no provision as to who should pay for recording mortgage. Moore v. Lindsay, 61 Misc. 176, 114 NYS 684. Mortgagee's commission for selling property covered by mortgage will not be considered as part of discount charge on note secured. Cable v. Duke, 132 Mo. App. 334, 111 SW 909. Deduction of attorney's fees for examining abstract of title will not be considered. Cobe v. Guyer, 237 Ill. 516, 86 N 1071. Commissions to cover fluctuation in price of bonds borrowed held not to be considered. Klein v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 166 F 365.

25. Where one purchased a bank's claim against a defunct corporation, and the amount to be paid by the receiver in dividends could not be determined, and the price of such claim included in a loan to said person, the sum paid by him in excess of the dividends did not make the debt of the bank usurious. Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Globe Brass Works [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 849, 118 NW 507. In action by broker to recover brokerage for negotiating a loan which failed because defendant's property was incumbered beyond the condition of the application, question whether the brokerage contract was a cover for usury held question for jury. Lechnyr v. Germansky, 113 NYS 969.

26. That more than 6 per cent was paid by borrower for loan of bonds was insufficient to show intent to violate usury laws, it being reasonable to suppose that part was to guard against fluctuations. Klein v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 166 F 365.

27. Rev. St. 1905, art. 3106 was not repealed by Laws 1907, p. 277, c. 143, as to offenses committed prior to time when act took effect. Stewart v. Lattner [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 860.

33. Fenby v. Hunt [Wash.] 101 P 492. Usury can only be asserted by the party in-

Pleading and proof. See 10 C. L. 1940—Usury must be specially pleaded,[36] and the pleading must set up the usurious contract, specifying its terms and the particular facts relied upon to bring it within the prohibition of the usury statute.[37] The burden of proving usury is on the party who pleads it [38] and the facts must be proved substantially as alleged.[39]

§ 3. The effect of usury.[40]—See 10 C. L. 1940—In some states legal interest may be recovered where the claim for the excess is waived.[41]

Forfeitures. See 10 C. L. 1940

Application of usurious payments. See 10 C. L. 1941—In some jurisdictions, sums paid as bonuses are entitled to be credited on the amount due.[42] So long as any part of the original debt remains unpaid, the debtor may insist upon the deduction of the usury.[43]

§ 4. Affirmative relief and procedure.[44]—See 10 C. L. 1941—In an action for an accounting and cancellation of a usurious mortgage, equity will require the payment of the actual money received and lawful interest.[45]

Recovery of usury. See 10 C. L. 1941—Where usury has been voluntarily paid, it cannot be recovered back,[46] but the rule is otherwise where the payment is compulsory.[47] Settlement of a suit which is not brought in good faith does not preclude the recovery of prior usurious payments.[48] In Texas double the amount of the entire interest paid may be recovered back when the rate was usurious.[49]

VAGRANTS.[54]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[55]

Vagrancy statutes are intended to enforce honest and reputable living,[56] and constitute a valid exercise of the police power.[57] Such statutes are not intended to compel one to earn more than his necessities require.[58] Under the New York statute one who has been convicted of vagrancy is entitled to discharge at the expiration of five days from the date of commitment, if he has not been previously committed within two years next preceding such commitment,[59] but to be entitled to discharge under this statute it is necessary that the written consent of the magistrate or court committing him be secured.[60]

§ 1. The contract for the sale of land. A. General nature, requisites, and validity.[62] See 10 C. L. 1943—A contract of sale transfers the right to the title to the land, and is thus distinguished from a lease,[63] option,[64] brokerage contract,[65] or a mere easement.[66] The contract must be free from fraud,[67] although the mere ex-

61. Includes contracts for sale or purchase of land. Excludes form and sufficiency of deeds of conveyance (see Deeds of Conveyance, 11 C. L. 1051), notice and record of title (see Notice and Record of Title, 12 C. L. 1100), the general law of contracts (see Contracts, 11 C. L. 729), of fraud and deceit (see Deceit, 11 C. 63. Instrument reciting that owner leased land for five years at certain annual rental, and providing that, at end of term, owner should sell and tenant should buy at specified price, lessee to have option to purchase during term on 30 days' notice and lessor being empowered upon same notice to require purchase on default by lessee in performance of any condition, held executory contract of sale. White v. Walsh, 62 Misc. 423, 114 NYS 1015.

64. Held a Sale: Agreement whereby first party agrees "to sell and convey" to second party specified property "and to bind the above contract, we the above contracting parties deposit sum of $1,000 each * * * same to be forfeited by party failing to fulfill contract within 30 days," is a contract of sale, and not an option. Newton v. Dickson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 143. Agreement reciting option previously given and acceptance thereof, which bound vendor to furnish abstract within specified time and to convey on terms set forth in option, held valid executory contract of sale. Sanderson v. Wellsford [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 382. Writing reciting that owners had that day sold to B. for specified cash consideration certain described land, which they obligated themselves to convey on receiving purchase money, etc., held a sale, and not a mere option. Hamburger v. Thomas [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 770. Contract between firm and a third person, whereby latter agreed to convey for specified sum certain land to one partner or to whom he should direct, held not a mere option to be submitted to such partner and accepted before it became binding, nor was he required to personally direct to whom it should be conveyed, but could act through agent. Slayden & Co. v. Palmo [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1054. Contract obligating owner to convey and the other party to buy, prescribing the terms, and providing that, upon default, owner would have right to re-enter and to retain payments as rent, etc., held a contract of sale. Brickell v. Atlas Assur. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 16.

Held an option: See post, this section, subsection B. Options to Buy or Sell.

65. Agreement authorizing broker to sell for amount net to vendor and a sale for amount in excess thereof does not create relation of vendor and purchaser between parties. Burnett v. Potts, 236 Ill. 499, 86 NE 258. Instrument in form a contract of sale was not rendered a contract of agency by clause therein "subject to owner's approval," it appearing that contracting vendor was not real owner, but intended to purchase under option, and inserted clause out of precaution. Cartwright v. Ruffin, 43 Colo. 377, 96 P 261.

66. Accepted option to purchase a right of way, and permanently retain the same in fee for a certain sum, etc., held contract for easement only, and not for land itself. Buffalo City Mills v. Toadvine Lumber Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 678.

67. Certain vendors, under contract to sell certain land to B. left it to their lawyer to prepare the necessary paper. Lawyer prepared deed to United States, with power of attorney authorizing B. to accept certain lien land in place thereof, neither the lawyer or B. intending thereby to defraud vendors, nor was an advantage obtained. Held no fraud although grantors executed instruments without understanding nature of transaction. United States v. Conklin, 169 F 177. Where vendor unqualifiedly stated that he had good title, knowledge of its falsity is not essential to fraud. Buchanan v. Burnett [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 406. False representation that tract contained 160 acres is no ground for rescinding contract which only described it as containing 143 acres. Travis v. Taylor [Ky.] 118 SW 988. In ac-pression of an opinion in respect to the land does not invalidate the contract though erroneous,[68] and, even when the vendor is guilty of fraud, the purchaser, however, must be free from fault or negligence.[69] Likewise, the contract must be free from mutual [70] mistake,[71] and must be supported by a sufficient consideration,[72] as must any subsequent or collateral agreement relating thereto.[73] In Louisiana the consideration agreed upon must exceed one-half of the value of the land.[74] The sale

tion for recovery of money paid on ground of rescission for fraud, where contract provided that premises should be taken subject to existing leases and for apportionment of rent, terms of leases become immaterial and purchaser cannot show fraudulent representations that there were no free rents. Kreshover v. Berger, 62 Misc. 613, 116 NYS 20. Evidence as to inequitableness of original contract and of subsequent settlement, together with evidence that one of vendees was very ignorant and inexperienced person and the other insane at times, held to authorize setting aside original contract and settlement on ground of fraud. Blampey v. Pike [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1062, 119 NW 576.

68. Unqualified assertion of absolute title is a representation of a fact and not a mere expression of opinion. Buchanan v. Burnett [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 406. Where vendee was ignorant as to value of land, representations by vendor that it was worth $30 per acre, that it would be cheap at that price, that that was its present value, etc., held affirmation of a fact, and not merely expression of opinion. Hetland v. Bilstad [Iowa] 118 NW 422. Statement that vein of coal underlying land had no faults, there being no way of ascertaining the fact, held mere opinion. Odbert v. Marquet, 163 F 892. Statement that optioned lands were underlaid with coal of certain quantity, etc., seller not claiming to have any special knowledge, held mere opinion. Id.

69. Purchaser may rely on representation of broker as to acreage. Farris v. Gilder [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 645. Purchaser is not entitled to rescind for vendor's misrepresentations as to quantity and kind of timber and productiveness of land, where he availed himself of his ample opportunity to visit the land. Wright v. Boltz [Ark.] 113 SW 201. Where vendor unqualifiedly stated that he had absolute title, fact that he furnished abstract, which through his ignorance purchaser did not understand, does not relieve him of fraud. Buchanan v. Burnett [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 406. Held for jury whether purchaser knew or should have known of misrepresentation as to acreage. Farris v. Gilder [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 645. Where contract is based on map distinctly showing that lot was of depth of 71 feet, purchaser cannot show that seller represented it to be 100 feet deep. Dowling v. Miller-Kendig Real Estate Co. 115 NYS 154.

70. Where vendor and vendee relied upon statement of mining expert that there were 50,000 tons of mineral in place, when there was in fact but 5,000, there was a mutual mistake of fact. Johnson v. Withers [Cal. App.] 98 P 42. Where vendor entered into option to sell particular piece, forgetting that he had conveyed part thereof to his wife, he was not excused from performance on ground of mutual mistake, vendee knowing nothing thereof. Boyden v. Hill, 198 Mass. 477, 85 NE 413. In such case good faith was no defense to an action for damages. Id.

71. Evidence held to sustain finding that description included land not intended to be conveyed. Moore v. Pennington [Ky.] 112 SW 858. As circumstance tending to show that certain land included in contract, but which was not conveyed, was included by mistake, court may consider that, when sued on purchase money note, purchaser claimed rebate for other land not received without mentioning this land. Id. Vendor orally contracted to sell 80 acres, boundaries to be fixed by survey. Survey was made to satisfaction of both parties, and deed was executed to conform thereto, but which in fact did not. Grantee took and retained possession of land as surveyed. Circumstances held to show mutual mistake in description. Garard v. Weaver [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1092.

72. Vendee's promise to pay purchase price is sufficient consideration. Curtiss Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853. Refusal of voluntary tender of conveyance is no consideration for promise to convey to another. Satterly v. Dewick, 129 App. Div. 701, 114 NYS 354. Deed to grantee for life and remainder to her children, in consideration of grantor being furnished a home and support during life, is founded on good consideration, although minors are not parties to consideration. Strothers v. Woodcox [Iowa] 121 NW 51. Owner may sell for instalment payable for a long period, though purpose is to provide an annuity. Rudolph v. Gerdy, 121 La. 477, 46 S 598. Consideration by way of an annuity for limited period held sufficient though less than yearly rental. Id.

73. Promise of vendor to procure for vendee outstanding title of remaindermen in an entirely distinct price, made to induce vendee to carry out executory contract, is without consideration. Tarnow v. Carmichael [Neb.] 116 NW 1031. Where at time for closing vendor tendered valid title, but at vendee's request a written agreement was entered into extending time for closing, and providing that, if designated title insurance company would not insure title, vendee's deposit, with interest and costs, would be paid, it was held that agreement was without consideration. Green-Shrier Co. v. State Realty & Mortgage Co., 129 App. Div. 581, 114 NYS 49. Where vendee agreed to assume commissions to be paid broker on failure of vendor's title, consideration for assumption fails. Eckel v. Spitzer, 58 Misc. 467, 111 NYS 459.

74. Burden of proving lesion beyond must be for a lawful purpose,[75] and must not be against public policy [76] or positive law.[77] The contract may be entered into through an agent,[78] the principal being responsible for any fraud of the agent.[79] An unregistered contract is good as between the parties.[80]

Certainty and definiteness. See 10 C. L. 1944—The minds of the parties must meet, upon all of the essential elements of the contract,[81] with definiteness and certainty.[82]

moiety is on vendor attacking sale, and highest estimates cannot be adopted as value. Succession of Witting, 121 La. 501, 46 S 606. Lesion beyond moiety must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Hickman v. Washington, 122 La. 945, 48 S 333. In determining lesion, value must be ascertained as of date of acceptance of option, and not of giving of same. Ronaldson & Puckett Co. v. Bynum, 122 La. 687, 48 S 152. In view of vendor's recognized business ability, evidence held insufficient to show lesion beyond moiety. Hichman v. Washington, 122 La. 945, 48 S 333. Values held not proven with sufficient certainty to determine issue of lesion. Ronaldson & Puckett Co. v. Bynum, 122 La. 687, 48 S 152. In action to rescind for lesion beyond a moiety, a debt secured by mortgage on the property and assumed by the purchaser would ordinarily be taken at its face value, as part of purchase price; but when the debt has been reduced by partial payment, though not entered of record or evidenced by writing, and the creditor, participating in the negotiations leading to the sale, agrees, in advance to receive the balance really due in full satisfaction, the amount actually paid by the purchaser is alone to be considered in determining price paid. Brandon v. Slade, 122 La. 395, 47 S 694. When judgment fixes amount to be paid by purchaser to confirm sale attacked for lesion beyond moiety, there being no question of profit or improvements in the case, the amount to be reimbursed by seller, in event of purchaser's election to rescind, should represent difference between ascertained value of property at date of sale and amount which purchaser is decreed to pay in order to make up such value, should he elect to affirm the sale. 75. Secret intention on part of vendees to use premises for unlawful purpose does not invalidate contract of sale. Nortnass v. Pioneer Townsite Co. [Neb.] 117 NW 951.

76. Contract, binding a purchaser from state of school lands to execute to another a bond for title and to complete the statutory period of occupancy necessary to get title, is not against public policy. Johnson v. Buchanan [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 875. Contract by owners to allow another to prospect on land for minerals and to purchase, in case of success, at a specified price, is but a promise of sale, subject to a suspensive condition, and is not void, because no time was fixed, as in restraint of trade, and a perpetuity or contrary to public policy. Anse La Butte Oil & Mineral Co. v. Babb, 122 La. 415, 47 S 754.

77. Acts 1886-87, p. 93, making it a misdemeanor for owner to survey a plat and sell lots in violation of the act, does not affect the title of the purchaser. East Birmingham Realty Co. v. Birmingham Machine & Foundry Co. [Ala.] 49 S 448.

78. Evidence held to show that broker was agent of both parties. Dobson v. Zimmerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 236. Contract held not only to authorize agent to find a purchaser but to enter into contract of sale with him. Peterson v. O'Connor, 106 Minn. 470, 119 NW 243.

79. Farris v. Gilder [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 645.

80. Freeman v. Bell [N. C.] 63 SE 682. For general principles relating to recording, see Notice and Record of Title, 12 C. L. 1100.

81. Price, time of delivery, and terms of payment. Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731. Where defendant purchased plaintiff's electric plant, paying specified amount and agreeing to pay a further sum if, upon a test, plaintiff's storage battery system proved superior to defendant's system, mere fact that they had not fully agreed upon all the conditions of the test does not render contract unenforcible, where plaintiff agreed to submit to any conditions suggested by defendant. Hopedale Elec. Co. v. Electric Storage Battery Co., 132 App. Div. 348, 116 NYS 859. Contract containing all elements of sale except that giving of deed was conditional upon vendee complying with terms of contract as to cutting timber, etc., within specified time, held valid contract. Sheridan v. Reese, 122 La. 1027, 48 S 443.

Evidence of various letters and telegrams held insufficient to show meeting of minds. Lopeman v. Colburn [Neb.] 118 NW 116. Evidence held to show that minds never met on disposition of rents and current insurance. Schaeffer v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 225. Evidence held to show lack of mutual understanding as to spring reserved. German Sav. & Loan Soc. v. McClellan [Cal.] 99 P 194. Correspondence held to show that minds never fully met upon exact amount to be paid or condition of title to be conveyed. Phelps v. Good, 15 Idaho, 76, 96 P 216. Evidence of statements of decedent many years before, expressing an intent to give land to plaintiff, held of little weight to show contract. Boeck v. Milke [Iowa] 118 NW 874.

82. Thompson v. Burns, 15 Idaho, 572, 99 P 111. General statement that if child would stay with decedent he would see that she had plenty, give her clothing and educate her, held not a contract to convey particular land. Collins v. Harrell [Mo.] 118 SW 432. Contract of agency, which provided that at end of certain period principal could withdraw contract or require agent to take land remaining unsold at specific price, held not too uncertain and Offer and acceptance.[See 10 C. L. 1944]—An offer must be accepted within the time specified,[83] or within a reasonable time if no limit is expressed,[84] and without modification.[85] An attempted acceptance upon different terms constitutes a counteroffer.[86] Whereon an offer has been unconditionally accepted, the contract is complete and cannot be thereafter modified except by mutual consent,[87] but an offer, not amounting to an option, may be withdrawn any time before acceptance.[88] The offer and acceptance may be through the medium of letters[89] or other written instruments.[90]

Mutuality.[See 10 C. L. 1945]—Like all other contracts, mutuality is required.[91]

indefinite to enforce. Wilcox Canadian Land Co. v. Stewart & Matthews Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 504. Option held not a determination of remedies in case agent refused to buy. Id.

83. Where written proposition expressly provides that it is withdrawn unless bid is paid before a designated date, payment thereafter to the vendor's agent does not create a binding contract, and, hence, purchaser may recover money paid. Montgomery Lodge No. 596, B. P. O. E. v. Massie [Ala.] 49 S 231.

84. Thompson v. Burns, 15 Idaho, 572, 99 P 111. Verbal offer of one purchasing at tax sale to sell to one claiming to own them for amount paid remains open for only a reasonable time. McFarlane v. Simpson, 153 Mich. 193, 15 Det. Leg. N. 467, 116 NW 982. Offer by telegram requires a quick reply. Thompson v. Burns, 15 Idaho, 572, 99 P 111. Where offer by telegram, and requesting quick reply, was received Nov. 4th, acceptance on 11th held too late. Id.

85. Lopeman v. Colburn [Neb.] 118 NW 116; Phelps v. Good, 15 Idaho, 76, 96 P 216. Acceptance giving more definite description is not conditional or acceptance on different terms. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853. Insistence in letter of acceptance that vendor redeem certain outstanding tax titles is not conditional, where title agreed to be conveyed requires him to do so. Id. Where, by offer, vendor was to receive full consideration in cash and was to pay off mortgage, an acceptance, whereby vendee was to assume mortgage and pay balance in cash, does not create contract. Ross v. Craven [Neb.] 121 NW 451. Where offer referred to prior negotiations and was based on understanding that vendor's interest in land and timber amounted to absolute ownership and acceptance was of such interest as he had, being only a license, held no meeting of the mind. Hood & Co. v. Girard Lumber Co., 137 Wis. 152, 118 NW 552. Acceptance fixing another place for payment of consideration and delivery of deed is insufficient. Lopeman v. Colburn [Neb.] 118 NW 116. Reply to offer to take $5,000 cash, stating that it is accepted, and directing offerer to make deed in blank and send same, with abstract, to designated bank, to be turned over on receipt of money, held not an unconditional acceptance. Lacey v. Thomas, 164 F 623. Mere suggestion at variance with offer contained in the acceptance does not render it conditional, as when change in place of payment is suggested. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853. Clause in letter of acceptance. "If it is just as satisfactory to you, will you please send your deed to" a specified bank "for collection," held a mere request. Id. Where acceptance of vendor of offer of purchase designates a bank as medium of closing deal, suggestion of a different bank by vendee relates to manner of performance and is not an element of the contract. Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731.

86. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853.

87. Letter, after detailing offer, said, "If this meets your approbation write me at once and say so, or better wire me and follow the letter." Telegram was sent unconditionally accepting offer. Held that minds had met and vendor could not thereafter, by letter, vary terms agreed upon. Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731.

88. Instrument reciting that, in consideration of $1 and the undertaking by defendant to pay specified sum on or before a designated date, plaintiff granted and sold land to defendant, and providing that, on defendant's failing to pay specified sum within time agreed, conveyance should be void, held a mere offer which could be withdrawn any time before acceptance. Jones v. Lewis [Ark.] 117 SW 561.

89. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853.

90. Proposal in writing, setting forth the terms and written acceptance thereof held a complete agreement. Provenzano v. Glaesser, 122 La. 378, 47 S 688.

91. Contract binding one party to sell and convey, but not obligating other to buy, held unilateral, though both signed and took duplicate copy thereof. Booth v. Milliken, 127 App. Div. 522, 111 NYS 791. Mere fact that contract provides that vendee shall receive back the money paid if title is not "satisfactory" does not destroy binding effect of contract, since he cannot arbitrarily reject title as unsatisfactory. Whited v. Calhoun, 122 La. 100, 47 S 415. Held for jury whether conveyance was signed with the understanding that it was to be submitted to grantee and not to be binding unless approved by him. Slayden & Co. v. Palmo, [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1054. Owner wrote prospective buyers that he would mail deeds to property to certain brokers and required plaintiffs to be present at specified time with sum in cash and receive deeds. Plaintiffs did not accept promise except by offer of performance after withdrawal. Held that there was no mutuality of obligation. Levin v. Dietz, 194 N. Y. 376, 87 NE 454.

*Signature and delivery.*See 10 C. L. 1943—The contract is incomplete without the signatures of all those named in the body of it as parties.[92] Constructive delivery is sufficient.[93]

*Construction.*See 10 C. L. 1945—The meaning of the contract must be ascertained from the contract itself, considering the subject-matter, relation of the parties, and surrounding facts.[94] While parol evidence is not admissible to alter or vary the terms of the written contract,[95] it is admissible to show the real consideration[96] and that the contract was executed and delivered upon a condition which has not been complied with,[97] but not to establish a consideration inconsistent with that expressed.[98] All contemporaneously executed instruments must be construed together.[99]

(§ 1) D. Options to buy or sell.[1]—See 10 C. L. 1945—An option is the sale of the right to purchase lands described therein upon the terms named within the time specified,[2] and differs from a sale in that it passes no interest in the land.[3] The

92. Schulte v. Meehan,, 133 Ill. App. 491.

93. Broker executed contract in duplicate and, after purchaser had signed each, sent them to vendor with instructions to sign same and return one to him for vendee. Held that, when duplicate was returned, it was delivered, under Civ. Code, § 1059, declaring that a grant shall be deemed constructively delivered where delivered for benefit of grantee. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885.

94. Donovan v. Boeck [Mo.] 116 SW 543.

95. Oral, prior, or contemporary statements are inadmissible to add to or vary written contract, in absence of fraud or mistake. Anthony v. Hudson [Ky.] 114 SW 782. Under contract to convey a certain quarter section at specified price per acre, parol evidence is not admissible to show that vendor is entitled to pay for 40 acres where government survey shows actual acreage to be less. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853. Where contract provided that vendor should furnish certificates showing that building was in accordance with building laws, in action to recover money paid on ground of rescission for fraud, evidence of parol representations as to construction of wall, etc., held inadmissible. Kreshover v. Berger, 62 Misc. 613, 116 NYS 20. Where contract calls for unincumbered title, and purchaser refuses contract containing restrictions, parol evidence is not admissible to show that, previously, purchaser had accepted conveyances with like restrictions. Steele v. Guaranty Realty Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 105. Where vendor agreed to convey privilege of taking from a certain stream sufficient water to irrigate all the meadow lands to extent of 1 cubic foot per second for each 100 acres, held that vendor could not show by parol that they were not required to furnish amount specified. Babcock-Cornish Co. v. Urquhart [Wash.] 101 P 713. Where vendor agreed to convey land according to attached plat, which described by metes and bounds, said to contain about 15 acres, parol evidence was inadmissible to show intention to convey only 15 acres, which was less than described by plat. Rivenbark v. Teachey [N. C.] 63 SE 1036.

96. Warwick v. Hitchings, 50 Wash. 140, 96 P 960. May show by parol that purchaser assumed debt secured by mortgage. Grace v. Gill [Mo. App.] 116 SW 442. Where contract stipulated for possession of farm house Aug. 1st, but was silent as to possession of farm, evidence of prior, parol agreement that as part of consideration vendor was to have possession of land until January 1st was admissible. Morehead v. Hering [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 164. Answer admitting that only part of first payment had been made, but alleging that it was orally agreed at time of purchase that plaintiff would take certain lots for balance of first payment and that defendant would cause title to be conveyed from another, held to state good defense. Lanning v. McNeill [Wash.] 97 P 1093.

Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163. Contemporaneous agreements construed and held to create merely an agency to sell and not an option to buy. Mitchel v. Gray [Cal. App.] 97 P 160.

option must definitely describe the land upon which it is given.[4] If supported by a sufficient consideration,[5] it is irrevocable;[6] otherwise it is a mere offer which may be withdrawn any time before acceptance.[7] An option must be exercised by an unequivocal and unqualified acceptance thereof[8] within the limit prescribed[9] and upon the terms specified,[10] although negotiation for different terms does not affect the option.[11] Rules governing the construction of contracts generally are applicable to options.[12] Unless the optionor has placed performance beyond his power,[13]

burger v. Thomas [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 770. Option is to be distinguished from contract of sale in that it does not bind the optionee to take the land. Brickell v. Atlas Assur. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 16. Option unexercised does not deprive optionor of all transferable interest. Elliott v. Delaney [Mo.] 116 SW 494. Lease containing option does not vest any title in lessee until option is accepted. Luigart v. Lexington Turf Club [Ky.] 113 SW 814.

Held a sale and not an option: See Ante this section, subsection A. General Nature, Requisites and Validity.

4. Test is whether it could be specifically enforced. Brickell v. Atlas Assur. Co. [Col. App.] 101 P 16. Contract headed "Savannah, Ga." describing property as "the western portion of lot forty-one (41), Flannery Ward," and stipulating that "seller is to occupy residence No. 221, 36th Street West," until Oct. 1st after sale, held sufficient compliance with rule as to description. Singleton v. Close, 130 Ga. 716, 61 SE 722. Option to buy land lying between normal low-water line on west bank of river and line level with crest of such dam as purchaser should erect, as such line would meander along the west bank of the river and the north and south lines of the place, the contract providing that area should be ascertained before dams were erected, and survey was so made. Held sufficiently definite. Wilkins v. Hardaway [Ala.] 48 S 678. Fact that area depended upon such height of dam as purchaser should elect to construct did not make contract invalid. Id.

5. Since from the very nature of things, no standard of value exists for an option any money consideration, however small, is sufficient. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163. Consideration for contract of sale is sufficient to support option therein as to other lots. Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Lease is sufficient consideration to support option contained therein. Pearson v. Millard [N. C.] 63 SE 1053; Succession of Whitting, 121 La. 501, 46 S 606. Evidence of letter held to show payment of consideration to optionor's agent. Palmer v. Clark [Wash.] 100 P 749. Agreement of agent to use his best endeavors to sell certain land is not a sufficient consideration to support an option. Jolliffe v. Steele [Cal. App.] 98 P 544. Expenses incurred by optionee in reliance thereon is no consideration. Corbett v. Cronkhite, 239 Ill. 9, 87 NE 874. Recited payment of one dollar, if in fact made, held merely nominal and not such "proper" or "fair" consideration as to entitle optionee to specific performance. Rude v. Levy, 43 Colo. 482, 96 P 560.

6. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163.

7. Mitchel v. Gray [Cal. App.] 97 P 160; Goodman v. Spurlin, 131 Ga. 588, 62 SE 1029; Corbett v. Cronkhite, 239 Ill. 9, 87 NE 874; Hardy v. Ward [N. C.] 64 SE 171.

8. Breen v. Mayne [Iowa] 118 NW 441. Evidence of loose statements of optionee and subsequent conduct of parties, held not to show acceptance. Id. Evidence of interview at which abstract was demanded but no payment was tendered, etc., held insufficient to show acceptance. Ward v. Davis, 154 Mich. 413, 15 Det. Leg. N. 779, 117 NW 897. Where defendant gave an option, which recited that it was made to enable optionee to offer land to shoe company contemplating locating in town to be void if company did not locate, notice by optionee advising defendant that company had decided to locate and of election to buy, followed by tender of performance, held an acceptance. Boyden v. Hill, 198 Mass. 477, 85 NE 413.

9. Time is of very essence of option, especially where property is of speculative character, as mining property. Gaines v. Chew, 167 F 630. Where contract gives another the right to become a part owner by paying a specified sum, right must be exercised within a reasonable time. Joffrion v. Gumbel [La.] 48 S 1007. Under option to expire on day certain providing that, "if accepted, the above named parties are to pay for said timbers an additional amount of $2,450, in cash upon the making of a contract for the sale of said timber," purchasers were obliged to make tender of amount before option expired. Pollock v. Riddick [C. C. A.] 161 F 280. Where contract for purchase of designated lots contains option to purchase other lots, waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment of instalments goes to whole contract and continues the option. Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Where optionee was to pay $50 at a certain time or on notice that vendor had received a bona fide offer, and, upon receiving notice naming the offeror, optionee made no objection to bona fides of offer but attempted compliance, held that he could not thereafter attack same to excuse payment in action for specific performance. Rude v. Levy, 43 Colo. 482, 96 P 560.

10. Acceptance, subject to title guaranteed by Title & T. Mortgage Guarantee Co., when right to such title was not given by option, is not a legal acceptance. Elmer v. Hart, 121 La. 537, 46 S 619. Where optionee was to pay $50 on exercise of option, payment of $37 and credit of $13 on disputed debt is not a compliance. Rude v. Levy, 43 Colo. 482, 96 P 560. Option construed and held that payment of purchase price was not essential to an acceptance. Breen v. Mayne [Iowa] 118 NW 441. Where option gives optionee privilege of purchasing for cash or on terms, acceptance must state on which terms it is purchased. Elmer v. Hart, 121 La. 537, 46 S 619. Acceptance of option by one of two the optionee must tender performance on his part to place the former in default.[14] Upon acceptance an option becomes a contract of sale,[15] the terms of which determine the rights of the parties.[16] The optionee's financial ability to perform his contract is prima facie presumed,[17] and inability to perform subsequent obligations will not excuse the optionor's default.[18] By course of dealings with the option, the parties may estop themselves from denying its validity.[19]

§ 2. Condition, quantity, and description of lands.[20]—See 10 C. L. 1947.—The doctrine of caveat emptor should not be applied where it would be inequitable.[21] The contract must contain, either in terms or by reference, such a description of the property as to identify it,[22] although parol evidence is admissible to remove a lessees held sufficient in absence of objection that it should be accepted by both. Pearson v. Millard [N. C.] 63 SE 1053.

11. Negotiations for credit does not destroy optionee's right to purchase for cash. Succession of Witting, 121 La. 501, 46 S 606.

12. Where, at time lease containing option to purchase was executed, and was placed in escrow with instructions, option and instructions should be construed together. Pollard v. Sayre [Colo.] 98 P 816. To determine manner of exercising option, the language of instrument must be construed in light of competent parol testimony to discover intent of parties. Breen v. Mayne [Iowa] 118 NW 441. Where option is ambiguous as to what is necessary to constitute an acceptance, subject-matter and surrounding facts may be looked to. Hardy v. Ward [N. C.] 64 SE 171.

13. Palmer v. Clark [Wash.] 100 P 749. Giving of second option which did not bind vendors to convey except upon expiration of existing option does not withdraw first if it be deemed an offer merely. Ward v. Davis, 154 Mich. 413, 15 Det. Leg. N. 779, 117 NW 897.

14. Although optionor has attempted to revoke option, optionee must make necessary tender to constitute acceptance, for otherwise option is never converted into a contract of purchase. Marsh v. Lott [Cal. App.] 97 P 163. Complaint construed as action for breach of option agreement and hence error to require amendment alleging what plaintiff did by way of tender. Palmer v. Clark [Wash.] 100 P 749.

15. Corbett v. Cronkhite, 239 Ill. 9, 87 NE 874.

16. Assignee of option providing that conveyance shall be at the "cost and charge" of the vendee is not liable to vendor for counsel fees for examination of assignee's title to see if he is entitled to conveyance. Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co. [Md.] 71 A 442.

17. In action by optionee for breach of option contract. Palmer v. Clark [Wash.] 100 P 749.

18. Palmer v. Clark [Wash.] 100 P 749.

19. Where optionee was induced to release option on county lands under agreement that he and defendants would buy land in specified proportion, defendants to pay bonus to him, it was held that defendants were estopped to deny validity of option. Ellerd v. Cox [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 410.

21. Tarnow v. Carmichael [Neb.] 116 NW 1031.

22. Casey v. Luken [Ind. App.] 88 NE 347. Written agreement must contain, either in terms or by reference, such a description of the property that it can be ascertained without aid of parol evidence, but parol evidence is admissible to identify property. House v. McMullen [Cal. App.] 100 P 344. Rule that a contract for the sale and purchase of land which so describes the property that it may be identified by extrinsic evidence, is not void for uncertainty, has no application where description is wholly absent. Casey v. Luken [Ind. App.] 88 NE 347. Description of land is sufficient if, together with references and corners, lines, or other earmarks or indexes, it is sufficient to enable the land to be identified by aid of extrinsic evidence. Knight v. Knight [Wa. Va.] 63 SE 335.

Held insufficient: Contract held fatally defective in failing to describe land definitely. Booth v. Milliken [N. Y.] 87 NE 1115, afd. 127 App. Div. 522, 111 NYS 791. Description as "lots 11, 12, and 13, in Block 13, Lemp's addition" and which wholly fails to designate the state, county or civil or political subdivision where the land is situated, and fails to denote municipality or subdivision to which Lemp's addition is adjoined, held insufficient. Allen v. Kitchen [Idaho] 100 P 1052. Description as "70,000 acres of land situate, lying and being in" four specified counties, held too uncertain to be enforcible. Booth v. Milliken, 127 App. Div. 522, 111 NYS 791. Contract, reciting that in event that "Casey farm," not naming county or state, is sold at a vendi sale to a party to contract, he would pay to a person named therein a specified sum for interest, held unenforcible. Casey v. Luken [Ind. App.] 88 NE 347.

Held sufficient: Contract to sell "property Nos. 207, 209, and 211, West Second street, Little Rock, Ark., being 70 feet front by 75 feet deep." Kempner v. Gans [Ark.] 111 SW 1123. Contract dated Dallas, Texas, and describing land as "Lot twenty-seven, Block 3-929, and better known as No. 126 McKinnon street." Frazier v. Lambert [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 1174. Agreement for sale of "all of the property of the deceased, in C. township, together with the H. & B. additions, including buildings and school house, and all other buildings located on the land, with appurtenance thereto, including the coal and minerals," etc. Haupt latent ambiguity and to apply the description to particular land.[23] A false description will not defeat the contract where the error can be shown and corrected by other matter in the contract,[24] and where there are two descriptions, one of which is incorrect, the latter may be disregarded.[25]

§ 3. Title, deed, and encumbrances.[26] Title sold. See 10 C. L. 1948—In the absence of expression of the character of title sold, the contract will be preserved to contemplate a title that is good [27] and marketable,[28] and free from encumbrances,[29] unless both parties have knowledge to the contrary.[30]

Sufficiency of title. See 10 C. L. 1948—The sufficiency of the title tendered depends upon whether it is such as was sold, which, of course, in a particular case depends

v. Unger, 222 Pa. 439, 71 A 843. Contract given by one holding a contract for a deed, while in itself indefinite as to description, held capable of enforcement in light of surrounding facts and acts of the parties. Inglis v. Fohey, 136 Wis. 28, 116 NW 857. Description as "56 x 155 feet to an alley, on east side of Broadway between Sixth and Seventh streets" in named city, "and * * * being a part of lot 7 in block 17, Ord's survey." Parol evidence showed that vendor intended to sell and purchaser intended to buy a certain lot, which was only property which could answer description. Carr v. Howell [Cal.] 97 P 885. Designation of land in acceptance as the "Hay's place" and the "Needham desert entry" held sufficient. Long v. Needham, 37 Mont. 408, 96 P 731. Letter of grantor stating that "I am going to dispose of my undivided interest in the Chicago lots," answer, "As I understand your proposition, you sell undivided one-third interest in five lots in Chicago now owned by," naming persons, and reply of vendor stating that there were seven lots, held sufficiently definite, under extrinsic evidence, that vendor owned five lots only in Chicago, to sustain specific performance. Cumberledge v. Brooks, 235 Ill. 249, 85 NE 197.

23. Harten v. Loffler, 212 U. S. 397, 53 Law. Ed. —; Cumberledge v. Brooks, 235 Ill. 249, 85 NE 197. Parol evidence is admissible to identify the land and apply the description thereto, but not to complete an insufficient description. Allen v. Kitchen [Idaho] 100 P 1052.

27. Davis v. Lee [Wash.] 100 P 752. Where vendor agreed to sell piece of land distinct from his interest therein, mere fact he agreed to execute quitclaim deed to convey same did not relieve him from his obligation to convey good title. Id.

28. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853; Mutchnick v. Davis, 130 App. Div. 417, 114 NYS 997. Where lessor refused to permit lease to be transferred, which they had a right to do according to agreement in lease, the assignment of the lease was a contract to convey interest in land, and assignee could recover money paid on purchase price, because not marketable. Becker v. Erickson, 142 Ill. App. 133. Where property was subject to building restrictions as to value of buildings, purposes for which they could be used, etc., contract will not be specifically enforced. Shea v. Evans [Md.] 72 A 600.

29. Curtis Land & Loan Co. v. Interior Land Co., 137 Wis. 341, 118 NW 853. Railroad right of way held an incumbrance. Pryor v. Buffalo, 60 Misc. 447, 112 NYS 437. Building restriction and reserved right of way for pipes and ditches for irrigation purposes held incumbrances. Tandy v. Waesch [Cal.] 97 P 69. Where contract limited application of $60,000 of price to payment of "liens," claim against vendor held not a lien where it did not appear of record. Brown v. Gordon-Tiger Mining & Reduction Co. [Colo.] 97 P 1042. Conveyance to lessee, upon his electing to purchase under his option, merged the estates, and the lease was not an incumbrance. Swanston v. Clark, 153 Cal. 300, 95 P 1117. Cost of installing meter in tenement house by commissioner is not a "lien" until made definite by certification of water department to city comptroller. Feder v. Rosenthal, 62 Misc. 610, 116 NYS 2. Under a contract for the sale of realty, providing that if the vendor is unable to give the stipulated title he shall refund payments and the obligation shall cease, he cannot justify nonperformance by showing existence of attachments, etc., where they are not incumbrances on the property. Rosenberg v. Hefferman, 197 Mass. 151, 83 NE 316.

30. Where remainder was contingent upon childless woman, 70 years old, dying without issue, and such fact was well known, it will be presumed that parties contracted with reference thereto. Bacot v. Fessenden, 130 App. Div. 819, 115 NYS 698. Where bond for sale of certain mining properties described a portion thereof as patented and portion as mineral entries for which receiver's receipts had been issued, "patent not yet issued, but to be issued," construed an agreement to convey such interest as vendor had, and words "patent not yet issued but to be issued" held no covenant. Nelson v. Wood Placer Min. Co., 167 F 206. Where vendee's possession was not disturbed or threatened and title was otherwise as agreed, vendee could not rescind because patent was not issued at time for passing of balance of consideration and deed. Id. Where map and terms of sale at public auction showed that boundary ran through a party wall, purchaser cannot reject title on the ground of an incumbrance, for he was charged with notice of party-wall agreement. Dris-upon the construction of the terms of the contract,[31] but the purchaser may waive defects in this regard,[32] and accept such title as the vendor has,[33] and in some cases may recover for the decreased value due to such defect.[34] The waiver may rest in parol.[35] While it is difficult to define what constitutes a good [36] or a marketable [37] coll v. Carroll, 127 App. Div. 265, 111 NYS 246. Evidence held to show that purchaser did not know of restrictive covenants. Shea v. Evans [Md.] 72 A 600.

31. Where alterations by vendor are in accordance with contract and comply with Tenement House Act (Laws 1901, p. 895, c. 334, § 20), vendee can not refuse to accept title on ground that alteration was made without plans having been first filed with tenement house department and its approval obtained in advance, as required by act. Umberg v. Neinken, 128 App. Div. 165, 112 NYS 618. Where contract provided that property should be conveyed subject to mortgage to run not less than 2½ years, vendee may refuse to take subject to a mortgage, giving mortgagee right to require payment on 30 days' notice in case state changed method of taxation, etc. Groden v. Jacobson, 129 App. Div. 508, 114 NYS 183. Agreement to convey free from incumbrances gives vendee right to reject title containing restrictive covenants. Krah v. Wassmer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 404. Contract whereby vendor agreed to sell undivided one-quarter interest in remainder and to deliver deed free from all encumbrances, except life estate of life tenant and two mortgages then existing, held to mean that vendor was bound to deliver undivided one-quarter of the estate to be sold free from incumbrances, except those specified, and not that his interest should be free. Bacot v. Fessenden, 130 App. Div. 819, 115 NYS 698. Sale of city lots subject to encroachment onto street, if any, not exceed one inch, held to mean unlawful encroachment which city could remove. 556 & 558 Fifth Ave Co. v. Lotus Club, 129 App. Div. 339, 113 NYS 886. Where contract for sale of land, including city building, provided that any encroachment of bay-window not exceeding one foot should be accepted by vendee, vendee need not accept an encroachment of more than one foot in violation of city ordinance, though it is improbable that any action by city authorities will be taken. Heyman v. Steich, 114 NYS 603. Party-wall restrictions and covenants against nuisances held to justify rejection of title, which was to be free from incumbrances except those enumerated. Bacot v. Fessenden, 130 App. Div. 819, 115 NYS 698.

Evidence: Where vendor agreed to furnish abstract showing good title, abstract furnished is admissible on issue of compliance. Lang v. Murphy [Mo. App.] 117 SW 665.

32. Technical objection to want of identification of a party to a conveyance in chain held waived by failure to call vendor's attention thereto until after vendee's refusal to complete purchase. Cummings v. Dolan [Wash.] 100 P 989. When at time sale was made two unrecorded deeds in chain were missing and purchaser agreed to accept title as it was, with understanding that if deeds were found they should be recorded, he could not refuse to pay purchase price because of missing deeds. Travis v. Taylor [Ky.] 118 SW 988. Vendee may make objections to deed tendered on day for closing. Groden v. Jacobson, 129 App. Div. 508, 114 NYS 183. Where after abstract had been sent back for correction vendee retained same without object and based refusal to carry out contract on other grounds, there was a waiver of any remaining defect therein, which did not in fact make title defective. Prichard v. Mulhall [Iowa] 118 NW 43. No consideration for such a waiver was necessary, but even if necessary the vendor's expense in correcting abstract was sufficient. Id.

33. Hughes v. Adams [Tex. Cr. App.] 119 SW 134. Since vendee has right to accept within 30 days such title as vendor has, vendor cannot sell to another within 30 days though title is defective. Whited v. Calhoun, 122 La. 100, 47 S 415. On rehearing held that, where time is not of essence, vendee may refuse title containing curable defect without giving vendor right to rescind, and may thereafter waive defect and demand deed. Walton v. McKinney [Ariz.] 100 P 471.

34. Where vendor is unable to convey fee as required by contract, vendee may, unless it would be inequitable, accept such interest as he has and have a reasonable reduction from contract price. Campbell v. Cronly [N. C.] 64 SE 213. Where only evidence of depreciation in market value of property because of existing lease was appellee's statement that he gave $1,000 or $1,200 more than he would have given had he known of lease, finding that there was no evidence of depreciation was proper. Kuhn v. Eppstein, 239 Ill. 555, 88 NE 174.

35. Zempel v. Hughes, 235 Ill. 424, 85 NE 641. Evidence held to show such waiver. Id.

36. Agreement to furnish good title calls for marketable one. Coonrod v. Studebaker, [Wash.] 101 P 489; Summy v. Ramsey [Wash.] 101 P 506.

Held good: Where original deed was destroyed by a fire which destroyed county records, quitclaim deed from grantors therein to grantee makes good title. Lang v. Murphy [Mo. App.] 117 SW 665. By succession, partition, and purchase, vendor held to have good title. Metropolitan Bank v. Times-Democrat Pub. Co., 121 La. 547, 46 S 622. Mere fact that title to part was tax title does not show a defective title. Winn v. Neville [Kan.] 98 P 272. Fact that name "Hannah" was spelled with one "n" in deed to grantee in chain of title and with two "n's" in deed from her, and fact that she was described as a resident of P. county Wash. T., in first deed in 1870, and of B. county, Or., in her deed in 1880, held no valid objection to title. Kane v. Borthwick, 50 Wash. 8, 96 P 516. Deed to named grantee "and his wife," without naming her, held not to render title defective, where she was identified as party signing contract of sale with her husband. McArthur v. Weaver, 129 App. Div. 743, 113

NYS 1095. Objection that deed in chain of title signed and acknowledged by husband and wife did not contain husband's name in body held technical and frivolous where his name appeared in warranty clause, since it passed title by estoppel if not otherwise. Kane v. Borthwick, 50 Wash. 8, 96 P 516.

Held not good: Where, at time deed was to be delivered, the period within which land might be sold to pay debts of vendor's ancestor had not expired, and claims allowed by probate court still remained unpaid, title was not good. Lowe v. Molter [R. I.] 71 A 592. Unvacated dedication of street held a cloud on title, although unaccepted. Agens v. Koch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 348.

37. Words "merchantable title" are not of such clear and definite meaning that vendor may not show that he was ignorant of meaning and purchaser induced him to execute contract by stating that all he wanted was a warranty deed. Hughes v. Adams [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 134.

Marketable: Where title was free from legal objections, except that chain of title failed to show that certain grantors were heirs of a deceased owner, objections were met by satisfactory proof by affidavit and judicial finding of the fact. Vognild v. Voitz, 141 Ill. App. 45. Civ. Code 1895, § 2436, providing that, after separation, no transfer by husband, except bona fide in payment of pre-existing debts, shall pass title so as to avoid vesting thereof according to final verdict in cause, does not restrict bona fide transfer after separation, but before commencement of libel for divorce, and title depending thereon is marketable. Singleton v. Close, 130 Ga. 716, 61 SE 722. Abstract showing that legal title became vested in assignee of mortgage, and that he thereafter conveyed by warranty deed, held to show marketable title. Summy v. Ramsey [Wash.] 101 P 506. Recorded mortgage by stranger to title held not to render title unmarketable especially after giving of affidavits of no interest. Cummings v. Dolan [Wash.] 100 P 989. Possibility of woman 70 years old thereafter having issue held not to render title to remainder, contingent upon her dying without issue, unmarketable. Bacot v. Fessenden, 130 App. Div. 819, 115 NYS 698. Record title and undisturbed possession, under claim of title by vendor and predecessors for 50 years, of land comprising an abandoned road, held to show marketable title, although fee title was in city at time of abandonment and no conveyance by it appears. Pooler v. Sammet, 130 App. Div. 650, 115 NYS 578. Decedent conveyed three acres without wife joining, and after his death wife procured interlocutory judgment decreeing that one-third be set off as her dower, but nothing was ever done. Held that 20 years later such facts did not render title unmarketable, since it must be presumed that widow had been settled with or had died, especially where she did die before date for passing title. Port Jefferson Realty Co. v. Woodhull, 128 App. Div. 188, 112 NYS 678. Where building had openly encroached on street for 38 years and it did not appear that it was licensed by adjoining owners or that there was anything to prevent acquisition of prescriptive right, and city's right to compel removal had been indefinitely suspended by statute, it was held that encroachment did not render title unmarketable. 556 & 558 Fifth Ave. Co. v. Lotus Club, 129 App. Div. 339, 113 NYS 886. Under Code, § 2957, allowing affidavits to be filed to cure defects in title, affidavits showing that persons joining in a deed were only heirs of admitted owner held to make title marketable. Prichard v. Muihall [Iowa] 118 NW 43. Since under Real Property Law, Laws 1896, p. 610, c. 547, § 252, officer is prohibited from taking acknowledgement unless he knows or has satisfactory evidence that person making same is the person who executed same, title is not unmarketable because name of grantor in deed in chain is misspelled in acknowledgement. Veit v. Schwob, 127 App. Div. 171, 111 NYS 286. Title by adverse possession is marketable where fact of adverse possession is clear. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Marburg [Md.] 72 A 839; Clarke v. Wollpert, 128 App. Div. 203, 112 NYS 547.

Unmarketable: Where statutory deed omitted "his heirs and assigns," the deed as a whole did not indicate a fee, and even if vendor did take fee such language of deed was sufficient to raise such doubt as to render title unmerchantable. Bauman v. Stoller, 139 Ill. App. 393. Vendee was under no obligation to take title which, even if it might finally be determined to be good, was in condition to involve him in litigation to establish or secure it. Srolovitz v. Margulis, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 252. Title dependent upon scrip entry by contractor with state for recovery of lands for state held not marketable. Bodcaw Lumber Co. v. White, 121 La. 715, 46 S 782. Surrogate court refused probate of will devising land to testatrix's son for life, remainder to an infant. Supreme court appointed guardian ad litem to sue to establish will, and thereafter made order authorizing guardian to accept money offered in settlement and to discontinue suit, which was done. Held that court's jurisdiction to cut off infant's rights was of such doubtful character as to render title unmarketable. Dixon v. Cozine, 114 NYS 615. One seeking to compel another to accept a title through escheat to state must show that such escheated deceased person had no heirs to show a marketable title. In re Clarke, 131 App. Div. 688, 116 NYS 101. C. died, leaving husband and an alleged adopted daughter, who instituted proceedings to prove herself decedent's sole heir. Decree was rendered declaring her the sole heir, and ejectment was brought against husband. Judgment for plaintiff was reversed on ground that decree was not binding on husband, who was not a party, the court indicating that proof of heirship was insufficient. Held insufficient to show that C. was without heirs. Id. Abstract showing title by mortgage foreclosure by advertisement, without showing that mortgage contained power of sale, does not show merchantable title. Bryan v. Straus Bros. & Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 292, 121 NW 301. Where, in suit against purchaser for specific performance, it appears that complainant had no paper title to part of lots, but relied upon title by adverse possession, that title to other lots was in another, although deed was procured from him after suit, and as to some of the lots they had no mineral rights, the title title, it is only necessary that it be free from reasonable doubt,[38] as shown by the record.[39] Generally, any encumberance or restriction renders the title unmarketable.[40] Where the parties have contracted with reference to a particular defect, the court cannot hold it immaterial or frivolous.[41] Ordinarily a purchaser need not accept a title resting upon adverse possession unless it is established beyond a reasonable doubt.[42] Where the vendor has agreed to furnish a title satisfactory to the vendee[43] or designated attorneys,[44] confirmed by court,[45] or one which a named title trust company will approve,[46] it is not alone sufficient that he furnish one in fact good and marketable. A lis pendens ordinarily justifies rejection where the complaint states a good cause of action.[47] Privilege of curing defect and time therefor is controlled largely by the contract.[48]

The deed should usually follow the description in the contract.[49]

§ 4. Price and payment.[50]—See 10 C. L. 1950—The amount,[51] place,[52] and time[53]

was not merchantable. Lindsey v. Humbrecht, 162 F 548. Title depending upon deed executed by attorney in fact after grantor's death, as shown by recitals in papers relating to appointment of administrator, is not marketable, although land has been held adversely for 27 years, in absence of showing that grantor was alive at time of execution of deed, or that adverse possession has not been tolled by infancy or otherwise. Lalor v. Tooker, 130 App. Div. 11, 114 NYS 403.

38. Summy v. Ramsey [Wash.] 101 P 506; Connely v. Putnam [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 164; Cummings v. Dolan [Wash.] 100 P 989. A "perfect title" is one that is good and valid beyond a reasonable doubt. Dobson v. Zimmerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 236.

39. Purchaser need not go outside of record to see whether there may not be some minor heirs who have not been barred by limitations. Coonrod v. Studebaker [Wash.] 101 P 489.

40. Where contract calls for a perfect record title, vendee may refuse title where there are two judgments of record against vendors. Agens v. Koch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 348. Vendee is not estopped to reject tendered contract of sale on ground of reservation and restrictions therein, because she has accepted, before becoming aware of the restrictions, part of forfeiture on resale by vendor as vendee's agent. Steele v. Guaranty Realty Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 105. Covenant against nuisances and restrictions as to building held defense to action for specific performance of contract to convey free from incumbrances. Eckel v. Spitzer, 58 Misc. 467, 111 NYS 459.

41. Carroll v. Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 131 App. Div. 221, 115 NYS 660.

42. Lewine v. Gerardo, 60 Misc. 261, 112 NYS 192.

43. Title in fact good is not necessarily sufficient, so long as vendee acts in good faith. Hollingsworth v. Colthurst [Kan.] 96 P 851.

44. Evidence held not to warrant finding that provision that vendor's attorney should act with purchaser's attorney in passing on title was omitted through fraud or mistake. Delano v. Taylor [Ky.] 113 SW 888.

45. Where purchaser agreed to buy, "provided the titles are good and sufficient and approved by a judgment of court," he need not accept title until so confirmed by judgment. Lewis & Co. v. Brock [La.] 48 S 563. Under contract to convey good title to lands acquired by husband after wife's death with money received from father's estate, where the community had no interest in the land, he was not bound to procure a probate order authorizing the sale, even if, acting under a mistake, he agreed to do so. Dobson v. Zimmerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 236.

46. Under contract to furnish such title that a designated title insurance company will approve and insure, vendee may reject title which such company refuses to approve and insure, although another title insurance company will approve and insure the title offered. Allen v. McKeon, 127 App. Div. 277, 111 NYS 328.

47. Murphy v. Fox, 128 App. Div. 534, 112 NYS 819. Notice of lis pendens reciting proceeding had been commenced to foreclose mortgage held not to render title unmarketable, where property was to be taken subject to the mortgage and foreclosure suit had been discontinued and order so entered. Weissberger v. Wallach, 124 App. Div. 382, 108 NYS 887.

48. Where contract of exchange provided that abstracts should be furnished by certain date to respective attorneys, each to have 30 days thereafter to cure defects, and if unable to do so within such time contract was to become void, held that, upon being unable to cure defect within such time, neither was obliged to accept other's offer of additional time but could call contract void. Carter & Co. v. Harrell [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1139. In such case, either could withdraw after time for furnishing abstract on other refusing to accept title offered. Id. Statement by purchaser that, if property which he was to give in exchange was not sold when abstract was perfected, he would go on with the deal, held to show that he did not grant further time for perfecting same. Coonrod v. Studebaker [Wash.] 101 P 489.

49. Where sale contract of lots described same by metes and bounds, and also gave the lot numbers held that purchaser was entitled also to have lot numbers inserted in deed. Myrtle Realty Co. v. Kalter, 131 App. Div. 281, 115 NYS 694.

51. Agreement to pay vendor "$50 an acre of payment, are controlled by the terms of the contract, but, in the absence of a provision therein to the contrary, a cash payment is presumed as intended,[54] and parol evidence is inadmissible to show otherwise,[55] unless the transaction sought thus to be shown amounts to a subsequent agreement.[56] The amount may be contingent [57] and made payable upon the happening of a particular event.[58] Provision postponing payment for purchaser's special benefit may be waived by him.[59] Authority to sell does not give an agent implied authority to receive a partial payment before the contract is entered into.[60] The character of a payment [61] and proof thereof [62] are controlled by principles relating to payments generally.[63] for their undivided one-half interest in said lands" held to require payment of $50 for undivided half interest in each acre. Zeno Iron Co. v. Jacobson, 105 Minn. 614, 117 NW 614. Sale by acreage of land described as bounded "by certain highways" does not require payment for land in highway, although it is sufficient to convey title thereto. Kidder v. Childs, 130 App. Div. 259, 114 NYS 561. Evidence held to show that agreed price was price paid by vendor plus amount of sewer assessment, deferred payments to bear interest. Friedman v. Enders, 116 NYS 461. Evidence of value is admissible upon the issue where agreed consideration was $100 or $1,100. Warwick v. Hitchings, 50 Wash. 140, 96 P 960. Evidence of popular subscription of $1,000 in aid of purchase of property for mill is admissible. Id.

52. Where contract fixes place of payment, mere acceptance of a partial payment elsewhere does not waive the provision as to future payments. Prairie Development Co. v. Leiberg, 15 Idaho, 379, 98 P 616.

53. Contract for sale of land on payment, 90 days after success in finding minerals, held to require payment within 90 days from such success. Anse La Butte Oil & Mineral Co. v. Babb, 122 La. 415, 47 S 754. Provision of collateral agreement, reciting the pending of a suit in the United States Circuit court for district of Montana, that final payment should not be made "until said suit is finally determined in said court," held not to delay payment until termination of an appeal. In re Grogan's Estate [Mont.] 100 P 1044. Where contract provided for delivery of deed to vendee upon paying a specified amount each year from 1904 to 1910, and in case of "default in payment" previous payments should be retained as rent, it cannot be so construed as not to put vendee in default until 1910 although he does not make prior payments. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666. Subsequent agreement fixing the time for payment is not admissible to illustrate time within which balance is payable (Hawkins v. Studdard [Ga.] 63 SE 852), and parol evidence is inadmissible to prove the contrary (Id).

54. Where contract contains no stipulation for credit, cash payment is contemplated. Brady v. Green [Ala.] 48 S 807; Ruggerio v. Leuchtenburg, 61 Misc. 298, 113 NYS 615. Where contract acknowledges receipt of part of purchase price and does not specify when the rest is payable, it is payable presently and not within a reasonable time. Hawkins v. Studdard [Ga.] 63 SE 852. Deed and notes for deferred payments construed together and interest on entire deferred amount held payable annually. Philippi Collieries Co. v. Thompson [C. C. A.] 163 F 23.

55. Ruggerio v. Leuchtenburg, 61 Misc. 298, 113 NYS 615.

56. Written provisions as to time and manner of payments may be orally modified. Prairie Development Co. v. Leiberg, 15 Idaho, 379, 98 P 616. Evidence held insufficient to show modification of contract as to place of payment of portion of instalment as to which time of payment was extended. Id.

57. Defendant purchased plaintiff's electric car plant, paying a specified sum therefor and agreeing to pay a further sum if upon a test plaintiff's storage battery system proved superior to defendant's system. Defendant refused to make the test. Held that, upon proving superiority to satisfaction of jury, plaintiff was entitled to recover agreed price without regard to actual value. Hopedale Elec. Co. v. Electric Storage Battery Co., 132 App. Div. 348, 116 NYS 859.

58. Provision in purchase money note, "subject to the clearing of title to the lots," which were held under tax deeds, held to contemplate some proceeding whereby all right of attack would be cut off, and hence purchase money was not payable until such proceeding was had although title was good. Pease v. Globe Realty Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 975. Where certain deferred payment was to be made when vendor presented a warranty deed "together with an abstract showing the parties of the first part to have good marketable title," presentment of abstract showing defective title did not place vendee in default so as to start interest, although title was in fact good. Brandenburg v. Phillips [N. D.] 119 NW 542.

§ 5. Time.[64] See 10 C. L. 1951—Time is not usually of the essence of contracts for the sale of land,[65] the presumption, where the contract is silent as to time, being that performance must take place within a reasonable time,[66] and the contrary will not be held except where it is clearly so intended by the parties.[67] In ascertaining the intent, regard may be had for the purchaser's known immediate need for the premises,[68] the vendor's need of the purchase price,[69] or the fluctuating value of the property.[70] At law time, when expressly specified, is of the essence of the contract,[71] and, except in cases of very gross injustice, even equity cannot relieve from a default where time is expressly made of the essence,[72] and the other party may refuse a tender of performance thereafter made.[73] Timely performance may be waived,[74] and where an extension of time has been given, though a mere indulgence, the other party cannot be placed in default until he has had a reasonable time to perform after being notified of the revocation of the extension.[75] Where time is of the essence and the purchaser has defaulted, he cannot recover money paid.[76] In Montana the vendee may elect the date of performance where the time is expressed in the alternative.[77]

Where vendor agreed to sell and purchaser to buy within specified time provided abstract showed good title, time is not of the essence in absence of express agreement. Robinson v. Collier [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 915. Where contract provides that purchaser shall pay taxes legally levied on land subsequent to 1904 without specifying time of payment, time is not of the essence. Acosta v. Anderson [Fla.] 48 S 260. Where purchase price was to be paid at rate of $5 per month, in work so far as possible, held to show that time was not of the essence. Lillis v. Steinbach [Wash.] 99 P 22. Stipulation that consideration was to be paid on day named, in default of which vendee was to forfeit all his interest in the land, held to make time of the essence. Cadwell v. Smith [Neb.] 120 NW 130.

68. Immediate need of vendee for premises and knowledge thereof by vendors, together with the other surrounding facts, held to show that time was of essence of contract. Agens v. Koch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 348.

69. Where party was without means and agreed to transfer part of certain tract of land in litigation if transferee would pay all expenses of litigation, etc., time was of essence, and where transferee failed to pay the expenses of litigation as they accrued he could not have performance by offering to reimburse after termination of litigation. Abernathy v. Florence [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 161.

Where contract provided that deed should contain covenant prohibiting sale of intoxicating liquors on premises which should be satisfactory to grantor, held that grantor was justified in refusing to execute deed upon advice of counsel unless covenant was expressed as a part of consideration. Goldberg v. Feldman, 108 Md. 330, 70 A 245. Tenement-house act (Laws 1901, p. 889, c. 334) not requiring all tenement houses to be provided with a water meter, but merely authorizing commissioner of water supply to require same, absence of meter until so required is not a violation of the act (Feder v. Emerson [Or.] 91 P 454. Where purchaser has paid part of the purchase money, vendor cannot maintain forcible entry until he has tendered deed. Bowling v. Bowling [Miss.] 47 S 802. Where vendors were to deliver to a bank merchantable title by certain date, whereupon purchaser was to pay purchase price to bank upon vendor's failing to do so, purchaser was not bound to make further demand for compliance. Hughes v. Adams [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 134. Even if vendor receives possession of a stock of goods in part payment, he is not entitled to retain it or to recover it in replevin after time for performance on his part, unless he was tendered performance by offering a deed conveying marketable title. Robinson v. Yetter, 238 Ill. 320, 87 NE 363. Where each makes deposit as liquidated damages, and time for performance elapses without either performing or tendering performance, neither can recover deposit of other. Wead v. Helpert [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1112. Where vendor agreed to procure extension of mortgage and vendee to execute new mortgage if necessary to effect extension, vendee was not obliged to tender vendor new mortgage to put him in default, but it was duty of vendor to make demand for such mortgage if it became necessary. Sachs v. Wachsman, 130 App. Div. 772, 114 NYS 171. Where $60,000 of price was to be applied to "liens," vendor's failure to furnish schedule thereof was no excuse for failure to instal plant as agreed, only effect, at most, being to give vendee further time for payment. Brown v. Gordon & Tiger Mining & Reduction Co. [Colo.] 97 P 1042. Where plaintiff contracted to purchase lots at $30,000 but specified payments aggregated $38,000, contract was so ambiguous that plaintiff's assignee could not be placed in default until he was advised of true consideration. Lawson v. Sprague [Wash.] 98 P 737. Where plaintiff purchased of defendant a portion of lands which he held under contract from another and was directed by defendant to make tender to such third person, he was bound only to tender amount due under his contract. Ford v. Stroud [N. C.] 64 SE 1. Where agreement was for clear title, vendee could not recover consideration advanced merely upon proof of incumbrances, for reason that vendor had until vendee tendered final payment to remove incumbrances and perfect title. Laub v. DeVault, 139 Ill. App. 398. Where vendee agreed to perform on certain date but did not, he could not in a subsequent action by vendor's executor, for specific performance, set up as a defense that contract could not have been performed on that date. Griffith v. Stewart, 31 App. D. C. 29. Purchaser was tendered properly executed warranty deed but refused it and it was left with clerk of court in action on contract and destroyed. Owner died tract,[85] placed himself in a position where he cannot discharge his obligation,[86] or waived performance,[87] or where such tender would be useless.[88] A conditional,[89] untimely [90] or insufficient [91] tender does not place the other in default, unless the defect is waived.[92] Under some circumstances the purchaser must prepare and present to the vendor for execution a proper deed to place him in default.[93] That one party insists upon something outside of the terms of the contract does not excuse the other from carrying it out according to its terms,[94] and a repudiation of the contract does not excuse one suing for a breach thereof from alleging and proving readiness and ability on his part to perform.[95] A tender is not affected by the fact that the money was furnished by a prospective purchaser.[96] The terms of

Before bringing action for specific performance, he was tendered quitclaim deed from sole heir and order of probate court for deed from administrator. Held sufficient tender of performance. Prichard v. Mulhall [Iowa] 118 NW 43. Vendee who did not ask for performance on date fixed could not avoid performance later on ground that vendor could not at said date have fulfilled his part of contract. Griffith v. Stewart, 31 App. D. C. 29.

86. Zempel v. Hughes, 235 Ill. 424, 85 NE 641; Thomas v. Walden [Fla.] 48 S 746; Cadwell v. Smith [Neb.] 120 NW 130. Where vendee elects to treat vendor's conveyance to third persons as a rescission, tender of balance due and demand for deed is not necessary to maintain action for recovery of money paid. Smith v. Treat, 234 Ill. 552, 85 NE 289.

87. Vendor's agent and vendee met to perform. Latter objecting to form of acknowledgment, it was agreed that new deed running to third persons should be drawn and sent to vendor for execution, agent, however, being without authority to so agree. Vendor never returned deed. Held, that tender of performance by vendee was not waived, nor was fact that vendor received an unaccepted larger offer material. Jennings v. Howard, 199 Mass. 71, 85 N9 465.

88. Where vendor absolutely refused to settle on basis of contract, formal tender of amount due thereunder was unnecessary. Babcock v. Lewis [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 584. Declared inability of vendor to perform, or conduct indicating that a tender will be unavailing, excuses tender. Piazzek v. Harman [Kan.] 98 P 771. Need not make tender where vendee refuses to proceed because of alleged defects. Kane v. Borthwick, 50 Wash. 8, 96 P 516. Where assignee agreed to pay assignor of contract $5,500 upon receiving deed from vendor, his failure to tender to vendor contract price did not render agreement with assignor absolute on theory of default, where it appeared that vendor did not have title called for by contract. Lawson v. Sprague [Wash.] 98 P 737.

89. Tender, upon condition that vendor make deeds to land not covered by contract and after making arbitrary deductions of unliquidated claims, is not good. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666.

90. Where time is of essence, tender must be made during time limited to place vendor in default. Thompson v. Robinson [W. Va.] 64 SE 718. Where price is due in instalments, tender of aggregate amount is not a valid tender so as to put vendor in default. Hanson v. Fox [Cal.] 99 P 489. Contract bound vendor to convey on payment of specified price and on building on land of sawmill of designated capacity. It required purchaser to commence building mill in 1905 and finish January 1, 1907, but provided that, if purchaser failed to receive assurances of spur track from railroad company during 1905, it should have 14 months after receiving assurance to finish. In December, 1905, engineer expressed opinion that spur would be built by April 15, 1906, but company's rights to condemn was contested until June, 1906. Held that completion by April 27, 1907, was within terms. Bowen v. Dempsey Lumber Co., 49 Wash. 690, 96 P 427.

91. Where purchaser is authorized to make tender to his vendor's vendor and latter refuses to receive anything except total amount due under his contract, purchaser need not tender the actual cash. Ford v. Stroud [N. C.] 64 SE 1.

92. Where tender is not objected to as insufficient in amount but on other grounds, it will prevent forfeiture though in fact insufficient. Nolan v. Foley [Iowa] 120 NW 310. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2076, providing that one to whom an instrument is tendered must specify objections or be deemed to have waived them, vendor rejecting tender of note for deferred payments under contract without giving any reason cannot thereafter question its sufficiency. Montgomery v. De Picot, 153 Cal. 509, 96 P 305.

93. Where deed tendered in good faith by vendor does not conform to contract, purchaser must either permit him to see contract or himself prepare and present a duly drawn deed to vendor for execution. Skinner v. Creasy [Ky.] 116 SW 753. Not necessary when vendor has refused to convey. Brady v. Green [Ala.] 48 S 807.

the contract control as to what constitutes a default.[97] Performance in strict accordance with the contract may be waived.[98] One alleging performance to put the other in default must prove the same.[99]

§ 8. Forfeiture, rescission, and waiver.[1] Forfeiture.[See 10 C. L. 1954]—The right of forfeiture may be reserved in the contract,[2] but provisions looking thereto are strictly construed,[3] and ordinarily no such right exists in the absence of express agreement.[4] Where the declaration of forfeiture is optional with one of the parties, the optionee must indicate his intention to declare a forfeiture,[5] promptly upon discovering a ground therefore,[6] even when time is of the essence of the contract,[7] though the rule seems to be different where the provision for forfeiture is in terms self-operative.[8] Notice, however, may be waived in any case,[9] and, where the ven-

Where purchaser was to make payments from produce of mine and agreed to instal reduction plant within specified time, failure to so instal cannot be excused on ground of defect in title to small fraction of mine where defect was not known until after time for performance. Brown v. Gordon-Tiger Mining & Reduction Co. [Colo.] 97 P 1042. Where vendor agreed to construct granolithic sidewalk in front of lot, and it appears that sale of lot was part of general enterprise and stipulation referred to general undertaking, vendor was not in default because of failure to build within two years. Dowling v. Miller-Kendig Real Estate Co., 115 NYS 154. Conflicting evidence of vendor and vendee as to which refused to go on with the contract held to make a question for the jury. McPherson v. Bristol, 131 Mo. App. 365, 111 SW 526. Evidence held to sustain finding that vendor and not vendee refused to go on with contract. Id.

98. Where defendant agreed to pay mother certain monthly sums in consideration of a release of her interest in her deceased husband's real estate, payment of instalments without a release does not waive his right to insist upon conveyance before payment of future instalment. Gail v. Gail, 127 App. Div. 892, 112 NYS 96. Where vendor is unable to perform, fact that vendee takes what he can get under his contract does not of itself show waiver of full performance. Boyden v. Hill, 198 Mass. 477, 85 NE 413. Acceptance of such land as vendor had title to, together with surrounding circumstances, held to make waiver of full performance for jury. Id.

99. Where contract bound plaintiff to convey all her interest in her deceased husband's real estate to defendant and bound defendant to make certain monthly payments, and in action for instalment plaintiff alleged full performance which defendant denied and alleged that he need not make further payment until plaintiff performed, plaintiff was bound to show performance. 3. Walker v. Burtless [Neb.] 117 NW 349.

4. Owner of undivided interest in land subject to mortgage agreed to convey his interest on certain day if vendee would pay his portion of mortgage. Vendee was able and willing to make payment but was unable to do so because of extension of mortgage secured by the other co-owners. Held that vendor could not forfeit vendee's rights, there being no forfeiture clause in contract. Guthrie v. Baton [Pa.] 72 A 788. Where, after notice of forfeiture, vendee tendered in good faith within 30 days the amount which he thought due, and it was not objected to on ground of insufficiency, such tender was sufficient under Code, §§ 4299, 4300, allowing vendee to pay amount due within 30 days of notice and prevent forfeiture, though in fact insufficient in amount to prevent forfeiture. Nolan v. Foley [Iowa] 120 NW 310.

5. McGrew v. Smith [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1117. A forfeiture cannot be enforced without reasonable notice, where vendor has led vendee to believe that time was not of the essence of the contract, and hence where contract provided forfeiture for nonpayment and vendor had not enforced such provision, but had let a number of years go by, held that forfeiture could not be enforced until reasonable notice had been given. Treat v. Smith, 139 Ill. App. 262. Where, upon vendee's default, money theretofore paid "is to be declared forfeited" to the vendor, vendor is not entitled to retain money in absence of declaration of forfeiture. Walker v. Burtless [Neb.] 117 NW 349. Mere payment of taxes by vendor for his own protection is not an election to declare a forfeiture for vendee's default in paying the same. Acosta v. Anderson [Fla.] 48 S 260. Where, after default, vendor conveys to a third person, but expressly subject to the contract, such conveyance is not an election to declare a forfeiture, but the contrary. 8. Where time is of essence, notice of intention to enforce positive provision that default shall operate as forfeiture held undor has led the purchaser to believe that prompt payment will not be demanded, he cannot declare a forfeiture until he has notified the purchaser of his intention so to do and the latter has had a reasonable time to perform.[10] Equity will not permit a forfeiture where it would result in gross inequity,[11] or prevented performance,[12] as where the party asserting the same has misled the other.[13] So also a forfeiture may be waived,[14] and equity will seize upon any fact or circumstance tending to show a waiver to relieve from the harshness of forfeiture.[15] Where the necessary. Prairie Development Co. v. Lieberg, 15 Idaho, 379, 98 P 616.

9. Where forfeiture is optional with vendor upon vendee's default, vendor must indicate his election unless vendee waives notice. Acosta v. Anderson [Fla.] 48 S 260.

10. Smith v. Treat, 234 Ill. 552, 85 NE 289; Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Payment of defaults within 10 days held within a reasonable time. Id. Under Civ. Code § 1511, subd. 3 and §§ 3512, 3515, 3516, vendor, who has stated to vendee that he did not care how the payments were made so long as he got his money within time for last payment, cannot declare forfeiture under terms of contract for failure to pay installments when due. Id.

11. Although time is made of the essence of contract, equity under peculiar circumstance may refuse to enforce forfeiture. Zempel v. Hughes, 235 Ill. 424, 85 NE 641. Vendee may excuse default and relieve himself of a default by showing equitable grounds. Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Although time is of essence of contract, equity will not enforce a forfeiture where party seeking to declare same prevented other from performing. Zempel v. Hughes, 235 Ill. 424, 85 NE 641. Although contract provided that upon default all notes should become due and obligation to convey should become void, where, after default, vendor accepted delayed payments from time to time until several notes were paid, held that forfeiture could not be asserted where assignee of contract offered to pay balance due. Turpin v. Beach [Ark.] 115 SW 404. Where vendor executes contract by giving deed and accepting notes secured by mortgage not complying with the statutory form, he cannot, without demand for formal mortgage, assert its entire validity and sue to cancel deed and declare forfeiture of original contract for nonpayment of purchase price as therein provided. Spedden v. Sykes [Wash.] 98 P 752. Where vendor in possession sues in equity to quiet title against purchaser in default, tender of amount due defeats recovery where vendor has suffered no injury by default. McCullough v. Rucker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 323.

12. Where default in tendering payment by complainant's assignor was waived and complainant made every reasonable effort to pay arrears but was prevented by inequitable conduct of vendor, latter could not claim forfeiture. Hickman v. Chaney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1003, 118 NW 993. Evidence held insufficient to show that vendee was prevented from preforming by fraudulent concealment of vendor's agent. Armstrong v. Campbell [Iowa] 118 NW 898.

13. Prairie Development Co. v. Lieberg, 15 Idaho, 379, 98 P 616. Although time is of essence of contract, vendor cannot insist upon forfeiture for nonpayment of first note when due, where he has told purchaser that it would be all right if it was paid by time second became due. Souter v Witt [Ark.] 113 SW 800. Although contract gives vendor right to declare forfeiture if vendee fails to pay taxes to proper officer when they become due and payable, where he has led vendee to believe that he will pay the taxes and that vendee could reimburse him, vendor cannot declare a forfeiture until vendee is given a reasonable time to perform after notice. Walsh v. Selover, Bates & Co., 105 Minn. 282, 117 NW 499. Where failure to fully perform was sole fault of vendee and he was not misled by vendor, mere fact that negotiations were pending as to subject-matter does not excuse default. Prairie Development Co. v. Lieberg, 15 Idaho, 379, 98 P 616.

14. Vendor may waive forfeiture of contract by continuing to act on contract. Noyes v. Schlegel [Cal. App.] 99 P 726. Evidence held insufficient to show a waiver of forfeiture. Souter v. Witt [Ark.] 113 SW 800. Where contract provided for forfeiture for nonpayment of notes and stipulated for rent for time occupied, failure of vendor to demand rent and return notes held not a waiver of forfeiture. Id. Where vendor habitually accepted payments after default, he thereby waived his right in equity to a forfeiture, and cannot assert same against one attaching property as belonging to purchaser, but purchaser at such execution sale is entitled to property on paying balance due. Braddock v. England [Ark.] 112 SW 883.

15. Speeden v. Sykes [Wash.] 98 P 752. Where one in possession of government land with right to buy agrees to convey land when he obtains title, and does not assert forfeiture for nonpayment until he receives title, he cannot thereafter do so until he tenders title. Tacoma Water Supply Co. v. Dumermuth [Wash.] 99 P 741. On day fixed for closing, vendor was not ready. Postponement was taken and vendor inserted new term calling for additional payment, to which vendee's agent assented without authority to do so. On postponed date vendee tendered amount originally due. Vendor asserted a forfeiture without demanding additional amount. Held no forfeiture. Rothbard v. Abels-Gold Realty Co., 128 App. Div. 887, 112 NYS 526.

forfeiture has been waived, it cannot thereafter be asserted,[16] and on the other hand, where a forfeiture is once complete, the defaulter or his creditors cannot reinstate the contract.[17] Where vendor unlawfully declares a forfeiture and enters into possession, he is liable for rent.[18] Where the vendor agrees to convey only upon making of the last payment, no tender is necessary to declare a forfeiture for nonpayment of prior instalment.[19] One asserting a forfeiture has the burden of showing grounds therefor.[20] In foreclosing a contract, equity may allow the purchaser a reasonable time to remove the default.[21]

Rescission. See 10 C. L. 1055—The parties to the contract may rescind by mutual agreement[22] so long as the rights of third persons are not seriously prejudiced thereby.[23] Rescission may be had for a mutual mistake[24] or for fraud,[25] if the injury therefrom is substantial.[26] The injured party, however, must have been without fault,[27] and must exercise his right within a proper time after discovery of the fraud,[28] and before he has asserted an inconsistent remedy.[29] A party may re-

§ 9. Interest in the land created by, and rights and liabilities under the contract.[43] See 10 C. L. 1956 To such extent as the parties have expressed their intentions, the terms of the contract control their rights with regard to collateral and incidental matters,[44] including the right to and character of possession.[45] So also, the terms of the contract must be looked to in determining matters relative to the consideration of the contract.[46] A purchaser under a bond for title or a contract may treat such act as abandonment, but where conveyance is subject to contract there is no abandonment. Foxey v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666. Where purchaser withdraws deposit under contract, vendor may treat contract as abandoned and sell property to another. Dobson v. Zimmerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 236. Failure of purchaser to make any payment for three years of principal, interest or taxes, and surrendered possession, held to constitute such abandonment of contract as to prevent specific performance. Voight v. Fidelity Ins. Co., 49 Wash. 612, 96 P 162. Where vendor conveyed, merely as security, land to be conveyed to vendee upon performance, the contract was not abandoned. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666. Where vendor had agreed to procure extension of mortgage, transfer of title subject to contract did not release vendor, especially where vendee had guaranteed performance. Sachs v. Wachsman, 130 App. Div. 72, 114 NYS 171. Delay in making payments and failure to pay taxes held insufficient to show abandonment of contract for purchase of vacant lots. Lillis v. Steinbach [Wash.] 99 P 22. 44. Where contract provided that vendor should have a reasonable time after date for closing to clear title if necessary, but that closing should not be delayed if vendor gave bond, vendor was not required to give bond to secure additional time if he wished to delay closing. Carrabind & Co. v. Cox [Mo. App.] 117 SW 616. Where vendor makes agreement to erect building on premises, he must furnish material therefor. Bohanan v. Thomas [Ala.] 49 S 308. Where contract provides for survey, payment to be made on acreage basis, vendee need not accept title under inaccurate survey and no forfeiture can be claimed where survey includes additional land, though he knows correct boundaries. Burns v. Armstrong [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1049.

45. Payment of part of contract price and entry without permission from all necessary parties does not give right of possession; nor does tender of balance of purchase money give such right. Coleman v. Connolly, 139 Ill. App. 383. Contract reciting that owner of premises had received $100 as deposit on purchase price, balance, $2,500, to be paid upon delivery of an unlimited certificate of title, does not confer right to possession. Winchester v. Becker [Cal. App.] 97 P 74. Possession of tenant is changed to that of vendee where during term property is sold to person in physical possession as resident agent of lessee, and he ceases to pay rent and in lieu thereof, makes cash payment and commences to pay interest on deferred payment. Sewell v. Home Ins. Co., 131 App. Div. 131, 115 NYS 345. One taking possession under contract providing that if vendor's title proved satisfactory he would take land at price and on terms agreed upon, otherwise money paid was to be refunded, held a tenant at sufferance and limitations did not run so long as he recognized vendor's title. Glenn v. Rhine [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 91.

46. Where purchase was by acre, held that vendee was obliged to pay for land in public highway, though such highway was an easement and was not mentioned in contract. Killen v. Funk [Neb.] 120 NW 189. Where conveyance in consideration of support and care provided that if vendors decided to live with one of their other children then vendees should deliver articles to their abode, and if they could not agree then plaintiffs should pay defendants $1,000 and be released from all obligations, disagreement before vendors left held not to give right to pay $1,000 and be released. Mootz v. Petraschefski, 137 Wis. 315, 118 NW 865. Contract entered into March 24, 1904, provided that vendees agreed to pay to vendor the sum of $120 per year, after year 1905, for each year they carry a certain mortgage, said $120 representing instalment on interest note. Held that where mortgage was paid on Dec. 30, 1905, vendees were liable for $120 instalment maturing Jan. 1, 1906, being interest for 1905. Banks v. Scholz [Kan.] 100 P 625. Under contract to convey at specified price, requiring purchaser to pay $600 June 1, 1902, $600 January 2, 1903, with specified interest on deferred payments from January 1, 1902, and $1,200 on January 2 of each succeeding year, with interest from January 1, 1902, until payment of full price, held that vendor was entitled to interest on total balance due from January 2, 1902. Vance Redwood Lumber Co. v. Durphy [Cal. App.] 97 P 702. Garnishees contracted to purchase of defendants a half interest in timber land contract, under which garnishees and defendants obligated themselves to pay $90,000, garnishees paying defendants $15,000 and agreeing to pay balance to P. Contract provided that defendants should pay interest on one-half of money paid P., and that such payment should be returned on sale of land. Defendants gave garnishees option on their

for a deed is the equitable owner of the land,[47] especially after the payment of the price,[48] the vendor being a trustee of the legal title for his benefit;[49] and he has an assignable interest,[50] unless the contract involves some purely personal obligation.[51] In some states, the relation of vendor and purchaser is treated as analogous to that of mortgagor and mortgagee.[52] The legal title does not vest in the purchaser until performance of all conditions precedent[53] and concurrent.[54] As between the parties a formal deed is not necessary to pass title.[55] The purchaser, of course, gets half and provided that if option was not exercised garnishee should loan $15,000 to defendant. Held that there was no indebtedness due from garnishees to defendants. Maury v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 812.

47. Under a bond for a deed, vendee is the equitable owner and the vendor holds legal title in trust for him. McGregor v. Putney [N. H.] 71 A 226. Rights of vendee under agreement to pay notes before vesting of title are equitable at most and not cognizable in law. Rankin v. Dean [Ala.] 47 S 1015. E, having contracted to sell premises to intervener in 1898, conveyed property in 1901 to O, who conveyed to plaintiff in 1905, intervener receiving a new contract from plaintiff, held that legal and equitable title was in plaintiff and intervener. Huff v. Sweetser [Cal. App.] 97 P 705. Where bond for title provided for execution of deed upon payment of balance of purchase money, purchaser has equitable title and may contract with another with respect to mineral rights, and assignee of bonds having knowledge of such contract takes subject thereto. Asher v. Tennis Coal Co. [Ky.] 118 SW 955. Bond for title to school lands, stipulating that purchaser will pay part of price in cash and execute vendor's lien notes for balance, and that vendor will execute a bond for title and binding vendor to execute a deed of conveyance to school sections when they have been lived out under his contract of purchase from state, held substantially an agreement by vendor to make title, and equitable title vests in vendee upon payment of price. Johnson v. Buchanan [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 875.

48. Wright v. Riley [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1134. Where purchase money is not paid, contractee entitled to deed upon payment of price has neither the equitable or legal title. Standard Leather Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co., 131 Mo. App. 701, 111 SW 631. Vendee in possession under executory contract of purchase, who has paid part of consideration, is an "unconditional and sole owner" in fee simple of the equitable title within condition of insurance policy making same void if insured has other than an unconditonal and sole ownership in fee simple. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552.

49. Atteberry v. Burnett [Tex.] 113 SW 526. Vendor becomes trustee of title for vendee and vendee of purchase money for vendor (Sewell v. Underhill, 127 App. Div. 92, 111 NYS 85; Rankin v. Dean [Ala.] 47 S 1015), and in case of destruction of building loss falls upon vendee (Sewell v. Underhill, 127 App. Div. 92, 111 NYS 85). Where purchase money has been paid and possession given, vendor holds legal title to use of vendee who has equitable title. Lambert v. St. Louis & G. R. Co., 212 Mo. 692, 111 SW 550.

50. Sheridan v. Reese, 122 La. 1027, 48 S 443. Assignment of contract with right to reimburse assignee and get a reassignment held an equitable mortgage, and where assignor and assignee entered into contract with third person whereby assignee assigned all his rights and assignor released right to redeem, and thereafter assignee and third party entered into contract canceling said contract, assignor is entitled to redeem upon ratifying same. Patrono v. Patrono, 127 App. Div. 29, 111 NYS 268.

51. Whether contract is assignable depends upon tenor of entire contract, and if it appears that it calls for performance of an obligation purely personal, it is not assignable. Montgomery v. De Picot, 153 Cal. 509, 96 P 305. Where it appears that vendor did not look to personal responsibility of vendee for deferred payments but rather to the mortgage security to be given on the property, and agreed to convey to vendee or his assigns, etc., contract held assignable. Id. Where vendor assents to assignment of contract, he cannot thereafter assert that it was of a personal character and nonassignable. Sheridan v. Reese, 122 La. 1027, 48 S 443.

52. Contracts for sale of land on instalments are similar to mortgages, and upon default vendee is entitled to have land sold and to receive any surplus. Hicks v. King [N. C.] 64 SE 125; Freeman v. Bell [N. C.] 63 SE 682. Where lease provided that if lessee promptly paid the rent and taxes he could purchase upon payment of 50 extra bales of cotton, and that if any instalment of rent was not promptly paid all rights should be forfeited, held that, upon attempted forfeiture, lessee had right to have property sold to pay balance due. Hicks v. King [N. C.] 64 SE 125. Where decree directed administratrix of deceased vendor to convey to vendee upon his paying agreed contract price, and that, if he failed to do so by a specified time, the land be sold for cash, retaining case for disposition of proceeds, held that conveyance by administratrix upon receiving payment after time fixed was valid. Jones v. Jones, 148 N. C. 358, 62 SE 417.

53. Where owner agrees to convey tramroad as shown by paper and company constructs same, it becomes equitable owner and entitled to a deed, but if it was first to be located by the parties as a condition precedent, title does not pass until performance thereof. Union Sawmill Co. v. Felsenthal Land & Townsite Co. [Ark.] 112 SW 205.

54. Robinson v. Yetter, 238 Ill. 320, 87 NE 363.

55. Erasure of grantees name and substi-

only such title as the vendor has,[56] and subject to all such equities in third persons as are not cut off under the doctrine of bona fide purchaser without notice.[57] An estoppel in favor of the vendor is usually available to the purchaser.[58] Upon failure of title, no recovery can be had upon purchase price notes,[59] unless such failure is due to purchaser's default.[60] Where the vendor is obligated to furnish an abstract,[61] a conditional tender is not sufficient.[62] A purchaser is entitled to damages resulting from an occasional overflow caused by a permanent embankment constructed prior to the purchase,[63] notwithstanding a release of future damages by the vendor of which he had no notice.[64]

Rights of the parties in deposits depend upon the terms of their agreement in respect thereto.[65] An acknowledgment of a deposit setting out the application to be made thereof is not a mere receipt.[66] A purchaser in possession under the contract[67] is estopped to deny the vendor's title,[68] and cannot assert adverse possession against the vendor,[69] unless the contract is executed so far as the vendee is concerned.[70] On the other hand, a vendor remaining in possession can claim adverse possession only when the adverse character of his claim is of the clearest kind.[71] tution held sufficient. Witmer v. Shreves [Iowa] 120 NW 86.

56. Where vendor's interest has passed by commissioner's deed, vendee receives no title under his deed. Conley v. Breathitt Coal, Iron & Lumber Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 504. Quitclaim deed of residue of survey not previously conveyed gives purchaser no better rights against one claiming under a prior deed than grantor would have. Raley v. Magendie [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 174. Where purchaser brings ejectment upon his equitable title under contract of purchase against another subsequent purchaser, it is not necessary to tender or have in court balance due vendor for defendant cannot recover of plaintiff for defective title. 59. Martin v. Turner [Ky.] 115 SW 833.

60. Plaintiff and partner purchased certain lands. On foreclosure of vendor's lien, the land, less 43 acres, was sold to B, defendant becoming his surety on bonds. Bonds not being paid, land was resold including 43 acres, and purchaser transferred bid to defendant. Thereafter plaintiff sold her interest in 43 acres to defendant. Held that, since failure of plaintiff's title to 43 acres was due to defendant's failure to pay bonds, he was liable on note for price. Bates v. Whitt [Ky.] 117 SW 273.

61. Vendor need not furnish an abstract unless obligated by express contract. Thompson v. Robinson [W. Va.] 64 SE 718.

62. Where vendor is to furnish abstract by specified time, offer to furnish it if purchaser will pay two notes then due and accept bond for $1,500 is not a compliance. Carrabine & Co. v. Cox [Mo. App.] 117 SW 616.

65. Where deposit is made in escrow to be paid to seller if certain violations against property were dismissed and he did the work and paid therefor, and to the vendee if he did the work, held that vendee could not recover without showing that he performed the requisite work. Levy v. Freiman, 131 App. Div. 298, 115 NYS 996. Where purchaser paid full purchase price and vendor deposited sum with trust company to be paid to vendee if vendor did not procure and record a release of a condition or covenant in a remote deed that no dog should be kept on premises, the release contemplated was one from persons entitled to declare forfeiture of a condition, and damage if a covenant, and vendor's individual release was insufficient. Carroll v. Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 131 App. Div. 221, 115 NYS 660. Where deposit is wrongfully applied by depository to judgment against vendor, such judgment creditor is not proper party to action to recover deposit. Sell v. 86. Provision, that if purchaser refuses to take land for any cause other than insufficiency of title advancements shall be forfeited, but if title is not good money shall be refunded, held not unreasonable. Delano v. Saylor [Ky.] 113 SW 888. Where contract provided that upon breach thereof by vendee deed placed in escrow should be returned to vendor and payment made should be applied as rent, upon default vendor was entitled to return of deed and retention of payments made as rent. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666.

87. Where it was evident from contract that sale was made upon agreement that payment should be forfeited if contract was not complied with, vendor had right to declare forfeiture or enforce the contract. Griffith v. Stewart, 31 App. D. C. 29. Where contract recites that $1,000 in cash has been received and provides for a forfeiture of the same as liquidated damages if the purchaser refuses to perform, upon such default vendor may recover on note given as a part of the recited cash. Beauchamp v. Couch [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 924. Payments may be retained though in excess of actual damages. Beveridge v. West Side Const. Co., 130 App. Div. 139, 114 NYS 521. Fact that parties have expressly stipulated that in case vendee refuses to perform all payments may be retained as liquidated damages does not make applicable the doctrine of penalties and forfeitures, so as to allow vendee to recover where payments greatly exceed actual damages. Id.

88. Defendant contracted to convey land upon default a mere licensee,[89] intruder or squatter,[90] or tenant.[91] Where the purchaser refuses to go on with the contract, he is liable for buildings removed from the premises.[92] An estoppel to enforce the vendee's liability for the purchase price cannot arise out of mere matters of counterclaim.[93]

Rights of the vendee. See 10 C. L. 1960—The contract controls the rights of the purchaser in so far as it covers the matter in controversy.[94] The purchaser ordinarily has no affirmative rights where he has been the first to default,[95] and cannot recover a deposit made to secure performance unless nonperformance was not due to his fault.[96] Upon failure of title, the purchaser may recover damages for breach of the contract,[97] or the money paid under the contract,[98] together with taxes on payment of annual instalments, the first note being for $100. Purchaser agreed to pay $150 rent for any year in which he failed to pay the note as it matured. When first note matured, he paid $180, but refused to pay second. Held that $80 overpaid should be applied on second year's rent. Flowers-Carruth Co. v. Moyse [Miss.] 48 S 523. Contract provided that upon default, vendee would pay stipulated sum as rental for each year he remained in possession. He failed to make payments and surrendered bond for title, giving notes for rent. There was evidence that he had stated that he had given land up. Held not to support finding that relation was that of mortgagor and mortgagee but required finding that relation of landlord and tenant existed. Lewis v. Cooley, 81 S. C. 461, 62 SE 868.

90. Vendee who has been given possession under his contract does not become intruder or squatter within Code Civ. Proc. § 2232, subd. 4, authorizing summary proceedings to recover possession upon default and notice to vacate. Stockwell v. Washburn, 59 Misc. 543, 111 NYS 413. Provision in Code, "and has continued without permission," etc., relates to one who has entered as an intruder or squatter. Id.

91. Giving possession to purchaser under his contract of purchase is not a "letting" so as to sustain forcible entry and unlawful detainer within Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2519. Francis v. Holmes [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 881. Purchaser going into possession under his contract of purchase is not a tenant at will or by sufferance, so as to authorize forcible detainer under Sayles' Ann. St. 1897, art. 2519. Id. Summary landlord and tenant proceedings cannot be invoked to recover possession from purchaser, although contract provided that until purchase fully performed, i. e., made deferred payments, his rights should be that of a tenant and that landlord could take proceedings allowed by law to remove tenant, no tenancy in fact existing. Young v. Columbia Investment & Real Estate Co. [N. J. Law] 72 A 35.

92. Purchaser took possession of land and converted barn into house and, on discovering clouds on title, removed same with vendor's assent. When vendor perfected title, vendee refused to carry out contract. Held that he is liable for value of barn. Twitchell v. Benjamin [Wash.] 98 P 109.

93. When vender collected note belonging to vendee and retained proceeds. Warwick v. Hitchings, 50 Wash. 140, 96 P 960.

94. Provision in deed, that if grantor shall "not give good title and possession" to whole or any part of the premises, grantee could reconvey and receive back purchase money, held to cover railroad right of way across premises, known to both parties, but believed to be wrongful encoachment. Pryor v. Buffalo, 60 Misc. 447, 112 NYS 437. Where provision is made for application of payments made as not upon vendee's default, vendee is entitled to return of unpaid notes. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666. Contract providing that purchaser "agrees to comply with the above conditions" within a specified time "or forfeit earnest money" gives purchaser option of completing contract or forfeiting earnest money. Runck v. Dimmick [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 779. Where contract provided that purchase money paid should be returned if vendor failed to give bond "with terms and prices" as stated in contract, held that vendee could recover same where only bond tendered contained additional stipulations as to attorney fees and as to rights in case of default. Banks & Bro. v. Hooten, 130 Ga. 789, 61 SE 854.

95. Where vendee was first in default, the subsequent default of vendor does not authorize recovery by vendee of payments made. Foxley v. Rich [Utah] 99 P 666. Where purchaser first breaks contract by failure to pay purchase price, he cannot recover for vendor's breach of guaranty. Williamson v. Davey [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 195. Statements of secretary of corporation on refusing instalments due held not to constitute such admissions of insolvency of vendor company as to show inability to perform so as to amount to present breach and authorize recovery of money paid. Lakowschowsky v. Utopia Land Co., 111 NYS 470.

96. Vendee can only recover deposit in case failure to perform was not due to his fault. Sell v. Clarkson, 129 Div. 473, 114 NYS 316. Evidence held to show that vendee, who deposited money with depository for vendor in case conveyance was made, did not consent to application thereof on judgment of another against vendor. Id. Instrument reciting, "Upon receipt of $50 deposit on prop." located as described, contract to be drawn July 18, and on signing contract 10 per cent. cash to be paid, balance on delivery of deed. It then proceeded to state terms of payment. Held that deposit was in purchase price and not merely security to secure execution of contract. Lindenbaum v. Marx, 62 Misc. 310, 114 NYS 772.

97. Where vendor never had title and did not procure it and never delivered possespaid,[99] and expense of searching title,[1] but not premiums on insurance taken out for his own benefit.[2] Where specific performance cannot be had,[3] the purchaser's remedy is by action for damages,[4] and when specific performance may be had he has an election to sue therefor or for damages.[5] When specific performance is impossible, the purchaser is entitled to a reconveyance of land conveyed by him as part of the purchase price and to the net profits therefrom.[6] The vendor's liability on his bond against curable defects in his title is not affected by the purchaser's knowledge thereof at the time of contracting,[7] or by the fact that the purchaser has received rents and profits in excess of the damage resulting from the defects.[8] Where the purchaser sues to recover payments made with interest, the vendor may offset the rental value of the premises, with interest thereon, from the close of each year's possession.[9] A defect in title for the curing of which the purchaser may offset the expense thereof against the price must be such as to amount to a breach of the covenant of warranty,[10] and the burden rests upon the purchaser to show such defect.[11] Upon recovery of money paid because of vendor's refusal to convey, the purchaser has a lien therefor upon the property,[12] subject to the superior rights of third persons.[13]

Livezey [Colo.] 100 P 404. Where purchaser under deed reserving vendor's lien dies and vendor and widow thereafter destroys the unrecorded deed and purchase price notes, intending thereby to terminate the widow's rights, she is estopped to assert such rights especially where she becomes a tenant, and vendee paying far release of her claim cannot offset same. De Steaguer v. Pittman [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 481.

11. De Steaguer v. Pittman [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 481.

12. Where part of purchase price is paid under agreement that it is to be returned in case vendor does not furnish good title, purchaser has a lien for amount upon land in case of defective title. Delano v. Saylor [Ky.] 113 SW 888. In suit against vendor and subsequent purchaser to establish lien on land for purchase money paid, evidence held insufficient to make case for equitable relief, purchaser having failed to comply with contract within time fixed. Fowles v. Bentley [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1090.

13. Villone v. Feinstein, 132 App. Div. 31, 116 NYS 384. Whereupon denial of specific performance, purchaser is entitled to return of money paid, lien therefor may be asserted against land as against subsequent purchaser with knowledge of plaintiff's purchase. Lowe v. Maynard [Ky.] 115 SW 214. Where wife of vendor has not joined in contract and her dower has become consummate, property must be sold subject to her dower unless satisfied out of proceeds of sale. Villone v. Feinstein, 132 App. Div. 31, 116 NYS 384. In action against widow and heirs of vendor upon contract signed by vendor alone or to establish lien for money

Deficient quantity or other partial failure of consideration. See 10 C. L. 1061 Where the sale is by the acre,[14] the purchaser may recover for any deficiency, however small,[15] but if the sale is in gross,[16] no recovery or abatement of price can be had, unless there has been fraud [17] or unless the shortage is so gross as to make it evident that the parties would not have contracted had it been known.[18] The parties, of course, may expressly contract with reference to a shortage or surplus.[19] Where one conveys a definite number of acres in common to successive purchasers, any deficiency falls upon the last purchaser,[20] but where the vendor's acreage is decreased on partition of a larger tract because of its greater value, the deficiency must be borne by the grantees in proportion to their holdings.[21] Abatement of the purchase price usually may be had also for other partial failure of consideration.[22] The right to abatement for partial failure of consideration cannot be barred by laches.[23]

§ 11. Rights after conveyance.[24] See 10 C. L. 1062 Ordinarily, the execution of a deed in full performance of a contract of sale [25] merges all the provisions of the paid, held error to direct personal judgment against heirs and widow for any deficiency after sale of property under lien foreclosure. Id. Where purchaser has no actual or constructive notice of prior contract of sale, lien cannot be established against land for money paid under contract. Fowles v. Bentley [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1090. Plaintiff purchased land of widow which had belonged to her husband paying $600, which she used for her personal expenses, and $400, to satisfy a mortgage. Title was in fact in husband's heirs, who owed no debt chargeable against the land. Held that plaintiff had no lien on land for part paid to widow, though land might have been taken for widow's support. Paton v. Robinson [Conn.] 71 A. 730.

contract,[26] unless expressly preserved [27] or a contrary intent is clearly manifest.[28] Default of the grantee does not authorize the annulment of the deed,[29] unless it amounts to a breach of a condition subsequent.[30] The right of re-entry for breach of condition subsequent is not ordinarily transferable,[31] but this rule is not invariable,[32] and after a re-entry has been made the grantor has a transferable interest.[33] The right of re-entry is not destroyed by acceptance of a deed from the grantee's referee in bankruptcy.[34]

§ 12. Vendor's liens and their enforcement.[35] A. Express. See 10 C. L. 1962 Where a lien is expressly reserved to secure the payment of the purchase price,[36] the contract remains executory [37] to the extent that the legal title so called, remains in the vendor,[38] and the purchaser can only acquire the same by paying the purchase price,[39] but the interest thus retained by the vendor is not the legal title in the strict sense of that term, and is held merely for the purpose of security, without the usual incidents of legal title strictly so called.[40] The lien is assignable,[41] and, after assignment of the purchase-money note, the vendor holds the

40. Where vendor reserves lien, he holds legal title only as security and is not "seized" thereof within Code, § 2912, providing that all persons owning lands not in adverse possession shall be deemed seized. In re Miller's Estate [Iowa] 119 NW 977. Vendor's lien is not an "estate or right" in lands within Ann. Code 1892, § 2444, providing that conveyances purporting to convey a greater estate than vendor has shall pass such estate or right as he has, so as to pass under a deed. Howell v. Hill [Miss.] 48 S 177.

41. Evidence held to show absolute assignment of vendor's lien and not merely reserved legal title in trust for the assignee.[42] Fraud of the vendor in transferring a lien note is no defense to the purchaser where the vendor and assignee have settled the claims based on such fraud.[43] There seems to be a conflict of authority as to whether it descends to the vendor's heirs upon his death.[44] Upon payment, the legal title vests immediately in the purchaser.[45] A distinction should be observed between a vendor's lien and a contract lien securing the price of realty and personalty.[46] The lien is released by payment or tender of the debt secured thereby,[47] or it may be released by subsequent agreements or transactions.[48] Where the purchaser sells a part of the land to a third party, a release of the lien as to the balance, if made with notice of such third party's rights[49] and to his prejudice, releases, so far as he is concerned and to the extent of the value of such balance, the lien upon the part of the land thus sold.[50]

Rep. 674, 105 SW 1142, as holding merely that purchase-money note devolves as personalty, though secured by vendor's lien, and not that interest of vendor descends as personalty.

45. Gray v. Tribue [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 808.

46. Where land and chattels are sold for gross sum and a lien is expressly reserved to secure payment of gross sum, a contract as distinguished for vendor's lien, is created and is security for whole amount. Honaker v. Jones [Tex.] 113 SW 748.

47. A. sold seven lots to B., in consideration of vendor's lien note, and five second lien notes, which B held upon lot previously sold to C. Thereafter A. purchased first lien notes, and finally cancelled them, and released C. from second lien notes in consideration of conveyance of lot sold by B. to C. Held that sale from B. to C. was rescinded, and lots sold by A. to B. were released from lien of five second lien notes of C. Wood v. O'Hanlon [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 178. Where vendor, with knowledge that vendee has disposed of two of lots sold, accepted reconveyance of such interest as vendee had in lots sold, and resold lots not disposed of by vendee for more than amount due, lots sold by vendee were relieved from lien. Id. Where notes secured by lien have been placed in hands of an attorney for collection, and his fees as therein provided have accrued, tender of amount of note without such fees does not release lien. Honaker v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 649.

48. Evidence held to show that purchase-price notes under contract for sale on crop payment plan, endorsed without recourse to broker as commissions, were so endorsed under express agreement that they were to be no lien upon vendor's interest in crop or land. State Bank v. Cullen [N. D.] 121 NW 85. Where lien exists by virtue of written contract for interest on purchase money notes, such lien is not lost by taking of separate note not expressly stating that it is for interest or reserving lien. Honaker v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 649. Evidence held insufficient to show that release of vendor's lien was procured by fraud. Hotfil v. Deweese's Trustee [Ky.] 112 SW 1095. Where defendant's wife's contract to pay plaintiff $2,450 was conditioned upon conveying to her a certain tract, and he rescinded the contract, released his lien, and agreed to look to defendant personally for advancements, plaintiff cannot recover of wife on ground that release was fraudulently obtained by defendant. Id. Where vendor releases lien to procure court's approval of investment of infant's money in the land, infant's interest cannot be subjected to lien although release was fraudulently obtained, vendor being precluded by estoppal. Id. Taking of personal security and recovery of personal judgment, and the attempt to collect same by execution, does not ordinarily constitute a waiver. Elswick v. Matney [Ky.] 116 SW 718. Where vendor seeks to recover land for nonpayment of lien note, purchaser of vendee must show payment thereof or willingness to pay amount due, that vendor has so dealt with the lots with knowledge of his interest as to preclude recovery. Wood v. O'Hanlon [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 178.

49. Vendor held to have had notice of subsequent purchaser's rights at time of executing release. Watson v. Vansickle [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1160.

50. Watson v. Vansickle [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1160. In such case lien cannot be

(§ 12) B. Implied.[51]—See 10 C. L. 1962—The English doctrine of implied vendor's lien has been repudiated in some of the states,[52] but such lien still exists in other states [53] unless it is negatived by the terms of the contract [54] or the surrounding circumstances,[55] and no lien will be implied where land and personal property or choses in action are sold for gross sum.[56] The lien, furthermore, is an incident to a sale as distinguished from other liens wherein the title to realty is transferred,[57] and it does not exist in favor of one advancing the purchase money for the purchaser,[58] though in some cases he may acquire an equitable lien to most intents and purposes equivalent to a vendor's lien,[59] or he may be subrogated to the vendor's lien where such was the intention of the parties.[60] The taking of a mortgage for a part of the purchase price does not waive the lien as to the balance [61] unless it is so intended.[62] The lien does not become operative until default by the vendee,[63] and being a creation of equity, it will not prevail against one having superior equity.[64] It is lost by a sale of the land before the commencement of a suit to foreclose.[65] It is not waived by mere extension of time for the payment of the purchase price.[66] One asserting a waiver has the burden of proving the same.[67] In some states the lien passes as incidental to the debt upon assignment thereof,[68] while in others the assignment of the debt constitutes of itself a waiver of the lien unless a contrary intent is indicated.[69] In California the transfer of the lien note, unless for collection only,[70] extinguishes the lien.[70a]

53. Vendor has implied lien. State Bank v. Brown [Iowa] 119 NW 81.

54. Where, in payment of agreed cash amount vendor accepted part in cash and a covenant to convey certain lots in payment of balance, no lien attached. Welch v. Farmers' L. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 561. Striking out of express reservation of lien from form used held not to negative lien. Springman v. Hawkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 966. Vendor, who has delivered possession, has equitable lien for unpaid purchase price although deed recites full payment and no distinct agreement is made. Id.

55. Where vendor, knowing that vendee intended to immediately place mortgage on land to secure bonds, gave absolute warranty deed, no vendor's lien arises for unpaid balance as against mortgagee. Welch v. Farmers' L. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 561.

56. Welch v. Farmers' L. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 561. Where note given includes purchase price of personalty as well as of realty, and amount thereof is not shown, no vendor's lien exists. Snyder v. Snyder, 115 NYS 993.

57. Where mother conveys to son in consideration of one dollar and love and affection under oral promise of son to reconvey if he does not build on property and live thereon, such promise makes gift conditional but is not secured by a vendor's lien. Paris Grocer Co. v. Burks [Tex.] 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 769, 105 SW 174.

58. Lane v. Lloyd, 33 Ky. L. R. 570, 110 SW 401. Mother advancing money to son with which to purchase land with understanding that he would give her a mortgage therefor, as no vendor's lien upon his refusal to give mortgage. Poole v. Tannis, 137 Wis. 363, 118 NW 188.

59. Where money is advanced to vendee under agreement to give a mortgage, and vendee refuses to give it, party making advance has equitable lien which does not differ from vender's to such extent as to require reversal. Poole v. Tannis, 137 Wis. 363, 118 NW 864.

60. Evidence showing that third person paid vendor's lien note and that purchaser acknowledged that such payment was made for him, and that such person was entitled to lien upon land to secure repayment of such sum, held sufficient to show subrogation to vendor's lien. Munroe v. Munroe [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 878.

(§ 12) C. Remedies.[71]—See 10 C. L. 1983—Upon the default of the purchaser,[72] the vendor may rescind the contract or sue on the note and foreclose the lien[73] unless the right is barred by limitations,[74] but an assignee of the purchase price note secured by a vendor's lien has only the latter remedy unless he has succeeded to the title to the land.[75] Where a part of the land has been sold, the remainder must first be applied to the satisfaction of the lien,[76] but, where the land has been resold to several persons, each must bear pro rata the burden of the unpaid purchase money.[77] A right of foreclosure must exist[78] in the person attempting to foreclose.[79] The general rules of pleading applicable to foreclosure of liens obtain.[80] Defenses waived by the purchaser cannot be asserted by one having no substantial interest in the land.[81] The judgment of foreclosure must preserve the rights of all parties.[82] The sale must be fairly conducted[83] so as to bring an adequate price.[84]

77. Martin v. Turner [Ky.] 115 SW 833. Mortgagee will be considered a purchaser to the extent of his debt. Id.

78. Where two pieces of land, one owned by both plaintiffs who joined in a deed therefor, the other by one of them who executed a deed therefor, were sold to defendant for sum in solido or for separate amounts, but neither the relative values nor price of each, nor whether sale was by an entire contract or by separate contract, appeared, vendor's lien could not be enforced. Fostoria Gold Min. Co. v. Hazard [Colo.] 99 P 758. Where land and chattels are sold for lump sum and lien reserved therefor on the land, it may be foreclosed without showing what proportion was for the land. Honaker v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 649.

79. Vendor's lien may be enforced in favor of a grantor or vendor, though the latter is not the grantor or owner; but in either event only to the extent of his interest and for a definite ascertainable purchase price. Fostoria Gold Min. Co. v. Hazard [Colo.] 99 P 758.

80. Complaint to enforce vendor's lien, alleging that at defendant's request plaintiffs delivered deeds in escrow to be delivered to defendant upon payment of certain instalments, and that, without making such payments and while $2,500 of purchase price was due, defendant procured deed, held bad as not showing a contract to buy or sell, or whether lien was claimed as vendor's or grantor's. Fostoria Gold Min. Co. v. Hazard [Colo.] 99 P 758. Waiver of lien must be pleaded. State Bank v. Brown [Iowa] 119 NW 81.

81. Where maker of notes secured by vendor's lien conveys land to third person under agreement that latter is to pay notes and reconvey to maker upon being reimbursed, such person has no substantial interest in the land where he refuses to pay notes and cannot in suit to foreclose urge defenses of limitation and homestead waived by maker. Zeno v. Adoue [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1039.

82. Vendor agreed to acquire "railway switch track" right of way over other lands, one-half of purchase price being retained until such way was acquired. Vendor condemned a "tramroad" right of way, and, supposing that she had fulfilled her agreement, executed deed. In suit to enforce equitable lien for unpaid balance, it was proper to give plaintiff judgment for balance subject to costs of condemning right of way by purchaser, vendor to give bond for balance to secure defendant against costs. Norton Iron Works v. Moreland [Ky.] 113 SW 481. Vendor sued for rents, portion of consideration for conveyance to her two sons, one of whom had abandoned his interest, and other claimed whole by adverse possession. Petition claimed rents at $400 per year. Verdict was "We, the jury, find for plaintiff $200 for each year, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, to-wit: $800, and said lien is hereby foreclosed." Held that verdict should not be considered as finding rents for one-half interest in land and render foreclosure on whole void. Tipton v. Tipton [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 842.

83. Evidence held to show that purchaser, at sale of special receiver in vendor's lien proceedings, paid part of price of bonds with understanding that he should receive the money back in payment of a personal in-

An order confirming a sale cannot be collaterally attacked.[85] A direct suit to set aside a sale must be timely.[86] A purchaser who has notice of any fact which may avoid the title of his vendor acquired at foreclosure accepts the risk of having his title avoided.[87] In Kentucky a successful bidder who refuses to give bond is liable for any loss resulting from a resale,[88] which liability may be asserted by the commissioner or the vendor.[89] Where an insolvent purchaser refuses to give bond the commissioner may resell without reporting the sale to the court.[90]

§ 13. Enforcement of contract of sale.[91]—See 10 C. L. 1964.—Action may be brought upon the primary obligation for the purchase price, as distinguished from the notes evidencing such obligation.[92] At common law, if the contract was under seal, the suit could be brought only by the party named therein,[93] and the rule still obtains in some of the states that a contract of sale of lands is not assignable at law so as to give the assignee right to sue in his own name,[94] but under the statutes of most states the suit must be brought by the real party in interest.[95] All parties affected by the action should be made defendants.[96] The general rules of pleading apply.[97] The defenses available against an assignee depend more or less upon statute.[98] The burden usually rests on the plaintiff to debtedness of the receiver. Bowman v. Liskey, 108 Va. 678, 62 SE 942.

84. Where bank holding note merely as bailee procures foreclosure of vendor's lien securing same at time when vendor is generally known to be insane, vendor's mental capacity not being settled by the judgment will be deemed to have influenced sale and contributed to inadequacy of price. McLean v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 355.

85. Judgment confirming sale to satisfy vendor's lien cannot be collaterally attacked in suit by judgment debtor to enjoin execution of writ of possession for objections which could have been urged on exceptions to report. Bartley v. Redmon's Adm'x [Ky.] 115 SW 831.

86. Suit to set aside sale upon foreclosure of vendor's lien brought within period fixed by statute cannot be barred by laches. McLean v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 355.

87. McLean v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 355. Bank merely holding note secured by vendor's lien foreclosed same and purchased property. Vendor was insane and did not consent. Bank never paid bid and sold to defendant who acted as bank's attorney in sale of land under judgment. Held under evidence that defendant was charged with notice of invalidity of judgment and that sale was voidable at vendor's election. Id.

88. Successful bidder who refused to give bond is not relieved from liability for loss caused thereby by fact that he subsequently purchased and gave bond (Brand v. Pryor [Ky.] 115 SW 180), or by master commissioner's failure to report second sale to insolvent bidders who refused to give bond to court and secured an order requiring bond before reselling. (Id.).

96. In action against vendor by heirs of deceased vendee for breach of contract by conveying to widow individually, she having also been administratrix, widow was proper party defendant. Lewis v. Jerome [Colo.] 99 P 562.

97. Rescission by mutual agreement must be specifically pleaded under St. 1898, § 2655. Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 NW 758. Complaint in action for breach of contract to convey alleging that plaintiff was ready, able and willing to comply with his part of contract, and that defendant refused to convey, sufficiently alleged performance of acts necessary to put defendant in default. Brady v. Green [Ala.] 48 S 807. Cause of action for breach of defendant's agreement to buy land, on which plaintiff held option, plat and sell it, and to divide profits, is inconsistent with action on implied promise to pay plaintiff for services in purchasing land and may be joined in separate counts. Symmes v. Rose [Ky.] 113 SW 97.

prove all material allegations [99] put in issue,[1] although, if the suit is upon a promissory note given for the purchase price, defendant must show that plaintiff has not performed to defeat recovery.[2] The defendant has the burden of proving a counterclaim.[3] Where a recovery is sought upon an oral contract, such contract must be established by clear and positive evidence.[4] The general rules governing the admissibility of evidence apply,[5] and so, also, as to variance between the allegations and proof.[6] The verdict [7] and judgment [8] should be sufficiently broad to determine all the issues and settle the rights of the parties.

Defendant, sued for loss of profits on shipment of shingles, was entitled to be sued in county of his residence, where evidence failed to show fraud perpetrated in county where suit brought sufficient to confer jurisdiction, under Sayle's Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1194, subd. 7. McCullar Lumber Co. v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 885. Action for injury to real property, consisting of cutting and removing trees therefrom, when tort is waived and action brought in assumpsit, is transitory and must be brought in county where defendant resides. Asher v. Cornett [Ky.] 113 SW 131.

9. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 395, providing that action must be tried in county in which defendant resides at commencement of suit, an action by State Commission of Lunacy for failure of county treasurer to pay over money due for support of feeble minded children should have been transferred to county in which defendant resided when action brought, it not being an action for interference by officer of rights of third persons. State Commission in Lunacy v. Welch [Cal.] 99 P 181.

10. Under Code, § 3500, providing that, when a person has office or agency in any county, any action growing out of business of such office may be brought in county where such office is located, a real estate dealer residing in D. county could properly be sued for commissions in W. county, where he maintained agency for care of real estate there located. Gilbert v. McCullough [Iowa] 118 NW 511.

found,[11] or where the cause of action arose.[12] In some states, a transitory action may be brought in the county of the plaintiff's residence.[13] In Texas a suit upon an obligation in writing[14] may be brought where the contract is to be performed. A civil suit in a federal court must be brought in the district wherein defendant resides,[15] or, if jurisdiction depends upon diversity of citizenship, in the district where either the plaintiff or the defendant resides.[16] Under certain statutes suit may be brought against several defendants in the county where one or more of them actually reside,[17] while other statutes limit this rule to defendants who are jointly liable.[18] In such cases failure of the suit against the nonresident defendants does

11. Citizen of California could bring suit in Texas against railroad for personal injuries sustained in New Mexico, it being a transitory common-law action. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Mills [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 352. District court of El Paso county, Texas, had jurisdiction of action by passenger for breach of contract to carry from Pennsylvania to California. El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Sawyer [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 107.

12. Sureties, on insurance company's bond joined with company in suit on policy, may, under Kirby's Dig. § 4377, be sued in county where loss occurred. Neimeyer v. Claiborne [Ark.] 112 SW 387. In damage action for fraudulent representations in sale of real estate, suit was properly brought in county where fraudulent representations were made and where purchaser consummated, although defendant resided in another county. Gordon v. Rhodes [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1023.

13. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1585, subd. 8, requiring suits against nonresidents to be brought in county and precinct of plaintiff's residence, a plea of privilege, set up by nonresident defendant, sued for work and labor performed, should have been sustained where contract did not specify where payment was to be made, and suit was not brought in county of plaintiff's residence. Kramer v. Lilley [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 735. Suit on insurance policy properly brought in jurisdiction, where beneficiary resided at commencement of action and in which defendant was authorized to do business. Webster v. Columbia Nat. Life Ins. Co., 131 App. Div. 837, 116 NYS 404. Section 33 of "an act to provide for the registration, identification and regulation of motor vehicles" (99 O. L. p. 538), which provides that all actions for injury to the person or property caused by negligence of owner of any automobile, included within provisions of act, may be brought by party injured against owner in county wherein injured party resides, is an arbitrary, unjust and unreasonable classification, creates a burden and subjects a class of citizens only to certain liabilties and requirements to respond to a suit in any county in the state, which is required of no other class and is denial to them of equal protection of law, and such provisions in said act are, therefore, unconstitutional and void. Hoblit v. Gorman, 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 270.

14. Under Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1194, subd. 5, providing that suit may be brought upon obligation in writing in county in which such obligation is to be carried out, contract to deliver wood in either of two counties in alternative may be sued on in either, and plea of privilege on ground of defendant's residence in the other county will not lie. Gaddy v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 164. Order verbally taken on telephone for carload of mill products, not reduced to writing but made out on duplicate order sheet, and containing mere shipping directions, held not such written contract as statute requires. Bewley v. Schultz [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 294. Order for shipment of shingles confirmed by seller, and containing directions to ship to certain places, held insufficient to prove contract in writing for delivery of shingles at such place. McCullar Lumber Co. v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 885. Suit on general guaranty to pay note according to its tenor and legal effect, made by father of one of makers, may be brought in county where payable, although defendant resided in another county, the guaranty amounting to promise to pay at place where payable. McCauley v. Cross [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 790.

15. Under Act March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, c. 373), as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, 25 Stat. at L. 434, c. 866 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), an action on bond of public contractor brought in relation by federal government could not be brought in California when defendants were residents of Illinois. Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. U. S., 213 U. S. 10, 53 Law. Ed. —.

16. Circuit court for district of Montana was without jurisdiction to entertain suit brought by resident of Utah against resident of New York, since neither party was resident in district as required by 25 Stat. at L. 433, c. 866 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508). Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co., 210 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 1101.

17. Under Code, § 3501, providing that personal actions must be brought in county in which some of defendants actually reside, an equitable action to satisfy landlord's claim for rent due out of moneys deposited by tenant to meet claims of creditors might properly be maintained against all defendants, although only depositary and another resided in county where action was brought. Kean v. Rogers [Iowa] 118 NW 515. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 4, action against trustee in bankruptcy and bankrupt's agents to recover funds paid by latter to trustee may be brought in county where trustee and plaintiff reside against all parties, including nonresidents. Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 1146. Suit upon contract and guaranty thereof. Senn v. Connelly [S. D.] 120 NW 1097.

18. Court erred in not dismissing action, where no joint liability appeared and no liability attached to only defendant properly suable in county of forum. Southern States not necessarily defeat jurisdiction as to the others,[19] nor does dismissal as to the resident defendants necessarily preclude against those that are nonresidents,[20] but the resident defendant must be joined in good faith, and not for the sole purpose of obtaining jurisdiction against the nonresidents.[21] The residence of a party for the purpose of determining venue is his permanent, as distinguished from his temporary, place of abode.[22]

(§ 1) C. Special actions and proceedings and equitable proceedings.[23] See 10 C. L. 1967.—The venue of special or extraordinary proceedings is often specifically designated by statute.[24] In some states a suit for divorce must be brought in the county of defendant's residence, and the defendant cannot by consent waive such requirement,[25] but, where the husband has abandoned his wife and removed from the state, suit may be brought against him for alimony pendente lite in any county.[26]

Actions for penalties See 10 C. L. 1968 are governed by statute and may be brought where the cause of action arose,[27] or, if defendant be a nonresident corporation, in the district in which it operates.[28]

Life Ins. Co. v. Statham, 4 Ga. App. 482, 61 SE 886. Suit on administrator's bond brought in county where nonresident surety company maintained office, though principal resided in another county. Civ. Code 1895, § 2145. Morris v. George, 3 Ga. App. 413, 59 SE 116. Trespass on case. Rosenthal v. Rosenthal, 151 Mich. 493, 14 Det. Leg. N. 998, 115 NW 729. Evidence held to show joint liability. Rosenthal v. Rosenthal, 154 Mich. 533, 15 Det. Leg. N. 833, 118 NW 18. Action against maker and indorser of promissory note, not payable in a particular place, must be brought in county where maker resides, although indorser resides in another county. Code § 3501. Darling v. Blazek [Iowa] 120 NW 961. In suit against makers and endorser on note, where endorser was proper party to suit, makers were not entitled to have venue changed to county of their own residence, suit being brought in county of endorser's residence. Goodwin v. Burton [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 587. Suit may be brought in domicile of either drawer or acceptor of draft on joint liability for nonpayment. Milmo Nat. Bank v. Cobbs [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 345.

19. Rosenthal v. Rosenthal, 151 Mich. 493, 14 Det. Leg. N. 998, 115 NW 729.

20. Under statute providing that actions against more than one defendant must be tried where either of them resides, but that no judgment shall be rendered against the nonresident defendants without a recovery against the resident defendants unless the former have appeared and defended the action, held that, in action for personal injuries against a corporation, an individual and a firm, members of which resided in another county, judgment might properly be entered against the latter, they having appeared, although action was dismissed as against resident defendant. Williams v. Morris, 237 Ill. 254, 86 NE 729.

21. Defendant served with summons in suit on promissory note as endorser, in county other than that in which suit brought, is not bound by such service if resident defendant, sued as maker, was joined for sole purpose of obtaining jurisdiction, and not good faith to obtain judgment against him. Hawkins v. Brown [Kan.] 97 P 479. Joinder held justified when innocent party acts in good faith, believing his cause is just, but is defeated by statute of limitations after full trial. Hawkins v. Brown [Kan.] 97 P 479.

22. Action against insane defendant for wrongful death may be brought in county of legal residence, not in county where confined, although process served there. Stuard v. Porter, 79 Ohio St. 1, 85 NE 1062.

26. Although not herself resident in such county, the statute providing that in case of abandonment wife may bring suit either in county of residence at time of abandonment or in county of husband's residence at commencement of suit, not being intended to apply to nonresidents. MacKenzie v. MacKenzie, 238 Ill. 616, 87 NE 848.

27. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 63, providing that actions must be brought in county where cause of action arose, and Cr. Code Prac. § 11, providing that proceedings in penal actions are regulated by code of practice in civil cases, offense of refusing to make required reports to auditor, by corpor-

Injunctions.[See 10 C. L. 1968]—By statute, in some states, a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment must be brought in the county where the judgment was obtained,[29] and, likewise, a suit to stay proceedings must be brought in the county where the proceedings are pending.[30] A suit to enjoin a public nuisance is properly brought in the county where the act was or is to be done.[31] Proceedings to enjoin a common carrier from establishing unreasonable rates may be brought in whatever federal judicial district the defendant may be found,[32] unless the construction of the Interstate Commerce Act is necessarily involved, in which case venue must be laid in the district of which defendant is an inhabitant.[33]

(§ 1) D. Suits by and against corporations.[34]—[See 10 C. L. 1968]—At common law, a corporation could be sued only in the state where created,[35] but the venue in suits by and against corporations is now usually specifically designated by statute and must be laid accordingly.[36] Suits against corporations may, under the various statutes, be brought in the county or district in which the cause of action arose,[37]

28. Action to recover penalty for failure to comply with Act June 29, 1906 c. 3594, § 1, 34 Stat. 607 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 918), known as "28 hour-law," properly brought against nonresident corporation in district where defendant carries on business. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 169 F 69.

29. Ulber v. Dunn [Iowa] 119 NW 269. Proceedings to enjoin enforcement of judgment obtained before justice of the peace in one county could not be maintained in another county although transcript filed there. Id.

30. In suit to stay proceedings in suit pending in another county, court properly sustained objections to venue under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 17, fixing venue of actions to stay proceedings in any suit in county where suit pending, no cause of action having been stated as against defendant's nonresident in such county. Turner v. Patterson [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 565. In injunction to stay pending garnishment proceedings, petition should be filed in county where proceedings pending, although no defendant against whom substantial relief is prayed resides there, provided no relief is prayed as to matters not included in the litigation. Crawley v. Barge [Ga.] 63 SE 819.

36. Suit must be brought in accordance with requirements as to venue prescribed by statute. Wilson v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 985, 112 SW 585. Suit against railway company held not to come within any of statutory provisions as to venue. Virginia & S. W. R. Co. v. Hollingsworth, 107 Va. 359, 58 SE 572. Corporation sued for tort arising in another county was entitled to its plea of privilege where it appeared that it came within none of exceptions to rule that defendant must be sued in county of residence, enumerated by Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, and no joint tort liability with defendants against whom venue was properly laid appearing. Boehrens v. Brice [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 782.

37. Action for killing of dog by railway company need not be brought in county where killing occurred, statute requiring actions for killing horses, mules, cattle, or other stock to be brought where cause of action arose, not including dogs. El Dorado & B. R. Co. v. Knox [Ark.] 117 SW 779. Action growing out of contract of shipment of goods may, under Civ. Code Prac. § 73, be brought in county where carrier agreed to deliver goods. Wilson v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 985, 112 SW 585. Insurance company may be sued in any county in which contract of insurance was made. Code, § 3499. Petite v. Atlas Ins. Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 642. Action need not be on policy. Action to recover deposit made by policy holder comes within statute. Id. Fact that another insurance company assumed contract including obligation to return deposits to policy holder does not change rule, though such assumption was not made in county where suit brought. Id. Surety company organized under Gen. St. 1873, c. 33, might, under Code Civ. or where the corporation has an agent,[38] or does business,[39] or is domiciled,[40] or in any county where any one of the prescribed requisites of jurisdiction exist.[41] In the absence of statute to the contrary, a foreign corporation may be sued in any county in which service can be obtained.[42] Where a statute provides that process may be issued from the county of plaintiff's residence and directed to any other county for service, suit must be brought at plaintiff's domicile.[43] If suit may be brought in either of two places, the plaintiff may elect in which county to sue.[44]

[Neb.] 118 NW 571. Suit on town mutual fire insurance policy is properly brought in county where property was destroyed under Rev. St. 1899, § 1892, providing that suit may be brought in county where cause of action originated. Wicecarver v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 698. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 55 and 65, action for failure to deliver policy is properly brought in county where delivery was to have been made. Carter v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 455. Under Civ. Code Proc. § 71, providing that, where cause of action arises out of transaction with agent, suit may be brought in county where such transaction took place, action for services may be maintained by agent upon his contract of employment in county where contract was made, the president of the company being considered the company's agent as far as the contract was concerned. Ward v. Citizen's Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 751. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, § 23, providing for prosecution of suits against private corporations in county in which cause or any part thereof arose, evidence held sufficient to prima facie show contract entered into in county of suit warranting refusal to change venue. Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 194.

38. Nonresident corporation having a designated agent residing in another county than that in which real estate in suit was situated may be sued in such county, although service was had upon agent in such other county, regardless of § 10 of Organic Act providing that action shall be brought in county where defendant found. Nelson v. Deming Inv. Co. [Okl.] 96 P 742. Suit for personal injuries may properly be brought in county where defendant company's agent resides, although cause of action arose in another state and defendant's principal place of business was in another county. Laws 1903, p. 39. Cunningham v. Klamath Lake R. Co. [Or.] 101 P 213.

39. If it does business to such extent as to warrant inference that through its agents it is there present. Deatrick's Adm'r v. State Life Ins. Co., 107 Va. 602, 59 SE 489. Under Kirby's Dig. § 6068, providing that action may be brought against railway company upon liability as carrier in any county through which road passes, held that railroad running train through S county over tracks of another company might be sued for carrier's liability in that county. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jaber, 85 Ark. 232, 107 SW 1170.

40. Action for damages for negligence in not applying proper tools held not to come within provisions of Code Prac. art. 165, § 9, providing that, in cases of trespass or actions for damages arising from acts of commission, suit must be brought where damage or trespass was committed. Devons v. Lee Logging Co., 121 La. 518, 46 S 612. Suit for death through negligence of railway company may be brought in federal district in which defendant company is resident and in which it has an agent upon whom service may be had, and codefendant may be served with duplicate writs in another district. Act March 11, 1902, § 10 (32 Stat. at L. 68, c. 183, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 163). In re Dunn, 212 W. S. 374, 53 Law Ed. —.

41. In South Carolina suit may be brought against a foreign corporation in any county that plaintiff may designate, though company have no agent in such county and cause of action did not arise there. See Code Civ. Proc. 1902, § 146, relating to suits against nonresidents generally. Berry v. Virginia State Ins. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 859. Although pleadings failed to show by direct allegation that defendant corporation sued on fire policy was foreign corporation, such nonresidence might be established by inference. Id. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 25, foreign corporation authorized to do business in state may be sued in county other than that in which it has its principal office. Coca Cola Co. v. Allison [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 308. Suit for loss of passenger's baggage through foreign railway company's negligence need not be brought in county where its principal office is located. Waechter v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 41.

42. California statutes do not give foreign corporation any privilege to be sued in any particular county. Waechter v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 41. Compliance with Civ. Code, § 408, relative to filing copy of charter or articles of foreign corporation with secretary of state, does not give foreign corporation status of domestic corporation with regard to establishment of residence in state and the incidental privilege to be sued at place of residence. Id. Civ. Code, § 407, does not give foreign railroad and transportation companies any special rights with regard to establishment of residence in state and consequent privilege to be sued at any particular place. Id.

43. Under 3, Practice Act, Hurd's Stat. 1905, beneficiary under accident insurance policy could not bring suit in another county than that of his residence and confer jurisdiction by service upon superintendent of insurance. Hartzell v. Maryland Casualty Co., 139 Ill. App. 366.

44. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 2334, providing that a railway company may be sued upon contract either in county where contract was made or in that in which it was to be performed, plaintiff suing for labor performed could, at his option, bring suit in county where contract made. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Crapps, 4 Ga. App. 550, 61 SE 1126.

In Louisiana a corporation cannot be sued outside of the parish of its domicile on an implied promise to pay the debts of another.[45] Under the Texas statute, two or more connecting carriers may be sued jointly in any county in which either operates or has an agent.[46] In certain cases jurisdiction may be conferred by consent.[47] A municipal corporation can be sued in a transitory action only in its own courts,[48] but the rule requiring local actions to be brought in the jurisdiction where the cause of action arose applies to municipal corporations as well as to other corporations.[49]

That a corporation is plaintiff does not affect a statutory rule that a party may choose his forum wherever defendant may be found.[50]

(§ 1) E. Effect of improper venue and taking of objections.[51]—See 10 C. L. 1969 If want of proper venue appears on the face of the petition, objection may be raised by demurrer[52] or exception,[53] otherwise the objection must be raised by plea in abatement,[54] or by motion in proper form,[55] seasonably made.[56] The Texas statute makes it mandatory upon the court to change the venue to the proper jurisdiction whenever a plea of privilege to be sued in another county is sustained.[57] The privilege to be sued in a certain county cannot be enforced by injunction.[58] A defendant brought in by amendment has no right, under the Alabama statute, to object

52. Lumpkin v. Blewitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1072.

53. Lumpkin v. Blewitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1072. Petition filed in C. county, alleging defendant's residence in W. county, in connection with facts not showing right to sue defendant outside of W. county, open to objection to venue by way of exception. Id. Where pleadings failed to disclose fact attempted to be shown, by evidence dehors the pleadings, that defendant sued in trespass was not liable as for trespass and could in such case only be sued at its domicile, exception improperly sustained, since trial on merits is necessary to determine whether trespass or not. Buteau v. Morgan's Louisiana & T. R. & S. S. Co., 121 La. 807, 46 S 813.

54. Lumpkin v. Blewitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1072.

55. Objection based solely on ground that court has no jurisdiction to proceed because application for mandamus was not filed in proper county held not an objection going to the jurisdiction of the court, but merely to its jurisdiction to proceed, and hence, not being accompanied by any application for change of venue, was properly overruled. People v. Skene, 194 N. Y. 186, 87 NE 432.

56. Plea of privilege to be sued in county of residence comes too late where an answer has been filed. Barclay v. Deyerle [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 123.

57. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 249, c. 183. Johnson v. Lanford [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 693.

58. Motion for change of venue is proper remedy where receiver seeks to assert privilege conferred upon corporations by Act April 2, 1887, p. 120, c. 131 (Rev. St. 1895, to the jurisdiction except for fraud.[59] Objection to the venue is waived by failure to make it [60] or by appearance and participation in the proceedings,[61] unless such appearance is special and for the sole purpose of raising an objection to the venue.[62, 63] The doctrine of waiver is qualified by the principle that jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent in cases where the law has not conferred jurisdiction.[64] The mere fact that a verified plea of privilege is uncontested does not operate as an admission of its allegations, or authorize the court to sustain such plea.[65]

§ 2. When change is allowable, necessary or proper.[66]—See 10 C. L. 1970—Whether a particular proceeding comes within the statutes authorizing change of venue is, of course, a matter of construction.[67] Change of venue is usually allowed only for cause,[68] the usual grounds for change of venue, under the various statutes, being prejudice of the trial judge,[69] the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice,[70]

art. 1484). Paine v. Carpenter [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 430.

59. Under Code Civ. Proc. 1896, § 676, providing in whose district alone an original bill may be filed, a defendant brought in by amendment cannot, except for fraud, object to a conceived failure to bring suit in proper district. Prestridge v. Wallace [Ala.] 46 S 970.

60. Failure to object on ground that suit by administratrix brought in federal circuit court to recover attorney's fees earned by intestate was not in proper district constituted waiver of objection. Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 53 Law. Ed. 208. Objection not being raised by answer held to be waived. Demurrer, under Code Civ. Proc. § 92, to petition insufficient, where petition did not show venue was improper. Richardson v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 972, 112 SW 582.

61. Plea of general issue is waiver of objection to jurisdiction. Rosenthal v. Rosenthal, 151 Mich. 493, 14 Det. Leg. N. 998, 115 NW 729. Defendants sued at their domicile for trespass committed in other parish by answering accepted jurisdiction at their domicile. Bernstein v. Dalton Clark Stave Co., 122 La. 412, 47 S 753. Objection to jurisdiction, on ground of nonresidence of either party, waived by filing demurrer on grounds reaching to merits of controversy in addition to jurisdictional grounds, where under local practice defendant could have made special appearance. Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co., 210 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 1101.

62, 63. Defendants may appear specially in federal circuit court and, if objection to jurisdiction be overruled, appeal lies directly to supreme court. Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. U. S., 213 U. S. 10, 53 Law. Ed. —. Rule 22 g federal circuit court for ninth judicial circuit, that special appearance shall be treated as general unless accompanied by stipulation to appear generally if purpose of special appearance fails, held inconsistent with 26 Stat. at L. 826, c. 517 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 488, giving right of special appearance and of direct appeal to supreme court from adverse decision Id.

64. Written consent of defendant in foreclosure action, that suit might be tried in different county from that in which land was situated, conferred no jurisdiction, where Code Civ. Proc. § 144 provides that such actions must be brought in county where land situated. Silcox & Co. v. Jones, 80 S. C. 484, 61 SE 948. Civ. Code 1895, § 5869, providing that divorce suit must be brought in county where defendant resides, latter could not waive such requirement by consent, it being policy of law to impede instead of to facilitate divorces. Watts v. Watts, 130 Ga. 683, 61 SE 593.

67. Change of venue of proceedings under assignment for the benefit of creditors is authorized by Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 818 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 789), providing for change of venue in civil suits, "Civil Suit" referring to legal proceedings by which rights and remedies of private individuals are protected or enforced. 68. Act No. 309, p. 483, Pub. Acts 1905, as amended by Pub. Acts 1907, p. 212, No. 161, does not enlarge jurisdiction of courts in civil cases so as to allow change of venue in condemnation proceedings regardless of cause shown. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 154 Mich. 493, 15 Det. Leg. N. 814, 117 NW 1050.

69. Removal of cause for prejudice of the trial judge is within sound discretion of court (Kirkwood v. Summit County School Dist. No. 7 [Colo.] 101 P 343), and refusal to grant the application is not error unless a manifest abuse of discretion (Id.). Statement in affidavit held not sufficient to show abuse of discretion. Kirkwood v. Summit County School Dist. No. 7 [Colo.] 101 P 343.

70. Mills v. Sparrow, 131 App. Div. 241, 115 NYS 629; Williams v. Westminster Kennel Club, 128 App. Div. 931, 113 NYS 313. Code Civ. Proc. § 987. Ends of justice best subserved in venue where speedy trial can be had. Mills v. Sparrow, 131 App. Div. 241, 115 NYS 629. Where it appears that most of witnesses must be called from another county, at large expense and resulting in inconvenience to them, venue will be changed to such county. John Hofman Co. v. Murphy, 116 NYS 506. Where occurrences out of which action arose happened in S. county and greater number of material witnesses resided there, place of trial should have been changed to that county. Wallace v. Manning, 130 App. Div. 894, 114 NYS 972. In action for the prejudice of the trial judge,[71] and privilege to be sued in a certain place.[72] That the trial has attracted attention from the press does not necessarily furnish ground for removal.[73] If venue is originally laid in the proper county, a change in the parties does not necessitate a change of venue.[74] In some states the number of changes is limited by statute,[75] but an application for a change of venue does not deprive the moving party of his right to remove the cause to the federal courts.[78]

§ 3. Procedure for change.[77]—See 10 C. L. 1972—Jurisdiction of the subject-matter carries with it power to order a change of venue upon a proper showing.[78] The procedure for change of venue is usually prescribed by statute[79] or by rule of court,[80] and statutory requirements as to form and substance of the motion are controlling and must be closely followed.[81] In some states no application for a change price of paint in which defense was breach of warranty of quality where plaintiff's material witnesses, who resided in county where action brought, did not preponderate in number over defendant's witnesses, and where all transactions took place in county to which change was sought, venue might properly be changed to such county. Ludlow v. John Single Paper Co., 132 App. Div. 601, 116 NYS 1095. Proceedings for habeas corpus against superintendent of insane asylum and sheriff will not be changed for convenience of witnesses merely. People v. Chanler, 116 NYS 62. Venue will not be changed from rural county to either county of New York or county of Kings merely to subserve convenience of witnesses. Mills v. Sparrow, 131 App. Div. 241, 115 NYS 629. Competency of witness in another jurisdiction, not sufficient to require cause to be transferred there, though he is incompetent in jurisdiction of forum. Webster v. Columbian Nat. Life Ins. Co., 116 NYS 404. Venue of proceedings for habeas corpus against sheriff and superintendent of insane asylum will not be changed on mere ground of expense of obtaining expert witnesses. People v. Chanler, 116 NYS 62. Venue of habeas corpus proceeding, relating to person confined in insane asylum, will not be changed for mere reason that convenience of district attorney representing asylum would be subserved. Id.

71. Prejudice of trial judge against case as distinguished from parties affords no ground for removal. In re Dolbeer's Estate, 153 Cal. 652, 96 P 266. Motion for new trial in will contest. That former trial before jury had resulted in favor of proponents would not prevent judge from hearing second trial. Id. That judge in contest on will added to jury's finding of testamentary capacity ex parte finding that testatrix was free from undue influence did not show prejudice. Id.

72. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 248, c. 133, court must, upon sustaining a plea of privilege, change the venue to the county having jurisdiction. Brant v. Lane [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 229. Suit by llenor under trust deed for conversion of property sold at sheriff's sale and later resold to another, and removed from county, should have been transferred to county where property taken upon sustaining defendant's plea of privilege. Id. California statutes do not give foreign corporation any privilege to be sued in any certain place, and hence such corporation cannot demand change on such ground. Waechter v. Atchinson, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 41.

73. In absence of showing that unfair statements had been published. Noonan v. Luther, 128 App. Div. 673, 112 NYS 898.

74. No right to a change of venue arose by reason of dismissal as to part of defendants and change in prayer for relief because of events occuring after commencement of action, where venue was originally properly laid. Thomas v. Ellison [Tex.] 116 SW 1141. Defendant substituted in place of original defendant sued in proper county is not entitled as of right to change of venue to county of his residence. Healy v. Mathews [Minn.] 121 NW 428. Lessor's successor in interest being proper party plaintiff in ejectment, his appearance in action did not so change it as to require a transfer of trial to county where land situated. Code Civ. Proc. § 396. Cassin v. Nicholson [Cal.] 98 P 190.

75. Appellant after having one change of venue by consent had thereby exhausted his rights and could not thereafter move for a second one. Evansville Metal Bed Co. v. Loge [Ind. App.] 85 NE 979.

78. State v. Oldfield [Okl.] 98 P 925.

79. Change of venue in bastardy cases is purely statutory and can be exercised only in manner prescribed by statute. Affidavit for change from municipal court to circuit court held not legitimately used, although in proper form. Goyke v. State, 136 Wis. 557, 117 NW 1027.

80. Circuit court rule providing that application for change of venue, not made until cause has once been set for trial, shall be granted only at discretion of court does not apply in trial de novo. Compton v. Benham [Ind. App.] 85 NE 365.

81. Mere verified motion containing no statement that affiant verely believed he could not obtain a fair and impartial trial in division, where action is pending, is not sufficient under Ann. St. 1899, Ind. Ter. § 3556, providing for change of venue upon verified petitions supported by affidavits stating that applicant verily believes he canis necessary where the venue is laid in the wrong county.[82] An order to change place of trial on ground that impartial trial cannot be had rests largely in the discretion of the court, but a prima facie case must be made before such discretion can be exercised,[83] and the burden is upon the applicant to show to the satisfaction of the court that they will not have a fair and impartial trial in that jurisdiction.[84] In all cases where the application is applied for upon affidavits, the grounds relied on must sufficiently appear therefrom.[85] An affidavit of the merits is sometimes required,[86] and in some cases the trial court has power to determine, before granting the change, whether a cause of action exists;[87] but for the purposes of the motion to change, the allegations of the complaint will be deemed denied though no denial is actually filed.[88] If removal is sought not only from the county of the forum but from the adjoining county, the application must challenge both,[89] unless the disqualifications of the county of the forum are conceded.[90] An unauthorized order not obtain a fair and impartial trial in division where action pending. Bruner v. Kansas Moline Plow Co. [C. C. A.] 168 F 218. Mere naked averment in affidavit of general manager of foreign corporation that its principal place of business in state is in certain county is neither evidence that it has acquired such a place of business in state by complying with laws of state nor sufficient to show court that demand for removal of cause to such county is predicated upon a residence so acquired. Waechter v. Atchinson, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 41. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 146, § 9, providing that change of venue shall not be granted unless application is made by or with consent of all parties plaintiff or defendant, petition signed only by one defendant not sufficient although reciting consent of others, being mere hearsay. Tanner v. Clapp, 139 Ill. App. 353.

82. Court must order change upon sustaining of plea of privilege to be sued in another county. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 248, c. 133. Brant v. Lane [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 229. Action brought in proper county against foreign insurance company to recover upon policy was not changed by demand of claimant as substituted defendant. Rev. Law 1905, § 4096, providing for change without application, where venue laid in wrong county having no application. Healy v. Mathews [Minn.] 121 NW 428.

83. Extensive acquaintance and business and political prominence of defendant, and professional and political prominence of his attorneys, not sufficient. Noonan v. Luther, 128 App. Div. 673, 112 NYS 898.

84. Evidence held insufficient to show that defendant company in personal injury suit would be prevented by comments of local press from having fair trial. Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 222 Pa. 406, 71 A 1054.

85. Motion for change of venue for local prejudice should be denied where affidavits of supporting witnesses demonstrate that they are ignorant of facts. Bruner v. Kansas Moline Plow Co. [C. C. A.] 168 F 218. Affidavit must set forth convenience of witnesses affirmatively. Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 222 Pa. 406, 71 A 1054. Affidavit of what defendant expected to prove by each witness that each was a material witness without testimony of whom he could not safely proceed to trial, which facts were stated to counsel, sufficient, in connection with facts expected to be proved so stated that court could see their merit, although no formal affidavit of merit filed to change cause of action to county where parties and witnesses reside. Agne v. Schwab, 127 App. Div. 67, 111 NYS 8. Statement in affidavit of merits for change of venue that on a certain day, "being the day of the beginning of these proceedings, affiant had his place of residence in L. county" is sufficient averment that at commencement of action he resided in L. county. Jensen v. Door [Cal. App.] 98 P 45. Where convenience of witnesses is not controlling, an affidavit in opposition to change of venue is not defective in not giving names and addresses of witnesses resident in county where suit is brought. Mills v. Sparrow, 131 App. Div. 241, 115 NYS 629.

86. Averment in affidavit of merits that affiant "is advised and believes" that he has a good defense, not sufficient averment that advice was given by his counsel. Jensen v. Dorr [Cal. App.] 98 P 45. Averment in affidavit of merit that affiant "has fairly and fully stated all the facts to his counsel of record herein," not sufficient averment that "facts of the case" were stated to counsel. Id.

87. Trial judge might properly hear petition in mandamus and sustain demurrer thereto when it appeared that application for change on account of local prejudice was uncontested, and where same judge presided in county to which cause would have been transferred. Carpenter v. Kone [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 203.

88. Where issue raised by such denial involves right and title to land in another county, the cause must be moved to such county. Bridgers v. Ormond, 148 N. C. 375, 62 SE 422.

89. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1273, providing that on change of venue cause shall be removed to some adjoining county, court house of which is nearest that of county in which suit pending, unless it appear in application that such nearest county is subject to some objection which would have authorized change therefrom in first instance, held that application must challenge both county of forum and adjoining county if removal is sought from each. Robertson & Co. v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 205.

90. Robertson & Co. v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 205.

for a change may be validated by subsequent, statutory enactment.[91] Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, the ruling of the lower court upon a motion for a change of venue will not be disturbed.[92]

§ 4. Results of change of venue.[93]—See 10 C. L. 1974—When the action has been transferred, the court in which it was originally begun has no further jurisdiction.[94]

VERDICTS AND FINDINGS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[95]

§ 1. Definitions and nature.[96]—See 10 C. L. 1974—A general verdict is a general finding of all the facts[97] necessary to sustain it,[98] and in South Dakota, its meaning has been extended by statute so as to include a judge's finding of fact.[99] The only verdict is that which the jury announces and which is received and recorded as their finding.[1]

Special verdicts are particular findings of individual facts,[2] and a verdict containing a separate finding upon each count is in effect a separate verdict upon each count.[3] The distinction between special verdicts and special interrogatories consists mainly in their purpose, the purpose of the former being to elicit facts which

91. Action against city property changed to county in which situated, although statute requiring city to be sued in such county was not operative when order was made, but was operative before trial. People v. Syracuse, 128 App. Div. 702, 113 NYS 707.

92. Motion for change of venue on ground of local prejudice properly overruled. Hinton v. Atchison & N. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 431.

94. When order of change made and papers transmitted, court where suit was begun had no jurisdiction to vacate such order and recall papers, although through nonpayment of costs case had not been filed in court to which transmitted. Chase v. Superior Court [Cal.] 99 P 355. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 399 provides that moving party must pay filing costs in court to which case transferred, latter court has exclusive jurisdiction to require compliance therewith. Id.

95. Treats of verdicts, general and special, and of findings of fact and conclusions of law. Excludes verdicts and findings in criminal cases (see Indictment and Prosecution, 12 C. L. 1), procedure anterior to verdict, such as selection and requisites of jury (see Jury, 12 C. L. 479), and conduct and custody of jury (see Trial, 12 C. L. 2162). Excludes, also, setting aside of verdict (see New Trial and Arrest of Judgment, 12 C. L. 1070), direction of verdict (see Directing Verdict and Demurrer to Evidence, 11 C. L. 1085), and findings of courts of appeal (see Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118). Excludes, also, judgments non obstane (see Judgments, 12 C. L. 408), sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdicts (see Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118; New Trial and Arrest of Judgments, 12 C. L. 1070; Judgments, 12 C. L. 408, as to judgments non obstante for insufficiency of evidence.) Excludes, also, variance between the evidence and the pleadings (see Pleading, 12 C. L. 1323), cure of error by or in verdicts and findings (see Harmless and Prejudicial Error, 11 C. L. 1690), and saving questions for review (see Saving Questions for Review, 12 C. L. 1763), except insofar as the right of review depends upon a prior request to the trial court.

will furnish the basis of the judgment, while the purpose of the latter is to secure answers with which to test the general verdict.[4] Special findings of fact by the court are specific statements of those ultimate facts upon which the law must determine the rights of the parties.[5]

§ 2. General verdicts.[6]—See 10 C. L. 1975—When the jury are able to determine the essential issues,[7] the parties are entitled to have a general verdict returned,[8] unless they waive their right thereto.[9] In some cases a general verdict may be sufficient, though in form and substance a special verdict.[10] All reasonable presumptions are indulged in favor of a verdict,[11] and slight consideration will be given to nonsubstantial errors in wording,[12] estimation of the amount,[13] or designation of parties by name,[14] or to mere surplusage,[15] clerical mistakes or omissions,[16] or formal defects.[17] In short a verdict is sufficient so far as concerns wording and form if it be clearly intelligible,[18] and in this connection resort may be had to such aids to construction as the pleading and the evidence[19] and the record of the case,[20] but

4. By special verdict no unconditional verdict is rendered, but the jury find facts and submit questions of law arising upon them to court, while by the latter answers pertinent to, and perhaps controlling, although not necessarily fully covering, an issue framed, are given, always in connection with a general verdict. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901

5. It corresponds to special verdict of jury, is equally specific and responsive to issues and is spread at large upon record as part thereof, is like manner as is such verdict. United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 126.

7. Not required to render general verdict when unable to determine on essential issue. Larsen v. Leonardt [Cal. App.] 96 P 395.

8. Without request therefor. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796.

9. Stanards v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796.

10. In case where under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 555, only a general verdict is permissiable. Kelly v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58.

11. South Shore Gas & Elec. Co. v. Ambre [Ind. App.] 87 NE 246; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Darlington's Adm'x, 33 Ky. L. R. 818, 111 SW 360; National Biscuit Co. v. Wilson, 169 Ind. 442, 82 NE 916. Not construed strictly as pleadings are. City Council of Montgomery v. Shirley [Ala.] 48 S 679. Verdict is to have reasonable intendment and must not be avoided except from necessity. Kelley v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58.

12. There is no such substantial difference between "1,000 dollars" and "dollars 1,000" as to make verdict uncertain. South Chicago City R. Co. v. Alton, 137 Ill. App. 364.

13. Where verdict was for $300 instead of for $299. Gambrell v. Gambrell [Ky.] 113 SW 885.

14. Use of "et al" to designate other defendants. Pelton v. Goldberg [Conn.] 70 A 1020. Where nickname or alias such as "Pennsylvania Railroad Company" is used, it being clear that defendant, a subsidiary of "Pennsylvania Railroad Company," and owned by the "Pennsylvania Company" was meant. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Darlington's Adm'x, 33 Ky. L. R. 818, 111 SW 360.

15. Seal v. Goebel, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 433. That part of the verdict which is without the province of the jury will be disregarded as surplusage, as where they attempt to tax costs. Southern R. Co. v. Oliver, 1 Ga. App. 734, 58 SE 244. Fact that some parts of verdict are unnecessary and immaterial furnishes no ground for venire de novo, but they should be disregarded as surplusage. Kelley v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58.

16. Omission of dollar mark or word "dollars" does not render verdict fatally defective. City Council of Montgomery v. Shirley [Ala.] 48 S 679. Use of "defendants" instead of "defendant" not material. Springer v. Siltz, 133 Ill. App. 552. In action of claim and delivery, where verdict did not specify in whose possession property was. Segars v. Segars [S. C.] 63 SE 891.

17. Verdict in form as follows: "We, the jury find that the plaintiff has sustained damages and we fix the amount of plaintiff's damages at twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500)," held sufficient though informal. Sandoval Zinc Co. v. Hale, 133 Ill. App. 196. Verdict in ejectment taken in open court, "for plaintiff binding instructions," though informal, held to have but one meaning, that plaintiff recovers. Brewer v. Lohr, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 461.

18. Sufficient if court can understand it. Kelley v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58. A motion for a venire de novo will not be sustained unless the verdict is so defective and uncertain upon its face that no judgment can be pronounced upon it. Id. Finding in favor of plaintiff "upon each and all the four causes of action" in complaint is sufficient. Mize v. Rocky Mountain Bell Tel. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 971. In action in which counterclaim was filed, verdict "first for defendant; * * * and second * * * for plaintiffs * * * one suit to offset the other," held free from ambiguity. Beaumont Rice Mills v. Campbell [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 971.

19. Clarke Bros. v. Stowe [Ga.] 64 SE 786; Slayden & Co. v. Palmo [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1054. May supply omission of dollar sign. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Mote, 131 Ga. 166, 62 SE 164. "Five thousand" in verdict construed to mean "five thousand dollars." Cox v. High Point R. & S. R. Co., 149 N. C. 86, 62 SE 761. Verdict is construed in light of evidence though not part of rec-

the pleadings and the evidence cannot be looked to in order to ascertain facts not found,[21] nor will actual doubt as to the amount be construed against the unsuccessful party,[22] and a verdict cannot be aided by any act of the successful party.[23] The verdict must conform to the pleadings [24] and the issues presented thereby,[25] but no finding is necessary upon immaterial issues [26] or upon issues eliminated in course of trial.[27] It must also be consistent with the evidence,[28] and in conformity with the instructions.[29] It is held in some states that an instruction though erroneous is nevertheless the law of the case and must be followed by the jury,[30] but the majority rule is otherwise.[31] The verdict is presumed to include a finding upon all the issues necessary to its validity,[32] and none other,[33] and to exclude all theories ord under Ky. St. 1903, § 4639. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Darlington's Adm'x, 33 Ky. L. R. 818, 111 SW 360. When there is but one counterclaim and but one counterclaimant, a verdict for "counterclaimants" will be construed as a verdict for the counterclaimant. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Rudy [Ind. App.] 87 NE 555.

21. Where verdict found value per acre but not total value of number of acres. Slayden & Co. v. Palmo [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1054.

22. If it is not apparent whether the verdict is for single or multiple damages, presumption is that jury found on basis of multiple damages. Henning v. Keiper, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 488.

23. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Rudy [Ind. App.] 87 NE 555.

24. Should not be for less amount than possible thereunder. National Fowler Bank v. Burch [Ga. App.] 64 SE 282. Where action was for recovery of money only, verdict was improper which found for a certain amount in cash and for three notes. Wiruth v. Lashmett [Neb.] 117 NW 887. In action to rescind contract, verdict should not award damages for use of land when not asked for. Woifinger v. Thomas [S. D.] 115 NW 100. Where suit is on two causes of action, one or both amounts sued for must be allowed, and allowance of less amount is not harmless to defendant unless plaintiff's cause is established beyond doubt. Burns Moore Mining & Tunnel Co. v. Watson [Colo.] 101 P 335.

25. Clarke Bros. v. Stowe [Ga.] 64 SE 786. Verdict cannot be based on an issue not presented or tried. Fowler v. Anderson, 132 App. Div. 603, 116 NYS 1092. Verdict held not responsive to issues. Litchfield Min. & P. Co. v. Beanblossom, 138 Ill. App. 122. When issue is taken on plea and there is no special replication thereto and plea is proven, defendant is entitled to verdict. Alabama Great So. R. Co. v. McWhorter [Ala.] 47 S 84.

26. Fisher v. Frank [Cal. App.] 97 P 95.

27. When pending trial of claim and delivery, part of property sued for is surrendered. Gambrell v. Gambrell [Ky.] 113 SW 885. Better practice in claim and delivery is to find that articles shown to belong to defendant do so belong to him, but such finding is not necessary. Id.

28. Clarke Bros. v. Stowe [Ga.] 64 SE 786. Verdict is sufficient unless clearly and manifestly against the weight of evidence. Chicago City R. Co. v. Phillips, 138 Ill. App. 438; Central Brew. Co. v. American Brew. Co., 135 Ill. App. 648; Yezner v. Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co., 140 Ill. App. 61. A verdict for a less amount than is possible in conformance with evidence is inconsistent. National Fowler Bank v. Burch [Ga. App.] 64 SE 282. Should not be contrary to the preponderance of the evidence, though it may be based on conflicting evidence. Wolfinger v. Thomas [S. D.] 115 NW 100. Verdict must not award damages not shown. Id. Verdict must conform to admission of parties. Bauer Cooperage Co. v. Shelton [Ky.] 114 SW 257. Where answer has several paragraphs, verdict is sufficient if it supports any one thereof. Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Halstead [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1098.

App.] 110 SW 1002.

30. Fritz v. Sayre & Fisher Co. [N. J. Law] 72 A 425.

31. Verdict in consonance with law will be sustained though contrary to erroneous instruction. Dubinski Elec. Works v. Lang Elec. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 169; O'Neill v. Thomas Day Co., 152 Cal. 357, 92 P 856. Where court erroneously instructed jury to disregard certain counts of complaint, defendant was not prejudiced by jury's failure to follow such instruction. Dickson v. Geo. B. Swift Co., 238 Ill. 62, 87 NE 59.

32. Consideration in collateral proceeding. Webb v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 171. General verdict for plaintiff includes finding of all facts necessary to his case. Barrett v. Dessy [Kan.] 97 P 786; Larsen v. Leonardt [Cal. App.] 96 P 395. In action on bond to release attachment, general verdict for plaintiff finds, upon only issue raised, that bond sued on is bond as executed. Dackich v. Barich, 37 Mont. 490, 97 P 931. Where evidence is conflicting upon various matters, but verdict is for plaintiff for full amount claimed, it is to be assumed that jury found in his favor upon them all. O'Shea v. Vaughn, 201 Mass. 412, 87 NE 616. Element of nonresidency being necessary to sustain verdict for plaintiff, it is presumed to have been found. McDowell v. Friedman Bros. Shoe Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1028. When three clauses of inconsistent therewith,[34] or with the court's instructions.[35] The verdict may relate back so as to cure a defect in the pleading.[36] A verdict is not invalid because it awards less than the plaintiff is entitled to,[37] provided such result has been reached in a proper manner.[38]

§ 3. Special verdicts and interrogatories.[39] When proper. See 10 C. L. 1976—Special interrogatories were not unknown at common law,[40] and are now quite generally authorized by statute,[41] the courts being often vested with considerable discretion in regard thereto,[42] sometimes extending even to submissions upon the court's own motion.[43] On the other hand, the court may properly refuse to submit questions covered by a special verdict,[44] or by other questions already submitted,[45] or which are evidentiary in their character,[46] or which ask the jury to construe a written instrument,[47] or to determine immaterial and undisputed facts,[48] or the answers to which could throw no light upon the general verdict.[49] It is improper for special findings to accompany a directed verdict.[50] petition allege negligence, and answers to interrogatories as to two find no negligence, it will be presumed that jury found negligence under third clause to sustain verdict necessitating finding of negligence. National Biscuit Co. v. Wilson, 169 Ind. 442, 82 NE 916. Consideration of codefendant's crossbill presumed. Bowman v. Saigling [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1082. Counterclaim presumed to have been considered though no mention of it was made in verdict. Nowell v. Mode, 132 Mo. App. 232, 111 SW 641.

33. Verdict will not be presumed to have been based upon theory not essential to sustain it, and hence, where petitiin sought recovery of rent for 4 years at $400 per year, verdict reading "We the jury find for the plaintiff $200 for each year 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, towit: $800 and said lien is hereby foreclosed," held not to conclusively appear to be rent on undivided one-half interest in land. Tipton v. Tipton [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 842.

34. Held that verdict for defendant necessarily rejected plaintiff's theory as to the manner of the accident. Flower v. Continental Casualty Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 761.

35. Verdict presumed to be based upon grounds to which it is confined by instructions. Fowler v. Anderson, 132 App. Div. 603, 116 NYS 1092.

36. Nowell v. Mode, 132 Mo. App. 232, 111 SW 641.

37. Plaintiff in replevin who has secured general verdict is entitled under Act April 19, 1901, P. L. 88, to writ of retorno habendo, though there is no finding of damages. Reber v. Schroeder, 221 Pa. 152, 70 A 556.

40. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901. Power to submit special interrogatories does not depend upon statute or consent of parties, but is discretionary with court. Id.

41. When so requested, the trial court should submit questions material to the issue. Steber v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 502.

42. Within trial court's discretion to submit proper questions to jury Hill v. Hayes, 199 Mass. 411, 85 NE 434. It is within discretion of court to submit special questions upon any or all issues, under Rev. St. 1898, § 3163, and error cannot be imputed therein unless there be abuse of discretion. Prye v. Kalbaugh, 34 Utah, 306, 97 P 331. Submission of special questions under St. 1898, § 2858, is within discretion of court. Sufferling v. Heyl [Wis.] 121 NW 251. Conclusions of court on submission of special interrogatory will not be disturbed unless manifestly wrong as disclosed by record, due regard being had for court's superior advantages. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102.

43. Under Code, § 3727, court may submit special questions on own motion, without first submitting them to counsel. Miles v. Schrunk [Iowa] 117 NW 971.

44. Ryan v. Oshkosh Gaslight Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 264; Steber v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 502. Though they differ in form and phraseology. Redepenning v. Rock, 136 Wis. 372, 117 NW 805.

45. Refusal to submit a special issue is not error where question is fully covered in issues presented; Pearson v. Millard [N. C.] 63 SE 1053; Farmers' & Merchants' Bank v. Germania Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 902; Maxwell v. Wellington [Wis.] 120 NW 505. No special interrogatory need be given on an evidentiary fact properly submitted to the jury in an instruction on another question given. Palmer v. Schulz [Wis.] 120 NW 348.

46. Proposed issue held not to apply to amount of damages, the true matter in controversy. Vanstory Clothing Co. v. Stadiem, 149 N. C. 6, 62 SE 778.

47. Reed v. Light, 170 Ind. 550, 85 NE 9.

48. Romans v. Thew [Iowa] 120 NW 629.

49. The purpose of requiring answers to special questions proposed by the defendant being to determine whether or not the jury would be able to find in favor of plaintiff upon separate elements of case. Larsen v. Leonardt [Cal. App.] 96 P 395. Refusal to give special interrogatory is not fatal error where either answer would not conflict with general verdict. Ruppel v. United Railroads [Cal. App.] 101 P 803.

Request for and submission of special issues or interrogatories.[See 10 C. L. 1977]—Error cannot be predicated upon failure to submit special issues in the absence of a request therefor,[51] or where such failure is not prejudicial.[52]

Form and requisites of special interrogatories.[See 10 C. L. 1977]—While the form in which issues shall be submitted lies largely in the discretion of the court,[53] and is generally sufficient if in conformity with the pleadings,[54] such issues should conform to the evidence,[55] be few in number,[56] clear and concise,[57] definite and certain,[58] and specifically directed to a matter in issue,[59] with no indication as to the answer.[60] Each interrogatory should call for a single finding of fact[61] tending to limit or explain the general verdict,[62] and answerable independently if the verdict returned.[63] Questions calling for special verdicts should not be in the alternative.[64] They need not recite evidentiary facts,[65] and, so far as regards form, will be held regarded. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Watkins Merchandise Co., 76 Kan. 813, 92 P 1102.

51. Sullivan v. Fant [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 507. Under Sayles' Ann. St. 1888-89, art. 1331, appellant must have requested submission of issue in order to predicate error upon failure to find therein. Marbry v. Citizens' Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 105 SW 1156. Failure to submit question not requested, even on contested matter, is not necessarily error, as by Laws 1907, p. 978, c. 346, such omitted matter shall be deemed determined by court in conformance with judgment. Bratz v. Stark [Wis.] 120 NW 396. It is duty of each party to submit for himself such special interrogatories as he may desire to have answered, and not depend upon those submitted by other party. 54. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moran [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 625.

55. Held that evidence warranted submission of issue of party, being innocent purchaser. Downs v. Stevenson [Tex. Civ. App.] 119 SW 315.

56, 57. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901.

58. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901; Second Nat. Bank v. Gibboney [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1064. Special interrogatory is sufficiently definite if its meaning is clear when viewed in light of testimony to which it plainly refers, and is not necessarily objectionable for failure to specify time and place. Ruppel v. United R. Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 803.

59. Held that question, "Do you find that there was such a man as H?" was objectionable as not asking for fact in relation to his existence. Dorwin v. Hagerty, 137 Wis. 161, 118 NW 799. Inclusion of immaterial questions, if not objected to, is not fatal. Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 136 Wis. 481, 117 NW 1007.

60. "Not" should be omitted in phrase "Is it not a fact, etc.?" Romans v. Thew [Iowa] 120 NW 629.

Dalton [Ind. App.] 87 NE 552. Question as to whether party had right to and did do certain thing is not double, especially when answered in the affirmative. Wankowski v. Crivitz Pulp & Paper Co., 137 Wis. 123, 118 NW 643. If unchallenged, a question may be sufficient which does not of itself cover a distinct issue. Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 136 Wis. 481, 117 NW 1007. Interrogatories should not be mixed questions of law and fact, as request for special finding whether engineer was negligent was refused as being request for special verdict and not for answer to special question and as calling for conclusion upon all the facts. McGuire v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 138 Iowa, 664, 116 NW 801. Question as to whether town officers had notice of light being out of repair. Town of Newcastle v. Grubbs [Ind.] 86 NE 757. Issues should be so framed that when answered they will support the general verdict and judgment, 62. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901; Holler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 149 N. C. 336, 63 SE 92. Not error to exclude interrogatories to which no answers could have been made that could have overthrown general verdict. Second Nat. Bank v. Gibboney [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1064.

63. Jury, having returned verdict for defendant, are not required to answer written interrogatories submitted to them to be answered only in case they returned verdict for plaintiff. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901.

64. Question "Did the defendant company have knowledge of the defective condition of the controller, or ought it to have known of such defective condition?" is objectionable. Gay v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co [Wis.] 120 NW 283.

65. Blankavag v. Badger Box & Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 380, 117 NW 852; Palmer v. Schulz [Wis.] 120 NW 348. Court need not submit questions not ultimate in their nature. Engvall v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 121 NW 12. Held that it was not error to refuse to include question "Did defendant fail to exercise ordinary care in leaving the opening in the condition as to lights, barriers, guard rails, etc., in which it was left on the night?" and that question "Was such open space properly guarded at the time of the injury to decedent?" was rightly given in preference. Palmer v. Schulz [Wis.] 120 NW 348.

sufficient if they present the case fully [66] and substantially.[67] Questions relative to separate and distinct defenses should be submitted separately,[68] but a single question need not be submitted separately as to the several parties affected.[69]

Form and requisites of special verdict. See 10 C. L. 1980—While a special verdict may be sufficient in form though unskillfully framed,[70] it is important that it be specific and responsive to the special question submitted,[71] that it show the specific grounds upon which it is based,[72] and that it contain facts, as distinguished from mere evidence of facts,[73] sufficient to sustain the prevailing issue.[74] Where, however, it is difficult to differentiate conclusions, ultimate facts and evidentiary facts, the only safe plan is to put them all into the special verdict.[75] While ordinarily the special findings should be only upon the issues raised by the pleadings,[76] they are not limited to the exact extent of such issues,[77] nor will an immaterial variance therefrom be regarded as error.[78] Special findings should conform to the instructions [79] and proof,[80] and should as fully answer all interrogatories [81] as far as pos-

67. Mere phraseology is immaterial. Uecker v. Zuercher [Tex. App.] 118 SW 149.

68. Assumption of risk and contributory negligence should be submitted separately where the jury might find different, consistent answers to each, but otherwise they may be submitted together. Campshure v. Standard Mfg. Co., 137 Wis. 155, 118 NW 633. Submission as to contributory negligence held, under evidence, sufficient to cover assumption of risk, both being dependent upon same facts. Bucher v. Wisconsin Central R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 518.

69. Held not error to fail to present negligence of one defendant separately from that of another. Murphy v. Herold Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 294.

70. Larson v. Foss, 137 Wis. 304, 118 NW 804. Special finding is not rendered uncertain by mere misspelling of word, as where "blame" is spelled "plane." Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Darlington's Adm'x, 33 Ky. L. R. 818, 111 SW 360.

71. It is insufficient to answer with "did not know," or "unable to determine," proper questions to which party is entitled to have an answer, under Code Civ. Proc. § 625. Larsen v. Leonardt [Cal. App.] 96 P 395.

72. In negligence case where three grounds were alleged, on two of which there was a defense of assumption of risk, special verdict which fails to show on which of three grounds it is based held defective. Reffke v. Patten Paper Co., 136 Wis. 535, 117 NW 1004.

73. Finley v. Meadows [Ky. App.] 119 SW 216; Ives v. Newbern Lumber Co., 147 N. C. 306, 61 SE 70. Setting out of evidence is not equivalent to a finding, whether set out in whole or in part. Light v. Schneck's Estate [Ind. App.] 86 NE 442. Finding from nunc pro tunc entry that judgment of forfeiture was rendered before suit was brought on forfeited recognizance is not finding of evidentiary facts only. Axtell v. State [Ind. App.] 86 NE 999. Setting out of order verbatim in answer to special interrogatory does not necessarily make it finding of evidenciary fact. Mellett v. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. [Ind. App.] 86 NE 432. Evidentiary facts unnecessary. Rich v. Morisey, 149 N. C. 37, 62 SE 762.

74. Findings of existence of defect, that company knew or should have known thereof, and that such defect was the proximate cause of the injury, held sufficient where there was no finding that defect had existed sufficient length of time for company to have repaired it. Gay v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 283. Every issuable controverted fact must be found by jury upon appropriate issues. Rich v. Morisey, 149 N. C. 37, 62 SE 762. Special verdict must be supported by sufficient findings of fact upon all elements essential to judgment. Finley v. Meadows [Ky. App.] 119 SW 216. Verdict finding that at commencement of suit in replevin plaintiff was owner and entitled to possession of property, but failing to find detention by defendant is insufficient. Barnes v. Plessner [Mo. App.] 119 SW 457. Special verdict should find facts necessary to enable court from pleadings and verdict to render judgment. Finley v. Meadows [Ky. App.] 119 SW 216.

75. Can do no harm if they turn out in opinion of court to be evidentiary facts, and their absence might be fatal if they should turn out to be inferential facts. Fraser v. Churchman [Ind. App.] 86 NE 1029.

76. Hahl & Co. v. Southland Immigration Ass'n [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 831; Martin v. Knight, 147 N. C. 564, 61 SE 447.

77. Where, in action by railroad company to restrain owner of land from building on right of way, the question of title is raised, finding on such title need not be limited to land occupied by buildings or to time that they remained on land. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089.

78. Variance held immaterial, within Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, providing that variance between pleading and proof is immaterial where not misleading. Bollinger v. Bollinger [Cal.] 99 P 196. Finding of gross profits in answer to issue as to net profits is sufficient, where there was no evidence from which they might be distinguished. Hahl & Co. v. Southland Immigration Ass'n [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 831.

79. If possible, the instructions will be so construed on review that they will not be in conflict with special verdict. Antonian v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877.

80. See Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118.

81. Special verdict should properly cover

sible [82] under the evidence.[83] No answer is necessary, however, to questions involved in immaterial issues.[84] Special interrogatories are usually required to be answered by "yes" or "no." [85]

Interpretation and construction. See 10 C. L. 1980—Special verdicts and finding should be reasonably interpreted [86] in the light of the evidence,[87] instructions,[88] record,[89] and other findings in the case.[90] All necessary or reasonable inferences from a finding will be allowed,[91] but findings will not be unduly extended in this manner.[92] Findings cannot supply necessary averments of the pleadings,[93] though they may show such a state of facts as to render errors in rulings on pleadings harmless.[94] Findings upon immaterial issues [95] and upon matters not in issue [96] will be ignored. The absence from a special verdict of a finding of fact in favor of the party having the burden of proof is equivalent to a finding against him.[97]

§ 4. Conflicts between verdicts and findings.[98] In general. See 10 C. L. 1981—Although the findings may not be irreconcilable with each other and with the general verdict, when some doubt is raised from the whole record as to the correctness of the result, a new hearing will be allowed.[99]

General verdicts and special findings. See 10 C. L. 1981—Special findings control the general verdict [1] whenever, in the light of the evidence [2] and aided by all reason-all the material issues covered by the interrogatories. Bratz v. Stark [Wis.] 120 NW 396.

82. Ordinarily, finding is sufficient when answer is made by jury in accordance with their best ability. Cockerill Zinc Co. v. Streets [Kan.] 101 P 475.

83. Answers are sufficient if as definite as evidence will permit. King v. King [Kan.] 100 P 503.

84. Failure to answer a question involved in an immaterial issue held not reversible error, especially when appellant did not request the submission of such issue, and hence was not, under Sayles' Rev St. 1888-89, art. 1331, entitled to urge failure to find upon same as error. Mabry v. Citizens' Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 105 SW 1156.

85. Answer "not sufficient evidence," is no answer at all. Where evidence is insufficient, answer should be "no." Union Trac. Co. v. Howard [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1103. Answer "We do not know," held insufficient. Town of Newcastle v. Grubbs [Ind.] 86 NE 757.

86. "No," in answer to "Do you find there was such a man as H " means there was no such man in the transaction. Dorwin v. Hagerty, 137 Wis. 161, 118 NW 799.

87. Held that finding by jury that plaintiff was going to doctor's office was sufficient under circumstances to negative claim that he was riding for mere pastime. Ferguson v. Traux, 136 Wis. 637, 118 NW 251. Finding that plaintiff worked certain number of days as foreman is sufficient finding of how many days he worked under second contract, where evidence was that all work done as foreman was under second contract. Larson v. Foss, 137 Wis. 304, 118 NW 804.

88. Held that question of assumption of risk was sufficiently submitted by a question as to contributory negligence and instructions of court pertaining to evidentiary facts reflecting on assumption of risk. Bucher v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 518.

the several counts state different causes of action [13] or where the parties are different.[14] Similarly, a general verdict for the plaintiff upon a single count alleging several causes of action is proper only where all of the causes of action so alleged are sufficient.[15] So, also, separate verdicts should be rendered where separate actions are consolidated.[16]

A verdict may be rendered against one defendant and for another,[17] and apportionment of damages between joint wrongdoers is sometimes allowed.[18]

§ 6. Submission to jury, rendition, and return.[19]—See 10 C. L. 1984.—Only the issues which are sustained by the evidence should be submitted.[20] The jury cannot be required to return a verdict if they disagree,[21] but, where a verdict is returned, it must be the result of proper deliberation as distinguished from what is commonly called a quotient verdict,[22] though it is entirely allowable to use the quotient method of computation in course of deliberation, provided there be no prior agreement to abide by the result thus reached, and such result be afterwards properly ratified,[23] and a verdict will not be set aside as a quotient verdict in the absence of clear and satisfactory evidence to such effect.[24] The verdict must also represent the determination of the jury upon the merits, as distinguished from a compromise.[25] A party is entitled to have the jury polled upon the return of a verdict,[26] in order to determine whether it represents that unanimity of opinion which the law generally contemplates,[27] and for this purpose their presence when the verdict is received is essential.[28] The jury need not answer improper interrogatories,[29] but must return a special verdict when requested as provided by statute.[30] In some states the verdict may be returned orally,[31] but usually it must be in writing and signed.[32]

25. Verdict for less than plaintiff claims or is really entitled to and for more than defendant admits is not necessarily a compromise. Hart v. Denise, 75 N. J. Law, 82, 66 A 1085. When damages are liquidated and plaintiff testifies to a certain sum as due, while defendant testifies to a smaller sum, or where it appears from evidence that plaintiff is entitled to nothing, a verdict for plaintiff for a sum different from that testified to by either party will be held to be a compromise verdict; but it is otherwise where damages are unliquidated, and testimony upon which same is based consists of expert opinions. Lawson v. Wells Fargo Co., 113 NYS 647.

§ 7. Amendment and correction.[33]—See 10 C. 69. Findings not necessary in equitable action. Clambey v. Copland [Wash.] 100 P 1031; In re City of Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 1013; Gould v. Austin [Wash.] 100 P 1029. Court need not make findings of fact in equitable proceeding, but to do so may not be prejudicial error. Tacoma Gas & Elec. L. Co. v. Pauley, 49 Wash. 562, 95 P 1103.

70. Defeated party is entitled to special findings of fact by court in action at law in circuit court without jury by stipulation, under Rev. St. § 649, when it is doubtful whether he could otherwise properly present questions of law involved to appellate court. Joline v. Metropolitan Securities Co., 164 F 650.

71. Written opinion cannot take the place of formal findings and conclusions. New York Life Ins. Co. v. McDearmon, 133 Mo. App. 671, 114 SW 57. Under Rev. St. §§ 649, 700, an opinion of the trial judge, giving the reasons for his decision in an action at law, is not a special finding. United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 126.

72. Greve v. Echo Oil Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 904.

73. Finding of fact is the ultimate or general fact found and is generally based upon detail facts and circumstances shown by the evidence. Clambey v. Copland [Wash.] 100 P 1031. Finding that a deed was given as security is such and not a mere conclusion of law. Id.

74. Court need not make findings upon evidentiary matters, but only on ultimate facts. Maury v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 812; Haring v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 389; Leggat v. Blomberg, 15 Idaho, 496, 98 P 723. It is unnecessary for the court to make findings of probative facts, but such findings will not vitiate the findings of ultimate fact if evidence is sufficient to support them. Barry v. Beamer [Cal. App.] 96 P 373; American Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Fowler [Ind. App.] 88 NE 118. Probative facts sufficient, if ultimate fact flows therefrom as necessary conclusion. Barry v. Beamer [Cal. App.] 96 P 373; Leggat v. Blomberg, 15 Idaho, 496, 98 P 723.

75. City of Helena v. Hale [Mont.] 100 P 611; Craigo v. Craigo [S. D.] 118 NW 712; Lyden v. Spohn-Patrick Co. [Cal.] 100 P 236. Findings must sustain all material issues of fact, or judgment based thereon will be against law. Aydelotte v. Billing [Cal. App.] 97 P 698. Findings should include all issues necessary to sustain judgment. Montgomery v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1061. Finding that stipulation is part of contract held material to validity of contract. Butler v. Agnew [Cal. App.] 99 P 395.

Immaterial issues: Negligence which did not contribute to plaintiff's injury is not material. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650.

Finding outside the issues not required. Columbia N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089. In action for specific performance of contract of sale, the material issue is centered in contract, and, when court finds that there was no such contract, it is immaterial that there is no finding as to consent given to plaintiff to enter on land, or as to knowledge of such permission and entry by third party purchaser. Gish v. Ferrea [Cal. App.] 101 P 27.

Findings sufficient if they substantially cover all material issues, though not in identically same language as pleadings. Aydelotte v. Billing [Cal. App.] 97 P 698. Failure to make a more complete finding is not material where it appears that it would have been unavailing. Id. Held that finding sufficed to sustain the judgment of the trial court as to amount of bonds necessary to issue in order to charge the defendant at all. Zimmermann v. Timmermann, 193 N. Y. 486, 86 NE 540.

Findings insufficient where court fails to find upon material issue of agency. Winchester v. Becker [Cal. App.] 97 P 74. Held that finding that no accounting had been made by defendants to plaintiff was not finding that there had been no settlement.

not uniform as to the necessity of a request for findings.[77] In some states a request is essential to the propriety of findings by the court.[78] No express finding of a fact necessarily involved in a finding made,[79] or of a fact which is implied by law,[80] is necessary, and where the evidence is conflicting, the court may be required to find only such facts as are deducible therefrom.[81] The marking of a proposed finding as "refused" on the margin does not have the effect of making it a finding in the case.[82]

The findings of fact should be confined to the issues[83] and be specific in their application thereto,[84] though they are not necessarily invalid because stated in general terms[85] or included in the judgment,[86] or are misplaced or misnamed,[87] or are not separately stated from the conclusions of law,[88] provided they be sufficiently definite and certain to indicate the intention of the court.[89] In the federal courts, the findings may be either general or special but not both.[90] Findings must be

Craigo v. Craigo [S. D.] 118 NW 712. General finding that all material allegations of answer are supported by evidence and true, and that all material allegations of complaint in conflict with foregoing findings are not supported by evidence and are not true, is insufficient. Sterrett v. Sweeney, 15 Idaho, 416, 98 P 418.

76. Wilson v. Dahler [Cal. App.] 99 P 723. Under procedure permitting no reply, matter is put in issue by answer alone. Peck v. Noee [Cal.] 97 P 865. No finding is necessary upon issue not raised by pleadings. Ward v. Sherman [Cal.] 100 P 864. Findings should be responsive to case made by pleadings. Uhrlaub v. McMahon, 15 Idaho, 346, 97 P 784. Findings are sufficient if they embrace all facts necessary to constitute particular cause of action alleged in complaint, although all allegations of complaint are not particularly found. Great Western Gold Co. v. Chambers [Cal.] 101 F 6.

77. Duty to make findings does not depend upon request of parties. Davies v. Angelo [Cal. App.] 96 P 909. Plaintiff must procure findings by the court, which will sustain a judgment in his favor if he prevails. Triest v. New York, 193 N. Y. 525, 86 NE 549. On appeal from probate court, no finding was necessary, in absence of request, upon issue as to mental capacity of appellant at time of execution of note, amount of which was deducted by administrator from appellant's share of decedent's estate, where such issue was not sole issue in case. Christians v. Christians [Minn.] 121 NW 633. In absence of request therefor, error cannot be predicated upon failure to make finding. Cornelius v. Washington Steam Laundry [Wash.] 100 P 727.

78. Not reversible error to make findings without request, if no prejudice results therefrom. Ryan v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 464.

79. Finding of injury from certain acts of municipal corporation, causing injury from coal dust, may import a finding that such acts were unreasonable. Gordon v. Silver Creek, 127 App. Div. 888, 112 NYS 54. The court cannot be required to duplicate its findings of fact; hence, additional ones equivalent to those already made are properly refused. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Howard [S. D.] 119 NW 1032. Where findings of fact show conclusively that plaintiff was not entitled to recover, findings on other issues are immatsrial and unnecessary. Fogg v. Perris Irr. Dist. [Cal.] 97 P 316.

80. Aydelotte v. Billing [Cal. App.] 97 P 698.

81. Maury v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 812.

82. It merely denotes refusal to make finding. City of Helena v. Hale [Mont.] 100 P 611.

83. Finding of specific probative facts sufficient to establish public highway held to be within issue of public highway. Leverone v. Weakley [Cal.] 101 P 304. When there is no issue in respect to particular fact, it is usually unnecessary to make any findings in respect thereto. Boothe v. Farmers' & Traders' Nat. Bank [Or.] 98 P 509.

84. Finding on issues made by cross complaint, "that there is no competent evidence to sustain the facts as stated in the allegation," held not sufficient. Pittock v. Pittock, 15 Idaho, 426, 98 P 719.

85. Special finding is not necessarily erroneous for failure to make specific mention of items which are included in general description. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089. Finding that all allegations of complaint are true may be sufficient, without specifically negativing denials of answer. Needham v. Chandler [Cal. App.] 96 P 325.

86. Court may make finding of fact in judgment, and if party desires more specific finding specially made, it is his duty to request it. Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 NW 758.

87. If it is characterized a conclusion of law that does not make it one or invalidate it. Whalen v. Stuart, 194 N. Y. 495, 87 NE 819.

88. Statutory requirement that findings of fact and conclusions of law shall be separately stated is merely directory. Butler v. Agnew [Cal. App.] 99 P 395.

89. Frederickson v. Deep Creek Irr. Co., 15 Idaho, 41, 96 P 117. Finding is sufficient if it fully and clearly indicates court's conclusion upon issues. Maury v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 812.

90. Under Rev. St. § 649, when trial is to court, nor can general finding and judgment thereon be regarded as superseded by supposed special finding not of record but supported by credible evidence.[91] It is immaterial in an action in equity that the findings are defective or insufficient,[92] unless error appears therefrom.[93]

Interpretation and construction.[See 10 C. L. 1989]—Findings will be liberally construed in accordance with their substance [94] and the evident intention of the court,[95] so as to avoid unnecessary conflict between the findings [96] and to support the judgment if possible.[97] Where a party seeks to reverse a judgment based on inconsistent findings, he is entitled to the benefit of those most favorable to him.[98] Immaterial findings,[99] findings upon matters outside the issues,[1] conflicting findings wholly unsupported by the evidence and contrary to the concessions of counsel,[2] and mere evidentiary findings, will be disregarded.[3] While a general finding may be controlled by a conflicting more specific finding,[4] to which it is subsequent,[5] it may alone be sufficient [6] if its meaning be clear,[7] and such a finding includes all other found only in bill of exceptions and not purporting to qualify or take place of general finding. United States v. Cleage [C. C. A.] 161 F 85.

91. See Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118.

92. Since no findings are necessary in such action. Gould v. Austin [Wash.] 100 P 1029.

93. Clambey v. Copland [Wash.] 100 P 1031.

94. Court's finding in substance that plaintiff had occupied the land for period sufficient to acquire title thereto by adverse possession will support judgment in his favor. Cudney v. Sherrard, 153 Mich. 239, 15 Det. Leg. N. 401, 116 NW 1014.

95. Memorandum at bottom "Found, except as indicated" will be considered, the general rule as to irreconcilable conflict being held not to apply. Stokes v. Stokes, 128 App. Div. 838, 113 NYS 142. Where court granted motion to dismiss at close of plaintiff's case but later made a decision containing findings, the decision will be treated as one on the facts. Conover v. Palmer, 123 App. Div. 817, 108 NYS 480. Failure to expressly find that tenant was constructively evicted held not ground for reversal, where court in effect so found and defect was not made subject of motion below. Rea v. Algren, 104 Minn. 316, 116 NW 580.

96. Findings are not inconsistent unless every reasonable construction precludes their agreement, and hence, finding that certain agreement permitting entry did not exist does not preclude existence of another agreement which might permit it. Gish v. Ferrea [Cal. App.] 101 P 27. Where paragraph in draft of finding which was marked "proven" by trial court stated that whether there were claims against estate at time of decease did not appear, this was not inconsistent with statement in finding as finally made up that she owed no debts at time and was incompetent to contract for some time past, since paragraph marked "proven" referred to evidence before the court, while statement in finding gave conclusion of court from all evidence. Appeal of Dunn [Conn.] 70 A 703. Finding in action for specific performance that contract was terminated by parties on certain day is inconsistent with another finding that one of parties on same day elected to rescind contract, and also with conclusion of law that vendee is entitled to performance. Whalen v. Stuart, 194 N. Y. 495, 87 NE 819.

97. Needham v. Chandler [Cal. App.] 96 P 325; Lomita Land & Water Co. v. Robinson [Cal.] 97 P 10; Murphy v. Stelling [Cal. App.] 97 P 672. Any doubt as to validity of findings as to form will be construed in favor of judgment, as when doubt exists as to whether finding is of law or of fact. Butler v. Agnew [Cal. App.] 99 P 395.

98. Where party seeks to reverse judgment based on inconsistent findings, he is entitled to the benefit of those which are most favorable to him. Whalen v. Stuart, 194 N. Y. 495, 87 NE 819.

99. Findings upon an immaterial matter not in issue, though erroneous, may not be prejudicial. Collins v. Gray [Cal.] 97 P 142. Findings not material to the issues are not binding in subsequent action. Moehlenpah v. Mayhew [Wis.] 119 NW 826.

1. Findings outside the issues in the case are nullities and must be disregarded. Fleming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719; McCormick-Ormand Co. v. Nofziger Bros. Lumber Co. [Cal. App.] 101 P 688. Finding upon matter not in issue has no weight in a subsequent action. Collins v. Gray [Cal.] 97 P 142.

2. Rule that of two irreconcilable findings the appellate court will accept one most favorable to appellant not applying. Stokes v. Stokes, 128 App. Div. 838, 113 NYS 142.

3. Evidenciary facts and conclusions in findings must be disregarded. Fleming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719.

4. Specific finding as to payment controls finding which merely recapitulates notes and dates of payment. Evans v. Claridge, 137 Wis. 218, 118 NW 803. Finding of facts constituting ownership by prescription will prevail over statement in findings that party is not owner. Collins v. Gray [Cal.] 97 P 142.

5. Subsequent general findings will not negative a prior specific finding, the additional finding being unnecessary and immaterial. Calderwood v. Schlitz Brew. Co. [Minn.] 121 NW 221.

6. Held sufficient where finding negatived existence of indebtedness set up by way of counterclaim upon either of permissible theories of evidence. Greve v. Echo Oil Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 904.

7. A general omnibus finding "that all material allegations in answer and also findings essentially inherent therein [8] of either affirmative [9] or negative matters.[10] A special finding by the court not signed by the judge and not requested by either party will be treated as a general finding.[11] While findings in an equitable action which conflict with the decree may be ignored,[12] yet, where such findings recite all the material facts and do not thus conflict, they may have an equal force and effect as in any other action.[13] The findings of fact by the trial court have the effect and force of the verdict of a jury.[14]

Signing, filing and entering. See 10 C. L. 1990—Findings should be signed [15] and filed during the term.[16]

Amendment of findings. See 10 C. L. 1991—Ordinarily the trial court may during the term, amend its findings of fact [17] to supply omission [18] or to conform to admissions [19] upon proper motion being made therefor,[20] but it is not necessary to in amended complaint in intervention" are true held insufficient for any purpose, meaning not being clear. Holt Mfg. Co. v. Collins [Cal.] 97 P 516.

8. Will determine a fact necessary to support the judgment, if not in conflict with special findings. Christisen v. Bartlett [Kan.] 95 P 1130. In absence of special findings and conclusions, and of any request therefor, judgment will not be disturbed if it can be sustained upon any theory. Stoepler v. Silberberg [Mo.] 119 SW 418. In absence of findings of fact and conclusions of law, evidence will be construed in light most favorable to successful party below. New York Life Ins. Co. v. McDearmon, 133 Mo. App. 671, 114 SW 57.

9. Finding of ownership necessarily includes finding of validity of deed introduced as evidencing such ownership. Simonson v. Monson [S. D.] 117 NW 133. General decree carries presumption that all facts were found necessary to sustain it, of which there was evidence. Kidd v. New York Security & Trust Co. [N. H.] 71 A 878. Finding that "defendants M. D. and C. D. signed and executed written instrument with M." by which contract M. and her husband sold real estate to M. D., does not seem susceptible of any other construction than that contract was executed by M. and her husband. Smallwood v. Dunham [Ind. App.] 86 NE 489.

10. Finding of prior ownership negatives any such claim or rights in another. Davies v. Angelo [Cal. App.] 96 P 909. In action to set aside transfer, general decree in favor of defendants, where there was conflicting evidence upon question of fraud, includes finding that contracts were not result of fraud and conspiracy on their part, although the court did not specially find on question of fraud. Kidd v. New York Security & Trust Co. [N. H.] 71 A 878. Where findings of court upon affirmative case are necessarily a complete negative of case as pleaded by answer, such findings are sufficient. Bowers v. Cottrell, 15 Idaho, 221, 96 P 936.

11. Kelly v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58.

12. Being unnecessary. Tacoma Gas & Elec. L. Co. v. Pauley, 49 Wash. 562, 95 P 1103; Gould v. Austin [Wash.] 100 P 1029; In re Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 1013; Clambey v. Copland [Wash.] 100 P 1031.

13. Hector v. Hector [Wash.] 99 P 13.

14. Smidt v. Benenga [Iowa] 118 NW 439; Dallas County v. Thomley [Iowa] 118 NW 530. Special findings of the court are no more conclusive upon the parties than the special verdict of the jury. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Gilinsky [Iowa] 120 NW 476. See Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118.

15. Special finding should be signed by court or it will be treated as a general finding. Kelley v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58.

16. The findings of fact should be filed by the trial judge before the adjournment of the term, it not being sufficient to file later and date filing back. Sykes v. Speer [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 422.

17. Pitser v. McCreery [Ind.] 88 NE 303.

18. Court, in its discretion, may make additions to its findings of meritorious matters accidentally omitted. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650.

19. Boothe v. Farmers' & Traders' Nat. Bank [Or.] 98 P 509.

20. Proceeding for correction of finding by trial court, under Gen. St. 1902, § 795, held defective for want of motion in lower court to correct. Jacobs v. Reilly, 80 Conn. 275, 68 A 251. Correction of erroneous findings should be sought in trial court by motion as provided by Gen. St. 1902, §§ 794-796, for the error to be available on appeal under § 797. Dennison Bros. v. Waterville Cutlery Co., 80 Conn. 596, 69 A 1022. Remedy for failure of trial judge to make finding on material issue is by application for additional findings, and not by appeal. Eagle Min. & Imp. Co. v. Hamilton [N. M.] 91 P 718. Motion to correct findings must be in proper form and show exceptions taken. Greist v. Gowdy [Conn.] 71 A 555. Motion should specify definitely the amendment desired. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650. Though party cannot extend time for filing motion to supreme court to correct findings as authorized by Gen. St. 1902, § 797, by filing motion for correction to trial court as authorized by §§ 794-796, yet where trial court after passing on motion addressed to it certifies evidence to supreme court upon motion made under § 797, the time for making such motion will be deemed to have been extended by the trial court and the motion will be considered by supreme court, though not made within time prescribed by § 797. Root v. Lathrop [Conn.] 70 A 614.

strike out immaterial matters.[21] The practice in some states does not authorize a motion to modify findings.[22]

Conclusions of law.[See 10 C. L. 1991]—The separate conclusions of law common to the practice in many states [23] must be based on the findings of fact.[24] They must also be definite and certain in form [25] and confined to the issues.[26] Such separate conclusions are not necessary when they are readily ascertainable from the judgment [27] or from conclusions already filed.[28] In some states the court must be requested to file such conclusions,[29] and in others a request is essential to the propriety of filing conclusions.[30] They are not necessary in equitable actions,[31] and are entirely unknown to the federal practice.[32] When authorized the order in which they are given is immaterial.[33] If the conclusions of law considered all together are not inconsistent with the judgment, the fact that some of them standing alone are incomplete is immaterial.[34] They may be amended upon proper motion,[35] but ordinarily are conclusive in subsequent proceedings.[36]

Propositions of law under the Illinois practice.[36a]—[See 10 C. L. 1991]

§ 10. Objections and exceptions.[37]—[See 10 C. L. 1991]—Objection must be made and exception taken at the trial to formal defects,[38] such as those relative to the form of the verdict,[39] its signature [40] and return,[41] and the designation of parties [42]

21. Motion to correct finding under Gen. St. 1902, §§ 795, 796, by striking out statement that court rejected secondary evidence for want of proof of destruction of original, held properly denied where court did not announce such opinion at time as reason for rulings, the finding in this respect being immaterial. Whalen v. Gleeson [Conn.] 71 A 908.

22. No such practice in Indiana. Petty v. Petty [Ind. App.] 85 NE 995.

23. Fowler v. Gowing [C. C. A.] 165 F 891.

24. Held that the conclusions of law were sustained by the findings of fact. Quirk v. Everett, 106 Minn. 474, 119 NW 63; Leggat v. Blomberg, 15 Idaho, 496, 98 P 723; Amber Petroleum Co. v. Breech [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 668. Held that general conclusion indicated by special findings control over apparent discrepancy as to certain elevations, and bring case within rule of Erhard v. Wagner [Minn.] 116 NW 577. Peterson v. Lundquist, 106 Minn. 339, 119 NW. 50. Finding that defendant wrongfully and without authority in law changed grade of street is insufficient to show that proceedings were defective, so as to warrant holding, as matter of law, that plaintiff was entitled to recover on account of such defective proceedings, irrespective of a contrary provision in the city charter. Triest v. New York, 193 N. Y. 525, 86 NE 549.

25. Should be sufficient that intention of trial court may be ascertained. Frederickson v. Deep Creek Irr. Co., 15 Idaho, 41, 96 P 117.

26. Conclusions of law outside issues must be disregarded. Fleming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719.

27. Under Civ. Code 1901, par. 2937. Work v. United Globe Mines [Ariz.] 100 P 813.

28. Court is not required to duplicate its conclusions of law. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Howard [S. D.] 119 NW 1032.

29. Failure to give, not error in absence of request. State v. Corgiat, 50 Wash. 95, 96 P 689.

30. Not reversible error to file conclusions of law without request where no prejudice results therefrom. Ryan v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 464.

31. In re Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 1013. But may not be prejudicial error to give. Tacoma Gas & Elec. L. Co. v. Pauley, 49 Wash. 562, 95 P 1103.

32. Hence, judgment should have been directed on findings of fact under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 649, 700, where jury was waived. Parties stipulated facts in 24 articles, which the trial judge adopted with two of his own as his findings of fact, and upon these found six conclusions of law and directed judgment for defendant. Fowler v. Gowing [C. C. A.] 165 F 891.

33. Fact that judge's discussion of pertinent legal principles and authorities does not follow but precedes his statement of final conclusion or conclusions of law is not ground for valid objection to form of decision. Gettysburg Borough v. Gettysburg Transit Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 598.

34. Town of Cicero v. Grisko, 240 Ill. 220, 88 NE 478.

35. Motion to amend conclusion of law denied because party failed to appear and present it. Jefferson v. Brundage [Minn.] 120 NW 1092.

36. Conclusions filed on first trial in trial court held conclusive on second transfer to supreme court, when equity and justice did not require their re-examination. Kidd v. New York Security & Trust Co. [N. H.] 71 A 878.

38. Sandoval Zink Co. v. Hale, 133 Ill. App. 196. Errors in verdict which are not fatal are waived if not objected to before discharge of jury. Beaumont Rice Mills v. Campbell [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 971.

39. Where counsel remains silent while forms of verdict are explained and delivered to jury, right to object to such forms is thereby waived. Pelton v. Goldberg [Conn.] 70 A 1020. Party who allows a or amount.[43] Objections and exceptions must also be made or taken at the trial to errors in the findings made,[44] and to failure to submit interrogatories [45] or to make requested findings.[46] Objections to the submission of issues which conform to the issue should be based upon previous, special exceptions to the pleadings.[47] The party requesting an interrogatory cannot object to its form.[48] An objection that a verdict is indefinite should be first raised by a motion to make definite and certain,[49] and, while a motion to set aside special findings objected to may take the place of a motion for a new trial,[50] a motion to reopen a case and to require special findings to be made will not serve to revive rights of appeal which have been lost.[51] Defects in the verdict are not generally available by motion in arrest of judgment,[52] nor does a motion for a venire de novo generally apply to special verdicts or findings.[53] A party by moving for judgment on the special findings waives the right to object thereto.[54]

VERIFICATION.[55]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[56]

*Necessity.*See 10 C. L. 1992—The necessity of verifying pleadings is usually statutory,[57] and hence depends upon the terms of the various statutes.[58] Statutes in general verdict alone to be received without objection will be deemed to have waived his right to a special verdict which he has requested. Livingston v. Taylor [Ga.] 63 SE 694. As failure to return general verdict. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796. Where jury return joint verdict instead of separate verdicts. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Raines [Ark.] 119 SW 266. Where error consists of bringing in separate verdicts in same case, one for a certain defendant, and other against other defendants. Olmstead v. Noll [Neb.] 117 NW 102.

40. Where verdict is not signed by foreman. McCaskey Register Co. v. Keena [Conn.] 71 A 898. Failure to conform to statutory requirement as to signing special verdict may be waived by failure of parties to object thereto and by filing of motions for judgment thereon. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796.

41. Objection that all jury are not present at return. Ryan v. State, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 497.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[77]

Armed resistance to the government by Indians does not necessarily create a state of war,[78] and Indians arrested during such resistance are not necessarily prisoners of war.[79] All property found in the enemies' country [80] is liable to seizure and confiscation as property of the enemy.[81] Under the United States Confiscation laws, only the life interest in property is confiscated,[82] and the effect of confiscation is at an end at the death of the confiscatee.[83] The right of a neutral to enter a port is not effected by the proclamation of one of the belligerents that there is a blockade when in fact it is not effective or actual.[84] While certain articles are generally not considered contraband of war, yet, if one of the belligerents declare them such, it will be sufficient to impress them with that character.[85] Having been de-cleared contraband, they are liable to seizure and condemnation;[86] but even if they are contraband, a citizen of a neutral may lawfully contract to carry them, and his contract will be enforced by the neutral state.[87] The abandonment of a captured vessel can only take place by the voluntary act of the captor and without cause,[88] and a belligerent captor cannot by forced abandonment be deprived by a neutral of any rights acquired by virtue of the capture.[89]

French spoliation claims.[See 8 C. L. 2257]—The validity of French spoliation claims against the United States depends upon the liability of France in the first instance[90] and the liability of the former is coextensive only with the liability of the latter.[91] Presentation of a claim against Spain did not constitute an election to release France, where the two countries were not jointly liable.[92] Where an American vessel was illegally seized by a French prize crew, it is no defense to France that the prize crew had abandoned the vessel because of being fired upon by a Spanish man-of-war, where the captors afterwards denied the abandonment and secured the release of the vessel to themselves.[93] Memorials, affidavits, and ex parte statements of shipowners and others, made in their behalf long after the occurrence, should be excluded from consideration in[94] spoliation cases.

96. Includes rights and liabilities between tion of warehouseman and depositor exists is for the court.[97] A common carrier, which leases a room from a warehouseman and leaves goods therein without contracting with the warehouseman as such or taking a receipt, does not "store" the goods in a technical sense,[98] but, though not such a storing or warehousing as would discharge the liability of the carrier as such,[99] where the warehouseman undertakes to guard the room and take care of the goods so stored therein, he becomes at least a bailee for him,[1] and, in any case, the mere fact that the storage contract is in the form of a lease of the storage room will not necessarily prevent the contract from being one for storage.[2]

Licensing and public regulation.[See 19 C. L. 1994]—Equity has no jurisdiction to prescribe rates of storage charged by a public warehouseman,[3] and will not assume jurisdiction merely upon the ground of unreasonableness of rates,[4] in the absence of other grounds for equitable relief,[5] but in this connection a distinction must be noted between merely public warehouse and public service corporations.[6] Rates fixed by a lease of a warehousing business cannot be enforced by third parties.[7]

Warehouse receipts.[See 10 C. L. 1994]—Warehouse receipts are generally negotiable.[8] A provision of the storage contract, requiring return of the warehouse receipt as a condition to the return of the goods, is waived by a refusal to make such return on other grounds.[9] The true contents of bales, bundles and boxes may be shown by parol where they are not apparent and the receipt recites that they are not known, notwithstanding a prior recital as to the nature of such contents,[10] and, so also, articles not listed may be shown by parol to have been delivered to the warehouseman.[11]

Contracts of warehousing in general.[See 10 C. L. 1995]—The contract of a warehouseman is one of bailment.[12]

Care and protection of goods stored.[See 10 C. L. 1995]—A warehouseman must exercise ordinary care and skill in caring for the goods,[13] and where the injury is caused by his default in this regard he will be liable, though the immediate cause is an unusual occurrence.[14] A warehouseman represents to the public the fitness of the storage building,[15] and must exercise reasonable care with regard to inspection of the building.[16] This duty is owed, however, by the warehouseman as such, and not by the owner of a building operated by another.[17] Where the relation of warehouseman actually exists, liability for loss is not defeated by the fact that no warehouse receipt has been issued.[18] As a general rule the burden of proving the warehouseman's negligence is upon the party asserting it,[19] and the question is one of fact for the jury,[20] but a prima facie presumption of negligence arises from unexplained [21] failure to deliver on demand. Such a presumption also arises from loss of the goods, or damage thereto while in the warehouseman's custody,[22] when such loss or damage is unaccounted for,[23] but the presumption of negligence from damage or deterioration while in storage does not arise where the injury is such as might naturally have resulted from the inherent nature of the goods.[24] The prima facie case made by proof of loss is met by a showing that the goods were lost by fire, and it then becomes the duty of the plaintiff to show that the fire would not have caused the loss had the defendant used due care.[25] Stipulations of exemption from liability will not be held to extend to negligence unless clearly intended and so expressed.[26] In some states limitation of liability is prohibited by statute.[27]

A provision in the contract of storage that the bailee shall not be liable for loss by fire and water does not relate to the damage resulting from exposure to the ordinary action of the elements, but to some disaster in the nature of an overwhelming catas-

Conditions relative to adjustment of claims for damages may be waived by failure to insist upon their performance.[28] When it is shown that damage resulted to the identical property stored, it is not necessary to prove damage to each particular piece, even though each piece is evidenced by a separate warehouse receipt.[29]

Charges and lien therefor. See 10 C. L. 1995—The lien for storage charges is regulated by statute in many states,[30] as is also the procedure for the enforcement of such lien,[31] but such provisions may be rendered inapplicable by special agreement,[32] the rights of the parties in such case being dependent upon the terms of the agreement.[33] Aside from his liability for damages to the property, the warehouseman's right to charge storage is not affected by the manner in which, and the place where, the goods are stored.[34] Equity will not entertain a prayer for relief to a party who alleges the exaction of overcharges by a public warehouseman,[35] or enforce, for the benefit of a complainant not a party thereto, the provisions of a lease naming a maximum schedule of charges for storing a certain commodity.[36]

Trover and conversion. See 10 C. L. 1995—Tender of storage charges must be alleged,[37] and where a carrier having charges on goods deposits them with a warehouseman, the owner cannot maintain trover against the warehouseman without showing that he tendered both the carrier's and the warehouseman's charges,[38] and also gave satisfactory evidence that he was the owner of the goods demanded.[39] A warehouseman who delivers goods to the wrong party is liable to the owner for their value.[40] He may, however, replace the goods and recover their value from the party to whom the wrong delivery was made.[41] An unauthorized sale by a warehouseman of goods stored, which puts it out of his power to restore them on demand, renders him liable for conversion, without demand or tender of performance by the owner.[42]

Actions and procedure. See 10 C. L. 1995—In an action based upon refusal to deliver the goods, it is not necessary to allege performance of a condition precedent where it is alleged that the refusal was based on other grounds,[43] and, where the property has been destroyed, a prior demand is not a condition precedent to action for the loss.[44] An action for loss of goods may be maintained in his own name by an assignee of a warehouse receipt.[45] Evidence of other goods being safely kept in the same manner as those injured is generally inadmissible,[46] nor is evidence of proper packing of other goods of the same kind upon other occasions admissible to show that the goods involved in the action were properly packed.[47] Money deposited under an illegal agreement may be recovered by the owner in an action for money had and received,[48] though the conditions of the deposit have not been fulfilled.[49] As between the plaintiff and the defendant, the title to the property held by the latter on deposit may be adjudicated without regard to the interests of other persons not parties to the suit.[50] A statutory interpleader may be had only in the cases covered by the statute.[51] Amendments to conform to the proofs are permissible as in other cases.[52] Where negligence is conceded, it is not reversible error to omit to charge thereon.[53]

Crimes and penalties. See 10 C. L. 1995—Statutory penalties attach only in cases covered by the statute.[54]

for generating power,[96] or using the stream for drainage purposes is not unreasonable,[97] but the diversion of a perceptible quantity of water for use of nonriparian proprietors,[98] or the use of machinery not adapted to the size and capacity of the stream, is unreasonable.[99] Continuous unreasonable use may be enjoined.[1]

The doctrine that a riparian owner is limited to a reasonable use of the stream applies only as between riparian owners.[2]

The right of a riparian owner to the natural flow of the stream cannot be taken without compensation.[3]

One may lawfully take gravel from the bed of the stream on his own premises.[4] A riparian owner has not the exclusive right to fish when he does not own the bed of the stream.[5] The right to maintain a dam is subject to the rights of the public to use the waters.[6]

In South Carolina, owners are required by statute to clean the bed of the stream on their premises.[7]

SW 100. Whether use by an upper owner is reasonable is a question for the jury, where there is any evidence of unreasonable use. Capacity of stream, adaptation of machinery to it, general usage of the country, and other facts, are to be considered. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 399. Construction of a dam across a stream, and a reasonable and ordinary use of water for power for operation of a mill by owner of land through which the stream flows, does not create an easement or right to flood land abutting on the stream below. Corse v. Dexter [Mass.] 88 NE 332.

96. He may use the power of the water for generation of electricity for use on nonriparian lands. Mentone Irr. Co. v. Redlands Elec. L. & P. Co. [Cal.] 100 P 1082.

97. A village through which flows a stream, being owner of the dominant inheritage, may collect surface waters and have them pass by way of the stream through land of a lower owner, so long as it does not cast sewage on his land and create a nuisance. It may collect and conduct the water to the stream by underground tile drains instead of by surface ditches. Crane v. Roselle, 236 Ill. 97, 86 NE 181. Injunction will not be granted against such use of the stream unless a nuisance is shown to exist. Id.

98. Where a water company diverts a perceptible quantity of water for use of its customers, some of whom live in a different water shed, the use is unreasonable. City of Patterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

99. An action by lower owner for diminution, evidence that upper owner was using stream to propel machinery not adapted to size and capacity of the stream was admissible. Price v. High Shoals Mfg. Co. [Ga.] 64 SE 87.

1. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 399. Verdict held not to cover future damages so as to render granting of injunction improper. Id.

2. As against a nonriparian owner, he may prevent diversion which will deprive him of the usual flow. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502. The rights of a nonriparian licensee of a riparian owner are not coextensive with those of other riparian owners. Stoner v. Patten [Ga.] 63 SE 897.

3. Where water of a stream is taken under power of eminent domain, damages are to be based on amount of water which may be taken, irrespective of amount actually diverted. James v. West Chester Borough, 220 Pa. 490, 69 A 1042. Where city of Boston, under St. 1896, p. 552, c. 530, empowering the city to make a new channel for Stoney Brook, has taken land for a new channel, riparian owners from whose lands the stream has been taken may recover damages. Oelschleger v. Boston, 200 Mass. 425, 86 NE 883. St. 1896, p. 552, c. 530, authorizing the city of Boston to change the channel of Stoney Brook, held not to authorize taking the waters of the stream. Id.

4. One may lawfully take gravel from the bed of a stream if he does not interfere with rights of other citizens in the gravel. Goar v. Rosenberg [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 653. A city had no authority to prevent removal of a bank of gravel formed as accretion to an owner's land, though a portion of the gravel was within city limits, where such removal did not interfere with streets or create a nuisance. Id.

6. In re Delaware River at Stilesville, 131 App. Div. 403, 115 NYS 745.

7. Under Civ. Code 1902, §§ 1465-1468, making it the duty of commissioners of health to enforce landowners to clean streams, it is their duty, and not the duty of courts, to determine whether a landowner has failed to perform his duty. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 871. Where it appears that bed of river on lower owner's land has been raised by deposits of sand, an injunction against use by upper owner should be conditioned upon lower owner's permitting the upper owner to clean out the bed at his own expense, where such act would permit use by the upper owner without flooding. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 399. The making of such injunction does not require the upper owner to clean the stream or affect his right to apply to the commissioners of health to enforce the lower owner to clean it out, as required by Civ. Code 1902, §§ 1465-1468. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 871.

8. Water company which maintained a jury of an upper proprietor,[9] and, a fortiori, a third person using the stream cannot do so.[10] Wrongful obstruction may be enjoined,[11] or an action will lie for the recovery of damages for injuries sustained,[12] and, if no actual damage has been sustained, nominal damages may be recovered.[13] In some states statutory remedies are provided.[14] One partially obstructing the flow of a stream must anticipate the possible consequences[15] and provide for freshets and excessive rainfall.[16] dam held not negligent in lowering a spillway during an unprecedented flood. Deerpark Brew. Co. v. Port Jervis Waterworks Co., 129 App. Div. 420, 114 NYS 119. May detain the water so far as reasonable and necessary, but not otherwise. North Alabama Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Jones [Ala.] 47 S 144. Instructions held insufficient. Id. Unreasonable use is not shown by decrease in volume or an increase therein by storage and subsequent use. Mason v. Apalache Mills, 81 S. C. 554, 62 SE 399.

9. A riparian owner who obstructs the stream and causes it to flood land of an upper owner is liable. Lancaster & J. Elec. L. Co. v. Jones [N. H.] 71 A 871. He may not obstruct the stream in the improvement of his premises no matter how high a degree of care he uses. McGehee v. Tidewater R. Co., 108 Va. 508, 62 SE 356. In action by lessee from year to year for damages by flooding caused by obstruction of a water course, it is no defense that his lease was renewed while the obstruction existed. Ramey v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 235 Ill. 502, 85 NE 639. Railroad companies must exercise due care not to obstruct streams by embankments. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Champion [Ala.] 49 S 415. Evidence sufficient to show that flooding was caused by an obstruction placed in the stream. Southern R. Co. v. Ward, 131 Ga. 21, 61 SE 913. Railroad company held liable for injuries to crops by flooding caused by construction of a drift across a valley and creek. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Cannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 661. In action against a railroad company for damages to adjacent land by flooding, caused by widening the roadbed by filling in a stream, held a question for determination whether the company could have accomplished its purpose by some other plan without injury to plaintiff. Ferdon v. New York, O. & W. R. Co., 131 App. Div. 380, 115 NYS 352.

10. Evidence held to show that company driving logs on a stream did not exercise the necessary degree of care to prevent a jam causing flooding of riparian lands. Mandery v. Mississippi & Rum River Boom Co., 105 Minn. 3, 116 NW 1027. One who obstructs the channel of a navigable stream and diverts the waters against a bank and cause land to be washed away is liable. Judson v. Tidewater Lumber Co. [Wash.] 98 P 377; Ami Co. v. Tide Water Lumber Co. [Wash.] 98 P 380. Where obstruction of a stream was involved in state plan for construction of a canal, the remedy of the riparian owner was against the state and not against the contractor. Meneely v. Kinser Const. Co., 128 App. Div. 799, 113 NYS 183.

11. Obstruction by dam. Hastie v. Jenkins [Wash.] 101 P 495. Where dams by upper owner on a navigable stream injured lower owners, held, they were entitled to enjoin their maintenance. Trullinger v. Howe [Or.] 99 P 880. In suit to enjoin a dam, evidence held to show that it backed water over plaintiff's land. Wilhite v. Billings & Eastern Montana Power Co. [Mont.] 101 P 168. On question of enjoining maintenance of a dam, comparative injury held immaterial under the evidence. Id. If a railroad company by its embankment constantly pen back the water of a stream, an owner injured may abate it as a nuisance. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Champion [Ala.] 49 S 415. As incidental relief, actual damages sustained are recoverable. Id. Defense of railroad company to granting of injunctive relief against obstruction of water of a stream held inequitable. Id. Where a dam backs water upon land of another, a decree should demand its abatement as a nuisance and not that it should be rebuilt or repaired where there is no evidence that this is necessary. Wilhite v. Billings & Eastern Montana Power Co. [Mont.] 101 P 168.

12. That one has partially obstructed a stream does not prevent him from recovering damages from another who further obstructs it. American Locomotive Co. v. Hoffman, 118 Va. 363, 61 SE 759. One who obstructs a water course by a dam and causes land to be flooded is liable in damages. Hastie v. Jenkins [Wash.] 101 P 495. Any obstruction of the flow of a stream which results in injury to another renders the obstructing person liable for damages no matter how carefully the work was done. Beauchamp v. Taylor, 132 Mo. App. 92, 111 SW 609.

13. Lower owner can recover only nominal damages for detention of the water unless he shows special damages. North Alabama Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Jones [Ala.] 47 S 144. Evidence of rental value improperly admitted where there was no loss of rents. Id.

As to procedure in such actions, see post, § 18.

14. Complaint by lower owner for detention of water by upper owner held not for penalty prescribed by Code 1907, §§ 3906, for building dams without authority, nor under § 6147 authorizing damages for diverting stream from its natural channel. North Alabama Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Jones [Ala.] 47 S 144. Liability for obstruction of water course under Laws 1903, c. 147, stated. Meneely v. Kinser Const. Co., 130 App. Div. 525, 114 NYS 1136.

15. One who constructs a dam is presumed to know the consequences thereof and cannot complain that an owner damaged did not give him notice. Wilhite v. Billings & Eastern Montana Power Co. [Mont.] 101 P 168.

16. A company which owns the bed of a srteam is bound to exercise the highest degree of care not to obstruct it and cause it to overflow in case of freshets which, though unusual, are known to have occurred in the past. City of Oroville v. Indiana Gold-Dredging Co., 165 F 550. Where an upper owner

Bridges and culverts.[See 10 C. L. 2000]—A railroad company in constructing its roadbed across a stream must construct bridges and culverts of sufficient capacity to accommodate the ordinary flow of water [17] and ordinary floods,[18] but it is not required to provide against unusual or extraordinary floods.[19] Municipalities are subject to a like rule.[20]

Nuisance and pollution.[See 10 C. L. 2000]—An upper owner may not pollute the stream to the injury of a lower owner,[21] unless he has acquired a prescriptive right to do so.[22] He may not deposit in the stream refuse matter which renders the water unfit for domestic use,[23] nor may he deposit such matter on his lands so that was dredging for gold in the bed of a stream in such manner as to leave a ridge of sand across the bed from 10 to 30 feet high, increasing danger of overflow which had on two occasions within 50 years caused great damage to a city lower down, held such obstruction could be enjoined. Id. Where railroad company in constructing its road bed filled a ravine and substituted another course for flood waters, held that it was bound to know that excessive rains might occur at any time and damage result from inadequate provision Smith v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 669. The lessee of the original owner and builder is also liable. Id. Evidence held to show that flooding of land was caused by very heavy rainfall and not by failure of railroad company to remove obstructions from a ditch on its right of way through which water passed into a creek. Bones v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 717.

17. In construction of an embankment across the valley of a watercourse, a railroad company must build sufficient culverts to permit the passage of such flood waters as might reasonably be expected. Hinton v. Atchison & N. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 431. Proof of its failure to do so is proof of negligence for which an upper owner may recover. Id. In such case evidence is admissible to show that floods were not unprecedented and that former excessive rainfalls did not deluge the land in controversy. Id. Evidence of damages in another part of the valley than that in which plaintiff's property was destroyed was inadmissible in the absence of evidence that the rainfall was practically the same in the two places. Id. Evidence held to show that backing up of water was caused by insufficient opening left in bridge over the stream. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 129 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 1101. In constructing its embankment, bridges or culverts over a watercourse, a railroad company does so subject to the right of the state to provide for such use of the watercourse as may become proper for public interests. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Wright County Sup'rs, [Iowa] 121 NW 39. Where railroad company in constructing a bridge made insufficient outlet for water reasonably to be expected to flow, it was held liable to owner injured. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 129 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 1101. Where a railroad is built across a stream and a culvert constructed and the company subsequently digs ditches along its roadbed and diverts the water of the stream onto adjoining land, it is liable in damages. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Clayton [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 248. For flooding land by negligent construction of railroad embankment, the difference in the value of the land before and after the injury may be recovered. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Chilton [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 779.

18. In constructing a bridge over a stream the company should take notice of prior periodical floods, and guard against possible obstruction. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co,. 129 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 1101.

19. A company is not bound to construct openings in its embankment so as to let flood waters of a creek pass, its duty being to use ordinary care to provide other channels to carry off waters on their diverted course if the embankment diverts them to an unnatural course. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Walker [Ark.] 117 SW 534. Whether damage resulted from negligent construction and wrongful obstruction of a stream by maintaining a bridge held for the jury. Crook v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 696.

20. A city which obstructs a stream by construction of too small a culvert is liable for the nuisance though the outlet of the culvert is outside city limits. Martin v. St. Joseph [Mo. App.] 117 SW 94. It is liable though it did not originally construct the street. Id. A city in improving a street which by its grade holds flood waters of a stream into the original channel is not liable for damages caused by flooding unless it was negligent in not constructing a culvert for such flood waters. Walters v. Marshalltown [Iowa] 120 NW 1046. Under Gen. St. 1901, § 579, held a county was not liable where a bridge constructed by it caused flooding of adjacent lands. Shawnee County Com'rs v. Jacobs [Kan.] 99 P 817.

21. May not make any appreciable discharge of any noisome substance into the stream. Worthen v. White Spring Paper Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 468. Where owner of paper mill discharged into stream larger quantities of waste cotton fiber which discolored the water, held a lower owner could have relief in equity. Id. An owner being entitled to have water come to him unpolluted is not required to use precautions to prevent polluting of his materials used in his bleachery. Id. A lower owner is entitled to recover the water free from pulution, and for substantial injury to such right he may maintain action regardless of the motive which prompted its invasion. Straight v. Hover, 79 Ohio St. 263, 87 NE 174.

22. In action for pollution of a stream, an answer alleging that such stream had been polluted by other mills for 50 years held a partial defense to claim for damages, and not demurrable. Whalen v. Union Bag & Paper Co., 130 App. Div. 313, 114 NYS 220.

23. A miner has no right to deposit de-it reaches the stream by percolation.[24] He may, however, facilitate the natural drainage of surface water into a stream.[25] Statutes forbidding the discharge of sewage into streams are usually held not to apply to cities having previously constructed sewer system,[26] but power granted to cities to build and maintain sewers does not authorize a public nuisance.[27] A lower proprietor may enjoin an upper from polluting the stream.[28] Such relief is available though the upper owner has installed appliances to prevent pollution.[29]

Diversion.[See 10 C. L. 2002]—Riparian proprietors being entitled to the natural flow of the stream, an upper owner has no right to divert the waters.[30] He may, however, divert the water from its channel within the boundaries of his land,[31] providing he does so in such manner as to cause no injury to the lower proprietor.[32] A lower owner may be estopped to complain of diversion[33] but facts constituting an estoppel must appear.[34] A lower owner may restrain diversion though he fails bris, etc., in a stream and cause the same to be deposited on land of a lower owner, or in such manner as to cause such lower owner's land to be flooded or washed away. Salstrom v. Orleans Bar Gold Min. Co., 153 Cal. 551, 96 P 292. The owner of an oil well is not liable for injuries to land caused by pollution of a stream bordering on the land with oil and salt water, where such pollution is necessary to the enjoyment of the well. Ohio Oil Co. v. Westfall [Ind. App.] 88 NE 354. Whether he has exercised reasonable diligence to prevent injury is a question of fact. Id. Where an upper owner operates his lands for oil and pumps oil and salt water into the stream, he is liable to the lower owner for injuries resulting from the pollution, though such operations are conducted with care and in the only known practicable method. Straight v. Hover, 79 Ohio St. 263, 87 NE 174. In action for polluting a stream by sewage, where there was no evidence is to how much sewage reached the stream from a certain ditch, no recovery could be had therefor. Phillips v. Amada [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 983, 118 NW 941. For injury to land by deposit of sewage in a stream, evidence held to show that it was injured to the extent of $100 per acre. Morris v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 687. Where city collects sewage and discharges into stream to injury of riparian owner, latter may recover for damage. Depreciation in value of land, proper element of damages. Kellogg v. Kirkville, 132 Mo. App. 519, 112 SW 296.

24. He may not cast on his land foul matter, which reaches the stream by percolation and pollutes the water and renders it unfit for reasonable use by a lower owner. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Wood [Ala.] 49 S 426.

25. Village may conduct its surface water into a stream by under ground tile drains. Crane v. Roselle, 236 Ill. 97, 86 NE 181.

26. Act March 17, 1899 (P. L. p. 73), to secure purity of waters under proviso of first section, exempts municipalities having systems of sewers or drains constructed at time of passage. Board of Health v. Phillipsburg [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 750. Injunction to restrain discharge of sewage denied, where constructed many years previously with consent of the then owner and extended on request of joint owner, where hardship would be imposed on city, and owner could recover in one action for damages past and future. Somerset W. L. & Trac. Co. v. Hyde, 33 Ky. L. R. 866, 111 SW 1005. Injunction discretionary. Id.

27. Sess. Laws 1887, p. 151, c. 102, authorizes exercise of eminent domain to connect sewers with creeks, rivers, etc. State v. Concordia [Kan.] 96 P 487. In planning and maintaining a sewer system, provision must be made for what may be naturally and reasonably anticipated. Id. When authorized by legislature, it will be presumed no nuisance was intended. Id.

28. Is not required to seek his remedy at law. Worthen v. White Springs Paper Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 468. Injunction which would close extensive mines properly refused, where it appeared that comparatively small damage was done to lower owners because of deposit of tailings in a stream which was deposited on land at flood periods, and the mining company had done all that could reasonably be done to prevent injury. McCarty v. Bunker Hill & Sullivan Min. & Concentrating Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 927.

29. Such appliances may give way or the upper owner may discontinue their use. Worthen v. White Springs Paper Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 468.

30. Evidence held to show a perceptible diversion of water to upper owner's injury. City of Patterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. Evidence held to show that operation of mill and power plant by lower owners was interfered with by maintenance of splash dams by upper owner. Trullinger v. Howe [Or.] 97 P 548.

31. Mentone Irr. Co. v. Redlands Elec. L. & P. Co. [Cal.] 100 P 1082.

32. The rule that one may divert the waters within his own boundaries does not entitle him to make diversion in such manner as to cause the stream to flood the land of a lower owner. Wood v. Craig, 133 Mo. App. 548, 113 SW 676.

33. Where he stands by and sees another go to great expense in constructing a system to divert. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502. Facts held not to show an estoppel. Id.

34. A lower owner is not estopped to complain of diversion by a water company by the fact that he did not object to the construction of costly works by it. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. A claim that a lower owner is estopped to complain of diversion because it stood by while water company was con-to show perceptible injury where such diversion may ripen into a right.[35] Diversion of flood waters will not be enjoined at the instance of a riparian owner not injured thereby,[36] but may be enjoined if he is injured.[37] In a suit to restrain diversion by a water company, injunction will not be awarded unless other water companies, which obtain their supply from defendant's reservoirs, are made parties.[38]

§ 4. Rights in lakes and ponds.[39]—See 10 C. L. 2003—The waters of a lake may not be polluted to the injury of a riparian proprietor.[40] Nor may they be diverted [41] unless a prescriptive right has been acquired,[42] in which case the quantity which may be taken is limited by the prescriptive right acquired.[43] Where a lower riparian owner is injured by diversion of water from a lake, he may sue either in law or equity.[44] If equitable relief cannot be awarded, the court should retain jurisdiction and adjudge his damages.[45] The legislature may permit a town to take water from a great pond without compensating owners affected thereby,[46] or it may provide for damages for such owners.[47]

§ 5. Rights in subterranean and percolating waters.[48]—See 10 C. L. 2003—As a general rule, percolating waters [49] are considered as a part of the land and may be structing expensive works to effect diversion is not sustained where it appears that complainant served notice that it would object. Id. After the lower had served notice that it would object to diversion, it was not required to follow up such notice by resort to legal proceedings to prevent expenditure. Id.

35. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. An upper owner may be enjoined from diverting the waters of a stream to the injury of a lower owner, though the diversion has not been completed and damage has not been inflicted. Wood v. Craig, 133 Mo. App. 548, 113 SW 676.

36. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502. The maxim "de minimus non jurat lex" may be applied to prevent injunctive relief against diversion at flood stage when utilization consists of appropriation of surplus water. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. Whether such maxim is to be applied, the condition of the stream at the time of its lowest stage must be considered. Id.

37. Where flood waters deposited fertilizing material on his lands. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502.

38. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

41. A city as riparian owner cannot divert water from a lake for use of its citizens and for manufacturing establishments within its limits. Stock v. Hillsdale [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1043, 119 NW 435. Where a city diverts water from a lake to supply its water system, the damages sustained by a lower owner are measured by actual damages he sustains from failure of the water to flow past his premises. Id.

42. Where a city had for 20 years taken water from a lake for use of its citizens, held it had acquired a prescriptive right. Stock v. Hillsdale [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1043, 119 NW 435. Where a city acquired a prescriptive right to take water from a lake to supply its system, and a lower riparian owner made no objection for 20 years, held he was not entitled to an injunction to limit the amount the city was entitled to take to the amount it had used for the statutory period. Id. Where such owner knew for 20 years that use of water by the city was increasing, held he was not entitled to enjoin further extension of the plant. Id.

43. A city which acquires a prescriptive right to take water from a lake for its waterworks plant is limited in its right to substantially the amount of water taken during the period. Stock v. Hillsdale [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1043, 119 NW 435.

46. In making a public grant, the state may impose such terms as it seems fit. It may relieve the grantee from payment of any damages or may require compensation to private persons. Dodge v. Rockport, 199 Mass. 274, 85 NE 172.

47. Under Laws 1894, p. 65, requiring a town to pay damages caused by taking water from a great pond, the rights of an owner injured held analogous to those of a riparian owner. Dodge v. Rockport, 199 Mass. 274, 85 NE 172. Damages held the proximate result of the taking. Id. The amount of the damages was exclusively for jury. Id. Interest on damages awarded held properly allowed from time waters were diverted. Id.

49. "Artesian" is sometimes used in reference to underground water which by reason of pressure will rise above its natural level when the startum in which it lies is pierced. Burr v. Maclay Rancho Water Co. [Cal.] 98 P 260. One who claims it as a stream has the burden to show that it is a intercepted by an owner;[50] but in some states statutory provision is made for the preservation of such waters,[51] and in some of the western states the doctrine of correlative rights therein by adjacent owners has been announced.[52] What constitutes a reasonable use depends on the circumstances of each case.[53] The right of a landowner to percolating water for use on his land is superior to that of an adjoining owner to take such water to distant land.[54] An appropriation of subterranean water for use on distant lands is subject to reasonable use by the owner of lands lying over the basin which were purchased because of their location respecting the water.[55] Rights of landowners may be lost by estoppel.[56] A judgment fixing the rights of adjoining owners to take percolating waters from the same basin should be so framed as to prevent depletion of the basin.[57] Percolating water may be subject to contract rights independent of title in the land.[58] One may not negligently pollute the well of another.[59]

50. City has absolute right to appropriate percolating water flowing under land owned by it. Meeker v. East Orange [N. J. Law] 70 A 360. Ordinarily, percolating water belongs to the owner upon whose land it is found. Hathorn v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 128 App. Div. 33, 112 NYS 374. Injury to subterranean supply by lawful acts by adjacent owner is damnum absque injuria. Stoner v. Patten [Ga.] 63 SE 897.

51. See ante, § 2. The state under its police power may regulate the use of mineral wells to prevent injury to adjacent owners. Hathorn v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 194 N. Y. 326, 87 NE 504. A landowner has no vested right to unnaturally and unreasonably force the flow of percolating waters for any purpose not connected with the use or enjoyment of his land. Id.

52. Erickson v. Crookston Waterworks P. & L. Co., 105 Minn. 182, 117 NW 435, following 100 Minn. 481, 111 NW 391. The doctrine of correlative rights in percolating waters was a change in the law, and a clear case must be made to justify an injunction against continuance of use of such waters taken in good faith before the doctrine was enunciated. Barton v. Riverside Water Co. [Cal.] 101 P 790.

53. Erickson v. Crookston Waterworks P. & L. Co., 105 Minn. 182, 117 NW 435. Where a city water supply company adopts the most approved method of securing water from an artesian basin, it is not liable if another's well is so reduced that it becomes necessary to use a power pump. Pumping from an artesian basin does not constitute an artificial taking. Id. Evidence held not to show that another system than pumping was feasable. Id.

54, 55. Burr v. Maclay Rancho Water Co. [Cal.] 98 P 260.

56. Where a water company proceeded at great expense to dig additional wells to an artesian basin, and other owners stood by, they were held estopped to enjoin use of such wells. Barton v. Riverside Water Co. [Cal.] 101 P 790.

57. Should limit amount taken to average supply of rainfall. Burr v. Maclay Rancho Water Co. [Cal.] 98 P 260.

58. Where an owner of an artesian well grants a perpetual flow of water therefrom and thereafter conveys the land upon which the well is situated subject to existing rights, his grantee cannot be protected in his interference, with such flow by the rules governing percolating waters. Charon v. Clark, 50 Wash. 191, 96 P 1040.

59. If a landowner accumulates contaminating matter upon his land and negligently permits it to percolate through the soil and pollute a neighbor's well, he is liable for the injury. Ballantine & Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law] 70 A 167.

terests of good husbandry, an owner may drain ponds and basins on his land,[66] and may drain surface water into a watercourse on his land which is the natural outlet of such surface water,[67] but one may not lawfully drain a meandered lake onto another's property,[68] or drain his land across land of his neighbor,[69] in the absence of a prescriptive easement[70] or license.[71] A parol permission to dig a drainage ditch through land is a mere revocable license, though the ditch has been dug in reliance thereon.[72] One may not accumulate surface waters in such manner as to constitute a nuisance.[73] A prescriptive right to maintain a drainage ditch is not lost by temporarily obstructing it.[74] Two or more owners may join in a ditch situated wholly on the land of one to drain a pond situated on the lands of all.[75] If a ditch is constructed by agreement and recognized as a waterway, neither party is compelled to clear it of rubbish, but either may do so.[76] An owner, through whose land a ditch for the benefit of others runs, may not obstruct such ditch.[77] In some

66. Basins and ponds of a temporary character, which have no natural outlet, may be drained by artificial channel into a natural depression, though the flow of such natural drain is thereby increased over the lower estate. Arthur v. Glover [Neb.] 118 NW 111.

67. His land is not subject to assessment for cost of a ditch to prevent overflow of such watercourse or to benefit drainage of servient lands. Mason v. Fulton County Com'rs [Ohio] 88 NE 401.

68. Gatz v. Diessner, 106 Minn. 117, 118 NW 255. Such other may require him to fill up the ditch and restore the natural outlet to its former condition. Id.

69. Adjoining owner may not drain his land and conduct water across his neighbor's land without his consent. Morse v. Swanson, 129 App. Div. 835, 114 NYS 876. Where natural drain has been changed so that surface water flows upon land of a neighbor, a decree restraining such diversion and compelling restoration of the land to its former condition properly specifies the character of ditch to be maintained. Cronin v. Payne [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 267, 121 NW 290. An owner cannot enter a railroad right of way to dig a ditch for water discharged onto his land through the construction of an embankment on the right of way. Klopp v. Chicago etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 377.

70. One may acquire a prescriptive easement to drain surface water collected on his land over adjacent land where such privilege is used and acquiesced in by such adjacent owner for fifty years. Blenn v. Line [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1149, 119 NW 1097. A permanent right to maintain a drainage ditch over lands of another for the benefit of adjacent land is an easement. Passes with a grant of such adjacent land though not specially mentioned. Brown v. Honeyfield [Iowa] 116 NW 731. Action of county and township officers in throwing additional water into a private drainage ditch does not affect the rights of the owners of the ditch to have it maintained. Id. Changing course of drainage ditch dug at joint expense of owners of land benefited will not extinguish the easement unless it appears that the quantity of water thrown upon the servient estate will be unduly increased. Id.

71. A permanent right of drainage through land of another may be acquired where a ditch has been constructed jointly by owners under an oral agreement, and where time and money has been expended on faith of such agreement. Brown v. Honeyfield [Iowa] 116 NW 731. Assent of an owner to the construction of a ditch on his land is in the nature of a license, which, being acted upon, cannot be disregarded. Id.

72. McIntyre v. Harty, 236 Ill. 629, 86 NE 581. Such license is revoked by conveyance of the land executed prior to the act of 1889, relative to construction of drainage ditches by agreement of adjacent owners. Id. License to dig a ditch across land of another held a mere license, where the ditch was of no benefit to anyone except the licensee. Id. Laws 1889, p. 116, relating to drains constructed by mutual consent or agreement of owners of adjacent lands, if construed to revive licenses to construct ditches revoked before it went into effect, is void. Id. Such act, providing that when a drain has been constructed by mutual license it shall be deemed one for mutual benefit, etc., applies to ditches under agreement when the act took effect, and does not revive licenses theretofore revoked. Id.

73. Mere construction of large excavation for surface water on one's premises near another's residence held not of itself a nuisance. Sanders v. Miller [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 996.

74. A prescriptive right to drain surface water across adjacent land is not forfeited by placing obstructions in the drain to enable the dominant owner to cross it during harvest time. Glenn v. Line [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1149, 119 NW 1097.

75. Arthur v. Glover [Neb.] 118 NW 111. Where a ditch constructed jointly by several owners had been maintained for 40 years, held to sustain a finding that parties intended to make it a permanent improvement. Brown v. Honeyfield [Iowa] 116 NW 731.

76. O'Mara v. Jensma [Iowa] 121 NW 518.

77. Where owner of land, through which a drainage ditch ran for benefit of others, obstructed it, a judgment ordering him to remove obstructions and place the ditch in the same condition it was in at a certain date held sufficiently definite. Brown v. Honeyfield [Iowa] 116 NW 731. In action for constructing a levee and filling a ditch which resulted in throwing surface water upon land of another, where there was evidence that defendant's grantor had back-furrowed from the ditch which tended to drain water states, statutory provision is made for drainage,[78] and drainage commissioners are held liable for neglect of duty.[79] A complaint for obstruction of surface waters must show defendant liable,[80] and recovery may be had for negligence alleged.[81] No duty is imposed on road commissioners to protect land along the highway from the natural overflow of water.[82]

*Common-law rule.*See 10 C. L. 2008—At common law, surface water is regarded as the common enemy of mankind, and each owner may protect his land therefrom as best he may.[83] The waters may be diverted from their course and thrown back onto the dominant estate,[84] but the right to do so may not be exercised wantonly or unnecessarily.[85] The rule which governs the right to dispose of surface water in agricultural districts does not apply to property located in populous cities.[86] into such ditch, a charge that plowing should be considered part of the ditch was proper, if parties farmed and plowed land adjacent to it so as to drain water into it. O'Mara v. Jensma [Iowa] 121 NW 518.

78. Acts, 30th Gen. Assem. c. 70, providing that owners may drain their land in the natural course of drainage, held not to relieve an owner from damages for injuries caused by his disturbing the natural flow of surface water, though it flowed along a highway ditch before doing the damage complained of. Shefer v. Malhovec [Iowa] 116 NW 1042. Permission given by one to an adjoining landowner to a drain leading from a water tank on his land to the donor's drain, held not to bring him within protection of Acts 30th Gen. Assem. c. 70, giving one the right to drain into any natural depression. Oxley v. Corey [Iowa] 116 NW 1041. Injunction is the proper remedy to prevent wrongful flooding of land by drain commissioners, where the drain does not traverse the lands and complainants were not parties to drain proceedings. Smafield v. Smith, 153 Mich. 270, 15 Det. Leg. N. 487, 116 NW 990. Injunction held not to lie. Id.

79. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 42, making drainage commissioners liable for neglect of duty, held, they are liable, if by practical and feasible plan they could have furnished adequate drainage for land and failed to do so. Binder v. Langhorst, 234 Ill. 583, 85 NE 400.

80. Complaint for flooding, which does not allege that the city made the drain complained of or did any act which caused the injury, is insufficient. Harney v. Lexington [Ky.] 113 SW 115. City is not liable for injuries to abutting property caused by surface water flowing down a street, where that was the natural course of drainage and the city did not interfere with the natural course. Jung v. New York, 132 App. Div. 18, 116 NYS 368.

81. Where land was flooded partly because of heavy rainfall and partly because levee works obstructed the flow of surface waters, it was error to charge that, unless the jury believed the entire damage was done because of the levee, they should find for defendant. Corley v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Levee Com'rs [Miss.] 49 S 266.

82. Culverts and ditches constructed along railroads did not divert water from natural course. Padfield v. Frey, 133 Ill. App. 232.

83. McGehee v. Tidewater R. Co., 108 Va. 508, 62 SE 356. A person may rid his land of surface water as best he may, even to the injury of his neighbor, providing his efforts are reasonably necessary. Peterson v. Lindquist, 106 Minn. 339, 119 NW 50. A railroad company is not liable for flooding land with surface water, where it necessarily resulted from the construction of the roadbed, as such damages are a part of the original injury to the land. Blunok v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 737. Lower proprietor may improve his property, though in so doing he prevents flow of surface water from upper owner's land. Sabetto v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 832, 112 NYS 118.

84. Owner of servient land may divert the flow of surface water and turn it back over other lands, if he does not act recklessly. Beauchamp v. Taylor, 132 Mo. App. 92, 111 SW 609. Instruction disapproved. Id. Owner of a lot may improve it, no matter if surface water is thereby diverted onto adjacent land. Mehonray v. Foster, 132 Mo. App. 229, 111 SW 882. Where one in improving his lot partially filled a ditch running between his own and an adjacent owner's lot, he was held not liable for diverting waters onto such lot. Id. Railroad incurs no liability as to surface water by constructing its embankment. Sabetto v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 832, 112 NYS 118. At common law, one may divert surface waters onto land of his neighbor in ordinary use of his property. Batla v. Goodell [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 622. An owner may lawfully improve his property and, if he is not negligent, he is not liable to an adjoining owner for causing surface waters to be cast onto his premises. Arthur v. Glover [Neb.] 118 NW 111. Diversion of surface waters by changing their natural course in improving a lot held a mere incident to the improvement, and owner was not liable. O'Neill v. St. Paul, 104 Minn. 491, 116 NW 1114, following Brown v. Winona & S. W. R. Co., 53 Minn. 259, 55 NW 123. An owner may alter the course of surface waters by changing the surface of his land or by improving it by the construction of buildings. Field v. Gowdy, 199 Mass. 568, 85 NE 834.

85. In Virginia this rule is subject to the modification that obstruction must be in good faith and not wantonly or unnecessarily. McGehee v. Tidewater R. Co., 108 Va. 508, 62 SE 356. In action for diversion of surface water in improvement of premises, whether reasonable care was used held for jury. Id. Evidence insufficient to show that flooding of cellars was due to the city's negligence. Paterno v. New

Civil law rule. See 10 C. L. 2008—At civil law, an owner has the right to have surface water flowing on his land follow its natural course,[87] and a person has the right to drain his own field even if by doing so he increases the flow of water upon his neighbor's land in a natural depression;[88] but he has no right in doing so to disturb in any way the flow of waters which would pass off his premises through an outlet provided by a mutual system of drainage,[89] and is liable for damage caused by forcing water from its natural flow.[89a]

Railroad companies[90] in constructing their embankments must provide culverts to carry off the natural flow of surface waters,[91] and failure to do so is negligence,[92] for which an adjacent owner injured may recover damages[93] or enjoin

York, 130 App. Div. 265, 114 NYS 610. In the absence of negligence in the manner of collecting and furnishing an outlet for water through sewers, a city is not liable for flooding a cellar caused by natural flow of water along street after a heavy downpour. Punsky v. New York, 129 App. Div. 558, 114 NYS 66. Evidence held not to show that one was not entitled to maintain a dam at the borders of her land, as a reasonable means of getting rid of surface waters flowing from adjoining premises. Du Breuille v. Ripley, 106 Minn. 510, 119 NW 244. Charge that township willfully and carelessly cut and maintained a ditch to the damage of a property owner is equivalent to charging that it was unreasonably done. Koeper v. Louisville, 106 Minn. 269, 118 NW 1025. A railroad company in constructing its embankment is liable for injury resulting from interference with drainage only where it can prevent such injury without substantial additional inconvenience and expense.. Alabama & M. R. Co. v. Beard [Miss.] 48 S 405. Instructions held erroneous. Id.

86. Owner of a lot may improve it and protect it against surface waters, and is not liable for closing an underground drain which carries water onto his lot. Levy v. Nash [Ark.] 112 SW 173. The owner of a city lot in improving it may shut out surface water without leading it to a sewer, but he may not negligently do unnecessary damage to adjacent land or obstruct a natural channel or discharge surface water in a body on adjacent land. Reilly v. Stephenson, 222 Pa. 252, 70 A 1097. Where one improved his lot so that surface water, which previously spread over his and adjacent property, was cast over an adjacent lot alone, he was held not liable in damages. Id.

87. One proprietor cannot divert a natural way so that water falling upon his land shall be discharged upon land of his neighbor. Cronin v. Payne [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 267, 121 NW 290. Where one's land was drained by a well defined drainage way, which contained running water about six months per year, a lower owner who obstructs such drainage is liable. Batla v. Goodell [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 622. In action against a city for flooding lots by raising grade of streets and supplying insufficient drains, testimony as to cost of raising lot to grade of street is not admissible. Mayrant v. Columbia [S. D.] 64 SE 416. Complaint for obstruction of flow of water from pond held not bad, because not alleging whether the obstruction of a watercourse. Rentz v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 63 SE 743.

88, 89. Mackey v. Wrench, 134 Ill. App. 587.

89a. Defendant constructed ditch which changed flow of natural water way. Ditch became clogged with sediment and water was forced onto plaintiff's crops. Ramey v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. 140 Ill. App. 203. Evidence held insufficient to show that highway commissioners constructed ditches diverting water from its natural flow. Padfield v. Frey, 133 Ill. App. 232.

90. See 10 C. L. 2006. See, also, Railroads, 12 C. L. 1542.

91. A railway company constructing an embankment across a natural channel for surface waters must construct culverts of sufficient capacity to permit the passage of such surface waters. Quinn v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [S. D.] 120 NW 884. Evidence sufficient to show that a railroad company was negligent in constructing an embankment. Id. Where railroad company constructs its embankment across several lead drainage ditches and several top ditches, and put in culverts for the feed ditches, but conveyed the water along the right of way in feeders to such ditches, the culverts should be sufficient to carry off all water. Davenport v. Norfolk & S. R. Co., 148 N. C. 287, 62 SE 431. A company in constructing its roadbed must provide sufficient drainage to prevent impounding of water upon adjacent land. Willis v. White & Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 942. Railroad must construct necessary culverts for free passage of surface waters. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31. On an issue as to the sufficiency of culverts through a railroad embankment, statements made by plaintiff to defendant's constructing officials that in his opinion the openings were insufficient are not admissible. Suiter v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 121 NW 113. Instructions as to duty of railroad company to provide for passage of surface waters through its embankment, approved. Ames Shovel & Tool Co. v. Anderson [Ark.] 118 SW 1013.

92. It is negligence for a railroad company to fail to provide opening in its embankment sufficient to permit the free passage of surface waters. Jonesboro, etc., R. Co. v. Cable [Ark.] 117 SW 550. Complaint for damages for obstruction of waters by a railroad embankment held sufficent. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31.

93. As to measure of damages, see Damages, 11 C. L. 958. In action against a railroad for constructing an insufficient open-the obstruction as a nuisance.[94] It may not leave excavations into which water accumulates and seeps into adjacent land.[95] Where a railroad company is bound to receive water from adjoining land onto its right of way, it may pass it along according to laws of gravitation.[96] A complaint for obstructing surface waters must show an obstruction [97] and that it is the result of negligence.[98]

A landowner has no right to collect surface water in a body See 10 C. L. 2007 and cast it in undue volume onto the land of another,[99] nor may he cause such waters to be cast upon lower land at a point which they would not otherwise reach.[1]

§ 10. Lands under water.[2] See 10 C. L. 2007

§ 11. Levees, drainage, and reclamation.[3] See 10 C. L. 2007—Levee districts are usually empowered to assess the cost of improvements on property within the dising through its embankment, plaintiff may not show that after damage complained of the opening was enlarged. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Walker [Ark.] 117 SW 534. For obstruction of surface water by insufficient drain box through railroad embankment, if land is rendered valuless, the measure of damages is value of land flooded. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Ford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 201. Complaint for obstruction of surface waters by construction of a railroad embankment held sufficient to sustain verdict for permanent injury. Hart v. Wabash S. R. Co., 238 Ill. 336, 87 NE 367.

94. Action for damages for flooding land by construction of railroad embankment, and to enjoin it as a nuisance, are not inconsistent remedies. Steber v. Chicago & G. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 304. Where an owner settled with a railroad company for all past and future damages for flooding land, and deeded the company a strip of land so as to permit construction of system to prevent future injury, held, where title to such strip failed and conditions reverted to their former condition, the owner could not obtain equitable relief without returning consideration received on settlement. McCabe v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 114 NYS 303.

95. Railroad company held liable, where it dug a pit on its right of way where water collected and seeped into adjoining land. Canon City & C. C. R. Co. v. Oxtoby [Colo.] 100 P 1127. The company is presumed to have known that such waters would seep into adjoining lands. Id.

96. Bones v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 717. An owner on both sides of a railroad could not insist that the company maintain a continuous dike to protect land on one side from overflow, and at the same time respond in damages for flooding land on the other side. Id.

97. Complaint for obstruction of waters by railroad embankment held bad for failure that such construction obstructed the natural flow. Graves v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 91, 112 SW 736.

98. A verdict for negligence for failure to keep open culverts running under a canal cannot stand where it is not charged that culverts were not of sufficient capacity, and it appears that defendants kept ends of culverts clear and no other method of cleaning them is apparent. Benjamin v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 955. It is proper to refuse to enjoin the maintenance of drains where it appeared that, though water was being delivered through the drains more rapidly than the natural flow, a third person had, by providing an outlet, relieved the plaintiff from the injurious consequences. Feuerstein v. Richter, 154 Mich. 312, 15 Det. Leg. 751, 117 NW 740.

99. May not discharge surface water in a body onto adjacent land. Reilly v. Stephenson, 222 Pa. 252, 70 A 1097. An owner has no right to collect water in a channel and discharge it onto a public way. If he does so and the water freezes, he is liable for whatever damage ensues. Field v. Gowdy, 199 Mass. 568, 85 NE 884. One may not permit surface water to collect on his premises and discharge it at one point in a volume onto adjacent land. Mehonray v. Foster, 132 Mo. App. 229, 111 SW 882. If a railroad which digs ditches to care for surface water allows such ditches to become obstructed, and its surface water is forced in a body onto upper land, it is liable, but is not liable where, because of such obstruction, water gathered in ditches by owner is thereby obstructed. Sabetto v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 832, 112 NYS 118. Evidence insufficient to show that a railroad company by constructing a drain caused unusual quantities of water to be carried from a culvert to lands of an adjacent owner. McCabe v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 114 NYS 303.

1. An owner of higher land may not discharge surface waters onto lower land from an area which would not otherwise be drained there, nor may he discharge water onto such land at a point where it would not naturally reach such land. Sheker v. Machovec [Iowa] 116 NW 1042. Instruction held proper. Id.

4. Proceedings to restore washed out levee properly had under Pol. Code, § 3459. Reclamation Dist. No. 535 v. Clark [Cal.] 100 P 1091. Supervisor cannot modify trustee's report provided for by such statute. Id. Assessment for repair of levee held not vitiated because trustee of reclamation district acted as overseer of repair strict.[4] The period within which redemption may be made from a sale for levee taxes is fixed by law.[5] The authority of the officers of such districts rests wholly on the statutes treating them.[6] A board of directors of a levee district in constructing a levee to protect adjacent land have a wide discretion as to choice of means and methods.[7] One whose property is injured by the construction of a levee may recover damages.[8] The secretary of the interior may lease lands withdrawn from entry for reclamation purposes, under the federal statute.[9]

§ 12. Milling and power and other nonconsuming privileges; dams, canals, and races.[10]—See 10 C. L. 2008—A right to flow land by the maintenance of a dam is an easement[11] to be acquired by grant[12] or prescription.[13] The extent of the right work. Id. Assessment of cost for repair of levee held not vitiated by fraud where a trustee of the district was benefited to a greater extent than other landowners. Id. Landowner held not entitled to attack finding of trustees of reclamation district that repair work on levee had been properly done, where warrants had been issued and approved. Id.

5. Under Laws 1901, p. 153, § 1, Laws 1895, p. 91, where lands are sold for nonpayment of levee taxes in the St. Francis levee district, the one year within which to redeem runs from date of sale, and not from date of confirmation of the sale. Robertson v. McClintock [Ark.] 110 SW 1052.

6. Under Acts 1905, p. 231, §§ 16, 33, held, Red River levee district was liable where president of directors contracted for work to protect district from overflow and to prevent constructed levee from damage. Red River Levee Dist. No. 1 v. Russell [Ark.] 114 SW 213. If emergency work was ordered by the president and done under the supervision of the board of director's engineers who had power to bind the district, he would be acting within the scope of his authority in carrying, but the work and his action would bind the district. Id. Under Acts 1908, c. 97, § 3, the treasurer of the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta board held only authorized to declare forfeiture of bonds deposited to secure deposits of funds, and sell the same for purpose of collateral security. Bobo v. Yazoo-Mississippi Delta Levee Com'rs [Miss.] 46 S 819. Under Act No. 74, p. 95, of 1892, and Act No. 160, p. 242, of 1900, the board of commissioners of Caddo levee district may not make a sale of bonds granted to it until registration of the conveyance to it by the state. State v. Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club [La.] 48 S 891. Authority of levee district to arbitrate damages suffered by a landowner by construction of a levee being vested in the board of directors, president had no power to bind the district by agreeing to arbitrate. Plum Bayou Levee Dist. v. Harper [Ark.] 116 SW 196. The collector of levee taxes or the levee district are not owners of taxes, and may not set off against taxes the value of an old levee belonging to the taxpayer for which promoters of the district had promised to reimburse him in consideration of his signing petition for organizing district. State v. Dumphy [Mo.] 115 SW 573.

7. Meriwether v. St. Francis Levee Dist. Directors, [C. C. A.] 165 F 317. In determining what is necessary in constructing a levee and what authorities are empowered to do, "necessary" means whatever is appropriate and convenient, and not what is indispensable. Id.

8. Under the constitution and statutes of Arkansas, an owner who is injured by overflow as a result of construction of a levee has an adequate remedy at law for damages against the levee district, and may not proceed in equity. Meriwether v. St. Francis Levee Dist. Directors [C. C. A.] 165 F 317.

9. Under Reclamation Act, 32 Stat. 388, the secretary of interior may establish regulation relative to lands withdrawn for irrigation works and may lease them for grazing purposes. Clyde v. Cummings [Utah] 101 P 106.

11. A right acquired by grant to flow land is an easement appurtenant to every part of the grantee's land. Haigh v. Lenfesty, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962. He may build his dam at any point on his land and to any height so long as he does not exceed his rights of flowage. Id. The right to flood land of another is an easement and lies only in grant or prescription. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Wood [Ala.] 49 S 426.

12. The bed of a river is that part between the banks worn by the regular flow of water. Haigh v. Lenfesty, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962. Grant of a right to flow land by dam that height means six feet above the highest point of the river bed. Id. Grant of a right to raise a dam not exceeding 10 feet high does not require a dam every point of whose crest is 10 feet above to point of the river bottom vertically beneath it, but only a dam so constructed as to produce no more flowage than such dam. Lancaster & J. Elec. L. Co. v. Jones [N. H.] 71 A 871.

13. Where a dam has been maintained for 20 years, a prescriptive right to maintain it at such height is acquired. Tosini v. Cascade Mill. Co. [S. D.] 117 NW 1037. Evidence sufficient to show that a certain person owned land on the banks of a river where he erected a mill dam in 1874. Kregar v. Fogarty [Kan.] 96 P 845. A mill owner, who has for 20 years exercised a right to flow land for a mill pond acquires

if it rests in grant depends, of course, on the terms thereof.[14] The height and capacity of a dam fixes the extent of the owner's right to flow upper lands.[15] A right acquired by grant to flow land is not lost by nonuser alone; there must be adverse possession for the statutory period.[16]

In some states rights of mill owners are regulated by statute,[17] and limitations are prescribed for the maintenance of actions for injuries caused by dams.[18] A statute providing for new trial in real actions does not apply to action relative to flowage rights.[19] In New Hampshire, operators of water mills are authorized by law to condemn land for flowage purposes,[20] and if he fails to comply with the statute a landowner injured may recover damages.[21] A petition for the assessment of damages under the flowage act will be dismissed where the mill owner files a disclaimer.[22] Owners of water-power rights are entitled to damages for injury resulting in impairment thereof,[23] or for the filling up of their mill pond[24] or right of flowage.[25] an easement. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Wood [Ala.] 49 S 426. Where a mill owner, who has a prescriptive right to a pond, grants a railroad right of way over his land, he does not revoke his rights in the pond, and the railroad could not fill in the pond but should build a bridge if necessary. Id.

14. The owner of a defective dam constructed under a grant of a right of flowage may build a new tight dam without becoming liable to upper owners, if he does not exceed his flowage rights. Haigh v. Lenfesty, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962. Evidence held not to show such a clear violation of an upper owner's rights by construction of a dam that equity would enjoin its maintenance. Id.

15. Not the extent of the flowage under prior dams. Haigh v. Lenfesty, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962.

16. Haigh v. Lenfesty, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962. Evidence of such adverse user must be clear and positive. Id. That the grantee of flowage rights has not at all times exercised his full rights under his grant does not affect his rights. Id.

17. The constitutionality of Mill Act (Rev. Laws c. 196), regulating mills and mill dams, depends upon the power of the legislature to regulate the use of property for the best interests of owners and the public. Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 200 Mass. 82, 85 NE 880. Evidence sufficient to show a mill dam had been but partially destroyed and that efforts to rebuild the same were made, and forfeiture, provided by Gen. St. 1901, § 4108, if owner does not commence to rebuild within one year, did not take effect. Kregar v. Fogarty [Kan.] 96 P 845.

18. Gen. St. 1894, § 2369, providing that no action for damages occasioned by a mill dam shall be maintained unless brought within 2 years, construed and held to apply to action for damages caused by construction of permanent dam. Priebe v. Amas, 104 Minn. 419, 116 NW 829.

19. Rev. Laws, 1905, § 4430, providing for a second trial in actions relative to land, does not apply to action to enjoin owner of water power from maintaining so much of a dam as causes water to flow back upon another's mill privileges. Tew v. Webster, 106 Minn. 185, 118 NW 554.

20. Pub. St. 1901, c. 142, § 12, authorizing such taking held valid. McMillan v. Noyes [N. H.] 72 A 759. In New Hampshire, where a mill owner constructs a dam which is a public benefit, he acquires the right to condemn flowage privileges. Wright v. Pemigewasset Power Co. [N. H.] 70 A 290.

21. If he fails to settle for damages caused by flooding, or institute condemnation proceedings within 30 days, an owner injured may maintain action for damages or to ascertain the value of rights sought to be acquired. Wright v. Pemigewasset Power Co. [N. H.] 70 A 290.

22. Landowner is remitted to an action at law for damages. Wright v. Pemigewasset Power Co. [N. H.] 70 A 290.

23. Owners of water power are entitled to damages for all injury resulting in wrongful impairment thereof, but not for subsequent occurrences of which the wrongful act furnished merely the occasion upon which other causes operated to produce the injury. Lancaster & J. Elec. L. Co. v. Jones [N. H.] 71 A 871. Whether raising water at a dam above the height to which it could lawfully be held was the proximate cause of loss of business by an upper riparian owner is a question of fact. Id. In an action for injury to water power, the owner has the burden to prove that it is more probable than otherwise that injury was caused by the act complained of. Id. The measure of damages for wrongful flowage by lower owners resulting in transfer of power developed by upper owner's dam to lower owner's dam is the rental value of the power. Id. Upon question of damages, the income received by those appropriating the power is evidence of, but not the measure of, damages. Id.

24. Complaint for filling up a mill pond construed and held to mean that place where filling occurred was on defendant's lands. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Wood [Ala.] 49 S 426. Complaint for filling earth into a mill pond held to state a cause of action. Id.

25. In action for interference with flow-

§ 13. Irrigation and water supply; common-law rights and the doctrine of appropriation. A. Rights in the water.[26]—See 10 C. L. 2009—At common law each riparian proprietor was entitled to the natural flow of the stream.[27] But the doctrine of riparian rights has been abrogated in many of the western states,[28] and in others it has been modified to the extent that proprietors may divert a reasonable amount of water for irrigation.[29] Each riparian owner has a right to reasonable use of the water for irrigation, and the common-law right to the flow without diminution is subject to such right,[30] and an upper riparian owner cannot object to diversion of water after it has passed his land.[31] Where the doctrine of prior appropriation obtains the right of appropriation is not confined to riparian owners.[32] In states where the doctrine of appropriation is recognized, the state has control of the waters [33] and may regulate their use,[34] and it is the policy of the law to prevent waste of water.[35] The right to take water from a stream for irrigation may be acquired by prescription against riparian owners.[36] Settlers on public land who assert rights by reason of prior appropriation thereby waive riparian rights.[37] The right to use water for irrigation is real estate.[38] In Washington water used for ir-age right, evidence of labor in removing logs from the mill pond, of effect of water in preserving sunken logs, etc., held admissible. Schneider v. Brown Tp., 153 Mich. 454, 15 Det. Leg. N. 492, 116 NW 1016.

27. See ante, § 3. The code does not attempt to define or establish any rule respecting riparian rights. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

28. Riparian rights do not exist in Arizona. Arizona Copper Co. v. Gillespie [Ariz.] 100 P 465. The legal effect of desert land act (19 stat. 377) was to abrogate the doctrine of riparian rights, but it did not go so far as to effect rights originally giving rise to the doctrine of riparian rights. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

29. Every riparian proprietor, regardless of date of settlement, is entitled to water sufficient for domestic use to care for his stock and water his garden. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Settlement upon land bordering upon water supply is notice that water for domestic uses will be demanded. Id. The riparian right to use water for irrigation applies to waters of a lake, pond or slough, as well as to a stream. Turner v. James Canal Co. [Cal.] 99 P 520. What is a reasonable share or use of water for irrigation by each riparian owner is a question of fact. Id. Where water flows from a river into a slough or from the slough into the river as the one may be higher than the other in season, a riparian owner on the slough has an equal right with an owner on the river to divert water for irrigation. Id. Riparian owner may make reasonable use of water, but must not use more than his share for irrigation, and he must not pollute the water. Mentone Irr. Co. v. Redlands Elec. L. & P. Co. [Cal.] 100 P 1082.

30. Turner v. James Canal Co. [Cal.] 99 P 520. That one owners' low land would be benefited by overflow during flood season does not entitle him to enjoin diversion by upper owners for irrigation. Id. A riparian owner who has a right to take water for irrigation may do so at any point on his own land or on the land of another so long as he does not injure rights of other riparian owners between point of diversion and land to be irrigated. Id. So long as he takes no more than he is entitled to, it is immaterial at what point he diverts. Id. Riparian owner who has right to part of the water may change the flow by a dam if he does not divert more than he is entitled to. Arroyo Ditch & Water Co. v. Baldwin [Cal.] 100 P 874.

32. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. v. Curtis 213 U. S. 339. 53 Law. Ed. —.

33. The state has control of the public waters of the state and may prescribe rules whereby they may be appropriated and applied to a beneficial use. Idaho P. & Transp. Co. v. Stephenson [Idaho] 101 P 821.

34. Stat. 1885, p. 95, that use of all water appropriated for sale, rental or distribution, shall be a public use and subject to regulation, is valid. San Joaquin & Kings River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, [Cal.] 99 P 365.

35. When prior appropriators are not using it, the canal company may sell to others. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80.

36. Arroyo Ditch & W. Co. v. Baldwin [Cal.] 100 P 874. Owner of land by oral agreement as to priorities of water rights and possession and use of water for 13 years held to have title to water rights. Park v. Park [Colo.] 101 P 403.

37. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154.

38. Must be transferred by deed. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3. Subject to grant with or without land to which it is attached. Davis v. Randall [Colo.] 99 P 322. Since many of the earlier water rights acquired by appropriation, have not passed by deed, parol proof of possession is prima rigation cannot be taken under the power of eminent domain.[39] The applicability of the doctrine of prior appropriation depends on the laws under which title was taken.[40]

What may be appropriated. See 10 C. L. 2011—As a general rule all waters not subject to prior appropriation may be appropriated,[41] but water reserved by the government may not be appropriated.[42] The current of a stream is not subject to appropriation in Idaho.[43] The general government has power to reserve waters on the public domain and exempt them from appropriation under state laws.[44] Where Indians on a reservation had a prior right to a portion of the waters of a creek, others who had appropriated and were diverting such waters were properly enjoined from diverting a certain quantity of water.[45]

Method of appropriating. See 10 C. L. 2011—Water may not be appropriated for the purpose of propagating fish.[46] An appropriation consists of an actual diversion from a natural stream, followed within a reasonable time by an application of the water to some beneficial use.[47] As a general rule, no certain method is essential to an appropriation,[48] but in states where the doctrine of appropriation prevails, a method of appropriating is prescribed,[49] and if an appropriation is made under such laws, statutory requirements must be observed.[50] As a general rule, to confacie evidence of title. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3.

39. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 4156, providing that water used for irrigation cannot be taken by condemnation, held where a company sought to take so much of water of a lake as was not required for irrigation, it established a definite basis for a decree. Spokane Valley Land & W. Co. v. Jones & Co. [Wash.] 101 P 515.

40. Riparian lands in Arizona taken under Mexican grants confirmed by act of Congress held subject to prior appropriation of waters as allowed by Mexican law. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. v. Curtis, 213 U. S. 339, 53 Law. Ed. —.

41. Surplus water, remaining after domestic and stock demands of riparian owners on all lands entered subsequent to March 3, 1877, are supplied, is subject to appropriation. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Springs formed from seepage and percolating waters instead of subterranean stream are subject to appropriation and protected under Rev. St. U. S. § 2339. Le Quime v. Chambers 15 Idaho, 405, 98 P 415. Water in a stream used for plain mining and finding its way back to the stream may be appropriated. Head v. Hale [Mont.] 100 P 222. Under Sess. Law, 1903, p. 224, any person or association may appropriate for any useful purpose the waters of any stream, springs or seepage waters of lakes or other public waters in the state. Le Quime v. Chambers, 15 Idaho, 405, 98 P 415.

42. The effect of the language of 19 Stat. 377 "there shall be and remain and be held free for appropriation and use of the public for irrigation," etc., is a reservation to the public of all interest of the government in the water. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

43. Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & W. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 43. Rev. St. Idaho, 1887, § 3184, giving appropriators the right to place in the channel or on the banks of a stream machines for raising the water, gives a mere license to use an appropriate method; but such means do not attach as an appurtenance to the appropriation. Id.

44. Conrad Inv. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 829. Indian Treaty, May 1, 1888, c. 213, 25 Stat. 124, establishing Blackfeet Reservation, held to reserve to the Indians a prior right to a portion of the waters of Birch Creek. Id.

45. Conrad Inv. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 829. Settlers who had taken up land on faith of contracts with such person were not necessary parties. Id.

46. May not be appropriated to fill a series of reservoirs in which to propogate fish. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729.

47. Evidence sufficient to show an appropriation. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729.

48. Any successful application to a beneficial use. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Evidence sufficient to show an appropriation of 100 inches of water at a spring. Hilger v. Zabel [Mont.] 98 P 881. Evidence sufficient to show a valid appropriation by a person in 1902. City of Pocatello v. Bass, 15 Idaho 1, 96 P 120. U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437, relative to appropriation was merely a recognition of existing rights rather than creation of a new one. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Priority for storage purposes cannot be acquired by temporary storage for immediate use in temporary receptacles forming part of a continuous condult from carrying the water from the stream directly to the irrigated land. Windsor Reservoir Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729.

49. At the time of passage of desert land act (19 stat. 377) or mode of making appropriations then in use was adopted as part of the act. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

50. Riparian owners who desire to appropriate public waters must comply with the provision of the law the same as nonstitute an appropriation, some steps toward diversion are necessary,[51] and a drainage ditch cannot be relied upon as work toward such end unless it was so intended.[52] One may not acquire a water right on land of another without acquiring an easement in the land,[53] unless by virtue of statute;[54] but rights may be initiated by a ditch tapping the source of supply upon lands of another from whom no easement has been acquired.[55] Settlers on public lands may acquire by prior appropriation against subsequent settlers.[56] The method of appropriating under the federal desert land act is prescribed by the act[57] as well as the lands for which water rights may be acquired.[58] The right of an appropriator on public lands cannot be tacked to the right of a squatter.[59] The rights of an appropriator take effect as of the date of appropriation.[60] riparian owners. Idaho P. & Transp. Co. v. Stephenson [Idaho] 101 P 821. By Rev. Codes 1909, § 3253, the legislature has prescribed the method and procedure by which use of public waters of the state may be appropriated and applied. Id. Upon compliance with certain provisions of the act, the state engineer is authorized to issue the applicant a permit. Id. Upon proof of completion of works, the state engineer is required to issue a certificate of competition. Id. State Engineer may exact a fee upon issuance of such certificate. Id. Notices of appropriation posted within 200 feet of a place where another had posted notice, both intended for an extensive irrigation project, are in substantially the same place. Beckwith v. Sheldon [Cal.] 97 P 867. One who with others posts notices of appropriation may, with his associates, proceed under such notices to perfect their rights against all except those with prior rights. Id. Under Sess. Laws 1881, p. 142, requiring ditch owners prior to establishment of rights to file statement showing area to be irrigated, a decree is not void for failure to show area lying under the ditch where it fixed the volume of water represented by the carrying capacity of the ditch. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3. "Certificate" as used in Rev. Codes, § 3253 et seq., relative to appropriation of public waters and regulating issuance of certificate and license by state engineer, means the paper to be issued on proof of completion of the works. Idaho P. & Transp. Co. v. Stephenson [Idaho] 101 P 821. "License" means the paper to be issued upon proof of application to beneficial use of waters. Id.

51. To constitute appropriation for mining or irrigation purposes. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

52. One cannot for purpose of establishing prior appropriation avail himself of a ditch constructed for drainage, unless it appears that at the time it was dug it was intended for irrigation purposes. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

53. Prentice v. McKay [Mont.] 98 P 1081. Rev. Codes, §§ 4840-4891, regulating water rights applies only to appropriations made on public lands and to appropriations made by individuals having riparian rights. Id. Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2339, 2340 and Rev. Codes Mont. § 4840 et seq., does not authorize one person to go upon land of another to make an appropriation except by condemnation proceedings. Id.

54. Right to appropriate water on land of another may be acquired by condemnation proceedings under Const. art. § 15, declaring use of water to be a public use. Prentice v. McKay [Mont.] 98 P 1081. Where one attempted to make an appropriation upon land of another without condemnation or acquisition of an easement, the right amounted to a mere revocable license. Id.

55. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Where such owner does not complain nor revoke the license, others may not. Id.

56. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. A squatter upon public land may acquire such rights in the water that he can transfer it to another in which case the rights of the purchaser relate back to time of original division. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Mere claim of right to the land accompanied by diversion of water is sufficient to entitle him to transfer his water right. Id.

57. One who files under the desert land Act (19 Stat. 377) and makes affidavit that lands are desert will not be permitted to assert a right to water for irrigation as having been initiated prior to date of entry. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. It is necessary to the procurement of title to land under the desert land Act (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1548) that the inception of the title to the water located for such purposes depend upon a bona fide prior appropriation. Id.

58. When swamp lands have been reclaimed, if in an arid district, it comes within the rules respecting irrigation and riparian rights. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. That lands may originally have been swamp lands and acquired as such does not preclude the acquisition of a water right for irrigation. Id.

59. The right of an appropriator cannot be tacked to that of a mere squatter on public lands, who, while he may have applied the water to the land subsequently owned by the appropriator, has abandoned it. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Where a squatter on public land made an appropriation and then abandoned the land, a subsequent setter on such land could appropriate a right only from the date he took possession and such right did not relate back. Head v. Hale [Mont.] 100 P 222.

60. Where one commences a ditch and within a reasonable time prosecutes the work to completion and applies the water,

Limit, measure and extent of appropriation. See 10 C. L. 2012—Under the doctrine of appropriation, he who is first in time is first in right.[61] The rights of an appropriator depend upon the amount of his appropriation,[62] the time of use [63] and the amount he can apply to beneficial purposes;[64] and the amount appropriated is determined by the capacity of his canal [65] or reservoir.[66] An appropriator must exercise his rights with due regard to the rights of others [67] and must exercise the appropriation relates back to commencement of the work. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

61. So long as he applies the water to a beneficial use, he cannot be deprived of any part of his right. Arizona Copper Co. v. Gillespie [Ariz.] 100 P 465. If an appropriation was concurrent with settlement upon land above the ditch, the rights of the appropriator were superior to the riparian rights of the settler. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. Where A enters land claimed by B under homestead entry and appropriated the waters of a spring and thereafter B's entry is cancelled and C enters the land as a homestead, he takes subject to A's appropriation which will be protected by Rev. St. U. S. § 2339, and the laws of Idaho. LeQuime v. Chambers, 15 Idaho, 405, 98 P 415. Such land held impressed by A's servitude. C. did not complain and the government could not because of the assent given by statute. Id. Evidence held to show riparian rights superior to rights of appropriation. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Where a storage company makes an appropriation of a given volume, which is junior to that of a reservoir company for its particular reservoir, it was senior as to all water of the river as against all subsequent appropriators for storage purposes. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729. Under desert Land Act. 19 Stat. 377, no limit is fixed as to the time a right to the acquirement of a water right may be exercised except that he who first diverts and applies water to a beneficial use is given the better right. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Though land was patented prior to 14 Stat. 253, protecting rights of prior appropriators of water on public lands, a prior appropriator would be protected as against the patentee. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. All lands settled upon prior to enactment of 19 stat. 377 were accepted with knowledge that the first to divert and apply waters if a stream have a superior right. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 99 P 1083. Where water rights under which one claimed were located prior to any settlement on the lands, he was entitled upon prior to enactment of 19 Stat. 2340, and under the custom in force in the territory. Driskill v. Rebbe [S. D.] 117 NW 135.

62. Since a priority may be measured by both volume and time, the area under the ditch which it is proposed to irrigate is immaterial. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3. Where priorities were fixed by a decree which did not state the area under the ditch, the extent of actual use of water, within a reasonable time after the decree is admissible on the extent of the appropriation. Id. Where water is claimed as "waste" from the farm of an adjacent user, the quantity diverted by such person in excess of his needs is the amount appropriated and the person receiving and applying it acquires a vested right in it dating from first use. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. All rights are limited in their application to the number of acres and to land for which acquired except when increase on acreage or change of use will not prejudice others. Id. "Inch" is estimated on the basis of 40 inches to one "second foot." Id.

63. Where water was taken only up to June 1st, the right was limited to that period. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154.

64. Beneficial use by and needs of an appropriator determines the limit of his rights. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Not quantity originally diverted nor capacity of his ditches. Id. Evidence held to show that from one-third to two-thirds of an inch per acre, estimated on basis of 40 inches to one "second foot," was ample for irrigation of lands involved. Id. A bona fide intention to devote water to a beneficial use may comprehend the use to be made by or through other persons upon lands other than that of appropriator. Id. "Duty of water" means the quantity essential for the irrigation of a given tract. Id.

65. Under the constitution and laws of Idaho, a person cannot acquire a water right beyond the carrying capacity of the canal. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80. The aggregate rights of users of water from a canal cannot exceed the capacity of the canal. Temporary deliveries at times when regular consumers are not demanding their full amount of water cannot be turned into perpetual right. Id. Where cotenants claim a right by reason of construction of a canal, the limit of their rights is determined by the capacity of the canal and not by subsequent diversion. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. "Head of water," as used in reference to water for irrigation purposes means quantity entering the head of any canal or ditch. Id. "Capacity" in Mills' Ann. St. § 2403, providing that reservoirs may be awarded priorities to extent of capacity for storage purpose means the amount of water the reservoir will hold. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729.

66. Under Mills' Ann. St. §§ 2403, 2408, a storage reservoir is entitled to but one filling during the season. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729. Two separate reservoir priorities of the same capacity and date may not be granted to the same reservoir as the result of the same construction and act of storing. Id.

67. The right to appropriate water from reasonable care to prevent waste,[68] and, when he is not using the water, he must permit it to flow down to others.[69] An appropriator of a certain amount of water from a stream does not acquire as an appurtenant the right to use the current of the stream as a means of operating devices to raise the water from the stream.[70] Where prior and subsequent appropriators agree as to division of the waters, each will thereafter be estopped to deny the rights of the other to divert water under the agreement.[71] The dedication within the purview of the constitution of Idaho is commensurate only with the character of water dedicated.[72] Vested rights to the use of water cannot be taken away by the state engineer.[73]

As a general rule, an appropriator may change his point of division,[74] mode of collecting[75] or place of use[76] or storage,[77] providing rights of others are not thereby prejudiced.[78] In some states such right is given by statute.[79]

a stream is not an unrestricted one but must be exercised with regard to the rights of the public and other appropriators. Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & W. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 43. One, who has adopted, as a means of raising water from the stream, water wheels operated by the current, has no cause of action against a lower appropriator who constructs a dam which destroys the current. Id. A mining company may be required to first drain water into settling basins where its use of the water pollutes it, but the decree should not require the complainant to construct the basins at his own expense. Arizona Copper Co. v. Gillespie [Ariz.] 100 P 465.

68. The water must be used in such manner and by such economical method as will secure the greatest duty available, even though it becomes necessary to change old methods at considerable expense. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

69. As between parties whose rights are adjudicated at all times when water is not needed by one, it should, when needed by others, remain subject to their use. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

70. Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & W. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 43.

71. Saunders v. Robison, 14 Idaho, 770, 95 P 1057. Evidence held to show that rights were not based on appropriation but upon contract. City of Denver v. Walker [Colo.] 101 P 348.

72. Whether waste or surplus, subject to prior appropriation and not needed by them temporarily. Niday v. Barker [Idaho] 101 P 254. Where water is delivered on land and used for irrigation purposes, the right becomes a dedication within Const. art. 15, § 4. Id.

73. Lockwood v. Freeman, 15 Idaho, 395, 98 P 295. When all water of a stream has been appropriated, the state engineer cannot deprive a prior appropriator of his rights by giving another license to use the water. Id. Subsequent appropriators properly enjoined. Id.

74. One who has a right to take a certain amount of percolating waters may change his place of diversion. Barton v. Riverside Water Co. [Cal.] 101 P 790. Where new artesian wells drew their water from the same supply from which owners had previously taken water under a valid diversion, they constituted a mere change in the place of diversion. Id. Where one makes an appropriation on one fork of a stream and a subsequent appropriator makes his appropriation below the fork, he cannot complain because the prior oppropriator conveys his waters to the other fork where he gets full benefit of all the waters left. Saunders v. Robison, 14 Idaho, 770, 95 P 1057. In proceeding to change one's point of diversion another held not prejudiced by ruling permitting holders of the legal title to rights of one of the petitioners to consent to the change. Baltes v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3.

75. Where a company had for 15 years been diverting a certain amount of water from an artesian basin by means of cuts and trenches, he was entitled when the supply commenced to fail to use wells. Barton v. Riverside Water Co. [Cal.] 101 P 790.

76. Where water is conveyed through a natural channel, users may let the waters commingle and take it out at some other point, if no prejudice results to other users. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Owners of a right may change the method of conveying the water to the point of use if other rights are not prejudiced. Id. May use ravine, gulch, or natural channel of a stream. Id.

Contra: An appropriator from a stream for irrigation of land on one side of the stream cannot, as against subsequent appropriators, use his water on the other side of the stream. Williams v. Altnow [Or.] 97 P 539.

77. Change of place of storage from one reservoir to another, is, so far as appropriators are concerned, analogous to change of place of use. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729.

78. Where users seek to change the point of diversion, due allowance must be made for evaporation and other incidental losses and be deducted from the quantity awarded under the original diversion and method of use. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. A change of use or point of diversion will not be permitted where it will prejudice the interests of other appropriators. Id. One who inaugurates water rights in reclamation of land lost to another cannot change the use thereof to other lands where not to do so would work prejudice to other appropriators. Id. He will be treated as having abandoned such right. Id.

79. Rev. Codes, § 4842, expressly provides that an appropriator may change the point of diversion or use of water if other users

Right to supply from water companies.[See 10 C. L. 2012]—In some states water companies are required by law to supply consumers with water to the extent of their appropriation,[80] if the consumer complied with the conditions which entitle him to water,[81] providing their entire supply is not subject to prior appropriation[82] which fact, in Idaho, the consumer has the burden to prove,[83] and for refusal to do so the company is liable for damages sustained.[84] In California a water company is liable in punitive damages, if through fraud or malice, it refuses to supply water.[85] In Idaho a consumer cannot be deprived of his supply without his consent,[86] but a water company is prohibited from contracting to deliver more water than its canal will carry,[87] and a contract for surplus water applies only to such water.[88] In case of shortage of supply, the rights of consumers rest in the are not prejudiced. Head v. Hale [Mont.] 100 P 222. Under Laws 1881, p. 143, the right to change a point of diversion is not absolute, where such change will injure another. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3. Under Laws 1903, p. 278, one, to be entitled to change his point of diversion, must show a right to the water. Id.

80. Under St. 1885, p. 95, requiring companies which appropriate water for sale to sell to the extent of the supply, a complaint alleging that a company had water and refused to supply it held to state a cause of action. Lowe v. Yolo County Consol. Water Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 379. Complaint against water company for failure to deliver water for irrigation which does not show that Civ. Code, § 552, relative to duty of company to furnish water for irrigation applies, is not bad for failure to allege that the company has sufficient water to supply plaintiff after other consumers entitled to a preference have been supplied. Id. Where a right is dedicated under art. 15, § 4, Constitution, expense of delivery, waste, etc., cannot be charged to the consumer. Niday v. Barker [Idaho] 101 P 254.

81. Complaint which shows that prior to demand the company refused to supply plaintiff with water shows absence of necessity for demand or tender of rates. Lowe v. Yolo County Consol. Water Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 379. Where one is entitled to water from a ditch company and does everything that the law requires to entitle him to it, the company is bound to deliver him the water and cannot require him to do things not required by law. Green v. Byers [Idaho] 101 P 79. If water has been once dedicated to land, and shut off by the company, all the user has to show is prior use and willingness to comply with regulations. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80. The company must prove why water was shut off, or that the dedication was less than a perpetual one. Id.

82. The fact that a company has supplied water to a consumer so as to amount to a dedication within Constitution, art. 15, § 4, raises a presumption that the company had such amount over the volume subject to prior appropriation. Niday v. Barker [Idaho] 101 P 254.

83. In Idaho, one demanding water from a water company has the burden to prove that the company has sufficient water to supply him and that its canal has sufficient to carry such supply in addition to prior users. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80. Complaint held to show facts sufficient to establish such fact. Id. Finding that there was a surplus of water carried by the canal held erroneous. Id.

84. Complaint against water company for refusal to furnish water for irrigation, which alleges that because of such refusal plaintiff's crop was destroyed, shows need of water for irrigation. Lowe v. Yolo County Consol. Water Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 379.

85. The obligation of a company organized to sell water to furnish water is created by Const. art. 14, § 1, and not by St. 1885, p. 95, and a company which is guilty of fraud or malice in failing to furnish water is liable in exemplary damages under Code, § 3294. Lowe v. Yolo County Consol. Water Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 379.

86. Under Const. art. 15, § 4, where water has once been sold to one who settles on agricultural land, he cannot thereafter be deprived of his annual supply without his consent. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80. Where an owner has purchased a water right from a canal company at a specified rate, he cannot be deprived of it without just compensation by organization of an irrigation district and sale to it by the canal company. Knowles v. New Sweden Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 101 P 81. Such right is a property right. Id. A clear distinction exists between rights a party acquires by contract with a canal company for a water supply and rights acquired under Const. art. 15, § 4, making perpetual dedication of waters to lands upon which they have been once used. Id. Condemnation of the former should not interrupt the latter. Id.

87. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 382, prohibits a water company from contracting to deliver more water than its canal will carry. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80.

88. Where all water of a canal has been dedicated and, when not needed by appropriators, is sold to others, the latter dedication extends only to the right to use the water when not required by the prior appropriator. Gerber v. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 100 P 80. Held a user could not acquire a perpetual water right by temporary use at times when prior users were not demanding their full amount of water. Id. In this case, held that officers of canal company could not by their acts terms of their contracts.[89] In Colorado, distribution of waters is regulated by statute.[90] It is presumed that the superintendent of irrigation distributed the water according to priority of appropriation as he is required by law to do.[91]

The right of appropriation may be lost only by abandonment or adverse possession.[See 10 C. L. 2014]—To constitute abandonment there must be concurrence of intent and actual failure to use.[92] Nonuser alone is insufficient.[93] What facts will work an abandonment depends on the circumstances of each case.[94] Involuntary abandonment of land will not work a forfeiture of water rights previously initiated in connection therewith.[95]

Adverse user for the statutory period establishes an adverse claim.[96] Such user must be hostile to the rights of the owner.[97]

(§ 13) B. Rights in ditches and canals.[98]—[See 10 C. L. 2015]—The right to maintain a ditch across lands of another rests in grant,[99] prescription,[1] license,[2] or con-

estop the company from putting in issue the fact that its canal would not carry more water than prior users were entitled to. Id. Under Const. art. 15, § 4, a water company that already has sufficient customers to use its supply is not required to perpetually furnish water to one to whom it had furnished water when its regular customers did not require it. Id. Where a canal company furnishes one with waste water from a drain ditch supplied by water wasting from other lands, the user cannot compel it to maintain such waste water even though rental is charged. Id. Where a canal company supplies waste water under a sale contract, the same becomes a dedication of waste water only and the user can compel it to furnish only waste water and not a perpetual supply. Id.

89. Contracts between irrigation company and users held to place all users on an equality in case of shortage. Jackson v. Indian Creek Reservoir Ditch & Irr. Co. [Idaho] 101 P 814. Held error to decree one user a priority of right over others. Id.

90. Laws 1887, p. 259, providing for distribution of irrigation waters, is valid. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 98 P 16.

91. Mills, Ann. St. § 2448. Complaint to enjoin him from closing certain head gates held insufficient. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 98 P 16. Averment that plaintiff's rights were superior to rights of others in another district held insufficient since they did not represent consumers in such other district. Id.

92. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Appropriator for mining purposes, who worked diligently in developing the claims for several years, held not to have abandoned his appropriation. Thorndyke v. Alaska Perseverance Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 657.

93. Nonuser alone will not work a forfeiture unless continued for the period of limitations. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

94. Owners of mining ditch who took water therefrom for irrigation, by leasing their interest therein, abandoned their irrigation rights in the ditch. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. Where an appropriator fails to use all water diverted, and for an unreasonable time delays increasing his use, subsequent increase of use will be subject to intervening rights. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

95. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

96. Proof of 10 years' continuous appropriation of water to a beneficial use is prima facie evidence of adverse use. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Use of water for 12 or 15 years held adverse so as to give title. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. Evidence sufficient to show that one by actual use for more than the statutory period had acquired the right to use 25 inches of water from a stream for irrigation. Davies v. Angelo [Cal. App.] 96 P 909. Owner of land on which a lake was situated who acquiesced in appropriation of water therefrom to feed a canal for 93 years held barred to enjoin such use. Camp v. Lake Drummond Canal & W. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 238.

97. Use of water is not adverse until it becomes hostile to rights of another. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. Where adverse possession is established by proof of continuous use, the onus of proof cast upon contestant is met by proof that during the period there was no shortage of supply below the adverse claimant. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083.

99. Where an irrigation ditch and right of way are property of one, another is not aggrieved by an order requiring that he refrain from interfering therewith. Cottonwood Ditch Co. v. Thom [Mont.] 101 P 825. Where a ditch was completed across one's land before he acquired any rights therein, he could not complain that he suffered injury because of continued use of the ditch. Id. Evidence sufficient to show that plaintiff's grantor of an interest in an irrigation ditch did not, prior to his conveyance to plaintiff, convey any interest to another. Bowen v. Webb, 37 Mont. 479, 97 P 839. Evidence sufficient to show that one had the right to carry 40 inches of water through a pipe line for four days each month. Collins v. Gray [Cal.] 97 P 142.

1. Evidence sufficient to show that one had acquired a prescriptive right to main-demnation.[8] Federal statutes provide for ditch rights of way over public lands.[4] One who has not acquired a right of way for an irrigation ditch over public lands prior to their entry as a homestead must arrange for such right of way with the entryman.[5] The fact that one has located a water right does not give him any right to build ditches across lands of another without acquiring an easement.[6] An irrigation ditch may have two or more priorities belonging to the same or different persons.[7] An owner who negligently permits water to seep from an irrigation ditch, because of defects in the ditch, to the injury of another, is liable in damages.[8] Damages may be recovered for changing the course of an irrigation ditch.[9]

(§ 13) C. Remedies and procedure.[10]—See 10 C. L. 2016—Suits relative to water rights are sui generis, concerning which all questions of practice are not provided for by statute or precedent, and courts are not bound in all cases by rules of practice usually invoked.[11] A suit to determine the extent and priority of water right partakes of the nature of an action to quiet title to land.[12] The venue of such actions is fixed by statute,[13] and in some states all persons interested may be joined.[14]

tain a ditch over land of another, and the right to conduct through it a certain quantity of water. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178. Prescriptive right to a ditch held not extinguished by leases purporting to be signed by the owners of the prescriptive right, etc., under Civ. Code, § 811, providing that a servitude is extinguished by disuse for the period prescribed for acquiring title. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178. Where one had acquired a prescriptive right to a ditch and a third person subsequently claimed to own it and executed leases therefor, held that while the effect of the leases might be to prevent acquisition of title by prescription they would not divest a title already acquired. Strong v. Baldwin. [Cal.] 97 P 178.

3. In Idaho, irrigation canals are a public use, and the power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire rights of way. Portneuf Irrigating Co. v. Budge [Idaho] 100 P 1046. Where a condemnation judgment gave one the right to construct an irrigation ditch, upon payment of certain compensation, and construction of a culvert, held he was entitled to comply with the provision relative to the culvert at any time, and should not be limited as to time. Mundy v. Hart [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 236.

4. Under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2339, 2340, relative to irrigation rights, one who completes a ditch across public lands, and who is in possession at the time another makes entry thereon, acquires a right of way across such homestead. Cottonwood Ditch Co. v. Thom [Mont.] 101 P 825. Under 26 Stat. 1095, granting right of way over public lands for ditches, canals, reservoirs, etc., upon filing map thereof and its approval by the secretary of the interior, such approval is essential, and, where it is refused because the site has been withdrawn from sale, the company acquired no right by filing a map. United States v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496. Vested rights in public lands to rights of way for ditches and canals, under Rev. St. §§ 2339, 3340, are not acquired until actual completion of the work, so that water can be applied to a beneficial use. United Sates v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496.

5. Rasmussen v. Blust [Neb.] 120 NW 184. The construction of an irrigation canal through public lands, without first securing the consent of the general government or obtaining such right from an entryman, who afterwards abandons the land, gives the owner of the canal no rights as against a subsequent entryman. Id.

13. The venue of actions for injuries to land by diversion of water is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392, and the suit may be brought in one county though the property is situated in another. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502.

14. Rev. Civ. Code, § 4852, providing that in an action for protection of water rights plaintiff may make parties all persons who have diverted water from the stream and in one action settle all rights, is permissive and not mandatory and defendants are not

In an action by an irrigation company to quiet title to water of a stream, it is immaterial whether the company owned the water or merely distributed it for owners.[15] The sufficiency[16] and amendment of pleadings is controlled by general rules.[17] In Colorado a proceeding is prescribed by law to change a point of diversion,[18] and the procedure is regulated by statute.[19]

The question of title of sundry owners of water covered by priorities awarded in the same ditch cannot be settled in the adjudication proceedings.[20] The question of exchange of water between the same or different owners cannot be determined in a statutory action to establish relative priorities to store water.[21] Rights to the use of water for irrigation are of such importance to those entitled thereto that courts should exercise great care in granting ex parte injunction.[22] The injunctive remedy to prevent continuance of diversion to the detriment of a prior appropriator operates in personam.[23]

A decree should be definite and certain in its terms[24] and be in conformity to the issues, proof[25] and findings.[26] The scope and binding force of a decree rests

17. Where plaintiffs in original complaint alleged that defendants were entitled to only sufficient water to irrigate 15 acres under the contract pleaded, it was proper to allow an amendment to allege that plaintiffs were owners of a certain water right and were entitled to the amount designated in notices of location. Driskill v. Rebbe [S. D.] 117 NW 135.

18. Where equitable owners of a water right petition for a change of the point of diversion, the legal owners were entitled to appear and consent to the change. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3.

19. In proceedings to change the point of diversion, the court should ascertain the volume of petitioner's right in cubic feet per second, but not the duration of his use, unless it necessarily results in an enlarged use. Bates v. Hall [Colo.] 98 P 3. In proceeding to change point of diversion, held, it was the duty of the court to determine whether an exhibit or the record represented the extent of petitioner's rights. Id. In proceeding to change point of diversion and place of use, other users held entitled to show that such change would alter conditions and result in an enlarged use. Id.

23. Where personal service has been had, the court has jurisdiction to award injunctive relief, and such decree is entitled to full faith and credit in the courts of every state. Taylor v. Hulett, 15 Idaho, 265, 97 P 37. The jurisdiction of the courts of Idaho to determine appropriations within the state is not ousted by an answer setting up that defendant has an appropriation and diverts and uses the water in the state of Wyoming. 25. In action by user of water against an irrigation company based upon a contract, it is error to render a decree for the user based upon an appropriation. Jackson v. Indian Creek Reservation Ditch & Irr. Co. [Idaho] 101 P 814. Decree that one owns a right by appropriation where the proof shows a contract right is erroneous. City and County of Denver v. Walker [Colo.] 101 P 348. Where complaint alleges a right by appropriation and proof shows a contract right, there is a fatal variance. Id. Where one claimed a prescriptive right to divert 400 cubic feet of water, but evidence showed the capacity of its canal did not exceed 175 feet and that it could not apply more than 100 feet, it was not an abuse of discretion to enjoin it from diverting more than 220 feet. Miller v. Madera Canal & Irr. Co. [Cal.] 99 P 502. Parties who claim through the same diversion from same ditch held tenants in common. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. In action with other appropriators where no issues are framed between them, their relative rights will not be determined. Id. Where the real object of a suit was to declare that certain persons had not right to waters of a stream and persons not parties owned riparian lands, and the evidence was not sufficient upon which to determine the relative rights of the parties, the court did not err in failing to make such determination. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178. Where one relies on adverse possession in its terms.[27] A decree adjudicating rights and priorities to the use of waters of a stream adjudicates the rights and priorities to waters of tributaries of such stream above the respective points of diversion.[28] In a suit involving priorities, the court may make reasonable regulations for use by the parties.[29] Owing to the difficulty in the enforcement of decrees, where there are many conflicting interests, the trial court may make such supplemental decrees as are essential to make the appellate decree effective.[30] In Montana in a suit to quiet title to a ditch, the court should administer complete relief.[31]

but his evidence is insufficient but tends to show appropriation, his rights may be established under that doctrine. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. Adverse possession and prior appropriation are not inconsistent. Id. Where a judgment did not purport to determine the extent of riparian rights in a stream, whether allegations were sufficiently certain as to be the extent of such rights is immaterial. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178.

26. Where the court found that one made two distinct appropriations, one on March 5, 1901, for 200 feet per second, and one on October 22, it was error to decree him a priority of 400 feet as of March 5. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729. A finding that one had used a pipe line for five years, accompanied by a finding of all facts necessary to show acquisition of an adverse right, held a good finding of an interest in the pipe line. Collins v. Gray [Cal.] 97 P 142. Finding that one is owner of 25 inches of water from a stream held to negative any claim of right of another in or to such water. Davies v. Engelo [Cal. App.] 96 P 909.

27. Order in which claimant's names are recited in a decree did not denote determination of priorities between them, especially as Mills' Ann. Decree in statutory proceeding that one is sole owner of ditch, even if conclusive between that ditch and other ditches taking water from the same source, is not conclusive as between several claimants to ownership of the ditch. Rollins v. Fearnley [Colo.] 101 P 345. A judgment in a prior proceeding that certain reservoir right was senior to others held not res judicata as to persons not parties, nor as to other reservoirs. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729. A decree in an action between A. and B. adjudicating their rights in a stream for irrigation of tracts then owned is not binding upon B. as to his right to use water on a tract purchased subsequently from a stranger to the action. Josslyn v. Daly, 15 Idaho, 137, 96 P 568. A decree that does not specifically authorize the prior appropriator to take the water from the watershed permanently must be construed as not giving that right. Spokane Ranch & W. Co. v. Beatty, 37 Mont. 342, 96 P 727.

28. Josslyn v. Daly, 15 Idaho, 137, 96 P 568. The courts of Idaho in determining water rights may determine priorities on the same stream situated higher up and beyond the state line, in order to fairly determine the relative rights of the parties in the subject-matter located in that state. which bonds may be issued,[37] and the terms of the bonds,[38] are prescribed by statute. One who owns his own water right and would not be benefited by organization of a district may have his land excluded.[39] In all collateral proceedings, benefits assessed are not open to revisal or review.[40] In California property of an irrigation district is exempt.[41]

§ 15. Water companies and water supply districts. Water companies.[42]—See 10 C. L. 2019—The power of a water company under its franchise to lay pipes in the street cannot be collaterally attacked by another corporation in a suit for an injunction.[43] Where a water company is supplying water in excess of the rights given by its franchise, the remedy is a proceeding by the state.[44] The supplying of water is a public use.[45]

*Water franchises.*See 10 C. L. 2021—The grant of an exclusive right to maintain a waterworks system is the grant of a franchise.[46] As a general rule the power to grant a franchise is prescribed by statute.[47] A franchise will not be construed as exclusive unless made so by its terms.[48] Where a city grants an exclusive franchise to a water company it may not enter into competition with it,[49] but other-

Under Sess. Laws, 1899, p. 408, an irrigation company has no power to levy assessments against land within the district for which owners already own water rights, until it first purchases such rights. Id. In Idaho before a district can levy an assessment it must be in a position to render some benefits. Id.

36. Under Sess. Laws, 1899, p. 408, personal service upon landowners is not necessary to render judgment confirming an assessment binding. Knowles v. New Sweden Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 101 P 81. One dissatisfied with determination of board of directors of the district that lands will be benefited by organization of the district may have such determination reviewed. Id. One dissatisfied with judgment confirming assessment has right of appeal under Sess. Laws 1899, p. 408. Id.

37. The power of an irrigation district to issue bonds must be exercised in the manner prescribed by law. Stowell v. Rialto Irr. Dist. [Cal.] 100 P 248. lumbus, 161 F 135. Where a city granted an exclusive franchise to a water company, and its service becoming deficient, the city took steps to operate an opposition plant, held, it not being entitled to enter into competition, the injunction of the water company would be denied only in case the city elected to purchase its plant at fair value. Id.

50. City granted a franchise to a company, but such franchise was not exclusive and no right was given the company to take water from a certain lake, held, where city thereafter procured statutory authority to establish a system of its own and take water from the lake, it was not liable for breach of the contract embodied in the ordinance granting the franchise. Stolz v. Syracuse, 59 Misc. 600, 111 NYS 467.

51. Exclusive franchise to supply a city with water held a perpetuity and monopoly and void under Const. art. 1, § 3. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Houston [Tex.] 116 SW 36. Contract by which a city granted a company an exclusive franchise to furnish water for fire hydrants held a "perpetuity" and monopoly in violation of Const. art. 1, § 26, and void, and damages could not be recovered for its breach. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Houston [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 973.

52. A water company shut down its plant on the ground that earnings were insufficient to meet expenses, and a receiver was appointed with consent of the city to operate the plant. Held the receiver was a trustee for the city and company, and the city could not insist on forfeiture for nonsupply while it was receiving water from the receiver. No claim of damages as if no water had been furnished. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Burlington [Kan.] 101 P 649.

The Metropolitan Sewerage Commission created by Laws, 1906, p. 1646, amended by Laws, 1908, p. 1208, to prevent pollution of waters, is a state commission and greater New York charter does not apply to its employes. People v. Metz, 61 Misc. 363, 113 NYS 1007. Under Manistee City Charter Loc. Acts 1882, p. 23, amended by Loc. Acts, 1903, p. 442, and by §§ 2, 5, 8, 9, 11, 13, 17, c. 33 of said amending act, and Loc. Acts 1882, pp. 33, 42, held board of water commissioners was an agency of the city subject to its general supervision and control and the council was entitled to audit and examine its books. Field v. Manistee Water Com'rs [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 63, 120 NW 610. The board may be compelled by mandamus to permit such audit. Id.

54. Water commissioners of Perth Amboy held to have power to condemn land and held, where the supreme court found that land the board contracted to purchase for $15,000 was worth but $1,000, its action in setting aside the resolution to purchase would not be reviewed. Mundy v. Fountain [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 693. Laws 1895, p. 2067, empowering Rochester water commissioners to close a highway on the shore of a lake to improve the city water supply taken from such lake, held void as a local law. City of Rochester v. Gray, 60 Misc. 591, 112 NYS 774.

55. Under Laws 1905, pp. 2034, 2039, authorizing commissioners of appraisal to assess compensation for lands acquired by New York for water supply, a person interested in land taken has three years within which to present his claim. In re Simmons, 116 NYS 439. Under Laws 1905, p. 2027, authorizing acquisition of land for water supply, and requiring commissioners of appraisal to determine claims presented, jurisdiction is acquired by a claimant appearing and presenting his claim. Id. The jurisdiction of the commissioners is only obtained from the statute and the order under which they are appointed. Id. Where fee owners appear and present their claim, payment should not be delayed because claimant of value of an easement failed to present his claim. Id. Under such law the report of the commissioners will be remitted to them with instructions to report separately the value of the fee and the claim of respective owners, leaving undetermined the value of an easement no claim for which had been presented. Id. Owners of the fee cannot conclude by their evidence the owner of an easement in the land as to its value, he is entitled to file his claim and have the commissioners determine its value. Id. Laws 1905, p. 2023, requiring submission of maps, etc., to state water commission before taking lands for sources of water supply, held that "sources" may refer to a lake, stream or pond or to any well defined water shed, and the statute did not exclude from its operation a whole territory in which a city has incidently procured some part of its supply. Queens County Water Co. v. O'Brien, 131 App. Div. 91, 115 NYS 495.

56. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 47 S 358.

58. A village corporation with power only to raise money sufficient to support a suitable number of hydrants and fire apparatus has no power to enter into a contract, with a water company giving it the right after certain number of years to purchase the water works plant. Phillips Village Corp. v. Phillips Water Co. [Me.] 71 A 474. Where it has made such contract and is afterwards authorized to "vote to purchase" the plant, such legislative authority may have retroactive effect and validate the contract, but when it attempts to avail itself of the authority it must proceed according to the terms of the statute. The procedure of appraisers in causing books of the company to be examined without the presence of counsel for the parties was within their discretion and did not invalidate the appraisal. Id. An appraisal of a large system under contract of purchase will not be invalidated because title to a small part of the property not vital to the integrity of the system is defective, nor because it may include property not necessary to the system. Id.

61. So long as they act honestly and in good faith they have a wide discretion as to methods of procedure. Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha [C. C. A.] 162 F 225.

62. Where contract between city and water company provided for determination of value of the plant by arbitrators if the city desired to buy, and that notice of appointment of such appraisers could be served on the company or its assigns, service of such notice on secretary and superintendent of a company to which it had assigned its rights was sufficient. City of Eau Claire v. Eau Claire Water Co., 137 Wis. 517, 119 NW 555. In such case notice to mortgagee of the company of daily hearings before the arbitrators was not necessary, since such mortgagee had merely a lien and could exercise no control over the arbitration. Id.

63. Where contract provided for determination of price of system by arbitrators, evidence held insufficient to show such undervaluation by appraisers as to indicate fraudulent and arbitrary action by them. City of Eau Claire v. Eau Claire Water Co., 137 Wis. 517, 119 NW 555. Where a contract between a city and a water company provided that if the city purchased the plant the value should be determined by arbitrators, an item for laying certain extensions after the arbitration was commenced and payable under a separate contract need not be included in the award or tender. Id.

64. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497. Failure to remove a rag mill in compliance with a provision in a contract to do so does not entitle the city to deduct the price of removal, where it gets a pure supply and such removal was stipulated for only for such purpose. Id.

65. Where record of town meeting called for purpose of accepting Stat. 1904, p. 469, authorizing towns to establish water systems shows that it was voted under article in the warrant to proceed to ballot as required by section 12, check list to be used, it is presumed that ballot was taken according to vote. Seward v. Revere Water Co., 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749. Option given a town to purchase waterworks of a company, where majority of legal voters adopt a resolution authorizing the purchase may be exercised on majority of voters voting on the question though such majority is not a majority of the electors. Town of Southington v. Southington Water Co., 80 Conn. 646, 69 A 1023. Act of city in connecting with its water system a supply purchased at the same time the entire system was purchased held not a change of the plans of the system within Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 835, requiring submission to voters. Griffin v. Tacoma, 49 Wash. 524, 95 P 1107. Stat. 1904, c. 457, authorizing a town to establish a water system after acceptance of the act by two-thirds of voters present and voting, does not require acceptance by two-thirds of all voters of the town. Seward v. Revere Water Co., 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749.

66. Where electors of a city authorized purchase of all sources of water supply adopt the contract.[67] A citizen who seeks to enjoin a town from purchasing a system on the ground that it will be a nuisance need not first apply to the town to rescind its contract.[68]

Contracts for public supply. See 10 C. L. 2024—In Georgia, cities have power to contract for a water supply.[69] A contract by a city is presumed to be for the benefit of the municipality as a whole, and not for the benefit of its inhabitants as individuals,[70] and, where a city has contracted for a water supply for itself and its inhabitants, the city, and not the inhabitants, is the proper party to compel performance of such contract,[71] but a contract created by ordinance by which one agrees to supply water to a city and its inhabitants, and to supply water for fire protection, is one for the benefit of the inhabitants as well as for the city.[72] Supply contracts must have a reasonable construction and be read in the light of surrounding circumstances.[73] A city and its inhabitants on one side and a water owned or operated by the company, they authorized the purchase of certain springs from which the company had not actually drawn water, it not being necessary to specifically mention such springs in the ordinance submitting such question to the voters. Griffin v. Tacoma, 49 Wash. 524, 95 P 1107. Where the required number of voters present at town meeting ratified a contract to purchase a water system and authorized the issue of bonds under St. 1904, p. 469, c. 457, a lawful purchase was thereby affected and bonds were valid. Seward v. Revere Water Co. 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749.

67. If action taken by a town to purchase a water system under Stat. 1882, p. 103, c. 142, is irregular, the town may ratify and adopt the contract. Seward v. Revere Water Co., 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749. A purchase by a town of water company's system cannot be avoided on the ground that an officer of the company acted as moderator at town meeting when purchase was made, where it does not appear that he acted corruptly. Id.

68. A citizen who seeks to enjoin a town from purchasing a water power and pond on the ground that it will be a public nuisance need not show that he has applied to the town to have it rescind its contract to purchase. Jones v. North Wilkesboro [N. C.] 64 SE 866.

Houck v. Cape Girardeau Waterworks & Elec. Light Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1099.

73. Provision that water is to be free from pollution means that supply shall be pure when it reaches the city, and not that river shall be pure from source to point of intake. Jersey City v. Flynn [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 497. Provision that water shall be pure does not require absolute purity, but only that it shall be free from deleterious pollution. Id. Provision that plan had been prepared to prevent contamination from any source requires a system capable of preventing contamination under any conditions likely to occur. Id. Under contract for city supply, contractor held not required to provide against future conditions which might contaminate the supply. Id. Evidence held to show that waterworks were so constructed that it could be relied upon to constantly furnish pure water. Id. Evidence held to show that a filter was indispensably necessary to complete performance of a contract to furnish pure water. Id. Contract construed, and time when obligation of city to pay for water terminated declared. Id. Contract for temporary supply construed and held not to require water to be furnished from new works at the same rate. Id. The prohibition against polluting a stream is against polluting it at any point above the intake, regardless of whether it is polluted at the point of intake. Id. Letter held part of water supply contract and binding. Id. Supply contract construed, and held that the city was required to pay for water by the million gallons until it took title and paid for the waterworks. Id. Bill by city praying that defendant be required to convey to it a waterworks held not equivalent to tender of price, and did not confer on the city right to possession of the plant to which it was entitled only on payment of the price. Id. Evidence sufficient to show that a water company had failed to comply with its contract to furnish a municipality with a sufficient supply of wholesome water. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. v. Columbus, 161 F 135.

company on the other are entitled to such damages for breach of contract between the city and the company as are fairly contemplated by the terms of the contract.[74] A contract between a city and a water company is not so unreasonable that it cannot be specifically enforced, because it gives the city a right to purchase the plant, without a corresponding right in the company to enforce purchase.[75]

§ 16. Water service and rates.[76]—See 10 C. L. 2024—It is primarily the duty of a water company to make necessary connections with consumers[77] and keep their ditches in repair,[78] and where it has contracted to do so mandamus will issue to compel performance,[79] and the remedy need not be applied for in each individual case.[80] Under such circumstances, contracts with consumers by which they are bound to make connections are void.[81] Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a water company to supply a consumer with water.[82] The duty to extend mains[83] and furnish meters[84] rests in the terms of the franchise. A public water supply company is not required to furnish chemically pure water.[85] Where a city with power to maintain a system supplies water to an inhabitant for several years, an implied contract for water supply exists.[86]

Furnish facilities for delivering the water. Id. It is the duty of a canal company to turn water out of its canal at such place as will be most convenient for the consumer and will cause least waste. Niday v. Barker [Idaho] 101 P 254.

78. It is the duty of canal companies to keep their ditches in repair so as to carry water to consumers. Niday v. Barker [Idaho] 101 P 254.

79. International Water Co. v. El Paso [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 816. In mandamus to compel a company to supply water to a consumer who had refused to pay one admittedly exhorbitant bill, evidence held to show a bona fide dispute as to accuracy of the meter by which former service had been measured. Poole v. Paris Mountain Water Co., 81 SE 438, 62 SE 874.

80. Mandamus would lie by the city to compel the performance of the duty generally. International Water Co. v. El Paso [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 816.

81. Where the company had contracted to make such connections, contracts by it with consumers whereby they agreed to stand such expense are void, and did not preclude mandamus by the city to compel the company to perform the duty. International Water Co. v. El Paso [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 816.

82. Poole v. Paris Mountain Water Co., 81 S. C. 438, 62 SE 874.

83. Provision in ordinance that water company shall extend mains when requested by a majority of votes cast held to mean that the company was not required to make an extension unless a majority of those voting voted in favor of an extension, Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Burlington, [Kan.] 101 P 649.

84. Where a tenant and subtenant occupied a store building and each used water separately from the other, they were "separate consumers" within an ordinance providing for installation of meters, and the company was not required to furnish a meter for their joint use. Nogales Water Co. v. Neumann [Ariz.] 100 P 794.

85. Sufficient if water is reasonably pure. Peffer v. Pennsylvania Water Co., 221 Pa. 578, 70 A 870. "Ordinarily pure and wholesome" means reasonably clean and free from contaminating matter. Id. Where one filed a bill alleging that a water company supplied him with impure water, held it was proper to render a decree directing the company to file a statement under Act April 29, 1874, Act June 2, 1887, and Act May 16, 1887, regulating public water supply. Id.

86. May not arbitrarily shut off the supply. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Buffalo, 115 NYS 657. Railroad company having large interests is an "inhabitant," within Laws 1870, p. 1161, impowering the city of Buffalo to supply its inhabitants with water. Id. A city with power to maintain

Rules and regulations of service.[See 10 C. L. 2025]—Municipalities [87] and water companies [88] may adopt reasonable regulations of service. The fact that a regulation of a city furnishing free water for fire protection, requiring all water for private protection to pass through a meter furnished at the expense of the owner, has been put in force gradually is no ground for enjoining its enforcement in a particular case.[89] In order to restrain a municipality from cutting off the water supply to any inhabitant, it must be shown that irreparable injury or injustice will result.[90]

Injuries from deficient supply, equipment, or negligence.[See 10 C. L. 2025]—The great weight of authority is to the effect that a water company is not liable to an individual citizen for loss by fire,[91] but under an ordinance granting a franchise a system has power to deliver water to an inhabitant within the city to be stored outside the city for use partly within and partly without the city limits. Id.

87. Where an ordinance provides for disconnecting water on failure to pay rates within time, the city may not disconnect where rates have been tendered prior to shut-off. Royal v. Cordele [Ga.] 63 SE 826. Fee charged for turning on water, shut off for failure to pay rent, has no reference to failure of consumer to pay promptly. Id. Under St. 1855, p. 831, c. 435, authorizing the city of Lowell to maintain waterworks and ordinance vesting such power in a water board, a regulation requiring all waters taken from the city's mains for private fire protection to pass through a meter furnished by the city at the expense of the owner is a valid regulation. Shaw Stocking Co. v. Lowell, 199 Mass. 118, 85 NE 90. A municipality that furnishes water to its inhabitants has the right to designate the character of meter to be used. Anderson v. Berwyn, 135 Ill. App. 8.

88. Poole v. Paris Mountain Co., 81 S. C. 438, 62 SE 874. Regulation that water may be shut off without notice on failure to pay rent for 30 days is reasonable. Id. Where no bill was rendered for 1907 water until Jan. 1, 1908, the company was not entitled to shut off water until 30 days from that date. Where amount of water used by a hotel while meter was disconnected without their knowledge is approximately estimated, upon payment therefor, the hotel is entitled to enjoin cutting off of the water. Hoover v. Deffenbough [Neb.] 119 NW 1130. In mandamus to compel a company to furnish water, where it had been cut off on refusal of the consumer to pay an admittedly exhorbitant bill for prior service, it was only necessary for the consumer to show a bona fide dispute as to correctness of amount demanded. Poole v. Paris Mountain Water Co., 81 S. C. 438, 62 SE 874. The Macon Gaslight & Water Company in the exercise of its franchise is under contract to supply citizens with water at fixed rates, and is liable in damages for breach of such duty. Macon Gaslight & W. Co. v. Freeman, 4 Ga. App. 463, 61 SE 884. The citizen is under the correlative duty to pay rates in the manner prescribed, and failure to do so gives the company the right to shut off the water. Id.

89. Shaw Stocking Co. v. Lowell, 199 Mass. 118, 85 NE 90.

90. Anderson v. Berwyn, 135 Ill. App. 8.

91. Holloway v. Macon Gaslight & Water Co. [Ga.] 64 SE 330. A property owner whose property is destroyed by fire has no right of action against one who has contracted with the city to furnish water to it and its inhabitants. Houck v. Cape Girardeau Waterworks & Elec. L. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1099. City is under no obligation to furnish water for such purpose. Id. Water company held not liable to an inhabitant for failure to furnish sufficient pressure to extinguish a fire, where there was no special contract to that effect. Greenville Water Co. v. Beckham [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 889. A company contracting with a city to supply water to it and to its inhabitants and to supply water to extinguish fires does not undertake a public duty so as to be liable to a citizen for failure to supply water to extinguish a fire. Id. Contract between city and water company for water supply for city and its inhabitants held not for the benefit of inhabitants, and the company owed them no duty to provide water for fire protection. Id. A city owning its own waterworks is not liable for failure to furnish sufficient water to extinguish fires. Id. Contract of company with municipality containing a general stipulation to furnish an adequate supply to extinguish fires does not render it liable to an individual citizen. Cooke v. Paris Mountain Water Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 157. Contract between city and water company by which the company did not undertake to answer to citizens for loss by fire held not to contemplate payment for such losses in case of its negligence. Ancrum v. Camden Water, Light & Ice Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 151. Individual owners of property destroyed by fire cannot maintain action against a public water supply company under contract with the city to furnish water for fire purposes. Hone v. Presque Water Co. [Me.] 71 A 769. Water company held not liable to owners of property destroyed. Id. Complaint by owners held demurrable as not sufficient in substance. Id. As the law does not require municipal corporations to maintain waterworks, but 22 Stat. 83, merely authorizes them to build and operate them, when 23 Stat. P. 1039, empowered them to grant exclusive franchises to companies, it left them free to provide as they saw fit for indemnity for losses by fire. Ancrum v. Camden Water, Light & Ice Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 151.

NOTE. Liability of water company for loss by failure to furnish water to extin-and providing that sufficient pressure shall be maintained to afford fire protection without the aid of engine, the pressure must be sufficient to afford reasonable protection to all buildings whether owned by the city or its inhabitants.[92] A company supplying water for domestic purposes must keep its mains in such condition as to prevent the water from becoming polluted,[93] and a consumer has no right to use pipes in such manner as to pollute the water,[94] but, if he does, the company has no right to recklessly injure him.[95] Water companies must exercise reasonable care guish fire: The great weight of authority is to the effect that a resident of a city cannot recover of a waterworks company damages for loss by fire occasioned by the failure of such company to furnish, in accordance with its contract with the city, a sufficient supply of water to extinguish the fire. 92. Houck v. Cape Girardeau Waterworks & Elec. L. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1099. If it be unfair discrimination to other tax payers for city to pay from its general revenue indemnity for fire losses, a water company could not avoid liability it assumed in such case. Ancrum v. Camden Water, Light & Ice Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 151. A water company which agreed to furnish a town sufficient water to extinguish fires held bound to exercise ordinary care to maintain its pipes and hydrants and furnish water of the pressure and volume stipulated. Inhabitants of Milford v. Bangor R. & Elec. Co. [Me.] 71 A 759. Company held liable for value of town hall, sidewalks, and apparatus ruined by fire due to failure to comply with the terms of its contract. Id.

93. Where it furnishes water to a laundry boiler, it must use such appliances as will keep water used in the boiler from returning through the feed pipes into the mains. Bouri v. Spring Valley Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 530.

94. One who receives water for his laundry boiler has no right to use the feed pipes for the purpose of relieving the boiler of excessive pressure. He must provide safety valves. Bouri v. Spring Valley Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 530.

95. Where a water company supplying water for use in a laundry boiler knew that to keep their pipes and hydrants in a reasonably safe condition,[96] but is not liable if guilty of no negligence.[97]

Water rates.[See 19 C. L. 2025]—As a general rule legislatures are authorized to fix rates[98] or prescribe the manner in which maximum rates may be established.[99] Ordinance rates for meter service are prima facie reasonable,[1] and, while water companies are entitled to charge just and reasonable rates,[2] the judiciary ought not to interfere with the collection of rates established under legislative sanction unless they are plainly in violation of law.[3] Whether rates fixed by a municipality are reasonable or unreasonable is a judicial question[4] to be determined on the basis of a fair return upon the property invested.[5] A water company which binds the owner of the boiler wrongfully used its pipes to relieve the boiler of excessive pressure, and had provided no other means for the escape of steam and it installed a check valve without notice to the owner of the boiler, held, it was liable for damages caused by explosion of the boiler. Bouri v. Spring Valley Water Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 530. Complaint for such damages held bad on demurrer for failing to allege that the company knew that the injured person was making such use of its pipes and had provided no other exhaust. Id. A complaint for such injury must show that the water company was so flagrantly negligent as to overcome his own wrongful act. Id.

96. Where there was evidence that a hydrant which bursted and flooded a cellar was in a leaky condition for 48 hours prior to its collapse, whether such condition indicated the defect which caused its collapse held for the jury. O'Brien Co. v. Omaha Water Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1110. Instructions as to negligence approved. Id.

97. Where a water company had a right to shut off water for 30 minutes to make repairs on hydrants, held, where such shut-off caused a gas heater to explode, the company was not liable for a fire caused, it having no notice of the heater, and failure to notify the patron of the shut-off was not actionable negligence. Brane v. Light, H. & W. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 728.

98. The constitutional provision that the legislature has power to prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges by public service corporations, etc., applies to waterworks companies. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 48 S 639. Under an ordinance fixing flat rates and that company might insert a meter and charge meter rates and that a consumer might insert a meter and pay the meter rate provided it exceeded $12 per annum, held a consumer who installed a meter was required to pay the $12 though it exceeded the maximum flat rate. Charleston L. & P. W. Co. v. Lloyd Laundry & Shirt Mfg. Co., 81 S. C. 475, 62 SE 873. Under ordinance fixing maximum rate, held water company was entitled to charge a five-room householder a reasonable meter rate and that he was not entitled to a $5 flat rate. Poole v. Paris Mountain Water Co., 81 S. C. 438, 62 SE 874. Under St. 1885, p. 97, § 6, relative to establishment of rates, held a company whose rates had been fixed by county board could not, after one year from fixing of such rates, sue for redress against such rates without first resorting to the board. San Joaquin & Kings River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County [Cal.] 99 P 365. Water company fixed minimum rate of a consumer at $3 per three months, and threatened to shut off water when complainant refused to pay at new rate, although offering to pay at rate prescribed by ordinance. Kerz v. Galena Water Co., 139 Ill. App. 598.

99. Art. 15, § 6 of Constitution authorizes the legislature to provide the manner in which reasonable maximum rates may be established. Jackson v. Indian Creek Reseroir Ditch & Irr. Co. [Idaho] 101 P 814. Act providing that maintenance charge may be fixed by contract is valid. Id. Rev. Codes, § 3288, authorizes parties to contract with reference to delivery of water from a reservoir and to fix charge for annual maintenance fee. Id.

1. Poole v. Paris Mountain Water Co., 81 S. C. 438, 62 SE 874.

2. A water company is entitled to charge rates sufficient to pay operating expenses, interest on bona fide indebtedness and reasonable dividends on the capital stock, and in addition a sum sufficient to cover depreciation of its plant. Contra Costa Water Co. v. City of Oakland, 165 F 518. Company held entitled to enjoin a resolution fixing rates which would not give 5 per cent on capital invested. Id. Rates which will enable a company to earn 5 per cent net on value of its property are neither unreasonable nor confiscatory. Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 F 667. It is proper to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance fixing a rate which would not make a net income equal to 5 per cent on the value of the plant. Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 F 657.

3. State v. Duluth W. & L. Com'rs, 105 Minn. 472, 117 NW 827. An ordinance fixing maximum rates cannot be held invalid unless plainly confiscatory. Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co., 212 U. S. 1, 53 Law. Ed. —. Water charges made by company against hotel proprietors held unreasonable. Hoover v. Deffenbaugh [Neb.] 119 NW 1130.

4. A company may invoke the jurisdiction of the courts to determine whether such rates are such as to deprive it of property without due process of law. Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 F 657; Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 F 667.

5. Under Cal. Act March 12, 1885, St. 1885, p. 95, c. 115, authorizing boards of supervisors to fix rates of irrigation companies so as to earn not less than 6 nor more than 18 per cent on value of plant, where deductions are made for deterioration of the itself by its franchise agreement to furnish water at a specified rate is bound by such agreement.[6] In New York no charge can be made for water not used.[7] A town will not be held to have exercised its option to change from a flat rate to a meter rate unless such intention is clearly indicated.[8] The lien for rates[9] or other charges is statutory.[10]

§ 17. Grants, contracts, and licenses.[11]—See 10 C. L. 2027—Contracts relative to waters and water supply must possess the essentials of other contracts.[12] The plant, the company is entitled to an allowance of its earnings to cover cost of renewal. San Joaquin & Kings River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 163 F 567. In fixing such rates by boards in different counties in which water is supplied by the same canal under the construction of the statute that the company is entitled to not less than 6 per cent on its investment, and its earnings in all counties must be considered in determining the legality of any particular rate, the distance of each county from the head of the canal is to be considered. Id.

Considerations in determining reasonableness of rates: In determining the reasonable value of property of a water company, the estimated cost of a substituted system may be considered but it is not controlling. Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 F 667. In fixing just and reasonable rates, the depreciation of the plant from natural causes should be considered and cost of replacement taken from gross income. Id. Franchise of a company to collect rates is property and its value, as well as whatever value attaches to the business as a going concern, is to be considered in fixing value. Id. The market value of outstanding stock and bonds may be considered. Id. A company is not entitled to charge to current expense the cost of replacing property destroyed through its own negligence. Id. The fact that interest rates have advanced generally within a short period of time does not necessarily entitle a water company to earn a higher income than before without a corresponding adjustment of the value of its property. Id. Only such property as is at time actually in use for supplying the water to which the rates apply, is to be considered and it is to be valued at what it is worth for such purpose. Id. Deduction should be made for depreciation from age in value of plant. Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co., 212 U. S. 1, 53 Law. Ed. —. Capitalization no guide when shown to be excessive. Id. Fact that ordinance does not require giving of discount for prompt payment. Id. Net income under another ordinance which has not been enforced should be considered. Id.

6. Cannot refuse to furnish water at such rate on the ground that it is confiscatory. Condon v. New Rochelle Water Co., 116 NYS 142. But where at the time such agreement was made most of the consumers were using through three-quarter inch connections, they were not entitled to use a larger connection during the life of the contract. Id.

7. Under New York Charter, § 473, providing that no charge be made for water not actually used as shown by meter, no charge can be made for water used during nonoperation of meter which resulted from neglect of city officials. People v. New York, 129 App. Div. 475, 114 NYS 312. A lessee bound to pay a proportionate share of water rent is not liable for months he did not occupy the premises after abandonment, as water was metered and he could not have used any while he was out of possession. Corn v. Shapiro, 111 NYS 727.

8. Where regulations provided for a flat rate payable semi-annually and further provided that the town reserved the right to change from flat rate to meter service, the mere setting of meters is insufficient to indicate an election to exercise the option to change to a meter rate. Jones v. Bloomfield [N. J. Eq.] 96 A 1106.

9. Under Laws 1901, pp. 207, 210, 432, held water rents are not a lien on premises until amount due has been determined and actual entry made in the proper book. Mandel v. Weschler, 128 App. Div. 505, 112 NYS 813. On issue as to when water was turned on in new tenement houses, owner's testimony that he had never applied for water held not overcome by proof as to when certificate that house complied with the law was issued. Id. Under ordinance of New York, § 283, providing that water rents shall be paid in advance by applying for water and before any permit is issued, rents did not become a lien on new buildings before application was made and permit issued. Id.

10. Charge for installing a meter in a tenement house under Laws 1901, p. 889, is not a lien until the amount of the charge is determined. Feder v. Rosenthal, 62 Misc. 610, 116 NYS 2.

St. Wyo. 1899, § 934, relative to such lands, construed, and contract by an irrigation company by which the exclusive rights to contract with settlers was given a third party held void as against public policy and contrary to the intent of the statute. McKinney v. Big Horn Basin Development Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 770. Transfer of property of water works to a city held valid. Ryan v. Louisville [Ky.] 118 SW 992. Contract by a town to buy a water system is equally binding whether entered into under St. 1882, c. 142, and adopted by ratification or subsequently made under St. 1904, c. 457, as a result of further negotiations embodying the same usual rules of construction apply to contracts and grants pertaining to water and water rights,[13] and the rights and duties of the parties therein must be determined from the terms of the contract.[14] The practical construction will be given effect if not inconsistent with the terms of the contract.[15] A water right, if appurtenant,[16] passes by deed thereof without particular mention.[17] The extent of

14. Under grant of a right to raise a dam 10 feet high at a certain point or at any other point providing the flowage should not be greater than would be occasioned by a dam at the point designated, the power obtainable is not the measure of the right but the flowage that would be occasioned by a dam at the point designated. Lancaster & Jefferson Elec. L. Co. v. Jones [N. H.] 71 A 871. Lease of surplus water from Muskingum river, executed under 25 Stat. 417, for the purpose of operating an electric power plant, construed, and held to contemplate use of water for power purposes only, and the government could refuse to furnish it for any other purpose, and such refusal did not relieve the lessee from the obligation to pay rent. United States v. Shryock, 162 F 790. A contract between a water company and a railroad company by which the former was to supply the latter with water for a term of years and was given a right to lay a main on the right of way held, as such main was not for railroad purposes alone, the water company was necessary party to a suit to enjoin the city from interfering with its construction. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. v. Jersey City, 168 F 128. Time limit within which excavation of a ditch was to be completed held waived where work was continued, after expiration of the period and payments made. Rankin v. Lingo [Iowa] 117 NW 274. Under contract for excavation of a ditch where each mile was paid for as completed, the contiguous owners were required to prevent caving after completion, and contractors were not precluded from recovering balance due because of such caving. Id. A provision in a contract by which a company agreed to lay mains and erect hydrants, reserving to the city the right to place hydrants at its own expense and providing for a reduction of rent in such case, did not affect other provisions of the contract. People v. New Rochelle Water Co., 58 Misc. 287, 110 NYS 1089. Under contract granting water rights use of pumps held to be "development work" within the contract, and a proper means of restoring the flow, though such means had never been used in that locality. Garvey Water Co. v. Huntington Land & Imp. Co. [Cal.] 97 P 428. Lease by which one agreed to "furnish" water to another held to mean "deliver" and was not complied with where an agent of the lessor locked the well. Smith v. Hicks [N. M.] 98 P 138. Evidence sufficient to show breach of covenant to furnish water. Id. Measure of damages for breach of contract to furnish water defined in particular case. Gagnon v. Molden, 15 Idaho, 727, 99 P 965. Contract for sale of water construed and held to contemplate delivery of water prior to maturity of first instalment of price, and failure to furnish constituted a breach of the contract. Id. Where one conveyed land and agreed to furnish a certain amount of water to irrigate it, held failure to supply the water was a breach of the contract. Babcock-Cornish Co. v. Urquhart [Wash.] 101 P 713. Contract by which a city leased certain springs and agreed to place hydrant in lessor's yard and a fire hydrant near his residence held not to obligate the city to furnish him water. Akins v. Humansville, 133 Mo. App. 502, 113 SW 687.

15. Haigh v. Lenfestly, 239 Ill. 227, 87 NE 962.

16. The right to take water from a spring may be an appurtenance to premises and pass as such though water is carried to the premises in pails from a trough into which it ran from the spring. Corevo v. Holman [Vt.] 71 A 718. A water privilege may be made an appurtenance to land by a separate grant. Whittlesey v. Porter [Conn.] 72 A 593. Lease for 999 years of right to draw water from a canal and use it upon certain land makes such right an appurtenance. Id. Under a decree allotting to each parcel of land, sold from a tract abutting on a stream, riparian rights, held parcels not abutting on the stream were not entitled to such rights. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178. Where riparian land is partitioned by decree and riparian rights allotted to parcels of the land, such rights remain a parcel of the land so allotted. Id.

17. A water privilege so connected with land as to constitute an appurtenance passes by deed thereof though not expressly mentioned. Whittlesey v. Porter [Conn.] 72 A 593. A conveyance of land abutting on a stream does not require special provision in order to pass riparian rights. Strong v. Baldwin [Cal.] 97 P 178. Deed held to make riparian rights parcel of the land. Id. Where a tract abuts on a stream and a parcel thereof not contiguous to the stream is sold, the riparian rights of the parcel so conveyed may also be conveyed. Id. In such case the riparian rights remain parcel of the land. Id. Where land for which water has been appropriated is divided, it is presumed that a purchaser of one tract a water right, described in a deed, must be determined from the deed.[18] Where a deed to land specifically describes the water rights granted, none other possess.[19] Where there are several grants to different persons of the right to take water from an artesian well, the ordinary rules as to grants apply.[20] A corporation which purchases water rights, ditches and canals, must take them subject to the duties and burdens that existed against the grantor.[21] The original owner of land for which water was appropriated is not liable to a purchaser of a portion of the tract for wrongful acts of third persons in diverting the water from such tract,[22] nor was he liable to such purchaser for wrongful diversion of the water, for shortage of water in the natural stream, nor because of such shortage for an insufficient supply to irrigate the tract.[23] A contract for water supply valid when made, is enforceable.[24]

§ 18. Torts relating to waters.[25]—See 10 C. L. 2027—One who is injured because of wrongful interference with his water rights,[26] or whose property in injured owns the proportion of the water awarded to the entire tract that his tract bears to the entire tract, where the original owner recognized him as owning water rights. Booth v. Trager [Colo.] 99 P 60. Easement in use of an irrigation ditch appurtenant to an estate which was divided held to have passed to grantee of a parcel not attingent to the ditch. Tarpey v. Lynch [Cal.] 101 P 10.

18. Deed conveying land by general description "also water power and dam on said property" conveys the dam and right to flowage though part of the structure is located on an adjoining parcel owned by the grantor at the time. Wellman v. Blackmon [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1126, 119 NW 1102. Deed to dam and canals held to convey a lock forming a part thereof. Winnebago Paper Mills v. Kimberly-Clarke Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 411. Deed of a certain dam, canals and water power, "it being the intention of the grantor to convey his entire interest in all of said property," passes a fee in the lock constituting part of the canals, and not simply an easement to carry water through and operate the lock. Id. Deed of land and water rights construed and held to convey the right to the entire power furnished by the river and not merely the power appurtenant to one bank. Lancaster & J. Elec. L. Co. v. Jones [N. H.] 71 A 871. A grant of land "including all right, title, claim and interest in and to the waters of Seaman creek, and the irrigating ditches appurtenant thereto," carries all water rights appurtenant to the tract. Josslyn v. Daly, 15 Idaho, 137, 96 P 568. The amount and extent of the water's rights depends on the extent of the appurtenant rights. Id. Reservation in a deed to lands of "all artesian water that may be developed on such land and not used thereon" reserves no right to enter the land to develop such waters nor does it extend to water necessary for use on the land nor to any but artesian water. Burr v. Maclay Rancho Co. [Cal.] 98 P 260. Grantee's acceptance of a deed containing a reservation of a priority or appropriation for a certain reservoir, when no appropriation had been secured, did not estop the grantee to claim an appropriation for such reservoir for his own use. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Lake Supply Ditch Co. [Colo.] 98 P 729. A grantee of a lot with a right to use a water main in the street constructed by a former owner did not acquire any right to the main itself against others to whom the former owner had sold rights to connect. Hunstock v. Limburger [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 327. Nor did he acquire any right to the money for rights sold by one to whom the former owner had sold rights, where such sale did not interfere with his rights. Id. Nor may he make additional sale of water rights which would interfere with rights of purchasers from his vendor. Id.

19. Davis v. Randall [Colo.] 99 P 322. Where land was granted to several children of the grantor with specific water rights, the fact that they did not adhere strictly to their respective rights would not increase them. Id.

20. Each grantee who takes with notice of prior grants holds subject thereto. Charon v. Clark, 50 Wash. 191, 96 P 1040.

21. Knowles v. New Sweden Irr. Dist. [Idaho] 101 P 81.

22, 23. Booth v. Trager [Colo.] 99 P 60.

24. A contract for the use of water made with a corporation organized for the purpose of supplying water for irrigation, which did not when made contravene the laws of the state, may be enforced as between the parties and their successors, subject to all reasonable regulations, provided that rights of other water users are not unlawfully curtailed. Clague v. Tri-State Land Co. [Neb.] 121 NW 570. If such corporation arbitrarily prevents a holder of a contract from using water, it is liable to him in damages. Id. In such case the measure of damages is the value of the use of such right during the time he is deprived of it. Id.

26. Complaint for violation of right to use water for irrigation held not demurrable for failure to allege that plaintiff owned the right of way, gate, and canal at the time. Miller v. Kern County Land Co. [Cal.] 99 P 179. Where one's land is flooded by lawful erection of culverts by another because of the wrongful obstruction of the flow of waters,[27] or whose rights are interfered with by pollution of waters,[28] has a cause of action and may recover damages measured by the general rules.[29] No recovery can be had for injury resulting from contributory negligence,[30] or from lawful use of property.[31] The owner of a dam is not liable for injuries caused by extraordinary floods.[32] The obstruction of the flow of a natural channel is a nuisance.[33] Several persons who own several interests and suffer in like character from the pollution of a stream may unite in an action in equity to abate the nuisance.[34] Actions for injuries must be commenced within the period of limitations.[35] Where an obstruction is a continuous nuion his own land, no cause of action exists because of the construction, but the gist of the action is damage by flooding for which successive actions may be brought for continuance of the nuisance. American Locomotive Co. v. Hoffman, 108 Va. 363, 61 SE 759. One cannot recover damages for flooding land before he acquired title to it. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Magee [Miss.] 46 S 716. One who sells his business is not liable for damages caused by his purchaser placing timbers in a river. Sipsey River Lumber Co. v. Gilliland [Ala.] 47 S 710.

27. See, also, ante, §§ 3, 9. A lessee of land may maintain an action for damages by flooding. Shomon v. Spring River Power Co. [Kan.] 99 P 235. Canal company is liable where it permits water to flow onto land of adjacent owner to his injury. Spence v. Lake Drummond Canal Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 729. Mills' Ann. St. § 2272, making one liable for injuries caused by seepage of storage water, applies to surface waters. Canon City & C. C. R. Co. v. Oxtoby [Colo.] 100 P 1127.

28. For pollution of a spring, the owner may recover such damages as would compensate him for diminution in value of the use of his property resulting from the pollution. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Gillespie [Ky.] 113 SW 89. In action for polluting subterranean waters by sewage, evidence of prior pollution of waters by surface water was admissible that the latter act caused no injury. Kevil v. Princeton [Ky.] 118 SW 363.

29. See Damages, 11 C. L. 958. Measure of damages for injury to crops by obstruction of surface waters by railroad embankment. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Hagler [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 783. Kerns v. Kansas [Kan.] 100 P 624. Where no crop was raised on land because of the wrongful obstruction of surface water, the measure of damages is the rental value. Quinn v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [S. D.] 120 NW 884. Instruction that the owner was entitled to recover just and fair compensation held sufficient in absence of requested charge. Id. For injuries to land by depositing thereon limestone grit, sand, etc., the measure of damages is the difference in rental value of the land before and after the injury. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 784. In action for injuries by flooding use of "property" in instructions on damages, held erroneous as misleading the jury to allow damages for other property than crops. Tosini v. Cascade Mill. Co. [S. D.] 117 NW 1037.

30. In an action for flooding a mine by boring a well, where defendant's evidence shows that injury was caused by failure of plaintiff to leave sufficient pillars to support the room, held, defendant was not liable. Muntz v. Cottage Hill Land Co. [Pa.] 72 A 247. Where one without authority connected his cellar by drain with a city watercourse, which was not maintained as a sewer, the city was not liable to him for flooding of his cellar caused by an obstruction of the watercourse forcing water through the drain. Levasseur v. Berlin [N. H.] 71 A 628.

31. Railroad company held not liable for damages caused by flooding, where in constructing its embankment it narrowed the bed of a canal and because of a freshet the embankment gave way. Gordon v. Ellenville & K. R. Co., 195 N. Y. 137, 88 NE 14.

32. Evidence sufficient to show that a flood which caused a dam to break thereby, causing injuries by flooding, was extraordinary and unprecedented. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650. Negligence in failing to inform engineers of prior freshets held not to contribute to the injury. Id.

33. One who purchases subsequent to the construction cannot recover for construction of the nuisance, but may recover for continuance of the nuisance. Beauchamp v. Taylor, 132 Mo. App. 92, 111 SW 609. Where one sued to enjoin maintenance of a dam by which his land was flooded dismissed the suit and deeded the land, held, he released defendant as to all claim for injunction relief as well as damages. Thomas v. Booth-Kelly Co. [Or.] 97 P 1078. In action against a city to abate a nuisance consisting of an old abutment left in a waterway after dams were removed, which so disposed the flow of water that it injured adjacent land, evidence held to show improper construction. Prime v. Yonkers, 131 App. Div. 110, 115 NYS 305.

34. Norton v. Colusa Parrot Mining & Smelting Co., 167 F 202. In a suit by several owners to enjoin pollution of a stream as a nuisance, complainants may not recover damages for past injury, as they have an adequate remedy at law. Id.

35. Where a railroad built permanent dikes which deflected the current of a stream against land and caused it to be washed away, the injury was permanent, and action therefor was barred in three years by Ind. T. Ann. St. 1899, § 2945. Gulf, sance, the right to recover damages is not barred short of the time necessary to acquire a prescriptive right to maintain it,[36] but only such damages can be recovered as have accrued within the time limited for actions on tort.[37] Pleadings are governed by general rules.[38] In actions for injuries sustained because of wrongful interference with water rights, the proof must conform to the pleadings [39] and must show negligence of the party charged.[40] Municipalities [41] and water supply companies are liable for damages caused by bursting of pipes.[42] A municipal corporation which erects a pumping plant is liable for injuries to adjoining residence property caused by smoke.[43] Under the charter of the city of Buffalo, the city is liable for failure to abate the nuisance caused by periodic overflow of Buffalo River.[44] Whether an action is appealable is to be determined by the laws relative to appeal.[45]

§ 19. Crimes and offenses relating to waters.[46]—See 8 C. L. 2301—In some states it is an offense to deposit in streams material which will injure fish.[47] A criminal nuisance results only where an intent to create such nuisance exists.[48] The

38. Complaint in two paragraphs for permitting limestone grit, sand, etc., from stone mill of an upper owner to be cast onto the land of a lower owner held to state a cause of action. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 784. Complaint for flooding lands by construction of a levee held not demurrable because alleging that other lands beside plaintiff's were damaged. Bradbury v. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist., 236 Ill. 36, 86 NE 163.

39. Under a complaint alleging obstruction of water by both railroad bridge and embankment, recovery could be had on proof that injury resulted solely from the embankment. Nickey v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 477. Where one sues on the theory of obstruction of a water course, he cannot recover on the theory of obstruction of surface waters. Alabama & M. R. Co. v. Beard [Miss.] 48 S 405. Where complaint for flooding land is based on theory of trespass, recovery cannot be had on the theory of negligence. Gordon v. Ellenville & K. R. Co., 195 N. Y. 137, 88 NE 14.

41. Where a leakage occurs in a pipe under control of a city, a presumption of negligence is raised which must be overcome by evidence explaining the nature or cause of the break. Silverberg v. New York, 59 Misc. 492, 110 NYS 992.

42. Where a house and lot was injured by breaking of a water pipe and flooding of premises in consequence of negligent maintenance of the pipe, recovery of damages is justified. French v. West Seattle L. & W. Co., 50 Wash. 257, 97 P 60.

43. Gordon v. Silver Creek, 127 App. Div. 888, 112 NYS 54.

44. Under Buffalo City Charter, § 395, and Laws 1906, p. 1439, requiring the city to abate nuisances, and declaring periodic overflow of the Buffalo river a nuisance, the city is liable for its refusal to abate such nuisance where it can do so at reasonable cost. White v. Buffalo, 60 Misc. 611, 112 NYS 485. Under such laws, the city is not under absolute duty to abate the nuisance; the duty is discretionary. White v. Buffalo, 131 App. Div. 531, 115 NYS 1021.

45. Action for damages for obstructing a public ditch and making a new channel, and causing water falling on lands of defendant and others to be diverted from the public ditch and overflow lands of plaintiff, and annually destroy his crops, is not appealable, though injunctive relief is prayed for. Fisher v. Bower, 79 Ohio St. 248, 87 NE 256.

WEAPONS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[1]

§ 1. The crime of carrying or pointing weapons.[2] See 10 C. L. 2030—Article 2 of the amendments to the constitution of the United States is a limitation on the federal government only.[3] The term "arms" as used in the Oklahoma constitution applies solely to such arms as are used in civil warfare.[4] Among the acts denounced as crimes by various statutes are the carrying of weapons on or about the person,[5] or the pointing or aiming of a gun,[6] or the carrying of concealed weapons,[7] or carrying a deadly weapon, concealed "in whole or in part;"[7a] but it is usually lawful to carry an unconcealed weapon for a lawful purpose,[9] or a concealed weapon for the purpose of protecting one's property, if in good faith he believes there is danger of attack and robbery.[10] Statutory exceptions are often made in favor of travelers.[11] Statutes are not usually construed to

49. Under Act Cong. March 2, 1853, the territories of Washington and Oregon have concurrent jurisdiction over offenses committed on the Columbia river where it forms the common boundary, and, where one territory allows seine fishing and the other does not, the most restrictive law prevails. State v. Nielsen [Or.] 95 P 720.

1. Includes criminal liability for unlawful keeping, bearing, or displaying and civil liability for negligent shooting. Other crimes committed with weapons are treated in such topics as Homicide, 11 C. L. 1799.

4. Ex parte Thomas [Okl.] 97 P 260.

5. Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction for illegally carrying pistol, where defendant was seen at night on street with pistol in his hand, he not being able to give a good reason for having said pistol. Huff v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 454, 111 SW 731. Where intent to carry deadly weapon concealed about the person exists and act is not within some of exceptions of statute, defendant is guilty, and it is immaterial that his ulterior motive or purpose in carrying the weapon is innocent or harmless. State v. Hovis [Mo. App.] 116 SW 6. That the defendant carried the pistol to shoot game is immaterial. Id. It is no defense to a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol that defendant thought he had a legal right to carry it. McCallister v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 1154. Evidence that witness heard some one say "Look out! I am going to shoot," and thought that it was the voice of defendant, held to be insufficient upon which to base a conviction. Gay v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 118 SW 534. One is guilty of carrying a pistol on or about the person who knowingly has a pistol under the cushion of the buggy in which he is riding. Leonard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 119 SW 98.

6. Defendant was convicted of pointing and aiming a pistol. He appealed claiming that two offenses were charged "pointing and aiming." Held that there was no substantial difference between the terms "point" and "aim" as used in § 1045 of the Code of 1906, and that only one offense was charged. Coleman v. State [Miss.] 48 S 181.

7. To conceal a pistol in a sack which is carried under the arm is a violation of a statute which forbids carrying concealed weapons. Warren v. State [Ga. App.] 64 SE 111. Evidence that the witness saw a pistol in defendant's pocket when he stooped was positive evidence that defendant carried a concealed weapon, and it was not necessary for the jury to infer that he did. Bivins v. State, 5 Ga. App. 434, 63 SE 523.

8. Under the statute (Code 1906, § 1103), the carrying of a concealed weapon, in whole or in part, is made an offense. Martin v. State [Miss.] 47 S 426.

9. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946.

10. Defendant, by way of justification for carrying the revolver, showed that he had $195 on his person and that he feared attack by thieves on his way home. State v. Cook, 132 Mo. App. 167, 112 SW 710.

11. A train auditor on a passenger train making a trip from one city to another, is a traveler within the meaning of the statute, Pen. Code 1895, art. 339. Baker v. Satterfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 437. A person in the waiting room of a depot, who is waiting for a train which he intends to take, is a "traveler" and has a right to carry arms. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Geraldon [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1004. Held error to refuse a charge that if defendant had started on his journey and, while en route to take prohibit transportation of weapons with no view to their use,[12] but to be within this exception one must ordinarily proceed to his destination with reasonable dispatch and directness.[13] Carrying weapons at one's place of business is sometimes permitted.[14] The name by which the implement is called is in no wise controlling in determining whether it is within the purview of the statute.[15] Statutes of Oklahoma against the carrying of concealed weapons do not conflict with the provision in the constitution of that state denying infringement of the right to bear arms,[16] and said statutes are not repugnant to each other.[17] By statute in Florida the county commissioners are given power to grant license to carry arms.[18]

§ 2. Other police regulations concerning weapons.[19]—See 10 C. L. 2032—Statute of Alabama, prohibiting the sale or barter of deadly weapons of a described character, is void because not constitutionally passed.[20]

§ 3. Indictment and prosecution.[21]—See 10 C. L. 2032—An indictment charging one with carrying a pistol on "or" about his person is bad, where the statute prohibits carrying on "and" about the person.[22] The statutory offense of pointing a weapon at another may be included within the offense of assault with intent to murder.[23] Evidence that defendant attempted to kill or shoot parties at other times is inadmissible,[24] as is also facts entirely foreign to the prosecution,[25] but evidence which has been obtained through accident or inadvertence is admissible, although obtained while making an illegal arrest.[26] Evidence that the defendant had been searched by the complaining witnesses about the time the offense charged in the complaint was alleged to have been committed is immaterial.[27] his train, he discovered that he had lost or left his pocket book at the place where he had started, and he had returned for the purpose of getting the pocketbook intending to immediately resume his journey, and up to the time he was seen with the pistol he had not made any unreasonable delay, then in contemplation of law he would be considered a "traveler" and not guilty. Goodwin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 115 SW 1184. Instruction that to constitute one a traveler he must be in pursuit of his journey "and" engaged in business connected therewith is erroneous. Steel v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 15. Instruction requiring accused to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he was a traveler is erroneous. Id.

12. Griffin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1066.

13. Held that defendant had no right to turn aside on his way home and voluntarily engage in a quarrel. Griffen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1066. Defendant had no right to go into a saloon and engage in trouble. Garrison v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 128.

14. Train auditor, whose duty was to collect tickets from passengers, is at his place of business while riding on the train for the purpose of collecting said tickets. Barker v. Satterfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 437.

15. To call a pistol a toy does not make it a toy; to call a toy pistol does not make it a pistol; nor is the essential character of the thing changed by the purpose for which it is sold, the use to which it can be reasonably put controls. Mathews v. Caldwell, 5 Ga. App. 236, 63 SE 250.

16. Held that a pistol was not of the character of arms in contemplation of the constitutional convention and of the people of the state when they declared that the right of a citizen "to carry and bear arms," etc., shall never be prohibited. Ex parte Thomas [Okl.] 97 P 260.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.[33]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[34]

In the absence of any agreement to the contrary, the weight established by law will control.[35] It is within the police power of the state to forbid the sale of an incorrect table of values when made a part of a self-computing scale.[36] The determination of the arithmetical correctness of a scale as distinguished from the commercial correctness of values indicated may be delegated to a ministerial officer,[37] but, unless expressly given by statute, a city sealer of weights has no authority to determine the accuracy of a computing device.[38] A statute providing a penalty for giving short weights is violated, although the dealer did not know of the shortage,[39] but a statute providing a penalty for "using, buying, or selling by weights or measures" which have not been inspected will not be construed to apply to cases outside of its plain terms.[40] The keeping of an article in a measure which is not standard is not a violation of a statute regulating measures for the sale and importation of such article.[41] A statute which provides that any purchaser of certain commodities, who, without express agreement with the seller, shall deduct any amount from the actual weight, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor is not applicable to sales made without the estate.[42] Where the law provides for an official weigher of cotton, but also provides that nothing shall prevent any one from withholding his cotton from said weigher, the official weigher has no right to restrain a warehouse company from having its cotton weighed by a private weigher,[43] nor can the suit be maintained on the ground that the official weigher has sustained damage because of the acts of the private party in urging the public to withhold its patronage from that officer.[44] Where the right to condemn scales if found incorrect is given by statute to an officer, injunction will not issue to prevent him from rendering a threatened decision,[45] but if, in making such decision, he proceeds on an erroneous principle of law, his decision can be quashed on certiorari.[46]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[48]

The state, in the absence of constitutional inhibition, can build or aid others in building wharves for public use and in aid of trade and commerce,[49] and may also authorize cities bordering on navigable waters to construct and maintain public wharves.[50] Public wharves are under the control of appropriate officers, whose powers and duties are elsewhere treated.[51] Ordinarily the grant of a pier right includes as appurtenant thereto a right of access over the adjacent lands under water,[52] but this right may be withheld by agreement.[53] If a person has acquired a right to maintain a pier, he may enjoin a municipality from making improvements which will destroy his right.[54] A building erected on piles is not a "wharfboat" within the meaning of a statute imposing a tax for the privilege of conducting a wharfboat.[55] Wharfage is a charge against a vessel for lying at a wharf,[56] and the idea of use of the private property of the wharfinger lies at the root, and is the essence of a legal charge of wharfage.[57] What constitutes such use depends upon the circumstances.[58] A party in control of a dock is liable for injuries resulting from its dangerous condition,[59] or from an obstruction in the approach,[60] but he is not liable for injuries received by a vessel if the one in charge of such vessel had knowledge of the obstruction,[61] nor is he liable for an accident unless it is shown that such accident was caused by a defect in the wharf.[62] A contractor who is engaged in replacing piers which have been destroyed is not liable as a wharf owner.[63] Damages for the loss of the use of a dry dock, which has been negligently injured by a vessel, will not be allowed where no such loss actually resulted.[64]

Father's agreement to will son 25 per cent of a business in consideration of son's marrying a certain person held not unfair or unreasonable so as to prevent specific performance, father having made provision for other relatives and mother being satisfied. Id. Father's agreement to will son 25 per cent of publishing business in which father had a third interest, and that, if estate should be insufficient to satisfy certain grandchildren plaintiff should give each a certain sum or five per cent of the business, held not too indefinite for specific performance. Id.

Construction: Promise by a grantee to make will devising "her property, real and personal," to a named person, held to refer to property owned by promisor at her death precluding equitable suit by proposed devisee for waste, on theory he had a present interest as remainderman. Noble v. Metcalf [Ala.] 47 S 1007. Agreement to devise "25 per cent of said business" held to mean 25 per cent of entire business, and not of third interest decedent owned therein. Sarasohn v. Kamaiky, 193 N. Y. 203, 86 NE 20.

Partial invalidity: Where oral agreement that son should have land on death of parents was void as to homestead, but directed to be enforced as to rest of the land, value of homestead should be computed as of date of contract. Teske v. Dittburner [Neb.] 120 NW 198.

Evidence: Where genuineness of signature to contract by decedent to allow his property to go by descent was fully established, contract was prima facie evidence that he knew contents, and, in suit to set aside will, burden was on proponents to overcome prima facie showing. Jones v. Abbott, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279. Alleged contract by testatrix to "make such provision that upon her death" property worth nearly $500,000 "owned by her should belong to plaintiff" held of a class posthumous in effect, regarded with anxiety by courts and capable of being established only by clear, credible, and satisfactory evidence. Tousey v. Hastings, 194 N. Y. 79, 86 NE 831. Oral agreement to make in effect testamentary disposition of property will not be specifically enforced solely on evidence of statements made by decedent in casual conversations with disinterested third persons. Id., 127 App. Div. 94, 111 NYS 344.

Insufficient to show decedent did not know contents of contract when he signed. Jones v. Abbott, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279. To show oral agreement that at decedent's death plaintiff should be owner of her interest in a business. Tousey v. Hastings, 127 App. Div. 94, 111 NYS 344. Held to authorize finding against existence of contract for mutual wills. Klussman v. Nessling, 238 Ill. 568, 87 NE 544.

Sufficient to sustain findings that testator had agreed to will his property absolutely to complainant, that complainant had performed her part, and that testator violated his agreement by devising complainant only a life estate. Barry v. Beamer [Cal. App.] 96 P 373. Complainant held entitled to specific performance contract having been fully established and no rights of innocent parties having intervened. Id. To authorize specific performance of contract to adopt a child and leave her one-half of adoptor's estate. Peterson v. Bauer [Neb.] 119 NW 764.

78. McAllister's Adm'r v. Bronaugh [Ky.] 113 SW 821. Evidence held to establish contract to devise plaintiff's wife property in consideration of board, lodging, etc. Id. Instruction held to fairly present only issue in case. Id. Where services are rendered on promise of a definite legacy, reasonable compensation may be recovered where no provision is made by will. Walker v. Ganote [Ky.] 116 SW 689. Where services are rendered for compensation to be made by will, or by some instrument to become absolute on death of contractee, and latter dies without making provision as promised, action will lie against his estate for reasonable value of services. Pelton v. Smith, 50 Wash. 459, 97 P 460.

induce an ancestor or relative not to make a will by promising to make a certain disposition of the property.[82] To establish a constructive trust of this character, however, the evidence must be clear and indubitable.[83]

§ 2. Testamentary capacity, fraud, and undue influence.[84] A. Essentials to capacity—See 10 C. L. 2038—Testator must know the natural objects of his bounty, the character and extent of his property, and the nature of the testamentary act.[85] Great age and infirmity,[86] mental weakness,[87] or faulty reasoning,[88] will not necessarily incapacitate, nor will even partial insanity,[89] unless it amounts to an insane delusion[90] so connected with the will as to influence its provisions.[91] cause of failure of decedent to make will and it must appear that decedent was in position to carry out, and would have carried out, his desires but for the promise. Id. Promise may consist in silence on hearing declaration of promisee's desires (Id.), but implies a conscious act of commission or omission (Id.). Decedent's statement of his wishes and silence of heir held insufficient to establish constructive trust, where decedent did not know heir was in hearing and latter did not know her rights. Id.

83. Mere preponderance not sufficient. Mead v. Robertson, 131 Mo. App. 185, 110 SW 1095. Evidence insufficient as to promise and too uncertain as to subject-matter. Id.

85. Mullen v. Johnson [Ala.] 47 S 584; In re Ayer's Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 491. Without aid of other persons. Winn v. Grier [Mo.] 117 SW 48. Test is capacity to retain in memory, without prompting, extent and condition of property, to comprehend to whom it is given, and appreciate deserts and relations of persons excluded. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Test is necessarily the same whether insanity is attributable to dementia or insane delusion. Id. Tests are intelligence to know property, disposition, natural objects of bounty, and to transact ordinary business affairs. Weston v. Hanson, 212 Mo. 248, 111 SW 44. Testator must have sufficient capacity to comprehend condition of his property, his relations to objects of his bounty, and scope of testamentary provisions, and must be able to collect and hold in his mind particulars of business to be transacted sufficient length of time to perceive at least their obvious relations to each other and to form some rational judgment with relation to them. In re Ellwanger's Will, 114 NYS 727. Not essential testator should have had complete and accurate knowledge of all items of property comprising his estate. Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675. Instruction making capacity dependent on testator's ability to know and understand nature, extent and affect of his act, property he owned and wished to dispose of, and his relation to such property and beneficiaries, sustained. In re Thorp's Will [N. C.] 64 SE 379. No fixed standard of mental capacity is required, it being sufficient if testator has sufficient intelligence and mental power to understand what he is doing and legal effect of instrument he is making. In re Johnson's Will, 60 Misc. 277, 113 NYS 283. Standard of capacity does not require comparisons between testator's condition of mind at different times, or between his mental condition and that of other persons. Hoffbaur v. Morgan [Ind.] 88 NE 337. If he could know extent and value of property, names, needs, and deserts of objects of bounty, and could retain such facts in his mind long enough to have will prepared and executed, he was capable. Id. Motion for judgment sustaining will on answers to interrogatories held properly overruled, answers disclosing that testator could not understand contents of will, ordinary business affairs of life, value or extent of his estate, or natural objects of his bounty. McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. Instruction as to capacity required held proper. Id. Instrument evidently drawn in contemplation of suicide, and disclosing by its terms that it is product of a mind so shattered that testamentary capacity was wholly lacking, should not be allowed to stand as a will. Johnson v. Stansell [Miss.] 48 S 619. Man 70 years old capable of attending accurately and successfully to affairs of life, though unable to read or write, has testamentary capacity. Wood's Ex'r v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 994. That testator was an ardent spiritualist and willed part of estate for building of spiritualist church and a public library held not incapacity. Crumbaugh v. Owen, 238 Ill. 497, 87 NE 312. Will not invalid as result of spiritualistic communications neither executor nor any medium with whom he had had communications being individually interested therein, and its having been made in accordance with a previously expressed intention. Id.

86. Not sufficient to justify rejection of will. In re Duffy's Will, 127 App. Div 174, 111 NYS 491.

87. Mere mental weakness will not incapacitate so long as testator retains reasonable comprehension of act in which he is engaged, extent of estate, and claims of family or friends. Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675.

88. Faulty reasoning now and then is not evidence of general mental derangement. Conner v. Skaggs, 213 Mo. 334, 111 SW 1132.

89. Does not necessarily incapacitate. In re Ayres Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 491.

90. What constitutes: Where one conceives something extravagent and believes it as a fact, when it really has no existence, and the belief is so persistent and permanent as to withstand all evidence or argument to the contrary, he is possessed of an insane delusion. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Belief must be adhered to against all evidence and argument. Id.

No disorder of the moral affections, feeling, or propensities, will avoid the will unless accompanied by an insane delusion.[92] It is for the court to define delusions, announce the rules for their ascertainment and declare their effects.[93] Whether a delusion exists in a given case is for the jury.[94]

Admissibility of evidence.—See 10 C. L. 2039—While the ordinary rules of evidence are largely applicable[95] and matters too remote are properly excluded,[96] a

Cannot be predicated on purely esoteric and abstract subjects, beliefs concerning such subjects being speculative and incapable of disproof. Id. Belief of parent that child does not love him may be an insane delusion, being capable of disproof (Id.), but belief that child does not love as much as she ought to or as much as parent wishes she should cannot be delusion in law (Id.). Erroneous beliefs based on evidence, however slight, are not delusions. Id. Idea is not delusion if anything substantial is basis thereof. Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12. Insane delusion is an unreasoning and incorrigible belief in existence of facts, either absolutely impossible or at least impossible under circumstances of the individual (Komrer v. Skaggs Mo. 111 SW 1132), is never result of reasoning or reflection, and is not generated by nor capable of being dispelled by them (Id.); hence, must not be confounded with an opinion however fantastic (Id.). Evidence held not to show insane delusion resulting in will or codicil by father disinheriting daughter for marrying against his wishes. Id. For jury whether testator's belief that his son was illegitimate was an insane delusion. O'Dell v. Goff, 153 Mich. 643, 15 Det. Leg. N. 560, 117 NW 59. Exaggerated opinion as to value and qualities of property may be insane delusion. McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. That testator disclaimed paternity of and disinherited his children held not to show insane delusion, if he acted on false testimony. Morgan v. Morgan, 30 App. D. C. 436. But if there was no reasonable foundation for belief, and he retained it, when under conditions shown every sane mind would reject it, he was victim of delusion. Id.

91. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. If delusion in fact affects will, latter is vitiated though decedent was perfectly sane in other respects. Id; McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. Where jury answered in affirmative interrogatory as to insane delusion when testator signed will or any codicil, but, on being asked to specify which papers were so executed, named three codicils, answer was equivalent to finding that there was no delusion when will was made. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022.

92. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Test relates not to moral quality of disposition made but to capacity (Id.), there being a clear distinction between capacity to comprehend deserts and actually comprehending them (Id.). That testator's conduct and sentiments show a bad moral character is not ground for setting aside his will, if he was of sound mind. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. Injustice, unfairness, or anger toward relatives does not invalidate will. Id. Unkindness and brutality to wife held no test of capacity. Weston v. Hanson, 212 Mo. 248, 111 SW 44.

Evidence admissible: Testimony of physician that testatrix was unable to comprehend value of her property and obligations to relatives held not conclusive as to matter directly in issue. In re Overpeck's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 1044. Photograph of testatrix held admissible in rebuttal of contestant's evidence as to her physical condition though it could have only slight weight on question of capacity. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058. Answer that witness considered testatrix of sound mind "at that time" held to sufficiently refer to time will was made. Id. Evidence of mental unsoundness held not excludable as referring to a time when witness did not see testator. McBride v. McBride [Iowa] 120 NW 709.

Evidence inadmissible: Evidence by others of opinion of testator's family as to his mental condition is inadmissible, being hearsay. Hopkins v. Wampler, 108 Va. 705, 62 SE 926. Whether proponents' witnesses had ever heard decedent's sanity questioned until after his death. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Whether it was understood testator owned certain realty in 1863 or earlier. Id. Error to allow experts' testimony to assume argumentative form on moral phases of testator's conduct towards daugbter and her rights. Id. Improper to allow contestant's step-mother to testify that she did not send contestant any notice of testator's last illness. Id. Judgment adjudicating mental unsoundness after execution of will and at time when proponent conceded unsoundness held property excluded. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058. Record in suit by testator for divorce on ground of alleged physical malformation of wife, found by physicians not to exist, held properly excluded, as leading to inquiry as to whether statement was true and if false whether it was result of delusion or not. Turner v. American Security & Trust Co., 213 U. S. 257, 53 Law. Ed. —.

96. Record in divorce suit thirty years before will was made held too remote. Turner v. American Security & Trust Co., 213 U. S. 257, 53 Law. Ed. —. On daughter's contest for insane delusion of decedent, held improper to allow contestant to ask witness for proponent whether witness had found farming profitable, for purpose of contradicting testator's statement that he had made no money farming. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Opinion of physician that testator was of unsound mind in 1901, and grounds for such opinion, held competent on issue of capacity in 1905.

wide range of inquiry is permissible into facts and circumstances either before or after execution of the will.[97] Thus it is proper to show any facts within the issues [98] and reasonably bearing upon the subject of mental soundness,[99] such as the contents of the will,[1] the manner in which it was written and executed,[2] the Jenkins v. Weston, 200 Mass. 488, 86 NE 955. Telegrams sent by testator held not too remote where sent during period fixed by court, within which evidence of capacity would be received. Jenkins v. Weston, 200 Mass. 488, 86 NE 955.

97. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Evidence showing the condition of testator's mind long prior, closely approaching, and shortly subsequent to execution of will is admissible, but should be received only for the purpose of showing condition of testator's mind at time will was made. In re Winch's Estate [Neb.] 121 NW 116. Facts occurring after execution of will, while properly considered on the question of capacity when will was made (Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058), do not create a legal presumption of incapacity at that time (Id.). Subsequent appointment of guardian. Id.

98. Allegation testator was of unsound mind and could not understand business he was engaged in, natural objects of bounty, etc., held broad enough to admit proof of senile dementia. Conner v. Skaggs, 213 Mo. 334, 111 SW 1132. Certain letters from contestants and their attorney, with reference to procuring certain testimony and depreciating family law suits, held properly excluded as having no bearing on issue of testator's capacity. Credille v. Credille, 131 Ga. 40, 61 SE 1042. Where proponents contended testator discriminated against daughter because of her marriage, and not because of alleged insane delusion as contended by her, testimony showing her husband's character and reputation was proper. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Where one issue was whether testator's belief his son was illegitimate was an insane delusion, chastity of testator's wife, contestant's mother, was involved, and evidence of her chaste reputation was admissible. O'Dell v. Goff, 153 Mich. 643, 15 Det. Leg. N. 560, 117 NW 59.

99. Evidence admissible: That testator had said in answer to suggestion will was unjust, that he had had a revelation to make it as he had made it, that it was sacred, and that he might not have another revelation, held admissible. McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. Deeds executed by testator may be admitted, where the purpose is to throw light on the mental capacity of testator by showing his method of transacting business and nature of business transacted by him at about time of making of will. Wilson v. Wilson, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 435. In contest for incapacity, undue influence, and deceit, proponent could show that testatrix had spoken of contestants as having stolen certain bonds owned by her and that other children had confirmed her in her belief, in explanation of alleged unreasonableness of will asserted by contestants. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329. Where testator's untrue statements that he was widower and had been divorced were admitted as evidence of incapacity, agreement between him and wife, purporting to restore parties to contractual and property rights they had before marriage, was admissible in explanation. Turner v. American Security & Trust Co., 213 U. S. 257, 53 Law. Ed. —. Motive of wife in signing agreement and joining in deed held immaterial. Id.

Evidence inadmissible: Statements by testator as to trips taken by him for immoral purposes. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. On issue of insane delusion against daughter, testimony as to general character of issues in a lawsuit in which witness was counsel and in which testator did all the work of looking up witnesses, etc., and testimony as to whether issue in such lawsuit was whether one from whom testator acquired land was a monomaniac. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Evidence for proponents showing that principal charge against testator and his codirectors of a bank was that they accepted statements of officers instead of consulting bank books and bookkeepers. A witness having previously testified that testator was very painstaking and that witness thought that as bank director he went to extremes in seeking information from bookkeepers. Id. Question asked by proponents as to what difficulty testator's friends would have experienced in detecting he was insane between 1895 and 1904, based on supposition he was in first stages of paranoia in 1880, when 50 years old, and that he lived after disease developed 24 years. Id. Question asked by proponents of attorney who prepared will as to whether he intended to reduce benefit contestant would receive when he suggested to testator that he substituted an absolute gift for annuity he named in first directions as to will. Id. That some years before his death testator pleaded guilty to trespass charge, and that his counsel in argument stated in his presence that testator had recently returned from an asylum and was still of weak mind and irresponsible, held inadmissible, as made when testator was not called upon to speak. In re Thorp's Will [N. C.] 64 SE 379. Certain evidence held not admissible as showing that testator's belief a spirit brought him a $5 bill was rational from standpoint of spiritualists. O'Dell v. Goff, 153 Mich. 643, 15 Det. Leg. N. 560, 117 NW 59. Letters to testator are not admissible to prove his mental condition unless they explain some act of his with reference thereto. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022 Letters in envelope marked "spirit communications," and found among his papers after his death, held inadmissible without evidence that testator had ever acted upon or approved them. Crumbaugh v. Owen, 238 Ill. 497, 87 NE 312.

1. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. On issue of sanity, inequality or unjustness of provisions may be considered in connection with other circumstances (Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279; Morgan v. Morgan, 30 App. D. C. 436), but is not of itself sufficient to show incapacity (Id.).

nature, extent and sources of testator's estate,[3] his family and connections,[4] their condition and relative situation to him,[5] the terms on which he stood with them,[6] the claims of particular individuals,[7] the situation of testator himself,[8] and all other circumstances under which the will was made.[9] The admissions of one legatee, however, are not binding on others,[10] and the court may in its discretion limit the testimony to conduct of testator during a reasonable time before or after the execution of the will.[11] Nonexperts may give opinions after stating the facts on which they are based.[12] Full mental capacity may be shown, however much it may exceed the requirement of a disposing mind.[13]

Sufficiency of evidence.—See 10 C. L. 2040—Capacity is presumed.[14] Hence, the burden is on the party asserting insanity,[15] and, if testator's general capacity

3. Where capacity is questioned on ground of dementia, inequalities of will and nature and extent of property and sources of acquisition are properly considered. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. But, where only delusion is relied on, such matters can be adduced only to show that testator, if delusion be established, was dominated by it. Id. When daughter contested will on ground of testator's insane delusion that she did not have the proper feelings towards him, she could show what property of her mother passed to testator and its value. Id. Proper to receive evidence to show testator acquired his fortune through his wife from a third person and to exclude testimony of one who had examined probate records. That such person's estate was insolvent. Id.

4, 5. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

6. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Proper to show state of testator's feelings and thoughts as manifested by his words and acts. Id. Daughter could show friendly relations between herself and testator as bearing on issue of his sanity, where she sued to annul will. Brelsford v. Aldridge [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1090. Not precluded by statute prohibiting heirs or devisees from testifying as to matters occurring prior to ancestor's death. Id. On issue of sanity, held competent to prove manner in which testator was treated by his family. Hopkins v. Wampler, 108 Va. 705, 62 SE 926.

Where it did not appear that, before or at time of execution of will, testator was afflicted with senile dementia, inquiry should be conducted as in cases of other insanity. Id. Limitation to two years held no abuse. Id. In issue of congenital insanity, held not error to limit evidence of insanity to conduct of testatrix within six years before will was made. Hardy v. Martin, 200 Mass. 548, 86 NE 939.

12. Snell v Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022; Hopkins v. Wampler, 108 Va. 705, 62 SE 96; Turner v. American Security & Trust Co., 213 U. S. 257, 53 Law. Ed. —. Opinion based in part on what witness "saw" held inadmissible. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058. Facts held so meager as to make it discretionary with court to permit nonexpert to give opinion on capacity. Id. Questions held properly excluded as being same in form as though witness had been expert. Id.. Nonexpert cannot give opinion not based on his own knowledge. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. Proper to allow physician to state opinion testator was not competent to dispose of his property so far as contestant was concerned nor to deal with matters concerning her. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Held not reversible error to ask witness' opinion as to testator's ability to understand and execute deed or contract, witness having fully disclosed his means of knowledge as to testator's mental condition and reasons for concluding testator was incapable. Macafee v. Higgins, 31 App. D. C. 355. Evidence of testator's paralyzed condition held sufficient as basis for opinion as to whether testator had capacity to talk and dictate will. Credille v. Credille, 131 Ga. 40, 61 SE 1042. Witness could consider standing of testator as to efficiency in same office in which he worked, in reaching conclusion as to testator's mental condition. Macafee v. Johnson [Ala.] 47 S 584. Held to show capacity. Weston v. Hanson, 212 Mo. 248, 111 SW 44; In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935. Insufficient to go to jury. In re More's Estate, 153 Mich. 695, 15 Det. Leg. N. 609, 117 NW 329. Testimony of medical expert on incomplete hypothetical question held insufficient to take question of capacity to jury. Winn v. Grier [Mo.] 117 SW 48. Finding of incapacity held against weight of evidence, In re O'Gorman's Will, 127 App. Div. 159, 111 NYS 274. Unjust or immaterial disposition of property held not to show incapacity. Weston v. Hanson, 212 is conceded, the proof must be of the clearest and most satisfactory kind.[10] It being shown that testator had been discharged from an insane asylum, the presumption is he was discharged because he had become sane.[17]

Instructions See 10 C. L. 2040 must be authorized by the evidence[18] and the issues in the case,[19] should properly define testamentary capacity[20] and insane delusions,[21] must be consistent with the law in regard to unreasonable or unjust testamentary dispositions,[22] moral perversion,[23] presumptions and proof,[24] and in proper cases should limit the effect of particular evidence[25] and present a party's theory of the case.[26]

Mo. 248, 111 SW 44. Opinions based on mere casual observations held entitled to but little weight. Mullen v. Johnson [Ala.] 47 S 584. Use of narcotics by testatrix afflicted with cancerous disease held insufficient to raise presumption against capacity. Id. Testator's age or character or extent of his property is not evidence of mental incapacity or undue influence. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105. Evidence of numerous eccentricities, roaring in head and disconnected conversations, held insufficient, it appearing testator was able to carry on his business and that he understood all that was said and done when will was made. Winn v. Grier [Mo.] 117 SW 48. That testator devised to daughter land to which she already held warranty deed held not to show incapacity, where testator had furnished money for the land. Id. Evidence held not to show insane delusion as to conspiracy to injure testator. Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12.

Evidence held to show incapacity. McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. Evidence held to sustain finding of want of testamentary capacity. Mason v. Rodriguez [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 868. Proof of senile dementia in 1899 held proof condition of testatrix was not better in 1902 when she attempted to make will. Id. Evidence held to show incapacity to make a second codicil. 18. Certain charges held not objectionable as not being authorized by the evidence. Credille v. Credille, 131 Ga. 40, 61 SE 1042.

19. Where only issue was mental capacity, held proper to refuse certain requests for instructions not bearing on such issue but calculated to distract the jury's attention. Jenkins v. Weston, 200 Mass. 488, 86 NE 955.

20. Instruction not erroneous for failure to define "partial insanity." McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. Instruction that law "does require testator to possess mind sufficient to know" extent and value of property, etc., held proper. Id. Not objectionable as excluding idea will would be valid if made during lucid interval. Hill v. Terry [Miss.] 46 S 829. Instruction testator was competent if he had intelligent knowledge of instrument he was executing, and mind enough to comprehend, "in a general way," natural objects of his bounty and nature and extent of his estate, held not erroneous. Harahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675. Instruction that capacity to manage a small estate might be insufficient to dispose of a large one held improper, there being no question as to testator's ability to properly manage his large estate. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022.

21. Improper to refuse to instruct that a belief founded on any evidence is not a delusion. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Held error to add to proponent's instruction on insane delusion modifying statement that will would be invalid if jury should find testator was not of sound mind and capable of comprehending daughter's deserts, statement not being germane to paragraph modified but presenting an independent proposition of law. Id.

22. Instruction held to unduly emphasize inequality and unreasonableness on issues of mental capacity and undue influence. Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279. Instructions taken together held to state the law in regard to unreasonableness of provisions of will, and second one held not to be inconsistent and eliminate unreasonableness from jury's consideration. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058. Error to refuse instruction that if testator had capacity to comprehend obligation to children mere disregard of such obligation would not invalidate will, court having previously instructed on effect of incapacity to understand his obligations to his daughter. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

23. Instruction on effect of unjust prejudice, moral perversion and unnatural disposition of property, held properly refused as argumentative. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405. Under evidence, held error to refuse to limit inquiry into incapacity brought about by alleged insane delusion, there being danger jury might take into account testator's moral perversion. Id.

24. Requested instruction held objectionable as implying that appointment of guardian for testatrix after execution of will gave rise to presumption that she was incapable when will was made. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058. Instruction ignoring presumption in favor of testator's sanity, and requiring proponent to prove capacity by "clear and convincing proof," held erroneous and misleading. Hopkins v. Wampler, 108 Va. 705, 62 SE 926.

25. Failure to instruct that testator's declarations "as to how he intended to dispose of his property" should not be deemed evidence of truth or falsity of facts stated held not prejudicial, though such instruction as

(§ 2) B. Constituents of fraud, mistake and undue influence.[27]—See 10 C. L. 2041.—To be undue, the influence must be directly connected with the execution of the will,[28] and must amount to over persuasion, coercion or force destroying free agency,[29] mere persuasions addressed to the judgment and affections not being sufficient.[30] Usually the same considerations control when undue influence is due to misapprehensions and artifices commonly designated "fraud." [31] The question of undue influence is usually for the jury.[32] Whether the whole will must be set aside for undue influence or only a part depends on the effect on the general testamentary scheme.[33]

Fraud and mistake See 10 C. L. 2042 may invalidate,[34] but the presumption is against the existence of fraud or mistake,[35] and the fact that testator was in possession of the will for a long time is a strong indication that he was aware of its contents [36] and that the will was drawn according to his instructions.[37] Declarations by testator [38] or a subsequent codicil [39] may also tend to negative mistake.

to testator's declarations generally would have been proper. McBride v. McBride [Iowa] 120 NW 709.

26. Instructions designed to present proponent's theory that daughter's marriage was cause of father's discrimination, and not insane delusion, held improperly refused. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

And must be specially asserted to procure will in favor of particular persons. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. Invalidating undue influence varies with strength of minds, and, if such dominion is acquired over a person with sufficient mind and discretion to regulate his affairs generally as to prevent exercise of that discretion, he does not have a disposing mind. In re Ellwanger's Will, 114 NYS 727. "Undue influence" must be directly connected with execution of will, and be exerted for purpose of procuring will in favor of particular parties to such extent as to destroy testator's freedom of will and to practically render it that of another. Though strictly fraud and undue influence are distinguishable, the terms are frequently used to denote the same idea, something sinister being always involved perverting testator's will by overcoming his power to truly express his real desires. 34. Fraud in inducement of will consists of willful false statements of fact, inducing testator to execute instrument with full knowledge of its contents. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. Where fraud is in inducement as distinct from its execution, same considerations apply to validity of will as if it were executed under mistake of fact. Id. If draftsman in drawing will misinterpreted instructions given by testatrix, instrument made would not be her will. Christman v. Roesch, 132 App. Div. 22, 116 NYS 348. Unreasonable prejudice, or erroneous conviction as to unworthiness of a natural object of bounty, in order to invalidate, must have been nursed or fostered by a beneficiary and will procured wholly by his false representations made with intent to secure its execution. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Evidence held to warrant findings that testatrix knew and understood provisions of will and that her wishes and intentions were represented thereby. Freund v. Becker, 235 Ill. 513, 85 NE 610.

35. Presumed in first instance that will executed according to legal formalities was read by testator, or that he otherwise became acquainted with its provisions. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105.

37. Conclusively presumed will was prepared according to instructions of testatrix who retained and preserved it after ample time for examination, especially where it followed her pronounced intentions and made no unnatural disposition of her property. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676.

38. Declarations of testatrix that she had made a will and remembered certain persons, that she had thought much about it, and that some people would not be satisfied,

Where the will is attacked for forgery decedent's declarations may be admitted in evidence to show they were inconsistent with statements of fact in the will.[40]

Indicia of influence and admissibility of evidence.—See 10 C. L. 2042—If the evidence is not too remote,[41] the relations and dealings between testator and the beneficiaries [42] and the opportunity for undue influence [43] may be considered, as well as the extent of testator's property,[44] his social and commercial standing,[45] his family connection [46] and domestic relations,[47] the claims of particular persons held admissible to show she was aware of contents of will, contested for undue influence. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676.

39. Fact testatrix made codicil, expressly confirming will, but making changes, tends to prove she was acquainted with will. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676.

40. In re Thomas' Estate [Cal.] 101 P 798. But not to show testamentary intent at variance with will. Id.

41. Evidence as to testatrix' mental condition and her feelings towards her children during four years before executing will held not too remote. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329. Compromise and promise to complainant made by testatrix 15 years before will was made and 18 years before death held too remote on issues of incapacity and undue influence. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Also statements by testatrix' husband, 9 years before will was made, that plaintiff had received all she would get. Id. Evidence of illicit relations between testator and second wife before marriage held too remote to prove undue influence as to will drawn eight years later. Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12.

42. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. That husband who was in good health had agreed to will his property to testatrix, who was near death, in consideration she make similar will in his favor, held to show overreaching, rather than an agreement for mutual benefit. Betcher v. Brady [Wash.] 101 P 220. That wife was chief beneficiary held to raise no presumption of undue influence. Fulton v. Freelend [Mo.] 118 SW 12. Burden of proving undue influence is not sustained by mere showing that son-in-law drew will and that his children received valuable legacies. Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675. While such facts may be grounds for suspicion, verdict for contestant cannot be upheld without proof of other facts and circumstances confirming such suspicion. Id. Existence of confidential relation raises presumption of undue influence only when beneficiary was in some way actively concerned in preparation and execution of will. Ginter v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P. 634. When will is made by a patient in favor of his physician to exclusion of relatives, and no reason for such exclusion appears, will is presumed void. Hill v. Terry [Miss.] 46 S 829. Rule requiring testator to exercise judgment independent of confidence induced by confidential relationship with his legal advisor does not require proof of proper independent advice. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676. Where evidence showed fixed ideas in testatrix as to disposition of her estate, and that attorney who drew will followed her instructions, it showed she exercised independent judgment essential to sustain will containing gift to attorney. Id. Existence of meretricious relations between testator and beneficiary is not alone sufficient to invalidate will. Parker v. Wainwright, 139 Ill. App. 458; Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12; Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. Existence of such relations can be considered only for purpose of determining whether influence otherwise proven was undue. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. Letters from legatee to testator tending to show improper relations held inadmissible. Id. That will gave bulk of property to niece, with whom testator sustained illicit relations, held insufficient, testator being possessed of strong will and having procured execution of will without interposition of beneficiary. Weston v. Hanson, 212 Mo. 248, 111 SW 44. Where evidence of illicit relations before marriage of testator with beneficiary is admitted, it must be followed up by evidence of acts of undue influence after marriage. Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12.

43. Evidence that principal devisee had opportunity to exert undue influence held admissible. In re Overpeck's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 1044. Undue influence cannot be inferred from mere mental weakness, opportunity to exert undue influence or interest in so doing. Id. Power, motive, or opportunity, not alone sufficient to raise inference undue influence was in fact exercised. Ginter v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P 634.

44, 45, 46. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365.

47. Testatrix' belief that contestants had stolen securities from her, and confirmation of such belief by her other children, held admissible in explanation of alleged unreasonableness of will asserted by contestants. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329. Evidence that some time during year in which will was made, whether before or after not appearing, testator had told road superintendent, under whom disinherited son was working, to let son loose and testator would pay fine, though perhaps admissible to show kindly feeling towards son, held entitled to little force. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. That disinherited son had been excluded from family table held not evidence of undue influence by other members of family, it appearing he was excluded because of vile habits and disease. Id. Testimony of disinherited child as to conversation between her and father, in which latter accused her of improper relations with a certain man and stated that one of the legatees had told him, held admissible, contest not being an action by or against heirs or legal representatives arising out of any transaction with decedent, within Rev. St. 1895, art. 2302. Id.

on his bounty,[48] the situation of the beneficiaries, social and pecuniary,[49] testator's situation and mental condition,[50] the nature and contents of the will itself,[51] and all the circumstances under which it was executed.[52] Testator's declarations are inadmissible to establish undue influence in the absence of independent evidence of such influence or of incapacity.[53] No collusion being shown, the declarations of one legatee are inadmissible where it would prejudice others.[54] The execution of prior wills disposing of the property in the same manner may be shown.[55] Irrelevant or immaterial evidence is properly excluded,[56] and also evidence calculated to prejudice or influence the jury.[57]

48. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365.

49. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. Financial condition of legatees may be shown. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

50. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. That testatrix' husband was very determined held immaterial in absence of evidence showing he exercised undue influence. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Neither testator's age, nor character or extent of his property, is evidence of unsoundness of mind or undue influence. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105.

51. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. Mere inequality of disposition raises no presumption of undue influence. Ginter v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P 634. May be considered on question whether instrument is testator's will, but has no weight in absence of other evidence of undue influence. Id. Is not of itself sufficient. Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279; Wood's Ex'r v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 994. That a daughter did not receive as much under will as she thought she would raises no presumption of undue influence. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Where testator of sound mind formed a dislike toward certain of his children and for this reason freely and of choice disinherited them, fact he was mistaken or arrived at unjust conclusions would not invalidate will. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105. May be considered in connection with other circumstances. Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279; In re Overpeck's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 1044; Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. That most of property was given to strangers in blood who had been kind to testator, to exclusion of children who had been unkind, held not to show undue influence. Parker v. Wainwright, 139 Ill. App. 458.

52. Sanger v. McDonald [Ark.] 112 SW 365. Wide range of inquiry is permitted. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Undue influence is not often subject of direct proof, but may be shown, by all surrounding facts and circumstances, nature of will, family relations, health and mental condition, dependency upon and subjection to control of person supposed to have wielded the influence, opportunity and disposition of person to wield it, and his acts and declarations. In re Ellwanger's Will, 114 NYS 727.

53. Testatrix' declarations prior to making will as to her intentions held properly excluded, there being no evidence testatrix was incapable when will was made, or unduly influenced. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Evidence that testatrix had said that if she ever made a will all children should share alike held properly excluded. Id. Declarations of testator before, at time of, and after execution of will are admissible where there is independent evidence of undue influence. Stubbs v. Marshall [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1030. Letter from testator to disinherited daughter, written two years after execution of will and giving reasons for cutting of a certain allowance he had been making to her, held not admissible to show undue influence. Simon v Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Letters written by testatrix after making will and before and after making codicil held admissible as bearing on her mental condition, but not competent evidence of facts stated therein. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676 In attempt to overthrow will on ground of spiritualistic communications, declarations of testator before and after execution of will held incompetent except as bearing on testamentary capacity. Crumbaugh v. Owen, 238 Ill. 497, 87 NE 312.

54. Declarations by deceased legatee held inadmissible to affect interests of other legatees, no collusion being shown. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Declarations by party to record, who is legatee with others, are inadmissible to prove that will was contrary to intentions of testator or was procured by undue influence. Seal v. Goebel, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 433.

55. Freund v. Becker, 235 Ill. 513, 85 NE 610; Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

56. In suit to annul will for incapacity and undue influence, plaintiff's testimony that her brother had died shortly before father died and that father was ignorant thereof and bequeathed certain property to son, and that testatrix, plaintiff's mother, took interest of deceased child, held irrelevant. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Also testatrix' promise to plaintiff to make a devise. Id. Also statement by testatrix in last illness that she felt like she had all with her when she had certain persons, including plaintiff. Id. That witness had never seen any immorality on part of disinherited child held immaterial. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Evidence of false and slanderous charges by a beneficiary against one who would ordinarily be recipient of favors under will held important as bearing on fraud and undue influence. Id. Evidence that disinherited son heard two of his brothers, who were beneficiaries, say after funeral that there were three wills and that children disinherited by last will knew noth-

Sufficiency of evidence.—See 10 C. L. 2044—The burden is on the party who alleges undue influence or fraud,[58] though substantial gifts to a confidant is prima facie evidence.[59] To show undue influence the evidence must be direct, or all circumstances showing it must be a reasonably satisfactory and convincing character,[60] but contestant is entitled to all inferences legitimately derivable from the ing about it, and that they would "give them five dollars and let them go to hell," held improper, knowledge of existence of other wills not being relevant on issue of undue influence as to will in question. Id.

57. Evidence of financial condition of disinherited daughter, 14-15 years before will was made, held inadmissible. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Evidence of altercations between disinherited daughter and a son, who was beneficiary, three years before execution of will, held improper. Id. Evidence that son of disinherited daughter had taken notes to testator from daughter in which she sought to obtain money, and of testator's suggestion she should wash and iron, held improper. Id.

58. Ginter v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P 634; Wood's Ex'r v. Wood [Va.] 63 SE 994; Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675; Fulton v. Freeland [Mo.] 118 SW 12. Where testator has capacity and knowledge of contents of will and is surrounded by guards prescribed by statute. Haight v. Haight, 112 NYS 144. Burden on contestants not only to establish undue influence, but to show it operated on decedent at time will was made and amounted to such coercion as resulted in disposition of property he did not wish to make. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

59. If a person, though possessed of testamentary capacity, is aged, infirm bodily, and mentally impaired, and confidential adviser benefits substantially under the will, presumption of undue influence arises which beneficiary has burden to rebut. Where estate was about $75,000, adviser, who was made executor and trustee and who was given a possible residuary interest in whole estate, held substantially interested within rule. In re Adams' Estate, 220 Pa. 531, 69 A 989. Rule that donee, who occupied confidential relation to donor, has burden to rebut presumption of undue influence does not apply to wills, unless beneficiary is shown to have taken an active part in preparation of the will. Mullen v. Johnson [Ala.] 47 S 584. Where will was prepared by legal adviser of testatrix and gave him and his son specific and residuary legacies, burden was on attorney to rebut presumption of undue influence. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676. Every person has right to assistance of any one he may deem proper when he desires to make will (Id.), and probate should not be denied because he selects person whom he intends to make beneficiary, where selection is without improper influence and evidence shows no abuse of confidence (Id.). Contention attorney should have refused bounty held irrelevant. Id. Where facts show existence of confidential relation between testator and beneficiary, slight additional circumstances will throw on beneficiary burden of showing want of undue influence. Id. Where beneficiary is a child, burden on issue of undue influence is not on him. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329.

60. Helsley v. Moss [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 599. Proof must be substantial so that it may be perceived by whom and in what manner the influence was exercised, and what effect it had on will. Ginter v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P 634. Suspicion, conjecture, or possibility, insufficient. Id. Fraud or undue influence may be proved by circumstances, each one of which must point towards end sought, and all of which together must in a reasonably satisfactory manner establish fraud or undue influence. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

Evidence sufficient to sustain verdict against validity of will contested for undue influence of testator's physician, who was principal beneficiary. Hitt v. Terry [Miss.] 46 S 829. Evidence held to show undue influence exerted by husband for purpose of getting money wife had inherited. Betcher v. Brady [Wash.] 101 P 220. Evidence held to show second codicil was result of undue influence. In re Eliwanger's Will, 114 NYS 727. Evidence sufficient for jury. Frederick's Estate, In re [Neb.] 120 NW 1131. Where contestant offers sufficient evidence of undue influence to support finding thereof, court cannot refuse issue devisavit vel non because of evidence introduced by proponent, question being then for jury. In re Adams' Estate, 220 Pa. 531, 69 A 989.

Evidence insufficient to show undue influence. Fulton v. Frieland [Mo.] 118 SW 12; In re O'Gorman's Will, 127 App. Div. 159, 111 NYS 274; In re Tobin's Will, 127 App. Div. 373, 111 NYS 555; Haight v. Ginter [Kan.] 101 P 634. To show two codicils were result of undue influence. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022. To show husband unduly influenced wife who was ill. Mullen v. Johnson [Ala.] 47 S 584. Id. [Ala.] 47 S 584. In contest for fraud, mistake, incapacity, and undue influence, evidence held to sustain verdict for proponents. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105. Evidence of physical and mental condition of testatrix, reasonableness of gifts as compared with prior will, and of her knowledge and appreciation of disposition made, held to show absence of undue influence by principal beneficiary who was legal adviser. In re Cooper's Will [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676. Evidence of assistance to testator, and unequal distribution of property by the will, held insufficient. Winn v. Grier [Mo.] 117 SW 48. Insufficient to go to jury on issue of undue influence. Umstead v. Bowling [N. C.] 64 SE 368; In re Overpeck's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 1044; Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058; In re Moore's Estate, 153 Mich. 695, 15 Det. Leg. N. 609, 117 NW 329; Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 NE 1022; Daugherty v. Gaffney, 239 Ill. 640, 88 NE 150. Court justified in taking issue of undue influence from jury, contestant's own evidence showing will was facts established.[61] The interest of a witness may be considered, as in other cases, in weighing his testimony.[62] Testimony of a legatee charged with undue influence cannot be arbitrarily disregarded, where not contradicted by other credible testimony or discredited by improbability.[63]

Instructions See 10 C. L. 2045 are governed by the ordinary rules,[64] and the law, respecting undue influence,[65] the evidence thereof,[66] and the degree of proof required on particular issues.[67]

§ 3. The testamentary instrument or act. A. Requisites, form and validity.[68] See 10 C. L. 2045—A will is a properly executed instrument made by a person of testamentary capacity for the purpose of disposing of his property after his death.[69] An instrument will be held a will if properly executed whatever its form or language may be, if a final testamentary intention is sufficiently manifested.[70] An attestation clause is not essential,[71] being chiefly valuable as evidence of due execution.[72] Interlineations or marginal insertions will not invalidate unless they are below the signature,[73] and then only if they are important or material.[74] Testamentary instruments are void if not executed as required by the statute relat-peculiarly that of testator and that contestant was disinherited for his set purpose. Conner v. Skaggs, 213 Mo. 334, 111 SW 1132.

64. Charges held not unauthorized by evidence. Credille v. Credille, 131 Ga. 40, 61 SE 1042. Instruction on effect of unjust disposition, due to testator's dislike of some of his children, held not erroneous as invading province of jury. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1106.

65. Instruction invalidating will of old and infirm man, if not his free act and in accordance with intentions previously expressed or implied from family relations, held proper. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105.

66. On issues of undue influence and incapacity, instruction held erroneous as placing undue emphasis on inequality and unreasonableness in disposition of the property. Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279. Request that testator's declarations before or after making will could be considered proof of undue influence, "or that he was unduly influenced," held properly refused. O'Dell v. Goff, 163 Mich. 643, 15 Det. Leg. N. 560, 117 NW 59.

67. Instruction requiring proof by "clear preponderance of evidence" that testator knew contents of will held not prejudicial. Hitt v. Ferry [Miss.] 46 S 829.

69. Instruction that a will is an instrument executed by a person of full age and sound mind for purpose of disposing of his property after his death, which instrument must be signed by him in presence of two witnesses who must sign as such witnesses in his presence and in presence of each other, held proper. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667.

70. Milam v. Stanley, 33 Ky. L. R. 783, 111 SW 296. Court will consider not only language of instrument but testator's situation and intention. Id. Absence of recited seal and existence of blank space of page and a half between paragraphs disposing of estate and appointing executor held to show testamentary act was left incomplete. In re McCarthy's Will, 59 Misc. 128, 112 NYS 219. Presence of pencil marks on draft of new will found in testator's desk held prima facie evidence marks were made by him and to indicate he was still undecided as to disposition of his property. In re Frothingham's Will [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 695. Letter by a convict, written only three days before date of his hanging, and stating he wanted "to make you and Lula a deed of that house and lot" and giving reason why he did it, held a will. Id. Letter directing cancellation of old will and that property should go in same way as another person had disposed of hers. Nightingale v. Phillips [R. I.] 72 A 220. Letter written, dated, and signed may constitute author's last will, if it contains testamentary language indicating it was intended as a will. In re Billis' Will, 122 La. 639, 47 S 884. Memorandum intended to supplement will with list of property, canceling debts of certain persons to estate, and giving son a small sum, should he reform, held a codicil and probatable as such with will. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

71. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210. That attestation clause did not state witnesses signed in presence of testatrix held not fatal. Schofield v. Thomas, 236 Ill. 417, 86 NE 122. Will need not recite witnesses signed in presence of each other. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210.

75. Thomas v. Williams, 105 Minn. 88, 117 NW 155.

76. The test whether instrument is deed or will is maker's intention primarily to be determined from its language. Thomas v. Williams, 105 Minn. 88, 117 NW 155. Instruments in form of deeds and bill of sale, conveying property on specified conditions and not intended to operate as a will, cannot be construed as testamentary. De Bow v. Wollenberg [Or.] 96 P 536.

77. To constitute a will no present interest must pass. In re McIntyre's Estate [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 95, 120 NW 587. Distinction between bequest and gift causa mortis is time of delivery, which in case of gift is necessarily before donor's death. Fite v. Perry [Cal. App.] 96 P 102. If right or interest passes on delivery of instrument subject only to contingencies over which grantor has no control, it is irrevocable, though enjoyment may be postponed. Thomas v. Williams, 105 Minn. 88, 117 NW 155.

Held testamentary: Instrument not operating inter vivos, but depending for its operation on death of maker to consummate it, can take effect only as a testament. Hearn v. Purnell [Md.] 72 A 906. Deed not to take effect until grantor's death is void as attempt to make testamentary disposition without complying with statute of wills. Ackman v. Potter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. Deed first granting land to nephew, but later providing title should not pass until grantor's death, and that grantor should have full use and control, until his death when title should pass subject to incumbrances, taxes and debts, held testamentary and void. Boon v. Castle, 61 Misc. 474, 115 NYS 583. Held no grant of any future estate. Id. A second deed held delivered to a third person under same conditions as first, giving grantor right to withdraw so as to amount to only an attempted testamentary disposition. Burnham v. Burnham, 58 Misc. 385, 111 NYS 252. Deed deposited in bank to be delivered to grantee on grantor's death held testamentary, if intention was grantor should retain title till he died. Felt v. Felt [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 994, 118 NW 953. Agreement held to show intention father was to retain title. Id. Assignments of insurance policies to trustees to be named by assignor's will held testamentary and invalid where not witnessed as required by statute, there having been no delivery in testator's lifetime. Frost v. Frost, 202 Mass. 100, 88 NE 446. Defect not cured by consent of cestui que trust. Id. Where declarant of trust in bank deposits could at any time revoke it and do with money as she chose, and another part of trust related only to disposition of funds after her death, document was testamentary and could not be given effect under statutes permitting testamentary dispositions only by duly executed will. McEvoy v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 21 Mass. 50, 87 NE 465. Writing attached to will, testamentary in character but not executed with formalities required for wills, held inadmissible in evidence in favor of devisee in proceedings on petition for distribution. In re Benner's Estate [Cal.] 99 P 715.

Held not testamentary: Instrument in form a deed conveying a present interest, and unexplained by contemporaneous writing of testamentary character, cannot be probated as a will. Dexter v. Witte, 138 Wis. 74, 119 NW 891. Trust deed placed in hands of third person instructed to deliver to trustee if grantor should not survive pending illness. Id. Instrument in form a deed conveying personalty to trustees to collect and apply income for benefit of grantor for life, and distribute corpus to others at grantor's death, is a deed and not a will. Hall v. Hall [Va.] 63 SE 420. Reservation of life interest, use, and control does not render deed testamentary or prevent immediate vesting of remainder, if there has been actual delivery of deed. Ackman v. Potter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. Instrument in form of statutory deed "to take effect at my death, and not before," held not testamentary, since estates may be made to commence in future by deed or will. Garrison v. McLain [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 773. Instrument containing granting and habendum clauses common to deeds, and also covenants of warranty, and reciting that purpose was to convey property to M, but that title was to vest in grantor during his life, held a deed with reservation of life estate, and not a will. Dick v. Miller [N. C.] 63 SE 176. Instrument creating life estate to take effect at grantor's death, remainder to grantee's children, held deed according to its form. Fellbush v. Egen, 221 Pa. 420, 70 A 816. Instrument expressly granting, etc., land and reserving life estate in grantor, but also power "to mortgage, incumber, sell, lease, convey, or otherwise dispose of said real estate," and providing that land should revert to grantor should grantee predecease her, held not testamentary. Brady v. Fuller [Kan.] 96 P 854. That an instrument, in form a deed, postpones enjoyment of grant until death of grantor, and is contingent on grantees surviving him, is not conclusive. Thomas v. Williams, 105 Minn. 88, 117 NW 155. Test is whether testator intended instrument to be ambulatory and to serve no purpose until after his death, or whether he intended to convey some present, absolute, or contingent right or interest with enjoyment postponed. Id. Conveyance of all right of survivorship, "to have and hold in case he survives" grantor, held not testamentary. Id. Provision in deed that estate should revert to grantor, or his "estate" should grantee die without heirs of body, held not invalid as an attempt to dispose of grantor's estate after his death without complying with statute of wills, doctrine not applying to cases where grantor has by conveyance divested himself of his property in his lifetime. Robeson v. Duncan [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 685. Provision in deed reserving use and occupation to grantors and survivors, and providing "full title and enjoyment shall only become operative on death of survivor," held not to change instrument to a will, a present interest passing by delivery of deed. In re McIntyre's Estate [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 95, 120 NW 587. Note and mortgage held not testamentary because note recited it became due at maker's death. McCord v.

doubtful cases an instrument which cannot take effect as a will, but may as a deed, will be so construed.[78]

(§ 3) B. Execution of will. 1. Mode of execution.[79]—See 10 C. L. 2047—It is generally required that testator sign the will[80] at the end,[81] or acknowledge his signature,[82] declaring the instrument to be his will,[83] in the presence of two or more[84] credible or competent witnesses,[85] who thereupon attest[88] at the request

Thompson, 131 Ga. 126, 61 SE 1121. Assignment of insurance policy held not testamentary. Southern Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. Durdin [Ga.] 64 SE 264. Instrument in part testamentary held to include in contract obligation provision for payment of certain mortgages entitling plaintiff to recover accordingly, she having performed her part of contract. Porter v. Everts' Estate, 81 Vt. 517, 71 A 722. Entry on book of deposit in savings bank, reciting that money shall be payable to depositor and, in case of her death, to a third person, held not a testamentary deposition to third person, entry not being executed as law requires wills to be executed. 80. Where testator was unable to sign, but not unable to have another do so for him, unsigned will failed though approved by him. In re Butler's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 508. Signing by holding pen with assistance of another held valid. In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935.

81. Statutes requiring testator to subscribe at end of will are intended to prevent fraud by unauthorized additions and will be strictly construed. In re Gibson's Will, 128 App. Div. 769, 113 NYS 266. Will is signed at end though there are provisions after signature if such provisions are immaterial and do not in any manner affect the disposition of the property. Id. That after name of testatrix there appeared words importing legacies held not to invalidate, where it appeared such words were inserted after execution of will by a residuary legatee without authority. In re Gartland's Will, 60 Misc. 31, 112 NYS 718. Will consising of first page with signature, attestation clause and names of witnesses, second page blank, and third page half written and without signatures, held fatally defective. In re Diehl's Will, 112 NYS 717. Instrument with notary's signature at end of first page where testator's might be looked for, testator's name in opening part of will and at end of second page, where no names of witnesses appeared, held not subject to probate. In re Schlegel's Will, 62 Misc. 439, 116 NYS 1038.

82. It is not necessary that testator sign in presence of witness, it is sufficient if he acknowledge his signature. Umstead v. Bowling [N. C.] 64 SE 368; Notes v. Doyle, 32 App. D. C. 413. Under Act April 26, 1855 (P. L. 332), § 11, requiring wills containing religious or charitable bequests to be attested by two credible and at the same time disinterested witnesses, held not necessary that witness see testator sign will. In re Kesseler's Estates, 221 Pa. 314, 70 A 770.

83. Evidence sufficient to show testatrix declared instrument was her will, as required by statute. In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935. Acts and declarations preceding and following testamentary ceremony held sufficient to show publication. In re Luthgen's Will, 61 Misc. 544, 115 NYS 861. Any communication by word, sign, motion, or conduct, indicating to witness that testator intends to give effect to instrument as his will, is sufficient publication. Direction to sign and steps taken to have will deposited with county judge held sufficient. In re Ayers' Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 491. Not necessary to expressly declare instrument to be declarant's will; all attending facts should be considered. In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935. Testimony by one witness that decedent signed and published instrument as her will, by another that she published but did not subscribe or acknowledge signature, and by third that she subscribed but did not publish, held insufficient to authorize probate compliance with statute, not being shown by any two witnesses. In re Balmforth's Will, 60 Misc. 492, 113 NYS 934.

84. Witnesses to codicils cannot be counted to make up requisite number of signatures to will, or vise versa. Notes v. Doyle, 32 App. D. C. 413. Signature of unnecessary third witness held not to invalidate. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210.

85. Sufficient where two of three attesting witnesses were competent. Wisehart v. Applegate [Ind.] 88 NE 501. "Credible" means "competent" to testify in court to facts attested by subscribing will. Jones v. Grieser, 238 Ill. 183, 87 NE 295. Witness called in and signing, at request of testator, will, which latter had already signed in former's absence, held credible. In re Kessler's Estate, 221 Pa. 314, 70 A 770. Witnesses must be competent at time of attestation. Bruce v. Shuler, 108 Va. 670, 62 SE 973. Attesting witness is competent if at time of attestation he could testify to facts he attests. Wisehart v. Applegate [Ind.] 88 NE 501. Fact that executor would not be competent to testify in action to contest will because of his qualification as executor, and being a necessary party, held not to impair validity of will attested by him. Id. "Competent witness," within Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 3132, requiring two or more "competent witnesses," is one competent to testify generally in courts of justice and laboring under no legal disqualification (Hiatt v. McColley [Ind.] 85 NE 772), word "competent" being synonymous with "credible" or "disinterested," and meaning one who at time of subscribing will can testify in proper probate proceedings to facts attested (Id.). In proceeding to resist probate, nominated executor, who was also subscribing witness, held not disqualified to testifying in sup-of testator[87] and in his presence,[88] but not necessarily in the presence of each other.[89] The will need not be read to testator in the presence of the witnesses,[90] and, at least in some states, the witnesses need not know the character or contents of the instrument.[91] The authorities conflict as to the competency of a person named as executor in the will.[92] Where the attestation clause does not state that the witnesses signed in the presence of testator, no presumption can be raised therefrom that they did so.[93] port of will, by Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 522, declaring that neither party to suit, by or against heirs or devisees for recovery of ancestor's property, shall be competent to testify to matters accruing before ancestor's death. Id. Competency is determinable from facts existing at time of attestation, and not when will is offered for probate. Jones v. Grieser, 238 Ill. 183, 87 NE 295. The test of disqualifying interest is pecuniary gain or loss as a direct result of the proceeding. Id. Executor may attest will giving property for religious or charitable uses, provided he is not benefited by will beyond commissions. In re Kessler's Estate, 221 Pa. 314, 70 A 770. Interest sufficient to disqualify under statute, requiring wills giving property to religious or charitable uses to be attested by two disinterested witnesses, is such interest as appears to exist at time of execution of will, either by terms of will itself or by reason of witness' interest in institution for which provision is made. Id. Witness who was executor and trustee under will, and officers and trustee of church benefited, and who held option to purchase stock forming part of bequest and interested in the corporation, held not "disinterested." Id. At common law and under Code 1904, § 2529, beneficiaries are not competent as witnesses to will. Bruce v. Shuler, 108 Va. 670, 62 SE 973. Under § 8 of Wills Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 148), making void legacies, devises or "interests" of subscribing witnesses, but requiring such witnesses to testify to execution of will, executor who subscribed as witness may be required to testify in support of execution. Jones v. Grieser, 238 Ill. 183, 87 NE 295. Cannot thereafter act as executor. Id. Under Wills Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 148), § 8, avoiding legacies or interests to subscribing witnesses and providing that witnesses may be required to testify as to portion of will not affecting them, witnesses given interests may be called to established will if not otherwise disqualified. Id. Under Code 1904, § 2529, beneficiary whose attestation is necessary to make up statutory number of attesting witnesses cannot take under will which he attests, though will may be proved by the other witness, since such other witness must prove that will was attested by two competent witnesses and beneficiary can be considered competent only by avoidance of his interest. Bruce v. Shuler, 108 Va. 670, 62 SE 973. Statute refers to competency of beneficiary, both to attest will and to testify at probate proceedings. Id.

86. Will must be attested in manner prescribed by law, though in opinion of court other methods would be as effective. Schofield v. Thomas, 236 Ill. 417, 86 NE 122. Attesting includes subscribing as well as observing. International Trust Co. v. Anthony [Colo.] 101 P 781. That two persons saw testator execute codicil, and heard him declare it to be such, held insufficient where only one of them subscribed in his presence. Id.

87. Not necessary that testator specially request witnesses to sign and witness. In re Lillibridge's Estate, 221 Pa. 5, 69 A 1121; In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935. Anything conveying to witnesses idea they are desired as witnesses is good request. In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935. Evidence held to show request. Id. Evidence including will read in presence of witnesses held sufficient request by testator that witnesses subscribe. In re Luthgen's Will, 61 Misc. 544, 115 NYS 861.

88. Signing is in presence of testator if he is in position where he might see witnesses attest. Umstead v. Bowling [N. C.] 64 SE 368. "Presence" of testator requires contiguity with such uninterrupted view between testator and witnesses that testator can see act of attestation, whether in same or adjoining room. Schofield v. Thomas, 236 Ill. 417, 86 NE 122. Evidence held to show witnesses did not sign in presence of testatrix. Id. Evidence held to show witnesses signed in testator's presence. In re Miller's Estate, 37 Mont. 545, 97 P 935; Umstead v. Bowling [N. C.] 64 SE 368.

98. In re Johnson's Will, 60 Misc. 277, 113 NYS 283. English common law, relating to revocation and revival of wills so far as applicable and of a general nature and not repealed by statute is in force in Illinois. Phillippe v. Clevenger, 239 Ill. 117, 87 NE 858. Where husband and wife agreed that property held by them was owned jointly and that on death of either all should first go to survivor for life and then be divided between heirs of the two, wife could not revoke such agreement after husband's death as to interest disposed of by husband, though instrument be considered a mutual will. Robertson v. Robertson [Miss.] 47 S 675.

99. Wills are revocable only according to formula prescribed by statute, regardless of intention. In re Frothingham's Will [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 695. Under statute revocation by tearing is inoperative, unless act is in presence of testator. In re Hughes' Will, 61 Misc. 207, 114 NYS 929. Will not revoked by removal of signatures by third person at testator's direction, but not at time direction was given or in testator's presence. Id.

1. Will can be changed any time. Satterly v. Dewick, 129 App. Div. 701, 114 NYS 354.

3. Managle v. Parker [N. H.] 71 A 637. Erasures, alterations and interlineations with mere intent to change will held not revocation by burning, tearing, canceling, obliterating, or destroying with intent to revoke as required by statute. In re Johnson's Will, 60 Misc. 277, 113 NYS 283. That certain gifts were inoperative because of testator's altered circumstances held not reason for holding erasures were made animo revocande. In re Frothingham's Will [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 695. Evidence held not to show legacy was revoked under mistaken belief that legatee was dead, word "canceled by death" having reference to other legatees who had actually died. Cummin's Estate, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 580. Allegation of revocation held not sustained by evidence showing testator removed and tore one of several pages of will, leaving will otherwise intact and evincing intention to preserve it. Coghlin v. Coghlin, 79 Ohio St. 71, 85 NE 1058.

4. Managle v. Parker [N. H.] 71 A 637. Presumption of intention to revoke by destruction of copy held rebuttable. Id. Revocation for jury, there being evidence to rebut presumption of revocation. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that testator executed will in duplicate and did not intend to cancel copy held by another by destruction of copy in her own possession. Id

5. Revocation by implication of law is not favored. In re Adler's Estate [Wash.] 100 P 1019. Implied revocation is possible despite Ann. Code 1892, §§ 4489, 4490, prescribing manner of revocation of wills. Hoy v. Hoy [Miss.] 48 S 903. Doctrine of partial or entire revocation by implication held not abrogated by par. 17 of wills act, declaring no will shall be revoked except by burning, tearing, etc. Phillippe v. Clevenger, 239 Ill. 117, 87 NE 858.

6. Testator's conveyance of devised land to devisee held revocation as to such devise. Phillippe v. Clevenger, 239 Ill. 117, 87 NE 858. Memorandum by testator in small book two years after will was made, giving list of property and allowing two persons named what they owed estate, and allowing disinherited son a small amount, held insufficient to work revocation of will. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441.

7. Common-law rule of implied revocation by changed conditions and circumstances of testator is affirmatively adopted by § 3665, Rev. Laws 1905. In re Hall's Estate [Minn.] 119 NW 219. Settlement of property rights in anticipation of divorce held to revoke will in favor of wife. Id. At common law, subsequent marriage did not operate to revoke a will in the absence of birth of issue. In re Adler's Estate [Wash.] 100 P 1019. Will of a man is not revoked by subsequent marriage without birth of issue. Hoy v. Hoy [Miss.] 48 S 903. Subsequent marriage revokes will made by unmarried woman. In re Neill's Estate, 222 Pa. 142, 70 A 942. Will disposing of property to intended husband held revoked by subsequent marriage to him. Id. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4598 (Pierce's Code, § 2344), providing that marriage shall revoke previous wills in certain cases, "or unless" testator's wife "shall be provided for in the will," held to refer to condition existing at time of testator's death, so that marriage of woman already provided for in will, though not provided for

Pencil erasures are as effectual to cancel the portion obliterated as ink erasures[8] the crucial test always being the intention with which the marks were made.[9] A subsequent will or codicil may or may not revoke the prior one.[10] Where one attempts to cancel a will for the purpose of making a new one, the old is not revoked if no new one is made.[11]

Evidence of revocation.—See 10 C. L. 2050—If a will known to have been in testator's possession cannot be found after his death, the presumption is that he destroyed it with intention to revoke it.[12] The burden is on the party who asserts revocation by subsequent will.[13] Testator's declarations are admissible to show intent,[14] if relevant and material,[15] and for the purpose of showing the intent with which a portion of a will is voluntarily destroyed, it is competent to show that thereafter testator regarded the instrument as his will.[16] A specific change by codicil impliedly negatives any intention to make further change.[17] in contemplation of marriage, does not revoke will. In re Adler's Estate [Wash.] 100 P 1019. Statute should be construed to read: "If after making any will testator shall marry, and his wife shall be living at the time of death of testator, such will shall be deemed revoked * * * unless she be therein provided for." Id. Mere fact of divorce held insufficient to revoke will in wife's favor. In re Brown's Estate [Iowa] 117 NW 260.

8. In re Frothingham's Will [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 695.

9. In re Frothingham's Will [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 695. Question is whether erasures were intended to be final or whether they constituted mere dependent relative revocation. Id.

10. Depends on terms of subsequent will. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667. Will or codicil may revoke prior will, either by express revoking clause or by inconsistent provisions. Deppen's Trustee v. Deppen [Ky.] 117 SW 352. Second will revocation held to revoke prior will. In re Wear's Will, 116 NYS 304. Will made by testator of good health, and with deliberation and freedom from suspicion, will not be overthrown by evidence tending to show one made when he was feeble, and containing provisions hostile to first one, unless there is no doubt second instrument speaks testator's mind. In re Ellwanger's Will, 114 NYS 727. Where second codicil revoked all gifts made by first and made no others, will should be construed as if entirely without codicils. Ege v. Hering, 108 Md. 391, 70 A 221.

12. In re Wear's Will, 116 NYS 304; In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025. But it seems that, if will is shown to have been last seen in custody of a third person, there is no presumption of revocation. In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025. In proceedings for probate of lost will in solemn form, evidence held not sufficient to rebut presumption, arising from failure to find will, that testator had destroyed it with revocatory intent. Id. Where alleged will is not produced in probate proceedings and was last seen several months before testator's death, it is presumed to have been revoked, and burden is on proponent to show the contrary. Buchanan v. Rollings [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 785. Evidence insufficient to overcome presumption. Id. Attorney who drew both first and second wills could testify to execution of second will and delivery to testator for purpose of showing intestacy arising from presumption that second will was destroyed, it not being found after testator's death. Id.; In re Wear's Will, 116 NYS 304.

13. Burden on he who contests probate on ground of revocation by later will. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667. Uncontradicted evidence that second will was executed and contained a revoking clause held not conclusive that first will was thereby revoked. Id. Contestant's evidence held not necessarily and directly to prove execution of subsequent will. Id. Proof of execution of second will revoking first one need not amount to that required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1865, for establishment of provisions of last wills. In re Wear's Will, 116 NYS 304.

Instructions: On issue of revocation by subsequent will, held not error to refuse to submit question whether testator had made "a will" subsequent to the one offered for probate, it appearing two subsequent drafts had been made, one of which contained no revoking clause. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667. Submission of question whether second will claimed to have revoked first one had a clause revoking former wills "and codicils" held properly refused, there being nothing to show existence of any codicils. Id.

14. Testator's declarations recognizing will after her destruction of copy held admissible on issue of revocation. Managle v. Parker [N. H.] 71 A 637. Where issue was revocation by subsequent will, court held to have sufficiently permitted attesting witnesses to second will to testify to statements made by testator when such will was executed. Id. Such statements held admissible to show testator's mental condition, and his intention and understanding of nature of the instrument (Id.), but held not evidence that instrument was in fact a will (Id.), question whether it was a will being determinable from contents as found by jury, instrument having been destroyed (Id.).

15. On issue of revocation by later will, testimony that at time of execution of second will testator stated he wanted young men to sign as witnesses held immaterial. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667. Statements by testator at time of execution of second will as to his having made other will held irrelevant. Id.

(§ 3) D. Republication and revival.[18]—See 10 C. L. 2050.—Republication is essential to render effective changes made after execution of the will.[19] Codicils defectively attested cannot be relied upon as a republication of the will.[20] Failure to properly republish a will after making changes therein leaves it in its original legal force, if the original language can be ascertained.[21] Where a devise is revoked by testator's conveyance of the property reconveyance is not conclusive on the question of revival.[22] Destruction of a second will revoking a first does not revive the first.[23]

§ 4. Probating, establishing and recording. A. Place of probate and jurisdiction and powers of courts.[24]—See 10 C. L. 2050.—Primary jurisdiction is in the court of testator's domicile at the time of his death,[25] though wills of non-resident decedents may also be probated in proper cases.[26] The powers of the court are such as the constitution or statute prescribes,[27] either expressly or by necessary implication.[28]

In re Ackerman's Will, 129 App. Div. 584, 114 NYS 197. Will held entitled to admission as changed over some oral testimony that changes were made therein after execution, notary who drew it testifying that he made no changes after execution, and it appearing from face of will that changes were made by notary. Id. Testatrix' acknowledgement of her original signature and subscription by witnesses after marginal note explaining new erasures and interlineations held insufficient republication. Wills of persons domiciled in Louisiana should be proved or probated primarily by courts of that state (Succession of Drysdale, 121 La. 816, 46 S 873), and fact they may have been made in foreign countries or sister states does not obviate necessity for such primary proof or probate (Id.). Evidence held to support finding testator was resident of county in which will was probated. In re Ayers' Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 491. Where testatrix was resident of a city during her lifetime, will was provable in court having jurisdiction in that city. Nightingale v. Phillips [R. I.] 72 A 220.

26. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2611, will executed as required by laws of New York may be probated, regardless of testator's domicile in another state or country. In re Ruben's Will, 128 App. Div. 626, 112 NYS 941. Said section authorizes probate in New York of (a) wills executed as per New York laws, (b) made in any sister state or in countries therein specified, if executed according to laws of place where made, and (c) wills of nonresidents executed according to laws of his residence. Id. Decedent's interest in land situated in the county held sufficient to confer jurisdiction for probate of his will. Code Civ. Proc. § 2476, subd. 4. In re Weston, 60 Misc. 275, 113 NYS 619.

58. Will held not provable by commission where subscribing witnesses resided one in the state and other in New Jersey, and will was in District of Columbia where it had been admitted to probate. In re Weston, 60 Misc. 275, 113 NYS 619. Will cannot be proven by exemplified copy of proceedings of court which admitted it to probate. Id. Ex parte affidavits used when will was admitted in common form are not competent in proceedings for probate in solemn form, since issue is to be tried on evidence then and there introduced before jury. In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025. Evidence that witness had heard some out-being discretionary with the court.[60] Proponent may dismiss his petition at any time.[61] The common grounds of contest are fraud, mistake, undue influence and incapacity.[62] In the absence of any evidence of fraud or undue influence, the court should direct a verdict for caviatee on issues raising such questions.[63] Probate may be refused if it appears the will is invalid for any purpose.[64] If partially valid, the will must be probated.[65] Probate in solemn form may be required in some states.[66] Application therefor must be timely.[67] side person say she had destroyed will, and that devisee therein had never had the land devised held properly excluded. Id. Will probated in common form held inadmissible for propounders in proceedings for probate in solemn form without proof of execution or testamentary capacity. Peale v. Wear, 131 Ga. 826, 63 SE 581. In proceedings to probate alleged will not produced, testator's declarations, tending to show execution and that will was in existence about 10 days before his death, held admissible. Buchanan v. Rollings [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 785. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2620, authorizing establishment of will though subscribing witnesses have forgotten the occurrance, where witnesses did not remember signing, but acknowledged their signatures, and testator's signature was proved, any other evidence direct or circumstantial could be received to prove will. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210.

59. While execution may be proved by any competent evidence, Code Civ. Proc. § 2118 requires surrogate, on probate of will, to examine at least two subscribing witnesses, unless they are dead, absent from state, or otherwise incompetent. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210. Though under Code 1904, § 2514, will must be attested by two competent witnesses, due execution can be proved by one, but he must prove all statutory essentials to due execution including attestation by two competent witnesses. Bruce v. Shuler, 108 Va. 670, 62 SE 973. Where one of three witnesses was dead and another was nonresident, execution of will and signature of nonresident witness could be proved by remaining witness. Scott v. Herrell, 31 App. D. C. 45. Subscribing witness may testify to capacity. Spiers v. Hendershott [Iowa] 120 NW 1058.

60. Where will was contested for incapacity, undue influence, and deceit, held discretionary with court to receive in order of occurrance all conversations by testatrix admissible on any of the issues, though part anticipated contestant's case. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329. Contestant's concession that testatrix was sane at time of a certain interview held not to render inadmissible account of such interview (Id.), proponent being entitled to show full mental capacity however much exceeding requirement of a disposing mind (Id.).

61. Right to dismiss petition for probate against objection of contestants is same on appeal to circuit court as in county court. Hitchcock v. Green, 235 Ill. 298, 85 NE 238. Right not denied by act 1897 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 148, § 21), requiring petition for probate and notice, but providing that, if no petition is filed, court shall proceed to probate will on notice after will has been deposited in court for 10 days. Id. Proponent may dismiss petition for probate even after appeal taken and pending in circuit court. Greene v. Hitchcock, 139 Ill. App. 408.

St. 1908, § 3153, allegations of unsoundness of mind and undue execution permits proof of every species of unsoundness of mind, duress, fraud, or whatever tends to show undue execution. Clearspring Tp. v. Blough [Ind.] 88 NE 511. Held not error to strike following ground of caveat: "Said instrument is not the will of U. S. because the same was executed by him under a mistake of fact as to conduct of caveators, who are heirs at law and sons of said U. S., only a conclusion being averred. Sims v. Sims, 131 Ga. 262, 62 SE 192. Held not error to sustain demurrer to, and strike following grounds of caveat: "Said instrument is not will of W. S. because same was executed by him under mistaken belief that by its terms he was making his children equal objects of his bounty, whereas said instrument does not have that effect" (Id.), and "because same was executed by him under and because of belief that he had given and advanced to caveators money or property prior to execution of said will, which, taken together with what he had bequeathed to them in said alleged will, gave to them as much as he gave to his other children by terms of said alleged will; whereas, in fact he had not so given or advanced to them the amount of said gifts or advances being far less in value than the value of the property bequeathed to his other children in the said alleged will" (Id.).

66. One entitled to caveat probate of will in solemn form after probate in common form need not first file petition for solemn probate and then file caveat to application separately. Peale v. Ware, 131 Ga. 826, 63 SE 581. May make application for probate in solemn form and at same time set forth purpose to caveat will and state grounds of caveat. Id. Petition sufficient. Id. Verification unnecessary. Id. Proceedings being substantially a call for probate in solemn form, caveat was sufficient to distinctly raise issue of devisavit vel non as to which burden of proof was on propounders Id.

(§ 4) E. Burden of proof in the whole case.[68]—While the burden of proof is on proponent in the first instance,[69] proof of due execution is sufficient in some jurisdictions to make a prima facie case,[70] the burden of proving incapacity or undue influence then devolving on contestant;[71] but in others proponent must go further and prove, also, capacity and freedom from restraint.[72] The facts essential to probate must be established by evidence legally sufficient.[73] A full and proper attestation clause may be sufficient of itself to prove the factum of the will where the witnesses have forgotten the circumstances of its execution,[74] and though all the subscribing witnesses testify against one execution, other evidence may be sufficient to establish the will.[75]

69. In proceedings for probate in solemn form wherein caveat is sufficient to raise issue of devisavit vel non, burden of proof is on propounders. Peale v. Ware, 131 Ga. 826, 63 SE 581. Burden not sustained where there was no evidence to prove either execution or capacity. Id. In suit to prevent probate, as distinguished from one to set aside probate decree, burden is on proponents to prove validity of will giving them valuable rights in derrogation of statute of descent. McReynolds v. Smith [Ind.] 86 NE 1009. On appeal to district court from order refusing probate, held not error to require appellant to make prima facie showing entitling will to probate, it appearing that respondent was properly required to sustain burden of proving alleged forgery. Cartwright v. Holcomb [Okl.] 97 P 385. Propounder required to prove will in solemn form has burden of showing due formal execution, contents of will, if original is not produced, and in latter case, that original was lost or had been destroyed otherwise than by testator or by his consent or procurement. In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025.

70. Only burden resting on proponent in first instance is to show due execution and attestation of will (Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105), and this rule is not affected by mental or physical impairment which may bear on issues of mental incapacity, fraud, mistake, or undue influence (Id.). Burden not increased because testator's eyesight was impaired. Id. Instructions proper. Id. In consent of probate on ground of fraud and forgery, proponent must first make prima facie case as to execution, and burden of proving fraud and forgery is then on parties alleging it. Thames v. Rouse [S. C.] 62 SE 254. Decree held not to deprive contestants of right to rely on failure of proponents to establish prima facie case. Id. While in probate proceedings not only due execution but, also, capacity and freedom from restraint must be shown (Hopkins v. Wampler, 108 Va. 705, 62 SE 926), capacity is presumed after proof of due execution (Id.), presumption of sanity obtaining until overcome by contestant's evidence (Id.). When sanity is put in issue by contestant's evidence, onus probandi lies on proponent to satisfy court or jury that decedent was capable. Id.

71. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105. See, also, ante, §§ 2A and 2B.

72. Burden on proponents to prove not only due due execution but, also, testamentary capacity. Hoffbaur v. Morgan [Ind.] 88 NE 337. Instructions erroneous. Id. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2623, it must be affirmately proven that will was duly executed, that testator was free from restraint, and that he was in all respects competent to make a will. In re Neary's Will, 61 Misc. 557, 115 NYS 971. Mere prima facie proof of genuineness of signatures and testator's handwriting held insufficient. Id.

73. Testimony of third and unnecessary witness should be considered on weight of whole evidence to show execution. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210. Evidence sufficient to show due execution. Id. Testimony of surviving witness held to establish all facts recited in attestation clause as to execution. In re Ayers' Estate [Neb.] 120 NW 491. Evidence sufficient to show factum of old will, witnesses to which were dead. In re Leaird's Will, 58 Misc. 477, 111 NYS 631. Evidence held to show due execution, testamentary capacity, and absence of undue influence so as to authorize probate, though will was offered 30 years after death of testator. In re Duffy's Will, 127 App. Div. 174, 111 NYS 491. Mere proof of codicil is insufficient to establish will to which it refers. In re Weston, 60 Misc. 275, 113 NYS 619. Will could not be admitted on proof of codicil displacing one of the executors and appointing another, and making no disposition of any property without proof of execution of will in conformity with laws of state. Id. Sufficient to identify decedent as person who executed instrument offered for probate. Storey v. Storey, 30 App. D. C. 41. Proof that decedent accepted introduction to drafter of will and witness thereto as being a certain person and signed will as such person held prima facie evidence of her identity. Harris v. Martin [N. C.] 64 SE 126.

74. In re Duffy's Will, 127 App. Div. 174, 11 NYS 491. Attestation clause, though not essential to validity of will, is, on proof of signatures of testator and subscribing witnesses, prima facie evidence of facts therein certified. In re Sizer's Will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210. No probative force can be given attestation clause where it expressly appears it was not read to witnesses and latter's testimony contradicts recitals therein. In re Balmforth's Will, 60 Misc. 492, 113 NYS 934.

77. Probate court has authority in proper cases to allow proof of lost will by competent evidence of its contents. Thayer v. Kitchen, 200 Mass. 382, 86 NE 952. Clerk of superior court may take probate of lost will, or one destroyed by a person other than testator, or by testator not animo revocandi, it not being necessary to sue in equity for establishment of will. In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025. Statute for establishment of lost or destroyed wills held not applicable to will wholly intact except that signatures had been torn therefrom. In re Hughes' Will, 61 Misc. 207, 114 NYS 929.

78. Though, in order to have lost will probated, it must be shown to have been executed as required by Revisal 1905, § 3113, contents may be proved by testimony of one witness if no other is attainable. In re Hedgepeth's Will [N. C.] 63 SE 1025. Corroborated affidavit showing execution and attestation by affiant and another, death of other witness and contents of will, held sufficient to entitle will to probate in common form. Id.

82. Decree admitting will to probate must state whether or not probate was contested. Code Civ. Proc. § 2623. In re Hasselbrook's Estate, 128 App. Div. 874, 113 NYS 97.

83. Sess. Laws 1895, c. 31, p. 156, § 4815, Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, cures any defects that may theretofore have been created by county judges entering their judgments of probate in records other than record book referred to in Comp St. 1885, c. 20, § 32, div. 1. Kolterman v. Chilvers [Neb.] 117 NW 405.

84. Formal judgment or decree admitting a will to probate held unnecessary. Decker v. Fahrenholtz, 107 Md. 515, 72 A 339. When findings of law jury are certified to orphan's court, it should enter proper judgment or order and failure to perform this duty till more than a year later ought not to prejudice rights thereunder. Id. Failure, through inadvertance, to enter decree of probation, held not to sustain claim that will was not admitted to probate. State v. Thurston County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 100 P 198. Certificate of probate to be endorsed on will required by § 160 of decedent act (Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 5025), is not essential to validity of probate thereof but is only one of methods of proof of probate. Kolterman v. Chilvers [Neb.] 117 NW 405.

85. Order fixing allowance for support of beneficiaries held properly made subject to future modification; question whether amount allowed should be increased or diminished, and when division of property could be made under will, being matters for future consideration. Long v. Mayes' Estate [Miss.] 48 S 523.

86. Probate court has power on subsequent petition, notice and hearing, to vacate prior decrees, even a decree probating will clearly shown to be without foundation in law or fact and in derogation of legal right. Merrill Trust Co. v. Hartford [Me.] 72 A 745. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 203, authorizing probate court to modify or revoke ex parte decrees, modification of decree admitting foreign will to probate is discretionary. Appeal of Murdock [Conn.] 72 A 290. Where notice by publication was sufficient in application of foreign executor for admission of foreign will to probate, decree therein was not ex parte. Id. Decree admitting will to probate after full trial and determination of issues as to execution of will and testator's soundness of mind will not be revoked, after lapse of nearly two years on petition of widow who was duly heard and who had withdrawn her appeal and accepted annuities under will, merely because decision was not in accordance with facts; petitioner being limited to showing fraud on court or some accident, mistake or misunderstanding in proceedings such as in justice should call for revocation and rehearing. Boardman v. Hesseltine, 200 Mass. 495, 86 NE 931. Decree of probate should be vacated and annulled if it appears will was not properly executed or witnessed or was probated without legal evidence. Merrill Trust Co. v. Hartford [Me.] 72 A 745. That no appeal was taken held no bar to petition, it not being shown petitioner had knowledge or original proceedings in time for appeal. Id. No bar that petl-

held conclusive as to facts thereby established [87] and not subject to collateral attack.[88] An order admitting a will to probate duly made by a court of probate jurisdiction cannot be vacated in equity for direct fraud in establishing it such as perjury or the production of a false will at the time of the hearing,[89] and the devisee in such will cannot be declared trustee for the heir in a suit in equity by the heir based on such fraud.[90]

(§ 4) H. Revocation of probate.[91]—See 10 C. L. 2056—The complaint must show plaintiff's interest,[92] and the proceedings must be prosecuted with reasonable diligence.[93] All necessary parties must be brought in.[94] The right to trial by jury is statutory only and does not exist as of right.[95]

tioner received a legacy where he returned it into court. Id. Prior insufficient petition held no obstacle. Id. No laches in absence of unreasonable delay after knowledge of facts on opposite party's change of position. Id. Record of probate court not necessarily knowledge. Id. Estate not deprived of essential witness by death of named executor and residuary legatee. Id. That deceased executor and legatee had mingled estate with his own held no bar. Id. Decree should be simply that former decree be vacated and annulled, though petition be also for decree that instrument was not decedent's will and that decedent died intestate. Id.

87. Order admitting will determines that will was duly executed by a testator who had legal capacity, and that it has not been revoked, under Code Civ. Proc. relative to conclusiveness of orders respecting probate. Clapp v. Vatcher [Cal. App.] 99 P 549. Probate conclusive until legally vacated, it being presumed county court had proper evidence before it. Will admissible in partition though not properly authenticated. Adams v. De Dominguez [Ky.] 112 SW 663. Judgment of orphan's court in contest of will is in rem of court of competent jurisdiction directly on subject-matter of controversy conclusively determining question at issue as to all persons whether parties or not. Pleasants v. McKenney [Md.] 71 A 955. Probate judgments and recitals therein are entitled to presumptions attaching to records of other courts of exclusive original jurisdiction. Kolterman v. Chilvers [Neb.] 117 NW 405. In suit to quiet title to land claimed under will and codicil written on same sheet of paper to which was attached certificate of probate judge that he had examined instrument, etc., and adjudged same to be testator's will, it was properly ruled that both will and codicil had been probated. McMahan v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 418. Under laws of Missouri, judgment admitting will to probate is not conclusive until expiration of period allowed for action to determine validity of will and then only if no such action is commenced. In re Sands' Estate, 62 Misc. 146, 116 NYS 426. Commencement of action immediately vacates probate decree and leaves question of validity of will open. Id. In summary proceedings by devisee wherein defendant set up property was claimed by others as heirs, plaintiff held entitled to presumption and rights under Code Civ. Proc. § 2623, making probate decree presumptive evidence of proper execution of will, competency of testator and freedom from restraint, and § 2627, providing that decree admitting will disposing of realty presumptively establishes all matters determined by surrogate, and allowing use of such decree as evidence. Drake v. Cunningham, 127 App. Div. 79, 111 NYS 199. Mere probate is conclusive only as to formal validity of will. In re Hesselbrook's Estate, 128 App. Div. 874, 113 NYS 97. Refusal of probate court to admit will to probate is not conclusive on a devise of realty (Dixon v. Cozine, 114 NYS 615), but he may assert his rights in a common-law action or in partition proceedings (Id.) or wherever and whenever his title is drawn in question (Id.) since he takes under the will and not under probate decree (Id.).

88. Probate proceedings held not subject to collateral attack because judge was absent from parish and no affidavit of his absence was made. Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. v. Whitney, 122 La. 890, 48 S 314. In proceedings on application for guardianship for a child, held not competent to collaterally attack will of child's father offered in evidence, same having been duly probated. Churchill v. Jackson [Ga.] 64 SE 691. Where a probate court has jurisdiction in admitting will to probate, all presumptions favor regularity of proceedings, and in collateral attack of probate, court will not inquire into degree of proof required by probate court. Kolterman v. Chilvers [Neb.] 117 NW 405.

Wood v. Fagan, 126 App. Div. 581, 110 NYS 938.

93. Where petition to revoke probate was filed three days before expiration of year after probate but no citiation was issued or other proceedings taken for over six months, petitioner was prima facie guilty of want of diligence authorizing dismissal on motion of

(§ 4) I. Suits to contest or set aside[96]—See 10 C. L. 2056 are special statutory proceedings,[97] and general statutes as to joinder of causes of action do not ordinarily apply.[98] Persons interested as heirs or next of kin are usually entitled to sue.[99] The only question triable is the validity of the will and its probate,[1] but contestant may allege any and all grounds going to invalidate the will,[2] the burden being on him to show invalidity.[3] The right to introduce evidence in rebuttal should not be denied.[4] Questions of fact are for the jury,[5] and if there is any evidence tending to establish the ground of contest, a demurrer thereto must be overruled.[6] A duly probated will should not be set aside except for cogent executor. Focha v. Focha's Estate [Cal. App.] 97 P 321.

94. Refusal of court to direct citation of a nonresident heir and certain other heirs at law held not ground for complaint, Code Civ. Proc. § 1329 not requiring service of citation on persons not necessary, but only proper parties, and service having been made on executor and a member of legatees. In re Dolbeer's Estate, 153 Cal. 652, 96 P 266. Statute allowing suit or defense by one or more persons for benefit of numerous litigants, who cannot conveniently be brought into court, held not applicable to proceedings for revocation of probate under Code Civ. Proc. § 2653a, requiring all devisees, legatees, and heirs of testator and other interested persons to be made parties. Brinkerhoff v. Tiernan, 61 Misc. 586, 114 NYS 698. Failure to issue citation to executor or administrator with will annexed within one year as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1328, and St. 1907, p. 314, c. 250, necessitates dismissal of proceedings in absence of general appearance. In re Hite's Estate [Cal.] 101 P 8. Not necessary for movant to serve notice on all parties who might be affected by petitioner's contest, it being sufficient if petitioner himself is served. Id. Administrator with will annexed, who appeared only for purpose of moving to dismiss petition for revocation for want of citation, held not to have appeared generally though he did not designate his appearance as special. Id.

95. Only right to jury trial is under Code Civ. Proc. § 1330, allowing jury where will was probated without contest. In re Dolbeer's Estate, 153 Cal. 652, 96 P 266. Not abuse of discretion to refuse jury trial where probate was after contest. Id.

Bank, 239 Ill. 67, 87 NE 860. Action to contest is special. Clearspring Tp. v. Blough [Ind.] 88 NE 511. No contest of foreign probated will, filed under Rev. St. 1895, art. 5353, making such will muniment of title and authorizing contest within four years, can be had, unless will disposes of land in county in Texas in which will is filed and recorded. Mason v. Rodriguez [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 868.

98. Clearspring Tp. v. Blough [Ind.] 88 NE 511.

99. Husband and sister are within Code Civ. Proc. § 2653a, authorizing any person interested, as heir at law, next of kin, or otherwise to sue to determine validity or invalidity of will or codicil admitted to probate. Wood v. Fagan, 126 App. Div. 581, 110 NYS 938. Properly joined as plaintiffs, they having common interest in having will declared invalid. Id. Testator's only heir when will was admitted to probate held a "person interested" entitled to file bill to contest will under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 148, § 7, authorizing contest by such persons within a year after probate. Selden v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 239 Ill. 67, 87 NE 860. Person must have been interested at time of probate. Id. Right to contest is not assignable (Id.), will not pass by inheritance (Id.), and does not survive at common law (Id.). Person not deprived of rights but benefited by will held not interested within Hurd's Rev. St. 1909, c. 148 § 7. Id. Statute construed to exclude as contestants all except sharers in estate after vacation of will held not unconstitutional impairment of jury trial. Id. Heirs are interested and proper parties to action to contest though they take nothing under will, they taking as distributees if will is set aside. Hays v. Bowden [Ala.] 49 S 122. That all heirs are not joined as complainants does not affect right of some to sue to contest. Id. Held immaterial that minor children of testator were made defendants, instead of complainants, no relief being asked against them. Id.

1. Only questions triable in action under Code Civ. Proc. 2653a, for determination of validity of probate are validity or invalidity of will and its probate. Wood v. Fagan, 126 App. Div. 581, 110 NYS 938.

2. Allegation of unsoundness of mind held not inconsistent with allegation of undue influence. Hays v. Bowden [Ala.] 49 S 122.

3. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2653a, relating to manner and order of proof in jury trial actions to determine validity of probated wills, burden is on attacking party. Scott v. Barker, 129 App. Div. 241, 113 NYS 695.

6. Demurrer to evidence must be overruled where there is any evidence tending to establish undue influence in action brought on that ground under Gen. St. 1901, §§ 7957, 7958. Kerr v. Kerr [Kan.] 101 P 647. Held error to sustain demurrer. Id.

reasons.[7] What relief should be awarded must be determined on final hearing and not on demurer.[8] It is discretionary with the court to postpone the hearing of a will contest until final distribution of the estate of another.[9] Equity has no jurisdiction to decree fraudulent wills void.[10]

(§ 4) J. Suits to establish [11]—See 10 C. L. 2057 are sometimes authorized by statute.[12] Evidence tending to show that the instrument was kept among decedent's valuable papers is admissible.[13]

(§ 4) K. Appeals.[14]—See 10 C. L. 2057 —Final orders are usually appealable,[15] and, where appeal is adequate, prohibition will not lie to stop unauthorized proceedings.[16] The procedure essential to bring up the case,[17] the diligence required to have it tried,[18] the questions reviewable,[19] and the right to jury trial on questions of fact,[20] are matters largely regulated by statute. Findings and judgments will be disturbed only in clear cases.[21]

7. Wills should not be set aside by juries except for gravest reasons. Scott v. Barker, 129 App. Div. 241, 113 NYS 695. Jury must be instructed that evidence of contestants, in order to warrant setting aside of will, should not only outweigh evidence adduced by defendant but also presumption arising from order admitting will to probate. 17. Motion by will contestant to amend notice of appeal by adding names and addresses of claimants theretofore not parties, and to serve amended notice nunc pro tunc, is motion contemplated by Code Civ. Proc. § 2573, requiring necessary parties to be brought in by order of appellate court, and is not within § 1303, authorizing curing of defects in notices of appeal, and, being made to surrogate was properly refused. In re Mark's Will, 128 App. Div. 775, 113 NYS 104. Motion under § 2573, authorizing appellate court on appeal from surrogate's court to bring in necessary parties, is not proper until appeal is perfected by proper service on those who were parties in surrogate's court. Id. Rev. Code N. D. 1905, § 7968, absolving an administrator, executor, or guardian from giving undertakings in certain cases, does not apply to one appealing from order of county court revoking probate of will and also his letters under such will. Ransier v. Hyndman [N. D.] 119 NW 544.

18. While under Mills' Ann. St. § 1034, giving preference in district court to cases appealed from probate court, appellant is responsible for prompt assertion of preference given. In re Shapter's Estate [Colo.] 99 P 35. District court may consider circumstances of each case in determining whether appellant has acted promptly Id. Sec. 1034 held not modified by Code 1877. §§ 156, 157, substantially re-enacted in Code 1887, §§ 175, 176, requiring clerk to enter causes according to date of issue, etc. Id. Not repealed by Laws 1891, p. 109, § 3, providing that all questions relating to probate matters in county court shall be determined by it, and that appeals shall lie "to be prosecuted" as in civil cases. Id. Seventeen months' delay after remand from supreme to district court held not sufficiently excused by affidavit alleging negotiations for settlement. Id.

19. Appeal from order of county court refusing to set aside probate of will only removes to circuit court order refusing vacation, and jurisdiction of circuit court is limited to determination of whether probate should be set aside. Dean v. Dean, 239 Ill. 424, 88 NE 149. On appeal from order probating will or refusing probate only question adjudicable is whether writing is decedent's will; whether trust provided for is valid cannot be considered. Kasey v. Fidelity Trust Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 737.

(§ 4) M. Recording of foreign wills [27]—See 10 C. L. 2059 and probate proceedings is authorized in many states,[28] the statute usually prescribing the essentials to such record,[29] the procedure to be followed [30] and the effect thereof.[31] will, district court may make order for jury trial of all material questions of fact. Cartwright v. Holcomb [Okl.] 97 P 385. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2588, where reversal by appellate court is founded on questions of fact, appellate court must, if appeal is taken from decree made on petition to admit will to probate, make an order directing jury trial of the material questions of fact. In re O'Gorman's Will, 127 App. Div. 159, 111 NYS 274. On application for probate contested for incompetency, fraud, and under influence, evidence held to require reversal of surrogate's decree, refusing probate and submission to jury of material questions of fact involved as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 2588. In re Jeffrey's Will, 129 App. Div. 791, 114 NYS 667.

21. Surrogates' finding of compliance with statutory formalities will not be disturbed on appeal unless clearly against preponderance of evidence. In re Sizer's will, 129 App. Div. 7, 113 NYS 210. Duty of appellate court to set aside verdict in will contest clearly against weight of evidence. Scott v. Barker, 129 App. Div. 241, 113 NYS 695. To obtain reversal of judgment refusing probate after trial of issues of capacity, undue influence, and fraud, error must be shown in respect to all issues, and not only one. Macafee v. Higgins, 31 App. D. C. 355. While suit to contest will is action at law and appellate court cannot weigh conflicting evidence, court may examine record to see if there is any substantial testimony to authorize submission of case to jury. Winn v. Grier [Mo.] 117 SW 48. On appeal to circuit court on probate of will, case must be regarded as a law case, issue of will or no will being legal, and circuit court's findings of fact are not reviewable by supreme court. Thomas v. Rouse [S. C.] 62 SE 254.

Amount to be allowed for attorney's fees in probate proceedings must be determined in each case with reference to presence or absence of a variety of factors. Succession of Filhiol [La.] 49 S 138.

24. Statutory discretion held not abused by county court's disallowance of certain counsel and witness fees out of estate in ultimately successful contest. In re Muellenschlader's Estate, 137 Wis. 32, 118 NW 209. Expense of unsuccessful probate may be charged against estate. Dodd v. Anderson, 112 NYS 414.

25. Costs held properly allowed to successful party on appeal to circuit court from judgment of county court construing will. In re Moore's Estate [Wis.] 120 NW 417. On reversal of decree refusing probate and awarding costs to contestants, allowance of costs falls with decree and no allowance should then be made until end of litigation. In re Jeffrey's Will, 129 App. Div. 791, 114 NYS 667. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2558, allowing costs to unsuccessful contestant who is special guardian appointed by court, costs cannot be awarded to committee of a lunatic unsuccessfully contesting probate, there having been no special guardian appointed. In re Davis' Will, 60 Misc. 297, 113 NYS 287.

26. Property named in will but conveyed to devisee by testator after will was made held not required to contribute toward expenses and attorney's fees incurred by such devisee in sucoessfully defending against contest of will, such property not being involved in contest. 28. Probate court has jurisdiction of application of foreign executor for record of foreign probate, both as to subject-matter and rights of persons interested. Appeal of Murdoch [Conn.] 72 A 290. Act 1689, Rev. Civ. Code, authorizing execution of foreign wills on mere registration, held not applicable to will of resident decedent, though will was made out of state. Succession of Drysdale, 121 La. 816, 46 S 873. Louisiana courts cannot order execution of alleged will of person domiciled in Louisiana on production before them of order of foreign country probating same. Id.

29. To justify record of foreign will or of record thereof, under Code Civ. Proc. § 2703, it is sufficient if it appears from will or record that will was "executed" not "proven" according to laws of New York. Bradley v. Krudop, 128 App. Div. 200, 112 NYS 609.

30. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 305, providing for filing and recording of foreign probate proceedings "after public notice and such citation as said court shall order," and § 208, providing for legal notice to nonresidents of matters pending before probate courts, insufficiency of notice is not jurisdictional but merely renders proceedings ex parte as to those not properly notified. Appeal of Murdoch [Conn.] 72 A 290. If notice by publication was sufficient, decree was not "ex parte" within § 203, authorizing probate court to modify or revoke ex parte decrees before appeal. Id.

31. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 305, providing for record of foreign wills and probate proceedings, proceedings in competent court of Mississippi establishing will devising land in Connecticut, when proven by authenticated copies of will and proceedings, conclusively establish that will was entitled to probate in Mississippi and that executor recognized by Mississippi court was designated therein as executor. Murdoch [Conn.] 72 A 290. Will thus proven held to pass all of testator's property in Connecticut. Id. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 148, §§ 9, 10, recorded foreign will and proof of probate thereof in sister state is as good and available as will made and probated in Illinois. Stull v. Veatch, 236 Ill. 207, 86 NE 227. Recorded will vests title without further probate, and is not merely notice or evidence. Id. Foreign probate of foreign will, authenticated copy and certificate of probate of which are duly recorded, cannot be collaterally assailed unless transcript shows on its face will was improperly admitted. Id. Plea setting up record under said statute held sufficient, though not directly averring testator resided in the foreign state and against objection it did not show foreign probate court had jurisdiction. Id. Rule domestic courts are not bound by construction of foreign courts relating to domestic lands held inapplicable, construction of will not being involved. Id. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 5353, 5355, authorizing filing of foreign probated wills, such will disposing of land in Texas confers title on devisee on death of testator, probate in sister state and record in Texas being required only to evidence and give effect to that right. Law regards spirit rather than mere letter, and, from words actually used, general intent may be inferred though not particularly expressed. Smith v. Smith [Ala.] 47 S 220. Where it is apparent that codicils were not productions of a skilled draftsman or person familiar with legal terms, care should be taken not to unduly emphasize precise construction of language or phraseology. Perry v. Bulkley [Conn.] 72 A 1014. Testator's intention will be given effect regardless of form of words or absence of technical terms, provided he does not intend to create an illegal or impossible estate. Hayward v. Spaulding [N. 37. Court will supply words necessary to express clear intent. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645. Superfluous words may be eliminated when those remaining, in connection with all circumstances, indicate meaning intended. Polsey v. Newton, 199 Mass. 450, 85 NE 574. As to beneficiarie intended see post, 5 C. When strict adherence to grammer would flustrate testator's intention, or where words used are so unintelligible, obscure or absurd that they have no place in and can give no effect to manifest intent, court may transpose, reject, or supply words. Laws 1907, § 2777, providing that technical words shall be taken in technical sense, unless contrary is clearly indicated by context, is but declaratory of common law, and is only a rule of construction. In re Poppleton's Estate, 34 Utah, 285, 97 P 138. Word or phrase occurring more than once is presumed to be used in same sense and meaning of an ambiguous part, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1323, may be explained by reference thereto elsewhere in will. In re Vogt's Estate [Cal.] 98 P 265. Testator's intention as to meaning of particular words will be given effect. In re Hite's Estate [Cal.] 101 P 443. Though it is presumed language was used in its usual and legal sense, presumption is overthrown when will in light of circumstances clearly shows intent of testator will not be effectuated by such interpretation (Wolfe v. Court will presume testator made will with knowledge of law as to effect of widow's renunciation, such law having been frequently affirmed by supreme court during period of 40 years. Rocker v. Metzger [Ind.] 86 NE 403. Presumed testator knew general law of state and was familiar with charter of his city and where he bequeathed residue to city for a hospital, it must be assumed he knew that legislature might alter form of city government, abolish existing officers and create new ones, and change duties, responsibilities and mode of selection of officers. Ware v. Fitchburg, 200 Mass. 61, 85 NE 951. Where, at execution of will, life estate to daughter and after her decease then to her children "her surviving," gave daughter's daughter a vested remainder, this will be held to have been testator's actual intention, though at his death, courts had adopted a different rule as to similar devises. Morrall v. Morrall, 236 Ill. 640, 86 NE 578. Court held empowered to find and description of homestead, as to which will contained, not a misdescription but an imperfect description, this not amounting to reformation of will. Id. Rule admitting extrinsic evidence in aid of construction authorizes proof of blood relationship between devisees, and also introduction of another will after which one in question was copied. Taylor v. Taylor, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 297.

59. To show such ambiguities. McMahan v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 481. When a word or phrase is capable of more than one meaning when read in light of whole instrument, courts must look to conditions and circumstances surrounding testator when will was made. In re Poppleton's Estate, 34 Utah, 285, 97 P 138. Evidence of condition of testator's family, estate, and surroundings at time will was made is admissible to explain latent ambiguities. Taylor v. McCowen [Cal.] 99 P 351. Latent ambiguity in description may be explained by parol testimony. In re Metzger's Estate, 222 Pa. 276, 71 A 96. Latent ambiguities may arise either when there are two persons or things answering same name or description, or when will contains a misdescription of subject or object of gifts, as where person or thing named or described is not in existence or not the one intended, or thing did not belong to testator. Taylor v. McCowen [Cal.] 99 P 351. No latent ambiguity unless extrinsic evidence establishes that description in will is equally applicable to two distinct subject-matters or persons. Hunter v. Hunter, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 311.

60. Though parol evidence cannot be allowed to change language of instrument, it may be received when necessary to identify subjects and objects of testator's bounty. Collins v. Capps 235 Ill. 568, 85 NE 934. Evidence of condition of testator's property is admissible to identify subjects and objects of devise. Gano v. Gano, 239 Ill. 539, 88 NE 146. Extrinsic evidence held admissible to show what property was intended where it was uncertain to which of two plats description referred. Hoffner v. Custer, 237 Ill. 64, 86 NE 737. Declarations of testator showing he habitually used "block 5," as referring to a tract west of a railroad, held competent. Id. Evidence as to existence and identity of person named in will and distribution decree, as entitled to an estate in land, held admissible. Taylor v. McCowen [Cal.] 99 P 351. Evidence admissible to show what testator was in habit of calling an "old coal bank," testimony showing uncertainty as to what was designated. Hunter v. Hunter, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 311. Parol evidence held admissible to show what land testator owned at death and when will was made, for purpose of showing that lands devised without section number were in section 28. McMahan v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 481.

61. Extrinsic evidence inadmissible in absence of ambiguity or uncertainty. Fellbush v. Egen, 221 Pa. 420, 70 A 816; Van Leer v. Van Leer, 221 Pa. 195, 70 A 716; In re Line's Estate, 221 Pa. 374, 70 A 791; Rogers v. Morrell [S. C.] 64 SE 143. Admissible only to explain latent ambiguities or to apply provisions to persons or subjects intended where description is defective, uncertain, or too general to be understood specifically. Hunter v. Hunter, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 311. Where existence of subjects or persons fully satisfying terms of devise is shown, it cannot be shown by further parol evidence that testator actually intended what is excluded. Id. Where will referred to a "coal bank in the flat" shown to exist, it could not be proven by testator's declarations that he meant a coal bank on the hillside. Id. Evidence that testator insisted devisee should will property to another should devisee die without issue held inadmissible. St. Paul's Sanitorium v. Freeman [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 443.

Declarations of testator indicating his intention to provide for a certain person are incompetent. Hoffner v. Custer, 237 Ill. 64, 86 NE 737. Testator's oral declarations cannot be admitted to vary the provisions of the will. Hunter v. Hunter, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 311.

63. Joint will bequeathing all sundry goods, gear, debts, furniture with whole interest, profits and produce of premises, etc., held not to pass any realty. Paton v. Robinson [Conn.] 71 A 730. Codicil disposing of "all my belongings, furniture and clothes included," held not to carry money, but ornaments, books, pictures, etc., not disposed of by will. In re Koch's Estate [Cal. App.] 96 P 100. To wife for widowhood "all and every right, title and interest in and to" a plantation, "and all its belongings," held sufficient to pass not only fee to plantation but also any lesser in-thereto,[64] and such as extrinsic evidence may show to have been intended,[65] a description being sufficient if it fairly covers the property,[66] and courts being averse to intestacy;[67] but a devise of property "owned" by testator does not include an interest held by him as conditional vendor.[68] Error of description will not avoid a devise if what was intended can be ascertained,[69] and if testator owned realty corresponding in part to a description in his will, the court will reject the incorrect part of the description, and the realty covered by the correct description will pass,[70] but the court cannot include within a description more than is reasonably embraced thereby.[71] A devise of a definite amount of land from a certain tract is not rendered invalid by testator's failure to designate the specific part which is to form the portion,[72] for by selection by the devisee the gift is reducible to certainty.[73]

terest therein, such as right to redemption money. Rue v. Connel, 148 N. C. 302, 62 SE 306. Where will gave realty to daughter and also all furniture, clothing, "and personal effects" daughter took all personalty owned by testatrix at her death, including money into which she had converted the land after will was made. Gallaway v. Gallaway, 22 App. D. C. 76. A devisee of land takes crops standing on land at testator's death, whether material or not. In re Anderson's Estate [Neb.] 118 NW 1108. A testator's "estate" includes both realty and personalty. Harper v. Harper, 148 N. C. 453, 62 SE 553; Powell v. Woodcock, 149 N. C. 235, 62 SE 1071. Estate in residuary disposition of "all rest, residue and remainder of my estate of whatsoever name and description and wheresoever situated" held to pass realty and personalty. Id. Where will provided that on death of a beneficiary "his share of income under this will" should be paid to his surviving cobeneficiaries and lawful issue of any deceased, quoted phrase included, in addition to original share of dying beneficiary, share received by him under will as survivor of a beneficiary who had predeceased him. Union Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Dudley [Me.] 72 A 166.

64. Provision for home for certain beneficiaries held to include everything necessary to maintain home, such as charges for taxes and repairs, but not living expenses involved in purchase of supplies. Long v. Mayes' Estate [Miss.] 48 S 523.

65. See, also, ante, § 5A, subd. Extrinsic Evidence. Extrinsic evidence held to show testator devised land with reference to a new and not an old plat, resulting in more property passing under description "northeast quarter." Haffner v. Custer, 237 Ill. 64, 86 NE 737.

66. "160 acres in T. county Texas" and "the farm in Texas" held sufficient to raise inference that certain land was that which was described in will. Haney v. Gartin [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 166. Devise sufficiently describing a lot by number but adding "now occupied by my nephew, and land attached thereto" held to pass entire lot, in absence of evidence that other lots had been carved therefrom, or that nephew did not occupy entire tract. In re Metzger's Estate, 222 Pa. 276, 71 A 96.

67. See post, § 5D. Property not Disposed of.

68. "All mules, etc., now owned by me" held not to refer to mules conditionally sold by testator, but balance due therefor held to pass to executor. Hunter v. Crook [Miss.] 47 S 430. A will of all land of which testator died seised will not pass testator's interest in land previously conveyed with retention of legal title to secure price, his interest being personalty and he no longer being owner of land. In re Miller's Estate [Iowa] 119 NW 977.

69. However many errors may exist in description of subject of devise, it will not be rejected if enough remains after rejecting errors to show what was intended. Collins v. Capps, 235 Ill. 560, 85 NE 934; Gano v. Gano, 239 Ill. 539, 88 NE 146. "Southeast quarter of northeast quarter and northeast quarter of northwest quarter" held to mean "southeast and northeast quarter of northwest quarter," testator not owning southeast quarter of northeast quarter. Id Presumed testator intended to dispose of realty he owned and not other realty. Id. "My life insurance of $10,000 in M. company" held to pass $10,000 policy in another company, it appearing testator never had any insurance in M. company. In re Gans' Estate, 60 Misc. 282, 112 NYS 259. Where two tracts of land were described but only one section number given, and evidence showed testator owned land in two sections, one section number would be applied to each description so that will would pass land in both sections. McMahon v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 481. Relief can not be granted against incorrect description of real estate in will, unless there is something in will itself which points to property actually owned by the testator, and affords foundation for testimony identifying such property as property which the testator was attempting to devise; otherwise there can be no correction of false description, and, as to property to which it is sought to apply false description, it must be held that decedent died intestate. Gillis v. Long, 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 1. Court will strike misdescriptions as to subject or object of gifts if enough remains to identify person or thing intended. Taylor v. McCowen [Cal.] 99 P 351. If mistake is obvious, court will read will as if corrected. Id.

70. Will held sufficient to pass certain land after striking word "west" used in erroneous description. Collins v. Capps, 235 Ill. 560, 85 NE 934.

71. Where description "northeast quarter" did not include all land in north half of a block, court could not correct it. Hoffner v. Custer, 237 Ill. 64, 86 NE 737.

72. Young v. Young [Va.] 63 SE 748.

73. Young v. Young [Va.] 63 SE 748. Right to select held not lost by laches. Id.

Money into which realty is converted by testator after execution of the will becomes part of his personal estate and passes as such.[74] A direction for the conversion of realty into cash and distribution of the proceeds amounts to a devise of the realty,[75] and a will, appointing an executor, is entitled to probate as a will of personalty though only the real estate is mentioned.[76]

Bequest of art collection to Art Museum of city of San Francisco held to refer to San Francisco Art Association, there being no Art Museum of city of San Francisco and a certain Park Museum not coming into existence until after testator left San Francisco. Walter v. Walter, 60 Misc. 383, 113 NYS 465. Evidence held sufficient to identify beneficiaries of money left to "women's work in foreign fields," to "women's work in home lands," and for colored people of South. Gilchrist v. Corliss [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 971, 118 NW 938. Will construed not to disclose intention that interests of childless daughters predeceasing testator should go to his grandchildren but to require that remainders go to his other children, especially in view of statute against failure of contingent remainders for want of particular estates. Golladay v. Thomas, 33 Ky. L. R. 829, 111 SW 721. Bequest to "city insane asylum" held to city for care of insane falling to charge of city, so as not to lapse because city ceased to permanently care for the insane. Succession of Staub [La.] 48 S 766. Where will directed sale of realty and distribution of proceeds under intestate laws, and also directed distribution of personalty under such laws, proceeds of realty went to those who would have inherited the land in absence of will, and did not go as personalty. In re Glentworth's Estate, 221 Pa. 329, 70 A 756. Where property was to go according to intestate laws, will held not to show testator intended to treat half-brother as of whole blood though he referred to him as brother, and hence half-brother was not entitled to share in realty. In re Line's Estate, 221 Pa. 374, 70 A 791. Holographic will held to exclude son recited to have had his full share of testator's and his mother's estate. Harper v. Harper, 148 N. 79. Alternative gift to W. in case of death of "any one or more of legatees herein named" held not applicable to residuary legatees. In re Richards' Estate [Cal.] 98 P 528. Will giving all realty and personalty to children, but charging title with trust in favor of unmarried daughters, held to require division of income among only such daughters as should be unmarried down to time when income was earned, income to each daughter terminating on her marriage. Plaut v. Plaut, 80 Conn. 673, 70 A 52. Sons held not entitled to any part of income while trust continued. Id. Where after death of a sister, to whom life estate was given, her share should revert "to her sisters and brothers mentioned," or to their heirs, held, remainder should be distributed to "sisters and brothers" named in will to exclusion of a niece who had also been given a share. In re Bentz's Estate, 221 Pa. 380, 70 A 788. Where testator when he wrote will had only one sister and one half-sister and one half-brother living, but had had brothers and sisters who were dead, leaving issue, heirs of such deceased brothers and sisters were included in provision for division of property between his "sisters and brothers or their heirs." In re Edwards, 117 NYS 3. "Wives and children" to whom income was to go on death of sons held to include only wives of sons at testator's death, and not any who might become such thereafter. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645. Where testator directed application of certain dividends for benefit of disabled firemen and indigent widows of firemen of a volunteer fire company, but after his death company was disbanded on installation of a paid fire department, surviving members and widows of members dying after disbandment were not entitled to have fund applied for their relief, it appearing testator supposed company would continue in service, and intended to provide relief in case of death or injury of members dying in service. Johnson v. Cook Benev. Institute, 33 Ky. L. R. 772, 111 SW 294.

80. Will construed to give nephew proceeds of a farm only for purpose of education and maintenance, any surplus going to testatrix's husband. Knight v. Collins [Ky.] 113 SW 131.

81. Mistake or uncertainty in description of a legatee will not invalidate bequest if name and description used as applied to facts and circumstances will identify such person from all others. Skinner v. Hemenway, 135 Ill. App. 582. Where legacy was to "the daughter" of sister who had three daughters, evidence held sufficient to show who was intended. Id.

94. "Heirs" and "issue" are to be given their technical meaning unless from entire will it is plain that intention of testator was different. Stisser v. Stisser, 235 Ill. 207, 85 NE 240. "Heirs" held to mean children. Cook v. Hart [Ky.] 117 SW 357. "Heirs" and "bodily heirs" held to mean children. Davenport v. Collins [Miss.] 48 S 733. "Heir" held to mean "child" in limitation of estate over should any daughter die "before having or leaving any heir." English v. McCreary [Ala.] 48 S 113. Where, after death of life beneficiary, trust fund was to be divided among testator's "heirs" in accordance with number of children each might then have, per stirpes, "heirs" held to mean children, requiring division among stocks, each stock taking in proportion to number of children in that stock, each of three children of testator constituting one stock, and children of a deceased daughter another stock. Cook v. Hart [Ky.] 117 SW 357. Widow excluded. Bayley v. Beekman, 117 NYS 88. "Heirs" in connection with personalty means next of kin or blood relatives who take intestate personalty. In re Schnitzler, 61 Misc. 218, 114 NYS 934. To next of kin of testator's housekeeper held to exclude husband. Id. Disposition to "my 'heirs' under and according to intestate laws of Pennsylvania," held to mean not "heirs" in technical sense but those entitled to take personalty as well as realty. In re Line's Estate, 221 Pa. 374, 70 A 791. Heirs of husband taking under wife's will according to laws of descent held to include only husband's nephews and nieces living at testatrix' death, and not grandnieces and grandnephews, laws of descent calling for next of kin in equal degree. In re Ruggles' Estate [Me.] 71 A 933. To grandson for life then to his wife and on death of survivor property to be distributed to grandson's "right heirs" as per statute of descent, held to entitle second wife to share, "right heirs" being held to mean "statutory heirs." Peabody v. Cook, 201 Mass. 218, 87 NE 466. Gift over after niece's death to "heirs of her body begotten" held to mean "issue" and hence void. Perry v. Bulkley [Conn.] 72 A 1014.

95. "Legal heirs" entitled to share in remainder of residue held to include those who at testator's death would be entitled to take by descent in absence of will including widow. Perry v. Bulkley [Conn.] 72 A 1014. Word "legal" or "lawful" before "heirs" does not change legal effect of word "heirs." Stisser v. Stisser, 235 Ill. 207, 85 NE 240. Remainder to "legal heirs of the other children" held to include children of eldest son, testator having used words "heirs," "issue" and "children" interchangeably in sense of children. Id. Where testator bequeaths residuary estate to "legal heirs" of a deceased brother without other or further designation as to who are intended as his beneficiaries, and directs that such residuum "shall fall to and be divided in equal shares among the legal heirs of my deceased brother, and I hereby bequeath and devise the same to them," and at time of making said will one of the sons of testator's deceased brother was dead, leaving heirs, held that all persons who at time of death of "deceased brother" of those who answer description of "legal heirs" of said deceased brother at time of such brother's death are entitled to share in such residuary estate in equal proportion, and if at time of making of will any of such "legal heirs" had died leaving issue surviving testator, such issue shall take share which would have otherwise gone to such "legal heir," had he survived testator. Rev. St. § 5971, controls. Youngblood v. Youngblood, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 276. "Heirs at law" will be given technical meaning unless entire will shows it was used in a different sense such as would exclude widow. Smith v. Winsor, 239 Ill. 567, 88 NE 482. To testator's widow for life then to his "heirs at law," and to latter also if wife predeceased, held to exclude widow. Id. "Heirs" may mean children or some other class of heirs not including all the heirs, where will plainly shows such purpose. Id. Heirs at law held to mean "wives and children" where perpetuity was thereby avoided and context of will showed testator used words in that sense. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645.

96. Primary and usual meaning of word "issue" when used as word of purchase is descendants of every degree and is not equivalent to "immediate issue" which means only children. Bartlett v. Sears [Conn.] 70 A 33. "Issue" in devise over held words of purchase and not of limitation, though when will was made testator was 69 years old and life beneficiary only 13. Id. Where it appears testator used words "heirs," "issue" and "children" interchangeably or synonymously, court may construe them in like manner so as to carry out testator's intention. Stisser v. Stisser, 235 Ill. 207, 85 NE 240. Words held used interchangeably in sense of "children" so as to vest remainder after death of either of testator's three children without issue in his grandchildren including grandchildren who had been given a remainder by another clause of will. Id. "Issue" may mean children only, or include descendants generally, or descendants taking by right of representation, question being one of intention to be gathered from will as a whole according to established rules of construction. Union Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Dudley [Me.] 72 A 166. Should be held to import descendants unless will or circumstances shows restricted sense of children. Id. "Lawful issue if any of the body" held to mean lineal descendants taking by right of representation and not per capita. Id. "Their issue" is same as "heirs of their bodies." Wright v. Gaskill [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 108. Gift to "legal issue" of daughter after life estate to her, held gift to her descendants, and not only to her children. Schmidt v. Jewett, 127 App. Div. 376, 111 NYS 680. Judgment that only children were meant held not conclusive on grandchildren yet unborn, they not taking by representation. Id. "Issue" in a will means prima facie "heirs of body." Stayman v. Paxson, 221 Pa. 446, 70 A 803.

97. "Children" means descendants in first degree, excluding grandchildren, in absence of satisfactory evidence of contrary intent. Davies v. Davies, 59 Misc. 104, 112 NYS 157; Davies v. Davies, 129 App. Div. 379, 113 NYS 872; Scott's Estate, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 342; McGlensey's Estate, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 514. Share over on death of any child without issue, to testator's "children then surviving," held not to include then surviving children of predeceased children. Davies v. Davies, 129 App. Div. 379, 113 NYS 872; Davies v. Davies, 59 Misc. 104, 112 NYS 157. "Children then living" held not enlargeable to include grandchildren, there being nothing in context to authorize it. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119. Where a remainder is given to children of a designated person, gift will go not only to objects living at testator's death but to all who may subsequently come into being before period of distribution. Clark v. Morehouse [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 307. Though as a rule "children" is word of purchase, it of kin,"[98] "relatives,"[99] "wife,"[1] "widow,"[2] "marrying,"[3] "bequeath" or "devise,"[4] and the like will be given their ordinary meaning in the absence of statute or contrary intent.

Gifts by implication.[See 10 C. L. 2064]—Property may pass by necessary implication,[5] but the implication must be so strong as to preclude the idea of any other intention on the part of testator.[6] is often used in sense of "heirs" and this may be shown by or deduced from entire instrument. Wilson v. Shumate [Ky.] 113 SW 851. Where after life use to son and his wife property was given "to their three children," but they were old and had no children whereas testatrix had three grandchildren, held permissible to construe "their three children" as meaning "my three grandchildren, the children of" the son and his wife, and to disregard as inapt the phrase "the children of my son N. and his wife." Polsey v. Newton, 199 Mass. 450, 85 NE 574. Trust for sister and three named children equally, and in case of sister's death her share to be paid to "her said children" and issue of any deceased, held to mean only children previously designated so as to exclude participation by issue of a child who died before mother. Union Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Dudley [Me.] 72 A 166. Where remainder of trust fund was to go to children of testator living at death of life beneficiary, children of any deceased child to take parents' share but deceased child's share to go to surviving children if deceased child left no children, and to testator's grandchildren should there be no surviving children, held, great-grandchild whose parent and grandparent both died before life beneficiary was not entitled to share in distribution of trust fund there being surviving children of testator to take. Blair v. Keese, 59 Misc. 107, 112 NYS 162. Whether adopted children are included depends on intention to be determined from circumstances. Lichter v. Thiers [Wis.] 121 NW 153. Granddaughter's adopted child held not included so as to be entitled to remainder after death of granddaughter. Id. Direction to hold property in trust "until the youngest of my children becomes of age" held to indicate youngest of entire class surviving testator. In re Mikantowicz's Will, 60 Misc. 273, 113 NYS 278.

98. To "next of kin" of testator's housekeeper held to exclude her husband. In re Schnitzler, 61 Misc. 218, 114 NYS 934. Where it appears testator was uncertain as to whether certain relatives were living or dead, it will be presumed, in absence of any reference to statute of descent and distribution, that he intended by use of the words "next of kin" to designate a particular class of persons related to him in an equal degree of consanguinity. Bishop v. Rider, 12 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 72.

99. "Kin," "relative," and "relatives," held prima facie to refer to blood relations only and not a nephew by marriage. Boyd v. Perkins [Ky.] 113 SW 95.

1. Wife divorced after execution of will designating her "my wife Ida" held entitled to take under will. In re Brown's Estate [Iowa] 117 NW 260. A third of certain property to a nephew and a third "to his wife" held to mean nephew's divorced wife in view of all circumstances and Code Civ. Proc. § 1340, providing for corrections of omissions where no person exactly answers description of beneficiary. In re Gruendike's Estate [Cal.] 98 P 1057.

2. Complainant held entitled to take under will as "widow" though she did not become widow of person who was her husband when will was executed. Crocheron v. Fleming [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 691.

3. "Marrying again" in event of which an estate should terminate held to include a polygamous marriage, devisor and devisee being polygamists. In re Poppleton's Estate, 34 Utah, 285, 97 P 138.

4. By Ky. St. 1903, § 467, providing that "legatee" and "devisee" shall be held to convey same idea, and "bequeath" and "devise" to mean the same, and that "bequest" and "legacy" shall include either realty or personalty, such words have been made interchangeable. Roberts v. Chenoweth, 33 Ky. L. R. 1081, 112 SW 625. In direction that wife and three daughters should share equally in distribution of estate after the "bequests" already made should be complied with, "bequest" referred to devise of family residence and legacy of $400 to grandchild. Thomas' Ex'x v. Thomas' Guardian, 33 Ky. L. R. 700, 110 SW 853.

5. Earle v. Coberly [W. Va.] 64 SE 628. Trust to daughter for life and, in case of her death without issue, proceeds of her share to be equally divided among her brothers and sisters, held to give remainder to daughter's children, should she have any. Close v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 195 N. Y. 92, 87 NE 1005. See, also, Real Property, 12 C. L. 1623.

6. Earle v. Coberly [W. Va.] 64 SE 628. Personalty held to pass absolutely under words giving daughter power to dispose of same as she thought best. Id. Devises by implication can be given effect only in cases of such clear necessity that from the will itself no reasonable doubt of intention can exist. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 336. Cannot be inferred from silence of will. Id. To son for life, but over should he die without issue, held not to imply remainder in his children, should he have any. Id. To testator's widow for life, remainder to son's children, held not to infer that children should take if testator survived his wife, or that sons should take if wife survived testator and sons had no children. Haywood v. Spaulding [N. H.] 71 A 219. Where on death of widow who was life tenant, sons' children, who were remaindermen, were not yet born, sons were not entitled to income either before or after children's birth. Id. To son, and over in default of lineal descendents, held not sufficient to create interests in lineal descendents. Anderson v. United Realty Co., 79 Ohio St. 23, 86 NE 644.

Quality of estate, whether legal or equitable, use, trust or power. See 10 C. L. 2065 The quality of the interest conferred must be determined from the terms of the particular will.[7] An executor will not take individually unless the intention to have him do so is plainly manifested.[8]

Estates and interests created. See 10 C. L. 2065—Estates in realty and personalty are fully treated elsewhere.[9]

Principal, income, and support.[10]—Accumulations of income [10a] and interest on legacies [11] are treated elsewhere. The provisions of the will control in determining whether principal or income is given,[12] the right to interest, income, or other support,[13] the source,[14] computation and extent thereof,[15] the time of payment [16] and the right to sell or resort to the corpus.[17]

7. See, also, Trusts, 12 C. L. 2171; Powers, 12 C. L. 1409. Will construed not to create a trust estate but to give widow all testator's property without restriction, and daughters whatever should remain at her death. Lesiur v. Sipherd [Neb.] 121 NW 104. Devise to executors "to be transferred" by them to certain trustees held to mean only that executors should take possession of and transfer the property to trustees in due course of administration, and not to create in executors an invalid trust to convey. In re Peabody's Estate [Cal.] 97 P 184. Precatory words held mandatory, and trust failing for indefiniteness, property held to pass intestate as to remainder after devisee's death. Gilchrist v. Corliss [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 971, 118 NW 938.

8. Directions to sell realty to best advantage and that all residue should be used to best advantage of executor held not to plainly confer individual gift. Christman v. Roesch, 132 App. Div. 22, 116 NYS 348. That intestacy is not favored held not to overcome weightier reasons for not allowing executor to take unless intent is plain. Id. Residue to executors "for their use and benefit" with request that a portion be devoted to masses and charity held to executors in their own right. In re O'Regan's Will, 117 NYS 96.

12. Widow held entitled to specific personalty in connection with realty, and not merely interest from proceeds of sale. In re Knowles' Estate, 148 N. C. 461, 62 SE 549. Where on death of wives and children of testator's sons property was to go to son's grandchildren, provision for grandchildren should be read distributively so that fund, income of which was payable to either son and thereafter to his wife and children, should go to grandchildren of that son as principal after death of his wife and children. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645.

13. Will construed to give widow interest on $40,000, part of a trust fund, as a specific bequest vesting on testator's death but not payable until one year from that date. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Widow held entitled to simple interest on amount of defaulted instalment of interest on trust fund from time it became due until paid. Id. Will held to require that, in event of death of widow within 20 years, interest on trust fund until expiration of that time be divided equally among the legal heirs of testator living on widow's decease, and paid to them in same manner as it was paid to widow. Id. Former holding refusing interest on annual allowance to defendant of $5,400 for support adhered to. Smullen v. Wharton [Neb.] 121 NW 441. Remainder to son's children at widow's death does not give sons income before or after birth of children. Hayward v. Spaulding [N. H.] 71 A 219. Surplus of income over specified sums given two daughters for life held to go to such daughters until death of one of them, not to certain charities given by way of remainder. In re Ferguson's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 896.

14. Former opinion amended so as to allow defendant's support from trust estate instead of from income. Smullen v. Wharton [Neb.] 121 NW 441.

15. Income under a will is computable from time of testator's death unless a contrary intent is shown. Bishop v. Bishop [Conn.] 71 A 583. Directions for division of estate as soon after testator's death as convenient and lawful, and payment to beneficiaries of income from such shares or sums set out of such income, held not to render rule inapplicable. Id. Trust provisions for maintenance are usually construed to intend the application of the income from testator's death. In re Harris, 61 Misc. 563, 116 NYS 270. Will held to give widow, from testator's death to time when contemplated trust should be actually established, interest on principal set apart for her equivalent to rate allowed by the trustee. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Where court fixed a stated sum per annum for support and maintenance of widow under will, legal effect was same as if such sum had been written in will by testator, and widow was entitled to such amount from testator's death subject to dedication of sums already received for support under will. Smullen v. Wharton [Neb.] 119 NW 773. Where life beneficiary under will was given privilege of occupying premises with his brothers instead of receiving a third of rents and profits, income did not cease until occupation privilege was exercised, and choice was not irrevocable. Cashman v. Bangs, 200 Mass. 498 86 NE 932.

16. Widow held entitled to receive interest on part of trust fund whenever trust company declared dividends of interest. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Where a sum of money was left widow to be paid as it became necessary for her needs, widow was entitled to determine character of needs

*Legacies.*See 10 C. L. 2065—A legacy is a testamentary gift of personalty,[18] and is usually created by the use of words or phrases expressing testator's intention to invest the legatee with title to some specific personal property on testator's death.[19] It may be either general or specific.[20] A specific legacy carries with it all accretions.[21] An ordinary legacy is not payable until the expiration of a year from testator's death,[22] and if money, no interest accrues thereon in the meantime,[23] but, by express provision in the will, a legacy may consist of a specified sum of money plus interest thereon from a specified date.[24] Additional legacies given by codicils become subject to the same conditions as those which apply to the original legacies,[25] unless a contrary intention is indicated.

*An annuity.*See 8 C. L. 2338

*Release of debts.*See 8 C. L. 2337—Proof of a legacy for an amount smaller than the debt owing by the legatee is not sufficient.[28] Intent controls as to who are included in a class whose debts are canceled.[27]

*Cumulative legacies.*See 8 C. L. 2337—While the general rule is that the repetition of a legacy is the same instrument, is merely substitutionary,[28] and that repetition and time when payment was necessary to meet them. In re Oshe's Will, 137 Wis. 474, 119 NW 93.

17. Trustee substituted under statute on death of trustee named in will held not authorized to exercise discretion as to using part of principal for benefit of cestui que trust, which original trustee could exercise. Whitaker v. McDowell [Conn.] 72 A 938. Opinion in Hamilton v. Hamilton [Iowa] 115 NW 1012, did not determine right of life tenant under will to sell for his support without order of court. Hamilton v. Hamilton [Iowa] 118 NW 375. Will held to authorize trustee to take from principal for care and support of testator's son, should income of estate prove inadequate. McGill v. Young [N. H.] 71 A 637. Widow held authorized to pay annuity to testator's sister out of corpus of estate. In re Van Valkenburgh's Will, 60 Misc. 497, 113 NYS 1108. Will held not to authorize guardian of idiot children to resort to corpus. Hess v. Hess, 108 Va. 483, 62 SE 273. To six idiot children in fee, and expression of desire that defendant act as guardian and see they were taken care of, authorizing him to apply proceeds of the property to their benefit, held not to authorize appropriation of corpus. Hess v. Hess, 108 Va. 483, 62 SE 273.

18, 19. Harding's Adm'r v. Harding [Ky.] 116 SW 305. Clause held not a bequest or creation of a legacy, but only evidence of an indebtedness of testator to his wife. Id. Gift to mother if she survived testatrix held not operative, mother having predeceased. Ege v. Hering, 108 Md. 391, 70 A 221.

20. A specific legacy is a gift of a specific part of testator's estate identified, and distinguished from all things of same class and capable of being satisfied only by delivery of that particular thing. Kincaid v. Moore, 138 Ill. App. 23. Legacies of specified sums to nephews and nieces, if testatrix was at her death possessed of sufficient personalty, held general. In re Corby's Estate, 154 Mich. 353, 15 Det. Leg. N. 798, 117 NW 906. Described real estate and testatrix' household furniture held specific legacies notwithstanding residuary devise to some legatee. In re Corby's Estate, 154 Mich. 353, 15 Det. Leg. N. 798, 117 NW 906. Devise of residue to persons named in equal shares held specific as to land owned by testator at time of execution of will and at death. Rice v. Rice [Iowa] 119 NW 714. Life use of "the $500" bequeathed to testatrix by her brother held specific in form, but general if fund could not be identified when will was made. In re Getman, 128 App. Div. 767, 113 NYS 67. To niece, insurance policies held by testator on life of niece's husband, niece to pay premiums till policies matured, held specific. In re Pruner's Estate, 222 Pa. 179, 70 A 1000. Subject of legacy specific in form was presumptively identifiable when will was made, and, where legatee contends legacy is general, burden is on him to show facts existing at that time which rendered it not specific. In re Getman, 128 App. Div. 767, 113 NYS 67.

21. "My life insurance of $10,000 in M. Life Insurance Company" held specific though only insurance testator had was $10,000 in another company. In re Gan's Estate, 60 Misc. 282, 112 NYS 259. A specific legacy of shares of stock includes accretions, from time of testator's death, (Thayer v. Paulding, 200 Mass. 98, 85 NE 868), but a general legacy does not (Id.). Certain number of shares of stock, "together with all rights and privileges which may now or hereafter appertain to the same," held specific so as to entitle legatee to dividends accruing after testator's death and before distribution. Id.

22. Thayer v. Paulding, 200 Mass. 98, 85 NE 868.

23. See Estates of Decedents, 11 C. L. 1275.

24. Subsequent clauses held not to overcome express provisions for interest from date anterior to death of testator. In re Duncanson's Estate [Iowa] 120 NW 88.

25. In re Gans' Will, 114 NYS 975. See post, § 5F, Abatement, etc.

26. In action on two notes each for $500, mere proof of a legacy of $100 held not proof of extinguishment of plaintiff's claim, pro tanto or otherwise. Lynch v. Lyons, 131 App. Div. 120, 115 NYS 227.

27. Provision for cancellation of notes owing by any "kin" and giving of amounts thereof to such "relatives" held to embrace only blood connections. Boyd v. Perkins [Ky.] 113 SW 95.

28, 29. In re Moore, 131 App. Div. 213, 115 NYS 684.

in a second instrument such as a codicil is cumulative,[29] the question is always one of intention to be determined from the documents themselves and the circumstances of the case.[30]

Vesting.[See 10 C. L. 2066]—The time of the vesting of estates and interests is fully treated elsewhere.[31]

Possession and enjoyment.[See 10 C. L. 2067]—Where personalty is bequeathed for life with remainder over, only the income should be paid to the life beneficiary.[32]

Advancements.[See 10 C. L. 2067]—While the doctrine of advancements generally applies only in case of intestacy,[33] it may also apply where decedent leaves a will,[34] and, where testator's intention is clear that sums advanced shall be deducted from legacies or devises, such intention must control.[35] Testator may provide that no gift shall be treated as an advancement unless charged on his account books.[36] Charges on testator's books referred to as advancements may be canceled by testator without the making of any new will, and turned into absolute gifts.[37] Money advanced to others than the legatee may be directed to be deducted.[38]

Individual rights in gifts to two or more.[See 10 C. L. 2067]—Since in the absence of estoppel[39] the respective rights of several beneficiaries are governed by the particular expressions used,[40] they will often be materially affected according as these 30. Bequest held substitutionary and not cumulative, though codicil stated it was to be taken in addition to will. In re Moore, 131 App. Div. 213, 115 NYS 684.

31. See Property, 12 C. L. 1435; Real Property, 12 C. L. 1623; Perpetuities and Accumulations, 12 C. L. 1316.

32. Property is to be converted and invested by executors and income only paid to life tenant. Ott v. Tewksbury [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 302. Will held not to disclose intention that widow should have possession of principal though testator expressed desire that out of personalty widow make certain gifts. Id.

33. In re Bresler's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1097, 119 NW 1104. See, also, Estates of Decedents, 11 C. L. 1275.

34. In re Bresler's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1097, 119 NW 1104. While doctrine advancements applies primarily in distribution of intestate estates, one may in his will so refer to previous advancements and gifts that they must be considered when his estate is finally distributed. In re Harris' Estate, [Vt.] 72 A 912. Certain gift and advancement accounts held required to be considered in ascertaining advancements directed to be deducted. Id. Where testator and a son agreed that latter should transfer stock to former and receive credit on his advancement account, and agreement was carried out, subsequent erasure of the credit by testator held not to affect son's rights. In re Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912. Not so as to another son who did not transfer any stock. Id.

35. In re Bresler's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1097, 119 NW 1104. Will bequeathing money to daughter less "the amount she may be owing on my books" held to disclose intention that sums advanced to daughter's husband should be deducted. Id. "May be owing" construed and will held to require deduction of advancements already made when will was executed, no advancements having since been made. Id. "On my books" held to refer to books of account kept in course of business. Id. Account books held admissible in evidence to show advancements made. Id. Clearly expressed intention that advances made by testator after execution of will shall be taken into account will be carried into effect. In re Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912. Subsequent advances held properly considered. Id. Testator's payment of note given by firm of which devisee, his son, was member, and indorsed by father, held an "advance" within will directing deduction of any advances made to son. Ebeling v. Ebeling, 61 Misc. 537, 115 NYS 894. Where daughter was to have one fourth of her share immediately and another part thereof on attaining $50, and will provided that any advancement should be added to and deemed part of estate and should be deducted from share of child to whom made, held, there being only two children, the one-half to go to daughter should be ascertained by dividing in two estates, plus advancement to her, and advancement should be deducted from the one-half share thus ascertained, and remainder managed and divided by trustees as prescribed. In re Ruggles' Will, 137 Wis. 439, 119 NW 97.

36. In re Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912.

37. Cancellation of interest charges appearing on books showing advances. In re Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912.

38. No legal or moral objection to direction for deduction from legacy to daughter of sums advanced to her husband. In re Bresler's Estate [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 1097, 119 NW 1104.

39. Where beneficiary only temporarily acquiesced in construction put on will by executors and speedily took steps to assert his rights as soon as advised thereof, he was not estopped to insist on judicial construction. Deppen's Trustee v. Deppen [Ky.] 117 SW 352.

40. Where will provided that, if niece should die without issue, homestead should pass to children of an uncle and that such children should participate equally with testator's legal heirs in balance, held children took half of balance, and testator's heirs other half, equally. Perry v. Bulkley [Conn.]

direct a per capita or per stirpes distribution.[41] Of two permissible constructions, 72 A 1014. Where first codicil gave half of residue which included a homestead to a sister and other half to a niece without assigning homestead, but second codicil provided that, on niece's death without issue, homestead should go to certain children, niece impliedly took homestead as part of her share, and on her death it passed to the children. Id. Will held to give widow and each of six children a one-seventh interest in estate including land mentioned in second item thereof, and to widow also privilege of remaining on place referred to in said item for life or widowhood. Black v. Nolan [Ga.] 64 SE 647. Where will directed distribution of residue among legatees "in proportion their respective legacies bear to total of all said legacies," and some legatees took land and money, others money and personalty, and others money only, held, in determining who should share in residue only, money legacies should be considered, words "devise" and bequeath being used indiscriminately, and no value having been placed by testator on land or personalty, much of which latter appeared to have been given as mementos. Roberts v. Chenoweth, 33 Ky. L. R. 1081, 112 SW 625. Church given residue up to $10,000 held entitled to share in balance. Id. "To my heirs and the heirs of my late husband H. R., 'those standing in the same degree of relationship either to myself or said H, to share alike according to the laws of descent in this state,'" held to divide estate into two equal parts, one part to go to testatrix' heirs and the other to go to her husband's heirs, and to include in each class such persons, and give to each person such share, as the laws of descent should direct. In re Ruggles' Estate [Me.] 71 A 933. Shares of trust beneficiaries, and their issue, in income from bonds, stocks, and bank deposits, determined, some of the beneficiaries having died. Union Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Dudley [Me.] 72 A 166. Expression of testator's "desire" that designated part of residue be held by son held not a mere provision for contingency that whole residue be divided, nor expression of hope that beneficiaries would use bounty in certain manner, nor a mere direction for occupancy of son pending division (Moseley v. Bolster, 201 Mass. 135, 87 NE 606), but an operative disposition of designated property to son vesting interests in children at death of testator, giving to son such property and rest to him and testator's two daughters, as tenants in common, in such proportions that, taking into account value of designated property, son's share should be one-half, and share of each daughter one-fourth of all (Id.). Will giving children each a third of land and buildings thereon held to create a common home for children without division of buildings or their value. Barbo v. Jeru [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1064, 119 NW 580. Daughter held to take land on which building stood so that sons had no undivided interest therein. Id. Will construed to give wife personalty on farm given to her for life, and to give children testator's money, notes, and mortgages. Gloede v. Rautenberg [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 125, 120 NW 989. Where realty was devised to children charged with payment to widow of one-third its value and was subject to incumbrances, widow was entitled to one-third of value after deducting mortgages assumed by testator when he purchased, and without deduction for amount of a mortgage made by him and for which personalty was liable. Hetzel v. Hetzel [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 755. An estate was devised in equal parts to A, B, C, D, E, F, G, the heirs of the body of Rebecca H. Taylor per stirpes and not per capita, H, I, J. Held, it having been shown that E, F, and G are heirs of Rebecca H. Taylor, the phrase "the heirs of the body of Rebecca H. Taylor per stirpes and not per capita," must be construed as a separate bequest, and not to be descriptive of E, F, and G, who each take a separate share of the estate and also a share jointly. Taylor v. Taylor, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 297. Direction "to distribute equally to my legal heirs" held direction to distribute in accordance with statutes of descent and distribution. Barr v. Denney, 79 Ohio St. 358, 87 NE 267. Gift of third of a farm to each of three devisees held not reduced as to any of them by codicil providing that one should buy out the others and valuing farm at about $6,000. In re Moore's Estate [Wis.] 120 NW 417. Distribution in light of surrounding circumstances held proper which awarded to testator's relatives an amount equal to value of house and lot owned by wife and divided residue between estates of testator and his wife. Crick's Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 39. Will giving widow house and lot so long as she desired to occupy same, and directing that "legal share" of all property be paid to her out of estate, and that entire estate be disposed of in three years, held to give widow absolutely one-half of entire estate as personalty. In re Dull's Estate, 222 Pa. 208, 71 A 9. Testator held not to intend that trust for widow and children should terminate on widow's remarriage but that, instead of widow's receiving four-fifths of income as previously, she was thereafter to receive only one-third. In re Horn's Estate [Pa.] 72 A 791.

41. Distinction in regard to right of beneficiaries to take per stirpes or per capita depends on whether will divides them into classes in which individuals of each class take equally, or establishes only one class all members of which take equally. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Heirs of husband taking under wife's will according to laws of descent held to take per capita. In re Ruggles' Estate [Me.] 71 A 933. Principal of trust fund held required to be divided per capita among legal heirs. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. Words "equally to be divided," "to be equally divided share and share alike," and similar expressions, usually call for per capita distribution. Brundage's Estate, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 211. "Then to my brothers' and sisters' children, in equal proportions, share and share alike," held per capita. Id. Devise to an individual by name and to others as a class is to all per capita, and not per stirpes. Rogers v. Morrell [S. C.] 64 SE 143. To H, testator's son, and to W, L, and G, children of a predeceased daughter, "to be equally divided between them," held per capita, "between" meaning "among." Id. Where, on death of devisee given use of a house and lot for life, property was to be sold and proceeds divided "between" testator's wife's brother that which results in equality will be adopted,[42] except where unequal division is clearly called for,[43] but the presumption is against equal shares if the beneficiaries are of different degrees of relationship.[44] A devise to "heirs" designates not only the persons who take but the manner and proportions of their taking,[45] unless a different intention is indicated.[46] Whether a gift is distributive or to a class[47] is usually a question of intention.[48] Where the gift is to a class, the right of survivorship is implied.[49] Children mentioned by name take as individuals.[50] and children and granchildren of deceased sister, devisees took per capita. In re Kleeman, 61 Misc. 560, 115 NYS 982. Where direction was for division among testator's "heirs" in accordance with number of children each might have per stirpes, it required division among stocks in proportion to number of children in that stock, each of three children of testator constituting one stock and children of a deceased daughter another stock. Cook v. Hart [Ky.] 117 SW 357. "Lawful issue of body" held to mean lineal descendants taking by right of representation per stirpes and not per capita. Union Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Dudley [Me.] 72 A 166. Will construed to require division of estate into four parts, one each to a brother and two sisters, if alive, otherwise to their respective issues, and remainder to children of deceased brother then living, issue of any deceased child to take parents' share. In re Brownell, 60 Misc. 52, 112 NYS 597. Will construed to disclose intention to give grandchildren daughters' shares, after latter's death, per stirpes and not per capita. In re Collins, 116 NYS 243. Under direction for division among devisee's heirs at law, at his death distribution should be per stirpes, it appearing heirs were nephews and nieces and issue of a deceased nephew. Nightingale v. Phillips [R. I.] 72 A 220. Farm to nephew and niece or survivor for their lives, and after their death to their issue in fee, held to give surviving children per stirpes. Wright v. Gaskill [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 108. To nephew and "heirs" of deceased niece equally held to give nephew an undivided half, and half to heirs of niece per stirpes. Farley v. Farley [Tenn.] 115 SW 921.

42. Thomas' Ex'r v. Thomas' Guardian, 33 Ky. L. R. 700, 110 SW 853; Deppen's Trustee v. Deppen [Ky.] 117 SW 352. If leading feature of will is equality or impartiality, court will lean in case of doubt to such construction as will carry out scheme of equality. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645. Will not be presumed testator intended to prefer one child over others. Cornwall v. Hill [Ky.] 117 SW 311. Will construed in light of testator's property and contemplated settlement with creditors held to disclose intention to divide estate equally among three children so as not to entitle daughter to a third interest in a factory before division. Id. See, also, post, 5D, subd. Individual Rights in Gifts to Two or More. Residue in trust to widow for life, remainder to be divided between all children of testator's brothers and sisters and W. then living, share and share alike, issue of any deceased children to take share of parent, held to entitle children of W. to share equally with children of brothers and sisters of deceased. Gaskill v. Weeks, 154 Mich. 223, 15 Det. Leg. N. 706, 117 NW 647. Where residue was expressly given to nephews and nieces equally, fact that one preceding paragraph giving a niece a specific legacy provided it should be in addition to her share in residue while another paragraph giving another niece a specific legacy contained no such provision did not prevent equal distribution among all nephews and neices. In re Rutter, 59 Misc. 326, 112 NYS 277.

43. Grandchild held entitled to only $400. Thomas' Ex'x v. Thomas' Guardian, 33 Ky. L. R. 700, 110 SW 853.

44. Grandnieces and grandnephews held not to take equally with surviving nieces and nephews. Bayley v. Beekman, 117 NYS 88.

45. Law presumes intention that they take rules of descent. Doherty v. Brady [Me.] 72 A 869.

46. Such as is disclosed by words "in equal shares" and the like. Doherty v. Grady [Me.] 72 A 869. To "legal heirs in equal shares," "in equal shares to my legal heirs," held to designate but one class to take in equal shares. Id.

47. Request to a number of persons not named but answering a general description is gift to them as a class. "To my brothers' and sister's children" passed property to all the children as one class. Brundage's Estate, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 211. Gift to a class is of an aggregate sum to a body of persons uncertain in number at time of gift, to be ascertained at a future time, who are all to take in equal or some other definite proportions, share of each being dependent for its amount on actual number. Clark v. Morehous [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 307; In re Barret's Estate, 116 NYS 756. Where, after naming residuary legatees, testatrix added "all brothers of my deceased husband J. B.," they took as individuals, not as a class. Id.

48. Whether gift is to class or distributive is a question of intention. Saunders v. Saunders' Adm'rs [Va.] 63 SE 410. Remainder to be divided equally among testator's ward and children of a brother, issue of any deceased child to take parent's share, held to a class. Id. Pecuniary legatees held to take under residuary clause individually, and not as a class, where they were clearly indicated though not mentioned by name; hence, share of one dying before testatrix passed to latter's next of kin, and not to surviving residuary legatees. Dresel v. King, 198 Mass. 596, 85 NE 77.

49. In this connection see post, subd. Lapse, Failure and Forfeiture. Where property is given to children as a class with clear idea of survivorship, court cannot include within class descendants of deceased children. Davis v. Davis, 129 App. Div. 379, 113 NYS 872. Surviving children held not to take share of children who predeceased testator, where will created tenancy in common by devising to children by name. In re Kummenacker, 60 Misc. 55, 112 NYS 596.

50. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292.

Conditions See 10 C. L. 2068 forfeiting the interests of contesting legatees are valid,[51] and other conditions or restrictions will also be recognized,[52] if not contrary to public policy or otherwise invalid.[53]

Election for or against will. A beneficiary cannot claim both under and against a will,[54] but is put to an election whenever inconsistent rights exist [55] and whenever the will manifests an intention to require an election.[56] It is presumed a testator knew he could not dispose of his wife's property without her consent,[57] and also that he did not intend to make any such dispositon,[58] but for the purpose of determining the necessity for election, his actual intent must prevail over these presumptions.[59] In the absence of statute requiring written election,[60] any act

52. Estates on condition or limitation, see Real Property, 12 C. L. 1623. "Will and desire" held equal to "I direct" so as to prevent conveyance of realty devised to sons until oldest son should be 35. Girdler v. Girdler [Ky.] 113 SW 835. Voluntary separation of testator's daughter from her husband held not within testamentary provision entitling her to capital of trust in her favor when her husband should die or upon permanent and legal separation from him. Coe v. Hill, 201 Mass. 15, 86 NE 949. Adopted son held to have fulfilled condition that he remain with testator's wife until he should be 21 and behave himself as a son towards her. McMahan v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 481. Devise of remainder to niece, provided she lived with testatrix' husband until she became of age or married, held not defeated because husband's home was broken up because of his insanity and niece compelled to leave without her fault. Lynch v. Melton [N. C.] 64 SE 497.

53. Income from trust fund to daughter, and capital also on death of her husband or upon permanent and legal separation from him, held not invalid as founded on condition precedent intended to bring about daughter's separation from husband. Coe v. Hill, 201 Mass. 15, 86 NE 949. See 10 C. L. 2068, and, also, Election and Waiver, 11 C. L. 1162.

54. One cannot hold property under a will and at same time deny its validity and seek to have it declared void. Del Campo v. Camarillo [Cal.] 98 P 1049. Where husband elected to take fee title to homestead, he could not thereafter claim homestead in the property. Jarboe v. Hayden [Ky.] 117 SW 961. Where widow elects to take life interest in a house and lot under will, she cannot also claim compensation against will for money advanced testator for construction of house. Bradshaw v. Butler, 33 Ky. L. R. 531, 110 SW 420. Widow taking under will could not insist on repugnant homestead rights. Stoepler v. Silberberg [Mo.] 119 SW 418. Her heirs could not withdraw the acceptance and elect to take under statute. Id. Acceptance of provisions of will held bar to claim of dower in lands conveyed by husband during coverture by deed of warranty in which wife did not join. Howe Lumber Co. v. Parker, 105 Minn. 518, 117 NW 518. Widow held not entitled to take under will and yet retain her interest in land conveyed by husband without wife's joinder, such intention not clearly appearing from will as required by Gen. St. 1894, § 4472. Howe Lumber Co. v. Parker, 105 Minn. 518, 117 NW 518.

55. Surviving husband must elect between provision in wife's will and statutory rights. Robertson v. Schard [Iowa] 119 NW 529. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 2642, in order that a husband may profit by wife's will devising all her land to him, he must elect to take such devise within 90 days after probate. Aneschaensel v. Wayman [Ind. App.] 85 NE 788. Having failed, he took only one-third and could convey no more. Id. Confirmation of probate relating back to time when will was lodged with clerk, where will was offered for probate in 1893, law of 1891 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 3016), controlled though probate was not confirmed until December 1901. Id. Doctrine of election applicable when testator devises A's property to B and at same time gives his own to A held not applicable where mortgagee holding legal title to land devised part of it to holder of equity of redemption, especially where devisee was feme covert and entitled to full disclosure of value of land and her right to redeem. Rich v. Morisey, 149 N. C. 37, 62 SE 762. Legacies to children recited to be in payment of residue of life estate given testator by wife's will, which gave life estate to testator with remainder to children, held not to require children to elect between the two wills, testator having reference only to income from life estate unexpended at his death. In re Pearce's Estate, 53 Misc. 215, 104 NYS 469.

56. Will held to show husband's intention to dispose of entire community property so as to require widow to elect. In re Vogt's Estate [Cal.] 98 P 265. Widow required to elect where husband's intent to dispose of entire community property is clear and where taking both under law and will would defeat intention. Id. Will devising testatrix' property to trustee to use income as they deem best for husband's benefit, and authorizing trustees to convey to husband in their discretion, puts husband to election. Robertson v. Schard [Iowa] 119 NW 529.

57, 58. Community property. In re Vogt's Estate [Cal.] 98 P 265.

59. Question as to his intention to devise entire community property. In re Vogt's Estate [Cal.] 98 P 265.

60. Under Pub. St. §§ 2925, 2935, requiring written election by widow to waive provisions of husband's will within eight months after will is proved, and providing that a husband may waive provisions of wife's will "as a widow may waive the provisions of her husband's will," verbal notification to court on presentation of will for probate held insufficient where not followed by written waiver within time allowed by statute. In re Baker's Estate, 81 Vt. 505, 71 A 190.

plainly indicating an intention to elect will suffice for that purpose.[61] Want of consideration[62] or fraud vitiates an election,[63] and an election made under and in pursuance of an illegal contract cannot be sustained,[64] but the fact that a widow elects pursuant to advice of her attorney does not invalidate her action.[65] A husband's creditors cannot control his election.[66] A widow's right of election against the will is personal and not assignable.[67] Appraisement is sometimes provided for by statute when a widow renounces the will of her deceased husband.[68] A widow who elects against the will usually takes as in case of intestacy.[69] A widow's renunciation of her deceased husband's will is ineffectual to give her dower in lands in other states.[70]

Charges, exonerations, and funds for payment. See 10 C. L. 2069—Property devised or bequeathed is often charged with the payment of debts,[71] legacies[72] or the per-

61. Husband's written consent to approve of report of trustees holding property for him under wife's will held election to take under will, statute not requiring written election. Robertson v. Schard [Iowa] 119 NW 529. Widow's acceptance of testamentary provisions, qualification as executrix, and announcement on various occasions that she had an estate under will, held election. Storpler v. Silberberg [Mo.] 119 SW 418.

62. If there is no property on which husband's will can operate as against widow's statutory rights, her election is without consideration, and no formal renunciation of will is necessary to confirm her title under the law. Storpler v. Silberberg [Mo.] 119 SW 418.

63. Old, feeble, and uninformed widow persuaded by son to make improvident election under will held entitled to equitable relief against consequences, especially where estate had not yet been closed. Eddy v. Eddy [C. C. A.] 168 F 590. Year within which widow was required to elect under Mich. Comp. Laws, § 9301, did not begin to run until discovery of fraud, hence no bar. Id. Court having jurisdiction to set aside election would also take an account and determine amount widow was entitled to, estate being still unsettled. Id. Books of business concern in which widow was interested, held admissible as bearing on disparity between widow's statutory interest and what she received. Id.

64. Election against husband's will held not made pursuant to contract void as against public policy merely because it appeared that widow had assigned her interest in estate to secure agreement with her attorney for contingent fee and advancements, right of election not having been assigned, agreement for contingent fee being valid, and it not appearing that but for contract election would not have been made. In re Service's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 990, 118 NW 948.

65. In re Service's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 990, 118 NW 948.

66. Robertson v. Schard [Iowa] 119 NW 529. Husband could elect to take under will creating trust for him. Id. Immaterial that the two estates are not so inconsistent as to require election. Id.

67. Net presumed right of election was intended to be included in widow's assignment of her interest in husband's estate as security for attorney's services. In re Service's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 990, 118 NW 948.

68. Under Code 1906, § 5089, any person interested in estate or connected therewith as executor may institute proceedings for valuation by commissioners of wife's estate, and determination of her portion of husband's estate should be on her renunciation of husband's will. Jones v. Jones [Miss.] 49 S 115. All interested persons must be made parties. Id. Proceedings cannot be brought within one year after grant of letters. Id.

69. Where widow takes dower and distributive share under statute, her share should be ascertained as if husband had died intestate leaving children and can neither be increased nor diminished by will. Geiger v. Bitzer [Ohio] 88 NE 134. Doctrine of equitable conversion can have no application in ascertaining her share. Id. Overruling Hutchings v. Davis, 68 Ohio St. 160, 67 NE 251. Laws 1901, p. 613, c. 113, § 1, amending Pub. St. 1901, c. 195, § 10, which provided that widow waiving will should have one-third of personalty if husband left issue, and one-half if he left no issue, by providing she should have all if it did not exceed $1,500, and $1,500 if it exceeded that sum but not $3,000, held applicable only to clause two relating to widow's rights in case husband should leave no issue. Healey v. Wheeler [N. H.] 72 A 753. Rule that, where a testater leaving no child or parent devises realty to wife for life remainder over and wife elects to take under statute, she takes in fee a third of testater's land, under Act May 14, 1852, §§ 17, 27, Burn's Ann. St. 1908, §§ 3014, 3029, and remaining two-thirds for life as heir, under § 26 of said act (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 3028), has become a rule of property which court will not now disturb. Rocker v. Metzger [Ind.] 86 NE 403.

70. Widow's renunciation of will in Mississippi where testator died, and will was probated, held ineffectual to give widow dower in land in Arkansas. Rannels v. Rowe [C. C. A.] 166 F 425.

71. Under 1 Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 2640, 2642, if a surviving husband takes realty as devisee under wife's will, he takes subject to debts. Aneschaensel v. Twyman [Ind. App.] 85 NE 788. Widow's statutory interest is net within devise "free from incumbrance or liens." Rice v. Rice [Iowa] 119 NW 714. Provision directing that any balance owing on certain property should be paid from proceeds thereof held an express charge thereon of balance of price. Hessig v. Hessig's Guardian [Ky.] 115 SW 748. Not inconsistent with direction that formance of conditions.[73] The personal estate not otherwise disposed of is the natural and primary fund for the payment of debts and legacies[74] unless exempted expressly or by necessary implication.[75] Whether a legacy is a charge on land depends on testator's intention.[76] A general legacy is presumed not to be a charge[77] property should be preserved intact and undisposed of until a grandchild should be 21, such direction merely limiting owner's right to make voluntary disposition. Id. Will devising estate subject to widow's dower and directing sale of enough personalty to discharge incumbrances on realty expresses intention to pass realty unincumbered and to endow widow without deducting incumbrances. Pfefferle v. Herr [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 689. Devisees held to take subject to incumbrances assumed by testator when he purchased land devised, direction for sale of personalty to pay debts not including such incumbrances, but only such as testator had himself placed on land. Hetzel v. Hetzel [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 755. Will held to require charging of legatee's debts against legacies in distribution of entire estate including final distribution of trust fund after death of widow. Blair v. Keese, 59 Misc. 107, 112 NYS 162. Where on distribution of residue before termination of trust in favor of widow for life a son was exempted from payment of any indebtedness in excess of his share because of a direction in the will to that effect, such indebtedness would be considered in final distribution of trust fund after widow's death. Id.

72. Title to property devised to children held charged with trust in favor of unmarried daughters, in view of phrase "desire and direct" and other imperative statements. Plaut v. Plaut, 80 Conn. 673, 70 A 52. Will held to authorize widow to use corpus of estate for purpose of paying an annuity to testator's sister. In re Van Valkenburgh's Will, 60 Misc. 497, 113 NYS 1108. Where remainder of life trust was directed to "be paid into and form part of my residuary estate hereinafter disposed of" and residue was given to certain charities, such remainder was liable with balance of estate to payment of general legacies. In re Title Guarantee & Trust Co. [N. Y.] 88 NE 375, rvg. 127 App. Div. 118, 111 NYS 169.

73. Where widow was given residue but will directed her to pay claimant, "an adopted daughter," $500 when latter arrived at 21, provided she should be kind to widow, and widow after testator's death promised to pay claimant's legacy, husband's land was charged with continuing trust for payment. Geisel's Estate v. Landwehr [Ind. App.] 88 NE 105. Claimant at least acquired a conditional legacy which she could enforce against widow's state on performance of condition. Id. Where wife bequeathed property to children, subject to obligation to care and support husband made lien on the property, no trust was created but duty was imposed on devisees obligatory on them on acceptance of benefits under will. Merchants Nat. Bank v. Christ [Iowa] 118 NW 394. Farm and personalty to son on condition he pay annuity to testator's wife and furnish certain products from farm secured by lien, charged properly with conditions imposed and rendered devisee personally liable as on contract. Stringer v. Gamble [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1030, 118 NW 979. Land charged for life of annuitant, and estate of devise after his death would be liable for past due payments unless barred by limitations. Id. Charge to maintain a grandchild held on residue only, and not on specific legacies. Lavaggi v. Borella [N. J. Eq.] 67 A 929. Charge that devisees should "yearly put in the stable on the premises occupied by my wife, so long as she remains my widow, as much hay as she may need to feed one horse and two cows without charge" held not to require owners to supply hay during period when widow did not reside on the land nor own or possess any of the animals named in the will. Gingrich's Estate, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 266.

74. Legacies held payable out of testatrix' own estate rather than out of estate over which she had power of appointment, will tending to show such intention, and debts and legacies being small compared with testatrix' own estate consisting wholly of personalty, whereas estate over which she had power of appointment was realty. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Klp, 192 N. Y. 266, 85 NE 59. Money legacies primarily payable from personalty unless will shows intent to charge realty. In re Thomas, 61 Misc. 213, 114 NYS 931. Money legacies held payable from personalty which exceeded amount of such legacies where testator had no realty when will was made, will thus showing no intention to charge realty. Id.

75. Undevised land chargeable with debts and pecuniary legacies where personalty was exempted by being bequeathed by implication. Earle v. Coberley [W. Va.] 64 SE 628. Intention must be clear to justify exemption of personalty from payment of debts, legacies and expenses of administration. Martin v. Andrews, 59 Misc. 298, 111 NYS 40. But if it appears from will either expressly or by implication that a particular portion of estate shall be primary fund for payment of debts, remainder is exonerated. Brown v. Saathoff, 139 Ill. App. 616. "One-half of all property that I may be possessed of at time of my death, 'subject only to the first and second bequests,'" held to exonerate other half, first bequest being the one providing for payment of debts. Id. Testator may direct from what part of estate legacies or any of them shall be paid. Rutt's Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 522.

76. Smith v. Bush, 59 Misc. 648, 111 NYS 428. Where after disposal of legacies generally residue is given in one mass, legacies are a charge on residuary real and personal property. Lavaggi v. Borella [N. J. Eq.] 67 A 929. Will held to dispose of residue after legacies. Id. Will held to charge only land located in a certain county with payment of money legacies, fund for erection of a monument and expenses of administration. Kincaid v. Moore, 138 Ill. App. 23. Where lands were devised to son on condition he pay other children each a specified sum within one year after death of testator, title vested in son and legacies were made charge on the land. Spangler v. Newman, 239 Ill. 616, 88 NE 202. Will held to disclose intention to but it is sufficient if intention to charge is clearly inferrable from the will interpreted in the light of extrinsic facts.[78] A gift of a pecuniary legacy of a fixed amount evinces an intention to benefit the legatee to the extent of such amount except as to charges imposed by the law of the testator's domicile.[78] Whether inheritance taxes shall be deducted from specific legacies or be a charge against the estate may depend on testator's intention.[80] One who takes possession of property as devisee becomes personally liable to pay legacies charged thereon,[81] and the legatee has also the right to have the land sold at foreclosure.[82] A charge against a remainder is ordinarily payable when the remainder vests in possession.[83] An action against a devisee's estate to enforce a charge on his legacy does not preclude a subsequent action to enforce a lien created by the will.[84] If there are different estates in lands charged with a legacy, such course should be pursued in enforcing payment as will involve the least loss to the owners.[85] A charge for care and support cannot be subjected to the claims of creditors of the beneficiary.[86]

Trust estates and interests.[See 10 C. L. 2070]—The general subject of trusts is elsewhere treated.[87]

Powers of appointment and beneficial powers of sale.[See 10 C. L. 2070]—Powers of appointment are elsewhere treated.[88] The existence and nature of powers of sale are commonly matters of construction.[89]

Lapse, failure, and forfeiture.[See 10 C. L. 2071]—At common law on death of a legatee before testator, his legacy lapses,[90] but provision has been made by statute

77. Smith v. Bush, 59 Misc. 648, 111 NYS 428.

78. Smith v. Bush, 59 Misc. 648, 111 NYS 428. Legacies held charged on land testator being held to have foreseen that personalty would be used for widow's support. Id. Where legacies are given generally and residue of realty and personalty in one mass, legacies do not constitute charge on real estate (Heroy v. German Catholic Church, 62 Misc. 435, 116 NYS 39), except where it is clear that testator must have known they could be satisfied only from general estate (Id.). Held clear testator 80 years old realized personalty would be insufficient and that he did not expect to remove difficulty before his death. Id. Legacies held payable from estate generally including proceeds of realty though will specifically charged only some of them on realty. Id.

79. Where local law imposed no inheritance tax, fact that portion of property required to make up pecuniary legacy was in jurisdiction imposing such tax held not to charge legacy. Kingsbury v. Bazeley [N. H.] 70 A 916.

80. Trustee and individuals benefited by legacy for charitable purposes held not included in direction that executors should pay inheritance taxes on legacies to individuals, gifts for charity not being gifts to individuals. Kingsbury v. Bazeley [N. H.] 70 A. 916. See Taxes, 12 C. L. 2022.

81. Steele v. Korn, 137 Wis. 51, 118 NW 207. Where will did not direct a devisee who was also executor to pay a certain legacy and legacy was not expressly charged on the land devised nor devisee's title conditioned on such payment, acceptance of devise did not impose any personal obligation to pay the legacy. In re Taber, 116 NYS 960. Decree that legacy was lien on devised realty and directing executor to pay legacy in full held erroneous. Id.

82. Steele v. Korn, 137 Wis. 51, 118 NW 207.

83. Where son took certain land after death of wife "out of which" he was to pay a grandson a certain sum, grandson's cause of action did not accrue until death of wife. Keir v. Keir [Cal.] 99 P 487. Immaterial that son had purchased life estate. Id.

84. Two remedies consistent. Stringer v. Gamble [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1030, 118 NW 979.

85. For realization of best price life estate and remainder may be sold together and value of life estate resorted to first, then remainder if necessary, remainder of proceeds of life estate, if any, to go to life tenant absolutely, and proceeds of remainder or balance thereof, if any, to be held for accumulation until death of life tenant. Steele v. Korn, 137 Wis. 51, 118 NW 207.

86. Devisees not compellable to pay money to creditors of father in lieu of personal services which they were willing and able to render. Merchant's Nat. Bank v. Crist [Iowa] 118 NW 394. Immaterial that for life support husband had surrendered statutory property which might have been subjected. Id.

89. Will held to give son power to sell and pass good title to land devised to him in a certain county, on condition he reinvest proceeds, and also power to exchange land he investing in land any money received in addition to land taken in exchange, but purchasers not being required to look to reinvestment of proceeds. Broaddus v. Centers [Ky.] 116 SW 742.

90. Falls into body of estate and does not go to legatee's personal representative. Scott v. Ford [Or.] 97 P 99. Passes to the resifor such contingency.[91] A lapse may also result from devisee's death before the vesting of his interest.[92] Statutes for the prevention of lapses should not be permitted to operate against the intention disclosed by the will.[93] Where a gift is to a class [94] and fails as to any member of the class by reason of death, revocation or other cause, the survivors of the class will take and the interest of the deceased member will not lapse.[95] Provisions forfeiting the interests of contesting devisees are valid and will be enforced.[96] That a devisee is a minor does not necessarily prevent a forfeiture of his devise under the terms of the will.[97]

Partial invalidity.[See 10 C. L. 2072]—The valid provisions will be sustained if the general scheme of disposition is not thereby defeated,[98] otherwise they fall with the duary legatees. In re Barrett's Estate, 116 NYS 756. Lapses on death of devisee or legatee before death of testator. Fisher v. Wagner [Md.] 71 A 999. Death of sister given share in proceeds of property held to lapse her legacy and result in intestacy as to sister's share. In re Keeman, 61 Misc. 560, 115 NYS 982.

91. Under statute where property is left to a class and one of that class dies before testator leaving issue, such issue stands instead of deceased ancestor; but if member of such class dies before testator without issue, his share is distributed as intestate estate. Under § 11, Statute of Descent, property left to grandson dying before testator descends as intestate estate. Bache v. Ward, 128 Ill. App. 614. Ky. St. 1903, § 2064, providing for descent of interests of legatees dying before testator to legatees' descendants or surviving legatees, by its terms, applies only to devises to several as a class. Galladay v. Thomas, 33 Ky. L. R. 829, 111 SW 721. Share payable into state treasury where there was no evidence of existence of person to whom bequest was made. Code Civ. Proc. § 2747. In re Beaver's Estate, 62 Misc. 155, 116 NYS 424. Where father gave residue to two daughters and one died before father leaving children, surviving gift was protected from lapsing by Act Apr. 8, 1833, § 12 (P. L. 249) and share went to such children. Spencer's Estate, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 67. Where only five of eight children of a brother were given shares, and under terms of will remainder after death of a sister fell in part on brother, who was not otherwise provided for in will, but brother died before testator, all his children were his "surviving issue" within Act May 6, 1844 (P. L. 564) preventing lapse of legacies to brothers or sisters of testators not leaving lineal descendants and giving their shares to their "surviving issue" in case of their death before testator. In re Bentz's Estate, 221 Pa. 380, 70 A 788.

92. See, also, Real Property, 12 C. L. 1163. Where will provided legacies in remainder should not vest until death of wife, legacy to one who predeceased her lapsed. In re Denham, 61 Misc. 211, 114 NYS 933. Payment of a legacy was postponed until death of a life tenant and is made specific lien upon the remainder estate. Legatee died before the termination of life tenant. Held that, it appearing that postponement of payment was not personal to legatee but was for convenience of remainderman upon whose remainder estate it was charged, legacy vested at testator's death and lien of its payment did not lapse wih death of legatee. Gillis v. Long, 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 1.

93. If testator manifests an intention that named beneficaries shall take and not persons who would otherwise take by virtue of statute against lapses by death of legatee before testator, statute will not control. Vogel v. Turnt [Md.] 72 A 661. Will held not to prevent operation of Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 93, § 320, providing no legatee shall lapse by death of legatee before testator. Id. Where legatee died before testator, her husband was entitled to take in accordance with statute of descent. Id.

94. See ante, § 5C, and § 5D subd. Individual Rights in Gifts to Two or More.

95. Gift to testator's ward and certain children held to a class so that revocation of ward's legacy by codicil gave children all as survivors. Saunders v. Saunders' Adm'rs [Va.] 63 SE 410. Where will gave children shares not as joint tenants but as tenants in common, death of a child before testator lapsed his legacy. In re Krummenacker, 60 Misc. 55, 112 NYS 596.

96. Massie v. Massie [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 219. Not contrary to law, public policy or good morals. Perry v. Rogers [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 897; In re Hite's Estate [Cal.] 101 P 443. Testator's meaning of word "contest" is controlling. Id. Filing opposition to probate of will whose codicil reduced opposer's bequest, moving to strike parts of proponent's answer, etc., held "contest" so as to forfeit bequest. Id. Contest worked forfeiture though there was no gift over. Id. Forfeiture provision applicable to codicils and forfeiture not prevented by rule of strict construction against forfeitures or by Civ. Code § 1342, providing that testamentary dispositions shall not be divested except on accurance of precise contingency prescribed by testator. Id. Provision forfeiting rights of devisees for attempt to break or change will held to forfeit rights of all, if any devisee made such attempt, as by suing to try title. Perry v. Rogers [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 897. Child contesting on ground will disposed of property formerly owned by his deceased mother held to forfeit rights under will and to elect to take as heir of mother. Massie v. Massie [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 219. Mere filing of caveat held not a "contest" within provision forfeiting legacies of legatees who should contest or attempt to contest will. In re McCahan's Estate, 221 Pa. 186, 70 A 711.

97. Rights of all including minor held forfeiture by attempt of any devisee to break will, forfeiture not depending on act of minor. Perry v. Rogers [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 897.

98. Only when different parts cannot be separated without upsetting general plan of invalid ones.[99] In a proper case, part of a will may be set aside for undue influence.[1]

Residuary clauses. See 10 C. L. 2073—A general residuary clause carries the property not otherwise disposed of,[2] but where testator confines the gift of the residue to a particular part of the estate, such as the personalty, the residuary legatee is excluded from receiving any part of the estate not included in the residuary clause,[3] and a legacy, which is itself a part of the residue, cannot fall into the residue by lapse but must go intestate.[4] will that whole must be stricken. Clearspring Tp. v. Blough [Ind.] 88 NE 511. Life estate in realty to sons held valid though other provisions were invalid. Id. Invalidity of provision for "issue" of life beneficiary in case she should not exercise a power of appointment given by will held not to affect her life estate or her power. Bartlett v. Sears [Conn.] 70 A 33. Remainders void under rule against perpetuities held not to affect life estates. Id. Invalid provision continuing trust after daughter's death rejected, and primary purpose of testator to give one share to each of his children and his descendants carried out. Lewine v. Gerardo, 60 Misc. 261, 112 NYS 192. Immaterial provision in margin, extending below signature held not to invalidate whole will. In re Gibson's Will, 128 App. Div. 769, 113 NYS 266. Illegal trusts may be elimated and legal ones upheld if injustice is not done or testator's wishes defeated. In re Buchner, 60 Misc. 287, 113 NYS 625. Partial invalidity of trust scheme held not fatal. Hardenbergh v. McCarty, 130 App. Div. 538, 114 NYS 1073. Trust for daughter's lifetime held valid and severable from ulterior provisions and limitations invalid as perpetuities. In re Wilcox, 194 N. Y. 288, 87 NE 497. Will creating a complete and lawful trust will not be invalidated by separable provision creating unlawful limitation over in event of a single and entirely disconnected contingency. Schey v. Schey, 194 N. Y. 368, 87 NE 817.

99. Entire bequest held void where it inseparably included valid charitable contribution to salary of a pastor and gift for keeping up a graveyard void as a perpetuity. Van Syckel v. Johnson [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 657. Invalid 50 year trust held to upset testamentary scheme. Walter v. Walter, 60 Misc. 383, 113 NYS 465.

1. In re Cooper's Estate [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 676. Where impossible to ascertain to what extent specific legacies are tainted by undue influence, whole will, if part, must be set aside. Id.

2. General residuary bequest of personalty carries not only such property as testator did not attempt to otherwise dispose of but all property which by lapse or otherwise is not effectually disposed of to others. In re Barrett's Estate, 116 NYS 756. Where excess over $100,000 was specifically devised but will also disposed of residue of estate, remainder, after deducting from net amount of estate excess over $100,000 and money legacies, constituted residue subject to widow's life use. Perry v. Bulkley [Conn.] 72 A 1014. Void bequests of personalty pass to residuary legatees. Remainder interests attempted to be disposed of by invalid appointment by life tenant. Bartlett v. Sears [Conn.] 70 A 33. Lapsed legacy will pass under residuary clause where will discloses intention that such clause shall carry all of testator's property not actually disposed of by other parts of will. Where will directed conversion of all residue into cash for division among pecuniary legatees proportionately. Dresel v. King, 198 Mass. 546, 85 NE 77. Where daughter, given life estate with remainder to her children died before testator, estate passed as intestate unless will disclosed contrary intent, Ky. St. 1903, § 4843, providing that where devises fail or are void, or are otherwise incapable of taking affect, they shall not be included in residuary estate but shall go intestate, unless contrary intent shall appear by will. Galladay v. Thomas, 33 Ky. L. R. 829, 111 SW 721. Devise held to pass to testator's other children under will and under statute, and grandchildren held without interest. Id.

3. To nephews all residue of "personal estate" did not give nephews proceeds of land directed to be sold in trust for estate. In re Alabone's Estate [N. J. Eq.] 72 A 427. Gift to widow of any surplus, after payment of debts from proceeds of some of testator's property, held not to make her chief residuary legatee so as to give her remainder in other property after her life estate therein. Sink v. Sink [N. C.] 64 SE 193. Where clause designating all personalty to be held in trust was insufficient to pass a certain fund as to which testatrix had power of appointment, subsequent clause bequeathing all personalty not "designated" to be held in trust held sufficient as a general residuary clause, so as to pass fund first excluded, "not designated to be held in trust" being held to mean "not given in trust." Howland v. Parker, 200 Mass. 204, 86 NE 287. Disposition of "all the residue" of the estate "not hereinbefore devised or bequeathed or made void," following alternative gifts, held to include all property not previously disposed of. Ege v. Hering, 108 Md. 391, 70 A 221. Broad language of residuary clause held not limited by words "of which I may die possessed" so as to exclude a contingent remainder. Fisher v. Wagner [Md.] 71 A 999.

4. Dresel v. King, 198 Mass. 546, 85 NE 77. No right of survivorship, where residuary legatees took as individuals and not as a class. Id.

5. Such property goes intestate regardless of testator's intention, this being important only in determining validity of will and construction of provisions passing other property. Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. King, 126 App. Div. 691, 111 NYS 192. That will showed intention to exclude devisees from participation in other property than that devised held not to exclude them from taksible, a construction will be adopted which will avoid intestacy.[6] A construction required by the will cannot, however, be avoided because it leads to intestacy.[7] ing as heirs property not disposed of. Vaughan v. Langford, 81 S. C. 282, 62 SE 316.

Properly held to pass intestate: With reference to fee of property devised to widow for life with power to sell which has not been exercised, husband will be held to have died intestate. In such a case, widow becomes owner in fee of the intestate property devised to her for life, but has only dower in property devised to her in fee. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 474. Trust fund held to pass intestate on daughter's death without issue before widow. Id.; Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. King, 126 App. Div. 691, 111 NYS 192. Proper distribution directed as to realty and personalty. Id. Where precatory words failed to create trust but will sufficiently showed that devisee was not to take absolutely. Gilchrist v. Corliss [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 971, 118 NW 938. Undevised remainder held to pass intestate to children, and children of deceased children share and share alike. Southgate v. Karp, 154 Mich. 697, 15 Det. Leg. N. 891, 118 NW 600. After life estate to widow recital that testator had already given his children "J 23, C 20 acres, A 30 acres all I intended to give her by this instrument." held not to pass remainder. Id. Where will stated that items therein enumerated constituted all of testator's property and made reference to a possibility of reverter, there was no attempt to devise such possibility. Vaughan v. Langford, 81 S. C. 282, 62 SE 316. Where there was no disposition of residue of money after payment of bequests, it passed to heirs at law. In re Koch's Estate [Cal. App.] 96 P 100. Where gift of residue to charity failed, it went to heirs at law. Bowden v. Brown, 200 Mass. 269, 86 NE 351. Legacy to residuary legatee, who did not take as member of a class, held intestate on his dying before testatrix, and held not to pass to surviving residuary legatees. In re Barrett's Estate, 116 NYS 756. Interest in land attempted to be conveyed by void devise descends to person or persons who would have been entitled to take had no will been made. Kinne v. Phares [Kan.] 100 P 287. Where devise was void for remoteness. In re Adleman's Will, 138 Wis. 120, 119 NW 929. Remainder to grandchildren of sons, void as perpetuity, held to go intestate. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645.

Held not intestate: Holographic will written on envelope containing certain expired insurance policies and disposing of same held to dispose of entire estate of testator in view of reference to personalty and use of word "estate." Harper v. Harper, 148 N. C. 453, 62 SE 553. Husband held to take not only all of wife's property situated where wife resided but also all other property owned by her wherever situated. Gray v. Noholoa, 214 U. S. 108, 53 Law. Ed.—. Will not mentioning personalty but appointing executor and devising realty held to pass personalty also. In re Maccafil, 127 App. Div. 21, 111 NYS 315. Where personalty was given to wife, and to daughter if it remained at wife's death, no intestacy resulted from wife's death before testator, but daughter took, she surviving testator. In re Dillon's Will, 60 Misc. 686, 113 NYS 929. Word "any" in direction for conversion of property into money held to mean "all," so as to include besides personalty all realty except residence devised to wife. Thomas' Ex'x v. Thomas' Guardian, 33 Ky. L. R. 700, 110 SW 853. Direction to convert all real and personal property into cash and distribute proceeds held to amount to a devise of the realty. Fenton v. Hall, 235 Ill. 552, 85 NE 936. Devise of property, together with its increase in value by rents or otherwise, to take effect on death of a person named passes the rents during lifetime of such person and as to such rents, and testator does not die intestate. Weathersbee v. Weathersbee [S. C.] 62 SE 838. Will giving residue to sister for life, remainder to charities and on failure of charitable bequests then over, as modified by subsequent codicils reducing sister's share and changing bequests to charities, held not to result in intestacy either as to corpus or income of residue. In re Dobbin's Estate, 221 Pa. 249, 70 A 727. Residue to wife for life remainder to children or their issue, and to wife absolutely in default of children or issue, held to disclose no intestacy. In re Salisbury's Will, 61 Misc. 550, 115 NYS 976. Remainder over to life tenant held not thrown into intestacy by wife's divorce and remarriage after testator's death. Lavender v. Rosenheim [Md.] 72 A 669.

Especially where, after specific devises and bequests of large part of estate, there is clause disposing of residue. In re Keene's Estate, 221 Pa. 201, 70 A 706. Where residuary clause disposed of residue on same "conditions" as previous bequest, "conditions" held to mean "provisions" or "in same manner." Id. Presumption of intent to dispose of whole estate is overcome only where intention to do otherwise is plain and unambiguous or necessarily implied. Thomas' Ex'x v. Thomas' Guardian, 33 Ky. L. R. 700, 110 SW 853. To avoid intestacy cross remainders may be implied as to accretions to funds set apart for life tenants, though trusts attempted to be created might be thereby destroyed. Id.; Simpson v. Trust Co., 129 App. Div. 200, 113 NYS 370. Testator presumed to intend disposition of entire estate, and where there is a general description to that end, erroneous words of quality or value will not control. Deppen's Trustee v. Deppen [Ky.] 117 SW 352. General intent to dispose of whole estate will be given weight in deciding what was intended by particular devises which may admit of enlargement or limitation (McMahan v. Hubbard [Mo.] 118 SW 481), and court in pursuing general presump-

(§ 5) E. Of terms respecting administration, management, control, and disposal.[8]—See 10 C. L. 2074—The particular terms of the will must be looked to in determining the existence of power of sale[9] or partition,[10] the existence and duration of trusteeships,[11] and the powers and duties of executors or trustee.[12] A direction tion against intestacy will supply, transform, or change words to avoid defeat of clear intent (Id.). Residuary clause will be construed so as to avoid partial intestacy unless contrary intent is apparent. Fisher v. Wagner [Md.] 71 A 999. Where under a particular construction of will portion going intestate is infinitesimal, presumption against such construction is rebutable by slight circumstances. Rackemann v. Tilton, 236 Ill. 49, 86 NE 168.

7. Wolfe v. Hatheway [Conn.] 70 A 645. While any reasonable construction which will dispose of entire estate will be adopted, where no intention is shown as to disposition of part of property, it must be regarded as intestate. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386.

9. Executor held authorized to sell land and reinvest for benefit of testator's children subject to limitations contained in will, it appearing land could not be advantageously divided. Christian Widows & Orphans Home v. Harber [Ky.] 113 SW 818. Will providing estate should be "kept together" and giving executor power of control, management and disposal, held to mean that while there should be no partition until fulfillment of certain conditions, executor had power to sell land for maintenance and education of children. Connely v. Putnam [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 164. Will held not to authorize executors to sell realty over objection of residuary legatees, authorizing them to sell only such personalty as was necessary to pay expenses and carry out directions of will. Martin v. Andrews, 59 Misc. 298, 111 NYS 40. Trustees held empowered to sell residuary realty and give good fee title. Robinson v. Robinson [Me.] 72 A 883. Where will directed executor to sell homestead after widow's death, sale could not be had prior to that time, though widow parted with her interest in consideration of an annuity. Stewart v. Jones [Mo.] 118 SW 1. Under will giving son "full power to sell and make deeds to land in E. county but must reinvest same proceeds arising from sale in other lands as he thinks best," son had full power to convey all lands in E. county, but purchaser was not required to look to reinvestment of proceeds. Broaddus v. Centers [Ky.] 116 SW 742. Son could also exchange lands provided any money he received in addition be also reinvested in other lands. Id. Power of sale may be conferred by implication. Powell v. Woodcock, 149 N. C. 235, 62 SE 1071. Residue to executor "in trust to receive, hold, invest and reinvest," held to confer power to sell realty. Id. Power of sale implied when duties of trustee require it. Robinson v. Robinson [Me.] 72 A 883. "Invest and manage" held to imply power of sale in absence of contrary intent disclosed by will as a whole. Id. Executor required to pay legacies charged on realty held by implication empowered to sell realty. Lavaggi v. Borella [N. J. Eq.] 67 A 929. Devise of residue of estate, real and personal, for purpose of continuing business, held to imply power to convert realty or personalty into business capital. In re O'Reilly, 59 Misc. 136, 112 NYS 208.

10. Will construed to empower widow to partition some of realty among children should she deem such course for best interest of herself and them. Frantz v. Steinmetz [Ky.] 118 SW 345. Restriction against division during widowhood held for benefit of widow only. Id. Children being of age so that time for division had arrived, grandchildren could not complain of partition, where they were to take only in case of death of children before time of division. Id.

11. See, also, Trusts, 12 C. L. 2171. Will construed to vest legal title in executors as trustees. Appel v. Childress [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 129. Held to create a trust requiring executors on settlement of estate to hold as trustee corpus given for benefit of a daughter for life, and at her death to deliver it to those entitled. Haywood v. Wachovia L. & T. Co., 149 N. C. 208, 62 SE 915. Trust in favor of daughters held terminable on marriage of last of them or by consent of all unmarried ones that income be divided among all the children. Plaut v. Plaut, 80 Conn. 673, 70 A 52. On termination of trust, legal and beneficial estates would merge in owners of legal estate. Id. "In" in provision for termination of trust as soon as daughters who were beneficiaries should find "in convenient" to allow other children to share in income, held "it." Plaut v. Plaut, 80 Conn. 673, 70 A 52.

12. General management: Where testator devised estate for purpose of carrying on his business and directed payment of income to son and daughter, no part of net income was applicable to continuance of business. In re O'Reilly, 59 Misc. 136, 112 NYS 208. Request to a bank held an appointment to administer estate as executor, and after payment of debts to hold surplus as trustee until minor children should become of age. Harper v. Harper, 148 N. C. 453, 62 SE 553.

Investments: Will held to disclose intention that pecuniary legacies to brothers and sisters be invested in real estate, though money was mentioned as cash bequests. In re Buerstetta's Estate [Neb.] 119 NW 469. Will held not to authorize executor to invest pecuniary legacies in his own name as trustee, but in name of life beneficiaries, will not having expressly or impliedly created a trust and trust not being necessary to effectuation of intentions. Id.

Incumbrances: Will held not to require executor to pay certain mortgages from estate other than land on which mortgages existed. Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120, 15 Det. Leg. N. 424, 117 NW 213.

Directions as to particular funds or into sell real estate and distribute the proceeds vests the legal title in the executor,[13] and the power to sell confers, by implication, power to convey.[14]

(§ 5) F. Abatement, ademtion, renunciation and satisfaction.[15]—See 10 C. L. 2076—If the estate prove insufficient to pay legacies in full, they should abate proportionately,[16] but the residuary estate must be first resorted to [17] and general legacies abate before specific ones.[18] Sometimes the will in terms provides for abatement.[19] Where the legacies given by the will are expressly made subject to abate-terests: Where will provided that in case nephews should die or wander off and not be heard from for ten years the sums provided for them should go to other persons, ten-year period began to run from testator's death. Breidenbach v. Walter's Ex'rs. [Ky. App.] 119 SW 204. Direction that one-fourth of principal of residuary estate "be paid" to children of deceased child held applicable to personalty only. Robinson v. Robinson [Me.] 72 A 883. Amount to be paid to son for support and maintenance held discretionary with trustees so that court could not fix a sum certain and direct excess of income to be paid to son's creditors. Myers v. Russell, 60 Misc. 617, 112 NYS 520. Will construecd to provide that on widow's death her third should be added in equal shares to fund held by executor for brother and sister and subject to same provisions. Simpson v. Trust Co., 129 App. Div. 200, 113 NYS 370. "Trust funds" directed to be paid over by trustee in a certain contingency held to mean "trust estates" and not trust moneys. Young v. Du Bois, 60 Misc. 381, 113 NYS 456. Direction that trustees make special provision for children of first wife if widow should waive will and receive property under law held not applicable where child of second wife died and widow inherited her share. In re Harris' Estate [Vt.] 72 A 912.

Time of distribution: Will giving five years if necessary for settlement of estate held not to postpone, until final settlement, payment of income of certain sums left in trust, though as to residue legatees would not be entitled to interest until such settlement. Fenton v. Hall, 235 Ill. 552, 85 NE 936. Will providing for preliminary partial distribution when beneficiaries therein provided for should be reduced to two or less when condition of estate and objects to be secured by will would justify held not to justify division when income was scarcely sufficient to pay charges and sums allotted remaining beneficiaries. Long v. Mayes' Estate [Miss.] 48 S 523. Where trustee was directed on death of any child to pay proportionate part of principal to children of such deceased child, he could not ascertain true amount of estate or pay over fractional part to children of deceased child until whole estate had been converted into money. Robinson v. Robinson [Me.] 72 A 883. Where personalty was insufficient to pay debts, each devisee of realty should contribute to deficiency in proportion that realty devised to him bears to value of entire realty. Hessig v. Hessig's Guardian [Ky.] 115 SW 748.

17. Under administration act § 79, providing for abatement of legacies in consequence of a widow's renunciation of will, no abatement of specific or general legacies should be made until after exhaustion of residuary legacies. Kincaid v. Moore, 138 Ill. App. 23. Where testator intended that specific legacies should be first paid and that only residue should go to residuary legatees and executor misappropriates part of estate, remainder must be applied to payment of specific legacies before residuary legatees can receive anything. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. McCarthy, 128 App. Div. 621, 113 NYS 207, rvg. 57 Misc. 413, 107 NYS 928.

18. Under Comp. Laws, §§ 9289, et seq, providing for payment of debts and expenses of administration out of estate and abatement of legacies, burden of discharging such claims falls on general legacies and devises only where no estate remains undisposed of by will (In re Corby's Estate, 154 Mich. 353, 15 Det. Leg. N. 798, 117 NW 906), and specific devises and legacies are exempt if there is other estate (Id.). Where will gave specified sums to each of nephews and a niece, provided personalty should be sufficient, and gave to brother described realty, testatrix's household furniture and all the rest of her property, court could not under statute charge any part of expenses of administration against specific devise and legacy to brother, general legacies to nephews and niece being sufficient. ment, additional ones given by codicil are also subject,[20] unless the codicil manifests a contrary intent.[21] It should be assumed that testator regarded his property sufficient in amount to carry out his testamentary scheme.[22] Realty specifically devised cannot be reduced in satisfaction of the widow's dower interest in another tract.[23]

*Ademption.*See 10 C. L. 2077—Ademption is the extinction or satisfaction of a legacy by some act of testator, equivalent to revocation of the bequest or indicating an intention to revoke.[24] It may be accomplished by a gift to the legatee or by such disposition of the subject of the bequest as to make operation of the will impossible.[25] Intention to adeem cannot be inferred from the mere performance of legal obligations.[26] A general legacy may be satisfied though not strictly adeemed;[27] and while technically the doctrine of ademption does not apply to a devise of realty,[28] such devise may be revoked or satisfied by conveyance of the land.[29] An alteration of subject-matter to work an ademption, must be by testator himself after execution of the will.[30] If the change is by act of another and the property in its new form is in testator's possession at his death, there will be no ademption.[31]

*Renunciation.*See 10 C. L. 2077—Acceptance is essential to effectuate a legacy or devise.[32] Assent to a legacy or devise will ordinarily be presumed,[33] but if assent is withheld or the benefits renounced, the interest involved will not pass to the intended beneficiary.[34]

*Satisfaction of debts by legacies.*See 10 C. L. 2077—A legacy will not be held a satisfaction of a debt contracted after the will was made.[35]

Bill in equity is maintainable to determine rights of devisee's state account between them and obtain for plaintiff's personalty to which they are entitled. Moseley v. Bolster, 201 Mass. 135, 87 NE 606. Single action may be maintained for both establishment and construction of will, clerk by whom will was probated being part of superior court. Harper v. Harper, 148 N. C. 453, 62 SE 553. Suit by trustee under will for construction thereof concerning disposition of trust fund is properly brought in county in which testator resided and in which will was probated, though none of parties reside in state. Bartlett v. Sears [Conn.] 70 A 33. Trust having been created by will of domiciled inhabitant and trustee being thus accountable to courts of state for execution of trust, such courts could advise as to construction of will and also as to that of nonresident so far as she attempted to exercise a power of appointment created by first will. General prayer for construction of a will has reference only to construction as to particular questions submitted for court's decision. Hamilton v. Hamilton [Iowa] 118 NW 375.

38. Jurisdiction of equity court to construe wills grew out of its general control over trusts and trustees (Haywood v. Wachovia L. & T. Co., 149 N. C. 208, 62 SE 915), and it can take jurisdiction only when trusts are involved or when devises and legacies are so blended and dependent on each other as to make it necessary to construe whole will in order to ascertain legacies. (Id.). In absence of any trusts, equity will not construe will merely because devisees are uncertain or to settle merely legal estates. Strawn v. Jacksonville Trustees, 240 Ill. 111, 88 NE 460. Equity without jurisdiction of suit solely for construction of will, when titles involved are purely legal and capable of assertion at law. Frank v. Frank [Ark.] 113 SW 640. 58. That witness is unwilling to commit himself absolutely and positively does not make him incompetent; he may give his best recollection, and the weight of his testimony is for jury. Holcombe v. State, 5 Ga. App. 47, 62 SE 647. Witness may give portunity to know the facts to which they testify is competent.[59] Previous inconsistent statements or testimony affects credibility but not competency of the witness.[60]

Some appreciation of the nature and sanctity of an oath is also necessary.[61] The competency of a person to take the prescribed oath and become a witness is for the court.[62] An interpreter is a witness, and must be competent as such.[63]

Competency is presumed and the burden is upon the objector to show incompetency.[64]

A witness is not disqualified by violation of a rule of exclusion from the court room,[65] though his testimony may be excluded in the discretion of the court, if the violation of the rule was caused by the party calling him.[66]

The competency of a witness in a criminal case in the federal courts must be determined upon common-law rules, not by reference to statutes of the states.[67]

Husband and wife. See 10 C. L. 2093—At common law neither was competent in any action, civil or criminal, in which the other was a party.[68] Their competency for or against each other is now generally controlled by statute,[69] and express statutory provisions cannot be evaded by connivance of the parties or indulgence of the court.[70] Under statutes making one spouse competent as to matters in which he or she acted as agent for the other, the witness must have been the actual agent,[71]

69. Declarations of husband incompetent against wife in suit in which they were both defendants. Kirby's Dig. § 3095, subd. 4, disqualifies husband and wife as witness for or against each other. Reaves v. Coffman [Ark.] 112 SW 194. Under Act May 23, 1887, (P. L. 158), § 5, neither can testify against other. Canole v. Allen, 222 Pa. 156, 70 A 1053. Married woman cannot testify for husband in civil suit against him except as to transactions in which she acted as his agent. Rev. St. 1899, § 4656. Fishback v. Harrison [Mo. App.] 119 SW 465. Husband cannot be called by wife to testify as to his means in order to determine amount of alimony to which she is entitled. Code, § 2281, prohibits. Nissen v. Farquhar, 121 La. 642, 46 S 679. In proceeding by judgment creditor to reach proceeds of real property sold by debtor and wife to third person, later sold back to wife and then sold by her, debtor's deposition previously taken was incompetent against wife, without her consent. Rathbone v. Maltz [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1923, 118 NW 991. In trespass against husband and wife, husband was incompetent to testify that in doing acts complained of, he was acting as wife's agent, the object being to fasten liability on the wife. Canole v. Allen, 222 Pa. 156, 70 A 1053.

70. Husband and wife being defendants, former could not be called for cross-examination for purpose of fixing wife's liability. Canole v. Allen, 222 Pa. 156, 70 A 1053.

71. Where husband conducted negotiations as to settlement himself, his wife was not competent to testify, on ground that she was his "agent," as to whether or not she signed a note alleged to have been given by him in settlement. Fishback v. Harrison [Mo. App.] 119 SW 465. Where wife did not act as agent of her husband, held that she was incompetent witness in suit by vendor of automobile against her husband, as her testimony was not within exemption clause in Rev. St. Ill. c. 51 § 5. Electric Vehicle Co. v. Price, 138 Ill. App. 594.

and the proffered testimony must relate to the subject-matter of the agency.[72] One spouse may usually testify in his or her own behalf, though the other is also a party.[73] In Illinois a husband is a competent witness for his wife in a case concerning her separate property,[74] and in Pennsylvania, in all civil actions brought by the husband, the wife is a competent witness in rebuttal, when her character or conduct is attacked upon the trial thereof.[75]

Insanity.[See 10 C. L. 2080]—One who is so insane that he does not understand the nature of an oath, or who cannot give a correct or rational account of what he has seen or heard relative to matters in issue, is incompetent.[76] The presumption favors sanity and competency and the burden is upon a party objecting to show mental incompetency.[77] Merely charging that witness had been adjudged insane is not enough, when he appears rational and is at large.[78] It is proper for the court to examine a witness, claimed to be insane, in the absence of the jury, and determine the question of competency.[79] Where the record of a court showing that the witness has been adjudged insane is produced after the witness has testified, the court may still allow the witness' testimony to stand, and the credibility of his testimony only is for the jury.[80]

Children.[See 10 C. L. 2080]—The competency of a child to give testimony, and the manner of examining the child to determine his capacity, are questions addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court.[81] The tests of competency are general intelligence, capacity to receive and convey just and true impressions of facts, and an appreciation of the distinction between truth and falsehood, and the penalties attaching to a failure to testify truthfully after being sworn.[82] Unsworn testimony of child of tender years is inadmissible.[83]

72. Kirby's Dig. § 3095 makes husband or wife competent to testify for each other as to business transacted by one as agent for other. This relates to business with third persons, and does not make husband of will contestant competent to testify as copy of letter written by wife to testator. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

73. Where actions by wife for injuries and by husband for loss of services were consolidated, husband's testimony was competent in his own behalf. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Raines [Ark.] 119 SW 266. In an action for the benefit of a married woman upon the bond of a liquor dealer, who has sold liquor to her husband, an habitual drunkard, after notice not to do so, the husband is a competent witness. Action under Rev. St. 1899, § 3017. Pettis County v. De Bold [Mo. App.] 117 SW 88. Where, in divorce case husband is ruled to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for failure to obey court's order to pay alimony, he is competent witness to testify in his own behalf to purge himself of contempt. Stoddard v. Stoddard, 122 La. 151, 47 S 446. Restriction against one spouse testifying against the other does not apply in suits for annulment of marriage on ground of fraud, but where depending spouse is in a far off country, uncorroborated testimony of plaintiff must be full and convincing. Vazakas v. Vazakas, 109 NYS 568.

74. In an action by wife for personal injury, husband is competent witness. City of Rock Island v. Larkin, 136 Ill. App. 579.

75. Under Act of May 8, 1907, P. L. 184, in an action for criminal conversation by husband, wife may rebut attack upon her character, but can be witness only in regard to character or conduct. Keath v. Shiffer, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 573.

76, 77, 78. City of Covington v. O'Meara [Ky. App.] 119 SW 187.

79. Proper for court to have party brought into court and examined, in absence of jury, and on finding her incompetent on account of insanity, to exclude her and refuse to allow her to testify. Holland v. Riggs [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 167.

80. City of Covington v. O'Meara [Ky. App.] 119 SW 187.

81. The court may itself examine a child to determine his competency or allow counsel to do so. Not abuse of discretion to allow prosecuting attorney to examine child under 12. Simmons v. State [Ala.] 48 S 606. The competency of a child of 10, less than that at time of acts to which she testified, was for court, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1880, that children under 10, who appear to be incapable of receiving just impressions, etc., cannot testify. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 79 P 912. Where court examined boy under 12 years, as provided in Code Cr. Proc. § 392, as to competency, and determined that he was competent, it was proper to exclude further examination by counsel as to boy's age. People v. Stanley, 130 App. Div. 64, 114 NYS 395.

82. No abuse of discretion to allow boy to testify when there was some evidence of competency and appreciation of nature of oath. Applebaum v. Bass [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 173. Boy of 12, who went to Sunday school, had heard of God and Jesus Christ, knew that bad boys go to bad world

Persons accused or convicted of crime.[See 10 C. L. 2081]—Some statutes make persons convicted of certain crimes, such as perjury [94] or a felony,[95] incompetent, and certain crimes disqualify one as a witness at common law.[96] But no person who has been convicted of crime will be excluded as a witness unless settled principles or precedents force such ruling,[97] the modern tendency of courts and legislatures being to extend the field of competency and to restrict that of incompetency.[98] One jointly indicted with another is competent in the trial of his codefendant.[99] The competency of a witness, as affected by conviction of crime, must be determined solely from the record of his conviction.[90] A plea of guilty to a charge of crime does not disqualify a person who has not been sentenced.[91] The federal statute disqualifying as witnesses persons convicted of perjury disqualifies in federal courts regardless of the law of the state.[92] As to conviction of crimes other than perjury, the laws of the state prevail.[93]

Persons acting in official capacity at trial.[See 10 C. L. 2081]

§ 2. Disqualification on ground of interest.[94]—[See 10 C. L. 2081]—Except as to the matters discussed in the succeeding section,[95] interest in the controversy or in the event of the action does not disqualify one as a witness,[96] the common law rule having been changed by statute [97] in most jurisdictions.[98]

§ 3. Disqualification of one party to transaction or communication, on death or disability of other.[99]—[See 10 C. L. 2082]—The disqualification of a party or other interested person to testify as to conversations or transactions with a person since deceased, or who has become insane, or with a minor, is regulated entirely by statutes which vary in the different jurisdictions. Such statutes will not be extended by judicial construction.[1] In some states the statute is held inapplicable in will contests,[2] while in others it is held applicable in such proceedings.[3] In Texas, the and good boys to heaven, and that boys who tell truth go to heaven and those who swear to lies go to bad world, held competent. Simmons v. State [Ala.] 48 S 606.

83. Held error to admit testimony of child of seven without administering oath and examining her to determine her qualifications. Commonwealth v. Capero, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 392.

84. One convicted of making false report to U. S. comptroller is not disqualified, this not being perjury. Wise v. Williams, 162 F 161.

85. Illicit liquor dealing and receiving and concealing smuggled goods, punishable by penitentiary sentence under federal laws, are not felonies under Code Cr. Proc. art. 768, making one convicted of felony incompetent in criminal case. Cabrera v. State [Tex Cr. App.] 118 SW 1054.

86. Crime of embezzlement, as defined by U. S. Rev. St. § 5209, is misdemeanor; it does not come within disqualifying crimes at common law, treason, felony, the crimen falsi, and conviction thereof does not disqualify. United States v. Sims, 161 F 1008.

87, 88. United States v. Sims, 161 F 1008.

89. Testimony of accomplices jointly indicted is competent, though the indictment against them not dismissed. Simpson v. Com. 126 Ky. 441, 31 Ky. L. R. 769, 103 SW 332.

90. Oral testimony, as to nature of testimony in case, inadmissible. United States v. Sims 161 F 1008.

91. It is judgment, not guilt, which disqualifies. Crime was grand larceny. Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466.

2. Kirby's Dig. § 3093 is held not to apply in will contests, purposes being to protect estate in matter of claims against it. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

statute applies only in suits where the cause of action or defense asserted grew out of a transaction with the decedent.[4]

The adverse party, or party against whom the witness is offered, must ordinarily represent the decedent or derive his interest from the decedent, or person under disability. See 10 C. L. 2082—Illustrative applications of this rule are given in the note.[5] Witness is incompetent to prove execution of deed from decedent under which he claims.[6] It will be seen that a party to a transaction with an agent is usually held incompetent, after the agent's death, against the principal.[7]

Rev. St. 1895, art. 2302, does not apply in will contest, this not being an action by or against heirs or legal representatives of a decedent arising out of a transaction with decedent, but a proceeding between them growing out of an act by him alone. Simon v. Middleton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 441. Hence, testimony by a disinherited child as to conversation with testator, in which he accused her of wrong conduct with a man, her denial, and his statement that another child and legatee had told him and that he cried and said he wanted nothing to do with it, was competent. Id.

5. Georgia: Defendant not competent to testify that deceased grantor of plaintiff executed, as executrix of an estate, a deed to defendant to land in suit. Fullbright v. Neely, 131 Ga. 342, 62 SE 188. Defendant, sued by corporation, is not competent to testify to transactions or communications with deceased agent of corporation, though they took place in presence of third persons not connected with corporation. Dolvin v. American Harrow Co., 131 Ga. 300, 62 SE 198.

6. Wilson v. Wilson [Neb.] 120 NW 147. Defendant could not testify to conversation with decedent tending to defeat claim of intervenor. Harrell v. Hagan [N. C.] 63 SE 952.

Illinois: An heir, suing to set aside will and enforce contract whereby decedent agreed that property should descend according to statute, is suing as heir, and not merely on contract, and persons interested cannot testify to transactions with decedent. Jones v. Abbott, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279. Widow brought suit to recover fee in one-half tract of land conveyed by her husband to another and by him reconveyed to her and her husband. Children of deceased by his second wife, claiming as heirs, incompetent to testify to conversations with their father as against children by first wife and by plaintiff, who also claimed as heirs. Kirby v. Kirby, 236 Ill. 255, 86 NE 259. But their testimony was competent against widow, who did not claim as heir, but under conveyance from third person. Id. In suit by heirs against another heir to set aside a deed on ground of incapacity of grantor, fraud and undue influence, complainants are competent witnesses in their own behalf, since defendant defends as grantee, not as heir. Hudson v. Hudson, 237 Ill. 9, 86 NE 661. In suit by children of decedent for assignment of dower, homestead, and for partition, and to set aside deed of decedent on which defendant's children relied, widow and plaintiffs were competent, since defendants defended as grantees, not as heirs. Grindle v. Grindle, 240 Ill. 143, 88 NE 473. One who claimed life insurance money as affianced wife of deceased is a competent witness to prove such fact, since Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 51, § 2, applies only where adverse party sues or defends as heir, legatee, or devisee. Farrenkoph v. Holm, 142 Ill. App. 336. Where adverse party defends in a representative capacity, held that the other party was incompetent to testify as to every thing occurring before the death of deceased. Kempton v. People, 139 Ill. App. 563. Where the adverse party sues or defends in a representative capacity, the wife of one financially interested is not competent witness. Wright v. Whitaker, 137 Ill. App. 598. Where the adverse party does not sue in a representative capacity, a witness is not disqualified because of financial interest. Seass v. Wright, 138 Ill. App. 6.

Indiana: In proceeding against administrator's bond on account of allowance of improper claims, claimant would not be competent to testify against estate as to validity of claim. Scott v. Smith [Ind.] 85 NE 774. In proceeding to remove administrator on account of allowing improper claims, claimant is competent to testify to validity of claim since no judgment can be rendered for or against estate. Id.

Iowa: Substituted beneficiary in life insurance policy is not an assignee of deceased within Code, § 4604, making other party incompetent to testify to transactions with deceased. Crowell v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 412. Mere allegation of plaintiff that she is assignee of decedent not enough to establish fact so as to exclude defendant as witness to transaction with decedent. McAleer v. McNamara [Iowa] 117 NW 1122. A mere donee of a decedent is not an assignee within the meaning of Code, § 4604. Defendant in suit by donee to recover money competent to testify to transaction with decedent. Id. In action on partnership note, surety was made defendant, and one of partners filed crosspetition after other partner's death, asking for cancellation of notes, surety also having died. Held, crosspetitioner was competent to testify to partnership relation and conduct of firm's business. Culbertson v. Salinger [Iowa] 117 NW 6.

Kentucky: Action on health and accident insurance policy. Plaintiff incompetent to testify that he had not made statements contained in application, after death of agent who took it. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Jolly [Ky.] 118 SW 281. Husband executed note as agent for his wife. After his death, payee could not testify in action on note, as to transactions with deceased. Swearingen's Executor & Trustee v. Tyler [Ky.] 116 SW 331. Under Civ. Code Proc. § 606(2), contestant of will could not testify that husband of testatrix, original propounder of will, also since deceased, had said that she, contestant, could not break will and that he was responsible for it. Wall's Ex'r v. Dimmitt [Ky.] 117 SW 299.

Maryland: In suit against heirs to enforce ancestor's contract for lease, uncertainties in the contract cannot be cleared up by parol, since parties cannot testify to statements by or transactions with decedent. Lanahan v. Cockey, 108 Md. 620, 71 A 314.

Michigan: Controversy being whether legatee, in suit against administrator, was entitled to entire legacy named in will or whether certain sums charged on testator's books should be deducted, plaintiff, legatee, and her husband, to whom testator loaned money, were competent witnesses; claim not adverse to estate. In re Bresler's Estate [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1097, 119 NW 1104.

Missouri: The death of an agent with whom a contract was made makes the surviving party to the contract incompetent. Payors on note could not testify to cancellation when agent of payee, with whom they dealt, was dead. Columbia Brewery Co. v. Rohling, 133 Mo. App. 65, 112 SW 767. Lands were devised to defendant in trust for plaintiff's mother, proceeds to be used for her support, and remainder to go to plaintiff. In action by plaintiff after mother's death to recover land from defendant, defendant was not incompetent to testify to disposition by him of trust funds, plaintiff not claiming through deceased. Collins v. Crawford, 214 Mo. 167, 112 SW 538.

North Carolina: In suit to correct deed, proof of declarations by assignee, since deceased, of bidder at executor's sale as to how he wanted deed made out was not excluded by Rev. 1905, § 1631, where assignee had no interest in land and no one claimed under him. Condor v. Secrest, 149 N. C. 201, 62 SE 921.

Pennsylvania: Where payee of note was dead, and note had been acquired by another, one of makers could not testify that his purported signature was forgery, this relating to matter occurring during payee's lifetime, and adverse party being his successor in interest. Foster v. Allhouse, 222 Pa. 446, 71 A 915. Where executors of mortgagee were substituted as plaintiffs in scire facias upon the mortgage, which was given by one of three joint makers of certain promissory notes, as security for same, held that the other two makers of the notes were not competent witnesses on behalf of defendant as to any matter occurring before death of mortgagee. Boltz v. Muehlhof, 37 Pa. Super. Ct. 375.

South Carolina: Code Civ. Proc. 1902, § 400, does not make plaintiff incompetent, in action on fire policy, as witness to statements made to him by agent of insurer, since deceased. Berry v. Virginia State Ins. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 859.

Washington: In suit to enjoin cutting of timber sold by plaintiff to one since deceased, whose rights were acquired by defendant, plaintiff cannot testify as to contract with decedent, though scrivener has testified to an omission therefrom. Preston v. Hill-Wilson Shingle Co., 50 Wash. 377, 97 P 293.

Jones v. Abbott, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279. Person named as executor in will also incompetent, since he would receive commissions if will was sustained. Id. Executor's wife was also interested and disqualified. Id. In suit to set aside will, legatee who had accepted sum of money from another legatee in return for agreement not to contest was incompetent to testify in favor of complainants and contestants, her interest being with theirs, since she would receive more under will, she being also defendant. Dougherty v. Gaffney, 239 Ill. 640, 88 NE 150. In suit to foreclose trust deed executed to plaintiff's intestate, defendant was not competent to testify to agreement by intestate to surrender notes. Elwell v. Hicks, 238 Ill. 170, 87 NE 316. Fact of agency uncoupled with financial interest in the suit will not disqualify witness where the adverse party sues or defends in a representative capacity. Wright v. Whitaker, 137 Ill. App. 598. In suit for partition by heirs, defendant who claimed under oral agreement with decedent was incompetent to testify thereto. Frye v. Gullion [Iowa] 121 NW 563. Codefendants, who would share in land if defendant was successful, and who did not admit plaintiff's claim, were necessary parties in order that final decree might be entered, and were incompetent also, notwithstanding disclaimer by them as to interest of other defendant. Id. In suit by widow to set aside deed to son of deceased, son could not testify to communications and transactions with deceased concerning property. Dashner v. Dashner [Iowa] 120 NW 975. Plaintiff, seeking to establish title to lands of decedent, as against heirs, incompetent to testify that decedent promised to give him the land. Code, § 4604. Boeck v. Milke [Iowa] 118 NW 874. British & American Mortgage Co. v. Worrill, 168 F 120. Where contract for land was made with decedent by plaintiff's stepfather for plaintiff's benefit, stepfather would be competent witness to making of contract. Boeck v. Milke [Iowa] 120 NW 120, on rehearing, receding from position taken in former opinion in 118 NW 874. Plaintiff claimed land as daughter of deceased, and defendant as sister and sole heir. Plaintiff's mother, who had been divorced from deceased, and was not a party, was competent to testify to plaintiff's paternity and heirship. Lyon v. Lash [Kan.] 99 P 598.

10. Where it appears that beneficial owner of claim against estate has assigned merely to make her testimony competent, court should cause pleadings to be amended to show suit for use and benefit of assignor, and exclude her testimony. Platner v. Ryan [N. J. Law] 69 A 1007. Plaintiff asked partition claiming three-fifths of an estate under conveyance from three heirs, given on theory that widow had elected to take homestead rights instead of one-third estate. Held, plaintiff's grantors were incompetent to testify to conversations with their deceased mother. Gray v. Wright [Iowa] 119 NW 612. Where defendant claimed under deed left in escrow for her, which had been lost, and proved contract for her benefit between testator, disqualify a person on the ground of interest, his interest must be in the event of the suit,[11] and must be certain, direct, and immediate,[12] so that he will immediately gain or lose by the event of the suit,[13] and such that the judgment rendered could be given in evidence, for or against him, in another suit,[14] and his interest must be adverse to that of the persons sought to be protected by the statute.[15] Whether a witness is interested must be determined by reference to his status at the time of trial.[16] Under some statutes one party to a contract cannot testify in regard thereto after the death of the other.[17] under whose will plaintiffs claimed, and mortgagor, which contract required her to pay rents to testator, she did not claim under mortgagor and latter was competent witness to transaction with testator. Shook v. Fox, 126 App. Div. 565, 110 NYS 951.

11. The interest which disqualifies is a vested interest in the event of the suit, but not in the question involved. It must be such an interest as the judgment in the case would operate upon. Metcalf v. Buck, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 58. Interest must be in outcome of litigation, not merely in questions involved. Mallison v. Rittgers [Iowa] 118 NW 512. One not a party, having no pecuniary interest in event, is not disqualified under Ga. Code 1895, § 5269, nor U. S. Rev. St. § 858, though interested in question at issue. British & American Mortgage Co. v. Worrill, 168 F 120. A land owner, although interested in the question involved in an ejectment suit brought by another as affecting his own land, may be a competent witness for one of the parties, though both claim from grantor who is deceased, and the testimony is in regard to conversation with deceased. Metcalf v. Buck, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 58.

12. Ackman v. Patter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. Prospective heir not disqualified to testify for living ancestor. In re Sloan's Estate, 50 Wash. 86, 96 P 684. Witness is not incompetent by reason of inchoate right of dower, dependent upon contingency that he survive his wife. Ackman v. Potter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. Husbands of children competent, where litigation concerned separate property of their wives. Grindle v. Grindle, 240 Ill. 143, 88 NE 473. In suit to set aside deed against one defending as heir and grantee, a defendant who, if deed were sustained, would inherit as half-sister of grantee, and if it were set aside might acquire by will from her mother, was not disqualified as witness. Ackman v. Potter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. That husband may have life tenancy in wife's property if he survives her and she does not dispose of it does not give him such an interest as to disqualify him as witness for wife in suit affecting her property. Hungerford v. Snow, 129 App. Div. 816, 114 NYS 127. Legatee under will not disqualified to testify in support of gift depending upon declarations made by testator after execution of will, since she was not directly interested in result, adversely to estate. Nelson v. Olson [Minn.] 121 NW 609. In suit against bank to recover stock pledged by decedent, stockholder and creditor of bank, though indirectly interested in result, was not "interested" within meaning of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 829. Wise v. Williams, 162 F 161. St. 1898, § 4069, disqualifying a "party" as witness to transactions with decedent, etc., did not, prior to amendment of 1907, disqualify stockholders, officers or trustees of a corporation, though the amendment expressly renders them incompetent. Johnson v. Fraternal Reserve Ass'n., 136 Wis. 528, 117 NW 1019.

13. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 51, § 2. Jones v. Abbot, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279.

14. Jones v. Abbott, 235 Ill. 220, 85 NE 279. Witnesses who would neither gain nor lose by direct legal effect of judgment and against whom record would not be legal evidence were competent. Mallison v. Rittgers [Iowa] 118 NW 512.

15. "Person interested" within Rev. Laws 1905, § 4663, means one who has an immediate pecuniary interest adverse to that of the party against whom he testifies. Nelson v. Olson [Minn.] 121 NW 609. Defaulting codefendant held not disqualified by interest because of possible liability for costs, especially where her testimony was adverse to her own interest so far as such liability was concerned. Ackman v. Potter, 239 Ill. 578, 88 NE 231. In suit by heirs against other heirs to set aside deeds, widow of grantor was not incompetent to testify for defendants by reason of interest, since her interests were with plaintiffs, as she would be entitled to dower if deeds were set aside. Baker v. Baker, 239 Ill. 82, 87 NE 868. In suit by son to contest father's will, widow's testimony as to husband's incompetency, adverse to her own interest, was not excluded by Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 51, § 2. Donnan v. Donnan, 236 Ill. 341, 86 NE 279. On cross bill to construe will, nephew and heir of testator, whose interest was adverse to that of cross complainant, by whom he was called, was competent. Hoffner v. Custer, 237 Ill. 64, 86 NE 737. Widow held competent to conversations with deceased husband in suit to recover land, title to which had been in him. Cowdrey v. Cowdrey [N. J. Err. & App.] 67 A. 111. A person, though a party, may testify in behalf of others as to transactions or communications between himself and a decedent or lunatic; husband competent to testify for wife. Hungerford v. Snow, 129 App. Div. 816, 114 NYS 127.

16. Laws 1907, p. 845, c. 197, making officers, stockholders and trustees of a corporation party incompetent as to transactions, etc., with a decedent, applies to the status, when the witness is offered at the trial. In re McNaughton's Will, 138 Wis. 179, 118 NW 997. A corporate officer, made incompetent by the statute, could, by resigning, become competent, and, if he was not within terms of statute at time of trial, he could testify. Id.

17. One party to contract cannot contradict statement therein after death of other

Transactions and communications to which the disqualification extends. See 10 C. L. 2086—The disqualification extends to all personal transactions and communications between witness and deceased,[18] and under some statutes, to matters occurring in the lifetime of decedent,[19] equally within his knowledge,[20] concerning which, if living, he could testify and contradict any witness who testified falsely.[21] party to contract. Richardson v. Isaacs [Ky.] 118 SW 1003. In suit to cancel deed, after grantee's death, grantor cannot testify to what took place between them. Jones v. Gatliff [Ky.] 113 SW 436. In suit to set aside antenuptial contract, after husband's death, wife was incompetent witness. Tilton v. Tilton [Ky.] 113 SW 134. Plaintiff, widow of deceased, in suit to recover proceeds of insurance policy from beneficiary named therein, is incompetent to testify to contract made between her and deceased relating to marriage and making over policy to her. Ables v. Ackley, 133 Mo. App. 594, 113 SW 698. Husband of plaintiff, suing claim for services against father's estate, incompetent to testify to contract which he, as agent for plaintiff, made with decedent, under Rev. St. 1899, § 4652. Jackson v. Smith [Mo. App.] 118 SW 659. In suit for possession of land, prosecuted by heirs, after plaintiff's death, defendant was not competent to testify to transaction with decedent concerning land. Rev. St. 1895, art. 2302. Duncan v. Jouett [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 981. In action by depositor against bank to recover amount of checks sent by him to loan agent for supposed borrowers, whose indorsements on checks were forged by agent, real payees, whose names were forged by agent, were not incompetent after agent's death, not being in privity with agent. Lieber v. Fourth Nat. Bank [Mo. App.] 117 SW 672.

18. The word "transaction," in Code Civ. Proc. § 329, embraces every variety of affairs by way of negotiations, actions or contracts. Wilson v. Wilson [Neb.] 120 NW 147. Held that witness took part in conversation between decedent and another, hence incompetent to testify thereto. Wise v. Outtrim [Iowa] 117 NW 264. In suit to compel transfer of certain property of decedent on ground that it had been willed to her under agreement that she was to will it to his relatives, his nephew, who was a party, was incompetent to testify to conversation between the two persons deceased, which was intended as explanation to him of their agreement. Tebbs v. Jarvis [Iowa] 116 NW 708. Husband of proponent of will, in contest where later will was alleged, incompetent to testify that testator had often told him to have nothing to do with person who drew alleged later will. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667. Defendant in ejectment, claiming under grantor under whom plaintiff claimed, was incompetent to testify that he saw deed under which plaintiff claimed, when it appeared the deed had been shown him in course of transaction with grantor, since deceased. Chase v. Woodruff [Wis.] 120 NW 499. In suit on note by trustee under will of deceased payee, defendant produced another note endorsed "'old note lost, if found canceled by this," and a receipt for interest. Held, his testimony that endorsement and receipt referred to note sued on was incompetent under Code, § 4069. Jackman v. Inman, 137 Wis. 30, 118 NW 189. In suit by executor on two notes given testator, defendant, who claimed second note was given in payment of first and for small cash payment, was incompetent to testify to the form in which he received the money —number and denomination of bills—since transaction with deceased was thus disclosed. McCandless v. Mobley, 81 S. C. 303, 62 SE 260. Where plaintiff sought to be adjudged owner of land willed by deceased to her husband, plaintiff was not competent to testify that certain book entries in evidence represented payments by her to deceased to apply on purchase price of land. Smith v. Scott [Wash.] 98 P 763. In action on note against maker's estate, plaintiff could not testify as to whether she had note in her possession at certain time, since this involved delivery, and transaction with decedent. Wilber v. Gillespie, 127 App. Div. 604, 112 NYS 20. Nor could plaintiff testify that she had seen testator write his name, in order to qualify her as witness to his signature, this also involving transactions with decedent. Id. Claimant against estate could not refresh his memory by referring to entries in books of account relating to transactions with decedent, and then testify to such transactions. Dohman v. Blum's Estate, 137 Wis. 560, 119 NW 349. Widow, seeking to participate in husband's estate, incompetent to testify that when she signed antenuptial contract, renouncing dower rights, she thought she was signing something else. In re Robinson's Estate, 222 Pa. 113, 70 A 966.

19. In action against executor on note executed by decedent, plaintiff could not testify to any fact occurring before death of decedent. Rooker v. Samuels [Cal. App.] 101 P 689. In malpractice action, patient having died, defendants were not competent to testify as to matters occurring before patient's death. Wilkins v. Brocks, 81 Vt. 332, 70 A 572.

20. In suit by trustee of decedent's estate to recover property leased by decedent, for nonpayment of rent, defendant was incompetent to prove verbal modification of lease by decedent. Goebel v. Look, 153 Mich. 204, 15 Det. Leg. N. 403, 116 NW 1078. In action to recover possession of land under deed from defendant to plaintiff's testator, defendant is not competent to testify to transactions or matters occurring at time of transfer, to prove that deed was not intended as absolute conveyance. Parker v. Case [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1122, 119 NW 1081.

21. Surviving party to transaction constituting donatio causa mortis not qualified to testify to fact that closed parcel handed her remained closed until donor's death, or to contents of parcel when opened. Van Wagenen v. Bonnot [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 43. In suit in which it was claimed that certain conveyances were advancements, daughter of decedent was incompetent to,

It does not exclude testimony as to conversations between decedent and third persons in which witness took no part,[22] nor testimony to facts independent of any transaction or communication with decedent.[23] A party may deny a transaction with a decedent [24] but cannot give his version of it where it is conclusively shown testify in her own behalf, under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 522, that certain record book was kept by her father as record of transfers and gifts to children. Stauffer v. Martin [Ind.. App.] 88 NE 363. In action on note by legatees of one who bought note in ordinary course of business (accomodation), makers could not testify to facts surrounding execution and sale of note, when there was no proof that decedent knew of such facts. Keenan v. Blue, 240 Ill. 177, 88 NE 553.

22. Code, § 4604, does not exclude conversation between decedent and third person in which witness did not participate. Wise v. Outtrim [Iowa] 117 NW 264; Culbertson v. Salinger [Iowa] 117 NW 6. Witnesses properly allowed to testify to conversations with decedent which they overheard but did not participate in, but should not be allowed to give statements addressed to themselves. McBride v. McBride [Iowa] 120 NW 709.

23. Action on note executed by married woman by her husband. After husband's death, payee could testify to any fact independent of any communication or transaction with deceased agent, as that he was solvent and knew that married woman could not be surety. Swearingen's Executor & Trustee v. Tyler [Ky.] 116 SW 331. Testimony by defendant as to disposition of trust fund, after death of beneficiary, did not involve any contract with decedent. Collins v. Crawford, 214 Mo. 167, 112 SW 538. Code, 1896, § 1794, does not exclude proof of the testimony of a party, since deceased, at a former trial, no "communication" or "transaction" with deceased in any individual sense being involved. Tutwiler v. Burns [Ala.] 49 S 455. Executor and devisee under will properly allowed to testify that he drove to store with testator, that testator entered store, and that other persons were there, and to describe the position of the paper, which testator had, and the parties. Umstead v. Bowling [N. C.] 64 SE 368. Question to administrator whether he had admitted, in statement to certain persons, that certain money borrowed by decedent had been invested by him (administrator) in certain way, did not call for matter inhibited by Civ. Code 1896, § 1794. Blue v. Blue [Ala.] 46 S 751. In an action on note executed by married woman by her husband acting as her agent, she was competent to testify, after husband's death, that she did not receive any of proceeds. Swearingen's Executor & Trustee v. Tyler [Ky.] 116 SW 331. In action on contract executed for plaintiff by his son, since deceased, plaintiff could testify that son executed contract under his direction and in his presence, and in defendant's presence. Mariner v. Wiens [Wis.] 119 NW 340. In suit to determine whether instrument was will, witness, named in purported will as member of advisory committee, was not, even if "interested," incompetent to testify that he himself kept papers in safe, where instrument was found, to show that it was proper place for will. Harper v. Harper, 148 N. C. 453, 62 SE 553. Issue in suit between father and daughter was delivery of deed running to his deceased wife. Father could testify that he kept deed in envelope, at place of business, and that wife never saw it, unless at time of its destruction, though he told her of its existence. Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120, 15 Det. Leg. N. 424, 117 NW 213. One seeking to prove claim for services as domestic against estate may testify as to work required to care for decedent's household, though she cannot testify as to services performed by her. Wise v. Outtrim [Iowa] 117 NW 264. Claimant against estate (for services) may testify to independent acts done by him if he does not testify to transactions with decedent, and if he connects his acts with decedent by other competent testimony. Fitch v. Martin [Neb.] 119 NW 25. But it is improper to examine him as to his acts, assuming that they were done for decedent, this being very matter in issue. Fitch v. Martin [Neb.] 119 NW 25. In action by administrator to recover on note given decedent, his testimony as to conversation with defendant, in which conversation with decedent was incidentally mentioned by them, was not violation of Rev. Laws 1905, § 4663. Peters v. Schultz [Minn] 119 NW 385. In action for malpractice, plaintiff, husband of decedent, having testified to contract of employment made by him with defendant, defendant had right to testify thereto, since exception in Pub. St. 1906, § 1590, makes party competent as to contract made with person who is living and competent to testify. Wilkins v. Brock, 81 Vt. 332, 70 A 572. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 522, does not disqualify party in suit to contest validity of will from testifying to friendly relations between herself and testator, this being matter open to observation; statute is aimed at matters known only to party and decedent. Brelsford v. Aldridge [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1090. "Transaction" means action participated in by witness and decedent. Clifton v. Meuser [Kan.] 100 P 645. Party may not testify to his own conduct if in so doing he necessarily attributes to decedent same act or attitude with respect thereto; thus he may not testify to the rendition of services of such character that it is necessarily inferred that decedent acquiesced therein. Id. In action against administrator for nursing, boarding and caring for decedent, plaintiff is incompetent to testify to rendition of such services unless circumstances are shown to be such that acquiescence by decedent is not necessarily implied. Id. One prosecuting claim against estate is not incompetent to testify to transactions with living agent of decedent. Montague v. Priester [S. C.] 64 SE 393.

24. In suit by grantor to cancel record of deed after grantee's death, action being to have occurred.[25] Matters collateral to the issue are not within the rule.[26] A party may contradict testimony of a deceased party given at a former hearing and read in evidence.[27]

Waiver or removal of disqualification. See 10 C. L. 2088—The disqualification may be waived by the representative of the decedent,[28] and it is waived where he himself examines the witness [29] or consents to the examination of a witness, otherwise incompetent,[30] or permits his examination without objection,[31] or offers evidence as to transactions with the decedent;[32] but such waiver removes the disqualification only as to matters brought out by the decedent's representative.[33] The Illinois statute, making a party competent when the agent of a decedent has testified, does not apply where the agent's interest is adverse to that of decedent and the estate.[34]

§ 4. Privileged communications, and persons in confidential relations. A. Attorney and client.[35] See 10 C. L. 2089—Confidential communications between attorney and client are privileged and cannot be testified to by the attorney without the consent of the client.[36] This rule of privilege should be strictly construed [37] and against his heirs, grantor may testify that he never signed, executed or acknowledged the deed, since this is merely denying any transaction with deceased. Blount v. Blount [Ala.] 48 S 581.

25. Party may deny any transaction with decedent, claimed by others to have taken place, but if such transaction be conclusively shown he cannot give his version of it. Blount v. Blount [Ala.] 48 S 581.

26. Rule making other party to contract incompetent when one is dead, not applicable, where proponent of will, who was given by it land at certain price according to a contract previously made, testified, in contest by other heirs, that she waived claim against decedent in consideration of contract; contract was only collateral issue, will being main issue; proponent competent. In re Mason's Will [Vt.] 72 A 329.

27. Tanner v. Clapp, 139 Ill. App. 353.

28. Administrator may waive statute and permit other party to testify. Cowles v. Cowles' Estate, 81 Vt. 498, 71 A 191. Where an administrator's claim is set out in his account, and no other party appears at hearing or objects to claim, he may testify in his own behalf; need not, as administrator, object to his own evidence. In re Porter's Estate, 60 Misc. 504, 113 NYS 928.

29. Where administrator suing to recover notes and securities from son of deceased, who claimed to hold as trustee, cross-examined latter as to transactions with deceased, privilege was waived as to such matters and son was competent to testify thereto. Mollison v. Rittgers [Iowa] 118 NW 512.

30. Privilege waived, where administrator consented to examination of claimant by attorney for two heirs, in hearing on claim. Cowles v. Cowles' Estate, 81 Vt. 498, 71 A 191.

31. Where plaintiff was examined by attorney for two heirs in hearing before commissioners, administrator being present and not objecting, being interested in matter in issue, he waived privilege, and waiver bound him in hearing on appeal. Cowles v. Cowles' Estate, 81 Vt. 498, 71 A 191. Objection to competency of witness under Code, § 4604, must be made at trial, not first considered on appeal. Amidon v. Snouffer [Iowa] 117 NW 44.

32. Where plaintiff, in rebuttal of defendant's defense in action on notes given plaintiff's intestate, introduced evidence of transactions between defendant and decedent, defendant may testify as to such transactions in surrebuttal. Anderson v. Anderson, 136 Wis. 328, 117 NW 801.

33. In suit by administrator to recover funds in hands of defendant, daughter of deceased, proof of plaintiff of admissions by defendant tending to show that she claimed and had such funds did not make her competent to testify as to conversations with deceased. Campbell v. Sech [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1105, 119 NW 922. In action against heirs for specific performance of contract with decedent, testimony of heirs as to other matters did not make party to contract competent to testify in regard to it. Richardson v. Isaacs [Ky.] 118 SW 1003. In action on contract by decedent to pay for services, representatives of the estate reproduced in evidence without objection part of plaintiff's testimony relating to the transaction with decedent, given on the hearing on her claim in the county court. Held, they waived the privilege, and plaintiff could testify as to entire transaction. Russell v. Close's Estate [Neb.] 119 NW 515. Where claimant refreshed his memory by referring to entries, and was cross-examined as to the same, it was improper to admit all in evidence, when they related to transactions with deceased; only those covered in cross-examination were competent. Fitch v. Martin [Neb.] 119 NW 25.

34. Where one alleged to be decedent's agent was called by party adverse to administratrix, and his interest was adverse to intestate at time in issue and at time of trial, Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 51, § 2, did not apply. Elwell v. Hicks, 238 Ill. 170, 87 NE 316.

should not be extended to cases not within its purpose.[38] Thus, communications should not be held privileged unless the relation of attorney and client in fact existed at the time [39] or was contemplated,[40] and unless the communications to, or knowledge gained by the attorney were in fact confidential [41] and imparted to him in his professional capacity [42] to enable him to counsel and advise his client.[43] Thus, communications in the presence of third parties,[44] or afterwards repeated in the presence of third parties,[45] or which are intended to be communicated to others,[46] are not privileged. Communications made to an attorney, who at the time is act-

McWhirter [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1053. Improper to cause wife of accused to disclose communications between her and accused's counsel. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 111, 111 SW 24. Under Rev. Laws 1905, § 4660, subd. 2, communications to law clerk employed by attorney are privileged. Hillary v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 104 Minn. 432, 116 NW 933.

37. Phillips v. Chase, 201 Mass. 444, 87 NE 755.

38. Where the controversy is to determine who shall take by succession the property of a deceased person, the reason for the privilege does not exist and neither can set up a claim of privilege against the other. Phillips v. Chase, 201 Mass. 444, 87 NE 755. Purpose of privilege is to protect free communication; has tendency to prevent disclosure of truth; hence, should not be extended to cases without purpose of rule. Hyman v. Grant [Tex.] 112 SW 1042.

39. Communications by prisoner to one not his attorney not privileged. Lonasa v. State [Md.] 71 A 1058.

40. Interviews and negotiations looking to the establishment of relation between the parties would be privileged. Communications by prisoner to lawyer not within this rule. Lonasa v. State [Md.] 71 A 1058.

41. Mere existence of relation of attorney and client does not make the attorney incompetent, except as to privileged communications. Stoddard v. Kendall [Iowa] 119 NW 138. Confidential relation not violated by attorney's affidavit that his client, erroneously named in another affidavit, was person who signed it. In re Jones [Del.] 70 A 15. Letter from party to an attorney, concerning book in latter's possession, held not to contain any confidential statement; not privileged. Taplin v. Marcy, 81 Vt. 428, 71 A 72. Statement by grantor to his attorney to show that delivery of deed in escrow to third person was intended was not privileged. Maxwell v. Harper [Wash.] 98 P 756. Attorney, who had been employed by client in several suits, asked him concerning his relation to another, who desired the attorney's services, his purpose being to avoid taking a suit in which he would represent interests adverse to his client. Held, this communication was not confidential nor privileged. Mayers v. Fogarty [Iowa] 119 NW 159. In disbarment proceedings, an attorney associated with defendant in cause in which defendant was charged with attempt to practice a fraud upon the court by making a false affidavit was called to testify to existence and use of affidavit, and conversations with their client regarding it. Held, this did not involve any privileged matter. In re Watson [Neb.] 119 NW 451.

42. Fact must have been communicated to or learned by attorney when he was acting as such for client. Hyman v. Grant [Tex.] 112 SW 1042. Statute excludes only confidential communications properly intrusted to him in his professional capacity to enable him to counsel and advise client. Stoddard v. Kendall [Iowa] 119 NW 138; Moyers v. Fogarty [Iowa] 119 NW 159. Communications between loan agent and borrower, in response to questions by agent made for his own purpose to give borrower unsolicited advice, were not privileged though agent was an attorney, no confidential relation existing between them. In re Huffman's Estate, 132 Mo. App. 44, 111 SW 848. Plaintiff and defendant called on an attorney to secure her services in negotiating a loan to plaintiff. Attorney was acting for defendant in a pending matter, but was not defendant's attorney in securing loan. Communications between plaintiff and attorney in defendant's presence not privileged. Gerety v. O'Sheehan [Cal. App.] 99 P 545. Communications to an attorney are not confidential and privileged from proof against the person making them unless made to the attorney as such. Mere casual personal conversations are not privileged. Coker v. Oliver, 4 Ga. App. 728, 62 SE 483.

43. The communications must relate to professional advice and to the subject-matter about which such advice is sought. Lanasa v. State [Md.] 71 A 1058. Attorney did not establish privilege as to letters demanded of him by merely showing their delivery to him by third person, it not appearing that they were delivered to him as an attorney nor for purpose of obtaining advice nor for use in litigation. In re Niday, 15 Idaho, 559, 98 P 845.

44. Statements by client at conference between himself and his attorney, and another party and his attorney not privileged. People v. Andre, 153 Mich. 531, 15 Det. Leg. N. 503, 117 NW 55.

45. Where a statement to an attorney is afterwards repeated in the presence and hearing of third persons, it is no longer privileged. People v. Farmer, 194 N. Y. 251, 87 NE 457.

46. Statements by a client to his attorney to be communicated to a third person are not privileged. Model Clothing House v. Hirsch [Ind. App.] 85 NE 719. Special authorization from client to attorney to compromise a suit is not privileged communication, since it is intended to be made known to other party. Trenton St. R. Co. v. Lawlor [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 234.

ing only as scrivener, are not privileged,[47] though there seems to be a conflict as to communications made to one engaged in drawing a will.[48] Where the privilege is claimed, it is proper for the court to take testimony on the question whether the statements were made in the course of professional employment,[49] and the determination of that question by the trial court, based on conflicting evidence, is conclusive on appeal.[50] The burden of showing that matter is privileged rests upon the party objecting [51] or the person claiming the privilege.[52] The privilege cannot be used to cover a transaction which is itself a crime [53] or which is fraudulent.[54] Disclosure of a communication is not prohibited in so far as it is necessary to enable a public officer to perform an act in his official capacity.[55] An attorney may be compelled to produce documents in his possession belonging to his client,[56] provided the party himself could be compelled to produce them.[57] It is held that an attorney may be required to disclose the name and address of a party.[58]

The privilege is for the protection and benefit of the client and may by him be waived.[59] Thus, the privilege is waived where the client himself testifies in regard to the privileged matters,[60] provided such testimony is voluntarily given.[61] Where

47. Testimony of one who is mere scrivener of deed not privileged. Potter v. Barringer, 236 Ill. 224, 86 NE 233. Where attorney was employed simply to write out notes, relation of attorney and client not existing, attorney could testify to consideration for note. O'Connor v. Padget [Neb.] 116 NW 1131. One acting merely as scrivener, preparing deeds according to grantor's directions, may testify though an attorney, since he was not acting as such at time. Conway v. Rock [Iowa] 117 NW 273.

48. Attorney for proponents in will contest competent to testify to writing will for testator in 1903, and to surrounding circumstances. His relation to proponents at time went to weight of his testimony, not to his competency. Ross v. Ross [Iowa] 117 NW 1105. Mere fact that attorney is employed to draw will does not render him incompetent to testify to statements then made to him, not confidential or given with view to obtaining advice. Stoddard v. Kendall [Iowa] 119 NW 138. Attorney who drew will cannot testify to its contents, will being lost, unless there is waiver of privilege. In re Cunnion's Will, 61 Misc. 546, 115 NYS 969.

51. Burden is on party objecting to show communications to attorney, confidential and privileged. Stoddard v. Kendall [Iowa] 119 NW 138; Moyers v. Fogarty [Iowa] 119 NW 159.

52. When an attorney declines to testify or produce documents, the burden is upon him to show the privileged character of the communications or documents. In re Niday, 15 Idaho, 559, 98 P 845. He need not disclose the contents of the documents nor the import of the communications, but he must show the existence of the relation of attorney and client, and that the documents were received or the communications made during its existence and while he was acting in his professional capacity. 53. Communication made to attorney and notary by person forging and falsely acknowledging deed is not priviledged. People v. Farmer, 194 N. Y. 251, 87 NE 457.

54. Where attorney, with no interest in land, made a deed to another and had it recorded to establish title by limitation, the act was not priviledged, but, if done in his professional character, was wrongful in aid of fraud and could be proved. Hyman v. Grant [Tex.] 112 SW 1042.

55. As where attorney took acknowledgment to deed as notary public. People v. Farmer, 194 N. Y. 251, 87 NE 457.

56. Since parties may now be compelled to produce documents, attorneys having such documents in their possession may also be compelled to disclose them; cannot refuse on ground of privilege. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650.

57. An attorney cannot be compelled to produce copy of testimony of witnesses to will, which they could not be compelled to produce because of Pub. St. 1901, c. 224, § 14, his possession being their possession. Ex parte Snow [N. H.] 70 A 120.

58. It is proper to require an attorney to disclose the address of his client in order that an order of the court may be served. Order to pay alimony; motion to require disclosure by attorney granted. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 62 Misc. 53, 115 NYS 965. Where purpose of examination of attorney is to get name and address of necessary party, attorney cannot plead privilege or lack of knowledge to avoid examination as witness before trial. Schwarz v. Robinson, 129 App. Div. 404, 113 NYS 995.

59. Phillips v. Chase, 201 Mass. 444, 87 NE 755.

60. Where client testified fully to conversation with attorney, he waived privilege; attorney could thereafter testify. Corney v. Paxton & Gallagher Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 14. Where party told of transactions between himself and his attorney, latter was properly allowed to testify fully in regard thereto, when called by adverse party. Kelly v. Cummens [Iowa] 121 NW 540. Where client testifies to his version of transaction between himself, attorney, and third person, attorney may also testify as to his understanding of it. Fearnley v. Fearnley [Colo.] 98 P 819.

there is a controversy after the client's death between his estate and those claiming adversely to it, the privilege may be waived by his executor or administrator, or by his heirs.[62] Where the client requests that a communication shall be made known to others after his death, there is an implied waiver of privilege.[63] The privilege as to communications made to an attorney in course of preparation of a will can, in New York, be waived only by an express waiver at the trial or hearing, or by the attorney's becoming a subscribing witness.[64] A waiver as to the fact of execution of the will and surrounding conditions, by publishing the will to the witnesses, would not make the attorney competent as to the contents of the will, when he was not a subscribing witness.[65]

As a general rule an attorney connected with a case should not testify therein without first withdrawing from the case,[66] but, where a witness has given testimony reflecting upon the professional character of an attorney necessarily present during the trial, he should be allowed to testify.[67] Counsel for one party may be called to testify by the adverse party as to matters not privileged, when there is a reasonable necessity for so doing.[68]

(§ 4) B. Physician and patient.[69]—See 10 C. L. 2091—Communications to, and information acquired by, a physician while acting in his professional capacity are privileged,[70] but, a physician may testify as to the general nature and value of his services,[71] and also as to facts concerning the patient, knowledge of which was not gained while acting in a professional capacity.[72] The privilege attaches as to the physician and patient, notwithstanding the presence of others,[73] though the third persons are competent to testify to communications heard by them.[74] Some statutes make privileged information gained by a professional nurse while acting in her

70. Physician incompetent as to matters learned while treating patient professionally, but competent as to matters not connected with professional relation. Landers v. Quincy, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 543. Physician could not testify to communications by patient as to manner of injury without patient's consent, nor could patient be compelled to testify thereto. Indiana Union Trac. Co. v. Thomas [Ind. App.] 88 NE 356. Physician in charge of hospital where plaintiff was sent, who examined plaintiff daily, could not testify to his treatment and condition, though he did not personally treat or prescribe for plaintiff, other assistants being under physician's supervision. Beave v. St. Louis Transit Co., 212 Mo. 331, 111 SW 52. Discretion of court in excluding as privileged testimony of physicians not reviewed by appellate court. Valleroy v. Knights of Columbus [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1130. In view of Code, § 1073 (31 Stat. 1358, c. 854), in an action on a policy of life insurance, it was not error to refuse to allow a physician, who had testified generally as to the health of the patient, to answer questions as to the nature of the disease. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Lear, 31 App. D. C. 184.

professional capacity.[75] A death certificate, executed by the attending physician pursuant to statute, is a public record, and its contents are not privileged.[76] Information gained while examining an applicant for insurance is not privileged.[77] It has been held reversible error for counsel to comment on the refusal of plaintiff, in a personal injury action, to allow his physician to testify.[78]

Waiver.—See 10 C. L. 2092—The privilege is personal to the patient and may be waived by him.[79] Thus, the privilege is waived where the patient himself testifies as to the privileged matters,[80] or calls the physician to testify in his behalf,[81] or allows him to testify without objection.[82] But such waiver extends only to matters as to which the patient offers evidence, or allows it to be introduced.[83] The privilege may be waived by the personal representative of the patient, after the latter's death,[84] where the object is to conserve the interests of the estate;[85] he cannot waive it for his own benefit, as in a proceeding to remove him.[86] The privilege, once waived, cannot be recalled,[87] even in a subsequent proceeding of a different nature.[88] A contract by which an applicant for insurance waives the privilege as to attending physicians is valid and binding.[89]

(§ 4) C. Husband and wife.[90]—See 10 C. L. 2092—Both at common law and by statute, in many jurisdictions, confidential communications between husband and wife are privileged,[91] and the privilege is not removed by death or divorce.[92] Mat-

Krenz v. Lee, 104 Minn. 455, 116 NW 832. Though court finds two witnesses whose testimony conflicts both honest and equally credible in character, he may nevertheless find the facts as testified to by one who is corroborated by other evidence. Elzy v. Adams Exp. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 705. There is no such thing as legal equality of credibility of witnesses; the testimony of each is to be weighed and given value according to its character, the demeanor of the witnesses, and probability or improbability of testimony. Brethauer v. Schorer [Conn.] 70 A 592. If party testifies in his own behalf, the jury may consider his interest in the been successfully impeached [8] are questions for the jury or trial court exclusively,[9] in considering which, the appearance and demeanor of the witness [10] may be considered as well as other matters shown on the issue of credibility. The uncorroborated testimony of witnesses believed to have willfully testified falsely to a material fact may be wholly disregarded.[11]

Impeaching and discrediting in general.—See 10 C. L. 2095—Cross-examination for the purpose of impeaching a witness is proper,[12] the extent of such examination being a matter resting in the trial court's discretion.[13] In general, the testimony suit in determining the credit to be given his testimony. Mansfield v. Chicago B. & R. R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 552. In a prosecution for abortion, the woman having morally implicated herself in the act, the jury should consider that fact as bearing upon her credibility. Thompson v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 352.

Note: The province of court and jury in this respect is fully treated in the topics Instructions, 12 C. L. 218, and Discontinuance, Dismissal, and Nonsuit, 11 C. L. 1093, while the rule that an appellate court will not reverse a verdict depending on the credibility of witnesses is treated in Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 230.

8. Credibility of witnesses for jury, though they have been impeached. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Kitts' Adm'r [Va] 63 SE 455. Whether witness has been successfully impeached, and whether he is corroborated, for jury; charge approved. Arnold v. State, 131 Ga. 494, 62 SE 806. Whether witness has been successfully impeached, so as to require corroboration, is for jury. Southern R. Co. v. Peek [Ga. App.] 64 SE 308. That witness gave different and inconsistent testimony on former trial tends strongly to impeach him but does not conclude him as matter of law. Krenz v. Lee, 104 Minn. 455, 116 NW 832. Though effort has been made to impeach witness by proof of contradictory statements, jury may believe him though uncorroborated. Sims v. Scheussler [Ga. App.] 64 SE 99. That witness has willfully testified falsely to any material fact does not warrant jury in totally disregarding his corroborated testimony; they may judge of his credibility and give his testimony such weight as it is entitled to. Johnson v. Johnson [Neb.] 115 NW 323.

9. Credibility of interested witnesses must be submitted to jury. Baker v. Hart, 129 App. Div. 511, 113 NYS 1053. No instruction on the effect of impeaching evidence is necessary where it is such that it could not be used for any other purpose. Waters v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 628. Instructions on credibility of witnesses not erroneous. Vails v. State [Miss.] 48 S 725.

10. Appearance and manner of witness may be considered on issue of credibility, but is not controlling. His testimony should be considered in determining whether he is man of ordinary intelligence. Rahles v. Thompson & Sons Mfg. Co., 137 Wis. 506, 119 NW 289.

11. Rule "falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus" has many limitations; it is for courts and juries to sift out true from false, corroboration being important factor in so doing. Jewell v. Kelley [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1018, 118 NW 987. Discrepancy between testimony of witness and testimony given at another time may be considered by jury, but they are not at liberty to disregard his testimony entirely unless they find that he willfully testified falsely to a material fact. Gullen v. Battle Island Paper Co., 128 App. Div. 369, 112 NYS 934. If a witness willfully testifies falsely to any material matter, the jury may, if it sees fit, but is not bound to reject all of such witness' testimony not corroborated by other credible evidence. Miller v. State [Wis.] 119 NW 850.

Instructions held not erroneous. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Seale [Ala.] 49 S 323. Instruction erroneous. Tucker v. Dudley, 127 App. Div. 403, 111 NYS 700. Instruction erroneous because omitting word "willfully" or "knowingly." Lack v. Weber, 61 Misc. 91, 113 NYS 102. Requested instructions properly refused; false swearing must be willfully done; must relate to material matters. Patton v. State [Ala.] 46 S 862. Instruction "if you believe that any witness 'knowingly' testified falsely," etc., equivalent to use of word "willfully." Peterson v. Pusey, 237 Ill. 204, 86 NE 692. Proper to instruct that testimony of witness testifying falsely as to any point could be wholly disregarded unless corroborated by other testimony, and that truth of witness' testimony was for jury alone. Malinowski v. Detroit United R. Co., 154 Mich. 104, 15 Det. Leg. N. 693, 117 NW 565. If jury finds that witness has willfully testified falsely as to any material fact, they may disregard all his testimony, except as it is corroborated by other credible evidence. Instruction omitting word "credible" properly refused. Blankavag v. Badger Box & Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 380, 117 NW 852.

12. See Examination of Witnesses, 11 C. L. 1420.

13. Extent of cross-examination for purpose of discrediting witness largely discretionary. State v. Phillips, 105 Minn. 375, 117 NW 508; Thompson v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 352. Fact that witness is interested in result of a suit is one that may always be brought out. Crook v. International Trust Co., 32 App. D. C. 490. Held error for trial court not to allow party to prove by cross-examination that witness tried to influence one of the jurors in the case. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Black, 133 Ill. App. 84. Extent of cross-examination to affect credibility rests in court's discretion. Barbieri v. Messner, 106 Minn. 102, 118 NW 258. Where defendant had benefit of full cross-examination of witness, showing him to be convicted as accomplice, etc., it was not error to exclude questions asking for his true name, he having admitted an assumed name. State v. Jones [Wash.] 101 P 708. Cross interrogatories will not be allowed to

of a witness may be discredited by proving the facts to be contrary to those testified to by him,[14] or tending to show such testimony improbable,[15] or by showing acts [16] or statements [17] of the witness, or other circumstances,[18] inconsistent with his testimony [19] or tending in some manner to discredit it or the witness.[20] Intoxication of discredit witness as to particular act and conduct having no bearing upon the issues involved. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 45 S 260.

14. Witness may be impeached by disproving facts testified to by him. Clark v. State, 5 Ga. App. 605, 63 SE 606. In action on contract, proof of payments, denied by plaintiff as witness, competent on issue of his credibility. Axel v. Kraemer, 75 N. J. Law 688, 70 A 367. Plaintiff having testified to rating with commercial agency, its report was competent to impeach him. Rainey v. Kemp. [Tex Civ. App.] 118 SW 630. Defendant having testified to certain trip, describing route and town, and having been cross-examined thereon, could be contradicted as to his description. Emerson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 834. Having denied conversation with another as to turning state's evidence, accused could be contradicted by proving it. Dennis v. State [Ark.] 114 SW 926. Where accused testified to certain acts of mistreatment of his son by decedent's son, state could prove by latter that he had not done certain act testified to by accused. Stacy v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 461, 110 SW 901. Proof of particular transactions may be made to contradict a witness who has testified to general custom. Rose v. Lewis [Ala.] 48 S 105. Where plaintiff claimed and testified to damage on account of burning of timber on land, it was proper to impeach him by asking if some one else did not own the timber. Gay v. Roanoke R. & Lumber Co., 148 N. C. 336, 62 SE 436.

15. Any evidence tending to show improbability of plaintiff's testimony, such as strained relations with one adversely interested, competent. Lord v. Rumrill, 130 App. Div. 279, 114 NYS 488. Section foreman testified that ties at place of wreck were in good condition, and that he had burned broken ties after wreck. Proper to read to him rule requiring preservation of broken ties, axles, etc., in case of wreck, to determine cause, and ask him if it was a rule of the company. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 365. Theory of defense in homicide case was suicide, and deceased's father testified that she had always been cheerful and happy. Error to refuse to allow accused to show on cross-examination that deceased had previously attempted suicide, and that doctor had warned witness to watch her. Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 68. Where accused testified that he did not know until few days before trial to whom he was accused of selling liquor, when he signed bail bond, and employed counsel, could be proved. Taylor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 942.

16. Conduct of witness, a party, inconsistent with claims and testimony on trial, could be shown on cross-examination. Czarnecki v. Derecktor [Conn.] 71 A 354. Where plaintiff denied settlement, whether he had commenced and dismissed suit was competent as affecting his credibility. Lindstrom v. Fitzpatrick, 105 Minn. 331, 117 NW 441. Defendant having testified that he had never had any pig iron in his possession, proof that he had offered to sell some which he said he expected to receive was competent to contradict him. People v. Feinberg, 237 Ill. 348, 86 NE 584. Where plaintiff testified that land, title to which was in issue, was accretions to his land, proper to prove that he offered to buy it from county, and made application for it. Lee v. Conran, 213 Mo. 404, 111 SW 1151.

17. See post, § D.

18. Proof of loss of book, in which plaintiff claimed he had kept account, competent as contradicting him. Barnes v. Loomis, 199 Mass. 578, 85 NE 862.

19. Held not inconsistent with testimony: Where it was not claimed that defendant's testimony on trial was inconsistent with that given in police court, it was improper to show that he had made statement in trial that he had not made in police court. State v. Cook, 132 Mo. App. 167, 112 SW 710. Where witness testified that one contractor was employed for certain work but could not do it, evidence on cross-examination to show that contractor was sick was not competent to contradict witness, who had not testified to any reason why contractor failed. Theobald v. Shepard Bros. [N. H.] 71 A 26. Where witness testified that he entered into conspiracy to steal through fear, evidence of his reputation as an overbearing negro, and that other negroes were afraid of him, was incompetent. Choice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 132. Witnesses having testified that they did not work steam on locomotive down certain grade and through certain station, they could not be contradicted by proof of custom to work steam at those places 10 years before. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86. That information was voluntarily given by plaintiff to defendant that assault occurred on car 3717, when action was for assault on car 3771, was not enough to show bad faith of plaintiff, and wholly discredit his testimony. Cohen v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 115 NYS 1101.

20. Testimony directly attacking credibility of witness competent. Tuttle v. Shutts, 43 Colo. 534, 96 P 260. Any fact or circumstance that would tend to throw light on credibility of witness or that would assist jury in weighing testimony, is proper. The age, business, condition of witness, whether married or single, and whether he has children, may be proper. Georgia So. & F. R. Co. v. Ransom, 5 Ga. App. 740, 63 SE 525. Where plaintiff testified to promise of marriage by defendant, a contract signed by her, releasing claims for damages growing out of their relations, was competent to discredit her. Lauer v. Banning [Iowa] 118 NW 446. Admission of witness that he wrote letters to creditors of insolvent, which contained falsehoods, to deceive them, the witness at the time of the occurrence of the facts to which he testifies may be shown.[21] What takes place between an attorney and his witnesses may be shown only when some fraud or corruption is involved.[22] That a witness claimed his privilege and refused to testify at a coroner's inquest cannot be shown to impeach him in a subsequent trial.[23] Testimony should not, however, be rejected because the witness has belittled or exaggerated some material fact.[24]

A party cannot ordinarily impeach his own witness[25]—See 10 C. L. 2098 by attacking his reputation for veracity or by proving contradictory statements[26] unless he has been deceived and entrapped by the witness[27] who has given affirmative[28] and prejudicial[29] testimony, but he is not precluded from proving facts differing from those testified to by his witness,[30] and, if the witness is a party, so that statements lessened effect of his testimony. Brewer v. Johnson [Ark.] 112 SW 364. That one known to be owner of valuable property has appealed in forma pauperis may be considered by jury as circumstance bearing on credibility of affiant as witness in case. Leake v. King Dry Goods Co., 5 Ga. App. 102, 62 SE 729. Impeaching evidence may be considered on credibility of witness, though it does not absolutely falsify the testimony of the witness. Schwartz v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 809. Action for balance due on sale. Proof that plaintiff said to his partner that there would be a law suit, and that he would give him (partner) half of what he could beat defendant out of, was competent to impeach plaintiff. Hamilton v. Dismukes [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 1181. Where witness was not requested to appear at hearing on claim and had not been subpoenaed, his failure to appear and testify could not be shown to discredit his testimony at trial. Spring v. Perkins [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 127, 120 NW 807.

21. Proof of intoxication of plaintiff at time of injury, competent, on issue of credibility as witness. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. O'Conner [Ind.] 85 NE 969. That witness was drunk at time concerning which he testified could be shown, this bearing on credibility of testimony. Green v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 490, 110 SW 920. Proper to show intoxication of state's witness at time of occurrence of facts he testified to, but not intoxication an hour and a half later. Pollock v. State, 136 Wis. 136, 116. NW 851.

22. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946.

23. Action for wrongful death. Conductor testified for defendant. Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. [Mo.] 118 SW 68.

24. The jury should give the testimony such weight as it deserves. Walker v. Chicago & Joliet Elec. R. Co., 142 Ill. App. 372. Testimony cannot be rejected unless witness has willfully and knowingly sworn falsely to some matter material in its character. Kinahan v. Butler, 133 Ill. App. 459.

25. Plaintiff could not ask her own witness, who testified differently from plaintiff, a question intended to discredit this testimony. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Northcutt [Ala.] 48 S 553. Plaintiff could not test accuracy of judgment of his own witness who testified how long train stopped by holding a watch on him. Dilburn v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 47 S 210. Prosecuting attorney may not impeach his witness, save under exceptional circumstances, but it is not improper to refresh his memory by reading from a transcript of his former testimony. People v. Iziar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685.

26. Lambert v. Armentrout [W. Va.] 64 SE 260. Party may cross-examine witness found to be adverse but cannot discredit him by proving previous contradictory statements. Berkowsky v. New York City R. Co., 127 App. Div. 544, 111 NYS 989.

27. Unless a witness has deceived and entrapped the party calling him, such party will not be permitted to impeach or discredit him by proving previous contradictory statements made, not to the party, but to others. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 SE 110. Party cannot contradict his own witness unless surprised, and cannot claim surprise when witness tells counsel what effect of testimony will be before going on stand. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crump [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 1013. Must appear that party claiming to have been entrapped learned from witness, and not from hearsay, what he expected witness to testify to. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 SE 110. It must appear that statements relied on to impeach witness were made to others than the party, and were unknown to the party, and that he was deceived and entrapped and damaged by testimony different from what he expected. Id.

28. Where a witness called by a party fails to give the expected testimony and gives no affirmative testimony, the party cannot prove previous statements made by witness. Bollinger v. Bollinger [Cal.] 99 P 196. Where witness called by defendant said he was not present at time of alleged negligent killing, defendant could not prove witness' former statement that decedent was killed trying to board a train. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crump [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 1013. Where witness does not give expected testimony, but does not give any affirmative testimony, the party calling him cannot prove statements made by him. People v. Duncan [Cal. App.] 96 P 414.

29. Under White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. § 795, state may show contradictory statements of witness called by it who gives testimony injurious to prosecution. Brown v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 820. Though party may impeach his own witness if he can show he has been entrapped by him by a previous statement (under Civ. Code 1895, § 5290), this rule does not apply where the witness' testimony is not prejudicial to party calling him. Nathan v. State, 131 Ga. 48, 61 SE 994.

30. Lambert v. Armentrout [W. Va.] 64 would be competent as admissions against interest, they may be proved though they contradict his testimony.[31]

A witness cannot ordinarily be contradicted or impeached as to collateral matters[32]—See 10 C. L. 2090 or as to illegal testimony [33] brought out on cross-examination.

(§ 5) B. Character and conduct of witnesses. 1. In general.[34]—See 10 C. L. 2100—Proof of the general moral character or reputation of the witness is admitted SE 260. One may contradict his own witness by showing the truth to be different from what the witness testified to. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 SE 110. While party cannot impeach his witness, he is not bound by testimony, but may show different state of facts. Rudd v. Dewey [Iowa] 116 NW 1062. Plaintiff not bound by testimony of witness called by her. Where she had other testimony, she was entitled to go to jury on issue raised. Collins v. Wells. Fargo & Co. Exp. [Iowa] 118 NW 401. While one cannot impeach a witness called by him, he may prove a state of facts contrary to those testified to by the witness. Koester v. Rochester Candy Works, 194 N. Y. 92, 87 NE 77. One cannot impeach or deny credibility of witness whom he calls, though he may show different state of facts. Barr v. Sofranski, 130 App. Div. 783, 115 NYS 533. Party calling witness vouches for his general credibility but not as to matters in regard to which he is to testify, and party is not bound by testimony, though he may not impeach witness. Becker v. Hart, 129 App. Div. 511, 113 NYS 1053. Party may not impeach his own witness but is not bound by his testimony and may prove different facts. State v. Shapiro [Mo.] 115 SW 1022. Held not improper to allow state to contradict witness called by it, and for court to charge that statements out of court so proved could not be considered as substantive evidence, but only as neutralizing testimony in conflict therewith. Commonwealth v. Deitrick, 221 Pa. 7, 70 A 275.

31. Lambert v. Armentrout [W. Va.] 64 SE 260. A party who calls the adverse party as witness under the statute, may contradict his testimony and prove previous statements under Ball. Ann. Codes & St., § 6008. Thomas v. Fos [Wash.] 98 P 663.

32. Immaterial and irrelevant testimony not open to contradiction. Casavan v. Sage, 201 Mass. 547, 87 NE 893; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. McCray [Ala.] 47 S 65; Pelham v. Chattahoochee Grocery Co. [Ala.] 47 S 172; Abbott v. Herron [Ark.] 118 SW 708; Hubbard v. Montgomery County [Iowa] 118 NW 912; Dronenburg v. Harris, 108 Md. 597, 71 A 81. Answers to collateral inquiries on cross-examination cannot be contradicted. Provencher v. Moore [Me.] 72 A 880. Party cross-examining as to collateral matters is concluded by witness' answers and cannot contradict him. State v. Dunn [Or.] 100 P 258. Impeaching evidence must relate to matter as to which witness testified. State v. Shapiro [Mo.] 115 SW 1022. Witness cannot be cross-examined and contradicted as to collateral fact which party could not prove in making his own case. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. No contradiction as to making certain immaterial statement as to what witness would have done if in plaintiff's place. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith [Ky.] 118 SW 933. In action for damages to wife, husband could not be cross-examined and impeached by proving statement as to claim by him against defendant for alleged injury at prior and different time. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. Witness cannot be impeached by proving his statement that suit was nothing but blackmail, this being mere opinion and immaterial. Georgetown W., Gas, Elec. & P. Co. v. Forwood [Ky.] 113 SW 112. Witness, who presented plaintiff's claim to defendant, could not be contradicted as to his testimony that claim did not contain item of damages for himself. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McAnellia [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 936. Where witness denied making certain statements as to wholly immaterial matters, he could not be contradicted as to them. Cooper v. State [Miss.] 49 S 178. Where witness denies making statement to certain person, and such person when called also denies that statement was made to him, a third witness cannot be permitted to contradict the second's testimony. State v. Walton [Or.] 99 P 431. Where defendant's witness denied on cross-examination that he had offered to testify for plaintiff if paid $25, proof by plaintiff that witness had made such offer was incompetent. Katz v. Brooklyn, etc. R. Co., 116 NYS 562. Where witness is cross-examined as to whether he had been engaged in unlawful or degrading occupation, and denies that he has, party examining him is bound by his answer and cannot contradict him. Schnase v. Goetz [N. D.] 120 NW 553. Where witness for accused denied that he had performed an abortion on her (prosecution being for another crime), it was error to contradict her by proof of previous statements and proof of the abortion. State v. Dunn [Or.] 99 P 278.

Held material: Witness, having testified to certain consideration, could be asked if he had not previously stated smaller sum, consideration being material on good faith issue. Pelham v. Chattahoochee Grocery Co. [Ala.] 47 S 172.

33. Testimony on cross-examination of accused to show failure to testify on preliminary, being illegal, could not be contradicted. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. When a witness is cross-examined on a matter collateral to the issue, his answer cannot be subsequently contradicted by the party putting the question. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. The test whether fact inquired of on cross-examination is collateral is would the cross-examining party be entitled to prove it as part of his case tending to establish his plea. Id.

in some jurisdictions [35] and excluded in others.[36] There is also a conflict of authority as to the competency of a witness' reputation or character as to any particular matter.[37] Proof of particular acts of wrongdoing, not amounting to crimes, conviction of which may be shown under some statutes,[38] is usually excluded,[39] particularly where the act sought to be shown does not affect credibility or general moral character.[40] It is proper to cross-examine the witness as to occupation.[41] For purposes of impeachment a witness may be asked questions, the answers to which will tend to degrade or otherwise discredit him.[42] Witnesses to reputation must be qualified.[43]

The reputation of a witness for truth and veracity See 10 C. L. 2101 may be shown, and the witness impeached by proof that it is bad.[44] Such proof must, however, be 35. Character of witnesses may be shown and considered on issue of credibility. State v. Cloninger, 149 N. C. 567, 63 SE 154. State may impeach defendant as witness by showing general bad moral character. State v. Priest [Mo.] 114 SW 949. Rule admitting character evidence recognizes gradations of character and that testimony relating thereto is opinionative; weight of this testimony is for jury. Taylor v. State, 5 Ga. App. 237, 62 SE 1048. A witness may be impeached by showing that his general reputation for truth and veracity is bad or that his moral character is such as to render him unworthy of belief. McIntosh v. McNair [Or.] 99 P 74.

36. Impeaching evidence must be confined to general reputation for truth and cannot extend to general moral character; hence proof that witness had been indicted for criminal conspiracy incompetent. Hazard v. Western Commercial Travelers' Ass'n [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 625.

37. A witness' general moral character may be shown, but not his moral character in any one particular, as for peace and quiet, unless he himself has placed it in issue. Sweatt v. State [Ala.] 47 S 194. Witness cannot be impeached by showing that his general reputation for integrity is bad. McIntosh v. McNair [Or.] 99 P 74. Prosecution of druggist for violating liquor law, in which defendant testified in his own behalf. Held, proof of his general reputation as one who sold liquor in violation of law was competent. State v. Christopher [Mo. App.] 114 SW 549. Proof of reputation for lewdness may be offered to discredit the testimony of a female witness, but the jury may believe such witness to be truthful though not virtuous. Cripe v. State, 4 Ga. App. 832, 62 SE 567.

38. See post, § 5B2.

39. Witness cannot be impeached by proof of particular wrongful acts. Shields v. Conway [Ky.] 117 SW 340. Only general reputation competent, not specific acts of misconduct. State v. Sassaman, 214 Mo. 695, 114 SW 590. Impeaching evidence must be confined to general reputation of witness for honesty and integrity; details of particular offense could not be shown. State v. Sebastian [Mo.] 114 SW 522. Witness having denied that he was living in adultery with another, adverse party could not prove facts tending to show that he was. Gonzales v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 941. Accused having testified, state could prove his bad reputation for morality and veracity, but not that he was a gambler of the worst sort. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346. Whether witness for state was not beginner at game of craps not proper inquiry. Kelly v. State [Ala.] 49 S 535. Improper to ask whom witness married for purpose of showing marriage to woman with whom he had lived in adultery. Price v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 447. Questions may be asked concerning recent instances of misconduct by witness, but his answers are conclusive, and such acts of misconduct cannot be collaterally proved. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946. Extent to which witness may be cross-examined as to recent acts of misconduct largely discretionary. Id.

40. Improper to examine witness as to violation of fishing law. Clinton v. State [Fla.] 47 S 389. Mere fact that witness was in habit of drinking beer did not affect his credibility. Lockard v. Van Alstyne [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1132, 120 NW 1. Proof that witness ran saloon which had bad reputation, several women having been arrested there, and that place had been raided twice, inadmissible. Opper v. Davega, 126 App. Div. 941, 111 NYS 521.

41. That plaintiff, suing for personal injuries, was tramp, could be considered on issue of credibility. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Moore, 5 Ga. App. 562, 63 SE 642. Occupation and business of witness may be shown, but not that he made false statements in pursuit thereof. King v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 138 Iowa, 625, 116 NW 719. Proper to cross-examine witness for accused as to antecedents, previous occupation and past conduct, especially where defendant had offered evidence of improper conduct of deceased with witness. Cannon v. Ter. [Okl. Cr. App.] 99 P 622.

42. Such as whether he was running saloon without license and in violation of law. State v. Denny [N. D.] 117 NW 869. But see 10 C. L. 2100, n. 8.

43. To impeach a witness by proof of bad character, the predicate is a knowledge of his character in the "community" or "neighborhood" in which he resides; but these terms are not capable of exact definition, and mean generally a place where the person is well known and has established a reputation. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. Where person lived in Baltimore, but had an established business in Mobile, and spent much of his time there, one who knew him at Mobile, and his reputation there, could testify in regard to it. Id.

44. Testimony of witness, impeached by proof of bad reputation for veracity, could be disregarded. People v. Strauch, 240 Ill. 60, 88 NE 155. Where witness has been im-confined to the general reputation of the witness for truth and veracity [45] in the community or neighborhood where he lives or is best known,[46] and the impeaching witness must be shown to have adequate knowledge of the other's reputation,[47] and must speak from general reputation or report and not from his own private or individual opinion.[48] No particular form of question is prescribed or must be used in eliciting from the impeaching witness his knowledge of the general reputation of the witness sought to be impeached.[49] Any form which does not involve a violation of the rules of evidence may be used.[50]

(§ 5 B) 2. Accusation and conviction of crime.[51]—See 10 C. L. 2101—Conviction of crime may be proved in most jurisdictions as affecting the credibility of the witness [52] or of a defendant who testifies in his own behalf,[53] unless the act, for peached by proof of bad reputation for veracity, his testimony may be disregarded. Johnson v. Johnson [Neb.] 115 NW 323.

45. St. Louis S. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227; Eastman v. Boston El. R. Co., 200 Mass. 412, 86 NE 793. Evidence should be confined to general reputation for truth and veracity, particular instances of untruthfulness being incompetent. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 274, 114 SW 453. Witness to party's reputation for truth and veracity said he and party had been on good terms until party had told lie to witness's son. Held proper to exclude further inquiry as what the lie was, this being collateral. McMillion v. Cook [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 775.

46. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227. The term neighborhood comprises the natural radius of repute. People v. Loris, 131 App. Div. 127, 115 NYS 236. That witness lived in different town did not necessarily make him incompetent as to another's reputation. Id. Witness held to have resided in certain town sufficiently so that proof of his reputation for truth and veracity there was competent. In re Brown's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 667.

47. Proper to ask witness if he knew general reputation of another for truth and veracity in community where he lived. People v. Loris, 131 App. Div. 127, 115 NYS 236. Witness who had lived in community six months held qualified to testify to another's reputation which he said he knew. Alderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 525, 111 SW 738. Though a stranger will not be allowed to testify to reputation, the court will not determine sufficiency of witness' knowledge but will leave the value of his testimony to the jury. People v. Loris, 131 App. Div. 127, 115 NYS 236. Held proper not to strike testimony to reputation because based on witness' own knowledge, where he also said that his testimony was based on what people said. McMillion v. Cook [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 775. Where witness is asked concerning knowledge of party's general reputation for truth and veracity, party should be given opportunity to cross-examine the witness as to his knowledge before the witness' testimony to reputation is received. Id. Fact that witnesses testifying as to truthfulness of another admitted that they had not heard such reputation discussed does not render the evidence incompetent, but affects its weight. City of Chicago v. Gurrell, 137 Ill. App. 377.

48. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex Civ. App.] 111 SW 227. Whether person had found witness truthful in dealings with her incompetent on issue of reputation for truth and veracity. Hunneman v. Phelps, 199 Mass. 15, 85 NE 169. Witness may not be asked whether he would believe the witness sought to be discredited on oath. Eastman v. Boston El. R. Co., 200 Mass. 412, 86 NE 793.

Contra: Witness called to impeach another may be asked if, from what he knows of the other's general reputation for truth and veracity, he would believe him on oath; though he has already testified to the other's reputation. People v. Corey [Cal. App.] 97 P 907. Foundation for impeaching testimony properly laid where witnesses based their conclusions upon knowledge of defendant's general reputation among those with whom he resided, and the form of inquiry was properly restricted to inquiry whether in view of defendant's general reputation for truth and veracity witness would believe him on oath. Duffy v. Radke, 138 Wis. 38, 119 NW 811. Opinion of witness as to truth and veracity of another is not competent for purpose of impeachment. City of Chicago v. Gurrell, 137 Ill. App. 377.

49. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227.

50. "Are you acquainted with" or "do you know" the general reputation, etc., proper. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227. Question held proper as seeking knowledge of witness as to general reputation for truth and veracity of party testifying. McMillion v. Cook [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 775. Question held to call for reputation for truth and veracity and not reputation generally. Id. Where witnesses answered affirmatively, and added that they had known witness "a long time," or "always," this did not show that they were giving personal opinions and not general reputation. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227. Where, from previous questions, witness understood that inquiry was as to "general" reputation, omission of word "general" from question was not error. Id.

52. May be shown on cross-examination that witness has been arrested and convicted of crime—arson. Schnase v. Goetz [N. D.] 120 NW 533. Witness may be cross-examined as to whether he has been convicted of crime. State v. Deal [Or.] 98 P 165. Record of conviction of murder com-which conviction was had, is too remote to affect the present credibility of the witnesses.[54]

Statute permitting witnesses to be examined as to conviction of crime should be strictly construed.[55] The witness may testify as to the character of the crime of which he was convicted.[56] In some jurisdictions, only convictions of a felony or infamous crime,[57] such as would disqualify at common law, may be shown, in others, the crime must have been one involving moral turpitude.[58] The fact that witness has been accused [59] or indicted [60] cannot usually be shown, but the contrary rule obtains in some states.[61] Conviction of crime which had been set aside may not be proved as effecting the credibility of a witness.[62] In Illinois oral proof of convic-petent to impeach witness under Civ. Code, Proc. § 597. Shields v. Conway [Ky.] 117 SW 340. Proof that witness had been convicted of murder proper; who he murdered immaterial. Choice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 132. After witness denied that he had ever been convicted of felony, proper to ask if he had not been confined in certain state prison. People v. Weiss, 129 App. Div. 671, 114 NYS 236.

53. Previous conviction for assault competent, in prosecution for assault, on issue of credibility of accused. People v. Hoffman, 154 Mich. 145, 15 Det. Leg. N. 646, 117 NW 568. Accused may be cross-examined as to conviction for other crimes, but cannot be made to give evidence on which he was convicted. State v. Kight, 106 Minn. 371, 119 NW 56. Defendant may on cross-examination be asked as to former conviction, and state is not concluded by his answer. State v. Gordon, 105 Minn. 217, 117 NW 483. Where accused testified, state could prove former conviction of homicide by record, though he admitted conviction. Rollings v. State [Ala.] 49 S 329. Conviction of defendant on similar charge, appealed from, and pending, could not be proved. Jennings v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 115 SW 587.

54. Conviction of crime 18 or 20 years before time of trial too remote to impeach witness. Richards v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 587. That defendant had served penitentiary sentence for manslaughter 15 years before was too remote to affect credibility. Bogus v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 823. In prosecution for homicide in 1908, where accused was witness in his own behalf, it was improper to show that he killed a man in 1888, and had pleaded guilty to theft of hogs in 1894, these acts being too remote. Winn v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 918. That witness had been convicted of horse theft, and indicted but not convicted for murder, 30 years before, incompetent. Gardner v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 117 SW 148.

55. Accused may be asked if he has ever been convicted of crime, but not whether he was "confined in penitentiary for cutting a white man's throat." Dodds v. State [Miss.] 45 S 863.

56. Oral evidence to show the character of a witness' conviction for crime is competent to rebut the attack as to credibility. Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co. v. Pfaelzer, 133 Ill. App. 346.

57. That plaintiff had been convicted, sent to jail, and served part of term, for offense, not a felony, incompetent. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 274, 114 SW 453.

58. Accused cannot be impeached by showing previous conviction unless crime was felony or one involving moral turpitude; proof of previous conviction of violation of liquor law inadmissible. Merriwether v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 1148. Conviction of vagrancy not competent to impeach witness. Ellis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 117 SW 978. Proof that witness had been arrested and convicted of "various offenses" properly excluded, nature of offenses not appearing. Id. Witness may be asked if he had served term in penitentiary, how long he served, and for what offense—answer being murder. Smith v. State [Ala.] 48 S 668. In prosecution for illegal sale of liquor, prosecuting witness could not on cross-examination be asked if he had not himself been arrested for same offense. Id. Proof of conviction of violations of speed ordinances of city inadmissible, not involving moral turpitude. See v. Wormser, 129 App. Div. 596, 113 NYS 1093. Crime of carrying concealed weapons which involves neither moral turpitude nor lack of veracity cannot be shown. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946.

59. That accused had been charged with other offenses, or had been guilty of acts of misconduct, inadmissible to affect his credibility. State v. La Mont [S. D.] 120 NW 1104. While witness may be asked what he has done, it is improper to ask if he has been arrested or accused, since mere accusations of misconduct are incompetent. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946.

60. Accused cannot be cross-examined as to indictment, this being mere accusation. People v. Morrison, 194 N. Y. 175, 86 NE 1120. No witness, whether party or not, may, in civil or criminal action, be discredited by proof of indictment for crime, this being mere accusation. People v. Morrison, 195 N. Y. 116, 88 NE 21. Witness may be asked if he has been convicted of a felony or any crime involving want of moral character, but he cannot be asked if he has been indicted, arrested or imprisoned for any offense. Price v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1056; Slater v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 110.

61. That defendant had recently been indicted for any felony or other crime involving moral turpitude could be shown, but not that he had cut a man. Knight v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 56.

62. D. C. Code, § 1067 (31 Stat. 1357, c. 854), allowing conviction of witness of crime upon cross-examination to be shown, tion of an infamous crime is admissible,[63] and the words "indictment for rape" written on the margin of the title of the record is sufficient to show what crime witness was convicted of.[64] The names being identical, the legal presumption is that the witness and party convicted was one and the same person.[65]

(§ 5) C. Interest and bias of witnesses.[66]—See 10 C. L. 2100—Interest in the event of the action[67] or in its prosecution,[68] and any facts tending to show bias or prejudice on the part of the witness,[69] such as his relations with,[70] or hostility to, does not permit conviction which had been set aside to be shown. Thompson v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 12.

63. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 51, § 1, as construed by 167 Ill. 102, it may be proved orally, and the witness compelled to testify thereto. Pioneer Fire Proofing Co. v. Clifford, 136 Ill. App. 417.

67. Interest and motive of party testifying in his own behalf should be considered, and jury should be so instructed. Blankavag v. Badger Box & Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 380, 117 NW 852. May be shown that witness has interest direct or collateral in event of trial. Lenahan v. Pittston Coal Min. Co., 221 Pa. 626, 70 A 884. Expert whose fee is contingent on recovery is interested and his interest may be shown on his cross-examination. Indiana Union Trac. Co. v. Pheanis [Ind. App.] 85 NE 1040. Son-in-law of defendant in trespass to try title, having testified that he had no interest in suit except as an attorney, may be asked if he would not be benefited by judgment for defendant, if defendant died intestate. Combest v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 354. Cross-examination to show that witness, mother of plaintiff, would receive amount recovered, if any, was proper. Platner v. Ryan [N. J. Law] 69 A 1007. In action for damages for obstructing alley, defendant could ask witness for plaintiff if he did not have property which he considered damaged by the obstruction, though he had made no claim against defendant. Ellis v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 395, 111 SW 839. That witness voted against respondent in quo warranto proceeding did not show interest in proceeding. Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126. Jury not bound to believe testimony of interested witnesses. McCormick v. Kampmann [Tex.] 115 SW 24. Jury may disregard testimony of interested witness. Lounsbury v. Knights of the Maccabees of the World, 128 App. Div. 394, 112 NYS 921. Interest of accused may be considered in determining his credibility as witness. State v. Dower [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1104; State v. Brown [Mo.] 115 SW 967.

68. Prosecuting witness may be examined as to bias, interest, prejudice, or motive, which might affect credibility. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 933. For purpose of showing bias and interest, it was proper to bring out on cross-examination of prosecuting witness in liquor case, who was employed to get evidence, that he had told another that he (witness) was in bad position on account of court business, and in position to go to penitentiary, etc. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 933; Id., 53 Tex. Cr. App. 473, 110 SW 925. To show animus of witness for prosecution, he may be asked if he had not shown sufficient interest to follow proceedings before chancellor on application to reduce bail. Barron v. Anniston [Ala.] 48 S 58. The fact that a witness worked for police officers in detecting crime is no reason for disregarding his testimony, though it may be considered on issue of credibility. Clark v. State, 5 Ga. App. 605, 63 SE 606. That witness for defendant had tried to influence witness for state to favor defendant could be shown. State v. Carr [W. Va.] 63 SE 766. Questions on cross-examination tending to show witness for state identified with faction which was trying to drive accused out of town, decedent being also member, should have been allowed. State v. Hanlon [Mont.] 100 P 1035. The testimony of a detective and prosecuting witness should be received with caution. People v. Loris, 131 App. Div. 127, 115 NYS 236. Amount of compensation received by detective, who was sole witness in liquor sale case, could be shown. Id.

69. Interest or bias of witness may be shown. People v. Sheffield [Cal. App.] 98 P 67. Character witness may be impeached by showing he had sent out circulars offering reward, and written letter, describing accused as violent and dangerous man. State v. Fisher, 149 N. C. 557, 63 SE 153. Proper to ask witness for defendant if he had not said to another that if she would help defendant he could "beat his case," to lay foundation for impeachment and to show interest. Lowry v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 562, 110 SW 911. In rape case, letter written by witness for accused, showing witness' feeling toward prosecutrix, was competent. Warren v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 380. Where, in personal injury case, witnesses for defendant testified that plaintiff was drunk at time, it was proper to ask them if they had not testified for defendant in another similar case, it appearing that they lived in different county, had free transportation, were paid for their time, and that one had free annual pass on defendant's road. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 958. Animus as to matter in controversy, or feelings toward parties, may be shown. Walker v. Rome [Ga. App.] 64 SE 310. Where witness testifies against defendant, fact that prosecutor is bail for witness on an indictment may be shown. Bates v. State, 4 Ga. App. 486, 61 SE 888. Proper to ask physician, who testified to value of services rendered by plaintiff, whether he a party,[71] may be shown and considered as affecting his credibility; but the jury is not at liberty to disregard wholly the testimony of a witness simply because he is a party, or is interested.[72] Discredit should not be cast upon the testimony of a witness because he was paid his fees by party to the suit.[73]

had not sued defendant for services and whether he had not lost. MacGuire v. Hughes, 126 App. Div. 637, 111 NYS 153. Competent to show that prosecuting witness in assault case had suit pending against accused for large amount. People v. Drolet [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 304, 121 NW 291. Where attorney testified for defendant, plaintiff was entitled to show on cross-examination that witness was also attorney for casualty company, which would have to stand loss. Lenahan v. Pittston Coal Min. Co., 221 Pa. 626, 70 A 884. That prosecuting witness was intimate friend of one whom accused had unsuccessfully defended in criminal prosecution was incompetent to show animosity toward accused. State v. Gilluly, 50 Wash. 1, 96 P 512. In action by husband for injuries to wife, what husband has said in regard to an alleged injury to himself on a former occasion was not competent to show bias on his part or an attempt to defraud defendant, there being no evidence of fraud in case of bar. Citizens' R. & L. Co. v. Johns [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 62. Bad feeling between witness and another, who was neither party nor witness, could not be shown. Ham v. State [Ala.] 47 S 126. Where witness admitted having written up crime for newspaper but denied that it was published as written by him, and evidence did not show that it was published as written, the published article was inadmissible to show bias of witness. Vogel v. State, 138 Wis. 313, 119 NW 190. Testimony tending merely to show that witnesses were dissatisfied and prejudiced without showing why or with what, incompetent, since it did not go far enough to show bias or prejudice. Nagle v. Schnadt, 239 Ill. 595, 88 NE 178. Where a witness admits on cross-examination that he is unfriendly to defendant, it is improper to allow the estate, on redirect, to elicit the reasons for his unfriendliness. This procedure brings in issues likely to confuse and prejudice jury. State v. Kight, 106 Minn. 371, 119 NW 56. In personal injury action, it was error not to allow the plaintiff, after laying proper foundation, to prove that witness said that if case came to trial she would do all she could to beat plaintiff. Walker v. Chicago & Joliet Elec. R. Co., 142 Ill. App. 372.

70. Any fact showing relations between witness and party proper; whether witness and party "drank together and ran together" held proper. Rutledge v. Rowland [Ala.] 49 S 461. Immoral relations between deceased and witness for state could be shown, to show bias of witness. Leach v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1016, 112 SW 595. Though particular wrongful acts of witness may not be shown (Civ. Code Prac. § 597) witness' immoral relations with deceased may be shown to prove bias in homicide case. Id. Where witness testified to friendly relations with plaintiff, discretionary with court to rule out letter by witness containing references to her family, but none directly concerning plaintiff. Carroll v. Boston El. R. Co., 200 Mass. 527, 86 NE 793. On cross-examination of witness for defendant, plaintiff could show that he was employe of defendant, and show relation between them, but could not show how witness performed duties, unless to show bias. South Covington & C. R. Co. v. Raymer [Ky.] 116 SW 281. Where woman testified for defendant, it was proper to ask him, on cross-examination, whether she was his wife, or related to him. Ludlow v. State [Ala.] 47 S 321. In action against city for personal injuries, not improper to cross-examine witness connected with work and related to president of company doing it, though it incidentally appeared that such company might be liable. Perry v. Centralia, 50 Wash. 670, 97 P 802.

71. Ill feeling and animosity between party and adverse witness may be shown. State v. Nieuhaus [Mo.] 117 SW 73. Hostility of witnesses toward accused may always be shown. Burnett v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 515, 112 SW 74. Defendant may show animus against him of witness for state; no foundation necessary. Telfair v. State [Fla.] 47 S 863. Unfriendliness of witness to accused may be shown. People v. Reycraft [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 175, 120 NW 993. Witness should not be allowed to testify to hostility of witnesses toward a party unless he knows facts; his mere conclusion should not be received. Burnett v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 515, 112 SW 74.

72. Where a witness is not impeached or discredited in any way. Giltman v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 129 App. Div. 654, 113 NYS 1046.

73. Error for court to comment upon the fact that witness was paid for attending court, as it reflected upon credibility of witness. Hughes v. Hughes, 133 Ill. App. 654. Witnesses cannot be compelled to appear in a civil suit until their fees are paid, therefore party had a right to pay lawful fees and mileage, and such fact should not cast discredit upon cause of party so paying. Keithley v. Stevens, 142 Ill. App. 406.

75. Statement not contradictory to testimony, incompetent. People v. Everett [Cal. App.] 101 P 528. Certain statements improperly proved when they did not tend to contradict testimony of witness. State v. Matheson [Iowa] 120 NW 1036. Statement of plaintiff, which did not conflict with his testimony, incompetent to impeach him. Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Buchanan [Ark.] 114 SW 694. Where witness for ac-issues, are always competent as impeaching evidence,[76] when a proper predicate has been laid.[77] Thus, oral or written statements out of court,[78] statements made as a witness in another trial or proceeding,[79] statements in affidavits,[80] in depositions,[81] and in pleadings,[82] have been held competent. A witness cannot be discredited by cused had not testified concerning threats, it was error to allow him to be asked whether he had not, at certain time and place, in absence of accused, stated that accused had threatened decedent; though if he had denied the making of threats, he could have been thus impeached. Ridgell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 71. Witness' testimony, as to age and height of man who assaulted her, being merely estimates, former statements relating thereto, more definite, were inadmissible to impeach her. People v. Smith [Cal. App.] 98 P 546. Previous declaration of opinion, inconsistent with testimony as to facts, competent as well as previous inconsistent statements of facts. Bates v. State, 4 Ga. App. 486, 61 SE 888.

76. McLeroth v. Magerstadt, 136 Ill. App. 361; Harville v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 283; Bridgman v. Winsness, 34 Utah, 383, 98 P 186. Declarations of witness, otherwise incompetent, are admissible to impeach him, if inconsistent with his testimony. Keyes v. Geary, etc., R. Co., 152 Cal. 437, 93 P 88.

78. Contradictory statements by plaintiff competent. Roussin v. Kirkpatrick [Cal. App.] 95 P 1123; Goldberg v. Weinberger, 115 NYS 1098. Written statement of witness competent to contradict him. Archbold v. Joline, 114 NYS 169. Statement clearly inconsistent with testimony on material issue competent to discredit witness. Snow v. Adams, 200 Mass. 251, 85 NE 1052. Previous contradictory statements concerning material facts testified to may be proved. Lanasa v. State [Md.] 71 A 1058. Interested witness having admitted, on cross-examination, conversation with person, proper to bring out what he said, this bearing on credibility, and matter being material. National Park Bank v. West Side Bank, 115 NYS 222. Statement by one presenting draft, indorsed by cashier of bank, except in one particular, competent to impeach cashier. Milmo Nat. Bank v. Cobbs [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 345. Statement relating to material matter, inconsistent with testimony, competent. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bell's Adm'r [Ky.] 114 SW 328. Where defendants are jointly indicted and tried and each testifies, declarations of each are competent to discredit him as witness in his own behalf and in behalf of codefendant. State v. Rubaka [Conn.] 72 A 566. Previous conflicting statement competent, though part of conversation in which compromise was suggested. Robinamitz v. Silverman [Pa.] 72 A 378. Where witness denied making statement to third person, making of it could be proved by third person. High v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 939. Father of deceased having testified to facts tending to show death of daughter by violence, competent to prove statement by him, morning after death, that he thought deceased had committed suicide. Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 68. Where defendant proved condition of boat by witness, plaintiff could ask witness if he had not made statement concerning boat inconsistent with testimony. Pate v. Tar Heel Steamboat Co., 148 N. C. 571, 62 SE 614. Where witness testified that accused told him, morning after homicide, only to ride over to certain house, he could be contradicted by proving that he had said that defendant said other things to him amounting to an admission or confession. State v. Hunter [S. C.] 63 SE 68. Where witness who was near deceased at time of killing testified that he could not identify man who fired shot, he could be contradicted by proof of statement to sheriff that he had the right man. State v. Suber [S. C.] 63 SE 684.

79. Proper to show by committing magistrate what a witness testified to before him, to impeach witness' testimony at trial. State v. Pirkey [S. D.] 118 NW 1042. Inconsistent statements in justice court on material matters could be proved. Vanhooser v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 285. Contradictory testimony of witness at examining trial could be shown. Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 68. Testimony at coroner's inquest competent to impeach witness at trial. Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. [Mo.] 118 SW 68. Entire testimony of witness on preliminary hearing admissible to show whether he made certain statement, given by him at trial, which he said he had also made at preliminary. Territory v. Clark [N. M.] 99 P 697. Where witness denied having made certain statements in testimony relating to same occurrence in magistrate's court, it was error to exclude proof of such statements, especially where party offered to recall witness to lay more particular predicate. Hicks v. State [Miss.] 47 S 524. Witness may be asked if he was asked certain questions and made certain answers on former trial, and may be contradicted in regard thereto. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson [Ky.] 115 SW 798. To impeach prosecutrix in rape case, it was proper to show that she had not accused defendant for a month, but had accused her father, and had testified that her father was the man at the preliminary hearing, and to show inducements held out to her to change her story. State v. Newcomb [Mo.] 119 SW 405. Former testimony of witness, which he said he did not remember, relating to acts which he denied, competent. Carr v. American Locomotive Co. [R. I.] 70 A 196.

80. Affidavit of physician, accompanying order of commitment to insane asylum, competent to contradict physician's testimony. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gillis [Ark.] 117 SW 749.

81. Where plaintiff testified that deed had never been delivered, his deposition in a former action, containing different testimony as to delivery, was competent to impeach him. Nash v. Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. [Va.] 63 SE 14.

82. Petition in suit by witness, containing statements contrary to testimony, com-statements made while under arrest.[83] Such declarations are competent only as impeaching evidence, and not as substantive evidence of the facts.[84] Where a witness, on cross-examination, admits making a sworn statement, the entire statement is competent,[85] and counsel should not be allowed to ask witness if he made certain statements contained therein.[86] But it has been held that, where the witness admits making a statement, it cannot be proved otherwise.[87]

(§ 5) E. Foundation for impeaching evidence.[88] See 10 C. L. 2105—Impeaching evidence is inadmissible unless a proper predicate has been laid,[89] when such predicate is necessary, but no predicate is necessary to show facts contrary to a witness' testimony,[90] or to show animus of a witness.[91] Unless the witness is a party,[92] prior contradictory or inconsistent statements cannot be proved, unless the attention of the witness has been called thereto[93] and the circumstances, such as time, place and persons present, placed before him,[94] and this is the rule though the wit-petent. Michel v. Michel [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 358.

83. Statement of witness, when arrested, that he did not have a pistol cannot be introduced by the state to discredit his testimony, he having testified that he did have a pistol. Granger v. State, 50 Tex. Cr. App., 488, 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 781, 98 SW 836.

84. A contradictory statement proved against a witness is not evidence of the facts, but only operates to destroy the contradicted testimony. Hobbs v. Blanchard & Sons Co. [N. H.] 70 A 1082. Where witness testified that her only knowledge on certain point was conclusion from facts, her statement out of court concerning the facts would not be substantive evidence, but would tend only to discredit her testimony. Lydston v. Rockingham County L. & P. Co. [N. H.] 70 A 385.

85, 86. Jones v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 417.

87. Where prosecutrx testified that accused had not had intercourse with her, and that she had made contrary statement to county attorney because she had been threatened, it was error to prove her statement for the purpose of impeaching her. Skeen v. State, 51 Tex. Cr. App. 39, 18 Tex. Ct. Rep. 802, 100 SW 770.

89. Impeaching evidence properly excluded; no foundation laid. Swift & Co. v. Martine [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 209. That witness had bought whisky and passed it around to accused and others, who helped pay for it, was inadmissible to impeach witness, no foundation having been laid on his examination, and no attempt being made to impeach him. State v. Tarlton [S. D.] 118 NW 706.

90. Where witness testified to certain conversation at certain house on certain day, no foundation was necessary to admit proof that that witness was not there that day. State v. Stockman [S. C.] 64 SE 595.

91. No foundation necessary to show animus of witness. Telfair v. State [Fla.] 47 S 863.

92. The rule that the attention of a witness must be called to the time and place when and where he made alleged statements does not apply when he is a party, where admissions sought to be proved. Conselyea v. Van Dorn, 129 App. Div. 520, 114 NYS 61.

93. Witness should be asked if he had made statements before they can be proved against him. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325. In personal injury action, proper to ask defendant's superintendent, to lay foundation for contradicting him, whether he had not made statement for defendant, "or an insurance company." Quigg v. Post, 131 App. Div. 155, 115 NYS 147. Allowing witness to be contradicted without first calling his attention to statements is discretionary. Rabinowitz v. Silverman [Pa.] 72 A 378. Writing inadmissible to contradict witness when no foundation was laid. Alabama Security Co. v. Dewy [Ala.] 47 S 55. Statements by conductor after accident could not be proved, no predicate being laid. Dilburn v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 47 S 210. Where circumstances were called to attention of witness, who recalled them but denied conversation, conversation could be proved. Nethery v. Nelson [Wash.] 99 P 879. Written statement by witness properly excluded where party did not show what it expected to prove, or that witness had made different statement. Lockwood v. Boston El. R. Co., 200 Mass. 537, 86 NE 934. Where witness had denied having certain conversation, proof of it was competent in rebuttal. Casey v. Chicago City R. Co., 237 Ill. 140, 86 NE 606.

94. Predicate for impeachment must be laid by asking witness to be impeached proper questions. Kyle v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 598. Attention of witness must be called to time and place of alleged previous statements. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 SE 110. Statements must be related to witness, and time, place, and persons present must be specified. State v. Coss [Or.] 101 P 193. Contradictory statement cannot be proved unless attention of witness bas been specifically called to it, and to time and place when and where made. Lemon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 164 F 953. Where elements of time and place were omitted in question relied on to lay foundation, impeaching proof was properly excluded. State v. Ballew [S. C.] 63 SE 688. Asking witness if he made statements to certain person does not make ness' testimony is given by deposition.[95] But a witness may be examined, concerning inconsistent statements out of court, to test his recollection or credibility, without the same particularity as to time, place, and person, where the purpose is not to impeach him by proving such statements.[96] Alleged contradictory writings should be exhibited to the witness.[97] Failure to lay a foundation for contradiction of a witness is immaterial where he is recalled and allowed to explain them.[98]

(§ 5) F. Corroboration and sustentation of witnesses.[99] See 10 C L. 2107—It is not proper to attempt to sustain the credibility of a witness before it has been attacked.[1] Thus where no attempt has been made to impeach a witness, evidence which is merely corroborative of his testimony is inadmissible [2] though corroborative evidence, relevant on other issues, is proper,[3] and, where impeaching evidence has been offered, evidence to rebut it is competent.[4] Where contradictory statements have been proved, evidence in explanation of the discrepancy is competent;[5] and, competent proof that he made statements to another person. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 SE 110. Where witness admitting meeting man at certain time and place, but said he did not know whether it was person named or not, and denied making certain statements to him, statements could be proved by man whom witness met. State v. Stockman [S. C.] 64 SE 595. Error to receive proof of statement by expert that, if paid, he would testify for either party, falsely if necessary, where he had not been asked concerning such statement on his cross-examination; details, time, and place should be called to his attention. Ferguson v. Truax, 136 Wis. 637, 118 NW 251. Foundation for proof of contradictory statement must be laid by asking witness if he made it, calling attention to time, place, and persons present, so that he will not be misled; foundation held sufficient. Jaynes v. People [Colo.] 99 P 352.

95. That testimony of witness was taken by deposition does not alter rule that foundation must be laid for impeachment by proof of previous contradictory statements. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

96. State v. Coss [Or.] 101 P 193.

1. Counsel could not ask witness called by him concerning an arrest. State v. Tawney [Kan.] 99 P 268. Friendly feeling of prosecuting witness toward accused cannot be shown. That prosecuting witness bore accused no malice, and did not have him arrested of his own accord, inadmissible. State v. De Hart [Mont.] 99 P 438.

2. Where one party testified positively that he pointed out certain mining property as having certain location, and other party denied it, it was improper to prove location according to "public reputation in order to corroborate one and discredit the other." Stewart v. Douglass [Cal. App.] 100 P 711. Though defendant's witness, testifying fully to manner of accident, was asked on cross-examination if he had made a written statement concerning it, defendant was not entitled to introduce statement to corroborate witness, plaintiff having made no effort to discredit him. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Tuck [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 620. Error to allow state to corroborate witness by proof of statements made by him in conformity to his testimony where no attack had been made on his testimony. McKnight v. State, 50 Tex. Cr. App. 252, 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 681, 95 SW 1056.

3. Where prosecuting witness claimed that accused, an officer, had stolen money from him, proof that he had displayed a roll of money was proper to corroborate him. State v. McDowell, 214 Mo. 334, 113 SW 1113. Statement by decedent, with other circumstances, admissible to corroborate witness' statement concerning killing. Fleming v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 383. Certain evidence tending to show truthfulness of person's statement, being relevant to issues, held unobjectionable, not being contradictory to other testimony, by parties' own witness, and not tending to contradict defendant on irrelevant matter. Cumberland Glass Mfg. Co. v. Atteaux, 199 Mass. 426, 85 NE 536.

4. Where it is sought to discredit party as witness by disproving statements in pauper affidavit, used on appeal, party has right to rebut such testimony and sustain affidavit, but whether case should be reopened to admit such proof is for court. Leake v. King Dry Goods Co., 5 Ga. App. 102, 62 SE 729. Where witness in murder case testified as to res gestae, and wounds received by him during trouble, and accused sought to impeach him by referring to his position and location of his wounds, it was not improper to allow witness to show his wounds. Andrews v. State [Ala.] 48 S 858. Where incompetent evidence of conviction of an offense was introduced against plaintiff on cross-examination, it was not error to allow him to testify to facts showing he was not guilty of offense charged. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 274, 114 SW 453. Where wife of decedent identified defendant at the trial and defendant produced a witness who testified that she failed to identify him the day after the killing, it was error to permit the state on cross-examination to prove that she was nervous and prostrated at that time. Oates v. State, 51 Tex. Cr. App. 449, 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 285, 103 SW 859.

5. Where detached statement of witness where a portion of a statement or conversation has been introduced, all of it is usually held competent.[6] Proof of previous similar or consistent statements is usually excluded,[7] except where some corrupt motive has been shown.[8] Proof of the good reputation of the witness for truth and veracity is competent when his credibility has been attacked,[9] as by proof of previous contradictory statements,[10] or conviction of crime,[11] or where an attack has been made upon the general character of the witness,[12] or upon his reputation for truth and veracity.[13] Proof or admission of on former trial was proved, party calling him was not entitled to prove all his testimony, but only so much as would explain statement proved against him. Colby v. Reams [Va.] 63 SE 1009. Defense, in burglary case, was that defendant bought razor from certain person. Witness called to prove purchase denied all knowledge of it, but later testified to purchase. Held, defendant should have been allowed to show that witness had been threatened with injury if he testified against person who sold razor, to explain conflict. Cornett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1071. Where contradictory statement is proved against witness, he may explain that it related to different transaction which occurred at different date, and may give details of transaction to show correspondence with statement. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. v. Dougherty, 4 Ga. App. 614, 62 SE 158. Where witness in murder case testified that he saw decedent drop pistol, that he picked it up and hid it and later told sheriff he had not seen a pistol taken from decedent, it was error not to allow witness to explain why he had not told sheriff that he had taken pistol. State v. Hanlon [Mont.] 100 P 1035. Where testimony of witness was much stronger against defendant at trial than at inquest, it was proper to allow him to explain discrepancy by stating that he was afraid to tell all he knew at inquest. State v. Suber [S. C.] 63 SE 684. Witness should be allowed to explain his reason for making inconsistent declaration. Tonopah Lumber Co. v. Riley [Nev.] 95 P 1001.

6. Where an effort is made to impeach a witness by proving a previous contradictory statement, it is competent to sustain him by proving the entire conversation, so that its true drift and meaning may be understood. Turner v. State, 131 Ga. 761, 63 SE 294. Where part of conversation with defendant had been introduced to impeach him, he could prove all on surrebuttal and was not limited to what he could bring out on cross-examination of impeaching witnesses. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325.

7. But see Rape, 12 C. L. 1614, as to complaints by prosecutrix, after offense. State cannot, in rebuttal, recall a witness and ask her if she had not made same statements on preliminary examination as she made at trial. Bennett v. State [Ala.] 49 S 296. Improper to allow unimpeached witness to state that he had given same testimony in former hearing as on trial. Green v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 534, 110 SW 929. State cannot corroborate prosecuting witness by proving statements out of court consistent with testimony where no attempt has been made to impeach her by proving contradictory statements. Attack on her virtue and general credibility does not make such corroboration proper. Pridemore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 620, 111 SW 155. Witness, impeached by proof of contradictory statements, may be sustained by proof of statements consistent with testimony. Cabrera v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 118 SW 1054.

8. See 10 C. L. 2107, notes 66, 67, 68.

9. Where cross-examination of witness and remark of court that witness needed cross-examination tended to discredit witness, proof of his reputation for truth and veracity should have been admitted. Landers v. Quincy, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 543.

10. Where attempt was made to prove contradictory statements of prosecuting witness, state could prove his good reputation for truth. Alderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 525, 111 SW 738. Where witness has been impeached by proof of contradictory statements, proof of his good reputation for truth and veracity is competent. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 196. Prosecuting witness having been impeached by proof of contradictory statements, state could show good reputation for truth, and veracity. State v. Christopher [Mo. App.] 114 SW 549.

11. Impeachment of a witness by proof of conviction of crime is, in Kentucky, an attack upon his general reputation, authorizing the admission in rebuttal of evidence of his good reputation for truth and veracity. Statutes construed. Shields v. Conway [Ky.] 117 SW 340. Where plaintiff's credibility had been attacked by proof of conviction of crime, and evidence that he had simulated an injury, proof of his good reputation for truth and veracity was competent. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 274, 114 SW 453.

12. Where an attempt has been made to impeach a witness by proof of general bad character, the witness may be sustained by testimony of witnesses who say they would believe the witness on oath, though they admit that his general character is bad. Taylor v. State, 5 Ga. App. 237, 62 SE 1048.

13. It has been held error to exclude proof of the character of a defendant for truth and veracity, after he has testified and his reputation for truth and veracity has been attacked, since terms "character" and "reputation" are sometimes used interchangeably, and ordinary witnesses do not understand the distinction. State v. Tawney [Kan.] 99 P 268. Proof that witness is related to a party, or is interested in the event of the trial, or that he has made contradictory statements, is not an attack upon the general reputation of the witness for truth and morality, so as to make com-conviction does not make proof of a subsequent pardon competent.[14] Corroboration of accomplices is usually necessary to sustain conviction in criminal cases.[15]

§ 6. Privilege of witnesses.[16]—See 10 C. L. 2109—Under the federal and state constitutions, no person in a criminal case[17] can be compelled to give evidence against himself,[18] and statutes commonly prohibit any reference to failure of accused to testify.[19] Immunity from compulsory self-incrimination is not a privilege or immunity of national citizenship guaranteed against abridgement by the states by the fourteenth amendment,[20] nor does the constitutional provision as to due process affect the validity of a rule of law of a state as to failure of an accused person to testify.[21] While evidence obtained by illegal seizure and search of a defendant's person, which compels him to incriminate himself, is inadmissible against him,[22] this rule is applicable only to searches of a defendant's person, after an unlawful seizure thereof.[23] Evidence of guilt, which a defendant, either directly or indirectly, is compelled to disclose by an illegal seizure and search of his person under an unlawful arrest, is inadmissible,[24] but if his premises or belongings are searched by another, though without a vestige of authority, the evidence thus dis-petent evidence of his good reputation. Shields v. Conway [Ky.] 117 SW 340.

14. Where witness admitted he had been convicted of felony and sentenced to penitentiary, defense could not show that governor had pardoned him. Parson v. Com. 33 Ky. L. R. 1051, 112 SW 617.

15. Corroboration of accomplice unnecessary. Lonasa v. State [Md.] 71 A 1058. Accomplice must be corroborated to sustain conviction. State v. Gordon, 105 Minn. 217, 117 NW 483. For full discussion, see, Indictment and Prosecution, 12 C. L. 57.

17. A proceeding to punish for contempt for violation of an injunction issued in a civil proceeding is a criminal proceeding within the meaning of the statute, U. S. Rev. § 860. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Sailors' Union of the Pacific, 167 F 809. An inquisition before the grand jury is a criminal case within the meaning of the constitutional provision that no person can be compelled to give evidence against himself. People v. Argo, 237 Ill. 173, 86 NE 679. Proceedings before grand jury, prior to indictment, are not part of criminal prosecution of person subsequently indicted. Persons summoned to testify must claim privilege as witnesses; they are not on trial and cannot refuse to testify on ground that they are on trial. United States v. Price, 163 F 904.

18. Accused is not compelled to give testimony against himself, where witnesses testify that during a scuffle, while officers were attempting to arrest accused, a pistol concealed on his person was exposed, though the arrest was illegal. Croy v. State, 4 Ga. App. 456, 61 SE 848.

19. Accused failure to testify on examining trial could not properly be shown. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. Reversible error to ask accused, who took stand in his own behalf, if he had testified in former trial, he answering no, and for state's attorney to argue that his present testimony was false, because he had not testified before. Code Civ. Proc. 1895, art. 770, prohibits comment or reference to failure of accused to testify. Hare v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 118 SW 544. In two of three prosecutions for illegal liquor sales, accused did not testify. In third, after death of witness who testified against him in other two, accused took stand. Held proper to ask if witness had not testified to sales in other trials, and if he, accused, had not failed to deny them. Sanders v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 156, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 369, 105 SW 803. In forgery prosecution, material admissions by accused having been made, it was not improper for court to comment on his failure to testify. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83.

22, 23. Glover v. State, 4 Ga. App. 455, 61 SE 862.

24. Glover v. State, 4 Ga. App. 455, 61 SE 862. Where a person has been arrested without warrant, evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure of his person is not admissible against him. Gainer v. State, 2 Ga. App. 126, 58 SE 295. Evdence, which one is compelled, either directly or indirectly, to disclose by unlawful search of his person, is not admissible against him. Hughes v. State, 2 Ga. App. 29, 58 SE 390. Incriminating evidence obtained by unlawful seizure and search of defendant while he was under arrest will not sustain a conviction. Sherman v. State, 2 Ga. App. 686, 58 SE 1122. In such case, the state has the burden to prove search after legal arrest, and testimony amounting to a conclusion, does not establish such fact. Sherman v. State, 2 Ga. App. 148, 58 SE 393.

closed may be used against him.[25] The privilege of a person accused of crime is personal and may be waived; thus, where such a person takes the stand in his own behalf, he may be fully cross-examined [26] and impeached the same as any other witness.[27] There is a conflict as to whether the cross-examination of an accused must be confined to matters within the scope of his direct examination.[28] Proof of an involuntary confession is incompetent.[29] If accused takes the stand in his own behalf, he waives his privilege for every subsequent stage of the prosecution.[30] Thus, where a new trial is granted, the transcript of his testimony at the former trial may be introduced.[31]

Under the constitutional provisions under discussion, no witness, in any legal proceeding, can be compelled [32] to give testimony that will tend to incriminate him [33] or subject him to a criminal prosecution. That a question calls for an answer that will degrade, disgrace, or humiliate the witness does not excuse him from answering.[34] If the proposed evidence has a tendency to incriminate the witness, or to establish a link in the chain of evidence which may lead to his conviction, or if the Defendant who takes the stand may be cross-examined the same as any other witness for purpose of impeachment; thus, may be asked concerning conviction of crime. State v. Deal [Or.] 98 P 165.

27. See, also, ante, § 5a. People v. Hinksman, 192 N. Y. 421, 85 NE 676. Accused may be impeached like any other witness. Eads v. State [Wyo.] 101 P 946. General moral character of accused could be shown, he having testified, but his character as violent and turbulent man could not be shown. Sweatt v. State [Ala.] 47 S 194. Accused having become a witness may be questioned as to former contradictory statements, whether voluntary or not, and his answers may be contradicted. Kelly v. State [Ala.] 49 S 535. In prosecution under liquor law, held not error to compel defendant to admit that he received commissions on liquor sales, and that he had retail liquor dealer's license. Coleman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 578, 111 SW 1011. Accused, testifying in his own behalf, may be cross-examined the same as any other witness to determine credibility, but it is improper to prove by him commission of other similar offenses (carrying pistol). Terrell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 569. Accused, testifying for himself, may be asked by state if he has not been convicted before. State v. Benjamin [R. I.] 71 A 65. A defendant who offers himself as a witness may be interrogated concerning any vicious or criminal act of his life. People v. Hinksman, 192 N. Y. 421, 85 NE 676. But proof of his general bad character is inadmissible unless he has himself placed it in issue. Id.

28. The waiver of the constitutional privilege of an accused person who takes the stand in his own behalf extends only to a legal cross-examination upon the subject-matter of the direct examination. Harrold v. Oklahoma Ter. [C. C. A.] 169 F 47. When accused takes stand in his own behalf, he may be cross-examined to test credibility, and cross-examination need not be confined to matters brought out on direct examination. State v. Cloninger, 149 N. C. 567, 63 SE 154. Accused testifying as witness may be cross-examined as any other witness. Cross-examination need not be confined to matters brought out on direct, in Minnesota. State v. Knight, 106 Minn. 371, 119 NW 56. Cross-examination of defendant should be confined to matters covered in examination in chief. State v. Deal [Or.] 98 P 165. 32. One who gave affidavit concerning three persons being investigated for illegal registration, one of whom was himself, was not compelled to give testimony against himself, so as to bar subsequent prosecution for perjury for making false affidavit as to other two. People v. Cahill, 193 N. Y. 232, 86 NE 39. That witness swore that on former occasion he had testified under duress, and that his testimony then given was false, did not tend to sustain objection that he was under duress at time he so swore. State v. Gebbia, 121 La. 1083, 47 S 32.

33. The purpose of such constitutional provisions is to prohibit the compelling of self-criminating testimony from a party or witness. Ex parte Gudenoge [Okl. Cr. App.] 100 P 39.

proposed evidence will disclose the names of persons upon whose testimony the witness might be convicted of a criminal offense or expose him to penalties or forfeitures, he cannot be compelled to answer.[35] Where the privilege is claimed by a witness under oath, it must obtain unless the court can say, as a matter of law, that any direct answer cannot tend to incriminate the witness.[36] Testimony given in obedience to a subpoena commanding the witness to appear and testify is not voluntarily given.[37] When testimony is so given, the witness need not claim the privilege of the statute at the time of giving it, when he has no idea that it will subsequently be used against him; it is sufficient if he claim his privilege at the time it is sought to be used against him in a criminal proceeding.[38] No constitutional or statutory right of a witness is violated by summoning him as placing him under oath,[39] since his privilege is personal, must be claimed by him and passed on by the court, and since he does not become a witness until sworn.[40] Where the examination is before a court in a proceeding in which the witness is not entitled to counsel, the court may postpone the hearing to allow witness to consult counsel.[41]

The privilege is personal to the witness and may be claimed or waived by him.[42] If waived, he cannot subsequently object to the use of the evidence against him.[43] It cannot be claimed for him by others as by his counsel,[44] nor can the parties exclude the testimony of a witness on the ground of privilege.[45] A corporation cannot plead the privilege against an order to produce books and papers, nor can an officer refuse to produce them on the ground of incriminating the corporation.[46]

Statutes commonly provide that witnesses may be compelled to give testimony in certain proceedings and for certain purposes,[47] and that testimony which a witness is thus compelled to give cannot subsequently be used against him.[48] The im-

47. Laws 1907-08, p. 604, c. 69 (Enforcement Act), § 4, contemplates a proceeding based on complaint and affidavit that there has been a violation of some penal provision of the act; witness need not give criminating testimony unless proceeding is so based and is instituted for purpose of investigating some complaint made. Ex parte. Gudenoge [Okl. Cr. App.] 100 P 39. The Interstate Commerce Commission has power to compel witnesses to testify only when investigating complaints for violations of the interstate commerce act; it has no such power when making independent investigations to keep itself informed, and for the purpose of recommending legislation. 48. Under U. S. Rev. St. § 860, testimony given by witness under subpoena in bankruptcy proceeding cannot be used against him in criminal proceeding; prejudicial error to allow him to be cross-examined and contradicted in such prosecution, as to his testimony in bankruptcy proceeding. Alkon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 163 F 810. Under Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, subd. 9, no testimony given by bankrupt at creditor's meeting can be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding. Hence, cross-examination as to testimony so given was improper. Jacobs v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 694. Privision of bankruptcy act not waived by bankrupt's

munity granted by such a statute must be as broad as the constitutional privilege,[49] and must afford absolute immunity against future prosecution for the offense to which the question relates.[50] An indemnity statute should be so construed as to secure to the witness his constitutional right, and at the same time so as to aid prosecuting officers, and not to hinder unduly the administration of justice.[51] One who testifies after conviction and sentence is not entitled to be discharged under a statute providing for immunity from punishment.[52] Where a statute relating to investigations of particular crimes provides for the entry of an order by the court, making a witness immune from prosecution upon evidence given by him, the order of the court can be no broader in effect than the statute under which it is entered,[53] and, where the statute grants immunity only as to the crime being investigated, a witness may claim his privilege and refuse to answer questions when he may be exposed to prosecution for other crimes, or to actions for penalties or forfeitures.[54]

A witness is entitled to his privileges and immunities as well when his deposition is being taken as when examined in open court,[55] and a refusal to answer questions which would be an abuse of process is not contempt and cannot be punished.[56] But a refusal to obey a subpoena or to be sworn may be punished.[57]

That a party, sought to be examined prior to the trial; may not be obliged to testify, is no ground for vacating an order for his examination;[58] the proper time to claim the privilege is when the examination is had.[59]

Privileges and exemptions from service of process are elsewhere discussed.[60]

§ 7. Subpoenas, attendance and fees.[61] See 10 C. L. 2112—The recovery of witness fees paid by a party, or the right to have such fees taxed as costs, is treated elsewhere.[62] The amount allowed witnesses is statutory,[63] and there can be no re-taking stand in criminal proceeding, since statute excludes all proof of testimony given by him in bankruptcy proceeding. Id.

49. People v. Argo, 237 Ill. 173, 86 NE 679. Rev. St. 1899, § 8989, grants immunity to witnesses testifying in proceedings under anti-trust act, under order of court, and to those producing books and papers, and witnesses compelled by order of court to testify or produce documentary evidence cannot set up constitutional privilege. State v. Standard Oil Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 902. Pen. Code, § 419, relating to testimony in proceedings to examine into illegal registration, grants complete immunity from prosecution; hence, constitutional rights of person making affidavit not violated. People v. Cahill, 193 N. Y. 232, 86 NE 39. Protection given by U. S. Rev. St. § 860, is not coextensive with constitutional privilege; witness may properly refuse to answer incriminating questions in pension proceeding. In re O'Shea, 166 F 180.

covery on the quantum meruit for services as witness.[64] A party testifying in his own behalf is not entitled to witness fees or mileage, whether suing or defending for himself, or in a representative capacity or testifying for another joined with him.[65]

Courts have power to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses,[66] the extent of the power [67] and the duty of the witness summoned [68] being generally controlled by statute. Penalties for failure to obey a subpoena are recoverable under some statutes.[69] A subpoena should be properly issued and signed,[70] but irregularities in its issuance may be waived by the witness.[71]

The writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum is the common-law precept issued by courts to bring a prisoner into court to testify.[72] It is the process of the court, not of the judge, though issued by a judge in chambers,[73] and a motion to quash the writ is properly addressed to the court, and not to the judge who issued it.[74] Its quashal is a matter resting largely in discretion.[75] The writ should not issue except to bring in a person competent to testify.[76]

Courts have inherent power to compel the production of documentary evidence [77] and usually are given statutory power to issue and compel obedience to subpoenas duces tecum.[78] A subpoena duces tecum should describe with reasonable certainty the documents desired.[79] A party is not entitled to have produced a mass of books or papers for the purpose of searching them for evidence.[80]

80. American Car & Foundry Co. v. Alexandria Water Co., 221 Pa. 529, 70 A 867.

A witness called as an expert may be required to give opinion evidence though he has not received other compensation than that paid to ordinary witnesses,[81] though he could not be required to make special preparation.[82] No implied contract to pay an expert more than statutory fees arises from the mere fact that he is subpoenaed and required to testify.[83] But if he performs special services in preparing or qualifying himself to testify, an implied contract to pay him reasonable compensation may arise,[84] and an express contract to pay will be upheld;[85] but a contract by which a patient agrees to pay extra compensation to a physician in case he is called to testify is void.[86]

In Wisconsin the mere fact that an expert is summoned to testify in a criminal case does not make the county liable for his fees.[87] The county is liable only when the statutory procedure, provided for the bringing in of witnesses by order of court, is followed.[88] Witness in a civil suit is not liable for contempt in failing to obey a subpoena unless his witness fees have been paid or tendered him [89] or he has waived the same;[90] but in Michigan fees for witnesses and service of subpoenas in criminal cases need not be paid in advance.[91] In prosecutions by a special state department, subpoenas should be issued by the county clerk in the usual way, and the question of liability of state or county adjusted after the trial and after the expenses have been incurred.[92]
