jurisdiction is or is about to be exceeded or usurped,[45] and is granted whenever judicial functions are assumed not rightfully belonging to the person or court assuming them.[46] The exercise of a ministerial or executive function cannot ordinarily be controlled or regulated by prohibition,[47] yet, in the absence of any other adequate remedy, it some times issues to prevent unauthorized individuals from usurping judicial power [48] and to confine public officers performing statutory duties in the exercise of powers lawfully conferred to the use of the means expressly indicated.[49] Since the writ only lies to the court which exceeds the bounds of its jurisdiction,[50] and, probably in some exceptional cases, to a judge at chambers,[51] it will not run against a receiver, commissioners and master appointed by a chancery court.[52]

prohibition will not be considered unless it is shown that relief has been unsuccessfully sought in the lower court,[54] but when the writ has been applied for, considered and denied by the court, its decision is final,[55] and under statute, after the return from the judge ordered to make a return has answered, the superior court issuing the order must pronounce finally and summarily on the right of jurisdiction.[56] The writ will not issue unless the applicant shows himself to be an interested party [57] and files a proper petition or complaint,[58] for the court will not assume that a court will exceed its jurisdiction.[59] That a receiver, commissioner and master appointed by the chancery court proceed in discharge of duties imposed upon them in void proceedings,[60] although on an application for a writ of prohibition to prohibit the trial judge from settling a bill of exceptions in a criminal case on the ground that no notice of application for additional time was given, it will be assumed that the court will take such action on the application for relief as will make it competent for it to settle the bill without error, and if necessary grant relief under statute before settling the bill;[61] and in an application for a writ to prohibit the state corporation commission from taking jurisdiction in a cause pending before it, where the application states facts sufficient to confer jurisdiction, it will be presumed that the commission will not proceed beyond its jurisdiction even if the complaint prays for relief over which the commission has no control,[62] and the assurance of the attorney general, who is the commission's legal adviser, that it will not, is a sufficient guarantee that excessive jurisdiction will not be exercised.[63] The supervisory power of a court must be invoked within a reasonable time,[64] and where court rules require it, service of a copy of the affidavit and notice of the time of hearing of the application for a writ must be made on the parties in interest,[65] but an interested party need not necessarily be named as a party in the original action.[66] The writ does not run against a party in the trial court nor against the judge of the court, but only against the court,[67] but the rule to show cause against the issuance of a writ of prohibition must run against both the tribunal to be prohibited from exercising jurisdiction and the person having adverse interests to be affected by the writ,[68] and if the writ is awarded, it likewise should run against both as parties to the same.[69] The question of the prematurity of the application for a writ of prohibition is considered at the time the rule nisi issues.[70] Where error appears and is duly brought up, the question of time in making the application is not all controlling,[71] and the writ will not be lightly dismissed on a plea of prematurity.[72] The only question involved in a proceeding to restrain a lower court from proceeding with a criminal trial is whether or not the court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter before it and of the person of the petitioner,[73] and on an application for a writ of prohibition, a moot question,[74] the constitutionality of a statute or a question of practice thereunder[75] cannot be considered. The writ will not issue for the accommodation of an intervenor where the effect thereof will be to retard the principal action.[76] An appellate court has no original jurisdiction to issue a writ of prohibition, but may issue the same only in aid of its jurisdiction,[77] or where the same is necessary to effectuate its superintending control over "inferior courts,"[78] and in order that such court may issue the writ in aid of its jurisdiction, there must be before the court something on or with regard to which its jurisdiction may be exercised.[79] The court of appeals of the District of Columbia has no such inherent superintending or supervisory power over the inferior courts of the District as will warrant the issue of a writ of prohibition to control an inferior court,[80] but it has the power to issue such writ in aid of its appellate jurisdiction,[81] and it is not necessary that an attempt shall have been made to invoke that jurisdiction before it can be said to attach in order to authorize the issue of the writ.[82] In West Virginia, as to writs of prohibition, the original jurisdiction of the circuit courts and of the supreme court is concurrent,[83] and it is usual and commendable to apply first to the circuit court for the writ, and if it is there preliminarily refused upon the petition then to apply to the supreme court for the writ,[84] but a final judgment of a circuit court in such case, upon the merits, is a bar to a new proceeding in prohibition for the same cause and

Formulae, information, processes, literary and like mental productions. See 10 C. L. 1281—The right of a servant or employe to make use of his employer's trade secrets is elsewhere treated.[3] Equity recognizes trade secrets as property and will protect them by injunction against disclosure or use by violation of contract or confidential relations.[4] Any person lawfully acquiring knowledge of trade secrets not patented may, however, use them if the manner of obtaining knowledge and the use of them would not constitute a breach of confidence or good faith.[5] It is a mooted question whether an accounting for profits from wrongful use of a secret process will lie without proof of fraudulent intent.[6] Laches may bar relief,[7] but one who wrongfully appropriates a secret manufacturing process knowing that it belongs to another cannot set up laches against a demand for an accounting of profits.[8]

At common law the author of a literary composition had an absolute property right in the production of which he could not be deprived so long as it remained unpublished.[9] He could not be compelled to publish his production [10] and could allow a restricted or limited use thereof without parting with his property therein; [11] but an author who writes and delivers an article, pursuant to an agreement that his employer shall become the sole owner of the copyright, thereby surrenders his literary property therein and cannot maintain trespass thereto based on the manner of publication.[12]

23. NOTE. Rule in Shelley's Case applied to personalty: The Supreme Court of Delaware has recently refused to extend the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case as many courts profess to have done, to gifts of personal property, on the ground that the extension would be against both reason and authority. Jones v. Rees [Del.] 69 A 785. The latter proposition, with a few exceptions outside of Delaware, is doubtful; the former seems not to have been closely examined by the courts.

The rule in Shelley's Case, as an inflexible rule of property applicable to the attempted creation of estates under a certain form of words, 7 Columbia L. R. 550, was doubtless originally a protective rule of feudal tenure to eliminate one of the many means devised to defraud the lord of the incidents of seigniory. Van Grutten v. Foxwell, App. Cas. 658. Hence there is no historical reason for its application to personalty. Moreover, to have a gift of chattels such that the rule might operate strictly by way of analogy, would require that the words "to A for life, remainder to his administrators, executors and assigns," be used, not "remainder to his heirs." Bennett v. Bennett, 217 Ill. 434, 75 NE 339, 4 L. R. A. 470. Yet it is always the latter case that arises. There was no technical rule at common law that the word "heirs" might not be used in disposing personalty as a word of purchase, Powell v. Boggis, 35 Beav. 535, and no intimation appears in the earliest cases that the rule in Shelley's Case obtains in gifts of personalty. Thus, not only the word "issue" in a devise of a term for life, afterward to his issue, Warman v. Seaman, Rep. Temp. Finch 279, but even the words "heirs of the body" which should have brought the bequest literally within the rule, were considered words of purchase. Peacock v. Spooner, 2 Vern. 43, 195. The question was purely one of the testator's intent. On the one hand, a devise of a term to a wife and after her death to the heirs of her body, was held to give an absolute estate to the wife, on the ground that the testator intended a gift to the wife in tail, "which could not be" in personalty. Bray v. Buffield 2 Ch. Cas. 236. Similarly, in Richards v. Bergavenny, 2 Vern. 324 a similar intention was found from the fact that the personalty was meant to go with realty given in tail. On the other hand, an assignment of a long term in trust for A for ninety-nine years, if he lived so long, then to his wife for life remainder to the

Reversions.[See 10 C. L. 1282]

Vested and contingent interests and remainders.[See 10 C. L. 1282]—Where payment or division is postponed, the estate is contingent or vested according as the element of time is or is not of the substance of the gift.[25] A gift to one dependent on the heirs of A begotten on his wife did not go absolutely to the first taker, the creation of the short term out of the long one sufficiently showing the donor's intent not to assign the entire term to A. Ward v. Bradley, 2 Vern. 24. The succeeding interval was broken only by Dafforne v. Goodman, 2 Vern. 362, expressly following Peacock v. Spooner, supra.

Apparently, the first recorded instance of the application to personalty of the rule in Shelley's Case is Webb v. Webb, 1 P. Wms. 132. Lord Harcourt decided that an assignment of a term in trust to A for life, remainder to his right heirs, with intervening remainders, vested the entire term in A, saying, "I never heard it said before Peacock v. Spooner, that the limitations of a term in equity differ from the case of a freehold at common law." The gift in this, as in the earlier cases, was of a chattel real, but the step was soon taken from chattels real to chattels personal. Butterfield v. Butterfield, 1 Ves. 133, 155; Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Ves. 646. Notwithstanding, it had been previously held by Lord Harwicke, who decided Garth v. Baldwin, supra, that the words "heirs of the body" could be words of purchase when such an intention appeared elsewhere. Hodgeson v. Bussey, 2 Atk. 80; accord, Hockley v. Mowbry, 3 B. C. C. 81; cf. Knight v. Ellis, 2 B. C. C. 570.

At most, therefore, in England the rule in Shelley's Case as applied to personalty is a rule of construction, easily yielding to the apparent intention of the testator or donor. This, the strongest supporters of the rule in the United States readily admit. Glover v. Condell, 163 Ill. 566, 45 NE 173, 35 L. R. A. 360; Key's Estate, 4 Pa. Dist. 124; Taylor v. Lindsay, 14 R. I. 518, only one being driven to protest along with such admission "that not to apply the rule to personalty is to prostrate one of the great landmarks of property." Horne v. Lyeth, 4 Harr. & J. [Md.] 431. This result may be attributed in part to the fact that to make the rule inflexible would more often defeat the intention of the testator than in the case of realty a consequence which equity strains to avoid. Knight v. Ellis, supra. Indeed, most cases cited in support of the rule merely sustain the principle that personalty cannot be entailed. Gross v. Sheeler, 7 Houst. [Del.] 280. In England, the cases in point seem limited to instances where the words would create an entail in realty. The words in the bequest are construed in terms of realty, and then, if by the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, an estate tail would have been created, the absolute interest in the personalty is given. In the United States its operation has been extended to words that would create a fee simple in realty. Cf. Horne v. Lyeth, supra. Peculiarly enough, in at least one state, the rule is still applied to personalty though the words would not vest the remainder in the ancestor in a case of realty because of the abrogation of the rule by statute. Powell v. Brandon, 24 Miss. 343; cf. Sands v. Old Colony Trust Co., 195 Mass. 575, 81 NE 300. A further difficulty encountered in the American cases arises where the courts failed to distinguish between a proper application of the rule in Shelley's Case to discover an entail, and an analogous application of the rule against perpetuities where personalty is given over after the death of the first legatee without issue. Both rules have been indiscriminately termed the rule in Shelley's Case. Glover v. Condell, supra; Mason v. Pate's Ex'r, 34 Ala. 379. The decision of the Delaware court is commendable. It is not to be wondered that eminent judges have been puzzled to discern by what process the intention of a donor of personalty must be defeated by the operation of a rule which acts upon a remainder to the "heirs" of one who takes an estate of freehold, because of the technical meaning of that word when applied to real property. Herrick v. Franklin, L. R. 6 Eq. 593; Smith v. Butcher, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 113. It is curious, also, that courts of equity should have felt bound to follow, at least to an extent, an arbitrary rule of real property at common law, when sustaining interests in chattels unknown to the common law.—From 8 Columbia L. R. 573.

To wife for life, use and control of all estate real and personal with power to use for own use and support of children so much of principal as she might elect, etc., remaining property to go to children at her death, held to give life estate only with power to use principal. In re Davis' Will, 59 Misc. 310, 112 NYS 265. To wife for life to use and enjoy and receive rents and profits for her sole benefit, held to create only a life estate. In re VanValkenburgh's Will, 60 Misc. 497, 113 NYS 1108. To wife "to take and use same and net income during her natural life without giving security as life tenant," without limitation over, held life estate only in personalty. In re Freeman's Estate, 220 Pa. 343, 69 A 816. Niece held to take only life estate in residue, remainder to her children, if any. In re Keene's Estate, 221 Pa. 201, 70 A 706.

Support: Where mother received money from brother to use for her maintenance if she desired or needed it, with understanding daughter should have whatever was left at mother's death, mother could pay son such money in consideration he support her during life, and agreement having been performed daughter could not recover from son. Zimmerman v. Hubbs, 115 NYS 541. Charge on legacy to son requiring latter to pay widow $800 as it became necessary for her needs held absolute and not contingent on necessity to keep widow from pauperism. In re Ohse's Will, 137 Wis. 474, 119 NW 93. Widow held entitled to determine for herself character of needs and time when payment to her was necessary to meet such needs. Id.

Vested or contingent interests: Where devise of residue to wife was charged with payment of $10,000 to testator's niece on day of her marriage, niece did not take vested interest in such sum but became entitled thereto only in event of her marriage. § 4. Transfer, loss and abandonment.[41]—See 10 C. L. 1285—Transfer is usually by sale,[42] gift,[43] inheritance [44] or will.[45] That one commits trespass by placing personalty on another's land does not deprive him of the property or the right to recover its value.[46] The mere fact that property loses its marks of identification does not give it the character of lost property.[47]

Abandonment is the relinquishment or surrender of rights or property by one person to another [48] and includes both intention to abandon [49] and the external act by which the intention is carried out.[50] If one abandons property he who thereafter takes possession becomes owner,[51] but the proof as to abandonment must be cogent and decisive.[52]

Treasure-trove at common law usually denotes any gold or silver in coin, plate or bullion found hidden in the earth or some private place but not lying on the ground, the owner of the treasure being unknown.[53] In the absence of statute,[54] title to treasure-trove belongs to the finder as against all the world except the true owner,[55] the place of finding ordinarily not being material.[56] Where several persons are joint finders of treasure readily divisible, each is entitled to an equal share [57] and may sue for the recovery thereof.[58]

Y. 145, 86 NE 986. County unauthorized to borrow money. McCurdy v. Shiawassee County [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 873, 118 NW 625. Grant of authority embraces power to do act incident thereto and to carry authority into execution. Contract for insane asylum authorized and county held to have power to impose conditions for benefit of materialmen. United States Gypsum Co. v. Gleason, 135 Wis. 539, 116 NW 238. Authority of county commissioners to build court house includes authority to employ architect to superintend construction and draw plans. Spalding County v. Chamberlain & Co., 130 Ga. 649, 61 SE 533. Under various statutes of Pennsylvania as construed by supreme court, city of Allegheny was authorized to grant use of public grounds for railway passenger station. Larkin v. Allegheny [C. C. A.] 162 F 611. Cities in Georgia have power to contract for water supply for their inhabitants and for fire protection under "general welfare" clause of charters. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. v. Columbus, 161 F 135. City clearly authorized to contract for water supply. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 47 S 358. Authorized to confer proper privileges and franchises upon public service corporation. Id. Limitations upon taxing and bonding powers of city of Tampa as expressed in charter and statutes do not preclude contract for water supply. Id. Contracts for public service will be sustained where authorized and terms not clearly violative of some provision or principle of law. Id. City not authorized to grant exclusive use of streets when contracting for water. Id. In absence of authority conferred by legislative act or charter, city has no power to contract to furnish water to person outside territory. City of Paris v. Sturgeon [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 459. Sayle's Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 418, conferring power on cities incorporated under general incorporation law to supply inhabitants with water, etc., does not authorize city to furnish water to nonresident outside territory. Id. Petition to enjoin city from cutting off water supply, though stating that city was incorporated under general incorporation law and was therefore authorized by Sayle's Ann. St. 1897, art. 418, to furnish inhabitants with water, held defective in failing to state plaintiff as inhabitant or that water was for use within city limits. Id. Allegation of "legal and binding contract" ineffective. Id. Lease of city property for armory reciting ordinance and its approval under which lease was made held valid under Baltimore City Charter, art. 4, §§ 1, 13, authorizing purchase and disposal of property by city. Gottlieb-Knabe & Co. v. Macklin [Md.] 71 A 949. Baltimore City Charter, art. 4, § 13, authorizing lease for "fixed and limited term," held not to prevent renting of armory for single evening or series of evenings, whether consecutive or not. Id. Charter power liberally construed to avoid loss of revenue. Id. Lease of public property for temporary and casual public entertainments to avoid loss of revenue not unconstitutional invasion of rights of citizens engaged in entertaining business as depriving them of property without due process of law. Town not liable for unauthorized improvement of highway. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939. State officer not authorized to extend contract. Burgard v. State, 61 Misc. 23, 114 NYS 550. Executive officers of city mere agents. City of Momence v. Shannon & Co., 135 Ill. App. 533. Can only make contracts authorized by ordinance. Id. Mayor has no power to bind unless authorized by governing body or state. Coleman v. Hartford [Ala.] 47 S 594. Where attorney rendered services to mayor and marshal and council repudiated claim, town was not liable. Id. Inspector employed to oversee work of grading and paving alley unauthorized to order contractor to excavate on land adjoining. McGrath v. St. Louis [Mo.] 114 SW 611. Ordinary authorized to make contract for court house on behalf of county not authorized to accept assignment of sums due contractor so as to bind county. Jones v. Bank of Cumming [Ga.] 63 SE 36. Under charter of Lowell (St. 1896, p. 364, c. 415), §§ 3, 6, 7, superintendent of streets had no authority to purchase gravel. "Purchase" of "material" within § 3; construing statute. Bartlett v. Lowell, 201 Mass. 151, 87 NE 195. County commissioners authorized to contract for employes to oversee and inspect work upon highways. Armstrong v. St. Louis County, Com'rs, 103 Minn. 1, 114 NW 89. Laws 1883, p. 666, c. 490, gives aqueduct commissioners power to make contract under seal. Peterson v. New York, 194 N. Y. 437, 87 NE 772. Commissioners given plenary power over form of contract. Id. Where commissioners have plenary power as to form of contract and city as-boards[72] have only such power to contract on behalf of the public as is conferred by law, and one contracting with them is bound to know the scope of their authority.[73] Irregular contracts may be ratified if the municipality had the power to make the contract in the first instance,[74] but the power to ratify is no greater than the power to contract.[75] Ultra vires contracts are void,[76] though the ultra vires character of a serts that they were unauthorized to make sealed contract, city has burden of showing that sealed instruments were not usual form of city contracts. Id. No showing that contract was detrimental to interests of city or was in unusual form. Id. In construing power conferred, court will imply that power to follow usual and customary conduct of business is bestowed on agents. Id.

72. Board of county commissioners. State v. Dickinson County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 540, 95 P 392. Board of supervisors agent of county with powers defined by law. Wadsworth v. Livingston County Sup'rs, 115 NYS 8. Board of education. Perkins v. Newark Board of Education, 161 F 767. Employment of architect to prepare plans for $400,000 building when only $200,000 appropriated, unauthorized. Id. No presumption that additional appropriations would be made. Id. Board of education authorized to erect and repair schoolhouses. Public School Act of Oct. 19, 1903, §§ 52, 53, 72, 76 (P. L. pp. 21, 26, 28). Scola v. Montclair Board of Education [N. J. Law] 71 A 299. Authorized to build central heating plant for schools. Id. Nothing in act creating, road board of Bibb county (Acts 1871-72 p. 221) or amendment (Acts 1873, p. 221) or road laws of state (Pol. Code 1895, §§ 516-519, inc.) authorizing board to employ counsel at county's expense to defend mandamus brought to compel opening of road. Ross v. Bibb Co., 130 Ga. 585, 61 SE 465. Petition for fees properly dismissed on general demurrer. Id. Under Comp. Laws § 3275, board of public works authorized to contract in their own names as to water and light rates and to bring suit thereon. Board of Public Works v. Pinch, 152 Mich. 517, 15 Det. Leg. N. 289, 116 NW 408. Under Okl. St. 1893, § 395, power to negotiate sale of county refunding bonds conferred exclusively on county treasurer and contract by board of county commissioners with broker void. Theis v. Beaver County Com'rs [Okl.] 97 P 973. Board of county commissioners could not allow claims growing out of contracts which were unauthorized. Warrant issued created no liability. Id. No liability against county by services renered, however beneficial. Id. Resolution designating certain paper as one in which certain notices should be published for certain period held not contract between county and proprietor of newspaper. World Pub. Co. v. Douglas County, 79 Neb. 849, 113 NW 539. Mere exercise of supervisory power of board over acts of county treasurer. Id.

School City of South Bend [Ind. App.] 86 NE 860. Contract by superintendent of streets for gravel unauthorized. Bartlett v. Lowell, 201 Mass. 151, 87 NE 195. Where board of trustees had no power to delegate authority to town engineer to conclusively determine fulfillment of contract for improvement, contractors bound to take notice. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Where division engineer of state rejected material for road and contractor substituted more extensive material, he could not recover difference. Burgard v. State, 61 Misc. 23, 114 NYS 550. Person contracting with city board of education chargeable with knowledge of official limitations. Lawrence v. Toothaker [N. H.] 71 A 543. Members not bound personally, there being no guaranty of authority and both parties believing board authorized. Id. No recovery on quantum meruit. Bartlett v. Towell, 201 Mass. 151, 87 NE 195; State v. Dickinson County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 540, 95 P 392.

74. If action for purchase of waterworks by town was irregular when acting under St. 1882, p. 103, c. 142, § 7, town had power to "ratify and adopt" contract. Seward v. Revere Water Co., 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749. Contract equally binding if entered into under St. 1882, p. 103, c. 142, § 7, and adopted by ratification, or if made under St. 1904, p. 469, c. 457, as result of further negotiations when embodying same conditions. Id. Where county court charged with certain duties undertakes in good faith to execute same but fails to observe some requirement of law so that acts are irregular, such acts if acquiesced in by county are binding. Sparks v. Jasper County, 213 Mo. 218, 112 SW 265.

75. Municipality has no power to compromise contract unauthorized except to eliminate unauthorized elements. Wadsworth v. Livingston County Sup'rs, 115 NYS 8. Unauthorized contract for gravel by superintendent of streets not subject to ratification where mayor's only power was to approve. Bartlett v. Lowell, 201 Mass. 151, 87 NE 195.

76. An ultra vires municipal contract in its true sense is a contract wholly outside the powers of municipality. Bell v. Kirkland, 102 Minn. 213, 113 NW 271. Agreement for purchase of waterworks by village at expiration of ten years ultra vires, where not granted power to purchase. Phillips Village Corp. v. Phillips Water Co. [Me.] 71 A 474. Bill in equity to enforce ultra vires contract of village cannot be maintained. Id. Contract by board of county commissioners to employ agency to perform duties imposed upon public officers ultra vires and void. State v. Dickinson County Com'rs, 77 Kan. 540, 95 P 392. Agreement to pay for services invalid on ground of public policy. Wadsworth v. Livingston County Sup'rs, 115 NYS 8. Contract by which municipality undertakes to give individual control of litigation is ultra vires and void as against public policy. City of Carbondale v. Brush, 133 Ill. App. 236. Lease of property by mayor and council pursuant to Baltimore City Charter, art. 4, § 13, for armory, not rendered ultra vires contract may be eliminated where the contract is executed,[77] or a city may be estopped to plead ultra vires.[78] A city cannot by contract deprive itself of any of its legislative powers.[79] Provisions of law applicable to the subject-matter are a part of the contract, whether expressed or not,[80] and a contract for a public service is not objectionable from its exclusive character.[81] A board of elections compelled under mandamus to publish notices in a newspaper cannot avoid the payment of the contract price though the writ is reversed on appeal.[82]

An implied contract arises when the federal government appropriates property as its own which it does not claim.[83] A contract by agents of the United States though omitting the name of the government is not changed in its essential character.[84]

§ 2. How initiated.[85]—See 10 C. L. 1288—Statutory conditions precedent as to the mode of exercising the power to contract, such as the passage of ordinances and resolutions,[86] authority from voters,[87] provision for funds,[88] and like matters,[89] should be by concurrent action of lessors and lessees in renting such armory for entertainments. Gottlieb-Knabe & Co. v. Macklin [Md.] 71 A 949.

77. Moore v. Ramsey County, 104 Minn. 30, 115 NW 750; Morlarity v. New York, 59 Misc. 204, 110 NYS 842. Fully performed, ultra vires contract unassailable. Bell v. Kirkland, 102 Minn. 213, 113 NW 271. Where only small portion of contract was void in any sense and contract was substantially executed, such facts are strong considerations in refusing to hold it void. Id. Ultra vires doctrine should be so administered as not to defeat the ends of justice or work a legal wrong. Id. Contract for construction of sewer being fully authorized is ultra vires only in the secondary or restricted sense. Id. Failure to secure right of way through all private lands, in contract for construction of sewer, does not invalidate entire contract. Id.

78. City estopped to plead ultra vires where additional improvement of street was illegally included in contractor's bid, but work performed and council authorized to contract. Disregard of charter provision as to bids. Peterson v. Ionia, 152 Mich. 678, 15 Det. Leg. N. 389, 116 NW 562. Recital of bond estoppel of surety's assertion that contract was ultra vires. Bell v. Kirkland, 102 Minn. 213, 113 NW 271.

79. Agreement by city engineer that sidewalk be graded only to certain depth would not deprive city of charter power to grade sidewalks, though engineer had authority and made contract for consideration. City of Marshall v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 849.

80. Law authorizing regulation of public service corporation part of contract for public service. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 47 S 358. Contract for public service containing unreasonable, unenforcible provisions may be relieved by law providing for regulation of service. Id. Terms of contract for public service subject to right of governmental authority under existing laws to regulate rendering of service and charges. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 48 S 639.

81. No objection that franchise to water company was exclusive and precluded competition by city, where city had power to contract for water supply for term of years. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. v. Columbus, 161 F 135.

82. Morning Tel. Co. v. New York, 61 Misc. 511, 115 NYS 549.

83. Appropriation of patented invention by government officers. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 365. Knowledge of appropriation by patentee at time immaterial, since owner of patent is not required to guard same from appropriations for public purpose. Id.

86. Where Acts 1903, p. 418, c. 225, § 7 (Burn's Ann. St. 1908, § 6497), made consent of common council prerequisite to contract for erection of building, there could be no recovery for contract for school building by trustees in disregard of statute. Slattery v. School City of South Bend [Ind. App.] 86 NE 860. More than mere change in plan of building contracted for in proper manner and consequently independent. Id. Trustees of school district can only bind district by corporate meeting as provided by law. Cooke v. White Common School Dist. No. 7, 33 Ky. L. R. 926, 111 SW 686. Under Act May 23, 1893 (P. L. 113), requiring approval of chief burgess to resolutions, a resolution for borrowing money and judgment note were invalid. Long v. Lemoyne Borough [Pa.] 71 A 211. Under Bay City Consolidated Charter (Loc. Acts 1903, p. 720, No. 514), §§ 166, 167, city council had no power to provide for city electric lighting plant without adoption of resolution determining expediency of purpose, based on two-thirds vote of aldermen. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. v. Bay City [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1039, 119 NW 440. Resolution after letting of contracts ineffectual, being attempt to supply preliminary power, not ratification. Id. Where statute (Laws 1901, p. 58; Ann. St. 1906, § 5503) provided that ordinances do not become effective until 10 days after approval, and another statute required street improvements to be initiated by ordinance (Rev. St. 1899, complied with, and a contract in disregard thereof is invalid.[90] In the letting of municipal contracts, it is frequently required that bids be called for [91] by proper published notice of the contemplated contract,[92] and that the contract be awarded to the lowest bidder.[93] The object of such provisions is to "prevent favoritism, cor-§§ 5508, 5561; Ann. St. 1906, pp. 2824, 2882), contract awarded pursuant to advertisement held void, since such advertisement made 5 days before ordinance became effective. Cushing v. Russell [Mo. App.] 114 SW 556. Ordinance contracting with street railway invalid, where rule as to advertisement prescribed by by-law pursuant to statute suspended to permit passage at same meeting. Eggers v. Newark [N. J. Law] 71 A 665.

87. Under granted power, village could not compel appraisal of waterworks until vote to purchase. Phillips Village Corp. v. Phillips Water Co. [Me.] 71 A 474. Authority from voters required before contract for sewers pursuant to Laws 1907, p. 388, c. 428, by general village law (Laws 1897, p. 440, c. 414). Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127.

88. Appropriation precedent to letting contract for bridge. Rev. St. 1899, § 5188 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2705). Trask v. Livingston County, 210 Mo. 582, 109 SW 656. Action of council as to purchase of electric lighting plant invalid, where contracts not submitted to and approved by board of estimates, and funds provided. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co. v. Bay City [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1039, 119 NW 440. Breach of contract not basis of suit where excess revenues insufficient to meet contract and no levy of special tax to create sinking fund as required by constitution and statutes. Fund derived from unauthorized tax levy not to be looked to. Ault v. Hill County [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 425, afd. [Tex.] 116 SW 359. Certificate, under Rev. St. 1898, § 2702 (old number) not in compliance therewith when not certifying that specified sum of money for contract to improve street is in treasury to credit of fund from which to be drawn, and not appropriated for other purposes. Village of Carthage v. Diekmeier [Ohio] 87 NE 178. Where defect in certificate discovered and amended, though in figures before execution of contract, and certificate properly filed and recorded, such certificate is limitation of amount to which corporation is liable. Id. Claim for extra work on bridge not to be made unless appropriation by common council to county as provided by Burn's Ann. St. 1901, § 5694 p. 1 (Burn's Ann. St. 1908, § 5939). Under statutes, complaint held insufficient as not alleging that appropriation had been made. Talbott v. St. Joseph County Com'rs [Ind. App.] 85 NE 376. Tax levy, or submission of project to people, not precedent to erection of county courthouse where available funds on hand. Spalding County v. Chamberlin & Co., 130 Ga. 649, 61 SE 533.

89. Village Law, Laws 1897, p. 440, c. 414, § 260, requiring map of sewer system before contracting for same, does not require every lateral sewer which might become necessary to be shown. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127.

91. Resolution that roadway be built two feet higher than existing survey, where land improved for street, held within Ionia Charter (Loc. Acts 1887, p. 616, No. 485, as amended by Loc. Acts 1897, p. 234, No. 352), § 108, requiring bid when improvement in excess of $100. Peterson v. Ionia, 152 Mich. 678, 15 Det. Leg. N. 389, 116 NW 662. Under Good Roads Act (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 432, c. 232) as to contracts for highways paid partly by state, selectmen were unauthorized to make contract either orally or written without competition, or employ men and teams to do work for reasonable compensation. Kelley v. Torrington, 80 Conn. 378, 68 A 855. Statute mandatory. Id. Requirements of Pub. Acts 1905, p. 432, c. 232, providing for improvements of highways at expense of state, not to be waived by town selectmen. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939. Refusal to submit question to jury as to waiver of bond proper, since waiver by town officers not authorized. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939.

92. Acts 1905, p. 404, c. 129, § 265 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959), providing for filing of detailed plans and specifications with town engineer or clerk is for benefit of prospective bidders, and only requires filing within reasonable time before notice of letting of contract. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Letting of county bridge contract at spot half mile from bridge site, where advertised to be let, not in compliance with statute requiring public notice of proposed letting of contract, stating time and place. Sparks v. Jasper County, 213 Mo. 218, 112 SW 265. Evidence held to support finding that bridge commissioner and bidders, in letting contract, did not know if other bidders were at site where contract was advertised to be let. Id.

93. Where Detroit Charter 1904, § 241, required contract to be let to lowest bidder, etc., city had no power to pass ordinance limiting hours of labor of employes of city contractors, thus increasing bids. Bird v. Detroit, 153 Mich. 525, 15 Det. Leg. N. 502, 116 NW 1065. New York City commissioner of water, gas and electricity, has no power to make regulation that bids for public work be signed by corporation or agent. Contract illegal when entered into by city with higher bidder because lowest bid disregarded commissioner's arbitrary unauthorized regulation. Daly v. O'Brien, 60 Misc. 423, 112 NYS 304. Action of city commission in permitting bidder to reduce bid and accepting same is in effect a rejection of proposals received under advertised submission, wherefore contract private and prohibited by charter. Attorney General v. Public Lighting Com. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 958, 118 NW 935. Contract for street improvement with provision that damages from nature of work, unforseen obstruction, elements, etc., be sustained by contractor, held void, so as to authorize setting aside of assessments. Van Loenen v. Gillespie, 152 Cal. 222, 96 P 87. Provision not strictly "specification" as designated by contract, but fact immaterial. Id. Such provisions ruption and extravagance,"[94] and the specifications must be framed so as to secure fair competition on equal terms to all bidders.[95] Generally, the statutes have been held not to exclude the specification of patented articles, though thereby competition is prevented as to such articles.[96] The acceptance or rejection of bids and the letting of the contracts are purely administrative.[97] Under statutory provisions the calling for bids may be discretionary,[98] or discretion may be vested in boards by provisions that the contract be let to the best[99] or to a "safe" bidder, as where funds are involved.[1] void as increasing cost of work. Standsbury v. Poindexter [Cal.] 99 P 182. Objection not obviated though bids were not increased on account of such restriction, since bidder might have been deterred from competing. Id. Under School Act 1903, §§ 52, 53 (P. L. 1903, pp. 5-21), board could not modify specifications after acceptance of bid and award to former bidder, where act in good faith and bid reduced. Scola v. Montclair Board of Education [N. J. Law] 71 A 299.

94. To be so construed. Attorney General v. Public Lighting Com. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 958, 118 NW 935.

95. Conditions of bids held to afford fair and reasonable opportunity for competition in letting contract for steel pipe line. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797. City council by adding another make of vitrified brick to specification of material for street paving did not interfere with competitive bidding, but extended field of competition. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1125. Requirement that material in paving contract be Iola Portland cement or better, did not improperly restrict bidding. Id. That disregard of rules as to competitive bidding resulted in no harm is immaterial since question is not of harm done, but power. Material departure from terms and conditions of bidding renders contract private. City of Independence v. Nagle [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1129. A director of public works in publishing specifications need not decide finally on every item, but may ask for alternative bids on two articles to be furnished having set up good standard in specifications and having prescribed method of bidding giving equal opportunity to each bidder. Parker v. Philadelphia, 220 Pa. 208, 69 A 670. Where thing to be furnished under municipal contract may be manufactured in precise conformity to certain specific requirements or purchased in open market for standard price, there is no valid reason for asking for alternative bids; but where thing is protected by patent, or cannot be bought in open market, and any one of a number of kinds fully complies with established standard, interest of municipality will best be served by asking for bids for any or all. Id. Field open to bidder and power of monopoly broken. Id. No discrimination in accepting bid, though excessively high estimate placed upon efficiency of lock bar joint in steel pipe line, resulting in use of thinner plates, where various styles of pipe strictly in accordance with engineering standards. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797.

96. Though statutes require competitive bids for public work, it is nevertheless permissible to specify patented articles which from the nature of the case exclude competition. Kansas City Hydraulic Press Brick Co. v. National Surety Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 496. Requirements of charter of Detroit as to bids held applicable to contract for purchase of patented machinery required in city's electrical plant. Attorney General v. Public Lighting Com. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 958, 118 NW 935. Authorities in advertising and receiving bids gave construction to charter that it did not apply to machinery and materials of which seller had monopoly, and which was considered best obtainable. Id. Lock bar joint pipe, though made with patented machinery, is not "patented article" within Greater New York Charter (Laws 1901, p. 642, c. 466) § 1554, preventing contract for patented articles except after fair competition, etc. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797.

97. Depending upon discretion of common council. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484.

98. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes, & St. § 3767 (Pierce's Code, § 7873), providing as to opening of roads that county commissioners "in their discretion" let contracts etc., when in excess of $50, board has right to call for bids and let to lowest bidder, or let without calling for bids. Giffin v. King County, 50 Wash. 327, 97 P 230. Statute constructed, and phrase "in their discretion" held to refer to manner of letting contract. Id.

99. Under charter power of board of improvements to award contract to lowest and best bidder, price alone is not conclusive. Louisville Steam Forge Co. v. Gast [Ky.] 115 SW 761. Under Rev. St. 1901, par. 979, providing that contract (for public printing) be made with best responsible bidder, function exercised by supervisors in letting contract is not judicial; reviewable by certiorari. Hammer v. Smith [Ariz.] 94 P 1121.

1. Under Acts Extra Sess. 1907, p. 25, No. 23, requiring bids for contracts for depositaries for funds of state boards, board's function is merely to compare face of bids, discretion being limited to ascertaining if bids are regular, and whether bank making highest bid is safe depository. State v. Louisiana State Board [La.] 48 S 148. "Safety" as used in statute means safe keeping and that funds be punctually accounted for. Distant bank not to be excluded from supposed danger in transportation of funds. State v. Louisiana State Board [La.] 48 S 148. Discretion of board must be exercised in good faith. Id.

§ 3. How closed.[2]—See 10 C. L. 1289—The acceptance of a bid pursuant to an advertisement constitutes the contract.[3]

§ 4. Essential provisions in, and conditions pertaining to, public contracts.[4]—See 10 C. L. 1289—The contract awarded should substantially conform with the advertisement.[5] It should be executed in conformity with charter or statutory provisions,[6] by the proper official,[7] and, if so required, must be in writing,[8] signed by the proper official,[9] but the writing is merely a reduction to form,[10] and the usual mode of contracting may be dispensed with in the case of an emergency.[11] Con-

5. Any other rule would open door to favoritism. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276. Generally speaking, literal conformity is not required. Rule of substantial performance applied with greater strictness where right to enter into contract is challenged at inception of proceedings, and where previous understanding with successful bidder. Id. Where notice stated that expenses of paving would be charged to abutting owners, and contract contained proviso that cost might be paid from city's special fund, contract would not be considered, as not conforming with notice, so as to be void. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276. Work completed in strict conformity with contract, and proviso authorized by laws mentioned in notice (Code Supp. 1902, §§ 792-a, 792-b, and § 830, Code), would bear construction that city could not escape liability. Id.

6. Contract for printing by a municipality held to be fully executed in conforming with charter. Curran Print. Co. v. St. Louis [Mo.] 111 SW 812. Plaintiff lowest bidder, contract in pursuance of bid, bond properly certified and executed, signed in due form by solvent surety, etc. Complete as to formal execution and delivery. Id.

7. Under Laws 1903, p. 29, § 7, contract for construction of sewer should be made with chairman of sewerage committee where expense to be paid by special assessments. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101.

8. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 6759 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3327), probibiting contracts not within powers or expressly authorized, and § 6760 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3328), requiring contracts to be written and duplicate to be filed with clerk of county court, purpose of latter section was to provide evidence, and contract was valid though no duplicate filed. Blades v. Hawkins, 133 Mo. App. 328, 112 SW 979. Where governing body of St. Louis in two bodies; where Rev. St. 1899, § 6759 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3327) required city to make only contracts authorized, and that same be written; and charter provision (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4890, St. Louis Charter, art. 16, § 7) required contracts to be written, contract by special committee of bouse delegates employing attorney was within charter and statutory provisions, to be made by ordinance and executed in writing. State v. Dierkes, 214 Mo. 578, 113 SW 1077. Under Pol. Code 1895, § 343, material terms of contract of county by county authorities must be in writing and entered on minutes. Spalding County v. Chamberlain & Co., 130 Ga. 649, 61 SE 533. Not entered on minutes. James v. Douglas Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 185; Jones v. Bank of Cumming [Ga.] 62 SE 68; Jones v. Bank of Cumming [Ga.] 63 SE 36.

9. City charter provision as to countersigning of contract by comptroller merely directory. Contract not void when not countersigned. Griffin v. Tacoma, 49 Wash. 524, 95 P 1107. Countersigning held ministerial. Id. Pennsylvania Act March 7, 1901 (Acts 1901, p. 29), as to duties of city solicitor, directory as to form of contract and not intended to confer authority to approve or veto city contracts by proper representatives. Larkin v. Allegheny [C. C. A.] 162 F 611.

10. Advertisements, bids and acceptances constitute real contract. Proffitt v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 248. Common-law rule whereby all prior undertakings are merged in written contract cannot be strictly applied to contracts made by advertisements, bids and acceptances. Id. See, also, ante, § 3.

11. Contracts for service, made in emergencies, need not always rest upon advertisements or be reduced to writing. Rev. St. §§ 3709, 3732. Ceballos v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 318. Commanding officer in conquered territory, or secretary of war, may make reasonable expenditures as to removal of prisoners without written agreement. Id. Recovery on quantum meruit where services rendered, though Rev. St. § 3744 requires contracts by officers of government to be written. Id. Where contract executed, court would assume same, being under $1,000, as awarded properly without competition. Moriarty v. New York, 59 Misc. 204, 110 NYS 842.

tracts must conform to principles of public policy, and are rendered void when the officials are personally interested therein.[12] The act of a city comptroller in cancelling his signature after execution has been held not to avoid the contract.[13] An assignment of moneys due or to become due under a contract is not an assignment of the contract.[14] Parol evidence may be admissible to disclose persons who indemnified a surety and were entitled to share in the moneys assigned to such surety.[15]

Agreements for procuring government contracts, where compensation is contingent upon the success of the promisee's efforts, are void as against public policy.[16]

Bonds See 10 C. L. 1291 for the performance of the work may be required by statute.[17] A city contract properly executed has been held unaffected by the refusal of the mayor to approve the bond.[18]

§ 5. Interpretation and effect of public contracts; performance and discharge. A. Construction and interpretation.[19]—See 10 C. 12. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 105, § 82, as amended Sess. Laws 1905, p. 71, clearly prohibits contracts of school district with trustee in which latter pecuniarily interested. Independent School Dist. No. 5 v. Collins [Idaho] 98 P 857. Ky. St. 1903, § 2768, prescribing qualifications of councilmen, and prohibiting contracts where officials interested, not declaration of eligibility, but renders such contracts void. Bradley & Gilbert Co. v. Jacques, 33 Ky. L. R. 618, 110 SW 836. Term "contract" extends to case of where city buys daily supplies. Construing statute. Id. Contract by town trustee in violation of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 2136, making town trustees who contract with themselves guilty of misdemeanor, void. McNay v. Lowell, 41 Ind. App. 627, 84 NE 778. Where 50 sales of coal to town in violation of statute, sales not to be excused on theory of emergency to prevent shutting down of town's water plant. Id. No implied liability of town. Id. Duty of trustees to be informed of necessity of coal and avoid emergency. Id. Town trustee not excused by fact that sale made at invoice price, and no profit. Id. In suit by town to recover price paid for coal, it was no defense that town had used coal and made no offer to return before bringing action. Id. Fact that moderator was officer of water company contracted with did not debar him from rights as citizen or voter, or prevent town of availing itself of services where no charge of corruption. Seward v. Revere Water Co., 201 Mass. 453, 87 NE 749. Indictment under Code 1906, § 1305, rendering public officer guilty of misdemeanor if interested in contract, etc., held insufficient. Supervisor accepted position of supervising construction of court house, but no charge that he knew or procured order to be made, accepted it as placed on minutes or received any benefit from same. Treen v. State [Miss.] 46 S 252.

13. After contract fully executed and filed with register. Curran Print Co. v. St. Louis [Mo.] 112 SW 812.

14. Assignee not liable for materials furnished. National Surety Co. v. Maag [Ind. App.] 86 NE 862.

15. Where city contractor assigns all moneys due to his surety, a trust company, and writing discloses no consideration or inducement to assignment, though it was conceded that all money received did not belong to trust company, parol evidence was admissible to show that two persons who had indemnified surety were entitled to share in moneys received under parol agreement at time of assignment. Helms v. Delaware County Trust, Safe Deposit & Title Ins. Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 542. Assignment held to cover not only moneys paid for construction of sewer but also assessments on property owners collected by city and paid to surety. Id.

16. Agreement to procure contract for publishing legal notices held unenforcible. Russel v. Courier Print. & Pub. Co., 43 Colo. 321, 95 P 936.

17. Under 3 Comp. Laws §§ 10743-10745, requiring bond for performance of public improvements, etc., contract with stone and supply company to furnish limestone dust at municipal asphalt plant did not make company contractor within statute and no bond required. People v. Newberry, 152 Mich., 292, 15 Det. Leg. N. 211, 116 NW 419.

18. Refusal because of statement that contract was in excess of appropriation, where facts showed unexpended balance of amount appropriated. Curran Print. Co. v. St. Louis [Mo.] 111 SW 812.

20. Contract for construction of sewer and appurtenances and sewerage disposal plant held separable so that former could be sustained. Where intention was to have two improvements and advertisement for bids spoke of "contracts," where aggregate of each bid was kept separate from gross sum, there is a valid contract for one im-construed and interpreted as the contracts of private individuals [21] with the exception that, where a franchise is granted, the contract should be construed strictly against the grantee and liberally in favor of the people.[22]

(§ 5) B. Performance and discharge.[23]—See 10 C. L. 1292—The deposit securing performance is forfeited by breach.[24] Also, public contracts often provide for the completion of the work at the contractor's expense in the case of unnecessary provement despite invalidity of the other. Uvalde Asphalt Pav. Co. v. New York, 128 App. Div. 210, 112 NYS 535. Contract for disposal plant illegal because of failure to comply with charter by city's board of estimate and apportionment. Id.

21. Illustrations: Where contract for grading road referred to bid and proposal containing clause that there would be no allowance for overhaul of material moved 2,000 feet or less, such terms were incorporated into contract. Moore v. Ramsey County, 104 Minn. 30, 115 NW 750. Reference to another instrument. Under Pub. Acts 1905, p. 432, c. 232, providing for highway improvements at partial expense of state, and Gen. St. § 3824, requiring street railways to change tracks to conform to grade, etc., an agreement with a town by a street railway to pay one-half of town's expense in changing grade did not affect state. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939. Where city and railroads agreed to separate grades at intersection with street under statute allowing damages to abutting owners, which damages city agreed to pay, no liability resulted to manufacturer whose land did not abut on street but who was compelled to elevate side track to maintain connection. In re Detroit [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 53, 120 NW 592. Contract for sinking wells construed, and held that contractor was entitled to balance due when successful in obtaining water supply equal to 1,500,000 gallons per 24 hours. Green v. Ballard [Wash.] 98 P 95. Stipulation held to show contractor's pay as due when capacity ascertained by test, though city contracted for supply for 14 months. Id. Under contract for construction of trunk sewer, contractor held not bound to dispose of water from lateral sewers and entitled to recover for additional expense occasioned thereby. Leahy v. New York, 192 N. Y. 42, 84 NE 574. Contract held to permit city on refusal of contract to go into open market and purchase coal, charging vendor with difference between market and contract price (McLean County Coal Co. v. Bloomington, 137 Ill. App. 582), but not entitled to order coal for more than two months in advance in anticipation of strike (McLean County Coal Co. v. Bloomington, 234 Ill. 90, 84 NE 624, rvg. 137 Ill. App. 582). Contract construed, and under reasonable construction with ordinary meaning of words coal company was to deliver coal as city required and needed it. Words "order" and "direct" synonymous with "require," substantially equivalent to "need." McLean County Coal Co. v. Bloomington, 234 Ill. 90, 84 NE 624. Under contract for performance of mail messenger service obligating contractor to perform without additional compensation "new or additional service," contractor cannot recover when service is not different in character and kind from that specified in contract. Proffit v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 248. Change simply adding to contractor's service is "new and additional" being of same kind. Id. Contractor required to make additional trips by establishment of new street railway route, but relieved from services to other routes so that total mileage was decreased, cannot recover. Id. Extra service during holidays held to entitle contractor to compensation. Id. Contract for transportation of Spanish soldiers and others authorized by treaty of Paris, and contractors were carriers bound to transport pursuant to contract accepted or be rendered liable for breach. Ceballos v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 318. Where contract provided for Spanish officers at one rate and others at lower rate, but two classes were specified and transportation company could only recover for transporting officers' wives and children at lower rate. Id. Evidence held to show government as not responsible for assignment of persons transported to better quarters on ship so as to be entitled to higher rate for transportation. Id. Contract being express excluded any implied contract as to others. Id. Where contract provided specified sum for each person transported, government could not count two children as one person. Id. Where contract provided that requests for transportation be made by government officers, at embarkation contractor could not show larger number disembarked than officers had required transportation for. Id. Fact that some of persons died en voyage did not relieve government of liability. Id. Contracts granting license to use and make patented printing press construed and government held not obligated to use presses for any particular length of time. Federal Mfg. & Print. Co. v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 479. Where patentee represents automatic wiper as valuable part of printing press, subsequent patenting of such wiper will not change effect of contract but will be regarded as included. Id.

delay [25] after notice of annulment,[26] and the new contract entered into is entirely independent of the former one.[27] Default in monthly payments is no defense against the consequences of annulment when waived by the contractor.[28] Performance is not excused by sickness or indisposition.[29] A contractor is bound by contractual specifications as to the acceptance of the work as it progresses,[30] and to release a builder from contractual liability for delay, the acceptance must be unconditional.[31] It has been held that the lack of power to delegate the determination of the fulfillment of a contract did not render the contract void.[32] A claim for extra work is properly disallowed when such work is called for by the bid,[33] but a contractor may recover for extra work when compelled by the wrongful insistence of the city officer that such work is within the contract.[34] It has been held that time is not of the essence of the contract when not specified in the ordinance authorizing the improvement,[35] and the work should be completed in a reasonable time.[36] Where subsequent events show the contract time as unreasonable, it may be extended by a city ordinance.[37] The violation of a statute fixing the hours of labor on municipal contracts may be penalized by a forfeiture of compensation.[38] Where a third person was injured by a contractor's negligence and the latter refused to defend the action against the city and acquiesced in appeals, the city was en-

25. Where contract for construction of sewer defined "board" as metropolitan sewerage commissioners, and "engineer" as chief engineer of such board, and also contained provision for discontinuance of contract in case of unnecessary delay, and later such board was abolished by Act March 30, 1901 (St. 1901, p. 106, c. 168), creating metropolitan water and sewerage board, such new board had authority to put sewerage works under independent engineer, but such act deprived board of rights under provision to discontinuance of work in so far as rights depended on certificate of engineer therein specified. Commonwealth v. National Cont. Co., 198 Mass. 554, 85 NE 86. Where contract for dredging contained annulment clause with provision for continuance of work under Rev. St. § 3709 (U. C. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2484), which authorizes open contracts without advertisement when public exigency so requires, etc., and subsequent clause provided for forfeiture of sums due and permitted recovery of damages, provision of latter clause for recovery of excess cost of completion did not apply to annulment under prior provision before expiration of time of completion. Farrelly v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 671. No damages recoverable in excess of amounts due and unpaid and reserved percentage as expressly provided for. Id.

26. Notice of annulment, unless increased plant was put on dredging contract, having been made on the 4th of month, a notice mailed on 31st and received on next day was not premature, there being no increased plant put in or sought to be put on work. Farrelly v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 169 F 671. No necessity of approval of notice of annulment by chief of engineers when not required by contract. Id.

27. References held merely descriptive to measure work contracted for. People v. Metz, 193 N. Y. 148, 85 NE 1070. No merger to exempt latter contract from operation of statute enacted after execution of first contract. Id. Where contract failed to complete work and city made new contract for completion of same, payments to latter contractor were not subject to claims of persons who furnished materials to former. Ross v. Beaumont Brick Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 643.

29. West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Carmody, 139 Ill. App. 635.

30. Acceptance not conclusive unless so specified. Town of Sterling v. Hurd [Colo.] 98 P 174. Authority prescribed by contract and contractor bound to know that unauthorized act would not bind town. Acceptance of work or materials not complying with contract. Id. Contract construed, and provisions as to town engineer's authority held not to authorize acceptance of waterworks system but to be precautions to insure compliance with contract. Id.

31. Receipt by engineer of fire department on delivery of fire boat neither release nor acceptance of boat by defendant. Not understood as release and engineer unauthorized to release. District of Columbia v. Harlan & Hollingsworth Co., 30 App. D. C. 270. Machinery not put in proper order for nearly four months. Id.

35. Though contained in contract. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449.

36. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449. Delay of conforming ordinance as result of collusive understanding, so that contractor may have more than reasonable time to do work, an actual fraud. Id.

37. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449. In absence of contrary showing time prescribed in extension ordinance presumed reasonable. Id. Evidence held not to overcome presumption of reasonable time in ordinance extending time. Id.

38. People v. Metz, 193 N. Y. 148, 85 NE 1070. On reargument. People v. Metz, 194 N. Y. 145, 86 NE 986.

titled to offset against the claim of the contractor not only the judgment recovered but the moneys expended on the appeals.[39]

§ 6. Remedies and procedure. A. By taxpayer.[40]—See 10 C. L. 1293.—The performance of a public contract or the payment of sums due may be properly restrained where an illegal disposition of corporate property is made,[41] where the officials are guilty of misconduct,[42] or where public money is about to be paid upon a void contract.[43] The action can only be maintained upon clear proof that the authorities have acted or are about to act illegally.[44] The right of rescission of a bilateral contract can be exercised only by the town,[45] and though a municipality in contracting for water acts for the benefit of the inhabitants, the individual owners of property destroyed by fire, through the failure to supply water, have been held unable to maintain an action for such property.[46]

Relief denied: Taxpayer could not complain because lowest bidder would make larger profit than higher bidder on another style of pipe, in letting contract for steel pipe line. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797. Taxpayer not authorized to restrain improvement of street in constructing retaining wall outside limits thereof and bringing street to proper grade for public use, though street railway benefited by improvement, and would pay cost of filling. Patterson v. Burlington [Iowa] 119 NW 593. Where county commissioners have authority to contract for buildings, fulfillment of contract cannot be enjoined as inexpedient. Long v. Shepherd [Ala.] 48 S 675. Citizen and taxpayer may not enjoin claims for extra work where contract provides for no change except on order of commissioner's court. Provision for benefit of contracting parties. Id. Where city and village pursuant to legislative authority (Laws 1907, p. 388, c. 428) agreed to construct sewer and sewage disposal works, each paying a portion of expense, Health Law, Laws 1893, p. 1519, c. 661, § 72, providing for payment of sewers by one city when ordered for protection of another's water system, was inapplicable, and contract could not be enjoined on theory of city's entire liability for expense. when refused to be complied with by public officials can be enforced by mandamus,[48] but the remedy will not lie to compel an unauthorized act.[49] In determining the qualifications of the highest bidder seeking to become a depositary of funds, discretion must be exercised in good faith, and is subject to mandamus,[50] but where a contract is to be awarded to the lowest and best bidder, the court will not interfere with discretion except in the case of fraud or collusion.[51] A bill by the attorney general on relation of the competitive bidder has been held the proper proceeding where a private proposal is accepted by the city after the sealed bids required by the charter are submitted.[52]

(§ 6) C. On the contact proper or on a quantum meruit.[53] See 10 C. L. 1294 A contractor wrongfully prevented from completing his contract may recover for the work done,[54] and money loaned to a borough under an invalid resolution and used by it may be recovered in an action for money had and received.[55] A contractor is chargeable with notice that an improvement is of no special benefit to abutting property,[56] but otherwise a city is generally liable when failing to collect a special fund.[57] Where a city by its own act loses its authority to issue bonds to pay a contract entered into, it is liable for such compensation out of the general fund.[58] Where a valid contract was executed, but the mayor refused to approve the bond, the contractor might sue for the contract price.[59] A city proceeding under statute to remove a collapsed building, with expenses to be paid from a fund established by such statute, is directly liable to a contractor doing the work.[60] Where a city accepted an alternative bid for a city hall to be either cement or brick, the bidder had no contract on which he might sue until the city designated the material to be used,[61] and where the contractor disregarded such designation, it was held that the city in refusing to allow completion and in using the foundation did not accept the work so as to be liable for the reasonable value.[62] The compensation due often involves a construction of the contract.[63] A contractor is not entitled to the full contract price when the work is inferior,[64] and in such case when the compensation is not fixed by statute,[65] the contractor is only entitled to the reasonable value of such work.[66] Money paid by a municipality upon a void contract may be recovered,[67] but the rule does not apply to a contract authorized where the work is accepted and paid for.[68]

The constitutional limitation as to the impairment of contracts applies where a more difficult and uncertain remedy for the enforcement of a public contract is enacted,[69] or where the power of taxation is limited.[70] A petition by a contractor for services rendered should show compliance with statutory regulations as to writing,[71] and a disregard of provisions as to the manner of entering into the contract may prevent recovery.[72] An acceptance by an officer which merely shows

63. Contract for sewers construed, and contractor held not entitled to compensation for lumber left in work, since stipulations provided that he furnish all material, etc. City of Richmond v. Barry [Va.] 63 SE 1074. Contract for drawing plans and superintending construction of court house entire not severable. Where petition alleged drawing of plans, but stated no excuse for nonperformance of remainder of work, petition was subject to general demurrer. Spalding County v. Chamberlin & Co., 130 Ga. 649, 61 SE 533.

64. Contractor not entitled to full contract price where public printing required according to certain specifications, and contractor pursuant to direction of officer used inferior paper. Commonwealth v. Bacon, 33 Ky. L. R. 935, 111 SW 387.

65. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 3982, providing rates for public printing, saddle stitched pamphlets bound in card board glued to back could not be charged for as full binding with spring backs. Commonwealth v. Bacon, 33 Ky. L. R. 935, 111 SW 387. Such pamphlets not under any clause of statute fixing price. Id. Blank books used by counties referred to in Ky. St. 1903, § 3956, constitute second class of state printing and are record books. Teachers' registers, grade books and trustees' records not included in second class. Second class more expensive than first. Id.

67. Interested official. Independent School Dist. No. 5 v. Collins [Idaho] 98 P 857. Rule that neither party to transaction may retain benefits and question invalidity inapplicable to void contract of municipality. Id. In action under School Laws, § 82 (Sess. Laws 1899, p. 105), as amended Sess. Laws 1905, p. 71, to recover money paid on void contract, complaint must allege contract made with defendant when member of board of trustees of school district. Id. Mere fact that contract price paid exceeded reasonable value of services rendered does not render contract invalid, or constitute legal claim against plaintiff for difference between amount paid and reasonable value of services. Where contract executed and municipality retains benefit and cannot or will not restore property required, can be no recovery of consideration. Sparks v. Jasper County, 213 Mo. 218, 112 SW 265.

69. Not limited to destruction of remedy. City of Cleveland v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 166 F 677. State statute, Acts Tenn. 1895, p. 203, c. 120, held to impair contract, since relator, having recovered judgment, was deprived of remedy against recorder to compel assessment of city's property at true value, and such statute void as to relator. Id. Previous provision of charter not repealed as to relator and recorder subject to mandamus to reassess property. Id.

70. Welch W. L. & P. Co. v. Welch [W. Va.] 62 SE 497. Where retroactive statutes decrease amount of tax levy, such statutes are void as to contract for light and power. Mandamus proper to impose taxes to meet contract in spite of statute provided levy does not exceed amount authorized where contract made. Id.

71. Petition for services rendered county stating that contractor should superintend construction of court house at 5 per cent of contract price, that an order of employment was entered on minutes, subject to general demurrer, since compensation not entered on minutes. Pol. Code. 1895, § 343 requires writing. Spalding County v. Chamberlin & Co., 130 Ga. 649, 61 SE 533. Petition against county upon alleged contract must aver that contract was entered upon minutes of proper authorities in charge of financial affairs of county. James v. Douglas County [Ga.] 62 SE 185. Under Pol. Code 1895, § 343, and in view of construction of Code 1868, § 527. Jones v. Bank of Cumming [Ga.] 62 SE 68.

compliance with the contract does not preclude a town's reliance upon breach of contract,[73] and a village is not estopped, by issuing paving bonds as advance payment, from showing the failure to complete the work.[74] Whether an alleged contract has been entered into may be a question for the jury,[75] and the plaintiff has been held not to be precluded from proof of the contract, though there was no record of the same in the books of the county commissioners.[76] Jury questions are also presented in reference to acceptance of the work,[77] or as to damages for failure to comply with the contract.[78] Evidence of what a contractor owes does not prove the reasonable value of the work done,[79] and that orders had been issued upon a town is incompetent to prove that payment is due.[80] A directed verdict is proper where there is no evidence as to the reasonable value of the work performed.[81] The action may be barred by limitations.[82] A government official, in making a gift to a contractor of a tug to tow a vessel containing lumber contracted for, does not render the government liable to the owners of the vessel, which is destroyed.[83]

Other remedies.—A borough president may be compelled by mandamus to sign an order for the payment of a debt due by the borough on a building contract,[84] but the remedy will not lie where there is no duty[85] or to compel the performance of duties and obligations depending upon the contract.[86] Mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of a paving bond where it appears that such bond was issued as advance payment and the work was not completed.[87] excess of $500 without advertising for bids or entering into contract as required by law, fact that goods were purchased and delivered in good faith does not render village liable therefor because of moral obligation incurred, and upon suit by taxpayer an injunction will lie against payment of bill. Castner v. Pleasant Ridge, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 174. Failure to aver that contract was one of binding force and effect, and was endorsed by prosecuting attorney in compliance with § 799, Rev. Stat., and that there has been performance of all other prerequisites necessary to complete and valid contract, precludes any recovery thereon by county. Prerequisites of essence of contract. men and subcontractors on bonds given for their benefit is elsewhere treated.[89] The obligors of a bond are liable when given as in pursuance of a statute, though such statute does not in fact require a bond.[90] The liability of the sureties is measured by the contract.[91] A surety may be released in the case of unauthorized alterations of the contract,[92] as where time is extended without consent.[93] A surety, having received the consideration for a bond, is estopped to assert the same as void because the city was unauthorized to take it,[94] but a surety has been held not estopped from denying liability from actions in securing a public contract or the compensation due.[95]

92. Contractor or surety cannot complain of change not going to performance of contract. Change in material to be used by street railway in paving space between rails held not to effect remainder of street paved. Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Little Rock [Ark.] 115 SW 960. Surety would be released if city permitted contractor to lay asphalt at lesser degree of heat than contract required, thus impairing durability, but evidence held to show no departure from contract. Id. Assignment of moneys due or to become due contractor not alteration of contract, being expressly provided for. Even if no provision in contract, assignment would not interfere with or impair surety's right of subrogation to complete contract and be paid on contractor's default. City of New Rochelle v. Aetna Indemnity Co., 115 NYS 135. Question of assignment of contract without surety's knowledge, so as to release latter, held for jury, evidence being conflicting. Strandell v. § 1. The public domain and property therein.[98]—See 10 C. L. 1296—The original title to lands in the United States was in the government and not in the Indians, they having merely a right of possession and occupancy.[99] The land department has no arbitrary, unlimited, or discretionary power to sell or grant the public lands,[1] but the federal government or its officers may make such regulations for their use and disposal as are authorized by law,[2] and one whose rights are not affected thereby cannot object.[3] A grant to a state to be disposed of by the latter may be made subject to conditions for such disposal.[4] The federal government may reserve a right of way for irrigation purposes,[5] and when lands under navigable waters are granted, the grantee takes subject to the public right of navigation, which includes

Brigham City v. Rich, 34 Utah, 130, 97 P 220. Acts Aug. 18, 1894, c. 301, § 4, 28 Stat. 422, as amended by Act June 11, 1896, § 1, c. 420, 29 Stat. 413, and Act March 3, 1901, c. 853, § 3, 31 Stat. 1188 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1554, 1556, 1557), provides that upon proper application by State the government will contract with it to give patent if certain conditions as to filing maps of location are complied with. The state may enter into contracts for irrigation and reclamation, all such contracts to be under supervision of board of land commissioners. Held contract which was not submitted or accepted by such board, and whereby settlers were placed at mercy of contractor as to amount of payment, was against public policy and not enforcible in equity. McKinney v. Big Horn Basin Development Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 770. Dedication by canal commissioners of part of land to public to aid in erection of public buildings and for streets, for purpose of obtaining greater aggregate price for remainder than they could have obtained had no dedication been made, held to be in compliance with purpose of congress in making grant by Act March 2, 1827, c. 51, 4 Stat. 234, of land to Illinois to aid in opening canal, and providing that state might dispose of same for that purpose and no other. People v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 239 Ill. 42, 87 NE 946.

5. Act Cong. Aug. 30, 1890, c. 837, 26 Stat. 391 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1553), providing for reservation in all patents of right of way for canals constructed by the right to deepen and widen the channel.[6] Buildings erected upon public domain by mistake or otherwise do not thereby become the property of the government but the owner has a reasonable time in which to remove them.[7]

§ 2. Lands open for settlement and lands granted or reserved.[8] See 10 C. L. 1296 Lands already patented,[9] granted,[10] confirmed to a grantee,[11] or otherwise reserved,[12] are not subject to entry. Unoccupied and unimproved lands only are subject to homestead settlement,[13] though the possession of the occupant be wrongful as to the United States.[14] General laws authorizing localization or entries on vacant land do not apply to lands that have been previously reserved.[15] The test of segregation is the recognition of the claimant's right by the land department.[16] Location upon federal authority, held to apply as well to those to be constructed as to those already in operation. Green v. Willhite, 160 F 755.

6. Grant dating from British Crown of land under navigable water used by plaintiff as oyster bed subject to government's right to widen channel. Lewis Blue Point Oyster Cultivation Co. v. Briggs, 129 App. Div. 574, 114 NYS 313.

7. Wallbrecht v. Blush, 43 Colo. 329, 95 P 927.

9. A patent already issued will not be set aside in favor of one who has no equitable title originating in settlement made before patent sought to be set aside was issued. Linebeck v. Vos, 160 F 540. Where commonwealth in 1872 had issued a patent for a boundary of land, subsequent patents issued to others for land within such boundary were void. Conley v. Breathitt Coal, Iron & Lumber Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 504. Patent to land previously patented void. Hamilton v. Steele [Ky.] 117 SW 378. Evidence held to sustain finding that area claimed under patent granting large boundary of land from which prior surveys were excepted was not included within such exception. Steele v. Bryant [Ky.] 116 SW 755.

10. Transferable title to lands already granted to railway company could not be acquired by alien through mere settlement thereon. Call v. Los Angeles-Pacific Co., 162 F 926.

11. Plaintiffs claimed title to a tract of land under Spanish grant of 1767, which grant was confirmed in 1852. In 1882 defendant located confederate scrip upon said land by virtue of which it was surveyed and patented. Held patent gave no title as against plaintiffs. Sullivan v. Solis [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 456.

12. Creation of forest reserve severs the land from the public domain and appropriates it to public use. Shannon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 870. Lands occupied as a military reservation at time of passage of Act of March 2, 1849, c. 87, 9 Stat. at L. 352, granting swamp lands to Louisiana upon approval of list by secretary of treasury, held already withdrawn from public domain and did not pass under act. Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 53 Law. Ed. 92. Act June 5, 1872, c. 308, 17 Stat. 226 providing for survey of 15 townships in Bitter Root Valley, and that none of the lands above the LoLo fork should be open to settlement under homestead or pre-emption laws, held conclusive as against a settler's right to occupy land above such fork, and not changed by Act Feb. 11, 1874, c. 25, 18 Stat. 15, latter act being construed to apply only to the 15 sections already surveyed. Whaley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 167 F 665.

13. One in open and undisturbed possession of public land is entitled to the homestead as against a trespasser who attempts to make entry thereon with knowledge of rights of prior occupant. Lyle v. Patterson, 160 F 545.

14. One who occupied public lands under contract of sale from railway company had prior right to make homestead entry as against trespasser, upon decision that railway company had no right to land under canceled grant. Harvey v. Holles, 160 F 531. One cannot acquire homestead rights in lands already occupied by another who had been for several years in open and undisturbed possession under claim of right through purchase from a railroad company whose grant had later been canceled. Dockendorf v. Bassett, 160 F 543.

15. A certificate issued under a special law authorizing the beneficiary to locate "upon any of the vacant public lands of the state within or without the several reservations heretofore created by law" held not to entitle beneficiary to enter upon islands they having been reserved by policy of law and their control specially assumed by government of Republic of Texas, Dec. 10, 1836 (Hartley's Dig. art. 1779), providing that all islands belonging to Republic were reserved for government use unless President was especially authorized by congress of the public to sell them. Roberts v. Ferrell [Tex.] 110 SW 733.

16. Under swamp land grant of Sept. 28, 1850 (9 Stat. 519, c. 84), providing for segregation of swamp lands and that title thereto should vest in state as of date of passage of act upon judicial determination by land department that lands were in fact swamp lands, it was held in action by United States to recover lands claimed to have passed under such grant, that mere fact that state in pursuance to instructions from land department had appointed agents to determine which were swamp lands, and who had filed their reports with land office, did not constitute recognition of state's claim where federal government had never ratified or sanctioned such reports. United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 818.

public land segregates it from the public domain,[17] although no patent has been issued.[18] Lands embraced within the indemnity limits of a railway grant are open to homestead entry until the list of selections is approved by the secretary of the interior,[19] although such list may have been filed prior to homesteader's entry.[20] No right can be acquired by an attempt to purchase school lands already covered by a valid and subsisting sale,[21] or by one prima facie valid under the law in force at the time of sale,[22] nor can a lessee without the consent of the state terminate his lease so as to open the lands for settlement.[23] Where a settlement under a donation

17. Where settler located upon public land and had it surveyed in 1838 and sold it the same year, held that such location and survey operated to segregate land as effectually as a patent would have done in so far as settler's right to convey was concerned. Sims v. Sealy [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 630. So long as a homestead entry valid on its face remains uncontested and uncanceled, the land covered thereby is withdrawn from the public domain and cannot be granted to a subsequent claimant. Jameson v. James [Cal.] 100 P 700. Lands upon which valid oil claims were located held not to be open to public entry so that a railway company could claim a right of way under Act Cong. May 14, 1898, c. 299, § 2, 30 Stat. 409 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1575). Alaska Pac. Railroad & Terminal Co. v. Copper River & N. W. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 862.

18. A tract ceases to be subject to the disposal of the United States when it is entered, paid for, and so certified by the land office, although no patent has been issued. United States v. Black [C. C. A.] 160 F 431. Upon location under soldier's warrant land ceases to be part of public domain, though no patent has been issued and legal title is held in trust for person who shows himself entitled to benefit of location, although formal approval of location and issuance of patent suspended because of apparently conflicting assignments of warrant. Herrick v. Sargent [Iowa] 117 NW 751. One who occupied land and enclosed it under state patent, validity of which was questioned, could maintain ejectment against subsequent entryman under United States homestead law, regardless of whether he had title from the state or not. Carmichael v. Campodonico, 7 Cal. App. 597, 95 P 164. A widow entitled as the head of a family to a league of land made application therefor in 1834. Land was surveyed and she exercised ownership over it but never obtained patent. In 1850, by act of legislature, commissioner of general land office issued a patent to her heirs. Held that act of legislature was simply confirmatory of a right she already had. Houston Oil Co. v. Gallup [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 957.

19. By Act of March 3, 1863, every alternate odd section of public lands was granted to Kansas for aid in railway construction. Before state had formally accepted grant commissioner of land office in pursuance to request by members of congress from Kansas withdrew public lands along presumed right of way from settlement. Plaintiff, after such withdrawal but before selection of indemnity lands settled upon tract of land within territory so withdrawn and applied for patent which was refused. Held that such withdrawal was unauthorized and void, that land was open to settlement until selection as indemnity land, and since plaintiff's right had attached prior to such selection he was entitled to patent. Brandon v. Ard, 211 U. S. 11, 53 Law. Ed. —.

20. Railway company acquired no rights for any purpose under Act March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. 195, c. 99), and March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. 526, c. 105), as amended by Act March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 588, c. 144) until list of indemnity lands had been approved by secretary of the interior, although list had been filed before adverse entry. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Wass, 104 Minn. 411, 116 NW 937. Homesteader who settled upon land withdrawn from entry pending determination of validity of trustees' selection of indemnity lands under "Hastings and Dakota Railway Grant" of 1866, and made repeated entry applications, held to acquire homestead rights, all indemnity selections prior to his entry being ineffectual to remove land from homestead settlement. Osborn v. Froyseth, 105 Minn. 16, 116 NW 1113.

21. Sale takes land off market and commissioner could not afterwards sell it, superior title remaining in state, while right vested in purchaser to acquire that title by compliance with statutory conditions. Pohle v. Robertson [Tex.] 115 SW 1166.

22. Land placed upon market under Act 1897, Laws 1897, p. 184, c. 129, was sold, and because of such sale was never listed by commissioner of land office as required by Acts 1901, Laws 1901, p. 292, c. 125. Held purchaser under later statute could not acquire title as against first purchaser on theory that first sale was invalid and that consequently land remained upon market subject to sale under second law. Williams v. Barnes [Tex Civ. App.] 111 SW 432.

23. Where lessee of school lands paid rent in full to time of expiration of lease and surrendered possession to settler, such act did not open land for settlement, the state not having accepted relinquishment of lease. Hopper v. Nation [Kan.] 96 P 77. School lands are not thrown upon the market subject to purchase by the mere fact that the lessee thereof tenders his lease for cancellation and offers to purchase the land, since if the offer is refused the lease remains in force. Halbert v. Terrell [Tex.] 112 SW 1036.

act is abandoned,[24] or where a reservation previously made ceases to be effective, the land again becomes part of the public domain and open to settlement.[25]

§ 3. Mode of locating and acquiring title. A. Federal lands.[26]—See 10 C. L. 1297 To acquire a valid right under the homestead law, the settler must actually occupy the land in absolute good faith with the intention of permanently residing thereon.[27] Such occupation must be evidenced by those things which are essential to its beneficial use.[28] The physical presence of the settler upon public lands at all times is, however, not necessary to constitute legal possession,[29] nor need the settler himself construct the improvements required by law.[30] A valid right to public lands can be initiated only by persons qualified [31] after compliance wtih all legal requirements.[32]

24. Settlement made under Act Cong. Sept. 27, 1850, c. 76, 9 Stat. 496, but abandoned before same land was selected by railway company under Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365, did not operate to reserve such lands from selection by company. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. George [Wash.] 98 P 1126.

25. By order of the president certain public lands in Michigan were withdrawn from sale or entry pending determination whether they would be required for Indians under treaty then being negotiated. Such order was never formally revoked. Treaty was formally accepted by Indians July 31, 1856; June 3, 1856, the United States granted to Michigan in aid of railway company lands included under such withdrawal, but company did not file map of definite location until after treaty had been ratified. Held, that as before filing of map of definite location, land again became public because of designation of other lands under treaty, which lands did not include those in controversy, company's title passed under the grant and became vester in its innocent vendees. United States v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 297.

27. Occasional visits to homestead for mere purpose of technically complying with law held insufficient as good faith compliance. Whaley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 167 F 665. In prosecution for perjury alleged to have been committed in proving up homestead claim, defendant's declarations as to residence on land were relevant. Barnard v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 618.

28. Plaintiff staked out a lot in a mining camp in Alaska, built a log cabin thereon, lived there for 4 months and then left, leaving some of his property there and requesting two different persons to look after his lot. Upon his return more than 3 years later he found defendants in possession, they having bought lot from one who had also located thereon and recorded location, thinking plaintiff had abandoned same. Held that plaintiff's occupancy was not such open and continuous possession either by himself or agent as would ripen into title under townsite law, Rev. St. § 2387 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1457), or under act March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1095, c. 561 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1536]). Gordon v. Ross-Higgins Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 637.

29. Where one attempted to take possession of land not patented, held by a partnership, during an interval where no one was in actual possession pending a change of tenants, such attempted entry was not one on unoccupied public lands. Neal v. Kayser [Ariz.] 100 P 439.

30. A settler who actually resides upon land with bona fide intention of acquiring title under homestead law was not deprived of such right because he purchased his improvements from a prior settler instead of constructing them himself. Frodick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 913.

31. Deed to land settled by alien who had not declared his intention of becoming citizen was an absolute nullity. Call v. Los Angeles Pacific Co., 162 F 926. Since a corporation could not become a settler upon public lands, occupancy and enclosure of public lands by it was a violation of Act Cong. Feb. 25, 1885, c. 149, 23 Stat. 321 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1524). Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Isaacs [Or.] 96 P 460. Under Rev. St. U. S. 2350 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1441), prohibiting more than one entry by the same person, one entitled to a preferential entry of coal lands by Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2348, 2349 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1441), cannot make an entry apparently for himself but in fact as agent for a person who is himself disqualified. United States v. Forrester, 211 U. S. 399, 53 Law. Ed. 245.

32. Claimant alleged title to certain lands claimed due Indians under Chickasaw Treaty of 1834 as against subsequent patentees under federal law, but failed to show that conditions of treaty under which Chickasaw reservations were to be made had been compiled with. Held that by failure to obtain commissioners' and Indian agent's certificate in proper form, neither alleged Indian reservees nor claimant under conveyance from them acquired title. Ayers v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 385. Act May 17, 1884, c. 53, § 8, 23 Stat. 26, provides that Indians or other persons in Alaska shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands actually in their use or occupation or now claimed by them, but the terms under which such persons may acquire title to such lands are reserved for future legislation by Congress. Held that terms under which one in possession of land within townsite of Juneau might acquire title were expressed in the act of March 3, 1891, c. 561, § 11-14, 26 Stat. 1099 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1467-8), patenting land

While a right to government land cannot be initiated by trespass,[33] every competent locator has the right to initiate a lawful claim by a peaceful adverse entry, although the land be in the possession of those who have no superior right to acquire the title or to hold the possession.[34] An occupant of government lands has a preference right to purchase when the land is placed upon the market.[35] As against the government, a vested easement in public lands for a canal and reservoir site cannot be acquired until the canal and reservoir have been actually completed [36] and the map of definite location approved by the secretary of the interior.[37] Final proof under a timber culture entry may be made although the statutory time for making such proof has passed.[38] The execution of a patent to an entryman under soldier's additional homestead law vests the beneficial title in his assignee.[39] Grants of public lands from the United States to a state must be construed according to their terms.[40]

Railroad grants. See 10 C. L. 1298—The right of a railroad company to granted land vests upon the filing of the map of definite location properly approved;[41] its right to indemnity land vests on the approval of its selection by the secretary of the interior.[42] Title so acquired is subject to the condition subsequent of construct-to townsite trustee in trust for occupants from whom title might be obtained. McGrath v. Valentine [C. C. A.] 167 F 473.

33. One who entered by trespass upon unsurveyed island already occupied acquired no right thereby to make homestead entry. Short v. Read [Nev.] 96 P 1060.

34. Entry by one claiming as homesteader upon lands to which corporation claimed prior right through possession of assignor. Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Isaacs [Or.] 96 P 460.

35. When the government places public lands upon the market, settlers then occupying such lands have a preference right to purchase at the price stated, and the state which has acquired the pre-emption in lands occupied by Indians has the first right to purchase when the lands are put up for sale or to extinguish the Indian title. Seneca Nation of Indians v. Appleby, 127 App. Div. 770, 112 NYS 177.

36. No easement acquired under Rev. St. § 2339 and 2340 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437) by one who had staked out claim and commenced construction of ditches but had not completed outlet to reservoir basin nor canals for distribution. United States v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496.

37. No right of way acquired under §§ 18 and 19 of Act March 3, 1901, c 561, 26 Stat. 1101, 1102 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437) where secretary refused to approve map because site withdrawn from sale and reserved by government. United States v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496.

38. The acts of congress and the regulations of the land department permitted one who had made a timber-culture entry to prove his compliance with the requirements of such acts within 5 years from the expiration of 8 years from the entry, and gave local land office jurisdiction to pass thereon. An entryman made such proof more than 14 years after entry. Held mere lapse of time did not prevent such proof from being made. Neff v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 165 F 273.

39. The doctrine of relation may be invoked although there is no privity between holder of outstanding title and those who seek to benefit by it. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

40. Grant from United States to Utah by enabling act July 16, 1894, c. 138, 28 Stat. 107, held to be one in presenti; title passing as of date of grant upon selection duly made and of lands are in fact such as were intended to pass by grant. Rejection of selected lands by secretary of interior does not operate to divest title. McKinney v. Carson [Utah] 99 P 660. Act of September 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. at L. 519, providing that provisions of act granting swamp lands to Arkansas upon issuance of patent should be extended to the other states containing swamp lands, did not affect Act of March 2, 1849, c. 87, 9 Stat. at L. 352 granting Louisiana whole of swamp lands therein upon approval of list of such lands by secretary of the treasury. Continuous construction of such former statute by land department to effect that patent not necessary, upheld. Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 53 Law. Ed. 92.

41. After a profile of a railway right of way under grant by Act Cong. March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 Stat. 482 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568), has been approved by the secretary of the interior and filed in local land office, the title is complete in road and subsequent entryman takes subject to such right of way. Moran v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 192. The fact that the profile of a surveyed railroad right of way under grant by Act Cong. March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 Stat. 482 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568), was sent directly to the secretary of the interior by the president of the company instead of being transmitted by him through district land office, was immaterial as long as it was approved by the secretary and thereafter filed in district land office. Id.

42. Where grant of indemnity land was made to railway company but not approved and in meantime a settler made bona fide entry and purchase under "timber and stone act" (Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 1, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545] and Act Aug. 4, 1892, c. 375, § 2, 27 Stat. 348 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1547]), after which ing the road within the time specified by the act under which the grant is made.[43] The right to make selections of indemnity lands depends upon the status of the lands at the date of selection and not upon their status at the date of the grant,[44] unless the grant specifically provides otherwise.[45]

Swamp land grants.[See 8 C. L. 1490]—A grant of swamp land to the state, although a grant in praesenti, does not operate to pass the legal title until such lands have been selected by the state and patents thereto delivered.[46]

Cancellation and forfeiture.[See 10 C. L. 1208]—Equity will exercise wide liberality in favor of one who in good faith enters the public lands with a view of making a home thereon.[47] A patent will not be canceled for fraud unless the evidence is clear and convincing,[48] and in such case only at the suit of the government by regular judicial proceedings taken for that purpose.[49] The right to a patent is not affected by failure to file a homestead application within the time limited by law,[50] but failure to make timely entry after contest deprives the successful contestant of his priority.[51] Forfeiture of railway land grants for breach of condition subsethe company's title was approved and entryman's title canceled, held that title did not rest in company until approval and that upon entryman's purchase land ceased to be at disposal of government, vesting equitably in entryman with legal title in government in trust for his benefit. Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser [C. C. A.] 161 F 324.

43. Upon approval by the secretary of the interior of the map of definite location of railway right of way granted under Act Cong. June 4, 1898 (30 Stat. 430), grant became definite and fixed and title vested in grantee subject to condition subsequent of constructing road within time specified by act. Spokane & B. C. R. Co. v. Washington & G. N. R. Co., 49 Wash. 280, 95 P 64.

44. Lands originally within place limits of grant to one company but forfeited by it and again becoming public domain could legally be selected by another company where such lands were within indemnity limits of the latter, although grants to both companies were of the same date. United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 510.

45. Under grant of March 3, 1871, c. 122, 16 Stat. 573, Southern Pacific Railroad Company could not select as indemnity lands, lands lying within place limits of Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company under its grant of July 27, 1866, c. 278, 14 Stat. 292, although such grant was forfeited and land again passed under public domain, grant under which Southern Pacific Railroad Company claimed being limited so that it should in no way impair the present or prospective rights of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company or any other railroad company. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 167 F 514.

46. Swamp land act (Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. 519). Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340. "Swamp lands" as distinguished from "overflowed lands" are such as require drainage to dispose of needless water or moisture on or in the lands in order to make them fit for successful and useful cultivation. State v. Gerbing [Fla.] 47 S 353. "Overflowed lands" are those that are covered by nonnavigable waters or are subject to such periodical or frequent overflows of water, salt or fresh, not including lands between ordinary high and low water marks of navigable waters, as to require drainage or levees to keep out the waters and thereby render the lands suitable for successful cultivation. Id.

47. Where, in equity suit brought by government to set aside patent for fraud, evidence showed that patentee had been compelled by poverty and sickness to remain away from claim for longer periods than statute allowed, the liberal policy of the law toward honest settlers required dismissal of suit. United States v. Collett [C. C. A.] 159 F 932.

48. Evidence of fraud held insufficient to cancel patent where it appeared that patentee tried in good faith to establish home but was compelled to be absent from claim during statutory period by reason of poverty and sickness. United States v. Collett [C. C. A.] 159 F 932. Although land sold under Act. Feb. 26, 1895, 28 Stat. 627 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1519), was in fact occupied by an Indian, which occupancy would under rules of department of the interior have precluded its sale if known, an affidavit that land was not occupied by one having color of title constituted no such misrepresentation or fraud as would require cancellation of patent, occupant not holding under any written instrument. United States v. Casterlin, 164 F 437.

49. Complainants themselves having no right to a patent on land upon which they had located mining claims could not sue for cancellation of patent issued to prior entryman, although such patent was obtained by fraud. Jameson v. James [Cal.] 100 P 700.

50. Failure to file homestead application within 90 days after filing of township plat did not forfeit homesteader's right to a patent under Act May 14, 1880, c. 89, 21 Stat. 140 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392), extending to homestead settlers on unsurveyed public lands same right as pre-emption settlers to perfect their right by application within three months after filing of plat of survey. Trodick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 913.

51. Successful contestant held to have lost his priority as against a subsequent quent can only be enforced by the United States government through judicial proceedings, or by an act of congress.[52] The act itself may, however, be so framed as to ipso facto work a forfeiture on breach of its conditions.[53] Upon abandonment of a claim, whatever rights the claimant had are forfeited and the land again becomes subject to entry,[54] but a relinquishment of a homestead entry, previously decided by the secretary of the interior to be valid, does not give a railroad company within whose indemnity limits such lands lie a prior right to select the same.[55]

Jurisdiction of land officers and courts.[See 10 C. L. 1208]—The land department of the United States constitutes a special tribunal vested with the judicial power to hear and determine the claims of all parties to the public land of which it is authorized to dispose, and to execute its judgments by conveyances to the parties entitled tc them.[56] Its ultimate decisions[57] are final and conclusive upon all questions of priority of entry,[58] character of the land,[59] and issues of fact,[60] but error in the entry when he did not make entry within 30 days, although no notice given. Howell v. Sappington, 165 F 944. Act of Cong. May 14, 1880, c. 89, 21 Stat. 140 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392), providing that after successful contest and payment of land office fees the contestant shall be notified by register of cancellation and shall have 30 days after such notice to enter, does not apply to contested entry under timber and stone act (Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545]). Howell v. Sappington, 165 F 944.

52. Land was granted to defendant railway company under Act June 4, 1898 (30 Stat. 430), and map of definite location approved by secretary of interior but no part of road constructed within time limited by act. Subsequently plaintiff, under Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, 18 Stat. 482 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568), and Act March 2, 1899, c. 374, 30 Stat. 990 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1581), located on same tract and had map duly approved. Held in action for injunction that forfeiture of grant by defendant for breach of condition subsequent could not be enforced by plaintiff. Spokane & B. C. R. Co. v. Washington & G. N. R. Co., 49 Wash. 280, 95 P 64.

53. Act of June 26, 1906, c. 3550, 34 Stat. 482 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 553), provides that every grant of right of way over public lands to railway company under Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, 18 Stat. 482 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568), shall be forfeited where railroad has not been constructed within 5 years, to the extent of any portion of such road unconstructed, except where construction was progressing in good faith at the time of the approval of the act. Held that the act was in itself a legislative adjudication of forfeiture becoming effective at once without judicial proceedings. Columbia Val. R. Co. v. Portland & S. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 603.

54. Evidence that plaintiff left his claim with no one in possession, that he was absent for over 3 years, that during such time he had actual notice that another had taken possession but made no claim against him until he had erected valuable improvements thereon, held to show abandonment. Gordon v. Ross Higgins Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 637.

55. Since Act May 14, 1880, § 1 (c. 89, 21 Stat. at L. 140, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392), provides that upon relinquishment the land shall be held open to settlement and entry without further action on part of commissioner of general land office, and since company had not previously made a valid selection of such land, it was open to first settler. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Donohue, 210 U. S. 21, 52 Law. Ed. 941.

56. A patent to land which the land department has the power to dispose of is both the judgment of that tribunal and a conveyance to the party adjudged entitled thereto, and is impervious to collateral attack for errors of law or mistakes of fact committed in the decision of the case it determines. Neff v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 165 F 273. Townsite trustee of Juneau, Alaska, clothed with authority under rules of secretary of the interior to hear and determine rights as to applications for title, and in absence of fraud or mistake his decision is final except as it might be reversed by commissioner of general land office or secretary of the interior. McGrath v. Valentine [C. C. A.] 167 F 473.

57. Where two secretaries of the interior made conflicting decisions on the same controversy as to priority and sufficiency of entry, and additional evidence was introduced in the last hearing, such last decision was regarded as the ultimate decision of the department and controlled. Greenameyer v. Coate, 212 U. S. 434, 53 Law. Ed. —.

58. One whose claim of priority of entry had been adversely decided by the land office and who took no appeal therefrom could not thereafter have land in question awarded to him by equity. Harvey v. Holles, 160 F 531. Held conclusive as to priority of settlement and sufficiency of improvements. Greenameyer v. Coate, 212 U. S. 434, 53 Law. Ed. —. Commissioner's findings as to priority of right of entry conclusive in subsequent suit to recover land from patentee. McKenna v. Atherton, 160 F 547.

59. Commissioner's decision held binding that lands in question were never granted to state by swamp land act of 1850 (9 Stat. 519, c. 84). United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 818. A decision of the secretary of the interior as to whether certain lands are within the terms of the swamp land grant is conclusive in the absence of fraud and cannot be collaterally matter of law is open to inquiry.[61] In the absence of evidence to indicate that a matter of fact was in dispute before the land department, the rule that its decision is conclusive will not be applied.[62] If its decision be erroneous by reason of fraud or mistake, it may be avoided in equity and the legal title charged with a trust in favor of the rightful claimant.[63] The issuance of a patent or certificate of entry is an adjudication that the grantee has performed the acts necessary to entitle him to receive the patent or certificate.[64] Mere clerical errors in its issuance may be corrected by the department provided that the patent has not been delivered.[65] While a controversy as to the right to a patent is pending before the land department, the federal courts will not intervene until that department has refused to act or has acted without authority of law.[66]

(§ 3) B. State lands.[67]—See 10 C. L. 1299—The state may impose conditions for the disposal of its lands, compliance with which is necessary to vest title.[68] It may make special agreements of sale,[69] and, as far as its own rights are concerned, may validate what has been irregularly done.[70] In Kansas school land cannot, usually be subdivided and sold in less than forty-acre tracts.[71] Placing lands upon attacked. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340.

60. Finding that claimant had never been on land and of open, continuous and undisturbed possession of another, held conclusive. Linebeck v. Vos, 160 F 540.

61. Ayres v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 385.

62. Osborn v. Froyseth, 105 Minn. 16, 116 NW 1113.

63. Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser [C. C. A.] 161 F 324. Final action of the department will not be reversed on the ground of newly-discovered evidence upon issue of fraud in making homestead entry where complainant had ample time in which to discover such evidence and where no allegation of fact was made that he was prevented from discovering such evidence, except general allegation of deceit. Greenameyer v. Coate, 212 U. S. 434, 53 Law. Ed. —.

64. Such adjudication has the same force as an adjudication by a tribunal having jurisdiction and is binding as against collateral attack. Jameson v. James [Cal.] 100 P 700. Act of land department in allowing location under soldiers' scrip, in delivering final receipt, and in issuing patent, is evidence that all preliminary steps have been duly taken. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739. Certificate of final entry issued by local United States land office is evidence of date of settlement made thereunder. Davis v. Chamberlain [Or.] 98 P 154. Certificate of reservation to Indians under Chickasaw Treaty of 1834 made by register of land office raises a presumption that reservation was made after due compliance with all requirements of the treaty as against a subsequent patent, but such presumption may be rebutted. Certificate based upon insufficient compliance with conditions of treaty carried no title. Ayers v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 385.

65. Issuance of patent on unsurveyed lands included with lands surveyed could be corrected by secretary of the interior before delivery, upon discovery of mistake which was apparent on record, although patent being issued in pursuance of final decision of land department and approved of record could not be canceled. Garfield v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 338.

68. Under Act No. 74, p. 95, of 1892, and Act No. 160, p. 242, of 1900, grant of lands made by state to the board of commissioners of Caddo levee district held not a grant in praesenti, but intended to vest in grantee a disposable title only when proper conveyances executed by state auditor and register of state land office are recorded in the parishes where the lands lie. Hence sale of such lands prior to registry is void, and party attempting to purchase is liable to eviction at suit of state. State v. Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club [La.] 48 S 891. Sale to attorney and land agent of board of canal commissioners not a violation of Laws 1835-36, p. 145, providing for construction of Illinois and Michigan canal, and prohibiting canal commissioners from acquiring title to lands sold. People v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 239 Ill. 42, 87 NE 946.

69. Where a county sold leased lands jointly to lessees and others acting under agreement with them, in which agreement it was stipulated that upon failure of any one of purchasers to fulfill his part of contract, option to purchase under lease should revive in favor of lessees, held that, upon default by one of purchasers, title passed nevertheless, and no right remained in county which would entitle it to convey defaulting purchaser's share in violation of option agreement to purchasers other than lessees. Ellerd v. Cox [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 410.

70. Patent issued in 1855 calling for a boundary of 140,000 acres, not including prior surveys amounting to about 120,000 acres, held valid under Act March 9, 1868 (Laws 1868, p. 70, c. 1162), legalizing grants theretofore made containing more than 200 acres. Steele v. Bryant [Ky.] 116 SW 755.

71. Gen. St. 1901, § 6346. If sold in less quantities, purchaser has burden of proving that such further subdivision was properly made by county superintendent of pub-the market in the manner required by law is an offer by the state, and acceptance by a qualified purchaser completes the sale [72] though he may be required to deposit his first payment before the bids are opened.[73] If the sale be void, acceptance and retention of the purchase price does not oblige the state to issue a patent.[74] Enclosure of unsurveyed state land may give the occupant a preference right to purchase when the land is placed upon the market.[75] In some states a settler upon school lands must enter the land after it is opened for settlement with the intention of making it his permanent abode,[76] and must evidence his intention by making such improvements as are reasonably necessary for the purpose.[77] In Texas a purchaser of additional lands need not reside upon them in order to acquire title if he has proved a three years' occupancy of his original homestead and is then actually residing thereon,[78] and such residence need not be set out in the application,[79] but a settler upon school lands may transfer his right therein and subsequently complete the statutory period of occupancy necessary to complete title.[80] Title to lands to be selected by the state from the public domain vests in the purchaser as of the date of the grant to the state.[81] The granting of a land certificate is the granting of evilic instruction and the appraisers. Hopper v. Nation [Kan.] 96 P 77.

72. Since state makes offer only to actual settlers, an award made to one not an actual settler conveyed no title. Williams v. Barnes [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 432. An application to purchase land is sufficient under Pol. Code, § 3496, requiring that if applicant be a female the affidavit must show that she is entitled to purchase and hold real estate in her own name, when it states that she is "native born, a married woman, a citizen of the United States, a citizen of this state, of lawful age." Dean v. Dunn [Cal. App.] 99 P 380.

73. Highest bidder for school lands was informed by the chief clerk in state treasurer's office that a check on a bank would be received as first payment. Held that where such check was delivered before time for opening bids, but was collected on same day, that bidder was entitled to the land as against lower bidder who had made his deposit in cash. Whitis v. Robison [Tex.] 117 SW 429.

74. Hopper v. Nation [Kan.] 96 P 77.

75. One, who, on passage of Act April 15, 1905 (Laws 1905, p. 159, c. 103), relating to disposition of state lands, and long prior thereto, had enclosed land in controversy, had a preference right to purchase capable of being exercised at any time within 90 days after notice that land had been surveyed and appraised. King v. Underwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 334.

76. One who, one minute after midnight, went upon lands, lease to which expired at midnight Jan. 6, and started to build a house, and thereupon left, had prior right as against one who went upon land Jan. 3, built a house, moved his family, and then left land in order to file, so that when lease expired he was not on land until after his contestant. Clapper v. Skeen [Kan.] 99 P 590. As to settlement of school lands, § 6341, Gen. St. 1901, conduct of claimant, nature of improvements undertaken, his presence upon and his absence from the land with reasons therefor, and all attending circumstances, may be considered in determining fact of settlement and time of its inception. Christisen v. Bartlett [Kan.] 95 P 1130.

77. Evidence in action to try title to lands acquired under additional school lands law held sufficient to sustain finding that defendant was an actual settler on such land with intention of permanently residing there, although his dwelling was humble and incomplete. Corrigan v. Fitzsimmons [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 793. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 42,181, providing that purchaser of public school lands shall forfeit his title if he fail to reside upon and improve in good faith land purchased by him, held that purchaser need not make improvements beyond those necessarily incident to settlement and occupancy required by other provisions of act. McLendon v. Bumpass [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 462.

78. Where a settler upon school lands purchases additional land under § 6, c. 103, Acts 29th Leg. p. 163, and having proved a three years' occupancy of original homestead, and being in actual occupancy when he applied for additional section, it is not incumbent upon him to occupy either section for three years after the purchase of the additional section. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

79. Under arts. 4218f and 4218fff, Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, regulating sale of public school lands to one who has previously purchased public lands, while it is essential that purchaser be an actual resident upon his home section, it is not necessary to set out such fact in his sworn application for purchase, only requirement being that he is not acting in collusion with others for purchase. Pohle v. Robertson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 861.

80. Such contract not void as against public policy. Johnson v. Buchanan [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 875.

81. Where one made application and contract with state for purchase of government lands to be selected by state under provisions of grant of July 16, 1894, c. 138, 28 Stat. 107, which selection was daily made and lands entered thereunder, held that title vested in purchaser as of date of grant to state, or at least as of date of selection, and subjected land to condemnation proceedings by city although secretary of the interior did not approve state's selection until after land was sold under such con-

dence of a right to acquire public lands such as has always been satisfied out of lands used for locations and surveys,[82] and its location, if the certificate be unconditional, gives absolute title to the land.[83] While an award of public school lands made by the commissioner of the land office is a mere ministerial act in making sale of such lands,[84] such an award raises the presumption that the sale was regular.[85]

Rescissions, cancellations, forfeitures and reversions.[See 10 C. L. 1301]—The validity of a grant from the state can then only be attacked in direct proceeding in the name of the attorney general.[86] A patent can be vitiated for fraud only where the fraud has been practiced upon the state or its agents.[87] That an award of public school lands is void because made to one not an actual settler can be set up only by one who himself has a better right,[88] and the burden is upon him to show that such award was invalid.[89] A declaration of forfeiture of school lands by the commissioner of the general land office is not conclusive as against the settler.[90] A certificate of occupancy of school lands issued by the commissioner of the general land office is conclusive of the question of occupancy [91] and settlement.[92] Mere irregularities in the entry [93] or mistakes on the part of the state officials will not defeat the grant.[94] Nor will the fact that the purchaser is prohibited under penalty from acdemnation. Brigham City v. Rich, 34 Utah 130, 97 P 220.

82. Certificate granted gave right to locate upon "vacant public lands within or without the several reservations heretofore created by law." Held that such qualification was not sufficient to entitle certificate to be located upon islands specially reserved for state purposes. Roberts v. Terell [Tex.] 110 SW 733.

83. Act of Aug. 30, 1856, 4 Laws of Texas, p. 499, Paschals Dig. art. 4210, requiring holders of unconditional headright certificates to return and file same before Aug. 1, 1857, in default of which location and survey should be null and void and land again open to settlement, held unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contract, and would not operate to divest title already completed according to laws in force at inception of right under certificate. Keith v. Guedry [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 392.

84. Williams v. Barnes [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 432.

85. Undisputed fact that state land was awarded to claimant by commissioner of general land office raises presumption that land had been regularly appraised and placed upon market. Smyth v. Saigling [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 550. Evidence held to sustain presumption that state officers in issuing patent examined facts and issued patent in regular course. Osceola Land Co. v. Chicago Mill & Lumber Co., 84 Ark. 1, 103 SW 609.

86. Validity of grant of oyster beds could not be attacked in a proceeding for injunction to restrain trespass. Sooy Oyster Co. v. Gaskill [N. J. Eq.] 69 A 1084.

87. Fraud upon claimant not sufficient. Hulett v. Platt [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 207.

88. Certificate of occupancy for 3 years precluded settler upon same land from setting up that holder of certificate was not an actual settler, such certificate being conclusive after 3 years. Williams v. Barnes [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 432.

89. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

90. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

91. Conclusive as to occupancy of home section in suit to try title to additional section purchased, title to which was alleged to be forfeited in account of nonoccupancy of original section. Zettlemeyer v. Shuler [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 78.

92. Held conclusive as to purchaser's settlement as against claims of one who actually settled upon the lands before its issue but who did not assert his rights at law until afterwards. Williams v. Barnes [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 432. Act of March 16, 1905 (Laws 1905, p. 35, c. 29), provides that persons claiming the right to purchase school lands theretofore sold to another must bring suit within one year, and if no suit is brought within such time, it will be conclusively presumed that all legal requirements with regard to sale have been complied with. Act April 19, 1901 (Gen. Laws 1901, p. 292, c. 125), provides that if any purchaser shall fail to occupy lands bought, he shall forfeit them to the state, such forfeiture to have the effect of placing land upon market without any action whatever on part of commissioner of general land office. Held that, since latter statute does not ipso facto work forfeiture without action by commissioner, evidence as to nonoccupancy of purchaser could not be shown by subsequent purchaser to defeat former's right after one year. Williams v. Keith [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1056.

93. A junior grantee could not question a prior entry in ejectment on ground that entry was made in wrong county, boundary being disputed, and Shannon's Code, § 3766, providing that when a grant from a state recites that lands are situated in one county, when they were in a different county, grant shall be as valid as if locality were properly recited. Stockard v. McGary [Tenn.] 109 SW 507.

94. Where relator had made deposit of money with state treasurer to purchase certain school lands, application for which purchase was rejected, whereupon relator quiring land defeat a title acquired in violation of the statute.[95] An award of school lands will not be set aside because the purchaser has acquired additional lands where it appears that the total amount acquired does not exceed the legal quantity.[96] Abandonment operates to extinguish all the settler's rights to the land,[97] which thereupon again becomes part of the public domain.[98]

§ 4. Interest and title of occupants, claimants and patentees. A. Federal lands.[99] See 10 C. L. 1302—Occupation and improvement of unsurveyed government land gives a valid right of possession as against every one not showing a better right by connecting himself with the government title.[1] By entry and payment upon lands open to settlement, the purchaser secures a vested interest in the property and the right to a patent therefor,[2] and as between husband and wife, the title, when acquired, relates back to the time of settlement, and takes character from it.[3]

made application to buy another tract for cash directing treasurer to make up deficiency from money already deposited, held that mere fact that commissioner had neglected to inform treasurer that first bid was rejected, which neglect resulted in disposal of money by treasurer so that at time second application was made there was not sufficient money in treasury to meet relator's demands, not enough to deprive relator of his rights to conveyance. Buckley v. Terrell [Tex.] 109 SW 861.

95. Texas statute of Aug. 28, 1856 (Pen. Code 1857, act 244), prohibiting any district surveyor from being concerned in the purchase of any right, title or interest in any public land in his own name or in the name of any other person under certain penalties, does not invalidate title acquired against provision of such statute. Tompkins v. Creighton-McShane Oil Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 303.

96. A father purchased 4 sections of school lands and his son two sections, and thereafter, to promote their convenience, each transferred one section to the other. Commissioner of general land office thereupon canceled sale of section made by son as being in violation of Laws 1907, p. 494, c. 20, §§ 6d, 6e, providing that purchaser of school lands may sell same to another purchaser unless total tract acquired by latter shall exceed one complement of sections. Held that, since on purchase by father of one section he sold another to on, he had not acquired more than the 4 sections allowed, and was entitled to have sale reinstated. Cunningham v. Terrell [Tex.] 111 SW 651.

97. One who settled upon state lands, but abandoned them in 1896 and asserted no claim thereto until 1905, retained no equity which would pass by transfer to defendant as against right of purchase upon survey and appraisal existing in plaintiff who had entered into possession subsequent to the abandonment. King v. Underwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 334.

98. Plaintiff, having apparently abandoned an application for right of way for an irrigation ditch over public lands, cannot construct or operate same over lands subsequently entered by homesteaders without their consent or without proper condemnation proceedings therefor. Rasmussen v. Blust [Neb.] 120 NW 184.

1. Entry by trespass upon unsurveyed government land already occupied, and making application for survey preliminary to making application for patent, held not to give trespasser better right than prior occupant. Short v. Read [Nev.] 96 P 1060. One who settled upon unoccupied public lands and enclosed the same had a prior right as against a highway surveyed under a grant made prior to such settlement, but which highway was not laid out until after the settler inclosed his lands. McAllister v. Okanogan County [Wash.] 100 P 146. Rights of settler who entered land with bona fide intention of establishing homestead, making improvements thereon, could not be defeated by subsequent settler who claimed part of land by purchase from railway company whose title was later declared invalid, such subsequent claimant having full knowledge of prior occupancy. McKenna v. Atherton, 160 F 547. By Act Cong. March 3, 1803, lands of the Georgia session were authorized to be sold, reserving section 16 in each township for school purposes and in case such sections were already held under British grants, the secretary of the treasury was authorized to select other lands in lieu thereof. Held that, where secretary located such substitute lands upon land held by one under British grant, his action was a nullity, and conferred no title. Warren County v. Catchings [Miss.] 46 S 709.

2. Title passes as against unapproved selection of indemnity lands by railway company. Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser [C. C. A.] 161 F 324. When a declaration is filed under the desert law and part payment made thereunder, it would seem to give the party such a title as cannot be taken from him, provided he further complies with the act so as to become entitled to his patent. Act March 3, 1877, c. 107, 19 Stat. 377 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1548). Green v. Willhite, 160 F 755. After location and before issuance of patent, an assignee of soldier's additional homestead scrip who locates land under a power from assignor has a substantial and vested interest in the lands, which may be transferred. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

3. As between the heirs of the settler and his first wife, who died before the requi-

Title by patent from the United States is title by record, and delivery of the instrument to the patentee is not essential,[4] but a patent issued by mistake does not give title[5] unless it has passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser for value.[6] A patent issued on timber and stone cash entry, to one who after entry and before issuance of patent has conveyed his interest, vests title in such grantee by virtue of the deed of conveyance,[7] or if the entryman die before the patent is issued, title passes directly to the heirs, who take by purchase and not by descent.[8] Title to lands already patented will be declared to be held in trust for another only where he has been fraudulently prevented from establishing his right to them before the land department,[9] and he must show that such right accrued by settlement[10] or purchase before the patent sought to be so charged was issued.[11] As soon as an entryman becomes entitled to his patent from the United States, he may sell or convey the land as though the patent had been issued,[12] as may an allottee of Indian lands upon selection of his allotment.[13] An entryman may sue for injury to the premises,[14] and, while he cannot subject the homestead to the payment of debts contracted prior to the issuance of the patent,[15] he may give a valid mortgage site three years' residence had been completed, and the heirs under settler's marriage to a second wife within such period, held that homestead was community property of settler and first wife, although patent was obtained after marriage with second wife. Creamer v. Briscoe [Tex.] 109 SW 911.

4. Title held to pass although patent remained in land office. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

5. Claimant applied for patent to two tracts of land and paid therefor. Land department canceled application on ground that one tract was unsurveyed. By mistake patent was made out for both tracts and recorded. Held, on mandamus to compel delivery of patent, that secretary was not bound to deliver patent on unsurveyed land. Garfield v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 338.

6. While the United States, or any party who has the equitable title under a patent, may maintain a bill in equity to set aside such patent or to declare it to be held in trust either on account of error of law, fraud or gross mistake, in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value the title under such patent is impregnable, and the United States may not maintain a bill to avoid the patent or to recover the title. Neff v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 165 F 273.

7. Gilbert v. Auster, 135 Wis. 581, 116 NW 177. One who bought under warranty deed lands entered by another under federal timber and stone cash entry act acquired all the interest the United States had to such land at time of entry, including right to bring action for timber trespass. Id.

8. Held that widow of entryman, under Timber Culture Act June 14, 1878, c. 190, 20 Stat. 113, not being an heir under Iowa laws, there being direct descendants, acquired no transferable interest as widow, no title having passed to entryman to which dower could attach. Braun v. Mathieson [Iowa] 116 NW 789.

9. Where complainants themselves had no right to make entry, they were not entitled to have patent declared to be in trust for them. Jameson v. James [Cal.] 100 P 700. Denial of application to make entry created no right in applicant to have subsequent purchaser charged with trust in his favor. Campbell v. Weyerhaeuser [C. C. A.] 161 F 332.

10. Patent already issued will not be set aside in favor of one who has no equitable title, having its origin in a settlement made before patent sought to be set aside was issued. Linebeck v. Vos, 160 F 540.

11. One who filed application for entry but had his application refused and had not by acceptance of grant, settlement or purchase otherwise placed himself in privity with the United States in title, could not maintain action in equity to have title subsequently obtained by another charged with trust in his favor. Campbell v. Weyerhaeuser [C. C. A.] 161 F 332.

12. Held that entryman after 5 years' residence, and after having made final proof in less than 7 years as provided for by Rev. St. U. S. § 2291 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1390), acquired a vested title of which valid transfer could be made. Dale v. Griffith [Miss.] 46 S 543. The rights which a qualified citizen acquires to public lands by location or filing are property susceptible of sale and transfer, and such sale may be made to persons not possessing the qualifications that would enable them to initiate such property interests. May be transferred to a partnership. Neal v. Kayser [Ariz.] 100 P 439.

13. A deed by a Creek citizen, not of Indian blood, covering part of the allotment selected by him, made prior to date upon which he received his deed from chief under § 23, Act March 1, 1901, 31 Stat. 861, c. 676 held valid, and passed title to grantee immediately upon receipt by grantor of deed from tribe. McWilliams Inv. Co. v. Livingston [Okl.] 98 P 914.

14. Since the amount of compensation depends upon the circumstances of each particular case, it was error, in action for damages to homestead by reason of damming water course and flooding, to instruct that measure of damages was same as if plaintiff had owned land in fee. McLeod v. Spencer [Okla.] 95 P 754.

15. U. S. Rev. St. § 2296, (U. S. Comp. St. 1901. p. 1398). As Against creditors, the voluntary sale of the homestead ter-to cover the expense of proving up and for the purchase price.[16] No community interest results to the spouses by reason of settlement on government land.[17] Soldiers' additional homestead scrip is personal property and assignable.[18] Upon relinquishment and exchange of lands, the settler acquires no title until the exchange is consummated,[19] until which time his interest is not taxable.[20] Land located under assigned soldier's warrant is subject to taxation from the date of entry.[21] When a homestead entry is canceled, a subsequent patentee takes the title subject to water rights which attached prior to the issue of the patent.[22] One who pays money to government officials in charge of public lands in excess of that required by law cannot recover such excess in an action against the United States instituted in the court of claims.[23] A townsite trustee holding title in trust for the individual inhabitants has no power to dedicate such land for street purposes.[24] The general government, in dealing with its public lands, may provide for their transfer as might any other landed proprietor, and make such reservations therefrom by grant, dedication or otherwise as it may see fit.[25] The terms of the grant are therefore contolling on the question as to its nature and conditions.[26] minates the exemption, and the proceeds of sale may be garnished. Ritzville Hardware Co. v. Bennington, 50 Wash. 111, 96 P 826. Since liability as surety on a supersedeas bond is a "debt" within the meaning of that clause of the timber culture law providing that land acquired thereunder shall not in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the final certificate therefor, the surety's homestead could not be subjected to its payment where bond was signed before issuance of final certificate. Leman v. Chipman [Neb.] 117 NW 885. Rev. St. U. S. c. 5, § 2296 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1398), providing that homestead lands shall not in any event become liable to satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to issuance of patent, did not apply to execution against homestead for judgment in action for assault and battery rendered subsequent to issuance of final certificate, homesteader not having a family. Shelby v. Ziegler [Okl.] 98 P 989.

16. Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2290-2296 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1389-1398) do not prohibit a pre-emptioner or homesteader from giving a trust deed or mortgage upon the entered lands in advance of patent or receiver's receipt, unless such incumbrance is intended as a means of transferring title. Runyan v. Snyder [Colo.] 100 P 420.

17. Mere settlement creates in the entryman no other rights than those given by statute or departmental rule. Delacey v. Commercial Trust Co. [Wash.] 99 P 574. As the government homestead law was passed without reference to the local laws of the state regulating property rights, these apply only after the title has been vested in the entryman. Id. Where husband and wife settled upon land within limits of railway grant, and husband was ousted by judgment of court, wife could claim no right in property as community prior to final determination of husband's suit. Id.

18. Evidence held to show valid assignment. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739. Bare right of entry of soldier's additional homestead evidenced by certificate, under Act Aug. 18, 1894 (28 Stat. 397), held assignable, although no entry made. Clark v. Welch [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 816, 118 NW 137.

19. Under Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 11-36 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3768), authorizing the relinquishment and exchange of forest reserve lands and agricultural settlement lands, no title is vested in the settler as to the exchanged lands until the final consummation of the exchange. Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Isaacs [Or.] 96 P 460.

20. Lands exchanged under Act Cong. June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 36 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1541), held not taxable by the state until exchange confirmed and patent issued. and a tax levied on such exchanged premises is void. Johnson v. Crook County [Or.] 100 P 294.

21. Since exemption from taxation for 3 years after issuance of patent is personal privilege of soldier himself, and does not pass to assignee, tax deed to such land against assignee before patent issued vested valid title. Herrick v. Sargent [Iowa] 117 NW 751.

22. Where homesteader permitted plaintiff to appropriate water from spring on his land and to construct pipe line therefrom, cancellation of his entry and subsequent patent to defendants did not divest plaintiff's rights which attached upon such cancellation under § 2339, Rev. Stat. U. S. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437). Le Quime v. Chambers [Idaho] 98 P 415.

23. Claimant who made pre-emption and paid $400 thereunder, which pre-emption entry was, by permission of commissioner of land office, transmitted into homestead entry, could not recover amount paid under pre-emption entry. Millen v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 121.

24. Location and conveyance to trustee under Rev. St. § 2387 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1475). McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794.

25. Riparian and water rights may be reserved from grant under patent. Hough v. Porter [Or.] 98 P 1083. A reservation of any interest in lands by a legislative enactment is as effective, as a matter of law, as if expressly stated in the grant, patent or other instrument through which title

Railroad land grants.[See 10 C. L. 1303]—A railroad grant does not include in its primary limits lands occupied by settlers with the bona fide intention of acquiring title under homestead laws.[27] A railroad company's right to select indemnity lands to supply deficiencies within the place limits of a government grant vests upon completion of the road, and is assignable.[28]

Area acquired and boundaries.[See 10 C. L. 1303]—Substantial compliance with the statute as to surveying public lands is essential.[29] An individual cannot question the correctness of a United States survey where neither the general government nor the state does so,[30] and as between the parties, such survey is conclusive even though incorrect.[31] Where lands are granted according to an official plat of the survey, may be asserted. Id. Under Act Cong. May 20, 1826, c. 83, 4 Stat. 179, appropriating for each fractional township, for which no land had been appropriated for school purposes, a certain amount of land for such purposes, the lands so appropriated were not granted directly to the township, but were to be held by the same tenure and on the same terms for the support of schools as section 16 of each township, title to which was held by the state. Black v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 237 Ill. 500, 86 NE 1065.

26. In an action for damages sustained by territory of Oklahoma against railway company for appropriation of school lands, held that as reservation of said land under Organic Act May 2, 1890, c. 182, § 18, 26 Stat. 89, would vest title only when territory should become state, territory had no title to said land. Territory v. Choctaw, O. & W. R. Co., 20 Okl. 663, 95 P 420. An entry of public lands under Rev. St. U. S. § 2387 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1457) by probate judge as townsite in trust for occupants carries title to trustees for occupants who were such at time townsite was entered. City of Globe v. Slack [Ariz.] 95 P 126. Since the interest of the territory of Oklahoma in school lands reserved by the United States is that of a tenant at will whose term would only extend to time of admission as state, territory could only recover rental value of land appropriated to railway company and for depreciation of rental value of tract not taken for period limited by admission to statehood. Territory v. Choctaw, O. & W. R. Co., 20 Okl. 663, 95 P 420. In suit by state for injunction to restrain defendants from depleting salt beds claimed by state under government grant for school purposes, held that by clause of section 8 of enabling act of Utah (Act July 16, 1894, c. 138, 28 Stat. 109), "and including all saline lands in said state," it was intention of congress to grant 110,000 acres of land, and in addition all saline lands within borders. State v. Montello Salt Co., 34 Utah, 458, 98 P 549. The county of Liberty, embracing a municipality to which the Republic of Texas had already granted 4 leagues of land, was organized in 1837. The town of Liberty was incorporated in 1837, and act incorporating town authorized it, in conjunction with the county, to alienate any or all of such 4 leagues, proceeds to be used in constructing public buildings. By act of congress of the Republic, commissioners of general land office were required to and did issue patents to town trustees of such 4 leagues. Held that acts of congress in recognizing in act in corporating town the title of the town to the 4 leagues, and in afterwards directing a patent therefor to be issued to town trustees, established title of town, regardless of whether county or town independently of those acts would have succeeded to the rights of the old municipality of Liberty. Vasser v. Liberty [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 119.

27. One who has made a bona fide settlement upon unsurveyed land before a railway company made good its grant by filing location map could not be deprived of his right of homestead entry by subsequent filing of such map, land being encumbered with a "claim or right" within meaning of Act May 14, 1880, c. 89, 21 Stat. 140 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392), and therefore not subject to grant to company. Trodick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 913.

28. Right of selection of indemnity lands held to pass by assignment to one for benefit of creditors of the railway company, and could be exercised by assignee within statutory period allowed for winding up company's business. Norton v. Frederick [Minn.] 119 NW 492. Grant to railway company carries with it indemnity lands to extent granted, and when, through opinion that certain lands were included therein, remainder of lands are patented to others, government cannot afterwards cancel such patent to company on ground that it was reserved prior thereto. Nor conceding that such land had been erroneously patented because withdrawal order still in force when grant was made, United States held to have no right to cancellation of such patents or to recovery of purchase price. United States v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 297.

29. Rule as to surveying public lands, as laid down in §§ 2395 and 2396, Rev. St. U. S. (U. S. Comp. St. 1906, pp. 1471, 1473), into townships containing 36 sections of a mile square, except where a line of an Indian reservation, tracts of land theretofore surveyed or patented or course of navigable rivers may render it impossible, must not be departed from further than such peculiar circumstances require. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499.

30. By mistake, lands bordering on lake were included within surveyed meander line as part of lake itself, on issue whether land belonged to riparian owners or had passed under swamp land grant to state, it was held that correctness of survey was conclusive as to those claiming under swamp land grant. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340.

31. Where government has parted with its title and controversy is wholly between the plat is controlling as to area and boundaries.[32] Course and distance as called for by the survey yield to natural and ascertained objects.[33] If a grant to a railway company includes land left unsurveyed by mistake, title passes to the company, notwithstanding its subsequent survey by the government.[34] The locator of lands in Alaska bordering upon navigable or tidal waters acquires no title to the soil below high-water mark.[35] Where there is nothing in the grant of lands bordering a navigable stream indicating an intention to make any reservation or limit the grant to the water's edge, the grantee takes to the middle of the main channel of the stream [36] subject to the easement for the use of the public.[37] A meander line according to which lands upon a navigable stream are granted does not determine the boundaries of such land.[38] A homesteader residing upon a fractional quarter section need not limit his claim thereto.[39]

Adverse possession. See 8 C. L. 1500—The statute of limitations will not run as to a contested claim as long as the litigation is pending.[40] In order to defeat title under an older patent, the adverse claimant must prove actual adverse and continuous possession within the lap of the patents for the legal period.[41] persons asserting conflicting claims under grants or patents based upon official survey, such survey is conclusive, even though incorrect. Barringer v. Davis [Iowa] 120 NW 65.

32. Since plat of survey with notes, lines and descriptions becomes part of deed where grant is made according to official plat, grant from railway company of "northwest quarter and lots 1 and 2 according to survey," which survey showed meander line apparently coincident with shore line, carried title to all land between such meander line and true shore line. Barringer v. Davis [Iowa] 120 NW 65.

33. Meander corner designated as being at the intersection of the south line of the intersection of the lake is a fixed, natural monument which is controlling in a controversy growing out of a conveyance according to the survey which it witnesses. Barringer v. Davis [Iowa] 120 NW 65.

34. Where a land grant for the benefit of railroad company has been made to the state, and the company has constructed the road according to the terms of the grant, the United States no longer retains any title, and if by mistake any part of a section so conveyed has been left unsurveyed, its subsequent survey under an order from the interior department would not have the effect of restoring such land to the public domain. Barringer v. Davis [Iowa] 120 NW 65.

35. One who located homestead under "Soldier's Additional Homestead Scrip Act" on bank of navigable river, and proceeded to erect fish trap extending from such claim into deep water, had no right to use shore for such purpose, and could not maintain action for injunction against one who erected another fish trap immediately above his location. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton [C. C. A.] 161 F 60. Conveyance by a townsite trustee of land situated upon the public domain and purporting to extend below highwater mark gives no title to such portion as is below highwater mark, the town having no title thereto. McCloskey v Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794.

36. Unsurveyed island formed at highwater, not indicated by government plat, held not reserved, but passed with grant. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499. Title to unsurveyed island held to be in riparian owner, and not government land. Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513.

37. A patent conveyed lands bounded on one side by a navigable river. At high water an island was formed opposite such lands, but at low water island formed territory contiguous with mainland. No such island was shown on government survey. Held in suit to quiet title to such island, that boundary of land covered by patent was thread of stream, and that island formed part thereof. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499. The riparian owner takes to the middle of the main channel of the stream. Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513.

38. According to government plat, reference to which was made in patent granting lands bounded on one side by navigable stream, lots conveyed contained 44.40 acres. According to actual survey, taking thread of stream as boundary lots contained 92 acres. Held that former figure was simply figure at which land was to be paid for, and was no evidence that more land would not pass under grant, and that only government, and not a stranger, could complain. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499.

39. One who settled upon fractional section under homestead law and manifested to entire community his intention to claim adjacent lands sufficient to make 160 acres acquired a right to such lands as against indemnity selections made under railroad grant subsequent to such settlement. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Donohue, 210 U. S. 21, 52 Law. Ed. 941.

40. Since an entryman cannot set in motion the statute of limitations against the government either in his own behalf or in behalf of those whose occupancy of the land is dependent upon his entry, he cannot in a contest for government land, gain the advantage of the statute over his adversary while the litigation in aid of his title is pending. Delacey v. Commercial Trust Co. [Wash.] 99 P 574.

41. Where land claimed by adverse possession was part of an older grant, fact

(§ 4) B. State lands.[42]—See 10 3. L. 1303—A patent regular on its face, in proper form, is conclusive evidence of title,[43] and is not subject to collateral attack [44] unless void on its face; its invalidity can only be established in a direct proceeding by the state for that purpose.[45] A patent does not operate to convey title to lands inserted subsequent to its issuance and delivery.[46] Its loss or destruction is immaterial.[47] In some states where a patentee also claims adjoining lands not patented to him but having well defined boundaries and has held such lands for many years, a lawful grant will be presumed [48] even as against a subsequent patent to another.[49] The oldest of several conflicting grants carries the title.[50] One in possession under a contract of purchase from the state has a prior right as against the holder of a purchase contract not in possession.[51] The presumption is in favor of the senior that claimant had treated it as part of his other property not sufficient in absence of actual possession of that identical portion of land. Brown v. Wallace [Ky.] 116 SW 763.

42. Search Note: See Public Lands, Cent. Dig. §§ 383-600; Dec. Dig. §§ 142-187; 26 A. & E. Enc. L. (2ed.) 403; 13 A. & E. Enc. P. & P. 301.

43. The heirs of one who assigned certificates of sale of school lands by indorsement in which wife did not join could not claim any interest as to the wife's one-third, where assignee's grantee had acquired a patent. Holland v. Netterberg [Minn.] 120 NW 527. Where an officer having authority to issue a patent, does so in the manner prescribed by law, a patent thus issued conveys to the patentee whatever right the state has, and is good against the state and all parties not having a superior right. Hulett v. Platt [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 207.

44. In suit to quiet title to lands in part granted by state as agricultural and unoccupied, held that patent implied a declaration by officers of land department that facts were found in favor of patentee and that such declaration was conclusive as against collateral attack. Worcester v. Kitts [Cal. App.] 96 P 335. An entry, although vague, is not open to collateral attack by a stranger to the title after survey and issuance of a grant by the state. Call v. Robinett, 147 N. C. 615, 61 SE 578.

45. Grants to railway company of strip of land under water held valid on its face and not subject to attack by an individual holding a junior patent in a suit in equity. Lally v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 61 Misc. 199, 113 NYS 177.

46. Doe v. McCullough [Ala.] 46 S 472.

47. Upon delivery of deed, title is complete, and issuance of duplicate deed upon loss of original under Kirby's Dig. § 4732, does not operate as creating new grant, but is simply a substitute for original. Thornton v. Smith [Ark.] 115 SW 677.

48. Lands held since 1844 will be presumed to have been granted as against a subsequent patent unaccompanied by entry issued in 1868. Buckner's Ex'r v. Kirkland's Ex'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 603, 110 SW 399. The possession of ancestor and heir may be tacked to show 20 years possession so as to presume a grant. Bardin v. Commercial Ins. & Trust Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 165. The doctrine, that the effect of a grant from the commonwealth is to invest the senior patentee with constructive seisin of all land included in the grant, and that such seisin continues until disturbed by actual entry of an adverse claimant and is then affected only to the extent to which the first patentee may be dispossessed by the junior claimant, has no application to case of a junior patentee where the contiguity of the original boundary had been severed anterior to the acquisition of the title under which he claims. Hot Springs Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Sterrett, 108 Va. 710, 62 SE 797.

49. Subsequent patent not accompanied by entry into possession does not operate to oust first claimants. Buckner's Ex'r v. Kirkland's Ex'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 603, 110 SW 399.

50. Kittel v. Steger [Tenn.] 117 SW 500. A patent issued upon a location and survey, made subsequent to a valid and subsisting survey and appropriation of the same land under a valid certificate is void and cannot serve as a link in a chain of title to support title under a three-years limitation. Keith v. Guedry [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 392. An unofficial survey of state lands was made for claimant but certificate under which survey was made was not actually applied to land until approved by legally acting district surveyor. Prior to this time but subsequent to actual survey, another claimant had survey regularly made and filed. Held that latter claimant had prior right as having first legally appropriated land by survey regularly made and filed as required by Rev. St. 1895, art. 4130-4132. Smyth v. Saigling [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 550. The provisions of the occupying claimant's act (Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, § 10,858), providing that any person in possession of or claiming any real estate under a certificate of entry or under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States shall be considered as having sufficient title, upon being ousted by one having better title, to demand the value of his improvements, applies to evictions had under Code Civ. Proc. § 1019 to § 1032, c. 10, tit. 30. Wells v. Cox [Neb.] 120 NW 433. Where a senior patent was regularly issued by the officer intrusted with the duty of issuing patents, the patent as between the state and the patentee passed to the latter the state's title and furnished to the patentee title or color of title, though another obtained a junior patent based on a right which had its inception prior to the senior patent. Hulett v. Platt [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 207.

51. Where certificate holder forfeited his application, and a junior applicant has the burden of showing its invalidity.[52] Title obtained by a subsequent grantee may be declared to be held in trust for the first enterer if the latter's entry is sufficiently definite to put the subsequent enterer upon notice.[53] A bounty warrant,[54] or a land certificate issued under state authority is personal property until located,[55] and as such is subject to sale or seizure under execution.[56] A mere preference right to file upon lands is not sufficient to make homestead community property, if wife die before such preference right is exercised.[57]

Area acquired and boundaries. See 10 C. L. 1304—If the patentee intends to convey all the lands covered by the patent, a mistake in the patent as to area or boundaries does not effect the vesting of the title,[58] but a claim by reason of overlapping surveys confers no right unless accompanied by occupation of such interference.[59] A senior survey takes precedence over junior surveys as to the quantity of land covered.[60] It will be presumed that the original survey was made on the ground [61] and if the survey as called for by the patent is incorrect, other documents referred to may be rights thereunder and land was subsequently contracted to another, he could not maintain ejectment against latter, since legal title was not vested in him but in the state. Beatty v. Wilson, 161 F 453. One who has entered into possession of lands through a contract with the state for state's selection of public nonmineral lands under federal grant, which selection has been rejected by secretary of interior, has, as against a trespasser, the right to such possession. McKinney v. Carson [Utah] 99 P 660.

52. Evidence as to prior applicant's residence held sufficient to sustain finding for him. Dean v. Dean [Cal. App.] 99 P 380. If an action is brought by one who first filed a proper application, the statement of facts showing that the land was subject to sale, that he was a qualified purchaser, that he made due application to purchase, that defendant claims under a subsequent application and that order of reference has been made, is sufficient to make a prima facie case. Risdon v. Steyner [Cal. App.] 99 P 377. Where B made payments on state lands with full knowledge of plaintiff's prior right to purchase, and in collusion with another to deprive plaintiff of such right, payment was voluntary and B could not therefore claim reimbursement by plaintiff as a condition to her right to a decree vesting title in her as against defendants. King v. Underwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 334.

53. Entry of "640 acres lying on the waters of Stony Fork in Elk township adjoining lands of A and others, beginning on a stake in A's line and running various courses for complements," held too vague to put another enterer upon notice. Call v. Robinett, 147 N. C. 615, 61 SE 578.

54. A bounty warrant was issued in 1838 to one who died leaving him surviving a widow and two children. Subsequently both children died and widow after remarriage conveyed bounty warrant, the husband joining in the conveyance. Held that the effect of such transfer was to pass to grantee the equitable title to the land upon its subsequent location by him. Clark v. Hoover [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 792.

55. Certificate issued to heirs of citizen of Texas for military services passed to wife and child according to laws of descent in force in Texas, and not according to laws in force in Virginia where wife was domiciled. Waterman v. Charlton [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 779.

56. Tompkins v. Creighton-McShane Oil Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 303.

57. One who in good faith occupied public land with his wife and child, believing he had title thereto under deed from his father, but subsequently and after death of wife discovered that he held no title, filed upon land under Acts 1870, p. 68, c. 53, which acts gave him preference right for 12 months to appropriate land as homestead, upon making certificate of 3 years' residence obtained a patent, took such title in his own right and not as community property which would inure to benefit of child. Simpson v. Oats [Tex.] 114 SW 105.

58. Hensley v. Burt & Brabb Lumber Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 316.

59. Where plaintiff and defendant each claim by virtue of overlapping surveys, but plaintiff claiming under junior survey has never been in possession of such interference, his entry outside of such interference did not extend his right thereto. Adams v. Mineral Development Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 246.

60. A senior survey must have its quantity of land out of the public domain which existed when it was surveyed and the junior surveys must give way to it regardless of what other surveys would thereby be thrown into conflict. McCaleb v. Campbell [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 111. Where a chain of special entries has already been surveyed before competing enterer sought to make his entry, it is immaterial that such entries excluded prior claims and yet called for a certain acreage and that therefore a subsequent enterer could not know how to ascertain extent of any of the entries included in the chain, for as long as such survey was not objected to by enterer for whose benefit it had been made, a subsequent enterer could not object. Breckenridge Cannel Coal Co. v. Scott [Tenn.] 114 SW 930.

61. Fact that surveyor did not go on used to correct the mistake,[62] but such mistakes cannot be set up by a subsequent enterer with notice.[63] Calls for natural objects take precedence over calls for artificial objects.[64] Adjacent surveys are admissible to identify the tract in controversy.[65] The specialty of an entry may be shown by connecting it with the first of a series admittedly special.[66] A patent from the state to lands lying between ordinary high and low water marks gives no title to the patentee,[67] but his right as a riparian owner vests to lands bordering on a lake although according to the survey such lands are part of the lake.[68]

Adverse possession. See 10 C. L. 1304—Where the statute of limitations does not run against the state, no rights as against it can be acquired by adverse possession.[69] Title by adverse possession may be acquired as against one holding a subsequently acquired patent.[70] The statute may commence to run in favor of one holding ad-ground and measure and mark the lines may be shown. Wilkins v. Clawson [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 103.

62. Lines of survey as called for by patent failed to close but lines according to certificate of survey did. Held certificate controlled. Hensley v. Burt & Brabb Lumber Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 316.

63. Where surveyor by mistake made certain lines longer than entries called and others fell short, running on course and distance, subsequent enterer chargeable with notice of survey as made and would not be justified in superimposing subsequent entry upon prior entries made apparent by such survey, especially after lapse of more than 50 years. Breckenridge Cannel Coal Co. v. Scott [Tenn.] 114 SW 930.

64. In order to determine location of a certain league of land in dispute, an instruction that jury should be guided in following footsteps of surveyor, "first by natural objects, such as streams and timber; second by artificial objects, such as the fixed and established line of an adjoining survey about which there is no dispute, and then by course and distance," and that jury must consider all the evidence and follow actual survey as made, held correct. Wilkins v. Clawson [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 103.

65. Tract held sufficiently identified under evidence. Sullivan v. Solis [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 456.

66. Breckenridge Cannel Coal Co. v. Scott [Tenn.] 114 SW 930.

67. Since on its admission as a state on an equal footing with the original states, Florida acquired in trust for the people the navigable waters of the state including the land between high and low-water mark, the Act of 1850 granting swamp and overflow lands does not affect title of state to lands between high and low-water marks, since such title was already in state held in trust for the public and not subject to conveyance. State v. Gerbing [Fla.] 47 S 353. One who claimed title to lands lying between high and low-water marks on a navigable river through a deed from the state by the trustees of the internal improvement fund based upon selection of swamp and overflow lands granted to state by Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. 519, acquired no title thereto as against the general public. Id. Term "public lands" as used in Rev. St. 1895, art. 3498a, declaring that "public school, university, asylum and public lands," shall be open to purchase in accordance with Rev. St. art. 3498j, does not include lands covered by tides in bay connecting with gulf, and as to such lands no right of purchase applies. De Meritt v. Robison, Land Com'r [Tex.] 116 SW 796. Where patent was granted to land described as being bounded by low-water mark, patent covering area under water beyond low-water mark. Thereafter by Laws 1857, p. 638, c. 763, and Laws 1878, p. 96, c. 88, shore owners of land were granted by state right to construct piers for outside of line of patent. Held that effect of such acts followed by filling in the land was to relieve ownership of land under water so filled from public use. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

68. Where by mistake lands bordering on lake were included within surveyed meander line as part of lake, patents issued to state and by state to individuals, of fractional sections surrounding such meander lines, conveyed all riparian rights and vested title to lakebed as against claimants under swamp lands act. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340.

69. The statute of limitations not running against the state, a railway company could not by 27 years' possession acquire any right to shoal lands so long as title thereto remained in the state. Black v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 237 Ill. 500, 86 NE 1065. Adverse possession from 1844 to 1868 did not toll the commonwealth's right of entry, the act of the general assembly allowing limitations to run against commonwealth not being passed until 1873. Buckner's Ex'r v. Kirkland's Ex'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 601, 110 SW 399.

70. One who has been in possession of land for 50 years claiming it as his own to a well marked boundary under deed from his predecessor who held no record title has good title to such land even as against one holding a subsequently acquired patent thereto. Conley v. Breathitt Coal, Iron & Lumber Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 504. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that reservoir constructed on land claimed by plaintiff under Desert Land Act not maintained in such shape as to be of any value, and not to constitute adverse occupation. Dean v. Dean [Cal. App.] 99 P 380.

versely under color of title against the holder of a land certificate on the date of the completed right to a patent.[71]

Adjudication of title by the courts.[See 10 C. L. 1304]—The question as to location of land, entered is properly determinable in a protest proceeding.[72] The same rule applied in construing ambiguous language in a deed applies to ambiguous language in a patent.[73] The ordinary rules as to relevancy and competency of evidence apply in actions affecting title and priorities in public lands.[74] The certificate of the commissioner of a state general land office is admissible in evidence only as facts contained in papers, documents or records of his office, and cannot be used as evidence of any fact otherwise known to him which does not directly appear from the records of the office,[75] and a deed from a commissioner of state lands is prima facie evidence of title.[76]

§ 5. Leases of public lands and rights thereunder.[77]—[See 10 C. L. 1304]—A lease of Mississippi sixteenth section school lands for ninty-nine years carries with it as full complete ownership as though the title was in fee simple for that period.[78] In order to acquire preferred rights to lease school lands, the claimant must be a bona fide settler or occupant and must have placed upon the land permanent improvements which have enhanced its value.[79] Leased lands are not open to settlement,[80]

71. Swamp and overflow land granted by congress to state under Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. 519, being a grant in praesenti, passed equitable title to state and issuance of certificate thereafter to appellant's ancestor passed equitable title to him with legal title held in trust by state. Held that when grant to state was subsequently confirmed in 1859, ancestor's right to patent was complete and subject to running of statute in favor of adverse holder. Hibben v. Malone, 85 Ark. 584, 109 SW 1008.

72. Where defendants made entry upon a certain island claiming that it was located in New Hanover county, and plaintiffs entered their protest claiming that island was in Brunswick county and that they held grant thereof as being in that county, the issue as to which county contained the island was properly determinable in the protest proceeding. Ullery v. Guthrie, 148 N. C. 417, 62 SE 552.

73. Hensley v. Burt & Brabb Lumber Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 316.

74. Where plaintiff claimed title to uncultivated lands entered by his grantor in 1857 under certificate of sale from county not reciting payment, and same land was subsequently patented to defendant's remote grantor in 1899, evidence consisting of treasurer's receipt to plaintiff's grantor in payment for lands not described held insufficient to warrant finding that lands sold by county to persons named in receipt were the lands described in certificate to plaintiff's grantor. Phillips v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 214 Mo. 669, 113 SW 1065. Payment of taxes for a number of years is evidence that the state has parted with its title. Bardin v. Commercial Ins. & Trust Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 165. Parol evidence held proper to locate an entry described as "beginning at R. W.'s corner and running S. 70 degrees E. 161 chains to S.'s corner, thence N. 20 degrees E. 27 chains to H.'s corner, thence N. 59 degrees W. 152 chains to D. W.'s corner, then S. 32½ degrees W. 52 chains to first station." Babb v. Gay Mfg. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 609.

75. Certificate attached to sketch from general land office purporting to show that sketch was a "true and correct copy from map of H. county drawn from actual surveys made in 1840, and now an archive of this office" not admissible as proof of actual survey. Wilkins v. Clawson [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 103.

76. Deed of commissioner of state lands prima facie evidence of title only. Allen v. Phillips [Ark.] 112 SW 403. Deed of commissioner of state lands conveyed no title upon proof by defendant that sale was not confirmed by court. Id. Except as changed by statute, a deed alone of the commissioner of school lands is not evidence of conveyance of title from the state, but such parts of the record of the court proceedings upon which the deed is based as show forfeiture of the land or title therto in the state are necessary as prima facie evidence that the deed carried the state's title. Feder v. Hager [W. Va.] 63 SE 285.

78. Miss. Act Feb. 27, 1833, containing no provision against waste, lease thereunder for 99 years carries with it right to cut timber. Forest Products Co. v. Russell, 161 F 1004.

79. Complaint against supervisors for leasing school lands to another which merely set out that plaintiff was occupying said lands and had placed valuable permanent improvements thereon held insufficient under Rev. St. 1901, par. 4036 (§ 5) and par. 4037 (§ 6), as not setting out what improvements were and that they enhanced value. Schley v. Vail [Ariz.] 95 P 113. Erection of dwelling house, barns, corrals, fences, cleaning off brush and undergrowth, and preparing ground for grazing or for raising crops, would have constituted sufficient permanent improvements if properly alleged. Id.

80. No valid act of settlement of leased school lands can be done until termination of lease; when lease expires settler must but where the lease is invalid it furnishes no obstacle to an award.[81] Whether the lease has been informally canceled is a question for the jury.[82]

§ 6. Spanish and other grants antedating federal authority.[83] —See 8 C. L. 1503— In order to derive title to land granted under Spanish authority, such grant must be shown to have been perfect and complete.[84] A complete grant will be presumed from long continued possession,[85] and title thereunder may be registered.[86] A confirmation of an entire grant is a confirmation of all its parts.[87] Where the United States brings suit in the court of private land claims to try title to lands included in an unconfirmed Mexican grant, lands patented by the United States to others prior to such suit cannot be excepted from the decree of confirmation,[88] and the grantee obtains complete title to such lands notwithstanding the prior patent.[89] perform an original act of entry notwithstanding that, with lessee's consent, he has already entered upon land and erected improvements. Clapper v. Skeen [Kan.] 99 P 590.

81. In suit to try title between lessee of public school lands and holder of award of same lands, it appeared that land included lands previously leased, which lease was transferred to plaintiff but subsequently canceled for nonpayment of rent whereupon plaintiff acquired new 10-year lease. Buchanan v. Barnsley [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 118. Held that first lease was valid when 10-year lease was executed and latter consequently void and no obstacle to an award made during period of lease. Id. After the existence of facts justifying the cancellation of a lease of public school lands is shown, a stranger to the lease cannot interpose it as a defense to the right of the state to make an award of the land. Trimble v. Burroughs [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 551.

82. Where it appeared that the rent under lease of school lands was more than 60 days over due and that one of joint lessees had relinquished his rights and the other knew that commissioner had again placed land upon market, a finding of informal cancellation was authorized. Trimble v. Burroughs [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 551.

84. In suit for ejectment plaintiff traced title to grant made in 1728 by governor and captain general of New Mexico, which grant had not been confirmed by the United States. By the royal regulations of the King of Spain, Oct. 15, 1752, § 3, it was provided that all persons holding grants made after 1700 A. D. should present such grants for confirmation, a failure to do which would result in eviction. It did not appear that grant under which plaintiff claimed had been so confirmed. Held such grant was imperfect because of lack of confirmation and conveyed no title to plaintiff, since recognition of imperfect grants is forbidden by § 12, Act Cong. March 3, 1891 (c. 539, 26 Stat. 859 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 772]). Sena v. American Turquoise Co. [N. Mex.] 98 P 170.

85. A native of province of Banguet, P. I., who was in possession of land held by him and his ancestors for more than 50 years prior to the Treaty of Paris, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1754), although his title had not been recognized formally by Spanish Crown, held to be owner of such land although he had failed to comply with Spanish registration law of 1880 where, even if tried by law of Spain as existing before treaty of Paris 1899, it is not clear that he was not the owner. Carino v. Insular Government, 212 U. S. 449, 53 Law. Ed. —. Evidence held insufficient to show such possession as would raise the presumption that a Spanish land grant made in 1728 was confirmed in 1752. Sena v. American Turquoise Co. [N. M.] 98 P 170.

86. Act of Philippine Commission No. 926 of 1903, excepting province of Banguet from operation of registry law, dealing only with acquisition of new titles and perfecting of titles under Spanish law, does not prevent registry by one who had title before such act went into effect. Carino v. Insular Government, 212 U. S. 449, 53 Law. Ed. —.

87. Plaintiffs claimed title to porcion 107 under Spanish grant of 1767 to plaintiff's ancestor. Said land was surveyed for plaintiffs in 1879 and resurveyed in 1880. In 1852 the legislature confirmed title to several other porciones under said grant but did not include 107 in such confirmation. Held that such confirmation of 1852, Paschall's Dig. art. 4461, operated as confirmation of entire grant, including porcion 107, and severed land from public domain, rendering it not subject to settlement by defendant in 1882. Sullivan v. Solis [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 456.

88. Section 14, of Act March 3, 1891, c. 539, 26 Stat. 854 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 765), providing that if in any case it shall appear that lands decreed to any claimant under provisions of this act shall have been sold or granted by the United States to any other person, such title to such other person shall remain valid, notwithstanding the decree, and that upon proper proof the court shall render judgment in favor of the claimant against the United States for reasonable value of such lands. Held not to apply in suit brought by United States to try title to unconfirmed Mexican grant in court of private land claims. Richardson v. Ainsa [Ariz.] 95 P 103.

89. Action to quiet title could be maintained against holders of government patents under confirmatory decree of court of private land claims, and fact that patents antedated confirmation did not constitute defense. Richardson v. Ainsa [Ariz.] 95 P 103.

§ 7. Regulations and policing, and offenses pertaining to public lands.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1805—The exercise of the power of the federal government to make all needful regulations concerning the public domain cannot be in any degree restricted by state legislation.[91] The government may enjoin unlawful flooding of the public domain.[92]

Cutting timber on public lands. See 10 C. L. 1805—The official approval of the board of timber commissioners is a jurisdictional requirement to make valid a permit to sell state timber.[93] One who unlawfully cuts state timber is liable to the government for the value thereof.[94]

Crimes and offenses against public lands.[95]—An entryman under the stone and timber act who makes a false affidavit that he has entered into no agreement to acquire title for another is punishable although no such agreement was ever consummated in fact,[96] and although the affidavit relates to the land alone and not to the timber,[97] but if it is so palpably invalid that it cannot under any circumstances prejudice the government, it will not support a conviction.[98] It is no offense against federal law for an entryman who in good faith has made application under the stone and timber act to contract to sell his rights thereunder.[99] One who has already made an entry violates the statute if he attempts to acquire additional lands through one not disqualified, although the statute does not in terms forbid it.[1] An

91. Although the state allows cattle to run at large and requires every landowner to fence his own land, it cannot impose such duty upon the federal government as to forest reserves within the state borders. Shannon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 870.

92. Unauthorized use by private parties of government and as reservoir for irrigation and power purposes enjoined at suit of federal government. United States v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496.

93. Under Laws 1895, p. 349, c. 163, providing for sale of state timber, held that jurisdictional requisite that majority of board of timber commissioners officially sign a statement endorsed upon appraisal of timber proposed to be sold, that sale necessary to protect state from loss, was substantially complied with. State v. Akeley Lumber Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 387. Permit to sell state pine timber held to include "dead and down" timber and jack pine. Id.

94. Where the employe of a lumber company made homestead entry with money furnished by the company and thereafter on previous agreement denuded land of timber which was sold to company after which claim was abandoned, held that company was liable to government for full value of the property. United States v. Flint Lumber Co. [Ark.] 112 SW 217.

96. Section 2 of Act June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. 89, c. 151 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545]), requires entryman on making application to make oath that he has not made any agreement or contract directly or indirectly by which title shall inure to the benefit of any person but himself. Held that where an entryman made contract prior to his application for timber entry that he would sell his rights to a company, he was guilty of perjury although such company in fact had no existence, and although its purported manager never in fact intended that contract should ever become effective. Nickell v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 702.

97. Under stone and timber act (Act June 3, 1788, c. 151, § 1, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545]), making such lands subject to entry as are available chiefly for timber but unfit for cultivation, an entryman having made affidavit that he sought to purchase the land for his own benefit and not for speculation could not escape punishment on ground that such affidavit related to land and not to timber. Nickell v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 702.

98. Where forged affidavit presented to land office in final proof of entry under timber-culture act was fair on its face but was presented after legal time for filing and making proof, held that its use to induce register to give new opportunity to take testimony was a contingency in which it might have worked injury to government, and hence was sufficient to sustain conviction under R. S. § 5418 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3666). Neff v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 165 F 273.

99. Conspiracy to induce entryman after application made under Stone and Timber Act, 27 Stat. at L. 348, c. 375 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545), to agree to convey after patent issued, held not one to defraud United States under R. S. U. S. § 5440 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3676), since stone and timber act not only does not expressly prohibit such transaction but impliedly sanctions it. United States v. Biggs, 211 U. S. 507, 53 Law. Ed. —.

1. U. S. R. S. § 2350 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1441) provides that one person shall be entitled to make only one entry upon public coal lands, but does not in terms prohibit one who has already made entry from acquiring other land through one not disqualified, such acquisition held in vio-indictment need only inform the defendants of the nature and cause of the accusation against them and must allege the facts so as to protect them after verdict against any further prosecution for the same offense.[2]

Fencing. See 10 C. L. 1306—A lease containing a covenant for the unlawful fencing of a part of the public domain is invalid although the statute does not in terms avoid such contract.[3] Enclosure of public lands by a bona fide settler is not unlawful.[4]

St. § 5440, for conspiring to defraud government of lands embraced by homestead claims, held sufficient when it charged that defendant and others conspired to obtain from government certain specified tracts of land open to homestead entry by inducing certain persons named to enter same by means of false proof in respect to residence, improvements and intent, setting out the facts, and that defendants knew proof was false. § 2. Power, duty and occasion to order or make improvements.[11] See 10 C. L. 1307.—Municipalities have only such powers with respect to the ordering or making of improvements as are expressly or impliedly conferred by statute.[12] Statutes conferring such powers must conform to constitutional requirements.[13] The determination of the necessity, time, place and plan of public improvements is vested exclusively in the legislative body of the municipality,[14] and the exercise of such power is discretionary and final[15] and will be interfered with by the courts only for an abuse of discretion or fraud.[16] Legislative functions delegated to municipalities cannot be delegated by them,[17] but mere matter of detail may be delegated.[18] A city in proceeding under a statute providing for public improvements is acting under special powers conferred and must comply with the requirements of the stat-

Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. Under Milwaukee city charter, c. 7, § 2, amended by Laws 1898, § 859-35, the board of public works held authorized to order a street paved without petition of owners, and to assess costs against abutting owners. Loewenbach v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 119 NW 888. Under such statutes, held also that the board has power to order repaving of street without petition. Id. Ky. R. 918, 111 SW 706. Acts 1908, p. 166, c. 10, providing for grading and paving of streets in cities of the first class, is valid. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559. Incorporated cities and towns have no power to compel property owners to construct gutters. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181.

13. Local Acts 1907, p. 133, No. 411, creating board for directing local improvements, held void as not indicating its provisions in the title. McDonald v. Springwells, 152 Mich. 28, 15 Det. Leg. N. 86, 115 NW 1066.

14. Question of necessity and propriety of making an improvement is for exclusive determination of city council. Applegate v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 890. Until that body has acted, the city has not acted. That abutting owners have constructed sidewalks does not prevent the city from ordering sidewalks the cost to be taxed against abutting property under statutory authority. Guilfoyle's Ex'r v. Maysville [Ky.] 112 SW 666. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 8960, 8961, 8963, 8965, the town board of trustees has full jurisdiction over the making of street improvements. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

15. An ordinance for an improvement will bs declared void for unreasonableness only when clearly arbitrary, unjust and oppressive. City of Chicago v. Hulbert, 234 Ill. 321, 84 NE 922. Evidence insufficient to show that a sidewalk was unnecessary. City of Chicago v. Marsh, 238 Ill. 254, 87 NE 319.

16. City of Chicago v. Hulbert, 234 Ill. 321, 84 NE 922. In determining what is reasonably necessary in making a public improvement, "necessary" does not mean indispensable, but includes whatever is appropriate or convenient to render improvement effective. Meriwether v. St. Francis Levee Dist. Directors [C. C. A.] 165 F 317.

17. Under Kansas City charter, art. 9, § 2, providing for construction of sidewalks to such extent, in such manner, and under such regulations as may be provided by ordinance, an ordinance delegating to the engineer the duty of locating sidewalks is void. Municipal Sec. Corp. v. Gates, 130 Mo. App. 552, 109 SW 85. Buffalo city charter, Laws 1895, p. 1723, c. 805, requires paving to be ordered by the council, and that body cannot delegate the power to the commissioner of public works. Morey v. Buffalo, 59 Misc. 603, 111 NYS 463.

18. Under St. Louis charter (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 4857, 4867, 4832) relative to contracts for improvements, held, in contracting for repair, etc., of sidewalks, the board properly authorized the street commissioner to determine what part of the improvement should be considered as extra and agree to the price therefor. Heman v. St. Louis, 213 Mo. 538, 112 SW 259.

ute,[19] and must exercise powers conferred in such manner as to protect property rights of individual citizens.[20] Only such questions as go to the jurisdiction to make improvements can be raised in a suit to enjoin the improvements.[21]

§ 3. Funds for improvements and provision for cost.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1308—The power of a municipality to provide for the cost of public improvements and the method to be pursued in making a particular improvement, are controlled by fundamental law and legislation pursuant thereto.[23] Thus, according to the statute applicable, the cost may be borne by the municipality[24] or defrayed by the issue of bonds[25] or special assessment against property benefited,[26] but the liability of owners

19. Must pursue with strictness all conditions precedent. City of Jackson v. Williams [Miss.] 46 S 551. For power of a municipality relative to compelling owners to construct sidewalks should be strictly construed in favor of the individual rights of the citizen, but the general welfare and convenience of the public should also be considered. O'Haver v. Montgomery [Tenn.] 111 SW 449. Rev. St. § 3736, providing that no land shall be purchased on account of the United States except under law authorizing purchase, should not be construed to apply to executed contracts so as to defeat title of the United States to land it has paid for and an act authorizing a public improvement and appropriating money therefor is sufficient authority for the purchase of the land necessary for the improvement. Burns v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 631.

20. Where improvement of street without a culvert would throw surface water on adjacent land, and the municipality, though favorable to construction of culvert, gave no assurance of their construction, it was proper to enjoin such construction as a condition to completion of the improvement. Dilly v. Henderson [Iowa] 118 NW 750. On refusing to enjoin a contractor from paving part of a right of way of a railroad company long used as part of a public street, held, the order should provide that the improvement should not give to the city or the public any title or interest to the land that will obstruct the company in the use of its right of way, or impair its title. Atchison, etc., Co. v. O'Leary [Kan.] 100 P 628.

21. All questions triable on appeal or by a particular tribunal must be so tried, and not by injunction. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Irregularities will not invalidate proceedings for street improvements though they relate to acquiring of jurisdiction. Id.

22. Search Note: See Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 758-761, 818, 1899, 1901, 2039; Dec. Dig. §§ 288, 306, 911, 962.

23. Laws 1907, p. 124, c. 91, providing for expense of widening L. street in the borough of Brooklyn, does not embrace more than one subject expressed in its title. In re Lochitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32. Conetruction of sanitary trunk sewer under Laws 1905, p. 1621, c. 646, not violative of Const. art. 8, § 10, prohibiting indebtedness except for county purpose, where present facilities inadequate, and majority of county's inhabitants benefited. Horton v. Andrus, 191 N. Y. 231, 83 NE 1120. Debt for construction of sanitary sewer under Lawe 1905, p. 1621, c. 646, no less county's obligation because of ultimate reimbursement by assessments. Id.

24. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, § 115, providing that commissioners of drainage district shall make all necessary bridges and culverts over highways, etc., the expense thereof must be borne by the drainage district. People v. Gungenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669. Laws 1907, p. 124, c. 91, declaring that expense of widening L. street in borough of Brooklyn shall be borne by city of New York, notwithstanding assessments levied, is not ineffective because of erroneous statement of date of resolution of estimate authorizing improvement. In re Lochitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32. Not void as impairing vested rights of the city to assessment. Id. Under, St. 1898, §§ 905, 911, 912, held a village board could authorize street commissioner to hire men and teams to repair street and defray expense thereof from general fund. State v. Wallshlaeger, 137 Wis. 136, 118 NW 643.

25. To authorize municipal bonds for construction of bridge, record should show substantial compliance with each step required by statute before issuance. Gilbert v. Canyon County, 14 Idaho, 429, 94 P 1027. Sufficient finding of board as to necessity of constructing bridge. Id. Bonds to cover costs of superintending contruction of bridge authorized, since such work part of construction as well as furnishing material. Id. "All expenses incurred" in Acts 1905, p. 557, authorizing board of commissioners to issue bonds for construction of a highway to amount of contract price, does not include attorney's fee for drawing petition. Overmeyer v. Cass County Com'rs [Ind. App.] 86 NE 77. City ordinance providing that continual annual tax to pay interest and provide sinking fund to pay bonds for public utilities shall be levied on all taxable property within the city substantially comply with Const. art. 10, § 27. State v. Millar [Okl.] 96 P 747. Sewers are public utilities. Id. Const. art. 10, § 27, clearly contemplates that bonds shall run 25 years. Id. Authority to village trusteee to construct a sewer system at a cost of $100,000 and to raise $60,000 by issue of bonds impliedly authorizes them to raise the balance by taxation. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. See, also, Municipal Bonds, 12 C. L. 897.

26. Under Ann. St. 1906, pp. 2962, 2967, relative to improvements by cities of the third class and payment of the cost thereof, where a resolution declared an intention to pave between the curbs, and the paving was extended for use as a walk at street for improvement of an adjacent street is strictly statutory.[27] Some of the usual statutory limitations as to funds for improvements are that they must be provided before the indebtedness is incurred.[28] Submission to popular vote,[29] and limitation as to amount of indebtedness [30] or value of the property benefited; [31] but such limi-intersections, it should be paid for by tax bills. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1125. Until property once bears the cost of paving done on order of the city council, there has not been an original construction of a payment within a statute authorizing such cost to be taxed against abutting property. Guilfoyle's Ex'r v. Maysville [Ky.] 112 SW 666.

27. Is to be determined by the law in force when the work was done, and if no liability then existed the legislature cannot create one. City of Lexington v. Walby, 33 Ky. L. R. 116, 109 SW 299. Where city, pursuant to authority, adopted an ordinance for paving of streets with brick, except that designated portion was to be paved with crushed rock, and after the contract was let, the contractor was authorized to pave the entire street with brick, and after completion of the work an ordinance was adopted providing for the improvement as completed, held, the contract was not complied with, and abutting owners were not liable. Id.

28. Certificate of clerk of municipal corporations given under Rev. St. 1898, § 2702, as to amount of fund on hand to be used in paying the contract, is a limitation on the amount to be paid, beyond which the municipality is not liable. Village of Carthage v. Diekmeier [Ohio] 87 NE 178. Certificate of clerk of municipal corporation at time of execution of a contract for an improvement held not to comply with Rev. St. 1898, § 2702, in not stating that a specified sum required from improvement was in treasury. Id. Under Detroit city charter providing that no contract for public work shall be let until approved by council, and no warrant shall be drawn on treasury until money is in the treasury to pay for work, held mandamus would not lie to compel issuance of a warrant where the charter provisions had not been complied with. Garner v. Doremus [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 735, 117 NW 743. St. Louis charter (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4869), providing that every ordinance for public work shall contain a specific appropriation, does not apply to emergency work which need not be ordered by ordinance. Heman v. St. Louis, 213 Mo. 538, 112 SW 259. Under Const. art. 11, § 5, where no provision is made to pay the contract price of work, the contract is unenforceable, and a tax levied prior to execution of such contract, but not in contemplation of the improvement, and transferred to the general fund, cannot be looked to. Ault v. Hill County [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 425. Failure of auditor or clerk to first certify that money necessary to meet obligations assumed under contract is in treasury to credit of fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and is in process of collection and has not been appropriated for any other purpose, renders the contract void under Rev. St. § 2702 (1536-205). McAlexander v. Haviland Dist., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 590. Contract for building of school house at cost in excess of amount raised for that purpose from issue of bonds is not void for want of authority on part of board of education to make such contract after having underestimated amount of money needed. Id. Ordinance appropriating private property for building of dike is an ordinance for the expenditure of money, and is void if no certificate has been previously filed and recorded by proper officer as required by Rev. St. § 1536-205 (known as Burne' Law); and injunction will be granted restraining municipality from proceeding in probate court to assess compensation to landowner for land appropriated. Hurst v. Belle Valley, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 235.

29. Election submitting to voters the question of incurring indebtedness for the purpose of constructing public utilities is not void because in preparing the ballots the words "Yes" and "No" were placed under the squares instead of to the left of them as required by statute. State v. Millar [Okl.] 96 P 747. Statement on ballots held sufficiently comprehensive to include re-equipping and making extensions of water system. Id. Under Code, § 1131, women are entitled to vote on the question of issuing bonds increasing tax levy, etc., for construction of a city hall, under Acts 32d General Assembly, Laws 1907, p. 27, c. 34, §§ 1, 2, 4. Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 138 Iowa, 730, 117 NW 309. Evidence that city attorney had told attorney for political equality club that in his opinion women were not entitled to vote and no provision would be made for them was admissible to show denial of the privilege. Id. Where question of issuing bonds for construction of sewers in different parts of the city was submitted to vote as a single proposition, and there was no other alternative than to vote for or against both, the submission was void. State v. Wilder [Mo.] 116 SW 1087.

30. Debt created by bonds as authorized by statute, authorizing the charge of improvements against abutting property, is not a municipal indebtedness within the constitutional limitation. Guilfoyle's Ex'r v. Maysville [Ky.] 112 SW 666. Such improvements as paving, sewer construction and abolishing of grade crossings within municipality are improvements within provisions of Rev. St. § 2835, limiting authority of council to issue bonds; and where cost will raise net indebtedness of city beyond 4 per cent limit, council has no authority to issue bonds therefor without approval of electorate. City of Cleveland v. Cleveland, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 249.

31. Laws 1903, p. 121, c. 82, limiting value of improvements to 50 per cent of the value of the property in certain cases, held to place no limit on value of improvements when petitioned for by owners and use of word "percentage" held not to limit assessments to fractional part of the valuation. James v. Seattle, 49 Wash. 347, 95 P 273. In proceeding to restrain making tation may be exceeded if owners desire to pay the extra cost.[32] Some statutes provide that before money can be borrowed to defray the expense an estimate of the cost should be made.[33]

§ 4. Proceedings to authorize or validate making. A. In general.[34]—See 10 C. L. 1309

(§ 4) B. By whom and how initiated.[35]—See 10 C. L. 1309—In some states, certain improvements must be initiated by submission to popular vote.[36] Initiatory steps by municipal legislative bodies must be taken in the manner prescribed by statute or charter,[37] but where a council acts under authority conferred upon it, it is no objection that in conducting proceedings it failed to conform to by-laws prescribed by itself to carry into effect the powers conferred.[38] The ordinance providing for the improvement must be passed in the manner required by law,[39] and it of improvements under Laws 1903, p. 121, c. 82, authorizing cost of improvements to be based on last valuation of abutting property, a contention that there had been no valuation held erroneous where the property had been taxed for general taxation. Id. Where ordinance authorizing improvements pursuant to petition was passed shortly after petition was filed, and was based on a valuation placed on the property between filing of petition and passing of the ordinance, the last valuation was held to control in fixing the assessment. Id. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8710, prohibiting contracts for street improvements in cities of first, second or third classes the total cost of which exceeds 50 per cent of the value of the property, applies only to cities named, and not to towns which are governed by Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, Acts 1905, p. 288. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

32. Under Milwaukee Charter, c. 7, §§ 2, 6, and Laws 1898, § 959-35, amending the charter, property owners may, after limit of expense prescribed has been reached, secure a more expensive pavement than that the city proposes by paying extra cost. Lowenbach v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 119 NW 888.

33. Under Comp. Laws, § 2893, providing that before money shall be borrowed for construction of waterworks the council shall cause to be made an estimate of expense, held, where an estimate was made by the city engineer, but no special action was taken thereon by the council, subsequent proceedings, as well as election proceedings, which followed, were void. Richardi v. Bellaire, 153 Mich. 560, 15 Det. Leg. N. 534, 116 NW 1066. Such statute does not authorize borrowing of money to maintain water works. Id.

36. Under Henderson Town Charter, §§ 6, 9 (Laws 1901, p. 220, c. 97), a general scheme for paving sidewalks and streets of a town must be submitted to voters. Commissioners of Hendersonville v. Webb & Co., 148 N. C. 120, 61 SE 670.

37. Where, under a town charter, street improvements can only be made by ordinance, and ordinance providing for grading does not authorize paving. Where paving is done, the benefit thereof cannot be assessed against abutting property. Burnett v. Boonton, 74 N. J. Law, 467, 70 A. 67. Under Buffalo City Charter, § 288, providing that owner can be required to lay sidewalk only on direction by resolution of city council, held, construction of new concrete walk in place of a plank one was not the repair of an old walk and the commissioner of public works had no authority to make the improvement except under direction by resolution of the council. Konowalski v. Buffalo, 115 NYS 467. A repair of sidewalk as distinguished from reconstruction involves neither change of materials, regrade or change of surface lines. Id. The words "laying or relaying" of a sidewalk held to have the same meaning as "grading or regrading" in § 8, in each case referring to original work on the sidewalk or street. Id. Where paving is unauthorized by ordinance under which grading is done, the silence of the landowner whose property is benefited does not estop him to deny liability for such improvement. Burnett v. Boonton, 74 N. J. Law, 467, 70 A. 67.

38. As to sufficiency of petition of freeholders for improvement. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991. Ordinance as to special improvements, if in compliance with statute, is valid, though not in compliance with prior ordinance fixing general rule on subject. City of Jackson v. Williams [Miss.] 46 S 551.

39. Under Starr. & C. Ann. St. Supp. 1902, p. 160, providing that on presentation to council of an ordinance for an improvement exceeding $100,000 the ordinance shall be referred to a committee and published in the proceedings of the council, where a sewer ordinance carrying an expenditure of more than $700,000 was passed June 24, 1907, but was not published in the proceedings of that day, and when published was not signed by any city official, held, proceedings were void because the statute was not complied with. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674. Under such statute, the council could not pass the ordinance until the statute had been complied with though no statute other than the improvement ordinance required publication of council proceedings. Id. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, requiring an ordinance for an improvement must conform to charter provisions.[40] In some states, where owners petition for an improvement, no legislative action of the council is required.[41] An ordinance for paving may establish the grade or change the width of the street.[42] An ordinance is not void because of surplusage contained therein,[43] and partial invalidity may not render it wholly void.[44] An ordinance providing for an improvement is not vitiated, by a subsequent ordinance changing the plan of the improvement.[45]

In some cities, abutting owners may be required to construct sidewalks.[46] Where an ordinance is passed requiring owners to lay walks, failure to comply within the period prescribed amounts to a refusal[47] and authorizes the city to proceed with the improvement[48] and collect the cost thereof from abutting owners.[49] Elsewhere, the failure to comply with such mandate subjects the owner to penalty.[50] involving a certain amount to be published, etc., where the proceedings were not published the ordinance was void. Village of Bellwood v. Latrobe Steel & Coupler Co., 238 Ill. 52, 87 NE 66. Village ordinance for an improvement at estimated cost of less than $100,000, without imposing any penalty or making any appropriation, in force from and after its passage, held not within Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, § 517, or § 64, requiring publication, but within the provision declaring all other ordinances shall take effect from their passage, and a publication more than two months after its passage is sufficient. Village of Downers Grove v. Findlay, 237 Ill. 368, 86 NE 732. An ordinance directing an improvement is valid though passed at only one meeting of the council, where all members voted for it. Huesman v. Dersch, 33 Ky. L. R. 77, 109 SW 319. Under Rev. Codes 1905, § 2658, providing that the mayor shall have power to sign or veto any ordinance passed by the council, held, a resolution providing that certain streets should be repaved is of legislative character and subject to veto. State v. Duis [N. D.] 116 NW 751. See, also, Municipal Corporations, 12 C. L. 905, as to general rules.

40. Under Buffalo city charter, Laws 1895, p. 1723, c. 805, providing for ordering of laying of sidewalks by resolution of common council, held, an ordinance in conflict with the charter was void. Morey v. Buffalo, 59 Misc. 603, 111 NYS 463.

41. Under Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 444, where a majority of property owners on any street petition for paving, no resolution or notice of intention to pave is necessary, and it is not necessary that such improvement be directed or made under ordinance. Paulsen v. El Reno [Okl.] 98 P 958. Where the council acquired jurisdiction by petition, any irregularity subsequently occurring will not be ground for enjoining the improvement where there is no fraud and the complaining party has sustained no special injury and stood by and never protested until the work was partially completed. Id.

42. Ordinance providing for paving is not void because it establishes for the first time, or changes the grade of a street or width of a roadway. City of Chicago v. Hulbert, 234 Ill. 321, 84 NE 922.

43. Ordinance for construction of sewers in one section described the sewer drainage district, and in another section declared that cost of improvement should be paid by special assessment as described in § 2. Held not fatally defective because it contained no § 2, as such reference might be stricken and a sufficient description remain. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674.

44. Invalidity of ordinance requiring owners to constrhct sidewalks, curbing and guttering, as to guttering, does not invalidate it as to the other improvements. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181. Where an ordinance created two sidewalk districts, in proceedings to charge an owner in district No. 2 for a walk built by the city, on his failure to do so any defect in the ordinance relative to district No. 1 did not affect his liability. Gregg v. Stuttgart [Ark.] 115 SW 394.

45. Where an ordinance authorized condemnation of land on each side of a street for widening it, and subsequently the council passed an ordinance abandoning the plan of widening on one side, held, the change was not material, as the improvment as a whole would not be affected. In re Third, Fourth & Fifth Ave., 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075.

46. Ordinance requiring owners to construct sidewalks, curbing and gutters held not void because of failure to provide for proper filling, etc., as such failure did not require them to do work which they could not lawfully be required to do. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181.

47. City of Bluefield v. McClaugherty [W. Va.] 63 SE 363.

48. That 20 days was given an owner to lay walks, when the statute requires but 10, will not preclude recovery by the city. City of Bluefield v. McClaugherty [W. Va.] 63 SE 363.

49. A formal assessment of such cost is not essential to recovery by the city, such assessment being ministerial and having no judicial force under the statutes or charter. City of Bluefield v. McClaugherty [W. Va.] 63 SE 363.

50. Under Kirby's Dig. §§ 5462, 5466, property owners may be penalized for each day's delay in failing to comply with an ordinance requiring them to make street improvements. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181. Under acts 1887, p. 394, an owner who refuses to construct sidewalks may be penalized by fine and imprisonment. O'Haver v. Montgomery [Tenn.] 111 SW 449.

An ordinance providing for an improvement must be consistent with the resolution authorizing it, and, since it forms the basis for the contract, must be more particular than the resolution, and must specify the details of the work and materials to be used.[51] The ordinance must properly describe the character and location of the proposed improvement[52] and materials to be used,[53] and describe the improvements therein proposed[54] usually by plans and specifications therein contained[55] or referred to,[56] but impracticable exactness in specifications is not required.[57] In some states it must prescribe the period within which the work must be completed,[58] but this requirement is not universal.[59]

51. City of Chicago v. Gage, 237 Ill. 328, 86 NE 633.

52. The ordinance providing for the improvement must specify its locality as well as describe and specify its nature. People v. Willison, 237 Ill. 584, 86 NE 1094. A resolution of intention to make improvements need only be sufficiently specific to inform the public of the general nature of the improvement, and need not give a detailed description thereof. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1125. An ordinance which requires property owners to lay "granolithic" walk on a street on another portion of which such walk is already laid, and requiring the walk to be of the same width as that already laid, is sufficient to justify recovery of the cost thereof on default of the owner to lay the walk, though it does not specify material used. City of Bluefield v. McClaugherty [W. Va.] 63 SE 363. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, requiring sidewalk ordinance to define the location with reasonable certainty, discribe its width, etc., no more certainty is required as to location than is required as to other particulars. People v. Willison, 237 Ill. 584, 86 NE 1094. On fixing of an improvement, a surveyor must look not only to the ordinance but also to maps and plats made part of the record, and may also look to monuments, but cannot use them to contradict the ordinance. Id. On a claim that an ordinance providing for a sidewalk was void for uncertainty as to location of the walk, owners held entitled to show width of traveled way surrounding the square, that it was a park of cerain dimensions, etc. Id. In determining the meaning of an ordinance as to the location of an improvement, the entire ordinance is to be considered. Id. Ordinance providing for sidewalk held not void for uncertainty as to location of sidewalk. Id. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, relative to street improvements, held, the kind of improvement to be made and material to be used in the wearing surface is determined by the final resolution. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

53. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, providing that board of trustees of incorporated towns shall order improvements by resolution, declaring the necessity, etc., held, a resolution authorizing the use of two or more kinds of paving material was not void. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, providing that on adoption of final resolution for an improvement the board of trustees shall file with the town clerk or engineer detailed plans and specifications, is to enable prospective bidders to ascertain the kind and amount of work, and only requires the filing of such plans within a reasonable time. Id. A provision in an ordinance that ingredient of concrete to be used in paving should be "torpedo sand or lime stone screenings, or other material equal thereto for concrete purposes," does not render it uncertain. Whether the ordinance has been substantially complied with is to be determined by the court in which the assessment is confirmed. City of Chicago v. Gage, 237 Ill. 328, 86 NE 633. It is the duty of the mayor and council to designate under one resolution and under one contract one particular kind of material to be used for paving. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559.

54. "Pave," in resolution to pave streets, includes construction of gutters, catch basins and sewer connections. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1125. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5542 relative to the power of municipalities to compel owners to build sidewalks or to pay the cost thereof, ordinance, notices and resolutions construed, and held to furnish sufficient information to an owner to enable him to construct a proper cement walk, and he was liable for the cost of one constructed by the city on his failure to comply. Gregg v. Stuttgart [Ark.] 115 SW 394.

55. Laws 1897, p. 440, providing that board of sewer commissioners shall prepare a map and plan of permanent sewer system, with specifications, etc., does not require that map or plan embrace every lateral sewer that may become necessary with growth of the village. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. Specification in sewer ordinance requiring slants every 25 feet is not unreasonable. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674.

56. An ordinance for an improvement may adopt specifications as a part of itself which are at the time of its adoption on file in some place designated therein. City of Independence v. Nagle [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1129. Order requiring owners to lay plank walks in accordance with plans and specifications to be furnished by the city engineer construed, as referring to specifications already made and on file, and is sufficient. City of Bluefield v. McClaugherty [W. Va.] 63 SE 363. Under Ann. Code 1892, §§ 3011, 3012, an ordinance for an improvement must definitely describe it, or to refer to plans on file which will give the information. City of Jackson v. Williams [Miss.] 46 S 551. Ordinance for sidewalks held bad for insufficient description of proposed work. Id.

Where a petition by property owners is required,[60] it must be signed by the required number of owners [61] or persons authorized to sign.[62] Where a petition is signed by the requisite number of owners, the fact that it contains an illegal condition does not render it void.[63] That a city charter confers power on assessors to determine whether a property owner's petition is a majority one or not does not preclude the council from prescribing the form of petition,[64] and a charter provision whereby the finding of a city council that a proper petition for the public work has been filed is rendered conclusive is not a denial of due process of law, though such finding is made without notice.[65] In some states the determination of the sufficiency of such petition is for certain boards,[66] which have no authority to determine questions of law as to the form of the petition.[67]

(§ 4) C. Notice and hearing.[68]—See 10 C. L. 1311—In the absence of statutory mandate, notice of a proposed improvement to owners of property affected is not es-ing various kinds and dimensions of sewers, materials to be used, statement of cost and character of building and machinery held sufficiently specific, a detailed statement of items of expense being unnecessary. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674.

58. Under St. Joseph city charter (Ann. St. 1906, §§ 5747-9), providing that ordinance for improvement shall fix the time within which it shall be completed, an ordinance providing that delays caused by certain facts shall not be counted held void, "fix" meaning immovable or definite. Rockliff v. Peters [Mo. App.] 115 SW 503.

59. Failure of an ordinance to fix the time for completing an improvement does not invalidate an assessment therefor. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449.

60. Under St. 1898, § 925-175, authorizing a city to pave on a two-thirds vote of council, and § 925-176, providing for paving on petition of majority of frontage owners, the power to pave is derived from § 925-175, and the fact that petition is not signed by majority of frontage owners is but an irregularity. Lawton v. Racine [Wis.] 119 NW 331. Where two-thirds of board of trustees of town voted to make an improvement, it is immaterial that petition was not signed by requisite number of freeholders. Daly v. Higman [Ind. App.] 87 NE 669. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 3604, amd. by acts Feb. 7, 1899, and March 14, 1899 (Laws 1899, pp. 136, 443), and since repeal of Rev. St. 1887, § 1762, petition is unnecessary to confer jurisdiction on county commissioners to construct bridge. Gilbert v. Canyon County, 14 Idaho, 429, 94 P 1027.

61. Under Buffalo city charter authorizing paving only on petition of a majority of owners of two-fifths of the frontage, several persons owning a parcel are improperly counted as one. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 127 App. Div. 851, 111 NYS 924.

62. An executor is not an "owner," and his signature as executor is not authorized. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991. There is no presumption that one of two co-owners has authority to sign for the other. Id. There is no presumption that an officer of a corporation has authority to sign a petition for an improvement. It must appear that he was authorized by directors. Id. In the absence of statutory inhibition, property owners may sign a petition for an improvement by attorney. Want of authority of the attorney must be proved. Id. Where a city charter provided that petition for public improvements should be applied for by resident owners, but did not require that such owners appear in person, their authorized agents could appear and fill in date of signing after their signatures. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 193 N. Y. 248, 86 NE 466.

63. Under Laws 1903, p. 121, c. 82, authorizing improvements to amounts stated in petition, where a petition was signed by three-fourths of the owners, the fact that it contained some illegal conditions held not jurisdictional, and did not render action under the petition void. James v. Seattle, 49 Wash. 347, 95 P 273.

64. May reject the petition if not in proper form even after assessors have certified it. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991.

65. Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 52 Law. Ed. 1103.

66. Under Buffalo city charter (Laws 1891, pp. 221, 222, amended by Laws 1900, c. 707), providing that finding of board of assessors as to certain facts relative to petition for paving streets shall be conclusive, held, their finding that petition contained names of a majority of resident owners, etc., was not reviewable on certiorari. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 193 N. Y. 248, 86 NE 466. On issue as to whether a petition for paving was signed by requisite number of owners, the objection being that it was signed by agents not authorized, evidence held insufficient to overcome the prima facia case arising from the fact that the council found the petition sufficient. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

67. Under Buffalo city charter (Laws 1891, pp. 221, 222, amended by Laws 1900, c. 707) requiring petition for improving streets to be submitted to a board of assessors, who are to certify to certain facts, such board has no jurisdiction to determine questions of law as to form of petition and manner of signing. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 195 N. Y. 248, 86 NE 466.

68. See, also, post, § 9.

sential,[69] but where required it is imperative that it be given,[70] unless waived,[71] and that owners have an opportunity to be heard.[72] The sufficiency of the notice depends on the requirements of the law,[73] and the facts.[74]

(§ 4) D. Protests and remonstrances.[75]—See 10 C. L. 1312—Remonstrances must be made by persons entitled to protest,[76] at the proper time.[77]

(§ 4) E. Estimates of cost.[78]—See 10 C. L. 1312—An estimate of costs need not contain a complete inventory of every article that is to enter into the construction.[79]

69. Legislature has power without violating due process of law clause, to determine that an improvement shall be made, amount to be raised, territory benefited, and persons to be assessed, or it can commit the matter to commissioners. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Rochester, 129 App. Div. 805, 114 NYS 779. Legislature has power to authorize a city council to make improvements in disregard of protests of property owners, and it may declare that determination of assessors that petition is signed by majority of owners is conclusive. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, requiring that declaratory resolution be confirmed, modified or rescinded, after hearing of objections, by final resolution, does not require the giving of notice of such final resolution. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, § 513, dispensing with public hearing in proceedings for construction of a sidewalk, hearing held not necessary in proceeding to construct cinder walk with wooden curb and berm as it was nothing but a walk, though it included a curb and berm. City of Chicago v. Bassett, 238 Ill. 412, 87 NE 384. A statute delegating power to make public improvements and assess property is not void because of failure to require notice to owners. Such requirement will be read into the statute. Road Imp. Dist. No. 1 v. Glover [Ark.] 110 SW 1031. Under Act March 6, 1905, requiring petitioners in drainage proceedings to give notice to resident owners not petitioners, a petitioner who gave notice as required by statute, but was afterwards dismissed from the proceeding, held not entitled to additional notice, he having instituted the proceedings. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255.

70. Where proceedings of municipal authorities plainly indicate that the improvement is intended to be made at public expense, and no special assessment contemplated, the fact that the landowner stood by in silence is no waiver of his right to notice and hearing. Under the circumstances the municipality would be estopped from charging laches. Walsh v. Newark [N. J. Law] 71 A 39. If the determination to make improvements be committed by the legislature to commissioners, they must give notice to persons interested and hearing, but if the legislature makes the determination, no notice or hearing is necessary. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Rochester, 129 App. Div. 805, 114 NYS 779. Under Ann. Code 1892, §§ 3011, 3012, cost of sidewalks cannot be taxed against abutting owners unless they are given five days' notice. City of Jackson v. Williams [Miss.] 46 S. 551.

71. A property owner who appears before the city council and objects to a proposed improvement waives defects or irregularities in the notice of intent to make the improvement. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

72. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, § 590, providing for a hearing after filing by board of local improvements of certificate of the cost of an improvement, to determine whether the improvement conforms to the ordinance, owners of property assessed may show that it does not, and on such finding by the court it is the duty of the board to procure completion so as to so conform. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599.

73. Notice by publication is sufficient. Guilfoyle's Ex'x v. Maysville [Ky.] 112 SW 666.

74. One who appears before a city council in response to a notice to construct a sewer may not complain of defect in the notice. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. Where some notice was given of proceedings for town improvement which board of trustees found to be sufficient, its sufficiency was not subject to collateral attack in suit to foreclose an assessment lien. Daly v. Higman [Ind. App.] 87 NE 669. When resolution to construct sidewalk in municipal corporation is duly passed, and notice thereof is duly served upon owner of an abutting lot, who fails to comply with such notice, and afterwards sells and conveys lot, corporation may nevertheless proceed, within reasonable time, to make such improvement and assess expense thereof upon such lot in name of the subsequent purchaser, who must be held to have constructive notice at least. Kahn v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 440.

In re Glenwood Ave, 115 NYS 654.

77. Discretion of county commissioners in determining that an improvement is demanded by public health, welfare or convenience, will not be interfered with where those complaining failed to make any objections to proceedings before county commissioners. Grove v. Delaware County Com'rs, 5 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 521.

79. Village of Donovan v. Donovan, 236 Ill. 636, 86 NE 575. Estimate of cost of water system including cost of labor and material necessary, so itemized that an experienced contractor could determine cost of omitted articles, is sufficient. Id.

It is sufficient if it contain the substantial component elements.[80] Such estimate must conform to statutory requirements.[81]

(§ 4) F. Approval and acceptance of work.[82]—See 8 C. L. 518—Acceptance of the work by city officials is conclusive on the property owners.[83]

(§ 4) G. Curative legislation and ratification.[84]—See 10 C. L. 1818—A city may validate a contract for the construction of an improvement by ratification after acceptance of the work.[85] In Illinois the county court has no power to confirm a void ordinance for an improvement.[86]

§ 5. Proposals, contracts and bonds.[87]—See 10 C. L. 1813—A contract for a public improvement must be entered into by the duly authorized officials of the municipality,[88] and where a city asserts that officials were without authority, it has the burden to prove it.[89] Persons dealing with public corporations are charged with notice that officials thereof have only the authority conferred upon them by law.[90] In the absence of a charter provision, a city may contract for extra work without first making a specific appropriation.[91] A municipal board, in making a contract for the erection of a municipal building, acts as agent of the municipality, and its contract is the contract of the municipality.[92]

80. An estimate for "constructing one new catch basin at $50," and statement that it included labor and materials, and also contained an item for "adjusting sewers, catch basins and manholes, $485," held a sufficient compliance with an ordinance requiring that the basin be built of brick on a two inch plank, etc., City of Chicago v. Gage, 237 Ill. 328, 86 NE 633.

81. Under Starr & C. Ann. St. Supp. 1902, p. 160, requiring estimate of cost of public improvement to be signed by the engineer of the board of local improvements, the estimate signed by the engineer is not defective because not signed by the president of the board. Frankfort Councilmen, 33 Ky. L. R. 918, 111 SW 706. Where improvements were made before the council had acted on the contract therefor, the right of the council to ratify the contract was not affected by the fact that the city had become owner of the claim against the property. 88. A contract for construction of a sewer under Laws 1903, p. 29, § 7, should be made with the chairman of the sewerage committee where the expense is to be raised by special assessment. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101. Under Laws 1897, p. 451, c. 414, § 313, a village treasurer is not a member of the board of trustees, and is not authorized to make contracts on behalf of the village. In re Village of Kenmore, 59 Misc. 388, 110 NYS 1008. Under Laws 1907, p. 338, c. 428, authorizing the city of New York and a village to enter an agreement with the village to provide a sewer system, the village trustees must obtain authority to enter into the contract from the voters by submission to popular vote. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. A town is not liable for work on a highway which selectmen had no authority to contract for. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939.

89. Burden to show that sealed instruments are not the usual form of contracts by the city. Peterson v. New York, 194 N. Y. 437, 87 NE 772. Under Laws 1883, p. 666, c. 490, acqueduct commissioners have power to make a contract under seal for an improvement unless it is shown that such contract is disadvantageous to the city. Id.

90. If board of trustees of town had no authority to delegate to town engineer authority to determine fulfillment of contract, persons interested were bound to take notice. Martindale v. rule, contracts for public improvements must be awarded on competitive bids.[93] The fact that no harm was done by letting a contract without competitive bidding is no answer to taxpayers,[94] but a city may be estopped to plead ultra vires where it obtains the benefit of the work.[95] While competitive bidding is not always essential,[96] yet, where it is required, it must be under circumstances which permit of free competition[97] without discrimination in favor of a particular material.[98] Alternative bids may be asked where a standard as to articles is set up in the specifications.[99] Where a thing to be furnished under specifications for a municipal con-

93. Where an ordinance adopts specifications which refer for additional specifications to a formula to accompany the bid, held, the latter specifications were not adopted, and the work and materials provided for and the contract were not the result of competition. City of Independence v. Nagle [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1129. Under Acts 1903, p. 318, Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 5591, 5594a, relative to construction of courthouses and furnishing them, contracts for furniture for a new courthouse must be let on competitive bids based on plans and specifications. Board of Com'rs of Huntington County v. Pashong, 41 Ind. App. 69, 83 NE 383. Where land was taken and improved so as to be usable as a street, a resolution providing that it be built two feet higher held to provide for improvements within Ionia City Charter, § 108, requiring that where improvements exceed $100 in expense, bids shall be called for, on which contract shall be let. Peterson v. Ionia, 152 Mich. 678, 15 Det. Leg. N. 389, 116 NW 562. Contract by a city for paving entered into without proper opportunity for competitive bidding as required by P. L. 1899, p. 370, is void. Mullane v. Newark [N. J. Law] 68 A 412. Pub. Acts 1905, p. 432, provides for improvement of highways, and requires selectmen of a town to advertise for bids according to plans prepared, etc. Held that selectmen cannot waive any of the provisions of the act nor expend any of the money except in conformity to the improvements. Kelley v. Torrington [Conn.] 71 A 939. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, par. 580, § 74, that improvements in excess of $500 be let to the lowest bidder, is mandatory. City not justified in completing abandoned work of contractor on ground of emergency. City of Centralia v. Norton & Co., 140 Ill. App. 46. A contract for the building of school house awarded to contractor who has been permitted to change his bid by omitting various items and thus reducing aggregate cost to amount realized from sale of bonds is contract made without notice or competition, and is illegal and void under Rev. St. § 3988. McAlexander v. Haviland School Dist., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 590. Under Pub. School Act, §§ 52, 53 (P. L. 1903, pp. 5-21), imposing requirements as to letting contracts for schools, repairs, etc., board of education could not modify specifications and award contract to former bidder, though bid lower after changes. Scola v. Montclair Board of Education [N. J. Law] 71 A 299.

94. No answer to the claim of taxpayers that the tax bills are void because thereof. City of Independence v. Nagle [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1129.

95. Where additional work was illegally included in a contract without advertising for bids as required by statute, but the work was performed and the city obtained the benefits, it was held estopped to plead ultra vires. Peterson v. Ionia, 152 Mich. 678, 15 Det. Leg. N. 389, 116 NW 562.

96. St. 1898, § 921, requiring contracts exceeding $50 to be let to the lowest bidder, does not prevent repair of highways by hiring men and teams without bids, though the total expense exceeds $50. State v. Wallschlaeger, 137 Wis. 136, 118 NW 643. Under St. Louis charter (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4857), relative to contracts for public improvements, held, little odds and ends of jobs and repairing need not be ordered by ordinance and the contract let under competitive bidding. Heman v. St. Louis, 213 Mo. 538, 112 SW 259.

97. Requirement that paving should be done with "Iola cement or better" excludes competition with other brands equally good. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 117 SW 116. Requirement that cement to be used should be "Iola Portland cement or better" did not restrict competition. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1125. By merely adding another make of vitrified brick to a specification for material for paving, the field of competition was merely extended, and competitive bidding was not interfered with. Id.

98. Where estimates for various styles of pipe submitted to competition of bidders were made in accordance with engineering standards, there was no discrimination on the ground that an excessively high estimate was placed on efficiency of certain style of pipe. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797. Unpatented lock bar joint pipe made only by patented machinery is not a patented article within Laws 1901, p. 642, c. 466, providing that no patented article shall be advertised for or purchased except under circumstances that there can be fair opportunity for competition, the conditions of which shall be prescribed by the board of estimate and approval. Id. In selecting material to be used, a material manufactured by a single firm cannot be selected and competition thus eliminated. To justify selection of any article not patented for paving, it must appear that there are no other materials that can be brought into competition. Taylor v. Schroeder, 130 Mo. App. 483, 110 SW 26. Paving ordinance requiring use of certain brick held void. Id.

99. A director of public works when publishing specifications is not required to decide finally on every item. He may ask for alternative bids on two articles to be furnished, having set up a standard as to them in his specifications and prescribed a method tract may be manufactured by anyone in conformity to requirements for purchase in the open market at a standard price there is no reason for asking alternative bids,[1] but if the thing is protected by patent and any one of a number of articles complies with the established standard, the best interests of the public require that bids be asked for any or all.[2] Where each bidder is given an opportunity for fair competition, the bidders are on equal terms.[3] Statutory requirements as to publication for bids must be complied with.[4] Failure to comply renders the contract void.[5] A rule requiring contracts to be let to the lowest and best bidder does not require them to be awarded to the lowest bidder,[6] and, in the absence of fraud, the discretion of the board which has power to award, in awarding the contract, will not be interfered with.[7] A bidder who makes a mistake in his estimate may be entitled to be relieved from his bid.[8] But where the successful bidder refuses to enter into a contract, the council, by declaring another the lowest bidder, does not rescind its prior finding,[9] and it may forfeit the deposit.[10]

Form of contract.[See 10 C. L. 1317]—The acceptance of a definite bid pursuant to an advertisement constitutes the contract,[11] and the contract must correspond with conditions previously laid down as a basis for competitive bidding.[12] Where a contract is divisible, it is not wholly void because of one illegal provision.[13] In Texas the commissioner's court may contract for the construction of bridges according to plans differing from those originally adopted.[14] A contract for a pub-of bidding which gives equal opportunity to each bidder. Parker v. Philadelphia, 220 Pa. 208, 69 A 670.

4. "Ten successive days," within an ordinance requiring notice of bids to be published for that period, means ten successive days the newspaper can run without violating Ann. St. 1906, p. 1420, prohibiting labor on Sunday. Porter v. Boyd Pav. & Const. Co., 214 Mo. 1, 112 SW 235. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 4291, providing that in case all bids are rejected the council may order the work done by the street commissioner, where the council accepted a bid and upon reconsideration rejected it and accepted the bid of another bidder without readvertisement, the proceedings were jurisdictionally defective. Zorn v. Warren-Scharf Asphalt Pav. Co. [Ind. App.] 84 NE 509.

5. Under Ann. St. 1906, §§ 5503, 5508, 5661, providing that ordinances shall not take effect until 10 days after enactment, and that proceedings relative to street improvements must be initiated by ordinance, publication of proposals for bids before the ordinance becomes effective is unauthorized, and the contract and assessments are void. Cushing v. Russell [Mo. App.] 114 SW 555.

6. Other things than price may be taken into consideration. Louisville Steam Forge Co. v. Gast [Ky.] 115 SW 761.

7. In the absence of fraud, the discretion of a board of public works in awarding a contract to a higher bidder, who proposed to do the work with a certain kind of brick, instead of to a lower bidder, who proposed to do the work with a kind of brick the board refused to consider, will not be interfered with by the courts. Louisville Steam Forge Co. v. Gast [Ky.] 115 SW 761. Where a contract is awarded to the lowest bidder, a taxpayer cannot complain because the bidder would make a larger profit than a higher bidder for another style of pipe would have made. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div. 499, 112 NYS 797.

8. Where a contractor in making a bid made a mistake and submitted a bid for less than cost of materials, and the council, though notified by their engineer of the facts, accepted the bid, and within 5 hours thereafter the contractor asked to be relieved and offered to pay cost of reletting the contract, held, he was entitled to relief. Bromagin & Co. v. Bloomington, 234 Ill. 114, 84 NE 700.

9. Where one refused to enter into a paving contract after having been declared the lowest bidder, by declaring another to be the lowest bidder without readvertising the council did not rescind its finding as to who was the lowest bidder, so as to release the deposit. Turner v. Fremont, 159 F 221.

10. Deposits made at the time a bid on paving was submitted held liquidated damages where the bidder refused to enter into the contract. Turner v. Fremont, 159 F 221.

11. West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Carmody, 139 Ill. App. 635. No contract exists where contractor making bid made mistake and promptly notified city before bid was accepted. City of Bloomington v. Bromagin & Co., 137 Ill. App. 509.

12. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276. Contract held to conform to notice to bidders in view of Code Supp. 1902, §§ 792a-792b. Id.

13. Contract for construction of sewer and appurtenances and disposal plant is divisible, and the former may be sustained though the latter is void where the city intended to have the two improvements separable and advertisement for bids stated that "contracts" would be let and bids were separate. Uvalde Asphalt Pav. Co. v. New York, 60 Misc. 210, 112 NYS 535.

14. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4792. Webb

lic work is not changed in its essential character where made in the name of public officers rather than the real contractor, the government.[15]

*Particular contract provisions.*See 10 C. L. 1317—In construing a contract for a public improvement, the general rules of construction are to be applied.[16] Where a contract provides that an engineer shall decide certain facts, his determination is conclusive [17] unless he acts in bad faith.[18] But such determination must be made by the engineer specified.[19] Such provision does not preclude judicial construction after performance.[20] A contract is not rendered void by a provision requiring the contractor to guarantee the work,[21] nor by a provision permitting him to appropriate surplus dirt,[22] nor by a provision allowing him compensation for extras furnished.[23] A stipulation that damages arising from the nature of the work shall be borne by the contractor renders the contract void.[24]

*Performance of contract.*See 10 C. L. 1319—A contractor must acquaint himself at his peril with the nature and extent of the work to be performed,[25] and it is often required that the performance of the contract be guaranteed by a deposit.[26] In determining whether a contract has been performed, the test is whether the work has been completed.[27] Where a contract is awarded, the city should proceed with County v. Hasie [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 188.

15. Contract for Soldiers' Home in name of commissioners by mistake. Speir v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 476.

16. Contract for construction of water and sewer system construed, and held to be for complete water and sewer system for contract price, and not one to do work on such system to amount of sum named. Atlantic Trust & Deposit Co. v. Laurinburg [C. C. A.] 163 F 690.

17. Contract provided for extra compensation for "rock excavation," and that city engineer should determine quality of materials. Held, determination by the engineer whether certain material was rock was conclusive if made in good faith. City of Atchison v. Rackliffe [Kan.] 96 P 477. Held error to submit to the jury whether engineer misconceived terms of contract respecting meaning to be given "rock," and to charge that in such case his decision could be disregarded. Id.

18. If engineer acted in bad faith, contractor was entitled to extra compensation, at rate fixed by contract. City of Atchison v. Rackliffe [Kan.] 96 P 477. Could not be forced to rely on reasonable value of services, though engineer refused to measure rock. Id.

19. Where a contract for construction of a sewer provided for termination thereof on the certificate of the engineer of the board of metropolitan sewerage commissioners, but the successor of such board under St. 1901, p. 106, placed the work under an independent engineer, such board could not terminate the contract so far as the right of the contractor depended on termination on the certificate of the engineer therein specified. Commonwealth v. National Cont. Co., 198 Mass. 554, 85 NE 86.

20. Provision in contract that in case of dispute engineer shall settle same and interpret meaning of specifications does not deprive parties of their right to judicial construction of contract after it has been performed. Gammino v. Dedham [C. C. A.] 164 F 593.

21. Guaranty of work for seven years, such requirement being authorized by Code Supp. 1902, § 814, and throwing no additional burden on abutting owners. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

22. Provision did not render contract void on collateral attack. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

23. That a contract for an improvement required contractor to furnish materials, for which he was to be paid, which were not mentioned in resolution directing the assessment, did not render the contract void. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

24. As tending to increase cost of work. Van Loenen v. Gillespie, 152 Cal. 222, 96 P 87; Hatch v. Nevills [Cal.] 95 P 43; Glassell v. O'Dea, 7 Cal. App. 472, 95 P 44; Standsbury v. Poindexter [Cal.] 99 P 182. That bidders did not increase their bids because of such provisions did not obviate the objection, as it might have deterred some persons from bidding. Standsbury v. Poindexter [Cal.] 99 P 182.

25. A contractor for construction of a sewer was required, at his peril, to acquaint himself with the character of the land to be excavated before signing, and conversations relative thereto are not admissible to vary the terms of the contract. Gammino v. Dedham [C. C. A.] 164 F 593.

26. Becomes forfeited on failure to carry out contract. West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Carmody, 139 Ill. App. 635.

27. In determining whether a sewer has been completed within a provision that tax bills shall not be issued until completed, the test is whether it has been completed, and not whether a detail of the work is in accordance with the contract, and proof that work had not been done in accordance with the contract does not show that it is not completed. Porter v. Boyd Pav. & Const. Co., 214 Mo. 1, 112 SW 235. Where a contract required construction of four catch basins, but the city engineer directed omission because the street was not on grade, held property owners could not complain where the cost of the basins was not included in the final estimate. Id. Lack of reasonable speed to confirm it.[28] It is presumed that extension of time for completing the work allowed by ordinance is reasonable.[29] A city may insert a time limit for completion of the contract though preliminary negotiations, specifications and bids are silent in this respect.[30] Such limitation does not apply to excess work performed,[31] but is not waived because of the fact that assessments are made without respect thereto.[32] Where time limit is specified in the contract but not in the ordinance, it must be completed within a reasonable time.[33] A contractor delayed in constructing a street because of the city's default in failing to obtain a complete right of way may abandon the work or claim damages for the delay.[34] An assignee stands in no better position than the contractor himself,[35] and an assignment of money to become due under the contract is not an assignment of the contract.[36]

Allowance of claims and recovery by contractor.[See 10 C. L. 1820]—Whether a contractor is entitled to compensation for materials used,[37] and the measure of compensation, rests in the terms of the contract.[38] Recovery of compensation may be power of board of trustees of a town to authorize town engineer to conclusively determine fulfillment of contract, amount due contractor, etc., did not avoid entire contract. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

28. If it delays as a result of collusion with the contractor so that he may have more than a reasonable time to do the work, the contract is void, and assessments cannot be enforced. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449.

29. Evidence insufficient to overcome such presumption. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449.

30. Such power is implied from its general powers and from the fact that the work must be done during the summer time. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Wabash [Ind. App.] 86 NE 1034.

31. Where a contractor was obliged to excavate many times the amount of rock estimated, a provision for forfeiture of $10 per day after expiration of the contract period did not apply to time required to excavate the excess rock above 25 per cent. of the estimated amount. Gammino v. Dedham [C. C. A.] 164 F 593.

32. A provision for forfeiture of a certain sum per day for failure to complete the work within a certain period is not waived by the fact that the improvement is to be paid for by assessments which were made without respect to such damages. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Wabash [Ind. App.] 86 NE 1034.

33. Where it appears that the contract time is not reasonable, the city may by ordinance extend it. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449. Where delay caused by default of lower contractor exceeds one hundred and twenty days, question whether it was an unreasonable delay with reference to the upper contractor is not one for determination by jury, but is of such character as in law to absolve upper contractor from obligations of his contract. County Com'rs v. Carroll, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 17. Upper contractor will be allowed time beyond that named in his contract, notwithstanding time is of essence of contract. Id.

34. Sheehan v. Pittsburgh, 213 Pa. 133, 62 A 642. Delay clearly not within contract provision that contractors be liable for delays from unforeseen obstructions and difficulites. Id.

35. Where a town issues warrants against a special fund, and such warrants are assigned by the contractor, and the improvement was not of special benefit to abutting owners, the assignee cannot compel payment out of the general fund, as he stands in no better position than the contractor who was charged with notice that the improvement was not of special benefit to abutting owners. Soule v. Ocosta, 49 Wash. 518, 95 P 1083.

36. Where a materialman furnished material to a contractor and the contractor thereafter assigned all his rights to assessments and bonds, etc., the materialman cannot hold the assignee. National Surety Co. v. Maag [Ind. App.] 86 NE 862.

37. Contract for construction of sewers providing that contractor shall furnish all materials, that excavations shall be done in most careful manner, all trenches shored with sheathes, piling, etc., held not to give contractor compensation for lumber left in trenches. City of Richmond v. Barry [Va.] 63 SE 1074. Where a contract for public improvements was terminated before full performance pursuant to provision thereof, thus entitling the contractor to compensation for work done, he cannot recover for material and tools not kept by the village nor for buildings and roads constructed. Coates v. Nyack, 127 App. Div. 153, 111 NYS 476.

38. Under contract for construction of sewer, contractor held entitled to compensation at specified rate per 1,000 bricks ascertained by measurement of work. City of Richmond v. Barry [Va.] 63 SE 1074. Where contract for construction of a sewer stated approximate quantities of earth and rock to be excavated, provided that estimates could be increased 25 per cent., held that the contractor could recover on a quantum meruit for excess above 25 per cent. on rock excavated. Gammino v. Dedham [C. C. A.] 164 F 593. Contract for bridge construed and no liability, express or implied, imposed on government for temporary liftspan, erected after accident, to prevent delay in opening navigation. Contract contained many stipulations as to uninterrupted railway service with no express precluded where the work is in violation of an ordinance,[39] or by the construction of the contract which is adopted by the parties.[40] A contractor who furnishes more expensive material than is called for cannot recover the difference in cost.[41] Where a contract provides for payment on the certificate of the building department, liability is contingent on the production of such certificate.[42] The duty of the board of public works to grant a contractor an estimate entitling him to partial payment cannot be enforced by mandamus.[43] Where a city enters into a new contract after a contractor fails to complete the work, payments accruing thereunder are not subject to claims due under original contract.[44] The liability of a municipality for breach of contract depends on the damage sustained by the contractor.[45] Whether delay in making payment constitutes a breach may depend on circumstances.[46] An action by a contractor must be brought within the statutory period,[47] and recovery can be had only according to the allegations.[48] A city may set off against a claim of a contractor the expense of defending an action for injuries sustained on the work.[49] No great formality is required in reference to the form in which claims are presented to a municipal corporation,[50] though they should not be ambiguous as to ownership.[51] A municipality contracting for a public improvement requirement as to navigability, but in view of time specified same was clearly intended by parties. Phoenix Bridge Co. v. U. S., 211 U. S. 188, 53 Law. Ed. 141. Under contract for pavement requiring contractor to repair for five years, that no allowance be made for unusual difficulties arising, "either affecting the original construction or maintenance of finished work," and that "if for any reason whatever" pavement prove inferior it must be relaid, contractor must make repairs when pavement is damaged by escaping gas. Macfarland v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co., 29 App. D. C. 506. Where city under contract might have pavement relaid or repaired, order for latter was not cause of complaint. Id. Where under terms of street improvement contract city could have conclusively settled amount of work done by measuring and certifying as provided in the contract but did not do so, question is for jury. Dispute as to amount due for grading street. Sheehan v. Pittsburg, 213 Pa. 133, 62 A 642.

39. Compensation for laying sidewalk not recoverable where work in violation of ordinance as being above established grade. Tananevicz v. Lamczyk, 134 Ill. App. 135.

40. Where contractor, pending dispute as to right of compensation for certain work, entered into supplemental contract with same terms as original, with full knowledge of meaning as interpreted by government, he is precluded from claiming compensation for disputed work under new contract. Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. U. S., 211 U. S. 176, 53 Law. Ed. 136.

41. Where one contracted with the state to construct a road, and an engineer without authority rejected material furnished and the contractor without obtaining consent substituted more expensive material, held he could not recover the difference in cost from the state. Burgard v. State, 61 Misc. 23, 114 NYS 550.

42. Meyers v. Shapiro, 127 App. Div. 186, 111 NYS 503.

43. St. 1898, § 925-94, authorizing board of public works or officers thereof in their discretion to grant a contractor an estimate of amount of work done which will entitle him to receive a proportionate amount of the contract price, does not require an absolute duty which may be enforced by mandamus. State v. Icke, 136 Wis. 583, 118 NW 196.

44. Where a contractor fails to complete the work and the city enters into a new contract with another to finish it. Ross v. Beaumont Brick Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 643.

45. A breach of contract by the city of New York, where contract was made under Laws 1883, p. 676, c. 490, in failing to make payments provided for, held to render the city liable only for money owing under the contract and not for damages caused by the breach, nor to entitle the contractors to abrogate the contract. Williams v. New York, 114 NYS 652.

46. Delay of city of New York in paying an estimate on amount of work completed held, in view of circumstances, not to constitute a breach of the contract. Williams v. New York, 114 NYS 652.

47. Action by contractor for labor and materials furnished held to have accrued on 10th day of month after estimates were allowed and were barred in two years under Laws 1895, p. 128, c. 8, § 347. Thornton v. East Grand Forks, 106 Minn. 233, 118 NW 834.

48. Under a complaint for certain work and material furnished under a contract, the contractor cannot recover for other work and material. Coates v. Nyack, 127 App. Div. 153. 111 NYS 476.

49. Where a contractor, though requested, refused to defend a claim for injuries occasioned by his negligence, held that the city was entitled to set off the amount of the judgment against the claim of the contractor. Murphy v. Yonkers, 131 App. Div. 199, 115 NYS 591.

50. May be amended after they are filed, especially when not sufficiently itemized. Hanrahan v. Janesville, 137 Wis. 1, 118 NW 194.

51. Claim against a city held ambiguous as to ownership. Hanrahan v. Janesville, agrees to create a special fund and on failure to do so is liable generally.[52] In such case the liability is one in rem against the property benefited,[53] and it has been held that the municipality being merely an agent to collect and disburse the fund,[54] it is not liable if its officials fail to perform their duties relative thereto,[55] but that the remedy of the contractor is to compel them to perform their duties.[56] A municipality as the trustee or bailee of special assessment fund is directly liable to a contractor for the amount of obligations held by him,[57] and the general funds are liable for payment of special assessment vouchers where the special fund is unlawfully diverted.[58] Special assessment vouchers or bonds must be issued in conformity with statutory regulations.[59] A city is liable where a void tax bill is delivered 137 Wis. 1, 118 NW 194. Mere ambiguity of ownership of a claim is not a jurisdictional defect. Id.

52. Rogers v. Omaha [Neb.] 117 NW 119. City cannot avoid obligation of warrant because of recital of payment out of special fund which city was not authorized to create (Id.), or because city negligently failed collect special fund (Id.). Warrants payable out of special fund not barred by limitations, since time does not commence to run until fund created. Id.

53. Where sewage district is created under Laws 1903, p. 26, and works to be created are to be paid for by assessment against the property, the debt is one against the property of the district and not of the city or village out of which such district is created. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101.

54. Where a sewerage district is created under Laws 1903, p. 26, and special assessments made to pay for the improvement, the city is merely the agent to collect and disburse the fund and is not liable in damages upon the contract for construction where officers fail to perform their duty. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101. A town making an improvement under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 4288-4290, and issuing bonds therefor, incurs no personal liability but is merely an instrumentality in carrying out the improvement and collecting the money on assessments. Town of Windfall City v. First Nat. Bank [Ind.] 87 NE 984.

55. Where public works are to be paid for by special assessment and the city does not obligate itself, the city is not liable because its officers have failed to do their duty, either in collecting such assessments or paying them over to the contractor. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101.

56. Where sewerage district is created under Laws 1903, p. 26, and improvements are to be paid for by assessment, the contractor must look to the property of the district for payment, and if the city fails to deliver the bonds as agreed, the remedy of the contractor is against the officers to compel them to perform their duty, and not against the city for damages. Broad v. Moscow [Idaho] 99 P 101. Under St. 1871-72, p. 911, authorizing street improvements in San Francisco to be paid for by assessments, failure of board of public works to levy and collect assessments was the default of officers in administering governmental functions for which the state is not liable; the contractor's remedy was to compel the board to perform its duty. Union Trust Co. v. State [Cal.] 99 P 183. The functions of officers charged with the duty of opening streets are governmental. State not suable for their acts. Id. Where a city has contracted for an improvement to be paid for by assessments, it is not liable to the contractor for unauthorized rebates to owners, but his remedy is by mandamus to compel the collection of such rebates, and the city is not liable to him if they cannot be collected. Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619.

57. If funds actually or constructively in possession. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320, rvd. 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619. Liability of city to one who has constructed an improvement to be paid for by assessment is limited to the amount of assessments actually collected. Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619. Where ordinance for public improvement expressly referred to Local Improvement Act of 1897, and contractor agreed to take pay in orders, three-fourths of which now payable from special assessment, there could be no recovery for portion of such special assessment until first collected by city. City of Momence v. Shannon & Co., 135 Ill. App. 533.

58. Premature payment of rebates unlawful diversion. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Chicago, 139 Ill. App. 121. Though made in good faith, being equivalent to refund. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320. City liable though contract provided that city be not liable until money paid into treasury. Id. Payment of special assessment voucher out of instalment other than that which it was issued against a diversion rendering city liable. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Chicago, 139 Ill. App. 121. Each instalment properly chargeable with its own expenses. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Chicago, 139 Ill. App. 121; City of Chicago v. Union Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 545. City must show facts from which propriety of charges may be made in order to charge instalment of assessment with expenses. City of Chicago v. Union Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 545.

59. Instrument containing express promise to pay money is not bond within Local Improvement Act of 1897 when not complying with such act, not being issued for sum of $100 or multiple thereof, or conforming to provisions as to stating instalment of assessment payable. First Nat. Bank v. Elgin, 136 Ill. App. 453. Vouchers in payment of work are prematurely issued when issued upon condition that contractor perform certain act, which was not performed. Id. County court and not city is in disregard of contract,[60] or where by virtue of some act it has rendered collection of the assessments impossible,[61] and a city which is the purchaser of delinquent property is liable to the contractor for the amount of the bid.[62] Liability of a city may be avoided by a contract provision,[63] and a city is not liable for unpaid assessments where it has obtained proper tax deeds and tendered them to the contractor.[64] A city is chargeable with interest in favor of contractor where there is an express agreement,[65] where money is wrongfully obtained,[66] and where money is illegally withheld.[67]

Bonds. See 8 C. L. 1527—The fact that the penalty of a bond is slightly less than required does not render the contract void.[68] Where a final warrant was issued to a contractor in reliance on his promise to complete the work which he failed to do, the village by issuing a bond was not estopped from showing such noncompliance in an action on the bond.[69] Where a contract forbids an assignment of money due the contractor, an assignment with the consent of the city is not an alteration of the contract as to sureties.[70] The surety's right to subrogation to the reserve fund of a contractor in the hands of the government for work done is superior to the rights of subsequent assignees of contract.[71]

Enjoining performance of illegal contract. See 10 C. L. 1321—Courts will not interfere with the performance of contracts unless clearly illegal,[72] resulting in dam-proper authority to accept work done pursuant to special assessment. Local Improvement Act of 1897. Id. "Voucher" ordinarily means document showing that services have been performed or expenses incurred. Covers any acquittance or receipt discharging person or evidencing payment by him. Id. When used in connection with moneys implies instrument showing on what account or by what authority particular payment was made, or that services have been performed entitling party to payment. Id. Special assessment vouchers or bonds are not negotiable instruments. Id. No presumption that special assessment certificates are rightfully issued. Id. Holder of special assessment certificates occupies same position as contractors. Subject to defenses against contractors. Id.

60. Where city of Westport absorbed by Kansas City under Rev. St. 1899, § 6399 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3197), latter city might issue valid tax bill in lieu of void one. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Field [Mo. App.] 111 SW 907.

61. Where by failure of the city of New Orleans to give certain notice a contractor, under 37th section of the charter as amended by Act 119, p. 217, of 1886, and Act 142, p. 179, of 1894, is defeated in his remedy against abutting owners, the city was held liable though the contract provided that it should not be liable for bills due by abutting owners. Bruning v. New Orleans [La.] 47 S 624.

62. Estopped to deny recitals of tax certificate. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Chicago, 139 Ill. App. 121. Where city in default of bidders purchases property delinquent for assessments, it becomes liable for amount bid and interest. City of Chicago v. Union Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 545. Under contract, amount assessed not deemed collected where property delinquent and bought by municipality in default of bidders. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320, rvd. 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619.

63. City not liable where there is provision that it be not liable if special assessments fail to discharge cost. Union Trust Co. v. State [Cal.] 99 P 183. A provision in a contract that the city shall not be liable for the cost precludes recovery against the city if special assessments fail to cover the cost. Id.

64. Where a public improvement is to be paid for by assessments, the city is not liable to the contractor for unpaid assessments on which it has obtained proper tax deeds and tendered the same to him. Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619, rvg. 138 Ill. App. 320.

65. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320. Liable upon amount paid for delinquent property purchased by it. City of Chicago v. Union Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 545. Liable upon amount assessed as public benefits. Id.

66. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320.

67. City of Chicago v. Conway, 138 Ill. App. 320; Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Chicago, 139 Ill. App. 121; City of Chicago v. Union Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 545.

68. Under Acts 1900, p. 153, c. 119, requiring contractor for improvement of highways to execute a bond for the amount of his bid, the fact that the bond was for a few dollars less did not invalidate the contract. Quin v. Pike County [Miss.] 48 S 235.

69. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Highland Park [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 76, 120 NW 621. Evidence held to show that the bond was issued in advance payment for work not performed. Id.

70. So as to release a surety on the contractor's bond for performance of the contract. City of New Rochelle v. Cortright, 131 App. Div. 140, 115 NYS 135.

71. Hardaway v. National Surety Co., 211 U. S. 552, 53 Law. Ed. —

72. Discretion of city officials in selecting lowest bidder ought not to be interfered with. Holly v. New York, 128 App. Div.

age to the property owner,[73] and injunction will not lie where suit is not commenced within the period prescribed.[74]

§ 6. Security to subcontractors, laborers and materialmen.[75] See 10 C. L. 1321 Such security, as a contract provision, may be required by charter provisions.[76] An order given a materialman and accepted by the city constitutes an assignment of such portion of the fund due the contractor.[77] The claim of a materialman for whom the city withheld a certain amount of the contract price is superior to the claim of another materialman.[78]

Bonds. See 10 C. L. 1322—Public bodies may contract for the payment of materialmen by a provision in the contractor's bond which inures to the benefit of such materialmen.[79] The benefits of such bonds do not extend to assignees of the contract.[80] A bond for the protection of materialmen is not invalidated, though the contract is void,[81] because of the failure of the city to approve the bond,[82] or where by mistake it runs to the officers having charge of the work rather than the government.[83] Where a judgment is rendered against a contractor for materials

499, 112 NYS 797. In proceedings to restrain improvements authorized under Laws 1903, p. 121, c. 82, conditions in the petition by owners requiring contractors to regrade adjoining property at certain prices, which were adopted by the ordinance authorizing the improvements, held not to increase the expense thereof to property owners and did not render the contract void. James v. Seattle, 49 Wash. 347, 95 P 273.

73. In seeking to restrain issuance of bonds based upon special assessment for pavement of street on ground of mere irregularity in exercise of city's power, property owner must not only show irregularity but damage thereby without his own fault. Lawton v. Racine [Wis.] 119 NW 331. Action estopped where abutting owner's grantor signed petition for improvement and plaintiff had knowledge of fact, and where no objection to improvement, which was beneficial and of reasonable cost, until completion. Id.

74. Burn's Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, prohibiting suits to enjoin construction of public improvement unless commenced within 10 days from letting of the contract precludes a property owner from preventing recovery by contractor because of irregularities prior to execution of the contract. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

76. Kansas City charter, art. 9, § 20, providing that contracts for public improvements shall contain a covenant that contractor shall pay for labor and material, the performance of which covenant shall be secured by two or more sureties signing the contract, held to violate no constitutional provision. Kansas City v. Youmans, 213 Mo. 151, 112 SW 225. Guaranty in contract that contractor would pay for labor and materials up to certain sum, signed by sureties, held a continuing guaranty and attached to each item of the expense or labor. Id. Blasting powder, dynamite fuse, etc., necessary for use in constructing a sewer, are "materials" within a guaranty that contractors would pay for materials used in the work. Id. Tools, implements and appliances are not materials though they were worn out in the work. Id.

77. Prior to notices of claims of others against the contractor served subsequently under P. L. 1892, p. 369. Somers Brick Co. v. Souder, 71 N. J. Eq. 759, 70 A 158. Priority and validity of such order held an issue under the pleadings. Id.

78. Where a city withheld from a contractor an amount claimed by a materialman pending settlement of a dispute between the materialman and contractor, his right was superior to the claim of an assignee of another materialman under garnishment proceedings against the city. Ross v. Beaumont Brick Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 643.

79. Though materialmen are third persons and not named in contract. Eau Claire-St. Louis Lumber Co. v. Banks [Mo. App.] 117 SW 611. A common-law power. Id. Ann. St. 1906, p. 3328, expressly empowers school districts to contract to pay for labor and material furnished in constructing a public building, and they may provide for it in the contractor's bond so that it inures to the benefit of third persons not named. Id.

80. Hardaway v. National Surety Co., 211 U. S. 552, 53 Law. Ed. —. Surety on bond of public contractor not liable for labor and materials furnished by assignees of contract where contract of assignment only obligates assignor to assign reserve fund of government and payments due under original contract. Id.

81. Fact that paving contract is void because let without competitive bidding does not render void bond given by contractor to secure payment for labor and materials, though it is necessary in suing on bond to rely on the contract. Kansas City Hydraulic Press Brick Co. v. National Surety Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 496.

82. When bond is given to secure persons furnishing labor and materials, sureties cannot avoid liability by showing failure of the city to approve the bond. People v. Carroll, 151 Mich. 233, 14 Det. Leg. N. 921, 115 NW 42.

83. Bond of contractor to protect materialmen required by Act Cong. Aug. 13, by default, in an action on the bond, the plaintiff may introduce the contract and judgment to determine the amount of his claim.[84] The enforcement of bonds required by the federal government is governed by the federal statutes.[85] The right of action is assignable,[86] and the allowance of attorney's fees therein rests in the discretion of the court.[87]

Liens.[See 10 C L. 1323]—Liens for the security of laborers and materialmen are provided for by statute,[88] and, to entitle one to the benefit thereof, statutory requirements must be complied with.[89] Action thereon must be commenced within the statutory period.[90]

1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, c. 280, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2523), which by mistake runs to commissioners having charge of building Soldiers' Home instead of United States, will not for that reason defeat recovery. Speir v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 476.

85. Suit in name of United States on bond of contractor for benefit of materialmen is governed by Act March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, c. 373), as corrected Act March 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 434, c. 866, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), providing that civil suits be brought where person is inhabitant. Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. U. S., 213 U. S. 10, 53 Law Ed. —. Act Feb. 24, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 811, c. 778, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 709), amending Act. Aug. 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, c. 280, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2523), inapplicable where contract and bond antedate passage of amendatory act. Id. Under Act. Feb. 24, 1905, 33 Stat. 811, amendatory of Act Aug. 13, 1894, 28 Stat. 278, creditor for labor and material furnished on government work cannot sue on bond until six months after completion of work. United States v. Winkler, 162 F 397. Settlement had to determine right of the government on the bond, and abandonment of work by contractor who became insolvent is not a performance of contract. Id. A steam vessel built for the United States is a "public work" within Act Aug. 13, 1894, as amended by Act Feb. 24, 1905, 33 Stat. 811, requiring the usual bond and providing that laborers or materialmen may not sue thereon until six months from completion of contract and settlement. Title Guaranty & Trust Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works [C. C. A.] 163 F 168. Claims for patterns made for a contractor from which to make castings to be used on a public work, for towing and delivery of material, wharfage, and hauling of materials, are for labor and material, recoverable on the bond given under 28 Stat. 278, as amended by 33 Stat. 311. Id. But advances of freight made to a common carrier on the material by a transfer company is not. Id. Under Act Aug. 13, 1905, 28 Stat. 278, amended by Act Feb. 24, 1905, 33 Stat. 811, requiring bond of contractor for government work and providing that materialmen may sue thereon after six months after completion of work and settlement, the provision that such creditors shall on application after such time be furnished a copy of contract and bond to sue on is not mandatory, and failure to apply for such copy will not defeat their action. Title Quaranty & Trust Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works [C. C. A.] 163 F 168.

86. The right of laborers and materialmen to enforce their claims against the bond is assignable. Title Guaranty & Trust Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works [C. C. A.] 163 F 168.

87. In an action on such bond the court may in its discretion allow the statutory attorney's fee in favor of each claimant. Title Guaranty & Trust Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works [C. C. A.] 163 F 168.

88. Act March 3, 1892, Gen. St. p. 2078, securing payment for work done or materials furnished toward a public improvement, did not repeal Mechanic's Lien Law, § 3, providing for a lien on public buildings, but prescribed a concurrent remedy so far as it related to public buildings. Arjonico v. West New York Board of Education, 75 N. J. Law, 21, 69 A 450. Under Const. art. 20, § 15, relative to mechanics' liens, while a lien may not be enforcible against a city sewer, it may be against the funds due the contractor. Goldtree v. San Diego [Cal. App.] 97 P 216. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 2492, a lien for materials furnished for a public improvement is inferior to a mortgage filed before filing of lien notice. Trust Co. v. Casey [Ky.] 115 SW 780. The death of the principal contractor, where the contract is completed by his administrator, does not deprive a subcontractor of his statutory lien upon the fund arising from the contract. Vernon v. Harper [Ohio] 86 NE 882. Where one agreed with contractors to furnish materials under financial backing of another who had an interest in the contract, and others furnished materials with such person's knowledge, their lien on the fund in the city's hands was superior to the lien of the former. Di Menna v. New York, 109 NYS 1032. Under Civ. Code 1896, § 2040, a mechanics' lien cannot be enforced against a public school building (Scruggs v. Decatur [Ala.] 46 S 989), nor can such lien be enforced against a fund set apart by the city for the construction of the building, Code 1896, § 2040, exempting property of municipalities from levy and sale (Id.).

89. Subcontractor's lien given by Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 82, § 23, creating a lien in favor of one who furnishes material to a public contractor, cannot be enforced unless prior to filing the bill required notice has been given. Pirola v. W. J. Turnes Co., 238 Ill. 210, 87 NE 354.

§ 7. Hours and conditions of labor.[91]—See 8 C. L. 1532—Laws limiting the hours and conditions of labor cannot be sustained under the police power[92] but they are generally held valid,[93] and where a legislature has constitutional power to fix the number of hours of a day's work on public works, it has incidental power to impose a penalty for violation of the statute.[94] The protection of the law is not waived where rights under it are asserted as soon as violation is discovered.[95] Such a law applies only to persons employed on or about the work.[96] In New York the two statutes relative to the subject provide concurrent remedies.[97]

§ 8. Injury to property and compensation to owners. A. In general.[98]—See 10 C. L. 1323—In some states, damages to abutting owners must first be assessed and paid.[99] A city which in pursuance to statutory power and without negligence plans a public improvement is not liable for injuries which result to adjacent property,[1] but, in the case of liability, relief must be sought in the appropriate tribunal.[2]

92. Laws 1906, p. 1395, limiting a day's work for municipal corporations to eight hours and prohibiting payment for work done in violation of the statute, cannot be sustained under the police power, as it has no relation to public health, safety or morals. People v. Metz, 193 N. Y. 148, 85 NE 1070.

93. Laws 1906, p. 1395, making eight hours a day's work for municipal corporations, is not void as denying equal protection of the laws or as making arbitrary discriminations between persons who work for individuals and those who work for municipal corporations. People v. Metz, 193 N. Y. 148, 85 NE 1070.

94. By fine or imprisonment or prohibiting payment for the work. People v. Metz, 193 N. Y. 148, 85 NE 1070. Under Const. art. 12, § 1, and Laws 1903, p. 1453, held the legislature had power to pass a law limiting the hours of a day's work on work done for cities and prohibiting any state or municipal officer from paying for work done in violation of the statute. Id.

95. Even if a city may waive Laws 1906, p. 1395, making eight hours a legal day's work for municipal corporations, it did not waive the provision prohibiting payment for such work where it refused to pay over a year after the work was done but where it had just discovered the violation. 5. Ordinance adopted under Kansas City ferred by statute.[6] The fundamental fact upon which the validity of assessments rests is an increment of benefit to the property resulting from the improvement,[7] and assessment can be made only for actual benefits[8] which a landowner receives over and above the ordinary benefits which he receives as one of the community.[9] The power to levy special assessments is a special one, and the statute conferring it is to be strictly construed.[10] While special assessments are not taxes in the general acceptation of that term,[11] the levying of assessments is an exercise of the taxing power.[12] charter, art. 14, § 33, levying assessments for maintaining parks, held a special tax for local improvements, and not a general tax. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115. A tax for the purpose of raising funds for the construction of a county court house may be lawfully levied without the contract for its construction having first been made. Flewellen v. McKenney, 130 Ga. 356, 60 SE 1000. Village Laws, Laws 1897, pp. 422, 444, authorizing board of trustees to cause improvements to be made and to provide for assessments, and it is not necessary for the village to again provide for the expense by general tax. In re Village of Kenmore, 59 Misc. 388, 110 NYS 1008. Where state board of health has not ordered construction of sewer system in a village, Laws 1893, p. 1519, c. 661, requiring the municipality to stand the cost thereof, does not apply, and a taxpayer may not enjoin collection of an assessment levied for such purpose. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. Sewers draining a limited portion of the city, constructed after a general sewer system had been built, held public sewers, for construction of which the whole city could be taxed. State v. Wilder [Mo.] 116 SW 1087. Whether Act 1906, p. 265, authorizing special assessments for improvements already made, be an original or curative act, it involves only principles of taxation, and does not impair the obligation of contracts, though some of the improvements when made were unauthorized, the city having afterwards adopted it. Durkee v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 819. Such act did not take any vested rights. Id.

Leg. N. 669, 117 NW 572. Ann. St. 1906, pp. 275, 280, 282. Kansas City charter (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 265, 266), held not to forbid exemptions from special assessments of church property. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115. Power of the legislature, under Const. art. 16, § 11, to impose special taxes for construction of capitol building and to conserve the fund stated. Moore v. Alexander, 85 Ark. 171, 107 SW 395. Laws 1885, p. 1162, c. 229, authorizing a city to charge two-thirds of cost of paving against abutting property, held not to confer any vested right to exemption from further assessment for repaving. Carstens v. Fond du Lac, 137 Wis. 465, 119 NW 117. Under Fond du Lac charter amended by Laws 1885, p. 1162, c. 299, and action of the city in 1904, held that the city on repaving a street could assess cost thereof to abutting property owners. Id. Under Acts 1908, p. 166, expense of laying drain pipes for purpose of macadamizing, curbing, etc., and cost of manholes, catchbasins, etc., can be taxed against abutting property. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559.

7. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Special taxes cannot be levied unless the property charged receives a corresponding benefit. City of Owensboro v. Sweeney, 33 Ky. L. R. 823, 930, 111 SW 364. Sprinkling streets does not confer a benefit, and Laws of 1906, p. 376, assessing cost thereof by front foot against abutting property is void. Id. Whether street sprinkling is a benefit for which abutting property may be assessed, not decided. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224.

8. Assessment for construction of a drain can be made for actual benefits only. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380. A special assessment which is in excess of benefits is as to such extent a taking of property without compensation. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526. In order to sustain an assessment, it must affirmatively appear that it is not in excess of the benefits conferred. Essen v. Cape May Common Council [N. J. Law] 72 A 49.

11. Const. art. 13, § 1, exempting property of University of California from taxation does not exempt unimproved property from assessments for improvement of streets. City St. Imp. Co. v. University of California Regents, 153 Cal. 776, 96 P 801. Const. 1874, exempting certain classes of property from taxation does not refer to special assessments. Board of Improvement v. Sisters of Mercy [Ark.] 109 SW 1165. Const. art. 13, § 8, providing that each taxpayer may be required to deliver to the assessor a list of his property, etc., has no application to assessments for local purposes. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Ann. St. 1906, pp. 275, 278, 283, requiring taxes to be uniform, etc., do not apply to special assessments. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. St. Louis Shovel Co., 211 Mo. 524, 111 SW 86. Ann. St. 1906, p. 273, relative to taxation, has no reference to special assessments. Id. Local assessments are not regarded as taxes. Board of Improvement v. Sisters of Mercy [Ark.] 109 SW 1165. Street improvement assessment not made in accordance with the laws regulating taxes is not a tax within a provision exempting home-

(§ 9) B. Constitutional and statutory limitations.[13]—See 10 C. L. 1325—Under the rule that property cannot be taken for public use without compensation, a city providing for improvement of a street at the cost of abutting owners cannot collect an assessment for benefits without showing that adequate compensation therefor will be made.[14] Legislative power to levy assessments is limited by the principle that the tax must be laid for a public purpose which must directly pertain to the district taxed.[15] Statutes relating to special assessments must conform to constitutional limitations,[16] and to statutory limitations as to the extent to which property may be assessed [17] if such limitation applies.[18] They must not violate the rule prohibiting special legislation.[19] In Illinois acquisition of land necessary for the improvement is a condition precedent to the levy of an assessment.[20]

*Equality and uniformity.*See 10 C. L. 1326—A constitutional provision requiring taxes to be uniform does not apply to special assessments.[21] A statute providing steads from taxation. City of Beaumont v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 950. Laws 1860, p. 56, conferring corporate powers on an institution and exempting its property from taxation, held not to exempt it from assessment for local improvements. "Special Tax" does not mean such assessments. Board of Improvement v. Sisters of Mercy [Ark.] 109 SW 1165. A homestead is not exempt from assessment for local improvement nor from sale on foreclosure thereof. Robinson v. Levy [Mo.] 117 SW 577.

12. Porter v. Boyd Pav. & Const. Co., 214 Mo. 1, 112 SW 235. In the exercise of the taxing power, special assessments may be levied against property to defray cost of improvements. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Ann. St. 1906, p. 4854, providing for formation of assessment districts for assessment of cost of improvements against abutting property, is valid. The levy of such assessments is referable to the taxing power and the legislature is authorized to create such districts. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. St. Louis Shovel Co., 211 Mo. 524, 111 SW 86; State v. St. Louis, 211 Mo. 591, 111 SW 89.

15. To sustain a statute authorizing assessment according to area of adjacent property, it is not necessary to hold that legislative power is unlimited so as to prevent judicial interference where manifest injustice, inequality or constitutional violation is shown in enforcement of rule prescribed. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

16. The constitutional limit of an assessment in proportion to the taxable value of property by petition is the value of benefits conferred. James v. Seattle, 49 Wash. 347, 95 P 273. Though a drainage district is a municipal corporation, Const. art. 11, § 12, denying the legislature power to impose taxes for municipal purposes, but permitting it to vest in corporate authorities power to tax for such purposes, is not violated by Laws 1903, p. 87, requiring commissioners to levy a tax for preliminary expenses. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pierce County [Wash.] 97 P 1099. A tax may be levied for widening a street. In re Lockitt, 58 Misc. 5, 110 NYS 32. Ordinance under Kansas City Charter, art. 10, § 33, exempting church property from assessment, held not to deny equal protection of the laws. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115.

17. Kirby's Dig. §§ 5683, 5716, prohibiting a single improvement which will exceed in cost 20 per cent of the value of the property in the district, does not limit the amount to be assessed against each particular piece of property to 20 per cent of its value. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526. City and Village Act 1872, § 7, amended by Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, § 604, so as to read substantially the same as § 541, held not to abolish distinctions between special taxation and special assessments, but merely to limit amount to be assessed against any one tract, and the power to conclusively settle question of benefits is committed to court or jury. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407.

18. Code Supp. 1907, § 792a, providing that assessments shall not exceed 25 per cent of the value of the property assessed, held not to apply to assessments for drainage districts. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432.

19. Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, authorizing cities heretofore incorporated under special charter having less than 10,000 population to make assessments in a special manner, is not void as a local or special law. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

20. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 435, c. 24, § 559, providing that no special assessment shall be levied until land necessary for the improvement has been acquired, acquisition of right to enter land to construct sewer is a condition precedent to levy of an assessment to pay for it. City of Chicago v. Green, 233 Ill. 258, 87 NE 417. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 435, making acquisition of land necessary for an improvement a condition precedent to levy of an assessment to pay for the improvement, mere permission to enter on land to construct a sewer is insufficient. for assessment according to the value of the property is not arbitrary.[22] An assessment according to benefits is according to value.[23] An assessment under the front foot rule is founded on benefits.[24] If an assessment is equitably apportioned and does not exceed the benefits, there is no constitutional objection which the supreme court can consider.[25]

Due process of law.[See 10 C. L. 1327]—As a general rule notice to property owners and an opportunity to be heard is essential to the validity of an assessment,[26] especially where the legislature delegates the power to determine benefits,[27] but no notice is required where the legislature itself makes such determination.[28]

Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526.

24. Rev. Laws, c. 26, §§ 26, 27, providing for assessment of property per front foot for watering streets, contemplates that assessments shall be founded on special benefits received and no assessment exceeding special benefits shall be made. Corcoran v. Cambridge Aldermen, 199 Mass. 5, 85 NE 155. Bill complaining of assessment for paving, alleging that commissioners had found the front footage and assessed on basis of front footage regardless of depth or improvement of lots, and that some lots were not assessed, held to imply that commissioners found that lots not assessed were not benefited. Durkee v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 819.

25. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432.

26. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, § 547, amendatory of Laws 1901, p. 106, providing that unsubdivided tracts may, for purpose of spreading assessments, be divided into 25-foot lots, together with an ordinance dividing such a tract and assessing it, held void as taking property without due process. City of Chicago v. Wells, 236 Ill. 129, 86 NE 197. Ditch assessment made without notice to owner is void. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. When a public improvement is made without notice, actual or constructive, to the owner of land benefited, of intention to make such improvement, he cannot be assessed for benefits, unless he has waived his legal right to a hearing. Walsh v. Newark [N. J. Law] 71 A 39. As a general rule, before an assessment is deemed to be conclusively established against a property owner, he is entitled to notices and hearing at some stage of the proceedings. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Laws 1906, p. 265, providing that where a street has been paved the city council, after deciding that the improvement was for the public good and necessity of the owners, may direct assessment of benefited property, does not authorize levy of assessments without notice. Durkee v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 819. Charter of City of Toledo (Loc. Laws Ohio 1836-37, p. 32), authorizing assessments for local improvements, made no provision for hearing to ascertain benefits, and for that reason a sale of property for nonpayment of the assessment was void, as taking property without due process. Anderson v. Messenger [C. C. A.] 158 F 250. Laws 1907, p. 123, c. 73, providing for assessment of tide lands and sale of leasehold interest thereof to satisfy the assessment, which is against the fee only, is void, as depriving the lessee of his property without due process. Coast Land Co. v. Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 856. Barrett Law of Indiana whereby taxing district of 150 feet from street is created, property within 50 feet being primarily liable, and remainder back-lying property being contingently liable, is within power of legislature. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Porter, 210 U. S. 177, 52 Law Ed. 1012. Not insufficient to afford due process of law guaranteed by constitution in regard to notice of assessment, since amount of tax on back-lying property is same as that of abutting owner. Id. Not denial of equal protection of laws. Id.

27. Road Imp. Dist. No. 1 v. Glover [Ark.] 110 SW 1031; Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 52 Law. Ed. 1103. Opportunity to submit objections and complaints to assessment in writing not sufficient hearing where law denies landowner right to object in courts to assessment on ground that objections are only cognizable by board of equalization. Id. Where one or more essential features of an assessment proceeding are committed to some tribunal inferior to the legislature, notice and opportunity to contest must be allowed. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Laws 1903, c. 132, p. 257, providing for sprinkling of streets, and authorizing cities to levy a tax therefor, delegates certain features of the proceeding to a class of property owners in a manner excluding notice and hearing to others, and is void. Id.

28. Ann. St. 1906, p. 4854, providing for creation of special taxing districts, and providing for opportunity for property owners to be heard before the tribunal which levies the assessment, does not violate the due process clause, as no notice is required as to matters which the legislature determines or delegates to determination of municipal authorities. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. St. Louis Shovel Co., 211 Mo. 524, 111 SW 86. The fact that an assessment was levied for maintenance of parks under Kansas City Charter, art. 10, § 33, without notice to property owners, did not deprive them of their property without due process. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo.

A notice which enables an owner to appear before some authorized tribunal and contest the validity and fairness of an assessment before it becomes a fixed charge against his land is sufficient,[29] and owners are not entitled to notice of each step in the proceeding.[30] An owner who will not be affected is not entitled to notice.[31] It is not necessarily fatal to a special assessment statute that it does not contain an express provision relative to notice and hearing where terms of the statute permit such provision to be implied.[32]

(§ 9) C. Persons, property, and districts liable, and extent of liability.[33]—See 10 C. L. 1328—Local assessments are primarily imposed upon the property rather than the owner thereof.[34] The assessment of benefits in the city of Washington for a public improvement is governed by congress.[35]

608, 111 SW 115. Should it do so, the theory of the law is that the property owner has been given the equivalent of notice and hearing by representation in the legislature. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224.

29. City of Kinston v. Loftin [N. C.] 62 SE 1069. Notice by publication pursuant to statute, sufficient where land described. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6. Rev. Laws, c. 26, § 27, providing for assessment for watering streets against abutting property, and for petition to asessors for abatement, whose right to grant it depends on recommendation of the board or officer who certified the list, held not void as taking property without due process, as the owner is thus given an opportunity for hearing. Corcoran v. Cambridge Aldermen, 199 Mass. 5, 85 NE 155. Laws 1906, p. 265, providing that where a street has been paved and the city council shall decide that such improvement, when made, was for the public good and necessity of individuals, it may order an assessment on notice, does not deprive persons liable of property without due process, because empowering the council to determine the question of public good and necessity without hearing. Durkee v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 819. Such statute is not objectionable because leaving the jurisdictional facts to the final determination of the council, no property being taken nor assessment made or necessitated. Lazelle v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 824. Acts 30th general assembly, p. 61, c. 68, §§ 12, 19, providing for assessment and classifications of lands for drainage purposes, held to provide for notice and appeal in case of railroad property, and is not void on that ground. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380. In an action to enforce an assessment under Priv. Laws 1905, c. 338, where the owner is given opportunity to set up every defense on the ground of irregularity of proceedings or on the merits, he cannot complain that the judgment is taking of property without due process. City of Kinston v. Loftin [N. C.] 62 SE 1069; City of Kinston v. Wooten [N. C.] 63 SE 1061.

30. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, §§ 75-153, providing for classification of lands for drainage assessments, owners who have been notified of classification of their lands are not entitled to notice of levy of assessment. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Under Buffalo city charter, Laws 1891, p. 221, c. 105, § 398, requiring board of assessors to find whether petition for paving was signed by sufficient number of owners, and § 399, amended by Laws 1900, p. 1541, making assessor's certificate conclusive of facts stated, no right is invaded by not giving owners notice of proceedings before assessment. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 127 App. Div. 851, 111 NYS 924. Under Ann. St. 1906, pp. 3935-3947, relative to establishment of drainage districts and improvements, held, where a landowner was in court at commencement of proceedings, he was present for all purposes as long as the court had duties to perform in the case, and a supplemental assessment without notice to him was not a taking of his property without due process. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Where Laws 1905, p. 1630, c. 646, § 14, provides for apportionment of assessments by board after dissolution of commission appointed to construct sewer, taxpayer cannot complain that he is without opportunity to be heard. Horton v. Andrus, 191 N. Y. 231, 83 NE 1120. Act public, and taxpayers bound to take notice of it. Id.

31. Abutting owner who is not entitled to damages for change of grade under greater New York Charter, § 951, cannot complain of failure to give notice of proceedings for assessment of damages on account of establishment of a grade. Friest v. New York, 193 N. Y. 525, 86 NE 549.

32. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, authorizing sewer assessments, will not be held void as authorizing taking of property without due process or just compensation, unless it is shown void in an individual case. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

As a general rule the basis of local assessments is the benefit accruing to the property from the improvement,[36] but this rule is not universal and property is sometimes assessed according to its frontage without regard to benefits [37] or value,[38] though an assessment under the frontage rule may be considered as according to benefits.[39] If palpable injustice will result from the application of the front foot rule, equity may interfere.[40]

Under the benefit rule various elements are to be considered, such as value [41] and distance from the improvement.[42] Special benefits must be valued in the proper manner and not arbitrarily.[43] Under authority to assess abutting property assessed against land within certain area (Act Cong. March 3, 1899 [30 Stat. at L. 1344, c. 431]) and statute extending area to be assessed (Act June 6, 1900 [31 Stat. at L. 665, c. 809, § 12]) proper exercise of congress power. Id.

36. See ante, § 9B. Evidence held to show that abutting owners assessed for paving received benefits for which they were assessed. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276. In assessment proceeding, that a railroad assessed for benefits would remove its tracts from the street, if based on conjectural plans of the company, was too speculative to predicate a benefit thereon. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407. Assessment of swamp land for drainage purposes which rendered it available for pasturage held not to exceed benefits. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432. Potential as well as present use of property may be taken into account in making assessments. Prentice v. Toledo, 11 Ohio C. C. [N. In assessing special benefits the assessing authority must find that the whole effect of the contemplated improvement is to increase the value of the property, and this fact must be reached by weighing the facts tending to show injury as well as benefits. Park City Yacht Club v. Bridgeport [Conn.] 70 A 631. Property adjacent to a sidewalk is benefited if there is an increase in value for any purpose to which it is adapted. City of Chicago v. Marsh, 238 Ill. 254, 87 NE 319.

37. St. 1898, §§ 925-216 to 925-218, providing for assessment of cost of sanitary sewer against abutting property by front foot rule, is valid under the rule that assessments are not limited to benefits when property made under the police power. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Janesville, 137 Wis. 7, 118 NW 182.

38. City of Owensboro v. Sweeney, 33 Ky. L. R. 823, 930, 111 SW 364. An assessment according to frontage as directed by statute is valid. City of Kinston v. Loftin [N. C.] 62 SE 1069. Under St. 1885, pp. 147, 152, c. 153, §§ 2, 7, a lot fronting on one side of a street may be assessed for the cost of constructing a sidewalk on the opposite side, though the owner has laid a walk for his own convenience without obtaining an agreement from the opposite owner to pay one-half to cost. Millsap v. Balfour [Cal.] 97 P 668. That a corner lot has been once assessed for sewer along one street is no objection to assessing for sewer in the other street. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

39. Under Code, § 818, providing for assessment by front foot rule, and Code Supp. § 792a, providing that assessments shall be in proportion to benefits, held that basis of assessment is proportionate benefit, though in absence of other considerations frontage may properly be considered as basis for determining benefits. Des Moines Union R. Co. v. Des Moines [Iowa] 118 NW 293. The legislature may lawfully prescribe the front foot rule as a reasonable method of apportioning benefits. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Where east 46 feet of four lots were assessed as a single parcel and constituted a homestead, such portion constituted a single lot and was properly assessed as such for paving, though only one lot abutted on the street paved. Loewenbach v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 119 NW 888. Lot widening from 50 foot frontage to 175 feet at rear is wholly taxable for an improvement and not merely the portion between parallel lines extending back at right angles to the street and fifty feet apart. Haller v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 516.

40. Unless, however, injustice appears, the excess will not be enjoined. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Abilene [Kan.] 98 P 224. Courts will give relief where it appears that application of the frontage rule works gross injustice and violation of the principles of equity. City of Kinston v. Wooten [N. C.] 63 SE 1061. Evidence insufficient to entitle an owner to relief from frontage assessment as imposed. Id. Foot rule cannot be constitutionally applied in rural neighborhoods. Philadelphia v. Manderfield, 32 Pa. 41. Assessment in proceeding to widen a street based largely on the value of the property because the commissioners were of the opinion that benefits were in proportion to the value of the property held not an improper method of determining the amount of the assessment with reference to the rule that they should be based on benefits. In re Seattle, 50 Wash. 402, 97 P 444.

according to benefits, nonabutting property may be assessed.[44] Assessment according to area is proper.[45]

Assessments must be equitably distributed and property should not be assessed more than it is benefited nor more than its proportion of the cost of the improvement,[46] but omission to assess certain property does not necessarily invalidate the assessment.[47] Whether an assessment amounts to a spoliation depends not upon the value of the lot alone but upon the value of the lot and improvements after construction of the improvement.[48] It is sometimes provided by statute that cost of improvements be assessed equally against lands benefited.[49]

Purchasers of land prior to reapportionment of an assessment may be liable therefor.[50] A city can make a general levy for the payment of the cost of improvement of street intersections, against all property owners in the city.[51] What property may be assessed may rest in the terms of the statute authorizing the assessment,[52] and the question of whether land is exempt is generally determined on pro-

44. Where a municipality is authorized to establish assessment districts and assess cost of sewer against abutting property according to benefits, property benefited is liable to assessment though it is nonabutting and no laterals have been laid to it. Beckett v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 659.

45. Assessment according to area of abutting property at so much per square foot is proper. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

46. In assessment proceedings the questions for the jury are whether the property was assessed more than it was benefited or more than its proportionate share of the cost of the improvement. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407. Upon a hearing on the question of benefits in a proceeding for confirmation of an assessment, the only questions to be submitted to the court or jury for decision are whether the objector's property was assessed more than it was benefited or more than its proportionate cost of the improvement. City of Chicago v. Hurbert, 235 Ill. 204, 85 NE 222. Equal assessments per front foot for paving, when the commissioners knew that some lots were deeper than others and some had more valuable improvements on them, and the imposition of no assessments against some lots, do not show that assessments were necessarily unjust and unequal and therefore fraudulent. Durkee v. Barre [Vt.] 71 A 819. In assessment proceeding, evidence of what would be the fair and just proportion that property of objecting owners should bear to like number of feet of frontage on the other side of the street held erroneous where all property was owned by two persons and such comparison would be detrimental to the objecting party. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407. Under Code Supp. 1902, § 1989-a12, providing for classification of lands assessed for drains according to a graduated scale of benefits, held that the method of apportioning benefits on other land of a different class was immaterial in determining whether a certain assessment was excessive, the question being whether the assessment was equitable. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton county [Iowa] 118 NW 432. Evidence insufficient to show that assessment was unfair and unreasonable. Park City Yacht Club v. Bridgeport [Conn.] 70 A 631. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, § 553, requiring the court on objection to inquire whether an assessment is equitable, held the court in allowing assessments of inside lots to stand at a certain sum was required to reduce the assessments on corner lots. Village of Downer's Grove v. Findlay, 237 Ill. 368, 86 NE 732.

47. Omission to assess certain abutting property for a reason considered valid by the council does not avoid the assessment in the absence of fraud. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

48. If the assessment does not then equal the value of the lot, it will be enforced. Haller v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 516.

49. Under a charter requiring cost of grading streets to be taxed equally against all lands on both sides of the street, where the cost of grading north half of a street is assessed against property abutting on the north side, cost of grading the south half is properly taxed against property lying south of the street. Brosnahan v. Pitcher, 133 Mo. App. 660, 113 SW 1133.

50. Under Ky. St. 1903, §§ 2834, 2839, purchasers of land after payment of an assessment but before reapportionment held liable for an additional assessment, since they knew that the street had been improved and that the cost was a lien against abutting lots and were presumed to know that it was a lien until legal assessment and payment thereof. Comley v. American Standard Asphalt Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 125. Purchasers of land after payment of an assessment cannot complain of a reapportionment resulting in additional assessment because at the time of the assessment neither they nor their vendors were parties, because if reapportionment was made according to opinion of the court of appeals and equally, it is immaterial when it was made. 51. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559.

52. Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, providing that when drainage commissioners enlarge a channel lying beyond the district they may recover benefits from the owner or the land benefited, does not authorize receedings to enforce the assessment.[53] As a general rule lands owned by the state are not subject to assessment [54] unless made so by statute.[55] In New York lands used for cemetery purposes are not subject to assessment.[56]

The general rule that the proper method of assessing cost of taking land for a street is to assess the cost of each block taken on property fronting thereon does not apply where a portion of the territory was benefited to a greater extent than other portions.[57]

Property of a street railroad in a street is not assessable for an improvement of the street,[58] but freight depots and spur tracks are assessable though part of the entirety of the company's property,[59] and a street railway [60] or steam railway company may be assessed.[61] Only such items of expense may be included in an assessment as are considered reasonably necessary and incident to the improvement.[62] covery from owners other than those whose lands are intersected by the channel. Commissioners of Vermilion Special Drainage Dist. v. Shockey, 238 Ill. 237, 87 NE 335. Under Laws 1897, p. 422, c. 114, § 166, amended by Laws 1907, p. 61, c. 44, providing that no landowner shall be required to bear expense of grading any portion of a street not in front of his land, he cannot be assessed for paving a street at the side of his lot where he owned only to the exterior line of the street. O'Leary v. Glens Falls, 128 App. Div. 683, 112 NYS 932. The provisions of municipal cods as to improvements for which special assessments are made, that "the corporation shall pay the cost of intersections," has reference to parts of street improvements at intersection of streets one with another, and has no application to the crossing of street by sewer for purposes of local sanitary drainage. Closs v. Parker, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 85. In an assessment upon lots to defray cost of local sanitary sewer, municipallty is not required to make deduction because of proximity of public park which does not directly abut thereon. Id.

Act June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 665, c. 809), requires all lands to be assessed. Garfield Memorial Hospital v. McFarland. 31 App. D. C. 447.

54. General expressions of a statute granting a city authority to assess all persons specially benefited by a public improvement do not authorize assessment of land owned by the state. State v. Kilburn [Conn.] 69 A 1028.

55. "Belonging to" in Hartford City charter, § 132, providing that the city in making assessments for benefits may assess land belonging to the state, etc., imports beneficial ownership but contains no implication that land on which the state has a mortgage for the benefit of the school fund may be assessed. State v. Kilburn [Conn.] 69 A 1028.

56. Under Laws 1879, p. 397, c. 310, § 1, lands used for cemetery purposes are not subject to assessment for local improvements. In re Jeroms Ave. 192 N. Y. 459, 85 NE 755. In proceedings to acquire property to widen a street, an assessment for benefits and award of damages in excess thereof is an "assessment for local improvements" under the city's power of taxation within such statute. Id. Under such law and greater New York Charter, Laws 1901, p. 405, c. 466, benefits could not be set off against damages awarded. Id. Abandoned part of a street held not "land actually used as a cemetery." Id. The provisions of Laws 1879, p. 397, c. 310, § 1, exempting land used as a cemetery from assessments, and § 2, providing that when land shall cease to be used for such purposes assessments shall become a lien, are contradictory and no valid assessment can be made against land so used. 60. Cost and expense of improving street under Acts 1908, p. 166, c. 10, where street railway has two tracks laid, is to be taxed against the company two feet each side of the tracks and paving between the tracks. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559.

61. Steam railroad company may be assessed to pay for that portion of its right of way more than the portion between the rails and two feet on each side, and the assessment shall be the same as against natural proprietors. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559. Rule applies equally to street railways who own any part of their right of way and abutting lands. Id. Under Code Supp. § 792, providing that assessments shall be in proportion to benefits, where five of tracks of a railroad which owned two lots on each side of a street extended across such street, and at each crossing there was planking between the rails, held that though planked portions of the street were not included in estimating expense of paving, the company was not entitled to have portions of lots fronting on the paving excluded in assessing benefits. Des Moines Union R. Co. v. Des Moines [Iowa] 118 NW 293. Under Laws 1905, p. 84, c. 55, providing for levy of assessments by commissioners appointed by the court, the determination of the commissioners that a railroad right of way abutting on a street is benefited held proper. City of Seattle v. Seattle & M. R. Co., 50 Wash. 132, 96 P 958.

(§ 9) D. Procedure for authorization, levy, and confirmation of assessments.[63] See 10 C. In assessing cost of watering streets against abutting property, value of the water furnished by the city from its aqueduct maintained at its expense could be included as part of the cost. Corcoran v. Cambridge Aldermen, 199 Mass. 5, 85 NE 155. A certain square held properly a part of a street and cost of paving it was properly charged to abutting owners. Alvey v. Asheville, 146 N. C. 395, 59 SE 999. Cost of manholes and catch basins for sewers may be included in assessment against abutting property though they also drain the street, and Code, § 819, expressly provides that cost of sewers at street intersections may be taxed against abutting property. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. 64. Municipal Incorporation Act (St. 1883, p. 226, c. 49, § 771), providing a method of assessing adjoining property for street improvements, is repealed so far as inconsistent with St. 1885, p. 147, c. 153. Millsap v. Balfour [Cal.] 97 P 668. Municipal Corporation Act, § 871, is a general law for cities of the sixth class enacted pursuant to Const. art. 11, § 12, making it the duty of the legislature to vest in corporate authorities power to assess for municipal purposes. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. So far as concerns cities of the third class, all prior legislation relative to construction of sewers and assessments therefor, Laws 1890, c. 7; Laws 1891, c. 160; Laws 1893, c. 70; Laws 1899, c. 126; Laws 1901, c. 113; Laws 1903, c. 27 is repealed by Laws 1903 c. 124, as to initiation and enforcement of assessment. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956. Erroneous construction of a law by city authorities whereby the city paid a portion of the cost of repaving a street which should have been paid by special assessment against abutting owners will not estop the city from making an assessment for new paving under a subsequent law. Carstens v. Fond du Lac, 137 Wis. 465, 119 NW 117.

65. Laws 1905, p. 84 c. 55, providing for appointment of commissioners to levy assessments, held not void as delegating legislative power to levy assessments to others than corporate authorities. City of Seattle v. Seattle & M. R. Co., 50 Wash. 132, 96 P 958.

66. Assessment for construction of a sewer was not erroneous because the commissioner first classified the property and applied a different rate to different classes. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674. An assessment imposed by a drainage district on a town is not subject to the objection that it is a tax levied for extraordinary purposes and not for ordinary maintenance of roads and bridges, and therefore cannot be levied without consent of the town auditors. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Com., 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. Under Buffalo City Charter, Laws 1895, p. 1723, c. 805, owners of premises can be required to lay or relay sidewalks only by resolution of the common council, and when ordered by the board of public works assessments therefore are void. Morey v. Buffalo, 59 Misc. 603, 111 NYS 463. Under Municipal Corporation Act, § 871, local authorities held to have power to determine as of what date assessments shall be made. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Where engineers were chosen by an officer in authority to appoint city engineers at a time when no one else was in possession of the office and had been recognized by city authorities and had performed their duties, there was substantial compliance with Gen. St. 1901, § 10,009, to authorize an assessment for an improvement based on an estimate made by such engineers. City of Abilene v. Lambing [Kan.] 96 P 838. Under a statute providing that assessments for taking land for widening a street and changing the grade must be collected to pay awards before the city has a right to possession, assessments proceed on the assumption that street will be widened and regraded. In re Third, Fourth & Fifth Ave., 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, §§ 106, 75-153, c. 120, § 191, the requirement as to date of filing delinquent list is not mandatory. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Under St. 1904, p. 336, c. 384, § 3, requiring Taunton sewer commissioners to levy assessments for "estimated average cost" of the improvement and stating how assessments are to be made, held commissioners were not entitled to delay levy of general assessment until completion of the whole system, but it was their duty to levy assessments for completed sections as soon as it could be reasonably done. Dunn v. Crossman, 200 Mass. 252, 86 NE 313.

67. Special tax against a lot for the cost ordinance or resolution providing for the assessment must conform to statutory requirements.[70] Several improvements may be provided for by one ordinance.[71] Where one method of procedure is adopted, it must be adhered to.[72] Statutory requirements as to notice to owners[73] and hearing thereunder must be complied with.[74]

In some states provision is made for classification of lands for certain assessments,[75] and such procedure must conform to statutory requirements,[76] and classiof the sidewalk in front of it instead of for the proportion of the cost of the walk according to the frontage of the lot, as provided by Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, is void. People v. Hennessy, 234 Ill. 14, 84 NE 692. Provision in Buffalo City charter that assessment must precede making of contract held not to apply to improvement specified in Laws 1902, p. 136, c. 568, § 1, since proceeds of bonds issued under the statute and not the taxes constitute the primary fund to pay for the work. People v. Buffalo, 115 NYS 1057. Under Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, authorizing a city to apportion sewer assessments according to area of land benefited, hearing may be had by the city without violating the statute as to total cost to be assessed upon a street, property of ordering improvement, whether improvement is local, etc. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Under Code, § 1940, and Acts 30th Gen. Assem. pp. 59, 61, providing for notice to landowners and declaring that they shall be given notice and opportunity to be heard prior to reassessment, the board of supervisors may make an equitable adjustment of his claims and consider damages to his land. Howard v. Emmet County [Iowa] 118 NW 882.

68. Under Kirby's Dig. § 7871, providing that an authority conferred upon three or more persons may be exercised by a majority, held two members of a board to assess benefits cannot make a new assessment with notice to the third member. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526. Where drainage assessment was levied by unauthorized persons at a meeting held outside the district, it could not be ratified by a resolution adopted long after it had become due. People v. Schwank, 237 Ill. 40, 86 NE 631.

69. Commissioner owning land in a district organized under the farm drainage act is competent to make an assessment. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306.

70. Tax bills are void where preliminary resolution of the council did not describe the proposed work or materials to be used Coulter v. Phoenix Brick & Const. Co., 131 Mo. App. 230, 110 SW 655. Ordinance for improvement held to provide that it should be paid for by special taxation of contiguous property under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 431, c. 24, § 541. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407. Ordinance under Kansas City Charter, art. 10, § 33, levying assessments for maintaining parks, held not objectionable as stating purposes of the assessment too indefinitely. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115.

71. City may combine in one ordinance widening of street and changing of grade, and each lot liable for assessment should bear its share of the expense to the extent of benefits received from the improvement considered as an entirety. In re Third, Fourth & Fifth Ave., 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075.

72. Where a city elects to order an improvement by unanimous vote of its council, regardless of petition by owners and limitations contained therein, it cannot subsequently fall back on the petition to uphold an assessment otherwise unauthorized and urge that petitioners were estopped to deny authority to levy the assessment. Schuchard v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1106.

73. No further notice than that provided in Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a12, for hearing by county supervisors on apportionment by commissioners of expense of drain, is necessary where commissioners increase assessment of certain tracks. Gray v. Anderson [Iowa] 118 NW 526. The right of property owners to object to a proposed assessment or reassessment under Portland City Charter, § 400, and have objections heard and determined by the council, is a substantial right and all requirements of the law respecting such right must be complied with. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942.

74. Under St. 1903, p. 381, c. 268, providing that city clerk shall at next regular meeting of council after expiration of time for filing objections to assessment lay said assessment and objections before the council, objectors must take notice that objections will be heard at the next regular meeting after expiration of 30 days for filing objections. Stoner v. Los Angeles City Council [Cal. App.] 97 P 692. Where a city council fails to take action at next regular meeting on objections to an assessment as provided by St. 1903, p. 381, c. 268, it loses jurisdiction to act except by republication of notice under § 19. Id. Adjournment by county supervisors from day fixed in their notice under Code Supp. 1907, § 1989a12, for hearing of apportionment of expense from a drain, held not to deprive them of jurisdiction nor require further notice. Gray v. Anderson [Iowa] 118 NW 526.

75. Under Acts 30th Gen. Assem. p. 64, c. 68, §§ 12, 19, providing for a commission to classify and assess lands for construction of drains, etc., railroad assessments are distinct and their property should not be classified in tracts of 40 acres or less. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380.

76. Code Supp. § 1989—a12, requiring commissioners in drainage assessment proceedings to inspect and classify land within 20 days after their appointment, does not require them to make their report within 20 days after appointment. Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 v. Hamilton County [Iowa] 118 NW 432. Where assessment

fication must be made by persons authorized.[77] In some states provision is made for the creation of assessment districts in a manner prescribed.[78] What land is within such district depends on the creation thereof.[79] Where an assessment district is improperly defined, the remedy of the owner is to sue for cancellation of tax bills and the issue of new bills on a district properly defined.[80] Where an assessment district has been fixed by legislative act and apportionment of cost of an improvement has been made, an owner cannot object that his property has not been benefited the amount assessed against it.[81]

In making an assessment the property assessed must be definitely described[82] and the owner identified.[83] As a general rule, in assessing benefits, each tract or parcel must be considered separately,[84] and the determination of the council or assessing board on the question of benefits is conclusive in the absence of fraud or mistake.[85] In some states the verdict must set off damages against benefits.[86] An under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, was extended against lands according to the classification made when the district was organized, no notice need be given landowners and no new classification is necessary, but the tax must be extended on the classification adopted. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306.

77. That commissioners who classified lands for assessment, under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, §§ 75-153, were owners within the drainage district did not invalidate the classification. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

78. Under Ann. St. 1906, p. 4854, providing that assessment districts shall be made by drawing a line midway between the street to be improved and the next parallel street, held the parallel street need not parallel the street being improved the whole district of the improvement but the line must deflect. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. St. Louis Shovel Co., 211 Mo. 524, 111 SW 86. Under such statute held also that the parallel street is not required to be at least within 600 feet of the street being improved. Id.

79. Under St. Louis Charter (Laws 1906, p. 4854), providing for assessment districts where lots fronting on a street being improved run through to the next parallel street, the whole lot is in the district. State v. St. Louis, 211 Mo. 591, 111 SW 89. Where an original lot has been subdivided, each subdivision is a lot within St. Louis Charter (Ann. St. 1906, p. 4854) relative to creation of assessment districts. Id.

80. State v. St. Louis, 211 Mo. 591, 111 SW 89.

81. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. St. Louis Shovel Co., 211 Mo. 524, 111 SW 86.

82. Under Laws 1897, p. 400, c. 414, and Laws 1896, p. 803, c. 908, amended by Laws 1899, p. 1594, c. 712, § 3, an assessment of property as "N. Division St." without other location or description did not specify the property so as to render its identification possible and was fatally defective. Allter v. St. Johnsville, 130 App. Div. 297, 114 NYS 855. In assessing property the council may properly recognize the descriptions of property assessed according to ownership. Mitchell v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 881.

83. An assessment describing the owner as a firm or company is no assessment against a member of such firm or company who is the owner. Allter v. St. Johnsville, 130 App. Div. 297, 114 NYS 355.

84. A board of public works in assessing benefits and damages is bound to consider each tract separately and not assume that benefits are equal to cost of doing the work. Loewenbach v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 119 NW 888. Under a statute requiring property to be assessed the value of benefits, assessors should make a fair and just estimate of the benefits to each piece or tract, considering its value, area, and every other factor. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526. Under Bridgeport Charter, §§ 2, 47, 48, 59, authorizing the council to lay out highways, appraise benefits and damages, etc., where an avenue was widened and a bridge built and the effect thereof was to prevent an owner to get from his premises to the city without going some distance, held, in determining the special benefit, the injurious effect on the property resulting from the peculiar condition, as well as beneficial effect from other causes, should be considered. Park City Yacht Club v. Bridgeport [Conn.] 70 A 631. Whether buildings on the property are benefited and to what extent are questions for the assessment board. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526.

85. Where a council has determined the extent to which property is benefited and its proportionate share of the cost, its decision is final in the absence of fraud or mistake except as appeal is provided by statute, or unless it has proceeded on an erroneous principle of law. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942. Under Portland City Charter, §§ 389, 390, authorizing the council to establish sewer districts and assess cost of sewers against property benefited, and making its action final, its action in establishing a district and determining the question of benefits and making an assessment is conclusive on collateral attack, unless fraudulent on its face. Beckett v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 659. Under Laws 1903, p. 55, c. 15; Laws 1899, p. 147, c. 12; amended by Laws 1903, p. 48, c. 15, a finding by the council that a benefit exceeds an assessment is at least prima facie evidence of such fact, and an owner not having rebutted it cannot object to judgment for the assessment. City of Beaumont v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 950.

86. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. §§ 775, assessment is presumed regularly and properly made,[87] and objections of property owners must be presented within the period prescribed.[88] The filing of objections is not sufficient to require a reassessment [89] or to render the subsequent order of confirmation void.[90]

Essential prerequisites to assessment. See 10 C. L. 1333—Proceedings whereby property is burdened with special assessments are in invitum and must conform strictly to law.[91] The assessment must be levied under a valid ordinance [92] and must conform thereto.[93] An assessment based on a void condemnation judgment is void.[94] Failure of the contractor to do the work according to the contract renders tax bills against abutting owners void.[95] Under a rule requiring that an assessment precede the contract, the fact that the contract is void does not invalidate the assessment.[96] An assessment for paving is not void because no credit is given for paving taken.[97]

789 et seq., providing that when a street is widened compensation shall be paid by special assessment on property benefited, and compensation for property taken shall be found irrespective of benefit, each lot must bear its proportion of the expense according to benefits and the verdict must offset benefits against damages. In re Third, Fourth and Fifth Ave., 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075.

87. One objecting thereto has the burden of proof. In re Johnson Drainage Dist. No. 9 [Iowa] 118 NW 380. Under Starr & C. Ann. St. Supp. 1902, p. 182, providing that no local assessment shall be levied until land necessary to make it has been acquired, and § 9, making recommendation of the board prima facie evidence of compliance with preliminary requirements, held where assessments have been levied, an objector has the burden to prove that title has not been acquired. City of East St. Louis v. Davis, 233 Ill. 553, 84 NE 674. Where order of county court in proceedings for confirmation of drainage assessments did not recite jurisdictional facts, it will not be presumed in proceeding to compel the city to levy taxes to pay the assessment that the court had jurisdiction to enter judgment of confirmation of the assessment. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. A recital in an assessment that it is made in proportion to benefits is not impeached by the fact that the result reached is the same as would have been reached by using the front foot rule. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

88. Under Code, §§ 823, 824, providing that objections to assessments shall be filed within 20 days after notice and that objections not before the council at the hearing are waived, an amendment to an objection filed after hearing will not be considered though notice of the amendment was given at the hearing. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276. "Hear and determine" in Portland Reincorporation Act, § 400, prescribing manner of reassessment where original assessment is set aside, means a judicial determination of an issue of fact and was not complied with by reference of objections to committee on streets. Applegate v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 890. Owners of lands classified for assessments for drainage, under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, §§ 75-153, who are notified of the classification, should then object and cannot raise the objection on application for judgment for the tax. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Under Laws 1899, p. 373, c. 150, amended by Laws 1901, p. 388, c. 107, where property owners appeared and objected to an assessment and improvement after notice of completion of the improvement and assessment, he lost none of his rights by failure to object to preliminary order for the improvement. City of Pueblo v. Colorado Realty Co. [Colo.] 99 P 318.

89. Filing of objections insufficient to vacate assessment and require impaneling of a new jury under D. C. Rev. St. § 263, to reassess. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6.

90. As against attack of persons not parties to original objections. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6.

91. Brosnahan v. Pitcher, 133 Mo. App. 660, 113 SW 1133. An attempt to subject property to special assessment is a proceeding in invitum to uphold which on direct attack it must appear from the record that statutory requirements have been complied with. Applegate v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 890.

92. A valid ordinance is essential to the validity of an assessment for an improvement. In re Third, Fourth and Fifth Avenues, 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075. It is essential to the validity of an assessment that it be levied under a valid statute. Before a statute will be declared void, however, a complaining party must show just grievance. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697. Tax bills arising under an invalid ordinance providing for an improvement are void. Rackliff v. Peters [Mo. App.] 115 SW 503.

93. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, providing for making of local improvements, a special assessment to enable a city to acquire strips of land for a sewer system, based on an ordinance providing for condemnation of right of way for sewers, but not providing for construction of sewers, is void. City of Waukegan v. Burnett, 234 Ill. 460, 84 NE 1061.

94. In re Third, Fourth & Fifth Avenues, 49 Wash. 109, 94 P 1075. Opinion modified. In re Third, Fourth & Fifth Avenues, 49 49 Wash. 109, 95 P 862.

95. Coulter v. Phoenix Brick & Const. Co., 131 Mo. App. 230, 110 SW 655.

96. Since Laws 1891, p. 223, c. 105, requires that an assessment must precede a contract for the work, the making of a contract in

Defective or excessive assessments.[See 10 C. L. 1333]—As a general rule, defects or irregularities which are not jurisdictional will not invalidate an assessment,[98] especially if timely objection thereto is not made,[99] but if jurisdictional requirements have not been complied with, the assessment is void.[1] Such defects, however, must clearly appear.[2] An assessment will not be held void where the objection involves only a trifling sum.[3] It is presumed that a city council did its duty and levied assessments according to benefits accruing to abutting property,[4] and even if an assessment is made arbitrarily and without reference to actual benefits, the entire assessment should not be declared void, but the court should correct it.[5] Error in apportionment may be corrected in a court by proper apportionment.[6] In New York an illegal assessment may be annulled on certiorari and a new one directed to be made.[7] violation of statute does not avoid the assessment. People v. Buffalo, 115 NYS 1057.

97. Assessment for paving held not void because the old pavement was taken away by city officers and no credit given therefor to abutting owners. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

98. Under Ann. St. 1906, p. 4227, providing that no assessment shall be void because of informality in making assessment or in tax lists, etc., held, where valid assessments of drainage district taxes were entered on the tax books, they were valid, notwithstanding irregularity in the entry, extension and certificate of assessment on the tax books, etc. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Failure of superintendent of streets to certify to assessors, before assessment of cost of watering streets against abutting owners, a list of streets, number of lineal feet, and amount of assessment on each estate as required by law, is not fatal where the assessors had such a list. Corcoran v. Cambridge Alderman, 199 Mass. 5, 85 NE 155. Mere irregularities in levy of a drainage tax are not grounds for refusing to enforce its collection. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

99. Under Code, §§ 810, 824, if a property owner does not object before the city council that adjacent property was not assessed, the objection is waived, it being an irregularity and not jurisdictional. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. Abutting owners held estopped from questioning validity of assessment for paving where they failed to protest against the improvement until all proceedings looking to it had been completed and the contract let. Kerker v. Bocher, 20 Okl. 729, 95 P 981. Where owners have knowledge that paving is being done with intention of levying assessment, and permit work to progress, and receive the benefits without protesting to the council, they are estopped to set up any irregularity when they seek to escape payment except jurisdictional defects. Id. Objections to the regularity of proceedings of a city council in levying assessments which do not go to the jurisdiction of the council are waived by failure to appear and object in the manner prescribed by statute. Seattle & Puget Sound Packing Co. v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1093. Irregularity in an assessment for paving by including property in excess of a depth of 150 feet held not waived by failure of property owners to object, where proposed schedule did not disclose the excessive assessment. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

1. Where proceedings for paving a street were jurisdictionally defective and a property owner gave timely notice that he would contest the assessment, he was not required to enjoin the improvement but could raise the objection in a suit to foreclose the assessment. Zorn v. Warren-Scharf Asphalt Pav. Co. [Ind. App.] 84 NE 509. Objections going to the jurisdiction of the council are not waived thereby. Seattle & Puget Sound Packing Co. v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1093. The fact that property has been benefited will not render the owner liable for an assessment if proceedings are illegal. Municipal Sec. Corp. v. Gates, 130 Mo. App. 552, 109 SW 85 Where judgment in condemnation determined that certain property was damaged in excess of benefits, the city in subsequently assessing benefits exceeded its jusdiction, and the owner could sue to cancel the assessment. Id. Laws 1905, c. 150, providing that when a city council in good faith makes an assessment it shall be valid, is not intended to include jurisdictional defects, and failure to follow the method prescribed of making improvements by assessment is jurisdictional. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956.

2. Even if objections to the jurisdiction of a city council to make assessments may be made at any time, it must clearly appear that the council was without jurisdiction, and not merely that there were errors or irregularities in the poceedings. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

3. Where total assessment was over $27,000 and assessment against objecting owners was over $1,200, an objection involving less than $5 would not be considered "De minimis non curat lex." City of Chicago v. Wilshire, 238 Ill. 317, 87 NE 383. Under Code Supp. 1902, § 792a, forbidding assessment of abutting property for more than 25 per cent of its value, an excessive assessment should be reduced, but does not render the entire assessment void. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

4. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. To defeat the return of assessors on the ground that it is unjust, there should be a clear preponderance of evidence against the correctness of the return. City of Seattle v. Felt, 50 Wash. 323, 97 P 226.

5. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

6. Huesman v. Dersch, 33 Ky. L. R. 77, 109 SW 319.

7. Under Laws 1891, p. 153, c. 105, provid-

Assessment roll or report. See 10 C. L. 1334—A statute making a duly certified assessment roll prima facie evidence of the regularity of the assessment does not apply where it is irregular on its face.[8] In special assessment proceedings, the court may, without losing jurisdiction, refer the roll filed by the commissioner back to him, with leave to make a new assessment in accordance with the order for the original assessment.[9]

Confirmation of assessments. See 10 C. L. 1334—Questions going to the authority of the council to make an assessment[10] and to the regularity of the proceedings must be raised on application for confirmation thereof.[11] On application for confirmation, one objecting has the burden to overcome the presumption in favor of the validity of the assessment.[12] He must exercise proper diligence to procure his evidence.[13] Judgment of confirmation must be made at the appropriate term.[14] Heirs at law of an owner are bound by the confirmation of an award where the owner dies after a verdict assessing benefits and pending an order to show cause why the award should not be confirmed.[15] There is no authority for abatement of an assessment which has been properly confirmed.[16]

ing for canceling an assessment for illegality and for correcting certain defects, the court may, on certiorari, direct that illegal assessments be annulled and that a new assessment be made on correct principles. People v. Buffalo, 115 NYS 1057.

8. Laws 1897, p. 408, c. 414, making assessment roll properly certified prima facie evidence of regularity of the assessment, right to levy the tax, etc., applies only where irregularity does not appear on face of assessment roll. Aliter v. St. Johnsville, 130 App. Div. 297, 114 NYS 355. Such section does not apply to matters improperly interpolated into the roll. Id. Under Laws 1897, p. 403, c. 414, requiring assessment roll to be prepared by assessors and filed with the clerk, and that the board of trustees shall prepare tax levy, held, the village assessment roll including local assessment was fatally defective, as such assessment had no place therein. Id.

9. Village of Donovan v. Donovan, 236 Ill. 636, 86 NE 575. Where the court in assessment proceedings referred the roll back to the commissioner with leave to make a new assessment in accordance with the order for the original assessment and no objections were raised to the filing of the new roll, whether the court erred in permitting it to be filed in lieu of the original could not be raised in the supreme court on appeal from confirmation. Id.

10. Questions whether council had authority to establish a grade, or whether grade established injured abutting property, must be presented on application for confirmation of the assessment. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599.

11. Where existing pavement was of value and was not considered in making assessment of cost of new paving, the objection must be raised on application for confirmation of the assessment. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599. Objections to proceedings under a subsequent ordinance for an improvement based on a prior ordinance must be made on application for confirmation of the assessment under the subsequent ordinance, and not by bill to enjoin collection of the assessment. Id.

12. One objecting to confirmation of an assessment levied under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, §§ 507-605, for street improvement, including sidewalk at street intersection, on the ground that the sidewalk at the intersection was in good repair at the time the ordinance was passed, has the burden to prove such fact, as it is presumed that the assessment was properly spread. City of Chicago v. Wilshire, 238 Ill. 317, 87 NE 383. That in ordinance for a system of water mains mistakes in designating the streets is not ground for refusing confirmation of assessments, where location of the streets is made certain by parol. Village of Donovan v. Donovan, 236 Ill. 636, 86 NE 575. Record of a village board showing that ordinance for an improvement was passed is sufficient to render the ordinance admissible in proceedings to confirm the assessment. Id.

13. One objecting to confirmation of an assessment on the ground that the sidewalk was in good repair when the ordinance was passed, who failed to show that he had exercised reasonable diligence to procure evidence of that fact, was properly denied a continuance to procure such evidence. City of Chicago v. Wilshire, 238 Ill. 317, 87 NE 383.

14. Where the term at which judgment of confirmation of an assessment was entered has expired, the court loses jurisdiction. But where the parties voluntarily appear at a subsequent term, the court may be invested with jurisdiction, except as provided by Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 24, § 562. People v. Noonan, 238 Ill. 303, 87 NE 367.

18. A reassessment authorized by Portland City Charter, § 400, where the council is in doubt as to validity of the original assessment supersedes the original made under § 394, and where a petition for a writ to review the former assigned no errors as to statute,[19] made within a reasonable time,[20] and for a purpose specified.[21] A reassessment is not precluded by the fact that an owner has paid the original assessment.[22] Where a landowner's property is not liable for an assessment because the work was not authorized by ordinance, there can be no reassessment.[23] Where the purpose of the power to make a reassessment is to provide curative procedure, the power is not exhausted by one attempt.[24] In making a reassessment the procedure prescribed by statute must be observed and followed.[25] The ordinance need not disclose the method of assessment,[26] but it must appear to have been made to the extent of the respective and proportionate shares of the full value of the improvement.[27] It must be made by the proper tribunal.[28] Objections of landowners must be made in proper time [29] and must disclose wherein the assessment is unjust or void.[30] A second assess-other matters, the auditor was not required to include in his writ proceedings culminating in the first assessment. Michell v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 881.

19. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8716, requiring appointment by the court of freeholders to reassess benefits upon a petition of a property holder, and making their finding final, if void as depriving courts of judicial powers, did not render the entire statute void. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

20. Held invalid where not made within three years. City of Olimpia v. Knox, 49 Wash. 537, 95 P 1090.

21. Cobbey's Ann. St. 1907, § 7992, providing for reassessment of property where assessments have been declared void, does not authorize reassessment for benefit of purchaser at a tax sale who fails to recover from the property because of illegality of the assessment. Barkley v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 398. In proceeding for supplemental assessment, evidence held insufficient to show a deficiency in the original assessment. City of Chicago v. Hurford, 238 Ill. 552, 87 NE 325.

22. Where assessments for benefits in drainage proceedings were held unconstitutional, the fact that a landowner had paid his assessment held not to prevent reassessment under Acts 30th General Assembly, pp. 60, 65. Howard v. Emmet County [Iowa] 118 NW 882.

23. Under Act March 23, 1881. Burnett v. Boonton, 75 N. J. Law, 467, 70 A 67.

24. The purpose of Portland City Charter, § 400, giving the city council power to make a reassessment where a first assessment has been annulled by a court or otherwise, is to provide curative procedure, and the power of the council is not exhausted by one attempt to make a reassessment. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942.

25. Resolntion for reassessment under Portland City Charter, § 400, held sufficient. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942. Under Portland City Charter, § 400, a reassessment must be made in accordance with benefits, and that each parcel shall be assessed only its share of the cost, a reassessment ordinance showing that such assessment had not been made held void. Id. Under Portland City Charter, § 400, relative to reasessments where it appears that a committee to which the council referred objections presenting questions of fact did not report upon them until after the reassessment ordinance had been adopted, the reassessment was premature. Id. Under Portland City Charter, § 400, providing for reassessment and notice thereof and hearing of property owners, the procedure on such hearing and requisites of findings, etc., stated. Id. Under Portland City Charter, § 400, and the charter of 1898, relative to reassessments and procedure thereon, held, where a remonstrance was filed against the original proceeding, it was for the council to determine whether it was signed by the requisite number of owners so as to bar the proceedings at the proper time, or on hearing of objections to proposed reassessment. Id. It will not be assumed by a court reviewing proceedings for reassessment that issues raised by objections to the original assessment were determined by the council adversely to objectors from the mere fact that the reassessment ordinance was passed. Id.

26. An ordinance or record of the council making a reassessment need not disclose the method of assessment. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942. If a reassessment purports to have been made according to benefits, it will not be disturbed because it does not clearly appear on its face that the council has passed on the question of benefits if under any condition the finding of the council could have been legally made. Except on appeal as provided by charter. Id.

27. A reassessment cannot be sustained where neither the ordinance authorizing it nor the records of the council show that the assessment was to the extent of the respective and proportionate shares of the full value of the improvement. Morgan v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 657. Where the land is subject to assessment on account of work done, the board of assessors may be authorized to make a new assessment in proportion to the benefits recieved, and not in excess thereof. Burnett v. Boonton, 75 N. J. Law, 467, 70 A 67.

28. Under Portland City Charter, § 400, the city council is the only tribunal authorized to make reassessment and it must appear that the council has passed on the question of benefits and applied to each lot or parcel of land, benefited its proportionate share of the cost. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942.

29. Where landowner appeared in response to notice of reassessment and did not object that drainage law, Acts 30th General Assembly, pp. 59, 61, was void because it did not require notice to landowners, he waived the objection. Howard v. Emmet County [Iowa] 118 NW 882.

30. That an owner may insist upon his right to be heard on his objections, they must set out wherein the reassessment is ment may be made to complete the improvement where the first is inadequate.[31] The power of a board of supervisors to increase drainage assessments does not authorize it to do so arbitrarily.[32] In Washington, where special benefits are set off against damages a subsequent assessment for the same improvement is unauthorized,[33] and cannot be sustained on the ground that the proceeding to assess the cost of the improvement is independent of condemnation proceedings,[34] nor can it be sustained on the ground that conditions have or may have changed since trial of the condemnation proceedings,[35] nor on the ground that the jury in the condemnation proceedings must have taken into consideration, in awarding damages, the assessment to be thereafter levied against the lots.[36]

(§ 9) F. Maturity, obligation and lien of assessments.[37]—See 10 C. L. 1336—All private rights in real property in a municipality are subject to the statutory powers of the municipality to levy assessments for local improvements,[38] and the legislature may by statute create liens for such improvements and make them superior to other liens acquired subsequent to the enactment of the statute.[39] The intention of the lawmaking power to give priority to such lien over contract liens of individuals may be implied from the language of the statute.[40] Liens for special assessments being purely statutory, the provisions govern the time of commencement,[41] as well as the time of filing.[42] The test of whether property is liable for a lien depends upon conditions at the time the improvement is made.[43] A stat-unjust or void, so that the council may know the nature of his objection, and a general objection that it is not made in accordance with benefits or that the appointment is unjust is insufficient. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942.

31. Drainage assessment. People v. Gungenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669. Under levee act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, p. 775, c. 42), money raised by a second assessment can be raised only for the payment of future obligations, and none can be assessed or raised for the purpose of paying obligations already incurred except incidental expenses necessary for the preliminary work in preparing, spreading and levying the additional or second assessment. Vandalia Levee & Drainage Dist. v. Hutchins, 234 Ill. 31, 84 NE 715. Under such act, incidental expenses must be incurred in necessary preliminary work before the assessment is spread or levied, but must be included in the original estimate and paid out of the original assessment. 38. Lybass v. Ft. Myers [Fla.] 47 S 346. The fact that Laws 1898, p. 150, under which an improvement was made, required the contractor to look to the property and owners thereof for his pay, did not preclude the city under its subsequent charter from charging the property with a lien for its share of the cost. Hughes v. Portland [Or.] 100 P 942.

39. Lybass v. Ft. Myers [Fla.] 47 S 346. Under Const. art. 8, § 2, and Gen. St. 1902, §§ 157, 1954, 2392, relative to the state school fund and authorizing it to be loaned, a mortgage in favor of the state on such fund is a superior lien to assessments for public improvements, though as to a mortgage in favor of a private individual the lien would be superior. State v. Kilburn [Conn.] 69 A 1028.

41. Knowles v. Temple, 49 Wash. 595, 96 P 1. Under Municipal Corporation Act, § 871, they are a lien from first Monday in March. City of Escondido v. Escondido Lumber, Hay & Grain Co. [Cal. App.] 97 P 197. Laws 1908, p. 172, c. 10, § 5, providing for lien of assessments, did not take effect until 90 days after expiration of the term of the legislature at which it was passed. Oklahoma City v. Shields [Okl.] 100 P 559. Under Laws 1901, p. 240, c. 118, § 1, providing that an assessment is a lien from the time the roll is placed in the hands of the officer for collection, no lien exists until such time. Knowles v. Temple, 49 Wash. 595, 96 P 1. The effect of Code, § 816, providing that special taxes are a lien from the date the clerk files the proper certificate with the county auditor, is to make such tax when duly assessed a lien, and, and if it is adjudicated that a tax cannot be levied, no lien can exist. Snouffer v. Ford [Iowa] 116 NW 1056.

42. Lien for paving under front foot rule in proceedings under Act May 23, 1889, P. L. 277, is valid where specification of lien is filed within six months after completion of work, and Act May 16, 1891, P. L. 69, providing for filing lien within six months from date of final assessment, has no application. Scranton City v. Clarke, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 128. Provisions of Act of May 23, 1889, P. L. 277, so far as they vitiate assessments under front foot rule, are not repealed by act May 16, 1891, P. L. 69. Id.

utory lien of an assessment is in the nature of a governmental tax.[44] In California, owners of separate tracts may join in a suit to cancel a lien which is separate on each tract.[45]

(§ 9) G. Payment and discharge.[46]—See 10 C. L. 1337—Funds created from the collection of special assessments are trust funds to pay for the improvement.[47] Interest upon vouchers issued ceases upon receipt by the city of assessments.[48] Whether a valid tender of payment has been made may depend on the terms of the statute [49] or general rules governing payment and tender.[50] A contractor cannot make an agreement with the tax collector to set off his own assessment against moneys to become due him.[51] Where an assessment is paid by check and discharged of record, the fact that the check was forged does not defeat the payment.[52]

(§ 9) H. Enforcement and collection.[53]—See 10 C. L. 1337—The lien acquired by the confirmation of assessments and the entry on the tax roll for collection is not impaired by the fact that no method of enforcement was provided.[54]

Mode of collection. See 10 C. L. 1337—Assessments are enforcible only against the property.[55]

Character of action and parties. See 10 C. L. 1337—Though the action provided by statute for the enforcement of special assessments is deemed statutory, when a court obtains jurisdiction it exercises general jurisdiction, and not mere statutory powers,[56] but it assumes jurisdiction only for the purposes specified.[57] As a general rule, special assessment warrants are not obligations of the city [58] unless it has

48. Where vouchers were issued to contractors in connection with local improvements, upon receipt by the city of portions of the assessment the interest ceased upon the vouchers to the payment of which the sums received were applicable. City of Chicago v. Hurford, 238 Ill. 552, 87 NE 325.

49. A tender of payment of a certificate of sale of property under an assessment to the "purchaser" under assignment of the certificate is insufficient under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 120, providing that receipt of redemption money by a purchaser shall release all claims, as the word "purchaser" means "assignee." Ambler v. Glos, 237 Ill. 637, 86 NE 1113.

57. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 42, (Farm Drainage Act), the court on appeal from classification of land for assessment, etc., takes jurisdiction merely to correct errors, and the appeal does not suspend proceeding for assessment and collection of benefits. People v. Grace, 237 Ill. 265, 86 NE 628.

58. Holders are required to look solely to the special fund. Jurey v. Seattle, 50 Wash. 272, 97 P 107. City held not liable to contractor for amount of assessments, though the council had passed resolutions requesting redemption of the lots by the county. City of Atchison v. Friend [Kan.] 96 P 348. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 269, 277, and Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 4297, the holder of street improvement bonds suing to collect an assessment and foreclose a lien against own-made enforcement of assessment impossible.[59] Where an assessment has been levied and collected by the city, the remedy of the contractor is assumpsit,[60] and where a city wrongfully diverts a special assessment fund, it becomes liable ex delicto in damages to the holders of warrants to the extent of such diversion;[61] but if a city neglect its duty to levy and collect an assessment, the remedy of the contractor is by mandamus[62] if he has performed his contract.[63] Suit for collection may be maintained by the officer authorized.[64] Owners must be joined in the manner prescribed.[65]

Pleading and proof. See 10 C. L. 1338—A petition to enforce an assessment must show that it has not been paid,[66] and there must be no variance between the description in the petition and tax bill.[67] A statute making tax bills prima facie evidence of their own validity does not affect rules of evidence.[68] It is presumed that the tax was levied for a lawful purpose and is a legal tax.[69] One objecting to an assessment has the burden to establish its invalidity.[70] An answer alleging that apportionment is bad must show that proper apportionment would be less.[71]

59. Where a city purchased several lots, which had been assessed for improvements, to be used in connection with its fire department, thus making it impossible to enforce liens for special assessments, it became absolutely liable to the contractor for the amount of the assessment bonds. City of Atchison v. Friend [Kan.] 96 P 348.

60. Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619. A city which wrongfully diverts money from funds created by special assessments is liable to the contractor for money had and received. Id. 66. Allegation in petition to enforce a special tax bill that "plaintiff is the owner of such tax bill and the same or any part thereof has not been paid" sufficiently shows nonpayment as against collateral attack on the judgment. Robinson v. Levy [Mo.] 117 SW 577. Ann. St. 1906, p. 686, providing that judgment shall not be reversed for certain omissions in pleading failure of petition to enforce a special tax bill to allege nonpayment of the bill, cannot be made the basis of collateral attack on the judgment. 68. In action to enforce a special tax bill, the bill being filed with the petition, defendant could show under general denial that the bill was void because of omission in the proceedings, Ann. St. 1906, p. 2885, making tax bill prima facie evidence of its validity, not affecting rules of evidence. Cushing v. Powell, 130 Mo. App. 576, 109 SW 1054.

People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666. Sheriff's deed on sale on a judgment to enforce an assessment, reciting publication of proper notice of sale, is sufficient without stating whether the newspaper was a daily or weekly. Robinson v. Levy [Mo.] 117 SW 577.

70. Presumed to be valid. People v. Hulin, 237 Ill. 122, 86 NE 666.

71. In action for an assessment, an answer that the apportionment is bad is insufficient unless it shows that proper apportionment would be less. Huesman v. Dersch, 33 Ky. L. R. 77, 109 SW 319.

Defenses. See 10 C. L. 1330—A proceeding to enforce an assessment must be commenced within the period of limitations prescribed.[72] Harmless irregularities are not available as a defense,[73] and valid objections may be waived.[74] A defense that drainage commissioners were never legally appointed is untenable where the tax is to be paid by the district.[75] That the work was defectively performed is a good defense,[76] or that there was an illegal departure from the plan of work resulting in special injury.[77] A statute providing that the fact that work was improperly done is no defense if it is accepted, does not deprive an owner of the defense that the work done was not the work provided for.[78] A plea of set-off must show a legal set-off.[79] In action to enforce a special tax bill, failure of the mayor to sign the bill and clerk to attest, omission to file original bills as exhibits, or the fact that the bills are void or statute barred, are matters of defense which cannot be availed of on collateral attack on the judgment.[80]

The judgment See 10 C. L. 1341 as a general rule is not a personal one.[81] Costs should not be imposed against a drainage district on sustaining demurrer to a complaint by it.[82]

72. Under Laws 1903, p. 55, c. 15; Laws 1899, p. 147, c. 12; Laws 1893, p. 48, c. 15, limitations do not commence to run against an action for an assessment until 30 days after it is due. City of Beaumont v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 950. Under Ann. St. 1906, p. 3942, an action to recover drainage assessments must be commenced within five years after delinquency. State v. Wilson [Mo.] 115 SW 549. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 1150, action to enforce assessments must be brought within ten years, and one who paid them and became subrogated to the right of the city to the lien had no greater rights than the city. Childs v. Smith [Wash.] 99 P 304. Bill to charge a municipality as trustee under an act which required it to levy and collect taxes within a certain improvement district and from the fund pay interest on bonds, which shows that the municipality has refused for twenty-five years to do anything, and that the bonds matured eight years before suit brought, shows laches defeating the suit. Eddy v. San Francisco [C. C. A.] 162 F 44.

73. Where objections on sale of land for drainage tax raise questions which can have no possible effect on the validity of the tax, the court may properly strike them from the files. People v. Sullivan, 238 Ill. 386, 87 NE 306.

74. In a proceeding to enforce an assessment, an objection that it was levied to pay a debt already incurred without right is waived by a stipulation that it was levied before any liability or indebtedness was incurred. People v. Gunzenhauser, 237 Ill. 262, 86 NE 669.

75. In proceedings to collect a drainage assessment, a contention that drainage commissioners were never legally appointed and are at most merely de facto officers and have no right to compel payment is untenable where the tax is to be paid to the district and not to them personally. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394.

76. Where a city has been enjoined from levying an assessment on the ground that the work was defectively performed, the contractor cannot recover from abutting owners on a quantum meruit though his offer to reconstruct the work was refused by the city. Snouffer v. Grove [Iowa] 116 NW 1056.

77. Abutting owner not liable for assessment bill where illegal departure from requirements and specifications for construction of street resulting in special injury. Change whereby surface drainage changed. Philadelphia v. Bilyeu, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 562. Owner not estopped from objecting to assessment bill where illegal departure from plan when change might have been certified to by chief engineer and surveyor, and owner had no knowledge of same. Id. No ratification and waiver of special injury because public work accepted by city officials. Id. Act April 19, 1843, P. L. 342, as to defenses, no bar to objection to assessment where illegal departure in plan of improvement. Id.

78. Laws 1901, pp. 110, 114, amending Loc. Imp. Act, § 66, 83 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, c. 24, §§ 572, 589), providing that it is no defense that work was improperly done if it has been accepted, though valid as applied to work accepted after July 1, 1901, cannot deprive a property owner of the defense that the work done was not the work provided for in the ordinance where such defense was complete when the act took effect. People v. Gage, 233 Ill. 447, 84 NE 616.

79. A plea of set-off in a proceeding to enforce a lien that the grade of the sidewalk had been changed, necessitating filling in, held insufficient because not showing damage or that the grade was not one established by the council as required. Nickels v. Frankfort Councilmen, 33 Ky. L. R. 918, 111 SW 706.

80. Robinson v. Levy [Mo.] 117 SW 577.

81. A judgment for an assessment is not personal against the landowner because it recites that "defendant is indebted to the city" where it directs amount to be levied against the property. Robinson v. Levy [Mo.] 117 SW 577.

82. On sustaining a demurrer to a complaint by commissioners of a drainage district to recover amount of benefits to land, it was improper to award execution, for Sale and redemption. See 10 C. L. 1341—Proceedings for sale must conform strictly to statutory requirements.[88] A tax sale is void where the statute as to assessments failed to provide when each instalment was payable.[84] An order of sale may not be void because it fails to provide for redemption.[85] A decree of sale is conclusive as to questions which should have been raised during the proceedings.[86] Completion of the improvement is not a condition precedent to the sale of property to pay assessments.[87] Under some systems the sale for taxes merges all general and special taxes in one proceeding.[88] A city may properly appropriate money for the purchase of delinquent property.[89]

(§ 9) I. Recovery back of assessments paid.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1342—Proceedings to recover back excess assessments paid must be brought within the period prescribed.[91] Excess assessments belong to all who have contributed to the fund.[92] Purchasers of land who are required to pay additional assessment on reapportionment after purchase have recourse against their vendor on his warranty.[93] In Iowa, provision is made for the refunding of assessments to abutting owners when a street railway company pays a portion of the cost of paving.[94] costs against the district. Commissioners of Vermilion Special Drainage Dist. v. Shockey, 238 Ill. 237, 87 NE 335.

83. Making demand in writing that city treasurer sell land as subject to lien of street improvement is, under St. 1893, p. 36, c. 21, § 5, a condition precedent to the right of a bondholder to have the property sold, and the demand must refer to the exact property subject to sale. Where only the fee of land is subject to the lien, a demand to sell a fee and easement is insufficient. Fox v. Workman [Cal.] 100 P 246.

84. Act Feb. 10, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 834, c. 150), § 5, defective. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6. Where act to remedy defect had not been passed at time of sale (Act July 1, 1902 [32 Stat. at L. 616, c. 1352]). Id.

85. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 2838, relative to apportionment warrants and sales thereunder, a judgment foreclosing such warrant held not void because the order of sale failed to povide for redemption especially where there was no offer to redeem within the two years allowed therefor. Maypother v. Gast, 33 Ky. L. R. 395, 110 SW 308. Owner held not prejudiced by form of the judgment where mortgagees of property intervened. Id.

86. Decree of sale in suit to sell land for delinquent drainage reassessment precludes objections on a subsequent bill to enjoin the sale that the owner is entitled to a credit and that reassessment was not properly ordered. Such objections should have been raised in the former suit. Harrington v. Dickinson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 996, 118 NW 931.

87. Sale of property for delinquent assessment, assessed by ordinance under Kansas City Charter, art. 10, § 33, and art. 10, § 8, requiring at least one park in each district, will not be enjoined because parks are not entirely completed. Corrigan v. Kansas City, 211 Mo. 608, 111 SW 115.

91. Under Seattle City Charter, art. 8, § 17, limiting right to recover excess assessments paid to two years, where no demand was made for four years, owner held barred from recovering any portion of the excess. Miller v. Seattle, 50 Wash. 252, 97 P 55.

92. Under City Charter, art. 8, § 17, the excess of funds provided by assessment remaining after all expenses have been paid belongs to all who contributed to the fund in proportion to the amount of their original assessment, and not to a delinquent who paid in nearly the entire balance after the cost of the improvement had been paid. Miller v. Seattle, 50 Wash. 252, 97 P 55. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, § 590, providing for abatement of assessment if cost of improvement was less than the amount assessed, it may be shown at the hearing provided for that a right of way not provided for was paved, and the cost of such paving may be credited pro rata on the assessment. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599.

93. Comley v. American Standard Asphalt Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 125. In a suit to set aside proceedings under which property was sold to satisfy assessments, upon setting aside such proceedings the plainitff must return the amount of assessments paid by the purchaser. Kieffer v. Victor Land Co. [Or.] 98 P 877.

94. Under Code, § 835, providing that when a street railway lays its tracks on a paved street it shall pay into the city treasury the value of paving between its tracks, which money shall be refunded to abutting owners, a city which owns the pavement, or a street railway company whose rights have been forfeited, held not abutting owners. City of Oskaloosa v. Oskaloosa Trac. & L. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 736. Under this statute there can be no recovery which is not to be refunded to abutting owners. Id. The determination by the council of the value of the paving held not conclusive. Id. Code Supp. 1907, § 835, amending Code, § 835, relative to appeal, relates only to determination of value of paving by the council and not

(§ 9) J. Remedies by injunction or other collateral attack, and grounds therefor.[95] See 10 C. L. 1342—Defects rendering an assessment void, such as lack of jurisdiction of the proceedings[96] or failure to follow statutory requirements in levying an assessment, are available on collateral attack,[97] but the collection of an assessment will not be enjoined for mere irregularities in procedure[98] which do not go to the jurisdiction,[99] nor for grounds which have been waived by failure to present them in proper time [1] and manner [2] nor for objections which an owner is to fixing of liability of the company to persons entitled to recover. Id.

96. If a city council is without jurisdiction to levy an assessment, the question may be raised at any time and in any kind of proceedings. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. Injunction will lie to restrain a city council from proceeding under color of right to reassess special taxes and relevy the same upon property when they have no authority to do so. Barkley v. Lincoln [Neb.] 117 NW 398. A suit by a taxpayer to enjoin a threatened assessment against the city for a debt exceeding the constitutional limitation is not premature. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47. Though an answer in a suit to enjoin an assessment denies many of the allegations of the complaint, yet, if affirmative allegations show the assessment to be void, judgment is properly rendered for plaintiff on sustaining a demurrer to the answer and declination of defendant to plead further. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Ballard, 50 Wash. 123, 96 P 956.

97. Municipal authorities may be enjoined from doing threatened acts which will result in misappropriation of public funds and entail on taxpayers the expense of litigating void claims. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47. The question of notice in inviting proposals for the work is jurisdictional and may be raised. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484. Where assessment for township ditch is in excess of benefits conferred, its collection may be enjoined notwithstanding trustees had jurisdiction to order improvement and all proceedings were regular. Stemen v. Hizey, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 601. Where the complaining owner alleges that the assessment laid upon his land is grossly in excess of the benefits conferred, injunction will lie notwithstanding it is directed against the action of a judicial board, and in such a case a court of equity may do justice even though no error is found in the proceedings. Stemen v. Hizey, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 347.

98. In street opening proceeding where necessity for opening street and value of property taken was determined by different juries and the city and parties whose property was taken did not object, held owners assessed for benefits could not raise such objection in suit to enjoin enforcement of assessment. Boussneur v. Detroit, 153 Mich. 585, 15 Det. Leg. N. 568, 117 NW 220. Judgments in local assessment proceedings under the Charter of the City of St. Paul stand upon the same basis as judgments in ordinary tax proceedings and cannot be collaterally impeached except where the jurisdiction of the court is collaterally attacked. Pieper v. MacLaren, 106 Minn. 30, 118 NW 60. In suit to enjoin enforcement of an assessment, the fact that it was commenced before acceptance by owners of property taken of compensation so that such acceptance was not admissible to show consent, was immaterial since they could waive irregularities and the injunction suit could not deprive them of that right. Boussneur v. Detroit, 153 Mich. 585, 15 Det. Leg. N. 568, 117 NW 220. Judgment in local assessment proceedings cannot be attacked for irregularities particularly as to statement of the amount of the judgment. Pieper v. MacLaren, 106 Minn. 30, 118 NW 60, following Willard v. Hodapp, 98 Minn. 269, 107 NW 954. The manner of accepting or rejecting bids and letting contracts is purely administrative in character and cannot be attacked in a suit to enjoin levy and collection of an assessment therefor. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484.

99. No objection can be raised in a collateral attack to proceedings for drainage assessments except such as question the jurisdiction of the court. Spring Creek Drainage Dist. v. Joliet Com'rs, 238 Ill. 521, 87 NE 394. Acts 1905, p. 406, requires the successful bidder to enter into a written contract and give bond to the approval of the city authorities. The highest bidder signed a proposal and contract and submitted it with a bond, but the city did not authorize any official to execute the contract and the bond was not formally approved. Held the irregularities did not affect the jurisdiction and were not available in a suit to enjoin levy and collection of an assessment to pay for the work. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484. An action by an owner to enjoin a drainage assessment is a collateral attack and cannot be maintained unless the assessment is void. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255. A suit to enjoin the levy and collection of an assessment for an improvement already completed is a collateral attack on the proceedings of the city relating to the improvement, and only jurisdictional defects are available. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484. Question of propriety of allowance by the city for extra work done is not jurisdictional and cannot be tried in a suit to enjoin levy and collection of an assessment for the improvement. Id.

1. Laws 1903 § 130, c. 122, p. 207, forbidding suit to enjoin special assessments after 30 days from time the amount thereof has been ascertained, applies where assessments have been relevied and notwithstanding suit to enjoin the levy is based on estopped to assert.[3] Nor will equity entertain a bill for the sole purpose of vacating an assessment and restraining the collection of a tax as unauthorized.[4] That others over whom the court had no jurisdiction were assessed, would not entitle one to restrain an assessment against his own land if the court had jurisdiction over him.[5] In a suit to enjoin an assessment, all proceedings by which it was levied are presumed regular.[6] A tax payer's action to enjoin collection of an assessment can a judgment holding the original levy void. Kansas City v. McGrew [Kan.] 96 P 484. Where proceedings under a prior ordinance were vacated and contract for the work abandoned and no irregularity was shown in letting the contract under a subsequent ordinance, the prior ordinance and proceedings under it were not available as grounds for enjoining collection of assessment under the subsequent ordinance. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599. In the absence of special equities, the court of chancery has no jurisdiction over assessments made in the course of municipal improvement and will not interfere by injunction to enjoin collection merely because the complaining party has lost his remedy at law by laches. Goodwin v. Millville [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 674. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5685, requiring proceedings attacking an assessment to be commenced 30 days after publication of the ordinance, held owners, who filed cross bills in apt time alleging that assessments are arbitrary and not according to benefits and praying that it be declared void, make an appropriate attack. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526. Injunction restraining certification of assessments to county auditor, under Rev. St. § 2297, operates to suspend power to so certify only while injunction is in force, and period which may have elapsed in which certification could have been made prior to granting of injunction must enter into the computation in determining whether two years' limitation has expired. Bell v. Cincinnati, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 393.

2. Suit to enjoin drainage assessment should be dismissed for laches where plaintiff signed drainage petition, had notice of all proceedings, was benefited, did not appeal from the assessment and permitted work to be done without objection. Von Cotzhausen v. Dick [Wis.] 119 NW 822. That board of local improvements made assurances that other streets would be improved, and failure to improve them forced additional travel onto the street in question to the injury of abutting property, is not ground for enjoining collection of the assessment since abutting owners had no right to rely on such assurance and fail to object to confirmation of the assessment. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599. Collection of a special assessment will not be enjoined in favor of one who has had opportunity to defend in the court where assessment proceedings were had and failure to make his defense there affords no ground for his application to equity to relieve him from the results of his neglect. Id. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 24, § 553, authorizing the court on application to revise an assessment to modify the distribution of the total cost between the public and the property benefited, etc., objections that an assessment failed to charge the city with any part of the cost, or that it failed to charge property benefited with its share of the cost must be presented in the county court on application for confirmation of the assessment and not as ground for enjoining collection of the assessment. Id. Assessment for watering streets against abutting property, levied under Rev. Laws, c. 26, §§ 26, 27, cannot be quashed as illegal where all assessments are not before the court, remedy is by petition to assessors for abatement. Corcoran v. Cambridge Aldermen, 199 Mass. 5, 85 NE 155.

3. Failure of a property owner to object to an improvement, is, as to the contractor acting in good faith and under color of law, an acquiescence in what he is doing and precludes such owner from obtaining an injunction against enforcement of an assessment for the work. Menzie v. Greensburg [Ind. App.] 85 NE 484. Where an abutting owner's grantor had signed a petition for paving and he had notice of such fact when he purchased, and made no objection until the work was completed and his property benefited, he is estopped to enjoin issuance of bonds based on assessment therefor. Lawton v. Racine [Wis.] 119 NW 331. Where, in construction by municipality of local sewer for sanitary purposes, by inadvertence of an assistant engineer employed to fix grade thereof, contract or specifications is departed from as to depth of the sewer but without affecting its cost or efficiency and error is not discovered until after work of construction is completed and no substantial injury to the rights of the lot owners is apparent, the assessment against such lot owners will not be enjoined. Close v. Parker, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 85.

4. Because adequate remedy at law and public policy. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6. Equity will assume jurisdiction where main purpose of bill is to cancel tax certificate as cloud on title on ground that sale was void if assessment valid. Id.

5. Pumphrey v. Hollis [Ind. App.] 87 NE 255.

6. Where complaint to enjoin an assessment does not show that notice of time and place of hearing of declaratory resolution was not given as required by statute, it is presumed that proper notice was given. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. In proceedings to enjoin the collection of an assessment, there being no allegations to the contrary, it is presumed that statutory notices were given in proceedings for the confirmation and letting of the contract. Cosgrove v. Chicago, 235 Ill. 358, 85 NE 599. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8959, provides that the council shall hear persons affected by a public improvement and upon such hearing confirm, modify or be maintained only on clear proof that authorities have acted, or are about to act, illegally or fraudulently.[7] In such suit, the court has nothing to do with the wisdom of the voters in adopting a proposition for construction of the sewer.[8] A property owner who seeks to enjoin issuance of bonds based on assessment for paving because of an irregularity in the proceedings must show the irregularity and that he was damaged thereby without fault on his part.[9] A tax payer, as such, may enjoin a threatened assessment for the construction of a sewer on the ground that it is for a debt in excess of the constitutional limitation, without showing special interest or damage.[10] The rule that a tax payer cannot enjoin an assessment until a cloud is about to be wrongfully cast on his title, applies to cases involving the legality of a specific assessment.[11] In a suit to cancel a tax bill, only issues raised by the pleadings may be proved.[12] A charter provision that in actions on tax bills an owner may prove that the work was not done in a workmanlike manner according to contract applies when an owner sues to cancel the tax bill.[13] In some states statutes prescribe a remedy in case of unjust assessment.[14]

(§ 9) K. Appeal and other direct review.[15]—See 10 C. L. 1344—The right of appeal is purely statutory.[16] Proceedings for review must be instituted within the rescind, the declaratory resolution. A complaint to enjoin an assessment alleged that after such hearing the declaratory resolution was not confirmed, etc., but another resolution ordering improvement was adopted. Held that as the latter resolution was as to the same improvement, it would be presumed to be a final one. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321. Street paving assessments will not be enjoined as excessive and inequitable unless so established by a preponderance of proof. Prentice v. Toledo, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 299. One seeking to enjoin assessment levied by city council on ground that a statutory requirement has been omitted has burden of establishing such fact by evidence. Close v. Parker, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 85. An assessment for a street improvement of $943.59 upon property estimated after improvement by complaining owner's witness at $2,800, although slightly above 33 1-3 per cent thereof, will not be interefered with as being in contravention of § 53 of the municipal code of 1902 (Rev. St. §§ 1536-213), where there is other evidence that the assessment is less than 33 1-3 per cent of the value of the property as enhanced by the improvement. Prentice v. Toledo, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 299.

7. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127. The enjoining of a special assessment is properly denied under Gen. St. 1901, §§ 3175, 3176, on the ground that members of council were interested in the work where it appears that proceedings of mayor and council were regular, no fraud shown, and it did not appear that any member of the council was interested in the contract. Ferguson v. Coffeyville, 77 Kan. 391, 94 P 1010.

8. Mead v. Turner, 60 Misc. 145, 112 NYS 127.

9. Lawton v. Racine [Wis.] 119 NW 331. Bill to enjoin sale of land for drainage assessment because the amount complainant will earn under his contract to construct the drain will cover his assessment, is without equity. Harrington v. Dickinson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 996, 118 NW 931. Property owners who seek to enjoin enforcement of an assessment on the ground that church property omitted should have been assessed held not entitled to such relief as they would only be entitled to a reduction and they did not claim it nor tender their proportionate share. Boussneur v. Detroit, 153 Mich. 585, 15 Det. Leg. N. 568, 117 NW 220.

10, 11. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47.

12. In a suit to cancel tax bills where it was not claimed that bills were void because competition was restricted, question of invalidity on that ground is not raised. Muff v. Cameron [Mo. App.] 117 SW 116. In a suit to cancel tax bills where issue of fraudulent delay in the enactment of a confirmation ordinance extending the time for completion of the work longer than was necessary was not raised by the pleadings, evidence thereof was not admissible. Brigham v. Hickman [Mo. App.] 116 SW 449.

13. Porter v. Boyd Pav. & Const. Co., 214 Mo. 1, 112 SW 235. An owner cannot maintain suit to cancel a tax bill on proof that the contractor though substantially complying with the contract did not perform all the work in a workmanlike manner and omitted certain work under order of the city engineer. Id.

14. Under Kirby's Dig. §§ 5677, 5679, 5680, 5685, held the remedy of property owners in event of unjust assessment is first by appeal to the council and afterwards to institute legal proceedings to correct or avoid the assessment. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526.

time and perfected in the manner prescribed.[17] Notice of appeal must designate the proceeding appealed from[18] and be served in the manner required by law.[19] Findings on questions of fact by tribunals authorized to determine such questions in the first instance are not reviewable.[20] Only such questions will be reviewed as were properly saved below[21] by proper objection and exception[22] and presented

Law] 72 A 49. Where a contractor sued a city and an owner for an assessment, an appeal may be maintained in the name of the contractor and the city, from a judgment against the city, and dismissing the petition against the owner, though after judgment the contractor assigned his right of action to the city. Huesman v. Dersch, 33 Ky. L. R. 77, 109 SW 319. No provision for appeal by property owner who complains that assessment is grossly in excess of benefits which he will receive from improvement. Nor will error lie in such a case, inasmuch as there is no provision for a bill of exceptions, and even if transcript of the record of the township trustees was brought up, it would be of no assistance in determining the question whether the assessment exceeds the benefits. Stemen v. Hizey, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 347.

17. Defect in city clerk's certificate to transcript on appeal from confirmation of an assessment may be cured by amendment. Barrett v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1109. Parties affected by assessments in drainage proceedings are necessary parties to appellate proceedings therein. In re Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 [Iowa] 120 NW 83.

18. Where notice of appeal from confirmation by city of an assessment described the proceeding appealed from with great particularity, it was not fatally defective in referring to the wrong condemnation ordinance where the city was not misled. Barrett v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1109. Application to court to set aside a special assessment referring to the improvement, and describing it in language used in order of the council, and also as one which the council ordered on a certain date, sufficiently designates the improvement. Park City Yacht Club v. Bridgeport [Conn.] 70 A 631.

19. Service on city clerk of notice of filing transcript in superior court, as required by Laws 1901, p. 242, c. 118, on appeal by the city council from confirmation of assessment, is not jurisdictional and is waived by general appearance by city attorney. Barrett v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1109. Under Code § 1947, giving an appeal from order of board of supervisors fixing an assessment in drainage proceedings, and §§ 1513, 1946, where all petitioners for a drain were affected by the assessment, an appeal upon notice only to the county auditor and not to petitioners was properly dismissed. Poage v. Grant Tp. Ditch & Drainage Dist. No. 5 [Iowa] 119 NW 976. An appeal from action of board of supervisors in drainage assessment proceedings is ineffective to confer jurisdiction where notice of appeal was not served on petitioners, nor Acts 32nd Gen. Assem. 1907, p. 100, c. 95, complied with. In re Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 [Iowa] 120 NW 83.

20. When the estimate of benefits is referred to a board of appraisers, and afterwards approved by the council, the remedy of one who considers himself unfairly assessed is to apply to such tribunal for redress, and failing to do so, he may not overcome such finding in equity, especially where there is no proof that the assessment or appraisement was in any way inequitable or unjust. Kerker v. Bocher, 20 Okl. 729, 95 P 981. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, p. 431, c. 24, §§ 541, 545, 553, the city council on special tax proceedings has sole power to determine what proportion of special tax shall be borne by the city, and such determination is conclusive on the courts; while in special assessment proceeding the decision of the commissioner is reviewable. City of East St. Louis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 238 Ill. 296, 87 NE 407. Failure of commissioners in widening a street to assess a part of the cost to the city or against outside property, and the assessment of some property within the district, for less than its proportionate share, is not reviewable. In re City of Seattle, 50 Wash. 402, 97 P 444. The board of directors of a levee district created to construct a levee to protect lands adjacent to a river are vested with a wide discretion as to choice of means and methods, and if they act in good faith their judgment cannot be interfered with by the courts. Meriwether v. St. Francis Levee District Directors [C. C. A.] 165 F 317. Whether benefits resulted and whether assessments were in proportion thereto are matters relating to the exercise of jurisdiction by the council, and disputed questions of fact cannot be reviewed. Michell v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 881. Where the validity of an assessment is directly attacked in equity, members of the assessment board are competent to testify as to the method by which the amount of benefits were fixed. Kirst v. Street Imp. Dist. No. 120 [Ark.] 109 SW 526.

21. Defects in resolution of necessity, insufficient notice of proposals for bids, change of plans after contract is let, not raised in the council, cannot be raised on appeal from assessment. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082. Under Code, §§ 823, 824, 825, a property owner can raise only such objections on appeal to the courts as he made before the city council, except in case of fraud. Id. Where no objection was made before the city council to resolution of intention or necessity in assessment proceedings, their sufficiency will not be considered on appeal though discussed in the brief. Id. On appeal in assessment proceedings, evidence held to show that amendments to objections against the proposed assessment were filed with the city council so as to be considered on appeal. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

22. Objections to assessments that they

by the record,[23] unless the objection is jurisdictional.[24] On a silent record all presumptions are in favor of the regularity of proceedings below.[25] Under the rule that only constitutional questions may be presented to the supreme court on reserved questions, it will not consider a sewer assessment solely on an allegation that it was levied without regard to benefits, where it did not appear that benefits were not considered.[26] A writ of review as applicable to proceedings of a city council in matters of street improvements may be used to bring before the reviewing court questions affecting the jurisdiction of the council to act either as to subject-matter or person, and to determine whether it has acted in the manner prescribed by law.[27] Certiorari lies to determine regularity of petition of property owners for a street improvement and the certificate of the assessors thereto annexed.[28] In certiorari to review an assessment, the city may move to quash the writ in the form presented by an amended petition though at the time of granting the amendments the court refused to quash the writ.[29] The return of city officers is as much a part of the record as the assessment records in certiorari to quash an assessment.[30]

QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.[31]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[32]

are contrary to state laws and city ordinances are too general. Andre v. Burlington [Iowa] 117 NW 1082.

23. Where city clerk's certificate to transcript on appeal from confirmation of an assessment is not in the record, its sufficiency cannot be determined. Barrett v. Seattle [Wash.] 97 P 1109. An estoppel by judgment cannot be pleaded in a petition for a writ of review of an assessment, it not appearing in the record nor having been called to the attention of the council. Michell v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 881.

24. In suit by subcontractor against the principal contractor of the municipality to enforce a lien, the objection that the subcontractor had not given notice to the municipality as required by statute may be first raised on appeal. Pirola v. W. J. Furnes Co., 238 Ill. 210, 87 NE 354.

25. Since Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 7, authorizing a city to levy sewer assessments according to area of adjacent land, leaves it to the city to regulate the procedure, and there being no showing on reserved questions that the act is unconstitutional, it is presumed that proceedings were regular relative to notice and hearing. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

26. McGarvey v. Swan [Wyo.] 96 P 697.

27. Michell v. Portland [Or.] 99 P 881. Where a city erroneously assessed benefits on property in excess of 150 feet in depth, and on appeal the court orders reassessment to the extent of 150 feet in depth, and on further appeal the city does not complain of the decree, the appellate court will confirm the first assessment to the extent of 150 feet in depth and cancel the excess, and the tax as confirmed will draw interest but no penalties. Hedge v. Des Moines [Iowa] 119 NW 276.

28. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991. Under Buffalo City Charter, Laws 1891, p. 221, c. 105, §§ 398, 399, amended by Laws 1900, p. 1541, Code Civ. Proc. § 2140, held that board of assessors' certificate as to signing of petition for paving by owners is reviewable on certiorari where facts stated in certificate are incorrect, and assessors have acted on an erroneous principle of law. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 127 App. Div. 851, 111 NYS 924. Though assessor's certificate to a petition of property owners is by charter made conclusive as to facts certified, questions of law arising out of preliminary proceedings may be raised on certiorari. People v. Buffalo Assessors, 109 NYS 991.

29. People v. Buffalo, 62 Misc. 313, 114 NYS 1077. Refusal to allow petitioners for certiorari to review a paving assessment to amend their petition relative to counting by assessors of resident owners, etc., held an abuse of discretion. Id.

30. District of Columbia v. Brooke, 29 App. D. C. 563. Where return alleges notice of assessment, though not shown by records, allegation must be taken as true, especially where no objection to return or express denial in writ. Id.

32. Only the general principles are here treated, with a few illustrative applications. Whether particular facts or issues are questions of law or fact is considered as germane to the particular subject involved, and is treated in the topic referring

Province of court and jury in general. See 10 C. L. 1346—Only a few general holdings are here presented, the subject being more fully presented in another topic.[33] It is the province of the jury to decide questions of fact,[34] and of the court to decide questions of law.[35] In civil cases, issues that present only questions of law cannot be submitted to the jury,[36] nor to the court when it sits as a jury.[37] Whether there is evidence legally sufficient is for the court,[38] and whether the evidence offered to establish a fact has a logical and reasonable tendency to do so is a preliminary question for the court;[39] but there being such evidence, its sufficiency to establish the issue is for the jury.[40] The jury are the sole judges of the credibility thereto (see such titles as Contracts, 11 C. L. 729; Negligence, 12 C. L. 966; Master and Servant, 12 C. L. 665; Railroads, 10 C. L. 1365; Street Railways, 10 C. L. 1730; Highways and Streets, 11 C. L. 1720; Wills, 10 C. L. 2035). The propriety of taking a case from the jury is also treated elsewhere (see Directing Verdict and Demurrer to Evidence, 11 C. L. 1085; Discontinuance, Dismissal and Nonsuit, 11 C. L. 1093), as is the matter of instructions invading the province of the jury (see Instructions, 12 C. L. 218).

Whether delivery to warehouseman was a sale as against motion to nonsuit, question for jury. Patty v. Salem Flouring Mills Co. [Or.] 98 P 521. How death occurred under evidence, held for jury. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bell's Adm'r [Ky.] 114 SW 328. Nonsuit properly refused where some evidence. Smith v. Moore [N. C.] 62 SE 892. Negligence. Messer v. McLean [Wash.] 98 P 106. Under evidence, whether certain provision of policy had been enforced by defendant, or abrogated and disregarded, held question of fact for jury. Lounsbury v. Knights M. W., 128 App. Div. 394, 112 NYS 921. Where some evidence, question for jury however great weight of preponderof witnesses [41] and the weight to be given the evidence.[42] Inferences of fact to be drawn from testimony is for jury,[43] but to entitle a case to submission to the jury, there must be substantial evidence to establish the elements of the cause of action.[44] While it is for the jury to determine conflicting evidence [45] and to draw conclu-ence may be in adversary's favor. Ogden v. Sergeant, 112 NYS 1085.

Credibility of plaintiff's testimony, given at trial in view of depositions taken, held for jury. Roe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 128, 110 SW 611. Jury may not arbitrarily discredit a witness nor reject his testimony; but the witness may be discredited and his testimony disbelieved if from all the other facts and circumstances in the case it fairly appears that the witness is mistaken, or that his testimony is improbable or untrue (Condie v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 237, 97 P 120); nor is court, in passing on one's request to direct a verdict, bound to accept the statement of a witness as conclusive on a subject when there are other facts and circumstances from which the jury can properly find otherwise (Id.).

Testimony of one witness as to intoxication before his application for insurance held not undisputed evidence precluding issues from jury, witness being uncertain as to time of intoxication and his memory defective. Des Moines Life Ins. Co. v. Clay [Ark.] 116 SW 232. Evidence conflicting, question as to whether there was a market for a certain commodity held one for jury. Schwartz v. Morris & Co., 61 Misc. 335, 113 NYS 524. Where evidence presents issues under pleadings, they are for jury though the evidence is of such slight probative force that it would become duty of trial court or on appeal to set aside verdict found on the evidence. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Pigott [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 841. For jury to determine what is an abnormal moisture content in dairy butter. Coopersville Co-operative Creamery Co. v. Lemon [C. C. A.] 163 F 145. Whether insurance policy was accepted and credit given for premium held for jury. Manson v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 128 App. Div. 577, 112 NYS 886. Question of negligence in voluntarily exposing one's self to obvious danger held one for jury. Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 980, 118 NW 922. Where evidence was in sions from established facts where reasonable minds might differ in respect thereto,[46] the court may decide an issue where the evidence is undisputed,[47] or where there is no substantial conflict therein,[48] and where the evidence will permit of but one reasonable inference;[49] but it is not in every case where the testimony upon a particular issue is uncontradicted, even when sufficient to establish the ultimate facts sought to be proven, that the trial judge can treat the question as one of law and take issue from the jury,[50] and there may be a question of fact when all the witnesses are worthy of belief and no witness contradicts another.[51] An issue of fact, in order to authorize its submission to the jury, must arise both from the pleadings and the evidence.[52] Ordinarily the question as to whether there is sufficient evidence to shift the burden of proof is one for the jury.[53] conflict as to the time interlineation of a judgment was made, question one for jury to determine. Mayhew v. Smith, 42 Colo. 534, 95 P 549. Where evidence is conflicting, here though the preponderance with one of parties, issue is one for jury. Messir v. McLean [Wash.] 98 P 106. Where testimony is positive, unequivocal, and corroborated by circumstances, hut impeached by direct and circumstantial evidence. issue one for jury. Sicard v. Albenberg Co., 136 Wis. 622, 118 NW 179.

46. Toppi v. McDonald, 128 App. Div. 443, 112 NYS 821. If conceded facts are such that reasonable minds might differ as to the conclusion to be drawn, the question is for jury. Still v. San Francisco & N. W. R. Co. [Cal.] 98 P 672; Perrine v. Union Stockyards Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 776; Conger v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 31 App. D. C. 139; Sans Bois Coal Co. v. If facts as to a foreman's duties are undisputed and such that reasonable minds cannot differ about the conclusion to be drawn from them, whether fellow-servant relation exists is a question of law for court. Sambos v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 567. Where evidence is so preponderant that it reasonably admits of hut one conclusion, question one of law for court. Bell v. Carter [C. C. A.] 164 F 417; Loomis v. Norman Printers' Supply Co. [Conn.] 71 A 358. Where testimony is of such a conclusive character as to compel the court in the exercise of sound judicial discretion to set aside a verdict in opposition thereto, it may be withdrawn from jury. Walker v. Warner, 31 App. D. C. 76. Though plaintiff may have first made prima facie case where plaintiff's case is destroyed beyond the peradventure of doubt by uncontradicted evidence of defendant, held duty of court to so instruct. Keith v. Guedry [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 392.

50. Craver v. Ragon [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 489. Where evidence is uncontradicted but where the ultimate facts which must he found depend solely on the truth of the statements made by the witnesses or evidence offered, or where ultimate facts must he determined by inference and deductions from evidence or by weighing and estimating value of facts stated as warranting a particular finding only provable indirectly by circumstances, issues are for jury. 52. Where no evidence to sustain an issue on the pleadings which is essential to plaintiff's recovery, no question for jury. Lone Star Brew. Co. v. Willie [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 186.

53. Baltimore Refrigerating & Heating Co. v. Kreimer [Md.] 71 A 1066.

Whether a given subject is one concerning which an expert may express an opinion,[54] and what are the qualifications necessary to entitle a witness to testify as an expert, are questions of law for the court,[55] but whether a certain witness has such qualifications is a question of fact.[56]

Particular facts or issues. See 10 C. L. 1347—Only a few general holdings are here presented, the question as to whether particular issues are of law or fact being treated in the topic dealing with the particular issue.[57] Questions of fact are sometimes, though inaccurately, called questions of law because they are for the court and not for the jury.[58] What is a reasonable time when the proofs are conflicting is often a mixed one of law and fact,[59] but where the facts are undisputed and different inferences cannot reasonably be drawn from the same facts, it is a question for the court,[60] but ordinarily the question of reasonable time,[61] motive and intention,[62] and acceptance,[63] are of fact for the jury, but where there is no controversy as to the facts, the question of probable cause is one of law for the court.[64] When the intention of a party is to be ascertained from disputed or ambiguous circumstances, the necessary inferences to be drawn are for the jury,[65] and it is for the jury to find the effect of any determination they may reach,[66] but this rule does not preclude the court from relieving the jury of the labor of determining a subsidiary question submitted, after reaching a conclusion on a primary one necessarily determining the controversy, as they must unavoidably see without being informed on the subject.[67] An admixture of oral and written evidence draws the whole to the jury.[68] Where proof of a fact depends upon oral testimony, the proof is for the jury,[69] and when the narrative is of oral admissions, made sometime before, although the precise words are important it is seldom that a question of fact is not presented.[70] The judge is to construe and interpret contracts and other written instruments that are clear and specific,[71] but where their terms are of doubt-

In action for conspiracy in expelling plaintiff from beneficial society because of the writing of a certain letter, whether writing of letter could be reasonably considered in violation ful or ambiguous meaning, and parol evidence is introduced to show the intention of the parties, their construction becomes one for the jury,[72] as is also the existence and effect of foreign laws.[73] While the interpretation of a foreign law, if found in a single statute or in a single decision, the construction of the language of which is not in dispute, presents a question of law for the court,[74] yet, where the law is to be determined by considering numerous decisions which may be more or less conflicting, or which bear upon the subject collaterally or by way of analogy, and where inferences may be drawn from them, the question to be determined is one of fact for the jury.[75] Where a writing is not a depositive instrument but is put in evidence merely to show an extrinsic fact, it is for the jury to say what inference is to be drawn therefrom.[76] Whether or not an agent is duly authorized to manage some affairs for his principal is a matter for the court.[77]

QUIETING TITLE.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[78]

§ 1. Chancery and statutory remedies and rights.[79]—See 10 C. L. 1348—Equity has inherent power independently of statute to entertain suits to quiet title and to remove clouds.[80] Statutes conferring jurisdiction upon equity courts for this purpose are merely declaratory of existing powers and do not operate to confer additional ones.[81] Where by local statute a bill to remove a cloud will lie independently of possession, the enlarged equitable right thus created may be enforced by a federal equity court where grounds of federal jurisdiction exist.[82] Where the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, equity will not entertain jurisdiction.[83] of plaintiff's obligations to laws of society held one for court. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Tex.] 113 SW 144.

76. Floyd v. Pulp Lumber Co. [Pa.] 71 A 13.

77. Duty being on court, held no error to strike out part of defendant's testimony relating to agent's authority to abrogate original contract of parties or to substitute new agreement in lieu thereof, defendant not having proved agent's power to make contract. Rumble v. Cummings [Or.] 95 P 1111.

78. This topic treats of suits in equity to quiet title to realty and for the removal of clouds and statutory substitutes therefor. The cancellation of particular instruments which may be clouds on title (see Cancellation of Instruments, 11 C. L. 493), quieting title as an incident to statutory actions for the restoration of destroyed instruments (see Restoring Instruments and Records, 10 C. L. 1526) and adverse proceedings for the determination of conflicting interests in mining claims (see Mines and Minerals, 10 C. L. 839) have been excluded. As to proceedings to quiet title to water rights, see Waters and Water Supply, 10 C. L. 1996.

80. Suit to quiet title an equitable one. Hankins v. Helms [Ariz.] 100 P 460. Has jurisdiction to vacate a fraudulent deed as cloud on title, independent of statute. Cawood v. Howard [Ky.] 113 SW 109.

81. Knauff v. National Cooperage & Woodenward Co. [Ark.] 113 SW 28.

82. American Ass'n v. Williams [C. C. A.] 166 F 17.

83. Where plaintiff alleged foreclosure of mortgage and that by mistake part of lot was omitted from deed executed under foreclosure, which mistaken description was repeated in deed to plaintiff and that plaintiff had been in possession for 13 years, but it appeared that defendant was in possession when suit was filed, the law affords adequate remedy for recovery of possession. Delaney v. O'Donnell, 234 Ill. 109, 84 NE 668. One who claimed to have been wrongfully ejected from premises dedicated to city and of which city had put him in possession, but to which he alleged no title in himself, had an appropriate remedy at law for such ejectment if wrongful. Doty v. Cedar Rapids [Iowa] 119 NW 132. Remaindermen held to have no adequate remedy by ejectment as against tax deed fraudulently obtained by life tenant and his wife, since muniments of

Equity, however, has jurisdiction to cancel a cloud on title notwithstanding there may be a complete defense to any attempt to enforce the instrument constituting such cloud.[84] The test is whether the complainant would be required to resort to extraneous proof to defeat an attempt at law to recover the land.[85] Title to easements[86] and water rights may be quieted.[87] The complainant may be required to do equity as a condition to relief.[88]

Title and possession. See 10 C. L. 1349—As a general rule and independently of statute,[89] both possession[90] and legal title[91] are necessary to maintain the action.

title flowing from tax sale proceedings could not be reached. Boon v. Root, 137 Wis. 451, 119 NW 121. No jurisdiction to remove cloud on plaintiff's title caused by conveyance under ancestors will from which will he was omitted, defendants being in possession, but equity would give relief on ground that will was inoperative as to such omitted child. Rowe v. Allison [Ark.] 112 SW 395.

84. No defense to suit to cancel covenant in deed by one church to another, restricting use of property deeded for church purposes only, that such restrictive covenant is unenforceable. Rector of St. Stephen's Church v. Rector of Church of Transfiguration, 114 NYS 623.

85. It is no answer to say that plaintiff could defeat an action of ejectment brought by defendant; true test being whether he would be put to extraneous evidence to do so. Greene v. Boaz [Ala.] 47 S 255. Held that defendant's muniments of title were such as to make out prima facie case if ejectment were brought, and would put plaintiff to extraneous proof to defeat recovery. Parker v. Miller-Brent Lumber Co. [Ala.] 47 S 580.

86. Title may be quieted as to right to cut timber and as to easements in connection therewith. Gazos Creek Mill & Lumber Co. v. Coburn [Cal.] 96 P 359.

87. Action to determine extent and priority of a water right partakes of nature of action to quiet title to real estate. Taylor v. Hulett [Idaho] 97 P 37.

88. One who seeks to have his title quieted as against an invalid tax sale must, before he is entitled to relief, reimburse defendant for back taxes paid by him with interest. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136. Vendor under contitional deed cannot have title quieted upon nonperformance by vendee where latter has paid a portion of purchase money and makes a good tender of remainder, the right to the premises being then in him. McCullough v. Rucker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 323. In action to quiet title as against a recorded unperformed contract of sale, plaintiff as vendor must tender performance on his part as a condition precedent to obtaining relief sought. Kane v. Borthwick, 50 Wash. 8, 96 P 516.

89. Independently of state statute, bill to remove cloud upon title will not lie where plaintiff not in actual possession. American Ass'n v. Williams [C. C. A.] 166 F 17.

90. Complainant held to have possession: Two years' possession under tax deed sufficient. Townsend v. Penrose, 84 Ark. 316, 105 SW 588. Evidence held to show defendant's acts of posting notices and employing an attorney to prevent trespasses were insufficient to render plaintiff's possession disputed, he having constructive possession through tax deed which was sufficient to make his possession "peaceable" as required by Code 1896, § 809. Wood Lumber Co. v. Williams [Ala.] 47 S 202. Fact that deed of trust is given as security does not deprive grantor of possession within St. 1906, p. 78, c. 59, § 1, limiting right to bring action to one who is by himself or his tenant in actual and peaceable possession. Charles A. Warren Co. v. All Persons Claiming any Interest, etc., 153 Cal. 771, 96 P 807. Placing fish traps by holder of legal title on land continually submerged held to be such possession as would prevail against holder of tax deed who subsequently placed a barb wire around premises. Le Sourd v. Edwards, 236 Ill. 169, 86 NE 212. While Mills Ann. Code, §§ 255-264, requires that plaintiff be in actual possession, such requirement is immaterial where defendant alleges possession in himself and evidence shows that he has paramount title. Mulford v. Rowland [Colo.] 100 P 603. Complainant could under statute maintain suit to quiet title to strip of land excepted by him in sale of lot, where he had never surrendered possession of such strip and where defendant had mere license to use well located thereon. Cullen v. Ksiaszkiewicz [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 844, 118 NW 496. Vendee placed in possession by vendor's agent may quiet his title to premises although sold under mistaken description, both parties intending that premises sold were the ones to be conveyed. Isaacks v. Wright [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 970. Remaindermen, having right to possession after life tenant's death, may maintain action to quiet title as against tax deed fraudulently obtained by life tenant's wife in collusion with him. Boon v. Root, 137 Wis. 451, 119 NW 121. Evidence held to show that plaintiffs were in possession claiming title, and that acts of defendants in entering land for purpose of surveying and cutting brush were in the nature of temporary trespasses and did not interrupt such possession. Brown v. Dunn, 135 Wis. 374, 115 NW 1097.

Complainant held not to have possession: Under Ky. St. 1903, § 11, plaintiff must prove ownership and actual possession where evidence showed that plaintiff was not in possession but that defendant's grantor had been in possession under well defined boundary including land in controversy plaintiff, not entitled to judgment. Dupoyster v. Dunn [Ky.] 113 SW 880. Evidence held to show that plaintiffs had never been in actual possession of overlapping boundary in dispute and were

Such rule has, however, been greatly modified by statute. Thus in some states it is sufficient if the plaintiff have constructive possession.[92] In Kentucky, the plain-therefore not entitled to maintain action under Ky. St. § 11 (Russell's St. § 14). Cockrell v. Colson [Ky.] 116 SW 775. Actual possession of a tenant in common, claiming in hostility to complainant, another tenant in common, whose title is, in part only, denied, is not for purpose of the act, the possession of such other tenant. Country Homes Land Co. v. De Gray, 71 N. J. Eq. 283, 71 A 340. Action not maintainable where complaint showed that defendants were in possession under claim of title. Guerard v. Jenkins, 80 S. C. 223, 61 SE 258.

91. Complainant held to have title: Although a deed of trust had been given as security, grantor still retained an "estate of inheritance" which would enable him, under St. 1906, p. 78, c. 59, § 1, to bring action, notwithstanding Civ. Code § 863 provides that every express trust in real estate vests whole estate in trustee. Charles A. Warren Co. v. All Persons Claiming any Interest, etc., 153 Cal. 771, 96 P 807. Quitclaim deed which grants, sells, remisses, and releases the premises held to constitute sufficient foundation for defendant's counterclaim, praying decree to quiet title. Adams v. Hartzell [N. D.] 119 NW 635. One claiming as riparian owner title to island may maintain action against one who occupied it under claim that it was not patented to plaintiff. Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. Conveyance by widow under power to plaintiff who had rendered personal service to testator and wife held to be made for adequate consideration and to convey good title to plaintiff notwithstanding no claim for services had ever been presented to executor. Gogreve v. Day, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 69. On question of disputed boundaries, evidence held to show that land intended to be conveyed to plaintiff's ancestor was located within plaintiff's grant. Whitaker v. Poston [Tenn.] 110 SW 1019. Where neither husband or wife had any beneficial interest in real estate purchased in name of wife and thereafter conveyed to a third person, title of latter was properly quieted. Dodds v. Dodds [Wash.] 98 P 748. Defective location notice when coupled with possession of mining claim under peaceful entry sufficient color of title to warrant finding in favor of locator. Protective Min. Co. v. Forest City Min. Co. [Wash.] 99 P 1033.

Complainant held not to have title: Evidence held insufficient to show that occupancy of lands under tax certificate gave title, such certificate not being sufficient to give color of title under statute. Townsend v. Penrose, 84 Ark. 316, 105 SW 588. Plaintiff, claiming through tax sale, not entitled to judgment where tax deed was void. Chatfield v. Iowa & Arkansas Land Co. [Ark.] 114 SW 473. Holder of mortgage, merely, to land as only record evidence of title, had no title sufficient to enable him to maintain suit. Castro v. Adams, 153 Cal. 382, 95 P 1027. Evidence of deed under foreclosure proceedings not sufficient to establish title where assignment to mortgagee of mortgage foreclosed was invalid. Hebden v. Bina [N. D.] 116 NW 85. Evidence held to show that quitclaim deed under which plaintiff claimed was a forgery. Young v. Engdahl [N. D.] 119 NW 169. Voluntary assignment for benefit of creditors made in Wisconsin by holder of second mortgage to lands in North Dakota through which plaintiff claimed title, by virtue of assignee's power of attorney, held to be in nature of proceeding in bankruptcy and consequently ineffective as to lands outside jurisdiction. Adams v. Hartzell [N. D.] 119 NW 635. Plaintiff could not predicate title upon void deed from wife. Carpenter v. Booker [Ga.] 62 SE 983. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that plaintiff had conveyed her interest to land to defendant. Austin v. Collier [Ga.] 62 SE 196. Plaintiff showing no possession or title to premises other than master's deed made without proof of possession or title in grantor was not entitled to decree quieting title as against tax deed. Bauer v. Glos, 236 Ill. 450, 86 NE 116. Bill alleging that city wrongfully put plaintiff in possession of premises dedicated to it; that after a year it wrongfully ejected him; that through misuse city lost its title to such dedicated land; that no one held title thereto, not sufficient to show any right or title in plaintiff which would enable him to maintain action. Doty v. Cedar Rapids [Iowa] 119 NW 132. Since tenant in possession under lease cannot obtain title as against his landlord, one who had leased land from defendants and secretly obtained a patent therefor had no such title as would enable him to bring action to quiet title as against the landlord. Mullins v. Hall [Ky.] 112 SW 920. Evidence held to show that deed based upon unrecorded and lost survey, under which plaintiff claimed, was void as against subsequent recorded survey. Overstreet v. Cantrell [Miss.] 46 S 69. Plaintiff claiming under sale of homestead by married woman, void because not joined in by husband, had no legal or equitable title which would enable him to maintain action. Levis-Zukoskl Mercantile Co. v. McIntyre [Miss.] 47 S 435. Where Indian allottee made contract providing for conveyance of his allottment after government restrictions should be removed, held that contract was void and vested no right in vendee thereunder to have deed made by allottee to another set aside. Lewis v. Clements [Okl.] 95 P 769.

92. Complaint alleging that plaintiffs were and had been for more than one year seized and possessed of the land, which was vacant, good under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1638 and 1639, requiring possession for one year in actions to determine adverse claims. Neale v. Walter, 128 App. Div. 827, 112 NYS 1041. Owner of wild and unoccupied lands, but of which he has constructive possession, may have a decree quieting title when another seeks to impair his right thereto by institution of suit to quiet title in himself. Chatfield v. Iowa & Arkansas Land Co. [Ark.] 114 SW 473.

tiff must show actual possession at the commencement of the action for quieting his title [93] but need not have possession in order to remove a cloud therefrom.[94] In Alabama, peaceable possession without title is sufficient,[95] and in Missouri the plaintiff need only show that his title is better than that of defendant.[96] Possession may be taken for the purpose of the suit if it is not tortious and if it does not disturb a prior possession of another,[97] but possession obtained by unlawful and forcible entry will not support the action.[98] When possession is established, it is prima facie evidence of title sufficient to sustain the action.[99] Where it appears that the title is outstanding in a third party, no action will lie.[1] In certain cases, however, another than the true owner may bring the action.[2] A plaintiff may have his title quieted to so much of the land as he is in possession and owner of, although the persons against whom he asserts title may have a superior title to part of the land.[3] One who has acquired title by adverse possession may go into equity to remove a cloud therefrom.[4] The plaintiff must rely on the strength of his own title

93. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 11, plaintiff must introduce testimony to show that he was in actual possession at time of institution of suit if such possession be denied. Horn v. Bates [Ky.] 114 SW 763. One not having actual possession at time of institution of suit cannot maintain action to quiet title under Ky. St. 1903, § 11, authorizing such suit by one who owns title in actual possession. Actual possession in defendant. Dupoyster v. Turk, 33 Ky. L. R. 320, 110 SW 260.

94. Suit to remove cloud from title is different from a suit to quiet title under Ky. St. 1903, § 11, which authorizes one in ownership of and in possession, to institute an equitable suit to quiet title, possession not being necessary to maintain suit to remove cloud. Carwood v. Howard [Ky.] 113 SW 109. Deed made and recorded subsequent to deed from same grantor to plaintiff cancelled as cloud in plaintiff's title, although neither party was in possession of premises. Id. Where relief sought was cancellation of deed made by one claiming to own land under mortgage, plaintiff was entitled to relief regardless of fact that he was not in possession. Tucker v. Witherbee [Ky.] 113 SW 123.

95. Code 1896, § 809, Code 1907, § 5443, provides that a person in possession, who cannot bring an action at law, may bring action to quiet title against one supposed to have some claim to premises. Complainant need not have title, peaceable possession alone being necessary. The respondent has the burden of proving his claim. Whittaker v. Van Hoose [Ala.] 47 S 741. Evidence held to show that married woman had by antinuptial agreement acquired a right as against her husband to treat property as feme sole; consequently her deed to husband, through which complainant claims, passed title to them as against respondents. Id.

96. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 650 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 667), where both parties claim title through a common source, plaintiff need not establish title against the world but need only show that his title is better than that of defendant. Charles v. White, 214 Mo. 187, 112 SW 545.

97. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & Wash. St., § 5521, immaterial that possession is taken for purpose of suit if it is not tortious and if it does not disturb a prior possession of another. Kraus v. Congdon [C. C. A.] 161 F 18.

98. Possession obtained by unlawful and forcible entry cannot be availed of to file bill to remove cloud or quiet title, but it may be availed of to defeat a bill for that purpose by the ousted party, where he had an adequate remedy at law. Delaney v. O'Donnell, 234 Ill. 109, 84 NE 668.

99. Evidence of occupation and possession insufficient to show title. Castro v. Adams, 153 Cal. 382, 95 P 1027. Evidence held insufficient to show such possession in plaintiff as would support presumption of title from possession. Hebden v. Bina [N. D.] 116 NW 85.

1. Held that defendants had established an outstanding title to lands in controversy by showing that patent from the United States was in third party. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

2. Rule that true owner only can maintain an action to quiet title has no application where one unlawfully obtains a deed from a trustee as purchaser who claims thereunder and at same time attempts to set up superior title outstanding in another. Minor cestui qui trust entitled to have deed given by trustee cancelled regardless of outstanding title in another, order authorizing sale by trustee being invalid. Turner v. Barber [Ga.] 62 SE 587.

3. Mullins v. Hall [Ky.] 112 SW 920.

4. Parker v. Miller-Brent Lumber Co. [Ala.] 47 S 580. By construction, Civ. Code 1901, par. 2942, held to confer title upon person entitled to its bar; consequently cross-complaint in action to quiet title, setting up adverse possession for statutory period and praying decree quieting title as against plaintiff, is a proper pleading under Civ. Code 1901, c. 1, tit. 71. Work v. United Globe Mines [Ariz.] 100 P 813. Where plaintiffs held land in controversy by adverse possession for statutory period, their title was properly quieted as against overlapping claim under a junior patent. Daniel v. Middleton [Ky.] 116 SW 721. Plaintiff who claimed lands by deed from his grantor which lands embraced part of tract deeded to defendants subsequent to and not upon the weakness of that of his adversary.[5] Suing out writ of possession by defendant is a confession that complainant has sufficient possession to maintain action to remove cloud.[6]

Defenses.[See 10 C. L. 1351]—The right to maintain the action may be lost by laches[7] or by operation of the statute of limitations.[8] The plea of the statute of limitations set up by defendant is an affirmative defense of which he has the burden of proof.[9] Title in defendant[10] or in a third party is a complete defense,[11] as is a former settlement.[12] deed to plaintiff's grantor entitled to have his title to such interference quieted although not expressed in deed, it appearing that his grantor had occupied premises adversely to defendants for 30 years. Asher v. Cress [Ky.] 115 SW 252. Surviving trustee who was also beneficiary under will executed trust deed to property in question and for 17 years enjoyed together with other beneficiary the benefits of the conveyance. In suit by one of purchasers under trust, held that trust deed was valid and judgment was properly entered barring rights of trustee or her son as beneficiaries and those claiming under them from setting up claim to premises conveyed by trustee. Doscher v. Wyckoff, 63 Misc. 414, 113 NYS 655. Evidence held insufficient to establish prescriptive title in plaintiff or his predecessor in suit for cancellation of defendant's title. Wiggins v. Brewster [Ga.] 62 SE 40.

5. Doty v. Cedar Rapids [Iowa] 119 NW 132. Burden of proof held to be upon plaintiff to show that lands were land and not lakebed at time of government survey, latter being prima facie shown by fact that premises were within meander line. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340. Where both plaintiff and defendant claimed under void tax sales, judgment must be for defendant since plaintiff must rely on his own title. Meyer v. Snell [Ark.] 116 SW 208.

6. Collier v. Goessling [C. C. A.] 160 F 604.

7. Where land in controversy was wild and uncultivated, and neither complainants, the fee owners, nor defendants claiming under tax sale were in possession, and defendants, aside from paying taxes, did nothing with reference to the land from a sense of security caused by complainant's inactivity, complainants were not barred by laches. Indiana & Arkansas Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Milburn [C. C. A.] 161 F 531. Unexcused delay of fourteen years, during which plaintiff's grantor had exercised no act of ownership over land, precluded plaintiff from maintaining action to quiet title on ground that a deed regular in form and duly recorded was executed by him in blank and name of grantee inserted without authority, and that it was intended as a mortgage. Butler v. Peterson, 79 Neb. 713, 116 NW 515. Where heir who was a cotenant with other heirs allowed latter to purchaser under foreclosure of mortgage given by heirs and widow, and made no claim of title during his life, his heirs claiming under him were barred by laches, ten years having passed since defendant's purchase. Likens v. Likens, 136 Wis. 321, 117 NW 799. Purchase-money mortgage provided that price should be paid as soon as realized by sale of land. Held that law implied that sales should be made within reasonable time, and delay for 35 years in bringing suit, no excuse being presented, precluded relief in equity. Castro v. Adams, 153 Cal. 382, 95 P 1027. Plaintiff who delayed bringing suit until death of all parties whose testimony might be available to defendant was barred as against adverse holder under color of title. McBride v. Caldwell [Iowa] 119 NW 741. Descendants of community owners held not barred by lapse of time where it appeared that they were ignorant of their interest and that plaintiff knew thereof but neither informed them nor took such open and notorious possession as would amount to constructive notice that they claimed adversely. Stone v. Marshall [Wash.] 100 P 858.

8. Where trustee sold certain land to state for delinquent taxes, and two days before period of redemption expired clerk sold land to defendant by statutory conveyance, three-year limitation prescribed by Act Tenn. 1899, p. 1143, c. 435, § 66, within which suit may be brought to contest such title, did not begin to run until conveyance by clerk to defendant, no action being previously available which could have concluded the state. Collier v. Goessling [C. C. A.] 160 F 604. Evidence held to show that defendant was in the open and notorious possession of premises in controversy in good faith, under color of title, and that such adverse possession established his title as against plaintiff in suit to determine adverse claims. McBride v. Caldwell [Iowa] 119 NW 741. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1188, 1189a, 1189b, prescribing limitations in actions by former owners to recover possession of lands sold for taxes or to avoid tax deed, have no application to actions to annul tax title for fraud in tax proceedings in an action to quiet title. Boon v. Root, 137 Wis. 451, 119 NW 121. Defendants, claiming absolute title derived from source common to both parties who admittedly died seised of land in dispute by conveyances through his administrator, coupled with open and undisputed possession for 30 years, held entitled to judgment vesting title in them as against heirs of common source out of possession. Stephenson v. Austin [Mo.] 116 SW 1090.

9. Evidence held insufficient to sustain plea. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003.

10. Evidence held to show that deed under which defendants claimed, by which their mother was granted life interest, with remainder to defendants, was not void as against creditors, and was consequently superior to marshal's deed under execution sale for grantor's debt, and to deed made by defendant's mother by order of court in settlement of claim by execution creditor.

§ 2. What is a cloud or conflicting claim.[13]—See 10 C. L. 1352—A cloud on title is a semblance of a title either legal or equitable, or a claim of an interest in land appearing in some legal form, but which is in fact, unfounded, extrinsic facts being required to show it to be invalid.[14]

Morehead v. Allen [Ga.] 63 SE 507. Evidence held to sustain finding that defendant intended to convey all her right to property in controversy, and that she in fact did so, and that complainant was entitled to have his title quieted. Johnson v. Smith [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 633, 117 NW 563. In an action to quiet title against a sheriff's deed on execution sale, on issue whether execution was so issued on judgments as to preserve their lien after a year from their rendition, or whether directions were given to the officer not to levy the executions, but to let them expire, evidence held to show that no such directions were given. Gouwens v. Gouwens, 237 Ill. 506, 86 NE 1067.

11. Competent for defendants who were in adverse possession to defeat action by showing that title was outstanding in a third person without connecting themselves with that title. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

12. Where rights of the parties have been fully adjusted by a settlement, and decrees entered in pursuance thereof, no suit to quiet title can be maintained. Armstrong v. Campbell [Iowa] 118 NW 898. In suit to remove cloud, evidence held to show that defendant claiming under recorded conveyances from executors of common source of title had no notice of plaintiff's deeds from heirs, such deeds not being recorded, and consequently not valid as against defendant. West Coast Lumber Co. v. Griffin [Fla.] 48 S 36.

§ 3. Procedure.[15]—See 8 C. L. 1576—An action to quiet title must be brought in the county where the real estate is situated.[16] The federal circuit court has jurisdiction of a suit to quiet title within the district where the suit is brought, although neither of the parties are resident in the state where the land lies.[17] Where adverse claims are made by the same party, title to several pieces of property may be quieted in the same action.[18] Suit may be brought at any time within the term required to perfect title by adverse possession.[19] The filing of a notice of lis pendens is not necessary to confer jurisdiction.[20]

*Process.*See 8 C. L. 1577—The subject of process is fully treated elsewhere.[21]

*Parties.*See 10 C. L. 1352—All parties claiming an interest in the property involved may properly be joined as defendants,[22] but parties not asserting an adverse claim need not ordinarily be joined, although the outstanding title may be in them.[23] Where all persons interested are joined, the ultimate rights of all the parties may be determined.[24] A personal representative cannot maintain the action under statutes providing that suit may be brought only by one claiming ownership.[25] The United

Wife of grantee in deed alleged to constitute cloud on title not necessary nor proper party, since if deed be invalid she could have no dower interest thereunder. Greene v. Boaz [Ala.] 47 S 255.

23. It is immaterial that there are others not parties, who might have outstanding titles that would constitute a cloud upon property in question. Mitchell v. Knott, 43 Colo. 135, 95 P 335. Code Civ. Proc. § 749, providing for joinder of all parties known to plaintiff to have some adverse claim, does not require a plaintiff to examine the public records and name as defendants all persons having an interest in the land in controversy, in derogation of plaintiff's title, and failure to include such persons as defendants does not render complaint insufficient to state a cause of action. States may bring an action to remove cloud in title to lands held by an allottee under a trust patent.[26]

Bill, complaint or petition. See 10 C. L. 1353—The ordinary rules of pleading apply,[27] including those as to multifariousness [28] and joinder.[29] The construction of the complaint is determined on the question of whether the suit is one to quiet title.[30] The plaintiff must allege ownership,[31] that he is in possession,[32] that defendant claims adverse interest in the real estate,[33] and that such claim is unfounded.[34] If possession be alleged upon information and belief merely, objection must be made by motion and not by demurrer.[35] If the plaintiff claim by default

26. Unauthorized deed given by heir of Indian allottee under trust patent may be removed as cloud under state law, and possession not necessary in such case unless made so by local law. United States v. Leslie, 167 F 670.

27. Plaintiff has no cause of action if it appears that his petition describes property totally different from that sued for and evidence tends to show that his author intended to convey the property described. Barbier v. Nagel, 121 La. 979, 46 S 941. Bill deraigning title through patent from state, and alleging that defendants claim under tax deed from state to liquidating levee board, and that they rely on Laws 1888, p. 40, c. 23, that through irregularities such tax sale was void, held to state cause of action as against demurrer. Clark v. McNeill [Miss.] 46 S 536.

28. Bill to construe trust deed under which plaintiff claimed, and to quiet title, held not demurrable for multifariousness because defendants claimed title to several separate parcels of land in dispute. Berger v. Butler [Ala.] 48 S 685.

29. Bill asking that trust deed under which plaintiff was trustee be construed, and that title be quieted as against several subsequent grantees of grantor of trust deed, not demurrable for misjoinder, as all parties interested in subject-matter were proper parties. Berger v. Butler [Ala.] 48 S 685. Action to remove a trust deed as cloud, based on theory that such deed was forged, is a distinct cause of action from that presented by theory that such trust deed was valid, but that its foreclosure was void. Hendricks v. Calloway, 211 Mo. 536, 111 SW 60.

30. Where complaint in one paragraph prayed that title might be quieted, and in another paragraph prayed that deed which was alleged to constitute the cloud be delivered to plaintiff, finding that plaintiff was owner of premises, that defendant did not have claim thereto, and that plaintiff was entitled to have his title quieted, was a disposition of the case on theory that it was one to quiet title. Johnson v. Zimmerman [Ind. App.] 84 NE 541. Complaint alleging that plaintiff was owner under tax deed, that land was unoccupied by adverse claimant who was asserting title and paying taxes, states a cause of action to quiet title, irrespective of whether plaintiff was entitled to a general decree confirming the tax sale under which he held. Knauff v. National Cooperage & Woodenware Co. [Ark.] 113 SW 28. Bill filed against tax collector alone, for purpose of enjoining collection of tax, cannot be construed as being a suit for removal of cloud on title caused by sale of such land for taxes, no one being made party to suit as purchaser or holder of adverse claim. Turner v. Jackson Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 923.

31. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003. Sufficient to allege and prove that title was vested in a deceased owner at the time of his death, without alleging ownership at the commencement of action, since such ownership will be presumed to continue. Id.

32. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1638, requiring that plaintiffs have been in possession for one year, held that failure to allege such possession is fatal. O'Donohue v. Smith, 57 Misc. 448, 109 NYS 929. Complaint not alleging in whose possession premises are, insufficient. O'Donohue v. Smith, 130 App. Div. 214, 114 NYS 536. Finding that complainant was in possession and was the owner 12 years before filing petition, and was the owner when petition was filed, not sufficient to show possession where petition was filed. Lister v. Glos, 236 Ill. 95, 86 NE 180. No suit could be maintained to quiet title to 6 feet of lot which it was alleged had been left out of deed under foreclosure proceedings by mistake, where proof showed that complainants were not in possession when bill was filed. Delaney v. O'Donnell, 234 Ill. 109, 84 NE 668. Bill for quieting title not demurrable for failure to allege title and possession, where it avers that plaintiff was trustee under trust deed, that he took possession as such trustee, that he has continuously remained in possession, and that he has not disposed of any part of the premises. Berger v. Butler [Ala.] 48 S 685. Complaint must allege that plaintiffs are in possession, or state specific reasons why equity should assume jurisdiction. Bill to set aside conveyance of undivided interest in remainder executed during infancy and brought after death of life tenant. O'Donohue v. Smith, 130 App. Div. 214, 114 NYS 536.

33. Plaintiff must not only allege ownership and possession or right of possession, but must set up that some one disputes his rights and who the person is that disputes them. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003. Bill filed under Comp. Laws, § 448, providing for release to plaintiff if he establishes his title, must aver that defendants have asserted title to premises. Triangle Land Co. v. Nessen [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1054, 119 NW 586.

34. Allegation that deed sought to be removed did not express intention of parties by reason of mistake not sufficient as basis for suit to quiet title. Garrick v. Garrick [Ind. App.] 87 NE 696.

35. Mitchell v. Knott, 43 Colo. 135, 95 P 335.

under a contract for the sale of land, he must plead all his equities thereunder.[36] Fraud and undue influence may be proven upon complaint and answer, though not pleaded by the plaintiff.[37]

*Answer, cross complaint and other pleadings.*See 10 C. L. 1354—An averment of ownership and possession set up by defendant does not require a reply.[38] No reply is necessary to a plea of the statute of limitations.[39] The cross complaint need not anticipate defenses.[40] A bare denial of plaintiff's title is sufficient to raise the issue.[41] Title to lands claimed by defendants not included in plaintiff's patents cannot be litigated by way of cross complaint,[42] but otherwise where defendant's title rests upon an executed contract.[43]

*Evidence.*See 10 C. L. 1354—The burden rests upon the plaintiff to establish his title to the premises by sufficient evidence.[44] Where the defendant seeks to defeat the action by showing an outstanding title in a third person, the burden rests upon him to establish such outstanding title.[45] Cases dealing with the admissibility of particular testimony on questions of title,[46] possession,[47] and other matters, will be found in the notes.[48]

36. Vendor must plead his equities in suit to quiet title to land sold on contract of which vendee has made default, vendee setting up equities in his favor which, with tender, would defeat the action. Must plead that he planted crops after default. McCullough v. Rucker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 323.

37. Fraud and undue influence in procuring deed executed by plaintiff to be left in escrow with defendant's attorney, and under which defendant's claim may be proved on issue made by complaint and answer, though not pleaded by plaintiff, there being no pleading open to him after answer. Baker v. Baker [Cal. App.] 100 P 892.

38. Where defendant merely pleads ownership generally without claiming title through a different or independent source, or that he has a lien, issues are made up under Comp. Laws 1907, §§ 3511, and 2996, by complaint and answer without reply. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003.

39. Under Comp. Laws 1907, § 2980, unless plaintiff wishes to avoid bar of statute by showing nonresidence or new promise. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003.

40. Cross complaint setting up adverse possession under Civ. Code 1901, § 2937, and praying decree quieting defendant's title, need not show averment that deed under which claim is made was not forged, where it contained averment equivalent to allegation that it was executed by grantors named. Work v. United Globe Mines [Ariz.] 100 P 813. Where answer denies plaintiff's possession in defendant, and denies that plaintiffs are entitled to relief, it need not state that reason is that plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law. Delaney v. O'Donnell, 234 Ill. 109, 84 NE 668.

43. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 650 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 667), relating to quieting title, a railway company made defendant in trespass could, under an answer setting up sale by parol contract from plaintiff, executed by payment of purchase price and delivery of possession, have its interest in land quieted, it appearing that paramount, equitable title was in the company. Lambert v. St. Louis & G. R. Co., 212 Mo. 692, 111 SW 550.

44. Evidence held insufficient to show that land was not within portion reserved under sheriff's sale through which plaintiff deraigned title. Hill v. Barner [Cal. App.] 96 P 111. In action to quiet title where one defense filed to complaint consists solely of admissions and denials, and another consists solely of assertion of title in defendant and his grantees, plaintiff is not required to prove his title and possession. Mitchell v. Knott, 43 Colo. 135, 95 P 335.

45. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198, 116 NW 739.

46. Under Comp. Laws 1907, §§ 1975, 2000, 2010, 3409, the record of the patent is admissible to show plaintiff's title when record shows that such patent was duly executed and verified. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003. In suit to remove cloud from title where plaintiff claimed through a described series of conveyances, he could not introduce in evidence tax deeds to himself antedating defendant's chain of title, where such tax deeds were not set out in complaint. West Coast Lumber Co. v. Griffin [Fla.] 48 S 36. In suit to quiet title brought by heir against executor relative to alleged fraudulent sale by him, executor's deeds were properly admissible as being defendant's chain of title. Livingston v. Taylor [Ga.] 63 SE 694. Evidential matters relative to source of title immaterial and not subject to attack unless at issue. Action to cancel deed for mental incapacity. Gable v. Gable, 130 Ga. 689, 61 SE 595.

47. In a suit to quiet title to land described in the complaint as "west half of southwest quarter" and in the patent as "lots 1, 2, 3, 4," it is competent to introduce oral evidence to show that both descriptions covered same premises. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003. Where plaintiffs occupied strip of beach in controversy by maintaining bathhouse thereon and claimed to be owners of entire strip under paper title, such paper title in connection with acts of Trial.[See 10 C. L. 1355]—The sole issue to be tried is the right, title or claim of the parties to the action.[49] It is within the discretion of the court to allow the bill to be amended so as to include a prayer for the removal of a cloud,[50] and where all the parties are before the court, a mistake in the description of a deed to part of the property in question may be corrected, although the suit is one to quiet title to a larger tract embracing it.[51] Where the cause of action stated is to reform a deed and the question of quieting title is only incidentally involved, a new trial as of right will not be granted although the quieting of title be included in the prayer.[52]

Findings, decree or judgment.[See 10 C. L. 1355]—The plea of the statute of limitations, presenting a material issue, requires a finding.[53] The actions being an equitable one, the court may, as a condition for relief, require reimbursement to the losing party for taxes paid by him, together with interest,[54] and the prevailing party should be given a reasonable time in which to comply with such requirements.[55] The court may in a proper case grant affirmative relief, although only general relief is prayed,[56] but affirmative relief as against the plaintiff cannot be granted unless warranted by the pleadings.[57] The findings and judgment should describe the land with such definiteness that its precise limits will appear from the description itself.[58] A judgment quieting title cuts off any lien which the vendor might have for ownership to which land was adapted was sufficient to establish fact of actual possession. Poole v. Lake Forest, 238 Ill. 305, 87 NE 320.

48. In action to quiet title against instrument conferring mining privilege, oral testimony of plaintiff admissible to explain ambiguous nature of instrument. Payne v. Neuval [Cal.] 99 P 476. In action to quiet title as against contract allowing mining privileges, evidence that oil was not discovered in vicinity until after contract was executed was admissible. Id. Evidence that amount tendered by vendee in default under land contract, as against which plaintiff sought to have title quieted, was furnished by vendee's prospective purchaser, immaterial. McCullough v. Rucker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 323. In suit by vendor under land contract to quiet title against vendee in default, amounts received by defendant as result of contract made by him for sale of premises immaterial. Id. Not error to admit evidence concerning conversation between grantor of mining privileges, which grant was subject of suit to quiet title, and deceased grantee's superintendent respecting abandonment of contract. Payne v. Neuval [Cal.] 99 P 476. Liens against third persons as shown by execution docket not competent in suit to quiet title. Wiggins v. Brewster [Ga.] 62 SE 40.

49. Code 1896, § 809. Defendant claiming undivided interest to land, legal title of which was in corporation of which he was a member, held to have no title or interest in property as against plaintiff in possession. Dickinson v. Harris [Ala.] 47 S 78.

53. In absence of evidence to support plea, court must find in favor of plaintiff. Tate v. Rose [Utah] 99 P 1003.

54. Decree requiring plaintiff in suit to quiet title as against irregular tax deed to pay interest on taxes paid by defendant at rate of 2 per cent. per month held erroneous, legal rate only being required. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136. Successful party required to pay as a condition to the decree one-half the amount paid by adverse party on account of taxes and tax redemptions with interest. Rannels v. Rowe [C. C. A.] 166 F 425. One who sought to remove a tax levy and sale thereunder as a cloud upon title properly required to pay for use of defendant, the amount of taxes made a lien on premises. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6. Plaintiff in suit to quiet title to lands claimed without color of title may, upon decision that he had no title, have taxes paid by him prorated and have a decree for taxes he paid on portion to which he had no title. Langhorst v. Rogers [Ark.] 114 SW 915.

55. Instead of making payment of amount of back taxes and interest disbursed by holder of invalid tax deed a condition precedent to relief, proper practice would be to make order giving plaintiff reasonable time in which to do so, upon doing which relief should be granted. Larson v. Peppard [Mont.] 99 P 136.

56. Suit to quiet title as against recorded contract for sale upon which default had been made. McCullough v. Rucker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 323.

57. Where answer and cross complaint of husband alleges that he is owner of certain property described and prays that his title thereto be quieted against his wife's claims for separate maintenance and division of community property, court may grant general or conditional relief but cannot grant affirmative relief to defendant by rendering personal judgment against plaintiff. Loeper v. Loeper [Wash.] 99 P 1029.

QUO WARRANTO.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[64]

§ 1. Nature, function, and occasion of the remedy.[65]—See 10 C. L. 1357—The writ of quo warranto[66] was a common-law remedy,[67] but statutes now generally substitute an information in the nature of quo warranto;[68] and in Colorado an action for trying title to public office or franchise under a statute is in the nature of and a substitute for quo warranto and furnishes the exclusive method so far as district courts are concerned for investigating usurpations of office.[69] Neither the writ of quo warranto nor information in the nature thereof is in force in Tennessee.[70] Quo warranto to try title to office is a proceeding for the public benefit[71] in which the state's interest is real and not nominal,[72] and cannot be maintained in behalf of any private interest[73] other than by one who himself claims the office in question,[74] and an officer to maintain an action to test title to an office must be an officer in fact.[75]

Improper to "perpetually" estop defendants from asserting any adverse claim to plaintiff's right to operate wagon road over and maintain sawmill on their lands in connection with contract of cutting timber thereon, although contract provided that it should remain in force until all stumpage cut, since plaintiff did not have indefinite time to remove timber, but only such time as would be reasonably necessary for such purpose, and to such time injunction should have been limited. Gazos Creek Mill & Lumber Co. v. Coburn [Cal.] 96 P 359.

An information by the state at the instance of the attorney general to forfeit the licenses of foreign corporations and the charter of a domestic corporation for misuser is a civil and not a criminal proceeding.[76] Quo warranto is the general remedy to try title to office[77] but is not always exclusive,[78] and the fact that there may be an ample and adequate remedy in equity does not mean that the remedy by quo warranto must fail where both remedies are provided by statute.[79] With respect to those rights which the state only may assert, as the questioning of corporate existence, quo warranto is the exclusive remedy,[80] and where the ousting of an incumbent of the office claimed is necessary, mandamus cannot be maintained.[81] Quo warranto is the proper remedy to exclude an illegally elected school officer from office,[82] to try the legality of a removal from office,[83] to oust one having forfeited his office,[84] to oust a city from the exercise of assumed and unwarranted corporate power,[85] to test the validity of an election by which territory was annexed to a municipality,[86] to amend a "franchise,"[87] to oust officers of a private corporation

79. Both remedies provided by Comp. Laws, § 9755 et seq., and Comp. Laws, § 9950 et seq. People v. Michigan Sanitarium & Benev. Ass'n, 151 Mich. 452, 15 Det. Leg. N. 24, 115 NW 423. Though remedy in equity under Comp. Laws, § 9755 et seq., quo warranto may be used to inquire into right of corporation to exercise powers in excess of its charter, under Comp. Laws, § 9950 et seq., especially since, in latter proceeding, corporation may be restrained from exercising any franchise or privilege not conferred upon it by law without necessarily causing a forfeiture of charter. Id. Contention that in quo warranto proceedings donations which corporation had accepted for purposes of its incorporation would be lost to the public in case of ouster held not to defeat quo warranto proceedings where under information, if true, it would be necessary for court, even in equity to take control of property until such a decree should be made as would do justice. Id. In proceedings to determine right to office of county superintendent of schools, evidence held not to show that respondent had ceased to be a resident of county in and for which he had been elected, and thereby vacated office. State v. Hays, 105 Minn. 399, 117 NW 615.

Injunction held not proper remedy. School Dist. No. 116 v. Wolf [Kan.] 98 P 237.

83. Quo warranto to recover office of treasurer of town from which relator had been removed by board of town commissioners. Burke v. Jenkins, 148 N. C. 25, 61 SE 608. To determine whether the facts upon which council has determined one of its members, or one elected to the office of councilman to be disqualified, constitute in law a ground of disqualification. Holbrock v. Smedley [Ohio] 87 NE 269. Though council is exclusive judge of the facts of disqualification, Rev. St. § 1536-612, it is without power to disqualify except on legal grounds, and whether the facts found constitute such ground is for the court to determine. Id.

85. Writ granted to oust city from exacting simulated fines, and forfeitures for permitting persons to carry on liquor traffic, gambling houses, and bave immunity from prosecution and punishment. State v. Coffeyville [Kan.] 97 P 372.

86. Code 1907, § 5453. State v. Birmingham [Ala.] 48 S 843. Complaint held to show actual exercise and not a mere threat to exercise the franchise, hence quo warranto was proper remedy. Id.

87. Right granted to a corporation to operate an interurban railway upon streets of city held a "franchise" within quo warranto statute and subject to be amended in proceedings thereunder for cause (City of Olathe v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 96 P 42), and under Code Civ. Proc. § 1948, attorney general may maintain the action against a person who usurps, intrudes into

where the officers are actually in possession of the offices,[88] or to question the right to exercise the franchise of a corporation.[89] Title to a public employment as distinguished from an office cannot be so tried,[90] nor will the writ issue to determine whether there has been an abuse of discretion in letting a public contract.[91] Laches will preclude one from maintaining the action,[92] but the right to proceed by information is open throughout an official's term of office.[93]

§ 2. Jurisdiction.[94]—See 10 C. L. 1359—Power to issue the writ usually exists in courts of both original[95] and appellate jurisdiction,[96] but the latter will not ordinarily entertain the proceeding if it involves the trial of complicated facts.[97]

§ 3. Parties and the right to prosecute.[98]—See 10 C. L. 1359—In quo warranto proceedings to try title to a public office, the state is a necessary party[99] unless the statute provides otherwise,[1] and the state's name should appear as part of the title in the action,[2] but the omission thereof from the title is a formal defect which may be remedied by amendment.[3] A city granting the right to operate an interurban railway upon its streets is a proper party in a quo warranto action to amend the or unlawfully holds or exercises a "franchise" within the state (People v. Consolidated Gas Co., 115 NYS 393). Action by attorney general not maintainable against gas company to prevent further exercise of rights in streets on ground that municipal grants or consents to use streets have terminated by expiration of period to which they were granted, consents not being "franchises" within § 1948, or, if franchises, matter being local, city could by appropriate proceedings withdraw its consents. Id. Comp. Laws, § 9950 and succeeding sections, held to cover information to oust a charitable hospital from exercising rights in excess of its charter and from carrying on business for individual profit, and for holding more property than it was legally entitled to and claiming it exempt from taxation. People v. Michigan Sanitariums & Benev. Ass'n, 151 Mich. 452, 15 Det. Leg. N. 24, 115 NW 423.

88. Certiorari denied, quo warranto to oust or mandamus to compel board to recognize authority of the president being proper remedy. Overman v. Manly Drive Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 1125.

Code of 1896, c. 94, and not to inquire by what right they exercise the prerogatives of the office of trustees of the corporation. Code 1906, subd. 3, § 3420. Polk v. State [Okl.] 45 S 652.

90. Position or post of chief sanitary inspector not such office as is contemplated by Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, p. 290, § 1, of art. 6. People v. Hedrick, 132 Ill. App. 154.

91. Where a board of supervisors abuses its discretion by entering into a contract less favorable than it could have made with another responsible person, quo warranto to test the right to exercise rights under the contract is not the proper remedy. Duffield v. Ashurst [Ariz.] 100 P 820.

92. Where village was incorporated in 1897, but no attempt to organize government made till 1902, and no taxes were levied on relators' lands for several years, and when relators' lands were treated as part of village and subject to village burdens, in 1906 they acted, held no laches. 97. State v. Tampa Waterworks Co. [Fla.] 48 S 639. Where statutes afford adequate proceeding for determining whether franchises have been abused and should be forfeited, supreme court will not ordinarily determine such questions where initial right to use franchise appears and no good cause is shown for trying complicated issues of fact in the supreme court rather than in proceedings specially provided for in local courts before a jury. franchise,[4] but a municipality, though it might be joined as a party defendant, is not a necessary party to a proceeding challenging one's right to hold the mayoralty of a town because of the unconstitutionality of the act under which he was elected;[5] and when in a quo warranto proceeding or one in the nature thereof the existence of a municipality is denied, the proper respondents are the usurping officials who wield municipal powers and not the municipality whose existence is denied.[6] Taxpayers within the territory of a village illegally incorporated have a sufficient special interest in having the village incorporation declared illegal to maintain quo warranto to determine the existence of the village against persons assuming to act as village officers,[7] but leave to conduct quo warranto proceedings to test the legality of the organization of municipal or quasi-municipal corporations will not be granted at the instance of private relators having no interest in the subject-matter distinct from the public,[8] and the fact that the relator is under indictment by the grand jury of the alleged defectively organized county does not vest in him any distinct or special right within the meaning of the law.[9] One corporation may be joined with another when charged in quo warranto proceedings with abuse or usurpation of corporate rights.[10] A proceeding to try the validity of a corporate organization may be brought either against the corporation or against the individuals comprising it.[11] Mandamus lies to compel the district attorney to perform his statutory duty of instituting quo warranto proceedings.[12]

Leave to file an information. See 10 C. L. 1360—The attorney general or district attorney, as the case may be, is the proper one to determine in the first instance whether an office has been usurped and when the interests of the public justify a resort to quo warranto to try title to a public office or franchise.[13]

L. 1361—An information in the nature of quo warranto challenging one's right to hold the mayorality of a town because of the unconstitutionality of the act under which he was elected is not necessarily defective for failing to set out the facts which make the act unconstitutional,[15] nor is such information objectionable for failure to join the municipality as a party defendant.[16] In proceedings to determine the respective rights of the relator and respondent to an elective office, an information is sufficient if facts are alleged from which the conclusion follows that relator received the highest number of votes cast of any candidate for the office;[17] hence it need not allege that the votes were canvassed and returned as required by law,[18] nor, where relator's right to the office is grounded upon the proposition that a legislative act is unconstitutional, that the act is unconstitutional where the supreme court has pronounced the act in conflict with the constitution.[19] In proceedings to oust certain school district officers because elected under a void act, the petition need not allege that the act was void on the ground that it was a special act concerning a subject to which a general law could have been made applicable,[20] nor is it necessary that the state either plead or prove the conditions existing in the territory affected, or in other school districts in the state, in order to question the constitutionality on the ground that a general law could have been made applicable.[21] An information in the nature of quo warranto against certain corporations to forfeit their franchises and licenses as authorized by statute, alleging a combination to regulate, control and fix prices, is not fatally defective for failure to charge a combination to "maintain" prices,[22] and where it charges defendants in general terms with forming a pool, trust or combination constituting usurpation of corporate powers, it is sufficient without specifically charging the facts showing the pool, trust or combination,[23] and where it charges respondents with acts which were unlawful per se, the information is not defective for failure to charge the means by which such acts were accomplished.[24] In cases of usurpation and ouster, averments that defendant usurps, unlawfully holds over and exercises the office are sufficient against demurrer,[25] but not under statute providing for the rendition of judgment determining the party entitled to the office, since in such case the complaint must set out the facts upon which the relator relies to sustain his title to the office, and, so far as practicable, specify the objections intended to be made to the title of the respondent.[26]

§ 5. Answers and other pleadings and motions to quash and dismiss.[27] See 10 C. L. 1363.—A demurrer admits the truth of the averments that are well pleaded,[28] but a demurrer to an answer in quo warranto proceedings that "neither of said paragraphs of the answer contains facts sufficient to constitute an answer to plaintiff's complaint and information" presents no question for determination.[29] A frivolous and irrelevant answer may properly be stricken,[30] and, under statute, a replication which in effect denies the averments in the return that the respondent has substantially complied with the terms of the ordinance under which a franchise is used is bad.[31]

§ 6. Trial and judgment.[32]—See 10 C. L. 1864—In quo warranto proceedings,[33] questions not within the issues in the case cannot be considered,[34] nor will evidence which is not in conformity with the theories and the law of the case be admitted in evidence;[35] but in such proceedings to try title to an office, the burden of showing a clear title to the office may be placed upon the respondent by the averments of the information,[36] for where the application shows that the relators were lawfully entitled to the office when a city elects to reorganize, and when respondents were elected, and the return does not show the term and expiration of relator's office, the court may assume that the term had not expired when respondents were elected.[37] The theory upon which a case rests must be determined from the general tenor and character of the pleading, viz., upon the theory that is most apparent and clearly outlined by the leading averments,[38] and in proceedings to oust another from a public office, and to award the relator title thereto, the latter must establish that under the law he was eligible to be elected to the office in controversy,[39] for a recovery can be had only upon the strength of the relator's own title to the office.[40] Where a proceeding is against parties as individuals and not in their official capacity, the cost may properly be adjudged against them in a judgment of ouster,[41] but in proceedings based on unlawful usurpation of franchises not granted, in the absence of mala fides or a stubborn persistence in the usurpation, the corporate existence and legitimate franchises of the company will not be forfeited.[42] Where a person has wrongfully been deprived of his office for an alleged disqualification, the court will not oust the person elected to fill the vacancy and restore the relator to the office when in his petition he admits the fact of such disqualification,[43] and proceed-

§ 7. New trial and review.[45]—See 10 C. L. 1365—Questions of law arising in the determination by the board of canvassers and registration of the result of an election, properly raised in quo warranto proceedings, may be reviewed and finally settled by the supreme court,[46] and the court's statement as to the theory of a case is not binding on appeal where it does not appear from the general tenor of the information, or from the character of the evidence introduced in support thereof, that the parties acquiesced in that theory.[47] On appeal from a judgment denying a petition for quo warranto, objections and exceptions as to errors which do not appear on the face of the judgment order or pleadings must be preserved by bill of exceptions,[48] and affidavits filed in a case do not become a part of the record sent up on appeal, unless made so by being incorporated in the bill of exceptions.[49]

60. B. & C. Comp. § 5055, only requires articles of incorporation to designate termini of proposed road, and location of route between such points will not ordinarily be controlled by courts. Pacific R. & Nav. Co. v. Astoria & C. R. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 1044. Options on timber to secure freight for proposed road at full value are not void as against public policy, though owner gave same to influence selection of the particular route. Id. In action to cancel options for purchase of timber in which cross complaint asked specific performance, held corporation are only required to designate the proposed termini, a description of the route therein may be treated as surplusage.[62] The company must follow the statute as to the manner of locating.[63] Where a route has been located and adopted by a railroad company, title thereto passes to it as against other companies,[64] and equity will protect its priority for a reasonable time.[65] The road as constructed must follow the location.[66] A railroad company may, for the purpose of discharging its public duties, change the location of its route,[67] unless it is prescribed by law.[68]

While the location of stations and depots is usually left to the discretion of the railroad company, the power of location has been conferred on the railroad commission in some states.[69] Such power, however, must not be arbitrarily exercised,[70] and the enforcement of an unreasonable order will be enjoined.[71] While public policy forbids any private contract which may hamper a company in the discharge of its public duties,[72] reasonable contracts for the location of stations and depots are valid.[73] A distinction must be made between a contract controlling the

69. Railroad Commission possesses power under Const. art. 284, conferring power to require railroads to build and maintain suitable depots, etc., to fix place for depot. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 121 La. 848, 46 S 884. Statute authorizing corporation commission to order establishment of a union depot impliedly empowers commission to do whatever is reasonably necessary to execute such order. Griffin v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 16. Where railroad has been restrained from abandoning old location of road after it has constructed depot on proposed new line, it cannot be restrained from removing new depot to old line, though location of depot was not directly involved in suit. Cooper v. Mobile, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 832.

70. Railroad Commission v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 192. Order of commission will be permitted to stand on appeal unless it clearly appears that error was committed. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 121 La. 848, 46 S 884. Where railroad maintains depot in Oklahoma near boundary line, order requiring it to construct one within few hundred feet therefrom within Texas is unreasonable, advantage of interstate shipments not being sufficient justification. Order fixing location at point of greatest public convenience sustained, although cost was somewhat increased, especially where officers of company were present at locating and made no objection. 71. Railroad Commission v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 192.

72. Contract with officer to secure his influence to locate station in particular place or to select particular route is void. McCowen v. Pew, 153 Cal. 735, 96 P 893. Contract to locate and maintain private station or siding will not be enforced in equity as against straightening of main line for public convenience. Whalen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Md.] 69 A 390. Private contract as to location of station will not be specifically enforced where it will interfere with company's discharge of duty to the public. Herzog v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 153 Cal. 496, 95 P 898.

73. Demurrer does not admit that maintenance of private siding and station is location of a private station and one stipulating for the location of a public one,[74] and, also, between a contract merely calling for a station at a particular place and one restricting the location of other stations.[75] A valid contract for the location of a depot[76] may be specifically enforced, or resulting damages[77] may be recovered for the breach thereof,[78] in an action timely brought.[79] A contract with the owner of a farm, "his heirs and assigns," for the maintenance of a private siding thereon, runs with the land.[80]

§ 4. Rights of way and other lands, and the acquirement thereof.[81] See 10 C. L. 1388—The power of a railroad company to acquire a right of way in particular lands,[82] and the extent of the rights acquired therein,[83] are usually controlled by constitution or statute. Likewise, the right to extend route through public domain and the manner of obtaining the privilege are usually controlled by federal statute.[84] A grant of public lands for railroad purposes is not invalid as of time made because not subsequently used for such purpose.[85]

Grants in highways and streets. See 10 C. L. 1388—The authority to occupy streets or highways is a franchise proceeding from the state and must be expressly conferred,[86] and all conditions duly complied with.[87] The franchise may be granted reasonable, which is a question for court from admitted facts. Whalen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Md.] 69 A 390. Complaint for specific performance of contract to locate station at particular place failing to show that same is fair and reasonable, or that it was not an attempt to enforce a mere legal right, held insufficient. Herzog v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 153 Cal. 496, 95 P 898.

74. Whalen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Md.] 69 A 390. Contract to maintain a private siding and to stop passenger and freight trains thereat for benefit of particular farm held valid. Id.

75. Where contract merely calls for location of station at particular place and does not bar locating of other stations wherever public convenience requires, it will be enforced if otherwise equitable. Herzog v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 153 Cal. 496, 95 P 898. Contract precluding company from locating stations except at particular places is void. McCowen v. Pew, 153 Cal. 735, 96 P 893. Agreement not to locate stations between two given points is void as against public policy, and where it constitutes, in whole or in part, consideration for bonus agreement, such agreement is void. Farrington v. Stucky [C. C. A.] 165 F 325.

76. Deed reciting that consideration was, among other things, "and a depot on land," held not too indefinite as to location and kind of depot to be enforcible. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 110 SW 1049.

77. Measure of damages for breach of stipulation to build depot on ground conveyed for right of way is value of such right of way. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 110 SW 1049.

78. Freight car placed on sidetrack at which trains stopped on signal held not a depot. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 110 SW 1049.

79. Action on contract to locate depot on land conveyed for right of way as consideration for conveyance is not barred by three-year statute of limitation where road was not completed for two years, since until completed plaintiff had right to assume that depot would be built. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 110 SW 1049.

Under express provisions of charters of Southern Railroad Company, the Laurens Railroad Company and the Columbia, Newberry & Laurens Railroad Company such companies acquired right of way 100 feet in width on each side of center of roadbed where there was no written agreement with owners to contrary. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. v Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089.

84. Where secretary of interior approved survey of Grand Island & Wyoming Central Railroad Company for building line in Grant County, Neb., and approved survey was filed with district land office by commissioner of general land office, held, under Act Congress March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, one entering on such public land took subject to right of way extending 100 feet from center of track on both sides thereof (Moran v. Chicago B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 192), but the fact that survey was sent direct to secretary instead of through district land office is immaterial (Id.).

86. Company incorporated under Act April 4, 1868 (P. L. 62), and supplements thereto, can lay tracks longitudinally on streets of borough, though act under which borough is incorporated provides that streets shall remain common highways for-through the medium of the courts upon a showing of necessity [88] or municipalities,[89] the latter having only such power in respect thereto as is expressly granted.[90] The state may legalize an act of the municipality in excess of its power where it is a power which the state can confer.[91] A municipal grant usually carries merely the right of occupation, and private abutting property owners must be compensated for actual damages.[92] Where a railroad occupies a street in a bona fide belief that it has acquired the right,[93] or where the abutter makes no objection to the construction of its tracks,[94] punitive damages are not recoverable. Franchise to occupy the streets is strictly construed against the grantee,[95] and the grant of the right to construct its line in a street does not give a right to the exclusive use thereof,[96] and is ever. Commonwealth v. Beaver Valley R. Co., [Pa.] 71 A 7. One owning property abutting on remote street cannot enjoin use thereof to reach new union depot established under order of commission, especially where city's consent has been obtained and street was so used at time such person purchased. Griffin v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 16. Tracks cannot be laid in street for purpose of convenience to factory or for yard or station purposes. City of Newark v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 620.

87. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4426, railroad taking highway and opening new one in lieu must restore to former state or to such condition as not to unnecessarily impede use (Hall v. Houston & T. C. R. Co., [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 891) and it cannot escape liability for failure to put it into condition required by statute and as required by contract on ground that contract was made between a citizen committed and two of county commissioners, it having accepted benefits of contract (Id.). Where railroad takes road and agrees to construct another in same condition, any member of public injured by failure to do so may recover. Id. Where railroad closes road and substitutes new road, county authorities cannot release company from obligation to construct as required by statute by acceptance in different condition. Id.

88. In application under Railroad Law, Laws 1890, pp. 1084, 1087, c. 565, § 4, subd. 4, and § 11, authorizing construction of railroads on highways on order of supreme court at special term, evidence held insufficient to show necessity of constructing road in street. Hornell & D. R. Co. v. Trustees of Dansville, 127 App. Div. 867, 111 NYS 845. Mere fact that it is more convenient and less expensive to lay route in street, though properly considered on application for authority, is not conclusive. Id.

89. Legislature may authorize city to vacate street for depot purposes. State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 391. Under Revisal 1905, § 2567 (5), authorizing use of streets with the assent of the city, determination of particular street to be used in reaching union depot is for city and property owner cannot complain that another street could be used. Railroad Law, Laws 1890, pp. 1108, 1109, c. 565, art. 4, §§ 90, 92, held not to authorize municipality to grant franchise to individuals. Id. City cannot, unless expressly authorized, permit obstruction of street for depot purposes. State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 391. Held that under Act No. 136, p. 224, of 1898, that municipality could grant franchise without submission of question to taxpayers. Lewis v. Colorado Southern, etc., R. Co., 122 La. 572, 47 S 906.

9. Covenant to construct and maintain fences and cattle passes held to run with the land. Munro v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 388, 112 NYS 938.

10. Agreement to issue passes to grantors held a personal covenant and not to run with the land. Munro v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 388, 112 NYS 938.

11. Provision in deed obligating railroad to give from year to year, to grantor, sufficient ditch to perfectly drain his land, and what ever crossings he needs, will not be specifically enforced, the remedy at law being adequate. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Payne [Miss.] 46 S 405.

12. No recovery for injuries caused by construction can be had until deed is set aside. Graves v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 91, 112 SW 736.

dent[13] before title passes, and all conditions subsequent[14] to retain the same,[15] unless relieved by agreement or otherwise.[16] Where the company has spent large sums of money under a void grant, ejectment will not lie if the company offers to do equity.[17]

Adverse possession and estoppel. See 10 C. L. 1371—In the absence of statute,[18] property may be lost[19] or acquired[20] by adverse possession.

Where railroad company permits an abutter to erect expensive buildings on its right of way, knowing[21] that he claims title thereto, without objection, it is estopped to deny his title.[22]

Right to cross right of way of other roads, etc. See 10 C. L. 1371—Unless prohibited by constitution,[23] the legislature may grant the right to cross canals or the right of way of other roads,[24] and may prescribe the method of determining the place and manner of crossing in case of disagreement.[25]

13. Where deed recited as consideration the benefits to accrue from construction of road and maintenance of depot on land conveyed, establishment of depot held condition precedent. Maxell v. Mississippi Valley Co. [Miss.] 48 P 610. Where deed recited that in consideration of public convenience from construction of a road to a particular town, and the establishment of a depot on land conveyed, certain land was conveyed, held that construction of depot was condition precedent. Id. Where deed recited a consideration of $1 and benefits to grantor from construction of railroad through lands, there was no condition precedent. Id. Provision, "It (railroad) will cause the said railroad to be completed within one year, and completed and in operation opposite the said lands by the first of January, 1903, and it is understood that if said railroad is not completed, etc., this agreement will be no longer binding," held to create condition precedent in which time was an essential element. Adams v. Guyandotte Valley R. Co. [W. Va.] 61 SE 341. Term "opposite" as so used construed to mean a place or places from which the land can be conveniently reached, considering all the circumstances, and is not complied with by building road to within 10 miles. Id.

14. Provision in deed containing words apt to convey fee that company shall trestle a pond does not reduce title from fee, but merely creates contractual duty or imposes condition subsequent. New York, B. & E. R. Co. v. Motil [Conn.] 71 A 563.

15. Petition in equitable action to recover certain lands deeded to railroad company "To have said several lots under same tenor as if same had been regularly condemned for right of way, depot, yards, side tracks and other railroad purposes," which showed that part of property was used for railroad purposes and part not, held insufficient where it did not show relative situation of such parts, shape of track, etc. Herrold v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 326.

16. Deed of strip 25 feet wide on either side of a strip conveyed by a prior deed held to have no reference thereto, and not to relieve company of obligations assumed therein. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Davidson [Ky.] 115 SW 770.

17. Alabama Cent. R. Co. v. Long [Ala.] 48 S 363.

18. Under statute making right of way public property, title by adverse possession cannot be acquired. Powell v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 1067.

19. For general elements of adverse possession, see Adverse Possession, 11 C. L. 41. Where adjoining owner erects buildings and evinces a fixed resolve to deny company's claim thereto, it is such interference as starts limitations running. Columbia N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089. Where abutter builds houses and raises pond on right of way under claim of title thereto, with knowledge of company, there is an appropriation of so much of right of way as is covered by buildings and pond. Id. Where, in action by company, having right of way 100 feet on each side of track, to compel removal of buildings therefrom, issue is joined as to title by adverse possession and jury find that plaintiff has only an easement of 15 feet on each side of track, such finding should not be limited in operation to land actually occupied by building or to duration of buildings. Id. Where, in action to compel defendant to remove building from right of way, there was no question but that strip 100 feet on each side was granted for railroad purposes, failure to specifically so instruct is not error. Id.

20. Stock coral being a necessary adjunct to the transportation of stock, land therefor may be acquired by adverse possession. Hill v. Barner [Cal. App.] 96 P 111.

21. Whether company's silence while $50,000 improvements were being made on right of way under claim of right was due to ignorance of fact, held for jury. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089.

22. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. v. Laurens Cotton Mills [S. C.] 61 SE 1089. In action by railroad company to restrain one from erecting structures on right of way and compel removal of other buildings, instruction on estoppel that plaintiff was entitled to win if it had no knowledge of the structures and did not mislead defendant held proper. Id.

23. Constitutional provision that legislature "shall not sell, lease or otherwise dispose" of canals does not prevent legislature from giving right to railroad to cross canal where it does not interfere with the use. Pryor v. Buffalo, 60 Misc. 447, 112 NYS 437.

24. Public Service Commission Law, § 53,

Abandonment of right of way. See 10 C. L. 1371—When land is conveyed in fee, extinguishment of right to build the road does not extinguish title thereto.[26]

Establishment of highways over rights of way. See 10 C. L. 1371—Where a highway was condemned and ordered opened before the construction of a railroad, it may thereafter be physically opened without further condemnation,[27] but ordinarily a way must be condemned and compensation be made before a highway or street can be extended across a right of way.[28] In condemning for street extension, company is not entitled to compensation for expense necessary to protect the public or to comply with the statute,[29] for possible damage from the negligent construction of the street,[30] nor for increased liability to damages that it might incur on account of accidents.[31] Where a city extends a street, it must make its grade conform to the track grade and must construct safe approaches.[32]

§ 5. Aids and bonuses.[33] See 10 C. L. 1372—A voluntary agreement to pay a specified sum in aid of the construction of a road [34] or a line over a particular route [35] is not against public policy, and is enforcible unless vitiated by fraud.[36] An offer of aid must be accepted before it becomes binding,[37] and all conditions imposed by its terms must be complied with before it is enforcible.[38] In voting municipal aid, the authorizing statute must be followed.[39] An assignee of a road cannot enforce Laws 1907, p. 920, c. 429, held not to supersede or repeal Railroad Law, §§ 11, 12, Laws 1890 relating to crossings and intersections. Village of Ft. Edward v. Hudson Valley R. Co., 192 N. Y. 139, 84 NE 962.

25. Code W. Va. 1906, § 2343, cl. 7, and § 2216, held not to give right to cross at will, but, if companies cannot agree, the place and manner of crossing must be determined by suit in equity, after which crossing may be made by paying compensation fixed in condemnation. Elkins Elec. R. Co. v. Western Maryland R. Co., 163 F 724. Village trustees authorizing construction of tracks in street have right to participate in determination of place and manner of intersections, under Railroad Laws, §§ 11, 12, Laws 1890, p. 1087, c. 565. Village of Ft. Edward v. Hudson Valley R. Co., 192 N. Y. 139, 84 NE 962.

27. St. Louis etc., R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 561, 109 SW 545.

28. Under Const. 1906, art. 3, § 17, providing that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use except upon due compensation being made, municipality has no power to lay out street over right of way except by exercise of eminent domain, and proceeding under Code 1906, § 4400, relating to counties only, is void. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. State [Miss.] 48 S 561. No defense to city's right to condemn street extension across right of way that it would entail additional care and expense to protect public. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 114 SW 743.

29. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 114 SW 743. Where highway is opened across railroad right of way, company is not entitled to compensation for cost of putting and maintaining same in safe condition, as required by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 5153, cl. 5 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 5195, cl. 5). New York, etc., R. Co. v. Rhodes [Ind.] 86 NE 840.

30. For water which may be precipitated on its track and right of way in large quantities, since it will not be presumed that city will construct street in such negligent manner. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville [Ky.] 114 SW 743.

34. Promissory note. Cooper v. Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. [Okl.] 99 P 785.

35. Farrington v. Stucky [C. C. A.] 165 F 325.

36. Where railroad had determined to build to particular town, but, knowing of great rivalry between citizens thereof and of another town, represented that it would build to latter unless it received a promise of a certain bonus, which was given, held fraudulently procured. Cooper v. Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. [Okl.] 99 P 785.

37. Where certain people made a proposition to pay specified sums if company would build along certain route, on certain grade, etc., building of road in accordance therewith, together with suit for the money, held an acceptance. Shreveport Trac. Co. v. Mailhaupt, 122 La. 667, 48 S 144.

38. Where bonus contract called for completion of road by certain time, and note given therefor was expressly made payable only upon completion of road, time was of the essence of the contract. Cooper v. Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. [Okl.] 99 P 785.

39. Fact that petition for submission of question of municipal aid, under Const. art. 270 and Act No. 202, p. 483, did not set forth amount to be raised each year, but only a rate of 5 mills per annum and that it did not specify number of years except that it was not to exceed 10, held not to invalidate special tax where voters were not misled. Gooden v. Lincoln Parish Police Jury, 122 La. 755, 48 S 196.

bonuses and aids voted to assignor unless the assignment transfers the same.[40] Where part of the subscribers give aid in excess of that called for by the subscription contract, they cannot enforce contribution therefor from the others.[41]

§ 6. Taxes, fees and license charges.[42] See 10 C. L. 1373—Under the statutes of most states, railroads are taxed differently than other propertied corporations, the usual method being to tax according to capital stock, earnings, etc.[43] Ordinarily, a railroad franchise and property necessary to the operation of the road are not subject to a divisional sale,[44] and hence are not usually assessible for local improvements unless made so by statute.[45] Where funds in the hands of the receiver of a lessee company belonging to the lessor are assessed as the property of the lessee, a consolidation of the companies does not validate the assessment.[46]

§ 7. Public control and regulation.[47] See 10 C. L. 1373—In the exercise of its police power, a state may make reasonable regulations for public safety[48] and convenience,[49] and to that end may classify long and short lines, where the classification is not arbitrary.[50] Under a statute requiring the station "in" a village to have

40. Plaintiff held not entitled to mandamus to compel extension and collection of taxes voted in aid of its assignor where assignment does not transfer same. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Coushatta, 122 La. 1079, 48 S 532.

41. Where it is apparent from subscription contract that purpose was to effect connection with certain lines in A., agreement by subscribers to procure a right of way, depot grounds, etc., as may be required at A., does not include right of way beyond connection, and no contribution can be enforced by subscribers against rest for money so expended. 43. Words "earnings" and "net earnings," as used in Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 8496-8499, 8503, requiring railroads to make statements giving amount of capital stock, annual gross and net earnings, etc., for taxation, signifies money and the sum in excess of operating expenses respectively. 48. May pass statute requiring railroads to maintain switch lights at all main switches. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McDuffey [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1104. Laws 1905, p. 77, c. 56, requiring railroads to provide lights at all main switch lines and to keep same lighted from sunset to sunrise applies to main switches used by company, although owned and maintained by another company, and it is liable although owner has contracted to care for switch. Id. Act May 1, 1905, making it unlawful to build or repair railroad equipment without first maintaining at every division point a building or shed over repair tracks where such work is "permanently" done, so as to provide shelter for all men "permanently" employed in construction and repair work, held to apply to repair tracks where "running repairs" are made (St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. State [Ark.] 112 SW 150), and such act is not unconstitutional as denying equal protection because it applies only to railroad companies or persons owning and operating roads, it not appearing that any corporation or person not owning and operating a railroad is engaged in such repair work (Id.).

49. Decree construing Acts of Congress of July 25, 1866, c. 246, 14 Stat. 244, and of Feb. 24, 1871, c. 67, held to give Mason City Company use of tracks specified of Union Pacific Company and of the connections of those tracks with other railroads at or near South Omaha, and at Council Bluffs to move with own engines from its roads east to those west connecting with Union Pacific tracks at South Omaha, and to stop cars at its freight yards and grain yards, though such delivery did not necessitate through transportation across river. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. Dodge R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 844. Laws 1906, p. 133, No. 124, § 1, requiring railroads to furnish equal and reasonable terms for connection at depot to all telephones having over 500 subscribers, is not necessarily broken by refusal to allow to one the "same" terms as are given to another, since conditions of companies may be different. State v. Boston & M. R. R. Co. [Vt.] 71 A 1044.

50. Chicago, etc., Co. v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 456. Laws 1907, p. 295, providing that the same name as the village the name of a station partly in two villages need not be changed.[51] A railroad company may be required to maintain telegraphic service where reasonably necessary to its business as a carrier,[52] but not for purely commercial purposes.[53] The legislature may, to a reasonable extent, convert general duties into positive, absolute ones.[54]

Control by railroad commissions. See 10 C. L. 1373—Generally, railroad commissions have only such powers as are expressly or impliedly conferred upon them by statute,[55] the powers most frequently vested in them being general supervision of stock issues,[56] public service,[57] and operation.[58] Their orders must be reasonable and just[59] and subject to judicial review,[60] although all orders are presumed reasonable and just,[61] and will be interfered with only in a clear case of mistake or in operating railroads more than 50 miles in length freight trains consisting of more than 25 cars shall be equipped with crew of not less than an engineer, fireman, conductor and three brakemen, except in case of strikes, etc., held not void as arbitrary and unreasonable. Id. Laws 1907, p. 295, relating to composition of freight crews, would be unconstitutional if construed to eliminate from its operation lines which are less than 50 miles in length and owned by company not owning more than 50 miles of lines and to include lines less than 50 miles in length if owned by company having over 50 miles of road although operated separately (Id.), and hence distinction should not be based on ownership, but if short line is used as part of system, then it should be regarded as part of longer line (Id.).

52. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. State [Okl.] 100 P 16.

53. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. State [Okl.] 100 P 16. Order of corporation commission requiring maintenance of telegraphic facilities based on theory that company owed duty of maintaining same for general benefits of public, reversed, where it could be operated only at loss. Id.

54. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328.

55. Sess. Laws 1907, p. 536, c. 226, amending commission law of 1905, prescribes in § 21, the last section, that there shall be added a section, designated as § 39, providing that "an emergency exists and this act shall take effect immediately." Held that clause applies to amendment of 1907 and not to law of 1905. State v. Railroad Commission [Wash.] 100 P 179.

56. Mere appointment of the receiver does not oust railroad commission of jurisdiction to permit company to issue stock, under Sayle's Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4584f. United States & Mexican Trust Co. v. Delaware Western Const. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 447. Under Sayle's Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4584f, giving railroad commission supervision over issuing stock, it is duty of commission to value property of each road and all work done on one being constructed. Id.

57. Telephone held a "public service facility and convenience" within Const. art. 9, § 18 (Burn's Ed. § 222), empowering commission to require establishment thereof (Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. State [Okl.] 100 P 11), and where town has but one road and a telephone exchange, and an inland town receiving freight thereat also has exchange, order requiring road to put in telephone sustained (Id.). Under Sess. Laws 1907, p. 538, c. 226, § 2, vesting railroad commission with power to make regulations concerning sufficiency of trackage, railroad connections, etc., commission has power to compel making of physical track connections. State v. Railroad Commission [Wash.] 100 P 179. Order of commissioners requiring company to make connections with another does not give such other company use of complainant's track or terminal facilities, within interstate commerce act relating to interchange of traffic, but declaring that such provision should not require granting of use of track or terminal facilities. Pittsburgh, etc. R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328.

58. Under Acts 28 Leg. (Laws 1903, p. 183, c. 117), railroad commissioners have power to require, if circumstances and public demands require it, operation of more than one passenger train daily, hence judgment restraining order should not be made perpetual, since changing circumstances may render order legal. Railroad Commission v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 345.

59. Where public convenience requires connection, it is no objection to order making same that it will deprive complainant of small amount of trackage. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328. Fact that complainant owned most of land to be taken in making connections with another road pursuant to order of commissioners held not to affect order, since it will be presumed that compensation will be made by way of switching rates or transfer charges. Id. No objection to order of commissioners requiring construction of connections with another road that it would greatly increase danger of handling traffic, since it will be presumed that on application commission will so regulate handling thereof as to protect complainant. Id.

60. Since railroad commission law of 1905, as amended by Sess. Law 1907, p. 536, c. 226, requires regulations to be reasonable and just and gives railroads right of appeal to courts, held not to violate any constitutional guaranty. State v. Railroad Commission [Wash.] 100 P 179. Held, also, that on appeal to courts latter are not limited to evidence produced before or certified by commissioners. Id.

61. Order of corporation commission is prima facie correct and reasonable under abuse.[62] Final adjudications [63] of the commission on questions of fact are conclusive on the courts in some states.[64]

§ 8. Construction and maintenance.[65] See 10 C. L. 1374—By statute, state and federal, a railroad is frequently required to construct its road within a prescribed time under pain of forfeiture.[66] In the prosecution of its work it is liable for trespasses upon adjoining private lands [67] and for actual [68] damage thereto from negligent construction,[69] but not for damages incident to a proper construction of the road.[70] Where a road in the right of way is not a public highway, the company may destroy the same for its own use in lawful manner without liability.[71] While both the company and the construction contractor are bound to use reasonable care to protect the adjoining owners,[72] where the latter constructs the road according to plans and without negligence, at most he is only liable for injuries resulting before turning the road over to the company.[73] The successor of the company creating a nuisance is only liable for the continuance of the same,[74] and the purchaser at the foreclosure of a mortgage executed before the mortgagor assumed a contract obligation to keep a bridge in repair is not bound thereby in the absence of notice or an express provision in the decree in respect thereto.[75] Provisions in a franchise to occupy the streets for the benefit of abutters [76] may be enforced by the public or such abutters.[77]

Const. art. 9, § 22 (Burns' Ed. § 235). Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 100 P 11. Orders of railroad commissioners created by Act March 9, 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 454, c. 241), while not conclusive, are presumptively valid and will be set aside only when a clear case is made. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328.

62. Commissioners' order under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 5553, fixing place of connection, will not be judicially interfered with except in clear case of mistake or abuse. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328.

63. Where commissioners ordering connections to be made retained jurisdiction to enforce order and to settle questions as to expense, interchange of traffic, etc., order was final for purposes of judicial attack. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 86 NE 328.

Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568), "where such railroad has not been constructed and period of five years next following location * * * has now expired, shall be and hereby is declared forfeited," etc., held self-executing (Columbia Valley R. 69. Davenport v. Norfolk & S. R. Co., 148 N. C. 287, 62 SE 431. Mere casual reference to one of engineers in charge of work as a "resident engineer of" defendant held insufficient to show that defendant was doing the work, where evidence showed that another company let contract. Establishment and maintenance of depots and grounds.[See 10 C. L. 1375]—A railroad company must exercise reasonable care to keep its depot and grounds in a safe condition [78] for persons rightfully therein or upon the grounds for mutual advantage [79] or by invitation.[80]

Private farm crossings.[See 10 C. L. 1375]—It is generally required by statute [81] or charter provision [82] that suitable private crossings shall be constructed and maintained where reasonably necessary,[83] and a company failing so to do is liable for the damages proximately resulting therefrom,[84] notwithstanding the statute authorizes the abutter to construct the same and recover over.[85] The obligation may also arise from contract,[86] and is frequently imposed as a condition of a grant of right of way.[87] While the statute is usually satisfied by a grade crossing,[88] equity may compel the construction of a nongrade crossing in exceptional cases.[89] street requiring company to grade and plank and to keep crossings in repair is for benefit of public and abutters. Stein v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 733.

St. 1898, §§ 1810, 1813, requiring railroad operating over inclosed lands to construct crossings and providing that on failure to do so owner or occupant may recover penalty, held not to apply where inclosure was complete only by including barrier including land of another. Miller v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co., 133 Wis. 183, 113 NW 384. "Inclosure" as used therein held to mean a tract of land surrounded by an actual barrier. Id. Neither execution of unconditional deed for right of way nor receiving of damages for right of way destroys right to compel construction of private crossing. Powell v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 1067.

82. Railroad company created by private act is not relieved of its charter obligations to construct farm crossings by accepting present constitution. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Robbins, 33 Ky. L. R. 778, 111 SW 283. Allegation that it was a charter duty of defendant to construct private crossings is sufficient though title of private act under which it was incorporated and date of its passage are not averred. Civ. Code Prac. § 119, requiring such matters to be pleaded, not applying where private statute is one peculiarly within knowledge of adverse party. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Robbins, 33 Ky. L. R. 778, 211 SW 283.

83. Where deed to railroad provided for three grade crossings, they must be deemed all that are reasonably necessary in absence of change of situation, and Railroad Law, Laws 1890, p. 1093, c. 565, § 32, as amended, requiring railroads to construct private crossings where necessary cannot be invoked. In re Ellis, 125 App. Div. 111, 110 NYS 343. Where owner could not go from one portion of farm to another without crossing, legal implication arose that one was necessary. Smith v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 612, 112 SW 32. A "farm crossing" is one used in connection with land employed for agricultural purposes. Williams v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 274.

84. Where only means of removing crop from low lands was over private crossing and company wrongfully closed same at time flood was threatening, company is liable for loss by flood. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wilson [Ky.] 113 SW 905.

85. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), requiring railroads to maintain farm crossings, landowner may recover damages for failure to construct crossing, notwithstanding it also authorizes him to construct same and recover over. Price v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 653, 113 SW 1136.

86. Where railroad company purchased property of another without notice of verbal contract for farm crossings, and there was nothing to put it on notice, it is not bound to maintain same, especially where it obtained a deed which was silent in respect thereto. Forsythe v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 85.

87. Undertaking by company in deed of right of way to construct crossing is supported by consideration. Van Jellico Min. Co. v. Rollins, 33 Ky. L. R. 920, 111 SW 328; Forsythe v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 85.

88. Rev. St. 1899, § 1105 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), prescribing railroad's duty as to private crossings, does not contemplate underground crossing except in exceptional cases. Powell v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 1067.

89. Powell v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 114 SW 1067. Where road was originally built on trestle with private crossing under and adjoining owner has built in reference thereto, he has an equity to have underground crossing continued in lieu of proposed grade crossing at another point.

Public crossings. See 10 C. L. 1376—Upon the construction [90] of its road, the company is usually required to construct public crossings at all intersections with public highways, and in Arkansas is liable to a penalty for failure so to do.[91] In many states, provision is made for alteration or substitution of highways to avoid unnecessary or dangerous crossings,[92] but the railroad commission of Vermont, having decided that public safety requires a change, has no authority to fix the new location,[93] to take the land necessary to effect the change, nor to appraise damages for such taking.[94]

The crossings provided and the approaches thereto must be reasonably sufficient to accommodate the public,[95] and the company must exercise reasonable care to keep them in a safe condition [96] for vehicles in common use,[97] and is liable for negligence [98] to one injured thereby while in the exercise of due care on his part.[99]

91. Penalty, under Kirby's Dig. § 6684, for failure to construct public crossing on notice, being for benefit of county, action is properly brought in name of state for use of county, and not for use of road district in which crossing is located. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 561, 109 SW 545. Not bound to construct crossings except at streets and alleys unless farm crossing. Williams v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 274.

92. Under Code 1904, § 1294b, providing that "any county road may be altered by a railway corporation for the purpose of avoiding or reducing number of crossings whenever it shall have made an equally convenient road in lieu thereof, the company having first obtained consent of" supervisors, it is duty of board to act on petition when presented, and it is not duty of railroad company to first build road. Carolina C. & O. R. Co. v. Scott County Sup'rs [Va.] 63 SE 412.

93. Under Acts 1906, p. 134, No. 125, § 1, it is the duty of selectmen. Stimets v. Highgate [Vt.] 69 A 878. Borough of Metuchen v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 465. Passageway 25 feet wide, with 10-foot sidewalks on either side held sufficient to accommodate traffic of city of 1907 people. Id. Allegation that it was negligence to construct crossing 14 feet wide when it should have been 18 or 20 feet wide, without showing why it should have been 18 or 20 feet wide, or why 14 feet was insufficient. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barnwell [Ga.] 63 SE 501.

96. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Onan's Adm'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 462, 110 SW 380. Equity has jurisdiction to compel performance of legal duty to properly maintain crossing. Borough of Metuchen v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 465. Where railroad company constructed underground passage merely, instead of lowering grade of street, it must keep paving in repair. Id. Township board and highway board cannot complain of crossing with 6 foot embankment where they made no objection until same was nearly completed although they knew that it was to be of such height, and especially where they did not object to 5 foot embankment and court decreed 6 foot as safer. In the exercise of the police power, the duty to maintain crossings in a safe condition may be prescribed by statute or ordinance,[1] and such regulations are not void as taking property without due process of law [2] or just compensation,[3] nor as impairing the obligation of charter contracts.[4] But an ordinance requiring the company to repave the street where the same went under the tracks cannot be sustained as a police regulation.[5] By these statutes, the company is frequently required to keep the crossing in a certain condition without regard to due care so to do.[6] In constructing a crossing, the company must leave the highway in good condition, and mandamus lies to compel this,[7] or the town may restore the crossing at the expense of the railroad.[8]

Grade crossings and the abolition thereof. See 10 C. L. 1878—In the absence of statute a railroad company may usually construct a grade crossing at its discretion,[9] although a court of equity may require a depression or elevation of tracks where it is the only way that joint user can be properly secured.[10] The manner of crossing of crossing held admissible to show condition where taken while condition remained unchanged. Sample v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 233 Ill. 564, 84 NE 643. Evidence of repairs is admissible to show that photograph of crossing was not of condition as existed at time of accident. Id. In action for damage to wagon caught in planking and held until struck by train, evidence of prior similar accidents held admissible on issue of negligence. Woodworth v. Detroit United R. Co., 153 Mich. 108, 15 Det. Leg. N. 374, 116 NW 549. Petition held sufficient as charging negligence in manner of construction and maintaining approach without rail or guards. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barnwell [Ga.] 63 SE 501.

99. One is not obliged to reject only crossing reasonably accessible unless danger is so apparent that one of ordinary care would not attempt to use it. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Dyer [Ark.] 113 SW 49. Negligence in attempting to propel traction engine across defective crossing held for jury. Id. Not negligent as matter of law in not driving directly across crossing. Sample v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 233 Ill. 564, 84 NE 643.

1. Act March 31, 1874, (Rev. St. 1874, c. 114, § 46), requiring all roads to construct and maintain crossings in safe condition, etc., is a police regulation and applicable to roads built before and after. People v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 235 Ill. 374, 85 NE 606. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 5153, cl. 5 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 5195, cl. 5), requiring company to put and keep in safe condition all highways, is valid as police power, though enacted after company acquires right of way and constructs line (New York, etc., R. Co. v. Rhodes [Ind.] 86 NE 840), but it need not depend upon police power, because state has power to provide conditions upon which companies acquire right of way (Id.). Track elevation ordinance, requiring company, in constructing subway, to pave roadway in accordance with certain specifications, and that approaches should be restored as near as possible to their prior condition, held not to require approaches to be paved. City of Chicago v. Hulbert, 234 Ill. 321, 84 NE 922.

6. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4426, company must keep crossing in repair, and ordinary care to do so is not sufficient. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Randall [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 180. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4426, requiring companies to restore highways so as not to unnecessarily impair usefulness, the test of negligence is not whether prudent man would have so left it, but whether usefulness has been unnecessarily impaired. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 423.

7. Petition in mandamus to compel restoration of highway may charge obstruction in language of statute. Commissioners of Highways v. Fenton & Thompson R. Co., 135 Ill. App. 394.

8. To entitle a town to recover for expenditures in repairing a crossing, it must appear that the commissioner of highways directed service of the notice to repair. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Leaf River, 135 Ill. App. 559. The proof must be by record. Id.

9. Grade crossings are not per se illegal. City of Newark v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 620.

10. City of Newark v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 620. Fact that more than one track is laid across does not of itself make grade crossing unsafe. Id. Where number of tracks is not excessive, question whether trains run with such frequency, at such speed or at such angle, etc., that joint user is practically destroyed and elevation of tracks is necessary, is one of fact. Id. Evidence of amount of traffic, number of trains, and conditions, held insufficient to require elevated crossing. Id. Where street becomes so incumbered with tracks as to substantially destroy use as street, injunction against excessive use is proper remedy. Id. Bill in equity praying for elevation or depression of tracks and for general relief held broad enough to warrant injunction against use of certain tracks illegally in street, and illegal use of another. Id.

is frequently prescribed by statute [11] or is left to the discretion of the railroad commission,[12] to be determined upon a hearing of all parties interested [13] and subject to statutory review.[14] A manufacturing company constructing a lateral road under the Pennsylvania statute cannot cross at grade without municipal consent.[15] Where a street is invalidly laid out across the right of way, the company cannot be compelled to construct a viaduct.[16] In most states a proceeding is provided whereby grade crossings can be abolished,[17] and such procedure must be followed.[18] The county commissioners of Massachusetts have no power under the statute relating to repairs, etc., to decree a separation of grades,[19] and especially where the road is constructed under the statute authorizing grade crossings unless the railroad commissioners otherwise order.[20] Unless waived,[21] compensation must usually be made to those abutting upon the portion of the street affected by the change [22] for the 11. Act June 7, 1901 (P. L. 501), regulating crossing of highways by railroads and railroads by highways, applies to lateral railroads (Clifton Heights Borough v. Kent Mfg. Co., 220 Pa. 585, 69 A 1114), though such a road was authorized under Act May 5th, 1832 (P. L. 501), prior to its enactment (Id.).

12. Although city laid out street before enactment of railroad law, Laws 1897, p. 794, c. 754, it must comply therewith when it attempts to open up and construct crossings. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Buffalo, 128 App. Div. 373, 112 NYS 997. Held that, under Railroad Law (Laws 1897, p. 794, c. 754, § 60), railroad commissioners could grant a rehearing as to a crossing order, with due regard to rights of parties. People v. Public Service Commission, 131 App. Div. 335, 114 NYS 636. Affirmance of order of railroad commissioners as to crossing does not prevent a rehearing, especially where affirmed as to power to act. Id. Under Pub. Service Commission Law (Laws 1907, p. 936, c. 429), § 80, abolishing board of railroad commissioners and conferring their power on Public Service Commission, latter may grant rehearing as to grade crossing where former could have done so. 13. Where B road owned by long lease two-thirds of passenger station, C owning other third, both using tracks in common, held, on remand by supreme court of order of commissioners directing C company to abolish grade crossing, C and B to bear expense, B was entitled to be heard on question whether crossing was public, thereby imposing part of costs on state and municipality. Central Vermont R. Co. v. State [Vt.] 72 A 324.

14. Acts 1906, p. 138, No. 126, creating board of railroad commissioners and providing for appeal from orders to supreme court, held to repeal Acts 1906, p. 134, No. 125, providing for appeal to chancery court from order of board abolishing grade crossing. Central Vermont R. Co. v. State [Vt.] 72 A 324. Where, on appeal from order of commissioners directing abolition of grade crossing, proceedings are remanded, with liberty to railroads to file petition for modification of order, railroads may file petition alleging that crossing was a public highway, so as to impose part of cost on state and municipality. 17. Separate proceeding under Comp. Laws, §§ 4229-4260, to obviate grade crossing, must be had for each street or highway. In re Detroit [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 11, 120 NW 25. Under Rev. Laws 1902, c. 111, § 149 et seq., conferring power on commissioners to abolish railroad grade crossings, and § 152, requiring them to specify what portion of existing street is abolished or discontinued, fact that lowered part of street is narrower than street as laid out does not work a discontinuance of unworked portion, especially where other streets are created of greater width than worked portion. Bliss v. Attleborough, 200 Mass. 227, 86 NE 299.

18. Commissioners ordering changes under Rev. Laws, c. 111, § 134, must prescribe the manner of making same and limits within which they are to be made. Boston & L. R. Corp. v. Middlesex County Com'rs, 198 Mass. 584, 85 NE 108. Order directing construction of bridge 40 feet wide, but not showing width of street, which in places was only 33 feet wide, making no provision for taking land, and which did not prescribe material of which sidewalk should be constructed, held void (Id.), and where matter involved much detail and necessitated special investigation, supreme court on appeal will not cure indefiniteness under its power under St. 1902, p. 485, c. 544, § 27 (Id.).

19. County commissioners have no power under Rev. Laws, c. 11, § 132, relating to repairs, etc., to decree separation of grades. Boston & L. R. Corp. v. Middlesex County Com'rs, 198 Mass. 584, 85 NE 108.

20. Where road is constructed under St. 1870, p. 297, c. 386. Boston & L. R. Corp. v. Middlesex County Com'rs, 198 Mass. 584, 85 NE 108. In which case proceeding must be instituted under Rev. Laws, c. 111, § 149, in superior court. Id.

actual damage to them as abutting owners.[23] One whose access to his property is destroyed may maintain mandamus to compel condemnation under the New York statute.[24] The construction of a viaduct over a street as authorized by municipal ordinance cannot be a public nuisance.[25]

Crossings with other railroads, street railways and canals. See 10 C. L. 1379—The manner of crossing is usually a matter of mutual agreement [26] or of statutory regulation.[27] In Ohio the circuit court determines such matter on application [28] and apportions the cost of construction [29] and maintenance [30] of the proposed crossing. If the junior road desires a lesser grade than that found practical by the court, it must stand the additional cost thereof.[31] Under the New York statute, intersecting roads must form connections thereat.[32]

Private connections. See 10 C. L. 1380—The right to private connections is governed by statute in some states,[33] and a special proceeding is provided in Oklahoma to secure the same.[34] Rights and duties under private agreements depend upon the terms thereof,[35] but the mere fact that a private track is put in does not obligate the company to continue it.[36]

4241, 4244, that upon separation of grades, compensation can be given only for damage to property abutting on portion of street where grade is to be changed, and only for damages resulting from change. Damage arising from general public inconvenience, etc., cannot be recovered. City of Detroit v. Detroit United R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 48, 120 NW 600.

23. Measure of damages is difference between value before and after change. City of Detroit v. Detroit United R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 48, 120 NW 600. Speculative damage to business carried on on abutting premises cannot be recovered. Id. Evidence as to effect of other separations of grades upon property in vicinity, and testimony that on other streets slope of street exceeded new slope, held properly excluded. Id. Testimony on damages too uncertain to establish a right to compensation under statute cannot be made certain by throwing burden of uncertainty on city as active party in making separation of grades. 27. Act April 23, 1904 (97 Ohio Laws, p. 548), held to define policy of not crossing at grade if another crossing is practical (Toledo Railway & Terminal Co. v. Lima & T. Trac. Co. [Ohio] 86 NE 515), and junior company cannot defeat purpose of the act by voluntarily selecting place of crossing where grades cannot be separated (Id.).

28. While supreme court cannot consider weight of evidence, it may examine record to see that order of circuit court, in ordering crossing under Act April 23, 1904 (97 Ohio Laws, p. 548), correctly interpreted law. Toledo Railway & Terminal Co. v. Lima & T. Trac. Co. [Ohio] 86 NE 515. Whether crossing should be for double or single track should be left to junior road on application under Rev. Laws 1908, § 3333-1, to court to have manner of crossing determined. Cincinnati Northern Trac. Co. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [Ohio] 86 NE 987.

29. Act April 23, 1904 (97 Ohio Laws, p. 548), held to require cost of constructing nongrade crossing to be equitably apportioned. Toledo Railway & Terminal Co. v. Lima & Toledo Trac. Co. [Ohio] 86 NE 515.

30. Rev. Laws 1908, § 3333-1, requires cost of maintenance be apportioned as well as cost of construction. Cincinnati Northern Trac. Co. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [Ohio] 86 NE 987.

34. Private persons desiring construction of side tracks to accommodate their particular industries should proceed under Const. art. 9, § 33 (Burns' Ed. § 246), requiring such persons to pay cost thereof, and not under § 18 (Burns' Ed. § 222), relating to establishment of public service facilities, etc. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State [Okl.] 99 P 901.

35. Aside from constitutional or statutory requirement, construction and maintenance of private track is purely matter of contract. In re Detroit [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 53, 120 NW 592. Contract, reciting that milling company desired spur track, provided that company would give ground therefor free, furnish ties, to repair, etc., while railroad operated for its benefit, rail-

Cattle guards, fences and stock gaps.[See 10 C. L. 1380]—While a railroad company is under no common-law duty to maintain fences, such duty is imposed by statute in most states,[37] and, likewise, where its road passes through inclosed lands,[38] it must maintain proper guards. Where the company fails to construct or repair fence or guard after necessary notice [39] to the proper official,[40] it is usually subject to a penalty,[41] or, as is sometimes provided, the adjoining landowner may construct or repair and recover over.[42] It is also liable for damage proximately resulting from its default to stock [43] or to property from trespassing stock,[44] unless the injured party is guilty of negligence.[45]

Drainage and disposal of surface water.[See 10 C. L. 1381]—Railroad companies must so construct their roads, especially where it can be done without substantial additional cost and inconvenience,[46] as not to interfere with the natural drainage of surface water,[47] and must keep their drains and culverts in repair,[48] and are li-road company to furnish rails, switches, etc., and made binding on heirs and assigns of parties, held not a mere license but a contract binding on purchaser of mill. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Sanders [Miss.] 46 S 241.

36. Mere fact that company puts in private side track does not obligate it to continue same, and hence where company changes grade, manufacturing company cannot recover cost of making side track conform thereto. In re Detroit [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 53, 120 NW 592.

37. Need not fence depot grounds. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hanken [Iowa] 118 NW 527.

38. To constitute an inclosure, it is not necessary that field be surrounded by a lawful fence, but it is sufficient if inclosed by fence calculated to turn stock. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Warner [Ark.] 109 SW 1013. Under Kirby's Dig. § 6644, making it the duty of railroad passing through inclosed lands to construct cattle guards, company must construct guard where road enters inclosure, though adjoining field is inclosed and there is a guard where road enters it. Id.

39. Code 1896, § 3480, requiring company to put in guards and to keep same in repair whenever owner shall make demand, does not require demand for repairs; but when guards are once put in, company must keep in repair. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Brown [Ala.] 48 S 73. Complaint based upon Code 1896, § 3480, requiring company to erect and keep in repair cattle guards whenever owner makes demand on it or its agent and shows that such guards are necessary, need not allege that when demand was made plaintiff showed to company the necessity therefor, that being matter of evidence. Id.

40. Chief clerk in office of station agent, doing routine work, is not an "agent" upon whom notice to construct cattle guards can be made, under Civ. Code 1895, § 2243, making company liable to penalty for failure to construct after notice, etc. Smith v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 63 SE 801. Code 1896, § 3480, requiring company to put in guards on demand of adjoining owner, means demand on company, and does not require demand on special agent whose duty it is to construct same. Atlanta & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Brown [Ala.] 48 S 73.

41. Where appeal from judgment for penalty for failure to provide and maintain fence guards was dismissed by payment of judgment, suit was pending from time of judgment until payment, so as to prevent accruing of other penalties. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Neal [Miss.] 47 S 673.

42. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 5447, 5448, authorizing adjoining owner to build fence at expense of company after statutory notice, is not limited to initial fence, but applies where such fence has been destroyed. Vandalia R. Co. v. McAninch [Ind. App.] 86 NE 103.

43. See post, § 11.

44. Complaint in trespass for damage done by stock because of failure to keep guards in repair held sufficient without specifying which particular ones were defective. Atlantic & B. Air Line R. Co. v. Brown [Ala.] 48 S 73. In action for damages for failure to construct guards, evidence that railroad passing through plaintiff's land was known by the name of defendant and was assessed in that name held to sufficiently connect defendant. Id. Lessor cannot recover for damages to grass due to failure of company to maintain stock gap, but he is limited to injury to land itself. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Brown [Ala.] 48 S 48.

45. Owner owes no duty to repair fences to protect against marauding stock. Shankle v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 463, 109 SW 1072.

46. Railroad is liable for interference with natural drainage only when it can prevent injury without substantial additional expense and inconvenience. Alabama & M. R. Co. v. Beard [Miss.] 48 S 405.

47. Where road is so constructed as to impede or not permit flow of surface water in its natural course, company is liable under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4436. Missouri, K. & T. Co. v. Macon [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 847. Company must so maintain culverts as not to obstruct flow of surface water. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31. Complaint alleging that pond on plaintiff's property was accustomed to flow through culvert erected by defendant, that defendant substituted insufficient pipe, causing water to back, etc., held not demurrable because not alleging that waters obstructed are waters of natural water course, and that cutting off flow of surface water is not actionable, although subject able for all damages [49] proximately [50] resulting from their negligence,[51] in the absence of contributory negligence.[52] Legal duty may be supplemented by contractual obligation.[53] The duty of maintaining the road so as not to unnecesarily injure adjoining property is a continuing one.[54] A single recovery for the maintenance of a structure flooding adjacent lands must include future damages if such structure is properly constructed and maintained.[55] If negligently constructed or maintained, it is a continuing nuisance, and action will lie for each injury.[56]

Obstruction of watercourses. See 10 C. L. 1382—Railroad constructing a road across natural watercourses must provide adequate waterways [57] and must anticipate and to motion to make more certain. Hentz v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 63 SE 743.

48. Allegations that natural drain of surface water was across tracks, that defendant constructed ditches but thereafter threw a dump or levee across same, etc., held to state a cause of action. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31. Where railroad constructs underground passage and drain preventing surface water from running into same becomes defective, company must repair. Borough of Metuchen v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 465. Company, having adjusted claim for past damages caused by overflow, made alterations in roadbed which included ditch along track, and owner released company from all future damages as "now constructed." Held not to relieve as to damages caused by failure to keep ditch open. Lackey v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 238.

49. Measure of damages for obstructing drains is same whether founded on contract or common-law duty to keep open. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31.

50. Where drainage is insufficient to carry off ordinary rain fall, company held chargeable with knowledge that damage is likely to result from excessive rains. Smith v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 669. Evidence held insufficient to show that construction of drain caused unusual quantities of water to be carried onto adjacent land. McCabe v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 114 NYS 303. Evidence held to show that proximate cause of flooding was not cutting of way through ridge draining slough, but the digging by another of ditch into slough. Block v. Great Northern R. Co., 106 Minn. 285, 118 NW 1019.

51. It is negligence not to provide sufficient openings in roadbed to permit free flow of water from adjoining land. Jonesboro, etc., R. Co. v. Cable [Ark.] 117 SW 550. Count for damages caused by floods held insufficient for failure to allege that construction of roadbed obstructed natural flow of surface water, or that there were ditches, drains or natural courses into which it could have been turned. Graves v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 91, 112 SW 736. Complaint held insufficient to allow for damages because of presence of embankment, but sufficient after verdict to allow recovery for damages due to overflow caused thereby, treating it as permanent. Hart v. Wabash S. R. Co., 238 Ill. 336, 87 NE 367. Not necessary to call expert witnesses to show negligent construction. Morse v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 859. Instruction considered and held not to impose absolute duty of preventing submerging of plaintiff's land by surface water, nor to require better protection than natural lay of land afforded before construction. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Macon [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 847. Requested instruction as to nonliability if change in course of floodwater was not due to any act of company held covered. Id.

52. Landowner cannot enter onto abutting right of way and dig ditch for water discharged onto his land. Klopp v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 377.

53. Deed providing that all drains should be so bridged by culverts that flow of water should not be impeded requires that company should so maintain culvert as not to obstruct natural flow of water. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hardie [Ark.] 113 SW 31.

54. Lessee held liable for damages due to negligent original construction. Morse v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 859.

55. Melendy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 431.

56. Melendy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 132 Ill. App. 431; Atterbury v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 134 Ill. App. 330.

57. Railroad is not bound to so construct its embankment as to allow overflow of creek to pass off in natural course, but, if it does not do so, it must exercise reasonable care to provide other channels sufficient to carry away water. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Walker [Ark.] 117 SW 534. Evidence held to show that backing up of water was due to insufficient opening under bridge. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 129 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 1101. Bound to provide sufficient drain to avoid impounding water on adjoining land. Willis v. White & Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 942. Held negligence to construct culverts sufficient to carry water off lead ditches and then to turn tap ditches into lead ditches, thereby increasing water beyond capacity of culvert. Davenport v. Norfolk & S. R. Co., 148 N. C. 287, 62 SE 431. Where insufficiency of defendant's bridge over tributary stream caused ice, etc., to accumulate which caused water to back upon and turn overflow coming from main river into tributary before it reached latter stream, liability is to be determined by rules relating to obstructing natural water courses rather than surface water. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 129 App. Div. 821, 113 NYS 1101. Where construction of roadbed, flooding adjoining land, constitutes a nuisance, permanent damages may be recovered therefor, company acquiring easement upon payment of judgment. Willis v. White & Co. [N. C.]

provide for periodical floods.[58] The duty is sometimes prescribed by statute.[59] Ordinarily, it must not interpose any obstruction which will interfere with navigation,[60] nor permit wreckage or driftwood to accumulate around its piers so as to do so.[61]

§ 9. Sales, leases, contracts and consolidation.[62]—See 10 C. L. 1382—The lease is determinative of the property leased [63] and of the rights of the parties thereunder.[64] Where a lease is terminated in the manner prescribed by its terms,[65] and the lessor acquires peaceable possession, an injunction will lie to protect such possession.[66] Upon the surrender of a leasehold, the fixtures pass to the lessor.[67]

*Duties and liabilities subsequent to sale or lease.*See 10 C. L. 1383—A purchaser is bound to perform obligations of vendor assumed as a consideration for the right of way,[68] especially where the deed is recorded,[69] and contract obligations of which it has actual or constructive knowledge,[70] but not unknown personal obligations.[71] The purchaser at a mortgage foreclosure must perform the obligations imposed by the decree.[72] In Arkansas the liabilities assumed by the purchaser must be en-

63 SE 942. Where bridge was sufficient except at times of high water, held that injury was not of permanent character, but new cause of action arose at each flooding. Hughes v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 924.

58. Wilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 129 App. Div. 321, 113 NYS 1101. Must construct culvert sufficient to carry off floods reasonably to be anticipated. Hinton v. Atchison & N. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 431.

59. Under Act 30th General Assembly, p. 65, c. 68, § 15, prohibiting obstructing or filling of drainage district ditch, railroad could not construct a bridge which would necessitate placing of piling or other obstructions herein. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Wright County Sup'rs [Iowa] 116 NW 805.

60. Where company, having franchise to maintain bridge over river, proposes to construct new one on abutments of old, and it appears from plans of city that channel of river is to be changed so that old one will not be used for navigation, held that company will not be compelled to put in drawbridge. City of Buffalo v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 126 App. Div. 125, 110 NYS 488. See Navigable Waters, 12 C. L. 958.

61. While railroad is not required to keep open space under its drawbridge over navigable stream free from obstructions when they accumulate without its fault, it is its duty to prevent accumulation of wreckage and drift wood around piers so as to interfere with navigation. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Yarbrough [Fla.] 48 S 634.

63. Lease of "all of its railroad situated in state of California, known and designated as 'Southern Pacific Railroad of California,' with all its branches," etc., held not to include lines subsequently constructed or acquired. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 97 P 520.

64. Where lease provides manner of termination, right of lessor to terminate in accordance therewith cannot be made to depend upon granting of favorable switching privileges. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 261.

65. Evidence of correspondence held to show 60 days' notice of intention to terminate and a demand to arbitrate purchase price in accordance with the terms of lease. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 261.

66. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 261.

67. Lessee not entitled to damages for same in condemnation under reservation in surrender of damages against city, since damages resulted from surrender and not from taking. In re New York, 125 App. Div. 393, 109 NYS 921. See, also, Fixtures, 11 C. L. 1477.

68. Purchaser at foreclosure must perform covenant with adjoining owner, made in consideration for right of way, to maintain fences and cattle passes, but not personal obligations of mortgagor. Munro v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 333, 112 NYS 938.

69. Maintenance of certain structures. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Davidson [Ky.] 115 SW 770.

70. Where way used under contract for right of way was clearly marked and evident, purchaser is charged with notice thereof. Forsythe v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 85. Evidence held not to show that way under crossing was sufficiently used at time of sale to charge purchaser with notice thereof. Id.

71. Purchaser takes without liability for vendor's unsecured debts or unasserted and undetermined obligations for alleged trespasses of which it had no notice. Denver & S. F. R. Co. v. Hannegan, 43 Colo. 122, 95 P 343. Purchaser held not liable to abutter for damages caused by construction where it had no reason to suspect existence thereof. Id. Grantee is not liable in trespass for damage done by excavating, etc., by grantor. Buck v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 699.

72. Where judgment in foreclosure permitted purchaser to disavow within certain time any contract or rights thereunder recited as part of property sold, but which forced within one year after notice of sale.[73] Grantor is not liable for injuries negligently inflicted by the grantee.[74]

Unless released by charter or statute,[75] a lessor is liable for acts of the lessee done in the performance of the public duties of the lessor,[76] and is civilly liable although the lease is void,[77] but not criminally unless the lease was made in contemplation of the offense.[78] The lessee is not liable for defaults of the lessor,[79] but is liable for its own violation of a continuing duty.[80]

Contracts. See 10 C. L. 1384—A railroad cannot so contract as to discriminate in the discharge of its duties as a carrier.[81] Contractual rights and obligations are determined by the terms of the controlling contract.[82] Where a construction con-did not recite right of grantor of right of way to passes, purchaser was not bound to carry out covenant for passes. Munro v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 388, 112 NYS 938. Complaint based on liability attaching as successor of one primarily liable, which did not show that there had been a merger or negative fact that defendant had succeeded to property as purchaser at judicial sale, held insufficient. White v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co. [Ga. App.] 63 SE 234.

73. Notice required by Kirby's Dig. §§ 6587, 6588, providing that actions on liabilities of railroad assumed by a purchasing railroad shall be barred in one year "after notice" of sale is given by purchaser, held to be actual and not constructive. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Batesville & Winerva Tel. Co. [Ark.] 110 SW 1047.

74. Murray v. Chespeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 821.

75. Clinger's Adm'x v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 86, 109 SW 315. Ky. St. 1903, § 769, authorizing leasing, held not to relieve lessor from liability for negligent operation by lessee. Id. Unless lease is made pursuant to statutory authority, lessor is not relieved from franchise obligations. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 97 P 520.

76. Offner v. Erie R. Co., 140 Ill. App. 562; McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096. But not for acts outside of lease and in performance of public duties of lessor. McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096. Company permitting another company to use its tracks is liable for negligent operation of latter's trains. O'Bannion's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 315, 110 SW 329. Entry of lessee which may be justified under charter of lessor, and which is in furtherance of its business, creates no liability at all. McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096. Lessor is liable for negligent killing of employe by lessee. Parker v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 186.

77. Louisville R. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 114 SW 343.

78. Lessor held not liable under Ky. St. 1903, § 795, for lessee's failure to provide separate accommodations for white and black races. Louisville R. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 114 SW 343.

79. Lessee is not liable for failure of gateman to close gates where he is under exclusive control of lessor. Wills v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 625, 113 SW 713.

80. Lessee held liable for overflow due to inadequate provisions to carry off water. Smith v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 669. Where defendant operated railroad constructed by another, it is not liable for a nuisance unless it had notice thereof. Nickey v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 477. That train was being run under orders of another company whose track it was using does not relieve it from liability for negligent operation. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stepp [C. C. A.] 164 F 785. Company running trains over track of another company under orders of latter's dispatcher is liable for injuries due to its negligence and no way attributable to orders of dispatcher. Hamble v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 410.

81. Lease or license of land between tracks and river to logging or tie company held a discrimination, giving such company advantage in shipping ties. Hobart-Lee Tie Co. v. Stone [Mo. App.] 117 SW 604.

82. Under construction contract that materials which could not be "plowed" with specified plow should be considered "loose rock" in computing compensation, word "plowed" held to mean plowed with facility, and a mere "rooting up" of material, or cutting of shallow furrow, or such plowing as required men to ride on beam of plow, is not included. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215. Under a contract for construction of railroad trestles, requiring contractor to furnish piling and to drive and cap it for 24 cents per lineal foot, caps to be furnished by company, contractor was not entitled to extra allowance for capping. Dalhoff Const. Co. v. Maurice [Ark.] 110 SW 218. Where contract for construction work at specified sum provided that company should have option of paying in stocks and bonds, and that, if commission "should not authorize an amount of bonds and stock" equal to such sum, contractor should accept such amount as it did allow in full satisfaction, he could not demand more than was allowed if commission was justified in denying a larger issue (United States & Mexican Trust Co. v. Delaware Western Const. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 447), and nothing short of arbitrary action on part of commission would justify a resort to courts, and equity could not decree a lien on facts which would not warrant commission in authorizing a larger issue (Id.). Where final payment under terms of construction contract was to be made upon contractor rendering clear receipts from materialmen, etc., he is not entitled to interest from time of furnishing last item, where materialmen tract calls for completion within a certain time, it is the duty of the company to perform its obligations so as to enable the contractor by reasonable diligence to timely complete the work,[83] and, where it makes the decision of its engineer final upon certain matters, such decision must be honestly made.[84] Where an assignee assumes a certain contract and agrees to indemnify the assignor against recovery for default, such obligation is not a "debt of the lessor" within a clause exempting the assignee from the debts of a lessor.[85] An assignee of a construction contract receiving money due the original contractor does not hold the same in trust for materialmen.[86]

*Consolidation.*See 10 C. L. 1384—While a consolidated corporation is usually regarded as a new corporation,[87] where the constituent corporations continue, the laws of the different states under which they are incorporated must be observed.[88] States may prohibit consolidation of competing line.[89]

§ 10. Indebtedness, insolvency, liens and securities.[90] *Mechanics' and materialmen's liens.*See 10 C. L. 1385—A lien can be had only where the work performed and the materials furnished [91] fall within the terms of the statute [92] and all statuwere asserting claims which would become liens if established. Dalhoff Const. Co. v. Maurice [Ark.] 110 SW 218. Where construction contract required contractor to perform certain work and to discharge all liabilities against railroad except created by issuance of bonds and operating expenses, and provided that, if railroad discharged any obligations of construction company, cost thereof should be deducted, etc., held that liability for doing things required to be done by contractor was a debt of contractor, and upon insolvency of railroad, creditor could insist upon contractor discharging same before participating as a creditor (United States & Mexican Trust Co. v. Delaware Western Const. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 447), and especially where contractor was in reality owner of railroad and used latter's credit in prosecuting work (Id.). Construction contract requiring work to be delivered free of labor or other liens, and bonds securing compliance with contractor's covenants, gave laborers and materialmen and assignees no rights. Fleming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719. Where directors of railroad company agreed to transfer all its stock to defendants in consideration of an agreement to electrify line and extend to certain point, and provision for extension is susceptible of two constructions, it will be construed in sense that defendants knew the directors understood it. Callanan v. Keeseville, etc., R. Co., 131 App. Div. 306, 115 NYS 779. Provision for extension in contract transfering stock construed in light of surrounding facts, and held to impose an absolute duty to extend and not merely to express wish. Id. Contract as to joint use of tracks construed. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Illinois T. R. Co., 133 Ill. App. 178.

83. It was duty of company to secure right of way, do the grading called for, and furnish material, so as to enable contractor by reasonable diligence to timely complete same, and contractor can recover damages for breach thereof. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215.

84. Courts may be appealed to in case of fraud or gross or obvious mistake. Indianapolis Northern Trac. Co. v. Brennan [Ind.] 87 NE 215.

85. Where contract for delivery of cordwood on right of way is assigned by lessor road to lessee, the latter agreeing to indemnify lessor against recovery for its failure to perform its obligations, on being held on contract, lessor could recover of lessee who was primarily liable, such obligation not coming within clause exempting lessee from debts of lessor. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. v. Atlantic & N. C. Co., 147 N. C. 368, 61 SE 185.

86. Furnishing materials, etc., to original contractor. Flemming v. Greener [Ind.] 87 NE 719.

87. Where length exceeded 100 miles, Laws 1895, p. 961, c. 1027, as amended, relating to mileage books, applies, although constituent companies were less than 100 miles long, and hence exempt. Parish v. Ulster & D. R. Co., 192 N. Y. 353, 85 NE 153.

Bonds and mortgages and priority of claims. See 10 C. L. 1386—The terms of the bonds are determinative of the rights of the parties thereunder.[3] A provision in a bond giving an option to exchange for stock is a separate contract and not negotiable [4] and must be exercised before it expires,[5] but, if so exercised, the company is liable in damages for failure to deliver stock.[6] Where construction contractor is the owner of all the stock and therefore the owner of all property rights and franchise, he cannot burden the property and then share with bona fide bond purchasers.[7] Where an insolvent company is in default and its earnings are being diverted, bondholders may foreclose securities and have receiver appointed.[8] While a court in receivership has no general power to displace priorities, operating expenses [9] may be first paid,[10] and, likewise, such expenses have priority where the labor and materials and sum for tools used and 20 per cent, and bill presented is audited and approved by company, it becomes account stated, and will support a lien. Id.

Provision that "the completed work when offered to the company for acceptance shall be delivered free from all liens, claims, and encumbrances," held not too indefinite to constitute waiver on ground that it could be complied with and lien could thereafter attach upon giving of notice, since inchoate lien exists without notice. bondholders assume control.[11] A court may, in its discretion, order a sale in advance of a determination of the rights of parties claiming liens where it appears undesirable to continue operation under receivership.[12] Where a court decreeing a foreclosure retains jurisdiction to enforce its decree, it may appoint a special receiver where necessary [13] and make such orders as the situation demands.[14]

§ 11. Duties and liabilities incident to operation of the road. A. Obligation to operate and statutory regulations.[15]—See 10 C. L. 1387—Whether a company can be compelled to operate to a particular point depends upon whether its charter requires or merely authorizes it so to do.[16] The enactment of statutes and ordinance for public protection does not exclude the common law obligation to exercise due care.[17] Statutes regulating the operation of railroads must comply with constitutional requirements as to title,[18] and state statutes must not amount to a regulation of interstate commerce.[19] Statutes and ordinances sometimes fix the points at which trains shall be stopped.[20] Acceptance of privileges under an ordinance binds the railroad to perform its obligations.[21] A violation of such regulatory statute [22] usually subjects the company to a penalty [23] and gives rise to a cause of action for any injury intended to be avoided thereby.[24]

tion to receive a car from another in a defective condition,[39] and is liable although an employe deliberately puts the car in such condition.[40] The federal act does not exclude state statutes on the same subject.[41] The Florida statute relative to the equipment of flat cars is inapplicable to cars of another company being temporarily used.[42] An action to recover the penalty prescribed for a violation of the Safety Appliance Act is not a criminal procedure,[43] and the violation need not be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.[44] The complaint need not negative the proviso exceptions to the act.[45]

*Speed regulations.*See 10 C. L. 1388—A maximum speed limit is prescribed in some towns and cities,[46] and a violation of such limit is negligence.[47] Under a statute making a company liable for any injury by trains when running in excess of speed limit, the liability depends upon the speed at the time the danger is discovered or would have been discovered had the train been running at a lawful rate, and not upon the speed at the time of impact.[48]

*Obstructions at crossings.*See 8 C. L. 1616—In many states the blocking of a crossing for a prescribed time is a penal offense,[49] rendering the company liable to a penalty [50] to be recovered by the traveler [51] delayed thereby first bringing suit.[52] The

41. The state law, requiring that all locomotives and cars used in moving intrastate traffic shall be equipped with automatic couplers, is not in conflict with the federal act making the same requirement as to locomotives and cars engaged in moving interstate traffic, but rather the state law is supplementary to the federal law and in harmony with it. Detroit, T. & L. R. Co. v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 482; State v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 571; State v. Detroit, T. & I. R. Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 541. It is not the train, but the car complained of, that is the unit which these statutes seek to control, and the fact that a large proportion of the cars in a train are loaded with interstate traffic does not prevent the application of the state statute to a car or cars in the same train which are loaded with state traffic; not is it the common use, but rather it is the present use of a car which controls, and an allegation that the car complained of is commonly used in interstate traffic can not save it from the operation of the state statute when at the time alleged it was being used within the state for the transportation of state traffic. State v. Detroit, T. & I. R. Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 541. Stops at railroad crossings.[See 10 C. L. 1369]—Trains are frequently required to stop at crossing of the tracks of another road unless safety devises are installed.[55]

Signals at crossings.—Statutes or ordinances usually require crossing signals.[56] A failure to give statutory crossing signals usually renders the company liable to a penalty,[57] and to damages in case of injury.[58]

Conveniences at depots.[See 10 C. L. 1389]—Under the statutes of some states, railroads must keep their depots open for a fixed period before and after the arrival and departure of trains,[59] and must provide wholesome drinking water thereat.[60]

(§ 11) B. General rules of negligence and contributory negligence.[61]—[See 10 C. Where there is no evidence to show that horse was seriously injured, recovery cannot be had where it appears that he was shot. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Brennaman [Colo.] 100 P 414.

Held proximate cause: Failure to give signal at crossing, of injury caused by team becoming frightened at proximity of train. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Stoker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 910. Maintenance of defective bridge, of death of one on track trying to stop train before it struck team stalled on bridge. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 333, 62 SE 396. Negligence in permitting broken lug in door carriage to car, causing door to jump track, of injury caused by falling of door. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hummel [C. C. A.] 167 F 89. Negligent change of signals, of injury caused by collision. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Gossett [Ind.] 87 NE 723. Evidence that team became frightened when train was about 68 feet away held to show that it was cause of accident. Sarles v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 232. Where failure to give signals caused plaintiff to approach nearer than he otherwise would have and to a point where team took fright and ran into train. Kujawa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 562, 116 NW 249. Where team became stalled at crossing by wheel dropping into a mud hole and driver was hit by flying sack as he was running away, finding that failure to comply with Rev. St. 1899, § 1103, requiring that company cover crossing with macadam or gravel, was proximate cause, sustained. Day v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 707, 112 SW 1019. Where, because of delay of fire department caused by unlawfully blocking street, fire spread to adjoining building, held that obstructing of street was intervening proximate cause of distruction of latter building. Houren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 620, 86 NE 611, afg. 139 Ill. App. 116. Where horse took fright at car standing partly in street and shied into ditch, throwing plaintiff out, negligence in so leaving car in street and in constructed ditch held proximate cause of injury, in absence of intervening contributory negligence. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 423.

Proximate cause for jury: Where train approached team stalled at crossing without giving signals, and driver, on discovering it nearby, fled, but was hit by flying sack. Day v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 707, 112 SW 1019. Where plaintiff testified that he was just about to step off track when he was struck, whether speed in excess of ordinance was proximate cause of injury. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Cockrill [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1092. Whether failure to give statutory signals was proximate cause of death of one killed while attempting to stop train and prevent collision with team stalled at crossing, in that it led him into situation. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 333, 62 SE 396.

Not proximate cause: Failure to blow whistle or ring bell or have headlight, where decedent was struck by rear cars of long freight train. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439. Where headlight was sufficiently strong to disclose colt as soon as it went upon track, but it was too late to stop, insufficiency of headlight was not cause of injury. Wallace v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 100 P 904. Failure to give statutory signals, where pedestrian knew of approaching train. Southern R. Co. v. King [C. C. A.] 160 F 332; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Abegglen, 41 Ind. App. 603, 84 NE 566; Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Was racing to get to depot. Griskell v. Southern R. Co., 81 S. C. 193, 62 SE 205. Failure to give statutory signals, where other signals given actually warned decedent or were sufficient to have warned her had she been exercising due care. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 1007. Failure to erect signboard and blow whistle, where plaintiff had crossed in safety but was injured while attempting to hold horse by bit while train went by. Laborde v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co., 121 La. 47, 46 S 97. Failure to maintain gates, where boy had passed safely over crossing and was injured while attempting to catch onto train. Mehalek v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 128, 117 NW 250. Violation of speed ordinance, where deceased stepped from place of safety to place of danger so suddenly that injury could not have been avoided if train had been going at lawful rate. King v. Wabash R. Co., 211 Mo. 1, 109 SW 671. Negligent speed in violation of ordinance, where train had slowed to speed limit before striking decedent. Holland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 210 Mo. 338, 109 SW 19. Where it does not appear that cinder which penetrated into plaintiff's eye was large enough to have been arrested by a spark arrester, such accident is not a probable result of failure to provide arrester. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Baxter, 33 Ky. L. R. 305, 110 SW 248. Where train was so near at time trainmen discovered traveler that application of brakes would not have avoided collision, it is immaterial that they did not apply them at once. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Defective ratchet on brake which decedent was operating held not to have increased danger or contributed to injury caused by derailment. Derrickson's Adm'r v. Swann-Day Lumber Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 191. Absence of headlight, where decedent could have clearly seen train had he looked and where it would not have warned engineer of peril in time to stop. Strickland v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 161. Failure to send back flagman, where rear train saw train standing on track when 1½ miles distant. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lacy [Kan.] 97 P 1025. Placing of sand pile in adjacent lot, thereby at-nor is it necessary that defendant should have foreseen the particular injury sustained,[66] provided it should have reasonably anticipated some injury from its negligence.[67] The failure of a third party owing no duty to affirmatively act cannot be relied upon as an intervening cause.[68] Where defendant negligently creates a situation of apparent peril, it is liable for injury sustained by plaintiff in attempting to escape therefrom though in fact no danger exists.[69] Railroad is not liable for acts of its servants beyond the scope of their authority and not in the performance of their duties,[70] and the doctrine of "discovered peril" is inapplicable.[71] A rule prohibiting a specific act, however, is no defense if the employe acts in the discharge of his duty.[72] A car company engaged with a railroad company in operating fruit cars[73] is liable to a brakeman for a negligent[74] latent defect in the car.[75]

tracting children to vicinity of tracks, held to have nothing to do with injury to one attempting to board moving car. Swartwood's Guardian v. Lainsville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 785, 111 SW 305. Where deceased stepped immediately in front of engine, his negligence, and not prior negligence of company, was proximate cause of injury. Sutton v. Lee Logging Co., 121 La. 557, 46 S 649.

65. Instruction that plaintiff could not recover unless failure to ring bell or excessive speed was cause of team taking fright held properly refused as ignoring liability, if it was concurring cause proximately contributing. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227.

66. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stepp [C. C. A.] 164 F 785.

67. Held that company unlawfully blocking street should foresee delay to fire apparatus, and hence greater damage by fire. Houren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 620, 86 NE 611. Where train standing on crossing is opened to permit team to pass, held that trainmen should have foreseen physical injury from fright by sudden closing while team was passing (St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Murdock [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 139), and held that negligence was proximate cause thereof rather than physical condition of plaintiff (Id.). Where defendant could not reasonably anticipate that one desiring information of freight agent would leave office and follow him into car, negligence in making coupling, resulting in injury to him, is not proximate cause thereof. Louthian v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 665.

68. Failure of policemen to uncouple cars and let them open at crossing by running down decline held not to relieve company from liability for damages arising from delay of fire department. Houren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 620, 86 NE 611.

69. Jumped from bridge to escape apparent collision, although in fact train could have stopped before striking him (Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199), and although he acted imprudently in jumping (Id.).

70. Not liable for injury caused by throwing of coal from freight car by yard master in violation of rule. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Lavendusky [Ark.] 113 SW 204.

71. Doctrine of discovered peril has no application to injury caused by yard master throwing coal, he acting beyond scope of his authority. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Lavendusky [Ark.] 113 SW 204.

72. Rule prohibiting employes from placing torpedoes on track near station does not relieve company unless employe acted willfully or not in furtherance of any duty within the scope of his authority. Rhinesmith v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 15.

73. Evidence of relations between Continental Fruit Express and railroads held to sustain finding that it was engaged with railroad in operation of fruit cars. Continental Fruit Exp. v. Leas [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 129.

74. Evidence held to authorize finding of negligence in attaching handholds on freight cars with lag screws instead of nuts and bolts, although Master Car Builders' Association authorizes use of lag screws. Continental Fruit Exp. v. Leas [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 129.

75. Continental Fruit Exp. v. Leas [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 129.

76. Laws 1907, p. 491, c. 595, abrogating defense of contributory negligence in certain cases, has no application to cause of action accruing before its passage. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102. In Tennessee, plaintiff's negligence is no defense, but goes only in mitigation of damages. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Davis [C. C. A.] 161 F 334. Instruction that if defendant was negligent plaintiff could recover, but amount would be reduced in proportion to amount of negligence of plaintiff, held not erroneous, as not taking into account relative negligence. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hardy [Ga.] 62 SE 71.

77. One who voluntarily takes a risk so obvious that the taking thereof is a failure to exercise ordinary care cannot hold another for injuries resulting therefrom. Southern R. Co. v. Hogan [Ga.] 62 SE 64.

Negligence for jury: In going in front of car to draw water instead of drawing from side of car. Louisiana & T. Lumber Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 950. Plaintiff held not negligent per se in being on track in effort to stop train and prevent injury to team stalled at crossing, and in remaining there until struck, being confused by bright headlight. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 333, 62 SE 396.

Held negligent: Believing that approaching train was his, attempting to cross track ahead of it without stopping after crawling the part of plaintiff proximately contributing to the injury [78] will defeat recovery [79] unless the defendant is guilty of willful or wanton negligence,[80] or after discovering [81] and realizing [82] plaintiff's perilous position,[83] defendant could, by the means at between cars standing on adjoining track. Griskell v. Southern R. Co., 81 S. C. 193, 62 SE 205. Special finding that accident would have been averted if plaintiff had stopped "instantly" when he saw cars, but that he could not stop instantly, is not inconsistent with general verdict for plaintiff, in effect finding that he did not discover train in time to avoid injury. Antonian v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877. Finding for plaintiff based on finding that he did not see train in time to avoid it held consistent with instruction that if plaintiff by stopping instantly at any time when train was "in view of him," could have avoided injury, he was negligent. When "in view of him" is construed to mean actual sight of. Id. Where jury find that plaintiff did not see train in time to avoid injury, and that he exercised ordinary care in approaching crossing, they are not required to find for defendant, under instruction that, if plaintiff could have seen cars in time to have avoided injury by stopping instantly, it was his duty so to do, etc. Id.

78. Instructions on contributory negligence held properly refused as not requiring that negligence should be proximate cause of injury to defeat recovery. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 453. Where licensee near lumber pile is in better position than employes to discover liability of projecting board to be struck by train, his negligence is proximate cause of injury. Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 102.

Not proximate cause: Negligence in being between cars where brakeman saw him before uncoupling air hose which struck plaintiff and there was no need for haste in disconnecting hose. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lannon [Ark.] 112 SW 177.

79. Williams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 956. Contributory negligence defeats recovery unless company is negligent after discovering peril. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396.

80. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Moore [Ga. App.] 63 SE 642. Evidence held to support finding of willful negligence in running down child on licensed path. Tarashonsky v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1074. Conflicting evidence as to when decedent stepped upon track and as to distance within which train could have been stopped held to make willful negligence for jury. Zelenka v. Union Stockyards Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 103. Operating train through streets of populous city at great rate of speed and without signals may constitute wantonness, though they did not know that any one in fact was on track. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Baker [Kan.] 98 P 804. Petition construed to charge "willful and wanton" negligence in running over plaintiff while unconscious on track. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Moore [Ga. App.] 63 SE 642. Instruction that "wanton negligence is the failure of one charged with a duty to exercise an honest effort in employment of all reasonable means to prevent injury" held insufficient charge on wanton negligence, and where employe did not know of presence of person, it is necessary that instruction should tell what condition will supply lack of knowledge. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Baker [Kan.] 98 P 804.

81. Answer "No" to question "Did the employes * * * discover the peril of plaintiff too late to prevent injury by the exercise of ordinary care" held, in view of other answers, to mean that he was not discovered at all. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Jenkins [Kan.] 98 P 208. Instruction that, notwithstanding contributory negligence, plaintiff could recover if trainmen could have avoided injury, held erroneous in not predicating negligence on previous discovery of peril. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Ark.] 114 SW 228. Complaint failing to aver that defendant discovered decedent's perilous position in time to avoid injury held insufficient. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Bray [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1004. Evidence that track was straight that view was unobstructed, that engineer was looking, held to make question for jury whether he saw child, although he testified that he did not. Southern R. Co. v. Forrester [Ala.] 48 S 69. Evidence as to surrounding conditions, day being cloudy, held to make question for jury whether engineer saw or should have seen child on track. Harrison v. Southern R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 408. Where decedent was seen as undistinguishable object about 300 feet ahead, but was not discerned to be a human being until within 75 or 80 feet, held, as matter of law, not negligent in not stopping, evidence showing that it requires about 500 feet to stop. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488.

82. Held no material difference in instruction making doctrine of discovered peril applicable if it was "apparent" or "reasonably apparent" that one on tracks would not get off, instead of if they "realized his peril." Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reynolds [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 340. Conflicting evidence of brakeman, who discovered body on track, that he did not know whether it was human being or not, and that train was promptly stopped on signal, held to show no liability. Jones v. New Orleans G. N. R. Co., 122 La. 354, 47 S 679. Not applicable where situation did not apprise trainmen that decedent was going to cross until too late to avoid injury. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 1007. Mere fact that brakeman saw deceased standing on flat car as car was "kicked" into it in making coupling does not show that he knew of his peril, where decedent was accustomed to such operations. Davis v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 1121. Where engineer does all in his power to stop after he sees one slowly approaching crossing quicken pace to cross, defendant is not liable, although engineer saw her when a quarter of a mile distant, since he had a right to assume that she would not place herself in position of danger. Sands v.

hand,[84] in the exercise of reasonable care,[85] have avoided the injury.[86] But the Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 47 S 323. Evidence that plaintiff approached crossing in manner indicating intention to cross immediately as to distance when seen by engineer, and as to distance within which train could be stopped, held to authorize submission of last clear chance doctrine. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Baker [Okl.] 95 P 433. Negligence of trainmen at time they could properly assume that traveler would not attempt to cross will not support recovery under last clear chance doctrine. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21.

For jury: In not avoiding injuring one leaning over rail as if to tie shoe while train ran from 180 to 296 feet at rate of 6 to 12 miles per hour. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. v. Fain, 85 Ark. 532, 109 SW 514.

83. Where it is admitted that engineer saw plaintiff in time to stop, but only issue is whether he was walking on track or beside it and suddenly turned onto it ahead of train, held proper to qualify instructions on contributory negligence with one on discovered peril. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Cockrill [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1092. Evidence that employes, on backing engine, saw plaintiff on track waiting for another train to pass, apparently unaware of approaching engine, and had time to stop, etc., held to justify charge on discovered peril. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reynolds [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 340. Evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff was walking in place of danger and to show that she did not suddenly step into danger ahead of engine. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Ark.] 117 SW 541.

84. Must use every means within power, consistent with safety of train, to avoid injury. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Summers [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 211; Maxfield v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 483; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193. Instruction making liability depend upon failure to use means at hand only if ordinarily prudent person would have used them held erroneous. Maxfield v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 483. Must use every means at hand, and not enough that employes attempt to attract his attention without attempting to stop engine, which could have been done. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reynolds [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 340. Instruction that if trainmen attempted to attract plaintiff's attention, and that if means were such as ordinarily prudent person would have used, to find for defendant though they did not apply brakes or attempt to stop, held on weight. Id. Failure to use all means at hand after discovering peril is not actionable unless use of such means could reasonably have prevented injury. Parkham v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 154. Where engineer saw plaintiff walking so near track as to be in a place of danger and apparently oblivious to danger and did not give warning signal, there being time for plaintiff to heed same and step to a place of safety, company is liable. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Ark.] 117 SW 541.

85. Where train was going at speed of 8 miles per hour when decedent was discovered 60 feet ahead, failure to stop before striking her held not negligence, although there is testimony that it could have been stopped in 20 or 30 feet, only five seconds elapsing between discovery and collision. Hawkins v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 16. Where collision occurred which would not have happened had train been at such distance as would have enabled engineer to stop after discovering danger, no recovery can be had on last clear chance doctrine. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Whether engineer, after discovering peril of one walking on tracks, could have avoided injury, held for jury. Neary v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 37 Mont. 461, 97 P 944. Where fireman discovered plaintiff walking along side track unconscious of train approaching only a little faster than a walk, negligence in yelling to engineer and not ringing bell or sounding whistle held for jury. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193.

86. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Ark.] 117 SW 541; Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Contributory negligence is not defense under doctrine of discovered peril. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reynolds [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 340. Where trainmen discovered one's peril in time to avoid injuring him and failed so to do, their negligence, and not the negligence of such person in getting into peril, is proximate cause of injury. Potter v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 593. While initial negligence in going onto track will defeat recovery for antecedent negligence of company, it will not prevent recovery for negligence after discovering his peril, providing there is not concurrent negligence. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. McWhorter [Ala.] 47 S 84. Where defendant discovered peril of deceased lying on track in time to avoid striking him and failed to use due care, held liable. Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 S 472. Instruction that, after discovering plaintiff's peril, reasonable care required that engineer use every precaution at hand to avoid injury, held to properly submit issue of discovered peril. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901.

Doctrine applicable: Where undisputed facts tend to show that engineer and fireman discovered driver's peril in time to avoid injury by use of means at hand, court properly submitted issue of discovered peril. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Summers [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 211. Although plaintiff has been guilty of negligence in entering long narrow chute between railroad track on one side and insurmountable obstacles on other, he may recover if engineer saw the situation in time to avoid collision and failed to do so. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Clinkenbeard, 77 Kan. 481, 94 P 1001. Evidence in action for running down trespasser at twilight on nearly straight track in city limits held to warrant finding that operatives could have avoided injury after discovering decedent, or by exercise of due care could have discovered her, by giving warnings or slackening train. Everett v.

"discovered peril" doctrine being based upon the rule of sole proximate cause, it does not authorize a recovery where plaintiff's negligence actually concurs therewith.[87] While actual knowledge of plaintiff's peril is usually required to invoke the doctrine,[88] it has been extended in some states to cases where defendant by the exercise of the care owed to the plaintiff would have discovered his peril.[89] One placed in a position of peril without fault on his part, by the negligence of defendant, is not negligent in acting as it seems prudent at the time, though it was not the best method of escaping therefrom.[90] Contributory negligence is to be determined from all the circumstances,[91] and the negligence of a child is to be tested by the care which one of his age would ordinarily exercise under the circumstances.[92] Negligence of carrying road does not preclude recovery by its passengers against another company for negligent collision.[93]

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486. Though precedent and concurrent negligence is without dispute, liability under last clear chance doctrine is usually for jury. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466.

Not applicable: Where one driving along side of track turned suddenly onto same ahead of engine, recovery cannot be had on last clear chance doctrine. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466. Evidence held insufficient to show that engineer saw plaintiff's peril in time to stop where he attempted to pass immediately in front of engine. Whitney v. Texas Cent. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 70.

87. Where one on track is conscious of his peril and does not get off, no recovery can be had. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. McWhorter [Ala.] 47 S 84. Where liability of board projecting from pile to be struck by train is equally apparent to nearby licensee and employes, negligence or fault of both continue up to moment of accident, and last clear chance doctrine cannot apply. Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 102.

88. Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 S 472. Evidence that one of crew on switch engine was looking when engine commenced to back and backed onto plaintiff held to make case for jury. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. Evidence of danger signals some distance from where decedent was found held sufficient to carry question of knowledge to jury. Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 P 472.

89. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808. Evidence held to authorize finding that if trainmen had exercised due care they would have discovered glare of street car head light as it was about to enter onto track in time to avoid collision. Waliy v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 174. Where fireman could not see deceased until within 300 or 400 feet of him and in fact did not see him, and train was running at rate of 50 miles per hour, requiring only about 5½ seconds to cover distance, discovered peril cannot be predicated on failure to discover, since fireman cannot give entire time to discovering peril. McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33.

90. Ft. Worth & R. C. R. Co. v. Eddlemen [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 425. Doctrine of sudden peril held applicable where evidence showed that there was imminent danger of collision with lever car which justified efforts to escape injury. Douglass v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15. Instruction on emergency held proper, though accident occurred at crossing, where circumstances authorized finding that plaintiff thought that way was clear. Id.

91. Where only evidence of warning was shout 100 feet away in opposite direction from danger, in answering special issue as to whether plaintiff was warned, jury should consider whether such shout ought to have been understood as a warning of danger to him. Antonian v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877.

92. In action by parents for injury to child entrusted by mother to care of 11-year-old boy, instructions submitting negligence of boy must exact only such care as a boy of his age would ordinarily exercise under same circumstances. Galveston H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787.

97. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dalton [Ky.] 113 SW 842. Where company falls in the trespassers [98] and bare licensees [99] is not to willfully or wantonly injure them,[1] and there being no duty to discover their presence on the track,[2] no duty arises until they are in fact discovered,[3] after which reasonable care must be exercised.[4] There is, performance of its duties in operation of trains and injures licensee, it is liable unless licensee was guilty of contributory negligence. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442.

98. One walking along path in yards not a public highway is a trespasser. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Lavendusky [Ark.] 113 SW 204. Evidence held to show that child killed on tracks was a trespasser. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Under evidence whether decedent was at crossing when killed. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Earls' Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 854. Unless track is in street or public habitually uses same, one walking thereon is a trespasser. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson [Ky.] 115 SW 798. Evidence as to use and recognition held to make question for jury whether street existed where plaintiff was struck. Id. One engaged in moving property onto tracks to save from raging fire held a mere volunteer and company owed no duty except not to wantonly or recklessly injure him. Springer v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 801. Where company unlawfully blocks crossing, one leaving street to go around obstruction is not a trespasser. Kurt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 838, 111 NYS 859. Railroad Law, Laws 1890, p. 1101, c. 565, § 53, prohibiting persons from walking along track, held not to make one walking along same to get around train unlawfully blocking crossing a trespasser. Id. Where licensee is designated as a trespasser, the error is not cured by instruction that company must keep lookout and give warning and must keep trains under control. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442.

99. Licensee is one who is neither a passenger, servant nor trespasser, and not standing in any contractual relation to the railroad, and is permitted to come onto its premises for his own convenience. Gainesville & G. R. Co. v. Peck, 55 Fla. 402, 46 S 1019. Person at place within private grounds, which has been habitually used by public, is a licensee and not a trespasser. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442. Where plaintiff procured permission of night yard master to go into yards to search for a relative, held that company owed no duty to give notice to switching crews of his presence. Shults v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 463. Where company maintains spur track on private premises to haul out produce, it and employes are licensees, and it must use reasonable care. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Hendrix [Ind. App.] 87 NE 663. While railroad cannot alienate any part of its right of way so as to interfere with a discharge of its public duties, it may permit construction of drainage ditch over same, and employe of owner thereof on right of way cleaning ditch is not a trespasser. Mize v. Rocky Mountain Bell Tel. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 971.

1. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 133 Ill. App. 56; Fosbury v. Aurora, E. & C. R. Co., 141 Ill. App. 98; Shults v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 463; Kurt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 838, 111 NYS 859; Southern R. Co. v. Fisk [C. C. A.] 159 F 373. Ordinarily owes no duty to protect trespassers. Smalley v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 423, 98 P 311. Owes no duty greater than in other property owner would owe under same circumstances. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Evidence held to show that engineer did not discover child in time to avoid injuring it and was not wantonly negligent. Id. Where no one saw killing which occurred at place where there were no residences, held no proof of wantonness or willfullness. Bailey v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 Pa. 516, 69 A 998. Plaintiff, mill employe, alleged that one of defendant's railroad trains was left standing in yards of mill company, that it was not defendant's custom to move same at night, that mill employes were accustomed to travel through yards, that plaintiff was injured while crossing between cars by starting thereof without warning, etc., held not to charge simple negligence, it not appearing that company omitted any duty to plaintiff (Birmingham S. R. Co. v. Kendrick [Ala.] 46 S 588), nor does it charge wanton negligence, it not showing that defendant's servants knew that employes were accustomed to climb between cars (Id.). Violation of speed ordinance does not constitute willful injury. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 133 Ill. App. 56.

2. Owes no duty to keep lookout or give warning to trespasser. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442; Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Duty to discover trespasser is same whether a child or an adult. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Not negligent not to keep lookout for children trespassing on track. Id. Bound to exercise ordinary care to discover trespasser not guilty of contributory negligence. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Poteet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 883.

3. Cummings' Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 584, 110 SW 809; O'Bannion's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 315, 110 SW 329; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Russell [Ark.] 113 SW 1021. Owes no duty to bare licensee of previous preparation for protection. Harlow's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 108 Va. 691, 62 SE 941. Where children were always ordered from yards, fact that they were frequently therein did not impose duty until discovered. Smalley v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 423, 98 P 311.

4. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Raines [Ark.] 111 SW 262; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Earls' Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 854. Though failure to give statutory signals is not negligence as matter of law as to one on tracks not at crossing, it may be negligence as matter of fact. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Poteet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 883. Finding that deceased was discovered in time to have avoided injury is not supported by testi-however, a tendency to exact a higher care where the road runs through a thickly populated locality or place where the presence of people on the track is to be anticipated,[5] although the use does not amount to an implied license.[6] Where an express or implied license has been given to an individual to use the tracks,[7] or the public have openly used the same with the knolwedge of [8] and without objection from the company for such a period as to raise an implied license,[9] the company must exercise ordinary care [10] in the maintenance of the premises,[11] in the selection of its trainmen,[12] and in the operation of its trains.[13] One exceeding the license becomes a trespasser.[14] A company operating in public streets must use commensurate care.[15]

mony of one who was inside of his house and did not see engine but located it by sound of whistle. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Raines [Ark.] 111 SW 262.

5. Everett v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486; Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91. Evidence held to show negligence of brakeman on detached cars in maintaining lookout for plaintiff, the tracks being frequently used by public. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 690. Where it was necessary for employes to pass out over switch and company knew that it was time for them to be leaving, held negligence to run cars in without warning. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Hendrix [Ind. App.] 87 NE 663.

6. Use need not be so extensive as to amount to a license to require employes to keep lookout. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Where no implied license exists but people frequently use premises, duty of keeping lookout is usually for jury. Id.

7. Consent to enter onto track in effort to stop train to prevent collision with team stalled at crossing because of defect therein will be implied, and instruction appropriate to trespasser held properly refused. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 333, 62 SE 396. Where employe's duty ends at tool house, no implied consent to use tracks to reach home (Bailey v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 Pa. 516, 69 A 998), and fact that he so used track for long time without objection held not to show assent of company (Id.).

8. Evidence held not to show such user as to charge company with notice thereof. Green v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 211 Mo. 18, 109 SW 715.

9. Public may acquire license to use track by continued open use with knowledge of company. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Evidence that track was habitually used as a way held erroneously excluded where followed by offer to show that fact was known to defendant. Thompson v. Aberdeen & A. R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 883. Evidence that public was using track as highway by implied invitation or permission of company is admissible. Moody v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 400. Where use of track as footpath was so general, long continued and oft repeated that company must have known thereof and acquiesced therein, one using same is licensee and not a trespasser. Id. Held proper to refuse instruction that plaintiff was a trespasser, where it appears that public had regularly used track. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dalton [Ky.] 113 SW 842. Ordinarily mere acquiescence by railroad in use by public of right of way does not amount to permission and public are trespassers. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Godfrey [Ala.] 47 S 185. Where character of place where trespasser was struck is in dispute as well as member using tracks, negligence in not discovering is for jury. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Where evidence shows that about 20 or 30 people daily walked on track where it was unfenced and no prohibitory signs were erected except at depot, held for jury whether one using same was trespasser. Everett v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486.

10. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689; Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Berry, 33 Ky. L. R. 850, 111 SW 370. Where people of neighborhood have habitually traversed premises without objection, trainmen must regulate conduct accordingly. Smalley v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 423, 98 P 311.

11. Liable where some of ties in pathway were removed and no warning lights were placed to give warning at night. Phipps v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 161 F 376.

12. Evidence of incompetency of man in charge of handcar held admissible. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Berry, 33 Ky. L. R. 850, 111 SW 370.

13. Need not give statutory warnings but must give warnings dictated by ordinary care. Birmingham S. R. Co. v. Kendrick [Ala.] 46 S 588. Where persons habitually draw water from water car and to do so frequently go in front thereof, negligence in backing into same without due signal held for jury. Louisiana & T. Lumber Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 950. That neither engineer nor fireman saw deceased on track is evidence of negligence in not keeping proper lookout unless they were prevented from seeing by failure of company to furnish headlight. Thompson v. Aberdeen & A. R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 883.

Negligence for jury: Evidence that train was operated at high speed on dark night, without headlight or signals, within corporate limits. Thompson v. Aberdeen & A. R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 883. Operating train at night without headlight. Id.

14. Where evidence tends to show that public habitually used track as pathway, but that plaintiff had stopped along side to pick berries and attempted to cross ahead of train, held for jury whether he was trespasser or licensee. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126.

15. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson [Ky.] 115 SW 798.

In some states a lookout for trespassers is required by statute.[16] Contributory negligence defeats recovery.[17]

Employes of other roads and independent contractors.[See 10 C. L. 1396]—A railroad must exercise reasonable care for the safety of employes of other roads rightfully on its premises [18] and for servants of independent contractors working on the road,[19] but such persons must exercise due care for their own safety.[20] Joint protective rules must be observed.[21] Where a proprietary road agrees to furnish signalmen for trains of another using its tracks, it owes reasonable care to the employes of the latter.[22]

Persons at station.[See 10 C. L. 1397]—A railroad company must keep its depot and the approaches thereto [23] in a reasonably safe condition for persons rightfully using the same, but owes no duty to trespasser,[24] especially where his presence is unknown.[25] A company using the station of another owes to the passengers of the latter the same duty as it owes to its own.[26] Persons in and about stations must exercise due care for their own safety.[27]

16. Arkansas statute requiring lookout to be kept for trespassers held not to make trainmen liable for resulting injuries. Lockard v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 167 F 675. Complaint for injury to trespasser on track held to state only cause of action for negligence on part of engineer in failing to keep lookout, as required by statute of Arkansas. Id.

17. One using track without consent of company is per se negligent. Bailey v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 Pa. 516, 69 A 998. Negligence for jury where evidence tended to show that deceased was not at crossing but was walking on track and stepped in front of train. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Earl's Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 854. Where company was not in habit of backing onto or moving cars on spur track on private premises while employes were crossing same in going from work, and plaintiff, an employe, looked and listened, but neither saw nor heard an engine, held not negligence to go between cars. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Hendrix [Ind. App.] 87 NE 663.

18. Crossing and station signals held not for employes of other roads having common use of switch yards. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Harrod's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 699. Where employe of road having joint use of switch yards knew time of through fast train, high rate of speed was not negligent as to him. Id. Where company has notice that employes of another company having joint use of switch yards are likely to be about yards it must give notice of approach of trains. ringing of bell usually being sufficient. Id.

19. Held negligent to back train without lookout where presence of employes of contractor should have been anticipated. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCoy [Ky.] 112 SW 1105.

Negligence for jury: Running down flagman sent back to stop train, he having lights in his hands and warning torpedoes having been placed on track, although there was a slight curve in track. Combs v. Mobile & O. R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 168.

20. Negligence for jury: Flagman in being run down by train which he had been sent to stop. Combs v. Mobile & O. R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 168. Fireman injured in shovelling coal instead of maintaining lookout while crossing at junction. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dysart [Ark.] 116 SW 224. Where brakeman on dinky train used by contractor stepped back, after throwing switch, to allow his train to pass onto end of ties and was struck by backing train. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCoy [Ky.] 112 SW 1105. Superintendent of bridge repairs in walking along bridge without looking to see if train was approaching from behind. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Baldwin [C. C. A.] 164 F 826. Where employe of another road having joint use of switch tracks knew of exact time that defendant's fast through train was due, held negligent as matter of law in stepping back onto track in front of it without looking. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Harrod's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 699.

21. Where two companies jointly use road, employe of one may recover from other for failure to observe rules jointly adopted, resulting in collision. Clay v. Western Maryland R. Co., 221 Pa. 439, 70 A 807.

22. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Gossett [Ind.] 87 NE 723. And such employes are not fellow servants of signalmen so furnished. Id. In action for death caused by collision due to signalman changing signals, evidence held to show that signalman knew of orders of decedents' train or would have known thereof in exercise of reasonable care. Id. Complaint held to sufficiently allege negligence in confusing and changing signals contrary to rules. Id.

23. Where railroad permits sidewalks maintained by it as approaches to station to become defective, it is liable. Evans v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 509, 109 SW 79. Rule that abutters are not liable for defective walks does not apply. Id.

24. Company owes no duty to exercise vigilance to protect children at depot without invitation and for its own curiosity. Ling v. Great Northern R. Co., 165 F 813.

25. No liability where trainmen did not see child leaning against car at time of starting. Ling v. Great Northern R. Co., 165 F 813.

26. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stepp [C. C. A.] 164 F 785. Negligence in running through station at high speed when passengers were alighting from train of another company held for jury. Id.

27. Where person knowingly attempts to Persons loading and unloading cars.[See 10 C. L. 1397]—Persons rightfully loading or unloading cars [28] are upon the premises by implied invitation,[29] and the company must exercise reasonable care [30] to avoid injuring them, but they must also use due care for their own safety.[31] The duty of exercising due care, however, is only coextensive with the license.[32] Where a car is placed in the usual place for unloading and for that purpose,[33] employes are bound to anticipate the presence of persons therein.[34]

Children on or near tracks.[See 10 C. L. 1398]—While trainmen need not anticipate trespassing children [35] nor maintain a lookout for them,[36] upon discovering their presence they must exercise reasonable care,[37] and, where they are in a place of peril, cross track to station ahead of rapidly approaching train, held negligent though it was through train on regular's time and he thought it would stop. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Tower's Adm'r [Ky.] 115 SW 719.

Held negligent: In stepping onto track knowing that train was approaching, without looking after coming around car. Royster v. Southern R. Co., 174 N. C. 347, 61 SE 179. In attempting to cross track within 30 or 40 feet of approaching train with full knowledge thereof, as matter of law. Hermeling v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 136, 117 NW 341.

28. Fact that many people crossed and recrossed side track does not affect duty to one on car, who was trespasser, unless he was on same for purpose of unloading. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hurst [Ky.] 116 SW 291.

29. Notice of arrival of car, with notice to unload within fixed time to avoid demurrage, is an invitation to enter onto premises to unload. Ackley v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 273.

30. Ft. Worth & R. C. R. Co. v. Eddleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 425. Owes reasonable care to one unloading. Dooley v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 135. Must use reasonable care to furnish safe cars. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hummel [C. C. A.] 167 F 89. Must give warning before train is backed into car on side track where company has reason to believe that one may be in same unloading it. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hurst [Ky.] 116 SW 291. Evidence held to show negligence of brakeman in disconnecting air-brake hose without shutting off air, causing it to flop violently against plaintiff. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lannon [Ark.] 112 SW 177. Where car kicked onto unloading track struck one in which plaintiff was working, due to dog on brake letting loose because improperly set, negligence is for jury. Eckert v. Great Northern R. Co., 104 Minn. 435, 116 NW 1024. Where manufacturing company's foreman gave directions as to backing into building of cars but trainmen had full charge of train, fact that foreman told engineer to come on held not as matter of law to relieve engineer of duty to take usual precautions as to warnings. Sholl v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 152 Mich. 463, 15 Det. Leg. N. 295, 116 NW 432. Employe of consignor injured by defective car while loading has cause of action ex delicto not ex contractu. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hummel [C. C. A.] 167 F 89.

31. In action for death to one killed, while working between cars, by train backing into same, testimony that witness and decedent had been informed that train was coming in to take cars out held not to show that decedent was informed of immediate danger. Shall v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 152 Mich. 463, 15 Det. Leg. N. 295, 116 NW 432. Where it was custom to stop outside of building and to give warning before backing into building to get cars which was not done in the particular instance, one caught between car where his work took him held not negligent as matter of law. Id.

Held negligent: In driving in narrow space between tracks to load car which could have been loaded with safety from other side, knowing that he had barely time to unload onto car before next train was due. Southern R. Co. v. Hogan [Ga.] 62 SE 64.

32. Ackley v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 273. Invitation to unload stone from car on side track is not an invitation to so place timber on car as to project over main track. Id.

33. Where car was placed at usual place for unloading, held for jury whether that was purpose where there was evidence to contrary. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hurst [Ky.] 116 SW 291.

34. Need not give notice of presence. Dooley v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 135. In action for personal injuries, alleged to have been received while unloading car, caused by another backing into it, instruction to find for plaintiff, if car "was in the proper and usual manner" for unloading and "it was his (plaintiff's) duty to do such work under the circumstances," should be modified by substituting "was so placed for purpose" of being unloaded and "that in so doing he was obeying a general order theretofore given directing him to do such work under the circumstances" in lieu of quoted clauses. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hurst [Ky.] 116 SW 291.

35. O'Bannion's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 315, 110 SW 329.

36. Complaint not negativing that deceased was a trespasser or averring that defendant's trainmen saw her in time to avoid injury held defective. Southern R. Co. v. Forrister [Ala.] 48 S 69.

37. Degree of vigilance that will constitute ordinary care in dealing with children depends largely upon age and intelligence of child. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939. Must exercise at least ordinary care to avoid injury to child, though a trespasser, where rea-cannot indulge the assumption that they will appreciate and avoid the danger.[38] In the absence of statute,[39] there is no duty to fence against children.[40] A child must exercise care commensurate with his age and discretion for his own safety.[41]

Adults walking on tracks.[See 10 C. L. 1308]—Ordinarily a railroad owes no duty to maintain a lookout for persons walking on the track,[42] nor to give statutory crossing signals [43] or other warning,[44] and, where a double track is maintained, it is not negligence to use the left track contrary to custom.[45] Where, however, the tracks are in the street,[46] or are frequently used by people,[47] commensurate care must be exercised. After discovering the presence of a trespasser or licensee, reasonable sonable probability of injury is known or in exercise of reasonable care would be known. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Cushman [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 198. Instruction imposing duty to watch all children in and about yards and tracks held too severe. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Vallejo [Tex.] 113 SW 4. Conflicting evidence as to when child was discovered on track and when it should have been discovered held to support verdict for plaintiff. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91. Where there was nothing to show that child was on tracks from time train came in sight, and fact that her bonnet was found on track some distance from where she was struck is insufficient, fact that track was straight for distance permitting train to stop and that engineer was looking held not to show negligence. O'Bannion's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 315, 110 SW 329. Where brakeman on rear car of backing train on sidetrack saw child on main track but he was going parallel with train and was in no danger, defendant held not liable where child, unknown to trainmen, crossed over to main track and was struck by second car from engine. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Vallejo [Tex.] 113 SW 4. Where evidence was conflicting as to when child seen walking on cinder path stepped onto track, negligence is for jury. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442.

38. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91; Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Child 15 months old. Southern R. Co. v. Forrister [Ala.] 48 S 69. Child 25 months old. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Instruction that if trainmen discovered child on track and failed to exercise ordinary care, etc., held not erroneous as failing to distinguish between discovery of child and discovery of its peril. Id.

39. Fencing statutes have no application. Bischof v. Illinois S. R. Co., 137 Ill. App. 33. Following construction of superior court of Massachusetts, Rev. Laws Mass., c. 111, § 120, held to impose duty only for benefit of adjoining owners and no liability for failure to fence against children playing on adjoining premises. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Price [C. C. A.] 159 F 330.

40. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Price [C. C. A.] 159 F 330.

41. Child 25 months old is not negligent as matter of law in going onto and remaining on track in front of approaching train. Galveston H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Contributory negligence of boy 7 years old struck by detached cars approaching after engine and cars had passed held for jury. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 690. Instruction for defendant on ground of contributory negligence of boy not quite 10 years old, and deaf, killed while walking on track, held properly refused. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crump [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 1013.

42. Engineer is not chargeable with negligence in not seeing trespasser on track nor in failing to so look as to see him. Cumming's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 584, 110 SW 809. Owes ordinary care to discover trespassers. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787.

43. Morrow v. Southern R. Co., 147 N. C. 623, 61 SE 621. But may be considered on general question of negligence where train is running without headlight. Id. Civ. Code S. C. 1902, § 2132, requiring bell to be rung 500 feet from crossing, has no application to one killed while on track at another point. Ellis v. Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 686.

44. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Bean's Ex'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 303, 110 SW 328.

45. Boulden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 936.

46. Holland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 210 Mo. 338, 109 SW 19.

47. Permission to construct and maintain a footway across railroad tracks, or long use of such a crossing, implies a license to pedestrians to cross at that point, and the rights of persons using such footway are not to be determined by rules applicable to mere trespassers, and where a child nine years of age is struck by a train at such crossing, it is a question for the jury whether he could have avoided injury by a proper use of his faculties. Lear v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 61. Where tracks are frequently and commonly used by public, company must exercise ordinary care to avoid injury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 690; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. Reinhardt, 139 Ill. App. 53. While trains are not usually under an obligation to keep lookout for persons wrongfully on track, yet, if experience has shown that at particular points people are constantly on track, it must exercise correspondent care. Florida R. Co. v. Sturkey [Fla.] 48 S 34. Where 40 or 50 mill hands customarily use track as pathway, held for jury whether company was negligent in backing without lookout. Id. Trainmen may assume that track used as footpath is free from pedestrians shortly after midnight. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488.

care must be used to avoid injury,[48] the trainmen, however, having a right to assume, until the contrary becomes apparent, that they will appreciate their danger and leave the track.[49] The duty owed under particular circumstances is sometimes prescribed by statute.[50] Where an express license has been given or the public have so used the tracks as to have acquired an implied license,[51] the company must exercise reasonable care to avoid injury,[52] and cannot claim the advantage of a statute making persons walking thereon trespassers.[53] But such implied license does not prevent

48. Where person is walking in place of safety and there is nothing to apprise trainmen that he is ignorant of approaching train, they need not take extra precautions. Boulden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 936. Negligence to back train along common walkway in night time without end lights. Allen v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1079. Whether lights held by two men in middle of car 15 feet high and 36 feet long served purpose of headlights held for jury. Id. Evidence as to distance plaintiff could be seen, and as to experiments as to distance in which train could be stopped, held to make negligence in striking plaintiff for jury. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Flinn [Ark.] 115 SW 142. In action for killing of father and one son, the former being insane and held child on track, held that engineer could not reasonably foresee that father, knowing of approaching train, would not leave track with son in time to avoid injury. Parham v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 154. Undisputed evidence that engineer could not see decedent until within 60 feet because of curve in track causing engine to shut off view held to disprove negligence in not sooner discovering decedent. Hawkins v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 16. Evidence held insufficient to show notice to company that steps on car were so loose as to be a menace to one walking by side of track. Harlow's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 108 Va. 691, 62 SE 941. Where there was no direct testimony showing when or where deceased came upon track, surrounding circumstances as to sounding of whistle, time required to stop, location of body, blood, etc., held insufficient to go to jury on discovered peril. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Bean's Ex'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 303, 110 SW 328. Where there is evidence that fireman saw plaintiff near track, instruction that, if plaintiff went onto track so near engine that engineer could not and did not see him, defendant was not liable, held to ignore duty of maintaining lookout and also duty of fireman to promptly act on discovering peril. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193.

49. Leave track in time to avoid danger up until the last moment of his ability to do so. Beach v. Southern R. Co., 148 N. C. 153, 61 SE 664. Where train was approaching in full view and danger signals had been given, held not negligent not to attempt to stop until within 60 or 80 feet of trespasser. Id. Company held not liable where it did not appear that one walking on end of ties was not going to step off until too late to stop. Strickland v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 161.

50. Under Shannon's Code Tenn. § 1574, subd. 4, providing that when any person or other obstruction appears on track alarm whistle shall be sounded, the brake put down, every means used to prevent, to recover for death it must appear that decedent appeared on track in front of train as obstruction thereto and that engineer failed in statutory particular. Virginia & S. W. R. Co. v. Hawk [C. C. A.] 160 F 348. Burden of proof of such elements rests on plaintiff. Id. Evidence as to manner of death held too indefinite and uncertain to authorize submission to jury. Id.

51. Evidence that plaintiff as well as public had used pathway for 27 years without objection held to show implied license although company posted prohibitory notices. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Briscoe [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 453. Where trestle is commonly used by public as a footpath with company's acquiescence, license will be presumed. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Fact that public frequently used tracks during daytime does not impose duty of exercising reasonable care at night when track is only infrequently used at night. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex.] 115 SW 1158. Evidence of frequent use of trestle in going between certain places held admissible on issue of license. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Evidence of use by public of trestle as pathway held to make license for jury. Id.

52. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 958; Ahnefeld v. Wabash R. Co., 212 Mo. 280, 111 SW 95; Hawkins v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 16; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex.] 115 SW 1158. Must use ordinary care to avoid license using trestle as pathway, but such care requires greater caution than under less dangerous circumstances. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Negligence in approaching trestle which public commonly used as pathway with company's acquiescence without giving signal held for jury. Id. Evidence held to warrant finding of negligence in running down pedestrian at night walking on track, the public customarily using track as pathway. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 985. Where evidence showed that track was used by public as pathway and authorized finding that plaintiff was seen in time to have avoided injuries, instruction that defendant was not negligent in running train at 30 miles per hour held properly refused. Id.

53. Where company has acquiesced in use of track by public as pathway, it cannot claim exemption under Rev. St. 1899, § 1105 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), providing that if any person not connected with railroad shall walk on track except at streets or crossings and shall receive harm, he shall be deemed a trespasser. Ahnefeld v. Wabash R. Co., 212 Mo. 280, 111 SW 95.

the company from legitimately using the property,[54] nor relieve the persons exercising the license from the duty to exercise due care.[55] While the train must be run in a prudent manner with such appliances as are approved and in general use as will enable persons to discover its approach if they exercise due care,[56] negligence of the company does not excuse due care on their part,[57] and if negligent no recovery can be had.[58]

Persons standing, sitting, or lying on tracks. See 10 C. L. 1401—Ordinarily a railroad owes no duty to a trespasser[59] standing, sitting, or lying on the tracks, unless his presence is known or is to be anticipated,[60] in which case reasonable care must be used,[61] although the trainmen may assume that he will appreciate his peril and avoid injury unless the circumstances apprise them to the contrary.[62] Such trespassers must exercise due diligence for their own safety.[63]

54. Permission to the public to use right of way does not prevent company from piling lumber thereon nor render it liable to bare licensee in absence of willful negligence. Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 102.

55. Fact that use by public has created license does not relieve one using bridge in lieu of other safe ways from negligence. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex.] 115 SW 1163.

56. Where train was run at night without headlight, one walking where people in vicinity were accustomed to walk was entitled to warning by signal. Morrow v. Southern R. Co., 147 N. C. 623, 61 SE 621.

57. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Failure of company to have lights on end of backing car and to give signals does not relieve pedestrian of the obligation to look and listen for trains. Allen v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1079.

58. Failure to look and listen is not per se negligence. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 453. Where liability of board projecting from lumber pile to be struck by train is equally apparent to permissive licensee as to employes, licensee cannot recover for being struck thereby. Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 102.

Negligent as matter of law: In walking along end of ties knowing that train was due and in failing to use senses to discover same. Strickland v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 161. Trespasser walking on bridge at night. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex.] 115 SW 1158. Walking over bridge when there were other safe ways of reaching destination. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex.] 115 SW 1163. Where, despite whistles, plaintiff did not look up until reflected light drew his attention to approaching engine and then, although walking on end of ties, he did not step off as did others nearby. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ruff [Miss.] 48 S 184.

Negligence for jury: Evidence as to confusion of trains and the obscuring of the one doing damage by smoke of another. Everett v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486. In jumping from trestle to avoid apparent collision. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Negligence in taking route by track instead of safe way. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 453.

Held negligent: One voluntarily walking so near track as to be in place of danger when he could have walked in place of safety. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex.] 116 SW 1140. One stepping onto track ahead of approaching engine, knowing that it was approaching, though not knowing what track it was on. Holland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 210 Mo. 338, 109 SW 19. In stepping behind car which knocked him down without looking or looking carelessly. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Briscoe [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 453. Trespasser failing to use sense of sight. Beach v. Southern R. Co., 148 N. C. 153, 61 SE 664. Where, after signalling train to stop, decedent started down track ahead of train and was struck. Ellis v. Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 686. Trespasser must use both the senses of hearing and sight to discover approaching trains. Beach v. Southern R. Co., 148 N. C. 153, 61 SE 664. Must use senses to avoid injury. Holland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 210 Mo. 338, 109 SW 19.

59. License to use track for footpath does not include right to lie down thereon. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488. Fact that person sits down on track while drunk or sick does not make him less a trespasser. Starett v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 309, 110 SW 282.

60. Where one negligently lies down on track trainmen owe no duty until he is discovered. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488. Knowledge that people without right passed daily along sidetrack and were allowed to stand and go upon sidetrack held not to show license to take shelter from rain by standing at end of box car or to charge employes with knowledge of presence. Curtis v. Southern R. Co., 130 Ga. 675, 61 SE 539. Where object is seen on track, trainmen must exercise at least ordinary care to ascertain whether it is a person. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488.

61. Where engineer of train, cowcatcher of which struck trespasser asleep at side of track, was negligent in not sounding whistle when he testified that he thought boy in safe place and was afraid that whistle would cause him to jump towards tracks. Evans v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 113 SW 642.

62. Does not obtain where he is apparently unconscious of danger. Missouri, K.

Persons in switch yards.[See 10 C. L. 1401]—Ordinarily no duty is owed to one in the switch yards until his presence is discovered,[64] unless he is there in discharge of duties [65] or by invitation,[66] in which case reasonable care must be exercised.[67] Rules governing operation of trains within the yards must be observed.[68] Where a child is discovered in the yards, the trainmen cannot assume, as in the case of an adult, that he will keep out of danger.[69] While a licensee may assume that the company will not endanger him without warning,[70] all persons in switch yards must use due care to avoid injury.[71]

Persons on trains.[See 10 C. L. 1402]—The duty owed to particular classes on trains is sometimes prescribed by statute.[72] While a railroad owes no duty to a trespasser [73]

& T. R. Co. v. Reynolds [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 340. Where one is sitting on track with head in hands apparently asleep or unconscious, it cannot be said as matter of law that engineer may assume that he will heed warnings. Starett v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 309, 110 SW 282.

63. One lying down in position calculated to conceal presence is prima facie negligent. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488. One standing between tracks without looking or giving a thought as to how far she was from either track and likelihood of being struck is negligent as matter of law. Bryne v. Boston El. R. Co., 198 Mass. 444, 85 NE 78. Fact that plaintiff was mistaken as to tracks upon which cars ran held not to authorize her to assume without looking that no car was approaching on one next to which she was standing. Id. A look which is so careless as to fail to disclose car approaching in plain view does not relieve from negligence in standing between tracks. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that decedent was lying on track because of drunken condition and not because of fainting. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488.

64. Smalley v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 423, 98 P 311. Where children ordered from yards again entered without being observed and began catching onto cars as they passed, company held not liable as matter of law for injuries to one of them. Id.

65. One employed to look after Pullman cars while standing in yards is entitled to protection of employes. Nelson v. Wabash R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 687, 112 SW 1017. A person in charge of stock, who is walking beside the train to inspect the stock, is not a trespasser or bare licensee. Christiansen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 387.

66. Where company knows of use of switch yards, it must exercise ordinary care to avoid injury. Shrader v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 788; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson [Ark.] 110 SW 590.

67. Company held negligent in suddenly backing caboose which had been standing without giving warning to one employed to look after Pullman cars. Nelson v. Wabash R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 687, 112 SW 1017. In action for injuries to one walking in switch yards, instruction that defendant should have given notice by ringing bell or blowing whistle held not erroneous in that it should have based liability on failure to give adequate notice. Shrader v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 788. Bound to anticipate presence of stockmen near track and keep a lookout for them. Christiansen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 387. Not negligence to "kick" car in switch yard. Gerhards v. Chicago Junction R. Co., 138 Ill. App. 313.

68. "Under full control" as used in rule requiring trains to pass through yards under full control means ready to be stopped at any moment. Neary v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 37 Mont. 461, 97 P 944.

69. Smalley v. Rio Grande W. R. Co., 34 Utah, 423, 98 P 311.

70. One employed to look after Pullman cars held not negligent in giving attention to work. Nelson v. Wabash R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 687, 112 SW 1017.

71. Flagman. McDoel v. Heuermann, 141 Ill. App. 113. Employe in yard is not entitled to rely on custom to run incoming trains on particular track. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 135 Ill. App. 26. Held negligent in attempting to go between cars after warning while removing property from raging fire. Springer v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 801. Not negligent as matter of law in passing in front of standing detached car which was bumped into plaintiff by train backing in onto switch and against it. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Clark [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 169. Where there is no evidence that plaintiff did not listen, mere fact that she only testified to looking held not to show negligence for failing to listen. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson [Ark.] 110 SW 590. Person walking beside train to inspect cattle under his care held not negligent in failing to keep a constant lookout for train on another track. Christiansen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 387.

72. Liability of railroad towards certain classes riding on the train under a contract between company and their employers is made that of employe in some states. Act June 10, 1907 (P. L. 552), repealing Act April 4, 1868 (P. L. 58), making liability toward certain classes that of master and servant, does not affect accrued right of actions. Lewis v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 220 Pa. 317, 69 A 821.

73. One boarding switch engine without invitation and in violation of company's rules is a trespasser. Bailey v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 912. One riding on engine upon invitation of conductor and engineer without intention to pay fare held a trespasser and widow is not entitled to recover for death due to derailment caused by defects in tracks. Morris v. Georgia Railroad & Banking Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 579.

except not to willfully or wantonly injure him,[74] a higher degree of care is owed to one upon the train by invitation [75] of one authorized to give the same,[76] and to volunteers,[77] although no duty is owed to the latter to keep the equipment in a safe condition.[78] A railroad is not required to guard against the unobserved intrusion of children,[79] to inspect the cars before starting to discover their presence thereon,[80] nor to maintain a lookout thereafter to discover children in the habit of jumping on and off,[81] but after their presence is discovered due care must be used.[82] One rightfully [83] occupying camp cars is entitled to reasonable care,[84] and where the family of a foreman is living in camp cars with him with the acquiescence of the company and according to the general custom, ordinary care is owed to them,[85] and they are

74. Bailey v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 912. In absence of evidence negativing mere forgetfulness, leaving of switch open for 5 or 15 minutes by one not knowing of train which afterwards came into yards held not willful negligence. Id. Evidence that collision occurred because of failure of brakes to work, etc., held insufficient to show wanton negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lacy [Kan.] 97 P 1025. Fact that train ran into caboose in daytime held not to raise a presumption of wanton negligence. Id. Evidence held insufficient to show that driver wantonly or intentionally pushed decedent from car, but rather that he unintentionally struck him with his arm while managing horses. Dubnow v. New York City R. Co., 122 App. Div. 723, 107 NYS 729. Allegation that plaintiff's position on ladder of car where he was in danger of being crushed by coming in contact with car on side track was discovered by brakeman who gave emergency signal to stop to fireman, who failed to repeat to engineer or latter disregarded same, held not demurrable whether plaintiff was a licensee or a trespasser. Starr v. Southern R. Co., 4 Ga. App. 436, 61 SE 735.

75. Mere failure of trainmen to drive boys from train held not to constitute license to ride. Mehalek v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 128, 117 NW 250. Where it did not appear that freight agent's presence in freight car was not temporary or that he was in habit of answering inquiries while in car, there is no implied invitation to one seeking information to follow him into car. Louthan v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 665.

76. Neither master mechanic, conductor nor engineer have implied authority to carry one without charge (Clarke v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 408), and where he was accepted by them on engine, he not only assumed all risks incident to his exposed position but could recover only for wanton and reckless negligence (Id.).

77. One voluntarily assisting trainmen with their knowledge and apparent acquiescence is not a trespasser but a volunteer (Clarke v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 797, 111 SW 344) to whom ordinary care was due (Id.). In action for injuries received while attempting to make coupling, evidence held insufficient to show negligence, it not appearing that engineer saw plaintiff's signal to stop, or, if he saw it, that he had time to stop, or that movement of train was unusual. Id. One knowing of rule forbidding volunteers to ride on freight train, mere fact that at time he was injured he was operating brake at request of engineer held not to make him an employe. Derrickson's Adm'r v. Swann-Day Lumber Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 191. Where employes had no reason to anticipate that train was going to escape control on grade, no liability could be predicated on failure to give warning to volunteer. Id.

78. Derrickson's Adm'r v. Swann-Day Lumber Co. [Ky.] 115 SW 191.

79. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939.

80. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939. Evidence held insufficient to show lack of care to ascertain presence of boy on car and to remove him therefrom. Id.

81. Swartwood's Guardian v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 785, 111 SW 305.

82. Instruction making liability depend upon knowledge of trainmen that child of immature age had caught onto car and omitting issue of negligence held erroneous. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Cushman [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 198. Where child was injured while attempting to catch onto car, it must be shown that defendant owed him a duty at that time. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939. In action for injury to 6 year old boy who fell from car on which he was riding, it appearing that it had long been practice of boys to jump onto cars which passed near playgrounds, and that trainmen must have seen boys near track on occasion of accident. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Cushman [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 198.

83. Authority of foreman of bridge crew to hire cook to board men in cars need not be proven by direct evidence. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086. Evidence of general method of handling bridge crews, of customary employment of cook by foreman, his general authority to hire and discharge crew, held to authorize introduction of detailed arrangement with foreman under which cook went to work. Id.

84. One employed by foreman of bridge crew to board men in camp car, men to pay specified sum per day, while not an employe or passenger, is more than a bare licensee and company owes same duty to her as to other employes being transported. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086. When cook in camp car was injured by jerk of train, she must show that jerk was so sudden as to constitute negligence and that trainmen knew that she was in car. Id. Evidence of sudden jerk held to show negligence. Id.

85. Not merely duty owed to a mere li-not precluded from recovering for a negligent injury by a secret rule prohibiting such living.[86] Such persons, however, must exercise due care for their own safety.[87] Where a trainman, acting within the scope of his authority [88] and in the discharge of his duty,[89] ejects a trespasser from a moving train or uses unnecessary force, the company is liable unless the trainman had become a cotrespasser.[90] Persons upon trains must exercise due care.[91]

Persons using hand cars or railroad tricycles. See 10 C. L. 1403—Company is liable for negligent injury to one using a tricycle on the track.[92]

(§ 11) F. Accidents to trains.[93]—See 10 C. L. 1403—A railroad owes ordinary care to the passengers of other roads at intersecting points,[94] but where the apparent danger of collision is not such as to cause experienced trainmen to jump and it has no reason to anticipate the presence of passengers, it is not liable for injuries to a passenger from jumping.[95] Where intersecting roads make joint use of towerman, they are jointly liable for a collision caused by his negligence.[96] A contractor working along a road must not obstruct the same without giving due notice.[97] An employe of another company is not chargeable with the contributory negligence of his fellow-servant.[98]

(§ 11) G. Accidents at crossings. 1. Care required on the part of the company. General rules.[99]—See 10 C. L. 1403—Although a railroad ordinarily has the right of censee. Owens v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 518. Negligence held for jury where plank between cars was only 12 or 14 inches wide, while ordinary one was usually 30 to 36 inches, and cars were left on uneven track, the plaintiff being thrown by tipping of plank. Id.

86. Owens v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 518.

87. Where cook was standing up at work in camp car while train was moving as was custom for years, and was thrown by unusual jerk, held not negligent as matter of law. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086.

88. Evidence held to sustain finding that brakeman ejecting plaintiff from moving train was acting within scope of his authority. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pell [Ark.] 115 SW 957.

89. That brakemen commonly ejected trespassers from trains authorizes inference that brakemen ejecting plaintiff acted in line of duty. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pell [Ark.] 115 SW 957. Defendant held not entitled to directed verdict on opening statement of plaintiff's counsel that brakeman kicked plaintiff off because he would not pay him a quarter, as showing that he was not acting in discharge of duty. Barrett v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 106 Minn. 51, 117 NW 1047.

90. Evidence held insufficient to show that plaintiff had bribed brakemen so as to render him a cotrespasser and relieve company from liability for forcing him from the moving train. Barrett v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 106 Minn. 51, 117 NW 1047.

91. Boy 16 or 17 years old held negligent in jumping off engine and attempting to pass in front of moving engine to throw switch, where it was not necessary to throw same until engine passed beyond. Whitney v. Texas Cent. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 70.

92. Evidence that person could be seen 900 feet without evidence that engineer's view was clear held not to show negligence in failing to discover decedent in time to avoid injury. Miller v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 106 Minn. 499, 119 NW 218.

13. Evidence as to extent of use as crossing held to make question of knowledge and acquiescence for jury. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 906. Where public customarily used defined pathway across tracks with consent and acquiescence of company, one using same is not a trespasser. Lamphear v. New York, etc., R. Co., 194 N. Y. 172, 86 NE 1115. Whether license existed held for jury, where it appeared that public had used way for long time and that objections of company had been to use of yard rather than to the way. Tarashonsky v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1074.

14. Where company concedes such public use of pathway with its consent as to eliminate question of public passageway, only question is use of reasonable care to give suitable warnings. Lamphear v. New York, etc., R. Co., 194 N. Y. 172, 86 NE 1115. Where public had customarily used certain pathway with consent of company, instruction that deceased had no license to walk on track and took risks incident thereto, and that no duty rested on defendant except not to willfully injure him, held properly refused. 17. Where obstructions shut off view of crossing until too close to avoid injury to one thereat, court properly refused instruction that it was duty of trainmen to keep lookout. Adkisson's Adm'r v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 204, 110 SW 284.

18. In absence of statute, company must exercise due care and, if necessary, give signals. Kujawa v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 135 Wis. 562, 116 NW 249. Must give warnings of approach. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929.

Negligence for jury: Approaching crossing where view was obstructed without giving signals. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Stoker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 910. Approaching from around curve without proper signals. Hanlon v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 122 Pa. 490, 70 A 821. Where view was obstructed by trees and brush, finding that failure to give signals was negligence held warranted. Kujawa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 562, 116 NW 249.

19. Not necessarily by whistle. Brown v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 649, 113 NYS 1090. Held for jury whether ringing of bell was sufficient warning. Id. Where there was positive evidence that headlight was burning before and after accident, question is for jury, though witnesses testify that they did not see light at time of accident. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439. Mere evidence that plaintiff did not hear whistle held insufficient to show that it was not blown, where own evidence showed that because of intervening bluff and adverse wind it was almost impossible to hear. Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 10. Held for jury whether signals were given. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Joshlin, 33 Ky. L. R. 513, 110 SW 382. Held for jury, giving of signal, evidence being conflicting. McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33.

20. Evidence held to sustain finding that signals were not given or were given too far from crossing to be effective. Cherry v. Louisiana & A. R. Co., 121 La. 471, 46 S 596. Whether whistle was blown just before, at time of, or just after plaintiff was struck. Texas v. N. O. R. Co. v. Reed [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 69.

21. "Public road" as used in Civ. Code 1895, § 2222, requiring signals 400 yards from public road crossing, is not limited to roads laid out by authorities by regular proceedings, but includes prescriptive highways, etc. McCoy v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 297. Road intended for use in connection with limekiln and mostly used by those having business held "road" within Civ. Code, § 486, requiring signals. Vance v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 98 P 41. In action for injury caused by starting of cars, allegation that cars were left standing in street held insufficient to render Civ. Code 1896, § 3440, applicable, such statute requiring signal on approaching crossing, it not appearing but what train was lying in street parallel therewith. Birmingham S. R. Co. v. Kendrick [Ala.] 46 S 588.

22. Under 1 Ann. St. 1906, § 1102, in cities, bell must be rung continuously from point 80 rods from crossing. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026. Under Comp. Laws 1907, § 447, requiring trains to stop and to give signals at certain crossings, it cannot be assumed that a crossing at which signals were not given was one within the statute, in absence of proof. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co [Utah] 99 P 466.

23. Failure to give signals as required by Ky. St. 1903, § 786, is negligence Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Joshlin, 33 Ky. L. R. 513, 110 SW 382. Positive testimony of en-

Such statutes are for the benefit of one approaching the crossing [24] and are not limited to actual collisions [25] at the crossings,[26] but are not usually available to one not intending to use the crossing.[27] While a statute requiring the blowing of the whistle at a certain distance from the crossing, and the continuous ringing of the bell thereafter, requires the bell to be sounded where the engine starts within the distance to pass over the crossing,[28] it has no application where a caboose is accidentally kicked over.[29] The "eighty rods" from a crossing at which signals are required is to be measured from the end of the train nearest the crossing.[30] No liability attaches, however, unless the failure to give the signals was the proximate cause of the injury,[31] and no recovery can be predicated upon the failure to give signals at another crossing where they were properly given at the one where the injury occurred.[32]

*Speed.*See 10 C. L. 1407—While ordinarily a railroad may operate its trains at such speed as it may choose through rural districts,[33] where running through cities and populous communities it must exercise due care for the safety of persons who may be using the crossings,[34] and must observe statutes and ordinances regulating speed.[35]

*Gates.*See 10 C. L. 1407—Where gates are constructed and are in use, it is no degineer, brakeman, passenger and another that bell and whistle were sounded as required by statute, held to show that signals were given, as against testimony of three that they did not hear them. Weiss v. Central R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 1087.

24. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4507, requiring crossing signals, held for benefit of one approaching crossing whose team became frightened 100 yards from same. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Horn [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 911. Statutory duty to give crossing signal is available to one approaching crossing whose team is frightened by close proximity of train suddenly appearing. Skipworth v. Mobile & O. R. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 964. Failure to give signal required by 1 Ann. St. 1906, § 1102, is available to one approaching crossing who was induced, by failure to give signal, to come closer to crossing and whose horse was frightened by train. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026. Under 1 Ann. St. 1906, § 1102, where failure to give signal required thereby caused one approaching crossing to drive closer than he otherwise would have done, which resulted in horse taking fright, defendant has burden of showing some cause of injury other than omission to give signal. Id.

25. Code 1906, § 4045, requiring every railroad to give signals on approaching highway crossings, is not limited to cases of actual collision, but is applicable to all cases where injury is directly traceable to failure to give signals. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Armstrong [Miss.] 47 S 427. Held properly submitted where engine frightened team and caused runaway although it was stopped before collision occurred. Id.

26. Court held to have properly qualified instruction where one killed while on track trying to stop train to prevent collision with team stalled at crossing would not have driven onto track had signals been given. Thompson v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 333, 62 SE 396.

Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439. Where speed has not been limited, running over crossing 25 to 50 miles per hour as reasonably required is not negligence. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901.

34. Must run at such speed in cities as to avoid all injuries to persons using due care. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Ind. App.] 87 NE 40. Negligence for jury where train was run at high rate of speed through populous city. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Running at speed of 50 or 60 miles per hour through small town and failing to ring bell at crossing where view was obstructed held negligence. Liabraaten v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 207, 117 NW 423.

35. Violation of speed ordinance is negligence per se. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Sack, 136 Ill. App. 425. Where defendant ran locomotive over crossing at prohibited rate of speed without giving statutory signal, and failed to have flagman as required by ordinance, held negligent. Henry v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 219, 86 NE 231. In action for death of child, evidence held to warrant jury in finding that train was violating speed limit where, had train been running at speed testified to by engineer, child could have been rescued after electric bell ringer began to ring before train reached place of accident. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warriner, 132 Ill. App. 301.

fense to a failure to close them that the city did not require gates,[36] and a company using the tracks of another company is liable for a negligent failure to lower, though the contract placed the duty on the proprietary road.[37] Though a railroad company constructs gates without the sixty day notice required by an ordinance, it is none the less bound by the ordinance as to their operation.[38] A railroad must use reasonable care to so operate its gates as not to injure persons passing thereunder,[39] and to make them effective as a warning.[40]

Flagmen.[See 10 C. L. 1408]—Special circumstances of danger may require a flagman,[41] but the maintenance of a flagman does not relieve the company of its duty to give reasonable warnings.[42]

Switching and backing train.[See 10 C. L. 1408]—Reasonable care must be exercised in operating switch engines[43] and backing trains[44] over public crossings to avoid injury.

Blocking crossings.[See 10 C. L. 1409]—The public is entitled to the free and unobstructed use of crossings,[45] and the company must not unnecessarily place[46] therein or in close proximity thereto any thing calculated to frighten horses.[47]

39. Not an insurer. Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Singheiser [Ky.] 115 SW 192. Negligence held for jury where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that gates were suddenly lowered onto him, while defendant's evidence tended to show that plaintiff approached at such excessive speed that gates could not be lowered in time to stop him. Id. Negligence to fail to provide light or other signal for lowered gates. Record v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 62. Ordinance requiring erection of gates requires a proper operation thereof although silent in respect thereto. Id.

40. Evidence that gates were not lowered and no signals or warnings given held to show negligence. Carleo v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 89.

41. Where gates were open and there were many engines on various tracks, held for jury whether situation required regular or special watchman. Delaware & H. Co. v. Larnard [C. C. A.] 161 F 520.

44. Where train of 130 or 150 feet length was backing towards crossing where view of persons approaching was obstructed, held not error to instruct that it was duty of company to have some one on rear to give warning. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Veach's Adm'r [Ky.] 112 SW 869. Irrespective of Act May 28, 1907, (Acts 1907, p. 1018), relative to headlights, company may be guilty of negligence in backing over crossings with no lights except lanterns. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Ark.] 114 SW 228. Giving of signal before train starts to back over crossing is insufficient. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Holmes' Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 46. Independent of statute or ordinance, trainmen backing over much used crossing must keep lookout. Id. Negligence in running engine backwards without having lookout on tender depends on circumstances. Southern R. Co. v. Daves, 108 Va. 378, 61 SE 748.

Negligence: To operate train through country at rate of 20 miles per hour without headlight and with only a red lantern hung on tender of engine which was backing. Gorton v. Harmon, 152 Mich. 473, 15 Det. Leg. N. 250, 116 NW 443. Running train backward before daylight at speed of 30 to 40 miles per hour without warnings or lights, except such as are usually on rear of train. Kurt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 838, 111 NYS 859. Running engine backwards at speed greatly in excess of ordinance limit. Inman v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 878. Backing of engine through city at unlawful rate of speed and without warning. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808. (§ 11G) 2. Contributory negligence.[48] General rules.[See 10 C. L. 1409]—One approaching a crossing is bound to know that it is a place of danger,[49] and while he may within reasonable limits assume that the company will not be negligent,[50] he must exercise such care as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under the same or similar circumstances,[51] notwithstanding the negligence of the railroad,[52] and if he fails so to do no recovery can be had,[53] in the absence of special statute.[54] The care must be commensurate with the dangers incident to the particular crossing,[55] and if it is particularly dangerous additional care must be exercised.[56] Negligence is usually a question for the jury [57] to be determined from all the circumstances.[58] One thorize finding that company left same there (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Blackaby, 33 Ky. L. R. 885, 111 SW 317), and that plaintiff's horse was frightened thereat (Id.).

47. Butler v. Easton & A. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 276. Where evidence tends to show that defendant unnecessarily left standing for unreasonable length of time a new and freshly painted locomotive and tender within highway, negligence is for jury. Id. Negligence in leaving car at or near crossing which frightened horse held for jury. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Randall [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 180.

49. And he must use care of ordinarily prudent man. McFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. [Del.] 69 A 744.

50. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999. Negligence cannot be predicated on failure to anticipate that company would run train in excess of speed limit. Dukeman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 237 Ill. 104, 86 NE 712. May assume that company will obey law as to giving statutory signals and keeping flagman. Henry v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 219, 86 NE 231. Where one sees approaching train he cannot assume that it is not running at excessive speed but must use senses to avoid injury. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102. Assumption that train is not approaching at unusual speed is not conclusive of negligence. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21.

51. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877; Winn v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 239 Ill. 132, 87 NE 954; Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Assman [Kan.] 96 P 843. Instruction that care required is such as ordinarily prudent person "would exercise" instead of "should exercise" held not erroneous. Southern R. Co. v. King [C. C. A.] 160 F 332. In instruction that if plaintiff saw engine switching back and forth and "negligently" attempted to cross he could not recover qualifying word held proper, for if reasonably prudent man would not have considered danger imminent, plaintiff was not negligent. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. Mere fact that he could have seen train had he looked held not conclusive of negligence. Liabraaten v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 207, 117 NW 423. Where plaintiff was injured by horse taking fright at box car standing at crossing, mere fact that he knew that there was danger in attempting to drive by after he saw horse shying, would not make him negligent as matter of law in attempting to pass. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Randall [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 180. Where switch engine which had blocked crossing moved on, one waiting has a right to cross unless he exposed himself to a danger, in acting on appearance that it would not return, that ordinarily prudent person would not have assumed. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396.

52. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 1007; Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. Negligence of company in failing to give warning signals. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466.

53. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466.

54. Although 1 Ann. St. 1906, § 1102, makes failure to give signal as required therein and injury a prima facie case, contributory negligence may be shown. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026.

55. Pendray v. Great Northern R. Co. [N. D.] 117 NW 531.

56. Erie R. Co. v. Weinstein [C. C. A.] 166 F 271. Where witnesses disagree as to actual condition with respect to sight and hearing at crossing, conditions can be determined only by jury. Kasarda v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [Pa.] 70 A 943.

57. Verdict based on finding that plaintiff at no time saw train in time to avoid collision is not inconsistent with instruction as to duty of one seeing train in time to avoid it. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877.

Negligent as matter of law: Where decedent drove onto crossing after driving 200 feet with view cut off without again looking. McKahan v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 251. For adult to knowingly go upon track in front of moving train, unless compelled to do so to avoid impending danger. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. In assuming that engine would remain on switch and not looking again until almost on crossing, although he was watching for train due from other direction. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466. Where boy 14 years old driving gentle horse is struck at crossing by train which must have approached in plain sight on level track. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102. Where decedent, knowing of dangerous character of crossing and partially deaf, went onto crossing in front of train approaching in plain sight without looking until it was almost on to him. Popke v. New York, etc., Co. [Conn.] 71 A 1098. Where one knowing of train approaching in dense fog did not stop to ascertain its proximity. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Houghland [Ind. App.] 85 NE 369. Drove onto track in front of train approaching in plain view, notwithstanding ringing of automatic crossing bell and warning of friend which he must have heard. Peck v. Grand Trunk W. R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1072, 119 NW 578. Reading book while approaching crossing. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Adler, 136 Ill. App. 539. Driving on track with approaching train in plain sight. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Sack, 136 Ill. App. 425; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Zetsche, 135 Ill. App. 623; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Scheevers, 134 Ill. App. 514. Driving on track knowing that train is liable to come along at any time. Chicago Junction R. Co. v. Reinhardt, 139 Ill. App. 53. Pedestrian going on track with unobstructed view of approaching locomotive. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hirsch, 132 Ill. App. 656.

Not negligent as matter of law: In attempting to drive horse by car standing partly in street, which shied into ditch and threw plaintiff out. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 423. Where combination of circumstances prevented plaintiff from seeing train until it was too late. McGrath v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 166 F 332. Where plaintiff looked before going upon first track but not thereafter before going onto second track, although view was somewhat obstructed at first track. Spannknebel v. New York, etc., R. Co., 127 App. Div. 345, 111 NYS 705. Where old lady, approaching crossing where there was sharp curve in track, stopped and looked when about 3 or 4 feet from track but did not look when on track. Giddings v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 610, 113 SW 678. In going onto track in front of train approaching on straight track, where it was dark and snow storm in face of one looking in direction from which train came. Erie R. Co. v. Weinstein [C. C. A.] 166 F 271. Going onto track ahead of train where evidence tended to show that engine was backing without light and gave no signal. Perkins v. Wabash R. Co., 233 Ill. 458, 84 NE 677. Where attention of driver was attracted to switch engine nearby and upon discovering approaching engine he attempted to back off. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Summers [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 211. Drove upon track knowing of approaching train. Stearns v. Boston & M R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. For jury where twelve-year old boy was killed. Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Fowler, 138 Ill. App. 352. Not negligence per se to use crossing knowing of defects therein. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Sample, 138 Ill. App. 95. Contributory negligence held for jury on conflicting evidence as to plaintiff's intoxication and as to speed with which he was driving. Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. v. Lawler, 132 Ill. App. 280; Conlon v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 139 Ill. App. 555. For jury where plaintiff looked and listened until horse became unmanageable. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Cyr [Ind. App.] 86 NE 868. Failure to look and listen at any joint where train could have been discovered not negligence as matter of law. Id. Parent sending 13 year old boy on errand which took him across track, it appearing that he was an unusually careful boy. McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33. Where one about to cross, knowing that train had not passed, stopped, looked and listened but did not discover approaching train and drove onto track, where he became stalled by wheel slipping off culvert into mud hole. When he discovered train he abandoned team but was hit by flying sack. Day v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 707, 112 SW 1019. Where plaintiff looked and saw a clear track for 685 feet which would have given him time to cross had train been running at lawful rate of speed, held not negligent as matter of law in not thereafter discovering train. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808.

Negligence for jury: Negligence of bicycle rider in colliding with train at night, view of crossing being somewhat blocked. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877. In going onto track ahead of engine approaching at about five times speed limit, crossing being somewhat obstructed and decedent being partially deaf. Winn v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 239 Ill. 132, 87 NE 954. In driving onto track in front of engine, being misled by fact that engine was backing and was on track used by engines going away from crossing. Gorson v. Atlantic City R. Co. [N. J. Law] 72 A 1. In crossing in front of backing engine where lanterns on rear were insufficient to give correct location. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Ark.] 114 SW 228. Where view was obstructed by cars until within 4 or 5 feet of track, where plaintiff listened for signals and heard none, and where he was struck by train exceeding speed limit. Inman v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 878. In going onto track in front of train, view being blocked by cars. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Ind. App.] 87 NE 40. Failure to stop where view was clear for last 140 feet and where road was sandy and buggy made but little noise. Kujawa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 562, 116 NW 249. In driving onto track ahead of train, evidence being conflicting as to whether view was obstructed. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 877. Crossing in front of backing train. Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Russell [Ark.] 113 SW 1021. In attempting to cross where he was about 3 steps from crossing when train was discovered 30 steps away, emergency being created by company's negligence. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Williams [Ga. App.] 63 SE 917. Where driver stopped a reasonable time to see if locomotive standing in highway would not move or if horse would take fright, and, upon finding that engine was not going to move and that horse did not appear frightened, attempted to drive by, negligence is for jury. Butler v. Easton & A. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 276. Whether one who has deter-riding as the guest of another [59] who has no control of the team is not required to exercise the same diligence as the one driving.[60] Whether parents of a child were in the exercise of due care for its safety is a question of fact for the jury.[61]

ined to cross ahead of train should devote his whole attention to team or should have watched train. Stearns v. Boston v. M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Where evidence was conflicting as to whether view was obstructed by darkness and storm or by smoke and steam from another train. Kasarda v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [Pa.] 70 A 943. Where plaintiff looked before crossing and train was hidden by curve, especially where she would have crossed in safety had she not stumbled on raised plank. Hanlon v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 221 Pa. 490, 70 A 821. Where plaintiff's evidence shows that night was dark and cloudy, that driver stopped 10 or 15 feet from track to look and listen but did not see train, that train had no headlight and gave no signal, all of which defendant's evidence tended to disprove. Groves v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 971. Although witness testified that decedent seemed to be reading soap wrapper, there being evidence that decedent was illiterate and that soap sold had no reading matter on it. Dukeman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 237 Ill. 104, 86 NE 712. Whether conductor on street car was negligent in giving signal to motorman to come on after he had passed over tracks and saw no trains or whether he should have stopped and continued to watch. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Hilligoss [Ind.] 86 NE 485. Where train was backing at rate of 30 miles per hour on stormy night without headlight and against wind. Gorton v. Harmon, 152 Mich. 473, 15 Det. Leg. N. 250, 116 NW 443.

Held negligent: In driving onto track ahead of known approaching train, believing that it was to stop at station between station and crossing. Cable v. Spokane, etc., R. Co., 50 Wash. 619, 97 P 744. Where plaintiff, who was riding with her father, made no effort to have him stop before driving onto crossing ahead of train. Id. In attempting to pass ahead of rapidly moving train after looking in that direction and presumably appreciative of the situation. O'Brien v. New York, etc., R. Co., 129 App. Div. 288, 113 NYS 329. In going onto track ahead of approaching train where plaintiff had unobstructed view while train going 35 miles per hour ran 450 feet. Strong v. Grand Trunk W. R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 39, 120 NW 683. In turning from public road and going diagonally upon track and over embankment which caused wagon to tip over onto track where decedent was struck by train, evidence showing that it was a bright moonlight night and that decedent was intoxicated. Smith v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 230. Evidence held to show that decedent saw train and negligently attempted to beat it. Laun v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 553. In crossing in front of train approaching in full sight, although on hearing it she believed that it was coming in opposite direction. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 1007. In standing on track within couple of feet of caboose which was kicked back over him. White v. New York, etc., R. Co., 200 Mass. 441, 86 NE 923. Where, knowing of dangerous crossing, horse is driven at trot to within 25 feet of track, at which point a view of only about 50 or a 100 feet could be had, and then halted only to a walk, and where hearing could not be relied on because of intervening bluff and adverse wind. Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 10. Drove horse so close to track before stopping that it took fright and ran in front of train. Potter v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 221 Pa. 550, 70 A 852. Where person killed was walking, evidence that, although view was somewhat obstructed, he could have seen engine about 12 rods up track when 4 feet therefrom. Shunn's Adm'x v. Rutland R. Co. [Vt.] 69 945. Walking on west side of wagon without taking any precautions against train from east, though one was past due, the night being stormy. Schwartz v. Mineral Range R. Co., 153 Mich. 40, 15 Det. Leg. N. 358, 116 NW 540.

Held not negligent: In going onto track ahead of backing engine, no signals or warnings having been given, night being dark and view obstructed. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Holmes' Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 46. Where no train was in sight when plaintiff drove onto track and accident was caused by balking of horse. Flannelly v. Delaware & H. Co., 164 F 303.

58. Kujawa v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 562, 116 NW 249; Williams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 956. Fact that one of decedent's horses was afraid of cars may be considered in determining negligence in attempting to cross ahead of known approaching train. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Although deceased did not know of rule limiting speed to 25 miles per hour, knowledge of customary speed may have justified him in assuming that it was not approaching at a higher speed. Id.

50. Where one borrowed horse and another a wagon and started out on joint expedition, one could not be considered as guest of other, but both owed duty of stopping and listening. Wade v. Western Maryland R. Co., 220 Pa. 578, 69 A 1112. Where two driving together are companions and engaged in mutual enterprise, one not driving owes same duty as driver to avoid danger and cannot recover where he permitted other to drive into place of danger without objection. Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 10.

60. Liabraaten v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 105 Minn. 207, 117 NW 423.

61. Jury held warranted in finding that parents of child killed by railroad were in exercise of due care for its safety when they were sufficiently near place of accident to have saved child had railroad not been negligent, and child had been in back yard six minutes before accident, and as soon as bell ringer at crossing started to ring search for child was made. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warriner, 132 Ill. App. 301.

Acts required of traveler. See 10 C. L. 1412—The care exacted of one approaching a crossing requires that he should use his faculties of sight and hearing,[62] but the failure so to do is not usually negligence per se [63] and may be excused by the peculiar circumstances of the case.[64] Ordinarily he need not stop unless it is necessary to effectively look and listen.[65] A traveler must exercise reasonable care to look and listen at a time and place to make it effective,[66] and must continue to look and listen unless upon the track.[67] Where a collision occurs with a train approaching in [Mo.] 116 SW 553; O'Brien v. New York, etc., Co., 129 App. Div. 288, 113 NYS 329; Cable v. Spokane, etc., R. Co., 50 Wash. 619, 97 P 744. Generally, it is negligence not to look and listen. Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Russell [Ark.] 113 SW 1021.

Held negligent: One approaching crossing with unobstructed view of track without using senses to ascertain if any train is approaching. Williams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 956. Bright boy 13 years old, familiar with crossing dangers, in attempting to pass over without looking and in spite of warnings. McGee v. Wabash, R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33. In failing to stop and look, where position in rear of wagon prevented a view of track until horses were almost onto track. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Jenkins [Kan.] 98 P 208.

Negligence for jury: Negligence in failing to look and listen, where defendant violated law as to speed giving of signals, and maintaining of flagman. Henry v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 219, 86 NE 231. Negligence in failing to look and listen. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Joshlin, 33 Ky. L. R. 513, 110 SW 382. Where train came from direction from which train would not ordinarily be expected, negligence in not looking in that direction. Fowler v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 234 Ill. 619, 85 NE 298. Deaf person in approaching, after looking, to track and stopping on track as if to tie shoe string without again looking, and remaining there while train ran 180 or 296 feet at rate of 6 to 12 miles per hour, negligent as matter of law. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. v. Fain, 85 Ark. 532, 109 SW 514.

Not negligent: Where plaintiff and decedent stopped and looked twice but view was somewhat obstructed. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 97 P 520. Where only eye witness did not see decedent until he "lunged" onto track, evidence held to support finding that he stopped, looked and listened in view of presumption of due care. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hayes [Kan.] 99 P 1131.

63. Winn v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 239 Ill. 132, 87 NE 954; Dukeman v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 237 Ill. 104, 86 NE 712. Where opportunity exists, duty to look is absolute. Hain v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 303, 116 NW 20; Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102.

64. Failure to look and listen is not negligence in all cases. Henry v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 219, 86 NE 231. Though train could have been seen. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Reed [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 69. While one failing to look where he has full opportunity to do so cannot recover negligence for jury where view is obstructed or other facts exist which complicate question. Inman v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 878. Not excused from looking and listening because noise of wagon renders it difficult to hear and peculiarities of grade make it difficult to see. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Ark.] 114 SW 228. Where team is uncontrollable, driver is excused from stopping, looking and listening. Sarles v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 232. Team is uncontrollable when driver, with all reasonable efforts, cannot prevent them from going onto track. Id. Not negligence to fail to look where it would have been unavailing because of obstructions. Vance v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 98 P 41.

65. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396; Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877; Gorton v. Harmon, 152 Mich. 473, 15 Det. Leg. N. 250, 116 NW 443; Shum's Adm'x v. Rutland R. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 945. For jury to say, from facts of particular case, whether traveler should have stopped. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877.

66. Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 1007. Must use reasonable care and prudence under circumstances as to place and time of looking and listening. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Ind. App.] 87 NE 40. Where pedestrian looked, he is not necessarily negligent because he did not look at the most advantageous point. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808. Not negligent in failing to look for train while on crest of hill, it not appearing that decedent knew at that time that he could not thereafter get a good view. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hansen [Kan.] 96 P 668.

67. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102. Must use sense of sight at last opportunity before passing from line of safety to point of danger. Grimm v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co. [Wis.] 119 NW 833. Duty of being careful and observant does not cease with mere act of stopping and looking at point some distance from track (Walsh v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [Pa.] 70 A 1088), and, if situation affords opportunity thereafter of observing approaching train, disregard thereof is negligence (Id.).

Negligent as matter of law: Where one appproaching crossing looked when about four rods therefrom and, seeing no train, proceeded with horses at walk without again looking, though view was unobstructed. Williams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 956. In driving onto plain view, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur obtains,[68] and displaces the presumption of due care.[69]

Duty where view of track is obstructed.[See 10 C. L. 1413]—Where the view of the track is obstructed, one approaching must use commensurate care.[70]

Parallel tracks.[See 10 C. L. 1413]—Since danger is correspondingly increased by the number of tracks upon which trains may approach, commensurate care must be used where there are several tracks.[71]

Right to rely on crossing signals, gates, flagman, etc.[See 10 C. L. 1413]—While open gates or signals of flagman may constitute an invitation to cross,[72] and must be considered in determining contributory negligence,[73] they do not relieve a traveler crossing without looking during last 53 feet, knowing that train was due though attention was diverted by prancing of horses. Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 97, 118 NW 638.

68. Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur applies to accident at crossing where facts indicate that had deceased done what he was bound to do it would not have occurred. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102. Where surroundings are such that if plaintiff had looked he would have seen train, it will be presumed from occurrence of accident, either that he did not look, or that he did not heed what he saw. Wilkinson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 466; Antonian v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877.

69. Clemons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 387, 119 NW 102.

Held negligent: Where decedent either did not look, or saw train and attempted to pass ahead of it. Hain v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 135 Wis. 303, 116 NW 20. Where approaching train was visible for 740 feet, notwithstanding plaintiff testified that she looked but did not see same. Walsh v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [Pa.] 70 A 1088. Testimony of plaintiff and companion that they looked and saw no train held insufficient to raise issue in view of physical fact that train was in plain sight. Schaub v. Kansas City S. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 444, 113 SW 1163. Evidence that view was unobstructed held to show that plaintiff did not look, or, seeing train, failed to take proper precaution. Id. Where circumstances are such that plaintiff must have seen and heard train had he looked and listened, his mere negative testimony that he looked and listened but did not see or hear train will not sustain verdict. Stetson v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 113. Negligent as matter of law where evidence is conclusive that train was clearly visible at point where plaintiff testified he stopped and looked although he says that he did not see it. Weiss v. Central R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 1087.

70. One approaching crossing where view is obstructed may expect signals to be given. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 877.

Negligence for jury: Driver of six horse team who stopped and listened where view was obstructed, in not leaving team and going forward. Vance v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Cal. App.] 98 P 41. In not discovering train approaching crossing, view being obstructed. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Stoker [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 910. Approached crossing with automobile at rate of 5 or 6 miles per hour and looked and listened, but did not stop, though view was blocked. Pendroy v. Great Northern R. Co. [N. D.] 117 NW 531.

Not negligent: Where plaintiff stopped, looked and listened twice, but view was obstructed by cars and sound was deadened by noise or nearby mill, although it appears that there were particular spots where view would not have been obstructed, it not appearing that he knew thereof. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Assman [Kan.] 96 P 843.

71. Not negligent: Where four tracks are only 49 feet across, traveler exercises due care in stopping and looking before going onto first track where he has clear view therefrom. Cherry v. Louisiana & A. R. Co., 121 La. 471, 46 S 596.

Not negligent as matter of law: In colliding with engine, where box car on fourth track obstructed view until plaintiff passed it, his horses becoming unmanageable on the sixth and collision occurring on eighth. Robison v. New York, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 677, 112 NYS 905. Person going around train obstructing a crossing before daylight, in failing to see train on another track backing at great speed without signals or other warnings and without lights except such as are usually on rear of trains. Kurt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 838, 111 NYS 859.

72. May rely on invitation of flagman to cross. Cross v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 432, 110 SW 290. Held for jury whether partial raising of gates was an invitation. Pulcino v. Long Island R. Co., 125 App. Div. 629, 109 NYS 1076; Wabash R. Co. v. Perkins, 137 Ill. App. 514. Where defendant's evidence tended to prove that gates were not raised at all, but plaintiff's tended to show that they were raised about 6 feet and again lowered, held for jury whether they were raised enough to constitute invitation. Pulcino v. Long Island R. Co., 125 App. Div. 629, 109 NYS 1076.

73. Although brakeman has no authority to give crossing signals, such signals when given may be considered on plaintiff's negligence. Guthrie v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 71 A 542. In determining negligence in not waiting until smoke has cleared away, raising of gates must be considered. Pulcino v. Long Island R. Co., 125 App. Div. 629, 109 NYS 1076. Absence of flag at crossing as required held not to have misled decedent where no such flag had ever been displayed. Peck v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1073, 119 NW 573.

from the duty to exercise due care for his own safety.[74] He must exercise care also to avoid being injured by the lowering of the gates.[75]

(§ 11) H. Injuries to persons on highways or private premises near tracks.[76] See 10 C. L. 1414—While a railroad is not liable for injuries caused by horses on nearby highways taking fright at the ordinary operations of its trains,[77] it is liable for negligence,[78] especially after discovering the horses' fright.[79] Likewise, it must exercise reasonable care not to place anything calculated to frighten an ordinarily gentle horse near the highway.[80] Contributory negligence defeats recovery.[81]

(§ 11) I. Injuries to animals on or near tracks. How far liability extends.[82]—See 10 C. L. 1415—While it has been held that at common law a railroad owes no duty to a trespassing animal except to refrain from willful injuring it[83] and, hence, need not maintain a lookout,[84] its duty arising only upon actual discovery,[85] the more common

A.] 161 F 520. Existence of gates does not relieve traveler of duty to use due care. Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Singheiser [Ky.] 115 SW 192. Absence of watchman held not to justify plaintiff in assuming that he was at his post and that way was clear without exercising due care for own safety. Schaub v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 444, 113 SW 1163. Though flagman was negligent, party injured cannot recover if he was also negligent. Cross v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 432, 110 SW 290.

Negligence for jury: In crossing, where gates were up and plaintiff saw light but thought that engine was standing. Beauerle v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 152 Mich. 345, 15 Det. Leg. N. 290, 116 NW 424. Where driver twice stopped and looked and finally mistaking sign of brakeman on freight train which had just cleared crossing to "keep back" for signal to "come on," attempted to cross and was struck. Guthrie v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 71 A 542. Where train was in full view when gates raised and plaintiff started to cross, held negligent. Willoughby v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 41.

75. In action for injury to one struck by lowering gate, evidence held for jury whether he approached at such excessive speed as to be cause of accident. Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Singheiser [Ky.] 115 SW 192.

78. Liable where steam is negligently permitted to escape. Vandalia R. Co. v. McMains [Ind. App.] 85 NE 1038. In determining negligence in permitting steam to escape, place, length and character of train, distance from team, purpose and use of steam cocks, etc., may be considered. Id. Evidence that steam in engine standing near crossing could be raised to full head in 3 or 4 minutes, yet was allowed to blow off 10 or 12 minutes before starting time, held to authorize finding of negligence. Id.

79. While trainmen owe no duty to watch for teams on nearby highways, when they see team taking fright they must exercise reasonable care to avoid injury. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Martin, 33 Ky. L. R. 666, 110 SW 815.

80. Allegation that defendant negligently piled slag and placed car near road thereby frightening plaintiff's horse without alleging that such acts were unnecessary or of a character to ordinarily frighten horse held insufficient. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barnwell [Ga.] 63 SE 501.

81. Driver held negligent where it appears that he did not see train until after horse did and that he did not get lines tightened up until horse was running. Hughes v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 1079. Contributory negligence held for jury where plaintiff knew that team was liable to run away and unhitched traces, on learning that train was approaching, but did not take team out although he had time. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Martin, 33 Ky. L. R. 666, 110 SW 815.

85. McDonnell v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [N. D.] 118 NW 819. Where railroad knew that sheep were on track and negligently ran into them, it is liable. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673. Evidence of distance at which horses were seen, that they never left track, that train was under control, etc., held to sustain finding that company failed to exercise reasonable care after discovering them. McDonnell v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [N. D.] 118 NW 819.

rule seems to be that it must exercise ordinary care [86] and is liable for negligence [87] proximately causing injury,[88] especially where the animal is at a crossing.[89] An engineer need not check speed because an animal is near the track unless the situation indicates that it may go upon the track.[90] The duty and liability is sometimes regulated by statute,[91] but the mere violation of stock law does not of itself defeat recovery.[92] In some states a notice of the killing must be served upon the company within a specified time.[93]

Place of entry on right of way. See 10 C. L. 1417—The place of entry [94] is often material on the question of liability under the fence laws and where the injury occurs at a private [95] or public crossing.[96]

86. "Ordinary care" as used in Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, making company absolutely liable for killing stock unless it has fenced in track, in which case it shall be liable only for failure to exercise ordinary care, refers to care in operating trains and not to maintenance of fence. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 966. Must equip with headlight sufficient to disclose animal at such distance as to enable train to stop. Wallace v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 100 P 904. Evidence held to show that train was negligently run into sheep upon track. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673.

87. Instruction held as whole to charge that to find for plaintiff it was only necessary to find that company omitted to ring bell, blow whistle or slack or stop train. St. Louis B. & M. R. Co. v. Droddy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 902.

Negligent: Evidence that mules ran on track ahead of engine held to warrant finding that if lookout had been kept they would have been discovered in time to avoid injury. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Estes [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 547.

Negligence for jury: In failing to discover cow approaching track and avoiding striking her. Rio Grande W. R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781. Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that horse crossed track, ran along edge of same and finally turned back onto track and started down same when struck, while defendant's tended to show that she was struck as she first went upon track immediately ahead of engine. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Shepherd, 20 Okl. 626, 95 P 243. Where one witness testified that no whistle was sounded and no attempt made to stop until train struck cattle. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 485. Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that track was straight and level and night not foggy, negligence in running into cattle held for jury, though defendant's evidence tended to show contrary. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Grigsby [Ky.] 115 SW 237. It being customary to blow alarm whistle to frighten stock from track, it must be presumed that in some cases at least it is effective, hence evidence of failure to whistle after discovering cattle makes question of negligence for jury. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex.] 114 SW 103. Evidence held insufficient to show negligence in permitting bushes to grow up and obstruct view and in having insufficient headlight, especially where evidence tends to show that horse suddenly came on track. Milham v. Pine Bluff & W. R. Co. [Ark.] 110 SW 595.

88. Where bell for one crossing was rung until few seconds before horse was killed, failure to ring for crossing 250 yards beyond held immaterial. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. O'Hare [Ark.] 115 SW 942. Where horses get onto track through defective fence and are frightened by approaching train and run onto bridge, defective fence is proximate cause of injuries from falling through bridge. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Dixon [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 978.

89. Where animals are being driven across tracks at crossing, obligations of due care are mutual. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673. Where animals are being driven across tracks at crossing, company must exercise reasonable care to discover, and does not perform duty by exercising reasonable care after discovering. Id.

90. Wallace v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 100 P 904; Rio Grande W. R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781. Where train was going at a speed which would require but a few seconds to reach crossing and cow approaching same was walking along, held that situation was such as ought to have appraised engineer of likelihood that she would not stop. Rio Grande W. R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781.

91. Code 1906, § 4043, providing that railroad may run trains through towns, cities, etc., at rate of six miles per hour and company shall be liable for any damages sustained from running trains through towns, cities, etc., at greater speed, held only to apply to injuries within city limits. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Butler [Miss.] 46 S 558.

92. See post, this section, Contributory Negligence.

93. Fact that man served responded as the ticket agent held sufficient to show that notice of killing under Stock Act § 6 was served on ticket agent. Rio Grande W. R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781.

94. Point of entry and not place of collision determines liability. Edie v. Kansas City S. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 9, 112 SW 993.

95. Complaint construed and held not to affirmatively show that horses went onto track at private crossing, followed right of way to public crossing and were killed thereat. Indianapolis & C. Trac. Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 86 NE 498. Various statutes construed and held that liability of electric company for killing of animals entering at private crossing is same as railroad company, and, hence, company not liable where gate was left open by another in absence of contract relieving adjoining owner from duty of keeping same closed. Id.

Duty to maintain fences. See 10 C. L. 1417—At common law, railroads owed no duty to fence their tracks,[97] but, in the exercise of the police power,[98] many states now require them to fence their right of way [99] except in cities,[1] at depot grounds,[2] switch yards,[3] public crossings,[4] and at places where it would endanger the lives of their employes.[5] An absolute liability [6] is frequently imposed for injuries inflicted by trains [7] upon animals entering [8] at unfenced places [9] where the statute requires a 96. Testimony of engineer, the only eyewitness, that horse was killed at crossing is not conclusive. Bacus v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 751. Evidence of position of body 100 feet from crossing and surrounding facts held to warrant finding that horse was not killed at crossing though engineer, the only eyewitness, testified that he was struck thereat and body carried on pilot. Id.

97. Prior to enactment of Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, company need not fence, and were only liable for negligence in operating train. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 966.

99. Lessee is an "owner" within Civ. Code, § 485, giving cause of action to adjoining owners for animals killed through failure to fence. Barbee v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 541.

1. Rev. St. 1899, § 1105 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), does not require company to fence track where crossed by streets, but it must fence tracks in towns, etc., where not laid off into streets unless it is essential to transaction of business with public that track be unfenced (Bridges v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 576, 112 SW 37), and "business" referred to is business with public generally, and with itself in connection with stations, but maintenance of passing track merely does not have any connection with station within rule (Id.).

2. To constitute a "depot" within Ann. St. 1906, § 1105, requiring railroads to fence except at depots, etc., it is not indispensable that there be a depot building or a station agent. Welch v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 464, 109 SW 1074. Where company maintained switch track in sparsely settled country but had neither depot building nor station agent thereat, but did handle freight for all who tendered same and stopped for passengers on signal, held for jury whether place was "depot grounds," although mill company was practically only one accommodated. Id.

3. Held for jury whether point of crossing of defendant's tracks with another 300 or 400 feet outside village, at which point cow was killed was within switch yards. Bloomfield v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 373, 109 SW 824.

4. Only liable for negligence in operation of trains at crossings. Worley v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1039.

5. Burnham v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 235. Where it appears that to maintain fences about switch yards and sheep pens, located in country, would greatly increase danger to employes' lives, held duty of court to declare that company was under no obligation to maintain same. Id.

6. Where company fails to maintain fences as provided by Gen. St. 1906, § 2871, it is liable for all damage resulting from such failure. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Peeples [Fla.] 47 S 392. Where animal is killed on unfenced portion of road which should be fenced, company is liable under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, regardless of negligence. Rio Grande & E. P. R. Co. v. Garcia [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 204.

7. Instruction construed, and held to require killing by "locomotive or cars" to authorize recovery. Texas & G. R. Co. v. Pate [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 994. Evidence of blood on ties, etc., held to show that animals were killed by collision. Central Indiana R. Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 26. To recover under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 5312, 5318, evidence must show that entry was made at place where right of way was not securely fenced and that animals were killed by collision with train. Id.

8. Instruction held erroneous as imposing liability if fence and gate were insufficient, without regard as to whether stock entered at defective point. Fee v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 447. Evidence that some of the cattle were found in corn pens near where others were killed, and that there was no fence for half mile either way, held to authorize finding that cattle entered at point where track was not fenced. Central Indiana R. Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 83 NE 26.

9. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, requires maintenance of fence in such condition as under ordinary circumstances to effectually turn live stock of ordinary docility, and is not satisfied by exercise of ordinary care to repair. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex.] 109 SW 925; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex.] 114 SW 103; Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 966. Under statute making company absolutely liable for killing of stock unless right of way was fenced, etc., company failing to maintain guards between wide grounds used by public and narrower fenced portion is liable for stock killed as result thereof. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Seiders [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 997. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, making company absolutely liable unless it fenced, etc., proof of killing by locomotive makes prima facie case, and defendant has burden of showing that it fenced way, which could be rebutted by evidence that fence was insufficient to turn cattle of ordinary docility. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 966. Under statute making company absolutely liable for stock killed unles it fences, etc., railroad has burden of showing that tracks were properly fenced. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Seiders [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 997.

fence,[10] and it is no defense that the adjoining owner prevented the erection of a fence outside of the right of way.[11] While farm crossing gates are a part of the fence,[12] the duty devolves upon the adjoining owner, and not upon the railroad, to keep the same closed [13] unless unnecessary gates have been erected.[14] These statutes, however, are usually for the benefit of the adjoining owner [15] and not for the benefit of the general public.[16] Where a fence has been properly erected, the company must exercise reasonable care to maintain the same in proper condition,[17] and must repair or rebuild in such manner as not to interfere with the efficiency of the fence during the progress of the work.[18]

Gates.[See 10 C. L. 1419]—While a railroad must usually exercise reasonable care to maintain gates in proper repair [19] and is liable for injuries proximately resulting from a failure so to do,[20] a recovery is frequently denied where the adjoining owner knew of the defect and could have repaired without substantial cost or trouble.[21]

Cattle guards.[See 10 C. L. 1419]—While there is no general common-law duty to maintain guards, special situations may render it negligence not to do so,[22] and it is quite generally required by statute that sufficient guards shall be maintained at fence terminals [23] unless it will materially interfere with the business of the road [24] or will

10. In pleading liability under Burns' Ann. St. 1901 (Sp. Acts 1877, p. 61, c. 30, § 1), not necessary to negative exceptions relieving company from duty to fence. Central Indiana R. Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 26.

12. Gate at farm crossing is part of "fence" within Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Pruitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 966; Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Wills [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 145.

13. Central Indiana R. Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 26. Not bound to keep guard to see that private gate is closed. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex.] 114 SW 103.

14. Under Laws 29th Leg. 1905, p. 226, c. 117, making company liable only for negligently killing stock where it has fenced track in stock law district, where company puts in unnecessary gates it must keep same closed. Texas & P. R. Co., v. Webb [Tex.] 114 SW 1171.

15. Civ. Code, § 485, making railroad liable for killing domestic animals belonging to landowners through or "along" whose land the road runs, is inapplicable where land is separated from right of way by public road. Barbee v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 541.

16. Civ. Code, § 485, requiring railroads to fence right of way, and giving cause of action to adjoining owners for animals killed because of lack thereof, unless company has paid owner agreed price for making and maintaining such fence, held for benefit of public. Barbee v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 541.

19. Evidence held to show negligence in maintaining defective gate. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1170. Evidence as to insufficiency of gate and of defendant's attempts to repair held to authorize judgment for plaintiff. Smith v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 612, 112 SW 32. Evidence of recent repairs on gate and placing of lock thereon, that owner did not use lock, and that he passed through gate during evening and left boy to close same, held to show that gate was not open through negligence of company. Wallace v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 100 P 904.

20. Where defective condition of gate prevented it from latching unless lifted, and person passing through neglected to lift it, held that defect was proximate cause of it being open. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 485.

21. Where evidence tended to show that gate was merely sagged and could have been fixed in a minute or two with hammer and nail, held for jury whether defect was of such substantial character as to require defendant to repair. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 485.

22. Where company fences in right of way, it may be a common-law duty to construct sufficient guards to turn stock and thus avoid trap. Sheli v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 528, 112 SW 39.

23. Sufficiency of guard, under Ky. St. 1903, § 1793, held for jury where evidence shows that it is one in general use but that cattle pass over it. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Russell, 33 Ky. L. R. 447, 110 SW 317. Fact that guard is same as is in general use on defendant's and other roads is not conclusive that it is sufficient under Ky. St. 1903, § 1793, which contemplates a guard reasonably sufficient to turn stock. Id. Mere fact that horse crossed guard in front of train is not of itself evidence of its insufficiency, but manner in which he crossed may be considered with other facts. O'Mara v. Newton & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 377.

24. Rev. St. 1899, § 2867 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1649), making company liable for injuries occurring where track is unenclosed, does not make company liable for stock killed which enters right of way from public road at point where it would seriously impede business to maintain fence or guards. Edle endanger the lives of employes,[25] and, if not so maintained, the company is sometimes made absolutely liable for resulting injury [20] or liable in double damages.[27]

Contributory negligence of owners. See 10 C. L. 1419—No recovery lies where the owner's negligence [28] proximately contributes to the injury,[29] but the running at large [30] in violation of stock law does not ordinarily preclude a recovery.[31]

(§ 11) J. Fires.[32] See 10 C. L. 1420—While in a few states a railroad is absolutely liable for fire escaping from its locomotives,[33] it is generally only required to exercise reasonable care to prevent fires being communicated to adjoining property,[34] and is liable for all injuries proximately resulting from its negligence.[35] While an indepen-

v. Kansas City S. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 9, 112 SW 993.

25. Whether maintenance of guards would be dangerous to employes must be determined form all the circumstances, which is a question for jury unless reasonable minds could not differ upon undisputed facts. Edie v. Kansas City S. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 9, 112 SW 993.

26. Liability under Rev. St. 1899, § 1105 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), is absolute. Adams v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1119. Railroad Law, Laws 1892, p. 1390, c. 676, § 32, requiring railroads to fence track and to maintain sufficient cattle guards and providing that "so long as such fences" are not provided, etc., company shall be liable, re-enactment of Laws 1854, c. 288, § 8, except that cattle guards are omitted from second provision, held not to change liability as to cattle straying over defective guards. Bateman v. Rutland R. Co., 126 App. Div. 511, 110 NYS 506. Under Code, § 2055, providing that railroad failing to maintain sufficient guards shall be liable for stock killed by reason thereof, and, "to recover, it shall only be necessary to prove the loss or injury" to the property, plaintiff must prove insufficiency of guard as well as injury to make prima facie case. O'Mara v. Newton & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 377. Fact that right of action for injury arises out of violation of statute requiring maintenance of guards and fences does not necessarily make cause of action statutory, but violation of statutory duty may give rise to common-law action. Shell v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 528, 112 SW 39.

27. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 1105 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945), railroad is liable for double damages where animal strays from crossing onto private track beyond through lack of guards. Worley v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1039.

28. Where horse was turned into lane which led across private crossing to horse pasture, owner returning to house and not seeing where horse was on hearing whistle of approaching train, negligence held for jury. St. Louis, B. & M. R. Co. v. Droddy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 902. Where, upon burning of overhead bridge, defendant made a temporary crossing but did not open fence so as to give access thereto, held not negligence for plaintiff, who was road overseer, to cut same, especially where fence was insufficient at nearby points to turn stock. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Peeples [Fla.] 47 S 392.

29. Negligence of owner in leaving cow out on highway, where engineer saw her in time to avoid injury but did not slacken speed, held not proximate cause. Rio Grande W. R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781.

30. Mules which were tied but broke loose during night and went onto track were not running at large. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Seiders [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 997.

31. O'Kelly v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 660. While Stock Law (Laws 26th Leg. 1899, p. 220, c. 128, as amended by Laws 28th Leg. 1903, p. 97, c. 71) prior to amendment by Laws 29th Leg. 1905, p. 226, c. 117, required owners to confine stock, it did not supersede Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, making railroads liable for stock killed unless road was fenced. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex.] 114 SW 1171. Under Act 1905 (Laws 29th Leg. p. 226, c. 117, § 20a), amending stock law, recovery may be had for horse negligently killed, notwithstanding stock law (Texas & P. R. Co. v. Webb [Tex.] 114 SW 1171, afg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 1170), such amendment not being unconstitutional as an amendment by reference to title nor for insufficiency of title (Id.).

33. Act April 18, 1907 (Acts 1907, p. 336), making railroads absolutely liable for fires escaping from engines, held constitutional. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Shore [Ark.] 117 SW 515.

34. Right of company to operate cars over its tracks is coupled with duty to so operate same as not to negligently injure property of other. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 65 Fla. 514, 46 S 732. Where jury is satisfied that fire was due either to improper construction of engine, lack of repairs, or improper handling, verdict should be for plaintiff although they are uncertain as to which cause fire is attributable. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314. Evidence that defendant knowingly allowed large quantities of fuel oil to escape and saturate surrounding ground held to warrant finding of negligence. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323. Not liable for fire carefully set on railroad premises and spread by unexpected storm. McVay v. Central California Inv. Co., 6 Cal. App. 184, 91 P 745.

35. Burning of cover over plants to protect from frost, thereby exposing them, held proximate cause of freezing. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.,

dent, intervening cause relieves the company from liability,[36] where it negligently permits inflammable oils [37] to escape and its presence proximately causes the spread of a fire, it is immaterial who ignited the same.[38] Likewise, where a railroad company [39] negligently [40] moves a burning car to a point near another's property and sets the same on fire, it is immaterial whether the owner protested or not,[41] and it is liable unless the loss was inevitable.[42] The company must exercise reasonable care to keep its right of way free from combustible material,[43] and where it fails so to do and fire starts because thereof, it is immaterial that due care was used in other respects,[44] and that plaintiff's adjoining property was in the same condition.[45] Liability in particular instances,[46] and the duties of roads passing through forests,[47] and lands subject to fires,[48] are sometimes prescribed by statute.[49] Unless a railroad

Civ. App.] 112 SW 323. Where fire escaped from engine to house of O and from there to plaintiff's property, negligence in permitting fire to escape from locomotive was proximate cause of plaintiff's loss. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Wilbanks [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 318. Death of one endeavoring to save property from fire held proximate result of negligent starting of fire. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Siler, 133 Ill. App. 2.

36. Ordinary wind carrying fire is not an independent, intervening cause. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 65 Fla. 514, 46 S 732. Where cover over plants is negligently burned, destruction of plants by ordinary and usual frosts is not such an act of God as to relieve company. Id. Where conditions were not materially changed by flood except that additional oil was carried onto land, such flood did not relieve defendant. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323.

37. Evidence that fuel oil on ground had on several occasions caught fire held to warrant finding that it was inflammable. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323.

38. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323.

39. Question held for jury whether crew was acting for defendant railroad company or for lumber company in moving burning car near plaintiff's property. Valentine v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 915, 118 NW 970.

40. Evidence held to show negligence in moving burning car to point near plaintiff's property. Valentine v. Minneapolis, etc., R Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 915, 118 NW 970. Though plaintiff's chance of saving property was small, company has no right to deprive him thereof by pulling burning car near thereto unless necessary to save own. Id.

42. Company has burden of showing that property was doomed anyway. Valentine v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 915, 118 NW 970. Evidence held for jury whether loss was inevitable, regardless of company's acts. Id.

43. Owes reasonable care. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Davis [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1022. Evidence that defendant cut grass and permitted it to lie after drying held to show negligence. Nichols v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 61 Misc. 195, 114 NYS 942. Proof that right of way was overgrown with dry grass and other combustible material, that fire started in grass and spread to plaintiff's land, makes prima facie case. Diggs v. Wabash R. Co., 131 Mo. App. 457, 110 SW 9. Where fire originates outside of right of way, there is no issue as to combustible material on right of way. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Meentzen Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1000.

45. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Davis [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1022.

46. Evidence that plaintiff intended to ship cotton stored in cotton seed house on right of way and was awaiting for car for which he had made a guarantee deposit, held to authorize finding that cotton was there with consent of company, within Civ. Code 1902, § 2135, making exception to company's absolute liability where property destroyed is on right of way without company's consent. Hutto v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 567, 62 SE 835. Complaint alleging that locomotive was so negligently managed that it emitted sparks, which set fire to nearby cotton seed house, held action based on common-law negligence and under Civ. Code 1902, § 2135, making company absolutely liable for fires in certain cases. Id.

47. Word "forest" as used in Forest, Fish and Game Laws (Laws 1900, p. 66, c. 20), § 228, providing that a railroad company shall twice a year cut and remove all inflammable material from right of way passing through forest lands, held not to apply to partly wooded land. Higgins v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 415, 114 NYS 262. Laws 1900, p. 66, c. 20, § 228, providing that every railroad company shall "on such part of its roads as passes through forest lands," "remove inflammable materials," etc., is applicable to forest lands, whether within forest preserve or not. People v. Long Island R. Co., 126 App. Div. 477, 110 NYS 512.

48. Under Laws 1900, p. 66, c. 20, requiring railroad to twice a year cut and remove all inflammable material from right of way through lands "subject to fires," it is not necessary to show that there have been sets the fire, its employes are under no obligation to assist in extinguishing the same.[50] Contributory negligence of the injured person bars recovery.[51]

Duty as to equipment and operation of engines. See 10 C. L. 1421—A railroad must exercise reasonable care in equipping its locomotives with proper appliances for the prevention of fire,[52] but is liable only for negligence.[53] It is usually sufficient, however, if the engines are equipped with the most approved practical appliances in general use.[54] Must operate with such care as is consistent with the lawful, reasonable and effective conduct of its business.[55]

Contractual exemptions from liability. See 10 C. L. 1422—Exemption may ordinnarily be imposed as a condition upon the right to place property within the right of way,[56] but where such building is a warehouse, the exemption is not binding on third persons placings goods therein without knowledge thereof.[57] Where the exemption is drawn by the company, it will be construed most strictly against it,[58] and in no case will it be extended beyond the property [59] or the losses [60] manifestly covered fires to show that land was subject to fires. Higgins v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 415, 114 NYS 262.

49. Forest, Fish and Game Laws (Laws 1900, p. 66, c. 20, art. 13), as amended, and Laws 1900, p. 62, c. 20, § 220, construed, and held that provision requiring grass, etc., where railroad runs through forest, etc., to be cut twice a year, applies to counties having forests, whether it is a forest reserve or not, but provisions relating to employment of trackmen, devices to prevent escape of fires, etc., only apply to latter counties. People v. Long Island R. Co., 194 N. Y. 130, 87 NE 79.

50. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Meentzen Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1000.

51. Attempt to save property from fire not contributory negligence barring recovery for personal injuries. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Siler, 133 Ill. App. 2.

52. Sims v. American Ice Co. [Md.] 71 A 522. Where jury examined spark arrester and heard testimony as to unusual size of sparks emitted, negligence held for jury although defendant's evidence showed due care. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314.

53. Instruction held to properly charge nonliability if engine was properly equipped, managed, etc. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Williams [Ga. App.] 63 SE 671. Jury need not accept as conclusive statement of trainmen as to care in equipment and operation, but may consider all surrounding facts. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Trotter [Ark.] 116 SW 227. Instruction that proof of proper equipment did not relieve defendant of presumption of negligence, unless it is also shown that engine was operated with reasonable care so as to prevent the escape of sparks, held not to impose absolute duty to prevent escape of sparks. Id. Where defendant submitted evidence that engine was equipped with first class standard spark arrester, was operated in usual manner, and did not emit more sparks than was necessary, while plaintiff offered evidence of two other fires started by the engine and that engine was "puffing and blowing" more than usual, negligence held for jury. Wheeler v. Albany & N. R. Co., 4 Ga. App. 439, 61 SE 839.

54. Where company showed that engine was equipped with a screen spark arrester which was in general use, instruction that it was incumbent on company to show that it had on its engine the best known and approved appliances held not erroneous as requiring railroad to prove that engine was equipped with appliances which were better than those in more general use. Helverson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 116 NW 699.

55. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314.

56. Loading platform. Southern R. Co. v. Blunt, 165 F 258. Corporation formed to erect and maintain compress held to have no power to agree in lease of part of right of way to indemnify company against losses to third persons by fire. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978.

57. Hutto v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 567, 62 SE 835. Though compress company receiving cotton of third person was agent of such party, company was not relieved from liability to such third person for fire by provision in lease of part of right of way to compress company where he had no knowledge thereof. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978.

58. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978.

59. Where lessee of part of right of way agreed to "assume all the risks" of fire to any building, improvements, etc., held that assumption only related to property of lessee and did not amount to contract of indemnity as to property of third persons. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Release executed in consideration of right to build on right of way, exempting company from any liability for fire to any building thereon or thereafter placed on premises, or personal property, or set to such building and communicated to "other property" outside of premises, held not limited to personal property outside of premises but applicable to buildings. Equitable Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 546.

60. Where in consideration of a spur track adjoining planing mill owner released company from all liability for property destroyed by fire communicated by locomotives operating on said track or otherwise by it. While negligence of the owner [61] proximately contributing to the injury [62] generally defeats recovery, unless the railroad after learning thereof [63] can by reasonable care prevent loss, in Florida it affects only the amount of recovery.[64] Ordinarily an adjoining owner may use his property as he sees fit,[65] and negligence can be predicated only on a failure to use due care after the fire starts,[66] he owing no duty to remove combustible material [67] or to keep guard.[68]

Pleading. See 10 C. L. 1423—While the complaint must allege negligence [69] and show that it was the proximate cause of the injury complained of,[70] it need not specify with particularity the facts which were the immediate cause of the fire's escape.[71] A general description of the injured premises is sufficient.[72]

Evidence, burden of proof, and presumptions. See 10 C. L. 1423—Plaintiff has the burden of proving that the fire was started by defendant [73] and that defendant was engaged in work connected therewith, such release from liability does not cover property destroyed by sparks emitted from locomotive on main track not engaged in work connected with spur track (Thomason v. Kansas City S. R. Co., 122 La. 995, 48 S 432), and, where fire is set by locomotive on main track, company has burden of showing that it was being used in connection with spur track (Id.).

61. Evidence that owner hurried to fire and found corner of barn burning but wholly failing to show what he did held insufficient to show due care. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. German Ins. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 995. Owners may cover plants with canvas, and mere fact that it is within reach of sparks does not prevent recovery for fire negligently started. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 65 Fla. 514, 46 S 732.

62. Where undisputed evidence shows that plaintiff's agent placed cotton on platform so close to track as to be in great danger, held not error to submit question of negligence without question as to proximate cause. Birge-Forbes Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 333. Instruction that if plaintiff failed to use care of ordinarily prudent person, and because of such failure he was guilty of negligence contributing to the burning, held to sufficiently charge on proximate cause. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978.

63. Instruction on discovered peril held erroneous as not requiring actual knowledge of perilous position of cotton. Morgan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978.

64. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 63 Fla. 514, 46 S 732.

65. Subject always to risk of fire from proper operation of road, and hence, where he permits combustible material to be near track, the risk is increased. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314.

66, 67. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314.

68. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 P 314. Plea alleging proximity of property to tracks and negligence in failing to keep watchman held insufficient on demurrer. Id.

69. Complaint alleging that defendant company "so carelessly and negligently managed and operated" one of its engines as to set fire to canvas covering pinery and burn same held sufficient to allow recovery for burning of canvas (Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 55 Fla. 514, 46 S 732), and, where it alleged that fire occurred in January, it is not necessary to allege that it was during winter season or that "defendant" ought to have anticipated a frost to allow recovery for freezing of plants (Id.).

70. Allegation that injury to growing plants by frost and cold occurred after and as result of negligent burning of covering used to protect them sufficiently connects injury with the negligence. Benedict Pineapple Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 55 Fla. 514, 46 S 732.

71. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Wilbanks [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 318. Complaint held to sufficiently allege negligence in maintenance of smokestack without specifying defect. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Davis [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1022. Pleading charging such negligent operation as to cause large and unusual sparks and coals to be emitted, and negligence in use of old and out of repair engine without sufficient spark arrester held not subject to motion to be made more definite. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., v. German Ins. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 995.

72. McVay v. Central California Inv. Co., 6 Cal. App. 184, 91 P 745.

73. Byers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 245; Phillips v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 63 SE 998. Mere probability that fire started from defendant's engine is not sufficient, but fact must be shown by a fair preponderance of proof. Sims v. American Ice Co. [Md.] 71 A 522. Evidence held for jury whether fire originated from spark falling through ventilator or crack in roof, in view of other explanation. Highland Foundry Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 199 Mass. 403, 85 NE 437. Passing of train and discovery of fire shortly thereafter raises no presumption that engine ignited same. Birmingham R., L. & P. Co. v. Hinton [Ala.] 48 S 546. Instruction that in considering whether defendant started fire jury should consider all the facts, including direction and velocity of the wind, working of engine, and condition, held not objectionable for failing to charge that facts must be so related as to leave no other conclusion, in absence of request for more specific instruction. Helverson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 116 NW 699.

Held to authorize finding that engine negligent,[74] but proof that the fire was started by defendant's engine though established by circumstantial evidence[75] raises a presumption of negligence[76] which defendant is bound to meet with evidence of due care in the equipment and operation of its engine,[77] although it need not show such care by a preponderance of the evidence.[78] That defendant started the fire may be shown by circumstantial evidence.[78]

Admissibility of evidence. See 10 C. L. 1424—The general rules relating to hearsay,[80] res gestae,[81] materiality and relevancy,[81a] opinion,[82] documentary evidence,[83] started fire: Evidence that fire started in dry grass near track shortly after train passed. Staples v. Boston & M. R. Co., 74 N. H. 499, 69 A 890. Evidence that fire was discovered shortly after engine emitting sparks passed and that wind blew from track towards building burned. Byers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 245. Evidence that defendant's locomotives habitually emitted sparks, that train passed shortly before discovery of fire. Higgins v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 415, 114 NYS 262. Evidence that fire originated about time local train passed that spark arrester was defective, that it was emitting sparks in unusual quantities, that it was running in excess of scheduled speed. Phillips v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 63 SE 998. Evidence that train passed at speed of 40 miles per hour, going up grade and emitting sparks, and that fire was shortly thereafter discovered in nearby cotton seed house. Hutto v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 567, 62 SE 835. Where building sufficiently near track to be set on fire by sparks from locomotive is destroyed by fire occurring shortly after engine emitting sparks passed. Thomason v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., 122 La. 995, 48 S 432. Evidence that barn near tracks was discovered on fire shortly after train emitting sparks passed. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Trotter [Ark.] 116 SW 227. Evidence that fire was discovered shortly after engine passed held insufficient in view of fact that engine was equipped with oil burner, etc., to show that fire was set by engine. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Meentzen Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1000. Evidence that bridge was burned shortly after engine passed over same, that witnesses saw live coals falling through bridge, held to make question for jury whether company set fire, notwithstanding negative testimony of trainmen. Police Jury v. Texas & P. R. Co., 122 La. 388, 47 S 692. Whether fire was started by locomotive, there being evidence that one passed shortly before fire was discovered, and there was no other explanation. Muse v. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. [Miss.] 48 S 897. Testimony of witnesses that they heard train in vicinity about two hours before fire held to authorize finding that train passed there notwithstanding train sheets to contrary. Staples v. Boston & M. R. Co., 74 N. H. 499, 69 A 890.

74. Where defendant has overcome presumption arising from fire by showing due care in equipping and operating engine, burden of showing negligence rests on plaintiff. Osborn v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Idaho] 98 P 627. Setting of three fires by same engine within three quarters of a mile held to authorize inference of negligence. Lillard v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 98 P 213.

75. Osborn v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Idaho] 98 P 627.

76. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Davis [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1022; Osborn v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Idaho] 98 P 627; Lillard v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 98 P 213; Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86; Hutto v. Seabord Air Line R. Co., 81 S. C. 567, 62 SE 835; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Meentzen Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1000; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Alexander Eccles & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 648. Evidence that engine scattered sparks without proof of unusual quantity or unusual size is insufficient to show negligence. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86. Evidence of emission of sparks held to authorize submission of negligence to jury although defendant's direct evidence tended to show due care. Id. Charge that, if sparks escaped from locomotive and set fire to grass on right of way which fire was communicated to plaintiff's property, prima facie case was made, held proper. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Eccles [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 648.

77. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314; Phillips v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 63 SE 998; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. McLeod [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 85. Prima facie case made by proof of setting of fire although contradicted by direct evidence of due care makes case for jury unless latter is so conclusive that a contrary verdict could not stand. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86. Proof of due care in equipping and operating engine overcomes presumption of negligence arising from setting of fire unless other circumstances establish negligence. Id.

78. Although, upon proof of fire set by locomotive, company must go forward and show ordinary care in equipping and operating engine, it need not make such proof by preponderance of evidence, but it is sufficient if it equals in weight that growing out of presumption and other evidence of plaintiff. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Starks [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1003.

79. As ignition shortly after passing of train. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Meentzen Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1000.

80. Statements made during fire as to cause of ignition of oil on ground held hearsay. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323. Inspector who did not inspect engine cannot testify as to inspection from record made by another. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86.

81. Statements made during progress of fire as to cause of ignition held not admissible as res gestae. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bellar [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 323.

cross-examination,[84] and expert testimony,[85] etc., apply, as do the rules of cross-examination.[86]

81a. Admissible: Where it is claimed that fire was started by trains which passed on particular morning, defendant may identify engines which passed and show that they were properly equipped. Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011. Evidence of apparent repair of spark arrester shortly after fire. Byers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 245. Where complaint charged negligence in using coal instead of fuel oil, he was entitled to introduce evidence to show greater danger. Morgan v. Missouri K. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Evidence of inflammable grass and brush along way and length of time it so remained. Higgins v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 415, 114 NYS 262. Where there is evidence that sparks are sometimes emitted without negligence, jury may consider conditions of plaintiff's premises on issue of cause of fire as bearing on possibility that it was caused by spark emitted without fault. Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011.

Inadmissible: Evidence comparing grass on plaintiff's land with that growing upon other people's land as opening up too large a field of collateral inquiry. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Matson, 77 Kan. 858, 94 P 1134.

Custom: Evidence of custom 10 years prior to time in question is inadmissible to discredit testimony that it was custom to let engines drift past place of fire with steam shut off. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86. Practice of other compress companies in handling of cotton, how constructed as bearing on contributory negligence, held inadmissible. Morgan v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Evidence that engineers sometimes punch holes in spark arresters to make engine steam better is inadmissible in absence of showing that such practice prevailed on defendant road (Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011), and witness who has only been on two engines of defendant company for short time is incompetent to testify as to practice (Id.).

Evidence of other fires: Admissible evidence of another fire set out at same time as showing that fire was caused by locomotive. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Miller [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 549. Where defendant offers evidence to show that engine is properly equipped with spark arresters, evidence of other fires set by engine within 10 days is admissible on rebuttal. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Eccles [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 648. Proof of fires in vicinity set by other engines about time of fire in question strengthens presumption of negligence in equipping and operating engines generally. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86. Where engine setting fire is not fully identified and defendant introduced evidence that all of its engines were properly equipped, etc., it is proper to permit evidence of other fires in vicinity during fall. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Dawson Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1110. Although engine setting fire is identified, where defendant's own evidence shows that it was no better than the others, evidence of fires set by others. Osburn v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Idaho] 98 P 627.

Emission of sparks by same engine: Evidence that engine had emitted sparks shortly before fire in question which had started fires held admissible. Sims v. American Ice Co. [Md.] 71 A 522. Evidence that engine threw out large quantities of sparks held admissible to show that it was not provided with spark arrester or that appliance was defective. Southern R. Co. v. Darwin [Ala.] 47 S 314.

Emission of sparks by other engines: Where it is not certain which of several trains started fire, held that court properly refused to confine evidence to train which passed last before discovering fire. Higgins v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 415, 114 NYS 262. Where locomotive setting fire is identified, evidence is properly limited to construction, condition and operation of the particular locomotive. Morgan v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Evidence that engines on another road and through another section had set fires held inadmissible. Sims v. American Ice Co. [Md.] 71 A 522.

82. Testimony of engineer that he operated engine in prudent and careful manner as it should be handled by an experienced and competent engineer, inadmissible. Bryan Press Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 99. Master mechanic held competent to testify that engines in yard were equipped with best appliances in use for arresting sparks, although he was unable to say that he had made personal examination. Bryan Press Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 99.

83. Dispatcher's train sheet is admissible to identify trains which passed. Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011.

84. On cross-examination, any object whether in evidence or not may be shown to fix size of cinders which would pass through spark arrester in proper repair. Byers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 245.

85. Engineer of 40 years' experience is competent to testify as to best methods of preventing escape of sparks. Morgan v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Whether train was operated with due care held not proper subject for expert testimony, but question for jury on detailed facts. Bryan Press Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 99. Question to expert as to distance spark will carry must embrace conditions existing at time of fire. Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011.

86. Where plaintiff, in attempting to show that fire was caused by engine, by process of exclusion, shows rule of plaintiff company prohibiting smoking on premises and observance of it, witness may be cross-examined as to fire within year reported to witness as having been started by smoking. Hitchner Wall Paper Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 158 F 1011.

Instructions.[See 10 C. L. 1425]—Instructions must be considered as a whole [87] and must not be misleading [88] or on the weight of the evidence,[89] but requested instructions covered by those given may be refused.[90]

Damages.[91]—Where the property destroyed is a part of the realty, the measure of damages is the difference in the value of the land before and after the fire.[92]

(§ 11) K. Actions for injuries.[93] Pleadings.[See 10 C. L. 1426]—While the complaint must allege negligence [94] against each defendant,[95] it may be alleged generally.[96] Although an allegation of wanton negligence has been held sufficient to

87. Instruction faulty as assuming that sparks escaped from engine held nonprejudicial when considered with other instructions. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Dawson Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1110.

88. Instruction as to plaintiff's burden of showing that fire was started by defendant's engine considered and held not misleading as leading jury to compare rival theories. Helverson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., [Iowa] 116 NW 699. Where evidence showed that train emitting large quantities of sparks passed shortly before fire was discovered, instruction that passing of train shortly before discovery of fire raises no presumption that it was cause thereof held misleading, though correct in principle. Birmingham R. L. & P. Co. v. Hinton [Ala.] 48 S 546.

89. Instruction that, if sparks escaped from engine and set fire, company would be prima facie negligent, held not objectionable as on weight. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. McLeod [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 85.

90. Held covered: Instruction on prima facie case from setting of fire. Morgan v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 978. Instructions held not to cover requested instructions as to overcoming presumption of negligence arising from setting of fire by proof of due care in equipping and operating engine. Chenoweth v. Southern Pac. Co. [Or.] 99 P 86.

94. Allegation that plaintiff was conductor on street car crossing defendant's tracks at grade, and that latter without warning, negligently kicked car into street car, etc., held to sufficiently show duty owed to plaintiff. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Hilligoss [Ind.] 86 NE 485. Pleading alleging that defendant negligently ran over plaintiff held not defective in not alleging that plaintiff was where he had a right to be and that engineer discovered him in time to avoid injury, since those facts would bear on question of negligence. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dalton [Ky.] 113 SW 842. Complaint charging that defendant negligently backed train onto spur track, etc., held not to allege facts showing duty or violation. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Bray [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1004. Complaint for injuries caused by horse taking fright at handcar in highway held insufficient in not alleging that car was something calculated to frighten horses. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Vansant [Ala.] 48 S 989. Pleading held insufficient to authorize recovery for failure to give statutory signals at other crossings. Heise v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 371. Allegation that "it was the duty of the railroad company to refrain from wantonly killing any human being on its track, and in order to observe such duty, it would be necessary * * * to blow its whistle or ring its bell" in approaching steam escaping from mine over tracks, held not to show any duty toward deceased who was on track in the steam, it not appearing where on track it was. Lynch v. Great Northern R. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 616. In action for death of cow, "the said killing having been done by reason of the said defendant not having erected and maintained then and there the fences and stock guards on both sides of its said railroad track as aforesaid, as is required by law," held sufficient to admit proof that track was not fenced at time and place where cow was killed. Seaboard Air Line R. v. Harby, 55 Fla. 555, 46 S 590. Complaint held to sufficiently aver negligence in permitting tank of oil to roll off plank while unloading and injuring plaintiff who was on platform to receive express package, to sustain judgment. Robinson v. Paragould S. E. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 67, 111 SW 827. In action for injury caused by leaving stumps above height allowed by law in road constructed in place of part of one taken, that plaintiff alleged that injury was caused by not restoring original road to its former state, or to such condition as not to impair usefulness, instead of by failure to cut stumps, held not to bar recovery, though latter was proximate cause, where petition showed cause of action without such averment. Hall v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 891.

95. Allegations that defendant "was then and there engaged in running locomotives," etc., and that plaintiff's cow "was run against, upon, and over, and killed by said defendant's cars * * * run and operated upon said defendant's right of way and tracks by its agents," etc., held to sufficiently show that defendant was operating train. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Van Natta [Ind. App.] 87 NE 999. Complaint against railroad company and conductor for negligently kicking car backward onto switch without warning, etc., held to state cause of action against both for concurrent negligence, though imperfectly stated. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Adams [Ark.] 112 SW 186.

96. Allegations that, while on bridge, plaintiff was negligently run over by defendant, because of negligence of its servants in operating train, sufficiently alleged negligence to permit recovery for discovered peril. Murray v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Ky.] 115 permit a recovery for simple negligence,[97] wanton or willful negligence must be specifically pleaded.[98] Where the averred facts unqualifiedly show a statutory liability they are not rendered insufficient by particular facts alleged to show a common-law liability.[99] The complaint must allege injury [1] and show that it proximately resulted from the negligence complained of.[2] Where a license is relied upon, it must be pleaded.[3] Plaintiff need not aver the giving of notice of the time, place, etc., of the injury,[4] nor need he negative contributory negligence unless the facts averred impute negligence,[5] in which case he must allege facts excusing his apparent negligence [6] or authorizing recovery notwithstanding such negligence.[7] Where the complaint avers that plaintiff was a "trespasser or a licensee," a compulsory amendment is proper.[8] The answer must plead contributory negligence,[9] and a general denial is insufficient although complaint alleges due care.[10]

Burden of proof. See 10 C. L. 1428—Plaintiff has the burden of proving all the essential elements of his cause of action,[11] including defendant's negligence,[12] but in

SW 821. While particular duty violated must be alleged, it is not necessary to give in detail the particular acts omitted or method of precaution which company ought to have taken. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Holmes Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 46. Complaint merely showing that decedent was killed while on track enveloped in steam from mine, without showing whether he was at street crossing, at place where he had license to be, or at some other place, held insufficient. Lynch v. Great Northern R. Co. [Mont.] 100 P 616.

97. Everett v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486.

98. Complaint averring that "the engineer saw, or by reasonable diligence could have seen, plaintiff in time to stop said train before it ran over plantiff," etc., held to charge simple negligence, as distinguished from wanton negligence. Hobdy v. Manistee Mill Co. [Ala.] 47 S 69.

99. Texas & G. R. Co. v. Pate [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 994.

1. Complaint averring that defendant's servants, by loud and terrifying noises unnecessary to operation of engine, intentionally frightened plaintiff's horse " to such an extent that it died of fright," is not demurrable on ground "that only claim made in said complaint is for alleged fright, unaccompanied by any bodily injury, and therefore states no cause of action." Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton [Ala.] 47 S 1024.

2. Complaint charging that defendant negligently ran one of its locomotives against vehicle in which deceased was riding, that defendant negligently failed to blow whistle, negligently ran at high rate of speed, etc., held to sufficiently allege proximate cause. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Houghland [Ind. App.] 85 NE 369. Complaint alleging that horse became frightened at handcar in highway so that wheel struck car, causing it to make unusual noise, which further frightened horse and caused it to throw plaintiff out, held to sufficiently show that fright of horse and consequent injury was dus to defendant's act in placing car in highway. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Vansant [Ala.] 48 S 389.

3. Allegation, "and which track for many years pedestrians to and from the said town of C. and the said station and depot of defendant at said town of C. had been accustomed to use as a road or footpath by the forbearance and tacit consent of defendant," held to sufficiently aver license. Abnefeld v. Wabash R. Co., 212 Mo. 280, 111 SW 95.

4. Failure to give notice of time, place, etc., of injury under [illegible] St. 1902, § 1130, is defensive matter. Bulkley v. Norwich & W. R. Co. [Conn.] 70 A 1021.

5. Allegations of complaint as to speed of train, obstructed view, and that plaintiff was looking other way at time train approached, held not to show contributory negligence as a matter of law. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999. Petition alleging that, while crossing track at place where soldiers and public crossed at all hours, plaintiff fell and was rendered unconscious, and was struck by train, etc., held not to show contributory negligence. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 906. Complaint alleging that train was invisible until within 693 feet of crossing because of cut, it not appearing but what it was visible during last 693 feet, held to show negligence in going onto crossing ahead of it. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Davis Adm'r, 108 Va. 514, 62 SE 337.

6. Complaint for injury received while drawing water from end of car, due to car being backed into by engine, alleging that it was necessary to go in front of car to draw water, and that plaintiff did not know or have any reason to believe that train was near, etc., held to negative contributory negligence. Louisiana & T. Lumber Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 950.

7. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Davis' Adm'r, 108 Va. 514, 62 SE 337. Complaint averring that defendant discovered decedent's peril and could have avoided collision had it exercised ordinary care, which it failed to do, held to state cause of action, although it showed negligence on plaintiff's part. Id.

8. Since duty is different. Gainesville & Gulf R. Co. v. Peck, 55 Fla. 402, 46 S 1019.

9. Answer alleging that injury was caused solely by plaintiff's negligence, and that plaintiff, while walking in safe position between tracks, suddenly stepped over onto end of ties in front of engine, held to sufficiently allege contributory negligence. Shrader v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 788.

10. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Peck [Kan.] 100 P 54.

11. Evidence that train passed shortly before daylight without sounding crossing signals, and that bull was shortly thereafter found at crossing all mangled, held sufficient many states a presumption [13] of negligence in all the respects alleged [14] arises from proof of injury by a train,[15] especially where defendant is also shown to have violated a statutory duty.[16] Where defendant owns the road and the rolling stock, it will be presumed that it was operating the particular train causing the injury.[17] While the plaintiff has the burden of showing freedom from contributory negligence in a few states,[18] a presumption of due care exists in most of the states [19] which casts the burden onto the defendant,[20] who must also show that it contributed proximately to the injury.[21] Wherever the burden lies, the evidence of the other party may be to authorize finding that he was struck by train, and because of failure to give signals. Barbee v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 541. General verdict for plaintiff is not overcome by special findings not showing that the rate of speed and that warning might have been given in time to have enabled plaintiff to avoid injury, since it will not be inferred as against general verdict that conditions were such that signals could have been heard. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999. Burden is on plaintiff to prove that animal was killed on track, but circumstantial evidence is sufficient. Nelson v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1118. Evidence that there were hog tracks on track, blood on ties, and appearance that something had rolled down embankment, and hog track from base of embankment to spot where hog was found dead, with body badly cut and bruised, held to sustain finding that it was killed by train. Id. Plaintiff, relying on discovered peril, has burden of showing that peril was discovered in time to avoid injury. Caldwell v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 488.

12. Notwithstanding Stock Act, § 5, creating a presumption of negligence from killing, plaintiff has burden of showing negligence. Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781. Burden rests on plaintiff to show that statutory signal was not given. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026; McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33. Evidence held to show that lumber company sued and railroad company hauling its lumber, which was at fault, were distinct corporations. Stephens v. Louisiana Long Leaf Lumber Co., 122 La. 547, 47 S 887.

13. Gen. St. § 3148, making company liable for injury to persons from running of train unless company makes it affirmatively appear that their agents used due care, creates a presumption against company, but it does not outweigh proofs. Jones v. Jacksonville Elec. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 1. Evidence that horse suddenly ran onto track immediately in front of engine, from behind box cars, held to overcome presumption of negligence arising from killing. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. O'Hare [Ark.] 115 SW 942. Presumption of negligence arising under Code 1906, § 1985, from killing of stock, aided by physical facts, held to make question for jury, notwithstanding evidence of defendant of due care. O'Kelly v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 660.

14. Ellenberg v. Southern R. Co. [Ga. App.] 63 SE 240. Fact that plaintiff's own evidence shows that defendant was not negligent in one of the alleged respects does not authorize nonsuit. Id.

15. Killing of cattle. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Grigsby [Ky.] 115 SW 237. Code 1906, § 1985, making killing by train prima facie evidence of negligence, being identical with Code 1902, § 1808, except that it is extended to employes, is applicable, though accident occurred prior to passage thereof, where decedent was not an employe of defendant but of another road. Combs v. Mobile & O. R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 168. Mere killing of stock is insufficient to establish negligence. Starke v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 1066. Evidence that fresh tracks could be traced over cattle guard, down track between rails, to point where blood and hair were found on track, and that body of cow was found a few feet beyond, held sufficient to show that she was struck by engine. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Van Natta [Ind. App.] 87 NE 999.

16. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 1102 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 938), making company liable for damage at crossing where signals are not given, but allowing company to show that failure to give signal was not proximate cause, proof of killing, together with evidence tending to show failure to give signals, makes prima facie case (McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33), and burden rests on defendant to show that such negligence was not proximate cause (Id.).

17. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 97 P 520.

18. Shum's Adm'x v. Rutland R. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 945. Plaintiff must prove decedent's freedom from negligence. Popke v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 1098; White v. New York, etc., R. Co., 200 Mass. 441, 86 NE 923; O'Brien v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 129 App. Div. 288, 113 NYS 329.

19. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hayes [Kan.] 99 P 1131. Presumption that deceased stopped, looked and listened is overcome by testimony of witness who saw accident. Wade v. Western Maryland R. Co., 220 Pa. 578, 69 A 1112. No presumption of due care, though party injured is killed. Shum's Adm'x v. Rutland R. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 945.

20. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 453. Instruction held erroneous as requiring plaintiff to prove due care. Huber v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 984. Since burden of proving contributory negligence rests on defendant, inferences to be drawn from complaint must be drawn in plaintiff's favor. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999.

21. Where defendant relies upon contributory negligence of plaintiff in cutting fence, it has burden of showing that cattle entered at such place, especially where fence was insufficient at other nearby points to turn cattle. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Peeples [Fla.] 47 S 392.

utilized.[22] While negative evidence may be sufficient to establish an issue in some cases,[23] the testimony of one who was not looking that he did not notice a headlight has but little probative force.[24]

Evidence. See 10 C. L. 1430—There must be no material variance between the allegations and the proof,[25] and plaintiff must recover upon the particular negligence averred.[26] Likewise, where defendant avers specific acts of contributory negligence, he is confined thereto.[27] The general rules as to admissibility of evidence apply.[28] Positive evidence is of greater value than negative as to the giving of signals.[29]

22. McGee v. Wabash R. Co., 214 Mo. 530, 114 SW 33.

23. Negative evidence as to giving signals held sufficient to sustain verdict. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown [Ky.] 113 SW 465. Whether positive testimony as to signals is stronger than negative depends upon all circumstances, as person's opportunity to hear, whether his attention was directed toward same, etc. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stepp [C. C. A.] 164 F 785.

24. Strickland v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 161.

25. Variance between allegation of negligence in keeping lookout and proof of insufficient headlight. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Latham [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 890. Complaint alleging that defendant approached crossing at dangerous speed, without signals, held not supported by evidence of killing at place not a crossing by train going 7 or 8 miles per hour. Motz v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 64 SE 79.

26. Where negligence alleged is maintenance of ditch, recovery cannot be had on absence of lights. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Elrod [Kan] 98 P 215. Where recital of fact shows that plaintiff relies upon failure to give statutory signal required by Civ. Code 1895, § 2222, providing for signals at public crossings, court properly instructed that recovery could not be had if road was not a public one. McCoy v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 297. Where issues were negligence of engineer in discovering child, negligence in stopping train, and negligence of mother, evidence that if whistle had been blown mother could have gotten child off track held inadmissible. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Complaint construed, and held that negligent speed, knowing that sheep were on track, was gist of action, and not violation of speed ordinance. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673. Where negligence alleged is sudden stopping of engine, causing violent jerk, recovery cannot be had on proof of negligence in running or switching train. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086.

27. Where, in action for injuries received by jumping from trestle to avoid apparent collision, defendant pleaded specific acts or omissions as contributory negligence, requested instruction on negligence in not taking another route or going under bridge properly refused where not one of them. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199.

28. Questions: Did you hear the whistle blow; did you hear the bell ring; and did you see a headlight, held not leading. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439.

Relevancy and materiality admissible; Schedule of train, as bearing on speed. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Evidence that other stock had passed over cattle guard in question, as bearing on its sufficiency. O'Mara v. Newton & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 377. Where the jury is permitted to view premises, evidence is admissible to show change since accident. Woodworth v. Detroit United R. Co., 153 Mich. 108, 15 Det. Leg. N. 374, 116 NW 549. Evidence that large numbers of sheep were driven along road at certain time of year, as bearing upon duty required of trainmen at such time. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673. Evidence of arrangement of camp cars in train held admissible in action for negligent injury to cook, employe making up train knowing of their character. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086. Evidence that it was custom of cook in camp cars to stand up and continue work while train was in motion held admissible on negligence in standing up and working while train was moving at time of accident. Id. Passenger may testify that she felt no jar, to rebut testimony of engineer that he applied air brakes and suddenly stopped train. Potter v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 593. In action for injury occurring at 5:30 p. m. by car door leaving track, condition of door next morning, it appearing that it was old and rickety and lug was broken. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hummel [C. C. A.] 167 F 89. Where pleadings set out peculiarities of crossing rendering it especially dangerous, evidence that when train backed over same there was no flagman, no warnings, no light, and that engineer could not see from his cab. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Holmes Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 46. Special instances of blockading crossing may be considered in determining whether company habitually blockaded crossing. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 758. Evidence of statutory signals at other nearby crossings held admissible on plaintiff's negligence, where such signals were or could have been heard by him. Heise v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 371. Evidence that guard is in general use, and evidence that cattle pass over it, on issue of sufficiency. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Russell, 33 Ky. L. R. 447, 110 SW 317. Where evidence was conflicting as to whether car at which horse took fright was in street or at crossing, and time at which it was seen varied, evidence that car had been moved. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Randall [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 180. Evidence that switch yard, side tracks and main line were frequently used at all times of day by people living in vicinity, to show constant use by public. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. In action for injuries received while passing between cars blocking crossing, evidence that plaintiff and another had passed between cars during the morning as bearing on contributory negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 758. Where negligence charged was failure to give signals, plaintiff may show number and character of crossings, etc. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 938. Evidence as to position of engine when backing onto track, as explaining why plaintiff did not see same when he looked. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808. In action for death of conductor on street car, killed by collision at crossing, contract between companies relieving railroad of duty to give warnings, etc., as bearing on negligence in not doing so. Cox v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 128 App. Div. 363, 112 NYS 443. Evidence of travel, as imposing higher duty, though party killed was trespasser. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91. Where plaintiff contends that train could have been stopped between time warning whistle was sounded and child was struck, evidence as to distance between two places by one whoss attention was attracted by whistle and who noted position of engine. Harrison v. Southern R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 408. Evidence of witnesses and photographs as to use of track as a pathway by public and as to defendant's knowledge thereof, as bearing upon question whether one using same was trespasser or a licensee, although there is evidence that plaintiff had left track to pick berries, which would render him a trespasser. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126. Evidence of general use of water car and manner of drawing water therefrom, as bearing on obligation of defendant to use due care. Louisiana & T. Lumber Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 950. Where defendant's evidence shows uniform speed, witness may testify as to speed when passing him to prove speed at place of accident. King v. Wabash R. Co., 211 Mo. 1, 109 SW 671. Evidence that plaintiff thought that defendant intended that he should use private crossing to reach car that he was unloading, on issue of implied invitation to use same. Cowans v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 403. Evidence of frequency of travel on track at point of accident, to fix knowledge of conditions on servants of defendant. Southern R. Co. v. Forrister [Ala.] 48 S 69.

Inadmissible: Evidence of amount of travel at other points to show license to be at place of injury. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Berry, 33 Ky. L. R. 850, 111 SW 370. Evidence of interlooking systems at other grade crossings and effect thereof, where it appears that they were impracticable at point of collision because of switching. Cox v. Delaware & H. R. Co., 128 App. Div. 363, 112 NYS 443. Where defect in engine is not relied upon as negligence contributing to collision, evidence thereof is inadmissible. Gorman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 194 N. Y. 488, 87 NE 682. Evidence of intoxication on other days, to show condition at time of injury. Starett v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 309, 110 SW 282. Evidence as to number of coaches in daily train of same number and schedule as that which struck intestate, upon question of number on the occasion, other evidence being attainable. Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 S 472. Where driver of police patrol was injured at place which was not a public crossing, evidence that he had never been told that he did not have a right to use same, or that other streets were blocked, held inadmissible to show right to use. Reinhardt v. Chicago Junction R. Co., 235 Ill. 576, 85 NE 605. Where petition pleaded violation of speed ordinance, but did not rely thereon as cause of the accident, ordinance is inadmissible. Turner v. St. Louis & H. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1026. Evidence that those on handcar were told by foreman to make quick trip is inadmissible, as showing excessive speed. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Berry, 33 Ky. L. R. 850, 111 SW 370. Where competency of engineer was not in issue, evidence bearing thereon held properly refused. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787.

Res Gestae. Admissible: Statement made by engineer. on coming back to body of child, a couple of minutes after accident. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91. Statement of operator of lever car made to plaintiff as he was recovering consciousness. Douglass v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15. Statements made by plaintiff to first person to reach him held res gestae, although 10 or 12 minutes had elapsed, he having been suffering great pain in meantime. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126.

Conclusion of Witness. Admissible: Statement of witness as to how far from crossing cow approaching same could be seen. Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Boyd [Colo.] 96 P 781. Without qualifying as experts, witnesses may testify that "train ran as fast as it could to stay on the tracks," and "from 50 to 60 miles per hour." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Statement, in answer to question whether engineer could have had unobstructed view from certain point, that witness could stand there flat footed and see, and he did not know why engineer could not have seen from cab. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Flinn [Ark.] 115 SW 142. Testimony of person having knowledge of facts that tracks at point of injury were in street. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Morin [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 666. One not expert may give opinion as to speed of train. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808; Potter v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 693. One who has ridden on trains and compared speed thereof may testify how fast train on which he was riding was going, fact that he had never timed train only going to weight of testimony. Tinkle v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 212 Mo. 445, 110 SW 1086.

Inadmissible: Testimony as to when collision occurred by one hearing crash while sitting at his desk in office 180 feet away, with windows closed, on damp, foggy night. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439.

Expert testimony: One who had been engineer for 2 or 3 years 20 years before, but who had observed operation of trains since, may give opinion as to distance within which train can be stopped. Southern R. Co. v. Forrister [Ala.] 48 S 69. Witness who has lived near railroad all her life and who testifies that she knows the "blows of an engine" may testify as to meaning of two blasts. Id. One who had served 2 years as fireman and 3 years as engineer on freight trains, and who had observed stopping of passenger trains, held competent as expert to testify as to time and space required to stop passenger train. Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 S 472. Experienced railroad man may testify from sound whether effort was being made to stop train. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dysart [Ark.] 116 SW 224. Distance within which engine can be stopped held proper subject of expert testimony. Zelinka v. Union Stockyards Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 103. In action for killing by train, testimony of experienced railroad man, who had made observations, that no obstructions prevented engineer from seeing decedent, admissible. Combs v. Mobile & O. R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 168.

Prior and subsequent conditions: In action for injuries caused by door of car leaving track, condition of track next morning, the broken lug appearing to be of old standing, held admissible. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hummel [C. C. A.] 167 F 89. Where air brakes can only be applied by turning certain angle cocks, condition thereof immediately after collision is admissible on issue where air was turned on. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dysart [Ark.] 116 SW 224.

Admissions and statements of parties: Where defendant's claim agent has testified to statements made by plaintiff to him, plaintiff may testify as to what was said and the circumstances under which statements were made, though self-serving. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126. In action against railroad company and street railway company, admission in answer of latter is admissible, although plaintiff subsequently admitted that no blame attached to it. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. McDonald, 33 Ky. L. R. 762, 111 SW 289. Where defendant gives evidence of statements made by decedent as to manner of accident, plaintiff may show that he did not say the words ascribed to him, but other and distinct accounts of accident cannot be shown. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Onan's Adm'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 462, 110 SW 380. Held for jury whether admission of appellee that she saw train was made at time when she was sufficiently conscious to know what she was saying. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Joshlin, 33 Ky. L. R. 513, 110 SW 382.

Experiments. Admissible: Evidence of experiments made at place of accident at same time of day and under similar atmospheric conditions as to distance at which child could be seen. Harrison v. Southern R. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 408. Subsequent experiments made at same time of day as to how far child could be seen on track, as bearing on negligence in not sooner discovering child injured. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Evidence of experiments as to how far child lying on track could be seen has but little weight in determining whether engineer saw child before he testified that he saw it, since experimenter had object specially in mind. Palmer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 466, 98 P 689. Experiments as to how far red light could be seen, it appearing that there was a red light on truck stalled on crossing when struck, held inadmissible. Green v. Long Island R. Co., 115 NYS 590.

Customs and habits: General habits and custom of decedent as bearing on negligence, inadmissible. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 107 Md. 642, 69 A 439. Evidence of custom to stop train outside of building and to give warning of approach, admissible as bearing on assumption of risk of injury by one whose work took him between cars within building in case stop was not made and no signals given. Shall v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 152 Mich. 463, 15 Det. Leg. N. 295, 116 NW 432.

Documents: Duly authenticated ordinances requiring flagmen or gates are admissible. Nichols v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Colo.] 98 P 808.

29. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, 135 Ill. App. 380; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Sack, 136 Ill. App. 425.

30. In action for death of plaintiff's wife who was struck by train while standing beside track, instructions as to discovered peril and duty of those in charge of train held to properly state law applicable. Everett v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 214 Mo. 54, 112 SW 486. Instruction authorizing recovery if defendant failed to give "timely and sufficient warning" on approaching crossing held not erroneous in using words "timely" and "sufficient," as fixing no standard. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Where from time plaintiff was first seen it was apparent that he was not aware of approaching train and was on a trestle and hence could not suddenly get out of danger, instruction basing assumption that he would discover train and get out of danger upon giving of timely signal held more appropriate than his discovering the same in exercise of due caution. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199. Where, in action for injuries received by licensee, caused by catching foot as he was leaving track, and falling and being run into, no issue as to negligent speed was submitted, charge not to consider any evidence relative to whether or not defendant's servants in charge of train were negligent in running at speed it was moving held properly refused, where evidence shows that public was licensed to use track. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126.

31. Instruction on discovered peril that if engineer saw decedent on track and realized that they were in peril and "could not, or probably would not, leave the track," etc., held not objectionable, the quoted clause being but an explanation of what court meant by "peril." Parham v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 154. Instruction held erroneous is requiring that plaintiff be found to have been negligent both in crossing between cars at crossing and in the manner of so doing before verdict for defendant could be returned. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 758. Where instruction that plaintiff as licensee assumed risks incident to proper and natural use of tracks, etc., had reference solely to operation of train through escaping steam, its refusal was not a ground of complaint by defendant where court assumed that company had right to so operate. Tarashonsky v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1074. Where complaint in action for killing horse alleged that lar ones where necessary to a clear understanding,[32] but should not submit issues not supported by the pleadings [33] and the evidence.[34] They should be considered as a cattle guard and fence connecting therewith had been removed, use of term "wing fence" in describing fence in instructions held not a misstatement of issues. Bacus v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 751. Where there was no issue as to engineer seeing plaintiff in time to stop, but only question was as to whether he was walking on track or suddenly stepped thereon ahead of engine, and defendant's theory was fully set out, no error to charge on theory that he was walking between rails. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Cockrill [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1092. Where there was some evidence that plaintiff was intoxicated, but none that he was lying on track or asleep, instruction denying recovery if he was drunk and lying on track asleep held favorable to defendant Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 958. Instructions held to properly submit issues as to license of public to use road as pathway, plaintiff stumbling as he was leaving track and rendered unconscious, and whether he was rendered a trespasser by leaving track to pick berries, etc. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1126. Where there is no evidence that accident occurred in switchyards, held not error to charge that if defendant failed to give statutory crossing signals it was liable, though such statute did not apply to operations in switchyards. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Hardy [Ga.] 62 SE 71. Instruction reciting conditions at crossings showing unusual dangers, and requiring company to use commensurate care, held not open to objection of leaving jury to impose fanciful requirements. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Munsell's Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 50.

32. Where negligence relied on was failure to look in direction from which train would not ordinarily be expected, held error to refuse instruction specifically relating thereto, though court gave general instructions as to duty. Fowler v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 234 Ill. 619, 85 NE 298. Where liability is based solely upon willful and wanton negligence, such issue should be presented unconfused with other issues. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Moore [Ga. App.] 63 SE 642. Duties of traveler and of company at crossings should be separately charged. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. In action for injuries to child catching onto passing car, question whether he was of sufficient capacity to appreciate danger should be so submitted as to admit of separate consideration from general question of contributory negligence. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939.

33. Not supported: Instruction submitting gross or willful negligence. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Baker [Okl.] 95 P 433. Where, in action for injuries to trespassing child, liability was predicated upon child's incapacity to appreciate danger, charge on concurrent negligence is improper. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 939. Where, in action for injuries received by jumping from trestle to avoid collision, assumed risk was not pleaded, requested instruction thereon held properly refused. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Byrd [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 199.

Authorized: General charge on negligence in handling train. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 877. Complaint alleging generally that defendant negligently ran engine against plaintiff held to authorize instruction on discovered peril. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193. Allegation that train approached crossing without sounding whistle or bell until within 50 feet of crossing held to warrant instruction on statutory duty to give signals 80 rods from crossing. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Garber [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 227. Instruction to find for defendant if plaintiff at time of accident was lying on track "and" asleep, instead of in disjunctive, held responsive to defendant's pleading. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 958.

34. Warranted: Evidence that blasts of whistle were in response to signals of conductor, and not to flagging signal, held to warrant instruction that if flagman knew, or by the exercise of ordinary care ought to have known, that blasts were not in response to his signals, he was not justified in discontinuing flagging. Walton v. Miller's Adm'r [Va.] 63 SE 458. Where there is evidence tending to show that deceased suddenly stepped back onto crossing in front of train after safely passing over, instruction thereon should be given, notwithstanding other evidence tends to show that he was on crossing all the time. Matz v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 117 SW 584. Evidence that person on track was in plain sight held to warrant instruction on discovered peril. Christiansen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 387. Instruction on acts under emergency held warranted where it appeared that bicycle rider, through negligence of company, had no notice of approaching train until he was almost on track. Antonian v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 877. Instruction of extra precaution due to dangerous character of crossing, evidence showing that view was cut off, etc. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Munsell's Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 50. Evidence as to defective latch in gate, and of discovery of cattle in time to avoid injury, held to require submission of issues of defect in fence and discovered peril. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Corn [Tex.] 114 SW 103. Although it was undisputed that if plaintiff was negligent his negligence was proximate cause of injury, instruction that if he was negligent, and his negligence proximately contributed to injury, to find for defendant, held negative and not to authorize finding for plaintiff. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Poteet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 883. Evidence that mules became frightened at bridge and stopped on track and were struck by train held to authorize instruction on liability where negligence concurred with accidental cause. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. Instruction that company was liable unless either fireman, brakeman or engineer kept lookout, was not objectionable as confining duty to them, it appearing that they were only employes in charge of train. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Flinn [Ark.] 115 SW 142.

Not supported: Held error to qualify in-

struction on contributory negligence by instruction on discovered peril where there was no evidence to sustain it. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Veach's Adm'r [Ky.] 112 SW 869. Instruction in action for death of employe through negligent manipulation of signals by signalman of another road, on decedent's assumption of risk if he had observed manipulation for 18 months. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Gossett [Ind.] 87 NE 723. Where it is undisputed that plaintiff was not aware of engine approaching on side track near which he was walking and that fireman saw him walking there, instruction that, if plaintiff unnecessarily moved from safe place to place of danger and engineer did not see him, company was not liable, held properly refused. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193. Where undisputed evidence showed that decedent came onto track too close to train to permit stopping thereof, instruction on "discovered peril." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Onan's Adm'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 462, 110 SW 380; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Joshlin, 33 Ky. L. R. 513, 110 SW 382. Where undisputed evidence shows that deceased jumped from freight train at crossing and onto main track immediately in front of rapidly approaching passenger train, instruction submitting issue of negligence in not stopping held unsupported. Huddleston v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 381. Where evidence shows that crossing was ordinary country crossing, held error to instruct on duty to exercise extra precaution if crossing was unueually dangerous. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Onan's Adm'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 462, 110 SW 380. Action of train under application of brakes is not such matter of knowledge as to authorize submission of question of whether train could have been stopped after discovery of danger without evidence upon issue. Stearns v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 71 A 21. Held improper to submit issue whether it appeared that plaintiff would see or hear train in time to avoid injury where own evidence showed that he was walking in place of safety until he stepped onto track just ahead of engine. Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Russell [Ark.] 113 SW 1021. Where pleadings and evidence raised issue as to killing of one of five cattle sued for, held error to charge that, if plaintiff was entitled to recover at all, he could recover for five. Chesapeake & A. R. Co. v. Grigsby [Ky.] 115 SW 237. Where evidence showed that smoke had cleared away before decedent started to cross tracks, instruction on duty to wait until smoke clears away held properly refused. Pulcino v. Long Island R. Co., 125 App. Div. 629, 109 NYS 1076. Where plaintiff was not misled as to direction in which engine was going because light was left on front of back engine, instruction thereon was erroneous. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Ark.] 114 SW 228. Where 11 year old boy charged by his mother with care of child injured was shown to have been bright and obedient and had previously taken care of the child in satisfactory manner, negligence of mother was not in issue. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787.

35. Instruction authorizing recovery if defendant failed to give timely warning of approach held not erroneous as ignoring contributory negligence where it was fully covered by another instruction. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Instruction as to degree of care held not erroneous when all instructions are considered. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Idaho] 99 P 91. Statement in charge that if member of crew had been stationed at crossing to warn people accident might not have happened held not reversible error, where court clearly instructed as to duty of jury and where evidence was such as to warrant finding of negligence in not so placing man. Delaware & H. Co. v. Larnard [C. C. A.] 161 F 520. Instruction that it wae defendant's duty to cause bell to be rung and not to run at greater speed than seven miles per hour held sufficient, in view of other instructions, without expressly charging that violation of duty was negligence. Huber v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 984. Where instruction charged statutory duty as to signals and that that was full measure of duty, another instruction held not to require warning reasonably sufficient in view of plaintiff's particular situation. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Ind. App.] 87 NE 40.

36. Instruction that watchhouse near track did not excuse plaintiff from failure to observe approaching train and instruction that, in determining whether he exercised due care, jury might consider whether evidence showed that watchhouse prevented him from seeing train, held consistent. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999. Instruction on discovered peril and liability thereunder considered and held not in conflict with instruction on duty of decedent to look and listen. Potter v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 593.

37. Improper to limit jury to consideration of what deceased was doing at "instant" of accident. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Collision, 134 Ill. App. 4433. Instruction to find for plaintiff on proof of defendant's negligence held erroneous for failure to require finding of care by plaintiff. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gill, 132 Ill. App. 310. Instruction implying that defendant must both blow whistle and ring bell at crossing, erroneous. Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis R. Co. v. Zetsche, 135 Ill. App. 622. Instruction literally requiring decedent to have looked in both directione at same time held erroneous. Potter v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 593.

Misleading: Instructions on duty of company where people frequently use tracks, as tending to cause them to disregard contributory negligence. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. Instruction predicating contributory negligence solely on fact that child 7 years old had sufficient mental capacity to appreciate danger, and it was proper to couple facts therewith. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Poteet [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 883. Where pedestrian could have seen track after passing watchhouse and for 9 feet before entering onto track, instruction that, in determining negligence, jury could consider whether watchhouse obstructed view, as involving idea that watchhouse might be an excuse. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Lynn [Ind.] 85 NE 999. Instruction enumerating certain things which could be considered on contributory negligence, as structions should not be upon the weight of the evidence,[39] argumentative,[40] invade the province of the jury,[41] or assume disputed facts,[42] nor give undue prominence to particular evidence [43] or issues.[44] While issues must not be ignored,[45] requested instructions substantially covered by others given may be refused.[46] tending to limit to certain kinds of evidence. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. O'Conner [Ind.] 85 NE 969. Instruction that, if defendant was willfully negligent, recovery could be had despite plaintiff's negligence, as leading jury to believe that willful omission to give crossing signals was sufficient. Southern R. Co. v. Grizzle [Ga.] 62 SE 177.

Not misleading: Instruction on reasonable care, when construed with other instructions, held not to mislead jurors to allow recovery on negligence not pleaded. Smith v. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 673. Instruction requiring defendant to prove contributory negligence by greater weight "of all the evidence in the case," instead of on the issue. Douglass v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15. Instruction that if jury find that defendant was negligent, but also find that plaintiff was negligent, to find for defendant, as authorizing verdict for defendant only in event both were negligent. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 193. Instruction of "discovered peril," as leading jury to understand that plaintiff could recover for negligence in maintaining lookout, notwithstanding contributory negligence. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Where plaintiff's evidence added nothing to defendant's instruction that burden rested on defendant to prove contributory negligence, as causing jury to ignore effect of plaintiff's evidence. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 906. Instruction on negligence in failing to discover child held not to authorize recovery by parents, notwithstanding their negligence. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Instruction on "last clear chance" doctrine. Zelenka v. Union Stockyards Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 103. Instruction on right of engineer to assume that right of way of train would be respected held not, when considered with following statement, to excuse him from duty of using every means at hand to avoid injury after discovering peril. Parham v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 154. Instruction that defendant has burden of showing contributory negligence by preponderance of whole evidence, unless shown by plaintiff's evidence. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. Ratcliffe [Ark.] 115 SW 396. Where only issue is whether plaintiff stepped from place of safety to place of danger too close to train to enable trainmen to stop, instructions on duty where public use tracks held not misleading. Boulden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 936. Instruction that defendant was not liable for injury caused by horse taking fright at statutory signal unless trainmen knew, as reasonable men, that by so doing injury would necessarily and proximately result, as leading jury to understand that they should have seen horse on nearby highway. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Coker [Ark.] 116 SW 216. Instruction that culpable negligence of plaintiff will defeat recovery, but that nature of primary wrong has much to do with the judgment whether or not the contributing fault was of a negative character and was of itself caused by primary wrong. Douglas v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15.

38. Instruction as to contributory negligence held argumentative. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Collison, 134 Ill. App. 443.

39. On weight: Instruction permitting recovery upon finding that defendant omitted to blow whistle, ring bell, or slack or stop train, where evidence showed that engineer let off steam to scare horse from track. St. Louis, B. & M. R. Co. v. Droddy [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 902.

Not on weight: Instruction on "sudden peril." Douglass v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15. Instruction that company must use ordinary care to avoid injury to persons on track where public commonly resort. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 690.

40. Argumentative: Instruction telling what jury should consider in determining whether defendant exercised due care towards plaintiff, who was walking on tracks used by public as pathway. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 958. Instruction on burden of proving negligence and that negligence could not be inferred from injury. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Garth [Ala.] 46 S 583.

41. Erroneous: Instruction that fact that plaintiff is deprived of pleasure and satisfaction of life "which only those having sound body and full use of all their members may enjoy" might be considered. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. O'Connor [Ind.] 85 NE 969. Instruction on statute requiring company to keep lookout, that if object was visible and yet not seen jury would be well warranted in finding that person was not on the lookout, or was not vigilent. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Hardy [Ga.] 62 SE 71. That if decedent went upon crossing in front of approaching train in belief that he could cross before it reached him, but he miscalculated speed of train, etc., he was negligent. Southern R. Co. v. Grizzle [Ga.] 62 SE 177. Where question whether public was licensed to use particular way was for jury, instruction that plaintiff was a trespasser was properly refused, though it properly called attention to evidence bearing on the issue. Tarashonsky v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1074.

42. Where there is no question but that plaintiff's proximity to track was proximate cause of injury by collision, held not error to instruct to find for defendant if jury found plaintiff negligent in so walking. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wall [Tex.] 116 SW 1140. Instruction following language of statute as to duty to give signal held not to assume that defendant omitted to give same. Perkins v. Wabash R. Co., 233 Ill. 458, 84 NE 677.

43. In action for assault by baggage master in removing plaintiff from premises, instruction to find for defendant if baggageman used no more force than was necessary held not bad as giving undue prominence to statement of baggageman, erroneously ad-

Double damages and attorney's fees See 10 C. L. 1438 are allowed in some statutory actions [47] and where defendant is grossly or willfully negligent.[48]

§ 12. Railroad corporations.[49]—See 10 C. L. 1488—In New York a certificate of public convenience and necessity must be procured,[50] which is issuable only upon the filing of an affidavit [51] showing that ten per cent of the minimum capital stock has mitted that he did not use more force than was necessary. Hubbard v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 1337, 108 SW 331.

44. Instruction exacting care commensurate with extra dangerous character of crossing held not objectionable as singling out one charge of negligence. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Munsell's Adm'r [Va.] 64 SE 50.

45. Instruction on contributory negligence held to ignore discovered peril. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 758. Instruction directing verdict for defendant if company exercised due care after discovering child held properly refused as ignoring negligence in not sooner discovering child. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Olds [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 787. Instruction submitting issue of express invitation to use private crossing and closing, "but if you do not so find and believe from the evidence, your verdict should be for defendant," held erroneous as ignoring implied invitation. Cowans v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 403. Instruction to find for plaintiff unless jury find for defendant under instructions to be given, one of which was contributory negligence, instruction is not objectionable as ignoring contributory negligence. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Summers [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 211. Where company claims that warning was given in particular way, court may properly instruct that, if signals were not so given, defendant was negligent. Brown v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 649, 113 NYS 1090.

46. Covered: Instruction as to bearing of intoxication on contributory negligence. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Ryan [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 906. Instruction on burden of proof. Ft. Worth & R. C. R. Co. v. Eddleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 425. Instruction predicated on assumed risk held covered by instruction that if plaintiff attempted to draw water from end of car at time and place dangerous to her and she knew the fact, or it was open and obvious, she assumed the risk. Louisiana & T. Lumber Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 950. Instruction that one approaching crossing should look and listen at such distance as to avoid injury, etc., held to cover requested instruction that he should look so near crossing as to enable him to cross in safety before train in view, going at usual speed, would reach crossing. Erie R. Co. v. Weinstein [C. C. A.] 166 F 271.

47. Complaint for injuries to horse which had passed over defective cattle guards onto right of way and was frightened into fence by approaching hand car construed as common-law action and not under Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 945) §§ 1105, 1106, though attorney fees and double damage was asked. Shell v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 132 Mo. App. 528, 112 SW 39.

48. Punitive damages held properly submitted to jury where injury was caused by team becoming frightened at steam escaping from engine backing towards crossing without giving statutory signals though engine stopped before reaching crossing. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Armstrong [Miss.] 47 S 427. It is gross negligence authorizing punitive damages where, through reckless inattention of gateman, gates are left up while train is approaching from direction where view is obstructed. Louisville v. N. R. Co. v. Roth [Ky.] 114 SW 264.

50. Where road was of public necessity to territory along part of way but would not be a paying proposition unless given certain terminal connections, fact that it paralleled another road in making the terminal connection is no ground for refusal of certificate. People v. Railroad Com'rs, 126 App. Div. 492, 110 NYS 862. Advantage of competition to coal shippers held to authorize issuance of certificate, especially where existing road could not promptly handle all coal offered. Id. Held not policy in placing rates and facilities of transportation under state and interstate commissions to do away entirely with competition and to compel existing roads to increase facilities. Id. Certificate of public necessity held wrongfully issued to locate route along river front where there was no present need therefore and it would greatly interfere with proposed marine improvements by federal government. People v. Railroad Com'rs, 128 App. Div. 814, 114 NYS 122. Evidence of conditions and need of road to effect exchange of business between different routes held to warrant issuance of certificate of convenience and necessity. In re Buffalo Frontier Terminal R. Co., 131 App. Div. 503, 115 NYS 483. Where certificate of convenience was issued in 1903 but in 1906 only little progress had been made in construction and application was pending to revoke charter, such delay was sufficient to justify commissioners in ignoring its claim to protection against granting certificate to parallel line. People v. Aldridge, 126 App. Div. 484, 110 NYS 820. Determination of commissioners on application for certificate of public convenience that it should not occupy certain avenue is not res judicata on question whether public convenience required another company to occupy it. Id. Laws 1897, p. 794, c. 754, § 60, construed that while commissions could consider number of grade crossings in determining public convenience, it was not necessary to determine manner of crossing before issuing certificate. People v. Railroad Com'rs, 126 App. Div. 492, 110 NYS 862.

51. Where curative affidavit is filed, corporation must be treated as defecto corporation so that franchise and right of way could be sold in receivership. In re New York, W. & B. R. Co., 193 NYS 72, 85 NE 1014. Laws 1903, p. 1424, c. 627, authorizbeen subscribed.[52] While the commission has power to issue a certificate as to a part of the route where a public necessity is only shown therefore, it must issue certificate as to whole route where found to be of public convenience.[53] The determination of the commission is subject to review by the supreme court,[54] and where new conditions have arisen [55] the matter may be remanded for a rehearing.[56] In many states the road must be completed within a certain time under pain of forefeiture,[57] but time during which it was in the hands of a receiver should be deducted.[58] While the repeal of the General Railroad Law of New York did not affect the corporate existence of companies organized thereunder,[59] a company may become extinct through a sale of all of its property.[60] The powers of a railroad corporation and its officers depends upon the constitution [61] and general statutes of the state in which it is incorporated,[62] and the terms of its charter.[63] A change in capital stock can usually ing filing of curative affidavit where no affidavit was attached to certificate of incorporation showing that required amount of capital stock had been paid in, etc., held designed to place persons who had organized company in good faith in as good position as if affidavit had been filed. 60. Sale under order to sell "all the rights of said company legal or equitable, in and to its roadbed and right of way, and all its real estate, tracks, and fixtures," held not as a matter of law to dispose of all of interest of stockholders so that company ceased to exist. In re New York, W. & B. R. Co., 193 N. Y. 72, 85 NE 1014.

61. Const. Mo. art. 12, §§ 8, 10, and Rev. St. Mo. 1899, §§ 962, 1050, construed and held that where railroad has issued preferred stock with consent of all stockholders, it may be increased with consent of majority. Pollitz v. Wabash R. Co., 167 F 145. Notwithstanding Const. art. 12, §§ 14, 16, 22, prohibiting a railroad corporation from consolidating with parallel competing line, and federal anti-trust act, declaring illegal every combination in restraint of interstate commerce two parallel and competing lines may subscribe to stock of newly created company to build line into new territory. State v. Skamania Super. Ct. [Wash.] 98 P 739. Where company to meet demand of business and law was making extensive repairs and improvements which involved it in litigation with debenture bondholders payable out of net earnings, held that compromise whereby stockholders voted issue of stock and bonds and agreed to exchange bonds and stock for debenture bonds, stock aggregating face value of bonds was not ultra vires as violating Const. Mo. art. 12, § 8, providing that "no corporation shall issue stock or bonds except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void." Pollitz v. Wabash R. Co., 167 F 145.

62. Under general railroad act (P. L. 1903, p. 647, § 3), railroad corporation may exercise general powers conferred by corporation act of 1896 only so far as they are appropriate to and not inconsistent with railroad act or with provisions under which company is created. State v. Atlantic City & S. R. Co. [N. J. Err. App.] 72 A 111. St. 1906, p. 527, c. 463, part 2, § 57, prohibiting railroad corporation from purchasing unless authorized by general court or the be effected only by amendment of charter.[64] Before a foreign railroad corporation can operate in some states, it must file a copy of its charter with the secretary of state and comply with certain conditions.[65] provisions of the act, the stocks or bonds of other corporations, is an affirmative statement of doctrine of ultra vires and determines when company may purchase such stock. Attorney General v. New York, etc., R. Co., 198 Mass. 413, 84 NE 737. Under express provisions of General Corporation Act. § 51 (P. L. 1896, p. 294), corporation organized under general railroad law may acquire bonds and controlling interest in stock of corporation organized under street railway law. State v. Atlantic City & S. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 468. Though company acquiring right of way and station grounds under act of congress (Act. Feb. 18, 1888, c. 13, 25 Stat. 35) could not acquire other real estate from Choctaw Nation, power held given by subsequent statutes. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Bond [C. C. A.] 160 F 403.

63. Company, incorporated under P. L. 1903, p. 645, for purpose of constructing a line of railway with definite termini, held without power to hold and own stock of street railroad extending beyond termini (State v. Atlantic City & S. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 111), and exercise of power of control and running of its cars over street car line and making of ostensible agreement for continuance of such operation constitutes usurpation of franchise (Id.).

64. State v. Railroad Commission, 137 Wis. 80, 117 NW 846. Such change under St. 1898, § 1826, though not called an amendment, is one in fact. Id. St. 1898, § 1774, relating to amendment of articles of incorporation, does not apply to railroads. Id.

65. Where it is alleged that defendant was operating in New Mexico Territory, it will be presumed that it complied with Laws N. M. 1903, p. 51, c. 33, requiring railroads operating in territory to file copy of charter with secretary, give its principal place of business and designate one for receiving service of process etc. Denver & R. 68. Must be sued in county where it has principal office if chartered under laws of state. White v. Atlanta B. & A. R. Co. [Ga. App.] 63 SE 234. Word "reside" as used in Acts 27th Leg. (Laws 1901, p. 31, c. 27), authorizing bringing of suit in county where injury occurred or where plaintiff resides, means to make abode for considerable time and imports a habitation of some degree of permanency coupled with thought of home. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Monell [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 504. One from another state who was member of gang taking up old and laying down new steel, living in boarding car, and who only intended to work until he could get $50 ahead, held not a resident of state and under Acts 27th Leg. (Laws 1901, p. 31, c. 27) authorizing bringing of suit in any county where road runs. Id. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3839 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2128), action before justice for killing of stock must be brought in township where killing occurred or in adjoining township. Beth v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1111. Action against railroad having principal office in state upon liability attaching as purchaser or successor of another, primarily liable, must be brought in county where it has principal office. White v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co. [Ga. App.] 63 SE 234. Under Act March 13, 1905, where domestic company and two foreign companies were connecting carriers over whose line plaintiff's wife traveled on ticket purchased in another state, all of which operated trains within state, held that court in county through which domestic company operated line had jurisdiction of all for injury occuring beyond line especially where agreement between domestic and one of foreign practically made them partners. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Sizemore [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 403. Railroad company is suable on contract either in county where executed or in county where it is to be performed. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Crapps, 4 Ga. App. 550, 61 SE 1126.

69. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2880, summons in action in justice court may be served on freight agent where company has not designated person for service though assistant superintendent of defendant resides in county, unless he is managing agent within Code Civ. Proc. § 2879. Duval v. Boston & M. R. Co., 58 Misc. 504, 111 NYS 629. Ticket agent of local railroad selling joint ticket over foreign road not doing business in the state is not a "ticket agent" of such foreign company on whom process may be served under Rev. Laws 1905, § 4110. Slaughter v. Canadian Pac. R. Co., 106 Minn. 263, 119 NW 398. Foreign railway company not owning or operating a railway within the state is not "transacting business within this state," though its cars are brought into state under a joint traffic arrangement. Id. Act No. 208, p. 319, Pub. Acts. 1901, providing for service upon station agent or any conductor along the line or at end of road, except that provision shall not apply to conductors on electric railways operating within limits of cities, held to authorize service on conductor within city limits where road did not operate wholly within such city. § 14. Offenses relating to railroads.[70]—See 10 C. L. 1438—Where a company habitually runs over a crossing at an unsafe speed,[71] fails to discharge its duty to keep a bridge in a safe condition,[72] or willfully [73] blocks [74] a crossing for an unreasonable time,[75] it may be indicted as for a public nuisance[76]. The violation of a speed ordinance is frequently made a misdemeanor.[77] An indictment for criminal negligence resulting in a collision must show that defendant was in control of the train and knew that the other train was due or coming.[78] The West Virginia statute making it an offense to jump off cars, engines, etc., has no application to any employe.[79] laday v. Detroit United R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1050, 119 NW 445. Where domestic corporation, owning no rolling stock and foreign company had working agreement which in legal effect made them partners, held that conductor on foreign company's train, which was operated by same crew beyond state, was foreign company's conductor on whom service could be had under Act March 13, 1905, though agreement provided that crew should be employes of domestic company while in state. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Sizemore [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 403. For purposs of serving process, foreign railroad corporation doing business in state will be treated as domestic corporation, and return officer need not show that place of service was place of residence of person served. 72. Indictment for maintaining public nuisance, charging the failure to rspair certain bridge but alleging no duty to repair except by way of recital that defendant did "suffer and permit its bridge to become out of repair," held insufficient. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 517.

73. Indictment for "willfully" blocking street means merely intentionally as distinguished from accidental. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 991, 112 SW 578.

74. Indictment merely charging company with frequently and rapidly passing its trains over a crossing, whereby it was obstructed, states no offense. Commonwealth v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Pa.] 72 A 278.

75. Use of words "to wit, thirty minutes," as used in instruction relative to blocking crossing unreasonable length of time, held not prejudicial as withdrawing question of reasonableness from jury in view of other instructions. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 991, 112 SW 573.

76. Indictment for constituting a nuisance by blocking certain street held sufficient though it did not state exact date, time of day, character of train or direction in which it was headed. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 92, 110 SW 253. Wherein indictment for creating a nuisance by blocking certain street, the exact day or time of day was not alleged and it appears that defendant has many trains over the crossing each day, bill of particulars by commonwealth was properly ordered but it should not have been demanded until state could ascertain facts necessary. Id. Such bill need not give facts within knowledge of defendant nor need it give exact date or hour of the offense or number of train unless witnesses can give same, commonwealth being only required to make an honest effort to give such information. Id.

§ 1. Nature and elements. A. In general.[81]—See 10 C. L. 1440—Rape at common law is the carnal knowledge of a female, forcibly and against her consent.[82] Actual penetration [83] by means of force,[84] actual or constructive,[85] sufficient to overcome the will of the female,[86] and nonconsent by the female,[87] are essential elements. Pretermitting the question of consent, any unlawful force is sufficient,[88] but from the standpoint of resistence required by the female, there must be sufficient force to overcome her utmost resistance.[89] Some statutes designate grades of the offense, depending upon whether the force was actual [90] or constructive.[91] A "man" within the meaning of the statutes denouncing the offense is any male person who has arrived at puberty,[92] and all male persons of the age of fourteen years or more are prima facie capable of committing rape.[93] Neither force [94] nor actual presence at the time and place of the offense [95] are essential to the crime of aiding and abetting, and, in jurisdictions which have abolished the destinction between principal and accessory, the accessory is guilty as a principal.[96] Action may be barred by limitations,[97] and, where there is uncertainty as to whether the period has run, time becomes an essential.[98]

(§ 1) B. Female under age of consent.[99]—See 10 C. L. 1441—It is universally provided by statute that unlawful carnal knowledge of a female under a specified age shall be rape regardless of her consent.[1] Neither force,[2] intent [3] nor knowledge of the age of prosecutrix are essential to statutory rape; [4] nor is time, providing it is within the prohibited age,[5] and it is immaterial that the female is the wife of another.[6] A female attains the age of consent on the day preceding the anniversary of birth.[7]

(§ 1) C. Attempts and assaults with intent to commit rape; and forcible detention.[8] See 10 C. L. 1441—An attempt includes all the ingredients of the offense except its accomplishment.[9] Mere solicitation cannot establish the offense.[10] Intent to accomplish the crime [11] and to use whatever force is necessary in its accomplishment [12] must be present,[13] and an overt act must be shown,[14] which need not, however, amount to a technical assault,[15] but must at least place the female under a sense of constraint and shame.[16] Some jurisdictions distinguished between attempted rape and assault to rape.[17]

Forcible detention. See 10 C. L. 1442

§ 2. Indictment and prosecution. A. Indictment or information.[18] See 10 C. L. 1442—The indictment must inform the defendant of the full nature of the charge against him,[19] and must set forth facts,[20] sufficient to charge the crime [21] and all its essential elements, including force [22] and nonconsent.[23] Where the punishment is the same, one aiding and abetting may be properly charged as a principal.[24] Statutory rape must be sufficiently alleged,[25] but time is otherwise an immaterial allegation.[26] That the female was under the age of consent need not be alleged in the language of the statute.[27] Previous chastity of the prosecutrix, if essential, must be alleged,[28]

but felonious intent is not an essential allegation in such cases.[29] A charge of having committed the crime necessarily includes the charge of capacity to commit.[30] While it is usually necessary to negative marriage, such allegation need not always be in express terms,[31] and in statutory rape it may be wholly unnecessary,[32] particularly so as to marriage to another than defendant.[33] It is not usually necessary to set forth the offense in the language of the statute,[34] but an indictment in the very language of a statute cannot be construed to charge the offense under another statute.[35] In charging attempt, the intent must be clearly alleged.[36] The usual rules as to duplicity obtain.[37] Carnal knowledge and carnal abuse are synonymous terms.[38]

(§ 2) B. Evidence. 1. Admissibilty.[39]—See 10 C. L. 1443—At common law, failure to complain promptly raised a strong presumption of bad faith and might bar as hearsay any testimony as to a subsequent complaint.[40] By the modern rulings, however, the state may introduce evidence of a delayed complaint by properly explaining the delay,[41] and hence may introduce evidence in explanation thereof.[42] Similarly, the state may show why no outcry was made at the time of the offense.[43] Since prompt complaint is an important test of the sincerity of the prosecutrix, testimony as to the fact of such complaint is admissible, but not as to details of the complaint[44] except as res gestae or in corroboration of prosecutrix's testimony when attacked,[45] or under extraordinary circumstances,[46] although it is within the discretion of the court to admit accusations made by prosecutrix during childbirth.[47] The rule which permits the admission of complaints of the victim immediately following is an arbitrary exception to the rule against hearsay evidence and cannot be extended to other offenses.[48] In general, acts and statements of the parties subsequent to the offense are inadmissible [49] except as a part of the res gestae,[50] or in corroboration of the prosecutrix,[51] or as tending to show consciousness of guilt,[52] but subsequent statements by third parties are uniformly inadmissible.[53] Circumstantial or other evidence in corroboration of the prosecutrix may be introduced,[54] such as the appearance and condition of the prosecutrix,[55] her clothing,[56] and the scene of the outrage,[57] if not too remote.[58] Letters written by defendant [59] and the conduct of the parties previous to the crime [60] may also be admissible in corroboration. though tending to prove another crime as well,[66] if properly restricted by the court,[67] and, in the case of an accessory, prior offenses may be considered as showing a plan or design.[68] However, it is held in Missouri that previous offenses [69] and improper acts and solicitations prior to the offense charged [70] may be shown to establish intent or motive, but that conversations between the parties, neither improper nor importing solicitations, are inadmissible.[71] The usual rules as to incompetency prevail.[72] In statutory rape, evidence of previous undue familiarity between parties is admissible,[73] as is evidence tending to rebut the state's theory as to the age of prosecutrix.[74] Intent, as an essential of attempt, may be shown by proper evidence, and it has been held that social customs founded on race differences may be considered in this connection.[75] roborated,[84] except as to corpus delicti,[85] by independent evidence of the crime,[86] but in several jurisdictions a conviction may be had on her uncorroborated testimony,[87] although in such cases it should be subjected to careful scrutiny.[88] Failure to make outcry is a circumstance against the state's case,[89] as is failure to make prompt complaint,[90] and raises a strong inference that no offense was committed.[91] Chastity [92] or repute,[93] where material, must be shown by proper evidence. In assaults and attempts, intent must be clearly shown,[94] but is always a question of fact [95] to be inferred from the evidence.[96] In statutory rape, the nonage of the prosecutrix must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, but time is not otherwise a material consideration except as regards limitations.[97] Carnal knowledge of a child necessarily implies "abuse," and it is not necessary to prove injury to the genitals.[98] In order to warrant capital punishment, the actual accomplishment of the crime must be clearly proved,[99] and where committed in Indian country, it is necessary to negative the presumption that the offender is an Indian.[1]

(§ 2) C. Instructions [2]—See 10 C. L. 1446 are sufficient if they correctly set forth the law of the case when read as a whole,[3] and it is proper to refuse merely cumulative charges [4] or charges giving undue prominence to particular facts.[5] While the issues should be fairly presented to the jury [6] and be confined to the case under consideration, an instruction defining the offense more broadly than necessary, if not misleading, may be unobjectionable.[7] The language of the statute is sufficient,[8] but it is unnecessary to go into obvious details.[9] It is proper to instruct as to the effect of uncorroborated testimony,[10] and circumstantial evidence may be charged where necessary [11] but such a charge is unnecessary where there is positive identification.[12] Where the testimony is uncontradicted, the court may assume that the prosecutrix is under the age of consent,[13] and it has been held proper to suggest to the jury that such is the state of the evidence.[14] Instructions on included offenses are largely discretionary [15] and may be properly refused [16] or omitted [17] in the absence of evidence supporting such a theory; but where proof of the greater crime is inconclusive, it may become the duty of the court to instruct on the lesser.[18] The court should properly limit the effect of evidence introduced for a particular purpose.[19] Where the jury is to assess punishment, the court should so instruct.[20] Objections to instructions, to be available on appeal, must be specific.[21]

(§ 2) D. Trial and punishment.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1448.—Venue, in doubtful cases, may be for the jury.[23] The right to have the state elect a particular offense is a matter of local practice[24] and may be lost by failure to raise the question at the proper time.[25] When the state admits the facts to be proved, a continuance to obtain evidence is properly refused.[26] The jury may find a lesser offense, although the evidence warranted conviction for the greater,[27] and may bring a verdict of "guilty without capital punishment," although there were no mitigating circumstances;[28] but where sentence is dependent upon previous chastity of prosecutrix, the greater verdict is not authorized in the absence of an allegation of chastity.[29] A sentence not strictly conformable to the indeterminate sentence statute may in some instances be read as conforming thereto.[30] Twenty years' hard labor is not excessive punishment for premeditated and incestuous rape of an adult.[31]

*New trial.*See 10 C. L. 1448.—The defendant must show diligence in the first instance in order to be entitled to new trial upon the ground of newly-discovered evidence,[32] and may properly be refused where the new evidence is inconclusive[33] or merely cumulative.[34] New trial is primarily within the discretion of the trial court, but it is an abuse of discretion to deny new trial when the court has information as to material facts unknown to the jury.[35] The appellate court will not interfere, however, unless the question is properly brought before it.[36]

Merrill [Ind. App.] 87 NE 36. Words in will "I give, devise and bequeath," are sufficient to pass fee to devisee named. Aneshaensel v. Twyman [Ind. App.] 85 NE 788. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 2737, providing that every devise denoting testator's intention to pass his entire interest shall dispose of such interest, words "I give and devise to my husband J. the farm on which we now live" are sufficient to pass fee simple. Bright v. Justice [Ind. App.] 85 NE 794. Additional power to sell and convey as he might see proper held merely to emphasize intent to confer fee. Id. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 3958, 3960, prescribing short form of warranty deed for creation of fee simple estates and requiring that intention to create a less estate be expressed in the deed, grantor may use words "conveys and warrants" and after description of the land effectually express "in the deed" his intention to create in first taker an estate less than one of inheritance. Adams v. Merrill [Ind. App.] 85 NE 114. Deed held to create life estate only in first taker followed by contingent alternative remainders. Id. Limitation over to wife and children, should grantee die leaving such, held effective though deed was prepared under Hurd's Rev. St. § 9, c. 30. Bauman v. Stoller, 235 Ill. 480, 85 NE 657. "To have and to hold the above-granted premises to the said S. and J. and their successors in office to their use and behoof forever" held to create a fee simple estate in trust though no words of limitation to heirs was used. Hamlin v. "Perticuler Baptist Meeting House," 103 Me. 343, 69 A 315. Absolute devise though without words of inheritance held presumptively to pass fee so as to render repugnant subsequent limitation over. Bradley v. Warren [Me.] 72 A 173. Use of word "heirs" is unnecessary to pass fee under a will, but may be considered when intention is doubtful whether life estate or fee should pass. Pratt v. Saline Valley R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 175, 108 SW 1099. Act March 24, 1899 (P. L. p. 531), as amended Act April 9, 1902 (P. L. p. 688), providing that a conveyance to a person without more shall convey fee simple, held inapplicable

*Entails.*See 10 C. L. 1449—Words of procreation are essential to the creation of an estate tail,[57] but it is sufficient if it appears from the whole will or deed that "heirs of the body" were intended.[58] A life estate jointly to two or more who cannot have a common heir, remainder to the heirs of their bodies, gives each ancestor a several inheritance in fee tail in such part as would be the share of the heirs of his body according to the number of joint tenants to whom the freehold is given.[59] Estates tail are by statute converted into fees simple in many states[60] or into life estates with remainders.[61]

*Base or determinable fees.*See 10 C. L. 1449—These are estates which, though limited to heirs general, are subject to divestiture on the happening of some future contingent event.[62] There is no revester unless the contingency happens,[63] and so long as the estate remains the owner in possession has all the rights which he would have if tenant in fee simple.[64] A determinable or qualified fee may embrace what is properly a fee upon condition.[65] The right to improvements on termination of the estate is considered in a subsequent section.[66]

(§ 2) D. A life estate[67]—See 10 C. L. 1450 is a freehold[68] limited to determine to grant to grantee and heirs of her body with reversion to grantor should grantee die without heirs of body. Robeson v. Duncan [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 685. Under Shannon's Code, § 3672, providing deeds shall presumptively pass all estate of grantor, fee simple may be conveyed without use of word "heirs." Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484. Devise to M. and C. without more held to give fee under Rev. St. 1895, art. 627, rendering nonessential technical common-law phraseology. Seay v. Cockrell [Tex.] 115 SW 1160.

60. Shares to daughters and their bodily heirs or the lawful heirs of their bodies, free from debts of their husbands or other persons, held to create fee tail made fee simple by statute. English v. McCreary [Ala.] 48 S 113. To grantee and her bodily heirs after her death, held to create fee tail converted to fee simple by statute. Lawson v. Todd, 33 Ky. L. R. 557, 110 SW 412. Will construed to create estates tail on happening of contingency therein specified, contemplating life estates in grandchildren unborn, so that under statute testator's children took estate in fee simple. Davenport v. Collins [Miss.] 48 S 733. Income of farm to grandchildren after death of widow and on their death farm to descend to their issue, held to create an estate tail enlarged to fee by act April 27, 1855 (P. L. 368), "issue" meaning prima facie "heirs of body." Stayman v. Paxson, 221 Pa. 446, 70 A 803. To brother for life then to brother's four daughters, each for life, and after death of each niece "unto her children and their heirs and assigns forever," held to create an estate tail in each niece, which by Act April 27, 1855, becomes fee simple. Sechler v. Eshleman [Pa.] 70 A 910. Under Act July 9, 1897 (P. L. 213) changing common-law presumption of indefinite failure of issue to one of definite failure, words "death without issue" in devise over in case of death of first taker without issue mean failure of issue in life time of devisee and not indefinite failure, and devisee takes life estate only and not fee tail made fee by act of 1855. Lewis v. Link-Belt Co. [Pa.] 70 A 967.

61. To daughters by name and heirs of their bodies forever, held to give daughters life estates by virtue of statute abolishing fees tail, remainder to their children born and unborn. Charles v. White, 214 Mo. 187, 112 SW 545.

62. Base fees are not recognized by Indiana laws of descent. Rozell v. Cranfill [Ind. App.] 86 NE 864. To have and hold "to said S. and J. and their success in office to their use and behoof forever," held to create a fee simple trust and not a base or determinable fee. Hamlin v. "Perticuler Baptist Meeting House," 103 Me. 343, 69 A 315. See, also, post, § 3.

63. Conveyance by parents in consideration son should support them with provision that in case son died first land should revert to father and mother, held not to leave any possibility of reversion in father's heirs where father died leaving son surviving. Whittaker v. Trammell [Ark.] 110 SW 1041. Reversion to grantor's heirs contingent on devisees dying without issue held not to occur where one of the devisees died leaving issue. Newland v. with a human life or lives [69] or at an uncertain time which may be postponed for life.[70] Under some statutes common-law estates tail are made life estates with remainders over.[71] A discretionary power of sale in a life tenant cannot be delegated by him,[72] and in case of doubt a power will be held not to have been executed.[73] On the issue of the value of a life estate, annuity or life tables while properly considered are not conclusive,[74] other evidence also being competent.[75]

(§ 2) E. Estates upon condition or limitation.[76]—See 10 C. L. 1450—An estate may be created which will vest or be divested on the performance or nonperformance of some condition,[77] or on the happening of some contingency.[78] A condition subsequent differs from a limitation in that in order to defeat the estate some affirmative act must be done such as making re-entry,[79] whereas an estate on limitation is terminated ipso facto by the happening of the event.[80] To create a condition subsequent, a right of forfeiture and re-entry must be given, either expressly or by implication.[81] Whether words create a condition precedent or subsequent is generally

79, 80. Low v. Thompson, 58 Misc. 541, 109 NYS 750. Where estate is so expressly limited by words of its creation that it cannot endure longer than until happening of contingency on which it is to fail, provision is a limitation and not a condition. Low v. Thompson, 111 NYS 607. Provision that leasehold should end on 1st day of May 1908 at noon held limitation and not condition. Id. Provision that lessee would quit at expiration of term, and that, if default was made as to any covenant or agreement, tenancy should terminate at option of landlord, did not convert limitation into a condition. Id.

81. Words "upon condition," "provided always," or the like, must be employed in absence of words of re-entry and forfeiture. Rector of St. Stephen's Protestant Epsicopal Church v. Rector of Church of the Transfiguration, 114 NYS 623. Where no right of re-entry was reserved for breach of covenant to use property only for church purposes, covenant could not be enforced as a condition subsequent. Id. Recital that conveyance was pursuant to agreement whereby grantee was to convey certain land to grantor and erect certain buildings held not to create estate upon condition, there being no express reservation of right of re-entry. Braddy v. Elliott, 146 N. C. 578, 60 SE 507. Conveyance in consideration of support held to contain only a covenant and not a condition, no words of forfeiture being used, so that breach did not forfeit estate. Cox v. Combs [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1069.

a question of intention,[82] but courts are averse to construing conditions as precedent when the vesting of estates under a will is thereby defeated,[83] and they are also inclined toward regarding provisions as mere covenants rather than conditions,[84] or as mere executory or contingent limitations.[85] Conditions subsequent do not affect the estate conveyed until they are broken,[86] but they must be complied with,[87] and nonperformance is not excused by contingencies which the holder of the estate could have provided for.[88] If they are not observed, the grantor or his heirs may forfeit the estate by acts sufficient to constitute in law a re-entry,[89] unless, of course, the right of re-entry has been previously lost,[90] but conditions subsequent are not favored,[91] and persons seeking a forfeiture must bring themselves clearly within the terms of the condition,[92] especially where they were not parties to the instrument containing it.[93] The general rule is that the right of re-entry can be exercised only by the grantor or his heirs.[94] A grantor who re-enters and takes possession in execution of a forfeiture for breach of condition acquires thereby an estate which he may assign,[95] remainders or other interests dependent on the grant being thus cut off.[96]

82. Especially when condition is annexed to a devise or bequest. Ege v. Hering [Md.] 70 A 221. Must be determined from a testator's intent as gathered from whole will rather than from use of particular words. Warren's Adm'r v. Bronson [Vt.] 69 A 655. Fulfillment of contract for carrying on farm during widow's life held a condition subsequent, and accordingly title vested in son on testator's death subject to life estate and payment of legacies. Id. There are no technical words determinative of whether estate is on condition precedent or subsequent intention being controlling. De Conick v. De Conick, 154 Mich. 187, 15 Det. Leg. N. 624, 117 NW 570. If language of will shows that act on which estate depends must be performed before vesting, condition is precedent (Id.), but if act does not necessarily precede vesting, condition is subsequent (Id.). All surrounding circumstances at time of execution af deed may be considered. Id. Provision for support of grandniece by grantee held condition subsequent and to require him only to support niece after mother's death. Id.

84. Unilateral covenant by tenant "to sell no other beer than that manufactured by" a certain brewing company held not a condition subsequent, but a mere independent and unenforcible covenant. Fortune Bros. Brew. Co. v. Shields, 137 Ill. App. 77. Grant "upon the express condition that grantee and assigns shall keep said premises open as private way," etc., held a covenant, and not a condition giving grantor's heirs no reversionary interest. Druecker v. McLaughlin, 235 Ill. 367, 85 NE 647. Where deed, without violence to its terms, can be construed as containing a covenant rather than a condition subsequent, such construction will be adopted. Freer v. Glen Springs Sanitarium Co., 115 NYS 734. Provision for use for cemetery purposes held not condition subsequent, especially since deed contained no re-entry clause. Id.

85. Where gift was contingent on prior devisee neglecting or refusing to accept, and prior gifts failed because correct names of beneficiaries were not given, and beneficiaries who were probably intended declined to accept, alternative gifts vested, preceding gifts not being conditions precedent but merely executory or contingent limitations. (§ 2) F. Hereditaments and appurtenances.[97] See 10 C. L. 1450—A franchise to use land is an incorporeal hereditament.[98] A thing is appurtenant to land when it is by right used with the land for its benefit.[99]

(§ 2) G. Future estates[1] See 10 C. L. 1450 are such as are limited to commence in possession or enjoyment in futuro.[2] Whether vested or contingent, they are divisible, assignable and transmissable by descent;[3] but a mere possibility of revester is incapable of alienation or devise,[4] such an interest not being sufficient to constitute an estate.[5]

A reversion. See 10 C. L. 1451—The interest remaining in a grantor who has conveyed a base or qualified fee is not a reversion but a mere possibility of revester.[6] At common law, where one conveys a life estate but limits a remainder to his own heirs, the latter take, not as remaindermen, but as reversioners,[7] and the grantor, being himself the reversioner, may alienate the reversion.[8] Reversions on termination of base fees have already been considered.[9]

A remainder See 10 C. L. 1451 is vested in one when he or his heirs have the present right to immediate possession, whenever or however the preceding estate may determine.[10] It is contingent when limited to a dubious or uncertain person or on a du-tee's breach of condition to support grantors held to defeat remaindermen's interest. Lowe v. Stepp [Ky.] 116 SW 293.

Contingent estates of inheritance as well as springing and executory uses and possibilities, coupled with an interest, are transmissible by descent, devisable, and assignable, where person to take is certain. Fisher v. Wagner [Md.] 71 A 999. Remainder contingent on life tenant dying without issue held devisable before death of life tenant. Id. Where person, who was to take if life tenant died without heirs of body, died before life tenant, who subsequently died without heirs of body, his interest passed to his heirs. Adams v. Merrill [Ind. App.] 85 NE 114. Where property was devised to O for life, remainder to his brothers and survivors, children of any deceased brother to take parent's share, vested interest of one of the brothers in contingent remainder was subject to sale for debts of such brother under Rev. Laws, c. 134, § 2, authorizing alienation of contingent interests in certain cases. Cashman v. Bangs, 200 Mass. 498, 86 NE 932. Contingent remainders are alienable under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 30, § 7 (Golladay v. Knock, 235 Ill. 412, 85 NE 649), but if grantor dies before happening of contingency, grantee takes nothing (Id.). 10. Estate is vested if ready at any time to come into possession provided prior estate bious or uncertain event,[11] but may be vested subject to a subsequent condition or contingency.[12] If permissible, remainders will be held vested rather than contingent,[13] even though subject to divestiture by exercise of a power of appointment.[14]

Though a remainder cannot be limited on a fee absolute,[15] alternative contingent remainders in fee are valid,[16] and a remainder may be limited after what would have been an estate tail at common law.[17] So, also, by statute, a contingent remainder in fee may be limited on a prior determinable remainder in fee.[18]

Under the old common law rule, which, however, is not now universally adhered to,[19] a contingent remainder fails unless it can vest in interest when the particular estate is destroyed or otherwise terminates,[20] and a life tenant could take ad-should end. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292. Whenever remainderman is in being and is ascertained, and event which will terminate precedent estate is certain to happen, remainder is vested. Id. Where seven children mentioned by name were to take on death of widow. Id. Vesting not prevented by provision that, should widow again marry, rents should be applied for support and education of children. Id. Remainder is vested when a definite interest is created in a certain person and no further condition is imposed than determination of precedent estate. Golladay v. Knock, 235 Ill. 412, 85 NE 649. Not sufficient that there is a person in being who has present capacity to take should particular estate presently terminate (Id.), but it must also appear that there are no other contingencies which may intervene to defeat the estate before falling in of particular estate (Id.). Where court can point to a person and say to him that by virtue of testamentary grant in remainder he will have an immediate right to possession of lands devised on termination of precedent estate, remainder is vested under Laws 1896, p. 564, c. 547, § 30. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292. Where life estate was subject to forfeiture by breach of conditions, remainder over was contingent, being dependent on continued existence of life estate. Lumsden v. Payne [Tenn.] 114 SW 483. Where persons to whom remainders were limited were uncertain. In re Adelman's Will [Wis.] 119 NW 929. As to estates in particular cases, see post, § 3.

Distinction: Vested remainders vest at once, and only right of enjoyment is dependent on some future event (Jailette v. Bell, 33 Ky. L. R. 159, 110 SW 298), while contingent remainders do not vest immediately but depend on some uncertain future event (Id.). Under Real Property Law, Laws 1896, p. 564, c. 547, § 30, future estates are vested when there is a person in being who would have an immediate right to possession on termination of precedent estate, and contingent while person to whom, or event on which they are limited to take effect, remains uncertain. Trowbridge v. Cass, 126 App. Div. 679, 110 NYS 1108. Uncertainty distinguishing contingent from vested remainder is not uncertainty whether remainderman will live to enjoy estate, but whether he will ever have right to enjoy it. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292.

12. If remainder is subject to a precedent condition or contingency, it is contingent; but if subject to a subsequent condition or contingency, it is vested subject to be divested. Golladay v. Knock, 235 Ill. 412, 85 NE 649.

15. Gaylord v. Barnes, 128 App. Div. 810, 113 NYS 605.

16. Remainder in fee to life tenant's heirs of body, and over in default of such heirs. Adams v. Merrill [Ind. App.] 85 NE 114. Life tenant having died without heirs of body living at her death as required by deed, other contingent limitation took effect. "Heirs of body" held not to include surviving adopted child. Id.

17. To M for life, and then to her children and the heirs of her body, but over on failure of heirs of body. Adams v. Merrill [Ind. App.] 85 NE 114. Such remainder contemplated by Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 3994, making common-law estates tail fee simples and fee simples absolute if no remainders are limited thereon. Id.

18. Devise over if life tenant should not leave any issue that should attain full age held not within Rev. St. c. 1, tit. 2, § 16, providing that a contingent remainder in fee may be created on a prior remainder in fee, to take effect on death of first remaindermen under 21, etc. In re Wilcox, 194 N. Y. 288, 87 NE 497.

19. That children who were remaindermen were not yet born when life tenant died, and testator had not provided for trustees to hold estate to support remainder, held not fatal to remainder, since either executor or trustee appointed by court could preserve estate for remaindermen. Hayward v. Spaulding [N. H.] 71 A 219. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 2346, providing against failure of contingent remainders for want of particular estates, interests of children entitled to take on death of life tenant without issue held not defeated by life tenant's death before death of testator. Golladay v. Thomas, 33 Ky. L. R. 829, 111 SW 721.

20. A contingent remainder must take effect on termination of precedent estate, or fail. Simonds v. Simonds, 199 Mass. 552, 85 NE 860; Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386. Immaterial whether preceding estate reaches natural termination or is brought to premature end by merger, forfeiture or otherwise. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386. Under strict common law, remainder vantage of this by forfeiting his own estate and taking a reconveyance.[21] The doctrine of acceleration of remainders is based on a presumed intention that the remainderman shall take from the time of the termination of the preceding estate rather than from the time of the death of the life tenant,[22] and hence does not apply where no such intention can be presumed.[23] Remainders are transferable.[24]

Executory interests. See 10 C. L. 1452—An executory devise is an estate permitted at common law to be created by will, to commence in the future either with or without a precedent estate.[25] It can be limited on a fee [26] or to take effect after death without issue,[27] but an absolute power of disposition in the first taker is inconsistent.[28] If an estate can take effect as a remainder, it will not be held to be an executory devise.[29]

Expectancies. See 10 C. L. 1452—Alienations of expectancies by heirs apparent are sustained if made in good faith and for a sufficient consideration; [30] but one has no such interest in the realty of one's living ancestor as to be able to prevent a voluntary alienation to strangers.[31]

§ 3. Estates created in particular cases, and principles of classification.[32]—See 10 C. L. 1453—Of primary importance is the intention of the parties to be gathered from the particular language of the entire instrument creating the estate,[33] and would lapse where, on termination of life estate, remaindermen were yet unborn. Hayward v. Spaulding [N. H.] 71 A 219. Forfeiture of precedent life estate on condition held to destroy remainder. Lumsden v. Payne [Tenn.] 114 SW 483.

21. Might forfeit life estate by tortlous conveyance by deed of feoffment with livery of seisin and thus destroy remainders and take free title by reconveyance. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386.

22. Holdren v. Holdren, 78 Ohio St. 276, 85 NE 537.

23. Where one-sixth was devised to widow for life, with remainder in fee to a son, and widow elected to take more than value of life estate under law, remainder did not accelerate, but life estate would be sequestered to compensate disappointed legatees. Holdren v. Holdren, 78 Ohio St. 276, 85 NE 537.

24. See ante, Future Estates.

25. To daughter, with remainder in fee to her children, but should she die without children, then to testator's children then living, held in nature of executory devise. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119.

26. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119.

27. Not void for remoteness of contingency of indefinite failure of issue. Stisser v. Stisser, 235 Ill. 207, 85 NE 240. Could not be argued devise was dependent on indefinite failure of issue where testator used words "without issue" in sense of "without children."

28. Absolute fee, but over as to "estate remaining" should son die without issue who attained majority, gave absolute power of disposal, and limitation over could not take effect as executory devise. Galligan v. McDonald, 200 Mass. 299, 86 NE 304.

29. Construction of deed that it created a shifting use held not at variance above rule, even if such rule applies to springing and shifting uses. Simonds v. Simonds, 199 Mass. 552, 85 NE 860.

30. Son's conveyance of expectancy and agreement not to contest ancestor's will held not against public policy. In re Wickersham's Estate, 153 Cal. 603, 96 P 311.

31. Owner can convey to strangers without consideration as against heirs at law. Schumacher v. Draeger [Wis.] 119 NW 305.

32. Search Note: See notes in 2 C. L. 1463, 1464; 11 A. S. R. 99; 3 Ann. Cas. 397; 7 Id. 953.

33. Deed with words of limitation in habendum instead of in premises. Condor v. Secrest [N. C.] 62 SE 921. Under Revisal 1905, § 946, providing conveyance of realty shall create estates in fee whether word "heirs" is used or not, unless conveyance shall plainly show grantor meant a less estate intention of grantor, and not technical words of common law, governs. Triplett v. Williams [N. C.] 63 SE 79. Intention of grantor giving an ambiguous deed must be ascertained, if possible, by giving every word of deed its appropriate meaning, regardless of mere formal divisions of instrument. Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484.

Fee simple estates: Will construed to create fee simple in children and not fee tail, "and to their personal and lawful heirs" not being equivalent to "heirs of body." Webbe v. Webbe, 234 Ill. 442, 84 NE 1054. Will giving vested remainder in a son's share to testator's other children named "in same way, subject to same trusts and provisos upon which they respectively receive their portions of my estate," held not to give absolute equitable fee to a surviving son such as would pass to his heirs, but to pass his interest in the remainder subject to all restrictions contained in devise to him. Rackemann v. Tilton, 236 Ill. 49, 86 NE 168. Estate to widow, to be by her used and disposed of during her natural life same as testator might do if living, with power of disposal, held to confer fee. In re Weien's Will [Iowa] 116 NW 791. To wife for "her lifetime, to manage and dispose of as she may see cause," without gift over, held to give wife fee, especially in view of Ky. St. 1903, § 2342, providing that, unless a different purpose appear by express words or necessary inference, every estate created by will without words of inheritance shall be deemed a fee simple. Alsip v. Morgan, 33 Ky. L. R. 72, 109 SW 312. Will held to give fee to daughter on her arrival at 21, widow having renounced will. Frye's Adm'r v. Frye [Ky.] 112 SW 919. Will construed to give husband fee simple title to certain land, subject only to charge for maintenance and education of a nephew, latter taking no interest therein or in surplus proceeds except right to maintenance during minority, and to be educated for a profession should he in good faith desire it. Knight v. Collins [Ky.] 113 SW 131. Deed held to convey equitable fee simple estate, though caption stated grantee as "trustee for C and children," "heirs" and "assigns" being used in all parts of deed conveying or warranting estate. Wilson v. Shumate [Ky.] 113 SW 851. To sister in trust "to nurture, support and educate" grantor's children, with power to sell and convey "to whomsoever she might think proper, and to manage and control said property or its proceeds as she might deem best in her discretion for the use of said children," held to convey fee simple to trustee, especially in view of Ky. St. 1903, § 2342, making estates fee simple in absence of contrary intention appearing. Maxwell's Committee v. Centennial Perpetual Bldg. & Loan Ass'n [Ky.] 114 SW 324. To daughter, "to her and her heirs forever, without right to her or her husband to ever sell or transfer same, yet, should she leave heirs, they may sell and dispose of it," held to give fee regardless of validity of restraint on alienation. Disman v. Flippin's Adm'x [Ky.] 116 SW 740. Devise to a son "and his children" held to give son fee and not life estate, in view of other devises, restraints and charges. Harkness v. Lisle [Ky.] 117 SW 264. To son and his heirs forever, but, in default of surviving issue or if such issue should die in minority, then over as to "estate remaining" at son's death, held to create fee. Galligan v. McDonald, 200 Mass. 299, 86 NE 304. To wife, her heirs and assigns forever, with privilege of selling, and after her death, or at any time when she might arrange to relinquish her interest, property should revert to testator's son after daughters should have received certain sums, held to give wife fee simple, with full power to convey. Jackson v. Littell, 213 Mo. 589, 112 SW 53. To grantee and her heirs "with this provision," that in event of death of grantee before that of S, latter should have life estate, "and after death of parties herein named" property should revert to grantee's heirs, held to create fee in grantee, she surviving S. Gaylord v. Barnes, 128 App. Div. 810, 113 NYS 605. To son, farm and all pertaining thereto, his heirs and assigns forever, excepting what was devised to his mother for life, "at her death same to be sold and money divided—equally 5 shares," held to give fee simple to son subject to life estate. Hershey v. New York & Cleveland Gas Coal Co., 220 Pa. 651, 69 A 1046. Where remainder was given to life tenants, sisters and brothers mentioned in will "or their heirs," heirs was word of limitation, so that brothers and sisters took fee. In re Bentz's Estate, 221 Pa. 380, 70 A 788. Except a certain piece of land "which shall be held in reserve for my widow" gave widow fee. Birkbeck v. Wadsworth [Pa.] 70 A 998. "Bargain and sell" to grantees, "their heirs and assigns forever with the exception of mine and my wife's homestead or lifetime," held to convey fee simple. Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484. Premises of deed to grantees, "their heirs and assigns forever," except homestead, habendum to grantees, "their lifetime and to their heirs and assigns forever," held to create fee simple, clauses being repugnant and context not disclosing grantor's intention. Id.

Fees determinable: To daughter and heirs of her body, but should she die without issue surviving, then to her heirs at law, held to create a fee tail, raised by statute to absolute fee, but reduced to determinate fee by limitation based on death without issue. Carter v. Couch [Ala.] 47 S 1006. Devise over should devisee die before arriving at 21, or die leaving no bodily heirs, held to refer to death either before or after death of testator, so that estate was only a base or determinable fee. Wey v. Dooley, 134 Ill. App. 244. Church held to take determinable or qualified fee where deed provided that land should revert to grantor whenever it should cease to be occupied for a meeting house or church. North v. Graham, 235 Ill. 178, 85 NE 267. To Mrs. S, in premises and granting clause of deed, habendum to her in fee, but, if she died without heirs, then to husband if living, if dead then part to Mrs. S's "next" legal heirs, and part to husband's "next" legal heirs, held to create conditional fee, so that husband and wife could pass fee absolute. Hamilton v. Sidwell [Ky.] 115 SW 204. Conveyance with restriction as to use confers a qualified fee subject to divestiture for breach of restriction. Aumiller v. Dash [Wash.] 99 P 583. Conveyance with restriction that land shall be used only for a road grants fee and not a mere easement. Id.

Life estates: Will held to vest in deaf and dumb children only life estates in any property coming to them thereunder. Potts v. Prior [Ga.] 62 SE 77. Codicil held to carve life estate for sister out of estates previously devised to other legatees. Thomas v. Owens [Ga.] 62 SE 218. Will drawn by ignorant notary held to create life estate in widow, with remainder to persons named as heirs, land being excepted from direction for sale when youngest child should attain age, though it was the only land testator owned. Poll v. Cash, 234 Ill. 53, 84 NE 719. Will held to create trust estate at least for life of a daughter. Copeland v. Bruning [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1000. Residue to husband for life, with full power to sell same or as much thereof as might be needed for his support, then to children, held to give husband only life estate, with power of alienation for specific purposes. Hamilton v. Hamilton [Iowa] 115 NW 1012. Where husband and wife deeded land in which wife had only an inchoate dower right and reserved life estate to themselves during their natural lives, husband took life estate, but wife took nothing but life estate in what she theretofore had, her dower right. White v. Marion [Iowa] 117 NW 254. Deed construed to create only a life estate in grantee's wife, with remainder to her children by him, including after-born children. Bowe v. Richmond, 33 Ky. L. R. 173, 109 SW 359. Transfer of net income from transferror's interest in certain realty, such interest being a life estate, held not to create a life estate in transferee, but to give her only rents, less taxes, etc. Kalfus v. Davie, 33 Ky. L. R. 663, 110 SW 871.

Deed reserving full control during lives of grantor and wife and providing it should take effect after their death held to create life estates in grantors and vest title in grantee subject thereto. Martin v. Stewart, 33 Ky. L. R. 729, 111 SW 281. Deed to daughter and her heirs as an advancement, grantor to control property in his lifetime, daughter to have control after his death only to work upon for her lifetime, then to her living children, held to give daughter only a life estate, with remainder to children. Williams v. Grimm [Ky.] 112 SW 839. Will devising testatrix's interest in a lot, with full power in devisee to dispose of same by will or otherwise, but giving daughter a home thereon, held to give daughter home for life only in case lot was not previously disposed of. West v. McDonald [Ky.] 113 SW 872. To children for their lives, then to their legal heirs in default of issue of their bodies, without right of disposal, held to give children only life estate, remainder to their children, if any. Trustees of Common School Dist. No. 31 v. Isaacs' Guardian [Ky.] 115 SW 724. Deed reserving to grantors all right, title and control as long as either of them should live, and requiring grantee, after their death, to pay certain sums to designated persons, held to create life use for grantors, with lien for payment of sums specified. Engel v. Ladewig, 153 Mich. 8, 15 Det. Leg. N. 380, 116 NW 550. That one of grantors was other's wife and had only an inchoate right to dower held immaterial. Id. Balance of realty and personalty to wife, with request that she will two-thirds to charities to be named by her, "amount so willed to be payable at her death, as it is my will that she have and use all the income from that portion of my estate willed to her as long as she lives," held to give only one-third of estate absolutely, and life estate in remaining two-thirds. Gilchrist v. Corliss [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 971, 118 NW 938. Where widow's attempted disposition to charities failed for indefiniteness, the two-thirds descended to testator's heirs, and not to those of testatrix. Id. Will construed to give daughter only a life estate, with remainder to her heirs, in view of 50-year restraint on alienation and other devises of life estates. Pratt v. Saline Valley R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 175, 108 SW 1099. Where deed was to grantee "and to the heirs of her body" with reservation of possession and enjoyment for lives of grantor and wife, and reversion to grantor should grantee die in grantor's lifetime without heirs of body, and to his "estate" should grantee so die after grantor's death, grantee took only a life estate with limitation over by way of contingent remainder. Robeson v. Duncan [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 685. Quitclaim back to grantor gave only estate for life of original grantee. Id. To granddaughter for life, then to her issue, and, in default of issue, to her sister for life, then to latter's issue, and to a third person should both grandchildren die without issue, gave granddaughters only life estates, though third person died before testatrix, so that granddaughters could not convey fee. Guernsey v. Van Riper, 126 App. Div. 368, 110 NYS 642. Will construed to give only a life estate in grandchild, subject to prior life estate to widow, but enlargeable to fee should granddaughter arrive at 21 and have issue. Cone v. Kent, 128 App. Div. 409, 113 NYS 37. To wife for life, to have, use and enjoyment thereof and receive rents and profits for her sole benefit, held to give life estate only. In re Van Valkenburgh's Will, 60 Misc. 497, 113 NYS 1108. To J and wife S, and S's heirs, held to give husband life estate if he survived his wife, remainder to wife's heirs. Sprinkle v. Spainhour [N. C.] 62 SE 910. Husband held not to take fee by survivorship nor by virtue of Revisal 1905, § 946, making estates fees unless estate of less dignity was plainly intended. Id. Deed to grantee "and her heirs forever," to have and hold during life of grantee, with remainder to children, gave grantee life estate only. Triplett v. Williams [N. C.] 63 SE 79. To wife, "her heirs and assigns forever," in fee simple forever "so long as she shall remain a widow," gave widow only life estate, terminable on remarriage, though will contained no limitation over. Haring v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 389. "During her natural life, then to the heirs of her body, if any; if no chilrden, to her sisters," gave life estate. Johnson v. Smith, 108 Va. 725, 62 SE 958. To one for life, remainder to his issue, and, in default of issue, then over. Steele v. Korn, 137 Wis. 51, 118 NW 207. Grant to use of a designated person for life, then to use of a third person, no active duties being imposed on trustee, held within St. 1898, § 2073, giving legal estate to grantees entitled to possession and rents; and hence designated person took absolute legal estate for life, remainder to third person. Schumacher v. Draeger [Wis.] 119 NW 305.

Vested remainders: Will held to give like interests to grandchildren in certain property except as to time of possesion and to vest remainder in grandson on testator's death, and hence his interest was not contingent on his arriving at 25. Morton Trust Co. v. Chittenden [Conn.] 70 A 648. Will giving use and control to widow for life, with privilege of making arrangement with children so as to let any of them have their part before her death, and directing division among children equally after widow's death, held to create vested remainders in children on testator's death. Broas v. Broas, 153 Mich. 310, 15 Det. Leg. N. 488, 116 NW 1077. Will construed to give children living at testator's death a vested, not contingent, remainder distributively as tenants in common, subject only to termination of preceding trust during lives of widow and daughter. Trowbridge v. Coss, 126 App. Div. 679, 110 NYS 1108. That testator authorized sale after death of widow and daughter held not to indicate intention that children should not take vested interests. Id. Residue to widow for life or widowhood, then to children equally, children of any child who at that time might be deceased to take share parent would have taken, held to create vest-remainder in children. Genunge v. Murphy, 59 Misc. 381, 112 NYS 310. In trust to wife for life, and on her death property to go to children then living, trustee having power of sale, vested remainder in children at testator's [illegible] Joscher v. Wyckoff, 63 Misc. 414, 118 NYS 655. Will held to create vested remainder in trust which passed by devisee's will at his death before life tenant. Gillis v. Long, 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 1. Life estates to daughters, remainder in fee to their children, and over in default of children, gave vested remainuers to grandchildren living at testator's death and contingent remainders as to grandchildren not then in use. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119. Will held to create vested remainders in children, but subject to divestiture as to children dying before life tenant, so that children of any such child, taking under will and not as heir, were entitled to parent's share as against parent's grantee who purchased before death of life tenant. Richards v. Burbanks, 201 Mass. 253, 87 NE 575. To K for life, then to issue, and, in default of issue, to K's appointee by will, and in default of appointment, to C if she should survive K, held to give vested remainder in C subject to divestiture by K's having issue or exercising power of appointment. In re Haggerty, 128 App. Div. 479, 112 NYS 1017. To widow for life, and at her death to children "and in case any of my children shall have died" his share to go to his issue, if any, and in case of death of any child without issue his share to vest in surviving brothers and sisters, held to vest property in children at testator's death, but subject to divestiture by failure to survive life tenant. Schwartz v. Rehfuss, 129 App. Div. 630, 114 NYS 92. "And at her decrease I devise the same to her children same manner as if she died seised of it in her own right, to share and share alike," held gift to a class, which class would remain open for new members until death of life tenant, but members of which, who lived at testator's death, took vested remainders. Clark v. Morehous [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 307.

Contingent remainders: Remainder to "such child or children, they being the heirs of her body, as she (life tenant) may leave in life," held to create contingent remainder, vesting in such children only as survived life tenant. Smith v. Smith, 130 Ga. 532, 61 SE 114. To widow, and to children after her death, and, if she should not leave children, then to G and his heirs, held contingent to G and his heirs. Golladay v. Knock, 235 Ill. 412, 85 NE 649. Where widow's daughter and some of G's heirs predeceased widow, they took no interest. Id. Gift to one for life, with remainder to testator's next of kin, where life tenant is sole next of kin at death of testator, vests remainder in persons who answer description at termination of life estate, and renders remainder contingent. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386. Limitation to testatrix's nearest relatives should son who was life devisee die without children. Id. To unmarried daughter, and, on her death, to her issue if she should leave issue living at her death, created a contingent, not a vested remainder. Jailette v. Bell, 33 Ky. L. R. 159, 110 SW 298. To wife, but, "if she marries or ceases to be my widow, the farm then reverts to my children, to be equally divided between them, and at her death such farm to be divided between my surviving children and grandchildren, if any, whose parents are dead," gave contingent, not vested, remainders to children and grandchildren. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 211 Mo. 483, 110 SW 700. Remainders to son's children held contingent where sons had no children when will took effect. Hayward v. Spaulding [N. H.] 71 A 219. Remainder to issue held contingent, it being provided that, should life tenant die without issue, property should go over. Staton v. Godard, 148 N. C. 434, 62 SE 519.

Estates in common: Residue to children named and any after-born child held not to create joint tenancy so as to give shares of children dying before testator to survivors, but children took as tenants in common. In re Krummenacker, 112 NYS 596. See, also, Tenants in Common and Joint Tenants, 10 C. L. 1850.

Trust estates: See Trusts, 10 C. L. 1907.

Miscellaneous and plural limitations: Codicil held to change will which gave nephews land in fee, so that nephew's children took contingent remainders until birth, and vested remainders as born, subject to divestiture by death before parent, and so as to cut nephews' fee to life estate, and to provide an alternate devise in default of children living at death of nephews. Smith v. Smith [Ala.] 47 S 220. To L and A for life of L, remainder to A, but, should both die without issue, then all not previously disposed of by executor, should revert to testator's heirs at law, held to give joint life estate to L and A during life of L, with defeasible vested remainder to A, subject to divestiture on her death without issue during life of L, passing land to testator's heirs on A's death without issue during life of L and L's death without issue. Satterleld v. Tate [Ga.] 64 SE 60. To husband, but, if he should not survive testatrix, then to her brother, husband in case of his survival to have and hold property for life, then to will it to testatrix's brother, held to give husband life estate with remainder to the brother. Rooney v. Hurlbut [Kan.] 98 P 765. To two granddaughters, with provision that should either die survivor should have all, and reversion to testator's heirs should both die without issue, held to give son of granddaughter fee simple in one-half on mother's death, and vested remainder to other half subject to divestiture by death of other granddaughter leaving issue, heirs of testator acquiring no interest. Newland v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 328. Testator's heirs would also take nothing should "dying without issue" be held to refer to testator's death, for then granddaughters would have taken fee. Id. Residue to wife forever, but charged with certain money bequests and payment of three-fourths of what should remain at wife's death to others, and permission to wife to dispose of remaining fourth by will, or, if she made no will, such fourth to follow law of descent, held to give wife life estate in three-fourths and fee in one-fourth, with power to sell and dispose of so much of residue as should become necessary for her support. McClelland's Ex'x v. McClelland [Ky.] 116 SW 730. To son and his wife, and in case of death of son before his wife, then to wife and children, and if widow remarried, then absolutely to children, held to create estate in fee by entirety in son and wife, with limitation over by way of executory, devise in event of son's death before wife either before or after death of testatrix, so that on son's death fee would pass to widow and children equally, and if widow remarried her share would be divested in favor of children. Fischer v. Fischer [N. J.] 71 A 488. "All and every right, title and interest in and to Tusculum plantation and all its belongings" held sufficient to pass not only fee but also lesser rights, such as right to redemption money should any third person be entitled to redeem property. Rue v. Connel, 148 N. C. 302, this intention will not be defeated by inaccurate expressions,[34] such as the misuse of technical terms.[35] An estate given in decisive language will not be reduced by subsequent clauses not equally decisive [36] or by repugnant provisions,[37] nor will it be so

62 SE 306. Use of word "assigns" in granting clause of a deed imports intention to confer on grantee power of disposal. Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484. Will construed to create cross easements in a certain strip of land along rear of lots devised to wife and brother, and not undivided interests therein in fee simple. Whitelaw v. Rodney, 212 Mo. 540, 111 SW 560. "Undivided one-third fee simple interest and easement in and to" certain lots held to create both an undivided fee title in soil and easement thereon in favor of adjoining tracts held by parties in severalty. Thompson v. De Snyder [N. M.] 94 P 1014.

34. To two brothers for life, with remainders to their children, and in default of children of either, then to "survivor" or "surviving brother," with limitation over on both dying without children, held to necessarily imply cross remainders between strips of life tenants, "surviving" or "surviving brother" being held to mean "other" or "other brother," giving entire estate to sole surviving child of one of the brothers after death of both. Smith v. Smith [Ala.] 47 S 220.

35. Apparent and lawful intent will control technical terms. Williams v. Grimm [Ky.] 112 SW 839. Use of word "remainder" in habendum clause of deed held not conclusive that technical remainder was meant. Simonds v. Simonds, 199 Mass. 552, 85 NE 860.

36. In re Carney's Estate [Ind.] 86 NE 400. Where fee is given in unequivocal language in first clause of a will, it cannot be cut down to a life estate by subsequent clauses without express words or unmistakable intention. Pratt v. Saline Valley R. Co., 130 Mo. 175, 108 SW 1099. Not cut down by subsequent or ambiguous words inferential in intent. Jackson v. Littell, 213 Mo. 589, 112 SW 53. Intention must be clear (Ault v. Karch, 220 Pa. 366, 69 A 857), first taker being entitled to benefit of every implication (Robinson v. Jones [Pa.] 70 A 948). Attempt to create a trust either by positive or precatory words, though unsuccessful, may be sufficient to indicate intention to limit estate of first taker. Where trust failed for indefiniteness, remainder after devisee's life use went to intestate and not to devisee's heirs, though testator only "requested" that devisee will two-thirds to charity. Gilchrist v. Corliss [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 971, 118 NW 938. Codicil held to cut to life estate fee given by will proper to nephews by providing nephews should not sell but cultivate the land, and giving property to nephews' children, if any, at their deaths, and over should both die and leave no children. Smith v. Smith [Ala.] 47 S 220. Provision, after creation of fee, "should any of my younger children die before having or leaving any heir, then their shares to be divided between the remainder or surviving part of said four younger children," if intended to restrict daughter's estate, simply postponed vesting of fee until birth of issue. English v. McCrary [Ala.] 48 S 113. "Heir" held to mean "child," vesting estate in daughter absolute when she gave birth to a child, and extinguishing limitation over. Id. Gift over in case of death of any legatee held not applicable to residuary legatees. In re Richards' Estate [Cal.] 98 P 528. Absolute fee to railroad company held not reduced by description of premises as within location of roadbed, or by clause as to trestling of a pond. New York, B. & E. R. Co. v. Motil [Conn.] 71 A 563. Estate to sister and her heirs held not cut down by codicil directing testatrix's estate to be held together for sister's life, giving sister income for life, etc. Thomas v. Owens [Ga.] 62 SE 218. Entire estate to wife "for her sole use and benefit, to use the same for her and her children as she may see proper," held to vest fee. Schneiderhahn's Guardian v. Zeller, 33 Ky. L. R. 694, 110 SW 834. Fee not cut by devise of "estate remaining" at death of first taker, quoted words referring only to what should be undisposed of. Galligan v. McDonald, 200 Mass. 299, 86 NE 304. Not cut by provision giving devisee power to sell and dispose of property at any time. Tisdale v. Prather, 210 Mo. 402, 109 SW 41. Fee to wife not cut by inferential limitation over to son on wife's death. Jackson v. Littell, 211 Mo. 589, 112 SW 53. Meaningless provision for division on death of life tenant held not to cut down remainder given in fee. Hershey v. New York & Cleveland Gas Coal Co., 220 Pa. 651, 69 A 1046. Will held to give wife fee in land notwithstanding subsequent gifts declared in lieu of dower. Feuerstein v. Bertels, 221 Pa. 425, 70 A 804. Fee not reduced by clause providing for trustee and disposal of any part remaining at devisee's death. Hawley v. Watkins [Va.] 63 SE 560. Fee of third of a farm to each of three devisees held not cut by provision that one buy out the others and placing valuation on farm. In re Moore's Estate [Wis.] 120 NW 417.

37. Devise over of estate already devised in fee is void (Harkness v. Lisle [Ky.] 117 SW 264; Jackson v. Littell, 213 Mo. 589, 112 SW 53; Hawley v. Watkins [Va.] 63 SE 560), as where wife is given fee with limitation over of property undisposed of at her subsequent marriage or death (Becker v. Roth [Ky.] 115 SW 761). Devise absolute and entire in terms presumptively passes fee without words of inheritance rendering void any limitation over. Bradley v. Warren [Me.] 72 A 173. Devise to daughter and attempt to dispose of what might remain at her death held to give daughter fee absolute. Id. Fee simple created by granting clause of deed held not cut by repugnant clauses in prefatory part and habendum speaking of grantor's interest as a life estate. Dickson v. Van Hoose [Ala.] 47 S 718. Later of two repugnant clauses held to cut fee simple devised by earlier clause to life estate with remainder over under rule that later of two clauses in a will controls if clauses cannot be reconciled. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119. Where repugnant clauses cannot be reconciled, clause conferring greater estate controls. Hopkins v. Hopkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 673.

enlarged.[38] Many authorities hold that an estate is a fee simple if the holder is given an absolute power of disposition [39] as distinguished from a limited or contingent one,[40] and that limitations over are void, as repugnant;[41] but there are also jurisdictions in which this rule is rejected, or at least qualified.[42] After an absolute devise in fee, a devise over in case of death of the first taker, or his death without issue, is generally held to refer to his death in the lifetime of the testator [43] except

38. A life estate expressly created will not be enlarged to a fee by inference or implication or any language falling short of positive direction. Hasbrouck v. Knoblauch, 59 Misc. 99, 112 NYS 159. Life estate to wife held not enlarged by subsequent provisions as to "what remains," or by power of sale given widow as executrix. Bradshaw v. Butler, 33 Ky. L. R. 531, 110 SW 420.

39. Life estate with absolute power of disposition gives fee. McKnight v. McKnight [Tenn.] 115 SW 134. To wife for "her lifetime, to manage and dipose of as she may see cause," held to pass fee. Alsip v. Morgan, 33 Ky. L. R. 72, 109 SW 312. Held, if daughter did not take fee under general provisions of will, power to sell and dispose of land as she saw fit carried full property interest. Tisdale v. Prather, 210 Mo. 402, 109 SW 41. Suggestion as to investment of proceeds of a sale if desired held not to restrict devisee's power of disposal as owner of fee. Id. Devisee held entitled to mortgage the land. Id.

40. Life tenant's limited power to appoint the fee does not enlarge his life estate. Appointees held not entitled to crops growing at time of life tenant's death. Keays v. Blinn, 234 Ill. 121, 84 NE 629, afg. 137 Ill. App. 474. To wife for life, with right to use any part thereof at her discretion, and power to sell any of it, held not to confer on wife absolute power of disposition so as to give her fee simple, but to give only life estate, vesting remainder over as to property not disposed of. In re Pierson, 58 Misc. 94, 110 NYS 476. To wife for life, with absolute power to dispose of income and so much of principal as she might think necessary for her support, held not absolute gift in fee simple. Hasbrouk v. Knoblauch, 59 Misc. 99, 112 NYS 159. Widow held to take only life estate and power to use principal. In re Davis' Will, 59 Misc. 310, 112 NYS 265. Power in widow to absolutely control and dispose of income and so much of principal as she might deem necessary for support held not to give fee. Hasbrouck v. Bookstaver, 114 NYS 949. Power of disposal not being absolute, Real Property Law (Laws 1896, p. 579, c. 547), § 129, enlarging life tenant's estate to a fee for benefit of creditors, purchasers and encumbrances where life tenant has absolute power of disposal, but making it subject to future estates limited thereon if power is not exercised is inapplicable (Id.), but even if will gives absolute power, subsequent estate takes effect under statute if power is not exercised (Id.). Real Property Law (Laws 1896, p. 580, c. 542), § 133, providing that every power by means of which grantee is enabled in his lifetime to dispose of fee is absolute, only makes power, not grantee's estate, absolute. Id. Widow's power of disposition held not absolute, being only power to dispose of property by will, and, this not having been exercised, property went to testator's heirs. McKnight v. McKnight [Tenn.] 115 SW 134. A life estate may be coupled with a limited power of disposition which, when regularly exercised, will enlarge estate to a fee in grantee. Where life tenant was given power of sale while she remained unmarried or if she should become a widow, and she conveyed while yet unmarried, grantee took fee. Johnson v. Smith, 108 Va. 725, 62 SE 958.

41. Life estate with unqualified power of disposal is equal to fee and limitation over is void. Bradley v. Warren [Me.] 72 A 173. To wife, to be used and enjoyed by her during her life or widowhood in such quantities as might be requisite for her comfortable maintenance, whatever should remain to go over, held to give fee, limitation over being held void for repugnancy. Rolley v. Rolley's Ex'x [Va.] 63 SE 988. To wife with full power of disposal, but any property remaining undisposed of to go to testator's heirs, held to give wife fee. Commonwealth v. Stoll's Adm'r [Ky.] 116 SW 687, withdrawing, on rehearing, opinion in 114 SW 279. Will construed not to give fee with absolute power of disposition and attempt to destroy same by limitation over; hence wife took only life estate. McClelland's Ex'x v. McClelland [Ky.] 116 SW 730.

42. Devise giving only life estate may be coupled with unlimited power of disposal (Paxton v. Paxton [Iowa] 119 NW 284), and vest remainder in fee at once as to whatever may not be disposed of, subject only to life estate (Id.); compare In re Weien's Will [Iowa] 116 NW 791. To widow, to be used and enjoyed by her as she might choose during her natural life, and, at her death, any property that should remain to be divided among children, held to pass life estate only, with power of disposition, so as to cut off children's interest. Paxton v. Paxton [Iowa] 119 NW 284. Absolute power of disposal in first devisee gives him fee unless estate is expressly given for life only. Pratt v. Saline Valley R. Co., 130 Mo. 175, 108 SW 1099. If only life estate is devised, power to sell and dispose of property at any time does not enlarge it to a fee. Tisdale v. Prather, 210 Mo. 402, 109 SW 41. Power of disposition does not enlarge life estate into fee where there is a limitation over of what may be undisposed of, devisee taking only life estate, with power of disposal during continuance of such estate for his benefit. Parker v. Travers [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 612.

43. Devise to three daughters, without right to convey except by joint consent, with provision that on death of any daughter without issue her share should pass to the others as tenants in common, subject to same provision as to alienation, held to give daughters a fee simple. Ault v. Karch, 220 Pa. 366, 69 A 857. Residue to three children, provision for appraisement should any desire his money out of estate, and direction where a different intent is clear,[44] as where the estate is preceded by another one for life or years.[45] Estates will vest as early as the language of the grant or devise will permit,[46] but, under a direction for payment to or division among a class, only that, should either die without lawful heir, his share should fall to last named heir or heirs held to create fee simple. Robinson v. Jones [Pa.] 70 A 948. Limitations over as to children dying without issue held to refer to death before testator, but applicable as well to remainder interests of children as to their immediate gifts. Lumpkin v. Lumpkin [Md.] 70 A 238. In devise or bequest to one, and, "in case of his death," to another, "in case of death" refers to death before death of testator if context gives no explanation. Fischer v. Fischer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 488. Devise to daughter in terms sufficient to pass fee, followed by proviso that in case of her death property should be sold and divided equally among other surviving heirs, gave daughter fee where she survived testator. Aneschaensel v. Twyman [Ind. App.] 85 NE 788. In devise to children absolutely and in equal shares, but, by concluding sentence, should any of testator's sons die without issue, his or their shares should revert to testator's children then living, "die without issue" meant death without issue during testator's life, though statute provided that every contingent limitation made to depend on any person dying without heir should take effect when such person dies without heir living at time of death, unless otherwise expressly and plainly declared. Frank v. Frank [Tenn.] 111 SW 1119. All property to F, but, should he die without issue, then to a charitable institution, gave fee to F where he survived testator. St. Paul's Sanitarium v. Freeman [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 443.

44. Phrase "in case of" and similar expressions, referring to death of prior legatee in connection with some collateral event, contemplate happening of contingency after, as well as before, death of testator. Fischer v. Fischer [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 488. To son and wife, and, in case son should die before wife, then to wife and children, and, if wife remarried, then to children absolutely, held to refer to death of son before or after death of testator. Id. To widow for life, then to grandchild for life, remainder to heirs of her body and, in default of such heirs, then to a niece, with direction for payment to grandchild on arrival at 21, or to heirs of her body, if any, after her decease, but that property should not be delivered unless she had heirs, held not to vest fee in grandchild where she died without issue, though having passed 21. Cone v. Kent, 128 App. Div. 409, 113 NYS 37. Rule that in case of devise in fee, but in case of death to another, refers to death in testator's lifetime, has no application where a point of time for distribution is mentioned other than death of testator, or where a life estate intervenes, or where context indicates contrary intent. In re Salisbury's Will, 61 Misc. 550, 115 NYS 976. "All property, real, personal and mixed, that I may own and be possessed of at time of my death," but in subsequent paragraph devise over if first taker should "die without issue," held to create estate, subject to be defeated by death without issue at any time. St. Paul's Sanitarium v. Freeman [Tex.] 117 SW 425, rvg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 443.

45. Where, after granting of a life estate and remainder, it is provided that should remaindermen die without children or issue then the property shall go over to another, words "dying without children or issue" refer to death of remainderman before termination of particular estate. Bradshaw v. Butler, 33 Ky. L. R. 531, 110 SW 420. Where remainderman survived termination of life estate, she took fee. Id. To M for life, then to her issue, but, if she should die without issue, to L and E for their lives and then over, held not to give M's children vested remainder prior to M's death and M leaving no issue her surviving, property went to L and E as life tenants, and not to M's husband. Staton v. Godard, 148 N. C. 434, 62 SE 519. To husband, then to plaintiff, and, should he die without issue, then to charity, held to relate to time of plaintiff's not testator's death. St. Paul's Sanitarium v. Freeman [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 443.

46. Early vesting favored. Webbe v. Webbe, 234 Ill. 442, 84 NE 1054; Taylor v. Richards, 153 Mich. 667, 15 Det. Leg. N. 565, 117 NW 208; Dickerson v. Dickerson, 211 Mo. 483, 110 SW 700; Clark v. Morehous [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 307; Trowbridge v. Cass, 126 App. Div. 679, 110 NYS 1108. Estates will vest in interest at death of testator unless some later time is clearly expressed or necesarily implied. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292. Creation of a trust does not necessarily prevent estate of beneficiary from vesting. Remainders held vested in testator's children whether or not direction that in case widow should remarry rents should be used for their support and education should be considered a trust. Id. Farm to devisee on his arrival at 25, control to be in executors in meantime, and corpus transferred should devisee "show himself worthy," held to pass entire estate to devisee and executors, contingency applying only to time of full enjoyment. Taylor v. Richards, 153 Mich. 667, 15 Det. Leg. N. 565, 117 NW 208. Remainders will be held vested rather than contingent if words used in their creation can be so construed. Freeman's Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 185; Doscher v. Wyckoff, 63 Misc. 414, 113 NYS 655. Any reasonable doubt will be resolved in favor of vested as against contingent remainder. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 211 Mo. 483, 110 SW 700. Law favors vesting of remainders absolutely and at earliest possible moment and presumes that words of postponement relate to enjoyment and not to vesting. In re Carney's Estate [Ind.] 86 NE 400. Provision that share of child who should die before distribution of testator's estate as provided in will should descend as provided by law where a person dies intestate held not to prevent vesting of remainders at testator's death. Id. Devise for life, remainder to devisee's children, but, if devisee should die "without issue and unmarried," property should go to her brothers and sisters, held to vest in life tenant and remaindermen on those who are members of the class at the time fixed for payment or division take, and their interests do not vest until that time [47] except where payment or division is deferred merely for the purpose of giving another person a preceding life use,[48] and there is a conflict as to whether words of survivorship in a will devising a life estate and remainder refer to death of testator or to that of the life tenant.[49] Unless a contrary intention is expressed, a devise given in default of an appointment vests on the death of the testator, subject to divestiture by exercise of the power,[50] and, if the power is exercised as to only a part of the estate which was subject thereto, the residue remains vested.[51] The tendency is to construe a grant or devise to a person and his children as creating a life estate in the parent, with remainders to the children,[52] but an estate to one for life, remainder to him and his heirs, passes the remainder to him, and not to his heirs by purchase.[53] A mere limitation over should the first taker of an estate die without issue or descendants is insufficient to create an estate by implication in the issue or descendants,[54] but, if the intention is clear, an estate will arise.[55] devisee's marriage and birth of issue. Fisher v. Lott, 33 Ky. L. R. 609, 110 SW 822. "And on her (wife's) death, I give and bequeath capital of said fund unto such of my children as shall survive me," held not of substance as to time, so as to prevent immediate vesting. Bergmann v. Lord, 194 N. Y. 70, 86 NE 828.

Vesting postponed: Will held not to vest residue until property not specifically devised had been converted into money by executors and period of distribution had arrived. Barnes v. Johnston, 233 Ill. 620, 84 NE 610. One devisee having died before time for distribution, his share went to his daughter under terms of will, and free from claim of devisee's widow. Id. To wife for life, and on her death to children and survivor of them, issue of deceased child to take parent's share, but to wife absolutely if neither child survived her or died leaving lawful issue, held not to vest interests in children until death of wife. In re Salisbury's Will, 61 Misc. 550, 115 NYS 976.

47. Children who are mentioned by name take as individuals and not as a class. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292. To wife, to hold until youngest child should be 21, then to sell and divide proceeds between children and descendants, latter taking parent's share, held not to vest children's shares until youngest child become of age, barring any interest in husband of child who died before vesting. Ross v. Ware's Adm'r [Ky.] 116 SW 241. To widow for life, with direction that executor divide remainder among testator's sisters and brothers or their heirs, and authorization to sell for such purpose, held to vest remainder at widow's death. In re Tallmadge's Estate, 113 NYS 621. Rule that bequest in form of direction to pay or divide in future vests immediately, if payment is postponed for convenience of fund or estate, or merely to let in some other interest, held not applicable where realty and personalty were given widow for life and executor was directed after death of widow to sell and "distribute equally to my legal heirs." Barr v. Denney, 79 Ohio St. 358, 87 NE 267. Direction held to create only contingent interests, not vesting until time for distribution. Id.

48. Share to wife for life, subject to divestiture in favor of children should widow remarry, and to children on widow's death, held to vest children's interests on death of testator and not on death of widow. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292.

49. In order to vest remainder early, words of survivorship will be held to refer to testator's death unless contrary intention is clear. To wife for life, then to be sold and proceeds divided "between my surviving children and children of any of my deceased children," held to vest remainder at death of testator. Crossley v. Leslie, 130 Ga. 782, 61 SE 851. Survivorship between devisees never relates to testator's death unless there is no other time to which it can be referred (Smith v. Smith [Ala.] 47 S 220), but naturally relates to death on which previous estate terminates and on which new estate is limited (Id.).

50. Power of appointment does not create estate or hold it in abeyance. Freeman's Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 185. Existence of an unexecuted power of appointment in the holder of the precedent estate does not prevent vesting of future estate limited in default of execution of power. In re Haggerty, 128 App. Div. 479, 112 NYS 1017. Trust to daughter for life, then to her appointees and, in default of appointment, to daughter's issue, held to give vested remainder to issue. In re Chapman's Estate, 61 Misc. 593, 115 NYS 981.

51. Where appointment was of only a life estate, remainder passed to devisees under will of donor of power. Freeman's Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 185.

52. Grant for use and benefit of a wife and children in terms declared to be a provision for the family held to give wife only life estate, remainder to children, including afterborn ones. Tally v. Ferguson [W. Va.] 62 SE 456.

53. Ray v. Grube, 115 NYS 737.

54. Estate for life, and over in default of issue, does not imply remainder in life tenant's issue. Bond v. Moore, 236 Ill. 576, 86 NE 386. Devise to son, and over should he die without lineal descendants, held insufficient to create estate by implication in lineal descendants (Anderson v. United Realty Co., 79 Ohio St. 23, 86 NE 644), but son took fee defeasible on death without lineal

Of course, one cannot in his own right confer upon another a greater estate than he himself has,[56] but by statute it is often provided that, where a grantor has assumed to convey a greater interest than he had, the conveyance shall transfer whatever he could convey.[57] Where lands are granted or devised to two or more persons as joint tenants, and any one is incapable of taking, the whole estate goes to the others.[58]

The rule in Shelley's case See 10 C. L. 1459 gives the ancestor the whole estate when limited to him and his heirs or the heirs of his body,[59] provided the two estates are of the same quality;[60] but words of progeny will not render it applicable unless used in the sense of heirs or heirs of body generally.[61] "Children" is a word of purchase[62] except where other words show that it is used in the sense of heirs.[63] descendants, and, in event of descendants, fee became absolute and free from interests in descendants (Id.).

55. Realty and personalty in trust to daughter for life, remainder to her brothers and sisters should she die without issue, held to give remainder to issue should she leave any. Close v. Farmers' L. & T. Co. [N. Y.] 87 NE 1005.

56. Conveyance from life tenant purporting to grant entire estate passes only interest of life tenant. Satterfield v. Tate [Ga.] 64 SE 60. Railway company purchasing right of way from a life tenant acquires only title possessed by grantor, notwithstanding payment of full value and deed purporting to convey fee. Turner v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 130 Mo. 535, 109 SW 101. Remaindermen held to have cause of action after death of life tenant for damages due to continued occupancy of railroad company. Id. One who takes from holder of defeasible estate takes subject to the contingency. Vested remainder defeasible on holder's death without issue during life tenancy. Satterfield v. Tate [Ga.] 64 SE 60. Purchaser took subject to contingency that remainderman should not survive life tenant. Schwartz v. Rehfuss, 129 App. Div. 630, 114 NYS 92. Where remainder was to be divested on death of remainderman without issue pending life estate, remainderman's grantee would take title if remainderman survived. Small v. Hockinsmith [Ala.] 48 S 541. If remainderman died without issue before life tenant, remainder went over. Id.

57. Where grantor had previously sold the land to another, his lien for purchase money held not "a right or estate in lands," within Am. Code 1892, § 2444, providing that conveyances purporting to convey a greater estate than grantor has shall convey as much as he could lawfully convey. Howell v. Hill [Miss.] 48 S 177. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 626, providing that alienations purporting to convey greater estates than grantor has shall carry so much as grantor might lawfully convey, conveyance of fee by tenant for life or years operates to transfer his own interest only. Kennedy v. Pearson [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 280.

58. Conveyance by wife direct to husband and daughter passed legal title to entire estate to daughter. McCord v. Bright [Ind. App.] 87 NE 654.

59. Held applicable: In trust to A for life then to convey to A's appointee or in default of appointment to her heirs at law. McFall v. Kirkpatrick, 236 Ill. 281, 86 NE 139. Beneficiary could convey equitable title and exclude heirs. Id. To grantee "for life and to her heirs at her decease," "intention being to convey" to grantee "a life estate with remainder in fee to the heirs of her own body." Daniels v. Dingman [Iowa] 118 NW 373. Life estate and, on failure of descendants, to "such persons as would inherit as heirs" in case of intestacy, held to give fee to first taker. Cook v. Councilman [Md.] 72 A 404. Income to son for life and on his death title to vest in his heirs at law held within rule in Shelly's Case though son was to pay rent during life of testator's widow, and also taxes and assessments, and though executor held title, but only on dry trust. Marsh v. Platt, 221 Pa. 431, 70 A 802. To M and A, with provision against alienation and direction that on their death property should revert to their "heirs." Seay v. Cockrell [Tex.] 115 SW 1160; Id. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 652.

60. Where trustee took legal title for purpose of conveying to life beneficiary's appointee by will or to her heirs at law in default of appointment, limitation to heirs was of same kind and quality as life estate, giving life beneficiary the equitable fee. McFall v. Kirkpatrick, 236 Ill. 281, 86 NE 139.

61. Rule not applicable where words "children," "issue" and "heirs" are used interchangeably as meaning "children." Stisser v. Stisser, 235 Ill. 207, 85 NE 240. To H "for and only for and during her natural life, and to the heirs of her body begotten, in fee simple, to take effect as to such heirs at the death of said H, their mother," held grant of life estate with remainder to specific persons, children of H. Ault v. Hillyard, 138 Iowa, 239, 115 NW 1030. Term "lawful issue" does not, like technical word "heirs," necessarily bring grant under the rule. Hopkins v. Hopkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 673. To son and his heirs, followed by provision giving son life estate, with remainder to children, held controlled by rule in Shelley's case, "heirs" meaning heirs in general. Id.

62. Sechler v. Eshelman [Pa.] 70 A 910. Rule in Shelley's case inapplicable to conveyance to one for life, remainder to children. Ault v. Hillyard, 138 Iowa, 239, 115 NW 1030.

63. To niece for life, then "to her children and their heirs and assigns forever," held to limit remainder to heirs of body making "children" word of limitation. Sechler v. Eshelman [Pa.] 70 A 910. Ultimate gift over to heirs in default of children held to enlarge effect of word "children" antecedently used and show general intent that estate

The rule does not apply where the limitation over is by way of contingent remainder,[64] and a spendthrift trust is not within its operation.[65] It is an inflexible rule of property not intended to effectuate the intention of the parties [66] and has therefore been abolished or modified in many states.[67]

§ 4. Covenants and restraints. A. Restrictive covenants [68]—See 10 C. L. 1460 are very often building restrictions.[69] Conditions restraining the free use or alienation of realty, though viewed unfavorably, are upheld, if not unreasonable or repugnant to plain provisions of law [70] and will be enforced by injunction or other proper procedure.[71] To constitute a covenant, a restriction or promise must be based on a consideration [72] and must in some way benefit the party seeking to enforce it.[73] Acceptance of a deed poll binds the grantee to the performance of covenants therein contained,[74] but a covenant may be of such character as to exclude any presumption of liability on part of covenantor after he has parted with title and possession.[75] A grantee's covenant may be enforced against a subsequent grantee though it is not one technically running with the land.[76]

67. Life estate with remainder to heirs of body held to vest remainder in children on their birth. Peck v. Ayres [Kan.] 100 P 283. Under 1 Gen. St. 1895, p. 1195, § 11, an estate in fee tail gives ancestor an estate for life with remainder in fee to heirs of body. Robeson v. Duncan [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 685. Rule in Shelley's case was abolished by Act 1851-52, p. 113, c. 91, § 1 (Shannon's Code, § 3674), providing that heirs or heirs of body of person given life estate with remainder to his heirs or heirs of his body shall take as purchasers (Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484); hence grant of life estate with remainder to his heirs gives heirs a remainder interest if grantor so intended (Id.). Rule was abolished by Gen. Laws 1896, c. 201, § 6, providing for life estate in first taker with remainder in fee to his heirs and c. 203, § 10, providing that devise for life and children of issue generally, in fee, shall vest only life estate, remainder to children or issue generally agreeably to will. Nightingale v. Phillips [R. I.] 72 A 220. In force in Maryland. Cook v. Councilman [Md.] 72 A 404. Also in Texas. Seay v. Cockrell [Tex.] 115 SW 1160.

General demurrer held not to raise question of ultra vires to impose restriction. Id. Charging variant fees depending on visitor's intention to enter certain parts of a pier or certain amusements thereon held violation of restriction in deed confining owner to charging "only an entrance fee." Atlantic City v. Associated Realties Corp. [N. J. Err. App.] 72 A 61. Burden is on grantee who denies obligation of covenant in his deed. Required to establish defense by fair preponderance of evidence where he denied obligation of covenant not to build any fence east of a certain line. Beck v. Heckman [Iowa] 118 NW 510.

72. Covenant to use property only for church purposes held not supported by consideration, property not being appurtenant to any other property nor beneficial to grantor, and covenant having been inserted merely by grantor's officers without authority and without deduction in price. Rector, etc., of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church v. Rector, etc., of Church of the Transfiguration, 114 NYS 623.

73. Restriction in form of covenant that property should be used only for church purposes held not enforceable as a covenant where enforcement would not benefit, nor violation thereof injure grantor. Rector, etc., of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church v. Rector, etc., of Church of the Transfiguration, 114 NYS 623,

75. Grantee who covenants to perpetually maintain a division fence is not liable on covenant after parting with title and possession. Sexauer v. Wilson, 136 Iowa, 357, 113 NW 941.

76. Reservation of right to sue for prior damages to easements held enforceable against subsequent grantee, it being sufficient he had notice. Maurer v. Friedman. 25 App. Div. 754, 110 NYS 320. Purchaser with notice held bound by existing covenant for an easement, regardless of whether in law it ran with land. Bryan v. Grosse [Cal.] 99 P 499.

(§ 4) B. Covenants running with the land.[77]—See 10 C. L. 1460—In order that a covenant may run with the land, its performance must touch and concern the land or some right or easement annexed or appurtenant thereto [78] and tend necessarily to enhance its value or render it more convenient or beneficial to the owners or occupants.[79] In determining whether a covenant runs with the land, the material inquiries are, first, whether the parties meant to charge the land; [80] and, second, whether the burden is one that can be imposed consistently with policy and principle.[81] The use of the technical word "assigns" is not essential,[82] for intention to Co., 128 App. Div. 388, 112 NYS 938. Covenant not to obstruct windows and light to prejudice of adjoining owner. O'Connor v. Bauer, 127 App. Div. 854, 111 NYS 869. A covenant to convey to lessees their heirs and assigns. Hollander v. Central Metal & Supply Co. [Md.] 71 A 442. Landlord's covenant to repair. Silberberg v. Trachtenberg, 58 Misc. 536, 109 NYS 814. Where one transfers a half interest in a fence and stipulates for himself, his heirs and assigns, to make the necessary repairs, such covenant probably runs with the land. Ready v. Schmith [Or.] 95 P 817. Agreement to pay for use of party wall held to run with land, covenantor expressly binding his grantees and agreeing that covenant should so run. Morris v. Burr, 59 Misc. 259, 112 NYS 243.

Held not to run: Promise to pay for timber rights held not enforceable by subsequent purchaser of land against subsequent assignees of such rights, though conveyance of timber rights recited that all covenants and agreements should run with land, especially where negotiable notes evidencing purchase price were outstanding. Warner, 153 Mich. 140, 116 NW 994. Grantee's agreement to assume and pay an existing mortgage does not run with land though found in connection with covenants of seisin and against incumbrances. Clement v. Willett, 105 Minn. 267, 117 NW 491. Lessee's covenant not to sell any other beer than that manufactured by a certain brewing company held not to run with land but held merely an independent, unilateral and unenforcible promise. Fortune Bros. Brew. Co. v. Shields, 137 Ill. App. 77. Provision in deed that it was based on consideration in part that grantor should never be required to grade curb or build a pavement on street for which land was conveyed held personal to grantor so as not to relieve his grantee of remaining land from obligation to construct a sidewalk at direction of city council. City of Richmond v. Bennett, 33 Ky. L. R. 279, 109 SW 904. A deed, not signed by the grantee, conveying land in consideration and on condition that the grantee construct a basin on the land but containing nothing which can be construed as either a covenant with the grantor and his assigns, or a covenant by the grantee for himself and his assigns, creates no covenant running with the land. Dawson v. Western Maryland R. Co., 107 Md. 70, 68 A 301. Railroad company's covenant to grant passes to grantor of right of way. Munro v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 128 App. Div. 388, 112 NYS 938. Agreement between railroad and street railroad companies whereby latter was to maintain street crossing held not to run with land so as to render foreclosure purchaser of street railroad company's properties liable thereon. Evansville & S. I. Traction Co. v. Evansville Belt R. Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 21.

82. Held in view of decisions since Spencer's case, 5 Coke, 16, 1 Smith's Leading cases, that it ought not to be said that "assigns" as a technical word is or ever has been essential at common law to covenant running with land as to things not yet in charge the land may be shown by other language in the deed [88] and is generally to be ascertained from the tenor of the instrument, the thing to be done, the period of continuance, and the like.[94] Where a contract expressly designates which of its covenants shall run with the land all others will be held not to run.[85] A covenant imposing a burden will run with the land as readily as one conferring a benefit.[86] A covenant which runs with the land is binding on both the burdened land and the person of the owner thereof [87] and favors both the benefited land and whoever shows privity of estate.[88]

(§ 4) C. Restraints.[89]—See 10 C. L. 1460—The rights of an owner of a specified legal estate are defined by law, and attempts to create repugnant restraints are futile,[90] but a donor may create such equitable interests as he may desire without regard to rights incidental to legal estates.[91]

Restraints on alienation are enforcible if reasonable and consistent with the estate conferred [92] and provided they do not violate the rule against perpetuities.[93]

§ 5. Rents and charges.[94]—See 10 C. L. 1460—Where by reason of a widow's renunciation of her husband's will she becomes the owner in fee of a portion of lands devised to others, she also becomes entitled to a corresponding portion of the rents from such lands falling due after testator's death.[95]

Lexington Turf Club [Ky.] 113 SW 814. Widow who has life estate with power of disposition for her benefit, but subject to divestiture on remarriage, cannot defeat effect of remarriage by prior conveyance merely for purpose of cutting of remainder. Parker v. Travers [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 612. Unauthorized lease by life tenant giving lessee right to remove sand and gravel from shore of land held not ratified by subsequent deeds to land by life tenant and remaindermen providing they were subject to the lease and referring to its record. Potomac Dredging Co. v. Smoot [Md.] 69 A 507. Evidence insufficient to show that life tenants conveyed lands not for reinvestment, and purchaser had knowledge thereof, so as to entitle remaindermen to recover on ground that lands were conveyed in violation of will giving power to sell for reinvestment. Whitfield v. Lyon [Miss.] 46 S 545. Though life tenants had power to sell only for purposes of reinvestment, they could mortgage part of land for purposes of paying taxes where they had no other resource, so that title under mortgage held fee. 11. If tenant pays year's rent to life tenant, payment is good as against remaindermen. Butt v. Story [Ga. App.] 63 SE 658. Life tenant's taking of negotiable note for year's rent and subsequent transfer thereof to a third person is equivalent to payment as between undertenant and remaindermen (Id.), but not taking and transfer of a non-negotiable note (Id.).

12. If life tenant does not, in law, collect year's rent and dies before expiration of year, a devise of the fee of land carries crops growing at testator's death does not apply where devisor is only life tenant and merely exercises a power to appoint the fee.[13] After allowing emblements to the life tenant,[14] the remaindermen are entitled to the use and occupation of the land on termination of the life tenancy.[15] Statutory proceedings are often authorized for partition[16] for the purpose of selling realty in which there are several estates or interests and reinvesting the proceeds in other realty.[17]

Possession is not adverse to remaindermen See 10 C. L. 1462 or reversioners pending the life tenancy,[18] and limitations will not ordinarily run against them until death of the life tenant,[19] nor can they be barred by laches until that time[20] or by estoppel;[21] but, by statute, remaindermen may have the right pending the life estate to sue to quiet title or to remove a cloud therefrom,[22] and in such case limitations will run from the time such right accrues.[23]

Remaindermen's interest in life estate of a surviving spouse will not support ejectment during life tenancy, and limitations will not run against such action until demise of surviving spouse. Hobson v. Huxtable, 79 Neb. 334, 116 NW 278. That title to five-sixths interest in certain land had been lost to remaindermen by limitations held not to bar recovery by them of the one-sixth which was subject to a life estate and as to which limitations did not run until life tenant's death. Schnabel v. McNeill [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 558. Not estopped by participation in distribution of estate. Id. Where devise to widow amounted to only a life estate, terminable on her remarriage, and widow sold the land, limitations did not run against heirs' action to recover land from purchaser until remarriage or death of widow. Haring v. Shelton [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 389.

20. Not barred from suing to reform deed held by parent on ground it gave parent only a life estate, with remainder to complainant, by failure to assert title against purchasers from parent. Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484.

21. That married woman claiming remainder failed to assert same against purchasers of land for nearly twenty-five years, though she lived within five miles of property, held no estoppel. Teague v. Sowder [Tenn.] 114 SW 484.

22. Where surviving husband took life estate in wife's property and wife's heirs took vested remainders, heirs could maintain suit to quiet title pending husband's life estate, by virtue of §§ 57, 58, 59, c. 73, Comp. St. 1907 (sections 4814-4816). Hobson v. Huxtable, 79 Neb. 334, 116 NW 278.

23. Ten years held bar to such action. Hobson v. Huxtable, 79 Neb. 334, 116 NW 278. As to remaindermen under disability, statute will not run until removal of disability (Id.), but fact that one remainderman is under disability will not toll statute as to others not within exception (Id.).

24. Duty of life tenant to pay taxes. Boon v. Root, 137 Wis. 451, 119 NW 121.

pairs.[25] Improvements made by a life tenant inure to the benefit of the remaindermen.[26] A reversion on discontinuance of public or quasi public uses for which land was conveyed does not carry with it permanent improvements made by the grantee for such uses.[27]

§ 7. Rights and remedies between third persons and present and future tenants.[28]—See 10 C. L. 1463—A life tenant cannot recover for the wrongful cutting of timber on the land[29] except for resulting injury to his use and enjoyment of the property.[30] Though remaindermen are not entitled to possession until expiration of the preceding estate,[31] they may sue to obtain an adjudication of their rights and interests, where adverse claims are asserted by persons in possession.[32] Where an estate is vested, subject only to contingent rights in persons yet unborn, the living owners represent the whole estate for purposes of litigation respecting it.[33] The fact that a life tenant dies shortly after a sale by him of his interest does not relieve the purchaser from the obligation of his agreement.[34] Questions pertaining to the sale and conveyance of real estate generally,[35] the competency of grantors or devisors,[36] mistake,[37] fraud or undue influence,[38] and the right to have conveyances canceled[39] or reformed,[40] are fully treated elsewhere and also what interests may be reached by creditors.[41]

Where lands are conveyed in trust, with directions to pay income to one for life with remainder over, person entitled to income is equitable tenant for life, subject to duties of life tenant, including payment of taxes and interest on incumbrances. In re Morton's Estate [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 680. Where trust estate consists in part of improved revenue producing property, and in part of unimproved property, life tenant must pay taxes on unimproved property from income derived from revenue producing property so far as it will go. Id. Will held not to set apart proceeds of sale of unimproved property for satisfaction of taxes and interest. Id. On accounting under will directing division of real and personal estate and payment of income therefrom to life beneficiaries, succession taxes were properly chargeable to principal account, and realty taxes to income account. Bishop v. Bishop [Conn.] 71 A 583. As to duty of life tenant to pay insurance, see 33 L. R. A. 239; 44 L. R. A. 711.

25. It is duty of life tenant to preserve property by making ordinary repairs (Hamilton v. Hamilton [Iowa] 115 NW 1012), and he cannot decide for himself as to necessity of resorting to corpus for purpose of obtaining money for repairs or with which to discharge existing incumbrances (Id.). Held not entitled to sell part of property or encumber same. Id.

26. Remaindermen occupying land with life tenant and under her held not entitled to reimbursement from the other remaindermen for permanent improvements they had placed on the land. Carter v. Carter, 234 Ill. 507, 85 NE 292.

27. Lot conveyed for purpose of erecting and maintaining railroad station. Young v. Oviatt, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 603. Owner held not entitled to injunction restraining removal of building. Id.

§ 8. Proof of title to realty.[42] See 10 C. L. 1464—The general rules of evidence apply,[43] in addition to the principles here given and such as are more or less peculiar to particular actions involving realty.[44] Though where the parties claim through a common source of title,[45] the one who has the burden must connect himself with that source by a complete chain of transfers,[46] he need not trace his title farther back,[47] since adverse parties cannot impeach the title of a person under whom they both claim.[48] Ancient deeds are admissible without proof of executions,[49] but not mere copies or records thereof.[50] By statute, records of deeds are admissible in certain cases,[51] as where the originals are lost,[52] and parol evidence may be resorted to where it appears that deeds or records are lost or destroyed.[53] The mere fact that a person is occupying a parcel of land is not evidence of claim under any particular deed,[54] but where real estate or an interest therein is acquired by appropriation, and no paper title is in existence, proof of possession and use is prima facie evidence of title,[55] and ownership of realty for injury to which an action is brought is

46. That defendant also introduced a deed relied on by plaintiff as a link in latter's chain back to common source held not to render unnecessary proof by plaintiff that grantors therein were either heirs, devisees, or grantors of next preceding grantee, the deed not being a link in defendant's chain. San Antonio Mach. & Supply Co. v. Campbell [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 770.

47. Title need not be traced back of common source. Sloan v. Chitwood [Mo.] 116 SW 1086.

48. Defendants in action for cutting timber held to claim under plaintiff and his grantor, so that plaintiffff was not required to prove title. McKoy v. Cape Fear Lumber Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 699. Where both parties claimed title under same person, and plaintiff as heir sought to set aside defendant's deed on ground of incompetency of grantor, defendant could not attack ancestor's title or show that deed to him had not been properly attested. Gable v. Gable, 130 Ga. 689, 61 SE 595.

49. Held not necessary to prove identity of signors of ancient conveyance as proprietors, same being presumed. Foote v. Brown [Conn.] 70 A 699.

50. Rule admitting in evidence ancient deeds without proof of execution does not apply to copies or records. McCleery v. Lewis [Me.] 70 A 540.

51. Record of purported deed is no evidence that such deed was in fact executed and delivered when party offering such record claims as grantee or heir of grantee named in record. Rev. St. c. 84, § 125, making such records evidence, does not include such cases, but applies only to prior deeds. McCleery v. Lewis [Me.] 70 A 540.

52. Rule that copies of records of deeds are admissible when originals are lost applies only where it appears that there was in fact an original executed and delivered. McCleery v. Lewis [Me.] 70 A 540. If grantees or heirs cannot produce immediate deeds, they must produce evidence aliunde record that such deeds were in fact executed and delivered. Id.

53. Parol evidence of recognition of deed by grantor and grantee is competent on issue of its existence. Evidence of admissions, and acts of ownership, including receipt of condemnation money, held to prove existence of deeds. Vincent v. Means, 207 Mo. 709, 106 SW 8. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, p. 465, c. 30, § 12, providing that an administrator's deed need not contain copy of judgment under which it was made, but making it sufficient if certain references are made, where administrator's deed in compliance with such section was offered in evidence, and records of proceedings on which it was based had been destroyed, parol evidence was adminisible to show proceedings had and that court had jurisdiction. Felix v. Caldwell, 235 Ill. 159, 85 NE 228.

54. McCleery v. Lewis [Me.] 70 A 540.

prima facie established by proof of plaintiff's possession at the time of the injury and his testimony without objection that he was owner.[56] Where a decedent owns and is in possession of land at the time of his death, the title is presumed to continue in his estate.[57] A judgment may be admitted as a link in plaintiff's chain of title, though defendant was not party to the action in which it was rendered.[58] The views of previous holders of a title as to its validity cannot be considered.[59] Every presumption should be indulged against the United States where it claims title to land in the Philippine Islands for which for more than fifty years before the treaty with Spain has been occupied by the present native holder and his ancestors under claim of private ownership.[60]

§ 9. Merger and abandonment.[61] See 10 C. L. 1464—Merger is the annihilation of a lessor estate by union with a greater.[62] It can be affected only when the same person acquires both the legal and equitable title.[63] When a life estate and the next vested estate in remainder or reversion meet in the same person the particular estate will merge to the destruction of the contingent remainder,[64] except where the creation of the particular estate and the remainder or reversion occur at the same time and by the same instrument.[65]

Abandonment See 10 C. L. 1465 is a relinquishment without reference to any particular person or purpose.[66] Mere nonclaim is insufficient to raise a presumption of divestiture of a fee simple title.[67]

§ 1. Nature, grounds, and subjects of receivership.[69]—See 10 C. L. 1465—Relief by way of receivership is equitable in its nature[70] and is controlled by and administered upon equitable principles,[71] even where it has been extended by statute,[72] unless such extension is essentially legal in its nature.[73] Receivership proceedings are ancillary in their nature,[74] the purpose of a receivership being to preserve the status quo pending litigation,[75] or to administer funds or property.[76] The exercise of the power to

70. Right to appoint receiver is inherent in court of equity. Ritchie v. People's Tel. Co. [S. D.] 119 NW 990. Courts of equity have always had the power to appoint receivers. Cobe v. Guyer, 237 Ill. 516, 86 NE 1071. Proceeding for appointment of receiver for purpose of administering and distributing assets of insolvent partnership, association or corporation is one appealing to equity side of court. Wehrs v. Sullivan [Mo.] 116 SW 1104. General statutes concerning receiverships must be construed in the light of the settled doctrine of courts of equity respecting the powers of receivers. Marion Trust Co. v. Blish, 170 Ind. 686, 84 NE 814.

71. Principles in regard to bill for injunction apply also to one for receiver. Baker v. Baker [Md.] 70 A 418.

72. Homestead and Loan Association Act of Illinois, providing for receivers under certain circumstances, held not to be in derogation of the common law, but an extension thereof to be exercised in usual form of chancery proceeding. Cobe v. Guyer, 237 Ill. 516, 86 NE 1071. The mere fact that the general assembly may make provisions authorizing certain officials in control of certain departments of the state government to institute proceeding for the appointment of receivers under certain circumstances does not in any way change the equitable nature of the actions, but is simply an aid or supplement to the general jurisdiction, and under Missouri statute, it was not necessary for the supervisor of building and loan associations after the dissolution of a building and loan association to institute an independent suit for appointment as receiver but could secure such relief by a petition for interventions. Wehrs v. Sullivan [Mo.] 116 SW 1104.

73. Rev. St. 1895, art. 1465, extends rights granted by equitable practice, and to the extent of such extension the remedies are legal. Shaw v. Shaw [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 124.

74. Under West Virginia Code, such suit cannot be maintained where only basis of equity jurisdiction is appointment of such receiver, but there must be independent equity jurisdiction. Ward v. Hotel Randolph Co. [W. Va.] 63 SE 613. There being no action for a receivership, no receiver will be appointed unless remedy is ancillary to some other ultimate equitable relief and where necessary to make that other relief effective. Chapman, 132 Ill. App. 55. Court has jurisdiction, under rules of equity and in view of provisions of Rev. St. § 5539, to appoint a receiver for protection of surety for rent which has accrued and will accrue under a lease, who further alleges that he is a stockholder of the defendant company and also a large creditor and many attachment suits have been commenced against the company in various places and others are threatened. Payne v. Stapely Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 361. Where there was dispute as to ownership of property as between two library associations, appointment of receiver without expense was proper where the property and business of the associations were not such that a loss would occur from not being used. Ladies' Library Ass'n v. Ladies' Library Ass'n [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1150, 119 NW 1098. Prima facie owner of oil and gas in tract of land is entitled to have receiver appointed to take charge of property pending settlement of rights of all parties interested. Sulb v. A. Hochestetter Oil Co., 63 W. Va. 317, 61 SE 307. After judgment for plaintiff setting aside conveyance of land as in fraud of creditors, the court may appoint receiver to take charge of the land, collect appoint a receiver is discretionary [77] and will be disturbed only for abuse,[78] but receivership is a harsh and extraordinary remedy, and a court of equity, when considering the remedy, will look to the equities of the entire case as well as the mere technical legal rights of plaintiffs,[79] and the court's discretion in the premises will never be exercised affirmatively except upon grave necessity.[80] The existence of an adequate remedy at law is always a bar to the aid of equity granting a receivership,[81] but the remedy at law must be as adequate and efficient as the appointment of a receiver.[82] The probability that the complainant will ultimately be entitled to relief is a material element for consideration by the court, and some courts hold that if ultimate success is a matter of grave doubt the appointment of a receiver should not be made.[83] The equities of the petitioner, therefore, must be clear,[84] as must also his title to the property involved [85] or his claim against the same, as that he has a lien thereon,[86] or that it constitutes a special fund to which he has a right to resort for the satisfaction of his claim; [87] but relief by way of receivership is not necessarily precluded by the failure to make out an absolutely certain case,[88] or by the mere fact that the title to the property is in dispute,[89] or because there is a defect of parties.[90] The right of recovery alone does

Liability for wrongful appointment. See 10 C. L. 1468—Where the appointment of a receiver is wrongfully made, the party at whose instance the wrong was done must bear the expense.[93] Liability on receivership bonds is treated in a subsequent section.[94]

§ 2. Appointment, qualification and tenure of receivers. A. Proceedings for appointment and qualifications.[95] See 10 C. L. 1468—A receiver may be appointed on the filing of the bill or at any time after, during the pendency of the suit,[96] but not prior to the institution of the suit.[97] The bill must lay a foundation for the appointment by stating facts which show the necessity and propriety thereof.[98] Notice to the defendant is usually required,[99] and, in order to authorize an appointment without such notice, a strong case must be made,[1] including a showing of good cause for such procedure.[2] If, by statute, notice is made jurisdictional, it must state the time and place of the hearing, and the hearing must be had at that time and place.[3] The application may be granted without delay where all the parties agree [4] or are in court.[5] The burden is on the applicant to show clear title to the right claimed, or a very strong probability of the genuineness of his claim and the ultimate establishment thereof.[6] Where the hearing is without notice, the evidence is limited to affidavits filed,[7] which, however, include the complaint if properly verified.[8] Where it does not appear but that one receiver can discharge the office satisfactorily, only one will be appointed.[9] The power of a chancellor to correct, change or annul an interlocutory decree appointing a receiver exists unimpaired as long as the cause remains open and within the jurisdiction of the court,[10] but in Louisiana the court cannot ex proprio motu annul its order appointing a receiver where it had jurisdiction to make such order and all the proceedings were taken contradictorily up to and included the order of appointment.[11] A refusal to set aside an original order of appointment on a motion to vacate after a trial amendment alleging new facts is in affect a reappointment of the receiver.[12] One intervening with full knowledge of all the proceedings is precluded from asserting that fraud appears upon the face of the record,[13] and, a fortiori, he cannot assert fraud to which he is a party.[14] An appointment by a disqualified judge cannot be validated by a nunc pro tunc order by a qualified judge.[15] Knowledge of the disqualification of the judge making the appointment is essential to a waiver of objection to the defect.[16] On an appeal from an order on a petition for the appointment of a receiver which refers to the proceedings had, and where the bill and exhibits show the title of the petitioners, the court may consider all the proceedings in the cause in passing upon the petition.[17] Where the appointment of a receiver is made at a regular term of court, it will be presumed on appeal that its action was warranted by the facts.[18] Where an objection to a motion for a receiver is treated as a demurrer to the petition in the cause, all well pleaded allegations of such petition will be taken as true in examining the merits of the judgment complained of.[19] A final entry of judgment appointing a receiver, made in vacation time and without jurisdiction, will be reversed,[20] but, if there was no other error and large public interests are involved, direction will be given that the premature judgment be entered in term time if the case at that time is not materially changed.[21] The appointment of a receiver cannot be collaterally attacked [22] unless the appointment is void on the face of the record.[23] The recital of jurisdictional facts in the order appointing a receiver is prima facie evidence of the existence of such facts.[24] A writ of prohibition will not run against a receiver whose appointment is void, there being ample remedies for redress should he attempt to act under the void appointment.[25] It is held in Louisiana that the jurisdiction of the state court in receivership proceedings is ousted by the filing of a petition in bankuptcy,[26] except to the extent that the retention of jurisdiction by the state court may be essential to the preservation and enforcement of vested rights of creditors against the property;[27] but in Texas it seems to be held, broadly, that the state court may retain jurisdiction where it first acquires it.[28] A federal court which has appointed a receiver will not release the property to receivers appointed by a state court except upon a proper showing.[29]

L. 1255—The court in its discretion may remove its receiver and substitute another in his stead,[41] and where any breach of propriety in respect to disinterestedness or impartiality occurs, it is the duty of the court to remove the receiver and substitute another;[42] but in all cases the court must be guided by sound discretion,[43] and no definite rule can be laid down,[44] and hence the action of the court in this connection is not ordinarily subject to review.[45] The court has power to discharge a temporary receiver and to restore the property to its owners without appointing a permanent one where the circumstances warrant.[46] A receiver should be discharged upon the payment of the debt for the enforcement of which he was appointed.[47] One seeking to procure the removal of a receiver must become a party to the original litigation.[48]

§ 3. Title and rights in and possession of the property. A. Title in general.[49] See 10 C. L. 1471—Title to property is not actually changed by the appointment of a receiver, the effect being rather to place the property in the hands of the receiver for the benefit of those ultimately entitled to it,[50] and not to change title.[51] The receiver's trust embraces only such property as is in controversy in the suit[52] and in the possession or under the control of the party whose property is sought to be sequestrated,[53] and the receiver takes only such title as such party had.[54] The trust reposed in a receiver by the transfer of property to him will be presumed to have lapsed after a long period of time where no steps are taken meanwhile in regard thereto.[55]

L. 1473—The right of possession as between the parties is not changed by the appointment of a receiver,[60] possession by the receiver being, in legal contemplation, possession by the court,[61] and such possession cannot be interfered with except by order of the court.[62] The legal custody is not changed by the removal of one receiver and appointing another in his stead.[63] Where on appeal it is determined that the appointment of a receiver was wrongful, the receiver will be ordered to restore the property.[64] Where a receiver is appointed and authorized by the court to lease land, it is proper upon his discharge to direct him to turn over all the property in his hands except such lands as he has so leased.[65] The receiver's right to receive the property must be affirmatively established before its delivery to him is ordered.[66] It is not contempt to refuse to obey an order requiring the payment of money to a receiver, unless such refusal is willful.[67]

§ 4. Administration and management of the property. A. Authority, powers and liabilities in general.[68]—See 10 C. determined from the facts and circumstances of the case.[78] The presumption is that where a receiver is dealing with receivership property he binds himself officially and not personally.[79] In any case, contractual liability of a receiver must be predicated either upon a contract made in his official capacity or upon a contract which by legal construction is held to have the quality of personal responsibility.[80] Receivers are only bound to act in good faith and exercise the diligence of a man of ordinary prudence and ability with reference to his own affairs.[81] A receiver, however, may be personally liable for damages for wrong done,[82] and if he has been discharged, it is not necessary to set aside the discharge and open up the former proceedings.[83] The liabilities of a receiver are fully discharged where he has duly administered the assets of the estate.[84]

A receiver's powers are limited by the terms of the order of his appointment[85] or by the statute authorizing such appointment.[86] He is an officer of the court, dealing with the property under orders of the court,[87] but is bound to conform to all laws and regulations in the operation of the property to the same extent as other parties.[88] Receivers of a federal court need not, however, obey the requirements of a state commission where such obedience will involve a loss and the power of the commission to make such requirements is uncertain.[89] The court may adopt the recommendations of a receiver as to the method of dealing with the property,[90] and where a contract by receivers has been suggested and passed upon by the court, the matter will not be reopened against objection unless for strong reasons shown.[91] In case of successive receivers, each succeeding one has all the powers and duties of his predecessors.[92] A receiver may retain counsel if necessary without previous authority from the court.[93] He has power also to indorse a note of the insolvent concern to a third party,[94] and, generally, has power to make bona fide compromises of claims in favor of the estate.[95] Receivers of a system composed of leased properties may operate under the leases for a reasonable period to determine the advisability of continuing without incurring any liability for rental under the lease,[96] but if they decide not to operate and to cancel the lease, they should account for the net receipts.[97] Courts should not continue the operation of private concerns beyond the protection and preservation of property for the creditors,[98] and the authority of a receiver to so continue will not be implied.[99] On the final discharge of a receiver, he ceases to be a representative of the court,[1] and, furthermore, receivership proceedings being in rem, only one administration can be had with respect to the same property.[2]

(§ 4) B. Payment of claims against receiver or property.[3] See 10 C. L. 1474—A receiver has no discretion, generally speaking, as to the application of funds which are in his hands subject to the receivership, their disposal being entirely subject to the direction of the court,[4] but, where an interlocutory decree gives a receiver no authority to pay debts, the court has power after the payment of debts to enter an order nunc pro tunc to permit the receiver to pay debts,[5] imposing terms if necessary,[6] but the court will not, on a motion for such an order, pass upon the validity of the claims.[7] It is no objection to a claim presented in the receivership proceedings that it is a purely legal claim and that the cross bill by which it was brought forward was not germane to the original bill.[8] Where a large number of tort claims have been filed, it is desirable that something be done to facilitate their liquidation,[9] and this may most conveniently be done by dividing them into groups and appointing additional special masters to undertake the work of liquidating such of them as may not have been already liquidated by trial and verdict before they are called for hearing.[10] Where suit is brought by one creditor in behalf of all to distribute assets, it is unnecessary that other creditors who have filed their claims and are proving them before a special master should formally intervene.[11] Where a creditor is guilty of laches in filing a claim, he may be allowed to file the same but not to share in a dividend about to be declared.[12] A provision in a decree reserving jurisdiction after confirmation of sale that all claims not presented within a certain time shall be barred, does not include claims already before the court.[13] Claims should be presented separately, although all of the same kind.[14] A federal court will not permit an execution issued by a state court to be levied upon property in the hands of its receivers where they have in good faith taken an appeal.[15] The fact that one is related by kinship to a receiver does not necessarily preclude him from purchasing claims against the estate.[16] A receiver cannot appeal from an allowance made by a court in favor of a claimant.[17] Notice of the hearing of an application by a receiver for instructions will ordinarily be given to the parties interested.[18]

Priorities in general. See 10 C. L. 1474—Existing securities and liens are unaffected by a receivership,[19] and unsecured creditors have no interest in property subject to a lien until the debt secured thereby is paid in full;[20] but a lienor may lose his priority by intervening for the allowance of his claim in the receivership proceedings.[21] In the case of a secured claim, the appointment of a receiver does not stop the running of interest stipulated for so far as payable out of the security,[22] but interest is payable out of the general fund only up to the time of the receivership, unless a surplus remains after the payment of all debts and expenses, when interest should be paid in full.[23] Tort claims for personal injuries are not entitled to priority.[24]

Debts created by receiver and expenses of administration. See 10 C. L. 1475—The assets going to the beneficiaries are the net assets after paying the expenses of the trust,[25] and the priority of such charges and expenses may be decreed by the court,[26] and their payment may be enforced by retention of the property until payment;[27] but these preferred claims may themselves be inferior to already existing liens,[28] and the claims of persons not parties to the proceedings of the time of the expenditures cannot be subordinated thereto.[29] Aside from quasi public corporations,[30] courts have no authority generally to direct the receiver to carry on the business of the insolvent and charge the expense as a preferred lien over existing prior liens.[31] There is, however, one circumstance which will justify the court in displacing prior liens, and that it where money is required, not for the purpose of operating the business, but for the purpose of saving the property from destruction.[32] The displacement of liens upon incumbered property should under any circumstances be sparingly done.[33] A receiver has no authority merely by virtue of his office to borrow money by the issue of any evidence of indebtedness by which shall be a lien on the property.[34] Certificates issued in payment of debts incurred prior to receivership cannot be made a first lien, preferred to mortgage indebtedness.[35] A court has no jurisdiction to issue receivers' certificates which are a lien on lands in another state.[36] The party procuring the appointment of a receiver must pay the costs of the receivership where he himself procures the receiver's discharge,[37] and when the appointment of a receiver is determined to be void,[38] or when the fund proves insufficient, it has been held that a court, in the exercise of its equity powers, may compel the party who procured the receiver to be appointed to pay into court a sum sufficient to meet the expenses of the receivership,[39] but the discretion of a court of equity does not authorize it to require one party, and the sureties on his cost bond, to pay to the other, under the name of costs, items paid from the fund for services and expenses in administering a fund properly in court, nor any other items not within the federal fee bill act.[40] A receiver is entitled to charge for expenses incident to his administration.[41]

Receiver's certificates. See 10 C. L. 1476—The lien and priority of receiver's certificates have already been considered.[42] A receiver's certificate is not a negotiable instrument,[43] but it is an assignable chose in action.[44] Where a loan by the issue of Counsel fees. See 10 C. L. 1478—The fees of the attorney filing the complaint will be paid from the funds realized for the creditors before distribution,[47] but creditors generally cannot have their counsel fees paid from the assets.[48] The question of the allowance of counsel fees is in the first instance solely for the court which appointed the receiver.[49] Such fees must be reasonable.[50] Counsel fees are allowed as part of the receiver's compensation [51] unless the employment was not authorized or ratified.[52] Where a receiver employs his law partner as his counsel, he himself will not be allowed fees for his services in assisting such counsel.[53] Only parties substantially interested in the assets will be heard on the question of the allowance of counsel fees out of the fund in court.[54] The court is not bound to refer the matter of counsel fees to a master.[55]

(§ 4) C. Sales by receivers.[56]—See 10 C. L. 1477—Judicial sales generally are treated elsewhere.[57] After sale under order of court, confirmation after notice, and payment of the purchase money, the title to the property vests in the purchaser.[58] Objections to a sale should be made when it comes before the court for confirmation.[59] Where a sale is made free of all claims, claimants who, though having notice, fail to asset their claims in a proper and timely manner, cannot thereafter assert them.[60] A surety on the bond of a receiver appointed in vendor's lien proceedings is responsible for a proper accounting as to the purchase price received by the receiver for purchase-money bonds sold.[61] A foreign receiver may sue to enforce a sale of property already in his possession at the time of the sale.[62]

(§ 4) D. Actions by and against receivers.[63]—See 10 C. L.1478—The general rule is to hear and determine all rights of action and demands against a receiver by petition in the original cause in which he was appointed, without remitting the parties to an independent suit,[64] and it is a matter entirely within the discretion of the court whether or not it will permit an independent suit against its receiver,[65] or, in the case of a receiver appointed in a federal court, whether or not it will require such receiver to submit to the demands of state courts or commissions.[66] The discretion of a court with regard to suits against its receiver is regulated, however, by fixed rules, and if a petition for leave to bring an independent suit discloses a case where it should be granted, it is the duty of the court to do so,[67] and statutes in some jurisdictions provide that a receiver may be sued without leave of court.[68] The failure of the complaint to allege leave of court does not render it demurrable,[69] the effect of such failure being operative, not upon the suit itself, but upon the complainant, as putting him in contempt of court.[70] Where a right of action accrues before the appointment of a receiver, no leave to sue is necessary, the action being against the company and the receivers coming in to defend,[71] and if judgment is obtained, it should be certified to the court having jurisdiction of the receivership for payment.[72] Generally, also, the receiver makes application to the appointing court for leave to sue,[73] unless he has been appointed with authority to sue [74] or is authorized by statute so to do.[75] After his discharge, a receiver cannot sue or be sued as the representative of the estate,[76] but in some jurisdictions, by statute, where a receiver is discharged during the pendency of a suit commenced by him, the effect is not to compel an abatement of the suit,[77] but pending actions may also be saved by the terms of the order of discharge.[78] Where an action is commenced against a receiver prior to bankruptcy proceedings, the state court is not deprived of its jurisdiction, and the receiver may continue to act notwithstanding the action of the bankruptcy court.[79] A receiver may be restrained by the appointing court from prosecuting an action in another state.[80] A receiver appointed by bill in equity in the federal court does not thereby become entitled to maintain a bill in equity against one not a party to recover on a purely legal demand, his remedy being an action at law in the federal circuit court.[81] Where a receiver has been appointed in a federal court, judgment cannot be obtained against the insolvent in a state court without notice to the receiver.[82] A creditor cannot ordinarily intervene in an action against a receiver,[83] but the federal circuit court has discretion in a suit by a receiver on behalf of the creditors to allow an amendment substituting as plaintiff a creditor suing in behalf of himself and other creditors.[84] It is the general rule that in the ordinary receivership the receiver can only sue in the right of the insolvent, subject to all the equities available against the latter,[85] except that the receiver so far represents the general creditors that he may avoid transactions in fraud of their rights.[86] The claims of estates, though in the hands of the same receivers, must be prosecuted independently.[87] A judgment against receivers should be made payable in due course of administration of the receivership.[88] A receiver must give bonds as provided for by statute as with other litigants in case of appeal or injunction.[89]

§ 5. Accounting by receivers.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1481—The court has a large discretion in the allowance of receiver's accounts,[91] but it is customary to subject accounts of receivers to the scrutiny of a referee before passing upon them when large sums have to be accounted for,[92] especially in the event of objections.[93] Where on an accounting it appears that the receiver has paid claims without authority and the court enters a decree nunc pro tunc authorizing their payment, it may further direct the referee appointed to pass on the accounts and to take proofs of all payments made by the receiver.[94] Conversion or wrongful expenditure by a receiver is a contempt.[95]

§ 6. Compensation of receivers.[96] See 10 C. L. 1481—It is in order on the accounting and discharge of receivers for their compensation and expenses to be fixed and ordered paid out of the assets before they are turned over.[97] Whether any amount should be allowed,[98] and, if so, the amount thereof, are within the discretion of the court,[99] and the exercise of such discretion will not be disturbed except for abuse.[1] A receiver is entitled to a reasonable compensation for his services and no more.[2] There is no fixed rule for determining what is reasonable and proper compensation, but custom has in some jurisdictions settled upon five per cent. as a reasonable and ordinarily fair allowance,[3] and to justify the award of a larger sum the reasons therefor should affirmatively appear.[4] Compensation out of the estate should not be denied because the appointment was unauthorized, where the receiver was actually appointed and in good faith performed his duties as receiver.[5] A receiver should not be allowed compensation for services in different capacities.[6] Where no objection is offered to the allowance of compensation, it is within the discretion of the court to refuse to reopen the case and hear oral testimony, or send the matter to a master.[7] Evidence as to the value of the receiver's services must be offered in proper time.[8] An order fixing the amount of the fee of a receiver is an interlocutory judgment, binding on all parties and appealable [9] by parties interested therein.[10] An order of removal does not necessarily adjudicate the receiver's claim,[11] and where it purports to do so it is appealable, notwithstanding that it is otherwise unappealable.[12] of receiving does not merge in that of being accessory before the fact.[29] If the receiving is pursuant to a participation in the larceny, the receiver is guilty of larceny.[30]

§ 2. Indictment and prosecution. Indictment.[31]—See 10 C. L. 1484—The information must allege guilty knowledge by the receiver,[32] describe the property stolen,[33] and name the owner,[34] but the consideration need not be stated.[35] All acts constituting a single offense may be conjunctively charged,[36] and while receiving stolen goods and larceny are distinct offenses,[37] they are not inconsistent.[38]

*Evidence.*See 10 C. L. 1484—The burden is on the state to show all the elements of the offense,[39] as that the goods were stolen as charged and were received with guilty knowledge,[40] but identity of the thief need not be proven,[41] and proof of value merely, in diminution of sentence, is a matter of defense.[42] Variance between indictment and testimony of prosecuting witness is not necessarily fatal to conviction.[43] Only the best evidence obtainable may be used,[44] but guilty knowledge may be shown by circumstantial evidence,[45] such as similar related transactions,[46] or inadequacy of consideration,[47] and the jury may consider all evidence tending to show a systematic purpose.[48] Neither the thief nor the receiver is an accomplice of the other, but their offenses are distinct.[49] The conviction [50] or acquittal [51] of the alleged thief is not conclusive of the theft and does not affect the proof.

RECOGNIZANCES.[59]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[60]

A recognizance is an official record, and to be effective must be signed by the magistrate.[61] Under the Georgia statute, a county has no interest in money collected from forfeited recognizances until after all the legal claims on such funds held by officers bringing the money into court, including constables and justices, shall have been allowed and paid,[62] and therefore, when the petition does not show that the state has an interest in such funds, is a money rule by the county the proper remedy to compel the clerk to issue execution upon a rule absolute forfeiting a recognizance bond.[63]

§ 5. Amendment and cancellation.[88] See 10 C. L. 1488—Every court of record has inherent power to make its record speak the truth [88] by an entry nunc pro tunc.[90] The common law courts have power to correct their own judgments so as to make them conform to the fact,[91] and the power of the court to expunge a record entered without jurisdiction exists independent of statute and without reference to statutory time.[92] In general, amendment can be made only when there is something in the record to amend by.[93] Correction of a judicial record may be made at any time before its final authentication,[94] and after authentication at any time during the term,[95] and correction after the term is often allowed by direct proceedings,[96] on proper notice.[97] An appeal from a judgment or decree does not deprive the court which rendered it of control over its records or of jurisdiction to amend them;[88] but reversal leaves the record without legal existence and there is nothing to amend.[99] A superior court cannot modify the record of an inferior tribunal,[1] nor compel an amendment;[2] nor can a court of equity, in the absence of fraud, order the amendment of a common-law record.[3]

§ 6. Crimes relating to records.[4] See 8 C. L. 1702—The defacing of each separate recorded certificate is a separate offense, though all were done at the same time.[5]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[6]

§ 1. Definitions and distinctions, master and referee and umpire or arbitrator.[7]—See 6 C. L. 1272—A referee or master is merely the agent of the court appointing him, acting under its direction.[8]

§ 2. Occasion for reference.[9]—See 10 C. L. 1490—A reference is usually proper in cases where the stating of an account is required [10] or where it appears that the issues cannot be properly disposed of by a jury,[11] but, being merely for the convenience of the court, need not be made where it will not facilitate matters.[12] Compulsory references are usually controlled by statute,[13] being generally granted where it appears from the complaint,[14] or from a counterclaim connected with the matter

6. Reference to masters in chancery is elsewhere treated (see Masters and Commissioners, 12 C. L. 809), as is reference to arbitrators (see Arbitration and Award, 11 C. L. 262), this topic including only reference of actions at law and under the codes.

10. Where itemized accounts covering 12 pages of printed abstract were filed with counterclaims and no correct finding could be made without examination of books of account, reference held proper. Mulloy v. Mulloy, 131 Mo. App. 654, 111 SW 843. Although court did not pass directly upon the existence of a contract or the interpretation thereof, will of supervisory control will not issue to restrain a reference where it appears that some sort of an account exists on books and that no further damage can occur from a further examination of them. State v. Silver Bow County Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 37 Mont. 226, 95 P 843.

11. Northrop v. Butler, 126 App. Div. 906, 110 NYS 815. Reference in suit for attorney's fees should be made only where it is reasonably apparent that items are so numerous that jury cannot properly dispose of same. Russell v. McDonald, 125 App. Div. 844, 110 NYS 950. Where bill of particulars shows that disbursements are insignificant, and there are 3 retainers and 22 items connected with only 5 matters, reference is improper. Id. Where receiver's account involves large sums, it should be referred to referee. People v. Oriental Bank, 129 App. Div. 865, 114 NYS 440. Where, in partition, court has decided to sell land and timber together, although some of the timber is owned separately, reference is proper to determine relative value of land and timber. Rivers v. Atlantic Coast Lumber Corp., 81 S. C. 492, 62 SE 855.

12. Held not error to not refer to special master question of allowance of counsel fees. Haight & Freese Co. v. Weiss [C. C. A.] 165 F 430. Where facts are undisputed court, in proceeding to establish and enforce an attorney's lien, may find value of services without reference. In re Kaufman, 113 NYS 525. Where, upon dissolution of preliminary injunction, the only damages claimed are expenses incidental to motion to dissolve, no reference need be made though items are numerous, they being readily subject to proof. Dempster v. Lansingh, 234 Ill. 381, 84 NE 1032.

13. Code, § 3735, providing for compulsory reference in actions involving accounts, applies only in cases formerly cognizable in equity. Faville v. Lloyd [Iowa] 118 NW 871. Code Civ. Proc. § 1015, authorizing a reference to determine and report on question of fact arising in any stage of the action on a motion or otherwise, except on pleadings, applies only to equity actions. Lindner v. Starin, 128 App. Div. 664, 113 NYS 201. Code Civ. Proc. § 1015, providing that the court may direct a reference to determine and report on question of fact for information of the court, etc., held not to authorize reference in effect to take deposition of witness to oppose motion to vacate supplemental summons. Johnson v. Wellington Copper Min. Co., 58 Misc. 353, 110 NYS 1098. Where objections filed to account of receiver, appointed under Code Civ. Proc. § 2429, are sufficiently specific to compel receiver to be examined under oath in respect thereto, referee should be appointed under 2 Rev. St. (1st. ed.) pt. 3, c. 8, tit. 4, § 86. § 10. Decree or judgment on the report, confirmation or overruling, recommittal or additional findings, modification, conformity of judgment with report.[47]—See 10 C. L. 1493—Unless made conclusive by statute,[48] the report of the referee is only prima facie correct,[49] having the effect of a jury verdict,[50] and to be set aside only when clearly against the evidence.[51] All presumptions are in favor of the regularity and validity of proceedings before a referee,[52] but where it appears that the matter was not fully heard [53] without the fault of the objector,[54] or where the referee misconceived the scope of the reference,[55] a re-reference is proper. In equity cases a recommitment for additional evidence may be made,[56] or the court may proceed and hear the same and render such decree as the referee should have made.[57] Where the referee's duties were of a ministerial character, the only question on hearing is whether the directions of the court have been followed.[58] The report of the referee must be reasonably construed,[59] and where it is silent upon a particular fact,[60] a presumption arises that such fact has not been proven.[61] But an omission to make a particular finding is not reversible error where the decision for the plaintiff was not based thereon.[62] In some states, judgment may be entered by the parties upon the referee's findings or by the court pro forma.[63]

§ 1. The remedy. A. Nature and office.[72] See 10 C. L. 1496

(§ 1) B. Right to remedy.[73] See 10 C. L. 1496—The right to the reformation of a written instrument is based on fraud, accident or mistake[74] of fact[75] or of law.[76] Before a court of equity will grant relief, in the absence of fraud[77] or imposition,[78] report of referee shall stand as decision of the court and judgment may be entered thereon by parties, construed with § 1229, providing that, on return of report in divorce cases, judgment shall be entered by court, and held that court could refuse to affirm report and to enter judgment. Perkins v. Perkins, 114 NYS 960. Where court on hearing on exceptions to referee's report recommitted same to have certain definite items omitted therefrom and ordered judgment to be entered on corrected report, held that such decree was final so as to start interest, although referee, who was also clerk, made mistake in correcting report, which necessitated an order correcting judgment entered thereon. Brown v. Rogers, 80 S. C. 289, 61 SE 440.

68. Where, in reference to determine whether summons had been served, twelve full hearings were had, referee taking 555 pages of testimony and 12 days in reading same and preparing report, held that costs taxed at $938, $500 as referee's fees, $428 as stenographer's fees, and $10 motion costs, were not excessive. Dollard v. Koronsky, 61 Misc. 392, 113 NYS 793. Where defendant successfully demurred to bill after it had been reduced by several amendments to original form, complainant is not entitled to costs on ground of defendant's failure to demur in first instance. Jones v. Howard, 234 Ill. 404, 84 NE 1041.

69. By express provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 3251, on reference under § 3236, which includes reference under § 623, to determine damages resulting from an injunction, court may award costs, not exceeding $10, besides necessary disbursements for referee's fees. the mistake complained of must possess mutuality [79] or its equivalent,[80] such as mistake on one side and fraud or inequitable conduct on the other.[81, 82] To entitle one to reformation, an enforcible contract [83] agreed on [84] must have been formulated in such manner as not to express the real agreement of the parties,[85] so as to be inequitable [86] and to work injury to a party.[87] Reformation may be granted against a subsequent purchaser with notice.[88]

A party may be estopped by his own laches [89] or negligence,[90] and his action to reform a written instrument may become barred by the statute of limitations.[91] In an action for the reformation of an instrument, the rule that he who seeks equity must do equity applies with full force.[92]

(§ 1) C. Instruments reformable.[93]—See 10 C. L. 1498—Reformation may be decreed of any written instrument [94] executed with contractual intent,[95] such as a deed [96] erroneous in description,[97] in the consideration stated,[98] in the assumption of

§ 2. Procedure. A. Jurisdiction and form of proceedings.[16]—See 10 C. L. 1498— A court of law is without jurisdiction to reform or correct a written instrument,[17] such being the province of a court of equity, the equitable jurisdiction remaining concurrent with powers conferred by statute in courts of law.[18]

(§ 2) B. Parties.[19]—See 10 C. L. 1498—Either the plaintiff or the defendant may invoke the aid of equity to secure the reformation of an instrument.[20] All parties affected by the reformation are generally necessary parties.[21] A mistake will only be corrected between the original parties and those claiming under them in privity.[22] Reformation may be granted in favor of a subsequent innocent purchaser[23] without notice or knowledge of facts to put on inquiry,[24] although not if it affects the intervening equities of innocent third persons.[25]

(§ 2) C. Pleading and evidence.[26]—See 10 C. L. 1499—The averments must be made with great particularity,[27] care being taken to allege that the parties agreed to the terms of the contract sought to be established,[28] and to show that the decree sought will be effectual.[29] A pleading is sufficient though reformation is asked for as alternative relief,[30] and it is not necessary to ask for reformation if facts be pleaded which show a right to such relief.[31] In case of overpayment by reason of error in contract, the remedy may be to recover such overpayment by action at law and reformation need not be asked for unless the contract be pleaded as a defense.[32] The burden of proof is on the party seeking the reformation.[33] Proof of fraud,[34] inequity [35] and of mistake must be full, clear and satisfactory,[36] not a mere preponderance,[37] and should approach certainty where reformation amounts to rescission,[38] and in case of mistake should be shown to be common to both parties.[39] The nature and extent of the mistake and any omitted provision,[40] and the reformation warranted according to the agreement of both parties,[41] must be shown with great exactness by positive testimony,[42] especially where denial of mistake is made under oath,[43] but parol evidence is competent and admissible for such purpose.[44]

(§ 2) D. Trial and judgment.[45]—See 10 C. L. 1501—Instructions must be clear and not too general or misleading.[46] Where trial is had before a jury, it is error for the court to withdraw the case on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence as to mistake, where any evidence supports such contention.[47]

The judgment may be for the reformation of the instrument as to any material matter,[48] irrespective of the place of its execution,[49] and for its specific enforcement

RELEASES.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[53]

§ 1. Nature, form and requisites.[54] See 10 C. L. 1502—At common law a release was required to be under seal, but this is usually dispensed with by statute,[55] and it is sufficient that it be a formal contract, either written or oral, in the nature of a settlement.[56] It is, however, distinct from a mere receipt[57] or a covenant not to sue.[58] An agreement to release a debtor upon payment of a part of an amount acknowledged to be due is not binding.[59] A release may be implied[60] and may become effective without surrender of the evidence of indebtedness.[61] While releases of liability for future negligence are generally deemed against public policy,[62] a person injured through negligence of another may for a consideration release his right of action.[63]

§ 2. Parties to release.[64] See 8 C. L. 1714—At common law an executor or administrator may release a claim without express authority.[65]

§ 3. Interpretation, construction and effect.[66] See 10 C. L. 1502—The law favors releases given by way of compromise,[67] and any defense must be supported by clear and satisfying evidence.[68] A release should be liberally [69] construed, so as to make all parts operative,[70] and its validity not made to depend upon the validity of the cause of action [71] or of the capacity in which a release may act,[72] whether he act in an individual or representative capacity.[73] In the absence of explanatory evidence, any ambiguity is construed against the releasor [74] and in favor of a complete release,[75] but the words of the release are not to be extended beyond the consideration,[76] or to damages discovered [77] or arising subsequently,[78] unless specified.[79] The release of one of several persons jointly liable releases all,[80] except as otherwise provided by statute [81] or by the release itself,[82] but the authorities conflict where the one released was not actually liable.[83]

§ 4. Defenses to, or avoidance of, releases.[84]—See 10 C. L. 1503—An unauthorized release is no bar to an action.[85] A general release under seal may be avoided only by showing great inequity.[86] A mutual mistake of fact is a valid defense to a release,[87] but a party's mere ignorance of its contents or the extent of the other's liability at the time of signing is not.[88] A right to rescind a release should be claimed without unreasonable delay,[89] and any consideration received thereunder should be promptly returned [90] unless had for a separate and distinct matter [91] or the question of donation is involved,[92] in which case the amount received may be deducted from the amount recovered.[93] A release, though under seal, may be attacked at law for fraud either in the consideration or execution.[94] Equity will set aside a release if there be no consideration or it be executed under duress.[95]

Consideration wanting. See 10 C. L. 1503—Failure[96] or gross inadequacy[97] of the consideration[98] is a valid defense as between the parties, and in such case the release does not estop recovery on the liability.[99]

Fraud See 10 C. L. 1503 avoids a release as it does any other contract, the subject being treated in a separate topic.[1]

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[11]

§ 1. Organization as a corporation and status of society.[12]—See 10 C. L. 1503—Incorporated societies stand on the same footing as other corporations and are subject to common-law rules relating thereto,[13] their officers having only such power as the charter confers.[14] Incorporated church organizations of the same faith may, in the absence of charter restrictions, consolidate,[15] the question of whether such harmony of faith exists as to permit union being of exclusive ecclesiastical cognizance.[16] The Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico[17] and in the Philippine Islands[18] is a legal personality capable of taking property by gift,[19] and the laws of Porto Rico relating to business corporations have no application to it.[20] The constitution and laws of West Virginia expressly prohibit the incorporation of religious organizations.[21] The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church is invested with the general governing power.[22]

§ 2. Membership and meetings.[23]—See 10 C. L. 1504—The rights of members of an incorporated society are, except as ecclesiastical questions are involved,[24] the same as those of stockholders in a civil corporation;[25] thus, they must exhaust their remedies within the corporation before seeking judicial aid to control the action of the directors.[26] Expulsion from membership cannot be reviewed in the civil courts where no property right is involved.[27]

§ 3. Ministers.[28]—See 10 C. L. 1504—Mandamus will not lie to compel reinstatement of a minister where he has no temporal right in the office and no fees or emoluments are concerned.[29]

§ 4. Powers and liabilities of society in general.[30]—See 10 C. L. 1504—A society is not bound by its ultra vires acts,[31] nor by unauthorized acts of its officers.[32] The liability of religious societies for tort is elsewhere treated.[33]

§ 5. Property and funds.[34]—See 10 C. L. 1505—Statutes frequently limit the amount of real estate which may be held by a church organization,[35] and devises contrary to such statutes are absolutely void.[36] The Roman Catholic Church has capacity to take and hold real property,[37] and the fact that such property is acquired by gifts, even of public funds, does not affect the absoluteness of its rights.[38] Where religious societies have power to hold land, a conveyance to one in trust for a particular congregation vests the title in such congregation,[39] which may compel the trustee named to convey to another selected by the congregation,[40] and such right cannot be impaired by the ecclesiastical rules of the church.[41] Limitations by the donors of church property must be clearly expressed.[42] In case of division, the property is ordinarily awarded to that faction to which the majority adheres [43] unless the property is charged with a trust for the support of certain doctrines, in which case the court must determine which faction adheres thereto;[44] but where a local church makes a valid union with the general organization of its denomination, those members accepting the union retain the church property,[45] the determination of which members remain part of the general body being for the ecclesiastical courts.[46] Where a local church is part of a general organization, the property must be used in accordance with valid orders of the governing body.[47]

ordinarily review rulings of general organization by which a local church or parish is governed.[50] The courts will prevent a majority from diverting the church property to the promulgation of teachings clearly contrary to the adopted faith of the church,[51] and may enjoin use of church property in manner contrary to orders of the governing body.[52] Where property is given for the support of a particular doctrine, the courts will decide, between rival claimants, which supports such doctrine.[53]

REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[58]

§ 1. Right to remove from state to federal court.[59]—See 10 C. L. 1508—The power granted by congress to a party litigant to remove to a federal court his controversy is not a constitutional or vested right[60] but a mere privilege which congress may grant or withhold at will, and when granted at all it is upon such terms, conditions and limitations as may be prescribed.[61] No suit or action is removable from a state court to a federal circuit court unless it be one that plaintiff could originally have brought in the circuit court.[62] An action pending before a justice of the peace in a state is removable.[63] A cause can only be removed from the court of original jurisdiction and not from the appellate tribunal.[64]

L. 1508—A proceeding instituted by a city to condemn the property of a water company by an application to a state court for the appointment of commissioners to appraise the property is a judicial proceeding removable into a federal court[66] from its inception.[67] An action to remove a cloud from the title to land lying within the district where the suit is brought may be removed to the federal court, although neither party is a resident of the state in which the suit is brought.[68]

§ 3. Nature of controversy or subject-matter and existence of federal question.[69]—See 10 C. L. 1508—An action is removable if a federal question is involved or if the case arises under the constitution or laws of the United States.[70] But to authorize a removal on the ground that a federal statute is involved, a substantial defense thereunder must be shown.[71] If in a joint action against several defendants a federal question is raised as to one of the defendants, it permeates the entire action and affects all the defendants,[72] and the fact that one of several defendants is indemnified by one of the other defendants does not make the party indemnified a nominal or formal party.[73] Ordinarily, to justify the removal of a cause from a state to a national court on the ground that the case is one arising under the constitution or laws of the United States, that fact must appear from the plaintiff's petition in the case,[74] though plaintiff fraudulently conceal the facts giving rise to the right of removal.[75] To render an action against an officer of the United States removable from a state to a federal court by certiorari, the acts which constitute the cause of action must have some rational connection with official duties under "a revenue law," and in some way effect the revenue of the government,[76] and the fact

70. Action against corporation created by act of congress to establish a joint liability is, as to the individual defendants and the corporation, a suit arising under the federal constitution or laws, and removable under removal provisions. Matter of Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, 53 Law. Ed. —. Action based upon carrier's common-law duty to furnish facilities for shipping, although damages arose by act of a carrier engaged in interstate business, not one to enforce an act of congress relating to interstate commerce between the states. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Wood [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1009. An action against a federal corporation is an action arising under the laws of the United States. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hendricks [Okl.] 95 P 970. Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf Railroad Company held such federal corporation that a suit against it presents a question under the laws of the United States, for which reason a removal may be had under Enabling Act, § 16 (Act June 16, 1906, c. 335 [34 Stat. 276], amending Act March 4, 1907, c. 2911, § 1 [34 Stat. 1286]). Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hamilton [Okl.] 95 P 972; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hendrick [Okl.] 95 P 970. § 4. Diversity of citizenship and alienage of party.[78]—See 10 C. L. 1509—Diversity of citizenship is ground for removal,[79] unless neither party resides in the district where the suit is brought.[80] Residence in the state where suit was brought for a temporary purpose and for an indefinite time does not defeat the removal of a cause for diversity of citizenship.[81] There can be no diversity of citizenship so as to give rise to removal on that ground where the defendant is a federal corporation, since such corporation is not a citizen of any state.[82] An action brought by a nonresident alien in a state court against a citizen of another state is removable by the defendant where the requisite amount is involved.[83] Under the removal act, right of removal upon the ground of diverse citizenship is conferred only upon persons who are defendants in the plaintiff's suit and not on an actual plaintiff even though affirmative relief against him in the suit might be claimed by way of counter demand.[84] All the defendants must be nonresidents,[85] except that a fraudulent joinder,[86] or joinder of a nominal or formal party, can neither defeat nor give the right of removal.[87] To render an action removable to the federal court on the ground of al-

80. Gillespie v. Pocahontas Coal & Coke Co., 162 F 742. Action by alien, a nonresident of the United States, against a corporation, brought in court of another state than that of defendant's incorporation, but in which it does business, hence is subject to service and suit in state court, held not removable by defendant for diversity of citizenship unless where plaintiff does not consent thereto. Mahopoulus v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 167 F 165.

Plaintiff in suit for less than $2,000 not to have become a defendant giving right of removal on ground of diversity of citizenship because defendant, in answer, made counterclaim for more than $2,000. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Waller & Co., 164 F 358. "Defendant" as used in earlier removal act, having been construed by supreme court to include only party defendant on record in state court, given same construction as used in act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, 18 Stat. 470, amended Act March 13, 1887, c. 373, § 1, 24 Stat. 552, and Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 1, 25 Stat. 433 (U. 85. The parties must be considered collectively in determining the question of the removal of a cause for diversity of citizenship. Parties defendant. Santa Clara County v. Goldy Mach. Co., 159 F 750. Joint action in Illinois against lessor and lessee railway company, charging joint negligence and liability, held not removable by lessee on ground that it was a foreign corporation, in exclusive use and operation, and alone liable if any liability for injury complained of and that codefendant was fraudulently joined, since in Illinois a joinder and joint recovery in such case in state courts is permissible. Willard v. Chicago R. & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 165 F 181.

86. Two persons cannot be wrongfully joined as defendants solely for the purpose of defeating removal from state to federal court. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Adams [Ark.] 112 SW 186. If at any time it becomes apparent to the court that a resident defendant was joined without reasonable grounds therefor, the court should set aside the order refusing to remove the case and direct the removal of the cause. Ward v. Pullman Car Corp. [Ky.] 114 SW 754. A joinder of parties cannot be fraudulent which is authorized by the laws of the state in which the suit is brought. Id. Under pleadings in action against railway company and manufacturer of car, who were nonresidents, and two of railways' car inspectors, who were residents of state, held joinder of inspectors was fraudulently joined to prevent removal. leged diversity of citizenship, such diversity must be made to appear to have existed both at the beginning of the suit and when the petition was filed.[88]

*Separable controversy.*See 10 C. L. 1511—A separable controversy [89] justifies a removal as to a single nonresident defendant,[90] and, in a case where a party joined is not an indispensable party, the mere fact that such party, a nonresident, is joined by him as a defendant along with the defendant, does not operate to prevent application of separable controversy rule.[91] The right of removal to a federal court on the ground of separable controversy must be determined exclusively with reference to the complaint itself, unaided by judicial knowledge or subsequent pleadings.[92] The court will look only to the record as it stood in the state court at the time the petition for removal was filed.[93] Where the complaint on its face states a cause of action against both defendants, which can be properly joined in one action, the cause cannot be removed from state to federal court on the ground that it is a separable controversy merely by raising an issue of fact in the petition for removal as to whether or not a joint cause of action exists.[94]

§ 5. Prejudice and local influence and denial of civil rights.[95]—See 8 C. L. 1726

Glove Newspaper Co., 165 F 104. Defendants, joined in suit in state court to recover an interest in lands only as trustees holding paramount title in trust, and whose title as such was not disputed, held not indispensable parties, whose citizenship and residence in same state as complainant would prevent removal of cause by other defendants, who were real parties in interest. Lawrence v. Southern Pac. Co., 165 F 241.

89. Separable removable controversy by foreign corporation, joined as a party defendant to foreclose mortgage, held to exist where mortgagor and mortgagee, citizens of state, unite in attacking validity of prior mortgage in favor of such corporation on ground that it was doing business without complying with state laws, and that note secured embraced charges exacted because of an illegal combination. Fritzlen v. Boatman's Bank, 212 U. S. 364, 53 Law. Ed. — Matters alleged held to constitute such concurrent acts of negligence against defendants as to defeat application for removal. Stratton Cripple Creek Min. & Development Co. v. Ellison, 42 Colo. 498, 94 P 303. Action for negligence, under Kirby's Dig. § 6607, against railway company and engineer, held removable, there being no liability against engineer for failure to "keep a lookout." Lockard v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 167 F 675. In action against railway company, which, if sued alone, would have been removable, and a resident not entitled to remove, where verdict was rendered in favor of resident but against corporation, on which judgment was entered and reversed on company's appeal, fact that plaintiff did not appeal from judgment in favor of resident did not entitle railway company, after reversal, to remove cause as a separable controversy against plaintiff and itself. Huber v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 984. Action to condemn right of way, fee being in defendant, a citizen of same state as plaintiff, held not to involve separable controversy between plaintiff and nonresident defendant, joined as having leasehold interest in all or part of tract, so as to entitle latter to remove cause. Oroville & N. R. Co. v. Leggett, 162 F 571. Where the object of a suit is to condemn deed, appropriate to public use separate and distinct tracts of land, each owned by a different person, each constitutes a separable controversy (Id.), but the fact that defendants can file separate answers, tendering distinct and varying issues relating to their respective estates in one tract, does not create separable controversies within meaning of statute (Id.). An action by a resident of one state against a resident and a nonresident of the same state is not removable to a federal court on the application of the nonresident, where the resident defendant is a proper, if not a necessary, party to the determination of the controversy. Where plaintiff tenders as an essential issue question of title, and, in addition to a money judgment, prays for general relief under the state practice, and title is put in issue by the answer, value of such title should be taken into account in determining right of removal. by the record at the time the petition is filed,[98] and, when an amendment is made, the sum last demanded is "the matter in dispute."[99] The right of removal is affected by the amount in controversy only where there is a diversity of citizenship, and not where the action arises under the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States.[1]

§ 7. Procedure to obtain and effect the removal.[2]—See 10 C. L. 1511—Removal is effected by the timely filing[3] of bond[4] and petition. No order is essential to a removal nor to put an end to the state jurisdiction.[5] The petition must adequately aver the ground of removal,[6] and while there is no law requiring that a petition for

3. Under Code 1904, § 3260, petition for removal of cause to federal court must be filed on or before the rule day on which a plea in abatement must be filed. Southern Exp. Co. v. Jacobs [Va.] 63 SE 17. Act of congress Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 3, 25 Stat. 435, provides that one desiring to remove a cause to the federal court must file a petition in the state court at the time defendant is required by the laws of the state to answer or plead. South Park Com'rs v. Ayer, 237 Ill. 211, 86 NE 704. Under eminent domain act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 47), § 4, and chancery act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1908, c. 22), § 16, held petition for removal not filed until after day for answering is too late, though law did not require filing of written pleading, and though no default was taken in eminent domain proceedings' notice served on nonresident, being returnable on day for answering. Id. A petition for removal is in time when filed as soon as the petitioner learns of the filing, without notice of additional pleadings in the state court, the effect of which is to disclose a removable controversy. Fritzlen v. Boatman's Bank, 212 U. S. 364, 53 Law. Ed.—. Under act of congress providing that motion be made in state court at time, or at any time before, defendant is required to answer, held motion made at close of plaintiff's evidence and after a verdict had been directed against one of defendants was too late, and properly denied. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Evans, 33 Ky. L. R. 596, 110 SW 844. Under Act congress March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 3, 18 Stat. 471, amended Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 1, 24 Stat. 552, and Act. Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 1, 25 Stat. 433 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 508, 510), application filed after expiration of time given defendant by state laws to plead is too late, and insufficient to deprive state court of jurisdiction. Wilson v. Big Joe Block Coal Co., 135 Iowa, 531, 113 NW 348. Extension of time to plead under Code, § 3554, held not to extend time fixed by § 3552, federal statute not relating to special orders granted on application or stipulation of parties. Id. Where defendants, citizens of state, were dismissed, leaving action solely between corporations of different states, removable petition presented 9 days after rendition of judgment, with no prior notice that it would be filed, held too late. Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Little Rock [Ark.] 115 SW 960. Under the Oklahoma enabling act, an application for removal may be made at any time before the termination of the second term of the court in which the case is pending. Oklahoma enabling act (Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 16, 34 Stat. 276). Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Burgess [Okl.] 95 P 606. Under Oklahoma enabling act (Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 16, 34 Stat. 276), acts of plaintiff in error held to constitute an election to proceed in state court, so as to preclude him from right to transfer cause to federal court for review, Id. Under enabling act (Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 16, 34 Stat. 276, amending Act March 4, 1907, c. 2911, § 1, 34 Stat. 1286), defendant held to have elected to proceed in state courts, so as to be precluded from having his regularly appealed case reviewed in the federal courts by not appearing upon due notice of time for hearing. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Sittel [Okl.] 97 P 362.

4. Under removal act (Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 3, 18 Stat. 470, as amended by act Aug. 3, 1888, c. 1866, § 1, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 510]), the bond must be such as is capable of enforcement in case of default. Alexandria Nat. Bank v. Willis C. Bates Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 839.

5. McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096; Barlow v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 164 F 765. No refusal to make such order will prevent the jurisdiction of that court from attaching, and all questions of the truth of the facts alleged in the petition for removal are to be determined in the federal court. Barlow v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 164 F 765. Upon a refusal of the state court to order the removal, the defendant need not proceed with the trial in that court (Id.), but he may, at his option, and it is the better practice to file a copy of the record in the federal court and require that the right of removal be contested there (Id.).

6. A removal petition must state the necessary jurisdictional facts. Santa Clara County v. Goldy Mach. Co., 159 F 750. A petition for the removal of a cause filed by one defendant alone and based solely on diversity of citizenship held fatally defective where it failed to disclose that the other defendant was merely nominal party to action and such fact did not appear elsewhere in record; nor may such defect be cured by amendment in federal court. Id. Petition filed by alien, which alleges that plaintiff is a citizen of the United States, and on information and belief that he is a citizen and resident of the district, held sufficient to give federal court jurisdiction on face of record. Holton v. Helvetia-Swiss Fire Ins. Co., 163 removal be verified, verification is the better practice.[7] The whole record may be looked to in aid of the averments of the petition, where these do not fully disclose sufficient grounds for the jurisdiction upon removal.[8] Mere conclusions in a petition for removal of a cause will not be considered.[9] A court will not assume that the allegations of a pleading are untrue and that one is joined for the purpose of preventing the removal of a cause to the federal court.[10] The right must exist upon the ground stated in the petition,[11] and, while a petition may be amended by making a more perfect statement of the alleged ground of removal,[12] an amendment will not be permitted which sets up an entirely new and distinct ground.[13] Upon the filing of a petition setting up grounds for removal of a cause from the state court to the federal court, it is the duty of the state court to accept the petition and bond and proceed no further in said suit,[14] and it is reversible error to deny an application to transfer made upon proper and sufficient grounds.[15] Where a motion for removal is denied for a defect in the petition, a renewal motion is properly denied when by an allowed amendment the cause of action remains the same.[16] When an amendment transforms

F 659. A petition for removal must state the facts which deprive the state court of the right to proceed with the case, and that the federal court has jurisdiction, together with the grounds for which the removal is asked. Neesley v. Southern Pac. Co. [Utah] 99 P 1067. Petition held insufficient, for, while title to cause showed that plaintiff was designated as a national bank, there was nothing in the petition by way of averment to show that it was organized and incorporated as a national bank under the laws of the United States, nor that bank was a citizen of Virginia, title to cause not being an averment of petition. Alexandria Nat. Bank v. Willis C. Bates Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 839. Petition avering that controversy in action is between citizens of different states, that defendant at time of commencement was, and still is, a citizen and resident of Illinois, that plaintiff was and is a resident of Iowa, held insufficient as failure to allege the citizenship of plaintiff at commencement of action. O'Connor v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 979. Where from the petition it is apparent defendant corporation is a citizen of a particular state and that it is a nonresident of another particular state, it is sufficient. Wisecarver v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 961. Need not negative every defense which may be made to the petition. Id. Allegations showing nonresidence are sufficient for the retention of jurisdiction, even if the direct statement of nonresidence is not set forth in the words of the statute, for, if plaintiff desires to controvert the alleged citizenship, proper remedy is by a countershowing. Id.

8. Gillespie v. Pocohantas Coal & Coke Co., 162 F 742. A petition is sufficient where, taken in connection with the entire record in the case, it sufficiently shows that the petitioner is the defendant in plaintiff's action. Wisecarver v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 961. Where petition averred that defendant was a corporation organized under New York laws, and defendant in answer and in his petition for removal expressly admitted that it was "a corporation or joint stock company" organized and existing under and by virtue of laws of New York, held requisite diversity of citizenship sufficiently appeared by pleadings. 11. Removal petition based wholly on ground of diverse citizenship, defendant held not entitled to removal on proof that plaintiff was an alien and that case was removable on ground that it was one brought by an alien in a state court against a citizen. § 8. Transfer of jurisdiction and other consequences of removal.[18]—See 10 C. L. 1513—If the case is removable and one of which the federal court may take jurisdiction,[19] on filing of the petition and bond the jurisdiction of the state court ceases eo instante,[20] and the court has no jurisdiction to make any order whatever except that it will proceed no further,[21] and the court to which a cause has been removed in the protection of its jurisdiction will stay further proceedings that are without authority,[22] but no stay of proceedings in a cause in a state court exists, under the provisions of the removal statute, unless the removal proceedings are valid and accomplish their purpose of divesting the state court of jurisdiction and vest the same in the federal court.[23] On removal an action comes to the federal court in the condition it was in when removed from the state court,[24] for the record as it comes from the state court for the purpose of such motion cannot be amended.[25] A petition and bond for removal are in the nature of process,[26] and defendant filing a petition for removal to a federal court consents to accept the jurisdiction of that court [27] and waives any objection to the venue and right to be sued in the federal district of his residence.[28] A

19. The provision of the removal acts that it shall be the duty of the state court to accept the petition and bond for removal of a cause and proceed no further in the suit does not apply to a suit which could not originally have been brought in the court to which the action is sought to be removed. Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, 18 St. 470 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509). Ward v. Pullman Car Corp. [Ky.] 114 SW 754. Action held not to involve question of whether property should be appropriated under power of eminent domain against owner's will and beyond federal court's jurisdiction, but to involve solely a question as to what compensation should be paid for wrongful use of land or a mere trespass, hence removable. McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096.

Lathrop, Shea & Henwood Co., 112 NYS 273; Anderson v. United Realty Co., 79 Ohio St. 23, 86 NE 644. Where a proper petition and bond are presented to a state court, the court should proceed no further with the suit. Barlow v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 164 F 765; Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kansas City, 164 F 738. Where action was begun in state court, and, after issuance of temporary injunction procured by plaintiff's giving bond, cause was removed, decided for defendant, state court held without power to grant motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 623, for a reference to ascertain damages sustained by injunction, proceeding being incident of action. Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kansas City, 164 F 738. A state court has no jurisdiction to try an issue of fact arising upon a petition or removal to a federal court; but, where the petition and bond are sufficient, the case must be removed. Wisecarver v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 961.

21. After filing of bond and petition state court, under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 1, 24 St. 554 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 510), held without jurisdiction to declare that amended complaint did not state a cause of action, and so remit plaintiff to his original complaint so as to prevent removal for insufficiency of amount involved. McCulloch v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1096.

23. Tierney v. Helvetia-Swiss Fire Ins. Co., 126 App. Div. 446, 110 NYS 613. An ex parte order of removal is void and inoperative where the petition upon which it is based fails to state the jurisdictional facts necessary to vest jurisdiction in the federal court. Petition failing to show citizenship of plaintiff's assignors. Id. Where such removal order has been made but no stay of proceedings has been obtained, the state court is not divested of jurisdiction of the case but may properly enter a default judgment on default of serving an answer. 28. Cussiarre v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 38. The statutory requirement that an action in the federal court based upon diversity of citizenship shall be brought in the district of the residence of either plaintiff or defendant is waived by the defendant's removal of the cause from the state court. De Valle Da Costa v. Southern Pac. Co., 160 F 216.

motion to vacate the service of process may properly be presented to the federal court after removal of the cause where defendant has appeared only for the purpose of such removal, whether so limited or not,[29] but consent of both parties to the federal jurisdiction waives all objections to the jurisdiction of that court over a suit which, by reason of the nonresidence of both parties, could not have been in the first instance brought in that particular circuit court,[30] and plaintiff makes a general appearance where, after removal, instead of challenging the jurisdiction by motion to remand, he files an amendment petition in the federal court and signs a stipulation giving time to answer.[31] But the jurisdiction acquired by a federal court by removal is strictly limited to the statutory grounds and tests solely on the sale of facts and controversy of record as brought from the court of original cognizance,[32] neither acquiescence of the parties, failure to press motion to remand, nor other proceeding in the federal court after removal, can enlarge the statutory authority of the federal court nor divest that of the state court.[33] After the removal of a cause into a federal court in a district in which the defendant could not originally have been sued in such court, and subsequent to notice that a motion by the plaintiff to remand the case is to be made, the defendant cannot improve his position by entering a general appearance.[34]

§ 9. Practice and procedure after removal; remand or dismissal.[35]—See 10 C. L. 1513—If it affirmatively appear after removal that the United States courts had no jurisdiction,[36] or in case of doubt as to jurisdiction, the action should be remanded,[37] the existence of grounds of removal being a question for the federal court.[38] The court can with the consent of the parties remand a cause after it has been removed,[39] and the jurisdiction may be restored by the withdrawal of the petition for removal before an action upon the petition has been taken in the federal court,[40] or the plaintiff may dismiss his action after it has been removed to a federal court and bring a second suit for the same cause in a state court.[41] Where a cause is erroneously removed from a state court to the circuit court of the United States and thereafter remanded to the state court, all orders made in the case by the circuit court except the one remanding the case are void for want of jurisdiction.[42] A case of which federal and state courts have concurrent jurisdiction properly removed to a federal court and there dismissed cannot under statute be renewed in the state court within six months of such dismissal so as to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations.[43] When a cause has been removed to the federal court on the ground of diversity of citizenship and the record supports the order of removal, the record will not thereafter be amended at plaintiff's instance, either as a matter of right or discretion, by substituting another defendant for the sole purpose of defeating the federal courts' jurisdiction.[44] The decision of the federal court in remanding that no federal question is involved is conclusive in the state courts.[45] If, after the order to remand has been made, it results from the subsequent pleadings or conduct of the parties to the cause that the cause is removable, the order remanding the cause does not control the right to make a second application for removal.[46] Mandamus does not lie to correct an error committed by a federal court in denying a motion to remand.[47] against the persons having possession when suit is begun.[54] The statutory action of claim and delivery is substantially the same as the action of replevin.[55] In some states by express statutory provision, a bill in equity will lie to recover specific personal property which is so withheld by defendant that it cannot be replevied.[56]

§ 2. Right of action and defenses.[57] See 10 C. L. 1515—In order to maintain the action, the plaintiff must have a general or special property in the goods sued for [58] and the right to immediate possession.[59] The action will lie for goods converted by a vendee, although sold in the regular course of trade and placed by the vendor in his possession.[60] The true owner may recover property attempted to be sold to an innocent purchaser by one who has merely the possession of such property.[61] Where the right of possession depends upon conditions precedent, a waiver of such conditions perfects the cause of action.[62] If the defendant's possession be lawful in the first instance, a demand is essential to the cause of action,[63] but where the taking was wrongful,[64] or where plaintiff's bailee has disposed of the property without au-

58. Plaintiff as vendor under land contract agreed orally with vendee that latter might cut certain timber on land, take it to plaintiff, who was to have it sawed, and apply balance on vendee's debt. Before delivery to plaintiff, logs were seized and sold to defendants for a debt due them from agent of vendee under land contract. Held that plaintiff had such interest in logs, although not delivered to him, as would entitle him to maintain replevin. Rohrer v. Lockery, 136 Wis. 532, 117 NW 1060. Plaintiff sold certain iron pillars to firm of contractors doing work for defendant. This firm transferred its right to goods to defendant by incorporating them into houses which were being built for defendant. Thereafter, being unable to pay plaintiff, they gave order on defendant who refused to surrender possession. Held not entitled to recover. Fagan Iron Works v. Dawson Realty Co., 109 NYS 740. Replevin could not be maintained under authority of a chattel mortgage for goods to be paid for by instalments where it appeared that the mortgage and note which it secured had been abandoned and a new agreement made. Rhodes-Burford Co. v. Gartner, 133 Ill. App. 164.

59. Must prove that he was entitled to possession of property when action for claim and delivery commenced. Segars v. Segars [S. C.] 63 SE 891. Defendants, having taken possession of planing mill under instrument alleged to be mortgage, but on which time had not expired, could not retain such property as against plaintiff's writ of replevin. Cummings v. Badger Lumber Co., 130 Mo. App. 557, 109 SW 68. Evidence held to show that plaintiff was entitled to possession as lessee of land from which defendant, also claiming as lessee, cut hay sought to be replevied, and therefore entitled to maintain the action. Loucks v. Winne, 127 App. Div. 460, 111 NYS 485. Held that evidence showed that household goods seized under execution upon a judgment for alimony while in possession of plaintiff in replevin as trustee under will of plaintiff's wife were the property of the deceased and rightfully held by plaintiff. Dreyer v. Dickman, 131 Mo. App. 660, 111 SW 616.

60. Stock of whips sold by plaintiff, and by defendant sold to another in fraud of plaintiff, could be treated by latter as its own and recovered by it from such third party. American-German Nat. Bank v. Gray & Dudley Hardware Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 547, 110 SW 393.

61. Evidence held to show that plaintiff's foreman who sold team bought with plaintiff's money had never acquired title as against plaintiff. Hussey v. Blaylock [Okl.] 95 P 773. Unauthorized sale by bailee. Taylor v. Welsh, 138 Ill. App. 190.

62. Replevin of goods stored in warehouse, return of which could be had only upon condition precedent of returning warehouse receipt, could be maintained where return of such receipt was waived by basing refusal to deliver upon another ground and by making refusal before plaintiff had opportunity to tender receipt. Duffy v. Wilson [Colo.] 98 P 826.

63. Where it appeared that horses replevied by plaintiff under claim of loan to defendant's brother were held by defendant under claim of contract of sale from plaintiff, replevin could not lie in absence of demand. Anderson v. Pendl, 153 Mich. 693, 15 Det. Leg. N. 588, 117 NW 326.

64. Demand not necessary where horse rethority, no demand is necessary.[65] Property seized by an officer under a writ of attachment,[66] or by virtue of an execution against a third person, may be recovered without making a previous demand therefor.[67] The plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own interest,[68] and if such interest is not exclusive, no action will lie.[69] The right to recover may depend upon title and ownership of the property,[70] but such title cannot be litigated if the plaintiff already has possession,[71] and how title was acquired is immaterial.[72] At common law and in some states, replevin will not lie unless the defendant is in possession at the commencement of the action,[73] but the modern rule, under statutes allowing a judgment in the alternative, is that possession in the defendant is unnecessary,[74] and in Illinois constructive possession is sufficient.[75] plevied was taken from plaintiff's barn in night time without his consent. Ryan v. Schutt, 135 Ill. App. 554.

65. No demand necessary before bringing replevin for cat attempted to be sold by person in whose charge it was. Taylor v. Welsh, 138 Ill. App. 190.

66. Brady v. Whaley [Kan.] 98 P 1134.

67. No demand necessary where plaintiff, as assignee in insolvency, had legal title and possession, which was taken from him by constable acting under execution against assignor. Pogue v. Rowe, 236 Ill. 157, 86 NE 207.

68. Not sufficient to show that property sought to be replevied from sheriff, holding under attachment, did not belong to defendants, or that it did belong to others. McLeroth v. Magerstadt, 136 Ill. App. 361.

69. Where it appeared that plaintiff had merely an undivided eleven-twelfths interest in barges sought to be replevied, and owner of remaining interest was not joined, no action in replevin would lie. McCabe v. Black River Transp. Co., 131 Mo. App. 531, 110 SW 606.

70. Plaintiff held to have title: On replevin by receivers for recovery of certain copper wire, defendants alleged that wire was in its possession as bailee of one who claimed ownership under an attachment, and that action could not be maintained until proper demand and refusal. Held evidence showed service of writ after refusal, and that upon refusal plaintiff could replevy property immediately. Littlefield v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 71 A 657. Plaintiff claiming general property in engine and pump was entitled to possession as against defendants who claimed as vendees of owner without notice, it appearing that plaintiff had made proper demand, that defendants claimed as owners, and that plaintiff was not estopped by accrediting former owner's asserted title. O'Neill v. Thompson, 152 Mich. 396, 15 Det. Leg. N. 299, 116 NW 399. In suit for replevin of goods sold at auction and not paid for by note according to agreement, evidence held to show that defendants had no vested right to the property. Bailey v. Dennis [Mo. App.] 115 SW 506. Evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff had purchased cattle replevied prior to execution of mortgage under which defendant held possession. Kime v. Bank of Edgemont [S. D.] 119 NW 1003. Plaintiff in replevin for yokes and collars manufactured by him from defendant's raw material, having paid to defendant a judgment obtained by latter for spoiling such raw material by inefficient workmanship, held to have title to such goods by virtue of implied special assumpsit raised by the judgment against him. Bauer v. Hess [N. J. Law] 69 A 966.

Plaintiff held not to have title: Replevin could not be maintained for saddle bought by defendant under execution against plaintiff which execution embodied the amounts of two judgments, since, execution being merely irregular and not void, upon elimination of amount of the excessive judgment, sale was valid. Bigham v. Dover [Ark.] 110 SW 217. In a suit for replevin of a stock of goods taken in trade by plaintiff, instruction that plaintiff acquired no title until delivery to him of possession and offer of performance on his part held correct. Robinson v. Yetter, 238 Ill. 320, 87 NE 363. Where plaintiff sought to recover, by replevin, team of mules, title to which he claimed under contract with defendant, and evidence showed that contract had been broken on plaintiff's part, held that title did not vest in plaintiff and action could not be maintained. Ellis v. Whitney [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 158. Right to bring action in replevin on breach of conditional sale of horse held barred by previous election to treat title as having passed and bringing suit for balance due. Frisch v. Wells, 200 Mass. 429, 86 NE 775. Evidence held to show that delivery of switchboard to bankrupt defendants by plaintiff was a sale passing title, and therefore not subject to replevin for failure to pay purchase price. Detroit Trust Co. v. F. Bissell Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 919, 118 NW 722.

71. While proper to litigate title of suit brought by one who has right to do so, it cannot be litigated if evidence shows that plaintiff already has possession. Sloan v. Merchants' Sav. & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 654.

72. Where owner of automobile disposed of it by lottery to plaintiff and gave him an order for same on defendant garage keeper, who subsequently refused to deliver same on ground that others were joint owners with plaintiff and that joint order was necessary, held that question of illegality could not come up, title having already passed from former owner to plaintiff. Dee v. Sears-Nattinger Automobile Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 529.

73. Would not lie against executrix to recover property sold and delivered by her to purchaser without notice, which property was claimed by plaintiff under bill of sale executed by decedent. Runge v. Wilson, 7 Cal. App. 577, 95 P 178.

74. Plaintiff entitled to damages for unlawful seizure by defendants, although latter not in possession at commencement of

Replevin will not lie to recover the value of labor or services,[76] nor for the recovery of title deeds where the controversy would involve the title to the land.[77] The action will lie to recover the possession of tangible personal property,[78] although it is part of a mass and through confusion with goods belonging to the defendant is incapable of identification.[79]

In some states set-off cannot be pleaded in replevin,[80] and the counterclaims which may be set up are restricted by the peculiar nature of the action.[81] Where the court has no jurisdiction of an affirmative defense, it cannot be set up as a counterclaim.[82] Title and right of possession in a third person,[83] or want of right of possession in defendant, is a complete defense.[84] The action may be barred by estoppel.[85]

75. Where replevin suit was dismissed and defendant told by constable to take his property, he had such constructive possession thereof, although he had not actually retaken the property, as would enable replevin by another to be maintained for the same property. Lee v. Laswell, 137 Ill. App. 433.

76. Where verdict was given for chattels replevied and also for labor and services in installing them in defendant's building, judgment for plaintiff must be reversed. Roth v. Felt, 111 NYS 649.

77. Would not lie for deed to exchanged lands where defendant claimed no delivery was intended until title examined. Campbell v. Brooks [Miss.] 47 S 545. Replevin, or the provisional remedy of claim and delivery which is a substitute for replevin and detinue, is appropriate for the recovery of deeds, when the object of the action is to regain possession of the specific paper, and not to test the right or title to the property which it represents. Where the right to demand delivery of the deed in dispute, the action will not lie. Bridgers v. Ormond, 148 N. C. 375, 62 SE 422.

78. Certificate of stock is tangible personal property, subject to replevin. Opperman v. Citizens' Bank [Ind. App.] 85 NE 991. Logs are chattels, and when wrongfully detained their value may be recovered in replevin. Sanborn v. Franklin County Lumber Co., 55 Fla. 389, 46 S 85.

79. Recovery could be had although defendants had wrongfully mixed plaintiff's ore with inferior ore belonging to them, and although, upon the seizure, part of defendant's ore was also taken. Blurton v. Hansen [Mo. App.] 116 SW 474.

80. In replevin for boiler and engine leased, one defendant could not allege that he had a lien thereon for debt of codefendant, who was his partner. Eureka Knitting Co. v. Snyder, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 336.

81. Those counterclaims which will aid instead of hinder court in adjusting rights of litigants in respect to the "transaction" or "subject of action" in sense these words are used in Rev. St. 1899, § 605, regulating counterclaims. Small v. Speece, 131 Mo. App. 513, 110 SW 7. Defendant may set up, as counterclaim to an action in replevin for the recovery of certain mules, his damages caused by plaintiff's breach of his contract to allow defendant to work with mules furnished by plaintiff. Bateman v. Hipp [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 971.

82. In replevin, defendant set up by way of counterclaim a demand for the surrender and cancellation of notes held by plaintiff for sale of piano replevied on ground of fraud. Held that, as this relief was an equitable one, and as the action was begun in justice court, the counterclaim could not be maintained, justice having no jurisdiction of the defense. Small v. Speece, 131 Mo. App. 513, 110 SW 7.

83. Replevin of mortgaged wheat by mortgagee cannot be sustained where evidence showed that title to wheat was in third party. First Nat. Bank v. Farquharson [Okl.] 97 P 559.

84. Libelants instituted a petitory and possessory suit for a quantity of bay rum in possession of collector of customs under claim that it was subject to tax. Collector was not served, but the United States filed notice alleging that goods were subject to internal revenue tax. Held that, in absence of affirmative proceeding on part of government other than such notice, the libelant was entitled to possession of the goods. Plaut v. One Hundred & Seven Barrels of Porto Rican Bay Rum, 165 F 941.

85. In replevin of mare fraudulently sold by owner's bailee, evidence held insufficient to show that statements made by owner's agent to person in possession of mare were misleading in that they did not disclose owner's claim and that there was therefor no estoppel. Martin v. Stong, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 635. Plaintiff not estopped to claim title to bureau left in father's dwelling until his death, when it was sold by his executor under impression that it belonged to his estate. Guillou v. Campbell, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 639. Plaintiff held not entitled to maintain replevin for stock certificate for 2,500 shares held by defendant for benefit of plaintiff and third party, it appearing that third party owned 500 shares represented by the certificates, and that plaintiff himself prevented delivery by defendant by breach of his agreement to allow stock to be reissued in form of three certificates giving each of the parties their share. Sulzner v. Cappeau [Pa.] 72 A 270.

before a justice of the peace, the amount in controversy is jurisdictional.[87] Where the value of the property replevied exceeds the extent of the justice's jurisdiction, he has merely the power to return the property to the defendant,[88] and appeal confers no jurisdiction upon the circuit court.[89]

§ 4. The affidavit.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1518—The affidavit need not allege that the property was wrongfully taken,[91] nor its value, unless jurisdiction depends thereon,[92] in which case it is prima facie evidence of the value of the goods replevied.[93] Where the statute makes an affidavit necessary, goods replevied without such affidavit,[94] or upon an affidavit subsequently withdrawn, must be returned to the defendant.[95]

§ 5. Plaintiff's bond.[96]—See 8 C. L. 1735—The defendant may waive a replevin bond, since it is provided for his protection.[97] A wife, as owner of the property replevied, may execute the bond jointly with her husband.[98]

§ 6. The writ and its execution.[99]—See 8 C. L. 1735—If the writ describes the property insufficiently, a motion to quash is proper.[1]

§ 7. Custody and delivery of property.[2]—See 10 C. L. 1519—The property replevied may be placed in the custody of the officer, to be held by him until final judgment.[3] Where bankruptcy proceedings are subsequently instituted against the defendant, he cannot be summarily compelled to deliver such property to the receiver.[4]

87. Where it appeared that value of the property replevied exceeds two hundred dollars, justice was without jurisdiction under Rev. St. c. 79, art. 2, par. 5. Jarrett v. McIntyre, 134 Ill. App. 581. Value of property replevied may be determined by jury in justice court where suit commenced in order to determine whether justice has jurisdiction of amount involved. Id.

92. Statement in affidavit as to value of iron tank and copper coils sought to be replevied held immaterial on trial of case on merits, no question of jurisdiction being raised. Mattoon H. L. & P. Co. v. Walker, 134 Ill. App. 414.

93. Richardson v. Gilbert, 135 Ill. App. 363.

94. Where petition does not allege that property sought to be replevied "has not been seized under any process, execution or attachment against the property of the plaintiff," nor "that plaintiff will be in danger of losing said property unless it be taken out of the possession of defendant or otherwise secured," and where there is no affidavit to that effect as required by Rev. St. 1899, § 4463 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2447), the property must be returned to defendant if delivered before judgment. United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Ramlose, 210 Mo. 631, 109 SW 567.

95. If plaintiff's original petition was sworn to and contained allegations required in affidavit provided for by Rev. St. 1899, § 4463, and under that petition, plaintiff obtained possession, and thereafter filed unverified amended petition which did not contain these averments, and there was no affidavit on file, separate and apart from petition, which accompanied original petition containing these necessary averments, then filing of amended petition was a withdrawal of the first, and defendant was entitled to return of property; but if there was an affidavit on file when amended petition was filed, which was not part of original petition, then amended petition did not operate to withdraw the affidavit, and defendant was not entitled to return of property. United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Ramlose, 210 Mo. 631, 109 SW 567.

4. Where sheriff in action pending in state court holds property in replevin taken by him prior to bankruptcy proceedings under claim of ownership, district court has no jurisdiction by summary order to compel sheriff to deliver property to receiver. In re Rudnick & Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 903.

Forthcoming bond.—See 10 C. L. 1519—Where property retained under a forthcoming bond has been partly destroyed, judgment may be entered in favor of the plaintiff for its entire value.[5] In Pennsylvania a writ will issue upon judgment in plaintiff's favor for the return of property retained by defendant under a forthcoming bond.[6] Where the sheriff has released all claim to property, one in whose custody he has placed it has no lien thereon for charges.[7]

§ 8. The pleadings and parties to the action.[8]—See 10 C. L. 1519—The petition should allege ownership or a general or special interest in the property,[9] the facts creating the plaintiff's interest[10] and that the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant.[11] A general allegation of ownership may be sufficient without specifically alleging the right of possession also.[12] The facts relied upon to establish the cause of action need not be pleaded.[13] Unless the statutes requires it,[14] the value of the property need not be alleged.[15] Demand, being a matter of proof, need not be set out.[16] The petition must give such a description of the property as will enable the officer to identify it,[17] and, if it be insufficient, objection should be raised by demur-

5. Where all but small portion of property retained by defendant under forthcoming bond was accidentally distroyed by fire, judgment should have been entered in plaintiff's favor for entire ascertained value. Bradley v. Campbell, 132 Mo. App. 78, 111 SW 514.

6. At common law and prior to passage of Act April 19, 1901 (P. L. 88), regulating procedure in replevin, if defendant retained possession under claimed property bond, plaintiff could only recover damages, such bond putting an end to his title; but after passage of act, plaintiff may have a writ of retorno habendo, as well as one of fieri facias, to recover value and damages. Reber v. Schroeder, 221 Pa. 152, 70 A 556. By virtue of Act April 19, 1901 (P. L. 88), regulating procedure in replevin, plaintiff held to be entitled in judgment to return of stock certificates in possession of defendant at time of his death and held by him under claim property bond, and to be entitled to writ enforcing such right. Averment that plaintiff was "lawfully entitled to the possession," insufficient. Donnell v. Miller, 133 Mo. App. 693, 113 SW 1132. Petition failing to allege that plaintiff had general or special interest in barges sought to be replevied, fatally defective. McCabe v. Black River Transp. Co. 131 Mo. App. 531, 110 SW 606.

10. Complaint alleging that plaintiffs are owners and are entitled to possession, and reciting facts showing that title was acquired under chattel mortgage not detracting from allegation held sufficient. Donovan v. Stuber, 114 NYS 593. Complaint affirmatively showing that plaintiff was mortgagee of property in South Dakota, which property was seized by sheriff in Nebraska under judgment, that debt secured by mortgage was neither due nor paid, but stating no facts showing plaintiff entitled to possession, held insufficient. Pennington County Bank v. Bauman [Neb.] 116 NW 669.

11. All that plaintiff need allege is that he is owner of, or has a special interest in, the property, with right of possession, and that property is wrongfully detained by defendant. Remington Typewriter Co. v. Simpson [Neb.] 120 NW 428.

12. Since ownership imports right of possession, such allegation sufficient under Code. Illinois Sewing Mach. Co. v. Harrison, 43 Colo. 362, 96 P 177.

13. Remington Typewriter Co. v. Simpson [Neb.] 120 NW 428. Complaint need not set out particular certificate by which shares of stock sought to be replevied are held. Hill v. Kerstetter [Ind. App.] 86 NE 997.

14. Value of each separate article must be alleged under Code to enable court to render money judgment in case defendant fails to deliver the property. American-German Nat. Bank v. Gray & Dudley Hardware Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 547, 110 SW 393.

15. Allegation of value unnecessary, but an averment that plaintiffs gave bond in certain amount, being twice value of said goods, would have been sufficient. Littlefield v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 71 A 657.

16. Littlefield v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 71 A 657.

17. Affidavit describing property as 2,500 pounds of zinc and lead ore, the same being a quantity of said ore delivered to defendants on a day named, to be milled, of the value of $50, and alleging that it had been damaged by being mixed with inferior ore, held sufficiently definite. Blurton v. Hansen [Mo. App.] 116 SW 474. Petition setting forth name and value of each item of property sued for is a sufficiently definite description of the property sought to be recovered. Charles v. Valdosta Foundry & Mach. Co., 4 Ga. App. 733, 62 SE 493. Where neither pleadings nor evidence described harness sought to be replevied so as to identify it, no recovery thereof could be had. Ellis v. Whitney [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 158. Description in writ of one reel 4-0 grooved copper trolley wire berer.[18] The declaration need not anticipate and negative defendant's claim of right of possession.[19] An answer which fails to allege the insufficiency of a tender by plaintiff is demurrable.[20] If the complaint is silent as to the source of the plaintiff's title, the defendant may show that it is fraudulent without pleading the fraud.[21] If the statute requires that an affidavit of defense be filed within a given time, it cannot be filed afterwards.[22] It is within the discretion of the court to allow an allegation of special ownership to be substituted for one of general ownership.[23] Any matter which will defeat plaintiff's claim may be proved under a general [24] or specific denial.[25]

A foreign corporation may bring the action without averring compliance with the statute regarding the right of such corporations to sue.[26] One not the sole owner of chattels cannot sue without joining the remaining owners,[27] but a partner may maintain replevin of property sold to the firm, and his recovery is that of the firm.[28] One who claims no interest in the controversy is not a proper party to the action.[29]

§ 9. Evidence.[30]—See 10 C. L. 1621—The plaintiff must prove his general or special right of ownership [31] by a preponderance of evidence.[32] In Maryland it is not longing to plaintiffs held sufficient. Littlefield v. Maine Central R. Co. [Me.] 71 A 657.

18. Anderson v. Stewart [Md.] 70 A 228.

19. Where plaintiff claimed that defendant held as his bailee, and defendant contended he held as bailee of plaintiff and others jointly, plaintiff could show that written agreement upon which such latter claim was based was not binding, although declaration contained no averment to that effect. Dee v. Sears-Nattinger Autmobile Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 529.

20. Where defendant sought to set up as a defense to replevin suit for cars held on demurrage charges that amount tendered by plaintiff was not a reasonable sum for the demurrage, and that amount claimed by defendant was reasonable, but failed so to allege, demurrer would lie. Darlington Lumber Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 530.

21. Where plaintiff merely alleged ownership of goods in hands of sheriff, latter could show that contract between plaintiff and judgment debtor was fraudulent, although no fraud pleaded. Walker v. Ward, 104 Minn. 386, 116 NW 647.

22. Replevin Act of April 19, 1901, § 4 (P. L. 88), providing that defendant shall, within 15 days after filing of declaration, file an affidavit of defense, held to be mandatory, and that plaintiff was entitled to judgment by default where no such affidavit filed, although return day was subsequent to expiration of 15 days. Griesmer v. Hill, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 69.

23. Amendment setting up special ownership as pledgee, allowed. Gray v. Doty, 77 Kan. 446, 94 P 1008.

24. In replevin for goods mortgaged to secure note endorsed to plaintiff, failure of consideration could properly be shown under general denial. Dewey v. Bobbitt [Kan.] 100 P 77. Defendants, who were sued for recovery of stock of goods which plaintiff had placed in their possession to be disposed of with option of purchase, could, under general denial, show that they claimed goods under sale from plaintiff's alleged vendee. Kaufman v. Cooper [Mont.] 98 P 504.

25. Question in replevin being the right to possession of specific personal property, and under a pleading that puts in issue all allegations of the complaint and denies right to possession of plaintiff any evidence tending to show right of possession in another is admissible. First Nat. Bank v. Barbour [Okl.] 95 P 790. Where replevin was brought to recover possession of certain personal property covered by mortgage in order to sell same, fact that note had been paid because of misapplication of payment by plaintiff to another note was admissible under specific denial. 28. Anderson v. Stewart [Md.] 70 A 228.

29. In replevin for property in hands of defendant which had been purchased by him from third party who had possession subject to plaintiff's lien for money advanced, such third party, claiming no interest, is not a proper party defendant. Hight v. Oates [Ark.] 113 SW 40. Replevin to recover certain promissory notes payable to plaintiff, executed by one under guardianship. Guardian was defendant and alleged application of payment to one of the notes, but did not claim to have accounted to plaintiff for money so applied. Held, ward not a proper party, since he did not claim any interest in the notes, his only claim being against defendant. Gerth v. Gerth, 7 Cal. App. 735, 95 P 904.

31. Plaintiff as mortgagee must show that property replevied under chattel mortgage in fact belonged to mortgagor. First Nat. Bank v. Farquharson [Okl.] 97 P 559. In replevin for mule alleged to have been sold on condition that title should be reserved in vendor until purchase price paid, evidence held insufficient to show in ab-necessary that the plaintiff show absolute title, the only issue being the right of possession at the time of issuing the writ.[33] In the absence of direct evidence, possession is prima facie evidence of ownership.[34] If the question of ownership be in dispute, it must be submitted to the jury if there is evidence thereof.[35] The burden is upon the plaintiff to show his right of possession to the identical property in question [36] by sufficient evidence.[37] Parol evidence is admissible to identify property described under general words merely.[38] When the sheriff has seized the property a presumption arises that he seized the property described in the writ, and the defendant has the burden of controverting such presumption.[39] An officer who holds a writ of attachment is not required to prove the debt of the attaching creditor, where possession was taken from the officer and not from the attaching creditor.[40] The value of the property replevied is not competent when offered merely for the purpose of laying foundation for an appeal to the supreme court.[41] No plaintiff may, on a second trial, introduce evidence inconsistent with that relied upon in the first.[42] sence of admission of conditional sale that plaintiff had title to the mule. Black v. Roberson [Ark.] 112 SW 402.

32. Where hog sought to be replevied was conceded to be in defendant's possession, instruction that finding must be for defendant if plaintiff failed to establish by preponderance of evidence that hog belonged to him was correct. McMahon v. Scott, 132 Ill. App. 582. Undisputed testimony that property belonged to plaintiff, that it had been taken by defendant, that demand had been made, that it was of a certain value, establishes a prima facie case. Kimmitt v. Deitrich [S. D.] 119 NW 986.

Conditional sales: Immaterial in replevin for goods sold whether they were leased or sold upon condition that title should not pass until full payment, since in either case, or breach of condition, replevin will lie at the suit of vendor. Branstetter Motor Co. v. Silverberg, 140 Ill. App. 451. Evidence held to show that automobile replevied was sold upon condition that title should not pass until purchase price paid. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff, in replevin for cow alleged to have been bought with money advanced by plaintiff, with a reservation of title in him, was not entitled to the ownership. Hight v. Oates [Ark.] 113 SW 40.

Chattel mortgages: Evidence held not to sustain findings that defendant who held possession of replevied cattle under chattel mortgage was entitled to the property as against plaintiff who claimed ownership by purchase, it appearing that plaintiff's husband had, without her authority, given defendant permission to mortgage cattle. Roberts v. Little [N. D.] 120 NW 563. The right of plaintiff in replevin being based upon a chattel mortgage, the meeting and overthrowing of the mortgage by rights existing in the mortgagor overthrew it for all the defendants. Bayse v. McKinney [Ind. App.] 87 NE 693. In replevin for live stock claimed by plaintiff under chattel mortgage alleged by defendant to be fraudulent, evidence held to show that mortgagor had title and that plaintiff was entitled to recover possession. Berwick v. McClure [Minn.] 119 NW 247.

33. Anderson v. Stewart [Md.] 70 A 228.

34. Question as to whether property replevied under mortgage was owned by defendant when he executed mortgage thereon. First Nat. Bank v. Adams [Neb.] 118 NW 1055.

35. Where plaintiff claimed to be owner of crops in hands of sheriff, seized by him on execution against plaintiff's alleged tenant, held that there was sufficient evidence to require submission to jury of question of ownership as between plaintiff and judgment debtor. Walker v. Ward, 104 Minn. 386, 116 NW 647.

36. Brunson v. Volunteer Carriage Co. [Miss.] 47 S 377.

37. In replevin for a hog, where case turned upon its identification, instruction that burden was upon plaintiff to prove his case by a preponderance of the evidence held correct. McMahon v. Scott, 132 Ill. App. 582. Evidence held insufficient to show that buggy sought to be replevied was the one sold by plaintiff to defendant. Brunson v. Volunteer Carriage Co. [Miss.] 47 S 377. Evidence held insufficient to show that stolen diamond ring sought to be replevied was the ring in defendant's possession. Ehrman v. Simpson, 110 NYS 481.

38. Charles v. Valdosta Foundry Mach. Co., 4 Ga. App. 733, 62 SE 493.

39. Sheriff's return, "Replevied and delivered to plaintiff," raises a presumption that he was able to locate and identify the property described in writ, and burden is upon defendant to show that property replevied is not the same which plaintiff intended should be replevied. Anderson v. Stewart [Md.] 70 A 228.

40. In replevin brought by vendor for chattels sold conditionally, against constable who holds possession under writ of attachment issued against vendee at instance of a stranger to the replevin suit, the constable is not required to prove debt of attaching creditor, where possession was taken from officer and not from attaching creditor. Curtis-Baum Co. v. Lang [Neb.] 120 NW 178.

§ 10. Trial.[47]—See 10 C. L. 1522—The sole issue to be determined is the right to the possession of the property.[48] The issue of ownership [49] and right of possession may be one for the jury.[50] If plaintiff fail to prove a joint wrongful taking as alleged, he may elect at the trial as to which of the defendants he will proceed against.[51] The plaintiff may meet defendant's claim on the bond, although the suit is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.[52] A motion to dismiss will lie only when the record discloses that the court has no jurisdiction.[53] Instructions must not be misleading.[54] examination with view to purchase, and that written conditional contract was a forgery. Remington Typewriter Co. v. Simpson [Neb.] 120 NW 428.

43. Where complaint in claim and delivery set out that defendants sold plaintiffs certain tobacco which was delivered to plaintiffs, that it was in a house on defendant's land, and was to be hauled by them to plaintiff's warehouse, and proof showed an agreement that tobacco should remain in defendant's possession as property of plaintiff, held no material variance. Andrews v. Grimes, 148 N. C. 437, 62 SE 519. Evidence of sales, contract for goods replevied showing sale to have been made to plaintiff's firm instead of to plaintiff as alleged, not a variance under title that plaintiff need only show right of possession. Anderson v. Stewart [Md.] 70 A 228.

44. Evidence that plaintiff in claim and delivery for horse, buggy and harness, told defendant that if property was his he could take it, that property was taken in plaintiff's absence and without his authority, held not to show an admission of defendant's ownership or of a surrender to him. Taylor v. Mills, 148 N. C. 415, 62 SE 556. Admission of defendant that he was in possession does not justify judgment against him where he is an innocent purchaser without notice of plaintiff's fraud in acquiring property. American-German Nat. Bank v. Gray & Dudley Hardware Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 547, 110 SW 393.

45. Evidence on claim and delivery of tobacco alleged to have been sold by defendants to plaintiff, that plaintiff had placed insurance thereon, held competent as to title and possession. Andrews v. Grimes, 148 N. C. 437, 62 SE 519. Ancillary process issued under statute in claim and delivery, and return thereon, admissible, though return not filed within 20 days. Kimmitt v. Deitrich [S. D.] 119 NW 986. In replevin for live stock, evidence as to the name of the record owner of the land upon which the live stock was kept properly received on question of location and possession. Bernick v. McClure [Minn.] 119 NW 247.

46. In replevin for stock of goods which plaintiff had placed in possession of G to be disposed of with option to purchase, which goods were subsequently delivered to defendants under similar contract, evidence offered by defendants of payments made by G while he was in possession was not material. Kaufman v. Cooper [Mont.] 98 P 504. In replevin for cattle held by defendant under lien for pasturage, held that evidence relating to what cattle would have gained on first class feed during time they were pastured was immaterial under pleadings and issues. Bouvier v. Brass [Ariz.] 100 P 799. In claim and delivery of live stock under chattel mortgage, evidence as to how many head of stock were in mortgagor's possession a year after mortgage executed held irrelevant. Kime v. Bank of Edgmont [S. D.] 119 NW 1003.

Brady v. Whaley [Kan.] 98 P 1134.

49. Question as to which of parties was entitled to ownership of jeweler's tools replevied, one for jury. Morris v. Williams, 131 Mo. App. 370, 111 SW 607.

50. Where, if defendant's testimony be true, horses replevied were rightfully in his possession under contract of sale, and where no demand had been made upon him for a return, it was error to direct a verdict for plaintiff, who claimed that he had loaned horses to defendant's brother and that there was no sale. Anderson v. Pendl, 153 Mich. 693, 15 Det. Leg. N. 588, 117 NW 326.

51. Where joint taking of plaintiff's team by city marshal and another was alleged, it was error to deny plaintiff the right to make election. Krebs Hop Co. v. Taylor [Or.] 98 P 494. On rehearing; for former opinion, see Id. 97 P 44.

52. Dismissal of a replevin suit for want of jurisdiction does not preclude plaintiff from meeting defendant's claim that he had been injured by breach of the replevin bond with showing that defendant had not been injured because not entitled to possession of the property. Rev. St. 1899, § 3924. Bailey v. Dennis [Mo. App.] 115 SW 506.

53. A motion to dismiss will not lie on ground of insufficient description of property taken; want of allegation of ownership, or right of possession in plaintiffs; want of allegation of demand before suit; and want of allegation of value. These objections should be raised by demurrer. Littlefield v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 71 A 657. Verdict and findings.—See 10 C. L. 1523—A verdict for plaintiff is properly directed where the uncontradicted evidence shows title and right of possession in him,[55] but a defendant is not entitled to a directed verdict merely because the plaintiff obtained possession of the property before trial.[56] A general verdict where only a special interest is claimed, and which ignored an instruction to fix the value of the property, is irregular.[57] The verdict is not fatally defective in not specifying in whose possession the property was.[58] If the verdict fails to designate the specific articles to be returned to the plaintiff, objection should be made by motion to make it more complete.[59] Such designation, however, need not be made or the specific value of the articles stated where it appears from the petition that they have been disposed of,[60] or where plaintiff has obtained possession before trial or is not entitled to possession.[61] The defendant waives his right to a separate valuation if he does not demand it, or if he fails to object to the verdict before the jury is discharged.[62] A special finding of ownership is conclusive where no exception is taken.[63]

§ 11. Judgment and award of damages.[64]—See 10 C. L. 1523—The judgment should be alternative in form, providing for possession, or, if possession cannot be had, for the value of the property,[65] instead of for a specified omount.[66] The alternatives should be those prescribed by the statute.[67] In Kentucky the plaintiff may elect to take an execution for the value even though the property be tendered.[68] Under the Colorado statute, the entire property must be returned substantially in the same condition as when taken or judgment for its full value must be given.[69] Where defend-fendant claimed to be the innocent purchaser, a charge to find for plaintiff, if at time of bringing suit defendant had no notice of plaintiff's claim, held error, as being misleading in that, though jury might have concluded that plaintiff was estopped, yet they could not find for defendant if, as evidence showed, at time suit was brought defendant had knowledge of plaintiff's claim. Sparks v. De Bord [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 757. In replevin for siphon bottles, instruction that, if jury found for defendant, they should fix the value of the bottles and defendant's interest in them, held not open to objection that it was misleading, evidence showing title to be in defendants. Enno-Sander Mineral Water Co. v. Fishman, 127 Mo. App. 207, 104 SW 1156.

55. Where the uncontradicted evidence showed that plaintiff had bought lumber and that his agent, acting within apparent scope of his authority, had contracted debts for its transportation, whereby it was sold to defendant by sheriff, a verdict for plaintiff should have been directed, it appearing that title was in him. Cooper v. Ratliff [Ky.] 116 SW 748.

61. If articles for which petition asks a return have been surrendered to the plaintiff before trial, or if proof shows that they belong to defendant, or not the property of plaintiff, it is not necessary for the jury to find in their verdict concerning such articles. Gambrell v. Gambrell [Ky.] 113 SW 885.

63. A special finding by the jury that the plaintiff, in replevin for a horse to which he claimed title under assignment of a Holmes note, had himself authorized assignor of note, who was payee therein, to sell horse to innocent purchaser, is conclusive where exceptions fail to show what the issues were. ant retains possession under a forthcoming bond, the judgment should order a return of the property to the plaintiff, and, if not returned, for the value, with interest and costs.[70] If plaintiff is entitled only to part of the goods, one judgment must be rendered for him as to that part and another judgment for the return of the remainder to defendant.[71] Whese the property is in plaintiff's possession under a replevin bond, a judgment for the defendant should give him the right to take immediate possession, or, at his election, a recovery against the plaintiff and his sureties on the bond.[72] Damages for detention of the property should be the same whether a return can be had or not.[73] Such damages are to be computed to the date of filing the complaint, and not to entry of judgment.[74] Where property sold conditionally is replevied by the vendor, the amount paid by the vendee may be considered on the question of damages.[75] An injury to the property itself is a proper subject for damages.[76] In a proper case, stipulated rent of the property replevied is an element of damages.[77] That the judgment as entered makes the sureties liable on the replevin bond, while the judgment as rendered by the court does not, is not sufficient to impeach the judgment as entered.[78]

§ 12. Costs.[79]—See 8 C. L. 1741.—The plaintiff may have costs although he recovers judgment for part of the goods only.[80]

§ 13. Review.[81]—See 10 C. L. 1525.—A presumption that plaintiff retains an interest in the subject-matter of the controversy is sufficient to entitle him to appeal.[82] The issue of estoppel to claim ownership will not be considered where first raised on appeal.[83] Mere clerical errors in the notice of appeal are harmless.[84]

§ 14. Liability of plaintiff or his bond, and of receiptors.[85] See 10 C. L. 1525—The bond in replevin is statutory and creates no liability unless a return of the property is adjudged.[86] The liability of the sureties cannot be enlarged by any equities that may arise between the parties to the suit.[87] All who are in privity with defendant and have an interest in the suit are entitled to the benefits of the bond where such interest is duly shown.[88] Suit may be brought on the bond regardless of the fact that the court had no jurisdiction of the replevin action.[89] Matters litigated in the replevin suit cannot be retried in the suit on the plaintiff's bond.[90] The plaintiff need not prove that the goods were not returned to him where such fact is admitted of record.[91] Where a return is adjudged but the value of the property is not found, the defendant may nevertheless maintain his action on the bond to recover its value.[92] A judgment that defendant recover the property in plaintiff's possession if not delivered within ten days is allowable.[93] The judgment must show the value of each separate article of the property replevied.[94] Where the wife is a joint principal with the husband, judgment must be entered against her in order to bind the sureties.[95] Defendant's attorney's fees may properly be included in the judgment.[96]

general rule, equity, in exercising jurisdiction to establish an instrument which is to constitute a muniment of title, requires strong and conclusive proof of its former existence.[1] When the papers of a case are lost and a proceeding is instituted to supply the lost record, the proof taken by the commissioner in the proceedings may be read as a substituted record,[2] but the testimony taken by the commissioner is the evidence upon which the court must act in making a substitution for the lost record.[3] When the record has been properly supplied by an order of the court, the judgment of the court is conclusive that all preliminary steps were properly taken,[4] but until it is thus supplied, the substituted record cannot be read.[5] Where a court is required to pass upon the sufficiency of proof, it acts in a judicial capacity.[6]

§ 2. Proceedings to restore lost papers or instruments.[7]—See 10 C. L. 1526.—Equity has jurisdiction to restore lost instrument,[8] but proceedings to establish lost papers in a pending suit will be either at common law or in chancery, according to character of suit,[9] and jurisdiction is not ousted by reason of a court of law having assumed or, by statute, been given jurisdiction.[10] In decreeing payment where future liability may occur, a court may require an indemnity bond.[11] The judgment in proceedings to establish a lost deed can have only the force and effect of an original conveyance.[12] Where statutory remedies are given, and it is not expressly provided that the method of reviewing orders made therein shall be by appeal, the only manner of obtaining a review is by writ of error.[13]

§ 3. Proceedings to restore lost or destroyed records.[14]—See 19 C. L. 1527.—Statutes authorizing the restoring of records are usually merely cumulative.[15] Such a statute is not special legislation.[16] To supply the lost record, it is essential that the court should make an order to that effect[17] after proper notice and adjudication.[18] One seeking substitution must act promptly.[19] In order to warrant a review of the

RIPARIAN OWNERS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[37]

§ 1. Riparian lands and owners.[38]—See 10 C. L. 1528—This section treats only of what are riparian lands and who are riparian owners, the rights and title of riparian owners being treated in the following section.[39]

Riparian lands include as well the lands over as those along which the stream flows.[40] They have been held not to be included in the term "public lands."[41] Tide lands are such as are covered and uncovered by the flow and ebb of the ordinary or neap tides and constitute the seashore.[42]

A riparian proprietor is the owner[43] of land bounded by a watercourse[44] or lake or through which a stream flows.[45]

43. One does not become riparian owner by virtue of contract for use of water with one who is riparian owner. Stoner v. Patten [Ga.] 63 SE 897. As between grantee of certain rights from riparian owner, who retains title to bed of stream and to lands overflowed, and upper riparian owner or occupant, as to whom grantor and those claiming under him are only riparian owners of lower riparian lands with their incidents, grantee, as deriving title to certain riparian rights from such lower riparian owner, may be, by reason of such grant, riparian owner and entitled as against other riparian owners or diverters to all rights of riparian owner conferred upon him by his grantor, true riparian owner. Deed in effect conveying right of exclusive possession and occupation for certain purposes of riparian lands, right of access and crossing to water over such lands, for purposes of making such use of water as was characterized as riparian owner's use, but also containing agreement that right of grantee to divert was not reserved and that diversion by grantee was not to be affected thereby, held to constitute grantee in first riparian owner as to all except grantor, within limits of use placed upon grantee in deed. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

44. River. Hobart-Lee Tie Co. v. Stone [Mo. App.] 117 SW 604. Grantee of deed describing property as beginning at river held riparian owner. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

45. Stoner v. Patten [Ga.] 63 SE 897.

§ 2. Title and rights of riparian owners.[46]—See 10 C. L. 1528.—Title in general.—Under the common law of England, the title of all soil over which the tide ebbed and flowed was in the king,[47] and the title to land under all other waters was in the riparian owner.[48] The title in both cases, however, was subject to the public rights, such as access and navigation, if the waters were in fact navigable.[49] The king's right to lands under tide water and the riparian owner's right to lands under all other waters was called the jus privatum,[50] and the public right was called the jus publicum.[51] The jus privatum was private property and could be conveyed at will, subject to the jus publicum,[52] while the jus publicum was held by the king in trust for the people and was inalienable.[53] In this country, however, the jus privatum, being inapplicable to the new conditions, was largely abandoned to the upland owner,[54] while the jus publicum,[55] and so much of the jus privatum as did not devolve upon the litterol and riparian owners, went to the people in their sovereign capacity,[56] subject to control and regulation by the legislature.[57] The result is that except in the case of tide lands, title to which, the courts agree, is in the state,[58]

48. In nontidal streams, whether navigable or not, title in fee to bed of stream was in riparian owner. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513.

49. Public had easement or right of passage over and along stream. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513.

50. Ownership of soil between high and low-water mark was included in term jus privatum. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

51. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098. Jus publicum or right of public is right of access to water for purpose of navigation, boating, bathing and fishing. Id.

52. King had title in his private capacity. It was property right which he could convey and vest in others of his own private will, subject, however, to jus publicum. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

53. King also had dominion which he held in trust for people for purposes of navigation and access for other purposes. As he was constitutional monarch, he could control or limit public use only through laws passed by parliament. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098. Public rights, like that of navigation, were inalienable by king, being vested in him not individually but in crown or sovereignty in trust for people at large. Grantee of crown takes subject to such public right. Lewis Blue Point Oyster Cultivation Co. v. Briggs, 129 App. Div. 574, 114 NYS 313, afg. 58 Misc. 55, 110 NYS 37. Under Norwood patent granted under proprietory government of Duke of York before New York became crown colony, jus privatum in foreshore was granted, but jus publicum remained in grantor, passed to state on revolution, public therefore having right to use foreshore for fishing, bathing, boating and navigation. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

54. Jus privatum of crown, by which sovereign of England was deemed to be absolute owner of soil of sea and of navigable rivers, was totally inapplicable to conditions of our colonies where common law was adopted by them, and this right seems to have been abandoned to proprietors of upland so as to have become common right, and thus common law of state. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 193 N. Y. 378, 85 NE 1093. Common law of England as to ownership by sovereign of jus privatum never obtained in province which became state of New York; but jus privatum, which is complete title subject to rights of public, was abandoned to owners of upland. This abandonment was result of common usage so as to become common right, and thus common law of state. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

57. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

58. State by virtue of its sovereignty exercises control and ownership over tide lands. Eichelberger v. Mills Land & Water Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 117. Shore and space between high and low-water mark is part of bed of navigable water, title to which is in state in trust for public. Ferry Pass I. & S. Ass'n v. White's River I. & S. Ass'n [Fla.] 48 S 643. Under Norwood patent granted under proprietory government of Duke of York before New York became crown colony jus privatum in foreshore was granted but jus publicum remained in grantor and passed to state on revolution, public therefore having right to use foreshore for fishing, bathing, boating and navigation. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098. Rule at common law is that grant of land bordering on coast where tide ebbs and flows conveys title only to line of ordinary high tide, unless there be something to indicate intention to extend grant beyond line. De Meritt v. Robison Land Com'r [Tex.] 116 SW 796. Where defendant claimed land as appurtenant to his riparian rights and showed land affected by ebb

there is a great conflict of holding as to the riparian owner's title; thus riparian owners on navigable streams, in some cases, hold to the center of the stream,[59] subject to the public easement,[60] in others, to water's edge at low-water mark,[61] and in still others, to high-water mark.[62] In the case of non-navigable rivers, title is generally [63] in the riparian owner,[64] while in the case of navigable lakes the owner has been held to take only to high-water mark,[65] and in the case of a non-navigable lake, to the center thereof.[66] Occasionally, as in the case of Alaska, the matter is governed by and flow of tide, but did not show either high or low-water mark nor its relation thereto, insufficient to enable determination of riparian rights of defendant. Austin v. Minor, 101 Va. 101, 57 SE 609. Where state constitution asserts ownership in beds and shores of all navigable waters of state up to and including line of ordinary high tide in water where tide ebbs and flows, such declaration vests title in lands claimed in state, unless the meander line established by government in lands granted by the government prior to constitution runs below such line. Grantee of government in territorial days held to hold only to high water line. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278; Muir v. Johnson, 49 Wash. 66, 94 P 899. One cannot maintain injunction to restrain occupation of navigable waters of lake in front of his land on ground that he is riparian owner. Muir v. Johnson, 49 Wash. 66, 94 P 899.

59. Under common law, riparian owner bounded on, or by stream above tidewater, although navigable in fact, acquires exclusive ownership in soil to middle thread of current, subject to public easement of navigation; and all grants of government bounded upon, or by such stream, entitle grantee to all islands lying between mainland and thread of current, unless it appears, either from grant itself, or from other circumstances surrounding same, that government intended to reserve such island from such grant. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. In this state all streams which are capable of being used for purpose of carrying boats, passengers, freight, floating logs, wood, timber or any other product to market, are recognized and declared to be navigable streams, beds of which remain in riparian owner subject to public easement. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. Fact that navigable rivers are reserved as public highways, by Rev. St. U. S. § 2476 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1567), in no way interferes with legal doctrine that riparian owner takes to thread of stream. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. Where fresh water river is designated as boundary, center line of river, medium filium aquae is boundary line. Line running "to the river" generally, and without subsequent qualification or restriction, extends to center of stream. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

61. Hobart-Lee Tie Co. v. Stone [Mo. App.] 117 SW 604.

62. Where state constitution asserts ownership in beds and shores of all navigable waters of state up to and including line of ordinary high tide, in waters where tide ebbs and flows, and up to and including line of ordinary high water within banks of all navigable rivers and lakes, such declaration vests title in lands claimed in state, unless meander line established by government in lands granted by government prior to constitution runs below such line. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. Grantee of government in territorial days held to hold only to high water line. Id. Upland owner bordering on navigable stream owns only to high water mark. River and its banks and bed belong to the state. State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Ore.] 95 P 722. Owner of uplands in navigable stream takes only to high water mark. Point to which water of navigable stream usually rises in ordinary season of high water is meander line which forms boundary title of government. State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Ore.] 98 P 160. Court will take judicial notice that one can acquire title to such property only by legislative grant. Property below high water line. Id.

63. Shores and beds of bodies of water, whether navigable or not, belong to state in which they are situated, and it is for state to say whether or not it will assert its title to such shores and beds or whether it will surrender them to upland owner. Brace v. Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278.

64. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. State grants riparian owner soil over which smaller streams and creeks flow without reservation. Commonwealth v. Foster, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 433.

65. Fact that lake was capable of being navigated and was used for such purpose even for limited extent held to preclude claims to ownership to center. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. Held to be no equity in claim of upland owner to center of lake where government did not extend its surveys across lake nor include bed of lake in any grants made by it, but treated lake as navigable when it made such grants. Id.

66. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340. Legal effect of patents to state of fractional sections and parts of sections surrounding meandered lines of lake, according to official plats of public survey, was to convey all riparian rights, and by virtue thereof to vest prima facie title to bed of lake as shown on plats from meandered shore lines to center. Conveyances executed by state in turn had same effect. Id. Entry and location of tract of land, under provisions of law relating to acquisition of special statute.[67] Islands in a stream belong to the holder of title to lands under the adjacent waters.[68]

Divestiture of title to riparian lands by adverse possession depends upon the rule of the local jurisdiction.[69]

Title to lands under water.—See 10 C. L. 1528.—Title to lands under water is either in the king,[70] the state,[71] or the owner of the adjacent land,[72] subject in all cases to the jus privatum mentioned above.[73] title through soldiers' additional homestead rights, held to give entryman no possessory right of shore in front of or abutting such location, since Act of Congress May 14, 1898, c. 299, 30 Stat. 409 (U. S. Comp. St. 1907, p. 1412), extending homestead laws to Alaska, etc., provided specifically that nothing therein contained should be so construed as to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to shore of any navigable water. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton [C. C. A.] 161 F 60.

67. Act May 17, 1884, c. 53, 23 Stat. 24, 26, establishing civil government in Alaska, and providing in § 8 that persons shall not be disturbed in possession of lands actually in use or occupation or now claimed by them, etc., refers only to possession held at time of passage of act and not to possession, etc., thereafter. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton [C. C. A.] 161 F 60. Land claimed by one's grantors at such time between roadway running along line of stream and line of low tide may protect his right in absence of congressional legislation removing protection of act, even though such person would ordinarily lose his rights to such lands to public upon dedication of land along line of stream as highway. McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794.

68. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Co., 209 U. S. 447, 52 Law. Ed. 881.

69. Title by adverse possession up to edge of river and to river bank held sufficient to establish title to riparian lands along which river flows. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. Since statute of limitations does not run against state except with its consent, where, after state asserted title to tide and shore lands, much of which it found in possession of individuals who had erected and were maintaining costly structures, many of which were of public nature, thereon, it recognized their right to such improvements by giving them preferences as to purchase, and required purchaser to pay for improvements and evidenced clear intention that they should not be disturbed until land was placed on market for sale (Laws 1889-90, c. 11, p. 435, § 11; Acts 1895, c. 178, p. 559, § 74; Acts 1897, c. 89, p. 250, § 45). Such possession will be held to be permissive, and consent previously existing permitting adverse possession will be held to have been thereby withdrawn. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. Where inception of claim is under license by shore owner, whose license is subordinate to paramount ownership of fee by state, two rights exist together, not in antagonism to one another, but one is superior to other, and shore owner or one by his license occupying and using portion of navigable stream adjacent to shore for booming logs must be presumed to do so under his riparian right and not as one claiming to be owner of bed of stream. Until it is shown them that one owning and operating boom for holding and storing logs in front of property of shore owner has explicitly and openly disclaimed any and all holding under presumed riparian right, and has unequivocally asserted ownership of bed of stream and brought some notice to state of that claim, statute could not begin to run against it if at all. Coquille Mill & Mercantile Co. v. Johnson [Or.] 98 P 132. Statute relating to adverse possession under color of title and payment of taxes for seven years expressly excepts state from its provisions (Laws 1893, p. 20, c. 11). Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. State held not estopped by fact that it permitted sale, mortgage, etc., of improvements which it had recognized. Id.

70. Tide lands: Title to land over which tide ebbed and flowed was in king. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513; Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

71. Tide lands: State by virtue of its sovereignty exercises control and ownership over tide lands. Eichelberger v. Mills Land & Water Co. [Cal. App.] 100 P 117; Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098; Austin v. Minor, 101 Va. 101, 57 SE 609; Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278; Muir v. Johnson, 49 Wash. 66, 94 P 899. This is founded on principle that shores and beds of bodies of water, whether navigable or not, belong to state in which they are situated, and that it is for state to say whether or not it will assert its title to such shores and beds or whether it will surrender them to upland proprietor. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. By common law, title to shore of sea below ordinary high tide is in state. McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794. State by virtue of its sovereignty holds in trust for all inhabitants of state title to lands under navigable waters within state, including shore or space between high and low-water marks. Ferry Pass I. & S. Ass'n v. White's River I. & S. Ass'n [Fla.] 48 S 643.

Navigable stream: Title to bed of navigable stream is prima facie in state. Coquille Mill & Mercantile Co. v. Johnson [Or.] 98 P 132; State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Or.] 95 P 722. Willamette river is public navigable stream, public highway, title to bed and banks of which is in state for benefit of public. State v. Portland General Elec. Co. [Or.] 98 P 160.

Non-navigable river. Brace & Hergert Mill Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278.

Navigable lake. Brace & Hergert Mill

Rights of riparian owners.—Riparian rights are natural rights,[74] in the nature of easements,[75] incident to the ownership of lands contiguous to navigable waters.[76] These rights, as distinguished from the rights incident to the waters themselves,[77] consist principally in the rights of access,[78] a right of wharfage, limited so as not to interfere with the public right of navigation,[79] usually proportionate to the shore

Co. v. State, 49 Wash. 326, 95 P 278. Title to Lake Michigan below ordinary high-water mark is in state and state may delegate to city right to control harbors, etc. Beck v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 120 NW 293. State is owner of shores and beds of all tidal waters, and navigable fresh water lakes and streams, in absence of any prior disposition made by congress before their admission into union. State of Washington held to have asserted such right by Const. art. 17, legislature pursuant to and in recognition thereof to have provided for control and sale of same, and courts to have affirmed state ownership. McGilvra v. Ross, 161 F 398. Owners of lands abutting navigable lakes under patents issued by government prior to admission of Washington to union held to hold only to high-water mark. Id. Rule that general government holds title to such lands in trust for future state to be created out of territory acquired by it, in absence of any prior disposition by congress during territorial condition, has become doctrine of universal acknowledgement. Id. Oregon county, of which Washington state is part, did not come into union in such different manner as to render different rule applicable. Id.

72. Streams: In nontidal streams, whether navigable or not, title in fee to bed of stream was in riparian owner. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. Non-navigable. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

Non-navigable lake. Little v. Williams [Ark.] 113 SW 340.

73. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513; Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098.

74. Riparian rights, strictly and technically so called, are rights not originating in grants but arise by operation of law, and are called natural rights because they arise by reason of ownership of lands upon or along streams of water which are furnished by nature, and lands to which these natural rights are attached are called, in law, riparian lands. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

75. Technically and legally, perhaps, such rights, which are described to be of character of riparian owner's rights, may be most accurately designated as "easements" because they arise by grant, and do not, like true riparian rights, arise by nature, by reason of the ownership of riparian lands; but they are easements which, as against upper riparian owners, are effective only to the extent that their exercise comes within limits of natural riparian rights of lower owner. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

76. Ferry Pass I. & S. Ass'n v. White's River I. & S. Ass'n [Fla.] 48 S 643. Riparian rights are incident to lands on bank as well as those forming bed of stream. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472. Common-law rights of riparian owners with reference to navigable waters are incident to ownership of uplands that extend to high-water mark. Ferry Pass I. & S. Ass'n v. White's River I. & S. Ass'n [Fla.] 48 S 643.

77. See Waters and Water Supply, 10 C. L. 1996.

78. Owner of lands abutting shore of sea is entitled to free access to navigable waters at all points in front thereof. McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794. Owner or locator of lands in Alaska which border upon navigable or tidal waters has, under general law, right of access to such waters for purpose of navigation, but he can acquire no right or title in soil below high-water mark. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton [C. C. A.] 161 F 60. Littoral right attached to homestead rights of one locating upon land abutting navigable or tidal waters entitles such locator to free access to such navigable waters, but not to build upon shore or erect any structure reaching out into deep water. Decker v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 974. If owner of land has title to high-water mark, his land borders on water, since shore to high-water mark is a part of bed of waters; and, if it is navigable waterway, he has, as incident to such title, riparian rights accorded by common law to such owner. Ferry Pass I. & S. Ass'n v. White's River I. & S. Ass'n [Fla.] 48 S 643. All shore owners on lakes have right to access to navigable water if it is feasible to give it to them. Stuart v. Greanyea, 154 Mich. 132, 15 Det. Leg. N. 689, 117 NW 655. Riparian owner has right of access to navigable part of river in front of its premises and to use of waters for all purposes not inconsistent with public right of navigation therein. Hobart-Lee Tie Co. v. Stone [Mo. App.] 117 SW 604. Littoral or riparian owner, in his capacity as such, acquires only those rights in foreshore which are necessary to enable him to make reasonable use of his upland. Principal attribute of such use is access to and egress from open water. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 193 N. Y. 378, 85 NE 1093. Patent from state granting right to erect piers and buildings of substantial character on certain lands under water, coupled with condition that grantee should not maintain any obstruction of any kind in land lying between lines of high and low water which will interfere with, inconvenience or prevent crossing such land between high and low water mark, held to give grantee sams rights as littoral owner. Id.

79. Riparian owner whose land is bounded by navigable water has right of access thereto from front of his land, and such right includes construction and maintenance of pier on land under water beyond high-water mark for his own use or for use of public, subject to such general rules and regulations as congress or state legis-frontage,[80] and such other rights as are expressly permitted by law [81] and do not affect the public right of navigation, the right to improve the bottom lands so as to facilitate navigation,[82] the substantial rights of other riparian owners.[83] Like other property rights, they may be conveyed [84] together with, or severed from, the adjoining uplands,[85] except as limited by law,[86] are subject to waste,[87] and must be lature may provide for protection of rights of public. Doctrine held as applicable to littoral owners whose lands front upon surf-beaten shore of open ocean as to owners whose lands border upon bays of sea, inland lakes, or other navigable waters. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 193 N. Y. 378, 85 NE 1093. To extent that reasonable exercise of this right necessarily interferes with right of public to pass along foreshore, right of littoral owner is paramount and rights of public subordinate; and logical corollary to that proposition is that just in so far as attempted exercise of littoral or riparian right passed prescribed bounds of necessity and reason, conditions were reversed and right of passage along foreshore remained paramount right. Id. Riparian owners upon navigable fresh rivers and lakes may construct, in shoal water in front of their land, wharves, piers, landings and booms in aid of and not obstructing navigation. This is riparian right, being dependent upon title to bank and not upon title to bed of river. Coquille Mill & Mercantile Co. v. Johnson [Or.] 98 P 132. Its exercise may be regulated or prohibited by state, but, so long as not prohibited, it is private right, derived from passive or implied license by public. As it does not depend upon title to soil under water, it is equally valid in those states in which river beds are held to be public property, and in those states in which they are held to belong to riparian proprietors usque ad filum aquae. Such right, however, is franchise and is distinguished from appropriation and occupation of the soil under water. It is not personal to shore owner, so that it must be exercised by him alone, or not at all, but is subject of grant and may be severed. Id. Littoral right attached to homestead rights of one locating upon land abutting navigable or tidal waters entitles such locator to free access to such navigable waters, but not to build upon shore, or erect any structure reaching out into deep water. Decker v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 974. If street line and line of navigable stream coincide, wharfing privileges are in public to exclusion of any private right of that nature in proprietor on landward side of street. Doctrine rests in theory that private right of access has been merged in public right, which is inconsistent with its exercise, and, in application of doctrine, it is immaterial whether title to intervening street is vested in public or remains in adjacent owner. McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794. Evidence held to show dedication of littoral land as street. Id.

80. It is general rule that frontage on navigable waters for wharfage is proportionate to extent of shore frontage, but fair apportionment being object of rule, it may be modified where circumstances seem to require it. Rule applied under Pub. Acts 1905, p. 170, No. 122, in contest over right to fish in certain lands. Stuart v. Greanyea, 154 Mich. 132, 15 Det. Leg. N. 689, 117 NW 655.

81. Civ. Code 1896, § 3155, granting riparian owners on certain waters right to plant oysters within certain limit, held valid exercise of legislative power. Cleveland v. Alba [Ala.] 46 S 757.

82. Navigable waters are concededly public highways, and rights in soil under these waters are similar to those of owners of soil in public highway upon upland, that is, owner may make such use of them as does not interfere with navigation. He may plant his crop and may harvest and market it, but it is all time subject to hazard of improvement of highway in which it is planted. United States may improve navigation by dredging oyster bed without compensation to lessee of such bed. Lewis Bluepoint Oyster Cultivation Co. v. Briggs, 58 Misc. 55, 110 NYS 37. Public right of navigation always includes right of government to facilitate and improve navigation by erection of beacons, removal of obstructions, cutting and deepening of channels, etc. Lewis Bluepoint Oyster Cultivation Co. v. Briggs, 129 App. Div. 574, 114 NYS 313, afg. 110 NYS 37. Lessee of oyster bed cannot enjoin government contractor from dredging through such bed in order to improve navigation. Lewis Bluepoint Oyster Cultivation Co. v. Briggs, 58 Misc. 55, 110 NYS 37. Municipality which has power under its charter to protect its harbor may by ordinance prohibit removal of material below ordinary high-water mark when such removal is injurious to harbor. Evidence held to show that removal would be dangerous. C. Beck v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 120 NW 293.

83. Owner of land bordering on lake has legal right to occupy land between high and low-water mark so far as adjoining owners are concerned, where it does not affect latter's actual substantial rights. May fill in between high and low-water marks. Morse v. Swanson, 129 App. Div. 835, 114 NYS 876.

84. Held that littoral owner along navigable or tidal waters in Alaska can convey his right of access to individual or corporation to erect and maintain wharf for benefit of commerce and navigation. Decker v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 974. Deed held to have conveyed such rights so that grantors cannot maintain action to abate wharf as nuisance. Id.

85. Owner of bed of stream, who is at same time owner of lands adjoining, may sever one from other, and also right to contract with reference to use or control of rights which, in absence of express contract, would pass to grantee of ripa as natural riparian rights. Riparian rights, as natural rights, and being incidents annexed solely by operation of law to lands under and along the stream, differ, in respect to effect of contracts upon them, from those ordinary easements in lands whose compensated for when taken under eminent domain.[88] Remedies for the protection of the rights are treated in a subsequent section.[89]

§ 3. Accretion, reliction and avulsion.[90] See 10 C. L. 1530.—It is settled law that the owner of land bordering on a stream, a lake, or the sea, which is added to by accretion, becomes thereby the owner of the new made land.[91] If the middle of a river forms a boundary, that boundary follows any changes in the stream which are due to gradual accretion to or degradation of its banks.[92] If, however, the change is sudden and rapid, such as occurs when a river forms a new course by cutting through a bend, the boundary does not follow the stream, but remains in the middle of the old channel.[93]

§ 4. Public rights in riparian lands.[94] See 10 C. L. 1530.—The title to all riparian lands under waters capable of navigation is subject to the public right of navigation[95] without injury to the banks or unlawful trespass thereon,[96] and such other only source is a grant, actual or presumed, and, by reason of this difference of origin and character of the right, are not subject to that general rule relating to easements by force of which unity of ownership of dominant and servient lands extinguishes the easements. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

86. At common law, owner of riparian land bordering on navigable water could not grant right to take sand and gravel from water front or shore of his land below high-water mark, but this rule has now been modified by statute. Modified by Acts 1900, p. 905, c. 577, and Acts 1906, p. 784, c. 426. Potomac Dredging Co. v. Smoot [Md.] 69 A 507.

87. Dredging and carrying away sand and gravel from shore of land and removing fast land and trees above high-water mark constitute waste. Potomac Dredging Co. v. Smoot [Md.] 69 A 507.

88. Parties owning fee to center of street are not deprived of property without just compensation in violation of Const. art. 1, § 21, by holding that street having its terminus at high-water mark, continues to have its terminus at high-water mark, though such mark has extended seaward through accretion, and parties are not compensated for portion of street so acquired by accretion and of which they own fee to center of street. Law conclusively presumes that damages originally awarded on laying out of street covered damages for all time, and that property compensated for was in full and covered extension of easement by operation of law. State v. Yates [Me.] 71 A 1018. When parties owning land to center of street having its terminus at high-water mark gain soil by accretion, they gain same subject to easement, and are not entitled to damages or compensation for land gained for street by same process. 91. Parties owning to center of street as originally described held to have gained title by accretion to so much of added land as lies in front of their half of street. State v. Yates [Me.] 71 A 1018. Where terminus of street as originally laid out was high-water mark, and this mark has moved seaward, public easement extends with accretion, and street at all times ends with high-water mark wherever that is. Id.

92. State boundary. Rober v. Michelsen [Neb.] 116 NW 949. Where islands in river gradually caved in and deposits on point of opposite shore increased until islands were upon other side of main channel, they become portion of state holding to mid-channel of that side, and state in which islands were formerly located has no jurisdiction over them. Sutton v. Archer [Miss.] 46 S 705. If creek has changed its course and change has been gradual change and made little by little, line has followed thread of stream. Pack v. Stepp, 33 Ky. L. R. 677, 110 SW 887.

93. Certain land held transferred from Nebraska to Iowa by accretion, and latter transfer of land to Nebraska side of river by avulsion did not take it out of Iowa and place it in Nebraska. Rober v. Michelsen [Neb.] 116 NW 949.

95. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499; Moss v. Ramey, 14 Idaho, 598, 95 P 513. Title to lands under water, whether in king or riparian owner, was subject to public's rights, such as access and navigation, if waters were in fact navigable. Public had easement or right of passage over and along. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499. Jus publicum, or right of public, is right of access to water for purpose of navigation, boating, fishing and bathing. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098. Evidence held to show unwarranted obstruction of public right to use foreshore by erection of planks, etc. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 193 N. Y. 378, 85 NE 1093. Property granted to riparian owners in soil under smaller streams and creeks, though granted without reservation, is subject to public easement of use of such stream for purposes of navigation so far as they are capable of it. Commonwealth v. Foster, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 433.

rights as may be expressly declared by statute.[97] These rights may, however, in some cases, be extinguished or released by statute.[98]

§ 5. Remedies and procedure.[99]—See 10 C. L. 1530.—Riparian rights may be protected by the same remedies as other property rights.[1]

Any sale of tide lands by state must be subject to paramount right of public in navigable waters thereof, and confers no right to obstruct navigation therein. Judson v. Tide Water Lumber Co. [Wash.] 98 P 377; Ami Co. v. Tide Water Lumber Co. [Wash.] 98 P 380.

96. Public have easement in and right to use navigable streams of this state, but in so doing must have due consideration and reasonable care for rights of riparian owner, whose rights to use stream implies necessity as well as right to pass to and from stream. Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 95 P 499. To recover property, marked or unmarked, not abandoned or lost, from bed of stream, without injury to its banks or unlawful trespass thereupon, is no unlawful interference with rights or enjoyment of riparian owner. Saw logs in bottom of stream. Whitman v. Muskegon Log Lifting & Operating Co., 152 Mich. 645, 15 Det. Leg. N. 383, 116 NW 614. Placing logs raised from bottom of stream on shore constitutes trespass. Id.

97. There is no public right, under Law 1901 declaring that public fishing shall exist in waters or parts of waters which have been or may be declared navigable by acts of assembly, to use bed of stream not in fact navigable, and which has been declared navigable only for limited purposes for purposes of fishing. Commonwealth v. Foster, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 433.

98. If jus publicum is released or extinguished over any portion of foreshore, it follows that all rights, which, combined, constitute fee, are quo ad hoc vested in owner of adjacent land. Bardes v. Herman, 114 NYS 1098. Grantee of lands extending 500 ft. beyond low-water mark, in interest of commerce, held, under Laws 1857, p. 638, c. 763, and Laws 1878, p. 96, c. 88, granting right to shore owners to extend or construct piers or bulkheads far beyond land in question, to have been permitted to fill in such land, and to have been relieved of burden of public rights therein, and hence to have marketable title. 1. Owner of lands abutting shore of sea is entitled to injunction against erection of any structure on tide lands, or in water in front thereof, which will interfere with his free access at any point thereof. Riparian owner may enjoin erection of wharf. McCloskey v. Pacific Coast Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 794. Owner or locator of land in Alaska which borders on navigable tidal waters, though having no right or title to soil below high-water mark, may have right of action against intruder who places obstacles on shore that prevent him from having access to navigable waters. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton [C. C. A.] 161 F 60. Owner or locator of lands in Alaska which border upon navigable or tidal waters, having no right or title to soil below high-water mark, has no right of possession upon which he can base action against intruder whom he charges with interfering with and obstructing him in erection and use of structure upon shore below such high-water mark. Id. Fish trap. Id. In virtue of fact that legislature has given upland owner preference right to purchase shore lands in front of his property when offered for sale by state, he can maintain injunction to prevent obstruction or to remove obstacles placed therein subsequent to passage of act giving him such preference. Muir v. Johnson, 49 Wash. 66, 94 P 899. Record held to show insufficient facts for maintenance of action by riparian owner. Id. The remedy of a riparian owner whose rights have been impaired by a contractor working under state direction is against the state, through the court of claims. Where contract made contractor liable only for damage caused during construction of work and not for riparian rights appropriated by the state. Meneely v. Kinser Const. Co., 128 App. Div. 799, 113 NYS 183. The right to the continued enjoyment of a franchise, granted by an abutting owner to another, to operate a boom in a navigable stream adjacent to his property, which right, as a thing distinguished from appropriation and occupation of the soil under water, is an incorporeal hereditament, for the possession of which an action in ejectment will not lie. Coquille Mill & Mercantile Co. v. Johnson [Or.] 98 P 132. Act of 1901, providing that fishing shall exist in all waters or parts of waters that have been or may be declared navigable by acts of assembly, does not operate to prevent riparian owner from prosecuting trespass under Act April 14, 1905 (P. L. 169), making it unlawful to trespass upon land posted by private property where stream in question has never in fact been navigable, and has been declared navigable only for limited purposes; and if stream in question did come under act of 1901, such act would be unconstitutional as taking property for public purpose without compensation, and not legitimate exercise of police power. Commonwealth v. Foster, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 433. Threatened trespass upon oyster bed by persons who have once previously committed trespass and who are financially irresponsible will be enjoined. Sooz Oyster Co. v. Gaskill [N. J. Eq.] 69 A 1084. One who has been divested of his littoral rights cannot maintain suit to enjoin obstruction to his access to navigable waters in front of his land, case coming within general rule that individuals are not entitled to redress against public nuisance. Dedication of littoral land as street. ROBBERY.

The scope of this article is noted below.[2]

§ 1. Nature and elements.[3]—See 10 C. L. 1531—Robbery, at common law and as defined by most statutes, is the felonious [4] taking [5] from the person of another of goods or money to any value [6] by violence or putting in fear,[7] however slight,[8] the gist [9] and distinguishing element of the action being that of force and putting in fear,[10] the offenses of larceny and larceny from the person, being included.[11] Absolute ownership by the victim of the property taken is not usually essential,[12] though the question of ownership may have a bearing upon the question of defendant's intent.[13] Neither is it essential that the robber succeed in retaining possession of the property which he has once taken.[14]

§ 2. Indictment and prosecution. A. Indictment.[15]—See 10 C. L. 1531—The intaining special damages may sue, though it is a public right which is invaded. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 193 N. Y. 378, 85 NE 1093.

4. State v. McAllister [W. Va.] 63 SE 758. Evidence that one who had shown money was hit over head by accused with stick held insufficient to warrant conviction for assault with intent to rob, particularly where accused gave other equally plausible motives for his act and there was no testimony showing intent to rob. Sanders v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 613, 111 SW 157.

5. By "taking," necessary in offense of robbery, is implied that robber must be in possession of thing taken, and offense is not actually completed without such taking. State v. McAllister [W. Va.] 63 SE 758. Where complaining witness was taken from Kentucky to West Virginia by armed defendants to get checks, checks not being delivered to defendants until return to Kentucky, taking, if any, took place in latter state. Id.

6. Thing taken must be of some value and must be taken from peaceable possession of owner. State v. McAllister [W. Va.] 63 SE 758.

7. State v. McAllister [W. Va.] 63 SE 758. Violence must be concomitant or concurrent with taking. Tiller v. State, 11 Ohio St. (N. S.) 461. Violence held concomitant and concurrent. Id.

8. In absence of active opposition, if article is so attached to person or clothes as to create resistance, however slight, or if there be struggle to keep it, taking is robbery. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035.

9. Gist of action is force and terror employed. State v. McAllister [W. Va.] 63 SE 758; Brown v. Com. [Ky.] 117 SW 281.

10. Difference between stealing from person of another and robbery lies in force or intimidation used. People v. Campbell. 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035. Where money was stealthily taken only, there was no robbery. Bibb v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 726, 112 SW 401.

11. Crime of robbery as defined in Code, § 4753, includes larceny, larceny from person, and accomplishment of such larceny by force and violence or by putting in fear. State v. Taylor [Iowa] 118 NW 747. Evidence held to warrant instructions as to larceny. Id.

12. Under indictment charging that certain person was owner of property taken, proof that same was in lawful possession was sufficient proof of ownership as against accused, though property may actually have belonged to another. State v. Carroll, 214 Mo. 392, 113 SW 1051.

13. Held, where accused and prosecuting witness were engaged in game of cards, and it is sharply controverted as to who was entitled to money alleged to have been forced by accused from prosecuting witness by duress and threats, that instruction embodying question whether accused had any fraudulent intent, or that he honestly believed money had been fairly and properly won and belonged to him, should have been submitted to jury, and accused acquitted if jury found in his favor. Carr v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 591. Instruction on point submitted by accused, approved. Id.

14. Held that verdict of robbery was sustained by evidence, though prosecuting witness later attacked accused and recovered articles taken. Foster v. State [Neb.] 119 NW 475. While there must be actual severance of property from person to constitute robbery, still crime is consummated if thief retains possession of property but short time, it is no less robbery because ineffectual in its consequences. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035.

dictment must sufficiently charge the essential elements of the offense,[16] such as intent[17] and taking by force and violence[18] against the will of the victim.[19] But unnecessary averments are not necessarily fatal to the indictment.[20]

(§ 2) B. Evidence.[21]—See 10 C. L. 1533—The commission of robbery may be established by circumstantial evidence.[22] Complaining witness may testify that he did not consent to the taking of his property.[23] Defendant may not show the amount of money possessed by him at time of robbery as bearing upon his intent.[24] Evidence of recent possession of the stolen articles is competent,[25] and if unexplained[26] is sometimes said to be prima facie evidence of guilt,[27] though the weight to be given to the possession of stolen property soon after the commission of the offense is ordinarily for the jury alone.[28] One who buys property knowing it to be stolen is an accomplice within the law relating to the testimony of accomplices.[29] The evidence must be sufficient to connect accused with the commission of the offense,[30] to show the use of force[31] and the existence of the other elements of the offense.[32]

Dec. Dig. §§ 16-30; 18 A. & E. Enc. P. & P. 1217.

16. Indictment charging that accused on certain day, in certain place, represented that he was an officer and threatened to arrest certain person, and thereupon did willfully and feloniously take, steal, etc., certain personal property, through fear and threatened injury, held to charge no offense. Blackwell v. State [Miss.] 48 S 290. Under St. 1898, § 4378, punishing robbery when robber is not armed with dangerous weapon, indictment otherwise sufficient is not rendered insufficient by fact that indictment did not allege robber was not so armed. Gillotti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252.

17. Indictment failing to allege intent to steal, but merely alleging taking pistol from person of another by violence, etc., held insufficient. Jones v. State [Miss.] 48 S 407.

18. Under St. 1898, § 4378, requiring either "force and violence" or "assault and putting to fear" to constitute robbery, indictment charging "forcibly and by violence" held sufficient, there being no appreciable distinction between first expression of statute and that of indictment. Gillotti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252.

19. Indictment charging acts of violence in attempt to perpetrate robbery, and that all these acts were done against will of party upon whom attempt was made, held not insufficient for failure to charge that attempt was made with intent to deprive owner of use of his property without his consent. State v. Carroll, 214 Mo. 392, 113 SW 1051.

20. Indictment for robbery under Pen. Code 1895, § 856, otherwise sufficient, held not misleading, confusing, contradictory, duplicitous, and not to charge more than one offense in one count, where it makes unnecessary averments of value of property taken and that it was taken without the consent and against will of person robbed. Flannagan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 54.

23. Davis v. State [Ala.] 48 S 694.

24. Evidence that there was large amount of money at house of accused is not competent to show that accused did not commit assault with intent to rob. Craig v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 397.

25. Where accused admitted possession of Russian coin, and did not attempt to show that it was different in amount from the one complaining witness testified had been taken from him, evidence of two witnesses that they saw Russian coin in accused's possession, without identifying it as to amount or other particulars, is competent. People v. Deluce, 237 Ill. 541, 86 NE 1080.

26. While recent possession is prima facie evidence of guilt, yet it should not control when it is explained by other circumstances, and if possession is recent after theft and there are no attendant circumstances or other evidence to rebut presumption or to create reasonable doubt as to guilt, mere fact of such possession would warrant conviction. People v. Deluce, 237 Ill. 541, 86 NE 1080. It does not mean, however, that after this prima facie evidence is introduced, burden shifts to defendant, but only that if after jury, considering all evidence, including evidence of recent possession and any explanation of such recent possession which may have been given, then entertain reasonable doubt of guilt of accused, he must be acquitted, and that such proof is only sufficient to convict when unexplained. (§ 2) C. Instructions.[33]—See 10 C. L. 1533—The instructions must contain correct principles of law [34] and cover the essential elements of the offense.[35] The propriety of instructing as to included offenses [36] and accessories [37] is governed by the usual rules.

warrant finding that defendant was present at time of robbery of which he was convicted. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035. Finding by jury that accused was among those committing offense held not contrary to weight of evidence. People v. Deluce, 237 Ill. 541, 86 NE 1080. To sufficiently identify accused as guilty party, though no one positively identified accused as man who committed act. Craig v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 397. Where one of accused assisted in crime by separating prosecuting witness from friend, another asked him for dime with which to get beer, and third violently snatched money from his hand when he was preparing to comply with request, jury was warranted in finding that first two were accomplices. Brown v. Com. [Ky.] 117 SW 281. To warrant jury in finding that accused was participant in crime. Id. Where accused was positively identified by prosecuting witness, and latter's testimony was sustained by other witnesses and accused's conduct, verdict will not be set aside because of latter's denial corroborated by alibi testified to by nephew and niece. Lillie v. State [Neb.] 119 NW 476.

31. Finding that accused had intent to maim or kill if robbery was resisted held justified, though there was no proof that revolver was loaded. People v. Deluce, 237 Ill. 541, 86 NE 1080. Evidence that spiral stickpin was jerked out of shirt and fastening smashed in scuffle held sufficient to warrant conviction for robbery. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035. Where one while examing rings in jewelry store under pretense that he desired to purchase, seized tray containing rings and ran and he was followed by clerk, and at door of store there was struggle, with result that thief escaped with tray, held that pursuit by clerk and struggle at door were concomitant or concurrent with taking of rings, and accused was properly convicted of robbery as distinguished from larceny. Tiller v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 461. Evidence held to show clearly that force was used. Brown v. Com. [Ky.] 117 SW 281. On information for robbery alleging striking and wounding, statute being in alternative, proof of either will suffice. McDuffee v. State, 55 Fla. 125, 46 S 721.

32. Evidence of robbery by use of pistol held sufficient to sustain charge of robbery by assault, though higher offense might have been charged. Wyatt v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 812. Evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that defendant committed robbery in first degree. People v. Jordan, 125 App. Div. 522, 109 NYS 840.

34. Instruction assuming that state of evidence was such that jury might find that offense committed was larceny from person, and which also instructed jury that such offense was not included offense and which made acquittal of defendant dependant upon affirmative showing that he was guilty of larceny from the person, held erroneous. State v. Taylor [Iowa] 118 NW 747.

35. Instruction that if accused took pistol from person of another by violence, etc., but which failed to charge intent to steal, held erroneous. Jones v. State [Miss.] 48 S 407. Where first part of instruction on reasonable doubt, in robbery, required jury to find that property was taken from victim with fraudulent intent to deprive him of it and appropriate it to his own use beyond reasonable doubt, and last portion required acquittal if not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that property was taken from victim's person by assault and violence, such instruction is not erroneous in failing to instruct jury to acquit if not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that property was taken with intent to appropriate it to accused's use. Walling v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 116 SW 813.

36. Refusal of instruction on larceny held proper where proof was wholly to effect that force was used. Brown v. Com. [Ky.] 117 SW 281. Held not error for court to fail to charge as to include offenses where instruction was not requested and jury were warranted in finding accused guilty of robbery in first degree. People v. Jordan, 125 App. Div. 522, 109 NYS 840. If evidence warrants, accused is entitled to instructions that if there was reasonable doubt as to element of force or violence, it was their duty to find accused guilty of no greater offense than larceny from person, and that if there was reasonable doubt in their minds as to whether stolen article was taken from person of prosecuting witness, it was their duty to find accused guilty of no greater offense than larceny. State v. Taylor [Iowa] 118 NW 747.

37. Instruction as to an accesory held properly given where it may be properly inferred that accused did not himself take property from person of complaining witness, but stood by holding revolver. People v. Deluce, 237 Ill. 541, 86 NE 1080.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[38]

§ 1. Definition; distinction from other transactions.[39]—See 10 C. L. 1534—A sale is generally defined as the exchange of an interest in real or personal property for money or its equivalent,[40] though a sale of personal property usually means an exchange for a money consideration.[41] Only sales of personal property are here discussed.[42] Whether a given transaction is a sale or a mere executory agreement to sell,[43] or option,[44] or a guaranty,[45] or a bailment,[46] pledge,[47] mortgage,[48] trust agree-

38. It includes generally matters relating to private sale of chattels. It excludes matters common to all contracts (see Contracts, 11 C. L. 729), reality of assent (see Fraud and Undue Influence, 11 C. L. 1583; Duress, 11 C. L. 1138; Incompetency, 11 C. L. 1885; Mistake and Accident, 12 C. L. 869), the validity of bulk sales (see Fraudulent Conveyances, 11 C. L. 1620), the operation of the statute of frauds (see Frauds, Statute of, 11 C. L. 1609), and matters peculiar to the sale of particular kinds of property, such as growing crops (see Emblements and Natural Products, 11 C. L. 1197), corporate stock (see Corporations, 11 C. L. 810), and standing timber (see Forestry and Timber, 11 C. L. 1521).

43. Oral agreement to give cattle in exchange for care of owner during sickness held mere executory contract to sell, not a sale, there being no delivery and no writing. Van Dey Mark v. Corbett, 115 NYS 911. Contract for purchase of season's crop of tobacco held an executory contract though some expressions indicated completed sale. Grenawalt v. Roe, 136 Wis. 501, 117 NW 1017.

44. Under agreement providing for payment of certain sum cash and giving defendant right to buy vessel on payment of certain further sum within specified time and giving plaintiff right to retain money paid if option was not exercised, and that defendant should then owe nothing more, plaintiff, having retained money paid, had no further recourse against defendant. Ollinger & Bruce Dry Dock Co. v. Tunstall [Ala.] 48 S 482.

45. One of defendants told salesman to ship goods to third person and that he, defendant, would pay for them. Held not a sale to defendants but a guaranty, and defendant's partners not bound. Cairo Thread Works v. Lubell, 111 NYS 664.

46. See, also, Bailments, 11 C. L. 365. Evidence held to entitle plaintiff to have transaction declared a loan where on the face of the instrument it appeared to be an absolute sale. Heise v. Selected Securities Co., 105 NYS 1079. Where owner of cow allowed another to have it "to double" for two years, transaction was sale, not bailment, since there was no obligation to return identical ment,[49] or other form of security,[50] or a lease,[51] or a contract of agency,[52] or an absolute sale,[53] depends upon the intention of the parties,[54] which is to be gathered from the language used by them and all the facts and circumstances,[55] and may become a question for the jury.[56] Where the chattel is in existence at the time the contract is made, and the vendor is to do some work upon it to adapt it to the use of the vendee, the transaction is a sale.[57] An agreement to make certain articles not then in existence is not a sale.[58] The mere assignment of a money demand which is to arise only upon the performance of a contract by the assignor is not necessarily and as matter of law a sale of the subject-matter of the contract.[59] An option is simply a continuing offer by which the owner stipulates with another that he shall have a right to buy the property at a certain price within a certain time,[60] and unless it be founded upon a consideration, it may be revoked or withdrawn at any time.[61] The mere expenditure of money by the one holding such option in an

cow. Van Dey Mark v. Corbett, 115 NYS 911. Contract for furnishing fertilizer at certain price, to be paid for at certain time, goods and proceeds to remain property of seller until payment in full, held contract of sale, not bailment, with attempt to reserve title. Action for debt would lie. Coweta Fertilizer Co. v. Brown [C. C. A.] 163 F 162.

47. See, also, Pledges, 12 C. L. 1398. Contract construed as pledge to secure advances made on brick to be manufactured, and not a sale. Sequeira v. Collins, 153 Cal. 426, 95 P 876. Where neither absolute nor defeasible title was vested in plaintiff, but he was given possession of property with power to sell in case of default in payment, transaction was neither sale nor mortgage, but pledge. Grand Ave. Bank v. St. Louis Union Trust Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1071. Instrument held to be an ordinary promissory note with a pledge of corn therein mentioned as collateral security. Gravert v. Goothard [Neb.] 115 NW 559.

48. See Chattel Mortgages, 11 C. L. 611. Where cotton was transferred to bank which had advanced money to owner, but no price per pound was specified, bank being empowered to sell to repay advances, transaction was mortgage, not sale. McKinney Cotton Oil Mill Co. v. Van Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 438. Writing showing delivery of property to sheriff for delivery to bank, in satisfaction of claim for checks drawn on bank, held to show sale, not chattel mortgage. Leak v. Bank of Wadesboro, 149 N. C. 17, 62 SE 733.

49. See Trusts, 10 C. L. 1907. Where owner transferred title to his son to allow him to close up business and distribute proceeds to such creditors as he saw fit, transaction was secret trust rather than sale, under Rev. Civ. Code, § 1299, which defines sale as contract transferring interest in property for consideration. Hall v. Feeney [S. D.] 118 NW 1038.

50. Bill of sale of lumber held mere security for note; lumber reverted to owners when note was paid; was not mortgage and of no effect after payment of said note. First Nat. Bank v. Manser [Me.] 71 A 134. The recitals of consideration and of delivery in a deed or bill of sale of personal property are not conclusive (Donoven v. Travers, 122 La. 458, 47 S 769), and where it appears that there was no delivery, and no cash paid, the intention being to give security for a debt, there is no sale (Id.). Deed of mules given for debt, mules remaining in possession of debtor. Id.

51. See, also, Landlord and Tenant, 12 C. L. 528. Contract to furnish steam shovel at monthly rental for 8 months, at which person using it was to buy it at certain price. Instead, he continued to pay monthly rental. Held, lease not sale; owner entitled to shovel, not bankrupt estate. McEwen v. Totten [C. C. A.] 164 F 837.

52. See Agency, 11 C. L. 60; Brokers, 11 C. L. 446; Factors, 11 C. L. 1454. Contract held one of employment as selling agent, and not one of sale of goods. Barr v. American Copying Co., 142 Ill. App. 92. Correspondence construed as making contract to sell on commission, and not one to buy outright. Sligh v. Kuehne Commission Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1065. Contracts purporting to be consignment contracts to agents for sale of proprietary medicines, reserving title in vendors, but requiring payment at fixed price, held sales rather than agency contracts, purpose of form being to evade anti-trust act. Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 803.

53. Telephone company held to have purchased property of another telephone company absolutely and unconditionally, so as not to be bound by service contract of seller. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Jacoway, 131 Ga. 483, 62 SE 640.

54. Insurance company sent collateral securities to bank and requested check, with understanding that securities were to be returned four days later, when insurance company would send check, which they did, paying interest on amount for four days. Held, transaction was not sale, but mere colorable sale to enable company to report that it had no collateral loans. People v. Corrigan, 195 N. Y. 1, 87 NE 792, rvg. 129 App. Div. 62, 113 NYS 504.

examination of the property does not make it binding on the owner,[62] though such act or expenditure may constitute a sufficient consideration for the option if induced by the owner.[63]

§ 2. Contract requisites of a sale.[64]—See 10 C. L. 1535—The requisites of a contract must exist.[65] Thus the minds of the parties must meet [66] on the subject-matter of the sale [67] and all the essential terms.[68] Where the contract of sale is by correspondence, there must be an offer and an acceptance [69] of the offer as made [70] communicated to the offerer.[71] An order taken subject to acceptance by the seller does not become effective until and unless accepted.[72] A mere offer to sell may be withdrawn at any time before it has been accepted; [73] after its acceptance, both

65. Written and printed list of goods signed by defendant held not contract, but mere memorandum of goods, clause ordering goods having been stricken. Price v. Rosenberg, 200 Mass. 36, 85 NE 887.

66. Correspondence of parties held to show no meeting of minds so as to constitute sale of cement. Hunkins-Willis Lime & Cement Co. v. Los Angeles Warehouse Co. [Cal.] 99 P 369.

67. If buyer of coal had one kind in mind and seller another, minds of parties did not meet, and there was no contract. Indiana Fuel Supply Co. v. Indianapolis Basket Co., 41 Ind. App. 658, 84 NE 776.

68. Contract of sale made where parties agreed on price, quantity and terms. Tuttle v. Bracey-Howard Const. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 86.

69. There must be offer and intention to sell on one side and acceptance and intent to buy on other. Priest v. Hodges [Ark.] 118 SW 253. Where letter made offer of cut stone for court house and jail, telegram, "We accept your bid for cut stone for court house and jail," made completed contract. Bollenbacher v. Reid [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 961, 118 NW 933. Letter, in reply to one requesting leave to offer stock for sale, that seller will not sell for less than certain price, held not continuing offer, and, being refused, no contract resulted. Sprague v. Hosie [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 847, 118 NW 497. Evidence insufficient to show completed contract for sale of fruit by correspondence. Scudders-Gale Grocery Co. v. Gregory Fruit Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 978. Order for lumber not accepted by acquiescence where defendant tried to get definite information as to it by correspondence and, failing, gave notice of refusal 19 days after order. Harris v. Santee River Cypress Lumber Co. [R. I.] 72 A 392. Contract of agency for sale of typewriters also contained order for machines "to be shipped when ordered." Held, title to machines did not pass and no right of action against agent for price arose until he ordered machines. Oliver Typewriter Co. v. Huffman [W. Va.] 63 SE 1086.

70. Evidence of three different ways of buying fruit in market admissible to show materiality of offer to buy as modification of previous offer to sell. Scudders-Gale Grocery Co. v. Gregory Fruit Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 978. Order for doors at price less than that listed not binding until accepted by defendant. Harris v. Santee River Cypress Lumber Co. [R. I.] 72 A 392. Written offer to sell quantity of coal was verbally accepted, parties agreeing that formal contract should be drawn up. Seller sent written contract different from first proposal, and buyer refused to accept it. Held, in action for breach of contract made by first offer and acceptance, plaintiffs could not insist that defendants were bound thereby, since they themselves proposed new one; must be mutuality; no contract. Hite & Rafetto v. Savannah Elec. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 944. Where it is doubtful whether the acceptance varied from the offer, if the parties treat the contract as complete, it will be so regarded. Great Western Coal & Coke Co. v. St. Louis & Big Muddy Coal Co., 140 Ill. App. 368.

71. Mere uncommunicated purpose to accept, or letter or telegram written but not mailed or sent, is not acceptance; acceptance does not become effective until beyond power of person sending, and not then if order has been countermanded. Northwestern Thresher Co. v. Kubicek [Neb.] 118 NW 94.

72. Letter requesting call to talk over order for goods held not an acceptance of order. Waxelbaum v. Schloss, 116 NYS 42. Order for goods contained printed notice that it must be accepted by home office. Held no contract where home office rejected order. Id. Where order was taken by agent, subject to seller's acceptance and seller did not accept but wrote that it could not deliver machine ordered and offered to supply one of a different kind, there was no contract. Bronson v. Weber Implement Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 20. Where contract provided for deposit of price with third person until buyer received and accepted goods, refusal of buyer to receive goods terminates contract, unless refusal is fraudulent or in bad faith. Holtz v. Gaidry [Ind. App.] 87 NE 997.

73. Evidence held to show that offer to sell mortgage was withdrawn before acceptance; no contract. East End Sav. & Trust Co. v. Chadwick [Pa.] 72 A 258. Offer to furnish castings at certain price for certain time does not bind offerer except as to orders taken thereunder; offer is revocable; no contract until accepted. Hopkins v. Racine Malleable & Wrought Iron Co., 137 Wis. 583, 119 NW 301. Defendant's letter that after stock of castings on hand was exhausted it could not accept orders except at revised parties are bound.[74] An order, subject to seller's acceptance, may be countermanded before acceptance.[75] Where an order reserves the right to cancel but fixes no time, the right must be exercised within a reasonable time.[76] What is a reasonable time is a question for the jury unless the facts are undisputed and such as to admit of but one reasonable conclusion.[77] Whether an order has been countermanded is largely a question of intention as shown by the language and conduct of the parties.[78] The contract must be definite and certain as to its terms,[79] or capable of being made so,[80] must be mutually enforcible,[81] and free from fraud [82] and mistake.[83] Where there are conditions precedent to the sale becoming effective, such conditions must of course be performed,[84] and statutory requirements must be

74. When an offer to sell a quantity of goods at a specified price has been accepted, both parties become bound by the terms of the offer and neither can withdraw. Oak City Cooperage Co. v. Kennedy Stave & Cooperage Co., 4 Ga. App. 344, 61 SE 499. Correspondence held to contain offer and acceptance of barrel staves at certain price and to constitute contract. Id.

75. No contract where order was countermanded before accepted by company. Northwestern Thresher Co. v. Kubicek [Neb.] 118 NW 94.

76, 77. Bauman v. McManus Bros. [Kan.] 101 P 478.

78. Before expiration of time allowed to countermand order, buyer wrote requesting that goods be held until he instructed shipment. He did not expressly countermand order, and subsequent correspondence showed that neither party understood that it was countermanded. Held not countermanded. McDuffie v. Dilley [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 612.

79. Stout v. Caruthersville Hardware Co., 131 Mo. App. 520, 110 SW 619. Correspondence held not to constitute contract for sale of pickles because there was no agreement as to quantity and quality of goods. Jordan v. Walker, 154 Mich. 394, 15 Det. Leg. N. 777, 117 NW 942. Where contract for season's output of lumber mill referred to certain price list for prices, contract was sufficiently definite and certain to sustain action for damages for breach, and fact that list omitted No. 3 dimension was immaterial, since it would be assumed that parties omitted that class of lumber. Hobe Lumber Co. v. McGrath, 104 Minn. 345, 116 NW 652.

80. Telegrams held valid contract for ties, reference to another cargo being sufficient to fix quantity oral proof of quantity in that cargo being competent. Maydwell v. Rogers Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 930. Contract is not made indefinite and uncertain by omission of time of delivery or payment, since law implies that delivery is to be in reasonable time and that payment is to be on delivery. Bollenbacher v. Reid [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 961, 118 NW 933.

81. Agreement by seller of stock to repurchase at end of three years at certain price held not lacking in mutuality; enforcible. Raiche v. Morrison, 37 Mont. 244, 95 P 1061. Proposition to supply all timber of certain kind required on building, when accepted, is valid contract of sale; not mere option to furnish such as may be ordered. Campfield v. Sauer [C. C. A.] 164 F 833. Plaintiff agreed to furnish defendant entire consumption of coal as required at certain price, and to have 1,000 tons constantly on hand and 3,000 tons on dock and in transit. Held defendant impliedly agreed to take and use the coal, and contract was mutual and enforcible. Sterling Coal Co. v. Silver Spring Bleaching & Dyeing Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 848. Even if defendant had right under contract to refuse to use coal of plaintiff, where it did in fact use it, and both parties acted and relied on contract, defendant could recover damages for plaintiff's failure to deliver as agreed. Id. Agreement to sell mill culls left it optional with other party to buy, but agreement was contained in lease given by seller. Held agreement to pay rent was consideration for agreement to sell as well as lease. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. Contract whereby A agrees to sell and deliver to B all the ties he can produce and ship up to certain date, and B agrees to take all ties A can produce and ship during that time, is unenforcible for want of mutuality; A's agreement not enforcible. Hazelhurst Lumber Co. v. Mercantile Lumber & Supply Co., 166 F 191. Where transfer of farm and sale of stock of goods were parts of one contract, and agreement as to land was unenforcible, being Indian land, agreement as to stock of goods was unenforcible, and no damages were recoverable for its breach. Terrance v. Crowley, 116 NYS 417.

82. See Fraud and Undue Influence, 11 C. L. 1583. Buyer cannot defeat liability on written order for goods by setting up fraud in procuring it where he signs it without reading it, having opportunity and ability to read it. United Breeders Co. v. Wright [Mo. App.] 115 SW 470.

83. See Mistake and Accident, 12 C. L. 869. Where buyer asked and seller submitted bid for entire lot of lumber desired, bid not containing items, mistake by bidder in figuring one item before submitting total bid was not mutual and did not entitle seller to relief in action of assumpsit. Boeckeler Lumber Co. v. Cherokee Realty Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 452.

84. Where order for goods was signed by buyer's clerk on understanding that it was not to be sent in by selling agent until approved by member of buying firm, and he refused to approve it, but selling agent sent it in, maker of order could countermand and refuse to receive goods. American Jobbing Ass'n v. Register, Carter & Co., 5 Ga. App. 543, 63 SE 599. Where sale of corporate stock was conditioned on procuring majority of it for one maker of note for price, and on procuring another signer of note, there was no sale until these conditions were per-complied with.[85] No formal instrument or writing is essential. The contract may be shown by correspondence [86] on book entries,[87] or may rest in parol.[88] The requirements of the statute of frauds are elsewhere considered.[89]

§ 3. Modification, rescission and revival.[90]—See 10 C. L. 1538—The right of a party to rescind for breach is treated in other sections.[91] The contract may of course be rescinded or modified by mutual consent.[92] Where a new agreement is made, the fact that it takes the place of the old one is held a sufficient consideration,[93] though a different consideration may be shown.[94] In some jurisdictions, a subsequent oral agreement cannot be proved unless based upon a consideration.[95] Where terms modifying an existing contract are offered by one party, they must be explicitly, fully, and unconditionally accepted by the other to effect a new contract.[96] Whether a contract has been modified must be determined with reference to the facts of the particular case.[97] A mere suggested modification, customary in the trade, is not a breach.[98]

§ 4. General rules of interpretation and construction.[99]—See 10 C. L. 1539—In construing the contract the intention of the parties controls; [1] as in construing other formed. Key v. Usher, 33 Ky. L. R. 575, 110 SW 415. Notes and mortgage for machine were delivered to seller's agent under agreement that if machine worked satisfactorily on test they were to become effective; if machine proved unsatisfactory, notes and mortgage were to be null and void. Latter contingency occurring, there was no sale. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Barnes [Ky.] 117 SW 418. Where check was given under conditional contract of purchase, and condition upon which check was to be returned arose, and holder was notified, there could be no recovery on check. Shulman v. Damico, 115 NYS 90.

85. Contract for sale of fertilizer not enforcible where state statute (Tennessee) relating to inspection, marking, etc., of such fertilizer was not complied with. Coweta Fertilizer Co. v. Brown [C. C. A.] 163 F 162.

86. Fact that no formal contract mentioned in letters and telegrams immaterial, where they alone showed contract, nor did subsequent proposals or request for formal writing change contract already made. Bollenbacher v. Reid [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 961, 118 NW 933.

87. Where contract of sale is made through brokers, the entries on their books constitute the contract, and the bought and sold notes are merely copies of the original contract. Ankeny v. Young Bros. [Wash.] 100 P 736.

88. Where order for goods was taken over telephone, and written order sent out to parties by agent, contract was oral, writing not constituting contract but mere shipping directions so far as seller was concerned. Bewley v. Schultz [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 294.

Where contract was made to supply ice for certain time at certain price, it could not be changed by letters sent by seller notifying buyer that price would thereafter be higher; acceptance of ice thereafter and payment of higher price would be strong evidence of consent to change by buyer, but not conclusive. Id.

97. Evidence held to show that contract was not modified as to quality of lumber to be furnished. Burton v. Berthold [C. C. A.] 166 F 416. In action for damages for breach of option agreement, complaint held not to show modification of contract provision that defendant should owe nothing more after failure to exercise option. Ollinger & Bruce Dry Dock Co. v. Tunstall [Ala.] 48 S 482. Proof of statements by buyer to third persons inadmissible to show that he paid higher price under protest and that he had not waived original contract and agreed to change. Woodbridge Ice Co. v. Semon Ice Cream Corp. [Conn.] 71 A 577.

98. Where wire was ordered in accordance with contract, mere intimation, in order that subsequent modification of specifications might be required, was not breach of contract by buyer, such modification being customary in trade. In re National Wire Corp., 166 F 631.

1. Where contract provided that it could be countermanded only by written consent contracts, and in ascertaining this intention, the attendant facts and circumstances may be shown and considered,[2] and the construction which the parties themselves have placed upon it is entitled to great weight.[3] Where the contract is reduced to writing, prior oral negotiations, representations and warranties are merged therein,[4] and, where the writing is complete and unambiguous, oral evidence is incompetent to vary, add to or contradict it,[5] and especially is this true where the writing itself expressly excludes all agreements not contained therein.[6] But, if the writing is incomplete or ambiguous, parol evidence is received to aid in its interpretation.[7] Thus, proof of the trade meaning of terms used by the parties is competent,[8] and customs prevailing in the trade may be shown and considered,[9] if general;[10] but of seller "and" upon certain terms which would save seller harmless, word "and" was construed as "or" to make contract reasonable. Gibbes Machinery Co. v. Johnson, 81 S. C. 10, 61 SE 1027.

2. Facts and circumstances surrounding execution of contract may be shown. Adeline Sugar Factory Co. v. Evangeline Oil Co., 121 La. 961, 46 S 935. All surrounding circumstances may be shown and considered in determining whether transaction is intended as chattel mortgage or conditional sale. Stalker v. Hayes [Conn.] 71 A 1099.

3. Where language used in contract renders its meaning doubtful. Gibbes Machinery Co. v. Johnson, 81 S. C. 10, 61 SE 1024.

4. Where the contract is complete, oral representations and warranties, and implied warranties, and all oral negotiations, are merged therein. Kullman Salz & Co. v. Sugar Apparatus Mfg. Co., 153 Cal. 725, 96 P 369. Where a bill of sale is placed in escrow to be delivered on payment of price, it does not become effective until delivery; hence negotiations while it was in escrow were merged in instrument and could not be proved to modify contract by parol. Schoblasky v. Rayworth [Wis.] 120 NW 822.

5. Oral evidence incompetent to vary written order. Porter v. Sims Co., 55 Fla. 504, 46 S 420. Contract of sale unambiguous; proof of prior conversations inadmissible. St. Dunstan Soc. v. Picard, 115 NYS 1079. Written contract complete and unambiguous as to all terms; prior oral representations could not be proved. Bruner v. Kansas Moline Plow Co. [C. C. A.] 168 F 218. Oral evidence as to quality and kind of wine ordered incompetent where written order contained description. Stonehill Wine Co. v. Lupo, 110 NYS 408. Expression "free on board" at certain place in sale contract not ambiguous, and not open to explanation by proof of custom or other parol proof. Chandler Lumber Co. v. Radke, 136 Wis. 495, 118 NW 185. Order for goods in writing and complete; oral evidence to vary or add to it inadmissible. Massillon Sign & Poster Co. v. Buffalo Lick Springs Co., 81 S. C. 114, 61 SE 1098. Contract declared on being unambiguous; oral evidence of prior conversation and circumstances inadmissible. Kellerman Cont. Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 99. Where telegram, which was part of contract for purchase of coal, provided for "shipment in any equipment available," evidence that word "cars" used in order meant ordinary cars and not hopper-bottom cars was inadmissible. Fowler Utilities Co. v. Chaffin Coal Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 689.

6. Where contract expressly excluded all agreements not contained in the writing, an oral warranty by the seller's agent could not be proved. Stimpson Computing Scale Co. v. Taylor, 4 Ga. App. 567, 61 SE 1131. Where written and printed order provided that it could not be countermanded after acceptance, and that no stipulations made by agent were binding unless placed in contract and accepted by company, arrangement with agent that order could be countermanded if previous order to another concern could not be cancelled, was of no effect. Metropolitan Aluminum Mfg. Co. v. Lau, 61 Misc. 105, 112 NYS 1059.

7. Where a contract provides for delivery of goods within a certain time, parol evidence is admissible to show that time is of the essence of the contract. Alabama Const. Co. v. Continental Car & Equipment Co., 131 Ga. 365, 62 SE 160. Where bill of sale does not purport to state entire contract but simply evidences transfer of title, parol evidence is admissible to show real contract, as that sale included good will of restaurant business. Hall v. Barnard, 138 Iowa, 523, 116 NW 604. Where contract of sale of malt was uncertain as to time of shipment, oral evidence of circumstances and conditions of parties and their subsequent conduct was proper. Jung Brew. Co. v. Konrad, 137 Wis. 107, 118 NW 548.

8. Evidence admissible to explain meaning of phrase "slightly processed" used in regard to fruit. Scudders-Gale Grocery Co. v. Gregory Fruit Co. [Cal. App.] 99 P 978. Evidence admissible to show trade meaning of "shipping culls" and "mill culls." Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. Where contract called for "Geneva washed furnace coke" evidence was admissible to show trade meaning of phrase and to show that coke furnished was not kind and quality contracted for. McKeefrey v. Dimmick, 166 F 370. Evidence admissible to show meaning given by merchants to such terms as "May 1st, 2 per cent., or July 1st," referring to discount allowed in case of payment before account is due. Howes v. Union Mfg. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 512. Evidence admissible to show meaning of phrase "10 and up" in lumber contract. Salmon v. Helena Box Co. [C. C. A.] 158 F 300.

9. General custom prevailing in trade in which parties are engaged presumed to have entered into contract. Smith & Co. v. Russell Lumber Co. [Conn.] 72 A 577.

10. Proof of custom in particular trade cannot be made unless evidence shows it to be so general that knowledge of it may be presumed. Merchants' Grocery Co. v. Ladoga Canning Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 767.

evidence of this character cannot be received to contradict plain terms of the contract.[11] The construction of a plain and unambiguous written contract is for the court; but, where the written terms are uncertain and oral evidence is received to explain them, the construction of the contract is for the jury.[12] Decisions dealing with the place of sale are given in the note;[13] this subject is fully discussed elsewhere.[14]

Whether a contract of sale is entire or divisible depends upon the intention of the parties and must be determined from the language employed and the subject-matter.[15] A contract for the sale of different articles at different prices is usually held to be severable,[16] even though a certain sum is paid generally on account at the time.[17]

§ 5. Property sold.[18]—See 10 C. L. 1540—What property is included in the sale,[19] or the amount which the seller is required to deliver,[20] must be determined by reference to the terms of the contract. An agreement to sell and deliver in the future is held not invalid under a statute requiring the subject of a sale to be property, title to which can be immediately transferred.[21]

11. Custom cannot be proved which is at variance with express terms of contract; but, where terms are in dispute, custom may be proved on issue whether parties contracted with reference to it. Smith & Co. v. Russell Lumber Co. [Conn.] 72 A 577. Where contract called for 50,000 shingles 5x16, proof of custom to count a 5x16 shingle as 1 1-4 and that shipment of 40,000 shingles complied with order was inadmissible. Birmingham & A. R. Co. v. Maddox [Ala.] 46 S 780.

12. Jung Brewing Co. v. Konrad, 137 Wis. 107, 118 NW 548.

13. Where order was received and accepted at liquor dealer's place of business, goods being taken from his stock at that place, is sale at his place of business and not at place of delivery, unless parties agree upon latter as place of sale. State v. Davis, 62 W. Va. 500, 60 SE 584. Iowa company sold, through agent, to defendant in Connecticut certain jewelry, f. o. b. cars in Iowa. Held, contract of sale was Iowa contract, and not invalidated by Connecticut statute (Gen. St. 1902, § 1381), making sale or keeping for sale goods like those sold misdemeanor. Moline Jewelry Co. v. Dinnan [Conn.] 70 A 634.

15. Contract for different amounts of different kinds of varnish at various prices held separable, buyer liable for shipment, though entire order not filled. Equitable Trading Co. v. Stoneman, 115 NYS 285. Where giving of check for marble stock and business, and signing of agreement not to engage in business for 3 years in city, took place at practically same time, they were parts of one contract, and agreement not to engage in business was part of consideration for check. Skaggs v. Simpson, 33 Ky. L. R. 410, 110 SW 251. Where contract was for 11 car loads of lumber, it was entire in sense that default by one would excuse performance by other; yet it was severable in that each car was to be billed separately and paid for 60 days after delivery. Harris Lumber Co. v. Wheeler Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 168.

16. Barlow Mfg. Co. v. Stone, 200 Mass. 158, 86 NE 306. Contract itemizing goods and giving separate prices held severable. American Standa Jewelry Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 117 SW 781.

19. Sale of all horses bearing certain brand did not include unbranded colt, though dam had borne such brand. Graves v. Davenport [Colo.] 100 P 429. Bill of sale purporting to transfer only personal property cannot be held to include real estate or any covenant or assurance of title or right to convey realty. Falls City Lumber Co. v. Watkins [Or.] 99 P 884. Bill of sale held to include all personalty on land conveyed, where vendees took possession at once and sellers vacated, and terms of bill of sale were general. Houghton Co. v. Kennedy [Cal. App.] 97 P 905. Evidence held to show purchase of two identified lots of coffee and not sale by sample. Ankeny v. Young Bros. [Wash.] 100 P 736. Revenue stamps held not included in sale of all "stationery" and fixtures in bank. Gregory v. Keller, 137 Ill. App. 441. An offer to seller "to hold good for 10,000 barrels" is an offer to sell that number, and a general acceptance makes contract for such sale. Netterstrom v. Peerless Portland Cement Co., 133 Ill. App. 579.

20. Contract to furnish logs sufficient to cut 250,000 feet of lumber per month, vendor reserving right to cut lumber also if vendee did not require all timber. Held, vendor impliedly agreed to supply usual run of logs; breach of contract to keep best logs and supply vendee with culls only. Williams v. Roper Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 84. An agreement to buy not less than 5,000 nor more than 9,000 barrels of oil monthly binds buyer to take at least 5,000 barrels each month, and buying greater quantity in previous months, will not relieve him from duty to buy at least 5,000 monthly thereafter. Central Oil Co. v. Southern Refining Co. [Cal.] 97 P 171.

21. Agreement to sell and deliver oil in certain quantities monthly for one year is

§ 6. Transition of title.[22]—See 10 C. L. 1541—The transition of title, in order to determine the locus of crime, as in sales of inhibited articles, is largely treated elsewhere.[23]

*Meaning and effect of contract.*See 10 C. L. 1541—The transition of title is a matter of intention [24] to be determined from the terms of the contract,[25] and, when the contract itself is not clear, from the acts of the parties and all the facts and circumstances.[26] Very slight acts of surrender of possession by the seller or acquirement of dominion by the purchaser are often sufficient to evince such intention,[27] and the intention may exist and have effect in the absence of any change of possession whatever.[28] Where the contract is executory, all of its stipulations must be performed, or performance thereof tendered and refused, before title passes.[29] So long as something remains to be done, such as the ascertainment of the price or quantity,[30] title does not pass,[31] unless the parties have in some manner evinced a contrary intention.[32]

A contract to supply materials for construction of a building and to affix them thereto is not a contract of sale but one for the improvement of real estate,[33] and title does not pass until the materials have become part of the building.[34]

*Separation and designation of the goods.*See 10 C. L. 1541—The giving and receiving of an order for goods to be manufactured or supplied from a general stock, warehoused at another place, is a mere executory contract, which does not divest or agreement to sell and deliver in future, and is valid (Civ. Code, §§ 1726, 1729, 1730, 1754). Not invalid under § 1722. Central Oil Co. v. Southern Refining Co. [Cal.] 97 P 177.

25. Contract of sale construed to mean that only such cattle as were actually delivered to buyer and paid for were to become his property. Ettien v. Drum [Mont.] 101 P 151. Contract for sale of coal construed and held that parties intended that title should not pass until final delivery of coal f. o. b. cars on dock. State v. Patterson [Wis.] 120 NW 227. Goods purchased "on memorandum" Sept. 21st. and 30, option to retain within 30 days. Petition filed Oct. 23. Seller entitled to goods delivered on Sept. 30, but not entitled to those delivered Sept. 21st. In re Schindler, 158 F 458.

26. State v. Patterson [Wis.] 120 NW 227. Evidence held to show that plates made for particular lithograph job became property of customer, not of printer. New York City Car Advertising Co. v. Globe Lithographic Co., 114 NYS 788. Lumber to be cut was sold, payments to be made according to estimates, and final settlement made after inspection. Lumber was cut, estimates and payments made, buyer's name put on piles, and lumber insured by buyer, seller consenting. Held, title passed, though final settlement not made. Stearns v. Grand Trunk R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 68, 120 NW 572.

27. Evidence sufficient to show intention to pass title of piano to buyer though left where it was. Hoeffler v. Carew, 135 Wis. 605, 116 NW 241. Cotton planter sold, at beginning of ginning season, certain number of bales of cotton at agreed price, delivery to be made at gin, and payment to be made after delivery and examination of weights. Thereafter, buyer and agent of third person, examined cotton, in planter's presence, and buyer sold to third person. Held, there was intent to deliver so as to pass title to buyer and make him liable for price. Moreland v. Newberger Cotton Co. [Miss.] 48 S 187.

transfer title to any particular property.[35] Title passes only when certain goods are manufactured or segregated and appropriated to the contract,[36] and, in the absence of a more specific agreement, such appropriation does not take place until the delivery of the goods to the carrier consigned to the buyer,[37] at which time and place the sale is perfected and title passes.[38]

Payment. See 10 C. L. 1541—Where a sale is for cash on delivery, and the law presumes a sale to be for cash in the absence of any agreement,[39] title does not pass until payment has been made,[40] unless there is a waiver of cash payment,[41] as where the seller fails to retake the goods promptly on default by the buyer.[42] Similarly, where the contract provides for the giving of security as a condition precedent, title does not pass until the security is given,[43] the right thereto not being waived.[44] Payment is not a condition precedent to transition of title when the agreement or intent of the parties is to the contrary.[45] Satisfaction by the buyer of a judgment

35. Witt Shoe Co. v. Seegars & Co., 122 La. 145, 47 S 444. Title did not pass at time of original sale where goods were not in existence but had to be manufactured. Schwab v. Oatman, 129 App. Div. 274, 113 NYS 910.

36. George D. Witt Shoe Co. v. Seegars & Co., 122 La. 145, 47 S 444. Title to goods ordered held to have passed to buyer when goods were appropriated to contract, though only part were delivered, buyer having prevented delivery of balance. Buyer liable for all. Massillon Sign & Poster Co. v. Buffalo Lick Springs Co., 81 S. C. 114, 61 SE 1098. If seller had cut, graded and set apart lumber called for by contract, and buyer had paid for it or stood ready to do so, and nothing was to be done but to take charge of it, which seller refused to allow buyer to do, buyer was owner entitled to possession of the lumber. C. B. Coles & Sons Co. v. Standard Lumber Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 736.

D.] 119 NW 1014. Buyer not entitled to retain goods not paid for, payment not being waived. Howard v. Haas, 131 Mo. App. 499, 109 SW 1076. Delivery f. o. b. car as agreed does not pass title unless payment is made as expected. Berlaiwsky v. Rosenthal [Me.] 71 A 69. Under executory contract for sale and delivery of cattle requiring specified sum to be paid on presentation of contract, title did not pass where payment was refused by consignee and delivery was not made. Rev. Civ. Code, §§ 951, 1169. Lumley v. Miller [S. D.] 119 NW 1014. Machinery sold by two concerns was to be paid for, in one case by cash on delivery, in the other cash when installed by seller. Machinery was taken by receiver of insolvent buyer but never unpacked. Held title did not pass from vendors. Pridmore v. Puffer Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 496.

Where contract provided for payment of draft attached to bill of lading for each shipment and shipments were consigned to shipper, care of buyer, title was not to pass until payment of draft. State v. Malony, 81 S. C. 226, 62 SE 215.

41. Berlaiwsky v. Rosenthal [Me.] 71 A 69.

42. The seller waives his right to retake the goods unless he makes his election without delay. Title passes if seller does not reclaim goods on default in payment. E. I. Dupont Co. v. John Shields Const. Co., 162 F 198.

43. Where property was delivered conditionally, condition being that buyer should give secured note, title did not pass until note was given. Bailey v. Dennis [Mo. App.] 115 SW 506. Where contract provided that title of printing press should not pass until mortgage was given, passing of title was concurrent with giving of mortgage. Amundson v. Standard Printing & Mfg. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 789. Contract provided title should not pass until payment was made or notes and mortgage given. Held acceptance of press would not pass title if mortgage was not given. Id.

44. Delay in executing notes and mortgage for printing press, caused by disputes as to condition of machine, freight charges, etc., held not waiver of provision that title should not pass until notes and mortgage were given. Amundson v. Standard Printing & Mfg. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 789.

45. Where parties agreed that lot of tobacco sold was to be buyer's property, though allowed to remain on defendant's land, and though price had not been paid, title passed. Andrews v. Grimes, 148 N. C. 437, 62 SE 519. Under contract for sale of standing hay, it was to be weighed and paid for before taken from land. Buyer went on land, cut and stacked it, and baled and hauled away part. Held that title to entire crop passed though payment not made. Allen v. Rushforth [Neb.] 118 NW 657. Where ties were delivered, on railroad right of way, marked, inspected and accepted, title passed though payment was not made, contract not requiring payment on delivery; subsequent attachment and bankruptcy proceedings ineffective. McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline R. Co., 164 F 1007. Tender of price of cattle to bank which held them in pledge to secure payment of money advanced by it did not effect transfer of property or title, but gave vendee at most only right of action for failure to deliver. Lumley v. Miller [S. D.] 119 NW 1014.

recovered against him for the purchase price transfers the title,[46] and a refusal to deliver thereafter amounts to conversion.[47]

Delivery and acceptance. See 10 C. L. 1541—Generally, in the absence of some other agreement, or when other conditions have been performed,[48] title passes when goods have been delivered [49] and accepted and not until then.[50] Delivery of goods by the vendor to the carrier is equivalent to delivery to the buyer,[51] subject only to the right of stoppage in transitu,[52] and this is true through the purchase money is afterwards collected by the vendor or agent at the place from which the goods were shipped.[53] There is a conflict of authority as to the rule where the shipment is c. o. d.,[54] but it is said that the weight of authority is that the rule is the same in such case.[55] Where the contract is for delivery f. o. b. cars at a certain point, title is presumed to pass on arrival of goods on cars at the designated place.[56] Delivery to the carrier does not pass title to the buyer where the goods are sent on approval,[57]

48. See preceding paragraphs in this section as to payment, designation of goods, and meaning and effect of contract.

49. On sale and delivery of property, title at once passes. Giordano v. Nizzari, 115 NYS 719. Where switchboard was delivered and set up, and seller demanded full payment, but buyer refused to pay in full on ground of needed changes, held title had passed to buyer. Detroit Trust Co. v. F. Bissell Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 919, 118 NW 722. Lumber company under contract to furnish ties to railroad company delivered certain ties on railroad's right of way, where ties were inspected, accepted, marked, and invoice issued. Held title passed to railroad and was not affected by attachment and bankruptcy proceedings thereafter. McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline R. Co., 164 F 1007.

50. Buyer must show intention to accept before title will pass. Priest v. Hodges [Ark.] 118 SW 253. Where buyer refused to accept goods and reshipped them to seller, they became latter's property and buyer could not recover for their loss in transit. Nathan v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 496. If the goods had not been accepted by buyer, no title passed and the seller could reclaim from trustee in bankruptcy. In re Planett Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 157 F 916. If goods shipped do not meet terms of contract, there is no completed sale until buyer receives, inspects and accepts goods shipped. Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney [Ark.] 118 SW 406. Under executory contract for future delivery of fish, title did not pass until delivery though payment was made. In re Alaska Fishing & Development Co., 167 F 875. Bill of sale of yacht was delivered to buyer containing provision that she was to be delivered at port of New York, being then at Detroit. Held intention was to make executory contract under which title was not to pass until delivery to buyer at New York. Robinson v. Alger [C. C. A.] 167 F 968. Logs sold f. o. b. cars at various sidings. Held title did not pass to buyer so as to make him liable for taxes until such delivery on cars. Gow v. McFarren [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 104, 120 NW 800. Where books were nominally pledged to secure debt, but possession was never taken by creditor, who did not exercise option to sell them and credit debtor with proceeds, they were subject to levy as debtor's (bankrupt's) property and passed to trustee. Where purchaser of goods instructs seller to ship by express c. o. d., he makes carrier his agent and title passes to purchaser on delivery to carrier though purchaser is not entitled to actual possession until payment, and though carrier is seller's agent to receive payment. State v. Mullin, 78 Ohio St. 358, 85 NE 556.

56. In general, nothing to the contrary appearing, where contract provides for delivery f. o. b. cars at certain point, intention of parties is presumed to be that title shall pass upon such delivery occuring. State v. Patterson [Wis.] 120 NW 227.

57. Where goods were sent subject to in-nor where the goods shipped do not conform to the requirements of the contract,[58] nor where the goods are consigned to the seller,[59] nor where the agreement is for delivery to the buyer.[60] To convert the carrier into the agent of the consignee, the goods must be delivered to the carrier in the manner specified by the consignee.[61] If there is a material variation as to route, time place or manner of delivery to the carrier, the consignee is not bound thereby, and the carrier is the agent of the consignor.[62] hus, when the purchaser orders goods shipped insured and they are delivered to the carrier uninsured and are lost in transit, the loss must be borne by the seller, unless he can recover from the carrier.[63]

Actual delivery is not essential. Thus title to stock may pass, though certificates are retained as security;[64] and where stock is in the hands of a pledgee, a formal transfer and direction to the pledgee to deliver, on payment of the debt, passes title from the seller.[65] The general rule is that delivery of a bill of lading by the person entitled to receive the goods is a transfer of his title.[66] Indorsement of the bill of lading is not necessary.[67] The transfer by indorsement of a bill of lading to shipper's order vests the title to the goods in the transferee as the purchaser or pledgee, as the case may be,[68] unless the shipper has previously parted with his title.[69]

§ 7. Delivery and acceptance under the terms of the contract. A. Necessity, time, place, amount, etc.[70] See 10 C. L. 1542—To put the vendee in default, the vendor must tender the property, or a conveyance of it, if it is not susceptible of manual delivery;[71] but such tender is unnecessary if the vendee refuses to perform, or declares his intention not to perform, before the time for delivery by the vendor.[72] There can be no breach of an option extending over a number of years until the option is exercised and performance tendered by the vendee.[73] The time,[74] place[75]

spection and approval by consignee, and nothing had been paid, delivery to carrier did not pass title; consignor could sue for loss. Fein v. Weir, 129 App. Div. 299, 114 NYS 426.

58. Delivery of goods to carrier consigned to buyer is delivery to buyer so as to complete sale only when goods are in accordance with all terms of contract. Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney [Ark.] 118 SW 406.

59. Shipment of goods by vendor consigned to himself held not such delivery to carrier as to pass title to purchaser, where delivery to purchaser was not to be made except upon certain conditions, which were not fulfilled. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Phillips, 108 Md. 285, 70 A 232.

60. Where the agreement is to deliver to the buyer, title does not pass until delivery, and up to that time the seller may recover them from the carrier or any one who converts them while in transit. Acme Paper Box Factory v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 148 N. C. 421, 62 SE 557.

der him whereby the former agrees to hold goods for the latter for some purpose other than that of carriage and delivery at their original destination.[94] In the absence of an agreement with the buyer or claimant to the contrary, the carrier is presumed to hold goods in his original capacity.[95] The carrier cannot constitute himself the buyer's agent for the custody of the goods, nor can the buyer make the carrier his agent for custody without the carrier's consent.[96] Where there has been no actual or constructive delivery, goods held by the carrier are deemed to be still in transit.[97] The delivery of an order on a warehouse is nullified where the seller takes the goods without notice to the buyer.[98]

13. Where goods of certain kind and quality are ordered, buyer does not accept by allowing them to be unloaded for inspection, where such inspection cannot otherwise be made. Wiburg & Hannah Co. v. Walling & Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 832.

14. Fact that cash payment was made did not alone show acceptance of press, where offering to sell and dispose of goods before an examination of them on the assumption that goods were as ordered,[15] or an unauthorized sale by an agent of the buyer of part of the goods, promptly repudiated by the buyers,[16] or a use of the rejected property to reduce the buyer's damages,[17] will not alone operate as an acceptance. Where a tender of goods includes some which should have been previously delivered, the buyer need not sort out the goods delivered in time, but may reject the entire lot.[18]

(§ 7) D. Excuses for and waiver of breach.[19]—See 10 C. Where delivery was to be before stated time and contract, as construed by parties, required buyer to give seller notice of desired delivery, and no notice was given to deliver before stated time, seller had right to refuse to be further bound by contract. In re Millbourne Mills Co., 165 F 109. Where contract contemplated weekly orders for and shipments of malt, the buyer's failure to send any order for two months, after disagreement with seller as to quality of car load, was repudiation of contract, relieving sellers of duty to perform. Jung Brew. Co. v. Konrad, 137 Wis. 107, 118 NW 548. Contract for sash and doors contemplated delivery of certain number of doors and all sash needed during certain year. Buyer delayed orders for doors until so late in year that they could not be turned out in ordinary course. Held, failure or refusal to file order was excused. Gauger & Co. v. Sawyer & Austin Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 157. Such delay in ordering doors amounted to breach of contract for buyer. Id.

25. Seller of cement who made reasonable efforts to procure cars in which to ship was not liable for failure to ship due to inability to procure cars. Burt v. Garden City Sand Co., 237 Ill. 473, 86 NE 1055. Contract was for delivery in June, unless prevented by strikes. Buyer later requested July delivery which seller refused unless storage charges were paid by buyer, which buyer agreed to pay. Held, seller could not thereafter set up strike in July, not affecting transportation as excuse for non-delivery. American Steel Hoop Co. v. Searles [Miss.] 46 S 411. Contract to supply tin cans to cannery provided for release from liability in case of inability to perform because of damage by "elements" or "unavoidable casualty." Fact that defendants expected to use cargo of tin then en route from Liverpool to San Francisco, be excused [26] depends upon the language of the contract [27] and the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Adverse claims to the property by third persons will not excuse nondelivery.[28] Delay in delivery is waived where both parties treat the contract as alive thereafter.[29] The waiver of a particular breach by the seller does not extend to the former breaches so as to bar a claim of damages therefor.[30] The failure of the seller to exercise a right to buy from others, and demand of the seller the difference in price, is not a waiver of the claim of damages by reason of the seller's breach.[31] Acceptance of goods shipped is not, as matter of law, a waiver of a claim for damages for breach by delay in delivery or failure to deliver the agreed amount,[32] though it may be evidence of a waiver,[33] but an acceptance bars the seller's breach as a defense to an action for the price.[34]

26. Strikes and causes beyond seller's control did not excuse failure to deliver to one buyer amounts proportionate to those delivered to others, especially where new contracts were made by seller after stringency arose. Garfield & Proctor Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co., 199 Mass. 22, 84 NE 1020.

27. Letter containing confirmation of sale required seller to report at once any errors in it, but seller kept silent and thereafter set up as excuse for nondelivery agreement that contract was subject to his ability to get cars, and that he could not get them. This was not in confirmation. Held, seller estopped to set up this defense. J. H. Teasdale Commission Co. v. Keckler [Neb.] 120 NW 955.

28. Where purchaser sues for damages for breach of contract to sell and deliver timber, seller, who failed to deliver because of adverse claims to timber, could not defend on ground that sale was nullity, under Code, art. 2452, as sale of thing belonging to another, as nullity under this law is relative and is for benefit of bona fide purchaser. Jefferson Sawmill Co. v. Iowa & La. Land Co., 122 La. 983, 48 S 428.

29. Where both parties treated contract as alive after delays, they were waived. Pitch Pine Lumber Co. v. Wood Lumber Co. [Fla.] 48 S 993. Buyer of boiler waived delay in delivery where, after specified time had passed, he treated contract as existing and requested seller to delay shipment. Tidwell v. Southern Engine & Boiler Works [Ark.] 112 SW 152.

30. By accepting delayed shipment under one order, buyer did not waive delay in other orders. Braitsch v. Kiel & Arthe Co., 114 NYS 872. Letter by buyers asking when delivery of goods under previous orders could be expected, and asking seller not to ship orders for subsequent delivery until requested, was not waiver of delay in delivery under previous orders. Id. Acceptance of coal under contract requiring delivery of certain quantity was not waiver of damages for former breach, right of action for which had accrued. Sterling Coal Co. v. Silver Spring Bleaching & Dyeing Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 848. Breach by buyer in payment of one shipment would not excuse breach by seller in prior year. R. P. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92.

31. Such other right being optional with buyer. Garfield & Proctor Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co., 199 Mass. 22, 84 NE 1020.

32. Acceptance does not waive right to set up counterclaim for damages for delay. Reading Hardware Co. v. New York, 129 App. Div. 292, 113 NYS 331. Acceptance of and payment for coal without objection held not waiver of right to damages for failure to deliver amounts as agreed, when buyer did not discover the breach of contract until afterwards. Garfield & Proctor Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co., 199 Mass. 22, 84 NE 1020. Buyer does not, as matter of law, waive claim for damages for failure of seller to ship goods as agreed by accepting what he can get under contract. Id. Acceptance of ice by buyer after the agreed time of delivery, and acceptance by seller of delayed payments, held not waiver of buyer's right to damages for delay in making delivery of orders or of full amount sued for. Anderson v. Savoy, 137 Wis. 44, 118 NW 217. Where vendor shipped property some days after the time agreed and wrote vendee, and vendee wrote that he would remit first payment on arrival of property, this was not waiver of claim of damages for delay so as to authorize court to direct verdict for seller for full price. Alabama Const. Co. v. Continental Car & Equip. Co., 131 Ga. 365, 62 SE 160.

33. Garfield & Proctor Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co., 199 Mass. 22, 84 NE 1020.

34. Acceptance of goods and payment of a part of the price waives delay in delivery as a defense to an action for the balance of the price. Reading Hardware Co. v. New York, 129 App. Div. 292, 113 NYS 331.

(§ 8) B. Express and implied warranties and fulfillment or breach thereof.[37] See 10 C. L. 1548—No specific words are necessary to constitute an express warranty,[38] and it may rest in parol,[39] but cannot be established by parol contrary to the express stipulations of a written contract of sale.[40] Any affirmation of a material fact, made by the seller at the time of the sale as an inducement thereto, understood and intended as a warranty by the parties and relied on by the buyer as such, amounts to an express warranty [41] when made by one authorized to bind the seller.[42] Terms describing the articles sold or to be manufactured are to be treated as part of the contract and not as an express warranty.[43] Whether there was an express quent oral warranty cannot be proved, unless shown to be based on consideration. Baltimore Refrigerating & Heating Co. v. Wetzel [C. C. A.] 162 F 117. Delivery of goods held not equivalent to acceptance; warranty made after delivery not without consideration. Luckes v. Meserole, 132 App. Div. 20, 116 NYS 350.

39. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co., 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822.

40. Though purchaser cannot read or write, and relies on verbal assurances of seller. Boswell v. Johnson, 5 Ga. App. 251, 62 SE 1003.

41. Representations made at time of sale to induce sale are warranties. Chestnut v. Ohler [Ky.] 112 SW 1101. Word "warranty" need not be used; clear representation of quality of thing sold made by seller to buyer as part of contract and relied on by buyer is warranty. Meshbesher v. Channellene Oil & Mfg. Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 428. To constitute express warranty there must be an express undertaking to warrant in so many words, or, if representations be relied on to make out the warranty, they must be made in such manner and circumstances as to authorize vendee to understand them as warranty and he must have relied on them. Segerstrom v. Swenson, 105 Minn. 115, 117 NW 478. No specific words necessary to constitute warranty of quality, but seller must show intent to make warranty and buyer must have so understood seller. Woodridge v. Brown, 149 N. C. 299, 62 SE 1076. Statement that indebtedness of business sold was certain amount, relied on by buyer, would amount to warranty, and, if in fact indebtedness was greater, buyer could recover compensatory damages Wrenn v. Morgan, 148 N. C. 101; 61 SE 641. An affirmation of a material fact, made by the seller at the time of the sale and as an inducement thereto, and accepted and relied on by the buyer, amounts to a warranty. Id. To constitute warranty there must be statement of fact intended to be relied on and which was reasonably relied on. Smith v. Alphin [N. C.] 64 SE 210. Mere fact that buyer told salesman that he desired coal to burn brick, and that salesman said coal sold would burn brick, did not amount to warranty of quality of coal. Woodridge v. Brown, 149 N. C. 299, 62 SE 1076. Where seller represented that he would sell goods as cheaply as they could be had anywhere, such representation was not mere trade talk but was a material representation and actionable, and excessive price paid could be recovered. Staut v. Caruthersville Hardware Co., 131 Mo. App. 520, 110 SW 619. Instruction that "any positive statement or affirmation of fact and not of opinion as to the quality on condition of the thing sold made by the seller in the course of the negotiations, and naturally and fairly importing that he intends to bind himself to its truth and so understood and relied on by the buyer, constitutes a warranty," held not open to objection urged. Barnes v. Love [Iowa] 119 NW 613. A warranty arises when there is a distinct assertion of fact, which is relied on, respecting the quality of the goods or the adaptability thereof to the purpose for which they are desired. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co., 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822. While word "warranty" or "guaranty" is not necessary to a warranty, where one of these is not used, it must appear that seller made some assertion of quality with intent that buyer should believe and rely on it, and buyer must have relied on it. Schlichting v. Rowell [Iowa] 119 NW 151. Instructions erroneous which ignored element of intent of seller and reliance of buyer. Id. Evidence sufficient to show express oral warranty by selling agent that oil sold was suitable and safe for use in cooling automobile and engine, and was noninflammable. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co., 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822.

42. Agent selling goods designed for particular purpose has implied authority to give warranty that goods are suitable and safe for intended purpose. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co, 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822.

43. Heath Dry Gas Co. v. Hurd, 193 N. Y. 255, 86 NE 18. Sale of grain in elevator was made orally and buyer inspected it. Held, letter confirming sale did not embody contract, and reference to grain as No. 2 and 3 was not warranty but merely descriptive of grain. St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co. v. Princeton Roller Mill Co., 104 Minn. 401, 116 NW 935 Mere de-warranty in a particular case may be a question for the jury.[44] Whether a warranty has been met depends upon the facts of the particular case.[45]

*Implied warranties.*See 10 C. L. 1548—The law implies a warranty of title.[46] Upon sale by sample, there is an implied warranty that goods shall be according to sample.[47] Where goods are sold by a manufacturer without inspection, the law implies a warranty that they are merchantable and reasonably fit for the intended purpose [48] and free from latent defects growing out of the process of manufacture.[49] The mere use of a trade name does not, however, carry with it any warranty of the article so designated.[50] When articles sold are articles of food and are sold direct to the consumer for immediate consumption there is an implied warranty of fitness.[51] Where a definitely known and described article is ordered, there is no warranty of fitness, though the buyer's purpose is known to the seller.[52]

Subject to the foregoing exceptions, the general rule is that, in the absence of fraud, there is no implied warranty of the quality or fitness of the article sold,[53] even though the seller knows that the buyer desires the article for a particular purpose.[54] Thus there is no implied warranty where the buyer gets the identical property ordered [55] or selected by him,[56] or where he has an opportunity to inspect the scription of pictures sold as first class and up to proofs submitted held not warranty, for breach of which buyer could recover after acceptance of goods showing defects. Electro-Tint Engraving Co. v. American Handkerchief Co., 130 App. Div. 561, 115 NYS 34.

44. Buyer asked if horse was all right, and seller said yes, except a little distemper which he would soon get over, and buyer then made offer, on what seller said and what buyer saw, which was accepted. Whether there was warranty for jury. Harris v. Cannady, 149 N. C. 81, 62 SE 771.

45. Warranty that cement would be of certain quality met if it was of that quality at time of delivery under contract. Burt v. Garden City Sand Co., 237 Ill. 473, 86 NE 1055. Warranty that mining roasting plant would handle certain quantity of ore daily was warranty that it would handle it properly, and warranty was not met by plant which wasted ore by not handling it properly. Trego v. Roosevelt Min. Co., 136 Wis. 315, 117 NW 855.

46. Kinch v. Haynes, 58 Misc. 499, 111 NYS 618; Barasch v. Kramer, 62 Misc. 475, 115 NYS 176. Where goods are in the constructive possession of the seller at time of sale, there is an implied warranty of title. North American Commercial Co. v. North American Transportation & Trading Co. [Wash.] 100 P 985. If there is no express warranty, the seller in all cases (unless expressly or from nature of transaction excepted) warrants that he had valid title and right to sell. Burpee v. Holmes [Ga.] 64 SE 486. Possession of property and act of sale amounts to representation that seller is owner, and is implied warranty of title. Acts 1908, c. 237, § 13. Hartley v. Rotman, 200 Mass. 372, 86 NE 903. Sale of cut timber carries an implied warranty of title. Pierce v. Coryn, 126 Ill. App. 244.

47. Kinch v. Haynes, 58 Misc. 499, 111 NYS 618.

48. Cochran v. Chetopa Mill & Elevator Co. [Ark.] 114 SW 711; American Standard Jewelry Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 117 SW 781; Heath Dry Gas Co. v. Hurd, 193 N. Y. 255, 86 NE 18. Where an article is ordered for a particular known purpose, there is a warranty of fitness. International Filter Co. v. Hartman, 141 Ill. App. 239. Manufacturer of oil designed to be used as cooler for automobile and engine impliedly warrants that oil is suitable and safe for such purpose. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co., 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822. Contract for carbureters providing that they should be constructed in a careful, workmanlike and skillful manner, was not an express warranty, since law implied warranty in effect the same. Heath Dry Gas Co. v. Hurd, 193 N. Y. 255, 86 NE 18. Where goods are sold by description without opportunity for inspection before purchase, there is ordinarily an implied warranty, not only that goods conform to description, but also that they are merchantable. R. P. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. Agreement to build barge with four coal bins which could be loaded or unloaded separately implied warranty of fitness of bins for such use. Excelsior Coal Co. v. Gildersleeve [C. C. A.] 160 F 47.

49. Kinch v. Haynes, 58 Misc. 499, 111 NYS 618; Heath Dry Gas Co. v. Hurd, 193 N. Y. 255, 86 NE 18.

50. Kullman, Salz & Co. v. Sugar Apparatus Mfg. Co., 153 Cal. 715, 96 P 369.

51. Kinch v. Haynes, 58 Misc. 499, 111 NYS 618; Deason v. McNeill, 133 Ill. App. 304.

52. International Filter Co. v. Hartman, 141 Ill. App. 239.

53. There is no implied warranty of quality of chattels sold; there must be representations or warranty, or rule of caveat emptor applies. Lambert v. Armentrout [W. Va.] 64 SE 260. But no warranty against inherent defects in the articles arises. Pierce v. Coryn, 126 Ill. App. 244.

54. A warranty of the fitness of a chattel for a certain purpose is not necessarily implied because the seller knows the buyer is buying for such purpose. W. R. Colchord Machinery Co. v. Loy-Wilson Foundry & Machinery Co., 131 Mo. App. 540, 110 SW 630.

55. There is no implied warranty when the buyer gets the identical property or-property [57] and test it.[58] In such cases, in the absence of fraud or an express warranty, the doctrine of caveat emptor applies.[59] The rule of caveat emptor has been repudiated in South Carolina,[60] and, in that state, the seller, without any express warranty or representation of value, is held to warrant the article sold to be of value for the purpose to which it is ordinarily applied.[61] While there is no implied warranty against obvious defects,[62] yet, if the buyer is deceived and misled as to the effect of such defects by fraud and misrepresentations of the seller, a warranty is implied.[63] No warranty will be implied where there is an express warranty.[64]

Implied warranty of title is broken if, after sale, the property is taken and sold under mortgage to which it is subject, given and duly recorded prior to sale.[65] The seller is not relieved from a warranty of title by suggesting ineffectual means of resisting an attack and offering to pay attorney's fees.[66]

(§ 8) C. Conditions and fulfillment or breach.[67]—See 10 C. L. 1549—The contract between the parties is the measure of their rights [68] and obligations,[69] and its dered and selected. W. R. Colchord Machinery Co. v. Loy-Wilson Foundry & Machinery Co., 131 Mo. App. 540, 110 SW 630. Where contract called for lumber of certain dimensions, quality and price, and lumber of that kind was delivered at agreed price, there was no room for implied warranty that lumber was suitable for buyer's uses. Manning v. National Saw Co., 126 App. Div. 325, 110 NYS 685.

56. Where buyer of an article uses his own judgment in selecting what he wants, there is no implied warranty by the seller that the article is suitable and safe for the use intended by the buyer. Conkling v. Standard Oil Co., 138 Iowa, 596, 116 NW 822. Where purchase of machine is made on inspection by buyer, there is no implied warranty. Ford Motor Co. v. Osburn, 140 Ill. App. 633.

57. There is no implied warranty, covering defects discoverable by a reasonable inspection, opportunity for which is afforded, that the property is fit for the purpose for which it is bought. W. R. Colchord Machinery Co. v. Loy-Wilson Foundry & Machinery Co., 131 Mo. App. 540, 110 SW 630. Where chattel sold was in existence, specifically described in written contract, and capable of being examined and its condition ascertained by each party, there was no implied warranty. Watkins v. Angotti [W. Va.] 63 SE 969. No implied warranty that cow was not diseased where, after sale, seller said she was all right, butcher who bought having examined her, nor was this an express warranty. Kinch v. Haynes, 58 Misc. 499, 111 NYS 618. Where machine was expressly sold as secondhand and without warranty, and buyer inspected it fully before buying, he could not hold seller as upon warranty and defeat recovery of price and foreclosure of mortgage by setting up defects. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Bailey [Ark.] 115 SW 949.

58. Contract to deliver machine on certain payments, machine to be used 90 days and returned at end of such time in lieu of last payment if machine did not do desired work, held lease for experimental purpose, with option to buy, not sale within Civ. Code, § 1770, that one who manufactures article for certain use warrants it as fit for such use. Kullman, Salz & Co. v. Sugar Apparatus Mfg. Co., 153 Cal. 725, 96 P 369. Civ. Code, § 1771, that one who sells article inaccessible to examination warrants it as sound and merchantable, does not apply where machine was shipped under agreement for 90 days' experimental use. Id.

59. No implied warranty of secondhand machine when buyer knew what he was getting. W. R. Colchord Machinery Co. v. Loy-Wilson Foundry & Machinery Co., 131 Mo. App. 540, 110 SW 630. In the absence of a warranty, fraud or mistake, the doctrine of caveat emptor applies. O'Sullivan v. Griffith, 153 Cal. 502, 95 P 873. Where seller expressly refuses to warrant, buyer cannot rescind, in absence of fraud. Grojean v. Darby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1062. Doctrine of caveat emptor applies where it is sought to enforce an implied warranty of quality or soundness and buyer had opportunity to inspect. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233. Seller of mules did not know that one had certain eye disease, but knew that one had had sore eyes, and told buyer so, Held buyer was put on inquiry and doctrine of caveat emptor applied. Grojean v. Darby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1062.

63. That machine was secondhand did not preclude reliance on representations that it would do certain work. Walker, Evans & Cogswell Co. v. Ayer, 80 S. C. 292, 61 SE 557. If seller knows purpose for which buyer desires property, and knows of defect which makes it unsuitable for such purpose, it is his duty to disclose the facts. Grojean v. Darby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1062.

64. Buyer who loses right to rely on express warranty has no remedy as his rights are fixed by written contract. Guhy v. Nichols & Shepherd Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 237, 109 SW 1190. Express warranty that scales sold would be accurate in weight and computation, excluded implied warranties as to suitability of scales. Stimpson Computing Scale Co. v. Taylor, 4 Ga. App. 567, 61 SE 1131.

68. Agreement to receive secondhand piano as payment of $90 on new piano did not entitle purchaser to lower priced terms must be complied with both by seller[70] and buyer,[71] as a breach by one relieves the other of the duty of performance.[72] Where the contract requires article sold to be satisfactory, without stating to whom it is to be satisfactory, it means satisfactory to the buyer.[73]

(§ 8) D. Conditions on a warranty.[74]—See 10 C. L. 1550—Where the warranty is conditional, the purchaser must show performance of the condition before he can hold the seller on the warranty.[75]

secondhand instrument with credit for $90. Graham v. Pease Piano Co., 111 NYS 60. Where buyer of building failed to remove materials and clear site, but his contract provided only for sale to him, seller could not recover cost of clearing site from buyer in action for breach of contract; buyer's duty to remove did not rest on contract; remedy in tort or implied assumpsit by proper party. Kellerman Cont. Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 99. Negotiations construed and held to make contract whereby plaintiff, seller, reserved right to inspection by disinterested parties if defendant's, buyer's, inspection (of lumber) proved too severe, but seller did not have right to cancel, especially where buyer had resold. Holladay Klotz Land & Lumber Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 436.

69. Contract to sell entire output of cement plant means all that is actually produced; agreement to operate mill at full capacity cannot be implied if not stipulated in contract. Burt v. Garden City Sand Co., 237 Ill. 473, 86 NE 1055. Acceptance of offer of staves "equal to samples," average width of which was 5½ inches, did not require delivery of staves all 5½ inches wide, but of staves equal to samples. Caraway v. Kentucky Refining Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 189. Where contract provided simply for sale of building to wrecking company, there was no implied agreement by buyer to remove all the materials and clear the site. Kellerman Cont. Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 99.

70. Certain machines held to conform to specifications of contract. Murphy v. St. Louis Cypress Co., 122 La. 905, 48 S 319. Evidence held to show boiler tubes up to standard grade. Id. Evidence held to show that higher grade of coal than that delivered was contracted for. Indiana Fuel Supply Co. v. Indianapolis Basket Co., 41 Ind. App. 658, 84 NE 776. Under contract to construct electric sign containing certain number of lights in border, doctrine of substantial compliance inapplicable; buyer was entitled to number of lights contracted for, even though less number would make better sign. Ellison Furniture & Carpet Co. v. Langever [Tex. Clv. App.] 113 SW 178. Shingles sold as "Star A Star," which brand was well known to trade as meaning shingles of certain quality and dimensions. Held buyer not required to use skill in inspecting, but had right to rely on contract. Inferior shingles being delivered, buyer could recover difference between price paid and market price of those delivered. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233. Agreement to deliver shipping culls at $10 per M. and mill culls at $5 per M. would be performed by delivery of merchantable culls of this description, but delivery of inferior kind for superior kind, and charging higher price, would be breach. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. Buyer, by promising liberal inspection, but refusing modification of contract for lumber, held not estopped to demand quality contracted for. Burton v. Berthold [C. C. A.] 166 F 416. A sale of an article of a particular description amounts to a contract that article sold and delivered answers that description. The contract rests upon a condition rather than a warranty. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233. Held immaterial how inspection of lumber was made, as that representative of county, joined with defendant buyer's representative in making it, sole question before jury being whether lumber delivered was in accordance with specifications. Bushnell v. King Bridge Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 407.

71. Buyers of hay who agree to press it have right to press it within time agreed upon for removal of hay from seller's premises. Austin v. Langlois, 81 Vt. 223, 69 A 739. Where dealer ordered sash and door by one contract from manufacturer, he could not insist on provision as to delivering sash and refuse to fulfill contract as to doors. Gauger & Co. v. Sawyer & Austin Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 157. Order for jewelry contained in separate columns, enumeration of goods, price per dozen, amount, and retail price, and required retailer to keep goods on sale continuously, and contained guaranty by seller that retailer would sell at least 1½ times the value of order. Held, where retailer refused goods, seller could recover amount of order without proving that goods would sell at retail price stated. Rice v. Malone [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 25, 120 NW 605.

72. See post, § 8E. Failure of buyers of hay to press it as agreed would be breach of contract, releasing seller. Austin v. Langlois, 81 Vt. 223, 69 A 739. In action to recover price of organ, plaintiff adopted view that, by second agreement to do certain work to remedy defects, other imperfections were waived by buyer. Held, under strict construction so adopted, plaintiff could not recover without showing strict performance of the entire agreement made by him. Howard v. Albright, 129 App. Div. 763, 114 NYS 194.

73. Kidder Press Co. v. Reed & Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 950. Where an executory contract provides that title to article sold shall not vest in buyer, and payment need not be made unless it is satisfactory, the seller cannot recover unless the buyer is satisfied and accepts. (§ 8) E. Waiver of warranties and conditions; excuse for breach.[78]—See 8 C. L. 1781—In the absence of a warranty, the acceptance and retention of goods with notice of defects, or after an opportunity to inspect, is a waiver of claims that goods are defective or not as ordered,[77] and where the contract imposes conditions as to the time and manner of inspection, notice of defects, and return of goods, these conditions must, in general, be performed by the buyer.[78] In the absence of an express contract provision, the buyer has, however, a reasonable time in which to inspect[79] and to return goods found to be unsatisfactory,[80] and to perform other conditions required of him.[81] The right to rescind may be lost without waiving a chine was unsatisfactory, but failed to send it to place where he bought it, as required, he could not hold seller on warranty. Jasper County Bank v. Barts, 130 Mo. App. 635, 109 SW 1057. Where husker-shredder was warranted to do good work, but contract provided for 10 days' trial and notice thereafter if machine did not work, and gave seller right to remedy defects, and to replace machine, or rescind if it could not furnish a satisfactory one, buyer after keeping machine two seasons without complaint had no right of action for damages. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Harp [Ky.] 113 SW 488.

77. In the absence of a warranty, retention of goods is a waiver of claims of defects in goods. Wilmerding v. Strouse, 112 NYS 1091. Where goods were not made up as ordered but buyer accepted alteration, buyer was liable. Massillon Sign & Poster Co. v. Buffalo Lick Springs Co., 81 S. C. 114, 61 SE 1098. One who received and kept coal could not defeat recovery of price unless coal was worthless. Home Ice Factory v. Howells Min. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 117. Where buyer received and kept books for year, paying part of price, he could not thereafter defeat recovery of balance by claiming books were damaged when received. St. Dunstan Soc. v. Picard, 115 NYS 1079. Buyer who, with full knowledge of defects in scales, gave note for price, waived defects known to him, and cannot set up known facts as defense in action on note. Stimpson Computing Scale Co. v. Taylor, 4 Ga. App. 567, 61 SE 1131. Standard goods being ordered, buyer found on delivery that weights were short and so notified seller, but kept and used goods. Held, buyer could not recover for short weights. American Steel Hoop Co. v. Searles Bros. [Miss.] 46 S 411. Seller may recover though buyer insists that goods are not as ordered, where buyer nevertheless retains and uses them, not merely to test them, but as owner, defects, if any, being patent. Edwards v. Woodridge [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 920. Where goods of certain description or quality are ordered for future delivery and vendor tenders goods not of kind ordered, and vendee, after inspection or opportunity therefor, accepts such goods, he cannot thereafter recover damages for defects in goods. O. L. Gregory Vinegar Co. v. J. Weller Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 247. Vinegar of certain grain strength was ordered and buyer accepted shipments and made only two complaints, one of which he withdrew and one was settled. He kept last consignment 11 months before testing. Held, he could not recover damages for defects. Id.

78. Where contract for sale of machinery gave seller right to remedy defects and required notice thereof, and buyer failed to give notice for 4 years and then gave renewal notes on agreement to repair defects, and for 2 years failed to give notice of defects, buyer could not defend action on notes by showing breach of warranty. Guhy v. Nichols & Shepard Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 237, 109 SW 1190. Where contract provided that seller would put scales in repair any time within two years, if sent to him, and buyer did not send scales for repair, he could not avail himself of defects in action on note given for price. Stimpson Computing Scale Co. v. Taylor, 4 Ga. App. 567, 61 SE 1131. Where goods were sold by sample under contract providing for their return if unsatisfactory, if goods shipped were according to sample, buyer could not defeat liability for price on ground that they were unsatisfactory without returning the goods. American Standard Jewelry Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 117 SW 781. Contract for sale of rolls provided for 30 days' trial and return of rolls if unsatisfactory immediately after expiration of 30 days. Buyer gave notice that rolls were unsatisfactory but did not take them from mill or load on cars as agreed, but kept them until time of trial. Held, liable for price. Sturtevant Mill Co. v. Kingsland Brick Co., 74 N. J. Law, 492, 70 A 732.

79. Under contract requiring notice of defects to be given within 10 days, instruction that defendant could not recover for defects unless notice was given within 10 days was properly refused, as ignoring defendant's rights as to defects, not discovered within 10-day limit. Adams v. Gary Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1017.

80. If machinery was bought and notes given on condition that machinery could be returned and notes recovered if it proved to be unsatisfactory, buyer had right to return it within reasonable time if he found it unsatisfactory. Krenz v. Lee, 104 Minn. 455, 116 NW 832.

81. Where sale contract required vendee to give evidence of bank credit, but did not specify any time for doing so, the law implied, in absence of any general custom, that it was to be done within a reasonable time. Rose v. Lewis [Ala.] 48 S 105. Where buyer supplied labels for apricots claim for damages for failure of the seller to comply with the contract.[82] It is held that where refusal to accept is based upon particular grounds, deliberately stated, other objections are waived,[83] and vendor can recover on proving compliance with contract in particulars covered by objections raised.[84] Elsewhere it is said that where the buyer has absolutely rejected goods, for any reason, his silence as to other objections which would justify rejection is not a waiver of his right to insist on such other grounds, when not accompanied by conduct which may have misled and prejudiced the vendor.[85] An express warranty is usually held to survive acceptance of the goods,[86] certainly where the defects are not discovered until after acceptance;[87] but an unconditional acceptance of goods bought with express warranty has been held a waiver of known defects.[88]

Conditions.[See 10 C. L. 1550]—Provisions or conditions of the contract may be waived by failure to take advantage of or insist upon their performance,[89] but there can be no waiver by a mere statement after the time for performance has expired.[90]

(§ 8) F. Remedies[91]—[See 10 C. L. 1551] for breach of warranties and conditions are treated in subsequent sections.[92]

§ 9. Payment, tender and price as terms of the contract.[93]—[See 10 C. L. 1551]—To be enforcible, the contract of sale should fix the price or specify some method of definitely ascertaining it,[94] and the amount to be paid is to be determined from the contract.[95] Where, under a contract uncertain as to price, the goods sold are delivered, before seller needed them, this was sufficient performance. Ellsworth v. Knowles [Cal. App.] 97 P 690.

82. Though buyer, having agreed to take seller's inspection and selection of goods ordered, could not rescind, he did not thus waive his right to damages for failure of seller to comply with contract. Wiburg & Hannah Co. v. Walling & Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 832.

83, 84. Skins rejected because unmerchantable. Delay in delivery not available in action for price. Hess v. Kaufherr, 128 App. Div. 526, 112 NYS 832.

86. See 8 C. L. 1782, n. 16. Mere acceptance and use of goods, even with knowledge of defects, do not preclude resort to claim of damages for breach of warranty. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. If, when the property is tendered to the purchaser and before final acceptance, he discovers defects and complains thereof to the seller, and the seller insists that the buyer retain it and pay for it and promises to remedy the defects, such acceptance and partial payments thereafter do not amount to a waiver of the warranty. Piano retained after complaint and promise by seller to remedy defects. Promise not being kept buyer not liable for balance of price retained as damages for breach of warranty. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Barber, 5 Ga. App. 344, 63 SE 233.

87. Where contract called for air tight cans for canning fruit, and defects in cans were latent and not discoverable until after fermentation had set in, buyer was not estopped to claim damages for breach of warranty by retaining and using cans. Stewart v. Blue Grass Canning Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 401. Breach of warranty in installation of heating plant not waived by acceptance after test, and lien enforcible subject to right of action on guaranty. Scott v. Keeth, 152 Mich. 547, 15 Det. Leg. N. 206, 116 NW 183.

88. The unconditional acceptance of an article bought under an express warranty usually operates as a waiver of such defects as were within the actual knowledge of the purchaser at the time of acceptance. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Barber, 5 Ga. App. 344, 63 SE 233.

89. Provision in contract for apricots that buyer was to furnish lace paper for packing and receive an allowance therefor, being for buyer's benefit, could be waived by him. Ellsworth v. Knowles [Cal. App.] 97 P 690. Where parties disagreed on classification of lumber sold, but seller acquiesced in buyer's classification of certain lumber and allowed it to be hauled away, he could not thereafter deny or object to buyer's classification. Federal Lumber Co. v. Reece [Ky.] 116 SW 783.

90. Failure to tender stock, under agreement to repurchase after one year, at expiration of year, or within a reasonable time thereafter, was not waived by statement by seller made 5 months after expiration of year. Wright v. Berger, 114 NYS 912.

94. Where seller agreed to make prices as low as could be obtained in any market, this was not sufficiently definite. Stout v. Caruthersville Hardware Co., 131 Mo. App. 520, 110 SW 619.

95. Contract held to require seller of machinery to pay for its installation; no the transaction is treated as a sale for the reasonable value of the goods.[96] Ordinarily, no other agreement being made, payment and delivery are concurrent obligations,[97] and payment need not be made until delivery;[98] but the parties may fix the terms of payment by their contract,[99] or by a course of dealing.[1] Failure to pay in the manner [2] and at the time agreed upon is a breach of contract which relieves the seller from the duty of further performance,[3] unless the breach of contract by the buyer has been waived by the seller.[4] Where orders are separate, failure to pay for one is not a breach as to others.[5] The giving of lien notes to be paid on delivery of goods is not payment for goods.[6] The seller may look to the party to whom he sold for payment, regardless of such party's contracts with third persons;[7] recovery for such expense. Murphy v. St. Louis Cypress Co., 122 La. 905, 48 S 319. Plaintiff made contract to sell his entire product of dried curd for 5 years to drug company, which agreed to pay not less than 4 cents per pound and that price should equal highest price paid under any of its contracts. Drug company assigned contracts to defendant, a larger concern. Held, plaintiff could recover only highest price paid under drug company's contracts; not highest price paid anywhere by defendant. Casein Co. of America v. Van Dam [C. C. A.] 168 F 45. Contract for sale held to include fixtures as well as merchandise for sale under term "stock of goods"; hence all were to be invoiced at wholesale prices as agreed in order to determine amount of second payment. Hendrickson v. Anderson [S. D.] 120 NW 765.

96. Stout v. Caruthersville Hardware Co., 131 Mo. App. 520, 110 SW 619. In absence of evidence tending to show inflated prices or unfair trade conditions, reasonable value means market value, that is prices at which goods are customarily bought and sold at the time and place in question. Wagoner Undertaking Co. v. Jones [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1049.

97. In the case of executory contract, the obligations to pay and to deliver are mutual and dependent. Gross v. Ajello, 132 App. Div. 380, 116 NYS 380. Shipping goods in seller's name and sending bill of lading with sight draft attached in ordinary course of business does not justify rejection of goods. Plumb v. Bridge, 128 App. Div. 651, 113 NYS 92.

98. Catlin v. Jones [Or.] 97 P 546; Delaware Trust Co. v. Calm [N. Y.] 88 NE 53. Laws imply that payment is to be on delivery if no time fixed. Bollenbacher v. Reid [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 961, 118 NW 933.

99. Second and additional contract for sale of machines held to contain terms of payment, which controlled. Blakeslee & Co. v. Reinhold Mfg. Co., 153 Mich. 230, 15 Det. Leg. N. 468, 117 NW 92. Where contract provided for "payment sight draft against papers," buyer was not obliged to tender payment to put seller in default for nondelivery, since contract contemplated shipment before payment. Ellsworth v. Knowles [Cal. App.] 97 P 690. Evidence admissible to show by usage that phrase "payment sight draft against papers" meant that seller would ship and that payment was to be made on delivery of bill of lading. Id.

2. Where plaintiff was at work for defendant, using mule teams, and defendant bought a new team, agreeing that $50 a month should be deducted from amounts due plaintiff until payment of price by plaintiff, when he should have mules, plaintiff, having abandoned work without cause, was not entitled to pay balance and receive mules Ellis v. Whitney [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 158.

3. See, also, ante, § 7D. Where lumber was to be shipped in car load lots, and payment was to be for cars separately, failure to pay as agreed was breach of contract by buyer. Harris Lumber Co. v. Wheeler Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 168 Where payment for goods is to be made at stated times after delivery, refusal to make payment as agreed is breach of contract, and relieves seller of duty of making future deliveries; failure to make such deliveries is therefor no ground for recoupment. Webster v. Moore, 108 Md. 672, 71 A 466. Where goods were ordered and order accepted, without any condition, buyer had no right of inspection; refusal to pay draft without inspection was breach of contract relieving seller of obligation to deliver. Cochran v. Chetopa Mill & Elevator Co. [Ark.] 114 SW 711. Where plaintiff failed to make payment for machines as required by contract, defendant was not bound to delivery as agreed, and plaintiff could not recover lost profits for breach by defendant. Blakeslee & Co. v. Reinhold Mfg. Co., 153 Mich. 230, 15 Det. Leg. N. 468, 117 NW 92.

4. Breach of contract by failure to make payments as agreed may be waived by continuing to make shipments and accepting past due payments. Harris Lumber Co. v. Wheeler Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 168. That payment for corn was in script was no defense to action for damages for failure to deliver where defendant did not allege that script had not been accepted. Stahr v. Hickman Grain Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 784.

5. Braitsch v. Kiel & Arthe Co., 114 NYS 872.

6. Where lumber was to be sold for cash, the giving of lien notes as security for shipments not paid for on delivery was not payment. Such shipment could be charged on books and price recovered in general assumpsit. Taplin v. Marcy, 81 Vt. 428, 71 A 72.

7. Plaintiff sold coal to firm, which later incorporated, corporation promising to pay and the buyer liable only to the person from whom he ordered goods, in the absence of fraud or collusion.[8] The obligation of one who assumes another's debts depends upon the terms of his contract.[9] Payment by the vendee to a third person does not relieve him from liability to his vendor, who was in possession at the time of the sale.[10]

Accepted sight draft for the price of goods, with bill of lading attached, indorsed and negotiated by the payee, is governed by commercial law.[11]

§ 10. Remedies of the seller. A. Rescission and retaking of goods or action for conversion. Rescission.[12]—See 10 C. L. 1552—The seller may rescind when the buyer has been guilty of fraud[13] or has failed to comply with the contract,[14] but he must first return what he has received under the contract.[15]

*Recovery of chattels.*See 10 C. L. 1554—Where goods have been obtained by fraud, with the intention of cheating the vendor, he may elect to treat the sale as a nullity,[16] and may bring an action for the recovery of the goods or their value,[17] unless, after discovery of the fraud, he ratifies the sale.[18] In such action the burden is upon plaintiff to establish the fraud.[19] In replevin to recover goods from one who claims under a fraudulent vendee, the burden is upon defendant to show that he is a purchaser in good faith for value.[20] firm debts. Corporation gave note for debt and plaintiff sold note to bank supposing it was given by partners. Corporation became insolvent. Bank sued in equity to enforce collection of note; plaintiff sued firm for price. Held, latter suit maintainable, though former was for plaintiff's benefit. Roberts v. Rowe [N. H.] 70 A 1074.

8. If defendant who received goods from another was in collusion with him to defraud plaintiff, who furnished goods, plaintiff could recover from him; but if defendand ordered goods from such other, and had no knowledge of his arrangement with plaintiff, defendant had right to pay such other. Greenville Lumber Co. v. National Pressed Brick Co., 133 Mo. App. 217, 113 SW 236.

9. Where purchaser of drug stock assumed and agreed to pay "open and outstanding account" of seller, he did not thereby assume payment of note of seller. Kramer v. Gardner, 104 Minn. 370, 116 NW 925.

18. Where a sale is procured by fraud, no title passes and the vendor retains his right in the property, unless after discovery of the fraud, he assents to and ratifies the act of sale either positively or by delay. Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co., 153 Cal. 411, 95 P 1029.

19. Replevin. Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co., 153 Cal. 411, 95 P 1029. Evidence sufficient to show that buyer was insolvent at time of purchase and had no intention to pay for goods. American-German Nat. Bank v. Gray & Dudley Hardware Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 547, 110 SW 393. Though plaintiff, in action to recover goods, simply alleged ownership, and not that it had been deprived of possession by fraud, it could recover on proof of sale to one intending not to pay therefor but to cheat the vendor, since it had right to treat goods as its own. (§ 10) B. Stoppage in transitu.[21]—See 10 C. L. 1554—The right of stoppage in transitu does not end with the mere arrival of goods at their destination but continues until actual or constructive delivery to the vendee.[22] The right ceases to exist where the administrator of a deceased buyer takes possession before the exercise of the right.[23] The doctrine of stoppage in transitu was not abrogated by the federal bankruptcy law,[24] and the shipper may stop goods after the consignee has been declared a bankrupt and a receiver or trustee has been appointed,[25] provided he exercises the right previous to a demand by the receiver or trustee or any delivery by the carrier.[26]

(§ 10) C. Lien.[27]—See 10 C. L. 1554—Contracts reserving title as security are valid.[28] Where a municipal corporation enters into a contract of purchase without power to do so, having exceeded its debt limit, the seller is not confined to the remedy of rescission, but may enforce its lien for the price by sale of the property.[29] In Louisiana, a vendor's lien upon a farming utensil is superior to that of the lessor of the land.[30] The creditor of a bankrupt for goods sold does not waive his vendor's privilege, given by Louisiana statute by proving the debt against the bankrupt as one without security.[31] In Arkansas, a vendor's lien on personal property can only be created by suit, and only when the property is in the hands of the vendee.[32] In Missouri, property cannot be followed into the hands of an innocent purchaser and judgment for the price enforced against it.[33] In Mississippi, the procedure in an action by the seller of property to subject same to sale for payment of purchase price is the same as in an attachment proceeding.[34] Hence, a claimant of the property may assert his claim in such proceeding against the seller.[35]

(§ 10) D. Resale.[36]—See 10 C. L. 1554—If payment be not made, seller may retake goods and sell to another.[37]

39. Where a sale and delivery are alquirements of the contract[40] and a performance of conditions to be performed by the seller,[41] or a tender of delivery and full performance,[42] or a waiver thereof,[43] must be shown as a condition precedent to the right to recover the purchase price. The sum sued for must be due[44] and unpaid,[45] and the seller must own the right of action.[46] A vendor cannot recover the price from a subsequent bona fide purchaser for value.[47]

Defenses and election between them. See 10 C. L. 1555—Fraud in procuring the contract,[48] and notice that goods were being held for seller, subject to payment of charges,[49] want or failure of consideration,[50] rejection of goods because not as ordered,[51] and the retaking of the goods by the vendor,[52] have been held valid deleged, plaintiff cannot recover without proof of delivery. Gross v. Ajello, 132 App. Div. 25, 116 NYS 380. Delivery of order on warehouse for goods would warrant recovery of price, if not revoked. Id. Defendant ordered guano shipped to another by seller, which was done, but goods arrived too late for use and plaintiff, seller, was notified. Third person had, however, used some and sold some, and seller retook balance. Held, seller entitled to recover for all except what he retook. Swift Fertilizer Works v. Peacock [Ga.] 64 SE 328.

40. Machinery held to be as warranted. Recovery of price sustained. Crucible Steel Co. v. Moen [C. C. A.] 167 F 956. Buyer not liable for price of coal which was refused because not of quality ordered. Indiana Fuel Supply Co v. Indianapolis Basket Co., 41 Ind. App. 658, 84 NE 776. In action for price of goods rejected by buyer on ground that goods were not up to requirements of contract, plaintiff must show not only shipment of goods but also that they answered requirements of contract. American Standard Jewelry Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 117 SW 781.

41. Where maker and seller of electric sign placed fewer lights in border than agreed, he could not recover price. Ellison Furniture & Carpet Co. v. Langeuer [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 178. Where purchaser of hay crop objected to scales and refused to take hay away, evidence held to show that seller offered to accept railway weights, or to allow person named by buyer to inspect and correct scales. Allen v. Rusforth [Neb.] 118 NW 657. Defendant directed plaintiff to have shipped to him, over certain road, corn, at certain price, weight and grade to be finally determined by official certificate. Defendant liable for full price when plaintiff shipped corn of required grade as directed though it was damaged by heating in transitu. Champlin v. Church [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 138. Where parties disagreed as to classification of lumber sold, and part of it was laid aside for inspection, and buyer removed it before such inspection without seller's consent, seller could recover value of lumber so taken. Federal Lumber Co. v. Reece [Ky.] 116 SW 783.

42. Where there is no actual delivery, plaintiff can recover only by showing readiness to perform and a tender of performance on his part. Gross v. Ajello, 132 App. Div. 25, 116 NYS 380. Where article is sold under particular description, tender or delivery of article answering to this description is condition precedent to recovery of price. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233. Seller of machine to be constructed could not recover price without tendering delivery under contract. Vollmer v. Hayes Mach. Co., 129 App. Div. 426, 114 NYS 446. May store goods and sue for price. International Filter Co. v. Hartman, 141 Ill. App. 239.

43. To recover on a delayed tender of delivery, plaintiff must prove a waiver or an estoppel. Braitsch v. Kiel & Arthe Co., 114 NYS 872.

44. Where contract was for sale of goods to certain amount, buyer agreeing to pay half price within 10 days and balance within 60 days after each instalment of goods received, action could be maintained after 10 days had expired since delivery of goods though all had not been delivered. Ikonograph Co. v. J. N. Porter Co., 113 NYS 537.

45. Where portion of price for stock had been paid (as had been found by a court), in second suit for value of stock there could not be recovery for sum already paid, though portion of original contract of sale was held illegal. Hess v. Reick [N. J. Law] 69 A 1090.

46. Right of seller to recover from buyer on note given for price not affected by seller's giving to indorser after maturity of note, bill of sale of goods to which he then had no title. Ketterson v. Inscho [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 626.

47. Goods transferred to pay indebtedness included some not paid for; no fraud or collusion. Barbee & Co. v. Crawford, 132 Mo. App. 1, 111 SW 614.

48. No recovery where contract for goods was secured by fraud, salesman representing that another paper was being signed. Price v. Rosenberg, 200 Mass. 36, 85 NE 887.

49. Where signature to order for goods was obtained by fraud, consignee was not bound though he did not return goods. Notice to sellers that he held goods subject to their order, on payment of charges advanced, relieved consignee. Loveland v. Jenkins-Boys Co., 49 Wash. 369, 95 P 490.

50. Notes given for process of manufacture held without consideration where seller had previously sold substantially same process to third person. Sweeting v. Iroquois China Co., 129 App. Div. 777, 113 NYS 945.

51. Lumber was rejected because not as ordered. Buyer not liable to assignee of fenses to an action for the price. Breach of warranty is a defense where the buyer rescinds and returns, or offers to return, the property.[53] It is not a defense where the buyer retains the goods,[54] or a part of them.[55] That the contract was obtained by illegal means,[56] or that the vendor has been doing business under a firm name, in violation of law,[57] is no defense to an action for goods sold and delivered. Delay in delivery is no defense when waived by the buyer, who is not damaged.[58] Where goods are as ordered, that they cannot be used is no defense.[59] Defenses must be consistent.[60]

Complaint.[See 10 C. L. 1556]—In the notes are cited cases dealing with the sufficiency of the pleading to state a cause of action for the price [61] or on a quantum meruit [62] against the persons sued.[63]

Answer and counterclaim.[See 10 C. L. 1557]—The plea of total failure of consideration includes that of partial failure,[64] and a plea of want of consideration is not inconsistent with an admission that property has some value.[65] But an allegation of invoice for price. Grant v. Sicklesteel Lumber Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1145, 119 NW 1092.

52. Where seller retakes property sold, buyer may waive conversion, acquiesce in seller's act and treat contract as rescinded, and set up rescission as defense to action for price. Boggs v. Young [Neb.] 116 NW 501.

53. Where several persons bought shares in horse upon warranty that he was sure foal getter, etc., they could not, on discovery of breach of warranty retain their interest in horse and defeat recovery on note given for price; but if they offered to return their shares, breach of warranty would be good defense. Crouch v. Morgan [Mo. App.] 116 SW 475. In suit against some of several shareholders of horse to recover price, breach of warranty of horse as foal getter, and offer to return defendants' shares or interests in horse, was good defense, since they could not return horse itself and offered to return all they could. Id.

54. Where buyer retains goods, breach of warranty that goods correspond to sample is not available as defense. Wilmerding v. Strause, 112 NYS 1091.

55. Where defendant relies on breach of warranty in action for price, he must show a rescission of the contract by a return or tender of all goods and benefits received under contract. Rescission of contract for engraving not effective where only plates were returned, and drawings retained and used. Central Bureau of Engraving v. J. W. Pratt Co., 60 Misc. 120, 111 NYS 561.

56. Fact that brick company was instrumental in having paving contract calling for use of its brick made, and that such contract was afterward held illegal because of want of competition, was no defense to action against contractor and surety to recover price of brick. Kansas City Hydraulic Press Brick Co. v. National Surety Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 496.

57. Vendor violated Pen. Code, § 363. Hopp v. McWhirter, 107 NYS 823.

58. Delay in delivery of engine would not bar recovery of price if buyer was not damaged, having accepted it. Hendry v. Irvine [Cal. App.] 99 P 408.

59. Dubinski Elec. Works v. Lang Elec. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 169. If buyer received goods just as he ordered them, including stamping or marking, the fact that they could not legally be sold, owing to markings, would be no defense in action for price, in absence of fraud. Moline Jewelry Co. v. Dinnan [Conn.] 70 A 634.

60. Defense that signature to contract sued on was obtained by fraud is not inconsistent with defense that goods sent were not those agreed upon with salesman. Price v. Rosenberg, 200 Mass. 36, 85 NE 887.

61. Complaint construed as action on contract for price, and not for damages for breach. Pacific Coast Borax Co. v. Waring, 128 App. Div. 66, 112 NYS 458. Where complaint alleged sale and delivery of goods at certain price, it was not defective for failing to allege performance of other conditions; if there were such, their nonperformance was matter of defense. Ikonograph Co. v. J. N. Porter Co., 113 NYS 537. Complaint alleging indebtedness for goods sold and delivered, and that plaintiff sold and delivered certain goods to defenant at his special instance and request, between certain dates, and that itemized account was contained in exhibit stated cause of action. Rosebud Lumber Co. v. Serr [S. D.] 117 NW 1042. Where the complaint shows that the sale was one in bulk, at a price agreed on by the parties, and that delivery was made in accordance therewith, it was unnecessary to set out an itemized statement of goods sold. Hamilton v. Dismukes [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 1181.

62. Complaint alleging that machinery first installed by plaintiff was not accepted by defendant, but that subsequently installed was accepted, and that defendant was indebted for its value was on quantum meruit. Isbell-Porter Co. v. Heineman, 126 App. Div. 713, 111 NYS 332.

63. Complaint for goods sold against partnership and one member individually alleging sale to "defendants," shows joint purchase by partnership and individual. Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421, 95 P 885.

64. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Cleburne [Tex.] 112 SW 1047.

65. In action on note given for price of jack, defendant may plead want of consideration, though admitting jack was worth failure of consideration and worthlessness of property is inconsistent with an allegation of a tender of the property and offer to pay for its use.[66] A defense or counterclaim cannot be relied upon unless pleaded.[67] Cases dealing with the sufficiency of the answer to set up certain defenses are cited in the note.[68]

Parties.—Parties not liable may be discharged.[69] The joinder of an improper party defendant in an action of assumpsit for goods sold and delivered will not defeat recovery against the proper defendant.[70] Joint purchasers are all liable,[71] but, upon separate agreements to pay, a joint judgment cannot be rendered.[72]

Admissibility of evidence See 10 C. L. 1558 depends upon its relevancy to the issues [73] and its competency.[74] something. Rev. St. 1899, § 645, allows pleas of want of consideration in actions founded on written contract. Broderick v. Andrews [Mo. App.] 115 SW 519.

66. Action on note given for price of machine. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690.

67. Offer to return goods no defense to action on note where agreement under which note was made did not reserve such right and no ground of rescission is pleaded or suggested. Zichermann v. Wohlstadter, 60 Misc. 362, 113 NYS 403. In action for price of coal, buyer could not show warranty and breach thereof without pleading it. Woodridge v. Brown, 149 N. C. 299, 62 SE 1076. Collateral promise by sellers of business to obtain renewal of lease not enforceable in action for price, no counterclaim being set up. Norton v. Abbott, 113 NYS 669.

68. In action on note for price of horse, answer held to allege sufficiently misrepresentations of character and quality of horse, such as to warrant an alleged rescission of the sale and failure of consideration of note. City Nat. Bank v. Jordan [Iowa] 117 NW 758. Answer in action on note given for price of machine held insufficient to set up rescission of contract by reason of breach of warranty, where time of tender of machine was not alleged. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690.

69. Action against church and two others for price of brick furnished to build church. Allegations making others than church liable, stricken, and other parties discharged, there being nothing to show they were anything more than agents of the church. Guignard v. First Baptist Church, 80 S. C. 491, 61 SE 1003.

70. Franz v. Barr Dry Goods Co., 132 Mo. App. 8, 111 SW 636.

71. Joint purchasers of goods are both liable on promise of one which made purchase possible. Elmer v. Campbell [Mo. App.] 117 SW 622.

72. Where delivery was to be to two persons in common, but each agreed to pay half the cost, it was error to render joint judgment against them. Argo Mfg. Co. v. Parker [Wash.] 100 P 188.

73. Held relevant and admissible: Bills of lading showing shipment of goods. Butler v. Ederheimer, 55 Fla. 544, 47 S 23. In action for price of stock, evidence of value of assets and book accounts of corporation admissible to show value of stock and probability of price alleged. McIntosh v. McNair [Or.] 99 P 74. Action on note given for price of horse, wherein answer alleged rescission of sale on account of misrepresentations. Proof of misrepresentations, admissible. City Nat. Bank v. Jordan [Iowa] 117 NW 758. Evidence admissible to show possession and use of property by defendant shortly after date of alleged sale. Alabama Const. Co. v. Continental Car & Equipment Co., 131 Ga. 365, 62 SE 160. Defense in action for price being payment, error to exclude evidence to show authenticity of receipts. American Lithographic Co. v. Rickert, 111 NYS 25. Where order was for goods like those previously delivered, evidence was admissible to show character of goods previously delivered. Greenbaum v. Greenfield, 114 NYS 832. Oral evidence admissible to show quantity of ties sold, where contract referred to another cargo in fixing terms. Maydwell v. Roger's Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 930. Evidence relating to defendant's set-off, admissible. Barnes v. Loomis, 199 Mass. 578, 85 NE 862. In action for price of canned goods, to prove goods shipped were of required quality, evidence tending to identify lot and quality of goods from which shipment was made was admissible. Webster v. Moore, 108 Md. 572, 71 A 466. Evidence that goods from same lot were sold to others and that no complaint was made was inadmissible. Id. In action to recover price of stock sold defendant, corporate books were admissible to prove that there was surplus at or about time of sale. Gilboa v. Kimball [R. I.] 69 A 765.

Held irrelevant: Where defense to action for price of electric sign was failure to place agreed number of lights in border, evidence that more than agreed number were placed in another part of sign was inadmissible. Ellison Furniture & Carpet Co. v. Langever [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 178. In action for price of machines, pleadings contained no allegation of warranty, express or implied, and it appeared that machines had been kept by defendant after demand for their return. Evidence that machines were unsatisfactory and could not be made to work properly, excluded. Climax Tag Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873. In quantum meruit for value of machinery installed, after other plant had been refused, evidence of difference in value between machinery called for by contract and that installed was inadmissible. Isbell-Porter Co. v. Heineman, 126 App. Div. 713, 111 NYS 332. Contract between two defendants as to division of expense of making fenders irrelevant on Issues, proof and variance.[See 10 C. L. 1557]—The plaintiff must show facts entitling him to a recovery [75] upon the theory and cause of action set up in his complaint.[76] Plaintiff may allege an express contract and recover on an implied promise.[77] Under a complaint to recover for goods sold and delivered at an agreed price, plaintiff may show any contract of sale, oral or written, under which goods were delivered.[78] Though there may have been a written contract for the sale of personalty, yet, where the seller brings suit on open account and proves delivery and complete compliance with the contract, nothing remaining except payment by the issue whether defendant bound himself to pay plaintiff for materials. Sterling Meaker Co. v. Nessler, 110 NYS 246. Where breach of warranty of ore roaster was set up in action for price, proof of plaintiff's assays was not admissible when ore assayed was not shown to have been kind of ore machine was warranted to handle. Trego v. Roosevelt Min. Co., 136 Wis. 315, 117 NW 855. Where original orders for seeds are offered in evidence to prove knowledge by buyer of disclaimer of warranty, and such orders do not show such disclaimer, their exclusion is not reversible error. Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow [Fla.] 48 S 410.

74. Order for goods, showing items, admissible though it used abbreviations for names of goods where witness testified in regard thereto. Butler v. Ederheimer, 55 Fla. 544, 47 S 23. In action for goods sold and delivered, immaterial that order shown to be original was not signed, nor was book account best evidence. Id.

75. Evidence sufficient to show sale, delivery and acceptance of goods. Ward v. Jonasson & Co., 114 NYS 57. To show sale and delivery of goods to defendant. Kroder v. Siegel Hardware Co., 113 NYS 575. To show delivery of goods. Scheuer v. Rosenbaum, 110 NYS 260. Evidence made prima facie case for sale and delivery of goods. Tannebaum v. Nikop, 114 NYS 32. Evidence sufficient to make prima facie case for apples sold and delivered. Plumb v. Hallauer & Sons Co., 130 App. Div. 284, 114 NYS 474. Evidence held to sustain plaintiff's claim as to value of piling and amount furnished. Dalhoff Const. Co. v. Maurice [Ark.] 110 SW 218. Evidence held to show that no one except plaintiff had any interest in beets sold. Cole v. Utah Sugar Co. [Utah] 99 P 681. Evidence held to sustain verdict for plaintiff in suit for price of twine sold. Herpolsheimer v. Acme Harvester Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 30. In action for reasonable value of goods sold, evidence that seller had sent bills designating certain price and that buyer had made no response was sufficient to sustain finding that sum named was reasonable value. Jones v. De Muth, 137 Wis. 120, 118 NW 542. Certain stock was delivered to defendant, and thereafter plaintiff's stock was segregated, and delivered by defendand to plaintiff's agent, defendant promising to pay for it in a few days. Held, there was contract to buy plaintiff's stock enforceable by plaintiff. Avery v. Wall [Mont.] 101 P 249.

Evidence insufficient to show sale and delivery as alleged. Gross v. Rivkin, 114 NYS 844. To sustain claim for goods sold and delivered. Feinstein v. Hindes, 111 NYS 837. To show order covered goods sued for, in action to recover for goods ordered by defendants and delivered to third person. Brown v. Grossman, 128 App. Div. 496, 112 NYS 827. No recovery where evidence failed to show sale by plaintiff to defendant. Greenville Lumber Co. v. National Pressed Brick Co., 133 Mo. App. 217, 113 SW 236. Evidence insufficient to show agency of buyer of goods for defendants, and held not to show admission of liability by defendants. Stark v. Solomon, 114 NYS 133. Purchaser of cigars himself ordered labels which he said he desired placed on cigars, and made one payment. Cigar seller not liable for labels. American Lithographic Co. v. Feinberg, 113 NYS 920.

76. Where the seller sets up a contract and performance and sues for the price, he cannot recover as for damages for breach of the contract, where buyer refused to receive goods, having notified seller not to deliver. Backes v. Schlick [Neb.] 117 NW 707. Action on common counts for price of cultivator, plaintiff must rely on contract, not on note given for price. Ruthruff v. Faust, 154 Mich. 409, 15 Det. Leg. N. 783, 117 NW 902. Plaintiffs as E. B. & Co., contracted with defendant to supply certain quantity of turkeys at certain price, and shipped defendant turkeys as B. Bros. Held, plaintiffs suing as E. Bros., could recover for turkeys shipped, but could not recover on contract made with E. B. & Co. Brightman Bros. v. Griffin & Co. [R. I.] 70 A 1057. Variance not material where complaint alleged sale to partnership and individual and proof showed sale to partners. Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421, 95 P 885. Where complaint was for agreed price of goods sold and delivered, and answer set up counterclaim for failure to make other deliveries under contract, and reply was general denial, proof by plaintiff of modification of contract was not material variance. Brooklyn Creamery Co. v. Friday, 137 Wis. 461, 119 NW 126. Where complaint stated cause of action for price of goods sold and evidence showed that plaintiff was doing business under "company" name, recovery warranted, though last fact was not alleged. Grossman v. Lieb 126 App. Div. 348, 110 NYS 386.

77. Alleged contract that defendant agreed to pay for and took gravel delivered by plaintiff; recovery on implied contract proper. Indianapolis Coal Trac. Co. v. Dalton [Ind. App.] 87 NE 552.

78. Brooklyn Creamery Co. v. Friday, 137 Wis. 461, 119 NW 126.

buyer, a nonsuit will not be granted.[78] The burden is upon defendant to establish any affirmative defense [80] or counterclaim.[81]

Trial and instructions.[See 10 C. L. 1580]—Questions of fact are for the jury,[82] and the instructions should properly submit all the issues raised by the pleadings and evidence,[83] though harmless error will be disregarded on appeal.[84]

79. Alabama Const. Co. v. Continental Car & Equipment Co., 131 Ga. 365, 62 SE 160.

80. Vendee who alleges and relies on breach of warranty must prove it. American Standard Jewelry Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 117 SW 781. The burden is on defendant, claiming failure of consideration to prove it, and he must produce evidence from which jury may find the extent to which the consideration failed. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Cleburne [Tex.] 112 SW 1047. Where drill was sold under agreement for its return if it proved to be unsatisfactory, and defendant returned it, burden was on him, in action for price to show that it was defective. Coverdale v. Rickards [Del.] 69 A 1065. In action for price of cattle food, evidence that defendant could not sell second lot, that persons to whom he sold former lot said food was worthless, and that it made his own cattle scour, held not to sustain plea of failure of consideration for contract. Acme Food Co. v. Howerton [Iowa] 119 NW 631. Evidence sufficient to take to jury question whether cash registers delivered to defendants were the ones ordered. National Cash Register Co. v. Dehn [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 936, 118 NW 724. In action to foreclose mortgage given to secure note for horse, evidence insufficient to show warranty that horse would get with foal 65 per cent of mares served, and that notes and mortgage would be returned if he failed to do so. Hartley v. Furgeson, 50 Wash. 309, 97 P 234. Evidence sufficient to show payment for goods by reason of other transaction and debt of seller. Valley Lumber Co. v. McGilvery [Idaho] 101 P 94.

81. Evidence held not to show greater damage to buyer by seller's delay in delivery than allowed by court. Gregory Vinegar Co. v. J. Weller Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 247. Error to give judgment for full amount, when defendant's testimony in support of counterclaim for defects in goods was undisputed. Mann v. Warshawsky, 112 NYS 1062. Dismissal of counterclaim affirmed, basis of it—work—not having been made necessary by plaintiff. Huber v. Klebold Press, 112 NYS 203.

82. Whether property was sold to defendant or another, held for jury. Rundlett v. Heileman Brew. Co., 104 Minn. 337, 116 NW 833. Whether goods were in fact shipped to defendant held for jury. Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney [Ark.] 118 SW 406. In quantum meruit for value of machinery whether defendant accepted same, and its value, held for jury. Isbell-Porter Co. v. Heineman, 126 App. Div. 713, 111 NYS 332. Where evidence was conflicting on issue whether goods delivered were as ordered, and not clear on issue whether order had been altered by seller's agent, it was error to direct verdict which took these issues from jury. Eldorado Jewelry Co v. Hitchcock, 130 Ga. 778, 61 SE 855. Where fraud in obtaining signed paper was alleged whether defendants in fact ordered goods sued for, was held for jury. Neumeyer v. Hooker, 131 App. Div. 592, 116 NYS 204. Instruction which took from jury issue whether defendant accepted goods by retaining and using them, erroneous. Edwards v. Woodridge [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 920.

83. Instructions held to properly present issues in action for price of ties in which defendant set up different contract from that alleged by plaintiff, and claimed advances to plaintiff in excess of contract price of ties. Ohio Valley Tie Co. v. Harvey's Adm'r [Ky.] 116 SW 278. Where pleading and evidence warranted finding of partial failure of consideration, error for court to instruct only on theory of total failure. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Cleburne [Tex.] 112 SW 1047. Instructions not erroneous as requiring jury to find certain contract; they informed jury of parties' rights in case jury found certain contract. Gimnich Furniture Mfg. Co. v. Sorensen, 34 Utah, 109, 96 P 121. In action for price of paint, defense was misrepresentations as to quality and fraud. Held instruction requiring proof of misrepresentations substantially as alleged sufficient; proof of every representation not required, but proof of mere opinions would not suffice. Huff v. Kinloch Paint Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 467. Where defendant, in action for price of ice, set up counterclaim for difference in value of ice delivered and that agreed to be delivered, instruction allowing, also, recovery of alleged overpayments, which was not asked for in answer, was erroneous. Woodbridge Ice Co. v. Semon Ice Cream Corp. [Conn.] 71 A 577. Evidence sufficient to show that coat was returned to seller by one of seller's employes; instruction requiring defendant in action for value of coat to show that seller was party to attempt to cheat improper. McMahon v. Rothchild, 114 NYS 817. Defense to action on note for price of horse was that it was not signed by all members of association who were to sign at time of delivery. Held court should have submitted issue whether written guaranty of horse bearing prior date was given and accepted as part of transaction. Comstock v. Taggart [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 14, 120 NW 29. Action on one of three notes given for price of horse, it appearing that plaintiff had pledged other two to third person. Court properly assumed in instructions that such notes had been accepted in payment. Id.

84. Error in defining fraud harmless, where defendant's evidence, if believed, showed fraud as defined but jury evidently did not believe it. McCaskey Register Co. v. Keena [Conn.] 71 A 898.

(§ 10) F. Action for breach.[85] See 10 C. L. 1561—In an action for breach of contract by the buyer, the seller must prove the contract[86] and a breach thereof. An unqualified refusal to accept goods,[87] or conduct showing an intention on the part of the buyer not to perform,[88] warrants the maintenance of the action. The seller must also show a tender of performance by himself, substantially as agreed,[89] but, if the buyer clearly shows an intention not to perform, the seller need not show a delivery[90] or tender of performance.[91] Special defenses must be specially pleaded.[92] The instructions should properly present the issues.[93] Damages for breach of contract are legitimate claims against an insolvent's estate.[94]

(§ 10) G. Action for damages for goods not accepted.[95] See 8 C. L. 1382—The plaintiff must, in such action, show performance by himself of the contract alleged as the basis of recovery.[96]

(§ 10) H. Choice and election of remedies.[97] See 10 C. L. 1561—Where vendee has defaulted on an executory contract to purchase, the vendor may keep the goods and sue for damages for breach of contract,[98] or hold them as bailee of the buyer and recover the price,[99] or sell them as agent of the buyer and recover the difference between the purchase price and the amount realized on the sale.[1] The seller

86. Where seller of building brought action on contract to recover of buyer cost of clearing site and removal of materials after wrecking of house, but failed to prove any agreement by buyer to clear site, he could not recover. Kellerman Cont. Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 99.

87. Unqualified refusal to accept and pay for goods contracted for is breach warranting recovery of damages. Moffatt v. Davitt, 200 Mass. 452, 86 NE 929.

88. Repudiation of contract for goods could be inferred from proof of delay of buyer in making payments and of letters from buyer's manager showing that buyer was intending not to perform. Moffat v. Davitt, 200 Mass. 452, 86 NE 929. Such evidence not weakened by proof of tender of performance by buyer's attorney in attempt to settle dispute. Id.

89. Seller had burden of proving tobacco packed as agreed and in agreed condition in order to recover for breach by buyer. Grenawalt v. Roe, 136 Wis. 501, 117 NW 1017.

90. Where contract provided for stipulated damages in case of refusal of buyer to receive goods, and buyer refused to give shipping directions and showed intention not to carry out contract, actual delivery of goods was not condition precedent to claim of liquidated damages. McDuffie v. Dilley [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 612.

91. Contract for sale of stocks and bonds provided for delivery at office of trust company in Chicago. Plaintiffs had them where they could be sent to Chicago when required, but was notified by agent of defendants that they could not receive and pay for them. Held, plaintiffs, being ready and able to deliver, were not required to make tender in Chicago in order to maintain action for breach of contract. Watson, Preston & Co. v. Greenwood & Co., 164 F 294.

92. In action for damages for refusal to receive goods manufactured to order, the defense that seller could not have filled order, or was otherwise employed, or could have sold goods at contract price to others, must be specially pleaded. Cleveland-Canton Springs Co. v. Goldsboro Buggy Co., 148 N. C. 533, 62 SE 637.

93. In action for damages for breach of contract to take structural steel, where defendant claimed contract had never been consummated by reducing it to writing and by plaintiff giving bond as agreed, instruction construed as properly presenting issues. Lynch v. Snead Architectural Iron Works [Ky.] 116 SW 693.

94. May be proved in bankruptcy proceedings. Forest City Steel & Iron Co. v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 154 Mich. 182, 15 Det. Leg. N. 653, 117 NW 645.

96. Sellers not entitled to recover difference in price received and price to be paid by buyer, who refused to accept delayed delivery, when complaint alleged that delivery was to be on arrival of car (lumber) and evidence failed to sustain such allegation or to show delivery within reasonable time. Harlow v. Parson's Lumber & Hardware Co. [Conn.] 71 A 734.

99. Wolfsheim v. Ammann Mfg. & Const. Co., 110 NYS 943; Gross v. Ajello, 132 App. Div. 25, 116 NYS 380. Vendor may tender delivery and, on refusal of vendee to accept, may keep the goods for vendee and sue for the price. Heilbrunn v. Weislow, 129 App. Div. 532, 114 NYS 50.

1. Gross v. Ajello, 132 App. Div. 25, 116 NYS 380; Wolfsheim v. Ammann Mfg. & Const. Co., 110 NYS 943. But he is not entitled to recover difference between contract price and market price at time of trial. Id.

may reserve title until payment and may also reserve the right to enforce payment by foreclosure.[2] If he elects to proceed by trover, he rescinds the sale and cannot thereafter sue for the price.[3] He may, however, sue the note given for the price to judgment without waiving his right to maintain trover,[4] but a suit to foreclose the mortgage is a bar to a subsequent action in trover.[5] The seller may waive a right to retake goods and sue for the price.[6] Where the vendor rescinds[7] or acquiesces in a rescission by the vendee,[8] he cannot maintain an action for the price. An erroneous resort to a remedy not available, the action being dismissed, is not a bar to an action for the price.[9] An agreement to pay in goods and chattels is enforcible by the recovery of money and not of the specific article.[10] For breach of the buyer's agreement to deliver goods, seller has remedy in action for damages.[11] Remedies given by the contract must be enforced, or an effort made to enforce them in the manner therein provided.[12] A claim that goods delivered were as ordered is a waiver of rights under a provision of the contract for a return of the goods if found unsatisfactory.[13] Where the contract is executory, the buyer may stop performance by notice to that effect,[14] subject to damages thus caused the seller.[15] After such rescission, the seller cannot perform and recover the contract price; his only remedy is for damages for breach of contract.[16]

§ 11. Remedies of purchaser. A. Rescission.[17]—See 10 C. L. 1561—Misrepresentations,[18] fraud,[19] mutual mistake[20] and breach of contract by the seller[21] are

5. After suit to foreclose mortgage on mules, one of which officer could not find, trover would not lie. Mitchell v. Castlen, 5 Ga. App. 134, 62 SE 731.

6. Buyer agreed that if he did not pay instalment of price when due, he would surrender premises and business to sellers. Held this was not sole remedy of sellers; they could sue on notes for price. Norton v. Abbott, 113 NYS 669.

7. Where vendor elects to rescind, he cannot thereafter maintain an action for the purchase price. Boggs v. Young [Neb.] 116 NW 501.

8. Where the buyer countermands an order for goods before shipment, thus rescinding contract, seller cannot recover price but must sue for damages for breach of contract. Frederick v. Willoughby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1109.

9. Suit by seller of property against buyer and others for conspiracy to defraud her of the property, which was dismissed because she had no interest in property, was not a bar to suit for balance of purchase price; no election, first suit not being available remedy. Henry v. Herrington, 193 N. Y. 213, 86 NE 29.

10. Sugar Beets Product Co. v. Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co., 161 F 215.

11. An agreement to deliver products of a machine at a certain price in payment of the machine will not be specifically enforced against the buyer, since seller has adequate remedies at law. Sugar Beets Product Co. v. Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co., 161 F 215.

12. Where contract for stock required part payment in cash, and provided that certain other stock should be delivered to third person to be sold within 6 days to some one agreeable to another named person, held sale of other stock could not be enforced without showing that no effort had been made to make sale agreeable to designated person. Kuker v. Snow, 149 N. C. 181, 62 SE 909.

13. Where seller offered evidence, in action for price of jewelry, that goods shipped were as ordered, he waived rights under clause in contract that goods could be returned if not as ordered, where buyer claimed goods were not as ordered but had not offered to exchange. Price v. Rosenberg, 200 Mass. 36, 85 NE 887.

18. A sale may be rescinded for a false and fraudulent warranty or representation. Baker v. Robbins [Wash.] 99 P 1. If jewelry was sold by fraud and was not as represented, buyer could refuse goods within reasonable time. Moline Jewelry Co. v. Dinnan [Conn.] 70 A 634. Where contract for sale of acetylene gas plant was made directly with seller and no representations were then made, contract being free from fraud, buyer was not entitled to rescind on account of misrepresentation of seller's agent made on previous occasion. Daylight Acetylene Gas Co. v. Hardesty [Ky.] 112 SW 847. Seller knew buyer wanted pianola and knew that instrument sold was not pianola, but assured buyer she was getting what she wanted. Held, buyer had right to rescind. Smith & Nixon Co. v. Lewis [Ky.] 112 SW 1113. Where seller expressly refused to warrant mules as having good eyesight, buyer could not rescind on ground that seller knew or ought to have known that they were dis-grounds for rescission by the buyer. Breach of warranty is not ground for rescission in some states.[22] In some, a breach of warranty entitles the buyer to rescind an agreement for sale, but not an executed sale, unless the warranty was intended to operate as a condition.[23] The right to rescind must be exercised promptly on discovery of facts giving the right of rescission.[24] Any unreasonable delay, or any eased and failed to state the fact, or misrepresented facts. Grojean v. Darby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1062. In action to rescind sale of mules because of false statement by seller that if anything was the matter with the mules he did not know it, doctrine of implied knowledge held inapplicable, it being proved that seller had had mules 4 months, had examined them, and either believed his statement correct or else willfully misrepresented. Id. Buyer of piano entitled to rescind if false and fraudulent representations were made regarding it on which buyer relied and by which purchase was induced. Instructions criticised. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Garza & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 150. If buyer of typesetting machine relied on representations as to its value for the work for which it was desired and these representations were false and the machine worthless, the buyer was entitled to rescind, though representations were made in good faith. Walker, Evans & Cogswell Co. v. Ayer, 80 S. C. 292, 61 SE 557. Complaint in action to rescind for breach of warranty, alleging representations that piano would give no trouble and require no repairs, reliance thereon, falsity thereof, etc., held good as against demurrer. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Garza & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 150. Statements as to matters of opinion not ground for rescission. Burwash v. Ballou, 132 Ill. App. 71.

19. Buyer may rescind for fraud. Jacobsen v. Whitely [Wis.] 120 NW 285; Rosenberg v. McKinney [Wis.] 120 NW 230. A purchaser who has been induced to enter into contract by fraud may elect to rescind upon discovery of the fraud or within a reasonable time thereafter. Clampitt v. Doyle [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 129. Buyer of horse who, on discovery of fraud, had offered to return horse, had right to rescind without taking affirmative steps to compel rescission. Fuller v. Chenault [Ala.] 47 S 197. Evidence sufficient to show fraud in sale of jewelry. Buyer, having rescinded sale, held not liable for price. Equitable Mfg. Co. v. Waful, 131 Mo. App. 211, 110 SW 1102. Where property is obtained by means of fraud, the transaction is not void but voidable at the election of the party defrauded. Blackman v. McAdams, 131 Mo. App. 408, 111 SW 599. Purchase of mining stock, by one who controlled corporation by owning majority of stock, from manager of corporation, held not fraudulent, so as to warrant setting sale aside, in view of manager's position and knowledge of affairs of corporation. Steinfeld v. Nielsen [Ariz.] 100 P 1094.

20. Buyer of beer agency and good will of corporation and carload of beer in transit advanced to corporation $600 to enable it to get beer from carrier so that agency would not be forfeited, but neglected to take this amount into account in contract. Held, buyer became unsecured creditor of corporation for $600; could not rescind contract on ground of mutual mistake. City Nat. Bank v. Fenner [Tex. Civ. App. 116 SW 136.

See Mistake and Accident, 12 C. L. 869.

21. Where article is sold under particular description, buyer may reject and recover back money paid if article delivered does not answer to description. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233. If typesetting machine proved absolutely worthless, buyer would be entitled to rescind, even in the absence of express warranty or representations. Walker, Evans & Cogswell Co. v. Ayer, 80 S. C. 292, 61 SE 557. Contract for exchange of stock of goods for land and boot money being executory, and owner of goods having received and accepted check but refused to surrender possession of goods, other party had right to rescind and demand return of check. Somers v. Sturre, 106 Minn. 221, 118 NW 682. Where goods were to be sold at "invoice price," meaning cost mark, attempt of seller to put goods into invoices at higher prices than cost marks was breach of contract, entitling buyer to rescind. New York Brokerage Co. v. Wharton [Iowa] 119 NW 969. Lack of invoices not waived by buyers where they attempted in good faith to invoice goods but did not complete invoice or accept that made by seller, but refused to proceed. Id. Where seller reserves right to make selection and inspection of goods ordered, buyer cannot reject if there is substantial compliance with contract. There must be fraud or lack of good faith to warrant rescission. Wiburg & Hannah Co. v. Walling & Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 832. Evidence held to show cancellation of contract for automobile because it was not satisfactory. Buyer entitled to recover amount deposited. Pierce v. Cleveland Motor Car Co., 112 NYS 1096. Where there is express or implied agreement that vendee may return property if it is not as agreed upon, vendee may return it under contract. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Costley [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 135. Though jewelry received by buyer was as ordered, except that it was so stamped as to render its sale illegal in Connecticut (Gen. St. 1902, § 1381), buyer had right to refuse goods after reasonable time for examination. Moline Jewelry Co. v. Dinnan [Conn.] 70 A 634. Statement in printed order that seller would replace articles shipped if desired did not affect buyer's right to rescind if goods were not as represented. Id.

22. Breach of warranty does not give right to return property. Giordano v. Nizzari, 115 NYS 719; Tokheim Mfg. Co. v. Stoyles, 142 Ill. App. 198. Buyer who has bought with warranty cannot upon breach of warranty return the property and rescind the sale. Gelb v. Waller, 115 NYS 201. In action for damages for breach of warranty, buyer could not return property and recover entire purchase price. Id.

action taken in continued recognition of the contract as a binding obligation, amounts to a ratification or election to abide by the contract and bars a subsequent rescission.[25] Whether an offer to rescind and return property is made within a reasonable time is ordinarily a question for the jury,[26] unless the facts are undisputed and the time such as to be reasonable or unreasonable as a matter of law.[27] To perfect his rights, the offer to rescind must be unconditional[28] and complete,[29] and the property received must be returned to the seller[30] within a reasonable time[31] in as good condition as when delivered, unless injured without fault of the buyer,[32] or a return of the property must be tendered,[33] though a tender or return is unnecessary where the seller refuses absolutely to receive it.[34] It has been held that goods may be retained, after notice of rescission, until a valid charge against them has been paid.[35] Where the contract imposes conditions upon the right to rescind, such as notice or opportunity to remedy defects, these conditions must be per-

One induced to buy horse by fraud had right to rescind by offering to return it promptly on discovery of fraud. Fuller v. Chenault [Ala.] 47 S 197. Rescission for fraud must follow promptly on discovery of fraud. Retention of proceeds of sale after discovery waives right of action. Waymire v. Shipley [Or.] 97 P 807. Offer to rescind about 90 days after date of contract, not too late, where buyer had been trying to make machine work during all that time. Kullman, Salz & Co. v. Sugar Apparatus Mfg. Co., 153 Cal. 725, 96 P 369. Evidence held to warrant finding that buyers of horse were reasonably diligent in investigating truth of representations and in rescinding sale. Swanke v. Herdemann [Wis.] 120 NW 414. Failure of vendee to discover falsity of representations as to amount of indebtedness standing against property sold held not to bar action for rescission brought promptly on discovery of fraud. Pitman v. Erskine, 49 Wash. 166, 94 P 921.

25. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149. Several months' delay after discovery of alleged fraud held election to treat sale as valid. Clampitt v. Doyle [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 129. Vendee of stock, having retained stock and accepted benefits of contract after discovery of alleged fraud, lost right to rescind and was liable for price. Rosenberg v. McKinney [Wis.] 120 NW 230. Cannot rescind after accepting and using part of goods. Waukesha Canning Co. v. Horner & Co., 138 Ill. App. 564. If a vendee of chattels upon refusal of the vendor to accept an offer to return them, where a right to rescind exists, retains the property and uses it as owner, he loses the right to rescind, as he cannot retain and use property and insist on prior tender as rescission. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149. Retention of horse by buyer before discovery of fraud which induced its purchase is not ratification of sale. Fuller v. Chenault [Ala.] 47 S 197. Where buyer sought to rescind purchase of horse and offered to return it, its subsequent use merely to exercise and keep it in condition was not waiver of right to rescind. Baker v. Robbins [Wash.] 99 P 1. Where buyer offered to return horse, which he was induced by fraud to buy, on discovery of fraud, and seller refused to receive it, subsequent retention and use of horse by buyer was not ratification of sale, which he had thus rescinded. Fuller v. Chenault [Ala.] 47 S 197.

26. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149. Whether drill, returned as unsatisfactory after two weeks' use, was returned within reasonable time, held for jury. Coverdale v. Rickards [Del.] 69 A 1065. Whether buyer of beans delayed an unreasonable length of time after discovery of misrepresentations before rescinding sale held for jury. McNitt v. Henderson [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 987, 118 NW 974.

27. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149.

28. Letter construed as unconditional refusal to receive goods ordered; not merely request to cancel. Frederick v. Willoughby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1109. Offer to rescind contract of sale for breach of warranty, conditioned on payment of freight and storage, and coupled with offer to settle for portion of property, held ineffective to defeat action for price, not being unconditional. Poirier Mfg. Co. v. Kitts [N. D.] 120 NW 558.

29. Acts of defendant in selling some machines, retaining others, and offering partial rescission, held affirmance of contract. Poirier Mfg. Co. v. Kitts [N. D.] 120 NW 558. Buyer of horse and buggy under warranty of horse cannot rescind and sue for price on ground of breach of warranty and retain and use buggy, contract being entire and buggy not being worthless. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149.

30. Where buyer attempted to return horse, but seller refused to take it, and month later left horse at seller's stable, but failed to show with whom or upon what terms he left it, there was no rescission. Gelb v. Waller, 115 NYS 201.

31. Return of drill, claimed to be unsatisfactory, must have been within reasonable time, considering all the circumstances. Coverdale v. Rickards [Del.] 69 A 1065.

32. Tender of automobile injured by buyer's servant, ineffective. Pitcher v. Webber [Me.] 71 A 1031.

33. Where buyer of business agreed to surrender premises to sellers in case of default in payments, a letter by buyer notifying sellers that premises were rented to third person on certain day, when he would vacate, and advising sellers to do something, was not valid tender of premises. Norton v. Abbott, 113 NYS 669.

34. Where seller of horse absolutely refused to entertain proposition to rescind, technical insufficiency of tender and return was waived. Swanke v. Herdemann [Wis.] 120 Mo. 414.

formed [36] unless waived by the seller.[37] Where goods are to be delivered in instalments under an executory contract, an acceptance of certain instalments thereunder does not prevent a rescission of the contract in case of failure thereafter to perform according to its terms.[38] But where delivery of part of an instalment is tendered, and there is then a refusal to deliver the entire instalment, an acceptance of the goods tendered bars a subsequent rescission of the entire contract,[39] unless the acceptance is accompanied by a demand for full performance.[40]

(§ 11) B. Action to recover purchase money paid or to reduce price.[41]—See 10 C. L. 1563—Money paid by the buyer may be recovered upon a breach by the seller [42] and election by the buyer to rescind, accompanied by a return or tender of property received,[43] where that is possible,[44] unless performance by the seller has been prevented by the buyer,[45] or the seller's breach has been waived.[46] Money paid on an illegal executory contract,[47] and money paid in excess of the agreed price, under mistake,[48] may be recovered. An agreement by the seller to repurchase is enfor-

35. Where buyer refused to accept article because not satisfactory, he was not bound to return it until seller paid him expenses incurred in testing it, which was valid charge against seller. Kidder Press Co. v. Reed & Co. [Ky.] 117 SW 950.

36. No effective rescission of contract for machine where buyer did not give notice of intention to return it as unsatisfactory; immaterial that seller gave him parts to replace those which were broken. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690. Buyer of machine in 1905 kept and used it without complaint or notice of breach of warranty or intention to rescind until 1906, contract requiring reasonable notice and opportunity to repair or put machine in shape. Held, no right to rescind. Id. Mere fact that selling corporation had been succeeded by another did not excuse want of notice, officers remaining substantially same. Id. Jury's finding, on conflicting evidence, that buyer gave notice that machine was unsatisfactory within 30 days, as required by contract, held conclusive. Victoria Acetylene Co. v. Cushing [Me.] 71 A 1015. Where contract called for first class engine but gave seller option to make needed repairs or replace defective parts, and buyer refused to allow repairs to be made though seller was ready and willing to make them, buyer had no right to rescind. City of Bardwell v. Southern Engine & Boiler Works [Ky.] 113 SW 97.

37. Where general agent of machine company was on ground assisting in test of machine, no notice to company of failure of machine to work properly would be necessary. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690.

42. Advance payment recoverable on failure to deliver machine. Vollmer v. Hayes Mach. Co., 129 App. Div. 426, 114 NYS 446. Upon failure to deliver automobile at designated place, after three attempts, buyer was entitled, on demand, to return of money paid. Washburn v. Rainier Co., 130 App. Div. 42, 114 NYS 424. Where sellers refused to allow buyer an inspection, and notified him they would resell and hold him, and did so, and buyer had another buy goods and turn them over to him, he was entitled to recover what he had paid seller on account of contract. Plumb v. Bridge, 128 App. Div. 651, 113 NYS 92. Where horse was sold under warranty and agreement to take it back if not as warranted, and it was found to be not as warranted and returned, seller was entitled to recover purchase money. J. Dickman & Co. v. Berlin, 116 NYS 552.

43. Where vendor insists on execution of chattel mortgage by wife of vendee, without warrant either at common law or by statute, the vendee is excused from making formal tender of chattel mortgage and money and notes, and may maintain action for recovery of deposit without such tender. Chess v. Vockroth, 75 N. J. Law, 665, 70 A 73.

44. Where goods, after sale, were confiscated for nonpayment of duties, buyer was not obliged to tender goods before suing for purchase price paid. Hamrah v. Maloof & Co., 127 App. Div. 331, 111 NYS 509.

45. Buyer could not recover amount paid when he prevented performance by refusing to allow "fixtures" as well as other goods to be invoiced at wholesale prices, this being provision of contract. Hendrickson v. Anderson [S. D.] 120 NW 765.

46. Buyer, after receiving, inspecting, and paying for office furniture, could not reject furniture for defect apparent on inspection, and recover price paid. Budd v. McCann's Tours, 110 NYS 1051. Payment for goods by checks and notes (which were transferred), before discovering that duties had not been paid by seller, did not estop buyer to sue for recovery of purchase price, after confiscation of goods by government. Hamrah v. Maloof & Co., 127 App. Div. 331, 111 NYS 509. Where plaintiffs bought goods and paid for them by checks and notes, and government thereafter seized and confiscated goods for nonpayment of duties, plaintiffs were not estopped to claim price paid by appearing as claimants in proceeding by government. Id.

47. McCall v. Whaley [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 658. Contract to sell lot and building and stock of drugs provided for exchange of deeds, and that money paid was to be retained if balance not paid. Seller remained in possession and continued to run store, and no deeds were given. Held, executory contract within rule above stated. Id.

cible.[49] Holdings as to pleadings,[50] admissibility,[51] and sufficiency [52] of evidence, and instructions,[53] are given in the notes.

(§ 11) C. Action for breach of contract.[54]—See 10 C. L. 1563—The buyer has a right of action for damages for breach by the seller.[55] Where goods are to be delivered in instalments, a failure to deliver one instalment is a breach which entitles the buyer to rescind and sue for damages.[56] A refusal to deliver is equivalent to a breach,[57] and formal demand for performance is not condition precedent to action for damages.[58] A buyer who is in default, or who has broken the contract, cannot maintain an action for breach by the seller,[59] and he cannot recover without proof of performance or a tender thereof, by himself,[60] together with readiness and ability to perform.[61] Holdings as to pleadings,[62] issues,[63] variance,[64] ad-plaintiff over agreed price of goods, it was immaterial that goods were billed to third person, where both parties understood that third person was to pay to cancel a debt owed to plaintiff. Stout v. Caruthersville Hardware Co., 131 Mo. App. 520, 110 SW 619. Where seller represented that he would sell goods as cheaply as they could be had anywhere, and buyer relied thereon and paid price asked, he could recover as for money had and received the amount paid in excess of the reasonable value of the goods. Id.

49. Agreement to repurchase stock at advanced price enforcible. Vohland v. Gelhaar, 136 Wis. 81, 116 NW 869.

50. Where, in action to rescind and recover price paid for breach of warranty, defendants desire to deny the sale or the warranty, they should plead nonassumpsit, or a plea traversing the contract or agreement. Mizell v. Watson [Fla.] 49 S 149. If they desire to admit the sale and warranty and deny the breach, they should plead by way of confession and avoidance. Id.

51. Where plaintiff in suit to rescind for breach of warranty alleged express warranty, evidence that agents customarily gave such warranty was inadmissible. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Garza & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 150. In suit to recover amount paid for goods to be shipped, where seller had refused to allow inspection, and buyer had rejected goods for that reason and had bought same goods from third person to whom seller had sold, plaintiff had right to show inspection by third person, and quality of goods to show his good faith. Plumb v. Bridge, 128 App. Div. 651, 113 NYS 92.

52. In action to recover price paid for horse, sufficiency of tender of property, and whether formal tender was waived, held for jury. Baker v. Robbins [Wash.] 99 P 1. Evidence held to warrant finding of contract for $10 worth of steel, that steel was not delivered and that plaintiff was entitled to recover $10 paid. Morse v. Ressler, 153 Mich. 512, 15 Det. Leg. N. 507, 116 NW 1069. In action to recover price of furnace, evidence held to warrant finding that sellers warranted furnace would heat buyer's house in coldest weather. Schlichting v. Rowell [Iowa] 119 NW 151. Where deposit on sale of newspaper route was to be returned in case business did not show average weekly "income" of $18, buyer was not entitled to return of deposit on proof that weekly "profits" were less than $18. Levine v. Field, 114 NYS 819. In action to recover price paid for horses, plaintiff having rescinded sale for breach of warranty, finding by jury, on conflicting evidence, of warranty and breach thereof not disturbed. Mitchell v. Emmons [Me.] 71 A 321.

53. In suit to rescind for fraud, instructions held inapplicable to issues made by pleadings. Grojean v. Darby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1062. In action to rescind sale of piano and recover price paid, answer was only general denial. Held, seller could not complain of instruction on ground that it failed to submit issue of abatement of part of price for use of piano, which was not pleaded. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Garza & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 150.

55. If seller of hay agreed to press it and refused to do so, his refusal was breach of contract, and buyer could press it and recover damages. Austin v. Langlois, 81 Vt. 223, 69 A 739.

56. Failure of seller to deliver instalment of ice gave buyer right to rescind entire contract and sue for damages. Wolfert v. Caledonia Springs Ice Co. [N. Y.] 88 NE 24.

57. Where seller of cattle refused to deliver as agreed, buyer could treat refusal as breach and sue at once for damages. Caley v. Mills [Kan.] 100 P 69.

58. Where seller notifies buyer that goods will not be sent, formal demand is not prerequisite to action for damages. Packers Fertilizer Ass'n v. Harris [Ind. App.] 85 NE 375.

59. Under code, art. 1913, one cannot claim damages for breach of contract, where he himself has made default; hence buyer of lumber cannot recover damages for refusal to deliver where he himself has failed to make payments as required, and seller has discontinued deliveries for that reason. Sitman v. Lindsey [La.] 48 S 646. Where seller fails to make shipments as agreed, buyer may abandon contract and sue for damages for seller's breach, but he cannot withhold payments to force shipments without himself breaking the contract. Harris Lumber Co. v. Wheeler Lumber Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 168.

60. To recover for breach by the seller, the buyer must show performance or a tender thereof by himself. Catlin v. Jones [Or.] 97 P 546. If present at the time and place of delivery, he must show payment or a tender thereof. Id.

61. No recovery for breach of contract to deliver corporate stock without proof that missibility [65] and sufficiency [66] of evidence, and instructions,[67] in actions by the buyer, are given in the notes. For breach of a contract to sell, the vendee cannot recover damages from a subsequent vendee, though the latter had knowledge of the existence of the prior contract.[68]

(§ 11) D. Action for breach of warranty.[69]—See 10 C. L. 1563—An express warranty is broken, if at all, at the time of the sale, and the right of action for damages accrues at once.[70] The action may be maintained without returning the property or giving notice,[71] unless such conditions are imposed by the contract, and are not waived by the seller.[72] In order to recover, plaintiff must allege [73] and prove,[74]

plaintiffs offered to perform and are able and willing to do so. Phelan v. Jones, 114 NYS 9. Whether buyer was ready, able, and willing to perform for jury though agent did not have money with him at time of delivery, there being evidence that he could have obtained it. Catlin v. Jones [Or.] 97 P 546. In action for damages for failure to deliver goods, defense was alleged rescission of contract for failure of plaintiff to make payments. Held, an offer to deliver for cash did not limit plaintiff to nominal damages, when jury found such offer was not in good faith and that defendants could not deliver. Harrison v. Argyle Co., 128 App. Div. 81, 112 NYS 477.

62. Allegations of general damages for breach of contract by failure to deliver goods held sufficient, liberally construed. Harrison v. Argyle Co., 128 App. Div. 81, 112 NYS 477. In action for breach of contract defendant may, under general denial, show that broker who signed contract failed to report it to defendant for confirmation, as required by rules of association of which parties were members. Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 194. Where statement of claim for damages for nondelivery of goods was general and alleged market price in France, place of delivery, affidavit of defense denying market price in France is denial of damage sufficient to prevent summary judgment. Connilleau v. Rogers, Holloway & Co., 162 F 998.

63. Defendant having authority to sell cattle, as shown by evidence, issue as to wife's ownership should have been ignored. Gibbens v. Hart [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 168.

64. Where suit for damages alleged contract to deliver wood during winter as ordered, there could be no recovery on proof of contract to deliver during summer. Barber v. Ozark Imp. Co., 131 Mo. App. 717, 111 SW 846. Where complaint in action for breach by buyer alleged agreement to buy such ties as plaintiff could procure and deliver, and breach thereof, and proof showed agreement to buy certain ties then belonging to a designated person, variance was fatal. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wood [Ala.] 46 S 561.

65. Where plaintiff sued for failure to deliver and defendant claimed right to withhold shipments until previous bills were paid, evidence that defendant had held back other shipments, and that price had gone up, was irrelevant. Smith & Co. v. Russell Lumber Co. [Conn.] 72 A 577. Where parties agreed on what would be performance of original contract, proof that such performance was not made was admissible in action for breach of contract. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92. In action by buyer for breach by seller, where seller claimed different contract, and that buyer had violated it to seller's damage, proof of damage, including amount, was admissible to prove contract, though seller did not claim damages, jury being properly instructed. Austin v. Langlois, 81 Vt. 223, 69 A 739. Action by buyer to recover difference between contract price of goods rejected because not as ordered and what buyer was obliged to pay elsewhere. Evidence that seller sold rejected goods to another at higher price inadmissible. Merchants' Grocery Co. v. Ladoga Canning Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 767. Action for damages by buyer which had rejected goods shipped. Card quoting prices on goods inadmissible without proof that it was generally relied on in trade. Id.

70. An express warranty is broken, if at all, when delivery is made and title passes, but this does not give purchaser right to rescind but gives right of damages for breach of warranty. Giordano v. Nizzari, 115 NYS 719. Where unsound property is sold with warranty, warranty is broken and cause of action accrues and limitations commence to run at date of sale. Woodland Oil Co. v. Byers & Co. [Pa.] 72 A 518. Action for breach of warranty not controlled by Code Civ. Proc. § 338, subd. 4, requiring actions based on fraud to be brought within three years. Murphy v. Stelling [Cal. App.] 97 P 672.

71. Mayer v. Automobile Exchange, 125 Ill. App. 648. Where wheat is sold under an executory contract, and wheat delivered is inferior in quality to that contracted for, buyer may retain inferior wheat and recover damages for breach of contract by seller, without returning wheat or giving any notice to seller. Rosenbaum Grain Co. v. Pond Creek Mill & Elevator Co. [Okl.] 98 P 331.

72. See, also, ante, §§ 8D, 8E. Fact that notice of failure of machine to work properly

73. Pleading: A general averment that plaintiff warranted the article sold will support proof of either an express or implied warranty. Segerstrom v. Swenson, 105 Minn. 115, 117 NW 478. Complaint held to show sale and warranty by both defendants. Murphy v. Stelling [Cal. App.] 97 P 672. Complaint held to state cause of action for misrepresentations and breach of warranty of boiler. Williams v. Roper Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 84. Petition construed as action for breach of warranty of title and not for damages for deceit. Burpee v. Holmes [Ga.] 64 SE 486. Where petition alleged that, at time of purchase of jack, seller falsely represented that jack was sound and good foal getter and that buyer bought in reliance thereon, it stated cause of action for breach of warranty, notwithstanding other allegations as to fraud. Chestnut v. Ohler [Ky.] 112 SW 1101.

74. Burden of proof: Plaintiff must prove warranty, breach, and damage. Excelsior Coal Co. v. Gildersleeve [C. C. A.] 160 F 47. Burden of proving cement not as contracted for rested on buyer, setting up breach of warranty. Burt v. Garden City Sand Co., 237 Ill. 473, 86 NE 1055. In action for breach of contract, there was evidence that defendants had fraudulently commingled two grades of goods and charged higher price for all. Held, burden was on defendants to show amount of higher grade actually delivered. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92.

Sufficiency of evidence: Evidence sufficient to show that original contract for computing scale was not modified, and to show breach of warranty. Moneyweight Scale Co. v. Hjerpe, 106 Minn. 47, 118 NW 62. Evidence held to sustain finding and judgment for damages for breach of warranty of wheat sold. Worrall Grain Co. v. Johnson [Neb.] 119 NW 668. Evidence sufficient to warrant finding of breach of warranty of heating plant, and verdict for damages. Cooper v. Scott Co. [Iowa] 120 NW 631. Evidence warranted verdict for plaintiff in action for breach of warranty of barge; error to direct verdict for defendant. Excelsior Coal Co. v. Gildersleeve [C. C. A.] 160 F 47. Evidence insufficient to show warranty of canned tomatoes. Krikorian v. Preiser, 115 NYS 82. In action for damages for breach of warranty of rope furnished to lower safe, mere fact that rope broke would not be conclusive, res ipsa loquitur doctrine not being applicable; it should appear that rope was being properly used and broke solely from weight of safe. Oregon Auto-Dispatch v. Portland Cordage Co. [Or.] 95 P 498.

Variance: In action to recover on warranty that horse sold was sound, allegation that it was suffering from disease or defect of back, and proof that it died of another disease, was not fatal variance. McCullough v. Dunn [Neb.] 119 NW 1127.

75. Where contract of sale referred specifically to certain lots of fruit sold, oral evidence was inadmissible to show warranty that fruit would be equal to sample. Germain Fruit Co. v. J. K. Armsby Co., 153 Cal. 585, 96 P 319. Tests after condition of article has changed, not admissible. Burt v. Garden City Sand Co., 141 Ill. App. 603.

76. Action for trespass on the case for deceit held to lie where warranty of bridgework on plaintiff's teeth was broken by substitution of inferior material for gold which was agreed to be furnished and used. Demers v. Andrews Bros. [R. I.] 69 A 923.

action to recover from a subsequent vendee, the rights of the latter may be determined.[85] Evidence tending to show exercise of ownership by the buyer is admissible in an action of replevin against the seller.[86]

(§ 11) F. Lein for price paid.[87]—See 10 C. L. 1564

(§ 11) G. Recoupment and counterclaim.[88]—See 10 C. L. 1564—In an action by the seller for the price, the buyer may recover, by way of recoupment or counterclaim, damages for breach of contract,[89] or warranty,[90] or for fraud,[91] where the right to claim such damages has not been waived or lost.[92] In an action on account for the price of certain goods sold and delivered, defendant cannot recoup damages for delay in delivery of other goods.[93] A counterclaim must be pleaded as such,[94] and the pleading must contain the necessary allegations to support the claim.[95] Defendant must prove the breach of contract or warranty[96] and damage sustained.[97]

85. Where buyer had had possession, but former owner regains possession and sells to another, only part of price being paid, first buyer, after demand on second, has right to possession of goods, though second buyer's special interest may be determined in same action. O'Neill v. Thompson, 152 Mich. 396, 15 Det. Leg. N. 299, 116 NW 399.

89. In action for price of goods, defendant properly pleaded as counterclaim that contract required other deliveries which plaintiff failed to make. Brooklyn Creamery Co. v. Friday, 137 Wis. 461, 119 NW 126. In action for price of boiler, work of putting it on foundation and building chimney "suitable for the boiler," defendant may counterclaim for cost of necessary extension of chimney to make it conform to contract requirements. Logan Iron Works v. Klein, 132 App. Div. 16, 116 NYS 333. One who bought "run of mine" coal and received and kept it could not defeat right to recover price unless coal was absolutely worthless. He might reduce amount if quality was poor. Home Ice Factory v. Howells Min. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 117. That seller's agent told buyer of coal that it would burn brick, buyer having told him he wanted coal for that purpose, did not entitle buyer to reduction in price on showing coal to be inferior, in absence of warranty. Woodridge v. Brown, 149 N. C. 299, 62 SE 1076.

90. Where goods are sold on warranty and there is breach thereof, buyer may retain goods and in action for price recoup in damages difference between actual and warranted value. Strauss v. American Chewing Gum Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 73. Buyer of piano, on discovering that it was not as represented, could keep it, relying on warranty, and in action by seller's for price could set up breach of warranty and recover as damages difference between actual value and value if it had been as warranted. Mathes v. McCarthy, 195 N. Y. 40, 87 NE 768. Contract for furnaces, with guaranty, provided that buyer would provide foundations, and, if furnaces proved unsatisfactory after 30 days, buyer could remove materials and hold furnaces subject to seller's order. Held, remedy not exclusive. Buyer could counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty in suit to foreclose lien for price. White Furnace Co. v. Miller Transfer Co., 131 App. Div. 559, 115 NYS 625. If contract provision for rescission was intended to be exclusive remedy in case of breach of warranty, this was modified by payments made by buyer on assurance by seller that furnaces sold would work. Id.

91. In action on notes for price of business, where it appeared plaintiff had been guilty of fraud and had violated agreement not to engage in business, defendant could recover on counterclaim for money paid. Schwartz v. Smoke, 115 NYS 221.

92. The right to set up a counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty exists only where the buyer would have had the right to rescind. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690. Defendant bought machines and gave notes for price. Thereafter, notes were renewed and time extended and payment on account made, all without objection that certain appliance had not been furnished with machine. Held, in action on notes 2 years after purchase, defendants could not recoup for appliance not furnished. Hinchman v. Johnson, 108 Md. 661, 71 A 424. Mere partial payment of price is not a waiver of the right to counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty in action for the balance of the price. Keniston v. Todd [Iowa] 117 NW 674. If a waiver or presumption of settlement does exist, it does not eliminate the right to set off damages to the extent of the unpaid portion of the price. Id.

94. Under a defense that goods did not correspond to sample, there can be no recovery as upon a counterclaim for breach of warranty. Wilmerding v. Strouse, 112 NYS 1091.

95. Answer insufficient as counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty which did not allege value of machine if it had been as warranted. Acme Harvester Mach. Co. v. Barkley [S. D.] 118 NW 690. In action for price of engine, answer alleging that seller knew it was to be used to operate ginnery, that it was not delivered until 40 days of ginning season had expired, and that buyer thereby suffered loss, held to state counterclaim for rental value of ginnery plant dur-

(§ 11) H. Choice and election of remedies.[98]—See 10 C. L. 1584—Where the sale is induced by fraud, the vendee may, on discovery of the fraud, rescind, or retain the goods and recover damages for the fraud.[99] An election not to rescind is final.[1] Where there is a breach of warranty, the buyer may rescind and reject the goods,[2] though the authorities are not agreed as to this,[3] or accept the goods and bring an action for breach of warranty,[4] or recoup by way of counterclaim for damages, in an action by the vendor for the price.[5] A court of equity will not entertain a suit for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of chattels unless special facts are alleged and proved showing that an award of damages for breach of the contract would not afford adequate relief.[6]

§ 12. Damages for breach of sale and warranty. A. General rules.[7]—See 10 C. L. 1565—Only damages which result from the alleged breach are recoverable.[8] Interest on damages cannot be recovered[9] until the amount is made certain and the right thereto has accrued.[10] The amount is usually a question for the jury.[11]

ing time alleged. Standard Supply Co. v. Carter, 81 S. C. 181, 62 SE 150. Where breach of warranty is relied on, the essential allegations are the terms of the warranty, the breach and facts from which damages may be inferred. Answer sufficient in action for price of piano. Segerstrom v. Swenson, 105 Minn. 115, 117 NW 478. Counterclaim for damages for failure to deliver held not defective because not alleging buyers readiness and willingness to perform, since it alleged refusal by seller to perform, which relieved buyer of duty of performing. Halladay-Klotz Land & Lumber Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 436.

96. Evidence sufficient to show that engine conformed to specifications and did required work. Hendry v. Irvine [Cal. App.] 99 P 408. Evidence held not to warrant finding that machine was worthless. Keniston v. Todd [Iowa] 117 NW 674.

97. In action for breach of contract to buy lumber, proper to instruct that defendants could not recover on counterclaim for damages for refusal to deliver as agreed, where there was no proof that defendants could not have purchased in open market without loss. 99. One induced to purchase stock by fraudulent representations could rescind, return stock and demand price paid, or affirm contract and sue for damages for fraud. Elliott v. Brady, 192 N. Y. 221, 85 NE 69. Where purchaser retains property and does not offer to rescind, but brings action for damages for fraud and deceit of the seller, he ratifies the sale, and the action is in tort for damages for deceit. Kemmerer v. Pollard [Idaho] 96 P 206. One induced to buy stock by fraud may rescind, or may retain stock and recover from seller difference between actual value of stock and value as it would be if representations were true. Jacobsen v. Whitely [Wis.] 120 NW 285. Vendee of corporate stock, on discovery of fraud, had right to rescind, or waive fraud and retain stock. Rosenberg v. McKinney [Wis.] 120 NW 230.

8. Where damage to buyer of engine was caused by inadequacy of pump to do required work, and engine was delivered before pump, delay in delivery of engine did not cause damage to buyer. Hendry v. Irvine [Cal. App.] 99 P 408.

9. Interest not allowable on damages for breach of contract by seller. Ellsworth v. Knowles [Cal. App.] 97 P 690.

10. Interest should not be allowed on damages for breach of warranty where they are unliquidated. Krasilnikoff v. Dundon [Cal. App.] 97 P 172. Damages capable of being made certain by calculation draw interest from accrual of right thereto, under Civ. Code, § 3287. Profits lost by refusal of buyer to take goods draw interest from filing of complaint for damages. Central Oil Co. v. Southern Refining Co. [Cal.] 97 P 177. In action for breach, interest is allowable only from date of breach, not from date of contract. Loomis v. Norman Printers' Supply Co. [Conn.] 71 A 358. Interest recoverable on damages for failure to deliver from date of agreed delivery. Long Pole Lumber Co. v. Saxon Lime & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 497, 62 SE 349.

11. Evidence as to damages for breach of warranty of press not conclusive. Case should have gone to jury. Golding v. Russell, 131 App. Div. 540, 115 NYS 359. Damages awarded in action for breach of contract not excessive where it appeared that seller had fraudulently commingled goods of two grades and charged for higher grade. Jury warranted in finding all goods delivered to be of lower grade. Baer & Co. v. Mobile Cooperage & Box Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 49 S 92.

(§ 12) B. Breach by seller.[12] See 10 C. L. 1565—For breach by the seller, the buyer may recover only the actual loss[13] sustained by him as a consequence of the breach,[14] less such sum as he could have saved by reasonable efforts to mitigate his loss,[15] where such efforts are required by the circumstances.[16]

On failure to deliver. See 10 C. L. 1566—As a general rule, the measure of damages for failure to deliver is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time and place of delivery.[17] Where similar goods are obtainable in the market[18] and where the delivery is to be by instalments, the value is to be estimated as of the time the several instalment ought to have been delivered.[19] If

13. Where machine delivered was not kind ordered and buyer had guaranteed certain freight rate, he could recover as damages for breach of contract, on account of freight, only the amount he actually paid. Connell v. Harron, 7 Cal. App. 745, 95 P 916. Where seller fails to deliver, and buyer buys elsewhere and makes same profit he would have made had seller delivered in full, buyer cannot recover for lost profits on goods so obtained and resold. Packers' Fertilizer Ass'n v. Harris [Ind. App.] 85 NE 375. In action for damages for failure to deliver goods within time agreed, which had been paid for by other goods and notes, it was error to allow recovery for value of goods not delivered, less notes, without also deducting an amount which had been due seller prior to contract, which was made part of price. Loomis v. Norman Printers' Supply Co. [Conn.] 71 A 358.

14. Measure of damages where lumber delivered was not up to specifications was difference between contract price and market price at time and place of delivery, where suitable lumber had to be purchased in market. Bushnell v. King Bridge Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 407. In replevin for goods wrongfully detained without payment, buyer counterclaimed for damages for failure to deliver agreed quantity. Measure of damages on counterclaim was difference between contract price and value at date of breach, less damages caused by defendant's wrongful detention. Howard v. Haas, 131 Mo. App. 499, 109 SW 1076. In action for breach of contract to deliver stock, defendant tendered part of it. Held, plaintiff was entitled to stock tendered and damages for failure to deliver the balance which was agreed to be delivered by contract. Shuler v. Allam [Colo.] 101 P 350. Contract for sale of rolls provided that they were to be erected in buyer's mill and given 30 days' trial and returned if unsatisfactory. Rolls proving unsatisfactory, seller was not liable for cost of foundation for rolls, contract having provided that seller should stand only expense of expert, who put them up. Sturtevant Mill Co. v. Kingsland Brick Co., 74 N. J. Law, 492, 70 A 732. Engine delivered being in accordance with contract specifications, expenses incurred in making it run were not chargeable to seller. Hendry v. Irvine [Cal. App.] 99 P 408.

15. Where buyers were informed by seller's agent that seller could not deliver, they should have bought elsewhere; not having done so, they could not recover from seller difference between contract price and later market price when they bought. Aronson v. H. B. Claplin Co., 115 NYS 97.

16. Where defendant refused to deliver salmon contracted for on ground that association which it represented refused to deliver goods for exportation, having another agent for such business, plaintiff was not bound to try to buy the goods from association to mitigate damages. Delafield v. J. K. Armsby Co., 131 App. Div. 572, 116 NYS 71. Where buyers sought as damages only difference between contract and market price at time of delivery and made no claim for lost profits, they were not obliged to go into the market and try to buy corn to lessen damages. Stahr v. Hickman Grain Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 784. Where buyer of goods did not concede seller's rescission in May of contract to deliver in September, buyer was not bound to order elsewhere to reduce loss from seller's breach, especially where market was falling, and goods could not be bought on open market but had to be ordered in advance. Harrison v. Argyle Co., 128 App. Div. 81, 112 NYS 477.

17. Barton-Child Co. v. Scarborough, 61 Misc. 334, 114 NYS 1043; Long Pole Lumber Co. v. Saxon Lime & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 497, 62 SE 349; Bushnell v. King Bridge Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 407; Piedmont Wagon Co. v. Hudgens, 4 Ga. App. 393, 61 SE 835; Schon-Klingstein Meat & Grocery Co. v. Snow, 43 Colo. 538, 96 P 182; Carney v. Vogel [Wash.] 100 P 1027; Delafield v. J. K. Armsby Co., 131 App. Div. 572, 116 NYS 71; Richner v. Plateau Live Stock Co. [Colo.] 98 P 178. Difference between the contract price and the price the buyer is compelled to pay in the open market. Difference between contract price and market price at agreed time of delivery or within reasonable time thereafter. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. Hartley Silk Mfg. Co., 130 App. Div. 102, 114 NYS 287. Breach of contract to deliver stock. Sloan v. McKane, 131 App. Div. 244, 115 NYS 648. Failure to deliver staves. Lamer & Co. v. Little Rock Cooperage Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 401. Failure to deliver cattle. Gibbens v. Hart [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 168. Where contract called for delivery of corn on or before January 1, 1908, measure of damages for failure to deliver was difference between contract price and market price January 1, 1908. Stahr v. Hickman Grain Co. [Ky.] 116 SW 784. Upon failure to deliver structural steel within reasonable time, buyers could buy elsewhere at best price and recover increase in price over contract price as damages. Kelley, Maus & Co. v. Hart-Parr Co., 137 Iowa, 713, 115 NW 490.

18. If goods are reasonably obtainable in market. Anderson v. Savoy, 137 Wis. 44, 118 NW 217.

there is no market value at the place of delivery, the market value in the nearest available market is the basis for estimating damages,[20] and if the buyer purchases goods in such market, the cost of transportation and necessary expenses may be added to his damages.[21] Where like goods cannot be obtained in the open market,[22] special damages are recoverable,[23] such as loss resulting from failure to procure the goods.[24] Special damages are recoverable for breach by the seller when they are the result of special circumstances, known to the parties at the time of the sale, and are the natural and direct result of the breach, and ascertainable with reasonable certainty.[25] Thus, loss of profits may be recovered as damages for breach of contract if reasonably within contemplation of parties and if established with reasonable certainty.[26] Prospective and anticipatory profits, purely speculative and conjectural, are not recoverable.[27]

19, 20, 21. Long Pole Lumber Co. v. Saxon Lime & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 497, 62 SE 349.

22. Special damages arising from purchase of goods elsewhere on failure to deliver, can be recovered only on allegation and proof that there is no market price. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. Hartley Silk Mfg. Co., 130 App. Div. 102, 114 NYS 287.

23. Where buyer tried to buy goods which seller did not deliver in open market but failed to get any, ordinary rule of damages did not apply. Schwartz v. Morris & Co., 61 Misc. 335, 113 NYS 524. Where like goods cannot be bought in the open market and the vendor knows that the goods are to be used for a certain purpose by the purchaser, the vendor is liable for special damages arising, without fault of the purchaser, from the failure to deliver. Richner v. Plateau Live Stock Co. [Colo.] 98 P 178.

24. If goods cannot be obtained in market, measure of damages for failure to deliver is difference between contract price and what goods would have been worth at agreed time of delivery. Anderson v. Savoy, 137 Wis. 44, 118 NW 217. Where vendor knew hay was to be used to feed cattle, and purchaser was unable to procure elsewhere hay sufficient to properly sustain them, he could recover as damages, for failure to deliver, expense of procuring other hay and loss and depreciation in value of cattle. Richner v. Pleateau Live Stock Co. [Colo.] 98 P 178. In action for breach of contract to ship machine of certain kind, where buyer did not prove what he could have bought an equivalent machine for in nearest market, he could recover only amount paid by him on account of the price, under Civ. Code, § 3308 (excess in value to buyer over amount due seller). Connell v. Harron, 7 Cal. App. 745, 95 P 916.

25. Iowa Mfg. Co. v. B. F. Sturtevant Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 460. Defendant, in suit for price, entitled to counterclaim for damages caused by delay in delivery, which caused delay in completion of contract, for which they were charged $25 a day liquidated damages, where plaintiff, seller, knew that defendants must have goods by certain day and would be liable for liquidated damages in case of delay in completing contract Id. Evidence held to show that defendants in fact lost $1,475 by delay. Id. If a seller knows that machinery sold is to be installed in a certain plant, the measure of damages for delay in delivery is the rental value of the plant for the time during which its operation was prevented. Failure to deliver engine to operate cotton ginnery. Standard Supply Co. v. Carter, 81 S. C. 181, 62 SE 150. Where buyer of coal was required by contract to have vessels ready to receive and convey coal at time delivery was to be made, seller was liable to buyer for demurrage as natural and probable result of seller's delay in making delivery. Garfield & Proctor Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co., 199 Mass. 22, 84 NE 1020. For failure to deliver lumber in accordance with specifications, buyer could not recover as damages expense of guarding bridge during delay caused by failure to deliver suitable lumber, seller not having notice of use to which lumber would be put. Bushnell v. King Bridge Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 407.

26. Loss of profits on timber recoverable on breach of contract by seller. Jefferson Sawmill Co. v. Iowa & Louisiana Land Co., 122 La. 983, 48 S 428. If the seller knows that the goods are the subject of an agreement under which the purchaser must deliver and for which he is to obtain an advanced price, the purchaser may recover the profits he would have made. Barton-Child Co. v. Scarborough, 61 Misc. 334, 114 NYS 1043. If seller ought reasonably to have contemplated resale by buyer, and buyer was unable to buy goods, which seller refused to deliver, elsewhere, the loss of profits on resale could be considered on issue of damages. Delafield v. J. K. Arsmby Co., 131 App. Div. 572, 116 NYS 71. Where parties understood that plaintiffs were to use tin cans which defendants agreed to furnish to can fruits for sale, plaintiffs could show profits they would have made on sale of canned fruit which they would have canned and sold had defendants performed. Pacific Sheet Metal Works v. Californian Canneries Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 980.

27. Where no resale of wagons was alleged, and it was conjectural whether there would be resale, profits could not be recovered. Piedmont Wagon Co. v. Hudgens, 4 Ga. App. 393, 61 SE 835. Loss of profits expected to be made by operation of ginnery, and expected advantages in collection of accounts, by taking cotton and seeds, held too speculative and remote to be recoverable as damages for failure to deliver machinery to operate ginnery. Standard Supply Co. v. Carter, 81 S. C. 181, 62 SE 150. Where contract called for 20,000 barrels of oil, with privilege of 15,000 more, and partles understood oil was for use as fuel in operation of sugar plantation, and that only enough oil in excess of 20,000 barrels was to be delivered to handle sugar crop, and seller deliv-

(§ 12) C. Breach by purchaser.[28] For nonacceptance. See 10 C. L. 1567—The measure of damages for refusal to accept is ordinarily the difference between the contract price and market value at time and place of delivery,[29] or at the time of the repudiation of the contract by the buyer.[30] For refusal to accept goods specially manufactured, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the cost of manufacture and delivery.[31] The measure of damages for breach of an executory contract for goods is the expense incurred by the seller, plus profits which would have been made.[32] Where, on default by the buyer, the seller elects to treat the goods as the buyer's and to resell as the buyer's agent, he may recover as damages the contract price, less the amount received from a fair sale, and the expenses of storage and sale, and interest.[33] It is the seller's duty to mitigate his loss by a resale, unless prevented by the buyer.[34] Preventable losses, such as cost of shipping after repudiation by the buyer,[35] or costs of completing manufacture after cancellation of order,[36] cannot be recobered. Where liquidated damages have been provided for,[37] the stipulated sum is recoverable.[38]

ered all that was needed, buyer could not recover as damages profits it would have made on difference between 35,000 barrels and quantity delivered, since such damages were not in contemplation of parties. Having suffered no actual damage, buyer could recover nothing. Adeline Sugar Factory Co. v. Evangeline Oil Co., 121 La. 961, 46 S 935.

29. Salmon v. Helena Box Co. [C. C. A.] 158 F 300. Measure of damages for refusal of vendee to accept completely manufactured article is not purchase price but difference between purchase price and market value at time and place when acceptance is required. Malcomson v. Reeves Pulley Co. [C. C. A.] 167 F 939.

30. Where contract for sale of iron was entire, measure of damages for breach by buyer, who refused to accept any of iron, was difference between market and contract price on entire amount contracted for, at time of repudiation of contract. Moffat v. Davitt, 200 Mass. 452, 86 NE 929.

31. Where article has no fixed market value. Ridgeway Dynamo & Engine Co. v. Pennsylvania Cement Co., 221 Pa. 160, 70 A 557. Damages for refusal to accept steel beams manufactured to order is difference between contract price and cost of manufacture and delivery. Isaacs v. Terry & Tench Co., 113 NYS 731. Proof of sale of beams elsewhere, immaterial. Id. Measure of damages for breach of contract to buy iron manufactured according to defendant's specifications is difference between cost of manufacture and delivery and contract price, where evidence makes calculation of such damages by jury possible. Holliday & Co. v. Highland Iron & Steel Co. [Ind. App.] 87 NE 249. Measure of damages for refusal to take goods manufactured for buyer is difference between cost of manufacture and contract price. Cleveland-Canton Springs Co. v. Goldsboro Buggy Co., 148 N. C. 533, 62 SE 637. Profits lost by breach of contract by buyer, recoverable, since they would be difference between cost and contract price; not conjectural. Gibbes Machinery Co. v. Johnson, 81 S. C. 10, 61 SE 1027.

33. Including pay for time as agent. Vanstory Clothing Co. v. Stadiem, 149 N. C. 6, 62 SE 778.

34. Though it was seller's duty to lower damages by selling hay which buyer refused to take away, seller was relieved where buyer refused to allow hay to be sold to another or removed. Allen v. Rushforth [Neb.] 118 NW 657.

35. Where buyer rescinds before shipment of goods, seller can recover only difference between contract and market price. He cannot enhance damages by shipping goods after rescission by buyer. Frederick v. Willoughby [Mo. App.] 116 SW 1109.

36. After cancellation of a contract for manufactured goods by the buyer, the seller cannot complete the manufacture and recover the full contract price. Is bound to reduce damages. Woolf v. Hamburger, 129 App. Div. 883, 114 NYS 186.

37. Provision in contract for sale of automobiles for refund of 2½ per cent. in case full number of cars were not sold held simply adjudgment of commissions, and not provision for liquidated damages. Usual damages recoverable for breach by buyer. Klauder v. C. V. G. Import Co., 61 Misc. 255, 113 NYS 716.

38. Where order for machinery provided it was not to be countermanded except on payment of 20 per cent. of price, which was to be considered as liquidated damages, that amount was recoverable for breach by buyer. Tidwell v. Southern Engine & Boiler Works [Ark.] 112 SW 152. Each party to agreement of sale of fixtures deposited $100 with third person, to be paid in case of default to other party. Held, there was option to purchase and consideration therefor, and seller, on breach by buyer, was entitled to recover $100 deposited by buyer. Nagel v. Cohen, 112 NYS 1066.

for breach of warranty is the actual loss resulting therefrom,[40] which will usually be the difference between the value of the goods received and their value if they had been as warranted or represented.[41] Generally, damages for breach of warranty of quality are to be estimated with reference to values at time and place of delivery.[42] But where property is sold to be used at some place other than that of the sale and delivery, this being known to the seller, damages may be estimated with reference to values at such place.[43] The cost of repairs may in some cases indemnify the buyer and may be considered by the jury, but is not the sole measure of damages.[44] Nominal damages at least may be recovered where goods are returned and others shipped and accepted.[45] For breach of warranty of title, the indemnity provided by the terms of the contract may be recovered.[46]

(§ 12) E. Evidence as to damages.[47]—See 10 C. L. 1568—Damages cannot be recovered unless the evidence shows the elements or data on which their computation must be based.[48] The admissibility of evidence usually depends upon the rule of law governing the measure of damages in the particular case.[49]

40. Where seed sold under warranty produces crop not injurious to land, but of poorer character or of inferior quality and less value than would have been produced had warranty been fulfilled, the measure of damages is the value of the crop which seed as warranted would ordinarily have produced that year, less expense of raising it, and less value of crop actually raised. Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow [Fla.] 48 S 410. Where seeds sold under warranty fail to grow or germinate and no crop is produced by them, measure of damages is cost of seed, expense of preparing ground and planting seed, and loss sustained by having ground lie idle. Id. Where seller warranted threshing machine to give satisfaction, and notes were taken for price and sold to bona fide purchaser, buyer was entitled to recover as damages, when machine proved worthless, amount of notes and freight on machines. Pennebaker Bros. v. Bell City Mfg. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 829. In action for breach of warranty of apricots sold by sample, buyer could recover actual loss, difference between price and amount brought by sale, and also profits lost by reason of fruit not being as warranted; all as general damages. Germain Fruit Co. v. J. K. Armsby Co., 153 Cal. 585, 96 P 319. Where threshing machine, warranted to give satisfaction, proved worthless, buyer had right to recover amount of notes given, which had passed to bona fide holders, and freight paid by him. Pennebaker Bros. v. Bell City Mfg. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 829. In action for damages for breach of warranty of fruit sold by sample, buyer could recover, as general damages, actual loss, difference between price paid and amount for which fruit sold, and loss of profits by reason of fruit not being as represented, and latter loss need not be alleged as special damages. Germain Fruit Co. v. J. K. Armsby Co., 153 Cal. 585, 96 P 319. Seller of corporate stock guaranteed that liabilities of company do not exceed by more than $100 an amount set forth. Held, he was liable to buyer for amount of excess of liabilities over that set forth, less $100. Childs v. Krey, 199 Mass. 352, 85 NE 442.

48. Plaintiff, failing to prove market price at time of delivery of corn, could not recover damages for failure to deliver. Schon-Klingstein Meat & Grocery Co. v. Snow, 43 Colo. 538, 96 P 182. No damages recoverable where private stock was transferred to plaintiff which had been represented to him as treasury stock of the corporation, where there was no evidence to show any difference in the market value. Findlater v. Dorland, 152 Mich. 301, 15 Det. Leg. N. 285, 116

§ 13. Rights of bona fide purchasers and other third persons.[50]—See 10 C. L. 1569—In general, the true owner of property cannot be deprived of it without his consent,[51] and his title will prevail as against creditors of one who has possession but no title,[52] in the absence of statutory provisions requiring change of possession or recordation.[53] Thus, a sale by one having no title or authority to sell transfers no title [54] even to a bona fide purchaser for value.[55] Where goods are obtained by fraud, title does not pass, and a subsequent vendee requires nothing,[56] especially where he has knowledge of the fraud.[57] A sale is usually held invalid as to creditors of the seller where the property is allowed to remain in the possession and use of the seller [58] and where delivery is not impossible,[59] though a sale without

NW 410. Where contract included all cattle on farm marked with certain described brands, and other property, and in action for breach by seller the only evidence of the number of cattle was statement of seller that he supposed there were 1,000 or 1,200 and there was no proof of market value, judgment for damages could not be sustained George v. Drawdy [Fla.] 47 S 939. Evidence not sufficient to warrant recovery of damages for failure to deliver ice when it did not show whether ice could reasonably be obtained in market, nor what ice would have been worth if delivered, nor what amount would have been lost by melting and cutting. Anderson v. Savoy, 137 Wis. 44, 118 NW 217.

49. Where delivery was to be between April 1 and October 1, evidence of market price in January and February was inadmissible in action for damages for failure to deliver. McManus v. American Woolen Co., 126 App. Div. 68, 110 NYS 680. Upon failure of seller to deliver, buyer need not purchase other goods to fix damages, and proof of such purchase and amount paid would be inadmissible. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. Hartley Silk Mfg. Co., 130 App. Div. 102, 114 NYS 287. In action for damages for failure to deliver goods, evidence of specific contracts of resale at profit was inadmissible where goods had market price. McManus v. American Woolen Co., 126 App. Div. 68, 110 NYS 680. Price at which buyer resold goods inadmissible to show damages for breach of warranty. Bodger v. Hills, 113 NYS 879. In action for damages for failure to deliver poles, that buyer could have bought from other parties was immaterial on question of damages. Carney v. Vogel [Wash.] 100 P 1027. Where defendant counterclaimed for breach of warranty of mare, evidence of value of colt, born since sale and 11 months old, was inadmissible. Sears v. Bailey, 58 Misc. 145, 110 NYS 467.

58. W. P. Chamberlain Co. v. Tuttle [N. H.] 71 A 865. Right to locate and acquire land under Texas land certificate is, before location, personal property, and where certificate was sold but vendor kept possession, change of possession may be valid as against all except creditors and bona fide purchasers for value.[60] Where the owner and shipper of goods has parted with his control over them and cannot change their destination, his creditors cannot attach them.[61] Inadequacy of consideration is to be taken into account in determining the good faith of a purchaser.[62] Conveyances in fraud of creditors are elsewhere more fully discussed.[63] In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, an absolute, unconditional and bona fide sale vests the title in the purchaser free from contractual claims against the seller.[64] A purchaser of an order on a manufacturer for the delivery of personal property is justified in assuming that the order is valid and free from defenses in the absence of any representations to the contrary.[65]

§ 14 Conditional sales. Definition, validity and formation.[66]—See 10 C. L. 1569.—By the term "conditional sale" is usually meant a sale wherein title is reserved by the vendor until full payment has been made,[67] though it is also used to designate a sale in which the transfer of title in the thing sold is made to depend upon the performance of some condition.[68] Whether a particular transaction is a conditional sale or a contract of another kind depends upon the intention of the parties.[69] Where a conditional sale is intended, it will be so construed though

New York State Steel Co., 167 F 143. Where seller offered machine at certain price, machine to remain seller's property until fully paid for, and offer was accepted, transaction was conditional sale, and title remained in seller until payment in full. Falaenau v. Reliance Steel Foundry Co. [N. J. Eq.] 69 A 1098. Where lease gave lessee option to buy, and provided that in case of exercise of option title was to remain in lessor until full payment, and notes for rent and price and memorandum of transaction were executed same day, title to goods would not pass until full payment by lessee if he used his option to buy. Where sewing machine was placed in shop on trial, and memorandum showed value and contained option to buy, but no agreement to pay price or rent, there was no conditional sale or lease, within Comp. St. 1907, c. 32, §, 26, and attaching creditor obtained no rights as against original owner. Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Omaha Umbrella Mfg. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 958. Where firm advancing money to another for purchase of goods to be sold by latter in regular course of business took legal title and possession of goods as security, but were bound to turn over profits to debtor, transaction was not conditional sale.. Irby v. Cage, Drew & Co., 121 La. 615, 46 S 670. Where machinery was to be paid for in cash on delivery and when installed, sale was not conditional, and Civ. Code S. C. 1902, § 2456, requiring conditional sale contracts to be recorded, did not apply. Pridmore v. Puffer Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 496. in form a lease,[70] mortgage,[71] or contract of agency.[72] Statutes providing for execution and recordation of conditional sales should of course be complied with,[73] though as between vendor and vendee, a conditional sale may be valid though oral,[74] and not acknowledged or recorded.[75] It will be presumed that a conditional bill of sale was executed at the place named in the caption and that the attesting officer was acting within his jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears from the face of the instrument.[76] Where the record of the instrument is attacked on the ground that the officer was acting without the limits of his jurisdiction, evidence is competent in aid of the record to show execution within the limits of his jurisdiction.[77] A contract for sale of goods to be resold by the buyer, title being reserved in the first vendor until payment in full, is contrary to public policy in Tennessee, and no action to enforce the reservation of title will lie in the state or federal courts.[78]

Rights of parties to the contract.[See 10 C. L. 1570]—The rights of the parties are of course governed by the terms of their contract.[79] A conditional sale, with reservation of title in vendor and possession given vendee, is none the less a sale.[80] Retention of title by the vendor does not make him absolute owner, but is at most a form of security for payment of the price.[81] But the vendor's rights are sufficient to entitle him to the protection of a statute making it a crime to remove or sell personal property to hinder or defraud any person who has a valid claim thereto, with knowledge of such claim.[82] A conditional vendee has the right to possession of the property only so long as he complies with the contract.[83] Upon default by him, the vendor may retake the property,[84] though he must do so peaceably.[85] But the right to declare a forfeiture upon default is not the exclusive remedy of the seller.[86] He may waive that right and sue for the price.[87] But these remedies are inconsistent,[88] and an election to pursue one is a waiver or abandonment of the other.[89] Statutory prerequisites, to the right to declare and enforce a forfeiture, must be complied with,[90] though the conditional sale is oral.[91] Where a statute

Vendor in conditional sale may sue on debt or reclaim property. Stalker v. Hayes [Conn.] 71 A 1099. A vendor who has reserved title until the price is paid may, upon default of payment, retake the property or sue to recover the debt, thereby affirming the sale. Bell v. Old [Ark.] 113 SW 1023. Where seller reserves title to machine which is to be paid for by delivery of products of machine and buyer fails to deliver goods as agreed, seller may rescind and retake machine or sue for price. Sugar Beets Product Co. v. Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co., 161 F 215. Where contract was construed as executory contract of sale reserving title in the vendor until payment, vendor had right to sue for unpaid portion of price of goods in possession of vendee. Hartman Furniture & Carpet Co. v. Krieger [Wis.] 119 NW 347. Where title was not to pass until payment of price in full and delivery of bill of sale, failure to pay installments when due was breach of contract, and vendor could treat it as agreement for goods sold and delivered, and sue for price, or in tort for conversion, or in replevin. Frisch v. Wells, 200 Mass. 429, 86 NE 775.

88. On breach of conditional sale by vendee, rights of vendor to treat title as having passed and sue for price, or to sue in conversion or replevin, were inconsistent, and election necessary. Frisch v. Wells, 200 Mass. 429, 86 NE 775. The vendor in a contract of conditional sale may elect whether he will recover possession of the property sold in which he still retains title, or waive his title and sue for the value or price, but he cannot do both. Poirier Mfg. Co. v. Kitts [N. D.] 120 NW 558.

89. American Process Co. v. Florida White Pressed Brick Co. [Fla.] 47 S 942. Suit by vendor for balance of price after breach of conditional sale by vendee was waiver of reservation of title and election to treat title as having passed, and subsequent action of replevin was barred. Frisch v. Wells, 200 Mass. 429, 86 NE 775. Where one who had consigned property to dealer, without giving notice to third person to whom he knew it would be sold of reservation of title, and after merely filing praecipe in action for conversion against third party, commenced proceedings to get payments from one to whom he sold, and received part payment, he could not maintain action against third person. American Process Co. v. Florida White Pressed Brick Co. [Fla.] 47 S 942. Where the contract, in the form of a lease, gives the alternative rights to sue for instalments of the price, or rent when due, or to retake the property ("lease" of steam roller construed as giving such rights. Kelley Springfield Road Roller Co. v. Schlimme, 220 Pa. 413, 69 A 867), a retaking of the property after all payments are due, but none paid, is a rescission of the contract, and bars an action thereon for the price (Id.). Could not sue on notes, having taken property. Kelley Springfield Road Roller Co. v. Schlimme, 220 Pa. 413, 69 A 867.

90. Under § 116, et seq. of lien law, where vendor takes property upon default, he may hold it 30 days and then sell, and vendee may regain property by paying amount unpaid and expenses of caring for property; vendor is entitled only to be made whole. Powers v. Burdick, 126 App. Div. 179, 110 NYS 883. Where seller of goods, reserving title, sued in replevin, and marshal took goods, this was not "taking by seller," within Lien Law, § 116; hence vendee not entitled to recover price paid, since statute was complied with by seller. Sigal v. Frank E. Hatch Co., 61 Misc. 332, 113 NYS 818. Rev. St. 1899, § 3413, provides that it shall be unlawful for owner of goods, sold conditionally, to retake same without tendering back money paid, after deducting reasonable compensation for use, breakage and damage; held statute does not compel retaking of goods but prevents retaking without such tender. Vette v. Merrell Drug Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 666. To rescind conditional sale, as against buyer's creditors, seller must take immediate possession of property and keep it, under Mills' Ann. St. § 2027. Coors v. Reagan [Colo.] 96 P 966.

91. That a conditional sale is oral does not preclude the vendee from taking advantage of the statute providing that vendor, on retaking goods, must notify vendee makes a conditional sale void as to the seller but enforcible by the buyer, the seller cannot deny the contract and replevin the goods without returning to the vendee the consideration received.[92] Under a conditional sale, the vendor cannot maintain an action for goods sold and delivered and recover the entire price until all instalments are due.[93] But when all payments are due, he has the right to treat the transaction as a cash sale made upon the same reservation of title,[94] and may elect to disaffirm the sale and recover the goods, or affirm the sale and sue for the price.[95] Where the vendor has not demanded the property, the vendee is not in default and may pay the amount due with interest and retain the property,[96] and a subsequent purchaser, who buys when the vendee is in arrears but has not been placed in default, has the same right.[97] Where the vendor retakes the property on default by the vendee, the latter may still complete the contract and perfect his title by paying the balance due.[98] Such retaking by the vendor is under a right conferred by the contract, and its exercise does not terminate the contract.[99] But if the vendee or his assignee denies the vendor's title, and refuses to return the property or to pay the balance due, he repudiates the contract and cannot thereafter perfect his title by a tender of the balance due.[1] The vendor may in such case also treat the contract as rescinded and retake and keep the property.[2]

In an action to recover the property conditionally sold, on default, plaintiff must show that the vendee is in default.[3] The property sought to be recovered must be sufficiently described in the pleading.[4] In such action, defendant cannot recoup damages for breach of warranty [5] or of the contract.[6] The measure of damages for conversion by the vendor, the vendee not being in default, is the actual value of the goods less the unpaid balance of the price.[7]

Rights of third persons. See 10 C. L. 1571—At common law, a reservation of title until payment in full is valid and and enforcible as against creditors of the vendee,[8] and even against subsequent bona fide purchasers for value,[9] though there are of sale of same at auction, and that, if he does not give such notice, the vendee may recover the amount paid by him. Lien Law § 116, amended by Laws 1900, c. 762. Alexander v. Kellner, 131 App. Div. 809, 116 NYS 98.

In action to recover property, alleged to have been sold conditionally, sale and reservation of title not being admitted, burden is on plaintiff to prove continuation of indebtedness. Black v. Roberson [Ark.] 112 SW 402.

4. In trover to recover "one sorrel horse, seven years" old, sold by plaintiff conditionally, copy of contract containing quoted description was attached to petition. Held, petition sufficiently described property; contract admissible. Beaty v. Sears [Ga.] 64 SE 321.

6. In replevin by the vendor to recover goods conditionally sold, after default, defendant cannot recoup damages for delay in delivery and noncompliance with terms of contract. Dearing Water Tube Boiler Co. v. Thompson [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 129, 120 NW 801.

7. Agreed price is to be taken as actual value in absence of other evidence. Smith v. Goff [R. I.] 72 A 289.

8. Where threshing machine was sold under conditional sale reserving title in sellers until full payment, where buyers were in default at time sheriff seized machine under order of sale in suit to foreclose laborers liens, against buyers only, sellers had right to terminate contract and take machine from sheriff. Holt Mfg. Co. v. Collins [Cal.] 97 P 516. Contract for sale of machinery to be resold by vendee held conditional sale, notwithstanding provisions for payment by notes and mortgages as security; title of vendor good as against trustee in bankruptcy. Monitor Drill Co. v. Mercer [C. C. A.] 163 F 943.

9. In California even bona fide purchasers authorities to the contrary.[10] A verbal reservation of title has been held sufficient,[11] but this is so only when the vendor actually has title and makes a sale in good faith, possession of the property having actually changed.[12] Where there is a sale and immediate resale, amounting to a mere verbal mortgage, without change of possession, the rule is inapplicable.[13] A subsequent purchaser with notice of course takes subject to the vendor's rights,[14] and in some jurisdictions, becomes liable for the price to the conditional vendor.[15] An agreement to pay, if he is allowed to retain the goods, is enforcible.[16] A vendor who consents to a mortgage of the property, waives his reservation of title as to the mortgagee and those claiming under him.[17] It will be presumed, as to one who purchases after the time for payment has expired, that such payment has been made.[18] from one to whom personal property is delivered under a conditional contract of sale acquire no valid claim to the property. Liver v. Mills [Cal.] 101 P 299. Agreement to sell mare, and agreement of buyer to work for seller, held parts of one entire contract; where buyer abandoned contract and quit work, having sold mare to third person, seller had right to recover mare from third person, as he acquired no better title than his seller had. Cleary v. Morson [Miss.] 48 S 817. Simply entrusting possession of chattels to another by the owner under a conditional executory contract of sale is insufficient to estop the owner from setting up title thereto against an innocent purchaser thereof for value and without notice of the condition. Lockwood Bros. v. Frisco Lumber Co. [Okl.] 97 P 562. Where a chattel is sold with a reservation of title in the vendor until the price is paid, title remains in him until the condition is performed, and a purchaser of the vendee acquires no title, though he buys in good faith for a valuable consideration and without notice of the condition. Id. Where contract did not purport to pass title, purchaser from vendee did not acquire title as against vendor, even though he had no notice. Taylor v. Applebaum, 154 Mich. 682, 15 Det. Leg. N. 928, 118 NW 492.

In most jurisdictions the rights of creditors and bona fide purchasers are now fixed by statutes requiring the filing or recordation of conditional sale contracts.

10. Mere possession of personal property is only prima facie evidence of title (American Process Co. v. Florida White Pressed Brick Co. [Fla.] 47 S 942), and a purchaser from one who has only possession under an incomplete conditional sale cannot, in general, defeat the title of the true owner, though such purchaser bought for value and without notice (Id.). But where an owner consigns personal property to a dealer with express or implied authority to sell, or delivers or consigns to another personal property with indicia of ownership, but with title reserved until payment, a purchaser who pays value and obtains possession of such goods without notice of the terms or conditions of the original delivery, consignment or sale, obtains good title as against the original owner, which will usually prevail against his reserved title. Id. Owner sent machinery to dealer who was in business of installing same in buildings of others, knowing it would be affixed to land of another person, and did not give any notice of reservation of title, and third person paid for machinery in good faith without notice of reservation. He acquired title against owner. Id.

11. Personal property may be sold with verbal retention of title, and the claim of the vendor to the purchase money will prevail over the claims of subsequent grantees. Parker v. Payne [Miss.] 48 S 835.

12. Parker v. Payne [Miss.] 48 S 835.

13. To secure debt, debtor sold mules and creditor resold conditionally to debtor, reserving title verbally. Held, conditional vendor did not acquire title good as against subsequent grantee in trust deed. Parker v. Payne [Miss.] 48 S 835.

14. Lien of conditional vendor prior to that of mortgagee who had notice of vendor's rights. Zacharia v. Cohen Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 136. Evidence held to show that mortgagee had notice of rights of prior conditional vendor. Id. Where conditional sale contract provided that vendee could not sell without vendor's consent, this did not invalidate sale by vendee to his wife, but she took subject to rights of vendor. Powers v. Burdick, 126 App. Div. 179, 110 NYS 883.

15. If purchaser from one who bought under contract reserving title had notice thereof, seller or his assignee could recover purchase price from such subsequent purchaser. Hogan v. Detroit United R. Co., 154 Mich. 478, 15 Det. Leg. N. 830, 118 NW 140. In action to recover from subsequent purchaser, with notice of conditional sale provision, unpaid price of goods, evidence was admissible to show that one who made demand on defendant was real owner, though assignee was nominal plaintiff. Id.

16. Successor in interest of original vendees of conditional sale agreed to pay balance due if goods were left. Held, enforcible agreement, based on sufficient consideration. Barth v. Sanders, 113 NYS 651.

17. Bell v. Old [Ark.] 113 SW 1023.

18. Where conditional sale calls for payment within 60 days, the presumption is, as to subsequent purchaser long after 60 days, that payment had been made and title had passed. Barasch v. Kramer, 62 Misc. 475, 115 NYS 176.

In general, the reservation of title is valid when the contract is duly executed [19] and filed or recorded.[20]

A conditional contract of sale is assignable,[21] and its assignment by the vendor transfers title to the property,[22] and all the remedies of the vendor.[23] Where the contract is also a promissory note, the payee, by transfer and indorsement, becomes liable as indorser.[24] In an action to enforce the vendor's lien, a third person, claiming right of possession, is a proper party defendant,[25] but a deficiency judgment should be rendered only against the vendee.[26] In an action on notes given for purchase money reserving title in vendors until payment, against makers of notes and their successors, judgment should be against the makers only, if solvent, for the amount of the note and interest.[27] If they are insolvent, judgment may be had against subsequent owners of property to the extent that they are shown to have received any of the property and converted same to their use.[28] In a suit by a subsequent mortgagee to enforce his lien, the burden is upon him to allege and prove that a prior conditional sale was not properly acknowledged and recorded, and that he had no notice.[29]

20. See Notice and Record of Title, 12 C. L. 1100.

21. An instrument acknowledging receipt of property and containing a promise by the maker to pay certain sums, reserving title to the property in the vendor until payment in full is assignable, under Code 1895, § 3682. Walker v. Carpenter, 5 Ga. App. 427, 63 SE 576.

22. Where conditional bill of sale was duly executed, acknowledged and filed, an assignment of it by vendors to plaintiff transferred title of goods to plaintiff, who could maintain conversion against officer who levied on them as goods of buyer. Picone v. Freeman, 115 NYS 128.

23. The transfer of a promissory note given for the price of personal property, the seller retaining title until payment, carries with it the right to the security and the remedy of the vendor against the vendee in reference thereto. Turnell v. Carter [Ga. App.] 64 SE 114. After transfer, vendor has no title, and seizure and sale of property under judgment against vendor by transferee of note is mere nullity, and fact that holder of note became purchaser at void sale did not release vendor from obligation to pay note nor estop holder from enforcing payment. Of dismissal of cross complaint where he urged its dismissal. Rollins v. Fearnley [Colo.] 101 P 345. Where plaintiff moved to dismiss action, held that he could not complain that it was dismissed as to defendant surety, though motion was denied as to defendant principal who had interposed counterclaim. Northwestern Port Huron Co. v. Iverson [S. D.] 117 NW 372. Where plaintiff secured order sustaining demurrer to facts pleaded as answer, and they were subsequently pleaded as counterclaim, held that he could not contend that they should have been pleaded as answer. State v. Spencer [Ind. App.] 86 NE 492. Defendant in motion for nonsuit assumed and urged that action was based on contract itself as an entirety. Plaintiff, by amending without waiting for ruling of court, acquiesced in such interpretation. Held that defendant could not complain of allowance of amendment whether his position so asserted and urged was correct or not. Realty Co. v. Ellis, 4 Ga. App. 402, 61 SE 832. Where defendant pleaded written contract as regulating its liability, and court so held, held that it was not misled by variance between oral contract sued on and written one proved, and could not complain that court took its view of matter and overruled motion for peremptory instruction because of such variance. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wood & Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 734. Defendant held not entitled to complain that court erred in assuming fact in instruction contrary to plaintiff's testimony, where his own witness testified to existence of such fact. Valentine v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 915, 118 NW 970. Defendant held not entitled to complain that court erroneously placed burden of proof to show contributory negligence on it, where court erroneously submitted issue of contributory negligence, which was not pleaded, to jury at defendant's request. Ramp v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 700, 114 SW 59. Where counsel representing both partners in action against them jointly on firm debt expressly admitted that one of such partners was liable in any event, latter could not complain of instruction directing verdict against him in any event on ground that several judgments could not be entered. Wood & Co. [Ky.] 114 SW 734; Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. v. Smith [Miss.] 48 S 735; Robinson v. Helena L. & R. Co. [Mont.] 99 P 837; Sturza v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 113 NYS 974. Where variance was not taken advantage of by objection, held that, even if question was raised by requests for instructions, there was ground on which court was justified in treating it as impliedly waived. Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. v. Exeter Boot & Shoe Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 824.

67. That it was in nature of conclusion from particular facts rather than statement of such facts. Mulford v. Rowland [Colo.] 100 P 603.

68. Objection that jurors had previously served during same term not considered, where they were not challenged individually on that ground, which was not ground for challenge to the array. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 365.

69. See post, § 4, Necessity and Time of Objection.

70. That it was taken after depositions of other witnesses. Civ. Code Prac. § 587. Hall v. Wilson [Ky.] 116 SW 244.

71. Waligora v. St. Paul Foundry Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 395. That charges of negligence were not sufficiently pleaded to warrant their submission to jury. Roenfranz v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 116 NW 714. Mistake in stating issues raised by pleadings. Jones v. Parker, 81 S. C. 214, 62 SE 261. Instruction as to matter not in issue and as to which there was no evidence. Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co., 80 S. C. 407, 61 SE 893. That charge was not marked filed. Carter v. Kieran [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 272.

72. Finding not assailed by either party is conclusive on appeal. Mansfield v. District Agr. Ass'n No. 6 [Cal.] 97 P 150.

73. Sandoval Zink Co. v. Hale, 133 Ill. App. 196. Failure of foreman of jury to sign answers to certain interrogatories. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 85 NE 784. Where defendants remained silent when forms of verdict were explained and delivered to jury and when verdict was returned and accepted, held that they could not question form of verdict rendered on appeal. Pelton v. Goldberg [Conn.] 70 A 1020.

74. Decree setting aside fraudulent conveyances of several tracts of land and ordering sale thereof not reversed because making no reference to homestead, where no such objection was made below and it appeared that homestead rights could be readily preserved in carrying out decree. Mette v. Mette, 154 Mich. 662, 15 Det. Leg. N. 901, 118 NW 588. Cannot complain that on appeal from justice's court to county court judgment was rendered against defendant without in any manner disposing of case against his codefendant, where no such objection made in county court in motion for new trial or otherwise. Keefer v. Amicone [Colo.] 100 P 594.

75. Question of taxation of costs not considered where not called to trial court's attention. Whitelaw v. Rodney, 212 Mo. 540, 111 SW 560.

76. Allowance of solicitor's fees. Beck Coal & Lumber Co. v. Peterson Mfg. Co., 237 Ill. 250, 86 NE 715. Plaintiff not entitled to judgment for attorney's fees on appeal, where did not ask for such judgment below. Des Moines Life Ins. Co. v. Clay [Ark.] 116 SW 232.

77. That notice of appeal from justice court to municipal court was not served in time. Cordello v. Deponte [Minn.] 120 NW 902. Whether writ of error from circuit court to county court was perfected in time, and, hence, whether circuit court had jurisdiction, it being question which might have been affected by matters not appearing in record, and for nonappearance of which petitioner was not responsible. Louisa County v. Yancey's Trustee [Va.] 63 SE 452. Where question of jurisdiction of district court on appeal from order disallowing claim against county was in no manner raised below, but case was tried on its merits, any irregularity in getting before that tribunal could not be complained of. Washington County v. Murray [Colo.] 100 P 588. Objection that justice had not signed certificate to transcript. Roblin v. Jenkins, 83 Ark. 517, 104 SW 203. Though filing of duly authenticated transcript is essential to perfect appeal from expressly [78] or impliedly [79] consented, nor upon rulings to which he has submitted [80] county to district court, and though it is not so authenticated, yet if parties proceed in district court on theory that appeal has been perfected, they cannot question sufficiency of such transcript on further appeal to supreme court. Whitcomb v. Chase [Neb.] 119 NW 673. Fact that district court on appeal tried case on theory that proper parties were before it held not to preclude dismissal of further appeal to supreme court for failure to serve necessary parties. In re Farley Drainage Dist. No. 7 [Iowa] 120 NW 83.

78. Where case was submitted on agreed statement which provided that court should determine the question of jurisdiction and should treat the record as though formal plea to jurisdiction had been filed, it would be so considered on appeal. Lucas v. Patton [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 796, 107 SW 1143. Where plaintiff stipulated that court should decide issues of fact upon testimony given at former trial, he could not predicate error on refusal to admit evidence on such trial. Dooley v. Burlington Gold Min. Co. [Ariz.] 100 P 797. Where plaintiff in action of forcible entry and unlawful detainer was in possession and asserting right to possession of premises when case was transferred from municipal to district court, and his rights were there litigated with his consent, held that he could not contend on appeal that action should have been dismissed in municipal court because he was not in possession when it was commenced. Bartleson v. Munson, 105 Minn. 348, 117 NW 512. Where parties consented that court should consider such statutes and decisions of another state as were adduced by them and give judgment thereon, neither could object that foreign law was not properly proved. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Dukes [Ky.] 113 SW 454. Alleged error in decreeing sale of property in bulk in partition suit held not open to consideration, where appellant reserved no exception to master's report advising sale and stated in answer to rule that he had no objections to urge against confirmation. City of New Orleans v. Howard [C. C. A.] 160 F 393. One who by stipulation below has waived the right to object to the method of taking testimony and to delay in decision cannot urge such objections on appeal. Vucci v. Pelletieri, 111 NYS 784. No error requiring reversal where judgment was entered in accordance with agreement signed by attorneys and filed with papers, defendants having appeared and answered, and court having jurisdiction of parties and subject-matter. Forty-Acre Spring Live Stock Co. v. West Texas Bank & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 417. Defendants held not entitled to contend that court erred in referring cause to referee because suit should have been brought in equity instead of at law, where they consented to reference and in every way treated action as one at law. Crocker v. Barteau, 212 Mo. 359, 110 SW 1062. Where court and parties treated demurrer to return to writ of mandamus as answer, and consent order was issued referring only controverted issue to referee to report testimony, and upon his report demurrer was overruled and motion for peremptory writ denied, held that relator, having consented to irregular procedure, could not complain. State v. District Board of School Dist. No. 1, 135 Wis. 619, 116 NW 232. Defendant held not entitled to complain that master considered findings prepared by parties, where he suggested their submission and both parties agreed to and participated in course pursued. Leslie E. Keeley Co. v. Hargreaves, 236 Ill. 316, 86 NE 132. Right to trial by jury regularly chosen waived where counsel consented to set trial at time when he knew picked-up jury would have to be used. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Coggin, 44 Tex. Civ. App. 423, 18 Tex. Ct. Rep. 75, 99 SW 1052. Where party stipulated that court might make findings of fact, he could not complain of failure to submit case to jury. Dooley v. Burlington Gold Min. Co. [Ariz.] 100 P 797. Consent to admission of evidence as condition precedent to reopening case held to preclude objection to its admission. Cutter-Tower Co. v. Clements, 5 Ga. App. 291, 63 SE 58. Withdrawal of objection to evidence is consent to its admission and precludes subsequent objection. Ham v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 117 SW 108. Where counsel did not object to particular instruction, but after procuring modification of another one stated in response to question as to whether he had anything more to say, that he was through, held that he could not question such instruction on appeal. Cucciarre v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 38. Statement of counsel held acquiescence in what court said on certain subject in charge. Hoagland v. Canfield, 160 F 146. Counsel held to have waived right to raise question that certain requests were not charged by stating, when court offered to read all requests, that he would not insist on his doing so. Jones v. Parker, 81 S. C. 214, 62 SE 261.

79. Party who sits by without objection and permits general verdict to be dispensed with and answers or findings upon particular questions of fact to be returned into open court, and afterwards files motion for judgment in his favor thereon, cannot complain because no general verdict was returned. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796. Where, at beginning of trial, defendants admitted execution of note sued on, and assumed burden of proof when it was later offered in evidence by plaintiff in rebuttal, held that it could not be excluded on ground that its execution must be proved by witness by whom it was attested. Ford v. Parker, 131 Ga. 443, 62 SE 526.

80. Where plaintiffs appeared in court to which case was transferred and contested suit, held that they could not contend that court had no jurisdiction because no order of transfer was made by court in which action was originally brought. Kruegel v. Daniels [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1108. Where, after judgment on demurrer to complaint, plaintiff does not except, but amends so as to meet views of court, he acquiesces in the judgment, and cannot assign it for error. Rice v. McAdams, 149 N. C. 29, 62 SE 774. On second trial, court ruled that certain evidence was inadmissible under complaint and granted plaintiff leave to withdraw juror, ordering him to pay $30 trial fee. Thereafter, special term allowed amendment on payment of $10 costs only on assumption that theory of first trial and appeal was that complaint was sufficient to admit such evidence. Held that plaintiff was not at liberty or in which he has acquiesced,[81] nor can he complain of errors which he might have obviated.[82]

Change of theory. See 10 C. L. 1577—The theory on which the case was tried below will be adhered to on appeal,[83] whether such theory relates to the pleadings,[84] the to urge such view since he acquiesced in court's ruling. Purcell v. Hoffman House, 115 NYS 778.

81. Where defendant acquiesced in removal of administrator from making of order until petition for rehearing on appeal from judgment in action on bond given by administrator on sale of land, held that it was too late to question validity of order of removal. Moore v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 1096. Where counsel withdrew question on being asked by court whether he thought it proper, held that he could not contend that court erred in excluding the testimony. Beck v. Ann Arbor R. Co. [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 141, 120 NW 983. Where ruling striking answer as not responsive plainly invited further examination, but counsel did not pursue subject further, held that he could not complain. Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 980, 118 NW 922. Where counsel was permitted on cross-examination of expert to ask for description of certain muscles, and stated that he did not desire witness to give their technical names, held that he could not complain of ruling that witness need not give such names. Burton v. Neill [Iowa] 118 NW 302. Cannot complain of admission of certain evidence in rebuttal where participated therein. Van Cleve v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 116. Defendant held not entitled to complain of misleading instruction where he might have taken steps to protect himself but did not. Poull & Co. v. Foy-Hays Const. Co. [Ala.] 48 S 785. Cannot complain of failure to submit question to jury where acquiesced in submission of another one. Campbell v. Long Island R. Co., 127 App. Div. 258, 111 NYS 120. Defendant not entitled to new trial on ground of surprise where moved for directed verdict after introduction of surprising evidence. Remington Typewriter Co. v. Simpson [Neb.] 120 NW 428.

82. Where plaintiff failed to take advantage of opportunity to offer oral testimony of witness, but objected to having her brought into court, he could not complain of refusal to admit her ex parte deposition. Holland v. Riggs [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 167.

83. Reed v. Reed, 80 Conn. 401, 68 A 849; Mitchell v. Nelson, 142 Ill. App. 534; Conrad v. Hausen [Ind.] 85 NE 710; Siemonsma v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 137 Iowa, 607, 115 NW 230; Anderson v. Maxwell [Miss.] 48 S 227; Huss v. Heydt Bakery Co., 210 Mo. 44, 108 SW 63; Sharp v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 213 Mo. 517, 111 SW 1154; Hof v. St. Louis Transit Co., 213 Mo. 445, 111 SW 1166; Taylor & Sons Brick Co. v. Kansas City So. R. Co. [Mo.] 112 SW 59; Morrison v. Roehl [Mo.] 114 SW 981; Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969; Fulwider v. Trenton Gas L. & P. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 508; Beauchamp v. Taylor, 132 Mo. App. 92, 111 SW 609; Lowenstein v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 115 SW 2; Erie R. Co. v. Waite, 63 Misc. 372, 114 NYS 1115; Morris v. Salt Lake City [Utah] 101 P 373. Where party proceeds below in manner inconsistent with intent to assert right to which he might be entitled, he will not be permitted to shift his position on appeal and claim for first time a benefit which he has rejected in all prior stages of the proceeding. Madison v. Octave Oil Co. [Cal.] 99 P 176. That bank and W., trustee, were cross complainants in cross complaint filed in bank's behalf. First Nat. Bank v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank [Ind.] 86 NE 417. That all notes sued on were practically within same legal status. Hunter v. Allen, 127 App. Div. 572, 111 NYS 820. Counsel by their conduct held to have treated question as embraced in and settled by special verdict, or as established by undisputed evidence. Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 NW 758. Where both parties tried case on theory that burden was on defendant to show that signature to note was forgery, when it was in fact on plaintiff, error in permitting defendant to open and close held not ground for reversal. Nagle v. Schnadt [Ill.] 88 NE 178. Where plaintiff conceded in writing below that defendant's default was due to inadvertence and excusable neglect, and questions involved were submitted on that theory, held that he could not change his position on appeal and assert that default was not excusable. Aaron v. Holmes [Utah] 99 P 450. Where it was assumed throughout trial that street was city street, held too late to raise question on argument after close of evidence that it had characteristics of rural highway. Gannett v. Independent Tel. Co., 55 Misc. 555, 106 NYS 3. Statement in findings of fact that relator proceeded on certain theory held not to render such theory binding on supreme court, where it did not appear from general tenor of information or from character of evidence that parties acquiesced therein. State v. Scott [Ind.] 86 NE 409. Cannot urge on appeal that recital in deed was admissible to show fact recited, where was not relied upon or offered for that purpose below, and instruction to jury not to so consider it was not objected to. Ryle v. Davidson [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 823.

84. Theory of complaint. Bell v. Edwards, 78 S. C. 490, 59 SE 535. That complaint was based on statute instead of cause of action at common law. Zeller, McClellan & Co. v. Vinardi [Ind. App.] 85 NE 378. Where on appeal appellant claimed that action was based wholly upon a statute, and appellee that independently of statute judgment could be upheld as common-law action, held that supreme court was required to determine theory of action according to theory upon which it was presented to trial court, and in doing so would look to pleadings and entire record and briefs of counsel. Knight & Jillson Co. v. Miller [Ind.] 87 NE 823. That answer sets up defense of laches. Wilder's Ex'x v. Wilder [Vt.] 72 A 203. Defendant's plea of payment was broad enough to cover payment before or after suit brought, and plaintiff joined issue thereon without objection. Defendant below contended that payment was made before suit brought, and court found that it was made after and rendered judgment for defendant. Held that, by form of the action,[85] the issues[86] of law[87] or of fact,[88] parties,[89] the evidence,[90]

contending that plea was broad enough to admit proof of payment after suit brought, defendant was not taking advantage of informality of his own plea for first time on appeal. Stevens v. Standard Oil Co. [Ala.] 47 S 140. Where both parties without objection joined in rehearing of demurrer to complaint on motion for judgment after answer filed, and treated complaint, bill of particulars and affirmative allegations of answer as true, held that practice could not be criticised on appeal. Singers-Bigger v. Young [C. C. A.] 166 F 82. Where there was no plea setting up extension of time of payment as releasing surety, held that question of extension was not presented by record in supreme court, though it was considered in trial and appellate courts. Commercial L. & T. Co. v. Mallers, 237 Ill. 119, 86 NE 728. Where all parties treated amendment to complaint as duly made, it will be so treated on appeal. Springfield Shingle Co. v. Edgecomb Mill Co. [Wash.] 101 P 233.

85. That action was one in tort. Wabash R. Co. v. Reynolds, 41 Ind. App. 678, 84 NE 992. That case was equity case. Ware v. White, 81 Ark. 220, 108 SW 831; Northup's Trustees v. Sumner's Trustee [Ky.] 116 SW 699. That case was law case. Rowe v. Allison [Ark.] 112 SW 395; Pennebaker Bros. v. Bell City Mfg. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 829; Locust v. Caruthers [Okl.] 100 P 520. That action should have been at law instead of in equity. Wait v. Mystic Workers of the World [Iowa] 119 NW 72. That proper remedy was by suit in equity instead of action at law. Reed v. Engel, 142 Ill. App. 413.

86. Where instruction given at plaintiff's request assumed validity of contract, held that plaintiff could not contend on appeal that contract was invalid. Woodbridge Ice Co. v. Semon Ice Cream Corp. [Conn.] 71 A 577. Issues on appeal must be same as those made below. Vicksburg Mfg. & Supply Co. v. J. H. Jaffray Const. Co. [Miss.] 49 S 116; Hartshorn v. Wright County Dist. Ct. [Iowa] 120 NW 479; Nueces Valley Irr. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 633.

Where treat issues as regularly made up, cannot contend to the contrary on appeal. Want of plea. First Nat. Bank v. Miller, 235 Ill. 135, 85 NE 312; Planters' & Merchants' Independent Packet Co. v. Webb [Ala.] 46 S 977. Failure of defendant made party by amended petition to answer separately. Holland v. Coleman [Ky.] 114 SW 305. That plea was not at issue. Dietrich v. Hutchinson, 81 Vt. 160, 69 A 661. Failure to reply. De Buhr v. Thompson [Mo. App.] 114 SW 557; Krbel v. Krbel [Neb.] 120 NW 935; American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. v. Smith [Neb.] 120 NW 1113. Defendant held to have waived and abandoned its cross complaint and rights conferred on it by default. Madison v. Octave Oil Co. [Cal.] 99 P 176. Complainant failed to file formal answer to defendant's cross complaint, and defendants caused default to be entered. Held that, case having been heard upon proofs on all disputed questions of fact, supreme court would, by an order nunc pro tunc, set aside default and treat cross claims as answered by denial in all essential particulars. Hickman v. Chaney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 1003, 118 NW 993.

Issue of law or fact: Where plaintiff tried case on theory that evidence on certain issue made question for jury, he could not contend that court should have directed verdict for him. Grimes v. Cole, 133 Mo. App. 522, 113 SW 685. Where question of contributory negligence was treated by both parties as issue of fact for jury, held that defendant could not complain of such submission though plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law. Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 118 SW 496.

87. Claims of law are to be construed with reference to matters in fact being litigated. Greist v. Gowdy [Conn.] 71 A 555. Contention that law of state under which defendant fraternal benefit association was organized did not permit issuance of certificate sued on cannot be first raised on appeal. Ancient Order of the Pyramids v. Dixon [Colo.] 100 P 427.

Constitutional questions will not be considered on appeal where they were not raised below. State v. Birmingham [Ala.] 48 S 843; In re McWhirter's Estate, 235 Ill. 607, 85 NE 918; Haas Elec. & Mfg. Co. v. Springfield Amusement Park Co., 236 Ill. 452, 86 NE 248; Vermilion Special Drainage Dist. Com'rs v. Shockey, 238 Ill. 237, 87 NE 335; Walker v. Dunham [Mo. App.] 115 SW 1086; Lyon v. Bertolero [S. D.] 120 NW 766; Southern R. Co. v. King [C. C. A.] 160 F 332. Parties who did not attempt to register their titles below held not entitled to question constitutionality of section of registration act, where court was not at any time called upon to pass on question. McMahon v. Rowley, 238 Ill. 31, 87 NE 66. Where constitutional question first arose on motion after judgment, it was timely presented in motions for new trial and in arrest. Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan [Mo.] 117 SW 722. Question held raised too late by motion for new trial. Hartzler v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 117 SW 1124.

88. Where point that evidence failed to show certain fact specifically was not made below, and court assumed that plaintiff's evidence related to it, held that case would, on plaintiff's appeal, be determined on facts so assumed. Welton v. Crystal Tp., 152 Mich. 486, 15 Det. Leg. N. 247, 116 NW 390. Case must be tried on the pleadings filed below. Burrow v. Hicks [Iowa] 120 NW 727. Question not within issues as raised by pleadings, not considered. Anderson v. Mitchell [Wash.] 98 P 751. Issue on which case was not put to jury, eliminated. Riggs v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 969. New trial will not be granted solely for purpose of raising issues pleaded but abandoned below. La Roche v. Mulhall, 112 NYS 1115. Contention that question of negligence was narrowed to specific act of negligence alleged in notice of injury and complaint cannot be first raised on appeal. Campbell v. Long Island R. Co., 127 App. Div. 258, 111 NYS 120. Where parties, with consent of court, unite in trying case on theory that particular matter is within issues, they will not be permitted to depart therefrom on review. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wilhoit [C. C. A.] 160 F 440; Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Buchanan [Ark.] 114 SW 694; Peck v. Noee [Cal.]

grounds of recovery[91] or defense,[92] burden of proof,[93] measure of damages,[94] or

97 P 865; Triple Tie Ben. Ass'n v. Wood [Kan.] 98 P 219; Wilcox v. Court of Honor [Mo. App.] 114 SW 1155. That pleadings embraced all matters considered by referee in making up findings. Johnson v. Carter [Iowa] 120 NW 320. For purpose of determining relevancy of evidence, court will regard as issue of fact to be tried that which was tendered and accepted as such by parties in court below, without objection. Axel v. Kraemer, 75 N. J. Law, 688, 70 A 367. Where case was tried on theory that payment of usury was only issue, plaintiff could not contend that judgment should be reversed because usury was not pleaded in answer. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank v. Zook, 133 Mo. App. 603, 113 SW 678. Defendant held not entitled to contend that opinion of architect was final in absence of fraud and that no fraud was alleged in reply, in view of requested instructions, etc. Moore v. Board of Regents for Normal School in Dist. No. 2 [Mo.] 115 SW 6. Cannot raise question of variance where voluntarily litigate issues not made by pleadings. Vaillancour v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 106 Minn. 348, 119 NW 53. Where pleadings were treated as sufficient to sustain cause of action on which plaintiff recovered. Epstein v. Gordon, 114 NYS 438. Where case was tried on theory of substantial performance, though complete performance was alleged. Rubin v. J. C. Gabler Co., 127 App. Div. 275, 111 NYS 124. Rule that, when case has been tried and decided upon theory that evidence was within issues made by pleadings, defeated party may not avail himself of objection that pleadings did not warrant admission of such evidence, held not applicable where plaintiff in no way recognized issues as being in case, and evidence, though not specifically objected to, was so clearly outside any issue made by answer that trial court was justified in disregarding it. Sun Ins. Office v. Heiderer [Colo.] 99 P 39.

89. Where parties saw fit, without formal amendment, to proceed and try case as though certain person not made a party had been impleaded as partner, held that defendant could not claim fatal variance in proof. Hambro Distilling & Distributing Co. v. Price & Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 541. Objection that defendant was misnamed not available where it made no objection below, asserted in its answer to suit that it was the defendant therein, and sought recovery in its favor from plaintiff on account of transactions between them set out in petition. Sullivan-Sanford Lumber Co. v. Cline [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 175. One sued as "J. G., Trustee," held not entitled to contend on appeal that he was sued individually, where he appeared and prosecuted appeal as trustee. Brimson v. Arnold, 236 Ill. 495, 86 NE 254. That beneficiary and trustee were cross complainants in cross complaint filed in behalf of beneficiary. First Nat. Bank v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank [Ind.] 84 NE 1077.

90. That paper was not formally offered in evidence where it was treated by both parties as being in evidence. Sieberts v. Spangler [Iowa] 118 NW 292. That note and mortgage on which action was founded were in evidence, though not formally introduced. Watson v. Bowman [Iowa] 119 NW 623.

91. Peterson v. Conlan [N. D.] 119 NW 367; Harris v. First Nat. Bank [Okl.] 95 P 781. Cannot rely on different cause of action than that pleaded, proved and relied on below. MacArdell v. Olcott, 189 N. Y. 368, 82 NE 161. Where petition alleges specific grounds of negligence, others cannot be relied on on appeal. Fulwider v. Trenton Gas L. & P. Co. [Mo.] 116 SW 508. Remedy. Luigart v. Lexington Turf Club [Ky.] 113 SW 814. Theory of cause in mandamus proceedings. State v. Schnitger, 16 Wyo. 479, 95 P 698. Dempster v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 37 Mont. 335, 96 P 717. Where defendant tried case on theory that, if plaintiff was entitled to recover interest, it was at rate fixed by foreign statute, he could not contend that such statute was improperly admitted in evidence because not pleaded, and hence no interest could be recovered in excess of rate fixed by statute of forum. Santa Clara Valley Mill & Lumber Co. v. Prescott, 238 Ill. 625, 87 NE 851. Where, in suit for infringement of patent, claimant sought below to recover for lost profits only, he could not recover in ap-stipulations.[95] This rule is, however, applied only in support of the judgment, and not where it would result in overthrowing it.[96]

§ 3. Mode of objection, whether by objection, motion, or request.[97]—See 10 C. L. 1578—The manner of raising objections to pleadings,[98] parties [99] and depositions [1] is fully treated in separate articles. Evidence admitted without objection to the question eliciting it will not be excluded on motion [2] unless the answer of the witness is not responsive,[3] or unless its improper character does not appear until after its admission.[4] Counsel should object to improper argument and move to exclude it.[5] Objection on the ground of variance must be made by objection to the evidence when offered,[6] or by a request for an instruction directing the jury to disregard evidence not within the issues raised by the pleadings.[7] An objection to the theory on which a case is tried may be saved by excepting to the instructions given.[8] A request is essential to the review of a failure or refusal to make findings,[9] or a failure to submit a particular question in a special verdict.[10]

§ 4. Necessity and time of objection.[11]—See 10 C. L. 1579—Except as to fundamental errors,[12] or errors apparent from the record proper,[13] a timely [14] objection pellate court on basis of reasonable royalty. McSherry Mfg. Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 34.

95. [Mo.] 115 SW 523; Ershowsky v. Korn, 113 NYS 478; Carroll v. Farley, 113 NYS 478; Kenway v. Hoffman [Wash.] 98 P 98. Charge not objected to is the law of the case. As to measure of damages. Harrison v. Argyle Co., 128 App. Div. 81, 112 NYS 477. Cannot object that interest was improperly allowed, where verdict including it was in exact conformity to instructions, which were not objected to on that ground, and there was no request with respect thereto, and only question of liability was disputed before referee. Locomobile Co. v. De Witt, 59 Misc. 221, 110 NYS 413.

Time of objection: Where mistake of fact is made by court in stating party's claims in instruction, he must have same corrected at once. Middlebrook v. Slocum, 152 Mich. 286, 15 Det. Leg. N. 322, 116 NW 422. Must call attention to obviously unintentional misstatements and verbal inaccuracies in charge before jury retires. Waligora v. St. Paul Foundry Co. [Minn.] 119 NW 395. Must call attention to variance between complaint and charge before case is finally submitted to jury. Id.

submitted to jury not open to consideration where no request for submission was made, but both parties moved for directed verdict. Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349. Cannot complain that had no opportunity to amend on sustaining of demurrer where made no request to amend. Healey v. Zobel [Colo.] 101 P 56; Lott v. Barnes & Jessup Co. [Fla.] 48 S 994. Cannot object to form of referee's report on appeal where made no motion to refer same back for correction, but acted on it without objection. Greason v. Holcomb, 116 NYS 336. Cannot complain that counsel stated reasons why continuance should not be granted in presence of jury, where made no motion to exclude jury. Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Stein, 133 Ill. App. 169. Written motion to suppress deposition necessary to save objections to manner and form of taking it. Wabash R. Co. v. Newton, Weller & Wagner Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 992. Must make motion to open case to supply omitted evidence at first opportunity. Bittrick v. Consolidated Imp. Co. [Wash.] 99 P 303. Defendants held not entitled to complain that plaintiff's evidence alone was heard after case was reopened where made no request for permission to introduce evidence. Reiff v. Coulter, 47 Wash. 678, 92 P 436. Where was no request to submit particular issue and no such issue was tendered, held that failure to submit it could not be objected to after verdict. Clark's Code, § 395. Rich v. Morisey, 149 N. C. 37, 62 SE 762. Where allegation of complaint was denied under oath, and no evidence thereof was offered, and issue was not submitted and there was no request for its submission, held that such issue would not be noticed on appeal. Blackburn v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 874. Held that request that jury be ordered to answer interrogatories, or objection to reception of verdict without such answers, was necessary to save objection that they were not answered. Freedman v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Conn.] 71 A 901. If plaintiff desired to submit interrogatories, or to have those presented by defendant answered in case of verdict for defendant, held that they should have so requested before verdict was rendered. Id. Failure to make application for leave to answer argument held to preclude objection that no opportunity to answer it was offered. Thomas v. Fos [Wash.] 98 P 663. Before appeal can be prosecuted from void judgment or clerical misprision, motion to correct judgment in lower court must first be acted upon by that tribunal. Duff v. Combs [Ky.] 117 SW 259. Error assigned on overruling motion for new trial cannot be considered, where no request to file reasons for overruling motion, and none were given. Groat v. Detroit United R. Co., 153 Mich. 165, 15 Det. Leg. N. 395, 116 NW 1081.

38. Where no motion for judgment non obstante upon special findings, cannot consider whether they were sufficient to support general verdict. Alexander v. Oklahoma City [Okl.] 98 P 943.

39. Failure to move to dismiss because no complaint was filed held election to try particular issue. Johnson v. Pelletreau, 115 NYS 129. Where insufficiency of evidence as to minor details, which could have been readily supplied, was not made subject of properly detailed motion for dismissal, held that it would be inferred that evidence was deemed by all parties to be sufficient. Ward v. Jonasson & Co., 114 NYS 57. Failure to deliver copies of writ for nonresident defendants held waived where motion to dismiss on that ground was not filed within time allowed for dilatory pleas. Wade v. Wade's Adm'r, 81 Vt. 275, 69 A 826. Dilatory objection must be raised at earliest opportunity, which cannot be later than time allowed for dilatory pleadings by the rule of court in a case governed by the rule. Id.

40. Failure to move for directed verdict concedes that there is question for jury. Epstein v. Gordon, 114 NYS 438. Question whether evidence fairly tends to establish cause of action can only be saved by asking for written instructions to direct verdict. Reiter v. Standard Scale & Supply Co., 237 Ill. 374, 86 NE 745. Question whether evidence in record tends to support finding of facts of appellate court cannot be reviewed in supreme court in absence of motion in trial court for directed verdict made by defeated party at close of all the evidence and an exception to ruling thereon if adverse. Scheevers v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 235 Ill. 227, 85 NE 192.

41. Evidence: Irresponsive answer to proper question. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Sharp [Ala.] 47 S 279; Barnes v. Danville St. R. & L. Co., 235 Ill. 566, 85 NE 921; McMahon v. Chicago City R. Co., 239 Ill. 334, 88 NE 223; Brooks v. Brierton, 142 Ill. App. 369. Where witness in answer to question calling for fact, gives opinion or conclusion. Midgette v. Branning Mfg. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 5. Where evidence is shown to be inadmissible after its admission. Pratt v. Seamans, 43 Colo. 517, 95 P 929. Where objectionable character is first discovered on cross-examination. Graham v. Matton City R. Co., 234 Ill. 483, 84 NE 1070; Beans v. Denny [Iowa] 117 NW 1091; McCormack v. O'Connor, 62 Misc. 297, 114 NYS 1030. Testimony rendered incompetent by subsequent introduction of pleadings. Neumeyer v. Hooker, 131 App. Div. 592, 116 NYS 204. Where question is in itself unobjectionable, but answer goes beyond what is called for, and incompetent or improper testimony is produced. Elliff v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., [Or.] 99 P 76. Evidence admitted subject to exception. Moneyweight Scale Co. v. McCormick [Md.] 72 A 537. Motion to exclude must be made as soon as inadmissibility is discovered. Holland v. Riggs [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 167. Objection to evidence on ground that witness had not qualified himself to testify as to value held too late when first made by motion to strike it out after testimony had been closed and other party had made his argument to jury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Gillespie [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 628.

Pleadings [See, also, Pleading, 12 C. L. 1323]: Defendant held not entitled to complain of admission of evidence in support of allegations of complaint as to elements of damages not recoverable, where he did not attempt to have such allegations stricken or request instructions that such elements should not be considered. Fass v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 235.

42. As to practice on motions for new trial, see New Trial and Arrest of Judgment, 12 C. L. 1070.

Arizona: In absence of motion for new trial, can only determine whether complaint states cause of action and whether facts as found are sufficient to sustain judgment. McDonald v. Cox [Ariz.] 100 P 457. Motion on that ground necessary to obtain review of denial of motion for instructed verdict (Pickthall v. Steinfeld [Ariz.] 100 P 779), or of sufficiency of evidence to support judgment or findings of fact on which it is based (McDonald v. Cox [Ariz.] 100 P 457). Civ. Code 1901, p. 1476, as amended by Laws 1907, c. 74. Id.

Arkansas: Motion on that ground necessary to review of admission of evidence. Mitchell v. Smith [Ark.] 111 SW 806.

Florida: Motion necessary to save question of sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict or finding, though case is tried by judge without jury, and though finding and judgment were excepted to. Manatee County State Bank v. Wade [Fla.] 47 S 927.

Georgia: Rulings sustaining or overruling demurrers, or allowing or disallowing amendments to pleadings, cannot be made grounds of motion for new trial, but direct exceptions must be filed thereto in order to obtain review thereof. Hawkins v. Studdard [Ga.] 63 SE 852.

Idaho: Orders and rulings to which no exception is necessary under Rev. St. 1887, § 4427, can only be reviewed on order granting or refusing new trial. Perkins v. Loux, 14 Idaho, 607, 95 P 694.

Illinois: Motion and exception to order overruling same necessary to review sufficiency of evidence to support verdict. Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928; Cattinari v. Delmagro, 135 Ill. App. 452; Myers v. Buell, 142 Ill. App. 467; Gschwendtner v. Gebhardt, 142 Ill. App. 260. Weight of evidence. Eckels v. Hawkinson, 138 Ill. App. 627. Propriety of giving or refusing instructions, or admission or rejection of evidence, may be reviewed where rulings of court have been excepted to and incorporated in bill of exceptions, regardless of fact that no motion for new trial was made. Laws 1837, p. 109, § 2; Laws 1857, p. 103; Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 110, § 78. Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928. Hence failure to except to order overruling motion does not preclude consideration of such questions in such case, where they are among grounds specified in written motion. Id. Motion held necessary to review of rulings admitting or excluding evidence. Cattinari v. Delmagro, 135 Ill. App. 452; Eckels v. Hawkinson, 138 Ill. App. 627; Tokheim Mfg. Co. v. Stoyles, 142 Ill. App. 198; Gschwendtner v. Gebhardt, 142 Ill. App. 260. Motion not necessary to preserve ruling directing verdict (Myers v. Buell, 142 Ill. App. 467), or to procure review of instructions given and refused (Eckels v. Hawkinson, 138 Ill. App. 627; Cattinari v. Delmagro, 135 Ill. App. 452). Motion is neither required nor authorized in cases tried by court without jury. Climax Tag Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873; Schofield v. Thomas, 236 Ill. 417, 86 NE 122; Siegmund v. Strackbein, 140 Ill. App. 454. Where objector to municipal assessments failed to question validity of ordinance at trial and did not preserve evidence and exceptions by bill of exceptions taken at same term, held that he could not preserve question for review by motion for new trial made 14 terms later. City of Chicago v. Hulbert, 235 Ill. 204, 85 NE 222.

Indiana: Motion on that ground necessary to review of error in instructions (Parker Land & Imp. Co. v. Ayers [Ind. App.] 87 NE 1062), or overruling of motion to suppress deposition whether before or during trial (Louisville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Worrell [Ind. App.] 86 NE 78), or error in overruling petition for removal of case to federal court (Hercules Torpedo Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 87 NE 254), or error in submitting case to jury for new trial and in refusing to submit it to court (Kelley v. Bell [Ind.] 88 NE 58).

Iowa: Motion not necessary to review of alleged error in giving instructions which were excepted to when given. Scurlock v. Boone [Iowa] 120 NW 313.

Kansas: Alleged errors not considered where no motion. Work v. Fidelity Oil & Gas Co. [Kan.] 98 P 801.

Kentucky: Motion necessary to review rulings at trial. Burrow v. Maxon [Ky.] 112 SW 661. Motion on that ground necessary to review of error in admission of evidence (City of Louisville v. Lambert [Ky.] 116 SW 261), or objection that judgment was rendered against one defendant only (American-German Nat. Bank v. Gray & Dudley Hardware Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 547, 110 SW 393). In penal action in absence of motion and grounds for new trial, court can only consider whether pleadings support judgment. Commonwealth v. Standard Oil Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 1074, 112 SW 632.

Michigan: Motion necessary to save objection that verdict is excessive (Cascarella v. National Grocery Co., 151 Mich. 15, 14 Det. Leg. N. 838, 114 NW 857; Dice v. Sherberneau, 152 Mich. 601, 15 Det. Leg. N. 255, 116 NW 416; Wescott v. Wade, 153 Mich. 340, 15 Det. Leg. N. 489, 116 NW 1002), or contention that case was submitted on erroneous theory (Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 980, 118 NW 922).

Minnesota: Where motion was not considered on merits because made too late, held that assignment of error that evidence was insufficient to sustain verdict could not be considered. Wehring v. Modern Woodmen of America [Minn.] 119 NW 245. Ruling not assigned as error in motion not considered. Moneyweight Scale Co. v. Hjerpe, 106 Minn. 47, 118 NW 62.

Missouri: Motion on that ground necessary to consideration of contention that jury was not waived (Gillian v. Schmidt, 131 Mo. App. 666, 111 SW 611), or the rejection of evidence (Almond v. Modern Woodmen of America, 133 Mo. App. 382, 113 SW 695), or ruling limiting number of witnesses (Felver v. Central Elec. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 980), or error in placing burden of proof (Barnes v. William Waltke & Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 7), or in giving instruction (Almond v. Modern Woodmen of America, 133 Mo. App. 382, 113 SW 695).

Montana: Motion on that ground necessary to raise question that verdict is excessive. Dempster v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 37 Mont. 335, 96 P 717.

Nebraska: Motion on that ground neces-continuance,[43] or in arrest of judgment,[44] or for modification of the judgment,[45]

sary to review of rejection of evidence (Tyson v. Bryan [Neb.] 120 NW 940), or instructions (Pennington County Bank v. Bauman [Neb.] 116 NW 669), or error in failing to submit particular issue to jury (Helwig v. Aulabaugh [Neb.] 120 NW 162), or sufficiency of evidence to sustain findings and judgment of district court affirming judgment of county court correcting order admitting will to probate (In re Swan's Estate [Neb.] 118 NW 478). Motion not necessary to secure review of equity case (Ogden v. Garrison [Neb.] 117 NW 714), or ruling striking out parts of petition (Anderson v. Union Stockyards Co. [Neb.] 120 NW 1124). Where bill of exceptions has been quashed and therefore nothing remains for consideration on appeal except pleadings and decree, motion is not condition precedent to review. Walker v. Burtless [Neb.] 118 NW 113. Where special findings are in conflict with general verdict, party relying on verdict may, during term, and within three days of return of findings, move to vacate findings and for judgment on verdict, and, upon overruling of motion and entry of judgment on findings, may, within three days, and during term, move to vacate last recited order and thereby save all questions presented in motion to set aside findings, regardless of whether last motion was filed within three days of return of verdict. Platte County Bank v. Clark [Neb.] 115 NW 787. Is immaterial whether application to vacate findings be indorsed as motion for new trial or to set aside findings. Id. Held not necessary to include motion for vacation of general verdict. Id.

North Carolina: Where no motion was made to set verdict aside, finding as to certain issue not disturbed. Jones v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 205.

North Dakota: Sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict not reviewable in absence of motion. Rev. Codes 1905, § 7226. Landis Mach. Co. v. Konantz Saddlery Co. [N D.] 116 NW 333.

Oklahoma: Motion necessary to obtain review of errors occuring at trial, though case is tried to court without a jury. Ahren-Ott Mfg. Co. v. Condon [Okl.] 100 P 556. Cannot complain because no general verdict was rendered where question not presented by motion. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796. Where jury returned answers to specific questions submitted, and no motion for new trial was filed for re-examination of facts or to set aside such findings, held that only question left for trial court was to render judgment on facts found, and if, under pleadings, they supported judgment as rendered, same would not be disturbed on appeal. Id. Motion not necessary to review of errors apparent on judgment roll or record proper (Baker v. Hammett [Okl.] 100 P 1114), or to have supreme court determine reasonableness and justness of an order of corporation commission from which an appeal is prosecuted (Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Love [Okl.] 100 P 22; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Love [Okl.] 99 P 1081).

South Carolina: Sustaining objection to question on cross-examination, where only ground on which evidence would have been admissible was not called to trial court's attention by motion. Barrineau v. Charleston Consol. R. Gas & Elec. Co., 81 S. C. 20, 61 SE 1063.

Texas: Motion necessary to procure review of verdict on ground that it is not supported by evidence (Liljeblad v. Sasse [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 787), or failure to render judgment for amount admitted to be due (Morris v. Morris [Tex. Civ. App.] 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 809, 105 SW 242). Motion not necessary to render available errors in instructions. Farenthold v. Tell [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 635; Young v. State Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 476.

Utah: All orders, rulings and decisions made by trial court during trial, including his ruling in directing or refusing to direct a verdict, and all questions of fact in equity cases on which trial court has passed, including the findings, and also all errors in findings of fact and conclusions of law made by court in law cases, are reviewable without motion for new trial. Comp. Laws 1907, § 3304. Law v. Smith, 34 Utah, 394, 98 P 300; Neesley v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Utah] 99 P 1067.

West Virginia: Motion not necessary where case is tried by court without jury. Fisher v. Bell [W. Va.] 63 SE 620.

Wisconsin: Motion necessary to review sufficiency of evidence to support verdict. Cayouette v. Raddant Brew. Co., 136 Wis. 634, 118 NW 204; Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 NW 758. Motion for judgment, notwithstanding verdict cannot be treated as such a motion. Id. Motion is not condition precedent to review of ruling granting motion for directed verdict. Beebe v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 269, 118 NW 808.

Federal courts: Contents of motion do not limit or otherwise affect matters which may be embraced in assignment of errors. Owen v. Giles [C. C. A.] 157 F 825.

43. Request necessary to obtain review of refusal to grant continuance for absence of witness. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Lorton, 33 Ky. L. R. 689, 110 SW 857. Defendant cannot complain that he was not granted continuance after allowance of amendment to complaint, or time to meet new issues tendered thereby, where he did not request same. Harrison v. Carlson [Colo.] 101 P 76. Party who does not ask for continuance cannot complain of refusal to grant new trial on ground of surprise by evidence (Hobart Lee Tie Co. v. Keck [Ark.] 116 SW 183; Remington Typewriter Co. v. Simpson [Neb.] 120 NW 428), or complain of time when case was tried (City of Rock Island v. Larkin, 136 Ill. App. 579), or claim prejudice because answer was allowed to be amended at trial so as to set up new defense (Law v. Wilson, 77 Kan. 852, 95 P 1135). Claim of surprise because of variance between evidence introduced before referee and pleadings cannot be maintained, where there was no application for adjournment or re-reference to enable procurement of rebutting testimony. Brooklyn Creamery Co. v. Friday, 137 Wis. 461, 119 NW 126. Party held not entitled to contend that time between notice of hearing and date of such hearing was too short, where cause was submitted by both parties on date named, on pleadings and affidavits, and or a request for declarations of law,[46] or for instructions,[47] or to make findings of fact,[48] is sometimes essential to save certain questions for review. The form and sufficiency of such motions and requests is treated in a subsequent section.[49]

In Illinois where a jury case is by consent tried without a jury,[50] questions of law other than those relating to pleadings and the admission and sufficiency of the evidence[51] can be preserved only by submitting propositions of law.[52]

§ 6. Necessity of ruling.[53]—See 10 C. L. 1586—Question not presented to nor ruled on in the trial court will not be considered on appeal.[54] The court cannot shift responsibility for an erroneous ruling upon counsel.[55] without any suggestion that continuance should be granted. Hurt v. Hurt [Ala.] 47 S 260.

44. To obtain review of record proper. Baird v. Baird [Mo. App.] 113 SW 216. Where it appeared on face of judgment that trial court erroneously imposed penalty, held that objection was not waived by defendant's failure to include it in his motion in arrest. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Field [Mo. App.] 111 SW 907.

45. Fact that judgment was erroneous in taxing improper item as costs held not reviewable where was no motion to correct or modify it. Campbell v. State [Ind.] 87 NE 212. Where judgment recited that sum allowed on counterclaim was whole debt due, and neither party applied for modification thereof neither could complain thereof on appeal. Walker v. Ludwig, 55 Misc. 272, 105 NYS 157. Failure to move for modification as authorized by municipal court act (Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254) held not to preclude right to appeal from compromise judgment. Jacobs v. Cohen, 116 NYS 566. Right to have sufficiency of evidence to support findings reviewed on appeal from order overruling motion for new trial is not prejudiced by failure to move, under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 663, 663½, that judgment be set aside and another and different one entered. J. F. Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council [Cal.] 98 P 1027.

46. Home Sav. Bank v. Fiske [Mo. App.] 115 SW 495. Where no declarations of law were requested in action tried to court, and none were given by court of its own motion, assignments directed to holdings on questions of law cannot be reviewed. Hayden v. Ogden Sav. Bank [C. C. A.] 158 F 90.

47. For full discussion of necessity, time and sufficiency of requests for instructions in order to obtain an instruction, see topic Instructions, 12 C. L. 218. Where neither granted, rejected nor modified prayers, nor instructions given, referred to the pleadings, no question whether evidence made case within the pleadings could arise, and the only question was whether the evidence established a cause of action in any form. Rosenkovitz v. United R. & Elec. Co., 108 Md. 306, 70 A 108. Where prayers made no reference to pleadings, but were granted upon evidence and facts in case, appellate court in passing on them held confined to evidence to which they referred, and to be precluded from considering state of pleadings. Maryland Apartment House Co. v. Glenn, 108 Md. 377, 70 A 216. Since, if in argument counsel took erroneous view of law applicable to evidence, request for proper instructions as to its relevancy would have protected defendant, held that it would be presumed in absence of such a request that charge was proper upon point suggested. Lane v. Manchester Mills [N. H.] 71 A 629.

48. For full discussion of necessity, time and sufficiency of requests for findings, see Verdicts and Findings, 10 C. L. 1974.

49. See § 8, post.

50. Prac. Act, § 41, does not apply to case where parties are not entitled to jury trial. Kempton v. Funk, 139 Ill. App. 387. Not to contested proceedings for probate of will. Schofield v. Thomas, 236 Ill. 417, 86 NE 122. Propositions not necessary in certiorari proceedings. Bennett v. Millard, 142 Ill. App. 282.

51. Where no propositions are submitted, it will be presumed that court applied law correctly, and nothing is open to review except questions arising upon rulings upon evidence or pleadings and sufficiency of evidence to support finding. Ryan v. Schutt, 135 Ill. App. 554. Propositions held unnecessary in case tried in municipal court, it being patent that no such legal propositions were involved as necessitated submission of propositions to test legal principle applied by trial judge to facts as he interpreted them from the evidence. Siegmund v. Strackbein, 140 Ill. App. 454.

52. Where no proposition was presented by plaintiff stating correct measure of damages, and no proposition stating an incorrect measure was held by court, held that supreme court could not render judgment for full amount to which he was entitled, though he was entitled to larger judgment than that rendered. Sandoval Zinc Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 235 Ill. 306, 85 NE 219. That finding and judgment were contrary to evidence, and that court erred in applying law to facts, not considered, where no propositions submitted, and no exception to finding and judgment. Keller v. Jersey County, 142 Ill. App. 514. Offering in evidence bill of exceptions of former trial of same case, which included propositions and action of court thereon at former trial, held not to present such propositions for ruling or decision of court at second trial, nor to raise any question on appeal. Kempton v. Funk, 139 Ill. App. 387.

53. Search Note: See Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1417-1425; Dec. Dig. § 242; 8 A. & E. Enc. P. & P. 153.

54. Where evidence was conflicting, appellate court will not express opinion on issue of fact which record shows was not passed on by jury. Pierce v. Texas Rice Development Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 857. Supreme court not required to hear equity case de novo until there has been hearing and decision below. Novak v.

§ 7. Necessity and time of exceptions.[56] See 10 C. L. 1587—In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary,[57] and except in the case of fundamental errors

Novak, 137 Iowa, 519, 115 NW 1. Affidavit for continuance of hearing before an examiner, not appearing to have been brought to attention of examiner or the chancellor, not considered. Putnam v. Morgan [Fla.] 48 S 629. Where chancellor did not find that particular transfer was void as to creditors, held that that question was not open to consideration on appeal by another transferee from judgment declaring transfer to him to be fraudulent. Singletary v. Boener-Morris Candy Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 637. Right to open and close. Moore v. Kirby [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 632. Question whether plaintiff was entitled to injunction. Shawnee County Com'rs v. Jacobs [Kan.] 99 P 817. To be in position to avail of objection or motion must insist upon and obtain ruling and except thereto, or, if court refuses to rule, must except to such refusal. Chicago & Eastern Ill. R. Co. v. Heilingenstein, 137 Ill. App. 35. Question not considered where record did not show that lower court was requested to rule upon it. Rippy v. Southern R. Co., 80 S. C. 539, 61 SE 1010. Attack on rule against constable on ground that it was granted without any petition as basis therefor not considered where not made or decided below. Puckett v. State Banking Co., 130 Ga. 586, 61 SE 465. Cannot consider exceptions not passed on below. Rev. St. 1899, § 864. Hubbard v. Slavens [Mo.] 117 SW 1104. Order of Baltimore city court, in petition to rescind assessment by tax appeal court, that property was liable to assessment and legally assessed held not to present clear question of law for court of appeals, it being necessary to bring it before latter court by exception to ruling of lower court on prayer, or on admissibility of evidence or by demurrer, or in some way plainly presenting questions of law. Isaac Hamburger v. Baltimore, 106 Md. 479, 68 A 23; Fleming v. Northern Tissue Paper Mill, 135 Wis. 157, 114 NW 841. Cannot predicate error on failure to pass on motion to suppress depositions where does not appear that counsel called it to court's attention and asked for ruling thereon. Bidwell v. Sinclair [Okl.] 99 P 653. Assignments of error that verdict was against weight of evidence and was not supported by evidence held not open to consideration, where, though motion for new trial was filed, record did not show that it was ever acted upon. Thomas Bros. Co. v. Price [Fla.] 48 S 262.

Pleadings: Demurrer. Hobart Lee Tie Co. v. Keck [Ark.] 116 SW 183; Jones & Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1111; Wabash R. Co. v. Newton, Weller & Wagner Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 992; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Foster [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 797; Nagle v. Simmank [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 862. Demurrer will not be sustained on ground not presented or passed on below. Keystone Lumber Yard v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. [Miss.] 47 S 803. Where demurrer was submitted without argument, and trial judge was therefore not given opportunity to pass on counsel's contentions, held that they would not be considered on appeal. Frazee v. Piper [Wash.] 98 P 760. Motion to make more definite and certain. Apker v. Hoquiam [Wash.] 99 P 746. Filing of second amended complaint. Myers v. Holton [Cal. App.] 98 P 197. Insufficiency of plea. Jenness v. Simpson, 81 Vt. 109, 69 A 646.

Evidence: Admission of testimony. Kennedy v. Swift & Co., 140 Ill. App. 141; Bartlett v. Illinois Surety Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 729; Brackett's Adm'r v. Boreing's Adm'r, 33 Ky. L. R. 292, 110 SW 276; Neumeyer v. Hooker, 131 App. Div. 592, 116 NYS 204; Kozik v. Czapiewski, 136 Wis. 70, 116 NW 640. Cannot complain of failure to rule on objections, where did not insist on rulings or except to refusal to rule. Sims v. Hall [Mo. App.] 117 SW 103. Where court received evidence subject to objection of plaintiff, stating that he would rule on it later, held that plaintiff could not complain of its admission where he did not afterward bring matter to attention of court, nor ask for ruling, nor save an exception. Ashdown v. Ely [Iowa] 117 NW 976. Exclusion of question on cross-examination not considered, where only ground on which evidence would have been admissible was not called to trial court's attention. Barrineau v. Charleston Consol. R. Gas & Elec. Co., 81 S. C. 20, 61 SE 1063. Cross-examination was objected to on ground that defendant was not entitled to give evidence on its defense of fraud. Counsel for defendant did not claim that examination had reference to question of amount due, as to which it was proper, but only that it had reference to defense of fraud, and subsequently abandoned latter defense. Held that he could not contend on appeal that examination was proper on question of amount due, since court's attention was not called to that point, but was diverted from it. McDonnell v. McCoun, 127 App. Div. 302, 111 NYS 312. Failure to obtain ruling on objection goes only to admissibility or competency of evidence, and not to its probative force, and does not require supreme court to accept it as conclusive. Yellow Pine Lumber Co. v. Jerigan [Fla.] 47 S 945.

Misconduct of counsel. Howren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 236 Ill. 620, 86 NE 611; Plummer v. Boston El. R. Co., 198 Mass. 499, 84 NE 849; Shuler v. American Benev. Ass'n, 132 Mo. App. 123, 111 SW 618; Johnson v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 390; Kersten v. Werchman, 135 Wis. 1, 114 NW 499.

Instructions: Special exceptions to prayers. Modern Woodmen of America v. Cecil, 108 Md. 357, 70 A 331.

Judgment: That it was not in conformity to verdict. Segars v. Segars [S. C.] 63 SE 891.

55. Not by stating, on admitting evidence over defendant's objection, that he leaves responsibility with plaintiff's attorney. Mayer v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 152 Mich. 276, 15 Det. Leg. N. 231, 116 NW 429.

apparent on the face of the record,[58] a timely[59] exception to rulings[60] or to the

Perkins v. Loux, 14 Idaho, 607, 95 P 694. Where objection to evidence is interposed, and ruling made thereon, no exception is required. Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 5054 (Pierce's Code, § 671). Nelson v. Western Steam Nav. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 325. Before enactment of St. 1907, p. 715, c. 379, amending Code Civ. Proc. § 647, it was necessary to except to instructions. Randall v. Freed [Cal.] 97 P 669. Findings of fact need not be excepted to. Rev. Code Civ. Proc. § 293; Rev. Civ. Code § 2465. Kelly v. Wheeler [S. D.] 119 NW 994. Erroneous entry of judgment for costs against sureties on cost bond held reviewable though not raised below by motion to retax, question not having arisen until after entry of judgment, and it being unnecessary, under Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 5051, to except to judgment itself. Hamilton v. Witner, 50 Wash. 689, 97 P 1084. Exception not necessary to obtain review of ruling and decisions of municipal court upon trial. Municipal Court Act § 23, subd. 8. Siegmund v. Strackbein, 140 Ill. App. 454. Since under Revisal 1905, § 1542, no exception is required as to errors apparent on face of record, an appeal is itself a sufficient exception to the judgment. Ullery v. Guthrie, 148 N. C. 417, 62 SE 552. On appeal from judgment, any intermediate order involving merits and which necessarily affects judgment, appearing upon record transmitted, may be reviewed though not excepted to St. 1898, § 3070. Smith v. Wisconsin Veterans' Home Trustees [Wis.] 120 NW 403. Written exception changing answer to question of the special verdict incorporated into the order for judgment upon such verdict is within statute. Billington v. Eastern Wis. R. & L. Co., 137 Wis. 416, 119 NW 127. Order determining provisions of the judgment on subject of costs is reviewable whether excepted to or not. Jones v. Broadway Roller Rink Co., 136 Wis. 595, 118 NW 170. Statute applies only to orders which are part of record proper without appearing in bill of exceptions, and not to rulings or orders granting or refusing motions to direct verdict. Beebe v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 269, 118 NW 808.

58. Errors apparent on judgment roll or record proper. Baker v. Hammett [Okl.] 100 P 1114. Error in granting relief by way of injunction. Randall v. Freed [Cal.] 97 P 669. Ruling sustaining demurrer to complaint need not be excepted to. Rayburn v. Abrams [Wash.] 100 P 751. Verdict not directed may be set aside on motion in supreme judicial court if from whole record it appears clearly wrong, it not being necessary in such case to bring case to law court on exceptions to rulings of presiding justice. Simonds v. Maine Tel. & T. Co. [Me.] 72 A 175. In absence of exception, judgment can be questioned only for errors apparent from record proper. Schafer v. Gerbers, 234 Ill. 468, 84 NE 1064. Defense based on statute of which appellate court would take judicial notice held open to defendant on appeal though he failed to except to striking out of that portion of answer setting it up. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Wagner [C. C. A.] 167 F 75.

59. Must be taken at time decision is made. Climax Tag Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873. Except in cases specified by Code Civ. Proc. § 647, exception must, under Id. § 646, be taken when ruling is made. Randall v. Freed [Cal.] 97 P 669. Fact that trial was conducted by one not versed in law does not change rule. Id. Party held entitled to exception to denial of renewed motion though he did not except to denial of original motion. Stevenson v. Brooks, 62 Misc. 489, 115 NYS 118. Instructions not excepted to save in motion for new trial which was filed too late not considered. In re Overpeck's Will [Iowa] 120 NW 1044. Presentation of exceptions to instructions at special term within regular term held to have satisfied St. 1898, § 2869, requiring exceptions to instructions to be presented during pendency of trial term. American States Sec. Co. v. Milwaukee Northern R. Co. [Wis.] 120 NW 844. Objections and exceptions raising question that court erred in submitting case on theory of express contract alone, and in not permitting verdict on theory of quantum meruit, held timely though taken after jury had come into court with sealed verdict, but before it was presented to court. Code Civ. Proc. § 992. Walar v. Rechnitz, 126 App. Div. 424, 110 NYS 777. Exception to overruling of motion for new trial held sufficient, though not made until after judgment. Redd v. Carnahan [W. Va.] 64 SE 138. Judge granted new trial on ground that instruction was misleading. Plaintiffs failed to except at that time, but were permitted to make request for ruling on same question on motion for rehearing, and their exception to refusal to rule was allowed. Held that such exception was available. Loveland v. Rand, 200 Mass. 142, 85 NE 948.

Ruling of trial court that exception to adverse rulings is presumed will not be recognized on appeal. Green v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 211 Mo. 18, 109 SW 715. Exception is an objection upon a matter of law to the decision made by a court, judge, referee, or other judicial officer, in an action or proceeding. Comp. Laws 1907, § 3282. Johnson v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Utah] 100 P 390. Whether legal principals, with reference to which appellate court is bound to consider evidence, were correctly applied to case can only be raised by objection to evidence, by instructions or propositions of law, or by motion to direct verdict, and by exceptions properly preserved in trial court to action of that court in those particulars. Luckowitz v. Eagle Brew. Co., 235 Ill. 246, 85 NE 213. Defendants who had not been served with process and were not in court held not to have waived anything by failing to except to report of commissioners in partition proceedings. Deputy v. Dollarhide [Ind. App.] 86 NE 344. Where no exceptions to evidence or sufficiency of averments of bill, court may decree according to proof, regardless of whether allegata and probata correspond. Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 5, § 36. Reed v. Reed [Md.] 72 A 414.

Where case was submitted under general instructions which were not excepted to, held that prejudice to defendants by reason of denial of their special requests was not shown. Herlihy v. Little, 200 Mass. 284, 86 NE 294. Where there was no exception to submission of special interrogatory, nor to charge relating thereto, nor to refusal to charge answer to such interrogatory, held that it could not be contended that instruction was erroneous, particularly where objecting party moved to change answer, instead of to strike question and answer. Cook Land Const. & Prod. Co. v. Oconto Co., 134 Wis. 426, 114 NW 823. Cannot question proposition when did not except to its submission to jury. Campbell v. Long Island R. Co., 127 App. Div. 258, 111 NYS 120. Refusal to instruct. Wiley v. McNab [Cal. App.] 96 P 332; Mayhew v. Smith, 42 Colo. 534, 95 P 549; Hotchkiss v. Vanderpoel Co., 139 Ill. App. 325; Dawson v. Ash Grove White Lime Ass'n [Mo. App.] 113 SW 718; Helwig v. Aulabaugh [Neb.] 120 NW 162; Dimond Bros. v. Beckwith, Quinn & Co. [Wyo.] 98 P 889.

Direction of verdict. Vogelsang v. Fredkyn, 133 Ill. App. 356; Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349. Where court directed verdict for defendant and plaintiff took nonsuit and excepted to subsequent action of court in refusing to set aside nonsuit, held merits of case could not be reviewed, where no exception was saved to instructing verdict. Montei v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 149, 108 SW 1073.

Verdict or findings: That no general verdict was returned but only special one. Stanard v. Sampson [Okl.] 99 P 796. Conclusions of law. Theobald v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 87 NE 100. Findings. Board of Public Works of Niles v. Pinch, 152 Mich. 517, 15 Det. Leg. N. 289, 116 NW 408; Crowe & Co. v. Brandt, 50 Wash. 499, 97 P 503. Findings not excepted to are conclusive. Lauridsen v. Lewis, 50 Wash. 605, 97 P 663; Nueces Valley Irr. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 633; Jones v. De Muth, 137 Wis. 120, 118 NW 542; Hoffman v. Lincoln County, 137 Wis. 353, 118 NW 850. Exception to findings essential to consideration of contention that they are not supported by evidence (Van Eps v. Newald [Wis.] 120 NW 853; Hector v. Hector [Wash.] 99 P 13; Keller v. Jersey, 142 Ill. App. 514), or that they are mere conclusions, and are indefinite and confusing (Lauridsen v. Lewis, 50 Wash. 605, 97 P 663), or contention in divorce suit that amount allowed wife for future support was excessive (Hector v. Hector [Wash.] 99 P 13). Failure to except to finding that petitioner was duly organized and existing corporation, and had put itself in position to maintain condemnation proceedings, held to preclude respondent from objecting on certiorari that stockholders were not sufficient in numbers to warrant exercise of corporate functions. State v. Pacific County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 99 P 3. Sufficiency of findings to sustain judgment may be questioned though findings are not excepted to. Hector v. Hector [Wash.] 99 P 13; Nueces Valley Irr. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 633. Refusal to make corrections in and additions to findings. City of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. [Conn.] 70 A 650. Party desiring more particular finding on an issue must call attention of court thereto, and except to refusal to find, or to finding as made, if not satisfactory. Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 NW 758. Assignment of error alleging failure to make certain findings is bad where no requests for such findings were made and no exceptions to those made were filed. Kenworthy v. Equitable Trust Co., 218 Pa. 286, 67 A 469.

Judgment or decree. Wehrs v. Sullivan [Mo.] 116 SW 1104; W. P. Chamberlain Co. v. Tuttle [N. H.] 71 A 865; Owens v. Caraway [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 474. Direct bill of exceptions will not be considered unless there is at least a general exception to the final judgment. Jones v. Poole, 5 Ga. App. 113, 62 SE 711. Bill of exceptions dismissed where no exception to final judgment, but only to ruling on motion to strike defendant's plea. Ox Breeches Mfg. Co. v Bird, 1 Ga. App. 40, 57 SE 975. Omission of court to decide whether plaintiff was entitled to injunction. Shawnee County Com'rs v. Jacobs [Kan.] 99 P 817. Rendition of judgment after motion to dismiss. Nichol v. Ward [Mich.] 16 Det. Leg. N. 39, 120 NW 569. Sufficiency of evidence to support judgment cannot be considered, where no exception is preserved to findings and judgment. People v. Waite, 237 Ill. 164, 86 NE 572; Keller v. Jersey, 142 Ill. App. 514; Baumeister v. Fink, 141 Ill. App. 372. Case tried to court without jury. Climax Tag Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873. But if exceptions have been properly preserved to prior rulings, they are reviewable though there is no exception to the judgment. Baumeister v. Fink, 141 Ill. App. 372. In case tried to court without jury exception to judgment not necessary to review ruling refusing to hear certain offered testimony duly excepted to. Climax Mfg. Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873. Contra. Rosenweig v. McDermaid, 135 Ill. App. 595. Prior to amendment of 1907, no exception to entry of judgment was necessary to obtain review of judgment of municipal court. Wolf v. Scully, 137 Ill. App. 87. Modified judgment taking place of one originally entered held final one, so that exception to it was sufficient though original judgment was not excepted to. Washington County v. Murray [Colo.] 100 P 588. When decision to which exception relates is entered of record, it is sufficient if exception is noted at end thereof. Code §§ 3750, 3751. Warner v. Norwegian Cemetery Trustees [Iowa] 117 NW 39.

That court commented on evidence waived where words thought to constitute comment were not excepted to on that ground. In re Seattle [Wash.] 100 P 330. Ordering view by jury. Woodworth v. Detroit United R. Co., 153 Mich. 108, 15 Det. Leg. N. 374, 116 NW 549. Where there was no exception to submission of issue to jury or to instruction in regard to it, question whether court should have decided it as matter of law not presented. Jones v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 64 SE 205. Failure to submit question.

refusal to rule [61] is ordinarily necessary to preserve the same for review, though there are exceptions to this rule in some states.[62] In some states a specification of error on a motion for a new trial dispenses with the necessity for an exception [63] while a contrary rule prevails in others.[64]

§ 8. Form and sufficiency of objection, motion, or request.[65] See 10 C. L. 1589 A motion,[66] or an objection [67] not apparent of record [68] must point out specifically

Dismissal of motion upon a question of law reserved. Philadelphia v. Bilyeu, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 562. Refusal to allow plaintiff to file additional exception, setting up new matter, after rendition of judgment non obstante for defendant. Lewis v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 220 Pa. 317, 69 A 821. Denial of motion for new trial. Beebe v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 269, 118 NW 808; Snyder v. Michigan Trac. Co., 154 Mich. 418, 15 Det. Leg. N. 781, 117 NW 889; Blakeslee & Co. v. Reinhold Mfg. Co., 153 Mich. 230, 15 Det. Leg. N. 468, 117 NW 92. Comp. Laws 1897, § 10,504. Comstock v. Taggart [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 14, 120 NW 29. Errors occurring at trial for which new trial might be granted cannot be considered, where no exception to order overruling motion for new trial. Alexander v. Oklahoma City [Okl.] 98 P 943. In absence of statute there is no authority for taking of exception to order overruling motion for new trial. Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928. Dismissal of appeal from justice's court and denial of motion to amend notice of appeal, though overruling of motion for rehearing was excepted to. Tower Grove Planing Mill Co. v. Hornberg, 133 Mo. App. 305, 113 SW 222. Retaxation of costs. Nichols & Shepard Co. v. Steinkraus [Neb.] 119 NW 23.

61. Objections to evidence. Sims v. Hall [Mo. App.] 117 SW 103. Failure to rule on objection to argument of counsel. Cincinnati Trac. Co. v. Jennings, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 462.

62. Exception to overruling of demurrer to petition not necessary. Hanson v. Neal [Mo.] 114 SW 1073. Where case is submitted on agreed statement of facts or on demurrer, no exception is necessary, appeal being itself an exception in such case. Mershon & Co. v. Morris, 148 N. C. 48, 61 SE 647. Plaintiff is responsible for his own showing, and defendant is not called upon to remind him of insufficiency in weight of his evidence by exception thereto before submission of the cause. Despard v. Pearcy [W. Va.] 63 SE 871. Where attention of court was directed to fact that defendant wished to show that plaintiff had not incurred certain expenses claimed as damages, and court refused to admit evidence to that effect, held that it was not necessary to except to instruction authorizing such recovery in order to preserve question. Nelson v. Western Steam Nav. Co. [Wash.] 100 P 325.

63. To entitle party to review of ruling not formally excepted to on trial, it must be assigned as error in court below on motion for new trial. American Engine Co. v. Crowley, 105 Minn. 233, 117 NW 428. Assignments of error on appeal do not answer purpose of exceptions permitted to be taken on motion for new trial by Rev. Laws 1905, § 4200. Id. Correctness of charge not open to consideration, where no exception thereto was taken at trial and there was no motion for new trial. Id. Where defendant duly moves for new trial, he is not deemed to have waived his rights by not objecting and excepting to court's action in reserving decision. Code Civ. Proc. § 999. Smith v. Long Island R. Co., 129 App. Div. 427, 114 NYS 228. In absence of proper motion for a new trial, and appropriate exception to denial of same, order directing verdict will not be reviewed unless it is excepted to. Beebe v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 269, 118 NW 808.

64. Party moving for new trial can only rely on errors excepted to by him at trial. Code Civ. Proc. § 301, subd. 7. Traxinger v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [S. D.] 120 NW 770. Giving and refusing of instructions, not reviewed where no exceptions, though made grounds of motion for new trial. Cammack v. Southwestern Fire Ins. Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 142.

66. Ground of motion to dismiss levy because alleged fi. fa. did not follow judgment on which it was based held not open to consideration on appeal where there was no specification as to variance claimed to exist, and neither judgment nor petition was before supreme court, and it was not shown that they were placed before trial court. Young v. Germania Sav. Bank [Ga.] 64 SE 552.

Motion to strike evidence: Must state grounds thereof. Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89. Should point out particular evidence objected to. McBride v. McBride [Iowa] 120 NW 709. Motion to strike on ground of variance must point out particular variance. Flanagan v. Wells Bros. Co., 237 Ill. 82, 86 NE 609. Defendant moved to strike evidence received without objection. Court stated that part of it ought to be allowed to stand but that some of it might be irrelevant. Defendant then excepted. Held that motion should have been restated in such manner that ruling thereon would have shown what evidence was intended to be left in record, and that, where this was not done, defendant could not urge error. Zetsche v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 238 Ill. 240, 87 NE 412.

Motion to direct verdict: Court of appeals will not refuse to consider ruling on motion because motion was general on whole record and did not specifiy grounds, where it is apparent that propositions relied on were brought to attention of court below. O'Halloran v. McGuirk [C. C. A.] 167 F 493.

Motion for new trial: Statutory motion must state grounds upon which it is based at least as specifically as they are mentioned in the statute. Beebe v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 137 Wis. 269, 118 NW 808. Ground assigned for new trial which is not a cause for a new trial will not be considered. Conrad v. Hausen [Ind.] 85 NE 710. Motion based on improper admission of excinsion of evidence should name witness and disclose what particular evidence was admitted on rejected. Indianapolis & W. R. Co. v. Ragan [Ind.] 86 NE 966. Cause for new trial that court erred in refusing to permit defendants to show certain facts held insufficient where it did not name document by which, or witnesses by whom, defendants offered to prove matters alleged therein, or whether evidence excluded was oral or documentary. Conrad v. Hausen [Ind.] 85 NE 710. Assignment of error in motion complaining of admission or rejection of testimony is not valid when such evidence is not literally or in substance set forth in motion or attached thereto as an exhibit. Sims v. Sims, 131 Ga. 262, 62 SE 192. Grounds of motion held insufficient where they did not state who offered evidence, did not identify witness, and it was mpossible to tell from them whether witness had given same evidence in substance without objection, or whether error existed at all, or, if so, whether it was material. Id. Grounds of motion complaining of errors in admission of evidence, but failing to set out objections, if any, urged in court below, will not be considered. Fain v. Ennis, 4 Ga. App. 716, 62 SE 466. Rulings admitting and excluding evidence not considered where motion did not direct court's attention to the particular rulings. Carpenter v. Savage [Miss.] 46 S 537. Reasons held sufficiently specific to preserve objection to ruling excluding all that part of deposition not admitted. Mullins v. Columbia County Bank [Ark.] 113 SW 206. Must specifically point out variance complained of, it being insufficient to charge variance in general terms. Gascoigne v. Metropolitan West Side El. R. Co., 239 Ill. 18, 87 NE 883. Assignment that a group of instructions are erroneous is bad if anyone of them was properly given. Cowperthwait v. Brown [Neb.] 117 NW 709. Instruction held single one though containing two paragraphs so that separate objection to each paragraph in motion was not necessary to enable supreme court to consider error assigned in giving it. Tyson v. Bryan [Neb.] 120 NW 940. Grounds for new trial based upon oral charge must specifically point out portions objected to. Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89. Ground of motion which selected several fragments of sentences from different parts of charge, which were incomplete and unintelligible as set out in such ground, held not sufficiently definite. Kennedy v. Hagans [Ga.] 64 SE 330. Exception to instructions embodied in motion for new trial held insufficient under Code, § 3709, authorizing exceptions to giving or refusal of instructions to be embodied in such motions, but requiring them to specify part of charge or instruction objected to, and ground of objection. Knopp v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., [Iowa] 117 NW 970. Recital in motion for new trial that court erred "in his instructions numbers 1 to —, both inclusive, and in each of them, which were all excepted to by the defendant at the time," held not to sufficiently identify instructions excepted to, except number 1. Id. Where instructions were excepted to when given and again in motion for new trial, held that ground of objection to particular instruction was not waived, though not specifically raised in said motion. Williams v. Clarke County [Iowa] 120 NW 306. Ground specified in motion held insufficient to present objection that referee's report did not contain any findings of fact, and that supposed findings were blended with conclusions of law. Alexander v. Wellington [Colo.] 98 P 631. Motion specifying that verdict is contrary to law and evidence does not raise question of excessive damages, but motion must specifically assign that ground. Duffy v. Radke [Wis.] 119 NW 811. In action against county to recover value of goods used by persons in quarantine, held that asking that verdict be set aside as contrary to evidence raised question as to whether evidence showed what goods were so used. Louisa County v. Jancey's Trustee [Va.] 63 SE 452. Motion on ground that verdict is not supported by evidence must point out particulars in which evidence is insufficient. Liljeblad v. Sasse [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 787. Specification unnecessary: Provisions of Prac. Act, § 77 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 110, § 78), requiring party moving for new trial to file points in writing, particularly specifying grounds of motion, is directory only, and statement is waived if court does not require it, and motion is submitted without it and without objection. Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928. If motion is submitted without specifying grounds, party may avail himself of any grounds appearing in record, whether it be admission or exclusion of evidence, giving or refusing of instructions, insufficiency of evidence, or any error occurring on the trial. Id. No points are waived by failing to file written motion for new trial, and, where opposing counsel does not require reasons to be specified in writing, will be presumed that every reason urged on appeal was urged below. Illinois Valley R. Co. v. Haremski, 132 Ill. App. 423. Refusal of appellate court to consider errors assigned because not set out with sufficient detail or precision in motion for new trial held error where case was tried and appeal perfected when rules provided that error so assigned would be considered whether set out specifically in motion for new trial or not. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Wilhoit [C. C. A.] 160 F 440. Judgment not reversed though peremptory instruction for plaintiff was given in absence of defendant's counsel and before opportunity was offered him to present additional proof, in absence of satisfactory showing on motion for new trial, as to character and effect of the additional evidence which would have been offered. Evans v. Lilly & Co. [Miss.] 48 S 612.

67. Evidence: Merrill v. Worthington [Ala.] 46 S 477; Campbell v. Hughes [Ala.] 47 S 45; Stowers Furniture Co. v. Brake [Ala.] 48 S 89; Merced Bank v. Price [Cal.] 98 P 383; Sertaut v. Crane Co., 142 Ill. App. 49; City of Garrett v. Winterich [Ind. App.] 87 NE 161; Jordan v. Missouri & Kansas Tel. Co. [Mo. App.] 116 SW 432; Lee v. Unkefer, 77 S. C. 460, 58 SE 343. Though testimony is incompetent, it need not be excluded on that ground unless that objection is specifically raised. Monahan v. National Realty Co., 4 Ga. App. 680, 62 SE 127. Statement that counsel did not think evidence would be competent held insufficient. Hutchinson & Co. v. Morris Bros., 131 Mo. App. 258, 110 SW 684. Where witness, who was admittedly a medical expert, was asked whether he was able to say as a physician whether plaintiff's condition was due to fright or electric shock, and instead of answering question gave his opinion, held that objection that he was not qualified to give such an opinion could be made on appeal though question was not specifically objected to on that ground below. United R. & Elec. Co. v. Corbin [Md.] 72 A 606. General objection is insufficient unless evidence is plainly inadmissible for any purpose. Sanders v. Davis, 153 Ala. 375, 44 S 979; Bufford v. Little [Ala.] 48 S 697; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Harby, 55 Fla. 555, 46 S 590; Spencer v. Dell, 55 Fla. 790, 46 S 729; Gainsville & Gulf R. Co. v. Peck, 55 Fla. 402, 46 S 1019; Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow [Fla.] 48 S 410; McKinnon v. Johnson [Fla.] 48 S 910; Geissendoerfer v. Western Horse Shoe Co., 131 Mo. App. 534, 110 SW 640; Chess v. Grant [C. C. A.] 163 F 500. Question held so obviously incompetent that general form of objection was sufficient. Brown v. Carson, 132 Mo. App. 371, 111 SW 1181. Objections to answers to interrogatories propounded to witness held too general. Butler v. Ederheimer, 55 Fla. 544, 47 S 23. Objection to evidence as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, held too general. Buchanan v. Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 335. General objection insufficient to raise objection that evidence is secondary. People v. Waite, 237 Ill. 164, 86 NE 572. General objection held not to reach objection that evidence offered was not best evidence. Bufford v. Little [Ala.] 48 S 697. Objection that evidence is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, does not raise question of its admissibility under pleadings. Bartleson v. Munson, 105 Minn. 348, 117 NW 512. Objection to notes, as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, too general to raise objection that their execution has not been proved. Landis Mach. Co. v. Konantz Saddlery Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 333. Objection to admissibility of evidence on ground of variance is waived unless specifically made on that ground and objection pointed out. Weston v. State Mut. Life Assur. Soc., 234 Ill. 492, 84 NE 1073. Objection held insufficient to raise question of variance. Forge & Rolling Mills Co. v. Bartels, 133 Ill. App. 22. Where only objection to declarations of pain was that evidence was incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, could not be contended on appeal that declarations were made in contemplation of institution of action for damages. Johnston v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 286. Objection held not sufficiently definite to call court's attention to real ground of inadmissibility. Kinnane v. Conroy [Wash.] 101 P 223. Objection to question as immaterial, irrelevant, incompetent, and not within issues held not to present question of competency of witness as expert, or that sufficient foundation had not been laid to permit him to testify. Modlin v. Jones & Co. [Neb.] 121 NW 934. Objection of illegality held not to have raised question of competency of witness to testify as to transactions with decedent. Campbell v. Hughes [Ala.] 47 S 45. Admission of evidence held not error as against objections interposed. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Rich [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 114. Objection that evidence could not be given under complaint, and that such damage was not included in it, held too general to raise question that it related to special damage not pleaded. Newman v. Seifter, 115 NYS 211. Objection to competency of evidence held insufficient to raise question as to competency of witness to testify as to transaction with person since deceased. Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675. Objection that evidence is irrelevant to illustrate certain issue may be overruled if it is relevant to any other issue in case, and if no objection is made to its competency. Monohan v. National Realty Co., 4 Ga. App. 680, 62 SE 127. Where only objection amounted to assertion that no evidence of that character was admissible for purpose indicated, which was not the case, question of admissibility held not open to consideration. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. McDonough [C. C. A.] 161 F 657. Objection to hypothetical question because containing matter which evidence does not tend to support must point out definitely and specifically the vice in question. Long Distance Tel. & T. Co. v. Schmidt [Ala.] 47 S 731; Southern R. Co. v. Gullatt [Ala.] 48 S 472. General objection to hypothetical question that it did not include all facts which evidence tended to prove and assumed some not proven held properly overruled, where counsel refused to point out such matters when requested. Kinlen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo.] 115 SW 523. Where facts deemed material are omitted from hypothetical question, they should be specifically pointed out by objections, or counsel should ask question which he deems proper on cross-examination. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Henefy [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 57. Objection that evidence was incompetent held sufficient to preserve contention that it was self-serving declaration. Cooper v. Bower [Kan.] 96 P 794. Addition of words "irrelevant and immaterial" held not to so far detract from force of objection as to the matter to which it is directed and the grounds on which it is based,[69] and only render it unavailing. Id. Objection that proper foundation had not been laid for admission of certified copy of public record held to go to question of identity of party signing certificate, and of his signature. Kellog v. Finn [S. D.] 119 NW 545. Where plaintiff objected to letter unless witness read whole letter, and court ruled that whole should be admitted, plaintiff held not entitled to complain. Hutchinson & Co. v. Morris Bros., 131 Mo. App. 258, 110 SW 684. After plaintiff had announced close of his evidence and demurrer thereto had been argued, court permitted him to introduce bill of lading. No objection was made that it was not pleaded, nor was any reason given, nor was there any application for continuance, and record merely recited "objections by defendant." Held tantamount to no objection, and that matter could not be reviewed. Holland v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 133 Mo. App. 694, 114 SW 61. Evidence outside pleadings may be considered on appeal where no specific objection below that case was being tried outside pleadings. Neuberger v. Long Island R. Co., 116 NYS 311. Trial court may grant new trial for admission of inadmissible evidence, though objection is general. Geissendoerfer v. Western Horse Shoe Co., 131 Mo. App. 534, 110 SW 640.

Instructions. Pettus v. Kerr [Ark.] 112 SW 886. General objection is insufficient to point out ambiguity. Aluminum Co. v. Ramsey [Ark.] 117 SW 568. General objection to phraseology of instruction is insufficient, but counsel should point out defects specifically and ask specific instruction correcting it. Rock Island Plow Co. v. Rankin Bros. [Ark.] 115 SW 943. Use of objectionable word should be met by specific objection thereto, and not general one to whole instruction. Sloan v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. [Ark.] 117 SW 551. General objection to modification of instruction held not to present point that it left out proper qualification of rule therein stated. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Puckett [Ark.] 114 SW 224. Formal general objection to instruction defective in form held insufficient. Arkansas Midland R. Co. v. Rambo [Ark.] 117 SW 784.

Miscellaneous objections: Objection to reading from first paragraph of answer which had been stricken before trial, and making statement of proof proposed to be introduced upon that point, held too general where said paragraph contained some matter which could properly be proved. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Anderson [Ark.] 113 SW 1030. In proceedings for improvement of highways, grounds of objection must be set forth specifically and not in general terms. Conrad v. Hausen [Ind.] 85 NE 710. Objection to manner of drawing jury held not to have been made with sufficient clearness to call court's attention to matter. Houston Elec. Co. v. Seegar [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 900. Objection held sufficient to raise question that fees allowed master in chancery were excessive. Keuper v. Mette's Unknown Heirs, 239 Ill. 586, 88 NE 218. Objection to decree directing taxation of specific sum as master's fees held sufficient to present question of propriety of allowance. Wirzbicky v. Dranicki, 235 Ill. 106, 85 NE 396.

68. Whether objection to substitution of plaintiffs was sufficiently specific held immaterial, where error was apparent on face of record, and of such a nature as to compel notice. Welch v. Lynch, 30 App. D. C. 122.

69. Motion to dismiss. Lichtman v. Rose, 110 NYS 935.

Motion to strike evidence. Union Naval Stores Co. v. Pugh [Ala.] 47 S 48; Coorman v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 127 App. Div. 315, 111 NYS 531.

Motion for nonsuit. Yetter v. Gloucester Ferry Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 1079; Mims v. Hair, 80 S. C. 460, 61 SE 968. Cannot urge that trial court erred in refusing to direct nonsuit because of variance, where attention of judge was not specifically called to point. Epstein v. Gordon, 114 NYS 438. Though defendant did not, on argument of motion to direct verdict for him, make claim as to absence of evidence on certain point, he may urge such ground as against exceptions to granting motion. Mears v. Smith, 199 Mass. 319, 85 NE 165.

Motion to direct verdict. Yetter v. Gloucester Ferry Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 1079.

Motion for new trial. Storch v. Rose, 152 Mich. 521, 15 Det. Leg. N. 312, 116 NW 402; Cataract City Mill. Co. v. Meunier [R. I.] 69 A 602. Though it appears from record that court directed verdict, proposition that direction was unauthorized because evidence was conflicting is not presented for review, where only exception is to overruling of motion for new trial containing general and special grounds in none of which the point is presented. Arnold v. Ragan, 5 Ga. App. 254, 62 SE 1052. In such case court will pass upon propositions contained in motion for new trial as if verdict had been returned by jury after they had been regularly charged as to law of case. Id. That finding and judgment are excessive can only be raised by assigning erroneous assessment of damages as ground of motion. Gwinn v. Wright [Ind. App.] 86 NE 453. Failure of plaintiff to establish freedom from contributory negligence not considered, where it was not referred to in motion for new trial save in general statement that verdict was contrary to evidence, and court's attention was not therefore, specifically called to matter. Johnston v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 286. Where there was no contention in motion for new trial that plaintiff had assumed risks because of knowledge of defect, could not be raised on appeal. Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Trijerina [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 239. Where written motion for new trial specifies grounds on which defeated party relies, grounds not specified are waived. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cukravony, 132 Ill. App. 367; Galesburg Elec. Motor & Power Co. v. Williams, 132 Ill. App. 598; Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rooney, 138 Ill. App. 275; Olson v. Brundage, 139 Ill. App. 559; Aygarn v. Rogers Grain Co., 141 Ill. App. 402; Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928. Where motion specified, among other grounds, admission of improper evithose grounds so specified in the motion or objection [70] will be considered on appeal. An objection based on extraneous facts must be accompanied by a showing of such facts.[71] It is generally held that an objection to evidence as a whole is properly overruled if any part of it is admissible,[72] though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard.[73] So, too, a general objection to evidence by all of several dence and giving of improper instructions, exceptions taken to action of court in those particulars were not waived by motion, and were available whether exception was taken to order overruling motion or not. Yarber v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 235 Ill. 589, 85 NE 928.

70. Pratt v. Seamans, 43 Colo. 517, 95 P 929; Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Sandy, 137 Ill. App. 244; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers [Ind. App.] 87 NE 28; Schmidt v. Beiseker [N. D.] 120 NW 1096. To allowance of amendment. Harrison v. Carlson [Colo.] 101 P 76; Dempster v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 37 Mont. 335, 96 P 717. Where defendant made but single objection to form of verdict, held that he would be deemed to have consented to such form except as thus criticised. Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 136 Wis. 481, 117 NW 1007. Where court cautioned counsel that ground of objection should be specifically stated, and counsel stated that he had no other grounds than those stated, grounds not stated were waived. Managle v. Parker [N. H.] 71 A 637.

Marshall [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 1030. Where interrogatories were offered in evidence, objection to each question of each witness and the answer thereto held general objection to each deposition, and to have been properly overruled where each contained some legal evidence. Hammond v. A. Vetsburg Co. [Fla.] 48 S 419. When document containing proper and improper matter is offered as a whole, it is not ordinarily duty of court to segregate the one from the other, but objecting party must point out and direct his objection against part or parts that are not proper. Groot v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 34 Utah, 152, 96 P 1019. If party desires to avail himself of objection to whole document, he must make double objection, one to part which is in fact improper, and other to document as a whole. Id. Court cannot be put in error for overruling objection to entire question as calling for conclusion where part of it did not. Selma St. & S. R. Co. v. Campbell [Ala.] 48 S 378.

73. Rule that general objection to evidence will not avail where any portion thereof is admissible does not apply without modification to an objection made in course of oral examination of witness to question which includes several different propositions, a part of which are not subject to the objection. Cooper v. Bower [Kan.] 96 P 794. Ordinarily it is incumbent on examiner to frame question so that in its entirety it is free from objection made; otherwise objection should be sustained. Id.

coparties is properly overruled if it is admissible against one of them,[74] and a motion to exclude evidence a part of which is admissible is properly denied,[75] but the fact that only a part of the grounds for the motion are tenable does not require that it be denied.[76] An objection to the exclusion of evidence must ordinarily be accompanied by an offer of proof showing what the evidence is,[77] its purpose,[78] and that it is admissible;[79] but this rule has been held not to apply where evidence is excluded on cross-examination,[80] nor where the court in effect eliminates the issue in support of which it is offered.[81] Evidence offered as a whole is as a rule, properly

Where licensing board refuses to admit evidence on hearing of application for license. In re Phelps [Neb.] 116 NW 681. Error in sustaining objections to questions put to plaintiff when called for cross-examination under the statute not available in absence of offer of proof or showing that answers would be material under issues formed by pleadings. Soules v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen [N. D.] 120 NW 760.

78. Langston v. National China Co. [Fla.] 49 S 155. Must be made to appear that it would have been beneficial. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Neiser [Tex. Civ. App.] 118 SW 166. Where evidence was not admissible for either of purposes for which it was offered, it could not be contended for first time on appeal that it was admissible as preliminary to certain other evidence. Dunham v. Cox [Conn.] 70 A 1033. Offer to prove facts wholly disconnected with any matter concerning which the witness has been questioned is not proper and presents no question for review. Pike v. Hauptman [Neb.] 119 NW 231. Offer held not to offer to prove that law of foreign state did not permit transfer of franchise without state's consent. O'Sullivan v. Griffith, 153 Cal. 502, 95 P 873. Rulings excluding testimony as to motive in bringing suit, claimed to be admissible in mitigaton of damages, held proper, where no such issue was tendered by questions propounded or by offers of testimony. Liebler v. Carrel [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 976, 118 NW 975. Plaintiffs held not to have shown themselves aggrieved by exclusion of contents of letter where text of letter and purpose for which it was offered were not stated. Deane v. American Glue Co., 200 Mass. 459, 86 NE 890. Offer held insufficient to raise issue whether slanders were uttered by defendant's agents in course of their employment. Kane v. Boston Mut. Life Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 265, 86 NE 302. Where court below treated offer as basis for ruling on admissibility of evidence, on appeal case must be treated as though such facts were in evidence and had been disregarded by lower court. Meyer v. Doherty, 133 Wis. 398, 113 NW 671.

79. Must indicate relevancy of evidence. Blondel v. Bolander, 80 Neb. 531, 114 NW 574. Sustaining objection to evidence, relevancy of which was not apparent, held not ground for reversal where there was no offer to make such relevancy appear. Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow [Fla.] 48 S 410. Where answer may or may not be pertinent, overruling of question will not constitute reversible error unless party objecting to exclusion of evidence shows its pertinency. More-Jonas Glass Co. v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 65. Offer held insufficient since it contained only part elements necessary to make evidence admissible. Grimestad v. Lofgren, 105 Minn. 286, 117 NW 515.

80. Formal offer not necessary to obtain review of ruling of excise board excluding answer to proper question asked on cross-examination. In re Powell [Neb.] 119 NW 9.

81. Held not to apply to issue raised by counterclaim where latter was expressly excluded and court announced that no proof tending to sustain it would be received, to which exception was taken. Palmer v. La Rault [Wash.] 99 P 1036. Where ruling excluding evidence made it impossible for plaintiff to recover, held that he was not bound to offer further proof, and judgment against him would not be sustained because offer which he did make was not sufficiently full and specific. Murphey v. Brown [Ariz.] 100 P 801.

excluded if any part of it is inadmissible,[82] though the contrary has been held in certain cases.[83] A question cannot be objected to as hearsay.[84]

§ 9. Form and sufficiency of exception.[85]—See 10 C. L. 1593—Though no particular form of exception is necessary, it must appear that what counsel did at the time was intended to preserve the ruling complained of for review.[86] The allowance of an appeal may sometimes be equivalent to an exception.[87] As a general rule, an exception must point out specifically the particular error complained of,[88] though gen-

86. Mere announcement by counsel that he disagrees with court is not equivalent to exception to ruling. Climax Tag Co. v. American Tag Co., 234 Ill. 179, 84 NE 873. Held that no exception was taken to remark of counsel, in proper sense of term. Enos v. Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. [R. I.] 70 A 1011. Fair construction of what took place held to show exception to refusal of defendant's request to go to jury. Maxwell v. Martin, 130 App. Div. 80, 114 NYS 349.

87. Recital in order denying motion for new trial that, plaintiff having at the time prayed for an appeal, same was granted, held tantamount to exception. Moody v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 115 SW 400.

88. Must be sufficiently specific to direct judge's attention to precise point upon which he is alleged to have made an erroneous ruling. Gerhardt v. Boettger, 75 N. J. Law, 916, 70 A 173; Holt v. United Security Life Ins. & Trust Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 301. Exception held sufficient to present questions of law made in lower court by petition for certiorari and answer, and to be sufficient in form. Meeks v. Carter, 5 Ga. App. 421, 63 SE 517. Exception held one to finding on plaintiff's affidavit of claim, and not to assessment of damages by court without jury. Snow v. Merriam, 133 Ill. App. 641. Exception to charge held not to have challenged suggestion of court that limitations had run against action for assault. Taranto v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 128 App. Div. 72, 112 NYS 499. Exception to direction of verdict saves only question of sufficiency of evidence. Mullen v. Quinlan & Co. [N. Y.] 87 NE 1088. Exception to denial of motion to direct verdict as against law and evidence raises no question of law. Lally v. Prudential Ins. Co. [N. H.] 72 A 208. Where both parties moved for directed verdict, held that exception by plaintiff to direction of verdict for defendants was not sufficient to notify court of objection to its disposing of case, but only suggested that plaintiff would have verdict directed in his favor. Kinnel v. Whipple, 128 App. Div. 736, 113 NYS 337.

Instructions: Must point out specific error claimed. Millen & S. W. R. Co. v. Allen, 130 Ga. 656, 61 SE 541; B. F. Sturtevant Co. v. Cumberland Dugan & Co., 106 Md. 587, 68 A 351; Wood v. Dodge [S. D.] 120 NW 774; Morris v. Salt Lake City [Utah] 101 P 373. Exceptions that instructions were improper, irrelevant, did not state law, and were inapplicable to case, held too general. Tonopah Lumber Co. v. Riley [Nev.] 95 P 1001. General exception to entire charge cannot be considered. Schneider v. Winkler, 74 N. J. Law, 71, 70 A 731; Comeau v. Hurley [S. D.] 117 NW 371; Gustafson v. West Lumber Co. [Wash.] 97 P 1094. General exception to considerable portion of charge cannot be regarded as presenting specific objection to lesser portion. Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. McDonough [C. C. A.] 161 F 657. Exception to charging of all the requests presented by plaintiff insufficient to preserve objections to particular charge. Murdock v. Gould, 193 N. Y. 369, 86 NE 12. Exception to action of court in reading requests of both parties and stating that they were good law except as modified, on ground that there were irreconcilable conflicts between requests and that there were no modifications in general charge, held too general. Goodwin v. Atlantic C. L. R. Co. [S. C.] 64 SE 242. Exception challenging an instruction combining several different propositions of law is of no avail unless it shows precise ground of objection, in which case review is confined to precise ground alleged. Holt v. United Security Life & Trust Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 72 A 301. Exception to refusal to charge as requested, and to charge as given on subject-matter of requests, held too general. Davis' Adm'x v. Rutland R. Co. [Vt.] 71 A 724. Where defendant submitted 12 requests to charge, exception to refusal to charge as requested, and to charge given upon subject-matter of requests, held too general to save question of error in refusing to give 4 of requests. Mahoney's Adm'r v. Rutland R. Co., 81 Vt. 210, 69 A 652. Where parts of charge are excepted to generally, and in themselves are correct statements of abstract principles of law, court will not search record to discover whether instructions were authorized under facts. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Chambliss, 131 Ga. 60, 61 SE 1034. Exceptions severally taken, each to specific charge, held sufficiently specific. Tucker v.

eral exceptions have been held sufficient in certain cases,[89] and is sometimes,[90] though not always,[91] required to state the grounds on which it is based. Exceptions should not be in gross.[92] An exception depending on an erroneous conception of law is valueless.[93]

Dudley, 127 App. Div. 403, 111 NYS 700. Exception to instruction on ground that it instructed jury on a matter of fact held sufficient. Tonopah Lumber Co. v. Riley [Nev.] 95 P 1001. Where counsel presented written requests, exception as to those which court refused to charge was sufficient to preserve refusal to charge as to matter covered by one of such requests. Murray v. Narwood, 192 N. Y. 172, 84 NE 958.

Evidence: Exceptions to rulings on admission of evidence not considered, where did not set out substance of evidence to which objections related. Arnold v. Ragan, 5 Ga. App. 254, 62 SE 1052. Exception to refusal of court to require witness to allow copy of whole of certain agreement to be made and annexed to record held without merit, where, so far as appeared, portion of agreement put in evidence embraced all of it that was pertinent to case, and counsel, who had examined paper, failed to specify either below or on appeal, what bearing suppressed portion had on case. Rogers v. Chester [R. I.] 69 A 848. If counsel desired to raise question of plaintiff's credibility, held that appropriate request to charge should have been made, or at least exception directed to that point should have been taken, and question was not presented by exception specifically directed to another point. Moglia v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 127 App. Div. 243, 111 NYS 70. Exception to denial of motion to dismiss bill for want of proof does not raise question whether there was evidence to support decree in its entirety, an exception to the decree being necessary for that purpose. Perry v. Maryland Casualty Co. [N. H.] 72 A 369. Exception to conclusions of law does not raise question of sufficiency of evidence to support findings of fact. Pittinger v. Ramage, 40 Ind. App. 486, 82 NE 478.

Findings: General exception to all findings made, or all requested and refused, is insufficient for any purpose. Pederson v. Ullrich, 50 Wash. 211, 96 P 1044. General exception to refusal to find as requested. Crowe & Co. v. Brandt, 50 Wash. 499, 97 P 503. Where plaintiff excepted to finding "except quantity of logs driven and the ownership of the enumerated parts," held that part of finding as to quantity of logs driven was not open to review. Phalen v. Hershey Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 571, 118 NW 219. Exception to decree as whole is exception to every finding included therein which enters into conclusion expressed by decree. Warner v. Trustees of Norwegian Cemetery Ass'n [Iowa] 117 NW 39. Exception to decree as whole held to save ruling in effect overruling demurrer to cross bill and awarding defendants relief therein prayed for. Id. Exceptions to judgment held to authorize review of findings of fact, though no exceptions to latter were filed. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Green [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1131.

Judgment or order: Must specify error alleged to exist therein. Neal v. Davis Foundry & Machine Works, 131 Ga. 701, 63 SE 221. Exception to order in bastardy proceedings held not sufficiently specific to save question as to want of terms limiting successive payments to life of child and its need of support. Reynolds v. Hassam, 80 Vt. 501, 68 A 645. Where facts were conceded in mandamus proceeding, exception that order and judgment were not supported by law or evidence should be construed to mean that conceded facts do not warrant result reached. State v. Kaikofen, 134 Wis. 74, 113 NW 1091.

89. Where exceptions to auditor's report were overruled, and proper exceptions pendente lite taken to judgment overruling them, and final decree was entered adopting report, held that bill of exceptions assigning error generally on final decree and specifically on pendente lite exceptions was sufficient. Potts v. Prior, 131 Ga. 198, 62 SE 77. No statute or rule of court requires specific exceptions to orders of clerk in condemnation proceedings, and either party may except generally and on appeal present any question appearing on record; hence defendant could have reviewed clerk's order appointing commissioners to which he excepted generally. Johnson City S. R. Co. v. South & W. R. Co., 148 N. C. 59, 61 SE 683.

90. Granting continuance. Smith v. Ross, 81 App. D. C. 348. Statement in record that appellant objected to refusal to give each and every one of her requests for instructions held to present no question, where no specific reason why they should have been given was urged. Ward v. Sturdivant [Ark.] 109 SW 1167. Defendant cannot complain that there was no evidence to support instructions given at instance of plaintiff, where he did not except to plaintiff's prayers on that ground. Mount Vernon Brew. Co. v. Teschner, 108 Md. 158, 69 A 702.

91. Grounds of exception to decree need not be stated. Code, §§ 3750, 3751. Warner v. Trustees of Norwegian Cemetery Ass'n [Iowa] 117 NW 39. May consider question that refused instruction was not sustained by evidence, though no special exception on that ground. Mount Vernon Brew. Co. v. Teschner, 108 Md. 158, 69 A 702. Exception pointing out precise language of instruction objected to held sufficient, it not being necessary to state reason for exception. Davenport v. Prentice, 126 App. Div. 451, 110 NYS 1056. Is only where error was merely inadverent that exception should suggest correction. Id.

92. Exception to ruling of court overruling demurrer to each paragraph of complaint held to properly present sufficiency of each paragraph. United States Cement Co. v. Koch [Ind. App.] 85 NW 690. General exception to all instructions insufficient if any of them are correct. Ward v. Sturdivant [Ark.] 109 SW 1167; Boswell v.

§ 10. Waiver of objections and exceptions taken.[94] See 10 C. L. 1595—Objections and exceptions may be waived by compliance with the ruling,[95] by withdrawing the grounds of objection,[96] by failure to follow up the objection or insist upon similar objections in subsequent proceedings,[97] by assuming inconsistent positions,[98] answer-

Gillen, 131 Ga. 310, 62 SE 187; A. B. Farquhar Co. v. Sherman [Okl.] 97 P 565. General exception to instruction containing two distinct propositions is not available if either is correct. Graves v. Davenport [Colo.] 100 P 429. Exception "to those portions of the charge to the jury which are as follows," followed by more than two pages of printed matter contained in charge covering many propositions, most of which were unassailable, held to present no specific question for consideration. Agnew v. Baldwin, 136 Wis. 263, 116 NW 641. Exception to instruction as a whole is insufficient where instruction is not bad as a whole and is not claimed to be. Pennington v. Redman Van & Storage Co., 34 Utah, 223, 97 P 115. Where exception to refusal to give instruction is general one, if any of instructions are bad, exception does not preserve others for review. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hambright [Ark.] 113 SW 803. Exception to "refusal to give said charges numbered 1, 2, and 3" will not be sustained if either charge was properly refused. Hutto v. Stough [Ala.] 47 S 1031. Where defendant submitted 12 requests to charge, held that exception to refusal to charge according to first 9, and to charge as given on subjects thereof, was too general to be available, unless charge on such subjects was entirely erroneous. Drown v. New England Tel. & T. Co., 81 Vt. 358, 70 A 599. General exception to all findings is insufficient unless all are erroneous. Warehime v. Schweitzer [Wash.] 98 P 747. General exception "to refusal of court to find the first 31 requests to find facts and also the first 17 requests to find conclusions of law" held not well taken, where court was not compelled to find as requested in many instances. Ostrander v. State, 192 N. Y. 415, 85 NE 668.

93. Atlantic C. L. R. Co. v. Odum, 5 Ga. App. 780, 63 SE 1126.

94. Search Note: See Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1646-1649; Dec. Dig. § 280; Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 968-986; Dec. Dig. §§ 406-427.

95. Exception to paragraph of answer was allowed, and question was not in terms reserved. Answer was amended by striking out paragraph referred to, and decree rendered in accordance with agreement of parties. No claim was then made that such paragraph should be considered or passed on, and it was not in fact passed on. Held that any error in sustaining exception was waived. Wilder's Ex'x v. Wilder [Vt.] 72 A 203. Where motion for new trial was granted on condition that defendant elect to have new trial on question of damages only, which he did, and jury returned verdict covering whole case, held exceptions relating only to proceedings on first trial were not reviewable. Timpary v. Handrahan, 198 Mass. 575, 85 NE 183. Ruling sustaining objection to testimony on ground of incompetency of witness held to warrant plaintiff in not inquiring further as to matter. Barto v. Harrison, 138 Iowa, 413, 116 NW 317. Defendant objected to admission of deed on ground that description of land was ambiguous, and offered evidence of surveyors that they could not take deed and locate land therefrom. Court correctly ruled that deed was not ambiguous on its face and admitted it, and that evidence would not be admitted at that time. Held that, in order to put court in error for excluding testimony which, in connection with deed, would have shown insufficient description, defendant should have offered such evidence separately and obtained ruling thereon. Houston Oil Co. v. Kimball [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 662.

96. Objection held withdrawn and not renewed. Mayhew v. Smith, 42 Colo. 534, 95 P 549. After affidavit of defense was filed, rule for judgment was taken, which was afterward discharged. Plaintiff then filed amended statement of demand, and defendant filed protest in which he denied right of plaintiff to require him to file affidavit of defense to such amended statement. Later he voluntarily filed such affidavit. Held that, on appeal from order making rule for judgment absolute, defendant could not question right of plaintiff to compel him to file second affidavit. Burns v. Armstrong [Pa.] 72 A 255.

97. Argument was objected to as commenting on testimony which had been excluded. Court being in doubt as to whether such testimony had been excluded, directed counsel to proceed and stated that he would have stenographer look matter up, which he forgot to do. Held that court should have been reminded of matter before trial closed, and where did not do so, could not predicate error on overruling motion for new trial on ground that argument was improper. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hart [Tex. Civ. App.] 116 SW 415. Where evidence was excluded on ground that there was no issue as to point on which it was sought to be introduced, defendant was not bound to persist in his efforts to introduce it or to present it in such form as not to be otherwise objectionable. Lichtenstein Millinery Co. v. Peck, 59 Misc. 193, 110 NYS 410. Where defendant was led to refrain from formally presenting proposed supplemental answer on theory that it would be of no avail in view of ruling as to amendment, and neither court nor counsel objected on that ground, held that he would not be deprived of right to reversal because of erroneous refusal to allow service of such answer for failure to present it. Jones v. Ramsey, 127 App. Div. 704, 111 NYS 993.

98. Exception to admission of evidence not waived by cross-examination of witness. United R. & Elec. Co. v. Corbin [Md.] 72 A 606. Admission by defendant of prima facie case in plaintiff in order to get opening and closing argument, whether made in original answer or by amendment, does not estop defendant from complaining of ing over,[99] going to trial on the merits,[1] by the introduction of evidence,[2] by failing to renew a motion,[3] or to repeat an objection,[4] by requested instructions,[5] by filing a prior rulings on demurrer to which exceptions pendente lite have been filed. Albany Phosphate Co. v. Hugger Bros., 4 Ga. App. 771, 62 SE 533. Fact that plaintiff requested dismissal after demurrer to declaration was sustained held not to preclude him from complaining, it being manifestly his intention to decline to amend, and to have dismissal on that ground. Davis v. Woods [Miss.] 48 S 961. Where instrument is admitted in evidence, against objection without proof of execution, and case is thereafter reported to law court for its determination, and it appears from whole record that instrument was executed, objection is no longer tenable, since, if party objecting felt aggrieved, he should have taken exceptions and not have consented to report. Anderson Carriage Co. v. Bartley, 102 Me. 492, 67 A 567.

99. See, also, Appearance, 11 C. L. 255; Parties, 12 C. L. 1175; Pleading, 12 C. L. 1323. Answering over after overruling motion to require plaintiff to elect which of two defendants he would proceed against, and overruling of demurrer to complaint held waiver of exceptions to such rulings. Worrall Grain Co. v. Johnson [Neb.] 119 NW 668.

1. See, also, Pleading, 12 C. L. 1323. Demurrer waived by proceeding to trial without objection while it is undisposed of. Devine v. Chicago City R. Co., 141 Ill. App. 583. Exception to overruling motion to strike reply and for judgment on pleadings waived by going to trial on merits. Sundmacher v. Lloyd [Mo. App.] 116 SW 12. Where defendant's exception on record to denial of motion for jury trial was erroneously refused, held that he was entitled to review though he proceeded with the trial. Stevenson v. Brooks, 62 Misc. 489, 115 NYS 118. Where defendant asserted right to trial by jury of twelve at outset of trial, before any evidence was taken, held that exception to ruling against him was not waived by participation in trial before jury of six. Skinner v. Allison, 127 App. Div. 15, 111 NYS 264. Exception to ruling denying jury trial held not waived by filing answer and going to trial in equity. Jamison v. Ranck [Iowa] 119 NW 76.

2. Waiver of objections and exceptions to overruling of motions to direct a verdict (see Directing Verdict and Demurrer to Evidence, 11 C. L. 5), or motions to dismiss or for a nonsuit (see Discontinuance, Dismissal and Nonsuit, 11 C. L. 1093) are treated in separate topics. One cannot complain of the admission of evidence where he subsequently introduces evidence to same effect (Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Pettit [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 894), or where he subsequently brings out the same evidence on cross examination (Sullivan v. Fant [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 507; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Broom [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 655; Hill v. Houser [Tex. Civ. App.] 115 SW 112; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. McCoy [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 446; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Pettit [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 894). Further inquiry held not waiver of error in ruling excluding evidence on ground of incompetency of witness where evidence sought was not elicited. Barto v. Harrison, 138 Iowa, 413, 116 NW 317. Motion to exclude all of plaintiff's evidence relating to certain items, made at close of plaintiff's evidence, waived where after it was overruled defendants afterwards introduced evidence relating to same subject, thereby supplementing plaintiff's evidence. Lord v. Henderson [W. Va.] 64 SE 134. Where after denial of motions to strike answer from files, and for judgment on pleadings, and overruling of demurrer to answer, all based on fact that answer contained no general denial, plaintiff introduced evidence and tried case as if general issue had been joined, held that he thereby consented to enlargement of issues, and could not thereafter complain because case was tried upon such issues. Rockefeller v. Ringle, 77 Kan. 515, 94 P 810.

3. For necessity of renewing motion to dismiss or for nonsuit, see Discontinuance, Dismissal and Nonsuit, 11 C. L. 1093.

4. Where objection to evidence on direct examination is properly overruled, if counsel conceive that matters brought out on cross-examination show it to be incompetent, they must again challenge it. Burger v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 35. Objection to proof of rule by parol waived, where appellant permitted it to be proven on cross-examination of its own witness without objection. Petersen v. Elgin, A. & S. Trac. Co., 142 Ill. App. 34. Estopped to assert that admission of testimony was error where witness at another time repeated substance of such testimony without objection. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Pettit [Tex. Civ. App.] 117 SW 894. Evidence introduced by plaintiff, was objected to, and was subsequently withdrawn on defendant's motion when shown to be inadmissible on cross-examination. On redirect examination same question was gone into again by plaintiff without objection. Held no question as to admissibility of evidence was presented on plaintiff's appeal. Town of Newcastle v. Grubbs [Ind.] 86 NE 757. Objections made when depostion of witness was taken held waived where not called to trial court's attention. Thomas v. Boyd, 108 Va. 584, 62 SE 346. Question was objected to and exception taken to overruling of objection. Witness then asked to be allowed to state matter in her own way, and examiner said "Very well." Held not necessary to renew objection. Cooper v. Bower [Kan.] 96 P 59.

5. Defendant held not entitled to object that certain damages could not be recovered under pleadings, where it asked and obtained instruction broad enough to authorize such recovery. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. v. Smith [Miss.] 48 S 735. Asking for and obtaining instruction that assessment of property as building on land of third person was no evidence that land belonged to latter and not to defendant held waiver of exception to admission of evidence of such assessment for purpose of showing that defendant did not own land.

SCHOOLS AND EDUCATION.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[1]

§ 1. The school system in general.[2] See 10 C. L. 1597—A common school is one common to all children of proper age and capacity, free, and subject to, and under the control of, the qualified voters of the school district.[3]

City of Manchester v. Duggan [N. H.] 70 A 1075. Where, in action on benefit certificate, insurer submitted by its instruction and as sole question in issue, whether insured in his lifetime elected to sever his connection with order and abandon same, and whether order waived prompt payment of certain assessment, it could not contend on appeal that proof of waiver was incompetent. Jones v. Supreme Lodge K. of H., 236 Ill. 113, 86 NE 191. Where letter claimed to have been written by defendant was offered and received in evidence before he had denied writing it, held that he did not waive his exception to ruling by requesting instruction that jury might consider letter, if found to have been written by defendant, only as bearing on his credibility as a witness. McDermott v. Mahoney [Iowa] 116 NW 788, afg. 115 NW 32. Defendant held not to have waived right to object that verdict disregarded instructions eliminating remaining paragraphs of complaint by asking instructions on merits of case. Dickson v. Swift & Co., 238 Ill. 62, 87 NE 59.

6. Application for, and acceptance of, rule to show cause why new trial should not be granted, by one holding bill of exceptions, is waiver of all exceptions not expressly reserved. Kari v. Diamond [N. J. Law] 71 A 46. After allowance by circuit court of rule to show cause why there should not be a new trial with no reservation of exceptions only common error such as appear upon record are assignable and all assignments based upon exceptions sealed will be stricken. Hansen v. De Vita [N. J. Law] 68 A 1062.

7. Where plaintiff was afforded opportunity for correction of supposed error in instruction by court offering to modify it after jury retired, but declined to have it modified, held that he waived right to rely on error. Mester v. Zaiser [Iowa] 120 NW 466. Defendant excepted to charge and requested submission of particular question to jury. Plaintiff consented to modification of charge and submission of such question. Defendant then withdrew such request to charge. Held that defendant waived exception, and acquiesced in charge as originally given. Aker v. Brooklyn Daily Eagle, 130 App. Div. 412, 114 NYS 968.

1. It includes matters relating to common schools, private schools and public educational facilities, such as libraries. It excludes institutions of higher learning (see Colleges and Academies, 11 C. L. 632). It also excludes health regulations (see Health, 11 C. L. 1717) and matters relating generally to the public domain (see Public Lands, 12 C. L. 1456), public officers (see Officers and Public Employes, 12 C. L. 1131), and the like.

The legislature may provide better schools than the constitution itself requires.[4]

The adoption of school laws by referendum and use of voting machines is treated in another topic.[5]

§ 2. Right, privilege and duty of attendance.[6]—See 10 C. L. 1597.—Separate schools for races See 10 C. L. 1598 may be provided but the accommodations must be substantially equal.[7] The state's power to regulate school corporations of its own creation with regard to separate instruction of the races is practically absolute.[8]

*Vaccination of pupils.*See 8 C. L. 1852—This section deals only with the right to close the schools to unvaccinated pupils, all other matters with reference to vaccination being treated elsewhere.[9] Children from infected homes and those unable to show a proper certificate of vaccination are sometimes required to be excluded from the public schools by statute,[10] but where the matter is not regulated by statute or constitution, a city cannot require vaccination as a prerequisite to admission,[11] unless the requirement is reasonable in its character and rests upon the ground that it is necessary to preserve public health.[12]

*Duty to furnish school facilities.*See 10 C. L. 1598—The school board cannot be required to furnish school facilities to the lone inhabitant of an island.[13] While place of attendance may be regulated, the board cannot require pupils to attend school at a locality beset with danger to them.[14] Upon proper application, pupils in some states may be transferred from one district to another for educational purposes,[15]

4. Constitution makes minimum rather than maximum requirement as to schools. In re Newark School Board [N. J. Law] 70 A 881. Fact that law provides for education of children between 5 and 20 years old, while constitution provides for education between 5 and 18 only, does not render law invalid. In re Newark School Board [N. J. Law] 70 A 881.
