TOPICAL INDEX.*

Use the index in your latest number. Ignore all previous indexes in volumes and numbers. The latest index cites by volume and page to the latest treatment of any subject.

You do not have to study classification. This index contains the name of every subject you are familiar with and not merely the titles of our articles.

The page citation at the beginning of each article directs to the particular subdivision wanted. There you can find its latest treatment and also a volume and page citation to the same points in earlier volumes.

Black figures refer to volumes; light figures to pages.

This index is revised and reprinted every month. Remember to start with the latest index and you cannot go astray or mise anything.

*There is also a CUMULATIVE INDEX to Vols. 1-9; a separate book of 886 pages containing thousands of key words leading from the word you think of to the point you seek. It also indexes the annotations and special articles.

VOLUME XII. APRIL, 1909. NUMBER 1.

INDICTMENT AND PROSECUTION.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[82]

Sources of the criminal procedure. See 10 C. L. 88—Criminal cases in the federal courts are governed and controlled by federal statutes, and federal decisions and

82. This topic includes general criminal procedure from indictment to final judgment. The substantive law of crimes (see Criminal Law, 11 C. L. 940) and procedure before indictment (see Arrest and Binding Over, 11 C. L. 273), are elsewhere treated, and matters of state statutes and decisions are inapplicable,[83] though in the absence of federal statutes, state statutes control;[84] but omission of the state satute to provide a remedy for the preservation of a substantial right of accused will not operate to deprive him of the right.[85] The act of congress creating the United States court for China and the treaty provisions relating thereto give to American citizens in China the benefit of American laws regulating criminal procedure,[86] but also make such citizens subject to American laws defining and punishing crimes, including the common law.[87] An indictment cannot be predicated on a statute which became effective after the act charged was committed.[88] A defendant proceeded against under the general penal laws of the state, in the superior court, is not, though a minor, entitled, in New Hampshire, to be tried under the provisions of the juvenile court act.[89]

§ 1. Limitation of time to institute. See 10 C. L. 58—The time within which criminal prosecutions must be instituted is fixed by statute.[90] The federal statute providing that crimes committed in territory, jurisdiction over which is ceded to and vested in the United State, shall receive the same punishment as provided by the law of the state in which the act was done, in the absence of a federal statute punishing such act, does not make the state statute of limitations applicable.[91] Whether a particular statute applies so as to bar a prosecution,[92] when the limitation period commences to run,[93] and under what circumstances the statute will be tolled,[94] depends upon the terms of the statute and the nature of the offense. The commencement of a criminal proceeding does not date from the filing of the information, but from the issuance of the warrant which is served.[95] A defective warrant is effective as a commencement of the prosecution if accused fails to object and gives bail for appearance.[96]

§ 2. Jurisdiction. See 10 C. L. 59—Proceedings had without jurisdiction are of course wholly void.[97] A court has no power to proceed except at a term authorized indictment, evidence and procedure peculiar to particular crimes are treated under topics dealing with such crimes (see Homicide, 11 C. L. 1799; Larceny, 10 C. L. 600, and like topics).

83. Jones v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 417.

84. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313.

85. Plea in abatement proper remedy by which to attack indictment on account of improper conduct of district attorney before grand jury, though statutes did not provide therefor. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313.

86. Biddle v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 759.

87. Act June 30, 1906, c. 3934 (34 Stat. 814), expressly extends common law as well as federal statutes. Biddle v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 759. Obtaining money by false pretenses is a crime punishable by such court. Id.

88. Barton v. State [Miss.] 47 S 521.

89. State v. Burt [N. H.] 71 A 30.

90. Prosecution for rape barred where more than one year had elapsed since first intercourse. Ex parte Black [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 534.

91. Federal limitations act applies in such case. United States v. Andem, 158 F 996.

92. U. S. Rev. St. § 1044, limiting offenses not capital to three years, is general and applies to all misdemeanors constituting offenses against the United States whenever added by congress to list of statutory offenses. United States v. Central Vermont R. Co., 157 F 291. One year limitation for prosecution of violation of Bankr. Act 1898, c. 541, § 29d, does not apply to prosecution for conspiracy to commit such offense. United States v. Comstock, 162 F 416.

93. The statute does not commence to run until the offense is complete. In conspiracy to defraud government of public lands, not until patents were obtained. United States v. Lonabaugh, 158 F 314. Prosecution of public officials for receiving bribes not barred until 5 years after bribe was actually received. People v. Gibson, 191 N. Y. 227, 83 NE 976. Prosecution for conspiracy under Rev. St. U. S. § 5440, is not barred until 3 years after the last overt act alleged. Jones v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 417. Indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands held not to charge any overt act within 3 years preceding filing of indictment, as such conspiracy may be complete before issuance of patent. United States v. Black [C. C. A.] 160 F 431.

94. Time during which defendant was out of the state is not a part of the time limited, under Code Cr. Proc. §§ 142, 143, though defendant was in the state when the crime was committed. People v. Sewell, 56 Misc. 250, 107 NYS 382.

95, 96. State v. White, 76 Kan. 654, 92 P 829.

97. Court of special sessions having imposed a fine beyond its jurisdiction to impose, the judgment is void, and county court cannot remit the cause for imposition of a proper sentence, but can only reverse and declare the judgment void. People v. De Graff, 56 Misc. 429, 107 NYS 1038.

by law.[98] Courts can acquire jurisdiction of causes only in the mode prescribed by law, and agreements of parties in contravention thereof are of no effect.[99]

The power and jurisdiction of municipal and other inferior courts, and whether the same is concurrent or exclusive,[1] must be determined by reference to statutes applicable to the particular count or crime, the measure of jurisdiction being usually the nature and gravity of the offense and the penalty provided by law.[2] Statutes also determine and fix the territorial jurisdiction of inferior courts.[3] Courts of one state have no jurisdiction over an offense committed in another.[4]

98. Conviction at term of court held pursuant to void law was void. Hodo v. State [Ala.] 47 S 134. Proceedings void when held at term of court not authorized. Gordy v. State [Ala.] 45 S 901. Judgment at term of court not authorized without jurisdiction and void. Rawlinson v. State [Ala.] 45 S 891.

99. Morse v. People, 43 Colo. 118, 95 P 285. Where cause originated in justice court and was pending on appeal in county court, parties could not, by agreeing to transfer, confer jurisdiction on district court, though latter court would have jurisdiction of cause if properly invoked. Id.

1. See, also, post, § 18. Mayor of city which has no police court has not exclusive jurisdiction of violations of health ordinance. Justice of peace also has jurisdiction. Bourgeois v. Ocean City Board of Health [N. J. Law] 71 A 53. Justice court has exclusive jurisdiction of prosecution for failure to work roads (Revisal 1905, § 2721), and superior court had no jurisdiction where justice bound defendant over to that court. State v. Clayton, 146 N. C. 599, 60 SE 415. City of Butte has authority from state to define by ordinance and punish vagrancy. Police courts of city have exclusive jurisdiction of prosecutions for violations of such ordinance, and such prosecutions must be in name of city. State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 37 Mont. 202, 95 P 841. Police courts of city also have concurrent jurisdiction with justices' courts over prosecution of offense of vagrancy defined and made punishable by state penal code, and such prosecutions must be in name of state. Id. The offense of practicing medicine without authority (Laws 1896, c. 165, § 8) is one of which district court has exclusive jurisdiction. Proceedings in superior court improper. State v. Heffernan, 28 R. I. 477, 68 A 364.

2. County judge has jurisdiction to try offense of obstructing passway (Ky. St. 1903, § 4354), penalty being fine of $10. Evans v. Cook, 33 Ky. L. R. 788, 111 SW 326. Justice has jurisdiction of same offense. Hughes v. Holbrook, 32 Ky. L. R. 1210, 108 SW 225. Justice has jurisdiction of prosecution of obtaining property by false pretenses, property being of less value than $10. Code 1896, § 4630. Davis v. State [Ala.] 45 S 154. Under Code Cr. Proc. § 717, court of special sessions has no jurisdiction to impose a fine of more than $50. People v. De Graff, 56 Misc. 429, 107 NYS 1038. City court had jurisdiction of offense of "stabbing another," allegations making it a felony not appearing. Norwood v. State, 3 Ga. App. 325, 59 SE 828. New York City magistrate has jurisdiction of charge of disorderly conduct within the city, though acts charged constitute misdemeanor under penal code of state. In re Jacobs, 57 Misc. 655, 109 NYS 1068. Duluth municipal court held not to have jurisdiction to try offense punishable by both fine and imprisonment. State v. Bates [Minn.] 117 NW 844. Justice of peace has jurisdiction over violation of Pen. Code, § 436 (conducting business without license in violation of town ordinance). Ex parte Bagshaw, 152 Cal. 701, 93 P 864. Justice of peace, not superior court, has original jurisdiction of offense of cruelty to animals (Revisal 1905, § 3299), penalty being fine of not more than $50 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. State v. Bossee, 145 N. C. 579, 59 SE 879. Forfeiture of liquor, in prosecution for transporting contraband liquor, is not part of punishment, which consists of fine not to exceed $100 or imprisonment not to exceed 30 days. Hence magistrate has jurisdiction. State v. Pope, 79 S. C. 87, 60 SE 234. Juvenile court held to have power to decide whether affidavit charged a misdemeanor, causing or encouraging a delinquency of girl in Industrial School, or rape; and having decided that it charged former, it had power to try the accused and assess punishment, and judgment was not subject to collateral attack. Tullis v. Shaw, 169 Ind. 662, 83 NE 376. City court had no jurisdiction over prosecution for pointing pistol where undisputed evidence showed that the act of pointing the pistol was a part of and simply preceded the shooting at another, or assault with intent to murder, the misdemeanor being merger in the felony. Eberhart v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 730.

3. Municipal court of Chicago has no jurisdiction outside city limits. People v. Strassheim, 228 Ill. 681, 81 NE 1129. The municipal court of Chicago has no jurisdiction to try a case transferred to it by the criminal court of Cook county where the indictment charges an offense committed at and within said county, but does not allege it to have been committed within the city of Chicago. Ullrich v. People, 137 Ill. App. 85. Justice of peace has jurisdiction in criminal cases throughout county in which he is elected and where he resides. His authority to hear and determine such cases is not confined to township for which he is elected and where he resides. Rev. St. 1906, § 610. Steele v. Karb, 78 Ohio St. 376, 85 NE 680. In Idaho, though justice of peace has jurisdiction throughout county, he is required to reside and exercise his jurisdiction within his own precinct. State v. Noyes [Idaho] 96 P 435. But an exercise of jurisdiction outside his precinct is a mere irregularity, and where accused stipulated for trial in another precinct, he was not entitled to be discharged, on appeal, for want of jurisdiction of the justice to try him in such precinct. Id.

4. Kentucky courts cannot take cognizance

Where two courts have concurrent jurisdiction of an offense, jurisdiction of one does not attach exclusively until defendant has been formally charged therein [5] and arrested under the accusation thus filed.[6] When jurisdiction of one attaches, it becomes exclusive,[7] and an acquittal or conviction in one bars prosecution in the other,[8] even though the sentence imposed is illegal and less than that required by law,[9] in the absence of fraud or collusion practiced to defeat jurisdiction of such other court.[10] That one is confined under sentence pronounced by one court does not prevent his prosecution for another offense in an inferior court.[11]

Federal courts have no jurisdiction over crimes except such as are made cognizable before them by act of congress.[12] Congress has provided that offenses committed in territory ceded to the United States, but not specifically prohibited or made punishable by federal statute, shall be liable to and shall receive the same punishment as like offenses are liable to under the laws of the state within which such territory is located.[13] Where the state has ceded jurisdiction over such territory to the United State, state courts have no jurisdiction over offenses committed therein.[14] The jurisdiction of state courts over crimes being general, and that of federal courts special,[15] an indictment in a state court need not negative jurisdiction.[16]

State courts of Oklahoma have jurisdiction to proceed with criminal cases, not of a federal character, pending and not finally disposed of in the district courts of Oklahoma Territory and in the United States courts of Indian Territory, when the state was admitted to the union,[17] actual prosecution not having been commenced. The district court of the county in which the crime was committed has jurisdiction to proceed in such case.[18] of crimes committed in neighboring state. Hylton v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 64, 91 SW 696. No jurisdiction where offense, violation of crop pooling law, took place in Ohio, if at all. O'Bannlon v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 907.

5. Bare arrest of person and preliminary examination before justice, no indictment being returned, did not attach jurisdiction so as to exclude jurisdiction of district court. Greathouse v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 218, 109 SW 165.

6. In a case in which a justice of the peace and the circuit court have concurrent jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the latter does not attach exclusively until defendant has been arrested under the indictment. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

7. Petit larceny, second offense, is only misdemeanor, not felony; hence, where one accused of that crime is first brought before police court, that court has exclusive jurisdiction, and has no power to order him bound over to grand jury in absence of motion under Code Cr. Proc. § 57. People v. Craig, 112 NYS 781.

8. Acquittal of assault in mayor's court held bar to prosecution in state court. Brooke v. State [Ala.] 46 S 491. Plea setting up such acquittal held sufficient. Id. Conviction in justice court may be pleaded in bar of prosecution in circuit court. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

9. Fine only imposed. Imprisonment also required. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

10. No fraud or collusion shown. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

11. That defendant in criminal case is confined in jail under sentence for felony pronounced by superior court is no ground why he cannot be tried on misdemeanor in city court. At any rate, being before the court for trial, he cannot object that his presence there was illegally obtained. Coleman v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 487.

12. Common-law offenses cannot be punished by federal courts without federal statutory authority. State v. Morris [N. J. Law] 68 A 1103.

13. Rev. St. U. S. § 539. State v. Morris [N. J. Law] 68 A 1103. Federal court held to have jurisdiction over prosecution of crime denounced by state law of New Jersey committed in post-office on land purchased with consent of state and jurisdiction over which had been ceded by the state to the United States. United States v. Andem, 158 F 996.

14. State courts have no jurisdiction to try assault and battery case where offense was committed on territory ceded to United States with consent of state, state having ceded jurisdiction to United States. State v. Morris [N. J. Law] 68 A 1103. Where there is no proof that building used as post-office, in which assault was committed, was on ground owned by the United States, but proof is that building was leased by postmaster, question of jurisdiction of state is not material. Brooks v. State [Ala.] 46 S 491.

15. State v. Buckaroo Jack [Nev.] 96 P 497.

16. Indictment of Indian for killing another Indian need not show that crime was not committed on Indian reservation. State v. Buckaroo Jack [Nev.] 96 P 497.

17. State courts are successors of such territorial and United States courts. Higgins v. Brown [Okl.] 94 P 703.

18. Indictment for murder alleged to have been committed within jurisdiction of United States court for Northern district of Indian

Transfer. See 10 C. L. 61—Statutes usually govern the transfer of causes from one court to another.[19] In Kentucky, where it develops on the trial that the court has no jurisdiction, the offense having been committed in another county, the case may be transferred to such county,[20] but it cannot be there tried upon the same indictment.[21] On a preliminary hearing before a United States commissioner to determine whether defendants shall be held and removed to another district for trial, it is necessary to determine whether any offense against the United States has been committed [22] and whether there is reasonable cause to believe defendants guilty.[23] In such proceeding the indictment is presumptive evidence of probable cause as against defendants,[24] though other competent evidence may be received on the issue.[25] If the indictment produced as evidence of probable cause is framed in the language of the statute with ordinary averments of time and place, and sets out the substance of the offense in language sufficient to apprise accused of the nature of the charge against him, it is sufficient to justify removal even though it may be open to a motion to quash or in arrest of judgment in the court in which it was originally filed.[26] That it appears in such proceedings that acts have been committed which could be prosecuted in the district where the proceedings are had is no reason to deny the removal, when it also appears that accused may properly be proceeded against in the district where the indictment has been filed.[27] Removal may be had from another district to the District of Columbia, though the offense charged is a common-law offense.[28]

§ 3. Place of prosecution and change of venue. See 10 C. L. 61—Usually the prosecution must be in the county where the offense was committed. But the matter is largely controlled by statute, and in some cases an offense may be prosecuted in either of two or more counties.[29] In the notes are given decisions as to the venue of the Territory, and pending in said court on admission of state into Union, is cognizable in district court of state in county where offense was committed. Higgins v. Brown [Okl.] 94 P 703. Same holding as to crime of assault with intent to kill with a deadly weapon. Ex Parte Brown [Okl.] 94 P 556. Same holding as to crime of receiving stolen goods. Ex parte Ellis [Okl.] 94 P 656. No indictment for murder being returned nor prosecution commenced prior to the admission of the state, district court of county where committed had jurisdiction. Ex parte Bailey [Okl.] 94 P 653. Indictment for manslaughter, committed under laws of Indian Territory, returned after admission of Oklahoma as state, no prosecution having been begun prior to such date, cognizable in district court in county where offense committed. Ex parte Buchanen [Okl.] 94 P 943. Same holding in embezzlement case, complaint having been filed by United States commissioner, warrant issued, and prisoner apprehended prior to admission of Indian Territory as state, and indictment filed and prosecution commenced thereafter. Ex parte Curiee [Okl.] 96 P 414.

19. Order transferring cause from district to county court need not set out name and nature of offense charged. Setting it out is surplusage and immaterial. Massie v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 648, 107 SW 846. Where, after change of venue from police court to justice of peace, defendant appeared and expressly waived all informalities and irregularties, and submitted to trial without objection, he cannot object to irregularities in transfer of cause, if justice has jurisdiction of subject-matter. Ex parte Graye, 36 Mont. 394, 93 P 266. Entry on minutes of city court of order of judge of superior court directing transfer of certain indictments for misdemeanors to city court, where such transfer is authorized by law, is sufficient to give city court jurisdiction of the transferred cases. Coleman v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 487.

20. Gearhart v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 989, 112 SW 572.

21. Since accused could not be convicted under charge of crime in another county, he should be held to answer to new indictment. Gearhart v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 989, 112 SW 572.

22, 23. Pereles v. Weil, 167 F 419.

24. Pereles v. Weil, 157 F 419. Certified copy of indictment is sufficient to make out prima facie case of probable cause in proceeding for removal. United States v. Barber, 157 F 889.

25. In proceedings to remove persons from one federal district to another where they were charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands, entries in the General Land Office showing certificates of purchase to have been issued more than 8 years before filing of indictment were admissible on question of probable cause. United States v. Black [C. C. A.] 160 F 431.

26, 27. United States v. Wimsatt, 161 F 586.

28. Commission of common-law offense against United States is indictable in District of Columbia. United States v. Wimsatt, 161 F 586.

29. See following citations; also topics dealing with particular crimes.

offense of homicide,[30] conspiracy,[31] conversion,[32] theft,[33] receiving stolen property,[34] discrimination in freight rates under federal statute,[35] violation of statute requiring maintenance of railway station,[36] and violation of statute regulating form of corporate advertisements.[37]

Change of venue.[See 10 C. L. 62]—The right to a change of venue is not absolute [38] but rests upon statute. Thus the right may be denied as to certain cases [39] or may be limited to but one change.[40] In some states the state may secure a change of the place of trial under the same circumstances as a defendant may,[41] and statutes which so provide are constitutional.[42] In any case statutory requirements as to procedure must be complied with and some statutory ground for a change must be shown, the burden being upon defendant to make the proper showing.[43] Illustrative holdings as to notice of the application [44] and other prerequisites,[45] the form and sufficiency of the application and supporting affidavits,[46] power and duty of courts to hear the application and act upon it,[47] procedure at hearing, and scope of inquiry,[48] are given

30. By statute in some states, homicide may be prosecuted either in county where injury was inflicted or in that where death occurred. Cr. Code 1902, § 119. State v. McCoomer, 79 S. C. 63, 60 SE 237.

31. An indictment for conspiracy in the federal courts may be prosecuted either where the conspiracy was formed or where any overt act done to effect it takes place. Arnold v. Weil, 157 F 429.

32. Conversion of money by draft drawn on St. Louis bank occurred in St. Louis, though defendant was in another county. State v. Mispagel, 207 Mo. 557, 106 SW 513.

33. Offense of theft, committed within 400 yards of county line, may be prosecuted in either county, under statute. McElroy v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 57, 111 SW 948.

34. Venue of crime of receiving stolen property is in county where it was received. No jurisdiction in county to which property was later sent. State v. Pray [Nev.] 94 P 218.

35. Requirement that prosecution of crimes against United States be had in district where offense was committed as required by U. S. Const. 6th Amend. is not violated by Elkins Act of Feb. 19, 1903, permitting offense of obtaining transportation of goods at less than publisher's rates to be tried in any federal district through which such transportation was conducted. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S., 207 U. S. 590, 52 Law. Ed. 354.

36. Violation of statute by failure to erect station (railway) at certain point was committed at that place, and not where office of company was located. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 SW 960.

37. Prosecution for failure to use word "incorporated" after name in advertising matter must be in county where corporation has principal office or agent for service, not in any county where advertisement is published. Paracamph Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 587.

38. Glazier v. Ingham Circuit Judge [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 465, 116 NW 1007.

39. Change of venue is not authorized in misdemeanor cases in Texas. Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370.

40. Defendant entitled to only one change of venue. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41.

41. Rev. Code 1905, § 9931. Zinn v. Morton County Dist. Ct. [N. D.] 114 NW 472. Thus a change of venue may be had by the state in North Dakota, on account of local prejudice against enforcement of the law involved. Prohibition law. Id.

42. Zinn v. Morton County Dist. Ct. [N. D.] 114 NW 472.

43. The burden is upon defendant to show his inability to obtain a fair and impartial trial in the county in which the offense was committed. Showing insufficient. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059.

44. Statute shortening notice of application for change of venue from 10 to 4 days is valid. State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 91, 60 SE 226.

45. Under Virginia practice, an application for change of venue on the ground of difficulty in obtaining qualified jurors must be preceded by an application to summon jurors beyond the county, but such preliminary application is not necessary where change of venue is asked for on the ground of local feeling and prejudice. Uzzle v. Com., 107 Va. 919, 60 SE 52.

46. In Texas an application for change of venue must be supported by the affidavits of two credible persons, residents of the county where the prosecution is instituted. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. This requirement is not met by the affidavit of defendant and one other person. Id. Denial of change of venue not error where application was not supported by affidavits of credible residents of the county as required by Code Cr. Proc. art. 615, though accused claimed he was unable to obtain them on account of local prejudice, court having refused to grant application of its own motion, as authorized by art. 613. Macklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 197, 109 SW 145.

47. Under statutes, courts of general sessions and of common pleas may be open at same time, and application for change of venue made to former when common pleas was in session was made at a "regular term." State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 91, 60 SE 226. Under Laws 1907, p. 210, creating an additional division of the criminal court of Jackson county, and providing for changes of venue, either division is to receive and try changes of venue from the other independent of the will of the judge of division, and that judge has no power to in the notes. Whether the application should be granted or refused depends upon the circumstances shown.[49] The matter is one resting very largely in the sound discretion of the trial court,[50] the exercise of which is not reviewable except for abuse resulting in prejudice,[51] and the same rule applies to the selection of a county to which the cause is transferred.[52] An order granting change of venue, before issue joined, is premature.[53] Where a change of venue has been had, the court of the county to which the trial is transferred is invested with complete and exclusive jurisdiction,[54] and the court of the county in which the prosecution originated can-call in another judge. State v. Fort, 210 Me. 512, 109 SW 737. The grant of power to try changes of venus carries with it the power to meet, open court, try the cass, and adjourn. Id. The absence of counter affidavits does not deprive the judge of his discretion to grant or refuse an application for a change of venue on account alleged prejudice of inhabitants of the county in which trial is to occur, but the judge may weigh and consider what he himself judicially knows of the development of the trial, of the situatien of the case, and of the facts alluded to in the applicatien. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109.

48. A motion for change of venue in felony case must be heard on affidavits. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. A request to allow an amendment to a motion for change of venue should specify the respect in which it is to be amended. Kinslew v. State, 85 Ark. 514, 109 SW 524. The Arkansas statute requiring a petition for a change of venue to be supported by the affidavits of two credible persons does not contemplate that the truth or falsity of the facts shall be inquired into on the hearing. The inquiry must be confined to the question whether affiants are credible persons. Not error to exclude testimony of sheriff as to facts. Strong v. State, 85 Ark. 536, 109 SW 536. State only sought te prove denial of one fact stated in accused's petition for change of venue, and court refused to receive evidence from either side. Held, facts stated in petition must be taken as true, except that which state sought te disprove. Uzzle v. Com., 107 Va. 919, 60 SE 52. On hearing of application for change of venue, witnesses should have been allowed to testify that "sentiment was against the man," but not that "he could not have a fair trial;" but latter was harmless where all facts were testified to. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999.

49. Denial of motion proper, it not being shown that defendant could have fairer or more impartial trial in another county. Glazier v. Ingham Circuit Judge [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 465, 116 NW 1007. Denial of motion held within discretien of court. People v. Boyd, 151 Mich. 577, 15 Det. Leg. N. 36, 115 NW 687. Evidence insufficient to show such local prejudice as to prevent defendant from having a fair and impartial trial. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999. Refusal of change within court's discretion, court having heard evidence on credibility of affiants. Strong v. State, 85 Ark. 536, 109 SW 536. Motion properly denied where persons making supporting affidavits admitted that they had been in only one locality in the county and did not even know whether persons they had talked to were inhabitants of the county. Kinslow v. State, 85 Ark. 514, 109 SW 524. Proper to overrule application for change of venue where persons making affidavit that inhabitants were prejudiced swore recklessly, it appearing on their examination that they knew only a few people in a small hamlet. Duckworth v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 268. Second application properly disregarded, first having been denied and no facts warranting reinvestigation appearing. Id. Defendant not entitled to change of venus where he and deceased were strangers in community and jurors testified that they knew nothing about the crime or parties and would give accused an impartial trial. Cason v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 220, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 339, 106 SW 337. That sheriff had put a similar hypothetical case te judge and asked whether it would be a violation of law did net disqualify the judge. Owens v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 362, 107 SW 548. Where judge is disqualified and requests another to sit and hear the case, and he is also unable to hear it, and a third is requested, a change of venue need not be granted. State v. Leng, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. That court indicated in the afternoon of one day that he would grant change of venue, but next day denied the motion without receiving other evidence, was not ground for new trial. Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 SE 816.

Change of venue should have been granted where feeling of white people against accused's race was such that military had to be called out and posse comitatus summened by court te aid sheriff in protecting accused, and jail of another county had to be used, and such condition continued during trial and during proceedings for review. Uzzle v. Com., 107 Va. 919, 60 SE 52. Change of venus should have been granted on account of local feeling and prejudice, on showing made. Johnson v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1117, 107 SW 768. Evidence held to shew that accused (negro, charged with shooting white man) could not have fair and impartial trial in county. Error to refuse change of venue. Anderson v. State [Miss.] 46 S 65. If it appears from the evidence offered in suppert of a motion for a change of venue that it is improbable the defendant can secure a fair and impartial trial or an unbiased or unprejudiced jury in the county of his residence, it is the duty of the court to order a change of venue. State v. Dickerson, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 193.

52. No abuse of discretion in transferring cause under circumstances shown. Zinn v. Morton County Dist. Ct. [N. D.] 114 NW 472.

53. Writ of mandamus issued ordering judge to set aside such order. Bresnahan v. Acting Cass Circuit Judge [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 805, 117 NW 1053.

not, after a change of venue, proceed to try defendant upon a second information or indictment charging the same offense.[55] The clerk may be allowed to place file mark upon papers, after transfer, nunc pro tunc, papers having been properly received and filed.[56]

§ 4. Indictment and information. A. Necessity of indictment. See 10 C. L. 64—Constitutional and statutory provisions control the question whether prosecution must be by indictment [57] or whether it may be by information or indictment.[58] In New York a court of special sessions of the city of New York may be divested of jurisdiction in misdemeanor cases by a certificate, issued by a judge of a court of general sessions or other officer authorized by statute, that it is reasonable that the charge against defendant should be prosecuted by indictment.[59]

§ 4. B. Finding and filing and formal requisites. See 10 C. L. 61

Indictment. See 10 C. L. 65—No preliminary examination is essential to the finding of an indictment by a grand jury.[60] Where a bill is founded upon a constable's re-Wyo. 381, 94 P 459. Since a defendant cannot be subject to trial at the same time upon two informations or indictments charging the same offense. Id.

55. Two informations charging murder of same man at same time and place charge same offense, though one charges two persons jointly with the crime, one being defendant in first information. Keefs v. Carbon County Dist. Ct., 16 Wyo. 381, 94 P 459.

56. Papers were treated as properly filed, and neglect to place file mark on was oversight. Rios v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 299.

57. Felony can be prosecuted only upon indictment. People v. Craig, 112 NYS 781. Infamous offenses can only be tried, in the federal courts, upon indictment. Charge of violation of U. S. Rsv. St. § 5440 is an infamous offense. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313. A statute authorizing prosecution of the offense of keeping a disorderly house otherwise than upon an indictment by the grand jury is invalid on constitutional grounds. Atlantic City v. Rollins [N. J. Law] 69 A 964. Under Rhode Island statutes a violation of act regulating practice of dentistry must be prosecuted by indictment, and not by complaint and warrant. State v. Rosenkrans, 28 R. I. 474, 68 A 309. Failure of railroad company to build station at certain point properly prosecuted by indictment under Laws 1905, p. 265. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 SW 960.

58. Const. art. 2, § 23, authorizes legislature to change, regulate, or abolish grand jury system; hence legislature has power to provide for prosecution by indictment or information. Saleen v. People, 41 Colo. 317, 92 P 731. A prosecution by information for a felony is not repugnant to the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. Mo. Const. art. 2, § 12, providing for prosecution by indictment or information, is valid. Ex parte McLaughlin, 210 Mo. 657, 109 SW 626. Prosecuting attornsy may file information when grand jury are not in actual session, having adjourned. Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 6802. State v. Strange [Wash.] 97 P 233. In Illinois, under constitution and municipal court act, the Chicago municipal Court has jurisdiction to try on information all violations of criminal laws punishable by fine or by imprisonment otherwise than in penitentiary. People v. Glowacki, 236 Ill. 612, 86 NE 368. If offense is one punishable either by fine or imprisonment in the penitentiary, or both by fine and imprisonment in penitentiary, then prosecution can be on indictment only. Id.

59. People v. Rosenberg, 112 NYS 316. The burden is upon accused to show that such application is reasonable. Id. While such application is addressed largely to the discretion of the judicial officer to whom it is presented, it may be said that it should not be granted unless it is made to appear (1) that a case presents intricate and complicated questions of fact, rendering a jury trial proper; (2) that it presents difficult questions of law; or (3) that a property right is involved; or (4) that a decision may be far-reaching in its effect and becoming a precedent which will regulats a matter of general interest; or (5) that the case is of exceptional character, and that defendant cannot, for some special reason, have a fair trial in the court of special sessions. Id. Charge against pawnbroker of violating Greater New York Charter, Laws 1901, p. 137, c. 466, § 317, in that he refused to exhibit property pawned and for which pawn ticket had been issued, held not to involve any question or right warranting issuance of certificate. Id. Where accused was police officer charged with misdemeanor in violating Pen. Code, § 289, his case was held exceptional and to involve a matter of public interest so as to make a jury trial desirable; hence granting of certificate that it was reasonable to prosecute by indictment hsld proper. People v. Willis, 112 NYS 368. Under Laws 1897, p. 600, committing trials of certain misdemeanors to court of special sessions subject to the power of certain judges to certify that it is reasonable that a charge should be prosecuted by indictment, one charged with violating Sabbath laws was entitled to such certificate. People v. Butts, 121 App. Div. 226, 105 NYS 677.

60. In the federal courts the grand jury may return an indictment based on evidence brought before them though there has been no preliminary hearing before a commissioner. United States v. Kerr, 159 F 185. Preliminary examination before magistrate not essential to finding of indictment by grand jury; hence immaterial that preliminary proceedings had been commenced and dismissed before indictment found. State v. Gieseke, 209 Mo. 331, 108 SW 525.

turn, the offense charged in the bill must be identical with that, the essentials of which appear in the constable's return.[61] The grand jury must be legally constituted.[62] Irregularities in the drawing of the grand jury [63] or in proceedings before it [64] which do not prejudicially affect the rights of the accused person are immaterial, but a violation of accused's constitutional rights invalidates the indictment.[65] An indictment is not found until it is presented to the court.[66] The indictment should show that it was returned by a grand jury [67] and that the grand jurors were properly qualified, though in the latter respect the bill may be aided by the caption [68] or by statements in the record.[69] An indictment otherwise legally returned will not be set aside solely because returned on a legal holiday.[70] Holdings as to signature [71] and endorsements [72] are given in the note.

61. Court of indictment held properly quashed where it charged common-law offense of unlawfully obstructing highway, while constable's return charges taking and using public road under act Feb. 19, 1849, P. L. 79, without constructing new road to take its place. Commonwealth v. Huntingdon & B. T. Mt. R. & Coal Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 416. Count of indictment charging taking and using public road under act Feb. 19, 1849, P. L. 79, without substituting new one in its place, held sufficient where it followed constable's return and particularly could have left defendant in no doubt as to offense intended to be charged. Commonwealth v. Huntingdon & Broadtop Mountain R. & Coal Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 416.

62. Indictment by grand jury consisting originally of 15, reduced to 14, and then increased to 15, void. Reduction must be made, if at all, to 13, under statute. Osborn v. State [Ala.] 45 S 666.

63. Indictment will not be quashed on ground that panel of grand jurors was not original panel made by jury commissioners where, while it appeared blank upon which jury list was written was signed by commissioners before names were written thereon, it was shown list was filled in under direction of clerk of jury commissioners from list made out by him at time jury was drawn and lists certified were correct and that he had list of jurors and that it contained the same names as list returned by commissioners to clerk of court of quarter sessions. Commonwealth v. Hughes, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 90. An indictment will not be quashed because the sheriff failed to lock the jury wheel and cause it to be sealed with the seal of himself and commissioners after completing the selection and depositing of the juror's names in the wheel where the wheel would have been immediately opened for the selection of the jury and there was no possibility of interference by unauthorized persons. Commonwealth v. Hughes, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 90; Commonwealth v. Tilly, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 35.

64. Accused cannot complain of a charge to the grand jury, general in character, before the petit jury was impanelled. State v. Owens, 79 S. C. 125, 60 SE 305. General instructions to a grand jury cannot constitute ground for reversal of a verdict of a petit jury. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309. Presence of deputy attorney general in grand jury room during investigation of matter brought before jury by attorney general at direction of governor no ground for dismissal. People v. Acritelli, 57 Misc. 574, 110 NYS 430. Consideration of evidence relating to more than one offense of the same kind, at the same time, is not improper. Id.

65. An indictment based on testimony given by accused before the grand jury pursuant to a subpoena should be quashed. Code 1896, § 1792. No person may be prosecuted for matters so disclosed. State v. Bramlett [Miss.] 47 S 433. Gen. St. 1902, § 664, providing that no verdict shall be set aside on account of any irregularity in summoning the jury, does not apply to a case where jurors were improperly drawn by deputy sheriff instead of by clerk and an appeal taken from a ruling disallowing a challenge duly taken to an illegal panel. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 A 1059.

66. Until that time, grand jury may withdraw it; hence improper to question accused before grand jury in another case, but relative to matters for which an indictment has been voted against him. People v. Flaherty, 110 NYS 154.

67. Indictment returned into federal court, reciting that the "grand inquest" of the United States of America, inquiring for, etc., held not objectionable as failing to show that it was returned by a grand jury. Geiger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 844.

68. While the caption is not a part of the indictment for the purpose of amendment, it may be used to aid the indictment. State v. Moore [N. J. Err. & App.] 68 A 165. Thus, where the caption shows that the grand jurors were all sworn, no further statement of their qualification is necessary. Objection was that indictment did not show privilege to take an affirmation in place of an oath, there being a recital of a presentment on "oaths and affirmations." Id.

69. Statement in record that "grand jurors were duly sworn" is sufficient as against motion to quash indictment on ground that record failed to show foreman of grand jury was properly and separately sworn. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109.

70. Macklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 197, 109 SW 145.

71. Indictment for commission of offense against election law, prosecuted by attorney general or assistant, is not demurrable because not signed by district attorney. Code Cr. Proc. § 276 not mandatory. People v. Foster, 112 NYS 706. Signature of prosecuting attorney as such on indictment without adding name of county, held sufficient. State v. Walker, 129 Mo. App. 371, 108 SW 615.

72. Indictment endorsed: "This is a true

Information.[See 10 C. L. 68]—A preliminary hearing before and commitment by a magistrate [73] is sometimes prerequisite to the filing of a valid information,[74] and usually there must be a proper complaint affidavit or other accusation,[75] and the information and preliminary complaint must correspond and charge the same offense,[76] or at least be based upon the same transaction.[77] An affidavit on which an information is based is sufficient if it charges the elements of the offense.[78] An information can be exhibited only by the authorized public prosecutor.[79] In the notes are holdings relating to signature,[80] verification,[81] endorsement of names of witnesses,[82] and filing [83] of the information.

bill. Marion Phillips, Foreman of Grand Jury Filed Dec. 5th, 1906. Josiah M. Harrell, Clerk." Held sufficient to show indictment returned by grand jury into proper court. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706. If an indictment sufficiently charges an offense under any statute, it is immaterial that the wrong statute is endorsed on the indictment. Wechsler v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 579. The names of witnesses who testify before the grand jury or who are known to the state's attorney when the information is filed must be endorsed on the indictment or information. Rev. Code Cr. Proc. §§ 206, 216, 263. State v. Matejousky [S. D.] 115 NW 96. Failure to endorse the names of such witnesses is ground for setting aside the indictment or information. Id. Failure to endorse names of witnesses on indictment does not invalidate it nor prevent the witnesses whose names are omitted from testifying. Dowell v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1344, 108 SW 847. Failure to endorse names of all witnesses on information not ground for quashal where accused knew they had been summoned and prosecuting attorney testified that he indorsed the names of all he knew about at the time. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Names of witnesses may be permitted to be endorsed pending a motion to quash. Id.

73. See, also, Arrest and Binding Over, 11 C. L. 278.

74. In Utah an information cannot be filed until after examination and commitment by a magistrate, unless such examination be waived. Where one information was filed after examination and commitment, second charging separate offense, could not be filed after first was quashed, without new examination. State v. Jensen [Utah] 96 P 1085. Information was filed and bench warrant was then issued and accused arrested. Procedure held not to violate his constitutional rights. State v. Ju Nun [Or.] 97 P 96. That person jointly accused with defendant was fugitive from justice and had never been granted preliminary hearing held not ground for quashal of information against defendant. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Under Pen. Code, § 809, an information cannot be legally filed until the committing magistrate has made or endorsed on the complaint an order holding accused to answer. People v. Sienfsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863.

75. Complaint is jurisdictional prerequisite of information. Ross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 528, 106 SW 340. Complaint charging an offense may be sworn to before county judge. Stepp v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 158, 109 SW 1093. Wife may sign and file complaint against husband for rape. Harris v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 168. Where the affidavit on which an information is based conforms to statutory requirements, the information cannot be attacked on the ground that the person who verified it had no personal knowledge of the commission of the offense charged. 3 Mills' Ann. St. Rev. Supp. § 1432h. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P 478.

76. Variance between affidavit charging assault on Dec. 29, 1907, and information charging it on Dec. 29, 1906, held fatal. Lackey v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 459, 110 SW 903. That affidavit on which accusation is based is defective in not properly denominating or describing the offense charged is not ground for quashing the accusation if the identity of the offense set forth in the affidavit with that charged in the accusation is sufficiently shown. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501.

77. Where complaint charged assault on female under sixteen with intent to ravish by force, and evidence showed only intent to ravish with consent, accused not entitled to dismissal for failure of evidence, since new information properly charging offense could be filed without being objectionable as variance from complaint. People v. Chamblin, 149 Mich. 653, 14 Det. Leg. N. 628, 113 NW 27.

78. Need not be as technically complete as information itself. State v. Santhuff [Mo. App.] 110 SW 624.

79. No original prosecution can be instituted in court of record except by presentment of indictment by grand jury or by information exhibited by county attorney or some other officer authorized by law. Evans v. Willis [Okl.] 97 P 1047. Where pretended information was exhibited by unauthorized private prosecutor, it was not capable of amendment and gave court no jurisdiction. Id.

80. Signature as "prosecuting attorney" sufficient without adding name of county. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706.

81. Information signed by state's attorney need not be verified. Hall v. People, 134 Ill. App. 559; Giroux v. People, 132 Ill. App. 562.

82. It is not essential that the names of the witnesses upon whose testimony an information was returned be indorsed on the back thereof. Hall v. People, 134 Ill. App. 559.

83. Information in noncapital case may be filed in clerk's office without leave of court, under statutes. State v. Petrich [La.] 47 S 438. Papers are filed when deposited with and received by the clerk. Starbeck v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 192, 109 SW 162. Where papers have been properly and legally filed, but the clerk has neglected to make a nota-

Affidavits.[See 10 C. L. 68]

(§ 4) C. Requisites and sufficiency of the accusation. General rules.[See 10 C. L. 68]—The pleading cannot be aided by inference or presumption, since presumptions are in favor of accused,[84] but it is held that reasonable implications from facts clearly alleged may be properly made in determining the true meaning of the accusation.[85] The descriptive part of an indictment is to be construed with relation to the charging part.[86] The state in its pleading need not anticipate or negative any defense of accused,[87] and the taking of necessary steps preliminary to information need not be alleged.[88] Matters of which courts take judicial notice need not be set out.[89]

Certainty.[See 10 C. L. 70]—Every essential element of the crime sought to be charged must be alleged [90] directly and positively, and not merely by way of recital or as a conclusion of the pleader,[91] and with sufficient clearness, particularity and certainty,[92] as to inform accused of the nature and character of the charge against tion thereof on them, the court may order the indorsement to be made nunc pro tunc. Affidavit and information. Id. In Nebraska an information filed when the court is not in session is void. Error not waived by demurrer, plea of not guilty and trial. Writ of habeas corpus granted after conviction and sentence of imprisonment. Cubbison v. Beemer [Neb.] 116 NW 862.

84. Indictment must show commission of crime; cannot be aided by presumptions, the presumption being in favor of innocence. People v. Schmitz [Cal.] 94 P 419. Presumptions against accused cannot be indulged in considering sufficiency of indictment. State v. Metsker, 169 Ind. 555, 83 NE 241. Any doubt as to what an indictment charges is to be resolved in favor of the accused. Indictment for conspiracy to commit subornation of perjury under stone and timber act held not to charge offense in connection with final proofs. Williamson v. U. S., 207 U. S. 425, 52 Law. Ed. 278.

87. State v. Bridgewater [Ind.] 85 NE 715.

88. The fact that defendant has been given a preliminary examination need not, in Missouri, be alleged in the information. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729.

89. Regulations made by an executive department, pursuant to authority delegated by congress, have the force of law, and courts take judicial notice of their existence and provisions. Rules violated need not be set out in indictment either in terms or by number. United States v. Moody, 164 F 269.

90. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. Nothing will be taken by intendment or implication. State v. Hall, 130 Mo. App. 170, 108 SW 1077. Indictment is insufficient if all allegations, taken as true, fail to charge an offense. Id. Indictment insufficient to charge criminal negligence in operation of railroad train, resulting in death of certain named persons. State v. MacDonald [Minn.] 117 NW 482.

91. No material matter should be introduced wholly by way of argument, conclusion, or recital. Hewitt v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 63. Charge must specifically describe offense; mere conclusions of law insufficient. State v. Bridgewater [Ind.] 85 NE 715. Monopoly in coal not properly charged where essential facts were shown only by intendment, implication, or inference. State v. Eastern Coal Co. [R. I.] 70 A 1. Indictment for maintaining nuisance must state facts constituting the nuisance; allegation that nuisance was permitted is mere conclusion. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 517. Statement in information that it was based on affidavit of another held not to render information defective as not directly alleging facts, they being also alleged. Alderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 525, 111 SW 738.

92. Language used must be such as to inform one of ordinary understanding of crime charged. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552. Averments of the essential elements of the offense which are plain and intelligible to the common understanding are, as against a demurrer, entirely sufficient without regard to their technical accuracy. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721.

Held sufficient: Indictment held not so contradictory in terms, ambiguous or uncertain, as to charge failure to perpetrate attempt, instead of failing to perpetrate offense which he attempted. Commonwealth v. Rodman, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 607. Indictment, under Elkin's rebate law, held sufficient. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S., 209 U. S. 56, 52 Law. Ed. 681. Indictment charging burglary, and prior conviction of attempted burglary, approved. State v. Miller, 209 Mo. 389, 107 SW 1057. Indictment of one as accessary before the fact, alleging that he advised and encouraged perpetration of the crime, sufficient without alleging that he was not present. Larimore v. State, 84 Ark. 606, 107 SW 165. The Philippine Bill of Rights requiring accused to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, is satisfied where such complaint leaves no doubt that it means to charge the falsification of documents, contrary to the penal code of the islands. Paraiso v. U. S., 207 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 249. Indictment for larceny from insurance association held sufficient, under Code Cr. Proc. §§ 283, 284, providing that indictment is good if it sufficiently informs defendant of the accusation against him, and enables him to prepare his defense, and when record would be bar to second prosecution. People v. Mead, 109 NYS 163. Information before a magistrate charging that § 675 of Penal Code was violated by an act him,[93] enable him properly to prepare his defense,[94] and to plead the result, whether conviction or acquittal, as his protection against another prosecution for the same offense.[95] Only the ultimate facts need, however, be alleged.[96] Introductory matter, or matter of inducement, need not be charged directly or in detail but may be alleged in general terms.[97] The entire indictment is to be considered in determining whether the offense is fully stated.[98]

An indictment in the form prescribed by statue,[99] or in the language of the statute creating and defining the offense,[1] or in language of equivalent meaning and import,[2] is sufficient, if the statute sets forth all the essential elements of the crime with sufficient particularity.[3] But, where the statute defines a crime in generic terms endangering public peace, and openly outraging public decency, held sufficient in absence of any objection. People v. Keeper of Erie County Penitentiary, 109 NYS 531.

Held insufficient: Indictment held properly quashed for uncertainty. Wilkinson v. People, 226 Ill. 135, 80 NE 699. Information held insufficient to charge a crime by violation of Yonker's Sanitary Code, art. 15, § 144 (using certain building as boarding house which did not answer requirements), because not alleging a "willful" violation and not describing the acts done. People v. Potter, 112 NYS 298. Indictment failing to state time or place of offense properly quashed. State v. Glennen [Miss.] 47 S 560.

93. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. The charging part of the indictment must sufficiently advise accused in advance of the trial of the nature and character of the offense. Nurnberger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 166 F 721. It will be presumed that accused is a person of common understanding. State v. Faulk [S. D.] 116 NW 72.

94. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. Crime charged must be shown with reasonable certainty by express averments, so as to enable court and jury to understand it, so that accused may be fully informed, and so that there will be no difficulty in determining what evidence is admissible thereunder. Stats v. Metsker, 169 Ind. 555, 83 NE 241.

95. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. An indictment will not be quashed for any defect in form unless it is so vague, indistinct, and indefinite, as to mislead and embarrass defendant in preparing his defense, or expose him after conviction or acquittal to substantial danger of another prosecution for same offense. Strobhar v. State [Fla.] 47 S 4. Indictment for conspiracy sufficient, if so clear and specific as to enable defendants to prepare for trial and to bar another prosecution for same charge. People v. Miles, 108 NYS 510.

96. Not necessary to plead evidence. State v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363. Information sufficient, which charged all elements of offense with such certainty that judgment could be pronounced, though all details of act were not given. State v. Garrett [Kan.] 98 P 219. Under a statute providing for an increase in punishment in case defendant has been twice convicted, sentenced and committed to prison, the indictment charging such prior convictions and punishments need not state the location of prison or prisons to which defendant was committed. State v. Dowden, 137 Iowa, 573, 115 NW 211.

97. So held as to matter of inducement in perjury charge. People v. Tatum, 112 NYS 36. The use of the participle "being" is allowable in setting out matter of inducement, but not in alleging material issuable facts. Hewitt v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 63.

98. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721.

99. Mills' Ann. St. § 1333 provides that indictment for obtaining money by confidence game, as defined by section 1332, shall be sufficient if in language of that section. Held, section 1333 not invalid as in violation of Const. art. 2, § 16, that accused is entitled to be informed of nature of accusation. Lace v. People, 43 Colo. 199, 95 P 802.

1. Usually, following the statutory language in describing the offense is sufficient. State v. Mitchell [Iowa] 116 NW 808. Indictment for misdemeanor is sufficient if it follows the language of the statute constituting the offense. State v. Merget, 129 Mo. App. 46, 107 SW 1015. Accusation sufficient which set forth offense in language of statute, and so plainly that nature of it could easily be understood. Holt v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 992. An information charging a statutory offense in the language of the statute, which fully defines the offense, is sufficient. Koppala v. State [Wyo.] 93 P 662. Code 1896, § 4305, defines offense (attempt to procure abortion), and also prescribes punishment. Indictment in statutory language sufficient. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 47 S 257. Indictment charging illegal sale of liquor in language of statute, sufficient. White v. Com., 107 Va. 901, 59 SE 1101. Indictment of dramshop keeper for selling on Sunday, sufficient, which followed language of statute. State v. Cragg [Mo. App.] 111 SW 856. Indictment substantially pursuing language of statute sufficient (intoxicating liquor sold to convict). Askew v. State [Ala.] 46 S 751. Language of statute charging neglect of public officer, sufficient. State v. Leeper, 146 N. C. 655, 61 SE 585.

2. Precise words of statute need not be used, if equivalent language is used and essential facts stated. Blevins v. State, 85 Ark. 195, 107 SW 393. Precise words of the statute need not be used if words of like import are used and all the facts which constitute the offense are stated. Sherrill v. State, 84 Ark. 470, 106 SW 967. Indictment for embezzlement, in language equivalent to that used in statute, sufficient, without setting out particular facts constituting the offense. Chamberlain v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 555. Information substantially in words of Gen. St. 1902, § 1359 (prohibiting pool selling), would have been good. State v. Scott, 80 Conn. 317, 68 A 258.

3. If every element of the crime as deonly, an indictment in the language of the statute alone is insufficient.[4] In such case, additional facts must be alleged so as to inform accused with certainty as to the nature of the charge.[5] In some states it is held that the information or indictment should name the crime and state the acts constituting it,[6] and that a variance between the designation and the facts pleaded is fatal;[7] in others it is held that, where the facts set out clearly show an offense defined by statute, it is immaterial that the information designates the offense by another name.[8]

Where, by statute, the common-law distinction between principals and accessories has been abolished, one who at common law would be an accessory before the fact may be charged directly in the indictment with the commission of the offense,[9] and on his trial evidence may be received to show that he procured the crime to be committed,[10] or he may be charged as principal by setting out the facts which at common law would constitute him such accessory.[11] An indictment charging him directly with the commission of the offense is not objectionable on the ground that it does not sufficiently inform him of the nature and cause of the accusation.[12] But where the common-law distinction still exists, one charged as principal cannot be convicted upon evidence showing merely that he was an accessory.[13]

Bad spelling and ungrammatical construction See 10 C. L. 71 will not alone vitiate an accusation.[14]

scribed in the statute is charged in the indictment, it is sufficient. State v. Leasman, 137 Iowa, 191, 114 NW 1032. If the act or acts constituting the offense are clearly defined by statute, it is sufficient to charge the crime in the languags of the statute. Affidavit charging entering gambling house, sufficient as against motion to quash. State v. Bridgewater [Ind.] 85 NE 715. Indictment for kidnapping, following language of statute which states essentials of the crime, held sufficient. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867. Indictment against bankrupt for concealing from trustee property of estate is sufficient if it follows language of statute (30 U. S. Stat. 554). United States v. Comstock, 161 F 644. Complaint in language of Gen. Laws, 1896, c. 74, § 5, as amended by Pub. Laws 1901, c. 925, prohibiting riding or driving "faster than a common traveling pace" in certain towns or parts thereof, charges the offense with sufficient particularity. State v. Smith [R. I.] 69 A 1061. Indictment in language of Pen. Code, § 246, making assault by convict, likely to produce great bodily injury punishable by death, is sufficient; need not allege that sentence was by court of competent jurisdiction. People v. Finley, 153 Cal. 59, 94 P 248.

4. Indictment under Burns' Ann. St. 1901. False claims to county commissioners must allege particulars of offense. State v. Metsker, 159 Ind. 556, 83 NE 241.

5. It is necessary in some way to individualize the offense charged, though statutory language is used. State v. Mitchell [Iowa] 118 NW 808. Where a statute upon which a prosecution is based defines the offense in generic terms only, the pleader must resort to particulars; mere language of statute insufficient. State v. Bridgewater [Ind.] 85 NE 715. General language of statute may be used, but must be accompanied by details sufficient to inform accused of the nature of the charge and the facts which he will be obliged to meet on the trial. Weston v. Ter. [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 360. Indictment in statutory language, for bigamy, held insufficient because not alleging all essential elements of offense (validity and existence of former marriage). Bryan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 744. Indictment under Ky. St. 1903, § 1222, relating to sending of threatening letters, etc., in language of statute, insufficient. Letters sent should have been set out. Commonwealth v. Patrick, 32 Ky. L. R. 343, 105 SW 981. Indictment in language of Rev. St. 1899, § 2991, charging that defendant at certain time and place "sold intoxicating liquor in less quantity than three gallons," held insufficient. State v. Gibbs, 129 Mo. App. 700, 108 SW 688. Language of statute is sufficient only when statute is complete in itself, and when the acts set out in statute have been done or performed. Indictment for assault with deadly weapon insufficient which did not describe weapon. Commonwealth v. White, 33 Ky. L. R. 70, 109 SW 324. Affidavit charging the aiding of an escape, substantially in the language of the statute but also stating the facts out of which the offense arose and the acts done by accused, held sufficient. State v. Sutton [Ind.] 84 NE 824.

6. People v. Schlessel, 112 NYS 45. An indictment must charge or name a crime and must also allege facts showing the means or manner in which it is alleged to have been committed. People v. Foster, 112 NYS 705.

7. It is demurrable if it charges or names one crime and sets up facts constituting a different crime. Such indictment does not conform to Code Cr. Proc. § 323, subd. 2. People v. Foster, 112 NYS 705.

8. Information called crime arson, but facts showed crime under Pen. Code, § 548. People v. Morley [Cal. App.] 97 P 84. The name given the offense is immaterial if the facts charging an offense be clearly stated. People v. Izlar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685.

9, 10, 11, 12. State v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363.

13. Distinction still exists in Nebraska. Skidmore v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 288.

14. Clerical errors immaterial. Omission of "is" and of "ed" from word "kill." Stall-

*Surplusage.*See 10 C. L. 71—Unnecessary words may be rejected as surplusage and are harmless so long as they do not negative the offense meant to be charged.[15]

*Venue.*See 10 C. L. 72—It must appear that the crime charged was committed within the jurisdiction of the court.[16] Reference to the caption may be had to aid allegations of the pleading,[17] and in Missouri, venue may be shown in the margin and need not be alleged in the body of the indictment.[18] An indictment in a state court need not negative federal jurisdiction.[19]

Intent or knowledge.[20]—Alleging a particular intent in the language of the statute is usually sufficient.[21] Where the offense is one prohibited out of regard for the public health or safety the names of specific persons, and an intent to injure them, need not be alleged.[22] Where the intent constitutes the aggravation material to the punishment prescribed, the facts need not be alleged with the same particularity as where the statute prohibits some particular act.[23] Where the indictment alleges that the offense charged was against the form of the statute, it need not allege that the acts were unlawful or unlawfully done, unless this is an element of the statutory definition,[24] nor is an allegation that the act was feloniously done necessary in the case of a felony, unless required by the statute,[25] but, in the case of common-law felonies, the term "felonious" or "felonious intent" must be used.[26]

Time See 10 C. L. 72 and place.—Time need not be alleged unless it is of the essence of the offense,[27] except in so far as it may be necessary to avoid prescription,[28] worth v. State [Ala.] 46 S 518. Bad grammar will not vitiate an indictment, if two constructions are possible, that will be accepted which will uphold the proceedings. Strobhar v. State [Fla.] 47 S 4.

15. State v. Barrett, 121 La. 1058, 46 S 1016. Words without which information is sufficient may be treated as surplusage, and disregarded. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552. Indictment charged aiding, counseling, procuring, and consenting, to setting fire to property which was insured. Words "aiding, procuring, and consenting" could be rejected as surplusage and indictment would then charge substantive crime of "counseling" setting the fire under Crimes Act, § 126. State v. Brand [N. J. Law] 69 A 1092. Where an indictment contains facts sufficient to withstand a demurrer, other defective allegations may be disregarded as surplusage. Bailey v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 140. Surplusage in indictment is not ground for quashing it. United States v. Moody, 164 F 269.

16. Where accusation of embezzlement mentioned county, and stated offense was, "then and there," committed, venue was sufficiently shown. People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401. Information held to show venue of embezzlement with required certainty. People v. O'Brian [Cal. App.] 97 P 679. Venue of larceny sufficiently alleged. McGinnis v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 525. Act June 6, 1900, c. 786, § 4, establishing district court for district of Alaska, and dividing such district into three divisions, gives court in each division jurisdiction throughout district. Hence, indictment is not defective for failing to state that offense was committed in division where indictment was returned. Griggs v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 572.

17. Where caption of information gave county of prosecution, and charging part of information alleged commission of offense in "said county of ———," the information was held to show venue of crime sufficiently. People v. Thompson [Cal. App.] 95 P 386.

18. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2527, county named in margin is taken as venue and it need not be laid in body of indictment. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35.

19. An indictment in a state court against an Indian for the killing of another Indian need not allege that crime was not committed on an Indian reservation. State v. Buckaroo Jack [Nev.] 96 P 497.

20. See 10 C. L. 72. Also topics relating to crimes in which specific intent is essential, such as Homicide, 9 C. L. 1636; Rape, 10 C. L. 1440.

21. Affidavit charging one with obtaining accommodations at hotel "with intent to defraud" sufficiently charges intent, the language of the statute being followed. Clark v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 984.

22. In charge of throwing stones at railroad train, names of persons immaterial, under Code § 5289, par. 6. State v. Leasman, 137 Iowa, 191, 114 NW 1032.

23. State v. Mitchell [Iowa] 116 NW 808.

24. McCaskill v. State [Fla.] 45 S 843. Indictment for carrying concealed weapon must charge that act was "unlawful." Whittaker v. State [Miss.] 45 S 145.

25. Allegation unnecessary under statutes. McCaskill v. State [Fla.] 45 S 843. Where a crime is purely statutory and is defined by statute, an indictment in the language of the statute need not allege a felonious intent. Statutory rape. Howerton v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1008, 112 SW 606. The word "feloniously" need not be used in charging a statutory offense if the word is not used in the statute and the offense was not a felony at common law. Kidnapping. State v. Holland, 120 La. 429, 45 S 380.

26. Howerton v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1008, 112 SW 606. Word "feloniously" is essential in all indictments for felonies, at common law or under statutes. Hocker v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 944, 111 SW 676.

27. Not of the essence in prosecution for illegal sale of liquor. State v. Conega, 121

nor is an allegation of the exact place usually necessary if commission within the court's jurisdiction appears.[29] Where the court may look into prior proceedings and ascertain when the statute of limitations was arrested, facts relied on to avoid the bar of the statute need not be alleged.[30] It is not necessary that an indictment, under a statute which has been repealed or amended since the offense was committed, allege in express terms that the crime charged was committed in violation of said statute while it was in force. It is sufficient if the time of the commission of the offense was prior to the change in the law.[31] Time and place need be directly alleged but once.[32]

Designation of persons.[See 10 C. L. 72]—In designating accused, the use of his initials [33] and of a well known abbreviation of his Christian name [34] have been held sufficient. Where his name is correctly stated several times, an error in one place is immaterial.[35] Where other persons must be designated, failure to set out their names or to allege that their names are unknown is fatal error.[36]

Setting forth written or printed matter.[37]—Indictment for certifying bank check when there were no funds in the bank, to cover the check, need not set out words of certification.[38]

Description and ownership of property.[39]—In Nebraska an allegation of ownership in any one of several owners is sufficient.[40]

La. 522, 46 S 614. Exact time need not be alleged in charge of rape on female under age of consent, time not being an essential element. People v. Sheffield [Cal. App.] 98 P 67.

NOTE: Charging an offense at an impossible date is a fatal defect in the absence of statute abrogating the common law, whether the date is in the future (State v. Sexton, 10 N. C. [Hawks] 184, 14 Am. Dec. 584; Dickson v. State, 20 Fla. 800; State v. Litch, 33 Vt. 67; State v. Ray, Rice L. [S. C.] 33 Am. Dec. 90; Markley v. State, 10 Mo. 291) or at a date too far past (State v. O'Donnell, 81 Me. 271, 17 A 66; Serpentine v. State, 1 How [Miss.] 256), although there are two decisions to the contrary (Conner v. State, 25 Ga. 515, 71 Am. Dec. 184; State v. Pierre, 39 La. Ann. 915, 3 S 60). Under the Missouri statute specifically remedying such defects, indictments placing the date of the offense on a future day have been sustained (State v. Burnett, 81 Mo. 121; State v. McDaniel, 94 Mo. 301, 7 SW 634; State v. Crawford, 99 Mo. 74, 12 SW 354), likewise under a statute requiring the appellate tribunal to disregard technical errors (State v. Brooks, 85 Iowa, 366, 52 NW 240). Under Tennessee Code, § 5124, requiring the offense to be charged to have been committed previous to the finding of the indictment, it is held that an objection to the indictment upon that ground comes too late after verdict, although under a similar provision of the Texas code a contrary result is reached (York v. State, 3 Tex. App. 15; Lee v. State, 22 Tex. App. 547, 3 SW 89; McJunkins v. State, 37 Tex. Cr. Rep. 117, 38 SW 994; Hall v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 38 SW 996), even when the mistake was obviously clerical (Robles v. State, 5 Tex. App. 347); and in Massachusetts, in spite of a statute requiring all objections to process to be raised before judgment, it is held that an indictment charging a future offense charges no offense and the objection may be raised for the first time on appeal (Commonwealth v. Doyle, 110 Mass. 103).—From 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 251.

28. Where time is not of the essence of the offense, it need not be stated in the indictment except so far as may be necessary to avoid limitations. State v. Sloan, 120 La. 170, 45 S 50.

32. When the offense charged is a misdemeanor, if time and place be added to the first act alleged it is deemed to be connected with all the facts subsequently alleged. Indictment charging keeping meat of calves less than 4 weeks old for sale held to charge time and place sufficiently. State v. Peet, 80 Vt. 449, 68 A 661. Where it is alleged that defendant did a certain act upon a certain day and in a certain place, a subsequent allegation that defendant then and there did, or omitted to do, a certain other act, connected with the first, is equivalent to charging one transaction at the same time and place. Grier v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 551.

33. Indictment naming accused by initials and alleging his true name to be unknown to the grand jury is sufficient, under statute. Wellborn v. State [Ala.] 45 S 646. Affidavit charging accused with carrying concealed weapon, designating him by initials, and alleging that his name was unknown to affidavit, held good. Rogers v. State [Ala.] 45 S 221. Where accused was as well known by name "C. H. Libby" as by name "Cyrille H. Libby," indictment in former name was good. State v. Libby, 103 Me. 147, 68 A 631.

Description of money.[See 10 C. L. 74]—In Missouri this matter is provided for by statute.[41]

Duplicity.[See 10 C. L. 74]—An information or indictment may not in a single count charge more than one offense,[42] but the state may, in separate counts, charge the same offense in various ways in order to meet the proof.[43] If but one crime is charged, it is immaterial that the facts alleged incidentally, show the commission of another crime.[44] Where a statute defining a crime enumerates several acts, either of which or all of which constitute the offense, all or any of such acts may be charged conjunctively without rendering the accusation double.[45] But an indictment alleging several of such acts disjunctively is bad.[46] When a statute makes either of two or more distinct acts connected with the same general offense and subject to the same measure and kind of punishment indictable as separate and distinct crimes when committed by different persons, or at different times, they may, when com-crimes against property, such as Larceny, 10 C. L. 600; Trespass, 10 C. L. 1875.

41. Describing money as "seventeen dollars lawful money of the United States, of the value of seventeen dollars," held sufficient in robbery charge, under Rev. St. 1899, § 2531, relating to description of money. State v. Calvert, 209 Mo. 280, 107 SW 1078.

42. Held double: Counts charging false entries of a transaction in violation of Rev. St. § 5209 by officers of national bank held double because charging two false entries in one count. United States v. Morse, 161 F 429. Unlawful sales of liquor to two or more minors constitute separate offenses. Cannot be charged in one indictment. State v. Salkowski [Del.] 69 A 839. Indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed in trial of another complaint containing two counts held to state two separate offenses, one in each count, where there was no allegation that the two counts were different descriptions of the same act. Commonwealth v. Hollander, 200 Mass. 73, 85 NE 844.

Held not double: Affidavit held to charge but one offense under intoxicating liquor law. Yazel v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 972. Indictment charging theft of property of two persons is not double where taking is charged as one act at one time and place. Peck v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1019. Indictment charging in one count violation of Pen. Code 1895, § 420, in running six freight trains on a railroad in the county on Sunday, is not demurrable as charging six separate offenses in one count. Westfall v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 558. Accusation for violating Laws 1903, p. 90, embracing in one count various amounts alleged to have been fraudulently obtained at various times, is not double where aggregate makes sum alleged to have been fraudulently obtained. Young v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 558. Information charged violation of statute penalizing certain acts in connection with dealing with corporations and stock. Part of statute relating to dealings in stock being held invalid, information was not double since dealings in stock would not constitute a crime thereunder. State v. Merchant, 48 Wash. 69, 92 P 890.

43. People v. McDonnell, 103 NYS 749. State has right to allege commission of crime in different ways, and jury are entitled to pass on evidence and find defendant guilty on any count which is sustained by evidence. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Under Pen. Code 1895, § 1836, permitting same offense to be set up in different forms in different counts, an information was not bad for charging forgery in one count by false making of an instrument, and in another count by uttering the same instrument. State v. Mitton, 37 Mont. 366, 96 P 926. Indictment charging burglary of private residence at night, and also, in another count, burglary in the daytime, omitting allegation as to private residence, held not double. More than one count charging same offense permissible under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 469. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 201, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 107 SW 52. An assault and battery with intent to kill, and an assault and battery in the attempt to kill, may be charged together in one count where both grow out of same act and punishment is same. Jimerson v. State [Miss.] 46 S 948.

44. The statement of an act committed as a mere incident of the crime charged does not make the indictment double. State v. Waymire [Or.] 97 P 46. That an indictment in one count describes more than one crime does not make it defective, provided defendant is charged with the commission of only one crime. People v. Schlessel, 112 NYS 45. Indictment held to charge only crime of larceny, though facts were alleged, going upon state forest reserve to cut trees stolen, which constituted also misdemeanor. People v. Gallagher, 58 Misc. 512, 111 NYS 473.

Gagliardi, 111 NYS 395. Conviction may be had on proof of the commission of any one without proof of the commission of the others. People v. Schlessel, 112 NYS 45. Indictment charging conjunctively acts set forth in election statute (Sess. Acts 1903, p. 159) not double. State v. Fielder, 210 Mo. 188, 109 SW 580. Count not double which charged conjunctively several acts made illegal by intoxicating liquor law and charged that all such acts were done before obtaining license. Ex parte Johnson, 6 Cal. App. 734, 93 P 199.

mitted by the same person at the same time, be coupled in one count as constituting on offense.[47]

Exceptions and provisos.[See 10 C. L. 78]—Exceptions or provisos which qualify or describe or form a part of the definition of the offense must be negatived.[48] Those which form no part of the definition or description of the offense need not be negatived,[49] but are matters of defense.[50] This rule is applied by the majority of the courts regardless of whether the proviso or exception is in the enacting clause or a subsequent section [51] though some courts seem to consider the location of the exception or proviso as decisive.[52] The negation of an exception need not be in the statutory language.[53] It is sufficient if the indictment as a whole shows that accused does not belong in any excepted class.[54] Where an allegation covering the affirmative part of a statute involves a negation of an exception contained in the statute, no further negation thereof is necessary.[55]

Conclusion.—The indictment or information must conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state," [56] though such conclusion need not be repeated in each count.[57] Where the offense is indictable at common law, the conclusion in the indictment, "contrary to the form of the statute," may be treated as surplusage and wholly disregarded.[58]

(§ 4) D. Issues, proof and variance.[See 10 C. L. 77]—Every essential averment must be proved substantially as laid,[59] but unnecessary allegations need not be

47. Indictment for certifying check without having funds to cover it held not double. United States v. Heinze, 161 F 425.

48. Conviction of performing worldly work on Sunday reversed where neither complaint nor record negatived exceptions contained in the statute nor showed that worldly business done was not works of necessity nor charity. Wright v. State [Del.] 69 A 1003.

49. Yazel v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 972. Proviso in Rev. St. § 4364-25, unlawfully keeping place where intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, is not part of description of offense, and need not be negatived in indictment. Hamilton v. State, 78 Ohio St. 76, 84 NE 601. Where affidavit charging sale of wheat middlings without label as required by law negatived all proviso contained in defining clause, it was sufficient though it did not negative an exception stated in a subsequent independent section. State v. Weller [Ind.] 85 NE 761.

50. If the proviso or exception contains only matter of excuse, it need not be negatived, but is defensive matter. Proviso in dental act need not be negatived. Ex parte Hornef [Cal.] 97 P 891. If a proviso comes in a separate clause of the statute, that the offense charged is within the proviso is matter of defense. Hyde v. State [Ala.] 46 S 489. Indictment for conspiracy to subject persons to involuntary servitude is not bad for failing to negative exception that such involuntary servitude was as a punishment for crime. The exception in 13th amendment is defensive in character. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. Indictment for practicing medicine without authority need not show that accused was not within class allowed to practice without authority (Laws 1901, c. 926, § 3). Burden is on accused to show that defense. State v. Heffernan, 28 R. I. 477, 68 A 364.

51. Whether a statutory exception or proviso is contained in the clause of the statute creating the offense or in a subsequent clause, it must be negatived if it is so interwoven with the clause defining the offense as to constitute a material part thereof and be one of the essential ingredients of the criminal act. Applied to Drugs Act, Rev. St. 1899, § 3036. State v. Hamlett, 129 Mo. App. 70, 107 SW 1012. Proviso or exception need be negatived only when it is incorporated in and is a part of the description or definition of the offense. Its location in the statute is immaterial. Ex parte Hornef [Cal.] 97 P 891.

52. Exceptions in the enacting clause must be negatived. Adams Exp. Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 967, 112 SW 577. If the exception is in a subsequent section or in a separate proviso in the same section, it need not be negatived. Rule applied to intoxicating liquor law. Yazel v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 972.

55. Holmes v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 99.

56. Const. art. 6, § 38, requires informations to conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state." Omission of "the" before "state" held fatal. State v. Skillman, 209 Mo. 408, 107 SW 1071. Indictment concluding "against the peace and dignity of state" held not to comply with constitutional requirement that all indictments must conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state." Defect fatal. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706. Indictment for murder held insufficient to support conviction because not concluding "against the peace and dignity of the state of Alabama" as required by Const. 1901, art. 6, § 170, and Code 1896, § 4893. Fowler v. State [Ala.] 45 S 913.

57. Information concluded "against the peace and dignity of the state," etc. Held not objectionable because each count did not so conclude. Mercer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 321, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 402, 106 SW 365.

58. Indictment sustained. Maloney v. People, 132 Ill. App. 184.

59. Fatal variance between information proved,[60] and an immaterial variance may be disregarded.[61] Proof of a crime other than that charged will not warrant conviction,[62] but where an offense is charged in different ways in separate counts, proof sufficient to sustain one good count is enough,[63] and a proper conviction on one count will not be set aside because of an unwarranted conviction of another count.[64] Under statutes abolishing the common-law distinctions between principles and accessories, one indicted as principal may be convicted on proof that he procured the commission of the crime [65] or was present, aiding, counseling or assisting in its perpetuation,[66] though no other was jointly indicted with him,[67] and one indicted as an accessory may be convicted on proof showing him to be a principal.[68] But where the common-law rule still exists, this rule does not prevail.[69] Where persons are charged jointly with the commission of a crime, for forgery and proof. People v. Johnson [Cal. App.] 93 P 1042. Variance between charge of larceny of diamond shirt stud and proof of larceny of diamond ring is fatal. State v. Plant, 209 Mo. 307, 107 SW 1076. Variance fatal in slander case, words proved not being those charged. Porter v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 817. Proof held not to conform to allegations of indictment for perjury. Reversal. Belvins v. State, 85 Ark. 195, 107 SW 393. Charge that coroner extorted money for services in inquest not sustained by proof that no inquest was held and money was paid in order that none might be held. State v. Wainright [Wash.] 97 P 51. Where information stated specifically the manner in which accused committed the offense of assisting in pool selling the proof was limited to the facts charged, though an accusation in the statutory language would have been sufficient. State v. Scott, 80 Conn. 317, 68 A 258. Under indictment for burglary in the daytime, a charge that defendant could not be convicted if evidence showed beyond a reasonable doubt that the burglary was committed in the nighttime, but could be convicted if evidence showed commission of the act, but did not show beyond a reasonable doubt whether it was done in the daytime or nighttime, was sufficiently favorable to accused. Egan v. State, 136 Wis. 114, 116 NW 755. A description of the place is material and must be proved according to the averment thereof. Where indictment charged keeping room for gaming purposes at No. 239 E. Twenty Second St., Chicago, proof of keeping such room at corner of Dearborn and Twenty Second streets in same city is insufficient. People v. Lewis, 140 Ill. App. 493.

60. State need only prove so much of matter alleged as is necessary to establish crime charged. State v. Bresee, 137 Iowa, 673, 114 NW 45. In criminal as in civil cases, only substance of charge need be proved. Tullis v. Shaw, 169 Ind. 662, 83 NE 376.

61. Under the modern rule, declared by statute in many states, a variance is not to be regarded as material unless it is such that it might prejudice or mislead the defense or might expose the accused to the danger of twice being put in jeopardy for the same offense. State v. Turnbaugh [Ohio] 85 NE 1060. Variance as to description of burglarized building held immaterial under Rev. St. § 7216. Id. In prosecution for conspiracy to commit assault, proof of assault upon one is not variance from indictment charging conspiracy to assault number of persons, including person shown to have been assaulted. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Variance between allegation and proof of ownership of injured property held not material. Pate v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 757. No variance where charge was obstructing highway where it crossed "Smith's Fork of Platte River," and proof was that stream was "Smith's Fork Creek," both referring to same stream. State v. Transue [Mo. App.] 111 SW 523. Allegation in indictment that certain details were to grand jury unknown need not be proved. Jacobs v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 694. While an allegation in an indictment that the defendant conspired with "persons unknown" is material, it is necessary that the knowledge as to who the co-conspirators were existed with the grand jury at the time of the return of the indictment in order to render the variance fatal. No presumption that grand jury knew witness testifying before them was conspirator. Cooke v. People, 134 Ill. App. 41. Charge of keeping of disorderly house by two persons not variant from proof of keeping by one of them. People v. Elston, 231 Ill. 215, 83 NE 153.

62. Information was sufficient to charge larceny, but insufficient to charge robbery, but cause was submitted and accused was tried for and convicted of robbery. Judgment reversed. People v. Ho Sing, 6 Cal. App. 752, 93 P 204.

63. Conviction on one or more of the counts, supported by sufficient legal proof, will be upheld. Parham v. State, 3 Ga. App. 468, 60 SE 123. Verdict of conviction will be referred to valid count. Moseley v. State [Miss.] 45 S 833.

64. Conviction on latter count harmless, punishment being same regardless of number of counts upon which conviction is had. Parham v. State, 3 Ga. App. 468, 60 SE 123.

65. State v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363.

66. Steely v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1033, 112 SW 655.

67. In misdemeanor case. State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 73, 60 SE 240.

68. Though indictment charged one as principal and another as aider and abettor, both could be convicted as principals, and court was not required to distinguish between them in instructions. Combs v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1058, 112 SW 658.

69. In Nebraska one indicted as principal cannot be convicted on proof showing him to be an accessory. Skidmore v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 288.

proof of a conspiracy to commit it is admissible without an express allegation of such conspiracy,[70] though where conspiracy is the real crime or offense, it must be expressly alleged.[71]

Names.[See 10 C. L. 78]—Names of third persons or persons injured must be proved as laid [72] unless the allegation is immaterial.[73] The rule of idem sonans applies,[74] however, and an immaterial error will be disregarded.[75] Where a defendant is indicted under two names, alleged by an alias dictus, it is necessary only that state should show that he is commonly known by either of them.[76]

Time [See 10 C. L. 79] need be proved as laid only when it is an essential element of the crime.[77] The state is not restricted to proof of the date alleged. Proof of commission of the crime charged at any time within the limitation period, prior to the indictment, is sufficient.[78] But the allegation that prescription has been interrupted by the filing of an indictment is affirmative in character and must be proved.[79]

(§ 4) E. Defects, defenses and objections.[See 10 C. L. 79]—Formal or technical errors may be cured by verdict [80] or curative statute [81] and should be disregarded,[82] but fundamental defects cannot be cured or waived.[83] A motion to quash or plea in abatement is the proper remedy to raise defects not appearing on the face of the pleading or record,[84] such as irregularities prior to the finding of the indictment [85]

70, 71. Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047.

72. Where indictment alleged sale of liquor to "C. Wiltis" and proof showed sale to "C. Willis," variance was held fatal. Carnes v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 490, 110 SW 750.

73. Variance as to name of owner of stolen property immaterial. Territory v. Caldwell [N. M.] 98 P 167. In prosecution for embezzlement of check, variance between allegation and proof of names of parties to check held immaterial. State v. Laechelt [N. D.] 118 NW 240.

74. Indictment alleged deceased's name as "Frederico Tersero" and proof was "Fedrico Tersero." Spanish pronunciation same. Variance not fatal. Hernandez v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 468, 110 SW 753. In prosecution for bigamy, proof that first wife's name was "Stanton" would support statement in indictment that it was "Staunton," the two being idem sonans. People v. Spoor, 235 Ill. 230, 85 NE 207.

75. Error in name of purchaser not fatal variance in prosecution under liquor law. Holland v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 354.

76. Jenkins v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 574.

77. Exact date of burglary immaterial. Approximate date may be proved. State v. Daniels [La.] 47 S 599. Time not being of the essence of the crime of rape, proof need not show commission on day charged. Proof of commission on substantially the date charged is sufficient. State v. Ferris [Conn.] 70 A 587.

78. Cripe v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 567. Proof of any illegal liquor sale within two years competent, no particular date being alleged. Wheeler v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 409.

79. State v. Hoffman, 120 La. 949, 45 S 951.

80. Information for obtaining money by false pretences sufficient after verdict. Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 NW 150.

81. Under U. S. Rev. St. § 1025, that no indictment shall be deemed insufficient by reason of a defect or imperfection in form only, which does not tend to prejudice accused, objections not affecting the merits will be overruled. Jones v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 417. Objection that indictment did not show on its face that grand jury came from district in which indictment was found held mere defect of form. Cured by U. S. Rev. St. § 1025. Morris v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 672.

82. Failure to allege venue directly not prejudicial, reference to caption making it plain. People v. Thompson [Cal. App.] 95 P 386. Formal defects in indictment under Sherman anti-trust act held not ground for quashal. Tribolet v. U. S. [Ariz.] 95 P 85. Indictments will not be set aside on account of a technical objection based on disqualification of a grand juror unless accused has been prejudiced. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059. Technical objections to the impaneling of a grand jury will not be considered after presentment of the indictment, or even on challenge to the array. State v. Laning, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 281.

83. A void indictment cannot support a judgment, nor can it be aided by a curative statute. Indictment void for illegality in constitution of grand jury. Osborn v. State [Ala.] 45 S 666. An omission of an essential element of the offense is not cured by verdict. Roberts v. State [Ark.] 108 SW 842.

84. Issues not shown by the record may be raised by pleas in abatement. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313.

85. Inquiry by the court or prosecuting attorney as to the qualification of grand jurors is not required, but does not prejudice the rights of the accused, who under a plea in abatement may show disqualification if any exist and thus be relieved from the indictment. State v. Laning, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 281.

Improper conduct of the district attorney before the federal grand jury which returned the indictment may be raised by plea in abatement. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313. An objection to the qualification of grand jurors or the mode of summoning or or filing of the information.[86] Defects apparent on the face of the indictment or information should be raised by demurrer [87] or motion to quash.[88] Defects of this nature not raised before pleading to the merits [89] by proper and timely objection are waived [90] and cannot subsequently be raised by objection to the introduction of evidence [91] or by motion in arrest of judgment.[92] Matters of defense cannot be raised empaneling them must be made by a motion to quash or by plea in abatement before pleading in bar. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059. Motion to quash at time of arraignment and before plea, supported by affidavits, is proper way to raise objection that grand jury was not properly constituted. State v. Paramore, 146 N. C. 604, 60 SE 502. Where a sheriff fails to summon a grand jury impartially as required by his oath of office, the court may, upon motion, quash the indictment found by such grand jury. As where sheriff was head of a political faction and summoned grand jurors from his own faction only, who indicated members of opposite faction for political offense. State v. McCarthy [N. J. Law] 69 A 1075.

86. The objection that accused was not legally committed by a magistrate before the information was filed is waived by failure to urge it by motion to set information aside. People v. Morley [Cal. App.] 97 P 84.

87. Indictment or information is demurrable if more than one offense is charged. State v. Mudie [S. D.] 115 NW 107.

88. A motion to quash is directed to defects appearing on the face of the pleading. State v. Conega, 121 La. 522, 46 S 614. Cr. Code 1902, § 57, requires defect apparent on face of indictment to be raised by demurrer or motion to quash before jury is sworn. Request to charge that certain count was fatally defective because of lack of averments unavailing. State v. Maddox [S. C.] 61 SE 964.

89. Motion to quash too late, coming after plea of not guilty. State v. Banner [N. C.] 63 SE 84. Objection that prosecuting attorney had no power to file information, grand jury being in session, waived when not raised at time of arraignment and plea of not guilty. State v. Strange [Wash.] 97 P 233. Disqualification of a grand juror must be taken advantage of by plea in abatement, which must precede the plea of not guilty. State v. Heffernan, 28 R. I. 477, 68 A 364. Objection that count of indictment is not sufficiently specific must be raised by demurrer before plea of not guilty. Too late when made in motion for arrest of judgment. Id.

90. Cannot be urged after judgment that names of some of the witnesses were not endorsed on the indictment. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. Defect of duplicity, if any, waived by failure to demur. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. A motion to quash is the proper procedure to point out the defect of duplicity and indefiniteness in an indictment, and failure to file such a motion and entry of a general plea to the indictment is a waiver of those defects. Arnsman v. Ohio, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 113. Failure to object to formal defects or clerical errors by demurrer or motion is waiver thereof. State v. Means [S. C.] 61 SE 898. Formal defects in information, correctible by amendment, cannot be taken advantage of on motion for new trial when not urged at or before the trial. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 A 1059. After a challenge to the sufficiency of an indictment by motion to quash, a plea of misnomer is too late and may be stricken on motion. Lee v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 948. A plea of misnomer is waived by a subsequent demurrer. Id. Objection that information for robbery charged both violence and putting in fear waived by failure to demur or make motion to quash. State v. Calvert, 209 Mo. 280, 107 SW 1078. Lack of certainty and precision in information before magistrate waived by failure to object. People v. Keeper of Erie County Penitentiary, 109 NYS 531. Plea of guilty to count for stealing "gold pins, silverware and jewelry of the value of $50" is a waiver of objection that charge does not state an offense because articles are not specifically enumerated, such objection not being urged before plea. State v. Webber [N. J. Law] 68 A 1100. Several persons being in custody, jointly indicted for same offense, either may be called to testify against the others before the grand jury. One who appears willingly, is warned that he need not testify or incriminate himself, and does not in fact incriminate himself but testifies freely, cannot move to quash indictment on ground of being compelled to testify against himself. State v. Firmatura, 121 La. 676, 46 S 691. A demurrer is waived by pleading over. Ground of demurrer cannot be subsequently raised in any form. State v. Christopher, 212 Mo. 244, 110 SW 697.

91. The sufficiency of a criminal accusation cannot be tested by an objection to the introduction of evidence after the first witness has been sworn. City of Ft. Scott v. Dunkerton [Kan.] 96 P 50. The sufficiency of the indictment to state any offense cannot be tested in the federal courts by an objection to the introduction of evidence. Morris v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 672. Defects in form or inartificialities must be raised by motion to quash or demurrer. The objection to the introduction of evidence under the indictment is not the proper way to reach such defects. Nurnberger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 721.

92. See post, § 11. Information for rape sufficient when first attached by motion in arrest, though resistance was not alleged in direct and positive terms. State v. Rhoades [N. D.] 118 NW 233. Objection that information for robbery was bad because charging conjunctively taking by violence and by putting in fear too late when first made by motion in arrest. State v. Calvert, 209 Mo. 280, 107 SW 1078. The objection that a juror is not competent because of some personal incapacity or disqualification, such as that he is not a legal voter in town where trial is held, is too late when first raised after verdict and conviction. Not ground for setting verdict aside and granting new trial. Thurman v. Com., 107 Va. 912, 60 SE 99.

by motion to quash.[93] It will be presumed that the indictment was based on legal and sufficient evidence,[94] and illegality or insufficiency of evidence before the grand jury is not ground for motion to quash.[95] In New York inspection of the minutes of the grand jury, in aid of a motion to quash, cannot be had as a matter of right,[96] and does not depend upon whether or not a preliminary examination has been had.[97] The sole purpose for which an inspection of the minutes can be granted is to enable defendant to make a motion to set aside the indictment for irregularities of procedure mentioned in the statute,[98] or where his constitutional rights have been invaded.[99] Application for such inspection must fully disclose a right thereto.[1] Where the application is on the ground that defendant's constitutional rights have been invaded in that he has been illegally compelled to be a witness against himself, and that it is thought such evidence may have been used by the grand jury, it is insufficient unless it also shows that the legal evidence received was insufficient to warrant the finding of the indictment, or that illegal evidence was the sole basis for the indictment.[2] This must appear in order to give a person indicted a constitutional right to make a motion to dismiss.[3] A motion for inspection on constitutional grounds may be made after plea.[4] Neither absence from the jurisdiction at the time the investigation was made by the grand jury nor ignorance that an investigation was in progress afford ground for a plea in abatement,[5] nor is an omission by the court to call matters to the attention of the grand jury ground for such plea.[6] The fact

93. That oath given accused was not that prescribed by law is matter of defense in prosecution for perjury. Not ground for setting aside indictment. People v. Welz, 112 NYS 326. A motion to quash does not raise the objection that prosecution is barred by limitations, no time being alleged and time not being of the essence. State v. Conega, 121 La. 522, 46 S 614. Where the indictment does not show that the prosecution is barred, defendant may plead and prove prescription. Id.

94. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555.

95. That indictment was based on illegal evidence is not ground for setting indictment aside. Borello v. Amador County Super. Ct. [Cal. App.] 96 P 404. Motion to quash because of insufficiency of evidence cannot be entertained. Question is for jury. Cox v. State, 3 Ga. App. 609, 60 SE 283. On motion to set aside information, sufficiency of complaint on which accused was arrested is immaterial. It will be presumed that commitment was based on sufficient evidence, and information is based on commitment. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 97 P 912. The court is not authorized, on motion to set aside an indictment, to review the sufficiency of the evidence on which it was based. People v. Glaser, 112 NYS 321. Motion to dismiss indictment for insufficency of evidence before grand jury denied. Indictment for willfully destroying highway, under Pen. Code, § 639. People v. Gillies, 57 Misc. 568, 109 NYS 945. Indictment will not be dismissed because illegal evidence was received before grand jury, if indictment was sufficiently supported by competent evidence. People v. White, 111 NYS 1070. Evidence held insufficient. Id.

Contra: An indictment may be quashed for insufficiency of evidence before the grand jury. People v. Hegeman, 57 Misc. 295, 107 NYS 261. Indictment may be set aside for insufficiency of evidence before grand jury. People v. Acritelli, 57 Misc. 574, 110 NYS 430. Indictment founded solely on testimony of accomplice, dismissed. Id. Reception of illegal evidence ground for quashal where competent evidence was not alone sufficient. Id.

96. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555. Ruling of court refusing, on motion to set aside indictment, to allow character of evidence heard by grand jury to be shown, upheld. Borell v. Amador County Super. Ct. [Cal. App.] 96 P 404.

97. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555.

98. Code Cr. Proc. § 313. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555.

99. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555.

1. A motion for leave to inspect the minutes of the grand jury or to have a copy thereof should disclose as a reason the want of legal or competent evidence to sustain the indictment, or the violation of some constitutional right of accused. Motion denied. People v. Glaser, 112 NYS 321. Something more than general allegations of insufficiency of testimony or irregularity of procedure before the grand jury is required to warrant giving defendant full access to the people's case (by copy of grand jury minutes) before trial. People v. Welz, 112 NYS 326. Affidavit in support of motion for inspection of grand jury minutes, in aid of motion to set aside indictment on ground of unauthorized presence of persons in the grand jury room, held insufficient, not giving names of affiant's informants nor source of their knowledge. Id.

2, 3. People v. Gassett, 112 NYS 555.

4. A motion for leave to inspect the minutes of the grand jury, in aid of a motion to set aside an indictment because based on incompetent and insufficient evidence, may be entertained after plea, since the latter motion is on constitutional grounds, and not on grounds mentioned in Code Cr. Proc. §§ 313, 315. People v. Phifer, 112 NYS 285.

5. State v. Laning, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 281.

6. It is duty of court to call attention of that previous indictments have not been disposed of does not afford ground for the quashing of an indictment.[7] Where greater certainty or particularity is desired, the remedy is a motion to make more specific [8] or a motion for a bill of particulars.[9] Whether such motion should be granted is largely discretionary with the trial court.[10] The validity of the indictment cannot be tested by the writ of habeas corpus.[11] A motion to quash should be disposed of before hearing on the merits is had.[12]

A demurrer or motion to quash must specify the grounds of objection relied upon [13] by allegations of facts,[14] and, if not shown by the record, the matters set up must be supported by proof [15] or an offer of proof,[16] though a defect in the form of the plea may be waived.[17] A general objection will be overruled if the pleading contains a single good count [18] or is sufficient to charge an offense.[19] But a general grand jury to matters requiring investigation, and if a mistake were made in that respect it would not afford ground for a plea in abatement. State v. Laning, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 281.

7. State v. Williams, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 406.

8. Motion to make specific is the remedy when an allegation of time is deemed essential. State v. Conega, 121 La. 522, 46 S 614.

9. Morris v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 672. Not a demurrer. Bailey v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 140. Revisal 1905, § 3244, provides for bill of particulars in case indictment is claimed to be defective in alleging facts. State v. Leeper, 146 N. C. 655, 61 SE 585. Rev. Laws, c. 218, § 39, provides for bill of particulars. Commonwealth v. Bailey, 199 Mass. 583, 85 NE 857. Object of bill of particulars is to make charge so definite and specific as to enable defendant to prepare defense. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1088.

10. Subject to review for abuse. Bailey v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 140. Not error to refuse in prosecution under Mills' Ann. St. § 1332 (obtaining money by confidence game), indictment being in statutory language. Lace v. People, 43 Colo. 199, 95 P 302. Bill of particulars may be ordered in proper cases, but commonwealth need not supply facts within knowledge of other party, and should be allowed reasonable time to supply facts. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 92, 110 SW 253. That bill of particulars obtained at second trial was insufficient was harmless where accused had learned all the state's case in former trial. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1088.

11. Ex parte Webb [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 545.

12. State v. Conega, 121 La. 522, 46 S 614.

13. Mere claim in demurrer that statute on which it was based was unconstitutional held insufficient. State v. Christopher, 212 Mo. 244, 110 SW 697.

14. A demurrer to a plea in abatement to an indictment is properly sustained when the grounds assigned in support of the plea do not consist of certain and distinct allegations of fact, but merely conclusions of law. Thompson v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 352.

15. A plea in abatement or other dilatory plea must be verified or supported by some matter of record or by evidence. Beverett v. State [Ala.] 47 S 133. A demurrer on the ground that the grand jury had no authority to investigate the crime charged because it was not within the local jurisdiction of the county must show that it was not within such jurisdiction, where the indictment shows on its face commission of the crime within the jurisdiction. People v. Foster, 112 NYS 706. Indictment for perjury will not be set aside because of the unauthorized presence in grand jury room of some person when the false testimony was given by accused. It must appear, under Code Cr. Proc. § 313, that such person was present when indictment was being considered. People v. Glaser, 112 NYS 323. Moving papers, in motion to set aside indictment, held not to show latter fact, as against presumption that grand jury proceedings were regular. Id.

16. Mere filing of motion to quash without offering proof of the ground alleged is insufficient to raise the question. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729. Verified motion to quash indictment on ground that no person of accused's race was permitted to serve on grand jury, filed on day case was called for trial, insufficient. There must be an offer to prove facts alleged in motion. Franklin v. State, 85 Ark. 534, 109 SW 298. Not an abuse of discretion to refuse additional time to procure proof, no effort having been made previously. Id.

17. The objection that a plea in abatement, supported by affidavits, is not the proper way to raise an issue, is waived by meeting the issue by counter affidavits. United States v. Wells, 163 F 313.

18. A motion to quash directed at an entire complaint containing several counts cannot be sustained if the complaint contains one good count. City of Ft. Scott v. Dunkerton [Kan.] 96 P 50. Where an information charges but one offense, though in several counts, a demurrer will not lie to a single count. State v. Leekins [Neb.] 115 NW 1080.

19. A motion to quash directed generally to a count, charging assault and battery coupled with a felonious intent to murder is properly overruled where assault and battery is properly charged. Stucker v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 971. Where two sections of statute are separable from and entirely independent of each other, it is error for police court to sustain motion to quash indictment based on one on grounds of invalidity of other. District of Columbia v. Green, 29 App. D. C. 296.

demurrer which enumerates each count is in effect a separate demurrer to every count.[20]

(§ 4) F. Joinder, separation and election. See 10 C. L. 81—Separate and distinct offenses cannot be joined in a single count,[21] but in some jurisdictions offenses of the same nature may be joined,[22] and no election by the state is required in such cases.[23] A motion to require an election is the proper remedy, where it is claimed that two offenses are improperly joined,[24] or that the evidence discloses more than one offense, only one being charged.[25] A motion to require an election, on the latter ground, is premature if made before the evidence discloses more than one offense.[26] It should usually be made at the close of the state's case, and it is not error or an abuse of discretion to defer ruling on the motion until such time.[27] An election is not required where an indictment charges in different counts one offense committed in different ways,[28] all referring to the same transaction,[29] nor where all the acts alleged in a single count constitute but one offense.[30] A motion to require an election waives

20. State v. Peet, 80 Vt. 449, 68 A 661.

21. See supra, § 4C, Duplicity. Where a statute defines different offenses, and provides different penalties, they cannot be joined. Murdock v. State, 62 Tex. Cr. App. 262, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 588, 106 SW 374. Indictment charged obtaining property by assault and putting in fear, and, also, by exhibiting a pistol. Pen. Code 1895, art. 856, makes first punishable by imprisonment and second by death or imprisonment. Two offenses could not be joined. Id.

22. In Texas, different misdemeanors may be joined in separate counts in the same indictment or information and conviction had for each offense. Roseboro v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 352, 106 SW 134. A single accusation or indictment may include, in separate counts, any number of distinct misdemeanors of the same nature. Tooke v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 917. Held, proper to join in one information a count for rape and one for incest, both relating to same act, nor was state required to elect, as it was entitled to go to jury on either phase of the evidence. State v. Goodale, 210 Mo. 275, 109 SW 9. Under the federal statute, violations of the same statute, constituting crimes or offenses of the same class, may be joined in one indictment, when stated in separate counts (Violations of oleomargarine law, 24 Stat. 209, Morris v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 161 F 672); the only limitation being that the offenses ought not to be so numerous as to confound the accused in his defense or prejudice him. Id.

23. No election required between count for larceny and count for receiving stolen goods. State v. Roundtree [S. C.] 61 SE 1072.

24. Where it is claimed that two cognate offenses under one statute are charged, remedy is to require an election, not a motion to quash. State v. Leeper, 146 N. C. 655, 61 SE 585. Where indictment charged illicit intercourse on a certain day and on various other days up to a certain date, and on motion of defense, state elected to stand on day first charged, jury was not misled as to specific charge submitted to them. Leedom v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 496.

25. Where two distinct felonies are charged, the court should require the state to elect at the close of its case (Forgery of endorsement, and uttering forged instrument distinct. State v. Carragin, 210 Mo. 351, 109 SW 553), or should instruct the jury that they could not convict on both counts. State v. Carragin, 210 Mo. 351, 109 SW 553.

26. Motion could not be entertained until state's proof disclosed an attempt to prove two offenses under the one charge. Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P 556. Where information charged but one assault, alleging place only in the county, a motion before trial to compel state to elect was premature, though defendants in fact made two assaults on person named on same day. Id.

27. Refusal to require election until after evidence was in, not prejudicial, no evidence having been received which would have been inadmissible under charge relied on. State v. Johns [Iowa] 118 NW 295. Not an abuse of discretion to refuse to compel an election between count for larceny and one for receiving stolen goods at beginning of trial, motion being granted at close of state's case. State v. Roundtree [S. C.] 61 SE 1072. Where complaint contained two counts and court reserved decision on motion to compel election by state until the close of the case, when the state elected to stand on second count, accused was not prejudiced, trial having proceeded exactly as it would had the election been made sooner. People v. Burman [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 640, 117 NW 589. Defendant not entitled to have state elect, at beginning of trial, between two counts charging rape, one specifying a certain day, and the other stating a period between two dates. Accused not prejudiced where state elected to stand on first count before closing its case. State v. Sebastian [Conn.] 69 A 1054.

28. Parham v. State, 3 Ga. App. 468, 60 SE 123; State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614.

29. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69.

30. Motion to compel an election is properly denied where the indictment contains but one count, though several violations of a statute are therein conjunctively alleged. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 14 Det. Leg. N. 868, 114 NW 505. Defendant may be found guilty of one of the offenses cumulated in different clauses of one section without having first to inform him of the particular clause under which the state the claim that the state had elected to stand on the offense, evidence of which was first introduced.[31] Where an indictment charges an offense and also a previous conviction in aggravation, the prosecuting attorney may waive proof of the prior conviction and try defendant only on the offense charged.[32]

(§ 4) *G. Amendments.*See 10 C. L. 84—In most jurisdictions, an indictment or information may be amended as to formal or immaterial matters at any time.[33] The amended pleading should be verified when the statute so requires.[34] In South Carolina, where clerical errors or formal defects in an indictment may be amended at any time before the plea, with the consent of the grand jury.[35] Further testimony need be taken only when a further finding of fact is necessary.[36]

Substitution is usually provided for in case of loss of papers.[37]

(§ 4) *H. Conviction of lesser degrees and included offenses.*See 10 C. L. 85—Conviction may be had of any offense included in that charged,[38] or any lesser degree of prosecutes. State v. Dudenhefer [La.] 47 S 614.

32. Selling liquor illegally. State v. Doyle [W. Va.] 62 SE 453.

33. Formal amendment of information not prejudicial under Rev. St. 1899, § 2481, allowing such amendments in court's discretion. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 125, an error in name of accused does not vitiate indictment; order may be entered of record showing true name of accused. Russellville Home Tel. Co. v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 132, 109 SW 340. Under Kirby's Dig. § 2232, where corporation was called "railroad" instead of "railway," the court, on finding the true name, properly made an order directing further proceedings to be in correct name, party before the court being the one indicted. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 SW 960. The public officer by whom the information is presented being always present in court, but may be amended on his application to any extent which the judge deems to be consistent with the orderly conduct of judicial business with the public interest and private rights. Bergstrasser v. People, 134 Ill. App. 609. Amendment to information held properly allowed. Giroux v. People, 132 Ill. App. 562. Proper to permit amendment so that date of filing information and jurat to affidavit correctly appear. People v. Nylin, 139 Ill. App. 500. Amendment to indictment held merely one of form, properly made under statute. State v. Gibson, 120 La. 343, 45 S 271. Amendment to affidavit charging use of profane language properly allowed; affidavit filed in justice court, and warrant issued returnable in county criminal court, and amendment being to make affidavit conform to warrant. Cobb v. State [Ala.] 45 S 223. Filing amended information without leave of court held not jurisdictional error and not prejudicial to rights of accused who pleaded thereto without objection. McGinnis v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 525. Correction of date in indictment by person who drew it before presentment in court not ground of error. Haney v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 545, 107 SW 858. Indictment may be amended, after announcement of ready for trial, as to form, but not as to matters of substance. Wade v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 619, 108 SW 677. Amendment during trial proper, where information was sufficient without it, since Rev. St. 1899, § 2481, allows amendments as to form and variance to be so made. State v. Standifer, 209 Mo. 264, 108 SW 17. Under Code 1906, § 1508, relating to amendments, held proper for court to allow indictment charging murder to be amended during trial so as to change name of deceased from "Will Johnson" to "Convict No. 12." Witnesses identifying him by latter name, but not being positive as to his real name. Thurmond v. State [Miss.] 47 S 434. Amendments which do not change the substance of the indictment may be allowed at the close of the state's case to make it conform to the proof. Amendments as to dates and other matters not affecting the substance of the charge. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 14 Det. Leg. N. 868, 114 NW 505.

34. Under the Oklahoma statute allowing amendments to informations, a conviction under an amended information not sworn to is invalid. Hubbard v. Ter. [Okl.] 95 P 217.

35. State v. Means [S. C.] 61 SE 898.

36. Not where correction may be made from context. State v. Means [S. C.] 61 SE 898.

37. Where last indictment had been substituted at previous term but minutes had not been signed, a nunc pro tunc order of substitution was proper. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 107 SW 540.

38. One indicted under one section of a statute and shown to be guilty under another may be convicted under latter, if indictment is broad enough to include it. State v. Hamill, 127 Mo. App. 661, 106 SW 1103. Cr. Code Prac. § 264 provides that where an indictment charges an offense with circumstances of time, place, intent, etc., the offense without such circumstances, or part of them, is included. Price v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 855. Under charge for breaking and entering railroad car with intent to steal (Ky. St. 1903, § 1163), accused may be convicted of trespass (§ 1256). Id. Under charge of larceny from person, accused may be convicted of petit larceny. State v. Clem [Wash.] 94 P 1079. Under Washington statutes, one charged with conducting gambling resort may be convicted of conducting and carrying on game of roulette, latter offense being included in former. State v. Preston [Wash.] 95 P 82. Where indictment charges burglary, and also charges larceny after the breaking the offense charged,[39] or of an attempt to commit the offense charged,[40] but not of an offense containing elements not included in the offense charged.[41]

§ 5. Arraignment and plea. See 10 C. L. 86—A plea to the merits waives prior informalities [42] which are properly raised by motion to quash or plea in abatement.[43] Defendant may plead guilty, and such plea authorizes the sentence prescribed by law upon a verdict of guilty.[44] Such plea should be entirely voluntary, with knowledge of consequences, and not induced by fear, misapprehension, persuasion, promises, inadvertence or ignorance.[45] A plea of guilty will be referred to a good count, where some are good and some bad.[46] A plea of guilty admits only facts charged, and if and entering as illustrative of intent, defendant may be convicted of larceny though not guilty of burglary. Hutchings v. State, 3 Ga. App. 300, 59 SE 848. Though accusation and evidence make out case of burglary, yet defendant may be convicted of larceny from the house, if that offense also is shown. Lockhart v. State, 3 Ga. App. 480, 60 SE 215. Accused may be sentenced under verdict of "guilty of misdemeanor" as charged, where indictment charges also a prior conviction, proof of which was waived by the state. State v. Doyle [W. Va.] 62 SE 453. Under Kentucky statutes under an indictment for murder by stabbing, conviction may be had for malicious cutting and wounding, or cutting and wounding in sudden affray, or sudden heat and passion, where proof fails to show that death resulted from wound inflicted. Housman v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 311, 110 SW 236. Where, in prosecution for maliciously disturbing any railway fixtures, evidence does not show malice in carrying away switch light, malice being required by Ky. St. 1903, § 807, court may authorize conviction, under § 1256, for carrying away property of another. Commonwealth v. Wells, 33 Ky. L. R. 964, 112 SW 568. Conviction of larceny is warranted under indictment charging greater offense of breaking into railroad car and stealing and carrying away property therefrom (statutes construed). State v. Shapiro [R. I.] 69 A 340. Conviction for offense less than that defined in statute on which prosecution is primarily based may be sustained if information alleges existence of all essential facts constituting such offense, and more liberal construction of pleading is allowed in such case than ordinarily. State v. Way, 76 Kan. 928, 93 P 159. Conviction of petit larceny may be had under indictment for grand larceny, where evidence shows value of property to be less than $30. State v. Walken [Mo. App.] 113 SW 221.

39. Where evidence submitted authorizes it. Fields v. State, 2 Ga. App. 41, 58 SE 327. Under indictment for murder in first degree, defendant may be convicted of any lesser degree of homicide. Montgomery v. State, 136 Wis. 119, 116 NW 876; Commonwealth v. Couch, 32 Ky. L. R. 638, 106 SW 830. Verdict of manslaughter may be found under charge of murder. People v. Borrego [Cal. App.] 95 P 381. Verdict of manslaughter may be returned under indictment charging murder by attempting criminal abortion. People v. Huntington [Cal. App.[97 P 760. One indicted for assault with intent to murder may be convicted of lesser offense. State v. Harris, 209 Mo. 423, 108 SW 28. Under indictment for assault with intent to murder, accused may be convicted of that offense or of simple assault. State v. Mills [Del.] 69 A 841. Conviction of assault in second degree, under charge of assault in first degree, sustained. People v. Randazzo, 112 NYS 104. Under charge of assault with intent to do bodily harm, simple assault may be found. People v. Hoffman [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 646, 117 NW 568. No distinction need be made, in an indictment or in a verdict, between principals in the first and second degree, and, where two persons are charged with murder as principals in the first degree, if evidence shows one to be guilty in second degree, he can be convicted under such indictment. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840.

40. Conviction of attempt to commit rape on infant may be had under indictment for rape. Begley v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 890, 107 SW 243.

41. Where evidence, under indictment for assault with intent to murder, shows no assault other than one consummated by a completed battery, a verdict of simple assault is not lawful. Harris v. State, 3 Ga. App. 457, 60 SE 127. Under indictment for assault with intent to kill a specified person, accused cannot be convicted of shooting at another. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386.

42. Want of preliminary examination waived by plea of not guilty. Ex parte McLaughlin, 210 Mo. 657, 109 SW 626. Failure to read the formal concluding portion of an indictment will not vitiate a sentence pronounced after a plea of guilty. State v. Crane, 121 La. 1039, 46 S 1009. Failure to deliver to accused a copy of endorsements on the information, including the list of witnesses, at time of arraignment, is waived by pleading to merits without objection. State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Where a defendant charged with willfully violating a borough ordinance pleads guilty and appeals to the court of quarter sessions, he thereby waives mere irregularities in the proceedings, and to avoid the effect of his plea he is bound to establish the invalidity of the ordinance as a whole or to show that his act was not prohibited by the valid part of the ordinance. Commonwealth v. Jackson, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 174.

43. Plea of not guilty waives all defenses which may be raised by motion to quash or plea in abatement. Ingraham v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 320.

44, 45. Pope v. State [Fla.] 47 S 487.

46. A plea of guilty is applicable to all the counts of the indictment, and where there are good and bad counts, the plea will be referred to good counts, and judgment will these do not state an offense, judgment on the plea is erroneous.[47] The plea of nolo contendere when accepted by the court, is, in its effect upon the case, equivalent to the plea of guilty.[48] The judgment of conviction follows upon such a plea, as well as upon a plea of guilty. And such plea, if accepted, cannot be withdrawn and a plea of not guilty entered except by leave of court.[49] The plea of not guilty puts in issue every material allegation of the indictment or information, and casts the burden of proving facts necessary to convict on the prosecution.[50] A plea to the merits cannot be withdrawn or changed without leave of court,[51] and when a new trial has been granted, a change of plea should not be allowed and sentence pronounced without notice to the state's attorney.[52] Whether withdrawal or change of plea shall be allowed is a matter resting largely in the trial court's discretion,[53] and whether it has been properly exercised in a particular case depends upon the circumstances.[54]

Pleas in abatement and special pleas. See 10 C. L. 87—Pleas testing sufficiency of indictment or information are treated in another section.[55]

Lack of jurisdiction, not appearing on the face of the record, must be raised by answer.[56] The defense of insanity may be shown under a plea of not guilty entered by accused or by the court.[57] The validity of the statute on which the prosecution is based may be raised by special preliminary plea,[58] and on the hearing of the plea be affirmed after conviction where one count is not assailed, though others are held bad. State v. Zimmerman, 79 S. C. 289, 60 SE 680.

47. Patrick v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 527.

48. State v. Siddall, 103 Me. 144, 68 A 634.

49. State v. Siddall, 103 Me. 144, 68 A 634. Where accused pleaded not guilty and then withdrew that plea and pleaded nolo contendere, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to allow him to withdraw the plea of nolo contendere and to plead not guilty, after a verdict of not guilty by jury on another charge involving the same facts. Id.

51. A plea of not guilty and traverse before the country cannot be withdrawn and pleas in abatement filed without leave of court. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059.

52. After a new trial has been granted, the case is at large, reinstated on the trial docket, and in charge of the district attorney. State v. Labry, 120 La. 434, 45 S 382. It is error, after accused has been convicted of murder and a new trial granted, to allow him to withdraw his plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty of manslaughter, and to sentence accused on that plea without any formal appearance or hearing of the district attorney. Id.

53. Change of plea of guilty to one of not guilty. State v. Garrett [Kan.] 98 P 219. Application for leave to withdraw a plea of not guilty. People v. Dabner, 153 Cal. 398, 95 P 880. Discretionary to permit or refuse withdrawal of plea of not guilty in order to file plea in abatement. Ingraham v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 320.

54. Refusal to allow change of plea of guilty not error where defendant was represented by counsel and no pressure was brought to bear and he had time to deliberate. State v. Garrett [Kan.] 98 P 219. Refusal of leave to withdraw plea of guilty not abuse of discretion where court allowed several days, accused had advice of three attorneys who advised against the plea of guilty, and accused was fully advised as to power of court to determine degree of crime and fix sentence and yet pleaded guilty on advice of his father. People v. Dabner, 153 Cal. 398, 95 P 880. Defendant should be permitted to withdraw a plea of guilty given unadvisedly when application therefor is duly made in good faith and sustained by proofs, and proper offer is made to go to trial on plea of not guilty. Pope v. State [Fla.] 47 S 487. Where plea of guilty is entered deliberately, and no motion for leave to withdraw is made until state's witnesses have been discharged, and there is no direct allegation or proof that plea was induced by fear, or ignorance, or circumstances putting defendant at disadvantage, it is no abuse of discretion to refuse to allow withdrawal of plea. Id. No abuse of discretion in refusal to allow withdrawal of plea of not guilty where accused had forfeited recognizance and been rearrested, had had continuance, and had filed and withdrawn plea in abatement similar to that desired to be again filed. Ingraham v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 320. Exercise of discretion by court in refusing to allow plea of guilty to be withdrawn, after sentence, a plea of not guilty having previously been withdrawn and plea of guilty entered, not reviewable. State v. Stevenson [W. Va.] 62 SE 688. Where indictment contained two counts, one for burglary and one for larceny, and defendant pleaded guilty to larceny charge, and record shows he could not have been mistaken, he will not be allowed to claim that he was in error, though he did not have advice of counsel, not having requested any. State v. Crane, 121 La. 1039, 46 S 1009.

58. Special plea so construed. Court should have heard it. Louisiana & A. R. Co. v. State, 85 Ark. 12, 106 SW 960.

the court should receive evidence relative to the question raised.[59] Evidence may be received in support of a replication to a plea of misnomer.[60] Where, before pleading to the indictment, defendant suggests his true name, the court should comply with the suggestion and correct the indictment.[61] Accused cannot complain of the overruling of special pleas available to him under the plea of not guilty.[62] A demurrer to a replication to a plea in abatement admits facts stated in the replication.[63] The defense that the prosecution is barred by the statute of limitations cannot, in the federal courts, be raised by demurrer.[64] If the evidence shows that the prosecution is barred, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of it, though he has not pleaded the statute in bar.[65]

Former jeopardy.[See 10 C. L. 87]—The plea of former jeopardy should be interposed in the trial court[66] at time of arraignment[67] and a ruling obtained.[68] If it raises a question of fact, it is triable by jury.[69] But the sufficiency of the plea in the first instance is for the court, and if it is specific and raises only a question of law, that question is one for the court alone.[70] If frivolous or clearly insufficient, it may be stricken.[71] A demurrer to a plea of former jeopardy need not set out facts.[72] It admits the truth[73] and tests the sufficiency of[74] facts alleged in the plea. The plea should show the former accusation,[75] an acquittal or conviction thereunder,[76] and judgment,[77] and also facts showing identity of the offense and of the person.[78] The plea is not of a criminal nature, but is a collateral civil issue as to former action of the court, and the verdict on such issue, whether for or against defendant, may be set aside by the judge in his discretion or if against the weight of the evidence.[79] Defendant is a competent witness on such issue, and he may testify thereon without being compelled to testify on the main issue.[80] The two issues can be tried separately.[81] To sustain the plea it must appear that defendant was in fact placed in jeopardy[82] and that the two offenses are identical in fact and in law,[83] and the burden of showing these matters is on the defendant.[84]

60. Plea of misnomer alleged that accused's name was "Hadley Y. B." and not "Hodley" as set up in indictment, and state replied that second letter of accused's name was "a" and not "o," and it was the intention to so write it in indictment. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059. A plea of former acquittal which is plainly frivolous and trifling, such as one which, if true, fails to state any reason why defendant could not be again tried, will be treated as a nullity and may be stricken on motion, no demurrer being necessary. § 6. Preparation for, and matters preliminary to, trial.[85]—In the notes are given decisions in regard to such preliminary matters as appointment of counsel for accused,[86] the allowance of time to file pleadings,[87] services of venire on accused,[88] services of copy of indictment or information,[89] and the right to subpoenas for witnesses.[90] Under federal laws, if the indictment is not for a capital offense, defendant is not entitled as a matter of right to a list of witnesses or jurors.[91] The right and informations for two offenses of same kind on same day being copies of each other, and witnesses testifying to two transactions, and conviction is had, with nothing to show which transaction is basis of conviction, second prosecution was barred. Alexander v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 553, 110 SW 918. Where two indictments charged separate offenses, but were consolidated for trial, a plea of not guilty and judgment discharging defendants on one was not a bar to prosecution on the other. Thomas v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 897. The entry of a nolle prosequi on a count for manslaughter, at the close of the state's case, is not an acquittal of the crime of manslaughter under other counts of the indictment. People v. McGinnis, 234 Ill. 68, 84 NE 687. An affidavit charging the commission of two or more things in the disjunctive is bad for uncertainty, and the record of the dismissal of a case predicated upon such an affidavit is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution. Gilliam v. State, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 482. Where court caused charges against accused to be dismissed because of defects in indictment, and it did not appear that there was any trial, but new charges were at once filed, accused was not thereby placed in jeopardy twice. Price v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 950. The reversal of the judgment in a criminal case places the state and defendant in the same position they occupied before the trial, and where a defendant secures a reversal of a verdict which was silent as to the first and second counts and found him guilty under the third count of the indictment, he cannot thereafter maintain a plea in bar to the first and second counts. State v. Dickerson, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 208. Where a new trial has been granted on motion of defendant, he cannot, upon such trial, rely upon the plea of former jeopardy. Yeates v. Roberson [Ga. App.] 62 SE 104.

83. Thomas v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 897; State v. White, 146 N. C. 608, 60 SE 505. After conviction for assault with intent to kill, the victim died, and prisoner was indicted for murder. Held, plea of former jeopardy was untenable. Commonwealth v. Ramunno, 219 Pa. 204, 68 A 184. Demurrer to plea of former jeopardy is properly sustained where prosecution is for carrying concealed pistol, and plea sets up a former conviction for carrying the pistol to a church, though it is alleged that the two transactions were one and the same. Veasy v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 561. Transactions not identical as matter of law, since one who carries a concealed pistol to church is guilty of two offenses, neither of which includes the other. Id.

84. Burden of proof is on defendant to sustain plea of former jeopardy. Mance v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1053. The burden is upon defendant to prove that a former acquittal or conviction was for the identical offense. State v. White, 146 N. C. 608, 60 SE 505. Burden is on accused to show by preponderance that offenses are same transaction. Benton v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 422, 107 SW 837. The production of the indictment and judgment in former action is enough to show nature of offense charged therein, except date and place, when they are by statute immaterial, and defendant must then show by parol the identity of the two charges. State v. White, 146 N. C. 608, 60 SE 505.

86. If accused has no counsel when brought up for arraignment, it is customary to ask him if he desires counsel, and to appoint counsel to assist him if he signifies a desire for such appointment. Such is general practice in Florida. Cutts v. State [Fla.] 45 S 491. It is court's duty to appoint counsel for a defendant who appears to be ignorant or weak minded, though in the case of intelligent persons he need not do so unless requested. Williams v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 330, 110 SW 339. Where court appointed two attorneys to defend accused, held not error to excuse one and appoint a substitute, under circumstances shown. Brown v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 267, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 555, 106 SW 368.

87. Defendant is allowed 2 days after arrest and during term to file written pleadings. Starbeck v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 192, 109 SW 162.

88. Service of venire on defendant held to conform to statute, being in time and copy served containing names of all jurors. Hunter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 133.

89. Clerical error in sheriff's return immaterial where accused was in fact served with correct copy of indictment. Anderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 341, 110 SW 54. Where charge was burglary of a box car, service of copy of information omitting word "car" was insufficient, and not cured by endorsement which was no part of information. Cause should have been continued for proper service. State v. Daniels [La.] 47 S 599. Where indictment had defendant's name "Dove" Smith, and copy served on him read "Dave" Smith, his real name was not ground for quashing indictment or service of copy, especially since letter "o" could be read "a" equally well. Smith v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 344, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 845, 106 SW 1161.

90. In Iowa an application for subpoenas for witnesses for the defense, at the expense of the state, is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. State v. Gilbert [Iowa] 116 NW 142. Where on appeal the record does not disclose what, if any, showing was made as to the materiality of the desired testimony, the order granting the application will not be disturbed. Code, § 5492, does not provide manner of procedure. Id.

of accused to have returned to him property alleged to have been obtained by an unconstitutional search and seizure may be determined on motion in advance of trial.[92]

Right to speedy trial.[See 10 C. L. 92]—Accused has a constitutional right to a speedy trial [93] which is regulated by statutes in many states,[94] which usually provide that defendant shall be entitled to be discharged if not brought to trial within the time limited.[95] Such statutes should be liberally construed in favor of accused.[96] Decisions under statutes of this nature are given in the note.[97] Void proceedings in a court having no jurisdiction do not operate to extend the time.[98] It is held that the fact that accused is serving a penitentiary sentence on another charge does not excuse delay in prosecution,[99] since convicts are entitled to the benefit of the constitutional and statutory right to speedy trial.[1] In a habeas corpus proceeding, the burden of showing good cause for delay is upon the state.[2]

Preliminary inquest as to sanity.[3]—Whether a plea of not guilty should be permitted to be withdrawn in order that a preliminary hearing, as to accused's sanity may be had is a matter resting largely in the trial court's discretion.[4] Denial of such request is not error where the suggestion of insanity is not supported by affidavit and the court offers to and does receive, at the trial, evidence of accused's mental condition both at the time of the commission of the offense and at the time of trial.[5]

97. Under Cr. Code Proc. § 221, defendant is not entitled to be discharged until after end of three terms after filing of information. Time prior to filing of information is not to be considered. State v. Braden [Kan.] 96 P 840. Right to speedy trial not violated where one trial resulted in disagreement and cause was continued to next term, accused being under three indictments, having been discharged on one and tried on two, two disagreements resulting. State v. Dilts [N. J. Law] 69 A 255. A statute requiring every indictment to be tried the term or session in which issue is joined, or the term after, unless the court allows further time for cause, is not violated where the prisoner is tried but remanded owing to a disagreement of the jury. Cr. Proc. Act 1898, § 53, held not violated, prisoner being indicted on three charges and tried on two, disagreements resulting. Id. The Washington statute entitling accused to a discharge unless accused is brought to trial within 60 days after indictment found or information filed does not apply where he has been convicted in police court of city and appeals to superior court. State v. Parmeter [Wash.] 95 P 1012. In such case he is not entitled to be discharged after 60 days from time of taking appeal where he has not demanded a trial in the superior court. Id. Good cause for delay shown where it appeared attorney for accused requested prosecuting attorney not to file information as matter might be disposed of without trial. State v. Fletcher [Wash.] 97 P 242. Absence of important witness who was unable to attend at grand jury session held good cause for refusal to dismiss prosecution because accused was not informed against or indicted within 30 days after being held to answer as required by Pen. Code, § 1382. People v. Quijada [Cal.] 97 P 689.

Waiver of right: The right to a dismissal if no information or indictment is filed within 30 days after the order holding defendant to answer, under the Washington act, is waived if not exercised before or at the time when accused is called on to plead. Motion to dismiss made at beginning of trial, too late. State v. Seright, 48 Wash. 307, 93 P 521. Where within the 60 days after filing of information accused consented to setting trial of cause, state was not required to show cause why motion to dismiss should be denied. People v. Claudius [Cal. App.] 97 P 687.

98. Where accused was not brought to trial in court having jurisdiction within 4 months, his conviction was reversed and he was ordered discharged, notwithstanding a preliminary trial in municipal court, since that court had no jurisdiction and proceedings therein were void. People v. Jonas, 234 Ill. 56, 84 NE 685. Steps taken by accused in municipal court to avoid judgment and obtain his discharge held not a waiver of his right to speedy trial in a court of competent jurisdiction. Id.

6. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 SE 578. Motion for continuance on ground of absence fered with on appeal only, where a clear abuse of discretion appears.[7] Subject to this rule, lack of time for preparation,[8] absence or illness of counsel,[9] and surprise,[10] may or may not be ground for continuance, according to the showing made. While the showing for a continuance should make it appear that the continuance is not sought for delay only,[11] this need not appear by direct oath of defendant; it is sufficient if the showing as a whole indicates that mere delay is not sought.[12] Though failure to produce an eye witness in a homicide case would entitle defendant to a postponement of the proceedings, the absence of such witness[13] is not ground for continuance at his request, before trial. In Georgia, motions for a continuance made at the term at which the indictment is found, while addressed to the discretion of the court, stands on a different footing from such motions made at a subsequent term.[14] That the regular jury for the week has been excused and a new one called is not ground for a continuance, in Texas, where the cause has been set by agreement of counsel, without the knowledge of the court.[15] The right to one day's time for preparation for trial, after plea, given by statute in North Dakota is absolute, if requested in time.[16] In Rhode Island, the court has no power to adjourn for more than fourteen days without consent of accused, and his consent to a longer of nonresident witnesses. State v. Thompson, 121 La. 1051, 46 S 1013.

7. Parker v. State, 3 Ga. App. 336, 59 SE 823. No abuse of discretion in denying continuance. Duckworth v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 268; People v. Boyd, 151 Mich. 577, 15 Det. Leg. N. 36, 115 NW 687. Refusal of continuance for absence of witness, proper. State v. Mills, 79 S. C. 187, 60 SE 664. Discretion of court exercised in passing on weight of evidence contained in showing and counter showing made upon hearing motion for continuance will not be controlled by appellate court. Kimberly v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 571.

8. Refusal of continuance asked to allow counsel additional time to prepare, not an abuse of discretion. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309. No abuse to deny continuance asked by defendant for preparation where he had had from Jan. 24 to Feb. 5, and had no reason except assumption that trial would not occur until next term. State v. Rabene, 79 S. C. 542, 60 SE 442. Refusal to postpone until next day on account of fatigue of defendant's counsel not abuse, where defendant had other counsel and court had no other word. Id. Defendant entitled to continuance, where he had no notice of trial sufficient to enable him to obtain witness. Howell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1000. Application for continuance for more time to prepare addressed to discretion, where accused has had 6 or 7 weeks and has been represented by counsel. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059. Denial of continuance on ground of want of time to examine evidence heard by coroner, not an abuse of discretion. State v. Franklin [S. C.] 60 SE 953.

9. Illness and absence of one attorney not ground for continuance, two being present to try the case. Howerton v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1008, 112 SW 606. Absence of one attorney not ground for continuance when defendant had three present. Kennedy v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1381, 108 SW 891. Continuance for absence of defendant's counsel properly refused where several prior continuances had been granted, counsel had not been heard from, accused was in jail unable to give bond, and trial would have gone over 5 months had continuance been granted. State v. Clay, 121 La. 529, 46 S 616. No abuse of discretion to deny continuance on account of absence of leading counsel where only issues were of fact, and accused was represented by able counsel. State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 84, 60 SE 241. Discretion of court not abused in refusing second continuance on ground of absence of defendant's leading counsel. Cate v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 942.

11. Brooks v. State, 3 Ga. App. 458, 60 SE 211. Where trial lasted longer than continuance asked for, and witness was not brought in, there was no error in denying it. Railsback v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 542, 110 SW 916. Court may overrule motion for continuance based on absence of witness, though showing made would require continuance if true, where counter showing leads him to believe that continuance is sought merely for delay. Kimberly v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 571. No abuse of discretion to refuse continuance, where there had been 5 prior continuances extending over 5 years, and there were three forfeitures on appearance bond and facts tending to show want of diligence and attempt to evade trial. Williams v. State [Miss.] 45 S 146.

19. Continuance should have been granted where testimony was material, and witness had promised, personally and by letter, to be present, and had been duly subpoenaed. Marsden v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 945. Due diligence shown to procure absent witnesses, where all were subpoenaed but one, and attachment issued for him at showing that he absented himself with connivance of accused, was insufficient. Leonard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 187, 109 SW 149.

Continuance properly denied, diligence in obtaining presence of witness not being shown. State v. Kemp, 120 La. 378, 45 S 283; Alderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 525, 111 SW 738; Fox v. Horn, 209 Mo. 452, 108 SW 3. Continuance properly denied when no showing was made, on request by court as to what was done with subpoena for witness, nor when his testimony was discovered. Price v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 428, 111 SW 654. Refusal of continuance proper, where offer of proof was not definite, and no diligence to obtain presence of witnesses was shown. Robinson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 567, 110 SW 905. Refusal of continuance not error when affidavit did not allege facts showing due diligence to procure testimony, it not appearing what became of process which was issued. Sykes v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 165, 108 SW 1179. Application for second continuance properly refused where no process was asked to compel attendance of witnesses, and no effort made to obtain their presence. Diligence must be shown on second application. McCrimmon v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 318, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 842, 106 SW 1158. Where court offered compulsory process attachment to obtain presence of witnesses, and defendant declined the offer, he could not complain of being forced to trial without the witnesses, and without showings in lieu of their presence. Millender v. State [Ala.] 46 S 756.

20. A continuance for absence of a witness is properly refused where there is no reasonable certainty that witness will be present at postponed hearing. State v. Simmons, 121 La. 561, 46 S 651. Application for continuance properly refused where no diligence to procure witness was shown, and it appeared that witness was fugitive from justice, and there was no reasonable expectation that he would appear. Anderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 341, 110 SW 54.

21. Affidavit for continuance fatally defective for failure to allege that proof expected to be made by absent witneeses could not be made by witnesses who were available. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 45 S 260. Continuance properly refused where application did not show materiality of desired testimony, nor that it could not be obtained from resident witnesses. Moore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 559, 110 SW 911. Not error to refuse continuance to allow doctor to be obtained to testify that defendant was weak minded, affidavit with showing being read. Webb v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 316, 110 SW 281. Not error to refuse continuance where failure of witnesses to appear was not explained, no reason for expecting them to attend later was shown, and it was not shown that proof could not be made otherwise. Le Grand v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 1028. Showing for continuance insufficient, witnesses being present, there having been time for preparation and part of desired testimony being only impeaching. Sizemore v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1154, 108 SW 254.

22. Continuance properly denied where desired testimony appeared to be immaterial. Westerman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 109, 111 SW 655; Strong v. State, 85 Ark. 536, 109 SW 536; Morphew v. State, 84 Ark. 487, 106 SW 480. Not error to refuse continuance where testimony of absent witness would not be competent or material. Richter v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 147. Error to refuse continuance to obtain two witnesses who had been subpoenaed, and would testify to facts directly contradicting state's case. White v. State [Miss.] 45 S 611. Absent testimony material. Leonard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 187, 109 SW 149. Refusal of first application for continuance error, residence of witnesses being shown, and that subpoena had been returned not found, and testimony being material to show self-defense. Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 928. Refusal to allow short continuance to secure attendance of witness, error, where evidence was slight. Mahs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 11. Refusal of continuance until following morning error, where witness had been called and sworn, but went away before being called, and his testimony was material. Etly v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 896. Error to refuse continuance to enable defendant to obtain witnesses, when he had just been indicted and had been confined in jail, and continuance of only one day was asked, and showing was that witnesses impeaching.[25] A continuance sought on the ground of absence of witnesses may be avoided by the state by admitting as true the facts to which the absent witness would testify.[26] A mere admission that the witness would, if present, testify as alleged is not sufficient,[27] unless it appears that there is no reasonable certainty that the attendance of the witness can be procured within a reasonable time.[28] An admission of the latter character suffices where continuance is sought to obtain the deposition of the witness.[29] In Kentucky, where the trial is called at the same term at which the indictment is returned, the state, in order to avoid a continuance, must admit the truth of the facts to which absent witnesses would testify,[30] but if continuance is asked at a subsequent term, the state need only admit that the witnesses would testify as alleged.[31] Where the state admits the truth of testimony as stated in showing for continuance, it cannot thereafter contravene the same.[32] Only that portion of an affidavit for continuance which sets out the facts to which the witnesses would testify, if present, may be read to the jury.[33] would directly contradict the state's evidence. Brooks v. State, 3 Ga. App. 458, 60 SE 211. Where defendant was arrested and placed on trial for murder a few days later, it was reversible error to refuse continuance to allow him to procure attendance of only disinterested witness, the case being close one. Magee v. State [Miss.] 45 S 360. Continuance should have been granted to allow defendant to secure, as witnesses, persons who were on car where alleged assault occurred. Collins v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 455, 107 SW 852.

23. Continuance properly refused when application did not show that desired testimony was material or probably true. Robinson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 565, 110 SW 908. Where desired testimony appears to be probably untrue, continuance need not be granted. Price v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 428, 111 SW 654.

24. Merely cumulative testimony not ground for continuance. State v. Horn, 209 Mo. 452, 108 SW 3; Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466; Dobbs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 921; Burnett v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 515, 112 SW 74. Continuance properly refused where testimony of absent witnesses would have been cumulative only, and court offered compulsory process. Brock v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 630, 110 SW 878.

25. Continuance to obtain merely impeaching testimony properly refused. Elsworth v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 963. Refusal of continuance to allow accused to get proof of conviction of witness for state not abuse of discretion. Murph v. State [Ala.] 45 S 208.

26. State v. Wilcox [S. D.] 114 NW 687. Where a stipulation is made conceding all that would have been obtained by granting continuance, a motion therefor is properly denied. People v. Nylin, 139 Ill. App. 500. Commonwealth's attorney, to avoid continuance, admitted truth of facts stated in showing for witness. Accused not prejudiced by failure of court to charge that such facts were to be taken as true, in absence of request so to charge. Stamper v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 580, 110 SW 389.

27. Continuance should have been granted where absent witnesses would contradict state's case, and prosecuting attorney would not admit as true the showing made, but offered to admit that witnesses would so testify. Purvis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 316, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 396, 106 SW 355. If it appears that the presence of the witness can be secured within a reasonable period, that due diligence has been used to procure his presence, and that his testimony is material, it is error to allow the state to avoid a continuance by an admission that witness, if present, would testify as alleged. Error to deny continuance where witness was in hospital, within state, suffering from temporary insanity. State v. Wilcox [S. D.] 114 NW 687. A denial of a continuance under such circumstances is the denial of the absolute substantial right of a defendant to have compulsory process for witnesses. Id.

28. Under these circumstances, reading of the alleged testimony from the affidavit for continuance is equivalent to a deposition, which is all defendant could get in any case. State v. Wilcox [S. D.] 114 NW 687.

29. Where adverse party admits that witness, if present, would testify as stated in an affidavit for continuance, and such statement is read to the jury as evidence, judgment will not be reversed for refusal of continuance to enable depositions of witness to be taken. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407.

30, 31. Brock v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 630, 110 SW 878.

32. Contravention on immaterial point held harmless. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 332, 107 SW 855.

33. Other parts, showing efforts to obtain testimony, etc., properly excluded. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407.

The application See 10 C. L. 99 must be timely made.[34] The supporting affidavits must conform to statutory requirements.[35] The showing for an absent witness must be definite and certain.[36]

§ 8. Dismissal or nolle prosequi before trial.[37]—Where an indictment is quashed or dismissed for curable defects,[38] or a jury discharged because of a variance between the allegations and the proof,[39] accused may be held to answer to another charge, and a dismissal does not in such case operate as a final judgment or bar.[40] Where an indictment is dismissed because of insufficient proof before the grand jury, the court may direct a resubmission of the matter to the grand jury if it appears that the missing evidence is of a technical nature and may be supplied,[41] but where it appears that all the evidence at hand has been submitted, there will be no direction to resubmit.[42] Where an information is dismissed because not filed in time, the dismissal is held not to bar further proceedings.[43] Where a demurrer is sustained for misjoinder of counts, a subsequent allowance to the state of a nolle prosequi as to all but one count operates to set aside the judgment on demurrer, and cures the indictment as to the remaining count.[44] In Louisiana the district attorney has

34. Where a defendant proceeds to trial without requesting a continuance or suggesting the absence of expected witnesses, he is not entitled to a continuance to obtain witnesses when the evidence has all been introduced. Napier v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 635, 110 SW 842. The request for one day's time, under Dakota statute, should ordinarily be made immediately after the plea and before the taking of any other step preliminary to trial. Too late when not made until four jurors had been called. State v. Chase [N. D.] 117 NW 537. Unless timely made, the right to the day's time is waived. Id. Whether the request is in time may depend upon special circumstances, and in such cases the decision of the trial court will be entitled to great weight on appeal. Id.

35. Where evidence in support of motion to continue did not meet requirements of Pen. Code 1895, § 962, denial of motion was not an abuse of discretion. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

36. Showing held too general. Blue v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 324, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 841, 106 SW 1157. Facts to be proved by absent witness too generally stated, and not shown to be material. Stepp v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 158, 109 SW 1093. Not error to refuse continuance where showing of testimony of absent witness was vague and indefinite, so that it could not form basis of perjury. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124. Application for continuance is fatally defective which does not give names of witnesses and state facts expected to be proved. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059. Application for continuance insufficient which did not state names of witnesses nor what they would prove. Martin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 274. Where affidavit for continuance stated that absent witness knew a certain fact, it was sufficient. Should have set out the facts he could testify to, not mere conclusion therefrom. Richie v. State, 85 Ark. 413, 108 SW 511. Affidavit for continuance to obtain testimony must, under Rev. St. 1899, § 2600, give the names of the witnesses and their place of residence. State v. Horn, 209 Mo. 452, 108 SW 3.

37. See 10 C. L. 100. See, also, § 6, Right to Speedy Trial.

38. Where an indictment is quashed for curable defects, defendants should not be discharged, but should be held to answer to a proper indictment. State v. Glennen [Miss.] 47 S 550.

39. Where a variance between the allegations and proof appears, and jury is discharged, and court is of opinion that new indictment or information can be framed on which defendant can be legally convicted, it is court's duty to commit defendant or admit him to bail to await a new indictment or information. Ex parte Johnson [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1023.

40. Pen. Code, § 1008. Direction of court to submit case to another grand jury prevents dismissal from operating as final judgment or bar. People v. Quijada [Cal.] 97 P 689. Pen. Code, § 1387, provides that dismissal is bar to another prosecution, if offense is misdemeanor, unless order expressly states it is to allow complaint to be amended, but shall not be bar in case of felony. Order sustaining demurrer, but remanding prisoner to wait action of subsequent grand jury, held not bar to prosecution (assault with deadly weapon). Id. Where presentment is returned within time required by statute of limitations, and a nolle prosequi is thereafter entered thereon for any informality, prosecution may be continued by an accusation in the city court having jurisdiction, provided the accusation be preferred within 6 months from the date of the order of nolle prosequi. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501.

41, 42. People v. Acritelli, 57 Misc. 574, 110 NYS 430.

43. A dismissal because information was not filed within 30 days after binding over of accused is not a bar to another prosecution for same offense, nor are new proceedings before a magistrate necessary. Information may be filed at once, after dismissal of original proceedings, without violating accused's rights. State v. Fletcher [Wash.] 97 P 242; State v. Seright, 48 Wash. 307, 93 P 521.

44. Stevens v. State [Ala.] 47 S 208.

power to enter a nolle prosequi upon an indictment, though its validity has been recognized by the trial court, where he doubts its sufficiency.[45] The accused is not thereby injured, not having been placed in jeopardy.[46] In Texas the county attorney may for good cause and with consent of county court enter a dismissal of a cause appealed from justice court.[47] The statute requiring him to file his reasons for such action is directory only, and failure to do so does not invalidate the judgment of dismissal.[48] Where two parties are jointly indicted and a severance allowed, the district attorney may, for proper reasons, dismiss one case,[49] and it is not improper, where this is done, to tender to the remaining defendant, as a witness, the person against whom the prosecution has been dismissed.[50] In Missouri it is provided by statute that if there are two indictments pending against accused for the same offense the one first found shall be suspended by the second.[51] Hence defendant cannot be legally tried upon an indictment when a second has been found for the same offense.[52]

§ 9. Evidence. Judicial notice. See 10 C. L. 100—Courts take judicial notice of public laws and statutes,[53] public documents and maps,[54] regulations of the executive departments of the federal government pursuant to authority delegated by congress,[55] of the fact that prohibition is in force in a certain county,[56] of the location of a city within the county,[57] and of matter of common knowledge.[58] The court will not take judicial notice that a certain object is a deadly weapon.[59]

Presumptions and burden of proof. See 10 C. L. 101—Innocence being presumed,[60] the burden is upon the state [61] to establish beyond a reasonable doubt [62] every essential element of the crime charged.[63] It is now generally held that the interposition

49. Harville v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 283. Defendants were granted a severance, and it was ordered that this defendant be tried last. Subsequently prosecuting attorney entered nolle prosequi as to other two defendants and they were not tried. They were not used as witnesses by the state nor by defendant. Held, defendant could not complain. Hobbs v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 71, 112 SW 308.

56. That it is unlawful to manufacture or sell intoxicating liquors anywhere within certain county. State v. Arnold [S. C.] 61 SE 891.

57. That city of Waukesha is within eastern municipal district of Waukesha county. Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 NW 150. Where crime was shown to have been committed within a certain distance of a certain town, judicial notice could be taken of the location of the town as being within a certain county. State v. Mitchell [Iowa] 116 NW 808.

58. Meaning of word "certify" as used in connection with bank checks judicially noticed. United States v. Heinze, 161 F 425. Merchandising establishments, stores, restaurants, soft drink dispensaries, etc., are judicially recognized as places of business, and court may so inform jury. Bashinski v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 577. Usual abbreviations of christian names in common use. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 46 S 176. That "Manhattan cocktails" are intoxicating. State v. Pigg [Kan.] 97 P 859. That whisky is spirituous, alcoholic and intoxicating. O'Connell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1007. That lager beer is intoxicating malt liquor. Cripe v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 567. That beer is intoxicating when taken in sufficient quantities. O'Connell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1007.

59. An axe. Bush v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 398, 107 SW 348.

61. The burden of proof never shifts in criminal prosecutions but rests with the government throughout, and the benefit of a reasonable doubt in favor of accused extends to every matter offered in evidence for as well as against him. Williams v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 30.

of the defense of insanity or an alibi does not cause the burden of proof to shift. In such case, defendant is entitled to be acquitted if, upon all the evidence, the jury entertain a reasonable doubt of guilt.[64] The burden is upon defendant to show by a fair preponderance of evidence circumstances reducing the degree of crime [65] or excusing the act proved against him,[66] and to show an alleged lack of jurisdiction of a state court of general jurisdiction.[67] It is competent for the legislature to make proof of certain facts prima facie evidence of a violation of law,[68] and a statute imposing upon a defendant the burden of proof upon a particular issue does not violate any vested right.[69] The ordinary inferences or presumptions commonly recognized by courts are indulged in criminal cases,[70] but are, of course, disputable.[71] One inference or presumption cannot be based upon another.[72] In the absence of any testimony as to defendant's character, there is no presumption in regard to it.[73] Failure of defendant to call available witnesses is a circumstance which may be considered by the jury,[74] though no legal presumption is thereby raised.[75] In Georgia

64. An alibi is no longer considered an affirmative defense, to establish which defendant has the burden of proof; but if the proof thereof is, with the other evidence in the case, sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of accused, he is entitled to an acquittal. Instruction that proof of alibi must be of "strong convincing character, and exclude any reasonable hypothesis except the nonpresence of accused," held prejudicially erroneous. State v. Nelson [N. D.] 114 NW 478. Where defense is an alibi, accused should be acquitted if upon a consideration of the evidence thereof, together with all the other evidence in the case, there remains a reasonable doubt of accused's guilt. Tais v. Ter. [N. M.] 94 P 947. Where the defense of insanity is interposed, it is the duty of the jury to consider all the evidence, and if they then entertain a reasonable doubt of the sanity of accused at the time of committing the offense he must be acquitted. People v. Casey, 231 Ill. 261, 83 NE 278. The defense of insanity is not to be separately tried, but is a part of the issue of not guilty and the burden is on the state. State v. Speyer, 207 Mo. 540, 106 SW 505. The defense of insanity admits only the commission of the act charged, not that it was a crime. Id. While sanity is presumed in the first instance, yet, where accused introduces evidence of insanity, the burden of proof does not shift, but still rests with the state to prove defendant was criminally responsible. If jury entertain a reasonable doubt of guilt upon all the evidence, they must acquit. State v. Pressler, 16 Wyo. 214, 92 P 806. Where insanity is relied on as defense, it is not error to refuse a charge that if evidence creates a reasonable doubt of defendant's sanity jury must acquit. State v. Herron [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 274.

65. Burden is on prisoner to reduce crime or show self-defense, killing being proved. State v. Peterson [N. C.] 63 SE 87. State need not show that former judgment of conviction had not been reversed, vacated or set aside. Such proof is for defendant. Tall v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 541, 110 SW 425.

66. Accused must show self-defense by fair preponderance only. Commonwealth v. Palmer [Pa.] 71 A 100.

67. An Indian indicted in a state court for killing another Indian has burden of showing that crime was committed on Indian reservation and that federal courts had exclusive jurisdiction. Evidence held not to show such fact. State v. Buckaroo Jack [Nev.] 96 P 497.

68. Legislature has power to make proof of possession of federal license prima facie proof of violation of local option law. King v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 101, 109 SW 182. Competent to provide that issuance of revenue stamp shall be prima facie evidence of sale of intoxicating liquor by person to whom it was issued. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Ky. St. 1903, § 1967, making proof of setting up or exhibiting gaming table prima facie evidence that it was done with permission of person occupying or controlling the house, is valid. Jarboe v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 755, 107 SW 227.

69. Local option law making county court's order declaring result of election prima facie evidence that provisions of law have been complied with, thus placing on defendant, prosecuted under that law, burden of showing invalidity of initiatory steps, is valid. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

70. Person presumed to have ordinary capacity for hearing. Holcombe v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 647. Soundness of mental and bodily faculties presumed. Id. Presumptions raised by Code Civ. Proc. § 1963, subd. 15, that official duty has been performed, and subd. 23, that writing is truly dated, while disputable, are evidence in themselves sufficient to support finding, though there is evidence to contrary. People v. Liemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863.

71. Presumption of identity of person from identity of name (Code Civ. Proc. § 1963) is disputable. People v. Mullen [Cal. App.] 94 P 867. Presumption of legality of acts of officials in selecting jurors held overcome by proof showing discrimination against colored men in selecting panel. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 879. Whenever the law indulges a presumption adverse to accused from proof of certain facts, he may rebut such presumption by evidence. Vanhouser v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 572, 108 SW 386.

75. Failure to call two physicians who examined deceased, and who testified before the statutory presumption arising from failure of defendant to produce the strongest evidence available does not apply where he introduces no evidence, but relies wholly on his statement,[76] nor is it applicable where witnesses are equally accessible to the state.[77]

Relevancy and competency in general.[See 10 C. L. 104]—In general, all evidence, otherwise competent, having any tendency to prove or disprove any fact in issue, is relevant and admissible[78] while evidence not shown to be relevant should be excluded.[79] Where evidence is admissible only for a limited purpose, its effect should be properly limited by the court.[80] Evidence too remote should be excluded,[81] but where the question of admissibility depends solely upon the weight or remoteness of the evidence, its exclusion or admission rests in court's discretion.[82] Where there is the grand jury, was a circumstance which jury could consider, though no legal presumption arose therefrom. People v. Fiori, 123 App. Div. 174, 108 NYS 416. Failure to produce available witnesses to explain facts making a prima facie case against accused may be considered by the jury, but does not raise any arbitrary presumption of suppression of evidence nor any presumption of guilt or innocence. State v. Callahan [N. J. Law] 69 A 957.

76. Pen. Code 1895, § 989, inapplicable. Davis v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 843.

77. Not error to refuse charge as to presumption from failure to call available witness (Pen. Code 1895, § 989) where witness was present in court who was at place of killing, but who was not shown to have seen the act, and state did not call him, but relied on other evidence, and accused could have called him. Harper v. State, 129 Ga. 770, 59 SE 792. Where accused relies solely on his statement, Pen. Code 1895, § 989 (presumption from failure to produce available evidence), applies only where the statement discloses the existence of evidence accessible to accused, but not to the state. Davis v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 843.

78. A fact is relevant which as a matter of logic tends to sustain or impeach a hypothesis, and, being relevant, is admissible unless excluded by statute or controlling principle. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32. One fact is relevant to another whenever, according to the common course of events, the existence of the one, taken alone or in connection with other facts, renders the existence of the other either certain or more probable. State v. Sebastian [Conn.] 69 A 1054. Any evidence tending to connect the evidentiary fact with the factum probandum is admissible. State v. Ryder, 80 Vt. 422, 68 A 652. Great latitude is allowed in admitting evidence on issue of insanity. State v. Porter [Mo.] 111 SW 529. Testimony of accused on former trials admissible to rebut evidence of insanity. State v. Speyer, 207 Mo. 540, 106 SW 505. Proof tending to show commission of offense by another improperly excluded. Mason v. State [Ala.] 45 S 472. Deed admissible, though information alleging its forgery did not set out its acknowledgment. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69. Acts and statements of defendant just after killing of deceased admissible on issue of insanity, though not res gestae. State v. Porter [Mo.] 111 SW 529.

79. Evidence properly excluded when not shown relevant at time it is offered and no further offer to show relevancy is made. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552. Questions seeking to elicit testimony neither relevant nor material properly excluded. McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321. Record in another case incomplete and properly excluded. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540. Evidence of size of accused's family inadmissible. State v. Gallman, 79 S. C. 229, 60 SE 682. Testimony as to conduct and appearance of accused's brother inadmissible, there being no proof of conspiracy between them. Jay v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 567, 109 SW 131. Held error to allow witness, who was present at time alleged affidavit, contradicting defendant's testimony, was read to defendant, to state everything occurring in no way tending to prove falsity of defendant'e testimony. Wilkinson v. People, 226 Ill. 135, 80 NE 699. Statement of witness giving his testimony before grand jury, in absence of accused, inadmissible, there being no controversy as to what occurred before grand jury. Pride v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 441, 107 SW 819. In prosecution for perjury alleged to have been committed in divorce proceeding, admissions of accused's former wife could not be proved, she not being party. State v. Luper [Or.] 95 P 811. Record in another case and statements of defendant in that case, which was for same crime, hearsay. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273. Defendant, accused of indecent assault, claimed prosecuting witness was intoxicated at time, and offered to show that she made similar charges against others when intoxicated. Offer properly excluded when there was no offer to show further that she had delusions when intoxicated or was in the habit of imagining such aseaults. State v. Quinn, 80 Conn. 546, 69 A 349.

80. Where evidence was competent to corroborate witness if he was detective, but not if he was accomplice, court should have so limited effect of testimony. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386.

81. In homicide for killing of defendant's wife, evidence of divorce proceedings, mistreatment and trouble several years before held inadmissible and prejudicial to accused. State v. Moore [Kan.] 95 P 409. Proof of blood and semen stains on accused's shirt, and that button found at place of assault was like the one missing from his shirt, and had similar material attached to it, held too remote to be admissible on question of identity of accused with man who committed rape. State v. Alton [Minn.] 117 NW 617.

82. Where admissibility depends on the weight of the evidence, question is for trial serious doubt as to the admissibility of evidence, the doubt should be resolved in favor of accused.[83] Evidence is admissible which tends to connect accused with the crime [84] or to establish his identity,[85] and to show animus, motive, guilty knowledge or intent.[86] Proof of the actions of bloodhounds used to track criminals is admitted in most jurisdictions, when the proper foundation has been laid,[87] by proper proof of the training, experience and breeding of the dog used, and by further proof connecting accused with the trail followed.[88] Proof of the conduct of other bloodhounds trained by the same person is inadmissible.[89] Evidence which is relevant and competent to show guilt of accused is not inadmissible because of an admission or offer to admit the fact sought to be proved,[90] epecially where defendant's concescourt. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325. Remoteness of testimony goes to its weight, not to its competency. State v. Porter [Mo.] 111 SW 629. Proper to refuse to exclude proof of tracks into which defendant's feet had been placed on ground that evidence was not reliable, the weight of it being for jury. State v. Williams, 120 La. 175, 45 S 94. Letter by deceased to defendant prior to their marriage, and three years prior to homicide, properly excluded as too remote. Montgomery v. State, 136 Wis. 119, 116 NW 876. An objection to evidence or a motion to strike is addressed to the sound discretion of the court where the evidence is admissible in some aspects of the case but inadmissible to show character of defendant or separate offenses. State v. Deliso [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 218. Evidence offered by state in rebuttal not being clearly inadmissible, action of court in receiving it was not erroneous, though its relevancy was remote. State v. Gallagher, 14 Idaho, 581, 94 P 581.

83. Gambrell v. State [Miss.] 46 S 138.

84. Proof of tracks, and attendant facts, connecting defendant with crime, admissible. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Tracks leading from burglarized house admissible, with other evidence. State v. Freeman, 146 N. C. 615, 60 SE 986. That tracks corresponded in size to shoes found at accused's house admissible, though stick with which measurements were made was not produced. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Finding of revolver with which accused was connected, competent. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Proof of finding articles in accused's possession and at places where he had been admissible to connect him with crime of burglary. Lynne v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 386, 111 SW 151. Proper to allow witnesses to identify bottle as one seen in accused's possession where there was evidence of shooting with oiled shot and a bottle was found near the scene containing oiled shot. Richards v. Com., 107 Va. 881, 59 SE 1104. Where crime indicates that at least two persons participated in it, and circumstances indicate a certain person as one of them, proof that accused was in the company of such person soon after the crime was relevant and admissible. Baker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 99. Testimony of witness as to circumstance connecting accused with crime admissible, though witness did not positively identify accused. Objection goes to weight, not to competency. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. Homicide, committed in robbing bank. Proof of expenditures by accused after crime admissible, especially to corroborate confession which detailed them. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863.

85. Testimony of witness as to how long she had known defendant, how often he had visited her, by what name he was known, etc., competent in identification of defendant. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273.

86. Evidence showing participation and guilty knowledge of accused, accomplice in forgery, properly received. Hinson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 143, 109 SW 174. Question whether defendant had not returned portion of sum received by him in pursuance of alleged conspiracy to cheat and defraud county held proper to show guilty knowledge. Commonwealth v. Tilly, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 35. Evidence of motive is admissible. City of Gallatin v. Fannin, 128 Mo. App. 324, 107 SW 479. Evidence tending to show improper relations between accused and another man admissible to show motive in prosecution for murdering her husband. Lawson v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 974. Threat by accused against attorney for owner of building burned not admissible in arson case to show motive. Clinton v. State [Fla.] 47 S 389.

87. See discussion of authorities pro and con in State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Where the training, character and conduct of a dog make his acts evidence, such acts may be admitted. Such evidence is not restricted to corroborative evidence only. State v. Freeman, 146 N. C. 615, 60 SE 986.

88. It should appear that the particular dog used was trained and tested in tracking human beings, and by experience had been found reliable in such cases, and that the dog was laid on the trail, whether visible or invisible, at a point where the circumstances tended clearly to show that the guilty party had been, or upon a track which the circumstances indicated to have been made by him. In addition to this, the reliability of the dog must be proved by a person or persons having personal knowledge thereof. This foundation may be strengthened by proof of pedigree, purity of blood or the exalted standing of his breed in the performance of such peculiar work. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Proof of tracking by bloodhounds competent where there was evidence that they were of pure blood, well trained, had been tested, were in charge of an experienced trainer, and were put on trail within six feet of where criminal agency must have originated, close to building, burning of which was charged. Spears v. State [Miss.] 46 S 166.

90. Character of wounds could be proved sion is not as broad as the fact alleged.[91] Evidence of a certain kind or to show certain facts having been introduced by one side, evidence similar in nature is admissible in behalf of the other side.[92]

Competency of evidence as affected by rights of accused.[93]—The right of accused to be confronted by witnesses against him includes the right to cross-examine,[94] and where this right is unduly limited by the circumstances, though formally permitted by the court, prejudicial error results.[95] The right of accused, to be confronted with witnesses is not violated by the introduction of documentary evidence.[96] Accused cannot be compelled to testify, and his failure to testify cannot be shown or commented on.[97] But it has been held that failure of accused to deny facts within his knowledge warrants inference that he could not truthfully deny them.[98] Evidence obtained from him with his consent or voluntarily disclosed is competent.[99] Accused is not compelled to give testimony against himself by being compelled to put his foot in a track found near the scene of the crime in order to identify him.[1] Evidence of guilt which a defendant either directly or indirectly is compelled to disclose by an illegal seizure and search of his person under an unlawful arrest is inadmissible against him.[2] But if his premises or belongings are searched by an-though accused admitted shooting and pleaded justification. State v. Young [Or.] 96 P 1067.

91. The state is not precluded from introducing proof to establish a prior conviction, charged in the indictment, by a concession of the fact of prior conviction by the defense after the state had commenced to make its proof, the concession not being as broad as the indictment. People v. Jordan, 109 NYS 840.

92. Where accused claimed an alibi and that he was sick, it was not error for state to ask him what he was sick of, though he answered that he had a "bad" disease. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 364, 107 SW 355. Where accused proved incompetent statements by deceased, he could not object to similar proof by state. Thomas v. State [Tenn.] 113 SW 1041. Evidence of certain kind being offered by accused, evidence of same character was competent for state. Brown v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 267, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 555, 106 SW 368. Where statement by accused admitting killing was proved, accused should have been permitted to prove other details and explanation given to witness by accused a short time after. Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 791, makes entire conversation competent. Pratt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 281, 109 SW 138. Where defendant brought out part of conversation, state could show all of it. Lowry v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 562, 110 SW 911. Showing for witness being offered, it was competent to show by persons familiar with and acquainted in community where witness was claimed to reside that no such person lived there. Walker v. State [Ala.] 45 S 640.

94. Wray v. State [Ala.] 45 S 697.

95. Witness was brought in on cot, and court, on consultation with physician, refused to allow him to be examined on the ground that it might cause death of witness. He allowed witness to answer one question, however, whether witness shot deceased. Defendant's counsel declined to cross-examine, though court gave permission. Held, prejudicial error, it being proper to decline to cross-examine under these circumstances, and improper to permit state to ask the one important question. Wray v. State [Ala.] 45 S 697.

96. The provision of the intoxicating liquor law that possession of United States license as liquor dealer shall be presumptive proof of guilt, and that such proof may be made by copy of record of United States revenue collector, held constitutional and valid. Runde v. Com. [Va.] 61 SE 792.

97. Accused's failure to testify on preliminary trial is inadmissible. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938.

98. Where defendant was in court and offered testimony by physician that his health was such that he could not be allowed to testify, and he did not testify, jury was warranted, if they found he was able to testify, in drawing inference that he could not truthfully deny facts shown in evidence. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. Instruction that where evidence, if true, would be conclusive of the guilt of accused, and he can disprove it by his own oath as a witness, then his silence would justify a strong inference that he could not deny the charge, approved. State v. Callahan [N. J. Law] 69 A 957; State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83.

99. Physical condition of accused could be shown when examination by witness was with accused's consent. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Search and examination of accused before he was formally accused of crime, and not against his protest, held not a violation of his rights. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. Letter by accused while in jail, addressed to his mother and father, delivered unsealed to the sheriff, for mailing, and containing an admission of his participation in the crime, held not objectionable as compelling him to testify against himself. State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719.

1. Magee v. State [Miss.] 46 S 529.

2. Glover v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 862. Defendant's consent to be searched for $10 held not to include consent to be searched for pistol which he was trying to conceal other, although without a vestige of authority, the evidence thus disclosed may be used against him.[3] The rule is applicable only to searches of a defendant's person after an unlawful seizure thereof.[4] Evidence obtained by a search of his person after a lawful arrest is admissible.[5] A defendant, being separately tried cannot successfully object to evidence on the ground that it was obtained by means of an illegal search and seizure of a codefendant.[6] Failure to object to the admission of evidence illegally obtained is a waiver of its incompetency, and evidence so obtained and received without objection may warrant conviction.[7] That evidence was obtained by the illegal act of a private person or petty officer does not make it inadmissible,[8] nor does its introduction violate any constitutional right of defendant.[9] Where the appearance of the defendant is relied upon to sustain a material ingredient of the offense charged, he should be identified and his appearance proved in the regular manner.[10]

Witnesses whose names were not endorsed on the indictment or information may testify,[11] especially where their testimony is purely rebuttal,[12] and their names may be endorsed subsequent to the filing of the indictment or information.[13] The state may call as witnesses persons whose names are not endorsed when they did not testify before the grand jury and were not known to the state's attorney when the inand which was discovered by use of force. Reference to pistol inadmissible, defendant not having been arrested. Davis v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 404.

3. The test is: Who furnished or produced the evidence. Glover v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 862. Evidence obtained by searching defendant's house without warrant admissible. Rogers v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 96. Arrest and seizure being legal, though without warrant, evidence as to finding liquor in locked box was competent. Jenkins v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 574. That evidence was obtained by an illegal search of defendant's house held not to render it inadmissible, though he was under illegal arrest at the time. Tooke v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 917. Evidence elicited through use of a search warrant is admissible however irregular the search warrant may have been and however improper its use for the purpose of securing evidence. Hardesty v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 164 F 420.

4. Glover v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 862. Evidence taken from the person of one illegally detained is inadmissible. Concealed weapons. Hughes v. State, 2 Ga. App. 29, 58 SE 390. When by an unlawful search and seizure under an illegal arrest a person is compelled by an officer to furnish incriminating evidence against himself, such evidence is not admissible against him in a criminal prosecution. Croy v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 848. But where accused interfered in an attempt to arrest another, and in a scuffle disclosed a pistol in his pocket, which officer then took from him, proof of these facts was competent. Id.

5. Eaker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 99. Competent to prove that shoes taken from defendants while under legal arrest, and without force or intimidation, fitted certain tracks. Id. Shoes worn by defendant at time of arrest competent. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Papers taken from accused after his arrest, by the officer arresting him, may be received in evidence. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69. Evidences of guilt found upon a person in legal custody are admissible in evidence. Hughes v. State, 2 Ga. App. 29, 58 SE 390. Trunk check was found on person of accused when arrested, and officers obtained trunk and took property and papers. Held, accused not entitled to return of such property before trial, nor was it obtained by unlawful search or seizure. United States v. Wilson, 163 F 338. Such property would be admissible at trial subject to objections based on materiality and on constitutional grounds of compelling accused to furnish evidence against himself and of having been obtained by an unlawful search or seizure. Id.

9. Cohn v. State [Tenn.] 109 SW 1149.

10. Held improper to merely instruct jury to judge defendant's age by his appearance, in rape case where age was essential element of offense. Commonwealth v. Walker, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 167.

11. Witnesses whose names are not on information may be called to testify. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Witness whose name was not endorsed on indictment properly allowed to testify. State v. Henderson, 212 Mo. 208, 110 SW 1078.

12. Evidence obviously and purely in rebuttal of evidence offered in behalf of defendant may be given by witnesses whose names are not endorsed on the information. Clements v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 271.

13. In absence of any claim or showing of prejudice to defendant, and in absence of any request for continuance, not error to allow prosecuting attorney to endorse on information, the day before case was set, names of additional witnesses said to have been known to him when he filed information. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P 478.

formation was filed,[14] and, in such case, accused is not entitled as a matter of right to notice of the names of witnesses who will be called against him.[15]

Acts disclosing consciousness of guilt,[16] such as flight,[17] resistance of arrest,[18] attempts to suppress evidence,[19] if defendant is connected therewith,[20] and incriminating statements and conduct of accused,[21] may be proved.

Other offenses, convictions, and acquittals.[See 10 C. L. 107]—Evidence relating to separate and distinct offenses committed by accused wholly unconnected with the offense charged is inadmissible,[22] but evidence otherwise competent and relevant is Commonwealth, having elected to stand on charge of sale of liquor to certain person could not prove sale to others. Devine v. Com., 107 Va. 860, 60 SE 37. Where, in embezzlement case, intent was not an issue, proof of other similar acts was inadmissible to show intent, though competent on issue of identity. Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714. Proof of other embezzlements, inadmissible in embezzlement case. State v. Laechelt [N. D.] 118 NW 240. In homicide, evidence tending to show accused had burned house where deceased lived was inadmissible, no connection being shown between the acts. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. In murder case, proof of assault by accused on witness, more than a year before, was inadmissible. State v. McNamara, 212 Mo. 150, 110 SW 1067. In homicide cases, it is better to limit the evidence strictly to case in hand and exclude admissions and testimony of extraneous offenses, contests, controversies and difficulties. Brown v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 80. Where charge was keeping disorderly house, proof of specific acts of immorality of the habitues of the place, committed elsewhere, was not admissible. State v. Baans [N. J. Law] 71 A 111. In prosecution for keeping disorderly house, proof that town was "no-license" one, and that defendant sold liquors, was improperly admitted. People v. Jones, 191 N. Y. 291, 84 NE 61. In prosecution for kidnapping, evidence to show another kidnapping by accused is inadmissible, no particular criminal intent or evil motive being involved. State v. Holland, 120 La. 429, 45 S 380. Proof of plea of guilty to similar charge 3 years before, inadmissible (obtaining money by fraudulent promise to perform services).

not inadmissible, because it incidentally tends to show commission of other similar offenses by accused.[23] Thus, proof of crimes other than that charged is admissible where some connection between them is shown,[24] or where other offenses are so blended with the one charged that proof of one involves proof of the other,[25] both being part of the same transaction.[26] Evidence of other crimes is also admissible to show motive, guilty knowledge, or criminal intent,[27] and to identify accused

Clarke v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 663. Evidence of disgraceful, immoral, or criminal conduct of one accused of crime, which is in no way connected with the crime itself, is inadmissible. Dungan v. State [Wis.] 115 NW 350. In rape case, other acts than that charged between prosecuting witness and defendant could not be proved. People v. Ah Lean [Cal. App.] 95 P 380. Y. 291, 84 NE 61. Proof of other burglaries, not in any way connected with charge on trial, erroneously admitted. Lightfoot v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 345.

23. State v. Dulaney [Ark.] 112 SW 158. Evidence which is distinctly relevant is not inadmissible, because it tends to show accused's connection with other crimes. Ray v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 816. Evidence relevant to crime charged is admissible, though it tends to show another crime also. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 111, 111 SW 24. Proof of other murders not inadmissible, all the acts being part of one scheme and closely connected. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135. In prosecution for killing an officer, the reason for the arrest without a warrant became material, competent on this issue to show that accused was being arrested for commission of felony. Wounding of witness by defendant. State v. Honore, 121 La. 573, 46 S 655. In prosecution for gambling, evidence tending to sustain the charge was admissible though it incidentally tended to show another offense similar in nature. State v. Landrum, 127 Mo. App. 653, 106 SW 1111. Where conversation with defendant was competent to prove an admission by him, it was admissible for that purpose though it disclosed commission of another offense. People v. Cahill [N. Y.] 86 NE 39. Where defendant attempted to prove he was railroad conductor by showing certain cards, proof by the real conductor and owner that the cards had been stolen from him was admissible, though it incidentally tended to show another crime. Eaker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 99. In prosecution for having burglarious tools with intent to use same, proof that hall near defendants' abode was broken into and a safe blown open was held admissible. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188. Defendant accused of conspiracy to commit subornation of perjury, under stone and timber act, is not prejudiced by admitting evidence of attempt to acquire state lands similarly unlawful, because such evidence tends to show commission of crimes other than those charged, especially where judge carefully limited use of testimony by his charge so as to prevent improper use. Williamson v. U. S., 207 U. S. 425, 52 Law Ed. 278. Acquittal of accused on a charge protects him from another prosecution for the same offense but does not estop the state from proving the same facts where they tend to prove a different charge. State v. Hooker, 145 N. C. 581, 59 SE 866.

24. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Proof of other offenses is inadmissible unless necessary to establish identity, or guilty knowledge, or intent or motive, or unless such acts are so interwoven with crime charged that they cannot well be separated, or unless such other offense or offenses were committed to conceal the crime charged, or vice versa. Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714.

25. Several offenses, forming parts of a series of acts evincing a continuous state of mind in defendant and culminating in the criminal act for which he is indicted, are admissible on trial of such indictment. Breaking into shanty and assault on inmates by defendant and others, prior to homicide. State v. Deliso [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 218.

26. Renfroe v. State, 84 Ark. 16, 104 SW 542. Under charge of embezzling a horse, proof of appropriating notes, as part of same transaction, was admissible to show intent. Smith v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 527, 107 SW 844. Manasse, 153 Cal. 10, 94 P 92. An offense other than that for which accused is being tried may be proved as a part of the res gestae, or as tending to establish the offense charged. Proof of breaking down door of house before shooting, which was offense charged. State v. Anderson, 120 La. 331, 45 S 267.

27. Guilty knowledge. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Proof of other acts of same character admissible to show guilty knowledge or particular intent. People v. Hagenow, 236 Ill. 514, 86 NE 370. Such proof admissible in prosecution of homicide by abortion. Id. In cases involving fraudulent intent, other acts and dealings of accused of a kindred character to that charged, and performed at or about the same time, are admissible to illustrate and establish the motive and intent in the act in question. Thomas v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 897. Facts tending to show motive may be proved though they involve another offense, but defendant cannot be compelled to testify thereto. Welch v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 51, 108 SW 863. Another similar transaction by defendant, about same time, admissible in prosecution for uttering forged note. State v. Mitton, 37 Mont. 366, 96 P 926. To prove defendants' intent and guilty knowledge in prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands, proof of certain other similar transaction to have other persons file for defendants' benefit was admissible. Jones v. U. S. [C. C. A.]

and connect him with the offense charged.[28] Where evidence of this kind is admitted for a limited purpose, the jury should be so informed at the time,[29] though a proper charge to the jury at the close of the evidence may be sufficient.[30]

Former conviction of crime or commitment to prison may be proved when charged in aggravation or as a part of the offense.[31] Details of former charges should, however, be excluded,[32] and proof of former conviction is not to be considered on the issue of guilt of the principal charge.[33]

162 F 417. In prosecution for perjury in swearing to another's residence on public lands, proof that witness took up a homestead on certain lands in section and that defendant swore to his residence on the land, though he had not in fact resided there, as defendant knew, was admissible to show knowledge, design, and system to defraud. Barnard v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 618. Proof of other similar sales admissible in prosecution for keeping "blind tiger." Gorman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 406, 106 SW 384. Stealing of other property at same time as that alleged, admissible on intent and as part of same transaction. Territory v. Caldwell [N. M.] 98 P 167. In prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses, proof that same representations were made to others for same fraudulent purpose competent. People v. Whalen [Cal.] 98 P 194. In prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses from county by presenting claims twice, proof that he had collected twice for other claims about the same time admissible, where he claimed he did not know he had been previously paid for claim in question. State v. Sparks [Neb.] 114 NW 598. On trial of defendant charged jointly with another of obtaining money by false pretenses, proof of a general scheme by the two to defraud others and of similar representations by defendant to others was admissible. Griggs v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 572. Under indictment charging bank officer with embezzling funds of bank, proof of embezzlement of different amounts at various times and the manner in which he did it was held admissible to show offense charged. Chamberlain v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 555. In prosecuting of county auditor for corruptly countersigning warrant, proof of the giving and receiving of bribes to induce favorable action in condemnation proceedings, the acts being part of a series culminating in the one being prosecuted, was competent to show a guilty purpose. People v. Neff, 191 N. Y. 210, 83 NE 970. First assault on sheriff was to secure release of companion, second was in resisting arrest when sheriff overtook accused and his companion a short time later in the day Held, proof of either was admissible to show motive and intent in other, though indictment charged but one assault. Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P 556. In trial of charge of incest, criminal acts of like nature prior to the one charged may be proved. Smothers v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 152. State v. Routzahn [Neb.] 115 NW 759. In prosecution for uttering forged instrument knowingly with intent to defraud, proof of other similar acts is admissible only on question of intent. Such evidence is admissible on this issue regardless of other evidence as to the same issue. State v. Murphy [N. D.] 115 NW 84. In prosecution for bribery of member of legislature, course taken by other bills, tending to show a corrupt combination of men to obtain money for certain legislation, was competent to show guilty knowledge and general scheme. State v. Dulaney [Ark.] 112 SW 158. In prosecution for maintaining liquor nuisance, proof of unlawful sales is admissible to show unlawful intent in keeping liquors. State v. Johns [Iowa] 118 NW 295. In prosecution for conspiracy to blackmail, proof of other conspiracies to blackmail is admissible to show guilty knowledge, intent, or motive. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Evidence of relations of defendant in Africa, England and this country with prosecutor's wife held admissible as showing events leading up to and making possible act charged. Commonwealth v. Levinson, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 286.

28. Possession of other stolen articles properly shown in theft case, evidence being properly limited by court to purpose of connecting accused with crime charged. Lynne v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 375, 111 SW 729. Prior burglary by defendant provable, when it had tendency to connect accused with offense charged. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 201, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 107 SW 52. Where defendant claimed another had done act with which he was charged, proof of other similar acts by accused, and of the name used by him in such transactions, was admissible to identify him (embezzlement). Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714. Other previous acts, conviction under another name, and previous assumed names, also admissible. Id.

29. Where proof of other offenses is admitted for a limited purpose, the jury should be so informed at the time. Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714.

30. Evidence of independent assault being admitted in homicide case, court should have instructed jury limiting its consideration within proper bounds. Bruner v. U. S. [Okl.] 96 P 597. Usually a limitation of the purpose for which evidence of other acts may be considered should be made when it is received, but a proper limitation in the court's charge may cure any error in failing to do so. Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P 556.

31. In prosecution of convict for assault likely to produce great bodily injury, under Pen. Code, § 246, record of commitment of accused to prison is competent. People v. Finley, 153 Cal. 59, 94 P 248. Record of prior conviction competent, such conviction being alleged in indictment. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124.

32. Proof of former convictions by the "record" (Ky. St. 1903, § 1130) means proof

Character and reputation.[See 10 C. L. 110]—Proof of the good character of defendant,[34] or of his good reputation,[35] is admissible in his behalf, but the evidence should be confined to the trait involved in the crime charged.[36] "General character" is the same as "general reputation" and is determined by how the person is generally regarded or esteemed in the community in which he lives.[37] Hence, proof of particular acts or conduct is inadmissible on the issue.[38] Testimony that witness has never heard the reputation of defendant questioned is competent.[39] Proof that accused has never before been arrested or accused of crime is incompetent.[40] Proof of specific good conduct in certain respects is not competent to negative proof of bad conduct afforded by defendant's confession.[41] The prosecution cannot impeach defendant's character or reputation unless he puts it in issue.[42] But, where defendant calls witnesses to testify as to his good reputation, the state may cross-examine as to what they have heard concerning defendant.[43] Proof of reputation is properly confined to the reputation of the individual in the vicinity in which he lives or in which he formerly resided,[44] and only witnesses acquainted with the general reputation of the prisoner in such neighborhood or vicinity are qualified to testify in regard thereto.[45]

Hearsay.[See 10 C. L. 111]—Unsworn statements of third persons, not in the presence of accused,[46] and testimony based on information derived from others,[47] is inadmissible.

by record of verdict and judgment of conviction and sentence, not by entire record, since this would show all the facts of former charges, which is not permissible. Indictments should have been excluded. Tall v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 541, 110 SW 425.

33. Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 NW 150.

34. Evidence of good character is always admissible for defense. Lewis v. State [Miss.] 47 S 467. Evidence of good character of defendant is substantive evidence and may of itself create a reasonable doubt and lead to an acquittal. Error to charge that if jury is satisfied of defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, under all the evidence, evidence of previous good character cannot overcome such conclusion. Commonwealth v. Cate, 220 Pa. 138, 69 A 322.

35. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969.

36. Character for peace and quiet competent in homicide case. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Reputation of accused for honesty relevant in prosecution for larceny. People v. Ryder, 151 Mich. 187, 14 Det. Leg. N. 912, 114 NW 1021.

37. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273.

38. Such proof should be excluded on cross-examination of witness to general character. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273. In prosecution for theft as bailee, proof of the general reputation of accused as to honesty and integrity is competent but not proof of particular acts. Leonard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 187, 109 SW 149. While accused may put his general character in issue, he cannot show special traits or particular instances not bearing on the peculiar nature of the crime charged. Arnold v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806. Where court permitted defendant (larceny) to show generally his previous occupations, proof of particular matters concerning such occupations, and of his family history, was properly excluded. State v. Clem [Wash.] 94 P 1079.

39. Witness had known defendant, but had never heard anyone except members of his family speak of him. State v. McClellan [Kan.] 98 P 209.

40. State v. Marfaudille, 48 Wash. 117, 92 P 939.

41. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36.

42. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Proof of bad reputation of defendant inadmissible, where he had not himself offered evidence of good reputation. People v. Hinksman [N. Y.] 85 NE 676. In prosecution for unlawfully retailing intoxicating liquor, defendant not having put her reputation in issue, proof that she had the reputation of being a blind pig keeper was inadmissible. Smothers v. Jackson [Miss.] 45 S 982. Where accused offered proof of good character but not of reputation, it was prejudicial error to allow state to cross-examine character witnesses as to rumors of other crimes by defendant, and allow defendant to offer evidence to disprove the rumored charges. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969.

43. Where witness testified to defendant's good reputation for peace and quiet, it was proper to cross-examine as to how many men she had heard he had shot. People v. Laudiero [N. Y.] 85 NE 132.

44. Younger v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 170.

45. Mere fact witness heard prisoner's reputation discussed in town, other than that in which prisoner resided, is insufficient in absence of evidence that prisoner was known where discussions occurred and had a reputation there. Commonwealth v. Howe, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 554.

46. Conversations in defendant's absence. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. What was said after killing, in defendant's absence. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. Statement of third person not in accused's presence. Alford v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 621, 108 SW 364. Statement of accused's mother, not shown to have been heard by him. Irving v. State [Miss.] 47 S 518. Conversation between witness and Admissions and declarations.[See 10 C. L. 1112]—Self-serving declarations by accused are not admissible,[48] but inculpatory or incriminating statements and admissions are admissible,[49] if freely and voluntarily made.[50] A statement made in the third person as to what accused said. Choice v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 285, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 549, 106 SW 387. What prosecuting witness said to another witness about obtaining liquor from accused. Smith v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 507, 107 SW 819; Henderson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 514, 107 SW 820. What witness had said out of court. Halloway v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 928. Statements by deceased, before the murder, that she was afraid to stay with accused (her husband). State v. McNamara, 212 Mo. 150, 110 SW 1067. Prosecutor testified to description which he gave sheriff of man who robbed him. Testimony by sheriff as to such description being given to him, held hearsay. Gillotti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252. Mere accusation against one is hearsay and inadmissible, unless it appears that accused failed to deny it or in some way admitted it. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

Held not within hearsay rule: Statements in presence of accused may be proved, object not being to show truth of facts stated. State v. Monfre [La.] 47 S 543. That witness gave to prosecuting attorney a bottle of whiskey, which he obtained from certain person, not hearsay. Henderson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 514, 107 SW 820. Fixing a time as of the date of a rumor of a certain event is not hearsay. Hodge v. State [Ala.] 45 S 906.

47. Machem v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 115, 109 SW 126. Information obtained by hearsay. Patterson v. State [Ala.] 47 S 52. What another said. McBryde v. State [Ala.] 47 S 302. That another pointed out whiskey to witness as that which defendant had. Welch v. State [Ala.] 46 S 856. Evidence of making of assays, based on information given by others. People v. Whalen [Cal.] 98 P 194. Testimony that witnesses understood, had heard, or had been informed of certain facts. Gorman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 406, 106 SW 384. What witnesses had heard about accused doing certain acts. Hargrove v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 541, 110 SW 913. Testimony that witness "obtained information" from certain source. Griffin v. State [Ala.] 46 S 481. Hearsay opinion of expert on insanity. State v. Heidelberg, 120 La. 300, 45 S 256. Statements by witness, which must have been based on hearsay, and which accused resented. State v. McNamara, 212 Mo. 150, 110 SW 1067.

48. State v. Peterson [N. C.] 63 SE 87; Anglin v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 475, 107 SW 835; Booth v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 452, 108 SW 687; Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. Proof of self-serving acts and declarations. Caldwell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 349, 106 SW 343. Statements of accused in his own behalf prior to trial. Barnes v. State, 3 Ga. App. 333, 59 SE 937. Self-serving statement prior to homicide. Jay v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 567, 109 SW 131. Self-serving declaration of defendant prior to killing. Redman v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 591, 108 SW 365. Question apparently calling for self-serving declaration after killing. Hill v. State [Ala.] 46 S 864. Self-serving declaration, long prior to alleged false entry by bank president in report to comptroller, incompetent. May v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 1. Acts and declarations of accused are not admissible unless part of res gestae. Mason v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 776. Self-serving declarations by defendant, 30 minutes after shooting deceased, on reaching jail, telling why he did it. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. Private account book of accused, showing moneys drawn on account of certain company and kept for purpose of submitting to president of company and actually so submitted, is inadmissible to corroborate his testimony that he had verbally informed president of moneys so drawn. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1.

49. Inculpatory admissions voluntarily made. Smarrs v. State [Ga.] 61 SE 914. Statements to sheriff before arrest. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Statement of accused over telephone. Chapman v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 567. Letter found on defendant's person when arrested which he admitted having written. Nioum v. Com. [Ky.] 108 SW 945. Statements by accused tending to show guilt. Booth v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 452, 108 SW 687. Conversation between defendant and companions just after shooting. Poe v. State [Ala.] 46 S 521. Implied admissions of defendant during attempt to get station agent to "settle" and drop case for burglarizing freight house admissible against him. State v. Richmond [Iowa] 116 NW 609. Letter by one charged with illicit intercourse, written after act alleged to the girl, admitting his responsibility for her condition, competent. Leedom v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 496. Admission of defendant in perjury case properly admitted. People v. Cahill [N. Y.] 86 NE 39. Statement by defendant to his wife competent in vagrancy case. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 771. Remark of defendant to deputy sheriff made as soon as he saw him, "I know what you came for and am ready to go," admissible. Heningburg v. State [Ala.] 45 S 246. Record describing articles of freight received at local station and delivered to consignee, and signed by him on receipt of goods, is evidence of the nature of the goods received. State v. Dahlquist [N. D.] 115 NW 81. Records so signed by consignee's authorized agent competent against consignee. Id. Deed reciting that grantors are husband and wife, and acknowledged by them as husband and wife, admissible in adultery case as admission by man that he was married. State v. Greene, 33 Utah, 497, 94 P 987. Declarations or admissions of accused in conflict with testimony admissible, though not confessions, and though sheriff told him it would be best to make statement regarding entire matter. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325. Conversation between detective and accused over telephone competent, though detective did not at time of conversation know accused, where he afterwards knew him and then recognized his voice as the same he heard over the telephone. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. In prosecution for obtaining presence and hearing of accused, charging him with the crime, not denied by him, may be shown,[51] though accused is under arrest at the time.[52] An admission of one defendant is not ordinarily competent against his codefendant.[53] Confessions, admissions and declarations of the accused must be given in their entirety,[54] and the whole conversation in which they were made should be proved.[55] Accused should be allowed full latitude in explaining alleged written or verbal admission or equivocal statements.[56]

Confessions.[See 10 C. L. 114]—The admissibility of confessions is goverened by statute in many jurisdictions.[57] A confession offered in evidence is prima facie competent, and the necessity of showing its incompetency devolves upon accused.[58] For this purpose a preliminary examination by the defense should be allowed,[59] and a goods on credit, concealing them, and becoming bankrupt, admission of defendant, after date of alleged conspiracy, while trying to induce a third person to enter into such a scheme, that he had "handled several such cases," was admissible against him. Alkon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 163 F 810. Testimony by the accused before the grand jury that he was not guilty but knew how the murder was committed was properly admitted at the trial, together with other incriminating statements and admission on his part showing guilty knowledge. Williams v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 4. Where it was sought to prove an admission of accused while in jail made to another through a pipe connecting two floors, held the identity of accused with the person speaking must be shown, though it could be shown by circumstantial evidence. Held admissible. Clark v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 836, 106 SW 1191; Id. [Ky.] 112 SW 571.

50. Voluntary statements by accused while under arrest giving information as to whereabouts of stolen property admissible. Smith v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 643, 111 SW 939. Any voluntary statement by defendant concerning his part in the transaction in issue is admissible against him. Anderson v. State, 133 Wis. 601, 114 NW 112. Inculpatory admissions, as well as plenary confessions, to be admissible against defendant must be voluntary and not induced by the slightest hope of benefit or the remotest fear of injury. Mill v. State, 3 Ga. App. 414, 60 SE 4. Not necessary to warn and instruct dsfendant at preliminary inquest when he was not under accusation at the time and inquest was not the formal one. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. Statements and conduct of accused at funeral of deceased admissible, being freely and voluntarily made, and no duress or threats or promises being shown, and defendant having made similar statements while on the stand as a witness. State v. Williams, 120 La. 175, 45 S 94.

51. Silence of accused when charged with the crime, under circumstances ordinarily calling for a denial, if innocent, may be shown. Raymond v. State [Ala.] 45 S 895. Statement of woman in presence of accused (charged with living in adultery with her) that she had been with him three times, and that he paid her, admissible, circumstances being such as to call for denial if untrue. Jones v. State [Ala.] 47 S 100. Fact that defendant was approached as a Mason and asked to deny charge on his Masonic honor, and that defendant asked to have charge investigated, could be proved. Smith v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 344, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 845, 106 SW 1161.

52. Raymond v. State [Ala.] 45 S 895.

53. In separate trial of one defendant, a declaration of the other, jointly indicted with defendant, incriminating defendant is inadmissible against defendant. Foster v. State [Miss.] 45 S 859. Where two defendants are tried together, proof of an admission by one, not in the presence of the other, should be limited at the time it is offered to the one making it. Polson v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1398, 108 SW 844.

54. State v. Price, 121 La. 53, 46 S 99.

55. Not error to admit question of absent witness to which admission of accused was the answer, both heard by witness testifying. State v. Price, 121 La. 53, 46 S 99.

56. State v. Johnson [N. D.] 118 NW 230.

57. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756.

58. So held under Indiana statute. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756.

59. Confession being offered, defense is entitled to preliminary examination of witness to ascertain its competency. People v. Fiori, 123 App. Div. 174, 108 NYS 416. Where confession when offered is objected to as not properly obtained, the court should receive evidence on the part of defendant to sustain the objection. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135. Where defendant did not offer to make any proof to sustain his objection, and court ascertained by questioning witness that confession was given without threats or inducements, it was properly received. Id. When an alleged confession is offered, defendant has the right to show by preliminary cross-examination of the proposed witness, or by other witnesses or testimony, that the confession was secured by improper influences. People v. Brasch [N. Y.] 85 NE 809. Where defendant was allowed to cross-examine the first proposed witness to a confession, he was not prejudiced by denial of right to preliminary cross-examination of second witness, where he cross-examined fully after his testimony in chief, and developed nothing to show that the confession was not competent. Id. Where court offered preliminary examination if defendant's counsel thought he could show that confession was improperly obtained, but counsel made no offer or promise of such proof, such preliminary cross-examination was properly excluded. Id. Where court did not expressly rule that defendant could not introduce other testimony prior to admission of confession, and defendant's counsel made preliminary ruling made as to the admissibility of the proposed evidence.[60] If possible, this preliminary inquiry should be made in the absence of the jury.[61] Ordinarily, the competency of a confession is for the trial court,[62] and its finding on the question will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of clear and manifest error,[63] but the question may properly be submitted to the jury if the evidence is conflicting,[64] though some courts hold that the question is always one of law for the court.[65] The witness to the confession should not be allowed to state that it was voluntarily made, but should be required to testify to the facts from which the court may decide the question.[66]

A confession is admissible if freely and voluntarily made [67] and not induced by threats, duress, or improper promises or influences.[68] In some jurisdictions it must no offer of further proof, after cross-examining the state's witnesses to the confession defendant's rights were not violated. Id.

60. People v. Brasch [N. Y.] 85 NE 809. When confession is offered, court must first determine whether made under influence of hope or fear, and this inquiry is preliminary to admission of the evidence. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

61. Court should so direct though not requested so to do. State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719.

62. Instruction submitting question whether confession was properly obtained properly refused where evidence showing it to be voluntary was strong and undisputed. State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717. The admissibility of confessions at common law was determined by the trial judge under the particular circumstances of each case. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756.

63. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

64. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36; State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717.

65. See cases cited in State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717.

66. Jones v. State [Ala.] 47 S 100.

67. Confession must be free and voluntary. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863. The test of admissibility of statements of accused, whether made in judicial proceedings or otherwise, is whether they were voluntary. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135. Admissions and confessions admissible, other evidence showing that crime had been committed by some one. People v. Carlson [Cal. App.] 97 P 827. Statements made by defendant, charged with murder, that he did the killing charged because of certain facts which, if true, furnished no legal excuse or justification therefor, amount to a confession. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Statement made by accused while in custody, in presence of prosecuting attorney and officers, in answer to questions competent, where prosecuting attorney told him he need not make a statement, that he could have counsel if he desired, and that anything he said could be used against him, and that he would not be promised immunity. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756.

68. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 2115, confessions are admissible except when made under influence of fear, or produced by threats, undue influence, or intimidation. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756. Where one confession was excluded because improper inducements were used, a second confession to same persons was improperly admitted when it did not appear that accused was not still acting under improper inducements used to obtain the first. Banks v. State [Miss.] 47 S 437. Second confession inadmissible, it appearing that first had been induced by threats of imprisonment if accused did not confess, and by promise not to imprison if he did confess. Durham v. State [Miss.] 47 S 545. Where affidavit admitted to avoid continuance showed that confession was obtained by duress, it could not be considered. Sowers v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 148. Confession of manufacture of whiskey inadmissible, when given in response to demand of posse of armed men, who tied accused and left him in the woods four or five hours, and then demanded an explanation of his presence with a negro who had been lynched for assault. Allen v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 840. The confession will be received though it was induced by a promise of some collateral benefit, no hope or favor being held out in respect to the criminal charge against him, provided there is no reason to suppose that the inducement held out was calculated to produce any untrue confession, which is the manifest point to be considered. Instruction held improper but not prejudicial. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Confession held admissible. Id. Confession made to officer while under arrest, after he was told his accomplice had confessed and after being confronted with his accomplice and shown his written statement, held competent, no pressure being put on accused and no promises made. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863. Confession admissible, when made to state's attorney, in sheriff's office, after attorney told accused "he was up against it," as his accomplice had told that accused fired the shot, and accused thereupon became angry and said he would tell all just as it occurred. State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717. Confession competent where accused told sheriff he wanted to tell all, and sheriff telephoned for state's attorney, and accused then told his story and asked officers to do what they could for him, no inducements being made prior to his statement. State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719. A statement is voluntary unless made under the influence of a threat or menace which inspires dread or alarm, or induced by artifice or promise or inducement of some profit, benefit, or amelioration of punishment. Statement by defendant that he was sorry he did it admissible, when made to captors in response to rough question. Anderson v. State, 133 Wis. 601, 114 NW 112. Statements made by defendant in morning to husband, after assurances by him that he did not wish also appear that accused was duly warned that his statement could be used against him,[69] in others no formal warning is necessary.[70] A confession otherwise voluntary and competent is not rendered incompetent by the fact that accused was at the time in custody of officers,[71] or under illegal arrest,[72] or in confinement,[73] or that the confession was made in response to leading questions,[74] or that accused was sworn before a notary.[75] In Texas, a confession by accused while under arrest[76] for the crime to which his statement relates[77] is inadmissible,[78] unless reduced to writing and signed,[79] and unless the written statement itself[80] shows that accused was duly warned[81] by the person to whom the confession was made.[82] to prosecute her (for assault on himself), held not to affect admissibility of confession in afternoon to county attorney and another, no promises or threats being then made. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36.

69. Confessions purely voluntary, no improper means being used to procure them, and defendants being warned as to rights, admissible. People v. Bedeff, 110 NYS 750. Transcript of statement by defendant, before he was formally accused, but after due warning that anything he said could be used against him, held competent. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573.

70. No formal preliminary inquiry is necessary if circumstances shown make it appear that accused's statement was freely and voluntarily made. Heningburg v. State [Ala.] 45 S 246.

71. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756. Statement to officers while under arrest not inadmissible for that reason. People v. Owen [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 881, 118 NW 590. Statements after arrest, while accused was nervous and excited, admissible, if voluntary. State v. Pamelia [La.] 47 S 508. Mere fact that confession was made to police officer, while under arrest, does not make it involuntary. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863. Confession admissible though accused was in custody of public officer to whom it was made, unless it was elicited by improper means. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Confession admissible under Code Cr. Proc. § 395, though made to officers, sheriffs and police. Statute does not exclude confessions except when made in "judicial proceedings" or to "private persons," but latter phrase means statements not made in judicial proceedings. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135.

72. Voluntary confession or incriminating statement not inadmissible merely because made pending an illegal arrest. Ivey v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 565. Confessions or inculpatory statements are not inadmissible if voluntarily made merely because defendant was under arrest, even though arrest was illegal. Brown v. State, 3 Ga. App. 479, 60 SE 216.

73. Confinement or imprisonment will not alone make confession, otherwise properly obtained, incompetent. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

74. Confession will not be rejected merely because made in response to questions assuming guilt of person questioned (State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820), or that statements were made in response to questions put to him by the prosecuting attorney (State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756). Confession voluntary and competent, though accused was under arrest, and confession was in response to leading questions, where accused was warned that confession would be used against him and that he need not make any statement. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

75. Statement made to officers just after arrest, no formal charge against defendant having been made, not inadmissible because he was first sworn by a notary. People v. Owen [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 881, 118 NW 590.

76. Held that defendant was not under arrest at time he made statements; hence latter admissible. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 2, 108 SW 371. Statements by accused before he was arrested admissible, though made to and in presence of officers who afterwards arrested him. Elsworth v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 963.

77. Statements of defendant admissible where, if under arrest, it was for different crime than that for which he was being tried. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128.

78. Confession inadmissible when made while accused was under arrest. Layton v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 513, 107 SW 819. Evidence of confession improperly admitted when given while accused was under arrest and had not been warned. Jones v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 206, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 333, 106 SW 126. Admission of killing made by accused while in legal custody of officer inadmissible, though officer was not actually present when statements were made. Buckner v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 271, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 547, 106 SW 363.

79. Voluntary statement before grand jury, reduced to writing and signed, admissible. Pierce v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 148. Confession after due warning, reduced to writing and signed, admissible. Id.

80. Recital of warning in the notary's acknowledgment is insufficient. Robertson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 741.

81. Written confession inadmissible unless it shows, within itself, that the person signing it was duly warned. White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 790, as amended by Laws 1907, c. 118. Robertson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 741.

82. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 276.

83. Stenographer's transcript of statement of accused to officers, taken down in shorthand, the transcript being verified by stenographer, and it appearing that accused understood English, held competent against him. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573.

fession is admissible as a whole though it refers to other crimes than the one on trial, and evidence to corroborate it may cover the same acts as the confession.[84] Facts, discovered in consequence of confessions obtained by threats or violence, may, if relevant, be proved.[85] A confession made by one of several defendants jointly indicted is binding upon any other of the defendants, if made in his presence and approved by him, to the extent of his ratification or approval.[86]

Acts and declarations of co-conspirators See 10 C. L. 117 in furtherance of the conspiracy,[87] after the formation of the conspiracy,[88] and prior to the accomplishment of its purpose,[89] are admissible against each other,[90] when accompanied by proof of the existence of the conspiracy.[91] The latter fact may be shown by circumstantial evidence.[92] Ordinarily, a prima facie showing of the fact of conspiracy should be made before proof of acts or declarations of a co-conspirator are received,[93] but the order of proof is largely discretionary.[94] Whether a conspiracy has been shown, so as to render evidence of this kind competent, may be for the jury.[95] In the trial of one indicted as an accomplice or accessory, the guilt of the principal must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt,[96] and evidence competent to show guilt of the principal, in his trial, is admissible in the trial of the accessory.[97] Thus, declarations of the principal, tending to show his guilt, are competent, though made in the absence of the accessory and after the commission of the offense.[98]

84. Where confession covered several murders, all associated and connected, corroborative evidence covering same ground was competent. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135.

85. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32.

86. Instructions when considered together held correct. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109.

87. Statements not in furtherance of conspiracy, in absence of one against whom offered, inadmissible. Choice v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 285, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 549, 106 SW 387.

88. Acts and declarations of one conspirator, prior to formation of conspiracy, inadmissible. Driggers v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 612.

89. Statements after accomplishment of conspiracy inadmissible. Napier v. Com. [Ky.] 110 SW 842. Confession of one burglar, after arrest, and after burglary was over, inadmissible against the other on trial. People v. Quinn, 123 App. Div. 682, 107 NYS 1101. Where proof tended to show conspiracy to rob but not to dispose of property afterwards, statement of one as to disposal of a watch was inadmissible against accused, who claimed he tried to prevent robbery and took no part therein. People v. Martin, 123 App. Div. 715, 108 NYS 343.

90. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Acts or declarations of one, after conspiracy is formed, in furtherance, aid, or perpetration of conspiracy, may be shown against all. Cumnock v. State [Ark.] 112 SW 147. In prosecution of conspiracy to obtain rebates, books of one defendant, showing transactions, were competent against all. Thomas v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 897. Acts and declarations of one conspirator, pending and in pursuance of the common design, and tending to throw light thereon, admissible against all. Richards v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 400, 110 SW 432. Acts and declarations of a co-conspirator admissible, though he has been acquitted of complicity in the crime. Id.

91. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Proof of conspiracy held sufficient to permit introduction of proof of declarations of a conspirator. Brummett v. Com. [Ky.] 108 SW 861. Showing as to existence of conspiracy sufficient. Richards v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 400, 110 SW 432. Conspiracy being clearly shown, words or acts of co-conspirators admissible. Hobbs v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 264. Conspiracy being shown, acts and declarations of a conspirator in furtherance of or relating to the conspiracy are admissible against all. State v. Horseman [Or.] 98 P 135. Mere association between persons not showing conspiracy not sufficient to admit statement of one against other. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

92. Conspiracy to commit crime may be shown by circumstantial evidence. Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047.

93. Cumnock v. State [Ark.] 112 SW 147; Driggers v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 612. Acts of conspirators admissible only after prima facie showing of conspiracy. Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047.

94. Proof of acts and declarations may be received at any time, in the court's discretion, to be given effect only in case proof of conspiracy is made. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32; Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047. Acts and declarations of conspirator may be received before proof of conspiracy. State v. Lewis [Or.] 94 P 831; People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Statements of conspirator competent, conspiracy being later shown. Banks v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 480, 108 SW 693. Declarations of person indicted for conspiracy may be admitted against him as evidence of the conspiracy although the fact of the conspiracy has not been shown by other evidence and no offer made to show it if it appears that case is not pressed against other defendants. Commonwealth v. Boulos, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

95. Richards v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 400, 110 SW 432.

96, 97, 98. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41.

Res gestae.[See 10 C. L. 119]—In general, all the facts and circumstances forming part of the transaction in issue may be shown,[99] and this has been held to include, in homicide and assault cases, the killing or injury of a person not charged.[1] Exclamations or declarations of parties to the transaction, or persons present, contemporaneous or nearly so with the facts in issue, which they tend to explain or illuminate, are admissible as a part of the res gestae,[2] provided they may be fairly considered as arising naturally from the transaction,[3] and where all idea of premeditation and design is excluded.[4] Declarations may be admitted though declarant would not be competent as a witness.[5]

Expert and opinion evidence.[See 10 C. L. 121]—Ordinarily witnesses are not allowed to testify to bare conclusions of fact.[6] An opinion or conclusion is admissible, however, where the nature of the facts on which it is founded makes their adequate statement impossible, or where the matter is one involving such special knowledge, person other than accused rode with him in the buggy and got out and left him before reaching the place where he was shot. Richards v. Com., 107 Va. 881, 59 SE 1104. Statement of one who crossed the street to see what trouble was that "she guessed, etc.," held hearsay. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387. Acts and saying of participants at time of homicide or so soon after striking of blow as to preclude idea of reflection are part of res gestae and admissible; subsequent statements of mere observers cannot be so proved; they must be called to testify. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 45 S 260. Declarations by prosecutrix in rape case, shortly after regaining consciousness, and while excited about disappearance of her baby and baby carriage during the assault, held competent as res gestae; those made after baby was found, defendant not being present, incompetent. State v. Alton [Minn.] 117 NW 617.

4. Declarations of a self-serving character, made some time after one is accused of theft, to explain possession of the property, should be excluded. State v. Jacobs [Mo. App.] 113 SW 244. Words of accused after shooting wife, on being discovered by witnesses with gun in hands, held not so connected with act as to be free from suspicion, and not res gestae. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 SE 578. The court may refuse evidence of accused's conduct after he had reason to believe he was suspected of the offense charged, tending to show a consciousness of innocence on his part, although the prosecution has offered evidence of conduct tending to show a consciousness of guilt. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1.

5. Statements of boy of 4 as to injuries admissible as res gestae, though he would not be a competent witness. Soto v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1104.

a person's intent is material, he may testify directly thereto;[15] others that one cannot testify to his secret, uncommunicated motives or intentions.[16] The trial court is vested with wide discretion in the matter of permitting hypothetical questions to be propounded to experts.[17] Such questions must be based on facts shown by evidence,[18] but they need not embrace all the facts so shown.[19] They may properly state the theory contended for by the party propounding them if supported by evidence.[20] Medical works are inadmissible, and, when not alluded to in direct examination of an expert, cannot be placed before the jury on cross-examination.[21] Where a witness, however, bases his opinion on a particular treatise, extracts from it may be introduced to impeach him.[22]

Best and secondary evidence.[See 10 C. L. 125]—The rule that best evidence available must be produced[23] excludes oral or other secondary proof of the contents of a writing[24] or record,[25] except where it is but collaterally involved,[26] or where the writing or record has been lost or destroyed,[27] and due search made, if lost,[28] or

15. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. Refusal to permit defendant to testify as to his intent in removing letters from file held not prejudicial under facts of case. Id. Where a corrupt intent is essential to the crime charged, accused may testify directly to his intent in doing the acts alleged. State v. Johnson [N. D.] 118 NW 230. Where question of intent is involved, accused may testify as to his intent, but where the intent was necessarily, in the particular case (killing by spring gun in trunk), general, proof of no intent to injure or kill deceased was inadmissible. State v. Marfaudille, 48 Wash. 117, 92 P 939. Reasons of witness for doing certain act inadmissible unless intent is the gist of the crime and witness' intent is material. People v. Corey [Cal. App.] 97 P 907.

16. Defendant may not prove an unexpressed motive or purpose (homicide case). Gibbs v. State [Ala.] 47 S 65. Though he may be cross-examined as to his motives in doing acts testified to by him. Patterson v. State [Ala.] 47 S 52.

17. On insanity. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540. Hypothetical question proper in view of examination of expert by defendant. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 299.

18. Proper to exclude hypothetical question based on facts not yet shown, no offer being made to prove such facts being made as condition of receiving the expert opinion. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540. Hypothetical question reciting practically all the evidence on the issue, proper. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Hypothetical question assuming facts proved, and answer that instrument looked like one of two named instruments, proper. People v. Weick, 123 App. Div. 328, 107 NYS 968.

19. Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850. Hypothetical questions based on evidence not objectionable because not covering all the evidence. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 111, 111 SW 24.

20. Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850.

21, 22. State v. Blackburn, 136 Iowa, 743, 114 NW 531.

23. Express agent's testimony from his own knowledge and recollection of the facts not objectionable as secondary. He did not testify from his books. Cox v. State, 3 Ga. App. 609, 60 SE 283. Proof of incorporation may be by parol where embezzlement from corporation is charged. Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714. Proof of existence of liquor license may be by parol. Oldham v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 516, 108 SW 667. Proof of issuance of liquor license by exemplified copy of federal records proper. King v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 101, 109 SW 182. Fact of possession of federal license by accused may be proved by parol, since its contents are not in issue and it cannot be removed from accused's place of business without violating federal statute. Joliff v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 61, 109 SW 176. What occurred at preliminary inquest could be proved by oral testimony of coroner and others present. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573.

24. Secondary evidence of contents of letter inadmissible, no foundation being laid therefor. State v. Denny [N. D.] 117 NW 869. Letter and envelope best evidence of source and contents of letter, postmark, etc. Bell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 242. Where writing is accessible, contents cannot be proved by parol. Starling v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 993. Testimony of physician that he has a diploma licensing him to practice medicine is not best evidence. McAllister v. State [Ala.] 47 S 161.

25. Corporate capacity being material issue, proof thereof by parol was error. Records should be produced. State v. Merchant, 48 Wash. 69, 92 P 890. Best evidence of existence of corporation is charter or certificate of incorporation, but it may be proved by general reputation as secondary evidence. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 286. Previous conviction should be proved by record, not by parol. Miller v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 518.

26. Oral proof of written order for whisky not incompetent, written order being merely collateral to main issue. Wilson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1018.

27. Contents of lost telegram provable by parol. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188. Secondary evidence of statement of financial condition admissible, original having been lost. People v. Schlessel, 112 NYS 45. Contents of lost writing may be proved by copy in brief of evidence on former appeal, approved by the judge. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501. Loss or absence of inquest papers sufficiently shown. Parol proof of witness' testimony at where the writing is in the possession of the other party [29] who has failed to produce it after notice to do so.[30] Where there is evidence showing that certain documents material to the issues are in defendant's possession the state may prove the contents orally without giving defendant notice to produce them,[31] since defendant could not be compelled to furnish evidence against himself.[32] There are no degrees of secondary evidence.[33]

Documentary evidence.[See 10 C. L. 726]—Private writings, the contents of which are relevant, are admissible [34] when properly authenticated [35] and connected with accused.[36] Summaries or abstracts of book accounts are competent where the accounts are complicated and voluminous.[37] Entries contained in the books of account of a bank may be competent without the production of the persons who actually made the entries when the production of such persons is practically impossible.[38] Properly certified copies of records are competent.[39] A mere certificate that a record does not show certain facts is incompetent.[40] The state cannot be compelled to produce a written unsigned statement by a witness which would not be competent as evidence.[41]

Depositions[42]—In Idaho, where it appears that the presence of the witness can-inquest competent. Summerlin v. State, 130 Ga. 791, 61 SE 849.

28. Part of written statement of testimony on preliminary hearing having been lost, but no due diligence to find it being shown, secondary evidence was inadmissible. Dowd v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 563, 108 SW 389. Written confession having been lost and unsuccessful search made, oral proof of contents was admissible. Pierce v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 148. Must appear that every reasonable effort had been made to produce original, without avail. Sims v. State [Ala.] 46 S 493. Error to receive oral evidence of contents of receipt, no proof of search in place where it was likely to be being made. Id.

29. Copy of letter properly received where defendant appeared to have original in his possession. State v. Phillips [Minn.] 117 NW 508. Secondary proof of license competent where it appeared that defendant had original and it did not appear that he had not been given notice to produce it. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

30. Secondary evidence of license competent where defendant failed to produce original after notice to do so. State v. Walker, 129 Mo. App. 371, 108 SW 615. A demand by state's attorney of defendant to produce a certain paper is proper, where made for the purpose of removing an objection interposed by such defendant that such paper was best evidence of matter under inquiry by state's attorney. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109.

31. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 SE 544.

32. Notice would be ineffective and would violate his constitutional rights. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 SE 544.

33. Parol proof of dying declaration competent, though a copy was unaccounted for and original was in writing. State v. Barnes [N. J. Law] 68 A 145.

34. Letters whose subject-matter tended to show the relations between the parties and a possible motive for the crime. Gent v. People, 133 Ill. App. 159. Letter not inadmissible because of memoranda thereon where memoranda are not offered and are not to be read to jury. State v. Hoffman, 120 La. 949, 45 S 951.

35. Certificate of assayer inadmissible, he not being produced and authenticity or correctness of writing not being shown. People v. Whalen [Cal.] 98 P 194. Slips taken from books of express agent incompetent to show receipt of liquor by accused without other proof to show competency. Gorman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 406, 106 SW 384.

36. Unclaimed and returned letter inadmissible against addressee, defendant. People v. Frankenberg, 236 Ill. 408, 86 NE 128. Admission in evidence of letters claimed to have been written by accused, error when no proof of his handwriting was made, and only proof of his authorship was slight internal evidence in letter and place where found. Ashlock v. Com. [Va.] 61 SE 752. That defendant denied knowledge of contents of telegram held not ground for excluding it. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188.

37. Summary of account books held admissible. People v. Miles, 108 NYS 510. Where books and documents are multifarious and voluminous, abstracts and schedules which have been prepared therefrom by an expert accountant may be admitted in evidence, but in such case the books and documents must either be first offered in evidence or be in the custody of the court so that the party against whom such abstracts and schedules are offered may have an opportunity from their examination to verify their correctness. Ford v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 324.

38. Cooke v. People, 134 Ill. App. 41.

39. Copy of decree of divorce and docket entries properly certified by clerk of court rendering decree competent. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059.

40. Certificate of keeper of vital statistics of city of another state, that a certain marriage was not shown by his records, that certain minister's name did not appear therein, etc., inadmissible. Not a copy of any record. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059.

41. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032.

42. See, also, topic Depositions, 11 C. L. 1069.

not be secured owing to his death, infirmity, sickness, or insanity, or because he is absent from the state, and that due diligence has been used to secure his attendance, his deposition may be read if all the statutory requirments have been observed in the taking of it.[43] These facts must all appear at time deposition is offered.[44]

Demonstrative evidence and experiments.[See 10 C. L. 127]—Objects and articles are admissible in evidence,[45] when relevant and material to the issues.[46] Photographs,[47] diagrams,[48] and models,[49] illustrative of the testimony, and throwing light on the facts in issue, are admissible. Where articles are offered in evidence which are pertinent to the issue, the court will not exclude them on account of the manner in which they were obtained.[50] Where the appearance of a person is in issue, it is proper to make profert of the person.[51] Whether experiments in the presence of the jury shall be permitted rests in the trial court's discretion.[52] Proof of experiments made out of court is admissible when conditions surrounding them are shown similar to those

43. The necessary steps are: (1) That deposition was taken before the magistrate who conducted the preliminary examination, or the judge of the court to which such party had been held for trial; (2) that it was shown to such magistrate or judge upon oath that there was reason to believe that witness whose deposition was sought would not appear and testify unless security was given; (3) that the magistrate or judge made an order requiring witness to enter into a written undertaking, with sureties, under provisions of Rev. St. 1897, § 7585. State v. Zarlenga, 14 Idaho, 305, 94 P 55. When all the preliminary steps have been taken and witness is shown under oath to be unable to procure sureties, he may be forthwith conditionally examined on behalf of the people under Rev. St. 1887, § 7588; but it should further be shown (1) that defendant had been advised of his right to counsel and to be represented by such, and that defendant was present in person and by counsel if he desired it, or had notice of such examination if on bail; (2) that deposition was taken and examination conducted in the same manner as the examination before a committing magistrate, and certified as required by Rev. St. 1887, § 7576. Id.

44. Proper to exclude deposition where facts were not shown. State v. Zarlenga, 14 Idaho, 305, 94 P 55.

45. Prosecution under liquor law. Not error to allow exhibition of bottle. Phillips v. State [Ala.] 47 S 245. Vessels officially tested and stamped, and used by witnesses in measuring liquor sold by defendant, competent evidence. People v. Nylin, 236 Ill. 19, 86 NE 156. On trial of indictment for receiving pigs of tin stolen from certain piles, it was proper to receive in evidence other pigs from the same piles to show identity of those in question. Ahearn v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 606. Articles of wearing apparel shown to have been property of defendant properly admitted in evidence. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Coat and handkerchief referred to in confession, and found by officer just where accused said they would be, admissible. State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717; State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719. Broken gun, used in striking deceased, admissible. Tolliver v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 329, 111 SW 655.

Garments worn by deceased admissible, their present condition being properly explained. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871. Clothing of deceased showing where he was stabbed. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. Portion of blanket wrapped around dead body of babe, similar to another portion in accused's possession. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Proper to receive decedent's shirt and allow witness to put it on. Dobbs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 923.

Portion of skull, showing fracture, and pick with which blow was struck, admissible in homicide case. State v. Lewis [Iowa] 116 NW 606. Nothing improper shown in connection with custody or handling of viscera of deceased, examination and condition and contents of which were testified to by expert. State v. Daly, 210 Mo. 664, 109 SW 53.

46. Deceased's hat inadmissible, not being shown material on any issue in homicide case. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

47. Photographs of scene of homicide, shown to represent place correctly, held competent. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. Photograph of accused, referred to in conversation with him, which was proved, competent on question of identity. Not error to admit it, though accused's criminal history was on the back (it being from Rogues' Gallery), no objection being made on that ground and it not appearing that jury saw endorsement. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188.

48. Diagram of cattle brand, and hide of steer, admissible, charge being larceny of steer. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325.

49. Model knife properly allowed in evidence to assist jury in understanding testimony. People v. Del Vermo [N. Y.] 85 NE 690. Not error to receive model of porch of house without showing vines, a tree, a fence, etc., where purpose was only to show distances on porch, and photographs and other evidence showed other objects. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407.

50. Younger v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 170.

51. Not error to allow state to make profert of woman to enable jury to decide whether she was white woman. Jones v. State [Ala.] 47 S 100.

52. Proper to refuse to allow experiments in presence of jury to show what mark a spur strap on a shoe would make in sand. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 154.

in issue.[53] The purpose of a view is not to supply evidence but to enable jury to understand it.[54] Granting or refusing it in a particular case is a matter resting in the trial court's discretion.[55]

Evidence at preliminary examination and at former trial. See 10 C. L. 128—Where it is shown that the witness is dead or beyond the jurisdiction, or otherwise inaccessible,[56] his testimony at the preliminary hearing, coroner's inquest, or former trial, is admissible,[57] and may be proved by the testimony of persons who heard it,[58] or by properly authenticated report or record.[59] But to render competent testimony at a preliminary hearing or inquest, it should appear that accused was present and had opportunity to confront and cross-examine the witness.[60] Testimony of the defendant himself, voluntarily given in a former trial, or hearing, and properly preserved and authenticated, may be introduced at subsequent trial,[61] accused having thus waived his privilege.[62] Testimony at a preliminary hearing on one charge is not competent on the trial of a different charge.[63] The offer of the record in another case is not an offer of the evidence taken therein.[64] The offer should specifically refer to the evidence desired to be introduced.[65] Acquittal of one offense does not exclude evidence used in that trial from being used in the trial for the second offense.[66]

53. Proof of experiments inadmissible, unless conditions shown same. Richards v. Com., 107 Va. 881, 59 SE 1104. Experiments to show distance at which shots passing through cloth were fired, admissible, but not to show distance at which shot which struck deceased's head, conditions not being shown same. People v. Fiori, 123 App. Div. 174, 108 NYS 416. In homicide case, experiments made by shooting off revolver at various distances to show effect on cloth, powder marks, etc., could be proved, circumstances being shown similar. Pollock v. State, 136 Wis. 136, 116 NW 851.

54. Hanley v. Com. [Va.] 63 SE 10.

55. No error in refusing to allow view of premises, where diagram was in evidence. Stanley v. Com. [Va.] 63 SE 10.

56. Witnesses shown to be beyond jurisdiction, so as to make competent their testimony on the preliminary hearing. Somers v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 533. Former testimony of witness should not be received unless it appears that witness cannot, with reasonable diligence, be produced. State v. McClellan [Kan.] 98 P 209. Mere production of subpoena, with return, without showing as to witness' whereabouts or search for him, is insufficient. Id. Testimony of witnesses on preliminary hearing inadmissible, the only showing as to their whereabouts being that sheriff had been unable to locate them in southern part of county and neighboring part of Florida. Bell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 242. Sheriff's statement in return on subpoena that witness was dead, and evidence of others that they had heard of his death, being hearsay, held insufficient to make competent witness' testimony at preliminary trial. Driggers v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 612.

57. Testimony of witness on former trial who had subsequently removed from the state. State v. Simmons [Kan.] 98 P 277. Testimony of witnesses on former trial admissible, witnesses being shown to be beyond jurisdiction. Burrow v. Hot Springs, 85 Ark. 396, 108 SW 823. Testimony of witness on former trial, when defendant had opportunity to cross-examine, admissible on subsequent trial after witness' death, after proper predicate. Pratt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 281, 108 SW 138. If such testimony is competent, it is immaterial how or by which side it was introduced on former trial. Id.

58. Court reporter, who took stenographic notes at former trial, properly allowed to state testimony of accused on such trial. Cornelius v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1050.

59. Testimony of witness at preliminary hearing held to be properly authenticated, proved by transcript. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247. Testimony of witness, since deceased, given at preliminary hearing is inadmissible, unless it is authenticated by some person who heard it or by certificate of officer who took it. Written statement not so authenticated. Dowd v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 563, 108 SW 389.

60. Testimony reduced to writing at inquest, defendant and counsel being present, admissible on trial, witnesses being out of jurisdiction. Hobbs v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 71, 112 SW 308. Admission of testimony at preliminary hearing does not violate right to be confronted by witnesses. Somers v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 533. Testimony by witnesses at preliminary hearing, at which accused confronted the witnesses and had opportunity to cross-examine them, is admissible at the trial, if witness is dead or beyond the jurisdiction. Nixon v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 325, 109 SW 931. Testimony at combined inquest and preliminary inadmissible, where it did not appear that accused was present, he having waived examination, and it did not appear that witness was dead or beyond the jurisdiction. Id.

61. State v. Simmons [Kan.] 98 P 277.

62. State v. Simmons [Kan.] 98 P 277. Defendant's testimony at coroner's inquest admissible, where it appeared to be voluntarily given and he appeared to understand his rights by refusing to answer certain questions. Anderson v. State, 133 Wis. 601, 114 NW 112.

63. Different thefts. Somers v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 533.

64. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540.

65. Evidence in preliminary hearing in a

Quantity required and probative effect. See 10 C. L. 130—The credibility of witnesses and the weight of testimony, including that of experts and of the accused are for the jury, who may apply the usual tests of credibility.[67] Ordinarily, positive testimony is to be given greater weight than negative,[68] but the rule is not absolute,[69] since the opportunity of the respective witnesses for observation should be considered.[70] The rule does not apply when one of two persons having equal facilities for seeing or hearing a thing swears that it occurred and the other that it did not occur.[71] In such case the testimony of neither is negative.[72] Every essential element of the crime must be proved [73] beyond a reasonable doubt,[74] but need not be proved by direct or positive testimony; circumstantial evidence may different case, not used on the trial of that case, inadmissible under offer of record in that case. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540.

66. Acquittal from robbery does not exclude admission of the same evidence to show burglary with intent to murder. Nagel v. People, 229 Ill. 598, 82 NE 315.

67. There is no presumption that a witness tells the truth. Error to so instruct. State v. Halvorson, 103 Minn. 265, 114 NW 957.

Expert opinion on insanity not conclusive but should be considered. United States v. Chrisholm, 149 F 284. Opinions on value are not to be accepted by jury as conclusive. Schwartz v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 449, 111 SW 399.

Nonexpert opinions on insanity are entitled to little weight when unaccompanied by proof of acts tending to show insanity. Smith v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 998, 112 SW 615.

Interest of defendant may be considered in weighing his testimony. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682; State v. Shaffner [Del.] 69 A 1004. Court may properly so charge. Commonwealth v. McKwayne [Pa.] 70 A 809. What defendant has said against himself presumed to be true, but jury not bound to believe statements in his own favor. State v. Clow [Mo. App.] 110 SW 632.

68. Hunter v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 466.

69. Jury not absolutely bound to accept positive in preference to negative testimony. Hunter v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 466.

70. Positive testimony is not in all cases to be believed in preference to negative. Comparative weight depends upon opportunities of witnesses and their credibility. Peak v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 665.

71. Benton v. State, 3 Ga. App. 453, 60 SE 116.

72. Within rule of Civ. Code 1895, § 5165. Hunter v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 466. Instruction on "negative" and "positive" evidence erroneous, under above rule. Daniel v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 539.

73. Prosecution must establish every essential element of crime charged. City of Kinsley v. Dyerly [Kan.] 98 P 228. Proof insufficient where one essential element of crime was based upon a mere inference. State v. James [Mo. App.] 113 SW 232. Instruction erroneous because not requiring finding of essential elements of crime. People v. Lemen, 231 Ill. 193, 83 NE 147.

Venue should never be left in doubt when it can readily be proved. Walker v. State [Ala.] 45 S 640. Lack of proof of venue fatal. Wall v. State [Ga. App.] 63 SE 27. The state must show commission of the offense within the period of limitation. Judgment of conviction reversed where evidence showed prosecution was barred. Hatton v. State [Miss.] 46 S 708. No presumption can be indulged that limitation statute was avoided by certain former proceeding. Id. Judgment reversed where evidence left in doubt question whether crime was committed prior to filing of information. Pruitt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 316, 109 SW 171. When an act becomes criminal only by reason of the existence of a specific intent, the intent must be proved; proof of the doing of the act is not enough. People v. Hegeman, 57 Misc. 295, 107 NYS 261.

74. Guilt must be shown beyond a reasonable doubt. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 47 S 485. Jury should acquit if they have reasonable doubt on whole case. Mann v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 269, 110 SW 243. Mere grounds of suspicion does not warrant conviction; there must be substantial proof. Jones v. State, 85 Ark. 360, 108 SW 222. Guilt must be proved beyond reasonable doubt; verdict founded only on suspicion or conjecture set aside. State v. Wilson, 130 Mo. App. 151, 108 SW 1086. "Reasonable doubt" discussed. Abbott v. Ter. [Okl.] 94 P 179. The reasonable doubt which warrants an acquittal is one which arises from evidence or lack of evidence. People v. Zajicek, 233 Ill. 198, 84 NE 249. Beyond a reasonable doubt means to a moral certainty, not to an absolute certainty. People v. Bonifacio, 190 N. Y. 150, 82 NE 1098. Reasonable doubt is not a vague, fanciful or merely possible doubt, but such a substantial doubt as intelligent, reasonable and impartial jurors may honestly and justly entertain after a careful examination and conscientious consideration of all the evidence. State v. Mills [Del.] 69 A 841; State v. Underhill [Del.] 69 A 880.

Venue of offense must be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 NW 150. And it must affirmatively appear that place of crime was within jurisdiction of court. Green v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 234.

Contra: Venue need not be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Wylie v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 182, 109 SW 186.

Evidence sufficient to show venue in prosecution of barber for violating Sunday law. State v. Schatt, 128 Mo. App. 622, 107 SW 10. Venue of stealing from railway car not sufficiently proved. Howard v. State, 3 Ga. App. 659, 60 SE 328. Proof that alleged offense was committed in a designated town or city is not sufficient to establish fact of venue and jurisdiction of a court whose jurisdiction is coextensive with the county. Stringfield v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 569.

be sufficient[75] and will alone support a conviction when it is such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence, being at the same time consistent with the theory of guilt.[76] In passing on the weight of circumstantial evidence, the circumstances need not be segregated, nor it is necessary that each subordinate fact should be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.[77] A motive need not in all cases be proved.[78] While it is the duty of the state's counsel to present all the testimony on the material facts, whether adverse to the defendant or favorable to him,[79] he need not call every available eye witness,[80] particularly where he is led to believe that a witness is unreliable.[81] In such case it is sufficient if he notifies accused that such witness will not be called by the state.[82] The state is not bound by every statement made by its witnesses.[83] Testimony of an accomplice[84] is not ordinarily sufficient to support

75. Identity of accused need not be shown by direct or positive testimony. Craig v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 397. The corpus delicti need not be proved by evidence independent of that which tends to connect accused with the commission of the offense. Existence of crime and guilt of defendant may be shown by same circumstantial evidence. George v. U. S. [Okl.] 97 P 1052. Intent is rarely susceptible of direct proof but must be inferred from facts and circumstances shown. Pumphrey v. State [Ala.] 47 S 156. The corpus delicti may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Larceny. Perry v. State [Ala.] 46 S 470. Venue may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Harrison v. Anniston [Ala.] 46 S 980. Venue need not be proved by positive testimony; it may be inferred from proof of other facts. Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P 556. Venue need not be proved by direct testimony to commission of the crime at the designated place; it is enough if the evidence incidentally shows that the venue was properly laid. State v. Gilluly [Wash.] 96 P 512. Where crime was proved to have been committed in Berrien County, presumption arose that county referred to was in Georgia, and express proof that commission was in Georgia was unnecessary. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

76. The evidence must exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence and be consistent only with theory of guilt. Burton v. Com. [Va.] 62 SE 376. Facts proved must be inconsistent with innocence of accused. Woodson v. Com., 107 Va. 895, 59 SE 1097. Evidence held insufficient to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of defendant's guilt, and judgment reversed. Case was based on proof of tracks made by burglar and similarity of those made by accused's shoes. Warren v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 218, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 355, 106 SW 132. Evidence, wholly circumstantial, held insufficient where it was consistent with innocence and did not exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt. Jamison v. State [Ga. App.] 63 SE 25. Conviction not sustained where evidence, wholly circumstantial, did not exclude every reasonable hypothesis of innocence. Long v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 711. Judgment on conviction reversed where evidence was circumstantial only and presented several reasonable theories other than that of defendant's guilt. Barker v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 133. Circumstantial evidence must exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt. Verdict based on suspicion only, though that was warranted, held not sufficiently supported. Thompson v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 571. Evidence insufficient (circumstantial) to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt (of larceny). Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 610, 107 SW 845. New trial should have been granted where circumstantial evidence was consistent with guilt of accused, but not inconsistent with theory of innocence, and insufficient to show criminal intent beyond reasonable doubt. Wilson v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1003.

77. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995.

78. Motive is merely matter of evidence; proof of guilt may be made without it. State v. Hoel [Kan.] 94 P 267. Proof of motive is not indispensable in homicide case. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871. Instruction leading jury to believe that motive must be proved by actual, direct proof properly refused. Ward v. State [Ala.] 45 S 221.

79. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275.

80. Need not call every eye witness to crime. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275. State cannot be forced to place certain witnesses, such as eye witnesses, on the stand. Lard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 762. The state need not put on the stand all the witnesses who know anything about the case. Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr App.] 112 SW 938. Not error to deny motion to require name of eye witness to be endorsed on information (made during trial) where prosecuting attorney said he knew nothing about the witness nor his whereabouts. People v. Hoffman [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 646, 117 NW 568. Failure to endorse name of prosecuting witness on information and to call him as witness properly explained by statement of prosecuting attorney that witness had disappeared and could not be found. People v. Boyd, 151 Mich. 577, 15 Det. Leg. N. 36, 115 NW 687. Conviction of violation of Pen. Code, § 675, by annoying, interfering with, jostling, etc., a street car passenger, sustained, though passenger was not a witness. People v. Goldberg, 109 NYS 906.

81, 82. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275.

83. Jury may consider all the circumstances. Oldham v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 516, 108 SW 667.

84. See, also, Criminal Law, 11 C. L. 940. Testimony of one who is principal because of nature of offense, misdemeanor, is within rule. People v. Acritelli, 110 NYS 430. Witness held an accomplice in burglary; her evidence insufficient without corroboration; conviction unless corroborated,[85] though in same jurisdictions uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is sufficient [86] in certain cases.[87] Evidence in corroboration of an accomplice is sufficient if, independently of the testimony of the accomplice, it tends in some degree to establish the guilt of the accused,[88] it need not be of sufficient weight, standing alone, to make out a prima facie case.[89] The testimony of one accomplice cannot be considered as corroborating that of another witness who is also an accomplice,[90] nor can an accomplice be corroborated by proof of statements made by him in absence of accused.[91] Testimony of accused himself has been held sufficient corroboration.[92] An extra-judicial confession will not alone sustain a conviction;[93] it must be corroborated [94] by other proof tending to show commission of reversible error to instruct to the contrary. People v. Holden, 111 NYS 1019. Boys who stole wire held not accomplices of one charged with crime of knowingly receiving the stolen property; their testimony not that of accomplices. State v. Gordon [Minn.] 117 NW 483. Where there was some evidence that a witness was an accomplice, but he denied having anything to do with the crime, it was proper to instruct jury that if they believed him his testimony would be sufficient to corroborate other witnesses who were accomplices and to sustain conviction. People v. Russo, 111 NYS 190. Proper for postal agents to enter into correspondence with persons suspected of violating postal laws and induce such persons to mail improper matter, and such agents do not become accomplices so as to require corroboration of their testimony. Shepard v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 584.

Detective's testimony need not be corroborated though that of an accomplice must be. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386. Whether a witness is an accomplice requiring corroboration is question for the jury. Proper to refuse requested instruction that witness was an accomplice. Driggers v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 612.

85. Conviction cannot be had upon testimony of accomplices unless corroborated. Rev. Laws 1905, § 4744. State v. Gordon, [Minn.] 117 NW 483. Conviction of offense of aiding, etc., an illegal registration (for voting) cannot be had upon testimony of accomplice alone. People v. Acritelli, 110 NYS 430.

86. Jury may convict on uncorroborated evidence of accomplice if they believe such evidence to be true and worthy of belief. People v. Frankenberg, 236 Ill. 408, 86 NE 128. A conviction may be had and sustained in a criminal case upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Corroboration of the testimony of a codefendant or accomplice is desirable but not always indispensable. State v. Firmatura, 121 La. 676, 46 S 691. Corroboration of an accomplice is not necessary in the federal court; the weight of such testimony is for the jury. Ahearn v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 606.

87. In misdemeanor cases law does not require corroboration of accomplice. Pen. Code 1895, § 991. Gamble v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 544. Testimony of accomplices sufficient; indictment of accused as accessory before fact of arson. Larimore v. State, 84 Ark. 606, 107 SW 166.

88. State v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363. Corroborative evidence is sufficient if it tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime, and comes from an independent source and goes to some material facts tending to show commission of the offense and that defendant was implicated, but it must amount to more than suspicious circumstances. People v. Acritelli, 110 NYS 430. Evidence to corroborate accomplices is sufficient if it tends to connect accused, with the crime; it is insufficient if it does not connect him with it. Celender v. State [Ark.] 109 SW 1024.

Corroboration of accomplice sufficient in burglary case. Criner v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 174, 109 SW 128. Testimony of accomplice sufficiently corroborated in robbery case. People v. Ortega [Cal. App.] 94 P 869.

Evidence insufficient to corroborate testimony of accomplice in burglary to show participation of defendant. Denney v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 404. Corroboration of accomplices insufficient to connect accused with burglary. Franklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 388, 110 SW 64. Testimony of accomplices not sufficiently corroborated in arson case. People v. O'Brien, 109 NYS 267. Witness held an accomplice in theft, and judgment reversed for want of corroboration. Shilling v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 326, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 551, 106 SW 357. Where accomplices to charge of bribing witness to stay away from trial of gambling case were not corroborated except by proof of flight of the witness bribed, the corroborating evidence was insufficient. Birch v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 350, 106 SW 344.

In a prosecution of an accomplice, corroborative evidence must show not only commission of the offense but that accused was connected therewith as an accomplice. Testimony of alleged burglar that accused advised the crime, and proof of the burglary, held insufficient. Hall v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 250, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 590, 106 SW 379.

89. Stato v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363.

90. Franklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 547, 110 SW 909.

91. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386.

92. Testimony of accused himself to his connection with the crime is sufficient corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice under Code Cr. Proc. § 399. People v. Eaton, 122 App. Div. 706, 107 NYS 849.

93. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 136; Sowers v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 148. Confession alone not sufficient, when denied the crime.[95] Corroboration by circumstantial evidence is competent.[96] A confession is not conclusive; accused may disprove statements in it and jury may give it such weight as it is entitled to under all the evidence.[97] A judicial confession may alone sustain conviction,[98] and a confession in open court before a magistrate, in a preliminary hearing is held, a judicial confession.[99] Statutes in some states require corroboration of the prosecuting witness,[1] or testimony of more than a single witness in particular crimes,[2] or testimony equivalent to that of at least two winesses.[3] Evidence inherently incompetent cannot be considered though admitted without objection.[4] Evidence of good character or reputation is substantive evidence and may have the effect of creating a reasonable doubt and thereby produce an acquittal; the weight to be given it is for the jury.[5]

§ 10. Trial.[See 10 C. L. 132]—The right to trial by jury and matters connected with the selection of the jury are elsewhere discussed.[6]

(§ 10) A. Conduct of trial in general.[See 10 C. L. 132]—This is a matter which must of necessity be left largely to the discretion of the trial court.[7] Accused is of course entitled to a fair [8] and public [9] trial. While the judge, in the exercise of a

by defendant. Layton v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 513, 107 SW 819.

94. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 1135. To corroborate means not merely to tend to produce confidence in the truth of the confession but to refer to the facts which constitute the corpus delicti. People v. Ranney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 442, 116 NW 999.

95. There must be evidence to show commission of crime outside confession or statements of accused. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871. Confession, not in open court, insufficient without other proof of commission of offense. Moseby v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 850. Confession, without proof aliunde of corpus delicti, is not sufficient to convict. Boyd v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 801. Confession of having made whisky held not corroborated. Allen v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 840. A confession may be considered in determining whether defendant was connected with the crime charged, though not alone sufficient proof thereof. People v. Brasch [N. Y.] 85 NE 809. The corpus delicti may not be proved by the naked, extra-judicial confession of accused. Corpus delicti held shown by corroborative evidence in prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses; check returned unpaid. People v. Ranney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 442, 116 NW 999.

96. Defendant's confession held sufficiently corroborated as to his connection with death of his wife by circumstantial evidence. People v. Brasch [N. Y.] 85 NE 809.

3. Gen. St. 1902, § 1508, that "no person shall be convicted of any crime punishable by death without the testimony of at least two witnesses or that which is equivalent thereto," does not require two witnesses to the homicidal or other act or particular fact; statute is complied with where testimony is equivalent to that of two witnesses or where two or more witnesses testify, though to different facts or circumstances. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62.

4. State v. Daniels [S. C.] 61 SE 1073. Oral testimony as to prior indictment of accused having gone in without objection could be considered by jury. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059.

5. Distinct issue is not raised by evidence of good reputation but it is to be taken into consideration with all other evidence against accused. When jury is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt, it is their duty to convict, but conclusion should be reached only after having given due regard to evidence of good reputation along with other testimony in case. Commonwealth v. Howe, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 554.

6. See Jury, 10 C. L. 541.

7. Not error to take recess at 4 P. M. until regular time of convening next morning to allow state to produce another witness. Adams v. State [Fla.] 46 S 152.

8. A witness for accused was arrested during trial for offense for which grand jury had twice refused to indict him, and for which a justice had released him for want of evidence. Court granted him immunity during trial if he would tell the truth, but he was kept practically under arrest during trial. Held accused was deprived of a fair trial. Dodson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 247, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 545, 106 SW 378. Audience broke into applause, lasting several minutes, when state's counsel made sharp retort to counsel for accused during altercation. Court sharply rebuked audience, imprisoned one man, and instructed jury in strong terms on duty to disregard matter. Held no reversible error. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867.

NOTE. Protection of deaf defendant in criminal prosecution: It is held in Raiph v. State, 124 Ga. 81, 52 SE 298, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 509, that a deaf prisoner is entitled to be informed of the proceedings and testimony against him but cannot require the court to employ an expert stenographer or typewriter for that purpose and should, in view of his known infirmity, make provisions for his own assistance. In this case it was held that for the court to allow counsel for the accused to write out and exhibit the testimony to the prisoner was not an abuse of discretion. The sound discretion, may, without violating this right, exclude from the court room during the trial, for any sufficient special reason,[10] such portion of the spectators as fall within the class to which the special reason applies,[11] Yet an order over defendant's objection to clear the room of all persons except those connected with the case is too sweeping and is error [12] from which prejudice to accused is conclusively presumed.[13] Private counsel may be employed to assist in the prosecution.[14]

Order of proof See 10 C. L. 133 is discretionary, and the action of the court in admitting proof out of its usual and regular order,[15] or in permitting or refusing to permit the case to be reopened to admit further proof,[16] will not be interfered with on appeal unless an abuse of discretion resulting in prejudice appears.[17] All evi-proper course to be pursued for the protection of a deaf defendant in criminal trial has received little consideration in the reported cases. In Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 Law. Ed. 689, the court's failure to see that the testimony was read or repeated to the accused was held not to deprive the court of jurisdiction or the accused of due process of law. This case was brought up upon habeas corpus and the court expressly refrained from passing upon the question of whether such failure constituted error. Where a deaf mute charged with crime is found incapable of understanding the nature of the proceedings, although able to communicate and receive communications by signs as to elementary matters, the English practice has been to find the prisoner insane, quash the proceedings, and order his imprisonment during the pleasure of the crown, but in Reg. v. Whitfield, 3 Car. & K. 121, the jury found the prisoner to be sane, whereupon the trial proceeded to a conviction, although the evidence was not translated to him. In State v. Harris, 53 N. C. (8 Jones L.) 136, 78 Am. Dec. 272, the supreme court approves proceedings nisi prius similar to those in the English cases, i. e., submission to the jury of the question of sanity of a deaf mute prisoner and quashing the proceedings upon a finding of insanity by the jury. In a similar case (Chase v. State, 41 Tex. Cr. Rep. 560, 55 SW 833), upon the jury finding the deaf mute charged with murder to be insane, he was released on bail. It was held that the finding was not conclusive on the issue of insanity and did not prevent trial.—Adapted from 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 509.

9. Tilton v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 651. In general, all proceedings in a criminal case should be open and public. Accused entitled to copies of subpoenas for witnesses. Jackson v. Mobley [Ala.] 47 S 590. Judge refused to clear court room because of lack of power, but remarked that in his judgment there would be no evidence that any right minded person would care to hear, whereupon the entire audience left. Held accused was not denied right to public trial. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 97 P 912.

10. Such as character of evidence to be produced, indecent or lewd. Tilton v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 651.

11. Women and children may properly be excluded if matters to be investigated are indecent. Tilton v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 651.

12, 13. Tilton v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 651.

14. Private counsel may be employed and permitted to assist the attorney general or district attorney, and such officer, being present, may entrust to his associate the exclusive conduct of the case. State v. Petrich [La.] 47 S 438.

15. Proof of declarations of co-conspirators may be received before proof of conspiracy. People v. Simmons, 109 NYS 190; People v. Stone, 109 NYS 199; People v. Miles, 108 NYS 510; Proctor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 770. Where proof of conspiracy is afterwards made, such order is not prejudicial to accused. Cohen v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 651. Failure to prove corpus delicti (homicide) before receiving proof of admissions by accused not reversible error. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. Not improper to allow introduction of identification card, on promise of state's attorney to connect it with accused, this connection being afterwards made. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62. Receiving conversation prior to identifying party talking (over telephone) not error. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999. Irregularity in allowing proof of threats before proof or corpus delicti cured by subsequent introduction of such proof. Ridgell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 71. Proof tending to connect accused with killing may be received in advance of proof of death of deceased in the discretion of the court. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32.

16. Allowing state to reopen case and introduce additional evidence held not an abuse of discretion. Johnson v. State, 130 Ga. 27, 60 SE 160. Permitting state to reopen case after both sides had rested held within discretion of court. State v. Callahan [N. J. Law] 69 A 957. Refusal of request to reopen case for further testimony, after arguments had commenced, held not abuse of discretion. State v. Crayton [Iowa] 116 NW 597. Within discretion of court to require defendant to proceed with evidence, though state had one more witness who was absent, and to allow etate to put such witness on stand later. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273.

17. Refusal to allow newly-discovered evidence to be introduced at close of case error, where state's case was not clear and evidence was material. Etly v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 896. Error to refuse to allow defense to recall witness for state who had just stepped down, in order to allow foundation for impeachment to be laid. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 154. Evidence offered during argument, having been just discovered, tending to support accused's contention that confession was obtained by duress and dence tending to show guilt of defendant should be introduced in chief [18] and in rebuttal; evidence tending to meet defendant's case is proper,[19] but a departure from this rule may be permitted, in the discretion of the court.[20] A confession is not rebuttal,[21] and where it is admitted out of its regular order, the case is reopened and accused should be allowed to prove that he did not make a confession.[22] The court may, of its own motion, withdraw testimony when other testimony, proposed to show its competency, is not introduced.[23] In Texas, failure to read the indictment to the jury until the state's case is closed, in a felony case, is reversible error, though it would be competent to reintroduce the testimony after the reading of the indictment. It cannot be presumed that the testimony was introduced.[24] Accused may waive the reading of the indictment or the reintroduction of proof, but such waiver must be made to appear clearly.[25]

Conduct and remarks of judge. See 10 C. L. 135—The presiding judge must at all times during the trial be present and in control,[26] but the integrity of a trial is not destroyed by his changing his seat or by a temporary absence from the room if he remains within hearing and in control.[27] The judge should carefully avoid any intimation or expression of opinion on witnesses, testimony, counsel, the parties, or the cause, during the progress of the trial,[28] but error in this regard may be cured by proper instructions to the jury,[29] and will not result in reversal in the absence of a showing of prejudice.[30] Illustrative holdings are given in the note.[31] ill-treatment, should have been admitted. Garrett v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 255, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 552, 106 SW 389.

18. Error to withhold it and offer it in guise of rebuttal. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407.

19. Evidence to meet that first offered by defendant is proper. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. The state has the right to rebut testimony elicited on cross-examination of accused testifying in his own behalf. State v. Heidelberg, 120 La. 300, 45 S 256. Evidence properly offered in rebuttal is not inadmissible because it incidentally strengthens the case made by the state originally. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 46 S 260.

20. Admission of testimony in reply is largely discretionary. State v. Harmon, 79 S. C. 80, 60 SE 230; State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. Proper to allow in rebuttal evidence to meet testimony of accused, though some of it would have been proper in chief. Adams v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 779, 111 SW 348. Admission in chief of evidence properly receivable in rebuttal not error. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. It is within the sound legal discretion of the judge to allow prosecution to introduce evidence at the close of defendant's case which might have been more properly introduced as part of the case in chief, and such discretion will not be reviewed in the absence of gross abuse. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1.

21. Should be offered as part of case in chief. State v. Smith, 120 La. 530, 45 S 416.

22. Reversible error to refuse to allow accused to rebut proof of confession so received. State v. Smith, 120 La. 530, 45 S 416.

23. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 346, 93 P 478.

24. Record must show it. Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927.

25. No waiver shown. Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927.

26. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346.

27. Absence in adjoining room two minutes not error, it not appearing that he was out of hearing. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346.

28. Court should not directly or indirectly intimate any opinion on credibility of a witness. Slater v. U. S. [Okl.] 98 P 110. Utmost care should be used by trial judge to avoid any expression or intimation of opinion on the facts, or counsel, or defendant, in remarks, instructions or otherwise. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Remarks of court intimating that counsel was attempting to lead witness and was repeating his answers incorrectly held improper. People v. Firori, 123 App. Div. 174, 108 NYS 416. Remarks by the trial judge, in making rulings during the trial, in the hearing of the jury, have the same effect as instructions. If erroneous, same result follows. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

29. Remarks of judge upon offer of certain real evidence not erroneous in view of subsequent cautionary instructions. Pollock v. State, 136 Wis. 136, 116 NW 851. While case was being tried, jury in another case brought in verdict of "not guilty," and court remarked that verdict was a surprise, and solicitor said "render one more verdict and quit." Court instructed jury trying case to disregard these remarks. No error, cases not being connected in any way. Welch v. State [Ala.] 46 S 856. Remark of court addressed to counsel, upon sustaining objection to question that counsel ought to know question was improper, etc., not prejudicial, court having told jury to disregard it. Watson v. State [Ala.] 46 S 232. On motion to exclude testimony of a witness, court remarked, "he didn't really give any." Held, any error was cured by later telling the jury that the remark was not well expressed, and was not intended as express-

Consolidation.[See 10 C. L. 136]—Where a defendant is under two charges both must be tried at the same term, and sentence imposed after conviction in both cases.[32] In Missouri one who has been tried, convicted and sentenced for a felony cannot be tried for another felony until he has served his time or the judgment has been set aside or reversed.[33]

Severance.[See 10 C. L. 136]—The right of persons jointly indicted to be separately tried is granted by statute in some states as to some offenses.[34] In other cases the granting or refusal of severance is discretionary.[35] There is usually no right to a joint trial.[36] One defendant may be tried where a codefendant has not been taken ing any opinion on the weight or credibility of the testimony. Pollock v. State, 136 Wis. 136, 116 NW 851.

30. Reversal will result for remarks of court only on showing of error and prejudice. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501. Remark of court intended to indicate to witness proper limits of testimony as to insanity held not prejudicial. State v. Malloy, 79 S. C. 76, 60 SE 228. Remarks of court during examination of witness held not prejudicial. Pollock v. State, 136 Wis. 136, 116 NW 851.

31. Held not reversible error: Mere passing remark of judge, in passing on motion for new trial, referring to accused's failure to testify. State v. Henderson [S. C.] 60 SE 314. Reason given by court for ruling on evidence. Burley v. State, 130 Ga. 343, 60 SE 1006. Remark of court, on objection to allowance of leading questions, that such questions were allowed as though witness was unfriendly. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 SE 544. Remark of court during examination of witness by state's attorney that "he has a right to get the truth." Ward v. State, 85 Ark. 179, 107 SW 677. Remark of court, in requiring defendant's counsel to make statement of defense to jury, that nature of the case was such that defendant ought to be required to make such statement, held not reversible error. State v. King [Wash.] 97 P 247. Improper for judge to give personal feelings or views, but remarks held not prejudicial error in view of conceded facts. State v. Reed [Or.] 97 P 627. Remark relating to admissibility of certain book entries, depending on their date, held not comment on evidence. State v. Hoffman, 120 La. 949, 45 S 951. Remark of judge indicating opinion on conduct of witness as being illegal, harmless, being on collateral issue. State v. Boyles [S. C.] 60 SE 233. Where court, after striking evidence which state's counsel insisted should be introduced, remarked that he wanted the case tried according to law so that it would not be reversed, this was not an opinion on the effect of evidence already introduced. Hood v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 524, 107 SW 848. That court, in making rulings as to testimony, frequently announced that burning of deceased's barn had nothing to do with case, and accusations of having burned it would not excuse killing a man, held not to amount to expression of opinion on the facts. State v. Gallman, 79 S. C. 229, 60 SE 682. Judge does not express opinion by giving answer of witness, and slight inaccuracy in answer as given by him is not ground for new trial. Herrington v. State, 130 Ga. 307, 60 SE 572. Court may confine counsel to material issues during argument, no prejudice to accused resulting from language or manner of judge in so doing. Wheeler v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 409. Remarks of court during trial held not to intimate any opinion on the evidence or the merits of the case. Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 SE 816. Reference by judge to certain evidence for jury in overruling motion for directed verdict held not charge on facts, court having charged that jury were not to take the facts from him, etc. State v. Arnold [S. C.] 61 SE 891. Remark of court in admitting evidence, "I will admit it and let the jury pass on it for what it is worth," held not error as intimating an opinion. Young v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 707. Statement by court as to purpose for which evidence could be considered held not misleading. Sweat v. State [Ala.] 45 S 588.

Questioning witnesses: That judge asked questions of witnesses held not prejudicial. O'Connell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1007. Usually improper for court to ask many questions of witnesses, but error not shown prejudicial. Ray v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 816.

Reversible error for court, in overruling motion for directed verdict, in adultery case, to state to counsel in presence of jury, that he did not think defendant ought to get off merely because marriage was proved by repute, and not by documentary evidence. State v. Greene, 33 Utah, 497, 94 P 987.

32, 33. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 130, 111 SW 29.

34. In felony cases, any defendant has right to separate trial. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

35. In all except felony cases, matter is discretionary with court under B. & C. Comp. § 1395. Hence, denial of motion in misdemeanor case not error. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Decision of judge to try defendants, charged with disturbing public peace, jointly, held within his discretion and not reviewable. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 3100, 11956. People v. Burman [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 640, 117 NW 589. No abuse of discretion to overrule motion for severance and separate trial where ground of motion was confessed by other defendant which it was believed would be used in evidence, but which actually was not so used. Maxey v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 63.

36. One jointly indicted has no absolute right to be tried jointly with a codefendant, especially where the codefendant has not been taken into custody and made actual party, and he could have demanded separate trial. State v. Merchant, 48 Wash. 69, 92 P 890. Where the statute gives defendants jointly indicted the right to a severance, but not the right to a joint trial, joint into custody when the indictment is returned [87] or at time of trial.[88] Where several persons jointly indicted demand and are granted separate trials, the state may elect which one it will try first,[89] and if conviction of one is reversed may elect to try another before a second trial of the first.[40] Where two defendants, jointly indicted and tried, are represented by separate counsel, each is entitled to cross-examine witnesses for the state.[41]

Production, examination and supervision of witnesses.[42]—In such matters as the separation or exclusion of witnesses from the court room,[43] of cautioning witnesses excluded,[44] of allowing witnesses who have violated a rule of exclusion to testify,[45] and of limiting the number of witnesses to particular facts,[46] the trial court is vested with wide discretion, the exercise of which is reviewable only for an abuse resulting in prejudice. Courts have power to allow the use of interpreters when justice demands.[47] An inquiry as to the qualifications of an interpreter may be waived.[48] An objection to the testimony of a witness on the ground of his mental incompetency does not require the court to stop the trial at that point and immediately institute an inquisition as to the mental capacity of the witness.[49]

*Statement of accused under Georgia practice.*See 10 C. L. 140—In Georgia accused has the right to make a statement to the court and jury not under oath.[50] The contents of the statement are not to be restricted or governed by the rules controlling the admissibility of evidence,[51] and the fact that statements made by accused are irrelevant is no ground for a ruling or interruption by the court excluding them,[52] trial may be denied, and the various parties may be tried severally, separately and successively, in the discretion of the court. Not error to refuse joint trial under Alabama statute. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682.

37. Only one being before court at term at which indictment was returned. Sizemore v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1154, 108 SW 254.

38. Especially where the codefendant could have demanded a separate trial under the statute. State v. Merchant, 48 Wash. 69, 92 P 890.

41. People v. Billis, 58 Misc. 150, 110 NYS 387.

42. See 10 C. L. 137; Examination of Witnesses, 11 C. L. 1420; Witnesses, 10 C. L. 2079 (for privileges of witnesses). As to rights of accused, see Constitutional Law, 11 C. L. 689; also, ante, § 9, Competency of Evidence as Affected by Rights of Accused.

43. Granting or refusing motion for separation or sequestration of witnesses is within sound discretion of trial judge. State v. Daniels [La.] 47 S 599. Excluding witnesses from court room rests in trial court's discretion. People v. Oliver [Cal. App.] 95 P 172. It is proper to allow some officer active in the prosecution to remain for the purpose of advising with the district attorney, though other witnesses for state are excluded. Id. In trial of charge of felony, the court should, upon request, exclude from the court room witnesses for the state who are not testifying. Maynard v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 53. But a denial of such request is not a ground of reversal in the absence of an abuse of discretion resulting in prejudice to accused. Id.

44. Matter of instructing witnesses excluded from court room not to talk with each other or other persons concerning the case is one resting in court's discretion. Refusal not prejudicial. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325.

45. Whether witness who violates rule of exclusion and hears other testimony should be allowed to testify rests in trial court's discretion. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 591. Not error to allow newspaper reporter to testify, though he had heard part of trial. other witnesses having been excluded, but this witness not having been sworn. State v. Benjamin [R. I.] 71 A 65. Witness who remains in or returns to court room in violation of order separating witnesses, and who thus hears testimony of other witnesses, is not rendered incompetent as witness. State v. Stewart, 63 W. Va. 597, 60 SE 591. Violation of a rule separating witnesses and excluding them from the court room does not render the witness incompetent. Price v. U. S. [Okl.] 97 P 1056. Such violation can only affect his credibility or subject him to punishment for contempt of court. Id. Witness held not disqualified by reason of fact that he remained in court room after witnesses had been sworn and put under the rule. Green v. State, 125 Ga. 742, 54 SE 724.

47. Nioum v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 62, 108 SW 945.

48. Where defendant introduced and used an interpreter, and state did not object, failure to examine as to his qualifications was not error. Nioum v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 62, 108 SW 945.

49. Williams v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 4.

50. Freeney v. State, 129 Ga. 759, 59 SE 788.

52. Richardson v. State, 3 Ga. App. 313, 59

though the court may properly prevent repetition or exclude facts wholly disconnected with any fact in issue or with the defense.[53] The right to make a statement is a personal right granted to defendant and extends no further than to permit him personally to make to the court and jury such statement as he deems proper.[54] His counsel has no right to ask him questions while he is making the statement,[55] though the trial judge may in his discretion permit counsel to make suggestions to defendant while he is making or when he has concluded it.[56] The statement cannot properly be made the means of introducing documentary evidence. Such evidence should be formally offered.[57] Defendant cannot be cross-examined on his statement without his consent.[58]

Accused should be present See 10 C. L. 140 throughout the trial, but this rule does not require his presence during the taking of preliminary steps before the trial[59] or formal proceedings after sentence.[60] The right of accused to be present may be waived, in some jurisdictions, where the trial is for a misdemeanor,[61] or error in proceeding in his absence may be cured,[62] and this rule is applied by some courts even in felony cases.[63] But if the right to be present is held to be absolute, it cannot be waived or cured.[64] Defendant may waive his right to be present with jury when

SE 916. Prejudicial error for court to interrupt accused while making statement and compel him to confine the statement to what took place on a certain day, when accused was stating reasons for his acts. Woodall v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 485.

53. Richardson v. State, 3 Ga. App. 313, 59 SE 916. Trial judge, in refusing to allow counsel to examine defendant or call his attention to "one other matter," did not err in saying in presence of jury, "I have allowed him to make a free and full statement," this remark not relating to weight or credit of statement. Bass v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 540.

54, 55, 56. Bass v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 540.

57. Freeney v. State, 129 Ga. 759, 59 SE 788.

58. Harper v. State, 129 Ga. 770, 59 SE 792.

59. Disqualification of presiding judge, calling of another, adjourning court on his failure to appear, application for continuance, and denial thereof, held not steps at trial at which defendant must be present. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35.

60. Accused need not be personally present, when bills of exceptions are presented and signed. Thurman v. Com., 107 Va. 912, 60 SE 99. The personal presence of defendant in proceedings connected with his case subsequent to his trial and sentence is not required where such proceeding relates merely to the correction of the record. Nagel v. People, 229 Ill. 598, 82 NE 315.

61. In South Carolina a defendant may be tried for a misdemeanor punishable only by imprisonment in his absence. State v. Rabens, 79 S. C. 542, 60 SE 442. The trial of a misdemeanor may proceed in the absence of accused if he is represented by an attorney. B. & C. Comp. § 1378. State v. Waymire [Or.] 97 P 46. Right of accused and his attorney to be present when the verdict is rendered may be waived. Right waived where accused and counsel left court room without leave and were not present. Id. In misdemeanor cases, defendant may, if duly summoned, or on bail, be tried in his absence, and any plea save that of guilty may be entered by counsel. Walston v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 535, 106 SW 224. Where defendant was at liberty on bail and left court room shortly after jurors went to view scene of crime, and court did not refuse to allow him to accompany them, his absence was construed as voluntary, and he could not complain. Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466. Right to be present when verdict is returned may be waived, and is waived where defendant is at liberty on bond and is voluntarily absent when verdict is received. State v. Way, 76 Kan. 928, 93 P 159.

62. No prejudicial error where testimony given during defendant's temporary absence was stricken when objection was made. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 591. Testimony taken in absence of accused not reversible error where court did not know of his absence and when he learned of it the testimony taken was withdrawn and juror told to disregard it, and same testimony was then taken in his presence. Cason v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 220, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 339, 106 SW 337. In local option case, defendant temporarily went to an adjoining room during argument of his attorney, and when court noticed his absence he stopped the argument and had defendant brought back. Code Cr. Proc. art. 633 not violated. Killman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 570, 112 SW 92.

63. The rule that right to be present when verdict is returned may be waived has been applied to trials of felonies by some courts. See authorities in State v. Waymire [Or.] 97 P 46. The right to be present at every step of the trial may be waived. State v. Thurston [Kan.] 94 P 1011. Where defendant in arson case, at liberty on bond, was voluntarily absent without having been excused by court when jury was brought in at its request after it had retired to consider the verdict, and the court permitted the stenographer to read part of the evidence which had been given in presence of accused, new trial not granted on account of absence of accused. Id.

64. The right to be present during the whole of the trial cannot be waived or they go to view premises.[65] In noncapital cases in Mississippi, accused, when out on bond, may waive the right to be present when the verdict is received, having been present throughout the trial.[66] But such waiver is strictly his personal right and cannot be exercised by his counsel.[67] In capital cases, whether defendant is in jail subject to the power of the court to produce him, or on bond, it is fatal error to receive the verdict in his absence, and in noncapital cases it is fatal error to receive the verdict in his absence where he is in jail.[69] In Kentucky, upon an indictment for a misdemeanor, defendant, if duly summoned, or on bail, may be tried in his absence, and may though absent, by counsel, put in any plea save that of guilty.[70] If no plea is entered, judgment may go against defendant by default and the court may impose a fine if fixed by law.[71] If the fine be not fixed by law, or if imprisonment may be part of the punishment, a jury must be called to assess the punishment,[72] but may be instructed by the court to find defendant guilty and assess the punishment.[73]

(§ 10) B. Argument and conduct of counsel.[See 10 C. L. 141]—It is improper for counsel to persist in attempting to get incompetent evidence before the jury,[74] or to introduce incompetent matters by indirect means,[75] but the offering of incompetent evidence, in good faith, is not error.[76]

Opening address.[See 10 C. L. 142]—While the opening statement should include only facts which are material and competent and proper to be proved[77] and which counsel expects to prove,[78] reasonable latitude should be allowed where the subject taken away by the court. State v. Stevenson [W. Va.] 62 SE 688. Where special judge heard case and received plea of guilty, and regular judge then appeared and examined witnesses and questioned special judge in absence of accused to inform himself of the facts, and then pronounced judgment, held reversible error. Id. It being necessary for court to inform himself of facts to ascertain degree of crime, this is a part of the trial, and accused is entitled to be present. Id. Rendition of verdict in felony case in absence of accused and his counsel, and dispersal of jury without giving accused right to poll the jury, under Code 1896, § 5308, held to amount to an acquittal. Judgment reversed and prisoner ordered discharged. Harris v. State [Ala.] 45 S 216. Fact that court called jurors forward after they had dispersed and asked them if verdict read to them was their verdict, to which "some of them" replied it was, did not cure the error. Id. In trial of misdemeanor where imprisonment is part of penalty, no part of trial can be had in defendant's absence, and error in receiving evidence in his absence cannot be cured by an offer to have it reintroduced. Washington v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 323, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 393, 106 SW 361.

65. Where jurors were sent to view scene of crime, in charge of sworn officer, and defendant was present in court room at time and could have accompanied them, but made no request, being at liberty on bail, there was no error. Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466.

70, 71, 72, 73. Walston v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 535, 106 SW 224.

74. Misconduct of counsel in repeating questions calling for incompetent matter, after objections thereto had been sustained, reversible error. Spencer v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 880, 107 SW 342. It is only where district attorney persists in asking improper questions or attempting indirectly to get improper matter before the jury that judgment will be reversed on account of improper conduct. No error where he voluntarily abandoned a line of questions, saying he would stop for fear of making an error. People v. Cowley [Cal. App.] 94 P 866.

75. Prejudicial error for counsel to state in presence of jury what witness would testify to, court having excluded the matter. Pridemore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 620, 111 SW 155. In rape case, prosecutrix married accused before trial. At end of trial, wife was in advanced stage of pregnancy. Held error for prosecution to call wife as witness and compel accused to object to her competency, where the jury could thus see her and she was in effect compelled to testify against her husband, though she gave no oral testimony. State v. Winnett, 48 Wash. 93, 92 P 904.

76. Asking, in good faith, of improper question not reversible error. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552. Not reversible to offer certain documentary and real evidence, in good faith, and have it marked for identification, though it was excluded. People v. Simmons, 109 NYS 190.

77. Numerous statements by prosecuting attorney held within the evidence, in larceny case, against "confidence men." People v. Simmons, 109 NYS 190; People v. Stone, 109 NYS 199.

78. Not error to refer to confession of accomplice, signed also by accused, which was proved by state. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863. Opening statement should be confined to statement of case and evidence expected to be produced. Proper for court is not so elementary that every lawyer should know it.[79] Discussion of the law or admonitions or instructions to the jury are improper.[80] The bill of particulars filed by the state may be read.[81] In Indiana, the defendant has the absolute right to present his defense in the order fixed by statute.[82] A request to be allowed to make the opening statement out of the statutory order is addressed to the court's discretion.[83] In Washington, the court may require the opening statement for accused to be made at the close of the state's case.[84] In Georgia, accused has the right to open and close only when no evidence has been offered in his behalf.[85] Where evidence has been introduced on behalf of accused, or heard and examined by the jury, counsel for accused cannot, as a matter of right, withdraw such evidence and thus gain the right to open and close.[86]

In summing up.[See 10 C. L. 142]—Counsel may refer to any matter proved,[87] draw legitimate inferences from the testimony,[88] discuss the character and credibility of witnesses,[89] illustrate his argument,[90] show the enormity of the crime,[91] call attention to the form of the instructions,[92] and within the limits of the record and well settled rules of procedure use in his argument any arts and devices,[93] and all the to so confine counsel. Maynard v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 53.

79. References to matter not admissible in evidence held not reversible error. People v. Simmons, 109 NYS 190; People v. Stone, 109 NYS 199.

80. Maynard v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 53.

81. Cooke v. People, 134 Ill. App. 41.

82. Statute provides for statement of defense after state's evidence in chief is in. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 349.

83. A request by defendant to vary the statutory order is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge, the exercise of which is reviewable only for abuse. Held not abuse of discretion to deny request of defendant to make statement to jury directly after statement of state's case by prosecuting attorney. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 349.

84. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St., § 4993, it is proper for court to require defendant to make a statement to the jury at the close of the state's case, though it is optional with defendant to make such statement before or at close of state's case. State v. King [Wash.] 97 P 247.

85. Proceedings at trial reviewed, and held that certain documentary evidence was offered and received in behalf of accused. Hence, counsel for accused did not have the right to open and close the argument. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

86. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

87. Evidence held to warrant argument of prosecuting attorney. Lacy v. State [Ala.] 45 S 680. Where testimony showed death of person robbed, proper for prosecuting attorney to allude to his death to account for his failure to testify. State v. Martin [Mo.] 113 SW 1089. Where it appeared, in robbery case, that defendant gave his grips to his attorney and that they were spirited away and could not be searched, comment of such facts was proper, though the attorney could not be made to testify. Tabor v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 387, 107 SW 1116.

88. Statement by district attorney as to what evidence showed held not improper. Gillotti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252. Argument of prosecuting attorney as to fair inferences from the evidence held not reversible error. People v. Kirk, 151 Mich. 253, 14 Det. Leg. N. 927, 114 NW 1023. State's attorney may comment on facts deduoible from evidence by direct proof or fair inference. People v. Hagenow, 236 Ill. 514, 86 NE 370. Proper to argue that certain competent evidence proved certain fact, though court charged it could be considered only as impeaching a witness. Chapman v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 567. Where evidence showed accused was living with woman to whom he was not married, it was not reversible error for prosecuting attorney to state that he was committing adultery, though there was no proof that either of them was married. People v. Ranney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 442, 116 NW 999.

89. Not error for counsel to eulogize state's witness. Parson v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 617. That counsel called witness "henchman" of defendant not reversible error. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 149, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 106 SW 144. Argument, tending to show that witnesses were influenced by reason of the fact that they belonged to the same order and church and race as defendant, held legitimate. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 45 S 260.

90. Discretion not abused in allowing prosecuting attorney to illustrate argument by use of deputy sheriff, placing him before jury, in certain position. State v. Simmons [Kan.] 98 P 277.

91. Kinslow v. State, 85 Ark. 514, 109 SW 524.

92. Argument of district attorney that instructions given were sometimes prepared by counsel, and contained hypothetical statements, and should be carefully considered, held not error. People v. Fossetti [Cal. App.] 95 P 384.

93. Argument that jury could not turn defendant loose and look him (county attorney) in the face and say he was not guilty, not reversible error. Wilson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 556, 110 SW 904. Not reversible error for county attorney to repeat witness' answer and to smile as he did so. Kennedy v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 88, 109 SW 313.

skill, power and learning at his command.[94] He should not refer to matters not in evidence,[95] especially where such matters are legally incompetent or have been expressly excluded,[96] deny the truth of a showing made for an absent witness, admitted to avoid a continuance,[97] assert his personal belief as to the merits,[98] discuss the question of punishment, where the jury does not fix it,[99] use abusive epithets,[1] seek to inflame the minds of the jurors [2] by appeals to prejudice [3] or by reference to mat-

94. Within the limit of the facts proved and fair inferences therefrom, counsel may employ all the skill, learning, power and force at his command in argument. Housman v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 311, 110 SW 236. Counsel may employ wit, satire, invective, and imaginative illustration in argument, but license is confined to facts in evidence. State v. Martel, 103 Me. 63, 68 A 464. Violation of this rule is ground for new trial by motion or for exception to the court's refusal to check counsel and caution jury. Id.

95. Comments of counsel should be confined to evidence. Lightfoot v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 345. Proper for court to stop argument not warranted by evidence. Pittman v. State [Ala.] 45 S 245. Argument not based on testimony should have been excluded. Hill v. State [Ala.] 46 S 864. Prosecuting attorney should not read to jury affidavit of prosecutrix on preliminary which has not been introduced in evidence. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706. Remark of county attorney interrupting argument of accused's counsel, and outside the evidence, held erroneous. Garrett v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 255, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 552, 106 SW 889. Argument as to "break in pretended alibi" improper, defendant not relying on that defense, and offering no proof thereof. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 154. Argument as to mistake made by jury in another case, improper, and court properly stopped it. Battles v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 202, 109 SW 195. Argument that defendant has been previously convicted for violating local option law, and had "bootlegged" whiskey over the country, prejudicial error, when there was no evidence to support it, and defendant's character was not in issue. Instruction to jury to disregard it held not to cure error. McKinley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 182, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 350, 106 SW 342.

96. Argument outside the record, to get in inadmissible evidence, held reversible error. Askew v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 287. Argument that defendant was charged with other acts but state could not show them, improper. Battles v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 202, 109 SW 195. Argument held not such allusion to former conviction of manslaughter as to constitue error. Burnett v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 515, 112 SW 74. Reference to another murder improper where there was no evidence of it, though jurors were questioned as to it on the voir dire. People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532, 93 P 99. In prosecution for carrying a pistol, it was reversible error for counsel to argue that pistol was carried for purpose of shooting another person. Hubbard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 399, 107 SW 351. Reference to feeling in community and to evidence which court excluded, unchecked by court, reversible error. Polson v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1398, 108 SW 844. Held prejudicial error for prosecuting attorney to refer to wholly different crime committed by other men, where the argument was persisted in after objection and court refused specific ruling at the time, though general instructions told jury to disregard such remarks. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Where prosecution was dismissed as to one of two defendants, jointly indicted, it is improper for counsel to comment on the failure of defendant to place the other on the stand as a witness. Harville v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 283.

97. Reversal error for state's attorney to argue that absent witness would not have testified as alleged in affidavit which commonwealth had admitted to be read to avoid a continuance. Howerton v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 606.

98. Better practice is not to state personal opinions on effect of evidence; but argument held not error. Crenshaw v. State [Ala.] 45 S 631. It is improper for prosecuting attorney to state his personal opinion of the guilt of accused; but not improper to argue that evidence shows guilt, produces a conviction of guilt in his mind, and should in jurors' minds. Adams v. State [Fla.] 45 S 494.

99. Argument relating to power of court to impose punishment held improper, as tending to induce conviction of certain degree of homicide. Windham v. State [Miss.] 45 S 861. Proper to refuse to allow counsel for accused to argue for penitentiary sentence rather than death sentence, because if former was imposed no appeal would be taken and county would be saved expense. Phillips v. State [Miss.] 45 S 572.

1. Where defendants did not testify, and district attorney called jury's attention to their "hard" and "criminal" faces and argued they were just the kind of men to commit the crime charged, and court expressly sanctioned such argument, prejudicial error was committed. Perez v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1097.

2. Verdict obtained by improper, inflammatory argument, outside the case, should be reversed. Machem v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 1184. Inflammatory remarks, outside record, improper. Holloway v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 928. Inflammatory and abusive argument improper. Howerton v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 606. Argument, in homicide case, held not so inflammatory as to be cause for revereal. Howard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 378, 111 SW 1038.

3. Remarks calculated to prejudice jury against defendant (negro) held objectionable. State v. Cook [Mo. App.] 112 SW 710. Comment of facts outside the record, calculated to excite prejudice and inflame passions of jury, error. State v. Upton, 130 Mo. App. 316, 109 SW 821. Conduct and argument of counsel (specially hired to prosecute), ters which jurors ought not to consider.[4] Direct or indirect reference to the failure of accused to testify is error.[5] Reference to the appearance [6] or demeanor [7] of defendant, while testifying, and of his failure to produce available witnesses [8] has been held proper. Reference to failure to introduce evidence of good character,[9] or to offer proof which would be incompetent,[10] improper. Argument or remarks otherwise improper may be permitted when provoked by or in answer to argument for the other side.[11] The reading of law to the jury is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the trial court.[12] Errors in statements of fact may be corrected,[13] and a outside ths record, appealing to prejudices of jury, dramatic, disregarding decisions of court and rules which should govern trial of criminal causes, held prejudicial and cause for reversal. State v. Kaufman [S. D.] 118 NW 337. Held proper for court to interrupt counsel and ask him to make argument, not tending to degrade administration of justice where counsel stated "you will believe a white man not on his oath before you will a negro who is sworn. You can swallow those negroes if you want to but John R. Cooper will never swallow them." Battle v. U. S., 209 U. S. 36, 52 Law. Ed. 670.

4. Remarks of counsel relative to accused being forced to trial properly arrested by court. Watson v. State [Ala.] 46 S 232.

5. Reference by district attorney to failure of accused to testify held reversible error. Vaden v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 299, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 404, 106 SW 367. Where accused testified in second trial but had not done so on first, question relating to former trial, and comment on failure to testify before, was error. Wilson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 529. In Mississippi any reference whatever to failure of accused to testify is reversible error. Statement in argument that confession of accused "stands uncontradicted," reversible error. Prince v. State [Miss.] 46 S 537. Argument that there was not a scintilla of evidence to support defendant's theory held not a comment on his failure to testify. Begley v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 890, 107 SW 243. Argument by state's attorney that accused "made his own confession and it is not disputed" not a comment on his failure to testify. State v. Landers [S. D.] 114 NW 717. Statement that there had been no witness on stand to contradict prosecuting witness held not reversible error as comment on failure of accused to testify. Sample v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 505, 108 SW 685. Counsel may characterize certain testimony as uncontradicted and undenied, though testimony is as to private conversations between witness and accused. This is not comment on failure of accused to testify so as to violate his rights. Clinton v. State [Fla.] 47 S 389. Solicitor's argument that evidence for state had not been contradicted "and no one had said it was not true" held not a comment on failure of accused to testify. No error, especially where court gave cautionary instruction. State v. Hooker, 145 N. C. 581, 59 SE 866.

6. Personal reference to jewels worn by accused, charged with running disorderly house, and sarcastic reference to her attorneys as having stopped at her "hotel," held not reversible error. Moore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 529, 110 SW 911.

7. Reference to fact that appellant laughed while on stand in his own behalf not improper. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 107 SW 540.

8. Failure of defendant to place his wife on the stand is matter which can properly be commented on. Battles v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 202, 109 SW 195. No error where counsel referred to fact that accused failed to put certain person, present in court, on the stand, but did not refer to failure of accused to testify. Bagley v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 324, 109 SW 1095.

9. Comments on defendant's failure to adduce evidence of his good character, when the latter has not been put in issue, has been held error not cured by instructions to jury to disregard same. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Prejudicial error for district attorney to emphasize failure of defendant's attorney to cross-examine state's witnesses to bad reputation of defendant, and failure of defendant to produce witnesses to good reputation, the state's evidence being improper, accused not having put his reputation or character in issue. People v. Hinksman [N. Y.] 85 NE 676.

10. It is proper for the court to refuse to allow counsel for accused to argue concerning failure of prosecution to ask witness regarding fact which prosecution would not have been allowed to prove over objection. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1.

11. Remarks in answer to argument of counsel for defendant not improper. Adams v. Com. [Ky.] 111 SW 348. Argument made in response to one made by counsel for defendant held proper. Pittman v. State [Ala.] 45 S 245. Where accused's counsel charged that prosecution had tried to find evidence against accused's character and had failed, retaliatory remarks by prosecuting attorney that accused had right to produce character witnesses and had not dared to do so was not reversible error. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P 940. Where the impropriety of the remark is not clear, it is not error to overrule motion that jury be instructed to disregard a remark made by prosecution during defendant's argument to jury, when remark was provoked by question asked by defendant's counsel and was not made to jury. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. Where the prosecuting attorney was challenged by counsel for the defendant to state to the jury why he had not tried the case long before, and in his reply the prosecutor declared the reason was the defendant absconded and could not be found by the police, the declaration does not, if true, amount to misconduct and the trial is not vitiated thereby. Ryan v. State, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 497.

12. Not an abuse of discretion to allow legally erroneous argument made in good faith is not ground for reversal.[14] It is the duty of the court to keep attorneys within the bounds of legitimate argument and to check them when they exceed such bounds.[15] In case of controversy as to the testimony of a witness, during the arguments, the court may have the witness recalled or have his testimony read by the reporter, and, if neither of these courses is insisted on by counsel, the matter may be left to the recollection of the jury. It is not the duty of the court to settle such controversy by stating his recollection of the testimony.[16] The time to be allowed in preparation for argument,[17] the length,[18] and the number [19] of arguments, and the interruption of arguments by the taking of a recess,[20] are matters resting in the court's discretion. In Georgia the party entitled to the concluding argument should be required to state to his adversary, before he addresses the jury, the questions of law which he will raise and read or present the authorities he expects to use.[21] But this rule does not apply where the only question is one of fact, and there is no controversy as to the law. Refusal of the court to require notice of questions and authorities used in concluding argument is not ground for new trial, the proper practice being to apply for leave to reply to arguments not used excepting in concluding address.[22]

Improper remarks or argument are not cause for reversal, unless under the circumstances, prejudicial to accused.[23] Error of this kind is usually held to be cured when the remarks are withdrawn, or when the court checks or rebukes counsel, and instructs or cautions the jury to disregard the objectionable remarks or argument.[24] counsel to read authorities and portion of court's charge, which was afterwards given. Buchanan v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 235, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 337, 106 SW 134. Reading from decisions as part of argument held legitimate. Robinson v. State [Ala.] 45 S 916. Not error to refuse to allow decision in another case to be read to the jury. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943.

13. Error in statements by prosecuting officer may be corrected. State v. Montgomery, 121 La. 1005, 46 S 997.

14. Verdict will not be set aside because prosecuting attorney argued an erroneous proposition of law to the jury. State v. Wren, 121 La. 55, 46 S 99. That claim made by counsel is legally erroneous, not ground for reversal. People v. Boyd, 151 Mich. 577, 15 Det. Leg. N. 36, 115 NW 687.

15. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

16. Fort v. State, 3 Ga. App. 448, 60 SE 282.

17. Time to be allowed in preparation for argument after evidence is in rests in court's discretion. State v. Heidelberg, 120 La. 300, 45 S 256.

18. Limiting time of argument discretionary. Welch v. State [Ala.] 46 S 856.

19. Within court's discretionary power to limit arguments for accused to two, state having same number. Watson v. State [Ala.] 46 S 232.

20. No rule requires that arguments of counsel should be completed before a recess is taken; such matters discretionary. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309.

21, 22. Fort v. State, 3 Ga. App. 448, 60 SE 282.

23. Argument harmless where record showed guilt. Cordona v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 619, 111 SW 145. Extravagant statements of counsel and statements unsustained by evidence are not ground for reversal when harmless. Lowell v. People, 131 Ill. App. 137. Remarks of counsel in opening statement referring to another act of accused, harmless where accused testified to act without objection. Crofton v. State, 84 Ark. 623, 106 SW 671. Harmless error to allow employed counsel to make argument, trial being otherwise regular. Adams v. Com. [Ky.] 111 SW 348. Remark of prosecuting attorney that jury had nothing to do with the law of the case, cause for reversal where judge did not instruct jury to disregard the remark, though he told them they were not bound for an opinion given by him (the judge) on the law. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 286.

24. Argument cured by instruction to jury to disregard it. Starnes v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 403, 107 SW 550. Argument outside record. Adams v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 779, 111 SW 348; Clark v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 529, 111 SW 659. Reference to another killing, not shown in evidence. Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 761. Intemperate and hasty remarks of counsel not ground for reversal. State v. Montgomery, 121 La. 1005, 46 S 997. Ordinarily presumed that prejudicial effects of improper remarks are cured by instructions to jury to disregard them. State v. Heidelberg, 120 La. 300, 45 S 256. Unimportant remark of district attorney, not addressed to jury. State v. Gibson, 120 La. 343, 45 S 271. Reference to change of venue and failure of accused to testify cured, where court stopped counsel and cautioned jury to disregard it. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867. Characterization of alibi as "the rogue's defense" cured by court's instructions giving due dignity to the defense. Gillotti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252. Argument relating to number of murders in county not reversible, court having sustained objection and warned jury to disregard it. Jackson v. State [Miss.] 47 S 502. Reference by district attorney to failure of accused to testify not reversible error where court at once admonished jury to disregard it, and it could not have been prejudicial in view of proof. People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401. Argument that it has been a long time since such a crime had been committed because it had been punished, not prejudicial, especially in view of cautionary instructions by court. State v. Peterson [N. C.] 63 SE 87. Remark of counsel, based on evidence, not error, being excepted to and court having told jury not to rely on it. State v. Stevens [Vt.] 70 A 1060. Remark of counsel not ground for new trial where at once withdrawn and court instructed jury to disregard it. Reese v. State, 3 Ga. App. 610, 60 SE 284. Argument outside the case cured by its withdrawal by counsel and court's instructions to disregard it. Parson v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 617. An improper remark to the jury by prosecuting attorney, where the trial court held the remark improper, counsel withdrew it and jury was told to disregard it. Remark that co-conspirator not on trial had pleaded guilty. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. Improper statement of counsel, at once withdrawn on objection, sustained by court, held not prejudicial. People v. Zajicek, 233 Ill. 198, 84 NE 249. Improper comments of counsel not cause for reversal when withdrawn and when court cautioned jury to disregard them. People v. Gillette, 191 N. Y. 107, 83 NE 680. Where court offered to order mistrial for improper remarks of counsel or to instruct jury to disregard them and defendant elected to proceed and court did caution the jury, no reversible error was shown. Drane v. State [Miss.] 45 S 149. Comments of private prosecuting counsel not prejudicial error when withdrawn and jury were instructed to disregard them. Wilson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 173, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 105 SW 1026.

(§ 10) C. Questions of law and fact.[See 10 C. L. 147]—The weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses,[25] and all controverted questions of fact,[26] are for the jury. Where facts are undisputed, whether they constitute the crime charged is a question of law.[27] In Maryland, the jury are the judges of the law as well as of the facts in criminal cases,[28] though it is proper for the presiding judge to advise them in regard to his interpretation of the law, where he informs them that they are free to reject or adopt his view as they see fit.[29] If there is any doubt as to whether a witness was an accomplice, the issue should be submitted to the jury,[30] but if there is no

Admonition to counsel held to cure improper argument. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. Argument by prosecuting attorney outside the evidence not prejudicial when he was admonished by court on objection. People v. Weick, 123 App. Div. 828, 107 NYS 968. Argument outside the evidence cured by admonition of court to counsel and jury. Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Argument, relating to objections to excluded testimony, not shown to be prejudicial, court having told counsel to confine himself to the record. Innocente v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 390, 110 SW 61. Remark of counsel that parties to shooting were negroes, and if allowed to shoot each other they would soon be shooting white men, cured by rebuke of court. State v. Baker, 209 Mo. 444, 108 SW 6. No error where counsel was addressing remarks to accused, and court, on objection, rebuked him and told him to address jury. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Where defendant's counsel referred to possible 30-year sentence, it was improper for solicitor to state that defendant would probably never see a prison wall, but not prejudicial where court rebuked counsel. State v. Burt [N. H.] 71 A 30. The declaration by the prosecuting attorneys in this case as to what a certain "black jack" could tell and what the accused could tell, where followed by an admonition from the court that the remark should be disregarded and not repeated, did not amount to prejudicial misconduct. Williams v. Ohio, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 4.

25. Starke v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 148. Weight to be given testimony of experts on insanity for jury. Commonwealth v. Shults [Pa.] 70 A 823. Jury not obliged to believe exculpatory statements of defendant inconsistent with physical facts and other testimony, though defendant admitted the killing. Wingo v. State [Miss.] 45 S 862.-Weight and effect of evidence is for jury. State v. Walker [N. C.] 63 SE 76.

26. Questions of fact for jury, evidence being conflicting. State v. Farr [R. I.] 69 A 5. Whether time charged was proved held for jury; not error to refuse to exclude testimony. Hodge v. State [Ala.] 45 S 900. Capacity of defendant to entertain criminal intent for jury. Reynolds v. State [Ala.] 45 S 894.

27. People v. Hegeman, 57 Misc. 295, 107 NYS 261.

28. In trial of charge of embezzlement, held not error to refuse to strike all evidence because insufficient to show that defendant was "agent," within the meaning of the statute, since jury were judges of that question. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A. 286. Improper for counsel for state to state to the jury that they had nothing to do with question whether defendant (embezzlement) was "agent" within meaning of statute. Id. After evidence has been admitted by the trial court in a criminal case, the construction of the statute on which the indictment is found, and the legal effect of the evidence admitted in support of the indictment, are exclusively for the jury. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 576. Remarks of judge in excluding evidence held not to infringe on province of jury. Pontier v. State, 107 Md. 384, 68 A 1059.

29. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 286.

30. Franklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 547, 110 SW 909.

question as to this fact, the court should charge that the witness was an accomplice.[31] The form or extent of punishment is sometimes left to the jury.[32]

(§ 10) D. Taking case from jury.[See 10 C. L. 148]—If there is evidence to support conviction, the case should not be withdrawn from the jury,[33] but a verdict of not guilty should be directed,[34] or the prosecution dismissed,[35] where the proof is insufficient to sustain convictions. Defendant is entitled to have the cause submitted to the jury if there is any evidence from which they might infer that he is not guilty,[36] and ordinarily a court has no power to direct a verdict of guilty [37] after plea of not guilty.[38] In Michigan the court may inform the jury that they should render a verdict of guilty, but cannot compel them to render such verdict.[39] In Arkansas it is held that a court has power, in a prosecution of a misdemeanor punishable by fine only, to direct a verdict of guilty where the facts are undisputed and admit of but one inference,[40] but it has no such power where the offense is one punishable by fine or imprisonment.[41] Where there is no dispute as to the facts, it is the duty of the court to direct a verdict on a plea of former jeopardy or former acquittal.[42]

(§ 10) E. Instructions. Necessity and duty of charging.[See 10 C. L. 148]—It is the duty of the court to give full, clear and proper instructions on the law of the case,[43] and requested instructions should be given if the request is timely [44] and is

31. Franklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 547, 110 SW 909. Where facts are apparent, court may charge that witness is an accomplice. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386.

32. Where accused was over 16 at time of trial, by his own confession, not error to leave it to jury's discretion to send him to reformatory. Walker v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 110 SW 59. Proper to instruct jury to assess punishment at confinement in reformatory if they found her guilty (of theft), there being no evidence that she was under 16 years of age. Cummings v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 397, 106 SW 363.

33. Evidence is for jury unless it is so palpably inconclusive as to fail to make prima facie case. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273. General charge properly refused where evidence is in conflict. Wright v. State [Ala.] 47 S 201. General affirmative charge properly refused. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682. Question of guilt for jury; general affirmative charge properly refused. Fowler v. State [Ala.] 45 S 913. Evidence being sufficient to go to jury on issue of guilt, instructions in the nature of an affirmative charge for defendant were properly refused. Moore v. State [Ala.] 45 S 656. Verdict of not guilty will not be directed unless proof is exceedingly clear and without contradiction. State v. Franklin [S. C.] 60 SE 953. Evidence sufficient to go to jury on question of guilt of shooting at another with intent to do bodily harm. State v. Hunskor, 16 N. D. 420, 114 NW 996. In Louisiana, judge does not take case from jury on ground of want of evidence. State v. Dudenhefer [La.] 47 S 614. Case is for jury if there is any evidence connecting accused with crime. Creech v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 808, 107 SW 212. If there is any evidence, however slight, tending to show the guilt of accused, the issue must be left to the jury. Commonwealth v. Murphy [Ky.] 109 SW 353. Testimony should go to jury, though weak, unless wholly conjectural, if it reasonably tends to show guilt. State v. Dobbins [N. C.] 62 SE 635. Case should go to jury if there is any evidence which, if true, would justify conviction. State v. Walker [N. C.] 63 SE 76. It is not a ground of demurrer that the jury may not draw from all the testimony the inference necessary to sustain the indictment. United States v. Heinze, 161 F 425.

34. Where state failed to prove material element of offense charged, court should have instructed verdict of not guilty. State v. Brown, 33 Utah, 109, 93 P 52. If the evidence introduced by the state fails to incriminate defendant or is wholly insufficient to show him guilty of the offense charged, it is the right and duty of the trial judge to direct a verdict of not guilty. Verdict of not guilty properly directed. Charge was attempt to commit abortion. Commonwealth v. Murphy [Ky.] 109 SW 353. It is the duty of the court to instruct a verdict for accused unless the evidence is sufficient to warrant a reasonable conclusion of defendant's guilt. Mickle v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 229.

35. Allegations and proof must correspond, and if allegations are insufficient and state refuses to recommit to grand jury, prosecution must be dismissed. Commonwealth v. White [Ky.] 109 SW 324.

36. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 145 N. C. 570, 59 SE 1048.

37. Instruction to find accused guilty, erroneous. State v. McNamara, 212 Mo. 150, 110 SW 1067.

38. After plea of not guilty, court cannot direct verdict for state, however clear the proof. State v. Reed [Or.] 97 P 627.

39. Held that judge compelled jury to render verdict without leaving their seats, and conviction set aside. People v. North [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 549, 117 NW 63.

in due form,[45] and if it is a correct statement of law [46] and applicable to the facts.[47] Requests which are incorrect,[48] or which are not responsive to the issues,[49] or warranted by the evidence,[50] or which are argumentative,[51] misleading,[52] unintelligible,[53]

44. Refusal to give requested instructions is not available error where requests were not signed by accused or his counsel and delivered to court before commencement of argument, as required by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1892, subd. 6. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Not error to refuse to recall jury for additional instructions requested by accused where no former request had been made to give such instructions. Barton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 443, 111 SW 1042.

45. Oral request for general charge properly refused. Stallworth v. State [Ala.] 46 S 518. Charge on impeachment of witnesses not required, no written request therefor having been made; not error to refuse oral request. Strickland v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 841.

46. Request to charge that state must show commission of crime in county of prosecution should have been granted. Holcombe v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 647.

47. Court should give requested instructions applicable to evidence. State v. Short, 120 La. 187, 45 S 98. Error to refuse charge that testimony of witnesses considered unworthy of belief might be disregarded. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682. Requested charge on issue whether crime was committed within limitation period should have been given. Battles v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 202, 109 SW 195. Held error to refuse to charge jury in rape case that delay in prosecution should be considered, and that acquittal should follow if her explanation of delay is unreasonable, or delay was for purpose of extorting money or property. Commonwealth v. Mtynarczyk, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 256. Where one accused of violating liquor law stated that he acted as agent for two named buyers and obtained whiskey from a named illegal vendor, and prosecuting attorney commented on his failure to produce the named men as witnesses to corroborate his statement, it was prejudicial error to refuse a proper request to charge that no man can be compelled to incriminate himself. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 671.

48. Instruction not stating correctly law applicable to facts shown properly refused. Clements v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 271. Erroneous requests should be refused though errors favor the state. Smith v. State [Ala.] 45 S 626. Instruction partially incorrect may be refused. Id. Not error to refuse charges requested by defendant requiring acquittal on hypothesis warranting conviction. Lacy v. State [Ala.] 45 S 680. Proper to refuse charge that jury are not to consider fact that grand jury have found indictment, since it must necessarily be considered. Crenshaw v. State [Ala.] 45 S 631. Requested charges properly refused because argumentative, confusing, incorrect in law, invading province of jury, and misleading. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273.

49. Instructions not applicable to evidence properly refused. Reynolds v. State [Ala.] 45 S 894; Fowler v. State [Ala.] 45 S 913; West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93; Lawson v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 974; State v. Pigg [Kan.] 97 P 859; Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 653. Instruction assuming narrower scope to proof than evidence warrants properly refused. Minor v. State [Fla.] 45 S 816. Charges not properly hypothesizing facts properly refused. Parker v. State [Ala.] 45 S 248. Instructions ignoring certain evidence properly refused. Lacy v. Request to charge must be based on facts in evidence. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. Requested instruction that evidence must exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of accused's guilt properly refused where evidence was not wholly circumstantial. People v. Bonifacio, 190 N. Y. 150, 82 NE 1098. Where defendant expressly waived proof that law was in force, refusal to charge that it must be proved was not error. Starnes v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 403, 107 SW 550. Instruction that witness' testimony must be corroborated properly refused, there being no evidence that witness was an accomplice. Powell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 395, 106 SW 362. Failure to charge on corroboration of accomplice not error, there being no accomplice who testified. Scott v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 332, 111 SW 657. Charge relating to testimony of accomplice properly refused where there was no accomplice in the case. Moore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 559, 110 SW 911. Refusal of instruction on defendant's mental irresponsibility proper, there being no evidence that he was insane. State v. McNamara, 212 Mo. 150, 110 SW 1067. Instructions on permanent insanity properly refused, there being no evidence thereof. Kinslow v. State, 85 Ark. 514, 109 SW 524. Instructions treating evidence as purely circumstantial properly refused where there was some direct evidence. Minor v. State [Fla.] 46 S 297. Requested instruction cautioning jury against "popular feeling" and "outside feeling" held not required by evidence. People v. Yun Kee [Cal. App.] 96 P 95. Not error to further amplify instructions in absence of any request therefor. State v. Lee, 79 S. C. 223, 60 SE 524. Charge on character sufficient, in absence of written request for further charge. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Instruction not required by evidence on defense of insanity, none being requested. Cate v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 942. Omission to give particular instruction on circumstantial evidence not error when no such instruction was requested and court's general charge on subject was sufficient. State v. Wolfley, 75 Kan. 406, 93 P 337. Where theory of involuntary manslaughter arose solely from accused's statement, and evidence was in conflict therewith, court was not bound to charge on the law thereof in the absence of a timely and pertinent written request. Johnson v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 813. Omission of special instructions, such as definitions of common terms, will not be held error, in the absence of written requests for such instructions. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Evidence held not to require instruction on circumstantial evidence, no request therefor being made. State v. Mitchell [Iowa] 116 NW 808. Failure to charge on character evidence in murder case not error, in absence of request. Commonwealth v. Caraffa [Pa.] 71 A 17. Charge sufficient in absence of request for more specific reference to evidence. State v. Whimpey [Iowa] 118 NW 281. An instruction that an accomplice must be corroborated was held sufficient where no further instruction was requested except that witness was an accomplice, this request being improper, since the question was one for the jury. Driggers v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 612.

57. Failure to charge on alibi not error in absence of request. Maulding v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 220, 108 SW 1182. Court need not instruct on reasonable doubt if not requested to do so. Snyder v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 465. While it is proper to instruct as to lesser degrees of the crime charged, it is not error to fail to give such instructions in the absence of any request therefor. People v. Jordan, 109 NYS 840. Defendant failing to request charge cannot complain of failure to charge as to second count charging fornication and bastardy in prosecution where the first court charged rape. Commonwealth v. Walker, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 167. Where venue was clearly proved, failure to refer to it in the charge was not error, no request for such charge being made. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 46 S 176. Not error to fail to charge on temporary insanity as lowering degree of offense, in absence of any request. Young v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 416, 110 SW 445. Defendant cannot complain of failure to instruct on corroboration of accomplices in misdemeanor case, in absence of court.[58] In some jurisdictions it is held that a request may properly be refused if any modification is required.[59] The practice of requesting an unnecessarily large number of instructions is disapproved.[60] In Texas, requests given for accused must be signed and verified by the judge.[61] The jury should be instructed with especial accuracy where the evidence is close and conflicting.[62] Doubt as to the propriety of a particular instruction should be resolved in favor of accused.[63] Additional instructions should be given when requested by jurors,[64] and such instruction is properly confined to the point covered by their request.[65]

A requested instruction substantially covered by the charge given may be refused.[66] The exact language of the request need not be used; it is sufficient if the charge covers the point fully and correctly.[67]

any request. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 396, 110 SW 63.

58. Failure to give particular instruction not error in absence of written request. Randall v. State, 3 Ga. App. 653, 60 SE 328. Assignments of error to refusal to charge not reviewable, requests to charge being oral. Coleman v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 487. Failure to instruct on particular mode of impeaching witnesses not error, no written request for charge being made. Roberson v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 539. Failure to charge on contradictory evidence or credibility of witnesses not ground for new trial, in absence of timely written request. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

59. Requested charge need not be given unless it can be given without change. Davis v. State, 134 Wis. 632, 115 NW 150. A request to charge should be refused unless the form of the proposed charge is such that it may be read without change. State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719.

60. McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321.

61. Failure to do so held reversible error under White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 718. Alderson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 412.

62. Sheppelman v. People, 134 Ill. App. 556.

63. Gambrell v. State [Miss.] 46 S 138. Instruction on lower degrees should be given if court has any reasonable doubt whether evidence requires such instruction; if court is not in doubt, such instruction need not be given. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552.

64. Additional instructions may be properly given, though requested by only one juror. State v. Daly, 210 Mo. 664, 109 SW 53. Where the jury returns and asks for additional instructions, the court should give them, even though instructions have already been given on requested points. Error to refuse to give additional instructions in answer to questions by jury, on ground that they had already been answered. Commonwealth v. Smith [Pa.] 70 A 850.

65. Where the jury, having been charged, returns and requests an instruction on a particular question, it is not error to confine the instruction to the specific point suggested by the jury. Kimberly v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 571.

Requested charge on weight to be given testimony. People v. Laudiero [N. Y.] 85 NE 132. Refusal of requested instructions on motive, intent, and advice of counsel, held unprejudicial where instructions given were as favorable to defendant as would be consistent with right. Williamson v. U. S., 28 S. Ct. 163.

Form and substance of charge in general. See 10 C. L. 156—In some jurisdictions the charge must be in writing [68] if requested,[69] though the right to a written charge may be waived,[70] and a written charge may be supplemented by an oral presentation of issues.[71] Instructions should be addressed to jury as a whole.[72] While it is not reversible error to state that an intruction is given by request, the better practice is to omit any reference to the fact that an instruction is requested by counsel.[73] The giving of numerous and repetitious instructions in improper,[74] especially the undue repetition of instructions favorable to one side.[75]

The court should define the crime charged,[76] and in so doing may follow the statutory language,[77] but is not required to do so.[78] The punishment which may be inflicted is not a proper subject of instruction to the jury [79] where it is not to be

Where question of personal identity and fact of alibi are virtually the same defense, a charge on one substantially covers the other. Carr v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 293. Not error to refuse charge that good character is presumed, where court charged that evidence of good character could be considered on the issue of guilt or innocence, and that the weight of such evidence was for the jury. People v. Brasch [N. Y.] 85 NE 809. There being no objections to court's charges, instructions merely amplifying certain portions of those given were properly refused. State v. Laborde, 120 La. 136, 45 S 38. Where the law of reasonable doubt was fully and fairly charged, refusal to give a request on reasonable doubt as applied to a particular line of defense was not error. Dotson v. State, 129 Ga. 727, 59 SE 774. Failure to charge that jury must, if possible, reconcile evidence with presumption of accused's innocence not prejudicial, where court charged on presumption of innocence in language of Pen. Code, § 1096. People v. Patino [Cal.] 98 P 199. Not error to refuse particular instruction of weight to be given testimony of detectives where court properly charged on weight of testimony and credibility of witnesses. O'Grady v. People, 42 Colo. 312, 95 P 346. Instructions were "given" within meaning of statute when written requests were marked "given" and handed to jury, who were told orally by court that they were instructions given at request of defendant. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 634.

67. City of Gallatin v. Fannen, 128 Mo. App. 324, 107 SW 479; Beavers v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 598, 108 SW 682. Requests need not be given in exact words; instruction held sufficiently responsive to request. State v. Dobbins [N. C.] 62 SE 635. The judge need not charge in the language of the requests; if the law is fully and accurately charged this is sufficient. Charge on insanity covered requests. Commonwealth v. Lewis [Pa.] 71 A 18. Requested instructions need not be given in the language of the request; it is sufficient if the substance is given in any form of statement. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721.

68. Remarks of court to jury, during trial, on request of district attorney, that state had elected to stand on one of two acts testified to, and that testimony as to other could only be considered in corroboration, held not an oral instruction prohibited by Mills' Ann. St. § 1468a. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P 940.

69. Error to refuse to give charge in writing when requested, and also to refuse to give special requests. Gonzales v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 430, 110 SW 740.

70. The right to written instructions may be waived and is waived where parties do not object at the time but interrupt and request the giving of certain charges. Williams v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 30.

71. Charge on law being in writing, not error to read from notes of evidence in stating state's contentions. State v. Dixon [N. C.] 62 SE 615. Though the entire charge should be in writing, when a written charge is requested (State v. Khoury [N. C.] 62 SE 638), yet an oral presentation of issues, or oral instructions to supply slight omissions in the written charge, are not reversible error if correct (Id.).

72. Better practice is to address instructions to jury as a whole; not error to so address them instead of addressing each juror individually. Shepard v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 584.

73. Hamilton v. State, 129 Ga. 747, 59 SE 803.

74. State v. Soper, 207 Mo. 502, 106 SW 3.

75. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995.

76. The court should explain the legal definition of the crime charged; error to charge that materiality of allegations in accusation is for jury. Holt v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 992.

77. Court may quote statutes defining the crime charged and it is not usually prejudicial error to include in the quotation the portion of the statute providing for punishment. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407.

78. Court not required to follow language of statute, defining crime if its import is properly given. Holmes v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 99.

79. Not error to refuse instruction that prior conviction was charged only to increase punishment. People v. Jordan, 109 NYS 840. Instruction that if, after conviction, defendant was found to be under 18 years of age he was to be sent to the training school and not to jail, was erroneous, the matter being for the court alone. State v. McGee, 212 Mo. 95, 110 SW 699. Held not error to inform jury, in response to query by juryman as to what penalty was, that penalty was exclusively for court and that they should not consider it or enter into a discussion on that subject, but that any recommendation of mercy or severity would be punished. Commonwealth v. Martin, 34 Pa. Super. Co. 451.

assessed by them. Proper instructions on the burden of proof, presumption of innocence, and reasonable doubt should be given,[80] though definition of terms may be unnecessary.[81]

The instructions should be predicated upon and conform to the evidence,[82] and should be responsive to the issues [83] and cover and submit every issue, theory or defense raised by any evidence; [84] and instructions ignoring any material issue or

80. Accused is entitled to instruction, that he is presumed innocent until proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt. Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 997. Failure to give instruction on reasonable doubt was error. Gatliff v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1063, 107 SW 739. When the attention of the court is called to the law on the presumption of innocence, it is his duty to instruct the jury thereon (Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 784), and he is not relieved therefrom by reason of the fact that defendant's counsel has requested an instruction on the subject which is erroneous (Id.). It is reversible error to refuse to give a requested charge that accused is presumed innocent, until that presumption is overcome by proof, notwithstanding a proper charge that accused must be found guilty beyond reasonable doubt. Thomas v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 156 F 897. Where state introduced accused's statement in which he claimed shooting of his wife was accidental, court should have charged that burden was on state to disprove claim that it was accidental. Combs v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 613, 108 SW 649.

Exception: Statute making it an offense to keep and have in possession intoxicating liquors with intent to sell unlawfully makes possession presumptive evidence of unlawful intent. In such case accused is not entitled to instruction as to presumption of innocence. Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 997.

81. "Burden of proof" and "preponderance of evidence," used in charge, held not to require definition. State v. Richardson, 137 Iowa, 591, 115 NW 220.

82. Instructions not applicable to facts should not be given. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706. A charge on negative and positive evidence should be given only where clearly applicable. Not error to give the charge. Clay v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1028. Charge on confessions not required nor proper where no confession was proved but there were statements by which accused sought to justify himself. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. Error to charge on comparative weight of positive and negative testimony where all the testimony is positive. Peak v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 665. Instruction erroneous as authorizing conviction on incompetent and irrelevant evidence. Curtis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 380. Instruction treating evidence as both direct and circumstantial, proper. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407. Instruction on flight of accused warranted by evidence. State v. Anderson, 121 La. 366, 46 S 357. Error to charge Pen. Code 1895, § 989 (presumptions from failure to produce accessible evidence, or from production of weak evidence, stronger being available), where accused introduced no testimony but relied on statement, and a witness was in the court room, accessible to state and accused alike, who saw the act. Davis v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 843.

Necessity and propriety of charge on circumstantial evidence: A charge on circumstantial evidence is not required unless the evidence relied on is wholly of that character. State v. Crone, 209 Mo. 316, 108 SW 555; Barnes v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 628, 111 SW 943; High v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 939. Evidence held not to require charge on circumstantial evidence. Booth v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 452, 108 SW 687. Charge on circumstantial evidence not required where there was direct and positive evidence of crime and identity of accused. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 364, 107 SW 355. Instruction on sufficiency of circumstantial evidence properly refused where evidence relied on was almost wholly that of eye witnesses. Anderson v. State, 133 Wis. 601, 114 NW 112. Instruction on circumstantial evidence not required where most of the evidence was direct and positive. State v. Clow [Mo. App.] 110 SW 632. Court should instruct on circumstantial evidence, whether so requested or not, when state relies on evidence of that kind. White v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 803. Charge on circumstantial evidence should have been given, there being no direct evidence of act. Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 653. Court should have charged on circumstantial evidence, where it was purely of that character. Taylor v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 615, 111 SW 151. Request for charge on circumstantial evidence held to require a charge on that subject, though request was not properly worded. State v. Barton [Mo.] 113 SW 1111. Where circumstantial evidence solely is relied on for conviction, it is error for trial court to fail and refuse to instruct on the law applicable. Rutherford v. U. S. [Okl.] 95 P 753. Where evidence is wholly circumstantial, it is error not to instruct that defendant must be acquitted if proved facts are reasonably consistent with innocence. Holt v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 992.

83. Judgment reversed where charge submitted was different from, and not included in, that charged. Gaming. Chancellor v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 464, 107 SW 823. Charge inaccurately submitting defendant's claims erroneous, being on a vital point. Butler v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 528, 107 SW 840. Not error to charge on argument of state based on failure of appellant to place his wife on the stand. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 107 SW 540.

84. Every defense or question, raised by any evidence should be submitted. Coleman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1072. Court should instruct on every phase of case having basis in evidence, leaving jury to decide theory are erroneous.[85] On the other hand, no issue or theory not raised by the accusation [86] or supported by any evidence [87] should be submitted. The instructions between conflicting theories. Gatliff v. Com. 32 Ky. L. R. 1063, 107 SW 739. Court should charge on every theory having any support in the evidence, regardless of the probability of such evidence. Washington v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 480, 110 SW 751. Charge should cover every phase of the evidence and every defense, though judge may believe certain evidence untrue. Freeman v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 500, 107 SW 1127. State is entitled to have given instructions fully presenting its theory as shown by evidence. Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047. Failure to charge on embezzlement, which was charged in indictment, error. Maulding v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 220, 108 SW 1182. Assault with intent to rape should have been submitted where evidence warranted finding thereof. State v. Blackburn, 136 Iowa, 743, 114 NW 531. Proper to submit phase of evidence partly shown by one side and partly by the other. Cooper v. State [Ark.] 109 SW 1023. Proper to charge in reference to facts which some evidence tends to show, though preponderance of evidence is against such facts. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 SE 578. Accused has right to instruction presenting his theory of case. De Silva v. State [Miss.] 45 S 611. Failure to instruct on defense of habitation (homicide case) harmful error. State v. Brooks, 79 S. C. 144, 60 SE 518. Failure to charge on defense of alibi reversible error where that was the sole defense and there was evidence to support it. Ballentine v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 369, 107 SW 546. Facts held to require charge on alibi defense. Colbert v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 486, 107 SW 1115. Where alibi was the main defense, court should have instructed thereon without request. Duggan v. State, 3 Ga. App. 332, 59 SE 846. Where evidence to show accused's presence at scene of robbery was all circumstantial, charge on alibi was not error. Tabor v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 387, 107 SW 1116. Error to omit charge on defense shown by evidence. Noble v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 281. Error to fail to submit defense and mitigating circumstances shown by evidence. Long v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 841. Statement of accused held to warrant court's instructions as to contentions of accused and what was admitted. Johnson v. State, 130 Ga. 22, 60 SE 158. Instructions on flight of accused supported by evidence. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. Where court trying man for procuring abortion and woman for having committed it charged jury that if they failed to find woman did act there was no offense on part of man, and if they found she did commit it question would be whether he procured her "to do what she did," held not to have effect of withdrawing question from jury. Maxey v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 63. Where evidence was circumstantial, aside from admission of one defendant (two being on trial), court should have charged that confession alone, unless made in open court, unaccompanied by other proof, is insufficient. Polson v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1398, 108 SW 844. Where there were two theories, one that witness was detective and one that he was an accomplice, court should have charged on both theories. Spencer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 289, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 408, 106 SW 386. Failure to give charge requiring proof of venue error, evidence being conflicting as to which of two counties had jurisdiction. Patterson v. State [Ala.] 47 S 52. Where defendant is only eye witness, and his statements concerning the killing are proved, court should instruct that his statements tending to show he acted in self-defense must be disproved by the state, but this may not be necessary where defendant takes the stand. Casey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 534.

85. Held error for trial court in prosecution for rape to charge only on first count for rape and to utterly ignore second count for fornication and bastardy. Commonwealth v. Walker, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 167. Instruction disregarding evidence and claim of state error. People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532, 93 P 99. Instruction erroneous because ignoring theory of self-defense. Terrell v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 604, 111 SW 152. Where there was evidence tending to show justifiable homicide, it was error to instruct that proof of an unjustifiable killing is sufficient evidence of malice. State v. Smith [Kan.] 96 P 39. Charge on presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt erroneous because not applicable to one degree of crime which might be found. Redman v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 591, 108 SW 365. Instruction in substance that accused's prominence or lowliness ought not to be considered, held not erroneous as directing jury to disregard accused's character. State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 84, 60 SE 241. Instruction held not objectionable as depriving accused of benefit of evidence of good character. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Instruction that time of committing offense (obtaining money by false pretenses) was immaterial, held misleading and erroneous, where defense was an alibi and there was evidence to support it. State v. King [Wash.] 97 P 247. Instruction ignoring defendant's evidence in considering sufficiency of evidence to convict properly refused. Stallwarth v. State [Ala.] 46 S 518. Instructions held not to exclude defense. Herrington v. State, 130 Ga. 307, 60 SE 572. Instruction held not to ignore defense of insanity in homicide case. People v. Casey, 231 Ill. 261, 83 NE 278.

86. The court should instruct only as to degrees of offense shown by evidence and included in indictment. State v. Kemp, 102 La. 378, 45 S 283. Error to authorize conviction of offense not charged. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 2, 108 SW 871. Instruction authorizing conviction on facts not alleged in indictment erroneous. Taylor v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 615, 111 SW 151.

87. No instruction required on issue not presented by evidence. Woodard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 941; Day v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 560, 110 SW 417. Alleged omitted charge not required by evidence. Guenther v. State [Wis.] 118 NW 640. Instruction on facts excluded from the case error.

should not give undue prominence to any particular evidence, issue or phase of the case.[88]

The instructions should not invade the province of the jury.[89] Thus instruc-

State v. Prater, 130 Mo. App. 348, 109 SW 1047. An instruction which submits defendant's guilt or innocence of an offense when the state has failed to prove an essential element of it is error. Chamberlain v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 555. Instruction on testimony of accomplice not required, witness not being an accomplice. Brinegar v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 475. Evidence held not to require charge on insanity. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124. Evidence in homicide case held not to warrant charge on voluntary manslaughter. Bates v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 888. Error to charge on responsibility of accused in aiding and abetting in killing, where undisputed evidence showed that accused alone did the killing. Commonwealth v. West [Ky.] 113 SW 76. Where the evidence shows that accused is guilty of the offense charged, or not guilty, no instruction need be given on lesser degrees. Ross v. State, 16 Wyo. 285, 93 P 299. Where evidence requires verdict of guilty as charged or not guilty, no instructions on other offenses need be given. People v. Finley, 153 Cal. 59, 94 P 248. Where the offense charged is not divided into degrees, the court is not required to charge, as to an offense that might be included in the charge made, but conviction for which would not be warranted by the evidence. State v. Vey [S. D.] 114 NW 719. Charge on involuntary manslaughter not required by evidence. Toomer v. State, 130 Ga. 63, 60 SE 198. No instruction on statute of limitations necessary where act charged, if committed at all, was committed within limitation period. State v. Goodsell [Iowa] 116 NW 605. Specific charge on recent possession of stolen property not required in evidence in burglary case. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 764. Instruction on theory favorable to state, not supported by evidence, reversible error. Yopp v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 1036.

88. Instructions should not unduly emphasize particular facts. Wrist v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 718, 110 SW 849. Requested charge singling out certain evidence properly refused. Hays v. State [Ala.] 46 S 471; Kauffman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 209, 109 SW 172; Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Instruction calling attention to particular testimony properly refused, court having properly charged on credibility of witnesses. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Instruction not erroneous as singling out or giving undue prominence to evidence of particular witness. People v. Frankenberg, 236 Ill. 408, 86 NE 128. Court not required to charge that testimony of defendant's experts on insanity was uncontradicted, though state offered no experts, where charge properly left the issue to the jury. State v. Herron [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 274. Court is not required to single out one item of evidence and charge on the effect of it. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682. The practice of calling attention to particular testimony or particular witnesses is not to be commended. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035. Remark of court during charge calling attention to certain evidence held proper and not misstatement of the evidence. State v. Spink [R. I.] 69 A 364. Court is not bound to single out character evidence and give a specific instruction upon it but where this is done, it is proper to instruct that such evidence is to be considered with other evidence, and that defendants should be acquitted if evidence as a whole raises a reasonable doubt of guilt. McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321. Charge erroneous as on weight of evidence, and as singling out and giving undue prominence to certain evidence. Pannell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 536. Prejudicial error to instruct that "it is to be taken for granted that a witness tells the truth," where attention of jury was thue called to particular witness and burden was placed on defendant to show truth of testimony. State v. Halvorson, 130 Minn. 265, 114 NW 957.

89. See ante, § 10C. Instruction held not objectionable as invading province of jury because referring to "duty" of jury in certain circumstances. Burley v. State, 130 Ga. 343, 60 SE 1006. Charge: "If you believe the evidence you will find defendant not guilty," invades jury's province and is properly refused. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 591. Instruction that it would be duty of jury to have "manhood" to say so if they found certain fact, not improper. State v. Gallman, 79 S. C. 229, 60 SE 682. Requested charge that it was duty of jury to reconcile conflicting testimony without imputing willful perjury to any witness unless the conclusion is unavoidable held properly refused because invading the province of the jury. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. Instruction of judge in requiring jury to retire for further deliberation held not coercive. State v. Gallman, 79 S. C. 229, 60 SE 682. Instruction that jury "dare not go beyond jury box in considering testimony" held not intimidative or coercive. State v. Mills, 79 S. C. 187, 60 SE 664. Instructions by court urging them to endeavor to agree on a verdict held not reversible error, in view of evidence and all the circumstances. Golatt v. State, 130 Ga. 18, 60 SE 107. Instruction to jury, which had been out 17 hours, to effect that opinions of jurors should be considered by each other, proper. State v. Richardson, 137 Iowa, 591, 115 NW 220. Not error for court to instruct that only about one hour remained before Sunday, and that they should cease considering or deliberating on the case at a certain hour until Monday, though jury returned verdict before Sunday. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 SE 544. Instruction that jury were judges of law as well as of facts in criminal cases, but that it was court's duty to instruct them as to the law if they desired it, but that they were not bound by such instructions, but should not reject court's instructions and adapt their own views without reflection or from caprice, etc, approved. People v. Campbell, 234 Ill. 391, 84 NE 1035.

tions which intimate any opinion on the weight of the evidence [90] or the merits,[91]

90. Instruction held erroneous. Wright v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 542, 107 SW 822. Charge that recent possession of stolen property raises presumption which must be explained. Slater v. U. S. [Okl.] 98 P 110. In prosecution for receiving stolen property, instruction on effect of evidence of possession of recently stolen goods. Thomas v. State, 85 Ark. 138, 107 SW 390. Charge on weight of testimony of defendant and other witnesses. Ross v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 295, 109 SW 152. Charge on accomplices, including instruction that certain witness is an accomplice. Oldham v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 280, 109 SW 148. In embezzlement case, instruction that employer, whose money was taken, and an employe, were not interested. State v. Ownby, 146 N. C. 677, 61 SE 630. Instruction authorizing jury to discard so much and such parts of the evidence as is deemed "worthy of belief." Feagle v. State [Fla.] 46 S 182. Charge that there was no evidence that certain person other than defendant did the killing. Wright v. State [Ala.] 46 S 469. Instruction that proof of oral admissions is to be received with caution. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995. Instruction that evidence of various witnesses was negative and did not disprove affirmative testimony of same fact. Sheppelman v. People, 134 Ill. App. 556. Statement by court to jury of what prosecuting witness testified to. Edwards v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1033. Instruction that defendant should be convicted if certain facts were shown. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 755. Instruction that testimony of detective should be received with greatest caution and distrust. State v. Oliphant, 128 Mo. App. 252, 107 SW 32. Instruction that unexplained possession of goods warrants conviction of larceny. Reeder v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 272. Instruction that weight to be given testimony of accused, "if any," criticized for use of quoted phrase. State v. Porter [Mo.] 111 SW 529. In California an instruction calling attention to the situation and interest of defendant and requiring jury to consider these facts in weighing his testimony is reversible error. People v. Borrego [Cal. App.] 95 P 381. Remark of court, while instructing jury, that he did not think it necessary to give requested instruction on defense of alibi held reversible error, as comment on evidence, though he did instruct on the defense. State v. King [Wash.] 97 P 247. Held reversible error to include in instruction on weight to be given testimony of accused the statement "and you are to consider the great temptation which one so situated in under, so to speak, as to procure his acquittal," this tending to reflect judge's opinion that accused's testimony was false. State v. Bartlett [Or.] 93 P 243. It is error to use the expression "if the jury believe the evidence." The proper instruction is that if they find from the evidence certain facts to be true, then defendant should be found guilty or not guilty as the case may be. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 145 N. C. 570, 59 SE 1048. Instruction to return verdict of guilty "if jury believed the evidence" held erroneous as on weight of evidence. Id. Instruction to find defendant guilty if jury believe certain facts is reversible error if more than one inference from facts is possible, or where evidence is conflicting. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1088. Where the case was close, an instruction that jury might consider conduct and demeanor of accused "during the trial" in passing on the weight of his testimony was held prejudicial error. People v. McGinnis, 234 Ill. 68, 84 NE 687. Instruction improper as comment on evidence of conduct of accused. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999.

Not on weight of evidence: Homicide. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 198, 107 SW 851. Burglary. Taylor v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 190, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 860, 107 SW 58. Illegal sale of liquor. Gardenhire v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 836. Intoxicating liquor case. Trail v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 545. Prosecution of accomplice in forgery. Hinson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 143, 109 SW 174. Instruction on alibi. Graham v. State [Ala.] 45 S 580. Instruction in burglary case relative to possession of stolen property by accused. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 201, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 107 SW 52. Charge using illustrations of how jury could reason from facts proved. State v. Nelson, 79 S. C. 97, 60 SE 307. Charge limiting evidence to issue of credibility of witness. Banks v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 480, 108 SW 693. Instruction to consider evidence tending to prove certain facts and also that "tending to disprove" them held proper. State v. Richardson, 137 Iowa, 591, 115 NW 220. Statement in charge that witness did not claim to be an expert, yet was permitted to give his opinion and answer a hypothetical question, not error, not being an opinion on the evidence, and the correctness of his statement not being challenged. Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 SE 816. Not material error to instruct that voluntary and deliberate confession furnishes evidence of the highest character, where court also instructs that its weight is to be determined by jury. State v. Wortman [Kan.] 98 P 217. Court may define "place of business" if jury is left to decide whether place in question comes within definition. Bashinski v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 577.

91. Instructions near close of charge which could be construed as reflecting judge's opinion that verdict of guilty should be brought in, and emphasizing necessity for punishing violations of law, held prejudicial error. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Cautionary instructions as to gravity of offense held not prejudicial to accused. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 SE 578. Reference to argument of prosecuting attorney, with approval, in the general charge is improper, but if instruction is correct, no reversible error results. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Remark of court, in instructing on jury's power over punishment and recommendation of mercy, that court could not change it "if it desired to do so," held not error requiring new trial. Burley v. State, 130 Ga. 843, 60 SE 1006. Use of term "crime of which he is accused" and "committed the crime" in instruction not or which assume as true disputed facts,[92] are improper, though conceded or undisputed facts may properly be assumed.[93] In some states it is improper for the court to sum up the facts;[94] in others the court may summarize or state the facts hypothetically [95] and even comment on the evidence,[96] provided the jury is left entirely free to find the truth of the matter.[97] If the evidence for the state is summarized, that for the defense should be stated also.[98] error, as intimating opinion that accused committed crime charged; some such reference to accusation is necessary. State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552.

92. Improper to assume that any fact has been proved against accused. Schwartz v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 449, 111 SW 399.

Instruction erroneous as assuming facts which were disputed. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999. Where a defendant enters a plea of not guilty, he puts in issue all the material facts, including the corpus delicti, and a charge to the jury in such a case to the effect that the theft of the goods was not disputed or open to controversy is an invasion of the province of the jury and constitutes reversible error. Premack v. State, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 364. Error to charge that defendant admits an essential element of crime charged, which he did not in fact admit. Bendross v. State [Ga. App.] 52 SE 728. Charge erroneous as assuming a fact, and on weight of evidence. Marsden v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 458, 110 SW 897. Instruction erroneous because reversing burden of proof by assuming facts relied on by state. Moody v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 232, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 334, 105 SW 1127. Instruction assuming two facts which should have gone to jury erroneous. De Silva v. State [Miss.[47 S 464. Where accused neither contended nor conceded that killing was a crime, instructions assuming that it was a crime were erroneous. Phillips v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 239.

Charge not erroneous as assuming guilt, or other facts in issue (homicide). Barton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 443, 111 SW 1042. Instruction held not to assume fact in dispute. State v. Baker [Or.] 92 P 1076. Charge, construed as whole, held not to assume death of murdered man as established, but to require jury to find it beyond reasonable doubt. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62.

93. Not error to assume facts which are not in dispute. People v. Casey, 231 Ill. 261, 83 NE 278. Not error for charge to assume fact admitted by accused on witness stand. May v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 1. Assumption of killing not improper in homicide case. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Not error to assume fact of killing by accused which he admitted in statement, claiming it was accidental. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 SE 578. Court may give to jury conceded facts and law applicable thereto. State v. Reed [Or.] 97 P 627. Where facts are admitted to be true, or are placed beyond doubt without contest, the court may so assume in its charge assumption of marriage of defendant in adultery case proper where he admitted it. Russell v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 500, 111 SW 658. Existence of local option law properly assumed, being proved without dispute. Cordona v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 619, 111 SW 145.

94. The charge should not collate the facts. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 276.

95. Instruction based on hypothetical statement of evidence not error. State v. Mills, 79 S. C. 187, 60 SE 664. Charge that defendant could be convicted if certain facts (recited, and shown by evidence) were found true, held proper. Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 938. Charge held not on weight of evidence, but merely to state contentions of state. Hooton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 6, 108 SW 651.

96. Comments on testimony during the charge for the purpose of explaining, applying, and elucidating the testimony for the convenience and assistance of the jury, present no ground for exceptions. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. The court may direct jury's attention to obvious inconsistency in defendant's case. Leading questions as to alleged conversation with witness which, if it occurred, defeated alibi. State v. Feiss, 74 N. J. Law, 633, 66 A 418.

97. Held not error for court to intimate to jury that he considered testimony of little weight, so long as jury were left free to exercise their own judgment. Commonwealth v. Shults [Pa.] 70 A 823. Comments by the court concerning the value of evidence are not assignable for error when the jury are left at full liberty to determine the issues of fact for themselves. Comment by judge, where jury had returned after being out nearly a day, discussing evidence, and telling them he did not believe one witness, held not error, jury being left free to form conclusions. Smith v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 721. The expression of his opinion upon the facts by judge of federal court in his charge to jury is not reviewable on appeal if no rule of law is incorrectly stated, and the matters of fact are ultimately submitted to the determination of the jury. Instruction held not erroneous if it was possible to construe it as expression of opinion on evidence where facts were left to jury to find. Maxey v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 63. Court may properly call attention of jury to evidence or lack of it on any point and comment on the weight of it, so long as he does not direct or advise the jury how to decide the matter. State v. Ferris [Conn.] 70 A 587. Comment on evidence not reversible error, where facts are properly submitted to the jury for decision. State v. Herron [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 274.

98. Summary of all the evidence in favor of the state and omission of a like statement of the evidence in favor of accused held prejudicial error. Scott v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 803. Held error for court in charge to sum up facts for state, and not those shown by defendant's evidence and to characterize his summary thus: "These are some of the facts relied on by the state." Waters v. State, 3 Ga. App. 649, 60 SE 335.

In determining the sufficiency of the charge, it is to be construed as a whole.[99] There need be no repetition,[1] and each particular instruction need not state all the law relating to the subject-matter.[2] An error in one instruction may be cured or rendered harmless by other instructions.[3] Instructions should be clear,[4] definite[5] and concrete,[6] and not argumentative.[7] Minor errors are usually harmless.[8]

99. Ward v. State, 85 Ark. 179, 107 SW 677; People v. Cain [Cal. App.] 93 P 1037; Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P 556; State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 A 1059; Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998; Leedom v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 496; Proctor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 770. Instructions sufficient if, when taken together, they fairly and fully present the law. Hacker v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 944, 111 SW 676; Territory v. Caldwell [N. M.] 98 P 167. Charge not erroneous when construed as whole. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840; People v. Hagenow, 236 Ill. 514, 86 NE 370; Gebhardt v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 290; Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850; State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669; Moore v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 113, 107 SW 833; Criner v. State, 53 Tex. Cr App. 174, 109 SW 128; Thomas v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 272, 109 SW 155; Banton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 251, 109 SW 159; Hernandez v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 468, 110 SW 753. Instruction not erroneous as requiring conviction of some crime, when taken as whole. State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669. Qualification of requested instructions relating to particular case held proper, and charge as a whole proper. Commonwealth v. Strail, 220 Pa. 483, 69 A 866. An assignment to a portion of the charge must fail, if, taken as a whole, the charge is full, fair, and correct. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 174. If entire charge, taken together, is correct, error cannot be predicated on single clause or expression. Clements v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 271. Alleged erroneous instruction is to be reviewed in connection with entire charge. Tinsley v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 93.

1. Correct rule being once given need not be repeated. State v. Connars, 37 Mont. 15, 94 P 199. Usual instruction on reasonable doubt being given need not be repeated with reference to each element of crime. Territory v. Caldwell [N. M.] 98 P 167.

2. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Each paragraph of the instructions need not cover all elements of the crime. Instructions are sufficient if, as a whole, they cover all elements of the crime and correctly state the law. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407.

3. If instructions are correct, construed as a whole, inaccuracies or technical errors are not ground for reversal. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind 488, 82 NE 1039; Cate v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 942; State v. Hibler, 79 S. C. 170, 60 SE 438. Isolated errors in charge not ground for reversal when charge as whole is correct. Jiron v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 18, 108 SW 655. Erroneous instruction may be cured by subsequent one. State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Defect in one instruction may be remedied or supplied by another. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Slip of tongue by judge in stating general designation of offense not error, when immediately corrected and full instructions given. Carr v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 293. Giving of abstract instructions may be cured by charge as a whole. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. New trial not granted for minor errors in charge corrected by charge as a whole. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501.

4. Instruction not misleading, considered as a whole. People v. Jordan, 109 NYS 840. In trial of one charged with having committed crime through instrumentality of innocent agent, guilt or innocence of latter is for jury and instructions, which are so general and indefinite as to warrant finding of guilt of both, are misleading and improper. State v. Bailey, 63 W. Va. 668, 60 SE 785.

5. Charge defective because not definitely specifying punishment which jury might assess. Alford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 364.

6. Abstract instruction properly refused. Wright v. State [Ala.] 47 S 201. Charge in burglary case held objectionable as misleading or abstract. Smith v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 643, 111 SW 939. The charge should not only state the law but should state it as applicable to the facts. Godsoe v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 626, 108 SW 388. Instructions ought not to be given which do not relate to issues in the case, though they are correct as abstract propositions of law. State v. Mitten, 36 Mont. 376, 92 P 969. The court should be careful to guard against abstract legal quotations and sententious judicial utterances in such manner as to make them misleading under the particular circumstances of the case. Holland v. State, 3 Ga. App. 465, 60 SE 205. In capital cases it is the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury clearly and distinctly upon the law applicable to the facts disclosed by the evidence. Mere abstract charge is not enough unless jury are told and understand how to apply the law to the facts. Commonwealth v. Smith [Pa.] 70 A 850.

7. Contentions of parties should not be argumentatively emphasized. Scott v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 803. Instruction erroneous because a comment on evidence and argumentative. State v. Campbell, 210 Mo. 202, 109 SW 706.

8. Clerical errors, not tending to confuse or mislead, are immaterial. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 174. Use of word "credit," in place of "credibility," harmless. Dooley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 491, 108 SW 676. Instruction relating to testimony not erroneous for use of phrase jury "will" consider it instead of "may" consider it. Proctor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 770. Instruction using phrase "if you acquit defendant altogether" held not objectionable as requiring jury to find defendant not guilty of any wrong before acquitting. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. Use of "should" instead of "may" in instruction on what jury might consider in passing on credibility of witnesses not ground for new trial. Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 SE 1063. Mere repetition of part of charge not ground for reversal. Woodard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 941. Use of "or" instead of "and" immaterial. Schooler v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 331, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 403, 106 SW 359.

Form and propriety of particular charges.[See 10 C. L. 161]—Holdings as to the form and sufficiency of instructions as to the burden and degree of proof,[9] presumption of innocence,[10] presumption from failure to call witness,[11] rules for considering evidence in general,[12] and of particular kinds of evidence, such as circum-

9. Charge on burden of proof and reasonable doubt approved. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 364, 107 SW 355; Clay v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1028. Instructions on weight of evidence proper when construed as a whole. Anderson v. State, 133 Wis. 601, 114 NW 112. Instruction erroneous because authorizing verdict based on preponderance of evidence. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275. Instruction that "proof may be by direct and positive testimony or by circumstantial evidence" not erroneous. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995. Request on burden of proof and quantum of proof properly covered. Cook v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 919. Charge in murder case erroneous because not requiring acquittal of manslaughter, if jury have reasonable doubt of facts essential to constitute that offense. Fuller v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 540. In prosecution for carrying weapon, instruction which required accused to show beyond reasonable doubt defense that he was a traveler was error. Steel v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 15. Instruction in homicide case not erroneous as shifting burden of proof, or misleading, or on weight of evidence. Dobbs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 923. Instructions given on quantum of proof proper; those requested properly refused. People v. Corey [Cal. App.] 97 P 907. Error to charge that "should you believe from the testimony that defendant is not guilty beyond a reasonable doubt" etc., since it shifts the burden of proof. Godsoe v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 626, 108 SW 388. Charge held not erroneous as placing burden on defendant. Clay v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 555, 107 SW 1129. Instruction erroneous because shifting burden of proof. Huddleston v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 64. Instruction erroneous because shifting burden of proof on defendant to prove innocence. Greer v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 397, 106 SW 359. Properly refused: "If the evidence is evenly balanced as to the guilt or innocence of defendant, then * * * you should lean to the side of mercy and decide in favor of defendant." Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273. If there are two plausible theories, one tending to prove defendant guilty and the other tending to show that bystanders committed the act, it is the jury's duty, if they cannot determine from the evidence which is true, to adopt that theory most favorable to defendant. Instruction approved. Windham v. State [Miss.] 45 S 861. Requested instructions on quantum of proof erroneous and properly refused. Mason v. State [Ala.] 45 S 472. Instruction requiring jury to be satisfied of truth of state's evidence required too high a degree of proof; properly refused. Patton v. State [Ala.] 46 S 862. Instruction on burden of proof held not improper as shifting burden to defendant. Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 784. Instruction which shifts burden of proof to defendant and requires evidence to show beyond reasonable doubt that he acted in good faith in doing an act complained of is erroneous. Chamberlain v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 555. Instruction on presumption and burden of proof in larceny case correct taken together. State v. McDermet [Iowa] 115 NW 884. Instructions in homicide held inconsistent and erroneous on burden of proof in relation to degrees of crime. Kennison v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 289. Modification by court of requested instructions on quantity of proof and weighing of testimony held not error. State v. Shapiro [R. I.] 69 A 340. Instruction on quantum of proof necessary approved. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48. Instructions, construed as whole, not misleading as allowing conviction without finding commission of crime by defendant beyond reasonable doubt. State v. Barton [Mo.] 113 SW 1111. Instruction as to time within which commission of crime must be found held proper. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729.

10. Charge correct on presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt. Snyder v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 465; People v. Yun Kee [Cal. App.] 96 P 95; State v. Clow [Mo. App.] 110 SW 632; Wylie v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 182, 109 SW 186; Howard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 378, 111 SW 1038. Instruction on presumption of innocence of accused sufficient in absence of request for more particular charge. State v. Wolfley, 75 Kan. 406, 93 P 337. Charge on presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt should have been given. Keeton v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1164, 108 SW 315. Instruction on presumption of innocence held not improper because of words "this presumption partakes of nature of evidence" instead of saying that it is evidence. Holmes v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 99.

11. Instruction that defendant's failure to introduce evidence is not the fault of court or jury has been held no error. Held not unfavorable comment on such failure. State v. Rabens, 79 S. C. 542, 60 SE 442.

12. Instruction as to extent to which proof of death of members of family of deceased could be considered held not misleading so as to permit consideration of death of other persons. People v. Zajicek, 233 Ill. 198, 84 NE 249. Instruction erroneous which authorized jury to reject evidence which they could not reconcile, irrespective of whether other evidence convinced them beyond a reasonable doubt. Frink v. State [Fla.] 47 S 514. Properly refused; "If there are two conflicting theories, one showing guilt of accused and the other showing his innocence, the jury should adopt the theory stantial evidence,[12] positive and negative testimony,[14] character evidence,[15] statement[16] or testimony of defendant,[17] failure of accused to testify,[18] confessions,[19] testimony of accomplices and corroboration thereof,[20] credibility and impeachment which shows his innocence." Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682.

13. Charge on circumstantial evidence approved. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69; People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48. Instruction on circumstantial evidence and quantum required held not erroneous. People v. Cain [Cal. App.] 93 P 1037. Error to refuse charge that "evidence is partly circumstantial, and his innocence must be presumed by the jury until his guilt is established by evidence in all the material aspects in the case beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty." Fowler v. State [Ala.] 45 S 913. Charge, in substance, that if circumstantial evidence is capable of explanation on any reasonable hypothesis consistent with defendant's innocence he should be acquitted, should have been given. Way v. State [Ala.] 46 S 273. Requested charge that, "If the evidence is reasonably consistent with defendant's innocence, you should promptly acquit him," should have been given. Id. Instruction on quantity of circumstantial evidence required disapproved. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995.

14. Reversible error to charge, without qualification, that positive testimony is to be believed in preference to negative. Its weight is for jury. Peak v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 665. Instructions on weight of negative and positive testimony held proper as whole, in view of evidence. Benton v. State, 3 Ga. App. 453, 60 SE 116. Portion of instruction discussing relative weight and credit to be given positive evidence and negative evidence or want of knowledge held argumentative and proper to be refused but harmless under circumstances of case. Gent v. People, 133 Ill. App. 159.

15. Charge on consideration of character of accused held not erroneous. Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 SE 1063. Instruction hypothesizing that evidence of good character, taken in connection with all the evidence, is sufficient to generate a reasonable doubt, erroneous; evidence must be believed, and then it may, in connection with other evidence, raise such doubt. Abrams v. State [Ala.] 46 S 464. Answer to point that "evidence of good character is positive evidence and may of itself by creation of reasonable doubt produce acquittal" that "evidence of previous good character is to be regarded as substantive proof, and as such, evidence upon which reasonable doubt of guilt may rest. It should be observed, however, that there comes a time in life of every criminal when he commits his first offense, and when he leaves the high plane upon which walks the upright, law-abiding citizen." Held not above criticism but not reversible error. Commonwealth v. King, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 454.

16. Charge held not to eliminate prisoner's statement from consideration, in view of former instruction on such statement. Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 SE 1063. Not error to charge substantially. Pen. Code 1895, § 1010, that accused could make statement, not under oath and could not be cross-examined without his consent, and jury could give it such weight as they thought proper. Harper v. State, 129 Ga. 770, 59 SE 792.

17. Instruction that defendant's testimony may be considered in light of fact that he is defendant, and nature and enormity of crime charged may be considered, held not erroneous. State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Instruction on credibility of accused as witness sustained. State v. Dixon [N. C.] 62 SE 615. Instruction, "you are not required to believe the testimony of said accused as true, but you are to consider whether it is true and made in good faith, or only for the purpose of avoiding conviction," held reversible error. State v. Fuller [Or.] 96 P 456. It is proper to instruct that jury may, in weighing testimony of accused, consider his interest and all the facts and circumstances, and give it such weight as they consider it entitled to. State v. Bartlett [Or.] 93 P 243. Instruction, on credibility of defendant's testimony held not error. People v. Zajicek, 233 Ill. 198, 84 NE 249. Instruction on credibility of testimony by accused criticised but held not ground for reversal. People v. Ryan, 152 Cal. 364, 92 P 853. Instruction that credibility of defendant testifying in his own behalf is left by statute to jury and that jury may consider his interest in case and desire to avoid punishment of crime of which he is charged, held proper. Lemen v. People, 133 Ill. App. 295.

18. Charge on Code Cr. Proc. Art. 770, that failure of accused to testify shall not be considered nor commented on, held sufficient, though jury were not told to refrain from any discussion of the fact or allow it to influence them. Anderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 341, 110 SW 54.

19. Instruction on corroboration of confession not erroneous, though not in commendable form. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346. Where corpus delicti is sufficiently proved, instruction in language of Cr. Code Prac. § 240, should not be given; when such instruction is given it should be in language of statute (weight to be given confession) and should in addition require proof connecting accused with the offense. Chapman v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 567. Instructions on competency and effect of written confession proper, in view of evidence, and requested instructions properly refused. People v. Rogers [N. Y.] 85 NE 135. Charge on effect of confessions, and manner in which they are to be considered by jury approved. Pratt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 281, 109 SW 138.

20. Charge on accomplices and necessity for corroboration approved as against objections urged. Criner v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 174, 109 SW 128. Instruction that testimony of accomplice, not corroborated, should be received with great caution, etc., approved. State v. Daly, 210 Mo. 664, 109 SW 53. Charge on corroboration of accomplice erroneous because failing to require jury to find accomplice's testimony to be true before they can consider it. Taylor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 400, 106 SW 366.

21. Instruction on credibility sufficient. Decker v. State, 85 Ark. 64, 107 SW 182. Instructions of credibility approved. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. Instruction on weight of testimony and credibility of witnesses approved. State v. Connors, 37 Mont. 15, 94 P 199. Instructions on impeachment sufficient. Summerlin v. State, 130 Ga. 791, 61 SE 849. Charge on impeachment approved. Arnold v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806; Parker v. State, 3 Ga. App. 336, 59 SE 823. Instruction on credibility of witnesses and duty of jury in passing thereon criticised but held not prejudicially erroneous. People v. Horchler, 231 Ill. 566, 83 NE 428. Instructions on weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses being for jury, held sufficient. State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69. Charge that in passing on credibility of witness jury should consider fact that every statement he made on stand was unchallenged, and that he was not contradicted by any evidence, held not erroneous, words unchallenged and uncontradicted being used in same sense and indicated that no one had been called who contradicted testimony of witness and jury could only have had same understanding. Commonwealth v. Martin, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 451. Charge that it was for jury, etc., whether impeaching evidence "absolutely disproved or falsified" testimony improper. Benson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 403. Instruction on disregarding testimony of witnesses believed to have willfully testified falsely, etc., held not objectionable as being directed specially at defendant, who was a witness. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407.

22. The law requires no particular formula in charging on reasonable doubt. State v. Dobbins [N. C.] 62 SE 635. Instruction on reasonable doubt approved. People v. Manasse, 153 Cal. 10, 94 P 92; People v. Yun Kee [Cal. App.] 96 P 95; Parker v. State, 3 Ga. App. 336, 59 SE 823; Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 SE 1063; Arnold v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806; People v. Zajicek, 233 Ill. 198, 84 NE 249; Kennedy v. Com. [Ky.] 109 SW 313; Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407; Holmes v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 99; State v. Dixon [N. C.] 62 SE 615; Commonwealth v. Belserawitz, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 77; State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 170, 60 SE 669; Bryant v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1009; Harrolson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 544. Instruction not open to objection urged. People v. Buettner, 233 Ill. 272, 84 NE 218; State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Instruction disapproved. State v. Kaufmann [S. D.] 118 NW 337. Charge on reasonable doubt and burden of proof approved. Brinegar v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 475. Charge authorizing acquittal for reasonable doubt of innocence properly refused. Parker v. State [Ala.] 45 S 248. Charge correct, and burden of proof not improperly shifted. State v. Owens, 79 S. C. 125, 60 SE 305. Instruction held not ground for reversal, though not to be commended. Clements v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 271. Instructions not erroneous or misleading taken as a whole. State v. King [Wash.] 94 P 663. Charge on quantum of proof and reasonable doubt not erroneous. State v. Brown, 79 S. C. 390, 60 SE 945. Charge not erroneous in absence of written request for further instruction. Riley v. State, 3 Ga. App. 534, 60 SE 274. Instruction: "By the term 'reasonable doubt' is meant a doubt that has a reason for it. It is a doubt that you can give a reason for." Held reversible error. Gibbons v. Ter. [Okl.] 96 P 466. Not improper to refuse request that jury must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that certain witnesses did not tell the truth, where court properly charged that guilt must be shown beyond a reasonable doubt upon all the evidence. State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. Count need not charge that guilt must appear to a "moral certainty;" charge as to reasonable doubt proper. People v. Coulon, 151 Mich. 200, 14 Det. Leg. N. 907, 114 NW 1013. Instruction using language "by reasonable doubt is meant a doubt that has a reason for it; it is a doubt you can give a reason for," held prejudicial error. Abbott v. Ter. [Okl.] 94 P 179. Having charged on weight which might be given prisoner's statement, not error in defining reasonable doubt to state that it might arise from such statement. Jordan v. State, 130 Ga. 406, 60 SE 1063. Instruction that a reasonable doubt may be raised by "ingenuity of counsel upon any reasonable hypothesis consistent with the evidence, properly refused. Strobhar v. State [Fla.] 47 S 4. Charge that "if there is one single fact proved to the satisfaction of the jury which is inconsistent with the defendant's guilt, this is sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt, and the jury should acquit," held proper; error to refuse it. Walker v. State [Ala.] 45 S 640. Properly refused: "If any one of the jury have a reasonable doubt growing out of the evidence as to whether or not any material allegation of the indictment has been proven, you must acquit." McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321. Instruction that "reasonable doubt" must be founded on same evidence presented in the case erroneous because it excludes reasonable doubts arising from lack or want of evidence. State v. Andrews [N. J. Law] 71 A 109. Instruction that "reasonable doubt is a doubt must arise from the evidence, or lack of evidence, and for which some reason can be given," held improper but not reversible error. Griggs v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 572. Instruction on reasonable doubt held not objectionable as leading jury to believe that rule as to reasonable doubt applies only where persons are unjustly accused of crime. Cook v. State, 169 Ind. 430, 82 NE 1047. Requested instruction on reasonable doubt requiring absolute certainty in proof of guilt properly refused; moral certainty only required. People v. Bonifacio, 190 N. Y. 150, 82 NE 1098.

23. Failure to define word "deliberately" in perjury case not error, where general charge covered point that accused should be acquitted if he made statement by mistake or under agitation. Clay v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 555, 107 SW 1129.

24. Charge on insanity as defense approved. Commonwealth v. Lewis [Pa.] 71

Cautionary instructions See 10 C. L. 170 limiting the effect of evidence,[20] or requiring corroboration,[27] should be given when the evidence is such as to require them, and it is proper for the court to correct any erroneous impressions which might arise from argument of counsel,[28] but no instruction is required as to matters well known to the jurors and as to which they could not be misled.[29] The giving of cautionary instructions rests largely in discretion.[30]

(§ 10) F. Custody of jury, conduct and deliberations. See 10 C. L. 170—Whether misconduct of jurors, or acts or language of the court or acts or language of the court or deputies or others during the trial and deliberations of the jury, are such as to call for a reversal of the judgment or the granting of a new trial depends upon the circumstances. Whether accused has been injured is the test.[31] In the notes are

A 18. Instructions construed as a whole held proper on defense of insanity and burden of proof thereon. People v. Casey, 231 Ill. 261, 83 NE 278. Instructions on insanity as defense approved; others criticized. State v. Porter [Mo.] 111 SW 529. Instruction that if defendant introduces evidence sufficient to raise a doubt as to his sanity, state must prove sanity beyond a reasonable doubt, proper. Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850. Instruction on mental condition of accused as defense proper and applicable to evidence. Id. Charge on defense of insanity held not erroneous to prejudice of accused. Rusk v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 338, 110 SW 58.

25. Charge on alibi approved. Tinsley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 91, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 356, 106 SW 347; Benge v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 361, 107 SW 831. Charge on burden of proof as to alibi approved. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Charge on alibi sufficient; request properly refused. Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370. Instruction: "Law does not require that defendant prove alibi beyond reasonable doubt or even by preponderance of evidence, but if evidence offered upon that point where considered with all other evidence raises reasonable doubt, defendant should be acquitted," held subject to criticism but not reversible error under circumstancee of case. Gent v. People, 133 Ill. App. 159. Charge that evidence of alibi should be considered with other evidence, and that if evidence as a whole raises a reasonable doubt of guilt, accused should be acquitted, approved. Failure to charge that burden is on accused to establish alibi is not ground for reversal. Smith v. State, 3 Ga. App. 803, 61 SE 737. General charge on alibi proper; special requested charge too restrictive. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1031.

26. Proper to limit effect of evidence by instruction. People v. Hagenow, 236 Ill. 514, 86 NE 370. Where impeaching testimony cannot be considered for any other purpose, a charge limiting it to that purpose is not necessary. Thompson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 536. Where evidence is admissible only as matter of impeachment, it is error to refuse an instruction so limiting the effect of the evidence. Vanhouser v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 602, 108 SW 387. Testimony admitted only for impeaching purposes should be limited by the court to such purpose. Poison v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1398, 108 SW 844. Where evidence is admitted for restricted purposes, it is not error to instruct as to the limits within which it may be considered. People v. Casey, 231 Ill. 261, 83 NE 278. Charge on proof of former conviction erroneous because not clearly limiting such proof to issue of accused's credibility. Franklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 388, 110 SW 64. Court should instruct that proof of conviction of another felony can be considered only on issue of accused's credibility. Ochsner v. Com. [Ky.] 109 SW 326. No instruction limiting the effect of testimony need be given when it also tends to prove the main fact. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 299.

27. Where there were only two witnesses and both were accomplices, and their testimony was not supported by independent testimony or corroborating circumstances, failure to give a cautionary instruction on the weight to be given testimony of accomplices was prejudicial error. O'Brien v. People, 42 Colo. 40, 94 P 284.

28. Instruction, called forth by appeal to jury by counsel for accused, intended to prevent verdict on sentimental grounds, held not erroneous. State v. Malloy, 79 S. C. 76, 60 SE 228. Where counsel argued that if accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity court could send him to asylum, court properly instructed that he could not do so, the statute authorizing such action having been declared unconstitutional. State v. Banner [N. C.] 63 SE 84.

29. Not necessary for court to instruct that hypothetical questions to experts are not evidence of the truth of facts stated. State v. Daly, 210 Mo. 664, 109 SW 53. The court need not explain language used in the indictment which would be understood by men of ordinary intelligence and understanding. State v. Bresee, 137 Iowa, 673, 114 NW 45. Where ruling of court excluding certain testimony was made near close of case, just before giving instructions, and in presence of jury, held not error to fail to again advise jury in charge to disregard such testimony. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36.

30. The giving of cautionary instructions is usually a matter of discretion with the trial court, and unless an appellate court can see from the facts that a fair trial was not had owing to failure to give such instructions, a reversal will not result. Minor v. State [Fla.] 45 S 816.

31. While investigation into charges of misconduct of the jury should be full and collected decisions relating to such matters as separation of jurors,[32] admonitions to jurors by the court,[33] their custody and conduct,[34] mode of living and place of abode,[35] and amusements,[36] newspaper comment,[37] remarks of bystanders in hearing of jury,[38] attempts to influence jurors,[39] misconduct of deputy in charge of jury,[40] qualification of officer in charge,[41] requests by jury for testimony [42] or bill of particulars,[43] taking evidence to the jury room,[44] sending jury back for further deliberation,[45] the length of time the jury may properly be kept out,[46] and their discharge.[47]

searching, a trial really fair and proper should not be set aside for the mere suspicion or appearance of irregularity shown to have done no actual injury. Commonwealth v. Lombardi [Pa.] 70 A 122. Where misconduct of a juror is relied on as a cause of new trial, the showing of misconduct must be such as to indicate prejudice to the party complaining in order to throw upon the state the burden of explanation. Mere showing that juror, name unknown, was called out by a stranger and handed sum of money not sufficient. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36. Misconduct of jury in discussing former verdict not ground for reversal where evidence supported conviction, unless it clearly appears that accused was prejudiced. Smith v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 344, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 845, 106 SW 1161. No prejudice where only result was to make two jurors who favored death penalty agree to life sentence. Id.

32. Separation of jury, not shown to be prejudicial, not reversible error, court not having intended to make order that they be kept together. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. Separation of jurors, after order of court that they be kept together, held not cause for reversal where affidavits showed separations to be for innocent purposes. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Where court exercised discretion and allowed nine jurors selected to separate, burden was on accused to show that they heard remarks prejudicial to him and that they were influenced thereby. Reeves v. State, 84 Ark. 569, 106 SW 945.

33. Presumed that court properly admonished jury before allowing them to separate; failure to do so not prejudicial in absence of some showing. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309.

34. Evidence insufficient to show misconduct of jurors in excessive drinking during trial. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Not reversible error for juror to say that question had been asked a number of times and to tell judge that jury wanted to hear the evidence. Kennedy v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 83, 109 SW 313. Held not ground for new trial that jurors took meals in common dining room of hotel, sat on balcony and spoke to passersby, and were shaved by a barber, two tipstaves being always present, and it being admitted that the trial was never discussed by them with third persons. Commonwealth v. Lombardi [Pa.] 70 A 122. Mere fact that jury passed and saw place of killing as testified to by witness not ground for reversal. Sims v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 443, 106 SW 214. That juror visited outhouse where crime was charged to have been committed not a cause for reversal, it not appearing that he went there for any improper purpose. State v. Gage [Iowa] 116 NW 596.

35. Improper for jurors trying a case to board at home of prosecuting attorney who has charge of it. Napier v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 635, 110 SW 842.

36. Allowing the jury in a capital case to be taken in a body to a theatrical performance is disapproved (State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614), but will not be held prejudicial error unless it is shown that improper influences were thus brought to bear upon them (Id.). No prejudice where jury attended minstrel show, did not separate, and had no communication with others. Id.

37. Fact that local newspaper commented on case during trial, and that jury was allowed to separate, will not be ground for discharging the jury unless it appears that the jurors, or some of them, read such comments and were so impressed thereby as to be disqualified for service. State v. Hoffman, 120 La. 949, 45 S 951.

38. Remark of bystander in hearing of jury not prejudicial when subject-matter was cleared up by evidence beyond question. State v. Hoffman, 120 La. 949, 45 S 951.

39. Where during trial of criminal case the court is informed of an alleged attempt to influence one of the jurors, the court may stop proceedings long enough to examine juror, and continue case if satisfied that no harm has been done. Evidence held to show juror was uninfluenced and to sustain lower court's conduct. Commonwealth v. Tilly, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 35.

40. Reversal required where deputy sheriff, in charge of jury, said to two jurors who were holding out for acquittal that they were hard headed and were holding out against ten men of brains. Booker v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 744.

41. That the officer appointed by the court to have charge of the jury was not sworn does not of itself constitute prejudicial error requiring the granting of a new trial. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36.

42. That request of jury for certain testimony was not at once complied with, stenographer not being present, not error, jury having returned verdict without it after being told it would be read to them as soon as he could be brought. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 364, 107 SW 355.

43. The court may permit the jury upon their request to have a bill of particulars during their deliberations. Cooke v. People, 134 Ill. App. 41.

44. Proper for jury to take demonstrative evidence out with them. Bottle. Phillips v. State [Ala.] 47 S 245.

45. Held not error for court to ask jury to return to jury room and make effort to agree after they had come in third time, and at such third time only asked to be discharged when foreman on being asked replied that they were not suffering seriously

Any communication between court and jury while the jury are deliberating, without the consent of the parties, or in their absence, is reversible error.[48] The verdict must rest solely upon the evidence, and a reversal will result if it appears that the jurors discussed and considered other matters.[49] Where the prosecution claims the right to have an elisor appointed to take charge of the jury, under the California practice, defendant has a right to be heard as to the qualifications of the sheriff and coroner and the proposed elisor.[50]

(§ 10) G. Verdict.[See 10 C. L. 172]—The verdict must be responsive to the information or indictment[51] and the issues submitted,[52] and should be certain, positive from their confinement. Commonwealth v. Martin, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 451. No error where witness' testimony was re-read to jury, and court refused to hear a juror's testimony as to their disagreement, jury having again retired and returned verdict of guilty. Harrolson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 544. Further charge by court, on jury returning, as to desirability of arriving at some verdict, and direct them to retire for further deliberation, held not coercive. People v. Coulon, 151 Mich. 200, 14 Det. Leg. N. 907, 114 NW 1013. Case was submitted to jury on Friday. Next day court told jury he would soon leave and told them they could separate in case they reached an agreement and return a sealed verdict, and that he would return at 7:30 Monday evening. Jury said there was a chance of agreement. They returned verdict three hours later before court adjourned. Held verdict not coerced. Gebhardt v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 290.

46. Jury was out 17 hours, received further instructions, and then were out 14 hours. Claim that they were kept together an unreasonable length of time not tenable. State v. Richardson, 137 Iowa, 591, 115 NW 220.

47. The discharge of a jury before the end of the term without defendant's consent, and without any necessary or legal warrant, entitles defendants to a discharge. Dockstader v. People, 43 Colo. 437, 97 P 254. A minute entry by the clerk, without order or direction of the court, that jury was discharged because unable to agree, was of no force or effect. Id.

48. Judge stepped to door of jury room in answer to knock, and being asked as to nature of offense and what he could do, said it was a minor offense punishable by fine of not over $500 or imprisonment for not over one year, and that he could fine or suspend sentence. Reversible error. People v. Bowers, 111 NYS 623. It is prejudicial error as a matter of law for the judge to have any conversation or communication with the jury, in the jury room during their deliberations, in the absence of defendant and his counsel. New trial necessary where judge was told jurors wanted to communicate with him, and he went to the jury room, knocked, and opened the door and on being told jury could not agree asked them to consider further, door remaining open. State v. Murphy [N. D.] 115 NW 84.

49. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 823, providing that effect of new trial is to place cause in same position as if it had never been tried, etc., discussion by some of jurors while deliberating of the sentence received on previous trial is reversible error. Casey v. State, 51 Tex. Cr. App. 433, 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 351, 102 SW 725. Judgment reversed where compromise verdict of guilty was obtained by one of the jurors stating that he had just recognized accused as one who had been acquitted of charge of carrying a pistol, though in fact guilty, that he was bad man, etc. Helvenston v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 636, 111 SW 959. Reversible error where jury discussed and considered matters not in evidence, such as credibility of witness personally known to a juror, fact that accused was under other indictments for similar offenses and willingnesses of jurors to sign petitions for pardon. Battles v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 202, 109 SW 195. New trial granted where jurors discussed accused's character and life, the failure of his wife to testify, and matters resting in a juror's personal knowledge, these matters not being in evidence. Hall v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 250, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 590, 106 SW 379.

Proof not sufficient to show misconduct of jury in commenting on failure of accused to testify. Stepp v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 158, 109 SW 1093. Casual reference to former conviction of defendant not cause for reversal, no discussion of it having taken place in jury room. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 107 SW 540.

50. Error to act on ex parte affidavits of prosecution and refuse to allow defendant to file counter-affidavits. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407.

51. Where indictment charges defendants with living together in open state of fornication and adultery, verdict finding one defendant guilty of fornication and other of adultery is not responsive. Janssen v. People, 131 Ill. App. 73. Verdict finding defendant "guilty of robbery" and assessing punishment at confinement in penitentiary for life held responsive to indictment charging simple robbery and robbery with deadly weapon. Tabor v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 387, 107 SW 1116. Under indictment charging grand larceny (stealing property worth more than $5), verdict finding defendant guilty as charged and assessing value of property at $4.35 was for petit larceny and sentence for that offense was proper. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 565. In prosecution under Laws 1901, p. 197, c. 105, § 1, penalizing sale of mortgaged chattels, a verdict finding defendant "guilty of crime of grand larceny as in manner and form charged" is void for uncertainty where information does not charge grand larceny nor contain language intended to describe that offense, nor state any act done by defendant, nor and free from ambiguity [53] as to the offense,[54] and the person or persons convicted.[55] The verdict should be read in connection with the indictment or information,[56] and so construed as to give effect to the manifest intention of the jury.[57] All fair intendments should be made to sustain verdicts,[58] and if the language used clearly manifests the jury's intention, a verdict is not vitiated by informalities,[59] such as bad spelling and faulty grammar,[60] or surplusage.[61] Where defendant is found guilty of two offenses, punishment should be assessed for each separately.[62] A verdict "guilty as charged" must be construed as a conviction of the offense charged and submitted by the court's instructions.[63] A verdict of guilty should show the count on which it is based, where there is more than one,[64] but a general verdict of guilty is not contrary to law if there is evidence sufficient to authorize it on any or all counts.[65] Upon an indictment containing more than one count, all charging misdemeanors, a general verdict of guilty is to be construed as convicting defendants on all the counts.[66] Where the indictment states but one offense, though it contains the value of the property concerned. State v. Braden [Kan.] 96 P 840.

52. People v. Lemen, 231 Ill. 193, 83 NE 147. Where court submitted issues of aggravated and simple assault, verdict finding defendant guilty, and assessing punishment at fine of $25, is too indefinite, since the degree of assault must be specified. Moody v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 232, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 334, 105 SW 1127.

53. Washington v. State [Fla.] 46 S 417; Morris v. State [Fla.] 45 S 456; Pugh v. State [Fla.] 45 S 1023. The verdict should be regarded with reference to the intention of the jury, and effect given accordingly, and if the verdict is not sufficient clearly to show their intention, it is fatally defective. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410. A test of certainty is whether the court can give judgment upon it. Washington v. State [Fla.] 46 S 417.

54. A verdict finding defendant guilty of one act "or" another is fatally defective where either constitutes the offense charged. State v. Grossman [Mo.] 113 SW 1074. Verdict must contain, either in itself or by reference to the indictment, every material fact constituting the crime. Verdict fatally defective because not containing or showing finding on essential elements of crime. People v. Lemen, 231 Ill. 193, 83 NE 147. Verdict held fatally defective: "We the jury find the defendant guilty of aggravated assault with intent to murder. So say we all." Two separate offenses are included under Florida statutes. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410. Verdict in murder case, reading: "We, the jury, find defendant guilty as charged, but cannot agree as to punishment, but do agree to ask the mercy of the court," was held too indefinite; court should have required jury to clear it up. Sykes v. State [Miss.] 45 S 838.

55. Where verdict found each defendant guilty of a certain crime by name, use of words "defendants" was unnecessary. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 46 S 176. Accused indicted as "Jno. M." and identity of person pleading to indictment was not questioned and defendant himself used names "Jno. M.," and "John M." indifferently in record. Verdict and judgment convicting him as "John M." not error, though verdict did not refer to him as "defendant." Id.

56. Edwards v. State [Fla.] 45 S 21. Verdict so construed held to find that property burned was insured and that burning was to defraud insurance company. People v. Morley [Cal. App.] 97 P 84.

57. People v. Morley [Cal. App.] 97 P 84.

58. Morris v. State [Fla.] 45 S 456.

59. Verdict finding defendant to be an "habitual criminal," etc., as charged, held sufficient finding of prior conviction alleged in indictment, though informal. State v. Baldwin [Mo.] 113 SW 1123.

60. Verdict of guilty of "assault with intent to murdery" held sufficient, intent of jury being clear. Bryant v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1009. "We the juror find the defendant guilty as charged" held sufficient. Morris v. State [Fla.] 45 S 456. Verdict reading: "We find defendant guilty of murder in the first drgee" held sufficient. Pugh v. State [Fla.] 45 S 1023. Where information charged larceny and also set up a former offense, a verdict in following words was held to support judgment and sentence as for conviction for second offense: "We the jury find the defendant guilty of 2nd larceny." Henderson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 151.

61. Verdict of guilty of assault and battery with intent to commit manslaughter is verdict of guilty of assault and battery; remainder is surplusage. Ex parte Burden [Miss.] 45 S 1; Burden v. State [Miss.] 45 S 705.

62. Verdict invalid for uncertainty where it found defendant guilty of burglary and larceny, but assessed punishment as a term of years without separating punishment for each offense. State v. McCune, 209 Mo. 399, 107 SW 1058; State v. Logan, 209 Mo. 401, 107 SW 1058.

63. So held where one charge was withdrawn from jury by court. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 116 NW 259, 571. It must be assumed, on appeal, that the verdict was based upon the charge submitted to the jury by the court and not upon one expressly withdrawn from the jury. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 114 NW 505. If the charge submitted does not constitute an offense, a verdict of guilty and judgment thereon must be reversed. Id.

64. Verdict held to show counts on which accused were found guilty. State v. Pigg [Kan.] 97 P 859.

65. Howell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1001.

66, 67, 68, 69, 70. Tooke v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 917.

a number of counts variously stating the manner of committing the offense, a general verdict of guilty will be upheld as against the objection that it is contrary to the evidence, if any of the counts are supported by proof.[67] If the indictment states in different counts several distinct offenses, a general verdict of guilty cannot be upheld unless there is sufficient proof to sustain a conviction upon each count.[68] The jury may legally acquit as to some of the counts and convict as to others.[69] Where there are several counts charging more than one distinct misdemeanor, the better practice is to require a separate verdict as to each count not abandoned or withdrawn, and the jury should be instructed to return a general verdict of guilty only in case defendant is found guilty on every count.[70] Where several persons are jointly indicted but the evidence as to acts committed by each differs, one may be convicted though others are acquitted.[71] A special finding under erroneous instructions will not invalidate a general verdict and judgment of guilty where another special finding justifies the verdict.[72] A defective verdict need not be entered, but the jury should be required to correct it,[73] or the court may correct it with the consent of the jury.[74] Where this is not done, the verdict must be set aside and a new trial ordered.[75] Where the verdict, fairly construed, finds defendant not guilty,[76] the court has no power to amend it to the prejudice of accused.[77] The verdict must be returned by a jury of twelve.[78]

Receiving verdict.[79]

§ 11. New trial, arrest of judgment, and writ of error coram nobis. See 10 C. L. 175

Grounds for new trial in general. See 10 C. L. 176—New trial should be granted only where it appears that substantial rights of accused have been violated so as to deprive

71. Larceny of town orders, several persons participating in scheme, but evidence showing cashing of orders only by one convicted. Vought v. State [Wis.] 114 NW 518.

72. State v. Martin [N. J. Law] 69 A 1091.

73. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410. Where the verdict returned is improper and contrary to the charge of the court, it is proper to direct the jury to retire and consider their verdict further. As where verdict was guilty of murder in first degree and assessed punishment of 99 years in penitentiary. Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 761. No error where verdict was signed only with foreman's name, the word "foreman" being omitted, and court directed jury to return and sign it. State v. Gibson, 120 La. 343, 45 S 271. It would have been valid without the word "foreman." Id.

74. Not error for court to add line to verdict, inserting name of offense found by jury where jury consented and said it was their verdict when read to them. Tinsley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 91, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 356, 106 SW 347.

NOTE. Right to amend sealed verdict after separation of jurors: While in many jurisdictions a sealed verdict in a civil action may be amended under certain circumstances by the court or jury after separation of the jury, and there is not lacking text book authority for the general right to amend such verdicts irrespective of the nature of the action (Proffatt, Jury Trial, §§ 456, 460; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 1003, A. & E. Enc. Pl. & Prac. 1011), the weight of American authority is against such practice in criminal proceedings. In Pehlman v. State, 115 Ind. 131, 17 NE 270, the jury was allowed to reconsider its sealed verdict and correct an obvious omission which rendered the verdict inoperative, and in Hechter v. State, 94 Md. 429, 50 A 1041, 56 L. R. A. 457, an omission was supplied to make the sealed and the oral verdict correspond, but in neither instance was there a substantial change in the general findings and in the latter the sealed verdict would have been good without correction. It is to be noted that the case of Beal v. Cunningham, 42 Me. 362, which has been cited as authority for permitting the jury to reverse its sealed verdict by correction after separation, was a civil action. On the other hand the right to amend a sealed verdict after separation of the jury in a criminal trial has been denied in the following cases. Allen v. State, 85 Wis. 22, 54 NW 999; Farley v. People, 138 Ill. 97, 27 NE 927; Koch v. State, 126 Wis. 470, 106 NW 531, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1086; Commonwealth v. Dorus, 108 Mass. 488; Commonwealth v. Tobin, 125 Mass. 203, 28 Am. Rep. 220. In the last case the distinction between criminal and civil actions as affecting the rule is clearly drawn. Corrections have, however, been permitted in a criminal action where the error in the verdict was pointed out and reconsideration took place before actual separation of the jury. State v. Clementson, 69 Wis. 628, 35 NW 56.—Ed.

75. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

76. Verdict, though informal, so construed. State v. Whisenant [N. C.] 63 SE 91.

77. State v. Whisenant [N. C.] 63 SE 91.

78. Accused cannot waive a trial by a jury of twelve and consent to a jury of eleven (Jennings v. State, 134 Wis. 307, 114 NW 492. See, also, Jury, 10 C. L. 541), and a verdict by a jury of eleven, and judgment therson, are invalid (Id.).

79. See 10 C. L. 175; also ante, § 10a, Accused Must be Present, etc.

him of a fair trial.[80] Prejudicial misconduct of the jury,[81] or the prosecution,[82] and manifest insufficiency of evidence to support the verdict,[83] have been held grounds for new trial. The reading by jurors of unfair and highly colored newspaper articles, calculated to prejudice them, constitutes ground for new trial in a proper case,[84] but may be waived by accused.[85] Misconduct of counsel,[86] absence of a witness,[87] surprise [88] and disqualification of a juror,[89] are not grounds for new trial when they have not been properly raised during the trial. Error in ruling on demurrer,[90] or motion for change of venue,[91] and matters defensive in nature,[92] are not available as grounds of the motion. The matter rests largely in the trial court's

80. Failure of record to show that sheriff, at close of case, was sworn when he took charge of jury, not ground for new trial. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057.

81. New trial granted where jurors discussed matters concerning accused's life and character not connected with offense charged nor shown in evidence. Hall v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 250, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 590, 106 SW 379.

82. Comment by state's counsel on failure of accused to take the stand, and refusal of court to grant a new trial or instruct jury to disregard the argument, objection being duly made, is ground for new trial. Griffin v. State, 3 Ga. App. 476, 60 SE 277. In prosecution for gaming, the act of the prosecutor, without the knowledge of defendant or his counsel, in entering the jury room and laying on a table a pack of cards which had been identified as the ones used by defendant, but not offered or introduced in evidence, was ground for new trial. Griffin v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 685.

83. Refusal to grant new trial error, there being no proof of corpus delicti. Varner v. State, 3 Ga. App. 605, 60 SE 283. New trial should be granted if it appears to court difficult to reconcile verdict with justice and manifest weight of evidence. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 47 S 485. Verdict held contrary to law because evidence as whole justified defendant's act. New trial should have been granted. Lewis v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1068. Proper to deny new trial, verdict being based on conflicting evidence. Stanley v. Com. [Va.] 63 SE 10.

84. See cases cited in which new trials were granted in United States v. Marrin, 159 F 767.

85. Where accused told counsel to withdraw motion for withdrawal of juror, after examining jurors, and learning that same had read newspaper articles. United States v. Marrin, 159 F 767.

86. Misconduct of counsel, in argument, on which no action or ruling of court was asked, not a ground for new trial. Hill v. State, 169 Ind. 561, 83 NE 243.

87. Absence of witness not ground for new trial, no postponement of trial being requested. Shows v. State [Miss.] 45 S 705. Denial of new trial on ground of absence of witnesses not error, where no continuance was asked for and accused did not take stand in support of theory which absent witnesses would have sustained, though he could have done so. Nickelson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 631, 111 SW 414.

88. Where evidence was offered to prove commission of offense on day other than that charged, and accused makes no claim of surprise on the trial, does not ask for continuance, and reverses no exception, he is not entitled to a new trial on the ground of surprise. State v. Sloan, 120 La. 170, 45 S 50.

89. That juror had served at preceding term not ground for new trial, there having been no challenge. Morris v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806. In prosecution for burglarizing bank, where motion for new trial is on ground that a juror was related to a stockholder of bank, which accused or counsel did not know until after verdict, proof must be that relationship existed at time of trial, and proof cannot be made by juror's affidavit. Eaker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 99. Code D. C. § 919, providing that no verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might have been assigned as ground for challenge of juror before jury was sworn except in case of bias such as would have disqualified him, etc., does not affect discretionary power of trial court to deny motion for new trial based on alleged disqualification of juror. Paolucci v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 217. Held no abuse of discretion to deny motion for new trial based on uncontradicted affidavits of juryman's wife and another showing declarations of animosity on part of juryman toward nationality of accused occurring months prior to trial, where there was no showing of prejudice against accused and he stated on examination that he had no prejudice against persons of nationality in question. Id. Accused may not show that juror, after being sworn, said that accused was guilty and should be punished, on motion for new trial, this not constituting misconduct but going to his qualification as juror, and latter not being ground for new trial. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Where attorney for accused knew when a juror was called and sworn that he was not the one whose name was in the box and who had been summoned, and he did not challenge the juror, his disqualification was not ground for new trial after verdict. People v. Duncan [Cal. App.] 96 P 414.

90. Wheeler v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 409. Overruling of demurrer is not ground for motion for new trial. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525.

91. Refusal of motion for change of venue cannot be made ground for new trial. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840.

92. Where the indictment charges a prior conviction for the same offense, a conditional pardon for the former offense is available as a defense only in mitigation of sentence, and must be proved to be availed of for any purpose. Henderson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 151.

discretion.[93] A new trial cannot be granted after verdict of not guilty.[94] The California statute authorizing grant of new trial where records have been destroyed and motion for new trial was pending does not apply where motion for new trial had been made and denied and an appeal taken.[95]

Newly-discovered evidence.[See 10 C. L. 178]—Motions based on this ground are not favored [96] and are addressed to the discretion of the trial court.[97] To require granting of the motion, it must appear that the alleged newly discovered evidence was not previously known,[98] that due diligence had been used to discover it,[99] that the evidence is material [1] and not merely cumulative [2] or impeaching,[3] that it is probably true,[4] and likely to change the result of the trial.[5] Evidence is not merely cumu-

93. Where judge appears to be in doubt on grounds for new trial, his ruling thereon is discretionary. State v. McCoomer, 79 S. C. 63, 60 SE 237. Question of alleged misconduct of prosecuting attorney having been submitted to trial court, on conflicting evidence, decision of that court, supported by evidence, was not subject to review. Holmes v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 99.

Whether ordinary diligence has been used to discover the new testimony must be determined from the facts of each particular case. Showing of diligence sufficient. Orr v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 676. Sufficient showing for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence; new trial should have been granted. White v. State [Miss.] 45 S 611. Affidavit held not to show due diligence to obtain absent testimony. Shows v. State [Miss.] 45 S 705. Where affiants in affidavits for new trial were present during trial, having been subpoenaed, due diligence to procure alleged newly discovered evidence was not shown. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525.

1. Newly discovered evidence, which is immaterial, incompetent, or merely impeaching in character, is not ground for new trial. Fort v. State, 3 Ga. App. 448, 60 SE 282.

New evidence immaterial in intoxicating liquor case. Merrinweather v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 410, 108 SW 661.

Newly discovered evidence held material and ground for new trial in homicide case. Pate v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 759. Newly discovered material evidence ground for new trial, due diligence having been used. State v. Brown, 121 La. 599, 46 S 664. Evidence tending to show that decedent committed suicide held ground for new trial in homicide case, where evidence was circumstantial. Wilson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 436, 110 SW 444. Evidence, tending to show defendant's absence from place of killing at the time, sufficiently material to require grant of new trial. Lopez v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 226, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 348, 106 SW 336. Where the evidence raises grave doubt as to defendant's guilt, the general rule excluding consideration of newly discovered evidence, which is merely cumulative or in rebuttal of the state's case, as ground for new trial, should be relaxed. New trial granted. Adams v. State [Fla.] 46 S 152. New trial should be granted where witness who testifies to confession makes affidavit that he had another person in mind, and that his testimony did not refer to defendant but to another person of the same name. Shropshire v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 470. In prosecution for shooting a person, evidence, by the person alleged to have been shot, that accused never shot or shot at him, and that he had never been shot at in his life, is, when affiant is vouched for, substantial, and sufficient ground for new trial. Orr v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 676.

Evidence held purely cumulative. Young v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 707; State v. Bridgham [Wash.] 97 P 1096. Evidence doubtful in character and merely cumulative. Clements v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 271.

3. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525; Coppage v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 113; State v. Estes, 209 Mo. 288, 107 SW 1059; Harralson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 544; Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090. Where affidavits setting out newly discovered evidence were contradicted, and sought only to contradict prosecuting witness by proof of statements by her out of court, petition for new trial denied. State v. Lynch, 28 R. I. 463, 68 A 315.

4. The alleged newly discovered evidence must bear such marks of credibility as to warrant a jury in believing it. New evidence incredible on its face. People v. Henry, 111 NYS 1005. Newly discovered evidence, inconsistent with accused's testimony and improbable, and bearing evidence of being an invention, not ground for new trial. People v. Poole, 111 NYS 258. New trial properly refused where new evidence was cumulative, probably not true in light of record, and no diligence in obtaining it was shown. Biddy v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 692.

5. Parker v. State, 3 Ga. App. 336, 59 SE 823; Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 113; State v. Estes, 209 Mo. 288, 107 SW 1059. Evidence

lative when it relates to a particular fact concerning which no witness testified,[6] though there was other evidence tending to support the same contention.[7] Where two persons are jointly indicted and one is tried and convicted, and subsequently the other is tried and acquitted, a new trial will be granted the former to obtain the testimony of the latter, where the new evidence appears to be competent, relevant, and material.[8]

Practice on motion.[See 10 C. L. 181]—The motion[9] or petition[10] and the supporting affidavits[11] must be filed within the time allowed by law, must state specifically the grounds relied upon[12] and support them by a showing of facts[13] properly made,[14] and must otherwise substantially comply with statutory requirements.[15] must be of very material character and well calculated to change the result. Ludwig v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 345. Evidence held not such that it would probably change result on new trial. Nioum v. Com. [Ky.] 108 SW 945. Newly discovered evidence held not to warrant new trial. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 349; Edwards v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 502. Alleged new evidence held immaterial; not likely to change verdict; due diligence not shown. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 149, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 106 SW 144. Supreme court will not reverse judgment refusing new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, where such evidence is only cumulative and impeaching and of such character that it would not constrain a different verdict. Drane v. State, 130 Ga. 349, 60 SE 863. When such evidence is adduced from witnesses properly vouched for, and it appears there was no want of diligence in discovering the new evidence, which may probably cause a different result on another hearing, it is error to refuse a new trial. Grow v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 669. That trial judge did not consider that alleged new evidence would change result was immaterial, the effect of that evidence being for jury. State v. Brown, 121 La. 599, 46 S 664.

9. Court has no power to pass on motion for new trial or in arrest unless filed during term at which trial was had. State v. Fawcett, 212 Mo. 729, 111 SW 562. Motion for new trial must be filed within four days after verdict or it will not be considered on appeal. State v. Chenault, 212 Mo. 132, 110 SW 696. After expiration of term at which accused was convicted and sentenced, court has no power to grant new trial for newly discovered evidence. Saleen v. People, 41 Colo. 317, 92 P 731. Where court adjourns for term after sentencing one convicted of crime, court loses jurisdiction of cause. Id.

10. Newly discovered evidence is ground for new trial, and may be presented by petition within one year, under Court and Practice Act 1905, § 473, though that statute does not specifically refer to criminal judgments. State v. Lynch, 28 R. I. 463, 68 A 315. Inconvenience of allowing such remedy where sentence has been partly executed is no ground for denying it. Id.

11. Ground of new trial, newly discovered evidence, properly overruled, statutory affidavits not being filed. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 231, 106 SW 135. Proof in support of motion for new trial must be filed during the term. Misconduct of jury in discussing failure of accused to testify. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128.

12. Motion for new trial must specify errors relied on, and grounds not so pointed out will not be considered. State v. Scott [Mo.] 113 SW 1069. Assertion in such motion that conviction is against the law is insufficient. Id. New trial properly refused, where only general grounds were raised, insufficient to raise any question as to admissibility of evidence. Hart v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 511. Grounds of motion for new trial should be complete within themselves. Appellate court will not search record for evidence or error; it must be specifically pointed out. Fouraker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 116.

13. Showing for new trial held not to show separation of jury, or any misconduct by them. State v. Baker, 209 Mo. 444, 108 SW 6. Affidavit for new trial should set out proposed evidence, and affidavit of witness should be presented if possible. Slater v. U. S. [Okl.] 98 P 110. Due diligence should be shown in affidavit. Id. The facts claimed to constitute such diligence must be set out; mere general statements and conclusions are insufficient. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779. Affidavits in support of new trial should state facts showing reasonable diligence to obtain alleged new evidence. Ward v. State, 85 Ark. 179, 107 SW 677.

14. The affidavit of the witness himself should be produced or his absence accounted for, where ground is new evidence. State v. Estes, 209 Mo. 288, 107 SW 1059. Motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence was not verified, witnesses were not named, nor their affidavits presented. Refusal not reviewable. Sykes v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 165, 108 SW 1179. A motion for new trial on account of misconduct of the jury must be based on affidavits (Code, § 3756. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36), and leave to summon witnesses to testify on the hearing is properly refused, no showing as to inability to procure affidavits being made (Id.). To entitle accused to new trial on ground of misconduct of jury shown only by his own affidavit, the affidavit must be explicit, must show whether he was an eyewitness, and why he cannot obtain other affidavits. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057. While motion for new trial may be filed and referred to for grounds, yet it must be made orally and called to court's attention in some way. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

15. After final judgment and expiration of the term, there must be substantial compli-

Affidavits of jurors may be received to sustain but not to impeach their verdict.[16] Holdings relating to the granting of leave to file a motion,[17] amendment thereof,[18] postponement of hearing,[19] and service of rule fixing day for hearing,[20] are given in the notes. Where motion in arrest of judgment precedes motion for new trial, the right to a new trial is waived.[21] The order granting a new trial should specify the ground or grounds on which it is based.[22] If it appears to the court after overruling motion for new trial, or in arrest, that there was irregularity in obtaining judgment he may of his own motion modify or set aside his order, at the same term.[23] In the federal court, a motion for new trial is addressed to the discretion of the court,[24] and the court has power to act any time before final judgment has been entered and at a term subsequent to that in which verdict was rendred.[25] Where a new trial is granted because pleadings are defective, the filing of a new affidavit and information constitues a new case.[26]

A motion in arrest of judgment See 10 C. L. 188 must be predicated upon some defect appearing on the face of the record or pleadings,[27] and where controlled by statute a statutory ground must appear.[28] Alleged errors during the tial,[29] insufficiency of the evidence,[30] question of former conviction [31] or acquittal,[32] or curable defects ance with the statute to give the court further jurisdiction. Johnson v. State [Okl.] 97 P 1059.

16. New trial properly refused where one juror made affidavit to misconduct which was denied by the affidavits of all the other jurors. Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 SE 816. Affidavits that instructions were misunderstood not considered. Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850. Affidavit of a juror, after conviction, that he still believed accused innocent, could not be considered to impeach the verdict. Booker v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 744. Jurors may not attack verdict by stating what they would or might have done with other testimony. Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090. Affidavit of juror that he was influenced by misstatement of law by prosecuting attorney held insufficient to warrant setting verdict aside, where court instructed jury correctly, jurors being sworn to take the law from the court. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 149, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 106 SW 144.

17. Where hearing on motion for delay in filing motion for new trial was postponed, court erred in refusing to allow motion for new trial to be filed because too late. Court should have acted on motion and made it part of record. State v. Lewis, 120 La. 543, 45 S 433.

18. Motion to have endorsed on motion for new trial a certificate of filing prior to the date when it was really filed, being in nature of amendment of motion for new trial, held incompetent. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

19. Application to continue motion for new trial to allow movant to obtain an affidavit as to alleged newly discovered evidence is addressed to sound discretion of trial court. Tinsley v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 93.

20. Where rule nisi fixed hearing on motion for new trial for certain day and directed service on adverse party five days before hearing, and thereafter hearing was postponed and service on adverse party was not had five days before day first fixed but was had five days before actual hearing, error to dismiss motion for new trial for want of service. 27. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525. That accused had been conditionally pardoned for former offense, conviction of which was alleged and proved, not ground for such motion, it not appearing in the record. Henderson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 151. The verdict being a part of the record proper, any defect appearing on the face of it should be determined on a motion in arrest. Edwards v. State [Fla.] 45 S 21. After verdict a judgment will only be arrested for matter appearing in the record which would render the judgment erroneous if given. United States v. Marrin, 159 F 767. Only the indictment and record of the trial can be considered in passing on a motion to arrest judgment, the evidence being no part of the record for this purpose. Id. Objections necessitating a consideration of the evidence must be raised by motion for new trial. Id.

28. Motion to arrest properly denied, no statutory ground being stated. McGinnis v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 525. Under Court and Practice Act 1905, § 301, no motion in arrest can be made except upon jurisdictional grounds. State v. Heffernan, 28 R. I. 477, 68 A 364.

29. Motion in arrest not proper mode of presenting errors in overruling motion for continuance or in allowing separation of jury. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525.

in the accusation [33] cannot be raised by the motion. The motion should be granted if the accusation is insufficient to state an offense,[34] but the sufficiency of the charge will be more liberally construed when so attacked than when attacked by motion or demurrer,[35] and the motion will be denied if any count is good.[36] A mere suggestion of insanity, after trial, not supported by affidavit, is not ground for arresting judgment.[37] Where a motion for new trial has been granted, a motion in arrest of judgment need not be considered.[38]

Writ of error coram nobis. See 10 C. L. 184

§ 12. Sentence and judgment. See 10 C. L. 184—It is generally the court's duty to fix the sentence,[39] though the jury may make recommendations concerning it.[40] It is held proper for the court to allow affidavits in aggravation of the offense of which accused has been found guilty to be read when defendant is called for sentence.[41] Such course is not a denial of defendant's right to be confronted by witnesses against him, since the verdict is not affected.[42] Where a special judge has heard a cause and taken the defendant's plea of guilty, it is reversible error for the regular judge to assume jurisdiction, proceed with the trial, and pronounce judgment.[43] Upon a plea of guilty, the court, and not the jury, must, in Oklahoma, fix the punishment.[44] Where a plea of guilty is entered in a homicide case, accused should be fully advised of the nature and consequences of his act and his rights in the premises before sentence is passed, and usually evidence should be taken to determine the nature and circumstances of the act and the degree of the crime.[45] After plea of guilty, accused cannot complain that sentence is excessive.[46] A sentence and commitment on

33. The invalidity of a count in the information on ground that defendant's name was omitted from blank space provided in the printed form cannot be raised in motion in arrest of judgment after an adverse verdict where it appears defendant's name appears elsewhere in the count and charge is clearly against him. Pfieffer v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 109.

Duplicity cannot be taken advantage of by motion in arrest. State v. Stevens [Vt.] 70 A 1060.

Technical error in form or an imperfection in statement which might be held bad on a motion to quash is not always sufficient, after verdict of guilty, to arrest judgment. City of Ft. Scott v. Dunkerton [Kan.] 96 P 50.

Surplusage in complaint for maintaining nuisance under liquor laws not ground for arresting judgment. City of Ft. Scott v. Dunkerton [Kan.] 96 P 50.

34. Judgment should have been arrested where indictment for larceny failed to allege value of bill of exchange stolen. People v. Silbertrust, 236 Ill. 144, 86 NE 203. Insufficiency of indictment to charge an offense may be first raised by motion in arrest. State v. Hall, 130 Mo. App. 170, 108 SW 1077.

35. Sufficiency of allegations of information will be more liberally construed when attacked by motion in arrest than when raised by demurrer. State v. Johnson [N. D.] 118 NW 230. Information in language of statute stating offense in general language, sufficient though some necessary allegations were made by way of recital or inference. Id.

38. Johnson v. State [Okl.] 97 P 1059.

39. Generally it is court's duty to give sentence, as in larceny case, though jury is authorized in some cases to determine punishment to be imposed. Saleen v. People, 41 Colo. 317, 92 P 731.

40. What weight is to be attached to the jury's recommendation, in felony cases, that defendant be punished as for a misdemeanor, is for the trial judge. He may disregard it and impose any sentence authorized by law. Coppage v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 113. In a misdemeanor case, the defendant may waive his right to have the jury assess the fine. Holland v. People, 132 Ill. App. 449.

41. Within court's discretion in pronouncing sentence. State v. Reeder, 79 S. C. 139, 60 SE 434.

45. Proceedings irregular where plea was made to jury after opening statement for state and jury was allowed to fix punishment of death, and no evidence was taken. State v. Johnson [Okl.] 96 P 26.

46. After plea of guilty to count charging stealing articles of the value of $50, accused is barred from setting up that articles were worth only $20 and that sentence was excessive. State v. Webber [N. J. Law] 68 A 1100.

a legal holiday is void.[47] It is not necessary that the court formally adjudge defendant guilty before pronouncing sentence on the verdict.[48]

The sentence should be definite and certain [49] and should conform to statutory requirements or provisions.[50] Where different counts charge the same offense and there is a conviction on each count, there should be but one sentence on all the counts for the one offense.[51] Where sentence is imposed generally, without application to any particular one of several counts on which accused was convicted, it will be referred to a count which warrants the sentence.[52] A sentence different from the kind or character authorized by law is void.[53] A sentence of the kind authorized by law, but excessive, is not wholly void,[54] but is enforcible to the extent that it is authorized by law.[55] A sentence less than the minimum fixed by law is not void.[56] Where the trial court has imposed an illegal sentence, it has power to substitute a valid sentence, though the illegal sentence has been partly executed.[57] But it cannot set aside a valid sentence and impose a new and different one after defendant has been remanded to jail to await execution of the sentence [58] or after expiration of the term at which sentence was imposed.[59]

In some jurisdictions, sentence may be imposed at a term subsequent to that at which conviction occurred;[60] in others the court has no power to impose sentence at a future term.[61] In Massachusetts the court may, with the consent of defendant, 50. Defendant convicted in Lucas county of violation of anti-trust law (Rev. St. §§ 4427-1 to 4427-12) must be sentenced, if imprisonment is part of penalty, to county jail. Sentence to Toledo workhouse void. Lemmon v. State, 77 Ohio St. 427, 83 NE 608. Sentence to workhouse until a fine imposed and costs are paid held erroneous because omitting statutory provision or until he is discharged therefrom by allowing a credit of sixty cents a day on such fine and costs." Hamilton v. State, 78 Ohio St. 76, 84 NE 601. Under the Michigan indeterminate sentence law the judge is required to fix a minimum sentence and recommend a maximum sentence, and the minimum must not exceed one-half the maximum. Sentence fixing 6 years as minimum and recommending 7 years as maximum held not to comply with law. In re Richards, 150 Mich. 421, 14 Det. Leg. N. 703, 114 NW 348. Such sentence was not void, however, but was valid as sentence of 3 1-2 years as minimum and 7 years maximum. Id. Hence court held no power to set it aside after commitment under it. Id.

57. Ex parte Vitali [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 451, 116 NW 1066.

58. Most court could do was to correct record to make it show valid sentence. In re Richards, 150 Mich. 421, 14 Det. Leg. N. 703, 114 NW 348.

59. When court has legally imposed sentence and the term at which it was imposed has passed, the power of the trial court over it is at an end except for the purpose of enforcement. Exclusive control of sentence is then vested in other officials. Tanner v. Wiggins [Fla.] 45 S 459.

60. So under Texas statute. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124. Where judgment was affirmed without a discovery of the fact that defendant had never been sentenced, the affirmance was of no effect, and court below had jurisdiction to pass sentence at subsequent term when matter was called to its attention. Robinson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 763.

61. Where a case is continued indefinitely after plea of guilty, though the postponement is by agreement of parties, the court has no power to impose sentence at a future term. There was no pretense of proceeding under parole statute, under which sentence after a plea or verdict of guilty, place the case on file where it appears best not to impose sentence at once.[62] The case then stands on the records and may be called up at any time and sentence imposed or other disposition of the case made.[63] But this course may be pursued only where defendant consents. He may insist on final disposition without unreasonable delay [64] and may enforce his right by a resort to mandamus proceedings.[65] Where sentence is not imposed but defendant is placed on probation, where the court deems the object of probation to have been accomplished and punishment unnecessary the cause may be finally dismissed.[66] In North Carolina the court has power to hold the matter of final punishment under consideration during the term and to take further testimony,[67] and where this is done at defendant's request he cannot complain of the sentence finally pronounced.[68] It is held by some courts that a court has inherent power to stay execution of sentence and that consent of accused thereto will be presumed.[69] By others it is held that, though a court has power to suspend or postpone imposition of sentence, it has no power to enter judgment and then suspend execution thereof.[70] The time at which a judgment or sentence shall be carried into effect is, however, no part of the judgment,[71] and the judgment is not invalidated by a void order suspending punishment or staying execution.[72] Sentence of imprisonment can be executed only by suffering actual confinement, unless sentence is remitted,[73] and mere lapse of time without imprisonment is not an execution of the sentence.[74] Hence a convicted defendant who is at liberty and who has not served his sentence may, in the absence of a statute to the contrary, be rearrested as an escape and ordered into custody upon the unexecuted sentence.[75] But it is elsewhere held that where the court makes an illegal order suspending sentence, under which defendant is discharged from cus-could be imposed and then suspended. State v. Hockett, 129 Mo. App. 639, 108 SW 599.

62. This practice is recognized by statute and authorized for all courts, including police court. Marks v. Wentworth, 199 Mass. 44, 85 NE 81.

63. Marks v. Wentworth, 199 Mass. 44, 85 NE 81.

64. Error to continue cause against defendant's objection, he having long been on probation. Marks v. Wentworth, 199 Mass. 44, 85 NE 81.

65. Writ issued requiring police justice to make final disposition of case. Marks v. Wentworth, 199 Mass. 44, 84 NE 81.

66. Though statute does not expressly confer this power. Rev. Laws, c. 217, § 84; c. 220, § 2. Marks v. Wentworth, 199 Mass. 44, 85 NE 81.

67. State v. Stevens, 146 N. C. 679, 61 SE 629.

68. Court gave sentence, but set it aside at defendant's request and heard testimony of doctor, and gave more severe sentence. Second sentence valid. State v. Stevens, 146 N. C. 679, 61 SE 629.

69. Being for his benefit. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188.

70. Execution rests with other officials. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724. While court has power to suspend sentence in proper cases, it has no power to suspend execution of sentence lawfully imposed except for purpose of giving effect to an appeal, or where cumulative sentences are imposed, and in some cases of necessity and emergency. Tanner v. Wiggins [Fla.] 45 S 459. In Oklahoma when a judgment of imprisonment is imposed by a court on plea of guilty or conviction and the same is not stayed as provided by law, court has no power to suspend sentence. Ex parte Clendenning [Okl.] 97 P 650. Defendant should forthwith be committed to the proper officer for incarceration. Constitution and statutes contemplate this procedure. Id.

71. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188.

72. Hence unnecessary to consider whether order of justice "withholding commitment" was void. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188. Valid sentence of imprisonment is not rendered illegal but on attempt to suspend execution thereof. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724.

73. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188. Valid judgment stands until satisfied. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724.

74. Term of imprisonment does not begin until actual delivery to place of imprisonment. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188. Expiration of the time without imprisonment is not an execution of the sentence and does not entitle defendant to a discharge. Terrell v. Wiggins [Fla.] 46 S 727. Judgment imposed valid sentence of imprisonment and contained a void provision attempting to suspend sentence on payment of a fine and compliance with certain conditions. Payment of fine and compliance with conditions did not relieve defendant from valid portion of sentence. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724.

75. Ex parte Collins [Cal. App.] 97 P 188. Where justice withheld commitment, accused making no objection or demand for immediate commitment, justice had power to issue commitment subsequently and compel accused to serve sentence. Id.

tody, it has no power or jurisdiction, after the lapse of time involved in the sentence and after the term, to issue commitment on such judgment.[76]

Judgment.[See 10 C. L. 188]—The judgment should be properly entered[77] and should conform to statutory requirements.[78] It should follow the verdict,[79] should specifically show the offense of which accused was found guilty[80] and the punishment imposed,[81] though it may be aided in these respects by the accusation[82] or by statutes upon which the proceedings are based.[83] A judgment rendered against "defendants and each of them" is several and not joint and is sufficient in form.[84] A criminal judgment abates on death of the defendant.[85] But it is held that when the term at which a final judgment was rendered has expired, the court has no power to make an order declaring the judgment abated by defendant's death.[86]

§ 13. Record or minutes and commitment.[See 10 C. L. 187]—The record must show every fact or step essential to the jurisdiction of the court and validity of the proceedings,[87] but misakes or omissions may usually be corrected or supplied by amendment.[88] Where an attack is made upon the minutes at the same term at which they

76. Authorities collected and reviewed. Ex parte Clendenning [Okl.] 97 P 650.

77. The judge need not sign the entry of judgment. Judgment record showing proceedings held sufficient, though signature of judge did not appear. Connella v. Haskell [C. C. A.] 158 F 285. Mere inadvertence in entering judgment at law in book used for entry of chancery orders and decrees by same court does not, as between parties, invalidate or affect such judgment. It is sufficient memorial for enforcement of judgment or appeal therefrom by writ of error. State v. Blair, 63 W. Va. 635, 60 SE 795.

78. Entry of judgment held not to conform to Code Cr. Proc. 1895, § 845, defective. Caskey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 665. Judgment held not to conform to Code Cr. Proc. 1895, § 845, prescribing form of judgment imposing fine. Hence no final judgment to support appeal. Trayler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 348, 106 SW 142.

79. Indictment charged larceny of property and alleged value making offense a felony. Conviction thereon was reversed, and on second trial it was agreed that prosecution under same indictment should be for misdemeanor only. Verdict was guilty as charged. Held, judgment adjudging defendant guilty of misdemeanor followed the verdict. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 634; Commonwealth v. Bartholomew, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 114. Judgment on the verdict is properly entered where jurisdiction, trial and verdict are all regular.

80. Judgment held sufficient to show nature of offense of which accused was found guilty. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 97 P 912. A judgment which recites conviction of a felony, but does not designate the particular felony, is sufficient as against an attack upon habeas corpus. Ex parte Von Vetsera [Cal. App.] 93 P 1036.

81. A judgment of conviction need not specify that the defendants convicted be put to hard labor. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Recital in judgment "terms not to run together" does not make sentence of 7 years indefinite. Record in another case showed judgment and sentence against accused for separate offense. State v. Webber [N. J. Law] 68 A 1100.

82. Judgment not void for failure to show offense where it referred to complaint which specifically charged a statutory offense, and record showed judgment to have been based on conviction of said charge, and penalty imposed was definite and certain and within power of court to impose for such offense. Ex parte Bagshaw, 152 Cal. 701, 93 P 864.

83. Judgment that the prisoner suffer death at the time and place and in the manner prescribed by law is sufficiently definite under the statutes of New Jersey. Statutes fix time, place and manner. State v. Tomasi [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 214. A judgment must be read and construed in the light of the indeterminate sentence law where such exists, and of the statute punishing the offense for which sentence is imposed. Sentence of 3 to 21 years construed as one of 2 to 21 years. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779.

84. Bergstrasser v. People, 134 Ill. App. 609.

85. The object of criminal punishment is to punish the criminal and not his family. A judgment for violation of the interstate commerce law abates on death of defendant. United States v. Pomeroy, 152 F 279.

86. Court having lost all power over judgment. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 324.

87. Judgment reversed where record failed to show that accused was present when a day was set for the trial of his case. Wright v. State [Ala.] 46 S 229. Record held to show affirmatively presence of defendant when verdict was returned. State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Record held to show that verdict was returned in open court in presence of accused. Thurman v. Com., 107 Va. 912, 60 SE 99. Where, after grant of new trial, accused is allowed to withdraw a plea of not guilty and substitute a plea of guilty of a lower offense, and receive sentence thereon, the fact that the district attorney appeared and was consulted or consented must appear of record. State v. Labry, 120 La. 434, 45 S 382. Where the record shows conviction on a substituted indictment, it must also show that the substitution was with permission of court. Brooks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 920.

88. The record may be amended nunc pro tunc, even at a subsequent term, to show an order allowing substitution of indictment.

were entered, accused has the right to be heard and to offer proof as to their correctness.[89]

Commitment.[See 10 C. L. 188]—The commitment should state the facts required by law to be shown,[90] but if defective in this respect, the prisoner may be remanded in order that a proper commitment may be made.[91] Where a legal sentence has been imposed and the person sentenced is in custody thereunder, a defect in the commitment or mittimus is not available in habeas corpus proceeding.[92]

§ 14. Saving questions for review. Necessity of objection motion or exception.[See 10 C. L. 188]—Aside from objections to the jurisdiction,[93] or the sufficiency of the indictment or information to state an offense,[94] which may be raised at any time, prompt objection and exception in the trial court,[95] or a request for the exercise by the court of its discretionary power,[96] is necessary in order that any ruling or matter complained of may be reviewed by an appellate court. Objections not so

Brooks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 920. The control which the common pleas court has over its own orders and judgments is sufficient to permit the correction of an entry by supplying a fact omitted from the recital through an inadvertence of the clerk. State v. Williams, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 406. It is the duty of the judge upon his own knowledge of what took place (if he is sufficiently informed) to have the minutes so corrected as to make them true, even after a motion in arrest of judgment based on the defect in question has been made. State v. West, 120 La. 747, 45 S 594. Where record below did not show affirmatively that defendant was present at all stages of proceedings, and lower court amended its record to show such fact, the supreme court granted leave to file the amended record and affirmed the judgment. People v. Nagle, 232 Ill. 148, 83 NE 549.

89. Minute entries as to change of plea and sentence thereon. Wilkins v. State [Miss.] 47 S 427.

90. Under Code Cr. Proc. § 721, the commitment and certificate of conviction need only briefly designate the offense. Statement that act charged was violation of Pen. Code, § 675, held sufficient. People v. Keeper of Erie County Penitentiary of Buffalo, 109 NYS 531. Magistrate committing minor to Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy must adjudge and state in his commitment the exact age of the prisoner, since she cannot be detained beyond her majority. People v. Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy, 57 Misc. 657, 110 NYS 172.

91. Commitment defective in that it does not state accurately the prisoner's age is not invalid. People v. Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy, 57 Misc. 657, 110 NYS 172.

92. Tanner v. Wiggins [Fla.] 45 S 459. Where defendant has been remanded to the custody of the jailer after valid sentence, he will not be discharged, on habeas corpus, merely for want of a valid written commitment. Having been remanded, probably, by oral order in open court. In re Richards, 150 Mich. 421, 14 Det. Leg. N. 703, 114 NW 348. Where a judgment is had and is sufficient, a defective mittimus will not entitle the prisoner to his liberty. Prisoner is held by virtue of judgment. People v. Wells, 57 Misc. 662, 109 NYS 1081. Similarly, prisoners are not entitled to be released by reason of the fact that the sheriff has not received the certified copies of the minutes showing entry of judgment. Copies of minutes now take place of mittimus, under Code Cr. Proc. § 486. Id.

93. Want of jurisdiction may be first raised in appellate court. Hanger v. Com., 107 Va. 872, 60 SE 67. Defect of jurisdiction of subject-matter may be noticed in appellate court though question not raised below. State v. Bossee, 145 N. C. 579, 59 SE 879. Lack of jurisdiction of the subject-matter may be raised at any stage of the proceedings, even in the absence of a bill of exceptions, since the record proper would disclose the defect. Patrick v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 527.

94. Insufficiency of indictment to charge an offense may be first raised in appellate court. State v. Hall, 130 Mo. App. 170, 108 SW 1077. Objection that the indictment does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense may be first raised in the appellate court. Patrick v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 527.

95. In absence of objections or exceptions, error will not be considered except in interest of justice. George v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1052. Error to which exception was not reserved cannot be considered. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59; 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128. Denial of new trial on ground that accused's counsel failed to appear, and another was appointed to defend him, could be reviewed, in absence of request for continuance, or any objection to proceeding to trial or exception, and motion for new trial not being verified. Hangum v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 628, 108 SW 370. Where defendant had his own counsel at arraignment, and at trial this counsel announced that another would be associated with him, and this other thereafter conducted case, accused could not complain on appeal that he was not represented by counsel. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

96. There can be no reversal for abuse of discretion where no request for exercise of discretion appears to have been made. State v. Tomasi [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 214. Not error to allow witness' name to be endorsed on information and to allow him to testify without granting continuance, where record did not show request for continuance and court probably did not know that a continuance was desired. People v. Ranney [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 442, 116 NW 999.

made below are waived [97] and will not be considered on appeal.[98] This rule has been applied to formal defects in the accusation,[99] irregularities in procedure prior thereto,[1] invalidity of statute on which prosecution was based,[2] qualification of jurors,[3] rulings of evidence,[4] failure to swear a witness,[5] misconduct of witnesses,[6] qualification of interpreter,[7] rulings on application for continuance,[8] matters occur-

97. State v. Harp, 210 Mo. 254, 109 SW 578. No exception being taken to ruling of court, objection is deemed waived. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Objection to drawing jury waived when not made known to the court. Tinsley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 91, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 356, 106 SW 347.

98. Questions not raised in lower court will not be considered. People v. Richards, 150 Mich. 434, 14 Det. Leg. N. 745, 114 NW 230. Only matters ruled on by lower court may be considered. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

99. Imperfect statement of venue in affidavit charging illegal sale of liquor held not reversible error, no objection being made below. Smith v. Corporation of Oxford [Miss.] 45 S 365. Objection to lack of averments in affidavit not considered, not having been raised below and being curable by amendment. Evans v. State [Miss.] 45 S 706. Defects in form are waived unless raised by motion to quash or plea in abatement and exceptions taken to ruling and properly preserved. Patrick v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 527. Ruling overruling demurrer is final in absence of an exception. State v. Heffernan, 28 R. I. 477, 68 A 364. Defects in affidavit not pointed out in demurrer will not be considered. Houston v. State [Ala.] 45 S 467.

1. Failure to accord accused a preliminary examination would be a mere irregularity which must be called to court's attention by appropriate motion and offering of proof to establish the fact. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729. Defendant having waived preliminary hearing cannot challenge a subsequent indictment on the ground that it was found during pendency of preliminary hearing. Nonappearance at preliminary examination, indictments on same day, and another found next day. State v. Rabens, 79 S. C. 542, 60 SE 442. Objection to qualification of grand juror, not made ground of motion to set aside indictment or to dismiss, need not be considered on appeal. People v. Quijada [Cal.] 97 P 689.

2. Accused could not raise invalidity of portion of act (intoxicating liquor law) not brought into question below. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Supreme court will not pass upon constitutionality of statute, unless it appears that question was made and passed upon in the court below, and the provision claimed to have been violated clearly designated. Griggs v. State, 130 Ga. 16, 60 SE 103.

3. Failure to object to juror or challenge because of inability to understand English, which was known to counsel before jury were empanelled, waiver of incompetency. Okerhauser v. State [Wis.] 116 NW 769. That a juror had expressed an opinion that accused was guilty and had thereafter become a member of the jury not reviswable, the matter not having been brought to trial court's attention. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309.

4. Ruling on evidence not reviewable, no exception being taken. Washington v. State [Ala.] 46 S 778. Objection not raised below. Creech v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 808, 107 SW 212.

Admission of evidence afterwards shown to be incompetent not error in absence of motion to strike out and direct jury not to consider it. State v. Dahlquist [N. D.] 115 NW 81. Admissibility of evidence not reviewable, no proper objection being made. State v. Mills, 79 S. C. 187, 60 SE 664. Prima facie admissibility of dying declaration not reviewable, being admitted without objection, except as to certain portions. State v. Doris [Or.] 94 P 44. Objection that evidence was improperly given in rebuttal cannot be first raised in appellate court. People v. Kemmis [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 382, 116 NW 554. Objection to competency of impeaching evidence not made below. State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669. Evidence being admitted without objection and not motion to exclude being made, defendant cannot complain. Morphew v. State, 84 Ark. 487, 106 SW 480. Objection to introduction of record of conviction of witness cannot be first made on appeal. State v. Kennedy, 207 Mo. 528, 106 SW 57. Cross-examination of accused's wife not reviewable, no objection having been made below. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 111, 111 SW 24. Question on cross-examination of accused not reviewable, no objection being made. State v. Oliphant, 128 Mo. App. 252, 107 SW 32.

Exclusion of evidence not properly reviewable, no exceptions at trial being taken. People v. Kirk, 151 Mich. 253, 14 Det. Leg. N. 927, 114 NW 1023; State v. Soper, 207 Mo. 502, 106 SW 3; State v. Skillman [N. J. Law] 70 A 83. When it does not appear that objections urged were presented below nor what objections were urged to the admission or exclusion of evidence, the points are not reviewable. Soell v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 514.

5. Failure to swear witnesses not reviewable, no objection being taken at time. State v. Peterson [N. C.] 63 SE 87. Where boy was called and it appeared he did not understand nature of an oath, and his testimony was taken without his being sworn, without objection, the objection could not be raised for the first time in appellate court that witness was not sworn. People v. Kemmis [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 382, 116 NW 554.

6. Misconduct of any witness, allowed to remain in court room, should be called to trial court's attention; cannot be first raised on appeal. People v. Oliver [Cal. App.] 95 P 172.

7. No objection being taken or exception being preserved to preliminary examination of interpreter in presence of jury, matter was not reviewable. People v. Weston, 236 Ill. 104, 86 NE 188.

8. Denial of continuance not reviewable, no bill of exceptions being reserved. Martin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 274. Refusal to grant continuance not reviewable, ring at trial,[9] remarks, or conduct of judge,[10] arguments [11] and misconduct of counsel,[12] errors in instructions,[13] and error in the form of substance of the judgment.[14] Irregularities or errors which are ground for new trial and which are not assigned as such in the motion for new trial will not be considered.[15] Defendant cannot complain of invited error,[16] or rulings to which he consented or in which he acquiesced.[17] no bill of exceptions being reserved. Sample v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 505, 108 SW 685.

9. Arrest of prosecuting witness for perjury, at conclusion of testimony, she having said she testified falsely at preliminary, not error, no objection being made at time. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346.

10. Remarks of court not reviewable, no objection or exception being taken at trial. State v. Clem [Wash.] 94 P 1079. Course of trial judge in making preliminary examination of jurors himself, and controlling examination and challenges by counsel, not reviewable, no exceptions being taken or preserved. People v. Trask [Cal. App.] 93 P 891.

11. Improper argument not objected to at time not reviewable. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Sufficiency of rebuke by court for improper remarks by counsel not reviewable, no exception being taken. State v. Baker, 209 Mo. 444, 108 SW 6. Improper argument not reviewable when not objected to in trial court. Chapman v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 965, 112 SW 567. Improper argument not reviewable, no objection or exception being taken. Napier v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 635, 110 SW 842. Improper argument cannot be considered on appeal where no action or ruling of court below is requested. State v. Chenault, 212 Mo. 132, 110 SW 696. Alleged improper argument is not reviewable unless objection is made and same ruling of court obtained, and exception thereto taken. State v. Jeffries, 210 Mo. 302, 109 SW 614. Where record contained no exception relating to improper remarks of counsel except an exception to a special instruction relating to them, they were not reviewable. Banton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 251, 109 SW 159. While the supreme court of errors may in flagrant cases grant a new trial on account of improper argument of the state's attorney, though no motion was made below and court's attention was not called to it, yet it will not do so in ordinary cases. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62. Remarks of state's attorney held not to require granting of new trial by appellate court. Id.

12. Misconduct of counsel cannot be considered as ground for reversal when no adverse ruling was made by lower court. Hamblin v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 850. Misconduct of district attorney in referring to failure of accused to testify not reviewable on appeal from judgment, no ruling of court being had, and it not being made ground of new trial. People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401. Remarks of counsel not reviewable, no objection or exception being made or taken at the time. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867. Remarks of district attorney not ground for reversal unless ruling of court obtained and exception taken. Gillatti v. State, 135 Wis. 634, 116 NW 252. Improper remarks of counsel not reversible error when no ruling of lower court is obtained. People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401.

13. Only matters in charge to which exception was taken can be reviewed. Shepard v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 584. Errors in instructions given not reviewable, no exception being taken at the time. State v. Smith, 137 Iowa, 5, 114 NW 558. Instructions by court must be excepted to, and exceptions settled in bill of exceptions to make error reviewable. State v. Gallagher, 14 Idaho, 581, 94 P 581. Failure to request special instruction and to except to omission of it waives error, if any. Territory v. Caldwell [N. M.] 98 P 167. Error in stating issues, not called to court's attention, not ground for error. State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669. Failure to charge on self-defense not reviewable when no request was made at trial and no complaint was made in motion for new trial. Keye v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 320, 111 SW 400. Alleged error in failing to instruct verdict for defendant on account of want of proof not reviewable when first raised on appeal. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 396, 110 SW 63. A mistake in stating the issues, or an instruction on an issue as to which there is no evidence, is not reversible error unless the attention of the court is called to the matter. State v. Walker, 79 S. C. 107, 60 SE 309. Failure to charge on alibi not reversible error, no request being made and no exception taken to omission. Jones v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 131, 110 SW 741.

14. An error in the form or substance of the judgment must be presented to the lower court by motion to modify, and error on the ruling assigned in the appellate court, or nothing is presented for review. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779.

15. Held not reviewable: Objections to evidence. Burrow v. Hot Springs, 85 Ark. 396, 108 SW 823. Rulings on evidence. Borroum v. State [Miss.] 47 S 480. Objection to exclusion of evidence. Keye v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 320, 111 SW 400. Denial of continuance. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729. Error in instructions. Jones v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 598, 106 SW 802. Alleged error in charge. State v. Brown, 209 Mo. 413, 107 SW 1068. Error in instructions, or failure to instruct, not reviewable. State v. Skinner, 210 Mo. 373, 109 SW 38. Error not assigned in motion. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. Objections not taken at time, nor assigned as error on motion for new trial. Nioum v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 62, 108 SW 945. Alleged error in ruling on competency of witness. State v. Brown, 209 Mo. 413, 107 SW 1068. Nothing but record reviewable where no motion in arrest or for new trial was filed during term of trial. State v. Fawcett, 212 Mo. 729, 111 SW 562. Neither motion in arrest nor for new trial called attention to omission to rule on motion to quash; error based on such omission overruled. State v. Santhuff [Mo. App.] 110 SW 624. Where objection that defendant was not given preliminary examination was only raised in motion to quash, unsupported by proof and no mention Sufficiency of objection or motion. See 10 C. L. 192—Objection must be made or exception taken when the matter arises [18] in apt time to allow some action or ruling by the court,[19] or, in the case of exceptions, within the time allowed by rule or statute,[20] was made in motion for new trial, question was not properly saved for review in appellate court. State v. McKee, 212 Mo. 138, 110 SW 729. Error in overruling of a motion to exclude testimony may be assigned by exceptions pendente lite, or reviewed on motion for new trial. Soell v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 514. Judgment affirmed where excerpts from charge to which exception was taken were not erroneous for any reason set forth in any proper assignment of error contained in motion for new trial, and evidence was sufficient to support verdict. Menefee v. State, 130 Ga. 15, 60 SE 103. Overruling motion for continuance is ground for new trial and cannot be assigned as independent error. Yazel v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 972. Errors, if any, in giving or refusing instructions, can only be presented by motion for new trial, assigning them as causes for new trial; cannot be assigned as independent error in appellate court. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779. Omission in charge cannot be first complained of on appeal, motion must contain all errors complained of in charge, or bill of exceptions must be reserved. Boy v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 149. Refusal to quash jury panel not reviewable, no evidence in support of motion having been offered in trial court. Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370. Questions not assigned as ground for new trial nor assigned as error cannot be reviewed. Ross v. State, 16 Wyo. 285, 94 P 217. Where court, on objection, checked counsel in argument for going outside the record and cautioned jury, and no motion for new trial was made on this ground, the matter was not ground for exceptions. State v. Martel, 103 Me. 63, 68 A 454.

16. Accused, introducing hearsay and incompetent evidence, cannot object to similar evidence by state in rebuttal. People v. Duncan [Cal. App.] 96 P 414. Admission of signed statement by prosecution's witness harmless where accused first cross-examined witness in regard to it. Cohen v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 157 F 651. Charge held to contain nothing of which defendant could complain in view of his requests. State v. Ryan, 80 Conn. 582, 69 A 536. Accused cannot complain of instructions similar to those requested. Lawson v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 974; Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Defendant cannot complain of instruction given at his request. State v. Brown, 209 Mo. 413, 107 SW 1068; People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Especially where no harm resulted. Burley v. State, 130 Ga. 343, 60 SE 1006. Instruction relative to another sale harmless, evidence thereof having been introduced by defendant. Alderson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 525, 111 SW 738.

17. Admission of testimony not ground for error when state's attorney consented to its being stricken. State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669. Court asked counsel if his points had been covered by charge, and counsel said he was entirely satisfied. Held objections to preceding charge waived. People v. Vandriesche [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 662, 117 NW 578. But right to object to subsequent charge not waived. Id. Where, day before holiday, counsel asked if court would sit next day, and court said he knew of no law to prevent holding trials on legal holidays (February 22), and counsel made no objection when case was called next day, the point was waived. State v. Cook, 78 S. C. 253, 59 SE 862.

18. Evidence being received without objection and no motion to strike it being made, held not error to refuse instruction to jury at close of trial to disregard it. Younger v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 170. Objection to admission of confession must be made when it is offered. Walker v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 110 SW 59. Request to charge jury to disregard evidence is improper; objection should be made to its introduction. Sweatt v. State [Ala.] 47 S 194. Objection waived because not reviewed when incompetency of testimony appeared. State v. Mills, 79 S. C. 187, 60 SE 664. Where a state's attorney is assisted by outside counsel, it is not error to refuse to permit the defendant to show who employed and paid such outside counsel where no objection to their participation was made. Bergstrasser v. People, 134 Ill. App. 609. Where no objection was made to witness putting on alleged hood, mask, and jumpers of accused, worn when selling liquor, until garments were on, accused could not object on appeal. Dooley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 491, 108 SW 676. Objection that jurors were improperly summoned and selected too late when first made in motion for new trial. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057. Objections to evidence first made in motion for new trial not reviewable. Nioum v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 62, 108 SW 945. Objection to evidence cannot be first made in motion for new trial or on appeal. State v. Speyer, 207 Mo. 540, 106 SW 505. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 281, decisions of court first made on motion for new trial are not grounds of exception. Sims v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 443, 106 SW 214. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 281, court of appeals has no jurisdiction to review alleged error which is presented for first time in motion for new trial. Napier v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 635, 110 SW 842. Overruling motion for change of venue must be raised by exceptions to judgment, not by motion for new trial. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840.

19. Objections must be made at trial in apt time to allow action by trial court. Johnson v. State [Okl.] 97 P 1059.

20. Motion for new trial must be made before judgment, and exceptions to ruling must be prepared and presented within 10 days after ruling. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387. Bill of exceptions must be reserved during the term; recital in judgment overruling application for continuance that defendant excepted not sufficient. Norris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 106 SW 137. Exceptions to erroneous rulings admitting or rejecting evidence may be embodied in a bill of exceptions which may be presented within 10 days after judgment, and such exceptions may be used on appeal from judgment, though no motion for and the objection or exception must be specific and certain [21] as to the matter objected to [22] and the ground of the objection,[23] and some ruling of the court must be obtained thereon,[24] as only the particular objection urged and passed upon below will be considered on appeal,[25] and objections not insisted upon will be considered waived.[26] Mere exception to remarks of counsel without a request to exclude or to new trial was made. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

21. Remark of counsel held not an exception to admission of testimony. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. Objection that charge did not fairly and properly charge the law and was on weight of evidence too general. Taylor v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 615, 111 SW 151.

Motion for new trial did not assign error in charge given, but alleged that court did not instruct on all the law of the case. Instructions given not reviewable. State v. Espenschied, 212 Mo. 215, 110 SW 1072. Such exception too general, without request to give certain charges, or particular exceptions to portions of charge. Id. Allegation in motion for new trial that verdict is against the evidence is not sufficient; verdict will be disturbed only when there is no substantial evidence to support it. Id. Grounds of motion for new trial based on exclusion of questions insufficient because not showing evidence to be elicited. Morris v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806.

22. Objection to letters should specify objectionable parts, other parts being competent. People v. Gillette, 191 N. Y. 107, 83 NE 680. Request for ruling as to each of two counts properly refused where inapplicable to one. Commonwealth v. Hollander, 200 Mass. 73, 85 NE 844. Exception to refusal to give particular request does not avail to open objections to charge as a whole but raises only the matters to which the attention of the court was specifically called. Commonwealth v. Jewelle, 199 Mass. 558, 85 NE 858. Accused cannot complain that court allowed state to select county to which cause was removed, defendant objecting only to one county and not objecting to selection made by state. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867.

23. A mere objection to a question does not raise objection that proof was not subsequently offered to make it competent. Raymond v. State [Ala.] 45 S 895. Objection to evidence on wrong ground, and failure to move to have it stricken, held waiver of any error. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188. Objection to materiality of testimony does not raise qualifications of witness. People v. Burmans [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 640, 117 NW 589. Objection to cross-examination as irrelevant, immaterial and incompetent, held not to raise point that witness, who was being examined as to testimony on preliminary examination had not testified at such examination. People v. Hart, 153 Cal. 261, 94 P 1042. Objection to witness stating his "understanding" is not an objection to the admissibility of the facts sought to be shown. People v. Weston, 236 Ill. 104, 86 NE 188. Exceptions so general that particular objection cannot be determined not considered. Leonard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 187, 109 SW 149. Objection to question on cross-examination of expert held insufficient. State v. Speyer, 207 Mo. 540, 106 SW 505. Objection that question was incompetent and immaterial held not to raise point that is was not proper redirect examination. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999.

24. Defendant held to have sufficiently urged objection to testimony and preserved exception to ruling. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387. No ruling of court being shown, no assignable error. Phillips v. State [Ala.] 47 S 245. No action by court on application for change of venue shown, nothing presented for review. Oates v. State [Ala.] 47 S 74. Exception must be to same ruling, direction or decision of the court. Court & Prac. Act. 1905, § 482. State v. Farr [R. I.] 69 A 5. Right of exception is conferred by statute and is based on same opinion, direction or judgment of the court which is erroneous and prejudicial. State v. Martel, 103 Me. 63, 68 A 454. Where counsel objected repeatedly to argument of state's attorney, and requested ruling of court, defendant's rights were saved, though court refused to make any direct ruling where he signed bill of exceptions covering the objections. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820.

25. Only grounds of objection to evidence which were urged below will be considered. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Only objection to evidence made below can be reviewed on appeal. State v. Bridgham [Wash.] 97 P 1096. When accused did not apply for continuance, he cannot complain of being forced to trial without witnesses. State v. Bell, 212 Mo. 111, 111 SW 24. Where defendant entered plea of not guilty, and then a plea in abatement and motion to quash without withdrawing his plea of not guilty, he could not contend for the first time on appeal that he was given no opportunity to plead after his motions were overruled. State v. Gieseke, 209 Mo. 331, 108 SW 525.

26. Appellant must show that in the trial below he was deprived of a substantial right, after having used all means in his power to preserve it. Error in admitting testimony in reply not reviewable, no attempt to rebut it being made. State v. Harmon, 79 S. C. 80, 60 SE 230. An exception by the accused to the overruling of his motion to direct a verdict in his favor at the close of the prosecution's case is waived by the introduction by him of evidence in his own behalf. Pfieffer v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 109. Remark of court, directing witness not to answer, held not reviewable where counsel for accused did not insist on an answer to question asked witness. State v. Malloy, 79 S. C. 76, 60 SE 228. Where objection to testimony is sustained, but testimony is admitted immediately thereafter, the objection will be considered overruled. Clemens v. State [Miss.] 45 S 834. Error in overruling motion to strike out evidence because of fatal variance is not waived by failure to except to instruction that variance was not material; denial of motion to strike may be urged instruct the jury to disregard them presents nothing for review.[27] A general objection to evidence is insufficient[28] unless all of the evidence objected to[29] is clearly inadmissible in any view.[30] The refusal to allow a witness to testify,[31] or a ruling sustaining an objection to a question, is not reviewable unless an offer of proof is made,[32] and an offer of proof is properly rejected unless all the offered evidence is competent.[33] Where a question calls for improper or incompetent evidence, an objection must be made to the question and a ruling obtained[34] as ordinarily, evidence received without objection will not be stricken;[35] but where a question is proper, a motion to strike is the proper remedy when the testimony given is nonresponsive,[36] or is otherwise objectionable and incompetent.[37] A motion to strike as error upon writ of error. State v. Ham [S. D.] 114 NW 713.

27. Improper argument not reviewable when merely objected to, no action of trial court being requested. Skaggs v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 346. Mere interruptions of argument, no ruling of court being asked, held not exceptions. Pryse v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 938. Where objection was to remark of district attorney to explain why he abandoned a line of questions, and no motion to strike testimony or remark was made, refusal to strike was not error. People v. Cowley [Cal. App.] 94 P 866. Defendant not entitled to review of conduct of solicitor in attempting to get improper evidence before the jury where no objection was made or ruling of court requested in lower court. State v. Boyles [S. C.] 60 SE 233. Misconduct of state's counsel is not a statutory ground for new trial. Accused's counsel should have asked court to withdraw statement from jury and excepted to any refusal to do so. Mere objection to arguments presents nothing for review. Hill v. State, 169 Ind. 561, 83 NE 243. Where defendant excepted to argument of prosecuting attorney, but failed to ask the court to give cautionary instructions or to take any action in the matter, there was nothing for appellate court to review. State v. Farr [R. I.] 69 A 5.

28. Admission of evidence over general objections proper. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35. General objection to question properly overruled. Patton v. State [Ala.] 46 S 862. An objection that evidence is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial is too general. State v. Crone, 209 Mo. 316, 108 SW 555. Objection that evidence is irrelevant and immaterial held insufficient. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 225, 110 SW 1057.

29. Paper containing dying declaration being admissible in part, general objection was properly overruled. State v. Hood, 63 W. Va. 182, 59 SE 971. Objection to admission in evidence of a record as a whole not sufficient when part of it was competent. State v. Dahlquist [N. D.] 115 NW 81. General exception unavailing where part of evidence objected to came within offer of proof to which accused had made no objection. State v. Ryder, 80 Vt. 422, 68 A 652.

30. Where evidence called for is not patently irrelevant, general objection to question is properly overruled, though it was leading. Moore v. State [Ala.] 45 S 656. General objections to evidence, not specifying grounds, will not be considered unless evidence is inadmissible in any view. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Where deed was competent as an admission, and only a general objection was made, its admission was not error; defendant should have requested that it be considered only as an admission of marriage. State v. Greene, 33 Utah, 497, 94 P 987.

31. Refusal to allow witness to testify who had not been called and sworn with other witnesses not error, there being no offer of proof by him. Pittman v. State [Ala.] 45 S 245.

32. McCall v. State [Fla.] 56 S 321; State v. Hunskor, 16 N. D. 520, 114 NW 996. Sustaining objection to question on cross-examination not error, its purpose not appearing. Poe v. State [Ala.] 46 S 521. Exclusion of questions not reviewable, nature of evidence sought to be shown not being made known to trial court. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057. When an objection to question is sustained, an offer showing the relevancy proof expected to be made should appear in order that court below and appellate court may be fully informed; error not shown when offer of proof was not made. Kelly v. State [Fla.] 45 S 990. Exclusion of questions proper if relevancy does not appear when offered; if relevancy subsequently appears, evidence must be reoffered to place court in error. Pugh v. State [Fla.] 45 S 1023.

33. Where testimony is offered as a whole, some being competent and some incompetent, its rejection is not ground for new trial. Arnold v. State [Ga.] 62 SE 806.

34. Thompson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 842. If the question calls for an incompetent answer, it must be objected to or the right to have the answer stricken is waived. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387.

35. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Where evidence is admitted without objection and is responsive, a motion to strike may be denied though evidence would be held inadmissible were proper objection made. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. An objection to testimony, responsive to questions after it is in, is too late. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 286; Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188. If improper testimony is given in response to an improper question to which no objection has been made, a motion to strike is only remedy, but such motion is addressed to sound discretion of trial court. Thompson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 842.

36. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 199 Mass. 55, 85 NE 188; State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Where a question is properly propounded to a witness but the answer is not should be directed specifically to the alleged improper testimony.[38] A motion to strike all of a witness' testimony is properly denied if a part of it is competent.[39] A motion to strike must be based upon some feature of the evidence rendering it inadmissible; it cannot properly be based on the sufficiency of the evidence.[40] The omission of a particular instruction,[41] or an error in a portion of the charge,[42] cannot be complained of unless a request for a proper instruction is made in due season [43] and in proper form,[44] and an exception reserved to its refusal [45] or omission.[46] An exception to the charge as a whole is properly overruled if it is correct in part.[47] A mere objection to a portion of the charge presents nothing for review; an exception must be taken.[48] Objection to change of venue cannot be made by a plea to the jurisdiction of the court to which the cause is removed.[49] Exception must be taken to the order directing the change in the court making the order.[50] Plain and vital error should be corrected, regardless of the sufficiency of the exception saved below.[51]

§ 15. Harmless or prejudicial error. See 10 C. L. 195—In respect to some matters responsive to the question, containing both matters of opinion and hearsay, the answer should be stricken out by the trial judge. Commonwealth v. Howe, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 554.

37. State v. Blodgett [Or.] 92 P 820. Where question is proper, only remedy against improper answer is motion to strike. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. When question is unobjectionable, and the answer is incompetent or irrelevant, the answer may be stricken without previous objection to the question. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387. If improper testimony is given in response to a proper question, a motion to strike is the proper remedy. Thompson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 842.

38. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 771.

39. Objection should be specific. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998; Celender v. State [Ark.] 109 SW 1024. A motion by accused to strike out all physician's evidence as prosecution's witness as hearsay is properly denied where on direct examination the witness testified as to patient's condition and his opinion of the cause thereof, and on cross-examination in response to questions asked by defendant's counsel he testified as to patient's declarations as to the cause of her condition. Thompson v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 352.

40. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998.

41. Failure to give particular instruction cannot be complained of, accused not having requested it. Hobbs v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 264. Where defendant's counsel requested 7 instructions and court gave 6, and counsel did not request the giving of others which he claimed to have handed to judge, but which judge claimed not to have received, no question was raised as to others. People v. Laudiero [N. Y.] 85 NE 132.

42. Defendant cannot complain of misleading oral charge when he did not request an explanation. Millender v. State [Ala.] 46 S 756. If accused considers charge misleading, he should request explanatory charge. Henlngburg v. State [Ala.] 45 S 246. If counsel does not consider an instruction given sufficiently clear or intelligible, it is his duty to suggest the supposed defect and a suitable instruction, and, failing to do so, he cannot complain of the charge as given. Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 784.

43. Written requests to charge were marked "Given" and handed to jury to take out with them, and defendant did not request that they be read by the court until jury had left the box. Defendant not entitled to an exception to refusal of court to read instructions. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 634.

44. Requests to charge should be submitted in writing (circuit court rule 11) that error therein may be reviewed. State v. Owens, 79 S. C. 125, 60 SE 305. Where requested instructions are not separately requested, their refusal is not error unless all are good. Bell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 242.

45. Omission of instruction not error unless specifically requested and exception to refusal taken. Pugh v. State [Fla.] 45 S 1023. Exceptions must be saved at the time to failure of court to give certain instructions. State v. Chenault, 212 Mo. 132, 110 SW 696.

46. Defendant must take exception at time to failure of court to instruct that proof of conviction of other felony can be considered only on issue of his credibility. Ochsner v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 119, 109 SW 326. In prosecution for misdemeanor, failure to charge that accused has benefit of reasonable doubt was not grounds for new trial when such instruction was not requested and no exception was taken to its omission. United States v. Monongahela Bridge Co., 160 F 712.

47. Lacy v. State [Ala.] 45 S 680; Martin v. State, 85 Ark. 130, 107 SW 380. Exception to entire charge, no particular error being specified, not well taken. State v. Heidelberg, 120 La. 300, 45 S 256; State v. Anderson, 120 La. 331, 45 S 267; State v. Ryder, 80 Vt. 422, 68 A 652. General exception to several instructions will not be entertained on appeal if any of them be good. Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466. General exception to charge insufficient where not made the basis of any assignment of error pointing out any legal error in any portion of the charge. State v. Zeilman [N. J. Law] 68 A 468.

48. Abrams v. State [Ala.] 46 S 464.

49, 50. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41.

51. Williams v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 30.

of procedure, notably argument and conduct of counsel,[52] and custody and conduct of the jury,[53] the rulings usually blend the propriety of particular acts and their harmful effect in such manner that separate treatment would be misleading, and sections of this article dealing therewith should be consulted in connection with the holdings here given. Error is presumptively prejudicial,[54] doubt as to its harmful effect being resolved in favor of accused,[55] especially in close cases.[56] Defendant cannot complain of error which is in his favor [57] or prejudicial only to the state's 52. See ante, § 10B.

53. See ante, § 10F.

54. Error apparent in the record is presumptively prejudicial unless the contrary appears beyond doubt. Williams v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 30.

55. Errors in charge are prejudicial if they affect prejudicially defendant's rights as to a lower offense, or as to a defense, and if errors have tendency to induce conviction of higher offense, or conviction rather than acquittal. Pannell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 536. Erroneous charge on interest of witnesses prejudicial though inadvertently made; effect on accused's case must be considered. State v. Ownby, 146 N. C. 677, 61 SE 630. Giving of incorrect charge, and refusal of correct charge, reversible error; court not called upon to speculate as to what jury would have done if correct charge had been given. Cohen v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 422, 110 SW 66. Giving of manslaughter instruction reversible error where accused was manifestly guilty of murder or innocent and was convicted of manslaughter. Stovall v. State [Miss.] 47 S 479. Judgment must be reversed if the charge on the law is incorrect, motion for new trial on this ground having been denied. Lee v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 301. In the federal courts the rule is that where a party persists in putting in testimony which was objected to and which was erroneous, the error is fatal if the testimony was or might have been prejudicial. Alkan v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 163 F 810. Two conflicting charges on measure of proof in murder case, one of them erroneous, held to require reversal. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275. The admission of hearsay upon material matters is reversible error. Evidence based on things coming to witnesses' knowledge and otherwise and what he had heard regarding certain facts. Sheppelman v. People, 134 Ill. App. 556. Admission of hearsay injurious to defendant reversible error. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. New trial must be granted when it cannot be said that erroneous admission of evidence did not affect verdict. People v. Jones, 191 N. Y. 291, 84 NE 61. Erroneous admission of evidence prejudicial. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Erroneous admission of written confession not cured by statement made by accused as witness which was different from confession in material respects. Robertson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 741. Admission of disgraceful, immoral or criminal conduct of accused not connected with crime charged, or attempts by counsel to get such facts before the jury by indirect or suggestive means, will usually lead to reversal. Dungan v. State [Wis.] 115 NW 350. Unwarranted cross-examination prejudicial error where used as basis for evidence which should have been offered in chief. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. Erroneous rejection of questions on cross-examination to test witness' credibility held prejudicial. People v. Hart, 153 Cal. 261, 94 P 1042. Improper exclusion of jurors, after they had been sworn to try the cause, presumed prejudicial, accused having exhausted his peremptory challenges. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. Withdrawal of certain testimony concerning confession, after argument, in general charge, held prejudicial to accused. Garrett v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 225, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 552, 106 SW 389.

56. Where evidence is circumstantial and not very strong, substantial errors cannot be overlooked. People v. Hinksman [N. Y.] 85 NE 676. Where the evidence is close and convicting, the rulings of the court with respect to the evidence admitted and excluded must be especially accurate. Sheppelman v. People, 134 Ill. App. 556.

57. Defendant cannot complain of ruling which is favorable to him. State v. Daly, 210 Mo. 664, 108 SW 53. Conviction and judgment thereon will not be reversed because the sentence imposed is less than the minimum fixed by law. Accused cannot complain of error in his favor. People v. Oliver [Cal. App.] 95 P 172. Accused cannot complain of a waiver by prosecuting attorney of felony charge (prior conviction) and trial on misdemeanor charge alone. State v. Doyle [W. Va.] 62 SE 453. Where defendant's witness testifies to having had sexual intercourse with prosecutrix, the court may order his immediate arrest for the crime of fornication. This is not prejudicial since it assumes the truth, rather than the falsity, of the witness' testimony. Johnson v. State, 133 Wis. 453, 113 NW 674.

Admission of evidence favorable to accused. Washington v. State [Ala.] 46 S 778; Fouraker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 116. Admission of evidence not prejudicial to defendant where defendant argued from it in his favor. People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532, 93 P 99.

Remark of court, favorable to accused, not reversible error. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P 940.

Defendant cannot complain of instruction unduly favorable to him. Burkett v. State [Ala.] 45 S 682; Hays v. State [Ala.] 46 S 471; People v. Carey [Cal. App.] 97 P 907; State v. Johns [Iowa] 118 NW 295; State v. Betz, 207 Mo. 589, 106 SW 64; State v. Calvert, 209 Mo. 280, 107 SW 1078; State v. Stratford [N. C.] 62 SE 882; Baker v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 27, 108 SW 684. Instruction on circumstantial evidence harmless where proof case [58] or to a codefendant.[59] The rule that trivial or technical errors may be disregarded, when defendant appears to have had a fair trial,[60] does not warrant courts in disregarding violations of established rules of procedure or evidence,[61] or substantial rights of the defendant [62] guaranteed by the constitution or statutes.[63]

Trivial or immaterial error. See 10 C. L. 196—The rule that reversal will not ordinarily be had for errors not affecting the result [64] or the substantial rights of the parties [65] has been applied to the qualifications of grand jurors,[66] defects in pleadings,[67] allowing amendment of pleadings,[68] drawing,[69] qualification,[70] examination,[71] and selection [72] of trial jurors, failure to arraign,[73] granting [74] or refusal of was direct and positive. Wimberly v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 11, 108 SW 384. Charge that it was for jury to decide whether defendant had been denied constitutional guaranty of speedy and public trial before impartial jury cannot avail defendant where judge had already ruled defendant had not been deprived of his guaranty and it was in defendant's favor that court allowed jury to reopen questions. State v Rabens, 79 S. C. 542, 60 SE 442.

58. Admission of testimony prejudicial only to state's case not ground for complaint by accused. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325.

59. Where a confession by one of two persons jointly indicted is proved, he cannot complain that court failed to instruct that confession could be considered only as against him. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Where evidence showed tenants guilty of maintaining nuisance, and landlord innocent, error in finding both guilty jointly was not prejudicial to the tenants. People v. Kent, 151 Mich. 134, 14 Det. Leg. N. 904, 114 NW 1012.

60. Courts should not be astute to sustain technical errors where it appears that accused has had a fair trial. Commonwealth v. Fisher [Pa.] 70 A 865.

61. Judgment reversed because of admission in evidence of letters sent by accused to his wife and given by her to prosecuting attorney. Commonwealth v. Fisher [Pa.] 70 A 865.

62. Rev. Code Cr. Proc. § 500, requiring technical errors to be disregarded by supreme court, does not authorize court to disregard a variance such that judgment would not bar second prosecution for same offense. State v. Ham [S. D.] 114 NW 713.

63. Commonwealth v. Fisher [Pa.] 70 A 865.

64. Where jurors could not, without disregarding their oaths, have found any verdict but guilty under the evidence, errors in charge held harmless, under Burns' Ann. St. Supp. 1905, § 1977. Mason v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 613. Instruction and evidence which could not have affected result, harmless. People v. Monreal [Cal. App.] 93 P 385. If exclusion of evidence was correct, ruling will not be reversed because erroneous reasons were assigned. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540.

65. Judgment must be given without regard to technical errors or defects or to exceptions which do not affect substantial rights. Code Cr. Proc. § 542. People v. Simmons, 109 NYS 190. Exception overruled, no prejudice being made to appear. State v. Washington [S. C.] 61 SE 896. In criminal cases the Court of Appeals of New York is required by Code Cr. Proc. § 542 to give judgment without regard to technical errors or defects, or to exceptions which do not affect the substantial rights of parties. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. Parol proof that defendant was a wholesale liquor dealer, admitted without objection, held not a ground of error, where license was in accused's possession if he had one. Williams v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 30. Conviction not reversed because jury may have considered evidence for a purpose not permitted by trial court where that court too narrowly restricted the scope of the evidence. People v. Gillette, 191 N. Y. 107, 83 NE 680. Where evidence fully warrants verdict, error must be shown to be prejudicial to warrant reversal. Taylor v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1048.

66. That one member of grand jury was disqualified is not ground for reversal in absence of showing of prejudice to accused. State v. Graham, 79 N. C. 116, 60 SE 431.

67. Bad similiter, joining issue, not ground for reversal. State v. Lavin [W. Va.] 60 SE 888. Insufficiency of second count not available error, where first count, under which accused was convicted on sufficient evidence, was good. Stucker v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 971. Where affidavit charged assault and battery and also felonious intent to murder and the charge of assault and battery of which only accused was convicted, was sufficient, accused could not complain that felonious intent to murder was not properly charged. Id.

68. Allowance of amendment to indictment, not necessary to sustain conviction, not reversible error. Martin v. State [Miss.] 47 S 426.

69. State's challenge of jurors rendered irregularity in summoning and selecting them harmless. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 299.

70. Accused cannot complain that juror was disqualified when he did not exhaust peremptory challenges. State v. Banner [N. C.] 63 SE 84.

71. Refusal to allow certain questions to jurors on their voir dire, harmless, where peremptory challenges were not exhausted. State v. Ayles, 120 La. 661, 45 S 540. Refusal to allow examination of each veniremen in absence of others not reviewable, no prejudice being shown. Macklin v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 197, 109 SW 145.

72. No prejudicial error in qualifying jurors where no objectionable juror was forced on defendant by his exhausting his peremptory challenges. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 299. Overruling challenges to jurors for cause not prejudicial, unless it is shown that party was compelled to accept continuance,[75] change of place of trial,[76] exclusion of evidence,[77] admission of evidence,[78] receiving evidence out of its proper order,[79] cross-examination of witnesses,[80]

one or more objectionable jurors for want of peremptory challenges. Shumway v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 407. Error in disallowing challenge to juror not reversible where accused did not exercise all peremptory challenges. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407.

73. Omission of arraignment not prejudicial, accused having been tried as on a plea of not guilty, and having enjoyed all rights which he would have had had he been duly arraigned. Hobbs v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 264.

74. Error in continuance of cause did not entitle accused to be discharged, and was not ground for reversing judgment. Ashlock v. Com. [Va.] 61 SE 752.

75. Refusal of continuance not prejudicial where it developed that testimony of absent witness would not have been admissible. State v. Simmons, 121 La. 561, 46 S 651.

76. That November term was extended into December, and place of trial changed from criminal court building to county court house, held not ground for reversal. People v. Weick, 123 App. Div. 328, 107 NYS 968.

77. Exclusion of evidence harmless, facts being otherwise proved. State v. Harris, 209 Mo. 423, 108 SW 28; Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 591; Brooks v. State, 85 Ark. 376, 108 SW 205; State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35; State v. Hunter, 79 S. C. 84, 60 SE 241. Exclusion of evidence, which could not have been material, harmless. Groce v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1108; Kennedy v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 83, 109 SW 313. Exclusion of evidence harmless in view of negative answer of witness. Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090. Erroneous exclusion of testimony of defendant, as to whether he had ever been convicted of crime in Italy, harmless. People v. Laudiero [N. Y.] 85 NE 132. Witness having admitted inconsistency in former testimony, not error to refuse to allow to be read portion of affidavit for continuance relating to such former testimony, state having admitted truth of facts in affidavit to avoid continuance. Stamper v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 580, 110 SW 389. Exclusion of testimony not ground for reversal, where trial was by court without jury and court had denied continuance and held evidence immaterial. Turner v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 661. Where dying declaration had been reduced to writing and writing was lost, not prejudicial error to strike oral proof of declaration after a copy of the writing had been admitted. State v. Barnes [N. J. Law] 68 A 145. Error in excluding evidence on cross-examination waived, where defendant later made witness his own and could have shown facts had he so desired. Maynard v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 53. Where, in prosecution for murder in first degree, jury found crime was not premeditated but was committed in heat of passion, defendant was not prejudiced by exclusion of letters from deceased showing absence of ill feeling or criminal intent. Montgomery v. State, 136 Wis. 119, 116 NW 876.

78. Cook v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 919. Error in admitting immaterial evidence, harmless. Boyd v. State [Ala.] 45 S 591; Robinson v. State, 130 Ga. 361, 60 SE 1005; Riddell v. Com., 33 Ky. L. Omission of charge on effect and weight of evidence of good character harmless. Hagood v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 641.

82. Failure to state special pleas of former jeopardy and former acquittal to jury harmless, no evidence in support thereof being given. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. Instruction as to punishment, in case defendants were found to be under 18, harmless, matter being for court alone. State v. McGee, 212 Mo. 95, 110 SW 699. Error in not requiring finding of particular fact, harmless, where accused practically admitted the fact and no issue was raised thereon. State v. Baldwin [Mo.] 113 SW 1123. Refusal to instruct on higher crimes harmless where jury found verdict of lower offense. People v. Izlar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685. Instruction as to form of verdict which should be rendered in event of finding of guilty, and form of verdict itself, in prosecution for assault, in omitting element of "no considerable provocation appearing," are not fatally defective where sole defense interposed was alibi and no contention that defendant acted under provocation was made. Lemen v. People, 133 Ill. App. 295. Failure of court to instruct jury to return verdict for territory on pleas of former jeopardy and former acquittal, not prejudicial to accused, court having instructed jury only on issue of guilt of charge in indictment and withdrawn other pleas which were not supported by evidence. Storm v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1099. Error in withdrawing from jury all degrees of homicide except murder in the first degree harmless, where evidence would not have warranted conviction of anything less than murder in second degree, and punishment imposed was for that crime. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P 478.

83. Failure to give requested instruction not ground for reversal, when court gave an instruction more favorable to accused than the one requested. Johnson v. State, 130 Ga. 27, 60 SE 160. Refusal of charges requiring acquittal of certain offenses, harmless, conviction being of lower offense. Pittman v. State [Ala.] 45 S 245.

84. Defendant, convicted of manslaughter, cannot complain that evidence warranted conviction of murder. People v. Borrego [Cal. App.] 95 P 381. Accused cannot complain of verdict of manslaughter when there was evidence tending to show murder. State v. Henderson [S. C.] 60 SE 314. One convicted of manslaughter cannot complain that verdict should have been murder or acquittal. State v. Owens, 79 S. C. 125, 60 SE 305. Submission of manslaughter, and conviction thereof, harmless, where evidence shows that accused is guilty of murder, or innocent. High v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 939.

85. That court assigned wrong reason for admitting testimony, immaterial, it being competent. Morse v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 831, 894, 111 SW 714. Overruling objections to questions, harmless, questions not being answered. Morrison v. State [Ala.] 46 S 646.

86. Error by court and counsel in trying a misdemeanor case as though it were a felony is prima facie, harmless, where the error is discovered before sentence. Ayers v. State, 3 Ga. App. 305, 59 SE 924. Admonition to witness, harmless, where he did not testify to anything material. Ehrlick v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 979, 112 SW 565.

87. Failure to call names of jurors on return of verdict not prejudicial, record re-

Cure of error.[See 10 C. L. 204]—Error in admitting evidence may be cured by withdrawing it or striking it out and instructing the jury to disregard it.[88] Error in the exclusion of evidence is cured by subsequently admitting it [89] or offering to admit it,[90] or by proof of the same facts by other evidence.[91] An erroneous instruction may be cured by one subsequently given [92] or by withdrawing it and instructing the jury to disregard it wholly.[93] Curing of error in the conduct of the court or in the conduct and arguments of counsel has been already discussed.[94]

§ 16. Stay of proceedings after conviction.[See 10 C. L. 209]—The perfection of an appeal stays proceedings below.[95] A certificate of doubt, to stay execution of judgment, should be granted when, in the opinion of the trial court, there are questions proper to be reviewed by the appellate division,[96] regardless of the probability of reversal or affirmance.[97] After notice of appeal has been given, the trial court has no further jurisdiction, in Texas, except to substitute lost or destroyed portions of the record.[98] It therefore has no power to pass sentence.[99] Granting writ of error by citing all were present. State v. De Lea, 36 Mont. 531, 93 P 814. Failure of prosecuting attorney to read indictment and defendant's plea to the jury, not prejudicial, where court stated the plea and presumption was that indictment was read by clerk. State v. Ralston [Iowa] 116 NW 1058.

88. Admission of evidence cured by charge. Stacy v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 461, 110 SW 901. Admission of testimony harmless where court ordered it stricken at once and cautioned jury to disregard it. State v. Dickerson, 77 Ohio St. 34, 82 NE 969. Reception of incompetent evidence not reversible error where it is afterwards stricken and jury instructed to disregard it. State v. Towers [Minn.] 118 NW 361; Vought v. State [Wis.] 114 NW 518. Admission of evidence harmless where court instructed that it could not be considered as proof of guilt. Pride v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 449, 108 SW 675. Admission of incompetent evidence harmless where court sustained objection and instructed jury to disregard it. State v. Soper, 207 Mo. 502, 106 SW 3. Admission of hearsay, volunteered by witness, which jury is instructed to disregard. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32. Held not prejudicial error to exclude confession in toto after portion had been read to jury, trace of intimidation in procurement thereof did not appear until portion had gone to jury, where defendant did not secure hearing and ruling on admissibility from court before any was read to jury, and where objections were heeded as soon as made, and jury was instructed to disregard portion read. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Where court ordered stricken testimony relating to another offense and directed jury to disregard it, failure to caution jury a second time, after ordering similar testimony stricken immediately after the first ruling, was not prejudicial error, no request for such cautionary instruction being made. State v. Whitman, 103 Minn. 92, 114 NW 363.

89. Poe v. State [Ala.] 46 S 521; McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321; People v. Veltri, 111 NYS 251; Proctor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 770. Error in refusing to admit testimony cured by reversal of ruling and admission of testimony immediately. People v. Wycoff, 150 Mich. 449, 14 Det. Leg. N. 732, 114 NW 242.

90. Exclusion of evidence harmless where accused was given opportunity to offer same evidence subsequently. People v. Huntington [Cal. App.] 97 P 760. Technical error in excluding evidence harmless where court changed its ruling and defendant did not again offer the evidence. State v. Williams [Kan.] 94 P 160.

91. Error in excluding evidence cured where same facts were proved by other evidence. People v. Izlar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685; Ludwig v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 345; Stamper v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 580, 110 SW 389; People v. Kirk, 151 Mich. 253, 14 Det. Leg. N. 927, 114 NW 1023; Lohrey v. State [Miss.] 45 S 145; State v. McGowan, 36 Mont. 422, 93 P 552; State v. Harmon, 79 S. C. 80, 60 SE 230; Jay v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 567, 109 SW 131. Facts sought to be shown otherwise conclusively shown. People v. Ryder, 151 Mich. 187, 14 Det. Leg. N. 912, 114 NW 1021. Where accused is permitted to testify as to his conversations with fellow conspirators, and to facts inducing him to enter into agreement and motives for so doing, after refusal of court to permit him to testify as to what he thought when he entered alleged unlawful agreement, there is no merit in assignment based on such refusal. Crawford v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 1. Where letter written by witness for prosecution to accused, charging him with having abstracted certain correspondence and having made erasure in index of letter-press book, is erroneously admitted in evidence without objection by accused, subsequent motion to strike it out is addressed to sound discretion of trial court, and any error committed in exclusion of reply of accused to such letter, explaining action, is cured by defendant thereafter offering same explanation on stand. Id.

92. Sullivan v. State [Miss.] 46 S 248; State v. Denny [N. D.] 117 NW 869; State v. Deal [Or.] 98 P 165. Erroneous instruction cured by subsequent charge and by evidence. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 App. 247.

93. State v. Hood, 63 W. Va. 182, 59 SE 971.

94. See ante, §§ 10B, 10A.

95. Justice has no power to issue commitment after an appeal has been taken and proper bond given. Ray v. Dodd [Mo. App.] 112 SW 2.

96, 97. People v. Flaherty, 110 NYS 154.

98. Hinman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 280. Term of court adjourned without state court for review of habeas corpus proceedings by federal court does not deprive state court of power to set aside its order admitting prisoner to bail before bail has been accepted thereunder.[1]

§ 17. Appeal and review. A. Right of review.[See 10 C. L. 210]—The right of appeal is purely statutory,[2] and no appeal can be taken in the absence of a statute authorizing it.[3] Usually the state of government has no right to an appeal or writ of error [4] for the purpose of reversing the cause on the merits, but a right to a review of purely legal questions is conferred by statute in many jurisdictions [5] in order that criminal procedure may be settled and uniform.[6] The state may appeal only in cases provided for by statute,[7] and upon a review of questions of law judgment operating as defendant giving recognizance, and notice of appeal had been given. Held, jurisdiction of appellate court had attached, and trial court had no power to accept recognizance or do any act except supply missing papers. Ex parte Bambaugh [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 405, 106 SW 362.

99. Judgment after appeal taken, entered nunc pro tunc, is void. Hinman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 280.

1. Ex parte Collins, 151 F 358.

2. In re Montgomery, 110 NYS 793. An appeal from a judgment of conviction is not a matter of right, nor is it a necessary element of due process of law. Yeates v. Roberson [Ga. App.] 62 SE 104.

3. Hebberd v. Loeb, 109 NYS 1116. Const. art. 85 makes liability to imprisonment at labor, and not actual sentence, test of appealability in a prosecution under a statute. State v. Davis, 121 La. 623, 46 S 673. Sentence to imprisonment in penitentiary is in fact, though not in words, sentence to "imprisonment at hard labor." Id. Dismissal of misdemeanor case by justice is final disposition of case. Pen. Code, § 1387. Donati v. Rigetti [Cal. App.] 97 P 1128. Municipality has no right of appeal from judgment discharging defendant in prosecution for violation of ordinance, charter giving no such right. Code 1896, § 2696, confers right on defendant only. Town of Brighton v. Miles [Ala.] 45 S 160. City of Bessemer has no statutory right to appeal from judgments in favor of defendants charged with violation of ordinances. City of Bessemer v. Smith [Ala.] 46 S 467. Where accused has been acquitted of violation of an ordinance of city of St. Paul, city cannot appeal to have constitutionality of ordinance determined. City of St. Paul v. Stamm [Minn.] 118 NW 154. Defendant prosecuted before a justice of the peace by complaint and warrant for violation of village ordinance, the acts charged being misdemeanors under state laws, has not right of appeal from judgment of guilty under Civ. Code § 1006. Ruffling v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 533. In such case the right of appeal under Cr. Code § 324, applies pursuant to Comp. St. 1907, art. 1, c. 14, § 52. Id. On appeal to county court from inferior courts where fine imposed is not over $100, its decision is final and not appealable. Cramer v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 931.

4. A writ of error will not lie at the instance of the government in a criminal case. United States v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 33.

5. By recent statute, the United States is entitled to review by writ of error where motion to quash or demurrer is sustained. United States v. Corbett, 162 F 687. Act March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. 1246, c. 2564, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 209), is constitutional although authorizing government to bring up case to supreme court from circuit court on direct writ of error where indictment has been quashed or set aside, or demurrer to indictment or any count thereof has been sustained on ground of invalidity or construction of statute upon which indictment was founded, while not allowing accused same privilege when demurrer is overruled. United States v. Bitty, 208 U. S. 393, 52 Law. Ed. 543. State may appeal when indictment is quashed or held bad on demurrer. State v. Labry, 120 La. 434, 45 S 382. State may appeal from order sustaining motion in arrest of judgment. Id. The state may appeal to determine the validity of the court's action in permitting accused to withdraw a plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty of a lower offense and in passing sentence on accused without any formal appearance of the district attorney. All these acts objected to by counsel retained to assist the state, in absence of regular district attorney. Id. Appeal of state from acquittal sustained for error of court in instructions. State v. Fisk [Ind.] 83 NE 995. The improper exclusion of evidence constitutes error of law upon which the state may reserve a question for appeal in case of acquittal. Whether statement of accused was admissible as confession, it being excluded by trial court. State v. Laughlin [Ind.] 84 NE 756. Appeal by state from order granting new trial after conviction of accused. State v. Barber [Idaho] 96 P 116. The attorney general of the state may, upon common-law authority, prosecute an appeal by the state in a case where such appeal is allowed by law. State v. Key [Miss.] 46 S 75.

6. In Iowa the state may appeal in order that errors in proceedings may be pointed out for guidance in future cases. State v. Gilbert [Iowa] 116 NW 142. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 337, appeal may be taken by state to review errors prejudicial to commonwealth in interest of correct and uniform administration of criminal law. Commonwealth v. Murphy, 33 Ky. L. R. 141, 109 SW 353. Appeal allowed state on exceptions by county attorney to instructions on burden of proof on insanity. Purpose not to change judgment, but to settle the rule of law to govern in the future and to obtain due and uniform administration of the criminal law. State v. Pressler, 16 Wyo. 214, 92 P 806.

7. State cannot appeal from judgment granting bail to defendants in murder case, on a continuance, after indictment, such a bar to further prosecution cannot be reversed.[8] On such appeal the appellate court will only discuss and dispose of questions proper to be determined as precedents.[9] Questions of fact will not be reviewed.[10]

(§ 17) B. The remedy for obtaining review.[See 10 C. L. 210]—The statutory remedy by appeal or writ of error should be pursued where applicable,[11] and not certiorari,[12] prohibition[13] or habeas corpus.[14] Thus the writ of habeas corpus cannot be employed to correct errors,[15] but is available only where proceedings are void or the court is without jurisdiction.[16] An appeal is a statutory right and is a continuation of the original suit.[17] A writ of error is regarded as a new suit, and, at common law, was a writ of right.[18] In Wyoming pending constitutional questions may be reserved to the supreme court by the district court.[19] In Oklahoma where there is appeal not being allowed by Code 1906, § 40. State v. Key [Miss.] 46 S 75. Under D. C. Code § 935 (31 Stat. 1341, c. 854), giving prosecution right to appeal and bill of exceptions in criminal cases, but providing that if error is found a verdict for defendant shall not be set aside, appeal from judgment discharging accused after verdict of acquittal based on exceptions taken during trial does not lie. United States v. Evans, 30 App. D. C. 58.

8. Judgment cannot be disturbed. Code § 5463. State v. Gilbert [Iowa] 116 NW 142. Though verdict in favor of defendant was found on appeal by state to be presumptively wrong owing to erroneous instructions, yet the judgment was affirmed by operation of law. State v. Cooper [Iowa] 116 NW 691. State may have review but judgment operating as bar cannot be reversed. Kirby's Dig. §§ 2602-2604, prescribe procedure. State v. Dulaney [Ark.] 112 SW 158. State may appeal, but where defendants may be punished if convicted, judgment of acquittal cannot be reversed. Kirby's Dig. §§ 2613, 2614, 2618, 5146. State v. Black [Ark.] 111 SW 993.

9. Code § 5463. State v. Gilbert [Iowa] 116 NW 142.

10. Instructed verdict for defendant not reviewable. State v. Gilbert [Iowa] 116 NW 142. State cannot except to finding by court that presumption of malice (homicide case) was rebutted. State v. Walker, 145 N. C. 567, 59 SE 878.

11. A writ of error is the only mode by which judgment of trial court in criminal case may be brought to appellate court for review. Statute has made no provision for appeal in criminal case. Griffith v. People, 133 Ill. App. 275. There being no right to appeal, the people are not bound to follow the case to the appellate court even to move for a dismissal. Appeal dismissed where state's attorney failed to appear by brief, argument or otherwise. Id. Under Laws 1907, c. 162, only judgments and sentences upon convictions for felonies and misdemeanors under the criminal code may be brought to supreme court by petition in error. All other cases, such as those for violating city ordinances, not constituting offenses against the state, must go up by appeal. Brandt v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 327.

12. Certiorari not proper where right of appeal existed. In re Goldsmith [Ark.] 113 SW 799.

13. Irregularities in drawing, summoning or impaneling grand jury cannot be reviewed through writ of prohibition, no question of jurisdiction of the person or subject-matter being involved. Zinn v. Barnes County Dist. Ct. [N. D.] 114 NW 475.

14. Decision of trial court on facts cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus. Ex parte Hornef [Cal.] 97 P 891. Writ of habeas corpus not proper to review question of former jeopardy. Yeates v. Roberson [Ga. App.] 62 SE 104. Writ of habeas corpus cannot be resorted to for purpose of discharging accused on plea of former jeopardy. Ex parte Johnson [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1023.

15. Habeas corpus does not lie to review action of a court which has jurisdiction. Chappell v. State [Ala.] 47 S 329. Conviction cannot be reviewed by habeas corpus where court had jurisdiction of parties and subject-matter. Davis v. State [Ala.] 45 S 154. Habeas corpus refused where court had jurisdiction. Correctness of proceedings not examined. Ex parte McLaughlin, 210 Mo. 657, 109 SW 626. Where sentence was 5 years for each of two offenses, terms to run concurrently, and law (Okl.) required sentences to be cumulative in such cases, the error was one of procedure for which accused was not entitled to be freed on habeas corpus. Connella v. Haskell [C. C. A.] 158 F 285. Overruling of pleas and motions and demurrer on ground that no preliminary examination was had not reviewable on habeas corpus. Ex parte McLaughlin, 210 Mo. 657, 109 SW 626. An accused will not be released on habeas corpus because of insufficiency of complaint, if under any possible construction complaint states an offense. Ex parte Caldwell [Neb.] 118 NW 133; Ex parte Rhyn [Neb.] 118 NW 136. The conviction being valid, habeas corpus is not the remedy for relief from the illegal sentence. Ex parte Vitali [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 451, 116 NW 1066.

16. The writ of habeas corpus is available only when judgment is void. Ex parte Cox, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 240, 109 SW 369. Collateral attack on judgment by habeas corpus can succeed only if judgment is void. Tullis v. Shaw, 169 Ind. 622, 83 NE 376. As where sentence is for felony, but conviction is of misdemeanor. Ex parte Burden [Miss.] 45 S 1. If a sentence is absolutely void, defendant is entitled to relief by habeas corpus. If sentence is merely excessive, his only remedy is by appeal. Id.

19. Questions involving the right of accused to a speedy trial involve constitutional question, and can be reserved to supreme court by order of district court under Sess.

a conviction requiring judgment of death, a statement of the conviction, judgment, and testimony taken on the trial must be at once transmitted to the governor, who may require the opinion of the justices of the supreme court upon the statement.[20] The supreme court then has power to review the case on the statement and render its opinion but has no power to affirm or reverse the judgment.[21]

(§ 17) C. Adjudications which may be reviewed. See 10 C. L. 211—Appeal or error ordinarily lies only from final judgment,[22] and not from intermediate orders [23] or orders after judgment [24] reviewable on appeal from the judgment,[25] though there are statutory exceptions to this rule.[26] Usually, the judgment must have been entered on the record [27] in the statutory form,[28] but entry of judgment is not essential in some jurisdictions.[29]

Laws 1903, c. 72. State v. Keefe [Wyo.] 98 P 122.

20. Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, §§ 5588, 5589. State v. Johnson [Okl.] 96 P 26.

21. State v. Johnson [Okl.] 96 P 26.

22. In the absence of a statute authorizing it, no appeal can be taken from a judgment or order which is not a final disposition of the matter in controversy. Commonwealth v. Reinsel, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 265. Appeal is authorized only from judgment of conviction, under Cr. Code 1896, § 4313. Vick v. State [Ala.] 46 S 566. There is no right of appeal from a conviction by court of special sessions on which sentence is suspended without judgment. People v. Flaherty, 110 NYS 699. Court of appeals cannot affirm or reverse unless sentence has been passed. Robinson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 763. A sentence is the final judgment, without which an appeal cannot be consummated except in capital cases. Hinman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 280. An order requiring the giving of a bond to keep the peace is not appealable. Not final, and not given by statute. Lowe v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1078, 112 SW 647. In proceeding by state for destruction of gambling devices seized under search warrant, an order of court overruling motion to destroy, and directing property to remain in possession of sheriff until ordered destroyed in due course of law, and directing money taken from slot machines to be paid to defendant, is not final or appealable, there being no controversy as to the money. State v. Derry [Ind.] 85 NE 765.

23. Ruling on motion to quash indictment is not reviewable. Cr. Code Prac. § 281. Ehrlick v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 979, 112 SW 565. No appeal from an order denying motion to require stenographer of grand jury to furnish copy of evidence taken before them on which indictment was based. In re Montgomery, 110 NYS 793. Order denying continuance not appealable. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871. No appeal lies from order granting new trial, made before sentence, since the sentence is the final judgment, and supreme court can review only appeals after final judgment. State v. Byars, 79 S. C. 174, 60 SE 448.

24. Denial of a motion in arrest of judgment is not appealable. People v. Mullen [Cal. App.] 94 P 867; People v. Oliner [Cal. App.] 95 P 172; People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401.

25. An order refusing to allow withdrawal of plea of guilty is not appealable, but is reviewable on appeal from judgment. People v. Dabner, 153 Cal. 398, 95 P 880. Order denying motion to set aside indictment is not appealable but is reviewable on appeal from judgment. People v. Williams [Cal. App.] 97 P 684; People v. Izlar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685. Order denying leave to interpose additional plea of former jeopardy is not appealable, being an intermediate order reviewable on appeal from judgment on conviction. People v. Wendel, 128 App. Div. 437, 112 NYS 837. Court of appeals may review ruling of trial court on admissibility of evidence in criminal case. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 576.

26. In New York a denial of a motion for new trial in court of special sessions upon the ground of newly-discovered evidence is appealable as an intermediate order, and papers and proceedings thereon must be attached to judgment roll, and may be considered on appeal from judgment. Hebberd v. Loeb, 109 NYS 1116. Prejudicial misconduct reviewable on appeal from order denying new trial. State v. Kaufmann [S. D.] 118 NW 337. An order denying a transcript of the evidence at the expense of the county is appealable under Iowa statute allowing pauper's right to transcript in criminal cases at expense of county. State v. Shaffer, 137 Iowa, 93, 114 NW 540.

27. Appeal, premature, no final judgment on verdict being shown by the record. State v. Hodges, 207 Mo. 517, 106 SW 51.

28. Appeal dismissed where judgment did not conform to statutory requirements for judgment's imposing fine. Trayler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 348, 106 SW 142. Where entry of judgment was not in statutory form, appellate court had no jurisdiction. Caskey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 665.

29. Under Pen. Code, §§ 1239, 1240, an appeal may be taken before the judgment or order appealed from is entered. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. In Wisconsin the fact that no judgment has been entered is not alone ground for refusal to consider writ of error, since court has power to amend writ to permit review of proper orders. Lovesee v. State [Wis.] 118 NW 553. Under St. 1898, § 4719, defendant may present rulings on trial to judge below, and on denial of relief, may have writ of error, though final judgment has not been entered. Id. But if a motion is made for new trial upon newly-discovered evidence after the affirmance of the judgment, and denied, no appeal will lie therefrom. Hebberd v. Loeb,

(§ 17) D. Courts of review and their jurisdiction.[See 10 C. L. 212]—Appellate courts have supervising and controlling power over lower courts in criminal as well as civil cases.[30] This supervisory power, as distinguished from the strictly revisory power, is elsewhere discussed.[31] Appellate jurisdiction depends upon the jurisdiction of the trial court.[32] A judgment void for want of jurisdiction will not support on appeal.[33] In Texas the court of appeals has no power to amend the judgment below so as to make the sentence cumulative.[34] The jurisdiction of the federal supreme court depends upon the existence of a constitutional question at the time when the writ of error was sued out.[35] The question must have been raised in the lower court.[36] A federal question cannot be brought into the record by denial of a motion for rehearing by supreme court of Philippine Islands so as to sustain a writ of error to the United States supreme court.[37] The court of appeals of Georgia is not authorized or required to certify any question to the supreme court on the ground that it is a constitutional question, unless it is specifically raised in the record necessary to a determination of the case.[38] Whether a cause should be dismissed or sent to the supreme court is to be decided by the court of appeals.[39] Questions settled by decisions of the supreme court will not be certified, especially where no review of these decisions is requested.[40] The court of appeals has power to grant a supersedeas in proper cases.[41] The supreme court of South Carolina now holds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain a motion to suspend an appeal in order that a motion for new trial may be made in the trial court.[42] The circuit court alone has jurisdiction 109 NYS 1116. But where application is motion for new trial upon minutes of the court, on the ground that verdict is contrary to evidence, etc., this comes under § 4724, and writ of error lies only after final judgment. Id.

30. State v. Helms [Wis.] 118 NW 158.

31. See Certiorari, 11 C. L. 591; Mandamus, 10 C. L. 662; Prohibition, Writ of, 10 C. L. 1277.

32. Appeal dismissed, court below being without jurisdiction (court held at term not authorized by law). Hodo v. State [Ala.] 47 S 134. Justice court not having power to remove defendant from office, in addition to imposing fine, circuit court could not, on appeal, impose such fine. Moore v. State [Miss.] 45 S 866.

33. Courts below not having jurisdiction of offense, there was nothing to support an appeal. Martin v. State [Ala.] 47 S 104. Judgment void because rendered at unauthorized term of court will not support an appeal. Gordon v. State [Ala.] 45 S 901.

34. Defendant had been convicted of two offenses and clerk failed to make second sentence cumulative. Killman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 512, 112 SW 90.

35. Writ of error bringing up question of congressman's constitutional privilege from arrest will not be dismissed because the congress of which he was member had ceased to exist. Williamson v. U. S., 207 U. S. 425, 52 Law. Ed. 278. Contention that constitutional privilege from arrest and punishment extends to criminal offense while congress is not in session is not frivolous so as to be ground for dismissing writ of error. Id.

36. Where most that could be gathered from record was that plaintiff in error contended complaint was bad by rules of criminal pleading, it is insufficient. Paraiso v. U. S., 207 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 249. Conviction under P. I. Pen. Code, art 300, subds. 4, 7, is not reviewable by United States supreme court under such circumstances. Id.

37. Paraiso v. U. S., 207 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 249.

38. Allegation in demurrer that statute on which prosecution is based is unconstitutional, not sufficiently specific because grounds not stated. Tooke v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 917. Not necessary to certify constitutionality of Acts 1896, p. 44, § 3, providing for affirmance of judgment when judges are equally divided, since this result would follow even though no such statute existed. Yeates v. Roberson [Ga. App.] 62 SE 104.

39. Where a record and bill of exceptions is transmitted to the court of appeals and that court is of the opinion that it is a case of which the supreme court has jurisdiction, it may direct that such record be transmitted to the supreme court for determination of such question, and if it is decided that the supreme court has jurisdiction, the case will be retained and entered on the docket for hearing. Dawson v. State, 130 Ga. 127, 60 SE 315.

40. Young v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 558.

41. When necessary to carry out its review of judgment of inferior court, or when justice requires it. Yeates v. Roberson [Ga. App.] 62 SE 104. Supersedeas refused where it appeared that appeal was taken merely for delay, no meritorious question being raised. Id.

42. State v. Lee [S. C.] 61 SE 657, overruling former decisions to contrary.

Contra: Showing was that juror had said he had determined to convict defendant, before he heard any evidence; he denied it; proper to allow court to pass upon question. State v. Foster [S. C.] 61 SE 564.

to entertain such motion.[43] In Missouri, jurisdiction to review misdemeanor cases is vested in the courts of appeal,[44] and the supreme court has jurisdiction in such cases only when the constitutionality of a statute is raised.[45] The supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction of appeals in felony cases.[46]

(§ 17) E. Procedure to bring up the cause. See 10 C. L. 218—The statutes regulating appeals must be substantially complied with; otherwise the appellate court acquires no jurisdiction.[47] A proper notice of appeal,[48] definitely describing and identifying the judgment or order appealed from,[49] must be duly filed and served.[50]

A recognizance on appeal See 10 C. L. 215 is required in misdemeanor cases [51] in Texas. The recognizance must correctly recite the offense of which appellant was convicted [52] and the punishment imposed by the lower court.[53] Where several persons appeal, a separate recognizance must be given by each.[54]

(§ 17) F. Perpetuation of proceedings in the "record." See 10 C. L. 215—The record proper must show an appeal duly taken [55] and perfected,[56] and other matters

43. State v. Lee [S. C.] 61 SE 657.

44. Filing demurrer on ground that information does not inform accused of nature of charge against him does not give supreme court jurisdiction. State v. Christopher, 212 Mo. 244, 110 SW 697.

45. Constitutional question not raised by demurrer which did not raise specific point. State v. Christopher, 212 Mo. 244, 110 SW 697.

46. Appeal from conviction of assault with intent to kill (a felony) is within exclusive jurisdiction of supreme court. State v. McMahill [Mo.] 113 SW 1071.

47. State v. Preston [Nev.] 95 P 918.

48. Under Cr. Prac. Act, § 474, written notice of defendant's "intention" to appeal is defective; notice should be that he does appeal. State v. Preston [Nev.] 95 P 918.

49. State v. Preston [Nev.] 95 P 918. Where separate verdicts and judgments were entered against two defendants, a notice that they appealed from "the judgment," etc., was fatally defective as failing to show judgment appealed from, or that each appealed. Id.

50. Supreme court without jurisdiction, no notice of appeal having been filed. State v. Davis [Iowa] 118 NW 318. Where record did not show notice of appeal, and clerk certified none had been entered, appeal dismissed. Teague v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 503, 111 SW 405. Filing and service on county clerk and district attorney of proper notice of appeal (as required by Cr. Prac. Act, §§ 474, 475) are necessary in order to give supreme court jurisdiction. State v. Preston [Nev.] 95 P 918. Where notice of appeal is served and filed about same time of same day, it is immaterial which is done first, under Pen. Code, § 1240. People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. No jurisdiction where record failed to show service of notice of appeal. People v. Finerty [Cal. App.] 97 P 73. District attorney cannot set up want of proper service after admission of "due service." People v. Schmitz [Cal. App.] 94 P 407. In case of appeal from judgment under conviction for violating city ordinance, notice must be given attorney for city, who appeared in case below, under supreme court rules 33 to 37. Brandt v. State [Neb.] 115 NW 327. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 8045, appeal in criminal case is effected by filing with clerk of court in which order or judgment appealed from is filed or entered, a notice stating the appeal from the same, and serving a copy thereof upon the attorney for the adverse party. State v. Squires [Idaho] 97 P 411. The attorney general becomes attorney for the state when a statutory appeal it taken and he has authority to act for the state. Id. Civil Code sections relating to appeals do not apply to criminal appeals, and oral notice of appeal in open court is not sufficient. Notice of appeal must be served on clerk of court and district attorney. Cr. Code §§ 1468, 1469. State v. Berger [Or.] 94 P 181.

51. Recognizance available only in such cases. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 880, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 517, 105 SW 1024.

52. Words "violating local option law" in a bond in a criminal proceeding do not describe any offense and there can be no recovery thereon. Stephens v. State, 50 Tex. Cr. App. 531, 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 788, 98 SW 859. A recognizance which recites the conviction of a felony will not support an appeal, since recognizance is available only in misdemeanor cases. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 880, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 517, 105 SW 1024. Recital of assault with intent to murder, on conviction of an aggravated asault; recognizance bad. Id.

53. Where judgment assessed punishment as fine and imprisonment, recognizance reciting only imprisonment was insufficient. Blackman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 838, 106 SW 1155. Where punishment was fine of $400 and 4 months confinement, and recognizance recited fine of $50 and 90 days imprisonment, variance was fatal. Davis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 106 SW 1169.

54. Yates v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 850, 106 SW 1166.

55. Court without jurisdiction when case was submitted on short transcript which failed to show that an appeal had been taken. State v. Green [Iowa] 115 NW 492. Cause submitted on transcript of indictment and judgment entries; nothing to show appeal had been taken; cause stricken. State v. Jackson [Iowa] 118 NW 439.

56. No jurisdiction where record failed to show service of notice of appeal. People v.

forming a part of the record proper should appear thereby [57] and cannot be brought up by bill of exceptions.[58] Matters not a part of the record proper should be brought up by bill of exceptions.[59] Petitions signed by jurors and citizens asking judge to set aside verdict should not be made part of record on appeal.[60] In some jurisdictions the record proper must show filing of the bill of exceptions.[61]

Form, transmission and filing of transcript or statement of facts. See 10 C. L. 216 The transcript or statement of facts must be in the form required by law or the rules of the court,[62] must be properly verified,[63] must be filed within the time prescribed by law or the court's order,[64] and must be served on the adverse party when this is Finerty [Cal. App.] 97 P 73. Record failed to show notice of appeal given or entered; appeal dismissed. Teague v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 503, 111 SW 405.

57. Case being submitted on short transcript showing only indictment and notice of appeal, there being nothing to show judgment against defendant, appeal was dismissed. State v. Westerman [Iowa] 116 NW 149. Transcript of docket of justice of peace on summary prosecution properly forms part of record on appeal. Ex parte Graye, 36 Mont. 394, 93 P 166.

58. Motion in arrest of judgment, shown only by bill of exceptions, not reviewable. Welch v. State [Ala.] 46 S 856.

59. Motion to dismiss information, and minutes relating thereto, are not part of judgment roll, should be brought into record by bill of exceptions. People v. Russo [Cal. App.] 97 P 700. All matters occurring in open court in the progress of a case should be brought into the record by bill or bills of exception. Alleged improper remarks of counsel must be so shown. State v. Young, 77 Ohio St. 529, 83 NE 898. Such matters cannot be brought up for review by affidavit. Id.

60. State v. Arnold, 146 N. C. 602, 60 SE 504.

61. Purported bill of exceptions no part of record where record proper did not show that it was filed with clerk after being signed by judge. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 350.

62. Statement of facts consisting wholly of questions and answers cannot be considered in absence of anything in record to show judge considered it necessary to have it in such form. Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927. Statement of facts containing evidence in form of questions and answers not considered, there being nothing in record showing court considered that form necessary. Hargrave v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 147, 109 SW 163. Transcript of stenographer's notes, containing, besides the evidence, objections, statements and arguments of counsel, and colloquies between counsel and court and counsel, not a proper brief of evidence, which should contain evidence alone. Wright v. State, 3 Ga. App. 663, 60 SE 329. Assignment or error requiring consideration of evidence not considered. Id. The certified copy of the record below which the clerk is required to transmit, without charge to the clerk of the appellate court, under Pen. Code, § 2281, must conform to the rules of the supreme court rule 6, subd. 2, and rule 7. State v. Foster, 36 Mont. 278, 92 P 761. Clerk had no authority to copy into record minutes in full of court where substituted copy contained only words "clerk will here insert orders of commissioners' court." Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 546, 107 SW 828.

63. Transcript will be stricken when not certified by clerk, and there is no stipulation as to its correctness. State v. Squires [Idaho] 97 P 411. Rev. St. 1887, § 8051, requiring certification by clerk, may be waived by stipulation as to correctness and completeness of record. Id. To make oral matters occurring at trial part of record for review, judge must certify statement of facts showing objections, or reporter's transcript. Molina v. Ter. [Ariz.] 95 P 102. Unauthenticated and unexplained lead pencil interlineations (exceptions) in typewritten record cannot be considered as part of record. Hobbs v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 264. Stenographic report of proceedings becomes part of transcript only when approved and made part of bill of exceptions. Snyder v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 465. Statement of facts, not certified by judge, could not be considered. Reese v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 565, 110 SW 910. Statement of facts not signed or approved by court cannot be considered. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 840.

64. Evidence showed statement filed out of time. Benson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 254, 109 SW 166. Statement of facts not filed in time and record free from error; judgment affirmed. Id. Court of appeals has no jurisdiction in misdemeanor cases where record is not filed within 60 days, and no extension of time is granted, though parties stipulate to waive delay. Attorney general objected, district attorney having stipulated with accused's counsel. Putnam v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 266, 109 SW 903. Agreed statement of facts, filed after adjournment, not considered. Green v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 466, 110 SW 919. Where statement of facts is tendered and finally filed in time, failure to take preliminary steps in preparations and settlement thereof within time provided in Laws 1907, p. 512, § 14, is immaterial. Howard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 378, 111 SW 1038. Statement filed within 30 days after adjournment, as allowed by law, considered, though not within time allowed by court's order. Dobbs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 921. Statement of facts not filed in time; assignments based thereon not considered. Wilson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 173, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 105 SW 1026. Statement filed after adjournment, without an order allowing it to be so filed, cannot be considered. Ross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 528, 106 SW 340.

required.[65] Delay in filing may be excused if the appellant shows that he was not at fault,[66] but where there is a conflict between the court and counsel as to diligence shown in obtaining a statement, the appellate court will not interfere.[67] In some jurisdictions it is the duty of the clerk to transmit the record,[68] and his default is not chargeable to appellant.[69] In Iowa a transcript will be ordered at the expense of the county only where it appears to be necessary,[70] and where appellant has, in fact, no means, and is not seeking to avoid the cost.[71]

*Making, settling, approval, and filing of bills of exceptions.*See 10 C. L. 217.—The bill of exceptions should be made up and prepared in the manner prescribed by rule or statute [72] and presented,[73] signed,[74] and filed [75] within the time allowed by law, 65. Transcript must be served on attorney general; if not so served, it may be stricken. State v. Squires [Idaho] 97 P 411.

66. A statement of facts not signed or filed in time will be considered, if the delay is due to no fault of appellant or his attorney, but to causes beyond their control. Caruthers v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 458, 107 SW 857.

67. Affidavits of court and state's attorney controverted that of appellant's counsel as to cause for delay and what appellant's counsel had done. Caruthers v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 458, 107 SW 857. Affidavits, controverted by state, held not to show due diligence in filing statement of facts, so as to require consideration of same, when filed too late. Crawford v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 310, 108 SW 1181.

68. Clerk of court must transmit record to supreme court and certify it. State v. Squires [Idaho] 97 P 411. Under Pen. Code, § 2281, it is the duty of the clerk with whom notice of appeal has been filed to transmit to the clerk of the appellate court, without charge, a copy of the record, though no bill of exceptions has been settled, and review is desired on the technical record only. State v. Foster, 36 Mont. 278, 92 P 761. In Texas, it is the duty of the clerk to transmit the record to the appellate court in criminal cases. Attorneys have nothing to do with it. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 546, 107 SW 828.

69. Failure of the clerk to file record within ninety days is not ground for dismissal. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 546, 107 SW 828.

70. Not an abuse of discretion to refuse to order transcript at expense of county where accused had been once convicted and judgment reversed for an erroneous instruction, evidence being same on both trials, and it not appearing that accused could not have bill of exceptions settled on second appeal without having transcript made. State v. Kehr, 137 Iowa, 91, 114 NW 542.

71. One who makes a voluntary transfer of all his property, after a formal accusation against him, is not entitled to the benefit of the statute allowing to paupers a transcript of the evidence at the expense of the county. Transfer of land in trust for wife and children and to pay debts held voluntary and for the purpose of saddling expense on county. State v. Shaffer, 137 Iowa, 93, 114 NW 540.

72. Statute making shorthand notes and their extension a bill of exceptions does not take away authority of court to approve and settle a bill of exceptions according to former practice. State v. Kehr, 137 Iowa, 91, 114 NW 542. Bill of exceptions sufficiently entitled which states names of parties in beginning. Starling v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 993. Under statute, reporter's transcript cannot serve as bill of exceptions unless certified by judge. Romero v. Ter. [Ariz.] 95 P 101. Statutes and rules of court providing the manner and time of making up, filing and authenticating a bill of exceptions must be complied with or appellate court cannot consider it. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

73. Judge may refuse to sign bill of exceptions presented too late under rules of his court. State v. Berry [La.] 47 S 597. Writ of error will not be dismissed for failure to have bill of exceptions certified in time, when it appears that it was presented in time, returned for correction, and received again within 10 days and then certified and signed by judge. McDonald v. Ludowici, 3 Ga. App. 654, 60 SE 337.

74. Bill of exceptions signed after adjournment cannot be considered, record proper failing to show any order extending time or allowing signing in vacation. Battle v. State [Ala.] 45 S 67; Id. [Ala.] 45 S 68. Court had no power to sign bill of exceptions after expiration of time allowed by orders and bill so signed was not a proper part of the record. State v. Brannon, 212 Mo. 173, 110 SW 695. Time for signing bill of exceptions cannot be extended beyond commencement of term succeeding that of trial, even by written agreement of parties or counsel. Bill signed after such time, by agreement, stricken, on motion. Dates v. State [Ala.] 45 S 163. Bill of exceptions stricken where it was signed after adjournment, and record proper did not show any order extending the time. Brooke v. State [Ala.] 45 S 622. Irregularities in settlement of bill of exceptions not reviewable on appeal from denial of new trial, and from judgment, bill having been settled more than a year after taking of such appeal. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

75. Bill of exceptions must be filed at the time of or before taking appeal, unless time of settling same has been enlarged by trial court. Filing within time allowed by court sufficient. State v. Frazer [S. D.] 117 NW 366. Bill of exceptions which does not affirmatively show that it was filed with the clerk, as required by statute, cannot be considered. Donovan v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 744. Bill of exceptions and statement of unless the time has been duly extended by the court,[78] though unavoidable delay, not caused by appellant, will not be charged against him.[77] If bill is duly prepared and presented within time allowed by statute or order of court, it may be authenticated afterwards as of the day it was presented,[78] appellant not being at fault.[79] A valid order extending the time cannot be made after the expiration of the time prescribed by law.[80] A bill of exceptions not signed [81] or otherwise identified, certified or authenticated [82] cannot be considered. The certificate of the trial judge to a bill of exceptions imports absolute verity,[83] and the bill of exceptions must be accepted by the appellate court as true where defendant has not availed himself of the statutory mode of settling a bill refused by the court.[84] In case of disagreement between the court and counsel as to what took place before the court, the statement of the court transmitted with the record must be accepted.[85] Qualifications of a bill by the judge will control over statements in the main body of the bill,[86] and where the court states facts filed after adjournment could not be considered, record not containing any order extending time. State v. Jackson, 209 Mo. 397, 107 SW 1057; Aden v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 838, 106 SW 1154; Davis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 669; Moots v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 683; Machem v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 1184. Nothing to review where record did not contain 20-day order authorizing filing of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Benge v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 832.

76. Recital in judgment entry that defendant has 60 days in which to take an appeal is not an extension of time for signing bill of exceptions. Battle v. State [Ala.] 45 S 67; Id. [Ala.] 45 S 68.

77. If a party does everything in his power to present a bill for authentication but there is no judge to sign it, and the party is in no way at fault, the time during which he is unable for such reason to have the bill signed is not to be counted against him. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

78. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

79. Where bill was duly prepared and filed with clerk in time, and party had it certified by clerk and three persons present at trial but could not have it signed because the judge was suspended, and his successor had not been appointed, he was allowed to present it to the succeeding judge, who was allowed to sign it nunc pro tunc as of date of presentation to clerk. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

80. When the time for filing a bill of exceptions has expired, the court is without power to extend the time. State v. Bragg, 207 Mo. 586, 106 SW 23. And a bill filed during time fixed by a void order cannot be considered. Id. Order extending time for signing bill of exceptions is without effect unless made within time allowed for signing the bill. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 757.

81. Bill of exceptions, filed before being signed by judge, no part of record. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 350. Purported bill of exceptions, not signed or approved by judge, not considered. Williams v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 430, 107 SW 825. Bill refused by court and not otherwise verified not considered. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128.

82. Affidavits on which motion for change of venue is based must be made part of bill of exceptions, in order that appellate court may review ruling. Certification by clerk merely does not make them part of bill of exceptions. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Bill of exceptions, to become part of record, must, if made in term time, be plainly recognized by record as such and if made in vacation, within time allowed by law, must be certified by order duly entered of record as required by statute. State v. Blair, 63 W. Va. 635, 60 SE 795. No bill of exceptions before court where evidence is sought to be brought in by appending what purports to be the original bill of exceptions to the transcript, following clerk's general certificate, and adding clerk's special certificate that defendant filed "above and foregoing original longhand manuscript of the evidence" taken and certified by the official reporter. Black v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 72. The clerk's special certificate is of no effect since he is authorized to authenticate only the bill of exceptions. Original bill must be looked to and this must be authenticated by act of the court. Id. Must be verified by certificate of trial judge. State v. Young, 77 Ohio St. 529, 83 NE 898. Certificate to bill of exceptions in form of code sufficient. Starling v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 993.

83. State v. Young, 77 Ohio St. 529, 83 NE 898.

84. Appellate court must take and accept bill of exceptions as true where defendant has not availed himself of the statutory remedy where trial court refuses to properly settle a bill (application to appellate court. Pen. Code, § 1174). People v. Izlar [Cal. App.] 97 P 685. Amendment found in bill considered as a part thereof. Id.

85. Dispute was concerning bill of exceptions. State v. Gibson, 120 La. 343, 45 S 271. In case of disagreement between court and counsel as to what occurred at trial, court's statement must prevail. State v. Anderson, 121 La. 366, 46 S 357. Statement of trial court conclusive, where counsel and court, or counsel, disagree as to what occurred on the trial. State v. Clay, 121 La. 529, 46 S 616. Statement of testimony by judge controls, there being no testimony in bill of exceptions. State v. Robichaux, 121 La. 860, 46 S 888.

86. No bystander's bill being perfected. McCrimmon v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 318, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 842, 106 SW 1158.

that matter contained in a bill is incorrect, it will not be considered.[87] Statutes provide modes for proving bills of exceptions by bystanders [88] or persons present at the trial who know the truth of matters presented,[89] when the judge refuses to approve the same; but when a party accepts and files bills of exceptions given by the judge, he cannot thereafter contradict them by bills proved by bystanders.[90] In California a valid extension of time in which to present a bill of exceptions for settlement can be had only by complying with statutory provisions,[91] and where relief is sought for a default in failing to follow the statute, facts must be presented showing excusable neglect.[92] The question whether statutory requirements may be waived seems to be unsettled.[93] In Georgia, grounds of a motion for new trial not approved by the trial judge will not be considered by the appellate court.[94] This approval may be entered on the motion or ground of the motion may be verified in the bill of exceptions.[95] The approval of a ground of a motion extends no further than to verify statements contained therein as written.[96] A mere allowance of an amendment to a motion for new trial is not a sufficient verification.[97] The duty of authenticating the record on appeal rests primarily on the trial court,[98] and an appellate court will not interfere, in the trial court's exercise of that duty in the settlement of a particular bill.[99] The

87. Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090. Where court refused to approve bill of exceptions, but made a statement contrary to matters stated therein, and no bill was proved by bystanders, the bill could not be considered. Wade v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 184, 109 SW 191.

88. Where court refused to sign a bill of exceptions showing that district attorney referred, in argument, to failure of accused to testify, and a bill was proved by bystanders, it was held, the bystander's bill, supported by several affidavits, should be considered, though controverted by district attorney. Vaden v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 299, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 404, 106 SW 367.

89. When judge refuses to sign a bill properly tendered, it is lawful for three persons to sign same in the presence of the judge, and to certify that it was presented to the judge and that he refused to sign it, and such bill of exceptions is then valid if the persons certifying it were present at the trial, had knowledge of matters stated and of the truthfulness thereof. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

91. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48.

92. Mere opinion not availing. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48. Proper to refuse to settle bill of exceptions when presented after expiration of statutory time, an order of court granting an extension being invalid because no cause was shown, and a subsequent stipulation being without effect. Pen. Code, §§ 1171, 1174. Id. Code Civ. Prac. § 473, allowing court to grant relief from default caused by excusable neglect, applies where accused has presented bill of exceptions after statutory time, in reliance upon orders extending time, made without statutory prerequisites of notice and cause shown. People v. Everett [Cal. App.] 97 P 175.

93. Pen. Code, § 1174, that time in which to present a bill of exceptions for settlement cannot be extended by stipulation, does not exclude oral stipulations in open courts, accompanied by statement of the facts, in the presence of both attorneys, sanctioned by the court. People v. Soto [Cal. App.] 96 P 913. Order extending time for 10 days under such circumstances was valid, though not formally entered, time allowed by law having expired. Notice of intention to apply for such relief was waived by district attorney's consenting to the order. Id. Subsequent order granting further extension of time to accused also valid, accused having made proper showing by affidavit, district attorney being present, and a continuance having been allowed to permit him to make a counter showing, which he did not make. Id. Failure to make formal order granting relief for excusable neglect, as allowed by Code Civ. Proc. § 473 was immaterial, on hearing for writ of prohibition to prevent court from settling a bill, since it would be presumed that court would make such order if necessary. Id.

Contra: Requirement of Pen. Code, § 1174, that time can be extended upon after cause shown by affidavit, and after notice to district attorney, cannot be waived; hence immaterial that district attorney was in court, and cause was shown orally. People v. Everett [Cal. App.] 97 P 175.

94. Truth of grounds must be shown. Soell v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 514.

95, 96, 97. Soell v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 514.

98. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 256. Settlement of bill of exceptions is for trial court. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 46. It is the duty of the judge to authenticate by signing any bill of exceptions taken during the progress of the cause and tendered to him, if it fairly states the truth of the matter, and the exception taken, and the same, when signed, is a part of the record. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

99. Where the trial court has acted and has settled and allowed one bill of excep-appellate court may interfere only when the trial court refuses to act [1] or is without power to grant the desired relief.[2] The petition for such relief should disclose facts authorizing interference by the appellate court.[3] A bill of exceptions will not in any event be acted upon by the appellate court without notice to the adverse party.[4]

The supreme court of California will not interfere in the matter of settling a bill of exceptions where the appeal is one which must be considered by the court of appeals, and that court has already acted in the matter.[5]

Sufficiency of "record" to present particular question.[See 10 C. L. 221]—Since every presumption is in favor of the correctness of the ruling below,[6] errors not apparent on the face of the record proper [7] must be presented by proper bill of exceptions and statement of facts,[8] which must show the motion of objection raised,[9] the ruling of tions, the appellate court cannot compel the settlement of another, or assume to settle one itself. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 256. Appellate court will not by mandamus direct the settlement of a particular bill, the trial court not having refused to settle any bill. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 46.

1. Appellate court will not interfere unless it clearly appears that the trial court refused to embody in the bill an objection to a decision on a question of law to which exception was duly taken. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 256.

2. Writ of prohibition does not lie to prevent settlement of bill of exceptions presented after statutory time, where judge may grant relief for default, under Code Civ. Proc. § 473. People v. Everett [Cal. App.] 97 P 175.

3. Petition insufficient where it did not disclose status of record and proceedings below. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 256.

4. People v. Lapique [Cal. App.] 98 P 256.

5. People v. Lapique [Cal.] 98 P 257. See Id. [Cal. App.] 98 P 256.

6. See post, § 17 H. Rulings of trial court presumptively correct. Norris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 106 SW 137.

7. As to matters so shown, see ante, § 17 F. Where no declarations of law are asked and none given by court trying case without a jury, no exceptions are necessary, being preserved in record and carried forward in motion for new trial. Fort v. Brinkley [Ark.] 112 SW 1084.

8. See preceding paragraphs in this section.

No review of matters not presented by bill of exceptions: Denial of continuance. Norris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 106 SW 137; Earles v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 140, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 522, 106 SW 138; Cason v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 220, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 339, 106 SW 337; Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 201, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 107 SW 52; Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 664; Woodard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 941. Admission of evidence. Fears v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 734; Henderson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 514, 107 SW 820. Admission of accused's statement at preliminary. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 231, 106 SW 135. Rulings on testimony. Carter v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 110 SW 61. Rulings on evidence. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1031. Alleged improper remarks of counsel. Sykes v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 165, 108 SW 1179. Alleged errors in impaneling jury. Douglass v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 548. Denial of motion to quash venire. Norris v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 166, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 361, 106 SW 136. That verdict was without support in evidence. State v. Porter [S. C.] 61 SE 1087. Admission or exclusion of evidence. State v. Hayes [Or.] 94 P 751. Exception is not reviewable unless properly authenticated in bill of exceptions. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Denial of motion to discharge defendant because not brought to trial within 60 days will not be reviewed unless motion, grounds, ruling and exceptions are embodied in properly authenticated bill of exceptions. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 97 P 912. To obtain review of order denying continuance, the motion, evidence and ruling must be embodied in bill of exceptions. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871. Error based on improper argument must be shown by bill of exceptions, as must all rulings at trial. Cannot be brought in in affidavits supporting motion for new trial. Bibb v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 726, 112 SW 401. Ruling on application for continuance not reviewable where application is not preserved in bill of exceptions duly signed and filed in trial court. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057. Grant or refusal of change of venue is not reviewable without bill of exceptions presenting facts prepared, signed, approved and filed at term of court at which order was made. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. Objection to overruling of demurrer must be preserved by exceptions pendente lite, unless main bill of exceptions containing this assignment be certified within 20 days after demurrer is overruled. Williams v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 525. Alleged error in overruling demurrer must be made ground of special exceptions pendente lite, or must be presented in bill of exceptions which has been certified within 20 days after ruling complained of. Wheeler v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 409. Under the rule that only matters which are brought into the record can be considered by the circuit court on review, a verdict of conviction will not be set aside on the ground that a true copy of the panel as returned by the sheriff was not delivered to the accused as required by § 7273, Rev. St., where the irregularity complained of is not carried into the bill of exception but is brought to the attention of the court by an affidavit to which is attached a paper writing and what purports to be a copy of the jury panel. Williams v. Ohio, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 4. On appeal from judgment, appellate court may not examine sufficiency of evidence to support verdict and judgment, nor affidavits filed on motion for new trial on ground of misconduct of jurors, but may examine bill of exceptions to review errors committed on trial. State v. Gallagher, 14 Idaho, 581, 94 P 581.

the court thereon [10] and the exception taken,[11] and sufficient of the evidence, instructions or proceedings to show affirmatively the alleged error.[12] Where there is no

Wherever matters of fact are involved in the rulings of the trial court, such rulings will not be revised on appeal unless the facts are verified by proper bills of exceptions. Norris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 106 SW 137; Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124. Bill of exceptions as verified held not to include fact relied on as ground of exception. Hill v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 241, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 326, 106 SW 145. Statements in a motion for new trial or in assignments of error will not be sufficient. Norris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 106 SW 137; Hubert v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 934. Errors not reviewable unless raised in motion for new trial or by bill of exceptions. White v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 193, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 852, 106 SW 1167; Greathouse v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 218, 109 SW 165.

Matters presented in motion for new trial not reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions or statement of facts. Ross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 528, 106 SW 340; Perkins v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 343; Mayberry v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 601, 108 SW 659; Aguillar v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 934; Brown v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 937; Davis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 110 SW 60; Innocente v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 390, 110 SW 61; Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 938; McConnico v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 14; Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 17. Unverified statement in ground of motion for new trial not embodied in bill of exceptions not reviewable. Roberson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 297, 109 SW 160; Sanders v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 938. Evidence insufficient to support verdict. Taylor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 734. Improper argument presented only in motion for new trial. Bryant v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1009.

9. Motions for change of venue and continuance, not made part of bill of exceptions, and supporting affidavits not being referred to therein, cannot be considered. People v. Weston, 236 Ill. 104, 86 NE 188. Ruling on application for continuance not reviewable when motion was indicated in record only by statement in motion for new trial and there was no bill of exceptione. Walker v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 336, 110 SW 59. Alleged refusal of continuance not reviewable, no application for continuance appearing in record and there being no bill of exceptions to court's ruling. Mims v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 840, 106 SW 1157. Exception should have been taken to action of court refusing to allow motion for new trial to be filed, and motion made part of record, in order that appellate court could pass on question. State v. Lewis, 120 La. 543, 45 S 433. Action of court in overruling demurrer cannot be considered when demurrer is not in record. Lacy v. State [Ala.] 45 S 680. Where motion to dismiss is not in the record and no exception is reserved to ruling, it is not reviewable. State v. Hamlett, 212 Mo. 80, 110 SW 1082. Alleged errors in instructions and in argument of counsel cannot be considered in absence of objections and exceptions. State v. Young [Or.] 96 P 1067. Admission of testimony over objection will not be reviewed where neither purpose of testimony nor ground of objection is shown by record. O'Leary v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 796. The objection to evidence and ground thereof must be shown or refusal to exclude will not be reviewed. Waters v. State, 3 Ga. App. 649, 60 SE 335. Objection to admission of improper evidence should show evidence objected to and specific ground of objection. Johnson v. State [Okl.] 97 P 1059.

10. Improper remarks not reviewable, record not disclosing any ruling by trial court. State v. Cook [Mo. App.] 112 SW 710. Neither information, motion to quash, nor ruling thereon being in record, no review could be had of ruling. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P 940. Where the record fails to show any action by the lower court on the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment, but error was assigned by him and the case argued as though motion was overruled and exception taken, it will be reviewed as if such action had been taken. Pfieffer v. U. S. 31 App. D. C. 109.

11. Assignments cannot be considered where record shows no exceptions to rulings of court below. People v. Vandriesche [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 662, 117 NW 578. Overruling motion for verdict after state rested not reviewable, no exception to ruling being shown by bill of exceptions. Ross v. State, 16 Wyo. 285, 93 P 299. Record must show exceptions taken to instructions complained of. Carson v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 938. It should appear specifically whether exception was reserved to particular ruling. Long statement of facts will not be searched. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 201, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 107 SW 52. Nothing to review where it did not appear whether requested instructions were given or refused, and no bill of exceptions was saved. Bryant v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 1009. Motion for new trial unsupported by proof, and bill of exceptions to overruling of same, do not afford sufficient basis for consideration, in appellate court of complaints as to conduct of jury or as to matters occurring during the trial, and not then made subjects of bills of exceptions. State v. Gebbia [La.] 47 S 32. Ground of motion for new trial merely that court misdirected the jury as to the law, too general, no particular erroneous portion being pointed out. Mercer v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 321, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 402, 106 SW 365.

12. The function of a bill of exceptions is to point out to a court of review an alleged erroneous ruling by the trial judge adhered to after an exception taken at the time. State v. Zeilman [N. J. Law] 68 A 468. Assignments of error predicated upon asserted facts not disclosed by the record cannot be considered. Shear v. State [Fla.] 45 S 986. Bill of exceptions calling attention to ruling and objections, but not containing anything further to show error in the rulings, held insufficient. State v. Zeilman [N. J. Law] 68 A 468. Bill of exceptions must contain so much of evidence as may be necessary to present the question of law upon which exceptions were taken. Id. Where transcript omits evidence, rulings of court, and instruction given and refused, court cannot, on appeal from judgment, review errors at the trial. State v. Baker [Kan.] 97 P 785. Alleged errors not reviewable in absence of statement of facts. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 840. Where there was no bill of exceptions nor statement of facts, alleged error in charge, in rulings on evidence, and misconduct of jury, could not be reviewed. Douglass v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 350.

Record insufficient to present question: Alleged improper remarks cannot be reviewed when not presented in bill of exceptions or elsewhere in record. Groce v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1108. Bill of exceptions held not to show that remarks of counsel referred to failure of accused to testify. Hargrave v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 147, 109 SW 163. Bills of exceptions failing to show counsel's comments, objections thereto were not reviewable. Tinsley v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 91, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 356, 106 SW 347. Bill of exceptions not purporting to show all the evidence, question whether evidence warranted argument not reviewable. Jones v. State [Ala.] 47 S 100. Improper statement in argument must be shown in bill of exceptions. Miller v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 518. Question of misconduct of county attorney and jury relied on as cause for new trial not considered where record did not disclose what it consisted of. State v. Powell [Iowa] 113 NW 761. Mere objection that witness was not an expert does not show that fact. Cornelius v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1050. Bill of exceptions held not to present issue of invalidity of ordinance for violation of which accused was prosecuted. Smith v. Oxford Corp. [Miss.] 45 S 365. Authority of town board to pass resolution at special meeting could not be considered where record of board was introduced in evidence but was not made part of record on appeal. People v. Richards, 150 Mich. 434, 14 Det. Leg. N. 745, 114 NW 230. Ruling on application for continuance not reviewable without statement of facts. Reese v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 565, 110 SW 910. Where record showed no variance between complaint and information and original papers were not before court, alleged variance could not be considered. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 833. Where facts do not appear in record and there is no bill of exceptions to court's action, ruling on plea that accused was not subject to prosecution because not properly extradited was not reviewable. Fischi v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 410. Appellate court could not pass on question of former convictions when no record of conviction was produced in lower court, and made part of record on appeal. McGinnis v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 525. Where record does not show facts on which motion to quash indictment because not found within six weeks after grand jury was impanelled, was based, trial court's refusal to quash cannot be reviewed. State v. Kelly [N. J. Err. & App.] 70 A 342. On appeal from judgment, order denying motion to set aside indictment cannot be reviewed where evidence and proceedings are not set out by bill of exceptions properly verified. Merely showing evidence in minutes of trial, insufficient. People v. Williams [Cal. App.] 97 P 684. Where there was no evidence in the record to support motion to quash on ground that third person, unauthorized, was present in grand jury room when indictment was found, ruling was not reviewable. Innocente v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 390, 110 SW 61.

Ground of motion for new trial held not sufficient to present question whether judge, by a question to accused's counsel during argument, or by his manner, expressed an opinion on the defense being urged by counsel for first time. Herrington v. State, 130 Ga. 307, 60 SE 572. Affidavits relating to a ground of a motion for new trial not referred to in the motion nor attached thereto as exhibits nor filed with motion as part thereof, cannot be considered by appellate court, though it appears from a statement of the judge on each affidavit that it was used on hearing of the motion, and each affidavit was actually filed. Summerlin v. State, 130 Ga. 791, 61 SE 849. Trial judge having ruled that alleged newly discovered evidence would be cumulative merely, and there is no transcript of the evidence received on the trial, the ruling cannot be reviewed. State v. Sloan, 120 La. 170, 45 S 50.

Instructions: Charge refused, not being set out. Refusal not reviewable. Oates v. State [Ala.] 47 S 74. Giving and refusal of instructions not reviewable when abstract does not set out instructions. Emerson v. McNeil, 84 Ark. 552, 106 SW 479. Exceptions to refusals to charge cannot be sustained where record does not contain all instructions given. State v. Smith, 137 Iowa, 5, 114 NW 558. Errors in instructions cannot be reviewed when not brought into record by bill of exceptions. Snyder v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 465; Donovan v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 744; Stucker v. State [Ind.] 84 NE 971; Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 349; Id. [Ind.] 85 NE 350. Error in refusal of instructions cannot be considered when bill of exceptions does not show who signed the requests, though entries in record contain certain signed instructions. Ludwig v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 345. In absence of evidence objection that instructions were not warranted could not be reviewed. People v. Silva [Cal. App.] 97 P 202. In absence of evidence, it cannot be determined whether instructions were applicable to evidence. Irving v. People, 43 Colo. 260, 95 P 940. Where instructions could be applicable to facts, provable under indictment, they will not be held erroneous in absence of facts in record. Brown v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 937. Failure to give certain instructions not reviewable in absence of statement of facts, unless error under state of facts. Wilson

v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 173, 20 Tex. Ct, Rep. 134, 105 SW 1026. Charge responsive to facts which could be shown under indictment not reviewable in absence of statement of facts or bill of exceptions. Booher v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 832. Sufficiency and correctness of charge are not ordinarily reviewable in absence of statement of facts. Mims v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 840, 106 SW 1157; White v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 193, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 852, 106 SW 1167; Davenport v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 353; Holland v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 W 354; Weatherford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 825; Moland v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 15. Action of court in giving and refusing instructions must be considered in light of any conceivable evidence against defendant where evidence actually received is not in record. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48.

Admission of evidence: No objection to evidence below shown and all evidence not set out. Admissibility of evidence not reviewable. Oates v. State [Ala.] 47 S 74. In absence of proper bill of exceptions, rulings on admission and exclusion of evidence are not reviewable. Romero v. Ter. [Ariz.] 95 P 101. Evidence not being made part of record by bill of exceptions, errors in admission thereof cannot be considered. Summerlin v. State, 130 Ga. 791, 61 SE 849; Donovan v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 744; Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 664. Objection to question not considered, no answer of witness being shown by bill. Earles v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 140, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 522, 106 SW 138. Bill of exception showing introduction of proof that accused had been warned in hearing before justice, not showing that any statement of accused was offered, presented nothing for review in support of objection to the introduction of such statement. Mitchell v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 37, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 106 SW 124. Bill of exceptions to admission of evidence of prior charge against witness, to impeach him, should show date of occurrence in order to show whether or not it is too remote. Caldwell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 349, 106 SW 343. Exception to refusal to exclude testimony cannot be considered when it does not state the testimony nor show where it may be found in the record. Cornelius v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1050. Bill of exceptions to admission of evidence must show its inadmissibility. Hargrave v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 147, 109 SW 163. Bill of exceptions must show how or wherein admission of evidence was prejudicial. Biddy v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 689. Objection to alleged admission by defendant, that it appeared to have been made while asleep, not tenable, the record not showing whether it was made while asleep or awake. State v. Rocker [Iowa] 116 NW 797. Where ordinance alleged to have been violated was not abstracted in record, alleged error in admitting testimony as to acts prior to that charged to show character of house of accused could not be passed upon. La Fitte v. Ft. Collins, 43 Colo. 299, 95 P 927. Errors in admission of testimony not considered, no objection being made below and bill of exceptions not including matter necessary to determine question of prejudice. People v. Robinson, 152 Mich. 41, 15 Det. Leg. N. 181, 115 NW 997. Objection to admission of evidence that it was not connected with defendant not considered where record did not show whether connection was made or not, promise to connect being made when evidence was offered. Dickinson v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 801. Ground of motion for new trial alleging error in admitting evidence must set out in substance the evidence admitted, as appellate court will not search the brief of the evidence for it. Pyle v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 540. Evidence not contained in statement of facts not considered. Brodie v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 195, 108 SW 1182.

Exclusion of evidence: Answer expected to question not appearing, excluding question cannot be held error. Poe v. State [Ala.] 46 S 521; Cagle v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 307, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 550, 106 SW 356; Wade v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 369; Roberson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 297, 109 SW 160. Exclusion of question not reviewable, question not being set out in bill of exceptions. Patton v. State [Ala.] 46 S 862. Bill complaining of exclusion of testimony must show object and purpose of excluded testimony. Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090. Bill of exceptions to exclusion of evidence defective which failed to show what would and could have been proved. McCormick v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 493, 108 SW 669. Bill of exceptions insufficient which recited that offer of proof was made, but did not show what the offer was. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 629, 108 SW 667. Bills of exceptions to exclusion of evidence insufficient which did not show purpose of excluded testimony. Kilgore v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 447, 108 SW 662. Record must show what rejected testimony would have been. Leach v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1016, 112 SW 595. Finding of trial court that no proof of any overt act had been made and that proof of prior threats was therefore inadmissible not reviewable, the record not containing all the evidence heard below. State v. Simmons, 121 La. 561, 46 S 651. Alleged error in overruling objection to testimony not reviewable where evidence is not set forth literally or in substance in motion for new trial or bill of exceptions. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 SE 544.

Insufficiency of evidence not reviewable without statement of facts. Pettiway v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 1184; Moland v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 15; Farrell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 841, 106 SW 1157; Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927. Assignments in motion for new trial not considered for want of brief of evidence. Wright v. State, 3 Ga. App. 663, 60 SE 329. Whether verdict is contrary to or not supported by evidence, not reviewable where record does not contain the facts. Erwin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 935. While it is settled that, in a criminal case where it plainly appears that there was no evidence whatever justifying conviction, the supreme court of the United States would so hold despite the failure to request an instruction of acquittal, this rule is inapplicable where it is not certified that the bill of exceptions contains the entire evidence, and the court is not otherwise satisfied that it does, and it is recited in the bill of excepbill of exceptions or statement of facts, only error appearing on the face of the record will be considered [13] and if no error thus appears, judgment will be affirmed.[14] Matters not shown by the record [15] or bill of exceptions [16] cannot be considered. It will not be assumed that a bill of exceptions contains all the evidence unless there is a recital to that effect.[17] A bill of exceptions should be specific [18] and complete in itself.[19]

Amendment and correction.[See 10 C. L. 227]—The minutes cannot be corrected by tions that the plaintiff affords evidence sufficient to go to the jury, tending to prove each material allegation. Williamson v. U. S., 207 U. S. 425, 52 Law. Ed. 278.

Record sufficient: Absence of original writings, principally letters, from record sent up on appeal, held not to require granting of new trial or to prevent affirmance, where copies and translations, duly admitted or proved correct and true, were in the record. People v. Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573.

Only indictment and sufficiency of evidence reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions. Bay v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 149. In absence of statement of facts or bill of exceptions rulings on evidence and errors in charge cannot be reviewed. Sumners v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 850, 106 SW 1166. Only action of court in giving and refusing instructions can be reviewed on appeal from judgment without bill of exceptions. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48. Two terms elapsed between sentence of accused, after conviction, and motion for new trial. Transcript on writ of error to denial of motion contained record of original cause, and transcript of evidence and instructions were made part of bill of exceptions by incorporation in motion for new trial, but there was no bill of exceptions in original cause. Held, only record proper could be considered. Saleen v. People, 41 Colo. 317, 92 P 731. Record held to show under which of two affidavits, sent up therewith, conviction (selling intoxicants) was had. Smith v. Oxford Corp. [Miss.] 45 S 365.

App.] 111 SW 932; Wheeler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 758. Judgment affirmed where indictment was sufficient, no error in record, and no statement of facts. Bush v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 213, 109 SW 184; Batterton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 194. Judgment affirmed, there being no bill of exceptions or statement of facts, and affidavit and information being sufficient. Purvis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 342, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 55, 107 SW 55; Zimmerman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 843, 106 SW 1160. Judgment affirmed where information was good and there was no statement of facts or bill of exceptions. Batterton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 828; Kinley v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 837. No review where there was no statement of facts, no bills of exceptions, and no motion for new trial. Mathis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 529. Where only matter complained of was that verdict was contrary to law and evidence, and there was no bill of exceptions or statement of facts, judgment affirmed, no error being apparent on record. Epps v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 838, 106 SW 1154; McGullus v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 840, 106 SW 1156. Judgment affirmed, record proper being regular, and evidence and instructions not being preserved. State v. Cronin [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1134. Record proper being in due form and free from error, judgment affirmed, bill of exceptions not having been signed in time. State v. Brannon, 212 Mo. 173, 110 SW 695. Conviction affirmed in absence of bill of exceptions, arraignment and information being proper and regular. State v. Foley [Mo.] 113 SW 1050. Judgment affirmed where case was brought up on record proper, and no abstracts or briefs were filed, and information, verdict and judgment were in due form. State v. Wilkensen [Mo. App.] 110 SW 605.

15. Matters not stated in record cannot be referred to. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 755.

16. Affidavit not appearing to have been used on motion for new trial, not authenticated, and not made part of bill of exceptions, could not be considered. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Documentary evidence not made part of bill of exceptions cannot be considered. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

17. Where the bill of exceptions does not state that it contains all the evidence, it will be treated as though it did not contain all of it. Pope v. State [Fla.] 47 S 487.

18. Bill of exceptions must be specific and definite in pointing out alleged error. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128. General exceptions to portion of charge, abstractly correct, will not be reviewed, as record will not be searched to see if it applies to facts. Jefferson v. State [Ga.] 61 SE 997. Bill of exceptions need not refer to sentence, no error being assigned upon it. Exception to judgment overruling motion for new trial sufficient which assigns error on that judgment. Starling v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 993.

19. Biddy v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 689. Appellate court will not refer to statement of facts for matter necessary to pass upon an objection. Earles v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 140, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 522, 106 SW 138. Statement of facts will not be consulted in aid of bill of exceptions to admission of testimony. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 276.

the clerk, after the term, without an order of the court.[20] Proper practice is for court to correct the minutes upon notice and motion.[21] After such correction either party may file a copy of a record as finally corrected, or a copy of the corrected portion, as an addition to the record.[22] Where a bill of exceptions is returned by the judge for corrections, it must be again presented within a reasonable time or the exceptions will be considered waived.[23] Judgment of the trial court substituting papers, after loss of originals, cannot be attacked by affidavits,[24] through error in copying substituted papers into the record may be shown.[25] The court which is to hear a cause may order substitution of a lost record.[26] Such order being made upon notice, a motion to strike the substituted record as incorrect will not be entertained.[27] Amendments or correcttions may be made in the appellate court [28] by complying with statutory requirements,[29] and the appellate court may of its own motion order a defective record to be corrected.[30]

(§ 17) G. Practice and procedure in reviewing court. See 10 C. L. 228—The record will not be returned to the trial court to allow it to pass upon a motion for new trial for newly-discovered evidence where that court would be without power to entertain the motion owing to lapse of time,[31] or where the alleged new evidence does not warrant granting of a new trial.[32] Appellant need not, in Texas, be notified of the day on which the appeal will be submitted.[33] In Georgia, a plaintiff in error has no unqualified right to withdraw his writ of error after argument or submission.[34] Whether such withdrawal should be permitted is a question addressed to the sound discretion of the court.[35] Jurisdiction to allow withdrawal remains in the court of appeals, though that court has certified questions in the case to the supreme court, but in passing on the question, what has taken place in the supreme court will be duly considered.[36]

26. Transcript having been destroyed before transfer of course by supreme court to court of appeal, latter had power to make order substituting record, under act June 16, 1906. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

27. Court of appeals having made order of substitution of transcript, after due notice to appellant, would not thereafter entertain appellant's motion to strike substituted record on ground that substituted copy was incorrect. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

28. When original bill of exceptions was signed by judge below, by order of supreme court, after time allowed by law, owing to special circumstances, plaintiff in error was allowed to take steps to have certified transcript on file in supreme court amended to correspond with duly authenticated record below. Montgomery v. State [Fla.] 45 S 813.

29. Amendments to bill of exceptions allowable under Civ. Code 1895, § 5570, are such as contain matters which relate to imperfections or omissions of necessary and proper allegations which can be supplied from the transcript of the record. Summerlin v. State, 130 Ga. 791, 61 SE 849. Though affidavits may be brought up under supplemental certificate, under Acts 1905, p. 84, application for such certificate cannot be made after the expiration of 20 days from the service of the bill of exceptions. Id.

30. If there is a plain assignment of error duly certified by the judge, and a portion of the record necessary to understand and pass upon the error is missing, it would be the duty of the court of its own motion to require clerk of trial court to transmit such portion of the record as would be required. Mason v. Terrell, 3 Ga. App. 348, 60 SE 4. Conviction in circuit court on appeal from judgment of justice court. Cause remanded to docket with instructions to clerk to issue certiorari to circuit court to send up justice's judgment. Jones v. State [Miss.] 47 S 479.

Assignments, briefs, etc.[See 10 C. L. 229]—Questions raised in the trial court, or exceptions there taken, will not be considered by an appellate court unless assigned as error [37] and discussed in the brief [38] or otherwise argued.[39] Assignments of error must be specific [40] and not multifarious,[41] and should be complete in themselves [42] or make specific references to portions of the record which must be examined.[43] It should appear that the matter was fairly presented in the lower court,[44] and the reasons for the alleged error should be pointed out.[45] The statement of facts in the

v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 842. Court of appeals certified questions to supreme court and thereafter plaintiff in error applied to court of appeals for permission to withdraw his writ of error, and the court of appeals then certified to supreme court question whether such withdrawal should be allowed. Supreme court sent back record and certified questions to court of appeals, and directed it to decide question whether withdrawal of writ of error should be allowed. In case of refusal to allow withdrawal, certified questions and record could be resubmitted; if withdrawal permitted, no such return would be necessary. McNelis v. State, 130 Ga. 748, 61 SE 540.

37. Exceptions to portions of the trial court's charges to the jury will not be considered where error is not assigned upon them. Pfieffer v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 109. Errors not assigned will not be considered by the United States supreme court on writ of error. Paraiso v. U. S., 207 U. S. 368, 52 Law. Ed. 249. Objection that judge, by questions to witnesses, intimated opinions in disparagement of witnesses not raised by assignment that verdict is contrary to law and evidence. Smith v. State, 3 Ga. App. 509, 60 SE 274.

38. Exceptions to jurors waived when not relied on in brief. State v. Banner [N. C.] 63 SE 84. Question not argued in brief waived. Ross v. State, 16 Wyo. 285, 94 P 217. Exceptions taken at trial but not relied on in brief are taken as abandoned. State v. Freeman, 146 N. C. 615, 60 SE 986. Assignment not mentioned in brief considered waived. State v. Doyle [W. Va.] 62 SE 453. Points made in record but not referred to in briefs will be considered as waived. Jones v. State, 130 Ga. 274, 60 SE 840. Demurrers held abandoned when not referred to in brief or argument on appeal. Dick v. State, 107 Md. 11, 68 A 286. Where an assignment is based on denial of motion for new trial, and none of the grounds of the motion are argued, defendant simply stating in his brief that motion should have been granted, the assignment will be considered as abandoned. McCall v. State [Fla.] 46 S 321. Where brief contains bare statement that ruling complained of is erroneous, and there is no discussion or citation of authorities, the assignment will be treated as waived unless the error is so glaring and patent that no argument is needed to demonstrate it. Id.

39. Assignments not argued, abandoned. Pugh v. State [Fla.] 45 S 1023; Baker v. State [Ark.] 113 SW 205. Only grounds of objection to evidence argued in appellate court (and urged below) will be considered. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Where one assignment of error is the overruling of a motion for new trial, only such grounds as are argued will be considered on appeal. Johnson v. State [Fla.] 46 S 174. Exception to exclusion of evidence, not pressed in appellate court, overruled. State v. Farr [R. I.] 69 A 5.

40. Assignments not directing attention to specific error relied on will not be considered. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501. Error must be made to appear affirmatively. Raymond v. State [Ala.] 45 S 895. Assignments that court erred in not charging fully on law of justifiable homicide, and in not charging on every theory of case presented by evidence, too general under rule 7. Jaime v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1092. Assignment that "court erred in overruling defendant's objections to the admissibility in the several instances during the progress of the trial as shown by the record of the testimony," held too general. Strobhar v. State [Fla.] 47 S 4. When all the instructions are assigned as error, as showing when taken as a whole, that court was prejudiced against accused, the appellate court will examine the entire charge. Maynard v. State [Neb.] 116 NW 53. Exception to instruction properly served, and assignment of error sufficiently definite. Thomas v. State, 85 Ark. 138, 107 SW 390.

41. While several exceptions may be embraced in a single bill, assignments of error should be single, not multifarious. State v. Zeilman [N. J. Law] 68 A 468.

42. Under rule 31, assignments must set out testimony and rulings of court. Commonwealth v. McKwayne [Pa.] 70 A 809.

43. Attention of appellate court should be called to specific grounds of error, reasons should be stated in the brief, authorities cited, and, where reference is necessary, pages of the transcript should be referred to. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. Where entire record is sent up, appellant must specify errors relied upon so that search of entire record will not be necessary. State v. Herron [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 274. Where copy of paper offered in evidence was not set out in the record, and no reference was given to page and line of record where offer and ruling appeared, the error was treated as waived. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779.

44. Assignments that certain questions were permitted to be asked, but not showing any objections thereto, nor what the answers were, cannot be considered. Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 SE 816. Assignment of error to exclusion of question should show that lower court knew what answer was expected. Brown v. State, 3 Ga. App. 479, 60 SE 216. Assignment of error to remarks of counsel, not showing that objection was made below or any action by court invoked, will not be considered. Clarke v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 663.

45. Reasons why instructions excepted to were erroneous not being pointed out in record or brief, alleged errors not considered. People v. Oliver [Cal. App.] 95 P 172. When brief should conform to the rules of the court.[46] Motion to strike argument because not filed in time is properly denied where adverse party has replied.[47]

Dismissal.[See 10 C. L. 229]—If the motion for dismissal is timely,[48] an appeal may be dismissed for want of jurisdiction of the appellate [49] or lower court,[50] for failure of the record to show an appealable judgment,[51] or to show that an appeal had been taken,[52] for want of notice of appeal,[53] or for a fatal defect in the notice [54] or want of service,[55] for defect in the recognizance,[56] for want of prosecution,[57] for failure to file the record within the time prescribed,[58] unless that duty devolves solely upon the clerk,[59] or for lack of certification of record.[60] The appeal may also be dismissed where the judgment has been executed,[61] or where the prisoner has escaped and is counsel rely on error in refusal to give instruction, they should state the instruction and point out reasons why refusal to give it was error, and same rule applies to pointing out alleged error in instructions given. People v. Fossetti [Cal. App.] 95 P 384.

46. Appellant's brief did not contain a clear and concise statement of the facts, apart from argument, as required by rule 40; hence, statement in brief for people taken as statement of facts. People v. Boyd, 151 Mich. 577, 15 Det. Leg. N. 36, 115 NW 687.

47. No prejudice was made to appear. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36.

48. Motions to dismiss, predicated upon alleged defects in the order of appeal or bond given, must be filed within three days after filing of transcript. State v. Simpson [La.] 47 S 622.

49. When a case not within jurisdiction of court of appeals is lodged in its files, such court may order that it be peremptorily dismissed, or that it be transmitted to the supreme court as interests of justice may require. Dawson v. State, 3 Ga. App. 664, 60 SE 319.

50. Appeal dismissed where court below had no jurisdiction of offense. Martin v. State [Ala.] 47 S 104. Appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction below (court held at term not authorized by law). Hodo v. State [Ala.] 47 S 134. Forfeiture for breach of Sunday law cannot be recovered in criminal proceedings; dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Hanger v. Com., 107 Va. 872, 60 SE 67.

51. Appeal dismissed where record failed to show any judgment of conviction. Vick v. State [Ala.] 46 S 566. Appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction where record did not show proper entry of final judgment. Caskey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 665. Cause dismissed where short transcript failed to show that judgment had been rendered against defendant. State v. Westerman [Iowa] 116 NW 149. Appeal will be dismissed where lower court has not passed sentence. Robinson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 763. Where an appeal is taken before legal sentence has been entered below, the appeal will be dismissed with instructions to the lower court to enter proper sentence. Hinman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 280.

52. Cause stricken where nothing in record showed an appeal had been taken. State v. Jackson [Iowa] 118 NW 439.

53. Appeal dismissed, no notice of appeal appearing in record. State v. Davis [Iowa] 118 NW 318. Appeal dismissed, record not showing notice of appeal given or entered. Teague v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 503, 506, 111 SW 405 (2 cases).

54. Appeal dismissed for fatally defective notice of appeal. State v. Preston [Nev.] 95 P 918.

55. Appeal dismissed where notice of appeal was not served on clerk of court and district attorney (Cr. Code, §§ 1468, 1469), being only given orally in open court. State v. Berger [Or.] 94 P 181.

56. Appeal dismissed for failure of recognizance to correctly recite judgment. Blackman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 838, 106 SW 1155. Appeal dismissed for variance between punishment assessed and as recited in recognizance. Davis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 853, 106 SW 1169. Appeal dismissed where joint recognizance was given by several appellants; each must give separate recognizance. Yates v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 850, 106 SW 1166.

57. Where counsel failed to appear and case was dismissed, the fact that he read the clerk's calendar and failed to see the cause, or a statement that all criminal cases would be peremptorily called on certain day was not ground for reinstatement. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 266.

58. Appeal in misdemeanor case dismissed for failure to file record within 60 days, as required by Cr. Code Prac. § 348. Clark v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 72, 109 SW 301. Appeal dismissed for failure to file record within 60 days. Misdemeanor case. Cr. Code Prac. § 348. Id.

59. An appeal will not be dismissed for failure of the clerk to forward the transcript in time, defendant being in no way responsible for the delay. State v. Clay, 121 La. 529, 46 S 616. Failure of clerk to transmit transcript within 90 days is not ground for dismissal. Davis v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 546, 107 SW 828.

60. Appeal dismissed where there was no certified transcript or offer to substitute or supply one. State v. Squires [Idaho] 97 P 411.

61. An appeal will be dismissed where the judgment has been executed and there is nothing left upon which a judgment of reversal can operate. Appeal dismissed where fine imposed had been paid and could not be returned, under the statute. State v. Pray [Nev.] 94 P 218. Writ of error dismissed where it appeared that defendant had voluntarily and without protest complied with alternative sentence of fine or imprisonment by payment of fine. Kitchens v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 736.

still at large.[62] Dismissal will not be granted merely to allow appellant to obtain better bills of exception, when it appears from an unofficial report of the trial that no prejudicial error was committed.[63] The merits of the cause will not be considered on a motion to dismiss.[64] Motion to reinstate must be timely.[65] An appeal, dismissed for want of a good recognizance, will be reinstated when it is made to appear by proper evidence, accompanied by the clerk's certificate, that the cognizance was correctly taken in the trial court, but incorrectly transcribed in the record.[66]

Rehearing.[See 8 C. L. 262]—A motion for rehearing will not be granted where substantial justice has been done in the original decision, even though all the reasoning in the opinion is not approved.[67] A petition for hearing need not be considered where defendant has been pardoned.[68] Questions not before raised will not be considered on a rehearing.[69] Whether judgment may be reviewed on writ of error cannot be determined upon a petition for rehearing after the dismissal of an appeal.[70]

(§ 17) H. Scope of review.[See 10 C. L. 230]—The appellate court is not required to consider matters not properly saved for review [71] or not presented by the record [72] in the manner required by law or rule of court,[73] but may consider such matters in the interests of justice.[74] Only those assignments of error, consideration of which

62. Appeal dismissed where it appeared defendant had broken jail and was still at large. State v. Moses [N. C.] 63 SE 68. The appeal will be dismissed when it appears that the prisoner has broken jail and escaped, and is beyond the court's jurisdiction when his case is called. State v. Keebler, 145 N. C. 560, 59 SE 872. Appeal dismissed where, pending same, appellant escaped from jail and remained at large and had not entered into recognizance. Jackson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 109 SW 149. Where defendant escapes from jail, pending the appeal, and does not voluntarily return, the appeal will be dismissed. McCullough v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 108 SW 1171.

Motion to dismiss denied where accused had escaped and was recaptured and permitted to give bond; lower court, by permitting him to give appeal bond, judicially recognized that he was in custody and entitled to prosecute an appeal. Bush v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 213, 109 SW 184. Motion to dismiss appeal, on ground that appellant had escaped from jail, denied where he was retaken and made a showing that his escape was for the sole purpose of procuring bond. Leonard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 187, 109 SW 149.

63. State v. Zeilman [N. J. Law] 68 A 468.

64. Insufficiency of the indictment to charge an offense, and want of jurisdiction of the subject-matter, involve the validity of the judgment and will not be considered on motion to dismiss. Patrick v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 527.

65. Where dismissal is for defect in the recognizance, motion to reinstate must be made within the time allowed by the rules (15 days). Fontenberry v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 740.

66. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 19 Tex. Ct. Rep. 880, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 517, 105 SW 1024.

67. Roper v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1022.

68. Former opinion unofficially published in 95 Pac. 811, withheld from official publication. State v. Luper [Or.] 96 P 1069.

69. Errors in charge will not be considered when presented for first time on motion for rehearing. Wilson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 173, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 105 SW 1026. Question not raised or argued in brief cannot be raised for first time on petition for rehearing. Ross v. State, 16 Wyo. 285, 94 P 217.

71. See ante, § 14.

72. See ante, § 17F. Constitutionality of a statute will not be considered when it is not raised by the record proper but only by an agreed statement of facts. Ex parte Thompson [Ark.] 109 SW 1171. Question of constitutionality of statute relating to carrying of concealed weapons not considered because not presented by the record. McIntire v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 1005.

73. See ante, § 17F.

74. Where defendant's counsel rested the defense on an erroneous theory of law, the appellate division reversed the judgment in order that a trial on the merits on a correct theory might be had. People v. Hopkins, 111 NYS 423. Where the court is satisfied that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence or against the law, or that justice requires a new trial, it may reverse though no exception was taken in the court below; but it is not required to reverse unless a proper exception is taken below. People v. Jordan, 109 NYS 840. In capital cases the New York Court of Appeals may order a new trial if it be satisfied that the verdict was against the weight of evidence or against law, or that justice requires a new trial, whether or not any exception was taken in the court below. People v Strollo, 191 N. Y. 42, 83 NE 573. In capital cases, the court of appeals has power to reverse in the interests of justice, though no exceptions are taken, and it is its duty to disregard errors which, though excepted to, do not affect substantial rights of accused. Id. Where record shows that motion in arrest of judgment on ground that statute on is necessary to a decision, will be reviewed.[75] Though moot questions will not be considered, a cause involving personal rights will be reviewed though the decision can have no other practical result.[76]

Every presumption is in favor of the regularity of the proceedings prior to [77] and during the trial,[78] and all fair intendments consistent with the record are to be indulged in favor of the verdict,[79] and the rulings of the trial court.[80] Thus, on a silent record or on one which does not disclose all that transpired in the trial court, it is presumed jurors were qualified [81] that jury was properly impanelled,[82] that inwhich prosecution was based was unconstitutional was submitted to the court, the point will be considered on appeal though it does not appear that court made a ruling on it. State v. Davis, 121 La. 623, 46 S 673.

75. Where assignment that evidence does not support verdict is overruled but cause is remanded for errors of law at trial, evidence will not be discussed. Slater v. U. S. [Okl.] Cr. App.] 98 P 110. Where one count warrants sentence imposed, assignments of error affecting only other counts need not be considered. Cook v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 919.

76. Where, on appeal from sentence of fine and removal (of sheriff) from office, the court found the sentence invalid as to the removal, and the affidavit defective, the judgment was reversed and cause remanded, though it appeared dehors the record that the sheriff had resigned. Moore v. State [Miss.] 45 S 866.

77. Presumed that grand jury which returned indictment was composed of 12 men. State v. Vaughn [Mo. App.] 112 SW 728. Presumed that grand jury was properly organized. Id. Presumed that complaint was legally filed in county court, with information, though complaint appeared to have been originally filed in justice court. Griffin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1066. Where no objection was made to filing of motion to quash after plea of not guilty, it will be considered that motion was filed with leave of court. Commonwealth v. Bailey, 199 Mass. 583, 85 NE 857. Where record showed only that motions made by accused relating to irregularities in grand jury panel were denied by court, without showing grounds on which court acted, it was presumed that court's rulings were correct. State v. Bronzo [Nev.] 95 P 1001.

78. Bill of exceptions is to be most strongly construed against exceptor. Dozier v. State [Ala.] 46 S 9. Every presumption favors regularity of proceedings, and one complaining must show error. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059. Record not showing any ruling on a motion, presumption is that ruling was waived. State v. Smith, 137 Iowa, 5, 114 NW 558. Proceedings below presumed regular, in absence of statement of facts, or bill of exceptions. Beyer v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 110 SW 749. Presumption is that testimony of witness, recalled at request of jury, who desired to know what his testimony was on a certain point, was the same as on his first examination; bill of exceptions should show difference, if any. Kiliman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 570, 112 SW 92. Testimony on recall, as shown by bill, held substantially same. Id. Presumed that indictment was read to jury by clerk, if not by prosecuting attorney. State v. Ralston [Iowa] 116 NW 1058. Where abstract showed demurrer and overruling thereof, and that defendant was adjudged guilty, it was presumed that court entered plea of not guilty after defendant refused to plead further, and that evidence was then taken on the charge. State v. Pitkin, 137 Iowa, 22, 114 NW 550. Assumed, in absence of any showing, that court followed usual practice and informed accused of his right to counsel, and that accused waived his right to have counsel appointed. Cutts v. State [Fla.] 45 S 491.

79. Edwards v. State [Fla.] 45 S 21. Where the evidence on which a person has been convicted is not in the record, appellate court must assume that it authorized conviction. State v. Morris [La.] 47 S 597. Conviction will be referred to good count, in absence of any contrary showing. Jones v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 519, 107 SW 849. In absence of evidence, presumed that crime was committed after enactment of statute defining it, as charged in indictment. Matlock v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 544, 109 SW 193.

80. Every presumption is in favor of the rulings of the trial court. Lewis v. State [Fla.] 45 S 998. It is the duty of the party appealing to show error affirmatively. Id. Accused has burden of showing prejudicial error in rulings at trial. People v. Hutchings [Cal. App.] 97 P 325. Ruling of court presumed correct; error must be made to appear. Reinhard v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 379, 106 SW 128. Motion for continuance not appearing in record, action of trial court presumed correct. Kinslow v. State, 85 Ark. 514, 109 SW 524. In absence of proper statement of facts, presumed that evidence heard by court on motion for new trial sustained his denial thereof. Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927. Presumed that documentary evidence properly admitted, bill of exceptions not containing it. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Where a plea in bar, made specific so as to set out alleged former conviction, etc., is not in the record, which shows only original plea, demurrer, and overruling of plea, it will be presumed that only a question of law was presented and that court's ruling was proper. McGinnis v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 525.

81. Ruling denying new trial on ground of remark by juror after being sworn, showing he was disqualified by his opinion, must be sustained, since it must be presumed that accused knew the facts concerning the juror and could have shown them on the voir dire. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032.

82. Where record recited trial by jury "impaneled and returned agreeably to the structions were proper and adequate,[83] and that they were followed by the jury,[84] that jurors conducted themselves properly,[85] that sentence was proper,[86] and that settlement of bill of exceptions was proper and after due notice given.[87] Where record shows presence of accused at any stage of the trial, his presence throughout will be presumed in the absence of any showing to the contrary.[88] Where the same name appears in different parts of the record, it will, in the absence of any dispute as to identity, be presumed to refer to the same person in each instance.[89]

Law of the case.[See 10 C. L. 233]—A decision on a former review becomes the law of the case,[90] where the facts are the same.[91]

Rulings on matters within the discretion of the trial court,[See 10 C. L. 233] such as rulings on application for bail,[92] rulings on qualifications of jurors challenged for cause,[93] rulings on motion for withdrawal of plea,[94] for change of venue,[95] for con-statute" and nothing in bill of exceptions negatived correctness of recital and no challenge to array appeared, there could be no reversal on ground that jury was not properly impaneled. State v. Tomasi [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 214. Overruling of challenge for cause presumed proper, evidence heard not being in record. State v. Howard, 120 La. 311, 45 S 260. Cannot be presumed that accused exhausted all perempory challenges, no showing being made, complaint being error in disallowing challenge for bias. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407.

83. Charge is to be construed as a whole. People v. Besold [Cal.] 97 P 871; State v. Doherty [Or.] 98 P 152. Charges should receive fair and reasonable construction and should be tested with reference to language used as a whole and in its proper connection. Hooton v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 6, 108 SW 651. Instruction presumed correct, not appearing in record. Stamper v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 580, 110 SW 389. Charge presumed correct in absence of facts. White v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 193, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 852, 106 SW 1167. Omissions in charge will not be presumed erroneous in absence of bills of exception or statement of facts. Wilson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 173, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 105 SW 1026. Burden on accused, on appeal, to show alleged error in instruction and prejudice therefrom. People v. Cain [Cal. App.] 93 P 1037. Presumed that instruction was refused because inapplicable to evidence, there being no showing by record or statement of judge that evidence required it. State v. Haywood, 121 La. 862, 46 S 889. In absence of evidence, it will be presumed that instructions refused by court were not applicable to the evidence. People v. Simmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 48. Presumption is that instruction not shown in record was correct and sufficient. People v. Russo [Cal. App.] 97 P 700. Evidence not being in record, presumption was that it warranted instructions given by court. State v. Pressler, 16 Wyo. 214, 92 P 806. In absence of evidence, instructions will be presumed to have been applicable thereto. State v. Connors, 37 Mont. 15, 94 P 199. Presumed that court told jurors that if a juror knew anything relative to the case he should disclose it in open court and not to the jury. State v. Lavin [W. Va.] 60 SE 888.

84. Presumed that jury followed law as given them by court. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 15 Det. Leg. N. 358, 116 NW 259, 571; State v. Symens [Iowa] 115 NW 878. Presumed that jury observed instructions and conceded facts. State v. Reed [Or.] 97 P 627. Presumed that jury observed cautionary instruction to disregard improper remarks of counsel. People v. Amer [Cal. App.] 96 P 401. Paper containing former finding, in prior trial, was admitted without concealing former verdict from jury, and court instructed jury to disregard it. Presumed that jury were not influenced by former verdict. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501.

85. Burden on accused to show prejudice resulting from separation of jurors. People v. Emmons [Cal. App.] 95 P 1032. Decision of trial court on question of alleged misconduct of jury presumed fair and impartial. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057.

86. Cannot be assumed that court abused discretion in fixing sentence, where facts are not in record. Saleen v. People, 41 Colo. 317, 92 P 731.

87. Presumed that bill of exceptions was properly settled, and due notice given. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247.

88. Owen v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 466. Trial being commenced and finished on same day, and presence of accused at commencement being shown, he will be presumed to have been present throughout. State v. Daniels [La.] 47 S 599. Where minutes show presence of accused at opening of session, it will be presumed that he remained in attendance. People v. Garnett [Cal. App.] 98 P 247. Where record showed accused was present at several stages of trial, presumption was that he was present throughout. State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 109 SW 35.

89. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 886.

90. Kennedy v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 83, 109 SW 313.

91. Evidence and statement of accused, as shown by record, being substantially the same as on a former trial and appeal, the decision that voluntary manslaughter was not involved in the case became the law of the case. Herrington v. State, 130 Ga. 307, 60 SE 572.

92. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 8042, the action of the trial court with reference to bail cannot be reviewed on appeal from final judgment. State v. Peck, 14 Idaho, 712, 95 P 515.

93. Finding on competency of juror not reviewable. State v. Banner [N. C.], 63 SE titnuance,[96] for bill of particulars,[97] rulings on competency of witnesses,[98] and on motions for new trial,[99] are not ordinarily reviewable, in the absence of abuse or manifest error. The sentence will not be disturbed, if authorized by law.[1]

On questions of fact See 10 C. L. 284 the finding of the trial court is conclusive, unless manifestly erroneous.[2] In like manner, the verdict of the jury will be sus-

84. Prisoner cannot object to court's excusing a juror. State v. Peterson [N. C.] 63 SE 87.

94. Exercise of discretion in permitting or refusing to allow withdrawal of plea of guilty is reviewable for abuse. Pope v. State [Fla.] 47 S 487.

95. Application for change of venue addressed to discretion. Johnson v. State [Okl. Cr. App.] 97 P 1059. Application for change of venue on ground of local prejudice is addressed largely to court's discretion, and its finding of fact will not be disturbed unless manifest error occurred. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 SW 999.

96. Granting or refusal of continuance discretionary. State v. Horn, 209 Mo. 452, 108 SW 3. Refusal of continuance not reviewable, no prejudice being shown and grounds of motion not appearing. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41.

97. Requiring of bill of particulars and proper compliance therewith. State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 62 SE 1088.

98. Ruling of court on competency of child as witness not reviewable. People v. Gregory [Cal. App.] 97 P 912. Competency of witness about 10 years old. McCormick v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 493, 108 SW 669.

99. Permitting application for new trial to be made more than 2 days after conviction being discretionary, refusal to allow it 5 days after will not be reviewed in absence of showing of abuse. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 16. The granting of new trial will be sustained unless a clear abuse of discretion appears. State v. Barber [Idaho] 96 P 116.

Denial of new trial not reviewable, under Cr. Code Prac. § 281. Jenkins v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 846. Cr. Code Prac. § 281 provides that decisions on motions for new trial are not subject to exceptions. Hence, matters so arising cannot be considered. Thomas v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 849, 111 SW 286. Refusal to grant a new trial is not assignable as error. Commonwealth v. Lombardi [Pa.] 70 A 122. Refusal of new trial not ground for reversal on evidence submitted. Scott v. State, 3 Ga. App. 479, 60 SE 112. Refusal of new trial on general grounds not disturbed, verdict being supported by same evidence. Waters v. State, 3 Ga. App. 649, 60 SE 335. No error in overruling motion for new trial where evidence authorized verdict. Lovett v. State, 130 Ga. 349, 60 SE 851. Refusal on new trial on ground of insufficiency of evidence not reviewable in absence of abuse of discretion. Hinsley v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 363. Refusal to grant new trial, not reviewable. Patton v. State [Ala.] 46 S 862. Refusal of new trial on ground of newly discovered impeaching evidence not reviewable. State v. Pamelia [La.] 47 S 508. Finding of court, on motion for new trial on ground that a juror had expressed an opinion, not distrubed. Essary v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 596, 111 SW 927. Refusal of new trial not an abuse of discretion, verdict being supported. State v. Henderson [S. C.] 60 SE 314. Judgment refusing new trial affirmed, where no error of law was assigned and verdict was supported by evidence. Jackson v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 538; Marshall v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 539. In the courts of the United States, the action of a trial court in denying a motion for new trial is not reviewable on appeal. Not necessarily abuse of discretion on part of trial court subjecting its action to review on appeal and requiring reversal, where court on motion for new trial refuses to give effect of changes of misconduct in trial when supported by affidavit and uncontradicted. Paolucci v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 217.

1. Sentence will not be reviewed unless it exceeds statutory limit. Taylor v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1048. Objection that sentence is excessive will not be considered unless it is in excess of that provided by law for offense charged. Reese v. State, 3 Ga. App. 532, 60 SE 284. The discretion of the court in fixing punishment cannot be interfered with on review, if sentence is within legal limits. Coppage v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 113.

2. Finding that person was an accomplice, based on evidence not disturbed. State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 37 Mont. 191, 95 P 593. Findings of fact by a trial judge, made on hearing of motion and based on conflicting evidence, are conclusive. People v. Siemsen, 153 Cal. 387, 95 P 863. Finding of trial court on juror's qualifications, based on conflicting statements by juror, not reviewable. People v. Maughs [Cal. App.] 96 P 407. If there is any evidence to support judgment of judge, trying case without jury, it will not be disturbed. Huff v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 454, 111 SW 731. Court's finding that no motion for new trial was actually made conclusive, affidavits being conflicting. People v. Long [Cal. App.] 93 P 387. Where by agreement a criminal action is tried without a jury, the finding of the court is entitled to the same consideration on review as a jury's verdict. State v. Ozias, 136 Iowa, 175, 113 NW 761. On appeal by state from order quashing indictment, sufficiency of evidence (heard in part by trial court) cannot be considered. State v. Cline, 146 N. C. 640, 61 SE 522. Order denying challenge to juror for cause is reviewable only when evidence is so opposed to decision as to make question one of law. People v. Duncan [Cal. App.] 96 P 414. Finding of court that jurors had not been guilty of prejudicial misconduct, supported by evidence, not disturbed. Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370. Where trial is by the court without a jury, and no declarations of law are asked or given, there is nothing for review except the evidence, and judgment will be affirmed if court's verdict is supported by substantial evidence. State v. Willis, 128 Mo. App. 214, 106 SW 584.

Finding of fact by trial court on motion for new trial conclusive on appeal. Decker.

v. State, 85 Ark. 64, 107 SW 182. Supreme court will not weigh evidence submitted to trial court on motion for new trial. State v. Baker [Kan.] 97 P 785. Discretion of trial court in passing upon weight and credibility of evidence submitted on hearing of motion for new trial is not reviewable. Fouraker v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 116. Denial of motion for new trial on ground of insufficiency of evidence not reviewable. Mason v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 776. Overruling of motion for new trial not disturbed where evidence in support thereof was conflicting (ground was disqualification of juror by expression of opinion). State v. Smith [Mo.] 113 SW 1062. Discretion of court in refusing to set aside verdict for insufficiency of evidence not reviewable. State v. Arnold, 146 N. C. 602, 60 SE 504. Great weight is to be given action of trial court in granting or refusing a motion to set aside verdict, especially in capital cases. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62. Motion for new trial on ground that juror had disqualified himself by an expression of opinion is addressed to court's discretion. Commonwealth v. Garrito [Pa.] 71 A 20.

3. Verdict not disturbed if supported by evidence. Nelson v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1072; Mathews v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 292; Brown v. State, 130 Ga. 623, 61 SE 477; Strickland v. State, 130 Ga. 740, 61 SE 529; Ryals v. State, 130 Ga. 770, 61 SE 720; Thornton v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 736; Patterson v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 881; Boyer v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 95; Robereon v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 539; Craig v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 397; State v. Hibler, 79 S. C. 170, 60 SE 438; Tyler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 106 SW 363; Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370; Curlee v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 395, 110 SW 65; Howard v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 378, 111 SW 1038; Olds v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 272. If supported by substantial evidence. State v. Hamlett, 212 Mo. 80, 110 SW 1082; State v. Sharpless, 212 Mo. 176, 111 SW 69; State v. Scott [Mo.] 113 SW 1069. Verdict will not be disturbed if supported by any evidence. People v. Kauffman, 152 Cal. 331, 92 P 861; People v. Oliver [Cal. App.] 95 P 172; Jarboe v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 755, 107 SW 227. Only question on appeal is whether there is any evidence tending to show guilt. Sims v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 443, 106 SE 214; Martin v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 657, 106 SW 863; Begley v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 890, 107 SW 243; Spencer v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 880, 107 SW 342; Payne v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 229, 110 SW 311; Foster v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 975, 112 SW 563; Ehrlick v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 979, 112 SW 565; Miller v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1001, 112 SW 598; Jenkins v. Com. [Ky.] 113 SW 846. Verdict will not be disturbed when supported by legally sufficient evidence. Strobhar v. State [Fla.] 47 S 4; McDonald v. State [Fla.] 47 S 485. Evidence, though meager, held not so deficient as to warrant appellate court in disturbing verdict. Jordan v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 838. Evidence sufficient to authorize verdict; no review. White v. State, 3 Ga. App. 608, 60 SE 287. Verdict will not be disturbed unless there is an absolute failure of proof, or proof is of such character as to warrant inference that verdict is result of passion, prejudice or mistake. State v. Barton [Mo.] 113 SW 1111. Refusal to set aside verdict is error of law only if there is no material testimony tending reasonably to establish it. State v. Hampton, 79 S. C. 179, 60 SE 669. Case for jury where evidence raised more than suspicion or conjecture of guilt. State v. Harrison, 145 N. C. 408, 59 SE 867. It is only when there is no evidence to support one or more of the essential elements of the offense that an appellate court may reverse a cause on the ground that it is contrary to the law and the evidence. Eacock v. State, 169 Ind. 488, 82 NE 1039. Verdict not disturbed where evidence was sufficient if believed by jury. State v. Gilluly [Wash.] 96 P 512. When there is evidence to sustain verdict, appellate court has no jurisdiction to set it aside, no question of law being involved. People v. Caulfield [Cal. App.] 95 P 666. Verdict based on circumstantial evidence not disturbed. People v. Morris [Cal. App.] 93 P 1132. In a criminal case where the weight and sufficiency of the evidence is brought into question, a conviction should not stand unless the evidence is such, if credible, that a jury may reasonably conclude defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and it ought not to be set aside and a new trial granted unless it is so manifestly against the weight of the evidence as to impeach the integrity, motive or intelligence of the jury so that in justice it ought to be set aside. Conviction held warranted. Lemen v. People, 133 Ill. App. 295. Verdict sustained by substantial evidence and approved by trial judge will not be disturbed. State v. Page, 212 Mo. 224, 110 SW 1057. Verdict approved by trial court not disturbed. Jones v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 133; Cox v. State, 3 Ga. App. 609, 60 SE 283; Askew v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 737. Verdict fairly supported by evidence and approved by trial court will not be disturbed. McDonald v. State [Fla.] 47 S 485.

4. Jaime v. Ter. [Ariz.] 94 P 1092; People v. Russo [Cal. App.] 97 P 700; McDonald v. State [Fla.] 47 S 485; People v. Honchler, 231 Ill. 566, 83 NE 428; Brock v. Com., 33 Ky. L. App. 628, 108 SW 370; Cunningham v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 522, 108 SW 678; Wylie v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 182, 109 SW 186; Drennan v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 311, 109 SW 1090; Harryman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 474, 110 SW 926; Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 111 SW 144; Starke v. State [Wyo.] 96 P 148. Verdict based on conflicting evidence, with which trial court has refused to interfere, not disturbed on appeal. State v. Stewart, 63 W. Va. 597, 60 SE 591. Conflict in evidence conclusively determined by jury. Smith v. State, 3 Ga. App. 509, 60 SE 274. Conviction, based on conflicting evidence, approved by trial court, not disturbed on appeal. State v. Clem [Wash.] 94 P 1079. Judgment in misdemeanor case based on conflicting evidence will not be reversed unless it appears to appellate court to be clearly wrong. Gebhardt v. State [Neb.] 114

ciency cannot be determined without passing upon the credibility of the witnesses [5] or the weight of the evidence,[6] appellate courts being generally without power to review questions of fact;[7] but a verdict will be set aside as contrary to law if there is not evidence to support it,[8] or if it appears that the jury arbitrarily disregarded evidence which should have been considered.[9] On a review of the evidence, only that received on the trial will be considered.[10] In New York the unanimous affirmance of a judgment of conviction by the appellate division precludes consideration of the sufficiency of evidence by the court of appeals.[11]

NW 290. Whers evidence is conflicting, verdict will not be disturbed if supported by evidence. Van Schaick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 159 F 847. Controverted questions of fact are not reviewable. McElroy v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 57, 111 SW 948. Vedict imposing death penalty, based on conflicting testimony as to defendant's age, not disturbed. Gibson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 349, 110 SW 41. Verdicts on conflicting evidence not disturbed unless palpably contrary to decided weight of evidence. People v. Nylin, 236 Ill. 19, 86 NE 156. Verdict based on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed if substantially supported. State v. Baldwin [Mo.] 113 SW 1123. Finding of jury on plea of former jeopardy, based on conflicting evidence, not disturbed. Benton v. State, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 422, 107 SW 837.

5. Jury are judges of credibility of witnesses and weight of testimony. Thomas v. State, 85 Ark. 357, 108 SW 224; Dowell v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1344, 108 SW 847; State v. Halvorson, 103 Minn. 265, 114 NW 957. Jury being sole judges of credibility of witnesses, verdict will not be disturbed because prosecuting witness was impeached. Henderson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 514, 107 SW 820. Court will not interfere in prosecution in police court for betting on horse race, credibility and weight of evidence being involved. Pfieffer v. U. S., 31 App. D. C. 109. Conviction based on conflicting evidence not disturbed as contrary to evidence, weight thereof, and credibility of witnesses being for jury and trial court, which denied new trial. People v. Cain [Cal. App.] 93 P 1037. Act Feb. 15, 1870, requiring supreme court to review law and evidence in first degree murder cases, does not require court to pass on credibility of witnesses and weight of evidence, but only to investigate whether there is sufficient evidence, if believed, to sustain the verdict. Commonwealth v. Garrito [Pa.] 71 A 20.

6. Weight of evidence, and whether it establishes facts claimed by state is for jury. State v. Washelesky [Conn.] 70 A 62; State v. McDowell [Mo.] 113 SW 1113; Malone v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 113 SW 530. Appellate court cannot weigh the evidence. Cheek v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 779; State v. Long, 209 Mo. 366, 108 SW 35; Cordes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 943. Determination of jury as to sufficiency of evidence and degree of crime not reviewable where based solely on facts. People v. Fossetti [Cal. App.] 95 P 384. Appellate court does not pass on question of preponderance of evidence. City of Gallatin v. Fannin, 128 Mo. App. 324, 107 SW 479. An appellate court will not weigh conflicting evidence, or attempt to determine its preponderance, and will reverse only in case of a failure or want of evidence to support some material element of the offense charged. Williams v. State [Ind.] 85 NE 113. Judgment of circuit court affirming that of common pleas, after weighing the evidence, held final and conclusive on the facts. Lemmon v. State, 77 Ohio St. 427, 83 NE 608.

7. Findings of facts below are conclusive on supreme court. State v. Yoe [S. C.] 61 SE 880. Finding of jury on issue of fact not revewable. Soell v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 514. Since revision of Cr. Proc. Act, § 136, where entire record is returned with writ of error, appellate court is not authorized to review the evidence adduced at the trial. State v. Herron [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 274. Where issue whether witness was accomplice was submitted to jury, with instructions as to corroboration which was necessary, a verdict of guilty is a finding that witness was not an accomplice and is not reviewable. McElroy v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 57, 111 SW 948. Verdict of jury on admissibility of confession, where made under proper circumstances, binding on supreme court. State v. Foster, 136 Iowa, 527, 114 NW 36. Exception involving mere question of fact not considered. State v. Washington [S. C.] 61 SE 896.

8. New trial ordered where verdict was without evidence to support it. Allen v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1003. Verdict set aside as contrary to law where there was no evidence to show malice or intent to kill in assault case. Crumley v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1005. Evidence will be reviewed and new trial granted if there is no evidence to support verdict, question being properly saved for review. Hinsley v. U. S. [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 363. To sustain conviction, evidence must be sufficient to show commission of offense and to connect defendant with it. Id. Verdict set aside because not supported by required amount of evidence, being based on suspicion only. Thompson v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 571.

9. Judgment reversed and cause remanded where jury appeared to have arbitrarily and without reason rejected and disregarded testimony of unimpeached independent eye witness to killing. Jones v. State [Miss.] 45 S 145.

10. An appeal from judgment of conviction only indictment and evidence received under it at trial can be considered; not evidence in affidavits for new trial. People v. Henry, 111 NYS 1005. Evidence heard on motion to place defendant on probation, and not given in the trial, cannot be considered in appellate court where sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict is questioned. People v. Scobie [Cal. App.] 95 P 667.

11. People v. Gibson, 191 N. Y. 227, 83 NE 976.

(§ 17) I. Decision and judgment of the reviewing court.[See 10 C. L. 236]—Affirmance results where the members of the appellate court are equally divided in opinion [12] and, in some jurisdictions, where appellant fails to appear,[13] or fails to present a proper record.[14] Where no final judgment appears, the cause may be remanded.[15] Where the error results only in a mistrial, the cause will be remanded for new trial.[16] If the proceedings, were otherwise valid, an erroneous or illegal sentence does not necessitate a new trial; in such case the cause will be remanded with instructions to impose proper sentence.[17] A judgment of conviction on several counts should not be affirmed in part and reversed in part but should be reversed or affirmed as a whole;[18] but judgment may be reversed in part and affirmed in part when the legal part is severable from the illegal part.[19] Judgment may be affirmed as to one defendant and reversed as to a codefendant.[20] Evidence being admitted on two charges, and case being submitted thereon, reversal must follow where part of statute on which one charge was based is held inavlid.[21] Reversal, with instructions to dismiss, follows where indictment is fatally defective and evidence shows no offense.[22] Defendant will be ordered discharged where further prosecution would be barred.[23] The judgment on appeal must conform to the law in force at the time.[24] The su-

Yeates v. State, 129 Ga. 636, 59 SE 771. Judgment affirmed as to question on which judges were equally divided. Lewis v. State, 129 Ga. 731, 59 SE 782.

13. Failure of appellant to file brief or appear on oral argument warrants affirmance of judgment. Pen. Code, § 1253. People v. Albitre, 153 Cal. 367, 95 P 653.

14. All assignments of error depending on consideration of evidence, and brief of evidence not being approved by trial judge, judgment was affirmed. Madison v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1068. No statement of case having been served on solicitor, or tendered, and none appearing in the record, judgment affirmed. State v. Lewis, 145 N. C. 585, 59 SE 999. Affirmance of judgment of lower court will not result from failure to transmit part of record material to clear understanding of errors complained of, if there is a sufficient assignment of error to enable the court to understand and pass upon the errors, either by reference to the bill of exceptions or the bill and the record together. Mason v. Terrell, 3 Ga. App. 348, 60 SE 4.

15. Where no final judgment appeared, opinion which had been filed was withdrawn, submission of appeal set aside, and cause remanded for final judgment on verdict. State v. Hodges, 207 Mo. 517, 106 SW 51.

16. Cusiter v. Silverton [Or.] 93 P 234.

17. State v. Gilluly [Wash.] 96 P 512; State v. King [Wash.] 97 P 247. Where sentence is void and the judgment otherwise is affirmed. Lemmon v. State, 77 Ohio St. 427, 83 NE 608. Sentence under wrong statute does not render the prosecution of no effect. Wechsler v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 158 F 579. Where sentence is erroneous and has not been executed. Hamilton v. State, 78 Ohio St. 76, 84 NE 601. Where sentence was under intermediate sentence act (Laws 1907, p. 344), which was ex post facto as to defendant, cause was reserved and remanded with instructions to pronounce sentence according to law. State v. Gilluly [Wash.] 96 P 512. A workhouse sentence having been illegally imposed for violation of the Valentine anti-trust law will be set aside on review and the case remanded to the trial court for resentence, which may be by fine or imprisonment or both, in the discretion of the court as on original hearing. Arnsman v. Ohio, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 113. Where the verdict failed to provide for punishment by fine, an imposition of a fine in the judgment is erroneous, and the appellate court may correct the same without reversal. Shields v. People, 132 Ill. App. 109. Where the sentence is void, but the verdict is valid, relator should be remanded for proper sentence. Ex parte Burden [Miss.] 45 S 1.

18. Judgment on certain counts of information charging illegal sales of liquor held a unit. People v. Gaul, 233 Ill. 630, 84 NE 721.

19. Yeoman v. State [Neb.] 117 NW 997.

20. Instructions being correct as to one of two defendants, and evidence tending to show guilt, judgment affirmed as to him, though reversed as to codefendant. Williams v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 330, 110 SW 339.

21. State v. Merchant, 48 Wash. 69, 92 P 890.

22. Weston v. Ter. [Okl. Cr. App.] 98 P 360.

23. Where conviction of robbery was reversed because information was sufficient to charge only larceny, defendant was ordered discharged, since he had been placed in jeopardy on larceny charge, and new trial would be useless. People v. Ho Sing, 6 Cal. App. 752, 93 P 204.

24. In Texas the repeal of a law, where the repealing law substitutes no other penalty, will exempt from punishment persons who have offended against the repealed law, unless the repealing statute otherwise provides. Pen. Code 1895, art. 16. Hall v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 195, 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 335, 106 SW 149. Where such repeal takes place pending an appeal, the cause must be disposed of according to the law in force of the time, and no proceeding to enforce pun-preme court of the Philippine Islands may reverse the judgment of the lower court in a criminal case on defendant's appeal and convict him on the same facts of a different offense calling for an increased penalty,[25] and defendant is not thereby placed twice in jeopardy for the same offense.[26] The decision may be controlled by practical considerations, such as the purpose of obtaining an authoritative decision by a federal court on a federal question.[27]

(§ 17) J. Proceedings after reversal and remand.[See 10 C. L. 237]—It is the duty of the lower court, on receiving the mandate of the appellate court affirming the judgment complained of to see that it is carried into execution,[28] unless leave is granted the lower court to exercise its discretion in the matter of granting a new trial on the ground of newly-discovered evidence.[29] When a judgment is affirmed by the supreme court, all questions raised by assignments of error and all questions that might have been so raised are to be regarded as finally adjudicated,[30] and no lower court or judge thereof has jurisdiction to declare the judgment void or to grant a writ of habeas corpus to determine the validity of the imprisonment thereunder.[31] Where a trial is had upon an indictment charging murder in the first degree, a verdict for manslaughter is an acquittal of higher degrees of homicide,[32] and on a new trial, obtained by defendant, he cannot be again tried for or convicted of any degree higher than manslaughter.[33] In such cases the court should at the outset of the new trial instruct the jury that they must confine their inquiries to the offense of manslaughter and to lower degrees of crime included therein.[34] Evidence tending to establish elements of the higher degrees of homicide, and not tending to establish the crime of manslaughter, should not be received,[35] and argument with reference to such matters should be excluded,[36] though it has been held that a conviction of manslaughter may be had on evidence showing murder.[37] Similarly, conviction of murder in the second degree is an acquittal of murder in the first degree and bars subsequent prosecution for that offense.[38]

ishment will be taken. Judgment reversed and prosecution dismissed where law violated had been repealed. Fish law. Id. Cause was transferred from county to circuit court, and conviction therein reversed and cause ordered sent back to county court. Act establishing county court was then repealed, and causes pending therein transferred to circuit court. On error, former judgment and order recalled and cause ordered to remain in circuit court, conviction being set aside. Ex parte Bennefield [Ala.] 46 S 772.

25, 26. Flemister v. U. S., 207 U. S. 372, 52 Law. Ed. 252.

27. Where demurrer to indictment raised question of power of legislature to legislate regarding national banks, supreme court overruled exception to trial court's ruling overruling the demurrer in order that an authoritative decision might be had in federal courts, if case was not otherwise disposed of on the trial. State v. People's Nat. Bank [N. H.] 70 A 542.

28. Angle v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 264.

29. Modification to grant leave to lower court to grant new trial refused. Judgment affirmed. Angle v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 162 F 264.

31. People v. Cook County Super. Ct., 234 Ill. 186, 84 NE 875.

32. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93. Where information charges murder, conviction of manslaughter is an acquittal of first and second degree murder. People v. Huntington [Cal. App.] 97 P 760.

33. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

34. Error to refuse to give such instruction, when requested, at beginning of case. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

35. Issues of premeditation, etc., tending only to show murder, should not be submitted to jury. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

36. Error to refuse to exclude argument, and for court to state in presence of jury that premeditation, etc., could be considered, but conviction could not be had of any offense higher than manslaughter. West v. State [Fla.] 46 S 93.

37. Where accused was convicted of manslaughter on former trial, being thus acquitted of murder, he was not, on second trial, entitled to an instruction that if evidence showed murder only he must be acquitted, since he could be convicted of manslaughter under evidence showing murder. Burnett v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 515, 112 SW 74.

38. Where one indicted for murder in the first degree is convicted of murder in the second degree, this is an acquittal of murder in the first degree, and he cannot be tried on that charge on a second trial, and the court should so instruct the jury. Commonwealth v. Deitrick [Pa.] 70 A 275.

§ 18. Summary prosecutions and review thereof.[See 10 C. L. 238]—Prosecutions for violations of municipal ordinances are sometimes considered civil in nature.[39] Prosecutions in city courts and before magistrates and justices and other inferior courts are regulated by ordinance, charter or statute, and procedure varies in different jurisdictions. In the notes are given decisions relating to the jurisdictions of such courts,[40] disqualifications of presiding officer,[41] the sufficiency of the accusation [42] and amendment thereof,[43] variance between accusation and proof,[44] right to jury trial and waiver thereof,[45] necessity of bond for costs,[46] power to continue causes,[47] perpetua-

39. A proceeding against one charged with violation of a municipal ordinance is partly civil and partly criminal in nature. Character of proceeding and power of municipality discussed, validity of ordinance being issue. O'Haver v. Montgomery [Tenn.] 111 SW 449.

40. Justice of peace held to have no jurisdiction of assault committed by throwing scalding water. Martin v. State [Ala.] 47 S 104. Intendant of town of Central has jurisdiction of violation of ordinance punishable by fine of "not less than $100," or 30 days imprisonment. Town of Central v. Madden [S. C.] 61 SE 1028. The legislature has power to authorize municipal courts to arrest and try offenders against municipal ordinances for offenses committed outside the county. Intoxicating liquor ordinances. Jurisdiction beyond county lines upheld Town of Gower v. Agee, 128 Mo. App. 427, 107 SW 999. Accused were arrested on magistrate's warrant, but taken before circuit court, which alone had power to try them and require then to be put under bond to keep the peace. Held, accused could not complain. Lowe v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1078, 112 SW 647. Loc. Acts 1907, p. 329, creating inferior court and conferring on it original and exclusive jurisdiction of all misdemeanors committed in county, held valid. Ex parte O'Neal [Ala.] 45 S 712. Unless one accused of violating Rev. St. § 4405, governing sale of drugs by registered pharmacists, waive a jury in writing, the magistrate has no authority to punish and can only bind prisoner over to the proper court. Sickles v. State, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 338.

41. Bias or prejudice on part of presiding justice of peace does not disqualify him; only kinship or pecuniary interest. Const. § 171; Code 1906, § 2724. Evans v. State [Miss.] 45 S 706.

42. In prosecutions in police court for violations of ordinances, no written information or indictment is required, and proceedings are not closely scrutinized as to form. Burrow v. Hot Springs, 85 Ark. 396, 108 SW 823. A complaint charging a violation of an ordinance is not to be so strictly construed as an indictment. Only that degree of certainty is required which will inform defendant of what he is called upon to defend. City of Gallatin v. Fannin, 128 Mo. App. 324, 107 SW 479. Accusation in city court based on affidavit made before magistrate for purpose of procuring warrant for arrest of accused is sufficient compliance with act creating city court, requiring trial on "written accusation, setting forth plainly the offense charged, founded on the affidavit of the prosecutor." Griffin v. State, 3 Ga. App. 476, 60 SE 277. Claim of maximum fine in complaint in city court held surplusage. Harrison v. Anniston [Ala.] 46 S 980. Affidavit in police court is sufficient if it charges an offense substantially in language of statute and ordinance violated. Burrow v. Hot Springs, 85 Ark. 396, 108 SW 823. In proceeding for violation of fish and game act (Laws 1903, p. 534, § 33), before a justice, it is not essential that a special note of the day, month and year of institution of action be endorsed on the complaint, or that name of person prosecuting or title of statute be endorsed on summons. Minard v. Dover, R. & P. O. Gas Co. [N. J. Law] 68 A 910. Under statutes giving a mayor jurisdiction as police justice over violations of city ordinances, and also as justice of the peace over prosecutions under state laws, an accusation must show whether a violation of an ordinance or of a state law is charged (Washington v. State [Miss.] 46 S 539), and the record on appeal must clearly show whether an offense against the city or state is charged (Id.). An affidavit purporting to be made in the city police court, but charging only an offense against the state, is fatally defective. Id. Where a constable served upon a saloonkeeper, for violation of the Sunday liquor law, a warrant calling for the arrest of "John Doe, whose real name to the affiant was unknown," and made a return upon this warrant, and a trial and conviction followed, and no additional affidavit was made and no other warrant served, and at the trial the conviction was procured on facts occurring after the taking out of the "John Doe" warrant and before it was served, the defendant was tried without an affidavit supporting the charge. Murray v. State, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 155.

43. Solicitor of city court has right to amend accusation prior to arraignment, and interlineations will be presumed to have been properly made. Crawford v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 501. Amendment of judgment of police court to correct mere clerical error proper. Not a second judgment. Ex parte Hornef [Cal.] 97 P 891. Solicitor of city court may amend an accusation in said court at any time before defendant pleads thereto if the affidavit of the prosecutor will support the accusation and the statute creating the court does not forbid amendments. Jackson v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 862.

44. Where complaint charged sale of "whole milk" and proof showed sale of "skimmed milk," two being regulated by different sections of ordinance, variance fatal. City of St. Louis v. Klausmeier, 212 Mo. 724, 111 SW 507.

45. Under Gen. Laws 1886-87, p. 838, establishing criminal court of Jefferson county, accused must apply for jury trial within 10

tion of testimony,[48] power to find facts and necessity or propriety of such findings,[49] power to assess punishment,[50] and as to the form,[51] correction [52] and suspension [53] of sentence. In Wisconsin a commitment by a justice is proper where the sentence is imprisonment without a fine, and where sentence is imprisonment in default of payment of a fine, a commitment issued to carry such judgment into effect is not void,[54] though an execution against the body would be the appropriate mode of enforcing the judgment.[55] Upon conviction and sentence of imprisonment before a justice of the peace, in Minnesota, a commitment may be issued at any time while the judgment stands unexecuted,[56] and where an appeal is taken to the district court, but dismissed, the justice may proceed after the dismissal.[57]

Review.[See 10 C. L. 238]—Jurisdiction to review proceedings of inferior courts is statutory,[58] as are proceedings necessary to perfect an appeal. Holdings as to transmission [59] and amendment [60] of the transcript or record and sufficiency of appeal bond [61] are given in the notes. Payment of a fine by one prosecuted for violation of days after being arrested or taken into custody. Merriweather v. State [Ala.] 45 S 420. Right to jury trial in city court waived by failure to make timely demand. Harrison v. Anniston [Ala.] 46 S 980. Jury trial in county court waived by failure to demand jury before first jury term after arrest, under statute. Hammond v. State [Ala.] 45 S 654. Same ruling under statute and rule of Gadsen City court. Demand for jury trial too late. Stafford v. State [Ala.] 45 S 673.

46. Under Kirby's Dig. § 2476, accused need not give bond for costs in prosecution in city court for violating ordinance. Emerson v. McNeil, 84 Ark. 552, 106 SW 479.

47. Postponements by justice of peace not exceeding 60 days are within his discretion under Pen. Code, § 1052. Alleged abuse of discretion can be reviewed only on appeal from judgment, with proper record. In re Yung [Cal. App.] 96 P 24. Magistrates have power to continue causes for cause shown, in South Carolina, though no statute expressly confers the power. Power incidental to power to hear causes; also would probably exist under provisions of Cr. Code 1902, § 20. State v. Pope, 79 S. C. 87, 60 SE 234.

48. Mayors having powers of magistrates, must take down testimony of witnesses in summary proceedings in writing and have same signed by witnesses. Cr. Code 1902, §§ 66, 67, 68, contemplates this procedure, since appeals can be heard under such statutes, only on evidence so reduced to writing. City of Greenville v. Latimer [S. C.] 61 SE 224.

49. In trial by judge without jury in Jefferson county court, no special finding of facts can be required. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 771. Special findings by the court are unauthorized in criminal cases. So held in criminal trial in city court, without a jury. Dean v. State [Ala.] 45 S 651.

50. Under Acts 1894-95, p. 1062, § 19, city court may award punishment of hard labor. Harrison v. Anniston [Ala.] 46 S 980. A police court has authority under the law of Ohio to commit to the workhouse upon conviction of a misdemeanor. In re Schooler, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 276. Prisoner between ages of 16 and 30, convicted before magistrate of disorderly conduct, may be committed to New York City Reformatory, under Greater New York Charter, Laws 1905, c. 305, § 698. In re Jacobs, 57 Misc. 655, 109 NYS 1068.

51. Laws 1905, p. 574, c. 305, provides that magistrate shall not fix limit of period of imprisonment, but that a sentence fixing a definite time shall not be void, but person sentenced shall be entitled to benefits of act. Commitment for "three years, unless sooner dicharged or paroled," not invalid. In re Jacobs, 57 Misc. 655, 109 NYS 1068.

52. Where a justice of the peace has imposed an erroneous sentence, he should issue an alias caplas for defendant and impose a proper sentence. Smithey v. State [Miss.] 46 S 410.

53. Sentence of fine and imprisonment passed by police judge is not invalidated by provision that defendant may go upon his own recognizance until order of commitment is issued. Order may issue any time before his term would expire, though not thereafter. In re Murphy [Kan.] 98 P 214.

57. Justice does not lose jurisdiction to issue commitment. State v. Long, 103 Minn. 29, 114 NW 248.

58. No appeal lies from recorder's court of city of Anniston to circuit court. Appeal must be to city court under charter. Reid v. Greene [Ala.] 47 S 195. Under Rev. St. 1908, § 7356, circuit court may in first instance take and intertain jurisdiction of proceedings in error to review judgment of mayor of incorporated village convicting a defendant of crime. State v. Mattingly [Ohio] 86 NE 353.

59. Under Acts 1905, p. 376, § 2, on appeal from justice to circuit court, it is duty of justice to file transcript in circuit clerk's office. Where transcript was filed in time and accused was present on proper day demanding trial dismissal of appeal was error. Cain v. State [Ark.] 111 SW 267.

60. In appeal to district court from magistrate's judgment, rule to compel magistrate to make further or amended transcript properly refused where facts shown would not affect questions to be considered by the court. Thomsen v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 330.

61. Appeal from justice to county court should have been dismissed, bond not being conditioned as required by statute. Bunton an ordinance is not a bar to proceedings for review.[62] On appeal from the judgment of an inferior court or magistrate, trial is commonly de novo.[63] In such case, accused is entitled, in some jurisdictions, to be arraigned in the appellate court.[64] Usually pleadings may be amended in the reviewing court [65] or new pleadings filed therein.[66] No presumptions are indulged in favor of the judgment below.[67] Special findings of the trial court, not authorized by law, will not be considered.[68] But when authorized, findings of facts, in a trial by a judge without a jury, will not be disturbed on appeal [69] unless the evidence is legally insufficient.[70] If conviction is supported by competent evidence, a reversal need not result from the introductiton of incompetent evidence.[71] Erroneous sentence in a police court may be corrected on appeal.[72] In Kentucky where a defendant pleads guilty in a justice court, he may, on appeal, introduce evidence for the purpose of reducing the sentence without withdrawing the plea of guilty.[73] Such plea may, however, be withdrawn at any time in the circuit court,[74] and if the former plea of guilty be then offered in evidence, defendant may show that it was entered under duress and fear.[75] In Mississippi on appeal from a mayor's court, verbal testimony of the mayor is incompetent to amend the transcript of the record.[76] Such amendment must be by the book itself or by certified amended transcript from the book.[77]

In many jurisdictions, review is by certiorari. In the notes are given holdings as to the necessity and sufficiency of the bond required in such cases,[78] sufficiency of

v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 618, 108 SW 373. Bond on appeal from justice to district court not conditioned "that defendant abide by judgment of the court," insufficient under Rev. Laws 1905, § 4018. State v. Mattson [Minn.] 117 NW 503. Bond on appeal from municipal to district court, conditioned that defendant shall be and appear at first general term of district court, and shall not depart thence without leave duly granted, does not conform to Rev. Laws 1905, § 4018, and is void. Id. Rev. Laws 1905, § 3989, that lack of or defect in bond shall not defeat appeal if sufficient bond be given, applies only to civil cases. Id. Hence defective bond could not be remedied by new bond in criminal appeal. Id.

63. On appeal from recorder's to city court (Anniston), trial is de novo. Harrison v. Anniston [Ala.] 46 S 980. On appeal from justice to county court, trial in latter court is de novo. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 396, 110 SW 63. Under Pen. Code, § 2717, appeals from justice court are tried de novo in district court. Hence, if action in justice court properly instituted, failure to give judgment in time or holding court on legal holiday would not invalidate proceedings. In re Graye, 36 Mont. 394, 93 P 266.

64. Error where record showed there was no arraignment and that court's attention was called thereto. Washington v. State [Miss.] 46 S 539.

65. Pending appeal under Cr. Code, § 324, from judgment of magistrate, district court may permit filing of amended complaint which does not essentially or materialy alter the original charge. Ruffing v. State [Neb.] 114 NW 583. Circuit court has power to allow amendment to warrant on appeal to it from inferior court proceedings and trial being de novo. Pabst Brew. Co. v. Com., 32 Ky. L. R. 1010, 107 SW 728.

66. On appeal from police court to district court, latter may allow new complaint to be filed without quashing old one and without new warrant of arrest, accused being under recognizance. City of Topeka v. Durein [Kan.] 97 P 967.

67. In reviewing judgments and conclusions of city court, supreme court must pass on evidence without any presumptions in favor of judgment below. Dean v. State [Ala.] 45 S 651.

68. Special findings by city court trying case without a jury, not being authorized, cannot be considered on appeal. Dean v. State [Ala.] 45 S 651. Recitals or findings of fact incorporated by a justice in his judgment are unauthorized, and cannot be considered on appeal. Ex parte Thompson [Ark.] 109 SW 1171.

69. Exception that finding of guilt by judge, in trial without a jury, is not supported by evidence, is not reviewable. Thomas v. State [Ala.] 46 S 771. Where statute requires review of judgment on evidence, and the evidence is oral, or partly oral and partly in writing, the finding of the trial judge is on same footing as a verdict, and will not be set aside unless plainly incorrect. York v. State [Ala.] 45 S 893.

70. On appeal from a mayor's court, a conviction without introduction in evidence of the ordinance alleged to have been violated cannot be sustained. Spears v. Osyka [Miss.] 46 S 558.

71. Where trial was before police justice without a jury, receiving of incompetent evidence was held not ground for reversal where conviction was supported by other competent evidence. People v. Bradley, 58 Misc. 507, 111 NYS 625.

72. Excess of fine or sentence to wrong jail may be so corrected. Washington v. State [Miss.] 46 S 539.

73, 74, 75. Holtman v. Com. [Ky.] 112 SW 851.

76, 77. Washington v. State [Miss.] 46 S 539.

78. Supersedeas bond required by Laws the petition for certiorari,[79] the office [80] and sufficiency of the answer or return,[81] the time of hearing thereon [82] and notice of such hearing,[83] the nature and office of the writ of certiorari and scope of review theron.[84] Application for a writ of certiorari

1902, p. 105, as condition precedent to application for certiorari from municipal court, is in effect payable to corporation when made payable to mayor and his successors in office. Such bond, otherwise good, is a sufficient compliance with statute. Williams v. Tifton, 3 Ga. App. 445, 60 SE 113. A writ of certiorari without a legal bond is a nullity and must be dismissed. The filing of a proper bond or an affidavit in forma pauperis is an indispensable prerequisite to the issuance of the writ. Simon v. Savannah [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1036. Certiorari bond, in proceeding to review judgment of mayor of municipality, must be conditioned for appearance of defendant to abide final order, judgment or sentence of municipal court or of superior court. McDonald v. Ludowici, 3 Ga. App. 654, 60 SE 337. Such bond should be payable to municipality and be in an amount and with surety approved by officer giving judgment or clerk of the court. Id. Certiorari properly dismissed where bond was not conditioned as required by statute, and not approved. McDonald v. Ludowici, 3 Ga. App. 654, 60 SE 337; Tooke v. Oglethorpe [Ga. App.] 62 SE 544. Bond conditioned to pay eventual condemnation money not a substitute for bond required by Acts 1902, p. 105. Simon v. Savannah [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1036.

79. Petition for certiorari to correct errors of criminal court of Atlanta is properly verified by affidavit in the former prescribed by Civ. Code 1895, § 4638. Hood v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 570. The allegations of the petition for certiorari must be taken as prima facie true until the answer is filed. Green v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 234. It is unnecessary that a copy of the accusation upon which defendant is convicted be attached to his petition for certiorari, or that such copy be presented or identified by the trial court prior to the coming in of the answer to the writ. Id. Where the accusation is attached to the petition to support a claim of error in failing to sustain a demurrer to it, it need not be verified by the trial judge in advance of his answer. Id. When a petition purports to contain all the evidence, and it does not appear therefrom that the venue of the crime was proved, it is error to refuse to sanction the petition for certiorari, assigning error upon the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence and not supported thereby. Id. Error to refuse to sanction petition for certiorari properly verified where according to statement of evidence contained in petition, finding sought to be reviewed is unwarranted. Hood v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 570. A petition for the writ of certiorari to review the proceedings and judgment of a court should make it appear that an illegal proceeding appears by the face of the record complained of. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724.

80. It is the office of the answer to verify all proceedings had in the trial court, whether oral or written. Green v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 234.

81. The evidence as specifically set forth by the county judge in his answer to the writ of certiorari is conclusive unless traversed (Carter v. State, 3 Ga. App. 476, 60 SE 123), and a reviewing court will not look to the evidence as set forth in the petition for certiorari to add to or in any manner change the evidence as set forth in the answer (Id.). Where evidence set forth in answer to writ of certiorari, though weak, is sufficient to support finding, only error assigned being that finding is not supported by evidence, appellate court will not interfere with judgment of superior court overruling certiorari. Id. Where transcript of magistrate's record in desertion case is duly certified by magistrate and indorsed "filed" on certain date, and docket of quarter session sets forth exactly contents of magistrate's transcript, but does not state in so many words that same was filed in office of clerk of quarter sessions, superior court, when record is taken up by certiorari, will dismiss as untenable the objection that record does not show that the transcript was filed in the court below. Commonwealth v. Brownell, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 249. Where return on certiorari bringing up proceedings for violation of borough ordinance before mayor failed to show evidence or conviction, record was insufficient, and mayor's affidavit could not be considered in aid of it. Court below should be ruled for further return. Fruehwirth v. South Amboy [N. J. Law] 68 A 1075. Proceedings reversed. Id.

82. Judges of superior courts may hear and determine certioraries in vacation and in a county other than that in which trial was held. Statute construed. Avery v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 839. The judge may fix the time and place of hearing on the application of either party. Id.

83. When fixed on application of the solicitor general, accused or his attorney must be given ten days' notice. Avery v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 839 The notice need not be given by the solicitor general officially, but is sufficient if given by any one acting under his direction. Id. If accused, by his counsel, appears at the time and place so fixed and participates in the hearing, he will be held to have waived the statutory ten days' notice. Id. Solicitor general does not represent state in quasi criminal proceedings in municipal courts in his district, and notice of sanction of certiorari directed to municipal corporation need not be served on him, and failure to make such service is not ground for dismissing certiorari or error to court of appeals. McDonald v. Ludowici, 3 Ga. App. 654, 60 SE 337.

84. On certiorari the court issuing the writ considers only the face of the record of the inferior court. Matters in pais are not within the purview of the writ. Ragland v. State [Fla.] 46 S 724. A writ of certiorari requires production of a copy of the record of the inferior court, not the person of the defendant convicted therein. Id. It is not the province of the writ to act directly upon a commitment and to discharge a prisoner, and prohibition, made before rendition of any judgment, is premature where the trial court has jurisdiction on the face of the record.[85]

INFANTS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[88]

§ 1. *Status and disabilities in general.*See 10 C. L. 239—Under some statutes the word "man" may include infants.[87]

§ 2. *Custody, protection, support and earnings.*See 10 C. L. 239—Generally the natural parents are entitled to the care, custody, and control, of their minor children,[88] the father usually,[89] but not always, having the primary right.[90] This right of the parents, however, is not absolute, and the parents cannot by contract, or otherwise, except as provided by law, put themselves beyond all responsibility for the support or maintenance of their children,[91] nor is the authority of the parents ex-

but to act on the record proceedings and judgment of the court alleged to be illegal. Id. One on whom lawful sentence has been imposed cannot, on certiorari, set up that he had an agreement with the prosecuting attorney as to the sentence, if such matters can ever be set up, since these matters do not appear on the record. Id. Where petition shows that petitioner pleaded guilty to an information charging a crime of which the court had jurisdiction, and that the sentence imposed is authorized by law, the writ is properly denied, no illegality being shown to appear on the face of the record of the inferior court. Id. Evidence given in desertion case and facts recited in judge's opinion filed in quarter session cannot be considered by superior court reviewing proceedings in certiorari. Commonwealth v. Brownell, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 249. On certiorari to review a conviction of violation of fish and game law before a justice, evidence taken before him, but not embraced in the conviction, form of which is prescribed by statute, and not a proper part of the record, cannot be examined. Minard v. Dover, R. & P. O. Gas Co. [N. J. Law] 68 A 910.

85. After evidence is heard and judgment rendered, relief may be had by certiorari if want of jurisdiction be then disclosed. State v. Josephson, 120 La. 182, 45 S 97.

86. Rights and duties as between parent and child (see Parent and Child, 10 C. L. 1072), all matters pertaining to guardianship (see Guardianship, 11 C. L. 1671), and Guardian's Ad Litem (see Guardians Ad Litem and Next Friends, 11 C. L. 1668), disposition of children in divorce proceedings (see Divorce, 11 C. L. 1111), contributory negligence as applicable to infants (see Negligence, 10 C. L. 922), and assumption of risk (see Master and Servant, 10 C. L. 691), are elsewhere treated, as is also, the right of the parent to the earnings of an unemancipated child (see Parent and Child, 10 C. L. 1072).

87. Word "man" under statute punishing rape (Pub. St. 1901, c. 278, § 15), applies to all males who have reached age of puberty or are capable of committing rape. State v. Burt [N. H.] 71 A 30.

88. Smidt v. Benenga [Iowa] 118 NW 439. Mere fact child is happy and contented where he has been placed, and even shows greater present affection for his grandmother than for his mother, does not warrant judge in refusing to recognize rights of mother to care and custody of child. State v. Steel, 121 La. 215, 46 S 215.

89. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21. Father held entitled to custody of child as against grandmother, with whom mother, acknowledged to be unfit custodian, lived. Id.

90. Under Laws 1906, p. 223, c. 272, §51, providing that mother is joint guardian of her children with her husband, with equal powers, rights and duties in regard to them, and that, upon death of either mother or father, surviving parent may dispose of custody of unmarried infant child during its minority or for any less time. Father cannot, without mother's consent, legally dispose of custody of child so as to deprive mother of her right of custody after father's death. People v. Beaudoin, 110 NYS 592.

91. Slattery v. Slattery [Iowa] 116 NW 608. Irrespective of any rights which might arise from such contract, personal to immediate parties, children have rights which must be protected by their parents, and courts in interest of children and of general public, will enforce such rights whenever it becomes necessary to do so. Id. Where custody and maintenance of children is provided for by contract, it is within power of court, acting in authority of statute, to set contract aside and decree such provisions in lieu thereof as interests of children seem to demand. See Code, § 3180. Id. Evidence held to show change of condition sufficient to justify order setting contract aside, where all money received by wife by clusive, the state through its courts [92] also having the right to exercise control over infants,[93] and to deprive the parents or others of their custody and control where the same has been relinquished or forfeited,[94] or the circumstances af the case would justify the court acting against their right for the welfare of the child, which in such cases is a primary consideration.[95]

The custody of an infant may usually be determined only by the court of the infant's domicile,[96] in a proper proceeding for that purpose.[97] The determination of way of alimony was invested in house, and wife had become sick and unable to support children. Id. Parents cannot by contract between themselves, nor can court by any order it may make in divorce suit, irrevocably determine amount of money father shall contribute for support and education of children, so as to deprive that court of power upon proper showing and notice to alter said decree in interests of justice and for benefit of children. Connett v. Connett [Neb.] 116 NW 658. Decree changed so as to require father to contribute $30 instead of $10 per month. Id.

92. Supreme court under its equity power may in proper case, having regard for welfare of infant, take its custody from one legally entitled thereto and give it to another. People v. Beaudoin, 110 NYS 592. Circuit court held to have jurisdiction to award custody of child to mother suing for separate maintenance, where husband has refused to further support him. Low v. Low, 133 Ill. App. 613.

93. Juvenile Court Bill, Laws 1905, ch. 59, p. 305, does not repeal Laws 1897, ch. 36, p. 241, providing for guardianship in certain cases. In re Quinette [Neb.] 115 NW 545.

94. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21. Interests of child brought up by aunt without assistance or aid of father, who only infrequently visited him, held to require his custody to remain in aunt. Smidt v. Benenga [Iowa] 118 NW 439. Matter of gift of child was properly alleged and considered with other facts arriving at conclusions as to where custody of child should be placed. Id. While parent has no property interest in child which is subject of being given away, and cannot relieve himself of his parental obligations, and while standing alone on attempted gift of child would be invalid, still fact of gift having been made would place parent in attitude of invoking powers of court of equity in seeking to regain possession of child and give equity jurisdiction of all facts controlling case. Peese v. Gellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 196. Evidence held insufficient to warrant taking girl of eight from custody and control of aunt, with whom she had been since birth and giving her to father who had neglected her for eight years until he married woman of questionable character. Id. When father sues for custody of child, and it appears that he voluntarily parted with such custody, contributed little or nothing to its support, and allowed someone else to do what he should have done, any presumption that might arise as to his peculiar fitness to rear child is destroyed and he will be required to establish his superior fitness before he can be awarded child's custody. Id. There is no presumption that promptings of parental affection will cause father to tenderly care for his child in future, when he has failed to so act in past. Id. If man has voluntarily surrendered control of his child for first seven or eight years of its life and permitted some one else to feed, clothe, and care for it, there is not much room for any sentimental dissertation on subject of court sundering ties existing between father and child. Id. Widow who, by reason of her necessitous circumstances at time, places her little son in care and custody of its paternal grandmother and leaves him with her for several years does not thereby forfeit her right to reclaim her child when she comes later to better fortune. State v. Steel, 121 La. 215, 46 S 215. Act in so leaving child does not imply promise on her part never to retake him. Id.

95. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21. Every doubt should be resolved in favor of child's welfare and happiness and future moral training. Peese v. Gellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 196. Best interests of child held to be that it should remain with adopted parents rather than that it be given mother. Barclay v. People, 132 Ill. App. 338. Evidence held to clearly show that it was for child's best interest that it remain in father's care and custody. Scott v. Cohn, 134 Ill. App. 195. Held proper for court in divorce proceedings to award custody of child to father where shown that wife, since leaving husband, resided with parents in "red light" vicinity of town, though no immorality was alleged as to her or her parents. Blid v. Blid [Neb.] 117 NW 700. Custody of child will not be given to mother where child of eleven has for over ten years been reared by foster parents as their own child, and mother called to see child only three times for few minutes each and contributed but $50 to her support, and where child clearly wishes to remain away from her mother. People v. Phelps, 58 Misc. 625, 109 NYS 943. Child of seven taken from mother and given to father, where mother abandoned father without cause, did not always conduct herself as dutiful wife and mother and was without means of supporting child. In re Tierney, 112 NYS 1039. Custody of daughter, nine years old, will be given to mother of high character, well situated to care for her, who has proved ability to rear children and has full measure of parental affection, in preference to adopted parents who failed to notify mother of juvenile court proceeding to adopt child though they knew of her residence. Carter v. Botts [Kan.] 93 P 584. Decree of lower court reversed and children placed in mother's charge, and family meeting ordered to be called, judge of district court with advice of family meeting to change custody if deemed for greater advantage of children. Schlater v. Le Blanc, 121 La. 919, 46 S 921.

96. Smidt v. Benenga [Iowa] 118 NW 439.

97. Habeas corpus proper. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21.

the question of custody rests largely in the discretion of the court,[98] but such discretion should be governed by the rules of law, and be exercised in favor of the party having the legal right,[99] unless, as before indicated, the evidence shows that the interest and welfare of the child justify awarding the custody to another.[1] In this connection, the relative financial ability of the respective parties, seeking custody of the infant[2] and religious belief,[3] are usually proper to be considered, though not controlling. General fitness and qualifications to act as custodians of an infant,[4] and the extreme youth of the child,[5] are usually controlling considerations. No agreement between counsel can bind the minor so as to permit the chancellor to decide the question of a child's custody partially from evidence produced in court and partially on an investigation which he caused others to make out of court.[6] The mere issuance of letters of guardianship is not an adjudication as to the right of custody where the guardianship is of the person, and jurisdiction of the person of the infant or his guardian was not obtained.[7]

In New York the state in its protection of the rights of infants can prohibit the use of an infant's photograph or portrait, except under such conditions as will prevent an abuse of its use.[8]

Where a minor plaintiff has been emancipated and permitted by his parents to

98. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21. Which home is best for child is question of fact to be determined primarily by trial court. Peese v. Gellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 196. Court held not to have abused discretion in refusing to remove children in mother's custody to that of father, where shown that mother, due to sickness, was unable to support them, but where father was ordered to contribute to such support. Slattery v. Slattery [Iowa] 116 NW 608. Where custody of female infant of prostitute legally adopted by keeper of brothel has been awarded on habeas corpus to an incorporated benevolent society, and no exception is taken to such judgment, and foster mother, within two months thereafter, sues out writ of habeas corpus on ground that since former proceedings she had abandoned her immoral life and is proper person to be intrusted with care of infant, judgment denying relief sought will not be changed in absence of abuse of discretion. Vandiver v. Augusta Associated Charities, 130 Ga. 413, 60 SE 999.

99, 1. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21.

2. Where financial ability of parties was about equal and mother lived near her parents who were willing to and had in past taken care of child, while husband wished to have child cared for by his brother's family, held proper not to make permanent award but to give child to mother temporarily. Wallace v. Wallace [Miss.] 46 S 398. Court will give mother custody, though grandparents have held it for some time, where she is fit person and amply able to care for child under eight years old, even though grandparents are better situated financially. People v. Beaudoin, 110 NYS 592. Mere difference in worldly circumstances is not cause for disturbing custody of child, except perhaps in extreme cases of poverty. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21. Fact grandmother was more wealthy than father is insufficient to deprive him of child's custody, where he is otherwise suitable. Id.

3. Neither can catholic father be deprived of his child because mother had early imparted protestant faith to it and father might change it to catholic. Sloan v. Jones, 130 Ga. 836, 62 SE 21.

4. Allegation that new wife of father was not woman of good reputation, and that, although she was not married prior to her marriage with him, she had given birth to child, and that she was not suitable person to care for and advise a girl, held proper and pertinent to question of interest of child being subserved by giving custody to father whose home was presided over by such wife. Peese v. Gellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 196. Evidence held to sustain finding that wife was not addicted to use of narcotics and alcoholic liquors so as to be unfit custodian for children. Page v. Page, 124 App. Div. 421, 108 NYS 864.

5. In case of child of less than two, whose mother resided with wealthy parents, held improper to divide custody between parents but that child of such age should be given to mother by event reserving right to alter or modify decree on subsequent application under changed circumstances. Turner v. Turner [Miss.] 46 S 413. Child of one and one-half years old held of too tender age to be removed from mother, shown to be capable of properly caring for and nurturing it. Patterson v. Patterson [Ark.] 109 SW 1168.

6. Scott v. Cohn, 134 Ill. App. 195. Decree awarding custody to mother based on such evidence and investigation reversed as contrary to weight of evidence introduced in court. Id.

7. Father obtaining letters in county other than that of infant's domicile not thereby entitled to custody of child. Smidt v. Benenga [Iowa] 118 NW 439.

8. Laws 1903, p. 308, c. 132, § 2, requiring written consent of parent or guardian before infant's photograph or portrait may be so used, are constitutional. Wyatt v. James McCreery Co., 111 NYS 86.

work for himself, he may recover for loss of time or wages during his minority as a result of injuries caused by defendant.[9]

§ 3. Statutes for the protection of infants. See 10 C. L. 241—The presence of minors in certain specified places, usually deemed injurious to health or morals,[10] except under certain conditions [11] is frequently prohibited by statute. Child labor laws,[12] founded on the supervisory control of the state over minors,[13] and passed by the legislature in exercise of the police power,[14] are usually upheld as constitutional.[15] Such statutes are usually penal,[16] and should be strictly construed.[17] The term person, however, may include a corporation,[18] and the penalty may also be incurred not only by the owner of the establishment in which a child is illegally employed [19] but also

9. Donk Bros. Coal & Coke Co. v. Retzloff, 133 Ill. App. 277. Evidence held to show emancipation. Id.

10. Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction, under Pen. Code, § 290, punishing person permitting children to remain in places of entertainment injurious to health and morals, etc., unless accompanied by parent or guardian, where there was no evidence that place was injurious to health and morals, nothing but moving pictures being exhibited, nor was there any evidence that children were unaccompanied by guardian. People v. Samwick, 111 NYS 11. Laws 1908, c. 185, § 2, (P. L. 1908, p. 375), making it misdemeanor to admit children below certain age to certain places of amusement but exempting entertainment upon piers devoted to public entertainment is unconstitutional on account of such exemption as violation of U. S. Const. Amend. 14. In re Van Horne [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 986. Ordinance prohibiting minors from visiting billiard and pool rooms (Ordinance of Los Angeles, 9671, § 2), is not void neither because in conflict with Pen. Code, §§ 273, 397b, nor as an invalid exercise of police power. Ex parte Meyers [Cal. App.] 94 P 870.

11. Word guardian, under Pen. Code, § 290, punishing one allowing children, unattended by parent or guardian, to remain in certain places injurious to their health or morals, does not mean guardian appointed by law but may mean person, such as brother, sister, neighbor, or friend, if not excluded in some way or by reason of some law. People v. Samwick, 111 NYS 11.

12. Laws 1897, p. 477, c. 415, § 70, forbids employment of child under fourteen years of age in any factory in state. Danaher v. American Mfg. Co., 110 NYS 617. Pub. Acts 1901, p. 157, No. 113, § 3, providing that child under 16 shall not be employed where life and limb is endangered. Braasch v. Michigan Stove Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 748, 118 NW 366.

13. Child labor laws are founded on principle that supreme right of state to guardianship of children controls natural right of parent, when welfare of society or of children themselves conflict with parental rights. Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 525. Supervision and control of minors is subject which has always been regarded as within province of legislative authority. Id.

14. Legislature, under its police power, has authority to enact legislation limiting age below which children may not be employed at certain work. Stehle v. Jaeger Automatic Mach. Co., 220 Pa. 617, 69 A 1116. How far legislative authority shall be exercised is question of expediency, which it is province of legislature to determine. Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 525. Labor Laws (Laws 1897, p. 477, c. 415), §§ 70, 6 as amended by Laws 1903, c. 184, p. 437, and Pen. Code, § 3841. Id. Sections of labor law prohibiting employment of children under certain age, except upon certain conditions, is police regulation for public health. Violation of its provisions is not malum in se but malum prohibitum. People v. Taylor [N. Y.] 85 NE 759.

15. Revisal 1905, § 3362 is not violative of Art. 1, § 17 State Const. nor 14th Amend. U. S. Const. but was framed in good faith to protect welfare of minors, is not undue restriction of parent's right and does not close all fields of employment to child. Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 525. Right of parent to labor of child is not vested right in parent nor is it of any more importance than right to control its education, matter over which state has assumed supervisory control. Id. Constitutional guaranty of liberty of contract does not apply to children of tender years nor prevent legislation for their protection. Id. 14th Amend. does not in any way limit power of state to regulate labor of minors in good faith. Id. Act of Mar. 24, 1904 (P. L. p. 152), commonly known as child labor law, is not unconstitutional as vioating State Const. Art. 1, § 1, nor as containing provisions touching objects not expressed in its title, since it is not pretended that alleged obnoxious provisions are not severable, nor as special or private legislation. Bryant v. Skillman Hardware Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 23.

16. Violation of provisions Act May 2, 1905 (P. L. 352) § 2, punishable by fine or imprisonment. Stehle v. Jaeger Automatic Mach. Co., 220 Pa. 617, 69 A 1116.

17. People v. Taylor [N. Y.] 85 NE 759. Rev. St. 1899, § 6434 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3217) does not render it unlawful to obtain employment where there is stationary or traversing machinery but only for them to clean or work between parts of such machinery. Peters v. Gille [Mo. App.] 113 SW 706.

18. Statutory construction laws (Laws 1892, p. 1487, c. 677), § 5. People v. Taylor [N. Y.] 85 NE 759.

19. Person who owns factory is liable for violation of labor law, if child is employed contrary to provisions thereof by owner, either directly or through officer, agent, or employe. People v. any person actually entering into the contract by which such child is employed,[20] without regard to any illegal intent,[21] but an employe of a corporation, superior in authority to another, is not individually liable for such employment in the interest of, and for the beneficial purposes of, the corporation, when such employment is made by the subordinate without the knowledge or consent of the person charged with the crime and contrary to his express direction.[22] The remedies provided in such acts do not necessarily supersede the right of action for damages in a civil proceeding.[23] One who deliberately falsifies, regarding his age, to get employment is not estopped from recovering a claim for injuries.[24] Where the act is not intended to advance education but to promote the health, safety and general welfare of minors, the fact that a minor also attends school does not excuse his employment.[25] The practice under such acts is usually regulated by statute.[26]

Juvenile courts. See 10 C. L. 241—In some states the juvenile court is given jurisdiction only of charges of misdemeanor under the act,[27] in others the law covers the punishment of both misdemeanors and certain felonies,[28] while in still others, the provisions of the juvenile court acts are held not to contemplate the punishment of infractions of the criminal laws.[29] The juvenile court law of the District of Columbia, gives such court no power to punish the father of an illegitimate child for failing to support it.[30] Such statutes, so far as they provide for the punishment of children, are usually held not to be criminal or penal statutes.[31] The Idaho act, providing for the care of delinquent children, has been held constitutional by the courts of the state,[32] while the Florida law has been held constitutional as to certain of its provisions,[33] but unconstitutional as to others.[34] Under the Florida act a commitment on a finding not in conformity with the statute is invalid.[35] For all offenses against the district of Columbia and against the United States within the jurisdiction of the Juvenile court of the District of Columbia, the prosecution should be on information by the corporation counsel, and in the name of the District of Columbia or of the United States.[36] and is not depriving either parent or child of any constitutional or inalienable right. Id. It is not unconstitutional as depriving parent of custody of child without due process of law, and in violation of constitutional rights, since order or decree of probate court in such matter is one in personam and acts upon child alone. It is paternal and benevolent hand of state reaching out as parens patriae to take hold of child during minority for purposes of fostering, protecting and educating child, and this power, authority and duty is intended to be exercised only in cases where child is without care and protection of parent or guardian, or where parent or guardian has become unable or neglects or refuses to control, manage, care for, educate, and protect child. Id. Law not obnoxious as depriving parent of natural right to care and custody of child, since he may appear and present objections if he objects to state's action; is not bound by judgment, nor his rights precluded if he is not party to hearing and proceeding, may contest state's right to act in court and have his own rights fully and completely adjudicated. Id. Such order or decree should adjudge both that child is delinquent within meaning of that term as defined in act, and that he is either without care and protection of parent or guardian, or that parent or guardian is neglecting and failing to discharge duties he owes to child, but such decree simply establishes status and condition of child and existing necessity for granting it protection, nurture or aid of state, and in no respect does it determine or adjudicate right of parent or guardian. Id. Const. art. 5, § 21, conferring jurisdiction on probate courts, is sufficiently broad to sustain delinquent children's act, and probate court, under constitutional jurisdiction to take charge of orphans and minors left without protectors and to appoint guardians and direct and control them in exercise of their duties, has clear and unmistakable power and jurisdiction to lay hold upon child and make such summary investigation as is necessary, and ascertain its true status and condition, and place it in custody of authorities at state industrial training school. Id. Act not unconstitutional for reason that probate courts as such are courts of record and that procedure provided for in act is not procedure of courts of record, since if act made no provision for record it would still be duty of court, as constitutional court of record, to keep proper record and since act itself also provides for keeping record. Id. Fact records and dockets kept are called juvenile records and dockets immaterial. Id. Section 3 of act held to merely make ruling of probate court final on matters termed "irregularities or defects of form" or "technical pleas or objections," and to be mere reenactment of Rev. St. 1887, § 4231. Id. Section 13 of act providing for review only upon questions of law does not affect parent unless he has appeared, and if he does appear and order affecting or binding him is made he may appeal under Rev. St. 1887, § 4831. Id. Minor is entitled to no right to appeal since he has no standing in court as an individual to exercise it except through legal representative, and legal representative may appeal under Rev. St. 1887, § 4831. Id. Matter of appeals from probate courts is within legislative will, and law making power may regulate it, extend or limit it as it sees fit. Id.

31. Act Mar. 2, 1905 (Sess. Laws 1905, p. 106). Its purpose is rather to relieve such children from odium of criminal prosecutions and punishment. Ex parte Sharp [Idaho] 96 P 563. Under law, state assumes discharge of parental duty, directs custody and assumes restraint, at time when infant is not entitled to absolute freedom but is subject to restraint either by natural or legal guardian. Id. Commitment is in no sense punishment nor is industrial school a prison in ordinary acceptation of term. Roberts v. State [Neb.] 118 NW 574. 32. Act Mar. 2, 1905 (Sess. Laws 1905, p. 106) is not unconstitutional as violative of constitutional guaranties applicable to criminal procedure, or as improperly conferring jurisdiction upon probate courts, or for lack of or limiting appeal. Ex parte Sharp [Idaho] 96 P 563. State is only demanding and enforcing obedience to both natural duties and obligations of parent or guardian as well as legal duties and obligations demanded by society and public welfare.

§ 4. Property and conveyances. See 10 C. L. 242—Rights and liabilities respecting the minor's property as between guardian and ward, the effect of guardian buying at sale of infant's land, and the rights of an infant to recover property improperly disposed of by his guardian, are treated in another topic.[37]

33. Law not unconstitutional as permitting commitment to state reform school without trial by jury. Pugh v. Bowden [Fla.] 45 S 499. Laws 1905, c. 5388, p. 66, § 9, is constitutional and valid in so far as it confers jurisdiction upon judge of any circuit court or county judge to commit persons of incorrigible and vicious conduct to state reform school. Id.

34. Law unconstitutional in so far as it authorizes judge of any criminal court of record to commit persons therein mentioned to state reform school, since judge of criminal court of record may commit to state reform school only under Laws 1905, c. 5388, p. 63, § 1, after regular conviction in such court for crime. Pugh v. Bowden [Fla.] 45 S 499.

35. In proceedings before a circuit or county judge to commit certain minors to guardianship of state reform school under Acts 1905, c. 5388, p. 66, § 9, where there is no finding by court that minor is proper person for guardianship of state reform school in consequence of incorrigible and vicious conduct, judgment that minor is suitable person to be committed to Florida State reform school is insufficient to support commitment, and discharge may be secured on habeas corpus. The conveyance of a minor is usually not absolutely void, but only voidable,[38] and unless the grantor disaffirms within a reasonable time after attaining his majority [39] and proves his infancy at the time the conveyance was made,[40] the conveyance is binding upon him; but an infant conveying a contingent remainder need not disaffirm until after the death of the life tenant.[41] To constitute a ratification of a conveyance by an infant after reaching his majority, there must be some act which necessarily recognizes the existence and efficacy of the obligation.[42] A simple declaration acknowledging the title of the grantee being insufficient,[43] and while a new consideration is not usually requisite,[44] some states require the ratification to be by an instrument in writing.[45] The infant, may, by his conduct after attaining his majority, be prevented from availing himself of the statute under the doctrine of equitable estoppel,[46] or he may be estopped by his conduct at the time of the conveyance from setting up his infancy [47] though in the latter respect the contrary is the rule in many states.[48] In some states before a suit by an infant for the possession of land deeded away by him during his minority may be brought, some previous act of disaffirmance must have been made.[49] In Arkansas a purchaser whose conveyance from an infant has been disaffirmed is entitled to and chargeable with certain setoffs.[50]

39. Minor testifying that she signed deed conveying land to father without understanding purport and effect of deed because she was told by her father to do so, and her brothers and sisters did likewise, that she received no part of consideration, but continued to live with father in joint possession with him, and she refused to affirm deed on first occasion offered her after disabilities were removed, held to have disaffirmed within reasonable time, though not until two years after disabilitites were removed. Stone v. Wolfe [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 981. Mortgage by husband and wife after former has attained his majority operates as disaffirmance of deed previously given while husband was minor. Phillips v. 41. Has no interest to protect until death of life tenant, and need not disaffirm within reasonable time after reaching majority. Steele v. Poe, 79 S. C. 407, 60 SE 951.

42. There must be after majority, with full knowledge of his right, acquiescence from which assent may be fairly inferred, adequate benefit enjoyed which has grown directly or indirectly out of contract, or some direct act or express consent. Steele v. Poe, 79 S. C. 407, 60 SE 951.

44. No new consideration is requisite to sustain validity of deed given by one after he has attained his majority to same grantee, or to another at his request, in ratification of conveyance of property made during minority. Calhoun v. Anderson [Kan.] 98 P 275.

45. Under Civ. Code 1902, § 2656, providing that no action seeking to charge infant with payment of debt contracted during infancy on promise made after majority shall be maintained unless promise or ratification is in writing, defendants, in suit by infants to recover land conveyed during infancy, cannot be defeated by alleged parol ratification. Steele v. Poe, 79 S. C. 407, 60 SE 951.

46. As when one by his statements, conduct or silence causes adverse party to do some act or change his position to his detriment. Steele v. Poe, 79 S. C. 407, 60 SE 951. Evidence held to show no change of position to defendant's detriment. Id.

47. Plaintiff grantor held estopped to assert infancy where she and her parents made affidavits at time of conveyance that she was of full age, and proof clearly showed that she was not deceived or overreached in any way. Edgar v. Gertison [Ky.] 112 SW 831. Where the evidence is not sufficient to justify finding that purchaser knew grantor was minor, latter having obtained purchase price on faith and credit of his verified statement that he was twenty-one years of age at time he executed and delivered deed, he will not be permitted to controvert it to prejudice of other persons. Pace v. Cawood, 33 Ky. L. R. 592, 110 SW 414.

48. Doctrine that infant is not estopped by false representation as to his age rests upon principle that one under disability of minority has no power to remove disability by representation, and that representations cannot be of greater force than contract itself. Tobin v. Spann, 85 Ark. 556, 109 SW 534. Minor omitted from the will of his ancestor cannot be estopped by any conduct during minority to claim his inheritance, nor can the defense of innocent purchaser be set up against his incapacity. Rowe v. Allison [Ark.] 112 SW 395.

49. Ejectment will not lie by infant where he made no reentry, gave no notice of election to rescind, and took no other affirmative action to repudiate conveyance. Tomczek v. Wieser, 58 Misc. 46, 108 NYS 784.

50. Under betterment act, one whose contract with minor is disaffirmed is entitled

It is the special duty of the chancellor to guard the interests of infants, and the law has carefully provided that their rights shall be protected.[51] While there is a conflict as to whether the court of chancery has inherent power to decree the sale of an infant's real estate for the purpose of investment,[52] such power is often conferred by statute,[53] or may attach by virtue of the provisions of the instrument under which the infant's title is derived.[54] The chancellor is vested with a broad discretion in the matter of affirmance or disaffirmance of sales of the property of infants,[55] but such discretion is not an arbitrary one [56] and must be exercised according to settled principles.[57] If a judgment against infants is reversed, the purchaser, if he be the plaintiff or a party to the action, will not be permitted to hold against their interest real property bought under it at a judicial sale.[58] In such case, however, the infants may either elect to allow the sale to stand or they may have the sale set aside and take the property upon the payment of the debt which is a lien thereon.[59] In New York, upon a sale of real estate of an infant, the proceeds are deemed property of the same nature as the estate or interest sold until the infant arrives at full age.[60] In Arkansas, where a will is by statute inoperative as to an omitted child, he cannot be divested if his rights by a sale of the estate under the will,[61] and the statutory remedy against the devisees or legatees is not exclusive.[62] In Georgia a trust estate may be created for the benefit of minors.[63] In Kentucky a deed signed by a minor husband and his wife is not binding upon either.[64] In Louisiana a family meeting in which the minors are not represented by an undertutor is illegal, and the defect is not cured by the subsequent appointment of the husband of one of the major plaintiffs in the suit to that position.[65]

51. District of Clifton v. Pferman, 33 Ky. L. R. 529, 110 SW 406. Record held to show nothing prejudicial to rights of infants in proceedings to sell land to enforce purchase-money lien. Leavell v. Carter [Ky.] 112 SW 1118. Where adult coparceners conceal from infant coparcener true value of land, and after taking it at its appraised value sell it at greatly enhanced figure, they will be required to account to minor for profits thus derived, and in such case the court is not bound to apportion judgment among joint wrongdoers, but may render general judgment against all defendants. Murr v. Murr, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 439.

52. Equity court has no inherent power to decree sale of infant's real estate for purpose of investment, and its jurisdiction to decree sale of infant's realty is wholly statutory. Morse v. U. S., 29 App. D. C. 433. Court of chancery has inherent power to convert estates of persons under disabilities for purposes of reinvestment where to their manifest interest. Holt v. Hamlin [Tenn.] 111 SW 241. Held error for chancellor to dismiss certain bill where under facts alleged, if proved, duty of chancellor would have been to order sale of real estate for purposes of reinvestment. Id.

53. Court has jurisdiction, under Civ. Code Prac. § 491, to sell property left in trust for minors for purposes of reinvestment. Curry's Guardian v. Monsch's Guardian, 31 Ky. L. R. 856, 104 SW 313.

54. Will held to authorize such sale. Curry's Guardian v. Monsch's Guardian, 31 Ky. L. R. 856, 104 SW 313. Prior to adoption of code there existed no statutory authority in District of Columbia for sale of vested remainder in fee in lands belonging to infant at suit of tenant for life, or for sale at suit of such tenant of contingent interest in land limited over by will or deed to infants not issue of such life tenant. § 5. Contracts.[See 10 C. L. 243]—Except in the case of necessaries, an infant's contract is ordinarily voidable,[66] and may be affirmed or disaffirmed upon the majority of the infant.[67] In some states a minor may be estopped by his conduct from setting up his infancy,[68] while in other states he cannot be so estopped,[69] and in still others cannot be estopped in the absence of fraud.[70] One holding an infant out as of full age is estopped to set up the infancy.[71]

A contract made with a minor for necessaries is usually invalid unless the parent or guardian on such minor refuses or fails to supply him with sufficient necessaries,[72] and then only for the reasonable value of such necessaries.[73] A minor cannot ordinarily bind himself by an executory contract for necessaries[74] and may repudiate[75] or ratify it as in the case of other contracts.[76] The determination of what meeting illegal. Doucet v. Fenelon, 120 La. 18, 44 S 908.

66. Agreement by minor to release her interest in legacy in exchange for interest in joint conveyance to herself and others is voidable at her election upon attaining her majority. Appell v. Appell, 235 Ill. 27, 85 NE 205. Court during infant's minority will not partition property so conveyed until infant reaches majority, since court cannot compel infant to so exchange her property. Id. Minors signing shipping articles are entitled to disaffirm contract of shipment and recover reasonable value of their services. Belyea v. Cook, 162 F 180. Where infant purchased land by means of having third person give note and take title, infant assuming payment of note and possession of land, transaction constituted such third person infant's trustee. Id. Trust called into existence by minor is valid until avoided. Eldriedge v. Hoefer [Or.] 93 P 246.

67. One demanding and receiving share of proceeds of sale of land after majority in conformity with agreement entered into during minority ratifies such agreement. La Cotts v. Quertermous, 84 Ark. 610, 107 SW 167.

68. Evidence held insufficient to justify finding that minors were estopped to disaffirm shipping contract and recover on quantum meruit. Belyea v. Cook, 162 F 180. Evidence that alleged minor was not intoxicated when note was executed, and that he fraudulently represented himself to be of age, and wanted money for articles which were necessaries, held sufficient basis for jury's verdict against alleged minor. Clayton v. Ingram [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 880.

69. Minor who has reached that age of maturity where his appearance indicates that he is of full age cannot estop himself from disaffirming his contract by false representations that he is of full age. Tobin v. Spann, 85 Ark. 556, 109 SW 534. No error to refuse to submit question of estoppel of infant to jury. Barbieri v. Messner [Minn.] 118 NW 256. Conceding that fraud might estop infant evidence in case held insufficient to show such fraud since not shown to be connected therewith. Id.

70. In absence of fraud on infant's part, infant, writing his age as twenty-one under advice of plaintiff's agent who knew facts, is not estopped from relying on infancy. International Text-Book Co. v. Doran, 80 Conn. 307, 68 A 255. Evidence held to show that son alleged to have signed note with father received no benefit from transaction, had no knowledge thereof, and committed no fraud sufficient to bind him to his contract. Memphis Coffin Co. v. Patton [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 670, 106 SW 697.

71. Parties held estopped by recitals in deed that alleged infants were of full age. Harris v. Ronk, 32 Ky. L. R. 966, 107 SW 341.

72. Where suit is brought against minor for necessaries furnished to him, it must affirmatively appear that parent failed to supply him with sufficient necessaries. McAllister v. Gatlin, 3 Ga. App. 731, 60 SE 355. Where surgeon, at father's instance and request, rendered necessary professional services to minor child, solely on father's credit, child having no credit at time, but subsequently becoming possessed of property for which guardian was appointed, equitable action will not lie against guardian and ward to subject latter's property to payment of debt for such services, though father was insolvent. Gaston v. Thompson, 129 Ga. 754, 59 SE 799.

73. Suit cannot be maintained against infant on his express contract for necessaries without averment and proof that price to be paid for such necessaries is reasonable. International Text Book Co. v. Alberton, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 583. Where infant received instruction under contract with correspondence school. Id.

74. Minor cannot bind himself by contract with business college so as to prevent recovery of amount paid therefor when infant fails to take course. Mauldin v. Southern Shorthand & Business University, 3 Ga. App. 800, 60 SE 358. In contracts for necessaries furnished to minor, recovery can only be had for fair value of executed part of contract, and infant may repudiate executory part of his contract at any time even though such executory part of such contract be for necessaries. Contract for correspondence school education. International Text Book Co. v. Alberton, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 583.

75. Although education received under contract with correspondence school could not be restored, repudiation of contract shortly before attaining majority was effectual where books lent were returned thereafter and before suit. International Text-Book Co. v. Doran, 80 Conn. 307, 68 A 255.

76. Delay in returning textbooks borrowed in connection with correspondence school contract, repudiated before attaining majority, until some time thereafter, may be considare necessaries involves a variety of considerations.[77] Education furnished to an infant may be necessary to him, but is so only when it is suitable to his wants and condition,[78] and whether such is the case is a question of fact.[79]

In Texas the rule that if a minor uses money or other property for purchasing necessaries he must restore or account for its equivalent if he seeks to set aside an act performed by him during minority, or if he retains possession or control of property obtained by him during minority he must restore such property if on reaching majority he seeks to avoid the contract through which he obtained the property, does not apply when he has never received anything beneficial through the contract.[80] In Georgia an infant engaged in business with his parent's consent is liable under the statute, upon contracts connected with such business,[81] but not upon any contract of guaranty or suretyship;[82] and in Alabama an infant properly decreed relieved of the disabilities of nonage is liable upon contracts made under such decree.[83]

ered on question of ratification. International Text-Book Co. v. Doran, 80 Conn. 307, 68 A 255.

77. NOTE. What are necessaries: The necessaries for which an infant may become liable are not alone the bare necessities of life, but articles suitable for the use and maintenance of the infant in the station of life appropriate to his fortune and condition. De Moss v. Giltner, 5 Ky. L. R. 691; Jordan v. Coffield, 70 N. C. 110; Rivers v. Gregg, 5 Rich. Eq. [S. C.] 274; Brent v. Manning, 10 Vt. 225; Breed v. Judd, 67 Mass. Thus suitable board, lodging, clothes, medical attendance and education are held to be necessities (People v. Pierson, 176 N. Y. 201, 68 NE 243, 98 Am. St. Rep. 666, 63 L. R. A. 187; Bouchell v. Clary, 3 Brev. [S. C.] 194), depending upon the circumstances of the particular case (Englebert v. Troxell, 40 Neb. 195, 58 NW 852, 42 Am. St. Rep. 665, 26 L. R. A. 177; Grace v. Hale, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 27, 36 Am. Dec. 296). So a common school education is held to be a necessity, but not so a college (Middleburg College v. Chandler, 16 Vt. 683, 42 Am. Dec. 537) or professional education (Bouchell v. Clary, 3 Brev. [S. C.] 194), or instruction in music and painting (De Moss v. Giltner, 5 Ky. L. R. 691) or religious instruction (St. John's Parish v. Bronson, 40 Conn. 75, 16 Am. Rep. 17). A room is necessary to an infant only so long as he occupies it (Gregory v. Lee, 64 Conn. 407, 30 A 53, 25 L. R. A. 618), and dwelling houses (Allen v. Lardner, 78 Hun, 603, 29 NYS 213; Price v. Jennings, 62 Ind. 111; Wornack v. Loar, 11 Ky. L. R. 6, 11 SW 438) or repairs thereon (Wells v. Bardwell, 128 Mass. 366; Tupper v. Caldwell, 53 Mass. 559, 46 Am. Dec. 704; Horstmeyer v. Connors, 56 Mo. App. 115) are not necessaries. Suitable clothing for particular occasions may be necessary (Sams v. Stockton, 53 Ky. 232; Kilgore v. Rich, 83 Me. 305, 22 A 176, 23 Am. St. Rep. 780, 12 L. R. A. 859), but jewelry, fads and ornaments are not generally so held (Le Fils v. Sugg, 15 Ark. 137; Perrin v. Wilson, 10 Mo. 451.) Articles used in business are not necessities (House v. Alexander, 105 Ind. 109, 4 NE 891, 55 Am. Rep. 189; Wood v. Losey, 50 Mich. 475, 15 NW 557; Merriam v. Cunningham, 65 Mass. 40; Decell v. Sewenthal, 57 Misc. 331, 34 Am. Rep. 449; Ryan v. Smith, 165 Mass. 303, 43 NE 109) except in extraordinary cases (Chapman v. Hughes, 61 Miss. 339; Breed v. Judd, 67 Mass. 455; Rundel v. Keeler, 7 Watts [Pa.] 237; Watson v. Hensee, 7 Watts [Pa.] 344), nor are horses and vehicles generally so held (Rainwater v. Durham, 2 Nott & McCord, 524, [S. C.] 10 Am. Dec. 637; Pyne v. Wood, 145 Mass. 553, 14 NE 775; Miller v. Smith, 26 Minn. 248, 2 NW 942, 37 Am. Rep. 407; Beeler v. Young, 4 Ky. 519; Grace v. Hale, 21 Tenn. [2 Humph.] 27, 36 Am. Dec. 296), but attorney's fees, in an action properly brought by or against an infant, are necessities (Nagel v. Schilling, 14 Mo. App. 576; Munson v. Washband, 31 Conn. 303, 83 Am. Dec. 151; Banker v. Hibbard, 54 N. H. 539, 20 Am. Rep .160). [Ed.]

81. Infant engaging in farming with parent's consent may lawfully contract for fertilizer, under Civil Code 1895, § 3650. James v. Sasser, 3 Ga. App. 568, 60 SE 329. Minor held not engaged in business in contemplation of law. McAllister v. Gatlin, 3 Ga. App. 731, 60 SE 355.

82. Where infant and adult, upon joint note, buy fertilizer, some of which infant uses on farm he is running with parent's permission, infant cannot be held on balance of note after he pays for poriton used by him. James v. Sasser, 3 Ga. App. 568, 60 SE 329.

83. Under Civ. Code 1896, § 833, decree that petitioner was entitled to relief, that minor was authorized to sue and be sued, contract and be contracted with, buy, sell, and convey real estate, and generally do and perform all acts which such minor might do

The burden of proving all the conditions necessary to the validity of the contract of an infant is upon the party asserting such validity.[84]

§ 6. Torts. See 8 C. L. 275

§ 7. Crimes. See 8 C. L. 278—In Georgia in order to convict a minor between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one of the offense of vagrancy, the state must allege and prove, in addition to the usual allegations, that the minor's parents were unable to support him and that he was not in attendance upon an educational institution.[85]

§ 8. Actions by and against. See 10 C. L. 244—Chancery has general jurisdiction over the persons and property of infants.[86] Minors can neither sue nor be sued except as specially provided by law,[87] nor can any valid judgment or order be rendered against them where the suit is not prosecuted in the manner so provided.[88] However, the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant plaintiff is not a jurisdictional defect, but a mere irregularity which can be cured, if necessary, during the progress of the trial,[89] and a plea based on such irregularity is usually inefficacious where the infant has become of age before such plea is filed.[90] Such a plea must, therefore, allege that the plaintiff is still an infant.[91] A guardian ad litem cannot be appointed where the court has failed to acquire jurisdiction of the case.[92] In West Virginia suits upon contracts affecting the infant's interests not made by his guardian must were he of age, is not void because not specifically decreeing that minor was relieved of disabilities of nonage. Ketchum v. Faircloth-Segrest Co. [Ala.] 46 S 476. Under Civ. Code 1896, § 835, minor is relieved of disabilities of nonage as soon as decree to that effect is rendered, and liability thereunder does not depend on filing thereof. Ketchum v. Faircloth-Segrest Co. [Ala.] 46 S 476. be in the name of the infant by next friend.[93] In Indiana the guardian is neither a necessary nor proper party to an action affecting the title of the infant's real estate.[94] The service of process upon minors is usually regulated by statute,[95] which, as a general rule, requires personal service on all minors,[96] and, as to all minors under fourteen years of age, service on the father, mother or guardian is also required,[97] and in the latter case, in Iowa, the parent or guardian cannot waive the minor's right to such personal service.[98] The same presumptions are indulged in favor of regularity of service as in other cases.[99] In Arkansas, where a guardian acts as counsel, hostile to the interests of his ward and chooses inferior counsel for them, proper counsel may be employed, and the infants and their estates are liable for reasonable attorney's fees.[1]

If infancy exists where a cause of action first accrues, the time for commencing the action is usually extended for a certain period after the infant becomes of age.[2] So, also, it is held that a decree against an infant must be attacked by him within a certain time after reaching his majority.[3]

bond,[4] nor need the affidavit given by the guardian ad litem in lieu of a bond show that the minor is unable to pay cost of appeal or give security therefor,[5] but if a minor have an estate sufficient to pay the cost of an appeal adjudged against him, this estate is liable to the party to whom the cost is due, and such cost may be recovered in a proper proceeding for that purpose unless the litigation out of which it grew was instituted and prosecuted under conditions which would not be binding on the minor.[6]

INJUNCTION.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[7]

§ 1. Nature of remedy and grounds therefor.[See 10 C. L. 246]—Relief by way of injunction is essentially equitable.[8] The writ of injunction is the strong arm of the court, and to render its protection benign and useful the power to issue it should be exercised with great discretion,[9] the particular function of the remedy being to restrain and prevent,[10] but there is unquestioned power in a court of equity to issue mandatory injunctions on proper occasions.[11]

6. Biggins v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 561.

7. This topic purports to cover the whole subject of injunctions, but as the principles herein discussed necessarily receive incidental treatment on many, more specific, topics, reference should be had to such topics. See such topics as Corporations, 11 C. L. 810; Trade Marks and Trade Names, 10 C. L. 1865. As to malicious prosecution of a suit for injunction or abuse of the writ, see Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, 10 C. L. 657.

Purchaser of abutting property, after completion of permanent obstruction to street under valid claim of title by grant from city, held not entitled to injunctive relief. Kehoe v. Rourke [Ga.] 62 SE 185.

11. Where a railway company neglects for a long time to construct cattle guards, a mandatory injunction may issue. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Billings [Kan.] 93 P 590. See cases cited for further instances. Farnsworth v. Wilbur [Wash.] 95 P 642. Mandatory injunctions are often granted where defendant is guilty of continuing wrong upon plaintiff, from further perpetration of which he ought to be enjoined, and where termination of wrongful conduct involves restoration of conditions existing prior to wrongful conduct. Cox v. Malden & Melrose Gaslight Co., 199 Mass. 324, 85 NE 180. Will compel defendant to deliver cars upon complainant's switches as theretofore done, where complainant claimed a right under a contract. Gates v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 151 Mich. 543, 15 Det. Leg. N. 2, 115 NW 420.

An injunction will be granted only where a proper case in accordance with the principles and practice of equity is made out,[12] being issued by grace, when, upon a broad consideration of all the parties in interest, good conscience requires it,[13] and it is the duty of the court to inquire if complainant has a clear legal right to the use, occupation, or enjoyment of the property or right, the invasion of which it is sought to enjoin.[14] The plaintiff, furthermore, must make out a plain case of injury and damages [15] of a permanent and irreparable character,[16] for which there is no adequate remedy at law,[17] but irreparable injury does not mean beyond the possibility of compensation in damages or that it must be very great, and the fact that no actual damages can be proved, so that in an action at law the jury could award only nominal damages, often furnishes the best reason why equity should interfere,[18] though an injunction may be refused on the ground that the injury is merely nominal or theoretical.[19] There is considerable confusion upon the doctrine of comparative equities as affecting the right to an injunction.[20] The conflict, however, is more seeming

NOTE. Doctrine of comparative injury as affecting right to injunction: While it is generally held that, in considering the application for an interlocutory injunction, the courts will balance the consideration of relative convenience and inconvenience, and ordinarily refuse an injunction which will bear heavily upon the defendant or the public generally without materially benefiting the plaintiff (Rau v. Seidenberg, 53 Misc. 386, 104 NYS 798; Williams v. Los Angeles R. Co., 150 Cal. 592, 89 P 330; Karfoil v. Rothner, 151 F 777; Howard v. Belows, 148 Mich. 410, 14 Det. Leg. N. 219, 111 NW 1047) and that, moreover, no injunction of any kind will issue where great hardship would ensue to no advantage of the plaintiff, or where the plaintiff's rights are not clear (Schefer v. Ball, 53 Misc. 448, 104 NYS 1028; Savage v. Port Reading R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 67 A 436; Tolman v. Mulcahy, 119 App. Div. 42, 103 NYS 936; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Inland Trac. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 115; Cleveland v. Martin, 218 Ill. 73, 75 NE 772, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 629;

than real, and the cases may usually be reconciled under the doctrine that, while as a general rule the comparative injury to the parties will not control the grant or refusal of an injunction where the complainant's rights and the injury thereto are

Roberts v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 65 A 460; Nittany Valley R. Co. v. Empire Co., 218 Pa. 224, 67 A 349), or where there is an adequate remedy at law (McCarthy v. Mining & Coal Co., 147 F 981; Mann v. Parker, 48 Or. 321, 86 P 598; Lloyd v. Catlin Coal Co., 210 Ill. 460, 71 NE 335; McClure v. Leaycraft, 183 N. Y. 36, 75 NE 961), or the plaintiff has been guilty of laches (Washington Lodge v. Frelinghuysen, 138 Mich. 350, 101 NW 569), a somewhat extended examination of the cases reveals no conflict upon the proposition that actual damage to the rights of another may, in the absence of laches or an adequate remedy at law, be perpetually enjoined, irrespective of the annoyance or injury such injunction may work to the defendant as compared with the injury sought to be remedied or the inconvenience suffered by private persons or by the public by reason thereof (Corning v. Factory, 40 N. Y. 191; Stock v. Judson Twp., 114 Mich. 357, 72 NW 132, 38 L. R. A. 355; Village v. Hayes, 150 Ill. 273, 37 N. E. 218, 41 Am. St. Rep. 367; Harper v. Water Co., 65 N. J. Thus, in Commonwealth v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 24 Pa. 159, 62 Am. Dec. 372, the court says "Where rights are invaded it is no question of the amount of damage," and in Corning v. Factory, 40 N. Y. 191, "No man is justified in withholding property from the owner on the ground that he does not need it." So, in Stock v. Judson Tp., 114 Mich. 357, 72 NW 132, 38 L. R. A. 355, "If the parties have expended a considerable sum in trespass, it is their own fault, and they must lose it" (Citing Koopman v. Blodgett, 70 Mich. 610, 38 NW 649, 14 Am. St. Rep. 527; Hall v. Ionia, 38 Mich. 493). Similar are the following judicial announcements: "The fact that a large population is inconvenienced is immaterial where private rights are invaded." Village v. Hayes, 150 Ill. 273, 37 NE 218, 41 Am. St. Rep. 367. "Where justice is properly administered, rights are never measured by their mere money value neither are wrongs tolerated, because it may be to the advantage of the powerful to impose upon the weak." Pennsylvania Lead Co.'s Appeal, 96 Pa. 116, 42 Am. Rep. 534. "In such a case it cannot be said that injury would result from an injunction, for no man can complain that he is injured by being prevented from doing to the hurt of another what he has no right to do." Sullivan v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., 208 Pa. 540, 57 A 1065, 66 L. R. A. 712. "We do not think that the fact that an actual injury resulting from a right is small and the interest to be affected by the injunction is large should weigh against the interposition of preventative power in equity, when it is clear that on one hand a right is violated and on the other a wrong is committed." American S. & R. Co. v. Godfrey [C. C. A.] 158 F 225.

Modern English cases are to the same effect. Shelfer v. London, 1 Ch. 287; Imperial Gas Co. v. Broadbent, 7 H. L. C. 600, (afg. 7 De Gex M. & G. 436). Attorney General v. Birmingham, 4 Kay & J. 528; Cowper v. Laidler, 2 Ch. 337; Attorney General v. Colney Asylum, 4 Ch. App. 146; Clowes v. Staffordshire Co., 8 Ch. App. 125; Pennington v. Brinsop Co., 5 Ch. Div. 769; Young v. Banker Co., [1893] App. Cas. 691; Wilts Co. v. Water Co., 9 Ch. App. 451; Goodson v. Richardson, 9 Ch. App. 221.

It will be noted that the Pennsylvania courts, when dealing with the exact point herein discussed, arrive at a very different result from that indicated by the language of the cases cited infra, and that the New Jersey court, in the cases of Higgins v. Water Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 538 and Hennessy v. Carmony, 50 N. J. Eq. 616, 25 A 374, takes occasion to discuss and distinguish previous New Jersey cases, which might seem to indicate a rule contrary to the one stated.

It is true that the comparative convenience of the parties was the ground upon which injunction was refused, in Mountain Copper Co. v. U. S., 73 C. C. A. 621, 142 F 625, where the owners of practically valueless land sought to restrain the operation of a valuable smelting plant which had already done all possible damage to the land in question, but, as pointed out in American S. & R. Co. v. Godfrey, supra, the rule announced in the Mountain Copper Co. case should be confined to the particular case under consideration and not applied generally. It will be noted, moreover, that the damage was complete and that a remedy therefor existed at law. There are not lacking authoritative statements to the effect that injunctions will not be granted, when against good conscience and productive of hardship, oppression, or injustice (Sheldan v. Rockwell, 9 Wis. 166, 76 Am. Dec. 265; Potter v. Saginaw Union St. R. Co., 83 Mich. 297, 47 NW 217, 10 L. R. A. 176), and particularly in Pennsylvania is it said that equity decrees are of grace rather than of right and that injunction will be refused if it appears that such a course will cause less aggregate damage than to enjoin (Richards Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 105, 98 Am. Dec. 202; Huckenstine's Appeal, 70 Pa. 102, 10 Am. Rep. 669 [Expressly dissapproved in Campbell v. Seamans, 2 Thomp. & C. 231, afd. in 63 N. Y. 568, 20 Am. Rep. 567]). In each of the foregoing cases, however, it will be clearly established,[21] yet in certain cases, each depending upon its own peculiar circumstances, an injunction may be refused because the injury complained of is so trivial or so doubtful that, in view of the grave consequences which would result from the granting of such relief, it would be unconscionable to grant the writ.[22] In no case will the seriousness of damage from lawful acts raise the equities of trespasser to the dignity of rights enforcible by injunction.[23] The mere imminency of an act, of the possibility in case of necessity, without a showing of a necessity or an attempt or intent to do the act, affords no grounds for injunctive relief.[24] Courts will found that there was present either the element of laches or that the damage to the plaintiff was doubtful or an adequate remedy existed at law, or the case arose upon an interlocutory application. The same will be found true with regard to the following cases which are frequently cited in support of the "balance of injury" theory (Hall v. Rood, 40 Mich. 46, 29 Am. Rep. 528; Buchanan v. Log. Co., 48 Mich. 364, 12 NW 490; Big Rapids v. Comstock, 65 Mich. 78, 31 NW 811; Miller v. Cornwall, 71 Mich. 270, 38 NW 912; Blake v. Cornwall, 65 Mich. 467, 32 NW 803; Logansport v. Uhl, 99 Ind. 531, 50 Am. Rep. 112; Powell v. Bentley & Gerwig Fur. Co., 34 W. Va. 804, 12 SE 1085, 12 L. R. A. 53; Amelia Mill. Co. v. Tenn. Coal, Iron & R. Co., 123 F 811; Sellers v. Parvis, 30 F 164; Mann v. Parker, 48 Or. 321, 86 P 598. See, also, 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law [2nd Ed.] 363, 364 and cases cited), and the strongly contra case of Madison v. Ducktown, etc., Co., 113 Tenn. 331, 83 SW 658, will be found to be based upon the construction of a local statute. In the recent case of Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Assn., 209 U. S. 20, 52 Law. Ed. 663, the supreme court of the United States seems to hold that comparative injury may be considered in determining the adequacy of the remedy at law in such cases. It is to be noted, however, that in this case, also, the evidence of defendant's wrong seems to have left the court in doubt in regard thereto. [Ed.]

21. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. Godfrey [C. C. A.] 158 F 225. The right of injunction is not defeated by reason of the fact that to compel defendant to desist from operating its cars in a street so as to constitute a nuisance would cut the throat of its yards and destroy the value of its property. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. De Groff [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 1006.

22. Injunction to restrain owner of coal rights from endangering the surface refused, where there were no buildings or structures. Berkey v. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co., 220 Pa. 65, 69 A 329. Injunction will not lie restraining emptying drainage upon complainant's land where it was necessary to preserve a highway. Devon v. Pence, 32 Ky. L. R. 697, 106 SW 874. Where the construction of a sewer and dicharge of sewage onto land was consented to by a former owner and conditions had existed for some time, and the sewer had been extended and its discontinuance would work a great hardship, and the injury was permanent and all damages could be recovered in one action, the land owner was not entitled to an injunction. Somerset Water, Light & Trac. Co. v. Hyde, 33 Ky. L. R. 866, 111 SW 1005. Use of a few names from plaintiff's copyrighted trade book in a much larger and more complete book issued by defendant held not ground for injunction, complainant being remitted to remedy at law. Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Asso., 209 U. S. 20, 52 Law. Ed. 663. Where railroad breaks its contract to operate a spur track in consideration of a location granted, an injunction will not lie to prevent the operation of the main track, for the public have acquired rights requiring uninterrupted service. Taylor v. Florida East Coast R. Co. [Fla.] 45 S 574. Where government had spent millions of dollars in improving river in vicinity of an island, and had contracts for six millions more of improvements, and use of dynamite was necessary, and dynamite had been stored on said island for more than 25 years without protest, an injunction would be granted only to restrain storage of dynamite on the island in such quantity as to create danger to complainant, who resided in the vicinity, or danger to his property located at his place of residence. Henderson v. Sullivan [C. C. A.] 159 F 46. Equity will not enjoin the excavation by a railroad company beneath land claimed by a city to constitute parts of streets, where it appears that as to one of the tracts the work is finished that ejectment involving it is pending, and that the city was restrained from interfering with the work, and as to the other tract the travel is not seriously obstructed, and the work is partly completed, and to stop it would endanger the whole place, the improvement being also a great public work. City of Hoboken v. Hoboken & M. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 926.

23. Writ will not issue to protect a self-confessed trespasser in his occupancy of his neighbor's premises, on the ground that his interests and operations are large and the landowner's damages small. Booming logs in a river. Garth Lumber & Shingle Co. v. Johnson, 151 Mich. 205, 14 Det. Leg. N. 898, 115 NW 52. Inconvenience or even damage to the individual proprietor does not authorize an act which in its nature is a purpresture of government lands. Suit to enjoin use of government reserve for grazing purposes. Shannon v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 160 F 870.

24. Contract by a city to erect an overhead crossing when it became necessary. Southern R. Co. v. Albes [Ala.] 45 S 234. Bill to enjoin refusal to supply water based on mere conclusions and on apprehension that it might be done in future, if certain necessities arose, is insufficient. Orcutt v. Pasadena Land & Water Co., 152 Cal. 599, 93 P 497.

refuse to grant novel requests for relief until the right is established by law,[25] nor will a non-enforcible injunction be granted.[26]

One of the well settled grounds of equitable jurisdiction already adverted to is want of an adequate remedy at law, and in such cases relief will be granted by injunction,[27] as in the case of irreparable injury for which damages will not be an adequate compensation.[28] Jurisdiction of equity, however, is not tested alone by the fact that there are existing remedies at law, the jurisdiction of equity being predicated rather upon the principle that equity can give more adequate and complete relief than can be obtained at law.[29] Insolvency of the person against whom relief is sought is rarely alone sufficient to grant jurisdiction,[30] but if joined with other grounds it may strengthen the plaintiff's claim for relief.[31] The right to injunction may be lost by laches or acquiescence,[32] or estoppel,[33] and one cannot claim relief who does not come into court with clean hands.[34]

25. Claim of a municipality that, by reason of authority to outlet a sewer into a stream, it might enjoin its use by an upper riparian owner is an assertion of a right so novel that it must be established at law before a court of equity will grant relief. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

26. Hawley v. State Bank of Chicago, 134 Ill. App. 96.

27. Eisenhauer v. Quinn, 36 Mont. 368, 93 P 38.

Held inadequate: Remedy at law of railroad company to test validity of statute fixing rates, by disobeying statute once and submitting to a criminal prosecution, is not so adequate as to deprive equity of jurisdiction where several years might elapse before final determination of question, pending which observance of the statute, if finally found to be invalid, would result in taking its property without due process of law, with no possibility of its recovery. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714.

Plaintiff's claim for damages in ejectment did not affect his right to preserve property from further damage. Waskey v. McNaught [C. C. A.] 163 F 929. To prevent erection of gate across private alley. Espensheid v. Bauer, 235 Ill. 172, 85 NE 230.

Held adequate: Equity will not enjoin the owner of coal rights from endangering the surface or causing it to cave in, there being an adequate remedy at law. Berkey v. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co., 220 Pa. 65, 69 A 329. Where city ordinances provided penalties for deposit of manure on city lot without consent of adjoining owners, there was adequate remedy at law for the misuse of stable property. Bonaparte v. Denmead [Md.] 69 A 697. Where telegraph company obtained from bridge company right to lay wires across bridge for annual rental and thereafter county acquired bridge, the county could not compel removal of all wires or payment of rental, it having an adequate remedy at law to recover damages for use. Beaver County v. Central Dist. & Printing Tel. Co., 219 Pa. 340, 68 A 846. Injunction to restrain construction of a drain established under drain laws refused. Grandchamp v. McCormick, 150 Mich. 232, 14 Det. Leg. N. 666, 114 NW 80. There was an adequate remedy at law to enforce a contract for the delivery of logs to a mill and no injunction would issue. Fox v. Fitzpatrick, 190 N. Y. 259, 82 NE 1108. Threat of a town marshal that, unless work is done on roads or tax paid, he would take plaintiff before mayor's court, held not to authorize injunction, all defenses being open to taxpayer in such proceeding. Mathews v. Farmerville, 121 La. 314, 46 S 339. Writ of sequestration was ample to secure possession of personal property. Frazier v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 662. Abutting owner having title to middle of street cannot have injunction to compel the removal of a switch in equity, for he has an adequate remedy by ejectment. St. Columbia's Church v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 692.

28. Berkey v. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co., 220 Pa. 65, 69 A 329.

29. Dittgen v. Racine Paper Goods Co., 164 F 84. Injury to health and vegetation from a nuisance is irreparable and a court of equity is not without jurisdiction merely because they might recover damages at law. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. Godfrey [C. C. A.] 158 F 225. Under B. & C. Comp. § 390, equity jurisdiction is not defeated by concurrent law jurisdiction unless the legal remedy, as to final relief and mode of securing it, is as efficient as that in equity. Remedy by writ of review does not necessarily exclude a remedy in equity. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811.

30. Where injunction has been granted and only allegation in bill which could in any event sustain injunction is the insolvency of defendant which is denied and no proof is taken, the injunction will be dissolved. Lewis v. Hall [W. Va.] 61 SE 317.

31. Insolvency and multiplicity of suits. Merchants' Exch. of St. Louis v. Knott, 212 Mo. 616, 111 SW 565. Insolvency of plaintiffs at law, multiplicity of suits, and counterclaims not available at law. Aimee Realty Co. v. Haller, 128 Mo. App. 66, 106 SW 588. Where plaintiff gave defendant a license to use a way on payment of half the cost of construction, the fact that defendant refused to pay his half is admissible on the question of enjoining his use only in case he be shown insolvent. Meinecke v. Smith [Wis.] 115 NW 816. No injunction will issue to restrain the removal by a city of a wooden building outside of the fire limits in the absence of a showing that the city is insolvent. Clark v. Deadwood [S. D.] 117 NW 131.

32. Failure to act must be with knowledge of conditions amounting to acquiescence in the doing of the thing complained of.

§ 2. Particular occasions for injunction; who and what may be enjoined. A. In general.[See 10 C. L. 250]—Equity will prevent by injunction the threatened invasion of property rights,[35] and where one undertakes to decide for himself a question involving controverted rights, he may be enjoined regardless of the absolute merits of the controversy.[36] On the other hand, an injunction may issue to protect a party from exposure to the risk of litigation.[37] An injunction may also issue to preserve the status quo pending litigation.[38] Statutory injunctions are allowable in particular situations or for the protection of particular rights.[39] The question of who may be enjoined is usually reducible to one of parties,[40] or one of the nature of the remedy,[41] or one of the nature of the particular wrong.[42]

(§ 2) B. Actions or proceedings.[See 10 C. L. 251]—Courts of different sovereignties cannot interfere with the power of each to enforce its own judgments, even indirectly by injunction operating upon the parties litigant,[43] nor will a court of equity enjoin the prosecution of an equitable action in a court of full equity jurisdiction in a sister state upon any theory that the former can better weigh evidence or more justly apply any general principle of law or equity,[44] or upon the ground that such

Adams v. Birmingham Realty Co. [Ala.] 45 S 891. Delay is not necessarily laches. Daly v. Foss, 199 Mass. 104, 85 NE 94. Facts did not show laches preventing plaintiff from enjoining use of well which depleted water supply. Verdugo Canon Water Co. v. Verdugo, 152 Cal. 655, 93 P 1021. Failure of one owing royalties to require equitable claimant to establish right thereto, prior to injunction against collection by legal claimant, held, under circumstances of case, not laches. Benziger v. Steinhauser, 154 F 151. Where defendant before beginning erection of building was notified by plaintiff that certain area must be left open for his benefit and tendered amount of money required to entitle him to have area left open, which defendant refused to accept but continued to build, it was held that right of complainant would not be denied on ground that he had delayed until injunction would cause more damage to defendant than its refusal would cause complainant. Tolsma v. James E. Scripps Corporation [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 853, 116 NW 622.

33. Lester v. Sullivan, 32 Ky. L. R. 925, 107 SW 300. Where one pleaded and prosecuted defenses for a period of five years in an action in one state, he is estopped from bringing bill in a sister state to restrain proceedings, on the ground that the truth is contrary to the findings in the original action because of delay and acquiescence. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153. Complainant who saw defendant's plans for building projecting into street and watched building, taking no action until year after its completion, was estopped from maintaining suit for mandatory injunction for removal of projection. Adams v. Birmingham Realty Co. [Ala.] 45 S 891. Upon the evidence plaintiff not estopped from enjoining defendant as prayed. Piedmont Cotton Mills v. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 52. Facts held not to estop plaintiff from enjoining use of a well which depleted his water supply. Verdugo Canon Water Co. v. Verdugo, 152 Cal. 655, 93 P 1021.

34. Where evidence shows that the plaintiff, who is not an abutting owner, purchased fee of small section of railroad right of way for sole purpose of taking advantage of necessities of pipe line company by enjoining them from using right of way in laying their pipe line, an injunction will be denied on ground that plaintiff does not come into court with clean hands. Hawkins v. Buckeye Pipe Line Co., 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 553.

35. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Mobile, 162 F 523.

36. An injunction will be granted to restrain a party from deciding for himself a question involving controverted rights and to compel him to resort to the courts, and this without regard to absolute merits of controversy. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Mobile, 162 F 523. Injunction against removal by city of telephone poles from streets where they have been placed under claim of right. Id.

37. Where a defendant is attempting wrongfully to assert a liability against plaintiff under a written contract which plaintiff intended to sign as agent only, the court is not limited to relief by reformation, but may restrain a wrongful use of the instrument to plaintiff's prejudice. Contract for sale of an engine. Eustis Mfg. Co. v. Saco Brick Co., 198 Mass. 212, 84 NE 449.

43. State court will not enjoin issuing of execution on a judgment procured in a federal court in favor of a third party. Smith v. Reed [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 961.

44. Bill in New Jersey chancery to restrain proceedings in Massachusetts against a corporation organized in New Jersey cannot be maintained on a mere showing that the court recognizes rules of law or equity different from those which obtain in the sister state,[45] but equity may enjoin proceedings pending or threatened in another court to prevent oppressive and vexatious litigation, especially when not brought in good faith, and to that end will act upon parties within its jurisdiction with respect to an action in a foreign state,[46] but upon grounds of comity this power should be sparingly exercised,[47] nor will it be exercised uselessly [48] or where there is an adequate remedy at law.[49] Federal statutes expressly prohibit the federal courts from enjoining actions in the state courts,[50] but this provision does not apply to the proceedings of a special commission not strictly constituting a court, though possessed of judicial powers,[51] nor does it preclude the granting of an injunction restraining the institu-cause of action in Massachusetts is unconscionable or that the plaintiff is estopped from maintaining its actions there. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153. Where, upon allegations of secret profits made by one in a capacity of trust in promoting a mining company organized in New Jersey, suit is brought in equity against the promoter in Massachusetts, the state of his residence, there is nothing in the law or policy of the state of New Jersey to prevent this company from maintaining its action. Id.

45. The fact that the federal courts entertain a different view upon the law pertinent to a controversy from that held by the courts of Massachusetts, where the controversy is pending, does not justify the chancery courts of New Jersey in restraining a corporation of this state from the prosecution of its action in Massachusetts against a resident of that state. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153. Injunction will not be granted to restrain action upon benefit certificate brought in foreign state merely because courts of such state have placed more favorable construction on contract. Royal League v. Kavanagh, 134 Ill. App. 75.

46. Royal League v. Kavanaugh, 233 Ill. 175, 84 NE 178. Where suit is brought in a foreign jurisdiction for the purpose of evading some local policy of the jurisdiction in which the parties are domiciled, equity will, in a proper case and upon proper terms, restrain the prosecution of such action. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153. May enjoin an attempt by a creditor to avoid the exemption laws of the state, by bringing suit in another state, where both creditor and debtor are domiciled. Greer v. Cook [Ark.] 113 SW 1009. Same doctrine is often extended to prevent other evasions of the laws of the state of the domicile of both parties. Id. Question of ownership and right of disposition of corporate stock could be more conveniently and decisively determined in an action in New York than in an action by the receiver in another state. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. Edison United Phonograph Co., 128 App. Div. 591, 112 NYS 929.

47. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153. To justify equitable interposition, it must be made to appear that an equitable right will otherwise be denied. Royal League v. Kavanagh, 233 Ill. 175, 84 NE 178. The granting of an injunction to stay proceedings in another jurisdiction on the ground that they will affect the rights of a party rests largely in the discretion of the court and should be granted only in extraordinary cases. Not granted under the facts, and especially in view of the fact that plaintiff had defaulted and allowed a decree pro confesso against him. Johnson v. Victoria Chief Copper Min. & Smelting Co., 60 Misc. 468, 112 NYS 346. Where a contract was executed and the parties were domiciled in one state, equity will not enjoin the bringing of an action on the contract in another state on the ground that it is inequitable, because the law as decided by a certain court of that state is contrary to the law of the state where the contract was executed, without a showing that such court has final jurisdiction for there is no sufficient showing that the courts of the state where the action was brought would decide differently. Royal League v. Kavanagh, 233 Ill. 175, 84 NE 178.

48. An injunction will not lie at the instance of a receiver to restrain a nonresident from prosecuting an attachment proceeding against the effects of an insolvent in another state, such injunction being nonenforcible. Hawley v. Chicago State Bank, 134 Ill. App. 96.

49. The fact that a creditor institutes a suit in a foreign jurisdiction for the sole purpose of vexation and oppression does not authorize interposition by a court of equity. Remedy at law for malicious abuse of process. Greer v. Cook [Ark.] 113 SW 1009.

50. Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 152.

51. State dispensary commission of South Carolina does not constitute a "court" within the meaning of Rev. St. § 720 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 581), prohibiting the granting of injunctions by federal courts to stay proceedings in a state court. Murray v. Wilson Distilling Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 1. The South Carolina dispensary commission created by statute to wind up the South Carolina state dispensary is not a "court of a state" within Rev. St. § 720, providing that an injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any "court of a state" except where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy. Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 152. Federal court may enjoin railroad rates fixed by a state commission where same are confiscatory, despite the fact that the commission is for some purposes a court, for the act of fixing rates is legislative. Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 29 S. Ct. 67.

tion of proceedings in state courts in futuro.[52] The policy of the law is, likewise, to prevent a conflict of jurisdiction between the courts of the same state.[53] Equity, therefore, has no jurisdiction to enjoin the prosecution of a criminal proceeding [54] except where property rights are involved [55] or where the equity proceedings are merely ancillary to proceedings already pending; [56] nor will equity entertain a suit, the sole purpose of which is to enjoin regular and orderly proceedings at law,[57] nor enjoin the prosecution of an action at law for matters which may be asserted in defense thereto; [58] nor will equity enjoin the enforcement of a judgment where there is other adequate remedy; [59] nor will such an injunction issue for mere error of law [60]

52. Suit in a federal court against attorney general to enjoin the enforcement of an unconstitutional state statute by bringing criminal proceedings for its violation is not within this prohibition. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954.

53. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 1437, 1438, providing that where the subject-matter of a suit is located in more than one county the court first taking cognizance shall retain the same, etc., injunction will not lie in one county to enjoin the destruction of a highway bridge in the construction of a drain under a drainage proceeding brought in another county, any one affected by the proceeding and not a party to it having an adequate remedy by being made a party. American Steel Dredge Works v. Putnam County Com'rs [Ind.] 85 NE 1. See, also, American Steel Dredge Works v. Putnam County Com'rs [Ind. App.] 82 NE 995.

54. Logan v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co., 157 F 570. Threatened prosecution for alleged crimes will not be enjoined. State v. Canty, 207 Mo. 439, 105 SW 1078; Logan v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co., 157 F 570. See § 2D, infra. Enforcement of ordinances and statutes. See post, this section, subsection D.

55. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811; Logan v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co., 157 F 570.

56. Logan v. Postal Tel. & Cable Co., 157 F 570. Criminal proceedings commenced by one already a party to a suit in equity may be enjoined. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714.

57. Will not enjoin proceedings to correct the record of a judgment so as to show true date of entry. Thompson v. Great Western Acc. Ass'n, 136 Iowa, 557, 114 NW 31.

58. Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co. v. MacMaster [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 337. Injunction against forcible entry and detainer refused. Josey v. Perlstein [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 790, 107 SW 558. A bill to enjoin an ejectment suit and for cancellation of a deed cannot rest for its equity upon cancellation independent of other relief sought. Hall v. Slaughter [Ala.] 47 S 103. Suit to recover statutory penalty for cutting trees will not be enjoined on the ground that defendant entered under the belief that he had title, for such a defense could be made in this original action. Ryder v. Johnston [Ala.] 45 S 181. Where the maker of a promissory note brought suit to recover possession of note on the ground of payment, and its possession had been refused on demand, it furnished no ground for an equitable proceeding on behalf of the payee that he denied the full payment and that he could not obtain payment and that he could not obtain judgment on it in the trover suit, or that the city court in which that suit had been brought had no equitable jurisdiction. Long v. McIntosh, 129 Ga. 660, 59 SE 779. Where, in suit on note, defenses are complete and final judgment will relieve defendant of all liability on note, prayer in defendant's plea that note be cancelled does not make it proper for equity to enjoin suit and take jurisdiction thereof in order to determine issues. Norton v. Graham, 130 Ga. 391, 60 SE 1049. Complainant not entitled to restrain prosecution of suits on certain notes on ground of no consideration, remedy at law being adequate. Pepper Dist. Co. v. Alexander, 137 Ill. App. 369. A bill in equity cannot be maintained to enjoin the prosecution of an action on a promissory note for balance due after sale of collateral on ground that the sale was unauthorized, where no fraud or other ground of equitable jurisdiction is shown. Adams v. Western Maryland R. Co., 161 F 776. Equity will not restrain an action to dispossess tenant or, for rent on the ground that a certain covenant by the lessor was a condition precedent to payment of rent, for such defense could be made in an action at law. White v. Young Men's Christian Ass'n, 233 Ill. 526, 84 NE 658. Equitable estoppel may be pleaded in law as well as in equity, so that a failure to plead the same is no ground for enjoining entry of judgment. Monmouth County Elec. Co. v. Eatontown Tp. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 994. Whether the venue of an action against receiver of corporation was proper under the statutes was a matter of defense to the action, and not ground to enjoin the proceedings. Paine v. Carpenter [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 430. A temporary injunction in a suit for specific performance of a lease is properly dissolved, the filing of the suit for specific performance being ample protection against any person who may, pending suit, lease of defendant. Josey v. Perlstein [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 790, 107 SW 558. Where remedy by motion in action at law is complete and adequate. Stone v. Fritts, 169 Ind. 361, 82 NE 792.

59. Matthews v. Carman, 122 App. Div. 582, 107 NYS 694. It must appear as in the case of enjoining proceedings that the complainant has an equitable defense of which he could not avail himself at law. Tyrrell v. Wood [R. I.] 68 A 545. Bill to enjoin sheriff from removing house which was then a chattel refused where it did not appear that sheriff was insolvent, or his bond insufficient, or that damages would not adequately compensate him for his injury. Eisenhauer v. Quinn, 36 Mont. 368, 93 P 38. Defendant in execution cannot enjoin sheriff's sale of his property on the ground that he is not the or for a mere irregularity,[61] or where there is an appeal pending,[62] or where the grounds relied on could have been asserted by way of defense to the action at law.[63] In a proper case,[64] however, and subject to such conditions as the court may impose in the sound exercise of its discretion,[65] actions at law may be enjoined, as where the defendant in such an action has a defense which he cannot interpose therein,[66] or to prevent a multiplicity of suits[67] by the party seeking the injunction[68] or against him,[69] provided there is no adequate remedy at law;[70] but the bare fact of imminent defendant, but a party of similar name is the real defendant. Mantz v. Kistler [Pa.] 70 A. 545. Whether complainants were entitled under an agreement to a larger estate in defendant's premises than a monthly tenancy, as found by the court, will not be considered in a suit to enjoin enforcement of the judgment, since, if true, there is a remedy at law. M. Redgrave Co. v. Redgrave [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 147.

60. Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co. v. MacMaster [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 337; Coca Cola Co. v. Allison [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 308. Allegations of errors of law in a bill to restrain the entry of final judgment and issuance of execution thereon must be disregarded. Monmouth County Elec. Co. v. Eatontown Tp. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 994.

61. Where there was valid claim and no defense. Lindberg v. Thomas, 137 Iowa, 48, 114 NW 562.

62. Where courts of equity in one state have rendered an alleged unjust judgment against one, and an appeal is entered, courts of equity in a sister state will not enjoin parties from proceeding further, for there is a plain remedy in the prosecution of the appeal. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 153.

63. Tyrrell v. Wood [R. I.] 68 A 545. Injunction restraining collection of judgment will not be issued where relief sought could have been obtained from trial judge in action at law. Central Stock & G. Co. v. Pine Tree Lumber Co., 140 Ill. App. 471. Where a plea of privilege to be sued in another county is ignored or improperly overruled, the district court may enjoin the execution of judgment. Coca Cola Co. v. Allison [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 308.

Failure to appeal from the denial of motion to be made party does not preclude one who was a proper but not necessary party from proceeding to enjoin the enforcement of any judgment recovered in such action at law. Spaulding Mfg. Co. v. Chaudoin [Ark.] 112 SW 1087. Right to enjoin fraudulent judgment may be lost by failure to appeal. Hughes v. Clark, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 518.

64. Where a mortgage was executed by two coprincipals, the foreclosure thereof by the mortgagee could not be enjoined until the debtors adjusted their liability between themselves. Eureka Lumber Co. v. Satchwell [N. C.] 62 SE 310. It was improper to enjoin an action by a guardian for the illegal detention of her ward on allegations that the guardian, after a release by the ward, fraudulently attempted to show that the ward was incompetent at the time and for that purpose procured appointment as her guardian, since the appointment of the guardian cannot affect the validity of the release, she not having been under guardianship when it was made, and having been then presumptively competent. Gallon v. Mandell, 150 Mich. 621, 14 Det. Leg. N. 791, 114 NW 392.

65. It is within sound discretion of court to determine whether confession of judgment by a defendant is a necessary condition to granting him an injunction to restrain the proceeding at law, and where defendant has a legal defense to his action at law on which he relies, as well as a distinct ground of equitable relief, he should not be required to abandon his legal defense by confessing judgment before proceeding in equity to enjoin the action at law. Home Gas Co. v. Mannington Co-operative Window Glass Co., 63 W. Va. 266, 61 SE 329. An injunction at the instance of a railroad company against sale of car of foreign company which by contract the former has right to use for interstate traffic may be conditioned upon the complainants giving bond conditioned to return the car to proper officers of court after complainant's right, under its contract, to use it has expired. Southern R. Co. v. Brown [Ga.] 62 SE 177. Where insured requested that various claimants to insurance money due on two policies be enjoined from prosecuting their suits, relief would not be granted unless insurer paid into court the full amount of insurance, subject to deductions to which it was entitled upon proof. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Hamilton [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 677.

66. Unexecuted accord constitutes ground for injunction against action at law when not available as defense therein, as where, after agreement of compromise and after defendant had dismissed his witnesses and surrendered right to go to trial at time when prepared, plaintiff refused to carry out contract and moved case for trial, etc. Trenton St. R. Co. v. Lawlor [N. J. Err. & App.] 71 A 234.

67. Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co. v. MacMaster [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 337. Equity will interpose to avoid a multiplicity of suits without the aid of any independent equity; where numerous parties jointly and severally claim against one, or where one claims against many liable jointly or severally, and the same title or right of defense will be questioned and will determine the issue for or against all. Southern Steel Co. v. Hopkins [Ala.] 47 S 274.

68. Where defendant's servants had repeatedly interfered with plaintiff's right to hunt on the navigable waters of the state and threatened to continue, plaintiff's remedy at law by a multiplicity of suits was inadequate, and such remedy was no objection to their right to an injunction. Ainsworth v. Munoskong Hunting & Fishing Club [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 412, 116 NW 992.

69. Where complainants failed to make payments under contracts to work on 25 houses and suits were brought, they were or pending criminal prosecutions is not ground for the intervention of equity.[71] The enforcement of a judgment or decree may, likewise, be enjoined where a proper case for equitable relief is made out,[72] as where a judgment or decree is obtained by fraud [73] or without jurisdiction.[74] The enforcement of an execution may be enjoined where it is fraudulently obtained [75] or where the judgment upon which it issues is invalid [76] or dormant,[77] but not where the execution is void on its face.[78] No court entitled to enjoin the bringing of separate actions, where the defendants were insolvent, and complainants had counterclaims which might not be available in the law actions. Aimee Realty Co. v. Haller, 128 Mo. App. 66, 106 SW 588. Equity will enjoin the prosecution of 110 suits for death by negligent operation of a mine where the defense is the same in each suit although not established in law, for the plaintiffs are all insolvent and the defense of so many actions at different times and in different courts would be ruinously expensive. Southern Steel Co. v. Hopkins [Ala.] 47 S 274. Where complainants to the number of 400 sued to enjoin the operation of smelters owned by different corporations as nulsances, equity had jurisdiction to avoid multiplicity of suits. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. Godfrey [C. C. A.] 158 F 225. An unconstitutional legislative act may be enjoined where a failure to comply therewith would subject the complainant to innumerable suits for penalties. Act provided for the furnishing of gas at a certain price, the gas company to be subject to a penalty on account of each consumer to whom it failed to furnish gas at that price. Consolidated Gas Co. v. New York, 157 F 849. A suit by property owners on behalf of themselves and all others interested to restrain the enforcement of a city ordinance requiring owners to construct sidewalks, curbing, etc., is within the rule that equity will in a single suit take cognizance of a controversy to avoid a multiplicity of suits. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181. Under Const. 1890, § 160, of Miss., equity may enjoin ejectment proceedings where complainant has several defenses, both legal and equitable, to avoid a multiplicity of suits and to allow all matters to be adjudicated in one proceeding. Butler v. Scottish-American Mortg. Co. [Miss.] 46 S 829. Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin enforcement of rates by different boards of supervisors to determine in a single suit the legality of such rates. San Joaquin & Kings River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 163 F 567.

70. Multiplicity of criminal or civil actions is not alone sufficient to authorize an injunction where relief may be obtained at law. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811. Purchaser of corporate stock may enjoin sheriff from selling stock under execution against vendor. Everett v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Elm Creek [Neb.] 117 NW 401. Remedy by consolidation adequate. Aimee Realty Co. v. Haller, 128 Mo. App. 66, 106 SW 588. That numerous suits are threatened does not necessitate an injunction where such suits are between the same parties, growing out of contract. Heslip v. Anderson, 134 Ill. App. 8.

71. Prosecutions by railroad and warehouse commission against officers, employes, etc., of merchants' board of exchange. Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis v. Knott, 212 Mo. 616, 111 SW 565.

72. The collection of a judgment at law may be properly restrained by an injunction, plaintiff offering to pay the claim if established in the proceeding. Brin v. Topp, 131 Ill. App. 394. Court was authorized to enjoin sale of realty under execution against a husband on the ground that it was the wife's separate property. Texas Brew. Co. v. Bisso [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 270. Requirement of meritorious defense not met by statement that declaration in action where judgment was rendered did not state cause of action. Reed v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 131 Ill. App. 434.

Injunction refused: Where, pending suit to enjoin execution, a levy thereunder is released and execution returned with the release endorsed thereon, an injunction will be denied. Thompson v. Gooldsby [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 733, 106 SW 936. Injunction restraining sale under venditioni exponas properly dissolved, as proceedings were proper. Dillard v. Stringfellow [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 769.

73. Matthews v. Carman, 122 App. Div. 582, 107 NYS 694. The collection of a judgment at law procured by fraud may be restrained where it is clear that defendant has used due diligence and exhausted every legal means of defense or redress, or was prevented, without fault of his own, from so doing. Hughes v. Clark, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 518. Equities of defendant in fraudulent judgment may be lost by negligence in ascertainment of fact of judgment. Id.

74. Coca Cola Co. v. Allison [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 308. Equity will enjoin judgment procured in an action where neither plaintiff nor wife were served with process and an attorney who accepted service and acted for them did so without authority. Lindberg v. Thomas, 137 Iowa, 48, 114 NW 562. Where the record affirmatively shows service, and judgment debtor desires to assail truthfulness of return of officer or recital of service in judgment, the remedy it would seem is by bill for injunction. United States v. Taylor, 157 F 718.

75. Spaulding Mfg. Co. v. Chaudoin [Ark.] 112 SW 1087.

76. Judgment not signed. Ewell v. Jackson, 33 Ky. L. R. 673, 110 SW 860.

77. Proposed sale of real estate under an execution issued on dormant judgment will be enjoined at suit of one who acquired title to property during life of the judgment lien. Lincoln Upholstering Co. v. Baker [Neb.] 118 NW 321. Judgment becomes dormant upon death of judgment creditor, although judgment in fact belongs to another, can directly enjoin proceedings in another court by restraining action of the court itself.[79] Equity may enjoin the introduction of evidence obtained by fraud and duress,[80] but objections available upon the offer of evidence will not support an injunction against the introduction thereof.

Preliminary injunctions against actions jeopardizing the status quo are treated in a subsequent section.[81]

(§ 2) C. Public, official, and municipal acts. See 10 C. L. 253—A court of equity cannot, by injunction, control the exercise of political [82] or legislative [83] functions, nor will it thus control the discretion of public officers and authorities,[84] except to prevent an abuse of discretion [85] and to require that such discretion be exercised in good faith [86] and according to law,[87] there being no other adequate remedy,[88] one of and under such circumstances, where no steps have been taken to revive judgment within a year of death, an execution issued is void and may be enjoined. Updegraff v. Lucas, 76 Kan. 456, 93 P 630.

78. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2989, of Texas, authorizing an injunction where it shall appear that the party applying for relief is entitled to the same and such relief requires restraint, etc., an execution running against property, showing on its face that it is void and that it cannot constitute a cloud on title, will not be enjoined. Thompson v. Gooldsby [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 733, 106 SW 936.

79. Smith v. Reed [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 961. Injunction staying proceedings at law operates in restraint of party and not of court, and judgment rendered in disobedience of injunction is not void. Geddis v. Donovan, 151 Mich. 122, 14 Det. Leg. N. 878, 114 NW 874.

80. Matthews v. Carman, 122 App. Div. 582, 107 NYS 694. Where order for petitioner in summary proceeding is void for lack of jurisdiction, defendant may not enjoin its use as evidence in a law action, since advantage of the defects may be taken when the order is offered in evidence. Id.

81. See post, § 4A.

82. Political powers of county boards. Roberts v. Thompson [Neb.] 118 NW 106. Will not enjoin opening and canvassing returns and declaring the result of an election to determine the location of a county seat. Townsen v. Mersfelder [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 420. Injunction will not lie to restrain the holding of an election. Thompson v. Mahoney, 136 Ill. App. 403.

83. Legislative acts of city authorities not subject to injunction on ground of extravagance. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828. Equity will not interfere to enjoin the exercise of the power of legislatures to fix rates for transportation of passengers and freight. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Winnett [C. C. A.] 162 F 242. Passage of ordinance which is in exercise of legislative discretion will not be enjoined. Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe, 156 F 624.

84. Discretion of city officers not controllable by injunction on ground of mere extravagance. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828. Injunction against use of armory hall for dancing and roller skating refused. Hamill v. Dungan [N. J. Eq.] 68 A 1096. A federal court will not enjoin collection of taxes against foreign corporation because of methods adopted in valuing property, in absence of fraud or clearly shown adoption of a wrong principle. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wright, 158 F 1004.

Location of school districts, etc., is left to judgment of school board and in the absence of misconduct their action cannot be restrained. Pickler v. Davie County Board of Education [N. C.] 62 SE 902. Administrative powers of county boards. Roberts v. Thompson [Neb.] 118 NW 106. Relinquishment of city's rights in matter of purchasing water plant. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828. Enforcement of railroad rate regulations. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLendon, 157 F 961. Equity will not restrain collection of tax assessed by municipality against complainant's property. Buchanan v. MacFarland, 31 App. D. C. 6. Under statute permitting postmaster general to issue fraud orders where there is some evidence which is satisfactory to the postmaster general to sustain a fraud order, his decision of the question of fact upon which the order was issued is conclusive and will not be reviewed by the courts. People's United States Bank v. Gilson [C. C. A.] 161 F 286. Insufficient where bill shows hearing upon due notice on charges of fraud clearly within the statute but does not show the proofs adduced. Appleby v. Cluss, 160 F 984.

85. Suit to compel payment by South Carolina dispensary commission. Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 162. Must appear that the facts could not possibly support a fraud order. Appleby v. Cluss, 160 F 984. Bill for injunction in effect charging that an armory is being applied by regimental officers for commercial purposes with intent to injure the business of relators and that business is destructive of the armory, states a cause of action. Hamill v. Dungan [N. J. Eq.] 68 A 1096.

86. Mandatory injunction to set aside attempted compromise and settlement of a judgment in favor of the town, where there was no substantial controversy. Farnsworth v. Wilbur [Wash.] 95 P 642.

87. State v. District Court [N. D.] 115 NW 675; Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 152. Fraud order. Appleby v. Cluss, 160 F 984. Injunction restraining county drain commissioner from proceeding to construct ditch without having procured necessary assents. Chandler v. Helsler [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 333, 116 NW 626. Injunction restraining town from compelling construction of temporary sidewalks without performing necessary prerequisites. Convers-

the most frequent occasions for the intervention of equity being to protect taxpayers from an unreasonable increase of their burden by waste or illegal disposition of public funds,[89] or by the incurring of illegal debts [90] or by making assessments therefor.[91] Entirely unauthorized interference with property rights may be enjoined.[92] Officers

v. Deep River [Iowa] 117 NW 1078. Injunction against carrying out proposition to build school house under School Laws, § 147, clauses 11, 12, where election on proposition is void. Thompson v. Mahoney, 136 Ill. App. 403. Injunction against acts of food commissioner in distributing bulletins condemning property of manufacturers as harmful. State v. District Court [N. D.] 115 NW 675. A suit for perpetual injunction is the proper remedy to prevent the collection of illegally levied taxes from citizens of annexed territory. Luterloh v. Fayetteville [N. C.] 62 SE 758. Will enjoin illegal and unconstitutional tax levy. Southern R. Co. v. Mecklenburg County Com'rs [N. C.] 61 SE 690; Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47. Where the sole question in proceedings by a county treasurer to assess property withheld from taxation was whether the property was exempt, and it was established beyond controversy that the property was exempt, the enforcement of a tax thereon might be enjoined. Bednar v. Carroll [Iowa] 116 NW 315. Where decision of state board in equalizing back taxes is void for lack of quorum to hear an appeal, a bill to enjoin enforcement of the judgment is maintainable. Smoky Mountain Land, Lumber & Imp. Co. v. Lattimore [Tenn.] 105 SW 1028.

88. Injunction against municipality restraining it from cutting off a supply of water will only be granted to prevent irreparable injury or injustice. Anderson v. Berwyn, 135 Ill. App. 8. Drain commissioners may be enjoined from wrongfully overflowing complainant's land by constructing a new drain which empties into a stream above complainant's land, where drain does not traverse such lands and complainants are not parties to the drainage proceedings. Smafield v. Smith [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 487, 116 NW 990. A saloonkeeper may enjoin county officers from prohibiting the sale of liquors pursuant to the result of an election, for if he used a writ of review he would be liable to prosecution for sales made, and further, the prosecutors appearing insolvent and the municipality not being liable, it might be impossible to recover damages. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811. As the landowner's remedy at law was ample, it was not erroneous to refuse to enjoin county commissioners from continuing a proceeding to establish a public road pursuant to Code, §§ 520-522, in advance of the hearing provided for in § 521. Hutchinson v. Lowndes County [Ga.] 62 SE 1048. No injunction against issue of bonds which will be void on their face. Streator v. Linscott, 153 Cal. 285, 95 P 42. Collection of taxes will not be enjoined if any part thereof are valid and unpaid. Transient merchant's license fee. Clay v. Wrought Iron Range Co. [Ind. App.] 95 NE 119. Equity will not lie to restrain a municipal treasurer from collecting an illegal personal property tax, proper remedy being at law to pay under protest and sue to recover. A. H. Stange Co. v. Merrill, 134 Wis. 514, 115 NW 115. Unlawful seizure is a mere trespass remediable at law. H. W. Metcalf Co. v. Martin [Fla.] 45 S 463. City acquiring waterworks used to supply water for public use does so as corporation engaged in supplying public use, and on its refusal to furnish water to those entitled thereto an injunction will not issue as there is a remedy by mandamus. Orcutt v. Pasadena Land & Water Co., 152 Cal. 599, 93 P 497. Injunction restraining a county drain commissioner from proceeding to construct a drainage ditch without having procured necessary assent, certiorari provided for in the drain law being evidently intended as a means of reviewing merely the action of the commissioner in establishing the drain, and any appeal under the law was not permissible. Chandler v. Heisler [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 333, 116 NW 626.

Remedy by appeal: Where statute provides for appeal in proceedings to relocate school house, a temporary injunction granted on petition containing no allegation of taking of such appeal should be dissolved. Baswell v. Fundenberger [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 64, 105 SW 1017. In proceedings by a county treasurer to assess property withheld from taxation for several years, where there was a question as to exemptions claimed, the treasurer had jurisdiction and his decision was reviewable on appeal as provided by the code, and a suit to enjoin enforcement of the assessment did not lie. Bednar v. Carroll [Iowa] 116 NW 315. Remedy provided by code for review on appeal of an assessment of property withheld from taxation is exclusive and equity will not enjoin such assessment unless tax imposed is illegal and void. Id. Federal court on principles of comity should not entertain suit to enjoin acts of state commission in advance of appeal to highest state court. Railroad rates fixed by state corporation commission. Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 29 S. Ct. 67.

89. Waste. Roberts v. Thompson [Neb.] 118 NW 106; Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828. Misappropriation. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47. Illegal disposition of public money. Roberts v. Thompson [Neb.] 118 NW 106.

90. Roberts v. Thompson [Neb.] 118 NW 106.

91. Assessment on account of a debt in excess of the constitutional limitation. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47.

92. Injunction will lie to restrain a municipality from interfering with use by private party of space beneath public alley, where right to use such space has been lawfully obtained. City of Chicago v. J. Burton Co., 140 Ill. App. 344. Injunction will lie against municipality for illegally interfering with or destroying property of telephone company, conducting system pursuant to accepted ordinance. City of Rock Island v. Central Union Tel. Co., 132 Ill. App. 248.

may usually be enjoined from enforcing unconstitutional statutes where they act in a ministerial capacity only,[93] but acts made mandatory by a valid statute cannot be enjoined.[94] Courts may enjoin official acts to avoid a multiplicity of suits,[95] and one may avoid the acts of an executive officer and enjoin its execution on the ground that it was issued in a case which was not within the jurisdiction of such officer,[96] or that through fraud or a gross mistake of fact the officer fell into a misapprehension of the facts which caused him to act in a manner palpably wrong,[97] or that it was issued in the absence of any evidence to sustain it, or upon facts found which do not sustain it, or that its issue was induced by any other error of law.[98] Equity will not restrain the acts of authorized officers for mere informality or irregularity,[99] but will enjoin acts done contrary to mandatory requirements of statute.[1] Official acts within the proper scope of authority will be enjoined only in a clear case of illegality or fraud.[2] The aid of equity cannot be invoked to declare in advance that certain acts of public officers proposed or threatened to be done in the future will, if performed, be illegal and void,[3] and as a general rule official acts will not be enjoined until

93. See § 2B, infra, and § 26, post. General discretion of attorney general of state regarding enforcement of laws when and as he deems fit, is not interfered with by an injunction restraining him from enforcing an unconstitutional statute. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714.

94. Where petition for removal of county seat has been filed, notice required by statute must be issued by auditor and he cannot be enjoined from so doing on ground that petition has been taken from his office and cannot be found. Evenson v. O'Brien [Minn.] 118 NW 364.

95. State v. District Court [N. D.] 115 NW 675. Equity has jurisdiction of suit by irrigation company to enjoin boards of supervisors of counties through which its canal passes from enforcing rates which do not enable company to earn reasonable income, and to determine in single suit legality of such rates. San Joaquin & Kings' River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 163 F 567.

96. Postmaster general's fraud order. People's United States Bank v. Gilson [C. C. A.] 161 F 286.

97. Fraud order issued by postmaster general. People's United States Bank v. Gilson [C. C. A.] 161 F 286.

98. Fraud order by postmaster general. People's United States Bank v. Gilson [C. C. A.] 161 F 286.

99. In proceeding to establish drainage ditch, if county board possesses jurisdiction and authority to act in premises, injunction will not lie on account of mere irregularities in exercise of power conferred. Campbell v. Youngson [Neb.] 114 NW 415. Irregularities and informalities in levies by school authorities cannot be questioned by bill in equity, and payment of tax warrants sold in anticipation of such levies. Gray v. School Inspectors, 231 Ill. 63, 83 NE 95. Even in case of perpetual lease, lessee to pay taxes, the assessment of taxes in the name of another upon the land and buildings erected by the lessee is not such error as to create a ground for having collection of taxes enjoined. City of Norfolk v. J. W. Perry Co. [Va.] 61 SE 867. Where change in boundaries of school district is made by irregular proceedings, they are not subject to collateral attack in injunction proceedings. School Dist. No. 116 v. Wolf [Kan.] 98 P 237. Injunction will not issue to restrain payment of school orders which are irregular and contrary to statute in form, where money thereon has been obtained and taxes collected and orders themselves have matured. Gray v. Board of School Inspectors, 135 Ill. App. 494.

1. Where a statute requiring notice of assessment to a taxpayer is mandatory, a failure to give such notice renders the assessment void, and it may be enjoined. Ward v. Wentz [Ky.] 113 SW 892.

2. Tax for sewer construction and contract for the improvement. Mead v. Turner, 112 NYS 127. Complainant must state facts bringing his case within some acknowledged head of equity jurisdiction in order to enjoin collection of taxes. Gray v. School Inspectors, 231 Ill. 63, 83 NE 95.

3. Will not restrain the levy of a tax and issue of town orders in anticipation of the collection thereof. Lewis v. Eagle [Wis.] 115 NW 361. Rule that taxpayer cannot enjoin levy of tax until lien or apparent lien or cloud on title is about to be wrongfully created applies to cases involving legality of specific assessment against property of complainant. Jordan v. Logansport [Ind.] 86 NE 47. Action to enjoin election proceedings brought prior to promulgation of returns held premature. Election ordered by a police jury and held under statute authorizing local option elections. Town of Ponchatoula v. Police Jury, 120 La. 1040, 46 S 16. Where statute provides for decision by sealer of weights and measures as to correctness of computing scales, a suit will not lie to enjoin him on ground that certain scales are correct but he threatens to find them incorrect, for such suit would take away his right to come to decision. Moneyweight Scale Co. v. McBride, 199 Mass. 503, 85 NE 870. Equity will not enjoin reassessment of a tax on stock and real property of national bank because of an apprehension that U. S. Rev. St. § 5219 will be violated by officer in making assessment. First Nat. Bank v. Albright, 208 U. S. 548, 52 Law. Ed. 614.

some injury to the complainant is at least threatened.[4] Equity will not interfere to enforce a public duty where no private right is involved,[5] and a private party cannot enjoin a threatened wrong where the injury which he would sustain would be no other or different from that suffered by the community generally,[6] but equity will restrain an attempted wrong when it clearly appears that in no other proceeding can public or private interests be fully protected, and the writ will issue at the instance of a private individual who shows that he may suffer financial injury if the contemplated wrong be not enjoined, even though it appears that part of the public may suffer in the same way.[7] Mandatory injunctions are not granted where the only ground of equitable relief is the failure of the defendant to perform an independent public duty which he owes to the plaintiff individually as well as to others.[8] Title to public office cannot be tried in a suit for injunction,[9] but interference with an officer in the performance of his duties may be enjoined.[10]

(§ 2) D. Enforcement of statutes and ordinances. See 10 C. L. 256—Injunction will not, as a general rule, lie to enforce a municipal ordinance,[11] especially where no private right is involved,[12] but the legislature may establish such remedy,[13] and it is held, even in the absence of statutory provision to such effect, that violation of building restrictions may, in some cases, be enjoined at the instance of a property owner.[14] Injunction is the appropriate remedy for avoiding the enforcement of an illegal and unconstitutional statute or ordinance,[15] where such enforcement will

4. Mere illegality of a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued pursuant to the railroad law, Laws 1892, p. 1395, c. 676, § 59, is insufficient to warrant injunctive relief, but it must appear that pursuant to certificate defendant is about to do something or threatening to do something harmful to plaintiff. Erie R. Co. v. Rochester-Corning-Elmira Trac. Co., 57 Misc. 180, 107 NYS 940. Equity should not entertain a bill for an injunction against a tax collector who threatens to seize and sell personal property except in rare cases where the property is peculiarly valuable and cannot be compensated for adequately in damages. H. W. Metcalf Co v. Martin [Fla.] 45 S 463. As general rule, injunction will not issue against passage of unauthorized municipal resolutions or ordinances, no one having cause to complain until some attempt at enforcement is made. Lee v. McCook [Neb.] 116 NW 955.

5. Erection of livery stable infringing no private rights although contrary to ordinance. Mason v. Deitering [Mo. App.] 111 SW 862.

6. Lee v. McCook [Neb.] 116 NW 955; Semones v. Needles, 137 Iowa, 177, 114 NW 904. Validity of special assessments for local improvements cannot be determined in action brought by general taxpayer to restrain the authorities from making improvement. Merritt v. Duluth, 103 Minn. 236, 114 NW 758. Taxpayer cannot enjoin the removal of public records temporarily from the state for use in a federal court. Dickinson v. Kingsbury [Cal. App.] 96 P 329.

7. Where statutes provided for the sale of liquor in communities of certain size, individual citizens of a city might enjoin the retaining of names on the census roll fraudulently padded. Semones v. Needles, 137 Iowa, 177, 114 NW 904. If the city enacts an invalid ordinance regulating its relations with a water company so as to bind itself to pay unreasonable rates or require the payment of unjust charges, taxpayers affected directly as users of water, or indirectly as taxpayers, may sue to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance, although taxes of others are proportionately raised. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828.

8. To compel performance of quasi public duty to furnish gas. Cox v. Malden & Melrose Gaslight Co., 199 Mass. 324, 85 NE 180.

9. Harrison v. Stroud, 33 Ky. L. R. 653, 110 SW 828. Injunction cannot issue in election contest to prevent one holding certificate of election from qualifying and discharging duties of office pending contest. Id. Public officer not in possession of office is not entitled to injunction to enforce his right of possession. Lucas v. Futrall, 84 Ark. 540, 106 SW 667.

10. Injunction is proper remedy to prevent interference with county infirmary superintendent in the performance of the duties of his position or enjoyment thereof. Zeigler v. Palmer, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 545.

11. City of New York v. M. Wineburgh Advertising Co., 122 App. Div. 748, 107 NYS 478.

12. Erection of livery stable infringing no private rights although contrary to ordinance. Mason v. Deitering [Mo. App.] 111 SW 862.

13. By statute in New York, proceedings in law or in equity may be brought to correct, restrain or remove any structure in violation of the building laws. May enjoin maintenance of a "sky sign." City of New York v. M. Wineburgh Advertising Co., 122 App. Div. 748, 107 NYS 478.

14. Restrictions intended to guard against fire. O'Bryan v. Highland Apartment Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 349, 108 SW 257.

15. Tax levy. Southern R. Co. v. Mecklenburg County Com'rs [N. C.] 61 SE 690. The question of the constitutionality of injure property rights,[16] but only to the extent that the complainant will thus be injured.[17] As in other cases, a proper case for equitable relief must be made out, the limitations upon the power of equity to interfere with the exercise of discretionary powers being the same as in other cases,[18] and the grounds of equitable relief being the same, such as inadequacy of other remedies [19] and multiplicity of suits.[20] Federal courts may enjoin the enforcement of unconstitutional state statutes and regulations,[21] and for that purpose may enjoin officers empowered to enforce them.[22] A federal court of first instance acting upon affidavits, which pronounces a state statute unconstitutional, assumes a grave responsibility justified only by most exceptional circumstances,[23] and such an injunction should issue only in a clear case.[24] The a statute is properly raised in a suit to restrain action under it. Suit to restrain sealer of weights from condemning a computing scale under Statutes 1907, p. 517, c. 535. Moneyweight Scale Co. v. McBride, 199 Mass. 503, 85 NE 870.

16. Plumbing regulations preventing a firm from securing the services of journeymen plumbers. Robinson v. Galveston [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1076. Petition to restrain enforcement of law on ground that it would destroy business built up after period of years, and that it is unconstitutional, authorizes, as against a demurrer, relief in equity to prevent irreparable injury. Merchants' Exch. v. Knott, 212 Mo. 616, 111 SW 565. Court having power to declare statute unconstitutional may also, where its unconstitutionality depends on controverted facts which can only be determined on hearing, suspend operation of statute in proper case to prevent irreparable injury until final hearing. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 157 F 944.

17. Though part of an ordinance is invalid, if it does not affect interest of taxpayers who are suing to restrain its enforcement, effect of invalid part upon other provisions need not necessarily be considered in action to enjoin enforcement of ordinance. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828. Ordinance granting right to water company which at most grants monopoly of right to furnish water for limited period. Id. Where an excessive tax was levied and practically all taxes had been paid, a taxpayer who had not paid his taxes could not enjoin collection of whole tax, but could enjoin appropriation of any part of excess to any other purpose than that for which it was levied and compel its being held until the next year for same purpose. Southern R. Co. v. Mecklenburg County Com'rs [N. C.] 61 SE 690.

18. Evidence insufficient to show that ordinance prohibiting cemeteries within certain limits was invalid as arbitrary discrimination, so that it might be enjoined. Bryan v. Birmingham [Ala.] 45 S 922. Wisdom of ordinance adjusting water rates, etc., not so favorable to the city as former arrangements, held not reviewable. Brummitt v. Ogden Waterworks Co., 33 Utah, 285, 93 P 828.

19. One cannot enjoin an ordinance as void where no property rights are involved, invalidity of the ordinance being a defense to a prosecution for its violation,and one qualified to engage in trade of plumber cannot enjoin regulating state. Robinson v. Galveston [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1076.

20. Act provided for the furnishing of gas at certain rate, gas company to be subject to penalty for breach to each consumer. Consolidated Gas Co. v. New York, 157 F 849. Suit by property owners on behalf of themselves and all others interested to restrain enforcement of city ordinance requiring owners to construct sidewalks, curbing, etc., is within rule that equity will in a single suit take cognizance of controversy to avoid a multiplicity of suits. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181.

21. Consolidated Gas Co. v. New York, 157 F 849. South Carolina dispensary commission. Fleischman Co. v. Murray, 161 F 152; Murray v. Wilson Distilling Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 1; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hadley, 161 F 419; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 29 S. Ct. 67; Merchants' Exch. v. Knott, 212 Mo. 616, 111 SW 565. Federal courts may enjoin attorney general of a state from proceeding to enforce an unconstitutional statute. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714. Bill in equity is proper, if not only, mode of judicial relief against unreasonable tariff rates established by legislature or its commission. Id. May enjoin either civil or criminal proceedings instituted to enforce confiscatory rates. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 157 F 944. Where a railroad commission is given continuing power of supervision over the matter of compliance with its orders and regulations, with power to change or repeal the same, and is made suable by statute, suit may be brought in a federal court to enjoin enforcement of order it has promulgated on ground that same is confiscatory. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLendon, 157 F 961. Suit in federal court, against attorney general, to enjoin enforcement of unconstitutional state statute by bringing criminal proceedings for its violation, is not within prohibition of Rev. St. § 720 (Comp. St. 1901, p. 581), as one to stay proceedings in a state court. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954.

22. See ante, this section, subsections B, and C.

23. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954.

24. No injunction ought to be awarded by a federal court against the enforcement of a state railroad rate law which is alleged to violate the federal constitution, unless the case is reasonably free from doubt. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714.

equity jurisdiction of a federal court to enjoin enforcement of an unconstitutional state statute to protect the property rights of complainant from irreparable injury is not defeated by the fact that the means of enforcement provided by the act are by criminal prosecutions for its violation.[25] Equity will not usually interfere with the enforcement of municipal penal ordinances either by enjoining prosecutions thereunder [26] or by enjoining police interference.[27] Equity may, however, enjoin a seeming attempt to enforce the law which is in reality a continuous trespass,[28] or where property rights are involved,[29] or where an officer undertakes to construe a law ex parte and to enforce as thus construed.[30] Complainant does not lose his right to injunction because after being denied a preliminary hearing and pending final hearing he complies with the statutory order to avoid penalties to which he would otherwise be liable.[31] Equity will not enjoin proceedings authorized by positive statute upon any other ground than the invalidity of the statute.[32]

Act N. Y. May 20, 1908, to prevent waste of natural mineral waters, and prohibiting pumping of mineral waters, etc., is not so clearly unconstitutional or beyond police powers of state as to justify a federal court in granting a preliminary injunction to restrain its enforcement at suit of a land-owner engaged in pumping gas for sale from wells drilled into rocks in his lands. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954. On motion for preliminary injunction to restrain enforcement of order made by railroad commission reducing passenger rates, on ground that such rates are unreasonable and confiscatory, evidence held insufficient to warrant granting of such injunction, in that it did not show in absence of an actual trial that effect of enforcement would be to lessen complainant's net earnings. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLenden, 157 F 961.

25. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 162 F 954.

26. Gonyo v. Wilmette, 133 Ill. App. 645. Equity generally has no power to enjoin threatened prosecutions under municipal ordinances or state laws. Ordinance against maintaining any cemeteries except a certain one named. Bryan v. Birmingham [Ala.] 45 S 922; Canon City v. Manning, 43 Colo. 144, 95 P 537. Equity will not interfere to prevent anticipated criminal prosecutions, especially where ordinance has been found valid as a police regulation. Rider v. Leatherman, 85 Ark. 230, 107 SW 996.

Adequate remedy at law: Court of chancery will not entertain contest as to validity of ordinance and restrain prosecutions pending settling of that question, as the whole matter can be settled in a court of law. Ordinance against procuring patients through agents. Rider v. Leatherman, 85 Ark. 230, 107 SW 996. Injunction will not lie to prevent enforcement of a local option act, as an adequate remedy at law is afforded in a criminal prosecution under the act. Gassman v. Kerns, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 626.

27. Cannot enjoin police interference. Keith & Proctor Amusement Co. v. Bingham, 110 NYS 219; Schimkevitz v. Bingham, 110 NYS 219. Injunction will not lie to prevent city from enforcing ordinances against displaying advertisements on wagons. Fifth Ave. Coach Co. v. New York, 110 NYS 1037. Arrest of person for giving picture and wax work shows on Sunday. Eden Musee American Co. v. Bingham, 110 NYS 210. Cannot enjoin police from interfering with Sunday roller skating. Olympic Athletic Club v. Bingham, 110 NYS 216. Equity cannot restrain interference by police in enforcing law against Sunday violation. Dana hall. Suesskind v. Bingham, 110 NYS 213. Will not enjoin police from interfering with the giving of a moving picture show on Sunday. Moore v. Owen, 58 Misc. 332, 109 NYS 585. Police interference with moving picture show. Shepard v. Bingham, 110 NYS 217. Requiring license for vehicles and regulating use of street for public hack stands. Kissinger v. Hay [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 1005. Will not enjoin board of health from prosecuting for slaughtering, etc., poultry in certain districts of a city without a license. Cohen v. Department of Health, 113 NYS 88.

28. The fact that a newspaper has printed improper matter does not warrant the authorities in supressing its future publication. Ulster Square Dealer v. Fowler, 58 Misc. 325, 111 NYS 16. Where property rights may be destroyed, unlawful interference by criminal proceedings under a void law or ordinance may be reached and controlled by a decree in equity. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714.

29. Hall v. Dunn [Or.] 97 P 811.

30. Where a penal ordinance forbids the sale of liquor, equity will enjoin the officers of the city from declaring ex parte that the sale of liquor for social enjoyment by members and guests of a club is a nuisance and attempting to prevent same. Canon City v. Manning, 43 Colo. 144, 95 P 537.

31. In a suit to enjoin the enforcement of railroad rates as fixed by a railroad commission, complainant's right to a preliminary injunction or to relief on the merits is not prejudiced by the fact that, being denied preliminary injunction on its ex parte application, it put into effect the rates prescribed by the order, being constrained thereto by the statutory penalties to which it would otherwise be liable. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLendon, 157 F 961.

32. Will not enjoin a multiplicity of liens on the ground of overpayment. Aimee Realty Co. v. Haller, 128 Mo. App. 66, 106 SW 588.

(§ 2) E. Exercise of right of eminent domain.[See 10 C. L. 257]—An injunction will issue to enforce the constitutional right of a property owner against dangerous aggression, under the guise of the exercise of the right of eminent domain,[33] and damages may be awarded for the trespass,[34] unless as an alternative such damages as would be awarded in condemnation proceedings are paid.[35] The rule that the taking and injuring of private property for public use will not be restrained if compensation in damages can be made and defendant is willing to make such compensation and a serious injury will result from the issuance of the injunction is confined in its application to takings by public service corporations.[36] A property owner may be estopped to complain in equity of the violation of his rights.[37] A property owner will not ordinarily be enjoined from resisting a trespass upon his property in order that the trespasser may have time to ascertain the damages to be paid,[38] but in an action to enjoin condemnation of land, it is not error to admit testimony of the condemnor that he sought to purchase the land sought to be condemned but failed.[39]

(§ 2) F. Acts affecting rights in highways and public or quasi public places.[See 10 C. L. 258]—A municipality may sue to restrain injury to or encroachments upon,[40] or obstructions[41] of highways under its care and charge, where there is no adequate remedy at law.[42] An injunction against a street obstruction may issue at the instance

33. In absence of consent, tacit or express, it is well settled in Minnesota that, without compensation first made, entry by railroad company upon lands with intention to permanently appropriate them is unlawful and will be restrained. McCord v. Eastern R. Co., 136 Wis. 254, 116 NW 845. In action against railroad company for damages to property, by reason of elevation of its tracks in front of said property and operation of same, plaintiffs were entitled to decree enjoining operation of such trains until payment of any damages recovered. Anderson v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 58 Misc. 72, 110 NYS 232. Where statute provides that one taking waters from stream must give bond to riparian owners to secure payment of any damages, a riparian owner may enjoin use of water from stream until water company secures payment of damages as provided by statute. Bland v. Tipton Water Co. [Pa.] 71 A 101. If in condemnation proceedings an attempt to condemn more than is necessary is made, owner may enjoin condemnation of unnecessary part. Piedmont Cotton Mills v. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 52.

34. Duncan v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 111 NYS 210.

35. Laying of tracks in a street. Duncan v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 111 NYS 210. One suing to enjoin maintenance of elevated railroad in street in front of his premises, and for damages for past maintenance is entitled to no greater relief than he would obtain in condemnation proceedings. Smyth v. Brooklyn Union El. R. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1100.

36. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

37. Where owner consented to laying of tracks in highway and made no objection to construction of road. Maust v. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co., 219 Pa. 568, 69 A 80. In action to enjoin street railway from operation of line, where abutting owner had told defendant's manager, "I know where you want to go, go ahead. I will see you in a few days," such statement is sufficient to justify finding of consent. Id.

38. Where telephone company violated property rights of owners of land by going thereon and constructing lines without any right, an injunction restraining interference by property owners will not be continued until compensation to such owners may be ascertained and made by the telephone company, in absence of laches or acquiescence on the part of the property owners. Northeastern Tel. & T. Co. v. Hepburn [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 249.

39. Piedmont Cotton Mills v. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 52.

40. Digging upon adjacent lands so as to affect lateral support or threaten subsidence of highway. Village of Haverstraw v. Eckerson, 192 N. Y. 54, 84 NE 578, afg. 124 App. Div. 18, 108 NYS 506.

41. Under rule authorizing relief by injunction to public authorities from invasion of highways by public service corporations under color of statutory authority, where pipes are laid in a highway without authority, the court may, by mandatory injunction, require removal of pipes laid pending suit. Woodbridge Tp. v. Middlesex Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 68 A 464.

42. Board of commissioners having complied with law in proceedings to establish a road may enjoin interference by landowner with opening of road, as there is no adequate remedy at law. Boothroyd v. Larimer County Com'rs, 43 Colo. 428, 97 P 255. Remedy by appearance and objections in drainage proceedings held adequate to protect injury to public bridge by construction of drain. American Steel Dredge Works v. Putnam County Com'rs [Ind.] 85 NE 1. See, also, Id. [Ind. App.] 82 NE 995.

Criminal liability for obstruction will not preclude injunction. Lawrence v. Ewert [S. D.] 114 NW 709.

of a private person where he is or will be specially damaged,[43] but not otherwise,[44] and these principles apply also in the case of abandonment of a highway.[45] An obstruction cannot be enjoined by an adjacent landowner where the place obstructed is not a public one, the landowner having, furthermore, no private rights therein.[46] An injunction may issue even though the title to property is involved.[47] The fact that a complainant summarily and illegally abated an unlawful obstruction of a public alley would not justify the denial of an injunction to restrain further threatened obstructions.[48] Highway commissioners may be restrained from opening a road where the petition therefor does not confer jurisdiction.[49] In an action to enjoin repeated trespass for traveling over a discontinued highway, evidence that another highway which was open and might have been used was not regularly laid out was properly rejected.[50] In enforcing, as against a municipality, the right to use streets for a particular purpose, the court may impose terms to protect the rights of the municipality.[51]

(§ 2) G. Acts of quasi public and private corporations or associations. See 10 C. L. 258—The internal management of a corporation will not ordinarily be interfered with by the court at the instance of a minority stockholder,[52] but the rights of a stockholder will nevertheless be protected by injunction from injury by illegal acts on the part of the corporate officers.[53] A bona fide purchaser of corporate stock may

43. Where manner of construction of street railway and use to which it is put destroys practical usefulness of street to abutting owners, they have no adequate remedy at law and may obtain relief by injunction, especially where occupation of street is unlawful. Swinhart v. St. Louis & S. R. Co., 207 Mo. 423, 105 SW 1043. One obstructing public highway, thereby preventing its use by public at places of encroachment and causing special damage to another, is liable in special damages and may also be enjoined from maintaining such obstruction. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 110 NYS 545. Abutting property owners may enjoin the unreasonable use of a highway by a railway company. Facts held not to show an unreasonable interference. Foundry v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 130 Mo. App. 104, 109 SW 80. Abutting owner may restrain street railway company from maintaining siding on his property where street railway has right by ordinance to construct its railway in street. Breen v. Pittsburg, Harmon, Butler, etc., R. Co., 220 Pa. 612, 69 A 1047.

44. Injunction will not lie on petition of property owner against the connecting of buildings on opposite sides of street by bridge twenty feet above pavement, where ingress and egress of plaintiff are in nowise impaired, and injury which he will sustain, if any, is not different in kind from that suffered by the public at large. Offutt v. Roth Packing Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 357.

45. To enjoin abandonment of public street, plaintiff must allege and show a damage different in kind and not merely in degree from that of the public generally. Petition alleging diminution in value of lots insufficient. Southern R. Co. v. Albes [Ala.] 45 S 234. Although authority of common council under city charter is not absolute as to location, closing, etc., of alleys, a contemplated change in an alley will not be enjoined where, as a means of ingress and egress, the alley as changed will furnish the same service as before. Schmoit v. Nagel, 151 Mich. 502, 15 Det. Leg. N. 45, 115 NW 411. Bill to restrain abandonment of street can not be maintained if it is not alleged that plaintiff's land abuts upon street, for it is not within provisions of Const. 1901, § 235, providing for compensation for takings for public use. Southern R. Co. v. Albes [Ala.] 45 S 234. Alderman and taxpayer cannot enjoin acts of balance of board in voting to suspend by-street, where he has no property on such street. Trotter v. Franklin, 146 N. C. 554, 60 SE 509.

46. Owner of upland cannot enjoin construction of pier on adjoining land between high and low water, on ground that it interferes with convenience of persons in passing over land. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 110 NYS 545.

47. Where there is threatened wrongful obstruction of public alley, same will be restrained, even if title to land is in dispute, and defendant is entitled to a trial of that question at law, and even though he is in possession of premises. Detroit Mineral Bath Co. v. Stroh Brew. Co., 151 Mich. 555, 15 Det. Leg. N. 68, 115 NW 717.

48. Detroit Mineral Bath Co. v. Stroh Brew. Co., 151 Mich. 555, 15 Det. Leg. N. 68, 115 NW 717.

52. Bartow Lumber Co. v. Enwright [Ga.] 62 SE 233. A stockholder cannot enjoin dissolution proceedings taken in good faith, in accordance with the statute and with the approval of a majority. Colby v. Equitable Trust Co., 124 App. Div. 262, 108 NYS 978.

53. An injunction will lie in favor of a stockholder to restrain the officers of a sue in equity to compel the corporation to enter the assignment upon its books and to issue a new certificate therefor.[54] Equity has no inherent power to try disputed title to corporate office and enjoin one in possession from the exercise of its functions.[55] In some states an injunction is the statutory remedy for usurpation of corporate franchises,[56] but in the absence of statute such a remedy is not available,[57] and, in any case where a statute authorizes injunction against certain acts of corporations, it will not be extended by the courts.[58] Equity will not, in the absence of fraud, interfere with the enforcement of by-laws, rules and regulations of beneficial or other associations,[59] but will protect property rights from injury or forfeiture under invalid regulations.[60]

(§ 2) H. Breach or enforcement of contract or trust.[See 10 C. L. 259]—An injunction may, in a proper case, issue against an apprehended breach of contract,[61] where corporation from changing its articles so as to change its location, where defendants contend for their right to make such change at a called meeting. Bobzin v. Gould Balance Valve Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 40. A circuit court of the United States, other requisites to the exercise of jurisdiction being satisfied, will enjoin de facto equally with de jure officers of a corporation from perpetrating, facilitating, or permitting violations of law to the detriment of innocent stockholders who have no adequate remedy at law and are unable to induce the corporation to adopt effective measures for their protection. Morrell v. Brooks & Son Co., 164 F 501.

54. No remedy at law. Everitt v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Elm Creek [Neb.] 117 NW 401.

55. Office of director. Moir v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc., 112 NYS 57.

56. Remedy, under St. 1906, p. 346, c. 372, is exclusive. Attorney General v. New York, etc., R. Co., 197 Mass. 194, 83 NE 408.

57. P. L. 1871, p. 1360, does not authorize determination of charter powers in injunction proceedings. Myersdale, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co., 219 Pa. 558, 69 A 92.

58. While P. L. 1871, p. 1360, has been given liberal construction in attempt to reach equities between rival street railroad companies, it has not been and cannot be extended so as to authorize determination of charter powers or forfeiture thereof. Myersdale, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co., 219 Pa. 558, 69 A 92. Does not authorize injunction by individual. Id.

59. Complainant had been expelled by lower tribunal on order but case had not been tried by higher tribunal as required by by-laws. Camp No. 6, Patriotic Sons of America v. Arrington, 107 Md. 319, 68 A 548. Equity will not enjoin the expulsion of a member of an association not organized for pecuniary profit for violation of the rules and by-laws, the remedy, if any, being at law. Allen v. Chicago Undertakers' Ass'n, 232 Ill. 458, 83 NE 952. Where member of fraternal benefit society agreed to abide by regularly made amendments to constitution and by-laws, injunction will not lie to prevent enforcement of such amendment, increasing dues. Champion v. Hannahan, 138 Ill. App. 387. Where constitution and by-laws of benefit society provided for expelling member, ipso facto, for nonpayment of dues, which provision was agreed to by members joining such society, injunction will not lie to prevent such expulsion. Id.

60. Where members of employers' association agreed to abide by associations, constitutions, etc., and secured performance by depositing undated notes to be negotiated and treated as forfeiture in case of disobedience, a member was entitled to restrain negotiation of notes as forfeit because of alleged disobedience to unlawful regulation. Sackett & Wilhelms Lithographers & Printing Co. v. National Ass'n of Employing Lithographers, 113 NYS 110.

61. Where prayer of petition is for injunction, restraining defendant from violating contract by routing its business over lines of plaintiff, action is not open to objection that it is an attempt to enforce a contract by mandatory injunction and will lie. United States Tel. Co. v. Middlepoint Home Tel. Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 425.

Breach enjoined: Threatened forfeiture by city of rights under contract for maintenance of dam. Eau Claire Dells Imp. Co. v. Eau Claire, 134 Wis. 548, 115 NW 155. Equity will enjoin the foreclosure of a mortgage for breach of a condition to insure, where the property remained uninsured one day only and the mortgagor then tendered sufficient insurance but the mortgagee refused to waive forfeiture unless insurance was placed in a certain company which he knew would not insure the risk. McCombs v. Elmes, 197 Mass. 19, 83 NE 306. The A railroad secured control of the B by issuing to its stockholders trust certificates under an agreement to pay semi-annual dividends and a specified sum per share at a designated date. The stock was delivered to a trustee to secure performance which bound A not to permit the issue of any bonds, etc., by B or the use of the proceeds thereof, except for specified purposes, until the stock had been paid. Held, in a suit, by the minority trust certificate holders for an accounting of obligations issued by B in violation of the agreement, and requiring A to place in B's treasury the equivalent in money of such obligations, etc., the court was authorized to issue a temporary injunction restraining A from issuing obligations in violation of the trust and enjoining their sale, but could not restrain B from dividing its surplus as dividends declared on its stock and paying such dividends to A under the trust agreement.

there is no adequate remedy at law.[62] There must be a valid and subsisting contract between the parties,[63] susceptible of specific enforcement.[64] Negativve or restrictive covenants, provided they are legal and valid,[65] may be enforced by injunction against the violation thereof.[66] Breach of contract for personal services usually will Kissel v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 111 NYS 965. Where a lessee of privilege of carriage service for hotel shows clearly his rights in premises and invasion thereof by lessor, injunction pendente lite will be granted in action by lessee against lessor. Lynch v. Robert P. Murphy Hotel Co., 112 NYS 915.

Breach not enjoined: No error in refusing to enjoin breach of contract as to operation of street cars over plaintiff's land. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Rome R. & Light Co. [Ga.] 61 SE 1116.

62. Threatened revocation of contract will not be enjoined where party seeking to revoke is financially responsible, though such revocation is threatened at time when contract is peculiarly valuable, latter consideration affecting only amount of damages. Hess v. Roberts, 124 App. Div. 328, 108 NYS 894. No injunction against sale of pledges where there is no allegation that defendant is insolvent or that property threatened to be sold has no ascertainable value, it not appearing that there is no adequate remedy at law. Howley v. Press, 111 NYS 1080. Where school board authorized committee to erect school building and to procure plans under arrangement for competitive examination with agreement to select plan from those presented, losing competitors to be paid a certain sum, and plans were submitted and board then proceeded to selection of architect under different plan, an action at law for breach would afford no adequate remedy and a bill to compel board to act would lie. Palmer v. Pittsburg Board of Education, 220 Pa. 568, 70 A 433.

63. Length of time of contract was uncertain. Platte County Independent Tel. Co. v. Leigh Independent Tel. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 511. Evidence held to establish allegations of answer that contract as alleged in bill was only part of contract, which in its entirety was in violation of public policy and would not sustain suit in court of justice. Camors-McConnell Co. v. McConnell, 163 F 638. Oral agreement, without consideration, ceding possession of property in perpetuity without obligation upon party receiving possession to retain same, will not be enjoined in face of legal decision that legal relation of parties is at an end and that owner is entitled to possession. M. Redgrave Co. v. Redgrave [N. J. Eq.] 71 A 147.

64. Gillespie v. Fulton Oil & Gas Co., 140 Ill. App. 147. Bill praying injunction to enforce covenant of lease equivalent to bill for specific performance. Launtz v. Vogt, 133 Ill. App. 255. Injunction to restrain breach of contract is a negative specific performance, and jurisdiction does not attach unless contract is one which might affirmatively be specifically enforced. Fox v. Fitzpatrick, 190 N. Y. 259, 82 NE 1103. Where injunction if granted would accomplish all that decree for specific performance could effect, the principles governing bill for specific performance control. Whalen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Md.] 69 A 390.

65. Contract in restraint of trade will not be enforced unless no more so than is reasonably required to protect the interest of the party in favor of whom given. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 186. Equity will not enjoin a salesman and shipping clerk from engaging in a competing business in breach of contract. Simms v. Patterson [Fla.] 46 S 91. Equity will not enforce agreement made between employer and employe that employe should not engage to work for anyone in similar line of business in state for two years after termination of employment. Witkop & Holmes Co. v. Boyce, 112 NYS 874.

66. Restriction as to sale of liquor. Guyer v. Auers, 132 Ill. App. 520. Covenant by vendor not to trade in vendee's territory. New York Phonograph Co. v. Davega, 111 NYS 363. Contract not to enter into competing ice business for one year within certain area. American Ice Co. v. Lynch [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 138. Claim for injunction against breach of agreement not to engage in business of extracting teeth by use of nitrous oxide gas or any other method invented and used exclusively by complainant is without foundation where such method was neither invented not used exclusively by complainant. Thomas v. Borden [Pa.] 70 A 1051.

Restrictive covenants as to use of land are enforcible by injunction, unless there has been such a change in the neighborhood that the reasons therefor have ceased to exist. Adams v. Howell, 58 Misc. 435, 108 NYS 945. Fact that there have been other violations by other parties is immaterial. Id. Erection of a building projecting on to part of a restricted area may be enjoined by one whose steps project for a few feet onto the same. Id. Where restriction is placed upon land providing against fencing of same east of a certain line, easement or servitude is created enforcible in equity, and it is immaterial that right has no substantial money value. Beck v. Heckman [Iowa] 118 NW 510. Bill lies to enjoin the use of leased premises for any other purpose than that to which it was restricted under lease, regardless of damage. Use restricted to "billiard & pool" enjoin use for moving picture show. Dycus v. Traders' Bank & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 329. A covenant restricting the use of land will be enforced by injunction although not of class technically running with the land, as in case of representation that adjacent land would not be used for a feed stable and wagon yard. Woods v. Lowrance [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 418.

Laches and acquiescence: Where defendant purchased certain land, as part of a tract divided up under a common scheme whereby no offensive businesses were to be carried on, and rushed the work of building a garage, purposely refraining from asking not be enjoined.[67] Where, however, the contract relates to personal services of a special unique or extraordinary character which can be performed by no one else, and there is a negative covenant, the court sometimes enforces the negative covenant by injunction.[68] A covenant restricting the use of land will be enforced by injunction, although not of the class technically running with the land.[69] The disclosure of trade secrets[70] in violation of contract will be enjoined.[71] Difficulty in detecting all violations of a contract and the alleged insolvency of the defendant do not make out an equity for an injunction upon an original bill.[72]

(§ 2) I. Interference with property, business, or comfort of private persons. See 10 C. L. 262—Equity will enjoin the unlawful interference with one's business,[73] but only where some injury has been inflicted on the person or some right of property has been invaded, destroyed or prejudiced,[74] or where such acts are threatened.[75] By statute in New York one may restrain the use of his portrait for advertising.[76] Ordinarily an adjacent property owner, suffering injury in his proprietary rights from an enterprise for the public benefit under a quasi public charter, is restricted to an action for damages, or some statutory method of redress and cannot enjoin the owner of the enterprise from carrying it on.[77] The unreasonable use of water in a stream to the injury of another riparian owner may be enjoined,[78] despite the fact that the permission or views of adjoining owners and secretly purchasing the land of an adjoining owner who had already brought suit, the delay of another owner in bringing suit pending decision of the first suit was not laches. Daly v. Foss, 199 Mass. 104, 85 NE 94. Injunction is not granted where conduct of plaintiff renders it inequitable that it be granted, as where plaintiff has acquiesced in breach of contract by doctor not to practice in certain locality. Lester v. Sullivan, 82 Ky. L. R. 925, 107 SW 300.

67. A breach of a contract to enter employment will not usually be enjoined, as a substitute can readily be obtained, and remedy at law is adequate. Dentist. Simms v. Burnette [Fla.] 46 S 90; Osius v. Hinchman, 150 Mich. 603, 14 Det. Leg. N. 792, 114 NW 402. Agreement by employe to serve for term of years and during that time to devote his entire time, skill, and labor to service of his employer will not be enforced, though valid. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 186. Breach of contract of personal service is fully remediable at law. Bookkeeper agreed not to engage in the liquor business in the state. Simms v. Burnette [Fla.] 46 S 90.

68. Simms v. Burnette [Fla.] 46 S 90. Services held not unique where party contracted to manufacture a secret formula and not divulge to others. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 186.

69. Representation that adjacent land would not be used for a feed stable and wagon yard. Woods v. Lowrance [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 418. See § 21, Easements and Rights of Way.

Ex parte Sherwood, 41 Ind. App. 642, 84 NE 783. Rights of trading stamp company protected by injunction where rival company purchased partly filled books of former from customers of merchants and exchanged its own books and stamps therefor, some of the stamps thus acquired being thereafter sold at reduced price. Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. Louis & Weber Co., 161 F 219. Plaintiff was not entitled to enjoin defendant to prevent him from interfering with harvesting of crops purchased from defendant's tenant and grown on defendant's premises, where only acts of interference shown consisted in ordering plaintiff not to come on premises and to leave after he had entered and in fastening up certain gates. Kirkpatrick v. Fonner [Neb.] 116 NW 779.

plaintiff cannot prove the extent of his injury with absolute precision.[79] The flooding of lands may also be enjoined.[80] Further, miscellaneous instances of the protection of the property and comfort of private persons are given in the note.[81]

Trade and firm name.[See 10 C. L. 288]—Equity will enjoin an unfair use of trade names, labels, etc.,[82] but only when such use is likely to deceive the public or purchasers of ordinary caution.[83] Use of a trade mark or name to describe the lawful use of an article lawfully acquired will not be enjoined.[84] In a suit to enjoin the use of a trade name and a conspiracy to deprive the plaintiff of its use, there can be no relief where the right to and ownership of the name is in defendants, or one of them.[85] One who is himself practicing what amounts to a fraud on the public cannot izing it to run its plant, may enjoin driving company from interfering with its riparian rights by storing water, causing artificial freshets so as to compel plaintiff's plant to remain idle. Kalami Elec. L. & P. Co. v. Kalama Driving Co., 48 Wash. 612, 94 P 469. In suit to restrain diversion of water of stream to injury of plaintiff's riparian rights, question whether unlawfulness of diversion depends on proof of actual perceptible damage, if diversion is made permanent and for purpose of sale, is one the solution of which depends on decisions of courts of this state which control it, and hence plaintiff as preliminary condition to equitable relief will not be required to bring action at law to reaffirm right already settled as matter of law. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

79. Where one sunk well on his land and pumped underground water for his use, thereby interfering with rights of another, latter is not limited to action for damages but may enjoin continuance of wrongful act. Verdugo Canon Water Co. v. Verdugo, 152 Cal. 655, 93 P 1021. Where lower riparian owner may restrain unlawful diversion though he fails to show actual diminution, where continuance of diversion may ripen into right of appropriation by prescription and defendant has made long term contracts to supply water. City of Paterson v. East Jersey Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 472.

80. Flooding of lands in reservoir basin constitutes permanent and continuing obstruction to free use by owner, and is wrong which equity will prevent by injunction. United States v. Rickey Land & Cattle Co., 164 F 496. Injunction against diversion of natural watercouse by landowner, effect of which will be to cause stream to overflow land of lower proprietor, although act is not completed and damage which will result therefrom has not been inflicted. Wood v. Craig [Mo. App.] 113 SW 676.

81. Attorney may be enjoined from paying excessive charges from amount recovered. After recovery for personal injuries client sought to enjoin payment of physician's bills. Falardeau v. Washburn, 199 Mass. 363, 85 NE 171. Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin illegal sale of land to prevent cloud on title but will not interfere where proceeding or instrument on which claim is asserted is void on its face, or where threatened proceeding will necessarily show on its face that it is void. Brizzolara v. Ft. Smith [Ark.] 112 SW 181. Evidence insufficient to warrant enjoining defendant from shooting firearms over plaintiff's premises. Mentzel v. Wall [Colo.] 96 P 965. Equity will enjoin interference with one's right to hunt on the navigable waters of a stream. Ainsworth v. Munoskong Hunting & Fishing Club [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 412, 116 NW 992. Injunction is proper remedy for continuing partner, where retiring partner interferes with his enjoyment and possession of mail addressed to old firm by claiming an interest therein and notifying the postal authorities to withhold it from delivery. Pedretti v. Pedritti, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 113. One causing and permitting sewage to flow into ditch forming boundary of another's land causing damage thereto is liable for damages and may be enjoined. Barnes v. Midland R. Terminal Co., 110 NYS 545. Injunction will lie to restrain proposed survey of lands and change of boundaries, where boundaries have been permanently established by former lawful survey from which no appeal was taken. Washington v. Richards [Kan.] 96 P 32. Vendor in possession of strip of land reserved under sale to vendee may enjoin removal of fence erected by him to mark boundary, and need not submit to trespass and bring ejectment. Cullen v. Ksiaszkiewicz [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 844, 118 NW 496. Gas company may enjoin interference with gas meters causing damage and leaks by company attaching apparatus to check flow of gas but cannot interfere with property owner's right to have appliances instituted. Laclede Gaslight Co. v. Gas Consumers' Ass'n, 127 Mo. App. 442, 106 SW 91. Employe of telephone company may be enjoined from making unjust discrimination as to use of telephone exchange, especially where employe acts perversely, without authority and to gratify his own spite Plummer v. Hattelsted [Iowa] 117 NW 680.

82. Use by baker of label which, though having distinguishing names at a casual glance, resemble that adopted by labor union according to law, may be enjoined. Myrap v. Friedman, 58 Misc. 323, 110 NYS 1106.

enjoin unfair competition.[86] Where one acquires by use the right to use a name, whether an individual, partnership or corporation, equity will protect its use by injunction.[87]

Copyrights, trade secrets, literary property, and the like.[See 10 C. L. 264]—Equity will protect trade secrets by injunction as against those trying to disclose or use them in violation of confidential relations [88] or obtained by fraud or bad faith,[89] especially where there is a written contract not to reveal them.[90] This doctrine is not confined to secret processes, but includes the use of names of customers.[91] Where one is not only making use of information gained through his employment with the complainant to win complainant's customers for a competitor but is also making fraudulent misrepresentations of fact, the complainant has no adequate remedy at law.[92] Any person, however, lawfully acquiring knowledge of such secrets, not patented, may use them, if the manner of obtaining such knowledge and the use thereof does not constitute a breach of good faith.[93] Equity will enjoin the infringement of a patent, irrespective of the fact that the patented device has never gone into commercial use,[94] and of its nonuser,[95] but a preliminary injunction should not be granted in a patent case without a showing that the patent has been adjudged valid by a court of competent jurisdiction or that its validity has been generally acquiesced in by the public or has been admitted by the defendant.[96] No notice of patent rights is necessary under the statute where the object is merely to secure an injunction to restrain the defendant from

87. For many years Carthusian monks manufactured a liqueur called Chartreuse, which trade name was registered in this country as a trade mark. The French government expelled the monks and placed a receiver over their property who, though not knowing the secret formula, manufactured a liqueur which he called Chartreuse and sent out in the same shaped bottles. The monks meanwhile continued the manufacture of their Chartreuse in Spain, but put it up in different shaped bottles. Held that the action of the French government did not affect the trade mark rights of the Carthusian monks in the United States, that such rights were not dependent on the place or country in which their business was conducted, that the receiver became a competitor, and that they were entitled to an injunction restraining the sale of his products in this country in competition with their own under their trade mark and dress and as the original and genuine Chartreuse. Baglin v. Cusenier Co., 156 F 1016. An advertisement by defendant stated that a certain person of a recognized standing as a salesman and with a large acquaintance in the trade in which plaintiff and defendant were engaged, who was formerly in the employ of the plaintiff generally known as "Georges" and "Fishers," announced that he could be found at Balsam's Misfit Parlors. There was nothing misleading in the advertisement. Held an injunction pendente lite restraining defendant from using the names "Georges" or "Fishers" at present used by plaintiff in conducting its business, would not be restrained. Sultzbach Clothing Co. v. Balsam, 56 Misc. 324, 107 NYS 622. An interlocutory order granting a preliminary injunction against the unlawful imitation of a trade name and unfair competition affirmed, but, especially as parties do not agree as to completeness of record, full reservation made for final hearing. future infringement.[97] State courts have no jurisdiction to enjoin infringements of patents.[98] Where a decision in favor of the defendant gives him the right to make and sell the article covered by the patent, a subsequent injunction by the complainant against the defendant's customers is a violation of the first injunction,[99] but this rule does not preclude an injunction in one circuit against the infringement of a patent declared invalid in another circuit, the parties defendant being different,[1] especially where the rights of the defendant in such other circuit are protected by a special provision in the restraining order.[2] A bill to restrain the alleged violation of a license contract under a patent states no ground for relief under the patent laws, and a federal court is without jurisdiction to grant relief thereon.[3] An injunction will not issue against improper use of copyrighted matter where the complainant's injury is comparatively insignificant and he has a remedy at law.[4]

Waste.[See 10 C. L. 264]—Equity will enjoin threatened waste by a tenant for years,[5] and one in possession under claim of title is entitled to an injunction pending adjudication of his title to prevent waste and injury by the defendant.[6] Equity will not grant an injunction to restrain waste at the suit of one tenant in common, coparcener or joint tenant against another except in special circumstances, as where the waste is destructive to the estate or where the respondent is sworn to be insolvent.[7]

Incorporeal property.[See 8 C. L. 296]—An injunction may issue to protect incorporeal property right.[8]

Easements and rights of way.[See 10 C. L. 264]—Equity will restrain interference with the enjoyment of an easement where the right is clear and certain and an injurious interference is threatened, even though the easement has not been established at law.[9] In determining what will be enjoined as an obstruction, the questions are what use can the complainant reasonably be expected to have occasion to make of it, and what right has he to such use?[10] Grade crossings, whether private or public,

20. NOTE. Scope of injunction restraining operation of furnace: Complainants secured an injunction perpetually restraining defendants from so operating their furnaces as to cause injuries, viz., emitting ore dust which destroyed trees and shrubberies, drove tenants from their houses, and practically confiscated their whole property. Defendants continued to operate their furnaces, trying all possible means to prevent the injuries complained of. The dust still escaped to a certain extent. Complainants now petition that the directors and officers of the defendant corporation be adjudged in contempt of court. Held, that the petition be refused. Sullivan v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. [Pa.] 70 A 775. Mestrezat, J., in dissenting, said: "The defendants are still causing their furnaces to be operated so as * * * to be emitted from them clouds of ore dust, * * * causing substantially the same kind of injury, though not as great in extent." The court refused to grant the petition because the acts complained of were not clearly within the inhibition of the injunction, saying no injunction would have issued had there been no other injuries than the ones objected to in the petition. The following cases accord in principle: Celluloid Co. v. Collar & Cuff Co., 24 F 585; Woodruff v. Gravel Co., 45 F 129; Verplank v. Hall, 21 Mich. 470; Porous Plaster Co. v. Seabury, 48 Hun, 620, 1 NYS 134. The majority opinion is most practical. The acts enjoined were such as brought exceptional injuries to complainants. These had ceased. The damage objected to in the petition was such as must come to all who choose to live in a manufacturing centre.—From 7 Mich. L. R. 266.

Nuisances.[See 10 C. L. 205]—In a proper case an injunction will issue against the maintenance of a nuisance.[20] Equity will abate a public nuisance injurious to public safety and good morals, and may perpetually enjoin the owners of property from maintaining and conducting it in the future.[21] The rule that property rights must be involved does not apply to proceedings to enjoin a public nuisance as such,[22] but a private person cannot restrain a public nuisance unless he sustains damages different in kind from those sustained by the public generally.[23] The thing complained of need not be a nuisance per se[24] or exist in praesenti,[25] nor is it essential that the complainant's rights shall have been established at law,[26] though all doubt as to the existence of the nuisance may be settled by a finding of a court of law.[27] Where the fact of the existence of a nuisance has not been established at law, an injunction will not lie unless the allegations of the bill are proved by clear and satisfactory evidence.[28] of real property who wrongfully causes noxious vapors to rise on the land of another is liable therefor the same as if such vapors had been wrongfully caused to rise from his own land. Garland v. Aurin, 103 Tenn. 555, 53 SW 940, 76 Am. St. Rep. 699, 48 L. R. A. 862.—From 123 Am. St. Rep. 575.

Though matter is not nuisance per se, where it is clearly shown to be a nuisance in fact not merely greater in degree than that of general public, but special in character, it may be enjoined at the suit of individual. Caskey v. Edwards, 128 Mo. App. 237, 107 SW 37.

No special damage: Where railway tracks are laid across a street and at a grade which raises grade of street at that point, inconvenience to dealer in coal and sand located in same square, who is obliged to haul heavy loads over obstructions thus created, is of the same kind as though different in degree from, that suffered by general public. Special damage: Where an unlawful act is of special and particular irreparable hurt to an individual, he may enjoin it, as where a livery stable is erected within fifty feet of a private house. Caskey v. Edwards, 128 Mo. App. 237, 107 SW 37. Evidence insufficient to warrant enjoining use of a stable in city. Bonaparte v. Denmead [Md.] 69 A 697. Injunction refused where complainant showed no special damage in excess of that sustained by public at large from stable, and no interference with property rights. Oehler v. Levy, 139 Ill. App. 294. Facts alleged as to erection of livery stable held sufficient to show special injury, and fact that structure would not be nuisance per se was immaterial. Mason v. Deitering [Mo. App.] 111 SW 862. Where hotelkeeper is injured by vibrations and noises of switching engines in unlawful use of city street as yard. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. De Groff [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 1006. Where railway tracks are laid across street and at grade in such manner as to cause drains to fill up and turn surface water into middle of street whence gullies have formed in front of plaintiff's property materially interfering with access thereto, continuing nuisance is created for which there is no adequate remedy at law and as to which injunction will lie. Hall v. P. C. C. & St. L. R. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 97.

24. Mason v. Deitering [Mo. App.] 111 SW 862. Under code abolishing distinction between law and equity actions, a complaint alleging that defendant is maintaining bowling alley causing much noise and impairing plaintiff's enjoyment of his premises is sufficient, although such act did not constitute a nuisance per se, because further facts may be shown entitling restraint of alley's operation at unreasonable hours, etc. Pape v. Pratt Institute, 111 NYS 354.

25. If there is reasonable ground to apprehend the erection of a nuisance, and defendant threatens it and has the power to commit it, injunction will issue. Caskey v. Edwards, 128 Mo. App. 237, 107 SW 37. Facts alleged in regard to erection of a livery stable were sufficient, after judgment to show that a nuisance would reasonably result. Mason v. Deitering [Mo. App.] 111 SW 862.

28. Bill to restrain use of stream to carry off sewage. Crane v. Roselle [Ill.] 86 NE 181.

As in other cases, it must appear that there is no adequate remedy at law [29] and that the injury is or will be irreparable.[30] In an action to enjoin a nuisance, it is no defense that the nuisance is located in the most convenient place for the purposes of the nuisance,[31] not is it a defense that the business is conducted in reasonable manner, employing all the latest devices.[32] Both lessee and lessor may be enjoined where the latter knowingly and willfully permits a nuisance to be conducted on his premises by the former.[33] The statute of Utah authorizing a court in its discretion to refuse an injunction in a suit to abate a nuisance, upon defendant's giving a bond to pay all damages, applies only to preliminary injunctions, and does not confer the power to perpetuate a nuisance for all time, amounting to the taking of private property merely upon the giving of a bond.[34]

Trespass. See 10 C. L. 266—A single trespass, temporary in its nature, will not usually be enjoined,[35] but if continuous in its nature, if repeated acts of trespass are done or threatened, the entire wrong will be enjoined [36] if it is accompanied by such peculiar circumstances as will make the injury irreparable [37] or will avoid a multiplicity of suits, despite the fact that no irreparable damage is shown.[38] If defendant is not pecuniarily responsible, an injunction should be granted.[39] No action will lie where there is an adequate remedy at law,[40] and so where a bill alleges a continuous trespass and asks damages therefor and for an injunction, the remedies are inconsistent, for if the plaintiff is willing to accept damages for the future injury he cannot ask to have it enjoined.[41] Damages for trespass may be allowed, however, as an incident to injunctive relief.[42] As a general rule a verdict for damages for trespass given on the law side of the court, though conclusive on the right of possession, is not conclusive of the right to relief by injunction.[43] The complainant must show that he has title,[44] or possession and entire right to possession as against the defendant,[45] or a property interest.[46]

Strikers who assail nonunion men with threats, ridicule, or insult and follow them to and from work with vile language and epithets in order to compel them to quit work or refrain from offering to work are guilty of unlawful conduct. Goldfield Consol. Mines Co. v. Goldfield Miners' Union No. 220, 159 F 500. Bill to enjoin a striking union which charged a combination, the intent and the acts of the defendants, and averred that they proposed to continue the same conduct in the furtherance of their scheme, is not defective as not sufficiently specific. Barnes & Co. v. Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, 232 Ill. 424, 83 NE 940. Complaint for strike injunction against unions alleging that defendants had conspired by abuse, intimidations, threats, and violence to coerce plaintiff's employes and to induce them to leave and force plaintiff to accede to union's demands; that, with intent to injure and destroy plaintiff's business and property, said unions were committing and continued to commit acts of intimidation, abuse, and violence against plaintiff and its employes, followed by a recital of the alleged acts, etc., states a cause of action for threatened injury to person and property. Russell v. Stampers' & Gold Leaf Local Union No. 22, 57 Misc. 96, 107 NYS 303. Evidence sufficient to show a conspiracy to subject complainant to unlawful picketing and interference with its business and property by intimidating its workmen, which the union either originated or countenanced, entitling complainant to relief by injunction against the union and its members. on the other.[48] A strike will not be enjoined, however, when no such unlawful means are employed,[49] and unlawful interference or threatened interference with the complainant's property rights must be shown in order to authorize the writ.[50] Equity will not enjoin strikers from attempting to persuade others by proper argument as by picketing from taking their places,[51] so long as they do not resort to intimidation,[52] or obstruct the public thoroughfares,[53] but some courts hold that the act of picketing is in itself an annoyance and embarrassment of an employer's business, and is unlawful and will be enjoined.[54] As to where the line of demarcation between intimidation and inoffensive persuasion lies, this is a question depending upon the circumstances of each case.[55] If there is a malevolent intent to produce an illegal result and it is produced, it makes no difference whether it is accomplished by mere persuasion or physical violence.[56] A labor union is a legal entity endowed with the same right as an individual to threaten to do that which it may lawfully do,[57] and mere apprehension of injury from striking members of a union is insufficient to justify an injunction.[58] Peaceful quitting of work, singly, collectively, or as a union, and the use of lawful means to make the strike effective, is legal and will not be enjoined.[59] Courts

In a suit to restrain labor unions and their members, evidence held insufficient to warrant a finding that acts of violence already committed were for the benefit of the union or that they were the result of a conspiracy to injure plaintiff or his business. Russell v. Stampers' & Gold Leaf Local Union No. 22, 57 Misc. 96, 107 NYS 303. Though ratification by a trade union of acts of violence committed by its members during a strike may be proved by circumstantial evidence, where a conspiracy is alleged the circumstances must amount to direct proof. 48. Where purpose and effect of putting employer on "unfair list" is to establish boycott, members of a union will be restrained from so doing. Wilson v. Hey, 232 Ill. 389, 83 NE 928. During strike of local employes of complainant, the members of certain labor organizations by concerted action posted circulars for the expressed purpose of inducing patrons of complainant to withdraw patronage and preventing persons entering its employ unless it would accede to defendant's demands. Defendants, also, exhorted people not to patronize complainant and stated that the members had voted to give patronage only to certain firms because others had refused to stop using complainant's telephones. Held, such acts established an unlawful conspiracy to destroy business, and complainant was entitled to an injunction to restrain defendants prosecuting the object of the conspiracy by such methods. Rocky Mountain Bell Tel. Co. v. Montana Federation of Labor, 156 F 809.

49. The unlawful interference or threatensd interference with complainant's property rights must be shown. Will not enjoin strike where no unlawful measures are used. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Switchmen's Union of North America, 158 F 541. Where the by-laws of a union provided for a two-thirds' vote and the consent of the president of the union in order to justify a strike, and a poll was taken resulting in favor of a strike, the consent of the president did not constitute such an incitement or inducement to strike as would justify the continuance of a strike injunction, there being no proof of an intention on the part of defendants to conspire to inflict a wrong on complainant nor to induce others to strike. 52. When strikers patrol streets and approaches of the premises where a strike is in progress, and their number is so great or their conduct is such as to intimidate and coerce employes into quitting or others from seeking employment, they are guilty of unlawful acts and will be enjoined. Jones v. E. Van Winkle Gin & Mach. Works [Ga.] 62 SE 236. Massing of unnecessary members of pickets at a point which must be passed by nonunion men, whom the strikers desire to influence, is an act of intimidation in itself and will be enjoined. will not enjoin employes from seeking, taking, or following the advice of officers of their union with reference to the advisability of a strike.[60] Unlawful acts of violence committed by individual members of a trade union during a strike are not ipso facto binding on the union in the absence of proof that the union as such promoted or ratified the acts,[61] and an injunction pendente lite will only be granted against such members of the union as can be identified as having committed acts of violence or intimidation.[62] A labor organization may legally employ a boycott to further the objects of its existence, though pecuniary loss results to the boycotted, unless illegal means are used.[63] Equity will enjoin illegal combination to compel employer to agree that grievances between individual members of a union and his employer, which are not common to the members of the union as a class, shall be decided by the employes and that decision enforced by a strike, and defendants will be enjoined doing any acts whatever, whether peaceful or otherwise, in furtherance thereof, including payment of strike benefits and putting plaintiffs on an unfair list.[64]

Libel. See 10 C. L. 269—In some instances libel or slander may be enjoined.[65]

(§ 2) J. Crimes. See 10 C. L. 269—Equity has no power to enjoin the commission of threatened crimes as such,[66] but will enjoin any act, whether a crime or not, tending to destroy or impair property rights.[67] If, therefore, equity has jurisdiction on other grounds, relief will not be withheld on the ground that the threatened act would be a crime.[68] In some cases injunctions are authorized by statute.[69]

§ 3. Suits or actions for injunction. See 10 C. L. 270—A suit for an injunction must be timely.[70] A statute requiring applications for a new trial to be filed in the same cause and entitled in the original action do not apply to a suit in equity to enjoin enforcement of a decree as unenforcible against the plaintiff.[71]

68. Court of equity is not ousted of its jurisdiction and exercise of its peculiar functions of preventing irreparable damage merely because in exercising such functions it may also prevent commission of crime. Jones v. E. Van Winkle Gin & Mach. Works [Ga.] 62 SE 236. Fact that, in action for injunction, one of grounds of complaint is that defendants, acting under provisions of unconstitutional statute, are about to publish libel, does not deprive court of equity of jurisdiction in that behalf. Jurisdiction. See 10 C. L. 270—Jurisdiction as dependent upon the existence of grounds for equitable relief and upon the subject-matter is treated in other sections.[72] Jurisdiction may be dependent on the amount in controversy, as is the case in federal courts.[73] Federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of suits to enjoin matters arising under the laws of the United States.[74] Federal courts have jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of void or unconstitutional state statutes.[75] Where the jurisdiction of the court has attached, it will usually be retained, regardless of subsequent proceedings in other courts.[76] So, also, where the court has acquired jurisdiction on other grounds, it may issue injunctions if necessary, to do complete justice.[77] The supreme court of Oklahoma is essentially a court of appeals and is without original jurisdiction to issue writs of injunction in cases where the relief prayed for is purely injunctional.[78] A bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the sale of property under a judgment rendered in a state court enforcing mortgage liens of a date prior to four months preceding the filing of petition or adjudication of the mortgagor a bankrupt.[79] Jurisdiction is sometimes conferred upon one court to issue injunctions in suits pending in another court, where the judge of the latter court is absent,[80] but such jurisdiction should not be invoked, except where the delay in reaching the district judge would work irreparable injury.[81] By statute, in some states, writs of in-

73. In a suit to restrain a conspiracy to interfere with complainant's business, the amount in dispute for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of the federal court is the value of complainant's right to conduct his business, and an allegation of damage in the sum of $2,000 is sufficient to confer jurisdiction. Rocky Mountain Bell Tel. Co. v. Montana Federation of Labor, 156 F 809. When an injunction is asked against the erection and maintenance of a nuisance, it is not important to discuss what kind of damage would result if the nuisance were operated, but rather what the cost of the alleged nuisance will be. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. Godfrey [C. C. A.] 158 F 225. Facts held to show that a bill against a tax collector to enjoin collection of taxes amounting to $1,724, and alleging that a sale for such taxes cast a cloud upon the land, was not a bill to remove cloud on title, but to enjoin the taxes, the amount of which, and not the value of the land, constituting the amount in controversy; hence the suit was without the jurisdiction of the federal court. Turner v. Jackson Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 159 F 923.

74. Suit in equity to enjoin enforcement of freight rates, until passed upon by Interstate Commerce Commission, is one arising under laws of United States, for enforcement of which federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction. Kalispell Lumber Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 157 F 845.

75. See § 2 D, infra.

76. When an indictment or criminal proceeding is brought to enforce an alleged unconstitutional statute, which is the subject-matter of inquiry in a suit already pending in a federal court, the latter court, having first obtained jurisdiction over the subject-matter, has the right, in both civil and criminal cases, to hold and maintain such jurisdiction to the exclusion of all other courts until its duty is fully performed. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed. 714. Where federal court, in foreclosure, ordered receivers of a railroad to institute condemnation proceedings in a state court and pending such condemnation a decree of foreclosure was entered, it was held that under the decree the federal court retained jurisdiction over the property and suit to such an extent as to entitle it to entertain a supplemental bill by the purchaser to enjoin foreclosure until completion of condemnation proceedings. Taylor v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 452.

77. Where a court of equity properly acquires jurisdiction of a cause to enforce specific performance of a contract, the court will proceed to administer complete justice by adjudicating all matters properly presented and involved in the case. Injunctions, both mandatory and restraining may be granted and damages awarded, upon proper allegations and proofs, when necessary to do complete justice. Taylor v. Florida East Coast R. Co. [Fla.] 45 S 574.

78. State v. Kenner [Okl.] 97 P 258.

79. Sample v. Beasley [C. C. A.] 158 F 607. Where foreclosure proceedings were instituted prior to the bankruptcy of the mortgagor on a mortgage given more than four months before and a receiver was appointed and in possession at the time of bankruptcy, a sale under the decree of foreclosure cannot be stayed by the bankruptcy court. In re McKane, 158 F 647.

80. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 273, providing that injunction may be granted at the commencement of the action or before judgment by the court or by any circuit judge, etc., the county judge in the absence of the circuit judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine the question whether a temporary injunction should be granted. Renshaw v. Cook, 33 Ky. L. R. 860, 895, 111 SW 377.

81. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 98 P 16.

junctions to stay proceedings in a suit or execution on a judgment shall be returned to and tried in the court where such suit is pending or such execution issued.[82] Courts of equity cannot by injunction usurp or interfere with the proper exercise of courts of law.[83] Nor has one court of chancery jurisdiction to grant an injunction affecting the subject-matter of another pending a suspensive appeal in such suit.[84] Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin the performance of acts beyond its jurisdiction in cases where the parties reside within the jurisdiction,[85] and the entry of a general appearance by a nonresident confers jurisdiction to grant an injunction, though the subject-matter is in another state,[86] but the injunction may, in such case, be refused because not enforcible.[87]

Parties.[See 10 C. L. 270]—The right of particular parties to sue and the liability of particular parties to suit are treated more particularly in another section.[88] Necessary parties are all who have an interest in the subject and object of the suit and all persons against whom relief must be obtained in order to accomplish the object of the suit.[89] Where the court has acquired jurisdiction of receivership proceedings, it may, in order to render such jurisdiction effective, issue an injunction against any of the parties.[90] Where an injunction bond provides that loss or injury sustained by defendants shall be "ascertained as the court directs," the surety becomes a quasi party to the proceeding, and the court may enter a summary decree and award execution against it in the original suit.[91] Suits involving only public rights cannot usually be maintained by private individuals,[92] but should be instituted by the duly authorized public officers

82. Injunction issued by district court of O county to restrain sale of lands by order of court in L county should have been returned in L county. Broocks v. Lee [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 756. Suit to enjoin enforcement of a fine imposed by a county judge in a prosecution for obstructing a highway cannot be maintained in a circuit court, under Civ. Code, § 285, providing for bringing suit to enjoin in court in which judgment was obtained. Evans v. Cook, 33 Ky. L. R. 788, 111 SW 326.

83. Supreme court having taken jurisdiction of matter in ejectment, the court of chancery cannot seize jurisdiction or attempt to deprive the supreme court of it or interfere in any way with the ordinary process of common-law courts. City of Hoboken v. Hoboken & M. R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 926.

84. Where A and B were contestants for the nomination for a judgeship and A was declared the nominee by the party committee and B sought relief in the district court which found in his favor and A and the committee obtained a suspensive appeal to the supreme court, whereupon B instituted an independent suit in a different parish praying an injunction restraining the secretary of state from placing A's name on the ballot, neither A nor the committee being made party and injunction issued and the secretary of state excepted to the jurisdiction of the court, the district judge, being of opinion that his court was without jurisdiction, properly sustained the exception and, further, the court was without jurisdiction to grant the injunction pending suspensive appeal. 89. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Cahal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 98 P 16. Rule that a defect of parties is waived by the defendant by joining issue and going to trial does not apply where the court cannot proceed to judgment without the presence of others who have not been made parties. Id. On bill to enjoin administrator from prosecuting ejectment covering land deeded to his intestate on the ground that deed was intended as mortgage and to divest title out of intestate's estate, his heirs were necessary parties. Winn v. Fitzwater, 151 Ala. 171, 44 S 97. In suit to enjoin cutting of timber, one who is in no way interested in subject-matter and whose only connection with matter was because he had procured defendant's contracts is not a necessary party. Roots v. Boring Junction Lumber Co. [Or.] 94 P 182. Where state officer by virtue of his office has some connection with enforcement of an act, he is necessary party defendant in a suit to enjoin enforcement of the act. Attorney general. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 Law. Ed 714.

90. Where creditor filed petition for intervention in receivership proceedings and asked to have it taken as her return to rule to show cause why receiver should not be appointed, she could not afterward maintain that she was not a party and that court had no jurisdiction to enjoin her from proceeding to collect judgment otherwise than in receivership proceedings. Whilden v. Chapman [S. C.] 61 SE 249.

or authorities.[93] In a suit to restrain the exercise of public functions, a public officer is not a necessary party defendant merely because he bears an official relation to the defendant,[94] though he may be a proper party by reason of his statutory relation to the subject-matter of the suit.[95] A private individual having no interest in such a suit cannot intervene therein.[96] A bill to enjoin enforcement of a statute must be brought against one clothed with the duty of enforcing it, and not against an officer whose duty is merely to determine whether or not the statute applies to the complainant.[97] An unincorporated trades union may not be made defendant in a suit to restrain acts in furtherance of a strike,[98] but members of such an association may be sued as representatives of the total membership.[99] Where a suit is brought by a corporation to enforce or protect a private right by injunction, a claim that the corporation is illegal or is a monopoly cannot be made collaterally as a defense.[1]

Pleading and evidence. See 10 C. L. 271—Where the practice is to transfer to the proper docket cases improperly docketed, failure to style a petition for an injunction as a petition in equity is not ground for dismissal.[2] In a suit for injunction, the pleadings must allege clearly and definitely the facts on which complainant relies for relief,[3] and must show an interest in the subject of the

94. Where the relation of the attorney general to a railroad commission is no more than that of his general official relation, he is not a necessary nor proper party to a suit to enjoin the enforcement of an order made by the commission. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLendon, 157 F 961.

95. Under statute appropriating money to be used by attorney general in prosecution or defense of suits wherein validity of any act of general assembly relating to railroads is attached, both attorney general and members of state board of railroad commissioners are proper parties defendant to a suit to enjoin the enforcement of any such statute. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hadley, 161 F 419.

96. Suit to restrain revocation of license. Hapgood v. Bogart, 124 App. Div. 875, 109 NYS 537.

97. Where a bill was filed against the secretary of state of California as an officer and individually, stating that it was a foreign railroad corporation, but not doing business within the state within the meaning of the corporation license tax statute, and that the secretary had reported the complainant as delinquent thereunder and claimed that it was subject to such tax and threatened to enforce the statute against it, and praying an injunction against the defendant and a construction of the statute as unconstitutional, such bill did not state a cause of action for any relief in equity or within the jurisdiction of the court, since defendant was charged with no duty in enforcing the law and had already performed all acts required of him thereunder, except filing lists with county clerks which did not affect complainant's liability or status. 3. Injunction pendente lite cannot be granted unless complaint states facts sufficient to constitute cause of action. Hart v. Clarke & Co., 111 NYS 886. In order to enjoin enforcement of judgment as void, it is necessary that averments of petition should affirmatively state facts which show that judgment was void. Zimmerman v. Trude [Neb.] 114 NW 641. Under statute providing for injunction to restrain use of premises for gaming, a complaint alleging conviction for gaming on premises is not defective for failing to show nature of the game, the allegations as to conviction being merely in the nature of evidence. Cain v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 732, 106 SW 770. Sufficiency of a complaint considered in an action to protect water rights. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 98 P 16. A complaint alleging that defendant ran water past plaintiff's headgates for use in other districts does not state a cause of action, for this might properly be done to supply senior priorities, and the presumption is that the defendant was doing his duty. Id. Pleadings insufficient to sustain an injunction against defendants restraining interference with the plaintiff's conduct of school. Eppo v. Thomas [Ga.] 61 SE 1117. No error in dismissing bill to enjoin sale of real estate by administratrix upon general suit, a right to the thing demanded, and a proper status to institute suit concerning it.[4] If no facts are alleged upon which injunctional or other equitable relief should be granted, the bill of complaint should be dismissed,[5] but where defect may easily be cured by amendment, it is not available on a motion to dismiss.[6] The allegations will not be aided by presumption.[7] Averments of mere opinions or conclusions are too general and indefinite to afford a basis for relief by injunction,[8] and thus a mere allegation that injury will be irreparable is insufficient.[9]

It is unnecessary for plaintiff, in an action to enjoin interference with growing timber, to allege how he acquired title or to attach an abstract of title thereto. Williams v. Hicks, 129 Ga. 785, 59 SE 897. Bill to enjoin interference with erection of poles held insufficient in not showing right to use land to erect and maintain poles. Consolidated Gas, Elec. L. & P. Co. v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 107 Md. 671, 69 A 518. Where creditor commences an action under the statute to restrain sheriff from sale of personal property covered by chattel mortgage, but fails to connect himself in any way with any interest in or demand upon property about to be sold, complaint does not state a good cause of action. Neustadter Bros. v. Doust, 13 Idaho, 617, 92 P 978. Petition to enjoin refusal of city to supply water held bad for failing to show plaintiff an inhabitant of city or that he required water for use within its limits. City of Paris v. Sturgeon [Tex. Facts alleged in petition by wife, in which husband joined, to enjoin sale of realty on execution against husband on ground that it was her separate property, held sufficient. Texas Brew. Co. v. Bisso [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 270. Bill to restrain interference with plaintiff and a cross complaint, both alleging possession of office by plaintiff and defendant respectively, states cause for equitable relief. Lucas v. Futrall, 84 Ark. 540, 106 SW 667. Petition to enjoin interference by city with erection of building held good, as allegations did not show that it was sought to enjoin any ordinance making act criminal, but that all acts were done with city's permission and no ordinance applied. 7. Bill to enjoin audit and allowance of claims against municipality on ground that no appropriation had been made therefor held insufficient in that it did not show that claims were not such as might, under the statute, be allowed without prior appropriation. Bishop v. Huff [Neb.] 116 NW 665. Petition held not to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action to restrain refunding school tax, etc., in that it did not show whether parties demanding return of taxes were proceeding under the first provision of Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 10,561, in which case the petitioner might appear, and hence could not have injunction, or whether such taxpayers were proceeding under second provision of such section, in which case no appeal would lie. School Dist. No. 25 v. De Long [Neb.] 114 NW 934. In action to enjoin making of improvements where complaint did not allege that statutory notice was not given, it must be presumed against collateral attack that proper notice was given. Martindale v. Rochester [Ind.] 86 NE 321.

8. In original action in supreme court brought to restrain issue of municipal bonds, general allegation of unconstitutionality and illegality is defective in failing to specify in what particular the issue is not authorized. Jordan v. Greenville, 79 S. C. 436, 60 SE 973. Conclusion of law stating that defendant's acts are unlawful, etc., unsupported by facts where the illegality of official action relied on is of no avail. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. [Colo.] 93 P 16. Petition in suit to enjoin execution of justice's judgment based on improper overruling of plea of privilege to be sued in another county should allege existence of valid defense and nature thereof, and mere allegation that answer, a general denial, showed good defense, was insufficient. Coca Cola v. Allison [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 308. Petition to enjoin execution of justice's judgment based on erroneous overruling of plea of privilege to be sued in another county should set out evidence. A mere allegation of proof is insufficient. Id. Where bill sought to restrain work of elevating railway tracks under ordinance which provided that railway company should dedicate land to city for street, on

A bill to enjoin a threatened act must show with reasonable certainty that such act will be committed,[10] but it need not appear that the anticipated result will necessarily follow.[11] The code rule of liberal construction of pleadings does not apply in cases of applications for extraordinary writs, such as injunctions.[12] On the contrary, the rule that the pleadings will be taken most strongly against the pleader applies particularly in injunction suits.[13] It has been held that where a complaint was not clear and distinct in its averments, from which the court might determine whether the threatened injury was likely to be irreparable, or that a remedy at law was available, it was good as against a general demurrer.[14] Although a complaint would be insufficient in an action to quiet title, yet as a complaint for an injunction it may be sufficient,[15] and where a statutory cause of action is defectively framed, but enough is alleged to constitute a cause of action to restrain a trespass or waste, the allegations under the statute will be treated as surplusage and the cause retained.[16] Conclusions of fact are not admitted by demurrer.[17] A bill is not necessarily multifarious because uniting a demand for relief and a demand for damages.[18] If the affidavit to a bill is defective, it should be pointed out at the proper time, and such defects cannot be relied on to cure defective verification of the answer.[19] No particular form of verification to a petition is necessary,[20] but positive affirmation of facts as to which the affiant has no means of knowing the truth is insufficient.[21] The absence of an offer ground that no dedication had been made, and there was nothing in bill to show that parties to ordinance had not by waiver or other arrangement satisfactorily adjusted matter, equity could not restrain proceedings under ordinance, though there had been no waiver or other arrangement made by city. People v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., 232 Ill. 292, 83 NE 839. Allegation that corporate election is void, mere conclusion and insufficient. West End Athletic Ass'n v. Geiger, 140 Ill. App. 378.

9. Schock v. Garrison [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 147; H. W. Metcalf Co. v. Martin [Fla.] 45 S 463. Schock v. Garrison [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 147. Bill to restrain interference with erection of poles by electric company, which merely shows beginning of new line and interference by defendant with erection thereof, and alleging generally that irreparable injury will result, does not show sufficiently that the injury is or is likely to be irreparable. 13. The rule that statements are to be taken most strongly against the party making them is reinforced in injunction suits by the further requirement that the material allegations entitling him to relief shall be sufficiently certain to negative every reasonable inference from which it might be deduced that he might not, under other supposable facts connected with the subject, be entitled to relief. City of Paris v. Sturgeon [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 459.

16. Cutting timber. Roots v. Boring Junction Lumber Co. [Or.] 92 P 811.

17. Allegations in a bill to restrain orders of a railroad commission as to rates before the same have gone into effect, that the new rate is unreasonable and if enforced will result in a loss of revenue, are not admitted by a demurrer. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McLendon, 157 F 961.

18. Bill in action to enjoin continuance of nuisance, to creation of which separate acts of several defendants had contributed, is not demurrable as multifarious for uniting demand for equitable relief and demand for damages. Burghen v. Erie R. Co., 123 App. Div. 204, 108 NYS 311. Where several defendants join in action to enjoin nuisance and recover damages suffered, there is a misjoinder of causes of action precluding recovery. Id.

to do equity, in an action to restrain the collection of a judgment, is waived by failure to demur.[22] As in other equity suits, the answer must be responsive.[23] The answer in a suit against county commissioners may be verified by one of such commissioners.[24] The same matter may be pleaded in defense and as a counterclaim.[25] Where parties joined are merely formal, the court can proceed to hear the application for an injunction without their answers being filed.[26] Overruling a demurrer to an answer is harmless when the plaintiff will have an opportunity to urge his objection on the trial on the merits.[27]

In federal courts it is not an objection to affidavits filed with the bill and motion for a preliminary injunction in support thereof that they were previously executed and not entitled in the cause, where it is reasonably apparent that they were made for the purpose of being used in a suit between the parties.[28] Objections to affidavits filed with a motion for a preliminary injunction in a federal court which go to a matter of form only must be made in advance of hearing where there is ample time.[29] An affidavit on information and belief as to immaterial facts is sufficient.[30] Affidavits must usually be served on the opposite party if so required by the court,[31] and where affidavits are refused because the opposite party was not notified as required by the court, the persons making the affidavits cannot testify orally to matter contained therein,[32] nor is it error to refuse another continuance that notice may be given.[33] Cross-examination of the affiant is sometimes allowed.[34] Proof may be rendered unnecessary by the admissions of the answer.[35] Otherwise the complainant must prove his case [36] substantially as laid,[37] the burden of proof being upon the plaintiff to make

27. Where an answer to a bill to enjoin condemnation proceedings does not set up a defense, but merely states defendant's view of the facts, an order overruling plaintiff's demurrer to answer for want of facts is no ground for reversal, for plaintiff would be afforded an opportunity of having question whether condemnation was appropriate remedy determined on trial on merits on plaintiff attempting to show equitable grounds. City of Columbia v. Melton [S. C.] 62 SE 245.

31. Where at the time set for the interlocutory hearing of a petition for injunction the case was continued, and the judge notified the parties that all affidavits intended for use as evidence must be served on the opposite party 24 hours before the hearing, it was no error to refuse to allow affidavits to be introduced which had not been thus served. Hester v. Exley, 130 Ga. 460, 60 SE 1053.

35. In an action to enjoin cutting of timber where the answer admits many allegations of the bill as to title, etc., it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the things admitted, and where the averment of new matter as to defendant's rights is not sufficiently established, the burden of proof is not cast on the plaintiff, and he is entitled to a decree. Griffith v. Henderson [Fla.] 45 S 1003.

36. Evidence insufficient to sustain injunction against interference with plaintiff's conduct of school. Epps v. Thomas [Ga.] 61 SE 1117. In an action for an accounting and to restrain a partner from disposing of partnership property, evidence held sufficient to warrant injunction restraining defendant from transferring certain property pending an accounting. Causten v. Barnette [Wash.] 96 P 225.

37. Where, in a suit on a complaint to restrain cutting of timber on the theory of trespass, it appears that there was no unlawful trespass but a lawful entry and commission of waste, a motion to dismiss was properly denied, since the relief sought was substantially the same. Roots v. Boring out his case,[38] and it being the defendant's right to insist on proof of every material allegation controverted by the answer;[39] but the defendant has the burden of proving an affirmative defense.[40] A complainant need not resort first to a court of law to establish his title to land and damage where defendant has not raised the question in his answer and the parties have argued and submitted such questions of legal right to the court.[41]

Trial. See 10 C. L. 273—The court cannot, on motion before trial, make an order granting a permanent injunction, the relief demanded by complainant.[42] It is error to submit a case to a jury on the assumption that if any of the complainants are entitled to a decree all are.[43] As in the case of suits in equity generally,[44] when a case is set down for hearing on bill and answer, all the facts well pleaded in the answer are taken for true whether responsive to the bill or not,[45] but where it is set down for hearing on bill, answer and replication, only those averments of the answer which are reponsive are taken as true,[46] and all allegations in avoidance or justification, denied by the replication, are taken as untrue.[47] Where the only issue is as to which party is liable for costs, the court may suspend the trial of the main case and in the exercise of sound discretion proceeed to tax the costs.[48] A finding by a referee that certain acts committed were in the interest and for the benefit of defendant labor unions is a conclusion of law rather than a finding of fact.[49] The general principles of appeals are treated elsewhere.[50]

Appeals. See 10 C. L. 273—The right to appeal and enjoy the fruits of a judgment or decree are wholly inconsistent, and an election to take one course is a renunciation of the other.[51] An appeal must, of course, be timely.[52] The dismissal of a bill without

40. Where defendant leased a room in his hotel to plaintiff and sought thereafter to remove a post projecting up through the floor which supported certain noisy and jarring machinery, the burden was on plaintiff to show that it was operating the machinery by authority of defendant. Spokane Stamp Works v. Ridpath, 48 Wash. 370, 93 P 533. Where a senior seeks to enjoin a junior appropriator of water from diverting the same, and the junior seeks to avoid the same upon the ground that if the use which he threatens to make is restrained the owner of the senior right will derive no benefit, such defense should be clearly established. Alamosa Creek Canal Co. v. Nelson, 42 Colo. 140, 93 P 1112. Where the constitution provides for corporate authority to permit construction of street railways, it is not incumbent on the plaintiff, in a bill to enjoin construction of a street railway, to prove the negative averment of lack of authority, as such must be shown by defendant as without it he is a mere trespasser. Swinheart v. St. Louis & S. R. Co., 207 Mo. 423, 105 SW 1043.

41. Where, in suit to restrain diversion of water to injury of plaintiff's riparian rights, the defendant does not present by answer the necessity of a preliminary settlement of question of plaintiff's title, court may determine such question as one of law where facts are not disputed and determination rests on construction of deeds. 51. Where plaintiff sought to enjoin cutting of trees under 12 inches in diameter, and all over that except such as were suitable for being manufactured into lumber, and the court granted relief as to trees under 12 inches, but refused it as to all others, thereby leaving defendant to proceed as to that as if no suit had been brought, there was no inconsistency in his appealing and at the same time cutting trees as to which there was no decree. Roots v. Boring Junction Lumber Co. [Or.] 92 P 811.

hearing defendant's evidence under rule of court is in the nature of a nonsuit at law, and if error is committed in granting such motion, it is not to be corrected by entering a decree for plaintiff, but by setting aside the dismissal and reinstating the bill with a procedendo.[53] On consideration of an appeal, the facts alleged by the bill will be taken as true.[54]

§ 4. Preliminary injunction. A. Issuance and grounds.[See 10 C. L. 274]—The terms "temporary injunction" and "restraining order" are often used synonymously,[55] but a distinction is sometimes made which limits the meaning of the term "restraining order" to such orders as are operative only until a hearing can be had upon an application for an injunction,[56] and of the term "temporary injunction" to orders operative usually until the final hearing is had of, or a further order made in, the case.[57] In any aspect, however, the only purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending final hearing.[58] Where it appears that the writ is necessary for this purpose, it will issue,[59] but, in granting a preliminary injunction, the court will go no further than necessary to preserve and protect existing rights pending the litiga-

59. Held, under pleadings and evidence, that there was no abuse of discretion in granting ad interim injunction until final hearing of case. Unity Cotton Mills v. Dunson [Ga.] 62 SE 179. Declaration of forfeiture by city of plaintiff's rights under a contract for maintenance of dam will be enjoined pending litigation, where it would render futile the relief sought and cause serious injury. Eau Claire Dells Imp. Co. v. Eau Claire, 134 Wis. 548, 115 NW 155. Pending determination of equitable rights of third party in subject-matter of controversy. Benziger v. Steinhauser, 154 F 151. Injunction against doing of irremedial mischief while legal title to land is in litigation. Restraint upon cutting of timber. Freeman v. Ammons [Miss.] 46 S 61. By code in Alaska, an injunction may issue to restrain any act which might render any judgment obtained in a pending action ineffectual. Injunction against mining operations pending action to recover land. Waskey v. McNaught [C. C. A.] 163 F 929. On an application for an injunction pendente lite ancillary to ejectment to recover mining ground and restrain operations, it was not necessary that affidavits allege defendant's insolvency, the injury claimed being itself irreparable. tion.[60] The status quo is not always a condition of rest, but may be one of action,[61] but a mandatory preliminary injunction will issue only in rare cases.[62] The granting of a preliminary injunction rests largely in the sound discretion of the chancellor,[63] but such discretion is controlled by established principles of equity.[64] A probable right, and a probable danger that such right would be defeated in case an injunction was not issued, may be sufficient to authorize a preliminary injunction,[65] and it is not necessary that the court be satisfied that plaintiff is entitled to prevail on final hearing,[66] the writ being granted in some cases even where there is doubt as to the law and

Injunction pendente lite should not usurp place of final decree, neither should it reach out any further than is absolutely necessary to protect rights of petitioner from injury not only irreparable but which must be expected before the suit can be heard on its merits. Goldfield Consol. Mines Co. v. Goldfield Miner's Union, 159 F 500. It is improper to compel defendant to deliver logs described as shipped from various places under an alleged contract upon complainant's switches as previously done for many years, since that permitted plaintiff to determine what logs he was entitled to ship under the contract, and was not preserving a status known to both parties. Gates v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 151 Mich. 548, 15 Det. Leg. N. 2, 115 NW 420. Where landlord expressly declares that under no circumstances will he execute or consent to assignment of lease to plaintiff, it is useless to continue temporary injunction restraining defendants from interfering with plaintiff's possession. Miles v. Samuels, 111 NYS 537. Will not issue against sale of replevied goods under Code 1902, § 2435, where it does not appear that remedy at law for testing validity of replevy is unavailable. Evans v. Mayes [S. C.] 62 SE 207.

61. Will compel delivery of logs at a certain place as required by an agreement and as done for a long period of time. Gates v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 151 Mich. 548, 15 Det. Leg. N. 2, 115 NW 420. In a suit for specific performance of contract to convey land, temporary injunction restraining defendant from interfering with plaintiff's possession and an order requiring plaintiff to pay into court monthly rental to abide result of the action, were both proper. Inglis v. Fohey, 136 Wis. 28, 116 NW 857.

62. If mandatory injunction will issue at all before final hearing, it is only where case is clear and certain. Lanham v. Wenatchee Canal Co., 48 Wash. 337, 93 P 522. Except in rare cases where right is clear, mandatory injunction will not issue before final hearing. Florida East Coast R. Co. v. Taylor [Fla.] 47 S 345; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Plaintiff, upon verified complaint, answer and reply not entitled as matter of right to temporary injunction restraining building of bridge across the Minnesota river and appropriating money therefor. Watters v. Mankato [Minn.] 118 NW 358. It is wholly in discretion of trial court to determine whether injunction shall issue and to continue or dissolve injunction and what terms should be imposed in action to recover an interest in letters patent and for an accounting. American Circular Loom Co. v. Wilson, 198 Mass. 182, 84 NE 133. Where an injunction is permanent only as to summary abatement by defendant's personal acts, i. e., as to extrajudicial remedy of self-help and in last analysis is temporary because legal questions involved are left open for future determination, its issuance is a matter of discretion. Felt v. Elniquist [Minn.] 116 NW 592.

Review on appeal. See Appeal and Review, 11 C. L. 118. See, also, post, § 4E, Appeal and Review, for cases where the question of the correctness of injunctions issued or refused is discussed.

64. If the allegations of the bill are sufficient and evidence in support thereof is ample to warrant the granting of a temporary injunction and no sufficient defense is made, an order denying an injunction will be reversed. Taylor v. Florida East Coast R. Co. [Fla.] 45 S 574.

65. It is not a defense to an application for a preliminary injunction that defendants have not actually taken any action in the matter in which they are sought to be restrained, where the bill charges an intention to take such action unless restrained which is not denied. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 157 F 944. While it is not necessary that the court should be satisfied before granting injunction that the complainant will certainly prevail on final hearing, it should carefully consider whether he has a probable right and that the same is in probable danger of loss without intervention. Richards v. Meissner, 158 F 109.

Facts tending to prove contentions of the parties, but not actual proof thereof, may be considered on a motion for a preliminary injunction. The fact that words and score of an opera had been published may be taken to show abandonment, though there is no proof to show that the publication was authorized. Savage v. Hoffman, 159 F 584.

the facts,[67] but as a general rule it will issue only in a reasonably clear case.[68] A fortiori will the writ not issue ex parte where upon the showing made the defendant has a prima facie right to do the thing sought to be enjoined.[69] A preliminary injunction, being purely ancillary, should not be granted where it is apparent that the principal relief sought cannot be granted.[70] Generally the gravity of the injury which will result from the grant or refusal of the writ will be considered.[71] The writ may usually issue either at term or in vacation.[72]

67. Where there is grave doubt as to law or facts, a temporary injunction will be granted to prevent great hardship or irreparable damage until hearing and determination. Marino v. Williams [Nev.] 96 P 1073.

68. In any event, court must have sufficient facts so as to enable it to act with a thorough understanding. State v. Parsons [Kan.] 95 P 391. Injunction ought not to be granted unless the applicant shows clearly that he is entitled to one. Marino v. Williams [Nev.] 96 P 1073. Preliminary injunction should not be granted where right alleged to be invaded or threatened is doubtful and uncertain on showing made. St. Louis Street Flushing Mach. Co. v. Sanitary Street Flushing Mach. Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F. 725. Where evidence before referee in suit to enjoin strike did not sustain allegation of conspiracy nor show ratification by union of acts of its members, only such members as could be identified as having committed acts of violence would be enjoined pendente lite. Russell v. Stampers' & Gold Leaf Local Union No. 22, 57 Misc. 96, 107 NYS 303. 69. The right, under U. S. Rev. St. § 718, to grant restraining order in certain cases, is merely to preserve status quo and such an order will not be granted ex parte in suit by telephone company against state commission empowered to fix rates to enjoin interference to prevent increase of rates where application for permission to raise rates has been made and denied, decision of commission being entitled at least to be treated as prima facie correct. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 156 F 834.

70. Injunction ancillary to suit for specific performance. Hazard v. Hope Land Co. [R. I.] 69 A 602; Taylor v. Florida East Coast R. Co. [Fla.] 45 S 574. Where preliminary injunction is sought in aid of suit for specific performance of agreement to convey lands, writ will be refused if agreement relied upon is one made by agent who clearly lacked authority to bind his principals, or if for other reasons the agreement is palpably unenforcible. Campbell v. Hough [N. J. Eq.] 68 A 759.

71. Marino v. Williams [Nev.] 96 P 1073. Where it appears that right is quite doubtful, and that as much injury would result to the defendant from the granting of the injunction as to the complainant from a failure so to do, the application should be refused. Suit to restrain taking out of a patent. Richards v. Meissner, 158 F 109. Evidence in suit to enjoin Sunday ball playing indicated that a preliminary injunction was not necessary to protect relator's rights, and that it might never become necessary. Mahon v. Donovan [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 807, 118 NW 1. Preliminary injunction will be denied to restrain sale of encyclopedia of law containing article written by complainant, but which appeared in form liable to cause irreparable injury to complainant, where it appears that volumes have already been published, copyrighted and extensively sold, and that complainant has recovered a judgment at law for damages covering, to some extent at least, the same matters, which judgment was under review in an appellate court. Chamberlayne v. American Law Book Co., 163 F 858. Ad interim injunction to prevent enforcement of void tax lien upon land and maintain the status quo is allowed almost as matter of course where there is strong probability of recovery by plaintiff, defendant being protected by bond where such is deemed necessary. A. H. Stange Co. v. Merrill, 134 Wis. 514, 115 NW 115. City, failing to invoke power of public service commission to establish rates for gas furnished by gas company, and declining to pay bills rendered on ground that rates are excessive, cannot restrain company by preliminary injunction from shutting off gas supply, unless it pays admittedly just rates for gas received, without prejudice to establish any other sum as reasonable value of such gas. City of Buffalo v. Buffalo Gas Co., 112 NYS 468. Erection and use of tuberculosis hospital enjoined until final hearing. Cherry v. Williams [N. C.] 61 SE 267. Where there are facts in evidence which give good reason to believe that owner of property in residential portion of thickly settled vicinity is about to devote it permanently to use which imports serious menace to health of owners and occupants of adjacent property, such user should be restrained until facts on which the rights of the parties depend are settled. Id. Under Alaska Code, plaintiffs in ejectment to recover certain mining lands were entitled to injunction ancillary to such action restraining defendants' mining operations on ground in question pendente lite, on a showing that such ground was chiefly valuable for placer mining, and that the continued mining operations would result in irreparable injury to plaintiffs. Waskey v. McNaught [C. C. A.] 163 F 929. Bill and showing held sufficient to entitle complainant to preliminary injunction to restrain the fixing of water rates to be charged for water furnished to consumers until the legality of such rates could be established, on giving of bond to secure repayment of charges collected which should finally be held illegal. San Joaquin & Kings River Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County,

Notice of application.[See 10 C. L. 277]—An injunction without notice should be granted only in extreme cases where it clearly appears that the rights of the complainant will be unduly prejudiced unless so granted,[73] but a court should not hesitate to issue an injunction ex parte upon proper showing and in a proper case.[74] Great care, however, should be exercised lest the grant of the writ cause irreparable injury to those affected instead of saving the applicant from such injury,[75] and hence the issuance of an injunction without notice must be predicated upon facts from which irreparable injury to the complainant is manifest.[76] Where the defendant is present and heard on the question at issue, the sufficiency of notice need not be considered,[77] nor can a party after hearing on the merits complain of lack of notice.[78] In New York it is provided by statute that an injunction shall not be granted ex parte which will suspend generally the ordinary business of a corporation.[79] The necessity of presenting or serving the complaint with the moving papers is sometimes dispensed with by statute.[80] Where a notice to show cause is issued, a court cannot also issue a restraining order pending hearing, as the order to show cause implies that defendant should not be restrained until hearing.[81]

(§ 4) B. Bonds.[See 10 C. L. 277]—Ordinarily a temporary injunction is only granted upon security to the party enjoined.[82] This is required by statute in many states,[83] and such statutes are held mandatory both as to the necessity of the bond[84]

Where plaintiff's business required electric current and defendant company was bound to furnish the same to consumers within one hundred feet of its lines, but defendant refused to so furnish current on the ground that plaintiff frauduiently interfered with its meters, a temporary injunction will be granted on plaintiff filing a bond to secure moneys due for any current heretofore consumed and for all moneys that may become due pending trial. Schmitt v. Edison Elec. Illuminating Co., 58 Misc. 19, 110 NYS 44. Injunction interfering with landing of freight on street cars on ground of obstructing highway will not be granted except on full hearing, since not only company but the general public is affected. Town of Ft. Edward v. Hudson Valley R. Co., 111 NYS 753. Preliminary injunction may properly be granted where all that is sought is to restrain interference with complainant's business by threats or inducements to agents to act, for it does the defendant no harm and preserves status. and as to its conditions.[85] There is no statute nor rule restricting the discretion of a federal court fixing the amount of an injunction bond.[86] A bond may be given nunc pro tunc pending appeal by the defendant.[87] Under some circumstances a new bond may be required.[88] In some instances, injunctions may be allowed without bond [89] especially if public interests are involved.[90] A party cannot, after hearing on the merits, complain of the failure of the other party to give bond.[91] A statute requiring a cost bond of corporation plaintiffs does not preclude the issue of a preliminary injunction at the instance of a corporation without such bond.[92] The character of a restraining order is not affected by the giving of a bond.[93]

(§ 4) C. Dissolution, modification or continuance; reinstatement. See 10 C. L. 278 An injunction limited to a certain period is dissolved ex vi termini upon the expiration of such period.[94] The dissolution of the temporary injunction and the dismissal of the bill is proper where the allegations are insufficient and incapable of amendment,[95] or where the injunction has been issued without notice and is unwarranted,[96] or where every material allegation is unequivocally denied with a full recital of facts,[97] but the court has a large discretion in the matter and will not dissolve where irreparable injury will result from dissolution.[98] An injunction awarded on a bill showing no good cause for relief is properly dissolved, though no exception is taken thereto.[99] Where an injunction is issued in contravention of one then in force, it is improvidently issued and should be vacated.[1] In Florida a temporary injunction will not be dissolved merely because the relief granted by such injunction might be obtained by equitable defense in an action at law.[2] The dismissal of a bill upon dissolving a temporary injunction is improper where the court holds that the allegations are sufficient but that the preponderance of evidence as shown by the affidavits is against its verity.[3] A motion to dissolve for want of equity apparent on the bill has the same effect as a demurrer, and facts stated are to be taken as true.[4] Affidavits in rebuttal of a motion to dissolve a temporary injunction filed in court by defendant a week before hearing need not be served on complainant.[5] On motion to quash a temporary injunction for lack of plaintiff's signature on the bond, leave may be granted to his attorney to sign, and on this being done the motion may be overruled.[6] Dissolution of injunction before final hearing is not conclusive and cannot be pleaded as res judicata of right to an injunction on final hearing.[7] Where one judge sitting for another refuses to dissolve an injunction, such order is binding upon the absent judge when he resumes the conduct of the case.[8] Dissolution by an appellate court discontinues the injunction permanently or until final trial in the lower court.[9] Where it appears that a restraining order is partly proper and partly improper, it may be modified accordingly,[10] but an injunction against the enjoyment of a public easement, based on the ground that the grant of such easement is invalid, cannot be modified so as to allow partial enjoyment of such easement.[11] A perpetual injunction may be granted on a motion to continue an interlocutory one.[12]

If, after dissolution of an injunction on answer denying the equity of the bill, testimony afterwards taken and filed shows the right to such relief, the injunction may be reinstated.[13] A motion to vacate a restraining order which has spent itself will not revive it for or against either party.[14] Reinstatement by an appellate court is binding on the court below and on the parties.[15] When an order dissolving an injunction has once taken effect, it will not be affected by a subsequent supersedeas.[16]

(§ 4) D. Damages on dissolution and liability on bond. See 10 C. L. 280—The damage arising from the granting of an injunction pendente lite, in the absence of statute or rule of court, is damnum absque injuria.[17] A formal injunction bond is not, however, an indispensable prerequisite to the assessment of damages in the dissolution of an injunction for a condition may be imposed requiring plaintiff to make good any damage sustained,[18] and in some states, in case of the wrongful suing out of an injunction, the defendant, upon dismissal, has the right to institute an independent action for damages.[19] Where a bond is required, damages will be allowed on the dissolution of the injunction.[20] The pendency of an appeal does not preclude an action on the bond after dissolution of the injunction,[21] nor is it necessary for the defendant to appeal from the order granting the injunction in order to recover upon the bond upon subsequent dissolution.[22] Where the complainant has the right to dismiss without prejudice, such a dismissal does not constitute an adjudication in favor of the defendant,[23] and the latter, in order to recover on the injunc-

Lansingh, 234 Ill. 381, 84 NE 1032. Where, by statute, bond is conditioned to pay costs, damages and reasonable counsel fees as may be incurred by reason of injuction, it is necessary to show that services of counsel were rendered principally in procuring dissolution of injunction, but it is immaterial that service thus rendered inured to benefit of defendant in main case. Miller v. Donovan, 13 Idaho, 735, 92 P 991. If injunction is object sought by plaintiffs, then there could be no recovery of fees and expenses; but if injunction is asked merely to aid plaintiff to preserve his rights until he has obtained desired relief or to prevent commission of wrong before he can prosecute his suit to judgment, then a recovery may be had for fees and expenses in procuring discharge of such injunction. Graham v. Rice, 33 Ky. L. R. 441, 110 SW 231. Where, upon commencement of action, order was granted to show cause why injunction should not issue pendente lite, and in and by terms of order a temporary injunction was granted until hearing and determination of motion on said order, the preliminary injunction contained in order and the proposed injunction sought on return of the order should, for purpose of determining liability under the usual undertaking accompanying the preliminary injunction, be considered parts of same order, so as to authorize recovery of expense of counsel's appearance on return of order to show cause as damages under the injunction. Sargent v. St. Mary's Orphan Boys' Asylum, 190 N. Y. 394, 83 NE 38.

and allow the same before final hearing.[44] A federal court, having required a bond as a condition to the granting of an injunction, has the power in its discretion, on dissolution of the injunction, to assess the damages recoverable on the bond.[45] The Wisconsin statute contemplates a separate suit to recover damages after a decision in the injunction suit.[46]

(§ 4) E. Appeal and review. See 10 C. L. 281—The appealability of an order dissolving an injunction is not affected by a reference to ascertain the damages.[47] In Louisiana an appeal will not lie from an interlocutory order dissolving an injunction on bond where the alleged injury is pecuniary in its nature and the alleged damages compensable in dollars and cents.[48] Where special provision is made for appeals from interlocutory orders, the granting of a preliminary injunction cannot be assigned as error on appeal from a permanent decree.[49] The Texas statute authorizing appeals from orders granting or dissolving temporary injunctions applies only to interlocutory orders,[50] nor does such statute authorize an appeal from an order overruling a motion to dissolve such an injunction and continuing the same until final hearing,[51] or from an order denying a temporary injunction.[52] In Nebraska an order dissolving a temporary injunction may be superseded.[53] In Louisiana a suspensive appeal should not be granted from an order dismissing an injunction for lack of jurisdiction by reason of the pendency of a suspensive appeal in the main cause of action in another district.[54] Where the plaintiff dismisses his suit after dissolution of the injunction, there is nothing from which to appeal.[55] An appeal must, of course, be perfected within the time prescribed by the statute.[56] The granting or refusal of a temporary injunction will not be reversed except for an abuse of discretion,[57]

54. Where a suspensive appeal had been granted in a contested nomination case, and an injunction subsequently granted in another district against secretary of state from accepting name of appellant for ballot had been dismissed by court issuing it for want of jurisdiction, it was proper for such court to refuse suspensive appeal and to force opposing party to have recourse to supreme court for mandamus. Le Blanc v. Michel [La.] 47 S 632.

55. Where after dissolving of a temporary injunction the plaintiff stated in open court that he dismissed the suit, but the court refused to incorporate this in the order of dissolution and plaintiff appealed, held such appeal could not be sustained, for if the suit was dismissed there is nothing to appeal from, and if the appeal was from an interlocutory order no appeal can be taken. Clevenger v. Cariker [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 177.

56. Under Laws 30th Leg. p. 206, c. 107, amending Sayles' Ann. & Civ. St. 1897, § 2995, providing that party to whom any writ is granted shall file same, etc., this section being the only provision prescribing what shall be done with orders made in vacation, the filing of the petition with the judge's order endorsed thereon constitutes the "entry or record of such order," and hence an appeal from an order refusing to dissolve an injunction taken more than 15 days after such endorsement was too late, there being no provision for appeals from orders dissolving injunctions, though upon such dissolution an order was made continuing the injunction upon plaintiff's amended petition. but if an order modifying a temporary injunction is based on a mistaken view of the law, it is reviewable upon appeal,[58] and so, also, on appeal, a permanent injunction granted on interlocutory hearing may be amended so as to make it merely interlocutory.[59] When upon the undisputed facts the complainant is not entitled to the injunction, the order granting it will not be affirmed in order to preserve the status quo,[60] but the appellate court will not enter into the merits in a complicated case.[61] In passing upon the propriety of a temporary injunction, the sufficiency of the complaint will be assumed if a fair doubt of law or fact as to plaintiff's ultimate right of recovery is presented.[62] Where a statute provides for an appeal on the bill and answer and such affidavits and evidence as may be admitted by the judge, the court on appeal is authorized to consider the answer and affidavits and evidence only when the same constitute a part of the case before the judge.[63] No case on appeal is necessary on appeal from an order granting or refusing an injunction,[64] and the appeal itself is a sufficient exception and assignment of error, likewise when the judgment is rendered upon a case agreed, as when it is rendered upon a demurrer.[65]

§ 5. Decree, judgment, or order for injunction.[See 10 C. L. 282]—An injunction should be as clear and precise in its terms as possible, so that there may be no excuse for disobeying or misunderstanding it.[66] Relief by injunction must not be broader than is reasonably necessary for the complainant's protection.[67] A decree may be sufficiently complete to adjust all matters and rights affected by the injunction.[68] Money damages may be awarded together with an injunction,[69] and some-

Where, in a suit to restrain further trespass to real estate and for damages, it appeared that the dispute arose out of the uncertainty of the location of the thread of a stream, and there was much evidence, and the verdict for damages established nothing on the point except the fact of trespass, the order making the injunction permanent should establish with accuracy the line beyond which the defendant is forbidden to go. Wood v. Pacolet Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 95.

68. A decree enjoining interference with gas meters, etc., by a company attaching a governing appliance, should not interfere with the owner's right to have such appliance if he desires it, and should also provide for times in lieu thereof.[70] The court may by its final order grant a decree whether or not it has granted an injunction pending proceedings.[71] A decree should not issue where the act sought to be enjoined has been completed,[72] but the bill in such case may, under some circumstances, be amended so as to authorize relief from the effect of such act.[73] An injunction may be granted in praesenti, to take effect upon the filing of a bond,[74] and a restraining order which does not contemplate a hearing as to whether a temporary injunction shall be allowed is of itself a temporary injunction.[75] Continuing in force, a temporary restraining order made by a clerk is in effect the granting of an injunction.[76] An injunction to restrain diversion of waters is a remedy in personam, and a decree is entitled to full faith and credit in a sister state, and may be enforced there.[77] The words "until the further orders of this court," contained in a restraining order in conjunction with a day set for hearing, have no other nor further meaning than "in the meantime."[78] An injunction against acts in futuro does not usually operate retroactively.[79] An injunction against the doing of acts in an illegal manner does not prohibit the subsequent doing of such acts in a legal manner.[80] An injunction conditioned upon the plaintiffs allowing the defendant to do certain things which the plaintiff is primarily legally bound to do does not impose upon the defendant the burden of doing such things.[81] Extra-judicial provisions in an injunction should be construed as advisory only, and not as an advance adjudication.[82] An injunction temporary in effect, though permanent in form, will be treated as a temporary injunction.[83]

§ 6. Violation and punishment. See 10 C. L. 283—Where the court has jurisdiction to render the decree, parties are bound to obey its terms or suffer for contempt of court[84] despite the trivial damages resulting from such violation.[85] Although the injunction may be erroneously granted, it is not void, and until set aside or reversed on appeal it must be obeyed.[86] Where, however, the injunction is void, there is no contempt.[87] An appeal from an injunction does not have the effect of dissolving or suspending it, and any violation thereof is a contempt.[88] It must appear that there was an intentional violation of the injunction in order to punish for contempt.[89]

Punishment for violation. See 10 C. L. 283—Where a contempt is committed in connection with an injunction, it is not necessary to docket a new case against the contemnor under the Iowa Code.[90] Where there is no statute authorizing the appropriation of a fine imposed for a contempt to the party injured, an order that execution issue for the collection of the fine in the name of the people for the use of complainants will, on appeal, be modified by striking out the latter feature.[91] An injunction enjoining officers and agents of a corporation operates in personam only, and can be enforced only by attaching the bodies of the contumacious individuals and the infliction of punishment upon them.[92] Where the plaintiff seeks to have the defendant adjudged in contempt for the violation of an injunction against interfering with the plaintiff's lands, the plaintiff's title to the lands interfered with must be proved.[93]

96. Nelson v. Johnson, 104 Minn. 440, 116 NW 828. Such hotel or inn is a house, the

of their horses are now no longer essential requisites of an inn,[97] nor is a dining room, cafe or restaurant to supply the guests with food now an essential requisite of an inn or hotel;[98] but there is a clear distinction between a mere private lodging house and a hotel where no meals are served,[99] and between a boarding house and an inn or hotel.[1] One cannot keep an inn and tavern in a boarding house,[2] but a hotel does not lose its character as such by reason of being located at a summer resort or a watering place.[3] Whether or not a particular place is an inn or a boarding house is a question of fact depending on the intention of the proprietor as evidenced by the character of the business conducted.[4] The proprietor of a lodging house, in connection with which meals are served and a bar operated, is an innkeeper,[5] and a patron, paying a stipulated sum for board and lodging at such a house, is a guest [6] as distinguished from a boarder.[7]

Public regulations. See 10 C. L. 285—An innkeeper, having taken out a license for conducting a hotel business, cannot be compelled to take out another license for anything which constitutes an essential part of such business.[8] By statute in some states it is made a criminal offense to obtain food, lodging, entertainment or other accommodations at an inn with intent to defraud the owner or keeper thereof.[9] proprietor of which holds out that he will receive all travelers and sojourners who are willing to pay a price adequate to the sort of accommodation provided and who comes in a situation in which they are fit to be received. The keeper of such a house is bound, without making any special contract therefor, to provide for all, to the limit of his facilities at a reasonable price; but proprietor of a private lodging house is not bound to receive all who apply, but may select his guests and contract specially with each. Hemsley [N. J. Law] 70 A 322. Under § 46 of license ordinance of city of Louisville, imposing an annual tax on hotels and restaurants and defining "restaurants" as "every place where food or refreshments are prepared for casual visitors and sold for consumption therein," a change in management of hotel from "American" to "European plan" does not authorize city to charge a restaurant license in addition to hotel license, the furnishing of food to casual visitors being only an incident to business of hotel. Criminality, in such case, consists in the fraudulent purpose with which the act is done.[10]

Duty to receive guests.[See 10 C. L. 285]—At common law it is an indictable offense for the keeper of an inn or hotel to refuse to receive any guest and entertain him with meals or lodging or both,[11] and by statute, in some states, it is made a misdemeanor to do so without just cause or excuse,[12] and, hence, evidence that would suffice to show that a private house was a house of assignation might entirely fail to prove that of a licensed inn or hotel.[13]

Liability for safety of guests.[See 10 C. L. 288]—An innkeeper, operating a passenger elevator, must exercise at least ordinary care in the character of the appliance provided and in its maintenance and operation,[14] and this duty is owed to every person entering the hotel, either as guest, visitor or otherwise, using the elevator and having lawful business on the premises.[15]

Rights and liability of guests.[See 10 C. L. 288]—The authorities are meager upon the question of the rights of the guest with respect to the room or apartment assigned to him as against the right of the landlord to transfer him to some other room or apartment.[16]

Liens.[See 10 C. L. 288]—Under the common law and in some states by statute, a landlord has a lien upon the baggage and other property in and about an inn belonging to or under the control of his guest.[17]

Liability for effects.[See 10 C. L. 287]—There is no substantial difference as to the rights and liabilities of the keepers thereof between an inn and a hotel.[18] An inn-

16. NOTE. Right of innkeeper to transfer guest: A search of the authorities fails to reveal any reported case bearing directly upon this point, except the Canadian case of Doyle v. Walker, 26 U. C. Q. B. 502, and the recent case of Hervey v. Hart, 149 Ala. 604, 42 S 1013, 123 Am. St. Rep. 67, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 213, in both of which it is held that an innkeeper has the right to assign the guest to an apartment, and to change such assignment without liability, except such as might result in damages for offering improper accommodations. In Malin v. McCutcheon, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 387, 76 SW 586, although the general proposition that an innkeeper would be liable for refusing to permit a guest to occupy a room to which he had been assigned was apparently assumed, the point was not directly passed upon, the court merely reversing the trial court, which had overruled a demurrer to certain portions of the complaint.

In Brown Hotel Co. v. Burckhardt, 13 Colo. App. 59, 56 P 188, the plaintiff left the hotel with his family for a day, having paid his bill in full, but with the understanding that he was to return in the evening and occupy the same room. During the day plaintiff's baggage was taken to the basement of the hotel and the room assigned to other parties. Upon the guest's return he was assigned to other rooms, but, upon sending for his baggage, a trunk was missing. The court held that the plaintiff remained a guest of the hotel during the day, and that the hotel keeper was liable for the loss.—Adapted from 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 213.

keeper, at common law, is liable as an insurer for the loss of goods and money of the guest when placed infra hospitum [19] and by virtue of statute, in some states, the common-law rule applies where the innkeeper fails to comply with statutory requirements as to the posting of notices.[20] An innkeeper is responsible for property or valuables placed in his care,[21] and this rule is extended to boarding house keepers as well.[22] An innkeeper is absolutely liable for all thefts from within or unexplained losses of property belonging to his guest,[23] irrespective of negligence on his part.[24] In some states liability for goods placed in a hotel for safe keeping is based upon the creation of a bailment,[25] and the proprietor will be held liable for failure to exercise ordinary care,[26] a presumption of negligence arising, however, in case of an unexplained loss.[27] A boarding house keeper may be discharged from liability by the contributory negligence of his guest.[28] Liability as absolute insurer does not extend to the keeper of a boarding house,[29] his duty being merely to exercise such care as a prudent man would exercise over his own property under similar circumstances,[30] and the proprietor of a hotel is liable to a regular boarder only for his own or his employe's failure to exercise ordinary care with respect to the boarder's property.[31] A boarding house keeper is responsible for negligence of his servants in respect to a boarder's property.[32] Delivery of clothing by a patron to a restaurant waiter establishes between the patron and the restaurant keeper a bailment,[33] and an unexplained loss makes a prima facie case of negligence on the part of the bailee.[34] In such a case

INSANE PERSONS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[36]

§ 1. Existence and effect of insanity in general. See 10 C. L. 237—One is deemed to be insane when unable to transact the ordinary affairs of life, understand their nature and effect, and exercise his will respecting them.[37] Generally, the presumption of sanity prevails and the burden of proof rests upon one who asserts the contrary; [38] but when a man becomes chronically of unsound mind,[39] or is adjudged to be of unsound mind, he will be presumed to so continue until the contrary is shown.[40] Similarly, it has been held that the appointment of a guardian for a person alleged to be non compos mentis by a court having jurisdiction creates the same presumption of mental infirmity, which presumption will prevail for at least a reasonable time thereafter.[41] An adjudication of insanity, however, cannot of itself relate to a prior time as evidence of incapacity, but, when it is shown that the mental condition of the ward had been the same for a considerable length of time and was the same at the time of the act affected by it as when the adjudication was had, the adjudication is competent evidence of previous insanity.[42]

§ 2. Inquisitions. See 10 C. L. 238—In the absence of any statute regulating the procedure, the chancery or probate courts of the place of residence of the supposed lunatic is usually the proper forum in which to conduct an inquiry as to sanity; [43] but

General principles applicable to all guardianships, such as the person, appointment and qualifications of the guardian or committee, the compensation of the guardian, and his liability upon his bond, are more fully treated elsewhere. in Kentucky, when no court of general equity jurisdiction is in session, inquests may be held by the presiding judge of the county, or city court, or the police judge,[44] and the validity of proceedings in such case depends upon the action taken at the time and not upon the failure of the judge to perform clerical duties.[45] A substantial compliance with the statutes regulating such proceedings is all that is necessary.[46] In New York any person, even a stranger, may present a petition for the issuance of a commission to inquire into the mental condition of an alleged incompetent.[47] Notice of such application is required by statute to be given certain persons,[48] unless sufficient reasons are shown to exist for dispensing with such notice,[49] and, although the statute does not so state, it is also necessary that personal and written notice shall in general be given to the alleged incompetent.[50] It is then the duty of the court to which the petition has been presented either to issue a commission or to direct the questions of fact to be tried before a jury, if it presumptively appears to the satisfaction of the court from the petition and the proofs accompanying it, that the case is one of a person incompetent to manage himself or his affairs and that a committee ought in the exercise of a sound discretion be appointed,[51] but the court is not limited to the petition and proofs accompanying it, and should accept from those entitled to be heard whatever aid that they can render to the court in the exercise of its sound discretion.[52] Finally, in this same state, the validity of a finding by the jury is not affected by the fact that the commissioners add a statement thereto that certain of their number do not concur in such finding.[53] In the District of Columbia, where the lunacy charged is of such dangerous character as to constitute a public menace, notice to the person charged on the day of the hearing is sufficient as against collateral attack, provided, of course, it be given before the hearing.[54] The Florida statute, as amended is held to be constitutional.[55]

The person charged with mental incapacity is usually entitled to a finding by a jury if he so elects.[56] Generally, any witness who knows the facts, having stated such fact, may express opinions, founded on such knowledge, as to a person's mental condition.[57] The judgment in such a proceeding merely determines the mental state at the time of the last inquest and in no way conflicts with or annuls prior contrary judgments.[58]

Appeal.—The holdings are not uniform on the question of the right of appeal in lunacy proceedings: Thus, in Texas, no appeal lies from a decision in a proceeding to have a person adjudged a lunatic and sent to an asylum;[59] in Missouri no appeal may be taken from a verdict of the jury in lunacy proceedings,[60] the superintending control of the circuit court over the probate court being exercisable only by an original writ of certiorari, mandamus, or prohibition, issuing out of the former and directed to the latter;[61] while in Indiana a prosecuting attorney, appearing and defending a proceeding for an adjudication of incompetency and for the appointment of a guardian for a person of alleged unsound mind, cannot appeal from a judgment in favor of the petitioner.[62] In New York, it is held that the court's discretion under the statute is the discretion of supreme court, and not of any one part or term thereof, and that when an appeal from a discretionary order is taken to the appellate division the party appealing is entitled to have it reviewed.[63] Where the right to appeal lies, the ordinary rules governing appeals apply, and a verdict or finding on the question of a person's sanity will not be disturbed on appeal if sustained by the evidence,[64] and a verdict which the jury is coerced to render will be set aside.[65]

In Louisiana, where the alleged lunatic dies pending appeal from a judgment of interdiction, the suit abates and the judgment has no effect as res adjudicata.[66]

Costs.—In New York costs and disbursements should not be awarded against an unsuccessful petitioner where there is reason to believe that respondent was not of sound mind when the proceedings were begun,[67] nor can the court award costs in such case against the incompetent's property since a finding of sanity deprives the court of any control over such property,[68] nor should an alleged incompetent, tried and adjudged a lunatic without an opportunity to defend, be required to pay any part of the expenses incurred in such proceeding as a condition to setting aside the verdict and ordering another hearing.[69] The compensation of the commissioners in New York is fixed by court rule.[70] In New Jersey, the unsuccessful petitioner is entitled to costs, including counsel's fees and expenses, where he has acted in good faith from justifiable motives, and there is a fund under the court's control out of which payment can be ordered to be made.[71] In Missouri where the person at whose

§ 3. Custody, guardianship and support. Guardianship.[See 10 C. L. 288]—The state has inherent jurisdiction over insane persons for the purpose of protecting both the public and the incompetents from their insane acts,[75] the jurisdiction of the courts and the manner of its exercise being usually regulated by statute,[76] though where that has not been done jurisdiction may usually be exercised according to the established practice of the courts in lunacy cases.[77] In exercising this jurisdiction in the appointment of committees, the health and comfort of the incompetent and the preservation of his estate are primary and guiding considerations, the consideration to which the claims of the next of kin are entitled being merely secondary.[78]

The proceedings for the appointment of a committee are generally initiated by petition of one authorized by statute to so petition,[79] together with notice to the persons required by statute to be notified,[80] but such notice may in some states be dispensed with.[81] After proper petition and notice, questions of the sufficiency of commission in nature of writ de lunatico inquirendo, case is made which moves court to appoint receiver pendente lite, and afterwards, upon the inquest subject of inquisition is found to be of sound mind, court will, in discharging receiver, allow him compensation for his services, and will allow petitioner taxed costs of proceedings, including reasonable counsel fee and expenses reasonably and properly incurred. Donaldson v. Winningham, 48 Wash. 374, 93 P 534.

81. Personal service upon alleged incompetent may be dispensed with when judge, in exercise of sound discretion, deems such action proper, as when affidavits of physicians the evidence to warrant the appointment,[82] and as to the person of the appointee,[83] are governed by the ordinary rules,[84] though where the next of kin or the heirs are equally as well qualified as others, they should be given the preference.[85] In New York a committee of the person and estate of an insane infant is not ordinarily appointed though there is no legal objection to such course,[86] and the court appointing a committee has power to correct the spelling of the incompetent's name by stating the various names under which he has been known.[87] In Michigan findings of law and fact need not be made in proceedings for the appointment of a guardian unless required by statute,[88] and the question of appointing a special guardian is addressed to the sound discretion of the court and is to be determined by the apparent condition of the ward or his estate or both,[89] and where the issue of incompetency has been determined on application for a general guardian, it is not necessary that there be a new hearing and determination of that issue,[90] a proper showing within the statute being made by the proofs produced at the hearing on the application for a general guardian.[91] In Washington, where the court has jurisdiction to appoint guardians for insane persons wholly independent of its jurisdiction to commit to hospitals, the validity of the order appointing the guardian depends in no manner upon the validity of the previous adjudication of insanity, in the absence of fraud or conspiracy.[92] In Virginia an order appointing a committee is an adjudication upon all the facts necessary to give the court jurisdiction to make the order and it is to be presumed that the record in which the order was entered was such as to authorize its entry, and and therefore its validity cannot be collaterally impeached or inquired into.[93] In Nebraska the heirs, apparent or presumptive, or those dependent upon an alleged incompetent for support, may appeal from an order of the county court dismissing their petition for the appointment of a guardian for such incompetent,[94] and in Ohio such an appeal transfers to the appellate court the entire case and empowers it upon a proper finding to appoint a guardian.[95] Whereupon it is the duty of the clerk of such court to certify, by a duly authenticated transcript, state that service would excite and harm. In re Andrews, 112 NYS 167. Jurisdiction of court over person and property of incompetent is general, and, although ordinarily notice of presentation of petition originally for appointment of committee is required to be given to husband or wife, if any, or to one or more relatives of incompetent, or to public officer specified by statute, yet court acquires jurisdiction without such notice if sufficient reasons for dispensing therewith are set forth in petition or accompanying affidavits. the order, judgment and proceeding to the lower court.[96] In Ohio exclusive original jurisdiction to remove a guardian is vested in the probate court and the court of common pleas is without original jurisdiction to entertain an application for such purpose.[97] In New York a committee cannot be removed without notice, or in a proceeding not asking for such relief, where proper independent proceedings for such removal have been instituted,[98] and the court has no power to amend an order removing a committee on a motion to resettle such order where the ostensible purpose is to reverse and nullify the removal ordered.[99]

Statutes regulating the appointment of guardians for insane persons must, of course, conform to constitutional limitations.[1]

Custody.—Where an insane person is released from a sanatorium during proceedings to remove the committee on charges involving the latter's fitness and morality, other provision should be made for the former's custody than placing him in the latter's custody pending determination of removal proceeding.[2]

Support in general.[See 10 C. L. 288]—At common law an insane person was liable for the reasonable value of things furnished him necessary for his support.[3] In Virginia the jurisdiction of the court to authorize the application of the proceeds of the corpus of insane infants' real estate to their maintenance is entirely statutory and, according to statute, such authority must be given, if at all, before and not after the expenditure has been made.[4] In New York, where an estate if carefully managed will yield sufficient income for the incompetents' needs, the principal should not be reduced until the income substantially fails.[5] In West Virginia the committee of a lunatic acts in a fiduciary capacity and is entitled to have doubt and uncertainties as to the construction of a will removed by a court of equity, where the law affords him no method by which his rights, powers and liabilities may be defined.[6]

Support of inmates of hospitals and asylums.[See 10 C. L. 288]—In Iowa the relatives of a person confined in an asylum are liable for the latter's support,[7] and the auditors of the several counties are authorized and empowered by statute to collect from the property of patients in insane hospitals any sum paid by the county on their behalf in the same manner as any other claim is collected.[8] However, where such a claim is filed in guardianship proceedings in the probate court, it has been held that it is not triable by jury[9] and the district court, as a court of probate, having obtained jurisdiction of the guardianship, alone has authority to order the guardian to pay over to the state money in his hands.[10] In such an action testimony of a member of a board of supervisors that he made an estimate, based on the expenses of keeping all patients, and found that the expense for each was approximately a certain sum per month, is competent.[11] A county obtaining judgment against an insane person may obtain an order on the guardian to pay enforcible by attachment or by execution sale.[12] In the District of Columbia the reduced rates of maintenance provided by act of congress to be deducted from the pensions of the inmates of the government hospital is intended to apply to all pensioners and not alone to inmates of the national home for disabled volunteers transferred to that institution.[13] In California the statutory requirements that certain persons are liable for the support of their indigent, insane kindred confined in a state hospital have been held constitutional.[14] An action to enforce such liability for support of a patient in the state hospital[15] may be brought in the name of the hospital,[16] and

§ 4. Commitment to asylums.[See 10 C. Effect of insanity on failure to pay insurance premiums when due: Insanity or mental incapacity will not excuse the nonpayment of an insurance premium when due where the contract provides in unqualified terms that failure to so pay will render the policy void (Hipp v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 128 Ga. 491, 57 SE 892, 12 L. R. A. [N. S.] 319; Gaterman v. American L. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 300; Wheeler v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 82 N. Y. 543, 37 Am. Rep. 594; Klein v. New York L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 88, 26 Law. Ed. 662; Smith v. Pennsylvania Mut. L. Ins. Co., 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. [Pa.] 295), although the insured had the money in hand and was ready and willing to pay when he became non compos (Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 252, 26 Law. Ed. 765; Howell v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 276, 4 Am. Rep. 675). The rule, applied in the above cases to straight old line life insurance policies, is equally applicable to members of mutual benefit societies who have become incapacitated by reason of insanity (Hawkshaw v. Supreme Lodge K. H., 29 F 770; Grand Ladge A. O. U. W. v. Jesse, 50 Ill. App. 101; Ingram v. Supreme Council A. L. H., 28 N. Y. Wkly. Dig. 320, 14 N. Y. St. Rep. 600; Sheridan v. Modern Woodmen, 44 Wash. 230, 87 P 127, 120 Am. St. Rep. 987, 7 L. R. A. [N. S.] 673), or illness (McElhone v. Massachusetts Benev. Ass'n, 2 App. D. C. 397; Sleight v. Supreme Council M. T., 121 Iowa, 724, 96 NW 1100; Yoe v. Benjamin C. Howard Masonic Mut. Benev. Ass'n, 63 Md. 86; Curtin v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 65 Mo. App. 294) and where the contract calls for payment of assessments when levied rather than at a fixed period (Carpenter v. Centennial Mut. Life Ass'n, 68 Iowa, 453, 27 NW 456, 56 Am. Rep. 855). It is also applied, although actual notice of such assessments was never brought home to the insured, where acts have been done which constitute legal notice according to the express terms of the contract (Pitts v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co., 66 Conn. 376, 34 A 95, 50 Am. St. Rep. 96; Yoe v. Benjamin C.

soundness, will not be avoided unless there is a return of the consideration,[41] though the rule is otherwise where the grantee takes with knowledge of grantor's incapacity.[42]

§ 7. Torts. See 8 C. L. 827

§ 8. Crimes. See 10 C. L. 292—In New York, where one on trial for murder defends on the ground of insanity, he has a right to appear in person, to be represented by counsel, and introduce evidence,[43] and if, on all the evidence and the verdict of the jury, the court should decide that his discharge would be dangerous to the public peace and safety, it may commit him to an insane hospital until sane,[44] and such procedure has been held constitutional.[45] In New Jersey, insanity, to prevent the execution of a sentence of death, must be of such a character as to render the prisoner incapable of understanding the nature of the proceedings against him and his impending execution.[46]

§ 9. Actions by or against. See 10 C. L. 293—Actions by and against guardians and committees, not peculiar alone to persons adjudicated to be insane, are treated elsewhere,[47] as is also the appointment of guardians ad litem and next friends.[48]

Since an insane person is in law incapable of making a change of residence,[49] an action against an insane defendant in tort may be brought in the county where the insane defendant has his legal residence.[50] His legally appointed guardian may be joined as a party defendant,[51] and where, in such case, the guardian waives issue and service of summons, enters his appearance, and summons is issued to another county for the insane defendant and is personally served upon him, and the action is subsequently dismissed as to the guardian only, it is error for the court to quash the service on the insane defendant and dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction over his person.[52] In New York an incompetent person is a necessary party to an action brought to recover damages for acts done by him personally,[53] but where the committee of the incompetent puts him out of the case by stipulation, such committee cannot question his absence and throw the costs of a dismissal due to the absence of the incompetent upon plaintiff,[54] though where the action, if it were to proceed against

Howard Masonic Mut. Benev. Ass'n, supra), but not where the contract makes the payments due only upon "notice" (Courtney v. U. S. Masonic Ben. Ass'n [Iowa] 53 NW 238). Where, under the by-laws of a fraternal order, the lodge upon due notice to it must pay the assessments of an incapacitated member, such incapacity will not excuse the giving of due and formal notice thereof before delinquency. Sterling v. Woodmen, 28 Utah, 505, 80 P 375; Bost v. Supreme Council R. A., 87 Minn. 417, 92 NW 337; Smith v. Sovereign Camp W. W., 179 Mo. 119, 77 SW 862. In Buchanan v. Supreme Conclave I. O. H., 178 Pa. 465, 35 A 873, 56 Am. St. Rep. 774, 34 L. R. A. 436, it was held that upon the insured becoming insane the society, upon due notice and request by the beneficiary, should notify such beneficiary of any further assessments, and that notice to the insured, under the circumstances, did not release the society. The general principle above stated was applied to fire insurance premiums in Home Ins. Co. v. Wood, 24 Ky. L. R. 1638, 72 SW 15.—Adapted from 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 319.

the committee, might raise serious complications to the prejudice of the incompetent, and a judgment against the committee might be prejudicial to the incompetent, the court having general supervision over incompetents and their estates may properly prevent the action from proceeding.[55] In Illinois an action affecting real estate, the title to which is in an insane person, must be against the ward, and not the conservator.[56] In Virginia a lunatic is not a necessary party to a suit to sell his property for a debt, his committee being the proper party defendant,[57] and in such a proceeding the appointment of a guardian ad litem is wholly unnecessary where there is a committee, unless there is a conflict of interest between the lunatic and the committee.[58] In Ohio in the absence of any special provision with regard to procedure as to an insane party to a divorce suit, the general statutes apply, and the appointment of a trustee for an insane defendant in a divorce proceeding is proper,[59] and property rights of parties to a divorce proceeding may be adjudicated notwithstanding the defendant is insane.[60] In Texas, in certain actions, it is a matter for the discretion of the judge whether the mental condition of an alleged lunatic be determined in limine or whether it be submitted to the jury along with the other issues of the case.[61] Where it appears that the presence of a lunatic who has escaped from a certain state to another is necessary to the trial of a cause instituted in the former state, a writ of protection will sometimes issue permitting him to enter and remain in the former state without molestation provided he remains during the entire time in the custody of designated persons.[62]

Limitations do not operate against a lunatic until his sanity is restored,[63] regardless of whether he has been so adjudged insane or not,[64] but it is held that where after one is adjudged a lunatic, he is discharged as restored to sanity, limitations commence to run and continue to do so notwithstanding a recurrence of the insanity later.[65] In some states, judgments may properly be rendered against insane persons,[66] in others a judgment rendered against an insane person is voidable.[67] In New York, where the committee of a lunatic is an unsuccessful contestant upon probate, and there has been no special guardian appointed for the lunatic, costs cannot be awarded to the committee.[68]

INSOLVENCY.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[69]

§ 1. Effect of federal bankruptcy act on state insolvency laws. See 10 C. L. 296—The suspension of state statutes by the national bankruptcy act is treated in an appropriate topic.[70]

§ 2. Procedure and parties to adjudicate insolvency. See 10 C. L. 295—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts has supervisory jurisdiction of insolvency cases,[71] and a motion to dismiss a bill for relief without prejudice before the entry of the decree of that court is discretionary.[72]

§ 3. Property passing to assignee. See 8 C. L. 330

§ 4. Administration of insolvent estate. See 10 C. L. 295—A claim is provable which is recoverable in an action at law.[73] Damage for breach of contract is a legitimate claim against an insolvent's estate.[74] The right to priority generally depends upon the character of the creditor's claim.[75] An unlawful preference made by the insolvent may be recovered by the assignee,[76] but a receiver of an insolvent cannot, in addition to having an assignment of uncollected claims set aside, recover the sums collected which have been applied to the payment of another creditor's claim.[77] In

INSPECTION LAWS.[79]

The scope of this topic is noted below.[80]

In Kentucky the selling or offering for sale of oil below a certain standard, or oil that has been condemned by an authorized inspector as unsafe for illuminating purposes, is prohibited by statute,[81] but such statute does not prohibit one whose oil has been found below the test or has been condemned from mixing it before it is sold or offered for sale so as to bring the entire quantity up to the statutory test.[82] One pleading such mixing as a defense to a penal action for offering for sale oil below the required test has the burden of proving that the mixture was up to the standard.[83] The enforcement of inspection laws may be restrained in a proper case.[84] Such suits, though against state officers, are not necessarily suits against the state.[85] Inspection laws are subject to constitutional limitations.[86]

An instruction undertaking to explain a question in order to get an answer decisive thereof, but which does not tell jury how to answer it, is not improper. Bennett v. Greenwood, 151 Mich. 274, 14 Det. Leg. N. 940, 114 NW 1019. Province of jury is not invaded by charge applying legal principles; hence it is proper to charge that carrier owed passenger duty to afford her reasonable opportunity to alight in safety, and for breach of such duty, plaintiff exercising ordinary care, recovery could be had. Savannah Elec. Co. v. Bennett, 130 Ga. 597, 61 SE 529.

1. Instruction, "the law applicable to this case is given you in form of instructions but you are sole judges of all questions of fact in this case," held to erroneously state province of jury. Maxwell v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 140 Ill. App. 156.

Where court sits as jury, instruction presenting issue of law will not be given. Dronenburg v. Harris [Md.] 71 A 81. It is not province of jury to interpret laws, but it may be left to them whether sections of a certain code are laws of a particular state. White v. Reitz, 129 Mo. App. 307, 108 SW 601. Whether title to stock passed, question of law. Cowie v. Kinser, 138 Ill. App. 143. Objectionable as submitting to jury construction of phrases of contract. American Home Circle v. Eggers, 137 Ill. App. 595. Instruction submitting to jury question of what is and what is not a pledge, erroneous. Beggs v. First Nat. Bank of Arcola, 134 Ill. App. 403. Propositions as to law of pleading are for court. Peck v. Springfield Trac. Co. [Mo. App.] 110 SW 659. Instruction in effect submitting to jury question as to what are material allegations of a declaration, erroneous. Trustees of Schools v. Yoch, 133 Ill. App. 32. Competency of witnesses is question for court. Parkersburg Nat. Bank v. Hannaman, 63 W. Va. 358, 60 SE 242.

terial[13] issues,[14] supported by the pleading and evidence,[15] should be given, but as a general rule, only when asked for.[16] By constitution in some states, however, it is made the court's duty to declare the law,[17] while in other jurisdictions it is the court's duty to instruct on all issues properly raised, whether requested or not,[18] and again, although not requested, the court may instruct on any proposition of law when, in its opinion, justice requires it.[19] It is not the court's duty, however, to instruct separately on particular phases of evidence not decisive of the case,[20] nor to give unnecessary instructions,[21] nor to charge that its refusal to dismiss is not an intimation on the facts of the case.[22]

Necessity of request in particular cases.[See 10 C. L. 298]—A request is necessary if it is desired that instructions be restricted [23] or amplified,[24] made more explanatory,[25] specific,[26] or definite.[27] Hence a request must be made if it is desired that the court should instruct on the principles of law necessary to constitute adverse possession,[28] on the converse of a proposition,[29] or if it is desired that issue be presented affirmatively as well as negatively,[30] or if instruction in language of the statute is desired,[31] or if a repetition is desired.[32] Likewise if a party relies on a different theory repugnant to that of his adversary, he must ask instructions presenting his theory;[33] or if a particular feature of the case is desired to be noticed,[34] or if a charge on burden of proof is desired,[35] or it is desired that testimony be touched on,[36] a request must be made. It must also be made if instructions are to be corrected [37] or omissions cured.[38] A party may, however, avail himself of a positive error in the charge without having requested a correction.[39]

Limiting number of instructions. See 10 C. L. 800—Only such instructions should be given as will fully and clearly present the pivotal points,[40] hence they should not be multiplied wholly out of proportion to the necessities of the case;[41] and while it is technically erroneous to limit their number,[42] the court may, in a proper case, refuse to consider more than a specified number, if the jury is fully and fairly instructed.[43]

Form and sufficiency of request.[44]—Requests must be in writing[45] and are sometimes required to be signed,[46] but, as the object of the signature is to identify the instructions,[47] the statute requiring it is not mandatory.[48] The requests should be correct in form,[49] couched in apt,[50] intelligible[51] and definite[52] language, and should not be made in the form of mere suggestions.[53] They must be consistent with each other[54] and must correctly state the law.[55] If bad in part, a request may be wholly rejected.[56] It has been held, however, that when there has been no instruction on an issue an erroneous request is sufficient to call the attention of the court to its duty in that respect.[57]

Time of making requests.[58]—Requests are often required to be presented before the argument begins,[59] and the court is not ordinarily required to receive them when presented out of time.[60]

Disposition of requests.[See 10 C. L. 301]—It is usually held that the court need not give instructions in the precise form in which they are requested [61] and may modify the instruction and give it as modified,[62] though in some states the power of the court to modify a requesed instruction is denied.[63]

While the duty to correct an imperfect instruction is sometimes declared,[64] the 57. Wade v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 84. And see post, this section, Disposition of Requests, as to power and duty to modify.

58. See 10 C. L. 301. See post, § 16.

59. Gracz v. Anderson, 104 Minn. 476, 116 NW 1116. A request comes too late during closing argument. Quimby v. Jay, 196 Mass. 584, 82 NE 1084. A court rule which requires all instructions to be presented at the conclusion of evidence does not prevent court from giving an instruction not so presented if, in the court's opinion, it is proper to do so. Frank Parmelee Co. v. Griffin, 136 Ill. App. 307. Rule has no application where an instruction has been presented in apt time, examined by the court and handed back to counsel with suggestion that in its then form it was erroneous, and when amended a request is made to have it given. Chicago City R. Co. v. Hackett, 136 Ill. App. 594.

60. At close of charge. Zamore v. Boston El. R. Co., 198 Mass. 594, 84 NE 858.

61. Dunham v. Cox [Conn.] 70 A 1033; J. C. Stevenson Co. v. Bethea, 79 S. C. 478, 61 SE 99; Salchert v. Reinig [Wis.] 115 NW 132. If charge given is better statement of law, no grounds for complaint. McFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. [Del.] 69 A 744. Court may reject all prayers and instruct in its own language, but when this is done, law ought to be fully and accurately declared in explicit and intelligible terms. Rosenkovitz v. United Railways & Elec. Co. [Md.] 70 A 108. Where proper special instructions are requested, but not to be given before argument, court is not required to give them in precise terms or language submitted. It is sufficient if substance thereof be given in other instructions or in general charge. Rheinheimer v. Aetna Life Ins. C., 77 Ohio St. 360, 83 NE 491. Modifying request stating rule of law by which appellee's testimony should be weighed by adding that it is to be weighed by same tests as applied to other witnesses, not improper. Mertens v. Southern Coal & Min. Co., 235 Ill. 540, 85 NE 743. It is safe general rule not to give instructions in language in which asked. Hanrahan v. O'Toole [Iowa] 117 NW 675.

62. Court may make proper modifications. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 110 SW 220; Powell v. Fowler, 85 Ark. 451, 108 SW 827; Cashman v. Proctor [Mass.] 86 NE 284; Ratliff v. Quincy, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App]. 110 SW 606; Douglass v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 15; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Shipp [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 286; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Cockrill [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1092. Court may modify by striking out comment on evidence. Garner v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 128 Mo. App. 401, 107 SW 427. Instruction argumentative in form is properly modified by eradication of argumentative portion. Illinois Steel Co. v. Koshinski, 135 Ill. App. 587. An instruction giving undue prominence to matter may be modified. Pauckner v. Waken, 231 Ill. 276, 83 NE 202. Modification is not objectionable when original draft is misleading. Eckels v. Hawkinson, 138 Ill. App. 627. Modification of proffered instruction not embracing all material facts for an estoppel held not prejudicial. Central Brew. Co. v. American Brew. Co., 135 Ill. App. 648. Instruction containing "and you will return verdict for defendant if evidence is evenly balanced, or if it preponderates for defendant, or if you are in doubt as to its preponderance," properly modified by changing latter clause to "or if you are unable to determine as to its preponderance." Illinois Steel Co. v. Koshinski, 135 Ill. App. 587.

Formal and trivial modifications. Ramey v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 235 Ill. 502, 85 NE 639. Phraseology may be changed so long as meaning is not. Grimes v. Cole [Mo. App.] 113 SW 685. Qualifications not amounting to improper restrictions, but simply statements of converse of proposition, may be added. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Mote [Ga.] 62 SE 164. A modification of a tendered instruction is not error where modification does not state an incorrect or inaccurate proposition of law. Eckels v. Hawkinson, 138 Ill. App. 627.

63. In some jurisdictions, trial court cannot change verbiage, but must give charge in exact language asked. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Lile [Ala.] 45 S 699. Special charges should not be modified, but given or rejected as presumed. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Farmer [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 729.

64. See post, § 6. When a party offers an instruction on some point of law involved in case, and it is not correctly drawn or in proper form, it is duty of court to prepare, or have prepared, instruction on that point and give it to jury, and failure to do so is error. Whitley v. Whitley's Adm'r, 32 Ky.

general rule is that the court need not correct imperfect requests, but may refuse them.[65]

Where an instruction is modified, the court need not indicate to the jury what part thereof is as originally requested,[66] but a requested instruction should not be made confusing by the addition of modifying matter not germane to the request.[67]

Statutes in some states require that the disposition of requests be noted thereon,[68] the purpose being to preserve a proper record,[69] and, on review, unmarked requests are deemed to have been refused.[70] In the absence of statute, the disposition of requests need not be so indicated.[71]

Repetition.[See 10 C. L. 303]—Though the court may in some cases repeat an instruction,[72] yet, as repetitions tend to mislead the jury [73] and give undue prominence to issues,[74] the court should not and cannot be required [75] to repeat matters previously charged [76] where such repetition can serve no useful purpose,[77] even if the request is

L. R. 1211, 108 SW 241. If evidence is sufficient to raise issue, an imperfect request which suggests issue should be corrected and given. Rushing v. Lanier [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1089.

65. Edwards v. Western Union Tel. Co. [N. C.] 60 SE 900; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Oram [Tex. Civ. App.] 30 Tex. Ct. Rep. 681, 107 SW 74; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 758; Ramm v. Hewitt-Lea Lumber Co. [Wash.] 94 P 1081. Court need not revise a faulty request nor frame a correct one. Williams v. Lansing, 152 Mich. 169, 15 Det. Leg. N. 168, 115 NW 961; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex.] 108 SW 964; Kansas City So. R. Co. v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 196.

66. Farrell v. Citizens' Light & R. Co., 137 Iowa, 309, 114 NW 1063.

67. Taylor v. McClintock [Ark.] 112 SW 405.

68. The failure of court to mark instructions not given is improper under statute. Leman v. U. S. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 137 Ill. App. 258.

69. The object of designating requests as "given," "refused" or "modified" is intended simply to preserve a proper record. Farrell v. Citizens' Light & R. Co., 137 Iowa, 309, 114 NW 1063.

70. Leman v. U. S. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 137 Ill. App. 258.

71. The dispositon of requests need not be noted on margin of instructions. Van Buskirk v. Quincy, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 832.

72. If instruction asked does not give undue prominence to a phase of case covered by court's charge, it may be given. Wolf Cigar Stores Co. v. Kramer [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 990. Held, two charges on issue of contributory negligence did not give undue prominence to that issue. Wade v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 84. Two instructions covering same question but worded differently, may be given. Huss v. Heydt Bakery Co., 210 Mo. 44, 108 SW 63.

73. Rosenkovitz v. United Railways & Elec. Co. [Md.] 70 A 108.

74. As undue prominence may be given an issue by recurring to it often in a charge when an issue is fully presented there is no necessity for repeating it in a special charge. Herring v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 977; Missouri, etc., T. R. Co. v. Dunbar [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 500. See post, § 10.

75. Court should not and cannot be required to repeat a charge on any phase of the case. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Conutesan [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 187.

76. Requests covered, or substantially covered by instruction given, may be refused. Burns v. George [Ala.] 45 S 421; Morris v. McClellan [Ala.] 45 S 641; Greene v. Hereford [Ariz.] 95 P 105; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Saunders, 85 Ark. 111, 107 SW 194; Powell v. Fowler, 85 Ark. 451, 108 SW 827; McDonough v. Williams [Ark.] 112 SW 164; Shafstall v. 85. Cramer v. Nelson, 128 Mo. App. 393, 107

uncontroverted.[86] However, the failure to assume an undisputed fact is not error if the charge does not authorize a finding if such fact be not found.[87] To determine whether an instruction assumes a fact, the language must be construed as a whole.[88]

§ 5. Charging with respect to matters of fact or commenting on the weight of evidence.[89]—Reference to evidence should be made in a general way [90] and only so far as is necessary to present leading issues,[91] unless the ruling being made is necessarily the conclusion of the case.[92] Federal courts are allowed to comment on the weight of the evidence,[93] but the general rule, declared by statutes in some states,[94] is that trial courts may not charge with respect to matters of fact nor comment on the weight of evidence.[95] Before an instruction is obnoxious in this respect, there

That it was plaintiff's duty to look and listen. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Balliet [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 906. "If jury find that evidence sustaining plaintiff's case preponderates in his favor, although but slightly, that it is sufficient for jury to find issues in his favor and to find a verdict against defendant." City of Chicago v. Fields, 139 Ill. App. 250. In action for slander, in that plaintiff had not "even externals of refinement" instruction that "possession of externals of refinement is subject of observation, because you know by seeing person whether they have externals of refinement," is erroneous. Barry v. McCollom [Conn.] 70 A 1035. Error to instruct that because a witness has not been impeached presumption is in favor of truth of statements. Elder Dempster & Co. v. Menge [C. C. A.] 160 F 341. That plaintiff, being present and not testifying, is bound by evidence given in his hearing and not disputed by him. Smith v. Wabash R. Co., 129 Mo. App. 413, 107 SW 22. That plaintiff is interested in result of issue, and any statement made against his own interest is presumed true, but jury must give only such weight to statements in his own favor as they believe from all facts and circumstances they are entitled to. Brown v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 127 Mo. App. 614, 106 SW 551. Term "if jury believe from evidence" should be used instead of speaking of a preponderating probability "if it exists in minds of jury." Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Wheeler's Adm'r [Va.] 62 SE 269.

Not violated: On motion to strike, remark of court that evidence is proper. Fritz v. Chicago Grain Elevator Co., 136 Iowa, 699, 114 NW 193. That court does not intend to intimate what its opinion is as to any fact in dispute. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Reddick, 131 Ill. App. 515. Let court pass one rule today and they will frame rule to meet it the next." Rearden v. State Mut. Life Ins. Co., 79 S. C. 526, 60 SE 1106. A statement that "you heard me admit testimony from parties to show what their sales were before. Jury is to take that for what it is worth. If it is worth anything, take it, if it is not, throw it away." Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. v. Monroe, 79 S. C. 564, 61 SE 92. That if plaintiff has made out case as charged by greater weight of evidence, duty of jury to find for him. Graham v. Mattoon City R. Co., 234 Ill. 483, 84 NE 1070. That "if preponderance of evidence satisfies you," etc. Coweta County v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1018. That preponderance of evidence does not depend on number of witnesses. Model Clothing House v. Hirsch [Ind. App.] 85 NE 719. That weight of evidence does not depend, necessarily, on number of witnesses. Hoskavec v. Omaha St. R. Co. [Neb.] 115 NW 312. "That slightest difference in weight of evidence is a preponderance." The term "fair preponderance of evidence" is often used in instructions, and really is meaningless. Hammond, etc., R. Co. v. Antonia, 41 Ind. App. 335, 83 NE 766. Court may tell jury that a charge on a contested issue of fact is properly determined either way, according to preponderance of evidence. Burkett v. Miller [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 885, 106 SW 1153.

must be some comment [96] addressed to the jury,[97] and not a mere general remark.[98] The prohibition applies only to expressions of opinion as to whether a fact or series of facts is or is not established; [99] hence the court may state a general legal proposition [1] such as the legal effect of conclusions of fact which the jury are at liberty to deduce from the evidence,[2] or that certain conclusions necessarily result from a given statement of facts,[3] so that the jury may be enabled to see their way clearly to a right verdict.[4] The court may also present in detail facts pertaining to a theory,[5] and may remark on admissibility of evidence,[6] and it has been held that an instruction as to the weight to be given to expert testimony is proper.[7]

§ 6. Form and general substance of instructions.[8]—The instructions should embrace only material matters [9] with which the jury are concerned.[10] Since the charge is to be construed as a whole,[11] matters once given need not be repeated in connection with other instructions [12] or portion of a charge.[13] The charge may present a hypothetical case,[14] but if it does it must put before the jury all the facts.[15] It may also

96. In action for damages to timber by gases, the word "noxious" used in instruction adds nothing to it. Johnson v. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. [Wash.] 97 P 746.

97. Provision that judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state facts in issue and declare law, has no application to remarks of court that it had considered motion for nonsuit, and, while it had grave doubt of right to recover, case should go to jury, such remarks, though in presence of jury, not being directed to them. McFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. [Del.] 69 A 744.

98. A mere general comment in a charge disparaging quality and value of expert testimony is not ground for reversal. Berkley v. Maurer, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 363.

99. This prohibition must be regarded as restraint only on expression of opinion as to whether a fact or series of facts is or is not established. It was not designed to deprive court of all power to deal with facts proved. It may sum up evidence, state its legal effect, and indicate its proper application. Plummer v. Boston El. R. Co., 198 Mass. 499, 84 NE 849.

3. Crauf v. Chicago City R. Co., 235 Ill. 262, 85 NE 235. When evidence uncontroverted, court may charge that facts proved. Fitzgerald Cotton Oil Co. v. Farmers' Supply Co., 3 Ga. App. 212, 59 SE 713. A statement that there is a conflict in evidence, where such fact is not in dispute, is not a charge on facts. Wilson v. Moss, 79 S. C. 120, 60 SE 313.

4. To this end, court may elucidate proper application of legal principals by illustrations drawn from common experience, or by reference to cases where similar questions have been decided, and define degree of weight which law attaches to whole class of testimony. Whitney v. Wellesley & Boston St. R. Co., 197 Mass. 495, 84 NE 95.

5. A charge is not upon weight of evidence simply because it presents in detail facts pertaining to theory of recovery relied on by plaintiff. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Ruckman [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 1158.

6. General rule is that remarks by court in course of trial upon admissibility of evidence, or refusing nonsuit, or to direct verdict, not within inhibition of constitution against charging as to matters of fact. Latimer v. General Elec. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 438.

7. Court may instruct jury that they are "not bound to accept as true opinions of expert witnesses, but may give such opinions such weight as they may, under all evidence, consider proper, or may altogether disregard such opinions, if, from all facts, they believe them unreasonable." Wiley v. St. Joseph Gas Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 1185.

11. See post, § 17.

12. Each separate instruction need not embody every fact or element essential to sustain or defeat an action. Grant v. Milam [Okl.] 95 P 424. The law can be more clearly given by being set out in a series of instructions. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. France's Adm'x [Ky.] 112 SW 929. So long as all instructions are each correct statements, and, when considered together, present every proper view of facts and are not in conflict, there is no error in presenting them separately. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Leder [Ark.] 112 SW 744.

13. Court may convey one idea on one element of a rule of law in one portion of its charge disassociated from other portions or elements, so long as those other elements are conveyed to minds of jury as necessary to be found by them. Buchman v. Jeffery [Wis.] 115 NW 372.

curacy of instruction is necessary and the practical test of the soundness of a charge is how the jurors understand it.[33] While a rule of law may be first stated in the abstract and then in the concrete,[34] abstract instructions are apt to mislead[35] and should be avoided,[36] especially in a closely contested case.[37] A charge is not abstract which merely eliminates the effect of improper evidence,[38] nor where there is any evidence from which the jury may infer the existence of the facts supposed.[39]

Instructions should be certain[40] and definite,[41] but they need not give any statement of facts if none are disclosed by the evidence.[42]

Instructions need not be numbered.[See 10 C. L. 815]

Verbal inaccuracies and inelegancies.[See 10 C. L. 815]—Although surplusage should be avoided,[43] inaccuracies which do not mislead the jury[44] are not ground for reversal.[45] lenson, 134 Ill. App. 256; Kidd v. White, 138 Ill. App. 107; City of Chicago v. Fields, 139 Ill. App. 250.

33. The practical test as to soundness of instructions is not what ingenuity of counsel can, at leisure, work out instructions to mean, but how and in what sense, under evidence before them and circumstances of trial, ordinary men and jurors understand instructions. Eckels v. Cooper, 136 Ill. App. 60.

34. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Martin [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 981.

35. Abstract instructions should be avoided when it is possible to do so, because they are sometimes misleading, but to be ground for reversal, it must affirmatively appear they were misleading. Alabama Consol. Coal & Iron Co. v. Heald [Ala.] 45 S 686; Florala Sawmill Co. v. Smith [Fla.] 46 S 332; Salmon v. Helena Box Co., 158 F 300.

App.] 108 SW 1003; Squilache v. Tidewater Coal & Coke Co. [W. Va.] 62 SE 446. Murhard Estats Co. v. Portland & Seattle R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 194. It is better in all cases to abstain from statement of merely abstract propositions of law, and at times it may be positive error to state them. Thompson v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 756, 106 SW 910. There should be a setting of facts to make them applicable to the case. Kelley v. Torrington, 80 Conn. 378, 68 A 855. Refusal of court to give abstract instruction works no prejudice against party asking it, hence no error in refusing it. Ong Chair Co. v. Cook, 85 Ark. 390, 108 SW 203. An instruction which states a correct abstract legal proposition applicable to case need not refer to evidence. East St. Louis R. Co. v. Gray, 135 Ill. App. 642. Giving abstract rule of law is reversible if jury was misled thereby. City of Macomb v. McDonough, 134 Ill. App. 532; Wheeler v. Milner [Wis.] 118 NW 187. Abstract propositions of law which neither give light or aid to jury to solve questions should not be given. Elgin, Joliet & Eastern R. Co. v. Lawlor, 132 Ill. App. 280; Hughes v. Hughes, 133 Ill. App. 654; Campbell v. Fierlein, 134 Ill. App. 207. The giving of an instruction containing an abstract proposition of law, not correctly applied to a case, will not reverse in absence of a showing of prejudice resulting. City of Farmington v. Wallace, 134 Ill. App. 366. Although stating abstract proposition, if it states laws with substantial accuracy is not misleading. Wallace v. Farmington, 231 Ill. 232, 83 NE 180.

37. City of Chicago v. Sutton, 136 Ill. App. 221.

40. See 10 C. L. 815. See ante, this section post, § 8.

41. Should direct attention of jury to specific issues, embracing only statements of law by which evidence on issues is to be examined and applied. Rio Grande So. R. Co. v. Campbell [Colo.] 96 P 986. It is sufficient if charge definitely explains issues and law applicable thereto. Van Orman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 152 Mich. 185, 15 Det. Leg. N. 176, 115 NW 968. In stating allegations of pleadings, charge should always give their substance correctly. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Walters [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 616, 107 SW 369. Must instruct jury in respect of what facts they must find to enable them to decide. Homberg v. Tiffany Studios, 123 App. Div. 800, 108 NYS 575. Must include all facts material to right of party. Reynolds v. Hart, 42 Colo. 150, 94 P 14; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mason, 132 Ill. App. 403.

42. Brown v. Globe Printing Co. [Mo.] 113 SW 462.

43. Phrase, "as a person should do," is unnecessary. Dyer v. McWhirter [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1053.

44. Reference to person in charge of engine in plural instead of singular is not misleading when evidence shows only that

Argumentative instructions[46] should not be given,[47] though this fault alone will not ordinarily require a reversal.[48] Repetition,[49] and not merely calling attention to certain facts in evidence necessary to a recovery,[50] may make a charge argumentative, but to determine whether it is so the whole of it must be looked to.[51]

Instructions should be consistent,[52] but they cannot be held in conflict where one explains and qualifies the other,[53] and if, reading them together, they are found to be consistent in their main scope, they will be upheld.[54]

person was in charge. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Cochran [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 261. Meaningless misuse of word "physical" for "mental," when read in connection with other instructions, not misleading. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Day [Ark.] 110 SW 220. Inadvertent misplacing of words "plaintiff" and "defendant," not misleading. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wafer [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 831, 106 SW 897. Use of word "Williamson" instead of "Williams" held not misleading. Rushing v. Lanier [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 1089. Use of word "and" instead of "or" not material as jury not misled. Selkirk v. Watkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 586, 105 SW 1161.

Hughes, 133 Ill. App. 654. Instruction telling jury that before plaintiff could recover they must find by a preponderance of evidence that defendant gave them exclusive contract to sell farm, erroneous, where whether contract was exclusive or not was of no moment, and where question was not raised on the trial. Summerville v. Klein, 140 Ill. App. 39. Instructions must be relevant to the issues. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Walker, 41 Ind. App. 588, 84 NE 730; Lindsay v. erroneous.[61] An instruction may be based on matters judicially noticed[62] or on circumstantial evidence [63] or other evidence which is not full and clear [64] or conclusive.[65]

§ 8. Stating issues to the jury.[66]—The court should submit all material issues [67] clearly [68] and fairly,[69] and this may be done in the language of the pleading,[70] or, "as set forth and claimed in some count thereof," though some counts be withdrawn, if the jury know of such withdrawal.[71] Failure to state all the issues is not waived by omission to ask for an instruction thereon,[72] but if an error is made in the statement it is the duty of counsel to call the court's attention to it.[73] The court may state what issues are made by the pleadings, as preliminary to stating what are withdrawn, and what are left for consideration,[74] but issues stated should include, or be followed immediately by, the instruction applicable thereto.[75] Where action is based on two theories, both should be submitted, if recovery may be had on either,[76] and, in submitting special issues, it may be necessary to instruct in such a way as will assist the jury in returning pertinent and intelligent answers,[77] but points answered in the negative need not be submitted,[78] nor is it necessary to construe an in-

70. See ante, § 6. Instruction may put issue to jury precisely as petition did. Flaherty v. St. Louis Transit Co., 207 Mo. 318, 106 SW 15. Where issues are simple and pleading concise, it is not prejudicial to state issues in language of pleader. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459.

71. An instruction permitting jury to render verdict for plaintiff if defendant's negligence should be found "as set forth and claimed in his declaration or some count thereof," even where some counts had been withdrawn from jury, held not erroneous where dismissal was called to jury's attention by other instructions given. Chicago City R. Co. v. Hagenback, 131 Ill. App. 537.

72. The court must state to jury all issues joined by pleadings upon which any testimony is offered, and failure to do so is not waived by omission to ask for instructions thereon. Wise v. Outtrim [Iowa] 117 NW 264.

73. If error is made in stating issues, it is duty of counsel to call court's attention to such fact so that such error may be corrected. Jones v. Parker [S. C.] 62 SE 261.

74. Court should be prompt in directing jury to issues submitted. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459.

dence and merely state the claims of the respective parties,[2] and an instruction that correctly states the law may not be objectionable.[3] Undue emphasis should not be put upon disputed [4] facts [5] and issues; [6] but an instruction which might be misleading in one state of the record may be proper in another,[7] and it is not error to state the claim of a party if the evidence is not characterized,[8] nor is the mere mention of the amount sued for condemned.[9] Where the contentions of one party are as fairly presented as those of another, there can be no ground for complaint,[10] and the fact 128 Mo. App. 362, 107 SW 418; Taplin v. Maroy [Vt.] 71 A 72; Salchert v. Reinig [Wis.] 115 NW 132; Hamann v. Milwaukee Bridge Co., 136 Wis. 39, 116 NW 854. It is error to single out and isolate testimony of designated witness and lay particular stress upon it in cases where evidence is contradictory. Hughes v. Hughes, 133 Ill. App. 654; Tanner v. Clapp, 139 Ill. App. 353; Taubert v. Taubert, 108 Minn. 247, 114 NW 763. Instruction improper which singles out testimony of a particular witness as being antagonistic to other testimony. Sangster v. Hatch, 134 Ill. App. 340. Where five different instructions were given for appellee, aimed in different ways at credibility of witnesses, where there was no occasion for so many, held error to give them. Tripoli Sav. Bank v. Schnadt, 135 Ill. App. 373.

2. Sackett v. Carroll, 80 Conn. 374, 68 A 442.

3. In action for injuries from assault by baggage master in ejecting plaintiff from truck, an instruction that if jury believe from evidence that baggage master used no more force than was reasonably necessary to remove plaintiff from premises of defendant then they should find for defendant is not open to objection that it gives undue prominence to evidence of baggage master that he used no more force than was necessary to remove plaintiff from truck. Hubbard v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 1387, 108 SW 331.

4. Galveston, etc., R., Co. v. Worth [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 772, 107 SW 958.

5. Rule violated when there is undue emphasis on certain facts. Gibler v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 129 Mo. App. 93, 107 SW 1021. Giving them special importance over other facts of equal or greater importance. Landrum v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 1000. Isolated facts unduly emphasized. Swiney v. American Exp. Co. [Iowa] 115 NW 212. Excluding all but certain facts. Condie v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. [Utah] 97 P 120; Parkersburg Nat. Bank v. Hannaman, 63 W. Va. 358, 60 SE 242. Part only of relevant facts such fact given controlling effect in determining issue. Wolf Cigar Stores Co. v. Kramer [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 990. Particular facts singled out. Funston v. Hoffman, 232 Ill. 360, 83 NE 917; Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 234 Ill. 251, 84 NE 897; Trustees of Schools v. Yoch, 133 Ill. App. 82; Wabash R. Co. v. Perkins, 137 Ill. App. 514; Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n v. Perrin, 139 Ill. App. 543; Bennett v. Knott [Ky.] 112 SW 849; McKay v. Peterson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 931. Singling out relatively unimportant matter. Froberg v. Smith [Minn.] 118 NW 57. Objectionable as improperly singling out certain occasions involved in evidence and omitting reference to others. Sangster v. Hatch, 134 Ill. App. 340. An instruction purporting to summarize principal facts, but directs attention of jury only to those favorable to one of parties, is objectionable. Tanner v. Clapp, 139 Ill. App. 353. Should not call attention of jury to the amount claimed in declaration. Conlon v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 139 Ill. App. 555.

Not violated: The nature of the case may warrant court in frequent repetition of certain facts. Floto v. Floto, 233 Ill. 605, 84 NE 712; Terry v. Davenport [Ind.] 83 NE 636. Plaintiff's injury resulting in prolapsus uteri, which is a pulling down of womb, instruction is not vicious for calling special attention to "pulling down sensation or prolapsus of womb." Saeger v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo. App.] 110 SW 686. Instruction that, "deceased being deaf and unable to hear, it was his duty to exercise great care and caution in use of his remaining senses to avoid danger from train," not objectionable as giving undue prominence to fact. Hummer's Ex'x v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 1315, 108 SW 885. In action of ejectment in which it was conceded that plaintiff had record title to land in controversy, and defense was adverse possession, instruction containing a fair synopsis of testimony relating to facts claimed to constitute adverse possession, but not referring to plaintiff's claim, held not objectionable. Scott v. Herrell, 31 App. D. C. 45.

6. Eckels v. Cooper, 136 Ill. App. 60; San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Kelleher [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 801, 107 SW 64; Buchanan v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 829, 107 SW 552. A matter sufficiently submitted in one paragraph of charge need not be submitted in a succeeding paragraph. Malone v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 430. Charge presenting each ground of negligence in separate paragraph, and limiting recovery on each to fact whether contributory negligence was proximate cause of injury, gives too much prominence to issue of contributory negligence. Huber v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 984.

7. Where particular evidence is asserted and certified to by judge, held not error to direct attention to single issue presented by pleadings and evidence. McHale v. Chicago City R. Co., 137 Ill. App. 90.

8. Schweyer v. Jones, 152 Mich. 271, 15 Det. Leg. N. 187, 115 NW 974.

9. Mentioning amount sued for, except when done in conjunction with a charge as to amount of verdict, is not condemned. El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Kelly [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 415.

that the contentions of one are stated more at length than those of another will not make the charge objectionable.[11]

§ 11. Definition of terms used.[12]—It is not error to omit definition of terms used,[13] especially where the jury has been otherwise fully instructed,[14] or the meaning of the term is well understood,[15] or no request has been made;[16] but, if a definition is given, it should be clear [17] so as to aid the jury,[18] and though perfect accuracy is not required,[19] it should be correct.[20] While it is better to do so, it is not necessary to define terms in the very language of the statute,[21] but usual definitions should be conformed to [22] and not changed.[23] In defining terms the court should take into account what the parties understood them to mean.[24]

§ 12. Rules of evidence; credibility and conflicts.[25]—Rules of evidence, such as relate to the degree of proof required [26] the burden of proof [27] and preponderance of

11. That a statement goes more at length into contentions of one party than another does not make it objectionable as giving more prominence to that side than other. Macon, D. & S. R. C. v. Joyner, 129 Ga. 683, 59 SE 902; Millen, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 130 Ga. 656, 61 SE 541.

13. O'Leary v. Kansas City, 127 Mo. App. 77, 106 SW 94. Instruction in action against railway company held not erroneous because of failure to define term "accident," instruction being to effect that no liability attached if injury was result of mere accident. Larsen v. Chicago Union Trac. Co., 131 Ill. App. 286.

14. Where jury has been otherwise fully instructed, definitions or qualifications are not necessary. Road District No. 1. v. Beebe, 231 Ill. 147, 83 NE 131.

15. Court need not define "negligence." Main v. Hall, 127 Mo. App. 713, 106 SW 1099; Landrum v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 1000. It is best not to define "reasonable time." Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Roberts [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 982. "Reasonable diligence" has no such technical meaning as to call for a definition. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Ritchey [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 732.

16. See ante, § 3, Necessity for Requests in Particular Cases. Savannah Elec. Co. v. Bennett, 130 Ga. 597, 61 SE 529; Texas Midland R. Co. v. Ritchey [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 732; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Hendricks [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 745.

17. Murphy's Ex'r v. Hoagland, 32 Ky. L. R. 839, 107 SW 303.

18. A definition that will not aid jury should be omitted. Fenton v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n [Iowa] 117 NW 251. Instruction that such waters as are navigable in fact are navigable waters, though useless as a guide to jury, not misleading. Orange Lumber Co. v. Thompson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 563.

19. Perfect accuracy is not required if jury cannot be mislead by definition as given. West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Boal, 232 Ill. 248, 83 NE 824. The use of the term "reasonable care" instead of "ordinary care" in defining negligence will not invalidate judgment. Spaulding v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 129 Mo. App. 607, 107 SW 1049.

20. Should correctly state definitions. Alabama City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bullard [Ala.] 47 S 578; Wheeler v. Milner [Wis.] 118 NW 187. It is error in charge of court to so define weight of evidence as to exclude documentary evidence, or to define preponderance of evidence as other than that evidence which determines conclusions which must be reached. Cincinnati Gas & Elec. Co. v. Coffelder, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 289. See post, § 12.

21. Stoker v. Fugitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 310.

22. It is best to conform to usual definitions laid down by text-writers and decisions. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Roberts [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 982.

23. Any change in definition of "ordinary care" is condemned. J. M. Guffey Petroleum Co. v. Jeff Chaison Townsite Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 609.

24. Ryley-Wilson Grocer Co. v. Seymour Canning Co., 129 Mo. App. 325, 108 SW 628.

25. See 10 C. L. 327. See, also, ante, § 5.

26. Instruction in civil actions requiring proof on part of plaintiff to such extent as to remove all doubt from minds of jury, erroneous. Reynolds v. Wray, 135 Ill. App. 527. In action on contract it is error to instruct that party must conclusively show violation of contract, since preponderance of evidence is measure of proof in civil cases. Works v. Hill [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 581. Defense of suicide should be established by clear and satisfactory proof, such as is required to establish fraud, and not merely by preponderance of evidence. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057.

27. Rule as to burden of proof should be stated clearly so as not to mislead jury. Keller v. Harrison [Iowa] 116 NW 327. Must not put burden of proof on wrong party. Bevis v. Vanceburg Tel. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 811; Orcutt v. Century Bldg. Co. [Mo.] 112 SW 532; Herring v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 977; El Paso Elec. R. Co. v. Kelly [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 415; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Conuteson [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 187; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Welbourne [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 780; Huber v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 984. Instructions for one party to an action need not state where burden of proof rests; it is sufficient if from all instructions given jury is told upon whom it is. Ducharme v. St. Peter, 135 Ill. App. 530. When phrase "burden of proof" is used to mean evidence,[28] must be correctly stated.[29] Demonstration is never required,[30] and it is within the discretion of the court to charge as to the relative weight of affirmative and negative testimony.[31]

The credibility of witnesses. See 10 C. L. 327—Though the credibility of witnesses is for the jury,[32] and the court can hardly err in refusing instructions thereon,[33]

other than obligation on party who asserts affirmative of issue to prove same by preponderance of evidence, senss in which such word is used should be clearly indicated, hence, where burden throughout was on plaintiff to show negligence, instruction containing "then burden of proof is upon defendant of showing that injury was not due to negligence" held erroneous, no explanation being made of use of term "burden of proof." Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Myers, 134 Ill. App. 61. Instruction shifting from plaintiff burden of proving defendant's negligence is erroneous. Continental Ins. Co. v. New York Gas. Elec. L., H. & P. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1006. Instruction requiring plaintiff to "prove every material allegation of the case" erroneous as substantially requiring not only proof of allegations but disproof of contentions interposed in defense. Kidd v. White, 138 Ill. App. 107. General charge placing burden of proof to show contributory negligence upon defendant is susceptible to construction of imposing duty of discharging that burden by evidence offered by defendant alone. The better practice is to guard against such construction, and so frame charge upon that issue as to permit jury to take into consideration all testimony admitted, both of plaintiff and defendant, in determining whether or not contributory negligence has been shown. Suderman v. Kriger [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 373.

28. When not erroneous: Use of phrase "if you find from the evidence" and not from "preponderance of the evidence" held not ground for complaint, one being equivalent to other. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warriner, 132 Ill. App. 301; Ducharme v. St. Peter, 135 Ill. App. 530. In action for personal injuries instruction "if you find from evidence that plaintiff has made out her case by a preponderance of evidence as alleged in declaration, then jury should find defendant guilty," approved. City of Chicago v. Carlson, 138 Ill. App. 582. Instruction telling jury that if they believe evidence bearing upon plaintiff's case preponderated in his favor, although but slightly, it would be sufficient to warrant verdict in his favor, held not erroneous. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Fowler, 138 Ill. App. 352. Instruction that burden was on plaintiff to prove case by a perponderance of evidence and that slight perponderance was sufficient, held proper. City of Chicago v. Sullivan, 139 Ill. App. 675. In quasi criminal prosecution for violating ordinance prohibiting sale of liquors, instruction requiring a "clear preponderance of evidence" not erroneous. City of Waverly v. Goss, 138 Ill. App. 68. Instruction, "preponderance of evidence in a case is not necessarily alone determined by number of witnesses testifying to a particular fact or state of facts" not objectionable. Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. v. Lawlor, 132 Ill. App. 280. As to the above holding, compare Tripoli Sav. Bank v. Schnadt, 135 Ill. App. 373, post, under When Erroneous. Court may instruct as to what constitutes preponderance of evidence. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Gates, 137 Ill. App. 309.

When erroneous: Instruction should not require a preponderance of evidence in civil cases. McBride v. Sullivan [Ala.] 45 S 902. As plaintiff is entitled to recover on establishing material allegations by preponderance of evidence, it is error to qualify "preponderance" by word "fair." Cowans v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 403. Instruction requiring evidence to preponderate in favor of plaintiff as to all allegations of declaration erroneous, preponderance on all material allegations sufficient. Ames v. Thren, 136 Ill. App. 568. Instruction on preponderance of evidence must not wholly omit number of witnesses, as where number is important and stands in ratio of one to ten. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 139 Ill. App. 378. Instruction upon preponderance of evidence, omitting from consideration of jury number of witnesses testifying, held properly refused. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n v. Perrin, 139 Ill. App. 543. An instruction "that preponderance of evidence in a case is not alone determined by number of witnesses testifying to a particular fact or state of facts" erroneous. Tripoli Sav. Bank v. Schnadt, 135 Ill. App. 373. As to the above holding, compare Elgin J. & E. R. Co. v. Lawlor, 132 Ill. App. 280. Ante, under When not Erroneous. Instruction to jury that they are at "liberty to decids that preponderance of evidence is on the side which in their judgment is sustained by more intelligent and better informed, more credible and more disinterested witnesses, whether a greater or smaller number," held erroneous. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Wirkus, 131 Ill. App. 485.

30. Instruction that jury are bound to presume divorce from first husband before second marriage contracted, unless it is conclusively proved by positive testimony that no divorce had been granted before second marriage, requires demonstration and excludes from evidence all circumstances to show no divorce had been granted. 33. Court can hardly err in refusing instructions designed to influence jury as to credit to be given a particular witness.

yet, charges on the subject may be given in proper cases,[84] but when given they need not refer to perjury of a witness.[85]

Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus See 10 C. L. 830 may be applied when justified,[86]

Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 234 Ill. 251, 84 NE 897.

34. See ante, § 10.

When proper: May instruct to consider interest, intelligence, means of knowledge of witnesses, reasonableness of their statement, and extent to which corroborated by other witnesses. Hoskovec v. Omaha St. R. Co. [Neb.] 115 NW 312. Where decision in a party's favor depends largely upon weight to be given his own evidence, it is proper to instruct jury to consider his interest and motive for testifying favorably to himself. Blankavag v. Badger Box & Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 380, 117 NW 852. Refusal to give instruction informing jury that in weighing evidence of plaintiff they could determine credence to be given it, and take into consideration that he was interested in result of suit, held error. Maxwell v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 140 Ill. App. 156. Instruction to effect that jury in weighing plaintiff's testimony had right to take into consideration fact that plaintiff was interested in result of suit held not error. Larsen v. Chicago Union Trac. Co., 131 Ill. App. 286. No error in giving charge that "jury are sole judges of weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses, and where testimony is conflicting it is your duty to reconcile it, if you can, upon theory that such witnesses have sworn to truth; but if you cannot do so, then you are privileged to discard so much or such parts of it as you deem unworthy of credit." Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Beazley [Fla.] 45 S 761. Failure of court to instruct jury that inconsistent statements, which are not substantive evidence, may be considered by them only for purpose of affecting credibility of witness, constitutes error. Owensboro City R. Co. v. Allen, 32 Ky. L. R. 1353, 108 SW 357. Where plaintiff admitted having testified differently at former trial, it is error to refuse to instruct that in arriving at credibility jury may consider that at previous trial evidence was materially different. Clammer v. Eddy, 41 Colo. 235, 92 P 722. Instruction that alibi, when established, furnishes best of defenses, but jury must examine such evidence carefully, does not suggest doubt of credibility of witness. Harris v. Neal [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 369, 116 NW 535. Court may instruct that witness can be impeached by general bad "moral" character (Sparks v. Bedford [Ga. App.] 60 SE 809), or by disproving facts testified to by him, nor will the mere enumeration of other modes of impeachment require new trial (Farkas v. Brown [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1014).

When improper: Must not designate any one witness and characterize him as the one credible witness. Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co. v. Pfaelzer, 133 Ill. App. 346. Where plaintiff was only witness on his own behalf and was contradicted by several other witnesses, following instruction is erroneous: The testimony of one credible witness may be entitled to more weight than testimony of many other witnesses if, as to other witnesses, you have reason to believe from evidence that they have knowingly testified untruthfully as to any material matter in issue, and are not corroborated by other evidence which you believe to be credible. Id. It is improper to single out a particular witness, whether a party or not, call attention to his interest as inducement to false testimony, and tell jury to be careful how they give credence to his testimony. Stetzler v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 210 Mo. 704, 109 SW 666. It is error to say of interested witness' testimony that if it militates against him it is to be set down as truth, but if in his favor it is to be scrutinized with care. Id. When both parties were witnesses, held error to single out one and to direct attention of jury to situation and interest of such party in result of suit without making reference to situation and interest of other. Sangster v. Hatch, 134 Ill. App. 340. Improper to instruct if plaintiff, through ignorance or mistake, made statement against interest, jury bound to take it as absolutely true, whether true or not. Huff v. St. Joseph R. L. H. & P. Co. [Mo.] 111 SW 1145. Instruction on credibility of witnesses properly refused, using phrase "circumstances appearing on the trial" instead of "circumstances appearing in evidence." Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n v. Perrin, 139 Ill. App. 543. In an action against railroad for negligent burning, witness for plaintiff testifying as to value of property destroyed and that he had rendered it for taxation, instruction directing jury to consider testimony as to assessed value of property only in passing upon credibility of witness is erroneous. Bryan Press Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 99. An instruction permitting jury to pass upon credibility of witnesses by means of a consideration, among other things, of all "other circumstances appearing on trial" is of doubtful propriety. Ames v. Thren, 136 Ill. App. 568. The case may make it proper to refuse to instruct "that evidence of party introduced cannot be absolutely discarded or disregarded, and should not be unless evidence introduced discredits or contradicts it. In that event you should give such weight to such party's evidence as you think it deserves. You should not disregard evidence of any witness which is not discredited either by evidence or circumstances." Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Mote [Ga.] 62 SE 164.

35. Instructions calling attention of jury to various elements which might properly be considered in weighing testimony, and as affecting credibility of witnesses, need not specifically refer to perjury of witness. Murphy v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 390.

36. See ante, this section, The Credibility of Witnesses.

When proper: May instruct jury to disregard a witness' testimony where he had intentionally told a falsehood. Gorman v. Fitts, 80 Conn. 531, 69 A 357. Instruction but this is largely in the discretion of the court,[37] nor is the doctrine applicable to witnesses other than those who have knowingly or willfully sworn falsely.[38]

§ 13. Admonitory and cautionary instructions.[See 10 C. L. 330]—The court may, within its discretion,[39] give admonitory instructions.[40]

§ 14. Necessity of instructing in writing.[41]—The power, when it exists, to submit oral instructions, should be cautiously exercised,[42] and though, where no prejudice results, that the jury were instructed orally will not work a reversal,[43] unless waived,[44] if the statute require it they must be in writing;[45] but in the absence of evidence to the contrary it will be presumed they were written.[46] While the presence of a stenographer taking the proceedings will not relieve the court of the duty to instruct in writing,[47] the charge, if taken by a stenographer employed by both parties, is in writing within the meaning of the statute.[48] that if jury believe under all evidence any any witness has knowingly and willfully testified falsely to any material fact they may disregard whole of his testimony, or give it such weight on other points as they may think proper, and tells them they are exclusive judges of weight of testimony, is proper. Cobb v. Dunlevie, 63 W. Va. 398, 60 SE 384. May instruct that "if jury are reasonably satisfied from evidence that any one or more witnesses in case willfully swore falsely in any material particular in case they are authorized to reject testimony of that witness, or those witnesses entirely." Kress v. Lawrence [Ala.] 47 S 574. It is proper to instruct that if a certain witness is of bad reputation for truth and veracity that fact tends to discredit his testimony, and it may be entirely disregarded except in so far as corroborated. Johnson v. Johnson [Neb.] 115 NW 323.

When improper: Instruction telling jury to disregard testimony of any witness who has "knowingly testified untruthfully" is erroneous. Clark v. O'Gara Coal Co., 140 Ill. App. 207. Instruction directing jury to disregard testimony of a witness if it is believed that witness has been guilty of exaggeration improper. McDonnell v. Chicago City R. Co., 131 Ill. App. 227; Crane Co. v. Hogan, 131 Ill. App. 314. Instruction that omits word "credible" before "evidence," in telling jury they may disbelieve all evidence that has not been corroborated. Blankavag v. Badger Box & Lumber Co., 136 Wis. 380, 117 NW 852. An instruction telling jury "you are not bound to believe anything to be a fact because a witness has stated it to be so, provided you believe from all evidence that such witness is mistaken or has knowingly testified falsely," is erroneous in that it omits words "in a matter material to issue, except in so far as he has been corroborated by other credible evidence," etc. Tripoli Sav. Bank v. Schnadt, 135 Ill. App. 373. Instruction to disregard evidence of witness who has sworn falsely is erroneous if it does not limit such false testimony to material fact. Lloyd v. Meservey, 129 Mo. App. 636, 108 SW 595. Since jury cannot entirely disregard testimony which is wholly or partly contradicted by or at variance with that produced by other party, unless facts testified to are material to issue and witness has willfully or designedly testified falsely, an instruction to disregard evidence if witness had misrepresented or tried to evade in any way questions put to him is erroneous. Tucker v. Dudley, 111 NYS 700.

37. Instructions to disregard testimony of a witness who has sworn falsely are largely within discretion of trial court. Lloyd v. Meservey, 129 Mo. App. 636, 108 SW 595.

39. District of Columbia v. Durgee, 29 App. D. C. 327.

40. Courts may instruct juries to effect that fact that plaintiff is individual and defendant a corporation should not be considered in making up verdict, and same should be made up solely on evidence and on law as declared in instructions. Huss v. Heydt Bakery Co., 210 Mo. 44, 108 SW 63. Court may caution jury to consider evidence only for purpose of determining what weight should be given opinions of witnesses. Raapke & Katz Co. v. Schmoeller & Mueller Piano Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 652. Not error in personal injury case, after properly instructing jury in charge as to measure of damages, to state that there can be no recovery in excess of amount claimed in declaration. District of Columbia v. Durgee, 29 App. D. C. 327.

44. Such presumption obtains where it appears oral instructions were given and failure to except specially on that ground, and where record shows that exception only went to substance, and not method, of instruction. Village of Franklin Park v. Franklin, 231 Ill. 380, 83 NE 214.

45. If statute requires, instruction must be in writing. Daily v. Boudreau, 231 Ill. 228, 83 NE 218. It is reversible error to instruct orally, over objections. Tyler v. McKenzie, 43 Colo. 233, 95 P 943. Provision requiring instructions in writing when requested is mandatory. McIntosh v. Sawmill Phoenix [Wash.] 94 P 930.

§ 15. Presentation of instructions.[See 10 C. L. 331]—There is no prescribed way in which the judge is to announce to the jury the giving of a requested instruction in writing.[49]

§ 16. Additional instructions after retirement.[50]—After retirement of the jury, the court may, within its discretion,[51] give additional instructions,[52] and while it is the better practice to have council present when such instructions are given,[53] if they merely urge the jury to agree and are not on a point of law neither a party nor his counsel need be present or have notice of the proceeding.[54] Such instructions must not be erroneous and misleading,[55] must not tell the jury the verdict is insufficient in amount,[56] nor impress upon them that the necessity of agreement will justify a compromise with conscience.[57]

Recalling instructions.[See 10 C. L. 331]—At any time before the jury is discharged, the court may withdraw erroneous instructions,[58] but not orally.[59]

§ 17. Review. Objections and exceptions below.[60]

The record on appeal.[61]

Invited error.[62]

Harmless error.[63]

Instructions must be considered as a whole.[64]—Putting emphasis where it properly belongs,[65] and assuming that the jury gave due consideration to them,[66] instruc-

49. It is not reversible error for judge to say, orally, after reading it, "this charge is given at request of defendant," or plaintiff, as case may be. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Cleland [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 SW 122.

50. See 10 C. L. 331. See ante, § 3, Time of Making Request.

51. Where ample time has been had to present charges, it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to give instructions after retirement of jury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Walters [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 616, 107 SW 369.

52. After retirement, court may further instruct jury to give further deliberation to case for purpose of reaching an agreement if possible. Burton v. Neill [Iowa] 118 NW 302.

53. Traders' & Truckers' Bank v. Black [Va.] 60 SE 743.

54. Burton v. Neill [Iowa] 118 NW 302.

55. Where evidence authorized jury to adopt a compromise line and case was so submitted to jury, verdict finding compromise boundary line was proper, and refusal of court to accept verdict and charge that case was not submitted on special issues, that verdict was not responsive to issues submitted, and they must find verdict for plaintiffs and defendants, erroneous and misleading, and reversible error where jury in consequence of additional charge found for plaintiff. Thatcher v. Matthews [Tex. Civ. App.] 105 SW 1006.

56. After verdict, while court may require jury to reconsider, it cannot instruct that verdict is insufficient and to bring in one for larger amount. Paff v. Union R. Co., 110 NYS 145.

57. After jury out 20 hours, it is error to instruct that they could decide case as well as anybody else; to say not is to say another jury cannot do it; that justice will be defeated in the end if that is so, as you understand; that it is almost a necessity that you come to conclusion; that in coming to that conclusion it is give and take argument you make; that you are not to report 12 individual verdicts; that you are to give verdict which on principal of give and take represents consensus verdict of you as a unit, as body of men. 58. Broadstreet v. McKamey, 41 Ind. App. 272, 83 NE 773. Statement that if defect existed at time of lease and defendant knew it then or subsequently, he would be liable to pedestrian for injury, may be withdrawn in so far as it permits recovery simply by reason of knowledge acquired after letting. Hill v. Hayes, 199 Mass. 411, 85 NE 434.

68. Charge will be considered as a whole, dealing with different instructions in relation to each other. Stratton Cripple Creek Min. & Development Co. v. Ellison, 42 Colo. 498, 94 P 303; Sterling v. Frick [Ind.] 86 NE 65. Propriety or impropriety of instruction or part of instruction is determined by consideration of all instructions and charges given in connection with questioned instruction and proven facts. Florala Sawmill Co. v. Smith [Fla.] 46 S 332.

69. While, if considered as abstract propositions, instructions may be erroneous, yet, if considered in connection in which used, they may be sufficiently limited, in their application, and in such way as not to mislead jury. Barclay v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 48 Wash. 241, 93 P 430. Instruction must be construed as a part of and in connection with entire charge, in light of all facts and circumstances adduced in evidence. Southern Pac. Co. v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 202, 106 SW 441. Read as a whole and considered in light of evidence and subject-matter of suit, and not tested by resolving them into their various elements and then attacking each component part separately. Atchison v. McKinnie, 233 Ill. 106, 84 NE 208.

70. Where instructions, when taken as a series, correctly state law, error in one no ground for reversal. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Turck, 131 Ill. App. 128; City of Rock Island v. Larkin, 136 Ill. App. 579; Suttle v. Brown, 137 Ill. App. 438; Chess v. Grant [C. C. A.] 163 F 500. Though instruction ambiguous, if qualified by others so as to

Curing error in instructions.[73]—Erroneous instructions are presumed prejudicial,[74] but they may usually be cured by the giving of correct ones,[75] especially where the error is slight[76] or consists in incompleteness,[77] omissions[78] or a tendency to make it apparent jury not misled, and charge as a whole correctly defines law, it is sufficient. Ault v. Nebraska Tel. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 73. That some instructions are incomplete, not covering entire case, not reversible where series states law with substantial accuracy. Varney v. Taylor, 133 Ill. App. 154. It is a familiar rule that in reviewing a charge it will be examined as a whole. While one or more paragraphs standing alone may be inaccurate or even prejudicially erroneous, yet, if they are qualified and explained by other portions of charge in pari materia, and, taken together with them and rest of charge, fully and fairly submit case to jury, verdict and judgment should be sustained. Harrington v. Butte A. & P. R. Co., 36 Mont. 478, 93 P 640.

71. Must be considered as a series, and may supplement each other, but there must be such harmony between them as that jury will not be misled. Funston v. Hoffman, 232 Ill. 360, 83 NE 917.

72. Considered as a whole, and if, when taken together, law correctly given, will not be reversed, though single instruction alone might seem incorrect. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Wood [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1009. Even though one single instruction standing alone is misleading, a reversal will not follow if all considered together are correct in law and free from conflict. Page v. Smith, 139 Ill. App. 441. Must be read as a whole, and when so read, if they are not contradictory, and are supplementary to each other, and fairly state law, case will not be reversed because any one instruction does not state all the rule, with its modifications. De Witt v. Floriston Pulp & Paper Co. [Cal. App.] 96 P 397. When considered as a whole, if they fairly and fully state law applicable to evidence, giving them is not error, although detatched sentences or separate charges considered alone might be erroneous or misleading. Barrow v. Lewis Lumber Co., 14 Idaho, 698, 95 P 682. If, when so considered, they are not misleading and announce correct propositions of law, there will not be a reversal because a single paragraph thereof deals with but a part of proposition presented. Montrose Sav. Bank v. Clausen, 137 Iowa, 73, 114 NW 547; Hawkins v. Young, 137 Iowa, 281, 114 NW 1041. Instructions held proper taken as a series, where if one had been sole one in cause it might have been objectionable as misleading and erroneous as applied to facts. Chicago City R. Co. v. Ratner, 133 Ill. App. 628.

73. See 10 C. L. 333. See ante, this section.

74. Abney v. Indiana Union Trac. Co., 41 Ind. App. 53, 83 NE 387. Where, after all instructions are read as a whole, it is still apparent that a false doctrine was injected into the case, court will assume that jury misled by error. Hovey v. Aaron [Mo. App.] 113 SW 718. It will not do to say instruction was harmless because defendant asked for and obtained instruction setting forth its version of law applicable to facts dealt with in instruction given for plaintiff over objection of defendant. Southern R. Co. v. Hansbrough's Adm'x, 107 Va. 733, 60 SE 58.

Trinity & B. V. R. Co. v. Bradshaw [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 618; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 638; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Hawkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 736.

76. Instruction, that testator must have been "wholly influenced," cured by others using term "unduly influenced." Hitt v. Terry [Miss.] 46 S 829. Instruction, authorizing jury to assess such damages as they think plaintiff entitled to, cured by another authorizing them to award such damages as testimony warrants. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Magee [Miss.] 46 S 716. Error in defining contributory negligence may be cured by a paragraph applying law to facts, and pointing out specifically facts, if found true, upon which plaintiff could be found guilty of contributory negligence. Thompson v. Planters' Compress Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 106 SW 470.

77. The rule that erroneous instructions cannot be cured by correct ones does not apply where former were not complete statements of law and latter are. Gimnich Furniture Mfg. Co. v. Sorensen [Utah] 96 P 121. Instruction at most incomplete in not directing any consideration to instruction held remedied by another directing such consideration. East St. Louis & S. R. Co. v. Zink, 133 Ill. App. 127. Instruction stating law incorrectly is seldom remedied by one stating it correctly. But where instruction states law correctly as far as it goes, being merely insufficient, ambiguous or uncertain, defect may be cured by other instructions on same specific subject embraced in charge. Stratton Cripple Creek Mining & Development Co. v. Ellison, 42 Colo. 498, 94 P 303.

78. Omissions of one may be supplied by contents of another. East St. Louis & S. R. Co. v. Zink, 133 Ill. App. 127; East St. Louis & S. R. Co. v. Kath, 133 Ill. App. 107; Colbeck v. Sampsell, 140 Ill. App. 566. Where instruction, ambiguous or standing alone, is erroneous for omissions, it may be cured by another that is clear on ambiguous or omitted point. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. Where instruction given is incomplete but states law correctly as far as it goes, and omitted part is supplied by other instructions given, such omission is not reversible error. Truckers' Manufacturing & Supply Co. v. White [Va.] 60 SE 630. Use of phrase "if you believe from mislead.[79] A cure may also be effected by a direct statement by the court to the jury [80] or by withdrawing the charge,[81] but where the instructions are conflicting [82] and it cannot be said by which the jury were influenced,[83] charges clearly wrong are not cured because correct ones on the same subject were given,[84] nor can an erroneous instruction be cured by another with which it has no relation [85] nor which neither modifies nor refers to it.[86]

the evidence" instead of phrase "if you believe from a preponderence of the evidence," though objectionable, held not prejudicial error where in other instructions jury was told that a preponderance of evidence was necessary. East St. Louis & S. R. Co. v. Zink, 133 Ill. App. 127. Instruction ignoring a question may be cured by another properly submitting it to jury. Lange v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 208 Mo. 458, 106 SW 660.

79. A misleading instruction may be cured by a correct one given on court's own motion. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Walker, 41 Ind. App. 588, 84 NE 730.

80. Cucciarre v. New York, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 38; Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. v. Overfield, 32 Ky. L. R. 421, 106 SW 242.

81. Abney v. Indiana Union Trac. Co., 41 Ind. App. 53, 83 NE 387.

82. One instruction does not cure another when they are in conflict. Fowler v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 234 Ill. 619, 85 NE 298. Erroneous instruction is not cured by another which is contradictory in terms. Burton's Adm'r v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 442; Huff v. St. Joseph Ry., L., H. & P. Co. [Mo.] 111 SW 1145; Cobb v. Dunlevie, 63 W. Va. 398, 60 SE 384. Instruction free from ambiguity, but affirmatively erroneous, is not cured by contradiction contained in another instruction. McDivitt v. Des Moines City R. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 459. One instruction not cured by another which allows jury to apply conflicting principles of law at their discretion. Blumberg v. Sterling Bronze Co., 56 Misc. 477, 107 NYS 142. Where instructions of successful party state erroneous rule of law and those of defeated party state rule correctly, latter do not cure former. Ross v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 9. An inaccurate instruction will not be cured by a correct one where the two are contradictory and the contradiction pertains to a material matter. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Turck, 131 Ill. App. 128. An instruction placing burden on one party is not corrected by a charge placing it on both parties at once. Jackman v. Inman, 134 Wis. 297, 114 NW 489.

83. One instruction will not cure another when it is impossible to say by which jury was influenced. Alabama City, etc., R. Co. v. Bullard [Ala.] 47 S 578; Doyle v. Kavanaugh [Ark.] 112 SW 889; Kath v. East St. Louis & S. R. Co., 232 Ill. 126, 83 NE 533.

84. Instruction clearly wrong cannot be cured by one giving correct rule, and it is impossible to say which one jury followed. Kath v. East St. Louis & S. R. Co., 232 Ill. 126, 83 NE 533; Ratner v. Chicago City R. Co., 233 Ill. 169, 84 NE 201. A misstatement of law contained in one instruction is not cured by a correct statement of the law in another instruction. Sloan v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 140 Ill. App. 31. An erroneous instruction purporting to state elements which, if proved, will warrant a verdict for a party cannot be cured by any other instructions. City of Chicago v. Fields, 139 Ill. App. 250. Instruction erroneously assuming a fact is not cured by one putting it in issue. Haynor v. Excelsior Springs, L. P., H. & W. Co., 129 Mo. App. 691, 108 SW 580. An instruction that assumes existence of controverted fact not cured by giving proper instruction. Glover v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 129 Mo. App. 563, 108 SW 105. Instruction ignoring doctrine of assumed risk held not cured by another giving doctrine. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 136 Ill. App. 281. Instruction that one becomes passenger because of his attempt and intent, if known to conductor, not cured by one stating that acceptance was necessary to make him passenger. Alabama City, etc., R. Co. v. Bates [Ala.] 46 S 776. Instruction that, if company, by acts of omission, commission or negligence, placed obstructions at or near track so as to be dangerous to trains it might reasonably expect to come along, whatever consequences that follow acts, it is liable, not cured, by instructing that if company was guilty of act of negligence in placing obstruction where it did, without taking proper precautions to warn trains, it is responsible. Draper v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 124 App. Div. 351, 108 NYS 686. Instruction as to care required of municipality erroneous in that it requires more than exercise of care required by law not cured by another correctly stating law. City of Lincoln v. Heinzel, 134 Ill. App. 439. Defect in one instruction on credibility of witness held not cured by correct statement in another. Tripoli Sav. Bk. v. Schnadt, 135 Ill. App. 373.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[87]

§ 1. Insurance laws, regulations and supervision in general. See 10 C. L. 336—The state may regulate insurance companies either under its police power for the protection of the public or as a controller of corporations generally.[88] It may, through its legislature, prescribe standard forms of policies,[89] or require policies to contain prescribed provisions [90] or to be executed in a specified manner.[91] Insurers may be required to submit forms of policies for the inspection and approval of the insurance commissioner,[92] and may be punished for using policy forms not approved by the commissioner or by the court on review of his action.[93] Among other regulations are such as pertain to the incorporation of insurance concerns,[94] investments,[95] con-

87. Matters relating generally to agency (see Agency, 11 C. L. 60), corporations, domestic and foreign (see Corporations, 11 C. L. 810; Foreign Corporations, 11 C. L. 1508), indemnity bonds (see Indemnity, 11 C. L. 1892), marine insurance (see Shipping and Water Traffic, 10 C. L. 1655), and insurance contracts of fraternal benefit associations (see Fraternal Mutual Benefit Associations, 11 C. L. 1564), are excluded.

88. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410.

89. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410. For questions as to compliance with prescribed forms, see post, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

90. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410. For statutory requirements, see post, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

91. For right to combine more than one class of insurance in one policy, see post, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity. For effect of requirements that application or other matters be attached to policy, see post, § 7, subd. Construction.

92. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410. St. 1907, p. 895, c. 576, § 75, prescribing provisions for policies, requiring submission of forms to insurance commissioner, authorizing him to determine their compliance with the law, and, if he objects, giving company right to sue for determination of the question, held not unconstitutional for conferring on insurance commissioner authority to pass on forms (Id.), or on ground that it provides for review by court of action of commissioner (Id.). Insurance commissioner in examining form of policies under St. 1907, p. 895, c. 576, § 75, is authorized to consider matters of substance entering therein, and is not limited to form of policy in other particulars. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 181, 85 NE 407.

93. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410.

95. Carrying out proposed merger involving exchange of shares in constituent companies for shares in merged company, so far as affecting life insurance company owning tracts with employes[96] expenditures in procuring new business,[97] the medical examination of applicants for insurance,[98] discriminations and rebates,[99] and the filing of annual reports.[1] A superintendent of insurance cannot exercise judicial powers not expressly conferred upon him.[2]

§ 2. Corporations and associations doing an insurance business. A. Corporate existence, character, management, rights and liabilities.[3]—Insurance companies are generally of three kinds, namely, stock, mutual and mixed.[4] A stock insurance company is one wherein the stockholders contribute all the capital, pay the losses and take the profits.[5] In a mutual company the members are both insurers and insured, contribute by assessments toward a fund for liabilities and divide profits in proportion to their interest.[6] A mixed company has the characteristics of both stock and mutual companies.[7] Matters relating to the incorporation[8] and mutualization of companies,[9] the eligibility of directors,[10] stock subscriptions,[11] the amendment of by-shares in constituent companies acquired by expenditure of money, made when not prohibited by law, held not violative of Insurance Law, § 100, and Laws 1906, p. 797, c. 326, prohibiting life insurance companies from investing in stock of any but municipal corporations. Morse v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 124 App. Div. 235, 108 NYS 986.

96. Insurance Law 1892, p. 1971, c. 690, § 89, prohibiting certain insurance companies from making contracts with employes for more than 12 months, was re-enacted and continued by Laws 1906, c. 326, § 84. Akens v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 112 NYS 254. For right of agent to recover under prohibited contract, see post, § 4C.

97. Insurance Law, § 97 (Laws 1906, p. 794, c. 326, § 33), limiting amount life insurance companies may pay to procure new business, held not retroactive. Boswell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 86 NE 532.

98. Issuance of policy of life insurance, where insured has not satisfactorily passed medical examination by duly authorized physician, is prohibited by express provisions of Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 4713. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

99. As to premiums, see post, § 8. As to effect on policies, see post, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

1. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3084, subd. 7, relating to what shall be continued in annual reports of fire insurance companies, is superseded by Laws 1907, p. 482, c. 18, § 8, requiring companies to report "gross amount of premiums received in the state," in so far as the two acts are in conflict. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Love [Tex.] 108 SW 810. D. C. Code, § 647, requiring companies "hereinbefore mentioned" to make financial statements, held not applicable to domestic companies. American Home Life Ins. Co. v. Drake, 30 App. D. C. 263. Laws 1901, c. 52, § 11, requiring corporations in general to file with secretary of state reports as to capital stock, and making officers and directors liable for failure to file such reports, held inapplicable to mutual fire insurance company, statute not applying to corporations not for pecuniary profits. Steck v. Prentice, 43 Colo. 17, 95 P 552. See, also, Corporations, 11 C. L. 810.

2. Superintendent of Insurance of District of Columbia has no power to make and enforce interpretation of laws relating to insurance companies, agents or brokers, power being judicial one for the courts. Drake v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 312.

3. See 10 C. L. 336. See, also, Corporations, 11 C. L. 810.

4. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

5, 6. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68. Contracts of assessment association with certain classes of members, whereby each class was to pay a level rate, held not to make association an ordinary life insurance company, where right was reserved to increase rates of assessments. Trisler v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 128 Mo. App. 497, 106 SW 1082.

7. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

8. "Live stock insurance company" incorporated under Rev. St. 1895, art. 642, subd. 46, to operate on mutual or co-operative plan without capital stock, held not a "mutual relief association" within art. 3096, providing that nothing in the title shall apply to mutual relief associations. State v. Burgess [Tex.] 109 SW 922, rvg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 573, 107 SW 366. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3028, requiring submission of articles of incorporation to attorney general, construed in connection with other legislation, and held to apply to all insurance companies except those excluded by art. 3096. Id. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3029, simply prescribes amount of capital stock necessary for stock companies and does not limit general provisions of art. 3028 to stock or any other class of companies. Id.

9. Laws 1906, c. 826, providing for conferring on policy holders of life insurance companies right to vote for directors, held constitutional, and mutualization of Equitable Life Assurance Society held legally carried out as per provisions and conditions of said act. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 57 Misc. 417, 108 NYS 67.

10. Charter of Equitable Life Assurance Society, in so far as it provided for election of directors who should be holders of five shares of stock, was subject to reserved power of legislature to alter and amend, as provided by state constitution, and was amended by Stock Corporation Law of 1892, p. 1828, c. 688, § 22, providing that policy holders of insurance corporations shall be eligible to election as directors. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 57 Misc. 417, 108 NYS 67. Policy holders not stockholders held eligible to appointment to fill vacancies. Id.

11. Under Insurance Law, §§ 110, 112, incorporators of insurance companies become a corporation before stock subscriptions are laws,[12] and the kind of insurance that may be written,[13] are usually regulated by statute or charter. A company with charter power to write insurance on different plans may discontinue a plan at any time unless prohibited by agreement with its policyholders.[14] Whether one's membership in an indemnity exchange has been withdrawn may depend upon the provisions of the subscription agreement.[15]

A company is responsible for mismanagement and misappropriations in violation of its contracts with certificate holders,[16] and for such wrongs a receiver may be appointed on application of the proper persons,[17] or the company may be restrained from unlawfully changing the securities in which funds are required to be invested.[18] When other adequate relief can be granted for alleged wrongs and there has been no invited, and hence such subscriptione are invalid unless 10 per cent. is paid in cash as required by Stock Corporation Law, § 41 (Laws 1892, p. 1835, c. 688). Van Schaick v. Mackin, 113 NYS 408.

12. Insurance Law N. Y., Laws 1892, p. 2013, c. 690, § 209, requiring mutual companies to cause amendments to by-laws to be mailed to members so as to give them at least 5 days' notice of time and place of consideration, amounts to requirement that reasonable notice be given, and 5 days is not reasonable where amendments are complicated and members scattered over United States and foreign countries. Robinson v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 159 F 564.

13. Mutual fire insurance companies organized under provisions of Sess. Laws 1897, c. 45, p. 257, are not impliedly authorized to transact a reinsurance business. Allison v. Fidelity Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 274. Reinsurance company held not estopped to plead ultra vires in suit to recover assessments on policies of reinsurance. Id. Act March 11, 1867 (Laws 1867, p. 150, c. 71), authorizing reinsurance of life insurance risks, applies to life insurance companies generally, and should be construed together with Act March 9, 1897 (Laws 1897, p. 381, c. 195), consistent with earlier statute and recognizing and limiting right to reinsure. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Kerr [Ind. App.] 85 NE 796. Where transferee of insurer's business notified policy holders that their policies would be continued on same terms, it would not be presumed in action on a policy that transferee had no power to insure on terms indicated. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Ross [Ind.] 86 NE 506.

14. Insurance company authorized by charter to write insurance on other than "safety fund" plan, and not under promise to certificate holders not to issue policies on other plans or to continue to issue safety fund certificates, held entitled to discontinue issuing such certificates against protest of holders. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39. Company's motives immaterial. Id.

15. Subscription agreement by members of an indemnity exchange considered, and held that withdrawal of members thereunder was not complete until 30 days after notice of withdrawal, or until prior reinsurance or cancellation of unexpired insurance, and payment to him of proper portion of funds held by a committee. Williamson v. Warfield, Pratt Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168.

16. Allegations showing fraudulent claim by defendant that a certain "safety fund" belonged to it, though it had previously represented that it belonged to certificate holders, and charging wrongful change of securities and misappropriations and loss of large sums from such fund, held sufficient to authorize accounting. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 89. Under provisions by which safety fund should be divided among certificate holders when outstanding insurance should run below $1,000,000, suit was not premature, though outstanding certificates amounted to $40,000,000, it being admitted company claimed ownership of fund and that same had been diminished $60,000,000 since 1897. Id. Allegations held sufficient to justify money damages. Id. Certificate holders properly joined as plaintiffs. Id. Bill not multifarious for joining insurance company, its officers and directors, and a surety company which was custodian of fund in controversy. Id. Complaint held to sufficiently charge fraud by construction of certificates contrary to circulars sent out by company, so as to justify admission of such circulars to determine meaning of certificates which was not clear. Id. Complaint alleging fraudulent wording of certificates and construction thereof contrary to circulars held sufficient without alleging that plaintiffs could not understand certificates or were misled. Id. Allegations charging appropriation of fund in which plaintiffs were interested to defendants' own use held sufficient without stating that diversion was wrongfully made. Id. Certain allegations as to claims by defendant relative to construction of contract with reference to ownership of safety fund and right to continue to make assessments, though not sufficient in themselves to authorize relief, held proper, as matter of description relevant to alleged misappropriation. Id. Bill by holders of assessment policies charging fraudulent misapplication of reserve fund and waste of assets, and fraudulent charging of liens against policies, and making of assessment in interest of level premium insurance, held ground for equitable relief, so far as asking for accounting and cancellation of liens and ascertainment of amounts of assessment policies. Robinson v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 159 F 564.

17. Application for receiver for mismanagement and misappropriations, as authorized by Gen. St. 1902, § 3490, must be made by insurance commissioner, and cannot be made by certificate holders except in so far as incidental to any accounting which may be ordered. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39.

actual or intended rescission of the insurance a forfeiture of money lawfully received by the company from certificate holders will not be declared.[19]

Dissolution and insolvency. See 10 C. L. 337—Voluntary dissolution is sometimes authorized.[20] When a company is insolvent[21] and its further operation would be hazardous to its policy holders,[22] its affairs may be wound up in the manner provided by law.[23] Policy holders become creditors with the same right as other creditors to sue for liquidation,[24] and failure to reduce their claims to judgment and have executions issued thereon may be waived by the company.[25] On the insolvency of a title insurance company, policy holders are entitled to the return of unearned premiums the same as in the case of fire and similar insurance.[26] Funds set aside for the protection of policy holders must ordinarily be distributed by order of court in a proceeding wherein all interested persons may be heard.[27]

Taxation See 10 C. L. 338 of the property or business of foreign and domestic companies is fully treated elsewhere.[28]

18. Certificate holders among whom a "safety fund" is agreed to be divided on insurance in a certain department being reduced to a specified amount are sufficiently interested, even before the reduction specified, to enable them to sue to restrain a trust company from unlawfully changing the securities in which the fund is required to be kept invested. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39.

19. Alleged misappropriations and mismanagement. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39.

20. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 73, § 2, authorizing voluntary dissolution of insurance corporations on application of majority in number or interest of members or stockholders, is constitutional. Cullom v. Traders' Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 45. Not essential that any controversy exists for adjudication. Id.

21. In determining financial condition of insurance company organized under natural premium or mutual assessment plan, probable income from premiums must be considered. Dempster v. Opocensky [Neb.] 116 NW 524. Under Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 1, St. 1907, p. 839, c. 576, § 1, defining "net assets" as the fund available for payment of obligations after deduction of unpaid losses and "claims for losses," company whose assets exceed by $30,000 its liabilities, not including claims under policies for $300,000, is insolvent, so as to authorize insurance commissioner to apply for receiver and injunction under Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 7. Cutting v. American Ins. Co., 197 Mass. 131, 83 NE 396.

22. Further proceedings of company held "hazardous to the policy holders" within Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 7, where company proposed to continue to settle losses while insolvent, though it did not propose to write any new insurance, and injunction and receiver was therefore authorized. Cutting v. American Ins. Co., 197 Mass. 131, 83 NE 396.

23. Rev. St. § 274 merely prescribes powers and duties of superintendent of insurance where assets of companies are reduced below capital required by law, and does not confer on equity courts any enlarged powers with reference to winding up affairs of a company, especially where suit is by a policy holder or shareholder. Benson v. Columbia Life Ins. Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 113.

24, 25. Robinson v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 162 F 794.

26. State v. Minnesota Title Ins. & Trust Co., 104 Minn. 447, 116 NW 944. Not entitled to that part of premium which it was stipulated company could retain for investigating title. Id. In determining earned portion of premium, time elapsing between date of policy and insolvency controls. Id.

27. On insolvency of mutual assessment company, fund deposited with state treasurer under Laws 1891, c. 116, § 2, for benefit of its contract holders, can be reached only by suit in nature of creditor's bill, in which court may make equitable distribution with all parties before court and appoint receiver to carry out same (Engwicht v. Pacific States Life Assur. Co., 153 Cal. 183, 96 P 7); and action at law in which prayer is merely that amount found due plaintiff be declared lien on fund, and treasurer ordered to pay same, and courts' appointment of receiver with command that all persons interested appear and show cause, is not proper substitute procedure (Id.). Laws N. Y. 1884, p. 429, c. 353, § 2, authorizing any insurance company doing business under co-operative or assessment plan to deposit securities with superintendent of insurance, to be held for sole benefit of members of company and subject to provisions of such deed of trust as shall be approved by superintendent, does not impose on superintendent any duty to make distribution of fund on insolvency of company, and, in absence of such requirement in deed of trust, he holds subject to orders of court administering estate of insolvent company. Robinson v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 162 F 800. Provision of agreement under which portion of reserve fund of association was deposited with a trust company that in case of dissolution of association "entire reserve fund shall be divided among the members of the association, or shall be distributed in such other equitable manner as the courts shall direct," did not impose duty of distribution on trustee (Robinson v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 162 F 798), but association, having been dissolved in action by state federal court having charge of administration of its assets, could order trustee to turn over funds to court's receivers for distribution with other assets (Id.).

28. See Taxes, 10 C. L. 1776; Licenses, 10 C. L. 622.

(§ 2) B. Conditions necessary to engage in insurance business, and certification and withdrawal of right.[See 10 C. L. 333]—Companies are often required to obtain a license from the insurance commissioner [29] or pay a privilege tax,[30] and to deposit securities with some state officer for the protection of contract or policy holders,[31] or give a bond to secure the prompt payment of claims.[32] Domestic companies need not comply with provisions applicable only to foreign ones.[33]

§ 3. Foreign insurers and companies.[See 10 C. L. 333]—Companies doing business in foreign states [34] must comply with the insurance laws of such states applicable to foreign companies,[35] such as license [36] and process regulations,[37] and penalties are sometimes imposed on foreign companies and their agents doing insurance business without authorization.[38] An insurance commissioner cannot be compelled to license

29. Validity of policies issued by unlicensed companies, see post, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

30. Validity of premium notes where privilege tax is not paid, see post, § 8.

31. Distribution of fund on insolvency of company, see ante, § 2A, subd. Insolvency. Statute does not make procuring of securities or depositing thereof with state auditor condition precedent to doing of business by companies organized on natural premium or mutual assessment plan. Dempster v. Opocensky [Neb.] 116 NW 524. Deposit of securities necessary only on accumulation of money for purpose of fulfillment of policies. Id. Industrial life insurance companies to be entitled to do business need only deposit with secretary of state bonds in accordance with Act 65, p. 101, of 1906, and need not also comply with Act 105, p. 132, of 1898, requiring mutual companies to first procure insurance, premiums on which shall amount to $25,000. State v. Michel, 121 La. 350, 46 S 352. Under Code 1904, § 1271, requiring companies to deposit bonds with state treasurer as security for payment of policies to residents, treasurer holds first for policy holders, then for company, and neither he nor courts can divert fund for other purposes. German Nat. Ins. Co. v. Virginia State Ins. Co. [Va.] 61 SE 870. Improper to allow fee to treasurer's private counsel. Id. Railway company taking and retaining bonds and mortgages to cover amount claimed under policies held not policy holder entitled to share in securities deposited with insurance commissioner under statute for protection of policy holders. Commonwealth v. Guarantors' Finance Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 547. "Contract holders" for whose benefit money is required to be deposited with state treasurer, under Laws 1891, p. 126, c. 116, § 2, by mutual assessment companies, include only holders of insurance contracts issued by company under such law, excluding a debenture by the company in substance a mere promise to pay a certain sum two years after date with interest, and referring to insurance only by concluding provision giving owner option at its maturity to take a policy in lieu of money. Engwight v. Pacific States Life Assur. Co., 153 Cal. 183, 96 P 7.

32. Sufficiency of complaint, see post, § 24B.

33. D. C. Code, § 646 (31 St. at L. 1290, c. 854), requiring filing of copies of charters with superintendent of insurance, and § 647, calling for financial statements, held inapplicable to domestic companies. American Home Life Ins. Co. v. Drake, 30 App. D. C. 263. See post, § 3.

34. See, also, Foreign Corporations, 11 C. L. 1508. Where application was sent by mail to home office in another state and policy sent by mail from there to applicant, company did no business in state where applicant resided so as to preclude it from suing therein for assessments. Stone v. Penn Yan, etc., R. Co., 109 NYS 374. Contract solicited in Pennsylvania of citizen of that state and mailed to him from Ohio, where executed by company, and acceptance of which was by him signed in Pennsylvania, held made in Pennsylvania. Swing v. Dayton, 124 App. Div. 58, 108 NYS 155.

35. Evidence held to sustain finding that company was not authorized to do business in state so as to entitle its receiver to recover assessment against policy holders. Swing v. Red River Lumber Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 442.

36. Where company had not procured certificate from proper officer as required by Pennsylvania statute making it a crime for foreign insurance companies to do business without complying with the act, and Pennsylvania courts would therefore not enforce contract, it would not be enforced in New York. Swing v. Dayton, 124 App. Div. 58, 108 NYS 155.

37. Insurance company is estopped to defend action on policy on ground that it violated St. 1898, § 1978, prohibiting companies from doing insurance business with residents of state without qualifying insurance commissioner to receive service of process, insured being without knowledge of the facts. Corbett v. Physicians' Casualty Ass'n, 135 Wis. 505, 115 NW 365. That insurance was negotiated through mails did not apprise assurer that company was not qualified. Id. Resident assignee in good faith of contract made in another state held entitled to protection of North Carolina statute prohibiting insurance company from revoking designation of process agent so long as liabilities remained outstanding against it in state. Hunter v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 192 N. Y. 85, 84 NE 576.

38. Title of chapter 93, p. 214, Laws 1871, is sufficient to embrace provisions in §§ 18, 23, including penalties prescribed for procuring insurance in or doing insurance by companies not authorized to do business in state. Harrod v. Latham Mercantile & Commercial Co. [Kan.] 95 P 11. Though provision of § 22 that half of penalty shall go to county treasury and half to informer vio-

a company while he is still engaged in a statutory investigation as to its compliance with the law.[39]

§ 4. Agents and solicitors for insurance. A. Distinctions and kinds of agency.[40]

(§ 4) B. The right to negotiate insurance and regulations thereabout. See 8 C. L. 885—Agents and brokers are often required to take out licenses [41] or pay privilege taxes,[42] and prohibited from writing insurance in companies not authorized to do business in the state,[43] or where applicant has not passed a medical examination.[44] Misconduct on the part of an agent may be ground for revocation of his certificate.[45] Questions relating to the existence of agencies and the authority of agents as between the insurer and the insured are treated in subsequent sections.[46]

(§ 4) C. Rights and liabilities of agents. See 10 C. L. 840—The general rules of contract and agency apply as between the company and its agents.[47] Questions relating to commissions or other compensation,[48] and the duration of the agency,[49]

lates Const. § 6, art. 6, invalidity does not affect rest of law. Id. Penalties not exclusive so as to preclude injured person from recovering from wrongdoer. Id.

39. Mandamus will not lie to compel insurance commissioner to authorize foreign company to do business in state before he has completed investigation, under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3048, to satisfy himself that company has fully complied with all requirements of law. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Love [Tex.] 108 SW 821.

40. See 6 C. L. 75. For questions affecting waiver and estoppel, see post, § 16C.

41. Superintendent of insurance of District of Columbia is mere ministerial officer in respect to issuing general insurance licenses to brokers or agents (Drake v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 312), and cannot impose conditions precedent to issuance of licenses requested with tender of statutory fee (Id.). Certain regulations and classifications of persons required to take out licenses, under D. C. Code, § 654, held without authority. Id. When insurance broker or agent takes out general insurance license, under D. C. Code, § 654, he may act for any company or companies authorized to do business in district (Id.), and companies are not required to apply for licenses for their brokers or agents (Id.).

42. Validity of premium notes when privilege tax is not paid. See post, § 8. For jury whether agent had paid privilege tax where he resided so as to entitle him to solicit insurance. Simpson v. Goodman [Miss.] 45 S 615.

43. Title of c. 93, p. 214, Laws 1871, held to warrant penalty provisions in §§ 18, 23. Harrod v. Latham Mercantile & Commercial Co. [Kan.] 95 P 11. Unconstitutionality of provision in § 22 as to division of penalty between informer and county treasurer held not to affect rest of law. Id. Penalties held not exclusive so as to preclude injured person from recovering from wrongdoer. Id.

44. Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 4713, expressly prohibits the issuance of policies of life insurance where insured has not satisfactorily passed a medical examination by a duly authorized physician. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

45. Insurance Law (Laws 1892, p. 1972, c. 690), § 91, forbidding agents of foreign insurance companies to act as such in state without certificate of authority from state insurance superintendent, and providing for revocation of certificate on conviction of holder of violation of that or preceding section, and Insurance Law (Laws 1906, p. 774, c. 326), § 60, as amended by Laws 1908, p. 1015, c. 347, providing for revocation of licenses of companies or agents making certain misrepresentations therein made misdemeanors, are distinct, § 91, providing for revocation on conviction in criminal proceeding for violation of § 90 or 91, and § 60, for revocation of license by superintendent on violation of that section. People v. Kelsey, 113 NYS 836. Though Laws 1906, p. 774, c. 326, § 60, and Laws 1908, p. 1015, c. 347, do not expressly provide for notice to agent whose certificate it is sought to revoke for violation of § 60, investigation by superintendent with notice and hearing was contemplated. Id.

46. See post, §§ 7, 8, 16B, 16C, 19.

47. See, also, Agency, 11 C. L. 60; Contracts, 11 C. L. 729. Contract of employment entered into between general agent of life insurance company and one who was to serve under him, who was identified in contract as "agent," held contract with general agent acting in his individual capacity, and not one upon which company was jointly liable. Bigger v. Insurance Co., 8 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 27.

48. Evidence held insufficient to show that company was to pay its agent a share of premiums collected by solicitor of company working in conjunction with agent. Rhone v. National Life Ins. Co., 43 Colo. 162, 95 P 298. Evidence held to show that no new forms of policies had been adopted within provision of agency contract that commissions specified should not apply to new forms of policies thereafter adopted. Boswell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 86 NE 532. Agency contract construed and held that agent was entitled to commissions on renewal premiums for years after the first in proportion to amount of insurance procured, notwithstanding termination of agency. Heyn v. New York Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 84 NE 725. Contract construed and held not to allow agent commissions on renewal premiums paid after termination of agency. Dodson v. New York Life Ins. Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 551.

49. Contract of agency construed and held are usually governed by the terms of the contract of employment if this is valid.[50] Refusal to remit collected premiums held subject to the company's call renders the agent amenable to remedies for conversion or breach of trust,[51] and the contract sometimes provides that the agent shall forfeit his rights thereunder [52] if he fails to remit money as required,[53] increases the company's liabilities by corrupt acts,[54] or fails to make reports according to agreement.[55] Liability on the agent's bond will not be extended by implication.[56]

An agent may be rendered liable for a loss by failure to carry out a definite oral contract to insure.[57] One who acts for an owner of property in procuring insurance must obtain the most advantageous terms,[58] and if he fails to do so the owner is not bound to accept and pay for his services.[59]

§ 5. Insurable risks and interests. Fire insurance. See 10 C. L. 341—Insured must have an insurable interest in the property covered by the policy.[60] Intoxicating to authorize company to discharge agent at any time after one year, in which case he would be entitled to commissions on renewal premiums, except that company could discharge at any time for acts operating to forfeit his rights, "good cause" applying to matters specified in contract. Armstrong v. National Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 327.

50. Though to corporation agent's contract of employment for more than 12 months was malum prohibitum as well as ultra vires, statutory inhibition is against company only and hence parties not being in pari delicto agent could recover value of services as on implied assumpsit. Akers v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 112 NYS 254. Commission contract with general agent to run for 20 years, and made before adoption of Ins. Law, § 97, limiting amount life insurers may pay to procure new business, whereby agent was to devote his time to build up business in four states receiving no salary and paying expenses, held not violative of public policy nor subject to interference under general or reserved powers of legislature. Boswell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 86 NE 532. Provision that contract should be void as to new business in territory where company's authority to do business should terminate held not to show that parties had in mind the possibility that legislature of company's domicile might interdict company from doing any business in such territory. Id.

51. Where agent had authority to collect premiums and was required to remit same when requested, refusal to remit was conversion, regardless of applicability of Insurance Law 1892, p. 1949, § 38, making insurance agents collecting moneys responsible therefor in fiduciary capacity. Washington Life Ins. Co. v. Scott, 57 Misc. 492, 110 NYS 49. Subsequent conduct and renewal of contracts held not to change fiduciary relation between company and agent into relation of debtor and creditor. Id. Where jurisdiction of person of general manager of life insurance company was required by personal service within state, plaintiff could avail itself of remedy provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 549 (2), authorizing arrest for violation of trust, whether conversion occurred in state or elsewhere. Id. Acceptance by company of checks for money collected held not to operate as waiver of right to arrest agent, nor convert claim into one of simple debt, payment of checks having been stopped by agent. Id.

52. Contract held to forfeit agents' rights for reasons therein stated only as to rights which would have accrued in future had contract remained in force. Armstrong v. National Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 327.

53. Evidence held not to show agent collected money for company and failed to remit. Armstrong v. National Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 327.

54. Increase of company's liabilities held not by "corrupt act" within contract where failure of agent to keep notes in his control was due to misplaced confidence in an assistant. Armstrong v. National Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 327.

55. Failure of agent to make reports as contract required held to forfeit his rights as therein provided. Armstrong v. National Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 327. Forfeiture not waived. Id. Failure to make reports other than monthly ones and reports on policies held not ground for forfeiture of agent's rights. Id. Premiums subsequently paid held forfeited. Id.

56. Under bond rendering principal and sureties liable for loans and advances made to agents "for the purpose of enlarging his business or otherwise," action would not lie for advances for support of agent's family. New York Life Ins. Co v. McDearmon [Mo. App.] 114 SW 57. Under bond conditioned that agent would perform "all other duties of such agent and comply with all instructions," sureties held not liable for agent's failure to pay a premium note indoreed by agent to general agents of insurer in strict pursuance of instructions. McClary v. Trezevant [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 954.

57. In order to recover damages for loss by fire on ground of failure to carry out oral contract to insure, evidence must be reasonably definite that minds of parties met on subject-matter and agreed on terms. Mooney v. Merriam [Kan.] 94 P 263. Evidence held too indefinite as to subject-matter, risk, amount of insurance, and premium. Id.

58, 59. Strasburger v. Goldenberg, 109 NYS 803.

60. Change in agreement between vendor and vendee so as to render vendor liable for loss by fire before delivery held to preserve insured's interest under policy cover-liquors are insurable in states where they are recognized as property.[61] The validity of policies covering property held or used for illegal purposes is treated in a subsequent section.[62]

*Life insurance.*See 10 C. L. 342—Insurable interest as affecting assignments is treated hereafter.[63] Though policies issued to persons who have no insurable interest are invalid,[64] one may in good faith insure his own life in favor of whomsoever he pleases, paying the premiums himself.[65] A person has an insurable interest in the life of another when there is a reasonable probability that he will gain by the latter's remaining alive or lose by his death.[66] An agreement between a person having an insurable interest in a life and one having no such interest that the latter shall insure such life and apply the proceeds towards the former's support does not operate to transfer to the policy holder the insurable interest of the obligee.[67] A beneficiary may agree with one who is without insurable interest that the latter shall receive a portion of the proceeds of the policy in consideration of paying part of the premiums.[68] If a policy is valid in its inception, subsequent cessation of interest will not avoid it in the absence of any proviso.[69] Only the insurer can raise the question of lack of insurable interest in the beneficiary.[70]

Liability insurance.—One has the right to protect himself by insurance from an adverse result of uncertain litigation.[71]

ing property sold by him, but not delivered, for which he might be held liable. Burke v. Continental Ins. Co., 128 App. Div. 319, 112 NYS 865.

63. See post, § 14.

64. Where object of an association was to furnish burial expenses to members by system of mutual contribution and it employed soliciting agents and was not founded on principals of philanthropy, its contracts were contracts of "life insurance" within Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 4713, forbidding taking of applications for insurance on life of any person in favor of another person not having a bona fide insurable interest in life of insured or who is not related to him within a certain degree. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

65. W. A. Doody Co. v. Green [Ga.] 62 SE 984. Guardian's unauthorized use of ward's money to pay premiums on policy taken out by guardian on his own life for benefit of ward is not payment of premiums by ward. Id. That one insures his life for benefit of himself or another is evidence of such good faith as will sustain contract. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Greenlee [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1101. Father could insure life for benefit of son though son had no insurable interest in life of father, and though son paid premiums. Id.

66. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

Held to have insurable interest: Creditor. Peoria Life Ass'n v. Hines, 132 Ill. App. 642. Relationship between parent and child is sufficient of itself to give either an insurable interest in life of the other. Woods v. Woods' Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 79.

Interest Insufficient: Relationship of uncle and nephew. W. A. Doody Co. v. Green [Ga.] 62 SE 984. One has no insurable interest in life of brother-in-law merely because of such relationship. Chandler v. Mutual Life & Industrial Ass'n [Ga.] 61 SE 1036. Official undertakers of associations insuring burial expenses for members, who through profits from sale of funeral supplies were the real beneficiaries under the contracts between association and members, held without insurable interest in members' lives. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68. Corporation has no insurable interest in lives of members of board of directors not indebted to it. Schott & Sons Co. v. Insurance Co., 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 548; Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Schott & Sons Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 401.

67. Agreement between father and son that latter should insure mother's life and use proceeds in support of father held to create no insurable interest in son in life of mother. Schwerdt v. Schwerdt, 235 Ill. 386, 85 NE 613. Father could not enforce agreement, same being without sufficient consideration, even though son had received insurance money from company. Id.

68. Agreement held not to affect validity of policy or interest of beneficiary therein. Woods v. Woods' Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 79.

69. Divorce of beneficiary from insured held not to affect her rights in policy, especially where insured was required to pay alimony. Begley v. Miller, 137 Ill. App. 278.

70. Where a policy is issued in favor of one whose relationship to insured is stated therein and such relationship does not give the beneficiary an insurable interest but the beneficiary is also creditor of the insured, it will not be presumed that the policy was issued in favor of the designated beneficiary as creditor for the purpose of enabling the estate of insured to recover from the beneficiary the amount of the indemnity in excess of the debt, the company having seen fit to recognize the beneficiary as entitled to the proceeds. W. A. Doody Co. v. Green [Ga.] 62 SE 984.

71. One may insure himself against liability to third persons for automobile accidents. Gould v. Brock [Pa.] 69 A 1122.

Burglary insurance.—To authorize recovery by an assignee, he must show that he had an interest in the property.[72]

§ 6. Application.[See 10 C. L. 842]—Insured on receiving his policy may assume that his application authorized the company to issue it,[73] and need not return the policy because of provisions therein in seeming conflict with the application.[74] The effect of statutes requiring the application or a copy thereof to be attached to the policy or delivered to insured,[75] and of information acquired by the company from the application,[76] and questions relating to the completeness of such information,[77] are discussed in other sections.

§ 7. The contract of insurance in general, and general rules for its interpretation. Definitions and distinctions.[See 10 C. L. 842]—Except when the insurance is against accident or death,[78] insurance contracts are plain indemnity agreements[79] whereby the insurer for a stipulated consideration undertakes to compensate the insured for loss of the kind and to the extent agreed upon.[80] A fire policy is a contract for the personal indemnity of the insured and does not follow the property to purchasers unless the policy is transferred.[81]

Agencies, and authority of agents in general.[82]—Agency may be established as in other cases by implication as well as by formal appointment.[83] An insurance broker is not the agent of the insurer so as to bind the latter by agreements to insure,[84] nor can an agent be said to act for his company while he procures from it insurance for himself.[85] A local agent for a certain county has no authority to appoint other agents for the company;[86] and power in an underwriter's attorney to conduct the business contemplated does not imply authority to bind the principal by stipulation that the outcome of a suit against one of the subscribers shall conclude all.[87] An agent may bind the company by any agreement within the actual or apparent scope of his authority,[88] and the company may waive express stipula-

78. Unlike fire insurance contracts, accident and life insurance contracts are not mere contracts of indemnity but investment contracts entitling insured to sum stipulated, regardless of damages actually suffered. Gatzweiler v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & L. Co., 136 Wis. 34, 116 NW 633. Life and accident insurance contract is agreement whereby one agrees to "indemnify" another for injuries by accident or death. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

79. Policy is contract of indemnity and cannot be made subject of profit by insured. Fire policy insuring rents. Palatine Ins. Co. v. O'Brien, 107 Md. 341, 68 A 484.

80. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68. Insurance is a contract by which one party, called insurer, binds himself to other, called insured, to pay him a sum of money or otherwise indemnify him. Rogers v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 692.

81. Purchasers continuing business in old trade name in which policy was issued could not recover. American Steam Laundry Co. v. Hamburg Bremen Fire Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 113 SW 394.

82. Power of agents to waive provisions, and estoppels based on agent's acts or knowledge, see post, this section, Essentials and Validity, and post, §§ 16C, 19, 20.

83. Wortham v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 827, 107 SW 276. Generally those who with company's assent act for it in soliciting or procuring insurance are agents though not formally appointed. Id. Evidence held to authorize insured to treat with agent on theory that he was general agent as he appeared to be with power to fix terms of contract of insurance. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 380.

84. Policy covering property other than that mentioned in agreement between broker and insured held not reformable. Fredman v. Consolidated Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 104 Minn. 76, 116 NW 221. Under Rev. Laws, §§ 1642, 1716, broker is insurer's agent only for purpose of collecting or securing premiums. Id.

87. Blair v. National Shirt & Overalls Co., 137 Ill. App. 413.

88. Agent is presumed to have authority to verbally agree that premium note shall be given back to applicant should he decline to accept policy. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Seidel [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 945. Subagent with apparent general authority may bind company by insurance agreement.

tions negativing agency.[89] An owner of property may ratify the unauthorized act of another in procuring insurance for him,[90] but he cannot ratify after a loss when the company was without knowledge of the true conditions.[91] The liability of agents for failure to carry out agreements to insure has been treated in a previous section.[92]

Essentials and validity; acceptance. See 10 C. L. 843—Binding insurance may rest in parol,[93] and an agreement may become effective before a contemplated written policy is actually issued.[94]

89. Provision that no person not authorized in writing should be deemed company's agent with respect to the insurance held waived by writing policy on application taken by one not authorized in writing and accepting premium therefor. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Waiver of provisions against power of agents to waive stipulations in policy, see post, § 16C.

90. Insured could ratify broker's acts in overinsuring property and accept policies which remained in force after refused request by broker to company that latter mark them off. Boutwell v. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1087.

91. Where company did not know that policy in another company had not been canceled because insured had not been notified, surrender of old policy and taking new one from agents after loss did not bind second company. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Renno [Miss.] 46 S 947.

92. See ante, § 4C.

93. Cunningham v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. [Mass.] 86 NE 787. No recovery on alleged oral contract where parties contemplated contract to spring into existence on delivery of policies and payment of premiums. Id. Agent duly authorized to make insurance contracts may bind his company by parol agreement before policy is issued, in absence of specific charter requirements that contracts be written (Ripka v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 517), but in such case contract and authority of agent must be satisfactorily proved (Id.). Mere statement by plaintiff that he knew person in question to be defendant's agent held insufficient to establish agency. Id. Liability of agents on oral contracts to insure, see ante, § 4C.

NOTE. Oral contract; statute of frauds: Appellee owned property known as the "Wilson property," on which she had $1,000 insurance in the appellant company, good from September 20th, 1904, to September 20th, 1907. In October, 1904, she traded this property for the "Gant property," and sought to have the policy on the former transferred to cover the latter. The agent refused to do this, but agreed to issue a policy on the Gant property for the unearned portion of the premium on the Wilson residence. In 1905 the Gant house was destroyed by fire. It then appeared that the agent had transferred the Wilson policy to one Tapscott, to whom the property had been traded. The evidence of Tapscott and appellee's two sons showed conclusively that this had not been contemplated by the parties. Held there was an oral contract here and appellee is entitled to recover. American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Leake, 31 Ky. L. R. 1016, 104 SW 373.

Oral contracts of insurance are very infrequent, and the case is of interest as showing how they may possibly arise. Although the rule is otherwise at the present time, the validity of the oral contract has been questioned in early decisions (Lindauer v. Delaware Mut. Ins. Co., 13 Ark. 461; Spitzer v. St. Marks Ins. Co., 13 N. Y. Super. Ct. 6), and even declared against (Cockerill v. Cincinnati Mut. Ins. Co., 16 Ohio, 148; Bell v. Western Marine & Fire Ins. Co., 5 Rob. [La.] 423, 39 Am. Dec. 542; Platho v. Ins. Co., 38 Mo. 248). But it is now well settled that at the common law the contract was not required to be in writing. Sanborn v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 16 Gray [Mass.] 448, 77 Am. Dec. 419; Northwestern Iron Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 23 Wis. 160, 99 Am. Dec. 145; Walker v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 56 Me. 371. "Except where prevented by the operation of the statute of frauds, or some other equivalent prohibition, a policy of insurance may be made or changed by parol." Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143, 153. The early doctrine has been overruled in some of the states which held it. In Ohio, Amazon Ins. Co. v. Wall, 31 Ohio St. 628, 27 Am. Rep. 533, states that the doctrine of Cockerill v. Cincinnati Mut. Ins. Co., supra, is virtually overruled by Dayton Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 Ohio St. 345, 15 Am. Rep. 612; see also, Newark Machine Co. v. Kenton Ins. Co., 50 Ohio St. 549, 35 NE 1060, and 22 L. R. A. 768, which contains a note reviewing the various phases of the question down to 1893. In Missouri the early doctrine is modified by Henning v. U. S. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 425, 4 Am. Rep. 332, and the latter fully supported by Lingenfelter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 252, and Duff v. F. Ass'n of Philadelphia, 56 Mo. App. 355. The United States supreme court in Relief Fire Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 94 U. S. 574, 24 Law. Ed. 291, held that, in the absence of statute or other positive regulation, a contract of insurance can be made by parol. For an extensive list of cases in point see Cooley's Briefs on Ins., Vol. 1, p. 397. That the contract in the principal case is not within the statute of frauds is clear. Its complete performance depended upon a contingency which might have happened within a year. Nester v. Diamond Match Co., 143 F 72; Warner v. Texas & P. R. Co., 164 U. S. 418, 41 Law. Ed. 496; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. De Jarnett, 111 Ala. 248, 19 S 995; Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. v. Norwood, 69 F 71.—From 6 Mich. L. R. 347.

94. When an application for fire insurance is made and it is agreed that a policy shall be issued embodying terms agreed to, contract is complete though credit may be extended for premium (Roark v. City Trust,

An agreement to furnish burial is valid.[95] A policy taken out on property used for an illegal purpose is not void where it does not tend to promote the unlawful business.[96] That a collateral agreement to give special benefits to insured is violative of statute does not necessarily invalidate the contract of insurance.[97] Policies made in a state where the company was not authorized to do business are held void in some jurisdictions.[98] The validity of provisions requiring suit on the policy to be brought only in certain courts is treated in a subsequent section.[99]

Statutes requiring certain provisions to be incorporated in policies must be at least substantially complied with.[1] Companies are sometimes forbidden to include more than one kind of insurance in a single policy.[2]

Safe Deposit & Surety Co., 130 Mo. App. 401, 110 SW 1), and if a policy is subsequently issued it relates back to the time specified for the insurance to begin and covers a loss within that time (Id.).

95. Contract on legal consideration to furnish obligee or his near relatives with burial reasonably worth a fixed sum is valid indemnity contract. State v. Willett [Ind.] 86 NE 68.

96. Policy on furniture in house of ill fame. Conithan v. Royal Ins. Co. [Miss.] 45 S 361. If druggist when he insured drug stock intended to conduct unlawful liquor business, insurance would be void as protecting him in illegal purposes (Kellogg v. German-American Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 663), but if he intended to conduct legitimate drug store business and use liquors only in connection with that business in usual and lawful manner, insurance was valid (Id.). Presence in drug store of 10 barrels of beer and 70 gallons of whiskey and fact that insured occasionally made unlawful sales and had thriving trade in liquors held not to establish as matter of law that plaintiff's business and practices were unlawful. Id.

97. That agreement for special benefits violated Revisal 1905, § 4775, held no defense to action on premium note, insured having retained policy. Security Life & Annuity Co. v. Costner [N. C.] 63 SE 304. That agent returned to insured part of first premium paid which belonged to himself as commission held not to invalidate policy under Ky. St. 1903, § 653, prohibiting life insurance companies from discriminating between persons insured in amount of premiums or rates charged persons of same class, equal expectation of life, etc. Interstate Life Assur. Co. v. Dalton [C. C. A.] 165 F 176. Right to recover premium or avoid liability therefor on ground of rebate or special favor, see post, § 8.

98. Policies made in state where company was not authorized to do business held void though statute only prohibited companies from doing insurance business without certificate from insurance commissioner and did not expressly make policies void. Swing v. Sligo Furnace Co., 133 Ill. App. 217.

99. See post, § 24.

1. Since provisions prescribed by St. 1907, p. 895, c. 576, § 75, are intended for protection of policy holders, if policy contains them in substance their form may be varied and additional provisions inserted beneficial to insured, provided statutory provisions are satisfied and left undiminished by that which is added. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 181, 85 NE 407. No departure from exact provisions of St. 1907, p. 895, c. 576, § 75, should be permitted unless it is plain that substitution is in every way as advantageous to insured and as desirable as prescribed provision. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 190, 85 NE 410. Provision for grace of 30 days in payment of premiums held not substantial compliance with statutory requirement that policies provide for grace of one month for payment of every premium after the first. Id. Clause requiring policy to state that insurance contract shall consist of policy and application and that no statement not contained in application attached to policy at the time shall be used in defense must be strictly construed. Id. Recital that policy constituted entire contract and was free of conditions as to residence, etc., held not compliance with requirement that it be stated that policy "and the application" constitute entire contract, and that all statements made by insured in absence of fraud shall be deemed representations and not warranties, and that no statement shall be used in defense unless contained in written application, copy of which shall be endorsed on or attached to policy. Id. Provision making policy incontestable from date does not comply with requirement that it be made incontestable after two years from date. Id. Policy authorizing reinstatement on payment of all arrears with interest not to exceed 6 per cent held substantial compliance with requirement that it provide for reinstatement on payment of all overdue premiums and other indebtedness to company with interest not exceeding 6 per cent. Id. Table with accompanying statement held to sufficiently show actual loan values of policies as required by statute. Id. Policy held subject to modification by adding that it "and the application attached hereto" contains entire contract, etc. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 181, 85 NE 407. Pub. Acts 1907, p. 253, No. 187, § 1, subd. 8, requiring life policies to secure to holders in event of "default in payment of premiums" after payment for three years a stipulated form of insurance equal to reserve, less 2½ per cent of amount insured and of dividend additions, and less any indebtedness to the company, and requiring stipulation that policy may be surrendered within one month from date of default for a specified cash value at least equal to sum otherwise available for insurance, does not apply to or prohibit an automatic premium loan provision providing that if requested by insured prior to expiration of one month after date for payment of premiums arrears will be

As in the making of other contracts, the minds of the parties must meet on all essential terms.[3] To render a policy binding, it is also essential that it be delivered[4] and accepted;[5] but delivery to applicant is complete in law when nothing remains to be done but the agent's ministerial and unconditional transfer of the policy to insured.[6] So, also, delivery to insured's agent is delivery to insured,[7] and depositing the policy in the mail completes such delivery.[8] It is sometimes expressly stipulated that the insurance shall not take effect until after acceptance and approval of the application by the company at its home office[9] and payment of charged as indebtedness against policy with 6 per cent interest, provided entire indebtedness then outstanding shall be within limits secured by cash surrender value. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co. v. Commissioner of Ins., 151 Mich. 610, 15 Det. Leg. N. 57, 115 NW 707.

2. Under St. 1907, p. 858, c. 576, §§ 32, 34, life insurance companies authorized to issue both life and accident and health insurance are not entitled to join both classes of insurance in same policy. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Hardison, 199 Mass. 181, 85 NE 407. Policy held objectionable as combining both life insurance and accident and health insurance. Id. Life policy providing that in cases of bodily injury preventing insured from pursuing any gainful occupation company would pay for him premiums afterward accruing held violative of P. L. 1902, p. 407 (P. L. 1907, p. 128), forbidding inclusion of life insurance and insurance against bodily injury or death by accident in same policy. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Watkins [N. J. Law.] 71 A 325. Such statute held also violated by provision in life policy that in case of injury causing permanant and total disability to perform work or follow any occupation for compensation or profit, or in case of accidental loss of sight, hands or feet, insured in lieu of continuing policy may receive in his lifetime face value in annual instalments, or life annuity as per table in policy. Id.

3. Evidence held to show minds of parties had not met as to insurers premium term, or division of risk. Cunningham v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. [Mass.] 86 NE 787. No contract where application was made with intent not to accept policy if applicant could obtain satisfactory insurance in another company and there was no meeting of minds as to premium, term, or amount of concurrent insurance, notwithstanding attempted acceptance and payment of premium at request of company after loss of which company was ignorant. Nordness v. Mutual Cash Guar. Fire Ins. Co. [S. D.] 114 NW 1092. Evidence held to show that oral insurance contract was made with company's agent on day of fire and before loss. Pelican Assur. Co. v. Schildknecht, 32 Ky. L. R. 1257, 108 SW 312.

4. Where application makes delivery of policy a condition precedent to completion of contract, contract is not binding until delivery of policy, especially where it is provided policy shall not take effect until delivery while applicant is in good health. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Thompson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 503.

5. Evidence sufficient to sustain finding that policy was accepted. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Helbig, 138 Ill. App. 115. Certain transactions and correspondence held not to show acceptance of fire policy before loss so as to bind insurer. New v. Germania Fire Ins. Co. [Ind.] 85 NE 703. Mere receipt of policy for determination as to acceptance held not sufficient to complete contract, intent being controlling. Id. Receipt and retention of policy is prima facie proof of its delivery and acceptance. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Helbig, 138 Ill. App. 115.

6. Whether policy placed in possession of agent for delivery to the insured is binding on company before actual delivery to insured depends on nature of agent's remaining duties. Where insured has done everything to entitle him to possession and there rests on agent the ministerial duty of transferring policy to insured, agent holds for insured and parties are bound. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Greenlee [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1101. Where insurer executed policy in conformity with application and payment of first premium before delivery was not stipulated for, contract was thereby completed, and when sent to agent for delivery, agent became trustee for insured, making delivery to him delivery to insured though agent did not part with possession and delivery to insured was by contract made essential to validity of policy. Id. Evidence held to support finding that policy was executed and sent to agent for delivery to insured. Id. Rule that agent's receipt of policy for unconditional delivery to applicant is in law delivery to applicant, though agent does not surrender possession and though contract requires delivery to applicant, held not applicable whers first premium had not been paid to company or its agent but to agent of applicant, and when applicant was fatally ill when agent received policy which provided it should not take effect until payment of first premium and delivery of policy when insured was in good health. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Thompson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 503.

7. Brokers with unlimited instructions to procure insurance held insured's agents. Travelers' Fire Ins. Co. v. Globe Soap Co., 85 Ark. 169, 107 SW 386.

8. Mailing of unconditional policy to insured's brokers held sufficient so as to authorize recovery, though policy was not received till after fire. Travelers' Fire Ins. Co. v. Globe Soap Co., 85 Ark. 169, 107 SW 386.

9. No contract where application was never received by company at home office and approved as required by its terms. Lowe v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. [Neb.] 114 NW 586. Evidence held not to show that application was received and acted on by insurer before injury. Claypool v. Continental Casualty Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 835. Mere retention of application and premium note held insufficient to show acceptance and approval. Van Arsdale v. Young [Okl.]

the first premium,[10] and unless insured is alive and in sound health when the policy is delivered.[11] Payment to the company's agent is payment to the company,[12] and prepayment may be waived by the company or its agent.[13] Payment of the first

95 P 778. Where application showed on its face that issuance of policy depended on approval of application by company, agents' mere acceptance of application and small fee thereon held insufficient to bind company to issue policy or subject it to liability for loss pending its action on application. Ripka v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 517. Failure of agent to forward application or company's failure to act thereon cannot work estoppel to assert insurance was not effect where loss occurs before either of such acts can be done. Id.

10. No contract where premium was paid when applicant was fatally ill and policy was not delivered in his lifetime, policy requiring payment of premium and delivery while applicant was in same state of health as described in application. Powell v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Ala.] 45 S 208. No contract where agent took 30-day note instead of receiving cash for first premium, where it was expressly stipulated first premium must be paid before policy should be binding and that agent had no authority to extend credit, waive provisions, etc. Batson v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Ala.] 46 S 578. Evidence held to show first premium had not been paid. Industrial Mut. Indemnity Co. v. Perkins [Ark.] 112 SW 176. Evidence as to company's demand for premium and payment of premium by plaintiff to mortgagee's agent held insufficient to show that contract had ever been consummated. Shoemaker v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. [Neb.] 114 NW 1105. Where insured has running account with company's agency and pays premiums as called upon, policy is not invalidated for failure to pay premium on receipt thereof. Pelican Assur. Co. v. Schildknecht, 32 Ky. L. R. 1257, 108 SW 312.

11. "Sound health" in condition of insurer's liability does not mean perfect health but absence of disease having direct tendency to shorten life. Murphy v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Minn.] 118 NW 355. Where policy provided that no obligation should be assumed by insurer unless on its date assured was alive and in sound health, promise of insurer was conditional, and fact of sound health determined insurer's liability, not insured's apparent health, or any one's opinion or belief that he was in sound health. Id. Evidence held practically conclusive insured was not in sound health. Id. Under Code, § 1812, estopping companies by medical examiner's report recommending risk from defending on ground that insured was not in condition of health required by policy when it was delivered, where risk was recommended by medical examiner, insured could not defend by asserting condition in policy that it should not be operative unless delivered to insured while in good health and showing that insured was never in good health after application was made. Roe v. National Life Ins. Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500.

12. Where after rejection of application in one company applicant's husband told agent to "go ahead and get her in any good company," and agent obtained a policy through an agent of another company, he was applicant's and not insurer's agent, so that payment of premium to him was not payment to insurer. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Thompson [Ind. App.] 86 NE 503. If insurer received the money, or had knowledge of payment and acted on application, it made the person receiving the premium its agent by ratification. Id.

13. On power of agents to waive notwithstanding restrictions in policy, see post, § 16C. Accepting part of premium and extending time for balance waives payment of whole premium when policy is delivered. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Greenlee [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1101. Evidence held to show waiver. Id. Though insurers were not bound to deliver policy until payment of premium, they having done so, nonpayment did not preclude recovery. McLean v. Tobin, 58 Misc. 528, 109 NYS 926. Where company gave agent authority to accept a note for premium, he being responsible for such credits, acceptance of agent as security was sufficient to render company liable on policy, though notes were not paid at maturity or before death of insured. Clarke v. Home Fund Life Ins. Co., 79 S. C. 494, 61 SE 80. Insurer may accept liability of third person in payment of first premium, and where it debits agent and looks to him ultimately for payment, premium is paid as between insurer and insured. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Evidence held to show agent was responsible for payment of note. Id. Held proper to refuse to charge policy never took effect unless premium was paid, there being evidence of waiver of cash payment and of extension of credit. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. Delivery of policy reciting agreement by company to pay indemnity in consideration of first annual premium to be actually paid before delivery and stipulating that contract shall not take effect until delivery of policy and payment of first premium is acknowledgment of payment of premium, and delivered policy is competent evidence of that fact. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Heidel [C. C. A.] 161 F 535. Acknowledgment of payment of first premium estops insurer from avoiding policy for nonpayment of such premium when due (Id.), but does not estop it from proving written agreement for extension of time for payment of part or all of such premium and for forfeiture of insurance if deferred payments were not made when due (Id.). Extension of time for payment of first premium without written agreement that failure to make deferred payments when due shall work forfeiture waives all forfeiture for nonpayment of every part of such premium. Id. Where by its terms policy was not to take effect until payment of first premium during lifetime of insured, and also prohibited waivers by agents, death of insured before payment of premium precluded recovery, though agent stated to insured's father that father might pay premium later. Brown v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co. [Ga.] 61 SE 1123.

premium is not a condition precedent to the taking effect of the policy unless it is made so by agreement.[14]

Construction. See 10 C. L. 846—The usual rules for the interpretation of contracts apply to a large extent.[15] The natural tendency is, however, to favor the insured or the beneficiary,[16] especially in the construction of conditions, warranties or representations,[17] and in cases of doubt or ambiguity[18] rendering provisions susceptible of more than one construction.[19] When there can be but one reasonable construction, that of course must govern.[20] In case of variance between the application and the policy, the latter controls as to description of the property.[21] When provisions are obscure, the acts of the parties pursuant thereto and conditions existing when the policy was written may be resorted to.[22] Custom cannot be shown to contradict the written agreement.[23]

14. Where neither application nor policy required payment of first premium before delivery of policy, payment was not condition precedent to contract. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Greenlee [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1101.

15. Insurance contract should be reasonably construed. Jacobson v. Liverpool, London & Globe Ins. Co., 135 Ill. App. 20. Effect must be given to all language if possible. Hastings v. Bankers' Acc. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 79. Court will endeavor to arrive at intent and purpose of parties. American Ins. Co. v. Egyptian Lodge No. 802, I. O. O. F., 128 Ill. App. 161. Policy of insurance should be construed as other contracts to reach parties' intention, except forfeiture provisions and ambiguous ones should be construed most favorably to insured. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Policy should be construed according to plain and ordinary meaning of language, and intention gathered therefrom controls. Palatine Ins. Co. v. O'Brien, 197 Md. 341, 68 A 484. Presumed parties intended to use words in ordinary sense. French v. Fidelity Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Contracts of insurance, like other contracts, are to be construed according to sense and meaning of terms which parties have used, and if these are clear and unambiguous they are to be taken and understood in their plain, ordinary and common sense. Preston v. Aetna Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1006. Construed, like other contracts, according to plain and popular sense of terms. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. v. McNulty [C. C. A.] 157 F 224. Natural and obvious meaning preferred to curious and hidden sense evolved by trained and acute intellect and exigencies of hard case. Id. Examining physician held without authority to agree to use of words of warranty in special sense. Fish v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 176. While accident policy should be interpreted so as to extend protection over as wide field of injury as is consistent with its language, natural meaning must not be violated. Banta v. Continental Casualty Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1140.

16. Provisions of policy will be strictly construed against insurer for whose benefit they were reserved. Garvey v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 123 App. Div. 106, 108 NYS 186. Where statements as to insured's physical condition are prepared by insurer for its own protection, they must be construed in most favorable light permissible for benefit of insured or beneficiary. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Object is indemnity, and if fairly warranted, such construction should be adopted as will best carry out this object. Cutting v. Atlas Mut. Ins. Co., 199 Mass. 380, 85 NE 174. Contract of insurance not construed liberally and favorably to insurer as contract of guarantor or surety is construed favorably to obligor therein. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Ill. App. 382. Words "legal representatives" in their strict technical sense mean executors or administrators, but these words appearing in life insurance policy may be shown, by the context and surrounding circumstances, to mean "heirs or next of kin." Hague v. Estate of Hague, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 406.

21. Though by-laws made application part of contract. Tate v. Jasper County Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 659.

22. What employes were within risk covered by employer's liability policy. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. Mesker, 128 Mo. App. 183, 106 SW 561.

23. Not permissible to show custom among insurance companies to obligate reinsuring company from date of issuance of a binder.

The contract usually consists of the policy proper and the application,[24] existing statutes[25] and other documents or regulations made part of the policy by reference[26] or attached thereto.[27] In many states the application or other agreement or representation cannot be considered as part of the contract or used in defense unless attached to or endorsed on the policy[28] or expressed therein.[29] In the District of Columbia no defense is allowed in an action on a policy of life insurance unless the insurer delivered with the policy a copy of the application.[30]

Conflict of laws.[See 10 C. L. 848]—This subject is fully treated separately[31] except as to questions controlled by special insurance statutes[32] and attempts to evade the insurance laws of the state by stipulations.[33]

§ 8. Premiums and premium notes, dues and assessments, and payment of the same.[See 10 C. L. 848]—Premiums for employer's liability insurance are commonly based on the wages paid to employes.[34]

Northwestern Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 825.

24. Where policy is written based on application constituting only information insurer has, application becomes part of contract and insurer is bound by its provisions and conditions to same extent as insured is bound by provisions and conditions of policy. Allen v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829.

25. Rev. St. 1899, § 7896 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3750), declaring when suicide shall and when it shall not be a defense, is part of Missouri contract of insurance. Tennent v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 754.

26. Terms incorporated by reference are part of policy. Gill v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co. [Ariz.] 95 P 89. No defense to action on premium note that articles of incorporation, by-laws and defendant's application were not attached to nor incorporated in policy, though articles of incorporation provided they were parts of contract of insurance, since different writings taken together may constitute single contract. Dempster v. Opocensky [Neb.] 116 NW 524.

27. Where insurer transferred its business and transferee sent notices thereof to policy holders with direction to attach them as riders to policies, riders so attached and old policies constituted policies of insured. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Ross [Ind.] 86 NE 606.

28. Note given an obtaining loan on policy and containing forfeiture clause could be relied on by insured, same being a subsequent modification of contract and not within Code, § 1741, requiring companies "on issue or renewal" of policies to attach or indorse representations, etc. Wilson v. Royal Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 137 Iowa, 184, 114 NW 1051. Failure to indorse or attach application or representations does not preclude reliance on conditions or warranties in policy itself. Kirkpatrick v. London Guar. & Acc. Co. [Iowa] 115 NW 1107. Provision of Code, § 1741, authorizing plaintiff to prove application, though not attached to policy, was to enable him to establish estoppel or waiver against company, and not to preclude latter from relying on stipulations and conditions in policy. Id. First page of a sheet containing "Proposal for Insurance" and "Memorandum for the Solicitor to Fill" held not part of application shown on second page, within Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 73, requiring as condition to introduction of application in evidence that copy be annexed to policy. Bonville v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 197, 85 NE 1057. Statements to medical examiner which with application proper were made part of contract held part of application, within statute requiring application to be attached to policy, though such statements were on separate sheet of paper. Paulhamus v. Security Life & Annuity Co., 163 F 554.

29. Under Code 1896, § 2602, prohibiting companies from making any contract of insurance or any agreement as to policy contract other than is plainly expressed in policy conditions in application cannot be considered part of contract unless expressed in policy. Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Erneville [Ala.] 47 S 72.

30. Under D. C. Code, § 657 (31 Stat. 1294, c. 854), copy of entire application must be delivered. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Hawkins, 31 App. D. C. 493. Semble, congress had power to enact the statute. Id. Foreign corporation not in position to question validity of statute. Id.

31. See Conflict of Laws, 11 C. L. 665.

32. Under Laws 1902, p. 66, c. 59, § 14, providing that all contracts of insurance on property, lives, or interests in Mississippi shall be deemed to be made therein, policy of life insurance made in another state must be construed according to Mississippi law, despite provisions in policy to contrary. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miazza [Miss.] 46 S 817.

33. See post, § 9, on attempt to evade statute of forum as to materiality of representations by stipulation that laws of another state should control.

34. Under policy basing premiums on compensation to employes, and, under heading "Trade or Kind of Business," containing the words "galvanized iron cornice and wrought iron work, including drivers," company was entitled to premiums computed on wages of workers on skylights, and of tinners, carpenters, shippers, machinists, engineers and night watchmen. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. Mesker, 128 Mo. App. 183, 106 SW 561. Wages for tinners' work done outside held within schedule in other policies indemnifying against loss for injuries to employes on outside work and containing, under head Kind of Business, "galvanized iron and sheet

In the absence of waiver or estoppel,[35] policies are usually rendered void by failure to pay premiums or dues at maturity[36] or within a period of extension[37] or of grace.[38] Failure to pay premium notes will not, however, avoid the policy in the absence of stipulation to that effect,[39] and, unless expressly waived,[40] notice of maturity of premiums is often essential to forfeiture.[41] A statute against for-iron workers, wrought iron work, erecting." Id. Where employer agreed to furnish correct statements as to wages as basis for adjustment of premiums, fact that company was unable to prove with certainty amount of such wages did not deprive it of right to recover at all on claim for additional premiums on ground of understatements as to wages, but court was authorized to accept approximate estimates. Gilbane v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 673.

35. See post, § 16C. As to payment of first premium, see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

36. Nonpayment avoids where policy so provides. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ala.] 47 S 735. Where policy and premium note made contract void so long as note remained overdue, protection was suspended during period of nonpayment, relieving insurer from liability for loss occurring during continuance of default. American Ins. Co. v. Hornbarger, 85 Ark. 337, 108 SW 213. Nonpayment of premiums after the first may or may not work forfeiture, according to circumstances. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Life Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Letter of company's district manager and adjuster stating that premiums were paid under certain conditions held prima facie evidence of payment, so as to preclude directed verdict for defendant. Dolsen v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 151 Mich. 228, 14 Det. Leg. N. 894, 115 NW 50. Policy avoided for failure to pay premium instalment. Sewell v. Continental Casualty Co. [Miss.] 46 S 714. Provision that policy should be null and void if insured failed to pay loss dues within time specified in notice held for benefit of company, and not to render policy ipso facto void on nonpayment, so as to enable insured to defend suit for assessment on him as policy holder of mutual company. International Sav. & Trust Co. v. Tillotson, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 521. Evidence sufficient to sustain finding that check for dues was sent by insured and received by association prior to insured's injury. Corbett v. Physicians' Casualty Ass'n, 135 Wis. 505, 115 NW 365. On payment of the initial premium on a life policy, there is a contract of insurance for the whole life of insured, and subsequent termination of the contract for nonpayment of premiums is a forfeiture, and forfeitures are not favored. State Life Ins. Co. v. Murray [C. C. A.] 159 F 408. For questions relating to payment of first premium, see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

37. Evidence held to authorize finding that insurer extended time for payment of premium, and that insured died prior to expiration of such time. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. For authority of agents to extend time for payment of premiums, see post, § 16C.

38. Where premium was payable October 1st, which was Sunday, and 30 days of grace were allowed, death November 1st, premium not having been paid, held not within policy protection, 30 days beginning to run midnight October 1st and terminating midnight October 31st, though Sunday made premium payable on Monday, it not being permissible to count 30 days after October 2nd. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wimberly [Tex.] 112 SW 1038, rvg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 778. Where clause allowing 30 days' grace for payment of premium did not require payment on or before any particular hour, payment could be made any time before midnight of last day of grace, though by another clause, not expressly providing for forfeiture, annual premium was payable at or before 5 o'clock, October 1st. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wimberly [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 778, rvd. on other grounds by opinion in [Tex.] 112 SW 1038. See above, this note. Where 30 days' grace were allowed for paying premiums and company was allowed to deduct any indebtedness to it or unpaid premiums for current year, recovery could be had for death during 30-day period, though premium was not paid before expiration of such period or thereafter. Id.

39. No such stipulation in notes or in policy. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Note accepted in payment of premium has no relation to contract of insurance, except as stipulated in policy. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Annuity Life Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Failure to pay note for premium after the first will not avoid policy not stipulating for forfeiture in such case, though note contains such stipulation, and though policy stipulates for forfeiture for nonpayment of "premiums." Id. Vested right of beneficiary could not be affected by forfeiture stipulation in note, though policy provided method of changing beneficiary. Id. Provision for interest on note may be considered. Id. When company accepts a note, policy will be continued in force for same length of time as if amount represented by note had been paid in cash, unless insurance contract expressly stipulates to the contrary (Id.), or unless, in event of nonpayment of note at maturity, insurer asks surrender of policy and offers to surrender note (Id.).

40. Where correspondence between insurer and insured showed that latter understood he was giving up his insurance, and for more than two months insured ignored letter from agent informing him how insurance could be kept in force, he waived right to further notice from company, even though law required notice before forfeiture. Weston v. State Mut. Life Assur. Soc., 234 Ill. 492, 84 NE 1073. Provision that notice of premiums "due or to become due is given and accepted by delivery and acceptance of this policy" held waiver of notice of time for payment of premiums and of notice of forfeiture for nonpayment. Allison's Ex'x v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 1025, 107 SW 730.

41. Members can be put in default only by notice provided by charter of company, and feiture without notice does not affect the doctrine of abandonment by failure to keep up the insurance.[42] The burden is on one who claims credit for overpayment of previous premiums.[43] The right to paid up or extended insurance on failure to pay premiums,[44] jury questions,[45] and presumptions relative to payment or extension of credit,[46] are postponed for subsequent treatment.

Premiums or dues usually become the absolute property of insurer when paid,[47] and cannot be recovered back in the absence of valid agreement,[48] want of consideration,[49] or circumstances justifying rescission.[50] On rescission of a life policy, premiums paid by insured go to him and not to his beneficiary.[51] A severable agreement for special benefits to insured, though void under the statute, does not relieve him of liability on his premium note[52] or entitle him to recover premiums paid.[53]

A premium note to an agent who has not paid his privilege tax is void under a statute declaring void all contracts with persons who have failed to pay the tax.[54] knowledge otherwise acquired is insufficient. Miner v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 571, 117 NW 211. But for great length of time during which premiums were not paid, petition held to state cause of action, though plaintiff had failed to pay premiums, it being stated contract provided it should be governed by New York laws which rsquire company to give written notice of premiums, which notice had not been given. McGeehan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 604. Where policy required payment without notice, of a mortuary premium and dues, amount to be fixed by notice if one was received, otherwise to be same as last premium paid, absence of notice was no excuse for failure to pay any premium on date specified. Kray v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 421. For questions for jury, see post, § 24C.

42. Failure to pay for 8 years held abandonment, despite want of notice. McGeehan v. Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 604.

43. Could not be presumed, in absence of evidence, that money paid on issuance of policy was for premiums in advance and did not include policy fee, where policy was issued in consideration of premium and policy fee. Greenwaidt v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 52 Misc. 353, 102 NYS 157.

44. See post, § 13.

45, 46. See post § 24C.

47. Where company maintained a safety fund department in which certificates were issued obligating members to pay to company a fixed sum as expense dues while certificates remained in force, expense dues paid belonged to company, and certificate holders had no interest therein, though company ceased to issue new certificates. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39.

48. Applicant held entitled to recover premium where it was paid on understanding with agent that it be returned if applicant should decline policy and he did decline it. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Seidel [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 945. In absence of fraud, right to recover premiums cannot be predicated on agreement which is ultra vires, plaintiff having had valid insurance in meantime. No recovery as for money had and received where corporation had no power to agree to return sick benefit dues after 10 years, less sick benefits paid. Southern Mut. Aid Ass'n v. Watson [Ala.] 45 S 649.

49. Where insured gave agent I. O. U. for first premium and agent paid company, insured's wife was not entitled to recover amount of such premium on theory of double payment where shortly before insured's death she merely took up the I. O. U. by paying agent. Jackson v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 233 Ill. 161, 84 NE 198. Where agent's agreement, by which he took premium note from an applicant and promised to return it should insured decline policy, was unauthorized and repudiated by company, applicant could recover from company amount of such note where agent negotiated it contrary to his agreement and company receive proceeds. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Seidel [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 945.

50. See post, § 16.

51. Latter having no interest therein. Slocum v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 796.

52. Violation of Revisal 1905, § 4775, prohibiting special benefits or rebates, held no defense, insured having retained policy for the year and enjoyed its protection. Security Life & Indemnity Co. v. Costner [N. C.] 63 SE 304. That note was payable to agent and by him transferred to company held immaterial, company being bound by agent's acts. Id.

53. Insured who had paid first annual premium on life policy could not recover same on ground policy was invalid because of separate agreement whereby for services rendered he was to receive a deduction from second premium, since violation of Ky. St. 1903, § 656, prohibiting discriminations between insurance, did not render policy void, and since policy was enforcible during first year, and separate contract could not be admitted in evidence under § 678, requiring certain matters to be made part of policy in order to be admitted in evidence in action on policy. Commonwealth Life Ins. Co. v. Bowling [Ky.] 114 SW 327. For rebate or special benefits as affecting validity of policy, see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity.

54. Acts 1898, pp. 18-30, c. 5. White v. Post [Miss.] 45 S 366. Note executed after April 21, 1906, held not void, statute going into effect on that date merely prescribing

Premium notes, like other notes, are also vitiated as between the parties by fraud[55] or failure of consideration,[56] but a slight difference in the amount of a premium as stated in the note and as stated in the policy will not prevent recovery on the note where insured retained the policy.[57] An agent may sue in his own name on a note payable to him.[58]

Mutual companies. See 10 C. L. 850—The right to levy assessments[59] with or without notice,[60] or to increase the same;[61] the method of proceeding[62]; and questions relating to the maximum amount of assessments,[63] the time of payment,[64] and the right to forfeit the insurance for nonpayment,—[65] are usually dependent upon fine and imprisonment against persons or corporations exercising privilege without paying tax. Young v. State Life Ins. Co. [Miss.] 45 S 706. Whether agent resided where he paid municipal privilege tax held for jury. Simpson v. Goodman [Miss.] 45 S 615.

55. Fraud in obtaining premium note held not sustained by mere proof that insurance contract was not as advantageous as that agreed upon. State Life Ins. Co. v. Bolton [Neb.] 118 NW 122.

56. Burden of showing want of consideration held sustained by defendant, in suit on premium note, by showing that he received no policy nor any notice that application had been approved, it being then incumbent on plaintiff to show that application had been accepted and approved at home office under agreed condition precedent to liability on part of company. Van Arsdale v. Young [Okl.] 95 P 778.

57. Verdict for amount of premium note held proper where insured retained policy until maturity of note, though policy recited slightly larger sum as annual premium than that given in note. Caldwell v. Campbell [Ga. App.] 61 SE 290.

58. Where premium note was payable to agent, and on maker's refusal to accept policy agent settled with company, he could sue on note in his own name as real party in interest. Graham v. Remmel [Ark.] 112 SW 141.

59. In action by receiver of foreign mutual fire insurance company to recover assessment on policy holder under decree of foreign court, evidence held to show that company had never reorganized under amendatory statute imposing contingent liability on policy holders, so as to authorize assessment. Swing v. Red River Lumber Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 442. Evidence held to show that assessment levied by assessment company was illegal because wholly unnecessary, so that failure to pay same did not work forfeiture of insurance. King v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 63. Insured held not liable for assessments. Swing v. Crane, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 297. Company held authorized by by-laws made part of contract to levy extra assessments. Kray v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 421.

60. Where by-law of mutual fire insurance company provided that when company was without sufficient funds to pay losses directors should make assessments on members for amount needed, directors could levy assessments without notice. Hammond v. Knox, 109 NYS 367. Under Rev. Laws Mass. c. 118, §§ 47, 48 et seq., providing that mutual fire insurance companies shall make assessments on members to meet losses and expenses, and authorizing court to order assessment in specified cases, notice by mail to policy holders is sufficient. Id. One not appearing held not entitled to notice beyond notice of original petition and of hearing. Id. Could not insist on personal service of process. Id.

61. Certificate providing for payment at stated times of mortuary premiums for such amount as executive committee might deem requisite, at such rate according to age of each member as might be established by board of directors, and that rate of such premiums might be changed to correspond with actual mortality experience of association, held to authorize association to increase premiums according to exigencies of its business. Schmierer v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 153 Cal. 208, 94 P 887. Insurance certificate on "safety fund" plan construed, and held not to authorize company to increase rate of mortality calls beyond amount specified in certificate. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39. Readjustment of rates to conform to estimated cost of insurance according to experience of association, equalized among members by considering attained age of each member, held authorized by constitution, by-laws and contracts of assessment association. Trisler v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 128 Mo. App. 497, 106 SW 1082. Readjustment requiring each member of a certain class to pay actual cost of insurance according to association's experience held not discriminatory because two other classes paid flat premiums, where these covered cost of insurance based on experience of association. Id.

62. Where policy in mutual fire insurance company obligated holder to pay assesements made in pursuance of law of state of company's origin, statutes of that state regulating assessments were part of contract. Hammond v. Knox, 109 NYS 367.

63. Where mutual fire policy obligated insured to pay assessments not exceeding cash premiums, amount of assessments was determinable by amount of cash premium fixed by policy, and not by a sum paid by insured in compromise settlement of premium up to date of insolvency judgment. Hammond v. Knox, 109 NYS 367.

64. Requirement that assessments be paid within 30 days "after the issuing of said notice" of assessment means within 30 days after giving or delivery of such notice. Miner v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 571, 117 NW 211.

65. One from whom an excessive assesement is demanded need not tender a sum equivalent to a legal assessment in order to the terms of the statute or the contract. Levies by order of court, or by directors of a company under the contract, are prima facie valid in proceedings in other states.[86]

When an assessment is made sufficient to pay a loss in full, paying members are not subject to further assessment for that loss to make good a deficiency arising from failure of other members to pay.[87] Liens to secure assessments are sometimes provided by statute.[88] Limitations will bar recovery.[89]

§ 9. Warranties, conditions and representations. In general. See 10 C. L. 850 There is a well recognized distinction at common law between a warranty and a representation in that a warranty is a statement by the insured which forms a part of the contract of insurance,[70] and which must be literally true to permit a recovery on the policy, regardless of materiality to the risk,[71] while a representation is a mere inducement to the contract, must relate to a material matter, and need be prevent a forfeiture for failure to pay the sum demanded. King v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 63. Belief that extra assessment was unauthorized held not to excuse failure to pay subsequent regular bimonthly assessment. Kray v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 421.

66. Where court of sister state directs levy of assessments on members of mutual fire insurance company of such state in manner provided by statute made part of contract of insurance, determination of court is at least prima facie evidence of necessity and validity of assessments. Hammond v. Knox, 109 NYS 367. Common-law proof not essential. Id. Assessment by directors or court on insolvency of company held prima facie evidence of necessity thereof and that amount was proper. Stone v. Penn Yan, etc., R. Co., 109 NYS 374. Order for assessment on policy holders made by court in one state held not conclusive on courts of another state in proceeding to enforce same against policy holder not party to assessment proceeding. Swing v. Sligo Furnace Co., 133 Ill. App. 217.

67. Member sustaining loss held entitled only to be subrogated to company's lien for assessment and, under by-laws, to any surplus from annual assessment for expenses. McTindall v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 213.

68. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 712, giving co-operative insurance associations a lien on property insured to secure assessments, and providing that subsequent purchasers or junior lienholders shall be entitled to benefit of the insurance, lien operates against a subsequent purchaser, though he had no notice thereof at time of purchase. Farmers' Home Ins. Co. v. Carey [Ky.] 113 SW 841. Lien is only for assessments and calls, not for membership fees. Id. To subject insured property to payment of pro rata of insured of indebtedness of a co-operative insurance association, petition must allege that such pro rata is based on calls or assessments, and must set up the facts showing same to have been legally made. Id.

69. Six years' statute of limitations runs against assessment levied on policy holder, and running of statute is not barred by approval by supreme court of a second assessment against same party when it covers same liability as first assessment with probable costs of collection added. Swing v. Crane, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 297.

70. Unless a statement or answer is in the policy itself or by the terms of the policy clearly made a part thereof, it is not a warranty. Where policy by express terms makes application part of contract, or makes it the basis thereof or is declared to be issued on faith of application, statements in application are part of policy and hence warranties (Spence v. Central Acc. Ins. Co., 236 Ill. 444, 86 NE 104), but mere reference to application is insufficient to make statements therein warranties (Id.). Recital that policy was issued in consideration of warranties and agreements in application and specified sum held not to make application part of policy. Id. Statement in application as to age of insured held a mere representation, though application warranted statements therein and recited that it should be basis of contract. Id. Application cannot be considered on question whether it is part of policy, this question being determinable only from language of policy itself. Id. A schedule of warranties indorsed on the policy becomes effective as a part thereof though blanks for exceptions are not filled. Error to exclude evidence to show falsity of certain warranties as to other insurance, accidents, diseases, etc., though phrases "except as follows," "other than as above stated," etc., were not followed or preceded by any exceptions. Stewart v. General Acc. Ins. Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 120. Where application in which insured stated he had never had any serious illness or disease other than those incident to childhood was signed by him and incorporated into contract warranting all statements therein to be true, insured thereby warranted that he had never had any serious illness or disease except those incident to childhood. Keiper v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206.

71. Warranty forms part of contract and must be literally true. Spence v. Central Acc. Ins. Co., 236 Ill. 444, 86 NE 104. False warranty avoids, whether material or not. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Brubaker [Kan.] 96 P 62; French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. To allow recovery, statements made warranties must be true literally or substantially according only substantially true.[72] Intention controls as to whether a statement is to be regarded as a warranty or as a representation,[73] mere terminology not being conclusive.[74] Courts are averse to warranties[75] and will construe them strictly against the insurer,[76] as in the case of provisos and conditions generally.[77] Where the answer to a question purports to be complete, any substantial misstatement avoids a policy issued on the faith thereof,[78] but where a question is either not answered at all or appears to be imperfectly answered, the issuance of the policy waives imperfections or deficiencies.[79] Only the insurer can take advantage of a misrepresentation.[80] Statutes in many states now provide in effect that no misrepresentation or false statement made by insured shall avoid the policy unless fraudulent[81] or material to the risk.[82] Such statutes cannot be evaded by stipulation.[83] Though to nature of fact warranted, whether statements are material or not. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634.

72. Spence v. Central Acc. Ins. Co., 236 Ill. 444, 86 NE 104. False representation does not avoid unless material to risk. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Misrepresentation is statement of something as fact which is untrue, either with knowledge of untruth and intent to deceive or positively without knowledge as to truth, such fact in either case being material to risk. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Ill. App. 382.

73. Answers to question as to 28 different past ailments held not warranties, especially since they were referred to in statement to examiner as "statements and representations." Minnesota Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Link, 131 Ill. App. 89.

74. Absence of stipulation voiding policy for untrue answers, uncontestable clause, and provision for adjustment of policy in accordance with correct age, if age was misstated, held to show that only utmost good faith was required of insured in making application, though application declared that all statements therein should be warranties. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Lear, 31 App. D. C. 184.

75. Courts will not construe a statement as a warranty unless language of policy is so clear as to preclude any other construction. Spence v. Central Acc. Ins. Co., 236 Ill. 444, 86 NE 104.

76. Warranties framed by company will be construed strictly against it, especially if ambiguous. Dineen v. General Acc. Ins. Co., 110 NYS 344.

77. Conditions and provisos strictly construed against insurer preparing same and proposing contract. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Since they tend to limit scope of contract and defeat its purpose. Jennings v. Brotherhood Acc. Co. [Colo.] 96 P 982. Such compliance with terms and conditions is sufficient as is fair and reasonable under the circumstances. Leiman v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 111 NYS 536.

78, 79. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Issuance of policy on application waives all matters of form or completeness of answers to questions therein. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. That an answer is partial does not show breach of warranty if true so far as it goes and accepted by insurer. "Have none" in answer to question as to name and residence of physician, "The one whom you have personally employed or consulted," held not to establish breach where at time of application insured had no physician, though he had previously personally consulted one. Haughton v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ind. App.] 85 NE 125.

80. Insured's misrepresentations as to age and physical condition and knowledge thereof by wife who became administratrix held not to defeat latter's right to recover proceeds from assignee in wagering transaction, defense of misrepresentation being available only to insurer. Bendet v. Ellis [Tenn.] 111 SW 795.

81. Statements as to previous medical treatment and use of intoxicants being within knowledge of applicant, held made in bad faith where untrue. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Under Pa. Act June 23, 1885, § 1 (P. L. 134), providing that no misrepresentation or false statement made in good faith shall work forfeiture or be ground for defense unless relating to some matter material to risk, untrue statement made in good faith will not avoid policy unless material to risk, but untrue statement made in bad faith and for purpose of misleading insurer avoids, though same is not material. Kelper v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206.

82. Warranties material to risk are unaffected by Rev. St. Mo. 1899, §§ 7973, 7974, 7975 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 3791, 3792), providing that warranties in certain applications and policies shall, if not material to risk insured, be deemed representations only. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Manning [C. C. A.] 160 F 382. In considering materiality of answers, question is not what disease insured died of but what effect answers might have had in inducing company to issue policy. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Under statute requiring that statements be material or fraudulent, a misrepresentation to be material need not be as to a defect which contributed to loss, it being sufficient if knowledge or ignorance of fact wrongfully asserted or suppressed would naturally influence insurer in making contract at all, estimating risk or fixing premium. Bryant v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 60 SE 983. Statement that applicant had not been under care of a physician is material. Id. Acts 1894, p. 1059, c. 662, Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 23, § 196, providing that untrue statements in warranties shall be no defense if made in good faith unless material to risk, is remedial and should be construed so as to insure judicial investigation as to truth and it is sometimes held that the parties are entitled to determine for themselves what representations shall be deemed material to the risk,[84] it is doubtful whether they can by agreement make material in law, statements which are clearly not material in fact.[85] Good faith is usualy immaterial if a statement is untrue and material to the risk[86] except in policies which have incontestable clauses.[87] The question whether materiality is for the court or for the jury is treated in a subsequent section.[88]

Burglary insurance.[See 10 C. L. 352]—Insured is commonly required to keep such books and accounts as will show the actual loss.[89]

Employer's liability insurance.[See 10 C. L. 352]—A covenant to maintain safety devices is not a guaranty against accidents of the kind the devices are designed to prevent.[90] As a rule action lies only to recover for loss actually paid in satisfaction of a judgment.[91]

Fire insurance.[See 10 C. L. 352]—It is commonly stipulated that the policy shall be void if insured has concealed or misrepresented material facts or circumstances,[92] such as the value of the property,[93] or has failed to truthfuly answer questions rel-materiality of statements. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385.

83. Provision in policy that it is subject to laws of another state held contrary to public policy, statute of forum requiring that untrue statements be material to risk. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Immaterial that defendant's name indicated it was a mutual company. Id.

84. Making inquiries and answering, shows parties deemed matters material. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Ill. App. 382.

85. Provision that each statement was material held ineffectual to render material a statement which was in fact immaterial. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miazza [Miss.] 46 S 817.

86. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Positive material misstatement avoids, regardless of ignorance, mistake or good faith. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Ill. App. 382; Western & So. Life Ins. Co. v. Quinn [Ky.] 113 SW 456; Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miazza [Miss.] 46 S 817. Under Act Pa. June 23, 1885, § 1, against avoidance because of statements in good faith unless material to risk. Paulhamus v. Security Life & Annuity Co., 163 F 554.

87. See post, § 16B.

88. See post, § 24C, subd. Questions of Law and Fact.

89. Under burgiary policy avoiding itself if "books and accounts" were not so kept that actual loss could be determined therefrom, held proper to consider both account books and invoices of purchases. Schwartz v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 113 NYS 66. Account book and invoices held sufficient if from both actual loss was ascertainable. Id. Condition in burglary policy that insured should keep books of account, being intended for protection of insurer against an excessive claim, where amount of loss was not in dispute, insurer was not relieved because books and invoices were destroyed after commission of burglary. Leiman v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 111 NYS 536. Books produced at trial from which it could not be determined what goods were on hand on any particular day held not to authorize recovery under policy requiring insured to keep such books and accounts as would show actual loss. Pearlman v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 111 NYS 882.

90. By provision that "all mangle machines * * * shall be provided with fixed guards or safety feed tables adjusted at the point of contact of the rolls so as to prevent the fingers or hands of employes from being drawn into the rolls," assured did not guarantee that such machines and guards should be used as would prevent injury, but merely required machines used to be so guarded that, so far as practicable, they would protect employes from injury during their labors. Despatch Laundry Co. v. Employer's Liability Assur. Corp. [Minn.] 118 NW 152.

91. Covenant to defend on notice and provision that no action should lie except to recover for loss actually sustained and paid by insured in satisfaction of a judgment held dependent so that insured could not recover expenses incurred in successfully defending action against him. Lawrence v. General Acc. Assur. Corp., 124 App. Div. 545, 108 NYS 939. Provision requiring action to be brought by insured himself to reimburse him for loss actually sustained and paid by him and in satisfaction of judgment after trial of the issue did not preclude action by assignee of indemnity claim who had assumed and paid judgment liability, such transaction being equivalent to payment by assured. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Omaha Elec. L. & P. Co. [C. C. A.] 157 F 514.

92. Representation that building was 20 by 30 feet when it was 16 by 24 held not of itself material within policy provision that insurance should be void if insured concealed or misrepresented any material fact or circumstance. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. Failure of member of mutual co-operative insurance association to answer letters to him inclosing policies and inquiring as to premiums he was paying on other insurance held not fraud or concealment of material facts. Merchants' Underwriters v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co., 140 Ill. App. 504.

93. Warranty that value of building was $1,500 when it was only $200 held not substantially true within rule that warranties ative to specified matters,[94] if he is not the owner of the premises in fee,[95] or the unconditional and sole owner,[96] or if he has or obtains additional insurance,[97] or fails to observe the requirements of the so-called "iron-safe clause," [98] or to as to cash value need be only substantially true. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. That value was merely "estimated" by insured to be $1,500 held not to relieve him of obligation to state value with reasonable degree of accuracy. Id. Evidence held to show fraudulent overvaluation. Hoyt v. Insurance Co., 103 Me. 299, 69 A 110. Under Code 1906, § 2592, requiring insurance companies in case of loss to pay full amount of policy, policy is valid though property is overinsured and though statute also prohibits companies from knowingly insuring property over fair value. Mississippi Home Ins. Co. v. Barron [Miss.] 45 S 875.

94. Answer as to dimensions of building held not within warranty as to truthfulness of answers touching "condition, situation, value, occupation and title" of the property. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634.

95. Life estate held not sufficient to satisfy warranty that insured owned the land in fee simple. Johnson v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 430, 60 SE 118.

96. Condition that policy should be void if insured was not sole, entire, and unconditional owner held reasonable and valid, and failure to disclose real state of title if not sole, entire and unconditional is fatal, though unintentional. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Schmidt [C. C. A.] 162 F 447. Insured's ownership is "sole" when no other than insured has any interest in the property as owner, and unconditional when quality of estate is not limited or affected by any condition. Id. Unexplained appearance of word "buggies" in policy held not of itself a representation that insured was owner of buggies, policy covering other property. Arkansas Ins. Co v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Where policy was void by its terms of insured's interest was other than unconditional and sole ownership, or if any change other than death took place in title, interest or possession, insurer was not liable if either clause was violated. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Monumental Sav Ass'n, 107 Va. 701, 60 SE 93.

Held unconditional and sole owner: Equitable owner in actual possession and entitled to deed held vested with "sole ownership, both legal and equitable." Arkansas Ins. Co. v. McManus [Ark.] 110 SW 797. Vendee in possession under executory contract, most of price having been paid, held "unconditional and sole owner" in fee simple of equitable title. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Existence of purchase money mortgage held no breach. Standard Leather Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 631. Where insurer demurred to evidence, thereby waiving all inferences not necessarily resulting from its own evidence tending to show that insured had divested himself of his unconditional and sole ownership, it could not be necessarily inferred that an alleged agreement of sale by insured was such as to divest him of his sole ownership or that it was in force when policy was issued, neither its date nor terms being shown. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Monumental Sav. Ass'n, 107 Va. 701, 60 SE 93. "Unconditional and sole ownership" does not refer to legal title and is not affected by insured giving a mortgage, option or conditional sale, last being such as he could not specifically enforce, and he continuing to bear risk of loss. Id. Defense that insured was not unconditional and sole owner held not available by proof that insured was only lessee, description written by agent being "their interest" in a certain building, "their interest being second story," etc. American Ins. Co. v. Egyptian Lodge, 128 Ill. App. 161. Description having been written by agent without suggestion from insured, company could not complain that it is not as definite and clear as it might have been. Id.

Held not unconditional and sole owner: Policy held void where title had been in wife and on her death passed one-third to insured and two-thirds to daughters, though insured had paid for property, treated it as his own, paid taxes, etc., and though he made no representation as to title. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Schmidt [C. C. A.] 162 F 447.

97. Provision requiring additional insurance to be assented to in writing on policy held not violated where neither company to which application for additional insurance was made nor applicant understood that any risk had yet been assumed by such company. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. "Other insurance" permitted by policy means insurance in addition to that effected by policy itself. De Loach & Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Ga. App.] 62 SE 473. One who obtains from same insurer two policies issued at different times on same property may not procure total insurance in excess of largest amount permitted by either policy. Id. First policy for $1,500 permitted $1,600 "other insurance," second for $500 permitted $2,000 "other insurance." Held $1,200 policy taken out in another company avoided both. Id. Clause allowing "$150,000 total concurrent insurance" allows such amount in addition to amount of policy containing the clause. Merchants' Underwriters v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co., 140 Ill. App. 504. Policy avoided where at time of fire insured had $4,500 insurance on property and only "$2,700 total concurrent insurance" was permitted by its terms. Johnson v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 430, 60 SE 118. Contract held to permit endorsement as to additional insurance. Insurance Co. v. De Loach & Co., 3 Ga. App. 807, 61 SE 406. Fire policy void if other insurance should be procured held avoided where insured procured other insurance though in ignorance of prohibition in policy. Rice v. Hartford Ins. Co. [Wash.] 97 P 238. For questions on concurrent insurance not arising under avoidance clause, see post, § 17.

98. Inventories: Entry of mere summary of inventory in a book held not compliance with provision requiring insured to keep in fireproof safe last inventory before issuance of policy. Arkansas Ins. Co. v.

furnish plans and specifications or other proof of loss,[99] or if without the insurer's consent there is any change in title, interest or possession,[1] or in use and occu-

Luther, 85 Ark. 579, 109 SW 1022. Requirement that unless complete inventory of stock had been taken within 12 months preceding date of policy one should be taken within 30 days, and that last preceding inventory should be kept in safe, held met where, on discovering that part of inventory taken before policy issued had been destroyed, insured took new inventory and preserved it though he did not preserve undestroyed part of old inventory. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. McManus [Ark.] 110 SW 797. Complaint that part of inventory was in Hebrew held without merit, it not being stated what part and it not appearing that any part of inventory shown by record was in Hebrew. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Lipsitz, 130 Ga. 170, 60 SE 531.

Books, accounts, inventories, etc.: Policy avoided by failure of insured to keep inventory or keep books showing status of business. Johnson v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 430, 60 SE 118. Avoided as to merchandise for failure to keep cash account of goods sold, invoice of goods bought, and inventory. Hollenbeck & Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 217. Sufficient if from books kept with assistance of those who understood system on which they were kept amount of purchases and sales could be ascertained and cash transactions distinguished from those on credit. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Lipsitz, 130 Ga. 170, 60 SE 531. Failure of insured to keep itemized account of cash sales held not to avoid, he having entered them on his books. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. McManus [Ark.] 110 SW 797. Policy not avoided by insured's failure to keep merchandise account where his accounts showed amount of his sales, and inventory and invoices made it possible to ascertain amount of goods on hand, statutes requiring only substantial compliance with terms of policies. Id. Proof that insured had taken and preserved an inventory which he produced at trial, and that he had kept a pocket memorandum book for credit and cash sales, contents of which were copied in another book after fire and produced at trial, held to authorize finding of compliance with clause requiring keeping of a set of books and preserving same in iron safe or other safe place. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Driver [Ark.] 112 SW 200.

Safe keeping: No recovery where insured did not keep books in iron safe as policy required. Powell v. Com. Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 436, 60 SE 120. "Iron safe clause" held not breached by not keeping books of account in fireproof safe until expiration of time in which to take inventory, since books of account would be no aid in estimating damages unaccompanied by inventory. Hamann v. Nebraska Underwriters' Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 65.

99. See post, § 19.

1. Instances of change in title, interest or possession: "Interest" held broader than title and practically synonymous with "estate." Widincamp v. Phenix Ins. Co. of Brooklyn [Ga. App.] 62 SE 478. Execution of bond for title, receipt of part of purchase price, and delivery of possession, held to effect change of interest. Id. Sale of laundry business continued under old name held change of interest, title or possession so as to avoid policy. American Steam Laundry Co. v. Hamburg Bremen Fire Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 113 SW 394. Bankruptcy one hour after insurance for protection of contractors held bar to action by either owner or contractors. New Kensington Lumber Co. v. German Ins. Co. of Freeport, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 32. Bankruptcy adjudication held not to work change of title, etc., where property was destroyed before appointment of receiver or trustee. Gordon v. Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co., 120 La. 441, 45 S 384. Appointment of receiver and his taking actual possession and control of property insured held bar to recovery under clause avoiding policy if any change should take place in title, interest or possession, "whether by legal process, or judgment or otherwise." Bronson v. New York Fire Ins. Co. [W. Va.] 63 SE 283. Waiver of objection as to interest, see post, § 16C.

Evidence held not to show change in title, interest or possession. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Monumental Sav. Ass'n, 107 Va. 701, 60 SE 93. Deed and mortgage without consideration, no possession or right of possession being given or intended, held not to work any "change or diminution in interest, title or possession," within forfeiture clause. Cone v. Century Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 307. Mere possession and use of lodge room by members of another lodge held insufficient to show change of interest or possession, it not appearing possession was under binding agreement with insured. American Ins. Co. v. Egyptian Lodge, 128 Ill. App. 161. Decree declaring insured property a nuisance, and insured's promises to remove building, held not to work change in interest, title and possession so long as structure remained undisturbed. Irwin v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 58 Misc. 441, 109 NYS 612. Maxim equity regards as done that which ought to be done held inapplicable. Id.

Consent: Agent held not to assent to change in ownership where, though he knew certain changes had been made, he did not know whether they were changes in interest or physical changes in operation and was then trying to cancel policy. American Steam Laundry Co. v. Hamburg Bremen Fire Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 113 SW 394. Mere knowledge of a transfer of title before loss does not preclude the insurer from relying on a clause against change of title unless otherwise agreed upon, since company could be bound only in case it consented to the transfer. Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 988, 107 SW 321. Where by agreement with agent apparently authorized policy covering goods, buildings, etc., was continued as to stock of goods after sale of farm and removal of goods to another place, and full premium paid with understanding that next full premium need not be paid, insurance on goods was not affected by removal and refusal of insured to pay next premium, especially since company kept premium and issued notice to insured recognizing policy in force. Continental Ins. Co. v. Buchanan, 32 Ky. L. R. 1298, 108 SW 355.

pancy,[2] or increase of risk,[3] or if the property becomes vacant[4] or ceases to be operated,[5] or is or becomes incumbered without insurer's consent,[6] or if foreclosure proceedings be commenced.[7] It is implied that insured will not himself voluntarily and wrongfully burn the property.[8] The severability of policies covering distinct items of property is treated later,[9] as are also waivers and estoppels.[10]

Life, accident and health insurance. See 10 C. L. 856—Policies are often avoided by false statements as to previous or present health,[11] past medical treatment, con-

2. Change in use and occupancy avoids policy under stipulation to that effect. Cone v. Century Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa.] 117 NW 307. Insurer need not prove that change of occupancy or use of premises made risk more hazardous, Code 1897, § 1743, expressly providing that section is inapplicable to provisions avoiding policy for vacancy or unoccupancy. Id.

3. Fire hazard held not increased by decree of court declaring building to be a nuisance and ordering its removal. Irwin v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 58 Misc. 441, 109 NYS 612. No defense that trustees stored baled hay in school house and that certain raftsmen occupied it at night, where neither was shown to have had any relation to fire. Mississippi Home Ins. Co. v. Stevens [Miss.] 46 S 245.

4. Vacancy clause construed and held to require notice of vacancy to insurer only in case no permits are granted authorizing vacancy. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634.

5. Policy describing realty as a building "occupied as an ice factory" and personalty as engines, etc., "and all appurtenances necessary to and used in their business," held not to insure an ice manufacturing plant in operation within clause forfeiting policy if subject of insurance was a manufacturing establishment, and it should cease to be operated for more than 10 consecutive days without insurer's consent and hence continued failure to operate did not work forfeiture. Home Ins. Co. v. North Little Rock Ice & Elec. Co. [Ark.] 111 SW 994.

6. Provision avoiding policy for incumbrances not consented to in writing by insurer is reasonable and valid. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co., 157 F 598; Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 833; National Fire Ins. Co. v. Kneidel, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 193. Warranty on existence or amount of incumbrances is material as matter of law. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Manning [C. C. A.] 160 F 382. Existence of mortgage is material and failure to disclose same when asked about incumbrances avoids policy. Hollenbeck & Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 217. No recovery in absence of evidence that failure to indorse consent was through fraud or mistake. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Kneidel, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 193. Clause avoiding policy "if the subject of insurance be personalty, and be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage," held inapplicable where property consisted of both realty and personalty, one item of personalty only being under mortgage. Sullivan v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Okl.] 94 P 676. Conditional sale vendor of one article of the property, to whom loss was made payable as his interest might appear, held not joint owner of another article covered by policy so as to authorize insured to mortgage such other article to him without violating anti-incumbrance clause. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Liddell Co., 130 Ga. 8, 60 SE 104. Loss payable clause held immaterial. Id. Where as between mortgagor and mortgagee latter would be estopped to plead want of consideration for release of mortgage given before property was insured, insurer could not set up want of consideration and claim breach of warranty against incumbrancer. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Dower [Ark.] 112 SW 200.

Consent: Indorsement on policy by company's agents consenting that interest of insured "as owner of property covered by this policy" be assigned, held insufficient as written consent to incumbrance required by policy. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co., 157 F 598. Verbal consent not authorized by Iowa Code 1897, § 1750, conferring on agents authority within "scope of his employment," since verbal agreements are not within scope of employment to make only written ones. Id. Written consent that interest of insured "as owner of the property" be assigned is not consent to mortgage, though agent knew that transaction was in nature of mortgage and verbally consented. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 833. Agent who issued fire policy and afterwards took mortgage on property in favor of bank of which he was cashier and part owner could not assent to mortgage on behalf of company. Id.

7. Policy held avoided under provision that it should be void unless otherwise provided by agreement endorsed thereon or added thereto, "if with knowledge of insured foreclosure proceedings be commenced or notice given of sale * * * by virtue of mortgage or trust deed," insured having endeavored but failed to postpone foreclosure proceedings, and to obtain endorsement on policy, and having been notified on day proceedings were begun. J. I. Kelly Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. [Fla.] 47 S 742.

8. See post, § 10, subd. Fire Insurance.

9. See post, § 16B.

10. See post, § 16C.

11. As to breach of condition that insured be alive and in sound health when policy is delivered, see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity. Warranty of "sound condition physically" refers to sound health, which is not same as perfect health, and does not include mere temporary indispositions or ailments. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Warranty against "bodily infirmity" includes only ailments of somewhat settled character, and not mere temporary disorders from sudden derangement of system. Id. "Serious illness" warranted against refers to one which has ordinarily a permanently detrimental effect on the system or renders risk unusually hazardous, but does not include any sickness which may terminate in death. Kelper v.

sultation, or attendance,[12] other insurance,[13] earnings,[14] or use of intoxicants.[15] In the absence of fraud, the company is not relieved of liability merely because insured was not a fit subject for insurance when the policy was issued.[16] It is provided by statute in some states that statements by insured as to age, physical condition, etc., shall be binding on insurer unless insured was required to undergo a medical examination.[17] One cannot enforce a policy taken out by a minor and Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206. Warranty against past or present "bronchitis" held to mean only a chronic disease not readily treated and tending to impair health, and to exclude acute bronchitis from which insured had fully recovered. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Evidence held not to conclusively show insured ever suffered from bronchitis. Id. Negative answer to inquiry as to past ailments held qualified by words "or any other 'serious' ailment," so as to refer only to serious ailments. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Link, 131 Ill. App. 89. Evidence held to sustain findings that insured did not to his knowledge have bronchitis or gall stones. Id. Verdict for plaintiff on issue as to breach of representation as to venereal disease held against weight of evidence. Peoria Life Ass'n v. Goodwin, 134 Ill. App. 464. Evidence held not to sustain verdict for plaintiff, but to show that insured, fearing fatal disease, procured policy by suppression of truth and false statements. Iowa Life Ins. Co. v. Houghton [Ind. App.] 85 NE 127. As to sufficiency of evidence for jury, see post, § 24C, subd. Questions of Law and Fact.

12. Whether applicant has consulted or been treated by physicians is material to risk except where ailment is trivial. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Answers held material, so as to avoid policy. Id. Proof of ear trouble and treatment therefor within 2 years held to show breach of warranty that applicant had no defects and that he had had no medical treatment except for stomach trouble. Colaneri v. General Acc. Assur. Corp., 110 NYS 678. Proof of previous treatment for nephritis, and death from delirium tremens and chronic nephritis, held to bar recovery under provision avoiding policy if insured before its date had been treated for any serious disease or if he had any of certain enumerated ailments. Gerlach v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 112 NYS 1095. That insured had been operated on for undescended testicle by named physicians held sufficient to put company on inquiry, it not being expected that answers be more than suggestive, especially those given to medical examiner. Paulhamus v. Security Life & Annuity Co., 163 F 554. Failure to require definite finding as to truthfulness of representation that insured had not been under a physician's care within two years held error. Bryant v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 60 SE 983. Not necessary that applicant should have been bedridden to constitute breach of representation that he had not been "under the care" of "a physician, it being sufficient if applicant, apprehensive as to his condition, though up and around," intrusted his case to physician for regular or continuous treatment. Id. That examining physician on being told the facts said "it did not count," and "was not considered illness," held insufficient to show that parties agreed to use words of warranty as to previous care of physicians in a special sense. Fish v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 176. Gravity of subject of consultation immaterial within warranty that applicant had not consulted a physician. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Brubaker [Kan.] 96 P 62. Evidence held to show falsity of answers as to medical treatment. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. That insured had "consulted" a physician held not breach of representation that she had not been "attended." Prudential Ins. Co. v. Lear, 31 App. D. C. 184. As to propriety of directing or failing to direct verdict, see post, § 24C, subd. Questions of Law or Fact.

13. That another company had insured life of applicant for a certain sum did not show breach of warranty that no application to any other company had been made on which insurance was not granted, or on which insurance was not issued for full amount and of kind applied for. Houghton v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ind. App.] 85 NE 125. That other insurance had been granted held not inconsistent with negative answers as to existing insurance in other companies, since policy might have been subsequently canceled or surrendered. Id. Warranty that applicant had no accident or health insurance, that no application made by him for insurance had ever been declined, and that no accident or health policy to him had been canceled, held not to refer to life insurance. Dineen v. General Acc. Ins. Co., 110 NYS 344.

14. False statement as to weekly earnings held not to defeat recovery for loss of hand under policy promising specified sum for loss of hand and weekly indemnity for less severe injury. Claypool v. Continental Casualty Co. [Ky.] 112 SW 835. Similar misrepresentation held no bar to recovery of fixed sum for loss of hand, having reference only to weekly indemnity to which insured was entitled in case of incapacity not involving loss of limb. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Claypool, 32 Ky. L. R. 856, 107 SW 325.

15. That applicant used very much more than one glass of beer a day, as represented in application, held material, so as to avoid policy. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385.

16. Roe v. National Life Ins. Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500.

17. Evidence held to show previous medical examination rendering inapplicable Rev. Laws 1905, § 1693, providing that in absence of such examination statement in application as to insured's age, physical condition etc., shall bind company, unless willfully false or intentionally misleading. Murphy v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Minn.] 118 NW 355.

§ 10. The risk or object of indemnity. Accident and health insurance. See 10 C. L. 358—Accident policies usually promise indemnity for injuries or death[21] resulting solely and proximately[22] from external, violent and accidental means,[23] the accident and injury occurring while insured was acting in the capacity specified in the policy[24] and being of the class contemplated thereby[25] and of such character as to cause at once continuous and total disability.[26] The indemnity is often spe-

19. See post, § 16C.

20. See post, § 24C, subd. Questions of Law and Fact.

21. "Injury" within policy insuring against bodily injuries, effected by external, violent and accidental means, is injury to the person, traceable exclusively to the accident and every result traceable to the accident, however remote in time, is potentially caused at time of accident. Hatch v. U. S. Casualty Co., 197 Mass. 101, 83 NE 398.

22. Under a policy insuring against death resulting solely from accidental injuries, all morbid changes in exercise of vital functions or texture of bodily organs resulting from or induced by such injury should be regarded as effect thereof, and not as independent causes (Ward v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 70), and death resulting from such morbid changes is caused by accident within meaning of policy (Id.). One who, after recovery from an accident, succumbs to a disease which would not have been fatal but for lowered vitality following injury, dies from the disease, and not from lowered vitality. Id. Condition that death must have resulted "necessarily and solely" from the injury held satisfied by showing that injury was predominating and efficient cause of death, it being immaterial that other conditions were set in motion by injury which may have contributed to death. Continental Casualty Co. v. Colvin [Kan.] 95 P 565. Where death results from a disease caused directly by an accident, accident is proximate cause of the death, and death is regarded as having resulted from the accident independently of all other causes. General Acc. Fire & Life Assur. Co. v. Homely [Md.] 71 A 524. Death resulting from disease following naturally, though not necessarily, an accidental physical injury, results from such injury independently of all other causes, the disease not being considered as an independent cause. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Death from blood poisoning 15 days after accidental injury to leg, causing abrasion of skin, held within rule. Id. If one is injured and 6 months later is again injured and dies within the 90 days limited by policy, he may recover if he would not have died but for the second injury, though last injury would not have been fatal but for the first. Baehr v. Union Casualty Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 689. Evidence sufficient to authorize finding that accident was sole cause of death. Cheswell v. Fraternal Acc. Ass'n, 199 Mass. 267, 85 NE 96. Evidence that deceased was injured on leg, suffering abrasion, and thereafter died of erysipelas, held insufficient to show that death was caused by injury directly and independently of all other causes. McAuley v. Casualty Co., 37 Mont. 256, 96 P 131. Death from rupture of walls of heart weakened by fatty degeneration, after overexertion or deep breathing, held not covered by insurance against disability or death entirely from bodily injuries sustained through external, violent and accidental means. Shanberg v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [C. C. A.] 158 F 1.

23. Accident within accident insurance policy is an event taking place without one's foresight or expectation and which proceeds from an unknown cause or an unusual effect of a known cause not within expectation of person injured. Phoenix Acc. & Sick Benefit Ass'n v. Stiver [Ind. App.] 84 NE 772. Unexpected and unprovoked stabbing of insured by insane person held accident within policy insuring against injuries or death from external, violent and accidental means. Id. Not sufficient that injury or death was unexpected; "means" must be accidental. Schmid v. Indiana Travelers' Acc. Ass'n [Ind. App.] 85 NE 1032. Injury or death, though unexpected, resulting from intentional acts, is not produced by "accidental means." Id., reviewing many authorities. Death from physical exertion in climbing steps carrying heavy satchels, in rarified atmosphere, held not within accident policy. Id. Accident policy indemnifying only for death or injuries resulting from "external, violent and accidental means" covers only cases where force and accident concur in producing death or injury. Id.

24. Evidence held to show insured was engaged in line of his duty as brakeman when accident occurred, so as to authorize recovery. Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349. Mail clerk in mail car performing his duties held not riding "as passenger in or on any regular passenger conveyance provided by a common carrier," within policy insuring beneficiary so riding. Wood v. General Acc. Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 926.

25. Broken ribs and fractured sternum held not within provision for indemnity for "fractured ribs with complications." Hastings v. Bankers' Acc. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 79. Death from burning of contents of room in a building held within policy insuring against accidents caused by "burning of a building." Houlihan v. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 111 NYS 1048.

26. Under policy promising indemnity to insured for accidental injury "which causes at once total and continuous disability," and then providing for payment to beneficiary if within 90 days death should result necessarily and solely from "such injury," death cifically limited or denied if the injury or death is cause or contributed to by bodily or mental infirmity[27] or by infection,[28] or if insured when injured was violating the law,[29] or was engaged in acts pertaining to more hazardous occupations,[30] or was voluntarily or unnecessarily exposing himself to obvious danger,[31] or was failing to exercise due diligence for his protection,[32] or was entering or leaving a street car[33] or a moving conveyance,[34] or was at a place prohibited by the policy,[35] or was need not result from injury causing "at once" total and continuous disability in order to entitle beneficiary to recover. Continental Casualty Co. v. Colvin [Kan.] 95 P 565.

27. Death from blood poisoning after scratch of finger, insured not being previously afflicted with physical or mental infirmity, held not within exception in case of injury or death wholly or partly, directly or indirectly, from bodily or mental infirmity, or disease in any form, as primary, secondary or final cause of accident, injury or death. Rheinheimer v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 77 Ohio St. 360, 83 NE 491. For injury question, see post, § 24C.

28. Under provision limiting insurer's liability if loss was occasioned or contributed to by infection, "infection" held to refer only to external injuries, and not to internal inflammations, where pus is formed by presence of pus germs. Continental Casualty Co. v. Colvin [Kan.] 95 P 565. Where original injury to bone of foot was within terms of accident policy, fact that infection resulted did not bring disability within provision limiting liability in event of "injuries or disability" resulting from poison or infection. Garvey v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 123 App. Div. 106, 108 NYS 186.

29. Injury while "attempting" to get on moving railroad car held fatal to recovery under limitation if insured should be injured "while violating the law," Code, § 4811, making it a misdemeanor "to get upon any railroad car while in motion," etc. Flower v. Continental Casualty Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 761. Instruction held not prejudicial under the evidence. Id.

30. One killed while hunting for recreation held killed while "doing any act or thing pertaining to" any occupation classified as more hazardous than that of "sheep farmer," where occupation of hunter was classified as more hazardous, though insured had not changed occupation. Lane v. General Acc. Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 324.

31. Under exemption in case of voluntary or unnecessary exposure to apparent danger, danger must either be known or one which in exercise of ordinary prudence should be known to insured. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046. "Voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, or obvious risk of injury, or the intentional act of insured," are affirmative acts, implying knowledge of the danger and excluding mere negligence, though insured will be held to have known what an ordinarily prudent man of ordinary intelligence in the same situation would have known. Dillon v. Continental Casualty Co., 130 Mo. App. 502, 109 SW 89. Instructions properly modified by requiring knowledge in order to preclude recovery and by striking phrase "or might have known by exercise of ordinary diligence and care." Id. That insured shortly before accident had passed same car that struck him held insufficient to charge him with knowledge of its dangerous nearness to car on which he was riding. Id. Handling explosives by clerk in general store in mining region held not "unnecessary exposure to obvious danger." Alloway v. General Acc. Ins. Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 371. Evidence sufficient to sustain finding that loss of hand was not due to unnecessary exposure to obvious danger. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Claypool, 32 Ky. L. R. 856, 107 SW 325.

32. "Due diligence," within accident policy requiring insured to exercise due diligence for his self-protection, includes not only what a reasonably careful person "would" have done, but also what such persons "might" have done. Tinsman v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 235 Ill. 635, 85 NE 913. Instruction on due diligence held not objectionable as referring only to time insured was where he drowned. Id.

33. Injury from jumping off street car in danger of collision held injury while "getting on or off" street car, so as to limit company's liability. Banta v. Continental Casualty Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 1140. Rule precluding defense of contributory negligence in such case held inapplicable. Id.

34. Fatal injury while trying to enter moving passenger car held within exception "injuries sustained while entering or leaving, or trying to enter or leave, any moving conveyance," though there was also an exception in case of fatal injuries resulting from certain other causes. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. v. McNulty [C. C. A.] 157 F 224. One thrown off platform of train car by jerk of train held not entering or trying to enter, leaving or trying to leave, a moving conveyance within excepted risk, where he entered while car was still and did not intend to enter or leave while train was moving. Kirkpatrick v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1111.

35. To prevent recovery on ground that insured when injured was at place where under policy he was not permitted to be, it must appear that there was some causal relation between that fact and injury. Kirkpatrick v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1111. Accident policy insuring against injuries to one while traveling as railway passenger, but not covering accidents resulting from entering or leaving moving conveyances using steam or electricity, or being in any place in such conveyance not provided for passengers during transit, absolves insurer when insured enters or leaves moving conveyance, or is at time of injury at a place on railway conveyance not provided for use of passengers, but covers accidents to passengers on moving trains except when boarding or alighting from trains, and accidents to all others save when they are in a place in such conveyance not provided for occupancy of passengers during transit.

under the influence of intoxicants or narcotics.[36] Contributory negligence will not bar recovery on an accident policy in the absence of stipulation to that effect.[37]

Sick benefits are frequently reduced if the disability is due to certain specified ailments,[38] and policies often do not cover an illness not requiring confinement to the house[39] or the nature of which is unknown or incapable of direct proof.[40]

Jury questions and the burden of proof are treated in the section on procedure.[41]

*Burglary insurance.*See 10 C. L. 361—The policy usually covers burglary, larceny, or theft[42] made possible by forcible entrance by means of tools or explosives.[43]

*Employer's liability insurance.*See 10 C. L. 361—Under some policies no recovery lies if explosives are used on the premises.[44] Insurer having been duly notified of the suit against the employer, the latter as well as the former is concluded by the judgment in that action on issues determinative of the insurer's liability.[45]

*Fire insurance.*See 10 C. L. 362—"Fire" includes both slow and rapid combustion.[46] What property is insured,[47] and whether the protection continues with

Id. One entering upon platform of a car when train is still, intending to alight on other side, but thrown down and injured by car wheel by sudden jerk of train while in act of alighting, held not on platform or steps of car "when injured," within liability exemption. Id. Evidence, findings and petition held not inconsistent with finding that insured when injured was crossing a railroad track on a public highway, and was not elsewhere on railroad roadbed. McClure v. Great Western Acc. Ass'n [Iowa] 118 NW 269.

36. Provision held reasonable limiting liability if when injured insured was under influence of intoxicants or narcotics. Furry's Adm'r v. General Acc. Ins. Co., 80 Vt. 526, 68 A 655. Finding that insured was not under influence of intoxicants, "so as to prevent him from being 'fairly' able to take care of himself," showed he was "under the influence" of intoxicants when injured, so as to limit liability. Id.

37. Not where policy merely limited amount of recovery in case of unnecessary exposure to danger or to obvious risks of injury. Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349.

38. Clause indemnifying for confining illness and clause limiting liability to one-fifth for disability for paralysis, etc., held not repugnant, but both effective. General Acc. Ins. Co. v. Hayes [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 990.

39. Provision in sick benefit policy covering only ailments requiring insured to be confined to the house for 14 days did not preclude recovery because insured was not in air and sunshine by advice of physician, where he was entirely incapable of work or business. Jennings v. Brotherhood Acc. Co. [Colo.] 96 P 982.

40. Provision denying indemnity on account of sickness, nature of which was unknown or incapable of direct and positive proof, held intended only to guard against simulated illness, so that insured could recover where it was clearly proven he was in fact incapable of work or business, though he could not definitely name the illness or its origin or cause. Jennings v. Brotherhood Acc. Co. [Colo.] 96 P 982.

41. See post, § 24C.

42. Evidence insufficient to establish "burglary, larceny or theft" of bag of jewelry so as to authorize recovery under burglary policy. Schindler v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 58 Misc. 532, 109 NYS 723.

43. Evidence insufficient to show forcible entrance into safe "by use of tools or explosives directly thereupon and on the outside thereof." Brill v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 113 NYS 476.

44. Large metal tube filled with metals and materials of explosive and dangerous nature held an "explosive," within promissory warranty in employer's liability policy that no explosives should be used on premises. B. Roth Tool Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 709.

45. Action against employer held to involve issue whether employer permitted use of "explosives" on premises, so that, such issue having been adjudicated in the affirmative, employer could not recover under policy excepting such risk. B. Roth Tool Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 709.

46. Furbush v. Consolidated Patrons' & Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 371. Combustion from gas explosion resulting from striking match held a "fire" within fire policy not excepting explosions. Id.

NOTE. Meaning of "fire" in policy: Plaintiff's wool was insured by defendant against direct loss or damage by fire. The wool was stored in a warehouse but became entirely submerged by water owing to an unusual flood, and, when the water had subsided, the wool was found to be very much heated, the strings around the wool had apparently burned and there was smoke and the odor of burnt wool in the room where it was stored, although no flame or firelight was to be seen. Held, that the damage was not caused by "fire" within the meaning of the policy because the evidence did not show that the internal development of heat at any time became so rapid as to produce a flame or a glow. Western Woolen Mill Co. v. Northern Assur. Co. of London [C. C. A.] 139 F 637.

It is not a damage by fire where books are charred by steam escaping from a leak in the pipes of heating apparatus in a building. Gibbons v. German Ins. & Sav. Inst., 30 change of location,[48] occupancy or use,[49] are questions of construction. Interests of third persons are not covered in the absence of proper provisions to that effect.[50] Among excepted risks are explosions,[51] earthquakes,[52] orders of civil authorities,[53]

Ill. App. 263. A lamp is not a fire so that recovery may be had for damages caused by smoke therefrom, where no ignition occurs outside the lamp. Fitzgerald v. German American Ins. Co., 62 NYS 824. The breaking of plate glass in a store by the explosion of gas generated from gasoline used to clean clothes, was not caused by fire although the explosion was caused by a lighted match. Vorse v. Jersey Plate Glass Ins. Co., 119 Iowa, 555, 93 NW 569, 97 Am. St. Rep. 330, 60 L. R. A. 838. But see Scripture v. Lowell Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 64 Mass. [10 Cush.] 356, 57 Am. Dec. 111, in which it was held that, where damage was caused in part by combustion and in part by explosion from a lighted match attached to gunpowder, the whole damage was caused by fire. Where fire is employed as an agent for the purpose of heating a building, the insurer is not liable for the consequences thereof as long as the fire is confined within the limits of the agencies employed. 1 Wood on Fire Insurance, § 103; Cannon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 110 Ga. 562, 35 SE 775, 78 Am. St. Rep. 124. The court in this case, in applying the above principle, held that the insurer was not liable for damages caused by smoke and soot from such a fire. But see Way v. Abington Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 166 Mass. 67, 55 Am. St. Rep. 379, 32 L. R. A. 608, where it was held that, where fire in a stove used for heating purposes ignites the soot accumulated in the flue and causes smoke and burning soot to escape into a room, the resulting damage is a damage caused by fire. Insurance covering damage by fire extends to loss occasioned by water used to put out the fire and to prevent the further destruction of the insured property. Davis & Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 115 Mich. 382, 73 NW 393.—From 4 Mich. L. R. 238.

47. Policy insuring horses, mules, hay, wagons, buggies, harnesses and corn, held not to cover saddles, laprobes or whips, or authorize recovery for use of horses or loss of business. American Ins. Co. v. Hornbarger, 85 Ark. 337, 108 SW 213. Building detached from main dwelling but used as part of it is an "addition," within policy on "dwelling and addition." Tate v. Jasper County Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 659. Policy on "dwelling and addition" and "contents of dwelling" does not cover contents of addition. Id. Fire policy covering "awnings attached to" the building but not "awnings held in storage or for repairs" held to cover awnings stored in building but attached thereto when awnings were required. Wicks v. London & Lancashire Fire Ins. Co., 111 NYS 63.

48. "Drummer floater" policy, insuring property of salesman "while travelling," though covering the property during incidental stops at points of travel, does not cover it when returned to starting point. Jacobson v. Liverpool, London & Globe Ins. Co., 135 Ill. App. 20. Fire policy, providing it should cover property "in both locations during the removal" thereof permitted by the policy, held not to cover it while temporarily stored in a building other than that in which it was insured for subsequent removal to new location. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Kehoe, 197 Mass. 354, 83 NE 866. Insurance on personalty not constantly kept in a particular location will be held to cover the property while its location is incidentally and customarily changed notwithstanding words descriptive of its particular location, such words being regarded as descriptive of the subject of insurance and its customary location. Lathers v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 116 NW 1. Fire policy against loss of farm barn and live stock "therein on the farm and from lightning at large" held to cover horse destroyed while temporarily on another farm. Id.

49. Condition that policy shall be effective only "while the premises are occupied as a store and dwelling" is a mere condition subsequent, and in action on such policy it is not erroneous to submit to jury question whether change in use of building and subsequently its being left vacant increased the risk, and to charge that, if jury found in negative, policy holder could recover. Germania Fire Insurance Co. v. Werner, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 514, following Moody v. Amazon Ins. Co., 52 Ohio St. 12, 38 NE 1011.

50. In absence of provision that policy shall inure to "benefit of whom it may concern" or words of equivalent import. Washburn-Crosby Co. v. Home Ins. Co., 199 Mass. 463, 85 NE 592. Provision that policy attached to "property, interest and legal liability" of a named railroad held equivalent to statement that policy was not for benefit of whom it might concern. Id. Descriptions considered and held not to cover interest of owner of flour held by railroad company as warehousemen and for loss of which it was not liable. Id.

51. Under policy exempting company from liability for loss caused by explosion except as to damage caused by ensuing fire, if explosion is result of preceding fire, insured may recover entire loss (German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27), but if explosion precedes fire only loss by the fire can be recovered (Id.). Evidence insufficient to sustain finding that fire preceded explosion. Id. Fire preceding explosion and rendering insurer liable for entire loss under policy not covering loss by explosions must be fire as ordinarily understood and not a mere blaze produced by lighting a match, gas jet, or lamp. Id.

52. Provision excepting loss by fire caused directly or indirectly by earthquake is valid. Richmond Coal Co. v. Commercial Union Assur. Co., 159 F 985. Under such provision defendant must show that loss was proximately, either directly or indirectly, caused by earthquake, that if loss was directly due to fire, such fire would not have occurred but for the earthquake. Id. Not sufficient to prove that earthquake produced conditions but for which loss would not have occurred if it did not directly or indirectly cause fire (Id.), but if it did cause fire it is immaterial that such fire started in other property, if it spread continuously, to fire insured (Id.). Under exemption in case of or fire originating within machines.[54] A fire policy does not cover damage by lightning without fire,[55] but lightning is often expressly insured against.[56] Voluntary and wrongful destruction of the property by insured precludes recovery,[57] unless insured was insane at the time.[58]

Hail insurance.—Such loss only is indemnified as occurs while the policy is in force.[59]

*Life insurance.*See 10 C. L. 363—Execution for crime is covered unless expressly excepted.[60] Insurer is often exempted if insured commits suicide[61] while sane or insane[62] or violates the law.[63] Death must occur within the policy term.[64]

Plate glass insurance.—Accidental breakage[65] is commonly insured against, with exception if the loss is due to fire.[66] loss "occasioned by or through earthquake," recovery is precluded if evidence shows that but for earthquake fire would not have destroyed insured property, and fire spread from another building fired by earthquake is within exception. Henry Hilp Tailoring Co. v. Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co., 157 F 285. Exception against loss "caused, directly, or indirectly," by invasion, * * *, or for loss or damages "occasioned by or through" any earthquake, * * *, company was exempt only where earthquake was immediate, direct, and proximate cause of fire. Baker v. Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co., 157 F 280. On other hand, exemption could not be limited so as to apply only to loss or damage by earthquake and not by fire. Id. Company held exempt only where loss was caused directly by earthquake and not where fire spread from other buildings fired by earthquake. Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co. v. Willard [C. C. A.] 164 F 404. Insurer not exempted by Civ. Code Cal. § 2628, providing that when a peril is especially excepted loss which would not have occurred but for such peril is thereby excepted. Id.

53. Under provision against liability for loss caused by order of civil authority, while building permits were refused by city authorities pending decision concerning certain street improvements. Palatine Ins. Co. v. O'Brien, 107 Md. 341, 68 A 484.

54. Damage to automobile through explosion, by ignition from oil lamp, of gasoline flowing from tank after an accident, and covering water in a ditch, held not covered by policy excepting damage by fire originating "within" the vehicle. Preston v. Aetna Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1006.

55. Prior custom of company of paying damage caused by lightning without fire though policy covered only loss by fire, and fact that plaintiff had contributed assessments to meet such invalid claims, held not to entitle plaintiff to recover for damage by lightning when no fire ensued, on theory that custom of company was part of contract. Sleet v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 515.

56. Evidence insufficient to show mule was killed by lightning. Warren v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 130 Mo. App. 226, 109 SW 88.

57. Voluntary, fraudulent, corrupt or wrongful destruction of property by insured himself precludes recovery, though policy does not provide for such contingency. Bindell v. Kenton County Assessment Fire Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 385, 108 SW 325. Evidence held to show insured procured another to burn the property. Hoyt v. Insurance Co. of North America, 103 Me. 299, 69 A 110.

58. If insane, burning no defense. Bindell v. Kenton County Assessment Fire Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 385, 108 SW 325.

59. Evidence held sufficient to sustain verdict that plaintiff suffered no loss by hail prior to noon, September 1st, when policy expired. Flakne v. Minnesota Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 785. Where policy terminated hail insurance at noon, September 1st, and by-laws terminated it "after September 1st," but were legally amended, to conform to policy, no recovery could be had for loss by hail after noon of September 1st. Id.

60. No defense that insured was executed for murder. Collins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 232 Ill. 37, 83 NE 542, rvg. 133 Ill. App. 326.

61. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 7896, suicide is no defense unless insured contemplated it when he took out insurance. Tennent v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 754. Evidence held to show suicide. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120. Evidence for jury, see post, § 24C subd, Questions of Law and Fact.

62. Under policy limiting liability, if insured should commit suicide while sane or insane, self-killing by insured while so mentally deranged as to be unconscious of the act will be regarded as a mere accident and authorize full recovery (Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 32 Ky. L. R. 770, 106 SW 1175), but recovery will be limited if, though mentally deranged, insured knew his act would probably cause death and committed it intending it should (Id.). Evidence held to sustain verdict in full. Id.

63. To defect recovery on life policy on ground that insured was carrying concealed weapon, in violation of Ky. St. 1903, § 1308, it must be shown not only that offense was being committed but further that it brought about the death. Interstate Life Assur. Co. v. Dalton [C. C. A.] 165 F 176.

64. Where question was whether term expired at five o'clock of a certain day or midnight, evidence held to justify inference that insured died before five o'clock. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wimberly [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 778, reversed on other grounds by opinion in [Tex.] 112 SW 1038.

65. Breakage of plate glass by dynamiting of property to prevent spread of fire held not result of accident so as to authorize recovery but result of design. Frisbie v. Fi-

Salesman's samples.—The excepted risks are usually specified in the policy.[67]

Title insurance.[See 10 C. L. 868]—Claims and liens not of record are often excepted.[68]

Reformation of policy for mistake.[See 10 C. L. 968]—Principles common to reformation of instruments in general are discussed in another article.[69] When there is a mere agreement to "renew" a policy, without more, reformation lies if a new policy at variance with the old is delivered.[70] Courts hesitate to reform policies in favor of insurer after loss,[71] especially when there is evidence of laches.[72]

§ 11. The beneficiary and the insured.[See 10 C. L. 864]—The beneficiary is the person to whose benefit the insurance contract primarily inures on the happening of the contingency insured against.[73] Insured's intention as to who shall be beneficiary must be given effect if not contrary to statute or public policy.[74] Under a policy payable to children in case of death of the designated beneficiary before death of insured, the legal representatives of the designated beneficiary take in default of children.[75] The surviving wife of one who before his marriage took

66. Breakage of glass by dynamiting of the building by town authorities or concerted action of property owners to stop progress of approaching fire, held within provision exempting company if loss should happen by or in consequence of any fire, whether on insured premises or not. Frisbie v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Mo. App.] 112 SW 1024.

67. Evidence held to show loss of salesman's samples by theft, in city where assured had permanent offices not covered by policy excluding losses by theft and providing it should not attach in places where assured had permanent offices or salesrooms. Cohn v. Federal Ins. Co., 113 NYS 12.

68. Title policy excepting claims of tenure by present occupants and instruments, terms, etc., not shown by any public record, covers record title only and not claims sustainable only by proof of adverse possession. Bothin v. California Title Ins. & Trust Co., 153 Cal. 718, 96 P 500. Recorded deed of trust by occupant who was stranger to record chain of title held not covered. Id.

70. Evidence held not to authorize reformation of fire policy by striking therefrom warranty as to amount of other insurance, if appearing that policy conformed to preliminary agreement, if any existed, and, if not, then relations of parties arose only from delivery and acceptance of policy. Kenyon Paper Co. v. Nederlandsche Lloyds, 124 App. Div. 886, 109 NYS 311.

71. Where owner's agent applied for insurance on common form, which was issued in such form, and delivered to and paid for by insured, company was not entitled after fire to have policy reformed so as to cover only part of property, on ground that owner's agent asked for insurance on only part of property and that rate charged did not cover property destroyed. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. John Spry Lumber Co., 235 Ill. 98, 85 NE 256, afg. Queen Ins. Co v. Spry Lumber Co., 138 Ill. App. 620.

72. Insurance company having copies of policies in its possession for several months is bound to know what property is covered by the policies, and cannot wait until after destruction of the property and then sue for reformation on ground of mistake as to property insured. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. John Spry Lumber Co., 235 Ill. 98, 85 NE 256, afg. Queen Ins. Co. v. Spry Lumber Co., 138 Ill. App. 620.

73. Firm of undertakers held sole beneficiary under contract whereby members of an association were promised burial in consideration of contributing a sum on every death in membership, it being stipulated that for furnishing burial supplies and services, undertakers were to receive full amount of benefit accruing under contract. 74. Waring v. Wilcox [Cal. App.] 96 P 910. Policy payable to wife and in case of her death to "children surviving" held to exclude grandchildren. Succession of Roder, 121 La. 692, 46 S 697. Nephews and nieces held entitled to proceeds, though through mistake company made policy payable to estate of insured where both insured and agent believed it had been made payable to nephews and nieces, evidence being clear and convincing. Burt v. Burt [Pa.] 70 A. 710. Woman designated and described in policy as beneficiary and wife and living with insured as such held entitled to proceeds, though insured had a lawful wife whom he had deserted. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Morris [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 924. Paid-up policy taken in exchange for endowment policy and payable to wife, and in event of her death to children, held to govern as to parties entitled to proceeds. In re Peckham [R. I.] 69 A 1002. Life policy payable to insured's executors, administrators or assigns is payable to his estate. Mitchell v. Allis [Ala.] 47 S 715. Life company organized under laws of Illinois may issue policies payable to estate of insured. Garfinkel v. Alliance Life Ins. Co., 140 Ill. App. 380. Policy issued by company organized under Act June 22, 1893, for incorporation of companies to do life or accident insurance business on assessment plan, may be made payable to estate of insured and transferred by will to devisees generally. McMahon v. Feldman, 139 Ill. App. 624.

out a policy payable to his estate is not entitled to the proceeds as community property.[76] Insurer is sometimes given the option to pay the proceeds of the policy to any person deemed by it equitably entitled thereto.[77] After full performance of a life policy by insured by payment of premiums and otherwise, the insurer cannot defend an action thereon by pleading illegality in the designation of beneficiary.[78]

As a general rule[79] the beneficiary in a life policy has a vested interest in the insurance[80] which passes to him and his legal representatives[81] free from the claims of creditors of insured[82] and which, subject to the right of insured to discontinue the payment of premiums,[83] cannot be impaired or destroyed unless the policy authorizes it by change of beneficiary or otherwise,[84] or without the consent of such beneficiary first obtained.[85] If the policy allows a change of beneficiary, provisions therefor must be at least substantially complied with,[86] but a change clearly au-

In Wisconsin insured may dispose of policy by assignment, will or gift without consent of beneficiaries. Slocum v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 796. Beneficiary's interest being "mere expectancy" cannot be basis of claim for damages by beneficiary on insurer's wrongful rescission of contract, insured being the one entitled to damages. Id. But note further this section, statute making life policy wife's separate property.

80. Where policy was payable to wife and to "heirs at law" of insured if wife died before he did, on death of wife before insured, and later of an only child, interest in policy vested in brothers and sisters of insured unaffected by his subsequent attempted assignment to another, "heirs at law" having reference to time of death of insured. Birge v. Franklin, 103 Minn. 482, 115 NW 278.

81. Where policy was payable to wife and children, their executors, etc., child living when policy was issued but who died before insured died took vested interest on delivery of policy, and on her death interest passed by descent or succession same as other personalty. Woodworth v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ala.] 45 S 417. Where husband acted only as wife's agent in taking out policy on his life for wife's benefit and benefit of children in case of her death, and in keeping same in his possession and paying premium, wife acquired a vested interest therein at moment of delivery to insured, though she had no knowledge of its existence, and same passed by her will on her predeceasing husband. Bradshaw v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 112 NYS 107. Where policy to wife on life of husband was payable to wife, her executors, administrators and assigns, and she predeceased husband, proceeds on latter's death went to her executor and not to husband's executor, though husband was wife's sole legatee and devisee. Pool v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., 123 App. Div. 885, 108 NYS 431.

82. See post, § 22.

83. Naming one as beneficiary does not require insured to keep policy alive for benefit of beneficiary. Smith v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Pa.] 71 A 11.

84. Beneficiary has vested right in contract which cannot be diminished or affected by subsequent agreements between insurer and insured not provided for in original contract. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Life Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Stipulation that nonpayment of premium note should forfeit policy held not to affect beneficiary. Id. Where right to change beneficiary is reserved in policy, beneficiary has no vested interest and another may be substituted at instance of insured. Waring v. Wilcox [Cal. App.] 96 P 910. Where policy is made payable to one's wife but no further disposition of proceeds is made either to her legal representatives or otherwise, insured may designate another beneficiary on his surviving his wife. Smith v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Pa.] 71 A 11.

85. Insured could not change beneficiary after wife's death without consent of her legal representative, policy being silent on right to change beneficiary. Smith v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 72.

86. If policy provides for change of beneficiary, vested right of beneficiary can be divested only by strict conformity with such provision. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Life Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. No change where policy was not sent to be indorsed as required by its terms and where insured continued to pay premiums and sent receipts to old beneficiary. Begley v. Miller, 137 Ill. App. 278. Immaterial whether notice and request of assured to company to change name of beneficiary was signed on sick bed or elsewhere, if in fact signed by insured. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. McCray [Ala.] 47 S 65. Receipt of premiums for seven years on basis of change of beneficiary held to work estoppel to object to regularity of change. Smith v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Pa.] 71 A 11.

thorized by the policy is not affected by false representations by insured to the old beneficiary[87] or by want or illegality of consideration.[88] A substitution of beneficiary with the consent of the old beneficiary will be enforced subject to the latter's rights recognized therein by the parties, notwithstanding insured could have elected to make the substitution without the consent of the original beneficary.[89] Though the interest of a beneficiary in the proceeds of a life policy is ordinarily transmissible as well as vested,[90] the policy may be worded so as to make it nontransmissible,[91] but the presumption is that it was intended that the interest should descend.[92] It is provided by statute in some states that a life policy payable to a married woman shall be her sole and separate property.[93] Such statutes do not prevent insured from stipulating that the beneficiary shall have no interest in the cash surrender value of the policy.[94] The beneficiary has no interest in sums paid as premiums by the insured so as to be entitled thereto on rescission of the policy.[95]

Rights of mortgagees, creditors, trustees, etc., under loss payable clauses. See 10 C. L. 866—A mortgagee, creditor, or other third person to whom as his interest may appear the loss is made payable has an equitable lien on the proceeds of the policy,[96] and his interest cannot be affected by unauthorized adjustments between insurer and insured,[97] nor by other acts or omissions of insured guarded against by express stipulation.[98] On the other hand he is entitled to no greater rights as

87. Where policy in favor of insured's mother reserved right to change beneficiary, fact that insured falsely represented to mother that he had married and wanted to make wife beneficiary, when in fact he was living in illicit relations with the woman, held immaterial in determining rights of substituted beneficiary. Waring v. Wilcox [Cal. App.] 96 P 910. That he made such representation to company held also immaterial as between claimants to fund. Id.

88. That change of beneficiary was induced or procured by promise of substituted beneficiary to continue illicit relations with insured did not render it void, no consideration being essential. Waring v. Wilcox [Cal. App.] 96 P 910.

89. Parties having acquiesced in construction recognizing rights of original beneficiary and having undertaken to conform thereto, new beneficiary could not base rights on proposition that change would have been valid without consent of original beneficiary. Crowell v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 412.

90, 91, 92. Diehm v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 256, 108 SW 139. Where policy was payable to wife and children, their executors, etc., interest of child dying before insured passed to children of such child. Id. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 4600, 4613 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 2499, 2507), relating to tenancies in common of realty, and giving lineal decendants of devisees the interest of their ancestor in case latter die before testator, do not regulate interests of beneficiaries in life policies. 93. Under Laws 1891, p. 482, c. 376, providing that a policy of life insurance payable to a married woman shall be her sole and separate property for use and benefit of herself and children, husband has no valid claim to policy or proceeds after wife's death except under her will, regardless of source of funds for payment of premiums. Perkinson v. Clarke, 135 Wis. 584, 116 NW 229.

94. Statute of 1898, § 2347, giving wife exclusive and separate interest in policy on life of husband, expressed to be for her benefit. Hilliard v. Wisconsin Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 117 NW 999.

95. Slocum v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 796. See 6 Mich. L. R. 712.

96. Loss payable to mortgagee. Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 F 342. Oral agreement followed by insurance for benefit of mortgagee gave lien as against mortgagor or trustee in bankruptcy, though made after mortgage was given and though beneficiary had been changed without consent of mortgagee. Id.

97. Mortgagee's interest under ordinary loss payable clause cannot be affected by any adjustment by insured with insurer without his knowledge. Leslie v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 112 NYS 496. Mortgagee who holds policy issued to the mortgagor with usual mortgage clause, and providing that in case of loss there shall be appraisal and award, and that insurance as to interest therein of mortgagee should not be invalidated by any act or neglect of mortgagor, is not bound by appraisement and award made by mortgagor and insurance company without knowledge of mortgagee. In such case where mortgagee repudiates appraisement and award, it is his duty to demand new appraisal and award before insisting upon payment of loss to him, either by original action or by cross petition in an action brought by mortgagor. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Erie Brew. Co., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 28.

98. Under provision that insurance should not be invalidated as against mortgagee by any act or neglect of mortgagor or owner, mortgagee's rights were not affected by failure of insured to comply with insurer's de-against insurer than insured could have,[99] and may be rendered liable to the latter for loss due to an unauthorized settlement with the company.[1]

Insurance by bailee or agent. See 10 C. L. 887

§ 12. Policy value in cash or loans, and right to share in surplus before loss. See 10 C. L. 368—By their terms policies often have what is called a cash surrender value, sometimes expressly exempted from any claim on the part of the beneficiary,[2] and which may be recovered by insured by complying with conditions prescribed.[3] Frequently insured may borrow a certain amount from the company on his policy under such regulations for payment as may be agreed upon.[4] Conditions in loan contracts more onerous than the terms provided in the policy on which insured may borrow money are invalid in the absence of further consideration.[5]

§ 13. Options and privileges under policy. See 10 C. L. 388—After the policy has been in force for a certain length of time, insured is often entitled either by its terms or by statute to a specified amount of paid up or extended insurance[6] if he should allow the policy to lapse[7] by failing to pay further premiums,[8] or he may mand for appraisers. Reed v. Firemen's Ins. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 724.

99. Under clause that loss be paid to a third person, latter recovers only as insured's appointee, and where policy is avoided as to insured, appointee cannot recover. Brecht v. Law Union & Crown Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 399. Provision that when with insurer's consent an interest under policy should exist in favor of any one having an interest in property other than insured's interest, "the conditions hereinbefore contained shall apply in the manner expressed in such provisions and conditions of insurance relating to such interest as shall be written upon, attached or appended hereto," did not change legal effect of attached slips making loss payable to a creditor, which was merely to constitute him insured's appointee to receive whatever might become due if policy should remain valid as to insured. Id. Such provision was intended only to apply where insurer by special agreement with mortgagee or third person has consented to modifications or waivers. Id. Under change of ownership clause, neither owner nor contractors could recover on policy where owner became bankrupt one hour after insurance, though same was taken out for contractors' benefit. New Kensington Lumber Co. v. German Ins. Co., 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 32.

1. Where mortgagee made unauthorized settlement but evidence showed amount of settlement was reasonable value of loss sustained and owner made no bona fide effort to carry out pending arbitration, mortgagee was not liable to account to owner on basis of loss claimed by latter. Jacob Tome Institute v. Whitcomb [C. C. A.] 160 F 835. Mortgagee not entitled to credit for attorney's fee. Id.

2. Policy on life of married man conditioned that it shall have cash surrender value in which beneficiary shall have no interest, is not as to such feature controlled by statute of 1898, § 2347, giving wife exclusive and separate interest in policy on life of husband expressed to be for her benefit. Hilliard v. Wisconsin Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 117 NW 999.

3. Not where plaintiff did not surrender policy as required by its terms. Hilliard v. Wisconsin Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 117 NW 999. Where surrender of policy as provided therein would not have avoided litigation, plaintiff was entitled to judgment conditioned on surrender of policy. Id. Under policy on which premium was payable on June 6th of each year and which stipulated for cash surrender value on surrender of policy while in force, where company's answer to request of insured as to amount of surrender value and method of realizing same was sent June 5th and was in effect a refusal to pay any cash value, insured was relieved of duty of making absolute offer of surrender before June 6th or thereafter, so that company could not defend action for surrender value on ground that premium due June 6th was not paid. Hill v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 112 NYS 120.

4. Where reserve exceeded loan and interest, provision that if loan and interest should equal legal reserve company could demand immediate payment and cancel policy if payment was not made was inapplicable. Bozeman's Adm'r v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 836.

5. Forfeiture clause. Bozeman's Adm'r v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 836.

6. Separate paper signed by special agent of insured and delivered with policy, giving amount of paid-up insurance to which insured should be entitled at end of 15 year period under option in policy, held mere statement of expectation not binding on company, it being expressly stipulated agents should have no power to bind company by promises or representations not contained in application. Untermyer v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 113 NYS 221.

7. Statements by agent as to amount of paid-up insurance insured would be entitled to if he should allow policy to lapse held ineffectual where policy specified method of determining such amount. United States Life Ins. Co. v. Wood, 32 Ky. L. R. 1120, 107 SW 1193.

8. Policy held in force at death of insured by virtue of provision for automatic insurance by application of cash surrender value to payment of premiums after third or any subsequent policy year. Id. Automatic extension clause held not operative, third premium not having been paid when due. Lesseps v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 120 La. 610, 45 S 522. Rev. St. 1899, § 7897 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3752), providing that after payment of three annual premiums no life policy shall be forfeited for nonpayment of further premiums, and that net value of policy when premium becomes due and is not paid shall be computed with 4 per cent interest, and after deduction from three-fourths of such net value any notes or other evidence of indebtedness to company for past premiums balance shall constitute a net single premium for temporary insurance for full amount of policy, held not violative of Const. U. S. Amend. 14, or Const. Mo. art. 2, § 4. Burridge v. New York Life Ins. Co., 211 Mo. 158, 109 SW 560. Where residue of surrender value of policy after company's foreclosure of a lien was sent by check to beneficiary and insured but never received, policy was not surrendered for consideration adequate in judgment of holder" within § 7900, so as to render inapplicable above statute. Id. One who had paid only two semi-annual premiums after reinstatement within state of policy taken out and governed by law of another state held not within Rev. St. 1899, § 5856 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2960), precluding forfeiture after payment of "two full annual premiume." McGeehan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 604. Policy providing that on default after payment of three premiums it should become a policy for paid-up insurance for a specified amount "unless there should be an unpaid loan" is not within Rev. St. 1899, § 7900, providing that the three preceding sections on extended insurance after payment of three annual premiums shall not apply to policies providing for "unconditional" commutation for paid-up insurance, but is controlled by § 7897. Whittaker v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 63. Statutes and defendant's organization and operations considered, and held defendant was an assessment company and not an old line company so that Rev. St. 1899, § 7897 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3752), as to nonforfeiture of policies, was not applicable. McCoy v. Bankers' Life Ass'n [Mo. App.] 114 SW 551. Policy providing for extension from date to which premiums were duly paid construed, and held date "to which premiums were duly paid" was November 22, though policy was issued and first premium paid December 2, so that automatic extension expired before death of insured. Wilkie v. New York Mut. Life Ins. Co., 146 N. C. 518, 60 SE 427. Premiums were paid to next due date, though 30 days of grace were allowed by policy to prevent forfeiture. Id. Automatic nonforfeiture clause providing that on failure to make due payment of any premium policy would be indorsed for a specified amount of paid-up life insurance on insured's request within six months after default, and in absence of request policy should automatically continue at face value for a specified term, held to continue full insurance for six months, though request for paid-up insurance be made before expiration of six months period, in view of amount of premiums small amount of paid-up insurance and policy of insurance laws prohibiting discriminations. Clappenback v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 118 NW 245.

9. Where policy on quarterly renewal term plan with increasing rates provided it might be exchanged after insured reached 60 for level premium policy at rate of his then age shown by schedule of rates ranging from 60 to 65 and having "&c" printed beneath columns of rates, policy did not become level premium policy automatically when insured reached 65 merely because schedule did not specify rates for greater age. Jones v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. [N. C.] 61 SE 383.

10. Provision in insurance certificate that if at any time company should fail by reason of insufficient membership, or should neglect if justly and legally due, to pay maximum indemnity provided by terms of any certificate, a certain safety fund should be divided among holders of certificates then in force, held susceptible, even without aid of circulars issued by company, to construction that fund should be divided when number of certificate holders became so reduced that aggregate amount of insurance should not exceed a sum mentioned in certificate. Dresser v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 80 Conn. 681, 70 A 39. "Fail" referred to insufficiency of mortuary fund "by reason of insufficient membership" to pay certificate claims against company. Id.

11. Policy held not to authorize deduction of certain advances under policy from cash surrender value so as to reduce extension of insurance. Royal Union Life Ins. Co. v. McLendon [Ga. App.] 62 SE 101. Policy giving options as to paid-up life insurance, extended term insurance and cash surrender, construed, and held that amount otherwise available for extended insurance was not to be diminished by any indebtedness of insured to company, policy under head of such insurance otherwise providing manner of payment of the indebtedness. Bozeman's Adm'r v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Ky.] 113 SW 836. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 7897 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3752), providing for temporary insurance on nonpayment of premiums, indebtedness to be deducted is restricted to that for past premiums, and company cannot, because of loan and pledge contract whereby it advanced money and took policy as collateral, cancel policy to pay loan and deduct indebtedness other than for past premium payments. Burridge v. New York Life Ins. Co., 211 Mo. 158, 109 SW 560. Amendment, Laws 1903, p. 208, providing for additional deduction of "any other indebtedness" to company, held not retrospective. Id. Evidence held not to show that entire loan was for payment of past premiums.

the nonpayment of a premium,[12] will depend on the agreement or the statute. Application for paid up or extended insurance may be oral or written,[13] and time is not of the essence of a provision as to when it must be made;[14] but under a policy providing for extended insurance "if applied for" after failure to pay a premium, application therefor must be made in the lifetime of insured.[15]

§ 14. Assignments and transfers of benefits or insurance. Accident insurance. See 10 C. L. 370

Employer's liability insurance.—The policy may provide against assignment without insurer's consent.[16]

*Life insurance.*See 10 C. L. 370—A policy may be sold, assigned as collateral, or given in payment of a debt[17] subject to considerations attending fraud, duress or incapacity,[18] the laws of the state on questions relating to insurable interest,[19]

Id. Loan and pledge contract held not independent of policy but contemplated thereby. Id.

12. Under policy simply allowing paid-up insurance in accordance with c. 347, Laws of 1879, of New York, on failure to pay any premium after three years, insured was not required to elect between paid-up and extended insurance, statute providing that he should have either "as shall have been agreed." United States Life Ins. Co. v. Wood, 32 Ky. L. R. 1120, 107 SW 1193. Where policy provided for extended insurance "if applied for" after failure to pay premium, insurer was not required to notify insured to make election. Balthaser v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 283, 110 SW 258. Where note for policy loan provided that on nonpayment of premium or principal or interest on note policy holder elected to take cash surrender value and empowered company to cancel policy, company was not required to notify policy holder of cancellation when premium was not paid. Wilson v. Royal Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 137 Iowa, 184, 114 NW 1051.

13. For extension on failure to pay third or subsequent premium. Wortham v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 827, 107 SW 276.

14. Five years held reasonable time, despite six months' limitation in contract. United States Life Ins. Co. v. Wood, 32 Ky. L. R. 1120, 107 SW 1193. Suit timely where brought by husband within five years though wife, who was beneficiary, did not join within such period, she not being a necessary party. Id.

15. Neither representative nor beneficiary may make application after death. Balthaser v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 283, 110 SW 258.

16. Prohibition against assignment of policy without consent of insurer held inapplicable where cause of action had already accrued thereon, and after expiration of policy by its terms. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Omaha Elec. L. & P. Co. [C. C. A.] 157 F 514.

17. Policy payable to estate of insured. Lake v. New York Life Ins. Co., 120 La. 971, 45 S 959. Reassignment by plaintiff to widow of insured, so as to preclude recovery by plaintiff. Sodekson v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 111 NYS 877. In action on life policy by assignee, evidence held to show where life policy was payable to insured's wife, for her sole use and benefit, if she survived until time of payment, her interest was "settled" as separate property, within statute permitting married women to dispose of their separate estate so settled, rendering enforcible a pledge of such interest. Troendle v. Highleyman [Ky.] 113 SW 812. Judgment in action by creditor to establish a lien on proceeds of life policy assigned to him as security options under which were not yet available, could not be complained of by creditor because it merely adjudged a lien on proceeds without also allowing plaintiff to surrender policy to company when options should become available and apply money to payment of debt, plaintiff being protected in right to apply to court when options should mature. Davidson's Ex'r v. Hieatt [Ky.] 113 SW 891.

18. Evidence insufficient to show duress in procuring wife's signature to assignment. Ely v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 272, 110 SW 265. Conduct of husband insufficient in absence of proof connecting assignee therewith. Id. Evidence held to show insured was mentally capable of contracting with her sons to pay premiums on her life policy and take proceeds. Woods v. Woods' Adm'r [Ky.] 113 SW 79.

19. See, also, ante, § 5, subd. Life Insurance. Policy not assignable to one not having insurable interest. Peoria Life Ass'n v. Hines, 132 Ill. App. 642. Consenting company held estopped to question assignment for lack of insurable interest in assignee. Id. Purchaser of policy on life of another, in which he has no insurable interest except as creditor, sale being with consent of insured and beneficiaries, holds proceeds above amount of debt in trust for beneficiaries (Iron v. U. S. Life Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 46, 108 SW 904), and, where purchaser has no insurable interest, he takes a mere lien for amount paid and interest, anything over being held in trust for beneficiaries (Id.). Rule applicable to judicial sale. Id. In suit by beneficiaries against purchasers, rights of beneficiary not party could not be determined. Id. Confirmation of sale by court, no exceptions being filed, held not conclusive as to capacity of purchaser to take absolutely. Id. Ky. St. 1903, § 678, avoiding assignments of policies to persons having no insurable interest in life of insured, applies only to assessment or cooperative life insurance. Id. Bone fide transaction by which policy is taken out pursuant to previous agreement with creditor that it shall be transferred in satisfac-

and the requisites of assignments in general,[20] except as provided in the policy.[21] No particular phraseology is necessary,[22] and the assignment may be either for a valuable consideration or by way of gift.[23] The extent of the assignee's interest will be determined by the terms of the assignment contract.[24]

Fire insurance.[See 10 C. L. 372]—The consent of insurer or its agent is usually required,[25] and sometimes, also, entry on the company's books.[26] Where a policy is assigned after loss and deposited with insured, assignee's assent and acceptance may be presumed.[27] An adjusted claim for insurance is a chose in action subject to assignment.[28] The insurance may be transferred from one property to another.[29]

§ 15. Change or substitution of contract, or risk, or of conditions thereupon[See 10 C. L. 378]—Policies may be changed or substituted by mutual consent,[30] and mutual tion of debt and that creditor shall pay all future premiums held valid, where debt and value of policy are not so disproportionate as to constitute wagering. Lake v. New York Life Ins. Co., 120 La. 971, 45 S 959. Transaction, pursuant to previous agreement, whereby policy was taken out and then assigned to one who paid all premiums under promise to pay a certain per cent of proceeds to estate of insured, held illegal so far as assignee was concerned, entitling insured's representative to proceeds less amount paid by assignee for premiums. Bendet v. Ellis [Tenn.] 111 SW 795.

20. Unless otherwise specifically provided, policy may be assigned in same manner as any other chose in action. McNevins v. Prudential Ins. Co., 57 Misc. 608, 108 NYS 745. Entry in pocket memorandum book kept by insured, reciting that a surety held a life policy to secure him, held insufficient as assignment, entry not being dated or policy described. Little v. Berry [Ky.] 113 SW 902. Where by terms of policy mere delivery will give no right as against the designated beneficiary, the presumptions arising from mere possession are rebutted. Stewart v. Gwynn, 41 Ind. App. 320, 83 NE 753. Proceeds of policy are payable to extent of his claim to assignee without delivery, in preference to subsequent assignee in whose possession policy was placed. Mechanics' Banking Co. v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 396. Paper found in desk of assured after his death, directing payment of amount of life policy to H, held insufficient to show assignment of policy, there being no evidence paper or policy was ever delivered to H. Huestis v. Prudential Life Ins. Co., 111 NYS 461.

21. Though policy provided no assignment should be valid without indorsement of company's consent thereon at a designated office, separate written consent by company's agent held sufficient, assignor and assignee not knowing that agent could not waive provision as to manner of assignment, and company or agent not subsequently objecting or tendering unearned premium. Home Ins. Co. v. Myers, 32 Ky. L. R. 999, 107 SW 719. Where insurer waived strict compliance with requirements as to assignment of policy by insured to secure a debt, wife and children could not predicate rights on noncompliance, as against assignee. Clark v. Southwestern Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 335.

22, 23. McNevins v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 57 Misc. 608, 108 NYS 745. Where life policy prescribed no method of assignment and was payable to anyone connected by marriage to insured, or equitably entitled by reason of having incurred expense, and on receipt of policy insured delivered it to his wife saying "Take this policy and pay on it," and wife took it, retained it and paid premiums and insured's burial expenses, jury could find there was both a gift and an assignment of policy to wife. Id.

24. Proviso in assignment by insured and beneficiary that if policy matured by death assignee should recover from insurer "only to extent of his actual insurance interest properly proven" held, in light of oral evidence, to mean that assignee was entitled to recover only to extent of premium advancements. Crowell v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 412.

25. Company liable to assignee of fire policy though agency of one giving consent to transfer had been revoked where company had not given sufficient notice of revocation and plaintiff was ignorant thereof. Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 988, 107 SW 321.

26. Giving insured permission to assign policy to a vendee of the property, though assignment was not presented to company nor recorded in its books until after fire, held waiver of strict compliance with by-laws requiring entry on books, etc., where after fire insurer's secretary approved assignment. Furbush v. Consolidated Patrons' & Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 371.

27. Where after loss husband assigned to his wife and deposited with insurance companies, policies on her property made payable to himself, her assent and acceptance could be presumed, assignment being for her benefit. Kaufman v. State Sav. Bank., 151 Mich. 65, 14 Det. Leg. N. 867, 114 NW 863.

28. Wasem v. Gray, 43 Colo. 140, 95 P 557.

29. Evidence held to show that insurance on two barns was canceled after insured sold farm, and was not transferred to barn on place to which insured moved. Continental Ins. Co. v. Buchanan, 32 Ky. L. R. 1298, 108 SW 355.

30. Where minds of parties never met as to life policy which insured requested be substituted for one they had applied for, insured's agreement to accept and pay for original policy was not abrogated. Graham v. Remmel [Ark.] 112 SW 141. For modification of contract of reinsurance, see post, § 17.

companies often reserve the right to modify the contract by amendments to the by-laws.[31] An agreement between two companies by which all the assets of one, and its liabilities on outstanding policies, are transferred to the other on specified terms, is a breach of contract as against the policy holders,[32] but if they elect to accept the reinsurance offered by the transferee company, they will be bound by the terms proposed.[33] A purchasing company can defend only on such grounds as would have been available to the original insurer[34] unless it has expressly limited its liability.[35]

Renewals are common.[36] It is presumed that a contract to renew calls for a policy similar to the old.[37] Payment of premium is not essential to the validity of a contract to renew a fire policy,[38] and such contract may be made though the policy has yet several months to run.[39] An action will lie on a contract to renew.[40]

*Fire insurance.*See 10 C. L. 374—Cancellation may be either by virtue of statute[41] or pursuant to agreement[42] under policies authorizing same on notice.[43] Cancella-

31. Where by-laws of mutual hail insurance company provided that company should not be liable on policies "after September 1st," and were amendable by terms of policy which on its face expired "noon, September 1st," amendment of such by-laws so that company should not be liable after "noon," September 1st, held reasonable and valid. Flakne v. Minnesota Farmers' Mut Ins. Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 785.

32. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Gray [C. C. A.] 161 F 488.

33. Evidence held to bind original holder of assessment policy by reinsurance subject to single premium lien. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Gray [C. C. A.] 161 F 488.

34. Company taking over assets and liabilities of another company could not assert defenses not existing in favor of original issurer. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Kerr [Ind. App.] 85 NE 796.

35. Company buying out another company and expressly limiting its liability to members or beneficiaries of other company to "claims arising by reason of death upon policies or certificates of membership of selling company, occurring subsequent to ratification of agreement," held not liable under cash surrender value provision of policy in old company. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Green [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1131.

36. Evidence held to authorize finding of contract to renew, though agent claimed misunderstanding. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788.

37. Presumed renewal was with same insurer for same time, terms, premium and property. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788. Where plaintiff held $600 insurance on certain tobacco for 3 months, agent's agreement to keep it in force by renewal held not void for uncertainty, it being understood a new policy should be issued on same property and on same terms. Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kelley [Ky.] 113 SW 882.

38. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex Civ. App.] 108 SW 788. In ascertaining whether payment of premium was waived, course of dealing between parties may be looked to. Id. Where agent had regularly renewed policy and given credit for premiums and agreed to keep certain insurance in force, it was his duty to renew old policy on its expiration unless he gave notice that further credit would be refused. Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kelley [Ky.] 113 SW 882.

39. Validity not affected because renewal agreement was made in August, while policy did not expire until following March. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788.

40. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788. Charge directing jury to ignore first of two alleged contracts of renewal held properly refused as on weight of evidence. Id. In action for breach of agreement to reinsure at expiration of existing contract, petition held to state cause of action. Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kelley [Ky.] 113 SW 882.

Measure of damages for total loss is amount of old policy, in absence of evidence of change in property or its value. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788.

41. Under Laws 1892, p. 1930, c. 690, requiring companies to cancel policies on request of insured and return premium less short-rate premium for expired time, a request to mark a policy off the books, without payment of short-rate premium differs from one to cancel policy under terms of contract and statute, since in first case company may decline to mark off, while in latter case request cancels contract ipso facto. Boutwell v. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 85 NE 1087. Return of binding slip to company with request "mark this off" held not an unconditional request to cancel so as to terminate contract ipso facto, where company refused to mark off and suggested that policy be canceled at short rates. Id. Right of insured to have fire policy in mutual company canceled on request as provided by policy and have unearned premiums returned held not available after company's insolvency and receivership. Hammond v. Knox, 109 NYS 367.

42. Evidence that insured after fire, but before learning of it, stated policy had been canceled, held to show consent to cancellation before loss so as to preclude recovery thereon. Smith v. Scottish Union of Nation provisions will be strictly construed against insurer[44] and must be fully complied with in the absence of acquiescence or waiver.[45] Insured will not be bound by the acts of persons not authorized to act for him,[46] nor by instructions not brought to his notice,[47] and unearned premiums must be returned if this was contemplated.[48] Whether withdrawal from an insurance association operates to cancel policies held by the members will depend on the terms of the agreement.[49]

Life insurance. See 10 C. L. 374—Voluntary abandonment of the contract by insured is treated in the next subsection.[50]

(§ 16) B. For breach of contract, condition, or warranty, or misrepresentation. See 10 C. L. 375—The most common grounds for forfeiture are failure to pay premiums, dues or assessments,[51] and breach of warranties, conditions or representations,[52] though the number of forfeitures is undoubtedly much reduced by the "incontestable clause" now found in many policies.[53] There is a conflict on the severability of fire policies as bearing on their avoidance for breach of condition relating to only part of the property insured.[54] The general disfavor with which forfeitures are regarded extends to policies of insurance,[55] and the one of two possible constructions should be adopted which will prevent a forfeiture.[56]

tional Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 50, 85 NE 841. Evidence held to show insured had surrendered fire policy for immediate cancellation before fire. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Robard's Tobacco Co.'s Trustee, 33 Ky. L. R. 257, 109 SW 1185.

43. Provision authorizing company to cancel policy on 5 day's notice means actual, not constructive, notice. Hartford Firs Ins. Co. v. Tewes, 132 Ill. App. 321. Notice to alleged agent insufficient. Id. Three-day notice of cancellation insufficient under five-day provision. Id. Time runs from actual receipt of notice. Id.

44. Williamson v. Warfield Pratt Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168.

45. Short period of silence by assured after receipt of notice of cancellation not made pursuant to terms of policy held insufficient to establish asquiescence. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Tewes, 132 Ill. App. 321. That insured in proofs of loss mentioned certain insurance procured by one not authorized to act for him did not show consent to cancellation where policy required him to state "all other insurance, whether valid or not." Id. His suing on both old and new policies held not a concession that old was not in force. Id.

46. Authority in one to procure insurance on certain property for another does not confer authority to have canceled the policies obtained. Horn v. Dorchester Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 199 Mass. 534, 85 NE 853. Evidence held to show that in what a certain person did in respect to cancellation relied on by insurer he acted as agent of insurer, and not as agent of insured. Id.

47. Aetna Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Renno [Miss.] 46 S 947.

48. Insurer seeking to cancel policy under agreement therefor must tender return of unearned premiums. Williamson v. Warfield Pratt Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168. To effect cancellation, unearned premiums must be tendered where policy provides that when canceled by company by giving notice "it shall retain only the pro rata premium." Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Tewes, 132 Ill. App. 321.

49. Subscription agreement and policies held not to require ipso facto cancellation of policies on withdrawal of a member from insurance association. Williamson v. Warfield Pratt Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168; Warfield Pratt Howell Co. v. Williamson, 233 Ill. 487, 84 NE 706.

Incontestable clause held to preclude defense of fraudulent concealments as to health of applicant and relations. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Flanigan, 134 Ill. App. 595.

54. Where premium is single policy is entire, though covering distinct and independent items of property, and hence breach of condition as to title of buildings avoids policy also as to goods therein. Johnson v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 430, 60 SE 118. Where fire policy covers different classes of property, each separately stated and insured for a specific amount, breach of condition as to one class does not affect right to recover insurance on other classes in absence of fraud, act condemned by public policy or increase of risk as to property insured. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Policy providing "This entire policy and each and every part thereof" should be void if, among other things, property was incumbered, held entire and indivisible, though different itsms of property were insured therein for separate amounts, so that if policy was void as to any part it was void in toto. Sullivan v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Okl.] 94 P 676. Whole contract, construed under Louisiana law holding iron safe clause indivisible where policy covers both goods and fixtures, held invalidated by breach of such clause. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Mount, 90 Miss. 642, 45 S 835.

55. Hamann v. Nebraska Underwriters' Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 65. Forfeitures are not favored and courts will be prompt to seize hold of circumstances which will pre-

Acts on the part of insured amounting to a voluntary abandonment of the insurance contract will of course preclude recovery thereon,[57] and the doctrine of abandonment is not affected by a statute precluding forfeiture for nonpayment of premium without giving notice to insured.[58] Fraud perpetrated by insurer or its agent,[59] or by insured,[60] is ground for rescission or avoidance of liability. After successful repudiation of the policy no recovery lies thereon.[61] A beneficiary may not disaffirm warranties made by an insured minor and at the same time enforce the policy.[62]

56. Hamann v. Nebraska Underwriters' Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 65. If fairly susceptible thereof, policy will be construed so as to avoid forfeiture. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wimberly [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 778.

57. Plea of voluntary discontinuance of payment of dues and direction that policy be canceled held complete bar to action. Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 107 Md. 374, 68 A 689. Plaintiff's failure to pay special assessments claimed to be unauthorized and subsequent failure to pay regular bi-monthly assessments held equivalent to voluntary abandonment of policy. Kray v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 421. Refusal to pay assessment solely on ground that it had been increased and formal notification of withdrawal from company held abandonment of contract precluding recovery thereon. Roth v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 282.

58. Eight years' failure to keep up insurance held abandonment, notwithstanding statute requiring notice. McGeehan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 604.

59. Fraud in representing that application was rejected and issuing policy to another under pretended assignment is ground for cancellation. Petition not demurrable. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Chambliss [Ga.] 61 SE 1034. Petition and evidence held to show bad faith and to authorize recovery of attorney's fees. Id. Mutual fire insurance company issuing policy without word "mutual" conspicuously printed therein, as provided by Rev. St., § 3653, and inducing its acceptance by falsely and fraudulently representing that there would be no contingent liability thereon, acts unlawfully and commits fraud on persons induced thereby to enter into agreement with company; and when insured informed agent he would not accept a policy in a mutual company, or in one where there was such contingent liability for future assessments, and there was sent him through said agent a paper writing, in form and appearance like unto a standard cash policy of insurance, which was received by him after paying sum specified therein as cash premium and placed with other like papers without criticial inspection, where it remained until he received notice to pay assessment thereunder, several months later, he did not enter into an undertaking to accept such policy, nor is he estopped from denying liability thereunder. Williams v. Aetna Fire Ass'n Receiver, 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 422. Alleged fraud in inserting matter in policies without insured's consent held no defense in action for earned premiums, it not appearing insured was deceived or misled. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Dierks Lumber & Coal Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 55. Companies are responsible for fraud of agents within line of their agencies. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Seidel [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 945. Evidence held to show fraud of agent in negotiating premium note contrary to oral agreement to return it to applicant should latter decline policy. Id. Held, under evidence, that defendant company had not conferred authority on alleged agent to accept premium not before acceptance of application, but that applicant was chargeable with notice of restrictions by his powers, so that agent having fraudulently negotiated note so as to render applicant liable to an innocent holder, applicant could not recover from defendant amount paid. Weidenaar v. New York Life Ins. Co., 36 Mont. 592, 94 P 1. Fraudulent acts of alleged agent in procuring application for insurance and taking premium note held not ratified by conduct of defendant company where it had no knowledge of fraud until long after rejection of application. Id. Complaint in suit for recovery of amount of premium note fraudulently negotiated by agent contrary to his oral agreement to return note if applicant should decline to take policy held to seek rescission and not damages for deceit though not expressly praying for rescission, and rescission could be had thereunder though insurance company did not expressly authorize the fraud, and hence could not be held in damages. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Seidel [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 945.

60. Answer that plaintiff was not owner of goods, had over-valued stock, failed to keep inventory, etc., as agreed, held to warrant instruction on issue of fraud. Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 893. Allegation setting up misrepresentation as to incumbrances held to warrant instruction on fraud. Hankinson v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 905. Misstatements as to health held not fraud or concealment where they did not mislead and examiner's report recommending risk would not have been different had answers been correct. Roe v. National Life Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500. Bare statement of beneficiary after death of insured as to insured having been at hospital held insufficient to show fraud on part of insured in stating he had never been under treatment in any hospital. Thompson v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 113 NYS 225.

61. Answer setting up successful repudiation of policy and recovery back of premium instalment by insured in agent's suit on premium note, which repudiation was not known to insurer when it received second premium, held sufficient defense. Citizens' Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ky.] 113 SW 439.

62. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Brubaker [Kan.] 96 P 62.

One seeking to rescind for fraud or breach of the contract must act with reasonable promptness,[63] otherwise he will be held to have waived his rights.[64] Return of unearned premiums within a reasonable time[65] is essential to rescission at the instance of insurer,[66] but when provable damages are sustained by fraud on the part of insured, a rescission without return of premiums received will be held effectual as against a suit in equity for reinstatement of the policy,[67] and the courts are not entirely agreed as to the necessity of affirmative rescission and tender of premiums by insurer as a condition precedent to its right to set up forfeitures in defense of an action on the policy.[68]

63. Rule that election to take advantage of breach of contract must be promptly made is peculiarly applicable to mutual insurance contracts where insured practically is both insurer and insured. Voss v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 118 NW 212.

64. Alleged breach on part of company by passage of by-law increasing premium held waived where beneficiary and insured without objection continued to pay premiums for four years. Voss v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 118 NW 212. Insured could not assert ignorance of contents of by-law where he received copy thereof and letters and notices as to premiums and their increase. Id. One who accepts and receipts for a policy different from that applied for and thereafter pays a premium note and retains the policy without objection with actual knowledge of its contents cannot after four months rescind and recover amount paid and enjoin the collection of further premiums. Smith v. Smith [Ark.] 110 SW 1038. Several years' acquiescence held laches precluding assertion of fraud on part of insurer, or mistake in including in renewal policies an additional class of employes, injuries to whom were insured against and on whose wages premiums would be in part based, action being for earned annual premiums. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Dierks Lumber & Coal Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 55. Right to recover back money paid under fraudulent representation of agent that after five years plaintiffs would get such money back with interest held not waived by plaintiffs continuing payments for another term of five years where such payments were induced by same kind of assurances. Stroud v. Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 626.

65. Where over two years expired after notice of breach of warranty before company tendered premiums, court could not hold time reasonable against general verdict for plaintiff. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760.

66. Tender of premium note to assured's administrator held essential to rescission. Iowa Life Ins. Co. v. Haughton [Ind. App.] 85 NE 127. Tender of bill of exchange held insufficient as return or offer to return of premiums on which to base rescission. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760. In suit to restore policy which company had attempted to cancel because of fraud on part of plaintiff in procuring same, answer setting up fraud but not indicating willingness to restore premiums paid showed it should be determined defendant was not entitled to retain them held insufficient. Mincho v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 124 App. Div. 578, 109 NYS 179. Allegation that defendant "duly canceled" policy held a mere conclusion of law. Id.

Note: Upon the general proposition that the insured is entitled to the premiums paid Slocum v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 796 is in line with the authorities. See American Life Ins. Co. v. McAden, 109 Pa. 399, 1 A 256; Knight Templars v. Gravett, 49 Ill. App. 252; Lovell v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 264, 28 Law. Ed. 423; True v. Bankers' Life, 78 Wis. 287, 47 NW 520; Van Werden v. Equitable Soc., 99 Iowa, 621, 68 NW 892; Supreme Council v. Black, 59 C. C. A. 414, 123 F 650. Whether or not the insured can recover all the premiums is a disputed question. That he can so recover, see McKee v. Phoenix L. Ins. Co., 28 Mo. 383, 75 Am. Dec. 129; McCall v. Ins. Co., 9 W. Va. 237, 27 Am. Rep. 558; Braswell v. American L. Ins. Co., 75 N. C. 8; Smallwood v. Life Ins. Co., 133 N. C. 15, 45 SE 519; Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Pottkor, 33 Ohio, 459, 31 Am. Bankers' Life, supra; Supreme Council v. Black, supra; Van Werden v. Equitable Soc., supra; American L. Ins. Co. v. McAden, supra. To the effect that the insured cannot recover all of the premiums, see Lovell v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 264, 28 Law. Ed. 423; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Statham, 93 U. S. 24, 23 Law. Ed. 789; (but see Cooley's Briefs, II, p. 1055, for note on these cases); Speer v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 36 Hun [N. Y.] 322; Ebert v. 67. Insurer entitled to offset damages against premium received. Mincho v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 113 NYS 346. Separate defense setting up plaintiff's fraud, notification of rescission, and willingness to return so much of premiums as defendant was not entitled to retain, held not demurrable. Id.

68. Where by its terms policy is void for fraud on part of insured, latter cannot recover the premiums paid, and hence insurer need not show repayment of premiums in order to avoid liability on the policy. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. Where contract of fire insurance was entire and risk had attached, premium was not apportionable, and to avail itself of forfeiture insurer was not required to tender any part of premium. Home Ins. Co. v. Myers, 33 Ky. L. R. 790, 111 SW 289, modifying accordingly opinion in 32 Ky. L. R. 999, 107 SW 719. Though policy provides it shall be void for breach of warranty, it is in law only voidable at insurer's election, so as to require rescission and tender of premium received in order that insurer may defend action thereon for the breach. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760.

(§ 16) C. Estoppel or waiver of right to cancel or avoid.[69]—The doctrines of waiver and estoppel[70] play an important part in determining the right of insurer to insist on forfeiture provisions.[71] They apply in the many cases of unconditional[72] declarations or conduct inconsistent with its intention to take advantage of a known breach,[73] such as issuing the policy with knowledge of all the facts,[74] the collection[75] or retention of premiums after a breach,[76] or of overdue premiums,[77]

69. See 10 C. L. 380. Waiver of provisions requiring prepayment of the first premium or delivery of the policy while insured is alive and in health (see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity), of notice to pay premiums (see ante, § 8), of notice or proofs of loss (see post, § 19), of provisions for arbitration (see post, § 20), and of contract limitations as to time of bringing suit (see post, § 24A), are treated in other sections.

70. Though in law of insurance terms "waiver" and "estoppel" are often used synonymously (German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27; Webster v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 319), they have distinctive characteristics, same as when used in other connections (Webster v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 319). Waiver involves act of only one party, is voluntary relinquishment of a known right, and does not necessarily imply that other party is misled to his prejudice, while estoppel involves conduct of both parties, and misleading of one party to his prejudice. Id.

71. Doctrines of waiver and estoppel of alleged breaches by insured obtains in courts of South Carolina (Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 893) and applies to mutual as well as to other companies (Id.). Insurer bound by knowing and intentional waiver of forfeiture. Webster v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 319.

72. Insurer may attach conditions to its waiver of forfeiture. Where it accepted premium on condition that insured was then in good health, etc., breach of such conditions would constitute defense. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Tuchfeld [C. C. A.] 159 F 833. Could not be asserted company misled insured where he received notice that acceptance of overdue premiums would be subject to express condition that she was in good health and should not be construed as waiver or as establishing course of dealing. Wilson v. Royal Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 137 Iowa, 184, 114 NW 1051.

73. Stipulation for forfeiture is waived by conduct of insurer inconsistent with intention to claim forfeiture. Jensen v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 286. Any agreement, declaration or course of action on part of company leading insured honestly to believe that by conforming thereto, policy will not be forfeited, followed by due conformity, estops company. Knoebel v. North American Acc. Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 1094; State Life Ins. Co. v. Murray [C. C. A.] 159 F 408. Continuing examination of insured after his admission of facts showing breach of warranty as to previous loss by burglary, held no waiver of breach, nothing being done by insurer to lead insured to believe it did not intend to take advantage thereof. Bacouby v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 118 NYS 20. Treating policy in force with knowledge of breach of condition waives same, especially where breach results from direct act of insurer, as by giving consent to insured's tenants. German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Company's report to insurance commissioner including policy in question as in force held immaterial as between company and insured, it being explained that doubtful policies were always included. Weston v. State Mut. Life Assur. Soc., 234 Ill. 492, 84 NE 1073. Estoppel to insist on forfeiture arises though knowledge to insurer by reason of notice to its authorized agent that assured is relying on continued existence of insurance. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Burnett, 136 Ill. App. 187.

74. Insurer cannot defend for misstatements in application of which it had knowledge. Garfinkel v. Alliance Life Ins. Co., 140 Ill. App. 380. Right to forfeit for misstatement as to age held waived. Id. Company cannot avoid effect of information contained in written application for insurance on which it issues policy by showing that it does not accept written applications in its business. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Where applicant is examined by physician acting for insurer and insurance issues on physician's recommendation, insurer is estopped, under express terms of Code, § 1812, from defending on ground that insured was not in condition of health required by policy when delivered, unless physician's report was procured through insured's fraud or deceit. Roe v. National Life Ins. Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500. To constitute fraud or deceit there must have been intent to deceive and examiner must have relied on false statements or representations by insured or been misled by concealments which good faith required disclosure of. Id.

75. Receipt of premiums by authorized agent waives forfeiture for misstatements in application. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Krueger, 135 Ill. App. 432. Collection of premium held waiver of vacancy clause. Farmers' Alliance Ins. Co. v. Ferguson [Kan.] 98 P 231.

76. Mere failure to return premium before suit on policy held not waiver of forfeiture for violation of condition against incumbrances, insurer not knowing of violation until after loss. Capital Fire Ins. Co. v. Shearwood [Ark.] 112 SW 878. Retention of premium, though evidence of intention not to claim policy is invalid, is not conclusive of company's right to assert defenses.

denial of liability on grounds other than those finally asserted[78] or taking steps toward settlement of the loss.[79] All the various conditions, warranties and representations,[80] including provisions relating to the payment of premiums,[81] the Northwestern Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 825. See, also, ante, B, this section, on necessity for return of unearned premium as condition to right to defend for breaches.

77. Forfeiture for default in payment of premium held waived. Receipt and retention of overdue payments. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ala.] 47 S 735. Notice by general agent that provision for payment of premium on first of month would not be insisted on, and his acceptance of payments any time before tenth of month. North American Acc. Ins. Co. v. Whitesides, 134 Ill. App. 290. General agent's demand for overdue premium. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Springgate [Ky.] 113 SW 824. Acceptance of late premiums or payment of premium note after due generally waives forfeiture. Duncan v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 646. General agent's receipt May 8 of check of date May 7 from collecting agent for amount of premium due May 1st and failure to inquire whether premium was overdue when paid held waiver. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ala.] 47 S 735. General agent's return of premium to company's collecting agent held not return to insured so as to avoid waiver on ground premium was not paid when due. Id. If notwithstanding forfeiture for failure to mail premiums until after due date insurer applied proceeds of draft to premium due without more, such action would be waiver. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Tuchfeld [C. C. A.] 159 F 833.

Forfeiture not waived: Acceptance of late premiums only after insurer was satisfied of insured's good health and reinstatement after medical examination held not sufficient to waive right to forfeit for subsequent delinquency. Wilson v. Royal Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 137 Iowa, 184, 114 NW 1051. Collection of premium note with express understanding that policy had been forfeited for nonpayment on due date and that payment should be for protection received before forfeiture held no waiver. Lesseps v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 120 La. 610, 45 S 522. Unsuccessful efforts to collect overdue premium note held not waiver of forfeiture already effected in law by nonpayment at maturity, insured not having changed his position in any way. Iles v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 96 P 522. Provision in premium note that if not paid when due full premium shall be considered as having been earned and note payable without revivor of policy is valid (Duncan v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 160 F 646), and collection of such note by insurer after maturity does not operate as a waiver of forfeiture (Id.). Insured bound by provisions of note in absence of fraud or duress though he signed same without reading. Id. Where note was given on insured being reinstated after a forfeiture, insured could not claim that provision therein was invalid as in conflict with policy providing that no variance of its terms should be valid unless made in writing at home office by president, vice-president and secretary. Id. Acceptance of premium in ignorance of loss held not to revive policy. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 107 SW 688. Insured not misled by company's previous indulgence where notified by company of importance of paying premium both before and after default. Id. Subsequent acceptance of premiums without knowledge that insured did not meet conditions on which forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums was waived held no waiver. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Tuchfeld [C. C. A.] 159 F 833. Instruction that acceptance of premiums worked estoppel held erroneous. Id.

78. Denial of liability on specified ground with knowledge of other grounds of forfeiture held waiver of such other grounds. Farmers' Alliance Ins. Co. [Kan.] 98 P 231. Company is not restricted in its defense to reasons assigned in its refusal to pay, it not appearing plaintiff has been misled or injured by failure to give other reasons. Letter stating that contract was never completed held not to preclude defense of forfeiture for nonpayment of premium. Weston v. State Mut. Life Assur. Soc., 234 Ill. 492, 84 NE 1073.

79. Treating policy in force by retaining premiums and endeavoring to adjust loss after knowledge of breach of conditions precedent as to ownership and incumbrances held waiver. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Adjuster's examination of owners with reference to sale and loss held no estoppel to assert avoidance for unauthorized incumbrance where policy expressly provided against waiver in such case. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co., 157 F 598. Payment of loss, procured by fraudulent representations by insured, held no waiver of forfeiture. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Kehoe, 197 Mass. 354, 83 NE 866. That insured was requested by accident and health company to make out proof of claim for illness held not to preclude company from invoking provision in policy exempting it from liability for illness originating within 30 days after renewal of policy by payment of overdue premium. Greenwaldt v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 52 Misc. 353, 102 NYS 157. Forwarding blanks for proofs of death in response to request of beneficiary but without prejudice to any rights of association in the premises and with notice that policy had lapsed for nonpayment of premium held no estoppel to assert forfeiture. Roth v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 162 F 282.

80. See the various general principles laid down in this subsection in addition to specific enumerations here given.

81. For questions of estoppel or waiver of relating to payment of first premium except such as bear on agent's power to override prohibitions against waivers, see ante, § 7, subd. Essentials and Validity. Waiver may be inferred from any circumstances showing that both parties understood that payment of premium would not be required on a specified date. Continental Casualty Co. v. Bridges [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 176. Company may by course of dealing be estopped to deny payment of premium, as by taking title or interest of insured,[82] other insurance,[83] incumbrances,[84] increase of risk,[85] the iron safe,[86] vacancies,[87] or the transfer or removal of the property,[88] may be note, allowing dividend, etc. Arnold v. Empire Mut. Life Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Where note for loan on policy gave company option to cancel policy for nonpayment of premiums or of interest on note, acceptance of premiums when there was interest past due on note held not to waive condition in note as to future payment of premiums. Wilson v. Royal Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 137 Iowa, 184, 114 NW 1051. Payment in cash may be waived by acceptance of note or other obligation in lieu of cash by authorized officers. Arnold v. Empire Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 685, 60 SE 470. Provision that payment of premiums could be made to certain authorized persons only on production of receipt signed by head officers held waived where insurer knowingly accepted premium money paid to agent who did not give the required form of receipt. Matthews v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 192. Company estopped to assert nonpayment where insured relied on receiving customary notice and stamped envelope in which to send money and small receipt book. Knoebel v. North American Acc. Ins. Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 1094. If after issuing policy insurer authorizes or acquiesces in sending of premiums by mail, deposit in mail in time to reach home office by time premium is due will prevent forfeiture though premium does not in fact reach such office until after due date and though policy provides that premiums shall be paid at insurer's home office by a certain time. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Tuchfeld [C. C. A.] 159 F 833. Agent's and company's retention of renewal policy pending negotiations for change therein on assurance that insured would be protected until new policy was issued held waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment of premium falling due in meantime, conduct and statements of agent and insurer being such as to lead insured reasonably to believe premium was not to be paid until new policy was issued and delivered. Continental Casualty Co. v. Bridges [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 170. Agent's statements that he was attending to fire policy and that if house burned insured would get his money held not to justify insured in assuming that he could recover despite delay in paying premium. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 107 SW 688.

82. Agent's knowledge as to absolute ownership. Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 893. Where company issued policy requiring insured to be unconditional and sole owner of both legal and equitable title, though applicant's answer in application showed that he had only equitable title, it thereby waived objection that insured did not have legal title. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Objection that title of insured was not a 99-year lease as stated in application held waived, agent issuing policy with full knowledge of condition of title. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. Issuing policy on application stating insured's title was 99-year lease held to preclude objection that ground was not owned by insured in fee as required by policy. Id.

83. Where policy destroyed before actual delivery contained provision against concurrent insurance contrary to oral agreement, and agent received premium without notifying insured of the unauthorized prohibition, forfeiture on ground of additional insurance was waived. Hearsh v. German Fire Ins. Co., 130 Mo. App. 457, 110 SW 23. Agent's knowledge of outstanding insurance held waiver though agent did not know amount of such insurance. Insurance Co. of North America v. De Loach & Co., 3 Ga. App. 807, 61 SE 406. Indorsement by agent "$500 additional concurrent insurance permitted" held to refer to insurance in addition to that outstanding when policy was written, including that then being written, and not merely to limit amount of insurance in addition to amount of policy. Id. Company's retention of policy for over a month under promise to amend it so as to consent to other insurance taken out, insured having requested that policy be either amended or canceled on account of such insurance, held waiver of forfeiture. Nemeyer v. Claiborne [Ark.] 112 SW 387. Immaterial that policy stipulated company should not be bound by acts or statements of agents unless inserted in policy. Id.

84. The ordinary loss payable clause does not waive a condition against incumbrances. Insured could not mortgage to conditional sale vendor of part of property, remainder in which mortgagee had no interest when policy issued. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Liddell Co., 130 Ga. 8, 60 SE 104. That agent when informed by insured he intended to place a mortgage on the property replied that it would make no difference held not to work waiver or estoppel, especially where policy authorized mortgaging of property if company's consent was written thereon. McCarty v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE. 1.

85. Insurer may waive provision against maintaining specified articles on premiums. German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Assent to installation of acetylene plant and knowledge that it was in house when assignment of policy was allowed held to preclude assertion of increase of risk by the gas plant. Furbush v. Consolidated Patrons' & Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 371.

86. Clause requiring account books to be kept in an iron safe held waiver by insuring on application showing insured kept no books. Retail Merchants' Ass'n Fire Ins. Co. v. Cox, 138 Ill. App. 14. Iron safe clause could be waived by writing policy with knowledge that insured had no iron safe in which to keep books, and agent's taking possession of policy for safe keeping on that account. Jensen v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 286. Where agent having authority to receive premiums and transmit policy, when issued with indorsement that it was approved by him, represented to insured in soliciting policy that provision in company's by-laws that agents had no power to alter or modify iron safe clause and requirement that books be kept in safe place outside the building, did not apply in case of a small business, and that insured would not be bound thereby, defendant, by agent, waived thus affected. The rule that a landlord cannot excuse a breach by showing it was the act of his tenant without his knowledge has no application where the insured expressly consents.[89] When a forfeiture is once waived, it cannot afterwards be invoked.[90]

The acts, declarations and knowledge of insurer's agent[91] are those of insurer,[92] when the agent acts within the scope of his authority.[93] Insurer cannot therefore, such requirements. Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 893; Hankinson v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 905. Judgment for insured on finding that insurer waived iron safe clause affirmed by equally divided court. Slawson v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 782.

87. Objection that premises had been vacant for five days without permit held waived by issuance of permit for further vacancy. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634. Agent's knowledge that building insured as school house was not occupied at night or during school vacations held to estop company to set up vacancy clause. Mississippi Home Ins. Co. v. Stevens [Miss.] 46 S 245.

88. Agent's knowledge that insured goods were removed to another place and failure of insurer to cancel policy and return unearned premium. McIntyre v. Liverpool, London & Globe Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 110 SW 604. Waiver not affected by words insuring property while contained in a specified building "and not elsewhere." Id.

89. Where agents without landlord's knowledge permitted tenants to generate gasoline vapor. German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27.

90. Company's letter that unless overdue note was paid at once it would be returned and insurance canceled held waiver where, when letter reached insured, he was unconscious and died next day and widow thereafter remitted payment. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Springgate [Ky.] 112 SW 681.

91. Knowledge of one taking application, receiving premium, and delivering policy, as to ownership of property and incumbrances, held knowledge of company, where latter accepted application and premium and issued policy thereon, company not being in position to assert such person was not its agent. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Broker affecting insurance without being employed by insurer but on commission on premium received for such risks as insurer chooses to accept is not agent of insurer so that notice of transfer of property to brokers who affected insurance and divided commissions with insurer's agent was not binding on company. American Steam Laundry Co. v. Hamburg Bremen Fire Ins Co. [Tenn.] 113 SW 394.

92. Agent's knowledge that of company. Rearden v. State Mut. Life Ins. Co., 79 S. C. 526, 60 SE 1106. Rule as to agent's knowledge being company's knowledge applies to mutual assessment companies. Hankinson v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 905; McCarty v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 1. Rule applicable whether form or substance of contract is involved. Id. Company estopped by agent's knowledge of facts respecting risk in absence of collusion or insured's knowledge of agent's limited powers and that he was exceeding his authority. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Howell, 32 Ky. L. R. 935, 107 SW 294. If agent has conscious knowledge when policy is issued that it contains conditions contrary to fact, it is immaterial from what source such information was obtained. Company held chargeable with knowledge of agent acquired while he was insured's director that insured had released a railroad company from liability for loss by fire set by it, so that recovery could not be barred by setting up concealment of fact affecting insurer's right to subrogation under policy. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. La Grange & Lockhart Compress Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1134. However, company will not be charged with knowledge of agents interested antagonistically to it. Company held not chargeable with knowledge of local agents, who were interested as stockholders and officers of insured, that plant insured was not being operated at time insurance was issued. Home Ins. Co. v. North Little Rock Ice & Elec. Co. [Ark.] 111 SW 994. Notice to agent that goods had been removed to another place. Continental Ins. Co. v. Buchanan, 32 Ky. L. R. 1298, 108 SW 355. Adjuster's knowledge as to incumbrance and ownership held imputable to company. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Agent's knowledge when policy was issued that building had been condemned and that efforts were made to resist carrying out decree and permitting policy to continue in force held to preclude company from avoiding policy because of condemnation and insured's promises to remove the building. Irwin v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 58 Misc. 441, 109 NYS 612. Evidence insufficient to show agent had knowledge of facts constituting breach of warranty as to health and medical treatment. Colaneri v. General Aco. Assur. Corp., 110 NYS 678. Consent by general agents that tenants of insured install device for generation of gasoline vapor held waiver of condition against generation of illuminating gas or vapor or allowing benzine or gasoline on premises. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Where two companies were really only one, permission by their agents acting for one of them in issuing a policy to tenants that latter maintain on premises articles forbidden by previous policy to landlord issued by same agents was notice to other company and waiver of prohibitory clause in landlord's policy. Id. Presumed despite agent's testimony to contrary that they had in mind at the time policy issued to landlord. Id.

93. General agent may waive provisions. Pelican Assur. Co. v. Schiedknecht, 32 Ky. L. R. 1257, 108 SW 312. Acts and knowledge of agents being acts and knowledge of company, manager having general supervision in several states and who received all premiums from such territory could waive forfeiture by receiving overdue premium with set up the falsity of answers written by the agent after he was truthfully informed,[94] or base avoidance on matter contained in the application but not known to insured because of the agent's fault,[95] nor can it predicate rights upon a construction of a question asked insured which is at variance with that made when the insurance was written.[96] Authorities disagree on the effect of clauses prohibiting or regulating waivers or agreements on the part of agents.[97] knowledge it was overdue, and this though company's contract with him unbeknown to public prohibited such action on his part. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ala.] 47 S 735. Where agent has actual authority to solicit insurance, take and forward application, deliver policy, collect premium and continue negotiations for change in policies, estoppel against forfeiture for nonpayment of premium is the same as it would be in case of an individual insurer, himself present and acting. Continental Casualty Co. v. Bridges [Tex. Civ. App.] 114 SW 170. Evidence held to warrant finding of estoppel to deny authority of soliciting agent to receive premium for defendant. State Life Ins. Co. v. Murray [C. C. A.] 159 F 408. Company is not bound by statements of agent not in course of his employment. Agent's promise after execution of policy that he would take care of it and not allow forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums held not admissible in evidence. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 107 SW 688. To authorize recovery on ground of agent's extension of time for payment of premium note, insured must show not only agency but that continuing policy in force was within real or apparent scope of agent's authority. American Ins. Co. v. Hornbarger, 85 Ark. 337, 108 SW 213. Authority to solicit, receive and write applications, receive and deliver policies and collect premiums, held not to authorize agent to continue policy in force by extending time for payment of premium note (Id.), nor to empower him to waive proof of loss as required by policy (Id.).

94. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760; Iowa Life Ins. Co. v. Houghton [Ind. App.] 85 NE 127. One who solicits insurance, takes application, receives premium and delivers policy is at least, for these purposes, company's agent (Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829), and if he writes down false statements after he has been truthfully informed, his knowledge will be imputed to company (Id.).

95. Insurer is estopped to set up falsity of answers in application where insured signs same, not knowing contents, on assurance of insurer's agent that it was prepared according to insurer's regulations. Roe v. National Life Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500. Insured held not bound by answer in application as to existing incumbrances where same was written by agent who had not inquired of insured relative thereto and insured had no knowledge of such answer when he signed application. Hollenbeck & Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 217. Evidence sufficient to prove that insured had no actual knowledge of contents of application or policy but relied on agent who failed to call his attention to all the statements or negligently checked statements without reading them. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760.

96. Where agent in filling out application for policy of insurance against loss by burglary or larceny construes a certain question asked of applicant to suit the circumstances of the particular case, he acts for insurer, and latter cannot escape liability on ground of incorrectness of a statement in application based on a contrary construction. Kandar v. Aetna Indemnity Co., 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 449.

97. Restrictions held controlling: When policy provides that agreements or waivers by agent must be in writing and attached to policy, verbal agreements are not binding on company. Consent to incumbrance. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co., 157 F 598. Verbal agreements not rendered binding by Code Iowa, 1897, § 1750, making persons acting for company in certain capacities its agents with authority to transact all business within "scope of his employment." Id. Provision against agent's modification or waiver of terms except by written indorsement is valid both under general law and Code Iowa, § 1750, being merely regulatory and not prohibitory. Mulrooney v. Royal Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 163 F 833. Agent held powerless to waive conditions as to prepayment of first premium and delivery of policy while applicant was in health, policy expressly providing against waivers or modifications by agents. Powell v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Ala.] 45 S 208. Under standard policy prescribed by Revisal 1905, §§ 4759, 4760, providing that no agent, etc., shall have power to waive any condition except such or by terms of policy may be subject of agreement endorsed thereon, nor unless such waiver shall be written on or attached to policy, parol evidence is inadmissible to show waiver of condition against additional insurance not written on or attached to policy. Black v. Atlanta Home Ins. Co. [N. C.] 61 SE 672. Agent's and adjuster's collection of premium after loss and statement that claim would be adjusted held no waiver of condition against incumbrance where policy prohibited agents from waiving conditions except in certain cases and in prescribed manner. Sullivan v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Okl.] 94 P 676. Agent's knowledge of existence of mortgage at time policy was issued held not waiver by company of condition against incumbrances where policy prohibited agents, etc., from waiving provisions except such as by terms of policy might be subject of agreement indorsed thereon or added thereto, and required that as to such provision waiver must be indorsed on or added to policy, federal rule being applied in the case because same was pending in United States court when state was admitted into Union. (§ 16) D. Reinstatement.[See 10 C. L. 388]—A fire policy cannot be reinstated after destruction of the subject-matter.[98] Health policies often provide that insurer shall not be liable for any illness originating within a specified time after reinstatement.[99]

§ 17. Contracts of reinsurance and concurrent insurance. Reinsurance.[See 10 C. L. 389]—The power of companies to reinsure is treated in a previous section.[1] Modifications of the contract must be clearly proven.[2] The reinsured need not pay the loss before proceeding against the reinsurer unless there are controlling provisions in the contract.[3] The usual rules of procedure apply.[4]

Concurrent insurance.[See 10 C. L. 389]—Breach of conditions has been treated in an earlier section.[5] The policy sometimes requires insured to take out concurrent insurance[6] or become a coinsurer in default thereof.[7] Often it is agreed that the his actual or apparent authority may waive conditions in the policy, notwithstanding express prohibition therein. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760. Where agent is authorized to collect premium and deliver policy, cash payment may be waived though contrary is stipulated in policy and enforcement of policy can be defeated only by showing bad faith or collusion. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Greenlee [Ind. App.] 84 NE 1101. Provision that waivers must be indorsed in writing by agent having authority to do so is for company's benefit, and like other conditions, may be waived by it. Allen v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 14 Idaho, 728, 95 P 829. Clause against waivers unless made in writing and signed by officers of company may be waived by any agent authorized to make contracts of insurance. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Springgate [Ky.] 112 SW 681. Provision that forfeiture cannot be waived except by written agreement signed by certain officials refers only to express agreements and does not prevent an implied or parol waiver. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riley [Ala.] 47 S 735. Stipulation that no provision could be waived or altered except by indorsement signed by certain officers refers to provisions already in force and does not prevent agent from making contract outside of matters appearing on face of policy form. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 380. Where facts were sufficient under well recognized rules of law to establish waiver of forfeiture for breach of concurrent insurance provision, stipulation that company should not be bound by acts or statements of agents unless inserted in policy held unavailing. Neimeyer v. Claiborne [Ark.] 112 SW 387. General agents held empowered to waive inhibition against allowance of certain articles on premises despite clause that no agent could waive any restrictive clause except by writing or attaching waiver to policy in cases expressly authorized. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Company held estopped by agent's knowledge of misrepresentation despite provision in application that company should not be bound by information given agent unless written into application and presented to officers at head office. Reardon v. State Mut. Life Ins. Co., 79 S. C. 526, 60 SE 1106. Where agent was more than soliciting agent, his knowledge that insured kept no books or safe as policy required was company's knowledge, though by-laws provided agents had no power to waive conditions as to safe or books. Plunkett v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 893.

98. No reinstatement after fire. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 107 SW 688.

99. Where policy provided that, if any renewal premium should be paid after expiration of policy, insurer should not be liable for any illness originating before expiration of 30 days from date of renewal, insured was not entitled to sick indemnity for illness originating 15 days after payment of overdue premium, resulting in renewal under policy. Greenwaldt v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 52 Misc. 353, 102 NYS 157.

1. See ante, § 2.

2. In action by fire insurance company against reinsuring company, evidence held to sustain finding that contract of reinsurance had not been modified so as to change time when reinsurer should become bound. Northwestern Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. [Minn.] 117 NW 825.

3. Allemannia Fire Ins. Co. v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 209 U. S. 326, 52 Law. Ed. 815. Provision that losses should be payable pro rata with, in same manner, and upon same terms and conditions as paid by reinsured under contracts reinsured, and that reinsurer should not be liable in excess of ratable proportion of sum actually paid to insured under original contracts, held not to require payment of loss first. Id. Payment not a prerequisite oecause of provision that reinsured should forward to reinsurer statement of date and probable amount of loss, and, after having adjusted, accepted proofs of, or paid such loss or damage, should forward proofs and copy of receipt taken on payment of loss. Id.

4. In suit to reform and enforce contract for reinsurance, amendment setting up a previous contract and alleging that contract originally declared on was memorandum issued and entered under such previous contract held not to add new cause of action. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 643, 61 SE 492. Petition sufficient. Id.

5. See ante, § 9, subd. Fire Insurance.

6. Covenant to take out concurrent insurance held sufficiently fulfilled if property covered by different policies is the same, though differently described, so as to allow apportionment of damages. Standard insurance shall not attach until all specific insurance has been exhausted.[8] The extent of the liability of coinsurers is treated in the next section.[9]

§ 18. The loss or benefit, its extent, and extent of liability therefor. See 10 C. L. 390 Questions relating to interest, attorney's fees and penalties are treated in the section on remedies and procedure,[10] except the right of employers to interest and costs recovered from them by employes.[11]

Accident and health insurance. See 10 C. L. 390—The policy controls as to amount of indemnity and the period for which the same can be recovered.[12] Sometimes it is provided that any one of several promised indemnities shall be in lieu of the others,[13] in which case insured may be put to an election.[14] Provisions limiting or increasing the indemnity if illness, injury or death should result from specified causes are common.[15]

Credit insurance. See 10 C. L. 390

Employer's liability insurance. See 10 C. L. 390—If insurer is duly notified of the action against insured, it will be bound by the judgment therein, though it makes no appearance.[16] The policy often gives insurer the right to settle or defend the suit against the employer at its own cost,[17] and prohibits the latter from interfering or from voluntarily assuming or incurring any liability or expense.[18] If Leather Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 631.

7. Stipulation making insured coinsurer to extent to which he should fail to maintain insurance on his property below 75 per cent of its value held not contrary to law or public policy. Simon v. Queen Ins. Co., 120 La. 477, 45 S 396.

8. Specific insurance is exhausted not only when entire amount of insurance on all property of insured is required to meet loss, but also when all collectible in respect to any given loss has been paid (Cutting v. Atlas Mut. Ins. Co., 199 Mass. 380, 85 NE 174); hence fact that there remained other insurance on other property not destroyed did not show that specific insurance had not been exhausted (Id.).

9. See post, § 18, subd. Fire Insurance.

10. See post, § 24D.

11. See post, this section, Employer's Liability Insurance.

12. Amount recovered under accident and health policy on account of illness and disability held substantially correct. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Phelan, 135 Ill. App. 399. Terms of policy held to limit recovery for partial disability to period of 16 weeks. Hastings v. Bankers' Acc. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 79.

13. Provision that indemnity should not be paid for more than one of certain injuries enumerated in two schedules and should be in lieu of any other indemnity "provided in this clause," held to refer to entire paragraph, and not merely to schedules, so that recovery could not be had under schedules for broken ribs and also under other provisions in the paragraph for fractured sternum. Hastings v. Bankers' Acc. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 79.

14. Retention of check so drawn as to waive further claims held not election to claim under a particular schedule of accidents where insured refused to sign and notified insurer he would not waive claim under another provision. Hastings v. Bankers' Acc. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 119 NW 79.

15. See ante, § 10.

16. Company neglecting to defend in employe's suit against insured as contemplated by employer's liability policy could not complain of amount of damages recovered on default. Sandoval Zinc Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 140 Ill. App. 247. Insurer's refusal to defend after notice because it disclaimed liability did not relieve it from conclusiveness of judgment rendered. B. Roth Tool Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. [C. C. A.] 161 F 709.

17. Where company had right to settle or defend suit against employer "at its own cost," quoted words meant "at its own expense" as distinguished from mere court costs and included court costs, attorneys' and stenographers' fees, etc., but not interest on judgment against assured pending appeal. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Omaha Elec. L. & P. Co. [C. C. A.] 157 F 514. Where policy expressly limits insurer's liability to a designated sum actually paid on a judgment in an action against insured, a further provision that company will defend action in name and on behalf of insured, or settle same at its own cost, does not entitle insured to recover from insurer interest accruing on verdict against him pending appeal proceedings by insurer, where entire claim of insured will exceed amount limited in the policy. Davison v. Maryland Casualty Co., 197 Mass. 167, 83 NE 407. Provision as to insurer's defense or settlement was intended only to prescribe terms on which company was to defend, and did not add to indemnity recoverable by insured, nor give latter any discretion in conduct of the case, though his interests might be prejudiced in proceedings taken. Id. That indemnity company payed taxable costs in first action, did not render it liable for interest in excess of $5,000. Id.

18. Where policy provided that insured employer should not voluntarily assume any liability, or without consent of company incur any expense or settle any claim except at his own cost, or interfere in negotiations for settlemsnt or legal proceedings, he could not charge insurer with expense voluntary the insurer agrees that insured may settle with the employe and be entitled to the same rights as if he had paid a judgment for the amount paid in settlement, the intention of the parties in making the settlement will of course control as to the amount due under the policy.[19]

*Fire insurance.*See 10 C. L. 391—Depending on the terms of the policy and subject to statutory regulations,[20] recovery may be to the extent of the actual cash value of the property,[21] or a certain per cent thereof.[22] Policies insuring rents often require insured to rebuild or repair as soon as practicable.[23] By express stipulation, only the assets of the company named in the policy may be reached in satisfaction of policy demands.[24] Under so-called coinsurance clauses, each insurer's liability is generally determined by the proportion the amount insured by it bears to the total amount of insurance.[25]

*Valued policy laws.*See 10 C. L. 391—Statutes in many states render the insurer liable, in case of total loss for the full amount of insurance specified in the policy,[26] and prohibit the taking of risks in excess of a given fraction of the value of the property.[27] incurred by him in defending employe's suit after company had disclaimed all liability and withdrawn from the case. Sandoval Zinc Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 140 Ill. App. 247.

19. Where settlement and consent thereto were silent as to whether amount paid by employer in part covered injuries sustained by same employe before policy was issued, parol evidence held admissible to show that whole amount was in settlement of injury covered by policy. Moran Bros. Co. v. Pacific Coast Casualty Co., 48 Wash. 592, 94 P 106.

20, 21. Under policy insuring straw hats to extent of actual cash value "not to exceed what it would then cost the insured to repair or replace the same with material of like kind and quality," insured held entitled to actual cash value, where goods could be neither repaired nor replaced in time to be of any value. Phillips v. Home Ins. Co., 128 App. Div. 528, 112 NYS 769.

22. Under policy rendering company liable for 80 per cent of cash value of property, evidence held to justify finding that loss occurred after 8:55 a. m., June 8, 1905, that cash value of cotton insured was 8.55 cents per pound when loss or damage occurred. McFadden v. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co., 162 F 783.

23. Where fire insurance policy insuring rents required insured to rebuild or repair as soon as nature of case would permit, it was presumed plaintiff took possession as soon after fire as possible. Palatine Ins. Co. v. O'Brien, 107 Md. 341, 68 A 484. Instruction against recovery for loss between fire and time plaintiff took possession held unauthorized without evidence of delay in taking possession. Id.

24. Provision that capital stock and funds of company named as insurer in policy shall alone be answerable to demands thereunder and that stockholders should not be liable beyond amount of stock, not only exonerated stockholders but also precluded recovery against another company claimed to be undisclosed principal. Western Sugar Refining Co. v. Helvetia Swiss Fire Ins. Co., 163 F 644.

25. Cutting v. Atlas Mut. Ins. Co., 199 Mass. 380, 85 NE 174. Under fire policy limiting liability to proportion of loss that amount thereof bore to "whole insurance covering such property," amount of floating policy not covering property covered by specific insurance until after exhaustion of specific insurance could not be considered in determining whole insurance, where policy in suit and other specific insurance fully covered loss. Klotz Tailoring Co. v. Eastern Fire Ins. Co., 116 App. Div. 723, 102 NYS 82.

26. Under Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 3204, providing that "if there is no valuation in the policy the measure of indemnity in an insurance against fire is the full amount stated in the policy," measure of indemnity in case of total loss is full face value of policy, in absence of valuation therein, and plaintiff need not prove actual value of property at time of loss. Oklahoma Farmers' Mut. Indemnity Ass'n v. McCorkle [Okl.] 97 P 270. Instruction authorizing recovery of full amount of insurance specified in policy held proper notwithstanding claim of overvaluation of the property, under Code of Laws 1902, §§ 1816, 1817, prohibiting issuance of policies for more than value of property stated in policy, to be fixed by parties, authorizing recovery of full amount in case of total loss, and estopping companies after 60 days from denying truth of statements in application, except for fraud, parties having agreed on $5,000 as value on which $1,500 insurance was granted, total loss occurring within 60 days, and court having properly submitted question of fraud. McCarty v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 62 SE 1.

27. Rev. St. 1899, § 7979 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3793), prohibiting insurance companies from taking any risk for more than three-fourths of value of property insured, and providing that when taken its value shall not be questioned in any proceeding, applies to insurance of personalty. Gragg v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 1184. In case of total loss, insured is entitled to amount of insurance stated in policy less depreciation in value or quantity. Id. Statute is a direction to companies not to insure for more than three-fourths value, and when value is fixed it cannot be denied that sum

Life insurance.—The policy often provides for the deduction from its face value of any indebtedness of insured to the company,[28] and sometimes for adjustment of the insurance for understatements as to age.[29]

Title insurance.—When the contract is one of indemnity and not of guaranty, recovery is limited to loss actually sustained.[30]

§ 19. Notice, claim, and proof of loss.[See 10 C. L. 392]—Proof of loss as evidence are discussed in the last section,[31] and all jury questions are also there collected.[32] Subject to waiver[33] or other excuse sufficient in law,[34] notice and proofs containing the required information[35] must be given[36] within the time prescribed[37] or within fixed is three-fourths value of property. Crossan v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 704. Where personalty was insured for gross premium in gross sum of $500 divided into three separate classes of different kinds of property, contract was severable, and should be construed as though amount of insurance assigned to each class was three-fourths of value of property included in ths particular class. Id. If insured goods are totally destroyed, recovery is for full amount insured, unless goods had depreciated in value since policy issued, in which event recovery would be face value of policy less depreciation (McIntyre v. Liverpool, London & Globe Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 110 SW 604); if not totally destroyed, difference between their reasonable value before and after fire is amount of recovery (Id.).

28. Policy held to render notes given for a premium with interest proper charge against amount of policy. Southwestern Ins. Co. v. Woods Nat. Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 761, 107 SW 114.

29. Under provision for adjustment of insurance for understatement of age, equitable adjustment after death consists in paying bsneficiary such amount as premiums actually paid would have insured at true age of insured. Keenan v. Mutual Lifs Ins. Co. [N. J. Law] 71 A 37.

30. Policy insuring against unmarketability of title to estate, mortgags or interest in certain realty covered by mortgage held by plaintiff as collateral, and also guaranteeing completion of certain buildings, held contract of indemnity, and not guaranty, so that plaintiff, having purchased mortgage at full amount of loan as authorized, was without loss and could not show defect in title or noncompletion of buildings, in action on policy. Wheeler v. Equitable Trust Co. [Pa.] 70 A 750. Immaterial that plaintiff and not a stranger purchased mortgage, and that only other bidder was insolvent borrower. Id.

33. See post, Waiver.

34. Provision requiring notice of an accident on pain of forfeiture will not be construed to require strict performance when performance is made impossible by act of God, as where insured becomes mentally deranged. Reed v. Loyal Protective Ass'n [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 648, 117 NW 600. Evidence insufficient to show mental derangement. Id.

35. Accident insurance: Letter stating insured was found dead in nighttime on railroad track and that apparently death was caused by his being run over held sufficient as notice of happening of accident required by policy. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046. Requirement that insured give particulars of accident does not require that names of witnesses to accident be given. Id.

Employer's liability insurance: Statement in report to company that injured employe and another erected a staging, fall of which caused injury, whereas staging was in fact erected by carpenters, held not failure to comply with provision that insured should give immediate notice of accidents with fullest particulars, since it was not intended answers to questions furnished by company should be as certain as answer to a complaint. Moran Bros. Co. v. Pacific Coast Casualty Co., 48 Wash. 592, 94 P 106.

Fire insurance: Provision requ'ring statsment of certain particulars held not to require insured to prepare and furn sh proof of loss, but merely to give particulars required so far as known to him. Smith v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 50, 85 NE 841.

36. Accident and health: Provision requiring written notice of illness within 10 days from beginning of illness held not unreasonable. Cra g v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 423. Written notice within 10 days of injury, required by policy, is essential to cause of action, and not a mere condition subsequent or rule of procedure. Hatch v. U. S. Casualty Co., 197 Mass. 101, 83 NE 398. Stipulation in accident policy requiring notice of injury within 10 days of accident is reasonable one for protection of company against fraudulent or otherwise invalid claims Id.

Fire insurance: Failurs to furnish proof of loss is fatal in absence of waiver. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Driver [Ark.] 112 SW 200; Stoebs v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 112 NYS 553; Commercial Fire Ins Co. v. Waldron [Ark.] 114 SW 210. Evidence held not to show proof was furnished as required. Commercial Fire Ins. Co. v. Waldron [Ark.] 114 SW 210. Compliance with provisions requiring insured forthwith after loss to render company sworn statement as to value of property, his interest, other insurance, use of building, and origin of fire, is condition precedent to insurer's liability. Smith v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 50, 85 NE 841. Under Code 1906, § 2592, precluding insurance companies from asserting that property was worth less than value stated in policy, and providing that measure of recovery shall be amount of insurance, failure of insured to furnish plans and specifications of building after demand.

a reasonable time if the policy contains no controlling provision on the subject[38] or requires notice or proofs immediately;[39] but failure to furnish proofs will not work a forfeiture unless it is expressly so provided in the contract,[40] nor will delay have such effect if insurer fails to furnish blanks for proofs as agreed.[41] Unless so stipulated, no particular words are necessary in request for blanks for proofs.[42]

False swearing.[See 10 C. L. 394]—An affidavit overstating value of the property destroyed will not avoid the policy where the actual value exceeds the insurance.[43] as stipulated in policy, held no defense. Mississippi Home Ins. Co. v. Barron [Miss.] 45 S 875.

Life insurance: Failure to furnish record and verdict of coroner's jury as required by policy held fatal, no waiver or excuse being shown. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ App.] 109 SW 1120.

37. Accident and health: Provision in sick benefit policy requiring insured to give notice to company within 10 days after commencement of total disability does not require insured to decide at his peril when actual disability begins (Jennings v. Brotherhood Acc. Co. [Colo.] 96 P 982), and where both insured and his physician were at first mistaken as to the nature of the illness, notice given within 10 days after they discovered that insured had in fact been disabled since his doctor first prescribed for him was sufficient (Id.) Under policy promising weekly indemnity for injury and stipulated sum to beneficiary in case of death from the injury, and stipulating that notice of claim must be given by insured or by the beneficiary within 15 days from date of accident causing the loss for which claim was made, time within which notice must be given by the beneficiary does not begin to run until death of insured. Continental Casualty Co. v. Colvin [Kan.] 96 P 565. Within requirement for notice of injury within 10 days of "event causing injury" notice must be given within 10 days of the accident. Hatch v. U. S. Casualty Co., 197 Mass. 101, 83 NE 398. Where insured considered accident of no account, gave no notice of injury to company within 10 days as required by policy, and continued in usual health for one month, when he became ill and died, absence of notice was fatal to recovery by beneficiary who gave notice four days after death of insured. Id. Where company's liability began second week and policy required written notice "of any illness for which claim can be made" within ten days from beginning of illness, and claim could not be made under policy except for illness for which insured was regularly visited by a physician, notice given August 27 was sufficient where insured became sick August 16, but physician's visits did not commence until August 21. Craig v. U S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 423. Under requirement that written notice be given company at a designated place within 10 days, notice properly mailed within 10 days is sufficient though it does not reach company within the time. Fire insurance: Where policy requires action thereon to be commenced within twelve months after loss, and also provides that indemnity shall not be payable until 60 days after proofs of loss are furnished, failure to furnish proofs of loss at least 60 days before expiration of the twelve months bars recovery, in absence of waiver. Harp v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 726, 61 SE 704. Serving proof of loss on local agent of fire insurance company more than 20 days after fire held not sufficient compliance with requirement to furnish company with proof within 60 days. Dunn v. Farmers' Fire Ins. Co., 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 246. Under provision on back of policy requiring compliance with all foregoing requirements, one of which was making of proof of loss within 60 days after fire unless such time is extended in writing complaint showing on face that proof was not made until 6 months after fire and alleging no extension of time or waiver states no cause of action. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Western Assur. Co., 157 F 695.

38. Where under policy as construed failure to furnish proofs within 60 days, as required by its terms, did not work forfeiture. Harp v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 726, 61 SE 704.

39. Health insurance: Under policy requiring immediate notice of illness, notice not given until expiration of 26 weeks, which was longest period for which company contracted to be liable, illness lasting for entire period, held not given within reasonable time. Woodall v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Ga.] 62 SE 808.

Fire insurance: Under provision requiring statement of certain particulars to company forthwith in case of loss, statement must be sent as soon as reasonable diligence will allow. Smith v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co, 200 Mass. 60, 85 NE 841. Could take a few days if necessary to inform himself. Id Not required to lay aside all other duties however urgent, nor permitted to unnecessarily postpone sending statement. Id. Evidence held to show due diligence in sending statement, though burden was on insured. Id. For questions of law and fact, see post, § 24C.

42. Letter notifying of killing, urging settlement, and asking company to "attend to this as promptly as possible," held sufficient. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046.

Fraud as affecting the award of adjusters or arbitrators is taken up in the next section.[44]

*Waiver*See 10 C. L. 394 or estoppel[45] may consist in absolute[46] denial of all liability[47] before expiration of the time for furnishing proofs,[48] or in failure to furnish blanks for proofs,[49] or to object to defects within a reasonable time,[50] or in admissions[51] or in conduct on the part of the adjuster.[52] Denying liability on the ground of facts shown by the proofs waives objection that the proofs do not conform to the requirements of the policy,[53] but does not adopt or admit the truth of the statements in the proofs.[54] Insurer is not bound by attempted waivers on the part of agents who act without authority.[55] The question of waiver is one of fact.[56]

46. Refusal of company to pay, without making known to insured that it is predicated on failure to furnish proofs of loss or some specific ground other than denial of all liability, will be held absolute. Harp v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 726, 61 SE 704.

47. Denial of all liability waives proof of loss. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760; Wortham v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 827, 107 SW 276; Continental Ins. Co. v. Buchanan, 32 Ky. L. R. 1298, 108 SW 355; Hollenbeck & Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 217; Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788. Denial of all liability under policy and failure to call attention to any defect in proofs or to ask for further proofs held to waive objection that proofs did not disclose insured was insane when he committed suicide. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 32 Ky. L. R. 770, 106 SW 1175. Provision requiring insured to submit to examination after loss held waived by denial of all liability under policy and unreasonable delay in demanding examination. Jensen v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 286.

48. Rule is inapplicable where denial is after expiration of time within which proof should have been furnished. Commercial Fire Ins. Co. v. Waldron [Ark.] 114 SW 210. Where under policy insured has reasonable time within which to furnish proofs of loss, absolute refusal by insurer to pay, made before expiration of reasonable time, waives proofs (Harp v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 726, 61 SE 704), but such refusal made after the expiration of a reasonable time will not be considered a waiver (Id.).

49. Insurer's failure on request to furnish blanks for final proof of death held waiver of requirement that proofs be made on blanks to be furnished by insurer. Phoenix Acc. & Sick Ben. Ass'n v. Stiver [Ind. App.] 84 NE 772.

50. Defective verification held waived by failure to object within reasonable time. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cox [Okl.] 98 P 552. Company's silence on receipt of letter merely giving notice of loss and demanding payment held not waiver of proof of loss. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Driver [Ark.] 112 SW 200. Letter acknowledging receipt of proofs prepared by beneficiary in her own way on failure of company to furnish blanks held not objection to form of proofs nor request for further proof where it merely criticised merits of claim and offered to furnish blanks. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046.

51. Insurer admitting that it waived further proof of injury thereby waived additional proofs regardless of defects, in proofs given. McClure v. Great Western Acc. Ass'n [Iowa] 118 NW 269.

57. No action maintainable on fire policy until after appraisal of loss as required by policy in case of disagreement as to amount of loss. Baumgarth v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 152 Mich. 479, 15 Det. Leg. N. 266, 116 NW 449. Evidence held to show that appraisal provided for was not made. Id. Though Rev. St. 1899, § 7979 (Ann. St 1906, p. 3793) declares that no company shall take risks for more than three-fourths of value of property and that when taken value shall not be questioned in any proceeding, insured could not recover without complying with condition that, in event of disagreement as to amount of loss, it should be settled by appraisers, where on claim of total loss defendant's adjusters did not deny value of property at time of insurance but merely asserted that goods destroyed did not equal in value amount of insurance, and that there had been diminution of from 20 to 30 per cent. Gragg v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 1184.

58. Efforts at arbitration as per fire policy held not necessary where company denied all liability thereunder. Retail Merchants' Ass'n Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Cox, 138 Ill. App. 14. Insurers who neither appointed appraisers nor requested that action be taken under arbitration clause could not defeat action on policy because it contained such clause. McLean v. acter of the loss is important in determining the necessity of hearing the parties at the appraisers' meeting.[59] The appraisers are not the agents of the persons selecting them,[60] and the latter are not precluded from complaining of the former's decision because of the selection.[61] Fraud is ground for complaint,[62] but unless set aside for such or other equitable ground the appraiser's award is conclusive.[63] Jury questions are postponed for subsequent treatment.[64]

Plate glass insurance.—Where insurer elects to replace broken glass it impliedly agrees to do so within a reasonable time.[65]

§ 22. *Payment of loss or benefits and adjustment of interests in proceeds.*See 10 C. L. 396—Matters relating to compromises[66] and releases[67] are elsewhere fully treated. The question of payment is usually one of fact.[68] Where proofs are waived, benefits otherwise due a specified time after filing will be due at the expiration of such period after the waiver.[69] Policies sometimes authorize insured to make payment to any person equitably entitled to the fund by reason of having incurred expense on account of insured.[70] A provision making the company's production of a receipt given by the representative of insured or legal beneficiary conclusive evidence of satisfaction of the policy does not authorize payment to the legal representative as against a beneficiary whose rights are fixed by the policy.[71] The proceeds of life policies are exempt from the claims of creditors in many states[72] and the proceeds of fire policies on exempt property are usually exempt.[73]

59. Where, before destruction or after partial destruction leaving sufficient to show size, architecture, and quality of material, experts are sent to estimate value of insured building, hearing and opportunity to introduce evidence of value need not be granted (Carlston v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 37 Mont. 118, 94 P 756), but, where strangers are selected to estimate loss after total destruction of property, notice of time, place of appraisers' meeting and opportunity of parties to be heard is essential to validity of award (Id.).

62. Fraud in appraisal in behalf of several companies vitiates as to innocent as well as guilty companies. Meyer v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 124 App. Div. 241, 108 NYS 711. Petition against two companies jointly to set aside award of appraisers for fraud held not to join improper defendants where insured had appointed one appraiser, the two companies one, and the two apraisers had appointed an umpire, though there were two policies, one issued by each defendant. Id. In action by several companies to cancel policies and set aside appraisement and award, on ground that the loss as returned was excessive by reason of fraudulent representations as to amount of goods destroyed, fact that the interests of companies were several and their policies were issued for separate considerations and were of different classes does not render action several or present a misjoinder of parties plaintiff, where primary relief sought is cancellation of award. Michael v. Security Ins. Co., 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 401. In suit in equity to set aside award for fraud, judgment may be obtained for the actual loss. Mayer v. Phoenix Assur. Rayford v. Faulk [Ala.] 45 S 714. Section 32, p. 1393, exempting insurance money from claims of creditors of insured or beneficiary held cognate to and embraced in title of act. Id. Fund held not garnishable by creditors of beneficiary. Id. Policy payable to insured's estate is exempt from creditors as against claims of wife and children, under Code 1896, § 2607, though wife and children are also mentioned in statute as persons who may be beneficiaries. Mitchell v. Allis [Ala.] 47 S 715. Proceeds of life policy vests in beneficiary and may not be subjected to insured's debts without former's consent regardless of solvency or insolvency of insured when he paid premiums. Johnson v. Bacon [Miss.] 45 S 858. Under statute exempting to amount of $10,000 proceeds of insurance policies payable to a designated beneficiary from liability for insured's debts, proceeds in excess of that sum are liable for premiums paid by insured while insolvent to keep up entire policy, not merely such excess. Id. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 655, giving proceeds of life policies to lawful beneficiaries designated therein as against creditors of representatives of insured, policy on life of bankrupt, payable to wife, does not pass to trustee. In re Pfaffinger, 164 F 526. Question not affected because insured was authorized by policy to change beneficiary and, after bankruptcy, applied for surrender value which company did not pay. Id.

NOTE. Garnishment proceeds: Defendant company being indebted upon a policy of insurance to plaintiff, and plaintiff being a judgment debtor of one S., the latter sued out a writ of garnishment against defendant company. The company answered admitting its indebtedness, whereupon plaintiff intervened, claiming the money. The property insured was used by plaintiff in his business as a restaurateur and was exempt from execution. Held, that the proceeds of an insurance policy on articles exempt from execution are not subject to garnishment in the hands of the insurance company. Geise v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 555.

The narrow issue here presented has caused the courts considerable difficulty, giving rise to two distinct lines of authority reaching diametrically opposite conclusions. I. The Courts of New Hampshire, Illinois, and Mississippi hold that an insurance company is liable as garnishee of the insured after a loss though the property insured was exempt from attachment and execution. Wooster v. Page, 54 N. H. 125, 20 Am. Rep. 128; Monniea v. German Ins. Co., 12 Ill. App. [12 Bradw.] 240; Smith v. Ratcliff, 66 Miss. 683, 6 S 460, 14 Am. St. Rep. 606 (relying upon Wooster v. Page, supra, and disapproving of Houghton v. Lee, infra, and Cooney v. Cooney, infra). The theory upon which these courts proceed is well set forth in the leading case of Wooster v. Page, supra: "It is the furniture (i. e. the property insured) and not the avails of it in another form which is protected. * * * What is in the hands of the insurance company belonging to the defendant (the insured) is money, having no ear-mark by which it may be distinguished from any other money, and not derived by any process of transmutation from the defendant's goods; and hence the exemption which before existed cannot follow and appertain to the indebtedness of the insurance company." It should be noted, however, that in New Hampshire statutory exemptions apply only to specific chattels, pension, bounty and wages. N. H. Gen. St., c. 205, § 2. II. On the other hand a larger number of courts hold that the proceeds of insurance on exempt property is not subject to garnishment. Houghton v. Lee, 50 Cal. 101; Langley v. Finnall, 2 Cal. App. 231, 83 P 291; Cameron v. Fay, 55 Tex. 58; Ward v. Goggan, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 274, 23 SW 479; Cooney v. Cooney, 65 Barb. [N. Y.] 524; Bliss v. Raynor, 91 Hun [N. Y.] 250, 36 NYS 156. Reynolds v. Haines, 83 Iowa, 342, 49 NW 851, 32 Am. St. Rep. 311, 13 L. R. A. 719; Puget Sound, etc., Co. v. Jeffs, 11 Wash. 466, 39 P 962, 48 Am. St. Rep. 885, 27 L. R. A. 803 (relying upon Reynolds v. Haines, supra); Winsor v. McLachlan, 12 Wash. 154, 40 P 727. In Reynolds v. Haines, supra, a physician was held to be entitled to the insurance money on his library which was by statute exempt from execution. The court says that as the physician might sell his books and replace them by better ones without violating the letter of the statute so he should likewise be permitted to retain the insurance money for the same purpose. Puget Sound, etc., Co. v. Jeffs, supra, permits the exemption only in case the insured intends to invest the proceeds of the insurance in property similar to that destroyed. It would seem that, by the weight of authority and the better reason, the insurance money which stands in lieu of exempt property should not be subject to garnishment. While a debtor cannot voluntarily sell exempt property and hold the proceeds free from all attack, the situation is entirely different where the property is converted into a mere right of action by a proceeding wholly in invitum. Drake, Attach. [7th ed.], § 244a. Such is the case where the property is burned. The more recent decisions and the leading text-writers refuse to accept the technical reasoning of Wooster v. Page, supra, and almost uniformly support the position of the principal case. Freeman, Executions [3rd ed.] § 285 Drake Attach. [7th ed.] § 244ff; Rood, Garnishment, § 93; 12 Am. & Eng. In suit by insured against wrongdoer, after collection of insurance money not sufficient to cover entire loss, for recovery of whole amount thereof, held permissible, under Code pleading, for insurer to file cross complaint setting out defendant's wrong and plaintiff's damage substantially as alleged in plaintiff's complaint, and asserting equitable assignment to it of a stated portion of whatever plaintiff might recover, such procedure not being objectionable as a splitting of the cause of action Lake Erie & W. Claiborne [Ark.] 112 SW 387. That bond when presented in evidence should show it had expired held not to affect complaint. Id. Plea "defendant did not enter into the alleged contract sued on" held not plea of non est factum within Code 1896, § 3353, form 33. Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Verneuille [Ala.] 47 S 72. Where liability for rents was independent under policy, company could plead to that part only of declaration averring loss of rents. Reed v. Firemen's Ins. Co. [N. J. Law] 69 A 724. Pleas denying total destruction and setting up razing of buildings by city authorities after fire held bad as being only in mitigation of damages. Id. Under general rules of pleading, answer in action on fire policy excepting loss caused directly or indirectly by earthquake is sufficiently definite and certain where it alleges that fire and loss were caused directly by earthquake and that but for such earthquake the fire and loss would not have occurred, and where it alleges in similar manner that fire and loss were caused indirectly by earthquake. Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 994. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 437a, Act Cal. March 21, 1907, St. 1907, p. 836, c. 447, providing what facts must be set up by defendant when it claims that loss was remotely caused by excepted peril, and but for such peril would not have occurred, though not invalid as deprivation of equal protection on ground that it compels disclosure of defendant's evidence in advance of trial (Id.), nor inapplicable in federal courts as compelling disclosure of evidence in violation of Rev. St. § 861 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 661), prescribing mode of proof in trial of actions at common law (Id.), is unconstitutional as depriving defendant of equal protection in that it discriminates against a particular class of actions and defendants therein (Id.), and in that it is a special law regulating practice of courts in contravention of Const. Cal. art. 4, § 25, subd. 3 (Id.). Replication setting up waiver of strict compliance with requirements as to proofs of loss, denying failure to give notice of loss, and attributing failure to bring suit within one year after fire to defendant's promise to pay if suit was not brought, held not a departure, or objectionable as both traversing and confessing plea of limitations, or traversing and confessing the same allegations. Webster v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 319.

93. Allegation of refusal to pay instead of nonpayment held amendable. Baumgarten v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 275. Where in action on policy plaintiff referred to it as issued on date of an earlier and lapsed policy, but in bill of particulars requested by defendant gave date and amount of second as well as first policy, it in effect became part of declaration and amendment was not necessary to render admissible second policy. Hurd v. Northern Acc. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 493, 116 NW 977.

94. In action against transferee of insurer's business, plaintiff need not file as exhibit copy of contract of transfer where notice of other excuse for breach of condition[96] must be pleaded. Where defendant pleads violation of a restrictive clause, plaintiff may plead waiver or estoppel without first having the contract reformed so as to embody the waiver.[97] If plaintiff has been released from performance of any condition, he should aver such facts in his petition,[98] but mere defensive matters can be met by reply.[99] In an action on a fire policy the complaint must allege the contract,[1] plaintiff's interest therein,[2] the loss and notice thereof,[3] the value [4] and location [5] of the property lost or damaged, and that the sum claimed is due and payable.[6]

As a general rule insurer must specially plead defenses based on breach of warranties, conditions or representations,[7] failure to furnish proofs,[8] facts limiting the transfer is attached to policy as a rider by direction of transferee and does not contain terms of contract of transfer. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Ross [Ind.] 86 NE 506.

95. Waiver of deficiency in proofs of death. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120.

96. Reply held to sufficiently, though inaptly, aver insanity of insured at time he burned the property. Bindell v. Kenton County Assessment Fire Ins. Co., 33 Ky. L. R. 385, 108 SW 325.

97. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27.

98, 99. Burglary and larceny insurance. Kandar v. Aetna Indemnity Co., 10 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 449.

1. Petition alleging that defendant by written policy for stated consideration by contract insured plaintiff against loss by fire held to contain a sufficient statement of contract for indemnity against such loss and of defendant's promise to pay. Rogers v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 592.

2. Declaration that policy was payable to estate of P but plaintiffs were parties really interested and were the beneficial owners of policy and that legal and equitable title was in them alone at time it was issued and at time of loss held not demurrable. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. v. Prude [Ala.] 46 S 974. Allegation that insured "assigned, transferred and delivered" policy to plaintiff held sufficient to admit proof of a gift. McNevins v. Prudential Ins. Co., 57 Misc. 608, 108 NYS 745. Averment that company had in writing consented to assignment of policy held not demurrable. Home Ins. Co. of New York v. Myers, 32 Ky. L. R. 999, 107 SW 719.

3. Must allege notice of loss. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576.

4. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576.

5. Petition bad for not stating that property was in building described therein. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576. Allegation that property was in county in which action was brought held jurisdictional. Id.

6. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576. Allegation that insurance was due though a mere conclusion held sufficient to support judgment. Rogers v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 592. Allegation that defendant company had refused to pay amount due on policy was not equivalent to allegation of nonpayment and rendered complaint defective. Baumgarten v. Alliance Assur. Co., 159 F 275.

7. As a rule defenses based on conditions broken must be specially pleaded. American Ins. Co. v. Egyptian Lodge No. 802, I. O. O. F., 128 Ill. App. 161. Conditions, breach of which is relied on, must be set out at least in substance. "Said policy provides that it shall be void in case of any fraud by insured," etc., held insufficient on which to predicate breach by attempt to collect insurance money by false representation as to condition of house. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. v. Prude [Ala.] 46 S 974. Answer alleging that possession and occupancy of buildings described and of insured premises were changed, and premises ceased to be occupied as provided in policy, held sufficient to raise question as to vacancy. Cone v. Century Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 307. Plea that policy was made payable to a certain estate held not to show that insured's interest was not truthfully stated. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. v. Prude [Ala.] 46 S 974. Breach of conditions as to sole ownership and change in title, interest or possession held admissible under general issue. Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Monumental Sav. Ass'n, 107 Va. 701, 60 SE 93. Where company did not give notice of defenses under plea of general issue as required by court rule, it could not set up change of occupation. Hare v. Workingmen's Mut. Protective Ass'n, 151 Mich. 225, 14 Det. Leg. N. 897, 114 NW 1009. Breach of warranty must be expressly pleaded. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Answer setting up breach of warranties P and Q against bodily or mental infirmaties, in that insured at time of acceptance of policy and for long time prior thereto had been suffering from chronic asthma and bronchitis, held not to sufficiently plead breach of warranty that insured had not had and did not have bronchitis. Id. Answer as a whole held to set up warranty as to value of property insured and not merely misrepresentation. National Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Duncan [Colo.] 98 P 634.

8. Where fire insurer did not give notice of defenses under plea of general issue as required by court rule, it could not set up failure to furnish proofs of loss. Hare v. Workingmen's Mut. Protective Ass'n, 151 Mich. 225, 14 Det. Leg. N. 897, 114 NW 1009. Failure to furnish proofs of death held not available under general issue. Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Verneuille [Ala.] 47 S 72.

liability,[9] payment under special provision in the policy,[10] limitations,[11] and the statutes of other states.[12] Deductions for unpaid premiums must also be claimed in the pleadings.[13]

Variance. See 10 C. L. 403

Practice. See 10 C. L. 404—It is proper to proceed in equity when the remedy at law is inadequate.[14] When there are rival claimants to the proceeds of a policy, interpleader will lie.[15]

(§ 24) C. Evidence; questions of law and fact. Presumptions and burden of proof. See 10 C. L. 404—Plaintiff must prove the contract and that it was in force at the time of the loss.[16] When the proofs of loss show facts rendering insurer not liable, the burden is on plaintiff to prove error.[17] If an excepted peril contributes to a loss, insured must show the extent of the damage done by the peril insured against.[18] Delivery of a policy prima facie acknowledges receipt of the first premium [19] and casts upon the insurer the burden of showing nonpayment.[20] If the policy is delivered without demand for the first premium, the presumption is that credit was extended.[21] The burden is on insurer to show affirmatively the existence of grounds of forfeiture,[22] such as breach of warranty or condition,[23] or

9. Where company's liability is limited by a separate clause following a general one, burden is on insurer to plead and prove facts rendering subsequent clause operative. General Acc. Ins. Co. v. Hayes [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 990. Insurer held not entitled to benefit of evidence showing illness limiting its liability, not having pleaded such illness. Id.

10. Plea of authority under policy to pay proceeds to any relative or connection by marriage, etc., and payment to insured's husband, held not demurrable for failure to aver that plaintiff, original beneficiary, had consented to be replaced by any other beneficiary. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. McCray [Ala.] 47 S 65.

11. Limitations not available, insurer not having given notice of defenses as per court rule. Hare v. Workingmen's Mut. Protective Ass'n, 151 Mich. 225, 114 Det. Leg. N. 897, 114 NW 1009. That causes of action alleged were discovered by plaintiff more than three years before suit and policy was canceled as directed by mutual consent held sufficient plea of limitations. Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 107 Md. 374, 68 A 689.

12. Failure to plead statute of another state as to validity of provisions limiting time for making proof of claim and commencing suit held to preclude reliance thereon. Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349.

13. Kephart v. Continental Casualty Co. [N. D.] 116 NW 349.

14. Held proper to proceed in equity to enforce fire policies where insurance association was unincorporated and composed of large and shifting membership, and accounting was necessary and trust fund involved. Williamson v. Warfield, Pratt, Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168; Warfield, Pratt, Howell Co. v. Williamson, 233 Ill. 487, 84 NE 706; Merchants' Underwriters v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co., 140 Ill. App. 504. Prayer held sufficient to justify specific performance. Williamson v. Warfield, Pratt, Howell Co., 136 Ill. App. 168.

15. Bill by insurer praying that rival claimants to two policies on life of one person should interplead and that amount of insurance be adjusted to true age of insured as provided by policies held maintainable under the facts, in nature of bill of interpleader. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Hamilton [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 677. Claim of second wife held sufficient to entitle insurer to file bill against her and third person claiming as designated beneficiary. Id. Bill not multifarious. Id. Prayer that rival claimants should be enjoined from prosecuting pending suits on policies would not be granted unless insurer paid into court full amount of insurance, subject to deduction on distribution if insurer should establish on final hearing that deduction should be made on account of misstatements as to age. Id.

16. Interposition of verified plea of general issue casts on plaintiff burden of proving execution, delivery and acceptance of policy and that same was in force at time of loss. Fire Insurance. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Helbig, 138 Ill. App. 115.

17. Not sufficient for plaintiff to show he swore to proofs relying on hearsay statements. Hill v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 124.

18. Where fire policy did not cover loss by explosion except that due to ensuing fire, and insurer proved explosion preceded fire, burden was on insured to prove extent of damage by the subsequent fire. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 126, 94 P 27.

19, 20. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428.

21. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428.

22. Where insured was certificate holder in good standing up to time he failed to pay an assessment, it was for insurer to prove that assessment was necessary and not excessive and was levied in manner and for purposes prescribed in contract. King v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 63.

23. Burden on insurer to show violation of conditions of accident policy at time of injury. Kirkpatrick v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1111. Promissory warranty fraud, misrepresentation or materiality to risk,[24] and also to show excepted risks,[25] such as self-inflicted injury or suicide.[26] Presumptions in favor of plaintiff are not destroyed by defendant's verification of a plea of general issue.[27]

Evidence.[See 10 C. L. 404]—The usual rules of evidence apply,[28] including those as to admission of expert and opinion evidence,[29] privileged communications,[30] transactions or communications with deceased persons,[31] parol evidence,[32] secondary, hearsay and res gestae evidence,[33] self-serving statements,[34] and the declarations and requiring insured to maintain sprinkler held condition subsequent as to which insurer had burden of proof, and not within Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4934, as to pleading and proof of conditions precedent. Port Blakely Mill Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. [Wash.] 97 P 781. General pleading that plaintiff had complied with all terms and conditions authorized by statute relative to pleading conditions precedent held to refer only to conditions precedent and not to conditions subsequent as to which insurer has burden of proof. Id.

24. Misrepresentation and fraud will not be assumed on doubtful evidence or circumstances of mere suspicion. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Under statute precluding forfeiture unless untrue statements were material or made in bad faith, burden is on company to prove falsity of statements and that they were material or made not in good faith. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Under Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 21, providing that no misrepresentation or warranty made in negotiating insurance shall be deemed material or defeat policy unless such "misrepresentation or warranty" is made with actual intent to deceive, or unless the matter misrepresented or made warranty increased the risk, common-law rule is changed as to warranties not within body of policy, and, as in case of representations, burden of showing that broken warranty not in body of policy was fraudulent or increased risk is on insurer. Barker v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 198 Mass. 375, 84 NE 490. Statute inapplicable to warranties in body of policy. Id.

25. After proof of execution of policy, loss, amount thereof, and notice to company, burden is on latter to show that loss or part of it was within exceptions in policy. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Burden on insurer to show voluntary or unnecessary exposure to apparent danger within accident policy. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046; McClure v. Great Western Acc. Ass'n [Iowa] 118 NW 269. Under accident policy exempting from liability for injury through walking or being on roadbed of a railway, insurer makes out defense on showing insured was on such roadbed and injury or death occurred from cause inhering in hazards peculiar to such place, plaintiff being then required to show that insured's presence there was excusable. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046. Insurer has burden of proving that insured was on railroad roadbed not at highway crossing, within stipulation reducing indemnity for injuries received while he was on roadbed of any railroad except crossing at a highway. McClure v. Great Western Acc. Ass'n [Iowa] 118 NW 269. Contention that though burden was on defendant to show insured was on a railroad roadbed burden was on insured to show that accident happened while he was at highway crossing, held untenable. Id.

26. Insurer has burden of showing injuries were self-inflicted within exemption. Kirkpatrick v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 1111. Burden on insurer to establish suicide. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Suicide must be established by clear and satisfactory proof, and preponderance of evidence should be such as to overcome presumption of innocence of moral turpitude. Id.

27. Did not remove presumption as to acceptance of policy but merely permitted defendant to introduce evidence to overcome same. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Helbig, 138 Ill. App. 115; Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 234 Ill. 251, 84 NE 897.

28. See, also, Evidence, 11 C. L. 1346.

29. Testimony of agent that when policy was delivered it was binding on company held objectionable as opinion on point in issue. Life Ins. Co. of Virginia v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Where sole question was whether wounds were self-inflicted, opinion of surgeon was inadmissible. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120. Surgeon could give opinion as to kind of instrument used in inflicting wounds and that they were or could have been made with knife found open near body. Id.

30. Applicant for life insurance may in contract waive statutory privilege rendering physician incompetent to testify as to communications with patient and knowledge obtained of him in professional way. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Brubaker [Kan.] 96 P 62.

31. Substituted beneficiary in life policy is not an assignee of insurance within Code § 4604, prohibiting a party from testifying to personal transactions or communications with deceased against his assignee. Crowell v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 118 NW 412.

32. Parol evidence inadmissible to show contemporaneous waiver of forfeiture provision for nonpayment of premium. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 107 SW 688. Evidence of custon and practice of car repairers of riding on cars in going from one part of railroad yards to another held proper to show insured's duties and manners of performance and held not objectionable as altering terms of contract. Dillon v. Continental Casualty Co., 130 Mo. App. 502, 109 SW 89.

33. Letter forming part of transaction in which policy was issued held admissible as part of res gestae to show that defendant had issued a policy different from that sued on. Keel v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Okl.] 94 P 177. Insurer having waived "iron safe clause" held proper to establish amount of loss by evidence other than books of ac-admissions of agents, parties and others.[35] Among illustrative issues are such as relate to the making, delivery and acceptance of the contract of insurance,[36] its provisions,[37] including the term of insurance[38] and the intended beneficiary,[39] the payment of premiums,[40] the occasion for assessments,[41] misrepresentation or breach of warranty,[42] waiver or estoppel,[43] and the cause of injury or death.[44] Unless count and inventory. Retail Merchants' Ass'n Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Cox, 138 Ill. App. 14.

34. Letter by insurer to agent and entries on its office record referring to policy both long after policy was taken out held ex parte self-serving statements not part of res gestae and not admissible. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 234 Ill. 251, 84 NE 897.

35. Declarations by insured before applying for insurance and not part of res gestae are not admissible against beneficiary to show breach of warranty. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Link, 131 Ill. App. 89. Beneficiary in life policy issued by fraternal society or otherwise has such interest therein that misrepresentations by assured cannot be proven by evidence of his declarations unless they are part of res gestae, and otherwise such evidence is inadmissible in absence of independent proof of falsity of statements made and then only to prove his knowledge of their falsity. Johnson v. Fraternal Reserve Ass'n [Wis.] 117 NW 1019. Declarations by beneficiary as to statements made by assured before he died concerning manner in which he had been injured held inadmissible as admissions of decedent because not denied by him. Hill v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 124. Where insurer relied on statement made by wife of insured in proofs of loss as estoppel, she could testify to facts surrounding her when statement was made. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 32 Ky. L. R. 770, 106 SW 1175. Company's letter to obtain compromise held inadmissible. Southwestern Ins. Co. v. Woods Nat. Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 761, 107 SW 114.

36. On issue of meeting of minds on insurance contract, insured's testimony on cross-examination that after applying for policy but before delivery he had taken same insurance in another company held not excludable as not within issues raised by general denial of company. Nordness v. Mutual Cash Guaranty Fire Ins. Co. [S. D.] 114 NW 1092. Evidence of condition and habits of insured after policy became effective held immaterial under policy providing it should not become effective unless issued and first premium paid during good health of insured. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. On issue of acceptance of policy by insured, evidence of his request for a new policy on different terms held immaterial, policy having been burned. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. On issue of acceptance of policy prior to loss, memorandum by mortgagee's agents' clerk made on his receipt of policy after insured had refused to receive it held inadmissible, clerk having no authority to accept policy as binding mortgagee. New v. Germania Fire Ins. Co. [Ind.] 85 NE 703.

37. Pleadings held to supply proof of terms of policy where petition alleged destruction of policy before delivery, answer admitted its issuance and set up provision against concurrent insurance, and reply invoked waiver of such stipulation. Hearsh v. German Fire Ins. Co., 130 Mo. App. 457, 110 SW 23.

38. In suit for reformation of fire policy so as to extend term as per real contract, evidence that after alleged expiration of policy company levied assessments on plaintiff as a member was competent to show that company understood that policy was in force. Flickinger v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ass'n, 136 Iowa, 258, 113 NW 824.

39. In contract between lawful and deserted wife, and reputed wife and designated beneficiary, parol evidence held admissible to show circumstances of parties at time policy was issued. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Morris [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 924.

40. Letter by acting cashier of a branch office having under policy no power to waive conditions held admissible on issue of whether a certain premium had been paid so as to extend period to time of insured's death, where same was written in reply to insured's letter to vice-president inquiring as to term of extended insurance. Eames v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 85. Evidence that acting cashier when he wrote insured had before him a book showing whether premium had been paid held admissible, insurer having attempted to prove by its card system that premium had not been paid. Id. Where company claimed first premium had not been paid nor credit extended, letter written by general agent to insured after expiration of time for paying premium in which agent demanded return of policy or payment of the premium without mentioning default held admissible. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. On issue whether insurer through general agent extended time for payment of premium, held competent for agent to testify insured had not solicited credit. Id.

41. Where in action on life policy plaintiff contended that assessment for nonpayment of which insurer claimed forfeiture was illegal because unnecessary owing to existence of a trust fund, report filed by defendant under Rev. St. 1899, § 7880, was admissible to show defendant's financial condition. King v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 114 SW 63.

42. On issue of misrepresentation as to prior health, evidence that insured had suffered from acute mania and mental derangement held admissible. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miazza [Miss.] 46 S 817. Evidence as to bronchitis held admissible under answer pleading breach of warranties against bodily infirmities and unsoundness of physical condition, though breach of another warranty against bronchitis was not pleaded. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Evidence as to condition and facial expression of insured on day contract was made held admissible under allegation of otherwise provided in the policy,[45] proofs of loss or death are usually held admissible only for the purpose of showing compliance with provisions respecting them,[46] especially where not put in evidence by defendant,[47] though in some jurisdictions they are prima facie evidence against plaintiff as to facts showing nonliability.[48] In an action on a health policy, preliminary reports furnished insurer by a physician are not admissible to show the nature of the disease which confined insured.[49] The verdict of a coroner's jury is inadmissible to prove the cause of death [50] unless made so by agreement,[51] in which case insured cannot be deprived of the benefit thereof by willful omission of the same from the proofs of death.[52] A prima facie case is established by proof of the contract of insurance, the contemplated loss, and proper and timely proofs thereof.[53]

answer that despite statement in application that his vision was not impaired insured had lost an eye and that this was peculiarly within his knowledge. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760. On cross-examination of medical examiner, plaintiff could show what weight examiner would have given to diagnosis of insured's physician had he known insured was treated when application was made, on question whether examiner was misled by application. Roe v. National Life Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500. Where incorrect answers did not influence medical examiner's report, insurer could not show what weight would ordinarily be given to correct answers to inquiries similar to those involved. Id.

43. Agent's letters recognizing policy in force held competent on issue of waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment of premium. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Burnett, 136 Ill. App. 187. On issue whether insured's impaired vision was obvious to agent when he took application question, "Tell jury the condition and facial expression of" the insured, held not objectionable as calling for opinion of witness. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760. Testimony for plaintiff that policy had been offered to soliciting agent held admissible, notwithstanding lack of proof that it was on account of insured's health. Rearden v. State Mut. Life Ins. Co., 79 S. C. 526, 60 SE 1106. Competent to show agent who took application had solicited business in community where insured lived. Id. Parol evidence admissible to show reparation of application by insurer's agent and latter's representation that same conformed with insurer's rules and regulations so as to estop insurer from setting up falsity of statements therein. Roe v. National Life Ass'n, 137 Iowa, 696, 115 NW 500.

44. Plaintiff held entitled to make full proof that fall of deceased from a window was accidental, though defendant admitted that deceased did fall from window, since such admission was not conclusive that fall was accidental and did not preclude defendant from showing fall was not accidental. Fenton v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n [Iowa] 117 NW 251. In suit on accident policy, issue being whether death resulted from accident, bodily condition of assured between injury and death is relevant, and so are all things done or said by insured expressing or showing his bodily condition with reference to injury. Ward v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 70.

45. Under policy providing that proofs of death required thereby should be evidence of facts therein stated for but not against insurer, statement in such proofs by attending physician that insured died of kidney disease of long standing, though evidence for insurer, was not conclusive on insured. Barker v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 198 Mass. 375, 84 NE 490.

46. Held error, though harmless in this particular case, to allow introduction of proofs of loss against defendant's objection except for purpose of showing compliance with policy with respect thereto. Continental Casualty Co. v. Colvin [Kan.] 95 P 565. Instruction that jury must not take physician's statements in proofs of death as proof of facts injurious to plaintiff's case held at least not prejudicial. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Link, 131 Ill. App. 89.

47. Proofs of death put in evidence by plaintiff cannot be availed of by defendant to show declarations or admissions against plaintiff; only to show requirements of policy were complied with. Defendant must introduce if it seeks to show admissions. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Rain [Md.] 70 A 87.

48. Facts showing insured was injured while leaving moving train. Hill v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 63 SE 124. Where proofs of loss under accident policy were filed by plaintiff's authority, facts stated therein must be taken as true against him unless he showed mistake in fact. Id. Error to strike proofs merely because a witness testified that he had sent them by plaintiff's authority but that plaintiff had not seen them. Id.

49. General Acc. Ins. Co. v. Hayes [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 990.

50. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120.

51. Where the policy expressly provides that proofs of death shall contain record and verdict of coroner's inquest, if any be held, and that the proofs shall be evidence of facts therein stated in behalf of company, verdict of coroner's jury is competent both to show that inquest was held and as evidence of cause of death. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120.

52. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wagner [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1120.

53. Retail Merchants' Ass'n Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Cox, 138 Ill. App. 14. Where there was no sufficient plea denying execution of policy and complaint was in code form, prima facie case was made by introducing policy and proving death and notice. Man-

Questions of law and fact. See 16 C. L. 406—It is ordinarily for the jury to determine questions pertaining to the existence of agreements,[54] the acceptance of the policy,[55] the property covered thereby,[56] the meaning of ambiguous marks or figures,[57] the payment of premiums,[58] requests for extended insurance,[59] abandonment,[60] illegal trades,[61] fraud or bad faith,[62] the truth or falsity of warranties or representations,[63] breach of conditions,[64] materiality to risk,[65] agency,[66] knowledge,[67] waiver hattan Life Ins. Co. v. Verneuille [Ala.] 47 S 72.

54. Whether there was contract of insurance, company contending policy did not become binding because of failure to comply with conditions precedent and terms of policy depending on parol testimony. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. Where it was clear employer had not contracted to insure employe against accident, as alleged affirmative charge should have been given for employer. United Statee Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Bragg [Ala.] 47 S 66.

55. Whether burglary policy was accepted and credit given for premium. Manson v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 128 App. Div. 577, 112 NYS 886.

56. Whether policy on stock of merchandise covered fireworks kept during Christmas holidays, whether fireworks were more hazardous than articles specified in policy, and effect of custom as to keeping fireworks in Christmas season, held for jury. Powell v. Com. Ins. Co., 3 Ga. App. 436, 60 SE 120.

57. What uncertain figures in application as to age of insured were. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760. Whether check marks in blank following statements should be treated as denial of any exceptions or as waiver of statements and answers thereto. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869.

58. Whether premium, payment of which was acknowledged by policy, was in fact paid. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428.

59. Whether insured requested extended insurance or was misled by agent into believing that on failure to pay premium request was unnecessary. Wortham v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 827, 107 SW 276.

60. Whether insured voluntarily allowed policy to lapse, or result was accomplished by wrongful act of insurer. Balliet v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 110 NYS 77.

61. Whether insured was engaged in unlawful liquor trade so as to avoid policy on drug stock. Kellogg v. German Am. Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 663.

62. Fraud in making proof of loss by fire. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576. Whether insured was gullty of fraud in not disclosing kind of fits he was subject to. Thompson v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 113 NYS 225. Bad faith in falling to give information as to health. Keiper v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206. Good faith in answering questions in application for life insurance. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Lear, 31 App. D. C. 184.

63. Falsity of warranties in accident policy. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Despain, [Kan.] 95 P 580. On conflicting evidence. French v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Wis.] 115 NW 869. Whether applicant for accident insurance was in sound condition physically, Id. Breach of warranty as to age. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Jay [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1116. Question of misrepresentation as to prior health. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mlazza [Miss.] 46 S 817. Whether insured had had any serious illness prior to that which caused death. Keiper v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206. Where, under evidence, jury might have found that applicant did not have a disease warranted against, and that either he made no misstatements in application or, if he did, they were not made with intent to deceive, and were not material to risk as required by Rev. Laws, c. 118, § 21, in order to avoid policy, court properly declined to order verdict for defendant. Barker v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 198 Mass. 375, 84 NE 490. On issue of misrepresentations, held, under evidence, proper to refuse to direct verdict for insurer, though weight of evidence supported defendant's contention. Supreme Lodge K. P. v. Bradley, 32 Ky. L. R. 743, 107 SW 209. When statements in application for life insurance are shown to be false by clear, convincing and uncontradicted evidence, court may so rule as matter of law, otherwise question is for jury. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Rain [Md.] 70 A 87. Though ordinarily the falsity of statements and their materiality and good faith are for the jury (Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullen, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385), when either of these facts is established by clear and uncontroverted evidence the court may so rule as a matter of law (Id.). Where entire defense was breach of warranties not available to defendant because not attached to policy as required by statute, plaintiff was entitled to directed verdict on proof of policy, proofs of death, and nonpayment. Paulhamus v. Security Life & Annuity Co., 163 F 554. Statements by physicians as to applicant's use of liquor held insufficient for jury in view of other testimony by same witnesses. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Mullan, 107 Md. 457, 69 A 385. Error to submit to jury question of truth of answers as to medical treatment and use of liquor, there being no evidence to contradict that of falsity. Id. Evidence held to show error in not directing verdict for defendant for breach of warranty as to last medical consultation. Life Ass'n v. Edwards [C. C. A.] 159 F 53.

64. Whether insured was in exercise of due diligence for self-protection as required by policy, where insured was drowned while trying to cross a river on a trolly cable ferry. Tinsman v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 235 Ill. 635, 85 NE 913. Whether insured was intoxicated when he received fatal injuries. Fenton v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n [Iowa] 117 NW 251. Whether insured voluntarily exposed himself to obvious danger by undertaking to ride a horse alleged to be vicious. Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 980, 118 NW 922. Whether premises were vacated within or estoppel,[68] disability,[69] suicide,[70] the cause of loss, death or injury,[71] notice,[72] consideration,[73] reasonable time,[74] and vexatious delay in paying the loss.[75]

Instructions.—The general rules apply to instructions[76] on the burden of fire policy. Cone v. Century Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 307. Sole ownership of property. Hilburn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 670, 108 SW 576.

65. Of facts suppressed. Keiper v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 159 F 206. Of representation that insured was 62 years old, when he was 64. Spence v. Central Acc. Ins. Co., 236 Ill. 444, 86 NE 104. Materiality of a representation is sometimes a question of law where statement is made in response to direct inquiry or where parties have settled materiality by agreement. Id. Materiality to risk is for court where character of warranty or entire evidence on materiality is such that decision but one way may be lawfully sustained by court. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Manning [C. C. A.] 160 F 382. For jury when all admissible evidence is such that decision either way may be thue lawfully sustained. Id. False warranty as to incumbrance held material as matter of law, and court erred in submitting question to jury. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Manning [C. C. A.] 160 F 382.

66. Whether one to whom notice was given by insured and who made representations as to policy, was insurer's agent. Wortham v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 827, 107 SW 276.

67. Whether insured, when he signed application, knew of question and answer written therein by agent. Hollenbeck & Co. v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 217. Whether plaintiff had such information of revocation of agency before agent's consent to transfer of title to insured property as to give person of ordinary prudence notice agency had terminated. Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 988, 107 SW 321.

68. Waiver of proofs of loss by fire. Ball v. Royal Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 34, 107 SW 1097; Webster v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Vt.] 69 A 319. Defendant's waiver of appraisal. Ball v. Royal Ins. Co., 129 Mo. App. 34, 107 SW 1097. Of provision against incumbrances. Id. Of cash payment of premium. Cauthen v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 428. Of provision in employer's liability policy that insured should forward to home office of company all summons or other process in suits against him. Sandoval Zinc Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 140 Ill. App. 247.

69. Whether insured was wholly disabled for a year. Province v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 1193. Evidence insufficient to warrant submission of question of temporary disability. Id.

70. Evidence for jury whether insured was poisoned by himself or beneficiary. McCarthy v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 69 A 170.

71. Whether fire preceded explosion, so as to render company liable for whole loss under fire policy excepting loss by explosion. German American Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 42 Colo. 156, 94 P 27. Whether death resulted from accident or from other cause is for jury unless proofs as to such cause are so convincing that reasonable men would adopt same conclusion. Ward v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Neb.] 118 NW 70. Whether death was from disease and not accident. Continental Casualty Co. v. Semple [Ky.] 112 SW 1122. Whether death resulted from being thrown from a buggy or wholly or partially from infirmity or disease of body or mind within exception in policy. McCormack v. Illinois Commercial Mens Ass'n [C. C. A.] 159 F 114. Whether accident followed by illness was proximate cause of illness and death. General Acc. Fire & Life Assur. Co. v. Homely [Md.] 71 A 524. Whether drowning or intoxication was cause of death. United States Health & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Krueger, 135 Ill. App. 432. Whether loss of sight was due wholly or partly to injury received before accident policy was issued. Pacific Mut Life Ins. Co. v. Despain [Kan.] 95 P 580. Whether employe was injured by reason of violation of rule of employer so as to bar recovery under policy. Burkhardt v. Columbia Relief Fund Ass'n, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 284.

72. Whether notice of assessment had been mailed to plaintiff. Miner v. Farmer's Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 571, 117 NW 211.

73. Recitals of consideration held not sufficient to raise conflict in evidence as to consideration for deed and mortgage alleged to have worked change in interest or title in insured property. Cone v. Century Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 117 NW 307.

74. Reasonable time for beneficiary within which to furnish her own proofs of loss where company failed to furnish blanks as agreed. Correll v. National Acc. Soc., [Iowa] 116 NW 1046. If there is no dispute as to facts, question of due diligence in sending sworn particulars after fire loss is one of law. If evidence conflicts, question is for jury. Smith v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 200 Mass. 50, 85 NE 841. Facts are in dispute when by reason of complexity, or because on their face they do not as matter of law require finding one way or other, question must be decided by drawing an inference of fact from primary facts shown. Id.

75. Kellogg v. German American Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 663.

76. Instruction held not reversible error though indefinite as to date of beginning of permanent disability for which recovery was sought, verdict indicating jury were not misled. Province v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 111 SW 1193. Under evidence that on agent's being told by insured that there was an incumbrance, but that insured had money on hand sufficient to pay it, agent answered in negative inquiry as to inoumbrances, instruction hypothecating agents telling insured to pay off mortgage, and that he did not agree it should remain on goods after issuance of policy, held properly refused. Hankinson v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 61 SE 905.

proof,[77] misrepresentations[78] and their materiality,[79] waiver[80] and suicide,[81] or other cause of death.[82]

(§ 24) D. Verdict, findings, judgment, costs and fees. See 10 C. L. 407—A general verdict for plaintiff is not necessarily inconsistent with a special finding that statements in the application were untrue.[83]

Interest usually runs from the date when the loss is payable.[84] It is properly allowed on the full amount of a judgment which includes statutory damages.[85]

77. Instruction on burden of proof held erroneous as confounding two exemptions in accident policy and applying rules not in all respects applicable to both. Correll v. National Acc. Soc. [Iowa] 116 NW 1046. In suit on fire policy, instructions held not erroneous as throwing on defendant burden of proving that policy was not accepted. Citizens Ins. Co. v. Helbig, 138 Ill. App. 115. Certain instructions relating to presumptions as to acceptance of policy and payment of premium, arising from delivery of policy and plaintiff's possession thereof, held not to cast on defendant burden of proof on whole evidence. Helbig v. Citizens Ins. Co., 234 Ill. 251, 84 NE 897. Instruction on burden of proof when company sets up suicide held sufficient, but held it would have been better to have said that evidence to warrant verdict for company should exclude every reasonable hypothesis of accidental death. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Instruction erroneous as not stating evidence should exclude every reasonable hypothesis. Id.

78. Issue of misrepresentations in application held properly submitted. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057. Instruction requiring answers by applicant to have been willfully false or fraudulently made in order to avoid policy held in language of statute and properly given. Id.

79. Held improper to allow jury to determine according to their own standards what insurer would reasonably have done had truth been stated by applicant. Supreme Lodge K. P. v. Bradley, 32 Ky. L. R. 743, 107 SW 209. Court in one instruction should instruct that if any of the answers were substantially untrue, and according to the usual course of the insurance business policy would not have issued had truth been stated, they should find for insurer, and another instruction should state that question was not whether insured's physicians were mistaken as to his ailment, or whether he at time of application in good faith believed he was healthy, but whether answers were substantially true, and if untrue, whether according to usual course of business policy would have been issued had truth been stated. Id. Where applicant had appendicitis, held proper to mistrust he could recover unless representation in application was materially false and he thereby induced issuance of policy. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Howell, 32 Ky. L. R. 935, 107 SW 294.

80. Instruction submitting question of waiver must state facts which if found would constitute waiver. Robinson v. Insurance Co., 113 NYS 105. Instruction predicating waiver of prepayment of first premium on agent's delivery of policy to insured and failure of company to request cancellation of policy held misleading as ignoring agent's possible violation of instructions with knowledge of insured. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057.

81. Instruction that fact that insured was found in convulsions which continued until he died, and that strychnine was discovered in his stomach, was not sufficient to prove suicide, held misleading. Life Ins. Co. v. Hairston [Va.] 62 SE 1057.

82. Instructions authorizing or denying recovery, according as disease with which insured was afflicted did or did not operate to cause death in co-operation with accidental injury, held not conflicting. Continental Casualty Co. v. Semple [Ky.] 112 SW 1122. Instruction held in effect to require finding that death was caused by accident independent of all other causes, in order to entitle plaintiff to recover. General Acc. Fire & Life Assur. Co. v. Homely [Md.] 71 A 524. Instruction barring any recovery unless death was due wholly to accidental causes held properly refused where policy, in addition to promising a certain amount in case of death from purely accidental causes, also promised one-fifth of such sum if injury, fatal or otherwise, was due wholly or in part to disease or bodily infirmity. Id.

83. Held not necessarily inconsistent with special findings that statements in application as to insured's vision and surgical treatment were not true, but that insured answered all questions truthfully and had no knowledge of false answers, and loss of one eye was plainly noticeable, since untruthfulness of answers might have been due to way in which insurance agent recorded them. United States Health & Acc. Co. v. Clark, 41 Ind. App. 345, 83 NE 760.

84. Where fire loss was payable after 60 days from furnishing proofs, interest was recoverable on amount found due, after expiration of such time. Palatine Ins. Co. v. O'Brien, 107 Md. 341, 68 A 484. Since denial of liability waives provision for delay after proofs of loss by fire, interest is recoverable from date of loss. Jensen v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 286. Where insurer denied liability within 60 days after loss, interest did not run until denial of liability, policy not being payabe until 60 days after proof of loss. Orient Ins. Co. v. Wingfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 788. Interest properly allowed from time of receipt of proofs of death until tender of money in court, but improperly allowed up to time of trial. Southwestern Ins. Co. v. Woods Nat. Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 761, 107 SW 114.

85. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3105, providing for interest on judgments generally. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Jay [Tex Civ. App.] 109 SW 1116.

Underwriters sometimes agree that the decision in a suit against one on a policy shall conclude all the others.[86] The subject of costs is elsewhere fully treated.[87]

Statutes in some states authorize the recovery of penalties and attorney's fees on proof that insurer wrongfully refused or delayed payment of the loss.[88] A tender after demand and refusal cannot affect the right to damages and fees.[89]

(§ 24) E. Enforcement of judgment. See 6 C. L. 156

INTEREST.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[90]

§ 1. Right to interest and demands bearing interest. See 10 C. L. 408—Interest was not recoverable at the common law.[91] While in the allowance of interest equity generally follows the rules of law,[92] equity usually has a large discretion in regard to interest [93] and often may allow it where it would not be recoverable at law.[94] In some cases the question of interest is for the jury; [95] in others for the court.[96] The cases are in conflict as to the liability of a municipality for interest on contractual

87. See Costs, 11 C. L. 886.

88. Laws 1905, p. 308, providing for damages and attorney's fees for failure of insurer to pay loss within time prescribed in policy after demand, held constitutional. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. McManus [Ark.] 110 SW 797. Civ. Code 1895, § 2140, allowing recovery of damages and attorney's fees from companies for failure or delay in meeting losses, held not violative of U. S. Const. Amend. 14, § 1, or of paragraphs 2, 3, 4, art. 1, of Georgia Const. Harp. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 130 Ga. 726, 61 SE 704. Question of vexatious delay held for jury. Kellogg v. German American Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 113 SW 663. Statute on recovery of damages and attorney's fees "where life or health insurance company" fails to pay held inapplicable to accident insurance. Lane v. General Acc. Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 324. Additional amount required to be paid by Rev. St. 1895, art. 3071, is not a penalty but damages, and every life policy made in state is made in view of statute. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Jay [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 1116. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3071, literally making companies liable for damages and attorney's fees for failure to pay loss on demand within time specified in policy, must be reasonably construed, and does not apply when there are adverse claimants to the fund and company merely refuses to pay until person entitled thereto has been determined in court. Southwestern Ins. Co. v. Woods Nat. Bank [Tex. Civ. App.] 20 Tex. Ct. Rep. 761, 107 SW 114. Finding that refusal to pay was because company supposed wife and children of insured claimed proceeds held to carry with it finding of good faith, barring liability under statute. Id. Failure of company to institute interpleader suit held not to show desire to evade payment. Id. Letter from beneficiary's attorneys "requesting" payment held sufficient "demand" on which to base recovery of damages and attorney's fees under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3071. Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Maner [Tex.] 109 SW 1084. Denial of liability on insured's offering proofs of death held waiver of right to demand payment, precluding objection that company had not refused to pay after demand. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wimberly [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 778. Under Acts Tenn. 1901, p. 248, c. 141, imposing penalty for refusal in bad faith to pay loss within 60 days after demand, when refusal inflicts additional expense on plaintiff, no penalty is recoverable in absence of formal demand for payment in addition to commencing suit on policy. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Tuchfeld [C. C. A.] 159 F 833.

89. Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Maner [Tex.] 109 SW 1084.

90. Interest on judgments (see Judgments, 10 C. L. 467), taxes (see Taxes, 10 C. L. 1776), and local assessments (see Public Works and Improvements, 10 C. L. 1307), is discussed in separate articles as is also the exaction of illegal interest (see Usury, 10 C. L. 1937). As to application of payments to interest, see Payment and Tender, 10 C. L. 1147.

91. Recovery dependent upon statute. Schwitters v. Springer, 236 Ill. 271, 86 NE 102. Interest not recoverable at law in absence of express agreement or unless prescribed by statute. Sill v. Burgess, 134 Ill. App. 373.

92. Prior v. Buffalo, 113 NYS 249.

93. On ejectment bill to establish title to land and recover value of timber cut, allowance of interest on timber was discretionary. Not reviewable on appeal. Whitaker v. Poston [Tenn.] 110 SW 1019.

94. Prior v. Buffalo, 113 NYS 249.

95. When determined as damages. State v. Fahey [Md.] 70 A 218.

96. Where interest recoverable as of right in case of bills and notes, contracts, or where money has actually been used. State v. Fahey [Md.] 70 A 218.

obligations, in the absence of special contract therefor,[97] but it is well settled that a municipality is liable for interest on money wrongfully obtained or withheld.[98]

It may rest in contract See 10 C. L. 408 express [99] or implied [1] from usage and custom.[2] When contracted for interest is a part of the debt,[3] and interest to exceed the statutory rate can be recovered only by virtue of contract.[4] A writen contract must show when the payment is due in order that interest may be recovered thereon.[5] The ordinary rules of contract construction are applicable.[6] In the absence of special agreement, interest is not usually recoverable upon advances to a partnership [7] or joint venture.[8]

97. Not liable in absence of special contract provision. Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619.

Liable same as individuals. Appleton Waterworks Co. v. Appleton, 138 Wis. 395, 117 NW 816.

NOTE. Implied liability of municipalities for interest on contractual obligations: While it is held that a sovereign state is not bound to pay interest unless it has contracted so to do (Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204, 26 NE 778, 22 Am. St. Rep. 624, 11 L. R. A. 370; United States v. North Carolina, 136 U. S. 211, 34 Law. Ed. 336; State v. Thompson, 10 Ark. 61; State v. Board of Public Works, 36 Ohio St. 409; State v. Bank, 18 Ark. 554; United States v. Sherman, 98 U. S. 565, 25 Law. Ed. 235; United States v. Bayard, 127 U. S. 251, 32 Law. Ed. 159; Tillson v. U. S., 100 U. S. 43, 25 Law. Ed. 543; In re Gosman, 17 Ch. Div. 771; Attorney General v. Cape Fear Co., 2 Ired. Eq. [N. C.] 444; Bledsoe v. State, 64 N. C. 392; Trustee v. Campbell, 16 Ohio St. 11; Josselyn v. Stone, 28 Miss. 753; Wightman v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cl. 144; Molineux v. State, 109 Cal. 378, 42 P 34, 50 Am. St. Rep. 49), and the same rule has been applied to counties (Seton v. Hoyt, 34 Or. 266, 55 P 967, 43 L. R. A. 634, 75 Am. St. Rep. 641), there is some conflict as to the applicability of the rule in the case of municipal corporations. A respectable line of authorities hold that municipal corporations are within the rule and that no liability for interest exists in the absence of express contract (City of Chicago v. People, 56 Ill. 327; Commissioners v. Dunlevy, 91 Ill. 49; Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619; Pekin v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 529, 83 Am. Dec. 244), except where money is wrongfully obtained or illegally withheld (City of Chicago v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 218 Ill. 40, 75 NE 803, 1 L. R. A. [N. S.] 770; North Troy Graded School Dist. v. Troy, 80 Vt. 16, 66 A 1033; Conway v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 128, 86 NE 619; City of Danville v. Danville Water Co., 180 Ill. 235, 54 NE 224; Vider v. Chicago, 164 Ill. 354, 45 NE 720). On the other hand it is maintained in some jurisdictions that a municipal corporation is liable for interest on its debts to the same extent as an individual (Monteith v. Parker, 36 Or. 170, 59 P 192, 78 Am. St. Rep. 768; Appleton Waterworks Co. v. Appleton, 136 Wis. 395, 117 NW 816), although it is generally held that interest will run against a municipal corporation only from the time of demand for payment (Fernandez v. New Orleans, 42 La. Ann. 1, 7 S 57; Van Wart v. New York, 52 How. Prac. [N. Y.] 78; Taylor v. New York, 67 N. Y. 87; Cooke v. Saratoga Springs, 23 Hun [N. Y.] 55; Donnelly v. Brooklyn, 7 NYS 49; Wilson v. Troy, 60 Hun [N. Y.] 183, 14 NYS 721; Coles County v. Goehring, 209 Ill. 147, 70 NE 610; Lewis v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. App. 112, 82 P 1106). In Appleton Waterworks Co. v. Appleton, 136 Wis. 395, 117 NW 816, the court in denying interest upon contractual obligations of the city for the reason that no such demand had been made as would start the running of interest, said "Neither are we disposed to follow those cases which hold that a municipal corporation is not liable for interest on an indebtedness due from it in the absence of an express promise to pay. If the question is an open one in this state at all, no good reason is apparent why, after a claim is properly presented to a municipal corporation and payment is duly demanded, such claim should not draw interest if interest would be allowable on a like claim against an individual." This note excludes decisions on municipal liability for interest upon overdue coupons which are generally regarded as negotiable paper.—[Ed.]

Interest as damages ex contractu.[See 10 C. L. 408]—When not provided for by contract, interest is usually considered as damages for the default in failing to make a payment when due,[9] and according to this rule interest should not be assessed when the failure to pay is due to the plaintiff's fault.[10] Interest may be recovered on money paid by mistake[11] or secured by fraud,[12] but of course the right is denied where the plaintiff is the perpetrator of the fraud.[13] Interest is recoverable against a guarantor on the debt after maturity though the effect is to increase the judgment beyond the limit fixed by the contract of guaranty.[14] Interest upon unliquidated, contractual demands is allowable when the amount is capable of ascertainment by computation.[15] Statutes in some states provide for interest on liquidated claims in cases of unreasonable and vexatious delay in payment,[16] or where property is held for the use of another.[17] Interest is not recoverable from a trustee whose sole duty is to hold the money in question, to pay on demand, where he is ready to comply with such demand.[18]

Interest on damages for torts.[See 10 C. L. 410]—Where the damage is complete at a particular time, interest is allowable.[19] Interest is usually allowable in cases of conversion[20] or the destruction of property by negligence.[21] time of its rendition to the time of entry of judgment is to be included in and made a part of the judgment.[22]

Cessation or loss of right to interest. See 10 C. L. 410—Claim for interest as damages is waived by acceptance of the principal without interest,[23] but such is not the effect of the acceptance of the principal where there is an express contract to pay interest,[24] nor is a creditor debarred from claiming interest by accepting dividends from the assets of an insolvent debtor.[25] The liability of stockholders for interest on the corporation's debts is not extinguished by the exhaustion of the corporation's assets in suits by creditors.[26] The rule that interest ceases when the court takes charge of the property by a receiver applies only in so far as a distribution of the assets among the creditors is concerned.[27] The homologation of a provisional account by an administrator does not prevent the accrual of interest until the date of actual payment.[28] A creditor does not necessarily forfeit his right to interest by refusing to furnish the debtor with a statement of his account.[29]

Cessation of interest may be effected by tender of the sum due [30] and keeping the sum available for the creditor.[31] The general consideration of what constitutes a valid tender is treated elsewhere.[32]

tion of liability.[46] When a demand is necessary to create a default, interest runs from demand,[47] as where no time is fixed for the payment of a debt,[48] or where the claim is against a municipality[49] or a state,[50] but a demand is not otherwise necessary to start the running of interest.[51] The method of computation adopted by the parties will usually be adopted by the courts.[52] Interest as damages for the commission of a tort is usually allowed from the date of the injury[53] but where the commission of a tort involves a breach of contract, the interest properly accrues from the breach.[54]

§ 3. Remedies and procedure to recover interest.[See 10 C. INTERNAL REVENUE LAWS

The scope of this topic is noted below.[60]

§ 1. Provisions and principles common to all acts. See 10 C. L. 413—A statute for raising revenue, even when highly penal, is to be construed as a whole and in a fair and reasonable manner and not strictly in favor of the one on whom the burden is imposed,[61] but such statutes should be liberally interpreted on behalf of such persons,[62] and in case of doubt or ambiguity every intendment should be taken against the taxing power.[63] The heading of a statute, while not conclusive on what is to be taxed, may be considered for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the law makers.[64] Taxes illegally imposed and collected to be recoverable must have been paid involuntarily or under protest,[65] but the character of the protest is not of vital importance,[66] and under certain circumstances, it is wholly unnecessary to enter a protest with the collector each time a purchase of a stamp or stamps is made.[67] An appeal [68] to the commissioner and a decision thereon, unless such decision shall have been delayed more than six months, is a condition precedent to the maintenance of a suit to recover back any internal revenue tax claimed to have been illegally or erroneously collected,[69] but where before the payment of the tax a claim for abatement is presented to the commissioner and rejected, the same is equivalent to an appeal.[70] The appeal condition is not waived by failure to plead it.[71] Where different actions are brought by the same plaintiff to recover internal revenue taxes paid under the same law on the same class or articles, a judgment in one case is conclusive in the others.[72]

§ 2. The tax on liquors and tobacco. See 10 C. L. 413—Bay rum is not a distilled spirit within the revenue act.[73] The minimum eighty per cent capacity tax must be paid, regardless of any reduction of the actual capacity of the distillery by reason of the quality of materials used,[74] but in order to charge a fruit distiller with a deficiency tax, due notice of the deficiency must be given to him within six months after the receipt of his monthly report.[75] In case a delinquent liable for taxes neglects or refuses to pay them after demand, the United States has a lien upon all property and rights to property belonging to the delinquent from the time the taxes were due,[76] and even in a case of conflicting liens the government's remedy by a regular suit in equity is not exclusive.[77] On a seizure and sale of distilled liquors under the internal revenue law for nonpayment of the tax thereon, the proceeds are applicable to such tax and, if sufficient, extinguish the tax,[78] and in an action by the government on a distiller's bond, an answer containing allegations under which the defendant is entitled to prove such facts is not demurrable.[79] When distilled spirits deposited in a warehouse are destroyed by accidental fire or other casualty without fraud, collusion or negligence of the owner thereof, no taxes can be collected on such spirits,[80] and such destruction may be set up as a defense to an action on the distiller's bond, to recover the taxes.[81] A surety on a distiller's bond is responsible for the taxes accruing against the distiller,[82] but before the taxes can be collected from the surety a judgment against the distiller and the surety must first have been obtained.[83] The sureties on a distiller's bond for payment of taxes are discharged by seizure of the spirits for fraudulent acts of the distiller and sale thereof by the marshal and payment of the taxes out of the proceeds of the sale.[84]

73. Bay rum not within enumeration of "distilled spirits" defined in § 3248, Rev. St. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2107). Anderson v. Newhall [C. C. A.] 161 F 906. Under Foraker Act Apr. 12, 1900, c. 191, § 3, 31 St. 77, authorizing an imposition of a tax on articles from Porto Rico equal to the internal revenue tax imposed in the United States "upon all like articles of merchandise of domestic manufacture," Porto Rican bay rum is not subject to the provision, notwithstanding that a tax is provided for "distilled spirits,"

While the cardinal purpose of the provisions of the internal revenue law imposing special taxes on dealers in liquors is the raising of revenue for the United States,[85] the federal courts may in the exercise of the power vested in them rightly enforce the penalties provided for a violation of such law for the secondary purpose of aiding in the enforcement of the law of a state regulating or prohibiting the sale of liquor.[86] The term "cask" as employed in the statute respecting the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors by wholesale dealers has a well recognized import.[87]

Adding mere coloring matter after the stamping of the barrel and before sale does not constitute adding "anything else" within the meaning of the statute.[88] Every person who participates in the violation of the federal laws relative to revenue on liquors is himself a complete offender, a liquor dealer within the statutes.[89] Negligence of a government storekeeper whereby an unlawful removal of liquors is allowed constitutes a misdemeanor, regardless of the storekeeper's intent.[90] Intent seems to be an essential element of the crime of failing to remove stamps from barrels after emptying them.[91] Good faith may constitute a defense for failure to keep records in strict conformity with the statute.[92] Under the statute requiring every wholesale liquor dealer to enter in his record book the day when and the name and place of business of the person to whom spirits are sent, etc., the gist of the offense being sending out of any spirits without complying with the section, the quantity sent out is not an essential element of the offense,[93] nor need the indictment for such offense specify the name of the consignee or the place where the casks were sent.[94] The burden of proof is upon the prosecutor throughout to prove every fact essential to constitute the offense charged.[95]

§ 3. Oleomargarine Acts.[See 10 C. L. 413]—Except as made directly applicable, the provisions of the general internal revenue legislation do not apply to the Oleomargarine Act of August 2, 1886,[96] and hence one assessed with a special tax as a "dealer" [97] under such law, who before paying the tax makes application to the commissioner for an abatement of the same, need not, as a condition precedent to an action to recover taxes illegally imposed, make an appeal to the commissioner.[98] Butter containing an abnormal quantity of water is taxable as "adulterated butter." [99] Book entries and returns by wholesale dealers must be made in accordance with provisions therefor made and provided.[1] The provisions requiring such reports are purely regulatory,[2] and prior to the revision of 1907 the oath to the report required by the commissioner's regulations, was not such that a false oath would constitute perjury under the statute relative to crimes against justice.[3] The oath required was to the recapitulation only and not to the list of customers contained in the return.[4] Under entries required may be made by an agent, an indictment for failure to make such entries should aver that the dealer did not make such entries or cause them to be made.[5] An indictment charging violation of the oleomargarine act by failure to pack the oleomargarine sold as therein described must specify in what respect the package used was unlawful.[6] An indictment for failure to pay the required license is sufficient if in the language of the statute.[7] It need not negative a statutory exception which is mere surplusage and does not except from the operation of the statute anything which would otherwise be within the same.[8] Under such an indictment a prima facie case is made by proof that the defendant carried on the designated business at a certain time and place,[9] the defendant having the burden of proving the payment of the tax when such payment is relied on as a defense.[10] All offenses created by the act of 1886 are statutory misdemeanors of the same class, regardless of the various penalties prescribed,[11] and charges under its different provisions may be joined in the same indictment.[12]

and sold,[13] nor does such enumeration include an article made after a standard, known, nonproprietory formula, and sold in packages containing no semblance of trade mark, no advertisement of medicinal value, no directions for use, and no name except a pharmaceutical one.[14] In this connection, a name indicative of use as a remedy for a certain disease indicates a medicinal value,[15] and so, also, a name indicating that a certain medicinal drug is contained in the article, where such article is advertised as a medicine,[16] but not so as to names indicating merely mechanical use or application to particular parts of the body.[17] The use of a possessive proper name before the name of the article indicates proprietorship.[18] A product prepared from a natural fruit juice, without chemical compounding, does not come within the enumeration "medicinal articles compounded by any formula published or unpublished."[19]

The legacy tax. See 10 C. L. 414—The act imposing a tax on property transferred by "deed, grant, bargain, sale or gift," to take effect after the death of the transferrer, applies only to conveyances without consideration.[20] Property does not, within the meaning of this act pass by will or intestate laws, where it is distributed pursuant to a compromise of a will contest as authorized by a state law.[21] It is well settled that the intent of the war revenue acts, as to legacies and gifts, etc., to take effect after the death of the grantor or donor, was to tax only such interests as were virtually vested in possession or enjoyment of the beneficiary, and not interests which, though technically vested as to the title, really remained contingent as to possession or enjoyment;[22] but there is considerable confusion and some conflict as to the application of this doctrine,[23] and it is held on the one

23. NOTE. What estates are vested in present possession or enjoyment: Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 Law. Ed. 563, involved a limitation by will in trust to pay the net income to the beneficiary until he reached a certain age, at which time he was to receive the corpus of the estate. It was held that the beneficiary's interest in the corpus of the estate was not taxable. The question as to the taxability of the interest in the income was not involved or decided, but the scope and intent of the act under consideration was discussed generally and at some length, it being held, furthermore, that the refunding act of 1902 was merely declaratory of the proper construction of the prior acts as to what interests were taxable thereunder. In Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F 20, it was held that a limitation in trust to pay the income to the beneficiary until he reached a certain age, the corpus then to vest in him absolutely, created no taxable interest. It is to be noted that in this case the beneficiary's interest in the corpus was liable to defeat by his death prior to the termination of the trust, as was also the case in Vanderbilt v. Eidman, supra, but the court seems to have considered this hand that the right to receive an income from an estate left in trust for a certain period was not taxable,[24] though under the terms of the will the corpus of the estate would vest absolutely in the beneficiary of the income,[25] while on the other hand it is held that the right to receive such an income was taxable, even though the remainder in the corpus went to another,[26] and that where there was an absolute limitation of income and corpus, subject only to the intervention of a stated period during which the corpus should be held in trust and the right of possession deferred, the beneficiary's interest in the corpus was taxable.[27] There is also some conflict as to when the tax attached, it being held on the one hand that it did not attach until the expiration of one year after the death of the testator,[28] and on the other that the statute is self-operative and the tax is imposed and attached immediately upon the vesting of the estate in the beneficiary.[29] Life tables are not available to determine the value of a life estate, the duration of which has been made certain by the death of the life tenant.[30] To authorize the recovery of taxes illegally eximmaterial. To the same effect see Eidman v. Tilghman [C. C. A.] 136 F 141, afd. by divided court, 203 U. S. 580, 51 Law. Ed. 326; McCoach v. Philadelphia Trust Safe Deposit & Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F 120, afd. by divided court, 205 U. S. 539, 51 Law. Ed. 821; McCoach v. Bamberger [C. C. A.] 161 F 90; Gill v. Austin [C. C. A.] 157 F 234; Disston v. McClain [C. C. A.] 147 F 114, involved a limitation in trust to pay the income to the beneficiary at stated intervals for life. It was held that the interest of the beneficiary was not a vested legacy or bequest susceptible of present valuation by means of life tables or otherwise, but was merely an interest which vested in instalments at stated intervals, the interest in each future instalment being contingent as to possession and enjoyment upon the event that the beneficiary should be alive when such instalment became due and payable. Lynch v. Union Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 161, involved a limitation in trust to pay at stated intervals the income upon stated shares of the estate to certain beneficiaries for certain terms, the corpus of such shares to vest in such beneficiaries respectively at the expiration of such terms. It was held, following Disston v. McClain, 147 F 114, that the right of one of the beneficiaries to receive future instalments of the income was not a legacy vested in present possession or enjoyment, and that it had no "actual value" or "clear value" capable of being definitely ascertained within the meaning of War Revenue Act, June 13, 1898, c. 448, §§ 29, 30, 30 Stat. 464, 465 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2309, 3308). On the other hand, in Westhus v. Union Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 164 F 795, it was held that the right to receive the income of a trust estate was taxable as an interest vested in present possession or enjoyment, even though there was a limitation over to other parties as to the corpus upon the expiration of the trust. This case distinguishes Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 589, 24 Law. Ed. 212, Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 Law. Ed. 894, and Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 Law. Ed. 563, but recognizes a conflict among the various circuit courts of appeal, and cites and discusses many of these cases. In Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Ward, 164 F 459, it was held that a limitation in trust to pay the income to the beneficiaries for a certain period, at the expiration of which the absolute title to the corpus was to vest in the beneficiaries or their heirs, legatees, assignees, etc., created an absolute vested estate in the corpus, with the present vested right of enjoyment, the actual possession of the corpus only being deferred, and hence that the interest of the beneficiaries in the corpus was taxable. In this case Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 Law. Ed. 563, was distinguished on the ground that the interest of the beneficiary in the corpus was subject to defeat upon his death prior to the period fixed for the vesting thereof; the case of Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F 20 was distinguished on the ground that, upon the death of the beneficiary prior to the termination of the trust, the corpus was to revert to the residuary estate; the case of Disston v. McClain [C. C. A.] 147 F 114, was distinguished on the ground that the legacy sought to be taxed was merely the right to receive the income of an estate of which the final beneficiaries were uncertain; Union Trust Co. v. Lynch, 148 F 49, was adverted to as possibly in conflict with the decision rendered in the case at bar, but was not further discussed.—[Ed.]

INTERNATIONAL LAW.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[35]

Territory may be acquired by discovery[36] or conquest,[37] and the conquering nation may attach to itself a part of the territory of the nation vanquished and confiscate the land from the actual owners and occupants.[38] When sovereignty changes, the rights to the emoluments incident to offices left by the extinguished sovereignty do not survive,[39] and where an order of an officer of the new sovereignty abolishing such an office is fully ratified by such sovereignty, the courts cannot declare the act of such officer to be a tortious violation of a treaty or of the law of nations.[40] Where tortious acts of officials are subsequently ratified by a foreign government, a civil suit against the officials cannot be maintained, since there is but one tort and the foreign sovereignty as one tort feasor cannot be sued.[41] Courts of one sovereignty have no jurisdiction of a suit against the sovereign of another country.[42]

INTERPLEADER.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[43]

§ 1. Nature of remedy and right thereto.[See 10 C. L. 415]—A bill of strict interpleader is one in which the complainant asserts possession of a fund or property in which he claims no personal interest and in which the defendants set up conflicting claims and the plaintiff cannot determine to which he should yield.[44] It is essential that there be two or more claimants to the fund in dispute capable of interpleading and settling the matter between themselves,[45] that there be privity between the parties,[46] that the claims be of the same nature and character,[47] that the party seeking relief be not liable to any of the claimants,[48] and that there be a bona fide dispute concerning the ownership of the property or fund in possession.[49] A bill in the nature of interpleader will lie by a party in interest to ascertain his own rights and to ascertain to which of the rival claimants the property belongs.[50] Where the holder of a fund fails to require rival claimants to interplead, a judgment in a suit by one of the claimants cannot be pleaded as a defense in a suit by another claimant.[51]

Statutory proceedings.[See 10 C. L. 416]—The remedy of interpleader has been extended by statutes so as to include cases in which the claimants' titles are adverse to each other,[52] and in Pennsylvania the action has been extended for the relief and protection of sheriffs.[53] A statute providing for an action in the nature of interpleader[54] is remedial.[55]

§ 2. Procedure and relief. See 10 C. L. 417—Personal notice or the equivalent thereto is required to bring in a party.[56] When a bill is filed, the practice is first to determine whether such a bill will lie,[57] and issues cannot be made out against the plaintiff except as to whether the case is a proper one for interpleader.[58] An objection that the claimants are not properly made parties[59] must be taken before the plaintiff's discharge,[60] but a jurisdictional defect is not waived by answering to the merits.[61] In an action in the nature of interpleader, the plaintiff need not bring the fund in controversy into court,[62] but he may be commanded to retain the fund[63] until demanded by the court.[64] Where the plaintiff prays that the claimants be enjoined from prosecuting their suits, payment into court is prerequisite to such relief.[65] In New York a party can be interpleaded only on motion.[66]

Discharge. See 6 C. L. 104—The plaintiff's discharge is effected by the determination that the bill will lie and the payment into court of the fund or property in controversy.[67]

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

The scope of this topic is noted below.[74]

§ 1. Control of liquor traffic and validity of statutes in general. See 10 C. L. 418—The business of selling intoxicating liquors is not per se unlawful in the absence of state or municipal regulation or prohibition,[75] but the right to engage therein is subject to the power of the state, in the exercise of its police power, to regulate or entirely prohibit such traffic.[76] In the absence of a constitutional provision on

68. Deposit with clerk. Shelton v. Wolthausen, 80 Conn. 599, 69 A 1030. Jurisdiction over deposit could not be invaded by scire facias proceedings in common pleas or any other court. Id.

69. Court may direct issue between two adverse claimants in such form that they alone would be parties to action. D'Auria v. Barbiere [N. J. Eq.] 70 A 154. Court will require defendants to interplead and litigate their respective rights to fund. Maxwell v. Frazier [Or.] 96 P 548.

70. Where claimant conceived new right to fund in controversy. Shelton v. Wolthausen, 80 Conn. 599, 69 A 1030. In action of interpleader where court orders balance remaining in clerk's hands to be paid to one claimant, such action is final and another action in nature of garnishment to determine who is entitled to sum is irregular. Id.

71. Maxwell v. Frazier [Or.] 96 P 548.

72. Plaintiff entitled to attorney's fee as part of costs. Grooms v. Mullett [Mo. App.] 113 SW 683. Under Gen. St. 1902, § 1019, granting of allowance to party for counsel fees and expenses payable out of fund in controversy is authorized. Action in nature of interpleader. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Cary, 80 Conn. 426, 68 A 993. No error in granting allowance under Gen. St. 1902, § 1019, where amount is reasonable and allowance is not opposed. Id. Where plaintiff offered to pay deposit to claimant entitled thereto and filed prayer for attorney's fee, judgment should be rendered for amount of claim less attorney's fee. McCormick v. National Bank of Commerce [Tex. Civ. App.] 106 SW 747. Judgment that attorney's fees be paid by plaintiff as part of costs and that claimant recover full amount of deposit improper. Id.

73. Where court without jurisdiction. Maxwell v. Frazier [Or.] 96 P 548.

74. This topic includes all matters relating to traffic in intoxicating liquors except such as involve the federal internal revenue laws (see Internal Revenue Laws, 10 C. L. 413), and sales to Indians and in Indian Territory (see Indians, 11 C. L. 1898).

75. Sale is not nuisance per se but was recognized as legitimate business at common law and is lawful except where expressly prohibited by statute. Campbell v. Jackman [Iowa] 118 NW 755. Is unrestricted and unregulated sale of it that courts have regarded as tending to pauperism and crime. State v. Roberts, 74 N. H. 476, 69 A 722. At common law sale was lawful and any one might engage in it, and license laws are not, strictly speaking, grants of special privileges but restrictions on exercise of previously existing right. Id.

76. State prohibition law of 1907, § 13, construed, and held that law went into effect on Jan. 1, 1908, in all counties in which local option election had been held on or before Dec. 12, 1907, at which it was determined that liquors should not be sold, regardless of validity of law under which such election was held, so that validity of local option law was immaterial in determining right to the subject, the regulation of the traffic is discretionary with the legislature,[77] subject only to the general rules relative to the validity of statutes.[78] Its power in this regard is exclusive and cannot be delegated by it to the courts nor lawfully usurped by the judicial branch of the government,[79] though it may be delegated to the minor political subdivisions of the state.[80] Power to regulate authorizes a municipality to confine the exercise of the business to certain localities.[81] license in such counties after Jan. 1. State v. Skeggs [Ala.] 46 S 268; Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. Statute held valid exercise of police power. State v. Skeggs [Ala.] 46 S 268. Absolute prohibition of sale or manufacture of intoxicants within any prescribed territory in the state is lawful exercise of police power and does not deprive liquor dealer conducting business in such territory of his property or property rights without due process of law. Local option law held not unconstitutional. Edgar v. McDonald [Tex. Civ. App.] 106 SW 1135. Legislature may regulate or entirely prohibit manufacture and sale of intoxicants, and, for purpose of making effective such legislation, make it criminal for any person to have such liquors in his possession within the territory where sale or gift is prohibited with intent to sell or give away, and may prescribe or change rules of evidence by making such possession prima facie evidence of guilty intent. State v. Williams, 146 N. C. 618, 61 SE 61. But a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect public health, safety or morals, which has no real or substantial relation to those objects, or is palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law, is invalid. Id.

77. May license or prohibit sale. Campbell v. Jackman [Iowa] 118 NW 755. Mulct law (Code, §§ 2432-2455), permitting sale of intoxicants as beverage under certain conditions, held valid. Id. Code, § 2448, permitting sale of intoxicants as beverage under certain specified conditions, held not invalid as in conflict with provision of bill of rights declaring that government is instituted for protection, security and benefit of people (Const. art. 1, § 2), or Const. art. 1, § 1, or general welfare clause of federal constitution, because of inherently dangerous and demoralizing tendencies of traffic. Id. Courts cannot declare statute void as inconsistent with spirit of constitution. Id. Legislature has power to regulate or prohibit traffic under police power. In re Phillips [Neb.] 116 NW 950. Whether public good requires that sale of liquor as beverage shall be entirely or only partially prohibited is for legislature to determine in exercise of its discretion, and court will not inquire into wisdom and expediency of such legislation. State v. Roberts, 74 N. H. 476, 69 A 722.

78. For discussion of constitutionality of particular provisions, see sections dealing with subjects to which they relate. State prohibition law of 1907 held to have been adopted in conformity with Const. 1901, § 6, providing that at special sessions of legislature there shall be no legislation on subjects other than those designated in proclamation calling such session except by vote of two-thirds of each house. State v. Skeggs [Ala.] 46 S. 268. Journal entries as to adoption of statute held to conform to Const. § 66. Id. Statute held not to violate Const. 1901, § 45, providing that each law shall contain but one subject which shall be clearly expressed in its title. Id. Statute held general and not local law (Const. 1901, § 110), though going into effect in some counties in 1908 and in others not until 1909. Id.

79. In re Phillips [Neb.] 116 NW 950.

80. County board of supervisors held to have had authority, irrespective of invalid provisions of Laws 1897, c. 277, § 13, attempting to confer power on electors, to adopt ordinance prohibiting sale of intoxicants. Ex parte Young [Cal.] 97 P 822. County ordinance prohibiting sale of intoxicants which was regularly passed and adopted by board of supervisors, and duly published in manner prescribed by law, held valid though it recited that it was adopted in accordance with St. 1897, c. 277, § 13, providing for adoption of ordinances by direct vote of people, which section was unconstitutional, misrecital of source of board's power being immaterial, and to be treated as surplusage. Id. Record of board showing that ordinance was regularly adopted by board itself held not open to contradiction in collateral proceeding by affidavits showing that board merely proclaimed result of vote of people pursuant to § 13. Id. Section of ordinance prohibiting sale of intoxicants in any saloon, etc., held valid as within constitutional right to regulate or license tippling houses which is enforcible as police regulation. Id. Ordinance held not invalid as against one engaged in business of growing grapes and manufacturing wine therefrom, and having large quantities of wine on hand, as a taking of property for benefit of public without just compensation and without due process of law. Id. Ordinance held not invalid as in restraint of trade as discouraging industry of viticulture and manufacture of wines and brandies. Id. Ordinance prohibiting sale, etc., of intoxicants held proper exercise of power conferred on cities by Const. art. 11, § 11. Town of Selma v. Brewer [Cal. App.] 98 P 61. Ordinance held exercise of police power and not revenue measure, object being to suppress retail sale of intoxicants as beverage and penalty being imposed for violation. Id. Under const. art. 12, § 2, authorizing cities to make and enforce police measures, etc., and Act Feb. 10, 1899 (Sess. Laws 1899, p. 203), as amended by Act March 15, 1907 (Sess. Laws 1907, p. 518), granting to cities rights to regulate or prohibit selling or giving away of intoxicants, held that cities have power to prohibit selling or giving away of intoxicants and may properly adopt ordinances to that effect. Gale v. Moscow [Idaho] 97 P 828. Police power may be delegated to municipality over territory immediately adjacent to its limits where exercise of such authority is necessary to protection of peace and good order of municipality and its inhabitants. Town of Gower v. Agee, 128

The appointment and qualification of officers to whom the enforcement of the liquor laws is entrusted is regulated entirely by statute.[82] Duties which the constitution requires to be performed by elective officers cannot be delegated to appointive officers.[83]

§ 2. Local option laws.[See 10 C. L. 419]—Local option may be exercised in various ways, such as by remonstrance,[84] consent,[85] or petition,[86] or, as is most commonly

Mo. App. 427, 107 SW 999. Village ordinance making it an offense to sell intoxicants within half mile of village limits without having village license, adopted pursuant to Rev. St. 1899, § 6010, giving village trustees power to license, regulate and prohibit dramshops to distance of half mile from corporate limits of village, held not void as to person conducting dramshop in another county from which he had obtained license, but within half mile limit, as being unreasonable or as an extraterritorial revenue measure, but to be valid police regulation. Id. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 1519-1566, provide general system for regulation of business of selling intoxicants which is operative throughout the state and imposes standard of regulation below which no municipality may fall, but does not deprive municipalities of their charter powers to provide for such supplementary and additional regulations as are required by local conditions which are not inconsistent with general law. Evans v. Redwood Falls, 103 Minn. 314, 115 NW 200.

81. City held to have power to restrict location of saloons, though charter did not confer it in express terms. Churchill v. Common Council of Detroit [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 379, 116 NW 558.

82. Provision of P. L. 1901, p. 240, § 4, that failure of one appointed to board of excise commissioners to qualify within 10 days after his appointment shall cause vacancy in such office, held to apply to all appointments, original or otherwise, so that failure of one appointed to succeed himself to take oath within prescribed time was not cured by his subsequent qualification. Anderson v. Myers [N. J. Law] 71 A. 139. Taking of prescribed oath within said time is prerequisite to qualification and as essential to enjoyment of office as appointment itself. Id. Where appointee fails to take prescribed oath within such time, no judicial declaration of vacancy is necessary, but legal appointment may be made to fill such vacancy and appointee, having legally qualified, may assert in same suit right of public to oust intruder, and his own right to take and hold such office. Id.

83. Laws 1907, p. 303, c. 187, authorizing appointment of enforcement commissioner and deputy enforcement commissioners, etc., for purpose of enforcing prohibition law, held unconstitutional as an attempt to displace state's attorney and sheriff in discharge of important functions and duties connected with their respective offices. Ex parte Corliss, 16 N. D. 470, 114 NW 962. Const. § 173, providing that duties of county officers therein enumerated shall be prescribed by law, held not to authorize legislature to take away duties of such officers in whole or in part and confer them upon other officers not elected by the people. Id. Fact that law only provides for displacing such officers by appointive officers during portion of time only held to make it none the less unconstitutional. Id. Contention that functions of such officers are state and not local functions, and that therefore act is valid under police power, held untenable. Id. Provision of Const. art. 20, authorizing legislature to prescribe regulations for enforcing provisions prohibiting sale of intoxicants, held, when construed in connection with and in light of other constitutional provisions, not to authorize creation of new offices in contravention of scheme of government provided for by other provisions thereof. Id.

84. Acts 1895, c. 127, § 9, as amended by Acts 1905, c. 6 (Burns' Ann. St. 1905, § 7283i), held to authorize majority of legal voters of township to prevent by a remonstrance the granting of license to any and all applicants to sell liquor in ward in city located in said township. Miller v. Givens, 41 Ind. App. 401, 83 NE 1018.

85. Code, § 2448, requires statement of consent as condition precedent to carrying on sale of intoxicants which in cities of 5,000 or over must be signed by a majority of the voters residing therein and voting at last preceding general election, and in cities under 5,000 must be signed by 80 per cent of voters. Held that, in view of § 2450, providing that sufficiency of statement of consent may be questioned by any citizen of county, and § 2453, requiring county auditor to keep for inspection of any citizen who may desire it all papers required by preceding sections to be filed with him, individual citizens might sue to enjoin retaining of names on its census roll which were fraudulently placed there for purpose of showing population of more than 5,000. Semones v. Needles, 137 Iowa, 177, 114 NW 904. Census enumerator alleged to have fraudulently padded returns held proper party defendant in such suit so that costs were properly taxed against him, particularly where he answered and defended. Id.

86. Persons signing petition for revocation of order of county court prohibiting sale of intoxicants within three miles of church held not entitled to withdraw their names after same was filed except for good cause, but held further that they could protest against granting of said petition on ground that it was not signed by majority of adult inhabitants within three mile radius. Phillips v. Goe, 85 Ark. 304, 108 SW 207. Signers who did not appear and protest against granting of order held not aggrieved by judgment granting petition, and hence not entitled to appeal therefrom. Id. Petition under act of March 22, 1906, 98 O. L. 68, commonly known as the "Jones Law," to prohibit sale in a residence district, is in effect voting by petition rather than by ballot. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 251. Number of signatures to petition must equal majority of votes cast the case, by an election at which the question is voted on directly.[87] The political at last regular municipal election. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors in Residence Dist., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S). 351. Proof of residence in state for one year and in district for four months makes prima facie case of qualification to sign such petition. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 251. Signature made in presence and at request of qualified elector, who is incapacitated from signing by his own hand, is valid. Id. Signer may withdraw his name after petition is filed upon proof that his signaturs was obtained through fraud or misrepresentation. Id. Burden of proving fraud or misrepresentation rests upon party asking for withdrawal of his name. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors in Residence Dist., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 351; In re Petition, to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 251. Fraud and misrepresentation cannot be predicated upon claim that petition was not read to signer, or that he did not understand its contents, and signer has no right to rely upon statements of others as to purpose of petition or territory embraced, since both are required to be set out therein. In re Petition, to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 251. Questions to be determined by court upon hearing of such petition are: That territory described is residence district; that petition is correct in form; that signers are qualified electors of territory described; that number of qualified electors of described territory, who have signed such petition, equal a majority in number of electors in such residence district who voted at last general election; that signatures to such petition are genuine. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 251. Burden of proving facts alleged in petition is upon petitioners. In re Petition to Prohibit Sale of Intoxicating Liquors in Residence Dist., 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 351. Petition cannot be taken as prima facie evidence of facts necessary to decide upon its sufficiency, except in absence of request on part of any elector to be heard. Id. Is prejudicial error to deny the ordinary process of court where request is made therefor in good faith and within reasonable bounds. In re Jones Law, 11 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 33.

87. Since local option law was proposed by initiative petitions, held that it was unnecessary to its validity that it be submitted to governor for his approval or rejection before it could become operative. Const. art. 4, § 1, as amended. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237.

Constitutionality of local option laws in general: For constitutionality of particular provisions, see sections dealing with matters to which they relate. Rev. St. 1899, c. 22, art. 3; Ann. St. 1906, pp. 1733-1740, is constitutional. State v. Harp, 210 Mo. 254, 109 SW 578. Act March 21, 1907, 24 Del. Laws, p. 135, c. 65, held not in conflict with any provision of federal constitution. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Laws 1907, p. 297, held not to violate Fed. Const. Amend. 14, in that it varies punishment for selling liquors in different localities by providing severer punishment for second offense, while dramshop act does not, since offenses specified by the two acts are not identical. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. This held true though one accused of selling in anti-saloon territory may take change of venue to saloon territory, since change would have no effect on degree of punishment. Id. Rose local option law is not unconstitutional as denial of constitutional liberty in making it possible to prohibit liquor traffic within certain territory, or because act violates principle of inviolability of private property, or because it is general law without uniform operation, or in contravention of principle that no act shall "take effect" upon approval of any other authority than the general assembly. Gassman v. Kerns, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 626. Provision of Rev. St. 1901, tit. 43, for submission of question to popular vote, held not delegation of legislative powers. Thalheimer v. Maricopa County Sup'rs [Ariz.] 94 P 1129. Fact that statute fixes no date for election and provides for no action under it until petitions filed with board of supervisors (Id.), and that it provides that board of supervisors shall canvass votes and if sufficient number are in favor of prohibition, make order prohibiting sale of intoxicants within prescribed limits, held not to make statute void as delegation of legislative power (Id.). Act March 21, 1907, 24 Del. Laws, p. 135, c. 65, §§ 11, 12, held not unconstitutional as delegating legislative powers to voters in each district on theory that penalties and processes thereby provided are enforcible only if majority of electors in any district vote against license, question submitted being simply license or no license, and vote against license being merely contingency upon happening of which legislature provided penalties should become operative. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Laws 1907, p. 297, establishing local option, held not unconstitutional as delegation of legislative functions because it only goes into effect in particular localities as result of submitting it to popular vote. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Local option law held not invalid as delegation of legislative power but that it merely confers authority on people of county to determine whether law already passed shall be applicable to such county, duty of county court under § 10 (Laws 1905, p. 47) to make order absolutely prohibiting sale being merely tantamount to proclamation of consequences following canvass of votes. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Laws 1907, p. 297, held not in conflict with constitutional provision prohibiting special laws in certain enumerated cases, and in all other cases where general law can be made applicable because it can only be put in operation in particular localities as result of popular vote, whether general law can be made applicable in any particular case being question for legislature and not for courts. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 866. Act March 21, 1907, 24 Del. Laws, p. 135, c. 65, held not in conflict with Const. art. 2, § 16, forbidding more than one subject to be embraced in act or its title, provisions for submission of question of license or no license to vote and provi-subdivisions within which an election may be ordered are fixed by statute.[88] Whether prohibition adopted by a county extends to municipalities embraced therein depends on the statutory provisions on the subject.[89] The adoption of prohibition by a county generally precludes minor subdivisions thereof which participated in the election from again voting upon the matter during the time limited in the statute, even though they had a right to vote separately on the question at or prior to said election,[90] though a contrary rule often prevails where the election is in favor of the sale of liquor.[91] In some states adoption of prohibition by a minor political subdivision does not preclude a resubmission of the question in the whole of the major subdivision in which it is situated.[92] The result of the election generally ap-sions for penalties intended to enforce prohibition in districts voting for no license being connected with each other and germane to primary objects of statute. State v. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Laws 1907, p. 297, held not in conflict with Const. art. 4, § 13, providing that no act shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Act held not unconstitutional because of definitions of intoxicants therein contained. Id. Title of act held not misleading in that it apparently provides for abolishing anti-saloon territory by same means by which it was created, while in some cities because of changes in precincts or districts voters can never again vote on question, since no such change could render resubmission to voters of same territory impossible. Id. Nor is title misleading in that it uses words "popular vote," while act provides that majority of legal voters voting upon proposition shall govern, an election at which every elector is entitled to vote being an election by popular vote. Id. Laws 1907, p. 297, providing for local option, held not in conflict with Const. art. 4, § 13, prohibiting ameadment or revival of laws by reference to title only, since it does not and does not purport to amend or revise any law, though it adopts law as to other elections and prescribes special regulations for elections under act, and though it adds certain conditions to existing laws under which druggists are allowed to sell in anti-saloon territory. Id.

88. Const. art. 5, § 18, art. 16, § 20, as amended, Rev. St. 1895, arts. 1532, 1533, Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 3384, construed, and held that commissioners' precinct is political subdivision of county within meaning of constitution so that commissioners' court may order election therein. Cofield v. Britton [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 493. Authority to order election held not affected or destroyed by fact that part of justice's precincts embraced in such commissioners' precinct were wet and part dry. Id. Where contestants claimed that election was invalid because commissioners' precinct for which it was ordered divided a town, held that burden was on them to prove that town so divided was subsisting municipal corporation. Id. Court having ordered election in precinct subdividing town which had not elected officers for over 30 years, held that it would be presumed in support of their action that population of said town was over 200 and less than 5,000, and hence that its charter had become inoperative and void under Laws 1897, p. 159, c. 114; Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 397. Id. Production of act incorporating town held not sufficient to sustain burden under circumstances. Id. County ordinance prohibiting granting of licenses in any precinct outside of municipal corporations if majority of electors vote against it, and providing for submission of question, held within power of board of supervisors to enact, and not to be delegation of legislative power. Denton v. Vann [Cal. App.] 97 P 675. Const. art. 11, § 11, held to confer power to make and enforce police regulations on county boards of supervisors. Id. City council held to have no authority under charter to pass ordinance providing for submission to voters of question whether sale of liquor should be allowed in city, though submitted merely for purpose of ascertaining desire of electors in regard to matter. Galindo v. Walter [Cal. App.] 96 P 505. Legislative power being conferred exclusively on city council, and there being no referendum provision in charter, power to determine whether licenses shall be issued cannot be delegated to people. Id.

89. Adoption of local option law by county as unit held to render sale of intoxicante unlawful in city situated therein which was operating under special charter, legislature not having attempted, in granting such charter, to exempt city from operation of local option law and having no power to do so in any event in view of Const. art. 16, § 20. Fox v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 150, 109 SW 370.

90. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 3027, 3028, 3032, 3033, construed, and held that, where county voted in favor of prohibition, a town therein which then had less than 2,500 inhabitants, and voters of which participated in such election, could not within four years again vote on question independently of county, though in meantime its population had increased to more than 2,500. State v. Robinson, 129 Mo. App. 147, 108 SW 619; State v. Hickerson, 130 Mo. App. 47, 109 SW 108.

91. County election in favor of sale of liquor held not to bar local option election in magisterial district in said county for three years. Const. § 61, and St. 1903, § 2563, construed. Eggen v. Offutt, 32 Ky. L. R. 1350, 108 SW 333.

92. Fact that certain wards in parish had, at elections previously held, voted for prohibition, and that in accordance therewith prohibition was still in force therein, held not to preclude police jury from ordering election in whole parish, including such wards, result of parish election being binding on wards. Hagens v. Police Jury, 121 La. 634, 46 S 676.

plies in the particular political subdivision as it existed when the election was ordered though its boundaries are changed before it is actually held.[93] In case a new subdivision is carved out of an old one after the local option law has been adopted by the latter, the law ordinarily remains in force in both.[94] In some states in case of a change in boundaries after the adoption of prohibition, the result can be nullified only by a vote of the people living within the boundaries as they originally existed.[95]

The election must be conducted in the manner prescribed by law.[96] The order for the election[97] is generally made upon petition[98] signed by the required number of duly qualified petitions,[99] and filed with a designated court or tribunal. Provision is sometimes made for an appeal from an order rejecting such petition.[1]

93. Order of commissioners changing boundaries of justice's precinct after election had been ordered in such precinct, but before it had been held, held not to have invalidated election and that result of election embraced entire precinct as it existed at date of order of election. Const. art. 16, § 20. Hill v. Howth [Tex.] 111 SW 649; Id. [Tex. Civ. App.] 112 SW 707.

94. In absence of legislation inconsistent therewith, at least where no other territory differently affected is embraced in new district. Amerker v. Taylor [S. C.] 62 SE 7.

95. Commissioners' court has clear legal right after local option election has been held in a justice precinct to detach part of such precinct and add same to another precinct within the county, but in so doing it does not and cannot interfere with local option as adopted, and its action does not invalidate said election previously held, and it requires vote of people living within original bounds of precinct which put local option into effect to nullify same. Oxley v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 945. Election held for precinct as it existed after change in its boundaries held without authority of law and void, and to have in no way changed status of local option territory as it originally stood. Id. Election held void ab initio so that its invalidity could be determined in a collateral proceeding and a contest was not necessary for that purpose. Id. Subsequent election under order describing old territory of said precinct by metes and bounds as it originally existed held valid. Id.

96. Board of commissioners of elections for state and county officers may hold election under Act Feb. 16, 1907 (Acts 1907, p. 463), without participation of board of commissioners of election for congressmen, etc., two boards being entirely separate. State v. State Board of Canvassers, 79 S. C. 246, 60 SE 699. Laws enacted pursuant to Const. art. 19, § 2, for conducting elections, should conform to Id. § 1, providing that election shall be conducted in manner prescribed by law for conducting general elections. Metcalf Co. v. Orange County [Fla.] 47 S 363.

97. Order held not open to objection that it was made by probate court instead of probate judge, as required by law. Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. Order providing for submission of question whether or not sale of intoxicating liquors should be prohibited in county in accordance with provisions of local option law held substantial compliance with Rev. St. 1899, § 3027, providing for submission of question whether or not spirituous and intoxicating liquors, including wine and beer, shall be sold in county. State v. Kellogg [Mo. App.] 113 SW 660. Order held not defective because submitting question "whether" sale should be prohibited instead of "whether or not." Wade v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 184, 109 SW 191; Id., 53 Tex. Cr. App. 299, 109 SW 192; Id., 52 Tex. Cr. App. 608, 108 SW 376.

98. Petition not required to be on one piece of paper but may consist of several pieces of paper identical in wording and signed by different persons, making in aggregate the number required. Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. Petitioners may withdraw petition at any time before order for election is made, and by so doing divest county court of jurisdiction over subject-matter. State v. Kellogg [Mo. App.] 113 SW 660.

99. Words "the qualified electors at the last preceding municipal election," contained in Rev. St. §§ 4364-20e, construed in connection with preceding words contained in same section, mean "qualified electors who voted at the last preceding municipal election." Seesholtz v. Johnstown, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 187. So much of Gen. Laws 1896, c. 102, § 4, as provides that no vote shall be taken unless specified per cent of qualified electors shall petition city or town clerk therefor, that clerk shall upon such petition insert proposition providing for taking of vote in warrant calling town, ward, or district meetings, and shall file with secretary of state certificate that question is to be submitted, held void for uncertainty in failing to establish basis of computation of number of names required to make valid petition and as failing to fix method for ascertaining that signers are qualified electors. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 1. Invalidity of such provision held not to affect validity of balance of section providing for submission of question to voters and effect of vote, the remaining provisions forming in themselves a clear, complete and intelligible statute. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 1; Id. [R. I.] 71 A 450. Question should be placed on ballots in accordance with Gen. Laws 1896, c. 11, § 22, as amended by Pub. Laws 1904-05, c. 1229, § 2. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 1.

1. Appeal to circuit court from order of county board of supervisors rejecting petition being authorized by Code 1906, § 80, held error to dismiss properly perfected appeal even though court was powerless to render judgment ordering election to be held. Spencer v. Washington County [Miss.] 45 S 863.

2. Invalidity of provisions of Gen. Laws 1896, c. 102, § 4, as to petition and notice, held not to render whole act void on theory that it contains only method for notifying electors that vote will be taken on question, since Gen. Laws 1896, c. 37, § 8, requires town clerk to give notice of town meeting and of business to be transacted therein, and since, under Id. c. 26, § 8, words "town clerk" include city clerk. Ruhland v. Waterman [R. I.] 71 A 1. In any event omission of provision for notice would not be fatal, since, legislature having directed vote on question to be taken at each election of general officers, it becomes duty of town and city clerks to give notice thereof in warrants calling meetings for that purpose. Id. Question of validity of provision of Laws 1907, p. 297, that failure to give notice shall not invalidate vote, held not involved on review of conviction for selling liquor in anti-saloon territory, since it could only arise on failure to give prescribed notice, and its solution might depend on facts of particular case, and since invalidity of such provision would not affect whole act. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

Form and contents of notice: Certified copy of order of court ordering election is proper notice to be published. State v. Brown, 130 Mo. App. 214, 109 SW 99. In view of Rev. St. 1899, § 3027, providing that election shall be conducted, etc., in accordance with laws governing election of county officers, and Id. § 6991, providing when polls shall be open at general elections, held that notice stating that election would be conducted in accordance with laws governing elections for county officers was sufficient, though it did not state hours during which polls would be open. State v. Bassett [Mo. App.] 112 SW 764. Notice held to sufficiently state date on which election was to be held. Id Notice merely containing questions themselves without setting forth fact that they would be voted on, or making any reference to election, held insufficient under Laws 1896, c. 112, § 16. In re Foster, 57 Misc. 676, 108 NYS 788.

Posting and publication of notice and proof thereof: Fact that no notices were posted in one precinct and less than required number in another, and that some of those posted were not posted for required number of days, held to invalidate election, provisions of Laws 1905, p. 41, c. 2, in this regard being mandatory. Guernsey v. McHaley [Or.] 98 P 158. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3029, county court is required to direct in what newspaper notice shall be published, if there is more than one in county. State v. Kellogg [Mo. App.] 113 SW 660. Fact that order attempted to delegate selection of paper to clerk held harmless where he caused notice to be published in all papers published in county. Id. Rev. St. 1899, § 3029, providing that notice shall be published for four consecutive weeks, and that last insertion shall be within 10 days next before such election, held to require 28 days' notice of election to be computed by excluding first day of notice and including day of election, so that insertion for four consecutive weeks was sufficient where 29 days intervened between first publication and day of election and last publication was 8 days before election. State v. Brown, 130 Mo. App. 214, 109 SW 99. Since statute makes no provision for any form of proof of publication being made to county court and entered of record, entry of fact of publication is not essential. State v. Oliphant, 128 Mo. App. 252, 107 SW 32. Where record of county court shows that notice was ordered to be published in prescribed manner, will be presumed on prosecution for violation of law that it was published as ordered, in absence of showing by defendant to contrary. Id. Proof of publication may be made by oral testimony of publisher to that effect or by any other competent proof. State v. Swearingen, 128 Mo. App. 605, 107 SW 1. Held proper to allow state to establish proper publication by oral evidence of publisher, though latter had previously filed affidavit showing insufficient publication, affidavit not being conclusive because not required by statute. Id.

3. Acts 1907, p. 200, providing that election shall not be held within 30 days from time it is ordered, held not to require that 30 entire days should elapse, so that act was complied with where election was ordered Nov. 9 and held Dec. 9. Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. That only 32 days intervened between date when election was ordered and date of election held not to render election void, matter being largely in discretion of police jury in absence of statute fixing time. Hagens v. Police Jury, 121 La. 634, 46 S 676. Provisions of Rev. St. 1899, § 3027, are mandatory and election held on day more than 40 days after receipt of petition by county court is void. State v. Kellogg [Mo. App.] 113 SW 660. Since petitioners may withdraw petition at any time before election is ordered, and since they do not thereby disqualify themselves from again becoming petitioners, and may by consent again use same petition as that before presented, held that such a second filing after withdrawal was new petition and election within 40 days from second filing was in time. Id. Provisions of county local option act that election shall be held "in not less" than twenty days from presentation of petition does not create exception to provision of Rev. St. § 4951, that time within which act shall be done is to be computed by excluding first and including last day. Perry County v. Tracy, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 619. Question of license can only be voted on at annual town meeting, and hence license commissioners appointed pursuant to vote in favor of license at special town meeting were not entitled to office. Pub. St. 1906, §§ 3418, 3419, 5104, Acts 1902, p. 94, No. 90, § 2 construed. State v. Sargent [Vt.] 69 A 825. Where constitution gives legislature general discretionary power to submit question of license or no license to vote of people, and does not require that it be submitted at general election or prohibit its submission at special election, statute providing for submission at special election is valid. Fountain [Del.] 69 A 926. Const. art. 13, § 1, construed, and held to authorize legislature to submit question of license or no license to be voted on at such election and time as they shall deem proper, and to further provide that if at any time majority of members of each house from any district shall request such submission, legislature must comply with such request and submit such question to be voted on at general election. Id. Each sentence of section is complete and independent provision in no way limiting other one, and fact that in proceedings of constitutional convention only general election was referred to raised no inference, under maxim "Expressio unius exclusio alterius" that convention intended mode of procedure in one case to limit grant of power contained in other, maxim having no application in such case. Id. Nor is it a condition precedent to submission of question that majority of members of general assembly in each house from each district in which such question is to be submitted request such submission. Id. Hence Act March 21, 1907, 24 Del. Laws, p. 135, c. 65, is not unconstitutional because providing that vote shall be taken at special election, nor because there was no request by majority of members from each district for its submission. Id.

4. See, also, Elections, 11 C. L. 1169. Fact that only four judges were appointed for each precinct instead of six, as required by Rev. St. 1899, §§ 3027, 6996, 7101, held not to invalidate election, in absence of showing of fraud or misconduct in election, statutes being directory only. State v. Swearingen, 128 Mo. App. 605, 107 SW 1.

5. See, also, Elections, 11 C. L. 1169. Statute requiring election judges to take prescribed oath held directory only, so that fact that it did not appear that in some precincts judge who administered oath to other judges was himself sworn did not invalidate election. State v. Swearingen, 128 Mo. App. 605, 107 SW 1.

6. See, also, Elections, 11 C. L. 1169. Persons not duly registered according to law are not qualified electors. Gen. St. 1906, § 170. Metcalf Co. v. Orange County [Fla.] 47 S 363. Payment of poll tax lawfully assessable and due held prerequisite to voting and to qualification of elector. Id.

7. In view of Const. art. 19, § 1, requiring election to be conducted in manner prescribed for conducting general elections, if Gen. St. 1906, § 1214, contemplates use of two distinct ballots, one with "For selling" and other with "Against selling" printed thereon, is invalid. Metcalf Co. v. Orange County [Fla.] 47 S 363. Ballot with quoted words above separate lines on one side of single ballot, with appropriate directions on ballot for its use, held not illegal, or vague, indefinite and misleading. Id. Form prescribed by Laws 1907, p. 297, held not deceptive or misleading. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Ballots held not even in substantial conformity to Laws 1896, p. 57, c. 112, § 16, requiring questions to be submitted to be printed in full on face of ballot. In re Gibson, 108 NYS 485. Election held valid where ballots stated question to be voted for and directed voters in favor of sale to mark word "yes" with a cross and those opposed to mark word "no" with cross as required by Rev. Pol. Code, § 2856, as amended by Laws 1903, c. 166, p. 191, though such words were not preceded by squares in which elector could place cross to indicate his vote as required by § 1911, relating to proposed constitutional amendments. State v. Harris [S. D.] 115 NW 533.

8. On contest of election, testimony as to what occurred in commissioners' court relative to canvass of returns of previous illegal election held inadmissible, it being clearly immaterial. Oxley v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 945. Acts of local option inspectors in rejecting ballots as defective and in canvassing results of election held ministerial rather than quasi judicial, and hence not reviewable on certiorari. State v. Sundquist [Wis.] 118 NW 836.

9. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 7007, 3027, construed, and held proper to admit in evidence tabulated statement of vote signed and certified by county clerk and signed by two judges of county court as witnesses, and to permit clerk to testify orally that he called such judges to his assistance and that they, together with him, examined and cast up vote, though statement did not recite such fact, statute not requiring that it should. State v. Swearingen, 128 Mo. App. 605, 107 SW 1. Is essential that commissioners' court shall declare result of election before election becomes effective. Holloway v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 246, 110 SW 745. Even if Sayles' Rev. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1748, providing that all election returns and ballots shall be held by county clerk for one year and then destroyed if no contest has been instituted, applies to local option elections, it is not statute of repose and does not preclude commissioners' court from declaring result of election more than year after it is held. Oxley v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 945.

10. Provision of Acts 1907, p. 203, § 8, requiring copy of report of election to be posted at court house door, held directory only, so that noncompliance therewith did not prevent law from going into effect. Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. Order of commissioners' court declaring result of election and prohibiting sale of intoxicants need not provide or require that newspaper in which same is to be published shall be selected by county judge, law requiring him to make such selection independent of any such selection or order. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3391. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 624, 108 SW 683. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3391, providing that order shall be published for four successive weeks, held not to require publication each day for 28 days but that publication in four successive issues of weekly newspaper was sufficient, last publication contemplating and covering week in which it occurred. Williams v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 156, 109 SW 189. Fact that county judge certified that notice was published ferent states. The number of votes necessary,[11] and whether a majority vote in favor of license is essential to the granting of licenses, or whether licenses may be granted unless a majority vote against it,[12] depend on the terms of the statute. An election is proved by the records relating thereto.[13] Unless the result of an election is changed or rendered doubtful, it will not be set aside on account of mere irregularities or illegalities.[14]

four weeks on date of last publication held not to vitiate certificate which was otherwise regular. Id. Though four publications is sufficient compliance with law, one cannot be prosecuted for sale within given territory until after 28 days from time of first publication. Byrd v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 507, 111 SW 149; Green v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 466, 110 SW 919. Where result was properly published, held that subsequent republication did not add to or detract from regularity of proceedings putting law into operation. Beaty v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 432, 110 SW 449.

Proof of publication: Since statute makes no provision for any form of proof of publication of notice of result being made to county court and entered of record, held not essential to validity of proceedings that fact of publication be entered of record. State v. Oliphant, 128 Mo. App. 252, 107 SW 32. Where record of county court shows that notice was ordered to be published in prescribed manner, it will be presumed, on prosecution for violating law, that it was published as ordered in absence of contrary showing, burden of showing contrary being on defendant. Id. Certified copy of entry by county judge on minutes of commissioners' court of fact of publication is prima facie evidence of due publication. Rev. Civ. St. 1895, art. 3391. Coleman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 112 SW 1072. Is immaterial whether judge writes entry of order himself or causes same to be transcribed by another. Id. Entry, which was made at proper time and in proper book, was entirely in handwriting of county clerk, including name of judge signed thereto. It appeared on page 131 of minutes. On page 132 appeared certificate of judge, signed by him, reciting that preceding six pages of minutes had been read over in open court and that same were approved. Held that in view of lapse of time, and absence of showing by then judge or clerk that entry was not made by consent and under authority of judge, it would be considered that it was and that same was sufficient. Id. Where county judge signed minutes, held that entry was valid though in handwriting of county clerk. Coleman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 578, 111 SW 1011. Failure of judge to make entry held not to invalidate election. Beaty v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 432, 110 SW 449. Where it appears that no such entry has been made, fact of publication may be proved by other evidence. Id. Entry that publication was made in specified newspaper "for the time and in the manner required by law" held sufficient, though it did not give dates of publication or specifically show publication for four successive weeks. Byrd v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 507, 111 SW 149. Though it did not in terms state that publication had been made for four consecutive weeks. Harryman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 474, 110 SW 926. Held not necessary to mention different dates of publication. Rhone v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 478, 110 SW 928. Certification that such publication was made held, in absence of anything to contrary, sufficient proof that same was made in newspaper selected by judge and under his direction. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 624, 108 SW 683.

11. Under Rev. Pol. Code, § 2856, as amended by Laws 1902, p. 191, c. 166, where proposition is submitted at an annual election, in order to carry it must have majority of highest number of votes cast at the election, majority of those cast on proposition itself being insufficient. State v. Stakke [S. D.] 117 NW 129; Id. [S. D.] 118 NW 703.

12. Rev. Pol. Code, § 2837, as amended by Laws 1905, c. 124, providing that no license shall be granted in any township, town or city, where majority of electors thereof have not voted in favor of granting license, and repealing all acts and parts of acts in conflict therewith, held to repeal § 2856, as amended by Laws 1903, c. 166, in so far as they provide that if majority of voters vote against sale no license shall be granted, and to clearly require majority vote in favor of license before license can be granted. State v. Stakke [S. D.] 118 NW 703, afg. on rehearing [S. D.] 117 NW 129.

13. Under Laws 1905, p. 47, § 10, making order of county court declaring result prima facie evidence that law has been complied with in giving notice of and holding election, and counting votes and declaring result, such order is admissible on criminal prosecution for violation of local option law without first introducing petition for election, notices, etc., and burden is on defendant to establish irregularity of initiatory steps on which order is based. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Imposing such burden on defendant held not violation of his vested rights. Id. On prosecution for violation of local option law, where order of commissioners' court declaring result and prohibiting sale of liquors, and certificate of county judge that same had been published, were admitted without objection, held proper to instruct that local option was in force in county. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3391. Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 624, 108 SW 683. Orders and decrees of commissioners' court ordering election and publication of result held admissible. Fields v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 451, 107 SW 857. Held not error to permit reading in evidence of orders of commissioners' court not pertaining to law in question, they being part and parcel of minutes of court. Coleman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 578, 111 SW 1011.

14. Permitting persons to vote whose names did not appear on precinct books, etc. State v. State Board of Canvassers, 79 S. C. 246, 60 SE 699.

Local option, when put into effect, suspends the operation of the general license law,[15] and ordinarily stands as the law until otherwise determined by a subsequent valid election.[16] Provision is generally made for resubmission of the question after the expiration of a certain period,[17] and sometimes in case of an improper submission.[18]

As a general rule, in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, the courts have no jurisdiction of an election contest based on the manner of conducting such election,[19] though they may inquire into the power to order the election and whether the same has been properly exercised.[20] Statutes usually provide for such contests, however,[21] and the method so provided is exclusive.[22] There is a conflict

15. License to sell in county held no defense to prosecution for selling contrary to law after taking effect of general prohibition law in said county. Richter v. State [Ala.] 47 S 163. Provision of Laws 1907, p. 297, that during time any territory is anti-saloon territory operation of ordinances relating to sales of liquor and licenses therein shall be suspended so far as inconsistent with the act, held not in conflict with any constitutional provision. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865.

Time of going into effect: Power of legislature to pass local option laws carries with it power to fix time when licenses shall cease in towns voting against granting of licenses and to change such dates. People v. Bashford, 128 App. Div. 351, 112 NYS 502. Change in such dates does not violate constitutional provision prohibiting passing of laws impairing contract obligations, since liquor tax laws are enacted under police power. Id. Where town voted against sale of liquor in Nov. 1907, held that prohibition became effective May 1, 1908, at beginning of excise year as fixed by Laws 1896, c. 112, notwithstanding adoption of Laws 1908, c. 144, which became effective April 21, 1908, making excise year begin Oct. 1 instead of May 1, that statute not being retroactive in effect. People v. Moore, 112 NYS 475.

Contra: Held that status as it existed in November, when vote was taken, did not change until Oct. 1, 1908, and that town continued to be license town until latter date, and one who was entitled to and had certificate prior to May 1, 1908, was entitled to one from that date until Oct. 1, 1908. People v. Bashford, 128 App. Div. 351, 112 NYS 502.

16. Fact that there had been prohibition election held subsequent to one under which defendant was prosecuted, which also resulted in favor of prohibition, held not to have invalidated or set aside such former election or to prevent conviction under information charging violation of law put in force by first election. Wade v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 608, 108 SW 376; Tippitt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 302, 109 SW 161. Subsequent election does not nullify former one. Wade v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 184, 109 SW 191. May be prosecuted under first one. Wade v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 299, 109 SW 192; Johnson v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 339, 109 SW 936; Massie v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 548, 107 SW 846. Where two valid elections, one held in 1901 and other in 1904, both resulted in favor of prohibition, held that prosecution could be based on either, and hence that there was no variance between complaint and information based on election of 1901 and orders for publication of results of both elections. Hood v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 524, 107 SW 848.

17. Law when adopted must continue in force for two years, and until set aside by vote to that effect. Killman v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 570, 112 SW 92. Election ordered within less than two years after last preceding valid one held invalid. Oxley v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 945.

18. Laws 1900, p. 853, c. 367, § 16, providing for resubmission in case four propositions "have not been properly submitted," construed, and held that submission is not complete until vote has been canvassed and result ascertained, and hence quoted words include counting and certifying vote and declaring result. In re Clancy, 58 Misc. 258, 109 NYS 644. Statute held to give court reasonable discretion in determining application for resubmission. Id. Application should be denied when court can see that true result has been ascertained and declared, and that there is no reasonable ground to apprehend that irregularities changed result. Application denied. Id.

19. Are without jurisdiction ratione materiae. Darbonne v. Oberlin, 121 La. 641, 46 S 679; Hagens v. Police Jury, 121 La. 634, 46 S 676.

20. Power of police jury. Hagens v. Police Jury, 121 La. 634, 46 S 676.

21. Time of instituting contest: Under Laws 1907, p. 447, c. 8, providing that elections theretofore had must be contested within 60 days after taking effect of act, held that, where prosecution of defendant for violation of local option law was commenced after expiration of that time, he could not attack election for mere irregularities. Hardy v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 420, 107 SW 547. Defendant cannot attack election where court convened and he was tried more than 60 days after act took effect. Wilson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 107 SW 818. Act held not to apply where local option law which defendant was alleged to have violated was adopted in county in 1903, and defendant was tried one month before act of 1907 went into effect. Starnes v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 403, 107 SW 550. Accused held not entitled to raise objections to orders of commissioners' court where record showed that there had been no civil contest of election. Alexander v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 504, 111 SW 145.

Matters which may be considered: Contest under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3397, as amended, is special proceeding, and courts are limited of authority as to whether injunction will lie at the instance of interested parties to prevent the enforcement of the law on the ground of the invalidity of the election or the act under which it is held.[23] Private citizens who are members of an organization having for its object the enforcement of the law are not proper parties to such a suit.[24]

§ 3. Licenses and license taxes. Authority to license or tax, and application of license laws.[See 10 C. L. 425]—In the absence of a constitutional provision to the contrary, the legislature has authority, in the exercise of the police power, to license the business of selling intoxicants and to tax those engaged in it.[25] The authority in their investigation to matters therein specified. Cofield v. Britton [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 493. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3397, as amended by Gen. Laws 1907, p. 447, c. 8, court has power to try and determine all matters connected with election, including petition, orders putting local option into effect, etc. Id.

Form of proceeding: Proceedings to test legality and regularity of elections are under the statute by bill in equity filed for that purpose. Metcalf Co. v. Orange County [Fla.] 47 S 363.

Parties: Responsibility of defending in probate court validity of election, held under Rose county local option law (99 O. L. 35), rests upon county in which the election was held, and it is the duty of county to appear by its attorney for single purpose of making defense, and without regard as to whether result of election was for or against local option, but an elector may appear personally or by counsel at same time and take part in defense. Perry County v. Tracy, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 619.

Pleading: Facts relied upon by contestant to impeach validity of election should be set forth specifically and definitely. Oxley v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 107 SW 945. Allegation that election was illegal because polls were closed at 6 o'clock instead of 7, as required by law, thereby depriving a large number of voters of the privilege of voting, which would have changed result and rendered same doubtful, held insufficient for failing to allege number and names of persons claimed to have been deprived of right to vote, or any excuse for such failure, or that result would have been materially changed had they voted. Id. Striking out paragraph alleging that oath administered to election officers was illegal and not valid held proper, since it devolved upon contestant to allege specifically the oath in fact taken and to show that same was different from that required by law. Id. Allegations in bill in equity that certain named persons were allowed to vote when they were not qualified voters and had not paid their poll taxes, though poll tax was due from them as condition precedent to right to vote, held, when taken in connection with other allegations to which they related, to be sufficient as against demurrer that facts were not set up to show that such persons were not entitled to vote. Metcalf Co. v. Orange County [Fla.] 47 S 363. Bill held, as against such demurrer, to sufficiently allege that tax was lawfully assessable against such persons. Id. Allegations that certain named persons were duly registered voters, but were illegally not allowed to vote because they had not paid their poll taxes when none were due by them, held insufficient to show illegal action in absence of allegation that certificate required by statute was produced to precinct inspectors, showing that no poll tax was due by such persons because they were over age. Id. Allegations that county commissioners wrongfully rejected and refused to count vote as legally polled in given precinct should be supported by allegations of facts to show a wrongful act, causing opposite results. Id.

Review: Where such course becomes necessary, defense of election under Rose county local option law (99 O. L. 35) may be continued by county by prosecution of error to common pleas court under Rev. St. § 6708. Perry County v. Tracy, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 619.

22. Remedy provided by Gen. St. 1906, § 1216. State v. Martin [Fla.] 46 S 424. Where election has been officially declared to have resulted in favor of prohibition, regularity or validity thereof cannot be inquired into in mandamus proceeding, direct object of which is to compel issuance of license to relator, right to which is predicated on alleged invalidity of such election, but invalidity must first be established under § 1216 before mandamus may be resorted to to compel issuance of license. Id. Equity will not enjoin publication of order declaring result of election in favor of prohibition on ground of irregularities in such election, though it is alleged that claimants' individual rights as saloonkeepers will be jeopardized and destroyed by enforcement of law, remedy being by contest of the election. Merrill v. Savage [Tex. Civ. App.] 109 SW 408. Act 1905, p. 95, c. 69, held not to enlarge power of district court in this regard, but to curtail it by requiring applications for injunctions relating to local option elections to be made to judge in whose district territory to be affected is situated, with certain exceptions. Id.

23. Retail liquor dealers held entitled to sue to enjoin making order prohibiting sale on ground of invalidity of election. Guernsey v. McHaley [Or.] 98 P 158. Injunction will not lie to prevent enforcement of local option act, as an adequate remedy at law is afforded in a criminal prosecution under the act. Gassman v. Kerns, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 626.

24. Not proper parties defendant to suit to test constitutionality of law. Gassman v. Kerns, 7 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 626.

25. Pub. St. 1901, c. 112, § 15, held, since enactment of Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, to have ceased to be absolute prohibitory law, but that two statutes taken together constitute license law with local option provisions, s of municipalities in this regard depends on the terms of their charters and the general laws under which they operate.[26] A state license does not ordinarily authorize the holder to sell in violation of municipal ordinances or excuse him from obtaining a municipal license,[27] nor can a municipality license the sale of intoxicants in violation of a state prohibition statute.[28] Whether a particular business comes within the terms of the statute or ordinances is a question of construction.[29] Wholesale that c. 95 was not unconstitutional because state could not prohibit and license sale at same time. State v. Roberts, 74 N. H. 476, 69 A 722. Said chapter held not in conflict with Const. art. 82, requiring legislature to inculcate principles of humanity, honesty, sobriety and sincerity among people, but to be valid exercise of police power. Id. Such provision of constitution does not require sale to be absolutely prohibited. Id. Defendants in action on bonds given to secure compliance with conditions on which licenses were issued held not entitled to contend that provisions of said chapter and other statutes relating to licensing were unconstitutional as delegation of legislative power to commissioners, where it did not appear that licenses issued to defendant belonged to any of classes of licenses specified in provisions attached, or that suits were based on breaches of any conditions imposed by commissioners under powers there conferred. Id. Code §§ 2247, 2248, when construed together, held to show intention to license and legalize liquor business to extent that so long as dealer observes prescribed conditions as to payment of mulct tax, etc., he is relieved from punishment and his property from condemnation as nuisance. Campbell v. Jackman [Iowa] 118 NW 755. License fee is not tax within meaning of constitution, but price paid for privilege of doing something which legislature has right to prohibit altogether, and statutes authorizing licensing and regulation of saloon business are police regulations and not revenue measures. Town of Gower v. Agee, 128 Mo. App. 427, 107 SW 999. Act May 13, 1887 (P. L. 108), authorizing granting of licenses for sale at retail, held not in conflict with preamble of federal constitution or Pa. Const. art. 1, § 2. Gregg's License, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 633. Fact that city derived more or less revenue from ordinance held not to tend to prove that it was not adopted in exercise of police power though it might also be exercise of taxing power. Id. Act April 25, 1907 (P. L. 122), giving wholesale dealers rights and privileges of bottlers, applies only to dealers licensed after passage of the act. McMunigal v. Ingram, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 573.

26. License is granted in pursuance of police power and not of taxing power, its primary purpose being regulation and not revenue. Claussen v. Luverne, 103 Minn. 491, 115 NW 643. State has constitutional power to impose tax on liquor dealers, wholesale or retail, and to declare who shall constitute such dealers, and such exaction, whether called license fee or tax, is excise of police power and not taxing power, its primary objection being regulation and not raising of revenue. Cooper v. Hot Springs [Ark.] 111 SW 997. City held to have power, under Kirby's Dig. § 5438, to tax wholesale dealers in malt liquors. Id. Ordinance imposing tax held not invalid for discrimination in that such dealere in other liquors were exempt from its operation. Id. Under Const. art. 229, general assembly may authorize municipalities to impose upon dealers in intoxicants license tax in excess of that imposed for state purposes, but whether municipality may impose license tax upon liquor dealers, or, if so, upon what conditions, depends upon its authority as derived from general assembly. Town of Houma v. Houma Lighting & Ice Mfg. Co., 121 La. 21, 46 S 42. Provisions of Act No. 171, p. 387, of 1898, whereby state makes special provision for levying collection of license taxes, control provisions of Act No. 136, p. 224, of 1898, and Act. No. 17, p. 24, of 1902, which are general statutes applying to municipal corporations. Id. Is nothing in Act No. 136, p. 224, of 1898, Act No. 17, p. 24, of 1902, or Act. No. 142, p. 313, of 1904, requiring that, as condition to exemption of municipality from parochial license taxation, particular purpose to which municipal license tax is to be devoted shall be stated in ordinance imposing it, that matter being left for subsequent determination upon condition that tax shall be used for one of the two purposes specified in said acts. Id. Provision of section of charter repealing inconsistent laws which saved existing rights, claims, etc., vested in or asserted against city, held to have no relation to license provisions of charter and not to have continued existing licenses. Williams v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 371, 107 SW 1121. Ordinance imposing license tax on persons selling beer by barrel, half barrel, or quarter barrel, held valid exercise of police power even when applied to beer in original packages brought from another state, and to be within terms of Wilson act (28 Stat. 313, c. 728, Comp. St. 1901, p. 3177) making liquors on arrival in state subject to its laws enacted in exercise of police power. Phillips v. Mobile, 208 U. S. 472, 52 Law. Ed. 578, afg. 146 Ala. 158, 40 S 826.

27. Securing state license in compliance with Laws 1907, p. 258, c. 138, held not to authorize licensee to violate saloon limits of city in which he was engaged in business, or to render it unnecessary for him to procure city license. Williams v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 371, 107 SW 1121.

28. Municipality held to have no authority to license sale or punish one for selling without license, power to license being forbidden by prohibition law and right to punish reserved by state. Burch v. Ocilla [Ga. App.] 62 SE 666. "Near beer" held neither ardent nor intoxicating. Id.

29. Cold storage warehouse used for storage of beer shipped in until same was sold and distributed to retailers in city held subject to mulct tax. In re Des Moines Union R. Co., 137 Iowa, 730, 115 NW 740. Brewing company manufacturing and selling beer at wholesale, which maintains cold storage house in location separate from its manu-

and retail businesses are generally required to be licensed separately.[30] In some states the license fee is graded according to the gross annual receipts of the business.[31]

Procedure.[See 10 C. L. 426]—The licensing authorities are generally vested with more or less discretion in the matter of exercising their licensing power,[32] though this is not always the case where the applicant has complied with the statutory requirements.[33] An applicant for a license must be duly qualified,[34] and the applicafactory, and from which cold storage house daily deliveries of beer are made to customers on orders previously taken by a soliciting agent, thereby becomes trafficker in intoxicating liquors within meaning of Rev. St. § 4364-9, and is subject to the Dow Tax provided for by that act. Christ Diehl Brew. Co. v. Beck, 6 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 361.

30. General provision of Act No. 171, of 1898, applies to liquor business and to municipal corporations, and hence municipal ordinance imposing one license upon liquor business, wholesale and retail, is unauthorized and void. Town of Houma v. Houma Lighting & Ice Mfg. Co., 121 La. 21, 46 S 42.

31. Of Act No. 171, p. 387 of 1908, held to apply as well to municipal as to state licenses. Town of Houma v. Houma Lighting & Ice Mfg. Co., 121 La. 21, 46 S 42.

32. License is not privilege or right that any person may have for asking, but rather in nature of a favor that may or may not be granted by those in authority. Schweirman v. Highland Park [Ky.] 113 SW 507. Statutes construed, and board of county commissioners held to have discretionary power to issue or refuse license for sale of liquor not to be drunk on premises, so that their action in refusing license could not be interfered with or controlled by supreme court by mandamus. West & Co. v. Board of Com'rs, 14 Idaho, 353, 94 P 445. Under statutes conferring power to regulate and ordinances of city of Pocatello, held that city council has some discretion in granting licenses and might refuse to grant license to disreputable characters whose conduct of liquor business would be dangerous to peace and quiet of city. Perkins v. Loux, 14 Idaho, 607, 95 P 694. Excise board has discretion in prohibiting operation of saloons in any locality where reasonable grounds exist for such action. Jugenheimer v. State Journal Co. [Neb.] 116 NW 964. May refuse to grant license at place near postoffice and federal court house, or at any other locality in near proximity to place which women and children, in large numbers, are daily required to visit for business or other proper purposes. Id. Order refusing application for distiller's license "after hearing and upon due consideration" will not be reversed on appeal though no remonstrance was filed and petition, certificate and bond were in due form, and no reason for refusal was expressed of record, presumption being, in absence of anything in record to contrary, that refusal was for legal reason and not arbitrary. Reynoldsville Distilling Co.'s License, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 269. Doubts as to propriety of granting writ of mandamus to compel county court to issue license should be resolved against applicant. State v. Miller, 129 Mo. App. 390, 108 SW 603. Nov. 8 county ordered issuance of license, which order it revoked Dec. 11, at adjourned term, as having been issued prematurely and without authority. Petitioner's old license did not expire until Dec. 25, and he did not request clerk to issue license pursuant to order of Nov. 8 until Dec. 5, two days before holding of local option election which resulted in favor of prohibition. He obtained alternative writ of mandamus to compel issuance of license on Dec. 6, which was returnable Dec. 18, after result of election would be known. Held that circuit court properly refused to order issuance of license, obvious purpose of defendant being to evade result of election. Id.

33. Under Act Cong. March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. p. 563, c. 204), as amended by Act May 11, 1894 (28 Stat. p. 75, c. 73), excise board of District of Columbia has no authority to refuse application for renewal of barroom license for hotel containing 25 rooms for lodging guests because of reputation of premises or applicant as determined by board. Griffin v. U. S., 30 App. D. C. 291. Duty of board in premises being purely ministerial, mandamus will lie to compel its performance where applicant has otherwise complied with law. Id. Where applicant had fully complied with all statutory requirements, and had procured required two-thirds majority of qualified signers to his petition, held that under Rev. St. 1899, § 2993, it became duty of court to grant license and mandamus would issue to compel it to do so. State v. Turner, 210 Mo 77, 107 SW 1064. Statute is mandatory and county court has no discretion in the matter under such circumstances. Id. Under Laws 1896, c. 112, § 19, as amended by Laws 1897, c. 312, duties of treasurer with respect to issuance of certificates are purely ministerial, and, if application is correct in form and does not show on its face that applicant is prohibited from trafficking in liquor, he is bound to issue certificate. People v. Walker, 112 NYS 1021. If applicant furnishes required bond and is in readiness to pay required tax, only objections which will warrant refusal of certificate are such as appear on face of application. Id. Reference to consents previously filed held not to make them part of application so as to warrant treasurer in examining them to determine truthfulness of statements in application. Id. One applying for mandamus to compel county judge to issue license pursuant to Acts 30 Leg. p. 260, c. 138, § 10, must show existence of all facts essential to his right, and that there was no impediment to granting of license prayed for. Harrison v. Dickinson [Tex. Civ. App.] 113 SW 776. Where findings of county judge and pleadings in mandamus raised issue as to whether place for which license was sought was within local option territory, held that applicant was bound to show that it was not tion must be made to the proper tribunal[35] and filed with the proper officer,[36] and must conform to the statutory requirements as to notice,[37] consent of property owners,[38] and payment of fees.[39] The applicant is sometimes entitled to a hearing.[40] and that it was error to issue writ without first determining such issue in applicant's favor. Id.

34. Character of applicant: Is duty of licensing board to see to it that applicant is man of respectable character and standing, and they cannot indulge in presumption that such is the case when it is denied by remonstrance, even where no evidence to contrary is introduced, but applicant must prove such fact. In re Klamm [Neb.] 117 NW 991. When alleged respectable character of applicant is denied, it is duty of board to consider ignoble acts or crimes which evidence attributes to him, and to determine therefrom whether he is proper person to receive license. Bolton v. Hegner [Neb.] 118 NW 1096. Where uncontradicted evidence showed that during preceding year applicant had permitted petty gambling at place of business under his control, and on occasion had exhibited lascivious pictures, held that license should have been refused. Id. Where sole objection urged against character of applicant was that no man of respectable character would apply for license to retail intoxicants, and only evidence presented to council on that point was testimony of one witness who swore that applicant was man of good reputation and respectable character and standing, held that council properly determined that issue in favor of applicant. In re Phillips [Neb.] 116 NW 950. One who was frequently under influence of intoxicants and who during previous year had permitted gambling in his place of business held not man of respectable standing and character, within Cobbey's St. 1897, § 7150, and hence not entitled to license. Woods v. Garvey [Neb.] 118 NW 1114. Though sale in 1906 to habitual drunkard might not have disqualified vendor from receiving license in 1908, held that it was pertinent as tending to show that he was not of respectable character and standing. In re Powell [Neb.] 119 NW 9.

Previous violations of liquor laws: License refused for violation of screen law during preceding year. Woods v. Varley [Neb.] 118 NW 1114; Woods v. Kirvohlarek [Neb.] 118 NW 1115; Bolton v. Becker [Neb.] 119 NW 14. Where it appeared that during previous year applicant had, as agent of another, sold or furnished liquor to minor, held that application should have been denied. In re Phillips [Neb.] 118 NW 1098. In order to require board to refuse license to applicant, it is unnecessary for them to find that he has violated penal statute found within provisions of act relating to sales of intoxicants, but it is sufficient if evidence discloses that he has violated any of provisions of act, though penalty may not be imposed. In re Adamek [Neb.] 118 NW 109. Hence it is duty of board to refuse license to one who during past year while employed as bartender is shown to have sold intoxicants to an habitual drunkard. Id.

Corporations: Word "person" as used in Gen. St. 1902, title 16, includes corporations, and license may be granted to corporation. Connecticut Brew. Co. v. Murphy [Conn.] 70 A 450. Mere fact that § 2712 gives court discretionary power to punish one guilty of second violation of liquor laws by imprisonment held not to show contrary intent. Id. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 131, § 1, p. 1946, providing that word person or persons as well as all words referring to or importing persons may extend and be applied to corporations, license may be issued to corporation. People v. Heidelberg Garden Co., 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 230, afg. 124 Ill. App. 331. Corporation may lawfully receive license to sell at wholesale but not at retail. In re Hastings Brew. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 27. Laws 1907, p. 297, c. 82, Cobbey's St. 1907, § 7194, though not in terms authorizing corporation to sell at wholesale, recognizes by implication that such business does exist. Id. Such statute being in pari materia with Slocumb law, the two must be construed together as parts of connected whole. Id.

35. Fact that petition was addressed to city council instead of fire and police board, which was only body authorized to issue license under charter, held immaterial where board treated petition as though addressed to it. Slater v. Denver Fire & Police Board, 43 Colo. 225, 96 P 554. Act March 4, 1901 (Laws 1901, p. 13), having been added to and made part of act Feb. 6, 1891 (Laws 1891, p. 33), as amended by act Feb. 2, 1899 (Laws 1899, p. 21), held to have become part of said act, and there being nothing in said added section conferring authority to issue license, act of 1891 as amended vesting such authority in board of county commissioners governs. West & Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Latah County, 14 Idaho, 353, 94 P 445. Act of 1899 held not rendered unconstitutional or void by reason of fact that title provided for adding section to act of 1891, while body of act made no such provision. Id. Fact that act of 1899 amended act of 1891 without referring to amendment of 1895 held not to affect constitutionality of act of 1899, and same held true of acts of 1901 and 1907. Id.

36. Held that application would not be rejected because village clerk, with whom it was filed, removed from village, thereby making it inconvenient or impossible for public to see such application, it not appearing that such facts were prejudicial to remonstrators or other interested parties. In re Phelps [Neb.] 116 NW 681.

37. Notice of intention to apply for license describing proposed place of business by setting out ordinary description of town lot, describing precise part of said lot occupied by building in which applicant proposed to sell, and describing room as one fronting on particular street, held sufficient compliance with Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7278. Kunkel v. Abell [Ind.] 84 NE 503. Term "premises" as applied to occupation of realty embraces any definite portion of land, and building and appurtenant structures thereon, over which owner or occupant has right to and does exercise authority and control. Id.

38. Building which had been constantly used as barroom for years held not to have changed or lost its identity within meaning of ordinance providing that in all cases where building has been continuously occupied as barroom, and has not changed its identity since such occupancy, it should not be necessary to obtain permit to establish barroom therein based on written application accompanied by consent of majority of property owners within 300 feet, by reason of its being rendered temporarily uninhabitable by fire while license was still outstanding, so that council had no right to revoke license on that ground. Graziano v. New Orleans, 121 La. 440, 46 S 566.

Number of consents required: Word "block" as used in charter provision requiring petition of owners of majority of realty within frontage of block in which liquors are to be sold held to mean square or portion of city inclosed by streets, and that part of such a tract could not be regarded as block though so designated by party platting it. Slater v. Denver Fire & Police Board, 43 Colo. 225, 96 P 554. Ordinance held to require owners of majority of realty within frontage of entire block on all streets inclosing it to sign petition. Id. Houses not ready for immediate occupancy held not exclusively dwellings occupied as such and hence not to be considered. In re Clement, 111 NYS 1073. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 17, subds. 5, 8, as amended by Laws 1900, c. 367, requiring statement of number of dwelling houses nearest entrances to which are within 200 feet of nearest entrance to proposed saloon, and consents of majority of owners thereof to be filed, held not complied with where applicant omitted residence within 200 feet of entrance to proposed saloon as it then was, though applicant proposed to and afterwards did change said entrance so that it was more than 200 feet from said dwelling. People v. Pettit, 113 NYS 243.

Time of filing: Rule of court providing that all additional petitions and remonstrances shall be filed on or before first day of term at which application is to be heard, and giving period of three weeks after filing of original application in which to circulate and file additional petitions, held not to deprive applicant or remonstrant of any statutory right and not to be invalid as an abridgement of such right or as unreasonable. Reznor Hotel Co.'s License, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 525.

Qualifications of signers: Petition for mandamus to compel city council to issue license held demurrable where it failed to allege that signers of petition were property owners and tenants of property owners residing in half block where business was to be conducted, as required by ordinance. Perkins v. Lux, 14 Idaho, 607, 95 P 694. Under Comp. St. 1907, § 4245, freeholders required as signers of petition must be bona fide freeholders and not such as were made freeholders merely for purpose of enabling them to sign. In re Powell [Neb.] 119 NW 9. Persons to whom property is conveyed without consideration merely for purpose of enabling them to sign are incompetent. Id. Where remonstrators deny that petitioners are freeholders, applicant must prove by competent evidence that such is case. In re Klamm [Neb.] 117 NW 991. Cannot be proved by affidavits. Id. Wife of applicant, even though a freeholder, is not qualified petitioner. In re Powell [Neb.] 119 NW 9. Section 2 of Inns and Taverns Act (2 Gen. St. 1895, p. 1794), providing that signers of recommendation for license shall not have recommended another application in same township, city or borough for same year, held unaffected by P. L. 1902, p. 628, establishing excise departments in cities, or by creation of administrative tribunals contemplated thereby, and to be unrepealed and irrepealable by legislative acts of such bodies. Read v. Camden Board of Excise Com'rs [N. J. Law] 71 A 120.

Authority to consent: Consent signed by husband when his wife owned property held not to be counted. In re Clement, 111 NYS 1073. Consent signed and acknowledged by husband but not by his wife, who was joint owner of property, held of no effect. Id.

39. Statute does not prohibit licensing board from granting application before payment of fee, and it may, in absence of ordinance to contrary, order that license be issued upon payment of fee. In re Phelps [Neb.] 116 NW 681. If such condition is not made part of order, law imposes sams and will not permit issuance of license until fee is paid. Id.

40. Applicant who tendered application in conformity with ordinance and statutory bond held entitled to have them considered by council at early date and approved or disapproved, with reasons in case of disapproval. Cox v. Jackson City Common Council, 152 Mich. 630, 15 Det. Leg. N. 337, 116 NW 456. Though application was refused on insufficient grounds, held that court would not issue peremptory writ of mandamus to compel council to consider application where it was not probable that it would be necessary to secure performance by council of its duty in the premises, but that writ would issus in case of unreasonable delay in so doing. Id. Where witness testified before excise board to circumstances which, if true, would establish sales of liquor by applicant to minor during preceding year, held that board should either have required him to disclose name of minor or stricken out his testimony, and its refusal to do either was error. In re Klamm [Neb.] 117 NW 991. Court of quarter sessions denied application for wholesaler's license without such hearing as applicant was entitled to. Subsequently court revoked order and fixed time for hearing application, at which time applicant had full opportunity to be heard. Held that contention that court had no power to fix hearing by special order, and that only way in which error could be corrected was by granting license, was untenable and applicant could not complain of refusal of license for adequate legal reasons. Brezger's License, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 469.

41. In absence of statutory authority therefor, county court has no authority to exact bond conditioned to observe law in conducting business as condition precedent to issuance of merchant's license to retail liquors in quantities not less than a quart, and not to be drunk on premises. Commonwealth v. Ledford, 33 Ky. L. R. 624, 110 SW 889. Statute requiring tavern keepers to give bond tions on such bonds are treated in subsequent sections.[43] In some states no license may be granted over the remonstrance of a certain number of property owners[44] or voters[45] in the vicinity of the place where the business is proposed to be carried held not to apply to merchants. Id. Bond so exacted held not voluntary bond and hence not good as common-law bond. Id.

Execution of bond: Under Sayles' Rev. St. 1897, art. 5060j, held that there could be no recovery on bond of dealer in county in which sale of intoxicants, except for medicinal purposes, was prohibited which had not been signed by principal at the time the acts alleged as breaches were committed by him. State v. Teague [Tex. Civ. App.] 111 SW 234. Suit being one to enforce penalty for breach of statutory bond, held that there could be no recovery therein on theory that bond was good common-law obligation. Id.

Approval: Where application properly sworn to was filed with county clerk, as was bond, and occupation tax receipt showed that same had been paid and evidence showed that principal was conducting saloon at place named during year for which tax was paid, held that failure of county judge to approve bond did not affect its validity in action thereon. Munoz v. Brassel [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 417.

Sureties: Act No. 183, approved May 8, 1907, authorizing board of trustees of village of Perry to accept surety company bonds in lieu of bonds required of liquor dealers, held not to require acceptance of such bonds in lieu of those prescribed by Comp. Laws, § 5333, but to be permissive only, so that mandamus would not issue to compel acceptance of such a bond. Hicks v. Perry Trustees, 151 Mich. 88, 14 Det. Leg. N. 812, 114 NW 682. Corporation having power under its charter to engage in business of buying and selling liquors at wholesale and retail, etc., held to have implied power to become surety on retail dealer's bond, even though dealer was not one of its customers. Munoz v. Brassel [Tex. Civ. App.] 108 SW 417.

Revocation or cancellation: There being no provision in Code, § 2448, as to term for which bond is required to be given, held that evident purpose was to permit continuing bond which should not be subject to revocation during any year with reference to which it has taken effect. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Jenness [Iowa] 116 NW 709. Surety, by revoking bond prior to beginning of any year, and notifying officers required to see that proper bond is on file of such revocation, terminates his liability, and no formal cancellation by such officers is necessary for that purpose. Id. Acts 29th Gen. Assem. c. 54, p. 33, relating to bonds of public officers, etc., and providing that sureties may procure cancellation of their liability thereon by giving 30 days' written notice, etc., held not to apply to liquor dealer's bond given under Code, § 2448. Id. Held further that neither said act nor Code, § 1183, referred to therein, requires any affirmative action by approving officers in canceling bond after giving of required notice, but that notice and return of unearned premium ipso facto operates as cancellation after expiration of 30 days. Id. Provision of Code, §§ 1283-1286, held not incorporated into act by reference to § 1183. Id.

42. Bond failing to provide that vendor would not violate any provisions of Comp. St. 1907, c. 50, and defective in other particulars, held insufficient. In re Clyde [Neb.] 118 NW 90; In re Johnson [Neb.] 118 NW 91. Is error for license board to approve bond not conditioned as required by Comp. St. 1907, c. 50, and to issue license thereon over objections of remonstrators. Id. Where city council erroneously accepted bond and issued license, held that applicant could not, on appeal to district court, cure defect by filing amended bond and thereby validate action of board. Id. Objections to bond by remonstrators held sufficient in view of fact that bond conditioned as required by statute is jurisdictional and is for benefit of all persons who may sue thereon. In re Johnson [Neb.] 118 NW 91.

43. For actions by state or municipality, see § 5, post; for actions by individuals aggrieved by breach, see § 9, post.

44. For exercise of local option by remonstrance against granting of any licenses, see § 2, ante. Burden is on remonstrators to prove specific allegations charged in remonstrance as reasons why license should not be granted. In re Phelps [Neb.] 116 NW 681. Laws 1906, p. 100, c. 1355, § 2, providing that no license shall be granted where owners of greater part of land within 200 feet of building or place file objection, held not unconstitutional as depriving owners of property without due process of law. American Woolen Co. v. North Smithfield Town Council, 28 R. I. 546, 68 A 719. Prescribed area held not limited to land within state so that objection by owners of greater part of land within 200 feet of premises within the state did not preclude granting of license, where they did not own greater part of land within prescribed area disregarding state boundary line. Id. Owner ordinarily means one who is seized of freehold estate and who owes no service to another which limits his dominion. American Woolen Co. v. North Smithfield Town Council [R. I.] 69 A 293. Lessees are not owners within meaning of statute. Id. One who owned fee title in street in front of premises subject only to public easement held owner of real estate within 25 feet of premises within meaning of Rev. Laws, c. 100, § 15, so as to entitle him to object to granting of license. Moran v. Gallagher, 199 Mass. 486, 85 NE 579.

45. Acts 1905, p. 7, c. 6, authorizing general or blanket remonstrance against granting licenses to any and all persons, held not to have affected or taken away previously existing right to remonstrate against granting of license to named individuals, and hence not to have affected powers of attorney to sign remonstrance against individuals previously given and executed according to law as it then existed. Nichols v. Lehman [Ind. App.] 85 NE 786. Right of remonstrance is personal privilege which is extended only to voter or voters. State v. Gorman [Ind.] 85 NE 763. No person can become party remonstrant under statute by filing remonstrance for first time after appeal has been taken on. The granting of licenses to hotels[46] and druggists[47] is sometimes made to depend on whether in the opinion of the licensing authorities, there is any reasonable necessity therefor. In some states a license may be refused when, in the opinion of the licensing authorities the place where the business is sought to be carried on is unsuitable,[48] and a denial of an application on that ground precludes the granting of a second application for a license for the same place within a specified time.[49] In some states a new license may not be granted within a specified time after the cancellation of a former one for violation of the liquor laws.[50] Matters relating to to circuit court from decision of board of commissioners. Id. County ordinance held to give board of supervisors authority to refuse license where majority of electors in any election district, residing within one mile of proposed saloon, sign and file written protest against granting of license, regardless of whether applicant is proper person to be licensed. Davis v. Board of Sup'rs [Cal. App.] 95 P 170. Ordinance held not unconstitutional as delegation of judicial powers conferred on board of supervisors. Id.

46. Whether there is any necessity for tavern at particular place depends upon whether or not there are persons who in going there naturally seek or desire accommodations at tavern in question, and not upon whether or not accommodations can be secured at another place. Schneider v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 770, 111 SW 303. Court held unable to say, in view of evidence, that no such necessity existed. Id. Evidence as to disorderly character of applicant's tavern held not such as to show abuse of discretion by county court in granting license. Id. Fact that receipts from bar were greater than those from tavern held not to show that applicant was not bona fide tavern keeper, or that keeping of tavern was mere device to enable him to sell intoxicants. Id. Provision of Act May 13, 1887, § 7 (P. L. 108), that court shall refuse license in all cases when in its opinion, "having due regard" to number and character of petitioners for and against such application, such license is not necessary for accommodation of public and entertainment of strangers or travelers, held not to require question to be determined in favor of side presenting weightiest petition in number and character of signers, quoted words meaning such regard as circumstances of case demand. Renzor Hotel Co.'s License, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 525. Proof that applicant's place is necessary as hotel for public accommodation does not necessarily compel conclusion that license to sell intoxicants at retail at such place is necessary, or entitle him to such license on compliance with other statutory requirements. Id. Refusal of license held not abuse of discretion. Id. Refusal of application after full hearing and consideration as not necessary does not make question of necessity res judicata upon hearing of application of same person for same premises in subsequent year. Id. Though refusal is not conclusive, court may, in exercise of sound judicial discretion, consider it in connection with other relevant facts established at hearing or known to court, particularly if conditions are unchanged. Id.

47. On application of registered pharmacist for permit to keep and sell intoxicants, question whether reasonable convenience and necessities of the people, considering population and all surroundings, make granting of permit proper, as required by Code, § 2389, is one to be determined by trial court under evidence, in exercise of sound discretion and judgment, and its finding should be sustained unless record shows abuse of discretion. In re Moore [Iowa] 118 NW 879. Held proper to permit witnesses to give their opinions as to whether reasonable necessities of people made granting of permit proper, where they stated facts with reference to which court was called upon to act in that respect. Id. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that granting of permit was proper. Id.

48. Court held to have properly treated fact that applicant for removal permit had agreed not to sell to employes in neighboring factories during certain hours as evidence of unsuitability of place. Appeal of Bormann [Conn.] 71 A 502.

49. Denial of application for license on ground that place specified was situated in locality in which there were saloons enough, as authorized by Gen. St. 1902, § 2645, held denial because commissioners deemed place unsuitable within meaning of Id. § 2646, prohibiting granting of second application during same license year for license for place for which license has already been refused on ground that it is unsuitable place. Appeal of D'Amato, 80 Conn. 357, 68 A 445. Denial of license on such ground held to preclude granting of application by same applicant for transfer to such place of license held by another person to run saloon in another place. Id. Statute applies though conditions affecting suitability of person or place which may have controlled commissioners in denying license have changed before expiration of license year. Id.

50. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 17, subd. 8, as amended by Laws 1908, c. 144, providing that no new certificate can be issued for year following date of conviction of certificate holder for certain crimes, held not to warrant refusal because of conviction of employe of certificate holder. People v. McKee, 112 NYS 338. Provision that where cancellation or forfeiture of certificate has been had by reason of suffering premises to become disorderly or permitting gambling thereon no new certificate shall be issued for said premises to any person for one statute held valid exercise of police power and constitutional. People v. McKee, 112 NYS 385. Revocation of previous license on insufficient grounds held not of itself ground for refusing to approve application for another license and bond accompanying it. Cox v. Jackson City Common Council, 152 Mich. 630, 15 Det. Leg. N. 337, 116 NW 456.

the deliberations of the licensing authorities,[51] and the form and contents of the license,[52] and the term for which it runs,[53] are regulated by statute. The assessment of mulct taxes[54] and proceedings to procure the listing of property for taxation[55] are purely statutory.

Provision is generally made for review by appeal or otherwise.[56]

51. Statutory application under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, §§ 8316 et seq., to obtain license, is statutory civil proceeding, and in determination of questions therein involved board of commissioners, either with or without a remonstrance, act judicially and not as an agent of the state. State v. Gorman [Ind.] 85 NE 763. State as such has no such interest in proceedings to obtain license as will entitle it to become party defendant on its application or to be recognized as such by board of commissioners in first instance or by circuit court on appeal from its decision, and court has no power or authority to admit state or attorney general as party defendant. Id. Proceeding is neither suit by or against state within meaning of Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 9269, providing that attorney general shall prosecute and defend all suits by and against state unless same is otherwise provided for after notice by clerk of court in which same is pending, and on appeal from decision of board clerk of circuit court is not required to notify attorney general. Id. Interest of state in general welfare of its citizens does not, in absence of statutory authority, give it right to become party. Id. Either board or court on appeal may of its own motion call and examine witnesses in regard to fitness of applicant, and may, if deemed necessary, authorize appearance of an amicus curiae. Id. Under Rev. St. 1899, §§ 5978, 5900, 5951, 5956, held that it is duty of board of aldermen of cities of fourth class to pass on sufficiency of petition for license, and mayor has no right to participate in proceedings except by way of advice or protest, or to vote in case of tie, or to review decision of board. State v. Russell [Mo. App.] 110 SW 667. Board of aldermen act judicially and not legislatively in passing on sufficiency of application and petition, so that their decision is conclusive and mayor has, in absence of fraud, no right to refuse to sign license granted by them because of insufficiency of petition. Id. Duty of mayor to sign license as required by § 5978 being ministerial, performance thereof may be compelled by mandamus. Id. Mayor in cities of second class may cast deciding vote in contest over application for license in case of tie vote of council. Statutes construed. In re Hastings Brew. Co. [Neb.] 119 NW 27.

52. Though word license as used in Gen. St. 1902, tit. 16, includes intangible right granted licensee as well as writing signed by commissioners, which is the instrument and evidence of that grant, there is nothing in statute authorizing grant of such right by commissioners otherwise than by writing signed by them, and specifying licensee and town and building in which sales are licensed to be made. Id. §§ 2669, 2672, 2673. Connecticut Brew. Co. v. Murphy [Conn.] 70 A 450. One not having written license signed by county commissioners licensing him to sell does not have license, and sales by him are illegal. Id.

53. Requirement of charter of city of Redwood Falls that all licenses shall commence and terminate on Jan. 20th of each year held not repealed by Gen. Laws 1895, c. 90, p. 211, or by Rev. Laws 1905, § 1522, but to be still in force. Evans v. Redwood Falls, 103 Minn. 314, 115 NW 200. Doctrine of unreasonableness held to apply only to city ordinances enacted pursuant to general charter powers over the subject-matter and not to statutes enacted by legislature. Id.

54. Mulct tax provided for by Code, §§ 2433-2437, as amended by Laws 1902, c. 95, held not a property tax but a charge against the person on account of business in which he is engaged. In re Des Moines Union R. Co., 137 Iowa, 730, 115 NW 740. County treasurer is without authority to assess mulct tax except upon request of party carrying on business as directed by Code, § 2448, par. 12, as amended, and cannot do so under Id. § 1374, providing that he shall assess "property subject to taxation" which has not been assessed. Id.

55. Under Code, §§ 2432, 2436, and Code Supp. §§ 2433, 2435, held that where assessor refuses to act three citizens may procure listing of persons and places for mulct tax after expiration of quarter year to which such listing and assessment is intended to have relation, and an assessment of taxes may in such cases be made thereon by auditor after expiration of such quarter. National Loan & Inv. Co. v. Board of Sup'rs [Iowa] 115 NW 480.

56. Jurisdiction and right to review: Under Laws 1905, c. 174, Cobbey's Ann. St. Supp. 1905, §§ 1702-1703c, final order of district court, rendered upon appeal from order of city council granting license, is reviewable in supreme court on appeal. In re Adamek [Neb.] 118 NW 109. Appeal from order revoking license for violation of law held within jurisdiction of criminal division of circuit court, though proceeding was not technically criminal or penal prosecution. Commonwealth v. Campbell, 32 Ky. L. R. 1131, 107 SW 797.

Effect of appeal on licenses issued; stay of proceedings: Where license is issued after hearing of application and remonstrance, and remonstrators appeal to district court within reasonable time, license should be recalled and revoked pending determination of appeal and mandamus will issue to compel such recall and revocation. State v. Rathsack [Neb.] 117 NW 949. Where stats commissioner was mads party to certiorari proceeding to compel special deputy commissioner to issue liquor tax certificate, held that his appeal from order directing deputy to issue certificate stayed all proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 1313, he being state officer within that section, and precluded punishment of deputy for contempt for failure to obey such order. People v. Judson, 112 NYS 408

Parties: Excise board is an aggrieved

Nature, effect and scope of licenses.[See 10 C. L. 480]—A license is not a contract giving vested or property rights but a mere temporary permit[57] which may be modified, annulled or revoked at any time.[58] It cannot be assigned without the consent of the licensing authorities.[59] The operation of a license is confined to the place party within meaning of Cobbey's St. 1907, § 7153, and may appeal from judgment of district court reversing action of board in refusing licenses to applicants. In re Jugenheimer [Neb.] 116 NW 966. Cities having excise boards, which are by statute given exclusive power to license and regulate sale of liquors, cannot appeal from order denying or granting license. In re Klamm [Neb.] 117 NW 991. City held entitled to be represented by city attorney on trial in circuit court of appeal from order revoking license, it being duty of commonwealth's attorney to aid in enforcing policy of city, etc. Commonwealth v. Campbell, 32 Ky. L. R. 1131, 107 SW 797. Even if commonwealth's attorney had authority to waive summons and advance appeal, held that he should have done neither without notice to city attorney and giving him opportunity to be present at trial. Id. Licensee held proper party to certiorari proceedings to review action of county court in granting license, both because of his interest and because adjudication would finally determine his right to a license. State v. Denton, 128 Mo. App. 304, 107 SW 446.

Notice: City held entitled to notice of appeal by licensee from order revoking license so that judgment of circuit court restoring license after trial without summons or notice to city, license board, or city attorney, was invalid. St. 1903, §§ 3034, 986, 987, Civ. Code Prac. §§ 724, 51. Commonwealth v. Campbell, 32 Ky. L. R. 1131, 107 SW 797.

Transfer of case: On appeal by remonstrators from decision of licensing board granting license, jurisdiction is conferred on district court by giving notice of intended appeal and filing, within reasonable time in said court, transcript of proceedings had upon hearing before board. In re Foltyn [Neb.] 118 NW 119. It is no ground for dismissing appeal that transcript of proceedings had before board upon the hearing is defective either in substance or in certification, but such defect may be reached and considered by motion to strike from the files or on hearing on merits. Id. That certified transcript of evidence taken before licensing board is not filed with transcript of proceedings of board upon such hearing is no ground for dismissing appeal, but district court may compel board to furnish such transcript. Id.

Scope of review: Questions presented on appeal under Gen. St. 1902 from decision of county commissioners on application for removal permit are, have commissioners acted legally, and have they exceeded or abused their powers. Appeal of Bormann [Conn.] 71 A 502. On appeal from refusal of county commissioners to grant license, question whether commissioners exceeded their authority in granting renewal license to former occupant after purchase of premises by second applicant, but before his deed was recorded, held not open to consideration where no appeal was taken from granting of renewal. Appeal of Stavole [Conn.] 71 A 549. Proceeding on application by registered pharmacist for permit to sell intoxicants is special one, and in absence of provision that trial shall be as in equity case, appellate court can interfere with judgment only where there has been manifest abuse of discretion by trial court. In re Moore [Iowa] 118 NW 879. Determination of trial court, on conflicting evidence, that applicant had not unlawfully sold or kept for sale intoxicants at his place of business, not disturbed. Id.

57. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865; Hill v. Sheridan, 128 Mo. App. 415, 107 SW 426; Krueger v. Colville [Wash.] 95 P 81.

58. For grounds of revocation and procedure, see Revocation, Cancellation and Surrender, post, this section. In exercise of police power license may be revoked without judicial proceedings. Claussen v. Luverns, 103 Minn. 491, 115 NW 643. Municipality is not liable in tort for mistaken action of city council in attempting to revoke license. Id. License issued by board of county commissioners is subject to power of any city or village to prohibit sale of intoxicants within its limits, and one procuring county and state license is subject to provisions of law granting power of prohibiton to municipalities. Gale v. Moscow [Idaho] 97 P 828. Dramshop keeper has no vested right to continue use of bar fixtures for sale of liquor because he can put them to no other use, and Laws 1907, p. 297, providing for local option, is not unconstitutional as depriving dramshop keepers of property without due process of law. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 2935, authorizing forfeiture of license for violation of its terms, held not unconstitutional as depriving licensee of his property without due process of law. Kruger v. Colville [Wash.] 95 P 81.

59. Burch v. Ocilla [Ga. App.] 62 SE 666. License issued by city of second class is not transferable unless transfer is authorized by ordinance, and then only in manner and form prescribed. Hill v. Sheridan, 128 Mo. App. 415, 107 SW 426. Best evidence that city consented to and participated in transfer of license held to be license itself with transfer to defendant indorsed thereon. Id. To render book claimed to be record of licenses kept by city auditor admissible to show such consent, held that it should have been identified as such record, and the entries relating to transaction in controversy then offered in evidence. Id. Oral testimony of transferror held wholly incompetent to show valid transfer. Id. Use of license or right to traffic in liquors under it cannot be transferred without consent of state upon application duly made and an undertaking given. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 27. David Mayer Brew. Co. v. Mack, 110 NYS 245.

Contract for unauthorized transfer void: Agreement to pay licensee for use of liquor tax certificate held void as against public policy, so that no recovery could be had thereon. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 27. David Mayer Brew. Co. v. Mack, 110 NYS 245. Plaintiff held not entitled to recover value specified therein,[60] though provision for obtaining a removal permit is often made.[61]

Revocation, cancellation and surrender. See 10 C. L. 481—The right to revoke has already been considered.[62] Grounds of revocation may consist either of matters antedating the issuance of the license[63] or of a subsequent violation of the laws relating to the sale of intoxicants.[64] Discretionary power to revoke without cause is sometimes conferred on the licensing authorities.[65] Quo warranto is held to be the proper remedy to challenge the validity of a license.[66] of unexpired license transferred by him to defendant where he did not prove ordinance authorizing such transfer without which there could be no valid sale. Hill v. Sheridan, 128 Mo. App. 415, 107 SW 426. Nor was he in position to claim benefit of presumption of right acting on part of city officials where he offered no competent evidence to show that city consented to and participated in attempted transfer. Id.

60. Under St. 1903, § 4198, one cannot run two barrooms in separate and distinct buildings under one license. Huber v. Com., 33 Ky. L. R. 1031, 112 SW 583. Fact that he owns both buildings does not affect question. Id. One operating two bars in separate and distinct buildings under one license cannot contend that he cannot be punished for maintaining either without license because maintenance of one or the other is lawful. Id. In any event cannot raise such contention where one bar was opened after he had located license by opening other. Id. Action of commonwealth in fining him for running one of such bars held election to recognize other as one which was licensed. Id. On prosecution of one running two bars under one license for selling without license, evidence that other men in county were running two bars under one license, and that county officials had so construed statute, held inadmissible. Id.

61. Gen. St. 1902, § 2669, authorizing granting of removal permit to licensee, held not to authorize or require commissioners to hear and determine application for permit brought by one not a licensee. Appeal of D'Amato, 80 Conn. 357, 68 A 445. Though application under § 2669, and application under § 2671, by licensee for transfer of his license to another person, may be heard at same time, yet they are distinct, and special process of appeal for obtaining interposition of court to limit action of commissioners within their legal powers applies to one and not to other. Id. Application may, in applying provisions of § 2645, be treated as in effect an original application for license when result of granting it would be to unduly increase number of saloons in particular locality. Appeal of Bormann [Conn.] 71 A 502. Held not to have been so treated where it appeared that transfer would have resulted in only one saloon in vicinity. Id.

62. See Nature, Effect and Scope of Licenses, ante, this section.

63. For false statements in application for license. People v. Pettit, 113 NYS 243.

64. Ordinance required application for license to contain express agreement that if licensee should be convicted once in any year "of a violation of the state law" and in same year of violation of ordinance such conviction should be sufficient reason for revoking license and from debarring licensee from thereafter engaging in saloon business in city. Held that state law referred to law or laws governing sale of intoxicants only and that conviction in same year of violation of some other law and of ordinance was no ground for revoking license or refusing application for another license. Cox v. Jackson City Common Council, 152 Mich. 630, 15 Det. Leg. N. 337, 116 NW 456. Agreement of applicant held agreement in terms no broader than ordinance. Id. Judgment in certiorari proceeding to review action of council in revoking license held not conclusive on question in subsequent mandamus proceeding to compel issuance of another license. Id. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 28, subd. 2, as amended by Laws 1900, c. 367, § 9. For selling within half mile of state hospital. In re Clement, 110 NYS 57. County court held to have no authority to revoke license for any cause other than failure at all times to keep an orderly house as provided by Ann. St. 1906, § 3012, there being no provision for revocation for selling to minors. State v. Lichta, 130 Mo. App. 284, 109 SW 825. Fact that dramshop keeper on one occasion sold liquor to two minors held not to authorize revocation of license. Id. Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 2935, providing that licensee violating terms of license shall forfeit same and also be liable to other penalties imposed by law for illegal sale of intoxicants, held not unconstitutional as imposing excessive penalty. Krueger v. Colville [Wash.] 95 P 81. Town held to have authority, under Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 2935, to forfeit license where licensee pleaded guilty to selling to minors. Id.

65. City council held to have such power under Pierce's Code, §§ 5714, 5715, Bal. Ann. Codes & St. §§ 2934, 2935, and that exercise thereof would not be reviewed by courts. State v. Pierce County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 97 P 778.

66. Validity of dramshop license. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 112, § 1, p. 1549. People v. Heidelberg Garden Co., 233 Ill. 290, 84 NE 230, afg. 124 Ill. App. 331. Defendant in quo warranto need only show prima facie right and is not required to anticipate matter that should come from other side. Id. Though information showed that defendant had license to keep dramshop in particular part of city, pleas setting out city ordinances relative to licenses, and alleging compliance therewith, held not demurrable for failure to show compliance with regulations in force in such particular part of city, it not appearing from pleadings that different regulations applied there, and, if they did, that being matter to be set up in replication. Id. Held that court would not take judicial notice that such was case, it being necessary to plead municipal ordinances. Id.

It is generally held that the licensee cannot recover any part of the license fee on the revocation of his license before its expiration,[67] unless the statute so provides,[68] though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard.[69] Provision is sometimes made for a rebate on the voluntary surrender of a license for cancellation.[70]

Revocation proceedings are entirely statutory,[71] and the various statutes must be looked to for the purpose of determining matters of practice and procedure,[72]

67. Legal representatives of deceased licensee cannot recover any part of amount paid for such license because of licensee's death, though license is thereby revoked. Wood v. School Dist. No. 32 [Neb.] 115 NW 308. Municipality held not required to return unearned portion of license fee on revocation, under Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 2935, of license of one who pleaded guilty to selling to minor. Krueger v. Colville [Wash.] 95 P 81. Contention that as licensee had paid fine imposed on his plea of guilty he ought not to be held liable on bond and, in addition thereto, forfeit fee, held untenable. Id. City issued license and received prescribed fee. Thereafter state law raised fee for that county and licensee, without any interference or direction from city authorities, ceased doing business, and before license expired applied for return of unearned portion of fee. Application was not acted upon until after expiration of license, when it was granted. Held that, city not having terminated license and no steps having been taken to refund money before license expired, fee passed absolutely to city, and repayment of any portion thereof would be enjoined at instance of citizens. City of Fitzgerald v. Witchard, 130 Ga. 552, 61 SE 227. In action to recover money paid in monthly instalments for saloon license, held that payments were voluntary and hence could not be recovered. Eslow v. Albion [Mich.] 15 Det. Leg. N. 608, 117 NW 328. Held proper to refuse to permit plaintiff to introduce receipt, agreement and protest made year before on payment of license fee under another ordinance, which fee was returned on ordinance being held invalid. Id.

68. Provision of Laws 1907, p. 297, requiring return of unearned license fees on creation of anti-saloon territory, held not unconstitutional as an attempt to compel municipality to incur a debt. People v. McBride, 234 Ill. 146, 84 NE 865. Constitutional limitation of municipal indebtedness held not to apply to case where municipality has received money for licenses which it ought to refund. Id. Provision held within general subject of title of act. Id. Provision held not void as changing charters of municipalities, etc., since powers and privileges of municipalities may be changed, modified or taken away at any time by general law. Id. In any event held that if such provision was void it would not affect validity of rest of act. Id. Provision held not invalid as giving persons residing outside city right to determine use of money in city, since general law, and not voters, determines whether license fee shall be refunded or not. Id.

69. Licensee held entitled to recover back unearned portion of license fee where, without fault on his part, he was compelled to go out of business by adoption of prohibitory clause of constitution. Allsman v. Oklahoma City [Okl.] 95 P 468. Held further that such sum could be recovered in action in nature of assumpsit, since it was money of plaintiff in hands of defendant which latter in equity and good conscience had no right to retain. Id.

70. Under Laws 1896, c. 112, § 25, as amended by Laws 1903, c. 486, when construed in connection with Laws 1896, c. 112, § 34, as amended by Laws 1908, c. 350, held that one under arrest for previous violation of liquor tax law when certificate was issued, and who was convicted thereof prior to surrender of certificate for cancellation, was not entitled to rebate. People v. Clement, 128 App. Div. 539, 112 NYS 951, rvg. 58 Misc. 631, 111 NYS 1033. Held further that, in view of Laws 1896, c. 112, § 23, as amended by Laws 1905, c. 680, providing that no person convicted of violation of act shall traffic in liquors for three years from date of conviction, such person was not one "authorized to sell liquors" under the act within meaning of § 25, as amended, and hence neither he nor his assignees were entitled to rebate. Id. Finding of guilty held conviction of violation of liquor tax law within Laws 1896, c. 112, § 25, though sentence had been suspended and never been imposed, and hence statement of applicant that he had not been convicted of violation of said law within three years was false, though time within which sentence could have been imposed had then expired, and he was not "authorized to sell liquors under the provisions of the act" and was not entitled to rebate. Koehler & Co. v. Clement, 111 NYS 151.

71. Board of license commissioners held to have no jurisdiction to rescind vote of preceding board granting license, proper procedure in case it was claimed former board had no jurisdiction to grant license being by petition to court for certiorari, or, in case it was desired to revoke license, by proceedings for revocation under Pub. Gen. Laws 1898, p. 37, c. 543, § 2, amending Gen. Laws 1896, c. 102, § 12. Dziok v. Central Falls Board of License Com'rs, 28 R. I. 526, 68 A 479; Ferron v. Central Falls Board of License Com'rs, 28 R. I. 529, 68 A 480.

72. Proceedings for cancellation of liquor tax certificate may be instituted within 30 days after holder has delivered them to commissioner of excise for surrender. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 25, subd. 2. In re Clement, 57 Misc. 319, 109 NYS 538. Objection that proceeding could not be maintained because begun more than 30 days after surrender of certificate by defendant for cancellation overruled. In re Clement, 112 NYS 337. Under Laws 1896, c. 112, § 28, as amended by Laws 1906, c. 272, order to show cause why liquor tax certificate shall not be canceled must be made returnable before justice or including questions relating to notice.[73] Such proceedings are usually subject to review.[74] A revocation absolutely cancels the license.[75]

Payment and collection of fee or tax. See 10 C. L. 433—A privilege tax may be recovered from one selling in violation of law.[76]

§ 4. Regulation of traffic. See 10 C. L. 433—Regulatory and prohibitive statutes are usually confined to liquors that are intoxicating.[77] There seems to be con-

judge granting it, or before special term. In re Judkins, 110 NYS 587. Order required holder to show cause at regular term of supreme court to be held at court house on certain date and at certain time. Held that naming of term would be considered merely as indication of place where justice would hear motion, and order would be regarded as returnable before justice, and objection that there was no special term then in session at which motion could be heard was properly overruled, it appearing that no prejudice resulted. Id.

73. Licensee and owner of property must be given statutory notice before court of common pleas can revoke license to keep inn and tavern in summary proceeding under § 10 of act to regulate sale of liquors, as amended in 1906 (P. L. 1906, pp. 199, 201, § 3). Tindall v. Monmouth Common Pleas [N. J. Law] 68 A 799. Fact that holder of license has been convicted in court of quarter sessions of same county of offense for which his license became forfeited and void held not to dispense with necessity for such notice. Id.

74. Though county court in revoking dramshop license acts as administrative agent of state, it is a constitutional court and acts in its character of a court of record, and cannot divest itself of that character by mere fact that function exercised at the time is ministerial or administrative one, and hence certiorari will lie to review its action if it had no jurisdiction to revoke license for cause alleged, or if it exceeded its jurisdiction. State v. Lichta, 130 Mo. App. 284, 109 SW 825. County court in revoking license on charge of not at all times keeping an orderly house does not exercise judicial function, but it does exercise judicial power in determining whether or not charges bring case within its jurisdiction to revoke license. Id.

75. Judgment of forfeiture held to have operated on license which had expired by limitation and not to have affected new one in force when it was issued. Cuirczak v. Keron [N. J. Law] 70 A 366.

76. Acts 1903, p. 599, c. 257, making business of retailing liquor privilege and imposing tax thereon, covers whole state and all sales, whether legal or illegal, and hence tax may be collected from one selling at place within four miles of school house. Foster v. Speed [Tenn.] 111 SW 925. Statute does not allow sales where prohibited by four-mile limit law, and there is no conflict between the two. Id.

77. Rev. Code, § 2834, requiring license to sell "any spirituous, vinous, malt, brewed, fermented or other intoxicating liquors" at retail, held to class all liquors therein mentioned as intoxicating, and to make it unnecessary for state, in prosecution for selling any liquors within such classes without license, to show that they were in fact intoxicating. State v. Ely [S. D.] 118 NW 687. Sale without license of any mixture containing any percentage of intoxicating liquor, or any mixture containing vinous, malt, or fermented liquor, is violation of law. Id. Words "alcoholic, spirituous, and malt liquors," as used in prohibition statute (Acts 1907, p. 81), mean intoxicating liquors which can be used as beverage and which, when drunk to excess, will produce intoxication. Roberts v. State [Ga. App.] 60 SE 1082. If liquid cannot be used as intoxicating drink because of other ingredients, or is not intoxicating because it does not contain sufficient amount of alcohol to cause intoxication when drunk to excess, it is not within prohibition of the statute, though it does contain an appreciable quantity of alcohol or spirituous liquor as one of its ingredients. Instruction held erroneous. Id. "Intoxicating liquors," or mixture thereof, mean liquors which will intoxicate and which are commonly used as beverages for such purpose, and also any mixture of such liquors as, retaining their alcoholic qualities, may be used as beverage and become substitute for ordinary intoxicating drinks. Id. Mere presence of alcohol does not bring liquor within prohibition, but there must be sufficient quantity to produce intoxication when drunk to excess. Id. Medicinal, toilet, and culinary preparations, recognized as such by standard authority, not intended to be used as intoxicating beverages and not reasonably capable of being so used, are not embraced within terms "alcoholic and spirituous liquors," though they are liquid, contain alcohol, and may produce intoxication. Id. Whether liquor is intoxicating depends upon its potableness and its intoxicating power. O'Connell v. State [Ga. App.] 62 SE 1007. Power to intoxicate does not mean power to make one dead drunk or foolishly drunk, but one is intoxicated whenever he is so much under influence of intoxicants that they affect his acts, conduct, or movements so that parties coming in contact with him or public could readily see and know that it was so affecting him. Id. White's Ann. Pen. Code 1895, art. 411a, does not apply to nonintoxicating malt liquors. Hardwick v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 114 SW 832. On prosecution for violating local option law, evidence must show that liquor was whisky, which is judicially known to be intoxicating, or, if not, that it was capable of producing intoxication. Beaty v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 432, 110 SW 449. Held error, under evidence, to refuse instruction submitting question of intoxicating quality of liquor sold. Ross v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 604, 108 SW 375. Instruction to acquit, if liquor sold by another under defendant's authorization was not intoxicating, or if defendant believed that it was not, held sufficiently favorable to defendant. Southworth v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 532, 109 SW 133. Fact that in answer to order for whisky defendant produced liquid to fill order held evidence that such liquid was whisky. People v. Marx, 112 NYS 1011. Evidence held insufficient to warrant finding that beverage sold was intoxicating. Schwulst v. State, 52 Tex. Cr. App. 426, 108 SW 698. Word "beer" when employed in connection with sales in place where intoxicating liquors are usually sold means an intoxicating drink. Hall v. People, 134 Ill. App. 559. Evidence held to justify finding that beer sold was intoxicating. Schmidt v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. App. 465, 110 SW 897. On prosecution for furnishing liquor to minor in violation of Pen. Code 1895, § 444, intoxicating character of liquor furnished, though called grape juice, held sufficiently shown by testimony of minor that he drank two quarts of it and it made him drunk. Askew v. State [Ga. App.] 61 SE 737. On prosecution for selling without license in violation of Acts 1904, c. 20, § 141, evidence held to show that cider sold by defendant did not contain more than percentage of alcohol specified by Acts 1906, p. 307, c. 181, and hence that he was entitled to verdict in his favor. Devine v. Com., 107 Va. 860, 60 SE 37.

78. Distribution of intoxicants among members of club constitutes sale within meaning of law. State v. Johns [Iowa] 118 NW 295. Where defendant, on prosecution for maintaining nuisance, contended that distribution of intoxicants among club members was not sale, held that he could not complain of instruction accepting such definition and authorizing conviction, even if liquors were not kept in place for sale, if they were kept for distribution through instrumentality of club. State v. Johns [Iowa] 118 NW 295. Sales of liquor by incorporated club to members held to make it retail liquor dealer, within meaning of Rev. Pol. Code §§ 2834, 2835, 2838, so that, where it had no license, its agent who made such sales was guilty of misdemeanor, under Id. § 2852. State v. Mudie [S. D.] 115 NW 107. Transactions whereby incorporated club gave liquor to members in exchange for checks purchased by them from it held sales. Id. Rev. Civ. Code, §§ 415, 742, 740, 411, 182, relating to corporations, construed and held that incorporated commercial club, whose articles provided that members should not be liable for its debts, and not its members, was owner of liquors kept by it for distribution to members only in exchange for checks for which they paid. Id. Under Laws 1905, p. 48, § 15, providing that any person who shall sell, exchange, or give away, with purpose of evading provisions of local option law, any intoxicants in dry territory, shall be subject to prosecution, held that act of incorporated social club in dispensing intoxicants to a member, with intent to pass title thereto, constitutes sale. State v. Kline [Or.] 93 P 237. Use of words "sale or gift" in instructions referring to such a transaction held proper under circumstances. Id. When prohibition law becomes operative in county as result of local option election, it, ex proprio vigore, inhibits all social clubs within that territory from selling or giving to their members intoxicants with purpose of evading said law, clubs not being included within exceptions enumerated in § 2. Id.

NOTE. Social clubs as retailers of intoxicating liquors: It has been held that a bona fide social club may serve its members and invited guests with liquors without being liable to pay a retail liquor dealer's license, where only the members pay therefor and the receipts are used to replenish the stock of liquor and are insufficient for that purpose (Tennessee Club v. Dwyer, 11 Lea [Tenn.] 452, 47 Am. Rep. 298; State v Austin Club, 89 Tex. 20, 33 SW 113, 30 L. R. A. 500; Piedmont Club v. Com., 87 Va. 540, 12 SE 963), and the same has been held in the case of a social club dispensing liquors to its members from a stock owned in common, such not being a sale within the statutory meaning (State v. St. Louis Club, 125 Mo. 308, 28 SW 604, 26 L. R. A. 573; State v. McMaster, 35 S. C. 1, 14 SE 290, 28 Am. St. Rep. 826; Graff v. Evans, L. R. 8 Q. B. D. 373; Newell v. Hemingway, L. J. R. 53 Q. B. D. 46; Davies v. Burnett, L. R. 1 K. B. D. 666), where such liquors are not sold at a profit (Barden v. Montana Club, 10 Mont. 330, 25 P 1042, 24 Am. St. Rep. 27, 11 L. R. A. 593), and the sales are merely incidental to the club organization and functions (State v. Austin Club, 89 Tex. 20, 33 SW 113, 30 L. R. A. 500; Manassas Club v. Mobile, 121 Ala. 561, 25 S 628; Commonwealth v. Ewig, 145 Mass. 119, 13 NE 365; People v. Adelphi Club, 149 N. Y. 5, 43 NE 410, 52 Am. St. Rep. 700, 31 L. R. A. 510 [expressly overruling People v. Sinell, 34 N. Y. St. Rep. 898, 12 NYS 40; People v. Bradley, 33 N. Y. St. Rep. 562, 11 NYS 594, and People v. Luhrs, 7 Misc. 503, 28 NYS 498, afd. in 79 Hun, 415, 29 NYS 789; explained and distinguished in People v. Andrews, 115 N. Y. 427, 22 NE 358, 6 L. R. A. 128, rvg. 50 Hun, 591, 3 NYS 508]; Klein v. Livingston, 177 Pa. 224, 35 A 606, 55 Am. St. Rep. 717, 34 L. R. A. 94, [followed in Commonwealth v. Smith, 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 474, and overruling Commonwealth v. Steffner, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 152]), and that, further, such a club is not subject to laws regulating the retail liquor traffic generally (Koenig v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. App. 367, 26 SW 835, 47 Am. St. Rep. 35; Winters v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. App. 395, 26 SW 839; Grant v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. App. 527, 27 SW 127), and that a member of such a club (Commonwealth v. Pomphret, 137 Mass. 564, 50 Am. Rep. 340), or one handling the stock of liquors for the members (Commonwealth v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144), is not a dealer in liquors, within the statutory meaning. Laws forbidding the sale of liquor on Sunday have been held to prohibit the dispensing of liquors to club members on that day (State v. Easton Club, 73 Md. 97, 20 A 783, 10 L. R. A. 64; State v. Horacek, 41 Kan. 87, 21 P 204, 3 L. R. A. 687; State v. Lockyear, 35 N. C. 633, 59 Am. Rep. 287; Krnavek v. State, 38 Tex. Cr. App. 44, 41 SW 612). Previously the Maryland court had held the contrary view (Siem v. State, 55 Md. 566, 39 Am. Rep. 419), and later was equally divided upon this point (Chesapeake Club v. State, 63 Md. 446), but, by statute in that state, the Sunday prohibition is now extended to clubs specifically (State v. Maryland Club, 105 Md. 585, 66 A 867). The general doctrine of immunity of bona fide social clubs from regulation as retailers of liquor has been repudiated in some jurisdictions and such regulations held applicable both to the club itself (State v. Essex Club, 53 N. J. Law, 99, 20 A 769; Army & Navy Club v. Dist. of Col., 8 App. D. C. 544; Beauvoir Club v. State, 148 Ala. 643, 42 S 1040, 121 Am. St. Rep. 82; Mohrman v. State, 105 Ga. 709, 32 SE 143, 70 Am. St. Rep. 74, 43 L. R. A. 398; Marmont v. State, 48 Ind. 21; State v. Boston Club, 45 La. Ann. 585, 12 S 895, 20 L. R. A. 185; University Club v. Ratterman, 3 Ohio C. C. 18; People v. Soule, 74 Mich. 250, 41 NW 908, 2 L. R. A. 494. See, also, the overruled New York decisions following the supposed doctrine of People v. Andrews, infra) and to employes thereof (Martin v. State, 59 Ala. 34; State v. Neis, 108 N. C. 787, 13 SE 225, 12 L. R. A. 412; State v. Lockyear, 95 N. C. 633, 59 Am. Rep. 287), and it has been held that dispensing liquors to club members constitutes a sale within the statutory meaning (State v. Mudie [S. D.] 115 NW 107; People v. Law & Order Club, 203 Ill. 127, 67 NE 855, 62 L. R. A. 884; South Shore Country Club v. People, 228 Ill. 75, 81 NE 805, 12 L. R. A. [N. S.] 519, 119 Am. St. Rep. 417). The recent case of State v. Minnesota Club [Minn.] 119 NW 494 holds that a bona fide social club is within the statute requiring persons dispensing liquors in quantities of less than five gallons to take out a retailer's license. This case expressly disapproves the doctrine of State v. Adelphi Club, and Commonwealth v. Pomphret, supra, two justices dissenting upon the ground (inter alia) that the statute is a police rather than a revenue regulation, and is, hence, inapplicable in such cases. The still more recent case of Cuzner v. California Club [Cal.] 100 P 868 holds that such regulations do not apply to clubs. The United States revenue tax imposed upon retail liquor dealers generally is held to apply to clubs (United States v. Wittig, 2 Low. Dec. 466, Fed. Cas. No. 16,748). That clubs organized solely for the purpose of selling liquor to members are subject to laws regulating the retail traffic is not disputed (State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa, 405; Sutton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 40 SW 501; Feige v. State, 49 Tex. Cr. App. 513, 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 425, 95 SW 506; Adkins v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 95 SW 509; Rickard v. People, 79 Ill. 85; Commonwealth v. Ewig, 145 Mass. 119, 13 NE 265; State v. Tindall, 40 Mo. App. 271; Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302, 92 NW 303; Commonwealth v. Tierney, 148 Pa. 552, 24 A 64; Commonwealth v. Brown, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 104; Commonwealth v. Alfa, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 454). This was in effect the decision in People v. Andrews, 115 N. Y. 427, 22 NE 358, 6 L. R. A. 128, rvg. 50 Hun, 591, 3 NYS 508, but, through a misapprehension of its scope, this case was taken as authority for applying such laws to bona fide social clubs in People v. Sinell, 34 N. Y. St. Rep. 898, 12 NYS 40; People v. Bradley, 83 N. Y. St. Rep. 562, 11 NYS 594, and People v. Luhrs, 7 Misc. 503, 28 NYS 498, afd. in 79 Hun, 415, 29 NYS 789, a line of decisions expressly overruled in People v. Adelphi Club, 149 N. Y. 5, 43 NE 410, 52 Am. St. Rep. 700, 31 L. R. A. 510. 79. Acts 1907, c. 16, § 1, held not in conflict with Const. art. 4, § 19, subject embraced therein being fully expressed in title. Donovan v. State [Ind.] 83 NE 744. Fact that subjects of other sections or any of them may not be expressed in title of act held not to affect validity of § 1, under express provisions of said section of the constitution. Id. Affidavit, which was made and filed March 12, 1907, and charged offense to have been committed after taking effect of Acts 1907, c. 16, which took effect Feb. 13, 1907, held to be governed by that act and not by Acts 1907, c. 293, which took effect March 16, 1907. Id. On prosecution for maintaining place for selling and giving away liquor without license in violation of Kirby's Dig. § 5140, instructions predicating guilt on selling or giving away, or keeping for sale or gift, by any device, held erroneous, statute not being aimed at sales or gifts but at maintenance of place. State v. Black [Ark.] 111 SW 993. Refusal of instruction substantially in language of §§ 5140, 5141, as amended by Acts 1907, p. 1106, held error. Id. Evidence held to shew violation of said statute. Id. Municipality may, under general welfare clause of its charter, enact and enforce ordinance prohibiting maintenance of a "blind tiger," notwithstanding provisions of state prohibition act of 1907, there being substantial distinction between such offense and offenses of selling liquors illegally or keeping them on hand in public places of business denounced by said act. Callaway v. Mims [Ga. App.] 62 SE 654; Coggins v. Griffin [Ga. App.] 62 SE 659. Incorporation by city council into its laws and ordinances of provisions of Kirby's Dig. §§ 5140-5146, 5137, prohibiting sales of liquor by blind tigers, and authorizing their destruction, held to have made such provisions valid ordinances of city. Id. § 5463. City of Searcy v. Turner [Ark.] 114 SW 472.

Among the most common regulations are: prohibiting the keeping of a place where liquors are sold in violation of law;[79] prohibiting the storing,[80] keeping,[81] or pos-

80. Ordinance prohibiting storing of intoxicants for purpose of selling same held not ultra vires because not in terms limiting sale of such liquors to territorial limits of city, presumption being that such was intention. La Fitte v. Ft. Collins, 43 Colo. 299, 95 P 927.

81. Evidence held sufficient to go to jury. State v. Dobbins [N. C.] 62 SE 635. Municipality may, under general welfare clause of its charter, prohibit offense of keeping intoxicants on hand for purpose of illegal sale, notwithstanding general prohibition law of 1907, gist of crimes created by latter act being entirely different from offense created by ordinance. Callaway v. Mims [Ga. App.] 62 SE 654; Coggins v. Griffin [Ga. App.] 62 SE 659. On prosecution under ordinance making it unlawful to "keep a blind tiger, or keep for illegal sale" any intoxicants, held that it was not necessary to show continuous keeping or illegal sales, words "or keeping for illegal sale," etc., not being restricted in their meaning by association in context with word "blind tiger." Coggins v. Griffin [Ga. App.] 62 SE 659. Keeping of liquor and purpose of keeping may be inferred from single sale. Id.

session[82] of liquors for the purpose of disposing of them in violation of law; prohibiting selling without a license,[83] or in prohibition[84] or local option[85] territory;

82. Element of place held not to enter into offense of being found in possession of intoxicants for purpose of selling, bartering, or giving them away in violation of laws of state, denounced by Acts 1907, p. 27, c. 16 (Burns' Ann. St. 1908, § 8337). Barnhardt v. State [Ind.] 86 NE 481.
