23. Where the proceeding was based on an affidavit by one party, "as agent of" another, that the tenant was indebted "to him" for rent, on which a warrant was issued in the name of affiant "as agent of" the other, the proceeding was by the affiant, the words "as agent of" etc., being merely descriptive; and the relation between him and defendant not being that of landlord and tenant, verdict was properly for defendant. Stephens v. Hooks [Ga.] 50 S. E. 119.

24. Where a lessee under a gas lease mingled the gas from the demised premises with that of other parties so as to constitute a confusion of goods and had to account to such parties for the value of all the gas, the lessor is in no such privity with the other parties as to enable him to collect from them the royalty on his gas which was mingled with theirs. Aiken v. Zahn, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 411.

25. Comp. Laws Mich. 1897, c. 308, §§ 24, 25. Schellenberg v. Frank [Mich.] 102 N. W. 644.

26. The legislature has power to compel a landlord to make such an election. Schellenberg v. Frank [Mich.] 102 N. W. 644.

27. Rent to a later period will not be awarded even though tendered, the election being against the tender. Williams v. Mangum [Ga.] 50 S. E. 110.

28. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 63, cls. "a," "b" (30 Stat. at L. 562, 563; 3 U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3447). Watson v. Merrill [C. C. A.] 136 F. 359.

29. In re Winfield Mfg. Co., 140 F. 185.

30. Mineral R. & Min. Co. v. Flaherty, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 236.

31. See 4 C. L. 406.

32. International Trust Co. v. Weeks [C. C. A.] 139 F. 5. Where, in such a case of reletting, the rental was greater than that paid by the original lessee, the latter could not be credited with the excess over his rental, in an action by the lessor for rent accruing before the breach. Richardson v. Gordon [Mass.] 74 N. E. 344. Nor for loss of rent resulting from a re-lease to lessee's sublessee at a lower rent, when it did not appear that a greater rental could have been

tion of landlord and tenant exists.[35] The proceedings by which a landlord seizes goods under a distraint being statutory must be strictly pursued.[36] If the seizure is irregular it is trespass;[37] if regular, but the subsequent steps do not conform to the statute, the landlord becomes a trespasser ab initio.[38] As far as the liability for a tortious sale is concerned, it is immaterial whether the property belongs to a tenant or to a stranger.[39] For a wrongful distress, a tenant may bring replevin.[40] A constable who distrains and sells under a landlord's warrant is the agent of the landlord and not a public officer, and the presumption in favor of the legality of the proceedings of officers of the law does not apply in such cases.[41] A waiver of exemptions as against levy and sale for arrears and rent applies only to proceedings by distress and not generally to all debts for rent without regard to the process of collection.[42]

Attachment.[43]—The appropriation, otherwise than by attachment or execution, of furniture or other property found on demised premises, does not amount to an election by the landlord to hold the agent rather than the principal for the balance of unpaid rent.[44]

Liens and securities for payment of rent.[45]—Aside from liens acquired by process or distraint[46] various statutes give a lien to the landlord under certain prescribed conditions.[47] A landlord's statutory lien upon the crops may be asserted against the products or the purchaser thereof;[48] but the receipt by the landlord knowingly of part of the proceeds of an alleged wrongful sale of cotton by his tenant, on which he had a lien, constituted a ratification of the sale, depriving him of the right of possession as against the purchaser,[49] and where a landlord assents to his tenant's parol agreement to furnish a quantity of rice to secure the payment of a loan to assist in raising the same, he may become liable for interference with the tenant's performance by appropriating the rice himself.[50] The surrender of obtained, or that reserved was not a fair rental. Id.

33. See 4 C. L. 406.

34. Furniture in a leased house, specifically bequeathed to a daughter, who with other children and an aunt occupied the house, was not exempt from distraint for rent that accrued after the death of testatrix, on the ground that it was in the custody of the law for purposes of administration. Fidelity Trust Co. v. Cook, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 142.

35. Where the entry was under one holding adversely to another, the latter is not the landlord of the tenant. See Civ. Code 1895, § 3116. Sims v. Price [Ga.] 50 S. E. 961. The goods of a boarder are not liable to distraint for rent due from the boarding house keeper. Oliver v. Wheeler, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 5.

36. Oliver v. Wheeler, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 5; Ramsdell v. Seybert, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 133.

37. Ramsdell v. Seybert, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 133.

38. Oliver v. Wheeler, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 5; Ramsdell v. Seybert, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 133.

39. Oliver v. Wheeler, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 5.

40. Affidavit of defense to action of replevin held insufficient for failure to include copy of assignment of leasehold interest. Strafford v. Walter, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 498.

41. Ramsdell v. Seybert, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 133.

42. Schock v. Waldelich, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 215.

43. See 4 C. L. 407.

44. Smart v. Masters & Wardens, etc. Lodge No. 2, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 15.

45. See 4 C. L. 407.

46. In Illinois the landlord's lien for rent past due, except as to growing crops, does not arise until the goods are distrained. Springer v. Lipsis, 110 Ill. App. 109.

47. In Alabama a rent contract for a year need not be in writing to give the landlord a lien. Wilson v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 776. Under Rev. St. 1901, par. 2695, a landlord has no lien on crops grown on land which is not a homestead. Hoopes v. Brier [Ariz.] 80 P. 327.

48. In an action by a landlord to recover cotton purchased from a tenant, on which cotton the landlord claimed a lien, a complaint alleging the lien, the purchase, notice of the lien soon after the purchase, demand of the cotton and refusal to deliver, and refusal to allow inspection of the books required to be kept on purchase of cotton, states a cause of action. Parks v. Laurens Cotton Mills, 70 S. C. 274, 49 S. E. 871. One who appropriates cotton, on which a landlord has a statutory lien, soon after it is removed from the premises, without the landlord's consent, is liable to the landlord to the full amount of his lien. Thomas v. Tucker, Zeve & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 802.

49. Noe v. Layton [Ark.] 89 S. W. 1005.

50. As he assumes nothing more than that he will not interfere with the tenant's performance, his act is not an agreement to tenant's note in which he agreed to deliver a certain amount of cotton, however, was not, as a matter of law, an extinguishment of the landlord's lien for any balance due on the rental contract.[51] The landlord's lien for rent precedes any lien for money furnished to a receiver to gather a crop planted by a tenant,[52] and his priority in the distribution of a fund raised by sheriff's sale of the tenant's goods is not defeated by the fact that no notice of the claim for rent was given at or before the sale,[53] for a creditor of a tenant, by a levy upon the tenant's crop, can acquire no higher or superior right therein than that possessed by the tenant at the time of the levy.[54] But where the tenant has placed the crop in the possession of the landlord as security for his indebtedness, the tenant's interest can be reached by garnishment.[55] Crops of a tenant indebted to his landlord for rent, supplies or advances are considered in the landlord's possession so long as they remain on the rented premises,[56] and he may prevent their removal by a creditor of the tenant,[57] but the landlord has no right of possession as against the tenant.[58] The lessee cannot without the lessor's consent remove from the premises chattels thereon pledged for the rent.[59] The landlord's lien for rent yields to the lien of a mortgagee for the purchase money for property taken by a tenant on the leased premises.[60] The mere fact that the landlord has a special lien on a crop for his rent does not put the title in him, and he cannot acquire title thereto by simply taking possession of the same.[61] If for any reason the landlord's lien for rent does not attach, other claims upon the property are enforceable in the order of their precedence.[62]

A landlord's claim for rent may be assigned[63] by parol, mere delivery of the rent note or by appropriate words in a mortgage, which, so far as the assignment is concerned, need not be recorded;[64] and such assignment gives the assignee a lien on the crops which he, by taking possession, may convert into a legal title.[65]

Where the lien on tenant's furniture is imposed by the terms of the lease to secure the payment of instalments of rent only, the furniture cannot be seized and answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another within the statute of frauds. Groesbeck v. Thompson Mill. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 346.

51. Wilson v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 776.

52. Parties furnishing money in such a case can have no lien on other cotton raised on the leased premises, but their claim must be settled by the receiver and accounted for to the court in the settlement of his account. Goodwin v. Mitchell [Miss.] 38 So. 657.

53. Wadas v. Sharp, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 233.

54. It yields to the landlord's lien for rent, under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3108, which prohibits the removal of any of the crop by the tenant, without the landlord's consent, until all amounts due the latter have been paid. Groesbeck v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 83 S. W. 430.

55. Groesbeck v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 659, 88 S. W. 889.

56. Groesbeck v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 83 S. W. 430.

57. Groesbeck v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct, Rep. 659, 88 S. W. 889.

58. A levy on the tenant's interest, where the crop is not removed is valid. Groesbeck v. Evans [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 659. 88 S. W. 889.

59. The fact that adequate security remains is immaterial. Millot v. Conrad, 112 La. 928, 36 So. 807.

60. Arnold v. Hewitt [Iowa] 104 N. W. 843. A steam thresher being within the meaning of the term "farming utensils," Art. 3259, Civ. Code, the vendor's privilege on the proceeds of the sale thereof is superior to that of the lessor of the land for rent. Laporte v. Libby [La.] 38 So. 457.

61. A landlord in such a case cannot take possession of a crop after the tenant's death and apply tenant's share even to the payment of a debt owed by the latter, as against the widow to whom a part of the crop has been assigned as a year's support. Neal v. Smith [Ga.] 60 S. E. 922.

62. Where the landlord does not avail himself of the statutory lien and enforce it as prescribed by Code 1896, § 2717, but sues in assumpsit, no lien attaches to the property before the issue and levy of execution, and is preceded by an older mortgage lien. Howard v. Deens [Ala.] 39 So. 346. Where the landlord waives his lien, a mortgage of the crop is superior to the title of a subsequent purchaser. Rose & Co. v. Woods [Ala.] 39 So. 581.

63. Code Ala. 1896, § 2706. Bennett v. McKee [Ala.] 38 So. 129.

64. Words: "I hereby grant, bargain, sell and convey to the said I. A. Agee * * * all rents that may be due me during the current year, 1900," in a mortgage, held sufficient assignment of rent. Bennett v. McKee [Ala.] 38 So. 129.

65. Bennett v. McKee [Ala.] 38 So. 129.

sold to pay for repairs stipulated to be made by tenant.[66] In Alabama the lien given a landlord for advances embraces everything of value for the sustenance of the family and for carrying on his agricultural operations.[67] When a landlord suing to foreclose his lien is cast in judgment on a counterclaim for the full value of the chattels, the title to the chattels passes by satisfaction of such judgment and they are not thereafter subject to the lien.[68] A deposit made by a tenant as security for the performance of the covenants of his lease is generally to be treated merely as a security and not as a provision for liquidated damages, and a provision that it is to be treated as liquidated damages under certain circumstances is not necessarily controlling as to the character of the deposit.[69]

§ 10. Landlord's remedies for recovery of premises.[70] Right of re-entry and remedies appropriate thereto.[71]—When the relation of landlord and tenant exists, the landlord may, in a proper case, maintain forcible detainer to recover possession of the demised premises.[72] The statute of Oregon relative to forcible entry and detainer creates a species of constructive force where none in fact exists,[73] so that a tenant, notified to quit, but refusing to surrender possession and holding over after the expiration of his lease, within the meaning of the statute is guilty of holding by force, as much so as if he held by actual force.[74] The action is designed as a summary proceeding to give speedy and prompt relief and it is essentially civil in character.[75] The action for forcible entry will not lie where defendant was in possession when plaintiff's alleged possession began;[76] but where defendants attorn to plaintiff's agent, plaintiff can maintain an action against them for a subsequent unlawful withholding.[77] Summary proceedings will lie against a tenant for breach of covenant to pay taxes, though the lease gives the landlord the right to re-enter on such default.[78] There is no privity between the lessor and a sublessee, and the latter is a stranger to lessor's action against his lessee for restitution of the premises;[79] but where a subtenant holds over beyond the term of the tenant's lease, the landlord may resort to summary proceedings to oust both tenant and subtenant.[80] A person who executes a lease in his own name as owner can maintain unlawful detainer without joining persons beneficially interested.[81] In Washington the action of forcible entry and detainer may be maintained by "the person entitled to

66. Osmers v. Furey [Mont.] 81 P. 345.

67. Code 1896, § 2703, held to include a set of blacksmith tools used by the tenant in the making and repair of implements and appliances. Holladay v. Rutledge [Ala.] 39 So. 613. Pasturage furnished by a landlord, under the rent contract, for the work stock owned and used by the tenant in working the leased farm and for the cows from which the tenant obtained milk for his family, while he was cultivating the farm, is included under the head of supplies for which the landlord has a statutory lien. Thomas v. Tucker, Zeve & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 802.

68. Hildebrand v. Head [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. 599, 88 S. W. 438. Judgment that they be sold to satisfy the lien was erroneous. Id.

69. Where a deposit was made as such security, to be forfeited as liquidated damages in case the lease should "be terminated by reason of any act on the part of the tenant before the period mentioned," for nonpayment of rent or violation of other covenants, and the tenant covenanted to quit and surrender the premises in as good condition as when received, except reasonable use and wear, the deposit was liquidated damages only where the term should be cut short by the tenant's act, and did not cover damages arising from his holding over. Wolf v. Dembosky, 95 N. Y. S. 559.

70, 71. See 4 C. L. 408.

72. Where the lessee, or any person under him, holds possession without right, after the determination of the lease. Merki v. Merki, 113 Ill. App. 518.

73. Sec. 5755, B. & C. Comp. Wolfer v. Hurst [Or.] 82 P. 20.

74, 75. Wolfer v. Hurst [Or.] 82 P. 20.

76, 77. Barnewell v. Stephens [Ala.] 38 So. 662.

78. Crosby v. Jarvis, 92 N. Y. S. 229.

79. Wray-Austin Machinery Co. v. Flower [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 214, 103 N. W. 873.

80. In such case, a judgment in favor of plaintiff should be entered against both for possession and against the original tenant only for the statutory double rent. Fletcher v. Fletcher [Ga.] 51 S. E. 418.

81. Under Civ. Code, § 5, as trustee of an express trust. Houck v. Williams [Colo.] 81 P. 800.

the rent."[82] In Missouri the grantees of land are entitled to the same remedies against persons guilty of unlawful detainer before the grant as the grantor was.[83] The trustee in bankruptcy of the lessee of a hotel cannot recover possession of a portion thereof as against an assignee in good faith.[84] The right to re-enter for rent remaining unpaid, given by the lease, is not waived by the mere fact that the lessor, after the default, received rent from the lessee's receiver while he was in possession.[85] The right to resume possession of lands leased for oil cannot arise until default has been made in both exploring and payment of the rent stipulated in case of delay.[86] Where it did not appear that the lessee rented the premises for the purpose of illegally selling liquor thereon, the fact that he afterward did so did not entitle the owner to revoke possession without legal proceedings,[87] and where a lease was made pending partition proceedings, but the lessee's interest was not adjudicated therein and he was not ordered to surrender possession, the purchaser under the decree could not forcibly oust him, though wrongfully in possession.[88] A lessor cannot put aside his lease and sue to remain in possession and to be quieted therein, unless it is manifest that the lease is void.[89] Under the reserved right to re-enter in case of the breach of covenant by the lessee, the lessor may bring ejectment in case of such a breach.[90] A court of equity has no jurisdiction of a petition which, in effect, merely seeks to recover possession of demised premises after a declaration of forfeiture by the lessor.[91]

Procedure.[92]—The action of unlawful detainer is a purely possessory action and does not go to the title,[93] as the tenant cannot question the landlord's title;[94] nor can any secret equities between the parties be investigated or decided;[95] nor can an equitable right to an extended term be set up in such action.[96] An affidavit in a proceeding to dispossess a tenant holding over, that fails to allege facts from which the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant may be inferred and the term of the lease, is defective.[97] A complaint in unlawful detainer which alleges

82. Under Sec. 1170, subd. 3, Pierce's Code; Ball. Ann. Codes & St., § 5527, subd. 3. Allegation that after the leasing the premises were decreed to belong to plaintiff and he is the owner thereof and entitled to the rent, held to be a sufficient allegation of ownership. State v. Pittenger, 37 Wash. 384, 79 P. 942.

83. Rev. St. 1899, § 3352. In this case the lease was made by mistake to the grantor, who assigned it to his grantee. Barada-Ghio Real Estate Co. v. Heidbrink [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 1109.

84. An assignment of the buffet and the right to occupy it for the remainder of lessee's term. Lamb v. Hall [Cal.] 81 P. 288.

85. Fleming v. Fleming Hotel Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 157.

86. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

87, 88. Schwartz v. McQuaid, 214 Ill. 357, 73 N. E. 582.

89. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

90. Breach of covenant to comply with orders of board of health and other municipal departments. In such case the reasonableness of the requirements cannot be questioned by lessee. Palmieri v. Antinozzi, 95 N. Y. S. 865.

91. Gunning v. Sorg, 113 Ill. App. 332.

92. See 4 C. L. 408.

93. Stover v. Davis [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1023; Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

94. Dilks v. Kelsey [N. J. Law] 59 A. 897. The tenant, by accepting the lease had precluded himself from showing want of title in his landlord. Stover v. Davis [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1023.

95. Defendant, separated from her husband, deeded property to plaintiff. Having united with her husband again she occupied the land, making payments "in the nature of rent" under an agreement by plaintiff to deed her the land when a certain amount was paid, She finally repudiated the agreement, claiming that the deed to plaintiff was invalid because it was not signed by her husband and was only intended as a mortgage. Held, that such questions could not be determined in unlawful entry and detainer proceedings to oust her as a tenant. Clark v. Bourgeois [Miss.] 38 So. 187.

96. Where defendant, as assignee of the original lessees, claimed an equitable right to renew the lease under the lessor's covenant therefor, he properly resorted to equity to enjoin the unlawful detainer proceedings and to enforce specific performance. Blount v. Connolly, 110 Mo. App. 603, 85 S. W. 605.

97. Under § 2548, Rev. Code 1892. The affidavit set forth merely that "a tenant for a part of" a year "holds over * * * after the expiration of his term, without permis-

a holding over after the expiration of the term fixed in the lease is not defective for failing to allege the giving of a notice to quit;[98] but a complaint for the cancellation of a lease for fraudulent procurement, in an action brought against an assignee thereof, which failed to allege that assignees had knowledge or notice of the fraud, was fatally defective.[99] The plaintiff must show that the lease is an absolute nullity or is forfeited under some provision therein.[1] In Pennsylvania an inquisition in a landlord and tenant proceeding must show that the defendant's term had fully expired when the proceedings were instituted.[2] Insufficiency of the amount of rent cannot be sustained in a suit exclusively for possession.[3] In an action for unlawful detainer a deed was admissible to show the extent of plaintiff's possession, though it did not cover all the premises claimed in the complaint.[4] The procuring of a liquor license for the rented premises in the name of one person does not estop the landlord from asserting that the tenancy is in another.[5] In summary proceedings based upon nonpayment of rent and nonpayment of taxes, proof of the former alone is enough to sustain an order in favor of the landlord.[6] The objection that the action to recover possession of real property was prematurely brought for insufficiency of notice to quit must be raised by plea in abatement and is waived by answering to the merits.[7] In proceedings to dispossess a tenant for nonpayment of rent, it is no defense that the landlord has violated his agreement to keep a liquor license in force for the tenant.[8] In such actions counterclaims or set-offs are not admissible, but the tenant may set off counterclaims against the rent demanded, in an action by the tenant on a bond on appeal from a judgment for the possession of the property.[9] In unlawful detainer defendant may show that plaintiffs hold the lease under a fictitious and collusive sale of the premises intended to deprive defendant of his right of purchase under the lease.[10] Where the defendant in summary proceedings to recover possession claims under an alleged new parol lease, the burden of establishing the same is on defendant.[11] In forcible entry and detainer to recover possession, plaintiff can have judgment for only what rent was due when the action was brought and was claimed in the complaint.[12] The judgment against a tenant who is unsuccessful in his appeal from a judgment in favor of his landlord for possession should be for intervening damages to the property and for use and occupation.[13] The rental value of the premises during the time detained is the proper measure of damages, in an action for unlawful detention.[14] In California the statutory provisions relative to trebling the rent due, in case of tenants holding over after notice to quit do not warrant the award of treble the value of rent and profits as damages in an action of unlawful detainer.[15] In New York, where a verdict in summary proceedings is set aside by the justice as against sion of the landlord." Bowles v. Dean, 84 Miss. 376, 36 So. 391.

98. Where the term is specifically fixed in the release, no notice is necessary under sec. 1161, subd. 1, Code Civ. Proc. Craig v. Gray [Cal. App.] 82 P. 699.

99. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 317.

1. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La] 38 So. 932.

2. Under the act of 1772. Seidel v. Sperry, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 649.

3. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

4. Barnewell v. Stephens [Ala.] 38 So. 662.

5. Liebmann's Sons Brewing Co. v. De Nicolo, 91 N. Y. S. 791.

6. Peabody v. Long Acre Square Bldg. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 507.

7. McClung v. McPherson [Or.] 82 P. 13.

8. Liebmann's Sons Brewing Co. v. De Nicolo, 91 N. Y. S. 791.

9. McMichael v. McFalls, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 256.

10. Ogle v. Hubbel [Cal. App.] 82 P. 217.

11. Weinhandler v. Eastern Brewing Co., 92 N. Y. S. 792.

12. Unless a supplemental or amended complaint shall be filed. State v. Pittenger, 37 Wash. 384, 79 P. 942.

13. Byrne v. Morrison, 25 App. D. C. 72.

14. Millington v. O'Dell [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 949.

15. Civ. Code, §§ 3334, 3345; Code Civ. Proc.

the evidence, he cannot direct a verdict, but only order a new trial.[16] Where it is made to appear that the sheriff did not dispossess the defendant in forcible entry proceedings, as shown by his return, an alias writ of possession may be issued.[17] In New York, any person claiming to be in possession of the premises as undertenant may intervene in summary proceedings to recover possession and answer;[18] and the lessor, who has commenced forcible entry and detainer proceedings upon the lessee's breach of conditions by the conveyance of his leasehold by trust deed is entitled to intervene in proceedings to foreclose the trust deed, to obtain a cancellation thereof, as he could not acquire possession as against the receiver appointed.[19]

Where a lease shows on its face that the term has expired, no affidavit or proof of the expiration of the term is necessary to authorize the entry of an amicable action of ejectment and confession of judgment under the power contained in the lease.[20] In an amicable action under an ejectment clause in the lease, the lessee cannot attack the validity of a lease under which he went into possession on the ground that the owner's agent had no written authority to execute the lease.[21] Where judgment has been entered under an ejectment clause in a lease, no second judgment can be entered although such judgment may have been premature or voidable from matters outside the record.[22] A release of errors with the warrant of attorney to enter judgment of ejectment for violation of the covenants of a lease operates only on errors or irregularities in the proceedings apparent on the record and does not reach the defect of lack of authority to proceed.[23] In trespass to try title, where defendant claims a lease from plaintiff and damages for eviction under a writ of sequestration in the action, while the burden of proof is on defendant to show his damages, yet the plaintiff cannot recover without showing by a preponderance of evidence his right to possession.[24]

§ 11. Liability of third persons to landlord or tenant.[25]—In an action for enticement of a tenant to leave the premises without sufficient cause,[26] the sufficiency of the cause for leaving is a question of law;[27] and the measure of damages is the value of the rent lost and damages for land lying uncultivated.[28] While a landlord may recover for the removal and conversion by a third party of produce delivered for him in payment of rent, he cannot maintain either trover, trespass or case for the removal of produce which has never been delivered to or for him by his tenants, and to which he has but an equitable title.[29] The lessor cannot recover for property sold by him to the lessee on credit and taken away by a third party, in the absence of any showing of damages.[30] The lessor has a right of action for a trespass on the

§ 1174. Buhman v. Nickels & Brown Bros. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 85.

16. Kiernan v. Cashin, 92 N. Y. S. 255.

17. Smith v. Hardwick [Ky.] 89 S. W. 724.

18. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2244. The fact that he described himself as undertenant, when in fact he claimed under a new lease to himself was immaterial. Kiernan v. Cashin, 92 N. Y. S. 255.

19. Gunning v. Sorg, 214 Ill. 616, 73 N. E. 870.

20. Sweeney v. McDonnell, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 69.

21. Gleadall v. Kenney, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 576.

22, 23. Philadelphia v. Johnson, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 591.

24. A requested charge that, if defendant failed to discharge his burden, the verdict should be "for the plaintiff" went too far and was properly refused. Freeman v. Slay [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 664, 88 S. W. 404.

25. See 4 C. L. 410.

26. Laws of 1900, Miss. p. 140, c. 102. Petty v. Leggett [Miss.] 38 So. 549.

27. Failure of the landlord to furnish the tenant meat and clothing is insufficient cause for abandoning a lease unless the landlord was under a legal obligation to furnish such articles. Petty v. Leggett [Miss.] 38 So. 549.

28. Wagner v. Ellis [Miss.] 37 So. 959.

29. Court below directed the general affirmative charge for plaintiff and directed the inclusion in the verdict of articles not delivered for the plaintiff, on which he would have a lien for rent only in case the other articles were insufficient, which was not shown; judgment reversed. Baker v. Cotney [Ala.] 38 So. 131.

30. Claiming a lien for the purchase price leased property.[31] The tenant can recover according to his interest in the premises, for damages caused by a third person, although he may not be required to repair the injuries,[32] and the tenant is entitled to compensation for the taking of his possession for public use.[33] While the tenant has a right of action for a trespass committed upon the leased premises, such right does not extend to a trespass committed after the expiration of his term, in the absence of any arrangement for further occupation.[34]

§ 12. Crimes and penalties.[35]—A party cannot be convicted of the offense of enticing away and employing the tenant of another under yearly contract, without proof of knowledge of such contract, some enticement and employment of such tenant.[36] In Alabama it is a criminal offense to sell personal property with intent to defraud the landlord of his lien for rent.[37] Under a similar statute of Iowa, each separate sale or disposal constitutes a complete offense.[38] In North Carolina, to convict a tenant of the offense of injuring a tenement house of his landlord, the relation of landlord and tenant must be established and a willful and unlawful damage or injury shown to have been done by the tenant during his term.[39]

LAND PATENTS, see latest topical index.

FIXTURES AS BETWEEN LANDLORD AND TENANT.[40]

[SPECIAL ARTICLE.]

§ 1. General rule.—The general rule of law applicable to fixtures is always construed with much greater latitude and indulgence between landlord and tenant in favor of the tenant than between any other class of persons. Under the history of the law of fixtures[41] it appears how the old, strict rule of the common law was gradually modified and excepted to in favor of the tenant,—how, first, an exception was made in favor of the tenant, out of considerations of public policy, as to fixtures devoted to purposes of trade, then extended to fixtures used for purposes of domestic convenience, and finally to annexed articles of ornament. In this respect, the general rule is, in the absence of a special agreement, that the tenant is permitted to remove all his erections and annexations of chattels to the realty of his under Code 1896, § 2703, lessor sued for a mule taken away from lessee, but failed to show the price for which he sold it to lessee or whether any part of the price had been paid. King v. Henderson & Bruce [Ala.] 38 So. 118.

31. Bright v. Bell, 113 La. 1078, 37 So. 976.

32. Moeckel v. Cross & Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 447.

33. Military Camp. Alexander's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 383.

34. Plaintiff sued defendant for turning cattle into a pasture with his cattle, after the expiration of his term. Held, that he could show damages to his high grade cows from contact with defendant's scrub bulls, but he could not prove damages to the pasture. Baldwin v. Richardson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 189, 87 S. W. 746.

35. See 4 C. L. 410.

36. Evidence held utterly insufficient to sustain the allegations of the affidavit. Haney v. State [Miss.] 38 So. 284.

37. Code 1896, § 4757. Evidence which showed that the proceeds of the property were paid over to the holder of a mortgage, conveying the property sold, executed by defendant and the party claimed to have been defrauded, was not sufficient to support a conviction. Smith v. State, 139 Ala. 115, 36 So. 727.

38. Acts 29th Gen. Assem. p. 106, c. 146. State v. Ashpole [Iowa] 104 N. W. 281.

39. Code, § 1761. State v. Godwin, 138 N. C. 582, 50 S. E. 277.

40. From Bronson on Fixtures. Copyright 1904. By Harrison A. Bronson. Annotated with references to Current Law, vols 1-6.

41. See Bronson, Fixt. chapter 2.

landlord which were so placed for purposes of trade, domestic convenience, or for ornamental uses, provided that such annexed articles are removable without material injury to the freehold, or to the essential characteristics of themselves.[42] The original ground for these exceptions arose from the desire to foster trade and commerce, and the subsequent exceptions in favor of domestic and ornamental fixtures were founded upon reasons of public policy; for, manifestly, a tenant annexes his domestic and ornamental fixtures merely for purposes of temporary convenience, and a rule that would pass to the landlord such fixtures the moment that they are annexed would work great hardship to tenants, without any practical advantages to landlords.[43]

§ 2. Nature and application of the rule.—This rule of law, as especially applied between landlord and tenant, has reference only to what might be termed the "tenant's removable fixtures," and should not be confused with the right of a tenant to remove annexed chattels which are purely chattels. Thus, all those articles annexed by the tenant which, from the application of the recognized tests in the law of fixtures, could not be said to have become a part of the realty, are personal property, and, as such, are removable, absolutely, by the tenant, the same as by other persons standing in different relations to the owner of the realty.[44] But chattels which are so attached to the freehold by the tenant for trade, domestic, or ornamental purposes as ordinarily, under the law of fixtures, to become a part of the realty, are nevertheless, under certain conditions and circumstances, removable by the tenant. These chattels are properly the tenant's removable fixtures, and, by the weight of authority, are considered as realty until severed,[45] although there is

42. Ewell, Fixt. p. 96; Tyler, Fixt. p. 150; Taylor, Landlord & Tenant, § 544 [2 C. L. 681; 4 C. L. 398, supra, 6 C. L. 366]; Elwes v. Maw, 3 East, 38; Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 270, 64 Am. Dec. 64; Hanrahan v. O'Reilly, 102 Mass. 201; Murray v. Moross, 27 Mich. 203; Friedlander v. Ryder, 30 Neb. 783; Chase v. New York Insulated Wire Co., 57 Ill. App. 205; Collamore v. Gillis, 149 Mass. 578. The cases are not in harmony in respect to the provisions that annexed chattels must be removed without injury to the premises or to themselves. See post, § 4, "Trade Fixtures."

43. Poole's Case, 1 Salk. 368; Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 440; Ewell, Fixt. p. 127; Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 270, 64 Am. Dec. 64.

44. See Fixtures, 5 C. L. 1431; Bronson, Fixt. c. 3, "Requisites and Tests of a Fixture." Thus, a blacksmith shop moved to a farm by a tenant for temporary use and resting on the runners by means of which it was hauled to the farm, is personal property. Smyth v. Stoddard, 203 Ill. 424.

45. In Bliss v. Whitney, 9 Allen [Mass.] 114, 85 Am. Dec. 745, Gray, J., said: "Fixtures annexed to real estate become part of it. * * * If annexed by a tenant for purposes of trade, or some other immediate or temporary uses, or for ornament, he may, indeed, while remaining in possession, sever them from the land, and thus change their character back again from realty to personalty; but if, without having done so, he voluntarily quits the premises at the expiration of his term, without any special agreement with his landlord, neither he nor his vendee can afterwards claim them against the owner of the land." "For many, if not most, purposes, however, during the continuance of the annexation, the thing is treated as a parcel of the realty; and though it is in the power of the party making the annexation to reduce the thing again to the state of goods and chattels by severance, yet, until so severed, it remains a part of the realty." Ewell, Fixt. p. 77, and notes there cited [The law presumes that a tenant does not intend to make trade fixtures part of the realty, 5 C. L. 398].

An oyster and trench counter and a bar nailed to the floor are a part of the realty so long as annexed. Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191.

So, a counting room built within a store, and a trade fixture, is a part of the realty so long as annexed to the freehold. Brown v. Wallis, 115 Mass. 158.

See Raddin v. Arnold, 116 Mass. 270; Freeman v. Dawson, 110 U. S. 270, 28 Law. Ed. 141; Sampson v. Camperdown Cotton Mills, 64 F. 939; First Nat. Bank of Joliet v. Adam, 138 Ill. 483; Treadway v. Sharon, 7 Nev. 37; Stout v. Stoppel, 30 Minn. 56; Pemberton v. King, 13 N. C. 376; Donnelly v. Thieben, 9 Ill. App. 495; Preston v. Briggs, 16 Vt. 129; Darrah v. Baird, 101 Pa. 265.

In Griffin v. Ransdell, 71 Ind. 440, it was held that a dwelling house erected by the tenant was a part of the realty, as between the landlord and the tenant, and that a third party must show a change in its character in order to maintain a personal action.

So, in Kile v. Giebner, 114 Pa. 381, it was held that a stationary saw mill, though a trade fixture because erected by the tenant as accessory to his trade, was a chattel real during the continuance of the term of the tenant.

a noticeable lack of harmony and a variance of opinion in the decisions upon this point.[46] The reason assigned for so considering such articles a part of the realty is that the tenant indicates, by the mode in which he attaches them, that they are to be a part of the freehold during the continuance of his interest in the property.[47] This distinction is of practical importance in determining the right of a tenant to remove his fixtures after the expiration of his term, or after the surrender of possession,[48] and, in certain cases, in determining the remedies of trover and replevin.[49]

§ 3. Nature of the tenant's interest.—As to fixtures erected by the tenant upon his lessor's realty, which, from the applied tests of fixtures, are removable at any and all times[50] by the tenant, and are personalty, the tenant, of course, possesses the same right to and interest in the same as in any personal property. But where articles are substantially annexed to the freehold by the tenant for trade, domestic, or ornamental purposes, and are removable by him only within a certain time and

46. There are many decisions treating trade fixtures, while annexed, as personalty, but in many instances the term has been inadvertently applied by reason of the fact that the remedy sought was of a personal kind. On this, Tyler, in his work on Fixtures (page 223), says: "Fixtures of this kind have often been spoken of by courts in the United States as personal property, even while attached to the soil. As they were the personal property of the party attaching them to the soil before they became fixtures, and as he has the right to remove them at any time and again convert them into personal property, courts have sometimes seen proper to hold them all the time as such. Under this view of the case, actions of trover have been sometimes sustained for fixtures that were never removed or detached from the freehold. In all these cases, the courts call the things which are the subject of litigation personal property; that is, things attached to the land, but with a privilege on the part of some one other than the owner of the land to remove them."

So, in many New York cases, trade fixtures of a tenant have been considered as the personal property of the tenant. See Walker v. Sherman, 20 Wend. 636; Cook v. Champlain Transp. Co., 1 Denio, 91; Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. 410; Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. 393.

So in Pennsylvania, see Lemar v. Miles, 4 Watts, 330; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87; Heffner v. Lewis, 73 Pa. 302; Watts v. Lehman, 107 Pa. 106; Kile v. Giebner, 114 Pa. 381.

"It seems clear, upon principles well founded in reason and public policy, that the rule of law is well established that buildings placed upon leased premises by the tenant, to be used for the purpose of trade and business, are in law deemed personal property, and may be mortgaged as chattels, or levied on as personalty, and sold upon execution, and that the purchaser at such sale has the right to enter upon the premises to remove them." Gantt, J., in Lanphere v. Lowe, 3 Neb. 131. See, also, Bartlett v. Haviland, 92 Mich. 552; Bircher v. Parker, 43 Mo. 443; Torrey v. Burnett, 38 N. J. Law, 457; Belvin v. Raleigh Paper Co., 123 N. C. 138.

So, in regard to railroads, it is held in many cases that they come within the rule regarding trade fixtures, and are therefore not an accessory to the enjoyment of the freehold, nor in any manner necessary and convenient for the occupation of the land by the party entitled to the inheritance. So, being accessory merely to the business, they must be regarded as personal property. In Wagner v. Cleveland & T. R. Co., 22 Ohio St. 563, 10 Am. Rep. 770, the court says: "The general principle to be kept in view, which underlies all questions of this kind, is the distinction between the business which is carried on in or upon the premises and the premises, or locus in quo. The former is personal in its nature, and articles that are merely accessory to the business, and have been put on the premises for this purpose, and not as accessions to real estate, retain the personal character of the principal, to which they appropriately belong and are subservient." So, in Northern Central Ry. Co. v. Canton Company of Baltimore, 30 Md. 347, the court said: "A railway is certainly quite as essential to the trade and business of a railway company as a steam engine, and the house which may cover it, or any other fixture, can be to the miller or the miner. * * * Prima facie, a house with its foundation planted in the soil is real property; yet when it is accessory to trade, and in law a trade fixture, we find all the authorities regard it as personal property." Quoted in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Nyce, 61 Kan. 394, 48 L. R. A. 241. See, also, Western North Carolina R. Co. v. Deal, 90 N. C. 110; Albion River R. Co. v. Hesser, 84 Cal. 435, 24 P. 288; Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co. v. Mosier, 14 Or. 519, 13 P. 300, 58 Am. Rep. 321; Jones v. New Orleans & S. R. Co. & I. Ass'n, 70 Ala. 227; Justice v. Nesquehoning Valley R. Co., 87 Pa. 28; Newgass v. Railway Co., 54 Ark. 140, 15 S. W. 188; Teaff v. Hewitt, 1 Ohio St. 511, 59 Am. Dec. 634; Perkins v. Swank, 43 Miss. 349.

47. Boyd v. Shorrock, L. R. 5 Eq. 78 [Fixtures, 5 C. L. 1431.] Ewell, Fixt. p. 32.

48. Carlin v. Ritter, 68 Md. 478, 6 Am. St. Rep. 467; Talbot v. Whipple, 14 Allen [Mass.] 177; Bliss v. Whitney, 9 Allen [Mass.] 114, 85 Am. Dec. 745; Beckwith v. Boyce, 9 Mo. 560; State v. Elliot, 11 N. H. 540.

49. Shapira v. Barney, 30 Minn. 59; Davis v. Jones, 2 Barn. & Ald. 165. See Bronson, Fixt. § 109, "Trover," and § 110, "Replevin."

50. [He has a reasonable time, 2 C. L. 681, n. 60; ante, 6 C. L., Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.]

under certain circumstances,[51] the nature of his interest is somewhat different. It is not, distinctively, an interest in land, for it is not within the statute of frauds, so as to require a note or memorandum in writing by the tenant in order to pass title to such fixtures to a purchaser.[52] Yet his interest in such fixtures is not the same as that in an annexed chattel treated as purely personalty, for in all cases the personal actions of trover and replevin will not lie.[53] His interest is absolutely neither an interest in chattels nor an interest in land, but rather it is a chattel interest in things for the time being affixed to land. This interest is peculiar, in that it partakes both of the character of personalty and realty.[54] In some aspects his interest is a defeasible interest in land during the continuance of his term,[55] and his right to remove these fixtures is considered rather as a privilege allowed the tenant than an absolute right to the things themselves.[56] The landlord, however, acquires his interest in such fixtures by reason of the fixtures being part and parcel of the land which he owns, and as to him, of course, they are real estate. During the continuance of the tenancy he possesses a defeasible interest in them as realty; after the termination of the tenancy, and upon their nonremoval, his interest becomes absolute. It may be stated that under the present status of the law of fixtures and the present tendency of the various courts in relation to the same, this distinction in respect to the tenant's interest is rather artificial and too finely drawn for practical purposes, for the reason that the courts are tending towards a recognition of all removable fixtures as personal property, while annexed, so that the difference is practically now a historical difference, which a few courts still recognize.[57]

§ 4. Trade fixtures.—Articles attached to or erected upon the realty by the tenant for the purpose of assisting him in carrying on a trade are removable by him during his tenancy. The rise of this exception to the common-law rule, that whatever is annexed to the soil becomes a part thereof, and hence irremovable, has a more general pertinency than this article.[58] It is of importance, however, to note that there is a divergence of opinion among the courts as to the application of this rule, and as to what is included within its terms. The English decisions, particularly those of an early date, accorded to the tenant the right to remove his trade fixtures during his term, provided that they were not so annexed as to materially injure the realty in their removal, or to cause the articles themselves to be reduced to a mere mass of crude materials, or to be destroyed.[59] This general principle is followed in its general tenor by the American decisions,[60] although there is a con-

51. [Not removable as against grantee of landlord without notice, 2 C. L. 681, n. 56.]

52. Hallen v. Runder, 1 Cromp., M. & R. 266; Lee v. Gaskell, 1 Q. B. Div. 700; South Baltimore Co. v. Muhlbach, 69 Md. 395.

53. Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B. 574.

54. Tyler, Fixt. p. 165 et seq. [In consequence of this dual character a mechanic's lien may attach, see ante, 6 C. L. Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.]

55. Tyler, Fixt. p. 166.

56. Taylor, in his work on Landlord & Tenant, § 551, speaks of this right of removal of the tenant as a privilege allowed, rather than an absolute right to the things themselves, and, as such, it must be exercised before the tenant's interest expires, or the landlord's defeasible right and title become absolute.

57. See Bronson Fixt. c. 6, note 4.

58. See Bronson Fixt. c. 2, "Fixtures Historically Treated."

59. Poole's Case, 1 Salk. 368; Whitehead v. Bennett, 27 Law J. Ch. 474, 6 Wkly. Rep. 351; Martin v. Roe, 7 El. & Bl. 237. In the last cited case, in regard to injury by removal, Lord Campbell said: "In all cases of this kind, injury to the freehold must be spoken of with less than literal strictness. A screw or a nail can scarcely be drawn without some attrition; and when all the harm done is that which is unavoidable to the mortar laid on the brick walls, this is so trifling that the law, which is reasonable, will regard it as none. Upon any other principle, the criterion of injury to the freehold would be idle."

60. Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 271, 64 Am. Dec. 64; Hanrahan v. O'Reilly, 102 Mass. 201; Collamore v. Gillis, 149 Mass. 578, 22 N. E. 46, 14 Am. St. Rep. 460, 5 L. R. A. 150; Capen v. Peckham, 35 Conn. 88; Linahan v. Barr, 41 Conn. 471; Chase v. New York Insulated Wire Co., 57 Ill. App. 205; Roth v.

siderable respectable authority giving the right of removal of a trade fixture to a tenant, irrespective of the fact that the articles, by their removal, may lose their essential characteristics as chattels, or be practically destroyed.[61] This holding is upon the principle that the landlord cannot be affected by injury done by the tenant to his own property so long as the freehold is not damaged; for the fixture so removed may still be valuable to the tenant, even though he may be put to extra expense to repair or rebuild it.[62] Thus, in cases where a brick chimney, a brick vault, a baker's oven, or other chattel must be taken down in pieces in order to effect its removal, the fact of demolition is immaterial so long as the resulting mass is of value and of use for other trade or commercial purposes.[63] Respecting

Collins, 109 Iowa, 501, 80 N. W. 543; Stockwell v. Marks, 17 Me. 455, 35 Am. Dec. 266; Shapira v. Barney, 30 Minn. 59, 14 N. W. 270; Murray v. Moross, 27 Mich. 203; Conrad v. Saginaw Min. Co., 54 Mich. 249, 20 N. W. 39, 52 Am. Rep. 817; Bartlett v. Haviland, 92 Mich. 552, 52 N. W. 1008; Powell v. McAshan, 28 Mo. 70; Chandler v. Oldham, 55 Mo. App. 139; Friedlander v. Ryder, 30 Neb. 783, 47 N. W. 83, 9 L. R. A. 700; Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496; Ombony v. Jones, 21 Barb. [N. Y.] 520, afd. 19 N. Y. 234; Conner v. Coffin, 22 N. H. 538; Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452; Cubbins v. Ayres, 72 Tenn. [4 Lea] 329; McDavid v. Wood, 52 Tenn. [5 Heisk.] 96. [See Fixtures, 2 C. L. 9; 3 C. L. 1432; 5 C. L. 1431.]

A building and shed that are so erected and so attached to the premises as to be not removable without material injury to the premises are a part of the realty and irremovable. Powell v. McAshan, 28 Mo. 70.

In Friedlander v. Ryder, 30 Neb. 783, 47 N. W. 83, 9 L. R. A. 700, it was held that a frame addition, 24x20, two stories in height, placed upon wooden posts set in the ground, and attached to the main building by cutting off the eaves and taking out the windows of the main building, was not removable by the tenant because the addition was "of such a character, and was so annexed to the main building, that its removal would greatly injure the demised premises." The court said: "The modern decisions are to the effect that a tenant can only remove such improvements erected by him, the removal of which will not materially injure the premises, or put them in a worse condition than they were in when he took possession." Citing Lanphere v. Lowe, 3 Neb. 131; 1 Washburn, Real Property, c. 1, § 27; Taylor, Landlord & Tenant, § 550; Whiting v. Brastow, 4 Pick. [Mass.] 311.

And so, a hanging floor in a business house, suspended by iron rods attached to the joists of the floor above, and by joists let into the walls on two sides of the building, was held to be irremovable. Chase v. New York Insulated Wire Co., 57 Ill. App. 205.

61. In the United States supreme court there is a broad statement in Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. 137, quoted in the text above, and in the case of Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., 142 U. S. 396, 35 Law. Ed. 1055, the statement is made obiter, that "it is difficult to conceive that any fixture, however solid, permanent, and closely attached to the realty, placed there for the mere purpose of trade, may not be removed at the end of the term."

In Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393, a brick chimney sunk three feet into the ground for a foundation, and not removable without being taken down and to pieces, was held to be removable by the tenant.

The court here said: "The rigor of the ancient law of fixtures has yielded, and must continue to yield, to the contingencies of modern times. The law must take notice of trade and manufactures and their wants, and afford to them adequate and appropriate protection."

In Dostal v. McCaddon, 35 Iowa, 318, a vault built for banking purposes within a building, and a safe built within the vault, and too large to be removed without tearing down the vault, were both held to be removable as trade fixtures.

So, in Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496, a shed, stable, storeroom, and barn so erected and built upon and in a side hill as to be removable only upon being taken down, were considered to be trade fixtures. See, also, Cromie v. Hoover, 40 Ind. 49; White's Appeal, 10 Pa. 252.

In Baker v. McClurg, 198 Ill. 28, 59 L. R. A. 131, where the tenants placed, in a building used as a bakery, ovens upon brick foundations of their own, an engine and a boiler, the latter encased in a brick masonry jacket, it was held that the same were removable, as trade fixtures, even though, by the removal, they would be more or less injured, and would have to be taken down in pieces.

But in Massachusetts the English rule is followed. In the case of Collamore v. Gillis, 149 Mass. 578, 22 N. E. 46, 14 Am. St. Rep. 460, 5 L. R. A. 150, where a baker's oven, consisting of about 12,000 bricks, was built into a leased building by the tenant, and was not capable of removal intact, the court said: "We are not inclined to extend the right of removal so far as to include a thing which cannot be severed from the realty without being destroyed or reduced to a mere mass of crude materials. In the case before us, the oven was not like a machine or a structure, the parts of which are fitted to each other, and can be taken apart and put together again at pleasure in some other place. It had, so to speak, no removable identity, but when taken down it necessarily lost its character as an oven, and, with the exception of the iron lining and door, became mere bricks and mortar."

the injury done to the realty by the removal of fixtures erected for trade purposes, there is a noticeable tendency in the decisions to interpret the general rule more freely in cases of trade fixtures than otherwise, and in favor of the tenant. In Van Ness v. Pacard,[64] a leading case on the subject of trade fixtures, the court stated, in reference to trade fixtures: "The question whether removable or not does not depend upon the form or size of the building, whether it has a brick foundation or not, or is one or two stories high, or has a brick or other chimney. The sole question is whether it is designed for purposes of trade or not. A tenant may erect a large, as well as a small, messuage, or a soap boilery of one or two stories high, and on whatever foundations he may choose." This presents the extreme view of the American cases on the question of injury by removal. As a rule, it is too broad, and, in many cases, it is not strictly correct, for chattels that are attached for trade purposes, and so annexed to the realty as to be an integral part of the premises, or articles that have been substituted for other articles that were a part of the realty, do not thereby become trade fixtures, subject to removal, but they are a part of the freehold.[65] The effect of the modern decisions, however, in respect to the question of injury by removal, seems to grant to the tenant the right to remove those trade fixtures whose removal will not materially injure the premises, or put them in a worse condition than they were in when he took possession.[66] [In applying the foregoing tests the question generally becomes one of fact.[67]]

What constitutes a trade.—The term "trade," as used in connection with trade fixtures, has a much broader signification than the literal and customary use of the word; for within the term of "trade fixtures" are included not only occupations ordinarily designated as "trade," but numerous other occupations, having a resemblance or affinity to a trade, though scarcely to be included within the ordinary definition of that term. In fact, it seems that the term, in this connection, covers any calling exercised for the purpose of pecuniary profit, provided that it is not exclusively agricultural in its nature, and it matters not whether the article attached or annexed to the freehold is used solely for a trade purpose or not; it is sufficient if it is used partly for a trade purpose, thus constituting a mixed case.[68]

62. Baker v. McClurg, 198 Ill. 28, 59 L. R. A. 131.

63. Dostal v. McCaddon, 35 Iowa, 318; Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393; Baker v. McClurg, 198 Ill. 28; Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496. But see Collamore v. Gillis, 149 Mass. 578, 22 N. E. 46, 14 Am. St. Rep. 460, 5 L. R. A. 150.

64. Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374.

65. In Fletcher v. McMillan, 103 Mich. 494, 61 N. W. 791, a tenant removed the pillars, partitions, sewers, and floors in a building occupied by him, and replaced them by others, more expensive and better suited to his business, and it was held that the substituted materials were not trade fixtures. So, in Pond & Hasey Co. v. O'Connor, 70 Minn. 266, 73 N. W. 159, a steam heating plant, consisting of a steam boiler set in and on a cement and brick foundation, and encased in brick masonry, which was substituted for a prior plant, was held to be a part of the realty. In Hay v. Tillyer [N. J. Eq.] 14 A. 18, where glass furnaces in a manufactory were worn out by the tenants, and they substituted and built new ones in their places, such new furnaces were not trade fixtures, but a part of the realty. But see Beers v. St. John, 16 Conn. 322, where a shop was substituted for an old one, the material and construction being different, so as, in reality, to furnish a building distinct from the old one, and not a reconstruction, it was held that the same was not a part of the freehold. In Camp v. Chas. Thacher Co., 75 Conn. 165, where new plumbing was put into a hotel by the lessee, replacing old plumbing of a different kind, it was held that the same was a part of the realty.

66. Friedlander v. Ryder, 30 Neb. 783, 47 N. W. 83, 9 L. R. A. 700; Lanphere v. Lowe, 3 Neb. 131; Whiting v. Brastow, 4 Pick. [Mass.] 311; Moore v. Smith, 24 Ill. 513; Baker v. McClurg, 198 Ill. 28; Collamore v. Gillis, 149 Mass. 578, 22 N. E. 46, 14 Am. St. Rep. 460, 5 L. R. A. 150.

67. See 4 C. L. 399, n. 19.

68. In Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374, where a building was erected by the tenant for the purpose of carrying on the business of a dairyman, and where, at the same time, the tenant used the building as a residence, the court said: "Surely it cannot be doubted that in a business of this nature the immediate presence of the family and servants was or might be of very great utility and impor-

In this sense of the term, as aforementioned, an innkeeper or hotel proprietor exercises a trade;[69] likewise a livery stable keeper;[70] so, a lumber company manufacturer;[71] likewise a railroad company;[72] so, a saloon proprietor;[73] so, a proprietor of a laundry;[74] so, a store keeper;[75] and so a nursery man, planting and growing trees and shrubs, has been held to carry on a trade.[76]

What are trade fixtures.—To constitute any chattel that has been attached to the freehold a trade fixture, it is only necessary that it be devoted to what is known in the law of fixtures as a trade purpose, and, as the majority of the courts require, be removable without material injury to the premises, or to the essential characteristics of itself as a chattel.[77] The form or size of the annexed chattel is immaterial. Large buildings, such as stores, barns, and ice houses, and heavy machinery, such as engines, boilers, and all kinds of manufacturing machinery, have been held trade fixtures.[78] So, articles which, most apparently, are a part of the realty, such as tance. The defendant was also a carpenter, and carried on his business, as such, in the same building. It is no objection that he carried on two trades instead of one. There is not the slightest evidence of this one being a mere cover or evasion to conceal another, which was the principal design; and unless we were prepared to say (which we are not) that the mere fact that the house was used for a dwelling house, as well as for a trade, superseded the exception in favor of the latter, there is no ground to declare that the tenant was not entitled to remove it. At most, it would be deemed only a mixed case, analogous in principle to those before Lord Chief Baron Comyns and Lord Hardwicke, and therefore entitled to the benefit of the exception." So, in Holmes v Tremper, 20 Johns. [N. Y.] 29, 11 Am. Dec. 238, a cider mill erected by a tenant for the purpose of making cider on the farm was held to be removable, it being a mixed case, involving, in part, the exercise of a trade.

69. A ballroom erected by a tenant on the leased premises for use by him in connection with his hotel or restaurant is a trade fixture. Ombony v. Jones, 19 N. Y. 234. Likewise, a barn placed by an innkeeper on an adjoining lot is removable. Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496. So, an office counter and iron safe in a hotel and restaurant. Cubins v. Ayres, 72 Tenn. [4 Lea] 329. So, an oyster counter in restaurant. Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191. Likewise, a cistern, gas and water pipes in a boarding house. Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 256, 64 Am. Dec. 64.

70. A building erected by a tenant on a vacant lot for the purposes of a livery stable is a trade fixture. Firth v. Rowe, 53 N. J. Eq. 520.

71. A gang edger in a saw mill is a trade fixture. Stokoe v. Upton, 40 Mich. 581, 29 Am. Rep. 560. So, a building placed by a lumber company on leased premises, for use as a lumber office for its employes, is a trade fixture. Security Loan & Trust Co. v. Willamette Steam Mills, L. & M. Co., 99 Cal. 636. See, also, Macdonough v. Starbird, 105 Cal. 15, 38 P. 510.

72. A depot erected by a railroad is a trade fixture. Carr v. Georgia R. Co., 74 Ga. 74.

73. A building placed on a beach by the lessee on leased premises for saloon purposes, and resting on sills supported on blocks buried in the sand, is a trade fixture. Lewis v. Ocean Navigation & Pier Co., 125 N. Y. 341. So, bar counters. Asheville Woodworking Co. v. Southwick, 119 N. C. 611; Berger v. Hoerner, 36 Ill. App. 360.

74. A steam heating plant placed in a building by the lessee for the purposes of a laundry, and for heating purposes, is a trade fixture. President, etc., of Insurance Co. of North America v. Buckstaff [Neb.] 92 N. W. 755.

75. A counting room placed in a store by a tenant is a trade fixture. Brown v. Wallis, 115 Mass. 156. So, platform scales set in the ground. Bliss v. Whitney, 9 Allen [Mass.] 114, 85 Am. Dec. 745; Allen v. Kennedy, 40 Ind. 142. Likewise an awning built of wood in front of a store. Devin v. Dougherty, 27 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 455.

76. A greenhouse erected by a nurseryman for the purposes of his business is a trade fixture. Free v. Stuart, 39 Neb. 220, 57 N. W. 991. So, plants and trees grown by the nurseryman for the purposes of his trade. Miller v. Baker, 1 Metc. [Mass.] 27; Whitmarsh v. Walker, 1 Metc. [Mass.] 313; King v. Wilcomb, 7 Barb. [N. Y.] 263.

77. See ante, this section "Trade Fixtures," notes 59-61.

78. The following articles annexed have been held to be trade fixtures and removable: An awning and shed (Devin v. Dougherty, 27 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 455); a bark mill (Heermance v. Vernoy, 6 Johns. [N. Y.] 5); bar, counter, and shelf (Berger v. Hoerner, 36 Ill. App. 360); belting (Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393; Holbrook v. Chamberlin, 116 Mass. 155, 17 Am. Rep. 146; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87); boilers (Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. [N. Y.] 410; Holbrook v. Chamberlin, 116 Mass. 155, 17 Am. Rep. 146; Davis v. Moss, 38 Pa. 346; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87; Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393; Lacey v. Giboney, 36 Mo. 320, 88 Am. Dec. 145); boiler placed by tenant upon a foundation of brick and cement (Cooper v. Johnson, 143 Mass. 108, 9 N. E. 33); boiler and engine placed upon brick and stone foundations, bolted down solidly to the ground, and walled in with brick arches (Conrad v. Saginaw Min. Co., 54 Mich. 249, 20 N. W. 39, 52 Am. Rep. 817); bowling alley (Hanrahan v. O'Reilly, 102 Mass. 201); brewing vessels (Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. [N. Y.] 410); building placed upon vacant lot for the purpose of a livery stable (Firth v. Rowe, 53 N. J. Eq. 520); building erected plants and trees grown by a nurseryman, have been considered trade fixtures.[79] But chattels that are so attached by the tenant to the freehold as to become an integral part thereof, and chattels that are so substituted by the tenant for other articles that are inferior or worn out, are not trade fixures.[80] The main and important test in determining a trade fixture is the purpose to which it is devoted. The degree and mode of annexation of the article is apparently not material except so far as it determines the injury resulting to the premises, or, possibly, to the ar-by a railroad company for a depot (Carr v. Georgia R. Co., 74 Ga. 74); building annexed for a ballroom (Ombony v. Jones, 21 Barb. 520, 19 N. Y. 234); building used as a warehouse (Austin v. Hudson River R. Co., 25 N. Y. 334); building erected as a covering for machinery (Smith v. Whitney, 147 Mass. 479; Brown v. Reno Elec. Light & Power Co., 55 F. 229); building erected by a lumber company for use as a lumber office (Security Loan & Trust Co. v. Willamette Steam Mills, L. & M. Co., 99 Cal. 636; Macdonough v. Starbird, 105 Cal. 15, 38 P. 510); but not a building substantially erected, and used for an office in connection with other purposes (Burkhardt v. Hopple, 6 Ohio Dec. 127); building placed on a beach upon sills supported by blocks buried in the sand, and used for the purpose of a saloon (Lewis v. Ocean Navigation & Pier Co., 125 N. Y. 341); building erected by tenants for miners to live in, standing on posts or walls of dry stone, piled together, and intended to be merely accessory to mining operations, and not to the soil (Conrad v. Saginaw Min. Co., 54 Mich. 249, 52 Am. Rep. 817); building (large wooden) used for an ice house (Antoni v. Belknap, 102 Mass. 193); building used for a balloon frame (Cowden v. St. John, 16 Iowa, 590); building erected by railway company for depot purposes (Carr v. Georgia R. Co., 74 Ga. 74); building, twenty feet square, with foundation of mud sills laid upon the surface of the ground (Macdonough v. Starbird, 105 Cal. 15, 38 P. 510); building (an engine house built of brick) used as a protection for the engine of the tenant (Smith v. Whitney, 147 Mass. 479, 18 N. E. 229); chimney (brick) (Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393); cider mills (Holmes v. Tremper, 20 Johns. [N. Y.] 29); cisterns of a refinery (Bidder v. Trinidad Petroleum Co., 17 Wkly. Rep. 153); coal bin (Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452); colliery machines (Lawton v. Lawton, 3 Atk. 13); corn mill (Lacey v. Giboney, 36 Mo. 320, 88 Am. Dec. 145); counter (Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191); counters and shelving in a drug store (Roth v. Collins, 109 Iowa, 501, 80 N. W. 543); distillery fixtures (Reynolds v. Shuler, 5 Cow. [N. Y.] 323; Moore v. Smith, 24 Ill. 512; Smith v. Moore, 26 Ill. 392; Terry v. Robins, 5 Smedes & M. [Miss.] 291); electric plant, with dynamos and boiler built upon stone foundations (Brown v. Reno Electric Light & Power Co., 55 F. 229); engines (Cook v. Champlain Transp. Co., 1 Denio [N. Y.] 91; Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. [N. Y.] 410; Lemar v. Miles, 4 Watts [Pa.] 330; Lawton v. Lawton, 3 Atk. 13; Dudley v. Warde, 1 Amb. 113; Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393; Merritt v. Judd, 14 Cal. 59; Lacey v. Giboney, 36 Mo. 320; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87; Davis v. Moss, 38 Pa. 346); furnaces (Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. [N. Y.] 410; gas fixtures (Lawrence v. Kemp, 1 Duer [N. Y.] 363; Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191; McKeage v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 38, 37 Am. Rep. 471); greenhouse used in gardening and florist work (Free v. Stuart, 39 Neb. 220, 57 N. W. 991); heating plant in laundry (steam) (President, etc., of Insurance Co. of North America v. Buckstaff [Neb.] 92 N. W. 755); hydraulic press (Finney v. Watkins, 13 Mo. 291); iron rails in a mine (Heffner v. Lewis, 73 Pa. 302); machinery worth $10,000 placed in a sugar mill by a tenant (Cook v. Folsom, 2 Lanc. Law Rev. 185); machinery in woolen mill (Walker v. Sherman, 20 Wend. [N. Y.] 636); machinery in cotton mill (Buckley v. Buckley, 11 Barb. [N. Y.] 43); mill stones (Moore v. Smith, 24 Ill. 512); ovens placed in a leased building by a tenant for carrying on the bakery business (Baker v. McClurg, 198 Ill. 28, 59 L. R. A. 131); oyster and lunch counter (Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191); partitions and box stalls in a saloon (Dingley v. Buffum, 57 Me. 381); platform scales (Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452; Allen v. Kennedy, 40 Ind. 142; Bliss v. Whitney, 9 Allen [Mass.] 114, 85 Am. Dec. 745); railroad rails (Mott v. Palmer, 1 N. Y. 564; Ford v. Cobb, 20 N. Y. 344); railroad iron, spikes, bolts, etc. (Northern Cent. R. Co. v. Canton Co. of Baltimore, 30 Md. 347); salt pans (Lawton v. Salmon, 1 H. Bl. 259, note; Kelsey v. Durkee, 33 Barb. [N. Y.] 410; Reynolds v. Shuler, 5 Cow. [N. Y.] 323; Mansfield v. Blackburne, 6 Bing. N. C. 426); shafting (Moore v. Wood, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 393; Holbrook v. Chamberlin, 116 Mass. 155, 17 Am. Rep. 146; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87); sheds (Devin v. Dougherty, 27 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 455); shelves in a store (Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452); shrubs planted for sale (Penton v. Robart, 2 East, 88; Miller v. Baker, 1 Metc. [Mass.] 27); stationary saw mill (Kile v. Giebner, 114 Pa. 381, 7 A. 154); stills (Reynolds v. Shuler, 5 Cow. [N. Y.] 323; Raymond v. White, 7 Cow. [N. Y.] 319; Burk v. Baxter, 3 Mo. 207; Heermance v. Vernoy, 6 Johns. [N. Y.] 5); trees planted for sale (Penton v. Robart, 2 East, 88; Miller v. Baker, 1 Metc. [Mass.] 27; King v. Wilcomb, 7 Barb. [N. Y.] 263).

79. A nurseryman may remove such trees, shrubs, and plants as are salable as such in his trade of nurseryman, on the ground that he is carrying on a species of trade (King v. Wilcomb, 7 Barb. [N. Y.] 263; Maples v. Millon, 31 Conn. 598; Brooks v. Galster, 51 Barb. [N. Y.] 196; Fox v. Brissac, 15 Cal. 223); but not trees cultivated and used by a tenant, a market gardener, for the fruit they yield (Wardell v. Usher, 3 Scott [N. R.] 508).

80. See ante, note 65.

ticle itself, by its removal from the realty. The intention of the party making the annexation, a test that is ordinarily, in the law of fixtures, of prime importance, and the ultimate consideration in determining the removability of an annexed chattel, would seem to be immaterial in those states where a trade fixture is regarded as a part of the realty until severed, for the reason that the right of removal exists independently of the fact that the article is a part of the realty. But the cases, even in those states where a trade fixture is regarded as a part of the realty, do not so treat the question of intention; for, if the intention of the tenant making the annexation clearly appears to make the articles annexed a permanent accession to the freehold, his right to remove them as trade fixtures apparently has been waived, and his expressed intention will control.[81] But, in the absence of an expressed intention, the legal presumption is that the tenant who erects fixtures upon his lessor's land for purposes of trade intends to remove them before the expiration of his term, and only upon his leaving the premises without removing his trade fixtures is the intention of making them a gift to his landlord imputed to him.[82]

§ 5. Domestic fixtures.—The term "domestic fixtures" is applied to those articles of domestic convenience which are annexed to the premises by the tenant for the more advantageous use of the premises, and such fixtures are removable by the tenant, provided that no material injury thereby results to the realty, or to the substantial characteristics of the articles themselves.[83] This rule, or, rather, exception to the old common-law rule in favor of the landlord, developed later, as a further indulgence allowed the tenant beyond the exception stated in favor of "trade fixtures." The grounds of this rule are based on the fact that these fixtures are erected only for temporary purposes, and as a matter of convenience, while the tenant occupies the premises, and are not intended to become a part of the realty, and that it would be extremely harsh and disadvantageous to tenants to require that all articles annexed by the tenant for his better domestic convenience should immediately become the property of the landlord.[84] It will be noted that the reason for the rule is different from that asserted for "trade fixtures." Under the head of "domestic fixtures" the early cases included mostly annexed chattels that were purely personalty in their nature, such as were useful and convenient for domestic purposes in and about a house, and often the personal nature of these articles was the principal ground upon which they were protected as removable. Most of the articles falling within this class of fixtures are utensils and machines, perfect chattels in themselves, and serving as substitutes for mere movable furniture.[85] Thus, ranges and stoves fixed in brickwork, fixed beds and tables, furnaces, gas fixtures, pumps, clocks, window blinds, bath tubs, water closets, and other

81. In Linahan v. Barr, 41 Conn. 471, where a tenant erected a brick building on foundation walls, upon which a leased building had been previously destroyed by fire, it was held that his declarations to the effect that he knew his erection would belong to the landlord, and that he did not intend to remove the same at the expiration of his tenancy, were admissible as showing his intention. See, also, Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 271, 64 Am. Dec. 64; Morey v. Hoyt, 62 Conn. 553; Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452; Carver v. Gough, 153 Pa. 225.

82. In Hill v. Sewald, 53 Pa. 271, the court said that "the same want of Intention to convert is imputed to a tenant who attaches to the land fixtures for the use of his business, the law presuming, in favor of trade, that he meant to remove them before the end of his term; and it is only on leaving without removal that the intention to make a gift of them to the landlord is imputed to him." [See, also, 4 C. L. 398, n. 15.]

83. Hayford v. Wentworth, 97 Me. 347.

84. "The reason of the relaxation of the rule is found in the public policy and convenience which permit the tenant to make the most profitable and comfortable use of the premises demised that can be obtained consistently with the rights of the owner of the freehold." Gaffield v. Hapgood, 17 Pick. [Mass.] 192. See Tyler, Fixt. p. 385; Ewell, Fixt. p. 127.

chattels annexed for convenience, have been considered "domestic fixtures."[86] But, apparently, the cases have never extended the doctrine as to "domestic fixtures" so as to include large articles, such as a house built by a tenant for habitation, a barn, or other building; for such an article, being of a substantial size, and not temporarily constructed, is deemed to have been annexed perpetui usus causa, and is not removable, although, if the same had been erected for the purposes of a trade, the contrary rule would obtain.[87] In determining what fixtures are removable under this rule, nearly the same principles of law are applicable as in the case of "trade fixtures," although the law is much more strictly applied to this class of fixtures than to "trade fixtures." The usual tests applicable to fixtures—the nature of the article annexed, its mode and degree of annexation, the purpose to which it is put, and its adaptability to that purpose, together with the intention of the party making the annexation—are all co-ordinately and effectively applied in determining the removability of the article as a "domestic fixture."

§ 6. Ornamental fixtures.—The same principles and rules apply to articles annexed for ornamental purposes as to "domestic fixtures," and the same reason for the extension of the exception in the common-law rule in favor of the tenant exists. Such articles, when devoted to purposes of mere ornament by the tenant, and when severable without material injury to the freehold or to themselves, are removable. There are not many modern decisions on this particular topic, for the reason, perhaps, that the great majority of modern ornamental articles are of a chattel na-

85. Amos & Ferard, Fixt. § 84.

86. See Tyler, Fixt. p. 366 et seq., and Ewell, Fixt. p. 137, as to the English cases holding that stoves, ranges, ovens, boilers, chimney pieces, pier glasses, and furnaces, together with other household articles, are removable. A fire frame fixed in a common fireplace, with bricks on the sides, laid in between the sides of the fire frames and the jambs of the fire places, are domestic fixtures. Gaffield v. Hapgood, 17 Pick. [Mass.] 192, 28 Am. Dec. 290. So, a "wash-down siphon water closet" and its appurtenances, placed in a business office, in the customary way, and connected with the soil pipe, by a tenant at will for his own use, is removable by the tenant. Hayford v. Wentworth, 97 Me. 347. So, a porcelain bath tub, standing on four legs, connected with soil pipes and a hot-water heater, in a dwelling house. Philadelphia Mortg. & Trust Co. v. Miller, 20 Wash. 607, 44 L. R. A. 559, 72 Am. St. Rep. 138. The following have been held removable as "domestic fixtures": Cisterns and sinks (Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 256, 64 Am. Dec. 64); gas fixtures (Wolff v. Sampson [Ga.] 51 S. E. 335, cited ante, Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.) just as, in the early history of the law, candelabra, chandeliers, and other apparatus for lighting purposes were removable by the tenant as fixtures erected by the tenant for domestic convenience, so, gas fixtures have universally been held to be removable, on the ground that they are merely substitutes for the lamps, candlesticks, and chandeliers formerly used to hold candles. In Capehart v. Foster, 61 Minn. 132, 63 N. W. 257, the court said that this doctrine was rather doubtful in principle, but was too well established as the law of the country generally to be overturned, and that the rule must be regarded as rather an arbitrary exception to the general rule. In this case, two hundred and sixty-eight gas fixtures, consisting of gas chandeliers and burners, screwed onto the ends of gas pipes projecting from the walls, were held removable, while one hundred and eighty-four steam radiators, attached to the steam pipes at the floors on which they rested, by being screwed to those pipes, and an electric annunciator attached to the wall and to the wires of the electric bell system, were held to be a part of the realty. These fixtures that are removable include, generally, the chandeliers and burners, although the rule has been extended to gas stoves (Vaughen v. Haldeman, 33 Pa. 522), to a gasometer, and an apparatus for generating gas (Hays v. Doane, 11 N. J. Eq. 84), but not to gas pipes (Gas Company v. Hunter, 2 R. I. 157); but where gas pipe was passed through the floors and partitions, and held to the walls by metal bands, and was removable without injury to the building, it was held removable (Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray [Mass.] 256). See Lawrence v. Kemp, 1 Duer [N. Y.] 363; Beardsley v. Sherman, 1 Daly [N. Y.] 325; Freeland v. Southworth, 24 Wend. [N. Y.] 191; Shaw v. Lenke, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 487; Funk v. Brigaldi, 4 Daly [N. Y.] 359; McKeage v. Hanover Fire Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 38; Guthrie v. Jones, 108 Mass. 191 (gas pipes); Towne v. Fiske, 127 Mass. 125 (portable iron furnace); Rogers v. Crow, 40 Mo. 91; Montague v. Dent, 10 Rich. Law [S. C.] 135; Jarechi v. Philharmonic Soc., 79 Pa. 403; McCracken v. Hall, 7 Ind. 30 (pump); Bank v. North, 160 Pa. 303, 28 A. 694 (steam radiators). Contra, Capehart v. Foster, 61 Minn. 132, 63 N. W. 257.

87. Ewell, Fixt., p. 133; Buckland v. Butterfield, 2 Brod. & B. 54; Jenkins v. Gething, 2 Johns. & H. 520; Ombony v. Jones. 19 N. Y. 234.

ture. The following articles have been considered ornamental fixtures: Hangings, tapestry, and pier glasses nailed to the walls or panels of a house, marble chimney pieces, cornices, etc.[88]

§ 7. Agricultural fixtures.—Fixtures erected by a tenant for agricultural purposes, and for the better enjoyment of the immediate profits of the land, were early held, in the leading case of Elwes v. Maw,[89] to be irremovable by the tenant, and the doctrine laid down in that case has been followed, mainly, in the United States decisions, although there have been numerous opinions, by way of obiter dicta and otherwise, criticising the doctrine enunciated in that case, and apparently extending the right of removal to and including this class of fixtures,[90] but it may be noted that in nearly all of the cases where the rule stated is attacked, the removability of the fixture at issue is decided upon the fact that it comes within

88. In Buckland v. Butterfield, 2 Brod. & B. 54, a conservatory constructed with sliding glasses and paved with Portland stone, was attached to a house by cantilevers let nine inches into the wall. The removal of this conservatory exposed the side of the house to which it had been attached. The question arose as to whether this article of ornament was removable. The court said: "On the one hand it is clear that many things of an ornamental nature may be, in a degree, affixed, and yet, during the term, may be removed; and, on the other hand, it is equally clear that there may be that sort of fixing or annexation which, though the building or thing annexed may have been merely for ornament, will yet make the removal of it waste. The general rule is that, where a lessee, having annexed a personal chattel to the freehold during his term, afterwards takes it away, it is waste. In the progress of time, this rule has been relaxed, and many exceptions have been grafted upon it. One has been in favor of matters of ornament, as ornamental chimney pieces, pier glasses, hangings, wainscot fixed only by screws, and the like. Of all these it is to be observed that they are exceptions only, and therefore, though to be fairly considered, not to be extended." See, also, D'Eyncourt v. Gregory, 15 Wkly. Rep. 186, where pieces of statuary were considered, not mere articles of ornament, but as belonging to the architectural design of the house. In re De Falbe, 70 Law J. Ch. 286, 1 Ch. 523, 84 Law T. 273, 49 Wkly. Rep. 455.

89. Elwes v. Maw, 3 East, 38. In this case, a tenant for years erected upon a farm, consisting of a messuage, barns, stable, outhouses, and other buildings, a beast house, a carpenter shop, a fuel house, a cart house, a pump house, and a fold yard. These buildings of the tenant were of brick and mortar, and tiled, and the foundations of them about a foot and a half deep in the ground. The question arose as to the right of the tenant to remove them. Lord Ellenborough delivered the opinion of the court, and said: "This was an action on the case in the nature of waste by a landlord, the reversioner in fee, against his late tenant. * * * The general rule on the subject of fixtures is that which is laid down in the Year Book. * * * to the following effect, namely: that when a lessee, having annexed anything to the freehold during his term, takes it away, it is waste; but upon this rule certain exceptions have at various times been attempted to be engrafted in favor of trade. The principal one of such exceptions is the tenant's right to remove those utensils which he may set up in relation to his trade; * * * but no adjudged case has yet gone the length of establishing that buildings subservient to purposes of agriculture, as distinguished from those of trade, have been removable by an executor of tenant for life, nor by the tenant himself, who built them during his term. * * * But the case of buildings for trade has been always put and recognized as a known, allowed exception from the general rule which obtains as to other buildings, and the circumstance of its being so treated and considered establishes the existence of the general rule to which it is considered as an exception. To hold otherwise, and to extend the rule in favor of tenants in the latitude contended for by the defendant, would be, as appears to me, to introduce a dangerous innovation into the relative state of rights and interests holden to subsist between landlord and tenants; but its danger or probable mischief is not so popularly a consideration for a court of law as whether the adoption of such a doctrine would be an innovation at all, and, being of opinion that it would be so, and contrary to the uniform current of legal authorities upon the subject, we feel ourselves, in conformity to and in support of those authorities, obliged to pronounce that the defendant had no right to take away the erections stated and described in this case."

90. In Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374, the court said, in reference to the case of Elwes v. Maw: "The court there decided that, in the case of landlord and tenant, there had been no relaxation of the general rule in cases of erections solely for agricultural purposes, however beneficial or important they might be as improvements of the estate. Being once annexed to the freehold by the tenant, they became a part of the realty, and could never afterwards be severed by the tenant. The distinction is certainly a nice one between fixtures for the purposes of trade and fixtures for agricultural purposes; at least in those cases where the sale of the produce constitutes the principal object of the tenant, and the erections are for the purpose of such a beneficial enjoyment of the estate.

the recognized exception in favor of trade, domestic, or ornamental fixtures.[91] Thus, in Van Ness v. Pacard, a house erected and occupied by a tenant with his family was removable for the reason that it came within the exception in favor of

* * * It might, therefore, deserve consideration whether, in case the doctrine were not previously adopted in a state by some authoritative practice or adjudication, it ought to be assumed by this court as a part of the jurisprudence of such state, upon the mere footing of its existence in the common law." In Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496, the court said: "This distinction [between trade and agricultural fixtures], although it may not have been, in any single instance, broken down by any adjudged case, has not, I am persuaded, been regarded with much favor in this country, if, indeed, it has in England. The foundation upon which it rests is narrow and artificial. The general policy which has created exceptions to the general rule, that whatever is affixed to the freehold cannot be removed without the consent of the owner of the inheritance, applies as well to erections for agricultural and other purposes as to erections for the purposes of trade." But see Ombony v. Jones, 19 N. Y. 234. In Harkness v. Sears, 26 Ala. 493, 62 Am. Dec. 742, the court said: "The interest of the owner of the soil, as well as public policy, in America, required that erections for agricultural purposes, put upon the land by a tenant, should receive the same protection in favor of the tenant that was extended by the common law of England to fixtures made for the purposes of trade." This, however, is a mere dictum, for in this case a cog wheel let into the ground, and connected with a turning lathe, was held to be a part of the realty, as between vendor and vendee. See, also, Davis' Adm'r v. Eastham, 81 Ky. 116. In Wing v. Gray, 36 Vt. 261, where hop poles were held removable by a tenant, the court alluded to the criticisms made in this country to the principle laid down by Elwes v. Maw, 3 East, 38, in respect to erections for agricultural purposes. In McMath v. Levy, 74 Miss. 450, the court said: "The simple question presented by this appeal is, may a purchaser from a tenant who bought and put upon leased premises—a plantation—a gin, condenser, etc., with the intention of removing them at pleasure, remove and hold them against the landlord? The question is easily answered. Against the general doctrine of fixtures made by one upon the premises of another, there have always been generous exceptions in favor of trade, manufactures, and, as in the case before us, tenants. The placing of gins, condensers, etc., on plantations cultivated largely in our staple product, cotton, are essential to the preparation and manufacture of the article for market, and the rights of tenants, as against their landlords, are not to be doubted." See, also, Carver v. Gough, 153 Pa. 225. In Perkins v. Swank, 43 Miss. 349, where an engine and other saw-mill machinery were held to be a part of the realty as between the parties standing in the relationship of vendor and vendee, the court said: "The English courts seem to have made no relaxation in favor of erections for agricultural uses; but it is otherwise in the United States." The court cites in support of the statement Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 147, 7 Law. Ed. 374, where the tenant was allowed to remove the fixture in question on the ground that it was a "mixed case." By St. 14 and 15 Vict. c. 25, § 3, it is provided that if any tenant of a farm or land shall, after the passing of that act, with the consent in writing of the landlord, for the time being, at his own cost and expense, erect any farm building, either detached or otherwise, or put up any other building, engine, or machinery, either for agricultural purposes or for the purposes of trade and agricultural (which shall not have been erected or put up in pursuance of some obligation in that behalf), then all such buildings, etc., shall be the property of such tenant, and removable by him, notwithstanding the same may consist of separate buildings, or the same or any part thereof may be built in or permanently affixed to the soil; so as the tenant making any such removal do not in any wise injure the land or buildings belonging to the landlord, or otherwise do put the same in like or as good plight and condition as the same were in before the erection of the things so removed. Before removal, however, every tenant must give to the landlord, or his agent, a month's notice in writing of his intention, and the landlord may thereupon elect to purchase the things so proposed to be removed, whereupon the right to remove shall cease. The value is to be ascertained by two referees (one chosen by each party) or their umpire, and is to be paid or allowed in account by the landlord. See, also, to a similar effect, 38 and 39 Vict. c. 92. See, also, Davis' Adm'r v. Eastham, 81 Ky. 116. Dicta extending the rights of removal: "Whatever erections he [the tenant] made while in possession of the premises for the more beneficial enjoyment of the same he had a right to remove before the expiration of the term, provided they could be severed without material injury to the freehold. As between landlord and tenant, the rule in regard to the removal of fixtures is most liberally construed in favor of the latter. As the landlord pays nothing for the improvements put up by the tenant, policy and justice demand that the tenant should be allowed to remove the additions or improvements unless the removal would operate to the prejudice of the inheritance by leaving it in a worse condition than when he took possession." Bircher v. Parker, 40 Mo. 118. Also Lacey v. Giboney, 36 Mo. 320. See Ross v. Campbell, 9 Colo. App. 38; Hedderich v. Smith, 103 Ind. 203, 53 Am. Rep. 509.

91. In Dubois v. Kelly, 10 Barb. [N. Y.] 496, the building was held removable on the ground that the landlord had, by express agreement, given the privilege to the tenant, or that it might be regarded as an erection for purposes of trade. See Whiting v. Brastow, 4 Pick. [Mass.] 310. See, also, McMath v. Levy, 74 Miss. 450, where it was held that a cotton gin could be removed by one purchasing it from a tenant. The court here stated: "Against the general doctrine of fixtures made by one upon the premises of trade.[92] So, in Holmes v. Tremper, a cider mill and press were held removable as coming under the head of a mixed case, being partly devoted to the enjoyment of the land, and partly to the exercise of a trade.[93] In this connection there is no distinct rule in regard to agricultural fixtures apart from the law of fixtures generally, but rather the exception granted to tenants in favor of their trade, domestic, or ornamental fixtures has never been extended so as to include articles attached by the tenant for mere agricultural purposes. As stated in a Pennsylvania case,[94] there are strong reasons why these exceptions granted to the tenant should not be extended to agricultural fixtures, on the ground that the best interests of agriculture would be greatly retarded; furthermore, such an exception would serve to obliterate entirely the law of fixtures as far as the landlord and tenant are concerned. The liberality with which the courts have construed the term "trade" as applied to fixtures, and the general principles and tests used in determining a fixture, has prevented any great injustice from arising to agricultural tenants. As the general rule of the law of fixtures applies to agricultural fixtures, it is needless to advert to specific instances of such fixtures.

Manure.—However, under this head, the question as to when manure made on the demised premises belongs to the landlord, and when to the tenant, is particularly noteworthy. Manure made on the farm, and from the produce of the farm, is generally considered a part of the realty;[95] but manure not made in the course of another, there have always been generous exceptions in favor of trade, manufactures, and, as in the case before us, tenants. The placing of gins, condensers, etc., on plantations cultivated largely in our staple product,—cotton,—are essential to the preparation and manufacture of the article for market, and the rights of tenants, as against their landlords, are not to be doubted." See Harkness v. Sears, 26 Ala. 493, 62 Am. Dec. 742; Wing v. Gray, 36 Vt. 261.

92. Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374.

93. Holmes v. Tremper, 20 Johns. [N. Y.] 29.

94. In the case of McCullough v. Irvine's Ex'rs, 13 Pa. 440, the court said: "The exceptions have been carried very far by some decisions in the Eastern states, particularly in Whiting v. Brastow, 4 Pick. [Mass.] 310; Holmes v. Tremper, 20 Johns. [N. Y.] 29, and also in Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374. It is, however, in somewhat loose expressions of the court in those cases, and not from the cases themselves, that the principle asserted by the court below derives some countenance. The first, where the dicta is the most latitudinarian, was merely the removal of a padlock and some loose boards, about which there never could have been any reasonable doubt. The second was the removal of a cider press by the tenant; and there no reasonable doubt of its being an implement for the manufacture of cider would be entertained. The last case runs to a little more magnitude, for it was removing a sort of a house, but a house erected for the purpose of manufacturing a commodity, * * * and the decision goes expressly on the ground of its not being a dwelling house. But none of these cases, either expressly or by implication, overrule or impeach the case of Elwes v. Maw, 3 East, 38, in which it was held that an agricultural tenant could not remove, during the continuance of his lease, a beast house, carpenter shop, and fuel house, etc., erected for the use of the farm, even though he left the premises as he found them. In that case the whole law on that subject was ably reviewed; and although it is an English case, I believe it to be the law of Pennsylvania, and for the very same reason that the court below give for a contrary opinion. In my judgment, that is a rule which tends to promote the interests of agriculture, whilst its converse would tend to retard and impede its progress. We must have many tenancies for life in Pennsylvania by will, by deed, and by descent; and if the tenant, after having enjoyed the fruits of the land during perhaps a long life, may, just before his death, strip it of the fences he has built, and the house and barn he has erected, because the advance in the improvement and commerce of the country would leave the land of as much intrinsic value as when he took possession, and convert it into a solitary waste for the winds to moan over, the tenant of a new generation will have to take the land as it was a generation before, and commence improvements de novo. This, I apprehend, would be a slovenly mode of promoting the interests of agriculture."

95. Manure made under a farming lease in the usual course of husbandry is a part of the realty, and irremovable by the tenant. Middlebrook v. Corwin, 15 Wend. [N. Y.] 169; Perry v. Carr, 44 N. H. 118; Gallagher v. Shipley, 24 Md. 418, 87 Am. Dec. 611; Plumer v. Plumer, 30 N. H. 558; Lewis v. Lyman, 22 Pick. [Mass.] 442; Lewis v. Jones, 17 Pa. 262. [Ante, Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.] Contra, Smithwick v. Ellison, 24 N. C. 326, 38 Am. Dec. 697. Likewise as to manure made upon a dairy farm under a lease. Lewis v. Lyman, 22 Pick. [Mass.] 437; Wain v. Connor, 5 Clark [Pa.] 164. It is immaterial that such manure is lying about in heaps about the barn or yard. Lassell v.

husbandry, or from produce obtained elsewhere, or upon demised premises that are not agricultural, or made in connection with some trade, as in a livery stable, is removable by the tenant.[96]

Straw.—So, straw, being a part of the crop, is removable by the tenant.[97]

§ 8. Mixed cases.—Where chattels are annexed to the freehold by the tenant partly for purposes of trade, and partly to enjoy the profits of the land, or for domestic convenience, there is constituted a "mixed case," as it is generally termed. In such cases, the same principles of law are applicable as to trade fixtures, if it is clearly discernible that the annexed article is in some manner used for carrying on a species of trade. This principle was early recognized in the English cases, first, in respect to steam engines and machinery used in collieries, where it was evident that the annexed articles were used both for the enjoyment of the estate and for carrying on a species of trade, and then to a cider press and mill.[98] So, the principle has been extended to machines and erections placed by a tenant upon the realty for the purpose of procuring or preparing minerals, lime, alum, pottery, and manufacturing bricks.[99] So, it extends to hothouses, greenhouses, trees, shrubs, etc., placed by a nurseryman or gardener on or in the realty.[100] It includes buildings erected by the tenant on the demised premises, and used partly for trade purposes, and partly for domestic purposes. In Van Ness v. Pacard,[101] a tenant for

Reed, 6 Me. 222; Sawyer v. Twiss, 26 N. H. 345. Or that it is made from the hay of the tenant raised upon the demised premises. Wetherbee v. Ellison, 19 Vt. 379. Manure made from some hay and some grain brought upon the premises from without, does not entitle it to be removed by the tenant if it be commingled with manure made from the produce of the land. Lewis v. Jones, 17 Pa. 262, 55 Am. Dec. 550; Lassell v. Reed, 6 Me. 222. But manure not made in the usual course of husbandry, and in connection with some trade, is removable by the tenant. So held in Gallagher v. Shipley, 24 Md. 418, 87 Am. Dec. 611, where the land was used for a corral for herding large numbers of cattle brought there to be slaughtered for use in the armies of the United States, and the cattle were fed with fodder from abroad. [Accords, 2 C. L. 681, n. 52.] Likewise in Carroll v. Newton, 17 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 189, where a tenant of a house, barn, grocery, and garden used the barn for keeping 18 or 20 head of horses, and fed them with provender brought from without. Manure made upon premises in connection with a livery stable is removable. Daniels v. Pond, 21 Pick. [Mass.] 367, 32 Am. Dec. 269. Manure made by the cattle of a tenant from hay brought from the tenant's own farm is removable. Corey v. Bishop, 48 N. H. 146. Manure made in the business of raising hogs, which are not fed upon the products of the land, is removable. Snow v. Perkins, 60 N. H. 493, 49 Am. Rep. 333. See, also, Elting v. Palen, 60 Hun, 306, 14 N. Y. Supp. 607; Bonnell v. Allen, 53 Ind. 130.

96. See preceding note. Manure produced on the leased premises by stock fed on fodder produced elsewhere, in excess of that maintainable by the products of the premises, is removable. Pickering v. Moore, 67 N. H. 533, 31 L. R. A. 698.

97. Straw, being part of the crop, and there being no general usage requiring that it revert to the land, is removable by the tenant. Fobes v. Shattuck, 22 Barb. [N. Y.] 568; Fletcher v. Herring, 112 Mass. 382; French v. Freeman, 43 Vt. 93; Bonnell v. Allen, 53 Ind. 130.

[Straw is not to be considered as manure where provisions for removal of crops forbid such implication. Garrett v. Brant, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 509, cited ante, Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.]

98. See Lawton v. Lawton, 3 Atk. 13; Dudley v. Warde, Amb. 113; Elwes v. Maw, 3 East, 38. In Holmes v. Tremper, 20 Johns. [N. Y.] 29, a cider mill and press, erected by a tenant holding from year to year, at his own expense, and for his own use, was removable by a tenant as being an accessory to the trade of making cider.

99. In Merritt v. Judd, 14 Cal. 560, a steam engine and pump, used for the purpose of working a quartz ledge in the getting out of gold, the engine and pump being fastened in and to the ground, were held removable. So in Beckwith v. Boyce, 9 Mo. 556, sheds erected by the tenant upon posts set in the ground for the purpose of manufacturing brick were removable. See Tyler, Fixt. pp. 321-327; Amos & Ferard, Fixt. p. 60.

100. Miller v. Baker, 1 Metc. [Mass.] 27; King v. Wilcomb, 7 Barb. [N. Y.] 263; Brooks v. Galster, 51 Barb. [N. Y.] 196; Maples v. Millon, 31 Conn. 598; Fox v. Brissac, 15 Cal. 223.

101. In Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. [U. S.] 137, 7 Law. Ed. 374, Justice Story said; "It has been suggested at the bar that this exception in favor of trade has never been applied to cases like that before the court, where a large house has been built and used in part as a family residence. But the question whether removable or not does not depend upon the form or size of the building, whether it has a brick foundation or not, or is one or two stories high, or has a brick or other chimney. The sole question is whether it is designed for purposes of trade years, a carpenter by trade, erected a building for the purpose of carrying on the business of a dairyman and of a carpenter, and for a place of residence for his family and servants engaged in the business. The court there stated that the fact that the building was used as a residence, as well as for trade purposes, did not invalidate the exception in favor of tenants as to trade fixtures. [The most recent application of these rules has been to a school house erected by the public on leased ground.[102]]

LARCENY.

§ 1. Common law larceny.[1]—Larceny is the felonious taking and carrying away[2] of the personal property[3] of another[4] without his consent,[5] and with intent or not. A tenant may erect a large, as well as a small, messuage, or a soap boilery of one or two stories high, and on whatever foundation he may choose. * * * Then, as to the residence of the family in the house, this resolves itself into the same consideration. If the house were built principally for a dwelling house for the family, independently of carrying on the trade, then it would doubtless be deemed a fixture, falling under the general rule, and immovable. But if the residence of the family were merely an accessory for the more beneficial exercise of the trade, and with a view to superior accommodation in this particular, then it is within the exception. There are many trades which cannot be carried on well without the presence of many persons by night as well as by day. It is so in some valuable manufactories. It is not unusual for persons employed in a bakery to sleep in the same building. Now, what was the evidence in the present case? It was 'that the defendant erected the building before mentioned with a view to carry on the business of a dairyman, and for the residence of his family and servants engaged in that business.' The residence of the family was then auxiliary to the dairy; it was for the accommodation and beneficial operation of this trade. Surely it cannot be doubted that in a business of this nature the immediate presence of the family and servants was or might be of very great utility and importance. The defendant was also a carpenter, and carried on his business as such in the same building. It is no objection that he carried on two trades instead of one. There is not the slightest evidence of this one being a mere cover or evasion to conceal another, which was the principal design; and, unless we were prepared to say (which we are not) that the mere fact that the house was used for a dwelling house, as well as for a trade, superseded the exception in favor of the latter, there is no ground to declare that the tenant was not entitled to remove it. At most it would be deemed only a mixed case, analogous in principle to those before Lord Chief Baron Comyns and Lord Hardwicke, and therefore entitled to the benefit of the exception."

102. [Hayward v. School Dist. [Mich.] 102 N. W. 999 discussed ante, Landlord and Tenant, § 5 F.].

1. See 4 C. L. 410.

Definitions: Larceny is a felonious taking and carrying away of the personal goods or chattels of another with intent to deprive the owner of his property therein and to appropriate the same to the use of the taker. Ladeaux v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1048, citing 2 C. L. 696. The felonious stealing, taking, carrying, leading or driving away the personal property of another. People v. Cleary [Cal. App.] 81 P. 753. The felonious stealing or taking away of the personal property of another. People v. Proctor [Cal. App.] 82 P. 551.

2. Asportation a necessary element. Ladeaux v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1048. A trespass is essential to constitute larceny, while in embezzlement this is not necessary, but a fiduciary relation must be shown. State v. Finnegean [Iowa] 103 N. W. 155; State v. Browning [Or.] 82 P. 955.

3. Crude turpentine which has run from the trees into boxes cut into them to serve as receptacles therefor is a chattel, and hence is the subject of larceny. Dickens v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 14. One who by his wrongful acts converts a fixture into personalty and, with larcenous intent, forthwith carries it away without the consent of the owner, is guilty of larceny. Rule was different at common law. Junod v. State [Neb.] 102 N. W. 462. One cutting or tearing away wire, attached to posts for the purpose of fencing public land for temporary use as a pasture, particularly where evidence shows that it never became a fixture. Id.

4. Must be ownership in some person other than defendant. People v. Cleary [Cal. App.] 81 P. 753. Master of vessel accountable to owner and crew held to have a special property in funds stolen within the meaning of Rev. Laws, c. 219, § 9. Commonwealth v. McDonald [Mass.] 73 N. E. 852. The possession of a carrier constitutes sufficient ownership as against the wrongdoer. State v. Mintz, 189 Mo. 268, 88 S. W. 12.

5. Nonconsent necessary. Ladeaux v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1048.

to convert it to the use of the taker.[6] There is no larceny where the taking is under a bona fide claim of ownership,[7] but it is larceny if one takes his own property from another to whom he has delivered it upon any bailment, with intent to charge the bailee with its value.[8] One pledging hired property, with the intention of redeeming and restoring it to the owner, and having a fair and reasonable intention of so doing, is not guilty of larceny.[9] It is not necessary that there be a sale of the property in order to establish a conversion.[10]

One receiving stolen property from the thief knowing it to have been stolen, but without having in any way participated in the crime, cannot be convicted of larceny,[11] and one slaughtering hogs stolen by another is not a principal, but an accessory.[12]

The distinction between larceny and false pretenses is that to constitute the former the owner must not have intended to part with his title to the property, while in the case of the latter crime he does intend to part with his title, but such intention is brought about through fraud.[13] The offense is larceny though the taking is

6. A felonious intent to convert the stolen property to the defendant's own use is a necessary element. Ladeaux v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1048, citing 2 C. L. 696. No theft where defendant took pig at prosecutor's request, and afterwards told him that it was his, and he could have it if he desired Womack v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 1015. Where the defendant entertained the felonious intent of stealing the property and directed another person to do such acts as would result in obtaining it, without informing him as to his intent, and by reason of the commission of such acts obtained possession of the property and converted it to his own use, he was guilty of larceny though the person acting as his instrument had no felonious design or intent. Intent of defendant, in such case, accompanies the other person's acts. State v. Mintz, 189 Mo. 268, 88 S. W. 12.

7. Miller v Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 321; Patterson v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 489; State v. Wasson, 126 Iowa, 320, 101 N. W. 1125.

Held not to be larceny: If defendant dipped turpentine under the honest belief that it was within his employer's land line. Dickens v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 14. Taking of lightning rods openly and under claim of right under a written contract in accordance with the terms of which they were put up. Brokaw v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 801. Evidence showing that defendant's mother, during his absence, authorized her son-in-law to sell a cow to prosecutrix, which he did, that defendant on his return demanded that the cow be delivered to him by the purchaser, informed the latter that the cow was his and that he was coming after it, went to the purchaser's house in the daytime and demanded it, and got possession of it under a claim of ownership, held not to show a fraudulent taking, and hence not to sustain a conviction. Matura v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 648. Taking cattle in good faith under the mistaken belief that one is entitled to do so by virtue of an agreement which in fact refers to certain other cattle. State v. Strodemier [Wash.] 82 P. 915.

8. Defendant may be convicted of larceny of oil from pipe line under indictment laying the property in the pipe line company as owner, though the company holds a part of it as bailee for defendant's wife, of whose wells he is the manager. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

9. Is not a conversion. Failure to so instruct held error. Blackburn v. Commonwealth [Ky.] 89 S. W. 160.

10. Place of theft of horses which one hires on a false pretext as to where he is going to drive them, and with intent to appropriate them to his own use, is where he obtains possession of them, and not where he attempts to sell them, such attempt being merely evidence of his intent and purpose at the time of obtaining possession of them. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 523, 87 S. W. 831.

11. State v. Bartlett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 59.

12. Wesley v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 802.

13. The fact that the owner intends to part with the title to the property and not merely the possession, marks the distinction. Williams v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 875. Defendant held not guilty of larceny where he procured loan of money from one to whom he was engaged to be married through fraudulent representations as to his property and as to value of automobile for which he gave bill of sale as security, title to the money having been transferred to him. People v. Proctor [Cal. App.] 82 P. 551. It is larceny if possession is obtained with felonious intent through fraud, conspiracy, or artifice, where the title remains in the owner, but false pretenses if the title as well as the possession is parted with. People v. Delbos, 146 Cal. 734, 81 P. 131. Defendant held guilty of larceny where she made a bargain with owner of house to sell it to prosecutrix for $90, represented to her that she had purchased it for her for $500, and at her request got $400 from a trustee of prosecutrix for purpose of making a part payment, and thereafter delivered a bill of sale, previously prepared by the owner, purporting to sell the house to prosecutrix, it appearing that it was defendant's intention from the beginning to convert all but $90, and that prosecutrix did not intend to part with her title to the money. Id.

with the consent of the owner, if defendant, at the time of coming into possession of the property, entertains the felonious intent not to return it, but to wholly appropriate it or convert it to his own use,[14] or if possession is obtained for a particular purpose, with a fraudulent intent, then existing, to use such possession as a means of converting the property to the use of the taker, followed by such a conversion,[15] or if the possession is obtained through fraud, or a trick, or device, or under a false pretense of a bailment, with intent on the part of the person obtaining it to convert the property to his own use and the owner intends to part with his possession only, and not with his title.[16] So, too, one having the bare charge or custody of goods belonging to another may be guilty of larceny by fraudulently converting the same to his own use, though he had no fraudulent intent when he received them, since the legal possession in such case remains in the owner.[17]

The same act may sometimes amount to larceny at common law and embezzlement under the statute in which case the defendant may be prosecuted under either charge.[18] If the accused in the same transaction commits both simple larceny and larceny after trust, he may be prosecuted and convicted for the former.[19] If the

14. As where defendant hired a horse by false pretenses with such intent, and immediately disposed of the same. Bradley v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 873. Evidence held to show felonious intent. Id. If one obtains possession of property through fraud with a design to steal it. Williams v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 875. There must, however, exist at the time an animus furandi. Id.

15. Blackburn v. Commonwealth [Ky.] 89 S. W. 160. An actual conversion must be shown as well as such a fraudulent intent. Failure to give instruction requiring jury to find such a conversion held error. Id.

16. If the possession is fraudulently obtained with intent on the part of the person obtaining it to convert the property to his own use, and the owner intends to part with his possession merely and not with his title. State v. Mintz, 189 Mo. 268, 88 S. W. 12. Held larceny where defendant procured one who had previously been employed by a dray company, authorized to receive goods from a common carrier for a particular consignee, and who was known to the servants of the carrier to have been so employed, to go to the depot of the carrier, after his employment by the dray company had ceased, and procure a load of shoes belonging to such consignee, and to deliver them to another person, the shoes having been delivered by the carrier under the mistaken belief that such person was still in the employ of the dray company. Id. Cannot be contended that, in delivering the goods, the carrier surrendered its entire or special ownership, and hence that the offense was false pretenses, since carrier was only authorized, and only intended, to deliver a bare possession for the purpose of having the goods delivered to the consignee. Id. If one obtains possession of goods or money by trick or fraud, or under false pretense of a bailment, with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, and the owner intends to part with the possession but not the property, the possession is obtained unlawfully and the subsequent appropriation in pursuance of the original intent is larceny. Conversion of money given defendant to settle criminal prosecution, which he said he had done. Martin v. State [Ga.] 51 S. E. 334. When persons conspire to cheat another under color of a bet, and he simply deposits a stake with one of them, not meaning thereby to part with the ownership therein, they, by taking the money, commit larceny, even though they are afterwards, by fraud, made to appear to win. Prosecutor's evidence held to bring the case within the rule. Instructions approved. Johnson v. State [Ark.] 88 S. W. 905. If, however, he bets his money to win or lose, intending to part with its title and possession, even though induced to do so by false representations pursuant to a conspiracy, the subsequent taking of it is not larceny. Instructions held to protect defendant's rights in this regard. Id. His consent, after the race which is the subject of the bet has been run, that the stakeholder may keep the money until it can be run over again does not prevent the crime from being larceny if given after the consummation of the crime, but if procured before its consummation, and as a matter of false inducement up to that point, the rule is otherwise. Instructions approved. Id. Defendant held guilty of larceny where, through fraud and artifice, he obtained possession of money for the ostensible purpose of holding it as a stakeholder on a bet, but with the intention of appropriating it to his own use in any event. State v. Ryan [Or.] 82 P. 703.

17. Williams v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 875. Finder of purse delivered it to defendant's wife, who promised to return it if it did not belong to defendant. Defendant claimed it and kept it, when in fact it did not belong to him. Held guilty of larceny, both the title and legal possession being in finder as against him. Id. Persons inducing public to subscribe money to be used in a wheat deal are bailees for a particular purpose, and if they misappropriate it, are guilty of larceny, since title remains in bailor. People v. Kellogg, 94 N. Y. S. 617.

18. People v. Kellogg, 94 N. Y. S. 617.

19. Where evidence shows him guilty of that offense, and common-law rule of merger of crimes, where one is a misdemeanor and the other a felony, does not prevail. Martin v. State [Ga.] 51 S. E. 334.

taking is at one time, or if the articles are all taken as the result of a single purpose or impulse, though the asportation is at intervals to better suit the convenience of the taker, the value of all articles taken may be added together in estimating the degree of the offense,[20] but if the takings are separate and distinct the rule is otherwise.[21] The nature of the transaction must determine whether there was one or a series of offenses.[22]

§ 2. Statutory larceny, theft, etc.[23]—In many states statutes especially provide for the punishment of persons stealing domestic animals,[24] or privily stealing from the person.[25] In some states embezzlement of the property of another,[26] the conversion of personalty obtained under a contract of hiring, or under false pretenses,[27] or the selling or disposing of the annual products of farm lands upon which there is a landlord's lien, is made larceny.[28]

§ 3. Indictment and prosecution.[29] A. Indictment.[30]—As in the case of other crimes, the indictment must charge only a single offense.[31] All the neces-

20, 21. Weaver v. Commonwealth, 27 Ky. L. R. 743, 86 S. W. 551.

22. Instruction held erroneous. Weaver v. Commonwealth, 27 Ky. L. R. 743, 86 S. W. 551.

23. See 4 C. L. 412.

24. Stealing of a female colt is covered by Pen. Code, § 444, making it grand larceny to steal a mare. Miller v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 321. Sess. Laws 1895, p. 104, c. 20, art. 1, § 1, providing that anyone stealing certain animals shall be guilty of a felony, creates a purely statutory crime distinct from larceny as defined by statutes of 1893. Woodring v. Territory [Okl.] 81 P. 631. 2 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 7113, making it an offense to steal certain named animals and providing a punishment therefor, is not repugnant to § 7108, defining grand larceny, and does not operate to repeal it so as to make the stealing of such animals a separate offense. State v. Klein, 38 Wash. 475, 80 P. 770.

25. In order to convict under Cr. Code, § 152, it must appear that the property was secretly and privately taken from the person. State v. Major, 70 S. C. 387, 50 S. E. 13.

26. See, also, Embezzlement, 5 C. L. 1093, B. & C. Comp. § 1805, providing that one embezzling the property of another shall be guilty of larceny, classifies embezzlement as statutory larceny, and hence it is cognizable by a municipal court having jurisdiction of prosecutions for larceny. State v. Browning [Or.] 82 P. 955.

27. That a prosecution may be maintained under Pen. Code 1895, art. 877, providing that one fraudulently converting personalty of which he has obtained possession under a contract of hiring shall be guilty of theft, does not prevent its being maintained under Id. art. 861, making one disposing of another's personalty obtained under false pretenses, or with intent to deprive the owner of its value and to appropriate the same to his own use guilty of theft. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 523, 87 S. W. 831. The same transaction may be an offense under both articles, the distinction between them being that under art. 861 the fraudulent intent must exist at the time of obtaining possession of the property, while under art. 877 it may be formed later. Id.

28. In Iowa a tenant of farm lands who, with intent to defraud, sells or disposes of any of the grain or other annual products thereof upon which there is a landlord's lien for rent, without the landlord's consent, is guilty of larceny. Acts 29th Gen. Assem. p. 106, c. 146, § 1. State v. Ashpole [Iowa] 104 N. W. 281. Each sale or disposal constitutes a separate offense. Id.

29. See, also, Indictment and Prosecution, 4 C. L. 1.

30. See 4 C. L. 412.

31. Where the statute prohibits the charging of more than one offense in an indictment, the state will be required to elect between counts charging larceny by the embezzlement of money by a bailee and larceny of the money by feloniously stealing, taking, and carrying it away, notwithstanding a statute declaring embezzlement by a bailee to be larceny. The two crimes are essentially different. State v. Finnegean [Iowa] 103 N. W. 155. Under Acts 29th Gen. Assembly, p. 106, c. 146, § 1, declaring that any tenant of farm lands who, with intent to defraud, sells or disposes of any grain or other annual products thereof on which there is a landlord's lien for rent without the landlord's consent, is guilty of larceny, each sale is a separate offense, and hence an indictment charging a sale of grain on a certain date, "and at various and other times and dates," without charging that such dispositions were a part of the same transaction, and in furtherance of a single design to defraud, is bad for duplicity. State v. Ashpole [Iowa] 104 N. W. 281. Indictment, the first four counts of which charge embezzlement, made larceny by the code, the next two counts being the same except that they allege ownership of the money to have been in a corporation instead of individuals, the seventh count charging common-law larceny, and the eighth the obtaining of the money pursuant to a conspiracy, held not to charge more than one crime within Code Cr. Proc. §§ 278, 279, permitting same crime to be charged in separate counts, all the counts specifying the larceny of the same money and naming the same persons as defendants. People v. Kellogg, 94 N. Y. S. 617. Indictment charging defendant with grand larceny for the theft of sheep of a value exceeding $30 is not bad for duplicity as charging two separate offenses, one the stealing of personalty of the value of $30 or more,

sary elements of the crime must be alleged[32] in ordinary and concise language, without repetition, and in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended.[33]

The property must be described with reasonable certainty.[34] A general description is sufficient if accompanied by an allegation that a more particular one cannot be given for some sufficient reason.[35] If the larceny of several articles is charged, a conviction may be had on proof of the taking of any one of them.[36]

The stealing of articles belonging to two or more persons at the same time and place constitutes but one offense, and may be so charged.[37] It must, however, be alleged that the larcenies were committed at the same time and place.[38]

The ownership of the property, if known, must be laid in some person or persons[39] other than the defendant,[40] and must be proven as alleged.[41] If there be declared to be grand larceny by 2 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 7108, and the other the stealing of animals, made an offense by Id. § 7113. The two are not separate offenses. State v. Klein, 38 Wash. 475, 80 P. 770.

32. An indictment under Acts 29th Gen. Assem. p. 106, c. 146, § 1, prohibiting the fraudulent sale by a tenant of farm lands of any product thereof on which there is a landlord's lien for rent must aver that the tenancy is one of farm lands (State v. Ashpole [Iowa] 104 N. W. 281), though the grain is alleged to have been grown "on the premises known as the Watts farm." Cannot be aided by intendment, but the essential facts must be set out and averred (Id). Indictment held on its face to have sufficiently set forth, with technical precision, enough to charge the defendant with larceny. Commonwealth v. McDonald [Mass.] 73 N. E. 852.

33. Code, § 5280. State v. Finnegean [Iowa] 103 N. W. 155. Under Rev. Laws c. 218, § 38, it is sufficient to aver directly that the person accused did steal, without descriptive averments of asportation, or the means used to obtain possession of the property. Commonwealth v. McDonald [Mass.] 73 S. E. 852. B. & C. Comp. § 1805, providing that one embezzling the property of another shall be guilty of larceny, does not blend those crimes so as to require indictment charging embezzlement to aver that defendant "took, stole, and carried away" the goods converted. State v. Browning [Or.] 82 P. 955.

34. Indictment charging the fraudulent taking and carrying away of "one bill of the lawful currency of the United States of America, of the denomination of $50, the personal property of" a named person, sufficiently describes the property. Knight v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 592. Stolen watch held sufficiently described, and larceny properly alleged, the indictment following the language of Pen. Code 1895, § 155. Patterson v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 489. No variance where it was alleged that defendant stole "one double-case silver watch" and evidence showed that watch was being repaired, that works had been taken from the case, and that defendant removed both the works and the case. Id. Proof of the larceny of bank notes held not a fatal variance from an indictment charging larceny of "certain money, the same being the lawful money of the United States," of a specified value. State v. Finnegean [Iowa] 103 N. W. 155. Words "of the United States" may be disregarded as surplusage. Id. Information describing property as "two certain mares" of a specified value, then and there being the property of a named person, held sufficient under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 6840. State v. Shuck, 38 Wash. 270, 80 P. 444.

35. Description of steer, "a more particular description of which the informant was not then able to give," held sufficient. State v. Mumford [Kan.] 79 P. 669.

36. Proof of the felonious taking of the property to an amount greater or less than averred will sustain a conviction. Larceny of numerous articles, feloniously taken in same transaction, may be charged in the same count, and defendant convicted on proof of such taking of any one of them. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615. In cases of theft from the person it is sufficient to show that any part of the money alleged in the indictment to have been stolen was taken. Fact that all of that alleged was not taken does not constitute a variance. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 332.

37. State v. Clark [Or.] 80 P. 101.

38. Is no presumption that they constitute a single crime because they are charged to have been committed on the same day and in the same county. State v. Clark [Or.] 80 P. 101. Indictment for stealing horses from two persons held sufficient in this regard. Id.

39. Buffington v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 19; State v. Wasson, 126 Iowa, 320, 101 N. W. 1125; State v. Loomis [Iowa] 105 N. W. 397. In alleging ownership it is not necessary to use the exact words of the statute, equivalent ones being sufficient. Indictment under Act March 3, 1875, 18 St. 479; Supp. Rev. St. v. 1, (2d Ed.) p. 88, c. 144; Comp. St. 1901, p. 3675, charging defendant with stealing money "belonging to" the United States, held sufficient. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

40. People v. Cleary [Cal. App.] 81 P. 753. Allegation that defendant unlawfully and feloniously took certain money "from the person and possession" of a certain person by force held insufficient to show ownership, notwithstanding provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 1963, subd. 11, that it is presumed that things which are possessed by a person are owned by him, since indictment can never be aided by presumptions. Id.

41. Larceny of logs as defined by Code, any question as to the ownership, it is proper to insert counts charging it in as many ways as there are parties interested.[42] Evidence of larceny from an unnamed person will support an indictment charging larceny from a named person and divers unknown persons.[43] If ownership is alleged in a partnership, the names of the parners composing the firm must be given.[44] Goods in the hands of a bailee may be described either as his or as those of the bailor.[45]

Unless of the essence of the offense, no allegation of value is necessary.[46] The venue[47] and the purpose of the taking, if charged, must be proved as alleged.[48] Under the Missouri statute providing for the punishment of persons bringing stolen property into the state, the indictment need not allege that it was stolen elsewhere and brought into the state.[49]

Time need not be proven as laid provided the theft is shown to have been committed before the presentment of the indictment.[50] An indictment charging the § 4834. State v. Loomis [Iowa] 105 N. W. 397. Held no prejudicial variance between allegation that stolen goods belonged to the "G. E. C. Store," and evidence that they belonged to a partnership bearing another firm name, it appearing that the former was the name in which it advertised, did business and frequently indorsed checks. State v. Bartlett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 59. Where the evidence leaves it in doubt as to whether the stolen hog belonged to defendant, the prosecutor, or another, a charge authorizing acquittal in case of a reasonable doubt as to whether it belongs to prosecutor or defendant, without reference to the possibility of its belonging to a third person, is erroneous. Armstead v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 87 S. W. 824. Mere fact that father of alleged owner of animal was looking after it for his son, while in its customary range, held not to show a special ownership in him so as to prevent conviction under indictment alleging possession in the son. Parks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1064.

42. Averment is for purpose of identifying property. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

43. Though there is no evidence of larceny from the person named particularly under Code Cr. Proc. § 281, providing that an erroneous allegation as to the person injured is immaterial. People v. Kellogg, 94 N. Y. S. 617. Under same statute it is immaterial that ownership is alleged to have been in corporation which was not in fact the owner. Id.

44. Otherwise it is fatally defective. Buffington v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 19. Name "Stewart & Reece" imports a partnership, and indictment alleging ownership in them, without anything further, is bad on special demurrer directed to that defect. Id.

45. State v. Brown [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1117. Proof that the person alleged to be the owner has a special property in the stolen goods or holds them to do some act upon them, or in trust for the benefit of another, or for the purpose of conveyance, is sufficient to support the allegation of ownership. Id. Indictment for receiving silk stolen from a firm held supported by proof that they were "silk commission throwsters," who received raw silk from owners for purpose of dressing, finishing, reeling, and preparing it for shipment. Id.

46. In indictment for stealing domestic animals under Sess. Laws 1895, p. 104, c. 29, art. 1, § 1, no allegation of value is necessary. Woodrig v. Territory [Okl.] 81 P. 631. Information for grand larceny charging that defendant stole "about $80, lawful money," etc., held sufficiently certain as to value under Pen. Code §§ 957, 959, 960, nor could it be said that it failed to charge the larceny of more than $50, particularly in the absence of a special demurrer. People v. Peltin [Cal. App.] 82 P. 980.

47. That cow was stolen in P. county held not proved by evidence showing only that animal was accustomed to range there, and was seen there at certain time, followed by proof that she was long afterwards found in defendant's possession in another county, and that he then falsely claimed her as his own. Armstrong v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 319.

48. If the indictment charges that the property was taken for a particular purpose, a conviction cannot be had on evidence showing a taking for a different purpose. As where indictment charges theft of appearance bond by a surety for the purpose of avoiding a forfeiture and enforcement of its terms. Counts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 972.

49. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2362, providing that, where goods are stolen in another state and brought into Missouri, the person guilty of the larceny may be punished therefor in the latter state, and that in such case the larceny may be charged to have been committed, and that every such person may be indicted and punished, in any county into or through which the property may have been brought, held that where goods were stolen in Illinois and brought into Missouri it was not necessary for the information to allege those facts. State v. Mintz, 189 Mo. 268, 88 S. W. 12.

50. Where prosecutrix was not definite as to the time when the theft was committed, fixing it both before and after the presentment of the indictment, but her husband fixed it definitely at a date before the indictment, held, there was no variance, and the court properly refused to direct a verdict for defendant. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 332. Instruction using the language "at or about the time charged in the indictment," in referring to the taking, held not commission of the crime on divers days but specifying only one of them is good.[51]

A false pretext may be proved under an ordinary indictment for theft.[52]

Clerical errors will be disregarded.[53] If the information sufficiently alleges the offense of which defendant is convicted, he cannot complain that it does not sufficiently charge a higher offense of which he is not convicted.[54]

A count charging the receiving of stolen goods may be joined with one charging the larceny of the same goods by the same defendant.[55]

(§ 3) B. Admissibility of evidence.[56]—The ordinary rules of criminal evidence apply,[57] including those governing the admission of evidence as to defendant's identity,[58] his conduct on being accused,[59] his statements and admissions,[60] erroneous, where it appeared that theft occurred prior to the presentment, and no circumstances were shown making necessary the designation of a more specific time. Id.

51. A certain day being mentioned, the continuendo may be rejected as surplusage. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

52. Indictment under Pen. Code 1895, art. 861, need not allege it. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 523, 87 S. W. 831.

53. Fact that indictment for fraudulent conversion charges defendant with converting property to "is" own use instead of to "his" own use, held immaterial. Lewallen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 554, 87 S. W. 1159.

54. Cannot complain that it does not sufficiently charge robbery, where he is convicted of pocketpicking. State v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 947.

55. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

56. See 4 C. L. 414.

57. Evidence held admissible: Where defendant was accused of the larceny of money given to her to buy house for prosecutrix, she having previously made a bargain with the owner to sell it to prosecutrix for a much smaller sum, and there was evidence tending to show that defendant herself purchased it with the intention of reselling it to prosecutrix, question asked the latter on cross-examination tending to elicit statement whether she purchased from defendant or the owner, held improperly excluded. People v. Delbos, 146 Cal. 734, 81 P. 131. On trial for larceny of horse, where defendant claimed that he represented the owner in obtaining possession thereof from one who had taken it up as an estray, evidence of conversations between him and the owner tending to prove that defense. George v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 89 S. W. 1121. On prosecution for larceny of scarf pin, where evidence tended to show that defendant and two others blocked steps of a car from which prosecutor was alighting, and one of the others took the pin, evidence that defendant and the latter were acquainted prior to the theft. State v. McGee, 188 Mo. 401, 87 S. W. 452. Where defendant obtained money by representing that he needed it to pay the express charges on a corpse which he was bringing into the state, testimony of express agent that he did not transport a corpse on that day, without producing the books of the express company. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1075. On trial for theft of mule, testimony that on the night of the theft defendant came to her house, that on being refused admission he went toward the road, and that later she heard someone in the road say "whoa," and someone pass on horseback. Burch v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 265, 90 S. W. 168. Where evidence showed that stolen hog was a black sow, and meat corresponding to that of the lost animal was found in a tub on defendant's premises, together with the meat of a red hog which defendant testified belonged to the same litter as the black sow which he admitted killing, evidence as to the meat of the red hog and its weight, which was much greater than that of the stolen sow, to show the improbability that the two were of the same litter. Franks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 299, 87 S. W. 148. Where defendant testified that he went to the mint at unusual hours to check up pay rolls held competent for prosecution to show the length of time necessary to perform such work. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

Evidence held inadmissible: Of payment for hog made by defendant or his alleged accomplices in order to avoid threatened prosecution. Armstead v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 87 S. W. 824.

58. Testimony of prosecutor on question of identification held admissible for what it was worth, though it did not fully identify defendant. Trevenio v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 566, 87 S. W. 1162. Evidence that defendant was seen driving the stolen horse held not open to the objection that the witnesses did not sufficiently describe or identify him. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174.

59. On trial for theft from the person evidence as to silence of defendant when accused held admissible. State v. Major, 70 S. C. 387, 50 S. E. 13.

60. In prosecution for theft of watch from person, where it appeared that defendant snatched it from prosecutor's hands and was caught by an officer while running away, testimony of prosecutor and officer that former told latter, in defendant's presence of the theft and that defendant was the thief, and that defendant then said he was at a saloon and did not commit the theft, held admissible as res gestae. Nelson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 627, 88 S. W. 807. Testimony of prosecutor as to what the saloon keeper said respecting the investigation then made by him and the officer held properly excluded, the saloon keeper being present as a witness. Id. Evidence of defendant's witness as to statements of defendant and one of his companions to the prosecutor, and those of the prosecuting witness,[61] as to the commission of other crimes,[62] as to motive,[63] and the admission of expert evidence as to value.[64]

Evidence that defendant was in debt when the crime was committed[65] or that he had no money just before that time is admissible;[66] but not evidence that his credit was good, and that he could have borrowed money.[67]

Notice to produce is not necessary to enable the state to give secondary evidence of the contents of a bond last seen in defendant's possession and which he is charged with having stolen.[68]

Property shown to have been with that stolen when the crime was committed and to have been found in defendant's possession when he was arrested is admissible, though not included in that described in the indictment.[69]

The state may prove possession of the fruits of the crime by either of the co-defendants, even after the termination of an alleged conspiracy between them.[70]

(§ 3) C. Effect of possession of stolen property.[71]—Some courts hold that that they had killed the hog at a certain place, and that they proposed to go to that place and that prosecutor declined to do so, held original evidence of a different state of facts than that testified to by the prosecutor, though it also tended to impeach the latter's testimony, and a ruling limiting its effect to impeachment purposes was erroneous. Armstead v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 87 S. W. 824.

61. Statement of prosecutor that he had been robbed, but that he did not know where, or how anyone could have done it, held erroneously excluded. State v. Lockhart, 188 Mo. 427, 87 S. W. 457. In prosecution for stealing cattle, evidence that prosecutor told defendant that if he would take up four cattle left on the range the previous winter, he could have one of them, or 25 per cent of their proceeds, held admissible without proof that they were the identical cattle that he is charged to have stolen for purpose of showing absence of felonious intent. State v. Strodemier [Wash.] 82 P. 915. Questions in regard thereto held proper cross-examination, being directly connected with matters testified to by the witness on his examination in chief. Id.

62. Proof of extraneous crimes is admissible only when there is a dispute as to the identity of defendant, or some controversy as to his intent or motive, or to establish system or res gestae of the transaction. On prosecution for bringing stolen property into the state, admission of evidence that defendant had obtained money from another person in the same manner, held error, where his fraudulent intent was not controverted, and there was no controversy as to the method or system whereby he accomplished his fraudulent purpose. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1075; Davenport v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1077; Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1077; Davenport v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1078. In prosecution for larceny under color of a bet on a foot race, evidence of similar acts by defendant and his co-conspirators, both before and after the commission of the offense charged, held admissible to show criminal intent. Johnson v. State [Ark.] 88 S. W. 905. In prosecution for stealing appearance bond on which defendant was surety, evidence as to his living in adultery with the principal on the bond held inadmissible. Counts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 972. Where several felonies are connected together, forming part of one transaction, the one is evidence to show the character of the others. In prosecution for stealing oil from pipe line, evidence showing that oil pumped from wells of defendant's wife, of which he was the manager, was not their natural production, but that their apparent production included large quantities wrongfully taken from the pipe line, and showing the manner of such taking, etc., held admissible. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

63. The existence or nonexistence of a motive is immaterial where the guilt of the accused is clearly established, but such evidence is admissible as tending to show the intent with which the crime was committed. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

64. In a prosecution for larceny of a colt it is proper to allow experienced stockmen to state their opinion based on experience and observation of the conduct of the particular animals toward each other that it belongs to a particular mare which it has been following. Miller v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 321.

65. As tending to show motive. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

66, 67. People v. Peltin [Cal. App.] 82 P. 980.

68. Appearance bond. Counts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 972.

69. A mutilated and counterfeit coin clearly identified as having been taken from the cash register, from which the money is alleged to have been stolen, at the time the crime was committed, and found on defendant's person when he was arrested shortly thereafter, is admissible to connect defendant with the offense, though it is not lawful money of the United States which defendant is alleged to have taken. People v. Peltin [Cal. App.] 82 P. 980.

70. Prosecution for bringing stolen property into the state after having acquired it elsewhere by theft. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1075.

71. See 4 C. L. 415.

NOTE. Effect of possession of stolen money: Possession of money of the same kind the exclusive[72] possession of the stolen property immediately after the theft raises a presumption of guilt[73] and is sufficient to warrant a conviction, unless the attending circumstances or other evidence so far overcomes the presumption thus raised as to create a reasonable doubt in regard to the matter.[74] Others hold that a failure of defendant to explain his possession may be taken as evidence against him,[75] and that a reasonable explanation in his favor may be used as the basis of an acquittal unless it is shown to be false.[76]

(§ 3) D. Sufficiency of evidence.[77]—As in the case of other crimes the corpus delicti,[78] venue,[79] and the fact that the defendant committed the crime, may be shown by circumstantial evidence.[80] It is not necessary that the property alleged to have been stolen, or any part thereof, be shown to have been found in the defendant's possession.[81]

The nonconsent of the owner may be proved by circumstantial evidence or by admissions or confession of the accused,[82] or by evidence other than that of the owner, where his absence is satisfactorily accounted for.[83] Where the property is taken from the possession of an agent, proof that it was taken without his consent, in connection with other evidence satisfying the jury that it was taken without the owner's consent, is sufficient without the owner's testimony.[84] as that stolen is generally of slight, if any, weight as evidence to prove guilt, if money of that kind is in general circulation at that place; but it is of much greater significance if that kind of money is rarely seen in circulation at that place, and its value as evidence is further increased when both the money found and that stolen consists of a combination of pieces of such money. People v. Getty, 49 Cal. 583. See, also, People v. Melvane, 39 Cal. 614. Where money is not marked in any way, no presumption of law arises from its possession, but the fact is a circumstance which may be considered in connection with other circumstances as evidence of guilt. United States v. Candler, 65 F. 308. Such evidence is admissible, but it alone does not warrant a conviction. Kaiser v. State, 35 Neb. 704, 53 N. W. 610. See also State v. Nesbit, 4 Idaho, 548, 43 P. 66, Barker v. State, 126 Ala. 69, 28 So. 685, Thompson v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 511, 34 S. W. 629.—From note to State v. Drew [Mo.] 101 Am. St. Rep. 482.

72. Held exclusive. Flanagan v. People, 214 Ill. 170, 73 N. E. 347.

73. State v. Wasson, 126 Iowa, 320, 101 N. W. 1125. Code 1897, § 4836 does not raise a presumption of guilt from the mere finding of marked logs in defendant's possession, but their wrongful taking and ownership must first be established as alleged before any presumption arises. State v. Loomis [Iowa] 105 N. W. 397.

74. Presumption held not overcome. Flanagan v. People, 214 Ill. 170, 73 N. E. 347. Not necessary that his explanation be satisfactory. State v. Bartlett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 59.

75. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174.

76. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174. Instruction to the effect that, if defendant's explanation of the finding of the stolen property in his possession was reasonable and probably true, it should be taken as true and go to his acquittal, held to be in defendant's favor and not to erroneously state the law. Hilscher v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 713, 88 S. W. 227. Charge held to properly require the state to prove the falsity of defendant's explanation, if the same was reasonable and probable, and not to have imposed a greater burden on defendant than that imposed by law. Id. Evidence held to justify charge upon explanation given by defendant of the possession of recently stolen property. Parks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1064. Requested charge that accused was not called upon to explain his possession of the stolen horse, if such possession should be found, and therefore he would not be guilty, held properly refused, particularly where the evidence showed that he gave a false explanation. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174.

77. See 4 C. L. 416.

78. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

79. McCoy v. State [Ga.] 51 S. E. 279. Under Pen. Code 1895, § 155, making cattle stealing simple larceny, and providing that the thief may be indicted in any county into which he may carry the stolen goods, venue held sufficiently proven where accused was shown to have been unlawfully in possession of cattle in county where crime is alleged to have been committed, the day after the theft, even though it was not shown that they were actually taken while in that county. Id.

80. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

81. Money. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257.

82. State v. Bjelkstrom [S. D.] 104 N. W. 481.

83. Where owner could not be located, evidence showing that defendants took money from his pocket while he was drunk, and that he subsequently charged them with the crime and identified one of them, held to warrant conviction. Jones v. People [Colo.] 79 P. 1013.

84. Evidence held sufficient State v. Bjelkstrom [S. D.] 104 N. W. 481.

Where a national bank bill is produced at the trial and identified as a part of the money alleged to have been stolen, no proof of its value other than its introduction in evidence is necessary.[85]

Cases turning on the sufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction will be found in the note.[86]

(§ 3) E. Instructions.[87]—The usual rules as to instructions apply.[88] As in other criminal cases they should not assume the existence of facts in issue,[89] unless admitted or uncontroverted,[90] go to the weight of the evidence,[91] or express

85. Court will take judicial notice of their value. Joiner v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 151.

86. Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257. Burglary and larceny. Flanagan v. People, 214 Ill. 170, 73 N. E. 347. Simple larceny. Martin v. State [Ga.] 51 S. E. 334. To connect defendants with the crime and to sustain a conviction. Junod v. State [Neb.] 102 N. W. 462. Though circumstantial. Joiner v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 151. For privily stealing from the person. State v. Major, 70 S. C. 387, 50 S. E. 13. Clothing. Martin v. State [Ark.] 88 S. W. 962. Petit larceny of cloak. State v. Harrington [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 274. Coffee. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1142. Hog. Franks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 299, 87 S. W. 148; McGaha v. State [Ark.] 88 S. W. 983. Davis v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 389; Woodrig v. Territory [Okl.] 81 P. 631. Evidence that defendant obtained possession of horses on a false pretext as to where he was going to drive them, that he drove them in another direction to a point out of the state, and there attempted to dispose of them for less than their value, held to warrant conviction of theft under Pen. Code 1895, art. 861. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 523, 87 S. W. 831. Money. Ware v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 84 S. W. 1065. By bailee for a particular purpose. People v. Kellogg, 94 N. Y. S. 617. Steer. State v. Mumford [Kan.] 79 P. 669. Theft of watch from the person. Aladin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 327; Nelson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 627, 88 S. W. 807. Scarf pin. State v. McGee, 188 Mo. 401, 87 S. W. 452. Court held, under the evidence, not to have abused his discretion in refusing to set aside verdict of guilty of stealing tobacco. Gaines v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 78.

Evidence held sufficient: To establish ownership of cow. Armstrong v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 319. To show felonious intent. Miller v. Territory [Ariz.] 80 P. 321. Evidence as to ownership of personal property stolen and possession of house from which it was taken held to sustain allegations. Patterson v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 489. On prosecution for bringing stolen money into the state, to show with reasonable certainty that defendant brought in $50 of such money. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 1075. To authorize submission of case to jury. Horse stealing. State v. Shuck, 38 Wash. 270, 80 P. 444.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction: For larceny of cattle. Winchester v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1073. Hogs. Wesley v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 802; Womack v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 1015. Lightning rods. Brokaw v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 801. Money in house of prostitution, notwithstanding the fact that amount lost was returned by one of the defendants when threatened with arrest. State v. Lockhart, 188 Mo. 427, 87 S. W. 457.

Evidence held insufficient: To show that crime was committed, and ownership of logs. State v. Loomis [Iowa] 105 N. W. 397. To show that defendant did any act showing an intent either to take or convert the horse to his own use, and hence not to sustain conviction. Ladeaux v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1048. To show that certain witnesses who bought the coffee from defendant were accomplices. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1142. To show any guilty participancy or knowledge on the part of defendant of the taking of hose by another. Canaday v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 87 S. W. 346.

87. See 4 C. L. 416.

88. Instructions approved: As to right to convict of simple larceny under indictment charging larceny from the house. Patterson v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 489. As to claim of taking watch under bona fide claim of right. Id. As to obtaining money through trick with intent to appropriate it being larceny. State v. Ryan [Or.] 82 P. 703. Instruction held not open to the objection that it made the intent to appropriate sufficient to authorize a conviction without showing an actual appropriation. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 523, 87 S. W. 831. As to circumstantial evidence. Dimmick v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 257. As to necessity of finding stolen money in defendant's possession. Id.

Instructions held erroneous: As calculated to give the impression that mere knowledge that crime was in contemplation would constitute an aiding or abetting. State v. Bartlett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 59. Instruction as to effect of possession of stolen property criticised. State v. Bartlett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 59.

89. In prosecution for fraudulent conversion of horse of which defendant obtained possession under contract of hiring, charge held not objectionable as assuming the existence of such a contract. Lewallen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 554, 87 S. W. 1159.

90. Instruction that there was no question as to the ownership of the property held proper under the evidence. Commonwealth v. Cramer, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 141. Statement in charge that the prosecuting witness had testified on hearing before justice that defendant had denied the taking held justified. Id.

91. Instruction limiting effect of evidence of another crime to purposes of impeachan opinion as to its truth or falsity,[92] or comment on the failure of the accused to testify,[93] nor should they be vague, confusing, or misleading.[94]

They must be predicated on evidence in the case,[95] and submit all defenses as to which there is any evidence.[96] The charge will be construed as a whole.[97]

Holdings as to the necessity or propriety of giving instructions as to felonious intent,[98] the purpose for which the property was taken,[99] admissions and confessions,[1] accomplice testimony,[2] circumstantial evidence,[3] the presumption arising from the possession of stolen property,[4] principals and accessories,[5] and lesser degrees of the crime charged,[6] will be found in the note.

ment held objectionable. Counts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 972.

92. Instruction held not to involve expression of opinion as to truth of state's evidence. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

93. Statement that no one had denied the correctness of a witness' statement of a conversation with accused held not such a comment. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

94. Charge as to evidence of reputation held not misleading. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615. Instruction as to effect of an explanation by defendant of fact that stolen goods were found in his possession held not to be vague, confusing, or misleading. Hilscher v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 713, 88 S. W. 227.

95. Evidence held to warrant finding that defendant, in pursuance of previous understanding, joined with others in engaging attention of storekeeper, so as to give another an opportunity to steal tobacco, which he did, and hence court did not err in charging as to law bearing on that theory of the case. Gaines v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 78. On trial for larceny of horse, instruction that if jury should find that defendant was one of several interested in the larceny it would make no difference that the others were not indicted or on trial, held prejudicial error, there being no evidence on which to base it. George v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 89 S. W. 1121. There being no evidence of joint action in the commission of the alleged larceny, instruction calculated to impress jury with idea that it was the result of a criminal conspiracy held erroneous. State v. Lockhart, 188 Mo. 427, 87 S. W. 457.

96. Charge held not prejudicial as withdrawing the questions of intent and mistake, where they were fully and correctly submitted by other portions of the charge. State v. Bjelkstrom [S. D.] 104 N. W. 481. Charge held sufficiently broad to embrace defendant's defense that he was a receiver and did not participate in the actual theft. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1142. Charge held to properly submit defense based on theory that third person hired the horse from the owner and disposed of it to defendant. Lewallen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 554, 87 S. W. 1159.

97. In prosecution for larceny of colt, instruction referring to jury's knowledge of business of raising stock held not objectionable as authorizing them to base their verdict on their own knowledge rather than on the evidence. State v. Bjelkstrom [S. D.] 104 N. W. 481.

98. Where defendant's evidence showed that he lawfully took up hogs to keep them out of his cornfield, and subsequently formed the intent to appropriate them, refusal to charge that, if such was the case, he could not be convicted, held error. Veasly v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 274. Where evidence showed that if horse was stolen by defendant's alleged accomplice, he was a guilty participant in the taking, and that he afterwards joined said accomplice in stating untrue facts as to the ownership and control of it, held not error to refuse to instruct that, if accused did not intend to appropriate the horse to his own use, he should be acquitted. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174.

99. Evidence being circumstantial, held error not to instruct that defendant could not be convicted if he took the property for any other purpose than that stated in the indictment. Counts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 89 S. W. 972.

1. Charge on admissions or confessions held not called for by defendant's statements before the grand jury in nature of an alibi and entirely exculpatory. Trevenio v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 566, 87 S. W. 1162.

2. A mere showing that certain witnesses purchased the stolen coffee from defendant because it was cheap held not to require such a charge. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1142.

3. There is no error in failing to charge on circumstantial evidence where a witness testifies that he saw defendant take the watch from prosecutor's pocket. Aladin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 86 S. W. 327. In prosecution for fraudulently converting a horse of which defendant obtained possession under a contract of hiring, where the contract and defendant's possession are shown by positive evidence, the mere fact that owner sent horse to defendant by a servant, and cannot positively testify that it was delivered to defendant, does not require a charge on circumstantial evidence. Lewallen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 554, 87 S. W. 1159. Evidence that defendant was found in possession of the hog, without any showing as to how, when, or where he got possession, makes a case of circumstantial evidence and calls for a charge on that subject. Armstead v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 87 S. W. 824. Failure to charge on subject of circumstantial evidence held error where state's case depended mainly on such evidence to show taking. Veasly v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 274.

4. Refusal to instruct that presumption was overcome by evidence of defendant's good character held proper in view of the

(§ 3) F. Trial, sentence and review.[7]—The taking being proved, the intention with which it was done is for the jury.[8]

One indicted for robbery may be convicted of larceny,[9] and one charged with larceny from the house of simple larceny.[10]

A verdict of guilty need not specify the amount or value of the property stolen.[11]

The punishment for larceny is fixed by the statutes of the various states.[12] In order that defendant may avail himself of a statute providing for a lighter punishment in case the stolen property is voluntarily returned, the return must be voluntary and must have been made before he was detected as the thief and found in possession of the property.[13] Cases holding the punishment inflicted to be excessive will be found in the note.[14] evidence. People v. Peltin [Cal. App.] 82 P. 980. In view of evidence held proper to instruct as to effect of possession. Id.

LASCIVIOUSNESS; LATERAL RAILROADS; LATERAL SUPPORT; LAW OF THE CASE; LAW OF THE ROAD; LEASES; LEGACIES AND DEVISES; LEGAL CONCLUSIONS; LEGATEES; LETTERS; LETTERS OF CREDIT; LEVEES; LEWDNESS, see latest topical index.

5. Charges given held to render unnecessary a charge that evidence must show that defendant was a party to the original taking, and that fact that he might have been an accomplice, accessory, or receiver of the stolen property would not warrant his conviction for the theft. Trevenio v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 566, 87 S. W. 1162. Where the only evidence was circumstantial, consisting of evidence that the stolen property was found in the joint possession of several persons, instruction that all persons acting together in the commission of an offense are principals, whether all are actually present when the offense is committed or not, held reversible error. Armstead v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 87 S. W. 824. Failure to charge that if jury should find that defendant was not connected with the original taking they should acquit him held not reversible error, where evidence conclusively showed that if defendant's alleged accomplice took the horse, defendant was a guilty participant in the taking. Selph v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 267, 90 S. W. 174.

6. On prosecution for theft of coffee, failure to charge on misdemeanor theft of property of value of less that $50 held not error, where uncontradicted evidence showed that the value of the stolen property exceeded that amount. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1142. Evidence and indictment held to require instruction upon the offense of petit larceny. Weaver v. Commonwealth, 27 Ky. L. R. 743, 86 S. W. 551.

7. See 4 C. L. 417.

8. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 615. Whether defendant took crude turpentine under the honest belief that it was within his employer's land line, and whether the taking was felonious, though done openly, are questions for the jury. Dickens v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 14. Question whether defendant had taken the property on a purchase from a person whom he, in good faith, and on reasonable grounds, believed to be the owner, or on a colorable purchase with notice that it belonged to the prosecuting witness, held for the jury under the evidence. Commonwealth v. Cramer, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 141.

9. Under Code, § 4753, making it robbery to steal and take from the person of another with force and violence, or by putting in fear, any property that is the subject of larceny. State v. Wasson, 126 Iowa, 320, 101 N. W. 1125. Defendant may be convicted of pocketpicking or stealing from the person under an information charging robbery. State v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 947.

10. Where he is charged with "wrongfully, fraudulently, and privately taking the property from the house and carrying it away with intent to steal the same." Patterson v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 489. Defendant having been found guilty of simple larceny, the question of larceny from the house is out of the case, and assignments complaining of rulings on that subject need not be considered on appeal. Id.

11. Where indictment charges the taking of 2,000 barrels of oil. Commonwealth v. Dingman, 26 Pa. Super Ct. 615.

12. Act 1902, No. 107, § 5, p. 162, is constitutional in so far as it grades the offense of petty larceny and makes the same punishable by imprisonment in the parish jail, though unconstitutional in so far as it makes the larceny of objects of the value of $20 or over punishable by imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary. State v. Eubanks, 114 La. 428, 38 So. 407. Under this section no sentence of imprisonment in the penitentiary can be imposed for petit larceny of property less in value than $5. State v. Williams, 114 La. 940, 38 So. 686. As relates to the theft of property worth less than $5, treated by the statutes as a misdemeanor, the act is constitutional. Id. The right to impose a sentence of 2½ years for an attempt to commit larceny from the person held not affected by the indeterminate sentence act, St. 1895, p. 624, c. 504. Commonwealth v. O'Neil [Mass.] 74 N. E. 592.

13. Proof must show that he was aware of the detection. Ware v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 84 S. W. 1065. Held no voluntary return where defendant denied to the owner and an officer that he had money, found under circumstances charging him with no-

LIBEL AND SLANDER.

§ 1. Definition and distinctions, nature of tort, and persons liable.[15]—Libel is a false and unprivileged publication by writing, printing, picture, effigy, or other fixed representation to the eye, which exposes any person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, or which causes him to be shunned or avoided, or which has a tendency to injure him in his occupation.[16] To maintain an action for libel it is not necessary that an indictable offense should be imputed to the plaintiff.[17] To maintain an action for slander the words must either have produced a temporal loss to the plaintiff, by reason of special damage sustained from their being spoken, or they must convey a charge of some act criminal in itself and indictable as such, and subjecting the party to an infamous punishment, or they must impute some indictable offense involving moral turpitude.[18] To hold a principal responsible for slanderous words spoken by his agent, it must appear that the latter acted within the scope of his employment, and also that the words were spoken whilst the agent was employed in the actual performance of the duties of his principal.[19] Slanderers by concert may be sued jointly or severally,[20] but to hold an organization and its members the latter must as individuals have participated.[21] A corporation may be slandered or libeled in its business.[22] An action for slander or libel is personal and abates with the death of either party thereto,[23] but the cause of action merges in a judgment for plaintiff and does not thereafter abate on the death of defendant pending an appeal.[24]

§ 2. Elements of tort. A. Actionable words.[25]—Words may be actionable because they are defamatory on their face when they are actionable per se and without proof of actual damage, because of injury presumed, such as words imputing a crime,[26] or want of chastity,[27] words exposing one to scorn, ridicule or contempt,[28]

tice as to who was the owner, and only returned it when threatened with arrest. Id.

14. Sentence to 10 years in penitentiary for stealing horse worth $40 held excessive. George v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 89 S. W. 1121. Sentence of imprisonment for five years for stealing $40 worth of wire held excessive under the circumstances, and reduced to two years and a half, under authority given supreme court by Crim. Code, § 509a. Junod v. State [Neb.] 102 N. W. 462.

15. See 4 C. L. 418.

16. Statutory definition. Rev. Codes 1899, § 2715. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. Other definitions. Raymond v. United States, 25 App. D. C. 555; Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 565.

17. Barron v. Smith [S. D.] 101 N. W. 1105; Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365; Dowie v. Priddle, 116 Ill. App. 184.

18. Barron v. Smith [S. D.] 101 N. W. 1105; Sharp v. Nolan, 27 Ky. L. R. 326, 84 S. W. 1168.

19. International Text-Book Co. v. Heartt [C. C. A.] 136 F. 129.

20. Green v. Davies, 182 N. Y. 499, 75 N. E. 536.

21. Where an action is brought against an exchange and certain individual defendants, stating a cause of action against the exchange for publishing a written notice prohibiting plaintiff from representation on the floor of the Exchange, but there is no allegation that the individual defendants requested or procured the notice to be posted, it does not show the act of the exchange to be that of the individual defendants making them liable in an action for libel. Gutkes v. New York Produce Exch., 46 Misc. 133, 93 N. Y. S. 254.

22. Gross Coal Co. v. Rose [Wis.] 105 N. W. 225.

23, 24. Miller v. Nuckolls [Ark.] 89 S. W. 88.

25. See 4 C. L. 418.

26. Words clearly defamatory on their face, unambiguous and incapable of an innocent meaning. Dowie v. Priddle, 216 Ill. 553, 75 N. E. 243. The word "thief" in its ordinary acceptation imputes the crime of larceny and is actionable per se, but if the word be spoken of the plaintiff in relation to a past act or transaction known to the hearers and which was not larceny or in-or words injuring one in his business or occupation.[29] Words may be defamatory dictable as a crime the use of such word is not actionable. Merrill v. Marshall, 113 Ill. App. 447.

Element of crime lacking: At common law an action for slander will lie for malicious publication of a false accusation, although made in general words, if it imports that the person accused is guilty of a felony or other crime for which an indictment would lie. Feast v. Auer [Ky.] 90 S. W. 564. Under Pen. Code Cal. § 618, declaring every person who willfully opens or reads any sealed letter not addressed to himself, without being authorized so to do, guilty of a misdemeanor, a statement falsely charging plaintiff with having opened and read a letter addressed to defendant, without charging the same to have been willfully done, does not charge plaintiff with a crime and is not slanderous per se. Greene v. Murdock [Cal. App.] 81 P. 993.

A notice sent in compliance with law to plaintiff by county treasurer, auditor, and tax-ferret, stating that the officers had been apprised that moneys of plaintiff had been omitted from taxation and requiring her to appear and show cause why the same should not be assessed, held not libelous. O'Connell v. Shontz, 126 Iowa, 709, 102 N. W. 807.

Held actionable per se. Statement that a person had been "bribed" to testify as a witness. Atlanta News Pub. Co. v. Medlock [Ga.] 51 S. E. 756. Words importing felonious fraudulent breach of trust. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005. That the sheriff of the county, who is a candidate for re-election, had obtained from the county a certain sum of money upon a false and "imaginary" account for expenses, which he had never incurred Farley v McBride [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1036. "He is a thief." Line v. Spies [Mich.] 102 N. W. 993. "He (meaning plaintiff) is and has been behind the bars." Herhold v. White, 114 Ill. App. 186. A statement "I know I never got all my rent corn off of the ground that Joe Grimes had rented. The corn that Joe Grimes sold to Teidgen was my corn, and I am satisfied that Grimes stole my corn," made by defendant concerning plaintiff, did not necessarily mean that plaintiff was defendant's tenant on shares, and that the corn referred to had been in his possession, as tenant, undivided, and hence imported a larceny and was slanderous per se. Grimes v. Thorp [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 638. Where an alleged libel, published of and concerning plaintiff, recited "She went to a prison for an operation. She sank so low. She said it cost five dollars and that her screams were heard all over the block," the word "prison" being substituted by mistake for "person," the obvious meaning of the charge was that plaintiff had submitted to a criminal operation on account of which she had been sent to prison, and was libelous per se. Wuest v. Brooklyn Citizen, 102 App. Div. 480, 92 N. Y. S. 852. A charge that plaintiff stole material belonging to defendant is slanderous per se, and is not relieved from its slanderous import by a further statement that plaintiff used the material on some one else's work. Carpenter v. Hamilton, 185 Mo. 603, 84 S. W. 863. To charge the disbursement of excessive sums of money in promoting a campaign for public office with such words as "price paid," "bought and paid," and "cost." Scofield v. Milwaukee Free Press [Wis.] 105 N. W. 227. Newspaper article animadverting on the frequency of fires in plaintiff's building, and stating that another fire would cause his arrest if his explanation was unsatisfactory. Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634. Words "I have a man to prove that H. struck S. in front of his place of business, that he had two witnesses who had tracked the blood stains from H's shop to the place where S. fell unconscious; and that he had proof that H. was guilty of the murder of S." Haub v. Freiermuth [Cal. App.] 82 P. 571. "It would be interesting to know how far the money [political disbursements] went on its return journey," held to carry a libelous meaning. Scofield v. Milwaukee Free Press [Wis.] 105 N. W. 227.

Held not actionable per se. Statement that husband and wife were engaged in a conspiracy to cheat and defraud is not slanderous in so far as it charges conspiracy. Merrill v. Marshall, 113 Ill. App. 447. Calling a woman "a dirty, vile woman" does not charge her with adultery and is not actionable. Feast v. Auer [Ky.] 90 S. W. 564.

27. Under Rev. St. (Mo.) 1899, § 2863, declaring it actionable to publish falsely that any person has been guilty of fornication or adultery, a false charge of the commission of unlawful intercourse is slander, although the charge is made in language technically inaccurate in that it charges unmarried persons with adultery. Brown v. Wintsch, 110 Mo. App. 264, 84 S. W. 196. Under this statute it is actionable per se to falsely and maliciously charge a woman with being a whore. Israel v. Israel, 109 Mo. App. 366, 84 S. W. 453.

Calling a woman a "low woman" and a 'half negress" does not impute a want of chastity and is not slanderous per se. Kenworthy v. Brown, 45 Misc. 292, 92 N. Y. S. 34.

28. Defamatory per se. A complaint for libel based on defendant having charged plaintiff with having "held a war dance" and with having "carried on at a rate that would be a disgrace to the Comique or the worst dance hall in the city," which fails to show by way of inducement, colloquium, or innuendo the character or reputation of the "Comique" and the dance halls of the city, is bad. Wright v. Daniel [Wash.] 82 P. 139. Just prior to the general election in November, 1904, defendant published an article concerning plaintiff, who was president of the Democratic city committee of P., and others, members of such committee, first declaring plaintiff an eminent exemplar of "Democratic sentiment and Republican affiliations," stating that there was something radically wrong with Republican institutions and election methods when individuals of this character (referring to plaintiff and his associates) can, through election machinery, say to thousands of respectable voters that they cannot have their choice, etc., and asking "what respectable citizen is there that would select these men, by reason of some special circumstances attending their publication, in which case special damages must be proved.[30] Words which are harmless in themselves may be libelous in the light of extrinsic facts.[31] It is not necessary to render words defamatory and actionable that they shall make the charge in direct terms. It may be made indirectly, and is not for that reason the less actionable.[32] The libelous ar-who tell them who they must vote for, to represent him in a business transaction," held that such article was rather an indictment of the people at large than of the plaintiff and was not libelous. Barr v. Providence Telegram Pub. Co. [R. I.] 60 A. 835. A publication charging that plaintiff was a strike breaker, etc., and that he had accepted money from a labor organization in a certain city on an agreement to leave the city during a strike, but, after going outside the corporate limits, had immediately returned, tended to blacken plaintiff's reputation and excite ridicule or wrath against him. Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 565. To publish in a newspaper of a white man that he is colored. Flood v. News & Courier Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 637. Calling plaintiff "a liar and a poltroon." Byrne v. Funk, 38 Wash. 506, 80 P. 772. Published statements that an owner of injured cattle had hitched a team to them and dragged them some distance "breaking bones not already broken," and had left them in a dying condition for some time until they were killed by an officer of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Saunders v. Post Standard Pub. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 993. A publication alleging that a piano had been sold to a certain miner's union, which required great financiering, and that the agent thought it a great thing to bribe a committee, or officers, so as to sell a piano, and that such was the case, held libelous. Barron v. Smith [S. D.] 101 N. W. 1105. In a publication referring to plaintiff twice as a detective, and stating that when plaintiff was attacked by robbers he showed great cowardice and attempted to hide under the seat of the vehicle, the tendency of the words was to hold him up to scorn as a detective. Holland v. Flick, 212 Pa. 201, 61 A. 828. Publication stating that the subscribers were well acquainted with plaintiff and would not believe him under oath. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365. Article, which was wholly false, referring to an alleged intended marriage between plaintiff and G, and stated that all preparations having been made and the guests having assembled in a hall, the bridegroom failed to appear, whereupon plaintiff fell to the floor with a scream and the guests made a rush for the tables, which the waiters by virtue of their training cleared in "double quick time" and thereby saved the same. Kirman v. Sun Printing & Publishing Co., 99 App. Div. 367, 91 N. Y. S. 193.

29. Any written words are libelous which in any manner are prejudicial to another in the way of his employment or trade. Holland v. Flick, 212 Pa. 201, 61 A. 828. A complaint for libel, charging that plaintiff was a horseshoer and carriage manufacturer, and that defendant published of the plaintiff and certain others, who were members of the democratic city committee of P., a statement derogatory to them as politicians and containing an interrogatory asking what respectable citizen would select these men, who tell them who they must vote for, to represent them in a business transaction, etc., but containing nothing intimating that plaintiff was not skilled or competent in his business, was not libelous within Act 1647 (1 R. I. Col. Rec. p. 184), defining libel as a disparagement of a man in his trade or business. Barr v. Providence Telegram Pub. Co. [R. I.] 60 A. 835. A false publication, impairing the credit of a merchant or trader by imputing insolvency, dishonesty, or trickery touching his trade or occupation, is libelous per se. Ukman v. Daily Record Co., 189 Mo. 378, 88 S. W. 60. To say of one that he is a swindler when it is not spoken of him in his office or calling is not slanderous. Kuhne v. Ahlers, 45 Misc. 454, 92 N. Y. S. 41.

30. Where a person with fraudulent design or intent makes a false imputation for the express purpose of injuring the business of another, and where injury results as the natural and probable results thereof, an action will lie notwithstanding the words spoken are not in themselves defamatory. American Ins. Co. v. France, 111 Ill. App. 382. When the words spoken are susceptible in connection with other facts in evidence of a meaning other than the imputation of a felony, it is a question for the jury whether such words were intended to impute felony. Merrill v. Marshall, 113 Ill. App. 447. When the plaintiff in an action for libel has, by innuendo, put a meaning upon the alleged libelous publication which is not supported by its language or by proof, the court may nevertheless submit the case to the jury if the article is libelous per se. Wuest v. Brooklyn Citizen, 102 App. Div. 480, 92 N. Y. S. 852.

31. A publication which imputes to one language which is known to those among whom he lives to contain statements which are false is libelous. Pavesich v. New England Life Ins. Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 68. A publication of an advertisement of an insurance company containing a person's picture and a statement that the person has policies of insurance with the company, and is pleased with his investment, when in fact he has no such policies, is libelous, as having a tendency to create the impression among those who know the facts that the person whose picture is reproduced told a willful falsehood. Id. In an action for slander words are, in the first instance, to be taken in their natural sense, and the burden is on the defendant to show that they were spoken innocently. Israel v. Israel, 109 Mo. App. 366, 84 S. W. 453.

32. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. Language which in the circumstances under which it was used, would reasonably cause one to understand that it was intended to impute a crime. Line v. Spies [Mich.] 102 N. W. 993. The fact that a person's name was not mention-

ticle must refer to the plaintiff in its description or identification such as to lead those who know, or know of plaintiff, to believe that the article was intended to refer to plaintiff.[33] Falsity is essential.[34] The owner of property has a right of action against anyone who falsely and maliciously publishes statements in regard to the same or the title of plaintiff thereto.[35] Thus in respect of a corporation it is actionable per se to charge that it took advantage of a scarcity to exact unconscionable prices for its commodities.[36] A person claiming to have an interest in land being sold at a judicial sale may at such sale state facts as to the property about to be sold when such facts relate to title, possession, or the alleged right of possession thereof and such statements cannot be deemed a slander of the title.[37] An advertisement may be libelous if it falsely depreciates another's wares.[38]

(§ 2) B. Publication[39] is essential,[40] but the author of a libel is not liable for any damages caused by the publication of the same by the party libeled.[41] Every person is entitled to receive, inspect, and circulate a public document and one who gives or loans such document to another incurs no liability for the publication of a libel.[42]

ed in a publication, alleged to be a libel on him, does not render it the less libelous so long as the publication would be understood to refer to him. Barron v. Smith [S. D.] 101 N. W. 1106. A declaration for libel alleging the publication of a letter wherein the writer stated that his wife, with his child, had left him and had been "seen in the company of one C, a ticket agent" at a station named. "Couple this fact with the circumstance that my little girl was found in the home of the mother of this man C and then read between the lines for a moment and it is not hard for a person of ordinary intelligence to figure out the facts in the case"—with proper innuendoes, is sufficient on demurrer. Cross v. Flood, 77 Vt. 285, 59 A. 1018.

33. Butler v. News-Leader Co. [Va.] 51 S. E. 213.

34. Where insurance company advertised a quick "settlement" of a certain loss and another company advertised that though the loss had been "settled" it had not been "paid," and drew as a moral that it was better to insure in the latter company, held not libelous. P. L. Hennessey & Bro. v. Traders' Ins. Co. [Miss.] 39 So. 692.

35. If the owner in possession of property is damaged or annoyed by persons setting up adverse title to his own, he may bring an action for slander of title. Bossier's Heirs v. Jackson, 114 La. 707, 38 So. 525. In suit for slander of title, mere possession by the plaintiff will suffice as against one defendant disclaiming title and another defendant setting up a tax title absolutely null. Posey v. Ducros [La.] 39 So. 26. Where the alleged libelous writings are not libelous per se, there can be no recovery in the absence of proof that the plaintiff has sustained pecuniary injury by reason of their publication. Walker v. Best, 107 App. Div. 304, 95 N. Y. S. 151.

36. Gross Coal Co. v. Rose [Wis.] 105 N. W. 225.

37. Brady v. Carteret Realty Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 641, 60 A. 938.

38. Holmes v. Clisby, 121 Ga. 241, 48 S. E. 934, 104 Am. St. Rep. 103.

Note: Other cases of libel in advertisements, see St. Louis Clothing Co. v. J. D. Hail Drygoods Co., 156 Mo. 393, 56 S. W. 1112; Riley v. Lee, 88 Ky. 603, 21 Am. St. Rep. 358; Cox v. Strickland, 101 Ga. 482, 28 S. E. 655; Smith v. Smith, 73 Mich. 445, 41 N. W. 499, 16 Am. St. Rep. 594, 3 L. R. A. 52.

39. 40. See 4 C. L. 423.

NOTE: What is or is not a publication is often a vexed question. The mere sending of a letter is not a publication. 4 C. L. 423, n. 42. Yousling v. Dare 122 Iowa, 539, 98 N. W. 371. Nor the sending of a postcard if the plaintiff is not sufficiently connected with the defamatory matter. Sadgrove v. Hole 2 K. B. 1. But it is publication if the libelous communication is given to a member of plaintiff's family, as to a daughter (4 C. L. 423, n. 42), or to a father (Gaines v. Gaines, 109 Ill. App. 226). So also if the third person is an agent or confidential stenographer or clerk of defendant or plaintiff (Sun Assur. Co. v. Bailey, 101 Va. 443, 44 S. E. 692; Gambrill v. Schooley, 93 Md. 48, 48 A. 730, 86 Am. St. Rep. 414, 52 L. R. A. 87). So when the defendant discloses the matter to a friend (Snyder v. Andrews, 6 Barb. [N. Y.] 43), or where plaintiff turns over a libelous letter to an employer as the letter was directed jointly to plaintiff and employer (Schmuck v. Hill, 2 Neb. Unoff. 79, 96 N. W. 153); or plaintiff himself by reason of his illiteracy has the letter read by another to him (Allen v. Wortham, 89 Ky. 485, 13 S. W. 73). And it is also publication where the actionable words are given to those whose business it is to transmit or spread them, as telegraphers and printers (Monson v. Lathrop, 96 Wis. 386, 65 Am. St. Rep. 54; Baldwin v. Elphinston 2 W. Bl. 1037).—3 Mich. L. R. 78.

41. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850. Where an alleged libelous letter was written concerning plaintiff's character as a clergyman, defendants were not responsible for any damages resulting from plaintiff's publication of such letter by reading it from the pulpit of his church before the congregation. Id.

42. De Arnaud v. Ainsworth, 24 App. D. C. 167.

(§ 2) C. Malice.[43]—Either legal or actual malice must exist.[44] Actual malice though necessary at common law, if the words be not per se defamatory,[45] is eliminated by the statutory definition in Washington.[46] Legal or implied malice is shown by mere proof of the unathorized use of the defamatory words charged. Actual malice may be shown by the acts or conduct of the defendant immediately accompanying the utterance of the words or by the utterance at other times of other and similar defamatory words having reference to the subject-matter of the words charged.[47] Malice is presumed from utterance of words defamatory per se.[48] The acts of a wife in the absence of her husband are not binding on him for the purpose of showing malice on his part against plaintiff in an action for libel.[49] When a defamatory charge is made upon an unprivileged occasion, the law implies malice, but when the publication is privileged, the publication is presumed to have been made in good faith.[50]

§ 3. Privilege and justification.[51]—An absolute privilege is confined to cases where the public service or the due administration of justice requires that a party speak his mind freely, and no action can be maintained therefor, even though the words be false and maliciously spoken.[52] An official communication pursuant to law,[53] or the testimony of a witness in a judicial proceeding, which is pertinent to the issues, cannot be made the subject of an action for defamation.[54] Occasions when the privilege is qualified extend to a variety of communications made in good faith and from honest motives, upon any subject in which the party communicating has an interest or in reference to which he has a duty to some one having a like interest or duty. On such occasions a speaker is exempt from liability only so far as he speaks honestly and for some common good.[55] The characteristic feature of abso-

43. See 4 C. L. 421.

44. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

45. See 4 C. L. 421.

46. 2 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 7087. Byrne v. Funk, 38 Wash. 506, 80 P. 772.

47, 48. Carpenter v. Hamilton, 185 Mo. 603, 84 S. W. 863; Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365; Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 565; Israel v. Israel, 109 Mo. App. 366, 84 S. W. 453. A charge that if the libel was published in good faith the jury should consider such matters in mitigation of damages held erroneous. Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634. Words charging one of being guilty of larceny are actionable per se and carry with them the legal imputation of malice. Shockey v. McCauley [Md.] 61 A. 583.

49. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850.

50. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

51. See 4 C. L. 421.

52. Dictum in Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239.

Note: The absolute privilege extends to both legislative and judicial documents, especially since statutes passed in consequence of Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 A. & E. [Eng.] 1; Odgers Libel [3d Ed.] 191. In 18 Harv. L. R. 143, the opinion is ventured that an exhibition of such a report or document for mere motives of scandal or malice ought not to be covered by the rule of absolute privilege, and by analogy cites Searles v. Scarlett, 2 Q. B. [Eng.] 56. The absolute privilege attaching to public, judicial, or legislative proceedings, is distinct from the qualified privilege attaching to reports of such proceedings. See 18 A. & E. Enc. Law, [2 Ed.] 1023, 1042, 1045. See, also, post, note 58. Of the category of judicial proceedings absolutely privileged are testimony of a witness falsifying facts which, however, were relevant (Cooley v. Galyon, 109 Tenn. 1, 70 S. W. 607, 97 Am. St. R. 823, 60 L. R. A. 139. Contra, Ruohs v. Bocker, 6 Heisk. [Tenn.] 395, 19 Am. Rep. 598) and allegations in a pleading pertinent to the issues (Crockett v. McLanahan, 109 Tenn. 517, 72 S. W. 590, 61 L. R. A. 914, quoted 97 Am. St. Rep. 831, citing many cases, and see note Gorsuch v. Swan [Tenn.] 97 Am. St. Rep. 836).

53. O'Connell v. Shontz, 126 Iowa, 709, 102 N. W. 807. Official communications made by government officers pursuant to law and within their authority are absolutely privileged. De Arnaud v. Ainsworth, 24 App. D. C. 167.

54. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

55. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239; Echard v. Morton, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 579.

Held qualified: Charge of larceny made in causing arrest of employe held qualifiedly privileged. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239. Defendant in an action for slander had claimed that the borough authorities had entered upon his land without right. A deed was exhibited by the clerk of the council which it was alleged had been executed by defendant and under which the borough claimed the right to occupy the land. This deed purported to be acknowledged before plaintiff as justice of the peace. Defendant denied that he ever executed the deed in presence of plaintiff. Held that the denial was privileged. Echard v. Morton, 26 Pa.

lute, as distinguished from conditional, privilege, is that in the former the question of malice is not open and all inquiry into good faith is closed,[56] but in words of qualified privilege they must be shown.[57] Unless the court forbids publication or matter be unfit for publicity there is no harm in fairly reporting judicial proceedings,[58] but mere pleadings cannot be published without liability.[59] Defamatory communications made by a volunteer, without interest, confidential relation, or other duty than a moral or social one, are never privileged unless made in good faith and in an honest Super. Ct. 579. An attorney at law has a qualified or conditional privilege to make, during the progress of a trial, such fair comments on the circumstances of the case and the conduct of the parties in connection therewith as in his judgment seems proper. Atlanta News Pub. Co. v. Medlock [Ga.] 51 S. E. 756. The publication of proceedings of a college board of trustees, in the investigation of charges against one connected with the college, held qualifiedly privileged. Gattis v. Kilgo [N. C.] 52 S. E. 249. Where a railway company discharges a conductor, and it comes to its knowledge that there are still in his possession tickets of the company which were delivered to him while in its employment, which he at that time had a right to sell, and which he refuses or fails to surrender, the company has the right, in order to protect its own interest, to take such precautions as are reasonably necessary to prevent the use of tickets by persons not entitled to use them, and a publication under such circumstances, to persons whose knowledge is necessary to its protection, is authorized. Sheftall v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 646. Where defendant wrote a letter concerning plaintiff to the elders of a church, the pastorate of which plaintiff was about to assume, charging plaintiff with certain specific acts of impropriety, the letter was quasi privileged and defendant was, therefore, not liable for libel in the absence of proof that the charges were false and malicious. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850.

56. Atlanta News Pub. Co. v. Medlock [Ga.] 51 S. E. 756.

57. Where an alleged libelous newspaper article contained no statement that the plaintiff was guilty of burglary, and only purported to state the acts and theories and representations of the officers of the law in relation to plaintiff's pursuit, arrest, trial, and acquittal of such offense, and that she had associated with burglars and was connected with certain burglaries, the matter being quasi privileged, was not libelous per se. McClure v. Review Pub. Co., 38 Wash. 160, 80 P. 303

58, 59. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005. Ordinarily the publisher of a newspaper has no privilege as to what appears therein, but is liable for the same as any other person. The publisher of a newspaper, however, is authorized to publish a fair and honest report of the proceedings of a judicial trial, and is not liable on account of such publication in the absence of express malice. Atlanta News Pub. Co. v. Medlock [Ga.] 51 S. E. 756.

Note: The whole doctrine of privilege as applied to newspaper reports of proceedings is well summed up by Neil, J., in American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005.

"Unless the court has itself prohibited the publication, or the subject-matter of the trial be unfit for publication (Newell, Def., S. & L. p. 548, § 150) any one may, without incurring liability for damages, publish the proceedings of courts of justice (Newell, on Def., S. & L. p. 544, § 147); and the owners of newspapers occupy in respect of such publications the same status as that accorded to other persons, in no respect higher or different (Fenstermacker v. Tribune Pub. Co., 11 Utah, 439, 43 P. 112, 35 L. R. A. 611; Upton v. Hume, 24 Or. 420, 33 P. 810, 41 Am. St. Rep. 863, 21 L. R. A. 493; Newell, Def., S & L. p. 552, § 158; Brett, L. J., 46 L. J. C. P. [Eng.] 407; Bramwell, L. J., 5 Ex. D. [Eng.] 56; Salmon v. Isaac, 20 L. T. [Eng.] 886, 3 Times L. R. 245).

"The right to publish is subject to the limitation that the report must be a fair one, made in the interest of the public, and without malicious purpose. Newell, Def., S. & L. p. 558, § 166; Ackerman v. Jones, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 42; Newell, p. 544, § 148, subd. 3; Saunders v. Baxter, 6 Heisk. Tenn.] 369; Stevens v. Sampson, 5 Ex. D. [Eng.] 53; 49 L. J. Q. B. 120; 28 W. R. 87; 41 L. T. 782; Newell, p. 556, § 162, subd. 7; Waterfield v. Bishop of Chicester, 2 Mod. [Eng.] 118; Newell, p. 556, § 9; Salmon v. Isaac, 20 L. T. [Eng.] 885; Newell, p. 556, § 10. Such report should not be mingled with comment, either in the body of it or in the heading, as in such case the presumption of malice would the more easily arise; the place for criticism of this character is in the editorial columns (Newell, Def., S. & L. c. 20, § 19; Merrill's Newspaper Libel, 184); and even then the comment should be fair and reasonable (Newell, Def., S. & L. c. 20, § 18; Woodgate v. Ridout, 4 F. & F. [Eng.] 223; Reg. v. Tanfield, 42 J. P. [Eng.] 424).

"The report need not be a verbatim one, but it must contain the substance of the thing it undertakes to present, or the whole purport of any special, separable part. Newell p. 552, § 156; Id. p. 554, § 161; Salisbury v. Union & Advertiser Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 120; Newell, 545; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 403; 28 Am. Rep. 465; Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & Cr. [Eng.] 473; 6 D. & R. 528; Kane v. Mulvany, Irish Rep. 26, 2 C. L. 402; Newell p. 553, § 160, subd. 3; Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 605; Newell, p. 553, § 160, subd. 4. It must not give undue prominence to inculpatory facts, and depress or minify such facts as would explain or qualify the former (Salisbury v. Union & Adv. Co., supra; Newell p. 554, § 161; Thomas v. Croswell, 7 Johns. [N. Y.] 264, 5 Am. Dec. 269; Newell p. 557; Grimwade v. Dicks, 2 Times L. R. [Eng.] 627; Newell p. 555; Haywood & Co. v. Haywood & Sons, 34 Ch. D. [Eng.] 198; 56 L. J. Ch. 287; 35 W. R. 392; 55 L. T. 729; Newell, p. 555; Dodson v. Owen, 2 Times L. R. [Eng.]

belief in their truth and with an honest intent to perform the duty.[60] A communication between officers of a corporation on the subject of the conduct of one of its servants is privileged,[61] and the privilege is not lost by the officer receiving it and disclosing its contents to another servant as a reason for discharging the servant about whom it was written.[62] The official acts of public officers may lawfully be made the subject of fair comment and criticism, but charges imputing a criminal offense or moral delinquency to a public officer cannot, if false, be privileged, though made in good faith.[63] Fair comment pertaining to candidates is governed by a like rule.[64]

111; Newell, p. 556, S. S. 8), and must not omit material points in favor of the complaining party, or introduce extraneous matters of an injurious nature to him (Cooper v. Lawson, 8 A. & E. [Eng.] 746; 1 W. W. & H. 601; 2 Jur. 919; 1 P. & D. 15; Newell, p. 558; Clement v. Lewis, (Exch. Ch.) 3 Br. & B. [Eng.] 297; 3 B. & Ald. 702; 7 Moore 200; Bishop v. Latimer, 4 L. T. [Eng.] 775; Newell, p. 558).

"In short, the report must be characterized by fair-mindedness, honesty and accuracy. Newell, Def., S. & L. p. 551, § 155; Stanly v. Webb, 4 Sandf. [N. Y.] 21; Edsall v. Brooks, 17 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 221; Id., 26 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 426; Newell, p. 545.

"If it be found of this character, it is not material that the matter it contains is injurious to the persons involved or referred to therein, since it is of the highest moment that the proceedings of courts of justice should at all times be open to fair inspection, to the end that the public may have the means of knowing how the duties of their officers are performed, whether faithfully and intelligently or otherwise. In the presence of this public requirement mere private interests must give way. R. v. Wright, 8 T. R. [Eng.] 298; Wason v. Walter, L. C. 4 Q. B. [Eng.] 87; 8 B. & S. 730; 38 L. J. Q. B. 34; 17 W. R. 169; 19 L. T. 418; Newell, p. 554, § 147; Cowley v. Pulsifer, 137 Mass. 392, 50 Am. Rep. 318.

"Where the published matter is plainly unambiguous, the question of its meaning and character is for the court, but where the meaning is ambiguous, where the words used are reasonably susceptible of two constructions, the one innocent and the other libelous, then it is a question for the jury which construction is the proper one. Newell, Def., S. & L. c. 15, §§ 1, 5.

"In these cases," says Newell, "there may be two distinct questions for the jury: (1) Is the report fair and accurate? If so, it is prima facie privileged; if not, the verdict must be for the plaintiff. (2) Was the report, though fair and accurate, published maliciously? Was it published solely to afford information to the public and for the benefit of society, without reference to the individuals concerned; or was it published with the malicious intention of injuring the reputation of the plaintiff? The second question, of course, only arises when the first has been already answered in the affirmative.

"And, of course, there is in each case the previous question for the court, is there any evidence to go to the jury of inaccuracy or of malice? Where there is no suggestion of malice and no evidence on which a reasonable man could find that the report is not absolutely fair, the judge should direct a verdict for the defendant. Thus where the report is verbatim or nearly so, or corresponds in all material particulars with a report taken by an impartial shorthand writer. But, if anything be omitted in the report which could make any appreciable difference in the plaintiff's favor, or anything erroneously inserted which could conceivably tell against him, then it is a question for the jury whether such deviation from absolute accuracy makes the report unfair; and the trial judge will not direct a verdict for either party." Id. pp. 558, 559, § 166.

"It is generally agreed that the privilege, the right to publish without liability for damages, does not extend to mere pleadings filed in court, as, for example, bills in equity upon which there has been no judicial action. Park v. Detroit Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 560, 568, 40 N. W. 731, 16 Am. St. Rep. 544, 1 L. R. A. 599; Cowley v. Pulsifer, 137 Mass. 392, 50 Am. Rep. 318; Barber v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 3 Mo. App. 377. The reason for this rule is stated in Park v. Detroit Free Press Co., supra.

"Of publications of pleadings containing injurious matter at the mere incipiency of the litigation it is said: They possess no privilege, and the publication must rest on either nonlibelous character or truth to defend it. 72 Mich. 568, 40 N. W. 734.

"However, the rule of privilege, in general, covers proceedings which are in their nature only preliminary if any judicial action has been had thereon. Newell, Def., S. & L. c. 19, § 149, note; Id. 152, 153, and notes; Odgers on Libel and Slander, (3d Ed.) pp. 278, 279; Townsend on Slander and Libel, p. 361; note to McAllister v. Detroit Free Press Company, 15 Am. St. Rep. 363, 364; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 334, 28 Am. Rep. 465; Metcalf v. Times Publishing Co., 20 R. I. 674, 40 A. 864, 78 Am. St. Rep. 900."

60. Where the defendant denied all knowledge of the alleged libelous letters and did not claim that they were sent in good faith or under a sense of duty, it was proper for the court to refuse to charge on the subject of privileged communications. McGarry v. Healey [Conn.] 62 A. 671. Letter scurrilously attacking officials not privileged, though addressed to their superiors. Raymond v. United States, 25 App. D. C. 555.

61, 62. Denver Public Warehouse Co. v. Holloway [Colo.] 83 P. 131.

63. Byrne v. Funk, 38 Wash. 506, 80 P. 772; Farley v. McBride [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1036. A publication in a newspaper referring to plaintiff, a public officer, as "a liar and a poltroon," is in excess of the privilege of fair comment and criticism of a public officer, and hence it was not error to refuse to submit the question of its being privileged to the jury, though it was in answer

The fact that the publishers of a libel merely expressed their personal belief and had reasonable grounds to sustain them in such belief, while it may be shown in mitigation of damages, is not a defense to an action for libel.[65] To make a defense of privilege complete good faith, an interest to be upheld, a statement properly limited in its scope, a proper occasion, and publication to proper persons, must all appear.[66] Where the expressions employed are allowable in all respects, the manner of publication may take them out of the privilege.[67] Whether a writing was a libel, under the circumstances under which it was published, was to be determined by the jury, after taking into consideration the terms of the writing, the circumstances of the publication, their knowledge of the meaning of the words employed, and the impression the use of such words would make upon the mind of a person of average intelligence, and it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove by witnesses what he understood the writing to mean.[68]

Truth is a defense in actions for slander or libel,[69] and reasonable grounds for belief coupled with good faith may be shown.[70] No exemplary damages being claimed, evidence that the publication was made in good faith and without ill will is inadmissible.[71] That the publisher of a libel was mistaken as to the identity of the person libeled is no defense.[72]

§ 4. Damages and the aggravation and mitigation thereof.[73]—The damages recoverable in an action for libel or slander are punitive and compensatory. Punitive damages cannot be recovered without proof of malice, express or implied. Where the words used are not libelous per se, punitive damages cannot be recovered in absence of express malice as distinguished from implied malice;[74] but where the words used are libelous per se, damages are presumed and need not be proved.[75] to attacks on the writer made by plaintiff in the newspapers. Byrne v. Funk, 38 Wash. 506, 80 P. 772.

64. A publication in the form of an affidavit made during the course of a political campaign which stated that the subscribers would not accept the oath of plaintiff, who made statements derogatory to a certain candidate, is not absolutely privileged. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365.

65. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365.

66. Sheftall v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 646; Walker v. Best, 107 App. Div. 304, 95 N. Y. S. 151. One may publish by speech or writing whatever he honestly believes is essential to the protection of his own rights or those of another, provided the publication be not unnecessarily made to others than to those whom the publisher honestly believes are concerned in the subject-matter of the publication, but the statement must be no broader and the publication no wider than the interest to be subserved demands. Sheftall v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 646.

67. Sheftall v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 646. Mere publication to a stranger will not always destroy the privilege if it appears that the communication, prima facie privileged, was made in the hearing of third persons not legally interested and whose presence was merely casual and not sought by the publisher. Id.

68. Sheftall v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 646.

69. Ukman v. Daily Record Co., 159 Mo. 378, 88 S. W. 60. Evidence in an action for slander on the following words, "He whilst a councilman defrauded the borough out of money by having a private sewer constructed in his place for which the borough paid," held to sustain the truth of the charge and a judgment for defendant. Fleer v. Reagan, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 170.

70. In an action by a public official against a newspaper for libel, where defendant pleads justification, it may show good faith and that the circumstances were such as to give reasonable grounds for believing the charges made. Ferber v. Gazette & Bulletin Pub. Ass'n, 212 Pa. 367, 61 A. 939.

71. Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634.

72. Defendant published an article concerning a certain person, whose name was the same as plaintiff's, holding him up to ridicule as a foe to labor organizations and having been engaged in certain dishonorable conduct. Attached to the article was printed a picture of plaintiff which the publisher of the paper procured from the newspaper's collection, and printed over the words "Boss James Farley." Plaintiff had never engaged in strike breaking, was not the strike breaker in question, and his picture which was printed had been obtained by the newspaper for use in another connection. Held, that the article was libelous as to plaintiff, regardless of the editor's mistake. Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 565.

73. See 4 C. L. 423.

74. Walker v. Best, 107 App. Div. 304, 95 N. Y. S. 151.

75. Jensen v. Damm [Iowa] 103 N. W. 798; Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365; Shockey v. McCauley [Md.] 61 A. 583; Saun-

Exemplary damages may be recovered if there was actual malice, though defendant's servants made the publication without his knowledge.[76] In some states where the publisher of a libel is liable to both a criminal prosecution and a civil action, the damages recoverable are only compensatory and no exemplary damages can be assessed.[77] Mental suffering is an element of damage in an action for slander or libel,[78] but physical sickness cannot be reckoned as general damages.[79] Where the libel of a business house is of such a character as to defame the proprietor individually, the damages recoverable are not limited to those affecting the business.[80] Mitigating circumstances are those which while not proving the truth of the charge, do yet tend in some appreciable degree toward such proof, and thus permit an inference that defendant was not actuated by malice in his charge. They must be of such a nature as to show that defendant, though mistaken, believed the charge to be true when it was made.[81] They are proper to be heard on the question of punitive damages[82] or actual damages.[83] Evidence of the publication of retractions is admissible in mitigation of damages.[84] Appellate courts will not interfere with the amount of damages awarded by the jury unless that amount is so grossly inadequate or excessive as to raise a reasonable presumption that the jury was actuated by passion or prejudice.[85]

ders v. Post-Standard Pub. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 993. The slandered person being a minister of the gospel, and the language used being actionable per se, recovery may be had without proof of special damages. Instructions held erroneous. Flanders v. Daley [Ga.] 52 S. E. 687. In such a case a charge, that, if the jury should find that plaintiff had not suffered any damage to his reputation it should find for defendant, held objectionable. Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634. Where a telegram, which grossly libels a woman widely and favorably known, and who could have been easily reached, is published without inquiry as to the truth of the statements therein contained, it is for the jury to determine whether there was such a wanton disregard to the plaintiff's rights as to justify an award of punitive damages. Post Pub. Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 137 F. 723.

76. Note: See cases of Crane v. Bennett, 177 N. Y. 106, 69 N. E. 274, 101 Am. St. Rep. 722, with note citing Bruce v. Reed, 104 Pa. 415, 49 Am. Rep. 586; Morgan v. Bennett, 44 App. Div. 325, 60 N. Y. S. 619; McMahon v. Bennett, 31 App. Div. 16, 52 N. Y. S. 390; O'Brien v. Bennett, 59 App. Div. 623, 69 N. Y. S. 298; Bennett v. Salisbury, 78 F. 769; Mallory v. Bennett, 15 F. 374; Buckley v. Knapp, 48 Mo. 152; Dunn v. Hall, 1 Ind. 355; Youmans v. Paine, 86 Hun, 479, 35 N. Y. S. 50. But the principal is not always liable. Smith v. Ashley, 11 Metc. [Mass.] 367, 45 Am. Dec. 216; Eviston v. Cramer, 57 Wis. 579; Detroit Post Co. v. McArthur, 16 Mich. 447; Scripps v. Reilly, 38 Mich. 10; Robertson v. Wylde, 2 Moody & R. 101.

77. White v. Sun Pub. Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 890.

78. Finger v. Pollack [Mass.] 74 N. E. 317. In an action for slander, evidence that the plaintiff cried, "looked bad," and did not sleep as well as before, was admissible on the issue of mental suffering. Id. In an action for slander a charge permitting the jury to allow damages for mortified feelings was proper on the issue of punitive damages. Carpenter v. Hamilton, 185 Mo. 603, 84 S. W. 863; Ott v. Press Pub. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 403.

Erroneous instruction that plaintiff could not recover for mental suffering held harmless, the article being found to be true. Ott v. Press Pub. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 403.

79. Butler v. Hoboken Printing & Pub. Co. [N. J. Law] 62 A. 272.

80. Civ. Code, §§ 3300-3333. Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634.

81. Brown v. McArthur, 94 N. Y. S. 537.

82. The motives and intentions of a defendant in a slander suit are to be taken into account only in determining whether to allow punitive damages. Israel v. Israel, 109 Mo. 366, 84 S. W. 453. The fact that slanderous words were uttered under the influence of passion or excitement, or under circumstances of great provocation, cannot be considered in mitigation of damages, unless the passion or provocation was attributable to plaintiff. Shockey v. McCauley [Md.] 61 A. 583.

83. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4939, evidence of mitigating circumstances is admissible as affecting actual damages. Ott v. Press Pub. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 403.

84. White v. Sun Pub. Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 890; Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. A second publication, unrequested and in the nature of a correction, may be a proper circumstance to be considered by the jury in mitigation of damages in an action for libel, but its significance is entirely a question for the jury to determine. Post Pub. Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 137 F. 723.

85. A verdict of $7,000 held not to be excessive, where punitive damages are allowable, when a judge of the district court had been charged with corruption in office. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. In an action for slander, in that defendant, on a public street, charged plaintiff, a painter by trade, with having stolen material belonging to defendant, and with having used it in some one else's work, a verdict of $300 actual damages, and $500 punitive damages, was not excessive. Carpenter v. Ham-

§ 5. Actions and procedure. A. Conditions precedent.[86]—By statute in some states a demand for public retraction is required, and, if such a retraction is made, plaintiff is only entitled to recover the actual damage sustained.[87]

(§ 5) B. Pleading.[88]—The complaint in a libel suit should put the court in possession of the libelous matter published, the language used, with such innuendoes as are necessary to explain what was meant by the language, and to whom it applied.[89] The declaration should identify plaintiff with the description in the libel so as to show that the libelous words were spoken of him, but it is not necessary to identify plaintiff with every description in the libel.[90] Where the meaning of an alleged libel does not plainly appear in the words used, the extrinsic facts should be alleged by way of inducement, and the libelous charge should be followed by an innuendo applying the words to the matter pleaded.[91] The sufficiency of them ilton, 185 Mo. 603, 84 S. W. 863. That the plaintiff in an action for libel is entitled, as a matter of law, to nominal damages, affords no ground for the reversal of a judgment for the defendant. White v. Sun Pub. Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 890.

86. See 4 C. L. 425.

87. Post Pub. Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 137 F. 723. Rev. St. Ohio, § 5094, declares that if a libel shall be published in good faith through a mistake of fact, with reasonable ground to believe that the statements were true, and the publisher on demand, and within a reasonable time publishes a full and complete retraction, etc., the presumption of malice shall thereby be rebutted. Held that, under Const. Ohio, Art. 1, § 16, declaring that all the courts shall be open, and every person, for an injury done him in his person or reputation, shall have a remedy by due course of law and justice administered without denial or delay, section 5094 should be construed so as to become operative only upon a demand being made for a retraction; and it is optional with the person libeled to stand upon his rights under the old law or to waive a part by demanding and accepting a retraction under the law as amended. Id.

88. See 4 C. L. 425.

89. A complaint alleging that defendant printed in his legal directory a certain libelous statement and publication concerning plaintiff, the "substance and effect" of which was that plaintiff was a second rate lawyer, was demurrable for failure to set out the alleged libel in haec verba. Kirby v. Martindale [S. D.] 103 N. W. 648. A complaint alleged that defendant willfully and maliciously, and without justifiable cause, printed and published a certain libelous publication, in that plaintiff's name, age, and the year of his admission to the bar, were published in defendant's directory without a rating, and that by reason of the premises plaintiff was greatly injured in his professional and business standing, was insufficient for failure to allege that the absence of any rating meant anything derogatory to plaintiff's personal or professional character or ability. Id. A complaint in libel alleged the publication of a newspaper article making plaintiff ridiculous and charging him with membership in a society of assassins, blackmailers, and kidnappers, and that he had tattooed on his back the "Black Hand," the name of such society. Held, that the complaint was good, though the article in question bore no such meaning. Lambertini v. Sun Printing & Pub. Co., 47 Misc. 174, 95 N. Y. S. 329. Where in an action against a newspaper for libel, the complaint set out mere excerpts from the publication, it was not error for the court to compel plaintiff to make the complaint more definite and certain by incorporating copies of the entire articles in which the alleged libelous matter appeared. McClure v. Review Pub. Co., 38 Wash. 160, 80 P. 303. A declaration which charges the speaking of slanderous words in the Italian language, but which does not aver that the hearers understood the meaning of such words, is defective, but after verdict is sufficient. Rich v. Scalio, 115 Ill. App. 166.

90. Butler v. Carter & R. Pub. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 69. A declaration in an action for libel by the publication of an article set out, and which related to a woman described therein as widely known as "Annie Oakley," and as having been a famous rifle shot who had given public exhibitions, etc., which, in addition to an allegation that the libel was published of and concerning plaintiff, further alleges that plaintiff had acquired great skill in shooting with a rifle and had given public exhibitions, and was widely known by the name of "Annie Oakley," sufficiently shows on its face that the article related to plaintiff. Id.

91. Ukman v. Daily Record Co., 189 Mo. 378, 88 S. W. 60; Kenworthy v. Brown, 45 Misc. 292, 92 N. Y. S. 34. In an action for slander the declaration averred that defendant, contriving and maliciously intending to injure plaintiff, in a certain discourse had concerning plaintiff falsely and maliciously said to one S, "Don't you want to go and help catch a thief?" meaning thereby that plaintiff was a thief, and had stolen wood from defendant and still had it in his possession, capable of detection and exposure, and that said S was desired to go with defendant and help catch plaintiff in possession of the wood which he had stolen from defendant. Held to state a cause of action. Blount v. Mason [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 69, 103 N. W. 525. The declaration in an action for slander averred that defendant, intending to injure plaintiff, in a certain discourse had of and concerning plaintiff with one S. spoke and published of and concerning the plaintiff as follows: "I (meaning defendant) saw Fred Blount (meaning plaintiff) cannot be challenged after answering to the merits.[92] A libel per se set out in terms need not be accompanied by an allegation pointing out which words were defamatory.[93] An innuendo cannot extend the meaning of words beyond their natural import, it can only serve to explain some matter already expressed. It may show the application but cannot add to or enlarge or change the sense of words.[94] An innuendo wrong in its conclusion may be ignored when the words are per se libelous.[95] The same words declared on as libelous per se, and otherwise, calls for two counts.[96]

The action cannot be joined with malicious prosecution even if they originated simultaneously,[97] and declaring on them both as acts in a conspiracy will not accomplish it if two causes are substantially pleaded.[98]

The general rules of pleading as to definiteness and certainty apply.[99] Where it is alleged under a videlicet that slanderous words were spoken at a particular place, it is not essential to a recovery that proof be made that such words were in fact spoken at such place, it is sufficient if the speaking of the words be established at any place,[1] and failure to declare on a time within limitations is cured by verdict.[2] Where a complaint in libel singles out a meaning and complains of that take wood from off my pile, and he has it now on his wagon, and I (defendant) want you (S) to go with me to the mill and see it unloaded;" defendant meaning thereby to impress said S that plaintiff had stolen defendant's wood and had it on his wagon, and that defendant desired said S to go with him to the mill and witness the exposure of the crime. Held to state a cause of action as against a demurrer on the ground that there was no colloquium, inducement, nor statement of facts showing that the words were spoken of and concerning plaintiff, nor that they imputed a crime to him, nor connecting the words nor the speaking thereof with plaintiff. Blount v. Mason [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 69, 103 N. W. 525. A complaint alleging that defendant produce exchange posted a notice denying plaintiff representation on the floor of the exchange, and stating that any member of the exchange who should transact business for plaintiff would be deemed guilty of a violation of the by-laws, etc., but not alleging that the notice conveyed any meaning not apparent on its face, did not state a cause of action for libel, the notice not being defamatory per se. Gutkes v. New York Produce Exch., 46 Misc. 133, 93 N. Y. S. 254. When plaintiff in a libel suit alleged that defendant, in certain mercantile reports, published that plaintiff had sold his stock in trade for $1, "meaning to charge that plaintiff had transferred his business for a nominal consideration," it was an enlargement of the meaning as set forth in the innuendo to claim that the words signified dishonesty in a business way. Ukman v. Daily Record Co., 189 Mo. 378, 88 S. W. 60.

92. In an action for libel, where the alleged defamatory matter in its application to plaintiff depends on extrinsic facts not pleaded, and the allegation that the matter was published by plaintiff is denied by the answer, a motion to dismiss the complaint, as not stating facts constituting a cause of action, will be denied. Bianchi v. Star Co., 46 Misc. 486, 95 N. Y. S. 28.

93. Where an entire newspaper article, containing an alleged letter written by plaintiff, was charged to be false, and, if the letter were fabricated, the article, taken as a whole was libelous per se, and was not a privileged publication, it was error to sustain a demurrer to the complaint for its failure to point out the libelous portion of the publication charged as libelous. Leonard v. McPherson, 146 Cal. 616, 80 P. 1084.

94. Feast v. Auer [Ky.] 90 S. W. 564.

95. Scofield v. Milwaukee Free Press [Wis.] 105 N. W. 227. A publication in a newspaper stated that there had been a hearing before a magistrate, in the case of plaintiff, charged with keeping a disorderly house, and that she had been in trouble with the police before. Held not to justify an innuendo that on previous occasions she had been charged with keeping a disorderly house, and that she was guilty of the present charge, and plaintiff could only fall back upon the true meaning of the words that she had had trouble before with the police. Hilder v. Brooklyn Daily Eagle, 45 Misc. 165, 91 N. Y. S. 983.

96. Where plaintiff in libel wishes to fall back on the natural meaning of the words published, his complaint should set forth in one count the article with the innuendo, and the other, the article without the innuendo. Hilder v. Brooklyn Daily Eagle, 45 Misc. 165, 91 N. Y. S. 982.

97. Green v. Davies, 182 N. Y. 499, 75 N. E. 536.

98. Pleading held double and bad. Green v. Davies, 182 N. Y. 499, 75 N. E. 536.

99. Where a count for libel alleged that defendant composed and published at specified places, prior to a certain date, the matter complained of, a motion to compel plaintiff to state separately and number his several causes of action if he relied upon several, and to make the complaint more definite and certain if be intended to rely only on one publication, should have been granted. Cerro De Pasco Tunnel & Min. Co. v. Haggin, 94 N. Y. S. 593.

1. Herhold v. White, 114 Ill. App. 186.

2. A declaration in an action of slander which fails to state the time when the slanderous words charged were spoken, so as to show affirmatively that the action is brought within the period authorized by statute, is good after verdict. Dubois v. Robbins, 115 Ill. App. 372.

only, and in that way excludes all other meanings, it is based on and limited to the meaning so complained of only,[3] and an innuendo so tendered need not be met with any particular denial of other meanings.[4]

The falsity of a defamatory charge is always presumed, and the defendant who relies upon the truth as a defense must plead it, whether the statements were made upon privileged occasions or not.[5] In North Dakota the truth and mitigation may both be pleaded by defendant.[6] The truth of the alleged defamatory matter, as well as the facts in mitigation, are new matter and must be pleaded.[7] A plea of justification in an action for libel must be of the very matter alleged in the declaration; the very matter which was published; it must be complete and allege the facts which show the truth.[8] In pleading mitigation, belief and good faith must be laid with certainty to defendant, not to the community.[9]

In actions for slander the rule that the probata must correspond to the allegata is eminently applicable.[10] The plaintiff is not entitled to a recovery upon proof of words not set forth in his complaint, or upon a failure to prove the slanderous words which he has alleged.[11] Equivalent words or words of similar import will be insufficient; nor will his cause of action be sustained by proof of words that might produce an impression similar to that which the words alleged would produce,[12] but proof of enough of such words to constitute a cause of action is sufficient.[13] Under a plea of the general issue in an action for libel, defendant is not entitled to prove specific acts of misconduct, but is confined to proof of his general bad character,[14] neither can he be permitted to show, under the general issue and upon a claim of mitigating the damages, facts which tend to cast suspicion of plaintiff's guilt of the very charges which he has declined to under-

3. Lambertini v. Sun Print. & Pub. Co., 47 Misc. 174, 95 N. Y. S. 329.

4. Where a complaint in a libel alleged a publication that plaintiff, arrested by the police, "had been in trouble with the police before," and that the innuendo with the words meant that the plaintiff had been charged with keeping a disorderly house, defendant was not required to plead as a defense that plaintiff had had trouble with the police before, for whatever cause it might have been. Hilder v. Brooklyn Daily Eagle, 45 Misc. 165, 91 N. Y. S. 983.

5. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

6. Under § 5289, Rev. Codes, N. D. 1899, the defendant in a libel case is authorized to plead, as a complete defense, the truth of the matter charged to be defamatory, and also to plead any mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damages, and whether he prove the justification or not, he may give in evidence the mitigating circumstances. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

7. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907.

8. Where the alleged libelous article charged that the plaintiff, as mayor of a city, protected gamblers, a plea of justification to be sufficient should set up facts showing how, when, where, and what the plaintiff did or said in so protecting gamblers. Commercial News Co. v. Beard, 116 Ill. App. 501; Dowie v. Priddle, 216 Ill. 553, 75 N. E. 243.

9. In an action for libel with malice, a defense in mitigation of damages, alleging that the things stated in the complaint were reported and believed, prior to the time of publication, in the neighborhood where the parties resided, but not alleging that defendant heard the reports and believed them to be true and published them with such belief, stated no defense. Brown v. McArthur, 94 N. Y. S. 537.

10. Haub v. Freiermuth [Cal. App.] 82 P. 571. In slander, plaintiff must prove the slanderous words as alleged, and not other words of like import, and defendant is not allowed to plead that he used other words, and justify them. Tharp v. Nolan, 27 Ky. L. R. 326, 84 S. W. 1168. In a prosecution for verbal slander the words charged to have been spoken were "He forged that deed," and the evidence showed that defendant had said prosecutor "had changed the consideration in a deed." Held, that the proof was insufficient. State v. Fenn [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 1098.

11. Haub v. Freiermuth [Cal. App.] 82 P. 571.

12. Haub v. Freiermuth [Cal. App.] 82 P. 571. Allegation that defendant said: "I have a man to prove that H. struck S. in front of his place of business, that he had two witnesses who had tracked the blood stains from H's shop to where S. fell, and that he had proof that H. was guilty of the murder of S., held not sustained by proof that defendant, in addition to saying that he had a witness who saw H. strike S., said to one person "H. might have killed him anyhow," and to another "If you will follow up H. pretty closely, you will find that this man's death came that way," and "he might have something to do with it," and to another "the S. case was a murder." Id.

13. Dubois v. Robbins, 115 Ill. App. 372.

14. Dowie v. Priddle, 216 Ill. 553, 75 N. E. 243.

take to prove.[15] Where the defendant in an action for libel wishes to justify the language used as true, he must admit the publication as charged by plaintiff and assume the burden of establishing its truth.[16] A plea of privilege in libel is in the nature of confession and avoidance, and the admission of the publication, to be of any avail, must be as broad as the charge.[17]

Bills of particulars[18] are not allowable to develop mere evidence.[19]

(§ 5) C. Evidence.[20]—The effect of privilege is to cast on the plaintiff the burden of showing malice on the part of defendant,[21] but where the words used were actionable per se, malice is presumed and the burden is on the defendant to prove matters in mitigation.[22] Facts tending to establish malice or the lack of it,[23] and surrounding circumstances and the connection in which the words were used,[24] are admissible. Evidence as to the circumstances which induced a press association to send out a libelous telegram is immaterial in an action brought by the party libeled against a newspaper, which published the dispatch without knowledge of the circumstances of its origin.[25] Evidence of plaintiff's standing and general reputa-

15. Commercial News Co. v. Beard, 116 Ill. App. 501. In an action for libel against a newspaper company, special defenses in the answer, following a general denial, alleging, respectively, that the publication referred to a person other than plaintiff, and that the publication was a news item received in the usual course of business and published in good faith, are demurrable, both defenses being admissible under the general issue. Butler v. Evening Leader Co., 134 F. 994.

16. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365.

17. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365; Saunders v. Post-Standard Pub. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 993. A petition charging a libel contained a writing embodying three separate affidavits, one of which constituted the gist of the defamatory matter complained of, while the others were set up by way of inducement. The answer alleged the signing of one of the affidavits, set out by way of inducements, and further alleged that the affidavit was made and published by them in good faith and without malice for the information of the electors of the county. Held that the answer was not sufficient to constitute a good plea of privilege. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365.

18. See 4 C. L. 426.

19. Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 531, providing that the granting or withholding of a bill of particulars is within the discretion of the court, held, in an action for libel, where the defendant pleaded in mitigation that the article published was founded upon statements of residents of the police precinct, of which plaintiff was captain, to a reporter of defendant, who believed them to be true, that a bill of particulars, containing the name and address of reporter and residents of plaintiff's precinct, was properly refused. Knipe v. Brooklyn Daily Eagle, 101 App. Div. 43, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 44, 91 N. Y. S. 872.

20. See 4 C. L. 426.

21. Gattis v. Kilgo [N. C.] 52 S. E. 249; Denver Public Warehouse Co. v. Halloway [Colo.] 83 P. 131; Echard v. Morton, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 579. Strong and violent language, disproportionate to an occasion otherwise privileged, may raise an inference of malice. Farley v. Thalhimer, 103 Va. 504, 49 S. E. 644.

22. Dowie v. Priddle, 216 Ill. 553, 75 N. E. 243.

23. While evidence of intention and motive is admissible on the question of malice and exemplary damages, such evidence should not be considered as a defense to the utterance of the words, nor to reduce the compensatory damages. Grimes v. Thorp [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 638. For the purpose of showing actual malice in publishing a libel, the plaintiff may prove that, prior to the commencement of the action, defendant published the same words, or similar words, relating to the same subject-matter and imputing the same general charge as that sued upon, but may not introduce evidence which merely tends to show general malice or to show the publication of a distinct calumny. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. Under a general issue for damages in an action for slander by an employe against his employer, it was error to receive evidence of a subsequent discharge of the servant. It was also error to instruct the jury that they might take into consideration the fact of such subsequent discharge, and the manner of its execution. Metcalf v. Collinson [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1022.

24. Line v. Spies [Mich.] 102 N. W. 993.

25. Post Pub. Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 137 F. 723. An anonymous letter, stated in the libelous article sued on to have been written by the plaintiff and sent to himself, is incompetent when offered by the plaintiff in the absence of a plea of justification having been interposed by the defendant. Lodge v. Hampton, 116 Ill. App. 414. Where defendants were alleged to have written a letter derogatory to plaintiff's character as a clergyman, which referred the addressees to other persons for information, evidence of the contents of letters written by others than those referred to in the alleged libelous matter was inadmissible in an action for libel. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850. In an action for libel, tion in the community in which he lives is admissible,[26] but evidence of his professional achievements is not unless it tends to disprove the libel or show some element in the tort.[27] Evidence as to how the hearers of alleged slanderous words understood them is admissible.[28] Where a particular portion of an article counted upon as libelous is offered by the plaintiff, the defendant may introduce the entire article.[29] Where failure to produce the original draft of the alleged libel is sufficiently accounted for by the plaintiff, he may identify and put in evidence the printed copy which was given to the public.[30] Other articles than those counted upon as libelous are incompetent to prove the libel charged,[31] but by introducing them himself plaintiff may disable himself to object.[32] What a reporter did after the publication does not impute notice of the untruth of a publication to his employer.[33] The evidence must show that the defendant published the libel.[34]

(§ 5) D. Trial.[35]—An action for libel should be tried in the county in which the newspaper is published and circulated.[36]

Either party to an action for libel has a right to read to the jury the entire article alleged to contain the libelous matter.[37]

The privileged character of a communication is for the court, but malice in making it is for the jury.[38] The questions of good faith, fair report or criticism, belief in the truth of an alleged slanderous statement, and of the existence of actual malice, are for the jury.[39] The meaning of words is for the court, unless they may evidence held insufficient to justify a verdict finding that the alleged defamatory matter was published of and concerning plaintiff. Bianchi v. Star Co., 46 Misc. 486, 95 N. Y. S. 28. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 460, a publication libeling the "B. Paint Company" held sufficiently shown to be a libel on plaintiff, where it was alleged and proved that it was published of plaintiff, who was the sole proprietor of the "B. Paint Company." Bohan v. Record Pub. Co. [Cal. App.] 82 P. 634.

26. Saunders v. Post-Standard Pub. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 993. In an action for libel, based upon a general attack made upon the plaintiff's character, it is competent under a plea of justification only to prove the general reputation of such plaintiff, and proof of specific wrongful acts is not competent. Dowie v. Priddle, 116 Ill. App. 184.

27. Where an alleged libelous letter, written concerning plaintiff's character and habits in his capacity as a clergyman, stated that he used tobacco and liquor, was untruthful, and that his family was not a credit to any town or community, evidence of the financial condition of the church, and number of members admitted under plaintiff's pastorate, was inadmissible either to disprove the truth of the charges or show malice. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850.

28. Merrill v. Marshall, 113 Ill. App. 447. It is competent to permit a witness, who heard alleged slanderous words used, to state the name of the person against whom they were intended to be applied, notwithstanding such testimony may not be predicated upon what was said. The sources of the knowledge of such witness as to who was intended, may be inquired into upon cross-examination. Scott v. Snyder, 116 Ill. App. 393.

29. Lodge v. Hampton, 116 Ill. 414.

30. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365.

31. Lodge v. Hampton, 116 Ill. App. 414. Evidence that a wife had made statements derogatory to the character of plaintiff and his family to a third person and that she did not attend plaintiff's church after a difficulty arose therein, was not evidence that she signed a libelous letter alleged to have been written by her husband concerning plaintiff, and purporting to have also been signed by her. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850.

32. Where plaintiffs introduced in evidence the entire copy of the paper containing the article complained of and similar articles against other people, held plaintiffs could not claim that the admission of papers of other dates, containing similar articles against others, was prejudicial error. Ott v. Press Pub. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 403.

33. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005.

34. Where, in an action for libel, consisting of a letter alleged to have been written by defendants, husband and wife, concerning plaintiff, there was no evidence that the letter was signed by the wife, a judgment against her was erroneous. Konkle v. Haven [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 234, 103 N. W. 850.

35. See 4 C. L. 427.

36. Where complaint alleged that newspaper was published in the city of P, D county, and that said paper was of general circulation in that city and vicinity, held there was no allegation that there was a publication of the libel outside of D county. MacCormac v. Tobey, 96 N. Y. S. 302.

37. Dowie v. Priddle, 116 Ill. App. 184.

38. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239; Echard v. Morton, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 579;

have either a harmless or a defamatory meaning, then it is for the jury to say which is carried.[40] In accord with the usual rules the jury is excluded from deciding those facts of which there is no evidence.[41]

In the case of privilege claimed for a report of judicial proceedings, a charge on the effect of malice must show when malice becomes important,[42] and "good faith" must be specifically defined.[43] It is proper to refuse a charge on slight inaccuracies when a charge on whether a report was fair and substantially accurate meets the issues.[44] It is error to assume the defamatory character of a doubtful article,[45] or that defendant was its author,[46] or to combine in a misleading way several issues presenting diverse principles,[47] or to require more strict proof of the words

Denver Public Warehouse Co. v. Holloway [Colo.] 83 P. 131.

39. Farley v. Thalhimer, 103 Va. 504, 49 S. E. 644. Whether a privilege relied on in justification of an alleged libel was not exceeded, and the publication made with actual malice, was a question for the jury. Prewitt v. Wilson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 365; Farley v. Thalhimer, 103 Va. 504, 49 S. E. 644. Where a critic published of a book and its author that they were a "Scandal" and "Shameless," and that the author was "prurient," under circumstances that would not justify the charges beyond question, it was for the jury to say whether the inferences drawn by the critic from the facts were reasonably possible, and therefore permissible. MacDonald v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n, 45 Misc. 441, 92 N. Y. S. 37. Whether a report of an injunction with a synopsis of the bill was fair, is for the jury. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005.

40. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005. Whether a libelous meaning was conveyed by words which may be libelous, is a jury question. Scofield v. Milwaukee Free Press [Wis.] 105 N. W. 227. A publication stating that plaintiff swore out an information and caused the arrest of a certain person on a criminal charge, and afterwards on trial retracted everything that had been said at the preliminary trial, made a statement on the witness stand directly opposite to what had been said in the presence of a number of people before the trial, and gave a false answer to a question as to why certain advice had not been obtained before the institution of the criminal proceedings, was fairly capable of being construed as libelous, and being ambiguous, it was proper to submit the question of its construction to the jury. Jensen v. Damm [Iowa] 103 N. W. 798. Where the language of an alleged libel is fairly susceptible of a construction which renders it defamatory, and therefore actionable, even though it is also susceptible of a construction which would render it innocent, the complaint states a cause of action, and it is for the jury to determine whether the words were used in an innocent or defamatory sense. Lauder v. Jones [N. D.] 101 N. W. 907. In an action for publication of a newspaper article concerning the conduct of the counsel to a county board of supervisors, held that whether the publication was libelous was a question for the jury. Vincent v. Onderdonk, 95 N. Y. S. 347. In an action for libel, the question whether the publication referred to plaintiff, whose name was not mentioned in it, is for the jury. Barron v. Smith [S. D.] 101 N. W. 1105.

41. Where there is no evidence of injury to plaintiff in his profession, it is error to leave that question to the jury. Line v. Spies [Mich.] 102 N. W. 993.

42, 43, 44. American Pub. Co. v. Gamble [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 1005.

45. Where in an action for libel, the court charged that the jury, before determining other questions, must decide as a matter of fact whether or not the publication complained of was libelous, an instruction that if defendants made and published the libel they would be liable, etc., was not objectionable as assuming that the publication was libelous. Jensen v. Damm [Iowa] 103 N. W. 798.

46. In a suit for libel a charge that if the language used imputed dishonesty to the plaintiff, and was untrue, it would be presumed that it was published by defendant in malice, is erroneous, as such facts cannot raise a presumption of defendant's authorship of the libel. Sands v. Marquardt & Sons [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 1011.

47. In an action for slander the following instructions: "Even though the evidence might establish that the defendant said to certain persons each of the words charged as having been uttered and that such words are ordinarily construed to mean that the persons they refer to have been guilty of fornication, she would not be guilty under this declaration if from a preponderance of the evidence you find that her hearers did not give her words the construction contended for and did not understand her to charge that plaintiff had sexual relations with some man; if you find from the evidence that the defendant spoke words charged in the declaration of and concerning the plaintiff and that they were spoken about and in relation to a known act which was known to the hearers at the time and such words did not then and there give the hearers to understand that the defendant was thereby charging the plaintiff with unlawful, sexual intercourse with a man, your verdict should be for the defendant," are erroneous in an action for slander when a number of occasions were testified to during which the slanderous words were used as to some of which there was an absolute denial by the defendant, and as to others of which the defense was merely that ex-alleged than is necessary to sustain the action.[48] Under statutes in some states the jury has the right to determine the law and fact in suits for libel, and the jury has the right to make its own law, untrammeled by the instructions of the court, on the question of libel, but must assess damages according to settled rules of law.[49] The court may, however, direct a nonsuit.[50]

A general verdict for plaintiff is not necessarily overthrown by a special finding of no malice.[51]

§ 6. Criminal libel and slander.[52] The offense.[53]—In Louisiana slander is an offense in itself, and all slanders or defamations form one grade or rank in the category of crimes.[54] In a prosecution for "slander of a female," who has lately moved from one place to another, defendant is entitled to the benefit of the female's bad reputation in the neighborhood from which she came, as well as in that in which she is living.[55] A letter to public officials, scurrilous in its character, and making false and unwarranted charges of malfeasance in office, beyond the limits of honest criticism, against certain other officials, is a criminal libel.[56] As a general rule in the prosecution for criminal libel, the truth of the article, when established, is a perfect defense.[57]

The prosecution.—By statute in some states one who is charged with criminal libel can be prosecuted in any county in which the libel circulates.[58] Where the libel consisted in the publication, among other things, of a statement that a public official was shielding a defaulter, it need not be alleged in such indictment that it was the duty of such official to prosecute such defaulter.[59] In criminal libel or slander other slanders may be shown to prove intent,[60] but not subsequent ones.[61] Peaceable and orderly character of accused is not relevant.[62] In a prosecution for slander of a female it is not necessary for defendant, in order to entitle him to an acquittal on the ground of the female's general reputation, to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that her reputation for chastity is bad.[63] planatory words were employed which gave to the language actually used a different meaning. Ketchum v. Gilmer, 115 Ill. App. 347.

48. Instructions that would lead the jury to understand that the plaintiff, in order to recover, must prove all the slanderous words charged precisely as alleged, are erroneous; it is sufficient if enough of the words charged are shown to have been used as charged to establish a right of action. Ketchum v. Gilmer, 115 Ill. App. 347.

49. Sands v. Marquardt & Sons [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 1011.

50. Ukman v. Daily Record Co., 189 Mo. 378, 88 S. W. 60. In a civil action for slander, an instruction that the jury were themselves the judges of the law, as well as of the facts, was error. Grimes v. Thorp [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 638.

51. Under 2 Ballinger's Ann. Codes and St. Wash. § 7087, defining libel, but not expressly making malice an ingredient thereof, a publication which tends to expose a person to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, is libelous without regard to the existence of actual malice, and hence a finding that defendant in the action was not actuated by malice is not inconsistent with a general verdict awarding recovery for the libel charged. Byrne v. Funk, 38 Wash. 506, 80 P. 772.

52, 53. See 4 C. L. 428.

54. State v. Hicks, 113 La. 845, 37 So. 776.

55. Ballew v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1063.

56. Raymond v. U. S., 25 App. D. C. 555.

57. Razee v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 438.

58. Where the proprietor of a newspaper printed a libel therein, and sent copies to his subscribers by mail through the state, he was punishable in the county into which such copies were sent, as well as in that where the libel was published, under Rev. Code. Cr. Proc. (S. D.) §§ 72, 73, providing that, when a public offense is committed, partly in one county and partly in another, the offense is punishable in either of such counties. State v. Huston [S. D.] 104 N. W. 451.

59. Collins v. People, 115 Ill. App. 280.

60. Collins v. State, 39 Tex. Cr. Rep. 30, 44 S. W. 846, cited 62 L. R. A. 230.

61. United States v. Crandell, 4 Cranch C. C. 683, Fed. Cas. 14,885, cited 62 L. R. A. 230.

62. Commonwealth v. Irwin, 1 Clark [Pa.] 344, cited 103 Am. St. Rep. 900.

63. Ballew v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 1063.

JUSTIFICATION, EXCUSE, AND MITIGATION OF LIBEL AND SLANDER.*

[SPECIAL ARTICLE BY GEO. F. LONGSDORF.]

§ 1. Truth of the publication.—At common law the truth of a publication could not be shown as a defense in a criminal prosecution for libel, as the offense was not punished merely because of the injury to the reputation of the person libeled, but because of the tendency of the libel to induce violent retaliation and thus result in a breach of the public peace.[1] But the same rule does not apply where a person who has been libeled or slandered brings a civil action to recover damages for the wrong. In such an action the defendant may show that the publication was true, and this will constitute a complete justification and defense, whatever may have been his motive or intent, for "the law will not permit a man to recover damages in respect of an injury to a character which he either does not or ought not to possess."[2]

To sustain a plea of justification on the ground that the publication is true, the defendant must prove "truth in substance, that is, he must show that the imputation made or repeated by him was true as a whole and in every material part thereof."[3] The very charge made must be proved to be true in substance and effect in every material particular. If the defendant fails in this he does not sustain the plea, although he may prove facts of the same description.[4] To sustain a plea justifying a charge of crime, every essential element of that crime must be proved;[5] and it is necessary to prove the particular crime charged, and not some other crime, although of the same nature and equally as wicked.[6] As a rule a general charge can-

1. Clark & Marshall on Crimes, [2d Ed.] 649.

2. Littledale J. in McPherson v. Daniels, 10 Barn. & C. 263, 272. And see Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 323-325; Castle v. Houston, 19 Kan. 417, 27 Am. Rep. 127, Chase's Cas. 132; Baum v. Chase, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 199; Cooper v. Greeley, 1 Denio (N. Y.) 347, Burdick's Cas. 218; Joannes v. Jennings, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 138, Erwin's Cas. 358; Gilman v. Lowell, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 573, 24 Am. Dec. 96; Golderman v. Stearns, 7 Gray (Mass.) 181, Chase's Cas. 116; Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209, 11 Am. Rep. 204, Paige's Cas. 386; Perry v. Man, 1 R. I. 263; McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 403, 28 Am. Rep. 465; Jarnigan v. Fleming, 43 Miss. 710, 5 Am. Rep. 514; McCloskey v. Pulitzer Pub. Co., 152 Mo. 339; and late cases cited 2 C. L. 723, note 1; Id. 724, text 18; 6 C. L. 421. "It is not that uttering truth always carries its own justification, but that the law bars the other party of redress which he does not deserve. Thus, the old rule is explained that where truth is relied on for justification, it must be specially pleaded; the cause of action was confessed, but the special matter avoided the plaintiff's right." Pollock on Torts, supra. As to the effect of statutes, see Castle v. Houston, 19 Kan. 417, 27 Am. Rep. 127, Chase's Cas. 132. And Compare Neilson v. Jenson, 56 Neb. 430, 76 N. W. 866.

3. Pollock on Torts, (Webb's Ed.) 325, 326; Fleming v. Dollar, 23 Q. B. Div. 388; Weaver v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 678; Morris v. Curtis, 20 Ky. L. R. 56. 45 S. W. 86; Brewer v. Chase, 121 Mich. 526, 80 Am. St. Rep. 527; Young v. Fox, 26 N. Y. App. Div. 261; Collis v. Press Pub. Co., 68 N. Y. App. Div. 38; Riggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 198, 2 Am. Dec. 145; Coffin v. Brown, 94 Md. 190; Rutherford v. Paddock, 180 Mass. 289; Clifton v. Lange, 108 Iowa, 472. He cannot justify part of a statement, and admit liability for part, without distinctly severing that which he justifies from that which he does not. Pollock on Torts, supra.

4. Weaver v. Lloyd, 2 B. & C. 678. A charge that a counsellor at law offered himself as a witness, in order to divulge the secrets of his client, is not justified by showing that he disclosed matters communicated to him by his client which had no relation to the cause in which he was engaged and which the counsellor, therefore, was not bound to keep secret. Riggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 198, 2 Am. Dec. 145. Compare, however, Moore v. Terrell, 4 B. & Ad. 871.

5. McKinley v. Rob, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 351, Erwin's Cas. 352; Young v. Adams, 113 Mich. 199; Murphy v. Olberding, 107 Iowa, 547. Thus, under a plea justifying a charge of perjury, the defendant must prove that the plaintiff, in giving his evidence, willfully and corruptly swore falsely. It is not enough to prove merely that the facts sworn to by him were not true. McKinley v. Rob, supra.

6. Thus, a charge of stealing a horse cannot be justified by showing the stealing of a hog. Dilland v. Collins, 25 Grat. (Va.) 343. And a charge of stealing hogs is not justified by proof of stealing one hog. Swan v. Rary, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 298. For other not be justified by showing a single instance of misconduct.[7] And a charge of misconduct in a particular instance, or under particular circumstances, cannot be justified by showing such misconduct in another instance or under other circumstances.[8]

*ANNOTATED TO PREVIOUS VOLUMES OF CURRENT LAW. CURRENT CASES WILL BE FOUND IN LIBEL AND SLANDER, §§ 3, 4, ANTE, THIS VOLUME.

A charge of a crime with circumstances of moral aggravation, which circumstances would in themselves be libelous, is not justified by a plea averring the commission of the crime without such circumstances, although in law they may add nothing to the offense.[9]

To sustain a plea justifying a charge of perjury, the defendant can prove the truth only by two witnesses, or by one witness and strong corroborating circumstances, as on an indictment for perjury.[10] Some of the courts go further than this and hold that to sustain a plea justifying a charge of any crime, it is necessary that the defendant shall prove the crime by the same amount of evidence as would be necessary to convict the plaintiff on an indictment for the offense, and therefore, that he must prove the truth beyond a reasonable doubt.[11] Other courts repudiate this doctrine and hold that it is sufficient if the defendant prove the charge by a preponderance of the evidence, as in other civil actions, allowing the plaintiff, however, the full benefit of the presumption of innocence. "If the words," said the Maine court, "impute to the plaintiff the commission of a crime, the defendant must fasten upon the plaintiff all the elements of the crime, both in act and intent, and to do this he must furnish evidence enough to overcome, in the minds of the jury, the natural presumption of innocence, as well as the opposing testimony. But to go further, and say that this shall be done by such a degree and quantity of proof as shall suffice to remove from their minds every reasonable doubt that might be suggested, is to import into the trial of civil causes between party and party a rule which is appropriate only in the trial of an issue between the state and a person charged with crime and exposed to penal consequences if the verdict is against him."[12] The English cases holding a different rule may perhaps be explained on the ground cases see Young v. Adams, 113 Mich. 199; Downs v. Hawley, 112 Mass. 237; Phillips v. Beene, 16 Ala. 720.

7. Thus, a charge of being "a libelous journalist" is not justified by proof of plaintiff's conviction of libel on a single occasion. Wakley v. Cooke, 4 Exch. 511. And a charge that a lawyer is a pettifogger and without character is not justified by showing a single instance of misconduct. Fitch v. Lemmon, 28 U. Can. Q. B. 273. In an action for slander in calling a woman a "whore," proof that she had sexual intercourse with her affianced husband before marriage does not amount to a justification. Sheehey v. Cokley, 43 Iowa, 183, 22 Am. Rep. 236, disapproving Alcorn v. Hooker, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 58. Calling a woman a "whore" is not justified by proof merely that she committed adultery. Rutherford v. Paddock, 180 Mass. 289.

8. Thus, a charge of sexual intercourse with A. is not justified by showing intercourse with B. Walters v. Smoot, 11 Ired. (N. C.) 315. For other cases in which the proof as to unchastity or immoral conduct was held no justification of the particular charge made, see Smith v. Wyman, 4 Shep. (Me.) 13; Ridley v. Perry, 4 Shep. (Me.) 21; Tharp v. Stephenson, 12 Ired. (N. C.) 348; Burford v. Wible, 32 Pa. St. 45.

9. Helsham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 128. In this case the declaration set up a libel imputing to the plaintiff, an officer in the army, the murder of his opponent in a duel, and stating that the duel was supposed to have been fought under circumstances revolting to the ordinary notions of honor. It was held that this was not answered by a plea alleging merely that the plaintiff killed his antagonist, and was tried for murder and acquitted. The defendant, it was held, was bound to justify also the matter of aggravation. See, also, Rutherford v. Paddock, 180 Mass. 289.

10. Byrket v. Monohon, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 83, 41 Am. Dec. 212; Newbit v. Statuck, 35 Me. 315, 58 Am. Dec. 706; Woodbeck v. Keller, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 118.

11. Wilmett v. Harmer, 8 Car. & P. 695; Chalmers v. Shackill, 6 Car. & P. 475; Fountain v. West, 23 Iowa, 9, 92 Am. Dec. 405; Barton v. Thompson, 46 Iowa, 30, 26 Am. Rep. 131; Wintrode v. Renbarger, 150 Ind. 556.

12. Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209, 11 Am. Rep. 204. Paige's Cas. 386. And see, to the same effect, McBee v. Fulton, 47 Md. 403, 28 Am. Rep. 465; Smith v. Burrus, 106 Mo. 94, 27 Am. St. Rep. 329; Atlanta Journal v. Mayson, 92 Ga. 640, 44 Am. St. Rep. 104 (by statute). Anderson v. Savannah Press Pub. Co., 100 Ga. 454; Finley v. Widner, 112 Mich. 230; Hearne v. DeYoung, 119 Cal. 670. It is sufficient if the evidence introduced by the plaintiff himself shows the truth by a preponderance of the evidence. Anderson v. Savannah Press Pub. Co., supra.

that by statute penal consequences might follow a verdict for the defendant on a plea of justification in an action for libel or slander.[13]

§ 2. Good faith and belief in the truth of the publication.—Although it is generally said that malice is an element of libel and slander, this does not mean that it is necessary in all cases to prove actual malice. The malice technically necessary to support an action is implied as a matter of law from the publication of defamatory matter without legal justification or excuse.[14] It follows that where defamatory words are published concerning another, not under circumstances rendering the publication justifiable or excusable, the fact that the defendant made the publication in good faith and in the honest belief that it was true, however reasonable his belief may have been, is no excuse. Although some cases to the contrary may be found in the reports, this rule is established by the overwhelming weight of authority.[15]

The defendant's good faith and honest belief in the truth of his statement, however, may be material under the defense that the statement was fair comment on a matter which was properly open to public criticism,[16] or under the defense that the circumstances were such as to render his communication a privileged one. And, by the weight of authority, even when there is no such justification or excuse, he may prove his good faith and belief in the truth of the charge for the purpose of defeating or reducing the recovery by the plaintiff of exemplary damages,[17] provided the words were not published recklessly or wantonly and without reasonable grounds for believing them to be true.[18] The defendant cannot on the question of good faith and in mitigation of damages prove facts of which he had no knowledge when the libel was published.[19]

13. The plaintiff could be arraigned and put upon his trial for felony upon that verdict, without indictment by a grand jury. Cook v. Field, 3 Esp. 133.

14. Ante, Libel and Slander, § 2 B, 6 C. L. and cases there cited.

15. Bromage v. Prosser, 4 Barn. & C. 257, Bigelow's Lead. Cas. 137, Chase's Cas. 128; Campbell v. Spottiswoode, 3 B. & S. 769; King v. Root, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 113, 21 Am. Dec. 102; Moore v. Francis, 121 N. Y. 199, 18 Am. St. Rep. 810, Chase's Cas. 126; Byam v. Collins, 111 N. Y. 143, 7 Am. St. Rep. 726, Chase's Cas. 139; Holmes v. Jones, 147 N. Y. 59, 49 Am. St. Rep. 646; Mattson v. Albert, 97 Tenn. 232; Smith v. Johnson, 69 Vt. 231; Parkhurst v. Ketchum, 6 Allen (Mass.) 406, 83 Am. Dec. 639; Joannes v. Bennett, 5 Allen (Mass.) 169, 81 Am. Dec. 738; Lathrop v. Adams, 133 Mass. 471, 43 Am. Rep. 528; Fountain v. West, 23 Iowa, 9, 92 Am. Dec. 405; Park v. Detroit Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 560, 16 Am. St. Rep. 544; Callahan v. Ingram, 122 Mo. 355, 374, 43 Am. St. Rep. 583, 595; Tribby v. Transcript Pub. Co., 74 Minn. 84, 73 Am. St. Rep. 330. Good faith is mitigatory but not defensive. See 4 C. L. 423, n. 48.

16. See Libel and Slander, § 3, ante, 6 C. L.

17. Gilman v. Lowell, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 573, 24 Am. Dec. 96; Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. 463, 8 Am. Dec. 202; Fountain v. West, 23 Iowa, 9, 92 Am. Dec. 405; Bronson v. Bruce, 59 Mich. 467, 60 Am. Rep. 307; Davis v. Maxhausen, 103 Mich. 315, Paige's Cas. 383; Fowler v. Fowler, 113 Mich. 575; Callahan v. Ingram, 122 Mo. 355, 43 Am. St. Rep. 583; Hoey v. Fletcher, 39 Fla. 325; Storey v. Earley, 86 Ill. 461; Folwell v. Providence Journal Co., 19 R. I. 551; Henn v. Horn, 56 Ohio St. 442. Honest belief in the truth of the words may be heard in mitigation. See 4 C. L. 424, n. 63; 2 C. L. 724, text 18. But not for the purpose of mitigating the actual damages. Sickra v. Small, 87 Me. 493, 47 Am. St. Rep. 344; Callahan v. Ingram, 122 Mo. 355, 43 Am. St. Rep. 583; Buckstaff v. Hicks, 94 Wis. 34, 59 Am. St. Rep. 853. They are immaterial if none but compensatory damages are asked. See 2 C. L. 724, text 21. If the plea is solely not guilty, mitigative matter goes only to punitive damages. See 2 C. L. 724, n. 19.

18. Hayner v. Cowden, 27 Ohio St. 292, 22 Am. Rep. 303. See, also, Edwards v. San Jose Printing Soc., 99 Cal. 431, 37 Am. St. Rep. 70; Brown v. Vannaman, 85 Wis. 451, 39 Am. St. Rep. 860. That the words were a jest is no defense, see 4 C. L. 423, text 50. The pendency of defective indictments will not tend to prove truth. See 2 C. L. 724, n. 19. General rumor according with truth may be shown. See 2 C. L. 724, text 20.

19. Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. 463, 8 Am. Dec. 202; Morey v. Morning Journal Ass'n, 123 N. Y. 207, 20 Am. St. Rep. 730; Grant v. Herald Co., 42 N. Y. App. Div. 354; Barkly v. Copeland, 74 Cal. 1, 5 Am. St. Rep. 411; Edwards v. San Jose Printing Soc., 99 Cal. 431, 37 Am. St. Rep. 70; Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n v. Schenck, 98 Fed. 925, 40 C. C. A. 163. Mitigation must rest in something known to and relied on by defendant at the time of publication. See 4 C. L. 424, text 72. In this connection matters of mitigation must be distinguished from elements of damage the former being referable to the mind or purpose of the defamer and the latter to the harm actually wrought. Compare Damages, 5 C. L. 908, 913.

§ 3. Repetition and reports.—The publication of defamatory matter is not the less the speaker's or writer's own act, and makes him none the less liable, in the absence of a statute, because he only repeats what he has heard or seen from others. The repetition of defamatory matter, except in certain cases of privilege, is just as unjustifiable and inexcusable as an original publication, and it can make no difference that it is done in good faith and without actual malice.[20] And it makes no difference, according to the weight of authority, that the person so publishing the matter expresses doubt or disbelief as to its truth,[21] or that he repeats it merely as a rumor, or as coming from some other person, even though he may give the name of the original publisher or speaker,[22] for "tale bearers are as bad as tale makers."[23]

Libel or slander may consist in a fair report of statements which were actually made, and on an occasion which then and there justified the original speaker in making them.[24]

While the fact that the defendant, in publishing a libel or slander, merely repeated in good faith what he had seen or heard, from another, is no justification, it tends to show that the publication was not made with actual malice, and for this reason, according to the weight of authority, it may be shown in mitigation of damages, if the pleadings are in proper form.[25] But the defendant must show that his informants were possessed of such character and standing as would command a belief in the truth of their utterances.[26]

§ 4. Ignorance or mistake.—Ignorance or mistake on the part of the defendant may be a good excuse and defense in an action for libel, if not due to negligence. A newsdealer, or book-seller, not being the publisher, who sells a newspaper, book, or periodical containing a libel, in ignorance of such fact, is not liable to an action in the absence of negligence.[27] The same is true of a porter who, in the course of

20. Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 315, 316; Purcell v. Sowler, 2 C. P. Div. 215; Watkin v. Hall, L. R. 3 Q. B. 396; De Crespigny v. Wellesley, 5 Bing. 392, Bigelow's Cas. 180, Bigelow's Lead. Cas. 151; Times Pub. Co. v. Carlisle, 94 Fed. 762, 36 C. C. A. 475; Branstetter v. Dorrough, 81 Ind. 527; Kenney v. McLaughlin, 5 Gray (Mass.) 3, 66 Am. Dec. 345; Stevens v. Hartwell, 11 Met. (Mass.) 542; Bishop v. Journal Newspaper Co., 168 Mass. 327; Dole v. Lyon, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 447, 6 Am. Dec. 346; Terwilliger v. Wands, 17 N. Y. 54, 72 Am. Dec. 420, Chase's Cas. 121, Erwin's Cas. 328; Evans v. Smith, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 363, 17 Am. Dec. 74; Haines v. Campbell, 74 Md. 158, 28 Am. St. Rep. 240; Upton v. Hume, 24 Or. 420, 41 Am. St. Rep. 863; World Pub. Co. v. Mullen, 43 Neb. 126, 47 Am. St. Rep. 737; Brewer v. Chase, 121 Mich. 526, 80 Am. St. Rep. 527. Copying from another paper is no defense. See 4 C. L. 423, text 47.

21. Branstetter v. Dorrough, 81 Ind. 527.

22. Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 316; De Crespigney v. Wellesley, 5 Bing. 392, Bigelow's Cas. 180, Bigelow's Lead. Cas. 151; McPherson v. Daniel, 10 B. & C. 263; Watkin v. Hall, L. R. 3 Q. B. 396; Dole v. Lyon, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 447, 6 Am. Dec. 346; Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 602; Kenney v. McLaughlin, 5 Gray (Mass.) 3, 66 Am. Dec. 345; Stevens v. Hartwell, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 542; Bishop v. Journal Newspaper Co., 168 Mass. 327; Sans v. Joerris, 14 Wis. 663; Times Pub. Co. v. Carlisle, 94 Fed. 762, 36 C. C. A. 475; World Pub. Co. v. Mullen, 43 Neb. 126, 47 Am. St. Rep. 737. No defense that the article professes to be on information of one named therein. See 2 C. L. 723, text 3. There are some decisions to the contrary in the case of slander, but they are contrary to the weight of authority. See Davis v. Lewis, 7 T. R. 17; Miller v. Kerr, 2 McCord (S. C.) 285, 13 Am. Dec. 722; Tatlow v. Jacquett, 1 Harr. (Del.) 333, 26 Am. Dec. 399; Haynes v. Leland, 29 Me. 233.

23. Branstetter v. Dorrough, 81 Ind. 527.

24. Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 316; Purcell v. Sowler, 2 C. P. Div. 215 (holding that, although ex parte charges at a meeting of poor-law guardians, of misconduct against a medical officer, were privileged, the privilege did not extend to a publication of a report of such proceedings).

25. Bennett v. Bennett, 6 Car. & P. 586; Saunders v. Mills, 6 Bing. 213; Farr v. Rasco, 9 Mich. 353, 80 Am. Dec. 88; Brewer v. Chase, 121 Mich. 526, 80 Am. St. Rep. 527; Calloway v. Middleton, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 372, 12 Am. Dec. 409; Evans v. Smith, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 363, 17 Am. Dec. 74; Hart v. Reed, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 166, 35 Am. Dec. 179; Hewitt v. Pioneer-Press Co., 23 Minn. 178, 23 Am. Rep. 680; Hinkle v. Davenport, 38 Iowa, 355; Storey v. Early, 86 Ill. 461; Cook v. Barkley, 2 N. J. Law, 169, 2 Am. Dec. 343; Hoboken Printing & Pub. Co. v. Kahn, 58 N. J. Law, 359, 55 Am. St. Rep. 609; Upton v. Hume, 24 Or. 420, 41 Am. St. Rep. 863; Callahan v. Ingram, 122 Mo. 355, 43 Am. Dec. 583. Copying an apparently true report is mitigatory. See 4 C. L. 424, text 69.

26. Edwards v. San Jose Printing Soc., 99 Cal. 431, 37 Am. St. Rep. 70.

27. Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 309; Emmons v. Pottle, 16 Q. B. Div. 354, Bigelow's Cas. 141; Chubb v. Flannigan, 6 Car. &

business, delivers parcels containing hand-bills, in ignorance of their contents.[28] Even the publisher of a newspaper, book, or periodical may be excused on the ground of ignorance. The publisher of a newspaper who publishes therein an advertisement or other communication from a third person, which is in fact a libel, is not liable to the person defamed if he did not know the article was defamatory, and there is nothing on its face to render him chargeable with such knowledge.[29]

If a person is guilty of negligence in selling or otherwise publishing a libel which by the exercise of reasonable care he would discover, particularly where there are circumstances which should reasonably put him on inquiry, his ignorance of fact is no defense.[30] If a publication is made libelous by the negligence of its publisher, as by carelessness in setting type, or in the use of words, etc., he cannot successfully defend an action on the ground of mistake.[31] It has been held that if one writes a privileged communication to another, disparaging the character of a third person, and by mistake in exchanging envelopes sends it to a different person, with reference to whom the communication is not privileged, he is excused on the ground of mistake.[32] The soundness of this decision, however, is doubtful.[33]

§ 5. Provocation.—Unless the case is one of privilege on the ground of defense against a libelous attack,[34] it is no justification, so as to constitute a bar to an action for libel or slander, that the publication by the defendant was provoked by the words or conduct of the plaintiff.[35] The law, however, where injury is done to the character of another, as well as where it is done to his person, makes allowance for the infirmities of human nature, and for what is done in the heat of passion produced by the improper conduct of the person injured; and allows the defendant, in an action for libel or slander, to show in mitigation of damages, although not in bar of the action, that the defamatory words were uttered or published by him in heat of passion or excitement, under the provocation of defamatory or insulting attacks by the plaintiff upon him at or about the time of the publication.[36] But to render evidence of defamatory publications by the plaintiff concerning the defendant admissible as showing provocation, they must have been made immediately before the defendant's

P. 431; Street v. Johnson, 80 Wis. 455, 27 Am. St. Rep. 42. The rule applies to the proprietor of a circulating library who circulates a book in ignorance of its containing a libel, the ignorance not being due to negligence. Vizetelly v. Mudie's Select Library, (1900) 2 Q. B. 170.

28. Day v. Bream, 2 M. & R. 54.

29. Smith v. Ashley, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 367, 45 Am. Dec. 216, where it appeared that the defendant understood a story published in his newspaper to be a fictitious story, not intended to apply to the plaintiff or any other person. See, also, Dexter v. Spear, 4 Mason (U. S.) 115.

30. Chubb v. Flannigan, 6 Car. & P. 431; Vizetelly v. Mudie's Select Library (1900) 2 Q. B. 170; Curtis v. Mussy, 6 Gray (Mass.) 261.

31. Shepherd v. Whitaker, L. R. 10 C. P. 502; Blake v. Stevens, 4 F. & F. 232. Compare Sulling v. Shakespeare, 46 Mich. 408, 41 Am. Rep. 166. It is no defense that defendant did not intend to make charge he did make. See 4 C. L. 423, text 49.

32. Tompson v. Dashwood, 11 Q. B. Div. 43.

33. Pollock on Torts (Webb's Ed.) 309. And see Hebditch v. MacIlwaine (1894) 2 Q. B. 54.

34. But a retort provoked or necessitated by occasion to defend one's self from counter defamation is privileged. See 2 C. L. 722, text 90. Mere irritations will not necessitate such an answer. Id. An exchange of epithet and opprobrium is not actionable. Id.

35. Hosley v. Brooks, 20 Ill. 115, 71 Am. Dec. 252; Mousler v. Harding, 33 Ind. 176, 5 Am. Rep. 195; Poissenet v. Reuther, 51 La. Ann. 965; Simpson v. Robinson, 104 La. 180. That plaintiff has libeled defendant does not defeat the action. See 4 C. L. 423, text 51.

36. Trapley v. Blaby, 7 Car. & P. 395; 2 Bing. N. C. 437; Watts v. Fraser, 7 Adol. & El. 223, 7 Car. & P. 369; Avery v. Ray, 1 Mass. 12; Walker v. Flynn, 130 Mass. 152; Maynard v. Beardsley, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 560, 22 Am. Dec. 595; Gould v. Weed, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 22; Rochester v. Anderson, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 428; Moore v. Clay, 24 Ala. 235, 60 Am. Dec. 461; Jauch v. Jauch, 50 Ind. 135, 19 Am. Rep. 699; McClintock v. Crick, 4 Iowa, 453; Newman v. Stein, 75 Mich. 402, 13 Am. St. Rep. 447; Brewer v. Chase, 121 Mich. 526, 80 Am. St. Rep. 527; DeCamp v. Archibald, 50 Ohio St. 618, 40 Am. St. Rep. 692; Simons v. Lewis, 51 La. Ann. 327; Simpson v. Robinson, 104 La. 180. Prior counter libels by plaintiff are mitigatory. See 4 C. L. 424, text 67. Irritating conduct by plaintiff may be shown. See 2 C. L. 724, n. 22.

publication, or so near to it in point of time as to constitute a part of the res gestae. Such provocation given by the plaintiff on other occasions, and which has no apparent connection with the publication of the defendant, cannot be given in evidence even in mitigation of damages.[37]

§ 6. Bad character of the plaintiff.—The fact that a person has a bad character or reputation in the community is no justification for making it worse by defamation which is false, and in an action for libel or slander, therefore, the general bad character of the plaintiff cannot be pleaded or proven in bar of the action.[38] The character of the plaintiff, however, is material on the question of damages. When a person brings an action for libel or slander, and thus seeks to recover damages for injury to his character, he puts his character in issue, both generally and as to the particular kind of misconduct imputed to him, and that evidence of his general bad character in either respect is admissible in mitigation of damages under the general issue, or, in most jurisdictions, where the defendant has pleaded the truth in justification and failed to sustain his plea.[39] "Certainly a person of disparaged fame is not entitled to the same measure of damages with one whose character is unblemished, and it is competent to show that by evidence."[40]

The evidence of general character which is admissible in mitigation of damages, is not confined to the plaintiff's character with respect to acts of the particular kind imputed by the defendant, but extends to his character generally,[41] for, as was said in a Kentucky case, "a man who is habitually addicted to every vice, except the one with which he is charged, is not entitled to as heavy damages as one possessing a fair moral character."[42] But the evidence is limited to proof of general reputation, and the defendant cannot introduce evidence of specific acts.[43] Nor can he show

37. Makley v. Johnson, R. & M. 422; May v. Brown, 3 B. & C. 113; 4 D. & R. 670; Rochester v. Anderson, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 428; Maynard v. Beardsley, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 560, 22 Am. Dec. 595; Avery v. Ray, 1 Mass. 12; Sheffill v. Van Deusen, 15 Gray (Mass.) 485, 77 Am. Dec. 377; McAlexander v. Harris, 6 Munf. (Va.) 465; Moore v. Clay, 24 Ala. 235, 60 Am. Dec. 461; Porter v. Henderson, 11 Mich. 20, 82 Am. Dec. 59; Quinby v. Minnesota Tribune Co., 38 Minn. 528, 8 Am. St. Rep. 693. See, also, Hitchcock v. Moore, 70 Mich. 112, 14 Am. St. Rep. 474.

38. Wood v. Durham, 21 Q. B. Div. 501; Sun Printing & Pub. Assn. v. Schenck, 98 Fed. 925, 40 C. C. A. 163, and cases in the notes following.

39. ——— v. Moor, 1 Maule & S. 284; Sikra v. Small, 87 Me. 493, 47 Am. St. Rep. 344; Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 511, 10 Am. Dec. 633; Eastland v. Caldwell, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 21, 4 Am. Dec. 668; McGee v. Sodusky, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 185, 20 Am. Dec. 251; Root v. King, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 613; Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 352, 20 Am. Dec. 616; Gilman v. Lowell, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 573, 24 Am. Dec. 96; Remsen v. Bryant, 47 N. Y. App. Div. 503; Lamos v. Snell, 6 N. H. 413, 25 Am. Dec. 468; Wetherbee v. Marsh, 20 N. H. 561, 51 Am. Dec. 244; Stone v. Varney, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 86, 39 Am. Dec. 762; Parkhurst v. Ketchum, 6 Allen (Mass.) 406, 83 Am. Dec. 639; Clark v. Brown, 116 Mass. 509; Cox v. Strickland, 101 Ga. 482; Shilling v. Carson, 27 Md. 175, 92 Am. Dec. 632; Finley v. Widner, 112 Mich. 230; Anthony v. Stephens, 1 Mo. 254, 13 Am. Dec. 497; Waters v. Jones, 3 Port. (Ala.) 442, 29 Am. Dec. 261; Byrket v. Monohon, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 83, 41 Am. Dec. 212; Tracy v. Hacket, 19 Ind. App. 133, 65 Am. St. Rep. 398; Sheahan v. Collins, 20 Ill. 325, 71 Am. Dec. 271; B——— v. I———, 22 Wis. 372, 94 Am. Dec. 604; Candrian v. Miller, 98 Wis. 164. Bad character of plaintiff may be shown to mitigate or reduce damages. See 4 C. L. 424, text 71.

40. Lord Ellenborough in ——— v. Moor, 1 Maule & S. 284.

41. Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 511, 10 Am. Dec. 633; Eastland v. Caldwell, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 20, 4 Am. Dec. 668; Lamos v. Snell, 6 N. H. 413, 25 Am. Dec. 468; Stone v. Varney, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 86, 39 Am. Dec. 762; Parkhurst v. Ketchum, 6 Allen (Mass.) 406, 83 Am. Dec. 639; Sikra v. Small, 87 Me. 493, 47 Am. St. Rep. 344, and other cases cited in the notes preceding.

42. Eastland v. Caldwell, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 21, 4 Am. Dec. 668. And see the reasoning of Nott, J., in Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 511, 10 Am. Dec. 633.

43. Shilling v. Carson, 27 Md. 175, 92 Am. Dec. 632; Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 511, 10 Am. Dec. 633; Maynard v. Beardsley, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 560, 22 Am. Dec. 595; Lamos v. Snell, 6 N. H. 413, 25 Am. Dec. 468; Parkhurst v. Ketchum, 6 Allen (Mass.) 406, 83 Am. Dec. 639; Shehan v. Collins, 20 Ill. 325, 71 Am. Dec. 271; Folwell v. Providence Journal Co., 19 R. I. 551; Robertson v. Hamilton, 16 Ind. App. 328; Meutze v. Tuteur, 77 Wis. 236, 20 Am. St. Rep. 115; Tribune Ass'n v. Follwell, 107 Fed. 646, 46 C. C. A. 526. General bad character of plaintiff may be shown. See 2 C. L. 724, text 23. It cannot be shown, however, that he forbore to sue for previous libels. See 2 C. L. 724, n. 23. Nor can specific acts be shown. Id., n. 24.

general bad character subsequent to the publication of the alleged libel or slander,[44] even though such character could not possibly have been caused thereby.[45]

Some of the courts have held that it is competent for the defendant to show that, when the defamatory matter was published, the plaintiff's character had been disparaged by reports in the neighborhood that he had been guilty of practices similar to those imputed to him,[46] but on this point there are a number of decisions to the contrary.[47]

§ 7. Retraction and apology.—The fact that after the publication of a libel or slander the defendant retracted the same and apologized to the plaintiff is no justification, and cannot be pleaded or proven in bar of the action.[48] But the person libeled may release his right of action;[49] and even when there is no such release, a full and fair retraction of the libel and apology for its publication, made before action and in good faith, may be shown in mitigation of damages.[50]

In England, and in some of the United States, there are statutes, either general or relating particularly to libels published in newspapers, expressly allowing a retraction and apology, if full and fair, to be shown in mitigation of damages.[51]

LICENSES.

§ 1. Definition and nature.—A license is a mere permit to do something that without it would be unlawful.[64] A license granted under the police power of the state does not constitute a contract between the licensee and the municipality granting it, or confer upon him any vested right of property;[65] and its abrogation, as provided by law, does not deprive him of any immunity or privilege conferred upon him by the constitution.[66] But a board that is authorized by statute to grant li-

44. Thompson v. Nye, 16 Q. B. 175; Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 252, 20 Am. Dec. 616.

45. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 352, 20 Am. Dec. 616 (where the charge imported was that the plaintiff was a thief, and it was sought to show that she was subsequently reputed to be a common prostitute).

46. Leicester v. Walter, 2 Camp. 251; ——— v. Moor, 1 Maule & S. 285; Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. 463, 8 Am. Dec. 202; Calloway v. Middleton, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 372, 12 Am. Dec. 499; McGee v. Sodusky, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 185, 20 Am. Dec. 251; Nelson v. Evens, 1 Dev. (N. C.) 9; Wetherbee v. Marsh, 20 N. H. 561, 51 Am. Dec. 244. Compare Sanders v. Johnson, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 50, 36 Am. Dec. 564; Gray v. Elzroth, 10 Ind. App. 587, 53 Am. St. Rep. 400.

47. Gilman v. Lowell, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 573, 24 Am. Dec. 96; Wolcott v. Hall, 6 Mass. 514, 4 Am. Dec. 173; Alderman v. French, 1 Pick (Mass.) 1, 11 Am. Dec. 114; Sheahan v. Collins, 20 Ill. 325, 71 Am. Dec. 271; Shilling v. Carson, 27 Md. 175, 92 Am. Dec. 632; Pease v. Shippen, 80 Pa. St. 513, 21 Am. Rep. 116.

48. Tresca v. Maddox, 11 La. Ann. 206, 66 Am. Dec. 198; Williams v. McManus, 38 La. Ann. 161, 58 Am. Rep. 171; Lehrer v. Elmore, 100 Ky. 56; Davis v. Maxhausen, 103 Mich. 315, Paige's Cas. 383.

49. Boosey v. Wood, 3 H. & C. 484. Although a person who has been libeled may release his claim for damages, a bare expression of satisfaction at a recantation and apology by the libeler will not operate as a release of his right of action. Tresca v. Maddox, 11 La. Ann. 206, 66 Am. Dec. 198.

50. Tresca v. Maddox, 11 La. Ann. 206, 66 Am. Dec. 198; Cass v. New Orleans Times, 27 La. Ann. 214; Davis v. Maxhausen, 103 Mich. 315, Paige's Cas. 383. A retraction of a libel, if not published until suit has been brought, cannot be considered in mitigation of damages. Evening News Ass'n v. Tryon, 42 Mich. 549, 36 Am. Rep. 450. Contra, Turner v. Hearst, 115 Cal. 394. An offer to retract mitigates if in time before action. See 4 C. L. 424, text 70.

51. See Lafone v. Smith, 3 H. & N. 735; Gray v. Times Newspaper Co., 74 Minn. 452, 73 Am. St. Rep. 363.

64. License to conduct games of faro and roulette. Littleton v. Burgess [Wyo.] 82 P. 864.

65. Statutes under which licenses have been granted may be repealed without impairing the obligation of contracts, or depriving the licensees of property without due process of law. Littleton v. Burgess [Wyo.] 82 P. 864.

66. Lowell v. Archambault [Mass.] 75 N. E. 65; Littleton v. Burgess [Wyo.] 82 P. 864.

censes cannot revoke the same, when unreservedly given, and where the statute confers no power of revocation.[67] The payment by a foreign corporation of the conventional price, or bonus, for the privilege of entering the state to do business, does not give it the absolute right to do business exempt from further license taxes.[68] Where the license is in its nature personal, it cannot be transferred, and affords no defense to one who claims to be a transferee.[69] A corporation cannot avail itself of licenses issued to other corporations whose property it has bought.[70] A license has only a local application[71] and affords no protection beyond the jurisdiction of the officer who issues it,[72] but an ordinance imposing a license charge upon telegraph poles and wires[73] or one imposing such a charge on the pipes of a gas company[74] is not void, because not limited in express terms to those located in the public streets and highways of the municipality, but will be so construed in their application.

§ 2. Power to require and validity of statutes.[75]—License regulations are ordinarily justified as an exercise of the police power.[76] The elements which enter 67. A board of health having granted a permit under Rev. Laws, c. 102, § 69, to use a building for a stable, could not after the expenditure of considerable money by the licensee, revoke the permit upon the petition of certain citizens, though it was improvidently granted. But such a permit is subject to such reasonable regulations as may be made by the board. Lowell v. Archambault [Mass.] 75 N. E. 65.

Note: Of this it is said in 4 Mich. L. R. 229: "The soundness of this decision may be questioned and we regret that the dissenting opinions do not appear. However, the peculiar facts of the case may justify it. Defendant claims the board of health had authority to issue the license under Statute of 1895, Ch. 213, but that said statute contains no provision for its recall. Further, that he secured the license before expending money on building, and, therefore, had a constitutional right to protection. See Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio, 15. After a license, containing no conditions for forfeiture, has been granted, it cannot be revoked except by the legislature. In Grand Rapids v. Braudy, 105 Mich. 670, 55 Am. St. Rep. 472, 32 L. R. A. 116, it was held that a license granted by the city council could not be revoked unless a reservation of such right was stated in the license. However, a legislative act which revokes a license does not impair the obligation of a contract, for a license is not a contract. Commonwealth v. Brennon, 103 Mass. 70, and Lantz v. Hightstown, 46 N. J. Law, 102. The board of health had a right to state conditions in the license for violation of which it might be revoked and should have done so in this case. Schwuchow v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 444. Failing to place such conditions in the license the board could not revoke it arbitrarily after the defendant had expended money relying upon it. In Commonwealth v. Moylan, 119 Mass. 109, it was held that a license cannot be revoked either arbitrarily or because it was injudiciously granted. A license can be revoked only by the action of the legislature or because the licensee has broken one or more of its conditions. See Mayor v. 3rd Ave. R., 33 N. Y. 42. Also, Shuman v. City of Fort Wayne, 127 Ind. 109, holding that the power to revoke licenses lies wholly with the legislature."

68. Section 65, Sess. Laws 1902, p. 73, c. 3, imposing an annual license tax on the capital stock of foreign corporations, is not void as ex post facto legislation or as an impairment of the obligation of a contract. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531.

69. Where, as under Rev. Laws, c. 102, §§ 1-6, 9, the licensing board has discretionary powers to grant or refuse an application for a common victualer's license, with powers of revocation in certain cases, the license is a personal one. Commonwealth v. Lavery [Mass.] 73 N. E. 884.

70. Southern Car & Foundry Co. v. Calhoun County, 141 Ala. 250, 37 So. 425.

71. State v. Cobb [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 551. Act of Congress, July 1, § 7, par. 36, imposing a license tax upon brewers' agents is a purely municipal regulation and not intended to regulate the commercial intercourse between the District of Columbia and the states so as to require the solicitor of a New York brewery to take out a license. Beltzell v. District of Columbia, 21 App. D. C. 49.

72. Under Laws 1903, p. 163, § 4, a party desiring to operate an automobile over county roads must take out a license in each county. State v. Cobb [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 551.

73. Kittanning Borough v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 346.

74. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

75. See 4 C. L. 428.

76. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67; People v. Van De Carr, 26 S. Ct. 144.

Applications of this rule: A borough may require a license of persons canvassing for the sale of goods under the police power delegated by the general borough law of Apr. 3, 1851, P. L. 320. Commonwealth v. Rearick, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 384. Erie City held to have authority under its general police power to impose an annual license tax of $25 on each street car operated in the city. Erie City v. Erie Elec. Motor Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 77. Act of June 7, 1901, P. L. 493, licensing plumbers in second class cities, is constitutional as within the police power. Beltz v. Pittsburg [Pa.] 61 A. 78. But Laws into a municipal tax are the necessary, or probable, expense of the issuing of the license and of such inspection, regulation, and police surveillance as the municipal authorities may lawfully prescribe[77] and it is immaterial whether the amount fixed for this purpose is designated as a license tax, a license fee, or a police charge.[78] While a municipality may, in advance, fix the license charge high enough to cover any reasonably anticipated expense of police supervision,[79] it cannot act arbitrarily or unreasonably,[80] but the risk may rightfully be cast upon the licensee,[81] and the 1896, p. 1052, c. 803, making it unlawful for a firm in New York City to carry on the plumbing business, unless each member thereof has been examined and licensed as a plumber, is not a valid exercise of the police power. Schnaier v. Navarre Hotel & Importation Co., 182 N. Y. 83, 74 N. E. 561. St. 1903, p. 507, c. 473, requiring registration of automobiles and display of registration number and mark is a valid regulation under the state's police power. Commonwealth v. Boyd [Mass.] 74 N. E. 255. An ordinance licensing and regulating the handling of inflammable oils from tank wagons on the streets of Chicago is a valid exercise of police powers conferred by the City and Village Act (Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, p. 291), art. 5, § 1, subds. 4, 9, 15, 20, 41, 66, 78, 96. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718. The provisions of § 33, c. 43, Comp. St. 1901, the act of 1873, regulating insurance companies (Gen. St. 1873, p. 443, c. 33), whereby a retaliatory tax and license fee is imposed upon companies of other states in certain cases, are valid, such imposition being a condition of their admission and continuance to do business in the state. State v. Insurance Co. [Neb.] 99 N. W. 36. The fact that such license fee is required only of companies of other states, the laws of which discriminate against outside companies, does not make it arbitrary or unreasonable, or contrary to sec. 1, art. 9 of the state constitution. Id. Nor does the fact that the requirement may not be made in advance of the company's coming into the state affect its validity. Id. A provision requiring venders of cream and milk to register with the health commissioner and pay a registration fee is a valid police regulation, under charter authority to provide for inspection of milk and licensing and regulating occupations. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 617. The Act of Congress, Feb. 28, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 427, c. 272), prohibiting the employment of steam engineers without licenses is a police regulation for the protection of lives and property. Smoot v. District of Columbia, 23 App. D. C. 266. Laws 1897, pp. 498, 499, c. 415, §§ 180, 184, requiring persons practicing the trade of horseshoing to be examined and licensed, is not a valid exercise of the state's police power, but an arbitrary interference with personal liberty and private property without due process of law. People v. Beattie, 96 App. Div. 383, 89 N. Y. S. 193. An ordinance requiring a license and payment of $600, for the sale of goods and merchandise to merchants by selling them trading stamps, and also requiring a license and payment of $100 from merchants using the stamps, held not to be a tax on the sale of the goods, but a license and tax on a peculiar method of doing business. Oilure Mfg. Co. v. Pidduck-Ross Co., 38 Wash. 137, 80 P. 276.

77. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343; Braddock Borough v. Allegheny Co. Tel. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 544; City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67. The registration fee of $2 required of owners of automobiles by St. 1903, p. 507, c. 473, is a license fee and not a tax. Commonwealth v. Boyd [Mass.] 74 N. E. 255. A registration fee of $1, required of venders of cream and milk, is not a tax but an inspection fee designed as a compensation for the service rendered. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 617.

78. Braddock Borough v. Allegheny Co. Tel. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 544; Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

79. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343. License tax imposed by municipal ordinance on telephone companies held reasonable. Braddock Borough v. Allegheny Co. Tel. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 544. A charge of $1 per pole and $2.50 per mile of wire, annually on telegraph companies, held reasonable in connection with an annual inspection, counting of poles, and calculation of miles of wire, with lookout for dangerous poles and wires (Kittanning Borough v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 346), but a city cannot under its general authority to regulate its streets, impose an annual license tax of $1 per pole on telephone companies, authorized by state law to use public highways (Rev. St. 1898, § 1778), to be paid into its general fund, where the aggregate amount so sought to be collected was greatly in excess of the cost of supervision (Wisconsin Tel. Co. v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 104 N. W. 1009). A license fee of $10 per annum for each tank wagon used in handling oils on the streets of Chicago was not so high as to justify the court in holding the ordinance void therefor. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

80. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343. A municipality cannot, under the guise of license or regulation, place a license so high as to be prohibitive of the transaction of the business sought to be engaged in, but a license is not prohibitive merely because it is burdensome. Garfinkle v. Sullivan, 37 Wash. 650, 80 P. 188.

NOTE. Prohibitory fees: Defendant was prosecuted for violation of a city ordinance forbidding the issuing of trading stamps without a license. Held that such ordinance was unconstitutional and void. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67. This decision is based upon the highest principles of justice and is supported by good authority. Under the police power, municipalities have power to require licenses, but charge cannot be avoided[82] or any excess be recovered back because the charge subsequently appears to be somewhat in excess of the actual expense of the supervision.[83] The burden is on the licensee to show excessiveness of the fee,[84] not by comparison of other license fees, or of the value of the thing licensed,[85] but by evidence pertinent to the necessity and character of the regulation and supervision imposed.[86] The fact that some classes of persons are excepted does not make the police regulation void.[87] The fact that a business is a lawful one does not exempt it from reasonable police regulations.[88] If the purpose of an ordinance is police regulation, and it tends to accomplish that object,[89] then the ordinance may be sustained under the power to regulate[90] although the charter does not, in express words, confer authority to such licenses are merely allowed as a means of regulation and their amount cannot exceed the cost of supervision. Van Hook v. Selma, 70 Ala. 361, 45 Am. Rep. 85. The state has the right to select certain occupations and throw the burden of taxation on them, but if an arbitrary classification, without a reasonable basis to support it, is established, the tax is void. Judson, Taxation, § 459; Tiedeman's Limitations of Police Power, p. 273. The power to levy such a heavy tax on a business or occupation as to discourage or even break it up is also well recognized; but useful occupations, not detrimental to the public, cannot be unduly restricted or substantially prohibited under the guise of police regulations; the rules apply only to trades or occupations that are hurtful to public morals or injurious to the public welfare. State v. Smith, 67 Conn. 541, 52 Am. St. Rep. 301; State v. Moore, 113 N. C. 697; Cache Co. v. Jense, 21 Utah, 207; Tiedeman's Police Power, pp. 270, 277, 278; Cooley's Taxation [3d Ed.] 24. In Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 Law. Ed. 385, it was held that the legislature may not, under the guise of a police regulation and of protecting the interests of the public, arbitrarily interfere with public business or impose unusual or unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations. While absolute equality in taxation is unattainable, yet, when, for any reason, the tax becomes discriminative upon the individuals of the class taxed and selects some for an exceptional burden, it is deprived of the necessary element of legal equality. Cooley's Taxation [3rd Ed.] 259, 260; Commonwealth v. Fowler, 96 Ky. 166, 33 L. R. A. 839; Railway Co. v. Clark, 60 Kan. 826. Moreover a city cannot divide a single taxable privilege and require a separate tax for each of its elements. 2 Cooley's Taxation [3rd Ed.] 1103 and note I; Ex parte Simms, 40 Fla. 432; Canora v. Williams, 41 Fla. 509. Here a heavy license was required from trading stamp companies, so that the present license was seemingly within this rule. The use of trading stamps has been upheld as lawful, and the right to give them away is unquestionable. See 2 Mich. L. R. 224; 3 Mich. L. R. 233.—3 Mich. L. R. 662.

81. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343; Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

82. 83. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343.

84. The borough is not bound in the first place to prove the tax reasonable, but the burden is on the licensee to show that it is unreasonable. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355. Unless the court can determine from judicial cognizance, or the facts ascertained, that the license fee is grossly in excess of what was necessary to cover the reasonably anticipated expenses of police supervision, it is not justified in interfering. Id.

85. The unreasonableness of a license charge, imposed on telegraph poles and wires, could not be shown by proving the cost or value of the property, the space occupied by poles and value of abutting properties and rate of their taxation, the cost of reconstructing the line, its ordinary depreciation and present value, the license fees of other municipalities, and the capital stock, bonded indebtedness, net earnings, and poles and wires of the entire system. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343.

86. But it was admissible to show the careful construction and maintenance of the line, its location in a sparsely settled community so as not to impede the public, its frequent inspection and regular repair, the cost of such inspection, and that the borough made no inspection, nor paid out money, nor incurred any expense therefor. Schellsburg v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 343. But such evidence must cover the whole period for which license fees are claimed and must show the nature, extent, and cost of inspection and supervision of its lines by the company. Kittanning Borough v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 346.

87. An ordinance imposing a license fee or tax upon the keepers of conveyances for carrying persons or property for hire is not invalid because it does not include the livery business, the difference in the vehicles used, and the extent of their use of the streets forming a proper basis for classification. City of Des Moines v. Bolton [Iowa] 102 N. W. 1045. Singling out the milk business in a city as a proper subject of regulation is not a denial of the equal protection of the laws, where all milk dealers are treated alike. People v. Van De Carr, 26 S. Ct. 144.

88. The selling of milk and cream may be so regulated. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 617. Municipal authorities in Pennsylvania cannot grant exemption from this police supervision, it being prohibited by Const. art. xvi. § 3. Braddock Borough v. Allegheny Co. Tel. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 544.

license;[91] for the grant of power to a municipality to regulate confers the power to license, when regulation cannot otherwise be accomplished.[92] But a municipality that has not the authority to license cannot, under the guise of regulating its streets, impose an annual tax per pole upon a telephone company for the purpose of collecting a revenue.[93] The fact, however, that the license tax required by an ordinance is paid into the city treasury, and incidentally augments the revenues of the city, does not show that the ordinance was enacted to raise revenue by taxation.[94] If, on the other hand, the ordinance is adopted ostensibly as a police measure, but used as a mere subterfuge for the purpose of raising revenue, it will not be sustained.[95] It is no objection to an act that it applies more stringent license regulations to the cities of larger size and denser population.[96] License regulations must not infringe the privilege of citizens to carry on legitimate business by the use of legitimate means,[97] nor infringe any provision of the state constitution,[98] but the provision claimed to be violated by the requirement of the license must be specifically pointed out.[99] Congress is bound not to invade any guarantees of citizens in legislating for the District of Columbia.[1]

License laws, however, are often passed in the exercise of the taxing power,[2]

89, 90, 91. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

92. Section 170, Detroit City charter, conferring power to regulate the manner in which the streets, etc., shall be used and enjoyed, held to authorize an ordinance regulating the speed of automobiles in the streets by a system of registration and numbering. People v. Schneider [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 32, 103 N. W. 172.

93. Wisconsin Tel. Co. v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 104 N. W. 1009.

94. Erie City v. Erie Elec. Motor Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 77.

95. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355. An annual license tax of $1 per pole, to be paid into the general fund, there being nothing in the ordinance to indicate that it was for supervision, and the amount sought to be collected greatly exceeding the expense of supervision, held to be a revenue measure and not warranted by the charter. Wisconsin Tel. Co. v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 104 N. W. 1009.

96. Act of June 7, 1901, P. L. 493, relating to the examination and licensing of plumbers is constitutional. Beltz v. Pittsburg [Pa.] 61 A. 78.

97. Ex parte Snyder [Idaho] 79 P. 819; City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67. An ordinance imposing an annual license tax of $600 on persons selling trading stamps to merchants, and a tax of $100 per year on merchants using such stamps, was intended to prohibit the use of them and is void under the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution. Ex parte Hutchinson, 137 F. 949; Humes v. City of Little Rock, 138 F. 929. Laws 1896, p. 1052, c. 803, making it unlawful for any firm in New York city to carry on the business of plumbing unless each member thereof has passed examination and been registered as a plumber, is unconstitutional so far as it interferes with the right to form partnerships for carrying on that business. Schnaier v Navarre Hotel & Importation Co., 182 N. Y. 83, 74 N. E. 561. Kirby's Dig. § 6886, prohibiting persons, whether owner, manufacturer, or agent, from traveling in any county and peddling certain wares, but exempting resident merchants, violates the 14th amendment of the federal constitution. Ex parte Deeds [Ark.] 87 S. W. 1030. The equal protection of the laws was not denied to the managing agent of a nonresident meat-packing house by requiring of him a license tax on the domestic business done by him where the same tax was levied on the agents of domestic and foreign houses alike (Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 Law. Ed. 663), nor is the imposition of such a tax any impairment of the obligation of his contract of employment (Id.). Acts 1903, p. 344, imposing a license tax on emigration agents, does not conflict with the 14th amendment to the federal constitution. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203.

98. Acts 1903, p. 344, imposing a license tax on emigration agents, does not conflict with Const. § 31, providing that emigration shall not be prohibited. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203. An ordinance exempting from an occupation tax such persons as practice professions temporarily within the city, if they do not advertise or solicit other business therein, does not conflict with Const. § 3, forbidding exclusive privileges. Evers v. Mayfield, 27 Ky. L. R. 481, 85 S. W. 697.

99. State v. Cobb [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 551.

1. Although the 14th amendment to the federal constitution does not in terms extend to the United States authority, yet congress may not disregard its guaranties in legislating for the District of Columbia. Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 68. The right to pursue any legitimate calling, subject to reasonable regulations, cannot be denied to the citizens of the District. Id.

2. The tax imposed on the capital stock of foreign corporations, by Sess. Laws 1902, p. 73, c. 3, § 65, is an excise tax on the business of such corporations, levied for the purpose of state revenue, the capital stock being simply the standard by which the amount is computed (American Smelting & and as such must conform to the constitutional provisions relating to taxation;[3] but a privilege tax, levied upon certain business callings, is held not to be subject to the constitutional limitations, either as to amount or uniformity.[4] When the fee required is only such as will cover the expense of enforcing the regulation, it is under the police power of the state, but when it is larger than required for such purpose and is exacted for the purpose of revenue, the license is issued under the taxing power of the state.[5] The courts now recognize the right to so combine the police regulation and the taxing power as to levy a license tax to discourage or break up a business, but this applies only to such kinds of business as, though tolerated, are recognized as hurtful to public morals, productive of disorder, or injurious to the public.[6] The legislature can confer upon cities and towns the power to impose a license tax upon business and professions,[7] but there must be express authority therefor,[8] or necessary implication,[9] and it is never easily implied.[10]

Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531), and the fact that only a part of the capital stock is employed, and only a small portion of its property is situated within the state, does not relieve a foreign corporation from the payment of such a tax (Id.). Such tax is not invalid as being a license levied under the police power and, therefore, in conflict with the purpose of the act which is declared by its title to relate to "public revenue." Id. The yearly license fee or tax on corporations, imposed by Act N. J. 1884 (P. L. 1884, p. 234, § 4), is imposed arbitrarily as a condition precedent to the continued existence of the corporation and is not a tax upon corporate franchises (Duryea v. American Wood Working Mach. Co., 133 F. 329), but is an imposition which subsequently organized corporations by their charters contracted to pay (In re Cosmopolitan Power Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 858). It is valid, though imposed on an insolvent corporation in the hands of a federal receiver and constitutes a preferred claim against the assets in the hands of the receiver. Duryea v. American Wood Working Mach. Co., 133 F. 329; In re Cosmopolitan Power Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 858. The fact that the payment of an occupation tax is evidenced by a receipt which is called a "license" does not render the tax any less a tax for revenue (Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203), nor does the fact that it is provided for by a special act, instead of being included in the general revenue act (Id.).

3. Sess. Laws 1902, p. 73, c. 3, § 65, imposing an excise tax on the business of foreign corporations, based on their capital stock, does not conflict with Const. art. 10, § 3, that provision being applicable only to direct ad valorem tax on property. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531. Section 18 of the town charter of Suffolk authorizing the imposition of an occupation tax, as applied to a railroad company, does not conflict with Const. art 10, § 4 (Va. Code 1904, p. cclxii, § 170), authorizing the legislature to lay a license tax on any business that cannot be reached by an ad valorem tax. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Suffolk, 103 Va. 498, 49 S. E. 658. Act No. 47 of 1904, imposing a license tax on trading stamp companies, is not unconstitutional for failing to graduate the tax to be collected. State v. Merchants' Trading Co., 114 La. 529, 38 So. 443.

4. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67; Garfinkle v. Sullivan, 37 Wash. 650, 80 P. 188; Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203. The tax of $10 per mile on railroad franchises in Mississippi, without regard to conditions, business, earning capacity, or value, is not a property tax but a privilege tax. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 38 So. 348.

5. City of Des Moines v. Bolton [Iowa] 102 N. W. 1045. An annual license charge of $25 for each street car run or operated upon any road in the city held to be a license tax and not a tax upon business or property. Erie City v. Erie Elec. Motor Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 77.

6. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67. The business of selling intoxicating liquors is such a business. Gambill v. Erdrich Bros. [Ala.] 39 So. 297. The business of an emigration agent is not such an occupation as to justify discriminative legislation under the police power with a view to suppressing it. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203.

7. Gamble v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 353. In Washington, cities of the first class have power, under their charters, to grant licenses for the purpose of revenue as well as for police regulation. Garfinkle v. Sullivan, 37 Wash. 650, 80 P. 188. The town charter of Suffolk, § 18, authorizes the imposition of a license tax on any business, trade, or occupation on which the state requires a license, and warrants the imposition of such a tax upon a railroad company. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Suffolk, 103 Va. 498, 49 S. E. 658. An ordinance which taxes professions practiced within the city but exempts persons temporarily therein, who do not advertise or solicit other business, is not unreasonable. Evers v. Mayfield, 27 Ky. L. R. 481, 85 S. W. 697. An occupation tax of $400 on merchants using trading stamps not shown to be unreasonable (Gamble v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 353), but the imposition of $50 per week as a license tax upon the selling of trading stamps to merchants is void as unreasonable (Humes v. City of Little Rock, 138 F. 929).

8. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355. Code, § 4123, and Acts 1900-01, p. 2635, authorizing county commissioners to add not exceeding 50 per cent to the state license

Express statutory authority must also be shown for the imposition of a state license tax.[11]

While the state may select certain occupations and require those who engage in them to pay a license tax,[12] classifying the various business vocations for the purpose of levying such taxes,[13] yet it cannot make a classification which is arbitrary and has no just or reasonable basis,[14] nor can it discriminate among members of the same natural class,[15] and congress in legislating for the District of Columbia is restrained by the same principles.[16] While there must be uniformity within each tax for county purposes, permit it only in the county where the license is issued. Southern Car & Foundry Co. v. Calhoun County, 141 Ala. 250, 37 So. 425; Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381. The city of Johnstown, being of the third class, is authorized to impose a license tax on telephone companies under par. 3, clause iv, art. v, Act of May 23, 1889. Code, § 754, authorizing cities to regulate, license, and tax vehicles kept for hire, is not confined to such as are let out, but authorizes an ordinance imposing a license fee or tax on conveyances kept for carrying persons or property for hire. City of Des Moines v. Bolton [Iowa] 102 N. W. 1045. The charter of Minneapolis authorizes an ordinance imposing the payment of a license fee on the business of maintaining a theater or place for theatrical performances, whether an admission fee is charged or not, the clause "for which money is charged" referring only to "museums." State v. Scaffer [Minn.] 104 N. W. 139. The city of Montgomery, being empowered by Acts 1894-95, p. 635, § 10, to license all kinds of business not prohibited by the constitution and laws of Alabama, is not prevented by Amended Code 1896, §§ 1116, 1119, 1120, from imposing a license fee of $100 on orders like the Union Mutual Aid Association of Mobile. City Council of Montgomery v. Shaddax [Ala.] 36 So. 369. The commissioners of the District of Columbia were authorized by Act of Congress, Jan. 26, 1887, to regulate by license the storing of gasoline in the city of Washington. District of Columbia v. Weston, 23 App. D. C. 363. Section 170, Detroit City charter, confers power on the common council to pass an ordinance requiring registration and numbering of automobiles using the city streets and imposing a fee of $1. People v. Schneider [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 32, 103 N. W. 172. The requirement of registration and numbering of automobiles in such ordinance is justified as a proper method of identification. Id. Act 222, Pub. Acts 1901, pp. 345, 348, §§ 4, 12, does not authorize city boards of plumbing examiners to charge, beyond the prescribed fee of $2, a percentage on the cost of new plumbing work done within the city as a condition precedent to the issue of a permit for the work. People v. Decker [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 408, 104 N. W. 615. Sand. & H. Dig., Ark. § 5132, relative to "gift enterprises," contemplates schemes into which some element of chance enters and does not warrant the adoption of an ordinance imposing a license tax upon the selling of trading stamps. Humes v. City of Little Rock, 138 F. 929. An ordinance which prohibits a farmer from selling his products, excepting milk, fish and game, without a license, violates § 8 of the general law for licensing hawkers, peddlers, and solicitors. Sess. Laws 1901, p. 156. Ex parte Snyder [Idaho] 79 P. 819.

9. See 4 C. L. 430.

10. Gambill v. Erdrich Bros. [Ala.] 39 So. 297. A city cannot, under its authority to "prevent and suppress gaming and gambling houses," make such places lawful by licensing them. State v. Nease [Or.] 80 P. 897.

11. Commonwealth v. Real Estate Trust Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 551, afg. 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 149. The railroad commission of Mississippi, having once classified railroad companies for taxation, cannot reclassify or back classify them under Acts 1898, p. 23, c. 5, § 66, so as to make them liable for a privilege tax for the past years. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 38 So. 348. Nor has the revenue agent any power under Acts 1894, pp. 29, 30, c. 34, §§ 2-4, to have railroads so back classified as those sections refer to ad valorem taxation exclusively. Id. Act 1904, p. 393, c. 226, requiring the licensing of barbers, does not apply to persons engaged in that business when the act was passed. State v. Tag [Md.] 60 A. 465.

12. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67.

13. Kendrick v. State Ala.] 39 So. 203. The expediency and abstract justice of making these classifications is not a matter of judicial inquiry or determination. Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 68.

14. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67.

15. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203. A city ordinance which discriminates against merchants giving trading stamps, by imposing an additional license fee of $100 upon them, is void under Const. §§ 1, 35. City Council of Montgomery v. Kelly [Ala.] 38 So. 67. A municipal ordinance, in imposing occupation tax, cannot discriminate between residents and nonresidents in the same class. Evers v. Mayfield, 27 Ky. L. R. 481, 85 S. W. 697. Kirby's Dig. § 6886, prohibiting any person, except resident merchants, from traveling through any county and peddling certain wares, unlawfully discriminates among citizens, contrary to Const. art. 2, § 18. Ex parte Deeds [Ark.] 87 S. W. 1030. An ordinance of Seattle held not to operate as a discrimination in favor of local merchants as to peddling within a certain district. Garfinkle v. Sullivan, 37 Wash. 650, 80 P. 188. Sec. 5007, Iowa Code, does not discriminate against a retail tobacco dealer by the tax imposed on cigarette selling, in excepting from the tax jobbers and wholesalers doing an interstate business with customers outside of the state. Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 Law. Ed. 471.

class, a greater tax may be imposed upon one class than another;[17] and the legislature, and not the courts, is charged with the duty of fixing the amount of license to be imposed,[18] as well as the expediency and justice of imposing different burdens upon the constituents of the different classes.[19] In a license or business tax upon corporations, however, the state may discriminate against a foreign, and in favor of a domestic, corporation, though it may not between a resident and nonresident natural person.[20] While, as a general rule, when a license to do a general business has been exacted and paid, another cannot be required for doing a particular act or series of acts constituting an integral part of such general business, yet the selling of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is an exception, and the legislature may require separate licenses for the several kinds of liquors and may authorize municipalities to exact the same.[21]

In respect to some professions and skilled trades, the granting of licenses is often referred to boards of examiners,[22] and the exercise of their discretion, in the determination of credits upon examination, will not be reviewed by the courts,[23] but in case of refusal or neglect to act, such board will be compelled by mandamus to perform their duty,[24] and discretionary power is often conferred upon administrative boards to grant or withhold permission to carry on a trade or business, which is the proper subject of police regulation.[25] The granting of permits to insurance companies to engage in business within the state is usually left to the discretion of some state officer.[26] Ordinances imposing regulations and requiring licenses are not invalid as delegations of legislative power because they submit the approval of certain required appliances[27] or refer the propriety of the storage of inflammable oils in a particular building[28] to some municipal officer, nor are

16. A license tax of $500 annually on the Washington Stock Exchange, in lieu of a tax on its members for business done on the exchange, is reasonable, but an annual tax of $250 on general brokers and only $100 on members of a regular exchange outside of the District of Columbia is an arbitrary discrimination. Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 68.

17. Gamble v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 353; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 Law. Ed. 471.

18. The court declined to consider whether a license tax of $5,000 on a trading stamp company that did an annual business of less than $100,000 was prohibitive. State v. Merchants' Trading Co., 114 La. 529, 38 So. 443. The court had not the data from which it could say that a license tax on emigration agents, imposed by Acts 1903, p. 344, was so discriminative as to be beyond the constitutional power of the legislature. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203.

19. Lappin v. District of Columbia, 22 App. D. C. 68.

20. Discriminations in Sess. Laws 1902, p. 73, c. 3, § 65, held valid. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531.

21. The city of Birmingham by ordinance required a separate license for selling beer at wholesale. Sustained under its charter powers. Gambill v. Erdrich Bros. [Ala.] 39 So. 297.

22. In New York a person not licensed as a dentist prior to Aug. 1, 1895, is not entitled to registration without a license from the regents of the university, under Laws 1895, p. 419, c. 626, § 160. State v. Jacobs, 92 N. Y. S. 590. See, also, Attorneys, etc., 5 C. L. 319; Medicine and Surgery, 4 C. L. 636.

23. State v. Board of Dental Examiners of Wash., 38 Wash. 325, 80 P. 544.

24. Held that petitioner failed to show that he had been refused a license because he declined to sign a certain code of ethics. State v. Board of Dental Examiners of Wash., 38 Wash. 325, 80 P. 544.

25. A provision of the sanitary code of New York City conferring discretionary power on the health board, within reasonable limits, to grant or withhold permits to sell milk in the city, does not conflict with the guaranty of due process of law. People v. Van De Carr, 26 S. Ct. 144.

26. Under Laws 1902, p. 65, c. 59, the issue of a permit by the insurance commissioner is a condition precedent to the doing of business of an insurance company or its agents (Fikes v. State [Miss.] 39 So. 783), and that act was intended to include all kinds of insurance companies and includes a foreign association that pays sick and burial benefits (Id.).

27. An ordinance for the regulation and licensing of the handling of highly inflammable oils from tank wagons required the use of drip pans and devices to prevent the spilling of oil, subject to the approval of the commissioner of public works. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

28. The regulations by the commissioners of the District of Columbia refer such questions to the inspector of buildings and the chief engineer of the fire department, upon whose "recommendation," used in the sense of report, the license is issued. District of Columbia v. Weston, 23 App. D. C. 363.

they invalid as delegations of judicial power because they provide for revocation of licenses by the mayor, upon proof of violation.[29]

A license tax which imposes a burden upon interstate commerce is repugnant to the federal constitution and invalid,[30] and it will not be presumed that congress, in enacting license laws for the District of Columbia, intends to disregard the interstate commerce provisions of the federal constitution.[31] A person, partnership, or corporation, engaged in both intrastate and interstate commerce, is not exempt from liability to tax on intrastate business,[32] but a local license tax cannot be imposed upon such business of a local nature as is merely incidental to interstate business.[33]

Equity has discretion to enjoin the collection of a license tax until the parties are heard on the question of its validity,[34] and where a city is attempting to enforce an ordinance, which imposes a license tax and is alleged to be invalid, against numerous persons of identical interests, such persons may file a bill in behalf of themselves, and all others interested, to restrain such enforcement;[35] but the enjoining of the collection of any tax is prohibited in some states, and provisions are made for the recovery of invalid taxes paid under protest.[36] A license tax voluntar-

29. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

30. An ordinance of the city of Johnstown imposing a license tax on telephone companies held valid. Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381. Conviction for hawking and peddling without a license, where a part of the goods shipped from without the state were not delivered in the original packages, affirmed. Commonwealth v. Rearick, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 384. An ordinance requiring a license and a payment of $600, before selling goods and merchandise by the sale of trading stamps to merchants, and requiring a license and a payment of $100 from the merchants, was not void as an interference with interstate commerce law. Oilure Mfg. Co. v. Pidduck-Ross Co., 38 Wash. 137, 80 P. 276. A person who sells sewing machines shipped from the factory in another state and delivered in the original, unbroken package, is not subject to a license tax imposed by the state and parish. Henderson v. Ortte, 114 La. 523, 38 So. 440. The exemption of interstate commerce from local license taxation includes the retail as well as the wholesale trade. Id. Where orders were taken for groceries in Mississippi and were filled by wholesale grocers in Illinois, but were shipped in large packages which were broken open for delivery, and deliveries were to be made to such purchasers only as paid for them, the sales were made in Mississippi, were not interstate commerce transactions, and were subject to a merchant's license tax. Town of Canton v. McDaniel, 188 Mo. 207, 86 S. W. 1092. The tax imposed on cigarette selling by § 5007, Iowa Code, held not to conflict with interstate commerce when applied to retail sales of packages in pasteboard boxes, sealed and stamped and shipped loose to the retailers. Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 Law. Ed. 471. Where a state statute imposing a license tax upon resident managing agents of nonresident meat packing houses, regardless of the fact that a large proportion of their business is interstate business, has been construed by the highest state court to apply only to intrastate business, it does not conflict with the federal constitution. Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 Law. Ed. 663. See, also, Commerce, 5 C. L. 599.

31. A solicitor for a New York brewery taking orders to be filled and shipped directly to customers is not a brewer's agent within the Act of Congress, July 1, 1902, § 7, par. 36, requiring an annual license tax of $250. Beitzell v. District of Columbia, 21 App. D. C. 49.

32. Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381; Attorney General v. Electric Storage Battery Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 467. A telegraph company cannot claim exemption from municipal license taxes because it is engaged in interstate commerce, has accepted the act of congress relative to construction of lines over post roads, and has paid all general taxes under the laws of the state. Kittanning Borough v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 346. An annual license tax imposed by a state on a foreign corporation engaged in interstate business for the privilege of doing business within the state, is not a tax on interstate commerce. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531.

33. As where a consignee refuses to take goods shipped of a perishable character like meat, and the only way of disposing of them is by sales to local dealers. Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 Law. Ed. 663.

34. Schwarz v. National Packing Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 494.

35. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

36. In South Carolina a license tax imposed by a municipality is a tax in the ordinary acceptation of that term and its collection cannot be enjoined, even though it is extortionate and invalid, but may be recovered as provided by law. Code Laws 1902, §§ 412, 413. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Winnsboro [S. C.] 50 S. E. 870. In North Carolina an alleged invalid license tax paid as a dealer in horses and mules, under Acts 1903, p. 333, c. 247, § 35, cannot be recovered from the sheriff but can be recovered only as provided by § 30, c. 558, p. 795, Acts 1901, for ily paid under a void law cannot be recovered.[37] Mere threats of prosecution to recover a license tax do not render its payment involuntary,[38] but a payment made to prevent prosecution after arrest is not voluntary, even though the validity of the tax could be contested in that proceeding.[39]

§ 3. Interpretation of statutes and ordinances and persons subject.[40]—Since license laws are penal and change the common law, they are to be strictly construed,[41] and one cannot be convicted thereunder, unless clearly of the class of persons designated by the act.[42] A doubt as to the construction of a municipal ordinance the recovery of taxes paid under protest. Teeter v. Wallace, 138 N. C. 264, 50 S. E. 701. A receipt given by the sheriff for an alleged invalid license tax, reciting that it was paid under protest and reserving the right to test its validity, is not a promise by the sheriff to hold the money. Id.

37. A payment of a tax imposed by Laws 1897, p. 203, c. 72, on nonresidents for wholesale liquor establishments in the state, made because required by the officers of the state, was not made under duress and could not be recovered, though the law was afterward declared unconstitutional. Michel Brewing Co. v. State [S. D.] 103 N. W. 40.

38. Tax demanded of a nonresident wholesale liquor dealer, under Laws 1897, p. 203, c. 72. Michel Brewing Co. v. State [S. D.] 103 N. W. 40. Tax demanded for a license to operate a toll bridge. Southern R. Co. v. Florence, 141 Ala. 493, 37 So. 844.

39. District of Columbia v. Chapman, 25 App. D. C. 95.

40. See 4 C. L. 430.

41. Schnaier v. Navarre Hotel & Importation Co., 182 N. Y. 83, 74 N. E. 561. All statutes imposing restrictions or levying taxes upon business, or the common occupations of the people, are strictly construed. Lockwood v. District of Columbia, 24 App. D. C. 569.

42. Illustrations: A person engaged in selling trading stamps is not subject to punishment as engaging in a gift enterprise without a license. Humes v. City of Little Rock, 138 F. 929. Act 1904, p. 393, c. 226, for licensing barbers, held not to apply to persons engaged in the business when the statute took effect. State v. Tag [Md.] 60 A. 465. A person who takes orders for goods, as an employe, and who sometimes delivers them, although included within the definition of a peddler in an ordinance is not liable to the license tax imposed by such ordinance on peddlers with pack or vehicle. State v. Smithart [Iowa] 105 N. W. 128. Farmers selling their own products cannot be classed among "hawkers and peddlers" in a city ordinance requiring licenses. Ex parte Snyder [Idaho] 79 P. 819. An officer of a foreign corporation who hires laborers in the state to work for the corporation in another state and for no one else, and who receives no compensation for taking the laborers out of the state, is not engaged in the business of emigrant agent and liable to the license tax therefor. Lane v. Rowan County Com'rs [N. C.] 52 S. E. 140. A man who is hiring laborers for himself is not an "agent" and is not "doing the business of an emigrant agent," so as to subject him to the penalties of Acts 1903, p. 344, for not procuring a license. Kendrick v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 203. One who solicits orders for a brewery in New York to be filled and shipped directly to the customer is not a brewer's agent within Act of Congress, July 1, 1902, § 7, par. 36, requiring an annual license tax of $250. Beitzell v. District of Columbia, 21 App. D. C. 49. Ordinary steam heating plants do not come within the scope of chap. 91, p. 92, Gen. Laws 1899, providing for the licensing of persons operating "steam boilers and steam machinery of any kind." State v. Justus [Minn.] 102 N. W. 452. A corporation engaged in cutting, storing and furnishing in car load lots only its own natural ice, and having no store for the sale of the same is not liable for the mercantile license tax imposed by Act of May 2, 1899, P. L. 184. Commonwealth v. Pocono Mt. Ice Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 267. A trust company incorporated under Act of April 29, 1874, P. L. 73, and supplements thereto, though authorized to transact a real estate business, is not liable to the state license tax as a real estate broker under Acts of May 27, 1841, P. L. 396, April 10, 1849, P. L. 570, May 15, 1850, P. L. 772, and May 2, 1899, P. L. 184. Commonwealth v. Real Estate Trust Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 551, afg. 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 149. The words "any individual or copartnership" in the Act of May 27, 1841, P. L. 396, do not include corporations, and other acts do not extend its provisions to corporations. Id. A traveling salesman, paid a salary and expenses, who carries samples and solicits orders for his employers, who shipped the goods to the purchasers, is not a "transient merchant" within an ordinance requiring such persons to take out a license. State v. Nelson [Iowa] 105 N. W. 327. Act 49 of 1904, amending § 12, Act 103, p. 164, of 1900, is broader than its title and unconstitutional so far as it purports to levy a license tax on transient merchants, etc., selling by samples or taking orders. Beary v. Narrau, 113 La. 1034, 37 So. 961. An owner of goods accustomed to travel from place to place to sell them held to be a transient merchant liable to pay a license tax under Act May 15, 1901 (Acts 1901, p. 466, c. 208; Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 7231a-7231i), although he made a temporary arrangement with a local merchant for the sale of goods. Simoyan v. Rohan [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 176. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8540, a party to whom goods are shipped by wholesale merchants out of the state, to be delivered to certain purchasers on payment for the same, is a merchant within a town ordinance requiring a license. Town of Canton v. McDaniel, 188 Mo. 207, 86 S. W. 1092. An automobile storer and repairer, who had been refused a license to store and sell gasoline on his premises did not violate the ordinance prohibiting such storage and sale without a license by filling the tanks of his patrons' machines from a licensed storage tank located elsewhere, whenever they or-imposing a license tax should be resolved in favor of its validity,[43] hence, if there is nothing in the language of an ordinance indicative of an intention to tax interstate commerce business, such intention will not be presumed.[44] It is not necessary that it should appear by the express terms of the ordinance or statute that the tax is imposed only upon business done within the state,[45] but the courts cannot depart from the plain language of a statute imposing a license tax, in order to subserve convenience or to maintain its constitutionality.[46] Where a license is required for the carrying on of a business, single or occasional acts[47] are not within the statute.[48] Where both state and municipality tax a business, one engaged therein must pay both taxes,[49] and an exemption from payment of the state license tax does not relieve one from payment of the municipal license.[50] A separate license may be required of a foreign insurance company by every municipality within which it does and conducts an insurance business.[51] The provisions of law relative to license and registration must be strictly complied with.[52] A mere inaccurate designation of the officer to whom the license fees are to be paid will not necessarily invalidate an ordinance,[53] but a license law, expressed in terms that have no fixed or reasonably certain signification, and containing no definitions of its own, is void for uncertaindered them made ready for use. Weston v. District of Columbia, 23 App. D. C. 367. The gasoline remaining unconsumed in the automobile tanks could not be considered as stored on the premises within the meaning of such an ordinance. Id. A person who solicits insurance, receives and forwards applications, receives and delivers the policies, and collects the first premiums, is an agent "doing and conducting" insurance business within the terms of an ordinance requiring a license for such business. City of Lake Charles v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 114 La. 836, 38 So. 578.

43. Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381; Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718. In case of doubt as to the intention of a municipal council to restrict its imposition of a license charge on telegraph poles and wires to such as are located on public highways within its own jurisdiction, the courts will so restrict its application. Kittanning Borough v. Western Union Tel. Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 346. Also in the case of a license tax on gas pipes. Kittanning Borough v. Kittanning Consolidated Nat. Gas Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 355. Unless the court can say from judicial cognizance, or the facts determined, that the ordinance is a revenue measure under the guise of a police regulation, it is not justified in interfering. Id.

44. Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381.

45. Ordinance. Johnstown v. Central Dist. & Print. Tel. Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 381. Statute. Attorney General v. Electric Storage Battery Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 467. St. 1903, pp. 447, 450, c. 437, §§ 66, 67, 75, requiring certain foreign corporations to pay an annual excise tax was presumed not to include corporations maintaining places of business solely for use in interstate commerce. Id.

46. Ex parte Deeds [Ark.] 87 S. W. 1030.

47. Laws 1903, p. 337, c. 247, § 47, is not intended to require a license for a single act of putting up lightning rods, but for carrying on the business of putting them up. State v. Sheppard, 138 N. C. 579, 50 S. E. 231. Single or occasional sales do not constitute a person a merchant within laws imposing a license tax upon the business of a merchant. Town of Canton v. McDaniel, 188 Mo. 207, 86 S. W. 1092.

48. In a prosecution for violation of a statute requiring a license to carry on the business of putting up lightning rods, where only one act was proved, it was error to charge that if defendant had in his possession more rods than were necessary for that one house, he should be found guilty. State v. Sheppard, 138 N. C. 579, 50 S. E. 231.

49. The charter of the town of Suffolk, § 18, authorizes the imposition of a town license on any business, trade, or occupation for which a state license is required. Held that a railroad company must pay a license tax so imposed, although liable to a fine under Code §§ 1200, 1201, for not transacting business, and also amenable to a common-law liability. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Suffolk, 103 Va. 498, 49 S. E. 658.

50. A grant of a free license to peddle, under Pol. Code 1895, § 1649, did not relieve the licensee from the payment of a license fee to Atlanta, as required by the city under charter provisions. Justice v. Atlanta [Ga.] 50 S. E. 61.

51. Section 16, Act 171, p. 417, 1898. Payment of a license in one city, though based on all the business done in the state, does not relieve the company from payment in another city. City of Lake Charles v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 114 La. 836, 38 So. 578.

52. Laws 1895, p. 419, c. 626, § 160, requiring a person not licensed as a dentist prior to Aug. 1, 1895, to have a license from the regents of the university, such person is not entitled to registration upon a diploma from a dental college out of the state. State v. Jacobs, 92 N. Y. S. 590.

53. Where the statute created the office of license collector to receive the fees and issue the licenses, but the ordinance made them payable to the city collector, there being no such officer, it was presumed that the license collector was meant. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 617.

ty.[54] The word "peddler" is a well-known, common-law term, and licenses are usually required of such persons by name.[55] Municipalities cannot impose license taxes upon traveling salesmen by including them among "transient merchants" or "hawkers and peddlers."[56] Beef from animals raised and slaughtered by a farmer on his farm are farm products, within the terms of a statute permitting the sale of such products without a license.[57]

§ 4. Assessment and recovery; prosecutions for failure to pay.[58]—The provisions of the statutes must be strictly followed in fixing license fees.[59] In Louisiana the license on the business of insurance is based on the gross annual amount of premiums, and not on the number of agents or agencies in the state.[60] The value of a trade-mark owned by a foreign corporation may be considered in determining its capital stock in order to fix its franchise tax.[61] A classification of certain railroads as of the first, second, and third classes, by the railroad commission of Mississippi, thus exempting them from the privilege tax of $10 per mile, is a judicial act, concluding everything comprehended or involved in it.[62] Where the county tax commissioners are authorized to receive from the tax collectors a ten per cent fee on delinquent license taxes reported by them and collected,[63] the right of suing for such fees is primarily in the county entitled to collect the tax.[64] Counts to recover the delinquent license taxes and the fees due commissioners may be joined.[65]

When one is licensed to carry on a particular business, his servants or agents are not liable to prosecution for carrying on the business without license.[66] An indictment for violating an act, requiring any person desiring to operate an automobile to obtain a license, is sufficient if it substantially follows the language of 54. Par. 46, § 7, Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, imposing a tax of $25 on "claim agents," without defining such agents, is too uncertain and vague to be enforced (Lockwood v. District of Columbia, 24 App. D. C. 569), and the expression "other contractors" in the same paragraph, imposing an occupation tax of $25 upon "building and other contractors," is too vague to be enforced against a wood and coal dealer who occasionally furnishes wood and coal on contract to the general and municipal governments (District of Columbia v. Chapman, 25 App. D. C. 95).

55. A petition for a penalty for retailing oil without a license, making no reference to peddlers, will be deemed to have been filed under the act requiring a license for engaging in that business (Ky. St. 1903, § 4224), and not under the peddlers' act. Commonwealth v. Standard Oil Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1073, 87 S. W. 1090.

56. Code, § 700, confers upon municipalities no authority to declare persons merchants who are not considered to be such in the business world. State v. Nelson [Iowa] 105 N. W. 327. Act 49 of 1904, amending § 12 of Act 103, p. 164, of 1900, which attempted indirectly to tax drummers or traveling salesmen by extending the definition of "hawkers and peddlers" to include "transient merchants," etc., was held unconstitutional as being broader than its title. Beary v. Narrau, 113 La. 1034, 37 So. 961.

57. Ex parte Snyder [Idaho] 79 P. 819.

58. See 4 C. L. 431.

59. Where the Tax Law (Laws 1896, pp. 856, 864, c. 908), §§ 181. 195, provided for an increase of license fee in case of increase of capital, or within one year after fixing a fee, upon application of a taxpayer or of the attorney general, the comptroller could not of his own motion, without any such increase of capital or application within a year, increase a license fee. People v. Kelsey, 93 N. Y. S. 971. Act 1904, p. 65, c. 76, § 27, assesses a privilege tax on the oil mill and not on the capital of the corporation operating it, and hence, only the capital actually used in the oil mill business is to be considered in fixing the tax. Senatobia Oil Co. v. Poag [Miss.] 38 So. 741.

60. Defendant herein was simply an agency through which two companies did a joint business and not an independent corporation, and where the two companies had paid all the license fees on all the business done by them, including the joint business, the state could demand no more. State v. Philadelphia Underwriters, 112 La. 47, 36 So. 221.

61. People v. Kelsey, 93 N. Y. S. 971. See, also, Taxes, 4 C. L. 1605.

62. The railroad commission could not back classify such roads so as to make them liable to pay the privilege tax for the past year. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Adams [Miss.] 38 So. 348.

63, 64. Act Feb. 21, 1899, Acts 1898-99, p. 195. Southern Car & Foundry Co. v. Calhoun County, 141 Ala. 250, 37 So. 425.

65. Southern Car & Foundry Co. v. Calhoun County, 141 Ala. 250, 37 So. 425.

66. Common victualer, under Rev. Laws, c. 102, § 1. Commonwealth v. Lavery [Mass.] 73 N. E. 884. Defendant found to be the proprietor and not a mere servant. Id.

the act;[67] but an affidavit charging generally that defendant "did unlawfully assume to act as an insurance agent," and failing to specify the particular act charged, is fatally defective, where the statute prohibits numerous acts and prescribes different penalties.[68] In an indictment for violation of a statute requiring a license for carrying on the business of putting up lightning rods, an allegation that defendant "sold" rods was surplusage.[69] Where an information in a single count alleges breaches of several provisions disjunctively mentioned in a section of an ordinance requiring registration and a license fee of venders of milk and cream, it is error to quash it if any of the provisions are valid.[70] It is not necessary to show criminal intent in prosecutions under these police regulations.[71] In a prosecution for selling pistol cartridges without a license, where it was not shown when the sales took place, it was error to give the general charge for the state.[72] An acquittal in a prosecution under a state law, for violating a town ordinance prohibiting the engaging in the business of a merchant without a license, is not a bar to a civil action by the municipality to recover a penalty for violating the ordinance.[73] Where the tax is an annual one on the carrying on of a business, a conviction of doing business without a license bars further prosecution for carrying on such business during the same license year,[74] but there is no bar unless the indictments cover the same period of time.[75] Where the authority to prescribe the penalty for violation of the ordinance involves legislative discretion, it must be fixed by the common council and cannot be left to the magistrate.[76] An action to recover a license fee imposed under an ordinance is abated by the repeal of the statute authorizing the adoption of the ordinance.[77]

§ 5. Effect of failure to obtain.[78]—It is generally held that no recovery can be had by an unlicensed person on a contract for the doing of an act for which a license is required,[79] and there can be no agency for such a purpose.[80] Under the 67. The omission of the word "desire" was immaterial as it was not descriptive of the offense. State v. Cobb [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 551.

68. Fikes v. State [Miss.] 39 So. 783.

69. Laws 1903, p. 337, c. 247, § 47. State v. Sheppard, 138 N. C. 579, 50 S. E. 231.

70. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 617.

71. Prosecution for carrying on the business of common victualer without the license required by Rev. Laws, c. 102, §§ 1-6, 9. Commonwealth v. Lavery [Mass.] 73 N. E. 884.

72. Reid v. State, 141 Ala. 578, 37 So. 922.

73. Town of Canton v. McDaniel, 188 Mo. 207, 86 S. W. 1092.

74. Prosecution under St. 1903, § 4224, requiring an annual license on each wagon used in retailing oil. Commonwealth v. Standard Oil Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1116, 87 S. W. 1090 (second case).

75. Appellant was convicted under an indictment returned Sept. 28, for unlawfully selling oil in June. The indictment pleaded in bar was returned May 10, for unlawful selling in April. The earlier conviction was held no bar to the later as the two indictments did not cover the same period of time. Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 27 Ky. L. R. 1131, 87 S. W. 1092.

76. The determination of the penalty that will deter persons from engaging in certain business without a license is purely a legislative question. City of Lambertville v. Applegate [N. J. Law] 62 A. 270.

77. County ordinance imposing a license tax on the business of raising, grazing, herding and pasturing sheep. Flanigan v. Sierra County, 196 U. S. 553, 49 Law. Ed. 597; Wheeler v. Plumas County, 196 U. S. 562, 49 Law. Ed. 599.

78. See 4 C. L. 432.

79. See 4 C. L. 432. Where parties engage in the business of selling goods in any manner requiring a license and the payment of a license, such as a trading-stamp scheme, the courts will leave them where they have illegally placed themselves. Oilure Mfg. Co. v. Pidduck-Ross Co., 38 Wash. 137, 80 P. 276. In quo warranto proceedings to forfeit corporate franchises for failure to pay an annual state license tax, the corporation cannot question the validity of a provision in the law that the failure to pay the tax may be pleaded as an absolute defense to all actions brought by a corporation, till the tax is paid. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. People [Colo.] 82 P. 531.

80. Note: Among the contracts of agency which are illegal because of a statutory prohibition are contracts with a person practicing a particular trade or profession without a license. Thus, where a statute prohibits any person from practicing as an attorney at law without a license or diploma, etc., a contract by which a person is employed to render services as an attorney, in violation of the statute, is illegal and void, and he cannot maintain an action to recover for its breach or for his services, unless there is something to show that the legislature did not intend to make contracts in violation provisions of the statute of California, forfeiting the charters of corporations failing to pay the annual license tax imposed, while the tax becomes delinquent on the first Monday of August, yet the penalty of forfeiture does not attach until the governor has made proclamation thereof.[81]

§ 6. Disposition of license moneys.—Boroughs and cities in Pennsylvania have the right to receive their respective proportions of the money collected for retail liquor licenses, under the state law, without abatement for commissions to the county treasurer.[82] An ordinance which purports to impose a license tax as a police regulation is presumed to be what it professes to be, and is not invalidated by the use to which the license fee is subsequently applied.[83] The appropriation of license money for strect improvements is legal in New Hampshire.[84]

LICENSES TO ENTER ON LAND.

§ 1. Nature, creation and indicia of a license and distinction from easements and other estates.[85]—A license is an authority given to do some one act or series of acts on the land of another, without passing any estate in the land.[86] It is a mere personal privilege, not an estate[87] and lies in parol;[88] and in these respects differs from an easement which lies only in grant.[89] It exempts the licensee from an action for trespass for acts done under it,[90] and vests in him a property interest in realty converted into personalty by virtue of it.[91] It cannot be converted of the statute illegal and void. Ames v. Gilman, 10 Metc. [Mass.] 239; Hall v. Bishop, 3 Daly [N. Y.] 109; Hittson v. Browne, 3 Colo. 304. Compare Yates v. Robertson, 80 Va. 475; Harland v. Lilienthal, 53 N. Y. 438. The same is true of a contract for the services of a stock broker (Cope v. Rowlands, 2 Mees. & W. 149; Hustis v. Pickands, 27 Ill. App. 270), commercial broker or agent (Holt v. Green, 73 Pa. 198, 13 Am. Rep. 737. And see Singer Mfg. Co. v. Drafer, 103 Tenn. 262), real estate broker or agent (Buckley v. Humason, 50 Minn. 195, 36 Am. St. Rep. 637; Johnson v. Hulings, 103 Pa. 498, 49 Am. Rep. 131; Stevenson v. Ewing, 87 Tenn. 46), etc., who is transacting business without a license in violation of a statute or city ordinance. Where a valid city ordinance prohibits transaction of business by unlicensed real estate brokers within the city limits, a broker negotiating a sale of real estate in violation of the ordinance cannot recover his commissions. Buckley v. Humason, 50 Minn. 195, 36 Am. St. Rep. 637, 16 L. R. A. 423.

81. Act March 20, 1905 (St. 1905, p. 493, c. 386, § 2). Ukiah Guaranty Co. v. Curry [Cal.] 82 P. 1048.

82. Under Act of June 9, 1891, if the treasurer deducts a percentage and pays over the balance, it is considered a payment on account and the amount retained may be collected by the municipality. Stroudsburg Borough v. Shick, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 442.

83. Erie City v. Erie Elec. Motor Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 77.

84. Hett v. Portsmouth [N. H.] 61 A. 596.

85. See 4 C. L. 432.

86. A mere traveler on a private way is a licensee. Weldon v. Prescott [Mass.] 73 N. E. 536.

87. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48. License to mine ore confers only a property in ore mined under it. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052.

88. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48.

Held licenses: An oral gift of land for the purpose of erecting a building. Shipley v. Fink [Md.] 62 A. 360. A privilege to convey water from a spring. Clark v. Strong, 93 N. Y. S. 514. A verbal agreement authorizing one to enter a mining claim and extract ore during the owner's will and pleasure. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052. A verbal permission to use a stairway in consideration of a right to erect a porch over lands of the licensor. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48. A parol sale of standing timber creates a mere license to enter, cut and remove. Hodsdon v. Kennett [N. H.] 60 A. 686; Antrim Iron Co. v. Anderson [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 314, 104 N. W. 319.

The sale of a theater ticket creates a mere revocable license. Horney v. Nixon [Pa.] 61 A. 1088.

89. See Easements, 5 C. L. 1048. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48.

90. A licensee is not liable for injuries resulting from the exercise of the license up to the time of its revocation. Sherman Line Co. v. Glens Falls, 101 App. Div. 269, 91 N. Y. S. 994.

91. A license to dig ore exempts the licensee from an action for trespass for an entry made under it and gives him the title to the ore actually mined under it. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052. Timber cut before revocation of the license is the property of the licensee. Antrim Iron Co. v. Anderson [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 314, 104 N. W. 319.

into a corporeal right by the mere exercise of the privileges it confers,[92] nor can a licensee acquire rights by adverse possession.[93] Whether an agreement for the use of land confers a mere license or creates an estate depends upon whether it gives exclusive possession against the world.[94] The nature of the right created is a question of law.[95] An oral agreement to impress realty with a servitude is presumed to have been made with knowledge of the statute of frauds, and a license not an easement intended.[96] A private way acquired by adverse user is a vested right, not a mere license.[97] A license may be given by an agent without written authority.[98] A license is revocable at the pleasure of the licensor[99] whether or not it is based on a consideration[1] and notwithstanding expense incurred by virtue of it,[2] especially where a right to revoke is reserved.[3] Acts done by the licensee after revocation render him liable as a trespasser.[4] It is held that a license to remove soil cannot be revoked by notice to quit the premises[5] and that an executed

92. The erection of bridge abutments on land under a parol license granted for such purpose does not convert the license into a corporeal right. Nicolai v. Baltimore [Md.] 60 A. 627.

93. Adverse possession does not run until ouster. Nicolai v. Baltimore [Md.] 60 A. 627.

94. If the latter, it is a lease. Roberts v. Lynn Ice Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 523.

Held to create an estate: An instrument executed by the fee owner by which he lets "his ice business * * * with use and benefit of his ice houses," for a specified term, held to be a lease. Roberts v. Lynn Ice Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 523. An instrument in form a deed by which the grantors "grant, bargain, sell and convey * * * a right of way for a pipe line over certain lands * * * and the right to divert water from Woods Creek * * * to have and to hold * * * forever," held a grant of an easement, and not a mere license. Everett Water Co. v. Powers, 37 Wash. 143, 79 P. 617. Instrument in form a conveyance, containing full covenants of warranty held to convey a right of way, not a mere license. Alderman & Son's Co. v. Wilson [S. C.] 50 S. E. 643. The privilege of retaining the way after the expiration of such period did not affect the rights granted. Id. Instrument conveying timber and right of way, the purchase price of which has been paid, conveys an estate and is more than a license. Gex v. Dill [Miss.] 38 So. 193. A landowner who for a money consideration allows a strip of land to be used as a road without restriction as to time will be presumed to have granted a way and not a mere license. Power v. Dean [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 1100. A lease of the wall of a building for advertising purposes creates a right in the nature of an easement. Levy v. Louisville Gunning System [Ky.] 89 S. W. 528.

Held to confer a license: A written agreement under which a carrier constructs a side track over the land of another for the convenience of the latter, though silent as to time, creates a mere license. Rodefer v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [Ohio] 74 N. E. 183. A conveyance of a tract of coal land "the purchaser not to sell any coal, only what he hauls himself or have hauled" and not to sell the tract to any person except the seller, his heirs or assigns, creates a mere license which expires with the death of the licensee. Chalfant v. Rocks, 212 Pa. 521, 61 A. 1105. Agreement between property owners and sewer commissioners for the use of land as a sink hole held to create a mere license and not to amount to a dedication. Sherman Line Co. v. Glens Falls, 101 App. Div. 269, 91 N. Y. S. 994.

95. As to whether it was a license or a lease. Roberts v. Lynn Ice Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 523.

96. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48.

97. Power v. Dean [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 1100.

98. Oral sale of standing timber. Antrim Iron Co. v. Anderson [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 314, 104 N. W. 319.

99. Entwhistle v. Henke, 113 Ill. App. 572; Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48; Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, p. 1833, c. 131a, providing that street railways in crossing rivers should not interrupt navigation, and Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, p. 292, c. 24, giving the city of Chicago power to deepen the channel of a river, a license to a street railway company to construct a tunnel under a river may be revoked and the tunnel ordered removed, though such right was not reserved in granting the license. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. People, 214 Ill. 9, 73 N. E. 393.

1. Kommer v. Daly, 93 N. Y. S. 1021.

2. Entwhistle v. Henke, 113 Ill. App. 572; Shipley v. Fink [Md.] 62 A. 360.

Note: It has been held that an executed parol license cannot be revoked (Rerick v. Kern, 14 Serg. & R. [Pa.] 267, 16 Am. Dec. 497), but the better view is that such license may be revoked, since to hold otherwise would, in effect, be granting an estate by parol (Housten v. Laffee, 46 N. H. 505). See 6 Columbia L. R. 280.

3. License granted by a city to encroach on the street by constructing bay windows may be revoked, though it results in considerable loss to the licensee without his fault. Forbes v. Detroit [Micb.] 102 N. W. 740.

4. Hodsdon v. Kennett [N. H.] 60 A. 686.

5. Cox v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 989.

Note: This proposition seems wrong in principle, and since the case arose under an eminent domain statute it is probable, though the court did not so state, that the rule rests upon the statute.

license for a term, based on a consideration, is not revocable at will.[6] Equity will not protect the privilege of a licensee who parted with no consideration, suffered no irreparable damages, and upon whom no fraud was perpetrated.[7] A license is revoked by a subsequent conveyance of the fee[8] or by the death of the licensor,[9] notwithstanding the fact that the license was based on a consideration,[10] but one coupled with an interest is not revoked by a subsequent lease.[11]

Licenses coupled with an interest.[12]

§ 2. Rights and liabilities of licensees.[13]—A licensee must not use the premises in such manner as to render them dangerous to other licensees,[14] nor in such manner as to interfere with rights of the licensor.[15] On revocation of a license to construct a building the licensor must compensate the licensee for the building if the license has been exercised,[16] and a licensee is entitled, as against a subsequent purchaser from the licensor, to a reasonable time within which to remove improvements erected by virtue of the license.[17] For revocation of the license created by the sale of a theater ticket, the purchaser has an action for breach of contract but not for tort.[18] A licensee cannot recover for injuries caused by existing defects.[19]

LIENS.

§ 1. Definition and nature.[20]—A lien is a hold or claim which one person has upon the property of another as a security for some debt or charge[21] which must ordinarily pertain to the property held.[22] Particular kinds of liens other than the general classes enumerated in the following section are discussed in particular topics.[23]

§ 2. Common-law, equitable, and statutory liens. A. Common-law liens[24] which are merely the right to keep possession[25] do not exist in favor of a corporation upon the shares of stock held by its stockholders, for debts owing by them to the corporation;[26] such a lien must be created by statute, charter or by-laws.[27] The lien which bailees for hire have for compensation for services, labor, or skill in imparting additional value to an article, does not extend to one who performs services as a mere servant.[28]

6. License to use the wall of a building for advertising purposes. Levy v. Louisville Gunning System [Ky.] 89 S. W. 528.

7. Howes v. Barmon [Idaho] 81 P. 48.

8. Entwhistle v. Henke, 113 Ill. App. 572.

9. Hodsdon v. Kennett [N. H.] 60 A. 686.

10. Clark v. Strong, 93 N. Y. S. 514.

11. A license based on a consideration for the use of a wall of a building for advertising purposes is not revoked by a lease of the building without mention of the license. Levy v. Louisville Gunning System [Ky.] 89 S. W. 528.

12, 13. See 4 C. L. 433.

14. Electric company stringing wires under a sidewalk next to a play ground must provide against injuries to children who crawl under the sidewalk in play. Commonwealth Electric Co. v. Melville, 110 Ill. App. 242.

15. The proprietor of an elevator erected on a railroad right of way under license operates same subject to the right of the railroad company to handle its trains on the track. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Giffen [Neb.] 96 N. W. 1014.

16, 17. Shipley v. Fink [Md.] 62 A. 360.

18. Horney v. Nixon [Pa.] 61 A. 1088.

19. Weldon v. Prescott [Mass.] 73 N. E. 536.

20, 21. See 4 C. L. 434.

22. A person furnishing money for gathering a crop of cotton cannot claim a lien therefor on other cotton grown on the same leased premises. Goodwin v. Mitchell [Miss.] 38 So. 657. The foundation of a vendor's lien and that which sustains it is unpaid purchase money. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

23. See an enumeration of them in 4 C. L. 423, n. 8.

24, 25. See 4 C. L. 434.

(§ 2) B. Equitable liens.[29]—A contract showing an intention to charge

26, 27. Herrick v. Humphrey Hardware Co. [Neb.] 103 N. W. 685.

28. Civ. Code, §§ 3051, 3052, re-enact and extend the common law relating to liens; and one who works for wages in the manufacture of brandy from grapes has no lien on the product for unpaid wages. Michaelson v. Fish [Cal. App.] 81 P. 661.

29. See 4 C. L. 434.

NOTE. Equitable liens on land: "At common law there was no lien upon a thing owned by one person in favor of another except when accompanied by possession, and, furthermore, there could be no lien upon land, but only on things of a personal nature. 2 Spence, Eq. Jur. 796. In equity, however, there are certain rights in regard to land, as well as to personalty, not based on possession, yet of a character analogous to common-law liens, and known as 'equitable liens.' These rights consist of personal obligations upon the owners of land, which equity will enforce against the land, and which will follow the land into whosesoever hands it may pass, until it reaches those of a purchaser for value without notice. Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. §§ 165-167, 1233 et seq.; article by Prof. C. C. Langdell, 1 Harv. L. R. 65, 66, 70.

"Equitable liens do not confer 'proprietary' or 'real' rights, but, * * * they merely constitute a means by which equity enforces a personal obligation. Consequently, the owner of the obligation has, in theory, no rights in the land until the decree subjecting the land to his claim. See 1 Harv. L. R. 65, 66; Gilman v. Brown, 1 Mason, 221, Fed. Cas. No. 5,441; Hutton v. Moore, 26 Ark. 382; Sparks v. Hess, 15 Cal. 186. It is on this theory, apparently, that a vendor's lien is in some states regarded as personal to the vendor, and not assignable, and, on the same theory, the right to enforce the lien may well be regarded as barred by the fact that the statutory period has run against the claim (Borst v. Corey, 15 N. Y. 505; Kirchwey's Cas. 758), whatever be the rule in the case of a formal mortgage.

"Express charges on land: An 'equitable lien' is created by provisions, in a conveyance inter vivos or in a will, charging the land with the payment of debts or legacies. See 2 Jarman, Wills, 1387 et seq.; Bigelow, Wills, 312. Equitable liens of this class, as well as other such liens, are admirably treated in 3 Pomeroy Equity Jurisprudence, §§ 1233-1267. So, land may be charged by will, or in a family settlement, with the payment of an annuity (In re Tucker, 2 Ch. 323; Merritt v. Bucknam, 78 Me. 504; Gallaher v. Herbert, 117 Ill. 160; Glenn v. Spry, 5 Md. 110; Hines v. Hines, 95 N. C. 482; In re Pierce's Estate, 56 Wis. 560), or the support of some person other than the owner (Bell v. Watkins, 104 Ga. 345; Donnelly v. Edelen, 40 Md. 117; Commons v. Commons, 115 Ind. 162; Outland v. Outland, 118 N. C. 138; Dickson v. Field, 77 Wis. 439).

"Under the common-law rule that lands were not liable for the simple contract debts of a decedent, the question frequently arose whether his will expressed an intention to the contrary,—that is, charged his land with the payment of debts in favor of creditors. With the change in the law, making land as well as personalty liable for debts of the decedent,—a rule which prevails in all the states,—these questions have become of comparatively little importance, so far as the creditor is concerned. The question may still arise, however, whether, under a particular will, the land is charged with debts, so as to render it primarily liable for the payment thereof, thus reversing the ordinary rule that the personalty is the primary fund for that purpose. This concerns, not the creditor, but the devisees or heirs of the land on the one side, and the legatees of the other persons entitled to share in the personalty on the other. The question also frequently arises whether land is charged with the payment of a particular legacy, so as to make it liable for this purpose, either before the personalty, which is ordinarily alone so liable, or pari passu with the personalty. In the absence of such charge, the legacy must rebate in case of insufficiency of personal assets.

"Since land is ordinarily the primary fund for the payment of both debts and legacies, the presumption is always to that effect, and a clear intention is necessary to charge the land. Bigelow, Wills, 313; Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat. [U. S.] 204, 6 Law. Ed. 303; In re Powers, 124 N. Y. 361; Heslop v. Gatton, 71 Ill. 528; Owens v. Claytor, 56 Md. 129; Shenk v. Shenk, 150 Pa. 521; Lee v. Lee, 88 Va. 805. An intention that the land shall be charged with the payment of debts or legacies may be expressly stated, as by use of the word 'charge' or by a devise to A. 'on condition that' he pay a certain debt or legacy. McFait's Appeal, 8 Pa. 290; Merritt v. Bucknam, 78 Me. 504; Gardenville Permanent Loan Ass'n v. Walker, 52 Md. 452; Sistrunk v. Ware, 69 Ala. 273; Couch v. Eastham, 29 W. Va. 784. See Baker's Appeal, 59 Pa. 313. Moreover, such an intention is usually inferred from the fact that, in the same clause with a devise of land, there is a direction to the devisee to pay a debt or a legacy. Bigelow, Wills, 318; Potter v. Gardner, 12 Wheat. [U. S.] 498, 6 Law. Ed. 706; Brown v. Knapp, 79 N. Y. 136, 143; Henry v. Griffis, 89 Iowa, 543; Thayer v. Finnegan, 134 Mass. 62, 45 Am. Rep. 285; Merrill v. Bickford, 65 Me. 118; Dudgeon v. Dudgeon, 87 Mo. 218; Chase v. Warner, 106 Mich. 295; Carter v. Worrell, 96 N. C. 358, 60 Am. Rep. 420; Yearly v. Long, 40 Ohio St. 27; Buchanan v. Lloyd, 88 Md. 642; Wyckoff v. Wyckoff, 49 N. J. Eq. 344.

"In this country the use of general words directing the payment of debts does not usually have the effect of charging the debts on land devised, such words being found in most wills, and being merely a direction for the doing of what the law compels. Starke v. Wilson, 65 Ala. 576; Decker v. Decker, 121 Ill. 341; Hamilton v. Smith, 110 N. Y. 159; Harmon v. Smith, 38 F. 482; White v. Kauffman, 66 Md. 92. Contra. Tuohy v. Martin, 2 MacArthur [D. C.] 572; Bishop v. Howarth, 59 Conn. 455, 465. In England, on the other hand, a mere direction by the testator that his debts shall be paid charges the land with the debts, though a direction that they shall be paid by his executors charges only the land devised to such executors. 2 Jarman, identified property with a debt or other obligation creates an equitable lien thereon.[30] The property intended to be charged with an equitable lien should be identified with a reasonable degree of certainty,[31] and also the contract on which the lien is predi-

Wills, 1390; Theobald, Wills [5th Ed.] 725, 726; Hawkins, Wills [2d Am. Ed.] 282.

"A legacy is charged on land by a devise of the land 'after' the payment of such legacy. Pond v. Allen, 16 R. I. 171; Pendleton v. Kinney, 65 Conn. 222; Smith v. Cairns 92 Tex. 667. See Smith v. Fellows, 131 Mass. 20. Likewise, if, after the gift of a pecuniary legacy or legacies, there is a gift of the 'residue' or 'remainder' of testator's property thereby blending the real and personal property into one fund, the legacy or legacies are charged upon the land, since the term 'residue' or 'remainder' could in such case only refer to what remains after the payment of the previous gifts. Greville v. Browne, 7 H. L. Cas. 689; In re Dyson [1896] 2 Ch. 720; Lewis v. Darling, 16 How. [U. S.] 1, 14 Law. Ed. 819; Turner v. Laird, 68 Conn. 198; Stevens v. Flower, 46 N. J. Eq. 340; Reid v. Corrigan, 143 Ill. 402; Hutchinson v. Gilbert, 86 Tenn. 464; Hill v. Bean, 86 Me. 200; Peebles v. Acker, 70 Miss. 356; Bennett's Estate, 148 Pa. 139. See Lee v. Lee, 88 Va. 805; Hoyt v. Hoyt, 85 N. Y. 142. In one or two states, however, such a disposition of testator's property is regarded as insufficient to show an intention to charge the land when unaccompanied by other evidence of such an intention. Pearson v. Wartman, 80 Md. 528; Brill v. Wright, 112 N. Y. 129; Morris v. Sickly, 133 N. Y. 456.

"Lien for improvements: As before stated, one who makes improvements on land in the mistaken belief that he is the owner thereof is given, by equity, a right to compensation for such improvements as against the true owner coming into equity to assert his rights, and this right to compensation is regarded as constituting a lien on the land. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Shortridge, 86 Mo. 662; Hatcher v. Briggs, 6 Or. 31; Field v. Moody, 111 N. C. 353; Preston v. Brown, 35 Ohio St. 18; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1237; 3 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 1241.

"An owner of an undivided interest in land who is entitled to contribution from his cotenants on account of repairs or improvements made by him has a lien on their interests to secure such contribution. Baird v. Jackson, 98 Ill. 78; Prentice v. Jenssen, 79 N. Y. 478; Alexander v. Ellison, 79 Ky. 148; Kelly v. Kelly, 54 Mich. 30; 3 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 1240. See Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135. Likewise, a life tenant under a will who completes improvements begun by his testator is entitled to compensation therefor, and a lien to secure such compensation. Hibbert v. Cooke, 1 Sim. & S. 552; Sohier v. Eldredge, 103 Mass. 345, 351; Broyles v. Waddel, 11 Heisk. [Tenn.] 32; Gavin v. Carling, 55 Md. 530; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1237.

"According to a few decisions, a tenant under a lease providing that he shall be compensated, at the end of the term, for any improvements made by him, has a lien on the land for the value of such improvements. Berry v. Van Winkle's Ex'rs, 2 N. J. Eq. 269; Conover v. Smith, 17 N. J. Eq. 51, 86 Am. Dec. 247; Ecke v. Fetzer, 65 Wis. 55. Usually, however, his right to a lien is denied. Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84, 58 Am. St. Rep. 136; Beck v. Birdsall, 19 Kan. 550; Watson v. Gardner, 119 Ill. 312; Coffin v. Talman, 8 N. Y. 465; Hite v. Parks, 2 Tenn. Ch. 373. See Speers v. Flack, 34 Mo. 101, 84 Am. Dec. 74.

"Lien for owelty of partition: When, by a decree for the partition of land, one of the parties is directed to pay to another a certain sum or 'owelty of partition,' the property received by him on the partition is subject to a lien for such sum until paid. Freeman, Cotenancy, § 507; Davis v. Norris, 8 Pa. 125; McCandless' Appeal, 98 Pa. 489; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Trimble, 51 Md. 99; Dobbin v. Rex, 106 N. C. 444; Jameson v. Rixey, 94 Va. 342, 64 Am. St. Rep. 726."—From Tiffany, Real Property, p. 1278 et seq.

Equitable Mortgages are treated in Mortgages, 4 C. L. 677, and see note in Mortgages, 6 C. L.

30. An agreement in writing, by a married woman, to secure the compensation to be paid her counsel for services in obtaining her a divorce by a trust deed on certain city lots in case they secured them for her. Patrick v. Morrow [Colo.] 81 P. 242. The fact that she had the word "homestead" entered on the margin of the record of the decree, in the clerk and recorder's office, did not affect their lien. Id. Where the deed of land bought for partnership purposes was taken in the name of one partner, and expressly retained a lien on the land to secure the payment of the purchase money notes, and, after that partner's death, the land was assigned in partition proceedings to the surviving partner, who executed his personal note for the balance due, reciting that it was for the balance of the purchase money and was a lien on the land, he was estopped to deny the lien on the land. Hamilton's Ex'rs v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093. Supplies and money advanced to carry on farming operations under agreement that the crops should be turned over for sale and deduction of advancements from proceeds. Schermerhorn v. Gardenier, 107 App. Div. 564, 95 N. Y. S. 494. The fact that such crops were turned over by the farmer's executrix, to the party making the advancements, to be sold by him as a produce dealer, and without any intention of fulfilling the contract, did not affect the lien. Id. To give a bank such a lien on an insurance policy in its possession for any debt due it from the owner, it must be shown that there was a contract, either express or implied, for such lien, and that the credit was given on the faith of such lien. First Nat. Bank v. Cleland, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 478, 82 S. W. 337. A clause in a warranty deed that the grantee took the title "subject, however, to existing mortgages, liens, taxes, and claims of any and every description," does not create such a charge, but its purpose is to except such liens, etc., from the warranty of the deed. Cameron v. Sexton, 110 Ill. App. 331.

cated.[32] A debt for purchase money, whether in the form of a judgment or evidenced by notes will be recognized and preserved by equity to prevent injustice.[33] A party making improvements or payments on real estate, in reliance on a parol agreement that is not fulfilled, has an equitable lien on such real estate for such improvements or payments.[34] But such liens will not be extended beyond the property contemplated in the agreement.[35] While it cannot be successfully contended that any promise or agreement alone will authorize the court to say a lien by implication of law attaches to real estate, yet such promise or agreement may be considered by the court, with other circumstances, in determining the real intention of the parties as to the lien.[36] A vendee going into possession of land takes it charged with an equitable lien in favor of the vendor to secure the balance of unpaid purchase money.[37] And this rule holds good not only as against the vendee and his heirs, but also against all subsequent purchasers having notice that the purchase money remains unpaid.[38]

Equity will, in the absence of an express agreement, create a lien when the

31. A payment made as a portion of the future purchase price of corn still in the field, no particular corn being set apart or identified, does not create an equitable lien on the crop. Hazenwinkle Grain Co. v. McComb, 116 Ill. App. 541. Money paid into court on condemnation proceedings represents the land condemned, and is subject to the liens and incumbrances on the land in their order of priority. Kansas City v. North American Trust Co., 110 Mo. App. 647, 85 S. W. 681.

32. Evidence of contract of sale of a sewing machine, and breach thereof, held to be of too uncertain a character to establish an alleged lien thereon for delinquent payments. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Horowitz, 88 N. Y. S. 349.

33. Notes given upon a release of a judgment of foreclosure of a vendor's lien held, under the circumstances, not to have created a new debt. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

34. Where a mother paid part of the purchase price of a dwelling bought by her son, upon an oral promise that she should have a life estate therein, in common with him. Long v. Scott, 24 App. D. C. 1. Where a daughter paid money to her father on his promise to buy a home, which should be hers after her parents' death, but he bought a house without carrying out such agreement. Leary v. Corvin, 181 N. Y. 222, 73 N. E. 984. Where one entered upon lands and made improvements thereon upon a promise of a deed of the same (Burks' Adm'r v. Lane Lumber Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 686), and after the death of such party and his wife, leaving no personal estate, except such as was exempt, to an only infant daughter, all parties interested being before the court, the material man who furnished the lumber for the house built was subrogated to deceased's lien and had it enforced (Id.). Where two parties exchanged parcels of land by parol agreement, and one made valuable improvements while the other cut a large quantity of wood on the parcels so exchanged, the successor of the party making improvements was entitled to a lien on the land therefor. Craig v. Armstrong, 26 Ky. L. R. 726, 82 S. W. 453. Where parties in good faith enter upon and improve lands, under an unenforceable oral agreement of purchase with the owners of the equity of redemption, they have an equitable claim as against the owners of the equity of redemption, subject to the prior claim of the mortgage. Schneider v. Reed, 123 Wis. 488, 101 N. W. 682. In a suit to establish a lien on land, on the ground that plaintiff's mortgagor had a title bond when the mortgage was executed, and that he had subsequently paid the purchase price, though he had received no deed, evidence held insufficient to show such payment. Comb's Adm'x v. Krish, 27 Ky. L. R. 154, 84 S. W. 562.

35. Where defendant agreed to convey a part of a tract of land to plaintiff on condition that he would make certain improvements on the land, plaintiff was entitled to a lien on that part of the land but not on the whole. Robards v. Robards, 27 Ky. L. R. 494, 85 S. W. 718. A contract for the sale of fruit trees, which provided that the sellers should have certain crops of fruit therefrom, gave them no lien on the land which they could enforce and recover money, but simply entitled them to the fruit contemplated in their contract. Butler v. Stark, 25 Ky. L. R. 1886, 79 S. W. 204. Where plaintiff sold certain machinery, taking notes therefor and reserving title, and plaintiff claimed that the same was so attached to the realty as to become a part thereof, but the evidence failed to support that theory, a judgment for a lien on all the property, both personal and real, was erroneous (Smith v. Ellis [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 856); and where the vendor of the land involved intervened, and sought to foreclose his vendor's lien expressly reserved by him, he should have been allowed to recover, with foreclosure for the amount (Id.).

36. An understanding of the parties that the vendor's lien should continue, after a release of judgment of foreclosure, to enable the vendee to effect a loan on the land. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

37. Borrer v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123, and cases cited Vendor and Purchaser, 4 C. L. 1793.

38. Borrer v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

rights of the parties cannot be otherwise secured.[39] The fact that defendant purchased land after the creation of his debt to plaintiff, without recording the deed, did not entitle plaintiff to a lien on the land and a sale thereof for his claim, though by proper proceedings the land might be subjected to the payment of the debt.[40]

(§ 2) C. Statutory liens.[41]—To acquire a statutory lien, the terms of the statute, as well as any contract by virtue of which such a lien is created, must be strictly followed,[42] and the property on which the lien is claimed must be identified with reasonable certainty.[43] Defects in proceedings to acquire statutory liens cannot be cured by amendment, in the absence of provisions therefor.[44] A statutory agister's lien is not affected by the mere fact that there was a contract between the parties for pasturage of the cattle in a manner, for a time, and at a price agreed on.[45]

Construction.[46]—The statutes are to be construed so as to be rendered effective if possible,[47] and given a liberal construction in favor of the lienholder.[48] Some statutory provisions are construed in the notes.[49]

§ 3. Rank and priorities of liens.[50]—A general lien must be subordinated to the superior equity of a prior specific lien.[51] As between equitable liens, priority

39. An allowance to the wife in divorce proceedings for the care and custody of children, under B. & C. Comp. § 513, will be impressed as a lien on all the husband's real estate, except such as he may be required to convey to the wife. Taylor v. Taylor [Or.] 81 P. 367. In a proceeding for alimony and separate maintenance, the award of alimony was declared to be a lien upon the husband's interest in real estate left by his father, who died intestate. Walker v. Walker [Iowa] 102 N. W. 435. A divorced wife has a lien on a life insurance policy assigned to her by her husband during the marriage, for any premiums thereon paid by her individually, but no other interest therein (Hatch v. Hatch, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 373, 80 S. W. 411); and in litigation involving the ownership of such policy, in which the insurance company was codefendant, the latter was given a lien on the policy for its attorney fees (Id.). Although an assignment of a bid at a sale of lands to pay debts was void for fraud in its procurement, yet the assignee was entitled to a lien on the land for the amount of a debt of the estate paid in securing the assignment. Daniels v. Daniels, 27 Ky. L. R. 882, 86 S. W. 1116. One who has bought in lands for another, and has paid out money to discharge incumbrances, has a right to be reimbursed as a condition of redemption. Cupp v. Lester [Va.] 51 S. E. 840. Where a brick company secures a judgment against a paving contractor for brick furnished him, and, upon the return of an execution unsatisfied, files a bill in equity to reach sums due such contractor by the city, it thereby acquires an equitable lien upon such funds. Case v. McGill [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 569.

40. Sewell v. Drake, 27 Ky. L. R. 571, 85 S. W. 748.

41. See 4 C. L. 435.

42. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273. An agreement in writing among land owners for the construction, by trustees, of levees to protect their lands from tide overflow, the expense of which was to constitute a lien on the lands under Civ. Code § 2881, did not authorize the construction of a drainage ditch and pumping plant, to be made a lien on the lands (Stone v. Harris, 146 Cal. 555, 80 P. 711), nor was the adoption of a resolution by all the owners sufficient authority therefor (Id.).

43. 2 Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St., § 5936, A general description of a crop of wheat on which a lien was claimed was held too indefinite. Dexter v. Olsen [Wash.] 82 P. 286.

44. There is no statutory authority for the amendment of a defective statement of a lien on farm products. Dexter v. Olsen [Wash.] 82 P. 286. A defective claim for lien cannot be amended so as to apply to one who purchases the premises sought to be charged with the lien after the contract was made. Rev. St. ch. 82 (Mechanic's Lien Act). Richardson v. Central Lumber Co., 112 Ill. App. 160.

45. Everett v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 165.

46. See 4 C. L. 435.

47. Mott v. Wissler Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 697.

48. Said of the mechanic's lien law. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273. But that law should be liberally construed only after the lien has attached, for the purpose of fulfilling its objects. There is no reason for giving it a liberal construction in determining whether a lien attaches. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Shera [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 293.

49. The Virginia statute giving a lien for supplies furnished to a manufacturing company includes only such supplies as are necessary to its output, and not to material or machinery necessary to the construction, equipment, or completion of the plant. Code Va. Supp. 1898, § 2485. American Wood-Working Machinery Co. v. Agelasto [C. C. A.] 136 F. 399. A mill superintendent, who oversees the operations of the mill, conducts a commissary store, and keeps the books, not performing any manual labor, is not a "laborer" within Code, § 1255, carrying into effect Const. art. 14, § 4, and giving laborers a lien on the subject-matter of their labor. Moore v. American Industrial Co., 138 N. C. 304, 50 S. E. 687.

is determined by the equities of the case.[52] The assignee from the owner of one or more of a series of notes secured by mortgage lien is entitled to preference over the other notes retained by the assignor,[53] at least the guarantying of payment has such an effect.[54] On an issue of priorities between chattel mortgages, the acceptance of a new note and mortgage before the first becomes due will not be deemed to have discharged the prior security, unless so intended by the parties.[55] Statutory liens being involved, the priority is often dependent upon the nature of the lien.[56] Statutory preferences do not retroact[57] but apply only to cases embraced by their terms.[58] The rank and precedence of liens on personal property may be determined by the law of the state where they accrue.[59] Priority often depends upon record,[60] or

50. See 4 C. L. 435.

51. In this case the mortgage was executed before the judgment lien attached. Glen Morris-Glyndon Supply Co. v. McColgan [Md.] 60 A. 608.

52. The equitable lien established by proceedings in aid of an execution, to reach sums due a paving contractor for brick furnished him individually, in ignorance of any partnership between him and others, has priority over any claims arising out of the partnership. Case v. McGill [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 569. A claim for permanent injury to property by the construction of railroad tracks in the street in front of it is a claim for the taking of property and a lien upon the corpus of the railroad, superior to either prior or subsequent mortgage, and cannot be defeated by a foreclosure sale unless the lien holder is made a party to the foreclosure proceedings. Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Clemmons, 27 Ky. L. R. 875, 86 S. W. 1125.

53. Perry v. Dowdell [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 833.

54. The court says the assignor "waives" his lien. Anderson v. Perry [Tex.] 85 S. W. 1138, afg. Perry v. Dowdell [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 833.

55. The question of such intent is a proper one for the jury. Dawson v. Thigpen, 137 N. C. 462, 49 S. E. 959.

56. The lien of a corporation on the stock of a member, under by laws adopted in accordance with Civ. Code 1895, § 2825, to secure his indebtedness to the corporation, is superior to a judgment lien. Owens v. Atlanta Trust & Banking Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 379. In Arkansas the lien of a laborer who assists in raising a crop is superior to that of a mortgage executed before the crop was produced. Law of 1895 (Acts 1895, p. 217, No. 146) amending the laborer's lien law. One taking a mortgage on crops is charged with knowledge of the fact that labor is necessary to produce crops and that the statutes provide for laborers' liens. Sheeks-Stephens Store Co. v. Richardson [Ark.] 88 S. W. 983. In the distribution of a fund arising from a sheriff's sale of goods, the landlord's lien for rent takes precedence of claims of execution creditors. Act of June 16, 1836. Wadas v. Sharp, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 233. The rent is to be reckoned up to the date of the levy made on the execution which is the last to participate in the distribution. Id. The lien that a person may have for money furnished to gather a crop is subordinate to the landlord's lien for rent. Goodwin v. Mitchell [Miss.] 38 So. 657. The lien of a purchase-money mortgage on property taken by a tenant on the leased premises is superior to the landlord's lien for subsequently accruing rent. Arnold v. Hewitt [Iowa] 104 N. W. 843. The purchaser of cotton subject to a laborer's lien, who merely credits the price on a past due account, is not a bona fide purchaser as against the laborer. Sheeks-Stephens Store Co. v. Richardson [Ark.] 88 S. W. 983. The special lien given on animals for food and care by livery stable keepers, under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, arts. 3319, 3326, does not interfere with other liens and is inferior to a mortgage lien of which the keeper has constructive notice. Masterson v. Pelz [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 56. The purchaser, at a sale for default in the payment of a school fund mortgage in Indiana, takes a title superior to tax liens subsequent to the execution of the mortgage, and due at the time of the sale. Hood v. Baker [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 608.

57. A claim for taxes assessed by a township since the passage of the Act of June 1901, P. L. 364, does not take priority over a mortgage recorded prior to such act, in the distribution of the proceeds of sale on levari facias. Caner v. Bergner, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 220. The statute of Pennsylvania, giving municipal liens priority over mortgage liens, does not apply to mortgages executed before the passage of that act. Act of June 4, 1901, P. L. 364. A paving lien. Martin v. Greenwood, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 245.

58. Comp. St. 1887, div. 5, § 707, making a judgment against a railway company for injuries to person or property a lien superior to the lien of any mortgage or trust deed, applies only to steam railroads. Daly Bank & Trust Co. v. Great Falls St. R. Co. [Mont.] 30 P. 252.

59. The superiority of an agister's lien on cattle surreptitiously taken from him, over a prior chattel mortgage, under the law of Kansas, was recognized in Missouri where the action was brought, although no such superiority exists under the law of Missouri, or of Illinois, where the cattle were sold. Everett v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 165.

60. The lien of a mortgage recorded before the commencement of improvements on the property precedes a mechanic's lien for material furnished for such improvements. Eckels v. Stuart, 212 Pa. 161, 61 A. 820. A claim for ties, necessary to the preservation of a railroad, furnished within six months of the appointment of a receiver, is not entitled to preference over a mortgage lien created and recorded prior to the contract for ties in the absence of any special circumstances, besides the use of them by the acts completed by records or filings,[61] or possession may be the determining principle.[62] Priority secured by one of two or more creditors in violation of good faith will not be sustained.[63] Receivers of corporations engaged in public service, whose operations cannot be interrupted without public inconvenience, may be authorized to issue certificates of indebtedness to raise money which may be made prior in lien to the mortgage indebtedness.[64]

In the settlement of estates of decedents, insolvents, and bankrupts, certain preferences are established, which pertain rather to such matters.[65]

§ 4. Waiver, extinguishment, discharge, and revival.[66]—A lien created by deed continues in full force until released of record, discharged by payment of the lien debt, or barred by the statute of limitations.[67] A foreclosure of a vendor's lien and sale of the property thereon to a bona fide purchaser, if there is no redemption, defeats the lien as to any unsatisfied part of the judgment or debt.[68] Courts will not permit a merger of a vendor's lien, when injustice will likely result, even though all the essential elements of a technical merger may be present,[69] and such lien having once attached can be defeated only by the voluntary act of the holder thereof, unless the rights of innocent purchasers without notice intervene.[70] Possession is generally necessary to unwritten liens, but a parting with possession against one's receiver. Gregg v. Metropolitan Trust Co., 197 U. S. 183, 49 Law. Ed. 717.

61. The lien given by Code Va. 1887, § 2485 (Code 1904, p. 1246), for supplies furnished to a mining or manufacturing company, attaches at the time the supplies are furnished, so that an adjudication in bankruptcy between such time and the recording of the sworn statement of the claim does not cut off right of priority of claim. Mott v. Wissler Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 697. A mechanic's lien cannot have priority over a purchase-price mortgage, where the only contract for the building was made before the purchase of the land, and the work done before purchase was without the owner's consent, no notice of any intended claim for lien being given him and the mortgage being contemporaneous with the deed. Rochford v. Rochford [Mass.] 74 N. E. 299. A mechanic's lien properly perfected has priority over all liens suffered or created subsequently, except the liens of other mechanics and materialmen, among whom there is no priority. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273.

62. Where a devisee takes a present interest, but possession is postponed, judgment liens attaching prior to the time he acquires possession are superior to his subsequent deed. Swerer v. Trustees of Ohio Wesleyan University, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 185. In Illinois the landlord's lien for rent past due does not arise until goods are distrained, and cannot be made to attach by distraint after the chattel mortgagee has reduced the property to possession. Springer v. Lipsis, 110 Ill. App. 109.

63. Where in violation of an agreement between two creditors, who were sharing pro rata the rents of a debtor's lands, that neither would sue without notice to the other, the creditor in possession of the lands caused an attachment to be levied thereon, and then the other creditor did the same, whereupon the first creditor agreed that the two judgments should stand equal, it was held that the proceeds of the sale of the lands, after reimbursement of the first creditor for taxes paid, should be applied pro rata on the two judgments. Montgomery v. Black [Ark.] 86 S. W. 1006. When two or more creditors have concurrent liens on a fund which stands to pay all their claims ratably, no one creditor can in any way equitably take the whole fund and apply it solely to the satisfaction of his claim. Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224. In such case the common fund must be accounted for to those who are entitled to have it ratably applied to the payment of their debts. Id.

64. Wiggins v. Neversink Light & Power Co., 93 N. Y. S. 853.

65. See Assignments for Benefit of Creditors, 5 C. L. 286; Bankruptcy, 5 C. L. 367; Estates of Decedents, 5 C. L. 1183; Insolvency, 6 C. L. 38.

66. See 4 C. L. 436.

67. Hamilton's Ex'rs v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093.

68. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

69. Where the vendor released a judgment of foreclosure of a vendor's lien, to enable the vendee to effect a loan on the land, on the understanding that vendee's notes for the judgment should represent the unpaid purchase price, and vendor's lien should continue, held that the lien was not so merged in the judgment as to be lost on its release. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

70. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123. Although the deed retaining a lien to secure the payment of the purchase-money note shows that more than the statutory period of limitation has elapsed since the note matured, yet the lien still exists if payments have been made on the note keeping it alive (Hamilton's Ex'r v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093), and renewing the purchase-money note from time to time has the same effect (Id.).

will and consent will not affect his lien.[71] If a vendor once fairly waives or abandons his lien, it is gone, and equity will not restore it.[72] One may waive his lien, expressly or by implication[73] by acts incompatible with the claim of lien.[74] An equitable lien on the assets of a defunct corporation, for a debt due from it, is extinguished when the debt becomes barred by limitation.[75] In Pennsylvania a release or extinguishment of any charge on land is presumed, where no payment or recognition thereof has been made within twenty-one years.[76] A landlord's priority for rent in the distribution of a fund arising from a sheriff's sale of a tenant's goods is not lost by the fact that no notice of his claim was given before or at the sale.[77] Although the holder of a lien on real property may be deprived of the benefit of his lien, his claim cannot be taken away without due process of law.[78] Under the Pennsylvania law, while the entry of a judgment note in the prothonotary's office within five years after the maker's death may not create a valid judgment, yet the entry is the equivalent of the filing of a copy or statement of the debt and will continue the lien of the debt on the real estate of the maker for a further period of five years from the filing.[79] And where, before the expiration of the five years, the terre-tenant and owner of the land confessed judgment for the sum of the debt and there were subsequent revivals of the judgment, there was no break in the continuity of the lien.[80]

§ 5. Enforcement and protection of liens.[81]—An agister, whose lien is made by statute superior to that of a prior mortgage, where the owner of cattle surreptitiously turns them over to the mortgagee, can recover for their conversion of an innocent commission merchant who sells them and turns the proceeds over to the mortgagee.[82] Ejectment will not lie to enforce the payment of a lien existing upon the land at the time of its conveyance, where the deed conveys an absolute, unconditional title.[83] When a statutory laborer's lien is declared to be subordinate to all prior subsisting liens, a chattel mortgagee has an adequate remedy at law by replevin, when the

71. The owner of cattle took them from an agister's pasture without his knowledge or consent and without paying his bill, and turned them over to a mortgagee. Held that the agister's lien was not lost. Everett v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 165.

72. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

73. Landlord not found to have waived his lien for rent by agreeing that a claim for advances to gather a crop should first be paid out of the crop. Goodwin v. Mitchell [Miss.] 38 So. 657.

74. Where a vendor prosecutes his action at law for the collection of unpaid purchase money, and levies an execution on the land and causes it to be sold thereunder, he waives his lien. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123. A warehouseman who demanded a sum in excess of the contract price for his services, and refused to give up the goods without payment thereof, thereby waived both lien and tender of his just claim before replevin. Stephenson v. Lichtenstein [N. J. Law] 59 A. 1033. The taking of independent or additional security, or the acceptance of a mortgage on the real estate conveyed by the vendor, will amount to a waiver. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

75. Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Stratton [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 887, 89 S. W. 1111.

76. Section 7, Act of April 27, 1855, P. L. 368. An allusion to dower charges, in a mortgage given by the grantee of the lands charged, within the 21 years is not sufficient recognition to prevent the running of the statute. DeHaven's Estate, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 507.

77. Wadas v. Sharp, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 233.

78. Section 58 of the chancery act of 1902, P. L. p. 531, providing that holders of unrecorded liens on mortgaged premises are bound by the foreclosure proceedings, is a statute of convenience only and does not determine ultimate rights or destroy equitable interests in the proceeds of the sale, but they are bound only "so far as the property is concerned" (Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224); and the statute applies regardless of the knowledge of the complainants that there are such unrecorded liens, it not being necessary that such lienholders be made defendants in the foreclosure proceedings (Id.).

79. Under Sec. 24, Act of Feb. 24, 1834, P. L. 70; Purdon's Digest, 12th Ed. p. 591. Sleeper v. Hickey, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 59.

80. Sleeper v. Hickey, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 59.

81. See 4 C. L. 437.

82. Everett v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 165.

83. Adams v. Barrell, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 641.

property is attached to enforce a laborer's lien and cannot resort to equity to stay proceedings.[84] In an action against a bank for the conversion of an insurance policy in which the bank pleaded that it held the policy as collateral security under an express contract, it could not defend on the ground of an equitable lien.[85] Nor could the bank defend on such ground without setting up the facts upon which it relies to establish its equitable lien.[86] One who purchases land subject to a lien cannot defeat the enforcement of the lien on the ground of failure of consideration for the lien.[87]

Statutory proceedings to enforce or foreclose.[88]—Where the relation of landlord and cropper exists, the latter is entitled to foreclose his special laborer's lien upon the completion of the contract.[89] Other lienors, who are not made parties to proceedings to foreclose a mechanic's lien, if their claims were actually or constructively known to complainant, are not bound by the proceedings.[90] The fact that the foreclosure of a vendor's lien is included in the same judgment as a mortgage foreclosure does not impair it or take away its characteristics.[91] While no lien exists or can be enforced in admiralty under the general law, for repairs or supplies to a vessel in her home port, yet, where a state statute gives a lien to be enforced by a process in rem, for such repairs or supplies, it is in the nature of a maritime lien and may be enforced in admiralty and the jurisdiction of the United States district courts sitting in admiralty is exclusive.[92] Under a constitutional provision that an action to foreclose a lien on real estate may be commenced in the county where the land, or any part thereof may be situated, and a statutory provision that there can be but one action for the recovery of a mortgage debt,[93] the court acquiring jurisdiction does not lose it by reason of the vacation of its judgment for error found.[94]

Equitable remedies and procedure.[95]—Liens constitute a subject matter inherent in equitable jurisdiction[96] which will apply any of its remedies or principles to protect them.[97] Where a state court has assumed jurisdiction of proceedings to foreclose a railroad mortgage, has appointed a receiver and entered a decree directing a sale, and has power to protect the interests of complainants who claim a lien on certain rolling stock, a federal court will not assume jurisdiction of a bill to declare and enforce the lien.[98] In a suit to establish a lien on land under a mortgage, all persons against whom any relief is sought should be made parties.[99] In an action on a return of nulla bona to attach the interest of the debtor in his mother's estate, it is not necessary that the petition should specifically describe each piece of property, but the averments must be so definite that anyone reading it can learn what property

84. Kirby's Dig., § 5011. Johnson v. Gillenwater [Ark.] 87 S. W. 439.

85, 86. First Nat. Bank v. Cleland, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 478, 82 S. W. 337.

87. By recorded contract the price of trees sold to the vendor of the land was made a lien thereon, and the defense by the vendee was that the vendor was imposed upon and the trees were not what he contracted for. Stark v. Hicklin [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 106.

88. See 4 C. L. 437.

89. Where the contract was completed save as to a part of the crop ungathered, which was seized on valid process against the landlord, it was error to dismiss the cropper's case on the ground that the contract had not been completed. Lewis v. Owens [Ga.] 52 S. E. 333.

90. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273.

91. Borror v. Carrier, 34 Ind. App. 353, 73 N. E. 123.

92. Pennsylvania Act 1858 (P. L. 363), giving such a lien, applies to vessels engaged in trade or commerce but does not apply to a mere dredge boat without any motive power but used only for supporting and transporting dredging machinery. Fredericks v. Rees & Sons Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 730.

93. Const. art. 6, § 5, and Code Civ. Proc. § 726. Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3, 79 P. 527.

94. Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3, 79 P. 527.

95. See 4 C. L. 437.

96. See 5 C. L. 1151, n. 81.

97. See Creditors' Suits, 5 C. L. 880; Foreclosure of Mortgages, etc., 5 C. L. 1441; Marshaling Assets, etc., 4 C. L. 531, and like topics.

98. Security Trust Co. of Camden v. Trust Co., 134 F. 301.

99. Comb's Adm'x v. Krish, 27 Ky. L. R. 154, 84 S. W. 562.

was intended to be made the subject of the litigation.[100] In an action to enforce a lien on only one of two parcels of land covered by it, commenced within the statute of limitations, the addition by amendment of a prayer to the complaint for a foreclosure of the lien on the other parcel also is not the introduction of a new cause of action but merely a prayer for additional relief.[101] Where defendant agreed to convey a part of a tract of land to plaintiff in consideration of his making certain improvements on the land, the fact that the land was defendant's homestead was no defense to an action for the value of the improvements and to enforce a lien therefor.[102]

LIFE ESTATES, REVERSIONS AND REMAINDERS.

§ 1. Nature and definition.[1]—A life estate is a freehold limited to determine with the life or lives of particular persons, or at an uncertain period which may continue for life.[2] Under the Ohio statute subjecting leasehold estates renewable forever to the law of descents governing estates in fee, a lease, renewable forever, containing a covenant on part of the lessee to pay rent during the term, is not converted into a life estate by the death of the lessee.[3]

A reversion is an estate remaining by operation of law in the grantor or his heirs to commence in possession after a particular estate granted out by him is determined.[4] It may rest on a contingency.[5]

A remainder is an estate expressly limited to take effect in possession immediately on the expiration of the particular estate,[6] not in derogation thereof and created by the same instrument.[7]

A remainder is vested if there is a present right to future enjoyment,[8] and is contingent when limited to a dubious or uncertain person[9] or upon a dubious and

100. Wilkerson v. Phillips, 26 Ky. L. R. 440, 81 S. W. 691. An averment that the purpose of the suit was to subject the interest of the defendant in the estate of his mother, held sufficient. Id.

101. Such relief might have been granted, under Code Civ. Proc. § 580, without such amendment. Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3, 79 P. 527.

102. Robards v. Robards, 27 Ky. L. R. 494, 85 S. W. 718.

1. See 4 C. L. 438.

2. See 4 C. L. 438. In Georgia the homestead is not a life estate in the full sense of that term. A beneficiary who does not reduce the rents and profits to possession, while the homestead estate is in existence, cannot recover them. Rowan v. Combs, 121 Ga. 469, 49 S. E. 275.

3. Hence the estate of the lessee is liable for rentals. Broadwell v. Banks, 134 F. 470.

4. See 4 C. L. 438.

5. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 2628, providing for a reversion, when a deed is based on a consideration of love and affection, and the grantee dies intestate, etc., the fact that the consideration was love and affection only must plainly appear. Wagner v. Weyhe [Ind.] 73 N. E. 89. Question held for the jury where a deed was from father to a son, who stayed with and cared for him after attaining majority. Id.

6. See 4 C. L. 439. Estate to "A and his children" gives A a life estate, remainder in fee to his children, born and unborn. Hall v. Wright [Ky.] 87 S. W. 1129.

7. See 4 C. L. 439. One holding under a deed excepting a life claim has a remainder. Senterfeit v. Shealy [S. C.] 51 S. E. 142.

8. Laws 1896, p. 559, c. 547, declaring future estates vested where there is a person in being who would have an immediate right to possession on the ceasing of the precedent estate, makes vested an estate to A for life, to B for life, remainder to be sold and divided among certain persons. In re Yerks' Estate, 94 N. Y. S. 1121.

9. A grant to two persons with a cross remainder to the survivor creates a joint tenancy and contingent remainder in fee to the survivor. Cover v. James, 217 Ill. 309, 75 N. E. 490. A remainder limited to the life tenant's children, and the children of such as are dead, is contingent. Latham v. Roanoke R. & Lumber Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 780. A remainder limited to children surviving at the death of the life tenant is contingent. Luquire v. Lee, 121 Ga. 624, 49 S. E. 834. Estate to A for life "and at her death to be divided among my then living uncertain event.[10] A remainder is not rendered contingent by the uncertainty of the time of enjoyment.[11] The right and capacity of the remainderman to take possession if the possession were to become vacant, and the certainty that the event upon which the vacancy depends must happen some time, and not certainty that it will happen during the lifetime of the remainderman, determines the character of the estate.[12]

In some states a remainder less than a fee in either realty or personalty cannot be created on an estate for the life of any person other than the grantee of such estate, nor can a remainder be created on such an estate in a term of years unless it be for the whole residue of such term.[13]

In the construction of instruments creating estates, vested remainders are favored,[14] and will never be held contingent when they can be held vested consistently with the intention of the testator or grantor.

There can be no merger of life estate and remainder so long as uncertainty as to identity of persons entitled exists.[15]

Remainder interests may be rendered inalienable by the terms of the instrument by which they are created.[16] At common law a contingent remainder was not considered an estate but merely a possibility coupled with an interest, and hence not subject to conveyance,[17] but an attempt to convey operates by way of assignment or estoppel[18] and is enforceable in equity.[19] The interests of contingent remaindermen not in esse may be protected by the court where justice requires a settlement of the estate.[20] The sale of contingent interests is in some states authorized by statute.[21]

Personalty may be limited in life estates and future estates[22] and the property children or their heirs" creates a life estate and contingent remainders. Scheirich v. Maxwell [Ky.] 89 S. W. 4.

10. An estate dependent on the death of a person without leaving issue. Kornegay v. Miller, 137 N. C. 659, 50 S. E. 315. An estate to A and B for life, cross remainders to the survivor for life, and if B died first remainder in fee to G, but if A died first, to E, gives G and heirs a contingent remainder. Morton's Guardian v. Morton, 27 Ky. L. R. 661, 85 S. W. 1188.

11, 12. Nelson v. Nelson [Ind. App.] 72 N. E. 482.

13. Laws 1896, c. 547, p. 565, § 34; Laws 1897, p. 508, c. 417, § 2. Requests held void. In re Bogardus' Estate, 43 Misc. 473, 89 N. Y. S. 478.

14. See Wills, 4 C. L. 1863; Deeds of Conveyance, 5 C. L. 964.

15. Luquire v. Lee, 121 Ga. 624, 49 S. E. 834.

16. The provisions of Civ. Code, § 492, declaring that no sale of property forbidden by the instrument under which it is held to be sold shall be ordered, are mandatory, and a sale cannot be had, though consented in by life tenant and remainderman. Morton's Guardian v. Morton, 27 Ky. L. R. 661, 85 S. W. 1188.

17. See 4 C. L. 445, n. 79, et seq. See Tiffany Real Property, § 129b.

18, 19. Kornegay v. Miller, 137 N. C. 659, 50 S. E. 315.

20. A suit to foreclose a mortgage in which there are life estates and remainders, vested and contingent, cannot be defeated by the probability of children being born who would have an interest in the fund. Miller v. McLaughlin [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 501, 104 N. W. 777.

21. Gen. St. c. 63, art. 6, § 1, authorizing a sale of remainder and contingent interests, authorizes a sale of a contingent remainder in fee as well as a defeasible fee. Scheirich v. Maxwell [Ky.] 89 S. W. 4. Proceedings for such a sale may be instituted by infant owners. Id.

22. See 4 C. L. 441.

NOTE. Executory devise of personal property: The testator devised the residue of his estate, real and personal, to his wife for life, and thereafter to the defendants. Held the wife was entitled to the property during her life, and no trust of the personal estate arose. Walker v. Hill [N. H.] 60 A. 1017.

Executory devises of personal property after a life or other interest now seem everywhere protected. But the courts differ in the theory of protection. By the weight of authority if the devise is of specific chattels, the first devisee has the custody and use for life, like a bailee, while the legal title is in the executory devisee. Executors of Moffatt v. Strong, 10 Johns. [N. Y.] 11; Vachel v. Vachel [1669] 1 Ch. Cas. 129; Burnett v. Roberts, 4 Dev. L. [N. C.] 79, 81. Contra semble, Horry v. Glover, 2 Hill Eq. [S. C.] 515. If, however, the devise is of the residuary estate, as in the principal case, the general rule would seem to be that the property should be sold, the proceeds given to trustees to pay the income to the first devisee during life, and then the capital to the executory devisee (Healey v. Toppan, 45 N. H. 243; Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 137), unless the will evinces a contrary in-placed beyond the reach of the creditors of the legatee.[23] The estate of the life tenant is responsible to the remainderman for the amount of the fund.[24]

§ 2. Mutual and relative rights and remedies of life tenants, future tenants, and their privies.[25]—A life tenant should not deal with the estate in a manner prejudicial to the remaindermen.[26] Power in a life tenant to use the corpus of the estate for his support is not a power to encumber the remainder.[27] Improvements made by the life tenant[28] or those claiming under him[29] are a part of the corpus of the estate, and cannot be recovered for from the remainderman.[30] Property purchased by the life tenant with the corpus of the estate belongs to the remainderman.[31] Damages in eminent domain proceedings belong to the reversioner.[32] In Ohio a life tenant, by joining in a petition for a street improvement, binds the property for the amount of the assessment.[33] A statute entitling a life tenant, under a will, to his income from the death of the testator does not apply when he receives it by virtue of a compromise between contestants and proponents of the will.[34] In New Jersey by statute when money is paid into court on foreclosure proceedings, a life tenant may apply for a gross sum in lieu of the estate, and consent of the remaindermen to such payment is not necessary.[35]

A life tenant in premises upon which no mines had been opened at the time of the vesting of his estate has no interest in subsurface minerals,[36] and when pursuant to agreement the land is sold, on partition of the purchase price, he is not entitled to any portion of the price arising from the probable existence of such minerals;[37] but in Texas it is held that where minerals are discovered on land, which at the time the life estate took effect was agricultural, the life tenant is entitled to interest on the proceeds of the sale of such minerals, the principal to the remainderman.[38]

Where an entire estate is charged with a life annuity, remaindermen cannot, without consent of the annuitant, claim that a portion of the estate is unnecessary to secure the annuity and should be distributed among them.[39] To bar a life an-tention (Pickering v. Pickering, 4 Myl. & Cr. 289).—5 Columbia L. R. 553.

23. Dickinson v. Griggsville Nat. Bank, 111 Ill. App. 183.

24. The amount of a life policy in which one has only a life interest may be recovered by the remainderman from his estate. Montgomery v. Brown, 25 App. D. C. 490.

25. See 4 C. L. 441.

26. The assent of a life tenant in a trust fund, to the impairment of the fund, is not binding on remaindermen. Bennett v. Pierce [Mass.] 74 N. E. 360.

27. Where one is given the entire estate of a testator "to use at her pleasure for her sole use," remainder over, a debt contracted by the life tenant for work on the estate is not a valid claim against it after her death. it not appearing that it was contracted for her maintenance or could not have been paid out of the profits. Tyson's Estate, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 533.

28. Heidelberg v. Behrens [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1029.

29. Gray v. Soden, 27 Ky. L. R. 673, 86 S. W. 515.

30. As to rights of life tenants under occupying claimants' acts, see Tiffany, Real Property, § 32, p. 74.

31. Where the life tenant purchases property with the corpus of the estate, the remainderman is entitled to such property at the death of the life tenant as against such tenant's heirs. Heintz v. Dennis, 216 Ill. 487, 75 N. E. 192.

32. A reversioner may recover damage where the premises are taken by the government for a military camp and put to extraordinary use, which impairs its value. Alexander's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 383.

33. Such assessments are levied upon the corpus of the property, not upon the title by which it is held. Herman v. Columbus, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 216.

34. Rev. Laws, c. 141, § 24. Hastings v. Nesmith [Mass.] 74 N. E. 323.

35. Leach v. Leach [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 562.

36. Hill v. Ground [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 343. Where a contract for the opening of mines was entered into between life tenant and remainderman, but was subsequently abandoned, the abandonment restored the status that existed before the contract was made. Id.

37. Hill v. Ground [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 343.

38. This rule applies to the wife's estate in lands of her deceased husband under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1689, since art. 3258 makes the common law continue the rule of decision. Swayne v. Lone Acre Oil Co. [Tex.] 86 S. W. 740.

39. If such proceeding can be considered as one under Act Feb. 23, 1853, P. L. 98, for the exoneration of a part of the trust estate, the discretion of the orphan's court in nuitant of a specified amount per annum "and as much more as she may need for her comfort, support and maintenance," the evidence must be clear and satisfactory, that she has forfeited such right.[40]

A remainderman entitled to a home on the premises may maintain an action for damages if he is deprived of his rights,[41] but cannot maintain ejectment during the life of the life tenant.[42] A contingent remainderman cannot maintain an action for trespass or for waste.[43]

A conveyance in trust for one for life, remainder over, attaches the trust only to the life estate.[44] The remainder estate is a legal one,[45] hence the trustee does not represent the remaindermen and a judge at chambers cannot, on the application of the trustee, authorize a sale of the remainder,[46] and the possession of one claiming under such sale is not adverse to the remaindermen during the life of the life tenant,[47] and mere knowledge of the illegal decretal order and sale thereunder does not estop the remaindermen from asserting title after the termination of the life estate;[48] nor can they be held to have ratified such sale unless, with full knowledge of the facts, they did something to indicate their adoption and approval of it.[49] An administrator is not a trustee for remaindermen devisees of his testator.[50]

Taxes, incumbrances, and contribution.[51]—The life tenant must keep down interest on incumbrances[52] and taxes,[53] and where he becomes the purchaser at a tax sale, the deed is void and the purchase amounts only to the payment of taxes.[54] This also is the result where his wife becomes the purchaser.[55] He is bound to pay only his proportionate share of assessments for permanent improvements,[56] and in paying a valid assessment is not a mere volunteer, where it appears that general taxes, which he was bound to pay, were refused, unless the assessment was also paid,[57] and having made such payment is subrogated to the lien thereof.[58]

The possession of the life tenant is not adverse.[59]—A reversioner[60] or remainderman has no right of entry during the existence of the life estate, consequently limitations do not run against him during such period,[61] and statutes of limitation are construed in view of this rule.[62] The fact that a remainderman is made a refusing exoneration will not be interfered with unless abused. McCoy's Estate, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 282.

40. Evidence insufficient where the annuitant made herself personally liable for a loan made out of moneys of the estate, which loan was never returned. Winter's Estate, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 643.

41, 42. Stiles v. Cummings [Ga.] 50 S. E. 484.

43. Latham v. Roanoke R. & Lumber Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 780.

44. Smith v. McWhorter [Ga.] 51 S. E. 474.

45, 46, 47. Smith v. McWhorter [Ga.] 51 S. E. 474; Luquire v. Lee, 121 Ga. 624, 49 S. E. 834.

48, 49. Smith v. McWhorter [Ga.] 51 S. E. 474.

50. An adjudication between an administrator and another in favor of one claiming possession is not binding on a remainderman devisee of such property. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202.

51. See 4 C. L. 442.

52. Where the life tenant neglects to do so, the amount may be deducted from his share of the proceeds of a sale on foreclosure. Stark v. Byers [Pa.] 62 A. 371.

53, 54, 55. Blair v. Johnson, 215 Ill. 552, 74 N. E. 747.

56. See Tiffany Real Property, § 32, p. 75.

57. Eddy v. Leath, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 249.

58. Although such assessments were paid without protest and no demand was made on the owner of the remainder interest. Eddy v. Leath, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 249.

59. See 4 C. L. 442.

60. Limitation does not run against a reversioner during the existence of a dower estate. Callaway v. Irvin [Ga.] 51 S. E. 477.

61. Dickinson v. Griggsville Nat. Bank, 111 Ill. App. 183; Collins v. Paepcke-Leicht Lumber Co. [Ark.] 84 S. W. 1044; Bolen v. Hoven [Ala.] 39 So. 379; Senterfeit v. Shealy [S. C.] 51 S. E. 142; Bechdoldt v. Bechdoldt, 217 Ill. 537, 75 N. E. 557. Not against the heirs of a married woman in favor of one claiming under a deed from such woman's husband, and consequent cessation of his estate by the curtesy. Wilson v. Frost, 186 Mo. 311, 85 S. W. 375. A right of entry in the remainderman does not exist during the existence of the particular estate. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202.

62. Code Civ. Proc. § 318, providing that an action for the recovery of real property shall not be maintained unless the plaintiff, etc., was seised of the property within five years prior to the commencement of the action, does not apply as between life tenant and remainderman. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.]

party to a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the particular estate does not start limitations against him in favor of the purchaser at the sale.[63] Possession under a tax deed of the title of the life tenant is not adverse to the remainderman.[64] The relation of debtor and creditor does not exist between life tenant and remainderman as such,[65] hence the possession of the life tenant[66] or those claiming under him[67] is not adverse until the termination of the life estate[68] unless his rights are assailed and he has a right to maintain an action;[69] accordingly where the remaindermen have a joint right of possession with the life tenant the possession of a stranger to the title is adverse to both,[70] and possession under a void administrator's sale of property, subject to a life estate and remainder, is adverse as to the remainderman from date of the void sale.[71]

Increment to funds.[72]—Income belongs to the life tenant.[73] As between life tenants and remaindermen of corporate stock, a cash dividend is to be regarded as income and a stock dividend as capital.[74] This rule was adopted as a guide to 82 P. 202. Code Civ. Proc. § 1452, providing that heirs or devisees may maintain an action against any one except the administrator, means only those who have a present right of possession and not a remainderman devisee. Id.

63. His is a paramount title and not subject to litigation in such suit. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202.

64. Smith v. Proctor [N. C.] 51 S. E. 889. A tax sale under Laws 1874-75, p. 213, c. 184, of the interest of the life tenant, does not pass the interest of remaindermen. Id. Such deed is not color of title as against them. Id.

65. Moore v. Idlor, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 19.

66. Blair v. Johnson, 215 Ill. 552, 74 N. E. 747; McCormack v. Coddington, 46 Misc. 510, 95 N. Y. S. 46.

67. The possession of the wife of the life tenant who became purchaser at a tax sale. Blair v. Johnson, 215 Ill. 552, 74 N. E. 747. One holding under a life tenant does not hold adversely to the remainderman, though he pays taxes and makes improvements. Weigel v. Green, 218 Ill. 227, 75 N. E. 913. A grantee of a part of the remaindermen does not hold adversely to a remainderman not joining in the deed while the life tenant lives. Bullin v. Hancock, 138 N. C. 198, 50 S. E. 621.

68. Rights of remaindermen held barred. Bechdoldt v. Bechdoldt, 217 Ill. 537, 75 N. E. 557; Smith v. Proctor [N. C.] 51 S. E. 889.

69. As where a probate court authorized a sale of the fee for the payment of debts of the estate of the person who created the estates. Lindsey v. Fabens [Mass.] 75 N. E. 623. A remainderman who waits 28 years after his rights are interfered with, during which period he is entitled to bring an action, and three years after the death of the life tenant is barred by laches. Id.

70. Elcan v. Childress [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 84.

71. Collins v. Paepcke-Leicht Lumber Co. [Ark.] 84 S. W. 1044.

72. See 4 C. L. 443.

73. Surplus and undivided profits of bank stock. In re Stevens, 47 Misc. 560, 95 N. Y. S. 1084.

74. Smith v. Dana, 77 Conn. 543, 60 A. 117. A stock dividend is part of the estate and goes to the remainderman. Billings v. Warren, 216 Ill. 281, 74 N. E. 1050.

Note: To determine correctly the respective rights of life tenants and remaindermen to stock dividends or extraordinary cash dividends, on shares of corporate stock held in trust, is a perplexing problem, and one concerning which there is great conflict. The English courts, following the rule first announced in Brander v. Brander, 4 Ves. Jr. 801, hold that an ordinary dividend, whether of cash, stock, or property, belongs to the life tenant, while an extraordinary dividend goes to the remainderman. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts, in the case of Minot v. Paine, 99 Mass. 101, 96 Am. Dec. 705, ruled that all cash dividends should be regarded as income and all stock dividends as capital, and this irrespective of their origin and amount. This rule has been followed in a number of states, but an inspection of the following cases will show how difficult it is to make any satisfactory classification: Millen v. Guerrard, 67 Ga. 284, 44 Am. Rep. 720; Spooner v. Phillips, 62 Conn. 62, 16 L. R. A. 461; Gibbons v. Mahon, 4 Mackey [D. C.] 130, 54 Am. Rep. 262; Richardson v. Richardson, 75 Me. 570, 46 Am. Rep. 428; Greene v. Smith, 17 R. I. 28, 19 A. 1081; DeKoven v. Alsop, 205 Ill. 309, 68 N. E. 930, 63 L. R. A. 587. On the other hand, there is a line of cases of which Earp's Appeal, 28 Pa. 368, is the progenitor, and of which McLouth v. Hunt, 154 N. Y. 179, 39 L. R. A. 230, is representative, which hold that it is for the court to ascertain the origin of the funds out of which the dividend is declared and apportion it according to the rights of the parties at that time, regardless of the nature and time of the dividend itself. Many courts have adopted the principles underlying this rule. Hite v. Hite, 93 Ky. 257, 40 Am. St. Rep. 189, 19 L. R. A. 173; Peirce v. Burroughs, 58 N. H. 302; Pritchitt v. Nashville Trust Co., 96 Tenn. 472, 33 L. R. A. 856; Thomas v. Gregg, 78 Md. 545, 28 A. 565, 44 Am. St. Rep. 310; Lowry v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 172 N. Y. 137, 64 N. E. 796. But see Quinn v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 93 Md. 285, 53 L. R. A. 169. The rule of Minot v. Paine is admittedly a rule of convenience which is liable to work hardship, but finds its justification in that it furnishes a simple guide for a trustee. It is claimed for the rule last above given that it is an equitable rule and that its application will secure justice in every instance. In the principal case trustees in discharge of their duties without resort to harassing and expensive litigation.[75] It does not yield whenever it appears that its application will not accomplish what may be conceived as exact justice on the basis of a theoretical view of ultimate rights.[76] The fact that undistributed profits or surplus in any form have been invested by the corporation in permanent work or improvements, does not render a cash dividend, declared out of the proceeds of a sale of such improvements, capital instead of income.[77] The distribution of such dividend as income does not prejudice the remaindermen where capital stock constituting the corpus of the estate remained worth three times as much as when the trust took effect.[78]

§ 3. Rights and remedies between third persons and life tenants, remaindermen, or reversioners.[79]—A purchaser from a life tenant acquires no greater estate than his grantor had[80] though the deed purports to convey the fee,[81] and a remainderman is not estopped by recitals in a deed by the life tenant.[82] A purchaser from a life tenant in personalty takes only his seller's title if he has notice of its nature.[83] In an action for nuisance a life tenant can be required to litigate only accrued damages.[84]

LIFE INSURANCE; LIGHT AND AIR, see latest topical index.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

This title relates to the general statutes of limitation and relegates to more specific titles the various special limitations (which are not purely limitation statutes) pertaining to particular actions,[85] and to those proceedings which do not the court reviewed some of the above cases which are considered as leading, and followed and approved the rule of Minot v. Paine. See 2 Wilgus' Corp. Cas. 1638; Cook, Stock & Stock Holders & Corporation Law, §§ 552 et seq.—3 Mich. L. R. 677. See, also, Helliwell, Stocks and Stockholders, § 319 et seq.

75. Smith v. Dana, 77 Conn. 543, 60 A. 117, citing the leading case Minot v. Paine, 99 Mass. 101, 96 Am. Dec. 705.

76. Smith v. Dana, 77 Conn. 543, 60 A. 117.

77. Smith v. Dana, 77 Conn. 543, 60 A. 117. The conversion into cash of certain branches of its business, which amount was used in declaring a cash dividend, does not warrant a holding that such dividend was capital, where the amount of the capital stock remained unchanged. Id. The rule "once capital, always capital" does not apply to surplus invested in permanent work or improvements. Id.

78. Smith v. Dana, 77 Conn. 543, 60 A. 117.

79. See 4 C. L. 444.

80. Blair v. Johnson, 215 Ill. 552, 74 N. E. 747. The grantee of the life tenant, and one of two remaindermen, acquires a life estate and a right to one-half the value of the remainder. Id.

81. Weigel v. Green, 218 Ill. 227, 75 N. E. 913.

82. Recitals that the grantor is the fee owner. Weigel v. Green, 218 Ill. 227, 75 N. E. 913.

83. Dickinson v. Griggsville Nat. Bank, 111 Ill. App. 183.

84. Cannot be compelled to submit to an adjudication of damages based on the jury's speculations as to his probable length of life. Hartman v. Pittsburg Inclined Plane Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 360.

85. See Estates of Decedents, § 6 B (statutes of nonclaim), 5 C. L. 1183; Bankruptcy, § 14 (statutes of nonclaim), 5 C. L. 367; Corporations, § 16 (stockholder's liability), 5 C.

fall within the general meaning given to the terms "actions" and "suits."[86] The doctrine of laches is elsewhere treated.[87]

§ 1. The statutes, validity and application generally.[88]—Subject to the constitutional guaranties of property, contracts, and vested rights.[89] the legislature may prescribe limitations on actions,[90] and if retroactive legislation is allowable[91] and a reasonable period is prescribed within which to bring actions[92] may make such statutes apply to existing causes.[93] But following the usual rule of statutory construction,[94] the intention to make the statute retroactive must be clearly manifest.[95]

A statute will be construed according to the plain meaning of its terms,[96] and in construing a particular provision, all provisions on the subject are to be considered and construed in view of the presumption that legislators act with reference to well settled principles of law.[97] A provision that if the period prescribed has already run as to accrued causes, an action may be maintained within one year from the time the statute goes into effect, serves its purpose after one operation and does not again become operative on re-enactment.[98]

Statutes of limitation are statutes of repose, not of extinguishment,[99] yet where they bar a liability they may thereby fulfill a contract of indemnity against that liability;[1] and where the limitation is an inherent part of a right created by statute, such limitation affects the right rather than the remedy.[2] They apply to actions,[3] not to defenses,[4] consequently, so long as a court will hear a plaintiff's cause, time cannot bar the defendant's answer[5] if it sets up a defense that can be adjudicated

L. 764; Death by Wrongful Act, 5 C. L. 945.

86. See Appeal and Review, 5 C. L. 121; New Trial and Arrest of Judgment, 4 C. L. 810; and similar titles. See Actions, 5 C. L. 32, as to definition of "action."

87. See Equity, 5 C. L. 1144.

88. See 4 C. L. 445.

89. See generally, Constitutional Law, 5 C. L. 619.

90. The legislature may prescribe a period within which suits by a city to collect taxes must be brought. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49.

91. See Constitutional Law, 5 C. L. 619.

92. A retroactive statute giving one year within which to bring action is reasonable. Schauble v. Schulz, 137 F. 389. Six months is not unreasonable especially where the statute is enacted one year prior to going into effect. Fitzgerald v. Scovil Mfg. Co., 77 Conn. 528, 60 A. 132.

93. Rev. Codes N. D. 1899, § 3491a, is retroactive in that it gives effect to adverse possession and payment of taxes preceding its enactment. Schauble v. Schulz [C. C. A.] 137 F. 389.

94. See Statutes, 4 C. L. 1522.

95. Not retroactive. Code Civ. Proc. § 2253, providing a 20 year limitation within which to file a petition to determine rights to escheated property. In re Pomeroy's Petition [Mont.] 81 P. 629. Shannon's Code Supp. p. 692, limiting actions for the recovery of usury. Slover v. Union Bank [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 399. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 235, No. 155, § 1, prescribing the period of limitation for causes of action for personal injuries. Hathaway v. Washington Milling Co. [Mich.] 103 N. W. 164. Code § 989, prescribing the period within which an action may be brought to question the legality of improvement bonds or certificates. Citizens' State Bank v. Jess [Iowa] 103 N. W. 471.

96. Gen. St. 1902, § 1119, limiting actions against a municipal or other corporation for injury to one year from date of injury supersedes Pub. Acts 1897, p. 883, c. 189, allowing 6 years within which to bring an action against municipal, railway, or street railway corporation. Fitzgerald v. Scovil Mfg. Co., 77 Conn. 528, 60 A. 132.

97. Provision that actions for the recovery of land must be brought within a specified period from the time the plaintiff or his predecessor was seised thereof and that heirs and devisees may sue does not apply to a remainderman prior to the termination of the particular estate. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202.

98. Tyee Consol. Min. Co. v. Jennings [C. C. A.] 137 F. 863.

99. Do not create presumptions or extinguish obligations; it merely bars the remedy. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915.

1. Morris v. Hulme [Kan.] 81 P. 169.

2. Jones v. Boykins, 70 S. C. 309, 49 S. E. 877.

3. A proceeding for leave to issue execution on a judgment charging lands with owelty is an action within the meaning of the statute. Ex parte Smith, 134 N. C. 495, 47 S. E. 16.

4. Code Civ. Proc. § 338, subd. 4, prescribing a three-year period within which to seek relief on the ground of fraud, does not apply to fraud relied upon purely as a defense to the enforcement of a judgment. McColgan v. Muirhead [Cal. App.] 82 P. 1113. An action by the owner of the legal title to land to recover possession is not barred because an action against him for the purchase price is. Doris v. Story [Ga.] 50 S. E. 348.

5. Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Meade [Ky.] 89 S. W. 137. So long as an action to recover in the hearing of the cause.[6] The statutes may not be used as a weapon of attack.[7] They pertain to the remedy, not to the right,[8] consequently it is competent for the legislature to change the period as to existing causes[9] if a reasonable time is given for the commencement of an action before the bar takes effect.[10] In determining whether the time allowed is reasonable, the period between the passage and date of taking effect should be considered.[11]

Special statutes are applicable only where specifically made to apply,[12] but where applicable are exclusive.[13]

The statutes do not run against the state[14] and hence will not bar an action to abate a public nuisance,[15] nor against a municipal corporation in respect to property held by it for public use[16] or its right to exercise a governmental function,[17] nor as against a right to compel such action.[18] If an obligation is such that it cannot be satisfied except by payment, the general statute does not apply to it.[19]

Limitation is governed by the law of the forum,[20] but it is provided by statute in some states that the law of the place where the cause accrued shall control.[21] on a contract is not barred, a defense of nonperformance is not. Enterline v. Miller, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 463. The defense of reduction or recoupment which arises out of the same transaction as the promissory note or claim survives as long as the cause of action on the promissory note or claim exists, although an affirmative action upon the subject of the defense may be barred. Williams v. Neely [C. C. A.] 134 F. 1.

6. The statute does not apply to a defense of fraud set up by way of confession and avoidance by a reply to a plea setting up a release though an action to assail the release for fraud was barred. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 654, authorizing releases pleaded in bar to be avoided for fraud. State v. Stuart [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 471.

7. Where in an action for reconveyance of land conveyed to one to secure him against loss on a recognizance bond signed by him, setting up the statute as against defendant's liability on the bond is not pleading it as a weapon but only as showing defendant's liability. Morris v. Hulme [Kan.] 81 P. 169.

8. Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521; Bickerdike v. State, 144 Cal. 681, 78 P. 270. Hence, a statute authorizing a suit against the state for claims already barred is not a gift of public money. Id. Code 1902, § 426, limiting a right of action to recover land sold by the sheriff to two years is a pure limitation statute and does not run against infants. Jones v. Boykin, 70 S. C. 309, 49 S. E. 877.

9. Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521.

10. 15 months is reasonable. Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521.

11. Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521.

Note: The court in Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521, say that while there is some conflict in the decisions, the great weight of authority is to the effect that such time should be considered, citing Osborne v. Lindstrom, 9 N. D. 1, 81 N. W. 72, 81 Am. St. Rep. 516, 46 L. R. A. 715; Smith v. Morrison, 22 Pick. [Mass.] 430; Duncan v. Cobb, 32 Minn. 460, 21 N. W. 714; Eaton v. Supervisors, 40 Wis. 668; Hedger v. Rennaker 3 Metc. [Ky.] 255; Hart v. Bostwick, 14 Fla. 180; Korn v. Browne, 64 Pa. 55; Clay v. Iseminger, 190 Pa. 580, 41 A. 38; O'Brien v. Gaslin, 30 Neb. 347, 30 N. W. 274.

Contra: Gilbert v. Ackerman, 159 N. Y. 118, 53 N. E. 753, 45 L. R. A. 118.

12. Code § 989, does not apply to a reassessment. Citizens' State Bank v. Jess [Iowa] 103 N. W. 471. Special limitation on proceeding to cancel tax certificate does not apply where it is wholly void. Hamar v. Leihy [Wis.] 102 N. W. 568. Special statutes apply only to the causes of action specifically provided for. Bickerdike v. State, 144 Cal. 681, 78 P. 270. Rev. St. 1898, § 3844, prescribing the time within which claims against estates of decedents shall be presented does not apply to an action for accounting of a partnership estate cognizable by equity and governed by § 4221. Stehn v. Hayssen [Wis.] 102 N. W. 1074.

13. Code Civ. Proc. § 2253, prescribing a twenty-year period within which to file a petition to determine rights to escheated property. In re Pomeroy's Petition [Mont.] 81 P. 629.

14. See 4 C. L. 464, n. 99. The rule that limitations run against the state was abolished in Indiana in 1881 and a complaint which does not show that the bar was complete at that date does not show a bar of the statute. McCaslin v. State [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 844.

15. Weiss v. Taylor [Ala.] 39 So. 519.

16. Streets. City of Chicago v. Pooley, 112 Ill. App. 343; Wakeling v. Cocker, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 196.

17. To remove obstructions from public streets. Pew v. City of Litchfield, 115 Ill. App. 13.

18. Pew v. City of Litchfield, 115 Ill. App. 13.

19. The lien of municipal taxes cannot be removed in Washington except by payment. State v. Mutty [Wash.] 82 P. 118, citing other states in accord.

20. See 4 C. L. 448. An action on a judgment obtained against a decedent in his lifetime is governed by the statute of the state in which he died, and where his estate is located and the action brought and not by the statute of the state in which the judgment was obtained. First Nat. Bank v. Hazie [R. I.] 61 A. 171.

21. An action accruing against a foreign

Such statutes are strictly construed.[22] Where a cause of action accrues in a state where it cannot be enforced the statute of the state where it can be enforced governs.[23]

Admiralty[24] and equity[25] are not bound by, but usually act in analogy to statutes of limitation.[26] In some jurisdictions, equity must give effect to the statutes.[27]

Contractual limitations.[28]—Parties to a contract may stipulate the period within which an action accruing thereon must be brought,[29] but such period must under all the circumstances be reasonable.[30] Such stipulations are governed as to validity by the law of the forum,[31] and when in a by-law of an association must rest on one to which the member is legally bound.[32] A limitation provision in a policy of insurance cannot be waived by agents without express authority from the managing officers.[33]

The defense of the statute may be waived,[34] but the agreement to do so must be clear and distinct[35] but need not be in writing.[36] Such agreement can be taken advantage of only by bringing action on it or pleading it as a foundation of an estoppel.[37]

§ 2. Classes of actions and the respective periods.[38]—The period within which an action must be brought is expressly prescribed by the statute, and the only difficulty rests in determining which statute is applicable to the particular cause.[39] corporation in Kansas where such corporation cannot plead the statute is not barred when sued on in Missouri where the contrary rule prevails. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. 260, 87 S. W. 506.

22. The Kentucky statute St. 1903, § 2542, providing that when a cause of action accrues in a foreign state between residents thereof or between them and residents of another state and is barred by the laws of the state where it accrued, it cannot be enforced in Kentucky, does not apply where a cause accrues in a foreign state against a citizen of Kentucky. Manders' Committee v. Eastern State Hospital, 27 Ky. L. R. 254, 84 S. W. 761.

23. Manders' Committee v. Eastern State Hospital, 27 Ky. L. R. 254, 84 S. W. 761.

24. See 4 C. L. 448; Admiralty, 5 C. L. 35.

25. See 4 C. L. 448; Equity, 6 C. L. 1144.

26. Unless unusual conditions or extraordinary circumstances render it inequitable a suit will not be stayed before and will be stayed after the period of limitations has expired. Williams v. Neely [C. C. A.] 134 F. 1; Barrett v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 586, 85 S. W. 749; Columbian University v. Taylor, 25 App. D. C. 124.

27. See 4 C. L. 448, n. 21. When pleaded. Baldwin & Co. v. Williams [Ark.] 86 S. W. 423.

28. See 4 C. L. 450, n. 40. As to validity of contractual limitations, see Contracts, 5 C. L. 689, n. 62 et seq.

29. Ausplund v. Aetna Indemnity Co. [Or.] 81 P. 577. In a life policy. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Caudle [Ga.] 50 S. E. 337. Code Civ. Proc. § 414, expressly provides that parties to a written contract may stipulate for a limitation period shorter than that allowed by the statute. Butler v. Supreme Council A. L. H., 93 N. Y. S. 1012. But see 4 C. L. 450, n. 41.

30. Six months held unreasonable in this case because the measure of damages sustained was not ascertainable until the entire period had elapsed. Ausplund v. Aetna Indemnity Co. [Or.] 81 P. 577. A stipulation in a policy of insurance that no action shall be maintained unless within one year from the death of the insured is reasonable. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Caudle [Ga.] 50 S. E. 337. Where a contract for carriage stipulates that an action thereon must be brought within a specified time, the burden is on the carrier to show that such period is reasonable. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Godair Commission Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 871.

31. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Godair Commission Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 871.

32. A by-law of a fraternal order prescribing the period within which actions must be brought on the policies is not binding on the beneficiaries of a member who took his policy prior to the adoption of such by-law. Butler v. Supreme Council, A. L. H., 93 N. Y. S. 1012.

33. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Caudle [Ga.] 50 S. E. 337.

34. Makers of a promissory note may stipulate therein that they will waive the statute. Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. [Vt.] 62 A. 50.

35. Not sufficient where an indorser requested the holder of a note to try and collect from one previously liable and agreeing to pay the balance. Monroe v. Herrington, 110 Mo. App. 509, 85 S. W. 1002.

36. An agreement not to plead the statute as against a debt is not an acknowledgment of it nor a promise to pay it, hence is not within the statute requiring an acknowledgment or promise to be written. Monroe v. Herrington, 110 Mo. App. 509, 85 S. W. 1002.

37. Newell v. Clark [N. H.] 61 A. 555.

38. See 4 C. L. 449.

39. See also Contracts, 5 C. L. 664; Mortgages, 4 C. L. 677; Trespass, 4 C. L. 1698, and like topics.

Different periods are prescribed for actions for the recovery of land[40] or to enforce charges on real estate,[41] to foreclose mortgages[42] or redeem from foreclosure,[43] to enforce mechanic's liens[44] or set aside tax sales;[45] actions on judgments[46] to recover a penalty;[47] actions against public officials;[48] actions on written instruments[49]

40. Under Code §§ 3447, 3448, limiting actions on written instruments and for the recovery of land to ten years, an action to reform a deed is barred after sixteen years. Garst v. Brutsche [Iowa] 105 N. W. 452. Code Civ. Proc. § 318, limiting actions for the recovery of real property to five years from the time the plaintiff, his ancestor, predecessor, or grantor was seised or possessed thereof, applies to an action by a widow to recover land conveyed by her deceased husband during his lifetime, through fraud and undue influence of the grantee. Page v. Garver, 146 Cal. 577, 80 P. 860. Under the North Carolina statutes where a decree charging lands with owelty in partition was confirmed in 1862, a proceeding for leave to issue execution to recover the owelty, instituted in 1903, was barred. Ex parte Smith, 134 N. C. 495, 47 S. E. 16. Under Code 1892, § 2731, prescribing a ten-year period as to one "claiming land in equity" it is immaterial whether defendants have been in adverse possession. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742. The one year referred to in the thirty-year statute for the recovery of land is simply a saving clause in favor of persons who might be affected at the time the law was enacted and does not confer any rights. Weir v. Cordz-Fisher Lumber Co., 186 Mo. 388, 85 S. W. 341. An action by a purchaser at execution sale to try title to land as against one who asserts title under a fraudulent conveyance is one for the recovery of land and not barred by Rev. St. 1895 art. 3358, the four-year statute. Rutherford v. Carr [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 119, 87 S. W. 815.

41. A voluntary deed to one heir by the others charging a sum of money on the land, interest to be paid to the widow for life, principal to the heirs. A claim for the principal if not asserted within 21 years after the death of the widow is barred by Act April 27, 1855, P. L. 368. DeHaven's Estate, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 507.

42. Foreclosure of mortgages is governed by the ten-year statute. Bruce v. Wanzer [S. D.] 105 N. W. 282. Code § 152, subsec. 3, bars an action to foreclose a mortgage in ten years after the last payment on the debt. Bunn v. Braswell [N. C.] 51 S. E. 927. A grantee of mortgaged premises may add to the time the statute has run in his favor since he acquired the land, the time it had run in favor of his grantors. Paine v. Dodds [N. D.] 103 N. W. 931.

43. One seeking to redeem from a foreclosure sale based on a tax lien must bring his action within two years from the date of the tax sale. Clifford v. Thun [Neb.] 104 N. W. 1052.

44. In Arkansas an action to enforce a mechanic's lien for work done in the construction of a railroad must be brought within one year. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Love [Ark.] 86 S. W. 395.

45. Rev. St. 1898, § 1210h, limiting actions to set aside tax sale or to cancel a tax certificate, etc., to one year, applies to tax sales and certificates issued for local improvements. Hamar v. Leihy [Wis.] 102 N. W. 568.

46. Under Gen. St. Kan. 1901, § 4883, an action on a judgment against a decedent must be commenced within one year from the qualification of his representative, not within one year from the death of decedent. First Nat. Bank v. Hazie [R. I.] 61 A. 171. Code § 3439, prohibiting an action on a judgment for 15 years after rendition and § 3447 requiring actions thereon to be brought within 20 years limits the time in which an action may be brought to 5 years, the difference between 15 and 20 years after rendition. Wooster v. Bateman, 126 Iowa, 552, 102 N. W. 521. Since a justice's judgment filed in a court of record is virtually a judgment of such court, the limitations controlling such judgments govern, hence a judgment barred by the terms of Code 1897, § 3470, when such statute was enacted are within Acts Gen. Assem. p. 103, c. 137, and an action brought thereon within one year from the passage of such act is timely. Haugen v. Oldford [Iowa] 105 N. W. 393. The amendments to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 376, 382, subd. 7, made by Laws 1894, p. 556, c. 307, changing the limitation on justice's judgments which are "hereafter docketed" or "shall be filed" does not apply to a judgment already docketed. McMahon v. Arnold, 94 N. Y. S. 775. A judgment of allowance of a claim against the estate of a decedent is not a judgment within Comp. Laws, 1897, § 2914, prescribing the limitation period for judgments. Gutierrez v. Scholle [N. M.] 78 P. 50. Code 1904, § 3577, bars an action on a judgment after twenty years though it could not be enforced during such period because the debtor's land was exempt. Ackiss' Ex'rs v. Satchel [Va.] 52 S. E. 378.

47. The action under Laws 1895, c. 163, § 7, to recover for timber taken from state lands, enhanced damages being recoverable, is controlled by the three-year statute. Gen. St. 1894, § 5136. State v. Buckman [Minn.] 104 N. W. 240.

48. An action by a county to recover from the clerk of court witness fees paid him is not on a demand arising out of the exercise of its governmental functions and is governed by Shannon's Code, § 4473, requiring actions against public officials to be brought within ten years. Hamblen County v. Cain [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 103.

49. A cause of action on a note and to foreclose a mortgage is governed by Rev. St. 1899, § 3454, providing that actions upon a specialty or any agreement, contract or promise in writing must be brought within five years. Ingersoll v. Davis [Wyo.] 82 P. 867. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 3767, an action for breach of a written contract is not barred until six years from date of the breach. Raleigh & G. R. Co. v. Pullman Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 1008. An action by a surety for contribution if brought upon the written evidence of indebtedness is governed by the period applicable to the instrument and if brought sealed[50] or unsealed;[51] on express[52] or implied[53] contracts or implied trusts;[54] actions in tort;[55] or mistake or fraud;[56] to enforce rights accruing by virtue of statute,[57]

on the implied contract is governed by the period controlling implied assumpsit. Bigby v. Douglas [Ga.] 51 S. E. 606. An ordinance under which a city earned fees and salary is not a written contract within the four-year statute. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49. A written agreement by an insured to transfer to the insurer his right of action against any third person for causing the loss is sufficiently certain so that the action thereon is on a written contract. Egan v. Boston Ins. Co., 110 Ill. App. 1.

50. The South Dakota statutes abolishing the distinctions between sealed and unsealed instruments did not reduce the limitation period on sealed instruments, 20 years, prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 58. Gibson v. Allen [S. D.] 104 N. W. 275. It is not necessary that the seal be impressed upon wax or other adhesive substance in order to bring it within the twenty-year limitation governing sealed instruments. The written word "seal" is sufficient. Philip v. Stearns [S. D.] 105 N. W. 467. An action against a county which acquired a road under the Free Turnpike Act, to enforce payment of bonds issued by the road is governed by the five-year statute and an action against the company by the fifteen-year statute. Roush v. Vanceburg, etc., Turnpike Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 542, 85 S. W. 735. Ky. St. 1903, § 2514, prescribing a fifteen-year period for actions on bonds applies to a bond taken by a court commissioner to secure payment of purchase money for lands of a decedent. French v. Bowling, 27 Ky. L. R. 639, 85 S. W. 1182. An action upon an implied promise to pay an attorney for services rendered under a sealed power of attorney is not upon a sealed instrument and is not governed by the twenty-year limitation period applicable thereto, Pierce v. Stitt [Wis.] 105 N. W. 479.

51. The Arkansas five-year statute covering unsealed instruments applies to unsealed city warrants or warrants to which the seal has been affixed without authority of law. Condon v. Eureka Springs, 135 F. 566.

52. An action to recover money loaned is barred by Code Ala. 1896, § 2796, six-year statute. Dacovich v. Schley [C. C. A.] 134 F. 72. On promissory notes, six years. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnase [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22. A mortgage is affected by the limitation applicable to contracts and not to judgments where a previous foreclosure was solely against the land and only partially, if at all efficient as to that. Brown v. Cates [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 179, 87 S. W. 1149. The seven-year statute bars an action against a surety regardless of the obligee's knowledge of the suretyship. Weller v. Ralston [Ky.] 89 S. W. 698. The personal liability of shareholders of a National Bank under U. S. Rev. St., § 5151, for the obligations of the bank, is not a contract liability within Ball. Wash. Code § 4800, subd. 3. McClaine v. Rankin, 197 U. S. 154, 49 Law. Ed. 702. A loss under an insurance policy which occurred prior to the Royal Decree of 1889 extending the Civil Code to Porto Rico, is governed by the twenty-year period prescribed by the Spanish law. Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller, 26 S. Ct. 46. A tax not being a debt nor founded upon contract, express or implied, does not come within either the general or special statutes of limitation of Massachusetts. Bradford v. Storey [Mass.] 75 N. E. 256. The statute runs against an action on a contract to waive limitations as upon any other. Newell v. Clark [N. H.] 61 A. 555.

53. An action to recover an assessment for local improvements is barred after six years from the date of the judgment annulling it. Dennison v. New York, 182 N. Y. 24, 74 N. E. 486. The three-year statute, Code 1892, § 2739, applies to an obligation to return usurious interest payment of which was coerced. Buntyn v. National Mut. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n [Miss.] 38 So. 345. The five-year statute applies to an action by a surety who has paid the debt, to recover from the principal. Usher v. Tyler, 27 Ky. L. R. 354, 85 S. W. 166. Assumpsit by a county to recover court costs is upon an implied contract and is barred after five years. Fulton County v. Boyer, 116 Ill. App. 388. An action for services is barred in three years. Boogher v. Roach, 25 App. D. C. 324.

54. Code § 158, bars an action to recover funds held on implied trust, after ten years where no demand is made. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 N. C. 533, 50 S. E. 212. Persons entitled to funds held on an implied trust are barred in three years after demand and refusal. Id.

55. The section of the Alaska Civil Government Act prescribing a two-year limitation for actions for libel, etc., or any injury to the person or rights of another not arising on contract, applies to an action for deceit. Tudor v. Ebner, 93 N. Y. S. 1067. Pub. Acts 1895, p. 297, c. 224, bars an action to recover damages for injuries to land caused by constructing a railroad, after five years. Stack v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1024. The one-year period prescribed for actions ex delicto applies to an action for damages for trespass in cutting down and carrying away timber. Gilmore v. Schenck [La.] 39 So. 40. A prosecution for obstructing a highway is barred after five years. Richardson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 282.

56. Code Civ. Proc. § 338, subd. 4, prescribing a period of three years for relief on the ground of mistake or fraud, does not apply to an action to quiet title against a deed alleged to have been executed as a mortgage. DeLeonis v. Hammel [Cal. App.] 82 P. 349. Code Civ. Proc. § 338 subd. 4, prescribing a three-year period for relief on the ground of fraud and § 343 prescribing a four-year period for all other actions not otherwise provided for, bars an action for relief on the ground of fraud not brought within such period. Matteson v. Wagoner [Cal.] 82 P. 436.

57. Civ. Code 1895, § 3766, prescribing a twenty-year period for causes accruing to individuals under statutes or by operation of law applies only where a liability thus created is in favor of an individual as distinguished from one arising under the general law in favor of the public at large. Bigby v. Douglas [Ga.] 51 S. E. 606. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 343, prescribing a period of four years and an omnibus clause covering all actions not otherwise expressly provided for.[58]

§ 3. Accrual of cause of action and beginning of period.[59]—The statute commences to run from the accrual of a cause of action and not before.[60] A cause of action accrues when there exists a demand capable of present enforcement,[61] a for actions not otherwise provided for and § 338, subd. 1, prescribing a three-year period for actions upon a statutory liability other than penalty, mandamus to compel one's admission to the office of policeman is barred after nine years. Farrell v. San Francisco County Police Com'rs [Cal. App.] 81 P. 674. A petition for the appointment of viewers to assess damages for vacation of a street must be presented within six years after confirmation of the plan vacating the street, Act April 21, 1858, P. L. 385, and Act of March 27, 1713, 1 Sm. L. 76. Tabor St., 25 Super. Ct. 355; Butler St., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 257.

58. An action by a lower riparian owner for injuries for pollution of a water course is within the one-year statute. Code 1896, § 2801, subd. 6. Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Nichols [Ala.] 39 So. 762. It was error to refuse to instruct that damages done more than one year prior to action commenced could not be recovered for. Id. Under the equitable doctrine of subrogation, an action to establish and enforce a lien of an assessment paid is neither an action at law nor upon contract, nor upon a liability created by statute, and is, therefore, governed by the ten-year limitation prescribed by § 4985, Eddy v. Leath, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 249.

59. See 4 C. L. 453.

60. 2 Gen. St. p. 1976, § 6, barring an action upon a sealed instrument upon which no payment is made within sixteen years does not apply until a cause of action on such instrument accrues. Acton v. Shultz [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 876. Does not apply where a cause of action does not accrue within sixteen years. Id. Under Rev. Codes N. D. 1899, § 3491a, the prescribed period begins to run with adverse possession, and not on the date of the first payment of taxes, accompanied by adverse possession. Schauble v. Schulz [C. C. A.] 137 F. 389. Where a wife loaned money to her husband and the circumstances showed that there was no understanding that it should be repaid immediately it was held a question for the jury as to when a cause of action to recover it accrued. Wilcox v. Wilcox [Mich.] 102 N. W. 954. Act March 3, 1887, c. 359, § 1, 24 Stat. 505, begins to run against a suit by a marshal to recover fees or disbursements from the time the service was rendered or disbursement made, and not from the expiration of his term of office. Walker v. U. S., 139 F. 409. The limitation of two years is an essential condition of the right to bring an action for wrongful death, and begins to run at once against the beneficiaries. Archdeacon v. Cincinnati Gas & Elec. Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 45. The statute runs against a purchaser at delinquent tax sale from the day he was entitled to present his certificate to the county auditor and receive a deed. Wolcott v. Holland, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 604. A cause of action by a share holder to recover a tax dividend declared by a bank accrues at the time the taxes are payable. Redhead v. Iowa Nat. Bank [Iowa] 103 N. W. 796. Where, notwithstanding a guardian's removal, he continued to act until his ward's majority, at which time his final settlement was confirmed by the probate court, a cause of action on his bond to recover an amount due accrues at such time. Wallace v. Swepston [Ark.] 86 S. W. 398. An action to recover usury upon a series of transactions accrues only when all the transactions are closed. Slover v. Union Bank [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 399. A cause of action to recover an assessment loan conditioned to become absolute when all stockholders paid their assessments does not accrue until a reasonable time has elapsed within which to collect such assessments. Steck v. Bridgeport Water Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 188.

61. A right of action in one who acquires from the state land in the adverse possession of another, does not accrue until the date of the grant. Lindsay v. Austin [N. C.] 51 S. E. 990. If the settlement of a guardian's account is not final a cause of action to falsify it does not accrue until the probate court orders the amount paid over. Wallace v. Swepston [Ark.] 86 S. W. 398. A cause to enforce the individual liability of stockholders of a National Bank accrues as to a state statute when the amount has been ascertained and assessed by the Comptroller of Currency and not before. Rankin v. Barton, 26 S. Ct. 29. An agreement by an insured to assign to the insurer his right of action against any third person whose act shall cause a loss is broken when insured himself recovers on such right of action. Egan v. Boston Ins. Co., 110 Ill. App. 1. Creditor might have sued insolvent estate at any time between 1857 and 1880. Nutt v. Brandon [Miss.] 38 So. 104. Limitations do not begin to run against an action against a city for the wrongful diversion of a special fund designated for the payment of improvement warrants until the holder has notice of such diversion. Hemen v. Ballard [Wash.] 82 P. 277. A cause of action on city warrants does not accrue until a fund is provided for their payment. Barnes v. Turner, 14 Okl. 284, 78 P. 108.

Note: The decision purports to proceed upon the rule that when payment of town warrants is to be made out of a particular fund, the cause of action does not accrue until that fund is provided. This proposition is based upon an interpretation of the city's promise as one to pay when the money is available, and though denied in some jurisdictions, it may possibly be regarded as established. Lincoln County v. Lunning, 133 U. S. 529, 33 Law. Ed. 766. Contra. Wilson v. Knox County [Mo.] 28 S. W. 896. In most of the cases, however, it seems a fair inference from facts not always clear that it never rested with the warrant-holder to determine when the funds should be available; for the warrants were payable only out of money derived from the general taxes and appropriated to the special purpose, and the creditor had no remedy on the warrants if the revenues were disbursed in other ways.

suable party against whom it may be enforced,[62] and a party who has a present right to enforce it,[63] hence, on an obligation payable on demand, a cause of action accrues at its date;[64] but if an extension is granted no cause of action accrues until its expiration,[65] and if an obligation matures upon the happening of a contingency, no cause accrues until it happens.[66] A permissive condition for accelerated maturity does not accelerate the accrual of the cause of action,[67] but an absolute one does.[68] A cause of action for wrongful act, based on consequential as distinguished from direct damages, and which involves an act which might have proved harmless, accrues only upon the actual occurrence of damage,[69] hence, when a nuisance is not necessarily

See Sawyer v. Colgan, 102 Cal. 283. In the Oklahoma case the plaintiff could plainly have compelled the provision of the fund at any time by instituting mandamus proceedings. Goldman v. Conway County, 10 F. 888. The case seems, therefore, a questionable extension of the general principle relied on. See, however, Davis v. Commissioners of Lincoln County, 23 Nev. 262.—18 Harv. L. R. 230.

Note: The right of action of a vendee to recover payments made under a parol contract for the sale of land does not accrue until the vendor repudiates the contract. Collins v. Thayer, 74 Ill. 138; Walker v. Walker, 21 Ky. L. R. 1521, 55 S. W. 726; Lyttle v. Davidson, 23 Ky. L. R. 2262, 67 S. W. 34.—From note to Durham v. Wick [Pa.] 105 Am. St. Rep. 797.

62. A cause of action on a guardian's bond to recover an amount due from the guardian accrues at the time the guardianship is terminated if there be a person capable of suing therefor. Wallace v. Swepston [Ark.] 86 S. W. 398. Under Rev. St. 1898, §§ 4221, subd. 4, 4251, where at the time a cause of action cognizable in chancery accrues, there is no person in existence authorized to sue, the action is not barred until 20 years. Stehn v. Hayssen [Wis.] 102 N. W. 1074.

63. There is no person in existence to bring an action in favor of the estate of a decedent which arises after his death until an executor or administrator is appointed. Stehn v. Hayssen [Wis.] 102 N. W. 1074.

64. On demand paper. Luther v. Crawford, 116 Ill. App. 351. On city warrants payable on demand, at the date of delivery.. Condon v. Eureka Springs, 135 F. 566. A right of action against sureties on demand paper accrues on the date of delivery. Newell v. Clark [N. H.] 61 A. 555. An action to recover money deposited with one to be delivered to another accrues at the date of delivery though the beneficiary is ignorant of the delivery. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Folz, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 558. One who, intrusted with another's money, negligently loans it to an insolvent is not liable to the owner unless demand is made within the period of limitations. Hitchcock v. Casper [Ind.] 73 N. E. 264. A cause of action for contribution among joint tort feasors accrues when one pays the whole. The Conemaugh, 135 F. 240.

65. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. McMurray [Iowa] 105 N. W. 361. Where an indorser of demand paper waives demand for payment at the time it was to have been paid, a cause of action against him does not accrue until subsequent demand and notice within a reasonable time. Hampton v. Miller [Conn.] 61 A. 952.

66. On a contract made to become due on the happening of a contingency. Noyes v. Young [Mont.] 79 P. 1063.

67. That default in payment of interest shall mature the obligation at the option of the holder. Blakeslee v. Hoit, 116 Ill. App. 83. A cause of action on a note payable in instalments, though the entire note might be paid at any time, accrues at the maturity of each instalment. Bissell v. Forbes [Cal. App.] 82 P. 698. A provision in a mortgage accelerating maturity upon failure to pay instalments of interest when due is for the benefit of the mortgagee only and limitations do not run from default but only from maturity according to terms. White v. Krutz, 37 Wash. 34, 79 P. 495.

68. Snyder v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 970, holding that such provision is for the benefit of both parties and either is entitled to any advantage arising by virtue of it.

69. A cause of action against a register of deeds who fails to correctly register a conveyance accrues when the vendee is deprived of his property by reason thereof and not at the time the mistake was made. State v. McClellan, 113 Tenn. 616, 85 S. W. 267.

NOTE. Against public officials: The principal case is noteworthy in that the question involved as to the time of accrual of the action has never before been passed upon by this court. And the authorities upon the doctrine enunciated are conflicting. State v. Grizzard, 117 N. C. 105; Betts v. Norris, 21 Me. 314, 38 Am. Dec. 264, in which latter case a strong dissenting opinion supports the holding in the principal case. These decisions seem to overlook the essential elements necessary to actions against public officers. Mechem, Public Officers, § 674. The case of Wilcox v. Plummer, 4 Pet. [U. S.] 172, 7 Law. Ed. 821, is frequently cited as opposed to the principal holding. But this action was based upon a breach of contract arising out of the relation of attorney and client, and did not involve a neglect of official duty. Hence, it was held a cause of action immediately resulted from the breach which is consistent with the general rule. So, too, Kerns v. Schoonmaker, 4 Obio, 331, and Lathrop v. Snellbaker, 6 Ohio St. 276, are cited as contrary to the principal case; but a distinction is to be noted here, in that the plaintiffs in these cases could have themselves determined the invalidity of the bonds in suit; and upon execution issued their right of action against the defendant justices of the peace would have been complete. Steel v. Bryant, 49 Iowa, 116; followed in Moore v. McKinley, 60 Iowa, 367; Hartford v. Waterman, 26 Conn. 324; People, to the Use of injurious but becomes so, and inflicts intermittent damage, the cause of action accrues at the time the injury is inflicted and not before.[70] A creditor's cause of action to assail a fraudulent conveyance does not accrue until he reduces his claim to judgment[71] and the purchaser takes adverse possession of the property.[72] A cause of action in a remainderman relative to the estate does not accrue during the continuance of the life estate[73] unless he has a right to maintain an action.[74] Actions accrue on divisible accounts for labor at the time the service is performed unless a contrary intention is shown,[75] but when there is an undertaking or agency which requires a continuation of services, the statute does not run until the termination of the agency or undertaking.[76] If a right be either in action or in possession, the bar does not run against the action while the right of, or remedy by, possession is being exercised.[77] Thus it does not run in favor of a mortgagee in possession[78] nor against the right to redeem from a mortgage so long as the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee exists.[79]

Tritch v. Cramer, 15 Colo. 155, are relied on in the decision of the principal case, and seem to represent the weight of reason, if not of authority.—3 Mich. L. R. 674.

70. Damage caused to adjacent lands by failure to keep a ditch open. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Morris [Ark.] 89 S. W. 846. A cause of action for injuries to property because of smoke from railroad premises accrues as each successive injury occurs. Kuhn v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 111 Ill. App. 323. In an action for damages to real property from a private nuisance continuous but not permanent in character, the five-year statute does not commence to run at the beginning of the nuisance but only from occurrence of damage. Pickens v. Coal River Boom & Timber Co. [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 872. Damage for five years may be recovered though the nuisance and damage began more than five years before action was brought. Id. Where an injury to crops and land is caused by the negligent construction of a railroad embankment which arrested and held upon said lands the flood waters of a natural stream, the cause of action accrues at the date of the injury and not at the date of the construction of the embankment. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Mitchell [Neb.] 104 N. W. 1144.

71. Watt v. Morrow [S. D.] 103 N. W. 45, and cases cited. Since an action in the nature of a creditor's bill to reach property fraudulently conveyed cannot ordinarily be maintained until the claim has been reduced to judgment, limitations do not run until judgment is obtained. Ainsworth v. Roubal [Neb.] 105 N. W. 248, disapproving Gillespie v. Cooper, 36 Neb. 775, 55 N. W. 302.

72. Not where the change of possession was colorable only, the grantor remaining in possession claiming to be agent of his wife who asserted that she was tenant of the purchaser who it does not clearly appear was bona fide. Baldwin & Co. v. Williams [Ark.] 86 S. W. 423.

73. Bechdoldt v. Bechdoldt, 217 Ill. 537, 75 N. E. 557; Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202; Collins v. Paepcke-Leicht Lumber Co. [Ark.] 84 S. W. 1044. Right of possession. Hubbird v. Goin [C. C. A.] 137 F. 822. Not against the heirs of a married woman in favor of a grantee of her husband of land belonging to the married woman until the death of her husband and consequent cessation of his tenancy by the curtesy. Wilson v. Frost, 186 Mo. 311, 85 S. W. 375. Not in favor of one holding under a life tenant as against the remainderman until the death of the life tenant. Holders of a tax deed conveying only the life estate. Smith v. Proctor [N. C.] 51 S. E. 889. Not against a reversioner until the expiration of the intermediate estate. Dickinson v. Griggsville Nat. Bank, 111 Ill. App. 183.

74. As where the premises are in the adverse possession of a stranger. Elcan v. Childress [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 84. Where infant remaindermen have a right of action to have their interests determined, limitations run during the existence of the particular estate. Hubbird v. Goin [C. C. A.] 137 F. 822.

75. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Love [Ark.] 86 S. W. 395. The right of action of a principal to recover money collected for him by an agent whose duty it is to remit without an accounting accrues at the date of the collection. Jewell v. Jewell's Estate [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1059. An account for services rendered during a period of twenty years the items of which are made up from letters received during such period is not a book account current within Rev. St. 1899, § 4278, providing that a cause of action on an account current does not accrue until the date of the last item. Sidway v. Missouri Land & Live Stock Co., 187 Mo. 649, 86 S. W. 150.

76. Continuous service as attorney for seventeen years. Wilson v. Miller [Va.] 51 S. E. 837.

77. When the refusal to purchase or sell a tract of land is given in consideration of a loan for which the note is executed, with the agreement that the right thus accorded is to be terminated on payment of the note, held that the agreement of the parties is the law of the case and that under the agreement the prescription of the note was not its payment and that moreover the agreement embodying as it did a species of pledge operated as a constant interruption of prescription. Succession of Darton, 113 La. 875, 37 So. 861.

78. One in possession under a void foreclosure sale is a mortgagee in possession.

As between stockholder, corporation, and creditors.[80]—On a stock subscription, contract not payable in full presently but subject to calls, limitations do not run until a call is made,[81] and a call need not be made within the statutory period from date of subscription.[82] The levy of an assessment which is afterwards rescinded does not start limitations as to a subsequent assessment.[83]

Mistake and fraud.[84]—A cause of action for mistake[85] or fraud[86] accrues at the time it was, or by the exercise of ordinary diligence should have been discovered; and a party who has at hand means by which fraud could have been readily discovered, and such means would have been used by a person of ordinary diligence, is held in law to have notice of everything which such means would have disclosed,[87] but the period is not extended as to others than the parties to the fraud and their privies.[88]

Investment Securities Co. v. Adams, 37 Wash. 211, 79 P. 625.

79. This rule applies as to one holding under a mortgagee who was placed in possession as such. Catlin v. Murray, 37 Wash. 164, 79 P. 605.

80. See 4 C. L. 456. See, also, Corporations, 5 C. L. 764.

81. Cook v. Carpenter, 212 Pa. 165, 61 A. 799. Under Civ. Code § 332, subd. 1, a cause of action does not accrue on the liability of stockholders on unpaid stock until levy of an assessment. Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 P. 441.

82. Cook v. Carpenter, 212 Pa. 165, 61 A. 799.

83. Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 P. 441.

84. See 4 C. L. 457.

85. See 4 C. L. 457. Cause of action for mistake accrues at the time the mistake was, or by the exercise of ordinary diligence should have been, discovered. Ky. St. 1903, §§ 2515, 2519. German Security Bank v. Columbia Finance & Trust Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 581, 85 S. W. 761. A cause of action to reform a deed for mistake accrues at the time such mistake is discovered. Garst v. Brutsche [Iowa] 105 N. W. 452.

86. Boren v. Boren [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 48. Must be brought within four years from the discovery of fraud or such facts and circumstances as are indicative thereof and if followed up would lead to its discovery. Weckerly v. Taylor [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1065. Where a tax is refunded in reliance on a fraudulent certificate that it had been worked out, an action does not accrue until the money is refunded and the fraud discovered. Walla Walla County v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 716. Where one standing in a fiduciary relation to another practiced fraud upon him and concealed the facts. Barnes v. Huffman, 113 Ill. App. 226. Code 1904, art. 57, § 14, applies to a fraudulent transaction and a subsequent concealment of it from the defrauded party by the person who practiced the fraud. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Swain [Md.] 60 A. 469. Code § 155, applies only when the ground of the action is fraud or mistake and runs from the discovery of the fraud or mistake and not from the discovery of rights hitherto unknown. Bonner v. Stotesbury [N. C.] 51 S. E. 781. Right to assail a fraudulent conveyance. Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Adams, 38 Wash. 75, 80 P. 284. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 301, suspending the general statute in cases of fraud until the fraud is discovered, applies to an action by a ward, after the termination of her guardianship by marriage, to recover funds remaining in his hands, §§ 2557, 2558, special statutes relative to final settlements do not. Roberts v. Smith [Ind.] 74 N. E. 894.

Concealed fraud, if not within the statutory exception does not suspend the statute. Pietsch v. Milbrath, 123 Wis. 647, 101 N. W. 388, 102 N. W. 342.

Note: In construing statutes of limitations containing no exemption clauses, some courts have been inclined to deny the defense to one who has concealed the existence of the plaintiff's cause of action for the statutory period. Cf. First, etc., Corporation v. Field, 3 Mass. 201. Several of these decisions, however, may perhaps be explained on the ground that in their jurisdiction there were no equity courts to relieve the plaintiff against its effect. And the better opinion certainly holds that no exception can be read into such a statute. Board, etc. of Somerset v. Veghte, 44 N. J. Law, 509. When, as in the present case, the legislature has provided that causes of action based upon fraud, which have been concealed, shall not be deemed to have accrued until discovered, it would seem clear that according to a well recognized canon of statutory construction causes of action not based on fraud should not be entitled to the same exemption. See Amy v. City of Watertown, 22 F. 418, 420. The present case, therefore, seems preferable to a contrary decision reached under a similar statute in Iowa. Cf. District etc., of Boomer v. French, 40 Iowa 601.—18 Harv. L. R. 623.

87. Boren v. Boren [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 48. One induced by fraud to execute a conveyance of land in which he had a remainder interest under a will is barred where he does not maintain action for 23 years during the whole of which period he could have ascertained the fraud from the records of the probate court. Id. Evidence held to show that one induced by fraud to purchase bank stock should have discovered the fraud more than the statutory period before action was brought. Meehan v. Peck [Ky.] 89 S. W. 491. Whether a defrauded party sued within the statutory period after he discovered or by the exercise of ordinary diligence should have discovered fraud in the conduct of an insurance agent, held a question for the jury. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Swain [Md.] 60 A. 469.

§ 4. Time tolled and computation of period.[88]—Besides the circumstances enumerated in the statute as postponing or interrupting it,[89] the commencement of an action in a court of competent jurisdiction tolls the statute[91] as to the cause of action stated, but not as to others for the same subject-matter.[92] An action by a ward against her former guardian, and a surety on his bond to falsify and surcharge his account, does not toll the statute as to the heirs and administrator of a deceased surety not a party.[93] It is tolled by a recognition of the obligation and attempt to perform it.[94] The giving of securities in conditional payment of a debt tolls the statute as to a right of action on the debt during the currency of the securities.[95] An agreement extending time of payment suspends the operation of the statute,[96] but a request for an extension is insufficient in the absence of an acceptance.[97] Where a judgment is severed and a portion only appealed from, the appeal does not suspend the statute as to the portion from which no appeal was taken.[98] The issuance of execution on a judgment tolls the statute as to an action to enforce it.[99] A judgment against a widow and heirs, establishing a debt against a decedent whose estate had not been administered, tolls the statute as to such debt.[1] The statute is tolled where in a partition suit a party consents to a decree recognizing a lien on his interest in the tract.[2] Where a note and mortgage stipulate for an accelerated maturity of postponed payments in case of default of payment of taxes, on the mortgaged premises or earlier instalments of the debt, and default is made, the statute is started to run and is not tolled by the payment of taxes by a purchaser from the mortgagor who did not assume the mortgage.[3] The death of a co-mortgagor does not toll the statute as to the surviving mortgagor.[4]

§ 5. What is commencement of action. A. In general.[5]—An action is commenced by filing a complaint and the issuance of summons.[6] The filing must be bona fide[7] but the complaint need not be verified[8] and the summons need not be delivered to the sheriff for service.[9] A cause of action timely brought attaches timeliness as to the parties to all proceedings therein which do not assert a new cause

88. Bill alleging "divers persons" combined to defraud does not show a right to sue after the termination of the statutory period. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742.

89. See 4 C. L. 458.

90. See post, § 6.

91. Jurisdiction dependent on the amount in controversy is fixed by the ad damnum clause of the complaint. McLaury v. Watelsky [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 404, 87 S. W. 1045.

92. The commencement of an action in ejectment does not toll the statute as to a cause of action for the same land based on title subsequently acquired. Covington v. Berry [Ark.] 88 S. W. 1005.

93. Such action in equity did not lift the estate out of the probate court. Wallace v. Swepston [Ark.] 86 S. W. 398.

94. Where drainage commissioners recognize their obligation to alter a certain outlet. Kreiling v. Northrup, 116 Ill. App. 448.

95. Davis' Adm'x v. Davis [Va.] 51 S. E. 216.

96. An extension agreement executed by a mortgagor is binding on his subsequent grantee. White v. Krutz, 37 Wash. 34, 79 P. 495.

97. Woolwine v. Storrs [Cal.] 82 P. 434. Evidence held to show that a requested extension had not been granted and that there had been no written acknowledgment of the debt within the statutory period. Id.

98. Britton v. Matlock [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 55, 89 S. W. 1092.

99. Ackiss' Ex'rs v. Satchel [Va.] 52 S. E. 378.

1. Cates v. Field [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 52.

2. Moon's Adm'x v. Highland Development Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 209.

3. By payment of such taxes he did not waive his right nor estop himself to plead the statute against an action to foreclose. Snyder v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 970.

4. Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Boland, 145 Cal. 626, 79 P. 365.

5. See 4 C. L. 459.

6. The filing of the praecipe and the issuance of the summons. Colonial Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Ellinger, 112 Ill. App. 302.

7. Handing the clerk a petition with instructions to indorse upon it an entry of filing and to issue process but "to hold it" until further notice is not the filing of a suit or commencement of an action under Civ. Code 1895, § 4973, until the instructions are withdrawn. Jordan v. Bosworth [Ga.] 51 S. E. 755.

8. Under Ky. St., 1903, § 2524, providing that an action is commenced when the first process is issued in good faith and Code Civ. Prac. § 39, that it is commenced by filing the petition and causing a summons to issue, the petition need not be verified when filed. City of Dayton v. Hirth, 27 Ky. L. R. 1209, 87 S. W. 1136.

of action,[10] but where a mortgagee in foreclosing does not claim all the relief he is entitled to, he cannot, after the bar of the statute is complete, have a decree for the remainder.[11] If the record of appeal does not show the date of commencement of the action, it will be deemed commenced at the date of filing an amendment, which date appears.[12]

(§ 5) B. Amendment of pleading.[13]—An amendment founded on the same wrong and pleading the same substantial facts as the original complaint, but in different form,[14] or containing a re-statement of the cause in different terms,[15] or which eliminates needless particularity,[16] or corrects a defect in the original complaint,[17] or states additional reasons for defendant's liability,[18] or claims a different measure of damages,[19] and which does not change the cause of action originally relied upon,[20] for the purpose of limitations, relates back to the date of filing the original complaint; but one setting up a different cause of action,[21] or which sets up a claim not asserted in the original complaint,[22] or an amendment to a com-

9. Rich v. Scallo, 115 Ill. App. 166.

10. A supplement to a petition filed after the bar of the statute was complete held not to set up a different cause of action. Citizens' State Bank v. Jess [Iowa] 103 N. W. 471. Limitations do not run against the rights of non purchasing stockholders of a joint stock realty association to compel stockholders who had purchased assets of the association and their vendees to refund, during the pendency of a suit to wind up the affairs of the company. Randolph v. Nichol [Ark.] 84 S. W. 1037. A suit to foreclose a mortgage if timely commenced is not barred as to one who acquired title from the mortgagor who intervenes after the bar is complete. Less v. English [Ark.] 87 S. W. 447. A proceeding to revise a joint judgment is commenced when some of the plaintiffs have been made parties to the petition in error and have appeared and commenced as to all persons united in interest who have not been made parties. Snider's Ex'rs v. Young [Ohio] 74 N. E. 822. A reorganized corporation which has covenanted to save receivers harmless from liability incurred by them in the management of the road cannot plead limitation to an action on a judgment for injuries recovered in an action against the receivers. Baer v. Erie R. Co., 95 N. Y. S. 486.

11. Dubois v. Martin [Neb.] 99 N. W. 267.

12. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Love [Ark.] 86 S. W. 395.

13. See 4 C. L. 460.

14. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Zehner [Ind.] 76 N. E. 169. An amendment which differs from the original only in the allegations as to the manner in which the negligence took place, relates back. Town of Cicero v. Bartelme, 114 Ill. App. 9. Original complaint and amendment held not to allege that the accident complained of occurred at different places. Id. Amendment to a cause of action for negligence in so operating a street car as to collide with plaintiff held not to set up a different cause of action. South Chicago City R. Co. v. Kinmare, 216 Ill. 451, 75 N. E. 179.

15. Merchants Loan & Trust Co. v. Boucher, 115 Ill. App. 101; Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 112 Ill. App. 225.

16. Eliminates needless particularity in describing the tort complained of and the means adopted in effecting it. Hopkins v. St. Louis, B. & S. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 364.

17. Changing the name of the payee in a promissory note sued on. Ball v. Lowe [Cal. App.] 81 P. 1113. An amendment striking out the words "as executors" after the names of defendants does not set up a different cause of action. Kerrigan v. Peters, 108 App. Div. 292, 95 N. Y. S. 723.

18. City of Louisville v. Robinson's Ex'r 27 Ky. L. R. 375, 85 S. W. 172.

19. Scanlon v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 930.

20. A complaint alleging that one injured by the negligence of defendant was defendant's servant may be amended to allege that he was the servant of a third person. Herbstritt v. Lackawanna Lumber Co., 212 Pa. 495, 61 A. 1101. Where the original claim filed against a decedent's estate is based on a judgment and an amended one upon a check and money loan, such amendment relates back where it is made to appear that the original and amended claims pertain to the same transaction. Carter v. Pierce, 114 Ill. App. 589.

21. A complaint alleging certain acts of negligence cannot be amended after the period has elapsed by alleging other acts. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 214 Ill. 579, 73 N. E. 879. Amendment to a petition to enforce the payment of bonds held to set up a different cause of action. Roush v. Vanceburg, etc., Turnpike Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 542, 85 S. W. 735. A complaint alleging an unconditional promise to pay cannot be amended to allege a conditional promise. Rogers v. Byers [Cal. App.] 81 P. 1123. Does not relate back, and, though allowed, the statute may be set up. Serrell v. Forbes, 106 App. Div. 482, 94 N. Y. S. 805. An amendment bringing in new parties after the cause against them is barred cannot be allowed. City of Louisville v. Robinson's Ex'r, 27 Ky. L. R. 375, 85 S. W. 172. A new party defendant cannot be brought in by amendment after the statute has run. Anderson v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 80 P. 946. But see Snider's Ex'rs v. Young [Ohio] 74 N. E. 822, holding that a petition in error may be amended by adding names of persons who have been omitted and such amendment may be made after the limitation period has elapsed.

22. A complaint alleging negligence by plaint which did not state a cause of action,[23] does not, and, if filed after the statute has run, is open to demurrer.[24] Whether an amendment sets up a different cause of action is a question of law.[25] A reply filed after the bar is complete relates back to the commencement of the action.[26]

(§ 5) C. After nonsuit or dismissal.[27]—In many states it is provided by law that if an action fail otherwise than on the merits, a new action may be commenced within a prescribed period.[28]

§ 6. Postponement, interruption, and revival. A. General rules.[29]—Subject to the rule that "time does not run against the sovereignty"[30] the statutes are applied generally and in all cases where exception to their operation is not specifically made by statute,[31] and after they have once commenced, run over all subsequent disabilities and intermediate acts and events[32] unless otherwise expressly provided.[33] Disabilities cannot be tacked.[34] An apparent exception to the general rule is where a mortgagee or pledgee is in possession, the true reason being that there is no accrual of the cause of action to either party so long as the possession continues to be rightful.[35]

Revival of statute-barred causes[36] will not be read from a statute unless it is so provided in express terms.[37]

(§ 6) B. Trusts.[38]—The statute does not run in favor of the trustee of an ex-defendant's contractor cannot be amended to allege negligence by defendant. Fleming v. Anderson [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 266.

23. Strojny v. Griffin Wheel Co., 116 Ill. App. 550.

24. Clifford v. Thun [Neb.] 104 N. W. 1052.

25. Merchants Loan & Trust Co. v. Boucher, 115 Ill. App. 101.

26. State v. Coughran [S. D.] 103 N. W. 31.

27. See 4 C. L. 461.

28. Shannon's Code §§ 4025, 4026, 4027, 4028, providing that an action for injuries does not abate by the death of the injured person; that an action may be maintained by his widow, etc.; that if deceased had commenced an action it shall proceed without revivor,—do not create a new right of action in the widow but preserves to her rights under an action commenced by her husband and she can dismiss such action and commence another within one year under the provisions of Shannon's Code, § 4446. Stuber v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 305, 87 S. W. 411. The purpose of Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 4221, is to save to plaintiff in an action timely commenced, "a right to commence a new action, within one year if he fails in such action otherwise than on the merits for the same cause as the prior one and not for a cause accruing subsequent to the cause set forth in the original action. Hatchell v. Hebelsen [Okl.] 82 P. 826. Kirby's Dig. § 4381, expressly provides that if plaintiff suffers a nonsuit he may commence a new action within one year. This applies where the period is prescribed by contract. American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Noe [Ark.] 88 S. W. 572. It is a nonsuit within Rev. St. 1899, § 4285, declaring that a nonsuited plaintiff may maintain a new action within one year where dismissal results from failure to furnish additional security for costs. Wetmore v. Crouch [Mo.] 87 S. W. 954.

29. See 4 C. L. 447, n. 5 et seq.

30. See ante, section 1.

31. See post, § 3. Act of 1895, c. 82, § 7, does not apply to an action by a contractor to enforce a mechanic's lien. Central Bldg. Co. v. Karr Supply Co., 115 Ill. App. 610. Prohibition from enforcing a judgment because the lands on which it is a lien are exempt does not suspend the operation of the statute. Ackiss' Ex'rs v. Satchel [Va.] 52 S. E. 378. Failure to appoint an administrator of the estate of a deceased mortgagor and debtor does not prevent the statute running in favor of the mortgagor's heirs against an action to foreclose. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Flemington [N. D.] 103 N. W. 929.

32. That a wife becomes subrogated to the rights of a mortgagee of her husband's land does not suspend the operation of the statute which had already begun, as to the right to foreclose. Charmley v. Charmley [Wis.] 103 N. W. 1106.

33. Ky. St. 1903, § 2552, providing that the period prescribed as to sureties shall not include time during which the surety hindered suit, applies where an executor of a surety induced a creditor to stay suit in reliance on the surety's promises. Hamilton's Ex'r v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093.

34. Disability of coverture cannot be tacked to the disability of minority. Franklin v. Cunningham, 187 Mo. 184, 86 S. W. 79. Elcan v. Childress [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 84.

35. See ante, § 3.

36. See 4 C. L. 462.

37. Laws 1896, c. 910, providing that an action to recover a local assessment which has been annulled by judgment may be maintained within one year from date of judgment, does not revive causes already barred. Dennison v. New York, 182 N. Y. 24, 74 N. E. 486.

38. See 4 C. L. 450.

press,[39] active,[40] or continuing[41] trust, until repudiation thereof by the trustee and notice brought home to the beneficiary.[42] The trusts intended by equity not to be affected by the statute are those technical and continuing trusts not at all cognizable at law,[43] hence the statute runs against an implied[44] or constructive trust.[45]

(§ 6) C. Insanity and death.[46]—The statute does not run against insane persons during the continuance of the disability[47] unless otherwise specifically prescribed by law.[48] Death does not toll the statute unless such exception is expressly provided,[49] but the death of a debtor may extend the period fixed by the general statute as to debts not barred at the date of his death.[50]

(§ 6) D. Infancy and coverture.[51]—Infants[52] and married women[53] are generally exempted from the operation of the statute, but the exemption rests upon express provision, not upon any fundamental doctrine of the law,[54] and a statute not expressly exempting them applies to them.[55] Coverture does not suspend the statute

39. Not against an express trust until it is repudiated and notice of such repudiation brought home to the beneficiary. Dawes v. Dawes, 116 Ill. App. 36. Not so long as the relation is acknowledged or the trust agreement exists. Stanton v. Helm [Miss.] 39 So. 457. Action to recover money left on deposit. Altgelt v. Elmendorf [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 41. One holding the bare legal title for the equitable owner. McCarthy v. Woods [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 405.

40. Not as against the right of one to recover from his financial agent and trusted advisor. Pierce v. Perry [Mass.] 75 N. E. 734.

41. Moore v. Idlor, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 19; Hitchcock v. Cosper [Ind.] 73 N. E. 264. Not as between partners. Altgelt v. Elmendorf [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 41.

42. Under Rev. Codes 1892, § 2763, prescribing a ten-year period for bills of relief in case of a trust not cognizable by courts of common law. Stanton v. Helm [Miss.] 39 So. 457. When the trustee openly repudiates the trust and unequivocally sets up a right adverse to the beneficiary. Hitchcock v. Cosper [Ind.] 73 N. E. 264. Selling the trust estate with the full knowledge of the beneficiary and destroying a letter containing a recognition of the trust in his presence is a repudiation. Stanton v. Helm [Miss.] 39 So. 457.

43. The relation of a principal and an agent whose duty it was to collect and remit money is not after the relation has terminated such a trust as suspends the statute. Jewell v. Jewell's Estate [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1059.

44. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 N. C. 533, 50 S. E. 212.

45. Money placed in the hands of one to be delivered to another. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Folz, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 558.

46. See 4 C. L. 451.

47. Not in favor of one claiming under a deed executed by one mentally unsound, or mentally weak and under the undue influence of the grantor while such conditions exist. Howard v. Carter [Kan.] 80 P. 61.

48. Persons under interdiction cannot be prescribed against except in cases specifically prescribed by law. Sallier v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 114 La. 1090, 38 So. 868.

49. The four-year statute governing actions to set aside fraudulent conveyances is not tolled by the death of the fraudulent grantor. Lesieur v. Simon [Neb.] 103 N. W. 302.

50. Where notice of the qualification of executors has not been given until the general statute has run. Alice E. Min. Co. v. Blandon, 136 F. 252. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 312, prescribing a four-year period for all actions on written contracts and § 353 providing that if a debtor die before the period expire an action lies against his representatives within a year after letters issued, where a debtor dies before the cause accrues the statute does not run until letters are issued. Heeser v. Taylor [Cal. App.] 82 P. 977.

51. See 4 C. L. 451.

52. Infants: Not against the right of infants to recover land. Vincent v. Blanton, 27 Ky. L. R. 489, 85 S. W. 703. Code Civ. Proc. § 375, suspends the running of the statute the operation of which has commenced where a right of action to assert title devolves upon an infant. Mills v. Thompkins, 47 Misc. 455, 95 N. Y. S. 962. Where at the time of the settlement of a guardian's account the ward was a minor, an action to recover an amount due from the guardian was not barred until ten years after his majority under Mansf. Dig. & St. §§ 4484, 4489. Wallace v. Swepston [Ark.] 86 S. W. 398. Where a record of appeal showed that certain parties were minors and it did not appear that others were not, the appeal will not be dismissed. Civ. Code Prac. § 745, providing that an appeal by persons under disability may be taken one year after such disability was removed. Mullins v. Mullins, 27 Ky. L. R. 1048, 87 S. W. 764.

53. Married women: Limitations as against married women can be established only by proof that the statute commenced to run prior to marriage, or has run since the disability of coverture has been abolished. Broom v. Pearson [Tex.] 85 S. W. 790. Not as against a married woman when the disability existed at the time the cause accrued. Franklin v. Cunningham, 187 Mo. 184, 86 S. W. 79. Not against married women during coverture. Hymer v. Holyfield [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 201, 87 S. W. 722.

54. Schauble v. Schulz [C. C. A.] 137 F. 389.

55. Rev. Codes N. D. 1899, § 3491a, applies as to the claim of a woman against her husband, where she is given a right of action against him.[56]

(§ 6) E. Absence and nonresidence.[57]—It is generally provided that absence or nonresidence shall suspend the operation of the statute,[58] but in order to have this effect it must be expressly so provided.[59] The absence must be continuous.[60] Such exceptions apply to an action to foreclose a mortgage,[61] but in some states the absence of the mortgagor, after he has parted with his title to the mortgaged property, does not prevent the statute from running in favor of his grantee.[62] The rule that a mortgagor's absence will not extend the time as against subsequent purchasers and lienors has no application to those who are antecedent,[63] and an attachment levy, though posterior in time, is reckoned as of the time of the claim on which it is founded.[64] Nonresidence does not suspend the statute if personal service may be had in the state,[65] but it is otherwise held in North Carolina, where it is said that the to causes of action in favor of infants. Schauble v. Schulz [C. C. A.] 137 F. 389. Code § 3447, contains no exception in favor of married women and is applicable to them. In re Deaner's Estate, 126 Iowa, 701, 102 N. W. 825. Rev. St. Utah, 1898, § 2870, prescribing the period within which to bring an action to set aside an executor's conveyance in probate proceedings runs during the minority of a complainant. Williamson v. Beardsley [C. C. A.] 137 F. 467.

56. In re Deaner's Estate, 126 Iowa, 701, 102 N. W. 825.

Note: By statute in several jurisdictions husband and wife are enabled, subject to certain restrictions, to make contracts generally with each other which will be enforced at law. Rice, Stix & Co. v. Sally, 176 Mo. 107; Bea v. The People, 101 Ill. App. 132; McDougall v. McDougall, 135 Cal. 317. But in some states it has been held that the common-law disability of a married woman to contract with her husband has not been abrogated by statutes enabling her to contract generally. Whitney v. Closson, 138 Mass. 49; Hendricks v. Isaacs, 117 N. Y. 411. In other states the common law has been relaxed only so far as to enable the wife to manage and enjoy her separate business or estate. Kedly v. Petty, 153 Ind. 179; Naylor v. Nincock, 96 Mich. 182. An interesting question has arisen under this legislation in states where married women are not expressly excepted from the operation of the statute of limitations as to whether the statute runs against a married woman's claim against her husband during coverture. The authorities are not in harmony on this point. In some jurisdictions it is held on grounds of public policy which discourages controversies between husband and wife that the statute will not run during coverture. Alpaugh v. Wilson, 52 N. J. Eq. 424; Barnett v. Harshberger, 105 Ind. 410; Beloit Second Nat. Bank v. Merrill, 81 Wis. 151, 29 Am. St. Rep. 877. In other states it is held as in the principal case that the statute will run from the time the right of action accrues. Sabel v. Slingsluff, 52 Md. 132; Muus v. Muus, 29 Minn. 115.—3 Mich. L. R. 586.

57. See 4 C. L. 452.

58. Absence from the state tolls the statute. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Flemington [N. D.] 103 N. W. 929. The departure from and establishment of a foreign residence tolls the statute, Rev. Codes 1899, § 5210, to the effect that absences of one year or more shall toll the statute refers to one who has not established a foreign residence. Paine v. Dodds [N. D.] 103 N. W. 931.

59. The exception provided by Rev. Code 1852, c. 123, § 14, does not apply to act May 28, 1897, limiting the time within which an action for personal injuries shall be brought. Lewis v. Pawnee Bill's Wild West Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 868. Burns' Ann. St. 1901 § 609 providing that judgments entered in an action in which service was procured by publication may be opened within five years is not subject to the exceptions contained in §§ 297, 298, that the period of disability or nonresidence extends the period until two years after the disability is removed. Hollenback v. Poston, 34 Ind. App. 481, 73 N. E. 162.

60. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 401, providing that if one against whom a cause of action has accrued departs from and remains continuously absent from the state for one year or more, such time shall not be counted, continuous absence is not interrupted by occasional visits to the state. Lawrence v. Hogue, 93 N. Y. S. 998.

61. An action to foreclose a mortgage on land is in personam and comes within Rev. Codes 1899, § 5210, excepting from the limitation period the time during which the person against whom the cause accrued is absent from the state. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915; Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Flemington [N. D.] 103 N. W. 929; Paine v. Dodds [N. D.] 103 N. W. 931. The exception in the Illinois statute relative to absence from the state applies to actions to foreclose a mortgage. Blakeslee v. Hoit, 116 Ill. App. 83.

62. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915 (Young, J., dissenting).

63, 64. Perkins v. Bailey, 38 Wash. 46, 80 P. 177.

65. Where the nonresident against whom the cause accrued has a local office or agency where process may be served. Green v. Snyder [Tenn.] 84 S. W. 808. A foreign corporation which maintains an office and agent in the state on whom service of process may be made is not a nonresident within Rev. St. 1899, § 4282, suspending the statute as against a debtor who was a resi-statutory requirement of a local agent was not intended to affect the exception.[66] One who asserts absence from the state has the burden of proving it.[67]

(§ 6) F. A new promise to pay, or acknowledgment of the obligation,[68] which in some states must be in writing,[69] tolls the statute or revives the cause already barred. Acknowledgment must be express, clear, direct, and unequivocal,[70] unaccompanied by any conditions or qualifications inconsistent with a promise to dent at the time a cause of action accrued and thereafter departed from the state. Sidway v. Missouri Land & Live Stock Co., 187 Mo. 649, 86 S. W. 150. A foreign corporation which has been doing business and has had an agent upon whom process could be served in the state during the entire limitation period, can avail itself of the statute. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915.

66. Nonresident insurance company, though summons may be served on the Insurance commissioners. Green v. Hartford Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 887.

67. Evidence insufficient. Ingersoll v. Davis [Wyo.] 82 P. 867.

68. See 4 C. L. 459.

69. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4294, the acknowledgment or promise must be in writing. Monroe v. Herrington, 110 Mo. App. 509, 85 S. W. 1002. A letter by an agent to his principal "I have used the money and want to turn out my property to make you all right" is a sufficient written acknowledgment of a debt to postpone the statute under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9740. Jewell v. Jewell's Estate [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1059.

To revive cause: Code Civ. Proc. § 395, providing that a written acknowledgment or promise to pay is essential is satisfied by a letter acknowledging liability on a bill rendered a third person. Serrell v. Forbes, 106 App. Div. 482, 94 N. Y. S. 805. Code Civ. Proc. § 395, is satisfied by a letter written in response to a statement of claim promising payment within a short time. Levy v. Popper, 94 N. Y. S. 905. Letter held to contain an unqualified admission. Walker v. Freeman, 110 Ill. App. 404. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 395, in order to take the items of a running account out of the operation of the statute, such items must be assented to in writing in a stated account. Delabarre v. McAlpin, 101 App. Div. 468, 92 N. Y. S. 129.

NOTE. What constitutes a writing within the statute: Letters written by the debtor to the creditor are generally the writings shown to prove the acknowledgment or new promise. Rumsey v. Settle's Estate, 120 Mich. 372, 79 N. W. 579; Yarbrough v. Gilland, 77 Miss. 139, 24 So. 170. In Liberman v. Gurensky, 27 Wash. 410, 67 P. 998, it was held that the writing is sufficient if written at the direction of the debtor, even though not signed by him personally. And in Re Deep River Nat. Bank, 73 Conn. 341, 47 A. 675, a letter dictated to a stenographer, typewritten by the latter and signed with the name of the dictator by means of a rubber stamp, was held to be a writing signed by the person dictating the letter. In Barnard v. Bartholomew, 22 Pick. [Mass.] 291, it was said that the amount of the debt or date of the letter need not be in the writing, but could be supplied by other evidence. In Goodrich v. Case, 68 Ohio St. 187, 67 N. E. 295, the payee of the note died, and the note being old, the maker at the request of the executor delivered a true copy of the note to him and the original note was thereupon destroyed. The court held that the substituted note was not a written acknowledgment of the old note nor a promise in writing to pay the same. In Hill v. Hill, 51 S. C. 134, 28 S. E. 309, letters were held to constitute a written acknowledgment of a debt due an estate, though addressed to the administrators as individuals, or though addressed to only one of two administrators. And in Manchester v. Braedner, 107 N. Y. 346, 14 N. E. 405, 1 Am. St. Rep. 829, an order drawn by the debtor in favor of the creditor, requesting a third person to pay the creditor a sum named in such order was held a sufficient acknowledgment under the New York statute. In Rowe v. Thompson, 15 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 377, it is held that there is a sufficient signing of an instrument, calculated to save the debt from the operation of the statute of limitations, if it is evident from any part of the instrument that the debtor named in it has given to it his assent. In Blanchard v. Blanchard, 122 Mass. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 397, there was an indorsement in the handwriting of the debtor, but not signed, of a payment of part of a promissory note. The court, however, held that it was not a sufficient writing to prevent the operation of the statute if no money or valuable consideration actually passed, even though it was orally agreed that the amount stated as having been paid be deemed a payment. In McLaren v. McMartin, 36 N. Y. 88, it was held that where the statute provides that the writing "be signed by the party to be charged thereby," the signing by any other party is not sufficient. In Stiles v. Laurel Fork Oil, etc., Co., 47 W. Va. 838, 35 S. E. 986, the court held that a stated account, not signed by the party, would not operate as an acknowledgment, and it also held that mere entries by a party in his own book of accounts would not constitute an acknowledgment which would defeat the statute. —From note to Warren v. Cleveland [Tenn.] 102 Am. St. Rep. 759.

70. Hazlett v. Stillwagen, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 114. A letter by an Indorser asking for the note and all the credits, and stating his understanding of the payments thereon held insufficient. Monroe v. Herrington, 110 Mo. App. 509, 85 S. W. 1002. A note shown by parol to be for unpaid interest on another note is not such a written admission as will satisfy Code § 3456, and revive a barred cause of action on the prior note. Kleis v. McGrath [Iowa] 103 N. W. 371. Statement by a debtor to a creditor that he did not have the money to pay but that his farm was big enough to pay the bill is not an acknowledgment sufficient to revive the debt. Schuchler v. Cooper [Del. Super.] 62 A. 261. Letters written by a debtor to the attorney of his creditor, referring to a note "will pay pay.[71] It must be such as if declared upon would support an action[72] certain as to amount[73] and certain as to the debt to which it applies.[74] The acknowledgment of a debt of gratitude, not a legal obligation, does not raise the bar of the statute.[75] A statute-barred obligation may be revived by an express promise to pay[76] or by a conditional promise with performance of the condition.[77] The giving of a promissory note constitutes a new promise,[78] but the giving of a new note for a portion of a debt does not toll the statute as to the right of action on the original note for the balance.[79] No new promise on the part of an assignor is to be implied from the act of an assignee in allowing a dividend out of the assigned estate.[80] An indorsement of a barred negotiable instrument revives it as to the indorser.[81]

(§ 6) G. A partial payment[82] tolls the statute and starts it running anew,[83] but it must be made with authority from the debtor;[84] hence, a payment by a joint maker of a note, from his own funds and without the knowledge of the other makers, tolls the statute as to him but not as to his co-makers.[85] Payment of interest by a life tenant, with a conditional fee in reversion, tolls the statute as to a right to foreclose a mortgage on the premises as to a contingent remainderman not in being.[86] The rule that a partial payment by a principal tolls the statute as to a surety applies only where principal and surety are jointly liable, and not where the surety is secondarily liable.[87] A payment on an open account tolls the statute as to all the items thereof.[88] Payments on, or renewal of, a note toll the statute as to the right to enforce a lien securing it.[89]

as soon as I can" and after offering a part in compromise "It's either that or wait until I get it" is sufficient to revive the cause under Comp. Laws § 2926. Cleland v. Hostetter [N. M.] 79 P. 801.

71. Hazlett v. Stillwagen, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 114.

72. "I enclose you check for $15. It is the best I can do for you at present" is insufficient. Bank of Union v. Nickell [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1003.

73. "To secure to H, as executor of the last will and testament of H the payment of whatever amount C may owe him as executor on such settlement" is not a new promise sufficient to remove the bar. Holley's Ex'r v. Curry [W. Va.] 51 S. E. 135.

74. Hazlett v. Stillwagen, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 114.

75. A legacy "in consideration of her care for my invalid mother," etc., does not imply a debt, but a bounty. McNeal v. Pierce [Ohio] 75 N. E. 938.

76. Walker v. Freeman, 110 Ill. App. 404. An appropriation act is a new promise and operates to revive a barred claim against the public. Galm's Case 39 Ct. Cl. 55.

77. Walker v. Freeman, 110 Ill. App. 404.

78. The giving of a due bill, in effect a promissory note. Dacovich v. Schley [C. C. A.] 134 F. 72.

79. Woolwine v. Storrs [Cal.] 82 P. 434.

80. Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Harris [Pa.] 61 A. 996.

81. An indorsement on a barred obligation payable in cotton. Conly v. Hampton [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 425, 87 S. W. 1171.

82. See 4 C. L. 459.

83. Brown v. Puller [Ark.] 88 S. W. 838. Partial payments on a note by indorsers which only extinguishes the debt pro tanto. Jefferson County Nat. Bank v. Dewey, 181 N. Y. 98, 73 N. E. 569. A payment on a note to one holding it for collection. Warnock v. Itawis, 38 Wash. 144, 80 P. 297. Where land is acquired by a partnership with firm funds and a mortgage thereon assumed by the firm and after dissolution it remains liable for firm debts, a partial payment by either partner tolls the statute as to all. McKee v. Covalt [Kan.] 81 P. 475. A payment on a note under direction from the maker. Walker v. Cassels, 70 S. C. 271, 49 S. E. 862.

84. Where a trustee in a trust deed containing a power of sale sells the land and applies the proceeds to the payment of the debt it does not toll the statute as to the original debtor (mortgagor) who had conveyed the land to one who assumed the mortgage. Regan v. Williams, 185 Mo. 620, 84 S. W. 959.

85. Old Dominion Min. & Concentrating Co. v. Daggett, 38 Wash. 675, 80 P. 839.

86. Pinkney v. Weaver, 115 Ill. App. 582; Id., 216 Ill. 185, 74 N. E. 714.

87. As where a principal on a note secured by a mortgage conveys the land to a grantee who assumes the debt, a payment of interest by such grantee does not toll the statute as to his grantor. Regan v. Williams, 185 Mo. 620, 84 S. W. 959. Payments made by the maker of a note do not toll the statute as to an action against an indorser on his independent contract of indorsement. Monroe v. Herrington, 110 Mo. App. 509, 85 S. W. 1002.

88. See 4 C. L. 458, n. 16 et seq. An open running account upon which payments have been made within the statutory period is not barred as to any of the items. Brazel v. Thompson Smith's Sons [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 599, 104 N. W. 1097.

89. Lien reserved in a deed to secure the purchase money. Hamilton's Ex'r v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093.

§ 7. Operation and effect of bar. A. Bar of debt as affecting security.[90]—There is a conflict of authority as to whether the bar of the principal obligation bars an action to foreclose the security,[91] and vice versa.[92] The better rule would seem to be that an action to foreclose a mortgage is a remedy distinct from the ones by which the personal obligation for the debt secured may be enforced and may be barred, even though the debt is not.[93]

(§ 7) B. Against whom available.[94]—All persons in privity to the parties are bound by the bar, thus, the bar of the trustee bars the beneficiary,[95] and the bar of a grantor bars his grantee.[96]

(§ 7) C. To whom available.[97]—Though the defense is a personal privilege, yet the rule does not apply where the statute bar of one action is pleaded as a mere fact in the predicate for the action at bar;[98] and a purchaser of land covered by a mortgage may set it off as against an action to foreclose, so far as the subjection of the land to the payment of the debt is sought.[99] One may be estopped to assert the bar of the statute,[1] but that the mortgaged premises are conveyed subject to the mortgage, and are the primary fund for the payment of the debt, does not

90. See 4 C. L. 463. See, also, Foreclosure of Mortgages on Land, 5 C. L. 1447 and exhaustive note on page 1448.

91. See 4 C. L. 463, n. 88 et seq.

That it does. Stone v. McGregor [Tex.] 87 S. W. 334; Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Stratton [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 887, 89 S. W. 1111; Ackiss' Ex'rs v. Satchel [Va.] 52 S. E. 378; French v. Bowling, 27 Ky. L. R. 639, 85 S. W. 1182.

That it does not. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915.

92. A mortgage is not barred so long as the debt secured is enforceable. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. McMurray [Iowa] 105 N. W. 361. Contra. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915.

93. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915; Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Flemington [N. D.] 103 N. W. 929.

94. See 4 C. L. 464.

95. See 4 C. L. 451, n. 52 et seq. Kirkman v. Holland [N. C.] 51 S. E. 856. Where the statute has run against the right of a city to collect taxes a plea that the application of the statute would affect the bondholders is without merit. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49. Where a life tenant (trustee) has the legal title, and is barred by limitations from recovering it, remaindermen in the equitable title are also barred. Johnson v. Cook [Ga.] 50 S. E. 367.

96. If the right to bring an action of forcible entry and detainer is barred as against the grantor, it is likewise barred as against the grantee. Weatherford v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Neb.] 104 N. W. 183.

97. See 4 C. L. 464.

98. In action to redeem from mortgage given as indemnity, the plaintiff may plead that the contract of indemnity is fulfilled by the bar of all liability covered by it. Morris v. Hulme [Kan.] 81 P. 169.

99. Blakeslee v. Holt, 116 Ill. App. 83.

1. As where an executor induces a creditor of the estate not to file his claims. Hamilton's Ex'r v. Wright, 27 Ky. L. R. 1144, 87 S. W. 1093. That a taxpayer's son and general agent is city attorney does not estop the taxpayer to plead the statute against a claim for city taxes, where collusion is not shown as between them. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49.

Note: A party may be estopped from relying on the statute. Davis v. Ramage, 23 Ky. L. R. 1420, 65 S. W. 340; Lamb v. Clark, 5 Pick. [Mass.] 193; Lenger v. Hazelwood, 79 Tenn. 539; Park v. Prendergast, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 566, 23 S. W. 535. Thus, where a grantee accepts a deed in which he assumes a mortgage (Christian v. John, 111 Tenn. 92, 76 S. W. 906), and where a toll road corporation ceases to operate its toll road, it cannot set up the statute as against the right of the original owner of the land to recover land on which it erected a toll house (Cynthiana, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Hutchinson, 22 Ky. L. R. 1233, 6 S. W. 378), and where payment is provided for out of a particular fund or in a particular way the debtor cannot plead the statute without showing that the particular fund has been provided or the method pursued (Davis v. Simpson, 25 Nev. 123, 58 P. 146, 83 Am. St. Rep. 57; Sawyer v. Colgan, 102 Cal. 283, 36 P. 580).

The fact that the party invoking the statute may have put it in motion by his own default in the performance of a contract is no obstacle to its operation (San Antonio, etc., Loan Ass'n v. Stewart, 94 Tex. 441, 61 S. W. 386, 86 Am. St. Rep. 864), but on the other hand it is said that the participant in the breach of a trust cannot plead it (Duckett v. National Mechanic's Bank, 86 Md. 400, 38 A. 983, 63 Am. St. Rep. 513, 39 L. R. A. 84). Thus, it is held that where a county misappropriates school funds it cannot set up the statute in an action for their recovery. Board v. State, 106 Ind. 531, 7 N. E. 254.

The plea will not be allowed where it would be inequitable and would perpetrate a fraud upon the creditor in the face of the oral promise not to plead the statute. Cecil v. Henderson, 121 N. C. 244, 28 S. E. 481; Bridges v. Stephens, 132 Mo. 524, 34 S. W. 555. In the same manner an agreement to arbitrate the claim may estop the debtor. Davis preclude the grantee from pleading limitations as a defense to an action to foreclose, though the debt is not barred.[2] A purchaser pendente lite cannot invoke the bar of the statute, which became complete between the date of commencement of an action and the date of the amendment to the pleading, making him a party.[3] An action barred as to one joint obligor may be barred as to all.[4]

§ 8. Pleading and evidence.[5]—The statute to be available as a defense must be pleaded.[6] This rule applies to contractual limitations,[7] and, as a general rule, must be pleaded by answer[8] but in equity,[9] or if the complaint shows on its face that the cause stated is barred,[10] it may be raised by general demurrer; and where a statute creating a right prescribes the limitation period, a defense that the period has elapsed is available, though not pleaded,[11] as is also an act which extinguishes the claim.[12] The plea must state facts showing that the cause is barred[13] in its entirety,[14] and if directed to certain items of an open account should go to the specific items against which it is claimed the statute has run.[15] The allowance during trial of an amendment setting up the statute rests in the discretion of the court.[16] A plea of the statute is not a technical plea of confession and avoidance.[17]

A complaint for an apparently barred cause must allege facts showing that it falls within an exception,[18] but though it shows upon its face that the cause is barred, it is not demurrable unless it also shows that the action is not within any of the exceptions to the statute;[19] and a complaint, not on its face showing that the cause

v. Dyer, 56 N. H. 143.—See note to Hopkins v. Clyde [Ohio] 104 Am. St. Rep. 746.

2. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 915; Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Flemington [N. D.] 103 N. W. 929; Paine v. Dodds [N. D.] 103 N. W. 931.

3. City of Louisville v. Jacobs, 27 Ky. L. R. 175, 84 S. W. 772.

4. Where in an action against joint defendants some of them successfully plead the statute a judgment dismissing the action will not be disturbed. Somers v. Florida Pebble Phosphate Co. [Fla.] 39 So. 61.

5. See 4 C. L. 464.

6. Kreiling v. Northrup, 116 Ill. App. 448; Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22. In an action for slander, evidence of slanderous words spoken, an action for which would be barred, is admissible. Dubois v. Robbins, 115 Ill. App. 372. In order to be available as a defense, the statute must be pleaded as required by Rev. St. 1898, § 2651. Stehn v. Hayssen [Wis.] 102 N. W. 1074.

7. A stipulation in a contract that an action thereon must be brought within a specified time must be pleaded as a defense. Gaston v. Modern Woodmen of America, 116 Ill. App. 291.

8. Not by demurrer or motion in arrest of judgment. Rich v. Scalia, 115 Ill. App. 166. Cannot be raised by demurrer. Mullins v. Mullins, 27 Ky. L. R. 1048, 87 S. W. 764.

9. May be pleaded by demurrer to a bill barred on its face. Wieczorek v. Adamski, 114 Ill. App. 161.

10. Ordinarily limitations as a defense must be pleaded but a complaint showing on its face that the cause stated is barred is demurrable. French v. Bowling, 27 Ky. L. R. 639, 85 S. W. 1182. Under B. & C. Comp. § 68, an objection that a complaint shows on its face that the cause of action stated is barred must be raised by demurrer, otherwise it is deemed to be waived. Ausplund v. Aetna Indemnity Co. [Or.] 81 P. 577. Whether this rule applies where the period is prescribed by contract is not decided. Id.

11. Code § 3836, providing for the recovery of double the amount of usurious interest paid if the action be commenced within two years. Tayloe v. Parker, 137 N. C. 418, 49 S. E. 921.

12. The Act of April 27, 1855, P. L. 368, limiting actions to recover a charge on land may be availed of though not specially pleaded. DeHaven's Estate, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 507.

13. A plea of the statute and facts rendering it applicable followed by an allegation that the action was not brought within the period prescribed after it accrued is sufficient. Tudor v. Ebner, 93 N. Y. S. 1067.

14. A general plea to a complaint containing counts not barred is not good. Meyers v. Meyers, 141 Ala. 343, 37 So. 451.

15. A plea that all the items are barred is not sufficient. Delabarre v. McAlpin, 101 App. Div. 468, 92 N. Y. S. 129.

16. Refusal is not an abuse of discretion. De Hihns v. Free, 70 S. C. 344, 49 S. E. 841.

17. If the plea is not good, plaintiff is not entitled to judgment on motion. Webber v. Ingersoll [Neb.] 104 N. W. 600.

18. Bill to foreclose a mortgage brought after the period has expired and not showing facts which would suspend the statute is barred. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Thomas [Miss.] 38 So. 770. If a complaint shows on its face that the cause of action stated is barred but alleges facts sufficient to excuse the delay, an answer pleading the bar is demurrable. Ausplund v. Aetna Indemnity Co. [Or.] 81 P. 577. If limitations is pleaded as a bar, the plaintiff, in order to avoid it by an exception in the statute, must specially allege it in his bill or reply. Pierce v. Perry [Mass.] 75 N. E. 734.

stated is barred, is not demurrable on the ground that a certain portion of the sum claimed was barred.[20] If fraud is relied on the complaint must allege fraud and the facts constituting it;[21] that it was committed by defendant or some one in privity with him;[22] that it was concealed from complainant by defendant or his privies;[23] that it was not discovered until within the statutory period before the action was brought;[24] and that it could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered sooner.[25]

One who asserts that the operation of the statute was prevented by disability has the burden of proving it.[26] When the cause sued on accrued in another state, defendant has the burden to show that it was barred by the statutes of such state.[27]

LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; LIQUIDATED DAMAGES, see latest topical index.

LIS PENDENS.[28]

General rule.[29]—A purchaser or creditor pendente lite acquires only such rights as his grantor[30] or debtor[31] had, and takes the same subject to all subsequent proceedings in the action,[32] and to the judgment rendered therein,[33] and the con-

19. Concealment of the cause attempted to be stated. Roberts v. Smith [Ind.] 74 N. E. 894.

20. Stapper v. Wolter [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 850.

21. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742. One seeking to avoid the bar on the ground of fraud must allege the facts upon which he relies and they must be sufficient to entitle him to relief. Boren v. Boren [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 48.

22, 23. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742.

24. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742. A pleading for relief on the ground of fraud must show that the fraud was not discovered until a time within the period of limitations. Waters v. Waters [Ga.] 52 S. E. 425; German Security Bank v. Columbia Finance & Trust Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 581, 85 S. W. 761.

25. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742. Complaint held insufficient to show that fraud had not been discovered until within the statutory period. Jones v. Rogers [Miss.] 38 So. 742.

26. Elcan v. Childress [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 84. Evidence of nonpayment, and the instrument evidencing the indebtedness, does not show that a cause of action barred on the face of the complaint is not barred and does not cure error in overruling a demurrer to the complaint. Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Boland, 145 Cal. 626, 79 P. 365. Where a complaint shows that the cause stated is barred the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the operation of the statute has been suspended a sufficient length of time to avoid the bar. Paine v. Dodds [N. D.] 103 N. W. 931.

27. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. 260, 87 S. W. 506.

28. Scope: Lis pendens in the sense of another suit pending as ground for abatement of an action, see Abatement and Revival, 5 C. L. 1.

29. See 4 C. L. 466.

30. Takes subject to the right of other parties to the suit. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Roberts, 103 Va. 661, 49 S. E. 984. A writ of possession will issue against a purchaser from a landlord pending a suit of ejectment against the tenant, the landlord having notice of such suit. King v. Davis, 137 F. 222.

31. Creditors of an insolvent corporation becoming such pending a creditors' suit against the corporation held entitled to participate only in such assets as remained after the payment of claims existing at the time the creditors' bill was filed. Atlas R. Supply Co. v. Lake & River R. Co., 134 F. 503.

32. Depositions of witnesses. Morris v. Linton [Neb.] 104 N. W. 927.

33. Purchaser of mortgagor pending foreclosure suit. Deskins v. Big Sandy Co., [Ky.] 89 S. W. 695. Mortgagee of property pending litigation which must necessarily determine the mortgagor's rights in the premises. Parrotte v. Dryden [Neb.] 102 N. W. 610. One who acquires title to, or a lien upon, or an interest in mortgaged real property after the commencement of a foreclosure suit is bound by the decree. Kaston v. Storey [Or.] 80 P. 217. One not a party to an ejectment suit but who went into possession of the premises after the suit was brought, held subject to removal under the writ of possession issued under the judgment for plaintiff, he not having clearly shown that he did not obtain possession from one of the defendants. Baum v. Roper [Cal. App.] 82 P. 390. The fact that ejectment does not lie for a mere easement or other incorporeal hereditament does not prevent an officer, in executing a writ of possession under a judgment in ejectment, from ousting from a track of land persons who are unlawfully using a right of way over the same under purchase from defendants in the ejectment suit pendente lite. King v. Davis, 137 F. 222. Where the holder of an independent title to land sued for in ejectment, not a party to the suit, acquired possession through purchase from defendants in the action pendente lite, although without actual notice, he sequences flowing therefrom,[34] irrespective of notice,[35] and whether or not he becomes a party to the action,[36] though he may be relieved from this burden by a subsequent payment thereof by or for the judgment debtor,[37] even though the judgment be kept alive by assignment.[38] In other words one who, pending litigation affecting property, assumes rights or liabilities toward such property, stands as though he were a party to the action.[39] Such a person, however, is only held chargeable with knowledge of the facts of which the record in the suit as it existed at the time of his purchase would have informed him, and he cannot be charged with knowledge of facts afterward brought into the case,[40] nor be bound by proceedings had therein and affecting the property after a final decree and which are beyond the jurisdiction of the court.[41] The doctrine of lis pendens applies only where a third person attempts to intrude into a controversy by acquiring an interest in the matter in litigation pending the suit;[42] consequently it does not apply where pending litigation concerning mortgaged property the mortgagee takes a new is subject to the execution of a writ of possession in favor of plaintiff in such action, notwithstanding his independent title has not been adjudicated. Id.

34. Purchaser of mortgagor pending foreclosure suit held to take subject to purchaser at foreclosure sale providing the latter bought on his own account and not for the mortgagor. Deskins v. Big Sandy Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 695. The interest of one who acquires title to, or a lien upon or an interest in, mortgaged realty after the commencement of a foreclosure suit is effectually cut off and barred by such decree, if a sale takes place thereunder and such sale ripens into a title by the execution and delivery of a sheriff's deed. Kaston v. Storey [Or.] 80 P. 217.

35. Tice v. Hamilton, 188 Mo. 298, 87 S. W. 497. The pendency of a suit to foreclose a mortgage is constructive notice to all parties of the rights claimed by defendant. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Thomas [Miss.] 38 So. 770.

36. Matteson v. Wagoner [Cal.] 82 P. 436; Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Roberts, 103 Va. 661, 49 S. E. 984.

37, 38. Boice v. Conover [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 159.

39. Where a foreclosure has been commenced and a lis pendens filed, a subsequent renter of the mortgaged property is not entitled to a crop planted by him and standing on the land on the day of sale. Tittle v. Kennedy [S. C.] 50 S. E. 544. Innocent purchasers pendente lite being bound by the record, a defective return of service of process is amendable against them. King v. Davis, 137 F. 222.

40. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Roberts, 103 Va. 661, 49 S. E. 984.

NOTE. Amendments to pleadings: It is also necessary, where the pleadings are filed, that they, at the time of a pendente lite transfer or encumbrance, disclose the fact that the property subject thereto is involved in the pending suit. A party acquiring an interest in property during the pendency of a litigation affecting it is not thereby charged with notice of any fact that a complete knowledge of the contents of such pleadings would not disclose to him or at least incite inquiry respecting. During the progress of a cause it may be found necessary to amend the pleadings to state some new cause of action, or to perfect a description of the property subject thereto, or to bring in new parties. Third persons are not charged with notice of facts brought before the court for the first time by the amendment of the pleadings made after they have acquired some interest in the subject-matter of the litigation. As to any new cause of action introduced by an amendment and as to property first described thereby, there is no lis pendens prior to the date of the filing of the amendments. Norris v. Ile, 152 Ill. 190, 43 Am. St. Rep. 233; Stone v. Connelly, 1 Metc. [Ky.] 652, 71 Am. Dec. 499; Jones v. Lusk, 2 Metc. [Ky.] 356; Clarkson v. Morgan, 6 B. Mon. [Ky.] 441; Dudley v. Price, 10 B. Mon. [Ky.] 88; Holland v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 16 R. I. 734, 8 L. R. 553; Wortham v. Boyd, 66 Tex. 401. An amendment may bring in new parties. If so, persons acquiring title from them prior to such amendment are not bound to the final judgment, and in those cases in which a notice is required to be filed or recorded in some public office, the bringing in of a new party renders necessary the filing of a new notice to affect purchasers under it. Marchbanks v. Banks, 44 Ark. 48; Curtis v. Hitchcock, 10 Paige [N. Y.] 399. It is sometimes necessary to plead facts occurring subsequently to the filing of the original complaint and answer. If the original pleadings disclosed the property affected thereby, it became subject to respond to the final judgment or decree, and if the substantial object of the suit is not changed by the supplemental pleadings, they do not render necessary the filing of any new notice of the pendency of the action. Stoddard v. Myers, 8 Ohio, 203; Gibbon v. Dougherty, 10 Ohio St. 365.—From note to Stout v. Phillippi Mfg. etc. Co. [W. Va.] 56 Am. St. Rep. 853, 867.

41. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Roberts, 103 Va. 661, 49 S. E. 984. Where a final decree of partition was rendered, held, a purchaser pendente lite was not bound by subsequent proceedings by which a part of the land was sold to pay the costs assessed against it. Id.

42. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co., 139 F. 661, quoting from Hopkins v. McLaren, 4 Cow. [N. Y.] 667-679.

mortgage in renewal and extension of the old one.[43] A lis pendens can have no effect beyond the purposes of the suit.[44] A suit affecting title to property in a Federal court is constructive notice of lis pendens with respect to all property in the district and division.[45] In Ohio the doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to sales of lands for taxes.[46] The fact that it was made pending litigation affecting the property does not affect the validity of the sale.[47] Purchasers pendente lite are proper parties to the action.[48]

Essential elements.[49]—The lis pendens is not commenced until the summons or subpoena has been served.[50] The action must not be for a mere money judgment.[51]

Property within the rule.[52]

Statutory lis pendens.[53]—The office of a lis pendens is to give notice to subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers,[54] and a statutory notice is generally required to be filed in some designated public office.[55] Under the statutes of most states it is generally held that where, at the time the notice is filed, the party entitled to the benefit of the lis pendens has equitable notice of rights outstanding under a superior unrecorded instrument, the statutory provision has no application;[56] but this rule does not apply where the instrument is inferior to the claimant's right.[57] In other words it only applies to cases where the claimant under the unrecorded instrument would not be affected if made a party to the action.[58] In New York a lis pendens may be filed in an action brought to recover a judgment affecting the title to, or the possession, use or enjoyment of, real property.[59] The Virginia statutory lis pendens has no reference to Federal courts sitting in the state.[60]

43. So held where mortgagee had no actual notice of suit. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co., 139 F. 661.

44. A purchaser pending a suit for the specific performance of a contract and for the confirmation of a partition, held entitled to attack a deed under which the plaintiff's children claimed, plaintiff having died and the suit being revived in the names of his children as heirs. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Roberts, 103 Va. 661, 49 S. E. 984.

45. Creditors' suit against an insolvent corporation. Atlas R. Supply Co. v. Lake & River R. Co., 134 F. 503.

46. Under Rev. St. 1892, § 2838, the lien of the state for taxes is paramount to all other liens, and under § 2880, the lien of the state is transferred to the purchaser at a tax sale; held, the purchaser's claim upon such lien is not affected by the fact that at the time of the sale a suit is pending to foreclose and extinguish the title of the owner, to which suit the purchaser is not a party. Security Trust Co. v. Root [Ohio] 74 N. E. 1077.

47. Mere knowledge by the purchaser at a partition sale of pending litigation does not invalidate his purchase so long as the decree for sale remains unrevoked. Tobin v. Larkin, 187 Mass. 279, 72 N. E. 985.

48. Suits to cancel notes and mortgage for fraud and to impose certain liens on the land. Matteson v. Wagoner [Cal.] 82 P. 436.

49. See 4 C. L. 467.

50. Courtney v. Henry, 114 Ill. App. 635.

51. The pendency of a bill in chancery, filed by an heir at law for the removal of the administration of the estate into chancery for distribution among the heirs, and not seeking to fix any lien, charge or incumbrance on the land, and on which an ordinary money decree is rendered, is not lis pendens so as to affect the title to land sold under execution issued on the decree rendered. Moragne v. Moragne [Ala.] 39 So. 161.

52, 53. See 4 C. L. 468.

54. The lien gained by creditors prosecuting a suit to set aside a fraudulent transfer by their debtor is created, as between the parties to the action, by the commencement of the action. Wahlheimer v. Truslow, 94 N. Y. S. 137.

55. Arkansas: Under Kirby's Dig. § 5149 in order to give an action to enforce the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land the effect of lis pendens, it is necessary to file a notice of the pendency of the action in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the land affected is situated. Steele v. Robertson [Ark.] 87 S. W. 117.

56. 2 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 4887 construed. Payson v. Jacobs, 38 Wash. 203, 80 P. 429.

57. Where defendant's claim under an unrecorded deed was subordinate to a mortgage, held, he was bound by a decree of foreclosure against his grantor in an action in which a lis pendens was duly filed. Payson v. Jacobs, 38 Wash. 203, 80 P. 429.

58. Payson v. Jacobs, 38 Wash. 203, 80 P. 429.

59. Code Civ. Proc. § 1670. Notice cannot be filed where a judgment was demanded in the nature of a mandatory injunction, requiring defendants to remove a brick wall on their premises which encroached on plaintiff's property. McManus v. Weinstein, 108 App. Div. 301, 95 N. Y. S. 724. It seems that a suit to enforce a vendee's lien is one brought to recover a judgment affecting the title, possession, use or enjoyment of the premises. Smadbeck v. Law, 94 N. Y. S. 797.

If there be any doubt as to the right to file the notice, the merits should not be decided on a motion to cancel it.[61]

Continuity of lis pendens.[62]—Even as against purchasers pendente lite claiming under the parties to the suit, a lis pendens is notice only when the suit is prosecuted in good faith and with all reasonable diligence and without unnecessary delay.[63] While a judgment or decree in a lower court against the right claimed does not necessarily and at once terminate the lis pendens, yet in order to retain the benefit thereof an appeal must be taken and prosecuted without delay and with such diligence as is required by the circumstances of the case.[64] Circumstances may render the full limit of the time for an appeal an unreasonable delay.[65] A voluntary abandonment or discontinuance of the action destroys the lis pendens.[66]

LITERARY PROPERTY; LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS; LIVE STOCK INSURANCE; LLOYD'S; LOAN AND TRUST COMPANIES; LOANS; LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS AND ASSESSMENTS; LOCAL OPTION; LOGS AND LOGGING; LOST INSTRUMENTS; LOST PROPERTY, see latest topical index.

LOTTERIES.

What constitutes.[67]—A lottery is a scheme for the distribution of property by chance among persons who have paid, or agreed to pay, a valuable consideration for the chance.[68] Statutes frequently forbid the issuing of obligations which are,

60. This largely because the Federal courts have no power to enforce the registration of the statutory memoranda. King v. Davis, 137 F. 222.

61. Suit to enforce vendee's lien, held lis pendens should not be canceled on motion, although it is not alleged that the vendee is in possession. Smadbeck v. Law, 94 N. Y. S. 797.

62. See 4 C. L. 468.

63. Voice v. Conover [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 159. See 4 C. L. 647, n. 41, 42.

64. Boice v. Conover [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 159.

65. Boice v. Conover [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 159. Three years delay held to bar right. Id.

66. Dismissal of that portion of a garnishment proceeding by which plaintiff demanded that the judgment be made a lien on real estate held to terminate the lis pendens. Bristow v. Thackston, 187 Mo. 332, 86 S. W. 94.

67. See 4 C. L. 469. See, also, Betting and Gaming, 5 C. L. 417; Gambling Contracts, 5 C. L. 1571.

68. Whether called a lottery, raffle, or gift enterprise, or by some other name. Gen. St. 1894, § 6576. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

Schemes held to be lotteries: Laws 1903, p. 9, c. 5106, § 19, licensing various slot machines and similar devices, will not be construed as licensing the operating of a slot machine in which the element of chance largely predominates, particularly in view of Const. art. 3, § 23, prohibiting lotteries. State v. Vasquez [Fla.] 38 So. 830. Suit club whose members contribute a certain sum weekly to a tailor and hold weekly drawings, the holder of the lucky number receiving a suit of clothes, held a lottery prohibited by Comp. Laws 1897, § 11,344, though members could withdraw at any time and receive credit on clothing purchased to the amount contributed by them. People v. McPhee [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 41, 103 N. W. 174. Company investing none of its funds, but distributing money collected from its patrons, less a commission, in accordance with priority in the number of a certificate given each of them, held to be engaged in a lottery business or in one in the nature of a lottery, where it appears that the priority of such numbers is determined by chance, and redemption is also dependent upon the chance of the company's solvency based upon the writing of new contracts and the lapsing of old ones. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556. Express company engaged in interstate commerce will not be compelled to carry them. Id. Guessing contest where part of the amount contributed by each person is used for subscription for newspaper, and balance is to be divided among those guessing nearest to the total vote cast for candidates for a state office at an election (Stevens v. Cincinnati Times-Star Co. [Ohio] 73 N. E. 1058), and a similar contest in which there is to be no subscription, and prizes promised are definite amounts, held within the condemnation of Rev. St. 1892, §§ 6929-6931, against lotteries and schemes of chance (Id.) Offering of premiums to persons holding coupons taken from packages of a cereal which would spell a certain word, each coupon bearing a certain letter, and a necessary letter being placed on only one coupon in 500. United States v. Jefferson, 134 F. 299.

Schemes held not to be lotteries: Contract requiring company to pay coupons attached to it, in accordance with a given table, during the time plaintiff was making certain monthly payments to it, it not appearing from the contract that the order of payment was based on any chance or hazard. McDonald v. Pacific Debenture Co., 146 Cal. 667, 80 P. 1090. The business of issuing trad-

by their terms, to be redeemed in numerical order, or in an arbitrary order of precedence without reference to the amount previously paid thereon.[69] One devoting his time to the business of selling lottery tickets, employing agents for that purpose, distributing winning lists, and paying prizes, is guilty of aiding and assisting in establishing a lottery business as an avocation or business in the state, though the drawings take place outside of the state.[70] The Federal statutes prohibit the carrying of lottery tickets and the like from one state to another.[71] An agreement between the holders of lottery tickets to divide their winnings is contrary to public policy and unenforceable.[72]

Policy.[73]—Statutes generally prohibit the establishment or operation of policy games.[74]

Indictment and prosecution.[75]—An indictment following the form of the statute is sufficient.[76] The usual rules as to evidence[77] and instructions apply.[78]

ing stamps, there being no element of chance, whether holder is required to select article to be given in exchange therefor when he receives the first stamp, or allowed to do so later. Ex parte Drexel [Cal.] 82 P. 429. Such a chance as the uncertainty in regard to the number of contracts that will be allowed to lapse or the number of new contract takers who will come into the scheme is not such a scheme as makes it a lottery. Attorney General v. Preferred Mercantile Co. of Boston [Mass.] 73 N. E. 669. Diamond leases, providing for redemption of contracts, etc., held not a lottery within Rev. Laws, c. 214, § 7, since money or property was not thereby disposed of with intent to make the disposal thereof depend upon, or connected with chance, by lot, dice, numbers, gain, hazard, or other gambling device. Id.

Note: A lottery is a scheme for the distribution of prizes by chance. State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 77, 84 Am. St. Rep. 818, 48 L. R. A. 775; State v. Kansas Mercantile Ass'n, 45 Kan. 351, 23 Am. St. Rep. 727, 11 L. R. A. 430. See, too, Ballock v. State, 73 Md. 1, 25 Am. St. Rep. 559, 8 L. R. A. 671; State v. Boneil, 42 La. Ann. 1110, 21 Am. St. Rep. 413, 10 L. R. A. 60; People v. Elliott, 74 Mich. 264, 16 Am. St. Rep. 640, 3 L. R. A. 403; note to Yellowstone Kit v. State [Ala.] 16 Am. St. Rep. 42-48. It has been said that the three essential ingredients of a lottery are consideration, prize, and chance. Equitable Loan, etc., Co. v. Waring, 117 Ga. 593, 97 Am. St. Rep. 177. That consideration is a necessary element, see Loiseau v. State, 114 Ala. 34, 62 Am. St. Rep. 84. For cases where investment schemes have been attacked as lotteries, see State v. Interstate Sav., etc. Co., 64 Ohio St. 283, 83 Am. St. Rep. 754; 52 L. R. A. 530; Equitable Loan etc. Co. v. Waring, 117 Ga. 599, 97 Am. St. Rep. 177.—From note to State v. Nebraska Home Co. [Neb.] 103 Am. St. Rep. 711.

69. Rev. Laws, c. 73, §§ 7, 8, prohibiting the issuing of such obligations, and providing for the forfeiture of the charter of any domestic corporation doing so, is constitutional. Attorney General v. Preferred Mercantile Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 669. Issuing of "diamond leases" held violation of this statute. Id.

70. State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377. Evidence held sufficient to justify conviction for aiding and assisting in making and establishing the business of a lottery. Id.

71. Coupons were placed in packages of a certain cereal each bearing a certain letter, and company offered premiums to persons holding those which would spell a certain word, a necessary letter being placed on only one coupon in 500. Held, that the scheme was a lottery and the coupons were within Act Cong. March 2, 1895, c. 191, 28 St. 963, Comp. St. 1901, p. 3178, prohibiting any person from causing to be carried from one state to another any paper, certificate, or instrument purporting to be or representing a ticket, chance, share, or interest in, or dependent upon, the event of a lottery, so-called gift concern, or other similar enterprise offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance. United States v. Jefferson, 134 F. 299. This is true notwithstanding the fact that the sales of such commodities in packages containing coupons may be lawful. Id.

72. Where establishment of lotteries and sale of lottery tickets is forbidden by statute. Crutchfield v. Rambo [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 950.

73. See 4 C. L. 470.

74. Evidence in prosecution for aiding and assisting "in making and establishing a policy as a business and avocation," in violation of Rev. St. 1899, § 2219, held sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Cronin, 189 Mo. 663, 88 S. W. 604.

75. See, also, Indictment and Prosecution, 4 C. L. 1.

76. Indictment under Rev. St. 1899, § 2219, held not objectionable for failure to describe in what manner a "policy" was made or established or what is meant by a "policy." State v. Cronin, 189 Mo. 663, 88 S. W. 604. Indictment need not charge how or in what manner defendant aided or assisted in maintaining or establishing lottery or what the lottery was. State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377. Indictment charging that defendant knowingly, willfully, and feloniously committed the acts charged need not also use the word "unlawfully." Id.

77. Tickets, sheets, and lists of drawings held sufficiently connected with defendant to make them admissible. State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377.

78. Instruction held not objectionable as assuming that defendant sold lottery tickets, where it is admitted that he did so. State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377.

It is unnecessary to use the word feloniously in an instruction pointing out the facts constituting the offense.[79] The verdict must be responsive to the issues presented to the jury.[80]

MAIMING; MAYHEM.

The indictment must allege that the act was willfully and maliciously done.[81]

MALICE; MALICIOUS ABUSE OF PROCESS, see latest topical index.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.[82]

In some states anyone maliciously depositing, exploding, or attempting to explode, any explosive at, in, under, or near places where human beings usually assemble, or which they frequent, with intent to destroy them or to injure, intimidate, or terrify any person, or by means of which any person is injured or endangered, is guilty of a felony.[83]

It is sufficient if the offense is charged in the language of the statute.[84] An indictment charging the damage resulting from the malicious destruction of property, in an amount in excess of that necessary to constitute a felony, also includes a charge of misdemeanor, and whether the offense is the one or the other depends upon the value of the property destroyed.[85] If the state in such case joins with the defendant in waiving a jury, it thereby abandons so much of the indictment as alleges a felony.[86]

The usual rules of evidence[87] and as to instructions apply.[88] Evidence of 79. Instruction held sufficient. State v. Cronin, 189 Mo. 663, 88 S. W. 604; State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377.

80. In a prosecution under Rev. St. 1899, § 2219, for aiding and assisting "in making and establishing a policy as a business and avocation," a special verdict finding defendant guilty of aiding and assisting in establishing a policy, but failing to find that he did so as a "business or avocation," and a judgment based thereon, are fatally defective. State v. Cronin, 189 Mo. 663, 88 S. W. 604; State v. Miller, 189 Mo. 673, 88 S. W. 607. Omission immaterial where defendant is found guilty as charged in the indictment. State v. Miller [Mo.] 89 S. W. 377.

81. An indictment charging that defendant made an assault on prosecutor, and then and there unlawfully and maliciously set fire to a cannon cracker held by prosecutor, which exploded and destroyed prosecutor's hand, held insufficient. Neblett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 85 S. W. 813.

82. Note: Malicious mischief is the wanton or reckless destruction of, or injury to, property. Flora First Nat. Bank v. Burkett, 101 Ill. 391, 40 Am. Rep. 209; State v. Foote, 71 Conn. 741; State v. Watts, 48 Ark. 56, 3 Am. St. Rep. 216; Commonwealth v. Williams, 110 Mass. 401.

This crime is distingulshed from larceny by the absence of lucri causa,—the intent to profit by the conversion of the property. State v. Hawkins, 8 Port. [Ala.] 461, 33 Am. Dec. 294; Pence v. State, 110 Ind. 95; State v. Pike, 33 Me. 361; State v. Leavitt, 32 Me. 183; State v. Weber, 156 Mo. 249; People v. Woodward, 31 Hun [N. Y.] 57; State v. Butler, 65 N. C. 309.

Malicious mischief is sometimes called "malicious trespass," but it is to be distinguished from the ordinary trespass in that it is both without color or pretense of right and without hope or expectation of gain. Dawson v. State, 52 Ind. 478; State v. Robinson, 20 N. C. 130, 32 Am. Dec. 661; People v. Smith, 5 Cow. [N. Y.] 259.

At the common law, as well as now quite generally by statutory provisions, malicious mischief extended to real property as well as to personalty. State v. Watts, 48 Ark. 56, 3 Am. St. Rep. 216; State v. Wilson, 3 Mo. 125; State v. Batchelder, 5 N. H. 549; Loomis v. Edgerton, 19 Wend. [N. Y.] 419. Consult the local statute.—From Bronson, Fixtures, § 112b, p. 398.

83. Malicious depositing and exploding of dynamite in a mine held within Act March 12, 1887, § 8 (St. 1886-87, p. 112, c. 195). In re Mitchell [Cal. App.] 82 P. 347. Evidence held sufficient to warrant committing magistrate in holding defendant for trial. Id.

84. Information charging defendant with wantonly and without right breaking down a fence in violation of Rev. St. 1899, § 1958, held sufficient, though it failed to describe the land on which the fence stood. State v. Gift [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 593.

85. Under Crim. Code § 192, making the offense a felony if the damage exceeds $15, and a misdemeanor if it does not. Dallman v. People, 113 Ill. App. 507.

86. Jury cannot be waived in case of a felony, but may be if offense is a misdemeanor. Dallman v. People, 113 Ill. App. 507.

87. Where evidence was circumstantial, held that the court properly confined witnesses, testifying to horse tracks near the scene of the crime, to a description of the ill-will on the part of the defendant toward the prosecuting witness,[89] and of his offers to pay for the damage inflicted, is admissible.[90] On a prosecution for maliciously serving and carrying away another's fruit trees, malice must be proved,[91] but proof that defendant intentionally injured or destroyed the property, without just cause or excuse, is sufficient, without proof that he was actuated by specific ill-will against the owner.[92] Cases dealing with the sufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction will be found in the note.[93]

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION AND ABUSE OF PROCESS.

§ 1. Nature and elements of the wrong. A. Malicious prosecution.[1]—A malicious prosecution is one that is begun in malice, without probable cause to believe that it can succeed, and which finally ends in failure.[2] An action for the tort is usually based upon a criminal prosecution,[3] but may be founded upon a civil action when instituted simply to harass and oppress.[4] Malice is the root of the action but standing alone, even when extreme, is not enough.[5] Want of probable cause[6] and termination of the proceeding against the plaintiff[7] must coexist.

(§ 1) B. Abuse of process[8] is the employment of process legally and properly issued for a wrongful and unlawful purpose which it was not intended by law to effect.[9] Probable cause,[10] malice,[11] or termination of the proceeding in which it ispeculiarities of the tracks and the corresponding peculiarities of the feet of defendant's horse. State v. Wideman, 68 S. C. 119, 46 S. E. 769.

88. Instruction as to effect of finding fruit trees, alleged to have been maliciously severed and carried away, on defendant's land, held proper when taken in connection with other instructions. State v. Roscum [Iowa] 104 N. W. 800.

89. To show motive. State v. Wideman, 68 S. C. 119, 46 S. E. 769.

90. Declarations that he did not commit the crime, but that he would pay the damages in order to end the lawsuit. State v. Wideman, 68 S. C. 119, 46 S. E. 769.

91. State v. Roscum [Iowa] 104 N. W. 800.

92. Instructions approved. State v. Roscum [Iowa] 104 N. W. 800.

93. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction for the malicious destruction of goods and chattels. Dallman v. People, 113 Ill. App. 507. On prosecution for malicious mischief in burning cord wood, held that denial of motion for a new trial, based on ground that evidence was not sufficient to support a verdict, was not an abuse of discretion. State v. Wideman, 68 S. C. 119, 46 S. E. 769.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction for maliciously pulling up, carrying away, and severing from the land of the owner, certain fruit trees. State v. Roscum [Iowa] 104 N. W. 800.

1. See 4 C. L. 471, Exhaustive monograph on the subject.

2. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495. Evidence held to show that defendant was the prosecutor in a criminal proceeding against plaintiff for receiving and holding stolen property, that such proceedings resulted in plaintiff's arrest and were terminated by dismissal of the indictment. Cook v. Pioskey [C. C. A.] 138 F. 273.

3. See 4 C. L. 472.

4. See 4 C. L. 473, n. 8, et seq.

5. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

6. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495. Probable cause and malice must coexist. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102; Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239.

7. Malice, want of probable cause, and termination of the action must coexist. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571.

8. See 4 C. L. 474, n. 15 et seq.

9. Complaint held to set forth a cause of action for malicious abuse of process in seizing goods under a distress warrant. Mullins v. Matthews [Ga.] 50 S. E. 101. Illegal and improper use of a writ of capias ad respondendum gives a cause of action but is no ground for quashing the writ. Powell v. Perkins, 211 Pa. 233, 60 A. 731.

sued[12] are not essential elements of the tort. A warrant valid on its face is not a defense.[13] Under a rule that malicious prosecution does not lie for the wrongful prosecution of a civil action, but the remedy is for malicious use of civil process, malice, want of probable cause, and termination of the action, are essential elements.[14] The malicious prosecution of a civil action in which neither person nor property was interfered with will not support the action.[15] Equity will restrain the unlawful use of process.[16]

§ 2. Responsibility of defendant for the prosecution or suit and his participation therein.[17]—A master is not liable for a prosecution instigated by his servant if such act is without the scope of the servant's employment,[18] and the master is not personally concerned in the proceeding;[19] but a corporation is liable for a prosecution instituted by a branch manager where the general officers are notified that such prosecution is unwarranted but state that the manager has full charge.[20] An attorney who on facts disclosed believes there is probable cause for a criminal prosecution and who in good faith advises the institution of proceedings, is not liable,[21] nor is an agent who at the command of his principal reveals information upon which a prosecution is based, but who takes no part in the proceedings.[22]

§ 3. The prosecution of the plaintiff.[23]—A void proceeding may be made the basis of the action,[24] but a contrary rule prevails in some jurisdictions.[25] Though

Mere participation in procuring an erroneous order is not a tort. The Eliza Lines [C. C. A.] 132 F. 242. Where there is no abuse of process in a suit in rem against a vessel for collision, the respondent vessel cannot maintain a cross bill for damages for seizure and detention. The Amiral Cecille, 134 F. 673.

10. Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015. A libelant who in good faith and on advice of counsel proceeds in rem against a vessel but fails to establish a maritime lien is not liable in damages. The Alcalde, 132 F. 576. Abuse of process is not shown where a landlord instituted summary proceedings against a tenant but discontinued them immediately on ascertaining that rent had been paid. Weeks v. Van Ness, 93 N. Y. S. 337. But see Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571, holding that probable cause is an essential element.

11. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571.

12. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571. An action for malicious abuse of process may be maintained before the action in which such process was issued has terminated. Mullins v. Matthews [Ga.] 50 S. E. 101; Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015.

13. Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015.

14. Mullins v. Matthews [Ga.] 50 S. E. 101, and cases cited.

15. Abbott v. Thorne, 34 Wash. 692, 76 P. 302.

Note: The jurisdictions in this country appear to be about evenly divided upon this question. Georgia, Iowa, Maryland, North Carolina, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin have adopted the English rule holding that the assessment of costs against an unsuccessful plaintiff in such an action is sufficient compensation for the injury suffered by the defendant. Such states ignore the important difference between the fixed statutory costs prevailing in this country and the more liberal and flexible English rule, leaving the assessment of costs largely to the discretion of the court. 2 Columbia L. R. 124, 3 Columbia L. R. 479, 498. On the other hand, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Tennessee and Vermont permit a recovery where it can be shown that the suit complained of was brought maliciously and without probable cause. For the historical development of this see Kolka v. Jones, 6 N. D. 461.—4 Columbia L. R. 516. See full discussion, 4 C. L. 472 et seq.

16. Where execution is being used to harass or where levied on land in which the judgment debtor has no interest. Barrell v. Adams, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 635.

17. See 4 C. L. 480.

18. A credit clerk has not by virtue of his position implied authority to criminally prosecute one for an offense against his master. Staton v. Mason, 94 N. Y. S. 417.

19. Staton v. Mason, 94 N. Y. S. 417.

20. The expenses of the prosecution were paid by the corporation. Nickelson v. Cameron Lumber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1059. Knowledge of a corporation that a prosecution instigated by its general manager was pending may be shown by evidence of interviews between the officers of the corporation and plaintiff's counsel. Id.

21. Nothing to show malice or bad faith in anything he said or did. Miller v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 183.

22. He was a mere passive actor. Miller v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 183.

23. See 4 C. L. 483.

24. One who wrongfully and without probable cause sues out an attachment is liable in damages for its levy, though it the latter rule prevail it does not follow that one injured has no remedy.[26] That the warrant for plaintiff's arrest was erroneous in that it did not give plaintiff's correct name,[27] or that the complaint contained a faulty description of the offense,[28] is no defense.

§ 4. Termination of prosecution in plaintiff's favor.[29]—The prosecution must have terminated in plaintiff's favor prior to the commencement of the action.[30] A prosecution may be regarded as terminated when it has been disposed of in such manner that it cannot be revived, so that the prosecutor, if he intends to proceed further, must institute proceedings do novo.[31] A nolle prosequi procured by the accused[32] or made in consequence of a compromise to which he was a party[33] is not such a termination as entitles him to maintain the action, but if such entry was the act of the prosecuting attorney induced solely by the advice of the court, it is.[34] Discharge by a grand jury is prima facie a termination.[35] Termination of the prosecution may be established by the docket entries therein.[36]

§ 5. Want of reasonable and probable cause.[37]—Want of probable cause is an essential element of the tort,[38] hence if admitted facts amount to probable cause, a verdict should be directed.[39] Probable cause is a reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in the belief that the accused is guilty of the offense with which he is charged.[40] It does not mean the want of any cause,[41] and does not depend upon the guilt or innocence of the accused,[42] but upon the want of any reasonable ground of suspicion such as would induce an ordinarily cautious man to believe in the truth of the charge.[43] The substance of all definitions of it is "a reasonable ground for belief."[44]

The question as to whether a certain state of facts exists is for the jury;[45] but issued from a court without jurisdiction. Ailstock v. Moore Lime Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 213.

Note: See 4 C. L. 484, n. 24, citing numerous authorities and stating that the weight of authority so prevails.

25. A void proceeding cannot be made the basis of the action. Forrest v. McBee [S. C.] 51 S. E. 675.

26. See Conversion as Tort, 5 C. L. 753; Trespass, 4 C. L. 1698.

27, 28. Cochran v. Bones [Cal. App.] 82 P. 970.

29. See 4 C. L. 485.

30. Schaefer v. Cremer [S. D.] 104 N. W. 468.

31. Dismissal of a criminal prosecution with costs against the prosecutor on his failure to produce evidence is a sufficient termination of the prosecution. Graves v. Scott [Va.] 51 S. E. 821.

32, 33, 34. Lamprey v. Hood [N. H.] 62 A. 380.

35. Wells v. Parker [Ark.] 88 S. W. 602.

36. The docket entries are admissible. Lamprey v. Hood [N. H.] 62 A. 380.

37. See 4 C. L. 489.

38. See ante, § 7.

39. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102; Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396. Where facts are sufficient to rebut the presumption of want of probable cause arising from the termination of the cause against plaintiff favorably to him, the court should direct a verdict for defendant. Carroll v. Central R. Co., 134 F. 684.

40. Price v. Denison [Minn.] 103 N. W. 728; Cook v. Proskey [C. C. A.] 138 F. 273. It is the knowledge of facts, actual or apparent, strong enough to justify a reasonable man in the belief that he has lawful grounds for prosecuting defendant in the manner complained of. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495. It is a deceptive appearance of guilt arising from facts and circumstances misapprehended or misunderstood so far as to produce belief. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

Probable cause held to exist where an agent of the humane society instituted a prosecution after an investigation. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102. Probable cause held to appear from plaintiff's own evidence. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396. Evidence held sufficient to show probable cause for prosecuting an action for infringement of a trade-mark and procuring a temporary injunction. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

41. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

42. Humphreys v. Mead, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 415. Probable cause does not depend on the actual state of the case in point of fact but upon the honest and reasonable belief of the party prosecuting. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

43. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495. It depends upon appearances deduced from known facts of such a character as to produce belief in the mind of a reasonably prudent man. Humphreys v. Mead, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 415.

44. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

the question of probable cause is one of law,[40] hence whether a certain state of facts constitutes probable cause is to be determined by the court,[47] and inferences to be drawn from undisputed facts or facts found by the jury to exist are inferences of law.[48] A contrary rule, however, was held in New York.[49] Leaving the question of probable cause to the jury is harmless where the question is rightly decided.[50]

The burden is upon the plaintiff to show[51] at least prima facie want of probable cause[52] and malice.[53] All evidence bearing on the question is admissible.[54] It is competent to show that acquittal was the result of a compromise.[55] Generally evidence of threats against the prosecutor not communicated to him until after he instituted the proceeding is not admissible,[56] but where the prosecuting witness himself testifies to an overt criminal act within his own knowledge, which is denied, corroborative evidence consisting of facts subsequently ascertained is admissible.[57]

Representations made by persons who have made an investigation or who have opportunities for knowledge may be probable cause,[58] but mere floating rumors are not.[59] The binding over by the committing magistrate to await the grand jury is prima facie but not conclusive evidence of probable cause.[60] A discharge by an examining magistrate is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause.[61] The acquittal of plaintiff is not conclusive evidence of want of probable cause,[62] especially where it is the result of a compromise,[63] and the rule that discharge or acquittal is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause does not apply where probable cause appears from plaintiff's evidence.[64]

An order for a temporary injunction is only prima facie evidence of probable 45. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239; Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

46. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

47. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239; Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396. The question of probable cause is a mixed one of law and fact; what facts exist and whether they are true is for the jury; whether they amount to probable cause is for the court. Cooper v. Flemming [Tenn.] 84 S. W. 801; Carroll v. Central R. Co., 134 F. 684. Instructing the jury to determine what belief a person of ordinary caution would have entertained from all the facts known to the defendant, upon a matter determinative of the question of probable cause, is erroneous. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Allen [Kan.] 79 P. 648.

48. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Allen [Kan.] 79 P. 648, and cases cited.

49. When a criminal prosecution is instituted and carried on without legal authority or justification, the questions of good faith and probable cause are questions of fact not of law. Long Island Bottlers' Union v. Seitz, 180 N. Y. 243, 73 N. E. 20.

50. Nickelson v. Cameron Lumber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1059.

51. Lansky v. Prettyman [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 120, 103 N. W. 538; Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239.

Evidence sufficient to show want of probable cause. Price v. Denison [Minn.] 103 N. W. 728. Evidence held to show want of probable cause for a charge of larceny preferred. McFadden v. Lane, 71 N. J. Law, 624, 60 A. 365. Evidence insufficient to show probable cause for belief that one received stolen goods with guilty knowledge. Cook v. Proskey [C. C. A.] 138 F. 273.

52. Cunningham v. Moreno [Ariz.] 80 P. 327.

53. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

54. Where want of probable cause is attempted to be shown by evidence that plaintiff had purchased the goods alleged to have been stolen from defendant's agents, it is competent for defendant to show that such articles had been stolen. Freeland v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 427, 50 S. E. 11. In proving want of probable cause plaintiff is not confined to facts he can affirmatively show were within the actual knowledge of defendant; he may prove such facts as he might have discovered by proper investigation and inquiry. Price v. Denison [Minn.] 103 N. W. 728.

55. Evidence not contradictory to the record is admissible for such purpose. Carroll v. Central R. Co., 134 F. 684.

56. Schroeder v. Blum [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1073. The inquiry as to probable cause goes back to the commencement of the action and relates to facts then known and as they then appeared. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

57. Schroeder v. Blum [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1073.

58, 59. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102.

60. Wells v. Parker [Ark.] 88 S. W. 602.

61. Shifts the burden to defendant to rebut it. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

62. Lansky v. Prettyman [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 120, 103 N. W. 538.

63. An acquittal in the prosecution against plaintiff which is the result of a compromise is not conclusive of plaintiff's innocence or want of probable cause. Carroll v. Central R. Co., 134 F. 684.

cause to begin a civil suit.[65] A judgment procured by undue means, such as fraud,[66] conspiracy, false testimony or subornation,[67] is not proof of probable cause.

§ 6. Malice.[68]—Malice is an essential element of the tort.[69] It may be inferred from zealous participation in the prosecution[70] or from want of probable cause.[71] The inference is one of fact.[72]

If probable cause is shown the question of malice is immaterial.[73]

§ 7. Advice of private counsel, prosecuting attorney or magistrate.[74]—That the prosecution was instituted on the advice of the prosecuting attorney[75] or private counsel of good standing[76] after a full and fair statement of all the facts known to the defendant[77] is a complete defense,[78] and where there are two prosecutions, one

64. Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

65. Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

Note: It is held by the United States supreme court that a final judgment of a court of superior jurisdiction is conclusive evidence of probable cause though reversed on appeal. Crescent City Live Stock Co. v. Butcher's Union, 120 U. S. 141, 30 Law. Ed. 614. Some states follow the same rule (Spring v. Besore, 12 B. Mon. [Ky.] 551; Griffis v. Sellars, 20 N. C. 315; Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. 243; Herman v. Brookerhoff, 8 Watts [Pa.] 240), and in Georgia it has been extended to an ex parte order granting an injunction and appointing a receiver pendente lite (Short & Co. v. Spragins, Buck & Co., 104 Ga. 628, 30 S. E. 810). In New York a judgment of a justice of the peace subsequently reversed on appeal is only prima facie evidence of probable cause. Burt v. Place, 4 Wend. [N. Y.] 591; Nickolson v. Sternberg, 61 App. Div. 51, 70 N. Y. S. 212. See, also, Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. [N. Y.] 290.—See Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

66. Allegations in a complaint for malicious prosecution held to show bad faith and dishonesty in procuring a judgment. King v. Estabrooks, 77 Vt. 371, 60 A. 84.

67. A conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction is not conclusive of probable cause where the judgment is subsequently reversed and appears to have been procured by undue means. Gilmore v. Mastin, 115 Ill. App. 46.

Note: A conviction procured by undue means, as by fraud, conspiracy, false testimony, or subornation, is not conclusive of probable cause. Womack v. Circle, 32 Grat. [Va.] 324; Blucher v. Yonker, 19 Ind. App. 615; Adams v. Bicknell, 126 Ind. 210; Phillips v. Kalamazoo, 53 Mich. 33; Ross v. Hixon, 46 Kan. 550; Lawrence v. Cleary, 88 Wis. 473; Murphy v. Ernst, 46 Neb. 1; Hartshorn v. Smith, 104 Ga. 235; Burt v. Place, 4 Wend. [N. Y.] 591; Spring v. Besore, 12 B. Mon. [Ky.] 551; Welch v. Railroad Co., 14 R. I. 609; Boogher v. Hough, 99 Mo. 183; Holliday v. Holliday, 123 Cal. 26; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523.—See Gilmore v. Mastin, 115 Ill. App. 46.

68. See 4 C. L. 498.

69. Gabriel v. McMullin, 127 Iowa, 426, 103 N. W. 355. Express malice must be shown. Freeland v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 427, 50 S. E. 11.

70. Where one applied to a magistrate for a summons, made oath to the complaint, employed counsel and by appearing to push the case. Cook v. Proskey [C. C. A.] 138 F. 273.

71. Cunningham v. Moreno [Ariz.] 80 P. 327; Merrell v. Dudley [N. C.] 51 S. E. 777; Humphreys v. Mead, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 415. In criminal prosecutions actual malice need not be shown. Price v. Denison [Minn.] 103 N. W. 728. In the absence of either guilt or probable cause to charge guilt, a sworn accusation of larceny intentionally made as the basis of a criminal prosecution may reasonably be found to be malicious. McFadden v. Lane, 71 N. J. Law, 624, 60 A. 365.

72. The want of probable cause therefore is evidence of malice, the existence of which is to be determined by the jury. Humphreys v. Mead, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 415.

73. Bryant v. Kuntz, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 102; Scott v. Dewey, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 396.

74. See 4 C. L. 500.

75. That the prosecution was instituted on the advice of the prosecuting officer after a full and fair statement of all the facts known to defendant is a complete defense. Brinsley v. Schulz, 124 Wis. 426, 102 N. W. 918.

76. Advice of counsel on a full and fair disclosure is a defense. Cooper v. Flemming [Tenn.] 84 S. W. 801. A party who consults with competent legal counsel in good faith to ascertain what course to pursue in reference to acts done by another is not liable. Abel v. Downey, 110 Ill. App. 343. Advice of counsel based on full and fair disclosure is a defense. Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239.

77. The defendant must have stated all facts within his knowledge to the prosecuting attorney. Lansky v. Prettyman [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 120, 103 N. W. 538. In order to make the advice of counsel available by way of defense, it must be shown that the party gave to his counsel a full and fair statement of the facts within his knowledge, or which he had reasonable grounds to believe he could prove, and that he used reasonable diligence to ascertain the facts, and that he acted in good faith upon the advice received. Humphreys v. Mead, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 415. Advice of a justice is no defense where material matters known were not disclosed. Cochran v. Bones [Cal. App.] 82 P. 970. Testimony of one defendant that he fully stated all the facts to the prosecuting attorney and of another that he stated all facts within his knowledge is sufficient to show that all facts known were stated. Brinsley v. Schulz, 124 Wis. 426, 102 N. W. 918.

under an original and one under an amended complaint, advice of counsel as to the amended complaint is a defense pro tanto,[79] but advice of a magistrate[80] or other person not learned in the law[81] is not a defense, and advice of counsel is no defense if the prosecution was instituted and conducted to harass, oppress and coerce.[82] Whether defendant acted under advice of counsel[83] and whether he made a full and fair disclosure[84] are questions of fact. That the defendant made a full disclosure is not established by his statement of such fact as a conclusion.[85]

§ 8. Damages.[86]—The measure of damages depends largely on the nature of the prosecution.[87] For abuse of process without probable cause actual damages may be recovered.[88] Legitimate expenses incident to the suit and defense are proper elements,[89] and where malice is shown, punitive damages may be recovered.[90] Evidence of statements bearing on the question of special damages is not admissible unless it appears that such statements were made prior to the commencement of the action.[91] Instructions as to the measure of damages must be predicated on the evidence.[92]

§ 9. General matters of pleading and practice.[93]—The gist of the action is the tort charged, not the conspiracy alleged as part of the means employed in its commission.[94] A complaint for malicious prosecution must set out all the essential elements of the tort. Facts showing want of probable cause must be alleged,[95] and it must affirmatively appear that the prosecution has terminated in plaintiff's favor,[96] or that plaintiff was in some way deprived of his right to assert a de-

78. It shows absence of malice, and the existence of probable cause as a matter of law. Brinsley v. Schulz, 124 Wis. 426, 102 N. W. 918.

79. Error to exclude evidence of it. Schroeder v. Blum [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1073.

80. That defendant before beginning the prosecution made a full and fair disclosure to a magistrate and acted in good faith on his advice does not rebut the inference of malice arising from want of probable cause where it does not appear that the magistrate was learned in the law. Cook v. Proskey [C. C. A.] 138 F. 273.

81. Evidence of a police officer's advice held incompetent on the question of malice. Flynn v. Coolidge [Mass.] 74 N. E. 342.

82. Freeman v. Wright, 113 Ill. App. 159.

83. Wells v. Parker [Ark.] 88 S. W. 602.

84. Wells v. Parker [Ark.] 88 S. W. 602. Whether he made a full statement is a question of fact not of law. Lansky v. Prettyman [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 120, 103 N. W. 538.

85. Testimony should be as to facts stated to the prosecuting attorney and not that he told him all he knew about the case. Lansky v. Prettyman [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 120, 103 N. W. 538.

86. See 4 C. L. 503.

87. Damages for injuries to feelings may be recovered where replevin is wrongfully and maliciously sued out for the purpose of extorting money. Harris v. Thomas [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 239, 103 N. W. 863.

88. Where one sues out attachment with knowledge that nothing was owed him, want of probable cause is shown and actual damages may be recovered. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571.

89. In an action for wrongfully suing out attachment expenses in defending the suit, the value of plaintiff's time and the use of his team on trips to consult counsel relative to defense of the suit are elements. Tullis v. McClary [Iowa] 104 N. W. 505.

90. Where an attachment is wantonly, recklessly and willfully sued out for the purpose of coercing the payment of money not owed, malice may be inferred and punitive damages recovered. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571.

91. Where refusal of a third person to rent plaintiff a barn was asserted as an element, statements by such person tending to show that the prosecution was not the cause of his refusal. Flynn v. Coolidge [Mass.] 74 N. E. 342.

92. An instruction to give plaintiff whatever the jury thought would be fair compensation "and also whatever would reimburse him for any consequent expenses or losses" is too broad, and there being no evidence of such expenses or losses, is reversible error. Gilmore v. Kane [N. J. Law] 60 A. 181.

93. See 4 C. L. 505.

94. Allegations as to the conspiracy are surplusage. Gilmore v. Mastin, 115 Ill. App. 46.

95. Otherwise it is demurrable. King v. Estabrooks, 77 Vt. 371, 60 A. 84. A complaint alleging that a judgment against plaintiff was fraudulently obtained and that plaintiff was arrested thereunder is insufficient unless it shows facts constituting the fraud. Schofield v. Thackaberry, 115 Ill. App. 118.

96. A complaint from which it is not ascertainable that plaintiff was discharged by the magistrate or that he secured his liberty otherwise than by giving bail is insufficient. Schaefer v. Cremer [S. D.] 104 N. W. 468.

fense.[97] Allegations of facts from which malice and want of probable cause will be inferred are tantamount to specific allegations of malice and want of probable cause.[98]

An allegation of malicious seizure of goods by unlawful process is not an allegation of malicious excessive seizure and a nonsuit will be granted where the evidence shows lawful process but excessive seizure.[99]

The order of proof is within the discretion of the trial judge.[100]

The declarations of the defendant at the time he instituted the proceedings and accompanying the act are a part of the transaction and admissible.[101]

Instructions should be technically correct[102] and not misleading.[103]

MANDAMUS.

§ 1. Nature and office of remedy in general.[1]—Mandamus is a common-law[2] remedy to compel action;[3] injunction is the equitable remedy to prevent action.[4] But the remedies of mandamus and mandatory injunction are closely analogous.[5] While in most states mandamus is now considered a civil action, it is not a suit of a civil nature at law or in equity within the meaning of statutes regulating the removal of causes from the state to the Federal courts,[6] nor when brought against

97. Risser v. Liberman Bros., 102 App. Div. 482, 92 N. Y. S. 942.

98. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wakefield Hardware Co., 138 N. C. 174, 50 S. E. 571.

99. Lane v. Sayre Land Co., 211 Pa. 290, 60 A. 792.

100. Evidence of damages may be admitted before want of probable cause is shown. Cunningham v. Moreno [Ariz.] 90 P. 327.

101. A declaration of defendant to a justice at the time of applying for a warrant for arrest for larceny of a shovel that when defendant asked plaintiff to return the shovel, plaintiff used certain insulting language, held admissible. Merrell v. Dudley [N. C.] 51 S. E. 777.

102. An instruction that facts which existed prior to the institution of the criminal proceeding cannot be considered if they were unknown to prosecuting witness is erroneous where evidence thereof is admissible in corroboration. Schroeder v. Blum [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1073.

103. An instruction that malice may be inferred from want of probable cause or from "other circumstances" is not objectionable as requiring both a total want of probable cause and corroborating circumstances to show malice. Merrell v. Dudley [N. C.] 51 S. E. 777.

1. See 4 C. L. 506.

This section contains only the general rules, the specific applications to various duties being treated in the next section.

2. Is a common-law writ. Sedden v. McBride [Pa.] 60 A. 12. Is a legal action. State v. Ross [Wash.] 81 P. 865.

3. State v. Ross [Wash.] 81 P. 865; State v. Board of Com'rs [La.] 39 So. 842. It is a general rule that whenever a statute gives power to or imposes an obligation on a particular person to do some particular act or duty and provides no specific legal remedy for nonperformance, the court will, in order to prevent a failure of justice, grant mandamus to command the doing of such act or duty. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9.

4. See Injunction, 6 C. L. 6.

5. The right, if any, of the public to compel a railroad to maintain a station at a certain point is enforceable by mandamus; injunction will not lie. Jacquelin v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 18. See Injunction, 6 C. L. 6.

6. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State [Ind.] 76 N. E. 100.

county officials is it deemed a suit against a state within the inhibition of the Federal constitution.[7]

Mandamus was originally a prerogative writ and does not now issue as a matter of legal right,[8] but at the discretion of the court;[9] this discretion is a judicial one[10] and is exercised upon equitable principles.[11] The writ will not issue where it will introduce confusion or disorder,[12] or aid illegal acts or business,[13] or compel respondent to violate the law,[14] and in this connection it is the spirit of the law that is looked to.[15] Nor will a court ordinarily command the doing of an act which another court of competent jurisdiction has enjoined.[16] The proceedings must not have been tainted with fraud or corruption,[17] the relator's hands must be clean,[18] he must

7. Mandamus to compel county auditors and treasurers to levy a tax to pay a judgment on township bonds though such officers had been forbidden by the state legislature to exercise any such power. Graham v. Folsom, 26 S. Ct. 245.

8. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

9. People v. Rock Island, 215 Ill. 488, 74 N. E. 437; People v. Olsen, 215 Ill. 620, 74 N. E. 785; Clute v. Ionia Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 843; Sherwood v. Rynearson [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 395, 104 N. W. 392; Dancy v. Clark, 24 App. D. C. 487.

NOTE. Nature of writ: In the growth of the law of mandamus it must be conceded that the writ has come to be looked on more and more as a writ of right as contradistinguished from one of mere prerogative. When the King of England in his own royal person issued the writ from the King's Bench (People v. Common Council, 78 N. Y. loc cit. 61) it was a highly prerogative writ and necessarily and entirely one of discretion. Chief Justice Marshall in the great case of Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch [U. S.] 137, 2 Law. Ed. 60, borrowed and used approvingly Lord Mansfield's dictum in King v. Baker, 3 Burrows, 1266, thus: "This writ ought to be used on all occasions where the law has established no specific remedy and where in justice and good government there ought to be one." In State v. Cook, 41 Mo. 593 Judge Wagner overlooked or refused to follow the dictum of Lord Mansfield and held on authority that the writ could not cover a casus omissus. In State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. loc. cit. 140, 65 S. W. 720, the doctrine of the text of High, Extr. Leg. Rem. [3d Ed.] § 430, is adopted, treating mandamus as an ordinary writ of right, which issues as of course on proper showing made. The correct rule, deduced from modern practice, seems to be that mandamus, while no longer a mere prerogative writ, is yet somewhat of a discretionary writ and should be issued, not in the exercise of an arbitrary or capricious discretion, but in the exercise of a sound legal discretion in accordance with the established rules of law. 19 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law [2d Ed.] 751.—From State v. Gibson [Mo.] 86 S. W. 177, 181.

10. Shepard v. Oakley, 181 N. Y. 339, 74 N. E. 227, rvg. 102 App. Div. 617, 92 N. Y. S. 1145; McCarthy v. Boston [Mass.] 74 N. E. 659; State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556; State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152. Will be allowed only in furtherance of justice upon a proper case presented. State v. Barret [Mont.] 81 P. 349.

11. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

12. People v. Olsen, 215 Ill. 620, 74 N. E. 785. An order denying mandamus to prevent county clerk from extending taxes as provided by 4 Starr & C. Ann. St. 1902, p. 1125, c. 120 held proper where 70 per cent. of the work had been done and the granting of the writ would have required the preparation of new books at an expense of $125,000. Id.

13. Mandamus to compel a township clerk to certify the amounts due upon a county order given in payment for a road roller, denied where it appeared that the county supervisor had received compensation for his services in procuring the order for the machine. First Nat. Bank v. Clerk of Union Tp. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 461, 104 N. W. 771.

14. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556. Lottery concern held not entitled to have a writ of mandamus to compel a common carrier to carry certain packages. Id. Mandamus does not lie to compel the issuance of a salary voucher which has not been authorized or ordered issued by the county board as provided by statute. Knopf v. Corcoran, 112 Ill. App. 320. Mandamus will not lie on the relation of the county commissioners to compel the clerk to do an illegal act. State v. Stewart [Fla.] 38 So. 600. The erection of county bridges is regulated by statute and all the statutory provisions must be complied with in order to make the proceeding effective, particularly when it is sought to compel the county commissioners by mandamus to construct the bridge at the expense of the taxpayers. Commonwealth v. Baker, 212 Pa. 230, 61 A. 910. In proceedings under Act June 13, 1836 (P. L. 551), relating to the construction of county bridges, it is necessary to have the concurrence of the grand jury, the court and the county commissioners, which concurrence must be reasonably continuous; held where there was an interval of four years from the filing of the petition to the concurrence of the county commissioners, mandamus to construct the bridge would be denied. Id.

15. A court will not compel a technical compliance with the letter of the law, when such compliance will violate the spirit of the law. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

16. Mandamus will not issue to compel magistrate to issue a warrant for the arrest of certain persons, their arrest having been enjoined by an injunction issued against the

not have contributed to the condition of which he complains,[19] and he must have a clear legal right to the writ;[20] consequently the writ will be denied where relator shows that he is only entitled to partial relief without showing what part.[21] The act sought to be coerced must be one of absolute obligation on the part of the respondent,[22] the writ generally lying to compel the performance of an act which the law specifically enjoins and not to undo an act already done.[23] It is ordinarily held that the writ will not be granted unless its issuance will serve some useful legal purpose,[24] and be of some benefit to the relator;[25] but when it appears that a legal county attorney. State v. Snelling [Kan.] 80 P. 966.

17. If they have been the relief will be denied, however meritorious the application may be on other grounds. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

18. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556. Mandamus will not issue to compel a common carrier to accept packages offered it for transportation by a lottery concern. Id. An answer to an alternative writ to compel a telegraph company to sell and deliver to relator market quotations, held sufficient, it showing that defendant desired them for use in a bucket shop. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State [Ind.] 76 N. E. 100.

19. Where lessee of public land had lease canceled, and the land commissioner leased it to another, mandamus will not lie to compel the commissioner to reinstate the first lease on the ground that it was good for five years more. Nevell v. Terrell [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 100, 89 S. W. 971. Where an applicant for a writ of mandamus to compel a judge to dissolve a temporary injunction requested and procured the postponement of the trial of the injunction suit, he cannot procure the issuance of the writ on the ground of irreparable injury resulting from delay in the trial of the injunction suit. Chatfield v. Lenawee Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 284, 104 N. W. 45.

20. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556; State v. Malheur County Court [Or.] 81 P. 368; State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152; Lewis v. Union Drainage Com'rs, 111 Ill. App. 222; Knopf v. Corcoran, 112 Ill. App. 320; People v. Helt, 116 Ill. App. 391; Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633; Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9. Where premises had been formerly used as a poolroom, held, mandamus would not lie to compel telephone company to furnish service unless assured that it would not be used for illegal purposes. Cullen v. New York Tel. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 290. Mandamus to vacate an order denying a motion to quash a capias on the ground that the affidavit was not sworn to on affiant's personal knowledge denied where relator admitted that the facts shown by the records are true, but contested only the conclusion drawn by the affiant therefrom. Robinson v. Branch Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 623, 105 N. W. 25.

21. Mandamus will not lie to compel a city to appropriate to the payment of interest on bonds taxes collected indiscriminately for interest and sinking fund. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex. Civ. App.] 88 S. W. 536.

22. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556.

23. In the absence of a statute making it the duty of a county clerk to expunge from the register the name of a duly licensed dentist, mandamus will not lie to compel him to cancel a registration made by his predecessor in office on the ground that it was procured on an insufficient license and affidavit under Laws 1895, p. 418, c. 626. State v. Jacobs, 92 N. Y. S. 590.

24. Mandamus will not issue to compel the payment of a dormant judgment. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041. A party being entitled to appear and have a decree opened, mandamus will not issue to arrest the proceedings, though the original defendants, who were not necessarily entitled to appear, had been permitted to do so. Coffin v. Ontonagon Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 219, 103 N. W. 835. Where city charter required school tax to be levied on or before the second Monday in May, 1903, a petition for mandamus to compel a subsequent levy presents a mere moot question and is demurrable. Board of Education v. Common Council [Cal. App.] 82 P. 89. Mandamus will not issue where respondent performs the act sought to be compelled, before the writ is issued. Chemung Min. Co. v. Morgan [Idaho] 81 P. 384.

25. Dancy v. Clark, 24 App. D. C. 487. Mandamus does not lie where it appears that the relator has no right to the relief which it is his ultimate object to obtain, and that the writ will serve no purpose except that of enforcing a mere abstract right, unattended by any substantial benefit. De La Beckwith v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 496, 80 P. 717. Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to issue a certificate of incorporation under a name the use of which may be enjoined by an existing company. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42. Mandamus will not issue to compel clerk to deliver to petitioner certain testimony where respondent answered that he had let the solicitor for the circuit take the same and after diligent search, he could not find it. Gray v. Lindsey [Ala.] 39 So. 927. Mandamus will not lie to compel the state land commissioner to lease lands which he has already released. State v. Ross [Wash.] 81 P. 865. Mandamus to compel the fixing of a supersedeas bond on appeal by plaintiff in a suit to enjoin the destruction of certain buildings denied where it appeared that the buildings had already been destroyed. State v. Irwin [Wash.] 82 P. 420. The provision in Act April 7, 1903 (P. L. p. 733), authorizing the payment of a certain sum when a certain act shall have been judicially determined to be constitutional, authorizes the state comptroller to withhold his warrant on the state treasurer until it could be honored in order-

duty has not been performed, there is no abuse of discretion in issuing the writ, though it is doubtful if it will result in any substantial benefit.[26]

Other adequate remedy.[27]—Mandamus will not lie where there is a plain, specific, speedy, adequate remedy at law.[28] An equitable remedy does not bar the writ.[29]

Limitations and laches or delay.[30]—The right to the writ may be barred by limitations[31] or delay.[32] The question of laches or delay is dependent upon the facts of each case.[33]

§ 2. Duties and rights enforceable by mandamus. A. Judicial procedure and process.[34]—While mandamus will not issue to control discretion or revise judicial action,[35] it is the proper remedy to compel a court to proceed and try a cause when it refuses to do so upon the erroneous decision that it has no jurisdiction;[36]

ly course. Trustees of Rutgers College v. Morgan, 71 N. J. Law, 663, 60 A. 205. One applying for a writ of mandamus to compel a license board to reduce to writing the testimony taken on the hearing of an application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors must show, not only that he has a right to have the evidence reviewed in the district court, but that he intends to have it thus reviewed. State v. McGuire [Neb.] 105 N. W. 471. That a railroad occupying a street left a space sufficiently wide to fully accommodate public travel unobstructed is a circumstance to be considered by the court in exercising its discretion in granting or denying a writ of mandamus to compel the railroad to remove its structures from the street. People v. Rock Island, 215 Ill. 488, 74 N. E. 437. In such a case a writ of mandamus at the suit of a private relator suing as a citizen and taxpayer held properly denied. Id.

26. Mandamus to compel the United States Board of Labor Employment to register an applicant though the relator may possibly not receive any substantial benefit from such registration. United States v. Bowyer, 25 App. D. C. 121.

27. See 4 C. L. 509.

28. Wells v. Montcalm Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1001; State v. McGuire [Neb.] 105 N. W. 471; State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152; Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9. Will issue only when there are conditions of necessity or exceptional circumstances, where there would otherwise be a failure of justice. State v. U. S. Exp. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 556. In a controversy between a citizen and a school board all remedies provided by the school law of 1903 (P. L. p. 21) must be exhausted before he will be entitled to mandamus. Stockton v. Board of Education of Burlington [N. J. Law] 59 A. 1061.

29. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9.

30. See 4 C. L. 509.

31. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 338, subd. 1 and § 343, mandamus to require relator's reinstatement as a policeman brought nine years after his removal is barred by limitations. Dodge v. Board of Police Com'rs [Cal. App.] 82 P. 699. Where drainage commissioners recognized rights of owners to additional drainage and endeavored to secure it for them, held, limitations did not run against the right of the owners to compel the commissioners to supply the necessary drainage. Kreiling v. Northrup, 215 Ill. 195, 74 N. E. 123, afg. 116 Ill. App. 448.

32. Over a year's delay in applying for mandamus to settle a bill of exceptions held to bar right though the case was one of several in which defendants had agreed to be bound by the result in one. State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177. Mandamus by a holder of warrants issued in payment for the construction of a ditch, brought six months after abandonment of the project by the county commissioners, to compel the commissioners to levy a special assessment to pay the warrants, is not barred by laches. Espy Estate Co. v. Board of Com'rs [Wash.] 82 P. 129.

33. State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177.

34. See 4 C. L. 509.

35. Richland Drug Co. v. Moorman [S. C.] 50 S. E. 782. Mandamus to compel district judge to enforce injunction denied. Xavier Realty v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co., 114 La. 967, 38 So. 695. Mandamus will not lie to compel the court to set aside an order refusing to set aside a default. Gorman v. Calhoun Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 139, 103 N. W. 567. Mandamus will not lie to compel the court to vacate the conditions upon which it opened a default. Hallwood Cash Register Co. v. Mandell [Mich.] 102 N. W. 625. Circuit court cannot review by mandamus action of committing magistrate in refusing to punish a witness for contempt. Farnham v. Colman [S. D.] 103 N. W. 161. Mandamus does not lie to compel a court to issue a peremptory writ. State v. Board of Com'rs [La.] 39 So. 842. Mandamus will not lie to compel district judge to order the court stenographer to furnish certain testimony unless the stenographer be paid directly in cash. State v. St. Paul, 113 La. 1066, 37 So. 972. The discretion of probate judges as to the appointment of jail matrons cannot, in the absence of gross abuse, be directed or controlled by mandamus. State v. Robeson, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 5.

36. In the absence of apparent jurisdiction over a cause in any appellate court, the supreme court may compel the district court to reinstate a case dismissed for want of jurisdiction, it being manifest that the court has jurisdiction. Reynolds v. Carroll, 114 La. 610, 38 So. 470. Mandamus will lie to compel a trial court to hear and pass upon the merits of a motion which it has jurisbut assuming jurisdiction and proceeding with the cause, mandamus will not lie because an intermediate appellate court erroneously determines that the lower court had no jurisdiction,[37] nor will the writ lie to correct an erroneous assertion of jurisdiction.[38] Purely ministerial duties imposed by law[39] may be controlled by mandamus. The duty of the court must be clearly apparent,[40] and action must have been requested and improperly refused.[41] While a judicial officer can be compelled to move, proceed and take action in the performance of a duty under the law,[42] a court cannot be coerced by mandamus to enter a judgment or order on motion of counsel before it has sufficient time to be duly advised and satisfied as to the proper judgment or order to be entered.[43] It must be apparent that the writ will accomplish some good.[44] Mandamus will lie where there is no other adequate legal remedy,[45] as by appeal or writ of error.[46] Upon an appeal being diction to entertain, and which it declined to entertain on the sole ground that it had no such jurisdiction. De La Beckwith v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 496, 80 P. 717.

37. State v. Mosman [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 75.

38. Mandamus will not lie to correct an erroneous assertion of jurisdiction by a court. Roberts v. Lenawee Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 72, 103 N. W. 512. So held where judge refused to dissolve temporary injunction on the ground that there was equity in the bill. Id.

39. Mandamus allowed in garnishment proceedings to compel settlement and signing of case made. Cadillac State Bank v. Wexford Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 667. Writ lies to correct improper refusal of an appeal or supersedeas. Albright v. Territory [N. M.] 79 P. 719. Supreme court may issue a peremptory writ of mandamus directing the signing of a bill of exceptions after the expiration of the time therefor. State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177. Mandamus lies to compel a justice of the peace to approve an appeal bond, though there be an immaterial defect in the name of the proposed surety. Bundy v. U. S., 25 App. D. C. 459. Mandamus lies to correct an improper or unauthorized refusal to settle or certify a bill of exceptions. Miller v. American Cent. Ins. Co. [Cal. App.] 83 P. 289. Mandamus will lie to compel the probate court to grant letters of administration to the person designated by statute. State v. Guinotte [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 884. Nor is this changed by the fact that it required evidence to show the relationship of relator to deceased. Id. After a valid interlocutory decree of divorce has been entered a year the trial court may be compelled by mandamus to make and cause to be entered a final decree on refusal of an application therefor. Claudius v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257, 79 P. 897. Supreme court may compel circuit court to certify certain copies of lost or stolen indictments on sufficient proof of their authenticity. State v. Beadle County Circuit Ct. [S. D.] 104 N. W. 1048. Under Code 1896, § 4074, the duty of the court of probate to issue a tax deed is ministerial. Roach v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 685. A justice of the peace acts ministerially in presiding in an eminent domain proceeding, and his actions therein may be controlled by mandamus. Sullivan v. Yazoo & M. R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 33. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 731, providing for signing by an acting or succeeding judge, mandamus will not lie to compel a judge whose term has expired to sign a bill of exceptions. State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177.

NOTE. Mandamus as a remedy to compel the rendition, entry and correction of judgment, see Judgments, 6 C. L. 214.

40. Mandamus cannot issue to compel a magistrate to issue his warrant of ejectment against an alleged trespasser after five days' service of notice to quit, under Civ. Code 1902. § 2972, there being no evidence that plaintiff was the owner of the premises and defendant was a trespasser. Richland Drug Co. v. Moorman [S. C.] 50 S. E. 792.

41. Edinburg Coal Co. v. Humphreys [C. C. A.] 134 F. 839. Mandamus to compel a judge to enter judgment denied where it appeared that the hearing was pending and the court was at all times ready to dispose of the motion but no application therefor had been made; held, petition was premature. Presthus v. Gogebic Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 664, 105 N. W. 154. Mandamus to compel judge of district court to proceed to trial only lies where such judge improperly refuses so to do. Const. art. 5, § 6 and Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1000 construed. Dunn v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 665, 88 S. W. 532.

42. Richland Drug Co. v. Moorman [S. C.] 50 S. E. 792.

43. Alexander v. Moss [Ky.] 89 S. W. 118. See note Mandamus as a remedy to compel the rendition, entry and correction of judgment, Judgments, 6 C. L. 214. So long as the trial judge is permitted to sit in the case and is not required to vacate the bench in accordance with the statute, the court, on petition for mandamus to compel him to enter judgment in a cause, will not consider his private motives, nor his estimate of counsel in the case. Alexander v. Moss [Ky.] 89 S. W. 118.

44. Where after the jury had disagreed an information was quashed and it did not appear that a different result would be reached on another trial, held, mandamus would not lie to compel the court to set aside the order quashing the information. Clute v. Ionia Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 843.

45. Conceding that the superior court of one county has no power or discretion to order a change of venue in garnishment proceedings, mandamus is the proper remedy to compel it to proceed with the trial though it has ordered a change of venue. The fact taken from a nonappealable decree, mandamus can be awarded to vacate said decree if the matter complained of cannot be remedied by a final decree.[47] A judge may interpose as a defense grounds for the ruling complained of which he did not assign as reasons for the ruling when made.[48]

The writ of supervisory control[49] is one to be seldom issued and then only when other writs may not issue and other remedies are inadequate and when the acts of the court complained of as threatened will be arbitrary, unlawful and so far unjust as to be tyrannical.[50] The writ will not issue while the lower court is proceeding within and before it has exceeded its jurisdiction.[51]

(§ 2) B. Administrative and legislative functions of public officers.[52]—The writ lies only to enforce a purely ministerial duty.[53] In the absence of abuse[54] it that the proceedings may eventually reach the supreme court on appeal from the superior court of the county to which they have been transferred is not an adequate remedy. State v. Superior Ct. [Wash.] 82 P. 875.

46. Mandamus will lie to compel a nunc pro tunc entry of judgment. People v. District Ct. [Colo.] 79 P. 1014. Where, after defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings had been argued and submitted, the court dismissed the action without prejudice on plaintiff's motion, mandamus will lie to require the court to reinstate the cause and determine defendant's motion, as an appeal from a judgment of dismissal would not raise for review the question of defendant's right to such judgment. State v. District Ct. [Mont.] 79 P. 546. Mandamus will not lie to correct an order erroneously striking certain affidavits in support of a new trial from the files. Gay v. Torrance, 143 Cal. 169, 76 P. 973. Mandamus does not lie to compel a circuit judge to vacate an order dismissing an appeal from a judgment of a circuit court commissioner. Lemon v. Oakland Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 243, 103 N. W. 843. Mandamus will not lie to compel the circuit judge to vacate an order denying a motion for leave to file an amended declaration. Jones v. Mandell [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 463, 104 N. W. 692. The fact that two suits for divorce, one by the husband and the other by the wife, in which conflicting orders have been made, are pending in different circuit courts, is not ground for a writ of mandamus to settle the conflict in jurisdiction. Wells v. Montcalm Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1001. Mandamus will not lie to show cause why a default judgment should not be set aside, the court below ascertaining and retaining jurisdiction and relator claiming that the facts show want of jurisdiction. Valley City Desk Co. v. Wolcott [Mich.] 102 N. W. 651. The supreme court cannot, by mandamus, direct a judge of a lower court to vacate a decree dismissing a bill for want of equity, made in a regular manner in a case within the jurisdiction of the judge and which can be revised on appeal from the final decree. Ex parte Merritt [Ala.] 38 So. 183. A decree awarding affirmative relief to defendant, not being void and not embracing matters not in issue cannot be partially vacated on mandamus. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Kalkaska Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 951. Court cannot by mandamus vacate a part or the whole of a decree on the merits. Id. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 10,642, an order quashing a writ of garnishment and releasing the garnishee from further liability with costs to defendant is a final judgment reviewable on error and hence mandamus does not lie to review such order and to vacate the same. Recor v. St. Clair Circuit Judge [Mich.] 102 N. W. 643. Mandamus does not lie to determine the validity of an order appointing a receiver pending bankruptcy proceedings nor the effect of a subsequent order of dismissal. Edinburg Coal Co. v. Humphreys [C. C. A.] 134 F. 839. A motion to dismiss in opposition to an application for administration of estate of deceased contestant of a will, held to be, in effect, a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction and an order overruling the motion is not reviewable by mandamus. Roberts v. Lenawee Circuit Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 72, 103 N. W. 512.

47. Where an authentic transcript of the proceedings was before the court, respondent having spread a motion on the docket before the case was submitted, asking for a mandamus, rule nisi would issue to the lower court to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue commanding him to vacate the decree. Brady v. Brady [Ala.] 39 So. 237.

48. State v. Mosman [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 75.

49. See, also, Prohibition, 4 C. L. 1084.

50, 51. State v. District Ct. [Mont.] 81 P. 345.

52. See 4 C. L. 512.

53. Van Dorn v. Anderson [Ill.] 76 N. E. 53, afg. 117 Ill. App. 618. Where an executive officer refuses to perform a plain duty, unmixed with discretion, the remedy is by mandamus. Hager v. New South Brewing Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 608. Applicant being qualified and having complied with all prerequisites, mandamus lies to compel mayor and board of aldermen to grant liquor license. State v. McCammon [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 510. Mandamus will lie to compel borough council to examine and revise assessment list and duplicate and to return the corrected duplicate to the assessor. P. L. 1899, p. 534, and P. L. 1903, pp. 406, 410, §§ 19, 25 construed. Cooper v. Cape May Point [N. J. Law] 60 A. 516. A county superintendent of schools has no power to antedate a teacher's certificate and may be compelled by mandamus to date it correctly. Van Dorn v. Anderson [Ill.] 76 N. E. 53, afg. 117 Ill. App. 618. Mandamus will lie against a road disnever lies to interfere with a legitimate exercise of discretion by executive or administrative officers,[55] though it may lie to compel them to act in the premises and trict supervisor to compel him to keep his roads in repair. Burns' Ann. St. [1901] § 6818 considered. Rodenbarger v. State [Ind.] 76 N. E. 398. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 4194 the purchase price of road machines being payable out of the highway tax of the district or districts for which the purchases are made, mandamus lies to compel the proper authorities to perform the ministerial duties required of them in relation to a levy and collection of a tax to pay for the same. Pape v. Benton Tp. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 116, 103 N. W. 591. Under Tax Law (Laws 1896, pp. 847, 848, c. 908), §§ 150, 151, a county treasurer is subject to mandamus to compel bim to sell real estate on which taxes for three successive years remain unpaid. People v. Lewis, 102 App. Div. 408, 92 N. Y. S. 642. Mandamus held to lie to compel treasurer of school district to pay an order given for school supplies, the treasurer's answer stating that though a member of the school board giving the order he had no knowledge of any contract or resolution authorizing the purchase. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 490. Where proceedings for the construction of a ditch were abandoned, held, holder of warrants issued in payment of the work done could sue to compel the establishment of a ditch fund and the levy of assessments to pay the warrants. Espy Estate Co. v. Board of Com'rs [Wash.] 82 P. 129. Mandamus lies to compel county auditors and treasurers to levy a tax to pay a judgment on township bonds, although the corporate existence of the township has been abolished by the state constitution and its corporate agents removed. Graham v. Folsom, 26 S. Ct. 245. Mandamus lies against a drainage district to compel it to pay a judgment where it appears that in the suit in which the judgment in question was rendered, it was adjudicated, among other things, that the commissioners either had money on hand or had levied a tax more than sufficient to pay the same. Lewis v. Union Drainage Com'rs, 111 Ill. App. 222. Where the commissioner of the General Land Office erroneously treats relator's lease as void, mandamus will lie to compel relator's recognition as lessee. McDowell v. Terrell [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 115, 87 S. W. 668. Where articles of incorporation substantially comply with the statute, the secretary of state may be compelled by mandamus to file and record them. McChesney v. Batman [Ky.] 89 S. W. 198. Where congress has appropriated money to pay a finding of a court of claims, mandamus will lie to compel the treasurer of the United States to pay the same. Roberts v. Consaul, 24 App. D. C. 551. The members of the United States Board of Labor Employment are ministerial officers and their duty to register an application for employment does not cease to be ministerial because they rest their refusal of registration on the determination of a pure question of law involving the ascertainment of no fact whatever. United States v. Bowyer, 25 App. D. C. 121. Mandamus will lie where their refusal rests solely upon the ground that the applicant is not a citizen of the United States, although a resident of Porto Rico and owing allegiance to the United States. Id.

54. If, however, such judgment or discretion is abused or there is a mistaken view of the law taken as applied to the admitted facts of the case, the writ will issue to compel action according to law. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9. Discretion of drainage commissioners as to whether they would petition court for an assessment to clean out a drain. Bromwell v. Flowers, 217 Ill. 174, 75 N. E. 466; State v. Board of Dental Examiners, 38 Wash. 325, 80 P. 544. Allegations of fraud being unsupported by proof, held case was properly dismissed. Id.

Note: Even in such a case the action of the court is in reality based upon the assumption that the inferior tribunal has refused to exercise the discretion with which it is clothed, because, if it acts arbitrarily or fraudulently, or through unworthy or selfish motives, or conspires against the rights of individuals, under the law, and therefore against the law itself, it has not strictly, as is frequently said, "abused its discretion" —a term which is responsible for some confusion of ideas on this subject—but, in contemplation of law, it has not exercised its discretion at all, but has sought to substitute arbitrary and fraudulent disposition and determination of the question submitted for the honest discretion demanded by the law. In such cases the law will by mandamus compel the tribunal to act honestly and fairly, or, in other words, to exercise its discretion.—State v. Board of Dental Examiners, 38 Wash. 325, 80 P. 544.

55. City of Chicago v. People, 114 Ill. App. 145; Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9; State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152. Mandamus will not lie to compel the town board to give its consent to a contract proposed by the highway commissioner. People v. Early, 94 N. Y. S. 640. Mandamus will not lie to compel the return of money deposited to secure the performance of a city contract to the satisfaction of the director of public works. Commonwealth v. Philadelphia, 211 Pa. 85, 60 A. 549. Mandamus does not lie to compel board of commissioners to repair a bridge. Glenn v. Moore County Com'rs [N. C.] 52 S. E. 58. Under Acts 1874, p. 234, § 14, the board of education is vested with discretion in the allowanee of contractor's claims. Keefe Mfg. & Inv. Co. v. Board of Education [Colo.] 81 P. 257. Mandamus will not lie to compel drainage commissioners to petition the court for an assessment to provide funds for cleaning out a drain, where it is not shown that the refusal is an unjust discrimination against the landowner making the application. Bromwell v. Flowers, 217 Ill. 174, 75 N. E. 466. The state board of examiners not having authority to "entertain for a second time a demand against the state once rejected by it, unless such facts are presented as in suits between individuals, would furnish sufficient ground for granting a new trial (Pol. Code, § 670), mandamus does not lie to compel the allowance of a claim which the board has exercise their judgment and discretion.[56] The relator must have a clear legal right to the performance of a duty imposed by law,[57] and which the respondent has improperly refused to perform,[58] and such refusal must clearly appear.[59] A demand and refusal is sufficient to authorize the issuance of the writ.[60] The writ will not once rejected. Sullivan v. Gage, 145 Cal. 759, 79 P. 537.

56. Douglas v. McLean. 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9.

57. State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152; State v. Malheur County Ct. [Or.] 81 P. 368. Alternative writ of mandamus to compel county court to declare result of local option election held insufficient, it not alleging all the facts necessary to constitute a valid election. Id. Mandamus will not lie to compel recorder of deeds to record an invalid instrument. Dancy v. Clark, 24 App. D. C. 487. Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to file articles of incorporation not entitled to be filed. State v. Nichols [Wash.] 82 P. 741. The secretary of state is under no duty to file a certificate of amendment changing the name of a corporation so as to include the word "trust" in violation of Laws 1903, p. 367, c. 176, relating to trust companies. State v. Nichols, 38 Wash. 309, 80 P. 462. Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to issue a certificate of incorporation under the name of an existing corporation, which it is claimed is an undomesticated foreign corporation, where it is doubtful whether the existing concern is a foreign corporation or a mere partnership. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42. A city having repealed the ordinance granting an appropriation, mandamus will not lie to compel the city treasurer to make payments under the ordinance. Commonwealth v. Barker [Pa.] 61 A. 253. A highway commissioner cannot be compelled to incur expenses in repairing a bridge where there are no funds available for such purpose. People v. Early, 94 N. Y. S. 640. Mandamus will not issue to compel the state treasurer to pay a warrant issued by the auditor for stenographer's services after the exhaustion of the appropriation made by the legislature. State v. Barret [Mont.] 81 P. 349. Under Const. § 230 and Ky. St. 1903, §§ 138, 139, 143, 4001, subsec. 4, the state auditor cannot be compelled to draw his warrant for sums due the relator as clerk in his office during certain years, where the funds appropriated for such purpose had been expended, and no agreement on the part of the auditor so to do is binding on the state. Hager v. Shuck, 27 Ky. L. R. 957, 87 S. W. 300. Mandamus held to lie to compel district attorney to bring an action to have a certain named person declared to be illegally intruding into or unlawfully holding and exercising the office of parish superintendent of public instruction. State v. Theus, 114 La. 1097, 38 So. 870. Mandamus does not lie to compel Lee county to pay apportioned debts of counties from which it was created until the full apportionment is made by the commission appointed under 23 Stat. at L. 1194. State v. Durant [S. C.] 51 S. E. 146. Where excess taxes were paid by a mistake which was not discovered until claim for a refund was barred and an allowance was made by the county board, held, mandamus would not lie to compel county auditor to draw warrant therefor. Murphy v. Bondshu [Cal. App.] 83 P. 278. Writ denied where petitioner alleged that his salary had been fixed by law, and that he was entitled to mandamus to compel the board of estimate to fix his salary at that sum, but argued that the board had no power to fix said salary, as it had already been fixed by law. Hamburger v. Board of Estimate & Apportionment, 96 N. Y. S. 130. In the absence of a statute making it the duty of a county clerk to expunge from the register the name of a duly licensed dentist, mandamus will not lie to compel him to cancel a registration made by his predecessor in office on the ground that it was procured on an insufficient license and affidavit under Laws 1895, p. 418, c. 626. State v. Jacobs, 92 N. Y. S. 590. Where relator obtained a final order for the full contract price of a public drain, held not entitled to compel the certification of a special assessment roll to the supervisor of a township prior to the completion of the drain. Sherwood v. Rynearson [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 395, 104 N. W. 392. Petition to compel township treasurer to credit school district with amount of taxes collected should allege, among other things, that such school district has not received the full amount of such taxes to which it is entitled and that at the time of his refusal to make such credit he had sufficient proper funds to so do. People v. Helt, 116 Ill. App. 391.

58. Writ to compel register to issue letters of administration refused where hearing in probate proceedings had not been finished. Miller v. Henderson, 212 Pa. 263, 61 A. 913. An owner of property may, in a proper case, procure a writ of mandamus to compel the construction by the municipal authorities of a street which has been laid out adjacent to his property. Five years delay in constructing street held insufficient to warrant relief. McCarthy v. Boston [Mass.] 74 N. E. 659. The office of a mandamus is not to compel action by the building department in advance of the preparation and adoption of proper plans, but only to compel action when plans affording no legitimate ground of objection have been arbitrarily or unreasonably condemned. Hartman v. Collins, 94 N. Y. S. 63. Held erroneous to grant peremptory mandamus requiring the superintendent of buildings to approve certain plans without prejudice to his right to point out specifically any lawful requirements in respect to stairways, galleries or otherwise and require them to be complied with. Id.

59. Miller v. Henderson, 212 Pa. 263, 61 A. 913. Eleven years' delay without paying warrants held to show refusal. Espy Estate Co. v. Board of Com'rs [Wash.] 82 P. 129.

60. It is not essential that a judgment creditor of a drainage district shall first ascertain if there are sufficient funds in its treasury to pay his claim, and if such is the fact, to demand payment; but if such is not the fact, to demand a tax levy and then aftissue where relator has an adequate legal remedy,[61] or the performance of the duty will not accomplish some good purpose or have a beneficial effect.[62] It will not issue in aid of illegal acts.[63] The same general rules apply to licensing boards.[64] The duty being imperative, the fact that respondent acted in good faith is immaterial.[65] Mandamus will not lie to compel a general course of official conduct,[66] nor to determine upon which of several public officers rests the duty of performing a certain public function.[67] Though mandamus will not lie to try title to a public office, the mere fact that such title is incidentally involved will not bar relief when the writ is invoked to enforce a specific duty.[68]

The governor of a state constitutes one of the co-ordinate departments of the government and cannot be compelled by mandamus to perform any act which devolves on him as governor,[69] and this has been held to be true whether the act is ministerial, executive, or political,[70] though there is a conflict on this point.[71] A session of a state legislature having adjourned, it cannot be reconvened upon the mandate of the judicial power.[72] er the funds have been so raised, demand the money. Lewis v. Union Drainage Com'rs, 111 Ill. App. 222.

61. State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152. Mandamus will not lie to compel a tax assessor to place lands upon the tax rolls, where the lands have been previously sold to the state for nonpayment of taxes and they are not included in the lists of lands certified by the comptroller to the assessor for assessment, it not being shown that an application under the law has been made to the comptroller for relief. Id. Mandamus will not lie to compel a sheriff and city marshal to enforce the laws and prosecute violators thereof, Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 7252 providing a punishment for failing to do so. State v. Brewer [Wash.] 80 P. 1001.

Note: This last case is to be distinguished from the case of Moores v. State [Neb.] 99 N. W. 249, 4 C. L. p. 512, n. 51, in that the statutes of Nebraska require the mayor and chief of police of a city to actively interfere to prevent an open violation of the law.

62. Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to issue a certificate of incorporation under a name the use of which may be enjoined by an existing company. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42. Mandamus to compel board of commissioners to grant application to transplant oysters held properly denied if there was no territory within the county to which the application could apply. McIntosh County Com'rs v. Aiken Canning Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 585. Bill having been properly audited by county board of supervisors, mandamus to compel them to audit the bill will be denied. People v. Saratoga County Sup'rs, 94 N. Y. S. 1012. Where the governor of a state is a member of a board which cannot act except by the participation of all its members, mandamus will not lie to compel the other members of the board to act. State v. Frazier [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 319.

63. Mandamus to compel a township clerk to certify the amounts due upon a county order given in payment for a road roller denied where it appeared that the county supervisor had received compensation for his services in procuring the order for the machine. First Nat. Bank v. Clerk of Union Tp. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 461, 104 N. W. 771.

64. Mandamus does not lie where it is alleged that a licensing board has performed a judicial duty in an unfair and arbitrary manner to petitioner's injury. Board of Registration in Dentistry. Kenney v. State Board of Dentistry, 26 R. I. 538, 59 A. 932. Mandamus does not lie to compel the Board of Registration in Dentistry to produce for inspection the examination papers of a rejected applicant and to compel the issuance of a certificate to such applicant. Id. On mandamus to compel a state board of dental examiners to issue a license to relator, the determination of the credits to which relator's answers to the questions propounded were entitled held within the exclusive jurisdiction of the board. State v. Board of Dental Examiners, 38 Wash. 325, 80 P. 544.

65. Mandamus to compel common council of a village to accept a liquor dealer's bond. Power v. Common Council of Litchfield [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 484, 104 N. W. 664.

66. Mandamus will not lie to compel a sheriff and city marshal to enforce the laws and prosecute the violators thereof. State v. Brewer [Wash.] 80 P. 1001.

67. Held, mandamus would not lie to prevent mayor, city council and superintendent of streets to care for the public school houses. Fowler v. Brooks [Mass.] 74 N. E. 291.

68. Mandamus is maintainable to compel a state auditor to issue a warrant on the treasurer for relator's salary as superintendent of a water division, after relator's alleged improper removal from office. State v. Grant [Wyo.] 81 P. 795.

69. State v. Frazier [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 319.

70. Cannot be compelled to act on a board created by the legislature. State v. Frazier [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 319.

71. Mandamus will lie to compel the governor to approve pay rolls for the state guard. Cochran v. Beckham [Ky.] 89 S. W. 262.

72. French v. State Senate, 146 Cal. 604, 80 P. 1031.

Duties relating to allowance and payment of claims against municipalities.[73]—Ministerial[74] but not discretionary[75] duties connected with the payment of claims against a municipality may be enforced by mandamus. The relator must have a clear legal right,[76] and there must not be an existing adequate legal remedy.[77] Whether the duty to provide for the payment of the liabilities of a municipal corporation be specifically enjoined or whether it results from the general powers and nature of the corporation, it may, in all proper cases, be equally enforced by mandamus.[78] That no appropriation for the fund has been made, or if made has been lawfully exhausted, is a good defense.[79] One may in the same proceeding have his right to an office determined and enforce the payment of back salary.[80]

Duties of election officers and boards.[81]—The writ will not issue unless it will accomplish a beneficial result.[82] Mandamus will lie to compel committees of political organizations to act.[83]

Enforcement of right to public office.[84]—The right to an appointment being absolute, mandamus will issue.[85] It is also the proper remedy where one has been

73. See 4 C. L. 516.

74. Mandamus lies to compel the board of health of the City of Detroit to act on a bill presented to it for allowance or disapproval. Boyd v. Board of Health [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 135, 103 N. W. 605. Where water commissioners appointed under Laws 1900, p. 1119, c. 451, enter into a contract for the construction of a water plant, the duty of the town under the act to raise the money necessary for the payment of the plant under the contract may be enforced by mandamus in case of nonaction on the part of the town. Holroyd v. Indian Lake, 180 N. Y. 318, 73 N. E. 35, afg. 85 App. Div. 246, 83 N. Y. S. 533. Mandamus will lie at the suit of a claimant to compel a board of town auditors to make out and file with the town clerk the certificate of the rejection of the claim required by § 162 of the town law (Laws 1890, p. 1233, c. 569), as amended by Laws 1897, p. 619, c. 481. People v. Page, 105 App. Div. 212, 94 N. Y. S. 660.

75. Mandamus denied to compel award of pension to discharged police officer. McGann v. Harris, 114 Ill. App. 308.

76. Mandamus denied to compel award of pension to discharged police officer. McGann v. Harris, 114 Ill. App. 308. Mandamus will not be granted to compel municipal authorities to levy and collect a tax to pay an invalid judgment alleged to be held against the municipality. Meyer v. Jordan [Ga.] 51 S. E. 602. Where the right of a janitor of a public school building to an increased salary was controverted on questions of law and fact, mandamus will not lie to compel the board of education to put his name on the pay roll at the increased rate. People v. Board of Education, 93 N. Y. S. 300.

77. Where the right of a janitor of a public school building to an increased salary was controverted on questions of law and fact, mandamus will not lie to compel the board of education to put his name on the pay roll at the increased rate. People v. Board of Education, 93 N. Y. S. 300.

78. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9.

79. Mandamus will not lie to compel the superintendent of police of a city to pay a salary to an employe of his department, when the city council has made no appropriation for the salary. Fitzsimmons v. O'Neill, 214 Ill. 494, 73 N. E. 797, afg. 114 Ill. App. 168. Where the Constitution provided that public school certificates should be paid out of the proceeds of certain bonds, held mandamus would not issue to compel the issuing and sale of additional bonds to pay belated certificates issued by the city council after the exhaustion of the bond issue. State v. Board of Liquidation of City Debt [La.] 39 So. 448.

80. City of Chicago v. People, 111 Ill. App. 594.

81. See 4 C. L. 517.

82. Mandamus proceedings to require defendant to compare the vote and declare the result of an election are rendered unnecessary, so far as the merits are concerned, by the induction into office of the relator. State v. Frazier [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 319. Where it will not change the result, mandamus will not issue to compel the counting of the vote of a precinct illegally excluded. Gilliam v. Green [Ga.] 50 S. E. 137. Mandamus will not issue to require a clerk of the superior court to deliver certain ballots and voters' lists to named persons when it affirmatively appears that these ballots and lists are not in his possession. Id. Petition praying that superintendents of election be required to reconsolidate the vote of a county but not requiring that the precinct managers be required to return to the consolidating superintendents excluded ballots denied, the superintendents having no power to consolidate any votes except those returned by the precinct managers. Id.

83. Mandamus will lie to compel a county political committee to hold an election for committee members at the appointed time. In re Chester County Republican Nominations [Pa.] 62 A. 258.

84. See 4 C. L. 518.

85. Under Laws 1904, p. 8, c. 9, providing for preference of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors of the Civil War in appointment, employment and promotion, held such a person applying for a public office and being entitled to a preference over other applicants is entitled to mandamus to compel his appointment. Shaw v. City elected and qualified as a member of a governmental body but is denied the right to participate in the proceedings of such body, no other person claiming the office,[86] and this is true though relator has not received his certificate of election.[87] One being unlawfully denied the right to a hearing, mandamus will lie.[88] The relator's right must be clear,[89] and only beneficial relief will be decreed.[90] Though mandamus will not lie to try title to a public office,[91] the mere fact that such title is incidentally involved will not bar relief when the writ is invoked to enforce a specific duty.[92] The right of relator to his office may be adjudicated in mandamus to compel the payment of his salary.[93] Mandamus will not issue to prevent one's successor from performing the duties of the office on the ground that an ordinance under which relator and his successor were appointed was illegal.[94]

(§ 2) C. Quasi public and private duties.[95]—The remedy by mandamus is only effective to command the doing of an act which it is the corporate or official duty of the defendant to perform.[96] It will lie to compel public service corporations to perform their duty,[97] to compel a railroad to maintain a station at a certain point,[98] and is the usual and proper remedy for enforcing a decree of a railroad commission.[99] The grant of power to Federal courts to issue mandamus against a corporate common carrier to prevent discrimination necessarily embraces power to act on the officers in control of such corporation.[1]

It will lie to enforce the right of a stockholder[2] or director[3] to inspect the Council of Marshalltown [Iowa] 104 N. W. 1121.

86. So held where one was elected and qualified as a member of a borough council and entered upon the duties of his office and a majority of the council after reorganization has refused to permit him to take part in the proceeding. Commonwealth v. Fleming, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 404.

87. Where relator had been lawfully elected to fill a vacancy in a borough council. Commonwealth v. Fleming, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 404.

88. Petition alleging reduction in office and salary without a hearing held to require the issuance of an alternative writ. Shepard v. Oakley, 181 N. Y. 339, 74 N. E. 227, rvg. 102 App. Div. 617, 92 N. Y. S. 1145. Mandamus is the proper remedy to procure the reinstatement of an employe of the fire department of the city of New York removed by the commissioner without an opportunity to explain. People v. Hayes, 94 N. Y. S. 754.

89. In mandamus to compel the applicant's reinstatement as a police officer, an answer showing an admitted violation of a rule which, by another rule, was made ground for removal, held sufficient. People v. Lindblom, 215 Ill. 58, 74 N. E. 73. In order that a discharged patrolman may be entitled to reinstatement by mandamus, he must establish that at the time of his discharge he was an officer de jure. Moon v. Champaign, 116 Ill. App. 403.

90. Where petitioner's right to an office from which he was illegally ousted is not established until after the expiration of his term of office, the writ of mandate will direct the payment of his salary from the time of the ouster until the expiration of the term, but will not direct his recognition as an officer. Davenport v. Los Angeles, 146 Cal. 508, 80 P. 684.

91. Mandamus will not lie to compel county treasurer to determine which of two rival bodies were the legal directors of a school district. State v. Gentry [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 68.

92. Mandamus is maintainable to compel a state auditor to issue a warrant on the treasurer for relator's salary as superintendent of a water division, after relator's alleged improper removal from office. State v. Grant [Wyo.] 81 P. 795.

93. So held where question was whether a police patrolman was entitled to the office claimed by him under the Civil Service Act. City of Chicago v. People, 111 Ill. App. 594.

94. Cunningham v. Daly [Mass.] 74 N. E. 925.

95. See 4 C. L. 518.

96. Jacquelin v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 18.

97. Mandamus lies by an individual to compel water company to furnish him water. Robbins v. Bangor R. & Elec. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 136.

98. Mandatory injunction will not lie. Jacquelin v. Erie R. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 18.

99. Is the remedy provided by Civ. Code 1902, § 2119. Railroad Com'rs v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 641.

1. This power exists independent of Act Cong. Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, § 2, 32 Stat. 848, relating to interstate commerce. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

2. Writ granted minority stockholders. Neuhert v. Armstrong Water Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 123. Stockholder desiring to sell his stock held entitled to the right in order to obtain information to ascertain the value of his stock. Garcin v. Trenton Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1098. Stockholder who was induced to exchange valuable properties for stock held entitled to the writ on allegations of fraud. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398. Where relator in corporate books. The writ will not be granted for speculative grounds but only for reasonable purposes to protect the interests of the petitioner,[4] the right being largely dependent upon the facts of each case.[5] That the stockholder's holdings are small is no defense.[6] A written demand being deposited in the post-office with postage prepaid, it will be presumed to have reached its destination.[7] The petitioner being competent, a certified public accountant will not be appointed to conduct the examination.[8]

The writ will not be granted to enforce contractual rights.[9]

§ 3. Jurisdiction and venue.[10]—The court is without the power to issue its final process against a body not lawfully served with its original process and which has not submitted itself to its jurisdiction.[11] The jurisdiction of appellate courts is usually confined to the supervision of those courts over which they are immediately superior,[12] and they will not act as original triers of fact.[13] The writ is issued after a trial by the court and never in vacation by the judge,[14] though a court in vacation may issue restraining orders in aid of a pending mandamus suit.[15] In Georgia when a petition for mandamus nisi is presented to a judge of a circuit wherein the cause of action originated and the judge certifies that he is disqualified, the applicant may present his petition to a judge of any circuit in the state without consulting the presiding judge of the first circuit,[16] and the second judge assuming jurisdiction has power and authority to hear and determine the application at chambers, no question of fact being involved and the court in the county where the case arose not being in session.[17] This jurisdiction remains with such second judge, and passes to his successor[18] until the case is fully determined or until the judge of the circuit in which the case arose becomes qualified to hear and determine the same.[19] proceedings to compel inspection of corporate books alleged fraudulent misrepresentations by the president of the corporation, the return showing that the representations were made by the alleged party while acting for the corporation and not denying their falsity it is insufficient to prevent the issuance of the peremptory writ though it alleges that such third person had not been elected president. Id. Writ granted where stockholder claimed he was induced to buy his stock by the president of the corporation; that he had been unable to ascertain the condition of the corporation; that no dividends had been paid; that the corporation did not seem to be doing any business; and that no report had been made during the three years of the corporation's existence, although the president stated that he had told the petitioner that the corporation had lost money and that he had answered all reasonable inquiries and that the petitioner was hostile to him. In re O'Neill, 47 Misc. 495, 95 N. Y. S. 964.

3. A director of a corporation is entitled to a peremptory writ to examine the corporation's books of account, records, and papers. People v. Columbia Paper Bag Co., 92 N. Y. S. 1084.

4. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398. Stockholder who was induced to exchange valuable properties for stock held entitled to the writ on allegations of fraud. Id.

5, 6. In re O'Neill, 47 Misc. 495, 95 N. Y. S. 964.

7. Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 123.

8. Garcin v. Trenton Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1098.

9. City of Mt. Vernon v. State, 71 Ohio St. 428, 73 N. E. 515.

10. See 4 C. L. 520, 521.

11. Mandamus will not issue against a state senate which has adjourned and will be composed of different persons and will be a different body when it reconvenes. French v. State Senate, 146 Cal. 604, 80 P. 1031.

12. Under Const. § 7, articles 4 and 14, the supreme court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus directing a probate judge to enter a nunc pro tunc order granting an appeal to the circuit court, it being a matter exclusively for the circuit court. Featherstone v. Folbre [Ark.] 88 S. W. 554.

13. Where the allegation by an applicant for school lands that at the time of making the application he was an actual resident upon the land for the purpose of making it his home an issue of fact is raised which deprives the supreme court of jurisdiction. Gordon v. Terrell [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 320, 89 S. W. 1052.

14. Hager v. New South Brewing Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 608.

15. Order issued to restrain removal of county seat pending appeal. Reese v. Cannon [Ark.] 84 S. W. 793.

16, 17, 18. Glover v. Morris [Ga.] 50 S. E. 956.

19. The first judge being still disqualified and the second judge's decision being reversed on appeal it is the latter judge's right and duty to issue a decision in conformity with the mandate on appeal and it is not necessary for the disqualified judge to des-

A corporation is generally subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of a county wherein it transacts business.[20]

Federal courts.[21]—A Federal court has power to issue a mandamus only in the exercise of a jurisdiction to which it is an ancillary proceeding;[22] it has no jurisdiction of original proceedings seeking relief by mandamus.[23] Congress undoubtedly has power to change this rule.[24] A court cannot grant mandamus as ancillary to cases over which it has neither original nor appellate jurisdiction.[25] The jurisdictional amount must be involved.[26]

§ 4. Parties. A. Parties plaintiff.[27]—A writ of mandamus can be issued only on affidavit on the application of the party beneficially interested.[28] A private individual cannot maintain mandamus to compel the performance of a purely public duty, unless he can show some peculiar interest greater than that which he has with the general public.[29] One representing the real party in interest has only the rights of the latter.[30]

(§ 4) B. Parties defendant.[31]—All persons whose rights will be affected by the coercive proceedings are necessary defendants.[32] Other interested parties may be ignate him or to request that he continue to act in the case. Glover v. Morris [Ga.] 50 S. E. 956.

20. Court of common pleas of county where corporation has its plant and transacts most of its business has jurisdiction though the corporation's principal office is in another county. Acts June 8, 1893 (P. L. 345), and March 19, 1903 (P. L. 32). Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 123.

21. See 4 C. L. 520.

22. Large v. Consolidated Nat. Bank, 137 F. 168.

23. United States v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 197 U. S. 536, 49 Law. Ed. 870. 24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, does not alter the rule. Id.

24. See United States v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 197 U. S. 536, 49 Law. Ed. 870.

25. Supreme court of the United States. In re Commonwealth of Mass., 197 U. S. 482, 49 Law. Ed. 845; In re Glaser, 198 U. S. 171, 49 Law. Ed. 1000.

26. On an application to a federal court by a shareholder in a national bank for a writ of mandamus to compel the defendant to permit him to inspect its list of shareholders, the pleadings must show that the matter in dispute exceeds the value of $2,000. Averment that the plaintiff is the registered owner of 10 shares of the capital stock of defendant held insufficient. Large v. Consolidated Nat. Bank, 137 F. 168.

27. See 4 C. L. 521.

28. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5756. A rejected applicant for a lease of state land held not entitled to institute mandamus proceedings against state land commissioner to compel him to lease land. State v. Ross [Wash.] 81 P. 865.

29. Mandamus lies by an individual to compel a water company to furnish him water. Robbins v. Bangor R. & Elec. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 136. An owner of property may, in a proper case, procure a writ of mandamus to compel the construction by the municipal authorities of a street which has been laid out adjacent to his property. Five years delay in constructing street held insufficient to warrant relief. McCarthy v. Boston [Mass.] 74 N. E. 659. An owner of real estate abutting upon a street in a city of the second class, who is liable for paving assessments, has a special interest in the improvements that will enable him to institute a proceeding in mandamus, if his interest be involved. Carey Salt Co. v. Hutchinson [Kan.] 82 P. 721. The correctness of a canvass of the votes of a county being unassailed, a private citizen and taxpayer, in the absence of statute, is not entitled to mandamus to compel a second canvass on the ground that the original one was not made by the officers authorized by law. In re Scofield, 102 App. Div. 358, 92 N. Y. S. 672. An abutter, who, for a consideration, has granted to a railroad the right to use the street for railroad purposes, cannot, in his individual capacity, successfully maintain mandamus proceedings to compel the railroad to remove its structures from the street, but may, as a citizen, enforce by mandamus any right which the public has in the street, in which case his success in the proceeding is dependent on the continued existence of the public right. People v. City of Rock Island, 215 Ill. 488, 74 N. E. 437.

30. Attorney general, seeking to enforce by mandamus the payment of his stenographer's salary. State v. Barret [Mont.] 81 P. 349.

31. See 4 C. L. 522.

32. Mandamus to compel civil service commissioners to strike certain names from the list of eligibles for appointment to a certain office, one of the alleged ineligibles, who had been appointed to the position, is a necessary party defendant. Powell v. People, 214 Ill. 475, 73 N. E. 795. Proceedings to procure a peremptory writ of mandate against a water master, commanding him to distribute waters from a different stream from that named in the decree under which he is making distribution. Stethem v. Skinner [Idaho] 82 P. 451. Holders of refunding bonds held necessary parties where holders of unrefunded bonds sought to compel the application of taxes raised for the refunding bonds to the payment of interest on the unrefunded bonds. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex. Civ. App.] 88 S. W.

properly joined though they are not necessary.[33] The absence of a necessary party is jurisdictional,[34] hence the defect cannot be waived by any of the other parties,[35] and the writ will not issue until such person is made a party.[36] All whose duty it is to perform the act demanded may be made parties defendant though some of them may not have refused to act.[37]

§ 5. Pleading and procedure in general.[38]—Proper practice requires the pleader to state the facts growing out of a writing exhibited and upon which he relies as constituting a cause of action or defense.[39] Where the matter is collateral to the essential fact, it suffices to allege generally that an election was duly held, or that an officer was duly elected and qualified;[40] but where the fact itself must appear, it is insufficient to say that it has been duly performed.[41] Statutes govern the necessity and length of notice.[42] The various steps in the proceeding are treated in chronological order in the succeeding sections.

§ 6. Petition or affidavit.[43]—The petition must allege every material fact necessary to show that it is the plain duty of the party sought to be coerced to act in the premises.[44] Allegations on information and belief are no proof of the fact alleged, no grounds for the information or belief being stated.[45] The application must not have two functions one of which is the counterpart or converse of the other,[46] nor must its allegations be inconsistent.[47] As a general rule, the relator

536. A receiver in actual possession of the property of a traction company is a necessary party to a proceeding to compel it to accept a certain fare in exchange for carriage. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633. Under Code 1896, § 4074, a reputed owner of lands sold at a tax sale held not a necessary party to a proceeding by the purchaser to compel the judge of probate to issue a tax deed. Roach v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 685. In mandamus to compel county commissioners to establish a ditch fund and make a special assessment to pay warrants issued for the construction of a ditch, the county is a proper, though not a necessary, party. Espy Estate Co. v. Board of Com'rs [Wash.] 82 P. 129.

33. One who is president of a common carrier and of a coal company is a proper party to proceedings by a competitive coal company to stop discrimination by the railroad in the matter of supplying cars. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

34, 35. Powell v. People, 214 Ill. 475, 73 N. E. 795.

36. State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152.

37. In proceedings to compel the levy of a tax by a town to pay a judgment all of the officers whose action is necessary to the levy of such tax may properly be joined as defendants, although some of them may not have refused to act. McKle v. Rose, 140 F. 145.

38. See 4 C. L. 523.

39. Answer simply setting out contract in full held defective. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State [Ind.] 76 N. E. 100.

40. State v. Malheur County Ct. [Or.] 81 P. 368.

41. State v. Malheur County Ct. [Or.] 81 P. 368. Alternative writ of mandamus to compel county court to declare result of local option election held insufficient it not alleging all the facts necessary to constitute a valid election. Id.

42. Kirby's Digest §§ 4481, 5158 requires 10 days' notice after filing the petition before the motion for mandamus is made. Moody v. Rogers [Ark.] 85 S. W. 84.

43. See 4 C. L. 523.

44. People v. Helt, 116 Ill. App. 391. Petition to compel township treasurer to credit school district with amount of taxes collected should allege, among other things, that such school district has not received the full amount of taxes to which it is entitled and that at the time of his refusal to make such credit he had sufficient proper funds to so do. Id. A petition to compel county commissioners to order an election prayed for in a petition to them to order an election to repeal "existing stock law or stock laws" in a precinct held bad, the petition to the commissioners not showing what stock law is intended to be repealed or that any stock law actually exists in the precinct. State v. Lovejoy [Ala.] 39 So. 126. Also as showing that the stock district is only a part of a precinct and the prayer being for an election in the entire precinct. Id.

45. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2067, 2070, so held on an application for mandamus to compel the cancellation of tax sales, though opposed by an affidavit insufficient to raise any issue. People v. Grout, 94 N. Y. S. 1101.

46. Application for mandamus to restrain a state land commissioner from releasing certain land and to compel him to advertise a sale of a lease of the land to the highest bidder, on the ground that the re-lease was in excess of his legal authority is objectionable. State v. Ross [Wash.] 81 P. 865.

47. An averment of a petition for mandamus to compel the reinstatement of petitioner's name to the police pension roll, that the board of pension trustees found that petitioner's husband died from the immediate effects of an injury received by him in the discharge of duty as a police officer, is not overcome by a further averment of the petition that petitioner's husband may use the name of the state or of the United States[48] as a matter of course without resort to the intervention of the state or United States attorney, but the use of such name is not now held essential to the petition.[49] In proceedings to compel the inspection of corporate records it being impossible for the relator to know or tell what particular books or papers will furnish the information desired, it is sufficient if he states the object and purpose of the inspection and what he desires to know.[50] The general rules as to amendments apply.[51]

§ 7. Alternative writ.[52]—Where issues of fact are raised by denials of allegations of the petition, an alternative, not a peremptory writ, should issue.[53] In some states the alternative writ takes the place of a declaration at law, and it is essential that it should show a clear prima facie case in favor of the relator.[54] In order to make out a prima facie case the writ should allege all the essential facts which show the duty and impose the legal obligation on the respondent to perform the acts demanded of him,[55] as well as the facts that entitle the relator to invoke the aid of the court in compelling the performance of such duty or obligation.[56] In the federal courts the power to issue the writ being derived from statute, the strict rule of the common law in respect to amendments is not applicable.[57] was stricken down and became physically ill by reason of physical efforts exerted in the discharge of his duty. Eddy v. People, 218 Ill. 611, 75 N. E. 1071.

48. Bundy v. U. S., 25 App. D. C. 459.

49. Bundy v. U. S., 25 App. D. C. 459; Dancy v. Clark, 24 App. D. C. 487.

NOTE. Necessity of name of the state or people: A remnant of the ancient distinction enjoyed by the writ of mandamus is still found in the style or name of the proceedings. In some jurisdictions it is still the common and better approved practice to bring the action in the name of the sovereign power, on relation or complaint of the party beneficially interested. Higgins v. Galesburg, 96 Ill. App. 471; State v. Curler [Nev.] 67 P. 1075; Rider v. Brown, 1 Okl. 244, 32 P. 341; Whitesides v. Stuart, 91 Tenn. 710, 20 S. W. 245; State v. County Court, 47 W. Va. 672, 35 S. E. 959. Of course, if the duty sought to be enforced is due the state as such, then the proceedings should be in the name of the state. State v. Carey, 2 N. Dak. 36, 49 N. W. 164. But the courts are now pretty generally agreed that private persons may move for a mandamus to enforce even a public duty, not due to the government as such, without the intervention of the government law officer. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Suffern, 129 Ill. 274, 21 N. E. 824; Hall v. Mann, 96 Ill. App. 659; Windsor v. Polk County, 115 Iowa, 738, 87 N. W. 704; Pumphrey v. Baltimore, 47 Md. 145, 28 Am. Rep. 446; Attorney General v. Boston, 123 Mass. 460, 479; Elliott v. Detroit, 121 Mich. 426, 84 N. W. 820; State v. Weld, 39 Minn. 426, 40 N. W. 561; State v. Nash, 66 Ohio St. 612, 64 N. E. 558; Milster v. Spartanburg, 68 S. C. 26, 46 S. E. 539; Union Pac. R. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343, 355, 23 Law. Ed. 428.

When mandamus is invoked for the enforcement of a purely private right, it would seem clear, at least under the reformed procedure, that the proceedings may be conducted in the name of the actual parties in interest, and that the state is not a necessary party. State v. White, 116 Ala. 202, 23 So. 31; Stoddard v. Benton, 6 Colo. 508; Lord v. Bates, 48 S. C. 95, 26 S. E. 213. Indeed, in such cases, it would seem that the proceedings should not be entitled in the name of the state on the relation of the real party in interest, but he should be named as the plaintiff. Smith v. Lawrence, 2 S. D. 185, 49 N. W. 7; Howard v. Huron, 5 S. D. 539, 59 N. W. 833, 26 L. R. A. 493; Heintz v. Moulton, 7 S. D. 272, 64 N. W. 135. Not only should such an action be brought in the name of the real party in interest, without the use of the name of the people, but perhaps it must be so brought. People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210; State v. Board of County Com'rs, 11 Kan. 66; State v. Wright, 67 Kan. 847, 73 P. 50. Some authorities hold, however, that notwithstanding the application is made in the interest of a private citizen, it is proper to bring the proceedings in the name of the state on the relation of the party beneficially interested. State v. Spicer, 36 Neb. 469, 54 N. W. 849; State v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164; State v. Pacific Brewing etc. Co., 21 Wash. 451, 58 P. 584, 47 L. R. A. 208.—From note to Powell v. People [Ill.] 105 Am. St. Rep. 117, 122.

50. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398.

51. In mandamus to enforce the right to inspect books of a corporation where petition shows that the purpose was to ascertain the value of the stock owned by petitioner, the court may allow an amendment so as to include a specific prayer for that purpose. Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 123.

52. See 4 C. L. 523.

53. In mandamus to compel the reference of a franchise ordinance to use city streets to the board of estimate and apportionment on its first reading as required by Greater New York Charter, Laws 1901, p. 38, c. 466, § 74, where there is an issue of fact as to the procedure of the board of aldermen which is necessary to properly bring such an ordinance to a first reading, it cannot be held as a matter of law that there was a first reading of the ordinance and only an alternative writ may issue. Manhattan &

Effect as stay.—The writ operates as a stay of all proceedings inconsistent with its scope.[58]

§ 8. Demurrer to petition or writ; answer or return; subsequent pleadings.[59]—Where a good and sufficient alternative writ has been issued and served, and no jurisdictional question is involved, it is the duty of the defendant to file his answer in the first instance,[60] and, in those states where the answer is substituted for the return in the English courts and pleadings other than the alternative writ and answer, the defendant should assign in his answer any legal reasons, as well as plead the facts, if any exist, on which he relies to defeat the issuance of the peremptory writ.[61] In such states neither can be attacked by demurrer; and where a general demurrer is filed to an alternative writ, the court should treat it as an admission of the facts alleged and apply the law to such facts.[62] It follows that in such states where a defendant files a motion to quash which is in the nature of a general demurrer, the court will treat such pleading as an answer admitting the facts recited in the alternative writ and apply the law thereto.[63] In Indiana the return to the writ is the same as an answer in a civil action,[64] and is not withdrawn by the filing of an answer.[65] The answer or return must state positive and definite facts; the conclusions of the pleader are not sufficient.[66] It must be positive, explicit, and responsive in its recitals of facts, and must state the same in such a specific and substantial but not argumentative manner as upon a fair and reasonable construction can be called certain without recurring to possible facts that do not appear or that are left to inference,[67] and, failing to answer important facts al-

B. Elec. Co. v. Fornes, 47 Misc. 209, 95 N. Y. S. 851.

54, 55, 56. State v. Richards [Fla.] 39 So. 152.

57. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198. On mandamus to stop discrimination of service by a common carrier held court was authorized to amend alternative writ to conform to facts found. Id.

58. A writ commanding that a trial judge forthwith secure the services of some other judge to preside at a certain trial or to show cause why he should not do so before the supreme court operates as a stay of all action on his part until the rendition of the judgment of the supreme court and the entry of the remittitur on such judgment in the superior court. In re Smith [Cal. App.] 83 P. 167.

59. See 4 C. L. 524.

60, 61. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

62. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

Note: There are authorities to the contrary where the statute is silent as to such pleading or expressly authorizes it. Elliott v. Oliver, 22 Or. 44, 29 P. 1. The Oklahoma statute [St. 1893, § 4603] absolutely prohibits it.—From Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

63. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

64. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1185. Where an order book entry shows that defendants' demurrer was overruled and they excepted and filed their return, their contention on appeal that the trial was without issue as to them, held not sustained. Parscouta v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 970.

65. Where an order book entry showed that defendants filed an answer, but the answer copied into the transcript was that of only one of the defendants, held not to withdraw the return of all the defendants previously filed. Parscouta v. State [Ind.] 75 N. E. 970.

66. City of Chicago v. People, 215 Ill. 235, 74 N. E. 137. A city, to avoid a writ of mandamus to make appropriations for a debt on the ground that it is doing all in its power to liquidate it, must by its answer set out clearly and definitely, in detail, all its items of receipts and expenditures. Id. In mandamus against a court the return, to be effective, must show that the act was a judicial one. A mere statement that it was judicial is insufficient. So held in proceedings to compel probate court to grant letters of administration. State v. Guinotte [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 884. A statement in the return that respondent heard witnesses, whose evidence justified his action, and which made it a judicial hearing, involving judicial discretion, without stating and proving the import of such evidence held insufficient. Id.

67. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9. On a petition by a constable for mandamus against a controller to compel the latter to approve the former's bills, a return is insufficient in which the controller avers that he had scrutinized and audited the bills, that the only evidence of the justice of the claims presented to him in his official capacity were the bills themselves and the files in the various cases; that he is not satisfied that the claims are honest or just, that his refusal is a capricious one but based upon information and knowledge which he does not deem it advisable to set forth in the answer. Id. In proceedings to compel a county to pay relator certain costs, an allegation that the county court had previously appropriated a large sum of money for the benefit of relator to pay leged in the petition, every intendment and presumption will be made against the return.[68] The answer must generally be verified.[69] A motion by relator for a peremptory writ upon the pleadings is equivalent to a demurrer to the return for not stating facts sufficient to constitute a defense.[70] In Washington a demurrer to the complaint amounts to a motion to quash the peremptory writ and is permissible.[71] After a demurrer to an answer has been overruled, the sufficiency of an answer cannot properly be brought in question by a motion to enter a judgment in favor of the plaintiff based on the ground that the answer sets forth no defense.[72] The Michigan practice does not authorize either a replication or rejoinder.[73] All material allegations of the petition not denied or traversed are considered true,[74] and presumptions will be indulged in their favor.[75] A demurrer admits all material allegations of the pleading demurred to.[76] On demurrer the writ must be construed most strictly against the pleader.[77] In Louisiana by answering to the merits respondent does not waive an exception that he was not notified of the intention to make the application.[78]

§ 9. Trial, hearing, and judgment. A. Trial and hearing.[79]—It appearing similar claims for which the county was not liable held too vague and uncertain to present an issue of fact. State v. Alexander [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 20. An argumentative return is bad. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398. Where, in mandamus by a stockholder to compel inspection of corporate books, at the issuance of the alternative writ a corporate by-law allowed every stockholder holding 100 shares the right of inspection, held a return setting up an apparently inconsistent by-law at the time of filing the return and without stating the time of its adoption, is bad. Id.

68. State v. Alexander [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 20.

69. Where an answer is not properly verified but respondent, on his attention being called to it, made no application to amend, the answer cannot be regarded as controverting the facts stated in the petition. People v. District Ct. [Colo.] 79 P. 1014.

70. State v. Alexander [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 20.

71. State v. Brewer [Wash.] 80 P. 1001.

72. Mineral Bluff Board of Education v. Mineral Bluff [Ga.] 51 S. E. 577.

73. Lewis v. Board of Education [Mich.] 102 N. W. 756. Under circuit court rule No. 46, subd. c, in determining an issue raised by petition and answer, it is assumed that all averments of fact in the answer and all material allegations of the petition not specifically answered by the respondent, are true as alleged. Id.

NOTE. Michigan practice: The Michigan practice in mandamus is designed to be simple and expeditious. The only pleadings contemplated are relator's petition and respondent's answer or return. If relator desires to controvert the facts stated in the answer, issues may be framed under the direction of the trial court. Just v. Wise Tp., 47 Mich. 511, 11 N. W. 294; People v. Nankin Board of Registration, 15 Mich. 156. While, for the purpose of framing these issues, the trial court may permit relator to file a replication (see Wagner v. Circuit Judge, 131 Mich. 129, 91 N. W. 155), the more common and expeditious practice is to dispense with the replication altogether and to state such issues in the form of questions on the coming in of the answer. See Just v. Wise Tp., supra. The answer should not be contradicted by affidavits. If the relator desires to dispute the answer, issues should be settled and tried in an orderly manner. Webster v. Wheeler, 119 Mich. 601. If no issues are framed, the proceeding is disposed of on the issue raised by the petition and answer. In determining this issue, it is assumed that all averments of fact in the answer (see Loomis v. Rogers Tp., 53 Mich. 135, 18 N. W. 596, and numerous cases cited in 2 Abbott's Michigan Prac., p. 1239, § 1649), and "all material allegations of the petition * * * not specifically answered by the respondent," are "true as alleged." See circuit court rule 46 subd. c.—From Lewis v. Board of Education [Mich.] 102 N. W. 756 and Abbott's Michigan Prac. ch. LXX.

74. City of Chicago v. People, 215 Ill. 235, 74 N. E. 137; People v. Lindblom, 215 Ill. 58, 74 N. E. 73; State v. Alexander [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 20; City of Chicago v. People, 114 Ill. App. 145; People v. Board of Education 93 N. Y. S. 300.

75. In mandamus proceedings to compel a state senate to reinstate expelled members it will be presumed, in the absence of direct allegation to the contrary, that the petitioners had notice of the expulsion proceedings which appear spread upon the journals of the senate, and that they were allowed as members to participate therein. French v. State Senate, 146 Cal. 604, 80 P. 1031. The petition alleging the making of an appropriation for the purpose of paying the petitioner and others, it will be presumed the contrary not appearing and the fact of the appropriation being established that the municipality has the money to pay the petitioner in its possession. City of Chicago v. People, 111 Ill. App. 594.

76. Petition. Lewis v. Union Drainage Dist. Com'rs, 111 Ill. App. 222. Return. Commonwealth v. Baker, 212 Pa. 230, 61 A. 910.

77. State v. Malheur County Ct. [Or.] 81 P. 368.

78. Dugue v. Levy [La.] 38 So. 902.

79. See 4 C. L. 526.

from the answer that material issues of fact are involved in the case it is erroneous to grant a mandamus absolute without submitting such issues to a jury.[80] The application being tried by the court it is not required to make findings on special issues of fact.[81]

Abatement and dismissal.[82]—Proceedings against federal officers do not abate by reason of the respondent's death, retirement, or resignation or removal from office; but, when necessary, the proceedings may be continued against his successor in office.[83] Under the statutes of most states the alternative writ cannot be quashed on motion for any matter involving the merits.[84]

(§ 9) B. Judgment. Scope of relief.[85]—In mandamus against a municipality to compel the payment of a claim, a judgment against the municipality and its controller is proper.[86] There being a joint judgment[87] all of the defendants must be under an obligation to perform the duty.[88] The court may deny relief, respondent complying with named conditions,[89] or it can grant other relief than that prayed for.[90] While the relief should be limited to the necessities of the case,[91] it is not limited by the prayer.[92] In proceedings against a common carrier to prohibit discrimination in the distribution of cars, there being nothing to indicate any threatened or probable change in conditions, the court may determine the percentage to which relator is entitled.[93] Injunction is inappropriate to mandamus proceedings.[94]

80. McIntosh County Com'rs v. Aiken Canning Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 585.

81. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

82. See 4 C. L. 526.

83. 30 Stat. at. L. 822, c. 121. The successor in office of a territorial judge may be substituted in place of his predecessor on appeal from a final judgment denying mandamus to compel the latter to take jurisdiction of a case. Territory of N. M. v. Baker, 196 U. S. 431, 49 Law. Ed. 540.

84. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2075 whether relator was entitled to an opportunity to make an explanation before removal from a public office cannot be determined on a motion to quash. People v. Hayes, 94 N. Y. S. 754.

85. See 4 C. L. 527.

86. City of Chicago v. People, 111 Ill. App. 594.

87. Where proceedings were brought against a carrier and its president to prohibit discrimination, a mandate addressed to the railroad company and to its president and "each of them according to their several and respective powers," held not joint but should be taken distributively, as affecting the president only according to his powers. Judgment for costs went against the carrier alone. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

88. Judgment being joint and requiring a joint act it will be reversed where it appears that one of the defendants thereto cannot be required to perform. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633.

89. Where all but 67 cents of a bill presented to the county board of supervisors was improper, held permissible for the court to deny a writ of mandamus to compel the board to audit the bill on condition of the payment by the board of the item due. People v. Saratoga County Sup'rs, 94 N. Y. S. 1012.

90. Where, in proceedings by a holder of warrants issued in payment for the construction of a ditch to compel the county commissioners to levy a special assessment, it was shown that the project was abandoned, the court could direct the commissioners to proceed to levy an assessment, or it could require them to proceed immediately to acquire by condemnation the property necessary to the completion of the ditch and then levy the assessment. Espy Estate Co. v. Board of Com'rs [Wash.] 82 P. 129.

91. A peremptory writ of mandamus allowing a director, his attorney, accountant and assistants without limitation in number, to examine the books and records of the corporation for a period of three months, modified so as to authorize such examination to be made by the director and one accountant during four weeks, with a provision for an extension of time, if necessary, on application to the court. People v. Columbia Paper Bag Co., 92 N. Y. S. 1084.

92. On mandamus to compel superintendents of election to meet and consolidate a vote, the judge has power to direct on what date it should be executed, and to instruct the respondents that, if the original certificate and tally sheets could not be produced, they might use properly certified copies from the executive department as evidence of the vote received by the applicant. Glover v. Morris [Ga.] 50 S. E. 956.

93. In proceedings to prohibit discrimination in the distribution of cars among certain coal companies, held the court had the power to fix the percentage of cars which the carrier should distribute to relator in proportion to the present output of relator's mine. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

94. In mandamus to compel a county treasurer to advertise and sell certain real estate for delinquent taxes, an injunction cannot be granted restraining him from selling land bid in by the county at a tax sale for one of the years for which the property

Costs[95] follow the judgment.[96]

§ 10. Peremptory writ.[97]—The peremptory writ should be issued against the person or persons who have the power to perform the duty commanded.[98] The joining of unnecessary parties[99] or the fact that the alternative writ asks too much[1] will not invalidate the peremptory writ. Where there is a joinder of petitioners, the peremptory writ must be for all of them or for none of them.[2] A peremptory writ cannot issue where a sufficient answer or return is on file.[3] In Louisiana the fact that respondent fails to make or return an answer does not require the court to make the writ peremptory.[4] The writ cannot be any more specific than the petition.[5]

§ 11. Performance.[6]—A refusal to obey constitutes a contempt.[7]

§ 12. Review.[8]—There must be a final judgment to be reviewed.[9] The jurisdiction of particular courts is statutory,[10] and, in some states, an appeal being taken to the wrong court the case will be certified to the proper court.[11] Except as to jurisdictional facts,[12] all presumptions are in favor of the regularity of the proceedings below,[13] and technical errors will be disregarded.[14] In the federal courts in the absence of a written stipulation waiving a jury, it will be presumed that a jury trial was had.[15] The general rules as to harmless error apply.[16] sought to be sold was delinquent. People v. Lewis, 102 App. Div. 408, 92 N. Y. S. 642.

MANDATE; MARINE INSURANCE; MARITIME LIENS; MARKETS; MARKS, see latest topical index.

95. See 4 C. L. 527.

96. A probate judge is properly taxable with the costs of mandamus proceedings brought to compel him to issue a liquor license which he wrongfully refused to issue on application being made therefor. Hudgins v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 717.

97. See 4 C. L. 527.

98. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398. Under Laws 1896, p. 468, title 2, § 5, and p. 478, c. 425, title 3, § 20, a writ of mandamus to compel the common council to grant a certificate of election should be directed to the persons who were members of the council at the time the election was held and not to their successors in office. People v. Burns, 94 N. Y. S. 196.

99. State v. Pan-American Co. [Del. Super.] 61 A. 398; People v. Early, 94 N. Y. S. 640.

1. People v. Early, 94 N. Y. S. 640.

2. Sedden v. McBride [Pa.] 60 A. 12.

3. Motion to make mandamus absolute denied where answer had not been stricken. Mineral Bluff Board of Education v. City of Mineral Bluff [Ga.] 51 S. E. 577.

4. State v. Board of Com'rs [La.] 39 So. 842. Under Code Proc. arts. 841, 843, where respondent fails to answer, the proper practice is to fix the case for trial and if the respondent still declines to answer the remedy is to hear and try the issues presented without answer, on such proof as may be offered and admitted. Id.

5. State v. Brewer [Wash.] 80 P. 1001.

6. See 4 C. L. 527.

7. An order of a trial judge constituting an exercise of jurisdiction in a case before a judgment of the supreme court refusing a mandamus to compel him to call in another judge becomes final by the filing of a remittitur held to constitute a technical contempt. In re Smith [Cal. App.] 83 P. 167.

8. See 4 C. L. 527.

9. An order granting a motion to quash an alternative writ of mandamus, but allowing relator to amend as he may be advised, is not such a final judgment as will support a writ of error. State v. Landis [Fla.] 39 So. 15. Appellate court has no jurisdiction to pass upon an assignment of error complaining of the overruling of a demurrer to an answer, the trial court holding that the answer presents an issue of fact and refers the issue of fact to a jury and when there has been no final judgment thereon. Mineral Bluff Board of Education v. Mineral Bluff [Ga.] 51 S. E. 577. Appellate court has jurisdiction to pass upon an assignment of error complaining of a refusal to sustain a motion to make the mandamus absolute, because, if this motion had been granted, it would have finally disposed of the case. Id.

10. No appeal lies to the superior court from a judgment in mandamus proceedings commanding the defendants to permit the plaintiffs to inspect the books of a corporation. Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 608. Objection that an appeal will not lie to the superior court in any mandamus case, not sustained. Id.

11. Under the act of 1895, § 9, where an appeal is erroneously taken to the superior instead of to the supreme court, the writ will not be quashed, but the case will be certified to the supreme court for hearing and determination. Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 608.

12. Decree in favor of relator will be reversed for want of necessary parties appearing on the face of the record. Powell v. People, 214 Ill. 475, 73 N. E. 795.

13. Where on appeal from an order denying a motion to quash an alternative mandamus, the petition on which the writ was granted not being in the record, it will be presumed that the writ was properly granted. People v. Hayes, 94 N. Y. S. 754.

14. An appeal by a township from a mandamus directing the supervisors to draw an order for the payment of money on the

MARRIAGE.[17]

§ 1. Nature of marriage; capacity of parties; fraud and duress.[18]—Marriage is a civil contract by which a man and woman are bound to each other for the discharge to each other and to society of the duties and obligations which by law flow from such contract,[19] and in the absence of statute[20] it is not essential that there should be any form of ceremony.[21] The contract must contain the elements essential to the validity of any other contract.[22] The parties must be competent[23] and possess the qualifications prescribed by statute.[24]

A marriage contracted while either party has a husband or wife living is void,[25] but in Texas this rule does not apply to a woman, who in good faith and without knowledge, contracts marriage with a man who is under the impediment of an existing marriage.[26] A promise to marry is not avoided by the fact that one of the parties is married.[27] In some states it is provided by statute that a marriage illegal at the time it was solemnized becomes legal if the parties continue to live together township treasurer will not be quashed merely because the township and not the supervisors is named appellant. Marcy v. Springville Tp., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 521.

15. Where the order setting the cause for hearing showed a waiver of jury trial, held the only questions of law reviewable on error were the sufficiency of the alternative writ or of the finding to support the judgment though the record failed to disclose any written stipulation waiving a jury as required by statute. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 198.

16. In mandamus to compel a judge of probate to issue a tax deed the sustaining of a demurrer to the answer and the admission of certain evidence held harmless. Roach v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 685. In a mandamus proceeding to compel drainage commissioners to improve a drain so as to convey the water from petitioner's land, the question whether drainage increased the value of the land is immaterial. Kreiling v. Northrup, 215 Ill. 195, 74 N. E. 123, afg. 116 Ill. App. 448. The granting of a rule to show cause though irregular is harmless, respondents answering the rule and evidence being taken. Commonwealth v. Fleming, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 404. The overruling of a motion to strike out parts of an alternative writ of mandamus does not constitute reversible error. Cheney v. State [Ind.] 74 N. E. 892.

17. This topic relates strictly to the law of marriage; the law of Alimony (see 5 C. L. 101), Divorce (see 5 C. L. 1026), and Husband and Wife (see 5 C. L. 1731), being separately treated.

18. See 4 C. L. 528.

19. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263.

20. See post, § 2. A common-law marriage.

21. Not necessary that a clergyman should be present to authorize and confirm the contract. Reaves v. Reaves [Okl.] 82 P. 490.

22. It must be free from fraud and duress, see post, § 4.

23. Must be sane, see post, § 4.

24. Laws 1905, p. 194, prohibiting marriage by a divorced person within one year, expresses its subject-matter in its title. Olsen v. People [Ill.] 76 N. E. 89. Laws 1905, p. 194, prohibiting to marry, a person who has within one year been granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty or desertion, and Laws 1905, p. 317, prohibiting, under penalty the issuance of license to a legally incompetent person, are not ex post facto nor retrospective. Id. Laws 1905, p. 194, prohibiting to marry, within one year, a person who has been granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty or desertion, and Laws 1905, p. 317, prohibiting under penalty the issuance of license to one legally incompetent, apply to persons divorced before the act took effect. Id. Pub. Acts 1895, p. 667, c. 325, forbidding marriage by an epileptic while the woman is under 45 years of age, is valid. Gould v. Gould [Conn.] 61 A. 604.

25. A marriage with a slave was legalized by the Texas constitution of 1869, hence, subsequent cohabitation by a slave wife with another than her husband is invalid. Lee v. Bolden [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1027. Under the rule that a marriage is void if contracted by a person whose husband or wife by a former marriage is living, and a rule that no final judgment of divorce shall be entered until three months after the filing of the decision of the court, an interlocutory judgment does not dissolve the contract, and a marriage entered into before entry of final judgment is void. Pettit v. Pettit, 93 N. Y. S. 1001.

26. She has all the property rights of a lawful wife. Barkley v. Dumke [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 242, 87 S. W. 1147.

27. An antenuptial contract to marry is not void, because of the fact that the husband has a living wife by a prior marriage, where the woman is ignorant of such fact.

as husband and wife after the impediment is removed.[28] Such a statute applies whether the removal of the impediment is known or unknown.[29] Slave marriages were legalized by act of congress.[30] A marriage may be avoided for duress which will avoid an ordinary contract.[31] Subsequent cohabitation does not validate a marriage entered into through duress,[32] especially in the absence of issue.[33] A void marriage cannot be ratified,[34] and a decree of nullity is not necessary to dissolve it,[35] but where provided for by statute will be granted where the ends of justice so demand;[36] and equity may declare null a void, but apparently valid ceremonial marriage which was not followed by cohabitation.[37]

§ 2. Essentials of a contract of marriage.[38]—It is the duty of an officer who issues a license to make inquiry as to the competency of the parties.[39] A license signed in blank by the judge of probate and left with a magistrate, who thereafter filled in the names of parties to a marriage, is void.[40] A formal solemnization under a void license does not constitute a statutory marriage.[41]

A common-law marriage[42] is a contract by which the parties agree to become husband and wife.[43] No particular form of ceremony is necessary.[44] If what is said and done evidences an intention to assume the marriage status and the parties thereupon enter into the relation of husband and wife, it is sufficient.[45] An informal marriage by contract per verba de praesenti constitutes a common-law marriage,[46] but a formal consent to a void ceremony, not followed by cohabitation, does not.[47] A contract for a future marriage is not a marriage, and such a contract does not constitute a present marriage;[48] but two contracts, one constituting a present marriage and one for a future celebration, are not inconsistent.[49] Common-law marriages are forbidden in some states,[50] but statutes regulating marriage are usually directory, merely, and

Broadrick v. Broadrick, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 225.

28, 29. Turner v. Turner [Mass.] 75 N. E. 612.

30. A slave marriage is established under the Act of Congress, February 8, 1879, by evidence that the parties who were owned by different owners lived together as man and wife before the war and were recognized as husband and wife by their masters, other slaves, and people in the vicinity, and had children who recognized each other as brothers and sisters. Howard v. Evans, 24 App. D. C. 127.

31. Evidence sufficient to show duress where a man 55 years of age, devoid of physical or other attractions, married a girl of 14 in a strange country when she was without friends or money. Avakian v. Avakian [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 521.

32, 33. Avakian v. Avakian [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 521.

34. Pettit v. Pettit, 93 N. Y. S. 1001, overruling Petit v. Petit, 45 Misc. 155, 91 N. Y. S. 979, holding that though a marriage is invalid owing to an existing marriage of one of the parties, it will not be annulled where they have confirmed the contract by cohabiting after the obstacle to a legal marriage has been removed.

35, 36. Pettit v. Pettit, 93 N. Y. S. 1001.

37. Hawkins v. Hawkins [Ala.] 38 So. 640.

38. See 4 C. L. 529.

39. Laws 1905, p. 317, prohibiting under penalty the issuance of license to a person legally incompetent to marry, and Laws 1905, p. 194, prohibiting to marry within one year persons who have been granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty or desertion, make it the duty of the clerk issuing the license to make inquiries as to competency under the divorce act. Olsen v. People [Ill.] 76 N. E. 89.

40, 41. Hawkins v. Hawkins [Ala.] 38 So. 640.

42. See 4 C. L. 529.

43. A contract between persons competent to marry, by which it is mutually agreed to become husband and wife, constitutes a valid marriage. Sorensen v. Sorensen [Neb.] 103 N. W. 455.

44. Travers v. Reinhardt, 25 App. D. C. 567. When a man and woman intend to marry and live together as husband and wife, but their intent is frustrated by some unknown impediment, when such impediment is removed and it is shown that the same intent continues, a marriage is established. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A. 680.

45. "I give you my word of honor we can stay man and wife, I am your husband and I am satisfied," with an assurance that no other ceremony was necessary, followed by cohabitation, constitutes a marriage. Heymann v. Heymann, 218 Ill. 636, 75 N. E. 1079. Where competent parties agree to be husband and wife and live together as such, and hold out to the world that such relation exists between them, a common-law marriage results. Reaves v. Reaves [Okl.] 82 P. 490.

46. Travers v. Reinhardt, 25 App. D. C. 567.

47. Hawkins v. Hawkins [Ala.] 38 So. 640.

48, 49. Sorensen v. Sorensen [Neb.] 103 N. W. 455.

50. Tennessee. The provisions of Shanmust expressly prohibit common-law marriages in order to render them void.[51] In Tennessee common-law marriages are not recognized, but it is said that there may be an "estoppel" to deny marriage, which status has for a long time been held out to the world.[52]

Evidence of marriage.[53]—If the fact of marriage is a matter of record it may be proved by the records,[54] but if not entered into in the manner prescribed by law, or solemnized according to the rites of any religious denomination or order, the contract is to be proven like any other contract.[55] A widow of an intestate is not a competent witness on the question of their marriage.[56] She is also incompetent to testify to collateral facts from which marriage could be inferred.[57] An antecedent marriage, the existence of which would defeat a subsequent one and bastardize issue thereof, must be established as a fact, by "strict proof."[58] "Strict proof" as here used means to a moral certainty.[59] A marriage certificate containing the names of the parties is insufficient without proof of identity,[60] and the identity of the parties cannot be established by their own declarations, or conclusions to be derived therefrom.[61] Where a common-law marriage is asserted by one party and denied by the other, the whole conduct, life, and character of the parties during the period in controversy is open to inquiry.[62] On the question of whether the relations of parties cohabiting together are matrimonial or meretricious, the declarations of the parties during such period are admissible.[63] The intention of the parties is to be gathered from what took place at the time the marriage was entered into, not from mental reservations or secret intentions of either of the parties.[64] More evidence is required to establish marriage to a dissolute woman than in the case of a woman of chaste character.[65] Secret marriages are not favored and there is a presumption against non's Code, §§ 4189-4200, are mandatory. Smith v. North Memphis Sav. Bank [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 392. Laws 1901, p. 933, c. 339, prohibited common-law marriages, and a common-law marriage entered into while such law was in force was void. Pettit v. Pettit, 93 N. Y. S. 1001.

51. Not forbidden by the Organic Act of Oklahoma. Reaves v. Reaves [Okl.] 82 P. 490.

52. Smith v. North Memphis Sav. Bank [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 392.

Note: The practical result of the reasoning in this case is the same as though common-law marriages were recognized. The elements of reliance on the apparent state of facts and resulting prejudice (see Estoppel, 5 C. L. 1285) are as between the parties somewhat lacking, and it is not easy to believe that the public either "relied" or was "prejudiced" so as to raise a true estoppel.

53. See 4 C. L. 529, n. 19 et seq.

54. A duly authenticated certificate of marriage, granted by an officer authorized to solemnize a marriage, does not constitute marriage but is the highest and best evidence of it. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263. Proof of the signature of a marriage certificate and of the authority to perform a marriage of the person who signed it is necessary to prove the certificate. Broadrick v. Broadrick, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 225.

55. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263. Evidence insufficient to show a common-law marriage. Pike v. Pike, 112 Ill. App. 243. A common-law marriage may be proved by testimony of the witnesses to the agreement or by admissions of the parties, or such other facts with respect to the actions of the parties or their conduct toward each other as tend to show the fact. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263. Evidence as to whether support was given is admissible on the question of marriage. McPhelemy v. McPhelemy [Conn.] 61 A. 477.

56. Bowman v. Little [Md.] 61 A. 223. One party to a common-law marriage is not competent to testify to the existence of such marriage after the death of the other. Rev. St. 1899, § 4652. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263.

57. Bowman v. Little [Md.] 61 A. 1084.

58. Bowman v. Little [Md.] 61 A. 223. Cannot be established by cohabitation for a short period and that the wife's mother visited them. Id.

59, 60, 61. Bowman v. Little [Md.] 61 A. 1084.

62. The alleged husband may show illicit relations with other men as tending to establish the nature of her relations with him. Bell v. Clarke, 45 Misc. 272, 92 N. Y. S. 163.

63. Reaves v. Reaves [Okl.] 82 P. 490.

64. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263.

65. Bell v. Clarke, 45 Misc. 272, 92 N. Y. S. 163.

their existence.[66] Cohabitation and repute are strong presumptive evidence of the fact[67] but not conclusive,[68] and are no evidence of an express contract per verba de praesenti[69] or ceremonial marriage.[70] Consent to the contract cannot be inferred from cohabitation alone.[71] Meretricious relations once shown to exist are presumed to continue,[72] but it is of no consequence that the original relations of the parties were illicit if a subsequent contract be established.[73] Evidence of a contract of marriage followed by a cohabitation is strengthened by the fact that the parties were competent and that no illicit relations had existed between them.[74]

§ 3. Validity and effect.[75]—If a marriage is lawful where the parties were domiciled and where the husband died, it is valid elsewhere.[76] A marriage contracted by a person forbidden by law to marry is not void.[77] One properly qualified may testify as to the validity of a foreign marriage.[78]

§ 4. Proceedings for annulment.[79]—A court will not take jurisdiction in equity to annul a marriage for fraud where the statute relating to divorce provides an ample remedy.[80] The New Jersey chancery court has jurisdiction to annul a contract of marriage for fraud.[81] Such jurisdiction is not derived from the divorce statute[82] but is based on the original, inherent, and general jurisdiction over questions arising out of contracts.[83]

A judgment for the wife in a suit for separation is res adjudicata as to the validity of the marriage and bars a subsequent suit for annulment by the husband.[84]

66. Where there has been no cohabitation, admissions of the parties or other evidence, the unsupported testimony of one of the parties after the other is dead is insufficient to establish a marriage. Sorensen v. Sorensen [Neb.] 103 N. W. 455.

67. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263. Marriage may be shown by cohabitation and repute during the life of the person whose marital relations are in dispute, or during the life of one of them. Id. Long cohabitation, holding out as husband and wife and signing conveyances as such, held to establish a common-law marriage. Travers v. Reinhardt, 25 App. D. C. 567. A presumption of the existence of a marriage arises from cohabitation and a holding out of each other to the world as husband and wife. Sorensen v. Sorensen [Neb.] 103 N. W. 455.

68. That a man and woman cohabit together and the woman introduces the man to her famiy as her husband, and signs a bail bond as his wife, held insufficient to show marriage. State v. Wilson [Del. Gen. Sess.] 62 A. 227.

69. Where an express contract per verba de praesenti, followed by occasional cohabitation and the furnishing of provisions and money, is sought to be established, declarations of the husband tending to show, that he was not married are admissible to rebut evidence of marriage, but evidence of his repute among his friends, and his conduct toward other women and girls, is not. In re Imboden's Estate [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 263.

70. One who sets up an antecedent ceremonial marriage to avoid a subsequent one, cannot prove a marriage by repute. Bowman v. Littie [Md.] 61 A. 223.

71. Evidence insufficient to show a marriage within Comp. St. Neb. 1903, c. 52, § 1. Brisbin v. Huntington [Iowa] 103 N. W. 144.

72. Bell v. Clarke, 45 Misc. 272, 92 N. Y. S. 163. Pike v. Pike, 112 Ill. App. 243. Hence an allegation of such fact in a proceeding to restrain a woman from holding herself out as the wife of complainant is relevant. Bell v. Clarke, 45 Misc. 275, 92 N. Y. S. 411. As is also an allegation that complainant had a lawful wife living at the time his relations with the defendant began. Id. A divorce from one woman, procured after marriage to another is admissible on the question as to whether a contract of marriage existed with the latter. Drew v. Provost [Me.] 60 A. 794.

73. Travers v. Reinhardt, 25 App. D. C. 567.

74. Heymann v. Heymann, 218 Ill. 636, 75 N. E. 1079.

75. See 4 C. L. 530.

76. Traverse v. Reinhardt, 25 App. D. C. 567.

77. Gould v. Gould [Conn.] 61 A. 604.

78. That a religious marriage does not constitute a valid marriage in a foreign country may be testified to by a qualified witness. Massucco v. Tomassi [Vt.] 62 A. 57.

79. See 4 C. L. 531.

80. Rhode Island statute denominates suit for annulment "divorce." Selby v. Selby [R. I.] 61 A. 142.

81. Boehs v. Hanger [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 904.

82. Avakian v. Avakian [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 521.

83. This court has jurisdiction to annul for duress a marriage contracted in England between a citizen of Massachusetts and a foreigner bound for New Jersey, where the bill was brought shortly after her arrival, and personal service is had on the defendant. Avakian v. Avakian [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 521.

The grounds of annulment are in many states prescribed by statute,[85] and in some states a residence condition is imposed.[86] A marriage will not be annulled for any fraud except that which operates upon the very essentials of marriage,[87] and never when the effect of an annulment is against sound public policy.[88] A marriage will not be annulled for concealment of pregnancy if such fraud was condoned by the husband after discovery,[89] nor on the ground of insanity after a long lapse of time.[90] After a marriage, illegal at the time it was solemnized, has become valid by virtue of statute after the impediment is removed, it will not be annulled because of fraudulent representations as to the impediment.[91] A marriage will not be annulled on any but clear and convincing evidence.[92]

In an action to annul a marriage on the ground of impotency of the husband, the court may order a physical examination of the defendant.[93] In the absence of special circumstances there need not be a reference to conduct such proceeding.[94] The procedure in such case not being prescribed by statute, the matter is largely discretionary. But the examination should be made during the progress of the trial, or the taking of evidence on default, in order that the whole proceeding may be under the immediate direction of the court.[95]

A woman seeking to annul a marriage on the ground that the husband was insane when it was contracted, is not entitled to the rights of a wife under a valid marriage;[96] but it was otherwise held where annulment was sought on the ground of impotency.[97]

A decree annulling a marriage will not be set aside on the ground of mistake

84. The husband could have pleaded invalidity as a defense, if not as a counterclaim, in the action for separation. Durham v. Durham, 99 App. Div. 450, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 141, 91 N. Y. S. 295.

85. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1743, 1745, authorizing the annulment of a marriage if either party at the time it was celebrated had a living spouse, applies, though the prior marriage was not in force at the commencement of the action. Hervey v. Hervey, 92 N. Y. S. 218. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1743, 1745, authorizing the annulment of a marriage, if either party at the time it was celebrated had a living spouse, does not apply where the marriage sought to be annulled was contracted in good faith after the spouse of the party previously married had been absent five years without being known to be alive within such period, and, though living at the time of the marriage, was dead at the commencement of the action. Id.

86. Gen. St. 1894, § 4792, requiring a residence of one year by plaintiff in divorce, applies also to proceedings to annul a marriage for fraud under §§ 4785-4789. Action to annul held prematurely brought. Wilson v. Wilson [Minn.] 104 N. W. 300.

87. Where husband had been recently divorced and was competent to marry, his statement that he had never been married before was not ground for divorce. Boehs v. Hanger [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 904. The fact that marriage with a divorced person was prohibited by complainant's religious faith did not avail her when knowledge of such fact by defendant was not shown. Id.

88. Boehs v. Hanger [N. J. Eq.] 58 A. 904.

89. Evidence held to show condonation by cohabitation. Lenoir v. Lenoir, 24 App. D. C. 160.

90. A marriage will not be annulled because of insanity at the time of its solemnization, where relief is not sought for 33 years, during which period the party had notice. Price v. Price [Ala.] 38 So. 802.

91. Turner v. Turner [Mass.] 75 N. E. 612.

92. Evidence insufficient to show insanity at the time of marriage where the parties were 60 and 75 years of age respectively and the husband discovered the insanity only when sued for support after his wife ceased to live with him. Van Haaften v. Van Haaften [Mich.] 102 N. W. 989. Evidence insufficient to annul for deception a marriage contracted through a matrimonial agency. Beckley v. Beckley, 115 Ill. App. 27. Under Code D. C. § 964, a default decree of annulment cannot be granted on the uncorroborated testimony of one of the parties. Lenoir v. Lenoir, 24 App. D. C. 160. A marriage will not be annulled in an undefended action on the uncorroborated testimony of the plaintiff. Bange v. Bange, 46 Misc. 196, 94 N. Y. S. 8.

93, 94, 95. Gore v. Gore, 103 App. Div. 168, 93 N. Y. S. 396.

96. In New York the supreme court has not jurisdiction to award her counsel fees and alimony pendente lite. Jones v. Brinsmade [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 22.

97. A wife who brings an action to annul a marriage, on the ground of impotency at the date of its celebration, may be allowed counsel fees pendente lite. Gore v. Gore, 92 N. Y. S. 634.

where the only effect it would have would be to give dower to the plaintiff, who was given all she was entitled to at the time it was entered.[98]

§ 5. Criminal offenses.[99]

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, see latest topical index.

MARSHALING ASSETS AND SECURITIES.[1]

The doctrine[2] of marshaling assets and securities is that where there are two funds, one creditor having security in both and another in one of them, equity will compel the former to first exhaust the security in which his interest is exclusive.[3] This rule is subject to this, among other qualifications, viz.: that both funds must be within the jurisdiction and control of the court, except in rare cases in which it is clear that the creditor having the two funds will sustain no loss, delay or additional expense if required to resort first to the fund without the jurisdiction.[4] There must be some primary and secondary liability,[5] and the one invoking the doctrine must have an equitable right thereto.[6] The rule does not apply where it will be injurious to any person whose equity is superior to the claimant's upon the single fund[7] or where it will operate to the injury of the party having the double lien, and this rule has, in substance, been made part of the bankruptcy law.[8] The burden is on the junior incumbrancer to show that the common fund is insufficient to satisfy both,[9] and that the senior incumbrancer has some other security.[10]

Partnership assets.—Where there is no contest between individual and partnership creditors, the doctrine of marshaling assets does not apply.[11]

Inverse order of alienation.—As between purchasers of different parcels of land, the whole of which is subject to a prior lien, the land is chargeable in equity in the inverse order of alienation.[12]

MARSHALING ESTATE, see latest topical index.

98. Golden v. Whiteside, 109 Mo. App. 519, 84 S. W. 1125.

99. See 4 C. L. 531.

1. See 4 C. L. 531. As to rank and priority of liens, see Liens, 6 C. L. 451.

2. See 4 C. L. 531.

3. Sternberger v. Sussman [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 195.

Applications of rule: Mortgagee and judgment creditors. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760. Lienholder and judgment creditors attaching property. Jones v. Dulaney, 27 Ky. L. R. 702, 86 S. W. 547. Where one of two tracts of land owned by a debtor is incumbered by several mortgages, a prior judgment creditor must first exhaust by execution the unincumbered land. Bailey v. Wood [S. C.] 50 S. E. 631. A grantee in a deed from a trustee acting under trust deeds subsequent in time to another trust deed held to acquire a right if necessary to compel the creditors secured by the prior deed to first proceed against the security on which the grantee had no lien. Dickson v. Sledge [Miss.] 38 So. 673.

4. Relief denied in case involving first and second mortgages. Sternberger v. Sussman [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 195.

5. Payee of notes secured by trust deeds held entitled, the maker being dead, to proceed against the interests of the sureties under trust deeds executed by them without postponement to the foreclosure of a trust deed given by decedent alone, and the exhaustion of the collection, through probate proceedings, of his estate. Planters' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Robertson [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 643.

6. Purchaser of one of two tracts covered by a mortgage held not entitled to compel the mortgagee to pay the balance due and secured on the second tract on a judgment which had been decreed to be paid out of the tract sold. Bailey v. Wood [S. C.] 50 S. E. 631.

7. Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224.

8. Where a creditor was properly allowed to prove his claim as against a bankrupt indorser as an unsecured claim, held, he was not required to credit the proceeds of collateral securities held by him against the maker of the obligation before being allowed to participate in the estate of the indorser. Gorman v. Wright [C. C. A.] 136 F. 164, rvg. In re Matthews, 132 F. 274, 4 C. L. 532, n. 56.

9. Staniels v. Whitcher [N. H.] 59 A. 934.

10. Brown & Bro. v. Lapp [Ky.] 89 S. W. 304.

11. Evans v. Superior Steel Co., 114 Ill. App. 505.

12. 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law [1st Ed.] p. 707. Rule applied where judgment charging payment of legacies was sought to be enforced on land sold by an executrix to several defendants, the executrix having ap-

MASTER AND SERVANT.

§ 1. The relation; statutory regulations.[13]—The relation of master and servant rests upon contract, express or implied, and its existence is to be determined by reference to the principles applicable to other contracts,[14] and to the facts of each particular case.[15] Whether the relation created is that of master and servant or employer and independent contractor depends upon the terms of the contract, the test being the degree of control exercised by one over the other, in the performance of the particular service or work contracted for.[16] Where rendition of services is continued after the expiration of the contract term, no new contract being made, it is presumed that the terms of the original contract continue in force.[17]

Termination of the relation.[18]—Death of the employer terminates the relation, in the absence of a contrary agreement.[19] The relation is also terminable at the will of either party,[20] subject, however, to the consequences fixed by law in case such plied the consideration to her own use and become insolvent. Mallery v. Facer, 181 N. Y. 567, 74 N. E. 487, rvg. 90 App. Div. 610, 85 N. Y. S. 1137.

13. See 4 C. L. 533.

14. See Contracts, 5 C. L. 664; Implied Contracts, 5 C. L. 1756.

15. Where porter was uncertain who paid him, and other positive testimony was to the effect that he was not an employe of defendant, a finding that he was such employe was not justified. Vandegrift v. West Jersey & S. R. Co., 71 N. J. Law, 637, 60 A. 184.

16. The subject of Independent Contractors is separately treated. See 5 C. L. 1782. See also, post, § 4, Liability for injuries to third persons.

17. Continued service of same kind after contract for year had expired, presumed to have been rendered under original contract. Fitch v. Martin [Neb.] 104 N. W. 1072. Terms and conditions of contract for a year held to have been continued for another year where parties continued their relations into another year without change or new agreement. Morgan v. McCaslin, 114 Ill. App. 427. A contract for hire of services may be continued by reconduction. National Automatic Fire Alarm Co. v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 738.

18. See 4 C. L. 534.

termination is without legal justification.[21] Fraud in the inception of the contract,[22] incompetency,[23] disobedience of orders,[24] insubordination and disrespectful conduct,[25] and failure to perform services contracted for[26] in a proper and careful manner,[27] have been held to justify a discharge of the servant by the master. Illness of the employe, unless prolonged for an unreasonable time,[28] is a sufficient excuse for failure to fully perform.[29] Where the contract is, by its terms, made terminable by the master for certain reasons, a discharge by another employe is not justifiable.[30] Refusal to accept the services of an employe, except on conditions violative of the terms of the contract of employment, is equivalent to a discharge.[31] An employe's breach may be impliedly waived by the employer.[32]

Actions for wrongful discharge.[33]—For his wrongful discharge[34] a servant has a right of action for damages which accrues at the moment of discharge[35] and becomes a vested right which cannot be affected by the employe's subsequently entering the service of another, or by his refusal to return to the employment from which he has been discharged.[36] In such action the discharged employe must usually allege and prove full performance by himself,[37] but in some cases an allegation of partial performance, and of a legal excuse for failure to fully perform, is sufficient.[38] Proof of a sufficient excuse for not performing does not sustain an allegation of performance.[39] A willful failure to perform an express agreement bars a 19. Costs v. Murray [Or.] 81 P. 883.

20. In the case of the hire of services (where there is no question of custom) the services end at the will of either party. National Automatic Fire Alarm Co. v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 738.

21. See following paragraphs on actions for wrongful discharge and for breach by employe. Employer may discharge employe at any time, but is liable in damages for wrongful discharge. Berlin v. Cusachs, 114 La. 744, 38 So. 539.

22. An employer who, intending to hire only single women, is induced by deception practiced upon him to employ a married woman, may terminate the contract at any time. Parks v. Tolman [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 576. False representations as to location and equipment of plaintiff's office which induced his employment by defendant were ground for rescission by defendant. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895.

23. Court held to have correctly charged what would constitute such incompetency of a mill superintendent as would justify his discharge. Eubanks v. Alspaugh [N. C.] 52 S. E. 207.

24. Refusal of salesman to report for duty at store at 8 o'clock, when not traveling. Costet v. Jeantet, 108 App. Div. 201, 95 N. Y. S. 638. Error to submit to jury whether employer's order was reasonable. Id.

25. Discharge justified where servant abused employer in presence of a guest. Parker v. Farlinger [Ga.] 50 S. E. 98.

26. Where employe failed to produce marketable rubber sponges his discharge was justifiable and he could not recover wages agreed upon. Franklin v. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 186.

27. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895.

28. What is a reasonable time is a question of fact. Spindel v. Cooper, 92 N. Y. S. 822. Sickness of a millinery trimmer for a day and a half held not to justify her discharge, and she was entitled to recover damages therefor. Gaynor v. Jonas, 93 N. Y. S. 287.

29. Spindel v. Cooper, 92 N. Y. S. 822.

30. The employer is to be the sole judge of the reasons for discharge. Lipshutz v. Proctor, 95 N. Y. S. 566.

31. As where one employed as general manager of a department was treated as a mere clerk. Curtis v. Lehmann & Co. [La.] 38 So. 887.

32. As where employer, after employe's absence caused by sickness, told him to report and resume work on a certain day. Spindel v. Cooper, 92 N. Y. S. 822.

33. See 4 C. L. 534.

34. See preceding paragraph for grounds of discharge.

35. Curtis v. Lehmann & Co. [La.] 38 So. 887. A right of action for wrongful discharge arises immediately upon the discharge and refusal of the employer to proceed with the contract. Menage v. Rosenthal [Mass.] 73 N. E. 537.

36. Employe had refused to accept services agreed upon and insisted upon performance of other services. Curtis v. Lehmann & Co. [La.] 38 So. 887.

37. Spindel v. Cooper, 92 N. Y. S. 822. One who contracts to perform services for a certain term cannot recover wages for a period during which he was sick and unable to perform the services contracted for. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895. One who contracts to give his whole time and attention and best endeavors to the service of his employer is not justified in giving any of his time to another even though his duties to his employer are not thereby interfered with. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895.

38. Allegation of illness as cause for nonperformance held sufficient. Spindel v. Cooper, 92 N. Y. S. 822.

recovery though the unperformed agreement is not of the essence of the entire contract.[40]

The measure of damages recoverable by the discharged employe is the agreed compensation for the entire term,[41] less payments, and what he has earned at other employment[42] or could have earned with reasonable diligence.[43] The employe, however, is only bound to seek other employment similar to that called for by his contract,[44] and the burden is on defendant to show that plaintiff might have obtained such employment.[45] Where an action is brought before expiration of the contract term, no allegation that plaintiff would be unable to procure other employment is necessary.[46] Prospective profits, when properly proved, and which it is reasonably certain would have been realized by the employe, may be recovered, though necessarily uncertain in amount.[47] Where a discharged employe is offered the same or like employment to that from which he has been discharged, for the same period and upon the same terms, and before he has sustained any injury by reason of the discharge, no damages are recoverable by him by reason of his discharge.[48] The employer is not liable for collateral damages in the absence of special features giving rise to an independent cause of action.[49] The employe may recover for services actually performed though his discharge was not wrongful.[50] Sums due on account from the employe may be set off by the employer.[51]

Plaintiff must prove the contract of employment.[52] The contract and the discharge by defendant being shown, the burden is upon defendant to prove justification.[53] Holdings as to the admissibility of evidence[54] to prove the terms of the 39. Franklin v. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 186.

40. No recovery by farm manager who failed to return an accurate expense account as he had agreed. Sipley v. Stickney [Mass.] 76 N. E. 226.

41. Under Civ. Code, § 2749, discharged employe may recover agreed compensation for entire term. Berlin v. Cusachs, 114 La. 744, 38 So. 539. Wrongfully discharged salesman may recover salary he would have earned, but not traveling and living expenses after discharge. Cross v. Florsheim, 102 App. Div. 498, 92 N. Y. S. 832.

42. Though employe is only bound to seek similar work, his damages should be reduced by what he has actually earned at any work. Tenzer v. Gilmore [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 341. Discharged salesman's damages were amount he would have earned under contract, less what he earned in other employment. Roth v. Spero, 96 N. Y. S. 211.

43. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895. Instruction upheld as correctly stating the law. Julius Kessler & Co. v. Ellis, 27 Ky. L. R. 1042, 87 S. W. 798. The measure of damages recoverable for breach of a contract of employment is not the salary promised but the difference between that promised and what the employe could have earned in some other occupation. Busell Trimmer Co. v. Coburn [Mass.] 74 N. E. 334. Damages held excessive because not allowing sufficient amount for reasonable earnings of discharged servant from use of secret process which he owned and claimed was very valuable. Franklin v. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 186. Where an employe declares on a breach of the contract he may sue at once, and if the contract term has expired at the time of trial, he may recover for the entire term, less payments and what he could have earned by reasonable effort. Morgan v. McCaslin, 114 Ill. App. 427.

44. Though what he has actually earned at work of any kind should be deducted from his damages. Tenzer v. Gilmore [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 341.

45, 46. Tenzer v. Gilmore [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 341.

47. Salesman's commissions. Roth v. Spero, 96 N. Y. S. 211.

48. Wolf Cigar Stores Co. v. Kramer [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 46, 89 S. W. 995.

49. Berlin v. Cusachs, 114 La. 744, 38 So. 539.

50. In the absence of injury caused by deception practiced by employe, which was reason for discharge, employer must pay for services performed. Parks v. Talman [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 576.

51. Plaintiff employed under separate contract for each year, his contracts being similar, sued for compensation for two years. Held, that a sum due from him on account for a different year could be set off against his claim. Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Young [Ark.] 88 S. W. 586.

52. Whether a contract existed between the parties was for the jury. Julius Kessler & Co. v. Ellis, 27 Ky. L. R. 1042, 87 S. W. 798. Evidence sufficient to show contract made with salesman by corporate officer who had authority to make it. Thomas v. International Silver Co., 96 N. Y. S. 218.

53. Eubanks v. Alspaugh [N. C.] 52 S. E. 207. Plea in action for wrongful discharge held demurrable because not setting out facts constituting alleged negligence by the servant, nor facts constituting failure to perform duties. Mitchell Square Bale Ginning Co. v. Grant [Ala.] 38 So. 855. Evidence as to efficiency and services of super-contract,[55] that the discharge was wrongful,[56] and the damages suffered,[57] are given in the notes.

Actions by employer for breach by employe.[58]

Labor laws.[59]—The New York statute limiting the hours of work in bakeries is held unconstitutional as an arbitrary interference with freedom to contract, and not justifiable as an exercise of the police power.[60] The Nevada statute imposing a penalty upon anyone working more than eight hours per day in a mine, smelter, or mill for the reduction of ores, is valid.[61] In a prosecution under this statute, evidence that defendant's business is not injurious to the health of employes is inadmissible.[62]

§ 2. The right of the master in services of the employe and compensation therefor; assignments of wages; trade secrets; statutory provisions.[63]—The right to compensation for services must rest upon contract, express[64] or implied.[65] Where there is an express contract, the amount of compensation recoverable depends upon its terms;[66] if the contract is implied, the reasonable value of services rendered may intendent of printing sufficient to go to jury on issue whether his discharge was justifiable. Sun Print. & Pub. Ass'n v. Edwards [C. C. A.] 136 F. 591.

54. Must relate to issues made by pleadings. Mitchell Square Bale Ginning Co. v. Grant [Ala.] 38 So. 855.

55. Evidence of terms of contract between employe and a third person inadmissible. Shall v. Old Forge Co., 96 N. Y. S. 75. Evidence as to terms of other similar contracts between the parties inadmissible. Id.

56. Pay roll, made by plaintiff, admissible in action for wrongful discharge to show he had performed duties in the line of his employment. Sun Print. & Pub. Ass'n v. Edwards [C. C. A.] 136 F. 591.

57. What salesman earned selling goods of the same kind for another concern inadmissible on issue of damages. Roth v. Spero, 96 N. Y. S. 211. Where a contract of employment was for such time as certain work undertaken by the employer should last, evidence as to the length of time defendant's work would require was admissible to show plaintiff's damages by reason of the breach. Prescott v. Puget Sound Bridge & Dredging Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 606.

58, 59. See 4 C. L. 536.

60. N. Y. Laws 1897, c. 415, art. 8, § 110, limiting hours in bakeries to 60 per week and 10 per day is unconstitutional. Lochner v. People, 198 U. S. 45, 49 Law. Ed. 937, rvg. New York court of appeals. See People v. Lochner, 177 N. Y. 145, 69 N. E. 373, 101 Am. St. Rep. 773.

61. St. 1903, p. 33, c. 10 is upheld as a health regulation. Ex parte Kair [Nev.] 80 P. 463. It neither violates Const. Nev. art. 1, § 1, which guarantees the right to acquire and possess property, nor the Eighth amendment to the Federal constitution, prohibiting excessive fines and cruel and unusual punishments. Id. It does not deprive a miner of liberty or property without due process of law. Ex parte Kair [Nev.] 82 P. 453.

62. It is a matter of common knowledge that labor in the places named in the statute is unhealthful. Ex parte Kair [Nev.] 80 P. 463. Evidence that the mine in question was healthful is inadmissible. Id. [Nev.] 82 P. 453.

63. See 4 C. L. 537.

64. Contract for services made by corporation officer held to have been ratified so that employe could recover compensation thereunder. Reupke v. Stuhr & Son Grain Co., 126 Iowa, 632, 102 N. W. 509. Employe presented form of contract to employer, who approved it, and employe went to work under it; held, there was a completed contract and the employe could recover the compensation stipulated for. Featherstone Foundry & Mach. Co. v. Criswell [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 30. The execution and delivery of a promissory note to a creditor, who, as a part of the same transaction, enters into a written contract to employ the maker until the note becomes due six months thereafter, and for a further period of six months if the note is not paid at maturity, the two papers will be construed as a contract whereby the maker is to be employed until enabled to pay the note with his wages, and that his wages shall be applied on the note, and not that he shall be permitted to draw his wages as they become due and pay the note at maturity. Minzey v. Marcy Mfg. Co., 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 593.

65. Claim against estate for services to decedent cannot be sustained when no contract for compensation is shown. Piersol's Estate, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 204. Whether services were rendered under an implied agreement for compensation was for the jury where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that he did not intend to perform them as a gratuity but was acting under a mistake as to his rights. Blowers v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 377, 50 S. E. 19. Where an old friend nursed deceased, the members of his family being also with him, and no compensation was stipulated for, no promise to pay for such services should be implied. Teawalt v. Ramey's Ex'x, 103 Va. 42, 48 S. E. 505.

66. There can be no implied contract to pay what services are reasonably worth, if an express contract for a certain compensation is shown. O'Connell v. King, 26 R. I. 544, 59 A. 926. One who employs another to sell goods on a commission basis does not impliedly contract to conduct his business with reasonable skill and diligence. Salesman cannot recover commissions he would be recovered.[67] The presumption is that services performed by an employé are within the contract of employment,[68] and extra compensation, beyond that stipulated, cannot be recovered.[69] Unless the employe has been wrongfully discharged,[70] he may recover only for services actually performed.[71] Where a contract is entire, and the employe is rightfully discharged, he cannot recover for partial performance.[72] But there may be a recovery for partial performance where the employe quits the service with the employer's consent,[73] or for a legally sufficient cause, as for a breach by the employer.[74] In an action to recover compensation the complaint should allege that services were in fact rendered,[75] and that the compensation agreed upon was due.[76] The contract must be proved as alleged.[77] The terms of contracts with other employes cannot be proven to show the terms of the contract sued upon.[78] have earned had his employer so conducted his business. Byrns v. United Telpherage Co., 93 N. Y. S. 906. Evidence conflicting as to compensation agreed upon; question for jury. O'Connell v. King, 26 R. I. 544, 59 A. 926. Deduction from singer's salary for a night when no performance was given because other actors were absent, held not justifiable under contract. Wentworth v. Whitney, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 100. Contract for management of "City Ice Business" construed, and employe's share of "net profits" determined. Arthur Jordan Co. v. Caylor [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 419. Evidence held not to show an agreement to increase plaintiff's salary. Mackintosh v. Kimball, 101 App. Div. 494, 92 N. Y. S. 132. Second contract with salesman held to include provision that commissions paid him in cases where goods were returned or the account lost should be returned. Morrison Mfg. Co. v. Bryson [Iowa] 103 N. W. 1016. Evidence held to show agreed compensation of one employed to improve a building to be $5 per day without commissions on amount of pay roll. Shall v. Old Forge Co., 96 N. Y. S. 75. Salesman's contract allowed him 7½% commission on sales, and 10% of the net profits, and provided that he might draw $100 per week for his maintenance, and expense money. This contract was held not to give him an absolute right to $100 per week during the term of employment, but such allowance was an advance on account of his commissions and percentage of profits. Menage v. Rosenthal [Mass.] 73 N. E. 537. Contract of salesman, wrongfully discharged, provided for payments of $10 per week while traveling, and $20 per week while at home, and that he should travel according to his employer's direction. Held, he could recover $20 per week for remainder of term. Schreiber v. Klingenstein, 95 N. Y. S. 549.

Assignments of wages.[79]—Future earnings may be assigned if there is a subsisting contract.[80]

67. In fixing the value of services rendered, the time consumed in the performance of the service is only one of the elements to be considered. Duhme Jewelry Co. v. Hazen, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 606.

68. Evidence insufficient to show that certain services were extra or to show their value. Cooper v. Brooklyn Trust Co., 96 N. Y. S. 56.

69. Mere fact that additional services were performed at the employer's direction does not raise implied promise to pay additional compensation. Murray v. Griffiths, 48 Misc. 398, 95 N. Y. S. 573.

70. As to rights of wrongfully discharged employe, see ante, § 1.

71. Under contract for a term, no recovery for time when employe was sick and unable to perform. Hughes v. Toledo Scale & Cash Register Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 895. A servant who continues in the employment is entitled to wages until discharged, and whether acts of the master constitute an implied discharge is a question of fact. Mee v. Bowden Gold Min. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 980. Contract with baseball player construed as something more than one for personal services only, the defendant being bound not to discharge the player; recovery of salary by player up to the time he was released upheld, though the player did not play ball all the season on account of illness, but performed other duties as manager. Egan v. Winnipeg Baseball Club [Minn.] 104 N. W. 947.

72. Parker v. Farlinger [Ga.] 50 S. E. 98.

73. In action to recover for services, plaintiff having left before performance in full, the evidence was held sufficient to show consent to his leaving by his employer's wife, ratified by the husband, and an apportionment was warranted. Trawick v. Trussell [Ga.] 50 S. E. 86.

74. Where a contract of employment provides for payment to the employe of a share of the net profits of the business, refusal of the master to pay such share when due justifies the employe in quitting the employment, and he may recover such sums as became due to him under the contract while he was employed. Dunn v. Crichfield, 214 Ill. 292, 73 N. E. 386.

75. Complaint held sufficient. Stapper v. Wolter [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 850.

76. Averment that services were worth $30 per month does not amount to an averment that that sum was to be paid monthly. Stapper v. Wolter [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 850.

77. Complaint in action for salary alleged a contract for the term of one year from a certain date, but the evidence showed a continuation from that date of a prior contract; held, variance fatal. Treffinger v. Groh's Sons, 100 App. Div. 433, 91 N. Y. S. 837.

78. Featherstone Foundry & Mach. Co. v. Criswell [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 30.

Trade secrets and inventions.[81]—The obligation of an employe to assign to his employer an invention made in the course of his employment does not arise from the existence of the relation of employer and employe alone; there must be a contract to assign.[82] The disclosure by a servant of trade secrets learned by him in the course of his employment,[83] and the use of such secrets by a competitor which has enticed such servant away from his employment[84] may be enjoined by a court of equity. Where a contract of service does not provide for the performance of special, unique or extraordinary services, but only for the performance of such services as may be assigned the servant by the master,[85] a court of equity will not enjoin the servant from entering the service of another, in the absence of an agreement by the servant not to do so.[86] But a competitor which has enticed the servant away from his employment in an effort to learn trade secrets in possession of such servant, will be enjoined from employing such servant or retaining him in its service.[87]

Medical treatment.[88]—An action for damages alleged to have resulted from a premature discharge of an injured employe from a hospital, where he was being cared for pursuant to an agreement for hospital services in consideration of a monthly deduction from his wages, is an action for breach of contract, and not for a tort.[89] The measure of damages for breach of such contract is the reasonable cost of benefits which plaintiff lost by his premature discharge.[90] Such a contract contemplates the continuance of benefits to an injured or sick employe so long as his injury or sickness required.[91] Rules regarding hospital benefits adopted subsequent to a servant's employment and not called to his attention prior to his injury are not binding upon him.[92]

Statutory regulations.[93]—In Arkansas railroad companies are required to pay discharged employes on the day of their discharge.[94]

§ 3. Master's liability for injuries to servants. A. Nature and extent in general.[95]—The master is not an insurer of the safety of his servants; the law imposes only the duty of ordinary or reasonable care for their safety,[96] that is, that degree of

79. See 4 C. L. 539.

80. An assignment of wages to be earned under an existing contract of employment for the period of six months, founded upon a valuable consideration, and not made to hinder or defraud creditors, is valid. Quigley v. Welter [Minn.] 104 N. W. 236.

81. See 4 C. L. 539.

82. Evidence held not to show a contract to assign an invention. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Hansen [C. C. A.] 137 F. 403.

Note: Many authorities are examined and discussed in the opinion in the case above cited. It is held that the employer was entitled to nothing more than a shop right or license to use the invention, under the facts and circumstances disclosed, a distinction being drawn between such a license and absolute property rights in an invention. This distinction is said to have been observed in many cases cited and discussed.—Ed.

83. Employe who had been taught processes of making steel enjoined from disclosing such processes to a competitor. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 946.

84. Competitor of steel manufacturer enjoined from using secret processes of steel making which they might learn from servant of complainant. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 946.

85. Contract held not to call for special or extraordinary services. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 946.

86. Even though the servant knew valuable trade secrets, the terms of the contract not referring to special services in connection therewith. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 946.

87. The obtaining of trade secrets in the process of steel manufacture would constitute irreparable injury, giving equity power to interfere. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 946.

88. See 4 C. L. 539.

89. Scanlon v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 930.

90. Complaint claiming damages as for a tort is demurrable. Scanlon v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 930.

91, 92. Scanlon v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 930.

93. See 4 C. L. 540.

94. Railroad company held liable to penalty imposed by Sand. & H. Dig. § 6243 for failure to pay discharged employes on day of discharge where employe consented to wait for check 3 days, but had to wait 9, though he called on cashier for pay three times. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Brown [Ark.] 86 S. W. 994.

95. See 4 C. L. 540.

96. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6; Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. O'Nesky care used by ordinarily prudent men under similar circumstances.[97] Thus, a master is not responsible for injuries which could not reasonably have been foreseen and guarded against,[98] nor for injuries resulting from pure accident[99] or an act of God.[1]

[Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 300; Snowdale v. United Box Board & Paper Co. [Me.] 61 A. 683; Goransson v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 186 Mo. 300, 85 S. W. 338; Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103; Keys v. Winnsboro Granite Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 549; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hemphill [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 350; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401; Fulton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1012. The master is not an insurer so as to excuse want of ordinary care on part of employe. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6. Master only bound to furnish "reasonably safe" partition in coal bin, not "absolutely safe." Mueller v. Northwestern Iron Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 67. Appliances required to be reasonably, not absolutely, safe. Charping v. Toxaway Mills, 70 S. C. 470, 50 S. E. 196. Not absolute duty, but duty to use ordinary care, to keep passageway in mine reasonably safe. Himrod Coal Co. v. Clingan, 114 Ill. App. 568. Duty of master to furnish reasonably safe place is not absolute; he is held to the duty of exercising ordinary care to that end, under Civ. Code §§ 1970, 1971. Thompson v. California Const. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 367. Only ordinary care to furnish reasonably safe place required. Roth v. Eccles, 28 Utah, 456, 79 P. 918. No liability where piece of slate flew off and struck fireman who was breaking coal, since railroad company was not under the duty of furnishing absolutely safe coal. Vissman v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 502. Master bound only to use ordinary care to ascertain whether carboys containing acid were properly stoppered so as to prevent injury to employe handling them, himself in exercise of due care. Collins v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 825, 86 S. W. 973. Instructions held as a whole to state degree of care correctly. Willis v. Cherokee Falls Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 538. Instruction prejudicially erroneous. Harry Bros. Co. v. Brady [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 615. Instruction erroneous because leaving to jury inference that master's duty to provide safe appliances was absolute. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Snow [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 908. Instruction that railway company owed locomotive engineer duty of "high degree of care" to keep its roadbed safe, erroneous. Van Blarcom v. Central R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 182. Instruction that it is master's duty to furnish "safe and suitable" tools and appliances upheld. Anderson v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 490, 50 S. E. 202. Instruction that master must furnish "safe and suitable" appliances upheld, no qualification being requested, and a subsequent instruction using the expression "reasonably safe and suitable." Sanders v. Aiken Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 679. Only ordinary care in view of the circumstances is required, hence an instruction that the law requires the highest degree of responsibility for the care and protection of an infant employe was erroneous. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362.

97. Snowdale v. United Box Board & Paper Co. [Me.] 61 A. 683. Standard is conduct of ideal prudent man. Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769. The care required of a master is that which ordinarily prudent men engaged in the same business use under like circumstances. Rule as to care required in employment of servants. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. It is duty of master to guard against injuries which a reasonably prudent person would anticipate and guard against. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Pope [Tex.] 86 S. W. 5. Master is not held to that high degree of care which a prudent man would use for his own safety. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. Instruction that duty owed by railway company to employes was that which a master would use to guard against a personal danger to himself, held erroneous because not correct in principle and inapplicable to railroad companies. Southern Pac. Co. v. Gloyd [C. C. A.] 138 F. 388.

98. Where an accident is unusual and not reasonably to be anticipated in the light of experience in the use of appliances furnished, there is no culpable negligence. Use of smooth board clamps in lacing rubber belt not negligence, when such clamps were ordinarily used with safety. Standard Pottery Co. v. Mouôy [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 188. Defective tug not proximate cause of driver's injury where, when it broke, he put his foot on a street railway rail, where it was run over by the wagon, his team suddenly starting. Foley v. McMahon [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 113. Where bottles of mineral water had never before exploded and an explosion could not reasonably have been anticipated, the master was not liable for injuries resulting from an explosion because he failed to provide a mask for the employe's use. Dullnig v. Duerler Mfg. Co. [Tex.] 87 S. W. 332. Railway company which builds bridge of standard width, used by it and other companies without previous known injury like the one in issue, cannot be held negligent as to a brakeman who was struck and killed by a part of the bridge when leaning out from a passing train. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Haas [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1003. Railroad company which had used open culverts of the kind customarily used in that part of the country for 30 years, without resulting fires or injuries to employes, was not negligent in performance of its duty to furnish a brakeman a safe place, though the culvert in question was on a grade where trains had to be split at times. Southern Pac. Co. v. Gloyd [C. C. A.] 138 F. 388. No recovery where negligence of the master was not shown but it appeared an unintelligent act or mistake of judgment of the servant caused his injury. Illinois Steel Co. v. Rolewicz, 113 Ill. App. 312.

99. Where fireman was struck in the eye by a splinter from a file which he was holding and the engineer striking while repairing the engine, the master was not liable.

Whether ordinary or reasonable care has been exercised by the master in a particular instance is a question of fact[2] to be determined by reference to the nature of the employment and the exigencies and circumstances of the case.[3]

Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Blockman [Miss.] 39 So. 479. Where railway company had track patrolled in rainy weather, and sent a trackman ahead of the train, it was not liable for the death of a locomotive engineer caused by a landslide, this being a pure accident. Kinzel v. Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 489.

1. Whether an accident was caused by an act of God is usually a question of fact. Where heavy rains washed out track, it could not be said as matter of law that act of God caused the accident which resulted in engineer's death. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. App. 153, 87 S. W. 395.

2. Whether master or his representative was negligent, held a question for the jury: Whether dangerous condition of sprocket chain constituted negligence. Berg v. U. S. Leather Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 60. Whether machinery was operated too fast when belt was put on. Dolson v. Dunham [Minn.] 104 N. W. 964. Whether reasonable care required a derailing switch at place where accident occurred. Smith v. Fordyce [Mo.] 88 S. W. 679. Whether railroad company was negligent in allowing sides of cut to become dangerous, a landslide resulting and causing an employe's death. Fisher's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 373. Whether automatic current breakers were in common use on electric machines like the one in question, and whether defendant was negligent in not supplying one. Kremer v. New York Edison Co., 102 App. Div. 433, 92 N. Y. S. 883. Whether reasonable care had been exercised in furnishing appliances for handling melting pitch. Motzing v. Excelsior Brewing Co., 94 N. Y. S. 1118. Whether, in collision accident, engineer of standing train was negligent in having it outside the limits fixed by an order. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Spencer's Adm'x [Va.] 52 S. E. 310. Whether milling company which used cars placed boards on top of them so as to render them dangerous to brakemen. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. Whether defect in frame which caused it to start automatically was due to master's neglect in making inspection and repairs. Fountaine v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 738. Whether railway split switch was in fact defective and a proximate cause of brakeman's death. Turrittin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 225. Whether engineer was negligent in not taking up slack of line used to haul logs on cars, whereby plaintiff, a fellow-servant, was injured. Hart v. Cascade Timber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 738. Whether a railroad company was negligent in overcrowding car in which employes were being carried home from work, causing some to ride on top of the car, where one was killed by a viaduct. Chicago Terminal Transfer Co. v. O'Donnell, 213 Ill. 545, 72 N. E. 1133. Where brakeman was injured by switch engine. Biles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 129. Car inspector caught between cars. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Phillips [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 2, 87 S. W. 187. Employe killed by explosion of throttle valve of steam engine. Johnston's Adm'r v. Moore Lime Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 360. Quarryman injured by explosion of dynamite which had been left in rock. Di Stefeno v. Peekskill Lighting & R. Co., 107 App. Div. 293, 95 N. Y. S. 179. Employe injured by explosion of molten iron poured into alleged defective mold. Haslin v. National Foundry Co., 94 N. Y. S. 101. Employe injured by premature dynamite explosion in quarry. Kopf v. Monroe Stone Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 319, 104 N. W. 313. Where defendants hauled employes to place of work on a push car attached to a train, and the car left the track and ran over plaintiff. DeMase v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 170. Brakeman struck by engine while walking between tracks. Loomis v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 182 N. Y. 380, 75 N. E. 228. Injury to operative of "shavings baler" alleged to be due to loose and defective roller. Shalgren v. Red Cliff Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 531. Negligence alleged was furnishing defective roller crusher and failing to give notice of starting it, whereby plaintiff's hand was caught while he was oiling it. Westby v. Washington Brick, Lime & Mfg. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 271. Where section boss took a hand car out when he knew a train was due, the jury was warranted in finding he was guilty of gross negligence rendering the company liable for an injury to a hand caused by a collision with the expected train, the injured hand being himself in the exercise of due care. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Helm [Ky.] 89 S. W. 709. The fact that the boss ordered the men to jump when he saw the train coming, did not relieve him from the consequences of such negligence. Id. Foreman of a hand car ran the car on the time of a train and a hand, trying to stop the car when the train suddenly appeared, fell off the car. Whether the foreman was guilty of gross negligence such that the company was responsible for the injury was properly submitted to the jury. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bishop [Ky.] 89 S. W. 221. Train dispatcher held not negligent in making statements and inquiries concerning a certain train; but evidence sufficient to go to jury on issue of his negligence regarding other trains. Ricker v. Central R. Co. [N. J. Law] 61 A. 89. Where conflicting evidence might have warranted finding that defect in steam pipe which exploded could have been discovered by a careful inspection, it was error to direct a verdict for defendant. Koehler v. New York Steam Co. [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 538. Requested instruction excluding issue whether other warning than ringing of bell should have been given properly refused. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 34, 87 S. W. 371. Though fireman on roughly built railroad used in lumbering assumed incidental risks, the master owed him reasonable care under the circumstances, and a verdict that negligence of the master caused collapse of a trestle, timbers of which were rotted, would not be reversed, when based on conflicting evidence. Fulton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1012.

The common-law duties of the master to use ordinary care to provide a reason-

3. Snowdale v. United Box Board & Paper Co. [Me.] 61 A. 683. The master must exercise reasonable care in view of the situation of the parties, the nature of the business, character of machinery, and appliances used, all surrounding circumstances and conditions, and the exigencies requiring vigilance and attention. Fulton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1012. High degree of care imposed on telephone companies, owing to dangerous nature of electricity. Scott v. Iowa Tel. Co., 126 Iowa, 524, 102 N. W. 432. The degree of care required of the master varies with the dangerousness of the work required to be done. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, 73 N. E. 787. Ordinary care is such care as reasonable and prudent men use under like circumstances in providing generally for the servant's safety having regard to the work and attendant difficulties and dangers. Fisher's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 373. Owner of logging railroad, not used for freight or passengers, is not held to same degree of care as owner of commercial railroad, in constructing and maintaining the road. Demko v. Carbon Hill Coal Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 162. A track on which a derrick car is run must be reasonably safe for that particular purpose; safety of ordinary tracks used for ordinary purposes is not the test. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. George [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 59, 89 S. W. 1091.

Master held negligent: General superintendent of electric railway held negligent in leaving cars on a spur track and not notifying operatives of work train of the fact. Milbourne v. Arnold Elec. Power & Station Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 177, 103 N. W. 821. Finding that pile driver was negligently operated warranted by evidence. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Huyett [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 124, 89 S. W. 1118. Finding of negligence justifiable where engineer said he would fix step or have it fixed and failed to do so, and the fireman was injured. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Garren [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1096. Failure to fasten car door as result of which a timber projecting from the car struck a fireman standing beside his engine, held negligence. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bussong [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 189, 90 S. W. 73. Where plaintiff was struck in the eye by a particle of steel while operating a power steel punch and die, the evidence was held to warrant a finding that the use of unannealed steel by defendant was negligence and that this negligence caused the injury. Arnold v. Harrington Cutlery Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 194. Tender of cage in mine held negligent in allowing cage to fall, injuring a miner. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni, 215 Ill. 583, 74 N. E. 751. Evidence sufficient to sustain charges of negligence where young switchman in employ of construction company was caught in a switch frog and struck by an engine. Mace v. Boedker & Co., 127 Iowa, 721, 104 N. W. 475. Master liable where foreman in charge of train, who knew servant's dangerous position on the edge of a trestle on which the train was standing, ordered the train to start without warning, causing servant to fall. Dean v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 38 Wash. 565, 80 P. 842. Brakeman in charge of switching operations and acting as vice-principal held negligent in ordering a man to catch a car, when a collision resulted with another car, knocking employe off. Struble v. Burlington, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 142.

Master held not negligent: While boy of 12 was in elevator carrying goods to another floor, a companion threw his hat off and the boy was injured while trying to get it. There was no evidence that the elevator was defective or was negligently handled. Held, no recovery warranted, no negligence on the part of defendant being shown. Hendrix v. Cooleemee Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 169, 50 S. E. 561. Proof that a saw had occasionally been stopped while the operator was waiting for material was not proof that to permit it to run was negligence. Witten v. Bell & Coggeshall Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 580, 85 S. W. 1094. The fact that a member of a construction crew was jerked off a tender on which he was riding did not alone show negligence on the part of the engineer or fireman, the construction train not having such an equipment that jerks could be prevented. Yates v. Miller's Creek Const. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 241. Engineer not negligent in running engine too fast when plaintiff was on the front with a lantern and could have signalled to slow up. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173. Master not liable where he ordered servant to throw a pick over a partition, and servant did so in a negligent manner injuring an employe on the other side, since the order contemplated the doing of the act in a proper and careful manner. Desautels v. Cloutier [Mass.] 75 N. E. 703. Negligence of company not shown where train went off track while going round a properly constructed curve at the rate of 45 miles an hour, no defect in train or track being shown. Southern Ind. R. Co. v. Messick [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1097. Failure to have lights on switch engine was not actionable when injured brakeman testified that he saw the engine coming. Wise Terminal Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 51 S. E. 731. Where brakeman while off duty at night tried to board a switch engine and was hurt, defendant was not negligent in having an oil can on the footboard or in not having a rule forbidding such practice. Id. Where an employe was killed by being thrown from a scaffold, owing to a collision between it and a truck, and it appeared that the scaffold was properly constructed, and that the master had watchmen on duty in the street, negligence of the master was not shown. Sheridan v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 101 App. Div. 534, 91 N. Y. S. 1052. Where an employe, at work in the yards, stepped back from a freight engine from which hot steam came as it started, and on to another track where a passenger train struck him, it was ably safe place of work,[4] reasonably safe tools and appliances,[5] and a sufficient number of competent servants to do the required work,[6] to provide suitable methods of work and to make and promulgate reasonable rules and regulations,[7] and to warn and instruct servants,[8] are more fully discussed and illustrated in succeeding paragraphs. These duties are personal to the master and cannot be delegated so as to relieve him from liability for their nonperformance.[9]

Statutes.[10]—Violations of statutes requiring dangerous machinery to be guarded,[11] limiting the number of hours of continuous service by railway employes,[12] or prohibiting the employment of children under a certain age,[13] injury having resulted therefrom, have been held to constitute negligence per se for which a recovery may be had against the master. Whether a statute has been violated[14] and whether a held that neither the act of stopping the freight where it was stopped, nor the excessive speed of the passenger train, nor failure to ring the bell or to whistle, there being no crossing there, constituted negligence. Fore v. Chicago & A. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 1034. Evidence held not to show engineer negligent in not stopping the engine sooner after discovering something was wrong. Hover v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 57, 89 S. W. 1084. Railroad company not negligent in employing as brakeman, a boy of 19 who looked like a man of 22 or 25 years. Moore v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [La.] 38 So. 913. Where brakeman, in his sworn application, stated he was 21 years of age, and had a man's physique, his minority was not to be considered in an action for injuries to him. Williams v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 114 La. 13, 37 So. 992. No breach by stevedore of duty to furnish safe place and appliances where employe fell through hatchway which was a part of the vessel and did not belong to stevedore's equipment. Hyde v. Booth [Mass.] 74 N. E. 337. Engineer, running steam hoist, not negligent in failing to keep lookout when he had no reason to anticipate that injured man would place himself in position of danger as he did. Campbell Creek Coal Co. v. Lewis [Ky.] 89 S. W. 504. Evidence insufficient to go to jury on defendant's negligence where employe was killed by engine running backwards on track to pick up parted train. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State [Md.] 61 A. 189.

4, 5. See post, § 3 B.

6. See post, § 3 E.

7. See post, § 3 C.

8. See post, § 3 D.

9. One to whom such duties are delegated is a vice-principal. See post, § 3 E.

10. See 4 C. L. 541.

11. Failure to guard pulleys and belts which could have been guarded as required by Rev. St. 1899 § 6433, is negligence per se. Stafford v. Adams [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1130. Violation of statutory duty to guard machinery is negligence per se. Huey Co. v. Johnston [Ind.] 73 N. E. 996. Failure to guard cog wheels as required by Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, § 1, is negligence per se. Hansen v. Seattle Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 102. Failure to provide belt shifters as required by Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, § 1, is negligence per se. Whelan v. Washington Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 98.

12. Proof that Laws 1897, p. 464, c. 415, § 7 (providing that railway employes who have been on duty for 24 hours consecutively shall not be required to do any more work until they have had 8 hours rest), has been violated, and that an injury has resulted, is proof of negligence, and gives a right of action to the injured party. Pelin v. New York, etc., R. Co., 102 App. Div. 71, 92 N. Y. S. 468. Where freight crew had been on duty more than 24 hours and failed to note signals for a second section of a train, a collision resulting, there was a recovery for a fireman's death. Id. The intention of the employers and the fact that it was not anticipated that the work assigned would require more than 24 hours time, does not affect liability. Id.

13. Employment of child under 14 contrary to Labor Law § 70, is negligence per se. Lee v. Sterling Silk Mfg. Co., 93 N. Y. S. 560. A recovery may be had under Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 48, § 33, prohibiting employment of children under 14 in certain occupations, though the employer did not know the child's age, and though the child falsely represented that his age was above the statutory limit. American Car & Foundry Co. v. Armentraut, 214 Ill. 509, 73 N. E. 766, afg. 116 Ill. App. 121. A violation of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087b, prohibiting the employment of children under 14 in manufacturing or mercantile establishments, and § 7087y, making a violation thereof a misdemeanor, is negligence per se, as where boy under 14 was employed in sawmill. Nickey v. Steuder [Ind.] 73 N. E. 117.

14. Laws 1903, p. 261, c. 136, prohibiting the "hiring out" of children under 14 in factories, etc., is violated by an employer who knowingly employs or retains a child under the age of 14. Kirkham v. Wheeler-Osgood Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 869. A violation of Laws 29th Gen. Assem. p. 108, c. 149, § 2, requiring saws to be guarded, and prohibiting employment of children under 16, is actionable negligence, even though the employer has not been given the notice by the bureau of labor provided for in § 4. Woolf v. Nauman Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 785. Calling upon a boy of 16 to hold a belt while it was being repaired is not a violation of Labor Law § 81, providing that boys under 18 shall not be permitted or required to clean machinery while in motion. Scialo v. Steffens, 94 N. Y. S. 305. The statute (Rev. St. c. 48) prohibiting the employment of children under 16 in extra hazardous employments, applies only to the particular place where the servant is to work, hence evidence of the danger incident to recovery may be had in a particular case[15] must be determined from the language of the act involved. Though violation of a statute enacted for the benefit of the general public may not be negligence per se as to a servant, such violation may be shown in an action by a servant and considered by the jury on the issue of negligence.[16]

Statutes relating to appliances or the place of work,[17] and those creating liability for acts of co-employes,[18] are elsewhere treated.

The relation of master and servant must exist.[19]—To warrant a recovery for injuries caused by an alleged breach of a master's duties, it must appear that the person injured was at the time the defendant's servant,[20] and was engaged in performing, in a reasonable and proper manner,[21] duties within the scope of his employment.[22] One rightfully on the master's premises after his day's work was over,[23] and railway work in other parts of a plant is inadmissible in an action under the statute. Miller v. National Enameling & Stamping Co., 116 Ill. App. 99.

15. Laws 1902, c. 600, gives no cause of action to a resident of another state against a corporation of that state, for an injury which occurred there. Kleps v. Bristol Mfg. Co., 107 App. Div. 488, 95 N. Y. S. 337. Recovery for instantaneous death of a servant is authorized by St. 1887, c. 270, as amended by St. 1892, c. 260, § 1. Oulighan v. Butler [Mass.] 75 N. E. 726. Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 73, gives a widow or next of kin a right of action for the death, instantly or without conscious suffering, of an employe. § 72 gives a right of action to representatives for a death preceded by conscious suffering; damages recoverable under § 73, $4,000, under § 72, $5,000. Held, where widow sued as administratrix under § 72, she could also maintain an action as widow under § 73. Smith v. Thomson-Houston Elec. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 664.

16. Ordinance requiring ringing of locomotive bell inside city limits held to apply to yards which were closed to the general public and required ringing of the bell of an engine moved in the yard. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863. Employe at work on track with push car within hearing distance of a whistling post, was entitled to the benefit of the statutory signals by a train. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Tisdale [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 1063. Rev. Laws, c. 104, § 27, providing that elevators shall be equipped with a device to prevent persons being caught between the floors of the building and of the elevator cabs, unless the omission of such device is sanctioned by the building inspector. Held, that violation of the statute does not conclusivey show negligence but may be considered by the jury on that issue. Finnegan v. Samuel Winslow Skate Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 192.

17. See post, § 3 B.

18. See post, § 3 E.

19. See 4 C. L. 542.

20. Whether boy was servant of mill company, or was employed by one who was an independent contractor, held for jury. Johnson v. Crookston Lumber Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 891. Whether plaintiff was employed by defendant or by an independent contractor employed by defendant held for jury. Caron v. Powers-Simpson Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 889. Evidence insufficient to take to jury question whether relationship of defendant and plaintiff was that of master and servant. Condon v. Schoenfeld, 214 Ill. 226, 73 N. E. 333. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that defendant acted as principal in hiring plaintiff, and not as agent for a town. Bulduzzi v. James Ramage Paper Co., 140 F. 95. Where by a traffic arrangement between several railroads occupying the same street, a watchman was employed, paid, and controlled by one to perform the services of watchman for all the roads at the point in question, the watchman was the servant only of the road which employed and paid him. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 113 Tenn. 266, 87 S. W. 418. Though the highway agent and selectmen of a town have power to hire men to work on the highway, and to pay them wages, the relation of master and servant does not exist between a town and a man so employed. O'Brien v. Derry [N. H.] 60 A. 843. Where no contract of apprenticeship exists, the refusal of a foreman to permit a minor employe to leave his work for medical aid, except at the risk of discharge, is a breach of duty not growing out of the employment and the master is not liable for fatal consequences resulting. Rohrer v. Culbertson, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 197.

Stevedore whose duties required him to be on vessel continuously while en route was not a passenger but an employe. Lambert v. La Conner Trading & Transp. Co., 37 Wash. 113, 79 P. 608. A porter on a sleeping car owned by a separate company is not the servant of the railroad company which hauls the car. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hamler, 215 Ill. 525, 74 N. E. 705.

21. Railroad company not liable where baggageman got down on car step to throw off a message while the train was moving when he could have thrown it from the car door. McTaggart v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 60 A. 1027. Where brakeman's duties did not require him to be on the side of a car while passing a bridge he could not recover for injuries caused by being knocked off by the bridge. Krebbs v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 130. Where a reasonably safe exit has been provided, the master owes a servant who does not use that provided only the duties owed to a licensee. Haber v. Jenkins Rubber Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 382.

22. Member of steam shovel crew held not to have been in performance of duties at employes being carried to and from their place of work[24] with the consent of the company[25] have been held employes; while a railway employe returning home on a velocipede, which he was allowed to use, was held a mere licensee.[26] One who in good faith enters upon the master's work, at the request of a servant in apparent charge of such work, is not a trespasser, but assumes temporarily the relation of servant;[27] and one who assists the servant of another, at the request of such servant, time he was killed. Baker's Adm'r v. Lexington & E. R. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 149. No recovery where servant was injured by coming in contact with a machine which he did not operate and near which his duties did not require him to be. Fox v. Clearfield Wooden Ware Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 245. Nonsuit properly entered where slate breaker was injured in elevator machinery to which his duties did not call him, and it was not shown how the accident occurred. Jones v. Scranton Coal Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 117. No recovery for injury where servant was assisting an independent contractor and was not engaged in his own duties. Busby v. Anderson Water, Light & Power Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 156. Master owes to servant no duty with respect to instrument or machinery which the servant is forbidden to use. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562. Held not within the scope of baggage master's duties to carry a message from the station agent to a workman employed along the right of way, and to throw it from his car while passing the place where such workman was employed, hence no recovery for his death resulting from falling or being knocked from the car. McTaggart v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 60 A. 1027. Where a railway bridge builder was injured while returning home on a railway velocipede from his place of work, the velocipede being struck by a switch engine, and his complaint did not show that such use of the velocipede was an incident of his service under his contract of employment, he could not recover as for an injury to an employe. Wabash R. Co. v. Erb [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 939. Where a little girl, whose duties did not require her to be near a mangle, put her fingers on its rollers to see if they were hot, and another child then started the machine, the master was not liable for the resulting injury. Evans v. Josephine Mills [Ga.] 52 S. E. 538. Evidence did not show brakeman was not acting in the line of his duty when he was knocked off a car by a low bridge. Taliaferro v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 437. Plaintiff, who was employed in the bottling department of a brewery and knew that his foreman had no power to put him to work in any other department, was injured while at work in the wash house, a different department from the bottling department. He could not recover as a servant. Freeman v. San Antonio Brewing Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1165.

23. Where servant is permitted to eat his lunch on the master's premises, the relation of master and servant continues while he goes to get his dinner pail after his day's work is over. Taylor v. Bush & Sons Co. [Del.] 61 A. 236.

24. An employe being carried home on a work train after his day's work is an employe, not a passenger. Southern Ind. R. Co. v. Messick [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1097. It is the duty of a railroad company which makes a practice of carrying its employes to and from their place of work to exercise ordinary care for the safety of such employes while so doing, though such employes are not to be considered as passengers. Chicago Terminal Transfer Co. v. O'Donnell, 213 Ill. 545, 72 N. E. 1133.

25. Where conductor stopped train and picked up track men to carry them to their place of work, the company did not owe such employes the duty of ordinary care unless conductor's act was in the scope of his employment. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schiavone, 216 Ill. 275, 74 N. E. 1048.

26. The company owed him the duty of ordinary care to avoid injuring him. Complaint held to state cause of action for injury from being struck by switch engine. Wabash R. Co. v. Erb [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 939.

27. This seems to be the weight of authority. Aga v. Harbach, 127 Iowa, 144, 102 N. W. 833. Whether a servant had power to employ a substitute, and whether the master ratified his employment held questions for jury. Id.

NOTE. Status of substitute or assistant not employed by master: "It may be conceded that, generally speaking, a servant who is engaged to perform a given labor is not authorized to bind his master by the employment of a substitute or assistant. The relation of the master to a servant is one involving both responsibility and risk, and is not to be imposed by the act of another without authority or consent, express or implied. But in most lines of business the master cannot always remain, in person or by vice principal, in immediate supervision of the servant; and it not infrequently happens that some unforeseen contingency arises, rendering it necessary, in the master's interest, that the servant have temporary assistance. In many such cases it has been held that the servant has implied authority to engage such temporary service, and that the substitute or assistant, if not in the law the employe of the master, is at least entitled to the same measure of protection as is the servant or agent upon whose request he rendered the assistance. Johnson v. Ashland W. Co., 71 Wis. 553, 37 N. W. 823, 5 Am. St. Rep. 243; Railroad Co. v. Scott, 71 Tex. 703, 10 S. W. 298, 10 Am. St. Rep. 804; Goff v. Railroad Co., 28 Ill. App. 529; Sloan v. R. Co., 62 Iowa, 728, 16 N. W. 331; Barstow v. Railroad Co., 143 Mass. 535, 10 N. E. 255; Marks v. Railroad Co., 146 N. Y. 190, 40 N. E. 782; Cleveland v. Spicer, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 399. It is also held that the substitute or helper employed and paid by the servant with the knowledge or acquiescence of the master is not a trespasser or mere volunteer, and, while engaged in the work of the master, the latter is bound for the purpose of expediting his own business or that of the master, is not regarded as a trespasser or mere volunteer,[28] though the relation of master and servant be not established.[29] A servant who has been sent to perform work for another person, with whom a contract for its performance has been made by his master, does not, by that fact alone, become the servant of the latter.[30] Where work is being done for two employers, under the direction of a common foreman, both owe to employes engaged in such work the duties of a master;[31] and a failure of the common foreman to perform this duty renders both, or either, liable to an employe for damage suffered in consequence thereof.[32]

A general employer does not owe the duties of a master to one who is an independent contractor[33] nor to the servants of an independent contractor,[34] but liability to servants of another may arise from breach of a contract[35] or statutory[36] duty. An employer may owe the duties of a master in some respects to one who is in other respects an independent contractor.[37] A master is not liable to his servants to exercise reasonable care for his safety. Rummell v. Dilworth, 111 Pa. 343, 2 A. 355, 363; Anderson v. Guineau, 9 Wash. 304, 37 P. 449. He occupies the same relation, and becomes subject to the same rules, including the operation of the fellow-servant rule, as do those who are directly employed by the master, even though he may not be entitled to recover wages. See cases already cited; also Mayton v. Railroad Co., 63 Tex. 77, 51 Am. Rep. 637; Eason v. Railroad Co., 65 Tex. 577; 57 Am. Rep. 606; Osborne v. Railroad Co., 68 Me. 49, 28 Am. Rep. 16. Stated from another standpoint, the master has quite often been held liable to third persons for injuries occasioned by the negligence of persons performing his work at the request or employment of a servant to whom such work was intrusted. Booth v. Wister, 7 Car. & P. 66; Haluptzok v. Railroad Co., 55 Minn. 446, 57 N. W. 144, 26 L. R. A. 739; Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355."—From opinion in Aga v. Harbach [Iowa] 102 N. W. 833.

28. One of three partners who bought a threshing machine engine, was not a trespasser or volunteer, in assisting a servant of the seller, at his request, in setting up the engine. Meyer v. Kenyon-Rosing Mach. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 132.

29. Meyer v. Kenyon-Rosing Mach. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 132.

30. Ouligban v. Butler [Mass.] 75 N. E. 726. What relation existed between the parties during the performance of the services contracted for may be a question of fact. Whether general servant of contractor became servant of defendant, and whether a person in charge of repairs to powder magazine was defendant's servant, held for jury. Id.

31. American Cotton Co. v. Simmons [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 343, 87 S. W. 842.

32. American Cotton Co. v. Simmons [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 343, 87 S. W. 842. A person hired by one of such parties, ordered by his foreman to assist in the work, which pertained to the plant of his employer, was held justified in assuming that the work was being done under his contract of employment and that his foreman had authority to order him to engage therein. Id.

33. See title Independent Contractors, 5 C. L. 1782. One who is an independent contractor cannot recover as servant. Texas Short Line R. Co. v. Waymire [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 907, 89 S. W. 452.

34. Rooney v. Brogan Const. Co., 107 App. Div. 258, 95 N. Y. S. 1. Relation of master and servant does not exist between contractor and servant of subcontractor. Larson v. Centennial Mill Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 294. Servant of an independent contractor employed by city is not an employe of the city and cannot recover from the city for injuries received in his work in a dangerous place. Engler v. Seattle [Wash.] 82 P. 136. Owner of manufacturing plant agreed to run it entirely for defendant's work for a specified time, making all repairs and paying all expenses and being paid therefor by defendant. Held, the owner was an independent contractor, and defendant was not liable for an injury to an employe in the manufactory. Kirby v. Lackawanna Steel Co., 109 App. Div. 334, 95 N. Y. S. 833. Stevedore who employed man to assist in loading ship was under duty of seeing that tackle was properly used and he, and not the ship, was liable for an injury caused by an improper use of the tackle supplied. Carlson v. Comeric Co., 140 F. 109. Where the owner of the premises employs an independent contractor to do work thereon the owner does not owe the duties of a master to the contractor's servants, but owes them only the duties of such owner. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. See Independent Contractors, 5 C. L. 1782; Negligence, 4 C. L. 764.

35. Where plaintiff was employed by a carriers' association as a grain scooper, and defendant was under contract with the association to furnish appliances for the work, defendant was liable to plaintiff for injuries caused by unsafe appliances supplied him. O'Keefe v. Great Northern Elevator Co., 93 N. Y. S. 407.

36. Recovery from owner under Labor Law § 20, for death of employe of contractor who fell into shaft left unguarded in violation of the statute. Rooney v. Brogan Const. Co., 107 App. Div. 258, 95 N. Y. S. 1.

37. If contract required employer to furnish a block and tackle he was under the duty of furnishing one reasonably safe, and would be liable to the contractor for a

for failure to supply suitable appliances for the use of employes of an independent contractor,[38] nor is it the master's duty to inform his servants that a person employed by him is an independent contractor to whom the master is not bound to furnish suitable appliances.[39] The independent contractor is alone liable for his own negligence.[40] An employer is not liable for negligence of servants of another.[41]

The duties of the master to his servant arise out of the condition or status created when the latter is accepted as the employe of the former, and an action for damages for injuries is not a suit on a contract.[42] Hence, the doctrine that one cannot repudiate a contract and at the same time recover benefits under it does not apply where an infant employe sues for injuries but disaffirms an agreement to observe the master's rules.[43]

Where a minor is employed in a dangerous business without his father's consent, his father has a right of action for loss of the son's services through injury to him.[44] The father's right to recover in such case is not affected by facts which would defeat a recovery in an action by the son.[45] The mere fact that a father consented to the employment of the son will not preclude a recovery;[46] but if the father consented to the son's employment, and the son knew and appreciated the danger, the father cannot recover.[47]

The master's negligence must have been the proximate cause[48] of the servant's injuries.[49]—What was the proximate cause of an injury is ordinarily a question of fact to be determined by the jury, except in those few cases, where the facts are undisputed and such that only one reasonable conclusion can be drawn therefrom.[50] breach of that duty, though the contractor had his own men and was not a servant in other respects. Texas Short Line R. Co. v. Waymire [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 907, 89 S. W. 452.

38. The employer of a general contractor may assume that the contractor will supply his own servants with reasonably safe appliances. Miller v. Moran Bros. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1089.

39. Miller v. Moran Bros. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1089.

40. Employer not liable to his servant injured because of use of unsafe appliance by servants of independent contractor. Miller v. Moran Bros. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1089. Persons who agreed to furnish materials and work for roofing and who were to do it according to their own methods were independent contractors and not mere employes, and were liable for injuries to an employe caused by their negligence. Miller v. Merritt, 211 Pa. 127, 60 A. 508.

41. An independent contractor is not liable to his servants for negligence of servants of another independent contractor at work on the same building. Penner v. Vinton Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 381, 104 N. W. 385. Master not liable for injury to loom operator caused by negligence of an employe of an independent contractor employed by the master to put in a sprinkler system. Smith v. Naushon Co., 26 R. I. 578, 60 A. 242. Independent contractor who put man at work repairing a boiler in its switching yards was not responsible for negligence of the trainmen. Breeze v. MacKinnon Mfg. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 195, 103 N. W. 908.

42. Alabama Great So. R. Co. v. Bonner [Ala.], 39 So. 619.

43. Defendant pleaded such agreement and its violation by plaintiff and plaintiff set up infancy; demurrer to reply overruled. Alabama Great So. R. Co. v. Bonner [Ala.] 39 So. 619.

44. Boy of 18 injured while employed as section hand. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hervey [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 80, 89 S. W. 1095.

45. That the injury was caused by a fellow-servant's negligence is no defense. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hervey [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 80, 89 S. W. 1095.

46. Action for death of minor son. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362.

47. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hervey [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 80, 89 S. W. 1095.

48. For discussion of doctrine of proximate cause, see Negligence, 4 C. L. 770.

49. See 4 C. L. 544. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 115 Ill. App. 209; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State [Md.] 61 A. 189. Instruction erroneous because permitting recovery upon a state of facts which did not require a finding of negligence by the master causally connected with the injury. St. Louis & N. A. R. Co. v. Midkiff [Ark.] 87 S. W. 446. Though a master is guilty of negligence per se by violating a statute, he is not liable for an injury unless such negligence is the proximate cause thereof. Nickey v. Steuder [Ind.] 73 N. E. 117. No recovery for failure to guard ripsaw unless it is shown that its unguarded condition was proximate cause of injury. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899.

50. When the facts are undisputed, what constitutes proximate and remote cause in matters of negligence becomes a question of law. Roots Co. v. Meeker [Ind.] 73 N. E. 253. If from the testimony, from which negligence of the defendant may reasonably be inferred, different minds

If the act or omission of the master is one from which he ought to have anticipated, in the exercise of ordinary care, that injury was liable to result, he is liable for an injury resulting therefrom though such injury is unusual and was not in fact foreseen.[51] If an injury would not have resulted but for negligence of the master, he is not relieved from responsibility by the fact that an independent cause for which he was not responsible,[52] such as an act of God[53] or negligence of a fellow-servant,[54] concurred in producing the injury or damage. These principles are further illustrated by holdings grouped in the note.[55] might honestly draw different conclusions as to the cause of the accident, that question is for the jury. Ferguson v. Central R. Co., 71 N. J. Law, 647, 60 A. 382.

Proximate cause held a question for jury: Miner injured by explosion in entry. Moore v. Grachowski, 111 Ill. App. 216. Whether defective hook caused chain and block to fall. O'Keefe v. Great Northern Elevator Co., 93 N. Y. S. 407. Whether slippery condition of ground or failure to guard shafting was cause of injuries. Hoveland v. Hall Bros. Marine R. & Shipbuilding Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1090. Whether failure to stop cars caused injury to brakeman who was coupling other cars. Southern Const. Co. v. Hinkle [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 309. Whether insufficient number of men, or manner of making repairs on shafting, or failure to warn, was cause of injury. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592. Whether belt was caused to wind round shaft and thus jerk a machine out of place by defective key. Kalker v. Hedden [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 395. How far defective plank on trestle on which railroad employe stepped from car contributed to his injury. Wazenski v. New York, etc., R. Co., 180 N. Y. 466, 73 N. E. 229. Whether failure to have an attendant at a mine door was the proximate cause of injury to a driver who had to open the door as he drove through and was injured because he did not stoop low enough. Indiana & C. Coal Co. v. Neal [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 295. Whether failure to mark as dangerous, and to prop, a dangerous room in a mine, as required by Illinois mines act, was proximate cause of miner's injury. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375. Whether negligence of defendant in leaving a car close to main track was cause of accident. Boyce v. Wilbur Lumber Co., 119 Wis. 642, 97 N. W. 563. Whether death of servant resulted from injuries received by getting caught in switch-frog and struck by wheel. Schroeder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. Whether failure to guard ripsaw was proximate cause of injury to employe who slipped and fell upon it. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Whether death of brakeman was caused by unsafe condition of handhold on manhole of engine tender. Wood's Adm'x v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 371. Whether fall of plaintiff from hand car was caused by a sudden application of the brake by another man on the car. Stanley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 112. Where engine left the track injuring fireman, and it appeared stones and gravel had been washed on crossing where accident occurred. Ferguson v. Central R. Co., 71 N. J. Law, 647, 60 A. 382. Whether the opening of the door of a machine, through which plaintiff put his hand, being thereby injured, was caused by a defective condition of the machine, or by plaintiff's negligence or by the act of a fellow-servant. Lack v. Hargraves Mills [Mass.] 76 N. E. 235. Where engine was derailed, injuring fireman, as a result of a defect in the track caused by wreck of preceding train, attempted stop signals not being sufficient, whether the injury was caused by negligence of fellow-servants. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer 214 Ill. 579, 73 N. E. 879.

51. A master is liable for a negligent breach of a statutory duty to guard machinery, if by the exercise of reasonable care it might have been foreseen that injury of some kind might be caused to the operative, even though the identical injury which did occur, could not have been reasonably anticipated. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Where handcar had a defective wheel which caused it to jar, thereby causing a hand thereon to lose his balance, so that he had to jump, and the foreman could not stop the car in time to avoid striking him owing to a defective brake, the defective brake might be found the proximate cause of the injury. Foster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422. Inadequacy of space in which wares were piled is not shown to be proximate cause of injury to servant on whom a pile of wares fell unless it appears that a person of ordinary prudence would have foreseen such an injury as a probable consequence. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. v. Cissne [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 282.

52. Smith v. Fordyce [Mo.] 88 S. W. 679. Where an employe, though exercising due care, stumbled and fell on the track so that the train crew could not stop in time to prevent injury to him, the master was nevertheless liable since his servants had been negligent in starting the train. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863.

53. Though heavy rain storm be considered act of God, if rottenness of ties contributed to cause wreck and death of engineer, master would be liable. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Whether the condition of the ties did contribute to cause the death was for the jury. Id. Only such a combination of circumstances as could not have been foreseen and overcome by the exercise of reasonable prudence, care, and diligence, constitutes an act of God which will excuse discharge of the master's duty. Id. See, also, Negligence, 4 C. L. 764.

54. See § 3 E, post. Where an accident would have been prevented by a current breaker on an electrical machine, the absence of the current breaker was the proxi-

Contractual exemption from liability.[56]—A statutory liability cannot be restricted by contract,[57] and contracts relieving masters from all common-law liamate cause of the accident though negligence of a fellow-servant was the immediate cause of the injury. Kremer v. New York Edison Co., 102 App. Div. 433, 92 N. Y. S. 883. If chain and block would not have fallen if hook had not been defective, defendant was liable for injury even though a sudden jerk of the chain by a fellow-servant caused it to fall when it did. O'Keefe v. Great Northern Elevator Co., 93 N. Y. S. 407.

55. Negligence of master, or one representing him, held proximate cause of injury: Defective coupler held a proximate cause of brakeman's death. Turrittin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 225. Evidence sufficient to prove lack of ventilation as cause of miner's death. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233. Proximate cause of injury held to be failing of slab of earth caused by a seam in a bank opened by frost, plaintiff being at work on a ledge below. Gibson v. Freygang [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 3. Failure of freight conductor to remove from the track a heavy casting which fell from a car in his train was the proximate cause of the death of the fireman of a passenger train wrecked by the casting. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Curd [Ky.] 89 S. W. 140. Cause of injury held to be collapse of scaffold caused by spreading of legs of trestles on which it was built. Neves v. Green [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 508. Evidence warranted finding that cause of employe's death was defect in scaffold supplied him. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905. Evidence held sufficient to support finding that broken chain supporting spout of water tank was proximate cause of fireman's injury. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Dickson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 229, 90 S. W. 507. Proximate cause of employe's being struck by a log while loading lumber held to be failure to keep man on duty to signal engineer of stationary engine when to start and stop it. Aleckson v. Erie R. Co., 101 App. Div. 395, 91 N. Y. S. 1029. Failure to warn boilermaker held proximate cause of his death by the falling of a casting upon him. Faith v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 222, 95 N. Y. S. 774. Dangerous condition of shaft, the collar of which was broken, leaving a projecting screw, held proximate cause of injury to sawyer who was caught while cleaning sawdust away from the saw. Smith v. Minden Lumber Co., 114 La. 1035, 38 So. 821. Injuries to brakeman who fell between cars held to have been proximately caused by violation of a rule requiring cars left on sidings to be coupled, together with negligence of the engineer in suddenly stopping cars on which brakeman was walking. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Pope [Tex.] 86 S. W. 5. Where through negligence of employes of defendant, a collision of cars was about to take place, and plaintiff seeing only one way to escape from the danger, jumped away across another track and was struck by another train, the negligence of defendant's employes, which placed him in the dangerous position, was the proximate cause of his injury. Western & A. R. Co. v. Bryant [Ga.] 51 S. E. 20. Where employe slipped on oil on the floor and fell on machine and was injured before he could stop it, the slippery condition of the floor was not the proximate cause of the injury, but rather the failure of the master to instruct how machine could be stopped. Yess v. Chicago Brass Co., 124 Wis. 406, 102 N. W. 932. Where windows of cab in engine were boarded up instead of being replaced, so that engineer, in observing signals had to get close to water gauge, the company's negligence in regard to the windows was the proximate cause of an injury inflicted by the explosion of the water gauge, though there was no negligence relative to the condition of the gauge. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857.

Negligence of master held not proximate cause: Lack of driver brakes on engine was not cause of loss of control of train where water brakes, shown to be just as good, were used. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Scott [Colo.] 81 P. 763. Evidence insufficient to show that injuries to operator of "edger" were caused by defects in machine. Trigg v. Ozark Land & Lumber Co., 187 Mo. 227, 86 S. W. 222. Where door of coal bin was out of repair and employes used rope to fasten it and plaintiff fell over the rope, the lack of repair of the door was not the proximate cause of his injury. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 89 S. W. 1117. Plaintiff was injured while crew was removing a hand car from the track to avoid collision with an approaching train, the weight of the car being thrown upon him when a fellow-servant stumbled and lost his hold. The failure of the foreman to order the car removed sooner was held not to be the proximate cause of the injury. Andrews v. Chicago & G. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 404. Failure of defendant to have three brakemen on a train was not the proximate cause of a brakeman's death by being caught between the two portions of a train which had parted and which deceased and the conductor were trying to join, since the presence of a third brakeman could not have prevented the accident. Keefe v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 180, 95 N. Y. S. 828. Proximate cause of death of brakeman in collision held to be his own failure to give warnings to following train according to the rules, and not the improper make-up of the following train nor the defective engine of his own which delayed his train. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. Failure to have telegraph stations within 10 miles of each other as required by statute held not proximate cause of collision between stations, where one train was delayed by a defective engine. Id. Proximate cause of switchman's injuries held not defective condition of a car which caused it to run slowly, but his own negligence in unnecessarily getting on a track where he was struck. Terminal Railroad Ass'n v. Larkins, 112 Ill. App. 366. Where employe working near unguarded cogwheels slipped on a piece of shafting which rolled under his feet, and in bility are void as against public policy.[58] The subject of releases is elsewhere treated.[59]

(§ 3) B. Tools, machinery, appliances, and places for work.[60]—It is the duty of the master to use ordinary care to furnish machinery, tools, and appliances[61] which are reasonably safe and suitable[62] for the purpose for which they are intended to be used,[63] or for a use to which they are customarily put by employes.[64] Instrumentalities of the kind ordinarily used by those engaged in the same business are reasonably safe within the meaning of this rule,[65] which does not require the latest, safest, or trying to save himself from a fall, put his hand in the cogs, and it appeared that he might have stood on a bare spot free from debris, the proximate cause of his injury was his slipping, and not a failure to guard the cogs, as required by Factory Acts, Acts 1899, p. 234, c. 142. Roots Co. v. Meeker [Ind.] 73 N. E. 253. Where an employe, standing on a 9 inch space between the edge of a trestle and the side of a car, his duties requiring his presence there, was knocked off by the sudden starting of the car, the proximate cause of his death was not the narrowness of the space where he stood but the sudden starting of the train. Dean v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 38 Wash. 565, 80 P. 842. Failure to have headlight on engine lighted and to give signal before starting it was not shown to be proximate cause of injury to employe who got off the engine in the dark to get sand and fell down with his hand on the rail, where it did not appear what made him fall, nor that the injury would not have occurred had the headlight been lighted and the signals given. Walker v. Louis-Werner Sawmill Co. [Ark.] 88 S. W. 988.

56. See 4 C. L. 545. See, also, Assumption of Risk, § 3 F.

57. A contract which provides that claims for injuries shall be presented to a railway claim agent within 30 days, and that a failure to do so shall bar the right to sue thereon, violates the provision of Code § 2071, that the liability imposed by that act cannot be restricted by contract. Mumford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 1135. The provision of Code § 2071 (imposing liability on railways for negligence of employes engaged in operation) that no contract restricting the liability imposed by the act shall be valid or binding, is constitutional. Id.

58. Johnston v. Fargo, 98 App. Div. 436, 90 N. Y. S. 725.

Note: "This is a step in advance of any previous decision in this state. A similar result reached in Purdy v. R. W. & O. R. R., 125 N. Y. 209, 21 Am. St. Rep. 736, was based on lack of consideration. In Kenney v. New York C. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 422, the contract was overthrown because of the absence of express words releasing liability. In Alabama, such a stipulation, being in contravention of statutory provisions, was discredited as opposed to public policy. Hissong v. R. & D. R. Co., 91 Ala. 514. The English courts, notwithstanding the existence of the employers' liability statutes, permit a servant to contract away his claim for compensation in such a case. Griffith v. Earl of Dudley, 9 Q. B. Div. 357. This right is also recognized in Georgia. W. & A. R. Co. v. Strong, 52 Ga. 461."—5 Columbia L. R. 327.

59. See 4 C. L. 1270.

60. See 4 C. L. 546.

61. In New York a scaffold is held to be an appliance, not a place. Hutton v. Holdrook, C. & D. Contracting Co., 139 F. 734. Derrick to assist workmen in construction of stone wall is an appliance which it is the duty of the master to maintain in a safe condition. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115. A box used by a railroad-crossing watchman as a place of shelter when not signaling trains, is an appliance furnished him which it is the master's duty to keep reasonably safe, and it is a breach of this duty to place it so near the track that an engine will strike it in passing. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Devers [Md.] 61 A. 418.

62. Burns v. Ruddock-Orleans Cypress Co., 114 La. 249, 38 So. 157; Deckerd v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 982. Master does not guarantee that appliances are absolutely safe. Butler v. Frazee, 25 App. D. C. 392. Railway company owes employes duty of reasonable care to provide them with reasonably safe appliances, and the same degree of care to keep such appliances in that condition. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519.

63. Master not liable where servant voluntarily used scaffold for a purpose for which it was not intended. Lobstein v. Sajatovich, 111 Ill. App. 654. Not negligence to furnish iron shovel to man employed to shovel snow on elevated, when work did not require contact with third rail, charged with electricity. Smith v. Manhattan R. Co., 48 Misc. 393, 95 N. Y. S. 529. No negligence with respect to a locomotive bell cord where fireman lost his balance while ringing the bell and the cord broke, allowing him to fall, since the cord was not intended or required to sustain any such weight. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mercer [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1054. That a ladder slipped on a granitoid floor did not show that it was unsafe, though it had no prongs or hooks. Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103.

64. Where handhold on manhole in engine tender was customarily used by brakemen in getting on and off tender, the company was under the duty of using due care to keep it in suitable condition for that purpose. Wood's Adm'x v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 371.

65. Boop v. Laurelton Lumber Co., 212 Pa. 523, 61 A. 1021. Machinery and appliances should be safe and suitable and such as are approved and in general use. Pressly v. Dover Yarn Mills [N. C.] 51 S. E. 69. Employer must adopt and use all approved best obtainable to be provided.[66] Whether due care in this respect has been exercised in a given case is ordinarily a question of fact.[67] The master, having provided reasonably safe and suitable machines or appliances, is not liable for injuries re-appliances which are in general use. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562. Where employe is injured by use of defective flywheel in sawmill, which had been repaired and retained in use, the test of negligence is not whether the flywheel was repaired in the ordinary manner, but whether it was customary to use repaired flywheels at all. Boop v. Laurelton Lumber Co., 212 Pa. 523, 61 A. 1021.

Contra: The test is whether appliances furnished were reasonably safe and suitable, not whether they are of the character ordinarily in use. Jennings v. Edgefield Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 113.

66. Wabash R. Co. v. Burress, 111 Ill. App. 258; Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103; Wolf v. New Bedford Cordage Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 222. No duty to adopt every new invention, though an improvement. Smith v. Fordyce [Mo.] 88 S. W. 679. Railway company does not owe duty of furnishing latest, safest, or best appliances. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519. Master not bound to provide every new appliance or supposed improvement. Buttner v. South Baltimore Steel Car & Foundry Co. [Md.] 60 A. 597.

67. Question of negligence held one for jury: Whether master was negligent in furnishing a defective rail hook. Drake v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. [Tex.] 89 S. W. 407, rvg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 447. Whether device substituted for brake on drum of log-loading appliance was unsuitable and unsafe. Hart v. Cascade Timber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 738. Whether it was negligence to furnish a block with a spliced rope too large to work through it without a strain. Wallace v. Henderson, 211 Pa. 142, 60 A. 574. Whether defendant negligently furnished a defective step on a car. Smith v. Thomson-Houston Elec. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 664. Operator of wire spring machine hurt, evidence tending to show "guides" defective, and that operator had not been instructed as to how to "set up" machines. Peterson v. Morgan Spring Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 220. Use of set screw is not negligence per se. Aurora Boiler Works v. Colligan, 115 Ill. App. 527. Court cannot assume that it is negligence not to have a particular kind of brake. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566. Evidence sufficient to go to jury on issue whether master was negligent in furnishing a maul not properly wedged on handle, where the maul flew off the handle and struck plaintiff. Deckerd v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 982. Evidence sufficient to go to jury on issue whether belt and pulley by which wool picking machine was run was defective by reason of the master's foreman's negligence. Lynch v. Stevens & Sons Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 478. Complaint alleging negligence in having a pilot on engine tender, which narrowed space in which coupling had to be done, whereby a brakeman was injured in attempting, in course of his necessary duties, to apply air to brakes, held to present question for jury. Moore v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 67.

Master held not negligent: Appliances for loading hold of vessel. Tydeman v. Prince Line, 102 App. Div. 279, 92 N. Y. S. 446. Not negligence to have a mangle of a certain make unguarded. Ward v. Daniels, 114 Ill. App. 374. Step on caboose consisting of iron bar held reasonably safe. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hemphill [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 350. Master not negligent in failing to supply set screws to hold plates in place, while plaintiff was working on vault. Dolan v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 105 App. Div. 366, 94 N. Y. S. 241. Failure to furnish engine of sufficient power to move train on schedule time, held not negligence. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. No recovery for injuries caused by use of waste instead of metal cap to stop oil can, where it was not shown that such use of waste was negligent under the circumstances. Bateman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 81 P. 190. The existence on the collar of a revolving shaft of a small set screw, having a head ¼ inch in diameter and projecting only 1-16 of an inch held not negligence as to an employe whose duty does not bring him in contact with the shaft. Cowett v. American Woolen Co. [Me.] 60 A. 703. An untempered steel hammer not being dangerous when used to pound soft coal, the master was not under the duty of looking out for the safety of a servant working near another using such a hammer. Lynn v. Glucose Sugar Refining Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 577. Evidence held not to show any defect in planer which plaintiff operated. Erickson v. Cummer Mfg. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 194, 103 N. W. 828. Evidence insufficient to show negligence in furnishing employes a bolt used to hold a beam temporarily, where the bolt broke causing the beam to fall, injuring plaintiff. Furber v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co., 185 Mo. 301, 84 S. W. 890.

Master held negligent: Using engine which was defective. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Henserlang [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 948. Failure to provide safe elevator, or to keep it in repair. Moylon v. McDonald Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 929. Guard on loom to prevent flying out of shuttles was too long to work properly. Chambers v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 1093. Failure to provide safe brace for ladder on which employe stood to clean vat. Haidt v. Swift & Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 388. Failure to guard machinery in pulp mill. Erickson v. Northwest Paper Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 291. Failure to provide a safe step in engine cab for use of fireman. Fry v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 733. Failure to furnish safe and suitable "dogs" to handle logs while being sawed. Moses v. Grant Lumber Co., 114 La. 933, 38 So. 684. Recovery sustained for injury caused by breaking of skidder used in loading cars. Williams v. Levert Lumber & Shingle Co., 114 La. 805, 38 So. 567. Arrangement of belts and pulleys which made starting of machine dangerous.

sulting from their negligent use by an employe,[68] or from their use for a purpose for which they were not intended,[69] or from the selection by an employe of such as are defective, others, reasonably safe, having been provided.[70] Instrumentalities are not provided for the servant's use, within the meaning of this rule, unless they are placed where he can control them if he, not his master, thinks they are needed.[71]

The duty of the master with reference to instrumentalities applies to such as are used and controlled by him, though owned by others.[72] It does not apply to an instrumentality not supplied by him.[73]

Stratton v. Mattingly [Ky.] 89 S. W. 513. Evidence showed injury caused by vibration of saw. Jancko v. West Coast Mfg. & Inv. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 284. Where saw "wabbled" and caused plaintiff's hand to be caught. Prior v. Eggert [Wash.] 81 P. 929. Where evidence showed chisel used by plaintiff, a sliver from which struck his eye, was furnished by defendant and was made of unsuitable material. Crilley v. New Amsterdam Gas Co., 94 N. Y. S. 102. Piledriver, a piece of which was broken off and struck plaintiff, held defective. Hazzard v. State, 108 App. Div. 119, 95 N. Y. S. 1103. Where plaintiff was directed to use a stick in cleaning rollers of a machine, a finding that the master was negligent in supplying an improper appliance was warranted. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 434. Evidence warranted finding that hand car might have been stopped in time to avoid injury to hand who fell from it, if brake had been in good condition. Foster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422.

68. Braunberg v. Solomon, 102 App. Div. 330, 92 N. Y. S. 506. Where suitable smooth board clamps were supplied for use in lacing rubber belts, and an employe was careless in adjusting them to the belt being repaired, the master was not liable for a resulting injury. Standard Pottery Co. v. Moudy [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 188. Reasonably safe and suitable rollers for use in unloading lumber from cars having been supplied, use and application thereof are duties of the workmen, and negligent use of an unsuitable roller does not warrant recovery from the master for a resulting injury. Walsh v. Smith, 26 R. I. 554, 59 A. 922. Where the master had furnished a properly constructed machine and a competent foreman for certain work on a trestle, and proper instructions had been given, he was not liable for an injury resulting from the improper adjustment of a snatch-block, which caused the machine to fall. McQueen v. Delaware, etc., R. Co. 102 App. Div. 195, 92 N. Y. S. 585. Sufficient supply of lamps and oil having been furnished, master not liable for injury caused by working with only one lamp in hold of ship. Earle v. Clyde S. S. Co., 92 N. Y. S. 839. Where the master furnished a sufficient number of lights, and one who did not have charge of the premises or represent the master directed that they should be turned out, the master was not liable. Zilner v. Robert Graves Co., 94 N. Y. S. 714. Employe engaged in hauling logs with trailing grabs was injured because the grabs broke, not on account of defects, but because the load was too heavy. The employe himself selected the logs to be hauled. Held no negligence by the master was shown. Justice v. Ritter Lumber Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 171.

69. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mercer [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1054.

70. Wolf v. New Bedford Cordage Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 222. Master not liable where foreman directed use of hoisting rope which workmen objected to as unsafe and which broke, injuring plaintiff, where suitable and safe rope was provided and could have been obtained and used by foreman. Vogel v. American Bridge Co., 180 N. Y. 373, 73 N. E. 1. Master not liable for supplying an unsafe steel frame for a "snubbing post," the selection of the one used being a mere detail of the employes' work. Ebbitt v. Milliken, 92 N. Y. S. 1033. Where defendant furnished a sufficient number of suitable pike poles for handling telephone poles, it was not liable for injuries to plaintiff caused by the use of a dull pike by plaintiff's fellow-servant. Towne v. United Elec. Gas & Power Co., 146 Cal. 766, 81 P. 124. Selection of a particular instrumentality for a mere detail of the work, where suitable instrumentalities have been provided, is not the act of the master, whatever the grade of the servant making the selection. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592.

71. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592.

72. A street railway company which uses a city bridge for its tracks thereby adopts such bridge as a part of its equipment, and if one of its employes is injured when in performance of his duties, and in the exercise of due care, by reason of the defective condition of the bridge, of which it had or was charged with knowledge, it would be liable to such employe. City of Indianapolis v. Cauley [Ind.] 73 N. E. 691. Railway company held liable for defect in freight car used, but not owned, by it. Wood v. Rio Grande Western R. Co., 28 Utah, 351, 79 P. 182.

Note: "The defense in this case was conducted on the theory that inasmuch as this car was the property of another company, the only duty defendant owed to its employes was that of inspection and that no liability could be imposed upon the defendant because the negligence of the car inspector was the negligence of a fellow-servant. Mackin v. B. & A. R. Co., 135 Mass. 201; Baldwin v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 50 Iowa, 680; Railroad Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 42 Ohio St. 318; Dewey v. Railroad Co., 97 Mich. 329, 56 N. W. 750; 37 Am. St. Rep. 348, 22 L. R. A. 292; Ballou v. C., M. & St. P. R., 54 Wis. 257, 41 Am. Rep. 31. By the clear weight of authority, however, it is held that the duty of the master to furnish safe appliances is of such a nature that it cannot be

Temporary appliances; scaffolds.[74]—In regard to temporary structures, such as scaffolds, built and used by the employes in the course of their ordinary duties, the master fully performs his duty by supplying a sufficient quantity of suitable material, and he is not liable for injuries caused by negligent construction[75] or failure to use the suitable material supplied.[76] But this rule does not apply where the structure used is complicated and requires a plan for its development with the progress of the work, and is of such a character that the ordinary employes using it do not understand it nor appreciate the danger of using it.[77] If the master fails to supply suitable materials,[78] or if his representative directs the use of defective materials[79] and an injury results, he is liable therefor. If the master undertakes to furnish to the employes a completed structure, he owes them the same degree of care as in respect to other appliances.[80]

In New York a statute requires the person who procures work to be done to provide a scaffold, or similar contrivance needed for such work, which is safe.[81]

delegated. Under such decisions the fellow-servant rule would be inapplicable. It is the duty of the master to furnish safe cars, and this duty extends not only to those owned by the master but to all those actually used in the business. Cowan v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 80 Wis. 284, 50 N. W. 180; Budge v. L. & T. R. Co., 108 La. 349, 32 So. 535, 58 L. R. A. 333; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Avery, 109 Ill. 314; Youngblood v. R. Co., 60 S. C. 9, 38 S. E. 232, 85 Am. St. Rep. 824; Bender v. R. Co., 137 Mo. 240, 37 S. W. 132; St. Louis & S. E. R. Co. v. Valirius, 56 Ind. 511; Union Stockyards v. Goodwin, 57 Neb. 138, 77 N. W. 357; T. P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 42 Law. Ed. 1188; Goodrich v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 116 N. Y. 398. The railroad company must see that the cars are safe or refuse to take them."—3 Mich. L. R. 589.

73. Where a ladder was not furnished by the master but was picked up by plaintiff on the premises and used by him in the condition in which he found it, the master was not liable for an injury caused by its slipping. Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103.

74. See 4 C. L. 548.

75. Carlson v. Haglin [Minn.] 104 N. W. 297. An employer may leave to employes the erection of temporary stagings, and if he does so, and is not negligent in selecting such servants, he is not liable if a staging proves defective. Rapson v. Leighton [Mass.] 73 N. E. 540. Where suitable materials are furnished and servants construct therefrom a temporary staging in their own way, they assume the risk of defects therein. Feeney v. York Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 733. Where master furnished reasonably suitable materials in sufficient quantities for a movable platform to be used in building railroad embankment, and men put it together themselves, he is not liable for an injury resulting from its collapse. Fukare v. Kerbaugh [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 376. Where superintendent in charge of building construction ordered a staging to be moved, he was under no duty to inspect it after it had been moved, its construction being a part of the employes' work. White v. Unwin [Mass.] 74 N. E. 924.

76. See 4 C. L. 549, n. 69.

77. Master liable where complicated movable staging used in building a grain elevator collapsed, killing a man employed thereon. Carlson v. Haglin [Minn.] 104 N. W. 297.

78. If iron beams were used on scaffold because wooden ones were not available, the wooden ones being safer, the master would be liable for a death caused by the use of iron beams. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905.

79. As where one who could be found to be a superintendent directed men who were building staging to use a defective board. Rapson v. Leighton [Mass.] 73 N. E. 540.

80. Where master builds scaffold he must use ordinary care to make it reasonably safe. Illinois Terra Cotta Lumber Co. v. Hanley, 116 Ill. App. 359. Evidence sufficient to warrant finding that a suspended scaffold furnished employe was not reasonably safe. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905. Prior use for two weeks of a staging, without injury, held not to rebut inference of negligence from use of defective board, which broke while staging was being used. Rapson v. Leighton [Mass.] 73 N. E. 540. If a completed structure is furnished by the master's representative, servants may rely on the presumption that the master has furnished one which is reasonably safe. Feeney v. York Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 733. Where stage was built by riggers for use of men employed to load vessel, and foreman of latter looked at the stage and accepted the statement of the riggers that it was safe, without further inspection of it, and it fell by reason of its negligent construction, weak timbers being used, the master was liable. Ingham v. Honor Co., 113 La. 1040, 37 So. 963. Gang of painters were required by foreman to work upon scaffold previously erected by a stranger, and while thus engaged the scaffold fell by reason of the inherent weakness of one of the timbers. Master liable for injury sustained thereby. Spieker Co. v. Ferguson, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 13.

81. Construction of New York statute: Under New York Laws of 1897, c. 145, p. 467, §§ 18, 19, a person procuring any kind of labor in the erection, repairing, altering, or painting of a house, building, or structure, is required to furnish a safe scaffold or other similar contrivance to be used by such per-

Places for work.[82]—It is the duty of the master to use ordinary care to provide a reasonably safe place of work,[83] and this duty includes provision of a reasonably safe mode of entrance and exit.[84] What constitutes due care in this respect depends son. The statute imposes upon a master, whose work requires the use of a scaffold, the absolute duty of furnishing one that is safe. Hutton v. Holdrook Cabot & D. Contracting Co., 139 F. 734. But it imposes no liability where he has furnished one which is safe, or safe materials from which the workmen are to build it in the course of their work, and where an injury then results from its negligent use or construction by the workmen themselves. Fellow-servant rule applies in such case. Hutton v. Holdrook Cabot & Daly Contracting Co., 139 F. 734. Defendant's duty under statute is to erect safe scaffold regardless of customary manner of construction. Siversen v. Jenks, 102 App. Div. 313, 92 N. Y. S. 382. Certain work on a scow held to constitute altering or repairing a structure, within the statute, and a platform used held to be a mechanical contrivance furnished and erected by defendants. Madden v. Hughes, 93 N. Y. S. 324. Carpenter, employed on erection of building, was told to get planking wherever he could, and went on a platform to get lumber there piled, when platform fell. Held, master liable. Swenson v. Wilson & B. Mfg. Co., 102 App. Div. 477, 92 N. Y. S. 849. Where ladder broke, precipitating deceased on a revolving shaft, evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that statute had been violated. McConnell v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 102 App. Div. 324, 92 N. Y. S. 477. Whether scaffold furnished workmen employed to build dock was safe, within the meaning of the statute, held for jury. Siversen v. Jenks, 102 App. Div. 313, 92 N. Y. S. 382. The statute has no application to a staging, 4 to 6 feet from the floor of a room, used to put in fixtures, and the employer is not liable for an injury occurring in its use, unless he would be liable on common law grounds. Schapp v. Bloomer, 181 N. Y. 125, 73 N. E. 563. A "buggy," a two wheeled mechanical device for moving heavy timbers, is not within the terms of the statute. Pluckham v. American Bridge Co., 93 N. Y. S. 748.

82. See 4 C. L. 551.

83. Endies v. Marshall, 3 Ohio L. R. 358; Spieker Co. v. Ferguson, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 13; Barnett & Record Co. v. Schlapka, 110 Ill. App. 672; Libby v. Banks, 110 Ill. App. 330; Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 115 Ill. App. 209. Evidence that mine entry was in "fair" condition does not prove it was "safe." Junction Min. Co. v. Ench, 111 Ill. App. 346.

Application of rule to roadbed, right of way, and premises of railroad companies: Tracks, switches, and grounds of switching yards. Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Ill. App. 463. The fact that switch yards were rendered unsafe by the acts of another company, allowed to use them, did not relieve the owner. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 34, 87 S. W. 371. Duty as to safe place owed to section hand. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Otstat, 113 Ill. App. 37. Company liable for death of fireman caused by presence of ice near the rails. Neagle v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 339, 95 N. Y. S. 884. Railroad company must maintain safe roadbed, with undecayed and sound crossties, and rails in proper position and level. Fuller v. Tremont Lumber Co., 114 La. 266, 38 So. 164. Railroad company owes brakeman duty of ordinary care to provide reasonably safe roadbed when he is engaged in shifting cars. Smith v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 359. Failure to use due care to prevent landslides in railroad cuts would render company liable to servant injured by a landslide. Fisher's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 373. Recovery for death of brakeman sustained where death was caused by a low bridge striking him while on a car, the telltale being too high to give warning. Taliaferro v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 437. Duty of railroad company with respect to switching yards used by it are the same as if it owned such yards. Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Ill. App. 463. Where a hand car struck torpedoes on the track and plaintiff's intestate was thrown off the car and killed, a finding that leaving the torpedoes on the track was negligence was warranted. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Leisure's Adm'r [Ky.] 90 S. W. 269. Railway company is not negligent in placing posts of coal chute close to track, making it dangerous for a person to ride by on a car, when it is necessary to place them there and employes are properly warned of the danger. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Valiowe, 214 Ill. 124, 73 N. E. 416. A railway tunnel, so far completed that a temporary track has been laid in it which is only a few inches from the regular grade, is a completed place within the rule that due care must be used to render it reasonably safe. Recovery sustained where plaintiff was injured by rock falling on him from side of the tunnel. McRae v. Erickson [Cal. App.] 82 P. 209. Finding that railway company was negligent in furnishing a safe place to work warranted where it appeared that roadbed in front of station was made in part of rubbish and sweepings, and that water from the roof was permitted to flow on the track, and that a brakeman slipped on such place while making a coupling and was injured. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Stanley [Kan.] 81 P. 176. Complaint held sufficient which set out failure to maintain track in safe condition, and that culvert was inadequate and built of poor material and that defendant had not warned engineer of danger. Western R. of Ala. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311. Since a railroad company must use ordinary care to keep its track reasonably safe, an instruction requiring culverts to be maintained in such condition as to take care of rain storms such as may reasonably be anticipated is proper, whether or not Rev. St. 1895, art. 4436, imposing substantially the same duty, is for the protection of employes. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395.

84. Haber v. Jenkins Rubber Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 382.

upon the nature of the work,[85] and the question is usually one of fact.[86] The rule that it is the master's duty to provide a reasonably safe place is held not to apply

85. Master assumes obligation to provide servant a reasonably suitable and safe place to work, having reference to the kind of work he is engaged in. Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708. The law only requires reasonable care to provide a place as safe as the character of the work will permit, where the servant, by the exercise of care, can perform his work with safety, subject only to the risks necessarily incident to the work. Zeigenmeyer v. Charles Goetz Lime & Cement Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 139.

86. Whether master was negligent as to providing place of work held for jury. Kalker v. Hedden [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 395. Where defendant left ditch along track open and unguarded. Hebert v. Interstate Iron Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 451. Where a board fell from a scaffold upon plaintiff, working underneath it, the only apparent cause being the jarring and vibration caused by a stationary engine. Iesief v. New York, etc., R. Co., 102 App. Div. 168, 92 N. Y. S. 342. Employe injured by bank of earth falling on him while working on foundation, blasting during the noon hour having loosened the soil. Kohout v. Newman [Minn.] 104 N. W. 764. Whether guard rail was properly placed with reference to other rail. Hynson v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 44, 86 S. W. 928. Whether construction and erection of column which fell on plaintiff was negligent. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, 73 N. E. 787. Whether construction and location of coal chute and tracks was negligent. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 115 Ill. App. 621. Whether master was negligent in allowing mill floor to become oily and slippery. Mundhenke v. Oregon City Mfg. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 977. Evidence held to raise issue whether premises were properly lighted. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 89 S. W. 1117. It is not negligence as a matter of law for a master to have work on a sprinkler system done by an independent contractor in a room where a loom operator was at work. Smith v. Naushon Co., 26 R. I. 578, 60 A. 242.

Master held negligent: Defendant negligent in leaving hole in temporary floor unguarded and in not warning servants. Merril v. Pike [Minn.] 102 N. W. 393. Negligence to allow mine to become dangerous through lack of proper ventilation. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233. Mining company liable for injuries caused by accumulation of gas due to improper ventilation. Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Jones [Ark.] 87 S. W. 440. Miner recovered for injuries caused by explosion in mine when mine boss made a negligent inspection and reported the mine safe when it was not so. Mt. Nebo Anthracite Coal Co. v. Williamson [Ark.] 84 S. W. 779. Electric companies must keep wires perfectly insulated at places where linemen are required to go to perform their duties. Recovery for death of lineman killed by electric shock. Paducah R. & Light Co. v. Bell's Adm'r, 27 Ky. L. R. 428, 85 S. W. 216. Recovery for injury from defective window of which master had notice, but servant had not. Macon County Tel. Co. v. West, 116 Ill. App. 435. Cutting a large hole in the floor of a dressing room used by employes, and failing to guard it, was gross negligence. Day v. Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co. [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 903. Negligence to have an unguarded electric fan so close to place where man had to work that there was danger of his coming in contact with it. Fouts v. Swift & Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 167. Master liable where superintendent of repairs on building ordered a pier, built to sustain floors, used before cement in it was dry, in consequence of which it collapsed. Nugent v. Cudahy Packing Co., 126 Iowa, 517, 102 N. W. 442. Flat cars used in hauling gravel had forked stakes on the sides in which side boards were placed while cars were being unloaded and were returning to pit. A workman leaning on a plank was injured because one end was not in the fork but merely rested on standard, and hence fell. Held, master liable. Brimer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 109 Mo. App. 493, 85 S. W. 653. Master liable where plaintiff carrying molten metal stepped into a hole which had just previously been dug in pathway used by him, he not having been notified. San Antonio Foundry Co. v. Drish [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 440. Recovery for injury caused by failure to use reasonable care to keep rock quarry reasonably safe. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Coffey [Va.] 52 S. E. 367. Where boy of 11 employed as a sweeper in a factory was injured because the waste box was dangerously near machinery. Willis v. Cherokee Falls Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 538. Defendant liable where plaintiff was injured while at work on barge by hot water from steamship which was being cooled by defendant. Corrigan v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 19. Master liable for not providing safe place where whip of boy, employed to drive hogs, caught on overhead revolving shaft left unguarded. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 721. The owner of a lumber yard who allows lumber to be piled in a dangerous manner is guilty of actionable negligence, though the piling was originally done by servants for whose negligence he would not be liable. Brooks v. Joyce Co., 127 Iowa, 266, 103 N. W. 91. Where an employe was injured by the falling of a crust of a pile of ore from which he was removing ore, evidence held to tend to show that master was negligent in not removing such crust. Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 214 Ill. 181, 73 N. E. 422. Where employe was repairing elevator doors, and was obliged to work while standing partly inside the elevator, and the employer neither caused the elevators to stop running nor provided an adequate system of warnings, a finding of negligence in providing a place to work was justified. Western Elec. Co. v. Hanselmann [C. C. A.] 136 F. 564. Evidence showing that a loose stone was left on a sloping embankment, near plaintiff's place of work, sufficient to show negligence. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Speer [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 933.

Master held not negligent: Defendant where the work consists in making a dangerous place safe,[87] nor where the place is, for some other reason, inherently dangerous,[88] and necessarily changes from time to time as the work progresses,[89] nor where the servant is employed to make his own place in which to work.[90] There can be no recovery for failure of the master to held not negligent in lighting factory. Chisholm v. Donovan [Mass.] 74 N. E. 652. That floor was worn uneven, not breach of master's duty to provide safe place. McLaughlin v. Atlantic Mills [R. I.] 61 A. 42. No negligence of master shown where employe, digging post holes, was injured by fall of pile of bricks on the other side of a lattice fence. Meixner v. Philadelphia Brewing Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 259. Employer not liable where piece of brick dropped by masons fell through a window aperture and struck plaintiff. Roth v. Eccles, 28 Utah, 456, 79 P. 918. Evidence insufficient to support charge that freight elevator and guards of elevator shaft were not reasonably safe and suitable for boy employed to sweep. Purcell v. Tennent Shoe Co., 187 Mo. 276, 86 S. W. 121. Evidence insufficient to warrant finding that crowded condition of table, as alleged, caused injury to plaintiff. Smith v. Hammond Packing Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 625. Evidence did not show negligence of defendant where plaintiff was struck by rock sliding down hill in a quarry, and plaintiff himself said he had observed the slope and had not noticed any dangerous condition likely to result in an accident such as that which occurred. Thompson v. California Const. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 367. Master, working clay bank, held not negligent in not removing top or keeping watchman to give warning of a landslide, the nature of the bank being such that a landslide would not reasonably be anticipated. Reilly v. Troy Brick Co., 94 N. Y. S. 576. Where gangway connecting two floors, one of which was higher than the other, had long been maintained without side rails, no accidents having occurred, cleats being used on the gangway to prevent slipping, failure to have hand rails was not negligence. Baker v. Empire Wire Co., 102 App. Div. 125, 92 N. Y. S. 355. Where building burned and brick vault shaft was left standing, it being apparently sound, failure of the person in charge of salvage work to raze the shaft was not a breach of his duty to furnish his employes a safe place. Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes [Md.] 62 A. 155. Where the amount of light in a mill at the time a machinist was testing rollers was the same as when he had repaired and restarted the machinery, want of sufficient light was not actionable negligence warranting a recovery for an injury to the machinist's fingers while making the test. Carey v. Samuels & Co. [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1052.

87. Jennings v. Ingle [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 945. As where experienced carpenter was sent to re-enforce shoring of dangerous embankment. Henson v. Armour Packing Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 166. Railway company not liable for failure to provide safe place, where employe was killed by stone from mountain side while engaged in clearing away from track debris from a landslide. Florence, etc., R. Co. v. Whipps [C. C. A.] 138 F. 13.

88. As where employe is hired to blast in mine and is required to inspect for unexploded charges. Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252. Rule as to duty to provide safe place not applicable where work consisted of tearing out interior of building. Barrett v. Reardon [Minn.] 104 N. W. 309. The ordinary rule as to the master's duty held not applicable where servant was at work removing earth from a bank, he being on a ledge with a bank of earth and other workmen above him, since the place of work was inherently dangerous and was constantly being changed by the work being done. Gibson v. Freygang [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 3.

Contra: That a place of work is inherently dangerous does not relieve the master from the duty of exercising ordinary care to keep it reasonably safe in view of the circumstances. Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 116 Ill. App. 303. The duty to provide a reasonably safe place applies where the work consists in wrecking buildings damaged by fire but is to be considered in view of the work to be done. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 110 Ill. App. 596.

89. Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252. As where employes are engaged in laying a track. Meehan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 102. Where servant was engaged in tearing down a trestle, the place of work was necessarily dangerous and changed as his work progressed, hence, he was not entitled to the protection of the rule as to a safe place. Gravson-McLeod Lumber Co. v. Carter [Ark.] 88 S. W. 597. Where the place of work, as a rock quarry, is constantly changing in character, and the dangers are as readily observable by the servant as by the master, the master is not liable for injuries unless he knew of the causal defects, or ought to have known, or urged the servant to stay after such knowledge. Thompson v. California Const. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 367. Where in course of construction of building plaintiff was ordered to assist another in removing certain timbers, and was injured by the falling of a truss on which he stood, which had not been placed in a permanent position, the master was not liable for failure to provide a safe place or negligently ordering such work to be done. McElwaine-Richards Co. v. Wall [Ind.] 76 N. E. 408. The master is not required to furnish a safe place where the danger is temporary only, and when it arises from the hazard and progress of the work itself. Master not liable for injury to quarryman struck by rock thrown by a blast, the usual warning having been given. Zeigenmeyer v. Charles Goetz Lime & Cement Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 139.

90. The place of work being the result of labor for which he was employed,. Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252. Complaint which alleged that a stone in a quarry was in a dangerous condition, liable to fall, and that defendant knew of the danger and deceased was ignorant thereof, was maintain the place in a reasonably safe condition when that duty devolved on the injured employe,[91] or where the place was rendered unsafe by the act of a third person.[92]

Inspection; repairs; knowledge of defects.[93]—The master's duty is not fully performed by providing reasonably safe tools and appliances and a reasonably safe place; he must use ordinary care to maintain them in such condition,[94] and the duty of maintenance necessarily includes that of reasonable inspection[95] and repair.[96] Whether due care in this respect has been used in a given instance is a question of fact[97] to be determined by reference to the character of the place or appliance, the length of time it has been used, and the nature of such use.[98] Where the nature of the business requires it, a system of inspection should be provided,[99] which should re-not demurrable on the theory that it showed a place of work, not furnished by the master but created by the servant. Black's Adm'r v. Virginia Portland Cement Co. [Va.] 51 S. E. 831.

91. Operator of printing press whose duty it was to prevent accumulation of paper around the press could not recover from the master if that condition caused his injury. Newport News Co. v. Beaumeister [Va.] 52 S. E. 627.

92. Master not liable when place is made unsafe by servants of an independent contractor. Penner v. Vinton Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 381. 104 N. W. 385.

93. See 4 C. L. 548, 552.

94. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115; Deckerd v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 982.

95. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115; Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. Transfer company which switched cars for milling company not relieved from liability for injury to a brakeman, caused by boards left on the car by the milling company, since it was the duty of the transfer company to inspect its cars and see that they were reasonably safe. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. Rev. St. Ariz. 1901, par. 2767, making corporations liable for negligence of employes, provided the corporation had previous notice of the incompetency, carelessness, or negligence of the employe in question, does not change the common-law duty of the master to inspect, nor the rule that such duty is non-delegable. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vigard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457.

Rule not applicable: Defendant, consignee of coal unloaded in its sheds, did not owe its servants engaged in unloading the duty to inspect the cars on which the coal was shipped. Dunn v. Boston & N. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 75.

96. Defendant held not to have kept guy wires on derrick in reasonable state of repair. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115. Evidence sufficient to show injury caused by want of proper repairs on folding machine. O'Neil v. Ginn [Mass.] 74 N. E. 668. Allowing belt to become worn and out of repair so that it shifted from one pulley to another and automatically started a machine which plaintiff was cleaning, held a breach of master's duty. Petrarca v. Quidnick Mfg. Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 648.

97. Care of ordinarily prudent person is test whether it was negligence not to make an inspection, or whether inspection made was sufficient. Texas Short Line R. Co. v. Waymire [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 907, 89 S. W. 452. Whether master was negligent in allowing ladder to become defective, held for jury. Carroll v. Metropolitan Coal Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 84. Whether defendant was negligent in allowing bolts which held crane support to become weak, causing crane to fall, for jury. Harris v. Putnam Mach. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 287. Whether a reasonable inspection of freight elevator would have disclosed a defect was for the jury. Finnegan v. Winslow Skate Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 192. What sort of inspection of elevator was required was for jury. Instruction as to expert testimony held erroneous as limiting province of jury. Starer v. Stern, 100 App. Div. 393, 91 N. Y. S. 821. Where brakeman was injured by the giving way of a handhold owing to the loss of a nut, whether the inspection of the car had been sufficient to relieve the master was for the jury. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457. Evidence showed negligence of defendant in inspecting poles on which light trimmer had to work. Dawson v. Lawrence Gaslight Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 912. Where foreman examined a scaffold and told workmen to go ahead and use it, master was liable for injuries caused by defects in it. Condon v. Schoenfield, 114 Ill. App. 468. If mine owner trimmed roof after a blast and had no knowledge of a loose rock, it would not be liable for injury caused by rock falling. Abbott v. Marion Min. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 110. Ship held to have used due care in inspecting a cable used to unload vessel. The Tresco, 128 F. 780. Where the customary manner of testing and inspecting bolts as used by the manufacturer was shown, and no better method was suggested, the inspection could not be held negligent. Furber v. Kansas City Belt & Nut Co., 185 Mo. 301, 84 S. W. 890.

98. Finnegan v. Samuel Winslow Skate Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 192.

99. The duty of inspection cannot be properly discharged without providing some system of inspection. Crawford v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 61 A. 287. If an employe is injured through a want of inspection, evidence of a lack of any system of inspection is evidence of negligence. Chambers v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 1093.

quire timely inspection,[1] and safe custody of the thing inspected during any substantial interval between its inspection and its use.[2] It must appear that an inspection was made by a competent servant who exercised due care.[3] A master is not liable for injuries resulting from defects of which he had no notice[4] and which a reasonable inspection would not have disclosed;[5] but notice will be presumed if the defect is one which such an inspection would have disclosed,[6] though actual notice,

1. Crawford v. United R. & Elec. Co., [Mo.] 61 A. 287; Endres v. Marshall, 3 Ohio L. R. 358.

2. Defendant liable for injury to street car conductor, owing to broken handhold, where car was inspected about 2:30 a. m. and left standing on track in the street, unguarded and unlighted for several hours. Crawford v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 61 A. 287.

3. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Sage [Tex.] 84 S. W. 814.

4. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010. Knowledge of defective condition of switch necessary to make company liable if switch was reasonably safe when put in. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Snow [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 908. Instruction that defendant must be shown to have actual or implied knowledge of alleged defect in furnace, held proper. Bannon v. Buffalo Union Furnace Co., 109 App. Div. 324, 95 N. Y. S. 891. Evidence insufficient to show that master had knowledge of dangerous condition of roof in mine entry. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. O'Nesky [Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 300. Mere proof that a defective swivel was used is not proof that the master had notice of the defect, the master having made no personal use of the swivel. George Doyle & Co. v. Hawkins, 34 Ind. App. 514, 73 N. E. 200. Where defect in machine which caused injury had existed only a few minutes before the injury occurred, and no notice had been given anyone except a fellow-servant, the master was not liable. Hughes v. Russell, 93 N. Y. S. 307. Evidence of defendant's knowledge of a defect in a machine sufficient to take issue of negligence to jury. Franke v. Hanly, 215 Ill. 216, 74 N. E. 130. Recovery for injuries, caused by vicious horse furnished servant, where evidence showed master knew horse was vicious and had tried to get rid of her. Farmer v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 775. Nonsuit erroneous where evidence showed defective condition of saw was reported to foreman, who, with this knowledge, put boy to work at it. Sink v. The Sikes Co., 134 F. 144. To recover from a railway company for injuries to an employe from being struck by a pole near the track, proof that the railway company participated in placing the pole where it was is unnecessary, where it appears that the company had actual or implied notice of the pole and continued to run its trains without change. South Side El. R. Co. v. Neevig, 214 Ill. 463, 73 N. E. 749.

5. Evidence held to show that a proper inspection of the wheel of a tender had been made and that a defect which caused it to break was one not discoverable by the use of ordinary care. Hover v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 57, 89 S. W. 1084. Where plaintiff was injured by breaking of a stone which had an invisible defect, and the plaintiff had the same opportunity to inspect as the master, and the master had made an inspection through his agent, there was no liability. Bedford Quarries Co. v. Turner [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 25. Telephone company not liable for injuries to lineman, who fell because of defect in a cross arm, where the defect was not one which a careful inspection would disclose. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co. v. Starnes [Ga.] 50 S. E. 343. Master not liable for injury caused by falling of bricks from wall in engine room where wall was well built and the defect was an unusual one, not observable by the use of ordinary care. Snowdale v. United Box Board & Paper Co. [Me.] 61 A. 683. Evidence insufficient to show defect in walk had existed so long that defendant was charged with notice. Dolan v. New York Sanitary Utilization Co., 93 N. Y. S. 217. Defect in car couplers not being visible, a plaintiff injured because of such defect, while making a coupling, must show that the master had notice of the defect or would have had notice if he had exercised ordinary care. Buttner v. South Baltimore Steel Car & Foundry Co. [Md.] 60 A. 597. Failure to inspect being the breach of duty specifically relied on, plaintiff must show that the defective condition which caused the injury would have been discovered by such an examination as it was the master's duty to make under the circumstances. George Doyle & Co. v. Hawkins, 34 Ind. App. 514, 73 N. E. 200. Where draft chain parted, allowing ore car in mine to go down grade and strike plaintiff, evidence that there was a flaw in the broken link, not discoverable before the break, was insufficient to show the master negligent. Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. Allen [C. C. A.] 137 F. 705.

6. Master is presumed to know unsafe conditions surrounding place of work. Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294. Knowledge of a latent defect in an appliance is imputed to the master unless he can show that he would not have discovered it by the exercise of ordinary care. Jennings v. Edgefield Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 113. Master liable where reasonable inspection would have disclosed hole in saw fender, through which a piece of wood flew, striking operator. Burns v. Ruddock-Orleans Cypress Co., 114 La. 247, 38 So. 157. Railway company liable for defects which a reasonable inspection of cars would disclose; not liable for such as are not discoverable by such inspection. Belt R. Co. v. Confrey, 111 Ill. App. 473. Master liable for defective condition of shaft which caused injury, when he knew or ought to know its condition. Smith v. Minden Lumber Co., 114 La. 1035, 38 So. 821. Finding that defendant negligently furnished an unsafe place warranted, where it appeared that defendant knew that the insulation on wires by which power was transmitted to the in accordance with rules of the master, has not been given.[7] Actual or implied notice will not render a master liable unless he has had a reasonable time to warn the servant or make repairs.[8] Ordinarily, the servant is under no duty to inspect his appliances or place of work, but may rely on the assumption that the master has performed his duty with respect thereto;[9] but this is not the rule with respect to appliances made by the servant[10] or under his complete control,[11] or which it is a part of his duty to keep in repair.[12] The servant is charged with notice of a defect discoverable by the use of ordinary care in the performance of his usual duties[13] and he should report such defects to the master,[14] unless the latter already has actual or implied knowledge thereof.[15] The master cannot escape liability on the ground that it was the servant's duty to make certain repairs, when the appliance was known to be defective when furnished,[16] or when the making of repairs by the servant has been prevented by the master.[17] mill had been destroyed, so that certain lead pipes became charged with electricity by which employe was killed. Irish v. Union Bag & Paper Co., 92 N. Y. S. 695. The doctrine that a master is not liable for injuries resulting from latent defects in machinery, bought by him complete from a reputable maker, has no application to a case where a temporary staging was furnished which was unsafe and the defects in which could have been discovered by ordinary care. Feeney v. York Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 733. Evidence held sufficient to show that engine had not been inspected, that a proper inspection would have disclosed a defect in the shaker bar, and that this defect was the proximate cause of injuries to a fireman who fell off the engine when the bar gave way. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 237, 90 S. W. 511.

7. To charge a railway company with notice of a defective car, notice need not necessarily be given to the official designated in its rules for that purpose. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Walters, 217 Ill. 87, 75 N. E. 441.

8. Mine operator not liable for injury caused by defect in mine roof unless he knew of the defect in time to have repaired it before the accident. Abbott v. Marion Min. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 110. A master is not negligent in failing to repair until a sufficient length of time has elapsed, after actual or constructive notice of the defect, to enable him to make the repairs or notify the servant of the danger. Malott v. Sample [Ind.] 74 N. E. 245.

9. Macon County Tel. Co. v. West, 116 Ill. App. 435; Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248. Duty to inspect engine held to rest on company, not on fireman. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 237, 90 S. W. 511. Duty to inspect rope used with tackle held to devolve on master, not on servant. Texas Short Line R. Co. v. Waymire [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 907, 89 S. W. 452. Servant need not make critical examination of place of work but may assume it is reasonably safe. Barnett & Record Co. v. Schlapka, 110 Ill. App. 672. A derrick used in building a stone wall is not an appliance which it is a servant's duty to keep in repair. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115. No duty on part of employe to carefully inspect a belt when its condition was not such that it would not be proper to use it under any circumstances. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Dukes, 121 Ga. 787, 49 S. E. 788.

10. Where master furnished suitable materials and left work of making molding flasks to workmen, it was not his duty to inspect the flasks so made. Leishman v. Union Iron Works [Cal.] 83 P. 30.

11. Employe who was in complete control of kettle used in candy making, and had full opportunity to discover defects, and knew that the inspection by the foreman was only a superficial one, could not recover for injuries caused by an explosion of the kettle. Hollingsworth v. National Biscuit Co., [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1118.

12. If the duty to repair is a mere detail of the work of the servant using an appliance, the master is not liable for a failure to keep in proper repair. Grams v. Reiss Coal Co. [Wis.] 102 N. W. 586. While it is not ordinarily incumbent on the employe to ascertain whether appliances furnished by the master are safe and suitable, yet where it is his duty to keep appliances in repair, by the terms of his contract, he cannot recover for injuries caused by a lack of repair. Keys v. Winnsboro Granite Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 549.

13. A painter is under the duty of inspecting the scaffold used by him, but need only exercise reasonable care and may recover for injuries caused by a defect not discoverable by him by the exercise of such care, but which was known or should have been known to the master. George Weidemann Brewing Co. v. Wood, 27 Ky. L. R. 1012, 87 S. W. 772.

14. It is the duty of a servant in charge of a machine to report defects which may occur at any time, and knowledge of defects discoverable by the use of ordinary care while using it will be imputed to him. Negligence in reporting defects or in failing to discover them will preclude a recovery. Buey's Adm'x v. Chess & Wymond Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 198, 84 S. W. 563.

15. It is not the duty of a miner to report to the operator the presence of gas in the mine when the operator knew or ought to have known of its presence. Mt. Nebo Anthracite Coal Co. v. Williamson [Ark.] 84 S. W. 779.

16. Jennings v. Edgefield Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 113.

17. The claim that a defect in a machine

Statutes.[18]—The Federal automatic coupler act applies only to cars engaged in interstate commerce.[19] Holdings under various statutes, relating to appliances or the place of work, are grouped, by states, in the note.[20] was one which the servant should have remedied himself cannot be made where the servant has tried to repair it but has been unable to get the necessary materials, and the master has assured him that it would be safe to proceed until he had made repairs. Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521.

18. See 4 C. L. 549.

19. Automatic coupler act inapplicable where fireman was injured in switching operations in yards, there being no evidence that cars switched were engaged in interstate commerce. Rosney v. Erie R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 311.

20. Arkansas: Kirby's Dig. § 5340, relating to the ventilation of mines, requires that air should be carried to every place in the mine where men are required to work and that the entire mine should be free from gas. Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Jones [Ark.] 87 S. W. 440.

Illinois: Mining companies must perform common-law as well as statutory duties. Junction Min. Co. v. Ench, 111 Ill. App. 346. Any conscious violation of the Illinois mining law is a willful violation within the meaning of that act. The presence of an evil intent is not necessary. Under Laws 1899, p. 324, § 33. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375; Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294. Notice to mine manager and mine examiner, or to either, is notice to the owner within the meaning of the statute. Id. The purpose of Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, p. 1261, c. 93, § 19, cl. "e," requiring permanent mine doors to be so arranged as to close automatically, was not only to secure proper ventilation but also to prevent injury to miners in closing them. Madison Coal Co. v. Hayes, 215 Ill. 625, 74 N. E. 755. A door intended to be maintained so long as coal is mined in that part of the mine is a "permanent door," within the statute, without regard to the amount of coal to be mined. Id. Whether a doorway is a "principal doorway" within cl. "f," which requires that an attendant be placed at all such dorways, is a question of fact. Id., afg. 116 Ill. App. 94. A statute of Illinois provides that it shall be unlawful for a mine owner to employ as mine manager any person who has not been given a certificate of competency by the state board of examiners. A miner in the employ of defendant mining company was killed through negligence of a licensed mine manager. Held that defendant was not relieved from liability arising from defaults of its manager. Fulton v. Wilmington Star Min. Co., 133 F. 193.

Note: Following is a comment on Fulton v. Wilmington Star Min. Co., supra: "In selecting a manager the mine owner is restricted to a limited class of men—those who have been declared competent by the state. It was argued that in thus restricting the employer's choice and compelling him to employ one of a class, the legislative intent must have been to exempt the owner from the defaults of such managers. The general rule is that 'when a person or corporation is compelled by law to employ an individual in a given matter, no liability attaches for his tortious or negligent acts.' Durkin v. Kingston Coal Co., 171 Pa. 193, 33 A. 237, 50 Am. St. Rep. 801, 29 L. R. A. 808; Williams v. Thacker Coal Co., 44 W. Va. 599, 30 S. E. 107, 40 L. R. A. 812. Similarly it has been held that a ship owner is not liable for injuries arising from the fault of a compulsory pilot (Homer Ramsdell Co. v. La Compagnie Generale, 182 U. S. 406, 45 Law. Ed. 1155; Crisp v. Steamship Co., 124 F. 748); and that a city is not liable for default of a contractor when it is compelled to let contracts to the lowest bidder. James v. City of San Francisco, 6 Cal. 529, 65 Am. Dec. 526. The Federal court refused to follow these cases but adopted the rule as laid down in Consolidated Coal Co. v. Seniger, 179 Ill. 370, 53 N. E. 733, and Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 207 Ill. 395, on the theory that the certificate of the examiners was mere prima facie evidence of competency. This case was differentiated from those in which the master is compelled to employ a certain individual. Here he may choose from a class. This class, if the examinations are properly conducted, must embrace all the competent men in the profession. The mine owner would be restricted to the employment of such men for mine managers even at common law."—3 Mich. L. R. 415.

Indiana: Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, requiring machinery of certain kinds to be guarded, does not apply to an emery belt, a spark from which flew off and struck plaintiff in the eye. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277. Failure to guard a ripsaw, which it was possible and practicable to guard, is negligence. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Failure to provide a belt shifter is not a violation of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, unless the factory inspector has required one to be supplied. Robertson v. Ford [Ind.] 74 N. E. 1. Directing drivers to open and close mine doors is not a compliance with Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7487, requiring an attendant to be assigned to each door. Indiana & C. Coal Co. v. Neal [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 295. Employes are entitled to protection given by the statute, if observed, and may recover for its violation, even though the injury did not result from improper ventilation. Id.

Kentucky: A violation of Ky. St. 1903, § 2731, requiring mine owners or operators to provide suitable and efficient ventilation in mines, is negligence per se as to a miner injured by such violation. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233.

Massachusetts: Since an appliance does not become a part of the "ways, works or machinery" until it has become a part of the permanent structure or plant, a master is not liable under St. 1887, p. 899, c. 270, § 1, where an employe is injured by the falling of a casting which he is preparing to attach to an elevator gate. Nye v. Dutton [Mass.] 73 N. E. 654. Hatchway, being a part of a vessel's equipment, is not a part of a stevedore's "ways, works and machinery" under Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 71, cl. 1. Hyde v. Booth [Mass.] 74 N. E. 337. Where longshoreman himself placed a section of a hatchway in such a position that it would bear no weight, the stevedore was not liable for the injury resulting therefrom under Rev. Laws, c. 106 § 71, cl. 2. Id. Temporary staging, furnished complete to employes, is no part of the "ways, works and machinery." Feeney v. York Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 733. But a recovery may be had under the statute if employes are negligently ordered to use an unsafe temporary staging. Id. Where servants took two ladders furnished them and tied them together, the extension ladder so used was not a part of the defendant's ways, works and machinery, and defendant was not liable for an injury caused by the breaking of the rope used. Higgins v. Higgins [Mass.] 74 N. E. 471. Evidence regarding belt and pulley of machine held sufficient to go to jury on issue whether foreman had notice of a defect which he failed to remedy, under Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 71, cl. 1. Lynch v. Stevens & Sons Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 478. Cars on which coal is shipped are not a part of the "ways, works or machinery" of the consignee on whose premises the coal is unloaded, and the consignee is not liable to his servants for injuries caused by defects therein. Dunn v. Boston & N. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 75. Rev. Laws, c. 111, §§ 203, 209, prohibiting railroad companies, while moving traffic, from using cars not equipped with automatic couplers, does not apply to a car being taken to the repair shop to be repaired. Taylor v. Boston & M. R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 591.

(§ 3) C. Methods of work, rules and regulations.[21]—Whether a method of doing the work provided by the master is reasonably safe depends upon the character of the work and the danger to be apprehended.[22] The question is usually one of fact for the jury.[23] Failure to provide a sufficient number of servants to do the

Missouri: Failure to guard pulleys and belts which could have been guarded, as required by Rev. St. 1899, § 6433, is negligence per se. Stafford v. Adams [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1130. Rev. St. 1899, § 8822, requiring mine owners to keep a sufficient supply of timber on hand for the propping of workings when necessary, does not make such owners insurers, but places on them a high degree of care commensurate with the danger. McDaniels v. Royal Min. Co., 110 Mo. App. 706, 85 S. W. 679.

New York: Laws 1897, p. 480, c. 415, does not require shafting 8 feet above the floor to be guarded. Scialo v. Steffens, 94 N. Y. S. 305. Master not liable, under Laws 1886, p. 629, c. 409, as amended by Laws 1892, p. 1372, c. 673, § 8, for failing to guard a revolving shaft 15 feet above the floor which could be reached only by a ladder. Dillon v. National Coal Tar Co., 181 N. Y. 215, 73 N. E. 978. Under Laws 1899, p. 353, c. 192, § 81, providing that machinery shall be kept guarded, failure to replace guards renders the master liable, though the superintendent ordered them replaced, and the servant so ordered failed to do so. McManus v. St. Regis Paper Co., 94 N. Y. S. 932.

Pennsylvania: Mining act June 2, 1891, requiring the presence of an attendant at mine doors to prevent their being kept open longer than is necessary, has reference only to proper ventilation of the mine, and imposes no duty to employes who use the doors. Allen v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 54, 61 A. 572.

Washington: Failure to provide belt shifters, as required by Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, § 1, is negligence per se. Whelan v. Washington Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 98. Since a failure to guard cog wheels, in violation of Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, § 1, is negligence per se, an instruction that it was the employer's duty to provide appliances to prevent injury "so far as this could possibly be done" was not prejudicial. Hansen v. Seattle Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 102. Failure to guard swiftly revolving shafting, having couplings on which clothing was liable to be caught, was violation of Laws 1903, c. 37. Hoveland v. Hall Bros. Marine R. & Shipbuilding Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1090. Master held not liable for failure to guard machinery, as required by Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, where a guard was put on mangle to prevent the operator's hands getting into rollers, but the operator's fingers got caught in an apron string and were drawn over guard and into the rollers, no similar accident having occurred. Daffron v. Majestic Laundry Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1089.

21. See 4 C. L. 553.

22. Precautions taken to prevent injury in switch yards held sufficient as to persons exercising due care. Lewis v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co., 114 La. 161, 38 So. 92. Negligence of defendant in allowing two trains to run without proper orders was not available to a motorman whose duty it was to look out for other trains. Vinson v. Los Angeles Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 53. Removal of tackle from a beam was not actionable negligence when temporary bolts had been put in place to hold it and it fell because one of these bolts broke. Furber v. Kansas City Belt & Nut Co., 185 Mo. 301, 84 S. W. 890. Merely requiring plaintiff employed to clean engines, to carry a white light, and requiring engineer to inspect engine before taking it out, held not sufficient to protect plaintiff while under engine. Lane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 988.

23. Whether railway company was negligent in giving orders to engineer who ran his train into cars on the main track. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Vanlandingham [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 847. Whether it was negligence to require machines to be cleaned while in motion, mill being short of hands and work being behind. Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769. Boy of 14 was jerked from a telephone pole by a horse running into a wire which hung across the street and was attached to the boy, the general manager being present. Anderson v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 786. Ordering outbound trains to use tracks of incoming trains work in safety is negligence.[24] The master is not liable for injuries resulting from an unauthorized departure from the method provided by him,[25] but failure to direct a servant, seen to be employing a dangerous method, to use a safer method, is actionable negligence.[26] The adoption of the ordinary and customary method of doing certain work is not negligence.[27] Thus, the operation of trains through a train dispatcher,[28] who, in giving orders, relies on information supplied by local agents,[29] is not negligence; nor will the giving of particular orders by a train dispatcher be regarded as actionable negligence, where he adopted the only reasonable and practicable plan available for the handling of certain trains.[30] Delaying train orders may constitute negligence.[31]

It is the duty of the master to use ordinary care to promulgate and enforce reasonable rules and regulations for the safety of servants, when the nature of the work or business requires it.[32] The necessity for rules,[33] whether they have in fact was not negligence per se. Sanks v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 385.

24. Where evidence warranted finding that manager did not have enough men at work to make unloading of timbers safe, finding of negligence of master was warranted. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124. Having a force for removing telephone poles inadequate to do the work safely in the manner chosen might constitute negligence though force would be adequate if the work was done in another way. Sandquist v. Independent Tel. Co., 38 Wash. 313, 80 P. 539. Evidence insufficient to take to jury question of negligence in providing insufficient help on switching train, and in providing a competent yard crew. Rosney v. Erie R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 311.

25. Master not liable for injury resulting from negligent departure by fellow-servant from usual custom in blasting. Gardner-Wilmington Coal Co. v. Knott, 115 Ill. App. 515. Where a train was started properly made up but the conductor afterwards turned the engine around and ran the caboose ahead of it, the railway company was not liable for a resulting collision, the change having been made without authority. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. Master not under duty to supply men enough to prevent an injury resulting from improper use of suitable rollers in unloading lumber. Walsh v. Smith, 26 R. I. 554, 59 A. 922.

26. Where a general manager saw a servant tamping dynamite with a steel rod, his failure to direct the servant to perform his work in a safer manner was not negligence as to a mere detail of the work, but was negligence for which the master was responsible. O'Brien v. Buffalo Furnace Co. [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 161.

27. Whether throwing belt off pulley by a stick was the ordinary and customary way of doing it held for jury, the evidence being conflicting. Sweigert v. Klingensmith [Pa.] 60 A. 253. Where, in action for death of brakeman while switching, the evidence did not show that the system of signals used was unsafe and dangerous or was not that ordinarily used by railroad companies, there was no recovery. McGregor v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 212 Pa. 482, 61 A. 1017.

28. The movement of freight trains by telegraphic orders, based on information relative to the location of the trains upon a railroad, gathered and telegraphed by local operators or station agents to the train dispatcher, is a rational, careful, and approved method of operating a railroad. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 737.

29. It is not negligence for a train dispatcher to rely on information furnished by a local operator, that a train had not passed his station, though such information, if true, would show the train was several hours late. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 737.

30. Rules of a railroad company that meeting orders should not be sent to the train of superior right at the points of execution if this can be avoided, and that there should be at least one telegraph office, if possible, between those at which opposing trains meet, do not constitute an absolute command and prohibition. Hence a dispatcher was not negligent in sending orders to the train of superior right at the point of execution or to send meeting orders to opposing trains at points between which there was no telegraph office, where there was no other practical or reasonable way to operate the trains in question. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 737.

31. Train dispatcher negligent in delaying train orders after he knew a certain train was running ahead of time, a collision occurring as a consequence. Santa Fe Pac. R. Co. v. Holmes [C. C. A.] 136 F. 66.

32. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85. When rules are necessary for servant's safety, failure to adopt them is negligence. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280. The duty to prescribe rules for the orderly and safe conduct of a business arises only where the work is in fact complicated and dangerous. Deye v. Lodge & S. Mach. Tool Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 480. Danger in repairing a machine held such as to require rules for giving signals to start and stop it while being repaired. Sirois v. Henry [N. H.] 59 A. 936. Where two companies use the same tracks in the same yards, running engines and cars thereon both in the daytime and nighttime, reasonable care on the part of the owner of the yards requires the promulgation of rules and regulations for the safety of employes in the yard. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Lore [Va.] 51 S. E. 371. Where railroad been adopted[34] and whether they were known to employes,[35] are ordinarily questions of fact; the construction of rules[36] is for the court.[37] Rules should be clear and explicit,[38] must be brought to the notice of employes,[39] and must be enforced.[40] The existence of reasonably safe rules will not excuse the master if he has failed to provide competent servants to execute them.[41] A rule which has been habitually violated[42] with the knowledge or acquiescence of the master,[43] actual or implied,[44] is regarded as waived or abrogated. A custom may have the force of a regularly adopted rule.[45]

(§ 3) D. Warning and instructing servant.[46]—It is the duty of the master to properly warn and instruct young[47] and inexperienced[48] employes as to the dangers company is engaged in repairing track, thereby creating temporary dangers to brakemen engaged in shifting cars, it owes them the duty to make rules and regulations for their protection while in the performance of such duties. Smith v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 359. Where coal trimmers, working in bins, were liable to be killed by coal dumped on them from cars, it was the master's duty to provide reasonable rules and regulations for the protection of men so engaged. Burns v. Palmer, 107 App. Div. 321, 95 N. Y. S. 161. Where one of two men operating a winch used to lower freight into hold of vessel was injured by reason of the temporary absence of the other man, the evidence was held insufficient to take to the jury the issue whether the work was such as to make necessary a rule that two men were to be always present during operation of the winch. Johnson v. Prime Line, 93 N. Y. S. 273.

33. Necessity of rules to protect workman under engine cleaning out ash pan. Lane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 988.

34. Whether proper rules for protection of coal trimmers had been made. Burns v. Palmer, 107 App. Div. 321, 95 N. Y. S. 161. Whether railway company had a rule requiring the dispatcher to notify crews of regular trains of the presence of work trains on the main track was properly submitted in an action for injuries suffered in a collision where negligence of the dispatcher may have concurred with negligence of a flagman sent out from the work train to cause the collision. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29.

35. Whether employe knew of rule prohibiting riding on locomotives. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Maydole [Colo.] 79 P. 1023.

36. Rule requiring inspection of track by section foreman during heavy wind, rain, and snow storms held to apply where track was rendered unsafe by heavy rains. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Giving roadmaster authority over construction work generally did not give him authority to control the running of trains so as to relieve the motorman of his duty to look out for other trains. Vinson v. Los Angeles Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 53.

37. The construction of a rule prohibiting persons other than employes in discharge of their duties from riding on locomotives was for the court. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Maydole [Colo.] 79 P. 1023.

38. Rule reciting that yard limits were designated by signs and providing that a train occupying the main track within the limits of the yard at a certain place is not required to protect itself by flagmen except during the time that a first-class train is expected is sufficiently clear and explicit. Rosney v. Erie R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 311.

39. Rule prohibiting flying switches will not prevent recovery for injury in making one, if such rule was not brought to notice of person injured. Humphries v. Raritan Copper Works [N. J. Law] 60 A. 62.

40. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85.

41. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29.

42. Evidence insufficient to show that a rule requiring repairers to put out signals on cars under which they were working had been customarily violated. Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Elliott [C. C. A.] 137 F. 904.

43. A master is not deprived of the benefit of a rule made by him because it has been habitually violated unless he knew or ought to have known of such violation. Himrod Coal Co. v. Clingan, 114 Ill. App. 568. Evidence as to violation of rules for operation of trains is inadmissible unless knowledge by the company of such violation is also shown. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. Whether rules as to signals for protection of car repairers had been disregarded with master's knowledge and acquiescence was for jury. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85.

44. When a rule has been violated so frequently and openly and for such a length of time that the employer could, in the exercise of ordinary care, have discovered its nonobservance, it is regarded as waived and abrogated; violation of it does not then constitute contributory negligence by the employe. Biles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 129.

45. Evidence of a custom of notifying late regular trains of the presence of work trains on the track admissible. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29.

46. See 4 C. L. 555.

47. Where 16 year old boy was briefly instructed on manner of running machine but not as to manner of putting on belt, master was liable for injury to boy while putting it on. Noden v. Verlenden Bros., 211 Pa. 135, 60 A. 505. Where a boy of 9 was put to work near a saw, without instruction or warning, and had two fingers cut off after less than two hours' work, a finding of negligence of the employer was warranted. Fries v. American Lead Pencil Co. [Cal. App.] 83 P. 173. Dangers of operating of their employment which they do not know and appreciate.[49] It is also his duty to warn or instruct his servants as to special or unusual risks arising during the course of the employment,[50] and as to hidden or latent dangers, known, or which ought to be known, to the master,[51] and unknown to the servant.[52] Instructions should be an intricate wool carding machine held not obvious to a boy of plaintiff's age; hence failure to instruct him was negligence. Rudberg v. Bowden Felting Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 590. Duty to properly instruct inexperienced boy who was told to clean machinery. Small v. Brainerd Lumber Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 726. Boy of 16 allowed to recover for injuries received from a dangerous saw near which he had been put to work without warnings or instruction. Gracia v. Maestri Furniture Mfg. Co., 114 La. 371, 38 So. 275. Recovery for death of boy while assisting in switching cars by the "chain switch" method, the boy not having been instructed and warned as to the danger of doing his work. Parker v. Crowell & S. Lumber Co. [La.] 39 So. 445. Master owed to boys employed to clear away scrap from machines, duty of keeping place where they stood free from scrap from the machines, so that they would not be endangered by overhead machinery and to instruct boys as to this danger. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829.

48. Master owes inexperienced machine operator duty of instructing as to proper manner of shifting belt. Sweigart v. Klingensmith [Pa.] 60 A. 253. Master liable where inexperienced servant was injured by a planing machine, he having received no warning or instruction, and the adjustment of the knives having been changed without notice to him. Texarkana Table & Furniture Co. v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 782. Directing an inexperienced employe to adjust a belt on a pulley shaft, without instructing him as to a collar and set screws projecting on the shaft whereby the servant was injured, was negligence. Mountain Copper Co. v. Pierce [C. C. A.] 136 F. 150. Master bound to warn inexperienced servant and instruct him as to particular dangers, so that servant may decide whether he will assume ordinary risks of the employment. Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708.

49. The duty to instruct is imperative unless the child not only knows the danger incident to the discharge of his duties but also apreciates it and knows how to avoid it. Noden v. Verlenden Bros., 211 Pa. 135, 60 A. 505. It is the master's duty to warn and instruct a young and inexperienced employe even as to dangers open to observation if such dangers are not appreciated by the servant. Fletcher Bros. Co. v. Hyde [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 9. Even though an inexperienced minor employe knows there is some danger, it may yet be the master's duty to instruct him; whether such is the case is for the jury. Wood v. Texas Cotton Product Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 534, 88 S. W. 496. Master negligent when servant was told to clean rollers with a stick and was not warned not to use a stick which was too thick. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 434.

50. Inference of negligence warranted where signalman was withdrawn. Aleckson v. Erie R. Co., 101 App. Div. 395, 91 N. Y. S. 1029. Failure to put down torpedoes to warn engineer of coming train held negligence. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Spencer's Adm'x [Va.] 52 S. E. 310. Where plaintiff was not notified that a hole had been dug in a pathway used by him in carrying molten metal, he could recover for a resulting injury. San Antonio Foundry Co. v. Drish [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 440. Foreman of switching crew held negligent in failing to warn engineer that there was a car on a side track in consequence of which cars collided injuring a brakeman who was making a coupling. Kennedy v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 370. Duty to warn employe of approach of train on track where he was at work was a part of master's duty to keep place of work safe. D'Agostino v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1113. Where servant was put to work in a place made dangerous by a traveling crane which he could not see or hear while at work, the master owed him the duty of warning him of the danger. Inland Steel Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 852. Evidence held sufficient to show defendant negligent in failing to warn miner of danger from gases when another part of the mine was on fire. Pocahontas Collieries Co. v. Rukas' Adm'r [Va.] 51 S. E. 449. Jury justified in finding foreman in mill negligent in changing adjustment of saws without notifying servant employed on such saws. Johnson v. Crookston Lumber Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 891. When dangers arise from outside and independent conditions, or from the doing of other extraneous work by defendant's servants, distinct and separate from the work in which the particular servant is engaged, the master is bound to employ the necessary means to give timely warning of such dangers. Western Elec. Co. v. Hanselmann [C. C. A.] 136 F. 564. Failure to warn a servant placed in a dangerous position by the act of a fellow-servant under orders of a vice-principal renders master liable. O'Brien v. Page Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 114; Dossett v. St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 273.

51. Foreman of a boilermaker held negligent in failing to warn employe as to dangerous condition of casting on which the employe went to work with the foreman standing by. Faith v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 222, 95 N. Y. S. 774. Failure to warn crew of one train of dangerous make-up and proximity of another train held not negligence because defendant had no notice of these facts. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. Signals not required to warn repairman of starting of machine the injury not being one which would be anticipated by ordinary care. Dickey v. Dickey [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 909. If a brakeman, while giving signals to his engineer, was in a place where the presence of persons ought reasonably to

given to servants directed to perform services outside those contracted for[53] if the attendant risks are not known to the servant,[54] and where a dangerous course of conduct, pursued for the master's benefit, is permitted and acquiesced in by him, he owes the duty of giving proper warning and instruction.[55] A master who gives assurances of safety to a servant known to be inexperienced and ignorant of dangers is liable for resulting injuries.[56]

No instruction is necessary as to incidental risks, assumed by the contract of employment,[57] nor as to obvious dangers[58] fully known to the employe[59] or as well known to him as to his employer,[60] or which ought to have been known to him by reason of his experience[61] or by the exercise of ordinary care.[62] have been anticipated, switching crew ought to have given warning signals; otherwise such signals were not necessary. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523.

52. It is the master's duty to warn servant of latent defects or dangers unknown to the servant but known or which ought to be known to the master. Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13. No duty to warn employe working on elevator door that repairs were being made above him, when he knew that such repairs were going on. Nye v. Dutton [Mass.] 73 N. E. 654.

53. Where mill employe, who usually worked in packing department, but was sometimes directed to clean and oil machinery, was injured while oiling a line shaft, he could not recover on the theory that he was directed to do work outside the scope of his contract, without instructions. Hathaway v. Washington Milling Co. [Mich.] 103 N. W. 164.

54. A declaration alleging the death of an employe while engaged in work he was directed to do outside the service he had contracted for, and failure of the foreman to warn him of the attendant dangers, is demurrable when it does not set up ignorance of such dangers by the employe, his inexperience, or immaturity. O'Connor v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 503.

55. Where it appeared that laundry employes were permitted to remove pieces from machine rollers, without stopping the machine, the master owed duty of warning to young girl. Manning v. Excelsior Laundry Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 254.

56. Fletcher Bros. Co. v. Hyde [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 9.

57. No duty to warn against possible negligence of a fellow-servant. Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13. Railway company need not warn brakeman of position of bridge piles which are at standard and usual distance from track. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Haas [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1003.

58. Danger from flying pieces of steel in making certain repairs on machine being obvious to experienced machinist, instructions were not necessary. Wolf v. New Bedford Cordage Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 222. No need to instruct servant as to danger attending cutting down of tree. Anderson v. Columbia Imp. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1037. No duty to warn as to danger of wheeling truck into open elevator shaft when cage was not in place. Gallagher v. Snellenberg & Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 307. Failure to instruct plaintiff, an experienced, intelligent workman, as to the danger of removing telephone poles, was not negligence. Sandquist v. Independent Tel. Co., 38 Wash. 313, 80 P. 539. No negligence in failing to warn employe of dangerous condition of a pile of acid which he was engaged in moving with a wheelbarrow, as its condition and liability to fall on him was obvious. Martin v. Royster Guano Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 680. Failure to warn employe of ordinary intelligence of obvious danger of getting caught in rollers when passing between two machines held not negligence. Dickenson v. Vernon, 77 Conn. 537, 60 A. 270. Where an experienced workman was ordered to clean up a room, the master had the right to assume that instruction as to the work was unnecessary, in view of the nature of the work and the fact that defects in the floor were obvious. O'Keeffe v. Squire Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 340. No duty to warn and instruct employe engaged in tearing down a trestle, since the employe knew the circumstances and the danger was obvious, it not being made to appear that the master knew that the employe did not appreciate the danger. Grayson-McLeod Lumber Co. v. Carter [Ark.] 88 S. W. 597. Employe in shoe factory, who had worked in room many years and at same machine several months, was not entitled to warning or instruction as to existence of obvious covered shaft running along the floor. Chisholm v. Donovan [Mass.] 74 N. E. 652.

59. No duty to warn boy of 17, intelligent and physically well developed, as to dangers which he already appreciated. Walton v. Lindsay Lumber Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 670. Failure to instruct boy of 18 on operation of simple machine not negligent when he testified he understood it. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010. When girl knew danger of getting hair caught in machine, instruction relative thereto was unnecessary. Daniels v. New England Cotton Yarn Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 332.

60. No duty to warn as to dangers equally apparent to master and servant. Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13. No duty to warn as to an obvious incidental danger as well known to the servant as to the master. Reynolds v. Grace, 115 Ill. App. 473. Where danger from revolving shaft was as obvious to the servant as to the master, the latter was under no duty to warn the former. Dillon v. National Coal Tar Co., 181 N. Y. 215, 73 N. E. 978.

61. Where the place of work assigned a

Whether warnings or instruction should have been given in a particular instance,[63] and whether warnings or instructions given were sufficient,[64] are questions of fact to be determined by reference to the character of the risk or danger in issue, and the age, experience and capacity of the employe concerned.[65] A warning should be sufficiently specific to apprise the servant of the particular danger to be guarded against.[66]

(§ 3) E. Fellow-servants.[67]—The master is charged with the duty of exercising ordinary care to employ and retain only such servants as are reasonably competent to perform their intended duties.[68] He is accordingly liable for injuries re-

servant of full age, good intelligence, and experience, is not necessarily dangerous, and no injury would occur if the servant did not expose himself to unnecessary dangers, the master is not bound to foresee and warn against such unnecessary dangers. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6.

62. No negligence in failing to instruct servant as to change in machinery whereby wheels were caused to revolve in opposite direction, the change being made while employe was sick, where he worked several weeks before his injury, and must have known of the change, had he exercised ordinary care. Bryant v. Great Northern Paper Co. [Me.] 60 A. 797. Where boy of 17, told to assist in lifting a piece of iron, lifted it alone and was injured by the strain, he could not recover from the master on the theory that he had failed to warn the boy as to the weight of the iron. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Sherman [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 887. Where employe shoveling snow in freight yard where trains frequently passed was expected to look out for himself, the master was not bound to give warnings, and was not liable for an injury to the employe by being struck by an engine. Riccio v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 704.

63. Whether master was negligent in failing to instruct young, inexperienced, and dull employe in operation of complicated machine was for jury. O'Neill v. Lowell Mach. Shop [Mass.] 75 N. E. 744. Whether failure to warn employe of approach of cars on side track in a shop was negligence, held for jury. Hickey v. Solid Steel Casting Co., 212 Pa. 255, 61 A. 798. Whether failure of foreman to keep lookout was negligence, was for jury. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401. The mere fact that warnings had been given a car inspector on former occasions does not show a duty to give such warnings. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rea [Tex.] 87 S. W. 324.

64. Question of machine operator's experience and sufficiency of instruction given him as to proper manner of shifting belt, held for jury. Sweigart v. Klingensmith [Pa.] 60 A. 253. Telling a servant that a machine could be stopped by stepping on a certain lever, and neglecting to tell him that it could not be so stopped when materials were passing through held actionable negligence. Yess v. Chicago Brass Co., 124 Wis. 406, 102 N. W. 932. Telltale signal to warn trainmen of bridges held not a compliance with Act No. 39, p. 51 of 1882 because not low enough to strike and warn brakeman on ordinary box car. Tallaferro v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 437.

65. If instructions to boy, directed to clean machinery, were not sufficiently plain, which was for jury, the master would be liable for a resulting injury. Small v. Brainerd Lumber Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 726. Whether there is a duty to instruct depends upon the circumstances, and the age and experience of the servant are to be considered in connection with the question whether dangers are obvious. Shickle-Harrison & Howard Iron Co. v. Beck, 112 Ill. App. 444. Instructions to boy should be such as would satisfy reasonably careful person that boy understood danger. Kirkham v. Wheeler-Osgood Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 869. Ordinarily the master may assume, in the absence of notice to the contrary, that his servants understand English and that a warning in that language will be understood and acted upon. Lobstein v. Sajatovich, 111 Ill. App. 654.

66. General warning did not relieve master where engineer ran into a washout caused by a defective culvert as to which he had not been warned. Western R. Co. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311.

67. See 4 C. L. 557.

68. Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13; Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. Master does not guaranty competency of employes but is only responsible for reasonable care in selecting them. City of Mobile v. Mobile Light & R. Co., 141 Ala. 442, 38 So. 127. It is master's duty to employ competent servants, and negligence of an incompetent servant is not an assumed risk. Anderson v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 490, 50 S. E. 202. Employers are liable to employes for injuries resulting from a failure to exercise reasonable care in selecting their co-employes, or for retaining such co-employes when their incompetency is known or by the exercise of reasonable care ought to be known. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 762, 89 S. W. 29. No negligence in employment of stationary engineer where careful inquiry disclosed that man was careful and experienced and sober in his habits. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Kelley [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 60, 87 S. W. 660. Negligence in employment of men not shown when it appeared they had done similar work many years and had been previously careful and had caused no accidents. Grams v. Reiss Coal Co. [Wis.] 102 N. W. 586. St. Louis ordinance requiring competent persons to be employed to run power elevators does not mean that only one person shall be permitted to run it or that the operator shall sulting proximately from the incompetency of a fellow-servant[69] if he had either actual or implied knowledge of such incompetency.[70] It is his duty to discharge a servant when he knows, or by the exercise of reasonable diligence would have known, that the servant has become incompetent.[71] The care required in learning of a servant's incompetency is not that degree of care required in the original employment,[72] since the master may rely on the presumption of competency of a servant in the employment of whom he has exercised ordinary care, until he has notice or knowledge to the contrary.[73] Habitual negligence or carelessness of a servant constitutes incompetency within the meaning of this rule;[74] and the competency of a servant may be a material issue though it was an act of negligence which caused the injury complained of.[75]

A master who has used due care in the selection of servants is not at common law[76] liable to his employes for injuries resulting from the acts[77] or negligence of fellow-servants,[78] such acts or negligence being an assumed risk.[79] But negligence of perform no other service. Purcell v. Tennent Shoe Co., 187 Mo. 276, 86 S. W. 121.

69. Master liable for death of servant caused by incompetency of co-employe, when both were engaged in repairing electric wire. Scott v. Iowa Tel. Co., 126 Iowa, 524, 102 N. W. 432. Employe repairing electric wire did not assume risk of fellow-servant's incompetency, nor of the master's sending an incompetent servant to assist him. Id. Where an injury was alleged to have been caused by the incompetency of a fellow-servant, the cause of such incompetency was immaterial, and it was not error to refuse a charge as to defendant's liability in case it failed to instruct such servant as to the danger to others if he did not perform his duties with due care. Krueger v. Brenham Furniture Mfg. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1156.

70. Owing to high degree of care imposed on one using electricity, he will be charged with knowledge of the incompetency of a servant employed by him where by reason thereof another servant is killed. Scott v. Iowa Tel. Co., 126 Iowa, 524, 102 N. W. 432.

71. By acquiring a habit or character of negligence, drunkenness, or lack of skill. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272.

72. Since careful and skillful men grow more careful and skillful, ordinarily, by continuing in an employment. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272.

73. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. Servants presumed competent until contrary is made to appear. Grams v. Reiss Coal Co. [Wis.] 102 N. W. 586.

74. Servants assume the risk of occasional acts of negligence of their fellow-servants, but may, by notice, cast the risk of habitual negligence of co-employes on the master. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. In determining the competency of a hoisting engineer, his care and diligence in running the engine are to be considered as well as his skill and knowledge as an engineer. Staunton Coal Co. v. Bub, 218 Ill. 125, 75 N. E. 770.

75. Competency of a brakeman as a brakeman was a material issue though the act which caused the collision and injury complained of was his falling asleep when sent out to flag a train. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 762, 89 S. W. 29.

76. For modification of this principle by statute, see post, "Fellow-servant statutes."

77. At common law a master is not liable to an employe for wanton, willful, reckless or intentional acts of fellow-servants, if he himself did not direct such acts and was not negligent. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Bridges [Ala.] 39 So. 902.

78. When the master has used due care to select a sufficient number of competent servants, he is not liable for negligence of one resulting in injury to another. Hyland v. Southern Bell Telep. & Tel. Co., 70 S. C. 315, 49 S. E. 879. Master not liable if personally free from wrong, and act of fellow-servant causes injury. Mollhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733. No recovery for injury caused by iron casting slipping from a pile, where the pile was made by a fellow-servant in the performance of one of the details of his work. Deye v. Lodge & S. Mach. Tool Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 480. Where a servant was injured by being struck by a bale of hay thrown by a fellow-servant, after his day's work was done, but while he was on the master's premises and going for his dinner pail, he could not recover. Taylor v. Bush & Sons Co. [Del.] 61 A. 236. No recovery for injury from slipping on floor if slippery condition was caused by fellow-servant, and was not brought to notice of master, and had not existed for so long a time that he was charged with notice. Venhuor v. Lafayette Worsted Mills [R. I.] 60 A. 770. No evidence to show servant by whose negligence plaintiff was injured was vice-principal. Gillies v. Clarke Fork Coal Min. Co. [Mont.] 80 P. 370. No recovery where employe was killed by falling through hatchway, the covering of which had been removed by fellow-servants. Earle v. Clyde S. S. Co., 92 N. Y. S. 839. Master not liable where plaintiff was in a position of danger and fellow-servants gave hasty and confusing signals to him. Illinois Steel Co. v. Ralewicz, 113 Ill. App. 312.

79. Deye v. Lodge & S. Mach. Tool Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 480; Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13; Dolese & Shepard Co. v. Johnson, 116 Ill. App. 206; Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni, 215 Ill. 583, 74 N. E. 751; Atchison & E. Bridge Co. v.

the fellow-servant must have been the sole proximate cause of injury;[80] if concurring negligence of the master and a fellow-servant was the proximate cause of injury, so that it would not have resulted had the master exercised due care, he is liable.[81]

Determination of relation. Common-law rules.[82]—What facts are essential to the existence of the fellow-servant relation between two or more employes is a question of law for the court;[83] the existence of such facts in a particular case is for the Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 18; Dana & Co. v. Blackburn [Ky.] 90 S. W. 237; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dillard [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 313.

80. Master not liable if fellow-servant's negligence was sole proximate cause. Gila Valley, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon [Ariz.] 80 P. 337. If an act of fellow-servants was the sole proximate cause of an injury, the master is not liable whether or not their act was negligent. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 89 S. W. 1117. Where servants made an extension ladder out of two furnished them, and used a defective rope for that purpose which broke, thereby injuring plaintiff, the proximate cause of the injury was the negligence of fellow-servants. Higgins v. Higgins [Mass.] 74 N. E. 471.

81. Gila Valley, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon [Ariz.] 80 P. 337; Kremer v. New York Edison Co., 102 App. Div. 433, 92 N. Y. S. 883; Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, 73 N. E. 787; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Sawusch, 218 Ill. 130, 75 N. E. 797; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280; Chicago City R. Co. v. Enroth, 113 Ill. App. 285; Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 915; Sirois v. Henry & Sons [N. H.] 59 A. 936; Venbuvr v. Lafayette Worsted Mills [R. I.] 60 A. 770; Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466; Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85. Master liable though negligence of fellow-servant concurred with that of a vice-principal. Moseley v. Schofield Sons Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 309. Where act of vice-principal contributes to produce injury, fellow-servant rule does not apply. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Surrells, 115 Ill. App. 615. A servant injured by concurring negligence of the master and a fellow-servant may recover from either if he was himself without fault. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592. Where pile driver furnished was defective, concurrent negligence of a co-employe was no defense. Hazzard v. State, 108 App. Div. 119, 95 N. Y. S. 1103. Where rope used with an appliance was unsafe, the act of a foreman directing it to be used was held, at most, concurrent negligence, and master was not relieved. Pluckham v. American Bridge Co., 93 N. Y. S. 748. Master liable if negligent in furnishing block too small for spliced rope used with it, though another servant was negligent in the manner in which it was used. Wallace v. Henderson, 211 Pa. 142, 60 A. 574. If defective construction of elevator entrance contributed to cause injury to employe riding in the elevator, defendant was liable though the act of another employe who threw plaintiff on the floor also contributed. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Trcka, 218 Ill. 559, 75 N. E. 1053; Id., 115 Ill. App. 56. Where negligence alleged was failure to have guards on a table across which shingles were pushed while being loaded into hold of vessel, the fact that fellow-servants were responsible for leaving hatchway, into which plaintiff fell, open, was no defense. Olsen v. Gray [Cal.] 81 P. 414. Where engineer loaded a lumber train in such a negligent manner that the brakes would not work and the train was deralled while running at a high rate at a place where the rails spread because the ties were decayed, the fireman could recover for injuries sustained. Fuller v. Tremont Lumber Co., 114 La. 266, 38 So. 164.

Note: "The defense in Fuller v. Tremont Lumber Co., supra, was that the injury was caused by the negligence of the engineer in improperly loading the cars. If this were the sole cause of the accident, then under the fellow-servant rule there could be no recovery against the master. But the injury complained of was caused by the concurrent negligence of the master and the fellow-servant, for the master was bound to furnish a reasonably safe track and equipment. Under such circumstances the mere fact that the negligence of the fellow-servant contributed to the injury does not relieve the master from liability. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280; Cole v. St. Louis Transit Co., 183 Mo. 81, 81 S. W. 1138; Colley v. Southern Cotton Oil Co., 120 Ga. 258, 47 S. E. 932; Thomas v. Smith, 90 Minn. 379, 97 N. W. 141; Grant v. Keystone Lumber Co., 119 Wis. 229, 96 N. W. 535; 100 Am. St. Rep. 883; Cudahy Packing Co. v. Anthes [C. C. A.] 117 F. 118; Simone v. Kirk, 173 N. Y. 7, 65 N. E. 739. This is the rule even though due care on the part of the fellow-servant would have prevented the injury. Cone v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co., 81 N. Y. 206, 37 Am. Rep. 491. A few of the authorities hold that the master is liable only if his negligence is the proximate cause of the injury. Phil Iron Co. v. Davis, 111 Pa. 597, 56 Am. Rep. 305; Luts v. A. & P. R. R. Co., 6 N. M. 496; Trewatha v. Buchanan Gold Min. Co., 96 Cal. 494; Little Rock R. Co. v. Barry, 84 Fed. 944, 43 L. R. A. 349. The great weight of authority, however, is to the effect that in cases of concurrent negligence the master is liable."—3 Mich. L. R. 670.

82. See 4 C. L. 559, and note, p. 560, on conflict in authorities.

83. Wilkinson Co-op. Glass Co. v. Dickinson [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 957. The existence of the relation is for the court if the facts are conceded, and only one reasonable inference can be drawn therefrom. Stephens v. Deatherage Lumber Co., 110 Mo. App. 398, 86 S. W. 481; Aurora Boiler Works v. Colligan, 115 Ill. App. 527; Bentley, Shriver & Co. v. Edwards [Md.] 60 A. 283. Instructions on fellow-servants erroneous because they failed to tell jury what constituted the relation. Illinois Steel Co. v. Rolewicz, 113 Ill. App. 312.

jury.[84] The Federal courts treat the question as one of general law and need not follow the rules laid down by state courts.[85]

A rule frequently applied is that employes of a common master[86] engaged in the same common enterprise,[87] performing duties tending to the accomplishment of the same general end or purpose,[88] are fellow-servants, though not at the time engaged in the same operation or on the same particular piece of work.[89]

84. Wilkinson Co-op. Glass Co. v. Dickinson [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 957. Unless the facts admitted or proved beyond dispute show the existence of relation of fellow-servants in a given case within the established rule of law, the question is for the jury. Himrod Coal Co. v. Clingan, 114 Ill. App. 568; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Surrells, 115 Ill. App. 615. Whether certain employes in iron and steel works were fellow-servants held for jury. Shickle-Harrison & H. Iron Co., 112 Ill. App. 444. Whether molder and his helper were fellow-servants while latter was engaged in repairing crane held for jury. Leighton & H. Steel Co. v. Snell, 217 Ill. 152, 75 N. E. 462. Instruction assuming that plaintiff and person causing his injury were fellow-servants error when from the evidence the contrary conclusion was possible. Norman v. Middlesex & S. Traction Co., 71 N. J. Law, 652, 60 A 936.

85. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Patting, 112 Ill. App. 4. See, also, 4 C. L. 559.

86. Persons employed by different masters are not fellow-servants. Bentley-Shriner & Co. v. Edwards [Mo.] 60 A. 283. Servant in employ of general employer, and servant of subcontractor, are not fellow-servants. Wagner v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 919. Watchman employed by one road is not fellow-servant of train crew of another road. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 113 Tenn. 266, 87 S. W. 418. Longshoreman, engaged in hold of barge, unloading, is not fellow-servant of winchman, being employed by different masters. The City of San Antonio, 135 F. 879. Plaintiff, employed by A., was rightfully on a wharf sewing sugar bags, and was injured by negligence of a servant of B., engaged in unloading cargo from a lighter owned by C. whose captain was also engaged in the work. There was no arrangement whereby plaintiff became temporarily the servant of B. or C. Held, the defense that negligence of a fellow-servant caused plaintiff's injury was not available to B. Ford v. Arbuckle, 94 N. Y. S. 1097. The servants of two railway companies between whom there is a traffic contract permitting one to run its cars over the tracks of the other are not co-employes. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Vandenberg [Ind.] 73 N. E. 990.

Contra: Where two street railway companies contract for the use of each other's tracks under the authority conferred by 31 Stat. at L. 270, c. 718, servants of the two companies are fellow-servants in the use of the common appliances and all the employes using them are fellow-servants. Looney v. Metropolitan R. Co., 24 App. D. C. 510.

Fellow-servant doctrine applies only as between master and servant, and not as between a servant and a third party. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Vipond, 112 Ill. App. 558. Fellow-servant doctrine not applicable where suit is not against common master but against a third person. Chicago Transit Co. v. Campbell, 110 Ill. App. 366.

87. Mollhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733; Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079. Mine boss is fellow-servant of miner. Purkey v. Southern Coal & Transp. Co. [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 755. Switchman was fellow-servant of brakeman when both were engaged in making a flying switch. Stevick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 999. Employe, foreman, and railroad roadmaster, all engaged in removing debris of landslide from track, are fellow-servants. Florence & C. C. R. Co. v. Whipps [C. C. A.] 138 F. 13. Men employed by a consignee of iron to unload and pile it held fellow-servants. Weizinger v. Erie R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 869. Two employes engaged in tamping furnace floor, one holding block which other struck, are fellow-servants. Wilkinson Co-op. Glass Co. v. Dickinson.[Ind App.] 73 N. E. 957. Two helpers in machine shop, and an engine tester, all working on the same engine and under the same foreman, were fellow-servants. Millett v. Puget Sound Iron & Steel Works, 37 Wash. 438, 79 P. 980. Employes in gypsum mine, one of whom loosened rock by blasting, which the other removed, were fellow-servants. Hendrickson v. U. S. Gypsum Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 503. Coal shoveler and truckman assigned to duty on the same tram car at a coal elevator, was engaged in same work, and were fellow-servants, neither being superior to the other, though the truckman occasionally gave signals. Dana & Co. v. Blackburn [Ky.] 90 S. W. 237. Where a foreman and two employes were engaged together in lacing a belt under the foreman's direction, they were all fellow-servants, and one of the employes could not recover for an injury resulting from a negligent adjustment of the clamps to the belt. Standard Pottery Co. v. Moudy [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 188.

88. Mollhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733. All employes of the same master, engaged in the same general business, and whose efforts tend to promote the same general purpose and accomplish the same general end, are fellow-servants. Atchison & E. Bridge Co. v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 18. Roustabout who negligently started machine was fellow-servant of repairman. Dickey v. Dickey [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 909. Plaintiff, an employe of lighterage company, and an engineer in charge of a winch owned by defendant but hired by the hour by the lighterage company, were fellow-servants while engaged in unloading sugar from a lighter to the dock. Quinn v. National Sugar Refining Co., 102 App. Div. 47, 92 N. Y. S. 95.

89. Two employes engaged on steam shovel were fellow-servants, though one

The rule most frequently applied is that it is not the rank of an employe, nor his authority over other employes, but the nature of the duty or service he performs, which determines whether he is a vice-principal or a fellow-servant.[90] The duty of the master to use ordinary care to provide for the safety of his servants being personal and nondelegable,[91] any person charged with, or engaged in the performance of, any part of that duty is a vice-principal, for whose negligence in the performance of such duty the master is liable.[92] Thus, persons charged with, or engaged in the performance of, the duty of the master to provide a reasonably safe place[93] or reasonably safe appliances,[94] or a sufficient number[95] of competent employes,[96] or to warn[97] was engineer and other was shoveler and leveler; the latter, struck by bucket through engineer's negligence, could not recover. Mollhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733. Where carpenter shop was part of molding department of foundry, foreman of molding department being superior of carpenter foreman, the latter was the fellow-servant of molders who used flasks made by the carpenter. Leishman v. Union Iron Works [Cal.] 83 P. 30. Kitchen boy and ship's carpenter are fellow-servants. The Esperanza, 133 F. 1015. Engineer on steamship is fellow-servant of oiler in engine room. McCarron v. Dominion Atlantic R. Co., 134 F. 762. Section hand working on dump car, and employes operating engine attached to the car are fellow-servants. O'Connor v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 503. Elevator boy and boy employed to stamp and address envelopes held fellow-servants. Zilver v. Robert Graves Co., 94 N. Y. S. 714.

90. Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079; Page v. Battle Creek Pure Food Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 615, 105 N. W. 72; Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252; Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85. Nature of employment not rank, or power to employ or discharge men, is the test. Hjelm v. Western Granite Contracting Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 384. Mere superiority in rank, or authority to direct, does not alone make a servant a vice-principal. Dill v. Marmon [Ind.] 73 N. E. 67. "Boss" and employe held fellow-servants. Martin v. Royster Guano Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 680.

91. Williams v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 124 Wis. 328, 102 N. W. 589.

92. Mollhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733; Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124; Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079; Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 116 Ill. App. 303. A vice-principal is one who represents the master in the discharge of those duties which the master owes to his servants. Dill v. Marmon [Ind.] 73 N. E. 67. The master is liable for injuries resulting from a breach of any of his duties, regardless of the rank, grade, or department of the servant to whom such duties were delegated. Atchison & E. Bridge Co. v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 18. If an act or omission causing an injury is one pertaining to the duties owed by the master to the servant, the master is responsible for the manner of its performance without regard to the rank of the servant to whom the duty is intrusted. Larson v. Le Doux [Idaho] 81 P. 600.

93. The duty to provide a reasonably safe place cannot be delegated. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91; Kalker v. Hedden [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 395; Schiglizzo v. Dunn, 211 Pa. 253, 60 A. 724. Where repairers placed watchman's box so near the track that it was struck by an engine, the negligence was that of the master. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Devers [Mo.] 61 A. 418. Where master agreed to furnish and place cars for plaintiff to load, one who placed the cars was performing a delegated duty and for his negligence the master was responsible. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Robizas, 111 Ill. App. 49. Failure of an employe to place a guard around a hole in the floor of a dressing room used by employes rendered the master liable, though such employe disobeyed orders. Day v. Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co. [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 903. Man employed to clean fire box of engines, working in a pit, is not a fellow-servant of one who negligently causes the engine on which he was working to move, thereby injuring his hand. Mullin v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 38 Wash. 550, 80 P. 814. In placing a freight train on a side track a heavy casting was knocked from a car onto the main track, and was not removed before a passenger train came, the result being a wreck and death of the fireman on the passenger engine. A rule made it the duty of employes in charge of trains to report obstructions at once and to make repairs, taking charge of the work, to prevent accidents. This rule made the freight conductor a vice-principal and for his failure to remove the casting the company was responsible. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Curd [Ky.] 89 S. W. 140. The fact that as to other duties the crews of the freight and passenger trains were fellow-servants would not affect the operation of the rule as to duties of the master intrusted to employes. Id. Declaration held to state cause of action for injuries caused by backing of train under order of conductor while plaintiff, a brakeman, was between cars. Lorain Steel Co. v. Hayes, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 353.

Duty to maintain held delegable: When the master has used ordinary care to furnish a reasonably safe place and reasonably safe appliances, he may commit their maintenance in that condition to agents carefully selected for competency and fitness. Person whose duty it was to see that mine roof was kept reasonably safe held fellow-servant of injured miner. Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Farrington [Ala.] 39 So. 898.

94. Duty to provide reasonably safe appliances is nondelegable. Butler v. Frazee, 25 or properly instruct[98] employes, or to inspect[99] and keep in repair[1] the place and appliances supplied, or to promulgate and enforce reasonable rules and regulations,[2] have been held vice-principals for whose failure to perform the duties intrusted to them, or for whose negligence in the performance thereof, the master has been held responsible. On the other hand, when a master has performed his duties, he may properly intrust the details of his work to employes,[3] and if the act or omission com-

App. D. C. 392; Pluckham v. American Bridge Co., 93 N. Y. S. 748; Siversen v. Jenks, 102 App. Div. 313, 92 N. Y. S. 382. Master held liable where foreman directed use of rope which broke, injuring plaintiff. Pluckham v. American Bridge Co., 93 N. Y. S. 748. Duty to provide reasonably safe staging held nondelegable where staging was complicated and plan had to be followed in its use and construction. Carlson v. Haglin [Minn.] 104 N. W. 297. One who helped build a scaffold was not fellow-servant of one who was later directed to use it. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905. The duty of the master to supply a reasonably safe scaffold for a painter held nondelegable though it was painter's duty to use ordinary care to discover defects in it. George Weidemann Brewing Co. v. Wood, 27 Ky. L. R. 1012, 87 S. W. 772. Duty of providing reasonably safe derrick and keeping it in that condition cannot be delegated even to a fit and competent agent so as to escape liability for nonperformance. Rincicotti v. O'Brien Contracting Co., 77 Conn. 617, 60 A. 115. Duty to furnish reasonably safe machinery is personal, continuing and nonassignable. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991. Foreman in printing office who failed to replace guard rail on press, whereby a press feeder was injured, was not the latter's fellow-servant, the statute requiring a guard rail. Pinsdorf v. Kellogg & Co., 108 App. Div. 209, 95 N. Y. S. 617. Servant whose duty it was to deliver cars to crews represented the master and latter was liable for injury resulting from delivery of car with defective motor handle so that car could not be reversed. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Sawusch, 218 Ill. 130, 75 N. E. 797. Negligence of employes in constructing appliances to be used by plaintiff, the construction being in charge of the foreman, was negligence for which the master was responsible. American Cotton Co. v. Simmons [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 343, 87 S. W. 842.

95. Duty of seeing that a sufficient number of men are employed to do the work in hand with safety is nondelegable. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124. Foreman, in deciding how many men were needed to repair certain shafting was performing a duty of the master, and the latter was liable if injury resulted because two were not enough. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592.

96. Duty of selecting competent employes is nondelegable. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124.

97. Duty to warn of danger from the doing of work by other employes cannot be delegated. Western Elec. Co. v. Hansalmann [C. C. A.] 136 F. 564. Duty to warn so that place of work may be safe is nondelegable. Inland Steel Co. v. Smith [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 852. Negligence of servants whose duty it was to keep lookout and give warnings made master liable. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523. Duty to give timely warning of explosion of blast in quarrying held nondelegable. Hjelm v. Western Granite Contracting Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 384. Failure of foreman to warn employe working on track of approach of train was negligence imputable to the master. D'Agostino v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1113. Negligence of a sawyer in charge of a machine in failing to warn a "dogger" after he was placed in danger was negligence for which the master was liable. O'Brien v. Page Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 114; Dossett v. St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 273.

98. Master responsible for instructions given by foreman. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829. Where employe was injured because of lack of instructions as to use of machine he was told to operate, the master was liable regardless of rank of person who failed to instruct. Flickner v. Lambert [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 263.

99. Duty of inspection is nondelegable. Crawford v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 61 A. 287; El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457; Koehler v. New York Steam Co. [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 538. Duty to properly inspect freight elevator. Starer v. Stern, 100 App. Div. 393, 91 N. Y. S. 821. Engineer, in charge of engine, and whose duty it was to inspect it and keep it in repair on the road was as to such inspection the vice-principal of the fireman injured by the explosion of the boiler. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Quirey [Ky.] 89 S. W. 217.

1. Duty to keep machinery in repair is not delegable; notice of a defect to one whose duty it is to repair is notice to the master. Odin Coal Co. v. Tadlock, 216 Ill. 624, 75 N. E. 332. Duty to keep cage in mine in proper repair cannot be delegated to cage tender so as to relieve master from liability for tender's negligence. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni, 215 Ill. 583, 74 N. E. 751. Where a foreman promised a servant to replace a defective belt and failed to do so, the foreman's negligence was that of a vice-principal and not a fellow-servant. Maryland Steel Co. v. Engleman [Md.] 61 A. 314. Failure of foreman to repair belt and pulley as he had promised held negligence for which master was responsible. Lynch v. Stevens & Sons Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 478.

2. Duty to make and enforce reasonable rules and regulations cannot be delegated. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85.

plained of does not pertain to any duty of the master, but is a mere detail of the work which it is the duty of his employes to perform, it is the act or omission of a fellow-servant,[4] regardless of the rank or authority of the employe charged therewith.[5]

3. When the master has performed his duties, he may commit details of the work to servants, and negligence in the performance of a detail is that of a fellow-servant. Williams v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 124 Wis. 328, 102 N. W. 589. Miners were properly required to make their own inspection for unexploded charges before drilling for blasts. Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252.

4. Servant who used a dull pike pole in holding pole on which plaintiff was at work, whereby it fell, was a fellow-servant of plaintiff, there being plenty of suitable pikes available. Towne v. United Elec. Gas & Power Co., 146 Cal. 766, 81 P. 124. Where master furnished suitable materials for molding flasks, used in foundry, and provided competent employes whose duty it was to put the materials together and construct flasks, defects in the flasks caused by negligence of the employes in putting the materials together did not make the master liable. Leishman v. Union Iron Works [Cal.] 83 P. 30. Where rules required miners to inspect for unexploded charges before commencing to drill, the act of a foreman in examining a hole and pronouncing it not a "missed shot" was the act of a fellow-servant. Poorman Silver Mines v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252. If the act or omission pertains to a mere detail of the work of employes, and is a part of their duty, it is the act or omission of a fellow-servant for which the master is not liable. Larsen v. Le Doux [Idaho] 81 P. 600. Act of foreman in turning on blower in oven which plaintiff was repairing, in order to cool the oven, thereby blowing ashes in plaintiff's eyes, was that of a fellow-servant. Page v. Battle Creek Pure Food Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 46, 105 N. W. 72. Act of station agent in lowering a movable platform used in loading milk cans on a car was the act of a fellow-servant of a freight conductor who was injured by coming in contact with it while on the side of a car. Henry v. Ann Arbor R. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 232, 103 N. W. 846. Act of foreman in directing use of unsafe hoisting rope, whereby another was injured, was the act of a fellow-servant, and not the performance of a delegated duty of the master. Vogel v. American Bridge Co., 180 N. Y. 373, 73 N. E. 1. Failure of operator of steam winch to stop it at the proper time was negligence of a fellow-servant of a man working in hold of vessel. Tydeman v. Prince Line, 102 App. Div. 279, 92 N. Y. S. 446. A servant who agreed to watch while another workman was working in a manhole, and who neglected to so do, whereby an injury resulted, was a fellow-servant. Wooton v. Flatbush Gas Co., 102 App. Div. 294, 92 N. Y. S. 380. Where master ordered foreman to shut down machinery while belts were being put on, disobedience of his orders was negligence of a fellow-servant of an injured employe and the master was not liable. Foster v. International Paper Co. [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 933. Where the master has done his whole duty in providing the means of lighting the place of work, he is not liable for failure of employes to avail themselves of the means provided. Id. A competent foreman and a sufficient number of men were sent out to string wires, arrangements having been made whereby any one of the gang could turn off the current of electricity. The foreman was selected by the men. Held, he was a fellow-servant of the others, and the master was not responsible for his failure to turn off the current or give warning. Anglin v. American Construction & Trading Co., 96 N. Y. S. 49. Conductor who changed the make-up of his train without authority was in so doing the fellow-servant of a brakeman of a preceding train killed in a collision. Driver's Adm'r v. Southern R. Co., 103 Va. 650, 49 S. E. 1000. Superintendent of electric plant was fellow-servant of a repairman while engaged in testing dynamo and changing armature. Williams v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 124 Wis. 328, 102 N. W. 589. Where the master had employed competent servants to give warnings of dangers arising in the course of the work, he was not liable for injuries caused by failure of such servants to give warning. Biggers v. Catawba Power Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 882. The duty to repair or readjust derricks used in unloading coal being a part of the duty of the persons employed to unload, negligence in making such repairs or readjustment was that of a fellow-servant. Grams v. Reiss Coal Co. [Wis.] 102 N. W. 586. Where manager of construction of building directed certain employes to build a scaffold, and told one of them how to do it, and furnished suitable material, negligence of such servant in selecting an unsafe cross piece was negligence of a fellow-servant of plaintiff who helped make the scaffold and was later injured by its collapse. Larsen v. Le Doux, [Idaho] 81 P. 600.

5. Foreman of gang of day laborers was fellow-servant of member of the gang while directing the manner in which scrap iron should be removed from a pile, and there could be no recovery from the master for an injury caused by the falling of the pile. Lach v. Burnham, 134 F. 688. Master of vessel, who ordered libelant to take two more turns of a hawser around the capstan, as a result of which the capstan broke, injuring libelant, was libelant's fellow-servant, both being engaged at the time in ordinary navigation of the vessel. The Westport [C. C. A.] 136 F. 391. Engineer in charge of men employed on steam shovel was, as to the manner in which he operated the machinery, a fellow-servant of an employe whose duties related to the track on which the apparatus worked; and for negligence of the engineer, the trackman could not recover. Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079. Foreman who told plaintiff to place his ladder in a dangerous place was performing a mere detail of the work. Date v. New York Glucose Co., 93 N. Y. S. 249. At common law, failure of a superintendent to replace guards on machinery is negligence of a fellow-serv-

But the authority conferred upon and exercised by employes is often applied as a test by which to determine whether they are vice-principals.[6] Thus, employes who are placed in the absolute control or management of an entire business, or of a distinct department of the business,[7] or who have authority to give orders to other employes,[8] or to employ them,[9] or who have charge of a particular piece of work with authority to direct and control the men engaged thereon,[10] are held to represent the master. It has been held that an employe who has such authority does not lose his representative character by engaging in work temporarily as a common laborer;[11] but it is usually held that the act[12] or negligence of such an employe renders the master liable only when it arises out of and is the direct result of the authority conferred on him by the master,[13] and that he does not represent the master, while engaged as a co-laborer,[14] in the performance of a mere detail of the work.[15] An em-

ant. McManus v. St. Regis Paper Co., 94 N. Y. S. 932. Foreman of gang of men employed to clear right of way for telegraph company was fellow-servant of men under him while prosecuting the work. Brabham v. American Telep. & Tel. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 716. The master is not liable for the act of a mere foreman in giving directions concerning the work to a servant working under him, where the place and appliances furnished by the master are proper. Owner of mill and elevator not liable where employe was injured while pushing a car on a sidetrack, his foreman having directed him to do so. Dill v. Marmon [Ind.] 73 N. E. 67.

6. "Straw boss" of section gang, who was in charge of hand car, held to have had such authority over men that he was a vice-principal, and master was liable for his violation of orders. Warren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 585. Captain of vessel and ordinary seaman are not fellow-servants. Woods v. Globe Nav. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 401. A bricklayer is a fellow-servant of a common laborer over whom he has no further control than to signal for brick or mortar. Boldt Glass Co. v. Harris, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 86.

7. Mallhoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733. A general manager having entire charge of the business of the master is a vice-principal. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124. General superintendent and manager of electric railway was a vice-principal for whose negligence an employe engaged in construction work could recover. Milbourne v. Arnold Elec. Power & Station Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 177, 103 N. W. 821. One who is given complete charge of a business or a branch of it is a vice-principal. New v. Milligan, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 516. Exclusive manager of store told unskilled workman to put caustic soda in a water closet, and workman left some on the lid, and another workman directed to the closet by the manager was burned. The master was held liable. Id.

8. Conductor of one train is not a vice-principal as to brakeman on another train, the former having no authority to give orders to the latter. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dillard [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 313. No question of fellow-servant involved where foreman instructed operator to take orders from a certain other employe, which he did. Jancko v. West Coast Mfg. & Inv. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 284.

9. Workman employed in unloading vessel and foreman who employed him were not fellow-servants. Ingham v. Honor Co., 113 La. 1040, 37 So. 963. A superintendent or foreman with authority to employ workmen and in charge of work is a vice-principal. Moseley v. Schofield Sons Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 309. One given authority to hire, discharge and direct servants is, while exercising such authority, a vice-principal. Baier v. Selke, 112 Ill. App. 568.

10. Foreman in general control of work of remodeling building was vice-principal. Barrett v. Reardon [Minn.] 104 N. W. 309. Foreman who had charge of taking down a telephone pole, and stood by and directed every movement of the men, was not a fellow-servant of men under his orders. Sandquist v. Independent Tel. Co., 38 Wash. 313, 80 P. 539. Brakeman, who in conductor's absence had switching list and directed operations, was a vice-principal, and an employe injured through his negligence could recover from the company. Struble v. Burlington, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 142. Engineer in charge of a drill engine, and also in control of the work of drilling a well and of the workmen engaged, was a vice-principal as to the men under him. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Roth [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1112.

11. Foreman remained vice-principal, though he took a pick from a workman and used it while the employe was doing something else. Barrett v. Reardon [Minn.] 104 N. W. 309.

12. The servant's acts must be not only within the scope of his employment but also committed in the accomplishment of objects within the line of his duties, or in and about the business or duties assigned him by his employer. Palos Coal & Coke Co. v. Benson [Ala.] 39 So. 727. Mining company not liable for assault on a car driver by superintendent of mines, there being no evidence to show that the superintendent was acting in the line of his duty. Id.

13. Illinois Southern R. Co. v. Marshall, 112 Ill. App. 514. Foreman authorized to construct a scaffold was a vice-principal, and, for his negligence in building it, master was liable. Neves v. Green [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 508.

14. Illinois Southern R. Co. v. Marshall, 112 Ill. App. 514; Neves v. Green [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 508.

15. Where two men were engaged in unploye may thus be the fellow-servant of another as respects certain duties, and a vice-principal as respects others.[16]

In some states it is held that employes are not fellow-servants unless engaged in the same department,[17] but this doctrine has been repudiated in other jurisdictions,[18] and, in Tennessee, is applied only in the case of railway employes.[19] In Kentucky it is held that the doctrine that employes in different departments are not fellow-servants rests upon the theory that such servants cannot exercise upon each other any influence promotive of caution;[20] hence, the doctrine is held inapplicable where a plant or business is small or of such a nature that servants may be closely associated, though engaged in technically different departments or kinds of work.[21] In Kansas it is held that such a close association is not essential to the fellow-servant relation,[22] and that the fact that employes are engaged in separate departments of the same general enterprise does not change their relation as fellow-servants, unless such departments are so far disconnected that each may be considered a separate undertaking.[23]

In Illinois the rule is that employes are fellow-servants if they are directly co-operating with each other in a particular business in the same line of employment,[24] or if their duties are such as to bring them into habitual association, so that they may exercise on one another an influence promotive of caution;[25] hence, one who loading timbers from a car, the act of one in releasing one end of a timber too soon was the act of a fellow-servant of the other, regardless of any difference in their authority. Stephens v. Deatherage Lumber Co., 110 Mo. App. 398, 86 S. W. 481.

16. Sawyer held fellow-servant of "dogger" in performance of work in which both joined. He was a vice-principal while giving "dogger" orders as to handling logs. O'Brien v. Page Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 114.

17. Employes in different departments are not fellow-servants. Levens v. Bancroft, 114 La. 105, 38 So. 72. Members of switching crew held not fellow-servants of crew of a water train. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523.

18. Classification of servants into different departments to determine their relation no longer obtains in Missouri. Dickey v. Dickey [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 909.

19. Mere superiority in dignity, grade, or compensation, is immaterial in applying the railroad department rule. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dillard [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 313. Conductor of passenger train and brakeman on freight train are not engaged in different departments but are fellow-servants. Id. Watchman at street crossing is not fellow-servant of crew of passing train, not engaged in switching. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 113 Tenn. 266, 87 S. W. 418. Foreman of water supply department of a railroad division, who has care of water tanks, is not the fellow-servant of an engineer in charge of a detached engine on which the foreman was riding in the course of the performance of his duties, and he did not assume the risk of the engineer's negligence. Stuber v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 305, 87 S. W. 411.

20. Dana & Co. v. Blackburn [Ky.] 90 S. W. 237.

21. Coal shoveler on tram car and engineer in charge of elevator, both engaged in work in connection with coal elevator, were fellow-servants, the plant being small and operatives few in number. Dana & Co. v. Blackburn [Ky.] 90 S. W. 237.

22. It is not essential to the fellow-servant relation between employes of the same master that they should have an opportunity to become acquainted with each other, or to observe each other's conduct, or to take precautions against each other's negligence, or to influence each other in the formation of habits of foresight and care. Atchison & E. Bridge Co. v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 18.

23. Atchison & E. Bridge Co. v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 18. Member of pile driving crew, and machinist employed to repair and run stationary engines, used in different places in the work of building falsework for reconstruction of bridge, both men being engaged in that general work and under same master, were fellow-servants. Id.

24. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Brooks, 115 Ill. App. 5. Men working together in quarry held fellow-servants. Dolese & Shepard Co. v. Johnson, 116 Ill. App. 206. Coal miners working a few feet apart were fellow-servants. Gardner-Wilmington Coal Co. v. Knott, 115 Ill. App. 515. Two employes engaged together in drilling holes in a boiler were fellow-servants. Aurora Boiler Works v. Colligan, 115 Ill. App. 527.

25. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Brooks, 115 Ill. App. 5; Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Patting, 112 Ill. App. 4. The terms of the fellow-servant rule imply and presuppose the existence of such circumstances that the servants can exercise an influence on each other promotive of proper caution. Wells v. O'Hare, 110 Ill. App. 7, citing many cases. Fireman and engineer on same train are fellow-servants. Sanks v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 385. Mine cage tender is not fellow-servant of miners whom he takes into and out of the mine in the cage. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni, 215 Ill. 583, 74 N. E. 751, afg. 115 Ill. App. 455. Miner did not assume risk of negligence of cage operator. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co.

is ordered to do work outside his usual employment, and is brought into contact with different employes, is not the fellow-servant of such employes, though temporarily engaged with them.[26]

Railway employes, going to or from their place of work, are fellow-servants of operatives of the train.[27] There is a conflict as to the relation between operatives of different trains.[28] A train dispatcher is a vice-principal as regards train operatives.[29] A local operator who sends information to the dispatcher is a fellow-servant of such operatives.[30]

Fellow-servant statutes.[31]—The operation of the common-law rule that there can be no recovery for negligence of a fellow-servant has been limited by statute in many states, the limitation being frequently confined to employes of railroad corporations.[32] Other statutes supply tests by which it may be determined whether an employe charged with negligence is the fellow-servant or vice-principal of the injured employe. Decisions under such statutes are grouped in the note.[33] To bring a case within the operation of a fellow-servant law, the negligent act of the fellow-

v. Cioni, 115 Ill. App. 455. Engineer in charge of engine which ran cages in mine, and a miner going to work in a cage, are not fellow-servants. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Buzis, 115 Ill. App. 196. Coal miner and mine engineer not fellow-servants where they did not know each other and they were not engaged in the same work, and their duties did not require their co-operation. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Patting, 112 Ill. App. 4. Men on train ahead of the one on which plaintiff was working held not his fellow-servants where it did not appear that their usual duties habitually brought them into consociation. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 112 Ill. App. 225. Section hand not fellow-servant of hostler when they work in different departments, under different foremen. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Otstat, 113 Ill. App. 37. Man loading and hauling ore from a pile was not fellow-servant of foreman in charge of work. Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 116 Ill. App. 303. Servant working under the direct orders of a superior on floor of a building was not a fellow-servant of one engaged at other work on an upper floor. Wells v. O'Hare, 110 Ill. App. 7.

26. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Surrells, 115 Ill. App. 615.

27. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 267.

28. Fireman on one of two colliding trains is fellow-servant of employes on each of the two trains. Rosney v. Erie R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 311. Fireman on railroad passenger engine and conductor of passenger train, coming from the opposite direction, are fellow-servants. Crosby v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 765. Conductor of a train is not vice-principal as to brakeman on another train, having no authority to give him orders. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dillard [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 313. Switching crew held not fellow-servants of crew of a water train. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523.

29. Train dispatcher is vice-principal, not fellow-servant of engineer of train running under his orders. Santa Fe Pac. R. Co. v. Holmes [C. C. A.] 136 F. 66.

30. Local telegraph operator, whose duty it is to send information regarding trains passing his station to the train dispatcher, is a fellow-servant of train operatives in giving such information; hence, a fireman could not recover for injuries received in a collision caused by an erroneous order based on false information given by local operator. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 737.

31. See 4 C. L. 566.

32. As to constitutionality of such laws, see 4 C. L. 567.

33. Arkansas: Under Kirby's Dig. §§ 6658, 6659, an instruction that plaintiff, an engine hostler's helper, and the hostler were fellow-servants, unless they had "control over each other in the way of discharging or employing each other," was erroneous. Fordyce v. Key [Ark.] 84 S. W. 797. Plaintiff, injured while coaling engine, might have been found to be a fellow-servant of the hostler, under the statute. Id.

California: Civ. Code § 1970, makes a master liable for negligence of a co-employe only when in performance of a duty owed by the master to the servant, or when the master has been negligent in selecting the employe who has been guilty of negligence. Under this statute, employes may be fellow-servants, though not of the same grade nor employed in the same department. Leishman v. Union Iron Works [Cal.] 83 P. 30.

Colorado: Acts 1893, p. 129, c. 77, gives railway employes a right of action for injuries caused by negligence of a servant in charge of a train on the railroad. Verdict for plaintiff set aside on appeal where negligence of conductor was submitted to jury, but evidence showed that conductor had turned the train over to a brakeman. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Vitello [Colo.] 81 P. 766.

Georgia: Under Civ. Code 1895, § 2323, if plaintiff's injury was caused by negligence of another employe, the fact that they were fellow-servants would not bar a recovery. Hence, whether one who caused injury in this case was vice-principal, was not a material issue. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Lasseter [Ga.] 51 S. E. 15.

Indiana: Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7083, subd. 2, makes corporations liable for injuries to employes resulting from negligence of persons whose orders the injured employe was bound to obey. An employe who is servant must pertain to the duties which he was employed to perform,[34] and the ac-obeying an order at the time of his injury comes within the terms of the act. Clear Creek Stone Co. v. Carmichael [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 935. When his presence at a certain place is incidental to his performance of an order, he is deemed to be in such place pursuant to the order given him. Id. The care required of one to whose orders a servant is bound to conform is that of an ordinarily prudent person. Thus the fact that such a one did not actually know of a servant's presence in a place where he had gone to perform an order, did not excuse him or relieve the master, the place proving to be dangerous. Id. Superintendent who orders servant into a place of danger is charged with knowledge of the danger. Clear Creek Stone Co. v. Carmichael [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 320, afg. [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 935, supra. An order to assist another in removing certain timbers, neither man being assigned to particular work, is not a special order for an injury in performing which there may be a recovery under the statute. McElwaine-Richards Co. v. Wall [Ind.] 76 N. E. 408. Corporation not liable where superintendent was striking block on piston rod held by servant and accidentally struck the servant. Rainbow Coal & Min. Co. v. Martin [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 902.

Iowa: Code, § 2071, provides that corporations operating railways shall be liable for injuries caused by negligence of employes connected with use or operation of the railway. A car repairer, who kept his tools in the yard and repaired cars there was entitled to the protection of the statute when struck by switch engine in yard. Hughes v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 339. Failure of engineer to give warning after he saw car repairer in place of danger would be negligence. Id. A railway construction company, running trains over a temporary track in connection with its work of construction, is "operating a railway" within the meaning of the statute. Mace v. Boedker & Co., 127 Iowa, 721, 104 N. W. 475. Whether a servant's employment is such as to bring him within the terms of an employer's liability act is generally a question of fact for the jury (Hughes v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 339), but where the facts are undisputed, and the inferences which may be drawn therefrom are such that reasonable minds cannot differ with respect thereto, the question is one for the court. Id.

Kansas: The Kansas statute makes railroad companies responsible, for any mismanagement of engineers or other employes, to any person sustaining damage thereby. It is sufficiently similar to the statute of Texas so that it will be enforced in the latter state. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401.

Massachusetts: St. 1887, c. 270, § 1, cl. 2, gives a right of action to a servant injured by the negligence of one who is a superintendent. One who saw servants engaged in moving a heavy tool on a truck, and took charge of the work, adopting the servants' method, continued to be acting as a superintendent. Meagher v. Crawford Laundry Mach. Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 853. He did not cease to be a superintendent by assisting the men in moving the truck and for his negligence in so doing, as a result of which plaintiff was injured, the master was liable. Id. Where a truss was being raised by an engine, the act of a foreman in ordering the engine to start at a particular time was an act of superintendence, though he was also doing manual work at the time. McPhee v. New England Structural Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 303. He was negligent in ordering the engine started when the truss was caught, thereby increasing the strain on the rope and causing it to break. Id. Where superintendent ordered brakeman to couple air hose, and told him he would look out for him, and there was evidence of a general custom to give such orders, knowledge of such custom was held imputable to the company, and it was liable for the superintendent's negligence in failing to make good his assurance. Edgar v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 911. Whether chief duties of a factory foreman were those of "superintendence," held a question for the jury. Peterson v. Morgan Spring Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 220.

Minnesota: Gen. St. 1894, § 2701, applies to a mining corporation which uses a short line of railroad to handle its ore, since the law applies "to all persons and corporations operating a line of railroad incident to which are the hazards and risks intended to be guarded against." Kibbe v. Stevenson Iron Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 147. The Minnesota fellow-servant law, construed as applicable to all persons and corporations operating railroads incident to which are the hazards and risks intended to be guarded against, is constitutional. Id. The statute exempts only incomplete roads on which public traffic has not commenced; a narrow gauge road used for dump cars in the work of stripping a mine is within the operation of the statute. Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 26 S. Ct. 159. The statute as so construed is constitutional. Id. Minnesota statute held not applicable where member of steam shovel crew was struck by the gravel bucket owing to the engineer's negligence, the shovel being operated on a temporary movable track not connected with a regular railroad. The men were not engaged in "operating a railway." Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079. Where plaintiff was knocked off cars by a jar, while switching, held evidence did not show engineer negligent. Phillips v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 378. Evidence insufficient to prove that engineer was negligent in suddenly increasing speed of engine when switchman attempted to board it. Martyn v. Minnesota & I. R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 133.

Missouri: The fellow-servant act does not apply to street railways. Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 915. Section hand injured while riding on a hand car is entitled to the protection of the fellow-servant act. Overton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 503. Where undisputed fact was that employes were working on the track it was the duty of the court to instruct that negligence of a tion must in other respects be brought strictly within the terms of the statute.[35] If fellow-servant would render the master liable. Stanley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 112. Where the facts are in dispute, whether servants were engaged in operating a road is a question of law and fact for the jury. Id. Master liable for negligence of section boss who violated orders, whereby section hand was injured. Warren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 585.

Mississippi: Complaint alleging that plaintiff, a brakeman, was injured between a car and the engine of a train in charge of a conductor and engineer, who were plaintiff's superior officers, by reason of engineer's negligence, held to state a cause of action under Const. Miss. 1890, § 193, and Code 1892, § 3559, giving railway employes right of action for negligence of superior agent or officer, or one having power to direct or control. Moore v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 67.

New York: Under the New York act of 1902, the master is liable for negligence of a foreman, whose principal duty is that of superintendence, to the same extent as for his personal negligence. Hayward v. Key [C. C. A.] 138 F. 34. Foreman in general charge of blasting, whose duty it was to direct the men and set off the blasts, was acting as superintendent while setting off the blast, and for his negligence in so doing an employe could recover. McBride v. New York Tunnel Co., 101 App. Div. 448, 92 N. Y. S. 282. Directing plaintiff to use a cutting machine on a table not intended for its use, whereby plaintiff was injured, was an act of superintendence. Braunberg v. Solomon, 102 App. Div. 330, 92 N. Y. S. 506. Foreman, directing boiler repairs in superintendent's absence, was superintendent as to men under his direction. Faith v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 222, 95 N. Y. S. 774. Foreman, who told quarryman that it was safe to break a rock which the workman said he was afraid of, in breaking which the workman was injured by an explosion, could not be held a fellow-servant as a matter of law. Di Stefeno v. Peekskill Lighting & R. Co., 107 App. Div. 293, 95 N. Y. S. 179. One who had charge of men unloading cars, and who assisted them and checked cars, held not a superintendent as to men engaged with him. Miller v. Solvay Process Co., 109 App. Div. 135, 95 N. Y. S. 1020. Servant whose duty it was to signal a crane operator, and give instructions for execution of supervisor's orders, was not a superintendent. Quinlan v. Lackawanna Steel Co., 94 N. Y. S. 942. Negligently turning on a current of electricity held not an act of superintendence. Id. Where passenger conductor violated his train orders, as a result of which a head-on collision occurred in which the fireman of the other train was killed, the conductor was not then "acting as superintendent" within the meaning of Laws N. Y. 1902, p. 1749, c. 600, and the company was not liable. Crosby v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 765. No action can be maintained under Laws 1902, p. 1749, c. 600, § 2, unless the required notice of the time, place, and cause of the injury has been given the employer as required by the act. Grasso v. Holbrook, Cabot & Daly Contracting Co., 102 App. Div. 49, 92 N. Y. S. 101.

North Carolina: Priv. Laws 1897, p. 83, c. 56, § 1, gives an employe of a railroad company "operating" in the state, a cause of action for injuries sustained through a fellow-servant's negligence. The act does not apply where an employe is injured while engaged in railroad construction several miles from the completed track, and even farther from the track where trains are run. Nicholson v. Transylvania R. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 40. Recovery by railroad employe injured by negligence of two fellow-servants. Mabry v. North Carolina R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 124.

Oregon: Laws 1903, p. 20, makes railroads liable for injuries to employes caused by wrongful acts of agents or officers superior to the injured employe. Under the statute a company is liable to a common laborer, in a construction crew, for injuries caused by negligence of the foreman of the crew. Sorenson v. Oregon Power Co. [Or.] 82 P. 10.

Texas: Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4560f, makes corporations operating railroads liable for injuries to servants caused by negligence of fellow-servants. A railroad used by a lumber corporation solely to transport its own lumber is within the statute. Lodwick Lumber Co. v. Taylor [Tex. Civ. App.] 7 S. W. 358. The operation of a hand car is the operation of a railroad within the meaning of Rev. St. 1895, art. 4560f, and a foreman on a hand car, injured by negligence of the men running it, may recover. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Perry [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 62. Fireman who had fixed headlight and was returning to engine cab when struck by a timber projecting from a passing car was engaged in "operating" a railroad. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bussong [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 73. The Texas statute, applied so as to permit a recovery for death of an engineer in a collision between two trains, both engaged in interstate commerce, does not violate the Federal constitution by imposing a burden on interstate commerce. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Nelson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 81, 87 S. W. 706. By Laws 1891, p. 25, c. 24 (Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4560g), which applies only to railway employes, such employes are fellow-servants only when engaged in the common service of the master and in the same grade, neither being in superintendence over the other; engaged in the same department, at the same time and place, working to a common purpose; and (by amendment of 1897) engaged at the same character of work and at the same piece of work. Where employes were divided into squads for the work of removing bales of cotton from one portion of a platform to another, the members of one squad were not, while rolling a bale of cotton, the fellow-servants of the members of another squad, since they were not engaged on the "same piece of work." International & G. N. R. Co. v. Still [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 88 S. W. 257. The the fellow-servant laws of two states are substantially similar, the courts of one state will enforce the statute of the other.[36]

(§ 3) F. Risks assumed by servant. Nature of defense.[37]—Assumption of risk is a matter of contract; contributory negligence is a question of conduct.[38] The assumption of a particular risk will not defeat a recovery for other negligence of the master which was not assumed.[39] But negligence of the servant in the doing of a particular act, which contributes to the cause of injury, bars recovery notwithstanding other negligence of the master.[40] The two defenses are closely related and at times blend; but a careful observance of the distinctions between them would avoid much of the confusion which has resulted, in some jurisdictions, from a careless use of terms.[41]

While it is commonly said that incidental risks are assumed by the contract of statute thus construed is constitutional. Id. Railroad employes to whom the control of other employes is entrusted are vice-principals. A foreman who had charge of the "rustling" gang in railroad yards did not cease to be a vice-principal, within the meaning of the statute, by assisting the men in moving a tool box. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Dean [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 989, 89 S. W. 797. Failure of foreman who saw approaching train to warn employes, who were trying to get a push car off the track, was negligence for which an employe injured in a resulting collision could recover. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Tisdale [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 1063. Whether employes were negligent in rolling bale of cotton on plaintiff's foot, held for jury. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Still [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 88 S. W. 257. Evidence sufficient to show that foreman on hand car with plaintiff was negligent in keeping a lookout, whereby car struck an obstruction and plaintiff was injured. Cane Belt R. Co. v. Crosson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 87 S. W. 867. Evidence sufficient to show switching crew negligent in failing to warn engine wiper, who was caught between pilot and drawhead of car. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 34, 87 S. W. 371. Where one of several servants engaged in moving a boiler across tracks was injured by reason of a timber being left on a track and struck by an engine, whether the negligent employes were fellow-servants was for jury. Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466. Instruction held to correctly charge that where foreman on a hand car saw a plank on the track ahead and ordered the men to stop the car, they were under duty of using all the means at hand to stop it consistent with their own safety. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Perry [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 62. Whether the men were negligent in failing to stop the car in time was, under the evidence, for the jury. Id.

34. Where plaintiff's injury resulted from a section hand stooping to put his hat on the platform of the car, such act did not pertain to his duties and plaintiff could not recover. Overton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 503.

35. This principle is fully illustrated in the cases collected above.

36. Railroad fellow-servant law of Kansas will be enforced in Texas. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401.

37. See 4 C. L. 568.

38. Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103; Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. O'Nesky [Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 300.

39. St Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rea [Tex.] 87 S. W. 324. Brakeman did not assume risk of a particular defect in a track unless he had actual or implied knowledge of it, regardless of his knowledge of defects at other points. Mumford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 1135. By negligently or voluntarily exposing himself to known dangers, a servant does not assume others which are not known and which the exercise of reasonable care would not have disclosed. Holmes v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 103 N. W. 77.

40. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rea [Tex.] 87 S. W. 324.

41. NOTE. Assumed risk and contributory negligence: As pointed out by Judge Goode in Adolff v. Columbia Pretzel & Baking Company, 100 Mo. App. 206, 73 S. W. 323: "The defense of assumption of risk * * * must be founded on contract and treated by the principles of contract law, or, if there was no contract relationship between the parties which included the fatal hazard," then it rests on the maxim, volenti non fit injuria, which expresses assent as well by other methods as by contract. And again: "The two defenses of assumption of risk and contributory negligence are unlike, because of the different states of mind in which they are rooted. It is palpable that an act done willfully and upon full information is not done negligently, and this distinction is recognized throughout the law of torts. Negligence is the result of inattention or oversight, whereas consent to a risk implies knowledge of the danger of the act to be performed, and the performance of the act understandingly and without constraint."

Judge Thompson in his work on Negligence, vol. 4, 4611, points out the distinction as follows: "Many of the earlier and some of the later decisions confuse the two subjects of an acceptance by the servant of the risks of employment and his contributory negligence. The two subjects lie close to each other, and in some cases blend; but in other cases they are distinct subjects. Nevertheless the judges frequently employment,[42] and that a servant who remains in an employment after he has knowledge of a defect impliedly contracts to assume the risk arising therefrom,[43] perhaps a more exact statement of the law would be that by the contract of employment, a relation or status is created, by virtue of which the law imposes on the master the duty of ordinary care for the servant's safety, and upon the servant the duty of avoiding dangers incident to or inherent in the employment.[44]

It is usually held that the defense of assumption of risk is not available where the negligence complained of is a breach of a positive statute,[45] though there is authority to the contrary.[46] The Federal automatic coupler act expressly excludes the defense where a breach of its provisions is relied on.[47] use the words 'contributory negligence' where they really mean an acceptance of the risk. In other instances they use the words 'an acceptance of the risk' where they really mean contributory negligence."

The law of assumption of the risk rests upon agreement or assent, which can arise in no other manner than through the free and voluntary action of the mind. No part of it rests upon such negative state of mind as inattention, oversight, want of care, lack of prudence, or neglect. No part of it rests upon nor is imbedded in the negligence of the servant, and no part of the law covering the question rests upon the law of contributory negligence. "The question of assumption of risk is quite apart from that of contributory negligence." Choctaw & Okl. Ry. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. loc. cit. 68, 48 Law. Ed. 96. "Assumption of the risk rests in contract; contributory negligence rests in tort." St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller [C. C. A.] 126 F. 495, 63 L. R. A. 551; Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 34 Law. Ed. 235; Adolff v. Columbia Pretzel Co., 100 Mo. App. 206, 73 S. W. 321.—See Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12, from which above is taken.

42. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12.

43. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857. Doctrine of assumed risk does not depend on care or want of care of servant but grows out of contract of employment or continuance in service without objection after knowledge of danger. Consolidated Barb Wire Co. v. Maxwell, 116 Ill. App. 296.

44. Note: It has been said that the servant's assumption of risk is a hazard imposed by the law upon him and he has a legal noncontractual duty to guard against all ordinary risks of his employment. It is not properly based on an implied promise to assume them, as many courts have said. See "Implied Contracts in Assumption of Risk" a note in 5 Columbia L. R. 158.

The recent case of Hempstock v. Lackawanna Iron & Steel Co., 98 App. Div. 332, 90 N. Y. S. 663, follows the leading case of Farwell v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 4 Metc. [Mass.] 49, 38 Am. Dec. 339, which first laid down the "implied promise" doctrine. The writer of the note, supra, adverts to the instances of risk assumed by persons disabled to contract and cites Dresser, Employers' Liability, §§ 10, 11, 82; Ruchinsky v. French, 168 Mass. 68; Gaffney v. Hayden, 110 Mass. 137, 14 Am. Rep. 580; Taylor v. Wootan, 1 Ind. App. 188, 50 Am. St. Rep. 200. He also cites Osborne v. K. & L. R. Co., 68 Me. 49, 28 Am. Rep. 16, and Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. O'Brien [C. C. A.] 132 F. 593, wherein risk was assumed by a volunteer and an express messenger, neither of whom bore any contractual relation to the tort feasor.

45. The defense of assumed risk is not available to a master who has violated Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, requiring dangerous machinery to be guarded, even though the injured servant knew that the law was being violated. Hall v. West & S. Mill Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 915; Daffron v. Majestic Laundry Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1089; Hoveland v. Hall Bros. Marine R. & Shipbuilding Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1090. The requirement of Laws 1903, p. 40, c. 37, § 1, that belt shifters must be provided, cannot be waived by an employe, and the risk arising from a violation of the act cannot be assumed. Whelan v. Washington Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 98. Mine operator not having marked a room as dangerous, as required by Laws 1899, p. 317, § 18, a miner could recover for an injury therein though he knew there was an overhanging rock which was lose and dangerous. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375. Under St. 1887, c. 270, § 1, cl. 2, making a master liable for the negligent act of a "superintendent," a servant does not assume the risk of negligence of a superintendent. Meagher v. Crawford Laundry Mach. Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 853. No issue of assumed risk in the case where Rev. St. 1899, § 6433 had been violated by a failure to guard pulleys and belts. Stafford v. Adams [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1130. Child under 14 employed contrary to Labor Law, § 70 does not assume risk of employment Lee v. Sterling Silk Mfg. Co., 93 N. Y. S. 560. Priv. Laws 1897, p. 83, c. 56, § 2 provides that any contract, express or implied, by which an employe waives the benefit of § 1, making railroads liable for negligence of fellow-servants, shall be void. Hence the defense of assumed risk, which is a matter of contract, is not available in an action under the statute. Biles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 129. Servant does not assume risk of failure of master to guard rip saw, thereby violating Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, even though he knew the saw was unguarded. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Assumed risk no defense where mining statute was violated, though servant knew of the violation. Indiana & C. Coal Co. v. Neal [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 295.

Note: "There is much authority for the position taken in this case. Narramore v. Railway Co. [C. C. A.] 96 F. 298, 48 L. R. A.

Dangers incidental to business.[48]—The servant assumes the risks ordinarily incident to the employment in which he engages,[49] and this is so though the employment is necessarily dangerous.[50] Ordinary risks are such as arise from the per-

68. However, the cases are far from being unanimous in this view. Knisley v. Pratt. 148 N. Y. 372, 42 N. E. 986, 32 L. R. A. 367. For a fuller discussion, see 4 Michigan Law Review, 165."—4 Mich. L. R. 241.

46. See 4 C. L. 569, n. 25; also note to Indiana & C. Coal Co. v. Neal, supra. A penal statute making a failure to guard machinery, or the use of unguarded machinery, a criminal offense, does not change the common-law doctrine of assumption of known risks, so as to change the rights of the parties to a civil action for damages for injuries caused by unguarded machines. Laws Wash. 1903, p. 40, c. 37 did not preclude defense of assumed risk, when employe operated a saw known to him to be unguarded, being paid extra for Sunday work. Nottage v. Sawmill Phoenix, 133 F. 979.

47. Act of March 2, 1893, c. 196, 27 U. S. St. 531. Turrittin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 225.

48. See 4 C. L. 570.

49. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12; Smith v. Hammond Packing Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 625; Goransson v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 186 Mo. 300, 85 S. W. 328; Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103; St. Louis National Stock Yards v. Morris, 116 Ill. App. 107; Bedford Quarries Co. v. Turner [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 25; Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708; Charping v. Taxaway Mills, 70 S. C. 470, 50 S. E. 186; Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Demsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 89 S. W. 786; Fulton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1012; McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829.

Illustrations: Employe repairing boiler on a railroad track in the master's switching yards assumed the risk of injury from trains. Breeze v. MacKinnon Mfg. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 195, 103 N. W. 908. Risk of fire from inflammable material used in work is assumed. O'Donnell v. Armour Curled Hair Works, 111 Ill. App. 516. Employe assumed risk of using frames which he found in cordage plant. Wolf v. New Bedford Cordage Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 222. Where section crew, to facilitate loading of ties on a car, made a temporary platform of ties and planks at the end of the car, a member of the crew engaged in the work assumed the risk of a plank slipping or of his slipping and being injured by a tie he was loading. Dunn v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 28 Utah, 478, 80 P. 311. Plaintiff, at work on brick building in course of construction, assumed risk of brick, dropped by masons, falling on him. Roth v. Eccles, 28 Utah, 456, 79 P. 918. Man experienced in work of unloading and piling iron beams assumed risk of beams slipping from pile. Weizinger v. Erie R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 869. Wheelbarrow man employed to haul acid from piles assumed incidental risk of a pile, in which an excavation had been made, falling on him. Martin v. Royster Guano Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 680. Dining car conductor charged with duty of taking his car to a junction to turn it around, assumed the incidental risk of pushing the car instead of hauling it, with the switch engine, even if he used this method under direction of the yard master. Southern R. Co. v. Logan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 725. Brakeman assumed risk of falling into an open culvert of the kind generally used by his company and others in that part of the country. Southern Pac. Co. v. Gloyd [C. C. A.] 138 F. 388. Locomotive engineer assumed, as one of the risks of his employment, the danger of a landslide in the mountains through which his train went in rainy weather. Kinzel v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 489. General laborer, of ordinary intelligence, employed to slack lime to be used in whitewashing new building, assumed risk of lime being thrown out of vessel into his face, too little water being used. Roessler v. Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. Peterson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 789. Freight brakeman assumes risks incident to performance of his duties, of which he was informed or would learn in the exercise of ordinary care. Miller v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 360. Danger of timber slipping from roller when being unloaded from car held incidental to such work. Walsh v. Smith, 26 R. I. 554, 59 A. 922. Brakeman assumes risks incidental to chasing and coupling cars. Kennedy v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 370. Risk of injury from unevenness of track then being laid was assumed. Meehan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 102. Where locomotive fireman lost his balance while ringing the bell at a curve, and, the bell cord breaking, fell, his injury was the result of an assumed risk. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mercer [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1054.

50. Servant assumes incidental risks when he has been informed that work is dangerous. Biggers v. Catawba Power Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 882. Perils attending work of cleaning up a dangerous room in a mine assumed. Jennings v. Ingle [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 945. Risk of being struck by stone thrown by blast assumed by quarryman. Zeigenmeyer v. Charles Goetz Lime & Cement Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 139. Mucker in mine whose duties require him to clear the way for the men who do the timbering assumes the risks incident to his dangerous work, and must use due diligence to avoid falling rocks or ore while at work. Smith v. Hecla Min. Co., 38 Wash. 454, 80 P. 779. Railroad employe assumed risk of working in cut in mountains, clearing away debris at night resulting from a landslide, and there could be no recovery for his death caused by being struck by a falling stone. Florence & C. C. R. Co. v. Whipps [C. C. A.] 138 F. 13. If one accepts employment upon, about, or with machinery or appliances which he knows are not safe by reason of defects, or if such defects are so obvious that he must be taken as a matter of law to know their unsafe condition, he assumes the risk of manent, open, visible conditions of the master's business.[51] The occasional negligence of fellow-servants is an assumed risk within the meaning of this rule.[52] Unusual or extraordinary risks,[53] which the exercise of ordinary care on the part of the master would have obviated,[54] or which are encountered outside the service which the employe was hired to perform,[55] and which a performance of his ordinary duties in a reasonably careful manner would not disclose,[56] are not assumed. Risks arising from latent defects, not discoverable by the use of ordinary care on the part of the master, and unknown to him, are assumed, though no knowledge of the defect or appreciation of the danger by the servant is shown, such risks being classed as incidental to the employment.[57]

Known or obvious dangers.[58]—Risks which are actually known to the servant,[59]

using such defective appliances as one of the risks of his service. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519.

51. San Antonio Foundry Co. v. Drish [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 440. The servant by his contract of employment assumes the natural and ordinary risks that are incident to or arise out of the work which, under his contract, he is called upon to perform. Leach v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 90.

52. See ante, § 3 E.

53. Only the ordinary and usual risks of a dangerous employment are assumed. Staubley v. Power Co., 21 App. D. C. 160. Collision of two trains on a straight track and on a clear day is not an ordinary, incidental risk assumed by a locomotive fireman. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 112 Ill. App. 225. Servant did not assume risk of all accidents that might happen by breaking of "skidder" used in loading cars. Williams v. Levert Lumber & Shingle Co., 114 La. 805, 38 So. 567. Car repairer did not assume risk of the car on which he was at work on the main track being struck by a runaway car from a side track. Smith v. Fordyce [Mo.] 88 S. W. 679. Employe riding home from work on top of house car, with road-master's consent, did not assume risk of injury by collision with cars on a spur track. Milbourne v. Arnold Elec. Power & Station [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 177, 103 N. W. 821. Plaintiff did not as a matter of law assume risk of some one starting engine while he was under it cleaning out ash pan. Lane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 988. Plaintiff working on a ledge with a bank of earth above him assumed the ordinary risk, but not the risk of a large slab of earth loosened by frost, a fact unknown to him, falling upon him owing to the operations of the men at work above him. Gibson v. Freygang [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 3. Engine wiper did not assume risk of injury because of negligence of a switching crew. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 34, 87 S. W. 371. Risk of 2,000 pound machine, fastened to floor with 5-inch screws, being torn up and thrown four feet against workman at another machine, not assumed. Kalker v. Hedden [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 395.

54. The ordinary risks and hazards of the employment are such risks as are usual and ordinary therein after the employer has taken reasonable care to discover and prevent such risks. Wells v. O'Hare, 110 Ill. App. 7.

55. Young employe did not assume risk of running machine he was not employed to operate, and as to which he was not instructed. Flickner v. Lambert [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 263. Where a roustabout in a flour mill and elevator was directed to assist in pushing a car on a siding, there was not such a change in his duties or service as to relieve him from the assumption of ordinary risks. Dill v. Marmon [Ind.] 73 N. E. 67.

56. Servant does not assume unusual or extraordinary risks unless he knows or has reasonable means of knowing the precise danger to which he is exposed. Hocking v. Windsor Spring Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 705. Servant who did not assist in securing derrick, and whose ordinary duties did not cause him to inspect the anchoring of the guy ropes, did not assume the risk of a defectively anchored rope, the defect not being obvious. Lounsbury v. David, 124 Wis. 432, 102 N. W. 941. Electric light trimmer whose duty did not require him to inspect poles did not assume risk of a pole falling with him. Dawson v. Lawrence Gaslight Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 912. Where fireman had not watered his engine at a water tank since the time when the evidence showed a chain supporting the spout was broken, and he testified that he did not know of the defect, he did not assume the risk as a matter of law. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Dickson [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 507. Servant assumes only obvious incidental dangers. Moylon v. McDonald Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 929. Such risks as the servant's opportunities for inspection would disclose are assumed. Bedford Quarries Co. v. Turner [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 25. Unusual dangers not assumed unless known or so obvious that they ought to have been known. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. McAdams [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1076.

57. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. Fireman assumed risk of being struck by piece of slate while breaking coal for his engine, since the exercise of ordinary care by the master would not have obviated that risk. Vissman v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 502. Where stone which broke, injuring plaintiff, had been inspected by the proper servant, not shown to be incompetent, the defect not being visible, the master was not liable. Bedford Quarries Co. v. Turner [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 25. Workman employed in unloading ship assumed risk of defect in wire cable used, when the cable had been carefully inspected before the work began and the defect not then observed, and when or which are so obvious[60] that a person of the same age, capacity and experience, ex-the workman had observed the defect during the progress of the work and had failed to report it. The Tresco, 128 F. 780.

58. See 4 C. L. 571.

59. St. Louis National Stock Yards v. Morris, 116 Ill. App. 107. Servant assumed risk of using planer in its known condition. Erickson v. Cummer Mfg. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 194, 103 N. W. 828. Employe held to have known conditions and to have assumed risk of using defective ladder to go to cellar. Davitt v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 790. Risks pointed out by the master are assumed. Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708. Where a carpenter was given a warning as to a scaffold, which he could have heard, his use of the scaffold thereafter was at his own risk. Lobstein v. Sajatovich, 111 Ill. App. 654. Employe who knew rope slings were used to load lumber on vessel assumed risk of use of rope rather than chain or wire. Henne v. Steeb Shipping Co., 37 Wash. 331, 79 P. 938. Employe attempting to move car into car barn, went between the car and the wall when the car started and killed him. Held, he assumed the risk. Laffan v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 108 App. Div. 288, 95 N. Y. S. 705. Plaintiff, who had full knowledge of danger of third rail on elevated, having worked on electric repair gang, assumed risk of shoveling snow on elevated with iron shovel. Smith v. Manhattan R. Co., 48 Misc. 393, 95 N. Y. S. 529. Machine operator who knew block had been substituted for box used to stand on when attaching connection assumed risk of the block's tipping and throwing him into gearing. Minnie v. Mueller [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 75, 103 N. W. 524. Employe, inside a brick oven repairing it, assumed risk of having ashes blown in his eyes, when he knew the air was to be turned on through blower. Page v. Battle Creek Pure Food Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 615, 105 N. W. 72. Evidence held to show that mill employe knew how skids were made and logs handled and assumed risk of working with them in mill. Carnes v. Guelph Patent Cask Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 331, 104 N. W. 322. Miner who had known dangerous condition of roof of entry in mine for some weeks assumed the risk. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. O'Nesky [Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 300. Servant who knew lumber was piled in dangerous manner in yard where he worked assumed the risk. Brooks v. Joyce Co., 127 Iowa, 266, 103 N. W. 91. Locomotive engineer assumed risk of running engine which he knew did not have lubricator shields. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519. Expert machinist who had repaired and started mill machinery assumed the risk of testing rollers in a way which he knew was dangerous. Carey v. Samuels & Co. [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1052. Servant assumed risk of doing work with the appliances furnished and without a helper, since he knew what would be furnished when he began work. Blundell v. Miller Elevator Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103. If street railway employe knew of defective condition of bridge over which tracks were laid, he assumed the risk of injury from such defect. City of Indianapolis v. Cauley [Ind.] 73 N. E. 691. Servant employed to run cars on elevated platform on coal dock who knew the system of lighting the dock at night, and knew that there was no railing on the platform, assumed the risks. Faber v. Reiss Coal Co., 124 Wis. 554, 102 N. W. 1049.

60. Risks held obvious and assumed. Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818. Obvious defects or perils, such as are open to ordinary, careful observation are regarded as perils incident to the service and are assumed. Jennings v. Ingle [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 945. Danger of employe putting his hands under moving cogs to clean the floor. Wofford v. Clifton Cotton Mills [S. C.] 51 S. E. 918. Danger of using ladder too short for work to be done with it. Duncan v. Gernert Bros. Lumber Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1039, 87 S. W. 762. Risk of getting caught between load of lumber and post. Krickeberg v. St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Co., 37 Wash. 63, 79 P. 492. Danger of getting hand caught between rollers and steam chest of mangle. Ward v. Daniels, 114 Ill. App. 374. Danger from working on uneven floor. McLaughlin v. Atlantic Mills [R. I.] 61 A. 42. Boy of 17 assumed risk of using a stick 6 inches long to clean a trough under a circular saw, and putting his hand under the saw. Martin v. Detroit Lumber Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 486, 104 N. W. 692. Danger of working near unguarded cog wheels which were in plain view, and the danger from which was obvious, assumed by employe 17 years old. Mundhenke v. Oregon City Mfg. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 977. Boy of 17 who had worked 4 weeks assumed risk of slipping on slippery floor when managing levers on his machine. Bender v. New York Glucose Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 388. Servant assumed risk of tree he was cutting down falling on him, and of being struck by branches of other trees broken off by its fall. Anderson v. Columbia Imp. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 1037. Presence of oil on floor being obvious, machinist assumed risk of slipping on it. Yess v. Chicago Brass Co., 124 Wis. 406, 102 N. W. 932. The danger of operating a machine being obvious plaintiff could not recover for an injury, when it did not appear that any practicable means of lessening the danger had been omitted. Zevin v. Goldman, 94 N. Y. S. 35. Mill employe directed to clean and oil machinery assumed the risk of getting caught in open gearing which was plainly visible. Hathaway v. Washington Milling Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 47, 103 N. W. 164. Fireman assumed risk of use of water brakes instead of driver brakes since the fact that the former were used was readily observable by him. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Scott [Colo.] 81 P. 763. Employe in shoe factory assumed risk of falling over cover for shafting on the floor. Chisholm v. Donovan [Mass.] 74 N. E. 652. Employe assumed risk of cleaning away saw dust while saw was in motion, since he must be held to have known and appreciated danger of so doing. Beltz v. American Mill. Co., 37 Wash. 399, 79 P. 981. Experienced railroad man, employed in switch yards seven months, assumed risk of unblocked switches. Hynson v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ.

ercising ordinary care, would have known of them,[61] are also assumed. But mere knowledge of a defective condition will not alone charge a servant with the assumption of a risk; it must also appear that he knew and appreciated the danger arising from the defect.[62] Knowledge of the danger will, however, be implied from knowledge of the defect, if it would be apparent to a person of ordinary intelligence.[63] Dangers which are as well known to the servant as to the master, or which the servant has an equal opportunity with the master to observe, are assumed.[64] Risks

App.] 86 S. W. 928. One familiar with work of handling scrap iron and rails assumed the danger of trying to load a heavy iron "bolster" with the assistance of only one other man. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Figures [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 780. Employe engaged in clearing up debris of burned building assumed risk of danger from a brick vault shaft, left standing during the salvage work, falling and injuring him. Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes [Md.] 62 A. 155 Employe stood on a ledge of rock extending from an embankment, under order of his foreman, and fell and was killed. Held, the danger of his position was obvious and he assumed the risk. Kane v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 571.

61. Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Demsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 89 S. W. 786; Buey's Adm'x v. Chess & Wymond Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 198, 84 S. W. 563. Whether servant understood danger must be determined from his age, intelligence, capacity and experience. Reynolds v. Grace, 115 Ill. App. 473. Servant assumed risk of cutting groove in cable wheel with a hand tool though his foreman directed him to do so, since the danger was obvious to one of his experience. Consolidated Barb Wire Co. v. Maxwell, 116 Ill. App. 296. If brakeman knew of close proximity of posts of coal chute to track, or if he was chargeable with such knowledge, he assumed the risk of being struck by the posts while passing on a car. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 214 Ill. 124, 73 N. E. 416. Roundhouse employe who knew that stalls generally had pits was charged with notice that stall in which he was at work had a pit. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Walker [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 28. Section hand who had worked two years and had used rail hooks assumed risk of using a hook which was straightened, worn, and too small to hold, since he must have known danger. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Drake [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 447. Switchman assumed risk of injury from frogs when 25 or 30 were maintained in the yard, and he had worked there six months. Riley v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 133 F. 904. Where a scraper rolled down a grade and its tongue was cracked, a fact which some of the men sent to bring it back discovered and commented on, plaintiff, one of such employes, assumed the risk of drawing it up by the defective tongue, since he ought to have known of the defect. Griffiths v. Craney, 38 Wash. 90, 80 P. 274.

62. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12; Mace v. Boedker & Co., 127 Iowa, 721, 104 N. W. 475; Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bryan [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 678; Omaha Packing Co. v. Murray, 112 Ill. App. 232; Montgomery Coal Co. v. Barringer, 218 Ill. 327, 75 N. E. 900. A servant does not assume a risk by his conduct unless he knows of and appreciates the danger to which he is voluntarily exposing himself. Moylon v. McDonald Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 929. Danger as well as defect must be known. Henrietta Coal Co. v Campbell, 112 Ill. 452. Boy held not to have appreciated unusual danger of running saw in a defective condition. Sink v. The Sikes Co., 134 F. 144. The mere fact that a servant knew of a defect in an appliance will not bar a recovery; the case is nevertheless for the jury. Roach v. Haile Gold Min. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 543. Mere fact that street car conductor knew track was rough and uneven did not charge him with assumption of risk of derailment of car. Osterhout v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Law] 62 A. 190. Where elevator boy knew and reported that elevator was not running right, but had not inspected it, and did not know and appreciate the full risk, he did not, as a matter of law, assume risk of injury by a violent jerking of it. Moylon v. McDonald Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 929. Young girl, injured by attempting to remove a piece stuck to a roller of a mangle, without stopping the machine, held not to have assumed the risk as a matter of law, it appearing that she had seen others do the same thing. Manning v. Excelsior Laundry Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 254.

63. Where the conditions are not complex, and the circumstances such as to be easily comprehended, an employe who knows the facts and conditions and circumstances, is bound and conclusively presumed to know the dangers arising therefrom. Green v New York, etc., R. Co., 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 497. The law will presume knowledge of dangers which are obvious and necessarily arise from a defect. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. Employe held to have assumed risk of coal falling through hole in chute. Montgomery Coal Co. v. Barringer, 218 Ill. 327, 75 N. E. 900. That employe does not realize all possible consequences of danger, or that danger is not as obvious to him as to an experienced workman, is immaterial, if danger would be obvious and sufficiently appreciated by one of average intelligence. Dickenson v. Vernon, 77 Conn. 537, 60 A. 270.

64. Danger to one digging post holes, of pile of bricks on other side of open fence falling on him, was an assumed risk. Meixner v. Philadelphia Brewing Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 259. If a danger is open and obvious to master and servant alike and equally, it is an assumed risk. Tham v. Steeb Shipping Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 711. Section hand assumed risk of defective wheel on hand car when he had an equal if not better chance to know of the defect than the master. Foster which are unknown to the servant, and which due care on his part would not disclose, and which are not among those risks which are classed as incidental, are not assumed.[65] Whether a particular risk was known or ought to have been known to the servant, within the meaning of these rules, is ordinarily a question of fact[66] to be determined by reference to the age, capacity, experience and intelligence of the employe[67] and the circumstances of each particular case.[68]

v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422. Where servant had better opportunities than the master to observe the dangers of his work, because his duties required him to go to different parts of the yard, the master could not be charged with liability because a place where the servant happened to be at a particular time was temporarily rendered unsafe. Miller v. Moran Bros. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1089. Where miner, notified of the presence of two "missed shots," found one but not the other, which was concealed by a covering of water, which he could have, but failed to, remove, he assumed the risk of drilling, since he knew the danger as well as did the master. Dickson v. Newhouse [Colo.] 82 P. 537.

65. Only those dangers which servant actually knows or ought to know are assumed. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829; Sirois v. Henry [N. H.] 59 A. 936. Servant assumes only risks which are known or apparent and obvious to persons of his experience and understanding. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Elec. Light Co. v. Dent [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1091. Danger of using platform furnished for repairmen on scow held not obvious. Madden v. Hughes, 93 N. Y. S. 324. Plaintiff did not assume risk of method of coupling adopted by him unless it was obviously dangerous. Denison & P. S. R. Co. v. Binkley [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 386. Brakeman held not chargeable with knowledge of defective condition of track in front of station. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Stanley [Kan.] 81 P. 176. Danger of using stage built by other men held not apparent and hence not assumed. Ingham v. Honor Co., 113 La. 1040, 37 So. 963. Engineer did not assume risk of falling into hot water well the cover of which had been negligently adjusted by another during the engineer's absence. Levens v. Bancroft, 114 La. 105, 38 So. 72. Plaintiff did not assume risk of operating a particular defective machine, with which she had had no experience, though she was an experienced laundress. Bradford v. Taylor [Miss.] 37 So. 812. Mere knowledge of the existence and general location of a scale box is not sufficient to charge a switchman with knowledge of the increased hazard from maintaining it close to the track. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Swearingen, 196 U. S. 50, 49 Law. Ed. 382. Brakeman held not to have had such knowledge or means of knowledge of a trestle as to have assumed the risk of being struck thereby. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Lamphere [C. C. A.] 137 F. 20. Claimant, who had worked only a short time, held not to have had knowledge of defect in piledriver by which he was injured. Hazzard v. State, 108 App. Div. 119, 95 N. Y. S. 1103. Brakeman held not to have had such knowledge of the position and character of a low bridge as to have assumed risk of being struck by it. Taliaferro v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [La.] 39 So. 437. Workman did not assume risk of making repairs on shafting in a certain way when he was not aware of the danger unless it was such that he would have known and appreciated it if he had used due care. Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. [N. H.] 62 A. 592. Danger of using poorly built scaffold held not so glaring that plaintiff assumed risk. Neves v. Green [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 508. Failure to give customary warning of approach of trains on track where workman was employed was not an obvious risk. D'Agostino v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1113. Brakeman who was struck and killed by overhead bridge the first time he passed over a certain part of the road did not assume the risk. Miller v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 360. Employe who had been on different floors in a building in course of construction, in performance of duties, was not chargeable with notice that elevator shafts were unguarded, so that he assumed the risk of falling through. Rooney v. Brogan Const. Co., 107 App. Div. 258, 95 N. Y. S. 1.

66. Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280. If evidence is harmonious and consistent, question of assumed risk may be one of law. Consolidated Barb Wire Co. v. Maxwell, 116 Ill. App. 296.

67. The mental capacity and intelligence of an employe may properly be considered on the issues of assumption of risk. Drake v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. [Tex.] 89 S. W. 407. In determining whether a servant assumed a given risk his age and experience, and the necessity for instruction are to be considered. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829. Whether boy assumed risk of using defective drift pin depended on the extent of his knowledge and appreciation of the danger. Wood v. Texas Cotton Product Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 534, 88 S. W. 496. The question of assumed risk is particularly one for the jury where the servant is young and inexperienced or is ignorant, when there is room for doubt as to whether he appreciated the danger. Mace v. Boedker & Co., 127 Iowa, 721, 104 N. W. 475. Boy of 17 assumes only such risks as would be obvious to a person of his age, experience and intelligence. Mundhenke v. Oregon City Mfg. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 977.

68. Whether risk assumed held for jury: Car inspector caught between cars. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Phillips [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 2, 87 S. W. 187. Employe injured by negligent operation of pile driver. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Huyett [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 124, 89 S. W. 1118. Plaintiff was being taken to place of work on a push car, hauled by a train, and the push car

Reliance on care of master.[69]—In the absence of knowledge to the contrary, the servant has a right to rely on the assumption that the master has used due care to supply a reasonably safe place,[70] and reasonably safe appliances,[71] and need not left the track and ran over him. De Mase v. Oregon R. & N. Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 170. Miner injured by fall of part of mine roof. Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Farrington [Ala.] 39 So. 898. Roundhouse employe caught in switch frog and foot injured by wheel. Schroeder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. Employe knew something was wrong with freight elevator but could not see hoisting machinery. Finnegan v. Samuel Winslow Skate Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 192. Boy of 14 injured by being caught between elevator and floor. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Track, 218 Ill. 559, 75 N. E. 1053. Elevator operator caught between bar on cage and block through which cable ran. Question was whether he ought to have known of the danger. Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248. Employe did not assume risk of cave-in while working in ditch, as a matter of law. Overbaugh v. Wieber, 94 N. Y. S. 644. Brakeman did not as a matter of law assume risk of being struck by projecting board on another car. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. Servant held not to have assumed as a matter of law risk of using defective scaffold used in building dock. Siversen v. Jenks, 102 App. Div. 313, 92 N. Y. S. 382. Whether operator of punch machine assumed risk of being struck by splinter because of defective knife and screw in machine. Hocking v. Windsor Spring Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 705. Whether employe assumed risk of projecting nail in sprocket chain on machinery. Berg v. United States Leather Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 60. Whether section hand assumed risk of block falling off front of car and wrecking it. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Demsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 89 S. W. 786. Whether employe knew increased danger of using steel rather than wooden rod to tamp dynamite. O'Brien v. Buffalo Furnace Co. [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 161. Whether defect in rail hook was so obvious that employe knew or ought to have known of it. Drake v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. [Tex.] 89 S. W. 407. Whether boy of 17 assumed risk of slipping on oily mill floor, being thereby caused to fall on cogwheels. Mundhenke v. Oregon City Mfg. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 977. Whether plaintiff had such knowledge of danger of tearing down brick archway that he assumed risk. Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Co. v. Sharber [Kan.] 81 P. 476. Whether mangle operator assumed risk of slipping on defective plank on which she stood and of falling on machine. Busch v. Robinson [Or.] 81 P. 237. Whether danger of cleaning rollers of machine with a stick was so obvious that employe assumed the risk, though he was told to use a stick. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 434. Whether defect in pneumatic riveting tool was such that employe assumed risk of using it, after he had complained of it and foreman had told him it was repaired. Hayward v. Key [C. C. A.] 138 F. 34. Whether carpenter knew that other men were at work near him, and that their signals might be mistaken for his, and whether he assumed the risk of such mistake. Siroi's v. Henry & Sons [N. H.] 59 A. 936. Whether defective key used to fasten pulley wheel to revolving shaft was an obvious and assumed risk. Kalker v. Hedden [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 395. Whether weaver assumed risk, which was not obvious, of shuttle flying out and striking him on account of a guard not being properly fitted to loom. Chambers v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 1093. Whether locomotive engineer had such knowledge of the habitual negligent running of engines in a railroad yard that he assumed the risk of being struck by one while returning to his engine. Arenschield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 200. Whether plaintiff assumed risk of being struck by bundle of shingles sliding off a table which had no guard rails, while he was assisting in loading the ship. Olsen v. Gray [Cal.] 81 P. 414. Whether boys employed to tend shearing machines understood danger of coming in contact with wheels overhead if they allowed scrap to accumulate in passage where they worked. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829. Whether boy driving hogs up a chute should have known of a revolving shaft overhead, and whether he assumed risk of getting his whip caught on it. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 721. Whether brakeman assumed risk of coupling cars one of which had a defective coupler. Taylor v. Boston & M. R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 591. Whether experienced telephone and telegraph lineman assumed risk of insulation breaking on wire he was fastening. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Elec. Light Co. v. Dent [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1091. Whether brakeman had previous notice of close proximity to track of posts of a coal chute by which he was struck. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 214 Ill. 124, 73 N. E. 416. Where fireman was injured by derailment of engine caused by defect in track created by wreck of preceding train, no signals to stop being given, whether the risk of such injury was assumed. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 214 Ill. 579, 73 N. E. 879. Whether car repairer had such knowledge of the necessity of rules for his protection, of the promulgation of such rules and of their habitual violation, that he assumed the risk of repairing cars without displaying signals. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85. Section hand did not as a matter of law assume risk of being thrown from hand car by a sudden stop caused by defective gearing, though he had known of the defect for a week. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. Where plaintiff requested a foreman to "set up" his machine and foreman told him he ought to be able to set it up himself, whereupon plaintiff attempted to do so and was injured, whether plaintiff assented or assumed that he was ordered to set up the machine was for the jury. Peterson v. Morgan Spring Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 220.

make an inspection to discover latent defects.[72] In other words, negligence of the master, or of his representatives, is not one of the ordinary risks of the employment, which the servant assumes,[73] ordinary risks being only those which due care on the

69. See 4 C. L. 574.

70. Servant may assume place of work is safe and does not assume risk of its being unsafe unless he knows of the danger. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 721. Danger from presence of ice near rails not assumed by fireman. Neagle v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 339, 95 N. Y. S. 884. Passenger engineer may rely on presumption that track is being maintained in reasonably safe condition. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Miner may rely on mine owner's care and doee not assume risk of danger from gases which accumulate through lack of proper ventilation. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233. Watchman did not assume risk of injury from having his box located too near track by repairers. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Devers [Md.] 61 A. 418. Risk of falling into hole in pathway used by foundry employe while carrying molten metal was not assumed. San Antonio Foundry Co. v. Drish [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 440. Brakeman, going between cars to couple them, automatic coupler being out of order, did not assume risk of stumbling over clinker left on track. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Keefe [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 679. Brakeman who had only taken a certain trip two or three times before and had no knowledge of danger, did not assume risk of being struck by bridge uprights while passing around outer railing of baggage car at night, since he had a right to rely on the master's care for his safety while in performance of his duties. Leach v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 90. A brakeman does not assume risk of defect in the track, but may rely on presumption that it is kept reasonably safe. Northern Ala. R. Co. v. Shea [Ala.] 37 So. 796. Railroad employe does not assume risk arising from telegraph pole being placed too close to track. Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Ill. App. 463. Brakeman did not assume risk of defective condition of blocking between main and guard rail, of which he had no knowledge. Pierson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 13, 102 N. W. 149. Risk of running into washout caused by defective culvert not assumed by engineer unless he was warned or the danger obvious. Western R. Co. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311.

71. Bates Mach. Co. v. Crowley, 115 Ill. App. 540; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Wojciechowski, 111 Ill. App. 641. Risk of defective machine in laundry not assumed. Bartholomew v. Kemmerer, 211 Pa. 277, 60 A. 908. Risk of using handbold defective because of loss of nut not assumed. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457. Employe did not assume risk of defects in machinery which ran elevator which was not visible. Finnegan v. Samuel Winslow Skate Mfg. Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 192. Locomotive fireman did not, as a matter of law, assume risk of using defective step in the cab of his engine. Fry v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 733. Servant did not assume risk of using defective "dogs" which failed to hold logs on saw carrier. Moses v. Grant Lumber Co., 114 La. 933, 38 So. 684. A servant does not assume the risk of viciousness on the part of an animal furnished him by the master, unless he has knowledge of such viciousness. Hagen v. Ice Delivery Co., 2 Ohio N. P. 592. Negro boy of 17 did not necessarily assume risk of piece of wood flying from a saw through a hole in a fender and striking him; he had a right to rely on the reasonable safety of the fender. Burns v. Ruddock-Orleans Cypress Co., 114 La. 247, 38 So. 157. Servant did not assume risk of falling through hole in temporary floor built for use of workmen. Merril v. Pike [Minn.] 102 N. W. 393. Boilermaker had right to rely on safety of casting which fell on him, the foreman having observed the preliminary work and failed to warn him. Faith v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 222, 95 N. Y. S. 774. When brakeman did not know that a tender was not equipped with automatic coupler until he attempted to couple it to a car, he did not assume the risk as a matter of law. Bryce v. Burlington, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 483. Though a foreman, in charge of the work of unloading cylinders with a derrick, is under the duty of using due care in the use and arrangement of the appliances, his master owes him the duty of ordinary care to supply a reasonably safe derrick car and track, and he may assume that this duty has been performed. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. George [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 59, 89 S. W. 1091.

72. See, also, ante, § 3 B. Western R. Co. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311; Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 110 Ill. App. 596; Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Ill. App. 463; Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818; Flockhart v. Hocking Coal Co., 126 Iowa, 576, 102 N. W. 494; Louisville & E. R. Co. v. Poulter's Adm'r, 87 Ky. L. R. 193, 84 S. W. 576; Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12; Hynson v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 44, 86 S. W. 928; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401; Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248.

73. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 110 Ill. App. 596; Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294; Mace v. Boedker & Co., 127 Iowa, 721, 104 N. W. 475; Warren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 585; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Demsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 89 S. W. 786; Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466; Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85. Existence of master's negligence excludes implication of assumption of risk. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905. Rule as to assumed risk not applicable where master has been negligent in furnishing suitable appliances. Chambers v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 1093. Brakeman does not assume risk of foreman's neglipart of the master would not have obviated.[74] But this rule is usually limited in its application to breaches of the master's duty unknown to the servant.[75] If a neglect of duty by the master is known to the servant,[76] or is discoverable by the exercise of ordinary care in the performance of his own duties,[77] and he continues in the employment without complaint,[78] he assumes the risk of so doing, notwithstanding such gence. Kennedy v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 370. Brakeman did not assume risk of negligent order by conductor to suddenly stop cars upon which he had ordered the brakeman to go. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 195. Negligence of foreman in dropping a rod on plaintiff's fingers was not assumed. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Vestal [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 790. Employe did not assume risk of machine starting automatically when she had been told it had been fixed, she having previously complained. O'Neil v. Ginn [Mass.] 74 N. E. 668. Employe loading lumber did not assume risk of withdrawal of signalman when he was injured immediately after such withdrawal. Aleckson v. Erie R. Co., 101 App. Div. 395, 91 N. Y. S. 1029. Railway workman, employed on track, did not assume risk from failure of foreman to give customary warning of approach of trains. D'Agostino v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1113. Workman on railway track could rely on warnings by foreman when trains approached, and did not assume risk of foreman's failure to give a warning. Id. Servant, who worked in remodeling building, assumed incidental risks but not the risk of the superintendent's ordering floors to be let down on a pier before it had solidified so that it could sustain the weight. Nugent v. Cudahy Packing Co., 126 Iowa, 517, 102 N. W. 442. Though brakeman assumes ordinary risks of stopping "cut-off" cars in switching, he may assume that the work will be done in the ordinary manner and does not assume risk of conductor's ordering engine stopped before the car on which he has been sent is cut off. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 195. Section hand working with crew using mauls to drive spikes assumed the risk of mauls flying off handles on which they had been properly wedged, but not the risk of being struck by mauls from handles improperly wedged. Deckerd v. Wabash R. Co. [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 982. Where operating gear of elevator became clogged with refuse matter and defendant knew of its condition, plaintiff did not assume the risk of injury from such condition. Zongker v. People's Union Mercantile Co., 110 Mo. App. 382, 86 S. W. 486.

74. [See, also, supra, "Dangers incidental to business."] National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Fagan, 115 Ill. App. 591; Barnett & Record Co. v. Schlapka, 110 Ill. App. 672; Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 116 Ill. App. 303; Black's Adm'r v. Virginia Portland Cement Co. [Va.] 51 S. E. 831. Master's negligence is not an incidental risk. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 115 Ill. App. 621. Servant assumes only such incidental risks as remain after master has exercised due care. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280. The servant may assume that the master will exercise for his safety that degree of care imposed on him by law under the circumstances and assumes only such risks as would not be obviated by the exercise of such care. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, 73 N. E. 787.

75. Dangers known to the master and unknown to the servant, and not obvious, are not assumed. Leighton & H. Steel Co. v. Snell, 217 Ill. 152, 75 N. E. 462.

76. In addition to the incidental risks assumed by the contract of employment, the servant, either by entering or continuing in the service, and using without compiaint defective appliances and machinery, assumes the hazards of such defective appliances and machinery, provided he knew of the defects and also appreciated the danger. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. This doctrine is based on maxim volenti non fit injuria. Id. Negligence of master is assumed, if known. Fulton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1012. One who knew that employes engaged in piling lumber were incompetent and had seen defective piles, and had fixed one up, assumed risk of injury from a pile falling upon him. Hull v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 153. Employe who knew the kind of inspection of a candy making kettle which his employer made, assumed the risk arising therefrom though a different sort of inspection would have made his work less dangerous. Hollingsworth v. National Biscuit Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1118.

77. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457. Though servant may assume that his place of work is reasonably safe and need not make a critical examination, he must exercise ordinary care and observe obvious defects. Erie & W. Transp. Co. v. Gaines, 112 Ill. App. 189. In the case of risks arising from negligence of the master, the servant assumes only such as are obvious, knowledge of which he must necessarily have acquired in the proper performance of his duties. Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248. Experienced driver in mine assumed risk of unballasted condition of track when a casual inspection would have disclosed its condition. Flockhart v. Hocking Coal Co., 126 Iowa, 576, 102 N. W. 494. Servant may recover for injuries resulting from defective scaffold unless defects were obvious to a person of his experience and understanding, or were actually known to him. Louisville & E. R. Co. v. Poulter's Adm'r, 27 Ky. L. R. 193, 84 S. W. 576. If a car inspector would have discovered that brakes on a car were not set by the exercise of ordinary care in performing his own duties, he assumed the risk of going between it and another while switching was being done. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rea [Tex.] 87 S. W. 324.

78. St. Louis National Stock Yards v. Morris, 116 Ill. App. 107; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Wojciechowski, 111 Ill. App. 641; Alton Roller Milling Co. v. Bender, 112 Ill.

neglect of duty by the master,[79] unless he was justified in believing that he could continue with safety, by exercising due care,[80] the danger not being so obvious and imminent that an ordinarily prudent person would not have encountered it by remaining.[81] The doctrine that a servant assumes the risk of a known defect, if he continues without complaint, does not apply where the master expressly agrees to assume responsibility for such defect.[82]

App. 484; Chicago City R. Co. v. Enroth, 113 Ill. App. 285; Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85; Leach v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 90; Purkey v. Southern Coal & Transportation Co. [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 755; Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991. Quarryman assumed risk of injury in blasting operations. Zeigenmeyer v. Charles Goetz Lime & Cement Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 139. Experienced mangle operator 22 years old assumed risk of working on mangle with improperly adjusted finger guard, the defect being plainly visible. Butler v. Frazee, 25 App. D. C. 392. Loom operator assumes risk of negligence of a servant of an independent contractor at work in same room, when he continues to work, knowing such other person was also at work. Smith v. Naushon Co., 26 R. I. 578, 60 A. 242. Where employe worked at oiling machinery several months, he assumed risk of injury from unguarded cog wheels. Bryant v. Great Northern Paper Co. [Me.] 60 A. 797. Where employe continued to work with defective "dogs" used with derrick to hoist stones, though four stones had been dropped by the "dogs" on two successive days, and was injured by a stone so dropped on the third day, he could not recover, even though he told the foreman of the defect, the foreman saying no new dogs would be furnished. Talbot v. Sims [Pa.] 62 A. 107. A servant who knows, or by the exercise of ordinary care ought to know, of the neglect of the master to furnish safe machinery or a sufficient number of competent men, and appreciates the danger of continuing to work under those conditions, assumes the risks arising therefrom. Smith v. Armour [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 675.

79. One who continues in the employment without complaint after notice of a defect which increases the risk of his work assumes the increased risk. Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521. A servant who actually knows of defects and continues to work without complaint or notice to the master assumes the increased hazard in addition to the ordinary risks of his employment. Buey's Adm'x v. Chess & Wymond Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 198, 84 S. W. 563. An employe who with actual or implied knowledge of a defect continues in the employment without protest or promise to repair is held to have acquiesced in, consented to, and assumed the risk. Mumford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 1135.

80. Negligence of master not assumed if servant believed he could continue with safety if he used ordinary care. Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103; Shepherd v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 362, 87 S. W. 1007. Whether plaintiff was justified in believing he could continue to work near an unguarded pulley with safety by exercising due care was for jury. Stafford v. Adams [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1130.

81. Risk of continuing not assumed unless obvious and imminent. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280; Hicks v. Naomi Falls Mfg. Co., 138 N. C. 319, 50 S. E. 703; Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769. Employe does not assume risk unless risk is obviously so great that inherent probability of injury is greater than that of safety. Jones v. American Warehouse Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 106. Knowledge of the incompetency of a fellow-servant will not defeat an action for injuries caused thereby unless the danger was so obvious and imminent that a reasonably prudent man would not have remained. Adams v. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co., 110 Mo. App. 367, 86 S. W. 484. Employe, injured by sudden starting of spinning frame which he was repairing did not assume the risk though he knew the frame was not equipped with a belt shifter. Pressley v. Dover Yarn Mills [N. C.] 51 S. E. 69. Where servant knew treadle was defective but had called foreman's attention to it and adopted expedient to avoid danger whether he assumed risk was fact question. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010. The servant may be released from the assumption of risk by reporting the defects to the master if the danger of continued use is not such that no prudent person would encounter it. Buey's Adm'x v. Chess & Wymond Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 198, 84 S. W. 563. A mechanic had promised to fix a machine several times but had failed to do so. Whether employe was negligent in continuing to work, knowing that the machine was dangerous, was for the jury. Maines v. Harbison-Walker Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 640. A risk not assumed by the contract of employment but arising during the employment is not necessarily assumed by a servant who remains with knowledge of the danger; the question is ordinarily one of fact. Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769; Whaley v. Coleman [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 119. Laws 1902, p. 1750, c. 600, § 3, provides that a servant does not necessarily assume a risk by continuing in the employment after discovery of a danger; hence whether a quarryman, who told foreman he was afraid there might be powder in a rock he was told to break, and was assured it was safe, assumed the risk, was for the jury. Di Stefeno v. Peekskill Lighting & R. Co., 107 App. Div. 293, 95 N. Y. S. 179. If the danger is obvious or imminent so that a servant cannot continue to work with safety even though he uses due care, he assumes the risk. Shepherd v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 362, 87 S. W. 1007; Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103. Miner assumed risk of using steel drill instead of gas pipe with a wooden

The servant may also assume that work will be done in the customary manner[83] and that rules will not be violated.[84]

Reliance on orders or assurances of safety.[85]—Unless the danger is obvious and imminent and such that a reasonably prudent person would not have encountered it,[86] a servant does not assume the risk of executing an order of a superior,[87] or of continuing in the employment after an assurance of safety by a superior.[88] plug to pack powder in hole in blasting and could not recover for injuries in explosion caused by spark from drill. Whaley v. Coleman [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 119. The doctrine of assumed risk does not apply to a servant confronted with an emergency which does not give him an opportunity to elect whether or not he will remain in the employment in which he is then engaged. Isley v. Wabash R. Co., 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 669.

82. Where foreman induced engineer to take out an engine with cab windows boarded up, assuring him it was all right and that company would be responsible for anything that happened, engineer did not assume risk. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857.

83. Switchman had right to rely on presumption that usual custom of slowing down when approaching him would be followed and did not, as a matter of law, assume risk of being struck. Graham v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 714.

84. Brakeman, at work on cars on a siding, did not assume risk of violation by other employes of a rule requiring cars left on sidings to be coupled together. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Pope [Tex.] 86 S. W. 5.

85. See 4 C. L. 576.

86. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Speer [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 933. A servant does not assume the risk attendant upon obedience of orders unless the danger was such that no ordinarily prudent person would encounter it. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280. Following direction of superintendent in passing between two machines did not relieve employe from assumption of known risk of getting caught in rollers, even though he consented from fear of losing his position. Dickenson v. Vernon, 77 Conn. 537, 60 A. 270. Employe who put his hand in a box wherein a screw with sharp blades was revolving knowing that cement falling through a chute was liable to push his hand upon the screw, assumed the risk, though the act was at the foreman's suggestion. Vaughn v. Glens Falls Portland Cement Co., 93 N. Y. S. 979. Railroad bridge carpenter with six months experience, who, when ordered to do so by foreman, attempted to haul hand-car by holding on to it with one hand while holding rail of caboose on rear of train with the other, assumed the risk, the danger being obvious. Lee v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 834. Where miners were required by rules to inspect for unexploded charges before drilling for a blast, plaintiff was not entitled to rely on a foreman's examination of a hole, made in plaintiff's presence, and on his direction to proceed, but assumed the risk of striking an old charge in the hole. Poorman Silver Mines of Colo. v. Devling [Colo.] 81 P. 252. Employe assumed risk of cutting stay wire which held load of telephone poles in place on a flat car, even though directed by foreman to cut it. Shaver v. Home Tel. Co. [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 288. When the danger is obvious and the servant has ample time to see and comprehend it, the fact that he is executing an order does not relieve him. Id. Plaintiff, who, with three others, was directed by foreman to carry a heavy timber, objected that four men were not enough, but obeyed the foreman's order. It was held that he knew the danger and assumed the risk of injury, and the order of the foreman did not relieve him. Haywood v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 433.

87. Risks involved in carrying out the master's orders are not assumed unless the danger is obvious and such that no prudent man would encounter it. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 110 Ill. App. 596. Servant ordered to use dangerous planer did not assume risk. Wells & French Co. v. Kapaczynski, 218 Ill. 149, 75 N. E. 751. Danger of executing a direct command not assumed where servant reasonably believed that he could execute it without injury by exercising due care. Kapaczynski v. Wells & French Co., 110 Ill. App. 477. A servant has the right to presume, in the absence of warning and notice, that in conforming to the order of a foreman he will not be subjected to injury. Shaver v. Home Tel. Co. [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 288. Where the employer knows of a danger and nevertheless directs an employe to work, the risk is not assumed by the employe unless the danger is obvious and imminent. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Keebler, 27 Ky. L. R. 305, 84 S. W. 1167. Girl operator 17 years old did not assume risk of operating machine in a dangerous manner under instructions from the foreman, unless the danger was obvious to one of her age, intelligence, and experience. Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Mach. Co. v. Lyon [Ky.] 89 S. W. 522. Evidence sustained finding that employe did not assume risk of negligence of foreman in charge of remodeling of building, while he was performing the foreman's order. Barrett v. Reardon [Minn.] 104 N. W. 309. Where employe had been accustomed to place a belt on a pulley while it was stationary and was directed to put it on while the pulley was in motion, whether he assumed the risk was for jury. Jones v. American Warehouse Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 106. Employe of electric company, ordered to haul up a cable, without being warned as to danger of coming in contact with a switchboard near, did not as a matter of law assume the risk of injury from such contact. Staubley v. Potomac Power Co., 21 App. D. C. 160.

Note: "A servant does not assume the risk involved in carrying out a direct command of the master as to the method of performing certain work, unless he acts as no rea-

Reliance on promise to repair, after complaint.[89]—Where the servant has complained of a defective condition, and the master or his representative has promised to render it safe by proper repairs, the servant may continue in the employment, without assuming the risk,[90] for such length of time as is reasonably necessary for the making of the required repairs[91] unless the appreciated danger is so imminent that a man of ordinary prudence would refuse to encounter it.[92] To bring a case within the operation of this rule, it must appear that a promise was in fact made,[93] and was sonably prudent person would act under like circumstances. Henrietta Coal Co. v. Campbell, 211 Ill. 216, 71 N. E. 863; Chicago Anderson Pressed Brick Co. v. Sobkowiak, 148 Ill. 573, 36 N. E. 572; Illinois Steel Co. v. Schymanowski, 162 Ill. 447, 44 N. E. 876; Offutt v. World's Columbian Exposition, 175 Ill. 472, 51 N. E. 657; Greenleaf v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 29 Iowa, 14; Patterson v. Railroad Co., 76 Pa. 389; Snow v. Railroad Co., 8 Allen [Mass.] 441; Keegan v. Kavanaugh, 62 Mo. 230. The servant must know the risks as well as the defects. Consolidated Coal Co. v. Hoenni, 146 Ill. 614. On principle, it would seem that a servant has a right to assume that the master with his superior knowledge of working conditions will not expose him to unnecessary perils and he should not be held to have assumed the risk in obeying a direct command."—3 Mich. L. R. 244.

88. Where a servant complains of a defect and is assured of safety and in reliance on the assurance continues in the employment he does not assume the risk as a matter of law. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857. After a promise to repair a machine and a direction to continue work, a servant may rely to a reasonable extent on the implied assurance that the machine is reasonably safe. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991. Servant had right to rely on foreman's assurance that a belt and pulley, complained of as defective the day before, had been repaired. Lynch v. Stevens & Sons Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 478. Where the operator of a steel punch struck an unusually hard piece of steel and told his manager who said he would probably strike no more of that kind, the operator did not assume the risk of injury from a particle of steel from a similar hard piece which he struck the next day. Arnold v. Harrington Cutlery Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 194. Miner, knowing his place of work was unsafe, not justified in relying on assurance of mine boss that place was safe, the boss being a fellow-servant. Purkey v. Southern Coal & Transp. Co. [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 755.

89. See 4 C. L. 577.

90. Burch v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 270; Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521; Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991; Simpson v. Weir & C. Mfg. Co., 116 Ill. App. 286. Fireman did not assume risk of using defective step on cab which engineer had said he would fix. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Garren [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1096. Servant, injured while using a defective truck in reliance on a promise made to him to repair it, the injury occurring in a dark place, could recover without proof of ignorance of the defect. Odin Coal Co. v. Tadlock, 216 Ill. 624, 75 N. E. 332. Promise to repair hand car brakes two days before accident, caused by failure to stop car in time, relieved servant of assumption of risk. Foster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422.

91. Burch v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 270; Foster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422; Simpson v. Weir & C. Mfg. Co., 116 Ill. App. 286. Servant may continue for a time within which performance of the promise might be reasonably anticipated. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519. A servant is justified in remaining for such a period of time as would be a reasonable allowance for performance of the promise. Maryland Steel Co. v. Engleman [Md.] 61 A. 314.

Question of fact: Where servant complained about a defective roller and worked with it 10 days after a promise to repair it, whether he assumed risk was for jury. Shalgren v. Red Cliff Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 531. Whether 8 or 9 days was reasonable time to allow for putting shields on lubricator of engine held properly left to jury. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519.

92. Burch v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 270; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519; Simpson v. Weir & C. Mfg. Co., 116 Ill. App. 286; Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521; Maryland Steel Co. v. Engleman [Md.] 61 A. 314. Where employe knew and appreciated danger of operating a "jointer" without a guard, he assumed the risk notwithstanding a promise to repair and an express direction to use it. Sattley Mfg. Co. v. Wendt, 116 Ill. App. 375. Promise to repair does not relieve servant when appliance is simple and thoroughly understood by him. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Wojciechowski, 111 Ill. App. 641. Whether the danger is such that to remain in the employment after a promise to repair constitutes negligence is a question of fact. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991. Where servant remained after promise by foreman to replace defective belt and was injured by the bursting of the belt, whether he assumed risk was for jury. Maryland Steel Co. v. Engleman [Md.] 61 A. 314.

93. The rule does not apply where no promise to repair is made. Talbat v. Sims [Pa.] 62 A. 107. A complaint does not relieve the servant of the assumption of the risk if no promise to repair is made. Alton Roller Milling Co. v. Bender, 112 Ill. App. 484. Plaintiff told foreman, "Someone will get caught there yet," and foreman answered, "It takes lots of red tape to do a thing around this corner or around this place rather." Held, this was not a promise to repair on which plaintiff had a right to rely. Simpson v. Weir & C. Mfg. Co., 116 Ill. App. 286.

relied upon by the servant, who was induced by it to continue in the employment.[94] That the servant did rely upon the promise to repair may be inferred from the circumstances.[95] To entitle the servant to rely upon it, the promise must be positive and definite,[96] and must be made by one having authority to make it,[97] but need not be made directly to the servant injured,[98] and need not specify a definite time within which repairs will be made.[99] If no time is fixed, it is presumed that the promise is to make the repairs within a reasonable time.[1] Where a promise is to repair by a definite time, and the time passes without performance, the employe cannot be regarded as remaining in the service thereafter in reliance on the promise.[2]

Risks created by servant.[3]—A servant who unnecessarily adopts a dangerous method of doing work,[4] or violates instructions or orders[5] or fails to perform his own duties,[6] assumes the risk of the resulting danger.

94. Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521. It must appear that the employe apprehended danger to himself and relied upon and was induced to remain by the promise to repair. Alton Roller Milling Co. v. Bender, 112 Ill. App. 484. Allegations that defendant promised to make repairs but failed and "refused" to do so are not inconsistent with the theory that the promise to repair induced the servant to remain. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991.

95. Such inference held warranted where plaintiff was injured by defective stamping press, after a promise by defendant to repair it. Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521.

96. Where promise was to repair machine after plaintiff had turned out work enough to keep other men going until repairs could be made, the promise was sufficiently definite and certain, and plaintiff could recover where injury occurred the same day the promise was made. Anderson v. Seropian [Cal.] 81 P. 521. Where locomotive engineer complained that there were no lubricator shields on his engine, whether the foreman's statement, "Well, they must be fixed," was a definite promise to repair on which the engineer could rely, was for the jury. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519.

97. Complaint alleging promise to repair held not demurrable for failure to allege what particular agent or officer made the promise. Burch v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 270.

98. Servant may rely on a promise to repair made in his hearing and presence though he has not personally made complaint. Gunning System v. La Pointe, 113 Ill. App. 405. A promise to repair may be relied on though not made directly to the employe injured, if communicated to him by others. Odin Coal Co. v. Tadlock, 216 Ill. 624, 75 N. E. 332.

99. Employe complained of unguarded electric fan and foreman promised to fix it as soon as he could get around to it. Risk not assumed. Fouts v. Swift & Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 167.

1. A complaint alleging a promise to repair a defective appliance, and a failure to do so, is not fatally defective for not alleging a definite time within which defendant promised to make the repairs, since if no time is stated a reasonable time will be implied. Burch v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 270.

2. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson [C. C. A.] 139 F. 519.

3. See 4 C. L. 578.

4. Where safe, lighted way out of place of work was provided and servant selected another way out, he assumed the risk of so doing. Geis v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 301. Kitchen boy on steamship, ordered to go below for kindling assumed risk of falling, when he unnecessarily opened hatchway. The Esperanza, 133 F. 1015. One who abandoned the ordinary and safe way to get on a car and tried a new way which was liable to become dangerous, assumed the risk. Southern R. Co. v. Lambert, 116 Ill. App. 52. Foreman of switching crew assumed risk of going between cars to couple them, when he was not ordered to do so. Whalin v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 428. Brakeman assumed the risk where, in giving signals, he stood too close to the track, so that he was caught by a car and crushed. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bryan [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 678. Employe who knew belt shifter was broken and shaft unguarded assumed the risk of attempting to adjust a belt by climbing up on a ladder, when he was not ordered or directed to do so, and the act was not shown to be a part of his duty. Robertson v. Ford [Ind.] 74 N. E. 1. Where engineer knew bridge was weak and was told to send his engine across alone but nevertheless stayed on the engine, which went through the bridge, he assumed the risk. Welton v. Genesee Lumber Co., 114 La. 842, 38 So. 580. Servants assumed risk of blasting when the method used was within their own control. Hjelm v. Western Granite Contracting Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 384. Plaintiff assumed risk of voluntarily adopting a new method of work which was obviously dangerous. Mullins v. Manhattan Brass Co., 93 N. Y. S. 635. Where employe chose path between machinery which he knew to be obstructed, instead of safer route open to him, he assumed the risk. Carbury v. Eastern Nut & Bolt Co. [R. I.] 60 A. 773.

5. Machine operative who was told how to put on and take off cotton, assumed risk of attempting to clear machine, when clogged, without shifting belt. Aziz v. Atlantic Cotton Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 73. Brakeman who violates rules and special instructions by going between cars assumed risk. Moore

(§ 3) G. Contributory negligence. Nature of defense.[7]—Negligence of a servant which is the sole[8] or a contributing proximate cause[9] of his injury defeats a recovery,[10] though the master was also negligent,[11] and even though the master's negligence exceeded in degree that of the servant.[12] But in some states contributory negligence does not defeat recovery but must be considered by the jury in mitigation of damages.[13] It is usually held that contributory negligence is available as a defense even though the action be based upon a violation of a statutory duty,[14] but the contrary is held in some states.[15] The defense is available in an action brought

v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [La.] 38 So. 913. Switchman who violated rule by going between cars to couple them assumed risk even though coupler was defective. Hynson v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 44, 86 S. W. 928.

6. Where foreman slipped on defective cleats on a gangway and was killed, it being his duty to keep such cleats in repair, and he having worked in the place over 3 years, he was held to have assumed the risk. Baker v. Empire Wire Co., 102 App. Div. 125, 92 N. Y. S. 355.

7. See 4 C. L. 578. See, also, Negligence, 4 C. L. 773.

8. Want of due care by plaintiff held cause of injury from electric shock. Cosgrove v. Kennebec Light & Heat Co., 98 Me. 473, 57 A. 841. Negligence of a yard foreman in placing cars on tracks held the cause of an injury to him by timbers sliding off a loaded car which was struck by others during switching. Wagnon v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 919, 89 S. W. 1112.

9. Negligence of a servant is no defense unless it contributed with defendant's negligence as a proximate cause of the injury. Anderson v. Southern R. Co., 70 S. C. 490, 50 S. E. 202. The servant's negligence must have proximately contributed to produce the injury. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rea [Tex.] 87 S. W. 324. Instruction that contributory negligence, to defeat recovery, must have proximately contributed to produce the injury sustained. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457. Charge held to require jury to find that plaintiff's negligence must have been proximate cause of injury to defeat his action. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Purdy [Tex.] 86 S. W. 321. Though plaintiff violated a rule by going between cars, this was not the proximate cause of his injury where other employes, with knowledge of his dangerous position, negligently gave the signal to move the cars. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Bonner [Ala.] 39 So. 619. Where section hand was injured by being thrown from a car which stopped suddenly, owing to defective gearing, his failure to use a brake on the car could not have contributed to produce his injury. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. An employe, who is injured by a machine left unguarded in violation of law, cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence, unless his injury was caused by a negligent act of his own and not by the danger created by the violation of law. Hall v. West & Slade Mill Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 915.

10. Instruction charging rule held not misleading or erroneous. Drugalis v. Northwestern Imp. Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 101. Instructions reviewed and held to correctly lay down rule as to contributory negligence. Sanders v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 728. Instruction on master's liability erroneous because omitting qualification that contributory negligence would defeat a recovery. Nickey v. Steuder [Ind.] 73 N. E. 117. Charge held not to authorize verdict against plaintiff unless he himself was found negligent, and not to charge him with responsibility for negligence of his crew. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Purdy [Tex.] 86 S. W. 321.

11. The defense of contributory negligence is available, though negligence of the master in furnishing a defective machine shown. Hicks v. Naomi Falls Mfg. Co., 138 N. C. 319, 50 S. E. 703; Pressly v. Dover Yarn Mills [N. C.] 51 S. E. 69; Keys v. Winnsboro Granite Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 549. Even though defendant could be considered negligent in precautions taken by it, negligence of employe who walked in front of cars in switch yards was proximate cause of injury. Lewis v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 114 La. 161, 38 So. 92.

12. The comparative negligence doctrine does not obtain in Kansas. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401. Instruction to jury laying down "comparative negligence" rule, held erroneous. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Maydole [Colo.] 79 P. 1023. Contributory negligence will defeat a recovery, though defendant was negligent, and it is immaterial which party was the more negligent. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173.

13. Instruction that contributory negligence "may" be considered is erroneous, such negligence "must" be considered. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 113 Tenn. 266, 87 S. W. 418.

14. See 4 C. L. 579, n. 90. Engineer, after being on duty 16 hours, was asked to make another run immediately and did so, and after being on duty 15 hours more, was injured in a collision because he had his train on the main instead of a side track. It was held he could not recover, notwithstanding the statute making it a misdemeanor to require more than 16 hours continuous service of railway employes. Smith v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 414, 87 S. W. 1052.

15. Defense of contributory negligence not available against a child under 14 employed in violation of Labor Law § 70. Lee v. Sterling Silk Mfg. Co., 93 N. Y. S. 560. Contributory negligence is no defense to an action for violation of Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 48, § 33, prohibiting employment of children under 14 in certain occupations. American Car & Foundry Co. v. Armen-under a fellow-servant act.[16] Distinctions between the defense of contributory negligence and that of assumption of risk have already been pointed out.[17]

Degree of care required of servant.[18]—Only ordinary care is required,[19] that is, such care as ordinarily prudent persons would exercise under the same circumstances.[20] Whether that degree of care was exercised in a particular instance is traut, 214 Ill. 509, 73 N. E. 766; Id., 116 Ill. App. 121. Contributory negligence is no defense to an action based on a willful violation of the mines act. Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294. Where mine operator failed to comply with Laws 1899, pp. 315, 317, §§ 16, 18, the fact that a miner went into a room known to him to be dangerous was no defense to an action for his injuries. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375.

Note: "The Illinois courts in a long line of decisions have consistently adhered to the position above taken. The great weight of authority, however, is contrary to the Illinois view. Railway Company v. Craig [C. C. A.] 73 F. 642; Taylor v. Manuf'g Company, 143 Mass. 470, 10 N. E. 308; Holum v. Railway Co., 80 Wis. 299, 50 N. W. 99; Coal Co. v. Muir, 20 Colo. 320, 38 P. 378. Many of the Illinois cases cited in the principal case confuse the doctrines of contributory negligence and assumed risk. See 4 Mich. L. R. 165. The distinction is well brought out in Railway Co. v. Baker [C. C. A.] 91 F. 224. There a federal statute required railroad companies to furnish certain appliances and expressly provided, that on injury resulting from failure to do so, the defence of assumed risk should not be available to the railroad company. The court nevertheless permitted the defence of contributory negligence to be introduced."—4 Mich. L. R. 241. See, also, note on distinction between assumption of risk and contributory negligence, supra.

16. Defense of contributory negligence is available in actions under the North Carolina railroad fellow-servant law. Biles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 129.

17. See § 3 F, supra.

18. See 4 C. L. 579.

19. Passenger engineer required only to exercise ordinary care for his own safety. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Brakeman, standing on track giving signals to engineer, was under duty of using ordinary care to look out for other trains. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523.

20. Person with defect in his walk is not required to exercise a higher degree of care than others, but must observe that degree of care which ordinarily prudent persons would exercise under the same circumstances. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863.

Servant held guilty of contributory negligence: Where injury to miner due to an accumulation of gas was proximately contributed to by his own failure to make a "breakthrough" to secure ventilation, he could not recover. Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Jones [Ark.] 87 S. W. 440. Where girl had worked at table in bakery where machines were guarded, and was changed to one where they were unguarded, a fact readily observed, and while there put her arms into such machinery unnecessarily she could not recover. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6. Motorman whose duty it was to look out for other trains so as to pass them safely was negligent in running through a fog without knowing the whereabouts of a train coming towards him. Vinson v. Los Angeles Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 53. Employe negligent in going upon a truss to remove certain timbers in course of construction of building, when, if he had used ordinary care, he would have seen the truss was liable to fall. McElwaine-Richards Co. v. Wall [Ind.] 76 N. E. 408. Signal telegraph operator, who had been carried to place of work, knew his train was late and that another train could not easily be seen or heard on account of the noise or darkness. He was also warned, but he stepped on another track and was struck and killed. He could have alighted on the other side. He was guilty of contributory negligence. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 267. Servant who knew lumber pile was dangerous was guilty of negligence in voluntarily removing lumber from it. Brooks v. Joyce Co., 127 Iowa, 266, 103 N. W. 91. Where plaintiff slipped on board remnants which he had himself placed on the floor and fell on a saw, his own negligence caused his injury. Witten v. Bell & Coggeshall Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 580, 85 S. W. 1094. Employe negligent in not getting out of the way of a timber which swung against him while being raised by a derrick. Carmony v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 948, 87 S. W. 319. No recovery where employe walked in front of train while crossing switch yards, keeping no lookout for trains. Lewis v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 114 La. 161, 38 So. 92. Where brakeman's own carelessness caused him to be injured while turning the switch in making a running switch, he could not recover, even though running switches were forbidden by the rules when avoidable. Williams v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 114 La. 13, 37 So. 992. Evidence held to show operator of ripsaw guilty of negligence in not standing in the proper place. Dutchowski v. Handy Things Co. [Mich.] 104 N. W. 358. Baggageman killed by switch train, while transferring baggage from one train to another, held negligent as matter of law in getting in the way of the switch train. Greenlaw v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 1072. Plaintiff, who knew machine had knives in it, and who used his hands instead of a scoop to clear away shavings, was negligent. Nashville Spoke & Handle Co. v. Thomas [Tenn.] 86 S. W. 379. Employe, at work under a bridge which was being repaired, who heard signal to get out from under it but paid no attention to it, could not recover for injuries caused by the bridge being let down on him, though he did not know it had been jacked up. Robinson v. Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 118, 87 S. W. 667. Servant who walked into lye vat and was fatally injured held guilty of contributory negligence, where it appeared he had worked on premises six years and was familiar with them and with the working of the vat, whether the vat was obscured by clouds of steam at the time or not. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 359, 85 S. W. 1006. Section hand, who had been a railroad man for years and had gotten on and off cabooses of the kind in question many times, was negligent in stepping off on a dark night without finding out what kind of a step it had. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hemphill [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 350. No recovery by brakeman who, while off duty, tried to board switch engine at night by standing on the track and jumping on running board as engine came toward him. Wise Terminal Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 51 S. E. 731. Where operator of printing press went into a pit under it to make repairs, and though familiar with the place, and knowing that he could not stand up in it, attempted to do so and got his hair caught, an injury resulting, his own negligence was held the proximate cause of his injury. Newport News Pub. Co. v. Beaumeister [Va.] 52 S. E. 627. Employe of shipbuilder negligent when he voluntarily stood under a heavy suspended steel plate. Miller v. Moran Bros. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 1089. No recovery for death of brakeman, making a flying switch, where he gave the signal to go ahead and to the switchman to turn the switch before he had uncoupled the car he was on. Stevick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 999. Intelligent employe who knew there were knives in a machine, though he did not know their location, was negligent in putting his hand inside. Gardner v. Paine Lumber Co., 123 Wis. 338, 101 N. W. 700.

ordinarily a question of fact for the jury.[21] In determining the question, the sur-

Servant held not guilty of contributory negligence: Where plaintiff was injured by falling of crust of pile of ore in which he was digging, evidence tending to show freedom from contributory negligence held sufficient to support judgment of lower court. Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 214 Ill. 181, 73 N. E. 422. Where during engineer's absence an employe in another department took water from a hot water well and did not properly replace the cover, the engineer was not negligent in stepping on it on his return, thereby going through and being scalded. Levens v. Bancroft, 114 La. 105, 38 So. 72. Failure to ask for a plug to hold a belt shipper would not defeat a recovery, under Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 77, where employe had not been told of use of plug, and a plug would not have prevented the injury if used. Lynch v. Stevens & Sons Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 478. Servant held not negligent in manner of handling joist at time he was injured by falling through hole in temporary floor. Merril v. Pike [Minn.] 102 N. W. 393. Evidence sufficient to show due care by plaintiff, injured by defective brace for ladder on which he stood to clean vat. Haidt v. Swift & Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 388. Employe held not negligent in coming in contact with unguarded electric fan. Fouts v. Swift & Co. [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 167. Evidence held sufficient to show brakeman, struck and killed by overhead bridge the first time he went over the line, was exercising due care, though there was no direct evidence to show his conduct at the time. Miller v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 360. Employe, injured while repairing spinning frame which he knew did not have a belt shifter, the machine starting suddenly, was not negligent merely because he did not entirely remove the belt. Pressly v. Dover Yarn Mills [N. C.] 51 S. E. 69. An engineer after discovering that cattle are on the track, doing all that a man of ordinary prudence can do to avoid an accident, is not guilty of contributory negligence. Isley v. Wabash R. Co., 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 669. When engineer was injured in collision with cars on the main track, evidence held sufficient to show he was not negligent in ascertaining the place where he was to stop. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Vanlandingham [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 847. Brakeman held not to have knowledge of defect in brake rod and not to have been negligent in using it to set brakes. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 21. Employe injured by negligent operation of pile driver. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Huyett [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 124, 89 S. W. 1118. Employe held not negligent as matter of law in crossing track in yards without stopping to look and listen when no bell was rung. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863. Brakeman not negligent in using handhold on manhole of engine tender which gave way and caused him to fall under tender. Wood's Adm'x v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 371.

21. Contributory negligence held a question for the jury: Whether employe was guilty of negligence in using pneumatic riveting tool, after he had told foreman it was out of repair, and foreman had promised to repair it and later told him it had been repaired. Hayward v. Key [C. C. A.] 138 F. 34. Operator of boring machine injured by bit. Buehner Chair Co. v. Feulner [Ind.] 73 N. E. 816. Boy of 14 injured by being caught between elevator and floor where an entrance left an open space. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Trcka, 218 Ill. 559, 75 N. E. 1053. Where a railroad company carried its employes to and from work in one of its trains, it was not negligence per se on the part of an employe to go on top of the car, with others, the car being overcrowded, Whether he was justified in so doing being for the jury. Chicago Terminal Transfer Co. v. O'Donnell, 213 Ill. 545, 72 N. E. 1133. The mere fact that telltales were hung to give warning that a viaduct was being approached was not a bar to a recovery for the servant's death by being struck by the viaduct, whether deceased knew of the viaduct being a disputed question. Id. Whether molder's helper, who had not had much experience, was negligent while making repairs on a crane. Leighton & H. Steel Co. v. Snell, 217 Ill. 152, 75 N. E. 462. Miner injured while leaving cage at bottom of shaft. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni, 215 Ill. 583, 74 N. E. 751. Car repairer struck by switch engine in yards. Hughes v. Iowa Cent. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 339. Boy of 16 injured while operating rounding circumstances,[22] the respective duties of the master and servant,[23] and the unguarded saw. Woolf v. Nauman Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 785. Roundhouse employe caught in switch frog and injured by wheel. Schroeder v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. Whether servant, told to use a stick to clean rollers, was negligent in using one too thick to go between the rollers. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 434. Boy driving hogs up chute got whip caught on revolving shaft overhead. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 721. Section hand who stood sidewise on car owing to its crowded condition and lost his balance as he turned his head, not negligent as matter of law. Foster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa, 84, 102 N. W. 422. Weaver struck by shuttle flying off, guard on loom being defective. Chambers v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 1093. Brakeman injured while attempting to cut off car with defective coupler. Taylor v. Boston & M. R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 591. Whether deceased was guilty of contributory negligence in use of car step while switching cars. Smith v. Thomson-Houston Elec. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 664. Injury to employe cleaning exposed gears of frame. Fountaine v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 738. Where plaintiff was injured by iron bar rolling off truck in the course of work being done under direction of a superintendent. Meagher v. Crawford Laundry Mach. Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 853. Employe riding on top of a house car on his way from work, the roadmaster consenting to his being there to watch the tools, was not guilty of negligence as a matter of law, so as to prevent a recovery for injuries caused by a collision on a spur track. Milbourne v. Arnold Elec. Power & Station Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 177, 103 N. W. 821. Whether boy of 16 was negligent in operation of saw, the adjustment of which had been changed. Johnson v. Crookston Lumber Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 891. Whether brakeman was negligent in going between cars to uncouple them, the coupler being defective, but rules prohibiting going between cars. Turrittin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 225. Plaintiff injured while putting belt on pulley, using his foot to save himself from injury. Dolson v. Dunham [Minn.] 104 N. W. 964. Brakeman injured by board having been left on top of car. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. Where miner walking home fell into unguarded ditch near the track. Hebert v. Interstate Iron Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 451. Boy of 17 injured while operating elevator, which had defective cable and gearing, the boy having followed method of former operators. Zongker v. People's Union Mercantile Co., 110 Mo. App. 382, 86 S. W. 486. Bridge builder fell from scaffold where iron instead of wooden beams were used. Shore v. American Bridge Co. [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 905. Section hand knew of defect in car gearing a week before he was injured. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. Miner, injured by fall of mine roof, had knocked out a prop the day he was hurt. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. App. 260, 87 S. W. 506. Employe injured in trying to pull a stick out of an unguarded pulley, the stick knocking his hand on a saw. Stafford v. Adams [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 1130. Whether brakeman, coupling moving cars, should have known of another car with which they collided. Kennedy v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. [Mo.] 89 S. W. 370. Plaintiff was injured by fall of platform which he knew had been built by a servant known to him to be incompetent, he having failed to inspect or test the structure. Adams v. McCormick Harvesting Co., 110 Mo. App. 367, 86 S. W. 484. Where servant was injured in switching operation. Holmes v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 103 N. W. 77. Experienced lineman killed by breaking of insulation on wire he was fastening. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Elec. Light Co. v. Dent [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1091. Employe at work in ditch killed by cave-in. Overbaugh v. Wieber, 94 N. Y. S. 644. Plaintiff injured, while under engine to clean ash pan, by another servant starting the engine. Lane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 988. Whether railroad employe could have seen a defect in a trestle plank on which he stepped in time to avoid injury. Wazenski v. New York, etc., R. Co., 180 N. Y. 466, 73 N. E. 229. Brakeman struck by engine while walking between tracks. Loomis v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 182 N. Y. 380, 75 N. E. 228. Whether deceased exercised due care in crossing track in shop where he was killed by train. Hickey v. Solid Steel Casting Co., 212 Pa. 255, 61 A. 798. Where ignorant girl was injured in mangle the first time she used that particular machine. Bartholomew v. Kemmerer, 211 Pa. 277, 60 A. 908. Inexperienced, uninstructed operator of planer had fingers cut off while working on cross grained timber. Texarkana Table & Furniture Co. v. Webb [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 782. Plaintiff's fingers injured while assisting foreman in fitting driving rod of engine to cross head. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Vestal [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 790. Car inspector caught between cars. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Phillips [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 2, 87 S. W. 187. Elevator operator hurt by getting arm between bar on cage and block through which cable ran. Peck v. Peck [Tex.] 87 S. W. 248. Whether bell of switch engine was rung, and whether engine wiper, struck by cars, heard, or ought to have heard, it. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 34, 87 S. W. 371. Whether switchman who claimed his foreman had promised to keep a lookout was negligent in failing to keep a lookout or give signals himself. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401. Whether brakeman was negligent in attempting to mount a car in the way he did. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Vizard [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 443, 88 S. W. 457. Brakeman injured while coupling cars. Southern Const. Co. v. Hinkle [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 309. Brakeman, piloting engine through yards on dark night injured by collision with cars. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Purdy [Tex.] 86 S. W. 321. Employe killed by explosion of throttle valve of steam engine. Johnston's Adm'r v. Moore Lime Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 360. Whether employe was negligent in assisting to move cars to place age, experience, and capacity of the servant,[24] are to be considered. Mere knowledge of a defective condition does not charge a servant with negligence as a matter of law,[25] unless the danger was obvious and imminent.[26]

Choice of methods.[27]—Needless exposure to danger is negligence;[28] hence, a of safety, the train having been stopped by a landslide. Fisher's Adm'r v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 373. Where it was customary in yards of a furnace to leave a switch open while making a trip with slag down a track, whether decedent and his fellow-servant were negligent in doing so on the occasion in question was for the jury. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Lore [Va.] 51 S. E. 371. Engineer killed in collision. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Spencer's Adm'x [Va.] 52 S. E. 310. Common laborer in mill got hand caught in unprotected cog wheels. Hansen v. Seattle Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 102. Employe injured while loading logs on cars because of alleged defective loading appliance. Hart v. Cascade Timber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 738. Where lineman spliced electric wire without informing superintendent, who was testing dynamo. Williams v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 124 Wis. 328, 102 N. W. 589.

22. Surrounding circumstances and instinct of self preservation must be considered. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Otstot, 113 Ill. App. 37.

23. Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Ill. App. 463. Where it was foreman's duty to keep cleats on gangway, there could be no recovery for his death where he slipped on defective cleats. Baker v. Empire Wire Co., 102 App. Div. 125, 92 N. Y. S. 355. If death of miner was caused by his failure to prop the mine, as his duty and instructions of his boss demanded, his representative could not recover. Straight Creek Coal Co. v. Haney's Adm'r, 27 Ky. L. R. 1117, 87 S. W. 1114. In action for injuries in street car collision, whether servants were negligent in failing to report violation of general orders, or in relying on special order, for jury. Nagle v. Boston & N. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 73 N. E. 1019. Under Laws 1902, p. 1750, c. 600, § 3, failure of an operator of a machine to inform the employer of a defect does not bar recovery, if the superintendent knew of the defect. Keating v. Coon, 102 App. Div. 112, 92 N. Y. S. 474. Employe in laundry, with supervisory power over girls working at machine with her held not chargeable with care of machine, hence, she could recover for an injury caused by slipping on a defective plank on which she was obliged to stand. Busch v. Robinson [Or.] 81 P. 237.

24. Boy must use care required of a reasonably prudent person of his age, judgment, and experience. Kirkham v. Wheeler-Osgood Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 869. Care required of boy of 17 is that ordinarily exercised by persons of the same age, experience, and intelligence. Mundhenke v. Oregon City Mfg. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 977. Boy only chargeable with degree of care ordinarily exercised by boys of his age, experience, and capacity. Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. v. Moran, 110 Ill. App. 664. There is a prima facie presumption that a child under 14 cannot be guilty of contributory negligence. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. Jury should be charged, in action for injuries to a boy, that his age and appearance should be considered on the issue of contributory negligence, and whether he had been sufficiently instructed. Keating v. Coon, 102 App. Div. 112, 92 N. Y. S. 474. Instruction that plaintiff, 20 years of age, was bound to use that degree of care ordinarily used by men of his "age and experience" held proper. Stanley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 112. Where plaintiff had not been instructed as to the use of a machine, and was young and inexperienced, and was injured by placing his hand too near the rollers of a dangerous machine, he was not guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law, though a proper use of his eyesight and judgment would have shown him the danger. Flickner v. Lambert [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 263.

25. If servant is justified in believing he can continue and avoid injury by due care, he is not negligent. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12. One who works with a defective appliance is not necessarily negligent in so doing. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857. Elevator boy who knew elevator was not running right, but did not know nature of defect or danger, was not negligent as a matter of law in operating it. Moylon v. McDonald Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 929. Whether employer who stepped through a hole in the floor of which she had notice, though it had been there only two days, was negligent, was for jury. Day v. Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co. [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 903. Employe in sawmill was directed to clear away debris, the accumulation of which was caused by the breaking down of a machine, and in so doing got his foot caught in cogs, partially covered by the debris. Whether he was guilty of contributory negligence was a question of fact, though he knew the cogs were there, since forgetfulness of the fact might be excusable under the circumstances. Viohl v. North Pac. Lumber Co. [Or.] 80 P. 112.

26. To continue in an employment in the face of obvious or imminent danger is negligence. Shepherd v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 362, 87 S. W. 1007; Blundell v. Miller Elevator Mfg. Co., 189 Mo. 552, 88 S. W. 103.

27. See 4 C. L. 581.

28. Employe who unnecessarily got off an engine in the dark to get sand, which was not required, and fell with his hand on the track so that the engine ran over it, could not recover. Walker v. Louis-Werner Sawmill Co. [Ark.] 88 S. W. 988. Servant who put his hand under a stone, which was being unloaded from a car with a crane, held negligent. Culver Const. Co. v. McCormack, 114 Ill. App. 655. Employe working in yards, who was struck by a train on a track upon which he voluntarily stepped, could not recover. Fore v. Chicago & A. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 89 S. W. 1034. Servant familiar with machine held negligent in attempting, unnecessarily, to repair a machine while in voluntary choice of an obviously dangerous way of doing work, when a reasonably safe way is available, is negligence,[29] though other servants adopt the same method.[30] But choice of a customary method is not ordinarily negligence.[31] Choice of a certain method is not negligence if the servant does not know of a safer method,[32] or if the one chosen is made dangerous by negligence of a superior.[33]

Reliance on master's care.[34]—A servant is not negligent in relying upon the presumption that the master has performed his duties with respect to the place of work and appliances[35] unless he has actual or implied knowledge to the contrary.[36] He motion. Corley v. Paducah Cooperage Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 512. No recovery for death of member of steam shovel crew when it was not shown that it was necessary for him to be at the place where he was when killed. Baker's Adm'r v. Lexington & E. R. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 149. No recovery where danger from contact with revolving fan was obvious and plaintiff got closer to it than necessary. Electrical Installation Co. v. Kelly, 110 Ill. App. 334. Employe who without necessity and carelessly stepped on a wheel just as engine started could not recover. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Kelley [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 60, 87 S. W. 660. Repairman held negligent in putting his hand between piston and cylinder, being caught by the machine suddenly starting. Dickey v. Dickey [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 909. Servant who voluntarily undertook to put belt on moving shaft, though he was warned by fellow-servants, and lost an arm, could not recover. Johnson v. Bridgeport Deoxidized Bronze & Metal Co., 135 F. 216.

29. Covington v. Smith Furniture Co., 138 N. C. 374, 50 S. E. 761. Selection of unsafe method when safe way is open, under no direction from employer, is negligence. Leard v. International Paper Co. [Me.] 60 A. 700. Plaintiff was negligent in voluntarily adopting a new method of work which was dangerous. Mullins v. Manhattan Brass Co., 93 N. Y. S. 635. Where dining car conductor had car pushed by an engine to a junction, when he might have placed the engine ahead, he could not recover for injuries received in a collision. Southern R. Co. v. Logan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 725. Where employe chose dangerous way to fix a belt when he could have done it safely, he was negligent. Stratton v. Nichols Lumber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 831. Employe who attempted to clean out sawdust receptacle while saw was in motion, though saw could have been stopped, could not recover for resulting injury. Beltz v. American Mill Co., 37 Wash. 399, 79 P. 981. Workman employed by contractor on steamship attempted to use a ladder, which had been temporarily used and left hanging on ship's side, instead of going on board by gangway as he was told to do. The Patria, 135 F. 255. No recovery where servant took dangerous path between machines obstructed with boxes, and continued after lights went out. Carbury v. Eastern Nut & Bolt Co. [R. I.] 60 A. 773. Plaintiff properly nonsuited where she put her hand into a dangerous machine to clean it while in motion though she knew that to do so was dangerous, and had formerly cleaned it when not in motion. Owens v. Thomas Kent Mfg. Co., 211 Pa. 406, 60 A. 987. Employe held negligent in attempting to change the adjustment of a saw without stopping it, where the circumstances were such that he knew or ought to have known of the danger. Hubler v. Johnson-McLain Co. [Neb.] 105 N. W. 247. Where miner used steel drill instead of customary gas pipe with wooden plug to pack powder, he could not recover for injuries caused by explosion, resulting from a spark being struck off by the drill on rock. Whaley v. Coleman [Mo. App.] 88 S. W. 119. Machinist who chose a dangerous way to test rollers when he could have made the test in a safe manner could not recover for an injury to his fingers by being caught in the rollers. Carey v. Samuels & Co. [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1052. Where employe rode on engine pilot instead of on cars, as he might have done, he could not recover for injuries sustained while getting off before the train stopped. Burns v. Chronister Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 163. Brakeman who sat on engine tender floor and let his legs hang between that and next car, though directed to sit in cab, could not recover for injury resulting. Demko v. Carbon Hill Coal Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 162. No recovery by employe being carried on flat car who hung legs over car and shifted them so he was struck by cattle guard, which was of safe construction. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schiavone, 216 Ill. 275, 74 N. E. 1048. Where plaintiff was struck and injured by a cross rail on an ore car, while walking along track on a path which a rule of the company prohibited use of, there being three other exits which he could have used, and the one chosen being obviously dangerous, he could not recover. Tkac v. Maryland Steel Co. [Md.] 60 A. 618.

30. The fact that a servant adopts an unsafe method of doing work, in conjunction with other servants, does not relieve him from responsibility. Leard v. International Paper Co. [Me.] 60 A. 700.

31. Miner not negligent in using cage in the usual way to go to his work. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Buzis, 115 Ill. App. 196, Foundry employe who fell into a hole in a pathway while carrying molten metal in a foundry was not negligent in walking backwards, that being the customary manner of doing the work. San Antonio Foundry Co. v. Drish [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 440.

32. Plaintiff not negligent in making a coupling in a certain way when he did not know of another safer way. Denison & P. S. R. Co. v. Binkley [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 386.

33. Rule does not apply where method chosen is rendered dangerous by a foreman's negligence. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Vestal [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 790.

34. See 4 C. L. 582.

35. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill.

may also rely upon an assurance of safety by a superior,[37] and may assume that execution of an order given by a superior will not expose him to any unusual danger,[38] unless he has knowledge of the danger involved, and such known danger is one which an ordinarily prudent person would not encounter under the same circumstances.[39]

App. 280. In the absence of obvious and patent defects, a servant may use a scaffold supplied by the master without first inspecting it. Illinois Terra Cotta Lumber Co. v. Hanley, 116 Ill. App. 359. Employe not negligent in using ladder one rung of which was bent, since he was justified in relying on master's care. Carroll v. Metropolitan Coal Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 84. Employe, who leaned on a plank on a gravel car without looking to see whether both ends were in the forks of the standards, was not negligent as a matter of law. Brimer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 109 Mo. App. 493, 85 S. W. 653. Switchman not negligent as matter of law when he was struck by a train which he supposed would slow down on approaching him according to the usual custom. Graham v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 714. Plaintiff bad right to rely on reasonable safety of platform used in repairing scow, and was not negligent in using it. Madden v. Hughes, 93 N. Y. S. 324. Boilermaker, killed by falling casting, was not negligent where foreman had observed preliminary work and did not warn him of danger. Faith v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 222, 95 N. Y. S. 774. No negligence on part of servant in failing to take precautions against a defective shaft, the condition of which he did not know. Smith v. Minden Lumber Co., 114 La. 1035, 38 So. 821. Plaintiff held not negligent in using scaffold, the defects not being obvious. Neves v. Green [Mo. App.] 86 S. W. 508. Where folding machine had been repaired on employe's complaint, she was not negligent in supposing it would not start of itself, and in acting on that theory. O'Neil v. Ginn [Mass.] 74 N. E. 668. Clerk who leaned into elevator shaft in answer to employer's call, and to get instructions from him, it being customary to talk through the shaft, was justified in assuming that the elevator would not be moved upon her. Guthrie v. Carney, 27 Ky. L. R. 861, 86 S. W. 1126. Where a workman, in the discharge of his duty has placed himself in a position of probable danger, and where he has a right to expect a warning before the danger becomes actual, and he is injured because no warning is given, whether he was negligent cannot be decided against him by the court. D'Agostino v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1113. Failure to observe the gradual wearing out of a belt and a tendency to slip off its pulley, the defect not having become obvious, was not contributory negligence. Petrarca v. Quidnick Mfg. Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 648. Brakeman who fell between cars which were suddenly separated was not negligent in assuming that a rule requiring cars to be coupled when left on sidings had been observed, and the cars looked as though they were coupled. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Pope [Tex.] 86 S. W. 5.

36. Plaintiff who had knowledge of another servant's incompetency had no right to rely on a presumption that platforms set up by such servant were properly built. Adams v. McCormick Harvesting Co., 110 Mo. App. 367, 86 S. W. 484. Employe who fell through unguarded hoisting shaft in building in course of construction cannot be held guilty of negligence as a matter of law, merely because his duties had caused him to visit different floors of the building for several days. Rooney v. Brogan Const. Co., 107 App. Div. 258, 95 N. Y. S. 1.

37. Servant may believe statement of boss that place of work is safe. Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. v. Moran, 110 Ill. App. 664. Where superintendent in charge ordered building to be let down from jack screws on a pier, and assured the servant so ordered that the pier was safe, the servant was not negligent in doing as he was told. Nugent v. Cudahy Packing Co., 126 Iowa, 517, 108 N. W. 442. Where a hole was loaded during a quarry employe's absence, and on his return he asked the superintendent if it was loaded, and was told it was not, the employe was not negligent in drilling in the hole, since he had a right to rely on the superintendent's assurance. Lane Bros. & Co. v. Bott [Va.] 52 S. E. 258. Fireman held not negligent in using step on cab which engineer had said he would have fixed. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Garren [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1096.

38. Brakeman not negligent in obeying order to catch car while switching where a collision with another car resulted. Struble v. Burlington, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 142. Evidence sustained finding of no contributory negligence where employe was obeying foreman's orders. Barrett v. Reardon [Minn.] 104 N. W. 309. Engineer directed by foreman to clean appliance for handling hot pitch, was justified in relying on presumption that it was safe for him to proceed as directed. Motzing v. Excelsior Brewing Co., 94 N. Y. S. 1118. Member of construction crew held not negligent in going between cars to couple air hose without notice to train crew of his position, when he acted under orders of a foreman of the crew. Sorenson v. Oregon Power Co. [Or.] 82 P. 10. To recover for alleged negligence in ordering plaintiff into a place of danger, plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of evidence that he was acting under orders which he was bound to obey, that his superior knew of the danger and that he did not, and that he was exercising due care. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Hill, 112 Ill. App. 475.

39. Perry-Matthews-Buskirk Stone Co. v. Speer [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 933. Where employe was assured by superintendent that his assistant was competent and relied thereon, he was not negligent in remaining at work unless the incompetency of the servant and the danger therefrom were such that an ordinarily prudent man would not have continued. Bell-Coggeshall Co. v. Lewis [Ky.] 89 S. W. 135. Employe who, at foreman's suggestion, put his hand in a box wherein he knew a screw with sharp blades was revolving, knowing also that his hand was liable to be pushed against the knives

Disobedience of orders or rules.[40]—Disobedience or nonobservance of orders, instructions, or warnings,[41] or reasonable,[42] existing[43] rules,[44] is ordinarily held negligence and will defeat a recovery if an injury resulted proximately therefrom.[45]

Emergencies.[46]—One exposed to sudden and unexpected danger, caused by negligence of the master, is not responsible for an error of judgment in attempting to escape.[47] Whether one exposed to such danger used due care is a question of fact.[48]

by cement falling through the chute, was negligent. Vaughn v. Glens Falls Portland Cement Co., 93 N. Y. S. 979. Where an employe complained that an appliance was defective and the superintendent informed him it was safe, whether he was negligent in using it was for the jury. Keys v. Winnsboro Granite Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 549. Where servant objected to going on stone pile because he thought it unsafe, and foreman told him to go on and get stone, and workman did so and was injured, whether he was guilty of contributory negligence in continuing to work was for the jury. Schiglizzo v. Dunn, 211 Pa. 253, 60 A. 724. Where servant complained of defective roller, and after a promise to repair it was made to him, worked 10 days before he was injured, his negligence was for the jury. Shalgren v. Red Cliff Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 531. Whether operator of machine was negligent in working after he knew treadle was defective, but had told foreman about it and had adopted expedient to lessen danger, was for jury. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010.

40. See 4 C. L. 583.

41. Where servant failed to follow warning and instruction in blasting in slate quarry, he was guilty of negligence and could not recover. Erickson v. Monson Consol. Slate Co. [Me.] 60 A. 708. Girl who wore hair in long braid, contrary to warning notices posted in factory, could not recover for injury by being caught by hair in a machine. Daniels v. New England Cotton Yarn Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 332. Plaintiff could not recover for alleged negligence, consisting in improper instruction on operation of machine, where the evidence showed that the accident must have occurred because he failed to follow the instructions given. Thayer v. Utica Knitting Co. [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 577.

42. A rule pursuant to R. S. 1901, 1219, § 31, making it unlawful for miners to violate rules, must be reasonable. Junction Min. Co. v. Ench, 111 Ill. App. 346. A rule that miners should never leave their place of work is unreasonable. Id. Leaving the place of work on account of sickness is not a willful violation. Id.

43. Where evidence tended to show that rules designed for protection of car repairers had been habitually disregarded, whether deceased was guilty of contributory negligence in failing to display a signal on cars he was working on, was for jury. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 85.

44. Disobedience of rules of the employer resulting in the injury is generally held to constitute contributory negligence. Turrittin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 225; Biles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 129. If employe injured by fall of elevator was using it at the time contrary to orders, he could not recover. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562. In action for death of engineer caused by washout, whether he had been negligent in that he failed to take precautions required by rules in case of heavy rains was for the jury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Where car repairer was at work under a car without having displayed a blue signal as required by a rule of the company in such case, there could be no recovery for his death resulting, while he was so engaged, from the car being pushed by others which were being switched. Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Elliott [C. C. A.] 137 F. 904. When conductor in charge of train which became stalled on a grade failed to comply with rule requiring him to send back a flagman, he was guilty of negligence and there could be no recovery for his death resulting from a collision. Burris v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 717.

45. A warning not to dig ore at a particular place in the pile will not prevent recovery for injury from falling of a crust, when the employe was assisting in moving a barrow of ore along a track at a different point. Illinois Steel Co. v. Olste, 214 Ill. 181, 73 N. E. 422. Where engineer of work train took water on the main track on the time of a passenger train, in violation of rules, he was not negligent, since he gave notice by sending out a flagman with a torpedo and turning the switch light. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Stith's Adm'x, 27 Ky. L. R. 596, 85 S. W. 1173.

46. See 4 C. L. 583.

47. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566. Where one is placed in a place of danger through the master's negligence, he is not chargeable with contributory negligence in placing himself in a more dangerous position in an endeavor to escape. Junction Min. Co. v. Ench, 111 Ill. App. 346. Plaintiff held not negligent where, to avert a threatened collision, he attempted to reverse his cars according to his foreman's orders, and then jumped across another track, where he was struck by another train. Western & A. R. Co. v. Bryant [Ga.] 51 S. E. 20. Where a workman in a tunnel was placed in a dangerous place by the master's negligence, the fact that he jumped the wrong way in an effort to escape a falling rock did not show contributory negligence as a matter of law. McRae v. Erickson [Cal. App.] 82 P. 209. Employe not negligent as a matter of law where, knowing that a telephone pole was about to fall, and hearing a warning by his foreman, jumped away and was injured, though he would not have been injured had he remained where he was. Sandquist v. Independent Telephone Co., 38 Wash. 313, 80 P. 539. Where the injury complained of is the result of an effort to escape a sudden and impending danger, result-

Discovery of servant's peril; intervening negligence.[49]—Though a servant has been guilty of negligence in placing himself in a position of peril, the master will be liable for an injury resulting from a want of ordinary care to avoid injury to him.[50] The doctrine of discovered peril has no application where the person causing the injury has no actual knowledge of the peril of the person injured in time to prevent the injury by means within his reach.[51]

(§ 3) H. Actions. 1. In general.[52]—Only questions of procedure peculiar to actions to recover for personal injuries to servants are here treated. The general principles which govern procedure in all actions of this nature are elsewhere discussed.[53]

Notice of the action is required under some statutes.[54]

(§ 3H) 2. Parties.—The law as to parties to the action is the same as that applicable to other actions and need not be here stated.[55]

(§ 3H) 3. Pleading and issues. The complaint or petition[56] must show the existence of the relation of master and servant,[57] and the existence and breach of a duty owed by the master to the servant at the time of the injury alleged.[58] A mere

ing from negligence of the master, the fact that the person injured might have escaped by pursuing some other available course is not alone proof of contributory negligence. Dolson v. Dunham [Minn.] 104 N. W. 964. The fact that a brakeman might have used a safer method of coupling cars than he did use did not make him negligent as a matter of law, where he was acting in an emergency which he had not anticipated. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Walters, 217 Ill. 87, 75 N. E. 441.

48. Whether one exposed to sudden danger exercised that degree of care that a prudent and reasonable man would exercise under like circumstances. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566. The degree of care required depends upon circumstances. Lee v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 87 S. W. 12.

49. See 4 C. L. 584.

50. Master liable if he knew or ought to have known of servant's peril and negligently injured him. Dean v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 38 Wash. 565, 80 P. 842. Evidence held insufficient to show wanton negligence of engineer and firemen on switch engine after discovering brakeman's dangerous position, and hence an instruction on that theory was error. McGillis v. Duluth & N. M. R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 231.

51. Cardwell v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 458, 88 S. W. 422. Though a locomotive engineer knew the conductor was riding on the pilot of the engine, he was not bound to anticipate an injury by his falling off while the train was being operated in the usual way, since he had the right to assume that the conductor knew the danger of his position and would act accordingly. Cardwell v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 458, 88 S. W. 422. Where employe voluntarily rode on engine pilot and was injured in getting off, the mere fact that the engineer saw him getting off and then tried to stop the train did not raise the issue of discovered peril. Burns v. Chronister Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 163. Whether engineer of standing train could have moved it so as to prevent a collision, after notice of the coming of another train, was for jury. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Spencer's Adm'x [Va.] 52 S. E. 310. No recovery on theory of negligence after discovery of peril where brakeman, off duty at night, tried to board switch engine coming toward him. Wise Terminal Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 51 S. E. 731.

52. See 4 C. L. 584.

53. See Damages, 5 C. L. 904; Evidence, 5 C. L. 1301; Parties, 4 C. L. 888; Pleading, 4 C. L. 980; Instructions, 6 C. L. 43; Trial, 4 C. L. 1708; Verdicts and Findings, 4 C. L. 1803; Venue and Place of Trial, 4 C. L. 1797; etc.

54. No notice of action for wrongful death, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1902, is required, and though a complaint under that act alleges the giving of the notice required by the employer's liability act, proof of such notice is not required to warrant a recovery. Holm v. Empire Hardware Co., 102 App. Div. 505, 92 N. Y. S. 914. Notice by administratrix of deceased employe, more than 60 days after her appointment, is insufficient under Laws 1902, p. 1748, c. 600, § 2. Id. Notice of injury held insufficient where the first name of the person injured was incorrect, and the notice stated that the alleged defective machine was "all out of plumb" of which there was no proof, and no attempt was made to prove that defendant was not misled by the notice. Hughes v. Russell, 93 N. Y. S. 307. Notice held insufficient because not showing with certainty the place and cause of injury. Miller v. Salvay Process Co., 109 App. Div. 135, 95 N. Y. S. 1020.

55. See Parties, 4 C. L. 888; Death by Wrongful Act, 5 C. L. 945.

56. See 4 C. L. 585; also Pleading, 4 C. L. 980.

57. Allegation that plaintiff was employed as boss or foreman sufficiently alleged the nature of the employment. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566.

58. Complaint held not to show a breach of duty by one of two defendants sued. Jones v. Klawiter, 110 Ill. App. 31. Complaint which failed to allege existence of relation of master and servant, or facts showing that defendant owed plaintiff any allegation of duty is insufficient. Facts showing a duty to exist must be pleaded.[59] Allegations of negligence must be sufficiently certain and specific to inform the defendant of the nature of plaintiff's claim,[60] though a general averment of negligence is sufficient, on demurrer, if the facts alleged disclose a legal duty and a violation thereof.[61] Knowledge of a defective or dangerous condition by the master must be made to appear.[62] A complaint is demurrable if it shows on its face that duty held insufficient. Walton v. Lindsay Lumber Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 670. Complaint insufficient to charge breach of duty to warn and instruct, when it merely alleged that plaintiff was 14 years of age, and failed to allege facts showing he was ignorant or inexperienced. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277. Complaint demurrable because not showing that plaintiff was required by his duties to be near a pile of wares which fell on him. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. v. Cissne [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 282. In action for injury to pressman, complaint held to show that plaintiff's duties while trying to discover defect required him to be in a pit under the press where he was when injured. Newport News Pub. Co. v. Beaumeister [Va.] 52 S. E. 627. Complaint alleging use of defective and rotten rope sling for loading lumber into vessel, held to state a breach of duty by defendant, though it also erroneously alleged that defendant owed plaintiff the duty of furnishing the best and safest slings available. Henne v. Steeb Shipping Co., 37 Wash. 331, 79 P. 938.

59. Allegations sufficient, after verdict, to show relation of master and servant existed. Sargent Co. v. Baublis, 215 Ill. 428, 74 N. E. 455. It need not be alleged that a certain act or line of conduct was a duty imposed on the master by law. The legal duty is implied if the required facts are stated. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91.

60. In an action based on an injury to plaintiff's hand, caught in rollers of a machine, complaint held to sufficiently allege the respect in which the machine was defective, in what particulars defendant had failed to exercise reasonable care in putting plaintiff to work upon it (failure to instruct), and that negligence alleged caused the injury. Anderson v. U. S. Rubber Co. [Conn.] 60 A. 1057. An allegation that in making a coupling the engine ran from 10 to 15 miles an hour, and just before hitting the cab stopped abruptly, causing plaintiff to fall and to receive his injury, stated a cause of injury as against a general demurrer. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hairston [Ga.] 50 S. E. 120. Complaint charging negligence in failure to properly support mine roof, held sufficiently definite and certain. Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818. Complaint held sufficient to charge defendant with negligence in using a defective guy on a derrick, which caused a stone to be rolled from a dump car on to decedent, who was pushing the car. Consolidated Stone Co. v. Staggs [Ind.] 73 N. E. 695. Complaint alleging inexperience and ignorance of danger, and that servant was assured of safety by the master, and was injured in consequence of the master's negligence, held sufficient. Fletcher Bros. Co. v. Hyde [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 9. Complaint alleging negligence in leaving switch open, resulting in engineer's death, held sufficiently specific as to defects charged. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Snow, [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 908. In action based on injuries from defective machinery, complaint held, after verdict, to sufficiently allege the nature of the defect. Sargent Co. v. Baublis, 215 Ill. 428, 74 N. E. 455. A charge that a bolt was not inspected does not alone charge negligence, when it is not alleged that the bolt was defective. Furber v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co., 185 Mo. 301, 84 S. W. 890. Petition for injuries to brakeman not defective for failure to give name of conductor or number or description of car. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Powell [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 21. A declaration setting up several acts of negligence, and alleging that each was the proximate cause of the injury, is not demurrable, but defendant may, under Va. Code 1904, § 3249, have the declaration made more specific. Pocahontas Collieries Co. v. Rukas' Adm'r [Va.] 51 S. E. 449. Complaint alleging that a saw was defective, that plaintiff complained and defendant promised to repair it, and that plaintiff was thereafter injured before repairs were made, held to allege negligence with sufficient certainty. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991. Complaint charging negligence in the employment and retention of an incompetent engineer, and setting up two prior occasions when he had been negligent, held sufficient against demurrer. Conover v. Neher-Ross Co., 38 Wash. 172, 80 P. 281.

61. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91. General allegation of negligence is sufficient to withstand demurrer for want of facts. Remedy is by motion to make more specific, if more facts are desired. Nickey v. Steuder [Ind.] 73 N. E. 117.

62. When a recovery is sought for alleged negligence in providing a safe place, knowledge of the defect by the master must be alleged. Acme Bedford Stone Co. v. McPhetridge [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 838. Complaint based on failure to repair held insufficient, because not directly alleging that master had notice of the defect, nor setting up necessary facts to show constructive notice. Malott v. Sample [Ind.] 74 N. E. 245. Where the action is based on a defective appliance, knowledge of the defect by the master must be alleged. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010. Complaint in action for injuries to telephone lineman, who fell from cross arm of pole, which alleged that he carefully examined the cross arm and discovered no defect, the cross arm being painted, but which did not allege that defendant knew of the defect but only that it ought to have known it, was insufficient. Southern Bell Telep. & Tel. Co. v. Starnes [Ga.] 50 S. E. 343.

Contra: Where the declaration alleges in-the servant assumed the risk[63] or was guilty of contributory negligence,[64] or that the act of a fellow-servant caused the injury.[65] There is a conflict as to the necessity of positive averments of want of contributory negligence[66] and nonassumption of risk. Thus, in some states, an allegation by plaintiff of want of knowledge of a defect causing the injury is unnecessary;[67] in others, such an allegation is essential.[68] A general allegation of lack of knowledge by plaintiff includes constructive as well as actual notice.[69] An allegation that plaintiff was ignorant of the danger is unavailing, where the facts alleged show that he must have known the danger.[70] It must appear from the pleading that the negligence alleged was the proximate cause of the injury.[71] An allegation that plaintiff was placed in a position of peril is sufficient without alleging the facts causing the peril.[72] jury by reason of the failure of the master to provide a safe place, it need not be alleged that the master knew the place of work was unsafe. Owens v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 115 Ill. App. 142.

63. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91. A complaint which alleged that plaintiff had no knowledge or opportunity of learning of the capacity of a hand car did not show as a matter of law that he assumed the risk of riding on a car on which ten men were riding. Anderson v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1021. Complaint alleging that a mangle operator was injured by reason of a defective plank on which she was required to stand, and which caused her to slip, and fall on the mangle, held not objectionable, after verdict, as showing an assumption of the risk. Busch v. Robinson [Or.] 81 P. 237.

64. Complaint alleging injury by fall of piece of iron because appliance used to handle it was insufficient, held not to disclose contributory negligence. Moseley v. Schofield Sons Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 309. Allegations of complaint sufficient to show brakeman, struck by cars while switching, was in the exercise of due care. Pope v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 331.

65. Complaint alleging an injury due to the wagon, in which plaintiff was riding at the direction of defendants, falling into an excavation left unguarded by defendants, held insufficient because not showing that the driver was not plaintiff's fellow-servant, nor that the driver did not know of the existence of the excavation. Marker v. Mishawaka [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 19.

66. Under a common-law count plaintiff must allege and prove freedom from contributory negligence. Junction Min. Co. v. Ench, 111 Ill. App. 346. Plaintiff need not allege want of contributory negligence. Newport News Pub. Co. v. Beaumeister [Va.] 52 S. E. 627.

67. In Missouri a plaintiff need not allege that the defect complained of was unknown to him. Adams v. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co., 110 Mo. App. 367, 86 S. W. 484.

68. Want of knowledge of defect in place must be alleged. Acme Bedford Stone Co. v. McPhetridge [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 838. Complaint not alleging ignorance of unsafe condition of switch tracks, held defective. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91. Ignorance of defects must be alleged in order to negative assumption of risk. Complaint held sufficient. Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818. An allegation that plaintiff believed a place would be safe is not equivalent to an allegation of want of knowledge of a defect. Acme Bedford Stone Co. v. McPhetridge [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 838. Complaint held sufficient to negative knowledge and assumption of risk of defective derrick and guy. Consolidated Stone Co. v. Staggs [Ind.] 73 N. E. 695. Where employe was struck by train as he was alighting from another, an allegation that deceased did not know the train which hit him was approaching was sufficient to negative knowledge of danger. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Clapp [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 267. Servant suing for injuries received while at work in a pit under the track must allege and prove want of knowledge of facts which rendered the place dangerous. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Bell, 111 Ill. App. 280. Plaintiff must allege and prove that he was not aware of the danger. Willie v. East Tennessee Coal Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 335, 84 S. W. 1166.

69. In action for injuries due to use of defective swivel used to tighten cable, allegation that plaintiff "had no knowledge whatever of said defects, cracks, or the old and worn condition of said swivel," held sufficient. George Doyle & Co. v. Hawkins, 34 Ind. App. 514, 73 N. E. 200. An allegation of want of knowledge of defective condition of mine roof held to negative not only actual but implied or constructive notice or knowledge of such condition. Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818.

70. Shaver v. Home Tel. Co. [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 288.

71. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277. Complaint must show causal connection by direct averment of facts. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. v. Cissne [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 282. Complaint which failed to show alleged defective condition was caused by defendant's negligence, held insufficient. Walton v. Lindsay Lumber Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 670. Complaint alleging in substance that a scaffold furnished was defective, that it collapsed while being used by plaintiff, he being in the exercise of due care, held sufficient after verdict, no demurrer being interposed, though it contained no specific averment that the scaffold collapsed because of its defective condition. Illinois Terre Cotta Lumber Co. v. Hanley, 214 Ill. 243, 73 N. 373. Complaint in action for death of mine watchman, who was shot and killed by convict miner, alleging negligence in that convict was allowed to carry a pistol and allowed to escape, held not to show negli-

Pleading statutory causes of action.[73]—A party who relies on a statutory cause of action must by positive and direct averments of facts show that the action falls within the particular statutory provision upon which he relies.[74] If from the general averments of a complaint it clearly appears that it counts upon a statute, it need not specifically refer thereto in order to state a cause of action thereunder.[75] If a complaint states both a statutory and common-law cause of action, plaintiff may recover upon either and cannot be compelled to elect before trial.[76] Where the statutory notice is alleged, but the cause of action stated is one at common law and not under the statute, the allegation of notice may be regarded as surplusage.[77] Other decisions as to pleadings in actions brought under statutes are treated in the note.[78]

The answer.[79]—The defenses of contributory negligence[80] and assumption of gence of defendant to be the proximate cause of death of watchman, an independent cause having intervened. Thomas v. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 715.

72. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566.

73. See 4 C. L. 589.

74. Complaint held not to show cause of action under any provision of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7083. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91. A party who seeks to maintain an action under a statute must state or allege specifically and fully every act requisite to bring his cause of action within the provisions of the statute on which he relies. No omission in this respect will be supplied by intendment. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277.

75. Complaint alleging negligence in failing to guard a ripsaw held to state a cause of action, under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, requiring machinery and appliances to be guarded, and not to be based on the common law. Nickey v. Dougan, 34 Ind. App. 601, 73 N. E. 288. Complaint alleging that machine was dangerous because knives were left unguarded, that it was practicable to guard them, and that defendant negligently failed to do so, and that such negligence caused plaintiff's injury, states cause of action under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, and not at common law. Huey Co. v. Johnston [Ind.] 73 N. E. 996.

76, 77. Kleps v. Bristol Mfg. Co., 107 App. Div. 488, 95 N. Y. S. 337.

78. Alabama: Complaint under Code 1896, § 1749, subsec. 5, defective because it did not allege that the person charged with negligence was in charge of an engine on a railroad. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Bridges [Ala.] 39 So. 902. Count held insufficient because not showing that engine was on any track. Id. A count drawn under the mines law (Code 1896, p. 555, c. 43) following substantially the language of the statute, and alleging that a mine roof was defective and that a part of it fell, as a proximate result of which plaintiff was injured while in a place where he had a right to be, is sufficient. Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Farrington [Ala.] 39 So. 898.

Indiana: A complaint alleging that a shaft was left unguarded does not charge negligence under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7081l, unless the necessity of guarding it in order to protect the workmen is shown. Robertson v. Ford [Ind.] 74 N. E. 1. A complaint under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, alleging a failure to guard an emery belt, held insufficient because not showing that such belt could be properly guarded without rendering it useless. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277. Complaint based on failure to guard ripsaw as required by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087i, need not allege that plaintiff did not know that saw was unguarded, or that he did not see and comprehend such danger as arose from its condition. Nickey v. Dougan, 34 Ind. App. 601, 73 N. E. 288. Pleading held to allege sufficiently that plaintiff was injured through negligence of a person in the service of defendant to whose orders to make certain repairs plaintiff was bound to, and did, conform, and to state cause of action under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7083, subd. 2. Acme Bedford Stone Co. v. McPhetridge [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 838. Complaint held to allege sufficiently that injury complained of was caused by negligence of a person in defendant's service, to whose order plaintiff was bound to and did conform, though it did not allege that such person knew of plaintiff's presence in the place where he was injured, such knowledge being implied from the giving of the order. Clear Creek Stone Co. v. Carmichael [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 935. Complaint insufficient under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7087b, prohibiting employment of children under 14, etc., which alleges that plaintiff was 14, but fails to allege that defendant did not keep a register or obtain an affidavit as required by the act. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sullender [Ind.] 75 N. E. 277.

Massachusetts: Complaint founded on Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 71, cl. 1, requiring ways, works and machinery to be kept in order, held not to charge negligence in allowing elevator gate to get out of repair. Hill v. Iver Johnson Sporting Goods Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 303. A count alleging negligence of a superintendent, under Rev. Laws, c. 106, § 71, cl. 2, is improperly joined with a count alleging a defect in ways, works, or machinery, under § 71, cl. 1. Hyde v. Booth [Mass.] 74 N. E. 337.

Wisconsin: Complaint held to state cause of action under Wisconsin fellow-servant statute, where injury to brakeman, who had fallen on the track while engaged in switching operations, was alleged to have been caused by foreman's negligence in failing to stop cars before they struck him. Pope v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 331.

79. See 4 C. L. 588.

risk[81] must be specially pleaded. A plea of contributory negligence may be sufficient though it does not expressly admit that defendant was negligent.[82] But such a plea is insufficient unless the facts claimed to constitute contributory negligence are set out.[83] A plea that the risk arising from a defect was assumed must allege that the servant was warned or that the danger was open and obvious.[84]

Issues, proof, and variance.[85]—Negligence must be proved as alleged.[86] There can be no recovery for negligence other than that alleged,[87] and proof of negligence not alleged is inadmissible.[88] If several acts of negligence are sufficiently al-

80. Laws 1887, p. 81, c. 33, requires defendant to plead and prove contributory negligence. Where there is no such plea, and a prima facie case of negligence of defendant, the case should go to the jury. Stewart v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R. Co., 137 N. C. 687, 50 S. E. 312. In an action for injuries alleged to have been caused by incompetency of a servant, the defense that plaintiff knew of such incompetency, and was negligent in remaining in the service in view of such knowledge, must be specially pleaded. Adams v. McCormick Harvesting Co., 110 Mo. App. 367, 86 S. W. 484.

81. Issue of assumption of risk held sufficiently raised by answer so that it was properly submitted to jury. Charping v. Toxaway Mills, 70 S. C. 470, 50 S. E. 186. A plea that plaintiff knew that unusual and heavy rains had rendered roadbed defective, so that it might become dangerous, notwithstanding defendant's care, and that plaintiff's injury was a risk which he voluntarily assumed, held sufficient to raise the issue of assumption of risk. Price v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 858.

82. Plea sufficient which alleged that servant negligently placed too great a weight on a certain crossbeam of a scaffold, since there was a sufficient implied admission of weakness of the crossbeam. Charping v. Toxaway Mills, 70 S. C. 470, 50 S. E. 186.

83. Plea of contributory negligence insufficient in action for death of engineer by running into washout. Western R. Co. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311.

84. Plea of assumption of risk insufficient in action for death of engineer by running into washout. Western R. Co. v. Russell [Ala.] 39 So. 311. Plea insufficient because not alleging that defect was known or obvious. Pierson Lumber Co. v. Hart [Ala.] 39 So. 566.

85. See 4 C. L. 588.

86. Where complaint charges defects in machinery and that defendant had notice thereof, proof that saws wobbled, without proof of knowledge thereof by defendant, is insufficient. Yates v. Huntsville Hoop & Heading Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 647. No recovery could be based on an allegation of failure to provide a safe place where the entire complaint showed that the injury was caused by a defective appliance. Moseley v. Schofield Sons Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 309. While injury in loading trucks is alleged and the proof shows injury in loading wheels of truck, the variance is not fatal. Roundtree v. Charleston & W. C. R. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 231. Complaint in action for injuries caused by fall of scaffold construed and held that gravamen of cause stated was not the partial driving of nails in a brace; hence, recovery possible, though that fact was not proved. Neves v. Green, 111 Mo. App. 634, 86 S. W. 508. Where it was alleged that a belt shifter was defective so that a machine started automatically, and thereby crushed plaintiff's hand, proof that there could have been no accident unless machine had been defective did not warrant recovery. McGinn v. U. S. Finishing Co. [R. I.] 60 A. 677. No recovery on ground of negligence in retaining incompetent servant, who started machinery while plaintiff was inside, where proof showed that such servant had been found asleep and was occasionally drowsy but it did not appear that he was in such condition when he started the machine. Burnos v. American Sugar Refining Co., 94 N. Y. S. 1104. Where a car repairer was injured by a runaway car on a switch track, and the petition charged negligence in leaving the car where it could start and in not having a derailing switch, and leaving the car in such condition that it could not be stopped when started, the proof was held sufficient, though the evidence showed the car had been started by employes and that it could not be stopped because timbers had been placed where they interfered with the brakes. Smith v. Fordyce, 190 Mo. 1, 88 S. W. 679.

87. Right of recovery should be restricted to the specific act of negligence pleaded. Gibson v. Midland Bridge Co., 112 Mo. App. 594, 87 S. W. 3. When the declaration is based on a breach of a common-law duty, there can be no recovery under a statute. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Robizas, 111 Ill. App. 49. Failure to make rules and regulations could not be relied on because not pleaded. Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1079. Where plaintiff charged that his injury was caused by a piece of the hammer he was using flying off and striking his eye, proof that his injury was so caused was essential to recovery. Proof that a chip from the boiler, rivet, or firebox struck him would not warrant recovery. Lachappelle v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 349. Where complaint charged negligence in failing to warn and instruct a young and inexperienced employe who was put to work on dangerous machine, want of repair not being alleged, there could be no recovery where the evidence showed that the machine was dangerous because out of repair. Chall v. Detroit Stove Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 73, 103 N. W. 513.

88. Where the complaint specifies grounds of negligence, the proof will be confined to the facts pleaded. Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 111 Mo. App. 258, 86 S. W. 915. Allegation that drawbar and appliances for coupling were defective, etc., held broad leged in the complaint, proof that the injury complained of was caused by one or more of such acts will justify a recovery.[89] When a complaint charges negligence generally and contains also specific acts or omissions constituting the same kind of negligence, proof of acts or omissions not specified in the complaint will not warrant recovery.[90] When two or more proximate causes contribute to produce an injury, and more than one of such causes are pleaded, proof of any one cause for which the master is responsible is sufficient.[91] A variance may be cured by an amendment after verdict.[92]

(§ 3H) 4. Evidence. Burden of proof and presumptions.[93]—The burden is upon plaintiff to prove negligence of the master as alleged,[94] and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury or damage suffered,[95] and that the relation of master and servant existed.[96] It is held by many courts that mere proof enough to admit evidence of absence of grab iron and purpose of such an appliance. Belt R. Co. v. Confrey, 111 Ill. App. 473. Evidence of a failure to warn plaintiff that a train, on which he was a fireman, must be stopped is inadmissible, under a declaration alleging failure to warn him of the displacement of a rail caused by a wreck. Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 214 Ill. 579, 73 N. E. 879. Ordinance inadmissible when it tended to support a theory other than that relied on. Lobstein v. Sajotovich, 111 Ill. App. 654. Where complaint alleged failure to maintain the roof of a mine entry in reasonably safe condition, but did not allege failure to inspect, evidence of a want of inspection was inadmissible. Choctaw, etc., Co. v. O'Nesky [Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 300. Where failure to give "necessary and suitable" orders is charged, evidence of the giving of improper or negligent orders is inadmissible. Sanks v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 385. Where failure to furnish props for a mine roof was not complained of, evidence of a general shortage of props and that other miners had failed to obtain them when they asked for them was inadmissible. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. 260, 87 S. W. 506. Evidence that chain or wire slings are customarily used in loading lumber and are safer than rope slings is inadmissible where the negligence charged is use of a defective rope sling, and it appears that the employe knew of and did not object to use of rope. Henne v. Steeb Shipping Co., 37 Wash. 331, 79 P. 938. Where negligent use of defective and rotten rope sling for loading lumber was alleged, evidence that the sling was overloaded was admissible. Id. Where complaint alleged that deceased was employed in a dangerous place and a dangerous occupation, plaintiff could prove that deceased was directed to do work outside the scope of his employment and was so engaged when fatally injured. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. Under a general allegation of negligence in operating a train, evidence as to whether the engineer caused the whistle to be blown before entering a cut is admissible. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Jones [Fla.] 39 So. 485. Negligence in giving signals being charged, evidence that the man giving them had knowledge of plaintiff's position was admissible. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Bonner [Ala.] 39 So. 619.

89. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind.] 73 N. E. 91. Defective handle on handcar, and broken cog wheel, alleged. Proof of defective handle alone warranted recovery. Southern I. R. Co. v. Hoggatt [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1096.

90. Where complaint charged failure to instruct operative and failure to guard machine, proof that the treadle of the machine was defective would not warrant recovery. Mueller v. La Prelle Shoe Co., 109 Mo. App. 506, 84 S. W. 1010.

91. Where defect in turntable, and negligence of fellow-servant in operating it, were alleged, proof of the first charge warranted recovery. Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 111 Mo. App. 258, 86 S. W. 915.

92. Where complaint alleged an injury to have been caused by a defective head or top of a planing machine, and the proof showed a defective lock screw holding the top to have been the cause, an amendment alleging that the lock screw was defective cured the variance and was properly allowed after verdict. Franke v. Hanly, 215 Ill. 216, 74 N. E. 130.

93. See 4 C. L. 590; also Evidence, 5 C. L. 1301.

94. Burden is on plaintiff to show existence of defects and that injuries resulted therefrom. Trigg v. Ozark Land & Lumber Co., 187 Mo. 227, 86 S. W. 222. Burden on plaintiff, a brakeman injured by stepping in hole in track bed made in course of repairs to prove absence of rules and regulations for his protection. Smith v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 61 A. 359. The competency of servants is presumed, and the burden is upon the servant to prove a fellow-servant incompetent, and that the master had notice of it. Fact that servant told superintendent he had never worked in a factory does not show notice of incompetency to strike a block held by another servant while tamping a floor. Wilkinson Co-op. Glass Co. v. Dickinson [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 957.

95. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. 260, 87 S. W. 506; Kennedy v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 190 Mo. 424, 89 S. W. 370; Hendrix v. Cooleemee Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 169, 50 S. E. 561; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Greenwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 10, 89 S. W. 810. Defendants not liable for injury to plaintiff by breaking of plank on which he stepped when evidence did not in any way connect defendants with the plank or its being in the place where plaintiff would walk on it. Hogan v. Strauss, 93 N. Y. S. 850.

96. Burden is on plaintiff to show he was of the occurrence of an accident does not alone raise a presumption of negligence on the part of the master,[97] and that the doctrine res ipsa loquitur is inapplicable in an action by a servant against the master to recover for personal injuries.[98] Other courts hold that proof of the fact of injury is sufficient to take the issue of negligence to the jury,[99] though it does not relieve plaintiff of the burden of proof defendant's servant. Larson v. Centennial Mill Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 294.

97. Vissman v. Southern R. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 502; Fuller v. Ann Arbor R. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 348, 104 N. W. 414; Egan v. New York, etc., R. Co., 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 482; Venbuvr v. Lafayette Worsted Mills [R. I.] 60 A. 770. Mere happening of accident raises no presumption of negligence; plaintiff must show how accident happened by a fair preponderance of evidence. Jones v. Scranton Coal Co. [Pa.] 61 A. 117. Breaking of cable used in unloading vessel not alone evidence of negligence on part of ship. The Tresco, 128 F. 780. Mere fact of explosion of compressed air tank is not proof of negligence of master. Omaha Packing Co. v. Murray, 112 Ill. App. 233. Mere fact that maul flew from handle and struck plaintiff does not warrant finding that defendant was negligent in furnishing tools. Deckert v. Wabash, R. Co., 111 Mo. App. 117, 85 S. W. 982. Verdict properly directed for defendant where staging fell, injuring plaintiff, but there was no other evidence of negligence. Bergman v. Altman, 127 Iowa, 693, 104 N. W. 280. Doctrine res ipsa loqultur not applicable where plaintiff was struck by rock sliding down a hill in a quarry. Thompson v. California Const. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 367. Mere fact that freight elevator fell killing a servant is not proof of the master's negligence. Starer v. Stern, 100 App. Div. 393, 91 N. Y. S. 821. Fact that handle on milk can gave way not alone sufficient to prove defendant's negligence. Schapiro v. Levy, 101 App. Div. 444, 91 N. Y. S. 1044. Mere proof that pulley fell from shaft, striking plaintiff, not proof of defendant's negligence. Griffin v. Flank, 95 N. Y. S. 546. When presence of railroad torpedo on a car was not explained, the master was not as a matter of law liable to a car repairer injured by an explosion caused by throwing a wrench down on the torpedo. Fuller v. Ann Arbor R. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 348, 104 N. W. 414. The existence of a defect in an engine causing it to move of itself, and knowledge thereof by defendant, must be proved; negligence will not be inferred from the happening of an injury by the starting of the engine. Fordyce v. Key [Ark.] 84 S. W. 797. The mere fact that a coal shoveler was injured on a car is not evidence of negligence of a vice-principal or even of a fellow-servant and does not place on the employer the burden of explaining how the injury was caused. Dana & Co. v. Blackburn [Ky.] 90 S. W. 237. Where brick vault shaft, apparently sound, was left standing after building burned and while debris was being cleared up, the mere fact that it fell, injuring plaintiff, was not evidence of negligence on the part of the employer. Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes [Md.] 62 A. 155. Where evidence showed only that brakeman was found dead on the track having been last seen on a car, there being no evidence of negligence in the switching operations, a recovery by plaintiff was unwarranted. Griffin v. Minnesota Transfer R. Co. [Minn.] 102 N. W. 391.

98. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 737.

NOTE: "The doctrine, 'res ipsa loqultur,' is inapplicable to cases between master and servant brought to recover damages for negligence, because there are many possible causes of accidents during service, the risk of some of which, such as the negligence of fellow-servants and the other ordinary dangers of the work, the servant assumes, while for the risk of others, such as the lack of ordinary care to construct or keep in repair the machinery or place of work, the master is responsible. The mere happening of an accident which injures a servant fails to indicate whether it resulted from one of the causes the risk of which is the servant's, or from one of those the risk of which is the master's, and for this reason it raises no presumption that it was caused by the negligence of the latter. In such cases the burden of proof is always upon him who avers that the negligence of the master caused the accident to establish that fact, and a naked finding, that the accident occurred and that the servant was guilty of no negligence which contributed to cause his injury, is insufficient to sustain this burden, for there are many other causes than the negligence of the master and that of the servant, such as the negligence of fellow-servants and latent and undiscoverable defects in place or machinery, which may have produced it. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. O'Brien [C. C. A.] 132 F. 593, 596, 598; Westland v. Gold Coin Mines Co. [C. C. A.] 101 F. 65; Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. Barrett, 166 U. S. 617, 41 Law. Ed. 1136; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co., 179 U. S. 658, 45 Law. Ed. 361; O'Connor v. R. Co., 83 Iowa, 105, 48 N. W. 1002; Brownfield v. R. Co., 107 Iowa, 254, 77 N. W. 1038; Brymer v. Railroad Co., 90 Cal. 497, 27 P. 371; Huff v. Austin, 46 Ohio St. 386, 21 N. E. 864, 15 Am. St. Rep. 613; Wormell v. Railroad Co., 79 Me. 397, 10 A. 49, 1 Am. St. Rep. 321; Grant v. Railroad Co., 133 N. Y. 659, 31 N. E. 220. The happening of the accident and the absence of contributory negligence of the servant constitute no substantial evidence of the causal negligence of the master and are insufficient to support a finding or judgment against him for the injury which resulted from it."—From opinion in Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Dixon [C. C. A.] 139 F. 740.

See, also, 18 Harv. L. R. 391, where Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. O'Brien, cited above, is commented on and the rule laid down criticized.

99. Fact that elevator fell and injured servant is proof of negligence sufficient to go to jury. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562. Where operative stopped machine to clean it by shifting the belt and the machine started while he or raise any presumption in his favor.[1] Negligence may, as in other cases, be inferred from the fact of injury, taken in connection with other surrounding facts and circumstances.[2] The doctrine res ipsa loquitur is never to be applied except where it not only supports the conclusion contended for, but excludes every other.[3] Where an accident may have resulted from more than one cause, for some of which the master would be liable while for others he would not be responsible, plaintiff must allege and prove that it in fact resulted from a cause for which the master is responsible.[4] This must be shown with reasonable certainty;[5] if the real cause of an injury is left a matter of conjecture, there can be no recovery.[6] was so engaged, and it appeared the shifter was too wide for the belt and a block of wood was used to remedy this, which might have fallen from its place, the case was for the jury, under the res ipsa loquitur doctrine. Ross v. Double Shoals Cotton Mills [N. C.] 52 S. E. 121. Where engineer, running under telegraphic orders and a "clearance card," was killed in a head-on collision, it was held that such facts raised a presumption of negligence sufficient to take the case to the jury. Stewart v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R. Co., 137 N. C. 687, 50 S. E. 312. Held, also, that there was sufficient evidence of negligence by the dispatcher or a local operator to take the case to the jury. Id. The fact of injury from a defective appliance is prima facie evidence of negligence sufficient to go to the jury though the employe knew of the defect. Roach v. Haile Gold Min. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 543.

1. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562; Ross v. Double Shoals Cotton Mills [N. C.] 52 S. E. 121.

NOTE. Operation of res ipsa loquitur rule: "Whether the defendant introduces evidence or not, the plaintiff will not be entitled to a verdict unless he satisfies the jury by the preponderance of the evidence that his injuries were caused by a defect attributable to the defendant's negligence. The law attaches no special weight, as proof, to the fact of an accident, but simply holds it to be sufficient for the consideration of the jury even in the absence of any additional evidence. Womble v. Grocery Co., 135 N. C. 474, 47 S. E. 493; 2 Labatt, Master & Servant, § 834; 4 Wigmore, Evidence, § 2509. In all other respects the parties stand before the jury just as if there was no such rule. The judge should carefully instruct the jury as to the application of the principle, so that they will not give to the fact of the accident any greater artificial weight than the law imparts to it. Wigmore, in the section just cited, says the following considerations ought to limit the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur: (1) The apparatus must be such that in the ordinary instance no injurious operation is to be expected, unless from a careless construction, inspection, or user; (2) both inspection and user must have been, at the time of the injury, in the control of the party charged; (3) the injurious occurrence must have happened irrespective of any voluntary action at the time of the party injured. He says further that the doctrine is to some extent founded upon the fact that the chief evidence of the true cause of the injury, whether culpable or innocent, is practically accessible to the party charged, and perhaps inaccessible to the party injured."—From opinion in Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co. [N. C.] 50 S. E. 562.

2. Negligence is never presumed from mere fact of injury, but may be inferred from surrounding facts and circumstances. Libby v. Banks, 110 Ill. App. 330. In an action for death of a brakeman under a Florida statute, where deceased was shown to have been free from contributory negligence, negligence of the railway company was presumed, and the burden was upon it to show how the death occurred. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Jones [Fla.] 39 So. 485. See, also, 4 C. L. 591, n. 84.

3. Allen v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 54, 61 A. 572.

4. Goransson v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 186 Mo. 300, 85 S. W. 338; Shore v. American Bridge Co., 111 Mo. App. 278, 86 S. W. 905; Purcell v. Tennent Shoe Co., 187 Mo. 276, 86 S. W. 121.

5. The evidence must be sufficient to lead a fair and reasonable mind to conclude that the negligence alleged actually caused the injury. Where evidence did not show whether a baggageman was struck by an appliance near the track, as alleged, or fell from the car step where he was standing, when the train increased its speed, there was no recovery for his death. McTaggart v. Maine Cent. R. Co. [Me.] 60 A. 1027. Plaintiff need only show that it is more probable that defendant's negligence caused the injury than that it was caused in some other way. Wood's Adm'x v. Southern R. Co. [Va.] 52 S. E. 371. Where the evidence shows negligence of the defendant as the cause of injury, a recovery is warranted though the exact way in which the accident occurred is not made to appear. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. A theoretical possibility, wholly unsupported by proof or probability, that an injury was caused by some means other than negligence of the master, will not outweigh proof which carries conviction to the ordinary mind that negligence of the master caused the injury. Burns v. Ruddock-Orleans Cypress Co., 114 La. 247, 38 So. 157. Evidence sufficient to show master's negligence in furnishing defective scaffold which caused employe's death. Shore v. American Bridge Co., 111 Mo. App. 278, 86 S. W. 905. Where it is proved that a failure of one or the other of two appliances caused an injury and also that one of such appliances was defective, the jury may infer that it was a failure of the defective appliance that caused the injury. Keys v. Winnsboro Granite Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 549. No recovery where there was no substantial evidence to support plaintiff's theory as to how he was thrown

Contributory negligence is usually held an affirmative defense which the defendant must establish[7] by a preponderance of the evidence.[8] But in some jurisdictions, plaintiff must show he was exercising due care.[9] In Iowa due care by the employe will be presumed when there is no evidence as to the manner in which the accident occurred.[10] In New York a plaintiff cannot recover without some affirmative evidence of want of contributory negligence.[11] It is commonly held that a plaintiff must from a hand car. Morelock v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Mo. App. 640, 87 S. W. 5. No recovery warranted where plaintiff was struck in the eye by a sliver from a steel pin he was striking, when the evidence did not show whether the cause of the accident was a slanting blow struck by the plaintiff or the fact that the pin was not properly tempered. Goransson v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 186 Mo. 300, 85 S. W. 338. Verdict against weight of evidence where injury was alleged to have been caused by slipping on floor, thereby causing employe's hand to become injured in machine. Venbuvr v. Lafayette Worsted Mills [R. I.] 60 A. 770. The fact that a section boss gave an order to hasten certain work and said a train was coming does not show that he saw or heard the train. International & G. N. R. Co. v. McVey [Tex.] 87 S. W. 328. Evidence insufficient to show that switchman's injury was caused by getting his foot caught between rails defectively blocked. Neal v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 197. Evidence insufficient to show that injury was caused by alleged defects in wire. Muench v. Standard Brewery, 113 Ill. App. 512. Evidence insufficient to show negligence of defendant as cause of fall of plaintiff, a lineman. Lincoln Gas & Elec. Light Co. v. Thomas [Neb.] 104 N. W. 153. Evidence insufficient to prove either that employes were directed to use a defective boom, used in moving machinery, or that its defective condition could have been discovered by ordinary care. Holm v. Empire Hardware Co., 102 App. Div. 505, 92 N. Y. S. 914. Evidence insufficient to support verdict based on finding of general negligence, though proof tended to show that plaintiff was a minor and had been directed to clean machinery while in motion, contrary to statute. Fish v. Utica Steam & Mohawk Valley Cotton Mills, 109 App. Div. 326, 95 N. Y. S. 673. Evidence did not show that no instructions were given employe as to manner of handling logs where witnesses testified only that they did not hear any given, and it appeared they might have been given when such witnesses could not have heard them. Carnes v. Guelph Patent Cask Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 331, 104 N. W. 322. Where brakeman was seen at front of train as it came in to station, and after it stopped was seen dead between the cars, he having given no notice that he was about to uncouple cars, the cause of death, and freedom from contributory negligence, were not shown. Donaldson v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 915.

6. Walker v. Louis-Werner Sawmill Co. [Ark.] 88 S. W. 988. When the manner in which a servant was caught by a machine and killed was left speculative by the evidence, a recovery for the death could not be sustained. Stratton v. Nichols Lumber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 831. Where evidence failed to show manner of death of miner found at the door of the mine, but left open several explanations of his death, negligence of the mine owner was not shown. Allen v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 54, 61 A. 572. The mere fact that an engine which a hostler started to take to another track went the wrong way when he pulled the lever and ran into a pit, injuring the hostler, is not proof that defendant was negligent; the cause of the accident being left a matter of conjecture, plaintiff cannot recover. Green v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 45. Evidence held to leave cause of injury conjectural and not sufficient to take issue of negligence to jury where miner was killed by the alleged defective condition of the cable used to lower men into the mine. Owen v. Retsof Min. Co., 102 App. Div. 130, 92 N. Y. S. 270. Verdict against defendant for death of employe set aside where evidence left it conjectural whether death was caused hy a defective guard rail or by negligence of the employe in going too close to the wheel, there being no affirmative proof of freedom from contributory negligence. Wilson v. New York Mills, 94 N. Y. S. 1090. Where evidence did not show with reasonable certainty that plaintiff's theory of cause of brakeman's death was correct, but the manner of his death was left open to speculation, a judgment for plaintiff was reversed. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Greenwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 10, 89 S. W. 810.

7. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Tisdale [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 1063. Burden of proving contributory negligence is on defendant unless plaintiff's pleadings or evidence affirmatively discloses it. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863. Hence jury should be instructed that they may look to all the evidence in passing on the issue. Id. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 359a, contributory negligence is matter of defense and plaintiff need not show want of it. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818.

8. Instruction that proof of contributory negligence must be "clear and convincing" erroneous; preponderance is sufficient. Sanders v. Aiken Mfg. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E. 679.

9. Iowa rule. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 721.

10. Applied where boy of 16 was injured while operating an unguarded saw. Woolf v. Nauman Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 785.

11. Scialo v. Steffens, 94 N. Y. S. 305. The rule that freedom from contributory negligence must be shown is not changed by Laws 1902, p. 1748, c. 600, § 3, which requires the issue of contributory negligence to go to the jury. Wilson v. New York Mills, 94 N. Y. S. 1090. Where employe was killed by electricity which leaked from an uninsulated wire, the facts were held to prove want of knowledge of a defect alleged to have caused an injury.[12] But the plea of assumption of risks not naturally and usually incident to the employment when properly conducted is an affirmative one, and the burden of establishing it is on the employer.[13] The law presumes that all employes in the common employment of the same master are fellow-servants, though different in rank, and the burden is on one claiming damages by reason of negligence of a servant so employed to show that he was a vice-principal.[14]

Admissibility in general.[15]—Evidence must of course be competent[16] and relevant to the issues in the case.[17] On the issue of the master's negligence, evidence warrant an inference of freedom from contributory negligence. Irish v. Union Bag & Paper Co., 92 N. Y. S. 695. In action for death caused by fall of a telephone pole, evidence held insufficient to show deceased free from contributory negligence. Voorhees v. Hudson River Tel. Co., 109 App. Div. 465, 95 N. Y. S. 703.

12. Servant must prove want of knowledge of defect, and that he did not have equal opportunity with master to know of it. Montgomery Coal Co. v. Barringer, 218 Ill. 327, 75 N. E. 900. Servant, suing for injuries caused by vicious animal, must prove he had no knowledge of its viciousness. St. Louis National Stock Yards v. Morris, 116 Ill. App. 107.

13. Arenschield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 200. When the servant shows that an injury arose from a risk not ordinarily incident to the employment, arising out of the master's negligence, the burden is upon the master to show that the servant knew and understood the increased danger. McDonald v. Champion Iron & Steel Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 208, 103 N. W. 829. After plaintiff has shown a mine to be unsafe through lack of proper ventilation, the burden was on the mine owner to prove that the miner killed had knowledge of the danger. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233. Knowledge of danger by the servant will not be presumed; burden of showing it is on master. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 110 Ill. App. 596.

14. Mollkoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Okl.] 82 P. 733.

Contra: Burden of establishing existence of fellow-servant relation is on master. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Buzis, 115 Ill. App. 196.

15. See 4 C. L. 592; also title Evidence, 5 C. L. 1311, 1312.

16. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 2725, reports and official certificates of the mine inspector, or proper copies, are admissible in evidence in an action for death of a miner caused by lack of proper mine ventilation, and are prima facie evidence of the facts recited. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233.

17. Held relevant: Testimony by plaintiff that foreman told him to run just before a telephone pole fell on him admissible to rebut inference of contributory negligence. Sandquist v. Independent Tel. Co., 38 Wash. 313, 80 P. 539. Evidence that brakeman could have occupied position of safety, instead of standing on main track, while giving signals, was admissible. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hill's Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 523. Conversation between a servant and one shown to be a vice-principal at time servant was put to work admissible. Flickner v. Lambert [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 263. In action for injuries caused by defective hook used to support a swing scaffold, evidence regarding the identity and condition of the hook used and the kind of scaffold used, was admissible. Lewes v. Crane [Vt.] 62 A. 60. Evidence that train dispatcher knew where trains were admissible on issue of his negligence in notifying regular train of presence of work train on the track. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. On issue whether proper inspection of engine tender had been made, testimony of the inspector that his son was a fireman and that he knew that the son was going out on the engine he was inspecting was competent. Hover v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 57, 89 S. W. 1084. In action for injuries to electric lineman caused by failure to turn current off or to properly instruct engineer, evidence that engineer said he would not turn current off without orders from the foreman was admissible. City of Austin v. Forbis [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 29. Evidence of acts of operator of turntable in presence of foreman tending to show table defective admissible. Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 111 Mo. App. 258, 86 S. W. 915. In action for death of engineer in washout, evidence regarding heavy rains in neighboring sections of the country was admissible to show that the storm which caused the washout ought reasonably to have been foreseen and guarded against. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. In an action for death of a miner in November, a mine inspector's notice showing the mine was unsafe in October was held admissible to show the plan of ventilation defective and that it had been in operation for such a length of time that the master ought to have known that it was defective. Andricus' Adm'r v. Pineville Coal Co. [Ky.] 90 S. W. 233. Exclusion of physician's testimony that employe was below average in intelligence was not prejudicial when there was no evidence that the lack of intelligence was observable by the agent who employed her or those who controlled her. Daniels v. New England Cotton Yarn Co. [Mass.] 74 N. E. 332.

Held irrelevant: Letters of recommendation and fact that alleged negligent servant had made an invention immaterial on issue of his competency. Staunton Coal Co. v. Bub, 218 Ill. 125, 75 N. E. 770. In action under Miners' Act, evidence as to where miners got powder for blasting was im-of previous injuries from the same cause, and complaints thereof, is admissible.[18] The fact that no other injury had resulted from the alleged defective condition cannot be shown.[19] Evidence of subsequent repairs is usually excluded.[20] Evidence of a custom followed by the defendant[21] or by others in the same business[22] material. Chicago Virden Coal Co. v. Rucker, 116 Ill. App. 425. Where the evidence showed that neither of two rules designed to prevent collisions was enforced, evidence as to which was the safer was immaterial. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. In action based on automatic starting of frame, evidence that another frame was similarly defective was inadmissible. Fountaine v. Wampanoag Mills [Mass.] 75 N. E. 738. Issue being whether partition in particular ore bin was reasonably safe, whether partitions in other bins had fallen was immaterial. Mueller v. Northwestern Iron Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 67. The extent of responsibility of a servant is not shown by the fact that he receives higher pay than others. Powley v. Swensen, 146 Cal. 471, 80 P. 722. Where failure to warn child was charged, evidence by other employes that they never heard foreman give warning or instruction to anyone was inadmissible. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. What manager said to a workman about the manner of performing his work was not relevant to issue whether sufficient number of men were employed. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124. Evidence that employe told foreman he thought turntable was unsafe inadmissible to prove defect but competent on question of notice. Dutro v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 111 Mo. App. 258, 86 S. W. 915. Expert opinion inadmissible on speed of engine and distance in which it could be stopped when not based on similar conditions and engines of similar construction. Wise Terminal Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 51 S. E. 731.

18. In action for injuries caused by defective machine evidence that a former employe had been injured by the same machine and had notified defendants of the defect in question was admissible. Franke v. Hanly, 215 Ill. 216, 74 N. E. 130. Evidence of previous injuries caused by same cog wheels, and complaints thereof, admissible to show their dangerous condition and that employe knew of such condition. Hansen v. Seattle Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 102.

19. Evidence that a coal chute by which a brakeman was struck had been in same place close to track for 5 or 6 years and that no injury had resulted from it, inadmissible. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 214 Ill. 124, 73 N. E. 416. Evidence that device had been used a number of years without injury held immaterial. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Vallowe, 115 Ill. App. 621.

20. Proof that railway company cleared away weeds and rubbish from a switch after an accident inadmissible. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173. Evidence as to condition of a saw a week after an accident and of repairs to it thereafter was admissible in rebuttal of testimony on the other side as to the condition of it before and after the accident. Virginia & N. C. Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, 49 S. E. 991.

21. Testimony as to whether it was customary for engineer to whistle at a particular curve, and whether another witness had heard engines whistle there, admissible. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Minter [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 477. Where child was fatally injured while working near machinery, evidence that defendant allowed children in the place where the accident occurred was admissible; but evidence that children were allowed to go into other dangerous places was inadmissible. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. That material furnished for movable platform used in construction of railroad embankment was similar to that which had safely been used for several months in the same work and for a long time in similar work, was sufficient proof that the materials used were suitable. Fukare v. Kerbaugh [N. J. Err. & App.] 61 A. 376. Railroad rulebook admissible to show that section foreman was required to inspect track, and to show that deceased engineer was warranted in relying on presumption that such inspection had been made and was therefore not negligent. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Railroad rule requiring employes in charge of trains to report and remove obstructions and make necessary repairs to prevent accident to other trains held admissible in action for death of fireman in wreck caused by freight conductor's failure to remove an obstruction. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Curd [Ky.] 89 S. W. 140. Where car repairer was hurt by reason of a car running from a side track on the main track and striking the car on which he was working, evidence that derailing switches were in use by defendants, but that there was not such a switch at the place where the accident occurred was admissible. Smith v. Fordyce, 190 Mo. 1, 88 S. W. 679.

22. Evidence that an inspection of an engine tender was of the same kind as railroads generally used was admissible. Hover v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 57, 89 S. W. 1084. Evidence of usual and customary manner of fastening bolts used to hold links of chain admissible. Berg v. United States Leather Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 60. Testimony as to head sawyer's duties in other mills held properly admitted. Dossett v. St. Paul & T. Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 273. Where negligence in construction and erection of column which fell on plaintiff was relied on, evidence of the usual and customary manner of such construction was inadmissible. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, 73 N. E. 787. In action for injuries by unblocked switch frog evidence that blocked frogs were common safety devices was relevant. Schroeder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. In action under Miners Act, evidence that blowout shots were not uncommon was immaterial. Chicago Virden Coal Co. v. Rucker, 116 Ill. App. 425.

is sometimes relevant. There is authority to the effect that evidence of a settlement with another employe, injured at the same time as plaintiff, is admissible as tending to show an admission of negligence.[23]

Evidence of specific acts of negligence known to the master, or so notorious that he would have known of them if he had exercised ordinary care, is admissible to prove the habit or character for incompetency of a servant who is employed with due care.[24] But specific acts of negligence, of drunkenness, of lack of skill, or of incompetency, of which the master had no notice, cannot be shown to prove incompetency for which a servant should have been discharged.[25] The general reputation of an employe for competency may be shown on the issue of care used in employing or retaining him.[26] The proper proof of habit and character in such case is by the testimony of witnesses qualified to speak of them, subject to proper cross-examination relative to the facts upon which their testimony is based.[27] But reputation among a particular class, which obviously includes only a part of those acquainted with him or his work, is inadmissible.[28]

On the issue of contributory negligence, proof of the usual course of conduct of employes, approved or acquiesced in by the master,[29] and of the duties of the injured servant,[30] is admissible.

23. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kellerman [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 140, 87 S. W. 401.

24. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. Incompetency of sawyer being alleged, it was not error to admit evidence as to a previous injury caused by him, when a serious accident was narrowly averted, and that it was generally talked about in the mill at the time. Dassett v. St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 273. Evidence of prior specific acts of negligence of engineer admissible to show general incompetence and that master had notice thereof. Conover v. Neher-Ross Co., 38 Wash. 172, 80 P. 281.

25. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272. Evidence of specific acts of incompetency is inadmissible unless coupled with evidence that they were brought to the attention of the master, or that the circumstances were such that he ought to have had knowledge of them. Date v. New York Glucose Co., 93 N. Y. S. 249. On issue of competency of hoisting engineer, evidence of other complaints and injuries caused by his acts was properly excluded. Staunton Coal Co. v. Bub, 218 Ill. 125, 75 N. E. 770. Specific acts of negligence may be shown on the issue of a servant's competency only when knowledge of such acts by the master is also shown. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. Evidence that a brakeman had split a switch, and that at another time he had been off the right of way talking to a farmer when sent to flag a train admissible, when it was also shown that it was the conductor's duty to report such misconduct to the company. Id. Where brakeman fell asleep when sent to flag a train, evidence that he had been out until 4 o'clock the night before was inadmissible, when it was not shown that the persons who sent him on such duty knew of the fact. Id.

26. General reputation of a brakeman among railroad men. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. After proof of incompetency, proof of the servant's general reputation among those acquainted with him or his work is competent to prove that the master had notice of his incompetency. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272.

27, 28. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hetzer [C. C. A.] 135 F. 272.

29. Where a railroad yardmaster was knocked from the car by a car negligently left on a switch too close to the main track, evidence of a custom of yardmasters and switchmen to ride on the ladders of freight cars is admissible. Boyce v. Wilbur Lumber Co., 119 Wis. 642, 97 N. W. 563. Evidence by employe that they followed a certain course of conduct tends to show approval of such conduct by the master. Leighton & H. Steel Co. v. Snell, 217 Ill. 152, 75 N. E. 462. Testimony that an employe had taken pieces from rollers of mangle while in motion admissible to show course of conduct by employes permitted by employer. Manning v. Excelsior Laundry Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 254. Where it was charged that plaintiff violated rules by going between cars, evidence tending to show the rule was never enforced was admissible. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Bonner [Ala.] 39 So. 619. Where violation of rule was charged, and plaintiff claimed the rule was not enforced, evidence that it was impossible or impracticable to perform his duties without violating the rule was admissible. Id.

30. A servant may testify what his duties were and under whose orders he acted, though he had not been long in the employment. Leighton & Howard Steel Co. v. Snell, 217 Ill. 152, 75 N. E. 462. Where evidence of an employe's ordinary duties was admitted, it was error to exclude questions tending to show his duties with respect to the observance of defects in his appliances. Lounsbury v. Davis, 124 Wis. 432, 102 N. W. 941. Where a section foreman was injured in an effort of his crew to avoid a collision with a train at a curve, testimony as to whether the curve was of the kind requiring the foreman to send a flagman ahead was admis-

Expert and opinion evidence.[31]—If witnesses are shown to be properly qualified[32] they may testify as experts in regard to matters requiring special skill or knowledge.[33] But mere conclusions[34] and opinion evidence are inadmissible when all the facts can be ascertained and made intelligible to the jury.[35] sible on the issue of contributory negligence. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Minter [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 477.

31. See 4 C. L. 597; also Evidence, 5 C. L. 1301.

32. Witness who had worked around switch frogs 15 years qualified to testify whether blocked switch frogs were common safety devices. Schroeder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. One who had been in mill and lumber business for a long time and was familiar with machinery use could testify as an expert though he had not run a machine with four saws like the one in question. Yates v. Huntsville Hoop & Heading Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 647. Miner who had not worked in mine in question and was not shown to be familiar with its rules or customs could not testify to miner's duties, from his knowledge of other mines. Smith v. Hecla Min. Co., 38 Wash. 454, 80 P. 779.

33. Whether certain timbers could properly be used to prop mine roof. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375. Whether use of unannealed steel under steel punch and die was dangerous and how great the risks were. Arnold v. Harrington Cutlery Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 194. Experienced railroad man may properly testify regarding purpose of derailing switches and where they should be placed. Smith v. Fordyce, 190 Mo. 1, 88 S. W. 679. Where incompetency of servants was in issue, the expert opinions of those who had examined the men concerned with a view of promoting them were competent. Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 112 Ill. App. 312. Experienced railroad men may testify to freight conductor's duties and whether a stop signal should be given in switching cars before a car which a brakeman is to stop has been cut off. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 195. Experts may testify whether switch frogs are dangerous when unblocked and whether blocked switch frogs were common safety devices. Schroeder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 985. Machine operators may testify whether machinery was working properly at a particular time. Scarlotta v. Ash [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1025. Captain of vessel, qualified as expert, could testify whether he could have prevented collision after he saw projection in bridge. Lambert v. La Conner Trading & Transp. Co., 37 Wash. 113, 79 P. 608. Expert in railway management may testify, in action for injuries to brakeman struck by overhead trestle, what good railroad management required in the way of telltales at each end of such trestles. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Lamphere [C. C. A.] 137 F. 20. Experienced painter who had used swing stagings could testify as to weight which a certain hook would sustain. Lewes v. John Crane & Sons [Vt.] 62 A. 60. Persons who have worked in and operated sawmills may testify that when flywheels are broken they should be discarded and not repaired. Boop v. Laurelton Lumber Co., 212 Pa. 523, 61 A. 1021. Expert machine operative may testify how a person would have to get his hands into a machine in order to be injured by it. Wofford v. Clinton Cotton Mills [S. C.] 51 S. E. 918. Where servant was killed by fall of elevator, and after the accident the safety device was seen to be defective, expert testimony was competent to show how the device worked when in proper condition, and how long it would take to make it defective as it was, and whether that condition could have been caused by the falling of the elevator which caused the servant's death. Starer v. Stern, 100 App. Div. 393, 91 N. Y. S. 821.

34. In action for injuries caused by defective hook used to hold staging, evidence of what defendant would have done if he had known of the condition of the hook was inadmissible. Lewes v. John Crane & Sons [Vt.] 62 A. 60. Testimony as to whose duty it was to secure cars on a down grade, and what witnesses would have done if they had been in charge of train incompetent. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Vitello [Colo.] 81 P. 766. Error to allow nonexperts to testify that mangle was very dangerous machine to allow children to be near. Evans v. Josephine Mills [Ga.] 52 S. E. 538.

Held admissible: Where engineer who had control of a train swore that he would have stopped it if he had known of the presence of a work train in time to prevent a collision, it was not error to permit the brakeman and conductor to testify as to what they would have done if they had been notified. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. Not error to allow employe to testify that it was dispatcher's duty to notify regular trains of the presence of work trains on the track. Id. Witness may testify within what time a mine roof could have been propped or made secure. Tutwiler Coal, Coke & Iron Co. v. Farrington [Ala.] 39 So. 898.

35. As whether machines should have been guarded. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6. Whether door of elevator entrance was properly placed to make it safe. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Trcka, 218 Ill. 559, 75 N. E. 1053. Whether work on vault, putting in steel plates, could be done safely without set screws. Dolan v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 105 App. Div. 366, 94 N. Y. S. 241. Opinions on safety of rule requiring work trains to flag regular trains inadmissible. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 29. Expert opinion on whether iron and steel could be distinguished from their appearance inadmissible. Wolf v. New Bedford Cordage Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 222. Opinion evidence improper on incompetency of mine boss. Purkey v. Southern Coal & Transp. Co. [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 755. No error to refuse to allow opinion evidence on question whether car in which employes were being carried was overcrowded. Chicago Terminal Transfer Co. v. O'Donnell, 213 Ill. 545, 72 N. E. 1133. In an action for death

Questions of law and fact.[36]—Unless the evidence is so conclusive that only one inference can reasonably be drawn therefrom, the issues of negligence of the master,[37] contributory negligence of the servant,[38] assumption of risk,[39] and proximate cause,[40] are for the jury. What facts are essential to the existence of the fellow-servant relation is a question of law; the existence of such facts is for the jury.[41]

(§ 3H) 5. Instructions.[42]—Only a few illustrative holdings are here given, the general principles governing the giving of instructions being fully treated elsewhere.[43]

Instructions must be confined to the issues raised by the pleadings[44] and the evidence.[45] All the acts of negligence relied on by the plaintiff and supported by

by the falling of a derrick, the opinion of a witness that a guy rope anchor pulled out because not weighted heavily enough was incompetent. Lounsbury v. Davis, 124 Wis. 432, 102 N. W. 941. A machinist, whose duty it was only to see that machines were in good running order, could not testify that in his opinion certain machines should have been safeguarded. National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan [C. C. A.] 138 F. 6. Expert testimony is incompetent on question whether it is dangerous for boy of 12 to hang on a sill over a belt and start the belt with his feet. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson [Va.] 51 S. E. 362. Expert opinion as to whether certain hoisting machinery was reasonably suitable and safe was erroneously admitted where the machinery was simple in construction and could have been intelligently described to the jury, and the evidence as to its state of repair was conflicting. Coe v. Van Why [Colo.] 80 P. 894.

36. See 4 C. L. 598; also preceding sections where various issues are particularly discussed. Also Questions of Law and Fact, 4 C. L. 1165.

37. Powley v. Swensen, 146 Cal. 471, 80 P. 722; Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769. Negligence is ordinarily for the jury and a finding will be disturbed by the court only in extreme cases. McRae v. Erickson [Cal.] 82 P. 209. Instruction erroneous which in effect stated that certain facts would constitute negligence. Evans v. Josephine Mills [Ga.] 52 S. E. 538. There being some evidence tending to show machinery used to control cars on elevator siding was defective, it was error to take that theory of the case from the jury. Dill v. Marmon [Ind.] 73 N. E. 67. Whether handhold on street car was broken before or after conductor took car out, held for jury. Crawford v. United R. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 61 A. 287. Facts being undisputed, negligence may be a question of law. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Haas [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1003.

38. Shickle-Harrison & Howard Iron Co. v. Beck, 112 Ill. App. 444; Arenschield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 200; Annadall v. Union Cement & Lime Co. [Ind.] 74 N. E. 893. Finding of trial judge on issue of contributory negligence will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong. Smith v. Minden Lumber Co., 114 La. 1035, 38 So. 821. It is only where there is no dispute as to the controlling facts, and no room for different conclusions upon the part of reasonable minds as to the question of contributory negligence that it becomes a question of law for the court. Buehner Chair Co. v. Feulner [Ind.] 73 N. E. 816; Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson [Ind.] 73 N. E. 818. By Laws 1902, c. 600, § 3, the issue of contributory negligence must be submitted to the jury in an action under the act. McBride v. New York Tunnel Co., 101 App. Div. 448, 92 N. Y. S. 282; McConnell v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 102 App. Div. 616, 92 N. Y. S. 477. Though contributory negligence must go to jury under Laws 1902, p. 1750, c. 600, § 3, a verdict on that issue contrary to the weight of evidence may be set aside on appeal. Vaughn v. Glens Falls Portland Cement Co., 93 N. Y. S. 979.

39. Annadall v. Union Cement & Lime Co. [Ind.] 74 N. E. 893; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bryan [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 678. Though assumed risk must go to jury under Laws 1902, p. 1750, c. 600, § 3, a verdict contrary to the weight of evidence on that issue may be set aside on appeal. Vaughn v. Glens Falls Portland Cement Co., 93 N. Y. S. 979; Baker v. Empire Wire Co., 102 App. Div. 125, 92 N. Y. S. 355. Where facts were undisputed and showed assumption of risk, a directed verdict for defendant was proper. Brooks v. Joyce Co., 127 Iowa, 266, 103 N. W. 91.

40. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857. Whether proximate cause is question of law or fact depends upon the state of the evidence. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 899. Whether employe was injured while cleaning a machine while in motion, contrary to orders, held for jury, the evidence being conflicting; but whether his disobedience was the proximate cause of his injury held for the court. Hicks v. Naomi Falls Mfg. Co., 138 N. C. 319, 50 S. E. 703.

41. Illinois Southern R. Co. v. Marshall, 112 Ill. App. 514.

42. See 4 C. L. 606.

43. See Instructions, 6 C. L. 43.

44. Requested instruction not properly limited to charges made in complaint held correctly refused. Scarlotta v. Ash [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1025. Instruction submitting assumed risk properly refused because not pleaded. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863. Instruction submitting defense not pleaded, properly refused. Cane Belt R. Co. v. Crosson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 87 S. W. 867.

45. Wood v. Texas Cotton Product Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 534, 88 S.

evidence should be submitted.[46] The defendant is entitled to proper instructions on the issues of contributory negligence,[47] assumption of risk,[48] and the existence and effect of the fellow-servant relation,[49] when these defenses are relied on and supported by proof.[50] The instructions given must be warranted by the evidence.[51] They should not be on the weight of the evidence[52] and should not assume as proved facts in issue.[53] They should not confuse the issues[54] or otherwise mislead the jury.[55] In actions based on statutes, instructions may properly follow the statutory language.[56]

W. 496. Where the evidence is unsatisfactory, the giving of an instruction on the duty to provide a safe place, when the issue is negligence in furnishing a defective appliance, is reversible error. George Doyle & Co. v. Hawkins, 34 Ind. App. 514, 73 N. E. 200. Instruction held within issues in action for injuries alleged to have been caused by defective condition of elevator cable. Zongker v. People's Union Mercantile Co., 110 Mo. App. 382, 86 S. W. 486. Instructions should be confined to issues of negligence shown by evidence. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173. Reversible error to submit negligence of foreman when evidence did not raise the issue. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Still [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 372, 88 S. W. 257.

46. Evidence held to warrant special requested charge on negligence, hence, such charge should have been given. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Demsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 89 S. W. 786. Negligence of engineer in charge of drill engine properly submitted to jury, as the issue was generally pleaded and sustained by evidence. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Roth [Tex. Civ. App.] 84 S. W. 1112. Where in action for death of brakeman, the negligence charged was that the train was run in a negligent manner, and that a rock was negligently left on the track, a requested instruction which wholly ignored the second charge was properly refused. El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Whatley [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 306.

47. Failure to instruct on contributory negligence was error. Abbott v. Marion Min. Co., 112 Mo. App. 550, 87 S. W. 110.

48. Instruction ignoring defense of assumed risk is prejudicial error. Montgomery Coal Co. v. Barringer, 218 Ill. 327, 75 N. E. 900.

49. Instruction on fellow-servant doctrine proper, where vital issue in case was whether fall of scaffold was caused by three employes working together, contrary to orders. Charping v. Toxaway Mills, 70 S. C. 470, 50 S. E. 186.

50. Defendant is entitled to have his defenses affirmatively submitted. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173. Instruction erroneous because ignoring a defense. Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally [Ga.] 51 S. E. 13. Where the declaration did not negative assumption of risk, but the issue was raised by evidence introduced under the general issue tendered by defendant, it was error to ignore such issue in the instructions. Illinois Terra Cotta Lumber Co. v. Hanley, 214 Ill. 243, 73 N. E. 373. Not error to fail to submit issues of assumed risk, and contributory negligence, when there was no request for their submission and no evidence warranting an affirmative finding thereon. Mueller v. Northwestern Iron Co. [Wis.] 104 N. W. 67.

51. New trial granted where instructions were in part inapplicable to evidence and failed to submit defendant's theory of the case. Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co., 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562. Instruction erroneous because warranting a finding not shown by evidence. Wojtylak v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 188 Mo. 260, 87 S. W. 506. Instruction erroneous because not requiring a finding of the facts alleged to constitute negligence. Id. Instruction erroneous because ignoring issue of proximate cause and also taking another issue of fact from the jury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 87 S. W. 863. Instruction properly refused because warranting finding contrary to undisputed evidence. Cane Belt R. Co. v. Crosson [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 123, 87 S. W. 867.

52. Instruction that mere fact of injury to a fireman by the giving way of a shaker bar was not proof of negligence held erroneous, because on the weight of evidence. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 511.

53. El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Whatley [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 306. Instruction erroneous because it assumed that a mine was dangerous. Straight Creek Coal Co. v. Haney's Adm'r, 27 Ky. L. R. 1117, 87 S. W. 1114. Where there was evidence tending to show that it was not practicable to timber a mine at a place where an accident occurred, an instruction assuming that failure to timber it was negligence, was erroneous. Abbott v. Marion Min. Co., 112 Mo. App. 550, 87 S. W. 110. Instruction under fellow-servant act held erroneous because it assumed that fellow-servants of plaintiff were negligent. Stanley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Mo. App. 601, 87 S. W. 112. Where uncontradicted evidence showed that it was negligence to leave a car door unfastened, the assumption of that fact was not error. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bussong [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 73.

54. Instructions confusing the issues made by the pleadings and evidence, and stating law inapplicable to real issues, held reversible error. Nickey v. Dougan, 34 Ind. App. 601, 73 N. E. 288.

55. An instruction embodying part of Illinois Miners' Act, but not applying it concretely to facts, held misleading. Chicago Virden Coal Co. v. Rucker, 116 Ill. App. 425. Charge that if engineer, who jumped from engine to avoid injury in collision, failed to exercise due care under the circumstances, the verdict must be for defendant, held to

(§ 3H) 6. Verdicts and findings.[57]—A general verdict will be disregarded when inconsistent with special findings.[58] Where a master and servant are sued jointly for damage resulting solely from negligence of the servant, a verdict in favor of the servant discharges the master, and a verdict against the latter will be set aside.[59]

§ 4. Liability for injuries to third persons. A. In general.[60]—The master is liable for the acts of his servant within the general scope of his employment, while about his master's business,[61] though the act be negligent, wanton, willful or malicious,[62] and though the servant exceeds his actual authority and violates express instructions.[63] He is not liable for unauthorized acts, outside the course or scope of correctly state the law and not to be misleading though negative in form. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Lester [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 813, 89 S. W. 752.

56. In action based on violation of mines law, an instruction following the language of the act relative to the duties of mine examiners is not improper. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516, 75 N. E. 375.

57. See 4 C. L. 608, also Verdicts and Findings, 4 C. L. 1803.

58. General verdict for plaintiff inconsistent with special findings that he did not come in contact with shaft intentionally or knowingly, and did not do so accidentally. Stratton v. Nichols Lumber Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 831. In an action based on a failure to guard cogwheels, a special verdict that the cause of injury was plaintiff's slipping on a piece of shafting on the floor is inconsistent with a general verdict for plaintiff, and such general verdict may be disregarded. Roats Co. v. Meeker [Ind.] 73 N. E. 253. Special findings that plaintiff knew or ought to have known of the danger of operating a machine in the way he did, and that his injury would have been avoided if the master had properly instructed him and he had used due care, held ambiguous and to neutralize each other, hence general verdict for plaintiff sustained. Flickner v. Lambert [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 263. Where special findings of fact showed that injury would not have occurred but for negligence of plaintiff, a general verdict for plaintiff should on motion be set aside and judgment entered for defendant. National Brass Mfg. Co. v. Rawlings [Kan.] 80 P. 628.

59. Action against railway company and its master mechanic, by whose negligence the death of a brakeman was alleged to have been caused. Verdict in favor of the master mechanic discharged the company, hence, verdict against the latter was set aside. Stevick v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 999.

60. See 4 C. L. 608.

61. Rooney v. Woolworth [Conn.] 61 A. 366. The master is liable for torts of his servants done with a view to the furtherance of the master's business, and in the line of duty. Crandall v. Boutell [Minn.] 103 N. W. 890. Master liable where teamster who delivered a load of lumber negligently dumped it on the side of a hill so that it slid down and struck plaintiff—the purchaser. Dumontier v. Stetson & P. Mill Co. [Wash.] 81 P. 693. Special deputy sheriff, paid by street railway company, put off a passenger for refusal to pay fare, being directed to do so by the conductor, and struck the passenger in so doing. Company held liable. Foster v. Grand Rapids R. Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 311, 104 N. W. 380. Employer who authorized collector to go to plaintiff's rooms after furniture was liable for an assault on plaintiff by the collector. Peddie v. Gally, 109 App. Div. 178, 95 N. Y. S. 652. Servant sent to collect for furniture or take the goods held to have been trying to carry out his master's instructions when he made an assault on the purchaser. Ziegenhein v. Smith, 116 Ill. App. 80. Where servants sent to put up a stove purchased of defendant informed the purchaser that the chimney was blocked with refuse and agreed to remove it but failed to do so, as a result of which the purchaser was asphyxiated when a fire was started, the seller was liable. Crandall v. Boutell [Minn.] 103 N. W. 890. Where man was knocked from his bicycle by a vehicle, evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that the driver was defendant's servant, that vehicle belonged to defendant, and that driver was at the time engaged in his master's business and acting within the scope of his employment. Louisville Water Co. v. Phillips' Adm'r [Ky.] 89 S. W. 700. Saloon keeper would be liable to a customer to whom his servant served a drugged drink, while acting in the course of his employment. Tway v. Salvin, 109 App. Div. 288, 95 N. Y. S. 653. Evidence, however, insufficient to show defendant was proprietor of saloon where drink was served. Id.

62. Rule applied where freight conductor threw a boy stealing a ride off the train, causing him to fall under wheels. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kerr [Neb.] 104 N. W. 49. The master is liable for his servant's act done in the course of his employment and to further his master's purposes, though the act was willful and deliberate. Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015. If an act done by a servant is within the scope of his employment, the master is liable even though the act is willful, wanton, or done in an excessive manner. Bowen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 306. Defendant liable where its agent had plaintiff arrested without legal cause in order to get him out of the way while defendant's poles were being placed on plaintiff's land. Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015. Railway company liable if its servant, in charge of an engine willfully permitted it to run down a person, without warning. Greene v. New York, etc., R. Co., 102 App. Div. 322, 92 N. Y. S. 424.

63. Crandall v. Boutell [Minn.] 103 N. W. 890. Master liable for injuries caused by running away of a horse in charge of his delivery boy, the horse having been the servant's employment.[64] If a servant, having completed his duty to his master, then proceeds to prosecute some private purpose of his own, the master is not liable for his acts;[65] but if the servant, while engaged about his master's business, merely deviates from the direct line of duty to accomplish some personal end, the master's responsibility may be suspended, but it is re-established when the servant resumes his duty.[66] A deviation, even if in violation of express orders, is not an abandonment of the master's service.[67] When the object of the servant's temporary departure from the master's service has been accomplished, and the servant re-engages in the discharge of his duty, the master's responsibility instantly attaches.[68] negligently left untied, even though the boy had been ordered to tie the horse, and had been furnished with a hitching strap and weight for the purpose. Healy v. Johnson, 127 Iowa, 221, 103 N. W. 92.

64. A person came to railway office to inquire about freight charges, and was told by station agent, as he had turned and was about to go, that there was a package for him. He turned to window, and agent gave him a book to sign, and then shot him while signing. The company was not liable for the agent's act, resulting in death of the person shot. Bowen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 306. Act of bell boy in opening door of elevator for waitress was not the act of his master, he having nothing to do with the elevator. Cullen v. Higgins, 216 Ill. 78, 74 N. E. 698. Son of automobile dealer, employed as clerk, on a day when he was given a holiday, took out a machine without his father's knowledge and took a friend driving. The father was held not liable for injuries resulting from a runaway, caused by the machine. Reynolds v. Buck, 127 Iowa, 601, 103 N. W. 946. Use of beer, and passing of bottles among band men, was not within the scope of their employment as musicians, and a spectator, injured by a bottle which was dropped, could not recover from owner of amusement park. Williams v. Mineral City Park Ass'n [Iowa] 102 N. W. 783. In action for unlawful arrest by defendants' servants, plaintiff must prove that the servants had express or implied authority to make the arrest. Vara v. Quigley Const. Co., 114 La. 261, 38 So. 162. Authority to cause the arrest of persons on a charge of violating a labor contract is not implied in the employment of agents or clerks to run a commissary store and to collect amounts due by laborers to a construction company. Id. Under Civ. Code art. 2320, the responsibility of masters is confined to damages caused by servants in the "exercise of the functions in which they are employed," and they are not liable for collateral torts committed while the servants are engaged in their employments. Id. Conductor who called a policeman to arrest two "crooks" on his car, as a joke on the policeman, was acting outside the scope of his employment, and company was not liable for an injury to the policeman on the car. Berry v. Boston El. R. Co., 188 Mass. 536, 74 N. E. 933. It is not within scope of motorman's employment to eject a boy from a car. Drolshagen v. Union Depot R. Co., 186 Mo. 258, 85 S. W. 344. If defendant's watchman was not acting under orders in ejecting plaintiff from a car defendant was not liable for servant's act in shooting plaintiff. Howard v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 110 Mo. App. 574, 85 S. W. 608. Hotel employe who accidentally shot a boy who was a guest at the hotel, while they were playing together, the employe being off duty at the time, was not acting as a servant or within the scope of his employment at the time. Clancy v. Barker [Neb.] 103 N. W. 446. Defendant not liable for malicious prosecution instituted by credit clerk when evidence did not show the clerk's act was authorized or was within scope of his employment. Staton v. Mason, 94 N. Y. S. 417. A chauffeur who takes out his master's automobile contrary to the owner's instructions is not while so doing acting within the scope of his employment. Stewart v. Baruch, 93 N. Y. S. 161. Drivers of automobile held not to be engaged in business of the owner at time of an accident and owner not liable. Clark v. Buckmobile Co., 94 N. Y. S. 771. Company not liable where trainman threw bricks at a dwelling house near the track. Davenport v. Charleston & W. C. R. Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 677. Acts of floorwalker in accusing plaintiff of having stolen goods, and making it appear that she had done so, and then assaulting and imprisoning her, all for the purpose of extorting money from her, were outside the scope of his employment. Cobb v. Simon, 124 Wis. 467, 102 N. W. 891.

65. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210. An act done by a servant while engaged in his master's work but not done as a means or for the purpose of performing that work is not to be deemed the act of the master. Where elevator man stepped from elevator and assaulted a passenger he had carried up, master was not liable. Fairbanks v. Boston Storage Warehouse Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 737.

66. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210.

67, 68. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210. Railway employe was placed in charge of a steam pump and was also under duty of procuring fuel for the same along the right of way, being supplied with a tricycle for that purpose. He went for fuel at a certain spot but before getting it, carried a sick friend to a station beyond. On his way back, and before he reached the place where the fuel was, he struck and injured plaintiff on a trestle. It was held that he had resumed the discharge of his duties and that the master was liable. Id.

Note: A writer in the Michigan Law Review comments on the case above cited as follows: "The principle is well settled that the master is not liable for the negligent act

A master who intrusts custody and control of a dangerous appliance or agency to a servant cannot avoid responsibility for injuries inflicted thereby on the plea that the servant was acting outside the scope of his employment in the doing of the particular act complained of.[69] Whether a particular appliance or agency is dangerous within the meaning of this rule may be a question of fact.[70]

A messenger company impliedly contracts that messengers furnished by it are suitable and proper persons for the performance of the ordinary duties of messengers, so far as the exercise of ordinary care in the selection and employment of them will enable it to procure such persons.[71] If special and peculiar service is required different from that ordinarily required of such messengers, and the company is not informed of the fact, no special arrangement being made, it is not liable to the employer for a breach of trust by the messenger, either as a master,[72] or as a common carrier.[73]

The doctrine respondeat superior is of course inapplicable unless the relation of master and servant existed at the time between the defendant and the person charged with the wrongful act or omission.[74] Thus, an employer is not liable for

of the servant done outside the apparent scope of the master's business and the servant's employment. Bishop, Non-Contract Law, § 612; Mechem, Agency, §§ 737 et seq.; Smith, Master & Servant, p. 339. But however apparently simple and easy of comprehension the rule may be, it is sometimes found difficult of application, though the difficulty in each particular case arises not from any uncertainty in the rule itself but in ascertaining whether the act complained of was done in the execution of the master's business, and within the scope of the agent's employment. Various tests have been suggested for the purpose of solving this troublesome question, but in each one this inquiry is predominant: Was the agent engaged at the time in serving the principal? Lima R. Co. v. Little, 67 Ohio St. 91; Holler v. Ross, 68 N. J. Law 324, 96 Am. St. Rep. 546, 59 L. R. A. 943. If the servant was at the time when the injury was inflicted, acting for himself and as his own master, pro tempore, the master is not liable. If the servant steps aside from his master's business for however short a time to an act not connected with such business, the relation of master and servant is for the time suspended. Morier v. Railroad Co., 31 Minn. 351, 47 Am. Rep. 793; Krzikowsky v. Sperring, 107 Ill. App. 493; Stephenson v. Southern Pacific Co., 93 Cal. 558, 27 Am. St. Rep. 223, 15 L. R. A. 475; Cobb v. Simon, 119 Wis. 597, 100 Am. St. Rep. 909. In the recent case of Loomis v. Hollister, 75 Conn. 718, the court said: "When the servant takes his master's team in pursuance of his employment and, abandoning the purpose for which he started, goes off on some business of his own, he may thus take his master's team into his own possession without authority, for the transaction of his own business, and in such case his acts are not in the execution of his master's business and his master is not liable for his negligence." The leading cases on this subject are cited and commented upon in both the majority and dissenting opinions in the principal case, but the conclusions arrived at are in conflict. We believe the conclusion of the majority cannot be sustained in law, and that the error into which the court has fallen is in confusing deviation from the master's service with a total departure therefrom. In the language of the dissenting chief justice, 'The principle here stated is fraught with great danger. With all deference I greatly fear that this decision will certainly return to plague the court.' "—3 Mich. L. R. 670.

69. Rule applied where railway servant intrusted with tricycle ran down a person on a trestle. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210. Where a railroad employe who is the custodian of a railway torpedo negligently placed it on the track where it was likely to be removed or knocked into the street, or left it in the street, the master is liable for injuries to a child who picked it up. Merschel v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 465, 85 S. W. 710.

70. Whether railroad tricycle was dangerous should have been submitted to the jury. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210.

71. Where boy appropriated money he was sent to collect, there was no evidence of negligence in employing him, and no liability on that ground. Haskell v. Boston Dist. Messenger Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 215.

72. While performing such special service, as collecting money which the messenger appropriated, the messenger is the servant of the employer though in the general employ of the company. Haskell v. Boston Dist. Messenger Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 215.

73. The messenger company is not an insurer of everything intrusted to the messenger. Haskell v. Boston Dist. Messenger Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 215.

74. The fact that a person is seen operating the machinery of a carrier is sufficient, if entirely unexplained, to warrant the inference that such person was the carrier's servant. Wilson v. Alexander [Tenn.] 88 S. W. 935. Where a railway company owned cabs and horses and rented them to drivers at a certain rental per day, under certain regulations, but otherwise intrusting the use of the property to the discretion of the drivers, the company and drivers were not master and servants but bailor and bailees.

acts of an independent contractor.[75] An independent contractor is one who undertakes to do a piece of work according to his own methods, being subject to the control of his employer only as to the result.[76] One who is subject to the control of his employer as to the means to be employed as well as to the result is a servant, and not an independent contractor.[77] In determining whose servant a person was at a particular time, authority to control is the test.[78]

Duties owed by property owners to the public are absolute and delegation of such duties to a servant does not relieve the owner from responsibility.[79] Those who visit public places in response to invitation made generally or otherwise have a right to personal protection from assault by agents or servants of the person or corporation extending such invitation.[80] One who is invited upon premises where a public building is being constructed assumes ordinary risks but not the risk of incompetency or negligence of servants there engaged.[81]

Damages.[82]—Exemplary damages cannot be awarded unless the acts of the servant are willful, wanton, or malicious.[83]

Liability of servant.—A master who has been compelled to pay damages caused by negligence of a servant has a right to recover from the servant.[84] A servant is personally liable to third persons when his wrongful act is the direct and proximate cause of the injury, whether such wrongful act be one of nonfeasance or misfeasance.[85]

Connor v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 241. A person being driven by another is prima facie liable for his driver's act whether he is the owner or bailee of the vehicle which is subject to his control. Kelton v. Fifer, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 603.

75. Parrott v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 419, 103 N. W. 352. Abutting owner not liable for negligence of contractor employed to build sidewalk. Massey v. Oates [Ala.] 39 So. 142. Owner of property is not responsible for the negligence of a person acting independently in the execution of some undertaking in connection therewith, when the owner does not have the right to control and does not control the method of execution. Connor v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 241.

76. Parrott v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 419, 103 N. W. 352. One who contracted to do a job of paper hanging at a certain price, furnishing his own material, tools and labor, was an independent contractor. Southwestern Tel. & T. Co. v. Paris [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 194, 87 S. W. 724.

77. Contract for grading and filling construed and held to create relation of master and servant between railway company and contractor and former held liable for damage caused by latter. Parrott v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 419, 103 N. W. 352.

78. Where teamster, employed by one whose business it was to hire out teams, received a notice from defendant of the arrival of freight, together with charges, and was requested to haul it, and the teamster turned the money and notice over to his employer, and thereafter was told to haul the freight for defendant, the teamster was, while unloading the freight, under the control of his employer, and not of the defendant for whom the hauling was being done. Bentley, Shriver & Co. v. Edwards [Md.] 60 A. 283. Hence he was not a fellow-servant of a teamster employed by defendant. Id. In action to recover a statutory penalty for ejection from a race course, whether the persons who ejected plaintiff were servants of defendant or of a detective agency, an independent contractor, was for the jury, the evidence being conflicting. Greenberg v. Western Turf Ass'n [Cal.] 82 P. 684.

79. The duty of the owner of a building to maintain it in a reasonably safe condition as to the public is absolute and the owner is not relieved from responsibility by delegating it to a servant, even though he exercises due care in selecting such servant. Connolly v. Des Moines Inv. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 400. Rule applied when passerby was struck by window cap which fell from building. Id.

80. Assault by guard on person who came to see races, while he was crossing the race track. Brooks v. Jennings County Agricultural Joint-Stock Ass'n [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 951.

81. Negligence or incompetency of elevator man held not assumed. De Haven v. Hennessey Bros. & Evans Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 472. Where plaintiff had frequently been invited on premises where public building was being built by the foreman in charge, it was a question of fact whether another employe, who, in the foreman's absence, invited plaintiff into the building, was acting as a vice-principal, and in the scope of his employment. Id.

82. See 4 C. L. 610.

83. Evidence held not to warrant exemplary damages in collision case. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Lauth, 216 Ill. 176, 74 N. E. 738.

84. The right of action does not accrue until payment by the master has been compelled; and the master has two years thereafter in which to bring suit under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 4805. Gaffner v. Johnson [Wash.] 81 P. 859.

85. Complaint held not to show injury as

(§ 4) B. Procedure. Pleading.[86]—If counts are inconsistent, plaintiff may be required to elect.[87]

Evidence.[88]—The burden is upon the plaintiff to prove that the negligence charged was the proximate cause of the injury,[89] and that the person charged therewith was a servant of the defendant.[90]

Questions of law and fact.[91]—If the facts are undisputed, the question whether a servant is acting within the scope of his employment is for the court; if there is a conflict as to the facts, the question is for the jury.[92]

Actions against master and servant jointly.[93]—At common law the master and servant cannot be sued jointly where the former's liability is predicated solely upon negligence of the latter.[94] Where in such case a joint action is permitted by statute, as in Indiana,[95] a verdict in favor of the servant and against the master is self-contradictory and cannot stand.[96]

§ 5. Civil liability for interference with relation by third person.[97]—The right to dispose of one's labor and to have the benefit of one's lawful contracts can be lawfully interfered with only by one acting in the exercise of an equal or superior right which comes in conflict with the other.[98] The malicious and unjustifiable procurement of a breach of an existing contract of employment, resulting in damages, is an actionable wrong.[99] Interference by a third person is not actionable if the party rescinding the contract has a legal justification therefor.[1] An intentional interference without lawful justification is malicious in law, even if it is from good motives and without express malice.[2] The fact that a contract of employment is terminable at will does not affect the right of recovery from one who unlawfully interferes with such employment, though it does affect the amount of damages recoverable.[3] A contract between an employer and a labor union, whereby the former agrees not to retain in its employ any person objectionable to the union, does not, as against an employe not a member of the union, justify interference with his employment by one representing the union;[4] nor is interference by a union with the employment of one not a member, on the sole ground of nonmembership, justifiable as a kind of competition.[5] direct and proximate result of wrongful act of one alleged to be the agent of the railway company. Ellis v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 52 S. E. 228.

86. See 4 C. L. 611.

87. Counts held inconsistent in complaint for death of boy ejected from car by motorman. Drollshagen v. Union Depot R. Co., 186 Mo. 258, 85 S. W. 344.

88. See 4 C. L. 611.

89. Prinz v. Lucas [Pa.] 60 A. 309.

90. Where there was no direct evidence to show that brick which injured plaintiff was caused to fall by servants of defendant, a nonsuit was properly entered. Laven v. Moore, 211 Pa. 245, 60 A. 725.

91. See 4 C. L. 611.

92. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 210. When facts are undisputed and act is clearly outside the scope of servant's employment, it is the duty of the court to so declare. Connor v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 241. Whether false imprisonment was caused by servant while acting for his master or for his own private purposes held for jury. Jackson v. American Tel. & T. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 1015. Whether driver of team was acting within scope of employment at time of injuries caused by his negligence, held for jury. Brough v. Towle [Mass.] 73 N. E. 851. Whether a servant is acting within the scope of his authority in the commission of a wrongful and willful act is a question for the jury. Green v. New York, etc., R. Co., 102 App. Div. 322, 92 N. Y. S. 424.

93. See 4 C. L. 611.

94. McNemar v. Cohn, 115 Ill. App. 31.

95. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 314; and see Indiana Nitroglycerin & Torpedo Co. v. Lippincott Glass Co. [Ind. App.] 72 N. E. 183; 4 C. L. 611, n. 88.

96. Indiana Nitroglycerin & Torpedo Co. v. Lippencott Glass Co. [Ind.] 75 N. E. 649.

97. See 4 C. L. 612.

98. Berry v. Donovan, 188 Mass. 353, 74 N. E. 603.

99. As where combination of employers procured union men to leave the shop of one who refused to remain in the combination or abide by its rules. Employing Printers' Club v. Doctor Blosser Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 353.

1. The act of a third person in inducing an employer to discharge an employe is not actionable if the employer had the right to discharge him. Holder v. Cannon Mfg. Co., 138 N. C. 308, 50 S. E. 681, granting rehearing; see 135 N. C. 392, 47 S. E. 481. Evidence in-

§ 6. Crimes and penalties.[6]—The Georgia statute making it illegal to procure an advancement on a contract for services with intent to defraud is held constitutional.[7] The act does not provide for imprisonment for debt.[8] The provision that certain proof shall be presumptive evidence of a fraudulent intent is not an assumption of judicial functions by the legislature.[9] The act applies to a cropper who is himself to perform services.[10] A minor who has reached the age of criminal responsibility may be convicted under the act though his contract is not civilly enforceable.[11] An accusation under the act must set forth at least in substance a contract definite and certain as to its terms and duration.[12] To warrant a conviction, the proof must sustain the charge[13] as laid in the accusation.[14]

In South Carolina, also, violation by an employe of a contract for labor under which money has been advanced is a criminal offense.[15] A contract under which money is advanced to stop a prosecution of the employe for violation of another contract is void,[16] and for violation of such void contract the employe cannot be convicted.[17]

Proof that the laborer himself contracted with the employer is indispensable to a conviction under the Mississippi statute penalizing the act of inducing an employe to break his contract for labor with another.[18] Under the similar Georgia statute, there can be no conviction where the proof fails to show that accused knew that a contract existed between the employe and the prosecutor, or that accused enticed, decoyed or persuaded the employe to leave his employment.[19]

MASTERS AND COMMISSIONERS.[20]

§ 1. Office, eligibility, appointment, and compensation.[21]—A master in chansufficient to show discharge procured by agents of defendants while acting within the scope of their authority. Holder v. Cannon Mfg. Co., 138 N. C. 308, 50 S. E. 681.

2, 3, 4, 5. Berry v. Donovan, 188 Mass. 353, 74 N. E. 603.

6. See 4 C. L. 612.

7. Laws 1903, p. 90. Title is sufficient, and act does not contain more than one subject-matter. Banks v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 74. The act is not repugnant to the constitution of Georgia or the United States. Townsend v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 293.

8. Prohibited act is made criminal, and imprisonment is for crime. Banks v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 74.

9. Proof of contract, of procuring of money or other thing of value, of failure to perform service or return advancement, and loss to the hirer, is presumptive evidence of fraudulent intent. Banks v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 74.

10, 11. Vinson v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 79.

12. An accusation which fails to state when a contract was to begin or end is fatally defective. Wilson v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 82. There can be no conviction when the term of service has been left indefinite and unascertainable from the agreement. McCoy v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 434.

13. Evidence insufficient to support conviction under statute. Glenn v. State [Ga.] 51 S. E. 605. Conviction not sustained where proof failed to show contract relation between accused and prosecutor. Townsend v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 293.

14. Where the accusation charged a contract with Mrs. M. E. Drake and the evidence showed W. E. Drake to be the employer who sustained loss, a conviction could not be sustained especially where the evidence was unsatisfactory as to the fraudulent intent of the minor employe, there being evidence that he was compelled to quit the employment by his mother. Williams v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 156. An accusation charging that accused procured from the hirer "money, shoes and clothes of the value of $13, with intent not to perform such service, to the loss and damage of the hirer in the sum of $4" is not sustained by proof that the hirer advanced "in money, clothes, etc., $13.50" and that accused owed the hirer $4 on account of advancements. Banks v. State [Ga.] 52 S. E. 74.

15. Where a contract made March 14 was violated March 16, the violation was punishable under Act 1904, taking effect March 16. State v. Robinson, 70 S. C. 468, 50 S. E. 192.

cery is an assistant or minister to the court appointed by the court if no rule or statute provides for it. He must be impartial and is usually bonded.[22]

The character of the duties performed by the master being inferior to those of the chancellor, the compensation should be correspondingly lower.[23] Except where fixed by statute[24] the amount of the master's fees is discretionary with the court[25] and is not subject to review unless abused.[26] The basis should be just compensation for the time which one having the requisite qualifications to serve in that capacity would, in view of the volume of testimony to be considered and of the principles of law to be applied, necessarily be required to devote in order to reach a conclusion as to the questions of fact and principles of law involved, and to place such findings and conclusions in proper shape to present to the court.[27] Members of the bar, masters in chancery, and others having knowledge gained from experience, are competent to testify with reasonable certainty as to the time required,[28] but evidence of the usual and customary compensation of masters is inadmissible.[29] The claim of the master should be so itemized as to distinctly show the service for which he claims the right to make a charge,[30] and if the parties who are called upon to pay the demands of the master object to the claim as presented, the master should be required to support his claim with proof.[31] A master's report being suppressed, the master should not be allowed any fee for services connected therewith[32] unless his report of the testimony is, by consent of the litigants, availed of on re-reference, in which case he should be allowed fees for taking and reporting the proof.[33] An order allowing the master's fees is not of itself a final, appealable order,[34] and the master should not be made a party to a writ of error to review the allowance of his fees,[35] though in some states the right of appeal extends to the master.[36] In the absence of a certificate of evidence it will be presumed on appeal that the amount fixed was reasonable and just.[37]

16, 17. State v. Robinson, 70 S. C. 468, 50 S. E. 192.

18. Under Acts 1900, c. 102, p. 140, proof that the contract of a minor who was enticed away was made by the natural guardian of the minor, is insufficient. State v. Richardson [Miss.] 38 So. 497.

19. Construing Pen. Code 1895, § 122. Evidence held insufficient. McAllister v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 921.

20. This article includes all matter relating to masters in chancery and court commissioners. Analogous matter may be found in the titles Reference, 4 C. L. 1257; Restoring Instruments and Records (examiners of title under burnt record acts), 4 C. L. 1294; Notice and Record of Title (referees under Torrens act), 4 C. L. 829, and Partition, 4 C. L. 898. Also see Arbitration and Award, 5 C. L. 250, and Depositions, 5 C. L. 988.

For a full discussion of the law and practice on this subject, including forms, see Fletcher Eq. Pl. & Pr., §§ 582-614.

21. See 4 C. L. 614.

22. Fletcher, Eq. Pl. & Pr. 592.

23. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430. Court should not allow compensation per diem equal to that of the judge of the court, if reduced to a per diem basis, for the working days of the year. Id.

24. When the statute specifies a fee the master is restricted thereto. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

25, 26. Symms v. Chicago, 115 Ill. App. 169.

27, 28, 29. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

30. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430. Claim of master for examining questions of law and fact and reporting conclusions thereon should show time necessarily employed in such work. Id.

31. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430. The proof should show the services rendered, the time actually and necessarily devoted by the master to the work, and such other facts as will enable the court to intelligently determine the rights of the master and the proper obligations of the litigants. Id.

32. Where master allowed one of the attorneys to draw up the report. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

33. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

34, 35. Symms v. Jamieson, 115 Ill. App. 165.

36. So held where a referee or master commissioner presents a claim for fees and expenses in the matter of the examination of a complicated guardian's account, and the claim is disallowed. In re Guardianship of Gorman, 2 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 667.

37. Symus v. Chicago, 115 Ill. App. 169.

§ 2. Powers and duties in general and subjects of reference.[38]—The court may order a reference when the issues are intricate[39] or the taking of an account is involved,[40] or where it desires an investigation of contemptuous conduct,[41] and it is said that there is scarcely any proceeding where a master may not be appointed,[42] but the master is a ministerial officer and the exercise of judicial power cannot be delegated to him.[43]

§ 3. Proceedings on reference and hearing by master.[44]—It is irregular to proceed before a master without a joinder of issues,[45] but this irregularity may be waived.[46] In proceedings before a master, ex parte affidavits are not competent evidence.[47] A party may at any time before the master makes his report amend his pleadings so as to conform to the proof,[48] but he cannot, as a matter of right, after the hearing has been concluded, insist upon being allowed to offer evidence to sustain an amendment introducing new and distinct issues of fact.[49] A Federal court has no power to order an examiner to remove books and documents, which have been produced before him by witnesses within the district, obedient to subpoenas duces tecum, to another district for use there in examining witnesses.[50]

§ 4. Report of master, exceptions and objections.[51]—The master should prepare the report himself.[52] The report is limited by the scope of the reference.[53] The general rules of construction apply.[54] Except as to errors apparent on the face of the report,[55] errors cannot be taken advantage of without exception.[56] The

38. See 4 C. L. 614, § 2.

39. Where the issues are intricate, involving not only the weighing of the testimony of witnesses but a careful and accurate application of this evidence to the facts, the cause should be referred to a master rather than to a jury. Harrodsburg Water Co. v. Harrodsburg [Ky.] 89 S. W. 729.

40. Whenever, under the state code, complicated accounts can be referred to a referee, a suit in equity lies in the federal courts to enable the chancellor to refer such matter to a master in chancery. McMullen Lumber Co. v. Strother [C. C. A.] 136 F. 295. Where a bill foreclosing trust deeds involved the adjustment of many different accounts, covering transactions with a number of different parties for a period of eight or nine years, the court should not proceed to a final hearing until an account has been stated by a master in chancery, and objections thereto settled by him. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430, and citing 6 Ill. Cyc. Dig. 1060, 1061. A reference requiring the master to state the accounts between the parties may be ordered, where a bill alleging that a partnership existed and asking for an accounting is filed and the answer admits everything essential to order such an accounting. Wilcoxon v. Wilcoxon, 111 Ill. App. 90.

41. Seastream v. New Jersey Exhibition Co. [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 914.

42. Fletcher Eq. Pl. & Pr. 593.

43. A contempt not being committed in open court and being punitive in character and not subject to an appeal, the judgment on the facts is a matter for the personal attention of the chancellor. Seastream v. New Jersey Exhibition Co. [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 914. Master's report in divorce case considered. Edgar v. Edgar, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 220; Rishel v. Rishel, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 303.

44. See 4 C. L. 615.

45. Patterson v. Johnson, 114 Ill. App. 329.

46. Held waived, no injury appearing, and the complaining party neither objecting to the reference nor to the proceedings before the master, and all the parties treating the issues as properly formed. Patterson v. Johnson, 114 Ill. App. 329.

47. Crane v. Stafford, 217 Ill. 21, 75 N. E. 424.

48, 49. First State Bank v. Avera [Ga.] 51 S. E. 665.

50. Pepper v. Rogers, 137 F. 173.

51. See 4 C. L. 615.

52. Report prepared by one of the attorneys, and accepted by the master with only a few unimportant changes in phraseology, suppressed. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

53. A commissioner appointed to report all the facts connected with the title to property, in a suit to enjoin the prosecution of the purchase price therefor, held justified in reporting what portion of the price was due. Dunn v. Stowers [Va.] 51 S. E. 366.

54. Where a wife purchased at a foreclosure sale of a mortgage given by her husband, and in a suit to set aside the deed to her the master found that she gave no consideration but that shortly after foreclosure she executed a mortgage for substantially the amount due on the original mortgage, held the fair construction of the report was that she paid the proceeds of the second mortgage to the first mortgagee. Hesseltine v. Hodges, 188 Mass. 247, 74 N. E. 319.

55. Bank of Union v. Nickell [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1003.

56. So held where it was claimed that evidence was insufficient to support findings. Bank of Union v. Nickell [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1003.

object of an exception is to specify the objections which the exceptant makes, either to the whole report or to specified parts thereof, with some statement of the grounds on which the exception is based.[57] Exceptions which state no reason for criticism of the whole report, specify no items of which the exceptant complains, and no particulars wherein the master is alleged to have erred, cannot be entertained.[58] Where the exceptions involve a consideration of the evidence, it is incumbent on the party excepting to set forth in connection with each exception the evidence necessary to be considered in passing thereon, or to attach thereto as an exhibit so much of the evidence as is pertinent, or to at least point out to the court where such evidence is to be found in the brief of the evidence prepared and filed by the auditor.[59] While the court should not hear exceptions not previously filed as objections before the master,[60] still there are a few exceptions to this rule, but even in the case of an exception to the rule it is the better practice to refer the case back to the master to review his report, so that the parties may have an opportunity of there excepting to it.[61]

§ 5. Powers of court and proceedings on review.[62]—The opinion of the master is merely advisory to the court, and the latter may accept or disregard it in whole or in part.[63] It is not intended that the court shall abdicate its duty to determine by its own judgment the controversy presented, and devolve that duty upon one of its officers.[64] Reports are intended to take up the whole case for the court to make final disposition. It should not come up by instalments.[65] While ordinarily a partial report will be discharged,[66] still in a few cases such a report will be entertained by the court.[67] Where nothing is reported except the evidence which bears upon the acceptance or rejection of the report, all the court is authorized to do is to sustain or overrule the exceptions.[68] The chancellor, after the master has reported and at the hearing, has power to investigate whether unauthorized alterations have been made in the transcript filed by the master.[69] The burden is on the exceptant to prove that the master was wrong,[70] and except in the case of fraud, clear

57. Merritt v. Jordan, 65 N. J. Eq. 772, 60 A. 183.

58. Merritt v. Jordan, 65 N. J. Eq. 772, 60 A. 183. Exceptions to the allowance by the auditor in an accounting of items of office expenses, aggregating specified sums covering specified dates, upon the ground that on the evidence before him he should have disallowed such items, held too general. Waggaman v. Earle, 25 App. D. C. 582.

59. First State Bank v. Avera [Ga.] 51 S. E. 665.

Note: This case must not be taken as overruling the case of White v. Reviere, 57 Ga. 386, as this latter case was decided with reference to the procedure which obtained prior to the passage of Laws 1894, p. 123. It follows that strictly speaking this case belongs primarily in "Reference," the Code analogy to reference to a master q. v. (the court recognizes this by citing 4 C. L. 1261 in support of the proposition), but, as the court says, this ruling is in accord with the equity practice.

60, 61. George Green Lumber Co. v. Nutriment Co., 113 Ill. App. 635.

62. See 4 C. L. 615.

63. Master appointed in divorce proceedings under Act of March 10, 1899, P. L. 8. Edgar v. Edgar, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 220.

64. Act of March 10, 1899, providing for the appointment of a master in divorce proceedings, considered. Edgar v. Edgar, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 220. Where master's report was hastily examined, referred back and part of the testimony lost, held court could not enter divorce decree. Rishel v. Rishel, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 303.

65. LaForest v. Blake Co. [Me.] 60 A. 899. Where a hearing was had before a single justice upon exceptions to the master's report, and thereupon, without any ruling or decision by the sitting justice, it was reported to the law court "for decision upon said exceptions," it being stipulated that "all further issues of law and fact necessary for a final decision of this cause" be before a single justice whose decision "shall be accepted as final," held irregular. Id.

66. LaForest v. Blake Co. [Me.] 60 A. 899.

67. So held where parties stipulated that, after decision of law court upon the exceptions to the master's report, all further issues of law and fact are to be determined finally by a single justice. LaForest v. Blake Co. [Me.] 60 A. 899. The court states, however, that this is not to be regarded as a precedent of practice. Id.

68. LaForest v. Blake Co. [Me.] 60 A. 899.

69. Bolter v. Kozlowski, 112 Ill. App. 13.

70. Christopher v. Mattlage [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 1124.

error or manifest lack of due consideration the master's findings of fact are to be taken as true;[71] and this is especially true where they have been confirmed by the chancellor and an appeal taken.[72]

§ 6. Re-reference.[73]—When necessary the report may be re-referred to the master.[74] A master's report being irregular, a re-reference should be to another master.[75] Unless the parties consent that the evidence reported by the first master shall be used on re-reference, the case should be referred anew for proofs and report.[76]

MASTERS OF VESSELS, see latest topical index.

MECHANICS' LIENS.

§ 1. Nature of lien and right to it in general.[77]—The right on which mechanics' liens on real property are founded is purely statutory[78] and is to be distinguished from the lien given at common law to one retaining in his possession property on which he has expended labor or material in enhancing its value.[79] A lien is to be construed in accordance with principles of substantial justice,[80] and while liberality should be exercised in construing the rights of parties under a mechanic's lien when it has once attached, the statute must be strictly followed in securing the lien.[81] The mechanics' lien laws are not unconstitutional as taking property without due process of law, for the owner thereof has obtained something for which he should be compelled to pay to the person furnishing it.[82]

71. So held, where the evidence other than certain exhibits was not before the court. Atlas Nat. Bank v. Abram French Sons Co., 134 F. 746.

72. Union Trac. Co. v. Grubb, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 345; Torrey v. Dickinson, 111 Ill. App. 524. Findings of fact by the auditor of the lower court are to be taken as presumptively correct, and, unless some obvious error has intervened in the application of the law, or some serious and important mistake has been made in the consideration of the evidence, a decree ratifying a report by him should be permitted to stand. Consaul v. Cummings, 24 App. D. C. 36.

73. See 4 C. L. 615.

74. Findings and conclusions of commissioner, affirmed by trial court, reversed and sent back, where it could not be ascertained to what extent a repealed law, supposed to be in force, had affected the decision. Richtman v. Haley [C. C. A.] 121 F. 353.

75. So held where master allowed one of the attorneys to prepare the report. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

76. Fitchburg Steam Engine Co. v. Potter, 211 Ill. 138, 71 N. E. 933, rvg. 110 Ill. App. 430.

77. See 4 C. L. 616.

78. Este v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 521.

79. Ocala Foundry & Mach. Works v. Lester [Fla.] 38 So. 51.

80. Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632.

81. Lapham v. Ransford, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 577; Martin v. Gavigan, 107 App. Div. 279, 95 N. Y. S. 14. Federal Bankruptcy Courts will follow the construction given to

§ 2. Services, materials, and claims for which liens may be had.[83]—Two things are essential that a materialman may avail himself of the statute, materials must be furnished and must be for the particular building on which the lien is filed.[84] It is not necessary that materials should be actually used in a building or structure but that they should be furnished for that purpose.[85] Thus a lien was allowed for a temporary scaffold used in plastering a building[86] and for dynamite used in blasting[87] and for a sidewalk laid in front of property[88] and for permanent fixtures installed in a house,[89] but not for a temporary bridge subsequently removed,[90] or for timber used in removal of an old building where another was erected in its place.[91] A charge for drayage may be added to the lien where by the agreement this was to be added to the price of materials.[92]

In nearly every state one furnishing labor in the construction of a building is entitled to a lien therefor.[93] Thus an architect has a right to a lien,[94] and a railroad construction contract is construed as one for "work and labor,"[95] but in some states where a lien is given on a railroad for labor rendered the remedy is not available to a subcontractor furnishing the labor.[96] A debt for labor or materials becomes a lien as soon as it becomes a debt.[97] Where the code gives a lien to "all persons, etc.," it includes corporations,[98] but it is a good defense that the corporation is not licensed to do business in the state,[99] but not that an individual does business under a designation prohibited by law.[1] One who lays pipes in the streets for the conveyance of steam from a central heating plant is entitled to a lien on the generating plant itself.[2]

§ 3. Properties and estates therein which may be subjected to the lien.[3]—A mechanics' lien for work and materials attaches to the land though in fact the building erected thereon is destroyed,[4] but not when the destruction was without fault and before the lien was filed,[5] and the assignee of a leasehold willfully destroy-the state mechanic lien laws by the state courts. In re Grissler [C. C. A.] 136 F. 754.

82. Gardner & Meeks Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A. 416.

83. See 4 C. L. 617.

84. Iowa Code, § 3089. Where materials were used for one house by a contractor representing that they were for another, the owner of the latter is not liable. Hobson Bros. v. Townsend, 126 Iowa, 453, 102 N. W. 413.

85. Hobson Bros. v. Townsend, 126 Iowa, 453, 102 N. W. 413. The fact that materials purchased by a contractor for use in a railroad had not actually gone into the construction of the road does not deprive the seller of his lien. Tennis Bros. Co. v. Wetzel & T. R. Co., 140 F. 193; Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 26.

86. Gates v. O'Gara [Ala.] 39 So. 729.

87. Schaghticoke Powder Co. v. Greenwich & J. R. Co. [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 153.

88. An "improvement" within meaning of statute, see 4 C. L. 617, n. 76. Leiper v. Minnig [Ark.] 86 S. W. 407.

89. Porch v. Agnew Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 721. Installation of counters and partitions. Mandary v. Smartt [Cal. App.] 82 P. 561. Installation of elevator and heating plant. Otis Elevator Co. v. Dusenbury, 47 Misc. 450, 95 N. Y. S. 959.

90. Temporary bridge erected to prevent penalty accruing by delays in erection of permanent bridge. Stimson Mill Co. v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 141 Cal. 30, 74 P. 357.

91. A "no lien" clause contained in the contract. Craig v. Commercial Trust Co., 211 Pa. 7, 60 A. 317.

92. Page v. Grant, 127 Iowa, 249, 103 N. W. 124.

93. Md. Acts. 1898, p. 1169, c. 502 subjects buildings to a lien for work done on or about the same but gives no lien for materials furnished. While a contractor furnishing certain carved marble work is not entitled to a lien, the subcontractor who furnishes the labor for the carving of the same may have a lien. Evans Marble Co. v. International Trust Co. [Md.] 60 A. 667.

94. Friedlander v. Taintor [N. D.] 104 N. W. 527; Richardson v. Central Lumber Co., 112 Ill. App. 160.

95. Tennis Bros. Co. v. Wetzel & T. R. Co., 140 F. 193.

96. Eastern Tex. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 83 S. W. 883.

97. P. L. 1898, p. 583. Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224.

98. Tennis Bros. Co. v. Wetzel & T. R. Co., 140 F. 193.

99. Iowa Falls Mfg. Co. v. Farrar [S. D.] 104 N. W. 449. And see New York Architectural Terra Cotta Co. v. Williams, 102 App. Div. 1, 92 N. Y. S. 808.

1. Individual using the name of "Vandergraff & Co." Vandegrift v. Bertron, 83 App. Div. 548, 82 N. Y. S. 153.

2. Wells v. Christian [Ind.] 76 N. E. 518.

3. See 4 C. L. 618.

4. Halsey v. Waukesha Springs Sanitarium [Wis.] 104 N. W. 94.

ing buildings subject to a lien is liable for the value of the buildings.[6] Whether fixtures in a building are lienable articles depends largely on the intention of the parties.[7] Where labor and materials are furnished to two separate and unconnected houses, a separate lien must be filed on each,[8] and it is a question of fact whether a double house is in fact one building or two;[9] but where all the work is done under one contract on two adjoining houses on adjacent lots held by the owner under one conveyance, one lien can cover both.[10]

Sale of property.[11]—A change of ownership while work is in progress does not defeat the lien,[12] and similarly where a mechanics' lien exists against buildings on leased land the assignee takes subject to the lease.[13]

Homestead.[14]—A mechanic's lien cannot be foreclosed against a building on land held under the United States Homestead Law, for a lien cannot be enforced against a building unless the owner has some interest in the land which may be sold to satisfy the lien,[15] and in Texas, where a lien can be placed on a homestead only for improvements and purchase money, attorney's fees in foreclosure cannot be added to the amount due.[16] Where persons are entitled who perform labor in erection of a manufactory, etc., a steam heating plant is classed as a manufactory.[17]

Public buildings.[18]—Unless expressly provided, the mechanics' lien law does not apply to state and municipal buildings;[19] but statutes are becoming common which require a bond to secure mechanics and materialmen.[20]

§ 4. The contract supporting the lien and the privity of the landowner thereto. A. In general.[21]—A mechanics' lien arises out of some contractual relation between the owner of the land or one having some interest therein and the person claiming the lien,[22] and to hold the owner estopped to deny the contractual relation it is necessary to show his knowledge of the improvements or bad faith on his part.[23] Where a deed is shown to a certain person and there appears no deed of record conveying the title from him, the lien claimant is justified in regarding him as the

5. Humboldt Lumber Mill Co. v. Crisp, 146 Cal. 686, 81 P. 30.

6. Hammond v. Darlington, 109 Mo. App. 333, 84 S. W. 446.

7. In the absence of evidence showing a contrary intent, gas fixtures are not subject to a mechanics' lien. Frank Adam Elec. Co. v. Gottlieb, 112 Mo. App. 226, 86 S. W. 901. Machinery in a mill fastened to the ground but not to the walls. Roof of building enlarged to accommodate it. Held a fixture. Pflueger v. Lewis Foundry & Mach. Co. [C. C. A.] 134 F. 28.

8. McElroy v. Keiley [R. I.] 60 A. 679. Where materials furnished three houses under one contract containing nothing to specify how much is done on each house each is liable for the whole amount of the existing indebtedness. Guarantee, Sav. Loan & Investment Co. v. Cash [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 749.

9. Union Trac. Co. v. Grubb, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 345.

10. Woolf v. Schaefer, 93 N. Y. S. 184.

11. See 4 C. L. 619.

12. Billings Co. v. Brand [Mass.] 73 N. E. 637.

13. Hammond v. Darlington, 109 Mo. App. 333, 84 S. W. 446.

14. See 4 C. L. 620.

15. Green v. Tenold [N. D.] 103 N. W. 398. See, also, note in Landlord and Tenant, 6 C. L. 368, text 45.

16. Cooper v. Brazelton [C. C. A.] 135 F. 476.

17. Wells v. Christian [Ind.] 76 N. E. 518.

18. See 4 C. L. 620.

19. Goss Co. v. Greenleaf, 98 Me. 436, 57 A. 581.

20. See 4 C. L. 1138.

21. See 4 C. L. 620.

22. Contractual relation must be shown. Egan v. Cheshire St. R. Co. [Conn.] 61 A. 950; Entenman v. Anderson, 94 N. Y. S. 45; Hengstenberg v. Hoyt, 109 Mo. App. 622, 83 S. W. 539. To maintain a mechanics' lien for material furnished, it is necessary that the items should be furnished on request of the owner or his duly authorized agent. Snyder & Co. v. Sparks [Neb.] 103 N. W. 662. The affidavit for a mechanics' lien must show that the material was furnished to, and under a contract with, the owner of some interest in the land, in order to bind the interest of such owner. Lapham v. Ransford, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 577.

23. Snyder v. Monroe Eckstein Brewing Co., 107 App. Div. 328, 95 N. Y. S. 144. Where a vendor in the presence of the vendee gives orders for new plumbing to be done in a building, the latter is bound thereby. Getz v. Brubaker, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 303. Where a husband orders work on his wife's buildings and she is present and knows and sees the improvements, her property is subject to the lien. Schummer v. Clark, 107 App. Div. 207, 95 N. Y. S. 836.

owner.[24] No claim for a mechanic's lien arises till a payment is actually due[25] and the principal contract is substantially complied with,[26] and it is immaterial if subsequent to filing his lien the contractor has fulfilled his contract obligations.[27] In Illinois to entitle one to a lien it must appear from the principal contract that the work is to be completed and the final payment to be made within one year from the date thereof,[28] and an implied contract is not sufficient basis for a mechanic's lien;[29] but the furnishing of extra materials or extra work is often regarded as modification of the principal contract.[30]

(§ 4) B. Contracts by vendors, purchasers, lessors, and lessees.[31]—There is no such privity between the lessee and the owner as to allow interest of the latter to be bound by contracts for improvements made by the tenant,[32] and similarly in the case of a licensee[33] or the holder of a recorded mortgage. As between the owner and subsequent grantees with notice a mechanic's lien claimant is not required to file any notice,[34] and a vendee who in absence of representations of the contractor purchases while a building is in process of construction takes subject to his lien though the lien is not recorded and he has no notice thereof.[35] The vendee is not constituted agent of the vendor in the purchase of material for buildings to go upon the land under a contract for transfer of the land after erection of the 24. Badger Lumber Co. v. Muehlebach, 109 Mo. App. 646, 83 S. W. 546.

25. Where an architect's certificate is a prerequisite to payment, the owner cannot pay contractor after notice till it is obtained. Daly v. Somers Lumber Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 730; Nesbit v. Braker, 93 N. Y. S. 856. Where an architect is to be paid on the completion of a building according to a per cent. basis, he has no lien till the building is actually completed. Richardson v. Central Lumber Co., 112 Ill. App. 160.

26. See Building and Construction Contracts, 5 C. L. 455. Rainey v. Freeport Smokeless Coal & Coking Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 473; Derr v. Kearney, 46 Misc. 148, 93 N. Y. S. 1099. Where the contract for shingling a roof provides for payment on completion of the work, no just claim for a lien exists on delivery of the shingles. Woolf v. Schaefer, 93 N. Y. S. 184. No lien exists for repair of a roof where it continues to leak. Terrell v. McHenry [Ky.] 89 S. W. 306. Approval by the architect and owner is conclusive as to substantial compliance with the contract. Toan v. Russell, 111 Ill. App. 629; Otis Elevator Co. v. Dusenbury, 47 Misc. 450, 95 N. Y. S. 959. Where by a fraudulent agreement between claimant and former owner the admissions of the latter are not conclusive against one purchasing from him. Chamberlain v. Golden, 27 Ky. L. R. 686, 86 S. W. 521. Where time goes to the essence of a contract, a delay in completion prevents such substantial compliance as to entitle the contractor to a lien. Tompkins Co. v. Monticello Cotton Oil Co., 137 F. 625. Generally, however, delay in completion is no defense. Central Bldg. Co. v. Karr Supply Co., 115 Ill. App. 610. Where the cellar windows are out of plumb, there is not such substantial compliance as to entitle the contractor to a lien. Schindler v. Green [Cal. App.] 82 P. 341. A lien exists though there are certain defects in the construction of a heating plant. Otis Elevator Co. v. Dusenbury, 47 Misc. 450, 95 N. Y. S. 959.

27. Aex v. Allen, 94 N. Y. S. 844.

28. Cooke v. Haungs, 113 Ill. App. 501; George-Green Lumber Co. v. Nutriment Co., 113 Ill. App. 635. No mechanics' lien can exist except from a contract which provides (1) a time within which work must be completed; (2) a time within which final payment is to be made; (3) the material furnished; and (4) work to be done. Henry v. Applegate, 111 Ill. App. 13. Contract must fix time of completion and payment. Bolter v. Kozlowski, 112 Ill. App. 13; Smith v. Central Lumber Co., 113 Ill. App. 477.

29. Henry v. Applegate, 111 Ill. App. 13; Burke v. Coyne, 188 Mass. 401, 74 N. E. 942. Amount due must be liquidated. Excelsior Terra Cotta Co. v. Harde, 181 N. Y. 11, 73 N. E. 494.

30. Extra radiator installed at request. Otis Elevator Co. v. Dusenbury, 47 Misc. 450, 95 N. Y. S. 959; Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632.

31. See 4 C. L. 621.

32. Ga. Code 1895, § 2801, Amended Act 1899, p. 33. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Peters Land Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 725; Seklir v. Krizer, 96 N. Y. S. 74. Where a lienor had foreclosed a leasehold interest but before entry it was forfeited to the lessor for breach of conditions, he cannot after entry by the lessor set up any claim thereto. Stetson & P. Mill Co. v. Pacific Amusement Co., 37 Wash. 335, 79 P. 935. Where the lessor authorizes the lessee to make permanent improvements, he is bound and the lessee acts as his agent. Dougherty-Moss Lumber Co. v. Churchill [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 405.

33. A sale of a bridge and abutments, in foreclosure of a mechanic's lien, described as "bridge and masonry" to the purchaser alone and not to his heirs and assigns, does not convey the land on which the abutments rest where the occupation thereof was by license only. Nicolai v. Baltimore [Md.] 60 A. 627.

34. Guarantee Sav., Loan & Investment Co. v. Cash [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 749.

35. Billings Co. v. Brand [Mass.] 73 N. E. 637.

buildings; and the interest of the vendor is not liable to the materialman;[36] but a vendee who subsequently acquires title may subject the property to a mechanic's lien,[37] but he is not bound by contracts of his vendor made subsequent to his option of which he had no notice.[38] One tenant doing work on the premises cannot cut out his co-tenant by the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien.[39]

(§ 4) C. Subcontractors and materialmen.[40]—Original contractors are those dealing directly with the owner.[41] Where a contractor can only recover the difference between the contract price and the amount owed by him to subcontractors after demand by them, he may have a lien only for that difference.[42] One who furnishes labor or materials to a contractor for use in a building generally has a lien for the value thereof upon the building.[43]

§ 5. Acts and proceedings necessary to acquire lien. A. Notice and demand, statement to acquire lien.[44]—A notice to owner[45] with sworn statement of claim is generally required.[46] This notice must show substantial compliance with the statute[47] and show when the contract was to be terminated and when the last payment was due thereof[48] and the date thereof,[49] and what material[50] and to whom it was furnished,[51] and must allege the necessary facts conjunctively and not in the alternative as set forth in the statute.[52] The amount claimed for labor and materials need not be separately stated in the notice to the owner.[53] The true owner

36. Lapham v. Ransford, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 577.

37. Builders' Supply Co. v. North Augusta Elec. & Improvement Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 231; Stewart Contracting Co. v. Trenton & N. B. R. Co., 71 N. J. Law, 568, 60 A. 405. A vendor endorsing the contract of a prospective vendee authorizes work done upon the premises though the latter fails to carry out his agreement. Sands v. Stagg [Va.] 52 S. E. 633.

38. Where a building contract is made after an option for the sale of property, a purchase-money mortgage made by the vendee thereof not having notice of the contract is prior to a mechanics' lien. Rochford v. Rochford, 188 Mass. 108, 74 N. E. 299.

39. Burnett v. Kirk [Wash.] 80 P. 855.

40. See 4 C. L. 622.

41. Sands v. Stagg [Va.] 52 S. E. 633.

42. Stimson v. Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden Co., 146 Cal 281, 79 P. 968.

43. Vickery v. Richardson [Mass.] 75 N. E. 136; Getz v. Brubaker, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 303; Evans Marble Co. v. International Trust Co. [Md.] 60 A. 667. Applies to laborers of a subcontractor engaged in building a railroad. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Baertz [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 51. A subcontractor does not come under the provision giving a lien on a railroad to laborers for work done in the construction thereof. Eastern Tex. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 83 S. W. 883. Where a contract runs to one person but is performed by another, the latter has a right to enforce the lien. Littell v. Saulsberry [Wash.] 82 P. 909. A lessee authorized by the lease to make repairs has not the remedy of a contractor and those acting by his direction are original contractors and not subcontractors. Dougherty-Moss Lumber Co. v. Churchill [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 405.

44. See 4 C. L. 623.

45. Prior to Ga. St. 1899, p. 33 and under Civ. Code 1895, § 2801, a lien must be asserted if at all against the true owner who is entitled to the notice required by law. Reaves v. Meredeth [Ga.] 51 S. E. 391.

46. Where the statute provides that the claim, statement must be verified, an acknowledgment thereof is insufficient. Schenectady Contracting Co. v. Schenectady R. Co., 94 N. Y. S. 401. A verification of a claim of a corporation may be made by manager or agent. Parke & Lacey Co. v. Inter Nos Oil & Development Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 51. Verification on information and belief is insufficient. Western Plumbing Co. v. Fried [Mont.] 81 P. 394.

47. Grant v. Cumberland Valley Cement Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 36; Este v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 521; Rainey v. Freeport Smokeless Coal & Coking Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 473.

48. Smith v. Central Lumber Co., 113 Ill. App. 477.

49. Nofziger Bros. Lumber Co. v. Shafer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 284.

50. A notice reciting that the labor performed is "plumbing and gas fitting and certain material furnished certain premises" is sufficient. Gilmour v. Colcord [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 273. Where the statute provides that the notice shall set forth the kind and amount of labor and material furnished, a notice setting forth the contract and specification is insufficient. Toop v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 283, 73 N. E. 1113.

51. A notice showing lumber furnished N. & Son (a corporation) when in fact furnished N. & Son (a partnership) is fatally defective. Sawyer Goodman Co. v. Neagle, 110 Ill. App. 178.

52. Lien statement showing "agreed price or value is $25" is fatally bad. Siegel v. Ehrshowsky, 92 N. Y. S. 733. Where the notice says "The name of the person by whom the lienor is employed or to whom he furnishes materials or is to furnish materials is X. And the person with whom the contract was made is X." it is good although the allegation is in the alternative. Martin v. Gavigan Co., 107 App. Div. 279, 95 N. Y. S. 14.

of the property must be named in the notice and the name of the record owner is insufficient,[54] and some intention to claim and hold a lien must appear from the notice.[55]

Service of notice on owner.[56]—The notice should be served on the owner,[57] and where the statute provides that in case of filing a lien against a railroad notice shall be served on it, such notice must be served personally on one of the officers, and service on agents as in other actions is insufficient,[58] and where liens are sought for materials used in road construction on the officer in control of such matters.[59] Generally by statute, where a notice of claim of lien is served on an owner, he is liable for any payments made thereafter to the contractor,[60] and where there is provision that on ten days' notice by a subcontractor to the owner he is to retain unpaid balances in his hands, this includes all unpaid balances due to him at the time of notice,[61] and in some states, in the absence of formal notice, where he knows that the amounts due to subcontractors or materialmen remain unpaid.[62] Where by the mechanic's lien law no lien can be had by a subcontractor unless the owner has, at the time of notice, money owing to the contractor in case of an attachment of money due by the sheriff, a subcontractor loses all right thereto,[63] but in such case where the owner is compelled to make an outlay to complete the building he may deduct this sum from the amount he owes the contractor as available for subcontractors,[64] and where a subcontractor has accepted a note extending payment till after the statutory period, his demand on owner to withhold payments to the principal contractor may be disregarded.[65] In advance of notice of subcontractor's claim an owner may in good faith pay his contractor in full,[66] but where the owner prematurely pays the contractor he is liable to the subcontractor to the extent of such payment,[67] and a payment without the contractor procuring the architect's certificate is not a premature payment, for this certificate is for the benefit of the owner and not of the unpaid

53. Martin v. Gavigan, 107 App. Div. 279, 95 N. Y. S. 14.

54. Lang v. Adams [Kan.] 80 P. 593.

55. A notice entitled "claim of lien" or "claim of benefit under mechanic's lien law" is substantial compliance with the statute which requires a notice of intention to claim a lien to be served. Mandary v. Smartt [Cal. App.] 82 P. 561.

56. See 4 C. L. 624.

57. Service on architect insufficient. Drummond v. Rice, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 226.

58. Dalton v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 113 Mo. App. 71, 87 S. W. 610.

59. Chairman of road committee. Rockland Lake Trap Rock Co. v. Port Chester, 102 App. Div. 360, 92 N. Y. S. 631.

60. Lee v. Williams, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 405; Spring Brook Lumber Co. v. Watkins, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 199. Where by the principal contract the owner is bound to withhold 15% of the contract price, a subcontractor on giving notice has a lien on the portion unpaid. First Nat. Bank v. Mitchell, 46 Misc. 30, 93 N. Y. S. 231.

61. McDonald Stone Co. v. Stern [Ala.] 38 So. 643. On the receipt of notice of default of the principal contractor, the owner is liable to the extent of further payments made to him as well as money remaining unpaid in his hands. Nichols v. Dixon [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1051.

62. Where an owner knows that the subcontractors of the principal contractor are unpaid he is not justified in making payments to the contractor to the prejudice of the subcontractors. Page v. Grant, 127 Iowa, 249, 103 N. W. 124. That the claimant has knowledge that the owner is about to pay the contractor while he has a claim against the building does not estop him from afterwards asserting his claim. Mivelaz v. Genovely [Ky.] 89 S. W. 109. Where the statute provides that a subcontractor, filing his lien after 30 days from the date of furnishing the last item of material, can only recover up to the amount owed by the owner to the principal contractor, payment by the owner with knowledge of the claim of the subcontractor is not a good defense. Iowa St. § 3094. Empire Portland Cement Co. v. Payne, Bradshaw, McMahon & Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 331.

63. Morgan v. Alderman & Sons' Co., 70 S. C. 462, 50 S. E. 26. When there is something due a contractor, the subcontractors have a right thereto, though the contract has been abandoned. Miller v. Calumet Lumber & Mfg. Co., 111 Ill. App. 651; Fitzner v. Noullet, 114 La. 167, 38 So. 94. Rights of subcontractors are fixed and determined at the death of the principal contractor, unless the personal representative undertakes to complete the work. Bergin v. Braun, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 150.

64. Page v. Grant, 127 Iowa, 249, 103 N. W. 124.

65. Taylor v. Wahl [N. J. Law] 60 A. 63.

66. Somers Brick Co. v. Souder [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 840.

67. Daly v. Somers Lumber Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 730.

subcontractor.[68] The owner is not bound to give materialmen and subcontractors information as to the amount still owing by him to the contractor.[69]

(§ 5) B. Filing and recording claim and statement thereof.[70]—Most statutes require that the mechanic's lien statement be filed in the clerk's or register's office within a certain time after the furnishing of the last item of material or labor.[71] The filed statement must show substantial compliance with the law.[72] The description of the property sought to be charged with the lien is bad if it appears that it could apply to other property of the same owner on the same street,[73] but where a full description of a building is given it may be unnecessary to include a description of the land on which it stands.[74] That the notice describes more property than can be lawfully held is not sufficient to render the lien void if it is legal as to any part thereof.[75] One failing to show a debt or a premature payment to a contractor is bad.[76] Where the notice is insufficient the fraudulent grantees of the owner may contest the lien.[77] Where the joinder of persons having claims of less than a hundred dollars is alone authorized by law, a statement showing a claim of over that amount is not invalid because joined with others.[78] In Kansas the claimant must, in his lien statement, state whether he claims as contractor or subcontractor,[79] but an allegation that work was done by the plaintiff as original contractor is not bad where it appears that he did the work as lessee by direction of the owner.[80] Where a ten days' notice is required before the filing of a lien, it is immaterial if in the notice it states a lien will be filed in less time if in fact ten days does elapse between the day of filing and notice.[81] The statement must show the amount due[82] and how much due for materials and how much for labor,[83] but a statement of too small an amount[84] or an excessive claim due to mistake[85] is not fatal. Where a contractor's notice is willfully false and untrue his lien will fail,[86] but unless fraudulently made a statement including nonlienable items will not defeat a lien.[87]

68. Valley Lumber Co. v. Struck, 146 Cal. 266, 80 P. 405.

69. Reaves v. Meredeth [Ga.] 51 S. E. 391. Where by the terms of a mortgage the mortgagee may pay off liens on the premises and add them to the mortgage debt, a claim for lumber cannot be so added in the absence of any declaration on part of the dealer that he intends to assert his right to a lien. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274.

70. See 4 C. L. 626.

71. An inchoate right to a lien ceases after 60 days if no notice is given or statement filed. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274. Where mill machinery is furnished the time does not begin to run till the installation and adjustment are completed. Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632.

72. Grant v. Cumberland Valley Cement Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 36. A paper reciting "To amount due under written contract for erection of house" is sufficient to comply with the statutory requirement for filing statement of amount due. McPherson v. Greenwell [R. I.] 61 A. 175. A statement entitled "Statement for account or demand for which lien is claimed" is sufficient to entitle the claimant to a lien. Anderson v. Silverman [R. I.] 61 A. 52.

73. Security Bldg. & Sav. Union v. Colvin, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 594.

74. Newell v. Brill [Cal. App.] 83 P. 76.

75. Halsey v. Waukesha Springs Sanitarium [Wis.] 104 N. W. 94.

76. Nason v. John [Cal. App.] 82 P. 566. Must show a debt. Kirschner v. Mahoney, 96 N. Y. S. 195.

77. Toop v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 283, 73 N. E. 1113.

78. Van Slyck v. Arsenau [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 130. 103 N. W. 571.

79. Western Sash & Door Co. v. Heiman [Kan.] 80 P. 16.

80. Dougherty-Moss Lumber Co. v. Churchill [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 405.

81. Faulkner v. Bridget, 110 Mo. App. 377, 86 S. W. 483.

82. A statement showing a claim of $925 less $75 will be construed as a statement of $850 due. Held v. New York, 83 App. Div. 509, 82 N. Y. S. 426.

83. Alexander v. Hollender, 94 N. Y. S. 796. But see Woolf v. Schaefer, 93 N. Y. S. 184. Where a lien is given for labor only, a contractor who is to furnish labor and materials for a lump sum, where it is impossible to determine how much is for labor and how much is for material, has no right to a lien. Evans Marble Co. v. International Trust Co. [Md.] 60 A. 667. An item in the claim for "extra work done on said house" is insufficient, since the number of days' labor should have been specifically set forth. McPherson v. Greenwell [R. I.] 61 A. 175.

84. Sorg v. Pfalzgraf, 113 Ill. App. 569.

85. Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632.

86. Schultze v. Goodstein, 180 N. Y. 248, 73 N. E. 21.

87. Kittrell v. Hopkins [Mo. App.] 90 S.

The account attached to the affidavit must show the relation of debtor and creditor between the owner of some interest in the land and the party claiming a lien upon the interest of such owner.[88] Where it is shown that the materials were furnished at such a time as to give the claimant a right to a lien, it is unnecessary to give the dates of the furnishing of the items.[89]

§ 6. Amount of lien and priority thereof.[90]—A prior recorded mortgage is paramount to all mechanics' liens[91] even though the consideration therefor passes after the completion of the work,[92] and, similarly, a subsequent purchase-money mortgage made by one holding an option on the property prior to the commencement of the work is prior to the liens,[93] but where the mortgage is made to include after-acquired property it takes that subject to prior liens.[94] Except as to recorded mortgages and other mechanics' liens such lien when perfectly recorded takes precedence over all other liens.[95] As among co-claimants all mechanics' liens are equal,[96] but this applies only when the liens are filed as provided by law in the time given by the statute,[97] and failure on part of all but one claimant to give the statutory notice to the owner gives him a preference over all other claimants.[98] Under statutes giving a subcontractor filing after 30 days from the time of furnishing the last item, a lien only on the unpaid balance due the contractor, as between two subcontractors so filing, the prior prevails.[99] So creditors of a head contractor are entitled to priority over a subcontractor where they secure their claims prior to the giving of notice by the subcontractor to the owner.[1]

§ 7. Assignment or transfer of lien.[2]—Mechanics' liens are generally held to be assignable,[3] but the assignee is bound by all defenses good against the assignor.[4]

§ 8. Waiver, loss, or forfeiture of lien, or right to acquire it.[5]—A builder may agree to waive his right to mechanics' liens,[6] and such waiver binds subcontractors having notice.[7] Such notice is in many states by law constructively given by filing the contract containing a waiver in the register's or clerk's office,[8] and where the contract filed refers to plans and specifications in the possession of the contractor it is sufficient.[9] Where the owner fails to file his contract, his liability is not limited

W. 109; Palmer v. McGinness, 127 Iowa, 118, 102 N. W. 802.

88. Lapham v. Ransford, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 577.

89. Kneisley Lumber Co. v. Stoddard Co., 113 Mo. App. 306, 88 S. W. 774.

90. See 4 C. L. 628.

91, 92. Eckles v. Stuart, 212 Pa. 161, 61 A. 820.

93. Rochford v. Rochford, 188 Mass. 108, 74 N. E. 299.

94. Cummings v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 353.

95. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273. Where by statute, in cases of assignment for the benefit of creditors, claims for labor are to be regarded as preferred, the trustee for the creditors nevertheless takes subsequent to mechanics' lien claimants. McDaniel v. Osborne [Ind.] 75 N. E. 647.

96. Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224.

97. Nichols v. Dixon [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 927, 89 S. W. 765.

98. Nichols v. Dixon [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 1051.

99. Iowa Code §§ 3092, 3094, 3095. Lindsay & Phelps Co. v. Zoeckler [Iowa] 104 N. W. 802.

1. Bergen v. Braun, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 150.

2. See 4 C. L. 629.

3. Endorsement of time check sufficient evidence of assignment. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Baertz [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 51. Transfer of a note given for materials carries the right to foreclose the lien on nonpayment. Featherstone v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 387, 88 S. W. 470.

4. The assignee of a contractor who has, prior to the assignment, waived his right to a lien, cannot enforce a lien on his own account. Kent Lumber Co. v. Ward, 37 Wash. 60, 79 P. 485.

5. See 4 C. L. 629.

6. Gray v. Jones [Or.] 81 P. 813.

7. A notice posted on the front of a building and also on the first floor on the stairway is sufficient to warn materialman. Marshall v. Cardinell [Or.] 80 P. 652. Where notice limiting responsibility is posted, it is presumed it remained posted for a sufficient length of time. Id. But not in absence of notice. Gardner & Meeks Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A. 416.

8. In California all building contracts involving more than $1,000 are void unless filed (Civil Code § 1183). Where the aggregate items stated in a contract amount to over $1,000, the contract is void unless filed. Smith v. Bradbury [Cal.] 82 P. 367.

9. Thirsk v. Evans, 211 Pa. 239, 60 A. 726.

to the amount due the contractor,[10] but the liability is limited only as to persons standing in privity with the contractor.[11] Where the contract on which the work progresses is a different one from that which is filed, the subcontractor is not bound by the waiver.[12] In the absence of fraud, where the right to a lien is once lost, no subsequent delivery of materials will revive it.[13] Where the statute provides that on demand of the owner or lessee each person claiming a lien shall furnish a written statement under penalty of forfeiture of the lien, on failure so to do the penalty must be enforced, though the owner is not prejudiced thereby.[14] A contractor giving a surety bond against the filing of mechanics' liens is estopped to enforce a lien on his own account,[15] but a materialman who is a surety on such a bond is not so estopped.[16] A lien is waived by the acceptance of notes in payment of claim maturing after the time when a lien statement must be filed,[17] but not where they mature prior to that time.[18] Where repairs were made on a building the fact that it was to be used for an illegal purpose did not vitiate the right to a lien.[19] In some states a mechanic's lien may be disallowed by showing that the work was done relying on payment by the contractor rather than on credit of the building.[20]

§ 9. Discharge and satisfaction.[21]—Where a mechanic's lien claimant accepts other security for the payment of his claim, the lien is discharged,[22] and where a bond is given by the owner to dissolve a lien, his sureties may be called upon to pay without the appointment of an administrator for the principal,[23] and on suit on such a bond where the lien has been litigated the sureties have none of the defenses that would have been good originally against the claimant.[24] An attempted settlement not involving a tender does not discharge a lien, although an offer was made that was more than could be recovered.[25]

§ 10. Remedies and procedure to enforce lien. A. Remedies.[26] Time of bringing action.[27]—Generally a suit must be brought within a limited time after the filing of a mechanic's lien, and on failure to do so the lien lapses,[28] but that an interval of thirty days occurs in the construction of a building does not affect the lien thereon.[29] The statute of limitation has no bearing on mechanics' liens in some states.[30]

Concurrent remedies.[31]—Where because of some irregularity one fails to establish his lien, a right to a personal judgment is frequently given,[32] but this has no application where there is no personal relation between the owner and the claimant,[33]

10. Schmidt v. Eitel [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 558.
11. Stewart Contracting Co. v. Trenton, etc., R. Co., 71 N. J. Law 568, 60 A. 405.
12. Contract different from the one on file. Spring Brook Lumber Co. v. Watkins, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 199; Lee v. Williams, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 405.
13. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 26.
14. Comp. Laws § 10717. Frolich v. Beecher [Mich.] 102 N. W. 736.
15. Kent Lumber Co. v. Ward, 37 Wash. 60, 79 P. 485. But see Badger Lumber Co. v. Muehlebach, 109 Mo. App. 646, 83 S. W. 546.
16. Badger Lumber Co. v. Muehlebach, 109 Mo. App. 646, 83 S. W. 546. But see Miller v. Taggart [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 321.
17. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 26; Woolf v. Schaefer, 93 N. Y. S. 184.
18. Woolf v. Schaefer, 93 N. Y. S. 184.
19. Doyle v. Franks [Kan.] 81 P. 211.
20. Rider-Ericsson Engine Co. v. Fredericks, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 72.
21. See 4 C. L. 630.
22. Cosgrove v. Farwell, 114 Ill. App. 491.
23. Holmes v. Humphrey [Mass.] 73 N. E. 668.
24. Ruggles v. Bernstein, 188 Mass. 232, 74 N. E. 366.
25. Palmer v. McGinness, 127 Iowa, 118, 102 N. W. 802.
26. See 4 C. L. 630.
27. See 4 C. L. 631.
28. Somers Brick Co. v. Souder [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 840; McKnight v. Bank of Acadia, 114 La. 289, 38 So. 172.
29. Billings Co. v. Brand [Mass.] 73 N. E. 637.
30. Central Bldg. Co. v. Karr Supply Co., 115 Ill. App. 610.
31. See 4 C. L. 631.
32. Schindler v. Green [Cal. App.] 82 P. 631; Western Plumbing Co. v. Fried [Mont.] 81 P. 394.
33. Owner and subcontractor. Siegel v. Ehrshowsky, 92 N. Y. S. 733; Alexander v. Hollender, 94 N. Y. 796. Where the lien falls and there must be personal service of the notice upon the party sought to be made liable,[34] and when personal notice is given to the owner of an undivided portion of the premises, only his part can be foreclosed by the lienor,[35] but no personal judgment can be had unless some debt is shown.[36]

(§ 10) B. Parties.[37]—The original contractor is a necessary party in a suit to foreclose a lien brought by a subcontractor, laborer, or a materialman,[38] and the owner of the property must be a party to a suit to foreclose,[39] and if not so made he is not bound by the decree,[40] and the same rule applies to all others of whom the lien claimant has notice of their claiming an interest in the property.[41] A concurrent lienor is a necessary party,[42] and where a statute provides that all parties claiming a lien prior to the commencement of foreclosure proceedings should be joined as plaintiffs or defendants, and all subsequent lienors as intervenors, it is proper to deny the application of one of the latter to be made a defendant.[43] Where by statute an owner served with a subcontractor's notice is bound to withhold the amount due the junior contractor, he may bring all interested parties into court and have their claims adjudicated.[44]

(§ 10) C. Pleading, practice, and evidence. Pleading.[45]—In the complaint to foreclose a mechanic's lien the plaintiff need only allege the statutory requirements and that he comes under them,[46] and where it is alleged that the materials were furnished in proper time it is unnecessary to give the date of delivery of each item.[47] The complaint must show the time when payment should have been made and of the time of completion of the contract,[48] and an allegation of agreement to pay the reasonable value of work and labor done should be alleged in the absence of an express agreement.[49] That the lien statement must be verified does not necessarily mean a verification is required on the complaint to foreclose.[50] Where a discharge is relied upon as a defense a general denial is insufficient,[51] but it is not necessary to set forth the time of payment of each item in such case.[52] A complaint alleging that an existing balance is due the contractor from the owner is not bad because it fails to allege that there was such a balance due at the date of the notice to the former.[53] A complaint need not allege that the action was begun in the prescribed time.[54] Where an action on a mechanic's lien is brought on the ground that the plaintiffs were subcontractors, it is not supported by evidence of materials furnished directly to the owner of the building.[55] An attempt to foreclose a mechanic's lien because of the failure of the cause of action. Aex v. Allen, 94 N. Y. S. 844.

34, 35. Kneisley Lumber Co. v. Stoddard Co., 113 Mo. App. 306, 88 S. W. 774.

36. Kirschner v. Mahoney, 96 N. Y. S. 195.

37. See 4 C. L. 632.

38. Foreclosure of laborer's lien against a railroad. Eastern Tex. R. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 83 S. W. 883.

39. Lang v. Adams [Kan.] 80 P. 593.

40. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273.

41. Unrecorded mortgage of which the lienor has notice. Stiles v. Galbreath [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 224. Plaintiff in pending action to quiet title. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273. Owners of prior liens. Grant v. Cumberland Valley Cement Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 36. Where a married woman is in possession of property and her name appears as owner upon the recorded plat, the lien claimant has notice of her interest. Krotz v. Beck Lumber Co., 34 Ind. App. 577, 73 N. E. 273.

42. Hinkle v. Sullivan, 108 App. Div. 316, 95 N. Y. S. 788.

43. Lavanway v. Cannon, 37 Wash. 593, 79 P. 1117.

44. Stimson v. Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden Co., 146 Cal. 281, 79 P. 968.

45. See 4 C. L. 633.

46. Arnold v. Farmers' Exch. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 754.

47. Kneisley Lumber Co. v. Stoddard Co., 113 Mo. App. 306, 88 S. W. 774.

48. Smith v. Central Lumber Co., 113 Ill. App. 477.

49. Newell v. Brill [Cal. App.] 83 P. 76.

50. Parke & Lacy Co. v. Inter Nos Oil & Development Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 51.

51. Cosgrove v. Farwell, 114 Ill. App. 491.

52. Easterling v. Shaifer [Miss.] 38 So. 230.

53. Los Angeles Pressed Brick Co. v. Los Angeles Pac. Boulevard & Development Co. [Cal. App.] 83 P. 292.

54. Sands v. Stagg [Va.] 52 S. E. 633.

55. Page v. Grant, 127 Iowa, 249, 103 N. W. 124.

and an equitable lien in one action is not bad on the ground of multifariousness.[56]

Practice.[57]—Where an answer is filed denying the facts set forth in a proceeding to foreclose a mechanic's lien, the plaintiffs must prove their case though the defendants fail to appear at the trial.[58] Where a good defense exists at law, a court of equity will not restrain lien claimants from prosecuting their actions.[59] A foreclosure of a mechanic's lien is a final process till arrested by a counter affidavit, and execution may issue thereon.[60] On appeal one cannot raise for the first time the question of jurisdiction of the court[61] or a change of ownership of the property.[62]

Evidence.[63]—Where a statute provides that a lien statement must be filed ten days after the date thereof, the date on the statement is not conclusive and the true date may be supplied by parol evidence.[64] To make out a prima facie case a subcontractor must show that there is a balance due the contractor.[65] Where a mortgagee seeks to add payments made by him to protect the mortgaged premises, the burden of proof is on him to show that the payments were in satisfaction of liens.[66]

(§ 10) D. Judgment, costs, and attorney's fees.[67]—A demand for extras does not draw interest until the amount thereof is ascertained by a judgment of the court, where payment is prevented by the filing of notice of mechanics' liens.[68] Where a lien is foreclosed and the sale of the property is insufficient to satisfy the amount of the judgment, the lienor is entitled to a deficiency judgment for the unsatisfied balance,[69] and a deficiency judgment is barred by the period of limitation on contracts running from the time of sale.[70]

Costs and attorney's fees.[71]—In addition to the amount of the judgment the court may award costs[72] and attorney's fees[73] as provided by statute. Where by statute a lien can be placed on a homestead only for improvements and purchase money, attorney's fees cannot be added to the amount of the lien.[74] Where a lien is attempted to be foreclosed on a portion of a railroad, on the ground that a railroad is a public agency, a court may in the place thereof enter a personal judgment against the corporation.[75]

§ 11. Indemnification against liens.[76]—Laborers and materialmen may maintain an action on a bond given to secure the performance of a contract, wherein the contractor agrees to pay their claims, when the parties evidently intended to secure them as well as the owner, even though they are not specifically named, and no consideration passes directly from them to the surety.[77] But some evidence of in-

56. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 26.
57. See 4 C. L. 633.
58. Schlachter v. St. Bernard's Roman Catholic Church of Hoven [S. D.] 105 N. W. 279.
59. Wolf v. Glassport Lumber Co., 210 Pa. 370, 59 A. 1105.
60. Moultrie Lumber Co. v. Jenkins, 121 Ga. 721, 49 S. E. 678.
61. Hess v. Peck, 111 Ill. App. 111.
62. Gordon v. Sorg, 113 Ill. App. 522.
63. See 4 C. L. 634.
64. Cutter v. Pierson, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 10.
65. Stevens v. Georgia Land Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 100.
66. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274.
67. See 4 C. L. 634.
68. Stimson v. Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden Co., 146 Cal. 281, 79 P. 968.
69, 70. Durkee v. Koehler [Neb.] 103 N. W. 767.
71. See 4 C. L. 634.
72. Where by statute an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien is regarded as an equitable action, and by another statute in equitable actions the court may in its discretion allow costs, the court has authority to allow partial costs in the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien. Wis. Rev. St. 1898, § 3323. Charles v. Godfrey [Wis.] 104 N. W. 814.
73. Provision as to attorney's fees not unconstitutional. Peckham v. Fox [Cal. App.] 82 P. 91; Littell v. Saulsberry [Wash.] 82 P. 909. In California it is held that attorney's fees should only be allowed where an answer is entered only to harass the plaintiff. Hooper v. Fletcher, 145 Cal. 375, 79 P. 418.
74. Cooper v. Brazelton [C. C. A.] 135 F. 476.
75. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Baertz [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 51.
76. See 4 C. L. 635.
77. Wellman v. Smith, 114 La. 228, 38 So. 151; Towle v. Sweeney [Cal. App.] 83 P. 74.

tention must appear.[78] Where a bond has been given by a contractor for the fulfillment of his contract, it is not such a bond for the payment of workmen and materialmen as required by the statute in order to release the owner from liability,[79] and a surety thereon cannot be called upon to defend a suit by a materialman against the owner in the absence of a showing of a settlement between the owner and the contractor.[80] The sureties on indemnity bonds are discharged on overpayment of the contractor by the owner.[81] In the case of an indemnity bond for the construction of public works it must appear that notice of the default of the contractor has been given.[82]

MEDICINE AND SURGERY.

§ 1. Public regulation of the business of treating disease.[83]—The right to practice any branch of the art of healing is subject to such reasonable regulations or conditions as the state, in the exercise of the police power, may prescribe.[84] Thus, statutes prohibiting the practice of the art by those who have not obtained a license or certificate from the designated authorities are valid.[85] Whether all practitioners shall be required to comply with the same requirements is discretionary with the legislature; and the fact that a particular school of medicine or system of healing is or is not given special recognition by a statute does not render it unconstitutional.[86] Thus, a statute which commits the licensing power to a board of physicians who shall be graduates of some medical school in good standing is not class legislation as to one who does not believe in the use of drugs,[87] nor is it unconstitutional as practically prohibiting the pursuit by him of his chosen calling by imposing qualifications not adapted to or required by the method of healing used by him.[88]

Need not be specifically mentioned. Lichtentag v. Feitel, 113 La. 931, 37 So. 880.

78. Hughes v. Smith, 114 La. 297, 38 So. 175.

79, 80. Act No. 180, p. 223 of 1894. Lhote Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Dugue [La.] 39 So. 803.

81. Tinsley v. Kemery [Mo. App.] 84 S. W. 993.

82. Huggins v. Sutherland [Wash.] 82 P. 112.

83. See 4 C. L. 636.

84. Territory v. Newman [N. M.] 79 P. 706; State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063. Requirements of Ohio statutes are reasonable. Id.

85. Acts 1901, p. 115, c. 78, which prohibits the practice of medicine without a license, is constitutional. O'Neil v. State [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 627. Statutes prohibiting the practice of medicine for fees by those who do not have the prescribed qualifications are valid. State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063. Sess. Laws 1903, c. 40, requiring all who practice medicine (construed to mean all who practice the healing art by any method) to obtain a license, is valid. Territory v. Newman [N. M.] 79 P. 706. Congress has power to regulate the practice of medicine in the District of Columbia and had power to prescribe the qualifications required by 29 Stat. at L. 198, c. 313, and to create a local board and give it power to revoke licenses for the causes therein mentioned. Czarra v. Board of Medical Supervisors, 25 App. D. C. 443.

86. Acts 27th Leg. p. 12, c. 12, creates boards of medical examiners of the allopathic, homeopathic and eclectic schools of medicine, and requires practitioners to obtain a certificate from one of such boards. The act is held constitutional, though no recognition is given the physio-medical school. Stone v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 86 S. W. 1029. The Ohio statutes do not discriminate against Christian scientists by not exempting them from the qualifications required of other practitioners, though they prescribe special qualifications for those practicing osteopathy. State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063. In Alabama osteopathy cannot be legally practiced by one who has not obtained a license from the state board of medical examiners. Ligon v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 662, afg. Bragg v. State, 134 Ala. 165, 32 So. 767, 58 L. R. A. 925.

87. Sess. Laws 1903, c. 40 is valid. Territory v. Newman [N. M.] 79 P. 706.

Statutes which do not recognize Christian scientists as a distinct school but subject them to the same provisions of law as apply to others practicing medicine are not invalid as interfering with the rights of conscience and of worship.[89] In some states there are special statutory provisions regulating the practice of osteopathy.[90] That portion of the Washington dental law which requires an examination by and a license from the dental board before a person may practice dentistry is valid;[91] but that portion of it requiring such examination and license before one may own, run or manage a dental office is not a proper exercise of the police power.[92]

Regulatory statutes are to be liberally construed so as to reasonably effectuate their purposes, to prevent fraud, and to conserve the public health.[93] They must be complied with by all who come within their terms. Thus, the fact that a practitioner is a graduate of a reputable medical college does not exempt him from the operation of such laws.[94] It is competent for the legislature to define what shall constitute the practice of medicine within the meaning of an act regulating the same.[95] The terms of the particular statute and the facts of the particular case must be looked to to determine whether an act applies in a given instance.[96]

88. Territory v. Newman [N. M.] 79 P. 706.

89. Ohio statutes valid. State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063.

90. Special provision in Ohio. See State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063. In Missouri, is declared not to be the practice of medicine and surgery. See Rev. St. 1899, c 128, art. 55. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

NOTE. Regulation by state of practice of osteopathy: "There seems to be no doubt as to the power of the state to regulate the practice of osteopathy therein by statute providing that one practicing such system of healing shall be possessed of certain qualifications of fitness and shall obtain a license permitting him to practice. State v. National School of Osteopathy, 76 Mo. App. 439; Hayden v. State, 81 Miss. 299, 33 So. 653, 95 Am. St. Rep. 471; State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 62 N. E. 325, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 55 L. R. A. 791; State v. McKnight 131 N. C. 717, 42 S. E. 580, 59 L. R. A. 187. This has been done in at least four states, California, Indiana, Missouri and Ohio, where the practice of osteopathy is regulated by statute as a treatment separate from medicine by requiring a certain amount of study or a diploma from a certain school before a person can practice such system of healing or curing disease. Cal. St. 1901, p. 113, c. 99; State v. National School of Osteopathy, 76 Mo. App. 439; State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 62 N. E. 325, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 55 L. R. A. 791. One who has an established practice in the healing of disease by the method known as osteopathy may be, by statute, required to conform to such reasonable standard respecting qualification therefor as the legislature may prescribe, having in view the public health and welfare. State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 62 N. E. 325, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 55 L. R. A. 791. A statute permitting the licensing of osteopaths, while excluding those engaged in 'mental healing' has been held not an unlawful discrimination which will render the statute void. Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 64 N. E. 862, 59 L. R. A. 190. But a legislative enactment which discriminates against osteopaths by requiring them to hold diplomas from a college requiring four years of study as a condition to their obtaining limited certificates which will not permit them to prescribe drugs or perform surgery, while not requiring such time of study from those contemplating the regular practice as a condition to their obtaining unlimited certificates for the practice of medicine and surgery, is as to such discrimination, void, and compliance therewith cannot be exacted of those who practice osteopathy. State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 62 N. E. 325, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 55 L. R. A. 791."—From State v. Biggs [N. C.] 98 Am. St. Rep. 751.

91. Laws 1901, pp. 314-318, c. 152, making it a crime to practice dentistry without a license, is constitutional. State v. Sexton, 37 Wash. 119, 79 P. 634; State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 97, 79 P. 635; State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638.

92. Laws 1901, p. 314, § 8 is invalid. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 97, 79 P. 635.

93. Gen. St. 1894, § 7896, imposing a fine or imprisonment upon unlicensed practitioners, construed. State v. Oredson [Minn.] 105 N. W. 188.

94. Does not exempt one from compliance with Gen. St. 1894, § 7896. State v. Oredson [Minn.] 105 N. W. 188. A physio-medical practitioner who practices without a certificate from one of the three boards of examiners created by Acts 27th Leg. c. 12, violates that act, though he holds a diploma from a medical college of respectable standing. Stone v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 85, 86 S. W. 1029.

95. Laws 1903, p. 206, c. 176, § 21, providing that persons attaching the title "Dr." or other equivalent letters, used in a medical sense, to their names, professing to be physicians, and prescribing drugs or agencies for the care or cure of disease or ailments shall be regarded as practicing within the meaning of the act, is valid. State v. Yegge [S. D.] 103 N. W. 17.

96. [See note 4 C. L. 636, "what constitutes 'practice of medicine' under regulating statutes."]

Idaho: Under the Medical Law of 1899,

A corporation cannot "practice medicine,"[97] and is not such a person as can be legally licensed to do so.[98] Hence a corporation composed of qualified and licensed physicians, which contracts for services of its members and other licensed physicians, and furnishes medical services under such contracts, is not engaged in the practice of medicine and does not violate the law forbidding such practice without a license.[99]

The action of the Rhode Island Board of Registration in Dentistry in refusing a certificate to an applicant after an examination is not subject to review by the courts,[1] and mandamus does not lie to compel the board to produce the examination papers for inspection by expert dentists to be appointed by the court.[2] In Washington the action of a dental board in refusing defendant a license after examination cannot be questioned in a prosecution for violation of the dental act.[3] It is held

§ 5, the Board of Medical Examiners has no power to call for the diplomas of applicants for licenses who were engaged in the practice of medicine under the terms of the act of 1887. State v. Cooper [Idaho] 81 P. 374. Where an applicant for a license to practice medicine was a resident of the state engaged in practicing medicine under the terms of the law of 1887, and had complied fully with the provisions of the Law of 1899, it was not criminal for him to continue to practice though the Board of Examiners refused to issue a license to him. Id.

Illinois: A person practicing medicine before Laws 1899, p. 276, § 9 took effect, and not obtaining a license under the act, nor holding an unrevoked license previously obtained, is liable to the penalty imposed by the act upon persons practicing medicine without a certificate from the state board of health. People v. Langdon [Ill.] 76 N. E. 387.

Michigan: One who was already practicing medicine in violation of Pub. Acts 1899, p. 370, No. 237, not having applied for a certificate, is required to apply for a certificate under the amendment of 1903 (Pub. Acts 1903, p. 270, No. 191), though the amendment requires all persons who "wish to begin" to practice to apply. Hooper v. Batdorff [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 463, 104 N. W. 667.

New Jersey: P. L. 1898, 123 prohibits practice of dentistry by one not licensed, and § 8 exempts from the operation of the act registered students of licensed dentists assisting preceptors in the latter's presence and under their direct and immediate personal supervision. Held, mere proof that a person was a student of a regularly licensed dentist is not sufficient to show him entitled to the benefit of § 8. State Board of Registration & Examination in Dentistry v. Terry [N. J. Law] 62 A. 193.

Nevada: St. 1899, p. 88, c. 73; Comp. Laws, § 1542, regulating practice of medicine and providing for issuance of temporary licenses until the next board meeting, is repealed by St. 1905, p. 87, c. 63, and the board cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue a temporary license. State v. Lee [Nev.] 82 P. 229.

New York: Under Laws 1895, p. 419, c. 626, § 160, one not licensed as a dentist prior to Aug. 1, 1895 is required to procure a license from the regents to entitle him to registration. State v. Jacobs, 92 N. Y. S. 590. Under Laws 1895, c. 626, § 162, a registration of a dentist is void if obtained on an affidavit giving the name, age and address of the affiant and stating that his authority to practice is a diploma granted by a college of another state. Id.

Ohio: Giving Christian Science treatment, for a fee, for the cure of disease, is practicing medicine within the meaning of the Ohio Statutes. State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 73 N. E. 1063.

South Dakota: A person who used the title "Dr." on his signs and notices, and was engaged in fitting glasses to the eye, but who did not use drugs or operations was practicing medicine within the meaning of Laws 1903, p. 206, c. 176, § 21, and could not legally practice without a license. State v. Yegge [S. D.] 103 N. W. 17.

Tennessee: One who diagnoses disease by the microscopic examination of the blood, and treats it by means of light rays from an electric arc light and by prescribing medicines, practices medicine within the meaning of Acts 1901, p. 115, c. 78, requiring practitioners to have a license, and is not an "optician" within the meaning of the exception in the statute. O'Neil v. State [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 627.

97. The qualifications of medical practitioners are personal and such as will enable them to diagnose, prescribe and treat disease. These qualifications a corporation cannot possess. State Electro-Medical Institute v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1078.

98. State Electro-Medical Inst. v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1078.

99. Comp. St. 1901, c. 55, § 7 held not violated by defendant. State Electro-Medical Inst. v. State [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1078; State Electro-Medical Inst. v. Platner [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1079.

1. Kenney v. State Board of Dentistry, 26 R. I. 538, 59 A. 932.

2. Under Gen. Laws 1896, p. 468, c. 155, as amended by Pub. Laws 1897, p. 43, c. 470, the mode of examination, and the standard of proficiency to be required, are discretionary with the Board and courts will not interfere with its action. If it is claimed that a fair and impartial examination was prevented by prejudice against the applicant, an action against individual members, not mandamus, would be the remedy. Kenney v. State Board of Dentistry, 26 R. I. 538, 59 A. 932.

in New Hampshire that the duties of the state dental board are judicial in character, but must be performed in the manner provided by law.[4] Action not so taken is reviewable by the courts, if a proceeding for the purpose is properly brought.[5]

A license to practice medicine cannot be revoked without some reasonable and sufficient cause.[6] The determination of the question, what acts shall constitute such cause, cannot be wholly delegated to a local board; the law making power must define the causes with reasonable certainty.[7]

Prosecutions for violations of regulatory acts.[8]—Where violation of a statute prohibiting the practice of medicine by unlicensed persons is made a crime, the gist of the offense is the practice of medicine without a license.[9] That an unlicensed person has for a fee prescribed for the treatment of a disease is evidence of guilt, but is not the exclusive substance of the offense.[10] The Washington statute making records of the office of county clerk prima facie evidence of the existence or nonexistence of a license to practice medicine is valid.[11] One may be convicted of "practicing medicine"[12] or "dentistry" if he ministers to patients as is common in those professions.[13] The prosecution must, of course, be instituted before the running of limitations.[14] It need not be proved that the offense was committed

3. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638.

4. Pub. St. 1901, c. 134, §§ 1, 2, 3, makes the duties of the state dental board judicial in character. Where an examination of an application was by only one member, who alone approved the papers and issued a certificate, the proceeding and license issued were void. At least two of the three members must act. Brown v. Grenier [N. H.] 62 A. 590.

5. Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 204, § 2, the supreme court has jurisdiction of a proceeding to cancel a license to a dentist issued by only one member of the dental board without the approval of any other member. But such proceeding can be brought only by the attorney general. The dental board is a necessary party defendant, but cannot maintain the proceeding. Brown v. Grenier [N. H.] 62 A. 590.

6. Czarra v. Board of Medical Sup'rs, 24 App. D. C. 251. Employment of fraud and deception in passing required examinations, chronic inebriety, practice of criminal abortion, and conviction involving moral turpitude, are sufficient causes for revocation of a license, as declared in 29 Stat. at L. 198, c. 313. Id. Conviction of distributing obscene and indecent literature is sufficient ground for revocation of license under the act. Id. The facts that a medical practitioner was accused of distributing obscene literature, that he had forfeited collateral in the police court where he was so accused, and that he had admitted such distribution in a conversation with complainant, do not show unprofessional or dishonorable conduct within 29 Stat. at L. 198, c. 313, warranting the board of medical supervisors to revoke a license to practice. Id. Hence a revocation by the board on that ground, in that the physician circulated obscene literature, is void. Id. Where a license is revoked on the ground that acts done subsequent to the act of Cong. of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat at. L. 198, c. 313) constituted unprofessional and dishonorable conduct within the meaning of that law, it cannot be claimed that the practitioner was convicted under an ex post facto law. Id., 25 App. D. C. 443.

7. It is doubtful whether Congress can delegate to a board the power to determine what is "unprofessional or dishonorable conduct" such as to warrant revocation of a license to practice; such conduct should be defined. Czarra v. Board of Medical Sup'rs, 24 App. D. C. 251. A local board has no such discretion in revoking a license as it has in determining the qualifications of one who applies for a license. Id., 25 App. D. C. 443. So much of 29 Stat. at L. 198, c. 313, as authorizes revocation of a license for "unprofessional and dishonorable conduct," without defining the acts which shall constitute such conduct, is unconstitutional because too vague and uncertain. Id.

8. See 4 C. L. 637.

9, 10. State v. Oredson [Minn.] 105 N. W. 188.

11. State v. Lawson [Wash.] 82 P. 750.

12. Evidence held to warrant a conviction for practicing medicine or offering to practice without a license within the meaning of Sess. Laws 1903, c. 40, though defendant did not believe in or profess to use drugs. Territory v. Newman [N. M.] 79 P. 706.

13. Evidence sufficient to support conviction of crime of practicing dentistry without a license under Laws 1901, c. 152, where it appeared defendant cleaned the teeth of the person named and examined them to estimate cost of other contemplated work. State v. Sexton, 37 Wash. 110, 79 P. 634. Taking an impression of a patient's jaws, the making of false teeth, and fitting the same to the jaws, held a "correction of malposition of the jaws," within the meaning of the dentistry act. State v. Newton [Wash.] 81 P. 1002.

14. Conviction for practicing dentistry without a license set aside where the great weight of the evidence showed that the acts charged had been done more than a year before the filing of the information on the exact date alleged,[15] or that a separate fee was charged for any specific act alleged,[16] or that payment was made immediately after the rendition of the services.[17] Cases dealing with the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction will be found in the note.[18]

§ 2. Malpractice.[19]—The implied contract of the physician or surgeon is not to cure, but to treat the case with that degree of diligence and skill ordinarily used by the average physician in good standing, in the same or similar localities, having regard to the state of the medical profession at the time.[20] An erroneous diagnosis may[21] but does not necessarily constitute negligence.[22]

A surgical operation performed by a physician without the consent of the patient is wrongful and unlawful,[23] even though performed with skill and care, and without any evil intent.[24] Consent may in some cases be implied from circumstances.[25] The amount of recovery for an operation performed without such consent depends on the character and extent of injury suffered, which is to be determined by reference to the nature of the malady and the results of the operation, whether beneficial or otherwise. The good faith of the defendant should also be considered.[26]

It is a good defense to an action for malpractice that negligence of the patient since prosecution therefor was barred by the statute of limitations. State v. Newton [Wash.] 81 P. 1002.

15. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638.

16. It is sufficient if the charging of a fee for a series of acts in violation of Laws 1901, c. 152, be shown. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638.

17. Proof of payment within a year before filing of the information is sufficient. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638.

18. Evidence held sufficient. State v. Brown, 37 Wash. 106, 79 P. 638. Evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that defendant had no license to practice medicine where county clerk's records did not show one, such records being prima facie evidence on the question under the statute. State v. Lawson [Wash.] 82 P. 750.

19. See 4 C. L. 638.

20. Wohlert v. Seibert, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 213. Physician does not guaranty good result, but promises by implication to use the skill and learning of the average physician in the locality, to exercise reasonable care, and to exert his best judgment in the effort to bring about a good result. MacKenzie v. Carman, 92 N. Y. S. 1063; Wood v. Wyeth, 94 N. Y. S. 360. Evidence insufficient to show improper care of a fractured arm by one of two physicians who had charge of the case. MacKenzie v. Carman, 92 N. Y. S. 1063. Physician held not liable for death of boy on whom he operated to prevent blood poisoning, the chloroform administered having caused his death. Wood v. Wyeth, 94 N. Y. S. 360. The fact that the patient was severely burned by X-rays, together with other evidence by experts, held sufficient to warrant finding that treatment of appendicitis by X-rays was improper. Shockley v. Tucker, 127 Iowa, 456, 103 N. W. 360. Complaint held to state a cause of action for negligence in performing an operation on a boy which caused his death, and not for a wrongful operation not consented to; hence it was not error to compel plaintiff to prosecute the suit as one for negligence. Wood v. Wyeth, 94 N. Y. S. 360.

Specialists are required to bring to the treatment of a case that degree of skill and care used by average members of the profession specializing in the same branch, in the same or similar localities, having regard to the state of the science at the time. Beadle v. Paine [Or.] 80 P. 903. Hence an instruction that failure to use an X-ray machine in a surgical case was not negligence unless such machines were usually employed in such cases by specialists in the same or similar localities was not error, construing all the instructions together. Id.

21. Plaintiff entitled to go to jury in malpractice case where defendant treated for dislocation and evidence tended to show incipient hip disease and not partial dislocation. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

22. Evidence held not to show want of required skill and care in treatment of plaintiff's eyes, where defendant diagnosed as conjunctivitis what was really glaucoma, the latter being very rare, and the symptoms of the two very similar, except to specialists. Wohlert v. Seibert, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 213.

23, 24. Mohr v. Williams [Minn.] 104 N. W. 12.

25. Where operation on patient's right ear was decided upon and consented to, but after the patient was made unconscious by the anaesthetic, an operation on the left ear was decided upon and performed, the patient's family physician being present and making no objection, it was held that there was no express consent, and whether consent could be implied was for the jury. Mohr v. Williams [Minn.] 104 N. W. 12.

26. New trial granted where verdict of $14,322.50 was rendered for unauthorized operation on ear, performed with skill, and shown to have been beneficial or at least not harmful. Mohr v. Williams [Minn.] 104 N. W. 12.

conduced or contributed to produce the injury complained of;[27] but subsequent negligence, not conducing to the injury primarily caused by negligence of the physician or surgeon, but merely serving to aggravate the injury so caused, will not defeat the action, though it may be shown in mitigation of the damages.[28] It must appear that the injuries complained of resulted proximately from the defendant's negligence,[29] but if this appear, it is no defense that the disease would have produced equally serious consequences, if the treatment complained of had not been given.[30]

A properly qualified witness may testify on a question of science or skill, which is independent of the practice of any school of medicine, regardless of the school to which he belongs.[31] Evidence to show negligent treatment by defendant in other cases is inadmissible.[32]

Malpractice by nonmedical practitioners.[33]—In an action against an osteopath for malpractice, expert medical witnesses belonging to different schools of medicine are competent to express opinions as to the diagnosis made by the defendant,[34] and also as to any scientific fact that is, or ought to be, known to every physician or surgeon of every school or system;[35] but they are not competent to express opinions as to the treatment given by defendant unless it appears that the schools to which the witnesses and defendant belonged advocated the same treatment for the disease in question.[36]

§ 3. Recovery of compensation.[37]—There must be an express or implied promise to pay for the services, relied on by the physician.[38] The person contracting for the services is liable therefor.[39] A contract by a corporation, composed of qualified and licensed physicians, for medical services to be furnished by its members or other licensed physicians, is not contrary to law or public policy, and for services rendered thereunder the corporation may recover compensation.[40] A physi-

27. Beadle v. Paine [Or.] 80 P. 903.

28. Giving of instructions on this branch of a case held not erroneous. Beadle v. Paine [Or.] 80 P. 903.

29. No recovery for malpractice where evidence showed that eye disease would have resulted in blindness and would have caused some pain and suffering even had defendant correctly diagosed and treated it. Wohlert v. Seibert, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 213.

30. Where evidence showed treatment for incipient hip disease and partial dislocation was improper and caused permanent injury, it was no defense that hip disease would have produced the same results. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

31. Whether a use of X-rays in treating a patient for appendicitis, the patient being badly burned, was negligent, was a question of science and skill, independent of the practice of any particular school of medicine; hence persons properly qualified may testify on the question though belonging to a different school from defendant. Shockley v. Tucker, 127 Iowa, 456, 103 N. W. 360. Admission of testimony as to whether treatment of appendicitis by X-rays was proper was not prejudicial, where issue submitted was negligence in the manner of using the X-rays. Id.

32. In a malpractice action for burns from use of X-rays in treatment of appendicitis, admission of testimony by another physician that he had treated two other patients who had been injured by use of X-rays by defendant, was prejudicial error. Shockley v. Tucker, 127 Iowa, 456, 103 N. W. 360.

33. See 4 C. L. 639.

34. Whether diagnosis of hip trouble was correct, and whether or not there was a partial dislocation. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

35. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

36. Physicians belonging to other schools incompetent to give opinions on osteopath's treatment of hip disease or dislocation unless all schools used same treatment. Grainger v. Still, 187 Mo. 197, 85 S. W. 1114.

37. See 4 C. L. 638.

38. Dorion v. Jacobson, 113 Ill. App. 563.

39. Physician, called by one employe to attend another who was injured, decided a dentist was needed and asked corporation manager who would pay bill. Manager said a casualty company was liable for expenses caused by accidents to employes. Held, employment of physician was not ratified, though manager did not expressly deny liability of corporation. Mohlman Co. v. American Grocery Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 60 A. 950. Mother liable for expense of operation on son contracted for by her alone, though he was of age, when an estate in which he was interested had not been divided and he and his brother customarily charged expenses of this kind to their share of the estate, the mother making payments. Best v. McAuslan [R. I.] 60 A. 774.

40. State Electro-Medical Inst. v. Platner [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1079.

cian cannot recover for services which proved to be worthless if he knew they would be worthless, or was uncertain as to his ability to improve the patient's condition and failed to so inform him, or if he was unskillful, negligent or unfaithful in performing the services.[41] Customary and reasonable charges for services of the same nature in the same locality is the rule by which to determine the value of medical services.[42]

§ 4. Negligent homicide by physician.[43]

§ 5. Regulation of the keeping and sale of drugs and medicines.[44]—The Vermont statute is in part unconstitutional.[45] An indictment charging the vending of drugs without a license is sufficient if it follows the statutory language.[46]

§ 6. Tort liability of druggists.—Druggists must exercise the highest degree of care for the safety of the public dealing with them.[47] A violation of a statute regulating the sale of poisons gives a right of action to one specially damaged thereby.[48] Contributory negligence of a person whose death was caused by the administration of the wrong drug would bar a recovery by the estate; but negligence of a third person in administering the drug would not relieve from liability a druggist by whose negligence the poisonous drug was delivered in place of the one ordered.[49] Where a customer relies on a druggist's representations that a drug delivered is the same as that ordered, he may recover from the dealer the damage caused by use of the drug.[50] A retail druggist who refuses to furnish the medicine called for by

41. Instructions held to be substantially correct. Logan v. Field [Mo.] 90 S. W. 127.

42. $300 held proper charge for certain operation, $500 being held excessive. $5 for house calls and $3 for office visits held not excessive for eye, ear, and throat specialist. Best v. McAuslan [R. I.] 60 A. 774.

43. See 4 C. L. 639; Homicide, 5 C. L. 1702.

44. See 4 C. L. 638.

45. V. S. § 4662, as amended by Acts 1902, p. 125, No. 112, prohibits practice of pharmacy by one not licensed, and prohibits retail sale of drugs unless business is conducted by licensed pharmacist. § 4662 is made not applicable to widows or administrators of deceased licensed pharmacists, and § 4663 permits sale of drugs by dealers in general merchandise who do not employ licensed pharmacists. Held, last two provisions are unconstitutional, there being no reasonable basis for the discrimination. State v. Abraham [V't.] 61 A. 766.

46. An indictment charging the vending of drugs and poisons without license, which contains all the necessary allegations under Cr. Code 1895, § 480, and all the necessary exceptions under Pol. Code 1895, § 1499, is sufficient to withstand a demurrer. Carter v. State [Ga.] 50 S. E. 64.

47. Druggist liable for negligence in giving strychnine in place of morphine if death of patient resulted from such negligence. Sutton's Adm'r v. Wood, 27 Ky. L. R. 412, 85 S. W. 201. Druggist held not negligent in putting up a certain prescription, and evidence held not to show that poisoning was caused by overdose of morphine. Laturen v. Bolton Drug Co., 93 N. Y. S. 1035.

Note: "In a business so hazardous, having to do directly and frequently with the health and lives of so great a number of people, the highest degree of care and prudence for the safety of those dealing with such dealer is required. And that degree of care exacted of such dealer will be required also of each servant intrusted by him with the conduct of his calling. Smith v. Middleton, 112 Ky. 588, 66 S. W. 388, 99 Am. St. 308. See, also, as having a bearing on the liability of druggists for sales of poisons and deleterious drugs, Smith v. Hays, 23 Ill. App. 244; Gwynn v. Duffield, 66 Iowa, 708, 24 N. W. 523, 55 Am. Rep. 286; McCubbin v. Hastings, 27 La. Ann. 713; Norton v. Sewall, 106 Mass. 143, 8 Am. Rep. 298; Osborne v. McMasters, 40 Minn. 103, 41 N. W. 543, 12 Am. St. Rep. 698; Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 397, 57 Am. Dec. 455; Wohlfahrt v. Beckert, 92 N. Y. 490, 44 Am. Rep. 406; Beckwith v. Oatman, 43 Hun [N. Y.] 265; Davis v. Guarnieri, 45 Ohio St. 470, 15 N. E. 350, 4 Am. St. Rep. 548; Brunswig v. White, 70 Tex. 504, 8 S. W. 85; Hargrave v. Vaughn, 82 Tex. 347, 18 S. W. 695; and authorities cited in monographic note to Howes v. Rose [Ind.] 55 Am. St. Rep. 255, on the liability of apothecaries and druggists for negligence in compounding or selling drugs."—Crane v. Bennett [N. Y.] 101 Am. St. Rep. 767.

48. Druggist liable where strychnine was given in place of drug desired—morphine—and St. 1903, § 2630 was not complied with, the strychnine package being unlabelled, and no inquiry being made as to what it was to be used for. Sutton's Adm'r v. Wood, 27 Ky. L. R. 412, 85 S. W. 201.

49. Negligence of nurse would not relieve druggist who gave strychnine for morphine, death of patient resulting. Sutton's Adm'r v. Wood, 27 Ky. L. R. 412, 85 S. W. 201.

50. Vaccine virus was ordered and a blackleg virus was delivered by another firm to which the order was sent. The buyer notified the dealer of the fact and was informed that the two medicines were the same, and thereupon used the blackleg virus on horses and mules, relying, as the jury found, on the druggist's representation. Held, the buyer could recover from the a prescription and also refuses to return the prescription is liable for the damages thereby caused.[51]

MENTAL SUFFERING AS AN ELEMENT OF DAMAGES.

[Special Article by Oscar Hallam.*]

§ 1. The general doctrine.—It is now established that mental suffering may constitute a proper element of damages. This is on the principle that the mind is no less a part of the person than the body, indeed that the sufferings of the former are oftentimes more acute and lasting than those of the latter.[1] Such damages are compensatory. They have sometimes been spoken of as punitive,[2] but this is contrary to the generally accepted rule.[3] Though the above doctrine is well recognized, much conflict has arisen as to the extent of its application. The subject suggests a variety of considerations which will be here treated.

§ 2. In actions for breach of contract.—According to the weight of authority, mental suffering is not a proper element of damage in actions for breach of contract, except in the case of breach of contract to marry. The rule of damages in actions on contract is that a party who breaks a contract is liable only for the direct consequences proceeding immediately therefrom and also for such as may fairly and reasonably be considered, either as arising naturally, that is, in the usual course of things, from such breach, or such as may be reasonably supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract as the probable result of a breach of it,[4] and it is held that mental suffering is not a proximate or probable consequence of the breach of a contract, that damages therefor are too remote and could not have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made.[5] Upon this proposition, however, the authorities are not unanimous. It has been stated that "The true principle is not the arbitrary exclusion of damages for mental suffering in actions upon contract, but the recoverability of damages for such element being made to depend upon whether or not mental pain and suffering are natural and probable consequences of the breach of contract.[6] It druggist the loss resulting from death of the horses and mules so treated. Mann-Tankersly Drug Co. v. Cheairs [Ark.] 88 S. W. 873.

51. Druggist put up the medicine but refused to deliver it or the prescription because the purchaser would not pay the price demanded. White v. McComb, City Drug Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 739.

1. Seger v. Barkhamsted, 22 Conn., 290; McKinley v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 44 Iowa, 314. See, also, Damages, 5 C. L. 904; 3 C. L. 997, 1 C. L. 833. May be allowed wherever it is a natural consequence of the injury whether or not there is physical injury. 3 C. L. 1003, n. 4.

2. Trawick v. Martin-Brown Co., 79 Tex. 460, 14 S. W. 564.

3. Head v. Georgia Pac. Railway Co., 79 Ga. 358, 7 S. E. 217; Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa, 474, 10 N. W. 864; Lunt v. Philbrick, 59 N. H. 59; Curtis v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 87 Iowa, 622, 54 N. W. 339.

4. Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341.

5. Walsh v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 42 Wis., 23; Stone v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 47 Iowa, 88; Francis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 58 Minn., 252, 59 N. W. 1078; Connell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 116 Mo. 34, 22 S. W. 345; Wilcox v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 52 F. 264; Hamlin v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 Hurl. & N. 408.

*Judge of the District Court of Minnesota.

was accordingly held in one case that recovery might be had for mental suffering on account of delay in the transportation of a corpse.[7] In another case an undertaker had agreed to keep the body of plaintiff's deceased daughter in a vault until such time as plaintiff might be ready to inter it. The contract was broken by his taking or allowing it to be taken therefrom and buried or otherwise disposed of. It was held that plaintiff's mental suffering was a proper element of damage, and that such a case "rests upon the reasonable doctrine that where a person contracts to do a particular thing, the failure to do which may result in anguish or distress of mind on the part of the other party contracting, he is presumed to have contracted with reference to the payment of damages of that character in the event such damages accrue by reason of a breach of contract on his part."[8] In another case quite unique in its facts, it was held that in computing damages for breach of the contract of a fashionable milliner to furnish the dresses for the trousseau of a bride of wealth and high social standing, mental suffering resulting from the breach of contract is a proper element, and the court may take into consideration the disappointment of the bride in not having the dresses in time for the wedding, and her mortification and humiliation in going to her husband unprovided with a suitable trousseau, and also the fact that entertainments had been planned in her honor on her wedding tour, and at her arrival at the home of her husband, which entertainments she would have to forego for want of dresses.[9] It was denied in an action by the groom under substantially similar circumstances.[9a] In another case where plaintiff purchased tickets over defendant's road for himself and family, and where, by reason of defendant's failure to carry them through, they suffered several days' delay and were obliged to reach their destination over another road and were there detained for some time waiting for their baggage, it was held that mental suffering was a proper element of damage.[10] On the other hand, it was held, in the Federal court, under a similar state of facts, that there could be no recovery "for distress of mind, anxiety, mortification and suspense," because of delay in starting a special train engaged to take plaintiff to the bedside of a relative dangerously ill, there being no personal injury and no pecuniary loss.[11] Recovery has been allowed in some states and denied in others for mental suffering caused by nondelivery of a telegram, treating such default as a breach of contract,[12] though recovery for such cause, where allowed, is usually placed on the ground that the failure constitutes a tort.[13] The general subject of liability of a telegraph company for mental suffering on account of failure to deliver a message will be reserved for another article.[14]

§ 3. Passenger cases.—As will be presently seen, mental suffering is frequently a proper element of damage in an action by a passenger against a carrier for personal injuries. The liability of the carrier in such cases does not properly come under the head of breach of contract. Such liability, though arising out of a contract relation, is essentially in tort. "It is an action brought upon the theory that legal rights growing out of a contract have been violated, or legal duties resting

6. 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 672.

7. Hale v. Bonner, 82 Tex. 33, 17 S. W. 605. See Wells Fargo & Co.'s Express v. Fuller, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 610, 35 S. W. 824. Sale of coffin and burial robe. Dunn & Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 74 S. W. 576. See 5 C. L. 915, n. 14.

8. Renihan v. Wright, 125 Ind. 536, 25 N. E. 822.

9. Lewis v. Holmes, 109 La. 1030, 34 So. 66, 61 L. R. A. 274.

9a. Eller v. Carolina & W. R. Co. [N. C.] 52 S. E. 305.

10. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry (Tex. App.) 15 S. W. 48.

11. Wilcox v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 52 F. 264; Turner v. Great Northern R. Co., 15 Wash. 213, 46 P. 243.

12. Blount v. Western Union Tel. Co., 126 Ala. 105; Mentzer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 Iowa, 752, 62 N. W. 1. Contra. Connell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 116 Mo. 34, 22

thereupon neglected. As applied to a carrier, the contract it makes with a passenger gives him the right to be carried safely and put down at the place he has designated; the failure to do either is a tort. The carrier is engaged in an employment which devolves a duty upon him; an action on the case will lie for a breach of that duty, although it may consist in doing something contrary to an agreement."[15]

§ 4. Mental suffering in tort actions.—The question of the right to recover for mental suffering commonly arises in tort actions. There is want of harmony among the cases as to when recovery for mental suffering may be had in this class of cases. One line of cases holds that mental suffering is recoverable in but two classes of cases: (1) Where there is a negligent act causing a physical hurt; recovery being had for the mental anguish which is the result of the physical hurt, not of the negligent act. "For the agonies of mind the plaintiff suffered while the train bore down upon him with his foot caught in the frog, not one cent; but damages are allowable only for the mental anguish resulting from the fact that he must go through life a cripple." (2) In the other class of cases, of which malicious prosecution, seduction, and libel are illustrative, the wrongful act is affirmative, is one of commission, not merely of omission, is the product of intent or malice, express or implied.[16] It will be observed that a distinction is drawn between negligent and willful torts.

Mental suffering incident to physical injury.—In negligent torts resulting in physical injury to the person, it is generally agreed that the mental suffering which is incident to such physical injury is a proper element of damage,[17] but it is sometimes difficult to determine what mental suffering is incident to physical injury within the meaning of this rule. The strict rule is that, in connection with bodily pain, compensation may be had for "so much of mental suffering as may be indivisibly connected therewith."[18] But it has been held that however small the bodily injury may be, yet if it was in itself a ground of action, and caused or was necessarily attended with mental suffering to the plaintiff, that mental suffering is a part of the injury for which the plaintiff is entitled to damages.[19] And to constitute bodily injury it is not necessary that there should be a bruise or wound or even impact, as where the train struck plaintiff's carriage, and threw him to the ground, though not inflicting any physical hurt,[20] and where a carriage was struck and carried along for some distance, though the occupants were not thrown out.[21]

Torts causing directly only mental shock, physical injury resulting.—Where the negligent tort causes fright or mental suffering alone, it is generally agreed that there can be no recovery; but where such fright or mental shock subsequently re-

S. W. 345; Francis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 58 Minn. 252, 59 N. W. 1078.

13. Mentzer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 Iowa, 752, 62 N. W. 1.

14. See Telegraphs and Telephones, 6 C. L.

15. Brown v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 54 Wis. 342, 11 N. W. 356, 911.

16. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ferguson, 157 Ind. 64, 60 N. E. 674, 54 L. R. A. 846. The dissent from this doctrine will hereafter appear. None for mere mental suffering without physical injury. See 5 C. L. 923, n. 81. For carrying beyond station it is not allowed unless there was physical injury or unless it might have been contemplated. See 1 C. L. 845, n. 43. None for fright from collision without injury. See 1 C. L. 845, n. 46.

17. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Montgomery, 152 Ind. 1, 49 N. E. 582. Personal injuries. See 5 C. L. 927, n. 32, 37; 3 C. L. 1019, n. 55, et seq; 1 C. L. 855, n. 82.

18. Johnson v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 6 Nev. 224.

19. Canning v. Williamstown, 1 Cush. [Mass.] 451; Curtis v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 87 Iowa, 622, 54 N. W. 339.

20. Warren v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 163 Mass. 484, 40 N. E. 895.

21. Consolidated Traction Co. v. Lambertson, 59 N. J. Law, 297, 36 A. 100.

In these cases there was a technical trespass to the person of the plaintiff, and in Warren v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 163 Mass. 484, 40 N. E. 895, it is specifically held that it is a physical injury to the person to be thrown out of a wagon, even though the harm consists mainly in nervous shock.

sults in some bodily ailment, the case is not so clear. In England the weight of recent authority sustains the right of recovery in such cases.[21a] In the United States the weight of authority is against it.[22] There is, however, a respectable line of dissenting authorities in the United States which allow recovery in such cases.[22a]

21a. English authorities: In the much quoted early case of Lynch v. Knight, 9 H. L. Cas. 577, 598, it is said: "Mental pain or anxiety the law cannot value, and does not pretend to redress, when the unlawful act complained of causes that alone;" and in Allsop v. Allsop, 5 Hurl. & N. 534, Pollock, C. B., said: "We ought to be careful not to introduce a new element of damage, recollecting to what a large class of actions it would apply, and what a dangerous use might be made of it." Both these actions were for slander. In both it was held that the words uttered were not actionable, and the cases are authority only to the point that there can be no recovery for mental suffering on account of the utterance of words not actionable in themselves.

The case of Victorian R. Com'rs v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, is in point. It held that damages were not recoverable for illness resulting from a nervous shock or mental injury caused by defendant's negligence in permitting the plaintiff to cross its track when it was dangerous to do so. Although this case is followed in Henderson v. Canada Atl. R. Co., 25 Ont. App. 437, it is discredited in later English decisions and can no longer be considered an authority there.

In Bell v. Great Northern R. Co., 26 L. R. Ire. 428, it was held that fright caused by negligence of a railroad company, in permitting a train to run down an incline, and then stop with a jerk, and which causes injury to health, furnishes a basis of recovery. In Wilkinson v. Downton, [1897] 2 Q. B. 57, defendant by way of a practical joke falsely represented to plaintiff that her husband had met with a serious accident. Plaintiff believed it to be true and in consequence suffered a violent nervous shock which rendered her ill. It was held that these facts constituted a cause of action, and Victorian R. Com'rs v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, was disapproved. The decision is placed on the ground that "the defendant has * * * willfully done an act calculated to cause physical harm to the plaintiff—that is to say, to infringe her legal right to personal safety, and has in fact thereby caused physical harm to her. That proposition without more appears to me to state a good cause of action. * * * This willful injurla is in law malicious, although no mallcious purpose to cause the harm * * * is imputed to the defendant."

In Dulieu v. White [1901] 2 K. B. 669, defendant's servant negligently drove a van through the window of a room where plaintiff was sitting. It was held there might be a recovery for the physical consequences of the shock and fright to plaintiff. The court disapproved Victorian R. Com'rs v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, and approved Bell v. Great Northern R. Co., 26 L. R. Ire. 428, and it is said: "Let it be assumed that the physical injury follows the shock, but that the jury are satisfied upon proper and sufficient medical evidence that it follows the shock as its direct and natural effect, is there any legal reason for saying that the damage is less proximate in the legal sense than damage which arises contemporaneously? 'As well might it be said that a death caused by poison is not to be attributed to the person who administered it because the mortal effect is not produced contemporaneously with its administration.'" See, also, Fitzpatrick v. Great Western R. Co., 12 U. C. Q. B. 645; Pugh v. London, etc., R. Co., [1896] 2 Q. B. 248.

22. American rule: In the United States the prevailing rule is otherwise. There is some conflict of authority, but in most jurisdictions it is held that a negligent act producing immediately only nervous shock or fright affords no cause of action although the nervous shock or fright results in sickness, insanity or death; in other words, that there is no legal, causal connection between the negligence which causes the mental shock and the physical injury that results from it. Mitchell v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 151 N. Y. 107, 45 N. E. 354; Spade v. Lynn, etc., R. Co., 168 Mass. 285, 47 N. E. 88; Id., 172 Mass. 488, 52 N. E. 747; Nelson v. Crawford, 122 Mich. 466, 81 N. W. 335, 40 Am. St. Rep. 577; Braun v. Craven, 175 Ill. 401, 51 N. E. 657; Chicago v. McLean, 133 Ill. 148, 24 N. E. 527; Ewing v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 147 Pa. 40, 23 A. 340; Gatzow v. Beuning, 106 Wis. 1, 81 N. W. 1003; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Trott, 86 Tex. 412, 25 S. W. 419; Scheffer v. R. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 26 Law. Ed. 1070; Haile's Curator v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 66 F. 557; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 24 Ind. App. 374, 56 N. E. 917.

In Mitchell v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 151 N. Y. 107, the facts were that plaintiff was standing upon a cross-walk of a city street, awaiting a car. Just as she was about to step upon it, the team attached to another car drew near and turned and came so close to her that from fright and excitement she became unconscious and the result was a miscarriage. It was held that there could be no recovery. The court said: "If fright cannot form the basis of an action, it is obvious that no recovery can be had for injuries resulting therefrom," and that any other rule "would naturally result in a flood of litigation in cases where the injury complained of may be easily feigned without detection, and where the damages must rest upon mere conjecture or speculation."

In Spade v. Lynn, 168 Mass. 285, the facts were that defendant's conductor in removing a drunken man from a car, jostled another drunken man who was standing in front of plaintiff and threw him upon her. The fall upon her was a trifling matter taken by itself, but the fright caused by that and the rest of the occurrences in the car resulted in physical injury,. It was held that persons merely frightened should not be compensated for fright and its consequences where there is no contemporaneous physical injury and that there could be no recovery. In Nelson v. Crawford, 122 Mich. 466, 81 N. W. 335, the defendant, dressed in woman's clothes, went to the residence of plaintiff, whom he frightened by following her into the house and striking the floor with a parasol; the fright, it was alleged, caused a miscarriage. There was no attempt to do bodily injury and the defendant intended no wrong or injury. It was held that this evidence showed no assault, that fright unaccompanied by physical injury is not a basis for damages, and accordingly there could be no recovery. This case, in its facts, closely resembles the English case, Wilkinson v. Downton [1897] 2 Q. B. 57, supra, but the opposite conclusion was reached.

In Braun v. Craven, 175 Ill. 401, 51 N. E. 657, defendant, the landlord of plaintiff's sister, entered the house, the door being ajar, to collect rent, and went into plaintiff's bedroom where she was sitting on the floor packing her goods prior to moving. Defendant waived his hands and shouted in an angry and loud tone and boisterous manner. "What are you doing here? I forbid you moving. If you attempt to move I will have a constable here in five minutes." Plaintiff asked damages for a severe nervous shock claimed to have been suffered thereby, which resulted in St. Vitus dance. It was held that the action was "purely one of negligence," that in case of mere negligence "a liability cannot exist consequent on mere fright or terror which superinduces nervous shock" and that it could not be said that defendant's manner, language or gestures, or declared purpose were naturally and reasonably calculated to, or that it might be anticipated they would, produce the peculiar injury sustained by the appellant.

In Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Trott, 86 Tex. 412, 25 S. W. 419, through the negligence of defendant, plaintiff's team was frightened so that it broke his wagon, putting him in fear and fright and causing him great mental suffering. It was held that no action would lie for damages based upon tortious and negligent conduct, where the wrongful act caused no physical injury to his person nor any other element of personal damage.

In Haile's Curator v. Texas & P. R. Co., [C. C. A.] 66 F. 557, plaintiff was a passenger upon a train which plunged through a burning bridge. The physical injury was inconsequential, but it was alleged that the fright and mental shock caused insanity. It was held there could be no recovery.

In Scheffer v. R. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 26 Law. Ed. 1070, plaintiff's intestate received injuries through the negligence of defendant of so severe a character that insanity resulted, and while in that condition he committed suicide. The court said, "His insanity, as a cause of his final destruction, was as little the natural or probable result of the negligence of the railway officials, as his suicide, and each [both] of these are casual or unexpected causes, intervening between the act which injured him, and his death."

22a. Dissenting American authorities: The doctrine of the foregoing cases has not been universally followed. In one case Cowan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 122 Iowa, 379, 98 N. W. 281, it was said, "The doctrine thus approved is so manifestly unjust, and so out of harmony with the general spirit of the law, that many courts have wholly repudiated it, while still others have limited and modified it by important exceptions." There are well-considered cases holding that, if physical injuries are a natural and proximate result of a nervous condition, and the nervous condition is a natural and proximate consequence of defendant's negligence, there may be a recovery in damages accordingly, irrespective of bodily hurt at the time of the mental shock; that in such cases the act which caused the nervous condition set in motion the agencies by which the injury was produced and is the proximate cause of such injury. Purcell v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. 48 Minn., 134, 50 N. W. 1034, 16 L. R. A. 203; Sloane v. Southern R. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 P. 320; Ephland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 57 Mo. App. 147; Razzo v. Varni, 81 Cal. 289, 22 P. 848; Davis v. Tacoma, etc., Power Co., 35 Wash. 203, 77 P. 209.

In Ephland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 57 Mo. App. 147, plaintiff sustained injury by reason of fright from a panic among passengers, caused by a false alarm of danger by the brakeman of the defendant's train. It was held that the physical injury traceable to the fright was a legal consequence of the negligence causing the fright.

In Sanderson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 88 Minn. 166, 92 N. W. 542, 60 L. R. A. 405, it is said: "The great weight of authority sustains the doctrine that there can be no recovery for fright which causes injury without impact; that is, in the absence of any contemporaneous physical injury. * * * This rule, as thus broadly stated, has not been accepted by this court," and the rule of that court is stated, in substance, to be that there can be no recovery for fright which results in physical injuries, in the absence of contemporaneous injury to the plaintiff, unless the fright is the proximate result of a legal wrong against the plaintiff by the defendant, but if it is the result of such a legal wrong, recovery should be allowed.

The application of this rule is illustrated by two other cases in that state. In one the facts were that the defendant shot a dog in the highway. Plaintiff, a woman, standing near, whom the defendant did not see at the time he fired, was so seriously frightened that a miscarriage resulted. It was held she could not recover, since the fright was not the result of any legal wrong to her. Renner v. Canfield, 36 Minn. 90, 30 N. W. 435. In the other case, the defendant so negligently managed its street cars that a collision seemed inevitable. The fright sustained by plaintiff, who was a passenger on one of the cars, resulted in a miscarriage. It was held that plaintiff was entitled to recover, although there was in fact no collision and no impact. Purcell v. St. Paul City R. Co. 48 Minn. 134, 50 N. W. 1034, supra. This was on the principle above stated that the fright was the proximate result of a legal wrong against the plaintiff by the defendant; that is, that the negligent management of the cars and the threatened collision was a legal wrong to plaintiff.

It would probably not be contended, however, that the mere fact of negligent management of the car and a threatened collision or even the fact of an actual collision would alone give a right of action, even for nominal damages (See Wyman v. Leavitt,

Jumping to avoid injury.—While the doctrine of these cases is not generally accepted, it must be conceded that it borders closely on the rule of a well accredited line of cases in which it is held that where a person, in terror and alarm at the prospect of a threatened danger, dodges, jumps from a train or makes other effort to escape from such threatened danger, and in doing so is injured, there may be a recovery both for the fright and nervous shock and for the physical injuries resulting therefrom.[23]

Proximate consequences.—It will be observed that in the two lines of cases noted there is a difference not only in the result but in the test applied to determine what are "proximate consequences" in tort actions.[24]

§ 5. Willful torts without physical injury.—It has been said that as far as pecuniary elements of damage are concerned, the right of recovery is wholly independent of the motive which induced the act or omission.[25] The weight of authority, however, supports the doctrine that in determining whether mental suffering is an element of damage, there is a distinction between willful and negligent torts; that the prevailing rule heretofore stated "has no application to wanton or intentional wrongs, nor the acts done with gross carelessness or recklessness, showing utter 71 Me. 227); that is in the above case, with the element of fright and the resulting injury eliminated, there was no legal actionable wrong. Accordingly, under the doctrine of this case, it is not necessary that the right to recover for the consequences of fright should rest upon a distinct and independent cause of action.

23. Buchanan v. West Jersey R. Co., 52 N. J. Law, 265, 19 A. 254; Buel v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 31 N. Y. 314; Dyer v. Erie R. Co., 71 N. Y. 228; Stokes v. Saltonstall, 13 Pet. [U. S.] 181, 10 Law. Ed. 115; Smith v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 30 Minn. 169, 14 N. W. 797; Mack v. South Bound, etc., R. Co., 52 S. C. 323, 29 S. E. 905; Jones v. Boyce, 1 Starkie, 493.

In Spade v. Lynn, etc., R. Co., 168 Mass., 285, 47 N. E. 88; Id., 172 Mass. 488, 52 N. E. 747, supra, however, this doctrine is harmonized with the doctrine of the court in that case, by holding that it is "a physical injury to the person to be * * * compelled to jump out, even although the harm consists mainly of nervous shock." Really the chain of consequences is the same whether the person in peril jumps or faints, and the substantial difference between injuries which result from jumping and those which result from fainting is that which arises from the greater opportunity for imposition and fraud in the latter case. The difference is not one so much of principle as one of practical difficulties.

24. In Purcell v. St. Paul City R. Co., 48 Minn. 134, 50 N. W. 1034, the rule is stated that "When the act or omission is negligence as to any and all passengers, well or ill, any one injured by the negligence must be entitled to recover to the full extent of the injury so caused, without regard to whether, owing to his previous condition of health, he is more or less liable to injury." This is in accordance with the rule often stated that "He who is responsible for a negligent act must answer 'for all the injurious results which flow therefrom, by ordinary, natural sequence, without the interposition of any other negligent act or overpowering force'" (Mentzer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 Iowa, 752, 62 N. W. 1), although such resulting injury could not have been foreseen or contemplated as a probable result of the act done (Brown v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 54 Wis. 342, 11 N. W. 356), and that "it is the unexpected rather than the expected that happens in the great majority of the cases of negligence" (Stevens v. Dudley, 56 Vt. 158).

On the other hand, it was held in Spade v. Lynn & B. R. Co., 168 Mass. 285, supra, that a carrier is not obliged to anticipate or guard against an injurious result which would only happen to a person of peculiar sensitiveness. In Mitchell v. Rochester R. Co., 151 N. Y. 110, supra, it is said "Proximate damages are such as are the ordinary and natural results of the negligence charged, and those that are usual and may, therefore, be expected."

In Braun v. Craven, 175 Ill. 401, supra, it was said that the plaintiff must show a damage, naturally and reasonably arising from the negligent act and reasonably to be anticipated as a result. Citing many cases.

In Ewing v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 147 Pa. 40, supra, the court said. "If the injury was one not likely to result from the collision, and one which the company could not have reasonably foreseen, then the accident was not the proximate cause." In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Elliott [C. C. A.] 55 F. 949, it was said, "An injury that could not have been foreseen or reasonably anticipated as the probable result of an act of negligence is not actionable," and in Scheffer v. R. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, it was said, "The suicide * * * was not the natural and probable consequence (of the negligence) and could not have been foreseen in the light of the circumstances attending the negligence," and hence was not to be considered.

25. Sutherland, Damages, par. 98; Krom v. Schoonmaker, 3 Barb. [N. Y.] 647; Bridgewater Gas Co. v. Home Gas Fuel Co., 59 F. 40; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Pitzer, 109 Ind. 179, 6 N. E. 310; note to Gilson v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 36 Am. St. Rep. 819. See Gatzow v. Buening, 106 Wis. 1, 81 N. W. 1003, 80 Am. St. Rep. 17, 49 L. R. A. 475.

indifference to consequences when they must have been in the actor's mind,"[26] and that "while the current of authority supports the doctrine that there can be no recovery for mental suffering where there has been no physical injury, in ordinary actions for negligence, yet that is not the law as applied to a willful injury committed against the complaining party."[27] In the case of willful torts, attended with malice, express or implied, the rule is uniform that mental suffering is a proper element of damage, though there is no bodily injury, and that, where the manner of commission of the act is such as, naturally, to cause mental suffering, damages for mental suffering may be recovered, as where the tort feasor has been actuated by wantonness or malice or has proceeded with willful or positive disregard of the plaintiff's rights in the premises.[28] It is accordingly held that mental suffering is a proper element of damages in actions for libel and slander,[29] in crim. con. by a husband,[30] assault and battery,[31] assault without battery,[32] malicious prosecution,[33] even of a civil suit,[34] false imprisonment,[35] for wrongful arrest, in the presence of family and friends,[36] and the fact that because of his arrest plaintiff's mother swooned, thereby causing him greater anxiety, may be considered.[37] And a parent may recover for mental suffering in an action for abduction of a child,[38] or for seduction of a daughter,[39] and in such case the anxiety of the parent for other children in the family may be considered.[40] The theory of this latter class of actions is loss of service, but damages are awarded largely as compensation for wounds inflicted on the mind. It is also held that a passenger, wrongfully ejected, may recover for the effect of insult and indignity to the feelings, as compensatory damages, though the facts do not warrant punitive damages,[41] and even though no physical force or violence was used.[42] There are authorities, however, to the effect that where the injury is not willful, mental suffering such as is produced by circumstances of indignity, contumely and consequent disgrace cannot be recovered in an action for damages for ejectment of a passenger.[43]

§ 6. Active torts without malice.—In the foregoing cases, the tort was accompanied by malice, express or implied. Some courts have also sustained the recovery of damages for mental suffering in a class of torts consisting of some positive act, although there is no express or implied malice or intentional insult or oppression. The correct rule has been said to be that "mental suffering or nervous shock may be recovered for, whenever it is the natural and proximate result of the wrong done, if such wrong gives the injured party a cause of action."[44]

26. Spade v. Lynn & B. R. Co., 168 Mass. 285, 172 Mass. 488; Fillebrown v. Hoar, 124 Mass. 580; Lombard v. Lennox, 155 Mass. 70; Hawes v. Knowles, 114 Mass. 518.

27. Kline v. Kline, 158 Ind. 602, 6 N. E. 9.

28. Moyer v. Gordon, 113 Ind. 282; Byrne v. Gardner, 33 La. Ann. 8. Wrongful expulsion from an association. See 3 C. L. 1014, n. 84.

29. Finger v. Pollack, 188 Mass. 208, 74 N. E. 317; Osborn v. Leach, 135 N. C. 628. See 3 C. L. 1018, n. 52; 1 C. L. 927, n. 30.

30. Johnston v. Disbrow, 47 Mich. 59, 10 N. W. 79.

31. Lucas v. Flinn, 35 Iowa, 9.

32. Barbee v. Reese, 60 Miss. 906; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Flagg, 43 Ill. 364.

33. Parkurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa, 474, 10 N. W. 864; Fisher v. Hamilton, 49 Ind. 341, and see 5 C. L. 924, n. 91; 1 C. L. 849, n. 94.

34. Cohn v. Saidel, 71 N. H. 558. 53 A. 800.

35. Stewart v. Maddox, 63 Ind. 51. See 3 C. L. 1014, n. 73; 1 C. L. 849, n. 89, 93.

36. Shatto v. Crocker, 87 Cal. 329, 25 P. 921; Gibney v. Lewis, 68 Conn. 392, 36 A. 799.

37. Flam v. Lee, 116 Iowa, 289, 90 N. W. 70.

38. Magee v. Holland, 27 N. J. Law, 86.

39. Phillips v. Hoyle, 4 Gray (Mass.) 568; Lunt v. Philbrick, 59 N. H. 59; Barbour v. Stephenson, 32 F. 66.

40. Stephenson v. Belknap, 6 Iowa, 96.

41. Smith v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 23 Ohio St. 10; Quigley v. Central Pac. R. Co., 11 Nev. 350; Hays v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 46 Tex. 272; Willson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 5 Wash. 621, 32 P. 468. Wrongful ejection of a passenger. See 5 C. L. 920, n. 61; 3 C. L. 1010, n. 18 et seq.; 1 C. L. 845, n. 41.

42. Sloane v. Southern Cal. R. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 P. 320, 32 L. R. A. 193; Shepard v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 77 Iowa, 54, 41 N. W. 564.

43. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Sutton, 53 Ill. 397.

44. Sutherland, Damages, § 943. In line with this, it was held in Larson v. Chase, 47 Minn. 307, 50 N. W. 238, 14 L.

§ 7. Actions of tort for injury to property.—Mental suffering is not ordinarily allowed as an element of damage for negligent injury to property, no insult or contumely or any intentional violation of plaintiff's rights being shown, for mental distress is not, in general, a natural or probable consequence of such torts.[45] For example, it was held that there is no liability for mental suffering arising from negligent blasting on adjoining premises which resulted in throwing rocks on plaintiff's land,[46] or negligently running cars off the track and against plaintiff's dwelling.[47] The contrary has been held.[48] In another case it was held that the jury might consider the insults and indignities to the wife of plaintiff offered by employes of defendant while negligently dumping earth against plaintiff's house,[49] and in an action for damages for negligent destruction of a furnace it was held that anxiety for a sick child might be considered;[50] and mental suffering, due to violent conduct, is properly considered in aggravation of damages for trespass.[51] In one case the defendant was held liable for causing nervous prostration, by trespassing in the nighttime.[52] In some jurisdictions mental suffering has been held a proper element of damages for illegal issuance of an attachment against property,[53] and also for wrongful eviction under void process;[54] but it has been held otherwise,[55] and it was held in one case that mental suffering was a proper element of damage in an action by the owner for damages for the willful beating of an old horse of little or no value.[56]

§ 8. Elements of damage.—Where mental suffering is recoverable, it is held that the jury may consider not only such mental suffering as is a direct result of the physical injuries, but also that condition of mind caused by insults and indignities in connection therewith.[57] The prevailing rule is that mental anguish or mortifi-

R. A. 85, that a wife might recover damages for mental suffering on account of the dissection of the corpse of a deceased husband, though there was no other element of substantial damage. Mitchell, J., said: "There has been a great deal of misconception and confusion as to when, if ever, mental suffering, as a distinct element of damage, is a subject for compensation. This has frequently resulted from courts giving a wrong reason for a correct conclusion * * * placing it on the ground that mental suffering, as a distinct element of damage, is never a proper subject of compensation, when the correct ground was that the act complained of was not an infraction of any legal right, and hence not an actionable wrong at all, or else that the mental suffering was not the direct and proximate effect of the wrongful act. * * * But, where the wrongful act constitutes an infringement on a legal right, mental suffering may be recovered for, if it is the direct, proximate, and natural result of the wrongful act. * * * That mental suffering and injury to the feelings would be ordinarily the natural and proximate result of knowledge that the remains of a deceased husband had been mutilated, is too plain to admit of argument."

In another case it was held that the removal of the body of a child from the lot in which it was rightfully buried to a charity plot gives the parent a right to recover for injury to his feelings. In this case, the action was nominally trespass, but the only substantial element of damage was mental suffering (Meagher v. Driscoll, 99 Mass. 281), and in another case a physician took a nonprofessional unmarried man with him to attend a case of confinement, and permitted him to remain in the room, because there was no other shelter from a prevailing storm, and then permitted and in fact requested him, to assist him without any sufficient necessity therefor. It was held that both were liable for damages, although there was no wrong motive in the act (DeMay v. Roberts, 46 Mich. 160, 9 N. W. 146).

45. White v. Dresser, 135 Mass. 150, 46 Am. Rep. 454; White v. Sander, 168 Mass. 296, 47 N. E. 90; Wyman v. Leavitt, 71 Me. 227, 36 Am. Rep. 303; Smith v. Grant, 56 Me. 255; Wolf v. Stewart, 48 La. Ann. 1431. Allowed for nuisance. See 3 C. L. 1016, n. 14.

46. Wyman v. Leavitt, 71 Me. 227.

47. Ewing v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 147 Pa. 40, supra.

48. Yoakum v. Kroeger (Tex. Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 953.

49. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 1032.

50. Vogel v. McAuliffe, 18 R. I. 791, 31 A. 1.

51. Hickey v. Welch, 91 Mo. App. 12. Trespass on lands accompanied by abusive and violent conduct. See 1 C. L. 853, n. 46.

52. Watson v. Dilts, 116 Iowa, 249, 89 N. W. 1068, 93 Am. St. Rep. 239, 57 L. R. A. 559.

53. Byrne v. Gardner, 33 La. Ann. 6; City Nat. Bank v. Jeffries, 73 Ala. 183.

54. Rauma v. Bailey, 80 Minn. 336, 83 N. W. 191; Fillebrown v. Hoar, 124 Mass. 580.

55. Anderson v. Taylor, 56 Cal. 131.

56. Kimball v. Holmes, 60 N. H. 163.

cation from disfigurement of person is a proper element of damage.[58] But there as good authority to the contrary.[59] Where mental suffering is allowed as an element of damage, the jury may consider not only past and present, but such as is reasonably certain to follow in the future.[60] This does not allow consideration of mental anguish from contemplation of what merely might occur.[61] But it has been held that a person bitten by a dog may recover for mental suffering caused by fear of hydrophobia.[62] There can be no recovery for mere inconvenience,[63] or mere "lack of personal enjoyment,"[64] but there may be for loss of intellectual capacity and mental vigor, on principles analogous to recovery for loss or diminution of earning capacity.[65]

§ 9. Mental suffering must proceed from tort to plaintiff.—The mental suffering considered must proceed from and be caused by the act or neglect which produced the physical damage. Sorrow, disappointment on account of loss of offspring, following a miscarriage caused by negligent injury, are not part of the pain naturally attending the injury and are too remote.[66] Apprehension that the injured person may not be able to support his family is not an element of damage.[67] And the general rule is that the physical injury must be to the person who suffers the mental pain. Hence a wife cannot recover for mental pain resulting from unlawful imprisonment of her husband,[68] or from his wrongful indictment,[69] or from abusive language toward the husband,[70] nor can a father recover for parental grief and anxiety on account of mere physical injuries sustained by a child; the only mental anguish recoverable in such cases is that of the infant himself.[71] Nor can a father recover because of solicitude for the child's safety.[72] In an action by a father for damages for loss of his infant son's services, by reason of personal injuries, it was held that the jury cannot consider either the distress of mind or the disappointed hopes of the parent,[73] and in a malpractice case, brought by a husband, for injuries done to his wife during a surgical operation which resulted in her death, but which were not willfully inflicted, it was held that no recovery could be had for his mental suffering, as such cause of action must be restricted to the person who received the injury.[74] On the other hand, in an English case, it was held that the husband

57. Smith v. Holcomb, 99 Mass. 552; Morgan v. Curley, 142 Mass. 107, 7 N. E. 726; Wadsworth v. Treat, 43 Me. 163; Prentiss v. Shaw, 56 Me. 427; Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Fix, 88 Ind. 381.

58. Newbury v. Getchel & M. Lumber & Mfg. Co., 100 Iowa, 441, 69 N. W. 743; Power v. Harow, 57 Mich. 107, 23 N. W. 606; Sherwood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 82 Mich. 374, 46 N. W. 773; Wilson v. Young, 31 Wis. 574; Nichols v. Brabazon, 94 Wis. 549, 69 N. W. 342; Heddles v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 228, 46 N. W. 115; Cameron v. Bryan, 89 Iowa, 214, 56 N. W. 434; Schmitz v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 119 Mo. 256, 24 S. W. 472; Stewart v. Maddox, 63 Ind. 51; Ballou v. Farnum, 11 Allen [Mass.] 73; Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Wood, 48 Ga. 565; The Oriflamme, 3 Sawy. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 10,572.

59. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Caulfield [C. C. A.] 63 F. 396; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hines, 45 Ill. App. 299.

60. Kendall v. Albia, 73 Iowa, 241, 34 N. W. 833.

61. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cole, 165 Ill. 334, 46 N. E. 275.

62. Warner v. Chamberlain, 7 Houst. [Del.] 18.

63. Jenson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 86 Wis. 589, 57 N. W. 359.

64. City of Columbus v. Strassner, 124 Ind. 482, 25 N. E. 65.

65. Wade v. Leroy, 20 How. [U. S.] 34; Wallace v. Western N. C. R. Co., 104 N. C. 442.

66. Bovee v. Danville, 53 Vt. 190; Augusta, etc., R. Co. v. Randall, 85 Ga. 297, 322.

67. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Chance, 57 Kan. 40, 45 P. 60; Texas Mex. R. Co. v. Douglass, 69 Tex. 694, 7 S. W. 77.

68. Ellis v. Cleveland, 55 Vt. 358.

69. Hampton v. Jones, 58 Iowa, 317, 12 N. W. 276.

70. Bucknam v. Great Northern R. Co., 76 Minn. 373, 79 N. W. 98; Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11, 28 Am. Rep. 607.

71. Flemington v. Smithers, 2 Car. & P. 292; Long v. Morrison, 14 Ind. 595, 77 Am. Dec. 92; Cowden v. Wright, 24 Wend. [N. Y.] 429, 35 Am. Dec. 633; Whitney v. Hitchcock, 4 Denio [N. Y.] 461; Black v. Carrollton R. Co., 10 La. Ann. 33, 63 Am. Dec., 586; Maynard v. Oregon R. & N. Co. [Or.] 78 P. 983, 68 L. R. A. 477.

72. Keyes v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 290, 30 N. W. 888; Texas Mex. R. Co. v. Douglass, 69 Tex. 694, 7 S. W. 77.

73. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kelly, 31 Pa. 372.

74. Hyatt v. Adams, 16 Mich. 179, 197.

might recover for distress of mind suffered on his wife's account from the time of an accident which caused death till the moment of her dissolution.[75]

§ 10. Mental suffering in actions for death by wrongful act.—In actions for death by wrongful act, there can generally be no compensation for wounded feelings of the survivors, or the deceased.[76] Where by statute the right of action survives, there is the same recovery for injured feelings of the deceased as he would have had himself, but if death were instantaneous and there could accordingly have been no mental suffering, there can be no recovery on that ground.[77]

MERCANTILE AGENCIES.[52]

MERGER IN JUDGMENT; MERGER OF CONTRACTS; MERGER OF ESTATES, see latest topical index.

MILITARY AND NAVAL LAW.

§ 1. Military and naval organization, maintenance, and enlistment. A. Regular army and navy. Enlistment.[53]—No person under the age of twenty-one years can be enlisted or mustered into the military service of the United States without the written consent of his parents or guardians, if he has any entitled to his custody or control.[54] A minor enlisting without such consent cannot be discharged under a writ of habeas corpus, issued after his arrest for desertion, where, after the arrest and after the issuance of the writ, but before judgment or final hearing and within a reasonable time, formal charges of desertion and fraudulent enlistment and receipt of pay and allowances are preferred against him by the military authorities.[55] In such case he will be left in their custody until he has answered or satisfied the charges against him, without prejudice to his father's right to thereafter demand his discharge from the army, and to enforce the same by appropriate remedy.[56]

In the navy, minors over the age of eighteen may be enlisted without such consent,[57] and the marine corps is a part of the navy.[58]

Pay and subsistence.[59]—By act of congress naval officers are entitled to the same pay and allowances, except forage, as are received by officers of corresponding rank in the army;[60] hence a naval officer, who, in time of war and pursuant to orders issued by competent authority, exercises a command above that pertaining to his grade, is entitled to receive the pay and allowances of the grade appropriate to the command so exercised, the same as an army officer would be under similar circumstances.[61] Naval officers on shore duty are entitled to the same allowances as are

75. Baker v. Bolton, 1 Camp. 493.

76. Blake v. Midland R. Co., 18 Q. B. 93; Donaldson v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 18 Iowa, 280; Southern Cotton Press Mfg. Co. v. Bradley, 52 Tex. 587, 601; Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging & Reclamation Co., 84 Cal. 515, 24 P. 303. Allowed for wrongful death. See 1 C. L. 857, n. 94.

77. Kennedy v. Standard Sugar Refinery, 125 Mass. 90; Moran v. Hollings, 125 Mass. 93; Muldowney v. Ill. Cent. R. Co., 36 Iowa, 462; Moe v. Smiley, 125 Pa. 136, 17 A. 228; Maher v. Philadelphia Traction Co., 181 Pa. 617, 37 A. 571; The Robert Graham Dun, 33 U. S. App. 297.

52. No cases have been found for this subject since the last article. See 2 C. L. 890.

53. See 4 C. L. 640.

54. Rev. St. § 1117; Comp. St. 1901, p. 813. Elliott v. Harris, 24 App. D. C. 11.

55, 56. In re Lessard, 134 F. 305.

57. Rev. St. §§ 1418, 1419; Comp. St. 1901, p. 1007, construed. Elliott v. Harris, 24 App. D. C. 11.

58. Elliott v. Harris, 24 App. D. C. 11.

59. See 4 C. L. 640.

60. Act March 3, 1899 (30 St. L. 1007), § 13. Thomas's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 1.

61. Increased pay of army officers authorized by Act April 26, 1898 (30 St. at L. 365), § 7. Thomas's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 1. Held that command of vessel in Philippines after given to army officers of corresponding rank,[62] hence a naval surgeon on detached recruiting service is entitled to commutation of quarters.[63] It is further provided that such act shall not operate to reduce the pay which, but for its passage, would have been received at the time of its passage or thereafter.[64]

The pay proper of all officers serving in the insular possessions of the United States, and in Alaska, or beyond the limits of the United States, is increased ten per cent over and above the rates as fixed by law in times of peace.[65] Pay proper means compensation which may be described or designated as pay as distinguished from allowances, commutations for rations, and the like,[66] and includes longevity pay.[67]

A higher rate of pay is allowed to naval officers when performing sea duty than when engaged on shore duty.[68] The navy department cannot, in disregard of the statute, deprive an officer of sea pay by assigning him to a duty mistakenly qualified as shore duty, but which is in law sea duty.[69] An officer assigned to sea duty is entitled to sea pay, though called upon, without change in his assignment, to perform merely temporary service ashore.[70] Where the assignment expressly imposes upon the officer the continued discharge of his sea duties, and qualifies his shore duty as merely temporary and ancillary thereto, it will be presumed that such shore duty is temporary and that it is not incompatible with his sea duty so as to prevent his being entitled to sea pay.[71]

Naval constructors may be detailed by the secretary of the navy to inspect army transports,[72] and are not entitled to additional compensation for so doing.[73]

Musicians in the band of the marine corps are not entitled to increased pay for length of service.[74]

Volunteer officers and enlisted men are entitled to be paid up to the time of treaty of peace with Spain, but during the Philippine insurrection, was "in time of war." Id.

62. Act March 3, 1899, § 13 (30 St. L. 1007). Anderson's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 316.

63. Anderson's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 316.

64. Act March 3, 1899, § 13 (30 St. L. 1007), as amended by Act June 7, 1900 (2 Supp. R. S. 1451, par. 2). Terry's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 353. Effect of act is to entitle officer to pay he would have received but for its passage. Thus, an officer entering the service before the passage of the Act of 1899, promoted from captain to rear admiral after the passage of the act, and embraced in the nine lower numbers of that grade and assigned to shore duty, is entitled to the old naval pay of a rear admiral on shore duty as fixed by Rev. St. § 1556, and not that fixed by § 7 of the Act of 1899. Id. The fact that the Act of 1899 abolished the grade of commodore, to which grade claimant would otherwise have been promoted instead of that of rear admiral, does not change the rule or render the measure of his compensation what he would have received as commodore. Id. Question what rank he would have occupied, but for the passage of the act of 1899, cannot be considered. Id.

65. Acts May 26, 1900 (31 St. L. 211, c. 586), and March 2, 1901 (31 St. L. 903, c. 803. Comp. St. 1901, p. 896). United States v. Mills, 197 U. S. 223, 49 Law. Ed. 732.

66. United States v. Mills, 197 U. S. 223, 49 Law. Ed. 732.

67. Longevity pay authorized by Rev. St. § 1262, Comp. St. 1901, p. 896, should be added to minimum pay for officer's grade prescribed by § 1261 (Comp. St. 1901, p. 893), and the increase figured on the total. United States v. Mills, 197 U. S. 223, 49 Law. Ed. 732. Term "current yearly pay" as used in § 1262 means the same as "pay proper." Id. Fact that Congress distinguishes between "pay proper" and "additional pay for length of service" in Act March 15, 1898 (Army appropriation act, 30 St. L. 318, c. 69), is immaterial both because the form of appropriations was changed in all subsequent acts, and because the act applies only to enlisted men. Id.

68. Rev. St. 1556, 1571; Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1067, 1079, applies to chief engineers. United States v. Engard, 196 U. S. 511, 49 Law. Ed. 575, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

69. United States v. Engard, 196 U. S. 511, 49 Law. Ed. 575, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

70. Naval regulations, pars. 1154, 1168. United States v. Engard, 196 U. S. 511, 49 Law. Ed. 575, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

71. Where there is nothing in the record to the contrary. United States v. Engard, 196 U. S. 511, 49 Law. Ed. 575, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 712.

72. Is duty of navy to give army all necessary assistance when it becomes necessary for latter to use ships. Stocker's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 300. Statute creating office is broad enough to include such duties, and hence inspection does not burden officer with duties not incident to his office. Id.

73. Is prohibited by Rev. St. § 1765, and there is nothing authorizing it in Act March 9, 1898, 30 St. L. 274, making an appropriation for the national defense. Stocker's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 300.

74. Act March 3, 1899, § 24 (30 St. L. 1007), supersedes Rev. St. § 1284 in this particular. Giacchetti's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 381.

their discharge or muster out,[75] and to be discharged or mustered out at the place where they were enrolled.[76] A staff officer ordered to his home, there to be discharged, is entitled to his regular pay until he reaches home, though delayed by sickness necessitating his detention in military hospitals.[77]

Volunteer officers and enlisted men are, on their discharge, entitled to one or two months extra pay according to whether they served within or beyond the limits of the United States.[78] Such officers or men who served during the war with Spain and were mustered out without furlough were given the same extra pay,[79] and staff officers were placed on the same footing as line officers in this regard.[80] An officer or soldier subject to the orders of superior authority, or by order under medical or surgical treatment in a hospital, or otherwise subject to the orders of the medical staff, cannot be deemed to have been on furlough within the meaning of these acts.[81] The furlough will be deemed to have been withheld or suspended whenever it appears that orders by superior authority have interfered with the personal freedom of the officer or soldier to dispose of his own time.[82] Any part of the furlough period during which he was neither subject to duty, nor waiting or responding under orders for duty, is to be considered as furlough pro tanto, and operates to diminish the extra pay pro rata.[83]

Under the Act of February 24, 1897, a person duly appointed or commissioned to be an officer of volunteers during the civil war, and subject to the mustering regulations at that time applicable to members of the volunteer service, is deemed to have been mustered into the service in the grade named in his appointment or commission from the date from which he was to take rank under its terms, whether the same was actually received by him or not, and is entitled to pay, emoluments, and pension as if actually mustered at that date, provided his command had been recruited to the minimum number required by law and the army regulations, or had been assigned to duty in the field.[84] In order that an officer may take advantage of this act it is not necessary that the records of the war department show that he was mustered into the service or was assigned to active duty in the field,[85] but where it appears that his command was below the minimum, it is sufficient if it is proven by any competent evidence that he was commissioned and actually performed active duties in the field under proper orders.[86] Orders and reports of commanding generals contemporaneous with the services rendered are admissible for that purpose.[87] Upon the remuster of an officer, under this act, his heirs are entitled to the pay and 75, 76. Daggett's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 209.

77. Delay cannot be counted as part of leave which was given him by order directing his discharge two months after its date. Daggett's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 209.

78. Act Jan. 12, 1899 (30 St. L. 784), provides for two months' extra pay to volunteers thereafter mustered out and discharged. Before the passage of this act the same result was accomplished by orders of the war department giving a leave of absence for a like period after arrival at the place of discharge. Daggett's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 209.

79. And this act was later extended so as to entitle those previously mustered out without furlough to the same extra pay. Act May 26, 1900, 31 St. L. 217. Daggett's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 209; Magurn's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 416.

80. By Act May 26, 1900 (31 St. L. 217), providing that the act of 1899 shall extend to all volunteer officers of the general staff who have not received waiting orders prior to their discharge. Daggett's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 209. Thus, a staff officer who received only a part of the leave of absence to which he was entitled under the orders of the war department may recover waiting orders pay for the balance of such time. Id.

81. Under Act May 26, 1900. Magurn's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 416. Officer who did not receive leave of absence but was detained for and actually performed duty during the furlough period, except when on sick leave, held entitled to full two months extra pay. Id.

82, 83. Magurn's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 416.

84. Act Feb. 24, 1897, 29 St. L. 593. Brewington's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 399.

85. Brewington's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 399.

86. Such orders operate as an assignment to duty in the field. Brewington's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 399.

87. One part of the res gestae. Brewington's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 399.

emoluments to which he would have been entitled had he been actually mustered on the date of remuster, and the settlement of his accounts must relate back to that date.[88] Under the Acts of July 22, 1861, and July 5, 1862, an enlisted man was only entitled to bounty if he served for the period of two years,[89] and hence an officer, who enlisted as a private and was subsequently promoted, remustered under the act of 1897, loses his right thereto if the remuster is as of a date antecedent to the expiration of that period.[90] So, too, the right of a veteran volunteer re-enlisting to subsequent instalments of the bounty provided for by the orders of the war department, as subsequently ratified by congress, ceased when he was promoted to be a commissioned officer,[91] and a remuster carrying back the date of his muster as an officer, to a time antecedent to the payment of an instalment of such bounty, deprives him of his right thereto.[92] The bounty paid in such cases is a set-off to the amount found due under the act of 1897, and may be deducted therefrom.[93]

Commutation for quarters.[94]—Army officers on detached recruiting service at stations where there are no public quarters, or where such quarters are inadequate, are entitled to commutation for quarters.[95] They are on duty without troops, though enlisted men may be on duty with them in the capacity of guards, orderlies, and the like.[96]

Traveling expenses and mileage.[97]—The travel pay and commutation of substance allowed an officer in the civil war, honorably discharged after the passage of the income tax law of 1862, was subject to its provisions to the extent of any surplus over and above his actual traveling expenses, and where he failed to render an account thereof, to the extent of the whole amount received,[98] and the right of the government to the tax was not taken away by the repealing act.[99] Such tax may be deducted from an account first presented under the Act of March 3rd, 1901, appropriating money for arrears of pay of volunteers during the civil war.[1] That act relieves the officer's claim from the operation of the statute of limitations.[2]

Compensation for lost equipment.—Horses lost in the military service are paid for by the government, provided the loss results from any exigency or necessity of such service and is not caused by the fault or negligence of its owner.[3]

88. 24 St. L. 993. Application by heirs for benefits of the act operates to reopen the settlement made with decedent. Reynolds's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 74.

89. 12 St. L. 268, § 5, and Id. 509, § 6. Reynolds's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 74.

90. Was promoted and mustered in as a commissioned officer, and remustered under the act of 1897 as of an anterior date. Reynolds's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 74.

91. Bounty provided for by Gen. Orders of the War Dept. Nos. 191, 324, of 1863, as ratified by Joint Resolution of Jan. 13, 1864, 13 St. L. 400. Mahan's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 97.

92. Mahan's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 97.

93. Reynolds's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 74; Mahan's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 97. Different rule applies to first instalment of $25 of the $60 bounty earned by re-enlistment under Gen. Orders of 1863, Nos. 191, 324, particularly where it is not averred that claimant was paid $25 or any other sum, under the acts of 1861 and 1862, in addition to the $60. Id.

94. See 4 C. L. 642.

95. Anderson's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 316.

96. Under general order of secretary of war issued pursuant to Act March 2, 1901 (31 St. L. 901), authorizing him to determine what shall constitute duty without troops. Anderson's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 316. The act did not change the former law as to commutation for quarters (Acts June 18, 1878, 21 St. L. 145, and June 23, 1879, 21 St. L. 30), nor Army Regulations § 1336, made pursuant thereto, limiting the right to such commutation to officers serving without troops. Id.

97. See 4 C. L. 643.

98. Act July 1, 1862, 12 St. L. 472, § 86. Galm's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 55.

99. Act July 14, 1870, 16 St. L. 261, § 17. Galm's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 55.

1. 16 St. L. 1179. Galm's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 55.

2. Galm's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 55.

3. Rev. St. § 3482, as amended by Act June 22, 1874 (1 Supp. Rev. St. 37). Hardie's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 250. Act Jan. 9, 1883 (22 St. L. 401, § 2), providing that all claims for horses lost in battle, etc., shall be barred, unless filed within one year after the passage of the act, does not operate to deprive the court of claims of jurisdiction to allow such claims subsequently accruing, but its object was to extend a limitation expiring Dec. 31, 1875. Id. Horse killed on transport going to Manila was lost through an exigency of the service, and it being in charge of a government veterinary surgeon and not of its owner, it could not be contended that loss was due to his negligence. Id.

Retirement.[4]—A retired enlisted man is not entitled to the increase of pay given enlisted men in time of war.[5]

(§ 1) B. Militia.[6]—In the absence of statute a municipal corporation is under no liability to pay for supplies furnished to armories of the national guard located therein.[7] Statutes authorizing such expenditures must be strictly complied with.[8]

An appropriation "to promote the efficiency of the state guard" is one "for defraying the necessary expenses of government" within the meaning of the Arkansas constitution, and hence may be made by a majority vote of the legislature.[9]

The duty of the governor of Kentucky to approve the pay rolls of the state guard is ministerial merely, and hence mandamus will lie to compel him to perform it.[10]

§ 2. Regulations and discipline; promotion and discharge.[11]—An officer in the navy may be promoted for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle, when the number of the higher grade is full, only with the advice and consent of the senate.[12] The constitutional power of the president to fill vacancies during the recess of the senate is operative only when there is an existing office and a vacancy therein, and does not authorize him to create vacancies by making such promotions to a grade in which there are no vacancies.[13] Such a promotion is ineffective and creates no vacancy to which officers below the one advanced can be promoted.[14]

The act providing for medals of honor for distinguished services during the civil war applies only to those who distinguished themselves in action, and not to one rendering services as a spy or military expert.[15]

§ 3. Military and naval tribunals.[16]—Courts-martial are courts of inferior limited jurisdiction.[17] No presumptions are indulged in favor of their judgments, but before they will be given effect it must be made to clearly and affirmatively appear that the court was legally constituted, that it had jurisdiction of the person and offense charged, and that the judgment imposed is conformable to the law.[18] They have jurisdiction to try and punish persons in the military service for murder and certain other crimes only in time of war, insurrection, or rebellion, and such a condition must be shown to have existed in order to sustain their judgments in such cases.[19] The existence of a state of war must be determined by the political department of the government, and courts take judicial notice of such determination and are bound thereby.[20]

4. See 4 C. L. 644.

5. Twenty per cent increase given by Act April 26, 1898, 30 St. L. 364. Murphy's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 178.

6. See 4 C. L. 645.

7. Lewis v. New York, 94 N. Y. S. 710.

8. In order to hold city of New York for such supplies mode prescribed by Military Code, § 134, (Laws 1898, p. 563, c. 212, as amended by Laws 1901, p. 843, c. 314), for contracting for such supplies, must be strictly complied with. Lewis v. New York, 94 N. Y. S. 710. Such section construed with New York charter § 1565 (Laws 1901, p. 645, c. 466), requires contracts to be let to lowest bidder after due advertisement except in case of an emergency and hence contract for coal made by private negotiation imposes no obligation on the city. Id.

9. Act March 17, 1905, held valid under Const. art. 5, §§ 30, 31, though it also recites that the appropriation is made necessary in order to receive the support of the Federal government under certain acts of congress. State v. Moore [Ark.] 88 S. W. 881. Act March 17, 1905, making an appropriation to promote the efficiency of the state guard does not violate Const. art. 5, § 30, requiring appropriations to be made by separate bills, each embracing but one subject, because it includes an appropriation for the benefit of the adjutant general, thereby in effect repealing Kirby's Dig. § 5295. Id.

10. Duty imposed by St. 1903, § 2705. Cochran v. Beckham [Ky.] 89 S. W. 262.

11. See 4 C. L. 645.

12. Rev. St. §§ 1506, 1507. Peck's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 125.

13, 14. Peck's Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 125.

15. Act March 3, 1863 (12 St. at L. 751, c. 79). De Arnaud v. Ainsworth, 24 App. D. C. 167.

16. See 4 C. L. 647.

17. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445.

18. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445. Where a respondent in habeas corpus alleges that he holds the petitioner under a judgment of conviction by a court-martial, he must show a valid exercise of the power conferred on such courts. Id.

No commander of a fleet or squadron in the waters of the United States may convene a naval court-martial without express authority from the president.[21] The accused must be furnished with a true copy of the charges with the specifications at the time he is put under arrest.[22] The arrest referred to is the one made after charges have been formulated and a court-martial ordered, and not to the preliminary arrest or detention consequent upon the commission of an offense.[23] The expressed satisfaction of the accused with the court is a waiver of any objections to its personnel.[24] In order to be effective the sentence must be affirmed by the proper officer.[25] The temporary suspension of a naval officer from duty is not such a punishment for the offense leading up thereto as will prevent further proceedings against him by court-martial.[26]

§ 4. Civil status, rights and liabilities of the military and navy.[27]—When the armed forces of the government are, by lawful authority, commissioned to enforce its lawful demands against a foreign country, or to protect the lives of its citizens stationed there, or its accredited representatives, there exists military jurisdiction and power to enforce discipline.[28] Persons in the military service who commit crimes while stationed in a foreign country are not amenable to, nor are the offenses committed in violation of, the latter's laws, whether such occupation is with the consent of the foreign country or not.[29] If offenses at all, they are offenses committed in violation of the military laws of this country.[30]

§ 5. Martial law.[31]

§ 6. Soldiers' homes and indigent soldiers.[32]

MILITIA, see latest topical index.

MILLS.

A "public grist mill" is one at which grain is ground by the grist, and a mill which receives grain and gives the owner proportionate amount of flour and bran from stock on hand is not within the statute regulating tolls.[32a]

19. Under 58th article of war. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445.

20. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445. Boxer uprising in China in June 1900, held to constitute a time of war within the meaning of this article. Id.

21. Rev. St. § 1624, art. 38. United States v. Smith, 197 U. S. 386, 49 Law. Ed. 801, rvg. 38 Ct. Cl. 257. "Waters of the United States" mean waters within the continental limits of the United States and do not include Manila bay, and court-martial ordered by commander of fleet stationed there shortly after the treaty with Spain is legal, though not expressly authorized by the president. Id.

22. Rev. St. § 1624, art. 43, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1117. United States v. Smith, 197 U. S. 386, 49 Law. Ed. 801, rvg. Smith's Case, 38 Ct. Cl. 257. Naval Regulation Act April 23, 1800, 2 St. at L.50, 51, c. 33. Bishop v. U. S., 197 U. S. 334, 49 Law. Ed. 780, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

23. Service on day after naval court-martial was ordered held sufficient, though accused had been in irons for some time previously. United States v. Smith, 197 U. S. 386, 49 Law. Ed. 801, rvg. 38 Ct. Cl. 257. Service need not be made where he is temporarily placed under arrest for the preservation of good order and for purposes of investigation, and is subsequently released, but it is sufficient if he is served on the day when he is re-arrested on the convening of a court-martial for the trial of the charges against him. Bishop v. U. S., 197 U. S. 334, 49 Law. Ed. 780, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

24. Precludes collateral attack on ground that as many officers as could be convened without injury to the service were not summoned, as required by Act July 17, 1862, art. 11 (12 St. at L. 603, c. 204). Bishop v. U. S. 197 U. S. 334, 49 Law. Ed. 780, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

25. Confirmation of sentence of naval court-martial by the officer convening it was not required by Act July 17, 1862, arts. 19, 20 (12 St. at L. 605, c. 204), where the sentence extended to dismissal from the service, but only approval by the president. Bishop v. U. S., 197 U. S. 334, 49 Law. Ed. 780, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 473. Confirmation by president held to sufficiently appear from statement in letter of secretary of the navy dismissing the accused from the service, and president's signed approval of the brief of the findings of the court. Id.

26. Suspension for a day for intoxication held not a punishment within the meaning of Navy Regulations 1865, par. 1205, and order restoring him to duty to await an opportunity for time to investigate the case held not to have "entirely discharged" the accused within the meaning of the same paragraph. Bishop v. U. S., 197 U. S. 334, 49 Law. Ed. 780, afg. 38 Ct. Cl. 473.

27. See 4 C. L. 649.

28, 29. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445.

30. Hamilton v. McClaughry, 136 F. 445. Thus, a soldier committing murder during the presence of the American troops in China, during the Boxer uprising, must be

MINES AND MINERALS.[33]

§ 1. General common-law principles. A. Public ownership[34] seldom arises as a live question in respect of lands in the public domain.[35]

(§ 1) B. Private ownership; right of freehold tenants of less than fee.[36]—Minerals in place in the earth are realty,[37] but when severed therefrom by artificial causes become personalty.[38] Oil[39] and natural gas are minerals within this rule and become personalty only when reduced to possession.[40] They constitute a part of the land and belong to the owner of the fee in the sense that he has the exclusive right to reduce them to possession by operations on his own land, and to grant such right to others.[41] He is not limited to any particular territorial area beneath the surface, but may draw oil from the underlying reservoir generally.[42] Until so reduced to possession, however, they may be taken by any other person by proper operations on his own land.[43] The shaft drilled from the surface to the gas bearing rock is a part of the realty.[44]

One owning the fee to land within the limits of a country highway, subject punished under the articles of war or not at all. Id.

31. See 4 C. L. 649, and note in 98 Am. St. Rep. 773.

32. See 4 C. L. 649.

32a. Crawshaw v. Curtis, 119 Ill. App. 42.

Water power and mill-dam privileges, see Waters and Water Supply, 4 C. L. 1824.

33. As to the cases anterior to Current Law, see Barringer and Adams Mines.

34. See 2 C. L. 893.

35. See post, § 2 et seq.; Public Lands, 4 C. L. 1106.

For a discussion of this matter, see Barringer & Adams Mines, p. 178 et seq.

36. See 4 C. L. 650.

37. Brooks v. Cook, 141 Ala. 499, 38 So. 641; Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512. Is land and subject to conveyance as such. Huss v. Jacobs, 210 Pa. 145, 59 A. 991.

38. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512.

39. Petroleum oil is a mineral and when in place is realty and a part of the land itself. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236. Is part of the freehold. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 317. Becomes personalty only when brought to the surface. Peterson v. Hall [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 603.

40. Natural gas is mineral, and when in place is part of the land itself. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236. Becomes personalty only after being mined and reduced to possession. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538. When extracted from the earth and put in a pipe line is personal property, and hence may be the subject of conversion. Conversion where pipe is opened and gas extracted and consumed without the owner's knowledge and consent. Crystal Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Marion Gas Co. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 15.

41. Richmond Nat. Gas Co. v. Davenport [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 525; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961.

42. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961.

43. Richmond Nat. Gas Co. v. Davenport [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 525. Owners of surface have collectively an exclusive ownership in the oils. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961.

44. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538.

only to the public easement, has a legal right to quarry and remove the underlying stone, so long as he does not unnecessarily interfere with the rights of the public.[45]

Rights of life tenants and lessees.—A life tenant coming into possession of land from which the owner of the fee has previously taken oil or gas by means of wells, or after he has granted the right to do so to another, may enjoy the use of such wells or the royalties therefrom during such tenancy as profits and income from the land in the condition in which it comes to him;[46] but where no such operations have been carried on by the owner of the fee, or his grantee or lessee, and he has not conveyed such right by lease or grant during his ownership, a tenant for life has no right himself to operate for oil or gas or to give authority to another to do so,[47] and such a taking by him constitutes waste,[48] notwithstanding the fact that all the gas or oil will be taken by operations on neighboring lands before the remainderman comes into possession.[49]

An ordinary lease not referring to mines, minerals, quartz, or oil, is a lease merely of the superficies of the soil and does not authorize the removal of underlying oil,[50] and its unauthorized severance and removal by the lessee is waste.[51]

Rights of co-owners and tenants in common.—Joint owners of oil and gas only, not owning the surface, cannot have partition in kind by lines upon the surface, but only by a sale of the oil and gas and a division of the proceeds.[52]

The basis of accounting between tenants in common, joint tenants, and coparceners, for waste effected by the extraction of oil from the common property under circumstances making it reasonably certain that the party so taking it acted without fraud and under the belief of good title in himself to the whole of the property, though not without notice of defect of title, is the value of all the oil produced from the land, less the whole cost of its production, including the cost of drilling producing wells.[53] If one co-tenant executes an oil lease purporting to cover the entire property under which the lessee produces oil, delivering a part thereof to the lessor as royalty, it is proper to require the lessor and lessee jointly to make reparation to the injured co-tenant,[54] and to order satisfaction of the decree against them to be made out of proceeds of the oil in the hands of a special receiver appointed in the cause.[55] Rentals received by the lessor, under the provisions of the lease for delay in drilling, constitute no part of the damages and should not be included in the decree, nor are they to be accounted for as rents and profits unless the lease is ratified or acquiesced in by the other co-tenant.[56] A mere demand for discovery as to, and an accounting for, such rentals, in a bill expressly denying the title of the lessor and the validity of the lease, does not amount to a ratification or adoption of such lease.[57]

§ 2. Acquisition of mining rights in public lands. A. What lands may be located.[58]—In order to be valid the location must be upon unappropriated government land.[59] A junior location, however regular in form, is of no effect as against the

45. Town of Clarendon v. Medina Quarry Co., 102 App. Div. 217, 92 N. Y. S. 530. Should only be required to keep a passageway open upon the surface of the ground, or by bridges, sufficiently wide to enable teams to pass, and not to full legal width of highway. Should also be required to give bond to protect town against loss from personal injuries, and to complete work within reasonable time. Id.

46, 47, 48, 49. Richmond Nat. Gas Co. v. Davenport [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 525.

50. Lease for purposes of erecting tenement building held not to authorize removal of oil. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 317.

51. Authorizes rescission of contract under Civ. Code § 1930. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 317.

52. Where one party owns all the surface and one-eighth of the oil and gas, and other party the balance. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236.

53, 54, 55, 56, 57. McNeely v. South Penn Oil Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 480.

58. See 4 C. L. 650.

59. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329; McWilliams v. Winslow [Colo.] 82 rights conferred upon a prior locator, so long as the prior location is subsisting.[60]

Land once located may become unappropriated by a forfeiture or abandonment of the rights of the original locator.[61] So, too, land attemped to be located is unappropriated if the attempted location is invalid.[62]

(§ 2) B. Who may locate.[63]—A location by an alien is not void, but voidable only, and cannot be attacked by anyone except the government.[64] It is rendered valid by his subsequent grant thereof to a citizen.[65]

§ 3. Mode of locating and acquiring patent. A. Making and perfecting location.[66]—Under the Federal statutes no location can be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located.[67] This, however, merely means that the fact of discovery must exist prior to the vesting of that right of exclusive possession which attends a valid location, and, if there are no intervening rights, it is immaterial whether the discovery is made before or after the performance of the other acts necessary to perfect the location.[68] The same discovery cannot be used for two locations, nor can a location be based on a discovery within the limits of another existing and valid location.[69]

The location must be distinctly marked on the ground so that its boundaries can be readily traced.[70] If a discovery is made and a proper notice of location is filed, it is sufficient if the boundaries are marked on the ground before the accrual of intervening rights.[71] The locator, however, delays at his peril, since he as-

P. 538. A placer location can only be made on vacant and unoccupied public land. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139. One cannot go upon a valid prior placer location and locate another placer claim thereon unless the original locator has abandoned his claim, waived the trespass, or has, by his conduct, estopped himself to complain. Id.

60. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

61. See § 3 C. post.

62. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329.

63. See 4 C. L. 651.

64, 65. Stewart v. Gold & Copper Co. [Utah] 82 P. 475.

66. See 4 C. L. 651.

67. Rev. St. § 2320, 5 Fed. St. Ann. p. 8. Creede & C. C. M. & M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501; Score v. Griffin [Ariz.] 80 P. 331. Evidence held sufficient to show existence of vein or lode at time of defendant's location, and a compliance with statutory requirements. Id. Evidence, in suit to determine adverse claims to a strip of ground as between a placer and a lode location, held sufficient to show that locator of lode claim had discovered valuable mineral-bearing rock therein, ores whose value was shown having been sufficiently identified as coming therefrom. San Miguel C. G. M. Co. v. Bonner [Colo.] 79 P. 1025. Evidence in action to support adverse claim held sufficient to support findings with respect to location and discovery of mineral. Stewart v. Gold & Copper Co. [Utah] 82 P. 475. The statute is made applicable to the location of lands chiefly valuable for petroleum or other mineral oils. 29 Stat. at L. p. 526, c. 216, provides for entry of such lands under laws applicable to placer claims, and Rev. St. § 2329, making laws relating to lode claims applicable to placer claims. Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 49 Law. Ed. 770. In order to sustain a location of petroleum lands there must be such a discovery of oil as gives reasonable evidence of its existence, and as would justify a man of ordinary prudence in the expenditure of his time and money in the development of the property. Evidence held to sustain finding that there was no such discovery. Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 49 Law. Ed. 770.

68. Discovery is only one of the steps necessary to a valid location, and the order in which such steps are taken is immaterial as against the government. Creede & C. C M. & M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501.

69. Location held not invalid on ground that discovery was made while working in an existing mine, where locator testified that he found quartz at different points on the ledge outside of the tunnel. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517. A location based upon a discovery within the limits of an existing and valid location is void. Sullivan v. Sharp [Colo.] 80 P. 1054.

70. U. S. Rev. St. § 2324, 5 Fed. St. Ann. 19. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736. Attempt to make location by posting notice on house in which they claimed to have located mineral claim held insufficient and not to entitle plaintiffs to recover possession where no attempt was made to distinctly mark boundaries on ground. Malececk v. Tinsley [Ark.] 85 S. W. 81.

71. Brockband v. Albion Min. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 863. Though boundaries were not fully marked on day location notice was posted because of deep snow, where notice contained full description of claim by courses and distances from the discovery monument where it was posted, and claim was relocation of one covering same ground, the corners of which were still substantially in place, location held at least sufficient to entitle the locator to perfect it within a reasonable sumes the risk of intervening rights of third parties.[72] One relocating an old claim may adopt corner monuments formerly placed on the ground, where their locations correspond with the calls in the notice, by repairing or reconstructing them,[73] and his notice of location may be made to refer to the boundary monuments or stakes of the previous location.[74]

Location notices and statutes prescribing their contents will be liberally construed,[75] and a substantial compliance with the statute is sufficient.[76] It is sufficient if the claim is so described that a person of reasonable intelligence can readily identify it.[77] In Arizona in case of the relocation of forfeited or abandoned claims, the certificate must state that the claim is located as forfeited or abandoned property;[78] but this rule does not apply where the subsequent locator bases his right on the contention that the prior locator never made a valid location under the law.[79]

The Federal statutes do not require the notice of location to be recorded,[80] but provide that all records of claims must contain the name or names of the locators, the date of the location, and such a description of the claim or claims located by reference to some natural object or permanent monument as will identify the claim,[81] and thereby clearly imply that recording will be required, either by the local laws, rules, or regulations of the miners, or by state statutes.[82] A statute requiring the claim to be recorded within a specified time does not work a forfeiture for noncompliance in the absence of a provision therein to the contrary.[83] Statutes in some states require the filing of a verified declaratory statement describing the claim.[84]

Locations may be amended without the loss of original rights, except those in-time, or before the rights of others intervened. Id.

72. Brockband v. Albion Min. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 863.

73. Where plaintiff had old monuments repaired and boundaries marked with posts in stone monuments at each corner, held, that location became complete, and subsequent locators were bound to take notice of his rights. Brockband v. Albion Min. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 863.

74. Brockband v. Albion Min. Co. [Utah] 81 P. 863.

75. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736. Notice. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

76. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736. Notice held a substantial compliance with Nev. Comp. Laws 1900, § 208, though not giving the distance on each side of the discovery point on the claim, or the general course of the vein. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610. Evidence held to sustain findings that notices were sufficient. Jackson v. Prior Hill Min. Co. [S. D.] 104 N. W. 207.

77. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736. Notices held sufficient, and properly admitted in evidence. Id.

78. Rev. St. 1901, § 3241. Otherwise certificate is invalid and not admissible in evidence. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329; Score v. Griffin [Ariz.] 80 P. 331. Act applies either in case of a forfeiture or abandonment, though in terms it refers only to the latter. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329.

79. In such case he makes an original location, and only issue is the validity of the original location. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329.

80. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

81. U. S. Rev. St. § 2324, 5 Fed. St. Ann. 19. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736. The sufficiency of the location with reference to natural objects or permanent monuments is a question of fact. Id. Stakes driven into the ground are sufficient where there are no permanent monuments or suitable natural objects, or where, owing to the condition of the surrounding country, they are the best means of identification. Id. Location held invalid and insufficient to authorize recovery of possession, where notice did not contain such a description. Malececk v. Tinsley [Ark.] 85 S. W. 81.

82. Rev. St. § 2324, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1426, providing what the record shall contain, and authorizing miners to make regulations governing the location, manner of recording, etc., not inconsistent with the state or Federal statutes. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

83. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610. Nev. Comp. Laws 1900, § 210, requiring claim to be recorded within 90 days after posting notice of location, is directory merely in so far as it relates to the time for making the record, if no adverse rights have intervened in the meantime, and even if adverse rights have intervened, unless they are founded on a valid location and compliance with the law. Id.

84. Laws 1873 (Ex. Sess.) p. 83, requiring the filing of a verified declaratory statement describing his claim in the manner provided by the Federal statutes, is not in conflict with U. S. Rev. St. § 2324. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806. Statement is fatally defective where verification omits date of location. Id.

consistent with the amendment,[85] but new rights cannot be added which are inconsistent with those acquired by other locations in the meantime.[86] By statute in Colorado a locator may file an additional certificate of location if he apprehends that his original location is defective or erroneous, or that the requirements of the law in making the location were not complied with, or in case he desires to change the surface location of his claim, or to take in any part of an overlapping claim which has been abandoned.[87] This applies only in case there has been a valid but imperfect location, and hence the filing of an additional certificate confers no rights on one whose original location was void because embraced within the limits of a valid existing location.[88]

(§ 3) B. Maintaining location; forfeiture, loss or abandonment.[89]—To enable one to maintain his right to a claim after it is acquired, he must continue substantially to comply with valid state and Federal statutes, and valid rules established by miners in force in the district where his claim is situated.[90] Under the Federal statutes in order to hold his claim the locator is required to perform labor and make improvements in a designated amount each year,[91] and a failure in this regard renders the claim open to relocation as though never located,[92] even though the original locator remains in possession.[93] The period within which the work is to be done commences on the first day of January next succeeding the date of the location of the claim.[94]

Work done outside the boundaries of a claim is available if in reasonable proximity thereto and done for the purpose of its development,[95] and it is immaterial whether the improvement is upon vacant or occupied[96] or patented or unpatented property, except in so far as that fact may throw light on the intention of the party doing the work.[97] The true test is does the work benefit or tend to benefit the claim, and was it done for the purpose of developing it,[98] the question of benefit

85, 86. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

87. Mills' Ann. St. § 3160. Sullivan v. Sharp [Colo.] 80 P. 1054.

88. Sullivan v. Sharp [Colo.] 80 P. 1054.

89. See 4 C. L. 653.

90. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

91. Rev. St. § 2324, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1426. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878. Evidence in action to support adverse claim held sufficient to support findings with reference to performance of assessment work. Stewart v. Gold & Copper Co. [Utah] 82 P. 475. Evidence in suit to quiet alleged possessory right to claims held to sustain finding that defendants had done required assessment work. Lauman v. Hoofer, 37 Wash. 382, 79 P. 953.

92. U. S. Rev. St. § 2324. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23.

93. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23.

94. On claims located since May 10, 1872. Act Jan. 22, 1880, c. 9, 21 St. 61, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1427. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878. Where claim was located Dec. 6, 1898, period for annual work commenced Jan. 1, 1899, and continued until Dec. 31, 1899, and hence claim was not open to relocation for locator's failure to do required work until after the latter date. Id.

95. Construction of tunnel on property outside the claim but solely with reference to its development. Godfrey v. Faust [S. D.] 105 N. W. 460, former opinion 101 N. W. 718. Work done in a tunnel for the purpose of developing the claim, and which has a tendency to develop it, may be applied as assessment work on such claim, regardless of the contiguity or noncontiguity of the territory from the portal of the tunnel to the claim sought to be developed. U. S. Rev. St. § 2324, as amended by Act Feb. 11, 1875 c. 41, 18 Stat. at L. 315 (5 Fed. St. Ann. pp. 19-21) construed. Hain v. Mattes [Colo.] 83 P. 127.

96. The fact that the territory between a tunnel and the claim to be developed is vacant and unoccupied, or owned by another person, is important only in so far as it may have a bearing on the ultimate question whether the tunnel does or does not develop the claim. Owner of claim need not own a continuous strip from portal of tunnel to exterior boundaries of claim. Hain v. Mattes [Colo.] 83 P. 127.

97. Godfrey v. Faust [S. D.] 105 N. W. 460, former opinion 101 N. W. 718.

98. Hain v. Mattes [Colo.] 83 P. 127. Evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that whole of road work was done as work on a claim other than the one in controversy. White River Min. & Nav. Co. v. Langston [Ark.] 88 S. W. 971. Where witness testified that road work had been done as work on claim in controversy, held, that certified copies of affidavits filed in land office showing that such work had been applied on another claim were admissible to contradict him. Id.

being one of fact for the jury.[99] One claiming under a subsequent location is in no position to urge that a trespass was committed in doing such work.[1]

The test for determining the value of the work is its reasonable value and not the contract price or the price actually paid for it.[2]

If a part owner of a claim fails or refuses to contribute his proportion of the cost of the required work after a personal notice or notice by publication to do so, his interest becomes the property of his co-owners who have made the required expenditures.[3] The right to give such notice is limited to a co-owner who has performed the labor or made the improvements required.[4]

Actual possession is not essential to the validity of the title obtained by a valid location, but, until such location is determined by abandonment or forfeiture, no right or claim to the property can be acquired by an adverse entry thereon with a view to the relocation thereof.[5]

Abandonment[6] is a matter of intention,[7] and takes place when the claimant of the claim goes away with no intention of returning to it, and with the intention of leaving it open to the next applicant.[8] By an abandonment the occupant loses all interest in the claim and leaves it free to relocation by the next comer.[9] An abandonment by a part owner before title has been acquired from the government does not vest any right or title to his interest in his co-owner.[10]

Forfeiture.[11]—A forfeiture takes place after the lapse of the statutory period by a failure to perform those acts by which mining claims are held, or to comply with the requirements of mining regulations, and is complete when some one enters with intent to relocate.[12] A forfeiture can only be established by clear and convincing evidence,[13] the burden being upon the party asserting it.[14]

99. Whether a tunnel does or does not tend to develop the claim. Hain v. Mattes [Colo.] 83 P. 127.

1. Because done on an adjoining claim to which corporation doing the work had no title. Godfrey v. Faust [S. D.] 105 N. W. 460, former opinion 101 N. W. 718.

2. Rate of wages and cost of work are strong elements in establishing its value, but are not conclusive. Stolp v. Treasury Gold Min. Co., 38 Wash. 619, 80 P. 817. Evidence held to support finding that work was of reasonable value of $100, notwithstanding evidence as to time occupied in performing it and as to the prevailing rate of wages. Id. Reasonable value governs, but amount paid may be shown as bearing on such value. McCormick v. Parriott [Colo.] 80 P. 1044.

3. Rev. St. § 2324, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1426. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

4. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838. Where co-owners, after having done required work, conveyed the entire claim to a corporation in consideration of substantially all its capital stock, which they retained, held, that notice signed by both them and the corporation was sufficient to work a forfeiture, and to vest forfeited interest in such corporation. Id.

5. Where defendant performed necessary work for previous year, fact that he was absent from claim and that some of his location stakes had fallen down did not vitiate his location, or authorize a relocation by others, but he was entitled to re-enter for the purpose of doing the assessment work for the next year, there having been no abandonment or forfeiture. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

6. See 4 C. L. 654.

7. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139. Where original locators claimed to have done required assessment work, and posted notices that they made such claim, mere fact that witnesses testified that, in their opinion, $300 worth of work had not been done held not to show abandonment. Id. Intent is to be determined by the acts and conduct of the parties. Evidence held to negative the idea of an intention to abandon or surrender that portion of the claim in controversy, there being no question of statutory forfeiture involved. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

8. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139; Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329.

9. His interest reverts to the government. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

10. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

11. See 4 C. L. 653, n. 55 et seq.

12. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329.

13. For failure to do assessment work. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23.

14. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23; Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878; Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610. Plaintiffs in ejectment, who had relocated claim, held not to have established, by a preponderance of the evidence, their right to possession as against the original locator. Id.

(§ 3) C. Relocation.[15]—Relocation is the appropriation of mining ground by location where a former claim has been lost by abandonment or forfeiture, and the ground is consequently restored to the public domain.[16] A relocation impliedly admits a valid prior location.[17]

Mining claims are not open to relocation until the rights of a former locator have been abandoned or forfeited, or have otherwise come to an end.[18] A relocation on lands actually covered at the time by another and subsisting location is void not only against the prior locator but against all the world.[19] One making such a void relocation does not, by continuing in possession after the claim becomes subject to relocation, without then relocating it, acquire any rights against a person subsequently making a peaceable adverse entry and a valid relocation.[20] Such entry deprives him of the right of possession so that he cannot maintain ejectment against the person making it on the ground that the latter is a mere trespasser.[21]

The area of conflict between two locations does not, upon forfeiture of the senior location, become unoccupied mineral land of the United States, so as to give a relocator thereof the right to assail the title of the junior locator in adverse proceedings.[22]

One making a location on land on which he finds evidences of a prior location, or when he has actual knowledge of an attempted prior location, has the burden of proving either that such attempted location was invalid, or, if valid, that the rights acquired thereunder were subsequently forfeited or abandoned.[23]

(§ 3) D. Proceedings to obtain patent; adverse claims.[24]—The decision of

15. See 4 C. L. 655.

16. Jackson v. Prior Hill Min. Co. [S. D.] 104 N. W. 207.

17. Can be no relocation unless there has been such a prior location or something equivalent thereto. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610; Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329; Jackson v. Prior Hill Min. Co. [S. D.] 104 N. W. 207. Cannot be contended that relocations are invalid, because notices are posted on old location stakes, where location certificates declare that they are relocations of old claims. Jackson v. Prior Hill Min. Co. [S. D.] 104 N. W. 207. Only inquiry in such case is whether the former locator performed the necessary labor. Id.

18. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610; Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915. Land once located may become unappropriated land subject to relocation by reason of the forfeiture or abandonment of a valid prior location. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329. Valid prior location is a bar to subsequent one unless latter is made as a relocation of abandoned or forfeited ground. Score v. Griffin [Ariz.] 80 P. 331. Where immediately after a judgment in a suit to recover possession of certain claims that neither party was entitled to possession, plaintiffs relocated the claims and thereafter did the required assessment work and remained in possession, held that evidence sustained finding that relocations were made on unoccupied government land. Lauman v. Hoofer, 37 Wash. 382, 79 P. 953. A relocator is not a discoverer of the mineral but an appropriator thereof, and can only hold the ground upon proof that the original locator had abandoned or forfeited his right by failure to comply with the mining laws. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

19. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878; Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

20. His possession is not such as to prevent an entry peaceably and in good faith for the purpose of securing, by relocation, a right to the exclusive possession and enjoyment of the property. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878. Plaintiff made relocation in July, 1899, which was void because time for doing work under original location did not expire until Dec. 31, 1899. He remained in actual possession during 1900, 1901, and part of 1902, making various expenditures and improvements. Defendant relocated the claim Jan. 1, 1902. Held that defendant acquired exclusive right to possession until Jan. 1, 1903. Id.

21. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878.

22. Rev. St. §§ 2319, 2324, are qualified to this extent by § 2326, relating to adverse claims. Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 Law. Ed. 1119. Junior locator is entitled to patent if senior locator fails to adverse his application therefor, or fails to prosecute his adverse claim, and hence same result must arise from forfeiture of senior location before application for patent is made by junior locator, and the consequent impossibility of the senior locator successfully adversing after the forfeiture is complete. Id.

23. Cunningham v. Pirrung [Ariz.] 80 P. 329. In suit to quiet title, where plaintiffs had knowledge of prior location and did not locate the ground as abandoned ground in accordance with Rev. St. 1901, § 3241, held that it was proper to dismiss complaint and render judgment for defendant, where he failed to prove that former location was invalid. Id.

24. See 4 C. L. 655.

the proper officers of the interior department in matters within its jurisdiction upon questions of fact is conclusive upon the courts in the absence of fraud, perjury, or some such vice,[25] and the same presumptions of regularity attach to such decisions as to those of courts of record, the burden being upon those attacking them to show their invalidity.[26] The issuance of a patent is a conclusive adjudication that all the steps required by the Federal statutes to perfect a valid location have been taken,[27] but there seems to be a conflict of authority as to whether it is conclusive as to compliance with state statutes.[28] A patent when issued is generally regarded as relating back to the date of location.[29] It has, however, been held that the doctrine of relation is a fiction of law, and that whether a patent relates to the date of location is to be determined by the facts of each particular case,[30] and that unless all the requirements of the law have been complied with there is no location, and hence no date antecedent to the application for a patent to which it can relate.[31] The patent is also conclusive as to all matters which were, or might have been, the subject of an adverse claim.[32]

An application for a patent to one of two or more conflicting claims presents the question, which is the superior claim within the overlapping surface boundaries, and the inclusion of the area in conflict within a patent to one of the claims is necessarily a determination that, at the time of the patent proceedings, such area is a part of that claim.[33] It does not, however, necessarily determine the priority of location, and where it does not appear that that question was put in issue and actually determined in the course of the patent proceedings, the owner of the other claim is not estopped from asserting the priority of his claim in a subsequent controversy respecting extralateral rights, not necessarily following the surface conflict and hence not involved in the former proceedings.[34] So, too, the issuance of a patent is not necessarily conclusive as to the order in which the steps necessary to a valid location were taken,[35] and hence does not preclude the owner of a tunnel site, claiming that his location was made prior to the discovery of the lode on which the application for the patent was based, from showing when the discovery was in fact made.[36]

The possessor of a lode may hold it either with or without a patent.[37] After

25. As to whether notice of contemplated cancellation of mining entries was given and received. Mineral Farm Min. Co. v. Barrick [Colo.] 80 P. 1055.

26. Decision of commissioner of general land office, that sufficient notice of cancellation of mining entries has been given, cannot be reviewed where some of the evidence upon which it was based is not in the record, even if it would be in any event. Mineral Farm Min. Co. v. Barrick [Colo.] 80 P. 1055.

27. Creede & C. C. M. & M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501; Hickey v. Anaconda Copper M. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

28. Montana: Its issuance is not conclusive that verified declaratory statement required by state statutes was in fact valid (Hickey v. Anaconda Copper M. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806), and a patentee seeking to show that, notwithstanding the date of his patent or receiver's final receipt, his title relates back to the date of his location, must show affirmatively a location valid under the laws of the state where the claim is situated (Id.).

Federal Courts: See dictum in Creede & C. C. M. &. M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501.

29, 30. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper M. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

31. If there is no valid location by reason of a failure to comply with the requirements of state statutes, there is no date antecedent to the application for a patent to which it can relate. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper M. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

32. Creede & C. C. M. & M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501. Is an adjudication of all questions respecting such matters. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper M. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806. Is not conclusive as to the priority of location in a suit to determine the ownership of minerals at the point of union or intersection of veins, since that is not the subject of such a claim. Id.

33. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

34. No estoppel in such case, where it is not shown whether there was an adverse suit, nor, if so, what questions were in fact presented and determined therein, nor upon what ground the superior right to the area in controversy was asserted or sustained in the patent proceedings. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

instituting proceedings to obtain a patent he may abandon the same and continue to hold by right of possession.[38] So, too, the mere cancellation of a mineral application and entry for a patent by the officers of the land department does not divest the applicant's title, nor of itself operate to restore the land to the public domain and render it subject to relocation, but merely operates to check or terminate the patent proceedings, and relegates the applicant to such possessory rights as he had prior to the commencement of the proceedings, or as he may have subsequently acquired.[39]

As long as a final certificate of purchase remains uncanceled, the claim is not subject to forfeiture for nonperformance of assessment work, and is not subject to relocation.[40] The commissioner of the general land office or the secretary of the interior may, upon due notice, of his own motion cancel entries for failure to comply with some statute or rule of the department, even though no adverse claim or protest has been filed.[41] The jurisdiction of the land department is not, however, an arbitrary and unlimited one, to be exercised without notice to the parties interested,[42] and the secretary of the interior has no authority to order a retroactive cancellation of a certificate without notice to the bona fide holders thereof, so as to cut out their rights for defects for which they are not to blame.[43]

Suits to determine adverse claims.[44]—Under the Federal statutes, one filing an adverse claim on application for a patent must, within thirty days thereafter, commence proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to determine the question of the right to possession and prosecute the same with reasonable diligence to final judgment, and a failure to do so is a waiver of his adverse claim.[45] This provision only confers jurisdiction on the courts of suits between adverse mining claimants to the same unpatented mineral land,[46] and hence they have no jurisdiction of such suits where one party claims under the laws applicable to the disposal of mineral land, and the other under those relating to the disposal of nonmineral land, or, in other words, to determine the mineral or nonmineral character of the land, that being a question exclusively within the jurisdiction of the land department.[47]

A tunnel is not a mining claim within the meaning of this statute, but is merely a means of exploration,[48] hence the owner of a tunnel right, who simply seeks to 35, 36. Creede & C. C. M. & M. Co. v. Ulnta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501.

37, 38. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

39. Rejection of application for patent and nothing more does not affect original location, and locator has same rights as if application had never been made. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

40. Southern Cross Gold Min. Co. v. Sexton [Cal.] 82 P. 423.

41. For defects in the proof. Mineral Farm Min. Co. v. Barrick [Colo.] 80 P. 1055. U. S. Rev. St. § 2325, providing that if no adverse claim is filed at end of 60 days from date of publication it shall be assumed that applicant is entitled to a patent on payment of the purchase price, must be construed with other statutes in pari materia, and does not change the rule. Id.

42. Southern Cross Gold Min. Co. v. Sexton [Cal.] 82 P. 423.

43. Southern Cross Gold Min. Co. v. Sexton [Cal.] 82 P. 423. Owing to mistake of officers, certificate did not sufficiently describe premises, but certificate was nevertheless issued. About five years later commissioner of general land office ordered publication of supplemental notice, which was done after time to do so had been extended. Subsequently, secretary of interior, without a hearing to the applicants, ordered the certificate canceled as of the date when the republication was ordered. Held that his action in so doing was unauthorized, and cancellation was effective only from date of notice thereof to applicant, and conferred no rights on one claiming under an entry made 15 years after date of original entry and basing his right solely on default of original claimant to do necessary annual labor. Id.

44. See 4 C. L. 656.

45. Rev. St. § 2326, 5 Fed. St. Ann. 35, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1430. Keppler v. Becker [Ariz.] 80 P. 334.

46. Wright v. Hartville [Wyo.] 81 P. 649.

47. Has not jurisdiction of action in support of adverse claim where controversy is between mining company and town site claimant. Wright v. Hartville [Wyo.] 81 P. 649. Petition held not one to quiet title and not to sustain decree doing so. Id.

protect his tunnel and has as yet discovered no lode claim, is not required to adverse an application for a patent of a lode claim through which the line of his tunnel runs, the lode of which has been discovered on the surface.[49]

The form of the action may be either at law to recover possession or one in the nature of a suit to quiet title,[50] but in either case the plaintiff must allege facts entitling him to possession of the land in controversy as against the government, as well as against the defendant.[51] As in other cases, if the complaint fails to state a cause of action it will not arrest the running of the prescribed limitation, and an amendment made after the expiration of the thirty days is too late.[52] The complaint need not allege that the adverse was filed or the suit commenced within the prescribed time.[53] It is incumbent on plaintiff to show, as one of the material facts necessary to establish the validity of his location, that the ground he sought to locate was unoccupied and unappropriated public mineral domain, subject to location.[54] The oath of one of the locators accompanying the recorded notice of location as to their citizenship is prima facie evidence of that fact, and is sufficient unless contradicted.[55] If it appears from the testimony of plaintiff that the land was, at the time he initiated his claim, claimed by others, and there is some evidence of a compliance with the law by the latter, the court should assume for the purposes of the suit that the land is covered by a valid and subsisting location or entry, and the plaintiff, in order to make out his prima facie case, must show that it is vacant and unappropriated.[56] It will be presumed that the vein on which a valid lode location has been made extends through the entire length of such location, unless such presumption is overcome by a preponderance of the evidence to the contrary,[57] and this rule is equally applicable, though the controversy is between a lode and a placer claim.[58]

If plaintiff fails to establish a valid discovery and location, it is proper to grant a nonsuit and to then permit defendant to prove his title.[59] The proceedings then become ex parte, and plaintiff has no standing to interpose objections.[60] If title to the ground in controversy is not established by either par-48, 49. Creede & C. C. M. & M. Co. v. Uinta T. M. & T. Co., 196 U. S. 337, 49 Law. Ed. 501.

50. Keppler v. Becker [Ariz.] 80 P. 334.

51. Keppler v. Becker [Ariz.] 80 P. 334. Complaint failing to allege facts entitling plaintiffs to possession under the Federal mineral laws, or to allege that the ground in controversy was mineral land subject to location, held bad on demurrer. Id.

52. Does not relate back to time of filing the original. Keppler v. Becker [Ariz.] 80 P. 334.

53. Need not allege that adverse claim was filed in land office within 60 days of publication, or that suit was commenced within 30 days thereafter, as required by U. S. Rev. St. § 2326. Hain v. Mattes [Colo.] 83 P. 127. Objection that suit was not commenced in time is waived by going to trial without specially raising it by demurrer or answer. Id.

54. McWilliams v. Winslow [Colo.] 82 P. 538. In order to make out a prima facie case, must show, in addition to the other requirements of the law, that the ground was not covered by a prior location, or if it appears from his testimony that it was, that such location was invalid, or had been abandoned, or that the original locator's rights thereto had been forfeited by failure to comply with the law. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139.

55. Under U. S. Rev. St. § 2321, 5 Fed. St. Ann., 13, in an adverse action proof of citizenship in the case of an individual may consist of his own affidavit thereof. Stolp v. Treasury Gold Min. Co., 38 Wash. 619, 80 P. 817. Evidence and admissions of defendant held sufficient to show citizenship of plaintiffs. Id.

56. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139.

57. San Miguel C. G. M. Co. v. Bonner [Colo.] 79 P. 1025.

58. Instruction approved. San Miguel C. G. M. Co. v. Bonner [Colo.] 79 P. 1025.

59. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139. Nonsuit held properly granted where plaintiff failed to prove that land was open to location, and his evidence showed that it was claimed by others, that certificates had been filed, the claims staked, and some work done by them. Id.

60. Cannot object to instructions, or contend that defendant has no standing to participate in the trial, because it has not complied with the laws in regard to corporations. Moffatt v. Blue River Gold Excav. Co. [Colo.] 80 P. 139.

ty the jury is required to so find, and judgment must be entered accordingly.[61] This provision, however, does not prevent the granting of a nonsuit where plaintiff fails to make out a prima facie case and defendant does not seek an affirmative judgment in his favor, but asks for a dismissal.[62]

The judgment in such a suit merely determines the right to possession, and the successful party must still do the required work, make an independent application, and conform to the Federal statutes and the rules of the land department before he is entitled to a patent,[63] hence, in order to entitle plaintiff to judgment, it is not necessary for him to show that he has performed sufficient work to entitle him to a patent.[64]

§ 4. Ownership or estate obtained by claim, location, and patent; apex and extralateral rights.[65]—In case of a conflict between claims, the area in conflict is usually awarded to the senior claim,[66] but this is not necessarily the case, since acts or circumstances entirely consistent with the true order of location may have intervened, which require it to be awarded to the junior.[67] Seniority is determined by the order of location, whether the claims have been patented or remain unpatented.[68] A junior locator may, for the purpose of acquiring extralateral rights, extend his surface location over prior locations where their owners do not object,[69] but not otherwise.[70] In determining whether such objection was made, only the acts of the parties at the time of the making of the junior location are to be considered.[71]

The title to everything within the surface lines of the claim is prima facie in the patentee, or if unpatented, in any qualified locator in actual possession and engaged in mining thereon.[72] The locator has the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of his location,[73] and of any lodes or veins apexing within its exterior boundaries, which he may, as long as he complies with the requirements of the act, protect against invasion by any subsequent locator.[74] A prospector going upon a subsisting location for the purpose of making his discovery is guilty of trespass, and every subsequent act of his in attempting to perfect a location is an additional trespass.[75]

61. U. S. Rev. St. § 2326. McWilliams v. Winslow [Colo.] 82 P. 538. Where evidence was such as to authorize finding that neither party had made a valid location, held proper to instruct the jury that, if such was the case, they might find accordingly. San Miguel C. G. M. Co. v. Bonner [Colo.] 79 P. 1025. In any event instruction was harmless where jury found for defendant. Id.

62. Provision only prescribes what shall be found by the jury if a verdict is returned. McWilliams v. Winslow [Colo.] 82 P. 538.

63. Stolp v. Treasury Gold Min. Co., 38 Wash. 619, 80 P. 817.

64. Object of suit is to defeat defendant's application for a patent by showing that he is not in possession and not entitled to it. Stolp v. Treasury Gold Min. Co., 38 Wash. 619, 80 P. 817.

65. See 4 C. L. 657.

66. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

67. An in the case of an estoppel by the determination of the question in previous patent proceedings. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

68. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

69, 70. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

71. Evidence held not to show that objections were then made. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

72. His claim of ownership of any body of ore within his lines, as against the owner of any other surface claim, must be presumed to be in good faith. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court [Cal.] 82 P. 70.

73. Rev. St. § 2322, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1425. Malone v. Jackson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 878. In suit to quiet title having for its object the determination of extralateral rights, evidence held insufficient to support finding that plaintiff's claim was located prior to those of defendant, and that his patents were issued prior to defendant's. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806. A valid and subsisting location made in accordance with the provisions of the Federal statute has the effect of the grant by the United States of the present and exclusive possession of the lands so located, and operates to bar a subsequent location of the same. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

74. U. S. Rev. St. § 2322, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1425. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

75. Peoria & C. M. & M. Co. v. Turner [Colo. App.] 79 P. 915.

As in the case of grantees under the general land laws of the United States, limitations begin to run against the claimant of a mining claim only from the date when he acquires the title, and an occupancy by another prior to that time is not adverse as to his title.[76] It is generally held that title does not pass until the patent issues, and hence that limitations do not begin to run until that time.[77]

Mineral discovered on public land, by an employe of one who has not entered thereon for the purpose of mining or extracting minerals, belongs to the finder.[78]

Apex and extralateral rights.[79]—The locator owns only so much of the apex of the ledge as lies within his surface lines.[80] Where the ledge consists of a mineral-bearing zone or belt without distinct walls, rather than a well defined ledge, the practical mode of determining its legal width is by the lines beyond which ore is not found, or beyond which such indications of it do not exist, which would encourage the miner to continue his explorations with the expectation of compensation.[81]

The owner of the ledge may follow the dip of the vein continuously and indefinitely between vertical planes drawn through the parallel end lines extended indefinitely in their own direction,[82] except where intersected or crossed by the ledge

76. Tyee Consol. Min. Co. v. Langstedt [C. C. A.] 136 F. 124. Rule does not rest alone upon the ground that ejectment cannot be maintained in Federal courts by entryman before a patent issues, and hence is not affected by the fact that, in Alaska, ejectment may be maintained by one who has acquired equitable title. Id. Estate of locator of mining claim on public lands, who has complied with all the conditions necessary to entitle him to a patent, is not perceptibly different from that acquired by entrymen of agricultural land. Id. Possession, to be adverse, must be adverse to all the world, and an occupant cannot hold adversely while he admits title to be in the United States. Hence, there being no adverse possession, there is no disseisin, and the statute does not begin to run until disseisin. Id. Carter's Codes of Alaska, § 1042, p. 354, approved June 6, 1900, providing that the uninterrupted adverse, notorious possession of realty for seven years or more shall be conclusively presumed to give title thereto, except as against the United States, does not apply to action brought Dec. 24, 1900, in view of Id. § 4, p. 146, extending the right of action for a period of one year from the approval of the act, and § 368, p. 432, providing that no person shall be deprived of any existing legal right or remedy by reason of the passage of the act. Prior to that time the limitation was ten years. Id. Or. Code Civ. Proc. § 4, providing that in all cases where cause of action has already accrued, and period within which action may be brought under such code has expired, or will expire within one year from the approval of the act, an action may be brought thereon within one year from the date of such approval, operated to its full extent in Alaska when first introduced into the Alaska law by Act Cong. May 17, 1884 (c. 53, 23 St. 24), making laws of Oregon applicable to that territory, and did not again become operative on being re-enacted into the Alaska Code Civ. Proc. by Act Cong. June 6, 1900 (c. 786, 31 St. 321). Tyee Consol. Min. Co. v. Jennings [C. C. A.] 137 F. 863.

77. Tyee Consol. Min. Co. v. Langstedt [C. C. A.] 136 F. 124; Tyee Consol. Min. Co. v. Jennings [C. C. A.] 137 F. 863.

78. Pocket of gold discovered by employe while engaged in grading public land for a mill site belongs to him, since first taker has title to minerals under U. S. Rev. St. § 2319. Burns v. Schoenfeld [Cal. App.] 81 P. 713. Evidence held to sustain finding that defendant had not, when gold was discovered, entered upon the land for the purpose of appropriating minerals, but that excavation was solely for purpose of grading a mill site. Id.

Note: A person appropriating public lands, either with or without a location or entry, for other purposes than mining, acquires, before patent granted, no title to the minerals in the land, as to which the land may still be regarded as public domain. McClinton v. Bryden, 5 Cal. 97, 63 Am. Dec. 87. A person discovering and appropriating metals or minerals on the public domain has absolute title to the material removed. U. S. Rev. St. 2319; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 Law. Ed. 313; Johnston v. Harrington, 5 Wash. St. 73. As the plaintiff was not employed by the defendant to prospect, but to grade merely, the defendant could not bring his claim within the rule relating to finding by a servant in the course of employment. The plaintiff therefore was an original discoverer.—5 Columbia L. R. 550.

79. See 4 C. L. 659.

80, 81. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

82. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268. The extralateral right is bounded by the prolonged planes of the legal end lines. Id.

NOTE. Right to tunnel under another's claim: The defendant, for the purpose of reaching and working a vein which apexed in his, and extended under the plaintiff's claim, projected a tunnel through the latter's land. Held that an injunction should be granted restraining the further prosecution of the tunnel. St. Louis, etc., Co. v.

or underground rights of a prior locator, and may resume and follow the same beyond such intervening right.[83] It is immaterial that in following the ledge between the planes of such lines it is followed more upon its strike than upon its dip.[84] If two or more veins unite, the prior location takes the vein below the point of union including all the space of intersection.[85] Where two or more claims longitudinally bisect or divide the apex of a vein, the senior claim takes the entire width of the vein on its dip, if it is in other respects so located as to give a right to pursue the vein downward outside of the side lines.[86]

Under the Federal statutes now in force, in order to carry extralateral rights the end lines of the claim must be parallel,[87] but this rule does not apply to claims patented under locations made under former statutes.[88] That part of the vein to which the locator's extralateral rights extend is as much a part of his mining ground as is the land within the surface lines of his location.[89] Where the true owner is in possession of the surface, claiming title to the entire claim, his possession in legal contemplation extends to everything which is a part of the claim, whether vertically beneath the surface or within his extralateral rights, which is not in the actual possession of another holding adversely.[90]

Montana Mining Co., 194 U. S. 235, 48 Law. Ed. 953.

The decision of this case established two propositions: First that, except as limited by the statute, the land lying vertically beneath a surface location belongs to the owner of that location, and second, that the statute does not grant the right to enter upon or tunnel another's land, except within the bounds of a vein. The first point has been repeatedly affirmed by the state and federal courts. Doe v. Min. Co., 54 F. 935. Such decisions, together with the statutes under which they were decided, show a long prevalent tendency to increase the property rights of the owner of a mining claim. The movement reaches its culmination in the present case, which establishes what virtually amounts to a common-law ownership. In regard to the second point also, the interpretation of the court appears to be in accord with the prevailing opinion. Parrot, etc., Co. v. Heinze, 25 Mont. 139, 87 Am. St. Rep. 386, 53 L. R. A. 491. Since the statute is in plain derogation of the common-law principles of the ownership of property, the court seems justified in adhering to a strict interpretation of its terms.—18 Harv. L. R. 68.

83. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

84. Right is not limited to 45 degrees, or any other particular variation, from the true dip. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

85. U. S. Rev. St. § 2336, 5 Fed. St. Ann. 50. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

86. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769. Evidence held to show that ore bodies within the claimed spaces of intersection, created by cross-fissures, were not susceptible of identification and separation from those in limestone stratum and were parts of a single broad vein or lode, and not parts of distinct and independent cross-fissure veins. Id.

87. Under the act of congress of May 10, 1872, Rev. St. §§ 2320, 2322, 5 Fed. St. Ann. pp. 8, 13. Central Eureka M. Co. v. East Cent. Eureka M. Co., 146 Cal. 147, 79 P. 834. Decree awarding extralateral rights within territory of adjoining claim within planes extending in fan shape, held erroneous. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

88. U. S. Rev. St. § 2322, Comp. St. 1901, p. 1425, expressly provides that the repeal of the former laws shall not affect existing rights, nor any rights affected under the act of 1866, and law did not previously require such lines to be parallel. Central Eureka M. Co. v. East Cent. Eureka M. Co., 146 Cal. 147, 79 P. 834. This is true, though money was not paid nor the survey finally approved by the surveyor-general until after the passage of the act. Id. The acceptance of a patent reciting that it is issued in pursuance of the Act of July 26, 1866, and the amendatory act of July 9, 1870, and showing, in conjunction with the public records in evidence, that it was issued prior to the passage of the Act of 1872, and purporting to grant a specified number of linear feet of the original vein throughout its entire depth between the end lines continued in their own direction, is not a waiver or renouncement of any extralateral rights given by the two former acts, though the patent also recites that it is issued in pursuance of the act of 1872, and, in accordance with the express provisions of that act, purports to grant, in addition to the vein or lode originally located, the right to all other veins or lodes apexing within the surface lines of the location, with the accompanying extralateral rights given by that act. Fact that he may not be entitled to any extralateral rights in other veins or lodes not embraced in the original location, and the right to which was first given by the act of 1872, because his end lines were not parallel, does not affect his rights in vein covered by original location. Id.

89. Central Eureka M. Co. v. East Cent. Eureka M. Co., 146 Cal. 147, 79 P. 834.

90. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769.

Boundary lines and monuments.[91]—In ascertaining boundaries definitely established monuments control courses and distances.[92] If the monuments are not definitely established and identified, courses and distances must be followed if not irreconcilable,[93] but if irreconcilable, courses prevail over distances.[94] A monument established by the locators of adjoining claims, as the point through which the dividing line between them shall run, is not binding on subsequent purchasers, unless so made of record as to give notice to them of the agreement.[95] Cases fixing the boundaries of particular claims will be found in the note.[96]

§ 5. Right to mine on private land thrown open to the public.[97]

§ 6. Private conveyances or grants of mineral rights in lands.[98]—In the absence of an express reservation, a conveyance of land carries the minerals therein contained.[99] The contrary is true where land is taken for public use.[1] But if by condemning a right of way over oil lands the reservation of the oil to the fee owner is rendered of no value because of the appropriation of the surface, the railroad must pay the full value of the fee as oil land.[2]

One having a mere verbal license to work a mine has no permanent interest, property, or estate in the land itself, but only the property in the ore actually dug by him, and in that as personalty.[3] Such a license is revocable at any time at the pleasure of the licensor.[4] Licensees admitting that they hold under the plaintiff

91. See 4 C. L. 661. See, also, Boundaries, 5 C. L. 430.

92. Meyer-Clarke-Rowe Mines Co. v. Steinfield [Ariz.] 80 P. 400.

93. Meyer-Clarke-Rowe Mines Co. v. Steinfield [Ariz.] 80 P. 400. In suit to determine boundary line of patented claim, findings making claim a rectangular parallelogram held inconsistent with findings making one end line 600 feet, and the other 655 feet long, and with the finding as to the location of the northwest corner, and those fixing the north side line. Id.

94. Meyer-Clarke-Rowe Mines Co. v. Steinfield [Ariz.] 80 P. 400.

95. Bunker Hill & Sullivan M. & C. Co. v. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co., 134 F. 268.

96. In suit for damages for trespass and for an injunction, evidence held to sustain findings fixing boundaries of claims. Keystone Milling Co. v. Equity Min. Co. [Or.] 83 P. 190.

97. See 4 C. L. 662.

98. See 4 C. L. 663.

99. Central Eureka M. Co. v. East Cent. Eureka M. Co., 146 Cal. 147, 79 P. 834. Deed purporting to convey that portion of certain sections of land lying east of the grantor's claim does not include that portion thereof through which a vein apexing on such claim, and lying between its end line planes, has its dip. Id.

1. A railroad company, which by condemnation proceedings acquires an easement for a right of way across lands, acquires only the permanent and exclusive control of the surface, and takes no title to underlying minerals or oil, and no right to dig for or appropriate them, such right remaining in the owner of the fee, subject only to the duty of furnishing sufficient support for the easement imposed. Same rule applies in case of oil as in case of minerals. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961.

2. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961.

Measure of value: But the railroad company may show that the fee owner's right to take it out is not lost by virtue of being deprived of a part of the surface of his land, or that his beneficial interest is only to some extent diminished, and in such case the value of such beneficial ownership must be taken into consideration as something separate from the value of the easement, and the value of the easement alone assessed against the condemning party. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 P. 961. Appropriation of surface of oil-bearing lands does not necessarily destroy all right of the fee owner to the oil, as, for instance, where, by virtue of owning adjoining lands, he is able to remove the oil. Id. It is permissible to show, on the issue of value, a progressive decrease in the productiveness of the oil field upon which the land in question is situated. Id. The market value may also be shown by expert testimony. Expert may testify as to matters which would influence him from the standpoint of a contemplating buyer in determining the market value of such land, such as the number of wells which could be economically placed on the amount of land taken, and ordinary losses therefrom, and the general relation of outlay to income, and such testimony is not objectionable as conjectural and speculative. Id. Further testimony that he would consider what he could pay for it and have sufficient margin for speculation during at least five years is incompetent on the question of market value. Id.

3. Verbal agreement authorizing defendants to enter claim and remove ore during plaintiff's will and pleasure, and revocable whenever he might desire, held a mere license. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052.

4. Particularly when the agreement so provides. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052.

cannot contend that the complaint shows that plaintiff has no title to the property and hence cannot maintain a suit to enjoin them from removing ore after termination of the license.[5]

The owner of land containing minerals may separate it into two or more estates and convey the surface to one person and the minerals to another, or may reserve either to himself and convey the other.[6] So too the owner of an entire estate containing several distinct and separate minerals may, by apt conveyances, create a distinct and separate estate in each.[7] After a severance the owners of the respective estates hold them as estates in land, their rights and titles depending upon their conveyances.[8] Under the tax laws of West Virginia when the surface is owned by one person and the oil in place by another, a sale for taxes in the name of the former will pass the oil owned by the latter if his estate therein is not charged on the tax books.[9]

A deed or lease of specified minerals passes no title to other minerals, separate and distinct in their essence, not mentioned therein,[10] even though the latter are regarded as waste when the grant is made,[11] and if the grantee removes them he will be liable to account to the grantor for their value.[12]

Deeds and contracts for the conveyance of mineral rights will be construed so as to effectuate the intention of the parties.[13] A construction rendering the contract binding and enforceable will be preferred to one which would make it unenforceable.[14] Where a contract provides that the shipments of ore are to be deter-

5. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052.

6. Huss v. Jacobs, 210 Pa. 145, 59 A. 991; Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank, 211 Pa. 319, 60 A. 924. Deed reserving coal held to give grantee a fee simple in the surface only, and to reserve a fee in the coal in the grantor. Huss v. Jacobs. 210 Pa. 145, 59 A. 991. A sale of underlying coal works a severance and makes the purchase money payable under the terms of the contract personal property. Rent due under lease construed as absolute sale is personalty subject to operation of intestate laws and the will of the owner. Dorr v. Reynolds, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 139. The conveyance of coal in place beneath the surface operates to create a distinct and separate estate in the grantee, entirely independent of the estate and rights of the owner of the surface. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512. There may be separate and distinct estates in different persons in the surface of land and oil and other minerals in it. Peterson v. Hall [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 603. Petroleum oil and natural gas may be severed from the ownership of the surface by grant or exception, and when this is done they become a separate corporeal hereditament and their ownership is attended with all the attributes and incidents peculiar to ownership of land. When thus severed, owners own two separate interests and are not co-owners. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236. Deed reserving seven-eighths of all oil and gas in land with full right to grantor and his heirs and assignees to develop and operate the same, held to except oil and gas in place so that they remained vested in grantor as an actual, vested estate and property and they were not an incorporeal hereditament in him, nor did he have a mere license to produce them, nor was grantor's title in abeyance to vest only when oil and gas were brought to the surface. Id.

7. Coal and iron pyrites. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512.

8. Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank, 211 Pa. 319, 60 A. 924. A conveyance of the coal in general terms by the owner of the whole fee, with a reservation of the residue of the tract, gives to the purchaser the title to the coal, with a right to mine and remove it. Id. A conveyance of underlying coal with the privilege of removing it effects a severance of the right to the surface from the right to the coal, and makes them distinct corporeal hereditaments. Wallace v. Elm Grove Coal Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 485. The presumption that one in possession of the surface has possession of the subsoil also does not exist when these rights have been severed. Id.

9. Code 1899, c. 31, § 25. Peterson v. Hall [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 603.

10. Neither mineral will pass as appurtenant to the other unless particularly designated. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512. Coal and iron pyrites held separate and distinct minerals. Id. Deed to all the coal in a certain tract held not to pass title to iron pyrites separated from the coal in order to make the latter merchantable, but title thereto remained in the grantor. Id.

11, 12. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512.

13. To effectuate intention of maker. Jones v. American Ass'n, 27 Ky. L. R. 804, 86 S. W. 1111. Deed held to pass coal banks reserved to grantor by a former deed, though they were referred to only in the habendum clause. Id. Reservation in habendum clause of all the "coal banks" held to reserve all the coal veins on the land whether opened or not. Id.

14. Option contract for sale of oil and minerals will be construed so as to require grantees to develop property where it would mined from the shipping receipts, the burden is on one seeking to discredit them to justify deductions made by him.[15] Even if, under such a contract, royalty is only to be paid for clean or refined ore, and not on dirt, the burden is on the shippers to show that dirt was actually shipped to the extent of the deductions made.[16] If clauses or parts of a deed are conflicting or repugnant, the intention to be gathered from the whole instrument must control.[17] A description is sufficient if it can be made certain.[18] A deed purporting to convey that portion of certain sections lying in a given direction from the grantor's claim does not convey that portion of those sections through which the vein apexing on the grantor's claim, and lying between its end line planes, has its dip.[19]

A reservation of minerals and mining rights is construed as an actual grant thereof,[20] and such a reservation from a grant followed by a grant to another of all that was first reserved vests in the second grantee an estate as broad as if the entire estate had first been granted to him, with a reservation of the surface.[21] Though a reservation is to be construed most strictly against the grantor, there will be retained in him all that it was the clear meaning and intention of the parties to reserve from the conveyance.[22] The intent controls, it being immaterial whether the word used is "except" or "reserve."[23] Reservations and exceptions, though contained in the habendum clause, will be enforced as fully as though set out in the granting clause when on the whole instrument the intention of the parties to that effect is sufficiently expressed.[24]

The usual rules as to the essentials of contracts[25] and as to their modification[26] otherwise be a mere nudum pactum. Berry v. Frisbie, 27 Ky. L. R. 724, 86 S. W. 558.

15. Are not conclusive. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795. Where plaintiff was entitled to royalty on all ore shipped by defendants, the amount of the shipments to be determined from the railroad shipping receipts, his failure to object to account rendered by them, held not waiver of right to claim that deductions made by them were improper, where statements of shipments were without specification, and plaintiff had no figures with which to verify the account. Id.

16. Evidence held insufficient. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795.

17. Exception of all the granite on the premises in the habendum clause held not void for repugnancy because not referred to in the granting clause. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666. Where administrator's deed recited authority to sell land "with the exception of all the granite" thereon, but in the granting clause failed to refer to the granite, it will be presumed that he did not undertake to exceed his authority, and that there was no intention to pass title to the granite. Id.

18. Coal banks held sufficiently described by reference to former deed reserving them to the grantor. Jones v. American Ass'n, 27 Ky. L. R. 804, 86 S. W. 1111.

19. Particularly where there is nothing in the surrounding circumstances to show such an intention. Central Eureka M. Co. v. East Cent. Eureka M. Co., 146 Cal. 147, 79 P. 834.

20, 21. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236.

22. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236. Deed conveying realty "with the exception of all the granite on said lot of land," held to reserve title to all of the granite and not merely that which was exposed when deed was made, and owner could remove any subsequently becoming exposed. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666. Deed held to convey everything but the granite, and hence owner of latter had no right to disturb surface whether it was arable or cultivatable or not. Id. In construing reservations and grants each case must be decided on the language used, the surrounding circumstances, and the intention of the grantor if it can be ascertained. Deed reserving to the grantor "all mines and minerals which may be found" on the land, with the right to enter to dig and carry the same away, held not to reserve a right to limestone on the premises and to conduct open quarrying for the purpose of taking possession thereof. Brady v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 178, 73 N. E. 963, rvg. 88 App. Div. 427, 84 N. Y. S. 1119.

23. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236.

24. Jones v. American Ass'n, 27 Ky. L. R. 804, 86 S. W. 1111.

25. Evidence on counterclaim for specific performance held sufficient to sustain finding that plaintiff orally agreed to sell his interest in a certain mine to defendant. Finlen v. Heinze [Mont.] 80 P. 918. Defendant held not estopped to claim such contract existed because, in pursuance of the agreement between them, he brought suit in plaintiff's name to restrain a third person from working the mine. Id.

26. Failure of plaintiff to reply to letter suggesting reduction of royalty due under contract, and failure for 2½ months to object to account in which royalty was figured at reduced rate, held not to preclude him from subsequently claiming royalty at contract rate. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795.

or termination,[27] the expiration of option contracts,[28] the recovery of payments made by mistake,[29] and the effect of deeds on interests afterward acquired by the grantor, apply.[30] The construction of particular deeds[31] and contracts of sale will be found in the note.[32]

After a severance has taken place title to the underlying minerals may be acquired by adverse possession,[33] but possession and occupancy of the surface in such

27. Where contract for conveyance of realty provided for payment of royalties to grantor for specified term unless he should previously leave the employment of the grantees, and that if grantees made default in payment, grantor should be entitled to a reconveyance of premises on payment of cost price thereof, held, that action of grantor, after being discharged by grantee, in giving notice of forfeiture for nonpayment of royalties and in bringing suit to enforce it, was an election to terminate the contract, and precluded him from recovering subsequent damages. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795. Plaintiff being only bound to reimburse defendants as a condition of reconveyance was not bound to tender the amount necessary therefor in advance of a settlement of the accounts. Id.

28. Option for purchase of coal held to have expired by failure to accept tendered deed, and to have been surrendered by grantee, so that his assignee, who was informed that grantee claimed no interest in the land, took nothing by the assignment. Notley v. Shoemaker, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 584.

29. Though payment of royalty was made by defendants by mistake, held, that their conduct in allowing it to go unquestioned for a year after discovery of mistake, and in subsequently crediting them with such royalty at a reduced rate, and in making a payment, constituted a confirmation of such royalty, precluding them from thereafter claiming that plaintiff was not entitled thereto. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795. Where plaintiff was credited by defendants with royalty on ore mined from two farms, and credits and cash were permitted to remain in their possession as a loan, interest being paid on semi-annual balances, and account having been reduced by one payment, held, that they were not entitled to thereafter repudiate the transaction on the ground that the royalties were not justified. Id.

30. Deed reciting that grantors "have sold, and released, and quitclaimed" an undivided interest in certain claims held by the grantors under lode locations and warranting against prior incumbrances by the grantors, held, not to pass interest afterwards acquired by grantors under a placer location after abandoning the lode location. Wells v. Chase [Ark.] 88 S. W. 1030. Kirby's Dig. § 734, providing for passing of after-acquired title to the grantee affects only interests which grantor has conveyed or which his deed purports to convey. Id.

31. Conveyance held to have passed mineral and timber to the top of a certain mountain. Browning v. Cumberland Gap Cannel Coal Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 267. Where defendant agreed to sell and convey or cause to be conveyed the coal in and under certain tracts "hereinafter described and referred to, and as stated in the contract of sale, options and deeds hereinafter named," and one of the options did not specify any particular kind of coal, held, that the purchaser was not entitled to reject such option on the ground that the coal underlying the land covered by it was not the kind intended to be purchased, where he had an opportunity to investigate the matter between the time when his contract with defendant was signed and the date of making the payment which converted the option thereby given him into an absolute contract of purchase. Shackelford v. Fulton [C. C. A.] 139 F. 97.

32. Option on oil and mineral rights giving plaintiffs four months in which to determine whether they would accept the grant, and two years from date of acceptance in which to prospect for and locate for minerals, etc., and further providing that if minerals, etc., were found in paying quantities defendant would make a deed for the rights covered by the option, and should receive certain royalties on the product as compensation for the privileges granted, held when accepted within four months, to bind plaintiffs to explore land within two years by actually sinking wells upon it, and if minerals, etc., were found in paying quantities to diligently work and operate the same, and in no event were plaintiffs entitled to the deed provided for until gas, oil, or minerals were found in paying quantities. Berry v. Frisbie, 27 Ky. L. R. 724, 86 S. W. 558. Agreement selling a certain tract of coal for a specified sum and providing that the vendee "is not to sell any coal, only what he hauls himself or have hauled," and that the vendee cannot sell any of the tract to anyone but the vendor, or his heirs, or assigns, held a mere personal license, revoked by the death of the licensee. Chalfant v. Rocks, 212 Pa. 521, 61 A. 1105. Even if considered as a conveyance, nothing passed to grantee's heirs since there were no words of inheritance. Id. Where plaintiff conveyed realty to defendants on their agreement to pay royalty on ore shipped from certain mines thereon if they obtained possession of them, and that on default plaintiff should be entitled to a reconveyance on repayment of the cost price, held, that defendants, not having acquired possession because of an outstanding lease, were, on repudiation of the contract, entitled to interest on cost price. Sharp v. Behr, 136 F. 795. Contract whereby defendants contracted to convey half interest in claim in consideration of plaintiff's sinking three holes to bed rock in certain places, held not to require entire bottom of each hole to show bed rock, but that it was sufficient if any part of each hole went to such rock. Meehan v. Nelson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 731. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding of performance. Id.

33. Must be an open, visible, notorious, exclusive, and hostile occupation for a period of 21 years, and must be actual as discase is insufficient.[34] The owner of the minerals does not lose his right or possession by any length of nonusage,[35] but in case the grantor of the surface reserves the minerals, he may by his acts or conduct abandon his rights therein or estop himself from insisting thereon as against his grantee.[36]

Since minerals in the earth are a part of the realty[37] any instrument by which they are conveyed must be executed in accordance with the law governing conveyances of land.[38]

Like other contracts for the sale of land, contracts for the sale of mining property may be specifically enforced.[39]

Rights as between surface and subterranean owners.[40]—The rights of the owner of underlying minerals are subject to the natural right of the owner of the surface to absolute support of his land,[41] and all existing structures thereon,[42] and he is liable for any damage resulting to the surface by reason of his operations, whether resulting from his negligence or not.[43] The rule does not apply where the same person owns both estates,[44] nor where the right to support has been done away with by a custom so ancient that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary,[45] or has been released by apt words;[46] but such burden will not be escaped by implication tinguished from constructive. Huss v. Jacobs, 210 Pa. 145, 59 A. 991. Evidence held insufficient to show title by adverse possession to underlying coal reserved in deed. Id.

34. Wallace v. Elm Grove Coal Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 485. Even if title to coal became forfeited by nonentry on assessor's books, it would not pass to owner of surface under Const. art. 13, § 3, and Code c. 31, § 40, since he never had possession. Id. Nor would it pass to him if forfeited for nonentry. Id.

35. To lose his right owner of underlying coal must be disseised, and there can be no disseisin by an act which does not actually take the coal out of his possession. Wallace v. Elm Grove Coal Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 485.

36. Evidence held insufficient to show abandonment of reserved coal, or an estoppel. Huss v. Jacobs, 210 Pa. 145, 59 A. 991.

37. See § 1 B, ante.

38. Mining lease authorizing lessees to extract and appropriate mineral is a conveyance of a part of the realty. Brooks v. Cook, 141 Ala. 499, 38 So. 641. Lease witnessed by beneficiaries held void. Id.

39. See, also, Specific Performance, 4 C. L. 1494. Finlen v. Heinze [Mont.] 80 P. 918. Is not a matter of right, but rests entirely in judicial discretion, to be exercised according to settled equitable principles so as to reach the ends of justice. Decree for specific performance of contract to convey half interest in claim in consideration of plaintiff's sinking certain holes to bed rock, held proper. Meehan v. Nelson [C. C. A.] 137 F. 731. Contract for sale of oil and minerals cannot be specifically enforced if performance is optional with one party. Berry v. Frisbie, 27 Ky. L. R. 724, 86 S. W. 558. Consideration of $1 is insufficient to authorize decree of specific performance. Id.

40. See 4 C. L. 662, n. 70, et seq.

41. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666. Where surface is owned by one person and underlying minerals by another, the latter cannot remove minerals without leaving sufficient natural or artificial support to sustain the surface. Western Ind. Coal Co. v. Brown [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1027. Right of surface owner is not an easement or right depending on a supposed grant, but is of natural right and is a part of the estate reserved to him. Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank, 211 Pa. 319, 60 A. 924. Owner of surface has absolute right to have land supported. Allshouse's Estate, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 146. Under estate owes a servitude of sufficient support to the upper estate. Madden v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 212 Pa. 63, 61 A. 559. Indemnity obligation given by grantor of underlying coal vein to grantee indemnifying latter from liability for damage to the surface "by reason of the skillful and careful mining and taking away of the said coal," held not to impose on the grantee the duty of leaving proper and sufficient supports for the surface, but the grantor was bound to indemnify it against any damage it might be compelled to pay the surface owner though it removed all the coal, provided its manner or method of mining was skillful and careful. Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank, 211 Pa. 319, 60 A. 924.

42. Western Ind. Coal Co. v. Brown [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1027.

43. Is immaterial whether mining is conducted skillfully or negligently or carelessly. Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank, 211 Pa. 319, 60 A. 924.

44. Madden v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 212 Pa. 63, 61 A. 559.

45. Evidence and findings held to show that no such custom existed. Allshouse's Estate, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 146.

46. Not where parties have agreed upon a different rule. Madden v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 212 Pa. 63, 61 A. 559. Reservation in conveyance of surface held to deprive grantee of right to surface support. Id. Authority given to executors by will to sell underlying coal "with the usual mining privileges," held not to authorize them to waive and release the right of surface and from language not necessarily importing such result.[47] The rights of the grantee of the surface cannot of course be affected by the provisions of a subsequent mining lease exempting the lessee from liability for injuries thereto,[48] nor will a release relieve the owner of the subjacent minerals from liability for injuries caused by his own negligence.[49]

If it is impossible to remove the mineral without disturbing the surface and completely destroying the benefits accruing to the owner of the surface, the owner of the mineral can only remove such part of it as becomes exposed from one cause or another, by the removal of the surface soil.[50] The fact that the owner of the minerals cannot take possession of them does not, however, deprive him of his right thereto,[51] and if he has absolute title to all of them, he may remove any becoming exposed in the future.[52]

The act of the lessee of a mine in removing all of the support is prima facie the cause of the subsequent subsidence of the surface, and the burden is on him to show that it would not have subsided but for the additional weight of buildings erected subsequent to the lease.[53]

§ 7. Leases. What constitutes.[54]—No precise words are necessary to create a lease, but any language is sufficient which shows an intent on the part of the owner of the land to surrender possession to another for a determinate time for a consideration.[55] In Pennsylvania it is held that an instrument which is in its terms a demise of all coal in, under, and upon a tract of land, with the unqualified right to mine and remove the same, is a sale of the coal in place, whether the purchase price is a lump sum or a certain rent or royalty, and notwithstanding the fact that the coal is required to be removed within a specified time.[56] The fact that the instrument is called a lease, the parties lessor and lessee, and the consideration rent, is immaterial.[57] The right of voluntary forfeiture does not change the nature of the interest acquired[58] nor is a provision for the support of the roof inconsistent with the theory of a sale of the coal.[59] Though such agreements are called sales, yet the rules applicable to sales are not to be applied indiscriminately to them, but each is to be construed like any other contract by its own terms.[60] lateral support. Allshouse's Estate, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 146.

47. Madden v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 212 Pa. 63, 61 A. 559; Allshouse's Estate, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 146.

48, 49. Western Ind. Coal Co. v. Brown [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1027.

50. As in the case where one person owns the surface and another the underlying granite. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666.

51, 52. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666.

53. Western Ind. Coal Co. v. Brown [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1027.

54. See 4 C. L. 665.

55. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538. Instrument granting right to remove minerals held a valid and binding lease, vesting lessee with interest in the minerals specified and right to remove same, subject only to expressed condition that developments in mining be made within three years, the latter provision being a condition subsequent, which, if not performed, would defeat the estate altogether. Connell v. Pierce, 116 Ill. App. 103. Provision that prospecting should begin when it was settled that railroad was to be built, held a covenant for the breach of which an action at law would lie. Id. Lease held not ambiguous so as to permit the introduction of parol evidence. Id.

Lease or grant: Contract whereby defendant "granted and leased" land to plaintiffs "for the purpose of a gas well so long as it is used for the same," in consideration of a certain interest in the well, held a mere lease, which terminated when land ceased to be used for the purpose specified. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538. Words "granted and leased" held merely a covenant for quiet enjoyment, or the passing of the land to the lessees for the time and on the conditions stipulated. Id.

Lease or sale: An exclusive lease or right to enter upon, mine, and remove coal from a tract of land, held a lease and not a sale of the property, and the royalties provided therein are in fact rentals and no more. Cleveland Trust Co. v. Columbus & Hocking Coal & Iron Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 424.

56. Particularly true where no time is fixed within which coal must be removed, and lessee is bound to pay for quantity stipulated to be mined, whether it is actually mined or not. Dorr v. Reynolds, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 139.

Interpretation and effect.[61]—The mutual understanding and intent of the parties as to the purpose, scope, and ultimate object to be obtained by the contract is controlling.[62] As in the case of other agreements, the rights of the parties are to be determined by the terms of the contract[63] taken as a whole.[64] That construction should be adopted which is most in consonance with the paramount purpose of the parties at the time of executing the same.[65] Where an oil and gas contract purports in its beginning to be an absolute grant of all such substances in the land for an indefinite period, and then provides that it is made on the "terms" thereafter following, that word is broad enough to include consideration or conditions.[66]

Mistake and fraud.—Leases may be reformed,[67] and transfers thereof avoided for mutual mistake,[68] and one may avoid a note, given in part payment for an oil lease, procured through misrepresentations as to the flow of oil from the wells at the time of the sale.[69]

Interests under a lease.[70]—If the contract authorizes deficiencies in the amount mined in any one year to be made up in succeeding years, the lessor still has the legal title to the coal not actually mined and removed and until it is so mined and removed,[71] and such title is subject to the lien of a judgment against him and may 57, 58, 59. Dorr v. Reynolds, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 139.

60. Though agreement leasing all the coal in certain lands and giving the lessee the right to remove a certain number of tons annually, on payment of an annual rental, until all is removed, unless the term is sooner ended for nonpayment or breach of other conditions. Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 94.

61. See 4 C. L. 667.

62. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. Intention of the parties, to be ascertained from the language used, will govern. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538. In construing such contract the court should consider the object to be attained, the situation of the parties, and all the surrounding facts and circumstances. Oil and gas lease. Manhattan Oil Co. v. Carrell, 164 Ind. 526, 73 N. E. 1084. Courts generally, in gas and oil states, have come to place oil and gas leases in a class by themselves, and to look critically into such instruments for the real intention of the parties, since it so frequently happens that they cannot, on account of incongruous provisions, be enforced according to the strict letter of the contract. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. Lease of premises containing brick clay. Adams v. Washington Brick, Lime & Mfg. Co., 38 Wash. 243, 80 P. 446. Fact that ore was found in pockets and not in stratified layers, and is therefore more difficult to mine, held not to authorize abandonment of lease of right to mine phosphate rock, where ore was sufficient in quantity in either form, particularly where it appeared that lessees had made frequent examinations before lease was executed. McGavock v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., 114 Tenn. 317, 86 S. W. 380.

63. Venedocia Oil & Gas Co. v. Robinson, 71 Ohio St. 302, 73 N. E. 222. Whether an actual estate in the minerals or a mere right to take them is created depends on the instrument under which they are claimed. Is to be construed by the four corners. Preston v. White [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 236.

64. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906.

65. Should be given that construction which will best adapt the agreement to facilitate the accomplishment of the ends evidently sought to be attained. Adams v. Washington Brick, Lime & Mfg. Co., 38 Wash. 243, 80 P. 446.

66. Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Null [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 125.

67. In action for rentals under gas lease providing that "the consideration for each well shall be the sum of $400, payable quarterly in advance," where lessor claimed that the words "per annum" had been by mistake omitted after the word "dollars," evidence held to sustain verdict for lessee, particularly as lessor failed to read the lease. Snyder v. Phillips, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 648.

68. Where oil lease provided that test well should be sunk to first sand, and, unless it proved fruitful, lease should be void and lessees salted well before reaching sand, and one of them sold his interest to defendants, who in good faith conveyed a part of their interest to plaintiffs, both believing that oil had been struck, held, that plaintiffs were entitled to a cancellation.. Rowland v. Cox [Ky.] 89 S. W. 215. Defendants could not defend on the ground that, if well was sunk to first sand, it might produce oil, lessees having abandoned well before it became productive and lease having thereby become void so that nothing passed to their grantees or to plaintiffs. Id. The fact that the property is speculative in character does not change the rule. Purchasers take the risk of how much oil will be produced, but are not speculating as to whether oil will be struck or not. Id.

69. Evidence held insufficient to warrant submission of question whether note was procured through misrepresentations. Jack v. Hixon, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 453.

70. See 4 C. L. 666, et seq.

71. Under contract providing that, if less than the maximum amount is mined in any one year, the deficiency may be made up at any time during the succeeding six years be sold at execution sale.[72] The purchaser acquires all the rights of the former holder of such title, including the royalties, which, under such agreement, are to be regarded as pro tanto purchase-money payments for the coal in place, if mined and removed within the stipulated time.[73]

A lease for oil confers no actual estate until oil is found, but only a right to explore and produce oil,[74] and is subject to abandonment before that time.[75] Hence a lessee under an ordinary oil lease for years has no vested taxable estate in the oil still in the ground, either before or after he has found paying wells, but it is taxable in the name of the surface owner,[76] and a sale for taxes assessed against the surface owner passes the oil to the purchaser.[77]

Where the lease requires the lessee to complete a well in every period of ninety days from the completion of the first well, if it proves to be a paying one, or to surrender the lease, excepting ten acres for each paying well, but fails to further describe such ten-acre tracts, the lessor is not entitled to arbitrarily set off such tracts and have his title quieted to the balance, but the lessee may choose them.[78] The obligation of the lessees under such a lease to continue to drill wells is fixed when the first well proves to be a paying one, and they are then bound to make a choice between, and pursue, one of the alternative courses indicated by the contract.[79] The contract not having certainly prescribed how many wells were to be drilled, or indicated their exact location, and the lessor having for a long period accepted his share of the oil produced from the wells actually drilled and not having objected to the failure of the lessees to further develop the property, he is bound to make a demand upon them to exercise their choice before resorting to the courts to enforce a forfeiture.[80] Where a gas lease exempts a part of the property to be designated by the lessor, the latter is not bound to make such designation until notified by the lessee to do so, but it is sufficient if it appears that he was ready and willing to do so.[81]

while the contract remains in force, coal not worked out is under continuing contingency of reverting to lessor on forfeiture of the lease, and land reverts on its expiration. Money paid in any one year belongs to lessor as rental if lease is forfeited thereafter, the right to make up deficiencies applying only while the lease continues in force. So, too, if such deficiency is not made up and title to coal acquired by actually mining it within six years, the money paid belongs to the lessor as rental for the land which has been occupied by the lessee, though not used and occupied by it as it had a right to use it. Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 94.

72. Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 94.

73. Title thereto is acquired by using royalties within the stipulated period of six years during the continuance of the lease as payments for coal actually taken out and away. Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 94.

74. Peterson v. Hall [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 603. A contract leasing the exclusive right for two years to enter upon and operate for and procure oil and gas from certain land, the lessee to pay a certain sum annually for each gas well drilled and a certain portion of the oil produced, to complete a well within a specified time, and after a specified date to pay a certain sum per acre per year for each piece of land on which wells have not been drilled and operated, and providing that if oil or gas is found the lease shall continue as long as either is found in paying quantities and as the well shall be operated, gives the lessee a right to enter on the premises for the purpose of exploring and to operate if oil or gas is discovered. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683.

75. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683. Further provision that lessee may surrender lease after two years if oil or gas is not found in paying quantities does not imply that title shall vest before oil or gas is found and produced. Id. Provision for rent is not an alternative which lessee may adopt and thereby relieve itself from drilling and operating, but its purpose is to incite speedy development of the property. Id.

76, 77. Peterson v. Hall [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 603.

78. Monaghan v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 579. Lessor cannot, on default, quiet title to all the land except such ten-acre tracts, there being no evidence as to any method or agreement for determining the description of such tracts. Jones v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1032.

79, 80. Monaghan v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 579.

81. Lessee held liable for prescribed rental on failure to bore well, where evidence showed that he was ready and willing to mark boundaries of reserved tract, and designated a place where a well might be drilled. Indianapolis Gas Co. v. Pierce [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 173.

Assignments and conveyances.[82]—A purchaser of leased land takes the estate of the lessor and not that of the lessee.[83] One to whom the lease is assigned, with the consent of the lessor, becomes bound by all its conditions.[84] An option to purchase given to a lessee, but to no other person, is a mere personal privilege which is not assignable.[85]

Rents and royalties.[86]—The covenant to pay rent for land not drilled is not dependent upon the provision relating to the time when the drilling is to begin and is not affected by extensions of such time.[87] Mining leases containing a covenant for the payment of a minimum rent or royalty either require such payment as a dead rent irrespective of produce, in which case the lessee is liable for rent even if nothing can be got by mining, or the ore or other material is exhausted before the expiration of the term,[88] or require that, on failure to take out a stipulated quantity, royalty with respect thereto shall nevertheless be paid, in which case the lessee is excused from further payment if the material is exhausted before the expiration of the stipulated term.[89] Under a lease providing that rentals may be paid directly to the lessor or by depositing them in the bank to his credit, a deposit in the bank within the prescribed time is a payment of the rent when it is accepted by the bank and placed to the lessor's credit, whether made in lawful money or in checks or drafts.[90] Where the lessee mingles gas from the demised premises with gas belonging to other persons, and is compelled to account to the latter for the whole mass under the doctrine of confusion of goods, the lessor is in no such privity with them as will enable him to collect from them the royalty due him under the lease.[91]

The lessee is not relieved from his obligation to furnish gas for heating and lighting purposes by ceasing or suspending operations on the demised premises after drilling a single well and operating it to exhaustion,[92] and if he violates his agreement in this regard is liable to the lessor for the reasonable cost of gas purchased by him which was reasonably necessary for such purposes.[93]

82. See 4 C. L. 667, n. 24.

83. Where lease grants exclusive privilege of quarrying lime rock, but reserves privilege of quarrying to the lessor, purchaser from latter cannot escape liability for excluding lessee from the premises on ground that covenants in lease do not run with the land. Arkley v. Union Sugar Co. [Cal.] 81 P. 509.

84. General assignment of "all live leases" belonging to assignor held to render assignee liable on lease which had two more years to run, though it was not shown on lessor's register which purported to show all live leases, but was included in a package marked "abandoned leases" and did not come to knowledge of assignee until after the transfer, particularly where evidence showed that assignee later recognized it as being valid. Indianapolis Gas Co. v. Pierce [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 173.

85. Mining lease. Myers v. Stone [Iowa] 102 N. W. 507. Lessor held not estopped from claiming that option did not pass to an assignee of the lease, where he did nothing but collect the rents from the assignee of the lease, and informed latter, before anything was done in reliance on the option, that the lessee had no right to assign the lease. Id. Improvements made by assignee, including the placing of a pump and engine in the mine, held not of such a character as to indicate to the lessor his intention to exercise the option, in view of fact that lease required the lessee to keep the mine and machinery in repair. Id.

86. See 4 C. L. 667.

87. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683.

88. Adams v. Washington Brick, Lime & Mfg. Co., 38 Wash. 243, 80 P. 446.

89. Under lease of premises containing brick clay for five years, providing for payment of royalty on all brick manufactured, payments for any year not to be less than a certain sum, and that lessee should not use premises for any other purpose than that of a general brick business, held, that making of brick from the clay was the subject-matter of the contract, and lessee was not liable for rent after clay was exhausted. Adams v. Washington Brick, Lime & Mfg. Co., 38 Wash. 243, 80 P. 446. Fact that lease provided for its termination by several methods held not to change the rule. Id.

90. Lafayette Gas Co. v. Kelsay, 164 Ind. 563, 74 N. E. 7.

91. Aiken v. Zahn, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 411.

92. Where the lease provides that as part of the rental the lessee shall furnish free of charge and during the term of the lease sufficient natural gas to heat and light the premises of the lessor, the lessee is not relieved from this obligation by ceasing or suspending operations after drilling a single well and operating it to exhaustion. Obligation not contingent on production of

If a right to possession for operating purposes has been acquired by a successful search for the product, the lessee becomes answerable for the stipulated rental according to the terms of the agreement, and is relieved from such liability only by showing payment, or that he has given written or verbal notice of abandonment to the lessor.[94] Agreed standards for basing royalties cannot be changed.[95] Where the amount of royalty depends on the quantity of coal of a certain size mined, the methods of preparation used by and known to coal operators at the time the lease was executed will be presumed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, and the amount produced by those methods must determine the quantity on which royalty must be paid during the continuance of the lease.[96] The lessee may adopt new methods of preparation so as to meet the market demands for smaller sizes of coal, but, if he does so, must account and pay for the same proportionate part as the terms of the lease required under the method in use at the time it was executed.[97] Where the lease requires the lessee to work all the coal carefully and skillfully, to the extent at least of the minimum annual quantity specified, and to permit no waste in mining or preparing it, he is not entitled to credit for coal formerly abandoned as waste, or left in the mine because not marketable, which has subsequently become available.[98] If the lease requires the payment of a royalty on all coal over a certain size mined and removed, the lessee must account for royalty coal used by him for the generation of steam, in the absence of a provision to the contrary.[99] Lessors are not estopped from collecting royalties for coal mined and not accounted for by the receipt of the minimum royalty due under the terms of the lease in the absence of a showing that, at the time, they had knowledge of the mining of any excess of royalty coal over the amount paid for.[1]

Time as a condition.[2]—A provision requiring the lessee to pay an annual rental on failure to drill a well within a designated period is valid and enforceable.[3] Where the lessee agrees to drill a well within a specified time or thereafter pay for gas from leased premises. Boal v. Citizens' Nat. Gas Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 339.

93. In action for breach of covenant of lease to furnish gas to heat and light house, where it is admitted that gas was not furnished and court determines as matter of law that defendant is bound to furnish it, plaintiff is entitled to judgment in the absence of a clear, distinct, and unequivocal denial that gas purchased by plaintiff was reasonably necessary to heat and light his premises, or that the price paid therefor was reasonable. Boal v. Citizens' Nat. Gas Co., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 339. Affidavit of defense held insufficient. Id.

94. Mere ceasing to operate wells is insufficient. Wilson v. Philadelphia Co. [Pa.] 60 A. 149. The question of notice is for the jury. Id. Evidence held to support finding that there was no notice. Id.

95. If the lease requires the lessees to pass all coal over a bar screen of a certain mesh and to pay royalty on all lump coal that does not pass through it, they have no right, without the lessor's consent, to substitute a shaker screen of a larger mesh. Drake v. Black Diamond Coal & Min. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 545. Evidence held to show that bar screen produced more lump coal than shaker screen. Id. Since change was a violation of the contract, lessees cannot contend that shaker screen should be allowed to remain because they had expended large sums in making the change. Id. Evidence as to test making comparison between result of use of bar screen in adjacent mine and shaker screen put in by defendant held admissible. Id.

96. Amount so produced furnished basis of lessor's consideration for the lease. Hoyt v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 205, 61 A. 885.

97. Hoyt v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 205, 61 A. 885. Where lease provided for royalty on all coal which would pass over a five-eighths of one inch square mesh screen, and method of preparation was so changed that much larger quantity passed through such screen. Id. Evidence held to justify finding as to the proportion of waste and the quantity of coal for which defendant should account. Id. Where evidence showed that changed methods greatly diminished amount of coal on which larger royalty, and increased amount on which smaller one, was paid, held that, on suit for an accounting, the court should have determined the proportionate quantity of the different sizes produced by both methods, and that the evidence was sufficient to enable him to do so. Myers v. Consumers' Coal Co., 212 Pa. 193, 61 A. 825.

98, 99. Hoyt v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 205, 61 A. 885.

1. No accounts settled and no receipts given. Hoyt v. Kingston Coal Co., 212 Pa. 205, 61 A. 885.

2. See 4 C. L. 667.

3. Gas lease. Indianapolis Gas Co. v. Pierce [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 173.

further delay a quarterly rental until the well is drilled, the law implies a provision that the well must be drilled within a reasonable time at the option of the landowner.[4] The lessor may waive performance indefinitely, and if he accepts a valuable consideration for postponement is as much bound by it as if the end of the paid period was the time limit stipulated in the original contract.[5] If, after accepting a number of payments, the lessor desires to insist on the drilling of the well, he must give notice to the lessee to that effect, and cannot forfeit the lease until the latter has had a reasonable time thereafter in which to perform,[6] and the same is true if the lease provides that it shall continue in force, though the contemplated wells are not drilled or utilized, on payment of the well rental stipulated therein.[7] A refusal to accept a payment of rent operates as a notice to the lessee that the lessor objects to any further delay in the exploration and development of the land,[8] and the lessee thereupon becomes bound to proceed within a reasonable time to sink a well on the premises in question.[9] The failure of the lessee to commence operations after he has been notified by the lessor that the contract is at an end cannot be regarded as a lack of diligence resulting in a forfeiture.[10]

Forfeitures and cancellations and abandonment.[11]—In order to declare a forfeiture and re-enter on the premises without resort to the courts, the lessor must

4. New American Oil & Min. Co. v. Troyer [Ind.] 76 N. E. 253, rvg. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 37. A grant for a valuable consideration of all the oil and gas under certain premises with the right to enter thereon for the purpose of drilling and operating for oil and gas, excepting and reserving to the grantor a certain part of all the oil produced and saved from the premises, implies an engagement on the part of the grantee to develop the premises for oil and gas. Venedocia Oil & Gas Co. v. Robinson, 71 Ohio St. 302, 73 N. E. 222. One dollar is a sufficient consideration and lease is not void for want of mutuality. Id.

5. New American Oil & Min. Co. v. Troyer [Ind.] 76 N. E. 253, rvg. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 37. Where the contract provides that the grant shall become void in case no well is completed within a specified time unless the grantee on demand shall pay a certain sum yearly to the grantor, the acceptance of such sum postpones the time for the performance of the implied agreement to develop the property so that it does not begin to run until the end of the year for which such payment is accepted. Venedocia Oil & Gas Co. v. Robinson, 71 Ohio St. 302, 73 N. E. 222. A refusal to accept a payment for the next year does not eo instanti terminate the lease, but leaves the rights of the parties in regard to the implied agreement as they were when the lease was executed. Id.

6. Failure to drill well within period last paid for does not put an end to lessee's rights. New American Oil & Min. Co. v. Troyer [Ind.] 76 N. E. 253, rvg. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 37. Action of lessor in commencing suit to quiet title ten days after expiration of last quarter for which rent had been paid, without previous notice, held inequitable and unsustainable. Id. Land was leased on March 29, 1888, for 12 years and so long thereafter as petroleum, etc., could be produced in paying quantities "or the payments hereinafter provided for are made according to the terms and conditions attaching thereto," and lease further provided that lessee should commence operations within a year or "in lieu thereof, for delay in commencing such operations thereon, pay" a certain sum annually in advance until operations were commenced and a well was equipped, and that a deposit of the money in a certain bank should operate as a payment. No wells were in fact drilled, but the lessor received payments up to and including the year 1899, and rental for year ending March 28, 1901, was deposited without any notice that it would not be received or that lessor would insist on a well being drilled. On April 5, 1900, lessor notified lessee that lease had expired, and requested that it be canceled. Lessee did not comply with such notice, but continued to deposit payments until March, 1903. Held, that lessor could not maintain action commenced Feb. 13, 1903, without further notice. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. Beales [Ind.] 76 N. E. 520, rvg. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 551.

7. Must notify lessee that he will refuse to accept payments in the future, and lessee then has a reasonable time in which to explore the premises. LaFayette Gas Co. v. Kelsay, 164 Ind. 563, 74 N. E. 7.

8. Under lease providing that well should be commenced within a specified time or else that a specified yearly rental should be paid until well was drilled. Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Seegar [Ind.] 74 N. E. 500.

9. Unexcused delay held unreasonable, and to justify lessor in commencing action to quiet title. Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Seegar [Ind.] 74 N. E. 500.

10. Where lessor notified lessee that lease was terminated and that he would proceed to quiet his title, and that if lessee placed any stakes on the premises he would be guilty of trespass, he could not contend that time elapsing between date of notice and time of commencing suit was reasonable time in which appellant could have commenced operations. LaFayette Gas Co. v. Kelsay, 164 Ind. 563, 74 N. E. 7.

be able to point out specifically some clear act in violation of the terms of the lease authorizing such forfeiture.[12] A general forfeiture clause is to be strictly construed for the benefit of the lessor, and the lease may be forfeited for nonpayment of rent in the absence of a stipulation making time of the essence of the contract, if, under all the circumstances, it would not be inequitable or unconscionable to do so.[13] Where the lease provides for the exploration of the premises within a certain time or for the payment of a certain sum quarterly in case of delay, the lessor has no right to resume possession until there has been a default in both particulars.[14] Where one grants and guarantees to another only the right to drill for oil and gas with a right of entry for such purpose only, subject to certain conditions, such right is an incorporeal hereditament incapable of livery of seisin, and hence there is no right of re-entry for breach of condition.[15] Acts unaccompanied by re-entry will suffice if there has been a breach and the lessee has never been put in possession.[16] The real consideration for oil and mineral leases is the development of the property in the near future.[17] Hence, if the lessee is not bound to do any particular amount of work on the premises or to commence work at any particular time, the agreement will be regarded as a mere license,[18] revocable at the will of either party;[19] but a lease for development on certain terms and operation on different ones may make the right of cancellation differ therewith.[20] The lessee is bound to de-

11. See 4 C. L. 669, 670.

12. Evidence held sufficient to show that complainant was justified in declaring a forfeiture. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279.

13. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683.

14. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

15. Monaghan v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 579.

16. Where the lease provides for a yearly rental until a well is drilled, that a failure to pay the rental when due is to be construed by both parties as the act of the grantee for the purpose of surrendering the rights granted, that in default of rental payments the contract is to be null and void, and that the grantee may at any time reconvey and thereby render the grant void, and the grantee never makes any entry on the land, the grantor is not bound to accept the rental when tendered after it becomes due, and his refusal to do so is a sufficient declaration of his intention to regard the grant as void. Grantor never having parted with possession, it is not necessary for him to make an impossible re-entry. Grant becomes void by its terms for failure to make payment when due. Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Null [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 125.

17. Martel v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate, 114 La. 351, 38 So. 253.

18. Martel v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate, 114 La. 351, 38 So. 253. Joint lease by owners of adjoining tracts for 99 years for purpose of prospecting, boring, and excavating for oil, gas, etc., for the consideration of one dollar and certain royalties on all oil, gas, or minerals produced, each party to have one-third of the royalty accruing from the land of the other, and which did not bind lessee to do any work on the premises, held a mere permit or license. Id. Lease of mineral rights for 10 years whereby lessee is bound to commence operations within six months or pay a certain sum quarterly in advance for each additional three months such operations are delayed until an oil well is completed, and whereby gross yield of oil and gas is to be shared in certain proportions is not void upon its face for want of mutuality. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932. Delays in offering to pay rent held not to make contract void. Id. If rent is not so inconsiderable as to render it "vile" and a mere nothing, its insufficiency alone cannot be considered in suit for possession. Id. Consideration held sufficient. Id. Further provision giving lessee the right to cancel the lease at any time on payment of a certain sum is not such a potestative condition as renders the contract void under Civ. Code, art. 2035. Id. Insufficiency of such sum cannot be considered in possessory action if it is not so inconsiderable as to render it vile and a mere nothing. Id.

19. Martel v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate, 114 La. 351, 38 So. 253. Where other owner thereafter enjoined original lessees from entering on his premises and then sold a part of his land to plaintiffs, held, that plaintiffs took title free from the first lease and were not affected by the subsequent compromise of the injunction suit, and the recognition by the owner of the original lease in a modified form. Id. Such a joint lease executed by adjoining landowners held abandoned and terminated by execution of new lease by one of them. Id.

20. Under a gas lease providing that it shall commence when signed and terminate when natural gas ceases to be used generally for manufacturing purposes in the county or on failure to pay the stipulated rental, and requiring the lessee to pay a certain sum yearly for each well drilled, or, if he fails to drill a well, a specified annual rent to be increased if no well is drilled in five years, the rights of the parties as velop the property diligently and within a reasonable time, and a failure to do so operates as an abandonment.[21]

Under a provision requiring the operator to drill and complete other wells in case oil is found in paying quantities in a test well, the question whether oil is found in such quantities is to be determined exclusively by the operator acting in good faith and upon his honest judgment.[22] Such a provision requires the drilling of additional wells only in the event that oil is found in such quantity as would, taken in connection with other present conditions, induce ordinarily prudent persons engaged in like business to expect a reasonable profit on the full sum required to be expended in the prosecution of the enterprise.[23] Fraud on his part will not be presumed, but must be pleaded and proved.[24]

The question of abandonment is one of fact depending upon intention and conduct.[25] If the lease is to run for a specified time or as long as oil or other minerals are obtained in paying quantities, the lessee has the right to determine when he is no longer obtaining them in such quantities,[26] and, upon so determining, may abandon the contract.[27] If the leased land is in fact abandoned, the lease is subject to cancellation.[28] The mode of ascertaining and fixing exhaustion as a fact warranting abandonment may be stipulated.[29]

The burden is on the lessee to show facts overcoming any apparent ground of forfeiture[30] or breach of terms of the lease.[31]

Breaches may be waived[32] and the lessor may estop himself to object to the as-to its continuance and determination are not the same before and after the development of the property. Lease runs from year to year. Hancock v. Diamond Plate Glass Co. [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 659.

21. Bay State Petroleum Co. v. Penn Lubricating Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1133, 87 S. W. 1102. Where lease recited consideration of $1, and provided only for payment of royalty, failure to continue search after first well was unsuccessful, held an abandonment. Id.

22. Manhattan Oil Co. v. Carrell, 164 Ind. 526, 73 N. E. 1084.

23. In action to recover penalties for failure to drill additional wells, instructions authorizing recovery if oil was found in sufficient quantity to pay a profit, however small, in excess of the cost of pumping it, excluding the cost of sinking and equipping the well, held erroneous. Manhattan Oil Co. v. Carrell, 164 Ind. 526, 73 N. E. 1084.

24. Under the pleadings, held error to submit question of whether oil was found in paying quantities to the jury. Manhattan Oil Co. v. Carrell, 164 Ind. 526, 73 N. E. 1084.

25. Oil and gas lease. Evidence held to sustain finding of abandonment. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683. Need not be by word of mouth, but may be inferred from his conduct. Bay State Petroleum Co. v. Penn Lubricating Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1133, 87 S. W. 1102.

26, 27. Bay State Petroleum Co. v. Penn Lubricating Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1133, 87 S. W. 1102.

28. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683. Under an oil and gas lease providing that it shall become void if no well shall be completed within six months from its date, unless the lessee pays a certain sum in advance for each six months thereafter that such completion is delayed, the abandonment of the enterprise by the lessee after drilling an unsuccessful well within the period for which a payment is made, and the failure to make the advance payment for the next six months puts an end to the contract. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. Where similar oral contract was later entered into between the parties, and lessee built another well, but on finding it unprofitable stopped operations and removed its machinery, etc., and paid no money and did nothing further for more than seven months, held, that its rights under the second contract also ceased. Id.

29. A provision authorizing the lessee to cancel the lease if phosphate rock of a specified quality becomes exhausted before the end of the term, and that if the quality is at any time called in question by the lessee the same shall be referred to and settled by one of several named referees in a designated order makes a determination of the inferiority of the rock in the manner specified a condition precedent to the right of the lessee to terminate the contract on that ground. McGavock v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., 114 Tenn. 317, 86 S. W. 380.

30. In a suit by the lessor to quiet title against the lessee, the burden is on the latter to prove tenders of rentals on which he relies. Oil and gas. Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Seegar [Ind.] 74 N. E. 500.

31. In an action for royalties claimed to be due under a lease requiring the lessee to mine a certain quantity of ore each month provided there was and continued to be that much merchantable ore on the land capable of being mined at a reasonable cost, the burden is on the lessee to show that there was not any such ore on the land in order to excuse his default. Big Stone Gap Iron Co. v. Olinger [Va.] 51 S. E. 355.

32. Evidence held to show waiver of breaches of mining lease such as would have signment of the lease.[33] The receipt of royalties is not a waiver of the continuing breach of the covenants of a lease,[34] nor is the receipt of royalties after the institution of a suit to recover the property.[35]

Reinstatement.—A lease which has, by its terms, terminated because the well actually ceased to be used as a gas well, is not revived by the subsequent discovery therein of gas in sufficient quantities for use, and its use.[36] The continued use of gas from the lessee's pipes by the lessor in accordance with the terms of the contract after the lessee has exercised its right to terminate the lease, does not impose on the latter the consequences of a part performance and prevent such termination from taking effect.[37] A lessee who forfeits his rights by failing to complete a successful well or to pay the stipulated rent within the stipulated time cannot renew them after such time by entering the land and commencing another well over the lessor's objections.[38] A subsequent tender of overdue rent will not restore the lessee's rights against the will of the lessor.[39] If the lessor, after an abandonment has taken place, acquiesces in a re-entry by the lessee, he is thereby estopped to deny the lessee's rights under the contract;[40] but such estoppel only prevents him from complaining of what the lessee is then doing, and, if the latter again abandons the property, does not preclude him from denying his right to return a second time.[41]

§ 8. Working contracts.[42]—An agreement between two or more persons to locate claims for the joint benefit of all is not within the statute of frauds and may be oral.[43] One party to such an agreement may compel the other to transfer to him his proportionate interest in any claim so located, or of the proceeds thereof,[44] upon payment of his share of the expense necessarily incurred in procuring and caring for the property.[45] One seeking to enforce such a contract must show, however, that he has complied with the agreements and conditions thereof on his part to be performed.[46] The ordinary rules of construction apply to grub-stake contracts.[47] entitled plaintiff to a forfeiture. Myers v. Stone [Iowa] 102 N. W. 507. And see 4 C. L. 670.

33. Lessor held estopped to object to assignment of mining lease. Myers v. Stone [Iowa] 102 N. W. 507.

34. Not where ground of forfeiture is continued failure of defendant to mine in a workmanlike manner and to support surface. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279.

35. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279.

36. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538.

37. Where under the law of the case the lessee had a right to terminate the lease, a finding that after electing to do so it furnished free gas to the lessor as required by the lease, held not a finding of such part performance on the part of the lessee as prevented it from exercising its right of termination. Hancock v. Diamond Plate Glass Co. [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 659.

38. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. Where lease was terminated by abandonment and failure to make required payments to keep it in force, subsequent parol agreement whereby lessee was permitted to renew operations on payment of back rentals on terms similar to those in original lease held not a waiver of the forfeiture but a new contract. Id.

39. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683.

40, 41. Bay State Petroleum Co. v. Penn Lubricating Co., 27 Ky. L. R. 1133, 87 S. W. 1102.

42. See 4 C. L. 671.

43. Mack v. Mack [Wash.] 81 P. 707. Evidence held to show oral contract to prospect for mines, and to locate, hold, and work them for the joint benefit of all. Id.

44. Mack v. Mack [Wash.] 81 P. 707. Where defendant transferred claim to corporation, for a cash payment, and certain shares of its capital stock, held that plaintiff was entitled to one-third of such stock, which defendant would be regarded as holding in trust for him. Id.

45. Defendant held to have lien on stock for which claim was sold for one-third of the sum necessarily expended by him, and one-third of the value of his services in caring for, looking after, and managing the property. Mack v. Mack [Wash.] 81 P. 707.

46. Civ. Code § 1439. Cameron v. Burnham, 146 Cal. 580, 80 P. 929. Plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement for purpose of leasing mining rights on certain land, each party agreeing to contribute a certain sum and to share in the profits in proportion to his contribution, it being provided that any one who did not pay when called upon should forfeit his interest. The right to mine on the property was procured, but plaintiff refused to pay and repudiated his contract. Held that he was not entitled to be decreed a part owner in a mine sub-

§ 9. Mining partnerships and corporations.—The ordinary rules apply for determining whether several persons working a mine are partners.[48]

A mining partnership differs from an ordinary partnership in that no contract between the partners is necessary to create it, and there is no delectus personarum.[49] A partner may sell his interest to whomsoever he wishes without the knowledge or consent of the other partners,[50] and without thereby dissolving the partnership.[51] When the members cannot agree, those having a majority interest control its management in all things necessary and proper for its operation.[52] In order that equity may decree a dissolution of the partnership and a sale of the property, the bill must show clear and good grounds therefor.[53]

A "mining" corporation has ordinarily no power to engage in manufacturing.[54]

§ 10. Public mining regulations.[55]—Matters relating to the liability of mine owners for injuries to their employes, including statutory provisions as to appliances and the like, are treated elsewhere.[56]

§ 11. Statutory liens and charges.[57]—Statutes in many states give liens to persons furnishing labor or materials for use in or about a mine or mill,[58] or for materials used in the construction of a well,[59] or to persons furnishing supplies to sequently discovered by defendant, it making no difference whether agreement between defendants and the land owner was a lease or a "mining privilege," and the statute of frauds had nothing to do with the matter. Id.

47. Grub-stake contract held not breached by landing plaintiff at a particular point on the Siberian coast. Nielsen v. Northeastern Siberian Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 292. As in other contracts, prior negotiations are merged in written contract. Id.

48. See, also, Partnership, 4 C. L. 908. Where it appeared that two of the defendants had contracted with the third that when he had sunk a shaft on their property to a certain depth he was to have a half interest in the property, and that if during that time he struck ore on the first level he was to have a half interest in the net profits, instruction, in action seeking to hold them as partners for supplies furnished, that contract did not make them partners unless the two defendants accepted the work done thereunder by the third as a performance, and thereupon agreed with him that he should have the half interest, held erroneous, since no additional agreement was necessary. Tamblyn v. Scott [Mo. App.] 85 S. W. 918. Partnership might also result from sharing net profits of strike on first level (Id.), or from acts of the parties independent of the contract (Id.). Fact that contract required the defendant doing the work to pay for the supplies would not necessarily prevent them from being partners as to third persons without notice. Id. In action against defendants on an account for purchases of supplies made by one of them, instruction that if defendants were jointly engaged in mining on certain lots, and each was to share in the profits and losses according to their respective interests therein, then they were partners, though there was no express agreement that they should be partners or share in the profits and losses, held proper. Dale v. Goldenrod Min. Co., 110 Mo. App. 317, 85 S. W. 929. Evidence held insufficient to establish an oral mining partnership entitling plaintiff to an accounting for the proceeds of properties acquired by defendant. Thompson v. Walsh, 140 F. 83.

49. Depends only on ownership of shares. Blackmarr v. Williamson [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 254.

50, 51, 52. Blackmarr v. Williamson [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 254.

53. Allegation that there is a lack of harmony as to the further operating of a lease, held insufficient. Blackmarr v. Williamson [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 254.

54. While production of natural gas is "mining," yet mining company cannot manufacture artificial gas. And even the express power to "manufacture" natural gas into a domestic or fuel product gives no power to make artificial gas. Consumers' Gas Trust Co. v. Quinby [C. C. A.] 137 F. 882.

55. See 4 C. L. 672.

56. See Master and Servant, 6 C. L. 521.

57. See 4 C. L. 672. See, also, Mechanics' Liens, 6 C. L. 451.

58. Under Cutt Comp. Laws Nev., §§ 3881, 3883, 3899, giving lien on mine for labor or materials used in construction of any building, or for material used in or about the mine, and on mill manufactory or hoisting works for labor or machinery, or materials for its construction or operation, and providing that lien shall attach to the land occupied by the building, and a convenient space about the same, or so much as may be required for its convenient use and occupation, held that lien for furnishing and installing machinery in mill did not extend to electric power plant situated at a distance from the mine and on land not connected therewith, though power for operation of mill is supplied by it. Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632. Lien held to extend to entire group of mines constituting property on which mill is situated, and to work the ores from which it was built. Id.

59. Complaint in action to foreclose mechanics' liens on a "well," alleging that materials were furnished a certain "oil demining companies necessary to their operation.[60] As in the case of other lien statutes they will be liberally construed so as to give full effect to the remedy intended to be secured thereby.[61] In Oregon, one performing labor for a lessee has a lien on the leased property, unless the lease is recorded before the work is begun.[62]

In cases where the lien is given by the general mechanics' lien law, the method of foreclosure is the same as that prescribed for the foreclosure of other mechanics' liens.[63] The right to a lien is a privilege which may or may not be exercised, and hence it may be waived.[64] The filing of a lien within the prescribed time is a condition precedent to the preservation of the inchoate right of lien which the laborer has by reason of performing the work, and the lien is lost unless so filed.[65] As in other cases the time is reckoned by excluding the first day and including the last of the period prescribed.[66]

A substantial compliance with the statutory requirements as to the notice of lien is sufficient.[67] The lien notice must contain a true statement of the demand, after deducting all just credits and off-sets.[68]

In Oregon all persons personally liable for the payment of a sum due for labor performed in operating or developing a mine must be made parties to a suit to foreclose a lien therefor.[69] This provision is for the benefit of the mine owner and may be waived by him,[70] and a waiver results from his failure to demand that such persons be brought in.[71] In a suit to foreclose liens on leased property for debts contracted by the lessee, the burden is on the claimant to show that no payment has been made on account of the liens since their filing.[72] Where ownership by defendants is admitted and there is no issue as to the identity of the property, it is velopment company" to be used in the "drilling, construction and operation" of said well, held not objectionable as showing that only materials furnished were machinery for the drilling and construction of an oil well, and hence, only lien law applicable is that relating to liens on mining claims which gives no lien for materials, even if oil wells are not within Code Civ. Proc. § 1183, giving lien to anyone furnishing materials to be used in the construction of any well, at least where no such objection was made in trial court. Clarke & Lacy Co. v. Inter Nos Oil & Development Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 51.

60. Lien given by Va. Code 1887, § 2485 (Code 1904, p. 1246), attaches at the time the supplies are furnished and not at the time of the filing and recording of the claim, which must, under Id., § 2486 (Code 1904, p. 1249), be done within 90 days after furnishing the last item, so that adjudication in bankruptcy against the debtor between the date of maturity of the last item of the account, and the filing and recording of the claim, does not destroy the claimant's right to priority in the distribution of the bankrupt's estate. Mott v. Wissler Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 697.

61. Mott v. Wissler Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 135 F. 697; Salt Lake Hardware Co. v. Chainman Min. & Elec. Co., 137 F. 632; Castagnetto v. Coopertown M. & S. Co., 146 Cal. 329, 80 P. 74.

62. B. & C. Comp. § 5668. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417. Instrument held a lease and not a contract of sale. Id.

63. See Mechanics' Liens, 6 C. L. 611.

64. By failing to comply with statutory requirements. Horn v. U. S. Min. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 1009.

65. In Oregon must be filed with county clerk of county where the mine is situated within 60 days after he has ceased to labor therein. Horn v. United States Min. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 1009.

66. Horn v. U. S. Min. Co. [Or.] 81 P. 1009.

67. Notice stating the name of the reputed owner, who is found to be the true owner, and that labor was done at the request of a named person, who was then the superintendent of the company operating the mine, is sufficient under Code Civ. Proc. § 1187. Need not state the title of such company, or its relation to the owner. Castagnetto v. Coopertown M. & S. Co., 146 Cal. 329, 80 P. 74. Notice stating that labor was performed by the day, at a certain agreed price per day, between designated dates and that the amount claimed was justly due and owing, held to be a sufficient statement of the "terms, time given, and conditions of the contract." Id. Notice stating that work was performed on a certain copper mine, and claiming a miner's lien on said mining claim, held to sufficiently show that labor was performed "in a mining claim." Id.

68. Failure to give credit for groceries belonging to employer and sold by claimant, held to render notice insufficient. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

69. B. & C. Comp. § 5672. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

70. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

71. By not objecting to defect of parties, resulting from failure to join lessees for whom the labor was performed, until after the taking of the testimony. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

72. Claim disallowed where he failed to do so. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

unnecessary to introduce the record of the claims referred to in the lease and the lien notices, or certified copies thereof.[73]

In many states a reasonable attorney's fee is allowed on foreclosure.[74]

§ 12. Mining torts.[75]—The owner of a mine may recover damages for the act of another in wrongfully depriving him of possession.[76] Whether defendant's acts in mining ore belonging to another results in actual damage is immaterial, except as to the amount of damages which may be awarded.[77]

The owner of an interest in land from which oil is taken without his consent is entitled to a like interest in the oil produced, less his proportionate share of the expense incurred in producing, transporting, and preserving the same, and if sold, of the sale.[78]

The measure of damages for the conversion of iron pyrites necessarily removed in removing coal, which defendant has the right to remove, is its value at the mouth of the pit, less the cost of digging and separating it from the coal.[79]

In an action of trespass for the wrongful removal of coal underlying plaintiff's land, a survey of the mine should be granted on the application of the party out of possession for the purpose of disclosing the direction of the excavation and the quantity of coal extracted.[80]

§ 13. Remedies and procedure peculiar to mining rights.[81]—Trover will lie for the wrongful conversion of mineral severed from the earth by artificial causes,[82] but not to recover the value of mineral in deposit in the earth.[83] There can be no recovery of ore in specie, or of its value in an action of trover, when it has been taken from land in possession of defendant under claim and color of title asserted in good faith.[84]

Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin the commission of waste and the destruction of the property as a mining property, even though plaintiff is not in possession,[85] and, having obtained possession for that purpose, the court may, for the purpose of preventing a multiplicity of suits, retain it for further relief, and remove a cloud upon the title, quiet title, and determine the right of possession.[86] Injunction will lie to prevent a life tenant from taking or granting to others a right to take underlying gas or oil, where the fee owner has not previously operated for them or granted to others the right to do so,[87] and to prevent trespass,[88] and is the only

73. Lewis v. Beeman [Or.] 80 P. 417.

74. Held that, on the record, the appellate court could not say that allowance of $75 for attorney's fees in each of 12 separate liens was an abuse of discretion. Castagnetto v. Coopertown M. & S. Co., 146 Cal. 329, 80 P. 74.

75. See 4 C. L. 661, n. 56 et seq.

76. On hearing to determine damages for wrongfully keeping plaintiff from possession of a mine, evidence held to justify finding that such dispossession extended to a certain date. Empire State-Idaho M. & D. Co. v. Hanley [C. C. A.] 136 F. 99.

77. Defendant held properly restrained, though he claimed that whatever ore he mined was left in tunnel or on the dump and the value of the mines was thereby increased. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517.

78. Martel v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate, 114 La. 351, 38 So. 253.

79. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512.

80. Penny v. Central Coal & Coke Co. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 769. Evidence, in action by church trustees for trespass for removal of coal underlying the church property, held sufficient to sustain finding that title to land was in church. Id.

81. See 4 C. L. 673.

82, 83. Smoot v. Consolidated Coal Co., 114 Ill. App. 512.

84. Claim of ownership, by owner of surface, of body of ore within surface lines is presumed to be in good faith when made against owner of another surface claim. Question of title in such case is fundamental and cannot be litigated in a personal and transitory action. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court [Cal.] 82 P. 70.

85. Bill held sufficient. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that mining operations were carried on in disregard of covenant in lease that land should be so supported that there would be no caving. Id.

86. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279.

87. Constitutes waste. Richmond Nat. Gas Co. v. Davenport [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 525.

proper remedy in case a lessee passes coal over a different screen from that provided for by the lease.[89] On revocation of a license to extract ore from a mining claim, the licensor is entitled to an injunction against insolvent licensees who refuse to surrender the claim, and continue and threaten to continue to mine ore, thereby destroying the substance of the estate.[90] Where, at the instance of the owner of the underlying granite, the owner of the surface is enjoined from interfering therewith, it is proper to also enjoin the owner of the granite from interfering with the rights of the surface owner.[91] Persons adjudged to have a right to an interest in a claim as tenants in common, contingent on the payment of a certain sum to the other owners, are properly enjoined from extracting ore therefrom if they do not pay or tender such sum when the other owners seek to oust them,[92] and such injunction does not become wrongful, so as to entitle them to sue on the injunction bond, by their subsequent payment at the conclusion of the suit.[93]

In a possessory action the plaintiff is bound to prove his possession and its disturbance by defendant, and the question of the latter's title, whether as owner or lessee, can be made an issue only by consent and to the extent of the consent.[94] A lessor cannot maintain a possessory action against the lessee unless the lease is void,[95] and a direct action must be brought to set aside a lease which does not contain in express terms a clause authorizing a forfeiture.[96]

In some states good title and actual possession are necessary to the maintenance of a bill in equity to remove a cloud on the title to land.[97] In some states possession is not necessary to the maintenance of a suit to quiet title,[98] while in others it is,[99] and the latter rule generally prevails in the Federal courts.[1] The right of action given by the laws of some states to quiet title to realty without a previous adjudication of the title in an action at law, and without reference to the possession, is, however, enforceable by a suit in equity in the Federal courts when the complainant is in possession and the defendant is out of possession, or where both parties are out of possession, there being in either case no adequate or complete remedy at law.[2] To

88. Finding that defendant had unlawfully ousted plaintiff and taken possession of his property, and decree enjoining him, held sustained by the evidence. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517. Where defendant only claimed to own two-thirds of the mineral and timber on certain land held error, in suit for damages for destroying timber on the boundary thereof and to restrain further trespass, to give defendant all the mineral and timber in and on the entire boundary. Browning v. Cumberland Gap Cannel Coal Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 267.

89. Both on account of the multiplicity of actions that would otherwise be required, and because of the impossibility of arriving at a correct estimate of the amount of damages sustained. Drake v. Black Diamond Coal & Min. Co. [Ky.] 89 S. W. 545. Held impossible in such case to fix plaintiff's damages. Id.

90. Clark v. Wall [Mont.] 79 P. 1052.

91. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666.

92, 93. Yarwood v. Cedar Canyon Consol. Min. Co., 37 Wash. 56, 79 P. 483.

94, 95. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

96. Forfeitures strictly construed in possessory action. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. v. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate [La.] 38 So. 932.

97. Owner of surface has no possession of coal which has previously been severed by deed, and no title thereto. Wallace v. Elm Grove Coal Co. [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 485.

98. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517.

99. An action will lie to quiet the title of an owner of land as against a claim under a contract purporting to grant the oil and gas under its surface, with the right to enter for the purpose of seeking and taking the oil and gas, where such claim is unfounded because of the original insufficiency of the contract or because of the termination of the rights and interests created thereby in some manner recognizable as sufficient to work a determination of such rights and interests. Monaghan v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 579.

1. The surreptitious running of a drift from one claim underneath the surface of an adjoining one does not constitute such possession of the latter as will sustain an equitable suit to quiet title against one in open and adverse possession of the surface and of the workings therefrom, both because it is acquired secretly by trespassing and unfair means, and because it is not actual or constructive possession of the whole claim. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

2. Right of action given by Utah Rev. St. 1898, §§ 2915, 3511. United States M. Co. v.

enable the court to quiet title to land or to adjudge a forfeiture of an interest therein under a lease or a grant, or to enforce a conveyance of land, the complaint must describe the property with certainty and exactness.[3] So too, the evidence must show the description of the property with certainty.[4] In a suit to quiet title to a mining claim, plaintiff makes out a prima facie case by proof of his citizenship, the discovery of mineral on the land, and a location according to law, and is not called upon to make further proof that the land was unoccupied mineral land of the United States.[5] The burden is then upon defendant to show that the location under which he claims is prior in time and superior in right.[6] If defendant shows a valid prior location, plaintiff may then show that the claim became subject to relocation by reason of defendant's failure to do the required assessment work, though the complaint contains no allegations of forfeiture of abandonment.[7] The defense of forfeiture of the interest of a co-owner, failing to contribute to assessment work by proceedings for that purpose under the Federal statutes, is an affirmative one, and must be pleaded where the opportunity to do so is afforded.[8] In a suit to quiet title to ores in a vein, to which plaintiff claims extralateral rights, the parties are not entitled, as a matter of right, to a trial by jury.[9] In a suit to quiet title and for an injunction and damages, plaintiff is entitled to a jury trial on the issue of ownership when properly raised by the pleadings, and their general verdict is conclusive on the court, except as he has power to set it aside and grant a new trial.[10] Where plaintiff claims ownership and right to possession and prays that he be adjudged to be such owner, and defendant denies such ownership and claims ownership in himself, the issue of ownership is presented, and the jury having found for plaintiff, judgment is properly entered accordingly.[11] The dismissal of a bill to quiet title to a mining claim does not carry with it the dismissal of a cross-bill alleging facts not alleged in the original bill, which are directly connected with the subject-matter of the original suit, and praying affirmative, equitable relief directly connected with and arising out of the matters of the original suit and germane to the same.[12]

Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769. Principal object of suit being to obtain a determination of defendants' adverse claim to the remaining ore bodies, and not merely to recover possession of the workings through which defendants have removed ore, or the value of the ore removed, and complainant being in possession of such remaining ore bodies, and defendants out of possession, held that complainant had no adequate remedy at law. Id.

3. In suit to quiet title against oil and gas lease which required lessee to complete a well within every period of 90 days from the completion of the first well, if it proved to be a paying one, or to surrender the lease, excepting ten acres for each paying well, complaint held insufficient in failing to state facts which would enable the court to describe such ten acre tracts to be excepted, and hence to describe any tracts to which it could quiet the title. Monaghan v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 579.

4. Title cannot be quieted where contract does not itself furnish any description of ten acre tracts not sought to be forfeited, or of remaining land, and evidence does not show any method or agreement by which parties could determine such facts. Jones v. Mount [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 1032.

5. Presumption is that all public land is unoccupied, and plaintiff need not prove, in first instance, that defendant's prior location was abandoned or forfeited by failure to do required assessment work. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23.

6, 7. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708, 81 P. 23.

8. Complainant held in no position to claim prejudice, by reason of failure of cross-bill to set up such forfeiture, where original bill to quiet title alleged that defendant claimed title by virtue of forfeiture proceedings alleged to be void, and proofs were taken on that issue without objection. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

9. Suit to quiet title and for an injunction. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. [Mont.] 81 P. 806.

10. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 592, providing that in actions for recovery of specific real or personal property, issues of fact must be tried by jury. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517.

11. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 580, providing that the court may grant any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517.

One seeking in a court of equity to recover an interest in mining property, of which he claims to have been deprived through fraud, must act promptly and without unreasonable delay,[13] and must establish such fraud by clear proof.[14]

Where no lien is reserved to secure the payment of royalties under a mining lease, the lessor is not entitled to maintain a bill in equity to declare and enforce a prior lien on the property of the lessee in the hands of his assignee for creditors, but his remedy is by an action at law.[15]

One who has relocated a claim may maintain ejectment against a prior locator, entering on the premises for the purpose of doing assessment work, to determine his rights therein.[16] In ejectment to recover possession of a mining claim where the sole issue raised by the pleadings is one of forfeiture of plaintiff's claim for failure to do the required assessment work, plaintiffs cannot, after issue is joined and the case is before the jury, rely on adverse possession.[17] A claim to recover treble damages for wrongfully mining and converting coal on another's property, and single damages for injuries to the mine caused by negligence in mining the coal so removed, may be joined in one action where both grow out of the same trespass.[18] One may show title to a mineral interest in land by showing an unrestricted title to the land wherein the mineral is contained.[19]

An action to recover merely the value of ore or timber removed from the land by one having no right thereto is transitory, notwithstanding the fact that plaintiff may be compelled to prove title to the land, and any court whose process will reach the persons of the defendants has jurisdiction thereof.[20] If, however, recovery is sought for injury to the freehold, the action is local, and is only cognizable by the courts of the state where the land is situated.[21]

The usual rules of pleading and evidence apply in actions for damages for trespass to mineral lands,[22] the conversion of minerals,[23] to recover possession of land,[24] to recover royalties,[25] suits for the cancellation of leases,[26] to quiet title,[27]

Claim for damages cannot affect the result of the trial of the issue of ownership, particularly where none are awarded. Id.

12. Badger Gold M. & M. Co. v. Stockton G. & C. M. Co., 139 F. 838.

13. Equity rule requiring prompt action is peculiarly applicable, where title to mining property is involved, because of its fluctuating and speculative character. Hall v. Nash [Colo.] 81 P. 249. Plaintiff, who was stockholder in mining company, held barred by laches from objecting to acts of its officers in surrendering lease and obtaining other leases for their personal benefit. Id.

14. Hall v. Nash [Colo.] 81 P. 249. Evidence held insufficient to show that surrender of lease by company, in which plaintiff was a stockholder, was procured through fraud, but to show that plaintiff in effect consented to the surrender by failing to make payments for his stock when notified to do so. Id.

15. For royalties not paid by lessee and those not paid by assignee after taking possession. Etowah Min. Co. v. Wills Valley Min. & Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 336. Code 1896, §§ 4183, 4184, authorizing proceedings in chancery against trust estates for services rendered to, or debts incurred by, the trustee if he has become insolvent, does not apply, particularly where there is no allegation of insolvency. Id.

16. Zerres v. Vanina, 134 F. 610.

17. White River Min. & Nav. Co. v. Langston [Ark.] 88 S. W. 971.

18. Amendment to statement of claim held properly allowed. Jackson v. Gunton, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 203.

19. Granite. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666.

20. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court [Cal.] 82 P. 70.

21. Action for wrongful removal of ores, in which injunction and accounting was sought, held local. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court [Cal.] 82 P. 70.

22. In action to recover treble damages for unlawfully mining coal on another's land, statement of claim held not broad enough to admit evidence to show that defendants, in mining coal on their own land, violated Act June 2, 1891 (P. L. 176), art. 3, relating to barrier pillars between adjoining mines. Jackson v. Gunton, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 203.

23. Complaint held to state cause of action for conversion of natural gas in pipe line, at least when first questioned on appeal. Crystal Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Marion Gas Co. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 15.

24. Affidavit made by one under whom defendant claimed, while such person was in possession of the land, wherein he admitted that he did not own the "rock or granite" interest therein, held not rendered inadmisand for injunctions.[28] So also the ordinary rules as to instructions are applicable.[29]

On an issue as to the value of assessment work, the jury may be allowed to view the premises,[30] and they may use the knowledge so acquired in understanding, applying, and weighing the evidence.[31]

A ruling of a state court necessarily involving a denial of rights claimed under the Federal statutes, authorizing the relocation of forfeited claims, raises a Federal question so as to authorize a writ of error from the Federal supreme court.[32]

MINISTERS OF STATE; MINUTES; MISJOINDER, see latest topical index.

sible because affiant was dead, nor because it was used in previous litigation concerning the property to which defendant was not a party. Phillips v. Collinsville Granite Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 666. On the issue of who owned the granite in a certain lot of land, testimony of a witness that granite belonged to person who quarried it held incompetent. Id.

25. In suit to recover royalty under mining lease making no requirements as to the quality of the ore to be taken, evidence on that point held properly excluded. Brooks v. Cook, 141 Ala. 499, 38 So. 641. In suit to quiet title, evidence as to ownership and possession held to support verdict and judgment for plaintiff. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 P. 517.

26. In an action for cancellation of oil and gas lease on ground of abandonment and nonpayment of rent, question as to purport of extensions of time to commence operations held properly excluded, the extensions being in writing. Rawlings v. Armel [Kan.] 79 P. 683. Question as to results of drilling on land other than that in controversy, and after the rights of the parties became fixed, held properly excluded. Id. Question as to whether lessee had abandoned lease held improper, as usurping the functions of the judge. Id.

27. Pleading: An allegation in a complaint in a suit to quiet title against an oil and gas lease that defendant's claim is without right, and unfounded, and a cloud against plaintiff's rights, is good on demurrer. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. An allegation that complainant is the owner of the claims of which the ore bodies in dispute are a part, and in possession of them, and engaged in working them as one property for mining purposes, is a sufficient allegation of his possession of the ore bodies as well as of the surfaces of the claims. United States M. Co. v. Lawson [C. C. A.] 134 F. 769. A further allegation that defendants, through underground workings, have wrongfully entered the ore bodies and extracted ore therefrom, and are threatening to extend such workings and to continue to extract ore, even if deemed an admission of allegation of an ouster or dispossession of the complainant in respect of the ore bodies actually embraced in defendant's underground workings, leaves the allegation of complainant's possession unimpaired as to ore bodies not penetrated by defendant and remaining in place and undisturbed. Id.

Evidence: In suit to quiet title as against an oil and gas lease, question as to amount expended in constructing three wells held properly excluded, where evidence showed that only two had been drilled before the commencement of the suit. Ohio Oil Co. v. Detamore [Ind.] 73 N. E. 906. In a suit to quiet title to claims where issue was the validity of an alleged prior location, decree in former suit adjudging it invalid held admissible, the parties to both being in privity. Bonanza Consol. M. Co. v. Golden Head M. Co. [Utah] 80 P. 736.

28. A bill to enjoin a lessee from committing waste and destroying the property as a mining property, and to cancel the lease as a cloud on the lessor's title, is not objectionable as being a bill to enforce a forfeiture, where it is further alleged that complainant has already declared a forfeiture for breach of conditions before filing the bill. Big Six Development Co. v. Mitchell [C. C. A.] 138 F. 279. Such a bill is not demurrable on the ground that complainant has an adequate remedy at law by an action of forcible entry and detainer. Such remedy would not be as complete or efficient, since it would not prevent extraction of ore and removal of earth, or the continuous cavings of the surface. Id. Complaint in suit by lessees, to enforce their rights in gas well, held defective in failing to state facts showing that the lease had not expired, or that it was in full force and effect, or that plaintiffs had not parted with their interest in the premises. Shenk v. Stahl [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 538.

29. In action to recover royalties under a mining lease, where evidence showed that lease was abandoned because land did not contain merchantable ore capable of being mined at a reasonable cost, and sole question was whether the lessee made a bona fide effort to discover and mine the ore, instructions authorizing a consideration of the question whether lessee rescinded contract under a clause authorizing it to do so in any event, on payment of a year's royalty, held erroneous, there being no evidence tending to show such a rescission. Big Stone Gap Iron Co. v. Olinger [Va.] 51 S. E. 355. Requested instruction that if cost of mining on leased premises exceeded cost at other mines, jury could find from that fact that such cost was not a reasonable one, held properly refused as leaving out of consideration the difference that might exist in the known conditions in such other mines. Id. Where lease required certain amount of ore to be mined each month if merchantable ore capable of being mined at a reasonable cost was found on the land, requested instruction, limiting the jury to a consideration of expert evidence on the question of merchantableness, held properly refused. Id.

30, 31. McCormick v. Parriott [Colo.] 80 P. 1044.

MISTAKE AND ACCIDENT.

§ 1. Definitions; elements.[33]—A mistake of law is the misapprehension of a principle of law and the failure of the party to appreciate his rights under that principle.[34] A mistake of the law of a foreign country, or even the misapprehension of the private statutes of a state are not mistakes of law, but mistakes of fact.[35] Ignorance of the facts on both sides is not a mistake. There must be a positive belief, shared by both parties, either that something is true which is not true in fact, or that something is untrue which is true in fact.[36] The codes of some states define mistake of fact.[37]

§ 2. Relief against.[38]—Relief is always granted in cases of mutual mistake, either of fact or of mixed law and fact;[39] but neither law nor equity will relieve against mistakes unless they are mutual,[40] except where the mistake goes to the subject-matter of a contract or is essential to its terms,[41] or there is a mistake on one

32. Decision that statute of limitations in regard to adverse possession of realty operates to defeat an action brought under U. S. Rev. St. § 2326, to try title to conflicting mining claims in which defeated party relies on relocation under Id. § 2324, where court treated as irrelevant and immaterial evidence tending to show that premises in dispute were embraced in the forfeited location, and that possession of that claim was held and retained from a time at least contemporaneous with the initiation of the conflicting locations almost up to the relocation. Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 Law. Ed. 1119. Federal question is adequately presented where record clearly shows that trial court considered that unsuccessful party was claiming rights under § 2326, and highest state court necessarily acted upon that assumption in delivering its opinion. Id.

33. See 4 C. L. 674.

34, 35. Girard Trust Co. v. Harrington, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

36. Landreth v. Howell, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 210. Where a lower rate than was intended by a railroad company was offered by its agent, who was misled by an erroneous telegram received from the company, if there was no error on the face of the message and the shippers accepted it in good faith, there was a binding contract. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469.

37. Rev. Civ. Code, § 1206. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22. Civ. Code, § 3853, Rev. Codes 1899. Benesh v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 405.

38. See 4 C. L. 675.

39. Vallentyne v. Immigration Land Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1028. A settlement between partners, whereby one was paid more for his interest than he was entitled to, through errors made by the bookkeeper whom both trusted to make the computation, was reformed on the ground of mutual mistake. House v. Wechsler, 93 N. Y. S. 593. Where, by mistake of defendant's agent, more land was described in a contract of sale than was intended to be conveyed, held, that there was a mistake for which equity would either reform or rescind the contract as circumstances might require. Benesh v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 405. Where, after discovering the mistake, defendant proposed its correction by the acceptance of a deed for the land intended to be conveyed only, and plaintiff made no direct answer, but paid the balance of the purchase price, accepted the deed offered, and his conduct was calculated to induce a belief that he had assented to defendant's proposal, and to cause the latter to forego resort to equitable relief, held, that he would not be allowed to deny that he had accepted such proposal, and could not recover damages for breach of the contract. Id. A settlement of damages for injuries received, executed under mutual mistake of both parties that the injuries were not serious, will be vacated. Great Northern R. Co. v. Fowler [C. C. A.] 136 F. 118.

40. Finks v. Hollis [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 463. Reformation of a written instrument will be decreed only where the mistake is mutual. Fritz v. Fritz [Minn.] 102 N. W. 705; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469. An insurance policy cannot be reformed on the ground of a mistake in the building insured, where the evidence shows that the agent examined and the company intended to insure the building actually described, although the owner intended to have another building insured. Boyce v. Hamburg-Bremen Fire Ins. Co., 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 589. Equity will not afford relief for the mistake of one party to a contract. Landreth v. Howell, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 210.

41. Vallentyne v. Immigration Land Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1028. An administrator's sale will be set aside at the instance of the purchaser, where it did not include a tract of land and a building, which had always been used as a part of the premises, which the purchaser had good reason to believe were included and without which the premises sold could not be used to advantage. Biddison v. Aaron [Md.] 62 A. 523. Where the wife's land, deeded by the husband and wife as security for a loan, was reconveyed by mistake to the husband, they not underside and fraud or inequitable conduct on the other.[42] The courts, however, may decline to enforce the execution of a contract although the mistake is confined to the party refusing to perform,[43] provided it is such a mistake as furnishes a good defense,[44] and it can be corrected without injustice to the other party,[45] and the party seeking the rescission or asserting the mistake has not been guilty of such negligence or laches as to prevent his doing so.[46] Equity will not grant relief for the mistake of one party resulting from his own negligence,[47] and where it could have been avoided by reasonable diligence.[48] Thus, failure to read a written instrument executed by a party precludes relief,[49] unless he was unable to read, or the other party was guilty of fraud.[50] Still this is not a hard and fast rule, but must in each case depend upon the attending circumstances.[51] And mere failure to avail one's self of the means of knowledge does not bar relief from mistake, where there is no neglect of a legal duty.[52]

For a mistake of law alone there is generally no relief.[53] Mistake of law is not standing the transaction, her grantors were entitled to hold the land as against the husband's judgment creditor. Huot v. Reeder Bros. Shoe Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 98, 103 N. W. 569. Where a mortgagee foreclosed and in good faith bid in the property and went into possession in ignorance of the existence of children of the deceased mortgagor, his mistake was one for which equity would grant relief. Investment Securities Co. v. Adams, 37 Wash. 211, 79 P. 625.

NOTE. Rescission for unilateral mistake: The plaintiff by mistake put in a lower bid for a contract than he had intended making. The defendant accepted the bid, without notice of the mistake. Held, that equity will rescind the contract. Board of School Com'rs v. Bender [Ind. App.] 72 N. E. 154. Equity will give rescission for a unilateral mistake against a donee. Andrews v. Andrews, 12 Ind. 348. In an analogous case, rescission has been granted of a conveyance in which by a unilateral mistake the grantee is getting what he did not expect, and what the grantor clearly did not mean to convey. Brown v. Lamphear, 35 Vt. 252. Such relief may also be had where the defendant in accepting an offer of conveyance knowingly took advantage of the plaintiff's error. Garrard v. Frankel, 30 Beav. 445. But with these exceptions, the great weight of authority is that equity will not give rescission for a mere unilateral mistake. Moffett, etc. Co. v. Rochester, 91 F. 28. Contra. Harris v. Pepperell, L. R. 5 Eq. 1 (semble). Much may be said in favor of the exercise of the jurisdiction to rectify mistakes in a case where nothing has been done under a hard bargain which the plaintiff did not intend to make; but the difficulty of deciding what is a sufficiently damaging mistake, and the fact that a door would be opened to the admission of all manner of excuses for improvident contracts, as a matter of policy, perhaps justify a denial of relief.—18 Harv. L. R. 624.

42. Fritz v. Fritz [Minn.] 102 N. W. 705; Finks v. Hollis [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 463.

43. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469.

44. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469. Where the vendor was maintaining a bulkhead erected without right on land not owned by him and the vendee honestly believed that he would have the use and enjoyment of the same, it was held to be a defense to a bill for specific performance. Cawley v. Jean [Mass.] 75 N. E. 614. But the burden is on the defendant to make out such defense. Id.

45. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469.

46. As to mistake as furnishing a basis for defense or for equitable relief, see Civ. Code 1895, §§ 3535, 3660, 3981-85, 3974. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Gortatowsky [Ga.] 51 S. E. 469.

47. Snyder v. Phillips, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 648; Fritz v. Fritz [Minn.] 102 N. W. 705. Section 1206, Rev. Civ. Code. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22.

48. Defendant sold land to plaintiff, and under the impression that all the pine had been cut off, struck out of the printed form of contract the clause reserving pine and mineral rights. Held, that it could not rescind the contract for mistake. Vallentyne v. Immigration Land Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1028.

49. Hoerger v. Citizens' St. R. Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 328. Plaintiff signed a gas lease without reading it. Snyder v. Phillips, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 648.

50. Where an illiterate man, relying upon another, was induced to sign a note and mortgage for more than he supposed it to be and more than he owed. Ray v. Baker [Ind.] 74 N. E. 619.

51. Where the grantor relied on the information of his attorney, who said that the deed was "all right and according to a memorandum" which the grantor had furnished, he was not guilty of such negligence in failing to read the deed as to preclude reformation on account of mutual mistake. Shields v. Mongollon Exploration Co. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 539.

52. Benesh v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [N. D.] 103 N. W. 405.

53. A wife who signs a trust deed which is explained to her cannot have it set aside merely because she did not understand its legal effect. McDaniels v. Sammons [Ark.] 86 S. W. 997. Pavement contract made under the mistaken idea that certain acts amendatory of the charter were valid, held void, and plaintiff not entitled to recover balance of such nature as to be equivalent to that lack of notice essential to make one a bona fide purchaser.[54]

Money paid under a mistake of fact may be recovered,[55] but not where plaintiff delays until rights of other parties have become fixed.[56] And the fact that the person making the payment has the means of information at hand and overlooks the same inadvertently is immaterial if the party receiving the money is not entitled to it.[57]

Mistakes in the records and proceedings of courts may be corrected, if no one was misled or injured by them.[58] The supreme court may recall a mandate issued through mistake of fact.[59] Although generally a judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction, rendering a question res judicata between the parties, cannot be reexamined in the court of claims in a case referred under the Tucker Act,[60] yet where it is clearly shown that a mistake in the former proceedings occurred, materially affecting the judgment, and the other court has lost jurisdiction of the case, the court of claims may consider the question.[61]

§ 3. Procedure to obtain relief.[62]—It is the peculiar province of courts of equity to relieve from mistakes and omissions in contracts.[63] Where a mortgagee forecloses and in good faith purchases and goes into possession in ignorance of the existence of the children of the deceased mortgagor, his proper course to correct the mistake is to file a petition for vacation of the proceedings and for leave to file an amended complaint, making the children parties.[64]

It must be alleged that the mistake existed when the agreement sought to be annulled or avoided was made.[65] A pleading, based on the theory that an agree-

due. City of Plattsmouth v. Murphy [Neb.] 105 N. W. 293. If one, with knowledge of the facts but by mistake of law, regards his title to real estate better than another's, he cannot claim for permanent improvements made thereon. Yock v. Mann [W. Va.] 49 S. E. 1019.

For discussion of mistake of law as a ground for relief in equity, see 5 C. L. 1153.

54. Dictum in German Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Tull [C. C. A.] 136 F. 1.

55. Money paid to defendant as attorney for the person entitled to it, after the relationship of attorney and client had been terminated. Girard Trust Co. v. Harrington, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 615. Interest paid on note and mortgage, the payment of which had been assumed under the honest belief that the incumbrance was valid and the payer's title to the property was good could be recovered as a counterclaim in an action on the note. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22.

56. Where in perfect good faith on both sides a master in partition sold a tract of land, according to the description in the ancient title papers and said to contain a certain amount of land, at a fixed price per acre, and no complaint of shortage was made for about a year, after the master's report was filed and the money paid to the parties entitled to it, the purchaser could not recover in assumpsit for the deficiency, which was less than ten per cent. Landreth v. Howell, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 210.

57. Girard Trust Co. v. Harrington, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

58. See, also, Judgments, 6 C. L. 214. Where the petition for the incorporation of a borough was directed inadvertently to be filed in the office of the prothonotary instead of that of the clerk of the quarter sessions, the court could correct the error. La Porte Borough, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 333.

59. See, also, Appeal and Review, 5 C. L. 121. Where by mistake of fact a stipulation for the dismissal of an appeal as to one of the parties was signed, the supreme court has power, during the term, to recall its mandate after its transmission to the trial court. The stipulation was signed upon the false statement of the party that he had settled all matters with appellant. Livesley v. Johnston [Or.] 82 P. 854.

60. Act of March 3, 1887 (1 Supp. Rev. St. 559). Le More & Co.'s Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 484.

61. By mistake the clerk omitted a portion of the evidence on file, from the printed record, and the court would have reviewed its decision had the error been discovered and motion made during the term. Le More & Co.'s Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 484.

62. See 4 C. L. 676.

63. Where the right to recovery depends upon the date of the instrument sued on, a court of law could not disregard the day on the ground that it was erroneous, but a reformation in equity was necessary. Tautphoeus v. Harbor & Suburban Bldg. & Sav. Ass'n, 93 N. Y. S. 916.

64. Investment Securities Co. v. Adams, 37 Wash. 211, 79 P. 625.

65. An answer which alleges that certain timber was bought, but, by mutual mistake of the parties and of the scrivener, only a part of the timber was specified in the agreement, in effect alleges that the mistake existed at the time the agreement was made. Doell v. Schrier [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 600.

As to method of pleading accident or mis-

ment had been incorrectly reduced to writing and was signed without reading, which does not allege any excuse for such failure to read it, or that it was incorrectly read to the signer, fails to show any reason for rescinding the agreement.[66] An allegation that plaintiff entered into a contract through mistake superinduced by defendant's conduct presents an issue of fraud only and not of mistake.[67]

To alter a written contract on the ground of mistake, the evidence must be clear, precise and indubitable,[68] and must show that the mistake was shared by the defendant or was known to him.[69] Mere preponderance of testimony is not sufficient,[70] but the law does not require proof so convincing as to leave no doubt resting on the minds of the jurors; it is enough if there be evidence to satisfy an unprejudiced mind beyond reasonable doubt.[71]

Evidence of a parol agreement is admissible on the issue of mistake, though the agreement itself would have been invalid because not in writing.[72]

MONEY COUNTS; MONEY LENT; MONEY PAID; MONEY RECEIVED; MONOPOLIES; MORTALITY TABLES, see latest topical index.

MORTGAGES.

Scope of topic.—This article is devoted to the mortgage as an instrument and the substantive rights growing from it. The procedure by which mortgages are foreclosed[73] has been fully treated in an earlier topic. The doctrine of notice and take in equity, see Fletcher's Equity Pl. & Pr. p. 130.

66. Hoerger v. Citizens St. R. Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 328.

67. Finks v. Hollis [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 463.

68. Snyder v. Phillips, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 648. Conflicting evidence held insufficient to sustain a decree for the reformation of the description in a deed for alleged mistake. Heffron v. Fogel [Wash.] 82 P. 1003. Where it was claimed that parties were mistaken in supposing that a certain mortgage was paramount to the homestead claim when it was not, because of an alleged fatal defect in the acknowledgment, proof of a mere unsubstantial clerical error therein, was not sufficient to establish the claim. Reed v. Bank of Ukiah [Cal.] 82 P. 845.

69. Evidence insufficient to show that the other party had knowledge of plaintiff's mistake in the value of stock transferred by him in exchange. Wilson v. Wyoming Cattle & Investment Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 338.

70. Fritz v. Fritz [Minn.] 102 N. W. 705.

71. Evidence of the omission by mistake of the words "per annum," in the statement of rent in a gas lease, held sufficient. Snyder v. Phillips, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 648.

72. Where it was claimed that, by mistake, notes given in settlement of an indebtedness included interest in excess of seven per cent. for which there was no written agreement, and hence that a judgment entered thereon by consent should be set aside, evidence of a parol agreement to pay such excess held admissible to show that there was no mistake, though such agreement was invalid. Reed v. Bank of Ukiah [Cal.] 82 P. 845.

73. See Foreclosure of Mortgages on Land, 5 C. L. 1441.

the operation of the recording acts,[74] the application of the statute of frauds,[75] the effect of a mortgage as an incumbrance,[76] and the purchase of land subject to mortgage,[77] are elsewhere treated. Mortgage within this topic means only those of land or interests therein.[78]

§ 1. Nature and elements of mortgages.[79]—A mortgage is a conveyance by way of pledge to secure the payment of a debt[80] or obligation;[81] hence the relation of debtor and creditor must ordinarily exist between the parties.[82] A mortgage may be made to secure future advances.[83] It is only collateral security and a satisfaction of it is not a discharge of the obligation of the contract secured unless the debt is satisfied.[84] The fact that a mortgage is void does not nullify the obligation of the contract secured,[85] and an attempted foreclosure of an invalid mortgage does not extinguish the debt.[86] No particular form of words is necessary to create a mortgage,[87] and the fact that a certain instrument is a mortgage may be established be parol evidence.[88] In most states it does not alienate an estate,[89] but creates a mere lien.[90] A parol trust may attach to a mortgage that the mortgagee shall hold it in trust for his own benefit and for the benefit of another.[91]

Property subject to mortgage.[92]—It may be said that any estate in land may be mortgaged, hence an easement is a mortgageable interest.[93] A purchaser in a conditional sale[94] or a vendee in a contract of sale who has paid a portion of the purchase price[95] has a mortgageable interest. A mortgage may cover after-acquired property[96] and crops not in esse may be the subject of an equitable mortgage and

74. See Notice and Record of Title, 4 C. L. 829.

75. See Frauds, Statute of, 5 C. L. 1550.

76. See Covenants For Title, 5 C. L. 875; Vendors and Purchasers, 4 C. L. 1769.

77. See Vendors and Purchasers, 4 C. L. 1769. See, also, post, § 10.

78. See Chattel Mortgages, 5 C. L. 574; Railroad Mortgages, see Railroads, 4 C. L. 1181.

79. See 4 C. L. 678.

80. See Cyc. Law Dict., "Mortgage." Under Civ. Code, §§ 2042, 2044, defining a mortgage and declaring every transfer other than in trust, executed as security, to be a mortgage an instrument reciting the existence of a debt and conveying land to secure its payment construed to be a mortgage though designated a trust deed. Langmaack v. Keith [S. D.] 103 N. W. 210.

81. Mortgage to secure performance of contract to support. See 5 C. L. 1442, n. 96.

82. A mortgage can be enforced only when it secures payment of a debt. Perkins v. Trinity Realty Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 167.

83. Lamm v. Armstrong [Minn.] 104 N. W. 304.

84. Sale under a mortgage held not a satisfaction of the bond secured. Stricker v. McDonnell [Pa.] 62 A. 520.

85. Fontaine v. Nuse [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 852. Invalidity of the mortgage does not render the debt unenforceable. Dever v. Selz [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 113, 87 S. W. 891.

86. Dever v. Selz [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 113, 87 S. W. 891.

87. A conveyance as security is a mortgage regardless of the letter of the instrument. Smith v. Pfluger [Wis.] 105 N. W. 476. Building and loan contract providing for re-entry in case of default by the borrower and for rights of a mortgagee in the association, held to be a mortgage and subject to foreclosure as such. Preston v. D'Ambrosio, 46 Misc. 523, 95 N. Y. S. 70.

88. Either written or parol evidence. Smith v. Pfluger [Wis.] 105 N. W. 476.

89. A mortgagor in possession may maintain an action against the mortgagee to establish his title under Ky. St. 1903, § 11, providing that any person having legal title and possession may maintain such action. Sheffield v. Day [Ky.] 90 S. W. 545. The taking of a mortgage is not a purchase, location or holding of real property within Civ. Code, § 299, prohibiting a corporation until it has complied with certain conditions from purchasing, locating or holding. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 P. 1080. An indemnity mortgage to a surety gives him no interest in the land. Dyer v. Jacoway [Ark.] 88 S. W. 901.

90. Rev. St. 1829, § 57, tit. 1, c. 5, p. 312, pt. 3, vol. 2, taking from the mortgagee the right to bring ejectment, restricts his interest to a lien. Becker v. McCrea, 94 N. Y. S. 20. It does not transfer title. It is a mere lien for security (First State Bank v. Sibley County Bank [Minn.] 105 N. W. 485); hence a judgment against a mortgagor acquired before his equity of redemption has expired is a lien on the premises until a foreclosure decree ripens into title (Kaston v. Storey [Or.] 80 P. 217).

91. First State Bank v. Sibley County Bank [Minn.] 105 N. W. 485.

92. See 4 C. L. 678.

93. A franchise to maintain watermains in streets is an easement which may be mortgaged. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co., 139 F. 661.

94. Washington Trust Co. v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 94 N. Y. S. 495.

95. McWhorter v. Stein [Ala.] 39 So. 617.

become impressed with a lien as soon as they come into existence.[97] In Texas a homestead cannot be mortgaged[98] except for "materials," etc., and then only when there is an express written contract executed by husband and wife showing that they are for the benefit of the homestead.[99] It may be part of the deed of trust.[1]

§ 2. General requisites and validity.[2]—A mortgage must be executed by one who has some interest[3] or apparent interest in the property[4] or authority to mortgage it,[5] and though a mortgagor appears to have an interest, if a mortgagee has actual notice that he has none, he acquires no lien;[6] otherwise, however, if he takes in good faith.[7] A mortgage on after-acquired property charges it when acquired with an equitable lien.[8]

96. Washington Trust Co. v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 94 N. Y. S. 495.

97. Creech v. Long [S. C.] 51 S. E. 614.

98. Dignowity v. Baumblatt [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 834. A subsequent abandonment would not give validity to the mortgage. Id.

99, 1. Walker v. Woody [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 957, 89 S. W. 789.

2. See 4 C. L. 679.

3. A mortgage by one who surreptitiously obtained an undelivered deed to himself and recorded it is void. Kay v. Gray, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 536. A mortgage executed by one in possession under no claim of right and having no title to secure a loan used to pay the purchase price creates only an equitable lien inferior to the rights of bona fide subsequent purchasers. Donovan v. Twist, 93 N. Y. S. 990. An unauthorized mortgage by one who holds the property in trust for himself and others is valid as to himself but void as to others. Sternfels v. Watson, 139 F. 505.

4. Where one takes title to a tract but is bound to deed a portion of it to another, but before doing so mortgages the entire tract, the mortgage is binding on the portion he is bound to convey for a balance of the debt remaining after applying the proceeds of a sale of the tract belonging to the mortgagor. Hart v. Issaacsen, 56 W. Va. 314, 49 S. E. 254. A bona fide purchaser from a grantee in a deed intended as a mortgage acquires a good title. Bean v. Venable, 27 Ky. L. R. 927, 87 S. W. 262.

5. A trustee with power to "take charge of, manage and control, and use for the benefit of" a person named has power to mortgage. Ely v. Pike, 115 Ill. App. 284. Trustees with power to do all things necessary for the proper care of the trust property have authority to mortgage it for funds with which to settle a contest of the trust. Fidelity Trust Co. v. Hawkins [Ky.] 90 S. W. 249. Authority in the directors of a corporation to mortgage all its property is authority to mortgage after-acquired property. Cummings v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 353. A bank organized under the state banking act has authority under Rev. Codes 1899, § 3230, to receive a mortgage to secure past indebtedness as well as for contemplated advances agreed upon. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760. Where land is conveyed to one for the benefit of herself and another and she mortgages it to obtain funds to pay off a lien thereon, the interests of both are bound by the mortgage. Hentig v. Williams [Cal. App.] 82 P. 546.

NOTE. Agent's authority to mortgage: Power to mortgage authorizes the execution of mortgage with a power of sale if it is the custom of the country to include such power in mortgages. Leigh v. Lloyd, 35 Beav. 455; Wilson v. Troup, 2 Cow. [N. Y.] 195. But he has not power to insert provisions not usually inserted. Jessup v. City Bank of Racine, 14 Wis. 331; Pacific Rolling Mill Co. v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 7 Sawy, 61, 8 F. 852. Thus a power to mortgage to secure a specific debt does not authorize the insertion of a provision for attorney's fees. Pacific Rolling Mill Co. v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 7 Sawy. 61, 8 F. 852. A power to mortgage does not imply a power to give a second mortgage (Skaggs v. Murchison, 63 Tex. 348), nor give a power to mortgage for his own benefit or that of a third person (Nippel v. Hammond, 4 Colo. 211; Wolfey v. Rising, 8 Kan. 297; Greenwood v. Spring, 54 Barb. [N. Y.] 375). Nor does such power authorize him to sell the property (Coppage v. Barnett, 34 Miss. 621), nor to execute a note for the amount of the mortgage (Mylins v. Copes, 23 Kan. 617. Compare Taylor v. Hudgins, 42 Tex. 244). See 1 Clark & Skyles on Agency, p. 593, et seq.

6. A mortgage by a husband on lands belonging to his wife creates no lien. One who accepts such a mortgage with notice that the deed whereby the title was held was erroneously made out to the husband and wife jointly acquires no lien. Bates v. Frazier, 27 Ky. L. R. 576, 85 S. W. 757. Where an agent by fraud induces an ignorant principal to deed land to him, the title of the principal is superior to mortgages executed by the agent to persons with notice of the circumstances under which he acquired title. DeLeonis v. Hammel [Cal. App.] 82 P. 349. One who with notice that the deed to his mortgagor is voidable takes a mortgage to secure an antecedent debt acquires no lien as against heirs and representatives of the grantors of the mortgagor. Rogers v. Tompkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 161, 87 S. W. 379.

7. The lien of one who takes a mortgage without notice that the land is the separate property of the mortgagor's wife is not affected by subsequent notice of such fact. Barrett v. Eastham Bros. [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 1057. One who acquires title to property by fraud and undue influence may give a valid mortgage to a bona fide mortgagee. Swanstrom v. Day, 93 N. Y. S. 192. Mental incapacity of an undue influence exercised upon a mortgagor's grantor does not affect the rights of a bona fide mort-

It is not essential to the validity of a mortgage that there should be a written application for the loan it was intended to secure,[9] nor if there were such application, that it contain a description of the property.[10] The parties must be designated,[11] but a mortgage unenforceable at law because of the insufficient designation of the mortgagee is good in equity.[12]

Description.[13]—A description by which the premises may be identified is sufficient.[14]

The consideration.[15]—A mortgage like other contracts must be based on a consideration.[16] The consideration must be legal or the mortgage is unenforceable;[17] but where the consideration is made up of several distinct transactions, some of which are legal and others illegal, the mortgage may be upheld for such consideration as was legal if it is separable,[18] and if the mortgage was based on a legal consideration it is no defense to an action to foreclose that an assignment of it as security was based on an illegal consideration.[19] Where the original consideration is valid and is contracted prior to the execution of the note, a mortgage given to secure the debt is valid though the note is void for want of a revenue stamp.[20]

Execution.—Noncompliance with conditions essential to entitle the instrument to record does not render it void.[21] A defectively executed mortgage may be ratified.[22] A mortgagor may be estopped to deny ratification of a defectively executed mortgage.[23] The signature[24] must be genuine.[25] A mortgage on the homestead must be joined in by the wife.[26] Delivery is essential,[27] acknowledgment[28] is not.[29] gagee. Parsons v. Crocker [Iowa] 105 N. W. 162.

8. Cummings v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 353.

9, 10. Pickett v. Gleed [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 946.

11. Corporation held to be the beneficiary of a trust deed in which its secretary and treasurer was named as beneficiary. Collier v. Alexander [Ala.] 38 So. 244. That a deed runs to the manager of a corporation instead of to the corporation itself does not impair its validity as a mortgage in the corporation's favor. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf [Cal.] 81 P. 1077.

12. Where it was made to a partnership without the individual names of the partners. Carpenter v. Zarbuck [Ark.] 86 S. W. 299.

13. See 4 C. L. 679. See, also, Deeds of Conveyance, for fuller treatment. 5 C. L. 964.

14. Description in a trust deed held sufficient. Scott v. Gordon [Mo. App.] 83 S. W. 550. "72 acres situated near Hamlin, the same bought of Land Company, also twelve and one half acres also situated near Hamlin and the same conveyed to B. F. Curry by James F. Carroll Jr." and like description of two other tracts, held a sufficient description. Holley's Ex'r v. Curry [W. Va.] 51 S. E. 135.

15. See 4 C. L. 679; see, also, Contracts, 5 C. L. 679.

16. Extension of time for payment of a debt is sufficient. First State Bank v. Sibley County Bank [Minn.] 105 N. W. 485. A mortgage to secure an overdue debt of a third person is based on a sufficient consideration. Perkins v. Trinity Realty Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 167. A note and mortgage are presumed to rest on a sufficient consideration. First Nat. Bank v. Bennett, 215 Ill. 398, 74 N. E. 405. Evidence sufficient to show that the consideration for a mortgage was advanced by the mortgagee and not by a firm composed of the mortgagee and mortgagor. Hubbard v. Mulligan [Colo.] 82 P. 783. Evidence sufficient to show that a mortgage was based on a sufficient consideration. Dodsworth v. Sullivan [Minn.] 103 N. W. 719.

Evidence sufficient to show that a bond and mortgage were executed without consideration. First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105 App. Div. 193, 94 N. Y. S. 767. Evidence held to show that a note and mortgage were executed without consideration and should be canceled. Campbell v. Miller [Neb.] 103 N. W. 434.

17. Compounding a felony. Corbett v. Clute, 137 N. C. 546, 50 S. E. 216. That the consideration was to stop a threatened criminal prosecution is no defense unless an agreement not to prosecute if the mortgage was given is shown. Moyer v. Dodson, 212 Pa. 344, 61 A 937.

18, 19. Conradt v. Lepper [Wyo.] 81 P. 307.

20. Morris v. Linton [Neb.] 104 N. W. 927.

21. Rev. St. 1899, § 2741, amended by Sess. Laws 1905, p. 20, c. 24, requiring mortgages to be executed in the presence of one witness, does not affect the validity of an unwitnessed mortgage as between the parties. Conradt v. Lepper [Wyo.] 81 P. 307. Such act is only necessary to entitle the instrument to be recorded. Id.

22. The act of a scrivener in filing in and delivering an executed blank mortgage is ratified and confirmed where the mortgagor subsequently and with full knowledge of the fact executed and delivered a confirmatory mortgage. Carr v. McColgan [Md.] 60 A. 606.

23. As where he accepts the benefits of Recordation.[30]—A mortgage is a conveyance within the recording statutes,[31] but as a general rule recordation is not necessary as between the parties nor as to third persons with actual notice,[32] but only to preserve the rights of the mortgagee as against subsequent bona fide purchasers.[33] In some states it is provided by statute that a mortgage must be recorded.[34] The rule requiring mortgages to be recorded within a certain period cannot be evaded by mere subterfuge.[35] An absolute deed intended as a mortgage is properly recorded in the book provided for the record of deeds.[36]

§ 3. Absolute deed as mortgage.[37]—An absolute deed, intended by both parties as security for a debt, is a mortgage[38] and does not pass the legal title.[39] It must have been intended as a mortgage at its inception,[40] and the relation of debtor and creditor must exist between the parties.[41] A deed may be made to secure present indebtedness and future advances, though no fixed sum is mentioned.[42] Whether a deed was intended as a mortgage must be determined from all the circumstances.[43]

Mortgage or conditional sale.[44]—If the nature of the transaction is doubtful, a mortgage will be favored in construction;[45] but there must be an intention to the loan, pays interest thereon, asks indulgences and participates in the mortgage sale without suggesting a defect in the mortgage. Carr v. McColgan [Md.] 60 A. 606.

24. See 4 C. L. 680.

25. Evidence insufficient to show that the mortgagor's signature was a forgery. Bennett v. Edgar, 93 N. Y. S. 203.

26. Bates v. Frazier, 27 Ky. L. R. 576, 85 S. W. 757.

27. Evidence sufficient to show a delivery. Dodsworth v. Sullivan [Minn.] 103 N. W. 719; Firth Co. v. South Carolina Loan & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 122 F. 569. Payment of a portion of the debt is an acknowledgment of the delivery of the mortgage. Moyer v. Dodson, 212 Pa. 344, 61 A. 937.

28. See 4 C. L. 680; see, also, Acknowledgments, 5 C. L. 29.

29. As between the parties a mortgage is good without acknowledgment. Lynch v. Cade [Wash.] 83 P. 118.

30. See 4 C. L. 680. See, also, Notice and Record of Title, 4 C. L. 829.

31. Corbett v. Woolverton [Mont.] 81 P. 4.

32. Girard Trust Co. v. Baird, 212 Pa. 41, 61 A. 507.

33. Under the rule that a mortgage creates a lien only and not an estate, a mortgagee who does not record a purchase-money mortgage until after the mortgagor becomes bankrupt has no priority over general creditors. In re Lukens, 138 F. 188.

34. Rev. Code Civ. Proc. § 637 expressly provides that a mortgage and its assignment must be recorded to entitle the mortgagee or assignee to foreclose. Langmaack v. Keith [S. D.] 103 N. W. 210.

35. Not by a renewal of the mortgage every 45 days. In re Noel, 137 F. 694.

36. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760.

37. See 4 C. L. 682.

38. Where it clearly appears that a deed was made to secure a loan, it will be treated as a mortgage regardless of the form of the contract. Garvin's Adm'x v. Vincent, 27 Ky. L. R. 1076, 87 S. W. 804. Where one executes a mortgage and at the same time and as part of the same transaction a deed to be placed in escrow and delivered on default in payment of the debt, such deed is a mortgage. Plummer v. Ilse [Wash.] 82 P. 1009.

39. Absolute deeds intended as mortgages create only a lien, not an estate. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf [Cal.] 81 P. 1077. Persons with notice claiming through the grantee acquire no rights as against the mortgagor. De Leonis v. Hammel [Cal. App.] 82 P. 349.

40. Subsequent transactions are important only as authorizing inferences of the intention at the time. Wilson v. Terry [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 310. Admissions by the grantee made subsequent to the execution of the deed must be very clear and convincing. Id. The intention of the parties is the controlling consideration. James v. Mallory [Ark.] 89 S. W. 472. Evidence of the intention with which the grantee received the property is admissible. Laub v. Romans [Iowa] 105 N. W. 102.

41. It must appear that the relation of debtor and creditor existed. Rankin v. Rankin, 111 Ill. App. 403. The test is, does the relation of debtor and creditor exist? Samuelson v. Mickey [Neb.] 103 N. W. 671. The principal test is whether the relation of debtor and creditor existed after the transaction. Plummer v. Ilse [Wash.] 82 P. 1009.

42. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760.

43. Where on maturity of a mortgage the mortgagor executed a deed to the mortgagee and at the same time a contract was executed reciting that the deed was intended as better security and that on payment of the deed the land should be reconveyed but the grantee went into possession, made improvements, paid taxes and interest for more than seven years and the grantor did not pay interest on the debt or taxes, the deed was held an absolute one. Hesser v. Brown [Wash.] 82 P. 934. The intention of the parties gathered from all the surrounding circumstances is the test. Miller v. Miller [Md.] 61 A. 210.

44. See 4 C. L. 683.

45. Where it is doubtful whether a con-create a mortgage and not a deed,[46] and the relation of debtor and creditor must exist.[47]

Once a mortgage always a mortgage.[48]—A mortgage cannot be rendered anything else by contemporaneous agreement,[49] and in order to sustain a transaction by which the equity of redemption is cut off it must be fair and free from imposition practiced by the mortgagee.[50]

The proceeding to establish a mortgage is equitable,[51] but can be maintained only in courts of general jurisdiction.[52] Equity may declare a deed absolute a mortgage,[53] even though the mortgagor did not at the time have title to the land, and the title when acquired was put in the name of a third person,[54] and may ascertain the obligation it was intended to secure if it is not described in the deed,[55] even though the manner of creating a mortgage is prescribed by statute.[56] The grantee in an absolute deed intended as a mortgage who quitclaims to the grantor and retains a vendor's lien is not estopped by foreclosing the lien to assert that the transaction was only a mortgage.[57] The nature of the instrument is the only issue in such a proceeding.[58] Two parties having the same interest in having a deed de-veyance and contract for resale was a mortgage or conditional sale, a mortgage will be favored in construction. Rankin v. Rankin, 111 Ill. App. 403. Where a creditor refused to make further loans unless his debtor made him a deed but stated that all he wanted was his money and would reconvey on payment of the debt, the transaction amounted to a mortgage. Gerson v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 198. Transaction by which one took title under an agreement to reconvey on payment of the debt held a mortgage. Sheffield v. Day [Ky.] 90 S. W. 545.

46. A transaction by which one who refused to take a mortgage takes absolute title and gives a bond for reconveyance upon terms and conditions set forth is not a mortgage. Conner v. Clapp, 37 Wash. 299, 79 P. 929. Where a deed was intended as a conveyance of the fee in satisfaction of a pre-existing debt, a contemporaneous agreement for an immediate resale on credit for the amount of the debt does not show the deed to be a mortgage. Hays v. Emerson [Ark.] 87 S. W. 1027. A quit-claim deed by a mortgagor and a contract by the mortgagee to reconvey on payment of the debt do not constitute an equitable mortgage. Bailey v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 188 Mo. 483, 87 S. W. 1003. Where one purchases land for another and takes title in his own name, agreeing to convey on payment of the purchase price, the transaction does not constitute a mortgage. Kean v. Landrum [S. C.] 52 S. E. 421.

47. A transaction by which a mortgagee in an overdue mortgage of premises of less value than the debt takes an absolute deed and cancels the debt but agrees to reconvey on payment of the debt, accrued taxes and interest within three years is not a mortgage. Dabney v. Smith, 38 Wash. 40, 80 P. 199. An absolute deed given in partial satisfaction of a debt and a contemporaneous parol agreement that notes given for the balance should be canceled if the property enhanced in value to a certain extent within a given time, does not constitute a mortgage. Pearson v. Dancy [Ala.] 39 So. 474.

48. See 4 C. L. 683. A provision in a consent decree constituting a mortgage that defendant shall stand debarred absolutely does not amount to a strict foreclosure. Bunn v. Braswell [N. C.] 51 S. E. 927.

49. A mortgage cannot be made anything else by agreement of the parties made at the time of the execution of the deed. Plummer v. Ilse [Wash.] 82 P. 1009.

50. Day v. Davis [Md.] 61 A. 576.

51. See 4 C. L. 684. A reconveyance of property held under an absolute deed intended as a mortgage will not be decreed until all sums secured have been paid or tendered. Merchants State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760. A suit to have a deed declared a mortgage is not barred by laches in 10 years. Gerson v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So 198. Code Civ. Proc. § 338, subd. 4, requiring action for relief on the ground of fraud to be brought within 3 years, does not apply to an action to quiet title against a deed intended as a mortgage. DeLeonis v. Hammel [Cal. App.] 82 P. 349.

52. The county and probate courts have not jurisdiction to declare a deed to be a mortgage. Rook v. Rook, 111 Ill. App. 398.

53. Hurd v. Chase [Me.] 62 A. 660. An absolute deed may be shown to be a mortgage to secure future advances and the performance of contractual obligations. Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561.

54. Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561.

55. Hurd v. Chase [Me.] 62 A. 660.

56. Civ. Code, § 2922, providing that a mortgage can only be created by a writing executed with the formality required in case of deeds, does not prevent an absolute deed being declared a mortgage. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf [Cal.] 81 P. 1077. The indebtedness intended to be secured may also be shown. Id.

57. James v. Mallory [Ark.] 89 S. W. 472.

58. Allegations in respect to usury in a bill to have a deed declared a mortgage are immaterial. Gerson v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 198. In a suit to have a deed declared a mortgage, where the defendant asserts also a tax title, the plaintiff is not required to allege and prove payment or tender of the taxes as required by statute where it is clared a mortgage, who own the land jointly and are liable for the debt the deed was given to secure, may join in a suit to have it declared a mortgage[59] and a husband who executed a deed intended as a mortgage and thereafter conveyed the property to his wife is a necessary party to a suit to have such deed declared a mortgage.[60]

Evidence.[61]—One who asserts an absolute deed to be a mortgage has the burden of proving it.[62] The evidence must be clear, satisfactory and convincing.[63] As a general rule the fact may be established by parol evidence;[64] but in Pennsylvania, by statute, there must be a written defeasance[65] recorded within sixty days from date.[66]

§ 4. Equitable mortgages.[67]—An equitable mortgage is a transaction to which equity attaches the character of a mortgage.[68] An equitable mortgage results where sought to enjoin collection or sale of property for taxes. Shepard v. Vincent, 38 Wash. 493, 80 P. 777.

59. Gerson v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 198.

60. Marbury Lumber Co. v. Posey [Ala.] 38 So. 242.

61. See 3 C. L. 684.

62. Hays v. Emerson [Ark.] 87 S. W. 1027.

63. Rankin v. Rankin, 111 Ill. App. 403; Hurd v. Chase [Me.] 62 A. 660; Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561. An absolute deed will not be declared a mortgage upon mere conjecture, however reasonable, or upon unsubstantial evidence, however suggestive. Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. v. Jones [Minn.] 103 N. W. 1017.

Evidence insufficient to show that a deed from husband to wife was intended as a mortgage. Wilson v. Terry [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 310. To show that a deed was intended as a mortgage. Steele v. Steele, 112 Ill. App. 409; Miller v. Miller [Md.] 61 A. 211; Samuelson v. Mickey [Neb.] 103 N. W. 671; Rankin v. Rankin, 216 Ill. 132, 74 N. E. 763; To show that the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee existed. Allen v. Ellis [Wis.] 104 N. W. 739.

Evidence sufficient to show that a deed was intended as a mortgage. Day v. Davis [Md.] 61 A. 576; McCorkle v. Richards, 112 Ill. App. 495; Hoskins v. Hoskins, 27 Ky. L. R. 980, 87 S. W. 320. To show that an assignment of rights under a contract for the purchase of land was for the purpose of security. Laub v. Romans [Iowa] 105 N. W. 102. Conflicting evidence as to whether a deed was given as security held to raise a question for the jury. Tappen v. Eshelman, 164 Ind. 338, 73 N. E. 688.

64. Miller v. Miller [Md.] 61 A. 211. Parol evidence is admissible notwithstanding the statute of frauds. Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561.

65. Sterck v. Germantown Homestead Co., 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 336; Bank of Commerce v. Peace, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 643.

66. Safe Deposit & Title Guaranty Co. v. Linton [Pa.] 62 A. 566.

67. See 4 C. L. 685.

68. An assignment by a vendor of an executory contract of sale as security for the payment of a debt due the assignee amounts to a mortgage on the assignee's interest to the extent of the purchase price unpaid. Lamm v. Armstrong [Minn.] 104 N. W. 304. A contract whereby money advanced was to be used in buying land to be taken in the name of a third person as security for the repayment of the price and other advances, held an equitable mortgage. Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561. Where land was contracted to be conveyed under an oral agreement that if the vendee paid the amount of his note to the bank from which he borrowed the money to pay for the land the deed was to run to him, otherwise to the bank, the bank has a lien on the premises. Beer v. Wisner [Neb.] 104 N. W. 757. A consent judgment that defendant "has an equity to redeem" and on failure to do so shall stand debarred establishes the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee. Bunn v. Braswell [N. C.] 51 S. E. 927. A lien reserved in a conveyance to secure payment of a balance may be treated as a mortgage. Conveyance of irrigation works. Almeria Irr. Canal Co. v. Tzschuck Canal Co., 67 Neb. 290, 93 N. W. 174. Purchaser for debtor at judicial sale held entitled to retain possession where debtor practiced fraud in procuring him to purchase. Cupp v. Lester [Va.] 51 S. E. 840.

NOTE. Agreements for security (equitable mortgages): In equity, any agreement in writing, made upon a valid consideration, however informal, by which an intention is shown that certain land shall be a security for the payment of money, creates an equitable lien upon that land. 3 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 1237; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 Law. Ed. 865; Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 Law. Ed. 999; Donald v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 534, 73 Am. Dec. 431; Bell v. Pelt, 51 Ark. 433, 14 Am. St. Rep. 57, 4 L. R. A. 247; Love v. Sierra Nevada Lake Water & Min. Co., 32 Cal. 639, 91 Am. Dec. 602; Cotterell v. Long, 20 Ohio, 464; Pinch v. Anthony, 8 Allen [Mass.] 536; Cummings v. Jackson, 55 N. J. Eq. 805; Wayt v. Carwithen, 21 W. Va. 516. See Perry v. Missions of Protestant Episcopal Church, 102 N. Y. 99, Kirchwey's Cas. 135. To such an agreement the term "equitable mortgage" is frequently applied, the instrument being, for most purposes, at least, equivalent to a regular mortgage in the view of a court of equity, though utterly null and void at law. Accordingly, one may create an equitable lien on land by an agreement in terms pledging or giving a lien on the land (Chase v. Peck, 21 N. Y. 581), and may, by a mere indorsement on a note to the effect that it is a charge on land, make it such in legal effect one refuses to execute a mortgage pursuant to his agreement to do so,[69] or where (Peckham v. Haddock, 36 Ill. 38). So, a power of attorney authorizing one to collect the rents of land belonging to the donor of the power, and to apply them on a debt, or for other specific purposes, has been regarded as creating an equitable lien on the land (Joseph Smith Co. v. McGuinness, 14 R. I. 59; Spooner v. Sandilands, 1 Younge & C. 390; Cradock v. Scottish Provident Institution, 63 Law J. Ch. 15; Abbott v. Stratten, 3 Jones & L. 603). A power to sell land and apply the proceeds on a debt has also been regarded as creating such a lien (American Loan & Trust Co. v. Billings, 58 Minn. 187), as has an agreement that a certain debt shall be paid out of the price to be paid for certain land (Johnson v. Johnson, 40 Md. 189; Pinch v. Anthony, 8 Allen [Mass.] 536).

An assignment, for purposes of security, by a vendee of land, of his contract rights in the land, is regarded as creating a lien on the land, or, rather, on his equitable interest in the land. Hays v. Hall, 4 Port. [Ala.] 374, 30 Am. Dec. 530; Gamble v. Ross, 88 Mich. 315; Russell's Appeal, 15 Pa. 319; Hackett v. Watts, 138 Mo. 502. Likewise, when one who furnishes the money for the purchase of land by another, by agreement with the latter, takes the title from the vendor, to hold until his advance is repaid, he has an equitable lien to secure such repayment. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Slee, 123 Ill. 57; Dryden v. Hanway, 31 Md. 254; Barnett v. Nelson, 46 Iowa, 495.

An agreement to give a mortgage on land is also regarded in equity as creating a lien on the land, on the principle that equity regards that as done which ought to be done. Bridgeport Electric & Ice Co. v. Meader [C. C. A.] 72 F. 115; Sprague v. Cochran, 144 N. Y. 104; In re Petition of Howe, 1 Paige [N. Y.] 125, 19 Am. Dec. 395; Remington v. Higgins, 54 Cal. 620; Carter v. Holman, 60 Mo. 498.

The term "equitable mortgage" might well be restricted to these cases of equitable liens arising from a contract to make a legal mortgage, since in such a case there is a right to have the contract specifically performed by the execution of a legal mortgage, in which respect this class of equitable liens differs from the other classes described in this note. Marshall v. Shrewsbury, 10 Ch. App. 250, 254; Matthews v. Goodday, 31 Law J. Ch. 282. In this country, however, where a legal mortgage is foreclosed usually by sale, and not by a decree of strict foreclosure, there would be no great advantage in exchanging such an equitable lien for a legal mortgage.

An important application of the principle that equity will carry out the intention to give a security is seen in the case of an instrument intended as a valid and legal mortgage, which though insufficient as such, owing to some defect of form or execution, will, in equity, be regarded as creating a lien or "equitable mortgage." Burgh v. Francis, Finch, 28, Kirchwey's Cas. 24; Love v. Sierra Nevada Lake Water & Min. Co., 32 Cal. 639, 91 Am. Dec. 602; Peers v. McLaughlin, 88 Cal. 294, 22 Am. St. Rep. 306; Price v. McDonald, 1 Md. 414, 54 Am. Dec. 657; McQuie v. Peay, 58 Mo. 58; Gale v. Morris, 30 N. J. Eq. 285; Sprague v. Cochran, 144 N. Y. 104; Bank of Muskingum v. Carpenter's Adm'rs, 7 Ohio, 21, 28 Am. Dec. 616; Delaire v. Keenan, 3 Desaus. [S. C.] 74, 4 Am. Dec. 604. Such a case arises when the mortgage is without the proper seal (Sanders v. McDonald, 63 Md. 503; Bullock v. Whipp, 15 R. I. 195; McClurg v. Phillips, 49 Mo. 315), or is not witnessed as required by the statute (Moore v. Thomas, 1 Or. 201).

In order that an equitable lien be thus created on land by agreement, it is necessary that the land itself be specified in the instrument creating the lien (Mornington v. Keane, 2 De Gex & J. 292; Borden v. Croak, 131 Ill. 68, 19 Am. St. Rep. 23; Adams v. Johnson, 41 Miss. 258; Lee v. Cole, 17 Or. 559), and that the intention clearly appear that the land is to be security for the performance of the obligation.

Deposit of title deeds: In England it is a well-established doctrine that if the title deeds to land are deposited by a debtor with his creditor, such deposit is evidence of an agreement to create a charge on the land, which equity will enforce. Story, Eq. Jur. § 1020; Russel v. Russel, 1 Brown Ch. 269, 1 White & T. Lead. Cas. Eq. 931, Kirchwey's Cas. 110. The deposit of the deeds does not itself create a charge, but is merely evidence, with other circumstances, of an intention to create one. Norris v. Wilkinson, 12 Ves. 192; Chapman v. Chapman, 13 Beav. 308; Ashburner, Mortgages, 26. Consequently, a deposit merely to enable the lender to prepare a regular mortgage is not sufficient to create a lien (Norris v. Wilkinson, 12 Ves. 192; Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De Gex & J. 614, 651; Hutzler v. Philips, 26 S. C. 136, 4 Am. St. Rep. 687), and is regarded as a part performance taking the agreement out of the Statute of Frauds (Russel v. Russel, 1 Brown Ch. 269, Kirchwey's Cas. 110).

A lien of this character has been recognized in a number of judicial opinions in this country, usually, however, in cases not directly involving the validity of such a lien. Richards v. Leaming, 27 Ill. 431; Hall v. McDuff, 24 Me. 311; Gale's Ex'rs v. Morris, 29 N. J. Eq. 224; Rockwell v. Hobby, 2 Sandf. Ch. [N. Y.] 9; Chase v. Peck, 21 N. Y. 584, Kirchwey's Cas., 124; Carpenter v. Black Hawk Gold Min. Co., 65 N. Y. 43, 51; Hackett v. Reynolds, 4 R. I. 512; Hutzler v. Phillips, 26 S. C. 137, 4 Am. St. Rep. 687; Jarvis v. Dutcher, 16 Wis. 307. In others, such a deposit is not regarded as creating a lien, on the ground that the contrary view is inconsistent with the system of conveyancing and registration in force in this country, and also involves a violation of the Statute of Frauds. Lehman v. Collins, 69 Ala. 127; Vanmeter v. McFaddin, 8 B. Mon. [Ky.] 437; Gardner v. McClure, 6 Minn. 250 (Gil. 167); Hackett v. Watts, 138 Mo. 502; Bloomfield State Bank v. Miller, 55 Neb. 243; Shitz v. Diffenbach, 3 Pa. 233; Meador v. Meador, 3 Heisk. [Tenn.] 562.

It would seem that, as between the original parties, and as against purchasers with notice, the only possible objection to an agreement for a lien evidenced by such a deposit of title deeds lies in the fact that a mortgage is not executed in the manner prescribed by law,[70] but not from an agreement to execute an agricultural lien.[71]

§ 5. Nature and incidents of trust deeds as mortgages.[72]—A deed of trust passes the legal title,[73] but the refusal or disability of a trustee to perform his trust is equivalent in equity to a renunciation of it.[74] In those states wherein trustees and beneficiaries are treated as bona fide purchasers for value,[75] they take free from all prior secret liens and equities and all subsequent alienations of and incumbrances on the trust property.[76] In Alabama a married woman may with the consent of her husband execute a trust deed of her property to secure her debts.[77] The beneficiary is not affected by a subsequent agreement, made without his knowledge, by his grantor with the grantee in a second trust deed to protect the latter's interest.[78] A provision for the appointment of a substitute trustee in case of absence of the original trustee or his refusing to act justifies such appointment in case of absence[79] without request on the original to execute his trust.[80] Authority to appoint a substitute trustee cannot be delegated.[81] An instrument executed by a corporation substituting a trustee need not be under the corporate seal.[82]

Powers and duties of the trustee.[83]—A trustee is the mere agent of the parties to carry into effect the contract between them,[84] and has no powers except those specifically conferred by the deed.[85]

it is not evidenced by a writing complying with the statute of frauds. If an agreement for a lien is so evidenced, the fact that there is a simultaneous deposit of title deeds does not affect the validity of the agreement as creating a lien; and the English cases merely take the further step of regarding the deposit as sufficient part performance to take the agreement out of the statute.—From Tiffany, Real Property, p. 1282, et seq.

69. One who refuses to execute a mortgage to secure overdue debts as he has agreed to do cannot complain of a decree charging the indebtedness on the land. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 162 Ind. 430, 70 N. E. 535. Where one advances money for the purpose of purchasing a certain tract of land under an agreement that the purchaser will execute a mortgage when he acquires title, and the purchaser refuses to comply with his agreement, an equitable mortgage is created. Foster Lumber Co. v. Harlan County Bank [Kan.] 80 P. 49.

70. Not executed in the presence of witnesses. Conradt v. Lepper [Wyo.] 81 P. 307. A writing in all respects sufficient as a deed of trust except that it is not under seal is an equitable mortgage. Holley's Ex'r v. Curry [W. Va.] 51 S. E. 135.

71. Creech v. Long [S. C.] 51 S. E. 614.

72. See 4 C. L. 686.

73. Collier v. Alexander [Ala.] 38 So. 244.

74. Hence the removal of one who has absconded or removed from the jurisdiction, impairs no vested or contractual right. Marshall v. Kraak, 23 App. D. C. 129.

75, 76. Gilbert Bros. & Co. v. Lawrence Bros., 56 W. Va. 281, 49 S. E. 155.

77. The Married Woman's Act of 1887 conferred power on a married woman to execute a deed of trust of her property to secure her debts her husband evidencing his consent by joining. Collier v. Alexander [Ala.] 38 So. 244. Under this act it is not necessary that a non-resident husband join. Id.

78. Title acquired under sale under first deed not affected by grantor's failure to pay off first deed or to notify grantee in second deed of foreclosure proceedings. New York Store Mercantile Co. v. Thurmond, 186 Mo. 410, 85 S. W. 333.

79. Justifies such appointment on undisputed evidence of residence in another state prior to the maturity of the note, as continued residence there is presumed. Ward v. Forrester [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 751.

80. A provision for the appointment of a substitute trustee to make a sale if the trustee is absent from the county justifies such appointment in case of absence without request on the original trustee to make the sale. Ward v. Forrester [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 751.

81. Authority in the holder of the note secured to appoint a substitute trustee does not authorize an agent of the holder to make the appointment. Evidence held to show that the appointment was made by an agent. Wilder v. Moren [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 51, 89 S. W. 1087.

82. Brown v. British American Mortg. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 312.

83. See 4 C. L. 686.

84. Hence no property right is impaired by a statutory provision that the legal title shall not descend to his heirs. Marshall v. Kraak, 23 App. D. C. 129. Service by publication is not necessary to support a decree substituting a trustee in place of one who has absconded or departed from the jurisdiction. Under D. C. Code, §§ 534-538. Id.

85. Cannot receive payment of the debt and discharge the debtor unless such power is conferred by the deed. Miller v. Mitchell

Sale of premises.[86]—A sale cannot be demanded by the beneficiary after he has parted with his interest.[87] In Alabama a substitute trustee cannot make a sale until the instrument substituting him has been recorded.[88] The provision requiring the sale to be made in subdivisions may be waived.[89]

The security deed[90] is peculiar to the state of Georgia.[91] A provision for accelerating maturity should not be so construed as to work hardship on the borrower where he has made a bona fide effort to comply with his covenant.[92] A covenant that the borrower is to keep the buildings insured, the policies to be payable to the lender, is not a covenant to pay premiums in advance.[93] A transfer of the debt by the grantee does not in the absence of a conveyance pass to the transferee title to the land,[94] but he acquires an equitable interest in the security effectuated by the deed.[95] After the debt has been transferred the grantee holds title for the benefit of the transferee.[96] Before execution on the debt is levied against the grantor the grantee must reconvey the land and have the deed recorded,[97] and where execution is levied and the land sold prior to reconveyance, the grantor may have the deed set aside without tendering the amount of his debt.[98]

§ 6. Construction and effect of mortgages in general.[99]—A mortgage covering property in part not subject to mortgage is valid as to the portion which may be mortgaged.[1] Invalidity may be asserted at the time enforcement is sought.[2] That a mortgage was made to an alien for the purpose of avoiding payment of taxes does not render it unenforceable on the ground of public policy.[3] A provision that foreclosure shall not be had until a certain portion of the holders of the bonds secured so request does not render it void.[4] The lien of the mortgage continues until the expiration of the period after a cause of action to enforce it has accrued.[5] Recitals are prima facie evidence of the facts related,[6] but are subservient to those in the instrument evidencing the debt secured.[7] An ambiguity may be explained by [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 478. A provision in a trust deed that in case of inability or refusal of the trustee to act the creditor might appoint a substitute trustee and providing that recitals in the deed of certain facts relative to the sale should be prima facie evidence thereof, held not to give the trustee power to create evidence of his power to act. Such recitals are not evidence of such fact. Ward v. Forrester, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 319, 80 S. W. 127.

86. See 4 C. L. 687; also for fuller treatment see Foreclosure of Mortgages on Land, 5 C. L. 1441.

87. Collier v. Alexander [Ala.] 38 So. 244.

88. Act 1896, p. 105, ch. 96 is complied with where a sale under a deed of trust by a substituted trustee is contemporaneous with the recording of the instrument of substitution. Brown v. British American Mortg. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 312. The instrument is of record from the time it is delivered to the clerk for recordation. Id.

89. If so provided in the deed the land may be sold in bulk. The Code provision requiring it to be sold in subdivisions may be waived. Brown v. British American Mortg. Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 312.

90. See 4 C. L. 687.

91. Where at the request of a purchaser a seller makes the deed to a third person who advances the money, the transaction creates a security deed. Doris v. Story [Ga.] 50 S. E. 348.

92, 93. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Georgia Industrial Co. [Ga.] 52 S. E. 289.

94, 95, 96. Clark v. Havard [Ga.] 50 S. E. 108.

97. Benedict v. Gammon Theological Seminary [Ga.] 50 S. E. 162. The transferee of a note secured by a security deed may after he has reduced his note to judgment obtain a special lien on the land by having the holder of the legal title execute a reconveyance to the debtor, and levying his execution thereon. Maddox v. Arthur [Ga.] 50 S. E. 668.

98. Benedict v. Gammon Theological Seminary [Ga.] 50 S. E. 162.

99. See 4 C. L. 688.

1. Dignowitz v. Baumblatt [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 834.

2. One holding the legal title is not guilty of laches preventing him from asserting the invalidity of a mortgage because he waits until an action to foreclose is commenced. Burns v. Cooper [C. C. A.] 140 F. 273.

3. McKinnon v. Waterbury, 136 F. 489.

4. Hasbrouck v. Rich, 113 Mo. App. 389, 88 S. W. 131.

5. Under Code 1902, § 2449, the lien of a mortgage is good for 20 years after the note becomes due, though the mortgage is more than 20 years old from date of execution. Lyles v. Lyles [S. C.] 51 S. E. 113.

6. A mortgage in the form of an absolute deed reciting that it is subject to the claim of the Anglo Californian Bank, Limited, is prima facie evidence that such bank is a corporation. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 P. 1080.

7. As to consideration. Gray v. Bennett [Iowa] 105 N. W. 377.

parol,[8] and parol evidence is admissible to show that a mortgage was given for a purpose not disclosed in the condition.[9] A mortgage by a grantee to a grantor executed the same date as the deed is presumed to be a purchase-money mortgage.[10] Special provisions will be construed as for the benefit of the persons intended.[11] Stipulations for attorney's fees are valid[12] to the extent that they are equitable[13] and will be denied if it can clearly be seen that the debtor was misled or thrown off his guard;[14] but in any case the debtor must do equity by tendering what is due.[15] Provision for such fees must be found in the mortgage.[16] Such fees become part of the mortgage debt,[17] and the stipulation becomes binding as soon as the mortgage is placed in an attorney's hands.[18] A provision for accelerated maturity, if in the nature of a penalty, will not be enforced if the condition has been substantially complied with.[19] Such provisions, if optional with the mortgagee, are for his benefit alone and he may waive them;[20] but if absolute they inure to the benefit of the mortgagor and those claiming under him.[21] Such provisions are construed according to the plain import of their terms.[22] A provision for accelerated maturity for breach of covenant of warranty matures the mortgage at date if the mortgagor has only a life estate.[23] A demand for performance of the condition may not be necessary to constitute a default.[24] The bringing of foreclosure on default is an irrevocable election to declare the mortgage due.[25] In a mortgage to a surety to se-

8. It is not error to permit the introduction of parol testimony to explain the words "unless otherwise satisfied" found in the mortgage. Moorman v. Voss, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 145.

9. Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 319.

10. Harrow v. Grogan [Ill.] 76 N. E. 350. A mortgagor's widow is not entitled to dower as against a purchase-money mortgage though she did not sign it. Id.

11. A provision in a mortgage by a corporation that the mortgagor shall pay all liens on the property and if on failure to do so the trustee should pay them he should be reimbursed does not inure to the benefit of mechanic lienors. Cummings v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 353.

12, 13, 14. Scott v. Carl, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 400. Solicitor's fees and accrued interest included in the note are to be allowed. Pitzele v. Cohn, 217 Ill. 50, 75 N. E. 392.

15. Scott v. Carl, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 460.

16. Staton v. Webb, 137 N. C. 35, 49 S. E. 55.

17. A provision for attorney's fees in case of nonpayment at maturity becomes part of the debt, and where it becomes necessary to employ an attorney and the mortgagor refuses to recognize the mortgagee the opposition is a "suit" within a provision that the attorney's fees shall be five per cent of the amount sued for. Hayward v. Hayward, 114 La. 476, 38 So. 424.

18. Is enforceable if the mortgage has been placed in an attorney's hands though he has done nothing towards collecting it. Easton v. Woodbury [S. C.] 55 S. E. 790.

19. A provision in an instalment mortgage accelerating maturity for failure to produce tax receipts on or before a certain date will not be enforced if the taxes are paid before execution issues. Fox v. Helmuth, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 81.

20. A provision for accelerated maturity on failure to pay interest cannot be taken advantage of by the mortgagor or those claiming under him for the purpose of limitations. White v. Krutz, 37 Wash. 34, 79 P. 495. Where a mortgage provides for accelerated maturity for failure to pay interest within six months after it is due, the mortgagee may enforce payment of interest when it becomes due or wait six months and declare the principal due, and a waiver of the first is not a waiver of the second right. Arnot v. Union Salt Co., 96 N. Y. S. 80.

21. Limitations commence to run against an action to foreclose from date of default. Snyder v. Miller [Kan.] 80 P. 970.

22. A mortgagee in a mortgage securing liability against paper indorsed for the accommodation of the mortgagor which provides that on default in the payment of any note the mortgagee may declare all notes due, the mortgagee may on default in payment of one note pay all the notes and hold the mortgage as security as against a subsequent mortgagee. Mead v. Hammond, 107 App. Div. 575, 95 N. Y. S. 241.

23. A mortgage warranting title and providing that for breach of covenant the debt should become due at the option of the mortgagee, where it appears that the mortgagor had only a life estate, the mortgagee is entitled to foreclose at any time. King v. King, 215 Ill. 100, 74 N. E. 89.

24. Where a mortgage provides for accelerated maturity for failure to pay interest, a demand for payment is not necessary to constitute a default where a fund sufficient to meet the interest is not at the place of payment and demand was withheld at the request of the mortgagor. Arnot v. Union Salt Co., 96 N. Y. S. 80.

25. The stipulation for a bonus in case the mortgage was paid before due was thereafter ineffective and its payment by the mortgagor in order to procure the discharge of the mortgage was involuntary and could cure the payment of the debt, the creditor has an interest which the surety cannot destroy.[28] But if the mortgage is made only to indemnify the surety it does not in the first instance attach to the debt but whatever equity may arise in favor of the creditor arises afterwards and in consequence of the insolvency of the parties principally liable for the debt.[27] Mortgagors in a mortgage given to secure the notes of a third person are sureties to the extent of their interest in the land, though they did not join in the notes.[28]

Conflict of laws.[29]—The laws of the place where payable govern as to validity of consideration.[30]

Property and interests conveyed.[31]—A mortgage creates a lien on all property falling fairly within its terms[32] and intended to be embraced.[33] An abstract of title delivered to the mortgagee may be regarded as part of the security.[34] A mortgage covering after-acquired property covers such property acquired under a conditional sale.[35] A mortgage by a life tenant does not cover the remainderman's interest.[36] Under the civil law a mortgagee may sue for the avails of insurance subject to his mortgage without exhausting his remedy against other property,[37] and the existence of a summary remedy to enforce the mortgage does not prevent him from suing in the ordinary way for it.[38]

Debts secured.[39]—A mortgage secures all existing debts and future advances it is intended to secure,[40] but one to secure future advances secures only those made be recovered back. Kilpatrick v. Germania Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 1124.

26. Dyer v. Jacoway [Ark.] 88 S. W. 901.

27. Until this equity arises the surety may release the security. Dyer v. Jacoway [Ark.] 88 S. W. 901.

28. Planters' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Robertson [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 643.

29. See 4 C. L. 688.

30. Where a mortgage is executed in one state on land in another and no place of payment is designated and the parties live in the state where it is executed, it is deemed payable there and the laws of such state govern as to validity of consideration. Conradt v. Lepper [Wyo.] 81 P. 307.

31. See 4 C. L. 688.

32. Mortgage by a water company to cover after-acquired property held to cover a new plant equipped with machinery from the old one, though nominally constructed and owned by a different company. New England Waterworks Co. v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 521. Mortgage on buildings, dry docks, wharves, franchises, etc., held to cover the entire plant. Washington Trust Co. v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 94 N. Y. S. 495. Under the Porto Rico Mortgage Law the avails of insuraace on sugar and molasses made from a crop growing on the mortgaged premises when the mortgage was effected held to inure to the benefit of the mortgagee. Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller, 26 S. Ct. 46. Deed and purchase-money mortgage construed and held subject to a certain volume of water, though the description thereof was erroneous. Schmidt v. Olympia Light & Power Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 184.

33. Evidence insufficient to show that a mortgage of land also embracing a ditch was intended to cover the mortgagor's stock in a water company. Bank of Visalia v. Smith, 146 Cal. 398, 81 P. 542.

34. Equitable Trust Co. v. Burley, 110 Ill. App. 538.

35. Washington Trust Co. v. Morse Iron Works & Dry Dock Co., 94 N. Y. S. 495.

36. Pryor v. Winter [Cal.] 82 P. 202.

37, 38. Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller, 26 S. Ct. 46.

39. See 4 C. L. 689.

40. A deed to secure a note "and any other liability or liabilities * * * which may be hereafter contracted" will secure advances for enterprises other than that in which the mortgagor was engaged at the time. Huntington v. Kneeland, 102 App. Div. 284, 92 N. Y. S. 944. A mortgage in the form of an absolute deed made to secure any indebtedness that might subsequently become due secures a balance due on a note after exhausting special security. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf [Cal.] 81 P. 1077. A deed of trust to secure future advances to enable the grantor to make his crop secures all advances made for such purpose and is not limited to those made before the crop is harvested. Hamilton v. Rhodes [Ark.] 83 S. W. 351. A mortgage to secure a loan not to exceed a specified sum by discounting the mortgagor's notes payable in three months secured demand notes which referred to the mortgage and were treated by the parties as secured. Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 319. Evidence sufficient to show that a deed given as a mortgage was given to secure future advances as well as present indebtedness. Huntington v. Kneeland, 93 N. Y. S. 845; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf [Cal.] 81 P. 1081. In an equitable action the court may find that a deed given as a mortgage was to secure future advances as well as existing debts, where the mortgagee so testifies though the mortgagor testifies to the contrary. Huntington v. Kneeland, 102 App. Div. 284, 92 N. Y. S. 944.

under contract express or implied,[41] and one to secure future advances and all other indebtedness and authorizing the mortgagee to pay off incumbrances does not authorize the purchase of obligations disconnected from the mortgage or premises and hold them as secured.[42] A clause authorizing the mortgagee to pay off incumbrances and add the amount to the amount secured does not authorize the payment of a claim, not an incumbrance.[43] A deed given as security for a certain debt may by subsequent agreement be made to stand as security for other debts.[44]

§ 7. Title and rights of parties.[45]—A mortgagor's interest is subject to sale on execution,[46] though the mortgage passes the legal title.[47] A purchaser of an equity of redemption can maintain ejectment against the mortgagor,[48] but not as against the mortgagee in possession.[49] The mortgagor's right to a surplus on foreclosure sale is not affected by a decree that the surplus shall remain subject to the further order of the court.[50] Subject to the prior liens judgment creditors have an equity in the surplus[51] after satisfaction of the debt by sale, such that the owner of the equity cannot transfer it to a prior lienor for a fictitious consideration.[52]

The mortgagee's lien attaches to the premises mortgaged[53] and no other.[54] His right to participate in an insurance fund must be found in the terms of the policy.[55] A mortgagee whether in or out of possession cannot acquire a tax title and hold it for the purpose of destroying the title of his mortgagor.[56] A mortgagee may maintain a bill in equity to preserve the property.[57] A mortgage by a water company of all its property, which passes the legal title, gives the mortgagee the right to ask the appointment of a receiver to prevent waste or impairment of value, though there has been no default in payment of principal or interest.[58] A mortgagee of a franchise creating an easement cannot be deprived of his security by a judgment revoking the franchise entered in a suit to which he was not a party.[59]

Right of possession.[60]—When a mortgage passes the legal title and contains

41. Payment of a debt of the mortgagor without his knowledge held not to constitute a secured advancement. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274.

42. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274.

43. Provident Mut. Bldg. Loan Ass'n v. Shaffer [Cal. App.] 83 P. 274. A mortgagee authorized to pay off incumbrances and add the amount to the debt secured has the burden to prove that a claim paid was an incumbrance. Id.

44. Huntington v. Kneeland, 102 App. Div. 284, 92 N. Y. S. 944.

45. See 4 C. L. 690.

46. Under the express provisions of Code, § 750, subd. 3, a mortgagor's equity of redemption may be sold on execution. Mayo v. Staton, 139 N. C. 670, 50 S. E. 331.

47. Under the express provisions of Code 1896, § 1890, an equity of redemption is subject to sale on execution. Carter v. Smith [Ala.] 38 So. 184.

48. The mortgagor cannot set up the outstanding title of the mortgagee against him. Carter v. Smith [Ala.] 38 So. 184.

49. Carter v. Smith [Ala.] 38 So. 184.

50. Easton v. Woodbury [S. C.] 50 S. E. 790.

51, 52. Commissions as agent for sale of land to pay the debt were to entitle mortgagee to any excess over his debt. Staton v. Webb, 137 N. C. 35, 49 S. E. 55.

53. One who insures the title to the mortgagor is liable only for the value of the land if title fails and not for the amount of the mortgage debt. Whiteman v. Merion Title and Trust Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 320.

54. Where a trustee in bankruptcy received no part of the proceeds of mortgaged premises disposed of by a receiver prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, the mortgagee has no claim on the fund in the hands of the trustee. In re Alison Lumber Co., 137 F. 643.

55. Where an Insurance policy had indorsed thereon "Loss payable to C. as his mortgage interest may appear" and such mortgage was not again mentioned, it was held that an ascertainment of the loss found by appraisers was binding on the mortgagee though he had nothing to do with it and the appraisers adopted an erroneous method of computation. Collinsville Sav. Soc. v. Boston Ins. Co., 77 Conn. 676, 60 A. 647.

56. Especially under 3 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. Supp. 1739, giving him a right to pay delinquent taxes and retain a lien therefor. Shepard v. Vincent, 38 Wash. 493, 80 P. 777.

57. May enjoin interference with streets by which access to the property is had. Wilkinson v. Dunkley-Williams Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 19, 103 N. W. 170.

58. A decree depriving the company of power to longer operate its plant is ground for such appointment. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co., 139 F. 661.

59. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co., 139 F. 661.

no provision that the mortgagor may remain in possession, the mortgagee has a legal right to the property and may demand possession of it at any time.[61] In such case a mortgagee is within a provision of a city charter entitling the owner or occupant of any right or interest claimed in any ground or improvements to damages in condemnation proceedings,[62] and if he is satisfied with the award made, may file a bill to establish his claim against the fund awarded.[63] But the mortgagor is a necessary party, especially where the extent of the claim depends on the state of accounts between the mortgagor and mortgagee.[64] Where the mortgage so provides, the right to enter and take possession on default is immediate, but if receivers hold the property it is in legal custody and order of court is necessary.[65]

Assumption of possession by mortgagee.[66]—Consent of the mortgagor to the taking of possession by the mortgagee may be express or implied.[67] A mortgagee who obtains lawful possession under his mortgage cannot be ousted by the mortgagor without redemption.[68] Under the rule that a mortgage passes the legal title a mortgagor in possession is required by law to apply rents and profits to the debt;[69] hence it is immaterial that an agreement to do so was not based on a consideration.[70] The relation of landlord and tenant does not exist between mortgagor and mortgagee in possession, though possession is retained under an agreement that the mortgagor shall pay a certain sum denominated rent to apply on the debt.[71]

Accounting.[72]—The mortgagee in possession need not account for rents where the hostile attitude of mortgagor dissuaded tenants and no rents were earned.[73] The amount of rents and profits for the time that the mortgagee had possession under a since reversed judgment ancillary to a foreclosure reversed at the same time should be credited.[74] When future instalments are declared due at the mortgagee's option, their present worth should be taken[75] and in case of the ordinary savings loan future unearned premiums and dues are excluded as amounting to a penalty if enforced.[76] No credit is allowed for voluntary payments.[77] The trustee

60. See 4 C. L. 691.

61, 62, 63, 64. City of Hagerstown v. Groh [Md.] 61 A. 467.

65. The rights date from the filing of the petition. Baker v. Hill [Md.] 59 A. 275.

66. See 4 C. L. 690.

67. Evidence sufficient to show that a mortgagee took possession by consent of the mortgagor. Becker v. McCrea, 94 N. Y. S. 20.

68. Becker v. McCrea, 94 N. Y. S. 20.

69, 70. Sadler v. Jefferson [Ala.] 39 So. 380.

71. The mortgagor may deny the mortgagee's title. Sadler v. Jefferson [Ala.] 39 So. 380. Rents received by the mortgagee should be applied to the mortgage debt. Crebbin v. Deloney [Ark.] 86 S. W. 829.

72. See 4 C. L. 690, n. 69 et seq.

NOTE. Equitable mortgages. Right to rents and profits: Held, that an equitable mortgagee who has received rents from a tenant of the equitable mortgagor, cannot be compelled to refund them at the suit of the tenant. Finck v. Tranter, 1 K. B. 427.

In jurisdictions where a mortgagee holds legal title, the estate of the mortgagor is peculiar. He is not a tenant at will, for he is not entitled to emblements. See Moss v. Gallimore, 1 Doug. 279, 283. Nor is he like a receiver, for he need not pay rent, nor account to the mortgagee for rent received. Ex parte Wilson, 2 Ves. & B. 252. But the mortgagee may, by ejectment, obtain possession of the land, or require a tenant to pay him the rents. Ex parte Bignold, 4 Deac. & Ch. 259. He would, however, be entitled to rents and profits flowing from his own lawful possession. Re Gordon, 61 L. T. R. (N. S.) 299. And if he has received the rents, the mortgagor or his assignee in bankruptcy cannot take them from him. Sumpter v. Cooper, 2 B. & Ad. 223. Nor should the tenant in the principal case get any relief, for he has a good equitable defense to an action by the lessor, and paid with knowledge of all the facts, being mistaken only as to the law. See Higgs v. Scott, 7 C. B. 63.—18 Harv. L. R. 545.

73. La Forest v. Blake Co. [Me.] 60 A. 899.

74. Crebbin v. Deloney [Ark.] 86 S. W. 829.

75. How computed: Under Rev. 1902, § 56, "legal" interest means the contract rate, and should be computed for the time between exercise of the option and the due date. Greenville Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Wholey [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 341.

76. Greenville Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Wholey [N. J. Eq.] 59 A. 341.

77. Deductions from the proceeds of a loan by a building and loan association on account of the initial payment of fees, dues and premiums are regarded as voluntary payments and no credit is allowed on the principal or interest. State Mut. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. O'Callaghan, 67 N. J. Eq. 103, 57 A. 496.

will not be charged with loss of discounts by the tardy payment of taxes until it is shown what was the rate and time of payment.[78] A mortgagee holding as trustee for creditors may be required at the suit of a creditor to account and distribute the proceeds of his trust.[79]

An extension of time for payment of the debt[80] must be based on a consideration[81] and a full knowledge of all material facts.[82] An agreement for an extension founded on a valuable consideration is binding though the mortgagor refused to sign a formal agreement, asserting that the letter was sufficient.[83]

§ 8. Lien and priorities.[84]—Holders of notes secured by the same mortgage may agree as to the order in which their liens shall take priority.[85] A purchase-money mortgage may by its terms be made subservient to judgment liens.[86] A mortgage to secure future advances takes priority as to all advances made without notice of subsequent liens,[87] but not as to advances made after notice.[88] Mechanics' liens take priority over the mortgage according to time.[89] The lien of a mortgage given to secure the payment of alimony terminates on the death of the husband.[90] The lien of a mortgage properly claimed may be preserved in the fund where the property is judicially sold.[91] Junior lienors cannot compel a senior to satisfy his claim out of an accommodation mortgage where the debtor has guarantied the payment of the debt.[92] In a suit to have a purchase-money mortgage decreed a prior lien, the purchaser is a necessary party though he has conveyed to one who assumed the mortgage.[93] The personal representatives of the mortgagee who took in a representative capacity are also necessary parties.[94]

§ 9. Assignments of mortgages.[95]—A mortgage is not negotiable,[96] hence an

78. Real Estate Trust Co. v. Union Trust Co. [Md.] 61 A. 228.

79. First State Bank v. Sibley County Bank, 93 Minn. 317, 101 N. W. 309.

80. See 4 C. L. 693.

81. A mere promise by a beneficiary in a trust deed to extend the time of payment is not binding. Sturgeon v. Mudd, 190 Mo. 200, 88 S. W. 630.

82. An extension granted where the debtor concealed the fact that the premises were subject to prior liens is not binding. Sturgeon v. Mudd, 190 Mo. 200, 88 S. W. 630.

83. Macaulay v. Hayden, 96 N. Y. S. 64.

84. See 4 C. L. 693.

85. On foreclosure to satisfy one the sale may be made subject to the lien of the other if third persons are not injuriously affected. Jackson v. Grosser, 218 Ill. 494, 75 N. E. 1032.

86. Mortgage expressly so provided. Stover v. Hellyer [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A. 698.

87. Advances made prior to notice of a judgment obtained against the grantor take precedence as against such judgment. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760.

88. An absolute deed intended as a mortgage made to secure future advances does not take priority as to advances made after actual notice of subsequent liens. Merchants' State Bank v. Tufts [N. D.] 103 N. W. 760.

89. See Mechanics' Liens, 6 C. L. 611. Provisions that the mortgagor shall not suffer a mechanic's lien prior to the mortgage on the property and that after-acquired property should be subject to the mortgage are not inconsistent, and a lien on after-acquired property has priority. Cummings v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. [R. I.] 61 A. 353.

90. Wilson v. Hinman, 182 N. Y. 408, 75 N. E. 236.

91. Where the lien of a first mortgage is set up in a suit to sell property to pay debts, it must be preserved in the fund realized from the sale; but if the mortgage is not set up, the lien is cut off, and the mortgagee becomes a general creditor. Sherman v. Millard, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 338.

92. Where a mortgage is given to secure the debt of another which the debtor at the time guaranties to pay but thereafter confesses judgment, junior lienors of the estate of the debtor cannot require the creditor to satisfy his claim through the mortgage. Bradley v. Bond [Md.] 61 A. 504.

93. The purchaser is a necessary party to a suit to have a purchase-money mortgage decreed a prior lien to a subsequent mortgage executed by him though a grantee of the purchaser assumed the mortgage. Cumberland Trust Co. v. Padgett [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 837.

94. Where a purchase-money mortgage taken by an executrix was canceled so as to give precedence to a mortgage executed by the purchaser and the purchaser then conveyed to one who assumed the mortgages in an action to reinstate the canceled mortgage as first lien, the purchaser and representative of the deceased executrix are necessary parties. Cumberland Trust Co. v. Padgett [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 837.

95. See 4 C. L. 695.

96. Hillard v. Taylor, 114 La. 883, 38 So. 594.

assignee takes subject to all defenses available against his assignor.[97] A provision against assignment does not operate to the prejudice of an assignee under an assignment effected by operation of law or order of court.[98] A tenant in common of the mortgaged premises is entitled to have the mortgage assigned to one who for his benefit pays the debt secured,[99] and a tenant under a lease providing for payment by him of interest on an antecedent mortgage may if the enforcement of such mortgage would work injury to him compel an assignment after suit on the mortgage when no interest is due.[1] A purported assignment without the debt secured is a nullity.[2] A mortgage cannot be assigned by indorsement,[3] but the transfer of the note secured by indorsement operates as an assignment of the mortgage,[4] and where a mortgage passes the legal title a deed by the mortgagee conveys it and operates as an assignment of the mortgage debt.[5] A reassignment cannot be effected by erasing the name of the assignee and delivery back to the original mortgagee.[6] An assignment must be from the owner[7] or apparent owner[8] of the mortgage, or from one with authority to assign,[9] and the assignee must take in good faith.[10] The assignment must describe the mortgage.[11] An assignee must insist on the production of the mortgage and the instrument evidencing the debt,[12] or must exercise more than ordinary diligence to ascertain their whereabouts.[13] An assignee who has recorded his assignment is not estopped to assert his lien because he delayed until his assignor had become insolvent.[14] It may be shown by parol that an assignment of a mortgage in the hands of an attorney for collection should so remain.[15] Matured benefits promised by the mortgagor to one of the debtors but not assumed by the assignee will not be set off as against the mortgage on the other debtor's land, though the promisor is insolvent[18] but the set-off will be only against what personal liability the first debtor may incur.[17]

97. Takes subject to an oral agreement between mortgagor and assignor for an extension though he had no notice of it. Quackenbush v. Wheaton, 46 Misc. 357, 94 N. Y. S. 823.

98. A provision in a mortgage that it shall be non-negotiable and uncollectible in the hands of any person except the mortgagee. Scaife v. Scammon Inv. & Sav. Ass'n [Kan.] 80 P. 957.

99. Simonson v. Lauck, 93 N. Y. S. 965. Where one acting for a tenant in common of the premises tenders the amount of the debt and requests an assignment, the fact that other co-tenants do not object to the foreclosure proceedings does not preclude the court from ordering an assignment. Id.

1. Wunderle v. Ellis [Pa.] 62 A. 106.

2. Miller v. Berry [S. D.] 104 N. W. 311. A purchaser of a mortgage who does not also acquire the debt is presumed to know that he acquires nothing and hence cannot claim that he was prejudiced by the fact that an assignment of the mortgage was not recorded. Richards Trust Co. v. Rhomberg [S. D.] 104 N. W. 268.

3. Hodge v. Hudson [N. C.] 51 S. E. 954.

4. Huitink v. Thompson [Minn.] 104 N. W. 237; Miller v. Berry [S. D.] 104 N. W. 311. Under the statutes of Oregon a mortgage may be assigned by indorsement of the mortgage note. Barringer v. Loder [Or.] 81 P. 778.

5. A subsequent sale under the mortgage is void. Sadler v. Jefferson [Ala.] 39 So. 380.

6. Carter v. Smith [Ala.] 38 So. 184.

7. Evidence insufficient to show that a claimant had title to a mortgage by assignment from the true owner. Merager v. Madson [S. D.] 103 N. W. 650.

8. Where one holding title to a mortgage which in fact belongs to another, and with a general power of attorney assigns the same, the final holder may rely on the bona fides of the transaction between the vendor and his assignor. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997.

9. Delivery of notes and mortgage by a corporation mortgagee to an assignee shows authority on the part of the officer who made the assignment to make the same or amounts to a ratification of his act. Mathews v. Nefsy [Wyo.] 81 P. 305.

10. Assignment of a mortgage held bona fide as to the assignee. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997.

11. An assignment describing the mortgage by the names of the parties and the book and page of the record where it is recorded sufficiently describes the mortgage. Mathews v. Nefsy [Wyo.] 81 P. 305.

12. An assignee of a bond and mortgage who accepts the mortgage without the bond is charged with notice of a former assignment in which the bond but not the mortgage had been delivered. Syracuse Sav. Bank v. Merrick, 182 N. Y. 387, 75 N. E. 232.

13. Richards Trust Co. v. Rhomberg [S. D.] 104 N. W. 268.

14. Cornish v. Woolverton [Mont.] 81 P. 4.

15. Easton v. Woodbury [S. C.] 50 S. E. 790.

An assignment may be rescinded for false representations as to the value of the land mortgaged.[18] The assignee may rescind on suspicion of falsity of the representations.[19] An assignee is not required to rescind at once on discovery that false representations had been made to him where the facts discovered warranted him in believing the debt still well secured.[20]

An assignment is a conveyance within the meaning of the recording statutes,[21] and must be recorded to preserve rights under it as against subsequent purchasers;[22] but failure to record does not estop the assignee from asserting title as against one who took a void assignment,[23] and a purchaser of a note and mortgage whose name is filled in as assignee of the mortgage and indorsee of the note and who reduces the instruments to actual possession is not required to record as against subsequent purported assignees.[24]

§ 10. Transfer of title of mortgagor and assumption of debt.[25]—A grantee acquires all the mortgagor's rights[26] and is bound by his liabilities charged on the land.[27]

Assumption of the mortgage.[28]—A purchaser of the land is not liable for the mortgage unless he expressly or impliedly assumes the same.[29] The mortgage may be assumed without its being expressly so provided,[30] but in the absence of a written assumption the evidence must be clear and show that the assumption was in fact made.[31] A grantee who accepts a deed containing an assumption clause is bound by it.[32] The lien in favor of the grantor created by the assumption of a void mortgage as part of the purchase price inures to the benefit of the mortgagee and may be enforced regardless of the invalidity of the mortgage.[33] Failure of a grantee who assumes a mortgage to pay the debt when due does not give a cause of action to cancel the deed.[34] An assumption clause is not within a provision of the statute of frauds requiring undertakings not to be performed within one year to be in writing and signed by the party to be charged.[35] A promise by the grantee to pay a mortgage is not a covenant running with the land.[30]

16, 17. American Guild of Virginia v. Damon, 94 N. Y. S. 985.

18. Simonds v. Cash [Mich.] 99 N. W. 754. Assignor of mortgage held responsible for representations in appraisements of the mortgaged premises. Id.

19. Simonds v. Cash [Mich.] 99 N. Y. 754.

20. Simonds v. Cash [Mich.] 99 N. W. 754. Two months held not unnecessary delay in rescinding an assignment of a mortgage for false representations as to the value of the mortgaged premises, where assignor and assignee lived in different states widely separated. Id.

21. Huitink v. Thompson [Minn.] 104 N. W. 237.

22. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997. The record of a mortgage affords constructive notice only of its existence and ownership thereof by the mortgagee named therein, not of the assignment of such mortgage to another. Id.

23. One who took an assignment of the mortgage without mention of the debt secured. Miller v. Berry [S. D.] 104 N. W. 311.

24. Richards Trust Co. v. Rhomberg [S. D.] 104 N. W. 268. An assignee whose name is filled in as indorsee of the note and as assignee of the mortgage who leaves the papers with her husband as agent is not negligent in failing to make inquiries of him as to their whereabouts. Id.

25. See 4 C. L. 696.

26. An agreement for an extension may be availed of by a grantee of the premises who assumed the mortgage. Macaulay v. Hayden, 96 N. Y. S. 64.

27. A contract for extension made by the mortgagor is binding on a subsequent grantee whether he takes with or without notice of it. White v. Krutz, 37 Wash. 34, 79 P. 495.

28. See 4 C. L. 697.

29. Scholten v. Barber, 217 Ill. 148, 75 N. E. 460. A grantee in a quitclaim deed who does not assume a mortgage does not by executing new interest notes become principal debtor so as to relieve the mortgagor from liability for a deficiency judgment. Id.

30, 31. Assets Realization Co. v. Heiden, 215 Ill. 9, 74 N. E. 56.

32. Though the grantee in a deed containing an assumption clause does not sign it, yet, if he accepts the instrument and places it on record with knowledge of its contents, he is bound thereby as effectually as though he had done so. Gage v. Cameron, 212 Ill. 146, 72 N. E. 204.

33. Fontaine v. Nuse [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 852.

34. Thurmond v. Thurmond [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 87 S. W. 878.

35. Higgins v. Evans, 188 Mo. 627, 87 S. W. 973.

The legal nature of the liability created by such assumption is the subject of a contrariety of opinion.[37] Some hold that if the purchase price is abated on account of the mortgage the grantee must indemnify the mortgagor against the mortgage.[38] Others hold that a grantee who assumes the mortgage is personally liable for the debt;[39] but not one on whom title is cast by operation of law,[40] and to create a personal liability where the debt is not assumed, it must appear that the amount of the debt was deducted from the purchase price agreed upon.[41] Only as in favor of a grantee for value of a portion of the premises will equity throw the burden on the portion retained.[42]

Status of mortgagor as surety.[43]—A grantee who assumes a mortgage becomes principal debtor, the mortgagor a surety;[44] but unless a mortgagee agrees to a substitution he may sue the mortgagor alone or he may accept the purchaser's assumption and sue him.[45] An extension of time granted by a grantee without the mortgagor's consent releases him;[46] but an extension granted to a grantee who assumes a mortgage does not release a subsequent grantee who also assumes it.[47]

§ 11. Transfer of premises to mortgagee and merger.[48]—The question of merger when mortgage lien and fee are united in one person is one of intention[49]

36. Scholten v. Barber, 217 Ill. 148, 75 N. E. 460.

37. See 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law [2d Ed.] 993 et seq.

38. Where one purchases an equity of redemption and the price is abated on account of the mortgage debt, the purchaser is bound to indemnify the mortgagor against the mortgage without regard to the value of the property. Lowy v. Boenert, 110 Ill. App. 16. Where the purchaser of an equity of redemption receives the possession and profits, he is bound to indemnify the mortgagor against the mortgage to the extent of the value of the land. He may relieve himself by returning the land. Id.

39. Blakeslee v. Hoit, 116 Ill. App. 83.

40, 41. Lobdell v. Ray, 110 Ill. App. 230.

42. Where there is a paramount mortgage on land part of which is conveyed, equity will throw the burden on the portion that remains where the grantee has paid full value or the grantor has covenanted against incumbrances. But the rule will not obtain in favor of a purchaser at foreclosure sale. Sternberger v. Sussman [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 195.

43. See 4 C. L. 698.

44. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22; Scholten v. Barber, 217 Ill. 148, 75 N. E. 460. Owners of the equity who assume a mortgage in consideration of an extension for the time of payment of the debt become primary obligors and cannot recover from the mortgagor the amount of a deficiency judgment though he consented to the extension. Winslow v. Stoothoff, 93 N. Y. S. 335.

45. Scholten v. Barber, 217 Ill. 148, 75 N. E. 460.

46. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Schnose [S. D.] 103 N. W. 22. An extension given by the mortgagee to the owner of the equity if without the mortgagor's consent releases him from his obligation to the extent of the value of the land. Winslow v. Stoothoff, 93 N. Y. S. 335.

47. Higgins v. Evans, 188 Mo. 627, 87 S. W. 973.

48. See 4 C. L. 698.

49. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 P. 1080.

NOTE. Intention and interest of mortgagee: Although, ordinarily, when it is a matter of indifference, and the one having a mortgage on real estate becomes the owner of the fee, the former estate is merged in the latter, this is not necessarily so, but, on the contrary, when it is not the intention of the parties that it shall merge, or when it is not to the interest of the mortgagee that such merger should take place, the mortgage continues to subsist for the protection of the owner of the fee from subsequent or intervening encumbrances, or liens. Hines v. Ward, 121 Cal. 115, 53 P. 427; Meacham v. Steele, 93 Ill. 136; Chase v. Van Meter, 140 Ind. 321, 39 N. E. 455; Wyatt-Bullard Lumber Co. v. Bourke, 55 Neb. 9, 75 N. W. 241; Moore v. Harrisburg Bank, 8 Watts [Pa.] 138. If there is no expression or intention on the part of the mortgagee at the time he acquires the fee, it must be presumed that he intended to do that which was most advantageous to himself, and if this is that the two estates should not merge, no merger will take place. Chase v. Van Meter, 140 Ind. 321, 39 N. E. 455; Patterson v. Mills, 69 Iowa, 755, 28 N. W. 53; Freeman v. Paul, 3 Greenl. [Me.] 260, 14 Am. Dec. 237; Wyatt-Bullard Lumber Co. v. Bourke, 55 Neb. 9, 75 N. W. 241. If the legal ownership of land and the absolute ownership of an encumbrance upon it become vested in the same person, the intention governs the question of merger, and if the owner has an interest in keeping such interests distinct, there will be no merger unless he expressly wishes it. Title Guarantee Co. v. Wrenn, 35 Or. 62, 56 P. 271, 76 Am. St. Rep. 454. There is no merger of the mortgage as against subsequent encumbrances, when the mortgagor conveys the land to the mortgagee, when it would be inequitable or where there is an express agreement of the parties that the lien shall remain alive. Shattuck v. Belknap Bank, 63 Kan. 443, 65 P. 643; Collins v. Stocking, 98 Mo. 290, 11 S. W. 750; Fitch v. Applegate, 24 Wash. 26, 64 P. 147; Gilchrist v. Foxen, 95 and will not be implied where there is an intervening claim;[50] but an intention that a merger should not result will be presumed if it would be disadvantageous to the owner.[51] A mortgage is not as to other lienors merged in the sheriff's deed on foreclosure.[52] The execution of leases by a constructive mortgagor does not indicate an intention to abandon rights as mortgagor.[53] A purchaser of one of two tracts covered by a mortgage cannot on obtaining an assignment of the mortgage satisfy it out of the other tract where there is no agreement to that effect.[54]

§ 12. Payment, release or satisfaction.[55]—Payment of the debt extinguishes the mortgage without satisfaction of record,[56] or the preparation and delivery of a satisfaction piece.[57] Payment must be made to the owner[58] or record owner of the mortgage.[59] The fact that the mortgage is not produced at the time of payment may or may not be a controlling circumstance in determining the good faith of the mortgagor.[60] Payment to an agent of the holder is sufficient[61] if he has authority to accept payment.[62] The scope of his authority must be ascertained by the debtor.[63]

Wis. 428, 70 N. W. 585. Nor is there such merger when the interest and situation of the parties clearly indicate that there is no intention to let in subsequent liens ahead of the mortgage, even though the satisfaction of the mortgage is entered of record, and the secured notes are surrendered. Walker v. Goodsell, 54 Mo. App. 631.

When the mortgagee purchases the fee to the mortgaged premises, no merger of the mortgage will occur when the intention of the mortgagee is otherwise, or such merger is against his interests. Smith v. Swan, 69 Iowa, 412, 29 N. W. 402; Tower v. Devine, 37 Mich. 443; Davis v. Pierce, 10 Minn. 376; Andrus v. Vreeland, 29 N. J. Eq. 394; Van Nest v. Latson, 19 Barb. [N. Y.] 604. And the rule is the same at law as in equity; Hutchins v. Carleton, 19 N. H. 487. This rule as to the intention or presumed intention of the parties or of the mortgagee is not affected by the fact that the mortgage includes other estates of which the mortgagee is not the owner. Knowles v. Carpenter, 8 R. I. 548. If a mortgagor conveys a portion of the premises to a third person, and afterward the mortgagee purchases the remaining portion from the mortgagor, if it is intended to keep the mortgage alive as against the rights of such third person, equity will treat the two estates as coexisting in the mortgagee. Meacham v. Steele, 93 Ill. 135. If a mortgagee takes a conveyance of the mortgaged land under a mistaken impression that the lien of his mortgage is lost, but without any intention of releasing the mortgage, it is not merged or discharged. Edgerton v. Young, 43 Ill. 464. Of course, if the mortgagor conveys the mortgaged land to the mortgagee by deed expressly reciting that it shall not operate to merge the mortgage, there is no merger. Abbott v. Curran, 98 N. Y. 665.—See note to Forthman v. Deters [Ill.] 99 Am. St. Rep. 162.

50, 51. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 P. 1080.

52. Citizens' State Bank v. Jess, 127 Iowa, 450, 103 N. W. 471.

53. Conkey v. Rex, 111 Ill. App. 121.

54. Bailey v. Wood [S. C.] 50 S. E. 631.

55. See 4 C. L. 699.

56. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997. The payment of the mortgage debt extinguishes the mortgage and the legal title (if held by the mortgagee) revests in the mortgagor, notwithstanding that a release was not recorded. Horner v. Chaisty [Md.] 61 A. 283. Services rendered the mortgagee by the mortgagor constitute a good consideration for the satisfaction of a mortgage. Sherman v. Matthieu, 94 N. Y. S. 565. Evidence insufficient to show that a mortgagee had exercised an option to purchase an interest in the property and had surrendered the note and mortgage as paid. Smith v. Leavenworth [Or.] 80 P. 1010. Evidence insufficient to show an agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee that notes deposited as collateral for the secured debt should be credited in payment thereof. Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 319. Contract construed as one to pay off certain mortgages and not one of indemnity. Cudaback v. Hay, 134 F. 120.

57. A mortgage having been extinguished by payment of the debt, it is not necessary to valid record evidence thereof that a satisfaction piece shall be executed by the actual or apparent owner of the debt for delivery to the mortgagor or that there should be delivery. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997.

58. The satisfaction of a mortgage assigned as collateral by the mortgagee, by a deed from the mortgagor to the mortgagee's wife, does not release the lien of the mortgage. Ruberg v. Brown [S. C.] 51 S. E. 96.

59. Where the mortgagor paid the debt to the record assignees of the mortgage, the nonproduction of the instruments by the assignee held not notice to the mortgagor that the mortgage was held by another. Weinberger v. Brumberg [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 732.

60. Weinberger v. Brumberg [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 732. A mortgagor who in good faith conveyed the mortgaged premises in payment of the debt held entitled to equitable relief as against the true owner of the debt. Id.

61. An agent who has collected interest for five years has authority to receive the principal and discharge the mortgage. Pennypacker v. Latimer [Idaho] 81 P. 55. In such case the principal is estopped to deny such authority. Id.

If the agent has authority[64] the fact that the amount received does not reach the owner of the mortgage is immaterial.[65] A mortgage may be kept alive by agreement notwithstanding payment in full,[66] and where the mortgaged premises are conveyed in payment of the debt, the deed may recite that the conveyance effects a payment and the mortgage left of record as part of the title while the debt is canceled.[67]

A redemption from foreclosure sale by a subsequent mortgagee extinguishes his mortgage if property exceeds in value the amount of his debt together with what be paid in redeeming,[68] and where a new mortgage has been executed in lieu of a temporary one, the mortgagor is entitled to have the temporary mortgage returned to him and discharged of record;[69] but a release of parts of the mortgaged premises from the lien on a sale of such parts pursuant to terms of the first mortgage promotes and does not release the lien of second mortgages containing no such terms.[70]

No particular form of words is necessary to create a release,[71] but a mutual release of obligations between the parties in order to effectuate the release of a mortgage must have been so intended.[72] A release is effective for no other purpose than evidence of the satisfaction of the mortgage.[73] A guardian may release a mortgage to him as such,[74] but the owner of one of several notes secured by a deed of trust may not enter satisfaction though all the notes are paid,[75] and the satisfaction of a mortgage to trustees, before maturity, requires the united action of all trustees.[76] Extinguishment is prima facie established by a receipt of payment and release in a deceased mortgagee's handwriting.[77] A release fraudulently obtained is ineffective for any purpose,[78] and one executed under mistake of fact may be set aside if rights of third persons have not intervened.[79] A release will not be set

62. Authority in an agent to collect interest on a mortgage debt is not authority to collect the principal and discharge the mortgage. Cornish v. Woolverton [Mont.] 81 P. 4.

63. Cornish v. Woolverton [Mont.] 81 P. 4.

64. A person in possession of a note and mortgage with authority to collect may take from the mortgagor a new mortgage on the same premises for the purpose of providing means with which to pay the one he holds and, after he realizes on such subsequent mortgage the first is extinguished. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997.

65. Friend v. Yahr [Wis.] 104 N. W. 997.

66. Where future advances are made, subsequent creditors with notice are bound by the agreement. Girard Trust Co. v. Baird, 212 Pa. 41, 61 A. 507.

67. Weinberger v. Brumberg [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 732.

68. Work v. Braun [S. D.] 103 N. W. 764.

69. Callahan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 188 Mass. 393, 74 N. E. 666.

70. Mt. Adams, etc., R. Co. v. Central Trust & Safe Deposit Co., 2 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 529.

71. "The within mortgage is hereby released and discharged and the clerk of the court is authorized to satisfy the same of record" releases the mortgage as against a subsequent mortgagee. Werber v. Cain [S. C.] 51 S. E. 123.

72. Mutual release of obligations between partners on dissolution of the firm held not intended as a release of a mortgage by one to the other executed prior to the organization of the firm. Hubbard v. Mulligan [Colo.] 82 P. 783.

73. Where the beneficiary appends a release to a warranty deed of the premises such release is not a quitclaim deed but operates as a mere extinguishment of his claim. Stevens Lumber Co. v. Hughes [Miss.] 38 So. 769. Such release operates to the benefit of the grantor and the grantee is not subrogated to the rights of the beneficiary. Id.

74. Werber v. Cain [S. C.] 51 S. E. 123.

75. Under the statute only the payee or his assignee is authorized to do so. Busby v. Compton, 112 Mo. App. 569, 87 S. W. 109.

76. Vohmann v. Michel, 96 N. Y. S. 309.

77. Sherman v. Matthieu, 94 N. Y. S. 565. The fact that a mortgagee who had had explained the necessity of having a release recorded did not do so is not inconsistent with an inference of release from finding one signed by her among her effects. Id.

78. A release fraudulently obtained from a depositary and recorded without payment of the debt is ineffective both as to the original parties and subsequent bona fide purchasers. Franklin v. Killilea [Wis.] 104 N. W. 993. One who takes a mortgage on faith of a forged satisfaction piece does not acquire a lien superior to the mortgage purported to be discharged. Vohmann v. Michel, 96 N. Y. S. 309.

79. Doxey v. Western State Bank, 113 Ill. App. 442. Bill to set aside a satisfaction of a mortgage on the ground of mistake not maintainable against one who purchased at execution sale against the mortgagor, where aside though executed and recorded prior to the maturity of the indebtedness at the instance of an assignee of the debt as against a bona fide subsequent incumbrancer.[80]

A bill to compel the satisfaction of a mortgage must clearly allege payment and the evidence must clearly establish the allegation.[81] An action to cancel a mortgage is one to relieve the real estate from its operation and not one upon the bond secured.[82] Where a building and loan association in the hands of a receiver has loaned money on property in a state other than that of its domicile, the borrower may maintain an action to cancel the mortgage, on payment of the loan, without leave of the court appointing the receiver, where he has neither actual nor constructive possession of the property.[83]

Release by bar of limitations.[84]—An indemnity mortgage is satisfied where limitations have run against the obligation it indemnified against.[85]

Penalties for failure to release.[86]—Statutes authorizing the recovery of a penalty for failure to release a mortgage of record are to be strictly construed[87] and apply only where the mortgage of record is an enforceable one.[88]

§ 13. Redemption[89] from the mortgage must not be confused with redemption from foreclosure sale.[90]

The right to redeem[91] is not affected by a void foreclosure sale[92] but may be cut off by limitations.[93]

Procedure to redeem.[94]—Redemption must be sought in an appropriate proceeding.[95] A husband who executes a deed intended as a mortgage and thereafter conveys the premises to his wife is a necessary party to a suit by her to redeem.[96] In Maine a bill to redeem authorized by statute cannot be maintained without full compliance with statutory conditions.[97] A bill not alleging compliance with statutory conditions cannot be maintained,[98] but an amendment supplying such allegations may be allowed when it appears that otherwise the bill could not be seasonably commenced before the mortgage would be forever foreclosed.[99] In an action upon the breach of an equitable mortgage the court may determine the amount necessary to redeem and direct that unless it be paid the decree of the court shall operate as a conveyance.[1] Where an administrator seeks to redeem from a mortgage the mortgagee is not a party and the purchaser is not shown to have connection with the satisfaction agreement other than record knowledge thereof. Barco v. Doyle [Fla.] 39 So. 103.

80. Havighorst v. Bowen, 116 Ill. App. 230.

81. Dinner v. Van Dyke, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 433.

82. An equitable owner may in his own name maintain a bill to cancel a mortgage on the premises given by another after he has paid the mortgage and it is no defense that the bond secured is a sealed instrument. Whelpley v. Ross, 25 App. D. C. 207.

83. Egan v. North American Loan Co., 45 Or. 131, 76 P. 774. Complaint for cancellation of a building and loan association mortgage on the ground that the debt had been paid held not to state a cause of action. Darr v. Guaranty Sav. & Loan Ass'n [Or.] 81 P. 565.

84. See 4 C. L. 701, also Foreclosure of Mortgages on Land, 5 C. L. 1441.

85. Morris v. Hulme [Kan.] 81 P. 169.

86. See 4 C. L. 703.

87. In order to recover the penalty prescribed by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1105, it must appear that the debt or obligation has been paid, lawfully tendered or discharged. Hood v. Baker [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 608.

88. Where a note embodied in a mortgage is left blank as to amount the mortgage was unenforceable and was not an instrument contemplated by Code 1896, § 1066, prescribing a penalty for failure to enter satisfaction of a mortgage. Duke v. Chandler [Ala.] 39 So. 567.

89, 90. See 4 C. L. 701. See Foreclosure of Mortgages on Land, 5 C. L. 1441.

91. See 4 C. L. 702.

92. Chace v. Morse [Mass.] 76 N. E. 142.

93. A mortgagee who lawfully obtains and retains possession during a period greater than that allowed for redemption acquires title. Becker v. McCrea, 94 N. Y. S. 20.

94. See 4 C. L. 702.

95. A mortgagor cannot enforce redemption in trespass to try title. He must sue for that purpose alleging equities authorizing recovery. Parks v. Worthington [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 204, 87 S. W. 720.

96. Marbury Lumber Co. v. Posey [Ala.] 38 So. 242.

97, 98, 99. Doe v. Littlefield, 99 Me. 317, 59 A. 438.

1. Stitt v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 561.

of several parcels some belonging to himself and some to the estate, the amount necessary to redeem each parcel should be ascertained.[2] By statute in Maine if a greater sum than is due has been paid it may be recovered.[3] A decree that the plaintiff is entitled to redeem on payment of the amount due and that the cause be referred to the register to ascertain the account between the parties is a final determination.[4] Under a rule allowing an appeal from an interlocutory decree it is not essential that such a decree be entered.[5]

§ 14. Subrogation.[6]—One with no interest in the premises who voluntarily pays the mortgage debt is not entitled to be subrogated to the rights secured,[7] unless such payment was made under an agreement that it should constitute a lien or to protect an interest in the premises;[8] but one who pays upon request is not a mere volunteer.[9] A widow is not subrogated to mortgage lien discharged in part with her separate means,[10] but a wife who pays off a mortgage on the homestead without intending to relinquish her right to repayment but solely for the purpose of protecting her homestead rights is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee.[11] Ordinarily a junior mortgagee is not entitled to be subrogated to a lien which did not exist when his mortgage was taken.[12] A grantee of land subject to a mortgage, who agrees with the grantor to pay said mortgage as part of the purchase price, after payment of the mortgage is not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee as against the lienholders.[13]

MOTIONS AND ORDERS.[14]

The office of a motion[15] is distinct from that of a judgment in that it is not primarily to try the facts.[16]

Making and submitting and filing motion.[17]—It is not essential that the motion be offered or filed in writing if entered of record.[18] Submission of motions by correspondence is improper,[19] especially when a rule requires written motions filed with the clerk.[20] In such case the proper practice is for the judge to turn them over to the clerk with directions to notify the movant.[21] Affidavits to support a rule requiring an allocatur should make a prima facie case.[22]

Notice[23] is not required if no right of an adverse party is to be affected,[24] but

2. Smith v. Goethe [Cal.] 82 P. 384.
3. Under Rev. St. 1903, § 23, c. 92, providing that if a greater sum than is due is paid to redeem it shall be refunded, evidence held to show that the mortgagor had paid more than was due and was entitled to recover the excess. Hagerty v. Webber [Me.] 61 A. 685.
4. Is appealable. Gentry v. Lawley [Ala.] 37 So. 829.
5. In a suit to redeem and for an accounting it is not essential that an interlocutory decree from which an appeal may be taken be entered as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 963, as such statute gives a right of appeal from such decree only when one is made. Smith v. Goethe [Cal.] 82 P. 384.
6. See 4 C. L. 703.
7. Doxey v. Western State Bank, 113 Ill. App. 442.
8. Blydenburgh v. Seabury, 93 N. Y. S. 330.
9. One who tenders the full amount due under a mortgage at the request of a tenant in common of the premises. Simonson v. Lauck, 93 N. Y. S. 965.
10. Hickey v. Conine, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 321.
11. Charmley v. Charmley [Wis.] 103 N. W. 1106.
12. Anthes v. Schroeder [Neb.] 103 N. W. 1072.
13. Dieboldt Brewing Co. v. Grabski, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 221.
14. This topic does not treat of particular motions but only of matter common to all. See New Trial, etc., 4 C. L. 810; Pleading, 4 C. L. 980, and similar topics.
15. See 4 C. L. 704, n. 3-7.
16. Smith v. Whaley [R. I.] 61 A. 173.
17. See 4 C. L. 704, n. 11 et seq.
18. Motion to set aside judgment. Hartman v. Viera, 113 Ill. App. 216.
19, 20, 21. In re Kinney [C. C. A.] 135 F. 340.
22. O'Malley v. Times Pub. Co., 135 F. 909.
23. See 4 C. L. 704.
24. Not necessary on a motion for nunc pro tunc entry to correct records, especially if made from judge's recollection. Groton Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. Clark Pressed Brick Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 27.

a motion designed to rectify jurisdiction over parties requires it.[25] A motion for an indefinite stay is of the character which even independent of court rules requires notice.[26] Notice may be by entry on the record of which notice is charged.[27] One party cannot complain that another disconnected in interest had no notice.[28]

Hearing and rehearing and relief.[29]—A motion in a cause should be addressed to the court which has the cause and at the county where it is triable, except as the statute permits otherwise.[30] A rule to show cause may be heard in open court without being placed on calendar.[31] Under a statutory power to judges to make orders in any part of the state, if they are of the kind made out of court without notice, a rule to show cause may be made where the judge resides, returnable in another county where respondent resides.[32] Pending motions are carried over the term by a general continuance.[33] The mere filing at a term does not carry the motion over to the next.[34] A motion not heard on the day set may be specially continued to any day certain, notwithstanding a general rule of court to take up undisposed-of motions on a later day.[35] A motion of a kind not recognized may be overruled.[36] Procuring a decree on the same matter while a motion pends concludes the movant.[37]

Renewals.[38]—Ordinarily a motion denied by one judge should not be renewed before another without leave.[39]

The order.[40]—It must be made pursuant to a pending action or the pleadings therein, or there must be independent process on the motion.[41] Casual statements out of court are not to be regarded as orders of a judge authorized to make orders in writing.[42] It is better practice to file a decision with an order,[43] and in New York it is essential when an issue of law is decided,[44] but findings are not required by a statute applying only to judgments on issues of fact.[45] When the court is in session, an order signed by the judge in his chambers adjoining the court room, an open door connecting the two, is signed in open court.[46]

Operation and effect of orders.[47]—An order void on its face may be collaterally attacked at any time.[48] An order entered when a party was dead, but of which fact the record is silent, is voidable only.[49]

Nunc pro tunc orders[50] supply only the record, not the order,[51] hence it must be shown that the order was made.[52]

25. Motion to amend return to process. King v. Davis, 137 F. 222.

26. Delahunty v. Canfield, 106 App. Div. 386, 94 N. Y. S. 815.

27. Motion for alimony. Jones v. Jones, 111 Ill. App. 396.

28. Motion to order assignment of mortgage to party tendering payment and to dismiss was not served on movant's co-defendants, and complainant objected. Simonson v. Lauck, 93 N. Y. S. 965.

29. See 4 C. L. 705.

30. So by statute. Code Civ. Proc. § 769. Delahunty v. Canfield, 106 App. Div. 386, 94 N. Y. S. 815. Motion for judgment in real action to reform deed follows the venue. Tefft v. Greenwich & J. R. Co., 47 Misc. 26, 95 N. Y. S. 205.

31, 32. State v. Cape Fear Lumber Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 873.

33. It is a "cause or proceeding." R. S. 1901, 552, 567. Hartman v. Viera, 113 Ill. App. 216.

34. Klein v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 F. 213.

35. Continued from 4th to 11th, whereas general rules would have carried it over to 18th. McFetridge v. Megargee, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 501.

36. Motion to change a finding. Leedy v. Capital Nat. Bank [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1000.

37. Mellerio v. Freeman, 211 Pa. 202, 60 A. 735.

38. See 4 C. L. 705.

39. Garner v. Hellman, 93 N. Y. S. 431.

40. See 4 C. L. 705.

41. State v. Pendergast [Wash.] 81 P. 324.

42. Advice by probate judge to guardian. In re Kimble, 127 Iowa, 665, 103 N. W. 1009.

43, 44. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1021. Vincent v. Stearns, 93 N. Y. S. 482. Order overruling demurrer and directing judgment held sufficient. Id.

45. McCoy v. Brooks [Ariz.] 80 P. 365.

46. San Luis Obispo County v. Simas [Cal. App.] 81 P. 972.

47. See 4 C. L. 105, n. 45. See, also, Former Adjudication, 5 C. L. 1502; Judgments, 6 C. L. 214.

48. Callaway v. Irvin [Ga.] 51 S. E. 477.

49. Prouty v. Moss, 111 Ill. App. 536.

50. See, also, Judgments, 6 C. L. 214.

51. Finch v. Finch, 111 Ill. App. 481; Klein v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 140 F. 213. Insertion in record of order that administrators give notice to claimants, held proper. Smith v. Whaley [R. I.] 61 A. 173.

Amendment and vacation.[53]—A void order may be set aside after term.[54] Orders taken in absence of counsel, if the same be excusable, may be set aside and rehearing ordered.[55] The court may ordinarily vacate an order made by the judge.[56] An order wholly void may be set aside on motion.[57] A separate action is necessary if none of the statutory grounds for vacation on motion exist.[58]

Costs[59] should not be allowed on denial of a motion unopposed by the other party.[60] Statutory costs will go only when the order is of the kind specified.[61]

MULTIFARIOUSNESS; MULTIPLICITY; MUNICIPAL AIDS AND RELIEFS, see latest topical index.

MUNICIPAL BONDS.

"Municipal bonds" includes all public bonds, but not warrants for the payment of public money.[62]

§ 1. Power to issue.[63]—To authorize the issue of bonds by municipalities, the power must be conferred on them by the constitution[64] or by statute.[65] Such statutes will be strictly construed,[66] and in determining their validity the Federal

52. That the judge started to write it is not enough (Crystal Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Marion Gas Co. [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 15), and there should be a memorandum or at least more than mere oral evidence (Id.).

53. See 4 C. L. 706.

54. MacFarland v. Saunders, 25 App. D. C. 438.

55. Motions for new trial. Whitney v. Superior Ct. of San Francisco [Cal.] 82 P. 37; Vinson v. Los Angeles Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 82 P. 53.

56. Order of examination made by judge may be vacated on motion to special term under Code Civ. Proc. § 772. In re Schlotterer, 93 N. Y. S. 895.

57. Prouty v. Moss, 111 Ill. App. 536.

58. Dunsmuir v. Coffey [Cal.] 82 P. 682.

59. See 4 C. L. 706, n. 61.

60. In re Collins' Estate, 93 N. Y. S. 342.

61. Those authorized on denial not allowable on grant of motion. Rev. Code Civ. Proc. § 550. Schlachter v. St. Bernard's Roman Catholic Church of Hoven [S. D.] 105 N. W. 279.

62. See Municipal Corporations, 4 C. L. 720; Counties, 5 C. L. 857, etc.

63. See 4 C. L. 706.

64. Where the constitution directed the payment of public school certificates that might thereafter be issued by the city council out of the proceeds of the sale of constitutional bonds of a certain issue, previously authorized for the liquidation of a city debt, and where all of the bonds thus authorized had been disposed of by the board of liquidation, it was held that mandamus would not lie to compel the issuance of additional bonds to pay belated certificates issued by the council after the exhaustion of the bond issue. If the fund has proved insufficient the remedy is legislative, not judicial. State v. Board of Liquidation of City Debt [La.] 39 So. 448.

65. Laws 1895, p. 65, authorizing cities of the 4th class to borrow money on bonds for the purpose of establishing electric light works if two-thirds of the voters assented thereto, did not repeal by implication Rev. St. 1889, art. 2, c. 31, empowering cities to incur indebtedness and issue bonds for any purpose authorized by the charter on the assent of two-thirds of the voters, and consequently the former act was not the only statutory warrant of authority for the issue of electric light bonds. Evans v. McFarland, 186 Mo. 703, 85 S. W. 873.

66. The City of Placerville, which had been incorporated under a special act, was authorized by Act April 3, 1863, to issue bonds. By act of April 6, 1863, the city was reincorporated and there was an express provision repealing the act incorporating the city and all amendatory acts, which was held to repeal the bond act and to render the bonds issued thereunder void. Wichman v. Placerville [Cal.] 81 P. 537. In the act authorizing "bonds in ald of internal improvements, improving streets, highways, etc.," the phrase beginning with the word "improving" limits the preceding one, and confines the aid to the works enumerated in such phrase. State v. Weston [Neb.] 96 N. Y. 668. Amendment providing that limitation shall not apply to liquidation bonds for payment of debts existing when act was passed. Smith v. Vicksburg [Miss.] 38 So. 301.

MUNICIPAL BONDS—Cont'd.

courts will adopt the construction put upon them by the highest state court at the time the bonds were issued.[67] Constitutional provisions requiring statutes to contain but one subject,[68] and as to the passage of local and special laws[69] and the like, must, of course, be complied with.[70] Authority to the mayor and council to issue bonds authorizes the council to issue them over the mayor's veto.[71] Bonds may be issued only for public purposes.[72] The fact that a city is authorized to issue municipal bonds for school purposes does not deprive a school district embracing it of the power to issue school bonds in the manner prescribed by statute.[73] An act authorizing the issue of bonds is a revenue bill.[74]

Refunding bonds.[75]—The legislature may require a county to fund its debt, not leaving it any discretion,[76] and may authorize the funding of a debt incurred for current expenses.[77] Where refunding bonds are issued, the original debt is merged therein.[78]

Railroad aid bonds.[79]—Counties which issue bonds for railway stock do not hold the latter in a governmental capacity but subject to the same rights and liabilities as private corporations and individuals.[80] A town cannot complain that its

67. 91 Ohio Laws, p. 543, which authorized counties of a certain population to levy an extra tax and to issue bonds in anticipation for improvement of public roads, was not a law of a general nature within the meaning of Ohio Const. art. 2, § 26, providing that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state" as such provision was construed by the state courts originally although they had subsequently changed their construction. Rees v. Olmsted [C. C. A.] 135 F. 296. See 4 C. L. 707, n. 73.

68. Act Feb. 25, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 59), authorizing cities and towns to issue bonds is not invalid as containing more than one subject, because it contains provisions for an election and the issuance of bonds in accordance with the result thereof. Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745.

69. Act Feb. 25, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 59) is not rendered a local act by the provisions of § 10 exempting certain cities from its operation. Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745. A special act authorizing the appointment of a board of county road commissioners, and making them a body corporate, does not render the act invalid under the constitutional limitation that no special act shall be passed conferring corporate powers, as at most such a body is a local organization for the purpose of civil administration. Rees v. Olmsted [C. C. A.] 135 F. 296.

70. Const. § 222, empowering the legislature to pass "laws" authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds, does not require the passage of more than one law to confer such power on a city or town. Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745.

71. Where the town council has authority to pass an ordinance by a two-thirds vote over the mayor's veto. Diefenderfer v. State [Wyo.] 80 P. 667.

72. Bonus bonds for building a factory invalid. Schmid v. Frankfort [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 473, 104 N. W. 668. May be issued for drainage purposes. Sisson v. Board of Sup'rs of Buena Vista County [Iowa] 104 N. W. 454.

73. Power conferred on city of Los Angeles by its charter is not exclusive and does not prevent school district comprising that city and contiguous territory from issuing school bonds in accordance with the provisions of Pol. Code, §§ 1880-1887. Los Angeles City School Dist. v. Longden [Cal.] 83 P. 246.

74. Where they must pass three several readings, a bill authorizing bonds may be amended after the second reading by striking out a provision authorizing the county commissioner to purchase bonds before they became due, since that did not increase the tax or materially change the bill. Chatham County Com'rs v. Stafford, 138 N. C. 453, 50 S. E. 862.

75. See 4 C. L. 707.

76. Certain phrases of the act "If the bonds authorized are issued" construed and held not to show that the act was not mandatory. Jones v. Madison County Com'rs, 137 N. C. 579, 50 S. E. 291.

77. Chatham County Com'rs v. Stafford, 138 N. C. 453, 50 S. E. 862. Where a city was authorized to fund its existing indebtedness it cannot, three years later, fund a floating indebtedness of substantially the same amount, as part of it was not the same as existed at the time the law was passed, though the revenues and expenditures of the city had been substantially equal since. Smith v. Vicksburg [Miss.] 38 So. 301.

78. After proceedings have been started to issue bonds for outstanding warrants, no action can be maintained on the latter, but if the sale of the bonds and the payment of the warrants was unreasonably delayed, an action might be maintained to vacate the proceedings. De Roberts v. Cross [Okl.] 82 P. 735.

79. See 4 C. L. 708.

80. Where it has representatives in the directorate it is bound by their action. Hinds & Adams Counties v. Natchez, J. & C. R. Co., 85 Miss. 599, 38 So. 189.

bonds have been turned over by the railroad to a construction company under an illegal contract.[81]

Limitation of indebtedness.[82]—The amount that may be borrowed is usually limited in some way, as to a certain percentage of the last preceding assessment,[83] or to such a sum as will not increase the annual rate of taxation.[84] So too, the amount of indebtedness which a municipality may incur is often limited to a certain percentage of the assessed value of the taxable property.[85] The legislature cannot authorize or compel a city to increase its indebtedness beyond the constitutional limit.[86] Bonds expressly payable only out of a special tax do not constitute a debt within the constitutional meaning.[87]

Curative acts.[88]—The legislature may cure what it could originally have authorized and the act may operate retrospectively.[89] Constitutional provisions that acts shall be confined to a single subject[90] and against special legislation must, of course, be complied with.[91]

81. The contract if void because the board of directors of the two companies were the same, was ratified by the lapse of 14 years. Rice v. Shealy [S. C.] 50 S. E. 868.

82. See 4 C. L. 708. See, also, Municipal Corporations, 6 C. L. 714; Counties, 5 C. L. 857.

83. Bonds issued June 17, 1890, were within the 10% limit on the basis of the assessment of 1889, but exceeded the limit on the basis of the assessment of 1890, which was completed June 12, 1890, but which the board had the right to modify until July 10, and they were held valid in the hands of innocent purchasers. Platt v. Hitchcock County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 929.

84. Const. art. 10, § 11, authorizes a tax of 50 cents for city purposes without requiring a vote therefor, section 12 provides that no city shall become indebted in a greater amount than its annual revenue without the assent of two-thirds of the voters, and it was held that where bonds were issued with the assent of two-thirds of the voters for the establishment of an electric light plant, a levy of a tax of 25 cents, in addition to the 50 cent tax, to pay the interest on the bonds, was legal. Evans v. McFarland, 186 Mo. 703, 85 S. W. 873.

85. Amendment to Vicksburg city charter providing that city may issue bonds for purpose, among others, of liquidating existing indebtedness not to exceed a certain limit, but that such limit shall not be applicable to bonds issued for the purpose of liquidating any indebtedness existing when the amendment becomes operative, does not authorize their issue to pay a portion of the floating debt not actually existing when the amendment was adopted, but contracted afterwards for the payment of ordinary current expenses which were not paid out of current revenues because the latter were used to pay deficits from former years, when the bonded debt would thereby be made to exceed the prescribed limit. Smith v. Vicksburg [Miss.] 38 So. 301. Constitutional amendment of Feb. 8, 1901, providing that limitation on indebtedness of cities shall not apply to bonded indebtedness incurred by certain cities where proceeds are applied solely for the purchase of water works, construed, and held that the provision therein that the revenue from such waterworks shall be devoted solely to the maintenance and operation of the same applies only to the city of Georgetown and not to the city of Columbia. Seegers v. Gibbes [S. C.] 52 S. E. 586. Such amendment repeals, as to such cities, Const. art. 10, § 5, providing that several political divisions or municipal corporations, covering the same territory, possessing the power to levy a tax or collect a debt shall so exercise their power to increase their debts that the aggregate debt upon any territory shall never exceed 15 per cent of the value of all taxable property therein. Id.

86. Even for the purpose of meeting the cost of public improvements, as of a bridge on a public highway, the duty of making which is imposed by legislature upon the city. In re Opinion of the Justices [Me.] 60 A. 85.

87. Board of supervisors of county were authorized to issue drainage bonds which should declare on their face that they were only payable out of a tax to be levied and assessed on the lands benefited. Sisson v. Board of Sup'rs of Buena Vista County [Iowa] 104 N. W. 454. The city purchased two boilers for its electric light plant, but provided that an appropriation therefor should be made the next year, but that said city should in no way obligate itself to pay for said boilers until an appropriation was made. A taxpayer was refused an injunction to restrain the incurring of the indebtedness. Bailey v. Sioux Falls [S. D.] 103 N. W. 16.

88. See 4 C. L. 709.

89. May validate bonds notwithstanding that the polls were open at only two of the three polling places, that the election was called by resolution and not by ordinance, and that certain ballots were rejected by the officers of election, but the legislature may not validate election carried on by bribery and the votes of infamous persons. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016.

90. Act validating a railroad stock subscription and authorizing the issue of bonds to pay for the subscription, and providing for the payment of the bonds. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016.

91. Special legislation as to municipal corporations is not prohibited by constitu-

§ 2. Conditions precedent; submission to vote; provision for payment.[92]—Where bonds may be issued if a given fact exists, it is not necessary as a condition precedent that a declaration should be made that such fact exists, but the fact that action is taken by the body authorized to issue the bonds is sufficient.[93] A resolution to issue bonds and defining their terms is sufficient, though it does not set out the form of the bonds.[94]

Assent of voters or taxpayers.[95]—It is frequently a constitutional or statutory requirement that no bonds can be issued except pursuant to a majority vote of the citizens,[96] or to the assent of two-thirds of the qualified voters.[97] Whether a majority of all those voting, or only a majority of those voting on the particular proposition, is required, depends on the statute under which the question is submitted.[98] The North Carolina constitution requires a popular vote for the creation of a debt other than that for the necessary expenses of a municipal corporation.[99] The voters must assent to the incurring of the debt as well as to the issue of bonds.[1] Where submission of the question to the voters is necessary, it must be done by the proper legal officers of the corporation,[2] and by an ordinance duly passed and published,[3] at a legally called meeting.[4] Mere irregularities in the election which do not affect tional provision that the legislature shall not suspend any law for the benefit of any individual. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016.

92. See 4 C. L. 709.

93. City council was authorized to issue bonds, when it found upon the estimates of the engineer that the proposed work would cost more than fifty cents per front foot. A resolution determining that bonds should be issued without recitals was sufficient. Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 P. 81.

94. The resolution prescribed that the bonds should be serial, extending over 10 years, an equal part payable annually on Jan. 2d, bearing interest at 7% per annum, payable on July and Jan. 2d. Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 P. 81.

95. See 4 C. L. 710.

96. Ala. Const. § 222. But the issuance of interest-bearing warrants by the commissioners' court on the county treasurer, payable at stated times in the future, for the amount of the debt incurred in building a court house is not an issuance of bonds. Tally v. Commissioners' Court of Jackson County [Ala.] 39 So. 167. Where the county debt was created prior to the adoption of the present constitution, the county could issue bonds without submission. Hawkins v. Nicholas County [Ky.] 89 S. W. 484.

97. Where no provision for registration at special elections is made, reference must be had to the tally sheets and not to the registration list of the last preceding annual election. City of Thomasville v. Thomasville Electric Light & Gas Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 169.

98. Pub. Laws 1903, p. 327, § 73, when construed in connection with Gen. Election Law (P. L. 1898, p. 319), § 185, requires only that the issue of bonds be approved by a majority of persons voting on that proposition, and not by a majority of those voting on that and other questions. Murphy v. Long Branch [N. J. Law] 61 A. 593.

99. An act authorizing a city to issue bonds for a waterworks plant and sewage system, and to enable it to grade and pave streets, does not come under the constitutional provision, as such expenses are necessary. City of Greensboro v. Scott, 138 N. C. 181, 50 S. E. 589.

1. Where the city had been running behind in its expenses for a series of years, the voters could not by a two-thirds vote authorize an issue of bonds to raise a fund for the payment of such indebtedness. City of Macon v. Jones [Ga.] 50 S. E. 340.

2. Where school trustees were divided into three classes, two being elected each year for a term of three years, and in consequence of there having been no annual election for three years, all the trustees were elected in 1905, said trustees had power to submit the question of issuing bonds to the electors. Lee v. Trustees of Shepherdsville Graded Common School Dist. No. 4 [Ky.] 88 S. W. 1071.

3. Where by statute the recording of an ordinance in the book of ordinances was made prima facie evidence, evidence of its due publication or posting, the burden was on the town to show the ordinance was void for want of publication or posting. Town of Fletcher v. Hickman [C. C. A.] 136 F. 568.

4. Where orders for special meetings of county commissioners are required to specify the business to be transacted at such special meeting, an order calling a meeting "for the purpose of raising funds to purchase a site for a new court house, and erecting a court house in said county," is sufficient to authorize the board to submit to the electors the question whether bonds shall be issued to purchase a site, erect a court house and jail, and furnish the same, where it is shown the jail was to be a room in the court house. Shoshone County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons [Idaho] 82 P. 105. Semble, the court apparently lays stress on the fact that all the members were present at the special meeting. Id. The presumption is in favor of the regularity of the meeting. A regular adjourned meeting of the town board was adjourned to June 5, when, no quorum being present, the meeting was adjourned to June 8, at which a quorum was present, and the bonds were authorized, and it was held that though the regular meeting had died its result or fairness do not necessarily render it invalid or justify an injunction against the issuance of the bonds.[5]

Notice of election.[6]—The notice must specify the rate of interest exactly and definitely.[7] Provisions as to what shall be set forth in the notice have been held to be directory only when the voters have not been misled;[8] consequently, immaterial errors will be disregarded.[9] Sometimes the mode and terms of the payment of the bonds must be submitted to the voters,[10] but usually this is not required.[11] In the absence of a provision to the contrary it is not necessary that the minutes of the city council show that the notice was given.[12] In Georgia the fact that the notice is silent as to the collection of an annual tax does not prevent the validation of the bonds,[13] but if an illegal provision in this regard forms a part of the call for an election, or the notice thereof, or the authority for holding such election, so as to affect the election itself with illegality, the rule is otherwise.[14]

Providing for payment of bonds.[15]—It is frequently required that the municipality at the time of issuing bonds shall make provision for the payment of principal and interest.[16]

§ 3. Execution.[17]—Bonds must be executed by the legally qualified and acting because of the absence of a quorum, it would be presumed in favor of bona fide holders that the meeting was a special one. Town of Fletcher v. Hickman [C. C. A.] 136 F. 568.

5. Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745. In the absence of a contest, it will be presumed on collateral attack that election held under Act Feb. 25, 1903 (Act 1903, p. 59), was held in accordance with law, and will not be held invalid merely because no returning officer was elected or appointed. Id. Allegation of bill to restrain city from issuing bonds that minutes of city council fail to show that any returning officer was elected for such election, held not equivalent to an averment that no such officer was in fact appointed or elected by the council. Id.

6. See 4 C. L. 711.

7. "Not to exceed six per cent per annum" is insufficient, as it is indefinite. City of Thomasville v. Thomasville Electric Light & Gas Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 169.

8. Acts 1903, p. 91, § 2, required that the notice of special election to be issued by the probate judge shall state the place of the election, but where this was omitted the election was nevertheless held valid, as the same act in §§ 4 and 5 provided that the election should be held in each beat or polling place in the county, and consequently the voters were chargeable with notice thereof. Wilson v. Pike County [Ala.] 39 So. 370.

9. Registration commissioners styled themselves "commissioners of election" in the election notice. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016.

10. Where the election notice had a copy of the proposition to be submitted attached, which contained both the question of issue and payment, the submission was of an indivisible proposition. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016.

11. Const. art. 10, § 12, providing that a city incurring an indebtedness requiring the assent of the voters shall provide for the collection of an annual tax to pay the same, is self-enforcing, and a levy of such tax is mandatory without a direct vote of the people on the levy itself. Evans v. McFarland, 186 Mo. 703, 85 S. W. 873.

12. Under Act Feb. 25, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 59) it is not necessary. Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745.

13. But such provision must be made before the bonds are sold. Woodall v. Adel [Ga.] 50 S. E. 102.

14. But here the inadequate provision for the payment of the bonds was made by a separate ordinance, and it was held that if the city made proper provision the bonds might be validated. Oliver v. Elberton [Ga.] 52 S. E. 15.

15. See 4 C. L. 711.

16. Where ample provision for the payment of both principal and interest was made by the levy of an adequate tax, it is immaterial that the first interest would fall due before the first taxes were collected. Jermyn v. Scranton [Pa.] 62 A. 29. In Georgia "at or before the time of incurring the bonded indebtedness" provision must be made for the assessment and collection of an annual tax sufficient in amount to pay the principal and interest of the debt in 30 years. Civ. Code 1895, § 5894. Oliver v. Elberton [Ga.] 52 S. E. 15. It is not enough that provision is made for a tax sufficient to pay interest and to raise a sum which if invested would pay off the principal at maturity, though provision was made that if there should be any deficiency it should be met by taxation in the year the bonds fell due. Id. If the election was legally held, a failure to provide for payment of the bonds before instituting proceedings for validation does not prevent such validation, but lawful provision for that purpose must be made before the bonds are issued. Id. Even after the bonds have been validated a provision for an annual tax must be made before the bonds can be sold and the debt be thereby actually incurred. Woodall v. Adel [Ga.] 50 S. E. 102.

17. See 4 C. L. 712.

officers, and are void if they show on their face that they were executed by different persons as officers.[18]

§ 4. Form and requisites.[19]—It is sometimes prescribed that the bonds shall be payable annually[20] or that they shall be registered, and failure to comply with the requirement will render the bonds void.[21] Where bonds are required to bear the date of issue they cannot be antedated,[22] and they must run for exactly the term required by statute.[23] Coupons may bear the lithographed signatures of the officers.[24] A warrant is not a negotiable instrument and so not a municipal bond.[25] It is often provided that mere irregularities in the proceedings, or the omissions or neglect of any officer, charged with duties in relation thereto, shall not affect the validity of the bonds.[26]

Validation proceedings.—Notice of the time and place set for the hearing of the petition for validation must be given in the manner prescribed.[27] The judgment of validation determines that the municipality has the right to incur a debt and has complied with the provisions authorizing the issue of bonds.[28]

§ 5. Issue and sale.[29]—The fact that a better bid is received does not authorize a town to ignore its previous acceptance of a buyer's proposal,[30] and where the second sale is made on condition that the first one be set aside, it may accept as final a judgment against it in a suit by the first purchaser.[31] In Ohio, bonds which have once been offered at public sale and remain unsold may be afterwards disposed of at private sale.[32]

18. Bonds were prepared and dated Dec. 30, 1890, and the coupons bore the lithographed signature of the person who was then secretary. Eighteen months later, after the secretary had died, the bonds were delivered signed by his successor in office, but the coupons were unchanged, and it was held that the bonds were void if considered as issued when prepared because they were not signed, and they were void if considered as issued when delivered because they were antedated. Wright v. East Riverside Irr. Dist. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 313.

19. See 4 C. L. 712.

20. And a tax is levied so as to pay the amount that falls due each year. P. L. 1901, 40 amended by P. L. 1901, 586, applying to cities of the second class in Pennsylvania, except as to funding bonds. Jermyn v. Scranton [Pa.] 62 A. 29.

21. By constitution and statute it was required that bonds should bear the certificate of the secretary and auditor of state before they were issued, and in default of this they were nonenforceable in an action at law. Frank v. Butler County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 119.

22. For the effect would be to make the bonds payable within a shorter time than that authorized by law. Wright v. East Riverside Irr. Dist. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 313.

23. Bonds were authorized for 20 years, they were dated Dec. 30, 1890, and made due Jan. 1, 1911, and this was held bad. Wright v. East Riverside Irr. Dist. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 313.

24. Wright v. East Riverside Irr. Dist. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 313.

25. Though in form payable to bearer. Field v. Highland Park [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 340, 104 N. W. 393.

26. Act Feb. 25, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 59). Blakey v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 745. Hence fact that ordinance calling the election provides that bonds shall be either registered or coupon at the option of the holder, while act requires them to be coupon bonds, does not render them invalid in the absence of an allegation that the bonds whose issue is sought to be enjoined are registered. Id.

27. Where, at time and place set for hearing, it appeared that notice had only been published once instead of twice as required by Acts 1897, p. 84, § 6, but the city had been served with the rule and had answered, held that the court was not wholly without jurisdiction, but had authority to reassign the hearing for another time and place by order, and to cause a new publication to be made reciting the continuance and giving notice of such time and place. Oliver v. Elberton [Ga.] 52 S. E. 15.

28. But even after they are validated provision must be made for their payment before the bonds can be sold. Woodall v. Adel [Ga.] 50 S. E. 102.

29. See 4 C. L. 712.

30. Neither bid was made in response to the advertisement for bids. Diefenderfer v. State [Wyo.] 80 P. 667.

31. The authorities took no appeal but proceeded as far as possible to comply with the judgment, except as they were prevented by the refusal of the mayor and clerk to perform mere ministerial duties. Diefenderfer v. State [Wyo.] 80 P. 667.

32. Where bonds were advertised for sale, and bids received, but before an award was made sale was enjoined and bids withdrawn, and demurrer to the petition in the injunction suit sustained by agreement, held bonds had been once offered according to law and "remained unsold" within the provisions of § 97, Municipal Code, and a bona fide private sale is valid. Vodakin v. Crilly, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 341, afg. 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 609; affirmed by the supreme court without report, 73 Ohio St.

Statutes in some states require the election of a commissioner to sell waterwork bonds and to build and control the waterworks.[33]

§ 6. Rights and liabilities arising out of illegal issue.[34]—Municipal officers are presumed to act within the scope of their powers until the contrary appears,[35] and so illegal bonds may be binding on the municipality when in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, but it is incumbent on him to prove that he purchased them for value and in good faith.[36] A city cannot recover taxes to pay interest on, and to create a sinking fund for, void bonds.[37] A taxpayer in behalf of himself and others may sue to recover sums collected by taxation to pay illegal bonds,[38] or he may enjoin their further collection, but the bondholders are necessary parties.[39] Equity will not interfere to require a public officer to certify and register bonds after long laches on the part of the holder.[40] Bonds issued by a de facto corporation, in conformity to the law authorizing their issuance by de jure corporations, and subsequently assumed by a succeeding de jure corporation in conformity with a statute authorizing such assumption, are valid obligations of the latter corporation.[41]

§ 7. Transfer.[42]—Purchasers must take notice of the constitution and laws of the state and must see that they have been complied with,[43] and cannot recover if the bonds show on their face that they were not issued in conformity to the law under which they were issued.[44] It is a question for the jury whether the holder is an innocent purchaser.[45] Testimony of the original owner of an illegal bond that he did not impart his knowledge of its character to the purchaser is prima facie evidence that the latter was a bona fide purchaser.[46]

33. Act March 2, 1896, Civ. Code §§ 2008, 2009, requiring that, at elections for the purpose of deciding whether waterworks bonds shall be issued, a commissioner of public works shall be elected to sell the bonds and to build and control the waterworks, applies only to cities in which there are no waterworks. Civ. Code §§ 2021, 2022, governs elections for the purpose of issuing bonds to extend waterworks already established, and in such case no commissioner need be chosen. Seegers v. Gibbes [S. C.] 52 S. E. 586.

34. See 4 C. L. 713.

35. Suit on county warrants. Board of Com'rs of Greer County v. Gregory [Okl.] 81 P. 422.

36. Bonds given in aid of a private enterprise. Schmid v. Frankfort [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 473, 104 N. W. 668.

37. But the taxpayer must prove conclusively that the bonds are void in the hands of any holder. City of Tyler v. Tyler Bldg. & Loan Ass'n [Tex.] 86 S. W. 750.

38. But not where the county has paid the money over to its creditors, as in such case the amount of recovery must be paid by the taxpayers themselves. Hawkins v. Nicholas County [Ky.] 89 S. W. 484.

39. Bradford v. Westbrook [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 550, 88 S. W. 382.

40. The state auditor had refused, the holder claimed wrongfully, to certify to bonds in 1880, but under state laws he had the right to secure a review of the matter by mandamus within four years, and it was held that after 20 years it was too late to invoke the aid of a court of equity. Frank v. Butler County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 119.

41. Where a de facto corporation reincorporated and assumed to pay them, notwithstanding the fact that it had less than 1,000 inhabitants when the bonds were issued. Bradford v. Westbrook [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 550, 88 S. W. 382.

42. See 4 C. L. 714.

43. Where funding bonds can only be issued by an ordinance duly passed the purchaser must see that the ordinance is regularly passed and authorized the issue, but he is not charged with notice of other parts of the record. City of Tyler v. Tyler Building & Loan Ass'n [Tex.] 86 S. W. 750.

44. Bona fide holders are chargeable with notice of the law under which the bonds were issued and cannot recover if the bonds show on their face that they were not issued in conformity thereto, as where they were required to bear the date of issue and both bonds and coupons to be signed by the secretary, the bonds were signed by the person who was secretary at the time they were delivered, and the coupons bore the lithographed signature of the person who was secretary at the time they were printed. Wright v. East Riverside Irr. Dist. [C. C. A.] 138 F. 313.

45. There was evidence that a former holder had mailed a letter to plaintiff informing him that the bonds were issued in aid of a private enterprise, but plaintiff denied ever receiving it. Schmid v. Frankfort [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 473, 104 N. W. 668.

46. Evidence that the original purchaser had stated that he had made the bonds payable at the bank, the alleged innocent purchaser, to indemnify it against signing a bond for the erection of the factory for which the bonds were given, not made in the presence of any representative of the bank, or evidence that the original purchaser had stated that he intended to go through

Recitals.[47]—A bond issued under a statute prescribing a public record as determinative of the amount of authorized issue, which on its face exceeds the limit of the entire issue under such record, is void as to such excess in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value, notwithstanding recitals therein of compliance with all legal requirements and the payment of instalments of interest thereon.[48] The fact that in such case the auditor falsely certifies to the purchaser that the assessable property is sufficient to support the issue is immaterial.[49]

Estoppel.[50]—As a rule general recitals in municipal bonds that they have been issued in compliance with all requirements of the law and in proper form estop the municipality, as against bona fide holders, to deny their validity.[51] In some states, however, a contrary rule prevails.[52] Where interest has been paid for many years the form of putting the bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder. is inadmissible. Thompson v. Mecosta [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 474, 104 N. W. 694. The test is not whether the purchaser had notice of such facts as would lead a prudent man to make inquiry, but whether the facts were such as to make it bad faith not to make inquiry. Id.

47. See 4 C. L. 714, and Special Article, 4 C. L. 714.

48. Where statute provides that bonds shall not exceed ten per cent of the taxable value of the realty according to the assessment roll of the preceding year. Corbet v. Rocksbury [Minn.] 103 N. W. 11. The assessment roll was admissible in evidence to show the bonds exceeded the limit, notwithstanding the name of the town was incorrectly given, or that it included some land that was not in the town and omitted other that should have been included, and although there were many interlineations and it had not been signed and sealed by the county auditor as required by law. Id.

49. Corbet v. Rocksbury [Minn.] 103 N. W. 11.

50. See 4 C. L. 714.

51. City held estopped to deny validity of funding bonds, notwithstanding invalidity of bonds which they were issued to refund, where ordinance authorizing their issue recited that city was legally indebted on outstanding bonds, and bonds were approved by attorney general, which approval was by statute (Rev. St. 1895, art. 918f) made prima facie evidence of their validity, and bonds themselves recited the purpose of their issue and everything necessary to be done in issuing them or the bonds refunded had been legally done. City of Tyler v. Tyler Bldg. & Loan Ass'n [Tex.] 86 S. W. 750. The recitals of officers estop the corporation with respect to any condition which they have power to perform or to determine, or as to failure to comply with any rule of action relative to the mere time or manner of procedure. Platt v. Hitchcock County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 929. Where the officers have authority to make recitals, they are binding in favor of innocent holders. The county commissioners had authority to appoint the road commissioners with power of removal, and the latter, in issuing bonds, were simply the agents of the former, who were thereby precluded from any defense based on the irregularity of their proceedings. Rees v. Olmstead [C. C. A.] 135 F. 296.

52. In Missouri a general recital, that "all acts, conditions and things required to be done precedent to and in the issuance of this bond have been properly done in regular and due form and time as required by law, and that the total indebtedness of the city, including this bond, does not exceed the constitutional or statutory limitation" is regarded as a mere self-serving narration estopping no one, and bars no road to the investigation of the legality of the bonds. Evans v. McFarland, 186 Mo. 703, 85 S. W. 873.

Note. Evans v. McFarland, 186 Mo. 703, 85 S. W. 873, follows previous rulings of the courts of the same state which say that such recitals are neither prima facie nor conclusive evidence of the required authority to issue the bonds and that they do not dispense with the necessity of proving what they recite when an action is brought on the bond. The steps required to be taken, or acts done, in order to confer authority must be shown to have been taken by evidence outside mere recital on the face of the bonds, and if a record is required by law to be kept, such record is the best evidence of the facts, and primarily none other is admissible. Thornburg v. School District, 175 Mo. 12; Heard v. School District, 45 Mo. App. 660. This view is not without support in other states. Cagwin v. Town of Hancock, 84 N. Y. 532; Lippincott v. Pana, 92 Ill. 24; Veeder v. Lima, 19 Wis. 298. The federal courts uniformly hold that where a city has power, under the constitution and laws, to issue certain bonds and such bonds are issued containing recitals representing that everything required by law to be done has been done, before issuing the bonds, purchasers have the right to assume that such recitals are true. Hackett v. Ottawa, 99 U. S. 86, 25 Law. Ed. 363; Ottawa v. National Bank, 105 U. S. 342, 26 Law. Ed. 1127; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 Law. Ed. 760; Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 46 Law. Ed. 552; City of Huron v. Savings Bank, 86 F. 272, 49 L. R. A. 534; Clapp v. Village of Marice City, 111 F. 103; Board of Com'rs v. Vandriss, 115 F. 866. And a majority of the state courts have followed the rule established by the supreme court of the United States. Thompson v. Village of Mecosta, 127 Mich. 522; South Hutchinson v. Barnum 63 Kan. 872; Fulton v. Town of Riverton, 42

the court will sustain the bonds, unless some insuperable legal obstacle exists.[53] There can be no estoppel by conduct or ratification where there is a want of power.[54]

§ 8. Payment.[55]—In the absence of constitutional or statutory provisions, territory detached from a municipality is not liable to taxation for payment of the debts of the municipality.[56] The bondholder is protected by the contract clause of the federal constitution where, in the contract for the issue, the city stipulates to levy a certain tax.[57] Though the option is reserved in state bonds to pay and retire them before they are due, the exercise of that option is a legislative, not an executive, power.[58] It is not necessary to make specific provision as to the method of notifying holders of outstanding bonds as to the exercise of the option to redeem.[59] A coupon bears interest after maturity.[60]

Payment from special fund or tax.[61]—To anticipate the collection of instalments of special assessments, cities frequently are authorized to issue bonds payable out of such assessments,[62] which fact should be stated on their face.[63] The levy of a tax to pay bonds can be compelled by mandamus where the authorities have omitted to levy one.[64] Where taxes have been collected for the payment of bonds, the officer holds them as trustee for the bondholders and may be required to pay them over.[65] Where provision is made for a fund for payment it cannot be diverted,[66] but that need not be the exclusive mode of payment.[67] Repeals by implica-

Minn. 395; Supervisors v. Brown, 67 Miss. 684; Kerr v. Cory, 105 Pa. St. 282; State v. Commissioners, 37 Ohio St. 526.—3 Mich. L. R. 671.

53. Where the last preceding assessment controlled, and by that of 1889 the bonds were within the limit, and by that of 1890 they exceeded it. The assessment of 1890 was completed on June 12, 1890, but the board had power to modify it until July 10, the bonds were issued on June 17, 1890, and they were sustained, as the officers who made the recitals had the power to make the assessment of 1889 the last one. Platt v. Hitchcock County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 929; Tolman v. Onslow County Com'rs, 140 F. 89.

54. Bonds issued under an act of April 3, 1863, which was held to be impliedly repealed by an act passed three days later Wichman v. Placerville [Cal.] 81 P. 537.

55. See 4 C. L. 715.

56. Statute providing for detaching of territory constitutional, and the inhabitants of such detached territory are not subject to taxation to pay for the bonds, though they agreed to pay their share, as authority to levy taxes is not the subject of agreement. Miller v. Pineville [Ky.] 89 S. W. 261.

57. Legislation limiting the taxing power without providing a substantial equivalent is void. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 88 S. W. 542.

58. Case of state bonds, and it was held that the governor had no right to retire them with money in the treasury where the legislature had made no appropriation for that purpose, but had merely provided for the payment of interest. Colbert v. State [Miss.] 39 So. 65.

59. But council finally made such provision here. Diefenderfer v. State [Wyo.] 80 P. 667.

60. Rice v. Shealy [S. C.] 50 S. E. 868.

61. See 4 C. L. 716.

62. An act authorizing the issue of bonds to anticipate the second and succeeding instalment does not authorize the issue of bonds payable out of the first instalment, but an abutting property owner cannot complain as he is not injured. Gage v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 107, 74 N. E. 726.

63. Drainage bonds were required to state on their face that they were only payable out of a special tax to be levied on lands drained. Sisson v. Board of Sup'rs of Buena Vista County [Iowa] 104 N. W. 454.

64. This may be done, though it makes the levy for the present year exceed the constitutional limit, provided that such levy when added to the levy for the year when it should have been made does not make the levy for the past year exceed the limit. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 88 S. W. 542.

65. But where the officer is restrained by an injunction issued by a state court in a proceeding in which the bond holders are not parties, the officer will not be required to disobey the state court. Tolman v. Onslow County Com'rs, 140 F. 89.

66. Provision had been made for the levy of a tax for an interest and sinking fund to pay refunding bonds, and it was held that the holders of the original bonds, who had refused to exchange them for refunding bonds, could not by mandamus compel the city to appropriate part of these funds for the benefit of the holders of the original bonds. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex. Civ. App.] 88 S. W. 536, afd. Id. [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 88 S. W. 542. The holders of the refunding bonds were necessary parties to any such proceeding. Id.

67. Though the city had provided for the payment of refunding bonds and could not divert the same, it might, under general provisions of its charter authorizing it to raise money to pay all bonded debts, make a necessary levy. City of Austin v. Cahill [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 88 S. W. 542.

tion of such provisions are not favored.[68] Where the bonds have been declared illegal, a tax levied therefor is also illegal.[69] If the bonds are payable only out of a special assessment, the municipality is not the debtor but merely the agent or statutory trustee for their collection,[70] and it makes no difference in its liability that an extension of time for payment of such assessments is given as authorized by statute.[71] The holder is entitled only to his proportion of the money collected, less what had been already paid him.[72]

§ 9. Scaling overissue.[73]—Bonds issued in excess of the statutory limit are void only as to such excess.[74]

§ 10. Enforcement of improvement bonds against abutters.[75]—In order that assessment bonds may be valid there must have been a valid assessment,[76] and they are rendered void by the subsequent vacation of the assessment.[77] The legislature may provide that the bonds after their issuance shall be conclusive evidence of the regularity of all proceedings and of the validity of the lien on the property out of which they are payable.[78] The invalidity of special assessment bonds, though preventing the existence of a subsisting lien, does not prevent the acquiring of a lien by proper proceedings.[79] The lien of such bonds is paramount to all mortgages.[80] Property owners benefited by an improvement cannot object to the confirmation of an assessment because unauthorized bonds have been issued payable out of such assessment.[81]

68. Act 1888 (20 St. at L. p. 12) delegating to the fiscal officers of the county the power to fix the tax levy to pay township bonds was not repealed by Civ. Code 1902, § 799, requiring the county commissioners to make an estimate of expenses for the comptroller general to be submitted to the general assembly. Rice v. Shealy [S. C.] 50 S. E. 868.

69. Where the levy was for "public school improvement bonds (1899)," the year could not be considered as surplusage so that the levy could be sustained for the bonds of 1889. Hellman v. Los Angeles [Cal.] 82 P. 313.

70. But the municipality may be liable for failure to properly perform this duty. It is not liable for delinquent assessments where it has turned the same over to the county treasurer for collection, though nothing has been collected, and it was only liable for the interest it actually received on the funds collected and in its hands. Jewell v. Superior [C. C. A.] 135 F. 19.

71. The bondholder had knowledge of the law authorizing the extension, and his lien was not lost. Jewell v. Superior [C. C. A.] 135 F. 19.

72. The maxim that equity aids the vigilant and not the slothful was not applicable here. Jewell v. Superior [C. C. A.] 135 F. 19.

73. See 4 C. L. 716.

74. Corbet v. Rocksbury [Minn.] 103 N. W. 11.

75. See 4 C. L. 717.

76. See, also, Public Works and Improvements, 4 C. L. 1124. Sometimes the petition of the owners of a majority of feet fronting on the improvement is a condition precedent. After the passage of the resolution of intention to make the improvement and the issue of bonds, the evidence was conclusive that the persons whose names appeared on the petition were owners of a majority of the frontage. Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 P. 81.

77. City council vacating an assessment for a street improvement on appeal to it under St. 1885, p. 156, c. 153, § 11, has no authority to rescind its action, and bonds issued on an assessment vacated on such appeal cease to be a lien on the property, notwithstanding the fact that the council attempts to reinstate the assessment as of its original date by rescinding its previous action. Creed v. McCombs, 146 Cal. 449, 80 P. 679.

78. It cures objections as to details of advertising and receiving bids, the letting and execution of the contract, the supervision of the work, and in fact everything except such jurisdictional requirements as the legislature could not have dispensed with originally. Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 P. 81. The law was subsequently amended by providing that the bonds should only be prima facie evidence of regularity of proceedings. This was held to change only the burden of proof. Creed v. McCombs, 146 Cal. 449, 80 P. 679.

79. The invalidity arose from the council erroneously attempting to rescind its action in sustaining an appeal and to reinstate an assessment which had been vacated. Creed v. McCombs, 146 Cal. 449, 80 P. 679.

80. Though later in time it covered the entire estate and was paramount to all liens of a private nature. Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 P. 81.

81. The statute limited the rate of interest to five per cent on the deferred instalments, so their burden is not increased by the issuance of bonds payable out of the first instalment of the assessment. Gage v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 107, 74 N. E. 726.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Scope of article.—This article is designed to treat, as strictly as may be proper, the law of municipalities as distinguished from that of streets and other public ways,[82] parks and public grounds,[83] bridges,[84] public utilities, works and improvements,[85] health and sanitation,[86] buildings and injuries therein and building regulations,[87] the local taxing power,[88] licenses and licensing,[89] the granting of franchises,[90] and the law of public officers generally.[91] The particular applications of the general law of municipalities to these several subjects should be sought in the titles just cited. There also will be discussed cases under laws and regulations peculiar to streets and the like. The body of laws relating to each of these largely involves powers and duties of counties, towns, and of the public generally, as well as powers of municipalities. All this has been brought together into those respective titles relating to the subject-matter of such powers and duties.

§ 1. Nature, attributes and elements.[92]—The term municipal corporation as ordinarily applied includes all corporations created for the local exercise of delegated governmental functions.[93] The powers of a municipal corporation are wholly delegated,[94] but in the exercise of its powers so conferred it is subject only to constitutional limitations.[95] Its functions are of two classes, governmental and private, the distinction being chiefly important in determining liability for tort.[96]

82. See Highways and Streets, 5 C. L. 1645.
83. Parks and Public Grounds, 4 C. L. 876.
84. Bridges, 5 C. L. 439.
85. Public Works and Improvements, 4 C. L. 1124; Sewers and Drains, 4 C. L. 1429; Waters and Water Supply, 4 C. L. 1824.
86. Health, 5 C. L. 1641.
87. Buildings and Building Restrictions, 5 C. L. 487.
88. Taxes, 4 C. L. 1605, and see Public Works and Improvements, 4 C. L. 1124, for local assessments.
89. Licenses, 6 C. L. 436.
90. Franchises, 5 C. L. 1518.
91. Officers and Public Employes, 4 C. L. 854.
92. See 4 C. L. 721.
93. The school board of Detroit being created as a body corporate, authorized to hold property and sue and be sued, is a municipal corporation and not liable for acts of its employes. Whitehead v. Board of Education of Detroit [Mich.] 102 N. W. 1028.
94. See post, § 7.
95. See post, §§ 7, 9, 10.
96. See post, § 11.

§ 2. Creation and corporate existence. A. Creation and organization.[97]—The creation of municipal corporations by special act being prohibited by the constitutions of most states,[98] the usual method of incorporation is for the inhabitants of the locality desiring to incorporate to avail themselves of the provisions of a general law[99] which laws ordinarily provide conditions precedent of population, area or physical characteristics.[1] Acceptance thereof is usually signified by an election ordered by a county officer or board, on a petition signed by a portion of the residents of the territory proposed to be incorporated, the number and qualification of the signers being fixed by statute[2] as are the requisites of the petition.[3] The officer to whom the petition is presented on determining that it is sufficient in point of contents and signature, which determination is usually held to be final,[4] orders the election, prescribing the time of holding the same and the notice thereof to be given.[5] Record entry of his action in this regard is usually required, but it has been held that he may make this nunc pro tunc of his own motion.[6] After the election, the holding of which is governed largely by general election laws,[7] the incorporation is consummated by an official declaration of the result.[8] The lands included in a municipality are those mentioned in the petition, though the election notice misdescribed them.[9] Incorporation of a city does not deprive a railroad of rights acquired by location on property within the limits of the city as established.[10]

97. See 4 C. L. 721.

98. See post, § 3.

99. The general municipal corporation act (Act 1898, No. 136) took effect in all municipalities within its scope without any acceptance. Browne v. Providence, 114 La. 631, 38 So. 478.

1. Whether the determination of the officer ordering the election is final as to such conditions, see State v. Larkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 90 S. W. 912; People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620. Where the statute prohibits the incorporation of territory not intended for town purposes, whether the territory included in a proposed incorporation is so intended is a question of fact. Attempted incorporation including large tracts of uninhabited grazing and swamp lands held invalid. State v. Merchant [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 483.

2. Persons temporarily moving into territory sought to be incorporated and persons to whom land is conveyed to qualify them to sign are not "electors owning land and residing in the territory sought to be incorporated." People v. Stratton [Colo.] 81 P. 245.

3. Petition for incorporation need not state that there is a town within the proposed boundaries, the statute not so requiring. People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620. A plat attached to a petition for organization will be considered part of the petition so as to supply deficiencies of description. People v. New, 214 Ill. 287, 73 N. E. 362.

4. A finding by the county judge on petition to order an election that the proposed territory contained the requisite number of inhabitants is conclusive. State v. Larkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 90 S. W. 912. In the absence of fraud the finding of the board of supervisors that the proposed territory contained the requisite number of inhabitants and that the signers of the petition were residents thereof is conclusive. People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620. And evidence that they mistakenly believed certain territory to be within the proposed limits and acted under such mistake is inadmissible. Id. It is not the duty of the county judge to determine whether the proposed territory is of a proper character for incorporation. If it is not the incorporation is void. State v. Larkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 90 S. W. 912. Where the statute provides that "any portion of a county containing not less than 500 inhabitants" may be incorporated, the extent and character of the territory to be included is entirely in the discretion of the supervisors. People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620.

5. Where the notice of election was altered as to the proposed boundaries after signature by the judge of the order for election, the election had pursuant thereto did not authorize incorporation. State v. Merchant [Tex. Civ. App.] 85 S. W. 483. Where the statute requires only four notices of an election and the board ordered five but had one posted outside the proposed limits, the election was valid. People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620.

6. The county judge having failed to enter on his minutes an order for an election on the question of incorporation may of his own motion enter it nunc pro tunc after the election is held. State v. Larkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 90 S. W. 912.

7. See Elections, 5 C. L. 1065. Evidence held insufficient to show that enough votes were cast by persons outside the proposed limits to affect the result. People v. Loyalton [Cal.] 82 P. 620. In the absence of statutory prohibition, an election may be held on a holiday. Id.

8. That incorporation takes effect from the declaration and does not relate back to the time of the election. See Little Rock Ry. & Elec. Co. v. North Little Rock [Ark.] 88 S. W. 826.

9. People v. New, 214 Ill. 287, 73 N. E. 362.

(§ 2) B. Consolidation, succession and dissolution.[11]—Consolidation of municipalities is permissible only by legislative authority, and special laws authorizing consolidation are ordinarily prohibited by the constitution.[12] Consolidation is usually effected by a special election initiated and held in manner similar to those for incorporation.[13] A statute extending rules relative to part of a consolidated municipality does not operate to extend such rules to parts of the municipality to which they are not applicable.[14] Alteration or dissolution of a municipal corporation by the legislature does not impair existing municipal contracts.[15] Obligations of a de facto municipality assumed by the succeeding de jure municipality under a statute authorizing such assumption become valid debts.[16]

(§ 2) C. Classes and classification.[17]—Municipalities may be classified for purposes of legislation provided such classification is reasonable and based on real and substantial differences of population or situation.[18]

(§ 2) D. Attack on corporate existence; quo warranto.[19]—The validity of the organization of a de facto municipality cannot be collaterally assailed,[20] quo warranto[21] against the officers of the municipality[22] being the proper remedy. Invalidity of the act incorporating a municipality may be raised by bill to enjoin officers from an official act,[23] and a decree in such a suit is not objectionable as a judicial dissolution of a municipality.[24]

§ 3. The charter; adoption, amendment, repeal and abrogation.[25]—Charters like all other legislative acts are of course subject to all constitutional limitations, such as the requirement of uniformity in taxation,[26] and those relating to the subjects and titles of acts.[27] Special charters while formerly very common are now quite generally forbidden.[28] Special charters antedating the constitutional pro-

10. Dowie v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 214 Ill. 49, 73 N. E. 354.

11. See 4 C. L. 722.

12. Indiana Act 1903, p. 201, c. 105, providing for consolidation of cities having a population between 6,000 and 7,000 is invalid as special, the classifications being arbitrary. Town of Longview v. Crawfordsville, 164 Ind. 117, 73 N. E. 78. An act providing for the annexation of one city to another is an act "regulating the affairs" of municipalities within the constitutional provision as to special legislation. Act April 20, 1905, authorizing the consolidation of contiguous cities, is special legislation, there being but two contiguous cities in the state. Sample v. Pittsburg [Pa.] 62 A. 201.

13. Under a statute providing that on a vote in favor of consolidation the council shall declare the result and the consolidated territory shall then constitute a municipal corporation, the consolidation takes effect from such declaration and does not relate back to the time of the vote. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. North Little Rock [Ark.] 88 S. W. 826.

14. Under Gr. N. Y. Charter, §§ 56, 1068, adoption by the board of education of an existing rule as to salaries of janitors of public schools in certain boroughs, held not an adoption of such rule as to all of Greater New York. People v. Board of Education of New York, 93 N. Y. S. 300.

15. Graham v. Folsom, 26 S. Ct. 245.

16. Bradford v. Westbrook [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 550, 88 S. W. 382.

17. See 4 C. L. 722.

18. See Statutes, 4 C. L. 1527.

19. See 4 C. L. 723.

20. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361; Levitt v. Wilson [Kan.] 83 P. 397.

21. The supreme court has, but the district court has not, a discretion to refuse leave to file an information in the nature of quo warranto to avoid the franchise of a municipality. State v. Village of Kent [Minn.] 104 N. W. 948, exhaustively discussing the remedy by quo warranto as it exists in Minnesota. Discretion exercised by allowing the information to be filed is exhausted and the court must proceed as in other cases. Id.

22. Where the mayor and council are made parties and answer in their official capacity, the municipality need not be joined. Campbell v. Bryant [Va.] 52 S. E. 638. Quo warranto against officers is a proper remedy to litigate the validity of the incorporation of a town. People v. Stratton [Colo.] 81 P. 245. The town is not a necessary party. Id.

23. Bill to enjoin collection of taxes. Campbell v. Bryant [Va.] 52 S. E. 638.

24. Campbell v. Bryant [Va.] 52 S. E. 638.

25. See 4 C. L. 723.

26. A provision in a special act incorporating a municipality exempting the inhabitants thereof from certain taxes infringes the constitutional requirement of uniform taxation (Campbell v. Bryant [Va.] 52 S. E. 638), and where such exemption was one of the principal inducements to the acceptance of the charter, it invalidates the whole act (Id.).

27. Title of act chartering city held to embrace but one subject though it enumerates the numerous provisions of the act. Bass v. Lawrence [Ga.] 52 S. E. 296.

28. Special act held to contain such de-hibition remain in force,[29] and are usually held subject to special amendments which are strictly germane to the original enactment.[30] Where a city existing under a special charter adopts a part of the general charter, its charter becomes pro tanto general.[31] By coming under the general law a special charter is repealed only so far as it is inconsistent.[32] In New Jersey it is held that a general law relating to municipalities repeals all inconsistent provisions in special charters.[33] Where cities are governed by general act, amendments must be within the constitutional limitation as to special acts.[34] An act curing defects in a bona fide attempt to incorporate under the general law is not a special act of incorporation.[35] A charter reincorporating a town as a city impliedly repeals the town charter.[36] Existing ordinances are not repealed by the taking of a new charter[37] or by accepting the general municipality law in lieu of a special charter,[38] and a saving clause in general terms is effective.[39] Grant to a municipality of power to frame its own charter does not warrant the inclusion therein of charter powers not ordinarily appertaining to a municipality.[40] Power of a municipality to adopt its own charter is not exhausted by adopting a charter thereunder, but a new and amended charter may be subsequently adopted.[41] Where it is provided that the board of freeholders appointed to draft a charter shall receive no compensation but may employ and compensate an attorney, a member of the board cannot be employed.[42]

Municipal charters will be judicially noticed.[43]

§ 4. The territory.[44] Annexations.[45]—Requirements as to contiguity and physical characteristics of the territory to be included are sometimes imposed by statute, but in the absence of statute the matter rests in the discretion of those partures from the general municipality law as to make it special legislation. Campbell v. Bryant [Va.] 52 S. E. 638.

29. Existing corporations continued under special charters. Butler v. Lewiston [Idaho] 83 P. 234, discussing at length the operation of the prohibition against special charters.

30. Amendment of special charters must be germane to the subject-matter of the original. Butler v. Lewiston [Idaho] 83 P. 234.

31. Subject to amendment. Hay v. Baraboo [Wis.] 105 N. W. 654.

32. Trustees of Schools v. Board of School Inspectors, 115 Ill. App. 479.

33. Borough Law of 1897 repealed all inconsistent special charters. Smith v. Hightstown, 71 N. J. Law, 536, 60 A. 393. Section 96 of the Borough act of 1897, prescribing existing powers of borough, applies only to defacto boroughs and does not prevent the repeal of inconsistent powers in valid special charters. Id. A general law conferring power to license certain employments supersedes all licensing power of municipalities within its scope under special charters. Id.

34. Cahill v. Hogan, 180 N. Y. 304, 73 N. E. 39.

35. State v. Larkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 90 S. W. 912.

36. Wright v. Overstreet [Ga.] 50 S. E. 487.

37. Change of organization from a district to a city does not repeal existing ordinances. Ferrell v. Opelika [Ala.] 39 So. 249.

38. Municipal ordinances in force when the municipality accepts the municipal code need not be republished. Chrisman v. Jackson, 84 Miss. 787, 37 So. 1015.

39. On reincorporating a town into a city it is permissible to invest the city with all the powers of the town by a bare enactment to that effect. Wright v. Overstreet [Ga.] 50 S. E. 487. Title of act chartering city held not to embrace a provision continuing the ordinances of the town. Bass v. Lawrence [Ga.] 52 S. E. 296. A saving clause in a charter preserving existing ordinances is effective. Ferrell v. Opelika [Ala.] 39 So. 249.

40. Insertion in charter of power to regulate charges of public service corporations unauthorized. State v. Missouri & K. Tel. Co., 189 Mo. 83, 88 S. W. 41.

41. Morrow v. Kansas City, 186 Mo. 675, 85 S. W. 572.

42. Young v. Mankato [Minn.] 105 N. W. 969.

43. City of Austin v. Forbis [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 818, 89 S. W. 405. The length of time during which a city has been incorporated and that its charter has been amended from time to time will be judicially noticed. City of Houston v. Dooley [Tex. Civ. App.] 89 S. W. 777.

44. See 4 C. L. 724. Municipal boundaries cannot be changed by special act. Davenport v. Ham [Kan.] 83 P. 398; Leavitt v. Wilson [Kan.] 83 P. 397.

45. See 4 C. L. 724. See, also, ante, § 2 B, Consolidation of municipalities. The act of April 23, 1902 (95 O. L. 259), providing for detaching unplatted farm lands from cities and incorporated villages, and for attaching them to adjacent townships, is not in conflict with any provisions of the constitution of the state of Ohio. Village of Grover Hill v. McClure, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 197. This act does not confer legislative charged with determining the propriety of annexation.[46] The questions of reasonableness and propriety are to be considered in view of the entire situation,[47] and no particular circumstances are conclusive unless made prerequisite by statute.[48] Provision for objection or remonstrance and hearing thereon is customarily made.[49] Reasonable certainty only is required in the description of the annexed territory.[50] An ordinance extending the municipal limits is invalid as to a provision therein that agricultural lands included by the extension shall not be subject to city taxes while retaining their agricultural character,[51] but such invalidity does not affect the remainder of the ordinance.[52] Territory added to a city becomes ipso facto subject to municipal ordinances then in force,[53] but an extension of boundaries does not affect a previously made contract for water supply so as to require the water company to furnish water throughout the territory as enlarged.[54] The validity of a statute authorizing the annexation of territory to a municipality is not ordinarily open to collateral attack,[55] but equity will restrain at the suit of a taxpayer, the attempted annexation of the municipality to another under an unconstitutional statute.[56] Where one is prosecuted for an offense committed in territory not legally included within the municipal limits, prohibition is the proper remedy.[57]

Severances.[58]—It is frequently provided that territory to be disconnected must lie upon the border of the municipality[59] and must not be platted[60] or have streets powers upon the judiciary nor does it impair the system of local self-government guaranteed by the constitution. Id. The phrase "in his discretion" contained in said acts refers to the judicial discretion of the court, and not to the legislative discretion. Id.

46. In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, territory may be added which is not contiguous to that part of the city laid out in lots and streets. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361. Agricultural lands may be added. Leavitt v. Wilson [Kan.] 83 P. 397. The discretion of municipal officers in the exercise of a power to extend or diminish the city limits is not subject to judicial review. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361. Ruling on objections to extension will not be disturbed on questions of fact in the absence of abuse of discretion. Order sustaining objections to extension covering very sparsely settled tract upheld. City of Orlando v. Orlando Water & Light Co. [Fla.] 39 So. 532.

47. The primary considerations are the extensions of the benefits of municipal existence to the included territory and the benefit to the inhabitants of the original territory from the extension of police and fire protection to the surrounding districts. Forbes v. Meridian [Miss.] 38 So. 676. In determining the reasonableness of an extension of territory the proposed extension must be considered as an entirety and not as to whether each particular tract, considered separately, should have been included. Id.

48. The fact that part of the included land is marshy, that some of the inhabitants of the included territory object to the extension or that some additional taxes will be imposed on the included territory do not necessarily make the extension unreasonable. Forbes v. Meridian [Miss.] 38 So. 676. The revenue which will be derived from the included territory is no criterion of the reasonableness of the extension. Id.

49. The filing of objections to a proposed extension is sufficient to stay proceedings though the objectors do not obtain the order for stay which the statute says shall be made upon such filing (City of Orlando v. Orlando Water & Light Co. [Fla.] 39 So. 532), but the first ordinance is not rendered void by the delay of publication (City of Bardstown v. Hurst [Ky.] 89 S. W. 724).

50. An ordinance taking in additional territory and describing the city boundaries as they will be when enlarged is sufficient though it does not segregate or separately describe the new territory. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361. Where municipal limits were extended a specified distance from a certain well, the extension is to be measured from the center of the well. Hardesty v. Mt. Eden, 27 Ky. L. R. 745. 86 S. W. 687. An ordinance extending the limits "one-third of a mile from" a designated point is sufficiently definite and calls for an extension in the form of a square. Id.

51. Infringes constitutional requirement of uniform taxation. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361.

52. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361.

53. Ordinance not invalid because providing that it should apply to territory subsequently added. Truesdale v. Newport [Ky.] 90 S. W. 589; Trustees of Schools v. Board of School Inspectors, 115 Ill. App. 479.

54. Turners Falls Fire Dist. v. Millers Falls Water Supply Dist. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 630.

55. Act March 13, 1890, authorizing annexation to City of Des Moines, held constitutional. McCain v. Des Moines [Iowa] 103 N. W. 979.

56. Sample v. Pittsburg [Pa.] 62 A. 201.

57. Proceedings to include the locus in quo had been stayed by filing of remonstrance. City of Bardstown v. Hurst [Ky.] 89 S. W. 147.

58. See 4 C. L. 724.

59. The "border" of a municipality on which lands to be disconnected must lie is laid out therein.[61] The usual practice to initiate proceedings for severance is by petition of the inhabitants of the territory to be severed.[62] A requirement that an ordinance changing boundaries be published four times in a weekly newspaper contemplates publication in consecutive weeks and a publication at irregular intervals over a period of two months relieves a remonstrator from filing remonstrance within 30 days after the ordinance as required by statute.[63] Under some statutes a petition for the severance of outlying territory is addressed to the sound discretion of the court,[64] while under others, when the facts specified by the statute have been established, it is mandatory to grant the petition.[65] It is permissible for the legislature to provide that only the inhabitants of the territory to be eliminated may object to a reduction of the city limits and to restrict the defenses of such persons to a showing that unjust burdens will be imposed on them.[66] An agreement by residents of territory disconnected from a municipality to pay their share of previously incurred debts is nugatory.[67] A school district cannot either in its corporate capacity or as representing the taxpayers sue for an injunction to restrain a village from separating itself from the district.[68]

Plats.[69]—If a plat conforms to the statute the council has no discretion to refuse approval of it.[70]

§ 5. Officers and employes.[71]—This subject is fully treated in another topic.[72] Municipal officers have only such powers as are conferred on them by the charter,[73] but within such powers they have official discretion.[74] The power to fix the duties of minor administrative officers is usually conferred on the legislative department.[75] the city limits, not the portion in actual use. An irregular strip 1,500 feet long and averaging 600 feet wide, having only 150 feet contiguous to the municipal limits, is not on the border. Anaconda Min. Co. v. Anaconda [Colo.] 80 P. 144.

60. Subdivision held platted into lots and blocks so it could not be disconnected under Laws 1901, c. 106, § 2. Town of Fruita v. Williams [Colo.] 80 P. 132.

61. Under a provision that territory in which the municipality maintains "streets" cannot be disconnected, maintenance of a single street is fatal to the right to disconnect. Anaconda Min. Co. v. Anaconda [Colo.] 80 P. 144. A petition for disconnection is not defective because it states that the city has not maintained any streets, alleys "or" other public utilities instead of being in the conjunctive as is the statute. Town of Fletcher v. Smith [Colo.] 81 P. 256.

62. If the statutory two-thirds of the property owners join in a petition to disconnect, it is sufficient. Town of Ormond v. Shaw [Fla.] 39 So. 108. A petition giving the names of the owners "as shown by the last tax roll" and referring to them as owners, sufficiently alleges ownership. Id. Though the husband of a landowner may not be a necessary party to a petition to disconnect territory, his joinder does not render the petition defective. Id. The widow and executrix of a deceased landowner is prima facie a proper party to a petition to disconnect. Id.

63. City of Bardstown v. Hurst [Ky.] 89 S. W. 147.

64. Outlying district which would probably be soon needed for residence property. Petition held properly denied. Johnson v. Forest City [Iowa] 105 N. W. 353.

65. Anaconda Min. Co. v. Anaconda [Colo.] 80 P. 144.

66, 67. Miller v. Pineville [Ky.] 89 S. W. 261.

68. Union Free School Dist. No. 1 v. Glen Park, 96 N. Y. S. 428.

69. See 4 C. L. 724.

70. Giltner v. City Council of City of Albia [Iowa] 105 N. W. 194.

71. See 4 C. L. 725.

72. See Officers and Public Employes, 6 C. L. —.

73. Under Gr. N. Y. Charter, § 149, the comptroller may in good faith settle a claim for municipal lighting by agreeing to pay the same prices that the city had paid the previous year, on the lighting companies agreeing to waive interest, though such prices were 20 and 40 per cent. higher than those paid in other cities, and less than the prices charged for private consumption. Hearst v. McClellan, 102 App. Div. 336, 92 N. Y. S. 484. President of municipal water board has no authority to compromise claims against it. City of Austin v. Forbis [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 818, 89 S. W. 405.

74. See post, § 7, for judicial review of official acts.

75. Where the ordinance directing the duties of a police officer declared that he should traverse the streets of the city daily, a contention that it should be considered that his duties were confined to service during the daytime held of no merit; it not appearing that any hours had been adopted regulating his time of service or confining them to the daytime. Morran v. Common Council [N. J. Law] 61 A. 13. Where the statute leaves the duties of an office to be fixed by the city council, duties not naturally pertaining to the office may be imposed.

Where a minimum salary is fixed by statute, a less salary cannot be awarded by ordinance.[76] Local self-government in the appointment or election of officers is usually granted[77] though the paramount power of the state is sometimes retained.[78] The acts of defacto municipal officers are binding.[79] On the expiration of an official term the office eo instanti devolves on the elected successor without the formalities of inauguration.[80] The fact that the members of a legislative body hold until their successors are qualified does not authorize the body to act after the time fixed by law.[81] The Indiana Statute, requiring that the certificate of election of town trustees be filed before any valid ordinance can be passed by them, applies only to the first election of trustees on organization of the town.[82] Commissions and departments are often independently incorporated to control certain municipal functions, and it is generally held that the municipality is not except under an express charter provision liable for their acts.[83]

§ 6. Municipal records and their custody and examination.[84]

§ 7. Authority and power of municipality.[85]—The powers of a municipality being wholly derivative, they are only such as are expressly granted or necessarily implied,[86] such for instance as are essential to the exercise of a granted power,[87] and this is peculiarly true with respect to the taxing power.[88] However derived, they are restricted in operation to the municipal limits.[89] The powers ordinarily granted being numerous, general grants are necessary, and they will not be strictly

Jailer required to perform janitor service in several public buildings. City of Paducah v. Evitts, 27 Ky. L. R. 864, 86 S. W. 1123. Where the exclusive duty of acting in certain matters is vested by ordinance in a certain department, no city officer can employ any other person to perform such duty. Employment of attorney, city having legal department. Hope v. Alton, 214 Ill. 102, 73 N. E. 406.

76. City of Paducah v. Evitts, 27 Ky. L. R. 864, 86 S. W. 1123.

77. Laws 1893, c. 661, § 20, providing that on failure to fill vacancies on the municipal board of health within 30 days the county judge shall fill the same, is violative of Const. art. 10, § 2, providing that city officers shall be appointed by "such authority thereof" as the legislature may designate. People v. Houghton, 102 App. Div. 209, 92 N. Y. S. 661.

78. The legislature may provide for the appointment of municipal officers by the governor and for their compensation by the municipality. Horton v. City Council of Newport [R. I.] 61 A. 759. The legislature has plenary jurisdiction over the constabulary, and such control extends to the police of a municipality. Statute providing for appointment of city police commissioners by governor does not infringe local self-government (Horton v. City Council of Newport [R. I.] 61 A. 759, following Newport v. Horton, 22 R. I. 196, 47 A. 312), nor can it alienate any part of its power in this regard (Id.). Police department primarily under control of state and municipality has only delegated power. City of Cleveland v. Payne, 72 Ohio St. 347, 74 N. E. 177.

79. Greene v. Rienzi [Miss.] 40 So. 17.

80. People v. Fitzgerald, 180 N. Y. 269, 73 N. E. 55.

81. Devlin v. White [R. I.] 61 A. 172.

82. Low v. Dallas [Ind.] 75 N. E. 822.

83. See post, § 14, and the topic Public Contracts, 4 C. L. 1089. A municipality is not liable as for breach of contract on the unauthorized discharge of a police officer by the police commission. Gibbs v. Manchester [N. H.] 61 A. 128.

84, 85. See 4 C. L. 728.

86. McAllen v. Hamblin [Iowa] 105 N. W. 593; Donable's Adm'r v. Harrisonburg [Va.] 52 S. E. 174; Gambill v. Erdrich Bros. [Ala.] 39 So. 297; Porter v. Vinzant [Fla.] 38 So. 607.

87. Power to borrow money must be expressly granted or be necessary to the exercise of a granted power. Luther v. Wheeler [S. C.] 52 S. E. 874. A town or city has no power to become a part stockholder in a waterworks or other corporation, or to borrow money by issuing bonds or otherwise to pay for such stock, unless express authority to do so is given by some statute. Voss v. Waterloo Water Co., 163 Ind. 69, 71 N. E. 208.

88. Held to have no power to tax personalty. Adams v. Ducate [Miss.] 38 So. 497; Gambill v. Erdrich Bros. [Ala.] 39 So. 297.

89. A lot outside of a municipality cannot be claimed by it as subject to a projection of a street. Calhoun v. Faraldo, 114 La. 760, 38 So. 551. No implied power to maintain rock quarry outside city limits. Donable's Adm'r v. Harrisonburg [Va.] 52 S. E. 174. Municipality maintaining public water works has no power to contract to maintain a specified pressure for fire protection at a place outside the city limits. Contract to furnish fire protection on military reservation. United States v. Sault Ste. Marie, 137 F. 258. A power to operate gas works given before the discovery of natural gas in the state gives no power to operate natural gas wells and pipe lines from without the municipal limits. Quinby v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co., 140 F. 362.

limited by accompanying specific grants.[90] Municipal acts pursuant to a granted power will not ordinarily be so construed as to preclude the municipality from the further exercise of such power.[91] Paramount power remains in the state.[92]

Judicial control over exercise of powers.[93]—The acts of municipal officers in the exercise of administrative[94] or legislative discretion[95] are not subject to judicial review. Where the action is judicial in its character it may be reviewed by appeal or error only when so provided by statute,[96] the remedy otherwise being by certiorari.[97] It has been held, however, that a city council is no part of the legislative department of the state and its administrative acts though in the form of ordinances are subject to judicial review.[98] That a municipality exceeds its charter powers is no ground for Federal interference. A municipal act cannot be said to infringe the Federal constitution if it would not infringe were it ratified by the legislative power of the state.[99] A taxpayer suing not in his own right but in the interest of a public service corporation has no standing in court.[1] Where judicial interposition is unwarranted, prohibition lies to prevent it.[2]

§ 8. Legislative functions of municipalities and their exercise. A. Nature and extent of legislative power.[3]—A municipality has only such legislative power

90. Power to pass ordinances against cruelty to animals held to be given by general grant. Porter v. Vinzant [Fla.] 38 So. 607.

91. See Franchises, 5 C. L. 1518, for a full discussion of the grant and effect of exclusive franchises. Grant of an exclusive water franchise does not disable a municipality to own and operate its own water plant. Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 26 S. Ct. 224.

92. The legislature may require the opening of streets and the building of bridges at the expense of a municipality if public benefit results therefrom. Wheelwright v. Boston, 188 Ill. 521, 74 N. E. 937.

93. See 4 C. L. 731.

94. The action of the council of a municipality in granting to street railway company a franchise in a street which crosses a steam railroad at grade is not the subject of judicial review, where it does not appear that in so doing council exceeded its power, or that its action was induced by fraud. Nor would a review be authorized by a showing to the effect that a safer crossing could be made on another street. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Urbana, etc., R. Co., 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 583. Courts will not interfere in the business management of a city except in a clear case of illegality, mismanagement or fraud. McMaster v. Waynesboro [Ga.] 50 S. E. 122. The selection of a site for a new court house is an administrative function which cannot be controlled by the judiciary. Dupuy v. Police Jury of Parish of Iberville [La.] 39 So. 627. The discretion of municipal officers in the exercise of a power to extend or diminish the city limits is not subject to judicial review. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 361. No appeal lies to the circuit court from an administrative act of a city council. Refusal of building permit. Ex parte Evans [S. C.] 52 S. E. 419. It is only when a city council acts in a judicial capacity that certiorari will lie to review its acts. Revocation of liquor license held not judicial. Carr v. City Council of Augusta [Ga.] 52 S. E. 300. Power to vacate streets. Ponischil v. Hoquiam Sash & Door Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 316.

95. Action on a petition for the formation of a reclamation district is a legislative act which cannot be enjoined. Glide v. Superior Court of Yolo County [Cal.] 81 P. 225. Equity cannot at the suit of a taxpayer enjoin a valid exercise of the legislative power. Recognizing validity of previous acts purporting to extend street railroad franchise. Roby v. Chicago, 215 Ill. 604, 74 N. E. 768.

96. Staples v. Brown, 113 Tenn. 639, 85 S. W. 254.

97. A city council acting in a judicial capacity is not a court and accordingly its decision cannot be made final without denying a remedy by due course of law. Certiorari held to lie in election contest, there being no provision for error or appeal. Staples v. Brown, 113 Tenn. 639, 85 S. W. 254.

98. Grant of franchise in street set aside as procured by fraud. State v. Gates [Mo.] 89 S. W. 881.

99. Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. Owensboro, 26 S. Ct. 249.

1. A taxpayer suing under favor of Section 1778, Revised Statutes, to enjoin the corporate officers from selling municipal bonds, whose sole purpose of bringing the suit is to favor a water company as against the municipality, and prevent the municipality from building its own waterworks, such taxpayer having been by agreement with said water company indemnified from the payment of costs and expenses of such suit if it should fail, has no standing in court and said suit should be dismissed. Vadakin v. Crilly, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 341, afg. 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 609; affirmed by the supreme court without report, 73 Ohio St.

2. Prohibition lies to prevent an injunction against a municipal legislative act in violation of Civ. Code, §§ 3423, forbidding such injunctions. Glide v. Superior Court of Yolo County [Cal.] 81 P. 225.

as it is granted, and doubts are to be resolved against the existence of the power.[4] In practice the legislative power of municipalities is confined chiefly to the enactment of police regulations,[5] the functions of the legislative department in the initiation of public contracts and improvements[6] and in the fiscal management of the municipality[7] being largely of an administrative character. The ministerial powers of a legislative assembly may be delegated,[8] but not its legislative or judicial powers.[9]

(§ 8) B. Meetings, votes, rules, and procedure.[10]—Where the term of a legislative body expires by law at a stated hour, it has no power to act after that time, though the members hold office until their successors are elected and qualified,[11] nor can resolutions of such a body be sustained as the acts of a defacto council.[12] The charter of Omaha does not require that the notice of a special meeting state the object of the meeting,[13] but does require that the object be stated when the meeting convenes. If the notice states the object, the spreading of the same on the journal is a sufficient compliance with this provision.[14] Where the object of the proposed meeting is the passing of a particular ordinance, the introduction thereof serves as a sufficient statement.[15] A majority of a quorum present is ordinarily sufficient,[16] but where a majority of the whole body[17] or more than a majority vote is required by the charter, no less vote will suffice.[18] The charter providing that if no quorum is present notice shall be given to the absentees, and if they fail to attend an adjournment to the next regular meeting shall be had, if no such notice is given the members present may adjourn to a date other than the next regular meeting.[19] The charter requirement that all ordinances for the grant of a franchise shall on the first reading be referred to the board of estimate for an inquiry as to the compensation to be made is imperative,[20] and the publication required of such ordinances should be after and not before such reference.[21] What is a first reading is to be determined according to the usual rules of procedure of the council,[22] and if the matter is in doubt, peremptory mandamus to compel reference will not issue in the first instance.[23] In the absence of charter provisions, the ordinary rules of parliamentary procedure apply,[24] but technical violations thereof do not invalidate the action taken.[25] A vote may be reconsidered and annulled at the same meeting,[26] and a time to which a regular meeting is adjourned is a con-

3. See 4 C. L. 731.

4. City of Elkhart v. Lipschitz, 164 Ind. 671, 74 N. E. 528.

5. See post, § 10.

6. See post, § 12; also Public Contracts, 4 C. L. 1089, and Public Works and Improvements, 4 C. L. 1124.

7. See post, § 13.

8. The council having power to renumber streets may delegate such power. Van Ingen v. Hudson Realty Co., 94 N. Y. S. 645.

9. When the council is required to consider an objection to proposed action, consideration by a committee is insufficient. Lambert v. Paterson [N. J. Law] 61 A. 1131.

10. See 4 C. L. 732.

11, 12. Devlin v. White [R. I.] 61 A. 172.

13, 14, 15. Richardson v. Omaha [Neb.] 104 N. W. 172.

16. Dougherty v. Excelsior Springs, 110 Mo. App. 623, 85 S. W. 112.

17. Reed v. Woodcliff [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1128. "A majority of all the members elected" means a majority of the entire number of members which under the charter constitutes the council. Wood v. Gordon [W. Va.] 52 S. E. 261.

18. Where a certain majority of the entire membership is required, an ordinance by a less vote is invalid. Blood v. Beal [Me.] 60 A. 427. An order authorizing a contract under which payments would become due from the municipality is one "authorizing expenditure" within a rule requiring a two-thirds vote in such cases. Id.

19. Duniway v. Portland [Or.] 81 P. 945.

20, 21, 22, 23. Manhattan & Bronx Elec. Co. v. Fornes, 47 Misc. 209, 95 N. Y. S. 851.

24. A motion that certain business be "continued on the table" is to be construed as a motion to lay over and not as a motion to lay on the table. Duniway v. Portland [Or.] 81 P. 945. Kirby's Dig. 5473, requiring ayes and noes to be called and recorded applies only to an ordinance to enter into a contract. White v. Clarksville [Ark.] 87 S. W. 630.

25. Passing ordinance for improvement after committee report that protest was insufficient is a virtual adoption of the report. City of Sedalia v. Montgomery, 109 Mo. App. 197, 88 S. W. 1014.

26. Stiles v. Lambertville [N. J. Law] 62 A. 288. The action of the board of counciltinuation of such meeting within this rule.[27] Mandamus will lie to compel the presiding officer to put a motion duly made.[28] It will be presumed that meetings and adjournments were regular.[29]

(§ 8) C. Records and journals.[30]—The record may be amended by resolution at a subsequent meeting attended by the same members who passed the original ordinance.[31]

(§ 8) D. Titles and ordaining clauses.[32]—While the constitutional provisions relating to titles of statutes have no application to ordinances,[33] similar provisions are usually contained in the charter and are given the same interpretation, that all parts of an ordinance must be germane to the same subject-matter, which must be expressed with reasonable certainty by the title.[34]

(§ 8) E. Passage, adoption, amendment, and repeal of ordinances and resolutions.[35]—Voting on two or more ordinances at the same time is not necessarily a fatal irregularity.[36] A requirement that the mayor "sign" all ordinances, there being no requirement of approval by him, involves a mere ministerial act, and such signing is not requisite to the validity of the ordinance.[37] The act of March 27, 1897, requiring approval by the mayor does not apply to cities existing under a previously adopted freeholders charter containing no such requirement.[38] To be effective as passed over the mayor's veto, the ordinance must be substantially the same as that vetoed.[39] Less formality is required in the passage of measures of a temporary nature.[40]

Publication[41] is usually required after the passage of ordinances,[42] and some-men of a municipality in voting down a resolution adopted by the board of aldermen does not prevent it from reconsidering its action and passing the resolution at its next regular meeting held several days after the one at which the resolution was defeated, where it does not appear that, in the meantime, the board of aldermen had reconsidered and annulled their action in adopting the resolution, or that rights have vested in pursuance of the first action taken by the board of aldermen. And this rule applies, notwithstanding the legislative authority of the municipality is vested in the two boards, and the concurrence of both is necessary to the adoption of a resolution or the passage of a law. Adkins v. Toledo, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 433.

27. Stiles v. Lambertville [N. J. Law] 62 A. 288.

28. Motion that council proceed to appoint standing committees. People v. Brush, 96 N. Y. S. 500.

29. Duniway v. Portland [Or.] 81 P. 945.

30. See 4 C. L. 733.

31. To show that ordinance was read three times. White v. Clarksville [Ark.] 87 S. W. 630.

32. See 4 C. L. 733.

33. Harris v. People, 218 Ill. 439, 75 N. E. 1012.

34. Illustrations: The title "an ordinance to license and regulate the sale of milk and provide for the inspection thereof" embraces a requirement that vendors register and pay a registration fee. City of St. Louis v. Grafeman Dairy Co., 190 Mo. 492, 89 S. W. 617. The title "an ordinance relating to obstructions of or injuries to streets" covers a prohibition against leaving horses unhitched in the street. Healy v. Johnson, 127 Iowa, 221, 103 N. W. 92. A title stating that the object of an ordinance was to "grant certain rights" to a telephone company sufficiently expresses the grant to such company of rights in the streets, and penal provisions designed to protect the grant. State v. Nebraska Tel. Co., 127 Iowa, 194, 103 N. W. 120. The title "sale of intoxicating liquors" embraces a prohibition against sale on Sunday. City of Duluth v. Abrahamson [Minn.] 104 N. W. 682.

35. See 4 C. L. 734.

36. Contractor can recover for work done under ordinance so passed. Weatherhead v. Cody, 27 Ky. L. R. 631, 85 S. W. 1099.

37. Commonwealth v. Williams, 27 Ky. L. R. 695, 86 S. W. 553.

38. Sacramento Pav. Co. v. Anderson [Cal. App.] 82 P. 1069.

39. People v. Geneva, 45 Misc. 237, 92 N. Y. S. 91.

40. A resolution allowing an electric light company to maintain its wires for 20 days on condition that it will then install them in the manner required by existing ordinances is "temporary." Montgomery Light & Water Power Co. v. Citizens' Light, Heat & Power Co. [Ala.] 38 So. 1026.

41. See 4 C. L. 734.

42. A statute requiring ordinances to be published in two newspapers of "opposite politics" does not permit of an award of such advertising to an independent newspaper which acknowledges allegiance to no political party. Rev. St. § 1536-619 construed. City of Columbus v. Barr, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 151. The statute providing that ordinances shall take effect from publication, their effectiveness is not postponed by delay in recording. Commonwealth v. Williams, 27 Ky. L. R. 695, 86 S. W. 553.

times after their introduction and before they are put on passage.[43] Failure to publish is cured by re-enactment and publication thereon.[44] Municipal ordinances in force at the time of the acceptance of the municipal code by the city need not be republished.[45] Publication on Sunday does not invalidate an ordinance.[46] An ordinance can only be amended by another ordinance passed with like formalities.[47] Subsequent inconsistent ordinances work an implied repeal to the same extent as inconsistent statutes.[48] Every presumption of regularity is in favor of an ordinance duly recorded.[49]

(§ 8) F. Construction and operation of ordinances.[50]—An ordinance duly passed has the effect of law within the city limits.[51] A charter provision continuing all ordinances then in force does not invest such ordinances with the effect of statutes or charter provisions.[52] Practical interpretation is admissible to explain an ambiguous ordinance, but no amount of permitted violations can alter the meaning of one which admits of no ambiguity.[53]

(§ 8) G. Pleading and proving ordinances and proceedings.[54]—Ordinances are not judicially noticed.[55] Passage may be shown by parol if there is no record of its passage,[56] and an attested copy of an ordinance is presumptive evidence that the ordinance was duly passed.[57] Averment of approval of resolution by mayor without averment that it was presented for his approval within 48 hours as required, is insufficient.[58] A printed compilation of ordinances, purporting by its title page to have been issued by authority of the council, is admissible.[59]

(§ 8) H. The remedy against invalid legislation.[60]—While the courts are without power to review the exercise of legislative discretion,[61] invalidity resulting from violation of constitutional or charter limitations is ground for judicial interposition. But since ordinances, unlike statutes, often bear a private rather than a governmental aspect, persons brought into private relation with the municipality by an ordinance and receiving benefit therefrom may be estopped to deny its validity.[62] The validity of an ordinance cannot be collaterally attacked,[63] but resistance

43. A charter provision requiring ordinances to be advertised after introduction and before final action does not preclude amendments after advertisement. City of East Orange v. Richardson, 71 N. J. Law, 458, 59 A. 897. Requirement that notice of the introduction of an ordinance shall be published "at least as many as ten days before the adoption of the ordinance" is satisfied by one publication made at least ten days before the adoption of the ordinance. Smith v. Atlanta [Ga.] 51 S. E. 741.

44. Muir's Adm'rs v. Bardstown, 27 Ky. L. R. 1150, 87 S. W. 1096.

45. Chrisman v. Jackson, 84 Miss. 787, 37 So. 1015.

46. City of Denver v. Londoner [Colo.] 80 P. 117.

47. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Salem [Ind.] 76 N. E. 631; Hope v. Alton, 116 Ill. App. 116.

48. Ordinance selecting one site for public building impliedly repeals a prior ordinance selecting another site. Dupuy v. Police Jury [La.] 39 So. 627.

49. Regularity of special meeting and due publication presumed. Town of Fletcher v. Hickman [C. C. A.] 136 F. 568.

50. See 4 C. L. 735.

51. Hope v. Alton, 214 Ill. 102, 73 N. E. 406.

52. City of New York v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., 93 N. Y. S. 937.

53. City of Sylvania v. Hilton [Ga.] 51 S. E. 744.

54. See 4 C. L. 735.

55. City of St. Louis v. Liessing, 190 Mo. 464, 89 S. W. 611.

56. Weatherhead v. Cody, 27 Ky. L. R. 631, 85 S. W. 1099.

57. Weatherhead v. Cody, 27 Ky. L. R. 631, 85 S. W. 1099. To make a certified copy admissible, the certificate must show publication or posting and that the facts respecting the same are of record. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Kief, 111 Ill. App. 354.

58. Cordilla v. Pueblo [Colo.] 82 P. 594. Averment of ultimate facts as to passage of resolution held sufficient. Id.

59. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Burke, 112 Ill. App. 415.

60. See 4 C. L. 736.

61. See ante, § 7.

62. Illustrations: Where a public service corporation, occupying the streets by legislative authority receives from the city added rights operating to the detriment of the public, such rights are without any validity and cannot estop the corporation to dispute regulations based thereon. Farmer v. Columbiana County Tel. Co., 72 Ohio St. 526, 74 N. E. 1078. Company using streets under ordinance accepted by it is estopped to attack condition thereby imposed. Provision reof an attempt to enforce it is not collateral attack.[64] Only total want of power in the legislative body will be ground for quo warranto[65] or prohibition,[66] and only in case of irreparable injury[67] or to avoid multiplicity of proceedings[68] is injunction available. In New Jersey certiorari will lie to an ordinance which is wholly invalid,[69] but one which is general and not invalid as to all persons affected cannot be suspended by certiorari.[70] In such case, one as to whom it is invalid may enjoin its enforcement against him.[71] That an ordinance exceeds the charter power is no ground for interference by the Federal courts.[72]

§ 9. Administrative functions, their scope and exercise.[73]—In their administrative functions municipal officers so long as they act within the charter and in good faith exercise a discretion which is not subject to judicial control,[74] nor do their acts in the administration of the public duties of the municipality give rise to any liability in tort.[75] The administrative powers of officers include all that is necessarily incident to their duties,[76] but powers of one department as to matquiring guarding of overhead electric wires. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rose, 214 Ill. 545, 73 N. E. 780. That a taxpayer has given the municipal authorities reason to believe that he will not oppose an ordinance does not estop him to attack it before any rights have accrued under it. Coker v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 481. Railroad company which occupied streets for many years under ordinance estopped to deny its validity. Jersey City v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 61 A. 95.

63. That town trustees are incapacitated to act because the certificate of their election has not been filed cannot be raised in a collateral attack on an ordinance passed by them. Defense to action to foreclose a street assessment lien for improvement ordered by trustees. Low v. Dallas [Ind.] 75 N. E. 822.

64. The reasonableness of an ordinance is subject to judicial review in a proceeding to enforce it. State v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 261.

65. No objection to an ordinance except lack of power to pass it can be tried on quo warranto. Quo warranto against telephone company occupying street by virtue of ordinance alleged to be defective as to title. State v. Nebraska Tel. Co., 127 Iowa, 194, 103 N. W. 120.

66. Where a municipality has general power to make ordinances on a subject but a particular ordinance is void as a taking of property without due process, injunction and not prohibition is the remedy. Ordinance requiring removal obstruction from alleged alley which was in fact private property. Riley v. Greenwood [S. C.] 51 S. E. 532.

67. Where the invalid portion of an ordinance is enforceable only by criminal prosecution, injunction will not issue, for the invalidity may be asserted by way of defense to such a prosecution. City of Sylvania v. Hilton [Ga.] 51 S. E. 744.

68. A bill will lie by persons against whom an invalid ordinance is sought to be enforced and others similarly situated to enjoin its enforcement. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

69. Certiorari will lie to a void ordinance before it is published, as publication follows of course on passage. Reed v Woodcliff [N. J. Law] 60 A. 1128.

70, 71. Jackson v. Miller [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 1019.

72. Glucose Refining Co. v. Chicago, 138 F. 209.

73. See 4 C. L. 736.

74. See ante, § 7. A taxpayer's action to restrain improvident expenditure of public funds is maintainable only for fraud, collusion, bad faith or illegality. Hearst v. McClellan, 102 App. Div. 336, 92 N. Y. S. 484. Settlement of claim for public service or basis of contract for former year not improper though price was much higher than that paid for similar service in other cities. Id. The discretion of municipal officers in the exercise of administrative powers is not subject to judicial review. Borrowing money. Lincoln School Tp. v. Union Trust Co. [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 623.

Oppressive police surveillance: A number of cases in the New York supreme court have upheld the power of the courts to enjoin oppressive picketing and visitation by police officers of places where gambling, illegal sale of liquor, etc., were suspected. See Cullen v. Bourke, 93 N. Y. S. 1085; Craushaw v. McAdoo, 47 Misc. 420, 94 N. Y. S. 386. The court of appeals has, however, since held that equity has no jurisdiction to interfere with the administrative discretion in this respect. Delaney v. Flood [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 209. The holdings in other states are at variance. See, in addition to the following cases those cited in Injunction, 6 C. L. 14. May patrol entrance to building inhabited chiefly by disorderly persons, accost persons approaching and notify them of character of place (Pon v. Wittman [Cal.] 81 P. 984), and one operating a lawful business in such locality to obtain the patronage of such disorderly persons is not entitled to complain of injury to his business from such supervision (Id.). Sending officers into a restaurant to inquire if liquor is sold there and who threaten arrest for such sale will not be restrained though there is no ordinance forbidding such sales. Adams v. Chesapeake Oyster & Fish Co. [Colo.] 82 P. 528.

75. See post, § 14. Injunction against keeping picture in rogues' gallery sustained. Itzkovitch v. Whitaker [La.] 39 So. 499.

76. Highway commissioners required to repair streets and keep them in fit condition

ters primarily within the jurisdiction of another are limited to the purposes of the grant.[77] The police department derives its authority from the state and the municipality has only such power over it as may be delegated.[78]

§ 10. Police power and public regulations.[79]—This section deals only with matters peculiar to municipal police power, general rules as to the extent and exercise of the police power being treated in topics descriptive of the subjects thereof.[80]

(§ 10) A. In general.[81]—Power to make needful police regulations is a proper subject of legislative delegation,[82] and a grant in general terms, as of the power to make all regulations requisite to the general welfare of the municipality, is efficient,[83] but a power to pass such ordinances other than those specially authorized as are necessary to carry out the purposes of the corporation gives no power to make mere police regulations.[84] The power to make police regulations is subject to a general limitation that they shall be reasonable[85] which includes freedom from unjust discrimination;[86] but a constitutional provision that all laws shall have uniform application does not apply to municipal police regulations.[87] The burden is on one asserting that an ordinance is unreasonable.[88] Though invalid in part, if a regulation is severable it will be sustained as to the valid part.[89] Police regulations requiring the destruction of existing property are of doubtful validity and such regulations are ordinarily to be given only a prospective operation.[90] Where the police power is inadequate, a municipality may not resort to equity on behalf of its citizens.[91]

(§ 10) B. For public protection.[92]—If power to legislate on the subject has been granted, a municipality may regulate or prohibit gaming and the keeping of gaming places or implements,[93] sale of intoxicants,[94] and forbid structures or pracfor travel are charged with the duty of removing rubbish. Connor v. Manchester [N. H.] 60 A. 436.

77. The control of the streets being by the charter vested in the aldermen, the police commissioner has no power to close a street to travel. Peace v. McAdoo, 92 N. Y. S. 368. The power given to the police department to regulate travel in the streets being simply the power to supervise according to momentary exigencies. Charter (Laws 1901, c. 466), §§ 50, 375. Id.

78. City of Cleveland v. Payne, 72 Ohio St. 347, 74 N. E. 177; and see Horton v. City Council of Newport [R. I.] 61 A. 659.

79. See 4 C. L. 737.

80. See Buildings and Building Restrictions, 5 C. L. 487; Exhibitions and Shows, 5 C. L. 1405; Health, 5 C. L. 1641; Intoxicating Liquors, 6 C. L. 165; Licenses, 6 C. L. 436, and like topics.

81. See 4 C. L. 737.

82. Grant to a municipality of power to make needful police regulations is not an invalid delegation of the legislative power. Sluder v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 107, 88 S. W. 648. Constitutional direction to legislature to suppress gambling warrants delegation of power to municipality. Town of Ruston v. Perkins, 114 La. 851, 38 So. 583.

83. Keeping of intoxicants for unlawful sale may be prohibited. Tucker v. Moultrie [Ga.] 50 S. E. 61.

84. Not to prohibit slaughter houses in city limits. City of Elkhart v. Lipschitz 164 Md. 671, 74 N. E. 528. No power to prohibit slaughter houses in city limits under power to regulate such business, nor under general power to make such regulations as are necessary to purposes of corporate organization. Id.

85. Regulation of bill boards held unreasonable as going beyond the necessity of protection. City of Chicago v. Gunning System, 214 Ill. 628, 73 N. Y. 1035.

86. An ordinance providing for garbage collection is not invalid because it makes the amount of the charge therefor dependent on the character of the building from which garbage is removed and not directly on the quantity removed. Ex parte Zhizhuzza [Cal.] 81 P. 955.

87. Ex parte Zhizhuzza [Cal.] 81 P. 955.

88. Ex parte Berry [Cal.] 82 P. 44.

89. An ordinance forbidding "peddling or in any other manner selling" merchandise in the streets is severable, and the provision against peddling is good though the prohibition of other sales may be invalid. Ex parte Henson [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 874.

90. Ordinance forbidding erection of wooden fences over a certain height within the fire limits held not to apply to fence previously built. Jackson v. Miller [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 1019.

91. A municipality has no power to sue in the interest of its citizens to abate a public nuisance affecting no property right of the municipality. Belleville Tp. v. Orange [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 331.

92. See 4 C. L. 738. See, also, Buildings and Building Restrictions, 5 C. L. 487; Fires, 5 C. L. 1424, and like topics.

93. Under a constitutional provision that the legislature shall pass laws to suppress gambling it may delegate such power to tice causing danger of fire[95] or explosion,[96] provided the regulation goes no farther than is required by the reasonable necessities of the occasion.[97]

(§ 10) C. Health and sanitation.[98]—Reasonable ordinances requiring the prompt removal of dead animals are valid,[99] but an ordinance which devests the owner of his property in the carcass and invests it in a public contractor is void.[1] With regard to the collection of garbage,[2] however, regulations requiring destruction by a public contractor are sustained though the garbage has some value[3] and the expense of such destruction may be cast on the householder.[4] Such regulations do not deny due process of law or take property without compensation,[5] nor does the appointment of an official garbage collector and the forbidding of others to engage in such employment create a monopoly.[6] Charter power to abate nuisances authorizes a municipality to declare with reasonable limitations that the emission of dense smoke is a nuisance.[7]

(§ 10) D. Regulation and inspection of business.[8]—Regulations restrictive of the conduct of business are justified only by considerations of the public comfort, health or safety; but in the protection of such interests reasonable[9] regulations may be made[10] and the power to inspect and approve safety devices,[11] and to revoke municipalities. Town of Ruston v. Perkins, 114 La. 851, 38 So. 583. Power to suppress "billiard tables" includes power to suppress pool tables. City of Clearwater v. Bowman [Kan.] 82 P. 526. See, also, Betting and Gaming, 5 C. L. 417.

94. Under a general welfare clause the keeping of intoxicants for unlawful sale may be prohibited. Tucker v. City of Moultrie [Ga.] 50 S. E. 61. See Intoxicating Liquors, 6 C. L. 165, for a full discussion.

95. Regulations designed to prevent the spilling of inflammable oils in the street from tank wagons handling the same are within the police power. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718. Construction or removal of wooden buildings may be requested. Patterson v. Johnson, 214 Ill. 481, 73 N. E. 761.

96. Municipal corporations may adopt ordinance forbidding storage or transportation of nitroglycerine within municipal limits. Walter v. Bowling Green, 5 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 516.

97. Held unreasonable: Restriction in size and requirement of noncombustible materials without discrimination as to localities; requiring consent of three-fourths of the residents of the block; requiring a license fee of 50c per square foot, shown to amount to nearly twice the gross revenue derived from the bill boards. City of Chicago v. Gunning System, 214 Ill. 628, 73 N. E. 1035. While insecure or otherwise dangerous bill boards or those bearing improper advertisements may be prohibited, a general prohibition of bill boards merely because they are unsightly is invalid. Bryan v. Chester, 212 Pa. 259, 61 A. 894.

98. See 4 C. L. 738. See, also, Health, 5 C. L. 1641.

99, 1. City of Richmond v. Caruthers, 103 Va. 774, 50 S. E. 265.

2. Broken victuals discarded from the table are "house offal" within an ordinance. State v. Robb [Me.] 60 A. 874.

3. Gardner v. Michigan, 26 S. Ct. 106. If a garbage collection ordinance is invalid so far as it regulates the disposal by one of his own garbage, such invalidity does not affect the part forbidding him to collect that of others. State v. Robb [Me.] 60 A. 874.

4. A general power to make needful sanitary regulations authorizes the grant of an exclusive privilege of destroying garbage by cremation, and a requirement that garbage be delivered to the crematory and destroyed at the expense of the person delivering it. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 26 S. Ct. 100. A city has power to prescribe that it have the exclusive right of collecting garbage and to exact a small fee from householders therefrom. Ex parte Zhizhuzza [Cal.] 81 P. 955. One charged with collecting garbage in violation of such an ordinance cannot assail the provision for such fee. Id.

5, 6. State v. Robb [Me.] 60 A. 874; Gardner v. Michigan, 26 S. Ct. 106.

7. Glucose Refining Co. v. Chicago, 138 F. 209. A smoke ordinance is not invalid because while allowing the emission of smoke during a certain time each day while fire boxes are being cleaned it gives no more time to those having several fire boxes than to those having but one. Id.

8. See 4 C. L. 739. See, also, Licenses, 6 C. L. 436.

9. Requirement of watchman at crossing during specified hours when no trains were run during a part of the time specified is unreasonable as to the hours when no trains were run, and being indivisible is entirely invalid. Southern Ind. R. Co. v. Bedford [Ind.] 75 N. E. 268. Though an ordinance prohibiting rock quarries within the city limits does not interfere with the right of a landowner to make proper excavations on his land, it is unreasonable and void as being a virtual deprivation of property in rock. Ex parte Kelso [Cal.] 82 P. 241.

10. Regulations upheld: Under general grant of power to provide for health, comfort and safety may prohibit keeping open of saloons on Sunday. Town of Lovilia v. Cobb, 126 Iowa, 557, 102 N. W. 496. Regulation of the handling of inflammable oils from tank wagons and licensing of wagons licenses for violation of regulations,[12] may be delegated to administrative officers. A power usually conferred on municipalities is that of licensing occupations for the purpose of regulation,[13] license for revenue as well being occasionally authorized. License fees must be reasonable[14] and not unjustly discriminating.[15] A municipality authorized by an act "respecting licenses" may not only require licenses but regulate the business of licensees.[16] Prohibitory regulations are only justified by a clear grant of power,[17] but if the power exists it may be exercised as to an occupation licensed by state laws,[18] and if the prohibition be justified by reasonable necessity it is no objection that it renders certain property valueless.[19] No power to impose penalty for usury exists without express grant,[20] and a provision for forfeiture of a money lender's occupation license for usury is invalid,[21] but such a provision in a license law does not invalidate the provisions for license,[22] nor does an invalid provision requiring the giving of a bond by the licensed person.[23] Though a city has power to regulate factories generally, it cannot declare a particular factory to be a nuisance unless it is a public nuisance or a nuisance per se.[24] Except in the strict exercise of the police power, a municipality has no power to regulate public service corporations deriving their authority from the state,[25] but where the franchise is derived from the regulatory ordinance, the corporation may be estopped to attack the ordinance even if it is invalid.[26] so engaged is valid. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

11. Requirement that drip pans on tank wagons handling inflammable oils shall be subject to approval of commissioner of public works is not a delegation of legislative authority to the commissioner. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

12. Provision for revocation of license by mayor for violation of its terms does not confer judicial power on mayor. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

13. The subject of licenses is more fully treated in another topic. See Licenses, 6 C. L. 436. The borough act of 1897 superseded all licensing power of boroughs inconsistent with or more extensive than was granted by such act. Smith v. Hightstown, 71 N. J. Law, 536, 60 A. 393.

14. $10 per year on each tank wagon engaged in handling inflammable oils is not unreasonable. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

15. A classification of occupations under a power to license will not be disturbed unless unreasonable and arbitrary. Requirement of greater license from lenders on personal security than from those lending on real property, stocks, etc., is not unreasonable. City Council v. Clark & Co. [Ga.] 52 S. E. 881. Under the power to license occupations merchants issuing trading stamps may be taxed $400.00 per year though other merchants are taxed only $24.00 a year. There was no evidence to show the profits of the trading stamp business or indicate that the tax was prohibitive. Gamble v. City Council of Montgomery [Ala.] 39 So. 353.

16. Atlantic City v. Brown, 71 N. J. Law, 81, 58 A. 110.

17. Under authority to regulate the storage of explosive oils within the corporate limits, such storage may be prohibited. City of Crowley v. Ellsworth, 114 La. 308, 38 So. 199. A city authorized to regulate or prohibit certain occupations and regulate certain others cannot prohibit an occupation of the latter class. City of Elkhart v. Lipschitz, 164 Ind. 671, 74 N. E. 528.

18. A state law licensing peddlers does not prevent a municipality under a proper grant of power from prohibiting peddling in the municipal limits. Ex parte Henson [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 874.

19. Prohibition of storage of explosive oils in city limits is not invalid because it renders valueless structures erected for oil storage. City of Crowley v. Ellsworth, 114 La. 308, 38 So. 199.

20, 21, 22, 23. City Council v. Clark & Co. [Ga.] 52 S. E. 881.

24. Wood working factory held not a nuisance. City of New Orleans v. Lagasse, 114 La. 1055, 38 So. 828.

25. Where all the privileges of a telephone company in the streets are under legislative grant, the municipality has no power to impose a license fee. License regulation held a revenue measure. Wisconsin Tel. Co. v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 104 N. W. 1009. Regulation of charges of a public service corporation is not a power generally appertaining to a municipality and is not implied from a grant of power to a city to frame its own charter. State v. Missouri & K. Tel. Co., 189 Mo. 83, 88 S. W. 41. Where a public service corporation occupies the streets under legislative authority, the municipality has no power to fix its charges. Farmer v. Columbiana County Tel. Co., 72 Ohio St. 526, 74 N. E. 1078. The control which the municipality has over the Interborough Rapid Transit Company which is by statute declared part of the street does not give the street officers power to remove advertisements, etc., from the stations. Interborough Rapid Transit Co. v. New York, 47 Misc. 221, 95 N. Y. S. 886. Invalidity of a provision requiring an omnibus driver to carry any person desiring carriage does not invalidate the entire ordinance but only serves as a defense if a penalty is sought to be imposed for a justified rejection. Atlantic City v. Brown [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A.

(§ 10) E. Control of streets and public places.[27]—Paramount authority over municipal streets remains in the state, which may delegate such powers as it sees fit.[28] The legislature in the exercise of this paramount authority may grant franchises in the streets and authorize structures therein.[29] Under a delegated power to regulate the use of the streets, the municipality may regulate the operation of automobiles therein,[30] regulate railroad street crossings,[31] require overhead electric wires to be guarded,[32] regulate the vending of explosive oils in tank wagons,[33] require precautions in the operation of street cars,[34] prohibit the running at large of horned cattle,[35] and charge abutters with the duty of cleaning sidewalks.[36] Power to regulate the planting and protection of shade trees does not authorize an ordinance requiring persons having trees in any street to cut them down on notice.[37] No use of streets or public places inconsistent with the public easement therein can be authorized.[38]

(§ 10) F. Definition of offenses and regulation of criminal procedure.[39]—As incident to the power to make police regulations, power to punish their breach is conferred, and in the exercise of such power acts made penal by state law may be punished;[40] but such ordinances are justifiable only by express legislative authority.[41] In defining offenses[42] or prescribing procedure[43] a municipality cannot

428. An ordinance establishing a uniform omnibus fare within the city limits without regard to distance is not unreasonable. Id.

26. See ante, § 871.

27. See 4 C. L. 739. See, also, Franchises, 5 C. L. 1518; Highways and Streets, 5 C. L. 1645.

28. Wilcox v. McClellan, 47 Misc. 465, 95 N. Y. S. 941.

29. Elevated railroad. Turl v. New York Contracting Co., 46 Misc. 164, 93 N. Y. S. 1103. Under the charter of Memphis its streets remain the property of the state and the city has only such power over them as is granted while the legislature may grant such franchise therein as it sees fit. City of Memphis v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 139 F. 707.

30. Under power to regulate use of streets may require licensing of automobiles and carrying of registered number. License law held valid. People v. Schneider [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 32, 103 N. W. 172. An ordinance forbidding the operation of automobiles on country roads between sunset and sunrise is not unreasonable. Ex parte Berry [Cal.] 82 P. 44. May regulate speed and require safety devices but cannot impose additional restrictions on those using machines for pleasure only. City of Chicago v. Banker, 112 Ill. App. 94.

31. Regulation of width and depression sustained. Hughes v. Arkansas & O. R. Co. [Ark.] 85 S. W. 773.

32. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rose, 214 Ill. 545, 73 N. E. 780.

33. Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718.

34. A requirement that the person operating a street car shall keep a vigilant watch for danger and at the first appearance thereof shall stop the car is a valid police regulation. Sluder v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 107, 88 S. W. 648.

35. Under a power to regulate cattle running at large, the running at large of horned cattle may be prohibited. City of Doniphan v. White, 110 Mo. App. 504, 85 S. W. 400.

36. Under a statute authorizing the city to require "owners" of abutting premises to keep sidewalks clean, the duty may be imposed on occupants and tenants. City of Helena v. Kent [Mont.] 80 P. 258. In Illinois municipalities have no such power. City of Chicago v. McDonald, 111 Ill. App. 436.

37. Sproul v. Borough of Stockton [N. J. Law] 62 A. 275.

38. See post, § 11.

39. See 4 C. L. 740. Procedure in prosecutions under municipal regulations, see Indictment and Prosecution, 5 C. L. 1876.

40. An ordinance declaring drunkenness in public places to be a nuisance is not in conflict with a statute providing that drunken persons may be arrested and bound over to keep the peace. Town of Dewitt v. La Cotts [Ark.] 88 S. W. 877. Municipalities may be authorized to provide for the punishment of acts which are already forbidden by penal statutes. Littlejohn v. Stells [Ga.] 51 S. E. 390. The fact that an act is punishable under state law does not prevent an ordinance prohibiting it under the same penalty. Incorporated Town of Avoca v. Heller [Iowa] 105 N. W. 444.

41. Ordinance against keeping places resorted to for gaming held invalid. Thrower v. Atlanta [Ga.] 52 S. E. 76.

42. Under a power to punish vagrancy the city may define vagrancy but in so doing cannot go beyond the generally accepted meaning of the word. Inclusion of persons found trespassing on private property without giving a good account of their conduct is unauthorized but does not invalidate remainder of ordinance. State v. McFarland [Minn.] 105 N. W. 187.

43. Authority to arrest, fine and imprison for certain offenses does not authorize establishment of procedure therefor other than that established by law. Ordinance for arrest without warrant invalid. Gunderson v. Struebing [Wis.] 104 N. W. 149. The procedure for arrest and binding over being fixed by statute, a municipality has no power depart from the established meaning of words and the settled rules of procedure. The extent of punishment which may be imposed is usually regulated by the charter.[44]

§ 11. Property and public places.[45]—The law upon this subject is fully treated elsewhere,[46] only a few cases based on the peculiar status of municipalities being here treated. A municipality may acquire property in any lawful manner, as by adverse possession,[47] though as a general rule adverse possession will not run against municipal property held for public use.[48] A municipality may devote its property to any use consistent with its position as trustee for the benefit of its inhabitants,[49] but cannot sanction a use inconsistent with the public use[50] or amounting to a public nuisance.[51] By the weight of authority injunction will lie to prevent it from so doing.[52] Diversion from one public use to another is ordinarily upheld.[53] While a municipality may recover for negligent injury to its property, if the injury is inflicted by one operating under a franchise, recovery can be had only for to authorize policemen making arrests to accept a deposit in lieu of bail. Richardson v. Junction City, 69 Kan. 664, 77 P. 691.

44. Though a provision for imprisonment where the city is authorized to punish by fine only is invalid, it may be rejected as surplusage. City of Clearwater v. Bowman [Kan.] 82 P. 526. Where the only limitation on the power of a municipality to punish crime was that the penalty should not be less than that prescribed by statute for the same offense, the municipality may provide that convicted offenders shall be worked in a chain gang on the streets. City of second class. Stone v. Paducah, 27 Ky. L. R. 717, 86 S. W. 531. Where the charter provides that penalties for the violation of ordinances may be imposed "to the extent of" specified fine and imprisonment penalties whose maximum equals that specified are authorized. State v. Marciniak [Minn.] 105 N. W. 965. Where the authority to fix a penalty involves only legislative discretion, it cannot be delegated to the judiciary by fixing only a maximum and minimum. City of Lambertville v. Applegate [N. J. Law] 62 A. 270.

45. See 4 C. L. 741.

46. See Parks and Public Grounds, 4 C. L. 876. See, also, Highways and Streets, 5 C. L. 1645.

47. A municipality may acquire land by adverse possession. Murphy v. Commonwealth [Mass.] 73 N. E. 524.

48. See Adverse Possession, 5 C. L. 46.

49. A grant to a railroad company of the right to lay tracks on a public wharf is a grant for a public purpose. Murray v. Allegheny [C. C. A.] 136 F. 57. A municipality may lease its lands for private use. Murphy v. Commonwealth [Mass.] 73 N. E. 524. Land under a city bridge, which is owned by the city, and is used as a support for the bridge, and is not adapted to use as a street or highway, and has never been so used, cannot be regarded as a public street, and the city may lease it for any purpose not inconsistent with its use as a support for the bridge. Ricard Boiler & Engine Co. v. Toledo, 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 501.

50. A municipality cannot authorize any use of the streets inconsistent with the public use. Lease of street for private purposes. Lahry v. Gilmour [Ky.] 89 S. W. 231; City of Chicago v. Pooley, 112 Ill. App. 343; Pew v. Litchfield, 115 Ill. App. 13. And an obstruction pursuant to such an authorization is a public nuisance. One not specially damaged cannot have injunction. Labry v. Gilmour [Ky.] 89 S. W. 231. A municipality cannot authorize such an occupation of the streets as seriously interferes with the public use thereof. Third railroad track in street. Tennessee Brewing Co. v. Union R. Co., 113 Tenn. 53, 85 S. W. 864. And an abutter whose ingress and egress are impeded is entitled to an injunction. Id. The board of public service is not authorized by 75 V. 115, § 8324 (Smith & Benedict, § 5) to grant to the lessee of the Cincinnati Southern Ry. Co. the right to occupy the streets of the city of Cincinnati. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 109. Ordinance authorizing conduct of business so as to substantially obstruct sidewalk invalid. Pagames v. Chicago, 111 Ill. App. 590. Water frontage dedicated to a city to afford public access to the water cannot be disposed of for private purposes. Murray v. Allegheny [C. C. A.] 136 F. 57. Erection of a slaughter house is not a "market purpose" within a conveyance of land to a city. Bird v. Grout, 94 N. Y. S. 127. Projections beyond the building line cannot be authorized. McMillan v. Klaw & E. Const. Co., 107 App. Div. 407, 95 N. Y. S. 365.

51. Street Fair. City Council of Augusta v. Reynolds [Ga.] 50 S. E. 998.

52. A taxpayer is not entitled to sue to restrain improper use of property conveyed as a park. Bancroft v. Bancroft [Del.] 61 A. 689; Bayard v. Bancroft [Del.] 62 A. 6. Diversion of public lands from the purpose for which they are held may be enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer. Bird v. Grout, 94 N. Y. S. 127. The use of the public property for private purposes will be enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer. Public officer allowed to use part of city hall for his private business and to have assistance of public employe therein. Nerlien v. Brooten [Minn.] 102 N. W. 867. Maintenance of street fair by license of city enjoined. City Council of Augusta v. Reynolds [Ga.] 50 S. E. 998.

53. A city which has condemned property for park purposes, paying for it from the general fund, may divert it to other municipal purposes. Seattle Land & Improvement Co. v. Seattle, 37 Wash. 274, 79 P. 780.

injury from negligent operation and not for that resulting naturally from use of the franchise.[54]

§ 12. Contracts.[55]—Contracts by public governmental bodies are fully treated in a separate article.[56] Practically the only questions arising upon such contracts which are peculiar to municipalities and proper to be here treated are those relating to unauthorized contracts and the implications and estoppels resulting therefrom. It results necessarily from the limited and delegated character of municipal authority that a municipality can contract only to the extent and in the manner expressly authorized,[57] and contracts for an unauthorized purpose or not executed in the prescribed manner are invalid.[58] Where benefits have been received under an invalid contract, it has been held that on principles of implied contract or estoppel[59] the municipality is liable, but on the other hand it has a been held that neither implied contract[60] nor estoppel will arise,[61] persons dealing with a municipality being bound at their peril to take notice of the legal limitations of its power. Where the charter provides that no debt or obligation can be created except by ordinance, neither custom[62] nor ratification other than by ordinance can

54. Electrolysis: A street railway company, operating a single trolley electric system under a franchise manifestly contemplating such a system, is liable for injury to the water pipes of the city from the return current only to the extent that its operation of the system has been negligent. Dayton v. City R. Co., 6 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 41. Where a number of companies are operating in the same city under the same system, each of which is responsible in part for the injury occurring to water pipes from electrolysis, such fact constitutes no defense to an action brought by the municipality against one of the companies on account of such injury. Id. Equity will not compel a change of a single trolley street railway system to avoid electrolysis to water pipes when there is a sharp conflict in the evidence as to whether the system in use is a proper system. Id.

55. See 4 C. L. 743.

56. See Public Contracts, 4 C. L. 1089.

57. Cordilla v. Pueblo [Colo.] 82 P. 594.

58. No liability arises on a contract made by a municipal officer without authority. Jersey City Supply Co. v. Jersey City, 71 N. J. Law, 631, 60 A. 381. A bond executed by the mayor under authority to execute a "note" does not bind the city. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Attalla [Ala.] 39 So. 719. Resolution held to authorize only a test and not a contract. For purchase of grading machine. Fleming Mfg. Co. v. Franklin [Iowa] 103 N. W. 997.

59. Money borrowed by a town without authority and used for public purposes may be recovered by the lender as money had received. Luther v. Wheeler [S. C.] 52 S. E. 874. Where a city bound by law to provide food for prisoners maintains no station house, an implied contract arises to reimburse the sheriff to whose custody city prisoners are committed and by whom they are fed. City of Kokomo v. Harness [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 270. Though city officer take possession of a building by a trespass, if it is used for a purpose for which it was proper for the city to lease a building, the city is liable for the reasonable value of such use. Bodewig v. Port Huron [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 567, 104 N. W. 769. While a city is liable for service actually rendered under a contract with one of its boards, no contract is implied in the absence of actual rendition of the services. City not liable for breach of contract on unauthorized discharge of police officer by police commission. Gibbs v. Manchester [N. H.] 61 A. 128.

60. No implied contract can arise from benefits received under an ultra vires act. Use of goods purchased by a city department without authority. Jersey City Supply Co. v. Jersey City, 71 N. J. Law, 631, 60 A. 381. There can be no recovery for services rendered at instance of a board when there was a city officer whose duty it was to render them. Legal services to board of health which corporation attorney should have rendered. Reynolds v. Ossining, 102 App. Div. 298, 92 N. Y. S. 954.

61. Unanimous consent of taxpayers will not validate a contract which is forbidden by the constitution. Railroad aid. Town of Adel v. Woodall [Ga.] 50 S. E. 481. Approval by a citizens' mass meeting of an unauthorized borrowing of money does not estop taxpayers to dispute the validity of a note given by municipal officers therefor. Luther v. Wheeler [S. C.] 52 S. E. 874. A city cannot be estopped to deny the validity of a contract made by its officer in direct violation of an ordinance. Employment of attorney, ordinance providing that no attorney outside the regular legal department should be employed. Hope v. Alton, 214 Ill. 102, 73 N. E. 406. Not estopped by receiving benefit to assert invalidity under ordinance prohibiting obligations of the kind involved. Id., 116 Ill. App. 116. An agreement by a public service corporation giving a municipality power to purchase its plant is ultra vires (Quinby v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co., 140 F. 362), and since it would disable the corporation from performing its duties to the public, no estoppel can arise to prevent it from asserting the invalidity of such contract (Id.).

62. Custom of vesting management in certain officers. Paul v. Seattle [Wash.] 82 P. 601.

impose any liability,[63] nor will receipt of benefits under an improperly executed contract operate as an estoppel.[64] Where a private person has on contract with a public agency rendered services of benefit to a municipality, it is competent for the legislature to discharge the contracting agency and make the benefitted municipality liable.[65] Citizens have no individual right of action on contracts made by the city for the benefit of its citizens.[66] Where the construction of public works is committed wholly to an independent board, the municipality being charged only with the duty of raising the money to pay for the work, it is not liable on the contracts of the board,[67] but the duty of raising money for the work may be enforced by mandamus.[68] Where a contract for public service is made for a certain term, the power to contract for such service is exhausted during the duration of the service made,[69] nor can an appropriation in aid of a private enterprise covering the same subject-matter be sustained.[70]

§ 13. Fiscal affairs and management.[71]—Municipal bonds are treated in a separate topic,[72] and such questions as the consent of electors to an indebtedness, which arise usually with special reference to bonded indebtedness, will be found more fully treated there. Public funds can be devoted only to public purposes.[73] The power to issue bonds is only given for particular purposes and the municipality has no power to use the proceeds for other purposes.[74] The state may recognize and order payment of moral obligations,[75] even though the same be disputed,[76] for instance, city warrants drawn by the mayor and endorsed by the treasurer payable in the future to cover estimates by the city engineer but exceeding the debt limit.[77]

63, 64. Paul v. Seattle [Wash.] 82 P. 601.

65. Applied to contract by drainage commissioners pursuant to which municipal swamp lands were drained. Act April 8, 1903. O'Neill v. Hoboken [N. J. Law] 60 A. 50.

66. Allen & Currey Mfg. Co. v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 113 La. 1091, 37 So. 980.

67, 68. Holroyd v. Indian Lake, 180 N. Y. 318, 73 N. E. 35.

69. Electric lighting contract. Village of Morrice v. Sutton [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 19, 103 N. W. 188.

70. Village of Morrice v. Sutton [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 19, 103 N. W. 188.

71. See 4 C. L. 746.

72. See Municipal Bonds, 6 C. L. 704.

73. A fireman's relief and pension fund is a legitimate municipal purpose to which public funds may be appropriated. Commonwealth v. Barker [Pa.] 61 A. 253. Municipal liquor dispensaries are a public object and public money may properly be expended to promote them (Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Edwardsville [Ala.] 38 So. 1016), and such dispensaries and the stock therein are public property not subject to execution (Id.). It is only those actions against an officer for his official acts in which the public has a concern, the expenses of which can be made a public charge. Wey v. O'Hara, 48 Misc. 82, 95 N. Y. S. 81. The borough authorities have no authority to expend public money in defense of borough officers, indicted under the law, when the borough itself is not involved. Miller v. Hastings Borough, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 569. A borough policeman was arrested and prosecuted for assault and battery. While the suit was pending the borough council in regular session moved "that our police be supported with all that council command in case now pending in court." Policeman was acquitted but one-half of the costs was imposed on him. Held motion of council was not a sufficient basis for a suit by the policeman against the borough to recover his costs and attorney's fees. Id. The payment of a city railroad aid subscription to the stock of a railroad does not constitute a lending of the city's credit. There was no constitutional duty on the part of the authorities to submit to the voters the question of the mode of payment of the subscription. Red River Furnace Co. v. Tennessee Cent. R. Co., 113 Tenn. 697, 87 S. W. 1016. Section 135 of the Municipal Code giving the council authority to provide for the deposit of public funds in a bank at competitive bidding is not unconstitutional on the ground that it is a loan of the public fund to the bank. State v. Bowers, 4 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 345.

74. Where bonds of Chicago were issued under an ordinance to be used solely for permanent improvements, the treasurer could not by mandamus be forced to pay warrants issued for permanent improvements made before the ordinance was passed, as the ordinance was not retroactive. People v. Hummel, 215 Ill. 71, 74 N. E. 78. Where the general act under which Chicago was incorporated contained no express provision as to the use of money derived from waterworks or waterworks bonds, it did not repeal the former special law that all funds derived from the sale of water bonds or from water rents should be kept separate and used exclusively for the city's water supply, and consequently a city ordinance transferring the surplus to the general fund was void. Id.

75, 76, 77. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. East Grand Forks [Minn.] 102 N. W. 703.

Where two cities charged with the duty of keeping up a bridge between them permit it to fall into disrepair, the legislature may by an agency created by it repair such bridge and impose the cost thereof upon such cities,[78] but it cannot do so if the cost so imposed would make the municipal indebtedness exceed the constitutional limit.[79] As a safeguard against official improvidence it is frequently provided by charter that no indebtedness shall be incurred unless provision for its payment be then made, or until appropriation has been made for unpaid liabilities[80] or to an amount exceeding the current revenue,[81] and to the same end is a common provision that no extraordinary expense[82] shall be incurred unless authorized by popular vote[83] at an election duly called,[84] a two-thirds vote being required in Kentucky.[85] Proceedings for examination into fiscal affairs are sometimes provided.[86]

Funds and appropriations.[87]—Money derived from special assessments is held as a trust fund for the payment of warrants, and the municipality cannot withhold the same because of any invalidity in the contract or assessment resulting from violation of provisions designed for the protection of taxpayers.[88] The holder of a 78, 79. In re Opinion of the Justices [Me.] 60 A. 85.

80. A statute forbidding the incurring of liability until appropriation for unpaid liabilities has been made contemplates only unpaid liabilities actually incurred and not estimated expenses. Estimated expenses of work ordered held not within statute. Webb Granite & Construction Co. v. Worcester [Mass.] 73 N. E. 639. A dedication of a certain percentage of the current expense tax to payment for a public improvement is a sufficient provision for payment in view of a statute declaring that such appropriations shall continue in force ten years if necessary. Dupuy v. Police Jury [La.] 39 So. 627.

81. Though a municipality is restricted in contracting debts for public improvements to sums which may be repaid from current revenue, if the improvement is made in good faith and the cost exceeds the estimate of revenue, the indebtedness is valid. Luther v. Wheeler [S. C.] 52 S. E. 874. Const. art. 11, § 18, as amended in 1900, providing that the city and county of San Francisco may pay claims for labor and materials for public works out of the revenue of succeeding years is permissive, and the municipality may in its discretion refuse to pay except from the revenues of the year when the work was done. Weaver v. San Francisco, 146 Cal. 728, 81 P. 119.

82. The proposition of a municipality to incur indebtedness for the purpose of a water or light plant need not be submitted to a vote of the qualified voters of such municipality. Fawcett v. Mt. Airy, 134 N. C. 125, 45 S. E. 1029. Payment of public improvement bonds is a "necessary expense" which need not be submitted to popular vote. City of Greensboro v. Scott, 138 N. C. 181, 50 S. E. 589.

Held extraordinary expenses: Garbage crematory. Mander v. Coleman, 109 App. Div. 454, 95 N. Y. S. 696. Any expenditure for a purpose not expressly authorized by the charter is an "extraordinary expenditure" within a requirement that such be submitted to popular vote. Purchase of voting machines. People v. Geneva, 45 Misc. 237, 92 N. Y. S. 91.

83. A resolution at a mass meeting of citizens cannot dispense with a constitutional requirement of submission of proposed indebtedness to popular vote at an election. Town of Wadley v. Lancaster [Ga.] 52 S. E. 335. Where debts other than temporary loans may under the constitution be incurred only by popular vote, votes given by a municipality for the purchase price of supplies are invalid (Id.), even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser (Id.). Payment of several of the notes and benefits from use of the property purchased do not estop the municipality to set up the invalidity. Id.

84. A notice of an election to submit a proposed indebtedness stating the interest at "not to exceed" a certain per centum does not comply with a requirement that the "terms of the contract" be stated. City of Thomasville v. Thomasville Elec. Light & Gas Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 169.

85. Const. § 157, requiring assent of "two-thirds of the voters" to incur an indebtedness above current revenues means two-thirds of those voting on the proposition, not two-thirds of those voting at the election. Board of Education of Winchester v. Winchester, 27 Ky. L. R. 994, 87 S. W. 768. Ky. St. 1903, § 3490, so far as it seeks to add anything to this requirement, is nugatory. Id., overuling Belknap v. Louisville, 99 Ky. 474, 36 S. W. 1118.

86. Examination and correction of the tax roll by the borough council will be compelled by mandamus. Cooper v. Cape May Point [N. J. Law] 60 A. 516. A justice who has made an order under P. L. 1898, p. 155, for an examination of municipal expenditures, is not required on application to investigate the truth of the averments in the affidavit on which the order was made. Borough of Park Bridge v. Reynolds [N. J. Law] 62 A. 190. One suing under Code Civ. Proc. § 1925, to prevent improvident expenditure, need not give the bond required of one suing under Laws 1881, c. 431. Wey v. O'Hara, 48 Misc. 82, 95 N. Y. S. 81.

87. Fines collected for violation of municipal ordinances are "fines for breach of the penal laws" which belong to the school fund. Const. art. 9, § 5. Board of School Directors of Buncombe County v. Asheville, 137 N. C. 503, 50 S. E. 279.

88. Red River Valley Nat. Bank v. Fargo [N. D.] 103 N. W. 390.

special assessment voucher by its terms payable from the proceeds of the particular assessment is not entitled to have a special assessment levied if there prove to be a deficiency,[89] but the levy and collection of the original assessment may be compelled by mandamus.[90] The amount with which the city is chargeable for crossings, etc., is part of the special fund for a street improvement and chargeable with warrants thereon.[91] The duty to provide for the payment of the liabilities of a municipal corporation may be enforced by mandamus.[92] An appropriation of the moneys received from a particular source goes only to the amount, and it is not necessary that the identical money be kept on hand to meet the appropriation.[93] Money collected from taxes and paid into the treasury without appropriation for any particular purpose becomes an asset usable for any legitimate purpose.[94] Sprinkling of streets is within a power to pay for "repairs and improvements" to streets from the general fund.[95] A city is liable to the state for money obtained from the state school funds by fraudulent reports as to the scholastic population of the municipality.[96] The decree therefor is to be satisfied from general revenue or by a special tax, not from the school fund.[97] An ordinance appropriating a certain sum for "permanent street improvements" is not so uncertain as to amount to a delegation of legislative power where previous proceedings show clearly what improvements were intended.[98]

Warrants.[99]—A municipal warrant shows a prima facie claim against the city,[1] and it will be presumed that a legal duty to make necessary levies has been performed.[2] A city is not liable on a warrant payable out of a certain fund because it fails to collect the assessment for such fund.[3] Where the statute provides that municipal warrants shall be received in payment of all debts to the municipality, an ordinance that they shall not be so received if prior warrants are outstanding is invalid,[4] and a statement on the face of the warrant that by acceptance it was agreed that it should not be so received is unavailing.[5] Warrants void in their inception because the debt limit was exceeded cannot be validated by ratification or estoppel.[6] A warrant signed by the assistant auditor instead of the auditor, and across the face instead of at the foot, is presumptively valid.[7] Municipal warrants are not negotiable unless made so by statute,[8] but may pass by endorsement so as to entitle the assignee to sue in his own name, subject to defenses and equities between the original parties.[9] In an action to restrain the treasurer from paying certain obligations from the general fund unless there is a surplus therein, holders of outstanding warrants of previous years are necessary parties.[10]

89. Village of Wilmette v. People, 214 Ill. 107, 73 N. E. 327.

90. Where highway commissioners are authorized to contract for supplies to be paid for out of a certain fund, mandamus to compel the levy of taxes and collection of such fund is the proper remedy. Pape v. Benton Tp. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 116, 103 N. W. 591.

91. Hemen v. Ballard [Wash.] 82 P. 277.

92. Whether such duty be specifically enjoined or whether it results from the general powers and nature of the corporation. Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9.

93. Hett v. Portsmouth [N. H.] 61 A. 596.

94. Blood v. Beal [Me.] 60 A. 427.

95. McAllen v. Hamblin [Iowa] 105 N. W. 593.

96, 97. State v. Knoxville [Tenn.] 90 S. W. 289.

98. Hett v. Portsmouth [N. H.] 61 A. 596.

99. Laws of 1903, c. 382, p. 690, relating to warrants is not double in its title. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. East Grand Forks [Minn.] 102 N. W. 703.

1, 2. State v. Mutty [Wash.] 82 P. 118.

3. City of Denver v. National Exch. Bank [Colo.] 82 P. 448.

4, 5. Ex parte Willis [Ark.] 86 S. W. 300.

6. Eddy Valve Co. v. Crown Point [Ind.] 76 N. E. 536.

7. City of Houston v. Stewart [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 49.

8. Morrison v. Austin State Bank, 213 Ill. 472, 72 N. E. 1109. Village warrants are not negotiable instruments, and defenses available against the payee are not cut off by transfer. A warrant in payment of an incompleted improvement was issued to a contractor in excess of the assessment and so unauthorized. It was not validated by transfer to an innocent holder, nor by its subsequent renewal. Field v. Highland Park [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 340, 104 N. W. 393.

9. Morrison v. Austin State Bank, 113 Ill. App. 651.

Limitation of indebtedness.[11]—Almost without exception municipalities are prohibited from incurring indebtedness above a certain sum,[12] usually fixed at a percentage of the assessed valuation.[13] In Maine temporary loans are excepted from the operation of this provision.[14] All indebtedness for which a municipality is liable,[15] or which operates as an incumbrance on its property,[16] is to be included in determining the amount of indebtedness. The execution of a contract which creates a liability exceeding the debt limit will be enjoined,[17] but a preliminary injunction is discretionary, since the creditor contracts with full notice of the limitation and no rights are lost to the taxpayer.[18]

§ 14. Torts and crimes.[19]—A municipal corporation exercises functions of two classes, private and governmental.[20] In respect to matters of the former class it is liable for the negligent torts of its officers and employes in the due course of their duty to the same extent as a private corporation. In the exercise of its governmental functions the municipality possesses the attributes of sovereignty and is not liable in tort in the absence of statute imposing such liability.[21] Under this rule a municipality is not liable for negligence connected with the operation of its fire,[22] health,[23] and police departments,[24] or the maintenance of its school system,[25] nor

10. Pendleton v. Ferguson [Tex.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 1013, 89 S. W. 758.

11. See 4 C. L. 747.

12. Held to apply to bonded indebtedness of the city of Columbia. Seegers v. Gibbes [S. C.] 52 S. E. 586. It is immaterial that a contract is for a legitimate purpose if it creates a liability exceeding the constitutional debt limit. Blood v. Beal [Me.] 60 A 427.

13. A constitutional prohibition of municipal indebtedness above a certain percentage of the taxable valuation is self executing. Const. art. 11, § 3. Halsey & Co. v. Belle Plaine [Iowa] 104 N. W. 494. The words "taxable value" in a prohibition of municipal indebtedness above a certain percentage of such value means actual value, and not the assessment value provided by a statute requiring property to be assessed at 25% below its actual value. Id. Where bonds were issued after the current assessment had been made, but before the time for modifying it had expired, the assessment of the preceding year is the basis for determining whether the debt limit is exceeded. Platt v. Hitchcock County [C. C. A.] 139 F. 929. In determining whether a municipal corporation has reached or exceeded the limit of its bonding capacity, the statute contemplates the aggregate bonded indebtedness whether issued before or since said enactments, and if such aggregate equals or exceeds the extreme eight per cent limit above noted, then no further bonds may be issued until said aggregate has been reduced below said limit. Griffith v. Tiffin, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 41.

14. A temporary loan within the exception in the Maine Constitution is one paid within the year in which it is made out of taxes assessed and collected within the same year, and a loan paid after the year, though from that year's taxes, is not temporary. Blood v. Beal [Me.] 60 A. 427. If a loan temporary in its inception is carried over the year it loses its temporary character. Id.

15. A resolution for the purchase of supplies, under a contract that no warrant shall be issued to the seller until a proper appropriation has been made, does not create a debt. Bailey v. Sioux Falls [S. D.] 103 N. W. 16. Bonds expressly payable only out of a special tax are not indebtedness. Sisson v. Buena Vista County Sup'rs [Iowa] 104 N. W. 454.

16. Where a municipality purchased property subject to a mortgage, such mortgage is part of the municipal indebtedness, though the municipality did not assume or agree to pay it. Eddy Valve Co. v. Crown Point [Ind.] 76 N. E. 536.

17. Blood v. Beal [Me.] 60 A. 427.

18. Bailey v. Sioux Falls [S. D.] 103 N. W. 16.

19. See 4 C. L. 747.

20. Keeley v. Portland [Me.] 61 A. 18; Mains v. Ft. Fairfield, 99 Me. 177, 59 A. 87; Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 A. 487.

21. A statute making municipalities liable for injuries by mobs is valid though the municipality could not have prevented the injury. City of Iola v. Birnbaum [Kan.] 81 P. 198. A statute making municipalities liable for injury "to life or limb" by mobs includes all bodily injuries and not merely those causing death or loss of a limb. Id.

22. Not liable for trespass by fire department horse. Cunningham v. Seattle [Wash.] 82 P. 143. Not to member of fire department injured by vicious horse. Lynch v. North Yakima, 37 Wash. 657, 80 P. 79. The maintenance of a fire station is a ministerial duty and a city is liable for damages from its failure to furnish a safe place for its employes. Bowden v. Kansas City, 69 Kan. 587, 77 P. 573.

23. A city is not liable in damages for the seizing and use of a building for public use where it did not authorize or ratify the tort, though it received the benefit of the use of the building. Bodewig v. Port Huron [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 567, 104 N. W. 769.

24. Not to member of fire department infected with contagious disease by germ brought into the fire house by police officer. Lynch v. North Yakima, 37 Wash. 657, 80 P. 79. A municipality in maintaining a the erection and maintenance of its public buildings, unless the same are so maintained as to constitute a nuisance.[26] With respect to facilities designed for the use and benefit of the public, the municipality is not liable for any matter growing out of the plan of the work,[27] but is liable for failure to keep such facilities in repair,[28] or for negligence in the actual execution of its public works.[29] With respect to street lighting,[30] and the construction and operation of sewer systems there is some conflict of authority.[31] Dangerous places in grounds or ways for public use must be guarded with reasonable prudence.[32] A city is not liable to one whose property is destroyed by fire through failure to furnish adequate water supply,[33] and no such liability can be imposed by the city by contract upon one to whom the prison and its officers in arresting and confining alleged criminals therein act in a governmental capacity, so that there is no liability by reason of the unsanitary condition of the prison. Mains v. Ft. Fairfield, 99 Me. 177, 59 A. 87. Unsanitary condition of prison. Shaw v. Charleston [W. Va.] 50 S. E. 527; Carty's Adm'r v. Winooski [Vt.] 62 A. 45.

25. Not liable to pupil for injury by defect in school building. Clark v. Nicholasville, 27 Ky. L. R. 974, 87 S. W. 300.

26. A prison whose unsanitary condition affects only inmates thereof is not a nuisance so as to give a right of action to one confined therein, for no damage can result except by the intervention of the governmental act of the city in confining him. Mains v. Ft. Fairfield, 99 Me. 177, 59 A. 87. Where error of judgment in executing a plan for a public work results in a nuisance the city is liable. Overflow of creek by negligent use as trunk sewer. O'Donnell v. Syracuse, 102 App. Div. 80, 92 N. Y. S. 555.

27. In determining what portion of a street it will improve, a city acts in its delegated governmental capacity, and while so acting is not liable to an individual as for a neglect of duty. Ely v. St. Louis, 181 Mo. 723, 81 S. W. 168. A municipality is not liable for damages caused by defects in a sewer due to the original plan and not to failure to keep the sewer in repair. Keeley v. Portland [Me.] 61 A. 180. Changing grade of street governmental. Not liable for freezing of water pipes left inadequately covered by lowering of street level. Miller v. Kalamazoo [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 231, 103 N. W. 845. A city is not liable for damages caused by the fall of a building due to defects in the building code adopted by the council. McGuinness v. Allison Realty Co., 46 Misc. 8, 93 N. Y. S. 267. The providing of water supply by means of authorized public waterworks is a governmental function. United States v. Sault Ste. Marie, 137 F. 258.

28. Liable for failure to keep public wharves in repair. City of Jeffersonville v. Gray [Ind.] 74 N. E. 611. Bound to use reasonable diligence to keep bridge in repair. (City of Indianapolis v. Cauley, 164 Ind. 304, 73 N. E. 691), and to use ordinary care to select reasonably skillful servants to perform such duty. Held negligent. Id. A municipality is liable for damages to one injured from contact with a telephone or telegraph pole, which has been so placed in a public street as to become a nuisance or dangerous, and the municipality has knowledge thereof or in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence should know of its existence. City of Norwalk v. Jacobs, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 229.

29. Ely v. St. Louis, 181 Mo. 723, 81 S. W. 168. The enlargement of a city water plant is a municipal function and the city is liable for negligence of its servants engaged therein. Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 A. 487. A contract provision prohibiting use of dynamite except in rock excavation may be waived, so as to render a city liable for injury to a building caused by its use, by a provision putting the work under the control of commissioner. City of Chicago v. Murdoch, 212 Ill. 9, 72 N. E. 46. When a municipal corporation contracts for the making of a public improvement under the supervision of its own engineer or other proper officer, and subject to his orders, the corporation is liable for damages caused by negligence of the contractor. As where commissioner of public works retained absolute control and supervision of the work and consented to use of dynamite in making excavations. Id.

30. Lighting streets ministerial. Dickinson v. Boston, 188 Mass. 595, 75 N. E. 68. Contra. City of Vincennes v. Spees [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 277.

31. Not liable for injury to property by overflow of stream used as trunk sewer where extraordinary freshet was proximate cause. O'Donnell v. Syracuse [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 738, rvg. 102 App. Div. 80, 92 N. Y. S. 555. While provision for drainage of surface water by a municipality is a duty purely judicial in its nature, for the breach of which it has been held no liability attaches, the duty of keeping a sewer in proper condition is of a ministerial character, and where the sewer is inadequate to carry off the refuse and filth, which under certain conditions are backed onto the property of an abutting owner, the municipality is chargeable with the damages resulting. City of Cincinnati v. Frey, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 627. Construction of sewer is a governmental function. Rome v. Worcester, 188 Mass. 307, 74 N. E. 370.

32. Bound to properly protect a reservoir in a public place but this duty is satisfied by the erection of proper barriers and the city is not liable for injury to a child who climbed over the barrier. Carey v. Kansas City, 187 Mo. 715, 86 S. W. 438.

33. Allen & Currey Mfg. Co. v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 113 La. 1091, 37 So. 980, exhaustively collating the cases and overruling Planters Oil Mill v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co., 52 La. Ann. 1243, 27 So. 684. See, also, note, 4 C. L. 748.

duty of furnishing water is let.[34] A municipality is liable in damages for an assault committed by the custodian or caretaker of a public park, where the assault is committed by such employe while acting in the line of duty.[35] Where a municipality engages in any work for profit, it is liable for negligence therein,[36] provided it was authorized to engage in such an enterprise.[37] To charge a municipality with liability for the defective condition of any of its public places or facilities, it must have had actual or constructive notice thereof;[38] but a statute requiring written notice to a city of a defective condition before it shall be liable for injuries therefrom is invalid as destroying a right of action.[39] A city is not liable for the acts of an independent contractor engaged in the construction of a public work,[40] unless the matter involved is one of positive duty to an individual, in its nature nondelegable,[41] or unless the work is intrinsically dangerous or liable to create a nuisance.[42] Commissions created by statute to conduct municipal departments are ordinarily regarded as independent contractors,[43] and that they perform without authority duties devolving on the municipality creates no privity between their employes and the municipality.[44]

§ 15. Claims and demands.[45]—Statutes or charters usually require that notice be given to municipalities within a limited time of demands for injuries received by reason of defective streets or sidewalks,[46] and occasionally such notice is required of all claims for personal injury.[47] Apart from these statutes, as a

34. Allen & Currey Mfg. Co. v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 113 La. 1091, 37 So. 980.

35. Bloom v. City of Newark, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 480.

36. Quarry operated by city for profit. City of Boston v. Brooks [Mass.] 73 N. E. 206. Private profit. Operating ferry. Davies v. Boston [Mass.] 76 N. E. 663.

37. Not liable for injury to employe on work which municipality had no authority to undertake. Rock quarry outside municipal limits. Donable's Adm'r v. Harrisonburg [Va.] 52 S. E. 174.

38. Evidence that one with whose knowledge the city was not chargeable observed a defect before the accident is admissible to show its discoverable character. City of Ottawa v. Hayne, 214 Ill. 45, 73 N. E. 385. That an electric wire fell at one place does not charge the municipality with the duty of inspecting the entire system and accordingly is not admissible in an action for injuries by the subsequent fall of another wire. Fox v. Manchester [N. Y.] 75 N. E. 1116. Declarations of municipal officers not made in the course of their duties are not admissible to show notice. Id. Municipality not liable for dangerous condition caused by fall of electric wires unless it had notice thereof. Id.

39. MacMullen v. Middletown, 92 N. Y. S. 410.

40, 41, 42. Bennett v. Mt. Vernon, 124 Iowa, 537, 100 N. W. 349.

43. Municipality not liable to employe of street commission for injury from defective appliance. Connor v. Manchester [N. H.] 60 A. 436. The bureau of buildings of the Borough of Manhattan is not a department of the city of New York so as to charge the city with its negligence. McGuinness v. Allison Realty Co., 46 Misc. 8, 93 N. Y. S. 267. Park commissioners appointed under the charter and whose duties are exclusively for the benefit of the city are city officers. City of Denver v. Spencer [Colo.] 82 P. 590. Boards are not liable for negligence unless made so by statute. School board injuring property by negligent excavation. Board of Education of Cincinnati v. Volk, 72 Ohio St. 469, 74 N. E. 646.

44. Cleaning streets held not outside the duties of commissioners required to repair streets and keep them in fit condition for travel. Connor v. Manchester [N. H.] 60 A. 436.

45. See 4 C. L. 751.

46. See Highways and Streets, 5 C. L. 1645, for rulings under statutes relating wholly to streets.

47. An action for death by wrongful act is an action for personal injuries within a statute requiring notice of claim as a condition precedent to suit. Crapo v. Syracuse [N. Y.] 76 N. E. 465. A statute requiring the filing of a claim before action for "negligent injury" to person or property does not apply to actions for injury by the maintenance of a nuisance. Gerow v. Liberty, 94 N. Y. S. 949. The requirement of notice of injury on streets or public works does not apply to the case of a city employe injured by failure to provide him a safe place to work. Kelly v. Faribault [Minn.] 104 N. W. 231. A claim against a city for injuries is not defective because verified before one who subsequently acted as attorney for plaintiff in a suit therein, though attorneys are by statute forbidden to administer oaths in cases in which they are professionally engaged. Allen v. West Bay City [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 70, 103 N. W. 514. Presentation to the president and the clerk of the council is a sufficient presentation to the council. O'Donnell v. Syracuse, 102 App. Div. 80, 92 N. Y. S. 555. The notice being required to state the time, place, cause and extent of the injury, the claimant is matter of municipal accounting, presentation of all claims for audit and allowance to the proper officer in due course[48] is required, and provision is occasionally made for hearing on the merits of disputed claims.[49] A claim once rejected by the county supervisors on the merits cannot be presented to a succeeding board.[50] One who presented an amended bill after disallowance of the original cannot deny the power of the town auditors to pass thereon.[51] The statute requiring the filing of an abstract of claims allowed and a certificate of disallowance as to those disallowed, an abstract of allowed claims stating one as disallowed is not a sufficient disallowance.[52] Mandamus will lie to compel a proper certificate.[53] In the absence of statute or ordinance to the contrary a creditor of a municipality may assign his claim.[54] A remedy by appeal to the court of original jurisdiction on bill of exceptions from the rejection of a claim is cumulative and the claimant may proceed by original suit.[55]

§ 16. Actions by and against.[56]—The power and discretion as to suits by the municipality is vested in the municipal officers,[57] and it is rarely that a taxpayer is authorized to sue for the municipality[58] or to compel the bringing of suits[59] or the setting up of particular defenses.[60] Actions against a municipality must be brought in the county where it is situated.[61] It cannot be sued by attachment in a foreign state,[62] nor is it subject to garnishment except by virtue of express statute.[63] Substantial compliance with the statute requiring presentation of claim must be alleged but a copy of the claim need not be annexed.[64] A declaration against a city for trespass defective for failure to sufficiently allege by what municipal author-not precluded from recovery of a greater sum as damages than is specified in the notice. Mackay v. Salt Lake City [Utah] 81 P. 81. Actions for equitable relief against a continuing nuisance are not within a statute requiring presentation of claims. Lamay v. Fulton, 96 N. Y. S. 701; Lamay v. Fulton, 96 N. Y. S. 703.

48. Procedure under § 149 of the Greater New York Charter by which a city officer who has approved a bill presented to his department sends it to the comptroller is not a compliance with § 261, requiring a demand of the comptroller 30 days before suit. Ruprecht v. New York, 102 App. Div. 309, 92 N. Y. S. 421.

49. The comptroller of the city of New York is authorized by statute to examine orally persons presenting claims. The right of examination extends to officers of a corporation claimant. In re Grout, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 231, 93 N. Y. S. 711. It authorizes only questions in good faith relevant to the city's liability. Questions as to organization of complainant, value of its plant, etc., held irrelevant (Id.), and is terminated by commencement of suit on the claim (Id.). Code Civ. Proc. § 856 authorizing commitment for contempt on an ex parte showing of refusal to answer on such an examination is invalid. Id.

50. Wey v. O'Hara, 48 Misc. 82, 95 N. Y. S. 81.

51. In re Weeks, 94 N. Y. S. 468.

52, 53. People v. Page, 105 App. Div. 212, 94 N. Y. S. 660.

54. Gordon v. Jefferson, 111 Mo. App. 23, 85 S. W. 617.

55. Pylant v. Purvis [Miss.] 40 So. 7.

56. See 4 C. L. 753. Judicial review of municipal acts, see ante, § 7.

57. The provision of section 1777, empowering the city solicitor to sue in the name of the city "whenever an obligation or contract made on behalf of the corporation, granting an easement or creating a public duty is being evaded or violated," authorizes a suit by the city solicitor to enjoin traction companies from refusing to give or receive transfers in accordance with the grant to the lessor company. City of Cincinnati v. Cincinnati St. R. Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 489.

58. Taxpayer not party to municipal contract. Allen & Currey Mfg. Co. v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 113 La. 1091, 37 So. 980. Suit by taxpayer for the collection of an account against the municipality not authorized. Ohio v. Roebuck, 2 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 688.

59. A city solicitor is entitled to a reasonable time to investigate the probable merits of a suit before a taxpayer can compel him to bring it. In determining what is a reasonable time the city attorney's pressure of official duties should be considered. Ampt v. Cincinnati, 2 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 489. Especially is this true where the taxpayer having been in a position for some months to make the request makes it at a time when there is an unusually large amount of business to be attended to by the city attorney. Id.

60. Equity cannot at the instance of a taxpayer require the city to set up a particular defense in a pending suit against it. Roby v. Chicago, 215 Ill. 604, 74 N. E. 768.

61. City of Nashville v. Webb, 114 Tenn. 432, 85 S. W. 404.

62. Parks Co. v. Decatur [C. C. A.] 138 F. 550.

63. Under Laws 1901, c. 96, salary of officer or employe of municipal corporation is subject to garnishment. Mitchell v. Miller [Minn.] 103 N. W. 716.

64. City Council of Augusta v. Marks [Ga.] 52 S. E. 539.

ities the acts complained of were directed is cured by an answer alleging a prescriptive right in the city and entry thereunder.[65] Judgments against a municipality become dormant in the same manner as those against an individual.[66] Payment of a judgment may be enforced by mandamus if there are funds available.[67] In the absence of statutory prohibition execution may issue against a municipality, though on grounds of public policy it cannot be levied on the general revenue or on any property needed for governmental purposes.[68]

MUNICIPAL COURTS; MURDER; MUTUAL ACCOUNTS; MUTUAL INSURANCE, see latest topical index.

NAMES, SIGNATURES AND SEALS.

§ 1. Names.[69]—The middle initial is no part of one's name and is ordinarily of no importance.[70] The addition or omission of the abbreviation "Sr." is ordinarily immaterial.[71]

There is no variance between a christian name and a commonly accepted abbreviation or nickname therefor,[72] particularly where the two are shown to have been used to describe one and the same person.[73] So, too, the fact that the patentee of land is described by his christian name in the patent and by the initials of his christian and middle names in a power of attorney authorizing the sale of the land is immaterial where it appears that the same person is referred to.[74]

If, in the country of plaintiff's nativity, a child bears the family name of both his father and his mother, he may sue in his full name, though he has borne in this country only the paternal family name, and notwithstanding that the suit is for divorce and that he was married under the latter name alone.[75]

Where the service is personal, a defendant sued in the wrong name is bound by the judgment even though he does not appear,[76] particularly where his name is

65. City of Owensboro v. Brocking, 27 Ky. L. R. 1086, 87 S. W. 1086.

66. Agreement between municipal creditors held not to prevent judgment from becoming dormant. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

67. Lewis v. Drainage Com'rs of Union Drainage Dist., 111 Ill. App. 222.

68. Beadles v. Fry [Okl.] 82 P. 1041.

69. See 4 C. L. 754.

70. No such dissimilarity between names "William Barker" and "William S. Barker" so as to render record of the conviction of the latter for a felony inadmissible to impeach witness having former name. State v. Loser [Iowa] 104 N. W. 337. Mere fact that witness denied ever having gone by latter name and denied that he had ever been convicted of crime held not to change the rule. Id.

71. Held immaterial that grantor, who was named in a deed as S. W. Sholars and signed that name thereto was described in the certificate of acknowledgment as S. W. Sholars, Sr., where the notary certifies that the person acknowledging the deed was the same person who executed it. Kane v. Sholars [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 480, 90 S. W. 937.

72. No variance between name "Davey S. P." appearing to have been appointed foreman of the grand jury and name "David S. P." indorsed on an indictment as such foreman, "Davey" being a diminutive or nickname for David. Lamb v. People [Ill.] 76 N. E. 576.

73. Certified copy of deed executed by "Fannie C." as wife of the grantor, held admissible though his wife's true name was "Frances C." and there was no proof that they were one and the same person, particularly where the deed was in the chain of title and notary's certificate stated that "Fannie C." was the wife of the grantor. Chrast v. O'Connor [Wash.] 83 P. 238.

74. Discrepancy between name "N. C. Cordrey" described in a power of attorney as the patentee of certain land thereby authorized to be sold, and name "Nathan Cordrey" in the patent held immaterial, it sufficiently appearing that they were one and the same person. Kane v. Sholars [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 480, 90 S. W. 937.

75. Code Prac. art. 172, requires petition to give plaintiff's name, which means his real name. DeRenzes v. His Wife [La.] 39 So. 805.

76. Defendant named "Francis" served with process in which he was called "France." King v. Davis, 137 F. 198.

properly spelled in a notice that leave to amend will be asked, which notice, it is not denied, reached the defendant.[77]

Idem sonans.[78]—The fact that names are not spelled the same in legal documents or proceedings does not ordinarily constitute a fatal variance if they have substantially the same sound when pronounced,[79] but this rule does not operate to render the record of conveyances executed by,[80] or judgments rendered against, a person constructive notice to persons holding under instruments executed under a name having a similar pronunciation, but commencing with a different letter.[81]

Change of name.—In Alabama it is a criminal offense for any person to change or alter his name, except in the manner provided by law, with intent to defraud or to conceal his identity, or to avoid the payment of any debt.[82] In a prosecution for a violation of this act with intent to avoid the payment of a debt, it is immaterial whether the debt was contracted before or after the passage of the act.[83] The usual rules of evidence apply.[84] A denial by defendant, while testifying in his own behalf, that he ever changed his name at all, dispenses with the necessity of proof by the state that the change was not made in the manner prescribed by law.[85] The state may, for the purpose of showing fraudulent intent, prove that defendant owed other debts than the one alleged in the indictment.[86]

Business and corporate names.[87]—Under the New Jersey corporation act one corporation may enjoin another from using a corporate name so nearly similar to its own as to lead to uncertainty or confusion.[88] The certificate or reply of the corporation clerk as to whether any other corporation has adopted a particular name, or one so similar thereto as to lead to confusion, concerns only objections apparent in the name itself, and one acting thereon does so at his own risk when the adoption of such name is properly brought in question.[89]

The assumption of a corporate name by any individual or unincorporated company or association in any sign or advertisement for the purpose of soliciting business thereunder is forbidden in Illinois.[90] The object of this statute is to pre-

77. King v. Davis, 137 F. 198.

78. See 4 C. L. 755.

79. Names not idem sonans: "Max" and "Matt." Vincendeau v. People [Ill.] 76 N. E. 675. Instruction tending to induce jury to disregard the difference held erroneous. Id. "Frank Rock" and "Frank Rex." State v. Lee [Mont.] 83 P. 223. Where information charged robbery from "Frank Rex," and evidence showed that his name was "Frank Rock," and there was no description in the information tending to make it certain that they were one and the same person, held, that there was a fatal variance, notwithstanding Pen. Code, § 1838, providing that when an offense involves the commission of a private injury and is described with sufficient certainty in other respects to identify the act, an erroneous allegation as to the person injured is not material. Id. "McCinney" and "McKinney." Grimmer v. Nolen [Ala.] 40 So. 97.

80. Record of mortgage executed in name of "McCinney" is not notice that it was executed by "McKinney," and in action for conversion of property claimed by defendant under mortgage executed under latter name, plaintiff's alleged prior mortgage executed under the former name is inadmissible. Grimmer v. Nolen [Ala.] 40 So. 97.

81. Where records show that title is held by "Cheffey," a mortgagee is not bound to look for judgments against "Sheffey," though the two names are, or may be, pronounced alike, but may rely on the records as written. Boyd v. Boyd [Iowa] 104 N. W. 798.

82. Act Oct. 10, 1903 (Gen. Acts 1903, p. 438) is a proper exercise of the police power, and does not violate the constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for debt. Morris v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 973.

83. Morris v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 973.

84. It having been shown that defendant was employed in certain railway shops, held, that evidence that the railway company as garnishee in a suit by witness against defendant in justice court answered that it had no one by defendant's name in its employ was hearsay and inadmissible to show that defendant was employed under a false name. Morris v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 973.

85. Even if such proof would otherwise be necessary. Morris v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 973.

86. Morris v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 973.

87. See 4 C. L. 755.

88. Evidence held not to warrant enjoining the use of defendant's corporate name. Eureka Fire Hose Co. v. Eureka Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 561.

89. Is of no weight on the question of violation of a trade-mark or trade-name. Eureka Fire Hose Co. v. Eureka Rubber Mfg. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 60 A. 561.

vent persons from obtaining a fictitious credit by advertising themselves as being a corporation when in fact they are not, and there must be at least some evidence tending to show such a fraudulent use.[91]

Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to issue a certificate of incorporation under a name the use of which could be enjoined by an existing company.[92]

Matters relating to trade-marks and trade-names are treated elsewhere.[93]

§ 2. Signatures.[94]—The effect of the words "agent,"[95] "trustee,"[96] "executor"[97] and the like, following a signature, is treated elsewhere.

To prove the execution of an instrument by a subscribing witness, it is necessary to show that it was signed in his presence.[98] Where witnesses to a will are not required to sign in the presence of each other, the fact that a witness whose signature was proved signed after the name of another does not prove the signature of the latter.[99]

A witness may become qualified to speak as to handwriting to be proved either by having seen the party write,[1] or by having seen letters or documents in his handwriting,[2] or by comparison of handwritings by an expert.[3] In the first two cases the witness must have acquired his knowledge by his own observation of facts occurring under his own eye, and without having regard to any particular person, case, or document.[4] Only an expert can qualify himself to testify as to handwriting in a particular case,[5] and his evidence is inadmissible unless all the writings compared are produced.[6] Whether one is qualified to testify as an expert is largely a matter in the discretion of the trial court, and his ruling allowing a witness to testify will not be disturbed unless it clearly appears that he was not qualified.[7]

§ 3. Seals.[8]—Any impression, flourish, or mark will be a good seal if so intended,[9] and the word "seal"[10] or the letters "L. S." are sufficient.[11] The modern tendency is to minimize the old distinctions between sealed and unsealed instru-

90. Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896 (2d Ed.) p. 1332. par. 368, prescribes a penalty for so doing. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42. Penalty prescribed is exclusive and contracts of those violating the statute are not thereby rendered invalid. Id.

91. It is the deception or improper use of the name and not merely the name itself which constitutes the offense. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42.

92. Where use could be enjoined on ground that it was thereby intended to deceive the public and fraudulently obtain the business of the existing company. People v. Rose [Ill.] 76 N. E. 42.

93. See Trade-marks and Trade-names, 4 C. L. 1689.

94. See 4 C. L. 756.

95. See Agency, 5 C. L. 64.

96. See Trusts, 4 C. L. 1727.

97. See Estates of Decedents, 5 C. L. 1183.

98. Signature of power of attorney held insufficiently proven to render it admissible in evidence. Schaffer v. Emmons, 103 App. Div. 399, 92 N. Y. S. 993.

99, 1, 2, 3. In re Burbank's Will, 104 App. Div. 312, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 247, 93 N. Y. S. 866.

4. Witnesses incompetent to prove signature of witness to an alleged lost will, where knowledge was acquired with reference to the particular case. In re Burbank's Will, 104 App. Div. 312, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 247, 93 N. Y. S. 866.

5. In re Burbank's Will, 104 App. Div. 312, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 247, 93 N. Y. S. 866.

6. In re Burbank's Will, 104 App. Div. 312, 34 Civ. Proc. R. 247, 93 N. Y. S. 866. Witnesses who had never seen or known party and had never seen him write held not competent to prove signature of a witness to an alleged lost will because 14 years before they had seen a signature to the will purporting to be his and during the progress of the proceedings had seen signatures proved to be his. Id.

7. Admission of opinion of bank officers and clerk of court as to whether body of will, the signature thereto and name of an attesting witness were written in the same ink as that of another witness, and as to which was the older writing, held not error. Savage v. Bowen, 103 Va. 540, 49 S. E. 668.

8. See 4 C. L. 757.

9. Hazleton Nat. Bank v. Kintz, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 456.

10. Hazleton Nat. Bank v. Kintz, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 456. In most states it is no longer necessary that a seal be impressed upon wax or other adhesive substance, but the printed word "Seal" following the signature is sufficient if the instrument recites that it is executed under the party's hand and seal. Instrument held a sealed one within the statute of limitations. Philip v. Stearns [S. D.] 105 N. W. 467.

11. Printed after signatures to judgment note, and surrounded by a scroll. Hazleton Nat. Bank v. Kintz, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 456.

ments.[12] Thus, it is now generally held that a release under seal may be avoided on the ground of fraud in an action at law.[13] Where, in an instrument signed by both a husband and his wife, a seal is affixed to his signature but none is affixed to hers, but the instrument recites that it is "given under our hands and seals," it will be presumed that the seal was adopted by her also.[14]

NATIONAL BANKS; NATURAL GAS; NATURALIZATION, see latest topical index.

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

The rights of riparian owners,[15] the ownership of subaqueous lands,[16] consuming uses of the water,[17] and matters relating to navigation, are treated elsewhere.[18]

§ 1. What are navigable.[19]—At common law waters were navigable only where the tide ebbed and flowed.[20] It is now, however, generally held that waters which are navigable in fact are navigable in law.[21] They are navigable in fact when they are used, or are susceptible of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce over which trade and travel are or may be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on water,[22] and are navigable waters of the United States, as distinguished from the navigable waters of the states, when they form, in their ordinary condition, by themselves, or by uniting with other waters, a continued highway, over which commerce is or may be carried on with other states or foreign countries in the customary modes in which such commerce is conducted by water.[23] It is not necessary that they be capable of continuous use for purposes of navigation at all times of the year,[24] nor is it necessary that the waters be navigable in all their parts in order that the public may have a right of navigation where they are deep enough and fit for that purpose.[25]

§ 2. Relative, public and private rights.[26]—Absolute property in, and dominion and sovereignty over, the soil under tide waters belongs to the state in which

12. Rockwell v. Capital Traction Co., 25 App. D. C. 98.

13. Formerly the only remedy was in equity. Rockwell v. Capital Traction Co., 25 App. D. C. 98.

14. Rockwell v. Capital Traction Co., 25 App. D. C. 98.

15, 16. See Riparian Owners, 4 C. L. 1310.

17. See Waters and Water Supply, 4 C. L. 1824.

18. See Shipping and Water Traffic, 4 C. L. 1450.

19. See 4 C. L. 757.

20. Streams above tide water were not deemed navigable. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783; McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351.

21. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783. Those rivers are public navigable rivers in law which are navigable in fact. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42.

22. Averments of bill for an injunction to prevent obstruction of river by boom company held to sufficiently show that river was actually used in navigation. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42. A stream is navigable in fact only where it affords a channel for useful commerce and of practical utility to the public as such. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783. The fact that there is water enough in places for rowboats or small launches, or that hunters or fishermen pass over the water with boats ordinarily used for that purpose does not render the waters navigable. Id. Are navigable if capable, in their natural state, of being used for the purpose of commerce, no matter in what mode it may be conducted. McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351. Stream capable of transporting rafts of railroad ties for several months in the spring, without the aid of men on the banks, is navigable. Id. Lake held navigable in fact. Madson v. Spokane Valley Land & Water Co. [Wash.] 82 P. 718.

23. River held navigable water of the United States. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42.

24. McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351.

25. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783.

26. See 4 C. L. 758.

the land is situated. There is, however, a conflict of authority as to the ownership of the soil under nontidal waters lying wholly within a state, it being held in some states to belong to the state for the benefit of the public, and in others to belong to the riparian proprietors subject only to the public right of navigation.[27]

The public have an easement for the purpose of navigation in waters which are navigable in fact regardless of the ownership of the underlying soil,[28] and neither persons using them for that purpose[29] nor the owners of adjoining lands have a right to obstruct them or to interfere with their use by others,[30] any such obstruction being a public nuisance.[31] Persons navigating such waters have not, however, a right to willfully and maliciously destroy fishing appliances therein, even if placed there without lawful authority,[32] nor to trespass upon the lands of riparian owners.[33] The right to hunt and fish is not an incident to the right of navigation, but belongs exclusively to the owner of the underlying soil.[34]

The right to build tunnels under[35] or to bridge navigable streams is subject

27. See Riparian Owners, 4 C. L. 1310. See, also, 4 C. L. 758, 759.

28. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783; McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351. Right of one owning fee of land between high and low water mark is subject to public right of navigation. McGunnegle v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 988. A navigable stream is not a highway in the sense in which the word is used in S. C. Const. art. 3, § 34, forbidding the enactment of local or special laws to lay out, open, alter, or work roads or highways. Manigault v. Springs, 26 S. Ct. 127.

29. Persons using navigable waters owe a duty to the public not to create a nuisance in the way of an obstruction to navigation, and are liable for injuries resulting from their negligence in so doing. Moran v. Merritt & Chapman D. & W. Co., 135 F. 863. Respondent held not liable for injury to tug caused by line becoming entangled in her screw. Even if line was that used by respondent in raising sunken vessel, which had been made fast to pier and weighted to bottom, there was no negligence shown. Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply since proper precautions were taken. Id.

30. For purpose of floating ties. McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 357. No landowner has right to put any structure or filling between high and low water mark which would obstruct the use of that part of the river for navigation. McGunnegle v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 988. Municipality through which a navigable stream flows has no authority to impede its free navigation or to grant right to do so to others. People v. West Chicago St. R. R. Co., 115 Ill. App. 172.

31. Obstruction of stream is prima facie a public nuisance, and no one has a right to obstruct it unless he has authority of law for so doing. Simpson v. Kelley [Ky.] 90 S. W. 241. Bridge over river so constructed as to prevent passage of plaintiff's boats held a public nuisance. Viebahn v. Board of Com'rs [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1089.

32. If he does so he is liable for the resulting damages. Fowler v. Harrison [Wash.] 81 P. 1055. Evidence held to establish that defendants deliberately, wantonly, and purposely ran steamer into plaintiff's fish nets, traps, and dolphin (Id.), and that such appliances were not an obstruction to navigation (Id.). Admission in evidence of certificate of secretary of war authorizing maintenance of appliances held not error even if insufficient authority, particularly where plaintiff had also secured license from the state. Id. Verdict held not excessive. Id.

33. The owner of lots abutting on a stream may enjoin the cutting of a channel or basin thereon by another for the purpose of enabling him to turn a steamer which is too large to turn in the stream. Evidence held to sustain finding that bank was platted as claimed by complainant and that defendant cut into his lots. Wilkinson v. Dunkley-Williams Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 19, 103 N. W. 170. Rule applies though his interest is, in equity, that of a mortgagee. Id. He may also restrain a similar encroachment on a street whereby access to his property is destroyed. Evidence held to sustain finding that street was platted for purpose of giving complainant access to his property, and that defendant encroached thereon. Id.

Floating logs: One using a navigable stream for the purpose of floating logs has no right to allow them to accumulate so as to obstruct the flow of the water thereby causing it to flood the lands of a riparian owner and to deposit logs thereon, and to wash and wear away the soil, interfering with and obstructing its cultivation. White v. Codd [Wash.] 80 P. 836. Defendant held not to have acquired prescriptive right to flood plaintiff's land. Id. The measure of damages in such cases is the difference in the value of the land before and after the acts complained of. Osborn v. Mississippi & Rum River Boom Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 879. Failure to give instruction fixing the measure of damages at the decreased rental value (Id.), or that the cost of restoring the land was the proper measure of damages if less than the difference in value, held not error where defendant made no request for such instructions. Id.

34. Schulte v. Warren, 218 Ill. 108, 75 N. E. 783.

35. Right of traction company, granted by city ordinance, to maintain tunnel under navigable stream is subject to the condition that it shall not thereby interrupt navigato the condition that they be so constructed and maintained as not to unnecessarily interrupt navigation,[36] and the same is true of the right to reconstruct bridges already built.[37] So, too, a railroad company which, by reason of the negligent and careless operation of its trains, breaks a drawbridge and thereby obstructs navigation, is liable in damages to private individuals specially injured thereby.[38] The original negligent breaking, and not obstructions due to repairing operations, is the proximate cause of the injury in such case.[39]

The right given by the statutes of Alabama to owners of land fronting on bays to plant and gather oysters confers on them no exclusive right to the use of the waters for all purposes, but only such a right to the reasonable use thereof for passage and freight as will enable them to best enjoy the rights granted, which they must exercise in such a manner as will interfere as little as possible with the like rights of others.[40] They may, however, compel persons crossing their oyster beds to use designated channels for that purpose.[41]

Right of access.[42]—The proprietors of lands upon navigable waters are entitled to access to their navigable parts,[43] but the owner of upland has no right to trespass upon land lying between high and low water mark which belongs to another person for the purpose of reaching the navigable waters beyond.[44]

The rights of wharfage[45] and reclamation of one owning land fronting on a cove in a river in such a manner that lines drawn at right angles to the channel of tion, particularly when the ordinance so provides, and it is not entitled to compensation when compelled to lower or remove it when it becomes necessary to deepen the channel. People v. West Chicago St. R. R. Co., 115 Ill. App. 172. City is not estopped by consent to construction of tunnel to compel its abatement when it interferes with navigation. Id. Company's tunnel is no less an obstruction to navigation because there are other tunnels below it which are also obstructions, but mandamus to compel its removal will not be executed until the others have been removed. Id.

36. Pharr v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. [La.] 38 So. 943.

37. Evidence held to sustain finding that this duty was not violated. Rogers Sand Co. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 139 F. 7.

38. Where obstruction was such that barges could pass but steamboats could not, held that company was liable for the cost of an extra steamboat rendered necessary to enable plaintiff to transport cane from his plantation to his refinery. Pharr v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. [La.] 38 So. 943. Damages claimed for delay in operating refinery held too remote and uncertain. Id.

39. Where usual channel was closed by breaking of bridge, and company drove piling across the other channel for purpose of repairing bridge and facilitating traffic. Pharr v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. [La.] 38 So. 943.

40. Code 1896, c. 84, granting to owners of lands fronting on bays the right to plant and gather oysters for a distance of 600 yards from shore. Cain v. Simonson [Ala.] 39 So. 571.

41. Code 1896, c. 84 gives owners of land fronting on a bay the right to plant oysters to a distance of 600 yards from the shore. Complainant owned land on each side of a narrow mouth of a bay, and maintained oyster bed in such mouth less than 1200 yards wide. Held, that defendant, who owned land fronting on the bay at a distance from its mouth, would be restrained from sailing out of the bay over such oyster bed to its irreparable damage, and would be required to use a channel through the mouth of the bay marked out and agreed upon by the parties. Cain v. Simonson [Ala.] 39 So. 571.

Note: At common law the public right of navigation to high-water mark was paramount to all other rights in navigable waters (Williams v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & El. 318; Atty. Gen. v. Woods, 108 Mass. 436, 11 Am. Rep. 380), and redress for damage to fisheries caused by navigators was restricted to cases of negligence or wilfulness (Colchester v. Brook, 7 Q. B. 339). But the power of the legislature to limit channels or otherwise regulate navigation is unquestioned. Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. 219, and cases there cited. It would seem therefore not unreasonable to imply in the plaintiff a right to prevent unnecessary navigation which was injurious to the fishery privileges conferred by the Alabama statute.—From 6 Columbia L. R. 282.

42. See 4 C. L. 760.

43. Construction of railroad across mouth of cove held not to materially impair right of access, in view of the situation and limited extent of the cove and the shallowness of its waters and plaintiff held only entitled to nominal damages. Richards v. New York, etc., R. Co., 77 Conn. 501, 60 A. 295.

44. Town owning fee of strip on which owner of upland has erected dock will not be enjoined from removing it. Coudert v. Underhill, 107 App. Div. 335, 95 N. Y. S. 134.

45. See 4 C. L. 762.

the river on opposite sides of the cove would embrace such frontage are confined to the cove.[46] A city has only such right to build wharves as is granted to it by its charter,[47] and the grant to it of such a right does not authorize it to interfere with or destroy vested rights previously granted by it to others.[48]

§ 3. Regulation and control.[49]—Congress has power to pass laws for the navigation of public waters and to prevent any and all obstructions therein.[50] Until it acts, however, the states have plenary powers of control over navigable waters lying wholly within their boundaries, and hence may authorize the erection of bridges[51] or dams,[52] or the alteration of the course of streams.[53] The expenditure of money by the Federal government for the improvement of such waters does not evidence an intent on its part to exclude the state from all control over them.[54]

The right to build and maintain a railroad bridge necessarily carries with it the right to construct and repair it when necessary[55] and to construct and maintain for a reasonable time such temporary structures in the stream as may be necessary to prevent the interruption of traffic.[56] The Federal statutes prohibiting the construction of bridges or the creation of obstructions in navigable waters without the consent of congress are not applicable to the rebuilding of a bridge lawfully in existence when they were passed.[57] The provision of a state constitution that all navigable waters shall forever remain public highways does not prevent the legislature from authorizing a dam across such a stream for drainage purposes.[58] The Federal statutes require any one desiring to build wharves, bridges, and the like in navigable waters, or to change the course of navigable streams, to obtain a permit from the secretary of war.[59] The secretary has, however, no authority to order and

46. See, also, Wharves, 4 C. L. 1862. Richards v. New York, etc., R. Co., 77 Conn. 501, 60 A. 295.

47. Vallejo Ferry Co. v. Vallejo, 146 Cal. 392, 80 P. 514.

48. Construction of wharf in such a manner as to render navigation of ferry, operating under franchise previously granted by the city, dangerous, unless company should spend large sums in changing its slip, will be enjoined. Vallejo Ferry Co. v. Vallejo, 146 Cal. 392, 80 P. 514.

49. See 4 C. L. 760.

50. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42. Act Cong. Sept. 19, 1890, c. 907 (26 St. 454), prohibiting the maintenance of obstructions to navigation in navigable streams, is not inconsistent with Act March 3, 1899, c. 425 (30 St. 1151), prohibiting the erection of such obstructions and hence is not repealed thereby. Id. Hence the passage of the latter act does not prohibit the bringing of a suit under the former one, particularly where the cause of action accrued prior to its passage since the repealing clause of the act of 1899 (§ 20) provides that previously accrued rights of action shall not be affected thereby. Id. Bill alleging that defendant maintained and continues to maintain an obstruction to navigation in the navigable waters of said river held not open to the objection that it fails to allege facts showing that the cause of action accrued prior to the passage of the act of 1899, where evidence as to the dates of construction of booms complained of and the period of their maintenance was admitted without objection. Id.

51. The states have unlimited authority to authorize the erection of bridges over navigable streams, subject only to the paramount authority of the Federal government. Pharr v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. [La.] 38 So. 943. Railroad bridge built under authority given by state prior to Federal legislation on the subject is a lawful structure. Rogers Sand Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 139 F. 7.

52. In the absence of legislation by congress a state has power to improve its lands and promote the general welfare by authorizing a dam to be built across its interior streams, though they were previously navigable to the sea by vessels engaged in the coastwise trade. Manigault v. Springs, 26 S. Ct. 127.

53. If Act March 3, 1899, c. 425, § 10, 30 St. 1151, authorizing secretary of war to issue permits to alter course of navigable streams is invalid, state of Illinois had power to authorize drainage district to change direction of Chicago river and introduce current therein. Corrigan Transit Co. v. Sanitary Dist. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 851. If valid, district having obtained permit is not liable for resulting damages. Id. If that portion of the section is invalid, the prohibitory part is also invalid, and cannot be regarded as a taking control of the river by congress. Id.

54. River wholly within a state. Corrigan Transit Co. v. Sanitary Dist. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 851.

55, 56. Rogers Sand Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 139 F. 7.

57. Act March 3, 1899, c. 425, §§ 7, 10 (30 St. 1150, 1151). Rogers Sand Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 139 F. 7.

58. Is a proper exercise of the police power. Manigault v. Springs, 26 S. Ct. 127.

compel the commissioners of a county to remove an established bridge over a navigable river wholly within the limits of the state, and rebuild it in such a manner as to change the course of the river by straightening the same at the point in question,[60] nor can he require them to tear down such bridge upon the ground that it is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of such river without tendering compensation therefor.[61] The Federal statute authorizing the secretary of war in his discretion to remove obstructions from navigable waters of the United States does not invest him with exclusive jurisdiction over such matters, or prevent the removal of such obstructions by the local authorities if he fails or declines to act.[62]

The right of a municipality to condemn private property for the purpose of enlarging or creating a harbor on navigable water depends upon the statutes of the various states.[63] The impairment of navigation and the interruption of access to lands by the erection of a dam under a statute enacted in the exercise of the police power for the purpose of draining lowlands is not such a taking as to require the payment of compensation in order to afford due process of law.[64]

§ 4. Remedies for injuries relating to.[65]—It is not necessary in order to justify the interference of the United States to prevent the obstruction of navigable water within a state that the commerce thereon actually extends to or affects other states.[66] Thus the Federal courts may enjoin the erection and maintenance of a boom in a navigable stream without a showing that it is actually used for interstate commerce,[67] and have jurisdiction to determine whether a boom is constructed and maintained in a navigable stream in compliance with a state law authorizing its construction in such a manner as not to interfere with navigation, when such law is relied on as a justification for its creation and continuance.[68]

A person has no right to remove obstructions placed in a navigable stream by another on his own land unless they interfere with his rights of navigation.[69]

59. Act March 3, 1899, c. 425, § 10 (30 St. at L. 1151, 6 Fed. St. Ann. 813). Act does not operate to prevent removal of obstructions without such consent. People v. West Chicago St. R. Co., 115 Ill. App. 172. Provision in permit authorizing sanitary district to change the course of the Chicago river that the district shall "assume all responsibility for damages" by reason of an introduction of a current in the river merely obligates it to save the government harmless in such cases, and is not an undertaking to pay damages to outsiders for which they would otherwise have no cause of action, and it is not liable for damages or delay to shipping caused by the introduction of such a current. Corrigan Transit Co. v. Sanitary Dist. [C. C. A.] 137 F. 851. District could not be held liable on account of rate of current on day when injury occurred when there was no averment in regard to such rate in the libel. Id. Grant held not conditioned on keeping the flowage within a certain maximum, or at a certain rate. Id. Only reference to rate of flowage is in preamble, which cannot be resorted to since grant is unambiguous. Id. In any event the only reference to rate therein is in a recital of district's purpose in asking an earlier grant of permission to correct and regulate the cross section of the river, and it thereby neither bound itself to do the work nor guarantied the resulting rate nor covenanted to remove abutments and piers of bridges which it had no right to touch. Id. Even where it was at liberty to correct the cross-section for the purpose of securing a certain maximum velocity, it did not undertake to secure the specified limit when a large part of the cross-section was taken up by a barge. Id.

60. Thereby throwing channel 50 feet to the east. State v. Ashtabula County Com'rs, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 469.

61. State v. Ashtabula County Com'rs, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 469.

62. Act Cong. March 3, 1899, c. 425, § 19 (30 St. 1154) clothes him with discretionary power only, which he may exercise or not. Hagan v. Richmond [Va.] 52 S. E. 385.

63. A grant to a city of the right to condemn private property for the improvement of watercourses does not authorize such condemnation for the purpose of enlarging or creating a harbor upon navigable water. Pub. Acts 1899, Act No. 136, c. 25, § 1, p. 191, confers no such right. City of South Haven v. Van Buren Probate Judge [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 71, 103 N. W. 521. Pub. Acts 1899 (Act No. 136, c. 25, § 1, p. 191), and Comp. Laws 1897, § 3143, authorizing certain cities to construct wharves, etc., and to condemn land for that purpose, does not authorize the condemnation of land for the purpose of enlarging or creating a harbor upon navigable water. Id.

64. Manigault v. Springs, 26 S. Ct. 127.

65. See 4 C. L. 764.

66, 67. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42.

68. Whether boom interferes with navi-

The impairment of navigation being a matter of public and not of private detriment, a private individual cannot recover damages therefor[70] or enjoin the same unless he is specially injured thereby.[71] A mandatory injunction, pending suit, requiring the removal of logs which defendant has floated onto plaintiff's land and left there is proper where defendant has no conceivable right to do so in any view of the case.[72] A taxpayer may enjoin county commissioners from carrying out an order of the secretary of war, directing the reconstruction of a bridge which is wholly within the county and was constructed before congress attempted to confer authority on the secretary.[73]

The usual rules of pleading apply to actions for damages[74] and suits for injunctions. The obstruction being prima facie a public nuisance, defendant, in an action for damages therefor, must plead any authority on which he relies for maintaining such obstruction[75] and facts showing that the obstruction was within such authority.[76] gation within meaning of Hill's Ann. Codes & St. Wash. § 1592. United States v. Wishkah Boom Co. [C. C. A.] 136 F. 42.

69. Boom erected in stream by one owning both banks. Winsor v. Hanson [Wash.] 82 P. 710.

70. Is a matter of public and not of private detriment, and a riparian owner cannot recover damages therefor. Richards v. New York, etc., R. Co., 77 Conn. 501, 60 A. 295.

71. As in the case of other public nuisances, an individual who suffers a special or peculiar damage not common to the public by reason of the obstruction of a navigable stream may maintain a private action therefor. Viebahn v. Board of Com'rs [Minn.] 104 N. W. 1089. Thus persons previously engaged in operating a steamboat line on a navigable river may recover damages for the unlawful construction and maintenance of a bridge of such a character as to prevent the passage of their boats. Bridge constructed by county without authority of law and in contravention of the Federal statutes. Id.

NOTE. Obstruction of steamboat traffic as special injury: The complainant owned and used a steamboat for the sole purpose of navigating a particular creek. He had entered into a traffic contract with another common carrier and had built up a good business. The county commissioners erected a bridge across the creek, which so obstructed it that complainant's boat could not pass. In a suit to abate the obstruction, held, that equity could not interfere. Thomas v. Wade [Fla.] 37 So. 743.

A private person cannot maintain a suit to enjoin or abate a public nuisance unless he shows some injury peculiar and special to himself. Cooley on Torts, 46; Clark v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70 Wis. 593, 36 N. W. 326, 5 Am. St. Rep. 187; Jarvis v. Santa Clara R. Co., 52 Cal. 438. By the great weight of authority it is considered that the right of navigation being a public right, any obstruction thereof affects all equally and cannot be abated at the suit of an individual. Gould on Waters, § 172; Swanson v. Mississippi River Boom Co., 42 Minn. 532; Steamboat Co. v. Railroad Co., 30 S. C. 539, 14 Am. St. Rep. 923, 4 L. R. A. 209 and note; Lownsdale v. Gray's Harbor Boom Co., 117 F. 983. On the other hand it has been held that the owner of a boat used along a definite route, the passage of which is obstructed, suffers a special injury, it being immaterial whether or not others own boats engaged in the same business. Farmers' Co-operative Mfg. Co. v. Albemarle & R. R. Co., 117 N. C. 579, 23 S. E. 43, 53 Am. St. Rep. 606, 29 L. R. A. 700; Enos v. Hamilton, 27 Wis. 256 (distinguished in Clark v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70 Wis. 593, 36 N. W. 326, 5 Am. St. Rep. 187). See, also, Stetson v. Faxon, 19 Pick. [Mass.] 147, 31 Am. Dec. 123. Such cases are to be distinguished from those wherein there is an interference with complainant's right of access to his land. Glover v. Powell, 10 N. J. Eq. 211; Whitehead v. Jessup, 53 F. 707. The general rule is followed in the present case.—3 Mich. L. R. 485.

72. White v. Codd [Wash.] 80 P. 836.

73. State v. Ashtabula County Com'rs, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 469.

74. Any defect in petition for damages for obstructing navigable stream by means of boom held cured by answer denying that it was defendant's duty to keep channel open or to pass plaintiff's logs as soon as possible, and affirmatively alleging that he was only required to use reasonable diligence which he has done. Simpson v. Kelley [Ky.] 90 S. W. 241. Whether defendant was required to let logs through at once, or only to use reasonable diligence, is a question of law, and hence he was not entitled to judgment on the pleadings for want of a reply thereto. Id. Complaint held to state a cause of action for recovery of damages for injuries to plaintiff's property caused by wrongful acts of defendants in allowing logs to accumulate in river. Osborn v. Mississippi & Rum River Boom Co. [Minn.] 103 N. W. 879.

75. Simpson v. Kelley [Ky.] 90 S. W. 241. Where the petition charges defendant with obstructing such a stream by means of a boom, thereby preventing plaintiffs from getting out their ties, defendant is not entitled to judgment on the pleadings for failure to reply, where he fails to allege any such authority. Id. Rule is not changed by fact that he files in the record an order of the county court granting him such authority. Id.

The court will take judicial notice of the navigability of tide waters, and of large streams whose navigability is a matter of common knowledge,[77] and that a particular river is a tidal stream,[78] but with these exceptions the question of navigability is one of fact for the jury,[79] and the burden of establishing it is on the party alleging it.[80] Under the Federal statute limiting the liability of the owner of a vessel lost without his privity or knowledge to the extent of his interest therein, he cannot be held personally responsible for expense incurred by local authorities in removing the wrecked vessel from their harbor.[81]

NE EXEAT.

Though the writ is not available in case of mere debt by reason of a prohibition against imprisonment for debt, it will issue to secure payment of alimony,[82] and may be issued after application for alimony and before allowance thereof.[83] Under its statutory power to make such orders and issue such process as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the bankruptcy act, a court of bankruptcy may issue a writ of ne exeat against the bankrupt.[84]

NEGLIGENCE.

Scope of title.—This article treats generally of the subject of negligence, and includes, for the most part, only such specific applications of the general principles as are not included within the subject-matter of other topics.[85]

§ 1. Definitions.[86]—To constitute actionable negligence, there must be a violation of a legal duty to exercise care[87] resulting in damage. The phrases "due

76. Simpson v. Kelley [Ky.] 90 S. W. 241.
77. McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351.
78. Passaic river. McCarter v. Hudson County Water Co. [N. J. Eq.] 61 A. 710.
79, 80. McKinney v. Northcutt, 114 Mo. App. 146, 89 S. W. 351.
81. Act Cong. March 3, 1899, c. 425, § 19, 30 St. 1154, and U. S. Rev. St. § 4283. Hagan v. Richmond [Va.] 52 S. E. 385. Code 1887, §§ 2011 (as amended by Acts 1889-90, p. 624, c. 371) 2012-2014, and Richmond city ordinances, c. 77, § 8, authorizing removal of obstructions at owner's expense are invalid, where loss does not occur with his privity or knowledge. Id.
82, 83. Lamar v. Lamar, 123 Ga. 827, 51 S. E. 763.
84. Affidavit held to warrant writ. In re Cohen, 136 F. 999.
85. For other applications of principles see Animals, 5 C. L. 113; Bridges, 5 C. L. 439; Carriers, 5 C. L. 507; Corporations, 5 C. L. 764; Counties, 5 C. L. 857; Electricity, 5 C. L. 1086; Explosives and Inflammables, 5 C. L. 1405; False Imprisonment, 5 C. L. 1413; Fires, 5 C. L. 1424; Gas, 5 C. L. 1584; Highways and Streets, 5 C. L. 1645; Independent Contractors, 5 C. L. 1782; Inns, Restaurants and Lodging Houses, 4 C. L. 123; Intoxicating Liquors, 4 C. L. 252; Landlord and Tenant, 4 C. L. 389; Master and Servant, 4 C. L. 533; Medicine and Surgery, 4 C. L. 636; Mines and Minerals, 4 C. L. 649; Nuisance, 4 C. L. 839; Party Walls, 4 C. L. 927; Railroads, 4 C. L. 1181; Shipping and Water Traffic, 4 C. L. 1450; Street Railways, 4 C. L. 1556; Telegraphs and Telephones, 4 C. L. 1657. Compare also Torts, 4 C. L. 1682.
86. See 4 C. L. 764.
87. Thaney v. A Friederick & Sons Co., 44 Misc. 134, 89 N. Y. S. 787. It must appear not only that defendant was negligent, but that there was a violation of some duty owed the person injured. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Simons [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 883. Some obligation or duty owed plaintiff and left unperformed by defendant must be shown. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Cline, 111 Ill. App. 416. The declaration must show a legal duty of the defendant to the plaintiff, the failure to discharge which caused the injury. Hortenstein v. Virginia-Carolina R. Co., 102 Va. 914, 47 S. E. 996. In an action by an employe against a foreman—who was plaintiff's fellow-servant—a complaint alleging injury as a result of the manner in which the foreman's orders were executed did not state a cause of action. Brabham v. American Tel. & T. Co. [S. C.] 50 S. E.

care," "reasonable care," and "ordinary care" are used interchangeably[88] to denote that degree of care which an ordinarily prudent person would use under the same or similar circumstances.[89] A failure to exercise such care is negligence.[90] It may consist either of acts or omissions.[91] The theory that there are three degrees of negligence, described by the terms "slight," "ordinary," and "gross," has been generally discarded, the attempted distinctions being held impracticable and illogical.[92] But where such distinctions are recognized by statutes, they must be made by the courts.[93]

Willful or wanton negligence[94] is such a gross want of care and regard for the rights of others as to justify a presumption of willfulness or wantonness;[95] or a

716. Express company unloading express upon a truck in Union depot held to owe no duty to a messenger boy riding on steps of rear car on train backing into station, by permission of pilot, and hence not liable for injuries caused by collision with truck. United States Exp. Co. v. Everest [Kan.] 83 P. 817. No breach of duty by contractor who failed to guard excavation on private premises when license to use land was not connected with him. Crimmins v. United Engineering & Contracting Co., 96 N. Y. S. 1032. Independent contractor for mason work in a building being constructed owed no duty to an employe of a contractor for lighting of building to keep the building free from accumulations of brick and mortar, or to guard elevators in building. No recovery where employe of lighting contractor was last seen at top of ladder, and was found dead at bottom of elevator shaft. Thaney v. A. Friederick & Sons Co., 44 Misc. 134, 89 N. Y. S. 787.

88. Raymond v. Portland R. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 602.

89. "Reasonable care" is such care as an ordinarily reasonable and prudent person exercises with respect to his own affairs, under like circumstances. Raymond v. Portland R. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 602. Ordinary care and diligence is that care and diligence which every prudent man takes under the same or similar circumstances. Sanders v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 51 S. E. 728. What a person of ordinary prudence would or would not do under the particular circumstances is the true test of negligence. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Everett [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 17. Common or ordinary diligence is that degree of diligence which men generally use in respect to their own concerns. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Grommes, 110 Ill. App. 113. Ordinary care is such as an ordinarily prudent person exercises upon any and all occasions; not such as such a person usually exercises. Chicago City R. Co. v. Schuler, 111 Ill. App. 470. An instruction that "ordinary is such care as persons of ordinary prudence and intelligence exercise under the same or similar circumstances" held inaccurate, though not fatally erroneous, in omitting after the word "intelligence" the word "ordinarily" or "usually" or "customarily." Coppins v. Jefferson [Wis.] 105 N. W. 1078.

90. Raymond v. Portland R. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 602; Goldstein v. People's R. Co. [Del.] 60 A. 975; Jones v. American Warehouse Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 106; Wofford v. Clifton Cotton Mills [S. C.] 51 S. E. 918; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hays [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 762, 89 S. W. 29. Negligence is the failure to use the care demanded by the situation. Kelly v. Malott [C. C. A.] 135 F. 74.

91. Instruction on negligence held not objectionable as excluding from consideration matters of omission. Struble v. Burlington, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 142. A definition that negligence is a failure to exercise that degree of care and diligence which an ordinarily prudent person would exercise in his own affairs under like circumstances is not objectionable as failing to include acts of commission as well as of omission. German Ins. Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 361.

92. Raymond v. Portland R. Co. [Me.] 62 A. 602. There are degrees of care, but not of negligence. "Negligence" is a word of denial; "care" is the positive word. Kelly v. Malott [C. C. A.] 135 F. 74.

Contra: Slight negligence is not incompatible with ordinary care, and one who has used ordinary care, though slightly negligent, has used the degree of care required by law. Harvey v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 116 Ill. App. 507.

93. In an action against a corporation for wrongful death, under Rev. Laws, c. 171, § 2, negligence of defendant and gross negligence of its servant are separate issues and should be separately submitted to the jury. Oulighan v. Butler [Mass.] 75 N. E. 726. There are degrees of care by virtue of Rev. Laws, c. 111, § 267, providing for recovery of a fine—to be paid an executor or administrator—from a railroad corporation when death of a passenger is caused by its negligence or the unfitness or gross negligence of its agents or servants. Dolphin v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 75 N. E. 635. "Gross negligence" in a case where the highest degree of care is required means gross failure to exercise that degree of care. Id. A failure to exercise the highest degree of care is slight negligence. Id.

94. See 4 C. L. 765.

95. "Wantonness or willfulness is such gross want of care and regard for the rights of others as show a disregard of consequences or a willingness to inflict an injury," held proper instruction. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Ricker, 116 Ill. App. 428. Wanton or willful negligence is such a gross want of care and regard for the rights of others as to imply a disregard of consequences or willingness to inflict injury. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Cline, 111 Ill. App. 416. It is not wanton or willful negligence to run a train without a good and sufficient want of ordinary care to avoid injury after discovery of the peril of the person injured.[96] Some courts hold that "negligence" and "willfulness" are contradictory terms,[97] and that the reckless or willful conduct of a person sometimes inaccurately called "gross" or "willful" negligence,[98] which warrants a recovery by one injured thereby without proof of due care on his part,[99] differs from ordinary negligence in kind as well as in degree,[1] being essentially a willful, intentional wrong.[2]

§ 2. Acts or omissions constituting negligence. A. Personal conduct in general.[3]—The degree of care required by law is such as an ordinarily prudent person would use under the same or similar circumstances.[4] Whether the required degree of care has been exercised in a particular instance depends upon the circumstances[5] and the danger to be apprehended.[6]

brake on the last car and without a trusty and skillful brakeman stationed on that car, though a statute is thereby violated. Id. Where the evidence does not warrant a finding that a motorman saw a child on the track in time to avoid an injury to it, nor a finding that he intentionally ran the car against her, a charge of wanton negligence is not sustained unless such gross want of care is proved that wanton or willful conduct may be implied. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. McGinnis, 112 Ill. App. 177. To show willful or wanton injury to a person on a railroad track it must appear that the engineer knew of his danger and that he would not get out of the way, and failed to use means available to avoid injuring him. McLaughlin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 115 Ill. App. 262.

96. "Willful negligence," which results in liability regardless of contributory negligence of the person injured, consists in a want of ordinary care to avoid accident after discovery of the peril of the person injured. Teal v. St. Paul City R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 945. If motorman saw child of 5 on platform of car, or ought to have seen him if exercising ordinary care, and could have prevented an injury to him but failed to do so, or if, knowing his danger, the motorman frightened him so that he jumped or fell off, the motorman was guilty of gross negligence, and defendant would be liable for the child's death. Goldstein v. People's R. Co. [Del.] 60 A. 975.

97. Negligence is "failure" to use care; willfulness is positive. Kelly v. Malott [C. C. A.] 135 F. 74.

98. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 74 N. E. 594.

99. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 74 N. E. 594. See post, § 4.

1. Instruction held not to have made proper distinction, so as to give jury a correct idea. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 74 N. E. 594. An inadvertent failure to use due care is mere negligence; an advertent or conscious failure to use due care is wantonness or willfulness. Tinsley v. Western Union Tel. Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 913. Willful or wanton conduct exists only where defendant was conscious of his conduct and knew that resulting injury was probable and nevertheless recklessly and intentionally persisted in such conduct. Montgomery St. R. v. Rice [Ala.] 38 So. 857.

2. Banks v. Braman, 188 Mass. 367, 74 N. E. 594.

3. See 4 C. L. 766.

4. Ramsbottom v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 138 N. C. 38, 50 S. E. 448.

5. What is ordinary care depends upon the circumstances. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Keegan, 112 Ill. App. 28. The facts and circumstances of each case must be considered in determining whether ordinary care has been used in a given case, but the law of negligence does not change with circumstances. Bartz v. Chicago City R. Co., 116 Ill. App. 554. A torpedo company which fails to use proper appliances or the skill and care ordinarily used in shooting oil wells and injures a well by exploding a torpedo at the wrong point, is liable for the resulting damage. Donnan v. Pennsylvania Torpedo Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 324. Evidence held insufficient to show negligence of defendant where a car on its private road escaped down a grade, running into a car on which a person was at work, causing his death. Herbstritt v. Lackawanna Lumber Co., 212 Pa. 495, 61 A. 1101. Driver of wagon held negligent in making a sharp turn whereby the tailboard projected over a walk and crushed a boy against a lamp post. Prinz v. Lucas [Pa.] 60 A. 309. Contractor who had mortar bed in street during building operations, with city's permission, not liable for injury to a third person who was struck with a piece of lime which flew from hoe of contractor's servant. White v. Roydhouse, 211 Pa. 13, 60 A. 316. Supervising architects are bound to use ordinary care and diligence in supervising construction. Straus v. Buchman, 96 App. Div. 270, 89 N. Y. S. 226. The fact that a building was partially constructed when supervising architects were employed did not relieve them from duty of ordinary care in inspecting work already done. Id. Where architects allowed beams in partially constructed building to rest on stud partition in violation of an express statute, they were negligent, though the beams had been placed there between two inspections made by the architects, and other work concealed the defect. Id. Where the city contracted with plaintiffs to dig a trench and place water mains therein, and subsequently contracted with others for another part of the work of putting in a water and sewer system, the latter contractor finished a trench and water from it percolated into plaintiffs' trench, causing damage. Held, city was not negligent in letting second contract. Kelly v. New York, 94 N. Y. S. 872. Held further, that under plaintiffs' contract, they were themselves bound to take care of sur-

Violation of a public safety regulation or a positive duty imposed by law is prima facie evidence of negligence,[7] and is sometimes held negligence per se.[8]

Livery stable keepers who let horses and carriages for hire are not common carriers but owe to patrons only the duty of ordinary care for their safety.[9]

Act of God.—Nothing less than a fortuitous gathering of circumstances which could not have been foreseen or overcome by the exercise of reasonable prudence, care and diligence constitutes an act of God which will excuse the discharge of a legal duty.[10] A pure accident, without negligence, is not actionable.[11]

Joint and several liability.[12]—Where negligent conduct of several persons at the same time and place combine and concur to produce a single injury, such persons are jointly and severally liable, though their combined acts or omissions were not preconcerted.[13] face water. Id. Again, the second contractor was an independent contractor for whose acts the city was not liable. Id.

6. MacFeat v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. [Del.] 62 A. 898. One cannot be lawfully held guilty of negligence by reason of an act or omission which would not lead an ordinarily prudent, observant man, giving the matter thought, to apprehend danger from it. Cowett v. American Woolen Co. [Me.] 60 A. 703. Where wire rope used on hoisting apparatus slipped from its socket, injuring plaintiff, there was no liability where it appeared that such an accident had never before occurred, and was not reasonably to be anticipated. McMullen v. New York, 104 App. Div. 337, 93 N. Y. S. 772. Railroad company could not be held negligent in construction of fence along its property which abutted on a street where a crowd of trespassers on its property pushed against it causing it to fall on a passerby. Grogan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 924. Defendant not liable where children climbed into wagon used to haul stone and one was injured, wagon being in charge of skillful and prudent driver, the driver's invitation to the children being unauthorized, and the wagon not being so dangerous or attractive to children as to render defendant liable on that ground. Foster-Herbert Cut Stone Co. v. Pugh [Tenn.] 91 S. W. 199.

7. Violation of ordinance requiring fenders on street cars is prima facie evidence of negligence. Chicago City R. Co. v. O'Donnell, 114 Ill. App. 359. Violation of a valid city ordinance requiring electric wires to be properly insulated and overhead conductors to be properly guarded is prima facie evidence of negligence. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rose, 214 Ill. 545, 73 N. E. 780. Proof that a train was running at an excessive and unlawful rate of speed raises only a prima facie, rebuttable presumption of negligence. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Jamieson, 112 Ill. App. 69. In an action for death of a person standing on the sidewalk caused by the falling of a stone sill from a building in course of construction, an ordinance requiring sheds to be built over the walks where buildings are being erected was properly admitted in evidence, the jury being instructed that failure to have such a shed would not be negligence unless a reasonably prudent man would have had one under the circumstances. Riegert v. Thackery, 212 Pa. 86, 61 A. 614. Regulations concerning "traction engines" do not apply to steam rollers used in making public improvements. No liability for failure to warn. City of New Albany v. Stier, 34 Ind. App. 615, 72 N. E. 275. A violation of the statute requiring elevator shafts or openings in buildings in course of construction to be guarded is not conclusive evidence of negligence; the question is for the jury. Kiernan v. Eidlitz, 109 App. Div. 726, 96 N. Y. S. 387.

8. Violation of a duty created by statute may be negligence per se. Huey Co. v. Johnston, 164 Ind. 489, 73 N. E. 996. Running a train through a city at a rate of speed prohibited by ordinance is negligence per se. Schmidt v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 90 S. W. 136. Violation of ordinance regulating speed of trains is negligence per se. MacFeat v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. [Del.] 62 A. 898. Failure to sound bell or whistle while approaching a public crossing, as required by Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 5307, is negligence per se. Greenawaldt v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 910. Failure of electric company to protect an overhead conductor which carries a current of electricity dangerous to human life, thereby violating an ordinance, is negligence as to the employe of another company required to work near such unprotected wire. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rose, 114 Ill. App. 181. See, also, Master and Servant, 4 C. L. 533.

9. Defendant not liable for injuries resulting from accident caused by defective neck yoke unless the defect was discoverable by the use of ordinary care under the circumstances. Stanley v. Steele, 77 Conn. 688, 60 A. 640.

10. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 87 S. W. 395. Rain which overflowed roadbed and washed out part of an embankment could not be considered an act of God excusing the want of a sufficient drainage system unless the company could not have anticipated such a storm and such consequences by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Id. That a stream or body of water may constitute an extraordinary flood it is not necessary that it should be the greatest flood within memory; comparison with the usual volume of floods ordinarily occurring is the test. Siegfried v. South Bethlehem Borough, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 456.

11. MacFeat v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. [Del.] 62 A. 898.

12. See 2 C. L. 997; also Torts, 4 C. L. 1682.

(§ 2) B. Use of property in general.[14]—One must so use his own property as not to cause unnecessary injury to others.[15]

Dangerous machinery and substances. Liability of manufacturers.[16]—One who makes, bottles, and sells to the retail trade, to be again sold to the general public, a beverage represented as refreshing and harmless, is liable to a consumer for injuries caused by foreign substances introduced into the beverage by the maker, though there is no privity of relationship between the consumer and the manufacturer.[17] A contractor who places an elevator in a building is not liable for injuries caused by defects in it, unless the contractor had actual notice of such defects.[18] The 13. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Marshall [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 973; Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Treka, 115 Ill. App. 56; Demarest v. Forty-Second St., etc., R. Co., 104 App. Div. 503, 93 N. Y. S. 663; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Vollrath [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 777, 89 S. W. 279. In an action against several defendants for burning grass, plaintiff could recover against any one against whom he proved negligence. Dunn v. Newberry [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 626. Where the negligence of two or more persons, acting independently, concurrently results in injury to a third, the latter may maintain an action for the entire loss or damage against any one or all the negligent parties. Where poorly insulated feed wire of a traction company came in contact with an iron spike in a telephone pole, and the spike and a guy wire were charged, whereby an employe of a third company, using the telephone pole, was injured, the traction and telephone companies were both liable. Draves v. City & Suburban Tel. Ass'n, 132 F. 387. Where two railway companies used the tracks of a third, under whose orders they ran their trains, and negligence of the two companies, together with negligence of the third in giving orders was alleged to have caused a collision of two trains, the three companies would be jointly and severally liable for the injury resulting if the alleged negligence of each was established. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Marshall [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 973. Owner of powder magazine which blew up while repairs were being made, and owner of explosives which had not been moved away far enough pending the repairs, held jointly and severally liable for explosion of all the explosives resulting in death of plaintiff's intestate. Oulighan v. Butler [Mass.] 75 N. E. 726. In an action for wrongful death for negligence of a corporation or gross negligence of its servant, under Rev. Laws, c. 171, § 2, joint tort feasors may be joined in one suit, though there can be but one satisfaction of any judgment obtained. Id. Where a passenger jumped from a car to escape injury in a collision with a railroad train, and it appeared that if the trainmen had kept a proper lookout, the car would have been seen and the speed of the train reduced, and if a signal had been given by the trainmen, the car would have slackened its speed, and if the car had stopped before crossing, as required by ordinance, the injury would also have been prevented, both companies were liable. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Vallrath [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 777, 89 S. W. 279. Where a pleading undertakes to show wherein defendants failed to exercise due care for plaintiff's safety, and sets out a negligent act by one of the defendants, it states no cause of action against the other. Jones v. Klawiter, 110 Ill. App. 31. A building and loan association which furnished money for the construction of a building did not thereby become a joint tort feasor with the contractor who removed support from a neighboring building. Henry v. Stuart [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 492, 88 S. W. 248. Nor was the association the real contractor. Id.

14. See 4 C. L. 767.

15. Defendant liable in damages where blasting operations threw rocks and other objects on plaintiff's land causing injuries to his property, whether or not the blasting was negligently done. Langshorne v. Wilson [Ky.] 91 S. W. 254. Negligent use of a defective boiler, resulting in an explosion, gives a right of action to one thereby injured. Davis v. Charleston & W. C. R. Co. [S. C.] 51 S. E. 552. There is a distinction between locomotive whistles designed to scare animals off the track and stationary whistles designed to give notice to employes or others. Whistles of the latter kind ought not to be such as to produce unnecessary or frightening noises such as will frighten horses of ordinary gentleness. Powell v. Nevada, etc., R. Co. [Nev.] 82 P. 96.

16. See 4 C. L. 768.

17. Defendant liable for injuries to plaintiff caused by swallowing broken glass contained in a bottle of soda water. Watson v. Augusta Brewing Co. [Ga.] 52 S. E. 152.

18. Simons v. Gregory, 27 Ky. L. R. 509, 85 S. W. 751.

NOTE. Liability of manufacturer: The manufacturer or vendor of a tool, machine, or appliance, which is not in its nature intrinsically dangerous, is not ordinarily liable for defects therein to one not in privity with him. This has been held to be the law in respect to a land roller (Kuelling v. Roderick Lean Mfg. Co., 88 App. Div. 309, 84 N. Y. S. 622), a drop press (McCaffrey v. Mossberg, etc., Mfg. Co., 23 R. I. 381, 50 A. 651, 91 Am. St. Rep. 637, 55 L. R. A. 822), a threshing-machine cylinder (Heizer v. Kingsland, etc., Mfg. Co., 19 S. W. 630, 110 Mo. 605, 33 Am. St. Rep. 482, 15 L. R. A. 821), a balance wheel (Loop v. Litchfield, 42 N. Y. 351, 1 Am. Rep. 543), a steam boiler (Losee v. Clute, 51 N. Y. 474, 10 Am. Rep. 638), a hoisting apparatus (Burke v. De Castro, 11 Hun [N. Y.] 354), a gasoline pear burner (Talley v. Beever [Tex. Civ. App.] 78 S. W. 23), a passenger elevator (Field v. French, 80 Ill. App. 78), or a freight elevator (Zieman v. Kieck Elevator Mfg. Co., 90 Wis. 497, 63 N. W. 1021). But the constructor of an elevator, degree of care required of persons operating threshing machine engines is commensurate with the danger to property from the lawful operation and use of such engine.[19]

(§ 2) C. Use of lands, buildings and other structures.[20]—The owner or occupant of premises[21] owes to persons present thereon by express or implied invitation the duty of ordinary care[22] to protect them from injury.[23] An invitation to go upon premises may be inferred from some act or line of conduct of the owner, or surrounding facts and circumstances.[24] Where the owner employs an independent while in possession of and operating it to ascertain why it does not work well, is liable to a stranger for injuries caused from its negligent and unsafe construction. Necker v. Harvey, 49 Mich. 517, 14 N. W. 503. And, generally, where machinery is originally defective when delivered and accepted, and thereafter the contractor or manufacturer is in charge of it for the purpose of making repairs or improvements, he must be held responsible to a third person for injuries from such defect or from his own negligence. Empire Machinery Co. v. Brady, 164 Ill. 58, 45 N. E. 486.—Note to Woodward v. Miller [Ga.] 100 Am. St. Rep. 200.

19. Martin v. McCrary [Tenn.] 89 S. W. 324. In an action for destruction of grain by fire started by sparks from an engine, defendants must show not only that engine did not emit sparks more copiously than was natural for any engine of similar kind and construction, but that they had taken precautions which were usual at the time. Thus failure to make a daily inspection was negligence. Id.

See, also, topic Fires, 5 C. L. 1424.

20. See 4 C. L. 768.

21. See Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848, for distinction between liability of owner and of landlord to invitees on premises. See, also, Landlord and Tenant, 4 C. L. 389.

22. Defendant was bound to have structure on which he served meals to the public reasonably safe. Schnizer v. Phillips, 108 App. Div. 17, 95 N. Y. S. 478. Lessee of building who sublet to tenants and retained control of elevator owed to a teamster on the premises delivering goods to a tenant the duty to maintain the premises and elevator in reasonably safe condition. Wright v. Perry, 188 Mass. 268, 74 N. E. 328. The owner of a building is held to the exercise of reasonable care and skill only and is not an insurer of the safety of the building. Connolly v. Des Moines Inv. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 400. His duty includes that of a reasonable inspection, but he is not liable for a defect not discoverable by a reasonable inspection in time to make repairs before an accident. Id. The owner owes to invitees the duty to warn them of any danger in coming upon the premises, of which he knows or ought to know, and of which they are not aware. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. Where independent contractor's servant was injured by electric current passing through wires near staging on which he was at work, a finding that the owner of the premises and of the wires owed such servant the duty to warn him of danger from a current of electricity was warranted. Id. Evidence insufficient to show negligence of store owners where teamster fell into elevator well. Swanson v. Boutell [Minn.] 103 N. W. 886. Evidence insufficient to show stairway in store slippery and unsafe. Reeves v. Fourteenth St. Store, 96 N. Y. S. 448. Not negligence per se for store owner to maintain a well lighted stairway leading into the basement of his store. Accousi v. Stowers Furniture Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 87 S. W. 861. Owner of lot held not negligent in using chains to guard gateway. McCandless v. Phreaner, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 383. Where evidence showed only that plaintiff slipped on ice on defendant's premises, but did not show how long the ice had been there, negligence of defendant was not shown. Vassin v. Butler, 94 N. Y. S. 14. Railway company owes to teamsters engaged in unloading freight in its yard the duty of ordinary care in the management of cars and engines to avoid injuring them. Finding of negligence warranted where steam was allowed to escape from engine causing team to back up suddenly, thus injuring teamster. Hickey v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. [Utah] 82 P. 29. Finding of negligence on part of lessee and manager of building warranted where evidence showed a hole in the floor near the elevator and that elevator and automatic gate did not work well, a teamster having fallen into the elevator well, believing the elevator was in place. Wright v. Perry, 188 Mass. 268, 74 N. E. 328. Where a poorly insulated feed wire had long been in contact with a spike in a telephone pole, notice of the existence of the condition would be implied. Graves v. City & Suburban Tel. Ass'n, 132 F. 387.

23. Stevens v. United Gas & Electric Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. Owner owes to one on premises by express or implied invitation ordinary care to provide for his safety. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Simons [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 883.

24. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Simons [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 883. Where tracks have been openly and habitually used as footpaths for several years, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the company, one walking on such tracks is not a trespasser but a licensee to whom the company owes the duty of ordinary care to avoid injury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Matthews [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 949, 89 S. W. 983. Evidence held to warrant inference that public had implied invitation to use footpath along defendant's right of way. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Simons [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 883. Consent of a landowner for the public to use a path across his land may be inferred from continued use of such path by the public contractor to do work upon the premises the servants of the contractor are ordinarily deemed to be upon the premises by implied invitation of the owner.[25] To such servants the owner is liable for injuries resulting from a dangerous condition if such condition and injury therefrom were reasonably to be apprehended from the usual and ordinary manner of doing the work contracted for.[26] Owners of bathing resorts are not only under the duty of keeping the premises in a reasonably safe condition, but where the conditions are such that bathers may get into danger,[27] it is their duty to have in attendance some suitable person with appliances to effect rescues, and to act promptly and make all reasonable efforts to search for and recover persons who are reported to be missing.[28] The duty owed by owners of premises to invitees[29] or to the public[30] cannot be delegated to a servant or independent contractor so as to relieve the owner from responsibility.

without objection by the owner for some time past; and the owner, under such circumstances owes a legal duty to the public to protect it against hidden dangers which may be incurred in such use. Etheredge v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 1003. Owner of store and premises held negligent where an excavation was dug in a path used by the public to come to and enter his store by the rear door, and plaintiff fell into such excavation while rightfully using the path to enter the store. Rooney v. Woolworth [Conn.] 61 A. 366. Where defendant ginned and baled cotton for one who requested plaintiff to go with him after the cotton, and plaintiff drove the wagon to the place indicated by defendant to receive the cotton, plaintiff was on defendant's premises by invitation. Northern Tex. Const. Co. v. Crawford [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 223. Where an electric company carried mail in boxes on the cars from which mail carrier removed it, the company was under the duty of furnishing the carriers a safe mode of access to the cars. Recovery where carrier fell into pit in car barn when he was going after mail in a box on a car. Young v. People's Gas & Elec. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 788. Where complaint alleged that plaintiff was struck and injured by something protruding from a passing engine while he was standing on a sidewalk near the depot platform, six feet from the main track, it was not objectionable as showing that defendant owed him no duty; he had a right to be where he was. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Thrasher [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 829. Where expressman went to defendant's factory after freight to be hauled and asked for the shipper and was told he was upstairs, the jury was warranted in finding he was not a trespasser in going upstairs to find the shipper, there being also evidence that it was customary for the expressman to go after the shipper, as he did when injured by falling into a hatchway. Mallock v. Derby [Mass.] 76 N. E. 721. One who went into a building intending to rent an office, and found a sign on the superintendent's door directing him to see the engineer in the building, and who thereupon went to the basement to find the engineer and fell into an ash pit in the boiler room, was not a trespasser, though there was a "no admittance" sign on the boiler room door. Withers v. Brooklyn Real Estate Exch., 94 N. Y. S. 328. Since prospective tenants were invited to seek the engineer wherever he was on the premises, the owner owed them the duty of ordinary care to prevent injury in the ash pit. Id.

25. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. Defendant owed plaintiff, a servant of an independent contractor constructing a building for defendant near its tracks, the duty of ordinary care to avoid injuring him. Sack v. St. Louis Car Co., 112 Mo. App. 476, 87 S. W. 79. Employe of subcontractor working on defendant's elevated road was a licensee to whom defendant owed duty of ordinary care to avoid injuring him by negligence in the running of its surface cars. Wagner v. Boston El. R. Co., 188 Mass. 437, 74 N. E. 919. City owed to servant of a contractor hired to haul sand only the duty to avoid injury to him by ordinary care in regard to the city's premises. McMullen v. New York, 104 App. Div. 337, 93 N. Y. S. 772. Plaintiff rightfully on a wharf engaged in work did not assume risk of injury from servants of the owner of the wharf. Ford v. Arbuckle, 94 N. Y. S. 1097.

26. Where, in erecting a brick building, a contractor used an outside staging, near which electric wires passed, and an employe working on the staging was injured by an electric current passing through the wires, it was held that a finding was warranted, that the use of an outside staging, and injury from a current of electricity, was reasonably to be apprehended by the owner. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. Defendant was not negligent as to the servant of a contractor in failing to guard a hatchway on a part of the premises where the servant's work did not call him. Hutchinson v. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. [Mich.] 12 Det. Leg. N. 457, 104 N. W. 698.

27. As from deep water, sudden storms, or other causes. Larkin v. Saltair Beach Co. [Utah] 83 P. 686.

28. Larkin v. Saltair Beach Co. [Utah] 83 P. 686. Where no limits or warning signs were used, and boys got beyond their depth, and were blown out into the lake by a storm, and the management made no effort to recover them, though asked to do so and informed they were missing, the owners were held liable for the death of one of the boys by drowning. Id.

29. That a contractor knew of the danger from electric wires to an employe at work on a staging did not relieve the owner of the duty to warn such employe. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848.

30. The duty resting upon owners of fix-

A bare licensee[31] or trespasser[32] takes the risks as he finds them, and the owner owes to such a one no duty except to refrain from wanton or willful injury;[33] and ed property to exercise reasonable car for the safety of the public is absolute and cannot be delegated to a servant so as to relieve the owner of responsibility. Connolly v. Des Moines Inv. Co. [Iowa] 105 N. W. 400. Defendants having been given control of sidewalk during building operations, it was their duty to maintain it in a reasonably safe condition and this duty could not be delegated to an independent contractor. Lubelsky v. Silverman, 96 N. Y. S. 1056. Where work to be done is intrinsically dangerous no matter how skillfully it is done, a principal cannot relieve himself from liability for a breach of duty owed the public with reference to such work by employing an independent contractor. Montgomery St. R. Co. v. Smith [Ala.] 39 So. 757. Applied where work on streets was done by contractor. Id.

31. Boy who went with his mother to a tenement building where the mother was employed to wash, her employer consenting to the boy's coming, was a mere licensee. Dalin v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 188 Mass. 344, 74 N. E. 597. Obstructions along a street where a walk was being put in, made visible by a burning building and an electric light near, held to have negatived any implied invitation to use the walk; hence plaintiff, who fell into a rollway while watching the fire was a mere licensee and could not recover for injuries. McClain v. Caribou Nat. Bank [Me.] 62 A. 144. Longshoreman was requested by dock company's foreman to remain near dock, as employment was expected, and longshoreman walked on dock while waiting, knowing its dangerous condition. Dock company held not liable for an injury to him, since he was a mere licensee, though not a trespasser, and company owed him no active duty. Oats v. New York Dock Co., 109 App. Div. 841, 96 N. Y. S. 813.

32. In the absence of circumstances showing an implied invitation, one using the private property of another for purposes of his own is a licensee or trespasser. Friedman v. Snare & Triest Co., 71 N. J. Law, 605, 61 A. 401. Where steel girders for use in building were piled in the street, in the exercise of the adjoining owner's right, persons who walked or sat on them, and the injured child who played on them, were only licensees or trespassers. Id. The question whether a person was a trespasser upon a railway right of way was not affected by the fact that it was hard to tell where the highway ended and the right of way began; the intent of the person is immaterial. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Cline, 111 Ill. App. 416. An implied invitation to use a path across land does not place on the owner the duty to keep the entire premises safe from hidden dangers, and he would not be liable for injuries to one who strayed out of the path and fell into a ditch. Etheridge v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 1003. Where boy of 5 or 6 strayed from a path used by the public and fell into a ditch when not using such path, and there was no evidence of any invitation, express or implied, to go upon the premises outside the path, he could not recover from the owner for injuries suffered. Id. Roof of car barn had an enclosure where children living in adjoining tenement house played. The fence was down in one place while repairs were being made, but children had been ordered to stay off part of roof not enclosed. Held, the fact that the fence was down, and that defendant's employes knew children had gone outside did not amount to an invitation to do so, and there could be no recovery for death of a boy who went outside and fell through a skylight. Dalin v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 188 Mass. 344, 74 N. E. 597. A railway company is not, as to one who has no business to transact with it, but who goes to its station at the instance of a third person to look after some private property, which he has without the company's permission stored in a warehouse which it has practically abandoned and allowed to become out of repair, under any duty to keep the building and its approaches in a safe condition for use by persons entering or leaving the same. Chattanooga So. R. Co. v. Wheeler [Ga.] 50 S. E. 987. Street crossing being blocked for an unreasonable time, a person desiring to cross in a hurry owing to the extreme cold, is not a trespasser because he goes upon the railroad's property to get around the blockade. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Mayer, 112 Ill. App. 149.

33. McAllister v. Jung, 112 Ill. App. 138. A trespasser goes upon premises at his own risk. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Simons [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 883. Only duty owed trespasser is not to willfully or wantonly injure him and to use reasonable care to avoid injury to him after discovery of his peril. Id. The owner of premises owes to a mere licensee only the duty to avoid wanton injury or setting a trap for him. Dalin v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co., 188 Mass. 344, 74 N. E. 597. Owner of property is liable to trespassers only for malicious injury or gross negligence after discovery of the peril of the trespasser. Driscoll v. Clark [Mont.] 80 P. 1. It is the duty of railroad companies to avoid wanton, willful or intentional injury to trespassers on the track. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Guest [Ala.] 39 So. 654. Railroad company owes licensee or trespasser no duty except to avoid wanton or willful injury to him. McLaughlin v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co., 115 Ill. App. 262; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Cline, 111 Ill. App. 416. Trespasser on train cannot recover for mere negligence. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. McDonough, 112 Ill. App. 315. Where plaintiff's horse was at large on defendant's land, contrary to the provisions of an ordinance, and was killed by falling in a well, defendant was not liable unless he was guilty of gross negligence in maintaining the well where he did. McCutchen v. Gorsline [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 1044. Where an electric company maintained electric wires under a sidewalk, by authority from the city, it was liable for injuries to a boy, who, under the circumstances, was a licensee, if by its negligence the place was rendered dangerous, its cable becoming charged owing to a defect. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Melville, 110 Ill. App. 242.

this is the rule though the trespasser is a child.[34] But to this rule there is the exception that one who maintains dangerous instrumentalities or appliances on his premises of a character likely to attract children in play, or permits dangerous conditions to remain thereon with the knowledge that children are in the habit of resorting thereto for amusement, is liable to a child non sui juris who is injured therefrom, even though such child is a trespasser.[35] To bring a case within this exception, it must appear that the premises were in fact attractive to children[36] who did in fact customarily resort thereto,[37] that the owner had actual or implied knowledge thereof[38] and failed to take proper precautions to prevent injury.[39] The

34. That one who is a trespasser is a child of tender years does not impose any duty on the owner not owed to an adult trespasser. Etheridge v. Central of Georgia R. Co. [Ga.] 50 S. E. 1003. Owner owed boy of 5 or 6 who strayed from path used by public and fell into a ditch containing hot water no duty not owed to adults under the same circumstances. Id. Railroad company owes a trespasser on its right of way only the duty to refrain from wanton or willful injury, and this is the rule though the trespasser is a child of 7. Kinnare v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 114 Ill. App. 230. Where child of 2 was improperly on tracks on defendant's premises and was struck by coal cars when motorman was adjusting trolley, held, no evidence of gross negligence, and nonsuit should have been granted. Estep v. Webster Coal & Coke Co. [Pa.] 62 A. 1082.

35. This is the doctrine of the so-called "turntable" cases. Mattson v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 443; McAllister v. Jung, 112 Ill. App. 138. Where a railroad company maintains a turntable upon its right of way, close to a traveled path along its track, which people, old and young, have been accustomed to use, without objection, for many years as a traveled way, and further permits children to play upon such turntable, it is its duty to guard such turntable or so securely fasten it that children of tender years will not be injured while playing upon it. Recovery for injury to boy of 6. Wheeling & L. E. R. Co. v. Harvey, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 57. Doctrine held applicable where railroad employes put dynamite where children could get at it, knowing that they wanted some of it (they had asked for a stick) and that the children knew where it was placed. Boys got a stick and one was killed and another injured by the resulting explosion. Mattson v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 443. Where child was hurt on turntable where he was playing, and the evidence showed that a locking device was being used, pending repairs, which children could move, and also tended to show that this had been the case for some time, and that children had played with it before, negligence of defendant was for the jury. Berg v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 293. Where boy 8 years old reached through a fence and took hold of a live wire hanging from a tree in the adjoining yard, and was injured, the defense that the boy was a trespasser was held not available to the owner of the wire. Lynchburg Tel. Co. v. Booker, 103 Va. 594, 50 S. E. 148.

36. A company owning and maintaining an elevated railway whereon a live rail is used is only under the duty of ordinary care to prevent children from climbing upon it and coming in contact with the live rail. McAllister v. Jung, 112 Ill. App. 138. Company held not negligent for failure to construct means of keeping children off, or to put up warning signs at places where there was no probability that persons would climb upon it. Id.

37. A three-year old infant strayed away from home upon defendant's land and climbed upon or fell into a pile of hot soot. The land had been used as a soot dumping ground several years, was unfenced, was not customarily used as a playground for children, and had nothing on it to attract. Held, defendant was not negligent in failing to guard against such an injury. Fitzmaurice v. Connecticut R. & Lighting Co. [Conn.] 62 A. 620. Where boy of 10 climbed upon an elevated railroad structure to get a ball and was injured by the third live rail, it was held that defendant could not be held liable on the theory that it maintained an attractive and dangerous structure and took no means to prevent injury to children, especially since it did not appear that children were in the habit of climbing upon it. McAllister v. Jung, 112 Ill. App. 138.

38. Owner of premises is liable for injuries to young children caused by dangerous machinery maintained on premises only when there was an express or implied invitation to come upon the premises; and to constitute the latter, it must appear that the dangerous machinery was attractive and alluring to children, and that the owner knew that fact or was chargeable with knowledge thereof. Driscoll v. Clark [Mont.] 80 P. 1. In an action for injuries to a child while playing on an abandoned turntable, an instruction authorizing a recovery if the jury believed that children were in the habit of playing on the turntable, and if it was unfastened, and if plaintiff was injured thereon while exercising due care, was erroneous because failing to require a finding that defendant knew or ought to have known that it was unfastened and that children played there. Edwards v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 112 Mo. App. 656, 87 S. W. 587.

39. Defendant company was moving through the streets machinery which attracted children, who were repeatedly warned to keep away. Notwithstanding the warning, a boy ran between two machines and was hurt. Held, the company had performed its duty and was not liable for such injury. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Burns [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 65. Keeping powder magazines in the woods 150 yards from the road, and 6 feet from a path doctrine of the "turntable cases" has been criticized by some courts,[40] which refuse to extend it to other situations,[41] and by some it is absolutely repudiated.[42] Thus, in New Jersey, it is held that the attractiveness of private property to children may properly be considered on the issue of due care by a child,[43] but gives a child attracted by such property no rights against the owner since the mere fact of attraction is not equivalent to an invitation.[44] In Texas, a distinction is made between those cases where injury results to children from such things as are ordinarily in use throughout the country,[45] and those where injury results from things which are specially and unusually attractive and dangerous, such as turntables.[46]

§ 3. Proximate cause.[47]—The law looks to the proximate, not the remote cause of an injury, and unless the negligence charged was the proximate cause there is no liability.[48] A proximate cause is that which, in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient, intervening cause, produced the injury complained of, and without which such injury would not have occurred.[49] It need not be the seldom used, held not gross or willful negligence, though door of magazine was left open, where the powder was caked and would not explode, having been wet; and defendant was not liable where a child set fire to the powder, as a result of which he was burned. Chambers v. Milner Coal & R. Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 170. Owner of premises held not liable for injury to child, who was a trespasser, caused by fall of pile of stones, where the pile was knocked down by children at play, and there was nothing to indicate that it would be dangerous, even to trespassers. Kane v. Erie R. Co., 110 App. Div. 7, 96 N. Y. S. 810.

40. See Driscoll v. Clark [Mont.] 80 P. 1. Complaint for injuries to a child trespassing on defendant's premises held not to state cause of action by showing breach of duty to exercise ordinary care for a child's safety after discovery of its peril. Driscoll v. Clark [Mont.] 80 P. 373.

41. Doctrine of turntable cases held not applicable where child was injured in revolving door. Harris v. Cowles, 38 Wash. 331, 80 P. 537.

42. The doctrine of the turntable cases that one who maintains upon his premises for his own purposes that which is alluring or tempting to little children is held to the duty of exercising care with respect to their safety, in anticipation of the probability that they may be tempted to make use of his property for purposes of play, is repudiated in New Jersey. Friedman v. Snare & Triest Co., 71 N. J. Law, 605, 61 A. 401.

43. Friedman v. Snare & Triest Co., 71 N. J. Law, 605, 61 A. 401.

44. Where child played on pile of steel girders in the street and was injured, the owner was held not liable, since he owed the child no duty to keep the pile of girders safe as a place on which to play. Friedman v. Snare & Triest Co., 71 N. J. Law, 605, 61 A. 401.

45. Such as pools of water, haystacks, wood piles, etc. Denison & P. S. R. Co. v. Harlan [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 207, 87 S. W. 732.

46. Evidence held sufficient to support verdict for child of 5 injured on turntable maintained close to street, left unlocked, and unfenced, and which children were in the habit of using. Denison & P. S. R. Co. v. Harlan [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 207, 87 S. W. 732.

47. See 4 C. L. 770.

48. Byrd v. Southern Exp. Co. [N. C.] 51 S. E. 851; MacFeat v. Philadelphia W. & B. R. Co. [Del.] 62 A. 898. If an injury has resulted from a certain wrongful act or omission, but only through or by means of some intervening cause, from which last cause the injury followed as a direct and immediate consequence, the law will refer the damage to the last proximate cause and refuse to trace it to that which was more remote. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Vail [Ala.] 38 So. 124. Though owner of mare violated ordinance in allowing her to be at large on the streets, negligence of defendant's driver just before discovering mare was held proximate cause of injury to mare. Ensley Mercantile Co. v. Otwell [Ala.] 38 So. 839.

49. Strojny v. Griffin Wheel Co., 116 Ill. App. 550; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Lowe [Tex. Civ. App.] 86 S. W. 1059. A proximate cause is one from which injury follows as a direct and immediate consequence. It is the dominant cause; the one that sets the others in operation. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Coutourie [C. C. A.] 135 F. 465.

Illustrations: Sudden turning of horses across a street car track, and not speed of car, held proximate cause of collision. North Chicago St. R. Co. v. O'Donnell, 115 Ill. App. 110. If driving on a street car track was contributory negligence it was not the proximate cause of a collision with an electric car running with the power on and without an attendant. Chicago City R. Co. v. Eick, 111 Ill. App. 452. Where company negligently sent out engine with cab windows broken and boarded up, in consequence of which the engineer had to stand up in the cab to see conductor's signals, thereby causing his face to be near the water gauge, such negligence was the proximate cause of his injury by the explosion of the gauge, though there was no negligence with respect to the condition of the gauge. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Patterson [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 857. In an action against an owner of premises for injuries to an employe of an independent contractor who fell from a staging upon electrically charged wires near, the evidence was held to warrant a finding that maintaining a high vol-sole cause[50] nor the one nearest in time to the injury;[51] it is sufficient if it is an efficient concurring cause.[52] Thus, if negligence of a defendant is an efficient concurring cause of an injury, he is liable, though other causes or conditions for which he is not responsible contribute to produce the injury,[53] provided, of course, the tage of electricity in the wires so near the staging was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. Stevens v. United Gas & Elec. Co. [N. H.] 60 A. 848. An express wagon, driven by defendant's servant, struck the hind wheel of another wagon which was being loaded from the sidewalk, and forced it on the horse, and the horse, being unhitched, ran away. Plaintiff, standing near a pile of lumber in the street, jumped to escape the runaway horse, which ran up on the walk, and broke his leg over the pile of lumber. Held, the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury was the act of defendant's servant, and if that was negligent, plaintiff could recover. Collins v. West Jersey Exp. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 62 A. 675. Where complaint in action based on crossing accident alleged that plaintiff was unavoidably delayed in crossing the track by her horse, and that no signals were given to indicate the approach of the train, which deceived her, so that the train struck and killed the horse and injured her, it showed negligence of defendant to be the proximate cause of injury. Greenawaldt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. [Ind.] 73 N. E. 910. Where plaintiff's house was burning and three streams of water were playing on it, and a motorman drove his car over a hose, cutting it and causing one stream of water to cease, the jury was justified in finding that the cutting of the hose was a direct and proximate cause of the loss of plaintiff's furniture. Little Rock Traction & Elec. Co. v. McCaskill [Ark.] 86 S. W. 997. Where defendant negligently permitted the floor of its powder magazine to become soaked with nitroglycerine and, though informed of this condition, kept a large quantity of explosives there, and sent an inexperienced man to make repairs, its negligence was an efficient cause of an explosion which took place while repairs were going on. Onlighan v. Butler [Mass.] 75 N. E. 726. Where a servant was told that a machine could be stopped by a lever, but was not told that it could not be so stopped while materials were going through it, and he slipped on oil on the floor and fell on the rollers and was hurt before he could stop it, his slipping on the oil was the originating but not the efficient cause of his injury. Yess v. Chicago Brass Co., 124 Wis. 406, 102 N. W. 932. Where guest in hotel was suffocated by smoke, failure to have standpipe and hose in building was not a proximate cause of guest's death when they could not have been used before the fire department arrived so as to have prevented such death. Acton v. Reed, 104 App. Div. 507, 93 N. Y. S. 911. Nor was failure to post diagrams of exits and stairways a proximate cause of such death, since the guest had been in the hotel several months and was familiar with the arrangement of the rooms, etc. Id. Nor was the fact that a stairway door was locked the cause, where it appeared he descended to the lower floor by another door. Id.

50. Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466; Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Treka, 115 Ill. App. 56. It is not essential that a judicial cause be a sole cause. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. A cause need not act alone to constitute a proximate cause; it is a proximate cause if it concurs with another cause to produce an injury. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Vollrath [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 777, 89 S. W. 279.

51. Responsibility as a legal cause does not depend upon the sequence in time of the wrong charged. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. A proximate cause need not be the immediate cause. Yess v. Chicago Brass Co., 124 Wis. 406, 102 N. W. 932. Proximate cause need not be nearest in point of time, if without it injury would not have occurred. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Treka, 115 Ill. App. 56. The proximate cause is not necessarily the last cause or the one nearest the injury, but such act, wanting in ordinary care, as actively aided or concurred in producing the injury. Ray v. Pecos & N. T. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 582, 88 S. W. 466.

52. Huntington Light & Fuel Co. v. Beaver [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1002.

53. Huntington Light & Fuel Co. v. Beaver [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1002. Where an injury results from negligence of defendant and an inevitable accident or an inanimate thing has contributed with defendant's negligence to cause the injury, plaintiff may recover, if the negligence of defendant was an efficient cause of the injury, and the injured or deceased party was in the exercise of ordinary care for his own safety. Commonwealth Elec. Co. v. Rose, 214 Ill. 545, 73 N. E. 780. When damage complained of is the result of the wrong of defendant and a third person, and could not have been produced in the absence of either, the defendant's wrong is, in law, a proximate cause of the injury. Campbell v. Railway Transfer Co. [Minn.] 104 N. W. 547. Where negligence concurs with an act of God, and but for the negligence an injury would not have occurred, the person guilty of negligence is liable. Moffatt Commission Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 113 Mo. App. 544, 88 S. W. 117. If negligence of defendant was an efficient cause of the injury, concurring negligence of a third person will not relieve defendant from liability. Negligence of driver of team behind which plaintiff was riding would not defeat recovery for injuries of which negligence of defendant was a proximate cause, if plaintiff himself was in the exercise of due care. Christy v. Elliott, 216 Ill. 31, 74 N. E. 1035. Where conductor carried passenger past her destination and then directed her how to walk back to it, she being thus placed in a dangerous situation, the conductor's act was the proximate cause of her falling through a bridge, though the darkness of the night was a concurring cause. Indianapolis & E. R. Co. v. Barnes [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 583. Where a telephone person injured was himself in the exercise of due care.[54] An injury must be the natural and probable consequence of the negligence charged.[55] But it is not essential that the precise injury which resulted should have been foreseen;[56] it is sufficient if it was to be reasonably expected that injury might be inflicted[57] upon some per-company allowed unused wires to become defective and broken, and a storm caused a broken wire to come into contact with a highly charged electric light wire, the storm and the telephone company's negligence were concurrent causes of injury to one who came in contact with the broken, charged wire, and the company was liable. Central Union Tel. Co. v. Sokola, 34 Ind. App. 429, 73 N. E. 143. Negligence in starting a car while a passenger was boarding it and throwing him down is the proximate cause of injuries occurring to him by being run over by a truck while down, though the truck driver was also negligent. Fine v. Interurban St. R. Co., 45 Misc. 587, 91 N. Y. S. 43. Where street car struck a truck and knocked it against plaintiff, negligence of the truck driver would not relieve the street railway company from responsibility for negligence of the motorman. Demarest v. Forty-Second St., etc., R. Co., 104 App. Div. 503, 93 N. Y. S. 663. Where two boys were riding in elevator and one threw the other down so that he got his foot caught in an open space negligently left at an entrance, negligence in leaving such space was a proximate cause of the injury, notwithstanding the act of the other boy. Siegel, Cooper & Co. v. Treka, 115 Ill. App. 56. Manager of gas company, on discovering a leak in gas pipes in a house, negligently turned off the house valve instead of the street valve, thus allowing gas to escape into the cellar of the house through the leak. The gas was ignited by a plumber while searching for the leak, the plumber not being a servant of the gas company. Held, negligence of the manager was a concurring cause of the explosion which resulted, and the company was liable for damages thereby caused. Huntington Light & Fuel Co. v. Beaver [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1002. If driver's act in suddenly turning his team on a street car track was the sole cause of a collision with a car, defendant was not liable for injury to occupant of carriage; but if negligence of motorman contributed, defendant was liable. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Leach, 215 Ill. 184, 74 N. E. 119.

54. See Contributory Negligence, § 4.

55. Such a consequence as, under the circumstances, might or ought to have been foreseen by the negligent person. Russell v. Westmoreland Co., 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 425. Negligence is the proximate cause of an injury when it appears that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act, and that it ought to have been foreseen in the light of attendant circumstances. Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co. v. Weeks [Kan.] 83 P. 406. Injury to grain from an unprecedented flood was not the natural and probable consequence of delay in shipping the grain. Moffatt Commission Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 113 Mo. App. 544, 88 S. W. 117. Defendant's domestic chicken escaped and was pursued by his servant into a public park. The chicken turned in an opposite direction, when pursued, and flew through a window of plaintiff's store. Held, such result was not one to be reasonably anticipated, and defendants were not liable. Maiony v. Bishop [Iowa] 105 N. W. 407. Defendant's servant pulled down a dumb waiter or elevator and plaintiff's head was caught, she having in some way placed it therein while putting milk bottles in it. Held, plaintiff's act was not one which the servant could reasonably anticipate, and defendant was not liable. Smith v. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., 95 N. Y. S. 900. Defendant left a cart in the street—contrary to an ordinance—and children played in it, and one was injured. Children had played with it before, and no one apprehended danger, and in this case, the mother of the injured child had seen him playing and had allowed him to remain. Held, defendant was not liable, as the accident was not one which ought reasonably to have been foreseen. Lopes v. Sahuque, 114 La. 1004, 38 So. 810. Where a carrier, unable to ship stock over the lines agreed upon, owing to floods, shipped via another road, and the stock was placed in yards of the connecting line, and while there an unprecedented flood occurred, causing a loss, the act of the initial carrier in changing the route was held not the proximate cause of the loss of stock, such result not being one which could reasonably have been anticipated. Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 135 F. 135. Where two boys used a stone lying on path by the roadway to jar an electric light pole in order to light the lamp, and the finger of one was caught between the post and the stone, such injury was not reasonable and probable consequence of leaving the stone in the street. Marsh v. Giles, 211 Pa. 17, 60 A. 315.

56. Central Union Tel. Co. v. Sokola, 34 Ind. App. 429, 73 N. E. 143; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Willard, 111 Ill. App. 225; Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co., 164 Ind. 413, 73 N. E. 899; Huntington Light & Fuel Co. v. Beaver [Ind. App.] 73 N. E. 1002; Coolidge v. Hallauer [Wis.] 105 N. W. 568. Applied to conduct of plaintiff. Owen v. Portage Tel. Co. [Wis.] 105 N. W. 924.

57. Central Union Tel. Co. v. Sokola, 34 Ind. App. 429, 73 N. E. 143. Man carrying ice on his shoulder stumbled, and piece of ice fell to the ground, bounded, and struck a child sitting on the curb. Held, the accident was not so extraordinary that it could not reasonably have been foreseen and guarded against. Slattery v. Laurence Ice Co. [Mass.] 76 N. E. 459. The liability of a person charged with negligence does not depend on question whether, with the exercise of reasonable prudence, he could or ought to have foreseen the very injury complained of, but he may be held liable for anything which, after the injury is complete, appears to have been a natural and probable consequence of his act or omission. Fishburn v. Burlington & N. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 483, 103 N. W. 481. The proximate cause of an son engaged in exercising a legal right in an ordinarily careful manner.[58] An independent, efficient cause, intervening between defendant's negligence and the injury, is deemed the proximate cause, and relieves the defendant of liability;[59] but an intervening cause will not be deemed the proximate cause if it could reasonably have been anticipated.[60]

§ 4. Contributory negligence.[61]—Contributory negligence is a want of ordinary care by a plaintiff or person injured, which, concurring or co-operating with negligence of the defendant,[62] was a proximate cause of the injury complained of.[63] injury is one which produced the result in continuous sequence, and without which it would not have occurred, and one from which any man of ordinary prudence could have foreseen that such a result was probable under all the facts as they existed. Ramsbottom v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 138 N. C. 38, 50 S. E. 448.

58. Central Union Tel. Co. v. Sokola, 34 Ind. App. 429, 73 N. E. 143. Defendant not liable where workman attempted to squeeze through between bars on elevator shaft which had not been placed permanently, since the employe's act could not reasonably have been foreseen. Hartman v. Clarke, 104 App. Div. 62, 93 N. Y. S. 314.

59. Terminal R. Ass'n v. Larkins, 112 Ill. App. 366. If an efficient and adequate cause is shown it may be considered the real or proximate cause unless another, not incidental to it, but independent thereof, appears to have intervened and caused the accident or injury in controversy. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co., 164 Ind. 413, 73 N. E. 899. Where servants of a construction company put up a stove in a building owned by plaintiff and built fires in it, without his consent, such act of trespass was not the proximate cause of a fire which consumed the building and contents, the fire being started by the unauthorized use by the men of gasoline taken from defendant's storehouse. Bellino v. Columbus Const. Co., 188 Mass. 430, 74 N. E. 684. Nor was the act of defendant in keeping gasoline on the premises in an unlocked building, where the men could get at it, negligence per se. Id. Farmer after driving team 17 miles with load of garden truck hitched one of them to hitching rail in front of a store in his usual manner, using an apparently sound halter. A boy, turning over the rail, struck one of the team with his foot frightening the team and causing a runaway and collision with plaintiff's buggy, injuring plaintiff. Held, boy's act and not negligence of farmer was proximate cause of injury. Stephenson v. Corder [Kan.] 80 P. 938. Act of lessor in abandoning a house during the term and leaving it unlocked was not the proximate cause of its destruction where another person entered and set fire to it. Winfree v. Jones [Va.] 51 S. E. 153. No recovery for loss of cattle which drank water from stream flowing through oil field, where it was not shown who let down the bars through which the cattle got onto the land. Brimner v. Reed, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 318. Concurring negligence in maintenance of sewers would not render defendant liable for damage to property if an extraordinary flood would have produced it independently. Siegfried v. South Bethlehem Borough, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 456.

60. The mere fact that another cause intervened between defendant's negligence and plaintiff's injury will not relieve defendant from liability if the intervening act was of such a nature that its happening was to have been apprehended. Fishburn v. Burlington & N. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 483, 103 N. W. 481. Where there was evidence that a snow fence was negligently constructed, the mere fact that plaintiff and his brother, the same day plaintiff was hurt by a falling board, had picked up the board and placed it on the fence, would not defeat a recovery based on the defective construction. Fishburn v. Burlington & N. W. R. Co., 127 Iowa, 483, 103 N. W. 481. Where a railway company negligently failed to provide an appliance for locking a switch, and a boy turned it, and a collision occurred, the act of the boy did not relieve the company from liability for resulting injuries to a passenger. Elgin, A. & S. Traction Co. v. Wilson, 217 Ill. 47, 75 N. E. 436.

61. See 4 C. L. 773.

62. A defendant is entitled to the benefit of the defense of contributory negligence though he has also been negligent. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Sights [Ky.] 89 S. W. 132. Plaintiff's negligence need not be the sole cause of injury, to defeat a recovery. Though defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of the injury, plaintiff cannot recover if his negligence contributed thereto. Owen v. Portage Tel. Co. [Wis.] 105 N. W. 924. An instruction that the jury could find for defendant on the issue of contributory negligence only if they found that plaintiff was injured by reason of his own negligence and not by reason of defendant's negligence was erroneous. Sack v. St. Louis Car Co., 112 Mo. App. 476, 87 S. W. 79. It is immaterial which party was the more negligent or which contributed most to produce the injury; contributory negligence bars recovery. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173.

63. Negligence of plaintiff will not prevent a recovery if it was only a remote cause or a condition of the injury. Short v. Spokane [Wash.] 83 P. 183. Contributory negligence exists only when negligence of both parties combines and concurs in producing the damage. Ensley Mercantile Co. v. Otwell [Ala.] 38 So. 839. Contributory negligence must concur with negligence of defendant and must proximately contribute to produce the injury. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Parks [Tex. Civ. App.] 90 S. W. 343. Negligence of a plaintiff will not defeat a recovery unless it contributed to produce the injury; that is, unless the injury would not have occurred but for his negligence. South Covington & C. St. R. Co. v. Nelson [Ky.]

When shown it is, in most jurisdictions, a complete defense;[64] but in some it serves only to reduce the amount of plaintiff's recovery.[65] Usually the defense is available though the negligence charged is a violation of a statute or public safety regulation;[66] but the contrary is held in some jurisdictions in actions based on particular statutes.[67]

Due care by a plaintiff[68] or person injured is that usually exercised by ordinarily prudent persons under the same circumstances,[69] and whether the required degree of care has been exercised in a particular instance depends upon the facts.[70]

89 S. W. 200. To show contributory negligence, some act or omission, of which a person of ordinary prudence would not have been guilty under the circumstances, must be shown which caused or contributed to the injury. Williams v. Ballard Lumber Co. [Wash.] 83 P. 323. One whose negligence directly contributed to his injury cannot recover damages from another whose negligence concurred to cause it, even though the carelessness of the latter was the more proximate cause of it. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Baker [C. C. A.] 140 F. 315. Instruction held to charge properly that contributory negligence must have directly contributed as a proximate cause of the injury. Owen v. Portage Tel. Co. [Wis.] 105 N. W. 924. Instruction that plaintiff could recover provided that he did not contribute "materially" to his injury approved. Indianapolis & M. Rapid Transit Co. v. Edwards [Ind. App.] 74 N. E. 533. An instruction that unless plaintiff had shown by a preponderance of the evidence that he was not guilty of a failure to exercise ordinary care, or that, if he was, his negligence in no way contributed to his injury, he could not recover, was correct, and did not authorize a recovery though plaintiff was guilty of slight negligence. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co. [Iowa] 104 N. W. 434. If a plaintiff's failure to keep up his own fences was the proximate cause of the death of his horses on a railroad track, he could not recover; it need not be further shown that the natural and probable result of allowing his fences to get out of repair was that his horses would get on the railway track. Wabash R. Co. v. Warren, 113 Ill. App. 172.

64. MacFeat v. Philadelphia & W. & B. R. Co. [Del.] 62 A. 898; Weaver v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 212 Pa. 632, 61 A. 1117; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arnold [Tex. Civ. App.] 87 S. W. 173. The law places on all persons the duty to exercise ordinary care to avoid injury. Cullen v. Higgins, 216 Ill. 78, 74 N. E. 698. Negligence of plaintiff which produced or contributed proximately to injury defeats recovery. Bridges v. Jackson Elec. R., Light & Power Co. [Miss.] 38 So. 788. Court may give affirmative charge for defendant where evidence clearly shows negligence of plaintiff which contributed to the injury. Brawley v. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 919. Instruction authorizing recovery for death notwithstanding contributory negligence of deceased was properly refused. Feitl v. Chicago City R. Co., 211 Ill. 279, 71 N. E. 991. Pleas of contributory negligence are not demurrable when filed to counts charging only simple negligence. Brawley v. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 919.

65. See 4 C. L. 776, n. 78; also Comparative Negligence, post.

66. Though a train was being run through a city at a rate of speed prohibited by ordinance, which was negligence per se, pedestrians were nevertheless bound to use ordinary care to avoid injury. Schmidt v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Mo.] 90 S. W. 136. The violation of an ordinance does not necessarily carry with it the abrogation of the application to particular cases of the rules of contributory negligence, or other questions affecting defensively the liability of the defendant for damages. Lopes v. Sahuque, 114 La. 1004, 38 So. 810. Where concurrent causes are the immediate and efficient cause of an injury, it is not competent to take one of them away from the other, and say that it and not the other was the proximate cause of the accident. Thus, negligence of machine operative will bar a recovery for his injuries though statute requiring machine to be guarded has been violated. Ziehr v. Maumee Paper Co., 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 144.

67. Contributory negligence is no defense to an action based on a willful violation of a mining law. Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 111 Ill. App. 294.

68. See 4 C. L. 773.

